CARUSO IN A MAD FIT AS GIRL WINS LOVE SUIT

Rejected Sweetheart of Tenor Can Collect Damages, High Court Rules.

ROME, June 23.—That the legal troubles of Enrico Caruso, the world-famous tenor, are anything but over is shown to-day in the decree of the Milan Court of Appeals which has just handed down a decision reversing the lower court which last year denied Elisa Ganelli, the Milan shop girl, who sued him for failure to marry her, damages in a breach of promise suit.

Caruso is in London preparing to spend the summer at his beautiful villa near Florence, and, dispatches say, when shown the decision of the court, he allowed his temper to become greatly ruffled and let off considerable superfluous energy in the form of epithets and adjectives, between which he stated he did not believe the report.

The court, in handing down its decision holds that the decision of the lower court is correct in not providing damages for the injury to the fair name of the plaintiff. The court then goes on to state that, although the relations existing between the singer and the shop girl were reprehensible, it is of the opinion that the girl is entitled to recover the money she spent in fitting herself to become Mrs. Caruso.

Entitled to Expenses.

The decision orders that a new trial be held for the purpose of ascertaining how much the young woman is entitled to for her "pre-nuptial" expenses, and orders that it be held as soon as Caruso returns to Italy.

The suit in question was started over a year ago and at the time greatly stirred opera-going circles in this country and elsewhere. Testimony developed at the trial that one week after seeing the girl in a Milan shop Caruso secured an introduction to her from her employer and on that same occasion used these words:

"Come, now Signorina, put on your hat and we will start to-morrow, for I have decided to take you away with me. If I had been so fortunate as to make your acquaintance 15 or 20 years ago you would have been my wife by this time. Unfortunately, owing to my professional engagements, I must leave now."

After his departure Caruso bombarded the girl with letters written from Paris and London, in which he renewed his protestations, and in one letter ordered the girl to leave the shop to break with the "common people."

His "Little Sugar Doll."

He sent her many photographs of himself and his children and in writings always addressed her by such endearing names as "Dear Sweet Thing," "Little Sugar Doll" and "My Little Treasure."

Some of the phrases in his letters were most ardent, one in particular, the following, being emphasized:

"Tell me are your tresses very, very long, indeed. Do you know why I ask? Because I have a mad burning and longing to tie myself up, hand and foot, with them and never regain my freedom."

One of his most characteristic letters contained the following passages:

"You will see what I will do when you are my wife. How beautiful it will be. You shall be my little queen, and I your faithful and devoted slave. Have you ever accepted some other admirer? Can anybody speak ill of you? Have you always done as your mother instructed you? You assure me that you have, and now I can think only of this—to make you mine as soon as possible."

Prayed for Happy Day.

"I pray God that He may grant that I see the day in which we will be united. I have never entertained the slightest doubt as to your goodness. There is no need for me to ask explanations or details concerning you

Wilson's Daughter To Sing for Social; To Inspect Prisons

SUPERIOR, WIS., June 23.—Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of President Wilson, on Thursday will take part in a social center entertainment to be given in Madison, Wis. She will sing several songs and dance with the members of the Social Center Club.

Governor Sulzer has just appointed Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of President Wilson, a member of a commission to investigate the affairs and management of the prisons and reformatories of the State.

Miss Wilson's Pansy Hat a Capital Hit

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Miss Eleanor Wilson, youngest daughter of the President, has succeeded to the place formerly held by Mrs. Nicholas Longworth and has become the leading society milliner of the capital.

She not only trims her own hats, but she trims the jauntiest hat that adorns a belle's head in Washington. The younger set is particularly taken just now with a new creation Miss Wilson has made, which she calls the pansy hat.

She bought a white hemp shape and a gorgeous mass of purple pansies and soft ribbons. With artistic skill she arranged these about the hat. It has a chic, Parisian effect, and the uninformed would imagine it the work of a leading milliner.

Shepard Is Carried Past Home of Bride

NEW YORK, June 23.—Persons on a late train from New York a few nights ago heard the porter call "Tarrytown" and wondered why Finley J. Shepard, husband of Helen Gould Shepard, did not alight.

Mr. Shepard only realized that he was going by his station when the train was under way. He is too much of a railroad man not to know the dangers of jumping, and therefore refused to take a chance. Ossining was the next stop. There Mr. Shepard alighted, obtained an automobile and "burned up" the Albany post road back to Irvington.

Ex-Gov. Dix Not to Govern Philippines

WASHINGTON, June 23.—To his visitors President Wilson has made it clear that he will not consider the name of former Governor John A. Dix, of New York, for the office of Governor of the Philippines or for any other post.

The governorship of the Philippines is to be given to one of three or four men already on a tentative list. President Wilson also is understood to have said that New York has been very well provided for in the big appointments.

Hearer Dies as Text Is Read by Pastor

William B. Maner, age 65 years, died from heart failure while attending services at the Collins Springs Baptist Church Sunday morning. Rev. H. G. Mitchell, the pastor, had just announced the text of his sermon when Mr. Maner slipped down in his seat.

The deceased was well known in Atlanta, especially among railroad men. A wife and eight children survive him. Funeral services were held Monday morning at the residence, 6 Guyton Street.

'Hello Girl' Knocked Down by Lightning

POTTSVILLE, PA., June 23.—During a heavy electric storm lightning set fire to one of the switchboards in the telephone exchange of the American Telephone Company at Shamokin and threw the operator, Miss Kathryn O'Leary, to the floor. She managed to sound an alarm and was rescued just before the blaze destroyed the building. The loss is estimated at $20,000.

BULGAR PLOT TO KILL KING OF GREECE FOILED

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SALONIKA, June 23.—A plot fomented by Bulgarians against the life of King Constantine of Greece has been discovered here. A number of Bulgar soldiers, disguised as civilians, were arrested to-day by the Greek military police.

A quantity of explosives had been discovered outside of the city gates and investigation led to the discovery of the conspiracy. One of the Bulgarians who was arrested confessed that an attempt was to have been made to blow up the King's palace.

Constant fighting between Greeks and Bulgarians is going on near here. The city has been strongly fortified on the landward side.

Bulgarians Refuse to Arbitrate; Crisis Near.

SOFIA, June 23.—Bulgaria to-day withdrew its recent acceptance of Czar Nicholas' proposal to arbitrate the territorial dispute between this country on one side and Servia and Greece on the other. This may mean that Russia's attempt to prevent a fresh conflict in the Balkans will prove futile.

The Bulgarian press is bitterly hostile against Russia, charging that the Russian Government is secretly encouraging Servia and Greece to take aggressive measures.

Official newspapers declare that Servia, Greece and Montenegro have entered into a secret league to strip Bulgaria of all the possible spoils of the Balkan war. The situation today was decidedly ominous, and the impression prevailed that the climax would be reached this week.

Sickles Can Attend Gettysburg Reunion

ALBANY, N. Y., June 23.—State officials will not prevent General Daniel E. Sickles from going to the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg next month. Attorney General Carmody so advised Daniel P. Hays, counsel for General Sickles.

The State obtained a judgment against General Sickles for failure to account for $23,000 State funds. Carmody says no execution will be issued to prevent Sickles attending the reunion.

Railway at Panama Big Military Asset

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Directors of the Panama Railroad at a meeting in the office of Secretary of War Garrison regarded it as prime military importance that the railroad be kept up in every way, and it is expected that there will be considerable traffic over the line even after the Canal is open.

The Government will maintain a huge coal depot at the entrace of the Canal. It will also rent bins to private companies.

Rule Bars Bad Aliens Coming From Islands

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Secretary Wilson has issued an order amending the regulations so as to give the immigration authorities at mainland ports authority to reject aliens from the insular possessions of the United States.

It has developed that under the practice which is now changed many aliens who could not enter the mainland direct reach here through the insular possessions.

DRYING CARTRIDGES KILL TWO.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, June 23.—A. G. Hull, of North Dover, put a box of cartridges in the top of the stove to dry them out. Hull is in the Morgue and Mrs. Hull is dying.

First Cool Weather Signs Since June 16 Brought by Breezes

Between 8 and 9 o'clock the first cooler weather signs for a week were visible. At 7 o'clock the temperature was 73, while an hour and a half later the thermometer had gained two degrees only. This was the smallest rise during the same period of time since June 16, and it indicated the maximum temperature for the day might be less than 90 for the first time since June 16.

Southwest winds of ten miles velocity cooled the morning air. The weather bureau indicated the breezes might continue through the day.

Southeast winds brought 1.27 inches of rainfall Sunday afternoon, and at 4:30 o'clock the wind attained a velocity of 63 miles. Following the rain, the minimum temperature up to 7 o'clock Monday morning was 71 degrees.

Yancey Killed One Week ago; Family Is In Need of Support

One week ago Monday Court Deputy Dave Yancey was stabbed to death by a crazed negro while attempting to preserve law and order, as he had sworn to do. To-day his widow and six children are holding a sad commemoration of that event in their little home on the Jonesboro Road.

What has Atlanta done for the family of the court deputy? The citizens of this city have subscribed about $1,000 to the Yancey fund, $900 of which must go to pay off the mortgage on the farm. The remainder is not sufficient to put this family on a self-supporting basis. More contributions are needed. Tet the generosity of the prosperous Gate City continue to assert itself.

Prince of Wales 19; Big Week in London

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 23.—A week of exceptional social activity was ushered in to-day. The Prince of Wales to-day celebrated his nineteenth birthday. To-morrow the young Prince, as special representative of King George, will welcome President Poincare of France at Portsmouth. Wednesday will be "Alexandra Day," called after the queen mother, when society women, dressed in white, sell flowers in the streets for charity.

Writers Defend Play Barred in Germany

BERLIN, June 23.—The suppression of Hauptmann's "Festspiel" by the authorities of Breslau, because of the complaint made by the Crown Prince and many citizens that it gave too much praise to the French and not enough to the Prussian heroes, has caused angry protests from many literary men and others who are prominent in politic.

The Authors' Protective League entered a formal protest against what is termed the "brutal" prohibition of the play.

Socrates Victim of Recall, Lawyer Says

CAMBRIDGE, MASS., June 23.—Making a plea for a less hostile attitude toward the judiciary, Zacharias Chaffee, Jr., who is taking his degree as a lawyer at Harvard, said in a commencement speech that the initiative and recall was tried on Alcibiades and Socrates in Athens and worked injustly.

Mr. Chaffee asked: "What is the use of changing one lawyer on the bench for another who thinks in much the same way?"

Alsberg Discredits Guarantee Labels

MOBILE, June 23.—The words "Guaranteed under the food and drugs act" on a label are no assurance that the contents of a package are pure, according to Dr. Carl L. Alsberg, chief of the Bureau of Chemistry.

"All that the guarantee legend does," he said, "is to make it possible to prosecute the manufacturer if the goods are found to be in violation of the food and drugs act."

STATE READY FOR FRANK TRIAL ON JUNE 30

Defense Has Announced Its Case Is Complete and Judge Roan Is Free.

Prosecuting Attorney Hugh M. Dorsey announced for the State Monday morning that the trial of Leo M. Frank would be placed on the calendar for the week of June 30.

The defense had announced that its case was completed and no continuance would be asked unless some unforeseen contingency arose.

The trial judge, L. S. Roan, will have the most to say about the date for the trial. He intimated he would be ready on this date and would personally make no move for a continuance. He said, however, that in the event of it being impossible to open the trial June 30, he would be at leisure between July 14 and 28, and it is not improbable the trial may be advanced to that date.

Dorsey Back From East.

Solicitor Dorsey returned to Atlanta Sunday afternoon from a week's vacation in New York. He called a conference with his assistants, E. A. Stephens and F. A. Hooper, at his home Sunday evening. Following it he announced that he would be ready for trial on June 30 and that unless the defense or the trial judge moved to have the trial postponed he would commence at once summoning witnesses and getting ready.

"We will set the case for June 30 with an idea of going to trial. Of course the convenience of Judge L. S. Roan will have to be consulted and there is the possibility of the defense moving for a continuance. I had understood all sides would be ready, however, and will make my preparations accordingly.

Expects Decision Monday.

"Before summoning witnesses I will formally notify the defense to find whether it will be ready. I would not like to have all the witnesses here and then have the trial postponed. I will probably confer with the interested parties during the day and be able to announce definitely whether the case can be tried June 30 by to-night."

Solicitor Dorsey would not discuss the return to Atlanta of Mrs. Mina Formby and her announcement that she would go on the stand against Frank. He intimated, however, that he entertained the same opinion as had already been expressed by his assistant, Mr. Hooper, that when the woman left Atlanta she dropped from the case entirely.

Attorney John W. Moore denied emphatically that he had been employed in the case with L. Z. Rosser and Reuben R. Arnold to defend Frank, as was reported by Solicitor Dorsey.

Moore Not Employed.

"I have not been employed in the case and have no other interest in it than that of a citizen. I believe Frank is innocent, and have since he was first drawn into the case, but I am not connected with it in any way. I have never been approached on the subject."

Solicitor Dorsey opened court in the Thrower building Monday morning for a week of criminal trials to clear the jail docket. He will be in court every day until Saturday, and will have to depend on his assistants to summon witnesses and prepare the Frank case in the event of it being set for the following week.

Salvation Army Man, Struck by Auto, Dies

Thomas Jefferson, the aged Salvation Army worker and former Indian instructor, who was struck by an automobile at Mitchell and Whitehall Streets Thursday, died Sunday night at Grady Hospital. He did not regain consciousness. His relatives are not known, and his body, unless claimed, will be buried by the Salvation Army.

No blame is attached to J. L. Hughes, of 380 Peachtree Street, who drove the car. He was driving slowly, according to eyewitnesses. Jefferson leaped in front of Hughes' car to escape another and faster-going machine.

Death Hovers Over Chalk Victim

Poison Baffles Expert Efforts

Doctors Abandon Hope for Life

Here is a picture of little Mary Tribble, the poison chalk victim, taken when she was a few years younger than she is now. She was the pet of the neighborhood then, and has since then been a very much loved little girl in school.

Little Mary Tribble Is Fast Sinking and She May Not Live Through the Day.

Slowly sinking to a death that the physicians regard now as almost certain, little Mary Tribble, daughter of Policeman Tribble, lies now unconscious and now torn by racking convulsions at her home in East Atlanta, the victim of a strange poisoning that developed after she had eaten some brightly colored chalk more than two weeks ago.

The 7-year-old girl, who has been almost entirely paralyzed for the two weeks since she suddenly was stricken, has suffered two convulsions in the last 24 hours, although three physicians have done their utmost to counteract the effect of the mysterious poison.

Another physician offered his services to the family Sunday. He recommended and administered a continuous water treatment throughout the day. For a few hours she appeared brighter and the prospects for her ultimate recovery seemed slightly more hopeful, but at nightfall one of the terrible convulsions contorted her little body and it was thought that the end had come. Monday morning she was the victim of another, and the family practically gave up hope.

Women Are Drifting To Double Standard, Dr. White Declares

A spirit of rebellion against parasitism was the explanation given for the rapid spread of the feminist movement by Dr. John E. White in his morning sermon Sunday at the Second Baptist Church.

Dr. White said women had become dissatisfied with the social conditions which made them little more than dependents on their husbands and gave them no activities or opportunities for self-development outside the walls of their own homes.

A significant statement was that the equality of rights, which he believed surely in prospect, undoubtedly would bring man and woman to the same level and would establish a single standard of morals for the two sexes. Either the man would rise to the higher plane upon which woman exists or woman would sink to man's level.

He regretted that the present tendency appeared toward the adoption of man's code of morals by the women.

He thought, however, that this condition was temporary and that man would bring himself to her level.

HUNTS UNDERTAKER NUDE.

CHICAGO, June 23.—Jacob Zelle, who said he was a Cleveland physician, was found last night walking along North Clark Street with no clothes on. He told a policeman that he was dead and was looking for an undertaker to bury him.

Women's Attire and Nude in Art Scored By Dr. Dunbar Ogden

An appeal for decency in life and art was madeb y the Rev. Dr. Dunbar Ogden at the Central Presbyterian Church Sunday night. The extreme fashion of woman's attire of the present day was declared by him to be a menace to the morals and the nude in art was even more vicious.

Dr. Ogden referred to a number of local instances to illustrate his sermon. Talking of the moving picture film, "Quo Vadis," he said: "We have the illustration of how Rome threw decency to the winds as it indulged in Bacchanalian revelry. History tells us of how Rome tottered and fell. Our present trend is toward the moral disintegration which destroyed Rome."

Referring to the recent exhibition of art in the show windows of Atlanta stores, he declared their exhibition to be a crime, and that punishment as such should be meted out to the exhibitors.

Women Failures as Car Strikebreakers

After a struggle of three hours, however, the manipulation of brakes and dodging of missiles proved too arduous, so they quit.

LEGISLATORS ALL HERE; LOBBYING HINTED

Reports That Interests Have Hand in Senate Presidency Fight Are Being Circulated.

The Georgia Legislature for 1913-14, although it does not assemble for organization until 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, already is all but unanimously in Atlanta.

Not only have they come early to discuss the matter of organization in both houses, but they are here to counsel together concerning the legislation to be proposed during the first session.

The Legislature is a new one, and there will be a complete change in administration under the big dome within the week. Every member, therefore, wishes to get as straight a line on the situation as he may.

Monday the hotel lobbies are swarming with politicians and statesmen. They are undertaking to get their bearings, and the getting in some directions is extremely difficult.

Senate Race a Puzzle.

Nobody seems to know who is to win the Presidency of the Senate, which carries with it the Lieutenant-Governorship of Georgia.

Presidency Fight Close.

On thes urface of things, the fight seems to be about even between Senator Allen, of the Twentieth, and Senator Anderson, of the First. Both men claim enough to elect, but few believe either really has the votes nailed down.

Below thes urface rumor and gossip speaks of many things not yet talked about the hotel lobbies freely ando penly.

The President of the Senate might, in certain circumstances, succeed to the Governorship, and certainly he is sure to be a compelling factor in the shaping of legislation.

Wherefore, one hears it whispered that certain big corporate and manufacturing interests are deeply concerned as to the outcome of the race for the presidency of the Senate, and, very much on the quiet, are interesting themselves accordingly.

Burwell Called Favorite.

The speakership race generally is conceded to have been won by Burwell of Hancock. Although opposed by such excellent gentlemen as Hardeman of Jefferson and Sheppard of Sumter, Burwell is thought to be very much in the lead and practically sure of election on the first ballot.

Burwell Looks Certain.

Burwell seems to have made a much better getaway in his race than either of his opponents, and for that reason is looked upon as a most likely winner.

Tax reform is the one big topic of legislation discussed most generally.

It seems agreed on all sides that the State must have more revenue or let its various institutions lag woefully. There is an ever-increasing demand for more money in all directions, and the State has been running ahead of its income for several years. The tax rate can not be raised above 5 mills, and 5 mills on present assessments will not produce the revenue needed.

Various special measurse for increasing the revenue have been proposed, such as an inheritance tax, a graduated automobile tax, and so forth, but the greater problem is how to get all varieties of property up to where each may bear its righteous portion of the burden of taxation.

Child Labor Reform.

It is assured that a child labor bill will be introduced early in the session, with excellent chances of success.

There is a well-defined opinion among members of the new General Assembly that the present child labor situation is far from what it should be, and that reforms must be instituted, or the State suffer not only materially within itself, but in reputation abroad.

It is said that former Representative Hooper Alexander, for years an earnest advocate of child labor reform, will prepare a bill for the General Assembly's attention, and that it will be a bill framed along the lines and ideals of the various anti-child labor organisations in the State.

Another most interesting measure that will come up early in the session is a bill further to regulate the matter of fertilizer sales in Georgia.

It is the idea of one member of the House, at least, that the fertilizer manufacturers should be required in the future to put upon the tag attached to the package in which the fertilizer is sold the number of pounds of each and every ingredient used in the manufacture of the same.

Fertilizer Sales Regulation.

The law now requires that only the source of the ingredients used be stated, and many farmers thinks it nothing but right that they should know not only the source of each ingredient used, but the quantity of the same.

In that way, so they say, they would be able to know with certainty whether the ingredients necessary and useful in fertilization were in the packages in desired quantity, or whether merely a trace of the same had been placed therein, for technical compliance with the law.

This measure is sure to bring on more talk, as it not only will be stoutly upheld by various legislators, but it will be bitterly fought by others.

Thus it may be seen that the forthcoming session of the Legislature bids fair to be no holiday affair.

There will be fights in plenty before the summer is over, and some of them will be spectacular and far-reaching in effect.

Just now, pending organization Wednesday, the members-elect are talking over the foregoing things among themselves, and swapping views with respect to the same.

Schools by Parcel Post Latest Wrinkle

WASHINGTON, June 23.—One, two and four room school houses are now sent by parcel post by the United States Bureau of Education. The school houses are models on which to erect structures in small communities.

They are of cardboard, architecturally correct and altogether complete in hygienic detail.

These models will be of great assistance to school authorities in small rural communities which can not afford to engage a school architect.

Orphanage Trustees Will Probe Trustees

MACON, June 23.—The whipping of 10-year-old Marvin Williford by W. F. Armor, farm overseer at the Georgia Industrial Home, will be probed this afternoon at a special meeting of the trustees.

The boy has been surrendered by the city officials to the home, assurance having been given that he will not be punished again. When the boy was beaten by Armor with a plowline, he ran away from the orphanage and sought the protection of the police.

Armor is the husband of Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, Georgia temperance lecturer. He admits the flogging.

Anti-U. S. Meeting in Tokio Big Fizzle

TOKIO, June 23.—An anti-American mass meeting held here was attended by not more than 400 persons. These were chiefly workingmen, idlers and agitators.

The speeches were of a comparatively mild order.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

by JAMES B. NEVIN

Hark, hark! the dogs do bark, the solons are coming to town—some in rugs, and some in tags (but none with jags), and some in velvet gowns!

Or words to that effect!

Anyway, we have with us this evening, gentle readers, the esteemed and ever-venerated Jawjaw Legislature.

It has been coming in on every train for 24 hours or more, and there now is a sufficiency of it on hand for organization purposes if organization were the order of business for the day.

All day long the Kimball House lobby has been alive with statesmen, real and near.

Most of them are optimistic with respect to the outlook, and the more they get acquainted with one another the better they are pleased with themselves.

Not only is the city filling up rapidly with members of the new General Assembly, but dozens of old-timers, legislative veterans now retired, voluntarily and otherwise, to more or less subdued obscurity, also are in our midst, undertaking to get wise to what is what and who is who.

On all sides one hears good words and kind with respect to the incoming Governor, and good wishes for his administration are on everybody's lips.

John M. Slaton, for the first time in sixteen years, is not a member of the Legislature, and while he has been promoted to be the head of the entire State for a season, he knows practically every member of the new Legislature, and in its entirety it seems to wish him mighty well.

Scores of new members have called on the new Governor to-day to pay their respects.

To-night the Legislature will be all but unanimously on hand and ready for business.

Despite the claims and counter claims of the two leading candidates for the Presidency of the Senate, the average legislator still is very much "from Missouri" with respect to that matter.

Both Senator Allen and Senator Anderson claim more than enough to elect, and while nobody believes either is claiming anything less than he really believes, as a matter of fact, few Senators believe that either man actually has sufficient unqualified pledges to put him over.

"These claims remind me," said a prominent South Georgia politician to-day, "of a story they used to tell up in Cedartown on Major W. R. Beck, grand old man, dead these many years, rest his soul!

"The Major was a candidate for Ordinary, or something, and one of his friends was checking over the voters of the city registration list. After checking off all those the Major claimed, his friend then said, 'Well, Major, these men may be depended upon to vote for you, may they?' The old Major looked his friend in the eye, and replied, 'How the h—l do I know—they've promised to, but how the h—l do I know what they will do!'

"The trouble is, it's so hard to tell exactly what constitutes a political promise—men often say and write things that are construed as unqualified promises, when they never intended them that way at all."

Representative Walter Wheatley, of Sumter, will introduce his famous lieutenant governor bill again at the forthcoming session of the Legislature.

Mr. Wheatley has been an enthusiastic advocate of creation of this office for many years, and while a member of the Senate he succeeded in passing through that body, almost unanimously, a bill making it part of the Constitution.

The measure was killed in the House, however, and while attempts have been made since then to enact the suggestion into law, they have not succeeded.

The gentleman from Sumter, who is sure to be one of the most popular men in the General Assembly, is very hopeful that this time his pet measure may become a law.

One step toward commission form of government for the city of Greensboro has been made by the publication of notice to the effect that at the next session of the General Assembly a bill will be introduced which will allow the City Council of Greensboro to elect a secretary and treasurer from any citizen who is eligible to act as an alderman.

The notice is published under the signature of H. M. Spinks, City Clerk of Greensboro, and it is thought that the bill will be introduced in the lower branch of the Legislature by Hon. W. P. McWhorter, Greene's Representative.

Much trouble has been experienced by the "city fathers" of Greensboro in the past in securing one of their own number to act as secretary and treasurer, and it is thought that the proposed change will remedy to a great extent some of the cumbersome methods of the city government.

The new Commissioner of Agriculture, James D. Price, of Oconee, got in to-day, and has been as busy as he could be shaking hands and receiving congratulations.

Mr. Price is just up from a sick bed, but doesn't look the part. Everybody likes him, and everybody gives him the glad hand.

He is a practical farmer, knows his way about politically, and the general prediction is that he is sure to make good on his new job.

He expects to be commissioned next Monday, and will present himself at the Executive Department bright and early to receive from the hands of Governor Slaton his warrant to do business.

He likely will be the first new State House officer to be commissioned.

Jamaica Is Worried by U. S. Banana Tax

KINGSTON, JAMAICA, June 23.—The receipt of a cablegram from Washington announcing that America will impose a tax on Jamaica bananas caused consternation among the planters here.

The banana industry is the principal one of Jamaica, and as most of the fruit goes to the United States the tax will be a serious blow to it.

It was announced Jamaica will establish a quarantine against Hayti, where bubonic plague is raging.

Bryan Is Elected Bible Board Head

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Secretary Bryan has been elected president of the Board of Directors of the Winona, Ind., Assembly and Bible Conference.

Billy Sunday was among the directors present at the meeting. Mr. Bryan will open the conference and Chautauqua at Winona August 22 and will probably speak under the auspices of the organization this summer.

Poincare in England On Diplomatic Visit

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, June 23.—President Poincare of France left for England to-day on his first official visit since he was elected President. High interest is shown in the visit because of the unsettled condition in Southeastern Europe. International politics plays a considerable part in the visit.

President Poincare is accompanied by M. Pichon, French Foreign Minister, and other officials of lesser rank. The visit will last until June 27.

Movies Catch Pair Spooning; Suspended

CALIFORNIA, PA., June 23.—A moving picture which showed them sitting on a rustic bench in a mossy glen of Hazel Park, "spooning" was the cause of Miss Kathryn Boyd, a co-ed, and B. H. Crago, a student, being indefinitely suspended on the eve of their graduation at the State Normal School here.

The film, depicting park scenes, was shown at a local theater and made a sensation among the students. The news got to the faculty.

CONTESTANTS IN PONY RACE LET CHANCES SLIP

Many Votes To Be Had for the Asking—Energetic Ones Have Better Opportunity.

Every day persons come into The Georgian and American offices and order the paper sent to this or that address, saying nothing about votes. If these persons had been approached by one of the boys or girls in the pony contest the candidate would have been rewarded by a good batch of votes.

This only goes to show that votes are to be had for the asking.

Mail orders from the country, too, show that the boys and girls outside the city are not getting every subscriber they could.

Only Hustlers Win.

Contestants should remember that anyone will feel kindly toward the boy or girl asking them to subscribe for The Georgian and American. Whoever subscribes gets his money's worth, and the candidate gets the votes.

The 22 ponies and the 44 watches are going to be given away. Some one is going to win them. They will go to the contestants who show the greatest amount of activity, who use the greatest amount of intelligent effort.

There is no notch into which a weak, vacillating candidate will fit.

Optimism Big Help.

The idle dreamers and "wishful" candidates will gravitate to the bottom just as surely as a stone sinks in water, or a short-winded man falls behind in a foot race.

Optimism helps every time, and the candidate who believes he can get votes will get them.

Remember, the bonus offer for clubs of five still is in effect. If you need a subscription to complete a club, tell people. They will be just that much more ready to help you.

Dies in 5 Days After Taking Mercury for Toothache Tablets

CHICAGO, June 23.—The final incident in a five days' hopeless battle against death was recorded to-day at the inquest over the body of Lizzie Silverman, 18, who swallowed bichloride of mercury tablets, thinking they were toothache medicine. Her aged mother, now without any one to support her, is in a serious condition.

The last thought of the young woman, who had suffered frightful agony since last Tuesday night, was of her months. She recalled that her employer owed her $3 in wages. She asked Dr. O. W. Hatz to collect the money and give it to her parent.

Scores of wealthy Chicagoans had sent flowers with offers of financial assistance for the girl's mother.

Airman Fined for Aeroplane Collision

PARIS, June 23.—A verdict was delivered in an action brought by two airmen, Captains Dickson and Thomas, to determine who was responsible for an aviation accident in Milan in 1910 when two aeroplanes were in collision.

The judge decided that Dickson was to blame and ordered him to pay $1,000 damages to Thomas and $2,000 damages to the makers of the aeroplanes.

Statue Worth Million Bought for $80,000

FLORENCE, June 23.—After negotiations which have been going on for six years the Government has purchased Donatello's statue of St. John from the Martelli family for $80,000.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23.—Fifteen out of twenty shots fired from one of San Francisco's mortar battery defense struck a target five and a half miles out at sea. For night practice this is regarded as an unusual score.

The target was not visible to the gunners who fired from a pit behind a hill. The range was telephoned to them from stations overlooking the harbor.

MORE SUSPECTS HELD IN DUBLIN FOR SLAYINGS

Aged Couple Shot Down at Home. Robbery Motive Believed. Lynching Averted.

DUBLIN, June 23.—Three more negroes—six in all—were arrested Sunday afternoon suspected of being connected with the shocking murder of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Hewell, an aged couple, in front of their home here early Sunday morning.

So inflamed is the feeling in the community over the crime that Sheriff J. J. Flanders and his deputies made the arrests with the utmost secrecy, in order that a lynching, like that which threatened for several hours yesterday afternoon, may not take place.

The three negroes are in the city jail, but their presence was not generally known by the townspeople today. A large force of officers is guarding the jail. The first three negroes arrested were spirited away, presumably to Macon.

Evidence Against Harris.

Late developments in the brutal shooting of Sunday morning have established quite conclusively the connection of Smith Harris, one of the negroes arrested yesterday morning, with the revolting double murder. A suitcase known to have been the property of Howell and his wife was found in the home of Harris when a search was made by the officers. Robbery plainly was the motive, and to-day's new theory is that it was planned by whites and carried out by the negroes.

The crime was one of the most cold-blooded and dastardly in the annals of Laurens County. Hewell was called from his bed in the early hours of Sunday morning and deliberately shot down. One side of his face was partly shot away by the charge from the gun, and yet he lived for several hours, a blood trail showing where he made his way to a stream nearby, and a returning trail marking his way back to the house and almost to the very spotw here he stood when shot.

Woman Shot Down.

Mrs. Hewell, it is supposed, heard ths shots and came to her husband's assistance. She was threatened, and turned to go back in the house. As she did so she was shot in the thigh by one of the negroes and she dropped, when another negro shot her full in the back, killing her instantly.

A pack of bloodhounds picked up the trail of the murderers as soon as the news of the crime came to Sheriff Flanders. They followed the scent almost directly to the home of Smith, or Frank, Harris. He was placed under arrest, along with Joe May, who was found at his house. Harris' shoes are said to fit perfectly into the imprints about the Hewell home.

Sheriff Averts Lynching.

The bloodhounds were then put on another scent, where barefoot tracks met those of Harris near the Hewell home. The hounds went to the home of Henry Kitchens. A single-barreled shotgun, evidently recently fired, was found in one of the rooms.

Hundreds of residents, inflamed by the news of the crime, gathered about the jail. The officers put up a firm resistence, and the mob, without a leader, surged back and left a few of their number on guard. They proposed to return at nightfall.

Taking advantage of the respite given by the mob, Sheriff Flanders and other county officers spirited the three negroes out of the jail by a rear exit and hurried them toward Macon on the Eastman Road. The mob returned later to find their quarry gone.

Newspaper Criticism Court Aid Says Judge

COLORADO SPRINGS, June 23.—Smith McPherson, United States District Judge for the Southern District of Iowa, is a firm believer to-day that newspaper criticism is an aid to the courts.

"No judge has ever yet maintained his dignity and never will by bringing an editor before the court and punishing him because of criticisms made through the columns of the newspaper," says he.

"Criticism of newspapers should be of a kind, and none other, than the editor would use in conversation with the judge. Let editors and writers be gentlemanly toward the judges. And let judges have a due regard to the freedom of the press. The public will then be the beneficiary."

CARUSO IN MAD FIT AT LOSING GIRL'S SUIT

of anybody, because I am free to act as my heart dictates. This heart is entirely locked up in yours, and nothing can ever drag it from the firm and beloved cradle where it has been lying for the past three months.

"I can not write any more at present, my soul. I leave you, thinking of you, adoring you. I leave you with my pen, but I treasure you in my heart. A million affectionate kisses from thine own Enrico."

After the betrothal the stoop girl studied French and tried to fit herself to be the wife of the greatest tenor of his time. Caruso at times was chivalrous and generous to her. She had a chaperone whenever she met him and he showered her with presents, including the most costly gowns and much actual money, which she accepted, although reluctant to do so, the trial developed.

After Caruso recovered from his infatuation the girl's father wrote to him and he turned the letters over to his attorney, who at once offered to settle with the girl for 60,000 lires, or about $12,000. This was refused by the girl, who wrote Caruso saying:

Dashed Into Darkness.

"Let us arrange this matter without the intervention of lawyers. If we can not, I know not what remains for me to do. Do not think this is a threat, Enrico, but as our love vanished like a dream, you upset my quiet life and gave me visions of life, light and joy, only to dash me back into darkness."

Hug and Kiss Are Detective's Reward

NEW YORK, June 23.—Douglas M. Sanderson is still tasting a kiss he got at the auction sale of the furnishings of the Astor House. An aged woman informed the auctioneer that she had lost her pocketbook containing $18.

While Sanderson, who is the house detective, was hunting for the purse, the auctioneer offered it and its contents at auction subject to its being found. The crowd had bid $17 when the detective appeared with the missing wallet.

The aged woman gave the detective a hug and a kiss, much to his embarrassment and to the joy of the crowd.

Critics Rave, but All London Does Tango

LONDON, June 23.—Despite the bitterness of its critics the tango apparently has come to stay and the Argentine tango and the Boston, in all the newest elaborations, will be danced in the most fashionable ballrooms.

The prejudice which may have existed among society people regarding new dances is certainly disappearing."

WASHINGTON, June 23.—More than half a century ago Uncle Sam was handed three bags of gold worth about $600 and he is still holding them. The Comptroller is at a loss what to do with them.

In 1856 H. J. Peters brought 127.87 worth of gold bullion to the San Francisco mint; in 1858, Joseph Baker presented $333.27 worth, and in 1863, J. M. Souther handed over $156.96 worth. Each was given a receipt and told to come back for a gold certificate. They never returned.

PLEDGES OF JAP RULERS NOT TO BE TRUSTED

Latest Financial Statement From Tokio Gives Evidence of Usual Trickery and Deceit.

By BOERSIANER.

CHICAGO, June 23.—In the world of commerce and finance Japanese perfidy is proverbial. Gross misrepresentations, disregard for contracts—verbal or written—are allowable in the trade ethics of Japan.

That which is common among tradesmen always is a reflection of the code among the authoritative class. This is confirmed by the last statement from the Japanese Government. The document omits an item that is characteristic of the tinkering fiscalism of the Tokio regime.

When, in 1906, Japan's national debt was consolidated, a cardinal stipulation was that all war loans, amounting to $850,000,000, should be redeemed within 30 years—every year 110,000,000 yen should be set aside for the redemption. Though no sinking fund was started—finance ministers promised a beginning "at a more propitious time"—the redemptive clause appeared conspicuously in all annual statements save the latest, where it is strikingly conspicuous by its absence.

Instead, indeed, of decreasing its loans, Japan has increased these to a grave sum. Nine years ago Japan's obligations totaled 1,872,000,000 yen. To-day, despite solemn promises of reduction, the Japanese Government owes 2,716,000,000 yen.

More Armament.

But the end is not yet. The Japanese Diet has actually approved a new naval program, involving 360,000,000 yen, while the newest Finance Minister, Tokohashi, wants 300,000,000 yen for "increasing the efficiency of the army in Korea."

A financial critic is concerned only with finance and political economy. It is his duty to call attention to the pusillanimity of a government that ruthlessly breaks faith with its creditors. But the proposals for increased armaments should arouse more curiosity in Washington than has been manifested so far.

To the political economist it sounds odd to hear California berated for her attitude toward the Japanese who wish to acquire land on the coast. Japan, on her side, has never allowed foreigners to own an inch of land there. Two or three years ago a bill to permit this was passed by the House of Representatives, but it was shelved higher up, never received imperial sanction and never became law.

Foreign Labor Barred.

Japan does not permit any foreign laborers to work in Japan. Not long ago a Japanese contractor, who had undertaken to build a railway line, found himself greatly hampered by strikes among his natives. He, therefore, engaged several hundred Chinese. A few days after these men had arrived at Kobe, the authorities discovered that the laws of Japan provide that no foreign laborers should be allowed to work in Japan, and all the men had to be deported, the loss falling, of course, upon them and on the contractor.

Furthermore, the taxes on foreign insurance companies doing business in Japan have been doubled, and the Government now rigorously forbids foreign vessels to do a coasting trade.

Why, in the circumstances, Washington, or any other government for that matter, should be supersensitive about ruffling Japan's diplomatic susceptibilities is quite beyond the ken of a matter-of-fact economist. Viewed economically, Japan wants everything and will accord nothing.

In the matter of her foreign loans, she has gone very far, indeed, for she has no scruples whatsoever to restrain her. She would borrow to the final farthing, promising the while everything exacted of her—and pay no attention to the exactions. To the government official at Tokio, monetary obligations mean no more than the word of the average Japanese merchant.

Phone Girls to Seek Simple Life

Plan an Ideal Camp Vacation

Fresh Air and Fudge Their Menu

Miss Katherine C. Tatum.

500 Employees of Southern Bell Will Take Two Weeks' Rest in Woods.

The "back to the country" craze has hit the Southern Bell telephone exchange in Atlanta, and 500 hello girls, clerks, stenographers and bookkeepers are going to spend their vacations in the woods.

"Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife," where there are no hurry-up callers to disturb their temper and where the lines never get crossed, they plan to spend two weeks without a care in the world and live on fresh air and fudge.

The time—July 1 to September 31; the place,—M. O. Jackson's 290-acre farm on the Brown's Mill Road, two miles beyond the terminus of the Lakewood car line; the girl—why all of them, every single solitary one of them that operates the boards, keeps the books or takes dictation at the Atlanta branch of the Southern Bell Telephone Company: this is the scene and the synopsis and the whole plot in a nutshell.

Everyone's Talking It.

It's the one topic of conversation at the telephone exchange; everybody's talking about it. If an importunate creditor phones you he will sue if you don't settle, and about that time you hear a sweet voice say, "Won't that be lovely," don't think merely a hello girl talking about the outing to her nearest neighbor at the boards.

Miss Katherine C. Tatum, chief of the stenographic bureau, originated the idea three months ago. She confided to the head operators, Mrs. Mitchell and Misses Ada Mealor, Sammie Dixon and Alice Means, and they liked it. The five of them consulted the telephone officials and received assurances of hearty endorsement and enthusiastic support in every way possible.

The girls were consulted, and they jumped at the idea. Miss Tatum completed the details, and the result is best told in her own words.

"Mr. Jackson volunteered to give us all the space we wanted on his 290-acre farm," she said. "His beneficence assured the success of our plan, because the greatest obstacle was to secure a site with abundant good spring water.

All Home Comforts.

"We will have a dozen tents, some of them 12 by 14 feet, others 18 by 20 feet. An average of half a dozen cots will be placed in each tent. We have arranged a perfect sanitary system. There will be running hot and cold water in each tent, and plenty of ice water.

"We will have a community library and will, of course, take the daily papers. We will have telephones, too. In short, we will have all the conveniences of the city together with the comforts and beauties of the country. Our camp site is a cool and beautiful place, free from swamps and malaria and mosquitoes, and we intend to keep it so clean there will be no flies.

"We will have a man cook and a matron. I myself will be in charge of the camp, and I intend to see that it is very home like and just as attractive as it can possibly be. We will have an acetylene gas system and shower baths.

"Careful contracting and financing has made it possible for us to have this outing at 50 cents a day. That's the total cost, and I'd like to know where there is a health resort or summer hotel where you can live as we will live for this price.

"Some of the girls are accustomed to go to New York during their vacations. The fare to New York and back is $48.40. The fare to our camp will be fifteen cents, five cents for the car ride and ten cents for an automobile bus to the camp, or thirty cents for the round trip. As compared with the New York trip, we will save $48.10 on fare alone, to say nothing of other expenses. Besides, we will have a cooler, healthier and nicer time at the camp.

Night Trips For Workers.

"Some few of the girls have already taken their vacations. We have arranged for these girls to go to the camp every night, if they want to. They will leave the office at 5:30 o'clock and get back at 8:30 o'clock the next morning. The trip, including their supper and breakfast, will cost fifty cents."

An idea of the thoroughness of the arrangements for the outing may be gained from the fact that the girls have already contracted for their country produce. Farms adjacent to their camp will provide chickens, eggs, butter, milk, vegetables and fruits. At least once a week an old time barbecue will be served.

Unlimited diversion will be obtainable. The Jackson farm has a magnificent concrete swimming pool, filled with water from the springs, and the girls have been tendered free use of it. A string band has been engaged to make music every night. Visitors, either men or women, will be received until a reasonable hour each night. The camp will accommodate fifty girls a day, and the girls unite in saying they will tax its capacity for the whole three months.

YANKEES SEIZE S. AMERICAN TRADE

NEW YORK, June 23.—When Dr. W. E. Aughinbaugh, the commercial globe trotter, of Philadelphia, arrived at the Breslin after an absence of eleven months, he explained that since his last appearance on Broadway he and Mrs. Aughinbaugh had traveled somewhere between 40,000 and 50,000 miles, and that they had visited in that time every country south of the Rio Grande, and incidentally taken in Northern Africa and much of Europe.

Dr. Aughinbaugh has been making a commercial investigation for certain companies interested in the export trade. He says that in the last four years American manufactures and exporters have gone after South American business so zealously that to-day they are almost driving the British and the Germans to the wall. Wonderful fortunes have been made in some of the Latin-American republics, he says, by Americans who went thither with hardly more than a shoestring, and the American advertising man is blossoming and becoming fruitful in Buenos Ayres, and Rio de Janeiro to an extent that would make the highest paid solicitor at home green with envy.

"One of the most interesting journeys we made was up the Parana River into Brazil, and then to Asuncion, the capital of Paraguay. And whom do you think I found there? No less a person than Tex Rickard, who managed the Jeffries-Johnson fight. Rickard is superintending the cattle raising for Percival Farquhar's Company which, besides big cattle ranges, seems to own lots of railroads and street railways and electric lighting plants down there.

Pushing Europeans To Wall.

"What I noticed during my trip especially is that the United States has made tremendous strides in the last four years toward getting possession of South American trade. England and Germany have hitherto had every thing all their own way, but now our exporters are pushing them to the wall. Our people have at last awakened to the possibilities of the great market for their goods that South America furnishes. Take the case of one company that sells a brand of mineral water. It is taking advantage of the fact that throughout South America the water is bad, and it now sends its wares down there by the shipload, and you find them everywhere.

"I do not believe it is generally known up here, but Charles M. Schwab has got in Chile the biggest iron mine in the world. This is in the Southern part of the country, and it has been estimated that it alone will be able to supply all the iron needed in Chile for 200 years. American miners are being brought into the country by the thousand. I was told that $20,000,000 has been invested in the acquisition and operation of the mine. The Braden Company, an American concern owning mines in Chile, has doubled its output of copper within four or five years. The Standard Oil Company has depots all along the coast, and the Du Pont Powder Company has two nitrate plants in Chile. In Peru, the oil fields at Lobitas, in which American, English, and Italian capital is invested, are perhaps the biggest in the world. They have dug into the sandy desert, and it is spouting oil, and they have even sunk wells below the sea and got oil in vast quantities. The Peruvian Steamship Company, which runs to Panama, is now operating its ships by oil.

Preparing For Canal.

"There is not a steamship company in South America that has not placed orders for more ships on account of the approaching opening of the Panama Canal. The United Fruit Company is opening stations all along the barren coast of Western South America, and is preparing to send bananas down there to supply a new market. The United States Steel Company has a big vanadium mine at Cerro de Pasco, Peru, where 3,000 Americans are working at an altitude of 3,000 feet. The Panama Canal has given them a big jolt down there, and they are waking up."

Irvin Cobb Scores on Montague Glass

NEW YORK, June 23.—Irvin S. Cobb's friends are boasting to-day over the ease with which Irvin had "put one over" on Montague Glass.

According to friends, Mr. and Mrs. Cobb were leaving the subway the other night, when they were met by a boy shouting at the top of his voice:

"Get your Saturday Evening Post! All about Montague Glass's latest story."

Mrs. Cobb questioned the boy, who exclaimed:

"Why, Mr. Glass lives right over there, and gives me a quarter for his paper every time he buys one. He's all right, he is."

The next day the same boy was shouting:

Lauder Appears in Church as Preacher

LONDON, June 23.—Harry Lauder, the Scotch comedian, appeared in a new role in a church at Bristol yesterday. He preached a sermon and sang several hymns as solos.

The 1,200 admission tickets were rapidly bought up and many people who were anxious to attend were disappointed.

'Wishing Sash' Has Come to Stay

Miss Purtell Says It Brings Luck

Anyhow, It Makes Pretty Picture

Miss Myolene Lowe Purtell, who is sure "wishing sash" will be a lasting fad.

Girls Refuse to Tell What They Hope for When Tying Knots. Only Laugh.

The "wishing sash" has come to Atlanta to stay, it seems. Another fair advocate of its use appears in the person of Miss Myolene Lowe Purtell, and this is an added guarantee of its value, which makes certain the fact that it is not a passing fad.

Miss Purtell believes in the "wishing sash." Of all the wishes that she has wished while knotting it about her waist, none has gone ungranted, she says.

Miss Purtell, like the other girls who wear the "wishing sash," smilingly refuses to declare the nature of the wishes that have accompanied it. All the wishes that all the "wishing sash" girls have made must have been happy wishes, though, because the girls laugh at you over the secret of them.

But even without its efficacy in making dreams come true, the "wishing sash," as Miss Purtell wears it, has a very distinct reason for being. It is an adorable article of apparel, particularly so in this instance, when the young woman, twining the bright red silk about the waist of her white gown, made the prettiest of pictures.

Those who watched her uttered a fervent wish, themselves. And it was that the "wishing sash" become a permanent institution.

Remember, it is a long sash, a la Bulgarian, and it is wound about the maiden's waist, and its long ends knotted. The wish is made as the knot is being tied, and the knot remains until the wish comes true. Almost any color will do, and against a white dress the effect is bewitching.

Clean Phila. Streets

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—Forty-four women took the Civil Service tests in this city for street cleaning inspectors. They toiled all morning on five hundred word treatises showing how they would clean the streets of the municipality and what they thought was the most needed thing to improve the condition of the streets.

They were required among other things to describe the most approved apparatus for the cleaning of the streets. They were asked the difference between some of the various kinds of machines, their purposes and the practical operation, the relation of the street cleaner to the community, the reasons for the excessive litter in certain sections and the value of moral suasion when applied in the proper places.

Catholics Win Dutch Parliament Majority

THE HAGUE, June 23.—The indications are that the elections for members of the Dutch Parliament will result in favor of the coalition of Catholics and anti-revolutionists.

Keeping the Body in Repair

Nature intended that the body should do its own repairing—and it would do so were it not for the fact that most of us live other than a natural life.

Nature didn't intend that we should wear corsets, tight collars or shoes, nor live in badly ventilated and draughty houses, nor eat and drink some of the things that we do, nor ride in street cars when we should walk.

The consequence is that the body when it gets out of order must look for outside help to make the necessary repairs.

Life's Worth Living in Georgia

If you prefer city life, there are no better cities in the world than those in Georgia. If you prefer village life, the smaller towns in Georgia offer every inducement.

If you prefer country or farm life, Georgia offers greater inducements than any State in the Union. Georgia lands work the year round, from two to five crops being gathered off of the same land each year---crops that are profitable.

Climate and Soil

The climate is such that farmers do not have to house stock during the winter, there being good grazing the entire year. For raising cattle and stock Georgia offers greater inducements than can be found elsewhere.

The soil is suited for almost anything that grows and can be utilized the entire year. The prices at which good farm land can be purchased at present in Georgia are so low that it is a matter of comment---some thinking that the land is not so good as stated. The land is good, but there are thousands of acres that are now lying idle and the good people of Georgia are anxious for good farmers to come among them. Consequently the land is cheaper here than elsewhere.

SECRET ORDERS TO RUSH GUNS TO MANILA

U. S. Arms Philippines as Mikado's Envoys Are Welcomed by Wilson and Bryan.

BY JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Inside information from the War Department to-day is that a number of the fourteen-inch guns intended for the defense of Manila and Honolulu are actually on the way to those exposed points. War Department officials say orders were given for the shipment of these guns from Sandy Hook some time ago.

In connection with this information these officials say the military conclusion is that for the present at least all the energies of the department will be concentrated on Manila and Honolulu rather than Panama. One official said to-day:

"I don't think there is any doubt in any military mind that in case of early hostilities it would be absolutely impossible to prevent the Japanese from capturing the western end of the canal before we could get either ships or guns there.

"If the Japanese should make the attack on the western end, the plan here would be to rush what we have of an army, and especially our artillery, to the eastern end for a prompt campaign and to march across the zone. I don't think any one will question we could dislodge the Japanese."

Meanwhile the Japanese Ambassador, Dr. Soyedo and other visiting Japanese had the ear of the Administration to-day in the White House, and at a luncheon given by Secretary of State Bryan.

Contrary to the general expectation, it was announced to-day by Secretary Bryan the reply of the United States to Japan would be submitted to-morrow to the Cabinet meeting which failed at its last session to frame a definite answer to the Japanese demands.

With regard to the announcement that the United States will not renew the general arbitration treaty with Mexico until after the recognition of the Republic by this Government, officials declare the sole reason for the non-recognition is there is not yet a stable Government in Mexico.

It is believed, in more than one of the Washington Departments, if Japan were to carry out her original military scheme of making a demonstration against the United States, it would be on an understanding with Mexico officials whether sanctioned by the Mexican people or not.

LITTLE STORIES of the TOWN

Trying It on the Guest First.

A little boy, who lives on Ponce DeLeon Avenue, was given two images of plaster, coated on the outside with pink sugar. He wanted to eat the images, but he was warned on no account to do so.

"They are poison," he was told. "If you eat them it will kill you."

However, the boy was dubious. He had been cheated before this by grown-up people. Finally he had a young friend to spend the day with him and that night it was discovered that one of the images had disappeared. His mother, nearly frantic, rushed to him.

"Harold," she said, "where is the pink image?" Harold frowned as he answered, defiantly: "I gave it to Richard, and if he's alive to-morrow I'm going to eat the other one myself."

Sympathy for Poor Little Edwin.

Victor and Edwin, aged 6 and 4, respectively, had just been seated at the table for dinner. There were five older persons present and this was really the first time that either of those kids had been allowed to sit up for the big meal of the day. Victor looked across the snowy board as the dessert was brought on, made a hasty calculation and burst into a loud and long wail.

"There's seven of us and there ain't but six desserts. Poor little Edwin ain't goin' to get none!"

Age in Language on Expense Account.

This one was told the other evening by a guest of some officers stationed at Fort McPherson:

An army officer in his expense list on Government service put down:

"Porter, 10 cents."

The officer was requested to report to the War Office, where he was told:

"While executing public duty refreshments are not chargeable to the nation."

"The item does not represent refreshments," he replied, "but a fee to a carrier."

"You should have said 'porterage,'" was then explained to him.

When the officer had occasion to take a hansom, remembering instructions, he wrote in his accounts:

Sees 1,000,000 Kisses Every Year

Gatekeeper Expert On Osculation

Custom Grows in Favor, He Says

H. T. Lewis, who opines he knows more about kisses than Noah Webster

Many Miss Trains Because They Must Have "Just One More," Declares H. T. Lewis.

When old Noah Webster solemnly set down in his book that a kiss is "a salute or caress given by smacking the lips," he probably thought he had said the last word on the subject, and a great many people have long held the view that Mr. Webster knew—impersonally—more about the kiss than any other man.

But he hadn't and he didn't.

An Atlantan has something to say about the kiss and its habits, and he deposes earnestly that he knows—impersonally, always impersonally—more about osculation than Mr. Webster or anyone else.

Which is by way of introducing H. T. Lewis, guardian of the portals of the Terminal Railway Station, in other words, a gatekeeper. Mr. Lewis declares he has seen more kissing and heard more kissing than any other man in Atlanta, and he is ready to fall in with the fashion and make an affidavit. He took a pencil and a piece of paper Saturday morning, and he "figgered" earnestly for some moments. Then he made this statement:

Million Kisses Yearly.

"I see 1,000,000 kisses a year—and I've been here six years."

He figures it this way:

He sees about sixty trains come and go each day, and the passengers average about 80 to a train. Of these about fifty kiss someone, either going or coming, which makes a trifle over a million smacks a year that are delivered and accepted at the gates.

Therefore, if seeing 6,000,000 kisses makes a man an authority on kissing, then is Mr. Lewis the last word on osculatory caresses. So listen to what he says about life on the "Bridge of Kisses"—as the station attaches have named the platform leading from the waiting room to the train sheds—and among other things you'll see why he is invariably in a good humor.

"If it wasn't for the kisses we see and the kisses we hear," he said, "the life of the gatekeeper would be deadly monotony. We see every kind of a kiss here at the gate, from the Marathon kiss of the lover to the bashful peck of the schoolboy and the earnest efforts of people to emulate a clap of thunder."

Kissing Gains in Favor.

Mr. Lewis said people are kissing more now than ever before, at least in the railway stations.

"The people who used to bid each other good-by with handclasps are now kissing," he declared. "Some people have to be kissed three or four times before they feel equal to the dangers of a trip. Many are the times I've seen them miss a train because they had to have just one more kiss."

With the 6,000,000 kisses in six years as a basis, certain scientifically inclined souls organized another expedition to Mr. Lewis' paper and pencil, and evolved the following startling and momentous facts:

If the sound of the 6,000,000 kisses were blended into one great burst of noise it would equal the report of the Presidential salute of 21 cannon.

If the germs transmitted from kissers were placed end to end they would reach from the earth to the moon, or from hither to thither.

Mr. Lewis, growing excited as fact after fact was unfolded, voiced his intention of writing a book on "Six Years on the Bridge of Kisses, or Osculatory Facts and Fancies." In this volume he expects to arrange and classify the kiss, as he has seen it in six years of careful observation. In one chapter he proposes to classify the kiss as follows:

The Syncopated Kiss—Much in vogue among the younger set. Consists of rapid-fire pressures of the lips, accompanied by such phrases as "Be good, Kid."

The Sob Kiss—Used exclusively by those afflicted with newlyweditis, and those about to be.

The Peachtree Pucker—A possession of women who affect canes and poodle dogs.

IRON ORE MINED SHOWS BIG GAIN

The iron ore mined in the United States in 1912 amounted to the great total of 55,150,147 long tons, compared with 43,876,552 tons mined in 1911, an increase of 11,273,595 tons, or 25.09 per cent, according to an advance statement by Ernest F. Bunchard, of the United States Geological Survey.

STATES—	1911.	1912.
Alabama	3,827,791	4,563,603
Georgia	203,889	134,637
Michigan	10,329,039	11,191,430
Minnesota	24,645,105	34,431,768
Missouri	65,325	43,480
New Jersey	466,234	364,673
New York	1,061,279	1,216,672
Ohio	15,707	10,346
Pennsylvania	537,506	517,081
Tennessee	463,835	415,885
Utah	39,903	7,280
Virginia	614,023	446,305
Wisconsin	698,660	860,600

The Minnesota iron ranges are producing at present considerably more iron ore than is produced in all the rest of the States together, having furnished nearly 62.5 per cent of the total for the United States in 1912.

Other important districts reported quantities mined in 1912 as follows: Birmingham district, Alabama, 3,957,743 tons, largely of red hematite, but including nearly half a million tons of brown ore; Chattanooga district, Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia, 778,520 tons, about two-thirds of which was red hematite and one-third brown ore.

BIRDS CELEBRATE INN'S REBUILDING

Return to Feast When New Tavern Replaces One They Lived in Months Ago.

When the inn was burned,
The birds began to sing;
They opened up the bird cage
And all the birds took wing.
But picking on the hillsides
Was mighty scant and thin,
So just to get a hand-out
The birds flew back again.
—Marin County Mother Goose.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23—When the Muir Tavern, in the Muir Woods, burned several nights ago, the 150 songbirds in the big cage, a few feet away from the inn, thought it was daylight, and began putting on their regular sunrise song program. With the flames lapping up the hotel porch, just across the railroad track, it was no place for songbirds, and the firefighters threw open the door of the cage and released the little warblers.

The manager of the inn, Charles Runyon, had trained several of the birds in Swiss yodling specialties, and they were all highly prized on account of their vocal ability. When they flitted down into the big woods, Runyon bade them a sorrowful farewell.

But the manager had underestimated the attractions of the tavern. While a luncheon was being given yesterday, to mark the beginning of a new inn, several lonesome and hungry little birds hopped up and began yipping for birdseed and biscuits. Their mates joined them during the afternoon, and before night the entire 150 had returned. They ate so much they won't be able to sing for a week.

A temporary structure has already replaced the burned building, and all the guests have been cared for without being inconvenienced.

Old Fogyisms of To-day

By DOROTHY DIX.

ONE of the most interesting plays of the past season was Arnold Bennett's "Milestones." The theory of the drama was growth. It showed how the advanced thought of one day is the conservatism of the next and the old fogyism of the day after.

In the play the hero breaks with his business partner because he wants to build iron ships instead of wooden ships. "You'll be ruined if you do," says the standpatter; "iron ships will never float. You might as well build stone ships."

The progressive man goes on and builds iron ships and makes a fortune, but at middle life his partner wants to build steel ships. "Never," cries the old man, with his conservative old ideas. "Iron ships are all right, but steel ships will never float." The young man builds his steel ships, that give us our Mauretanias, and then, when he has grown old, comes a young man talking of building airships, and he cries out, as the other two old men have done about the iron ships and the steel ships, "that airships will never be practicable."

This play, "Milestones," is the biggest suffrage play ever written, and offers the best suffrage argument.

Go back three generations. The question of whether a woman should be given an education then was just as burning a one as the question of whether she should be given a right to vote is now. And precisely the same arguments were brought against it as are brought against woman suffrage now.

An Old Belief.

In our great-grandmothers' time it was contended that it would unsex a woman to teach her geography, and make her bold and unwomanly and kill her sweet feminine charm for her to receive an education. Also that only a few blue stockings among women wanted an education. Therefore, it was foolish and wrong to open college doors to the feminine sex.

Well, by dint of a heroic fight by a few women for all women, the privileges of education were extended to girls, and the learning that our forefathers so feared would unsex and demoralize women has brought about none of the calamities they foretold. Women are still women. They are still sought in marriage, and so far from only a few caring for an education, the girls outnumber the boys in high schools. Education has not unfitted women to be good mothers. It makes them better ones.

Look back at the time when education was thought to endanger women, and you will laugh as you did at the man who was so sure that an iron ship couldn't be made to float.

The next milestone that we have passed is the one that marked the place where women began to go into gainful occupations. In our grandmothers' day the only way a woman had to make a good living was to marry it. By and by a few bold and heroic women rebelled at this state of affairs and demanded a right to go into any kind of business that they were fitted for. The whole conventional world raised one grand howl of protest.

A woman's place is in the home, it cried, whether she's got a home or not, or anything to eat in it or not. If she goes out into the world to work she will become unsexed. She will become coarse and vulgar, and wear short hair and trousers, and smoke and swear, and men won't marry her, and everything will go to the bow-wows.

There are eight million wage earning women in the United States, and if there are any unsexed among them the Eden Musee has failed to get them. So far from the working girl having her love of dress eliminated, the trouble with her is that she's too much given to frills. Also, instead of being opposed to marriage she gets married just when she's most valuable to her employer. The finest woman in the world to-day is the wide-awake, competent business girl, amply able to stand on her own feet, and earn what she needs. She is the prop of her family, and a blessing to society.

It's as absurd to think that people were ever afraid to give women the right to earn an honest living as it is to think that they ever prophesied that you couldn't make a steel ship that would float.

The third milestone that we have passed is the property milestone. Up to our mother's day when a woman married every cent she had passed into her husband's exclusive possession. This was true although the man might be a gambler and a spendthrift, swamped to his chin in debts of which the woman knew nothing, or whether he was a good fellow of the shiftless sort between whose fingers money leaks as water through a sieve.

When it was first proposed to pass property laws securing a woman's money to herself it was fought tooth and nail—even by many women. People said it would break up the home, and produce endless friction between husbands and wives. Women cried out that if they could trust themselves to their husbands they could trust their money. It was contended that for a woman to own her own money would make her bossy and insulting to her husband.

They Worked Well.

Nevertheless some property laws, not adequate ones yet, have been passed, and it has been found out that they worked out for the general good. The right sort of man didn't want to hold up his wife and rob her of her property and the woman who is married to the wrong sort finds out that it is, at least, some consolation to have a roof over her head when her dream of love is broken.

Nobody would now argue that a woman hasn't a right to her own property or to the money she earns, any more than they would contend that we should go back to the old days of the wooden sailing ships.

And now we have come to the last milestone in the march of human progress. It is the demand that women who own property and pay taxes, who form one-half of the population, who are amenable to the law, should stand before that law on an equal platform with men.

Those who object say that for women to vote will unsex them, that it will take away their feminine charm, that men won't want to marry them, that it will break up the home, that not all women want to vote, just as they said these things about educating women, or about women being given a chance to make an honest living, and about women being permitted to control their own property.

Not one single evil prophecy founded on women's advancement has been fulfilled. May we not confidently believe that we may give woman the ballot not [illegible] without danger, but that their [illegible] needed in politics just as much as needed in the home and the [illegible]? Why should we not [illegible] next milestone, too, and [illegible] onward journey?

The other picture shows an afternoon gown of white supple moire. The bodice is a kimono crossed with a small decollete in the V shape, with small plastron of embroidered linen. A shawl collar achieves the yoke. The sleeves are of three-quarter length, with small revers trimmed with three small buttons of the same material, a point going up over the middle front of the bodice.

Too Much for the Chimney

WHEN Grandfather Lickshingle heard it read from a newspaper that Peter Ripley had a lamp chimney which his family had used for thirteen years, he rapped savagely on the floor with his walking stick and said:

"Now, what the dickens is the use of putting such reading in the newspaper? If they want some information about lamp chimneys, let them come to me and get it. When me and your grandmother broke up housekeeping we had a lamp chimney. But it wasn't made in these 'ere shoddy times. I paid a penny for it the day we were married. That was away back somewhere in the last century. We used it night and day for 79 years and eight——"

"Why, grandpa, you didn't have to use it in the daytime, did you?"

"Didn't have to—no. But we did. Used it at night on the lamp, and in the daytime we used it to drive nails with. Sometimes the children cracked nuts with it, and the road surveyor borrowed it several times to pound stones on the streets. One day I thought they had lost it. The workmen had left it on the road, and the street cars ran over it seventeen times before it was found. This lamp chimney had been in a railway collision, 22 lamps had exploded under it during its time, a horse kicked it clean through the side of the stable, and the chimney came out of it all without as much as a crack, but the horse had to be sent to the hospital. However, it's broke now," said grandfather, with a deep sigs.

"Then you were foolish enough to let the servant clean it, were you?" asked mother.

"No, but we might as well. When we gave up keeping house I gave it to a friend. He was hard of hearing, and he wanted it for an ear trumpet. One day a man tried to tell him why he ought to be President, and that he was the only real man for the job, and, by cracky, he burst the chimney into a million pieces."

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

In the amiable way of villagers, they were discussing the matrimonial affairs of a couple who, though recently wed, had begun to find the yoke of Hymen a burden.

"'Tis all along o' them hasty marriages," opined one caustic old gentleman, who had been much to the fore in the discussion. "They did not understand each other. They'd nobut knowed each other for a matter of seven year."

"Well, that seems long enough," said a listener.

"Long ene'?" Bah! Ye're wrong. When a body's courting, he canna be too careful. Why, my courtship with Mary lasted a matter of nineteen years."

"You were certainly careful," agreed the listener; "and did you find your plan successful when you married?"

"Ye jump to conclusions hastily," said the old man. "I understood her then, so I didna marry her!"

A sad-looking man went into a chemist's. "Can you give me," he asked, "something that will drive from my mind the thought of sorrow and bitter recollection?"

Then the chemist nodded, and put him up a little dose of quinine and wormwood and rhubarb and Epsom salts and a dash of castor oil, and gave it to him, and for six months the man could not think of anything in the world except new schemes for getting the taste out of his mouth.

The portly lady had accidentally taken a rear seat in a car reserved for smokers. With unconcealed indignation she watched the man beside her fill his pipe.

"Do it now, ma'am!" said the man, as he carefully lighted up; "then take my advice an' stop it!"

Corporal (to soldiers)—"Why is the blade of the saber curved instead of straight?"

Soldier—"It is curved in order to give more force to the blow."

Corporal—"Humbug! The saber is curved so as to fit the scabbard. If it was straight, how would you get it into the crooked scabbard, blockhead?"

Blink (the wholesaler)—"Well, how many orders did you get yesterday?"

Gink (the salesman)—"I got two orders in one shop."

Blink—"What were they?"

Gink—"One was to get out and the other was to stay out."

"Have you a spare cigar about you, old chap?"

"Certainly. But I thought you were going to stop smoking?"

"I am, but not too abruptly. I've already stopped smoking my own cigars."

A factory in Grenoble, France, utilizes the water of a reservoir situated in the mountains at a height of 200 yards. The water reaches the factory through a vertical tube of the same length, with a diameter of considerably less than an inch, the jet being used to move a turbine. Experiments have shown that the strongest men can not cut the jet with the best tempered sword, and in some instances the blade has been broken into fragments without deflecting a drop of the water and with as much violence as a pane of glass may be shattered by a blow from an iron bar. It has been calculated that a jet of water a small fraction of an inch in thickness, moving with sufficient velocity, could not be cut by a rifle bullet.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

From where Gordon stood the wild windstorm seemed to be rushing directly toward him with twice the speed of the fastest express train, cutting a path five hundred feet wide. Even as he looked the tornado, with a rush and a roar, swept up between the mansion and the huge granite rock in the valley. Gordon dashed for the brook to seek some sheltering bank, but ere he could reach it the cyclone was upon him, or at least the edge of it, and he was picked up as though he was a chip of wood, carried forty feet in the air and hurled to the opposite side of the brook, where he lay stunned.

When Gordon came to his senses he found himself surrounded by four rough looking men, dressed in the garb of the mountaineer. They assisted him to his feet and he worked his arms, legs and body to ascertain if there were any bones broken. Finding himself apparently sound, he smiled.

"I never rode on the wings of a cyclone before," he said, "and I don't believe I ever want to try it again."

None of the men he addressed made direct reply to this cheerful remark. They stood close to him and eyed him critically. Finally one of them, a black-bearded man, said:

"I reckon you're Gordon Kelly."

"I am," replied Gordon, surprised that the stranger should know that name.

Gordon a Prisoner.

As if this answer were a signal for attack, the four men closed in on him. One of them had a rope and he attempted to pinion Gordon's arms. Though taken completely by surprise, Gordon put up a desperate struggle, but was quickly overpowered by the four men, all of whom seemed possessed of uncommon strength. His arms were tied behind his back and he was commanded to walk forward.

"What's the meaning of this?" demanded the prisoner.

The man with the black beard answered.

"I reckon nothin' ain't goin' to harm yer, if yer obey orders. If yer don't we'll make yer. Come along."

But Gordon refused to move. He said in a calm voice.

"Just tell me what this all about, will you, please? You've made a mistake. I have done nothing to you. You've got the wrong man."

"You ain't done nothin' to us, but you're the man we want. Come along, now." The black-bearded man drew a six-shooter from his pocket and grasped the weapon by the barrel. "I don't want to hit yer with this yere pistol, but I reckon I'll have to unless yer do what I tell yer."

Gordon saw that all four men were armed, though the black-bearded man was the only one to make a display. Resistence was useless and might bring him needless injury, so without further words he walked ahead in the direction indicated feeling that in a short time the whole thing would be explained and he would be allowed to go free. His captors followed the brook for nearly a mile and then turned off toward the northwest. They crossed the path of the cyclone, which had long since passed in its fury, leaving destruction in its wake, and continued on through thick forests and over rough and wild mountain country. Gordon tried to secure some information from the men, but they did not reply to his questions.

A Long Walk.

Finally, after walking northwesterly for about three miles, Gordon judged, they came to Pew Creek, the stream that flowed past the settlement bearing the same name nearly fourteen miles to the south of where they were. The prisoner knew the country well, especially the land bordering the creek. He knew not where his captors were taking him, but at least he was familiar with the ground. The bearded man, leading the way—he seemed to be the leader of the four—followed the creek for another mile until he struck the main road. Before reaching the road, however, the party stopped, while one of the men went ahead as a scout, evidently to make sure the road was clear. He waved a signal to advance and the others did so, crossing a bridge where the creek met the road and then plunging due west through another forest. They were getting on higher ground all the time and finally came to a clearing. Then, making a sharp ascent of about one hundred yards, they descended rapidly for another hundred yards and came to a small clump of trees, with underbrush growing high all around it. Walking straight ahead, the bearded man parted the underbrush and with Gordon following close, they passed through it and arrived at a log cabin, evidently of recent construction.

By this time it was almost dark. One of the men stepped inside the cabin and lighted two or three tallow candles, after which he set about preparing the evening meal. When the candles were glowing, the bearded man motioned Gordon to enter, which he did, the others following. Gordon glanced around. There were five rough banks, with a straw on them for bedding. There was no stove, but there was a fireplace in a corner, with a small chimney leading up from it, built of sticks of wood plastered with clay. The only article of furniture in the room was a rude bench. The bearded man then spoke the first words he had uttered since the march began. He said to Gordon:

"Yer won't be hurted none unless yer try to escape. Then we'll shoot." He untied the rope that bound Gordon's arms, one of the other men standing by with a revolver in his hand, and added: 'Maybe yer better git in one of them bunks till grub is ready.'"

Thoughts Busy.

Gordon rubbed the circulation back in his arms and then lay down. He had long since made up his mind to treat the situation good-naturedly, feeling that more could be accomplished that way than being nasty about it. He resolved to trust to cheerfulness and diplomacy in his intercourse with these men. He had not yet been able to figure out what their object was in making him a captive. Perhaps they would demand a ransom for his release. He could not satisfy himself how they knew his name, either. The thought flashed across him that Galen Deery had something to do with the matter. Perhaps the Atlanta capitalist had learned of his companionship with Mildred. It was possible that Shephard, his superintendent, had informed him. He recalled what Mildred had told him about her father's vast project and he tried to connect it with his present predicament.

While his thoughts were busy, the fire under the pots and pans was busy, too. Three of his captors began eating at once, while the fourth stood guard over Gordon with a six-shooter in his hand. Evidently they had planned the whole thing out in advance, as they had not spoken to each other since entering the cabin.

After eating a hearty meal of bacon, corn cakes, stewed beans and crackers, Gordon stretched himself, smiled and announced that he felt better. He thought the other men probably felt in better humor, too, so he tried to start a little conversation.

"Do you men expect to keep me here or will there be some more walking?" he asked, with a good-natured smile.

Allowed to Write.

There was no answer to this remark. Three of the men had lighted pipes. The fourth, who seemed to be somewhat younger than the others, had been relieved of guard duty and was now eating his supper. When he had finished he drew a bag of tobacco and some tissue paper from a pocket and rolled a cigarette. There was silence for a long time and then Gordon began again.

"I don't mind spending a little time with you men, as you appear to be willing to treat me fairly. I suppose you will tell me what this is all about when you get ready to do so. You won't find me troublesome. But I have a favor to ask of you. The people at my home and the people at Deery's house below will be very much worried about me. They may think I was killed in the cyclone. What I want you to do is to get word to them somehow that I am safe; or, if you will allow it, I will write a note that one of you can leave on the doorstep at night. Of course you can read the note before it is sent. What do you say?"

Three of the men looked at the man with the black beard as if expecting him to do all the necessary talking. He smoked in silence for several minutes. Then he spat and said:

"I reckon you all kin write."

CHAPTER XXXVII.

GORDON had a pencil, but no paper. However he discovered a small paper bag, which he slit down the sides with his knife, making of it a long, narrow sheet. Then, with the bottom of a tin plate for a desk, he very slowly wrote the following remarkable letter in a large hand:

Friend Mildred:
I write to tell you I am
Very well and for you and
Elmer and also your
Mother not to worry as
I am being well treated.
Lonely, of course, it is,
Especially as I can not
See my friends; but
No matter; I will keep
On being cheerful and the
Rest will come out right in
The end. I wish you would
Have someone to go
With you to my home (take
Elmer) and please notify
Steve and all the others
That none of them
Must look for me
Yet. I will soon
Have, I expect, another
Opportunity to write
More. You may possibly
Expect it soon.
Love to all.

G. K.

When Mildred received these lines (which she did the following morning) she must have thought it a queer letter to get from the man she was so worried about. It was not a love letter, nor did it seem to say much of anything in any definite degree. Yet Gordon had deliberately written it that way, trusting to the girl's ingenuity to decipher the hidden meaning. As a matter of fact, the meaning was so little hidden that Gordon, as he wrote it, had doubts as to whether it would pass muster.

The Message Sent.

Gordon folded the sheet of paper twice, addressed it on the back to Miss Mildred Deery and handed it to the black-bearded man, who read it slowly; so slowly, in fact, that Gordon feared he had discovered the simple cryptogram. But at last the mountaineer nodded and placed the letter in his pocket, whereat Gordon breathed with relief. Later in the evening the letter was given to the youngest of the four who, after receiving instructions from the bearded man, given in too low a tone for Gordon to distinguish the words, saddled a horse that was tethered nearby, mounted him and rode off in the darkness.

From the moment the rope that bound Gordon's arms had been removed, one of the four men had remained within ten feet of the captive, with a revolver in his hand. Every action of the mountaineers indicated that they meant business and Gordon had long since made up his mind that he would not attempt to escape that night. At intervals he endeavored to draw his captors into conversation, but without success. They were not sullen, or gloomy, or sulky; they simply refused to talk, so at last Gordon requested that he might be allowed to retire for the night.

No Secret About Woman's Beauty

The flashing eye, the elastic step and the brilliant complexion are never companions of organic troubles; but it is the distressed expression, aches and pains, faintness, dizziness, that bearing down feeling, and the blues that are the tell-tale symptoms. A Device That Traps Icebergs

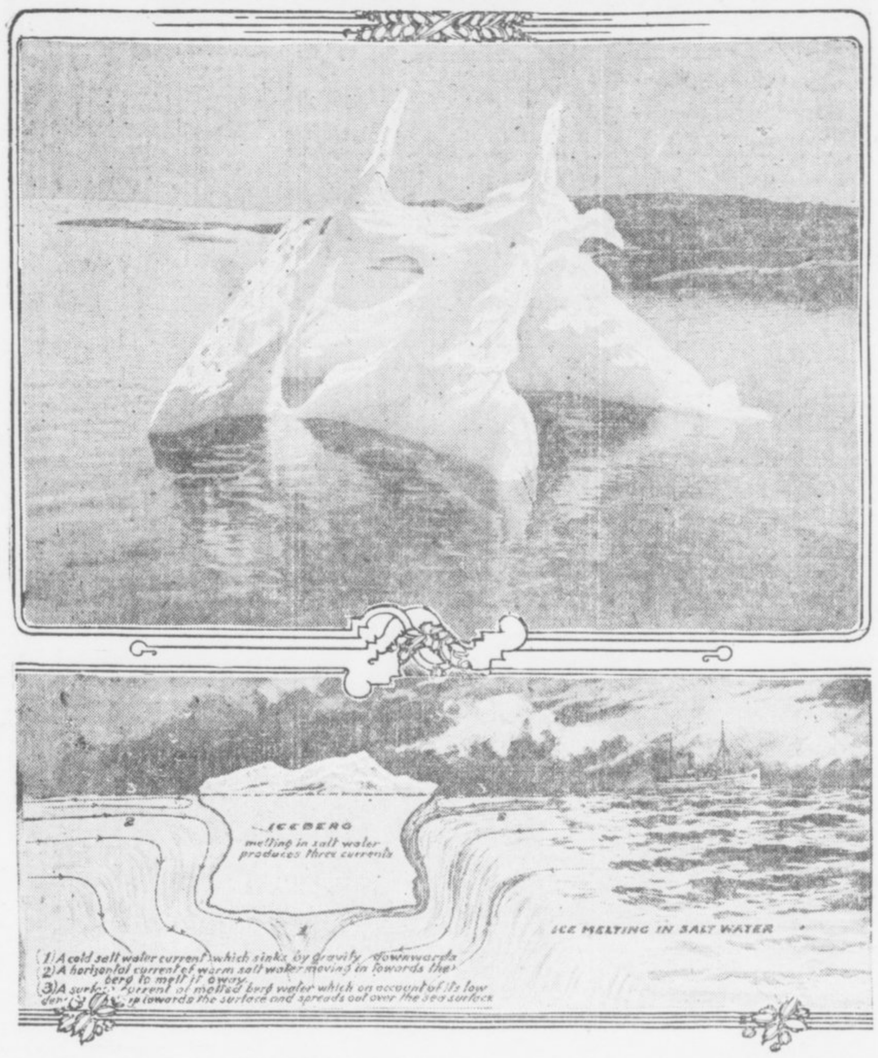
An Atlantic Liner Can Now Be Provided With Mechanical Senses as Sensative as the Nostrils of a Deer



The top picture is a photograph of a melting iceberg. Underneath is a diagram showing the various currents produced by an iceberg that is slowly dissolving. It is these currents that are "felt" by the micro-thermometer, one of the latest wonderful achievements of science.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

SINCE the sinking of the Titanic, a year ago, icebergs have been studied as never before, and a great amount of curious knowledge about these frozen monsters of the deep has been accumulated, with the result of increasing the safety of ocean navigation.

Just as a living being proclaims its presence, even when it can not be seen, by telltale sounds and vibrations and by emanations which are perceptible at surprising distances to olfactory senses as delicate as those possessed by some of the lower animals, so icebergs betray themselves, in the darkness of the night, or the far more dangerous obscurity of a fog, by their effect upon the temperature of the air and the water.

A remarkable mechanical sense-organ, called the micro-thermometer, which is simply a thermometer of great delicacy and special construction, dragged through the water by a ship, is now employed to measure the changing temperatures of the water in the vicinity of icebergs, and some unexpected facts have been developed by its use.

How It Works.

These instruments reveal facts previously unknown about icebergs. They show that there is a surprising system of currents around and under a great berg, or a fleet of bergs, which produce characteristic temperature changes that may be felt miles away. In truth, the iceberg is a great thermal engine surrounded by a medium of air and water peculiar to itself, and due to its action upon its environment. Upon the air immediately around it the berg produces a cooling effect in consequence of the absorption of heat required to melt it. When water freezes, it gives out heat; when it melts, it absorbs heat. One perilous consequence often is that the moisture in the cooled air around the berg condenses into concealing fogs and mists.

But the effects of the berg upon the underlying and surrounding water are still more remarkable and important. It has been found (as illustrated in the picture of a melting iceberg) that there are three characteristic currents produced in the ocean water by a great berg when it arrives in the comparatively warm water lying along the steamship tracks of the North Atlantic.

In the first place, directly under the vast ice mass there is a great current of cooled salt water, which sinks by its own gravity, because the cold increases its relative density.

In the next place the suction produced by the sinking cold water draws in from all sides warmer surface currents, which rush into the sides of the berg by their melting action, and finally so much reduce the size of the berg beneath the surface, or so change its shape, and its center of gravity, that, at last, the equilibrium of the mass is upset, and it turns over, thrashing the surrounding sea with its immense flanks, huge fragments of which, heavy enough to sink a ship, are detached, and go floating away to form an attendant fleet of small bergs and floes.

Then there is a third current composed of relatively fresh water, formed by the melting of the berg, and which, because of its lesser specific gravity, moves upward from around the berg and flows as a comparatively warm current over the surface of the sea. This current is of the greatest importance in betraying the presence of a berg, for it spreads to a considerable distance and can easily be detected by the micro-thermometer. The warm current has been detected a mile from a berg.

The Real Effect.

In regard to this a recent report of the Canadian Government on iceberg phenomena says: "There is little room to doubt that the real iceberg effect is the rise of temperature, and that the fall (observed when a ship passes abeam of the berg) is due to the colder current in which the berg is being carried."

In some experimental trips when icebergs were passed at a distance of from a half to a quarter of a mile there was observed first a rise of temperature in the water, followed by a fall as the berg was passed abeam.

Similar experiments with the micro-thermometer have shown that the near neighborhood of land is betrayed by a fall of water temperature, and this is believed to be due to the action of the tides and the obstruction offered by the coast line, resulting in a turning up of the under water, which is always much colder than the sea surface.

At the Table

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED

THAT common meeting-ground of the family, the dinner table, should be made a place where harmony reigns and where each one brings his or her best to contribute to the pleasure of the moment. Cheerful talk is as necessary to health and appetite as it is to peace and pleasure of mind. Unpleasant subjects should be avoided resolutely. Such topics as bad news, illnesses, grewsome incidents shocking accidents, troublesome business affairs should not be brought to the table; nor should disagreeable family matters be discussed there. These family affairs may require settlement, but may be talked of elsewhere.

If it is a family principle to be agreeable and talkative at table, there will be greater ease when guests are present.

A woman's duty is to be composed and cheerful at her table, whether at family meals or when there are guests. Her serenity, or the lack of it, influences others. When acting in the capacity of hostess she needs an absolutely placid temper. Self-control must be her watchword. If she appears to be disturbed, worried, absent-minded, if her eyes wander, or she seems distracted in conversation, every one will be uneasy, and the dinner will be dull and dragging. Her duty is not to let her guests know of her moods, disappointments or even of a headache.

If service is slow, or mistakes happen, it is best for a hostess not to offer explanations. No matter what may go wrong, she must appear not to notice it. By passing over a mistake or an imperfection herself it will escape the attention of others, or, at least, will not be regarded as important by them. If a serious accident occurs to precious china or rare glass she must maintain a calm manner. If a careless servant lets something drip on a guest's dress, a hostess must express regret and try to remedy the blunder and then pass on, without too much delay, to other matters. A guest should try to appear undisturbed by any accident of the sort.

If a guest should be so unlucky as to overturn a glass or have any other accident, it is best not to make profuse apologies. Regret may be shown by one's manner. Thus there is less interruption to conversation and to the smooth running of the dinner. By practice a young hostess may acquire facility in being able to talk naturally while at the same time seeing that people are served properly. If an order has to be given it should be done quietly and simply, without any mysterious signals or loud whisperings. A hostess should try not to make her servant nervous by watching her too much as she moves round the table.

Didn't Want Him.

Mike Hennesey, a hefty young Irishman, secured his first foremanship after serving for some years as one of the "gang." Promptly at 7 o'clock in the morning he began his duties by calling the gang to order.

"Ye all have to worruk for me!" he shouted. "Worruk, I say! And I want every wan of yez to understand at wance that I kin lick anny man in the gang!"

All swallowed the insult except one giant-built warrior, who stepped forward and said:

"But you can't lick me, Mike Hennesey!"

"Oh, I can't, can't I?" yelled Mike.

"No, you can't," came back the determined answer.

"Well, thin, go to the office and draw your money. I'll have no man in the gang I can't lick!"

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"My husband shot a burglar," she said, languidly. And then her insolence reached its culmination in a query of her own: "Was his name Griggs?" It was done with splendid art, with a splendid mastery of her own emotions, for, even as she spoke the words, she was remembering those shuddering seconds when she had stood, only a few hours ago, gazing down at the inert bulk that had been a man.

Burke betook himself to another form of attack.

"Oh, you know better than that," he declared, truculently. "You see, we've traced the Maxim silencer. Garson himself bought it up in Hartford."

"But he told me——" she began, then became aware of her indiscretion, and checked herself.

Burke seized on her lapse with avidity.

"What did he tell you?" he questioned, eagerly.

Now, Mary had regained her self-command, and she spoke calmly.

"He told me," she said, without a particle of hesitation, "that he had never seen one. Surely, if he had had anything of the sort, he would have shown it to me then."

"Probably he did, too!" Burke rejoined, without the least suspicion that his surly utterance touched the truth exactly. "Now, see here," he went on, trying to make his voice affable, though with small success, for he was excessively irritated, "I can make it a lot easier for you if you'll talk. Come on, now! Who killed Griggs?"

Mary Stood Rebellious.

"That's for you to find out," she said, sneering.

Burke pressed the button on the desk, and, when the doorman appeared, ordered that the prisoner be returned to her cell.

"I suppose," she said, with a glance of contempt toward Demarest, "that it's useless for me to claim my constitutional rights, and demand to see a lawyer?"

Burke, too, had cast off pretense at last.

Mary spoke to the District Attorney.

"I believe," she said, with a new dignity of bearing, "that such is my constitutional right, is it not, Mr. Demarest?"

The lawyer sought no evasion of the issue. For that matter, he was coming to have an increasing respect, even admiration, for this young woman, who endured insult and ignominy with a spirit so sturdy, and met stratagem with other stratagem better devised. So, now, he made his answer with frank honesty.

Mary turned her clear eyes on the Inspector, and awaited from that official a reply that was not forthcoming. Truth to tell, Burke was far from comfortable under that survey.

"Well, Inspector?" she inquired, at last.

"We've Got Gargon."

Burke took refuge, as his wont was when too hard pressed, in a mighty bellow.

"The constitution don't go here!" It was the best he could do, and it shamed him, for he knew its weakness. Again, wrath surged in him, and it surged high. He welcomed the advent of Cassidy, who came hurrying in with a grin of satisfaction on his stolid face.

"Say, Chief," the detective said with animmation, in response to Burke's glance of inquiry, "we've got Garson."

Mary's face fell, though the change of expression was almost imperceptible. Only Demarest, a student of much experience, observed the fleeting display of repressed emotion. When the Inspector took thought to look at her, she was as impassive as before. Yet, he was minded to try another ruse in his desire to defeat the intelligence of this woman. To this end, he asked Gilder and the District Attorney to withdraw, while he should have a private conversation with the prisoner. As she listened to his request, Mary smiled again in Sphinx-like fashion, and there was still on her lips an expression that caused the official a pang of doubt, when, at last, the two were left alone together, and he darted a surreptitious glance toward her. Nevertheless, he pressed on his device valiantly.

"Now," he said, with a marked softening of manner, "I'm going to be your friend."

"Are you?" Mary's tone was non-committal.

"Yes," Burke declared, heartily. "And I mean it! Give up the truth about young Gilder. I know he shot Griggs, of course. But I'm not taking any stock in that burglar story—not a little bit. No court would, either. What was really back of the killing?" Burke's eyes narrowed cunningly. "Was he jealous of Griggs? Well, that's what he might do then. He's always been a worthless young cuss. A rotten deal like this would be about his gait. I guess. * * * Tell me, now, why did he shoot Eddie Griggs?"

All Poise Had Fled.

There was coarseness a-plenty in the Inspector's pretense, but it possessed a solitary fundamental virtue; it played on the heart of the woman whom he questioned, aroused it to wrath in defense of her mate. In a second, all poise fled from this girl whose soul was blossoming in the blest realization that a man loved her purely, unselfishly. Her words came stumblingly in their haste. Her eyes were near to black in their anger.

"He didn't kill him! He didn't kill him!" she fairly hissed. "Why, he's the most wonderful man in the world. You sha'n't hurt him! Nobody shall hurt him! I'll fight to the end of my life for Dick Gilder!"

Burke was beaming joyously. At last—a long last!—his finesse had won the victory over this woman's subtleties.

"Well, that's just what I thought," he said, with smug content. "An' now, then, who did shoot Griggs? We've got every one of the gang. They're all crooks. See here," he went on, with a sudden change to the respectful in his manner, "why don't you start fresh? I'll give you every chance in the world. I'm dead on the level with you this time."

But he was too late. By now, Mary had herself well in hand again, vastly ashamed of the short period of self-betrayal caused by the official's artifice against her heart. As she listened to the Inspector's assurances, the mocking expression of her face was not encouraging to that astute individual, but he persevered manfully.

"Just you wait," he went on cheerfully, "and I'll prove to you that I'm on the level about this, that I'm really your friend. * * * There was a letter came for you to your apartment. My men brought it down to me. I've read it. Here it is. I'll read it to you!"

He picked up an envelope, which had been lying on the desk, and drew out the single sheet of paper it contained. Mary watched him, wondering much more than her expression revealed over this new development. Then, as she listened, quick interest touched her features to a new life. In her eyes leaped emotions to make or mar a life.

Helen Morris' Letter.

This was the letter:

I can't go without telling you how sorry I am. There won't never be a time that I won't remember it was me got you sent up, that you did time in my place. I ain't going to forgive myself ever, and I swear I'm going straight always. Your true friend,

HELEN MORRIS.

For once, Burke showed a certain delicacy. When he had finished the reading, he said nothing for a long minute—only sat with his cunning eyes on the face of the woman who was immobile there before him. And, as he looked on her in her slender elegance of form and gentlewomanly loveliness of face, a loveliness intelligent and refined beyond that of most women, he felt borne in on his consciousness the fact that here was one to be respected. He fought against the impression. It was to him preposterous, for she was out of that underworld against which he was ruthlessly at war. Yet, he could not altogether overcome his instinct toward a half-reverent admiration. * * * And, as the letter proved, she had been innocent at the outset. She had been the victim of a mistaken justice, made outcast by the law she had never wronged. * * * His mood of respect was inevitable, since he had some sensibilities, though they were coarsened, and they sensed vaguely the maelstrom of emotions that now swirled in the girl's breast.

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

Chapter Eleven.

WHEN Jennie saw her girl friend at the office next day she asked her how she managed to have such nice dresses and such a nice furnished room on the salary she got. The girl winked and laughingly explained, "It was very easy, providing you were pretty and you found the right MAN." But even then little Jennie did not understand what she meant, and asked the girl to explain the meaning of the "right MAN" part of it.

This the girl was very reluctant to do, but finally admitted that one of the young men they were out with the night before gave her money—and that she just worked for the sake of having something to do. But she did NOT tell Jennie that the work also helped her to forget her way of living and to keep her mind off the day when she would NOT be as good looking and when the young man would have transferred his attentions to a younger and prettier girl—and the money wouldn't be so easy to get.

Jennie was quite shocked when she realized her girl friend was taking money from the young man, and as much as she wanted pretty clothes and good times she was sure she could never, never do THAT to obtain them.

Then the girl told her she knew of a place where Jennie could get clothes on credit. By just paying a dollar or so a week she could get all the clothes she wanted if they knew she had a fairly good job for a girl. Jennie was quite excited when she learned there were such places as these. Just think—and you would only have to pay a dollar or two a week. She was getting eight dollars a week. Pooh! she wouldn't miss one dollar of it. So at noon time she and the girl went to a store to pick out some clothes for Jennie.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I WAS reading a book last night that certainly gave me the Willies," said the Manicure Lady. "Wilfred brought it home from the library. It was all about the way them Romans used to go after the church members, and I never seen such terrible accounts of anything in my life. Why, George, them Romans used to burn the Christians in boiling pitch! Gee, I'm glad I wasn't around then, ain't you?"

"If I had been around I would probably have been one of the Romans," said the Head Barber. "I ain't no church member, even though I know that I ought to be one. I am always so tired after Saturday is over that I like to sleep till noon, and in the afternoon and evening me and the Missus usually goes somewhere like to the seashore or out in the country. If I had more time I would go to church, because it don't hurt anybody to go, and think of all the good religion has done."

"That's why I go," said the Manicure Lady. "Sometimes I feel as if the preacher and me don't quite agree on everything he says, but I always make allowance for the preacher. I was just saying to mother last night that the people that goes to church now ought to be very thankful that they didn't live among them Romans and that the brave people who did live in them days was ever on earth to start the churches and bring all that good into the world."

Not So Hard.

"There is a lot of church members now that wouldn't have stood the gaff then," said the Head Barber. "There is a lot more church members now, but the going ain't so hard."

"That is just what I was thinking when I was reading that book," said the Manicure Lady. "There was a smooth, chop-whiskered old geezer in here yesterday to have his nails did, and the way he purred around me and kind of insinuated would make you sick. He said that he lived over in a little Alabama town, and I asked him if he was the same kind of a gay old dog among the Birmingham manicure girls. Mercy, no, he told me. He said that he had to be a different person altogether when he was at home. He said he couldn't imagine what the other pillars of his church would say if a brother deacon got nifty. I asked him if he didn't have any conscience of his own, and he said that he had one, but it always got seasick when he was crossing the Chattahoochee River, so he left it at home.

"It is too bad, George, that old man Nero didn't have a few of that kind of church members for his lions and bonfire men to practice on, insteac of the noble people that had to be martyrs. Pa used to go to church a lot when we lived over in South Carolina, but I guess he ran into so many good little toads like the gent of which I am just speaking of that he got sick of the job.

A Perfect Dear.

"The old gent may travel to the sideboard a little too often some evenings, but he ain't no hypocrite, and there is a lot of other men like him that would be there every Sunday when the plate comes around it there wasn't so many old fakes with sidewhiskers carrying the plate.

"I asked the old geezer what he did week days to rest up from going to church, and he said that he had a big factory where children could learn a good trade and grow up useful members of society like him.

"Do you follow me, George? What a perfect old dear he must be to his wife and children! Honest to goodness, George, if I could find out where his wife lived I would send her a synonymous letter and warn her of her husband's complicity, or whatever it is they call that Jekyll and Hyde stuff that makes a man kick up his heels when he gets where the high buildings looms. Gee, the shop seemed airier and better after he had went!"

ATLANTA GAINS EXTRA GAME ON EVE OF FOURTH

By Joe Agler.

NEW ORLEANS, June 23.—Lefty Price will put 'em across for the Crackers this afternoon, opposing Rube Evans, and it looks like us for the money. Price is in great shape, and the bunch is working like a clock. If we don't take the whole series and move up to the top, where we belong, you can tell the bunch at the corner that Joe Agler's a bum prophet.

Old Man Rain won the first game here Sunday, owing to the lack of boating facilities in the park. The field offered fine opportunity for swimming early in the day, but the crowd kept on coming, in spite of the rain, and rather than let all that coin get away one game was decided upon. It was slippery as spaghetti, but that hurt nobody.

Game for Atlanta.

The postponed first game will be played on July 3, and will be transferred to Atlanta. We will not pull off a double-header here this trip.

We copped the one game of Sunday. Dent pitching a wet ball in great shape and having splendid support from the fielders. Whitey Alperman was the batting boy, landing two two-baggers and a single in five times up. Bill Bailey made a great running catch and Spencer pulled off one of the most brilliant running catches ever seen on the Pelicans' lot, grabbing Bailey's hot liner with his bare hand, after a long run.

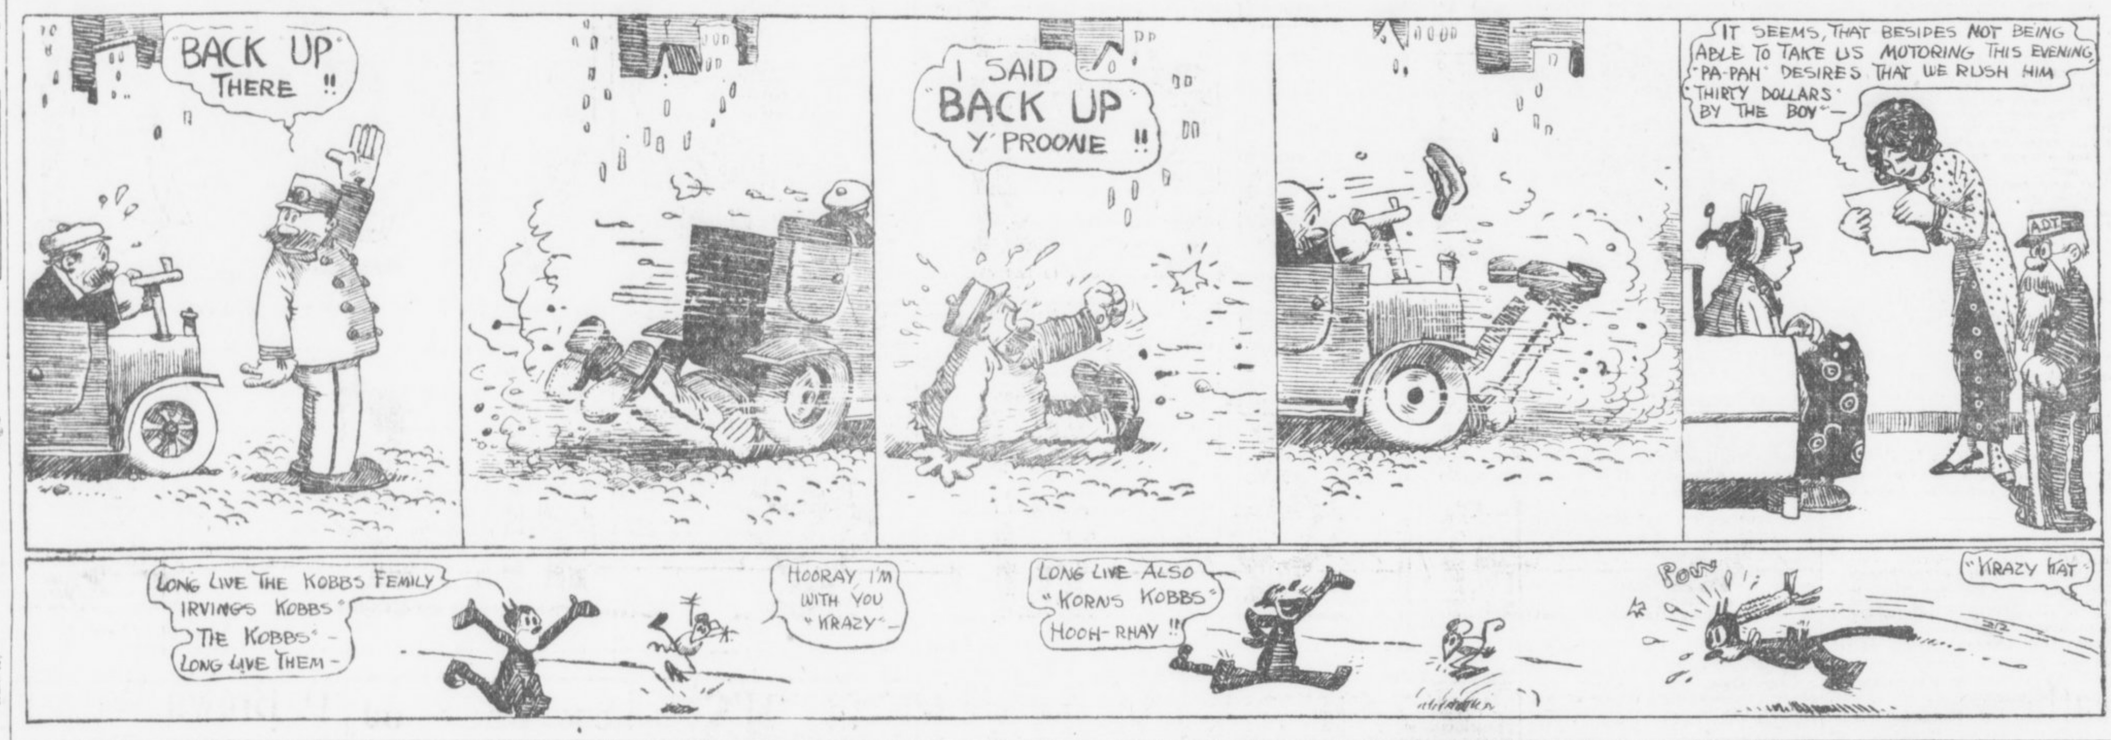
The Old Man Obeys Orders, Too Well



Dundee Faces Hard Task July 15

Murphy Is Tough Boy to Beat

By Left Hook.

Here is a classy boy, one of the top-notch featherweights of America, who, after splitting a draw decision with the world's champion of that division, voluntarily steps into the lightweight grade and invites trouble from the 133-pound battlers. And he is sure to find it.

Dundee chased Johnnie Kilbane around the Vernon ring until both were leg weary. As a reward for his agressiveness the Italian was given a draw. There was no argument, but that of the two, Dundee was the most willing to make a fight.

Following this affair Kilbane went back on the easy money trail after men like Fox and Jimmy Walsh. Dundee, to hold the respect of the public, announced that he would pass up the featherweights as a lot of tame and mediocre boxers, and jump into the lightweight division among a few real fighters.

There is little doubt what this move increased the popularity of the little Italian, but it was a step backward, according to the way the overmanaged boxer of to-day is handled, harking back to the days when a man signed a set of articles first and asked about the weight and reputation of his opponent afterwards.

As evidence of his good faith Dundee agreed to take on Ad Wolgast, a fighter from his heart out. Wolgast's broken hand caused the match to be called off at a time when both boys were putting in their last training licks.

* * *

DUNDEE then signed to box "Chicago" Jack White, with the understanding that the winner is to meet "Harlem" Tommy Murphy, the vicious veteran who recently beat Wolgast.

Dundee defeated White in twenty rounds and is now ready to start training for his twenty-round set-to with Tommy Murphy. Before the latter battle Dundee will taken on Tommy Dixon, July 4, but should have little trouble in defeating Jimmy Hurst's protege.

The Murphy battle, however, should prove one tough scrap for Dundee. The Harlemite has met the toughest lightweights in the game to-day and is really in line for a match with Ritchie. Many of the coast critics let out an awful howl when Rivers was given first chance at the title, claiming that Murphy was entitled to the match.

* * *

MURPHY'S latest achievement was a twenty-round victory over Ad Wolgast, but he has also defeated such stars as Owen Moran and Frankie Burns, besides giving McFarland a hard battle for twenty rounds.

Should Dundee manage to beat Murphy, no one in the world will be able to overlook him as a lightweight contender. But the task seems a difficult one. Dundee will be giving away about ten pounds in weight and it looks at this distance as if the extra poundage will be an awful handicap for Johnny. However, fighters of the Dundee type should be admired and he will not lack for admirers when he steps into the ring with Murphy.

BRITTON VS. LUCAS.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Jack Britton, the Chicago lightweight, was today matched to meet Willie Lucas, the Quaker City fighter, in a six-round contest at Philadelphia on June 27. They will weigh in at 138 pounds.

COULON MEETS FRANKIE BURNS IN GO TO-NIGHT

Much interest is being displayed in the affair, as this is to be the fourth meeting between the pair. Ever since Johnny was given a hair-line decision over Burns at New Orleans in twenty rounds on February 15, 1912, there has been a great deal of rivalry between the boys. Frankie has always claimed that he was entitled to the verdict, while Coulon is out to prove that he is Burns' superior.

The other bouts between the bantams were no decision affairs and critics usually agreed that they were about even up. As this will be Coulon's recally first tough scrap in over a year fans are anxiously awaiting the outcome. Johnny is billed to meet Kid Williams in a twenty-round go on July 29 and his showing to-night will have much to do in the way the fans bet their money in the title set-to. Coulon rules a 10 to 8 favorite over the Jersey City boy.

Atlantans in Tennis Tourney in Orleans

The twenty-sixth annual tennis tournament for the championship of the South begins Monday on the courts of the New Orleans Lawn Tennis Club.

Men's singles, men's doubles and ladies' singles will be the three events. Consolation singles will also be held.

The winner in the men's singles must meet Carleton Y. Smith, of Atlanta, the present title holder, and holder of the challenge cup in that event.

This cup was originally presented by the Atlanta Athletic Club. It has been won twice by Conrad B. Hoyt, of Washington, and Dr. Nat Thornton, of Atlanta, and once each by T. R. Pell, of New York; R. C. Hunt, of California, and C. Y. Smith, of Atlanta.

Atlanta will be well represented at the meet. Carleton Smith, the present title holder, will go to defend his title. His partner in the doubles, Dr. Nat Thornton, will also attend.

B. M. Grant, Charles A. Sisson, E. S. Mansfield and E. V. Carter, Jr., are some of the others who will attend.

Smith and Mansfield will be paired in the doubles, as will Grant and Thornton. The other players will participate in the singles.

CHARLIE WHITE IS CHOICE OVER JACK BRITTON

By Ed W. Smith.

CHICAGO, ILL., June 23.—Boxing fans are turning their attentions New Orleans way, where, on the afternoon of July 4, Charlie White and Jack Britton come together in the ring in a twenty-round battle to settle a matter of supremacy. To be exact, the pair will battle just across the river at McDonoughville, where decisions are allowed. From a pugilistic standpoint this is not the biggest ring event of that day, Rivers and Ritchie being hooked up to go twenty rounds in Frisco, a championship match, but much interest is centered in the Southern battle because the victor will be in line for a chance at the winner of the coast battle.

* * *

WHETHER White has it in him to catch the referee's eye or has the wallop left that felled Joe Thomas on two occasions, is a matter of opinion, but he has done everything that could be asked of a boy of his weight and he must be considered on equal terms with the lad from the North Side. New Orleans fans are doing a bit more than this. Naturally one would believe Britton the favorite in this July 4 affair. But not so with the lads from the South. Word came from there to-day that betting is still very light, but that when the fireworks are about to be touched off Charlie will be as good as a 10 to 8 choice.

* * *

NEW ORLEANS fans are much like those of the West, they want to be shown. They were shown and that's why they are backing the Chicago Hebrew. White invaded New Orleans on several occasions. Recently he went there and took on Joe Thomas, New Orleans' idol. White was picked as a sure victim. The result? He knocked out Thomas in eight rounds. There was some doubt about the ending, some of the fans feeling that Thomas wasn't just right. They were rematched and White ended it in two rounds.

Riders Will Dress in Asbestos

Fireproof Togs for 'Dromers

THE riders out at the local Motordrome lie awake nights trying to think of something they can put over on somebody else. They are always getting something new with this end in view. For instance, Morty Graves has sent off for a new motorcycle, Georges Renel has bought a lot of new parts for his motorcycle, Manager Noon Hudson has another suit of clothes, Harry Swartz has a new wife and Jack Prince always has a fresh shower up his sleeve that he lets out on race nights.

But it has remained for George Lockner to spring the newest thing—an asbestos suit of clothes. He has wired to St. Louis for one and expects it here in time for use at Wednesday night's races.

These asbestos suits were introduced by a St. Louis rider, Brownie Carslake, and are being rapidly adopted by the other riders.

When They Are Needed.

In motordrome racing there are two reasons why asbestos suits are needed.

One reason is that the blooming motorcycles, fed enormous quantities of gasoline and spitting fire like an old-time dragon, are constantly catching on fire. Naturally, this would be bad enough under ordinary circumstances, but the awful complication arises from the fact that they usually touch themselves off while going at very high speed. The machines are not supplied with brakes and the rider must always choose between sticking on and getting his clothes on fire or falling off and breaking his neck. Harry Lewis, one of the riders at the local Motordrome, caught on fire the afternoon of the opening meet, and only the presence of the riders and a battery of fire extinguishers made it possible to put him out. With an asbestos suit this danger is removed. A man may cook a bit while his machine is slowing down, but he will not blaze.

Useful in a Spill.

The other need for an asbestos suit comes when a fall occurs. Going at high speed, a man is likely to slide a hundred feet or so over the surface of the track. Frequently the friction of such a slide sets the clothes ablaze, and the spectacle of a man on fire—maybe with a lot of bones broken, too—is not uncommon at motordromes. With asbestos suits this danger is removed. No matter what the friction is, the clothes can not catch on fire. As the riders' suits soon become impregnated with oil and are occasionally dashed with gasoline, they are highly inflammable, and the fear of being burned to death will probably drive all the local riders to the asbestos-suit stunt.

Plans are going forward at the local 'drome for the meeting Wednesday night. The program which was rained out on Saturday night will be carried through at that time, with the Mayor Woodward Sweepstakes as the feature.

FOXEN SAID TO ADMIT HE 'LAID DOWN'

By Percy H. Whiting.

Of course you can't believe all the second-hand, near-beer saloon information that is floating around, but one bit of rumor has drifted in that is worth publishing.

This information is that Bill Foxen admits that he "laid down" on the Atlanta club and purposely played for his release.

We didn't hear this first hand. We aren't on Bill's speaking list. But it came pretty straight and it sounds pretty reasonable.

• • •

THE story is that Foxen admits he played for his release here. He is said to attempt to justify himself with the following statement:

"I got in bad with the Atlanta club because I wouldn't go out boozing with the players. They got sore on me and made it as hard as they could. Under the laws of organized baseball there was only one way to get away. That was by losing games. So I lost games." That may not be the word-for-word admission, but that is probably about the gist of it.

• • •

CASES where players have been accused of "laying down" are plentiful enough in the annals of baseball, but this is perhaps the first time on record where a player has admitted his guilt in the matter.

While nobody in Atlanta feels inclined to excuse Foxen in this matter, it is a fact that the rules of baseball make it pretty hard for a player who is thrown into a team made up of sousers and soreheads. He must play with them, "lay down" or leave baseball.

• • •

OF course the only manly thing to do is to see it through, no matter what the conditions are on the team. The public has no love for a quitter. The Atlanta public shows that fact every time Foxen visits the city—and always will as long as he comes here.

Their only regret is that they can not get a shot occasionally at the other member of the hold-out sketch, Pitcher Frock. They would dearly dote on giving him an occasional good time.

DILLON-CLABBY BOUT OFF; M'KINNON TO BOX JACK

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., June 23.—Jimmy Clabby, of Hammond, Ind., will not meet Jack Dilion in the 10-round bout scheduled here at the American Association Ball Park on the night of July 3. Bill McKinnon, of Boston, has been substituted for Clabby. Young Saylor, of this city, will box Battling Terry, of Pittsburg, the same night.

Feathers Join Lightweight Class

Kilbane is Latest To Enter Fold

By Lef Hook.

WHAT is going to become of the featherweight division if all the scrappers now in that class insist upon hurdling the lightweight fence? Ever since Wolgast got over in the 133-pound patch and whipped the champion the feathers have been speedily following in his footsteps, and to-day there are few featherweights of any class left. Johnny Kilbane is the latest to announce that he is planning to abandon the 122-pound division for the heavier one, and Johnny Dundee already has crossed over. Charley White is matched with Jack Britton and Jack White wants some attention in the lightweight division. Within a short time there will be an awful mob hanging around the lightweight throne, with nobody of consequence left to guard the 122-pound crown.

• • •

THERE hardly is any great danger of the division being entirely abandoned, as in the welter class, as there are too many good bantams slowly growing out of the 116-pound class for any such disaster to happen. But there will be another row on between uncrowned claimants of the vacated title if Kilbane finally decides to permanently abandon his championship. Kilbane has been growing heavier at a fast rate and soon will have to quit the 122-pound job whether he wants to or not, unless somebody whips him real soon.

• • •

JOE RIVERS' friends have already started worrying about him and his chances against Ritchie. Joe has been so reluctant in the past to train properly and take the right sort of care of himself during the training period that many fear he will let another chance slip by with the title ready to be plucked. Rivers promises that these fears shall not be justified and that he will train hard and faithfully and strictly live up to the training camp rules laid down by Manager Levy.

• • •

SHOULD he fail to win the title July 4 through any fault or neglect of his own that can be charged to carelessness he will find himself just about retired. It is up to him to make the most of this opportunity and if it is in him to win he must do so. His friends have been loyal to him for years and this in spite of the fact that upon two or three occasions he has disappointed them through carelessness in training and refused to live right during the training period. If he fritters away this opportunity, good night.

• • •

THERE are two very strong reasons why Los Angeles fans are pleased that Ritchie and Rivers have been matched, even if the bout is to be staged in the north. It should settle beyond all question the argument regarding the class of Ritchie and demonstrate also whether Rivers ever will be a champion. Since winning the title Ritchie has been belabored regularly and consistently by disappointed friends of the former champion and the class of the new champ has been called in question many times.

• • •

RITCHIE defeated Wolgast in a four-round bout previous to the championship battle. His experience as a twenty-round battler is rather limited, but at all times in my opinion he has shown splendid class, and I am confident he will prove a worthy champion in his fight July 4, win or lose. He will have to show considerable class to hold onto the title because Rivers already has satisfied the fight fans regarding his own class. It should be a great battle.

BOXING
News of the Ring Game

Four important bouts will be staged at Vernon, Cal., within the next five weeks. On June 24, Eddie Campi tackles Charley Ledoux; on July 4, Leach Cross meets Bud Anderson; on July 15, Tommy Murphy swaps punches with Johnny Dundee, and while on July 25 Johnny Coulon and Kid Williams fight for the bantamweight championship of the world.

• • •

Hammond, Ind., fight fans are rejoicing to-day over a declaration by Sheriff Whitaker that he would not interfere with boxing matches so long as the limit does not exceed ten rounds. It was the occasion of the home-coming of Jimmy Clabby, who recently defeated Eddie McGoorty. Clabby was banqueted on his return from Butte, Mont., where the bout took place.

• • •

The ringside weights for the return match between Jimmy Duffy and Jack Britton at Buffalo next Monday night will be 136 pounds. The raise in the scale comes from Danny Morgan, Britton's manager.

• • •

Gunboat Smith has been made a 2 to 1 favorite over George Rodel, who meet at New York on June 27. The two heavyweights met about four months ago and, although Smith floored the Boer five times, he was unable to put him away.

• • •

Frankie Burns should give Johnny Coulon a tough battle when the two bantams hook up at Kenosha, Wis., on Monday night. Burns has met Johnny on several occasions and has always given a good account of himself.

• • •

Joe Golden, manager of Joe Thomas, is now a boxing promoter. Golden has matched "Wildcat" Ferns and Bobbie Dibbons for a 10-round bout to be staged in Pelican Park, New Orleans, on July 4. The welterweights are scheduled to go ten rounds.

• • •

Billy Nolan and Willie Ritchie have split. The fighter and manager could not agree on financial terms, and Willie has now decided to handle his own business for the present.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 23.—The Giants made a great finish to their Western trip, and I am now convinced that the New York club will win the pennant again. The Phillies appear to be gone, and I do not see any other team on the horizon or the schedule that can stop us.

What tripped up the Philadelphia club was what I had anticipated would stop it all through the season. The pitching staff cracked, and the rest of the team caved behind it. Both Seaton and Alexander, the two men who had carried most of the burden of the pitching so far in the race, were overworked, and the strain told. There are few pitchers who can appear three times a week, one week after another, and get away with it, and these two attempted to do just that. The strain of maintaining the lead also hurt Philadelphia's chances of grabbing the pennant. The Quakers are not altogether out of the fight yet, but I do not think they are the club which the Giants will be forced to beat now. If we once pull them behind, they are liable to go into several parts.

• • •

IT is hard to tell just which team will make the going for us from this point in the journey to its finish. For a long time, it had been my notion that Pittsburg would give the Giants the fight this season. The Pirates looked like one of the best baseball teams I had ever seen when they wound up the season last fall, and they should have been stronger this year. Baseball is certainly a funny thing.

• • •

THE Giants have just returned from one of the most successful Western trips ever made by a ball club. The only one which I have ever made since going out with a professional ball team that even approached it was the final swing around the circuit in 1911, when we grabbed the pennant in the last jump to the wire. On that junket we took eighteen out of twenty-two games, I think. We had to do it then, and we practically had to do it this time if the Giants were to beat Philadelphia back and stay in the race. We were all sitting around the lobby of the hotel in Cincinnati one night last week.

"It looks as if we have caught the Quakers," remarked McGraw.

"I did not expect that they would break as soon as this," volunteered "Larry" Doyle. "After they grabbed that series in Pittsburg it seemed as if they ought to have had renewed confidence."

"It was the cracking of their pitching staff and the spurt of the Giants that did it," answered McGraw. "When a team has been out ahead all season and is still playing good ball, but finds the second runner creeping up on them slowly in spite of their best efforts, it is just heartbreaking. That is one reason why I am none too particular about my team shooting out in front from the first. Every manager must count on at least one slump some time each year. We got ours in the spring. The Phillies are taking theirs now, and are liable never to come back.

"They've got some good pitchers," said Doyle.

"The pitching staff is all right, but overworked," replied McGraw. "Wait until they meet that string of stored-up double headers coming now with the pitching corps in its present run-down condition. The rest of the team I never could see. I never figured them as the pennant winners without wonderful pitching and luck. Baseball would be on the down grade if a club of the caliber of Philadelphia could take the championship in the National League."

JOE RIVERS STARTS HARD GRIND FOR RITCHIE BOUT

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23.—Joe Rivers, who has been at the Ocean Beach for the past few days doing light training, started to work in earnest yesterday. The Los Angeles lightweight put on the gloves in the Seal Rock gymnasium and surprised those who dropped into the big pavilion with his speed and cleverness.

Frank Carter, the welterweight that Manager Levy brought from Los Angeles, was his sparring partner, and the pair went three rounds. Rivers warmed up with four rounds of shadow boxing and was ready to go at a fast clip when Carter stepped into the inclosure. Joe stepped around the Mexican in lively fashion and showered blows on Carter.

MINNEAPOLIS, June 23.—The locals dilscovered a way to beat Rube Schauer, the sensational young Superior pitcher purchased for $10,0000 by the New York Giants, when Comstock outpointed the young phenomenon and held Superior hitless by a score of 6 to 0.

CROSS AND LEDOUX TRAIN BEFORE A LARGE CROWD

LOS ANGELES, June 23.—A large crowd stood a 60-minute sun broil for the privilege of seeing Charley Ledoux, of Paris, France, and Leach Cross, of New York, box two rounds in the Vernon ring—and it was worth it, too.

Ledoux, blue-tighted to his neck, began operations with the punching bag. By actual count he landed on the leather just eleven times in nine minutes. Cross, attired in a cherry-colored makeup, stepped on the platform and made the bag beg for mercy.

RITCHIE IS IMPROVING; TO MAKE WEIGTHT EASILY

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23.—Willie Ritchie demonstrated two facts in his first Sunday workout ahead of the Fourth of July bout. One is that his style has improved considerably over the days he was battling for recognition and the other is that he will not have the slightest difficulty in the world making 134 ringside and still show up strong. A good afternoon at the beach gave Joe Rivers one of the biggest crowds that has ever packed the pavilion to see boxers in training.

Even the worm will turn, as Confucius once remarked. For instance, the Pirates vary the monotony by winning a game with a margin of one run.

An expert informs us that the Tigers will be a strong team by the time August arrives. Therein they differ from the Browns, who show their greatest strength in December.

One is led to look askance at Mr. McGoorty's statement that the referee became excited and gave the decision to the wrong man. How could any human being become excited over a fight between Messrs. McGoorty and Clabby?

MORE PHILANTHROPY.

To the Sporting Editor:

I'm Dutch, and haven't much use for the Irish. But there's one Irishman I think a whole lot of, and his name is Murphy. I think so much of him that I just like to see him keep out of print. And, ah, there's the rub. Darn him, he doesn't keep quiet. He gets published too often for throwing the bull. It ain't fair to those who pay their money to see athletes, and also it ain't a square deal to the bunch that buys the papers.

Now, to come down to brass tacks: Here (in the envelope inclosing this letter) is a one (1) dollar bill split in two. Send one-half to Charlie, and if he stays out of print for two minutes—that is, if he doesn't inject himself into publicity in that period of time—pass him the other half. The sticking plaster will be found oozing from his finger tips.

Seriously, I want Charlie to quit press agenting. Two weeks of living in obscurity will do the public a lot of good.

SPLIT OF APOLLINARIS.

It was expected that these games would permit the staging of a little side issue battle between Ty Cobb and Joe Jackson, the sluggers of the league. But they did not. Cobb, because of a lame leg, was forced to retire in the third inning of the first game, and Jackson "sassed" an umpire a few innings later and was wigwagged out of the game.

Poultry, Pet and Live Stock

Correct Color and Type of the Black Minorcas

Giving a Fine Idea of the Shade of Chicks When Hatched, When Feathered and Full Grown.

Edited By JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL.

JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL—Will you kindly tell me what should the color be of Black Minorca chicks when matched? Also a description of them when well feathered, that is grown fowls; their size, shape and color of body, etc. I ordered a setting of eggs from a firm in Georgia which was highly recommended, although I got a good hatch, eleven out of fifteen, the color did not come up to my expectations. Mrs. J. R. C.

Palatka, Fla.

Reply—Young Black Minorcas are like all other black breeds, they show a good deal of white, which, to the novice, looks mighty bad, and if they are hatched from purchased eggs they very naturally conclude that they have been badly treated. One can hardly judge as to color in black breeds until they are pretty well matured; the changes are so great, and individual specimens differ so much from each other in their feathering processes. Some change rapidly to a good solid black and others hold on to their white in wings and tails until they are almost fully developed. For this reason the culling process should be carefully handled and not attempted too early in the season. Of course the specimens showing glaring defects, such as red ear lobes, feathers upon the shanks, red feathers in the plumage, etc., in Minorcas, can just as well be culled out one time as another for one cannot hope for improvement along these lines, no matter how much time is given. We would be infringing upon the rights of the Standard of perfection should we give a detailed description of the Minorca. We will say, however, that prime color should be a glossy greenish black, free from foreign color, such as gray or purple sheen, the latter so often being scattered throughout the plumage. The more there is of it the more defective in color the specimen becomes. In general shape the Minorca is long in body with long back sloping slightly downward to where the tail begins with a full flowing tail on males and well expanded tails on females. The carriage should be rather erect, although not too much so of course. The comb is what the novice would call very large, but in standard description is known as large. In males it stands erect and perfectly straight upon the head with four or five uniform points. Should the comb turn over to one side it disqualifies. In females the comb is of the same general shape as that of the male only thinner and smaller and turns over to one side of the head. An erect comb on the female is as defective as one that lops over is on the male. The ear lobes should be something of an oval in shape, smooth and free from wrinkles and pure white in color. Any red showing is a defect and a serious one, according to how much red there is. In old cocks the red often appears from a result of scratches from fighting, etc., and does not detract from the value of the bird, except in the show room. It would not affect his breeding qualities, providing, of course, that they were white when he was younger. In summing up, then, the value of the specimen depends upon how near to the Minorca type it is in general form, carriage, shape of comb, and the quality in color from head to tail. Any one who gets an idea in his head that a black fowl is so easy to breed because it is solid color usually gets his eyes opened before he has bred them very many years. All kinds of little irregularities come to the surface that had not been dreamed of before so that you might as well make up your mind that you have something of an undertaking, right from the start, just as you would handling any parti-colored breed, and be prepared to work it out for the best there is in it.

BOARD WANTED during legislature for self, wife and two children, ages 7 and 3, in private family. Address Box 57, Edison, Ga. 6-19-6

WANTED—Accommodations for the Georgia legislators. They are coming in now and will be in session at the State Capitol from June 25 for FIFTY days. All of them are on the outlook for nice, comfortable and home-like places to eat their meals, or to board or to rent. Many of the places these legislators had last year did not suit them and they desire to find something better. All the legislators will read The Georgian—that's certain. Their attention will be called day after day to the "Legislators' Accommodations" column on the Want Ad pages of The Georgian. This will be a big advantage to you. So if you have eating or boarding places or have rooms, apartments or houses for rent, your ad should be under the "Legislators' Accommodations" heading. An investment of a few cents will keep your house full for the next three months. Phone or send in your ad at once.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Peachtree Lease for 8 Years, $35,000

A central lease on Peachtree, involving a term of 8 years and 4 months and a consideration of $35,000, proved interesting in Saturday's real estate news. Shelley Ivey, manager of the College Co-Op Company at 97 Peachtree, has leased from Asa G. Candler Nos. 119 and 121 Peachtree, the same being in the southern end of the Candler Building. Mr. Ivey will move his stock July 1 and will occupy for the present 119 Peachtree only, 121 being the quarters of the Southern Pacific Railroad, whose offices it is planned to put in the Fourth National Bank Building. If the railroad company can get out soon Mr. Ivey will sub-lease the front of 121 about July 1. Otherwise, he will take possession January 1, 1914, of the remaining portion of the store.

No. 97 Peachtree was leased seven years ago to the College Co-Op by E. W. Alfriend. Mr. Alfriend is in Florida and will take up the matter of re-leasing his place on his return.

Healey, the owner, declared Saturday that he was well pleased with the progress so far made.

Uniform Cotton Oil Grading Predicted

CHICAGO, June 21.—I. G. Priest, of the Bureau of Standards at Washington, addressing the fourth annual meeting of the cotton products analysts, to-day predicted the establishment of a uniform system of grading cotton seed oil. Many disputes, he said, arise over the present imperfect color system of grading.

Chemists from throughout the South, who attended the meeting, will remain for the convention of the Interstate Cotton Seed Crushers' Association next week.

Do You THINK While You Are Dressing?

The Time Used in Dressing Need Not Be Wasted

(Copyright.)

Man in the process of evolution has got rid of his fur, or feathers, and every day he must put on something to take the place of fur, and every night he must take off the artificial clothing.

One old man in the State of New Jersey killed himself and left a note saying that he died because he was so tired of buttoning and unbuttoning clothes.

There is apparently no greater waste of time than the time that is spent in dressing and undressing.

Bathing, shaving for men and powdering your nose for women, finding what you want to wear and putting it on—it is a tiresome part of every day.

BUT—

The hours in which a human being grows and develops mentally are the hours of solitude.

And a great many of us are practically never alone, except when we are getting dressed or undressed.

Sleep is a time of idleness—no growth there.

When we are with others we listen, learn perhaps, and debate, but we don't really THINK WITH INTENSITY.

The one thing that makes you more of a man than you were last year is intense, solitary thought.

Why not say to yourself: Since I must spend at least 330 hours a year in dressing and undressing, in bathing and shaving and looking for my collar button, I'll also spend that time IN THINKING?

Do you know how many men spend 300 hours a year in actual concentrated thought?

Not one in a thousand.

Suppose you see what you can make out of the hours lost in putting on and taking off the artificial fur and feathers and how much you can grow in the thinking.

Bacon felt that the mind was developed by reading, talking, and writing.

And he said:

Writing maketh an exact man.

Speaking maketh a ready man.

Reading maketh a full man.

Reading fills you with knowledge, speaking makes you quick or ready, writing makes you exact—true.

But more important than reading, writing or speaking IS THINKING.

The real YOU lives inside of your brain alone. And it works at its best when you are alone.

Aristotle taught Alexander the Great walking up and down with the young prince that he might become wise and strong at the same time—that is what they call the peripatetic method of intellectual development.

Why don't you educate yourself in thought as you march up and down from the bed to the bathroom, from the rough towel to the safety razor, and so on through the long, tiresome and usually wasted process of dress?

THE OLD ROMANS

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THEY strutted into the bar room,
Three boys—they were nothing more;
They ordered their drinks with grins and winks,
When one of them grew less frisky
And seemed half ready to sink,
Cried the others, "Aw, one more whisky!
That's a good old Roman drink!"

Then I thought of the real "Old Romans"
That I knew long years ago,
When we stuck to the "corn" from night till morn
As fast as the stuff could flow.
There was Billy O'Keefe, of Denver—
Too bad poor Billy is dead
He could pack away three quarts a day
And never rattle his head.

There was Jack McGee of the Morning Bee,
And Flynn of the Fourth Estate,
Larry McCale of the Portland Mail—
All dead before thirty-eight.
There was Blake of the Brooklyn Bugle,
And Grant of the Memphis Sun,
And a dozen more, or maybe a score,
Whisky got them, one by one.

I felt the tear that unbidden starts
When I thought (it hurt like a knife)
Of the nimble brains and the golden hearts
All stilled in the prime of life.
Then I walked from the noisy bar room
And muttered a prayer to God
Now dreamless under the sod.

"I Used To Be"

How many times have you yourself heard men, standing up against a bar, bragging about what they USED to be? Perhaps some were telling about the good jobs they ONCE had; or maybe another one—with the shell of a ONCE fine body—was telling what a great athlete he USED to be, how he ONCE did "the hundred yards in 93-5," but could not now even run for a car without blowing like a grampus. You will also notice that these men usually drink WHISKEY—because, as they put it, it has a stronger "KICK" than other drinks. What better word could define it than KICK? Look around you at the men it has KICKED out of good jobs, good health and good homes into the land of USED TO BE.

HAL COFFMAN.

Writes on

The Dictograph

The Dictograph, He Says, Is the Electric Symbol of the New Age, of Which the Newspaper Is the Prophet, in Which the Perils of Privacy Will be Matched by Powers of Publicity.

WRITTEN FOR THE GEORGIAN

By REV. DR. JOHN E. WHITE

Pastor Second Baptist Church

ALL the real problems of society have been anticipated. The progress of modern times is manifest in the good answers we are making to ancient questions.

The Dictograph, for instance, is the New Invention of which Old Necessity is the Mother. The Celestial Society of Olympus, which the Romans created to furnish ideals and to set up standards of judgment on mundane matters, considered it.

Momus reported to Jupiter that the great evil among men was secrecy and deceit. He complained against Jupiter that he ought to have provided a glass window in every human breast, just over the heart, so that the inward truth of men's thoughts would be accessible to everybody, so that deceit would have been impossible.

He made such a row about it that he was kicked out of Heaven.

The Dictograph is a sop to Momus, but the fate of Momus is a warning to the dictographer. The application of this little Edisonic device to human affairs will arouse all the modern pagan Furies.

Some Possibilities.

Another Edward Bellamy may now tell us of its development and application to progress in the year A. D. 2500. The addition of a photographic attachment was the next step of invention to increase its effectiveness.

In the highly organized society of the year 2,500 the government had provided Dictographs in every home, hotel room and private office. A central receiving station was arranged for the record of disgraceful family disputes, star-chamber conferences and political conspiracies.

The photographic device was employed for Pan-Hellenic ballrooms, with a special corps of operators between 3 and 6 o'clock in the morning, to obtain truthful pictures of the "tango" and the "turkey trot." After midnight cabs and automobiles were equipped.

During sessions of the Georgia Legislature, in the hotels and boarding houses and private dinner parties at the houses of politicians, it was found particularly useful.

The striking fact Edward Bellamy, Jr., records was that civilization had responded to the restraint of the Dictograph and that its abuse was inconsiderable beside the manifest improvement in the tone and quality of human conduct.

Perils of Privacy.

The Dictograph is not all a joke.

The irresistible movement toward relentless publicity it symbolizes is profoundly supported in social intelligence.

The perils of privacy, secrecy and the suppression of facts are realized.

The basic religious conviction that Deity sees, hears and knows is at work day and night to justify the increasing passion of humanity to see, hear and know.

The Christian assurance that "nothing is secret that shall not be made manifest; neither anything hid that shall not be known and publish itself abroad" is the moral sanction of publicity as the consummation of the highest civilization.

The man who loves darkness better than light is under cosmic condemnation. The guardians of public health ruthlessly placard the places of disease.

The exponents of moral health also are every day bolder and bolder in disregard of any challenge of personal secrecy which conceals sources of moral contagion.

In whatever concerns the public safety the public has a right to the facts.

The Good of Publicity.

In England the divorce evil is treated as a public matter, and not even the nauseous details are withheld from the public eye. Those who object to the application of that rule in this country should show better reasons for secrecy and privacy in behalf of domestic infidelities than the Fulton County divorce courts afford.

The world adjusted to the law of publicity is the good promise of the times, and the Searchlight, the Newspaper and the Dictograph are its phophetic tokens.

There Is Only One Need in the World---Love

Any Man Can Be Happy With It; No Man Can Be Happy Without It

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

I KNOW the need of the world.
Though it would not have me know.
It would hide its sorrow deep,
Where only God may go.
Yet its secret it cannot keep;
It tells it awake or asleep,
It tells it to all who will heed,
And he who runs may read.
The need of the world I know.

I know the need of the world,
When it boasts of its wealth the loudest,
When it flaunts it in all men's eyes.
When its mien is the gayest and proudest.
Oh! ever it lies—it lies,
For the sound of its laughter dies
In a sob and a smothered moan,
And it weeps when it sits alone.
The need of the world I know.

I know the need of the world.
When the earth shakes under the tread
Of men who march to the fight,
When rivers with blood are red
And there is no law but might,
And the wrong way seems the right;
When he who slaughters the most
Is all men's pride and boast,
The need of the world I know.

I know the need of the world.
When it babbles of gold and fame,
It is only to lead us astray
From the thing that it dare not name,
For this is the sad world's way.
Oh! poor blind world grown gray
With the need of a thing so near,
With the want of a thing so dear,
The need of the world I know.

The need of the world is love.
Deep under the pride of power,
Down under its lust of greed,
For the joys that last but an hour,
There lies forever its need.
For love is the law and the creed
And love is the unnamed goal
Of life, from man to the mole.
Love is the need of the world.

THERE is only one need in the world.

The need to love our neighbors as ourselves.

To do exactly as we would be done by.

The need to understand that the human race is one body; and that when we do anything which harms or hurts one individual, we harm all individuals, ourselves included.

Just as we harm the body, when we injure any member, hand, foot, eye, or ear.

When we stop and think about the world, the whole process of life becomes very pitiful.

Each, being born upon the earth, is striving for happiness, from the cradle to the grave, in his own way.

According to his light, he is doing the best he can.

He does not know it, but the only satisfying things which he can get out of life are peace of mind, self-respect and the love of his fellow men.

Nothing he can obtain without these things, nothing he can achieve or become, is of any real value.

No man can be happy without those three blessings. Any man can be happy with them.

Even though he is saddened by the sorrow he sees about him; the sorrow which results from striving after the needless things of earth; after more than we need; after what does not belong to us; after the possessions of others.

There would be no war; no industrial problems; no prisons; no poor houses; no white slaves; no sex sins; if men and women all set forth early in life on that threefold quest—for peace of mind, for self-respect, for the love of their fellow men.

That is all any soul is seeking; that is all any soul desires; because that is all there is in life worth living for. Yet is there war, and strife; and hatred; and sin; and sorrow and anguish; and misery and poverty.

Because men have not yet learned that there is only one need in the world.

And the need of the world is LOVE.

Belief of Samuel Adams

By WILLIAM VINCENT BYARS.

IT was Samuel Adams, one of the greatest founders of the United States, who said that "truth loves an appeal to the common sense of mankind."

It was this thought which made him powerful.

It made him the greatest Democratic leader of New England in the eighteenth century.

He was born in Boston in 1722, when all New Englanders were royalists. He was born rich. His family made money out of a brewery. He lost money in politics, so that when he died in 1803 he had barely enough to pay for his funeral.

He had helped to found the United States. He held office many years, but he was afraid to make money.

This was the only thing he was afraid of. He was afraid that if he did not keep himself as poor as most other people he would lose his common sense.

He meant by common sense the sense people have when they are trying to be fair to each other instead of over reaching and cheating.

If he found a man who could not read, trying not to cheat and over reach others, he thought him a better judge of truth than a prime minister. He believed that God made all men with sense enough to be honest.

At a time when he would have been hanged by a Tory prime minister, if caught, he said that truth loves an appeal to the common sense of mankind, and that "He who made all men, made the truths necessary for human happiness obvious to all."

This was his answer after he had been declared a traitor.

He spent his life trying to prove that politics may be improved by less cheating and shooting. He thought that finally nearly everyone would agree with him that common honesty and common sense are enough to make the best government on earth.

VENIRE OF 72 FOR FRANK JURY IS DRAWN

Negro Conley Sticks to Affidavit Story When Again Cross-Examined by Dorsey.

The first official action of the court in preparing for the trial of Leo M. Frank for the murder of Mary Phagan was taken Monday afternoon when Judge L. S. Roan impaneled 72 men, from whom a jury to hear the case will be sought.

June 30 was agreed to by Judge Roan for the opening of the case. If a postponement is desired it will now have to be asked for in open court.

As yet Judge Roan said he had received no intimation from the defense that a delay was wanted. Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey said Monday the prosecution was ready for trial.

Trial in Thrower Building.

An extra staff of deputies has been sworn in and subpenas to jurymen impaneled and witnesses are now being served.

No plans for a larger room in which to hear the case have matured, and it is likely that the courtroom of the Superior Court in the Thrower Building will be used at last, despite its size and lack of comfort.

Jim Conley, the negro sweeper, was brought before Solicitor Dorsey Monday morning for another cross-examination. The questions were solely along the lines of the negro's affidavit charging Frank with the crime. As the Solicitor later said, he had only refreshed Conley's mind on the points he had made in his statement. The negro told the same story he told before without deviation.

Mr. Dorsey said that he would call all of the principal witnesses for the State and refresh their minds on the part they will play in the trial.

W. J. Coleman, stepfather of the strangled girl, was summoned by the Solicitor after Conley had been questioned for some time and was brought before the negro. Strict secrecy surrounded the performance, and if anything was gained by confronting the sweeper with Coleman it was not divulged. Mary Phagan's grandfather accompanied Coleman.

Later Coleman said that he had called particularly to ask the Solicitor if Judge Newt Morris, formerly of the Blue Ridge Circuit, could be brought into the case. Mr. Dorsey informed him that the State had made all arrangements for handling the case, but that if he wanted to have the former Judge represent the family there would be no objection.

Attorney Reuben Arnold, for Frank, announced Monday morning that the defense's case was complete. Mr. Arnold said that the testimony of twelve witnesses would form the bulk of Frank's support. He declared that only the inability of one or more of these witnesses to appear at the time set for the trial would cause the defense to ask for a postponement.

Monteen Stover, the young girl who called at the pencil factory office between noon and 12:15 o'clock on the afternoon of the murder, was taken before Jim Conley at the police station Sunday and identified by the negro as the girl he had seen while hiding at the foot of the stairway waiting for Frank's signal.

Conley Identifies Girl.

Detectives went out to the Stover girl's home at 171 South Forsyth Street late in the afternoon and asked that she dress as she had on the afternoon of the murder and go to the police station with them.

Atlanta Man Tells Neurologists They Alone Keep U. S. Sane

CHICAGO, June 23.—"Were it not for the alienists and neurologists of America, the country would in time be inhabited only by insane persons."

This was the statement to-day of Dr. J. Cheston King, of Atlanta, before the convention of neurologists meeting here under the auspices of the Chicago Medical Society.

"There are more insane people in the United States than any other country in the world," he said.

Causes of insanity, he said, were whisky, hereditary weakness, religious excitement and modern life.

"The business man and the society woman," he said, "are falling victims to modern life. The business man often loses his mind through chasing the almighty dollar, and the society woman for various reasons, among them loss of sleep, too much dancing, irregular eating, worry over card games, envy of another's success and too much attention to dress."

"Continued warm weather, with possibly thunder showers late in the afternoon," was the weather outlook for Monday.

Forecaster C. F. VonHerrmann said the backbone of the hot spell was in no danger of being broken. "We are due to have considerable more hot weather through June and July," he said. "If it keeps up much longer this way, the old record of sixteen consecutive days with the temperature above 90 may be broken."

Mr. VonHerrmann said the weather was about the same all over the country, 90 degrees being the average.

The thermometer at noon registered 86 degrees and at 1 o'clock 88 degrees. The maximum temperature, between 2 and 3 o'clock, approximated 90, the lowest maximum of last week.

Woman With Dagger Attacks Policeman

Flora May Bateman, a negro woman, who made an attack on Call Officer T. M. Gorman when placed under arrest for disorderly conduct, will be tried in Recorder's Court Tuesday.

The policeman had a narrow escape when he attempted to arrest the woman. She attacked him with a long dirk she drew from her stocking. She was subdued and placed under arrest only after a lively struggle. The policeman was not hurt.

Bogus Check Charge Causes His Arrest

J. Percival, charged with passing a bogus check for $100 on Charles C. Jones, proprietor of the Rex Saloon, will arrive in Atlanta from Birmingham Monday night in custody of Detective J. W. Hollingsworth.

Percival was arrested in Birmingham Sunday on complaint of Jones, who has preferred the charge.

Slew While Making Arrest; Put on Trial

E. H. Parham, the former policeman who shot and killed John Wright a year ago, was put on trial before Judge L. S. Roan Monday morning for involuntary manslaughter.

Boy Tries to Kill Judge and Attorney

WASHINGTON, June 23.—When Justice Stafford, of the District Supreme Court, refused to parole Ray M. Stewart, 18, convicted of highway robbery, Stewart ripped out a revolver and shot three times at S. McHawkins, prosecuting attorney, but without effect. He then swung around toward Justice Stafford, but was overpowered.

The charge on which Stewart was tried was the holding up of Norman Butler, a negro, last December.

JUDGE GIVES NEGRO FIGHTER RIGHT TO CARRY CASE UP

CHICAGO, June 23.—Permission to carry his case to a higher court was granted Jack Johnson, negro pugilist, to-day by Federal Judge Carpenter, who June 3 sentenced Johnson for violating the white slave law to one year in the State penitentiary and a fine of $1,000.

LEGISLATORS ALL HERE; LOBBYING HINTED

Reports That Interests Have Hand in Senate Presidency Fight Are Being Circulated.

Undoubtedly the big and absorbing topic of comment and speculation among the great throng of Georgia legislators statesmen and politicians in Atlanta to-day is the forthcoming election of a President of the Senate.

Judge John T. Allen, of the Twentieth District, and Senator J. Randolph Anderson, of the First District, both advance ironclad claims to election.

Each exhibits that which he considers unqualified pledges of support from more than a sufficient number of Senators to elect.

Senator Anderson gave out an interview Saturday in which he said he had 28 votes signed, sealed and delivered. He said then, and reaffirms it to-day, that he has the race won beyond a doubt.

"Senator Anderson has not 28 votes pledged—he can not have. I do not say he willfully misstates the situation—he may imagine he has the votes—but he misstates it, nevertheless.

Claims 25 Votes.

"I have 25 votes pledged to me in writing, without any qualifications whatever — straightaway promises. Not one man signing these pledges—they are individual, and not in the form of a list—will break his word to me. I shall be elected, for it only requires 23 votes, and I think I shall get five besides the ones I now have pledged.

"It should be remembered, too, that a distinguished South Georgian, Judge Sweat, has four votes, and that another distinguished Senator, Mr. Tyson, has two or three. Judge Sweat is in the race, and so is Senator Tyson—I take it neither would be in unless he had at least one pledged vote.

"Claiming is one thing and showing down the corn is another. I shall have the necessary votes when the roll is called Wednesday.

Denies Aid of Interests.

"As to the rumor that certain corporations and manufacturing interests may be taking a hand in the race for the Senate Presidency, I know nothing more than that no corporation or big manufacturing interest is taking a hand in my race. I can win, and will win, without that. And certainly I would prefer to."

Despite the statements of the rival candidates for the honor of being President of the Senate, and ex-officio Lieutenant Governor of Georgia, the impression is that this race is yet to be won, and will be won between this time and the assembling of the Senate Wednesday.

Politicians of all shades of opinion, all over the State, are watching this fight with intense interest.

Legislators All Here.

Nobody seems to know who is to win the Presidency of the Senate, which carries with it the Lieutenant-Governorship of Georgia.

On the surface of things, the fight seems to be about even between Senator Allen, of the Twentieth, and Senator Anderson, of the First.

Below the surface rumor and gossip speaks of many things not yet talked about the hotel lobbies freely and openly.

The President of the Senate might, in certain circumstances, succeed to the Governorship, and certainly he is sure to be a compelling factor in the shaping of legislation.

Wherefore, one hears it whispered

Yancey Killed One Week Ago; Family Is In Need of Support

One week ago Monday Court Deputy Dave Yancey was stabbed to death by a crazed negro while attempting to preserve law and order, as he had sworn to do. To-day his widow and six children are holding a sad commemoration of that event in their little home on the Jonesboro Road.

What has Atlanta done for the family of the court deputy? The citizens of this city have subscribed about $1,000 to the Yancey fund, $900 of which must go to pay off the mortgage on the farm. The remainder is not sufficient to put this family on a self-supporting basis. More contributions are needed. Let the generosity of the prosperous Gate City continue to assert itself.

Following are contributions to the fund which have not previously been acknowledged by The Georgian:

A. K. Hawke	$10.00
Rev. T. C. Gray and Wife	1.00
Cashier	1.00
Eugene B. Elder	1.00

Tax Delinquents to Face Double Charge In Recorder's Court

Slow tax collections have led city officials to resort to some unusual but very effective methods of securing street taxes. Delinquents are to be punished with no less a penalty than facing the Recorder.

City Marshal James Fuller and Councilman Orville Hall, chairman of the Streets Committee, called at the police station Monday and outlined a system whereby a list of the persons arrested each day will be furnished to the Marshal. Marshal Fuller will check them with his books, and if they have failed to give in or pay their taxes, they will be confronted with double charges in Police Court.

The street tax is $1 per year. Where persons are delinquent $1.50 cost is added.

Eighteen Ministers In Baseball Game Feature of Picnic

The game was played in the afternoon and followed the weekly morning conference of the ministers. More than 100 "rooters" who participated in the picnic viewed the battle on the improvised diamond.

Dr. John E. White, of the Second Baptist Church, pitched for one side, while Dr. C. A. Ridley, of the Central Baptist, twirled for the other.

President's Currency Plan Pleases Ottley

WASHINGTON, June 23.—John K. Ottley, vice president of the Fourth National Bank of Atlanta, was one of the great crowd in the galleries to hear President Wilson's currency message to Congress Monday. Mr. Ottley was enthusiastic over the program urged by the President.

"President Wilson showed he was thoroughly familiar with the currency situation," said Mr. Ottley. "He said just enough and no more, and I'll swear by every word he said.

"I hope and believe he will get action at this session of Congress."

7 Jurors Secured To Try Mrs. Lanier

WAYCROSS, GA., June 23.—The trial of Mrs. Nina Lanier, charged with the murder of her day-old son, was taken up this afternoon in Superior Court. Seven jurors were secured this afternoon. Forty-eight veniremen have been summoned.

Each time the word "murder" was used to-day the defendant, an unusually pretty young woman, broke into tears and her devoted mother, seated beside her, looked as though she would break down completely.

Anti-U. S. Meeting in Tokio Big Fizzle

TOKIO, June 23.—An anti-American mass meeting held here was attended by not more than 400 persons. These were chiefly workingmen, idlers and agitators.

The speeches were of a comparatively mild order.

Sickles Can Attend Gettysburg Reunion

ALBANY, N. Y., June 23.—State officials will not prevent General Daniel E. Sickles from going to the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg next month. Attorney General Carmody so advised Daniel P. Hays, counsel for General Sickles.

The State obtained a judgment against General Sickles for failure to account for $23,000 State funds. Carmody says no execution will be issued to prevent Sickles attending the reunion.

Crackers and Pels Stopped by Rain; Double Bill Tuesday

NEW ORLEANS, June 23.—A heavy downpour just before game time forced the calling off of the Cracker-Pel contest this afternoon. The two teams will probably hook up in a double-header tomorrow. Both teams were out practicing and were about ready to start when Jupiter Pluv butted in. After waiting thirty minutes the umpires and managers decided to call the game off.

Musser and Evans were billed to pitch to-day. The same men will probably twirl the opening game to-morrow afternoon.

Miss Wilson's Pansy Hat a Capital Hit

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Miss Eleanor Wilson, youngest daughter of the President, has succeeded to the place formerly held by Mrs. Nicholas Longworth and has become the leading society milliner of the capital.

She not only trims her own hats, but she trims the jauntiest hat that adorns a belle's head in Washington. The younger set is particularly taken just now with a new creation Miss Wilson has made, which she calls the pansy hat.

She bought a white hemp shape and a gorgeous mass of purple pansies and soft ribbons. With artistic skill she arranged these about the hat. It has a chic, Parisian effect, and the uninformed would imagine it the work of a leading milliner.

WILSON ASKS CONGRESS FOR BANK CHANGE

President in Person Urges Currency Reform With Government as Active Agent.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Repeating his act at the beginning of his administration, when he smashed decades of precedent by personally delivering his message to Congress, President Wilson appeared before a joint assemblage of both houses of Congress to-day and delivered his message on the currency.

President Wilson reached the Capitol at 12:55 o'clock, accompanied by his secretary, Joseph Tumulty, and two secret service men. He went immediately to Speaker Clark's private office, where he was received by a joint committee of Senators and Representatives.

After remaining in the Speaker's office for less than a minute, the President, escorted by the committee, went direct to the House chamber for the reading of his currency message. His appearance in the chamber was greeted with general applause, and the assembled Senators and Representatives arose as he entered.

The committee which met the President and escorted him to the chamber consisted of Senators Kern and Reed and Representatives Underwood, Fitzgerald and Mann.

Cabinet Members Present.

Secretary McAdoo who helped frame the currency bill, was one of the first Cabinet officers to reach the House to-day. Secretaries Houston, Lane, Wilson and Garrison reached the House shortly in advance of the President and took seats on the floor.

Mrs. Wilson, accompanied by Misses Jessie and Eleanor Wilson and Miss Isabel Hagner, her secretary, reached the Capitol about ten minutes in advance of the President and were shown to seats in the executive gallery.

The President concluded the reading of his message at 1:07 o'clock, having used but ten and a half minutes in its delivery. As he finished he bowed and shook hands with Speaker Clark and Vice President Marshall. Both galleries and Senators and Representatives generously applauded.

Admittance Is Limited.

The House end of the Capitol was closed to the public to-day in anticipation of the visit of President Wilson to deliver his banking and currency message. Policemen stood at the entrances and in the corridors and turned back all those who could not show a ticket of admission.

More than 500 tickets were available for spectators in the galleries, and each Senator and each Representative had one ticket. For the most part these tickets went to the wives of Senators and Congressmen. Representatives who have been out of the city returned early to-day to be on hand when the President appeared.

The Message in Full.

The President's message in full follows:

It is under the compulsion of what seems to me a clear and imperative duty that I have a second time this session sought the privilege of addressing you in person. I know, of course, that the heated season of the year is upon us, that work in these chambers and in the committee rooms is likely to become a burden as the season lengthens, and that every consideration of personal convenience and personal comfort, perhaps, in the cases of some of us, considerations of personal health even, dictate an early conclusion of the deliberations of the session; but there are occasions of public duty when these things which touch us privately seem very small; when the work to be done is so pressing and so fraught with big consequence that we know that we are not at liberty to weigh against it any point of personal sacrifice.

We are now in the presence of such an occasion. It is absolutely imperative that we should give the business men of this country a banking and currency system by means of which they can make use of the freedom of enterprise and of individual initiative which we are about to bestow upon them.

Must Provide the Tools.

We are about to set them free; we must not leave them without the tools of action when they are free. We are about to set them free by removing the trammels of the protective tariff. Ever since the Civil War they have waited for this emancipation and for the free opportunities it will bring with it. It has been reserved for us to give it to them. Some fell in love, indeed, with the slothful security of their dependence upon the Government; some took advantage of the shelter of the nursery to set up a mimic mastery of their own within its walls. Now both the tonic and the discipline of liberty and maturity are to ensue.

There will be some readjustments of purpose and point of view. There will follow a period of expansion and new enterprise, freshly conceived. It is for us to determine now whether it shall be rapid and facile and of easy accomplishment. This it cannot be unless the resourceful business men who are to deal with the new circumstances are to have at hand and ready for use the instrumentalities and conveniences of free enterprise which independent men need when acting on their own initiative.

It is not enough to strike the shackles from business. The duty of statesmanship is not negative merely. It is constructive also. We must show that we understand what business needs and that we know how to supply it. No man, however casual and superficial his observation of the conditions now prevailing in the country, can fail to see that one of the chief things business needs now, and will need increasingly as it gains in scope and vigor in the years immediately ahead of us, is the proper means by which readily to vitalize its credit, corporate and individual, and its originative brains.

Shows Power of Credit.

What will it profit us to be free if we are not to have the best and most accessible instrumentalities of commerce and enterprise? What will it profit us to be quit of one kind of monopoly if we are to remain in the grip of another and more effective kind? How are we to gain and keep the confidence of the business community unless we show that we know how both to aid and to protect it? What shall we say if we make fresh enterprise necessary and also make it very difficult by leaving all else except the tariff just as we found it? The tyrannies of business, big and little, lie within the field of credit. We know that. Shall we not act upon the knowledge? Do we not know how to act upon it?

If a man cannot make his assets available at pleasure, his assets of capacity and character and resource, what satisfaction is it to him to see opportunity beckoning to him on every hand, when others have the keys of credit in their pockets and treat them as all but their own private possession? It is perfectly clear that it is our duty to supply the new banking and currency system the country needs, and that it will immediately need it more than ever.

The only question is, When shall we supply it—now, or later, after the demands shall have become reproaches that we were so dull and so slow? Shall we hasten to change the tariff laws and then be laggards about making it possible and easy for the country to take advantage of the change? There can be only one answer to that question.

Action Now Is a Duty.

We must act now, at whatever sacrifice to ourselves. It is a duty which the circumstances forbid us to postpone. I should be recreant to my deepest convictions of public obligation did I not press it upon you with solemn and urgent insistence.

The principles upon which we should act are also clear. The country has sought and seen its path in this matter within the last few years—sees it more clearly than when the last legislative proposals on the subject were made. We must have a currency, not rigid as now, but readily, elastically responsive to sound credit, the expanding and contracting credits of everyday transactions, the normal ebb and flow of personal and corporate dealings.

Our banking laws must mobilize reserves; must not permit the concentration anywhere in a few hands of the monetary resources of the country or their use for speculative purposes in such volume as to hinder or impede or stand in the way of other more legitimate, more fruitful uses.

And the control of the system of banking and of issue which our new laws are to set up must be public, not private, must be vested in the Government itself, so that the banks may be the instruments, not the masters, of business and of individual enterprise and initiative.

DIGEST OF CURRENCY REFORM ACT WILSON WANTS THIS SESSION

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Representative Carter Glass, chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency, has made pucilc a digest of the Administration's currency reform bill which he introduced in the House to-day. By the terms of this measure the Federal Reserve Board, which will control the issuance of new currency on application of the regional reserve banks, is to be a Government board entirely.

There will be no retirement of existing national bank circulation, nor of the existing 2 per cent United States bonds used for circulation purposes. Every national bank is allowed to continue its note issue exactly as at present.

Following is the digest prepared by Representative Glass:

"The purpose of the bill is to furnish a comparative revision of the currency system of the country so as to obtain three principal objects:

"First—Provision of a means for rediscounting commercial paper of specified types.

"Second—Provision of a basis for elastic note issues properly safeguarded.

"Third—Provision of machinery for doing foreign banking business.

"Present Law Inadequate."

"In order to accomplish these purposes fully it is necessary to repeal certain portions of existing law; to rectify various conditions in the present national banking system which are in some cases only indirectly connected with the objects sought; to furnish a new class of instructions for the performance of some functions which can not well be intrusted to existing banks, or, at all events, can better be performed by others, and to alter the present reserve system to a very material degree.

"The scope of the bill can best be understood by an analytical review of its contents.

"The present banking situation of the United States rests on the national bank act proper, as slightly modified from time to time, and on the so-called Aldrich-Vreeland act (act of May 30, 1908).

"Of these acts the latter is completely superseded on the ground that it has never become operative. It probably will not become operative except under extreme distress, and never was satisfactory. The national bank act itself is modified in numerous essential particulars.

New Class of Banks.

"Fundamental to the idea of the bill is the creation of a new class of banks to be known as Federal reserve banks, the chief points about which are as follows:

"The number is to be twelve, with possible increase later as provided.

"The ownership is to be in the hands of the stockholding banks of the twelve districts in which the reserve banks are situated. National banks are compelled to be members and State banks and trust companies are permitted to be members.

"The capitalization is to be 20 per cent of the capital of the stockholding banks, one-half paid in and one-half subject to call.

"The business of these Federal reserve banks is to be as follows:

Reserve Banks Business.

"Rediscounting of paper presented by stockholding banks under specified conditions, provided such paper grows out of actual agricultural, commercial or industrial transactions and does not run more than a specified number of days.

"Buying and selling Government securities, gold and silver bullion and foreign coin; foreign exchange and open market bills of given maturity; Government fiscal operations.

"Every national bank is allowed to continue its note issue exactly as at present and in addition Federal reserve treasury notes are authorized to be issued to an amount not exceeding $500,000,000.

These notes will, upon application, be issued to the Federal reserve banks upon prime short-time commercial paper and other liquid collateral.

Gold Reserve Security.

"While the notes will, on their faces, purport to be the obligations of the United States, they are required to be secured by a gold reserve of 33 1-3 per cent provided by the Federal reserve banks, and are a first and paramount lien on all the assets of these banks, and are redeemable in gold on demand at the Treasury Department in Washington or at any Federal reserve bank.

"Stringent provisions are made against counting any of these notes as a part of bank reserves, and the system is guarded against inflation by lodging power with the Federal Reserve Board to exact an interest charge on treasury notes in order to insure their prompt redemption.

"The notes are not made legal tender, but are receivable by the Government and every bank of the system at par without exchange.

"Overseeing the whole system is created a Federal reserve board, consisting of seven members, including the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Agriculture and Comptroller of the Currency as members ex-officio. Four other members are chosen by the President of the United States by and with the consent of the Senate for a term of six years each.

"One of the members thus appointed by the President is to be governor of the Federal reserve board, one vice governor and one secretary.

Banker Member of Board.

"Their term of office is for eight years, except that of those first appointed, one to the serve two years, one four, one six and one eight years. At least one of the members appointed by the President is to be a person of banking experience. Thus it will be noted that the Government will have absolute control of the system.

"The salary of each member of the board, except the two Cabinet officers, who are ex-officio members, is fixed at $10,000, the Comptroller of the Currency to receive $5,000 in addition to the salary which he receives under existing law.

"(a) To examine at its discretion the accounts and books of each Federal reserve bank and to require such statements and reports as it deems necessary.

"(b) To require or, on application, to permit a Federal reserve bank to rediscount the paper of any other Federal bank.

"(c) To establish each week, or as much oftener as required, a rate of discount which shall be mandatory upon each Federal reserve bank for each class of paper, provided that said rate of discount need not be uniform for all Federal reserve banks, but shall be made with a view to accommodating the commerce of the country and promising a stable price level.

"(d) To suspend for a period not exceeding 30 days (and to renew such suspension for periods not to exceed fifteen days) any and every reserve requirement specified in this act.

Treasury Note Regulation.

"(f) To add to the number of cities classified as reserve and central reserve cities under existing law, in which national banking associations are subject to the reserve requirements set forth in the act, or to reclassify existing reserve and central reserve cities and to designate the banks therein situated by country banks in its discretion.

"(g) To require the removal of officials of Federal reserve banks for incompetency, dereliction of duty, fraud or deceit.

"(h) To acquire the writing off of doubtful or worthless assets upon the books and balance sheets of Federal reserve banks.

"(i) To suspend the further operations of any Federal reserve bank and appoint a receiver therefor.

"(j) To perform the duties, functions or services specified or implied in the act.

To Classify Banking.

"The object of the bill is to effect a moderate division and classification of banking business along indicated lines, the net result, presumably, being summed up as follows:

"(1) National reserve banks will be strictly limited to rediscounting actual commercial and industrial transactions evidenced by very short term paper and on rare occasions, under carefully prescribed conditions to financial operations protected by collateral.

"(2) National banks will be subjected to the same restrictions as at present, with a relaxation in favor of a moderate amount of real estate loans by country banks.

"(3) By a revision of the administrative figures of the national banking act provision will be made for close oversight of national institutions.

"(4) In order to possess themselves of the kind of paper entitling them to rediscounts national banks will find themselves obliged to keep a reasonable proportion of their assets in the paper eligible for rediscounting.

"Subtreasury System Crude."

"It is believed that the present subtreasury system is unsatisfactory, clumsy, injurious to business and difficult to manage in time of stress. The bill, therefore, provides for:

"(1) The placing of all current funds of the Treasury in Federal reserve banks and the payment of Government creditors by check thereon.

"(2) The equalization of the public funds between the different reserve banks by direction of the Secretary of the Treasury and subject to a rate of interest to be fixed by the Federal Reserve Board.

"(3) The trust funds of the Treasury are to be held, as at present, in the vaults of the Treasury.

"Under the terms of the bill the Federal reserve bank, after the payment of all expenses and taxes, is entitled to pay an annual cumulative dividend of 5 per cent on paid-in capital to its stock-holding members. One-half of the next earnings of the bank must be paid into the surplus fund until said fund shall amount to 20 per cent of the paid-in capital of the bank. The remaining one-half of the bank's earnings shall be paid to the United States, and whenever and so long as the surplus fund of each Federal reserve bank amounts to 20 per cent of the paid-in capital, the shareholders having received their permissible dividend of 5 per cent, all excess earnings shall be paid to the United States.

Banks Exempt From Taxes.

"Every Federal reserve bank is exempt from Federal, State and local taxation, except in respect to taxes upon real estate.

"In the belief that the present reserve system is antiquated and unsatisfactory provision has been made for recasting the present bank reserve system. The plan includes:

"(1) Transfer of reserves from existing national banks in reserve and central reserve cities to national reserve banks.

"(2) Spreading out of this process of transfer over a period of 38 months.

"(3) Ultimately the establishment of a reserve system at the end of the transition in which (a) country banks will save 15 per cent of reserve, i. e., 15 per cent of total demand liabilities, such 15 per cent to be held, 5 per cent in the banks' vaults, 5 per cent with the national reserve bank and 5 per cent either at home or with the reserve bank, while (b) reserve and central reserve city banks will have reserves of 20 per cent of demand liabilities, of which 10 per cent will be at home, 5 per cent with the reserve bank of the district and 5 per cent either at home or with the reserve bank.

Blow at Wall Street.

"(4) The presumed effect of this plan will be to end the placing of reserves with central reserve city banks for use in stock market operations.

"The bill authorizes any national banking association with a minimum capital of $1,000,000 to establish branches in foreign countries for the furtherance of foreign commerce of the United States and to act as fiscal agents of the United States abroad.

"The Federal reserve board is required to pass on all applications of national banks to establish such banks abroad."

BULGARIAN PLOT TO KILL GREEK KING FOILED

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SALONIKA, June 23.—A plot fomented by Bulgarians against the life of King Constantine of Greece has been discovered here. A number of Bulgar soldiers, disguised as civilians, were arrested to-day by the Greek military police.

A quantity of explosives had been discovered outside of the city gates and investigation led to the discovery of the conspiracy. One of the Bulgarians who was arrested confessed that an attempt was to have been made to blow up the King's palace.

Constant fighting between Greeks and Bulgarians is going on near here. The city has been strongly fortified on the landward side.

Bulgarians Refuse to Arbitrate; Crisis Near.

SOFIA, June 23.—Bulgaria to-day withdrew its recent acceptance of Czar Nicholas' proposal to arbitrate the territorial dispute between this country on one side and Servia and Greece on the other. This may mean that Russia's attempt to prevent a fresh conflict in the Balkans will prove futile.

The Bulgarian press is bitterly hostile against Russia, charging that the Russian Government is secretly encouraging Servia and Greece to take aggressive measures.

Official newspapers declare that Servia, Greece and Montenegro have entered into a secret league to strip Bulgaria of all the possible spoils of the Balkan war. The situation to-day was decidedly ominous, and the impression prevailed that the climax would be reached this week.

Penfield May Get U. S. Embassy Place

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Speculation was caused in diplomatic circles when it was learned to-day that Frederick C. Penfield, of New York, was to have a special audience with President Wilson.

The opinion was formed that the President would offer Mr. Penfield one of the five embassies yet unfilled. These include France, Germany, Russia, Austria and Turkey.

The speculation was based largely on the fact that he has had wide experience in the service of the United States abroad.

Pike County Farmer Slays Son-in-Law

ZEBULON, June 23.—J. P. Neal, of Senoia, was shot and killed by his father-in-law, J. W. Vaughn, at the latter's home near Zebulon last night. Vaughn is a prominent farmer. He surrendered to Sheriff Slade and is in jail. There were no eyewitnesses.

'Hello Girl' Knocked Down by Lightning

POTTSVILLE, PA., June 23.—During a heavy electric storm lightning set fire to one of the switchboards in the telephone exchange of the American Telephone Company at Shamokin and threw the operator, Miss Kathryn O'Leary, to the floor. She managed to sound an alarm and was rescued just before the blaze destroyed the building. The loss is estimated at $20,000.

taking an umbrella went with the detectives.

As soon as the Stover girl entered the room he jumped to his feet, exclaiming:

"She's dressed just as she was that day, only she hasn't got on her 'easy walkers.'

The girl was wearing leather slippers. Later she said she had worn "easy walkers," or tennis shoes, when she went to the pencil factory, as the negro had said.

The negro's identification of the Stover girl proves, apparently, beyond a doubt that he was in the factory building at the time he said in his affidavit. Beyond sustaining that statement, though, no further support to the prosecution's case against Frank is shown by it.

Solicitor Dorsey returned to Atlanta Sunday afternoon from a week's vacation in New York. He called a conference with his assistants, E. A. Stephens and F. A. Hooper, at his home Sunday evening. Following it he announced that he would be ready for trial on June 30 and that unless the defense or the trial judge moved to have the trial postponed he would commence at once summoning witnesses and getting ready.

Solicitor Dorsey would not discuss the return to Atlanta of Mrs. Mina Formby and her announcement that she would go on the stand against Frank. He intimated, however, that he entertained the same opinion as had already been expressed by his assistant, Mr. Hooper, that when the woman left Atlanta she dropped from the case entirely.

Attorney John W. Moore denied emphatically that he had been employed in the case with L. Z. Rosser and Reuben R. Arnold to defend Frank, as was reported by Solicitor Dorsey.

Moore Not Employed.

"I have not been employed in the case and have no other interest in it than that of a citizen. I believe Frank is innocent, and have since he was first drawn into the case, but I am not connected with it in any way. I have never been approached on the subject."

Solicitor Dorsey opened court in the Thrower building Monday morning for a week of criminal trials to clear the jail docket. He will be in court every day until Saturday, and will have to depend on his assistants to summon witnesses and prepare the Frank case in the event of it being set for the following week.

Orphanage Trustees Will Probe Whipping

MACON, June 23.—The whipping of 10-year-old Marvin Williford by W. F. Armor, farm overseer at the Georgia Industrial Home, will be probed this afternoon at a special meeting of the trustees.

The boy has been surrendered by the city officials to the home, assurance having been given that he will not be punished again. When the boy was beaten by Armor with a plowline, he ran away from the orphanage and sought the protection of the police.

Armor is the husband of Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, Georgia temperance lecturer. He admits the flogging.

Girl Dies of Fever; Peril Thought Past

ATHENS, June 23.—Miss Katherine Erwin, aged 20, died unexpectedly yesterday after an illness of several weeks with fever, from which it was thought she had passed the danger point. Her father, Judge A. S. Erwin, who died several years ago, was a prominent lawyer and member of the State Railroad Commission.

The funeral will take place here to-day. She is survived by her mother and several brothers and sisters.

Wilburn-King Trials Come Up in October

GREENSBORO, June 23.—A special session of Jones Superior Court to try Nick Wilburn, charged with the murder of James King, a prominent Jones County farmer, will not be called by Judge James B. Park, of Ocmulgee Circuit.

Wilburn and Mrs. King, charged as accessory, will be tried at the regular October term. Judge Park thinks conditions do not demand a special session.

High Living Cost Cause of Suicide

MACON, June 23.—J. D. Lester, president of the Macon Barbers' Union, killed himself yesterday by drinking an ounce of carbolic acid, after telephoning his wife that he would join her in a few minutes and go to church.

On Saturday Lester told his fellow-workers that the high cost of living was enough to make a man commit suicide. He left a note to his wife, "I could not endure it any longer."

Death Hovers Over Chalk Victim

Poison Baffles Expert Efforts

Doctors Abandon Hope for Life

Here is a picture of little Mary Tribble, the poison chalk victim, taken when she was a few years younger than she is now. She was the pet of the neighborhood then, and has since then been a very much loved little girl in school.

Little Mary Tribble Is Fast Sinking and She May Not Live Through the Day.

Slowly sinking to a death that the physicians regard now as almost certain, little Mary Tribble, daughter of Policeman Tribble, lies now unconscious and now torn by racking convulsions at her home in East Atlanta, the victim of a strange poisoning that developed after she had eaten some brightly colored chalk more than two weeks ago.

The 7-year-old girl, who has been almost entirely paralyzed for the two weeks since she suddenly was stricken, has suffered two convulsions in the last 24 hours, although three physicians have done their utmost to counteract the effect of the mysterious poison.

Another physician offered his services to the family Sunday. He recommended and administered a continuous water treatment throughout the day. For a few hours she appeared brighter and the prospects for her ultimate recovery seemed slightly more hopeful, but at nightfall one of the terrible convulsions contorted her little body and it was thought that the end had come. Monday morning she was the victim of another, and the family practically gave up hope.

W. C. Tribble, father of the girl, said Monday he had arranged to have the crayon which his daughter had eaten analyzed. It is hardly expected that the analysis will be completed in time to be of any benefit to the physicians in prescribing a treatment.

Mary was given the crayons a few days before school ended a week ago last Friday. On the last day of school she came home and fell into the arms of her mother, crying that her head hurt. A few minutes later part of her body was paralyzed and she was seized frequently with agonizing convulsions. She has been in this condition ever since, the only change being that she gradually has been growing weaker.

Dr. Seacord, Dead; Was With Fire Dept.

Dr. Andrew C. Seacord, 38 years old, died at a private sanitarium Monday morning at 2 o'clock. Dr. Seacord for the past fifteen years had been the veterinary surgeon for the Atlanta Fire Department. He lived at 621 Whitehall Street and is survived by a wife and two young sons, Lynn and Robert Seacord.

Funeral services will be held from the chapel of Barclay & Brandon at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, Rev. Dr. A. R. Holderby officiating. Pallbearers will be G. C. Courtney, O. J. Parker, W. H. Clowe, Pas Short, William Butler and W. B. Harrison. Interment will be at Westview.

Family at Church as Robbers Loot Home

While C. W. Seagraves, who lives in Pace's Ferry Road five miles out of Atlanta, was at church with his family Sunday morning, burglars entered his home and stole the valuables. From a trunk $200 in cash was taken, besides silver plate and family jewels.

Seagraves discovered his loss upon returning from church about noon. The county police were notified, but as yet they have made no arrests.

CINCINNATI, June 23.—Rioting broke out here to-day at a meeting of garment strikers, of whom 8,000 quit work this morning.

that certain big corporate and manufacturing interests are deeply concerned as to the outcome of the race for the presidency of the Senate, and, very much on the quiet, are interesting themselves accordingly.

Burwell Called Favorite.

The speakership race generally is conceded to have been won by Burwell of Hancock. Although opposed by such excellent gentleman as Hardeman of Jefferson and Sheppard of Sumter, Burwell is thought to be very much in the lead and practically sure of election on the first ballot.

Burwell Called Favorite.

Burwell seems to have made a much better getaway in his race than either of his opponents, and for that reason is looked upon as a most likely winner.

Tax reform is the one big topic of legislation discussed most generally.

It seems agreed on all sides that the State must have more revenue or let its various institutions lag woefully. There is an ever-increasing demand for more money in all directions, and the State has been running ahead of its income for several years. The tax rate can not be raised above 5 mills, and 5 mills on present assessments will not produce the revenue needed.

Various special measures for increasing the revenue have been proposed, such as an inheritance tax, a graduated automobile tax, and so forth, but the greater problem is how to get all varieties of property up to where each may bear its righteous portion of the burden of taxation.

It is assured that a child labor bill will be introduced early in the session, with excellent chances of success.

be, and that reforms must be instituted, or the State suffer not only materially within itself, but in reputation abroad.

It is said that former Representative Hooper Alexander, for years an earnest advocate of child labor reform, will prepare a bill for the General Assembly's attention, and that it will be a bill framed along the lines and ideals of the various anti-child labor organizations in the State.

Salvation Army Man, Struck by Auto, Dies

Thomas Jefferson, the aged Salvation Army worker and former Indian instructor, who was struck by an automobile at Mitchell and Whitehall Streets Thursday, died Sunday night at Grady Hospital. He did not regain consciousness. His relatives are not known, and his body, unless claimed, will be buried by the Salvation Army.

No blame is attached to J. L. Hughes, of 380 Peachtree Street, who drove the car. He was driving slowly, according to eyewitnesses. Jefferson leaped in front of Hughes' car to escape another and faster-going machine.

Keeping the Body in Repair

Nature intended that the body should do its own repairing—and it would do so were it not for the fact that most of us live other than a natural life.

Nature didn't intend that we should wear corsets, tight collars or shoes, nor live in badly ventilated and draughty houses, nor eat and drink some of the things that we do, nor ride in street cars when we should walk.

The consequence is that the body when it gets out of order must look for outside help to make the necessary repairs.

PEEKABOO SKIRT, NATURE HOSE, SHOCK PARIS

French Society Beauties Appear Like 'September Morn,' Draped in Filmy Covering.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, June 23.—Even the Parisian journals, used as they are to daring styles in women's dresses, spoke rebukingly to-day of some of the gowns seen yesterday at the fashionable Auteuil race course. Auteuil set the latest word in fashions, the decree being that tight skirts are giving way to transparent garments which are absolutely no obstacle to the eye.

Many women wore skirts of white muslin so transparent they failed utterly to serve the purpose of coverings. The gowns, mostly free from frills, are cut extremely low in front, and even lower in the back.

The slashed skirt devotees exceeded the limit. Some of them were not only slit at the sides, but in the front and rear as well. Most of the slashes reached above the knee.

One woman wore gold sandals without stockings. The sandals were fastened to the feet with pink ribbons. The three-tier skirt made its appearance in white, blue, purple and brown. Most of the hats were small, decorated with aigrettes.

44 Women Want to Clean Phila. Streets

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—Forty-four women took the Civil Service tests in this city for street cleaning inspectors. They toiled all morning on five hundred word treatises showing how they would clean the streets of the municipality and what they thought was the most needed thing to improve the condition of the streets.

They were required among other things to describe the most approved apparatus for the cleaning of the streets. They were asked the difference between some of the various kinds of machines, their purposes and the practical operation, the relation of the street cleaner to the community, the reasons for the excessive litter in certain sections and the value of moral suasion when applied in the proper places.

Phone Girls to Seek Simple Life

Plan an Ideal Camp Vacation

Fresh Air and Fudge Their Menu

Miss Katherine C. Tatum.

500 Employees of Southern Bell Will Take Two Weeks' Rest in Woods.

The "back to the country" craze has hit the Southern Bell telephone exchange in Atlanta, and 500 hello girls, clerks, stenographers and bookkeepers are going to spend their vacations in the woods.

"Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife," where there are no hurry-up callers to disturb their temper and where the lines never get crossed, they plan to spend two weeks without a care in the world and live on fresh air and fudge.

The time—July 1 to September 31; the place,—M. O. Jackson's 290-acre farm on the Brown's Mill Road, two miles beyond the terminus of the Lakewood car line; the girl—why all of them, every single solitary one of them that operates the boards, keeps the books or takes dictation at the Atlanta branch of the Southern Bell Telephone Company: this is the scene and the synopsis and the whole plot in a nutshell.

Everyone's Talking It.

It's the one topic of conversation at the telephone exchange; everybody's talking about it. If an importunate creditor phones you he will sue if you don't settle, and about that time you hear a sweet voice say, "Won't that be lovely," don't think merely a hello girl talking about the outing to her nearest neighbor at the boards.

Miss Katherine C. Tatum, chief of the stenographic bureau, originated the idea three months ago. She confided to the head operators, Mrs. Mitchell and Misses Ada Mealor, Sammie Dixon and Alice Means, and they liked it. The five of them consulted the telephone officials and received assurances of hearty endorsement and enthusiastic support in every way possible.

FIVE FRANKFORTERS COMING.

"The Five Frankforters," a comedy from the German, based on an episode in the life of the famous Rothschilds and a novelization of which appeared in The Georgian, will be among the early attractions to be seen in this city the coming season. The play was produced in New York last season by the Shuberts and it is under this management that the local engagement will be played.

CUYLER TO REPLY TO WIFE'S CHARGE

Telemon S. Cuyler, formerly Telemon Cruger Cuyler Smith, of Atlanta, is preparing his papers in the divorce suit instituted by his wife, Mrs. Grace Barton Cuyler, of Alameda, Cal., according to information Monday. Mr. Cuyler's attorney is James Austin.

Mystery surrounds the affair. Little authentic information has been gathered. Mr. Cuyler slipped into Atlanta last week, interviewed his attorney and a few friends, then slipped away again, to his country home four miles from Wayside, Ga.

That he has recognized the divorce suit and is preparing his papers through his attorney is not denied by those who have charge of the matter. He also told several friends while here last week that such a divorce proceeding was on. Mr. Cuyler recently returned to this country from Mexico, where he has a large ranch.

Mr. Cuyler's latest hobby—he is a man of hobbies, it is said—is having moving pictures taken of himself so that he may be immortalized. A number of such pictures have been made within the past few months in European cities, where he visits often, as well as in the big cities of America.

ROME, June 23.—That the legal troubles of Enrico Caruso, the world-famous tenor, are anything but over is shown to-day in the decree of the Milan Court of Appeals which has just handed down a decision reversing the lower court which last year denied Elisa Ganelli, the Milan shop girl, who sued him for failure to marry her, damages in a breach of promise suit.

Caruso is in London preparing to spend the summer at his beautiful villa near Florence, and, dispatches say, when shown the decision of the court, he allowed his temper to become greatly ruffled and let off considerable superfluous energy in the form of epithets and adjectives, between which he stated he did not believe the report.

The court, in handing down its decision holds that the decision of the lower court is correct in not providing damages for the injury to the fair name of the plaintiff. The court then goes on to state that, although the relations existing between the singer and the shop girl were reprehensible, it is of the opinion that the girl is entitled to recover the money she spent in fitting herself to become Mrs. Caruso.

Entitled to Expenses.

The decision orders that a new trial be held for the purpose of ascertaining how much the young woman is entitled to for her "pre-nuptial" expenses, and orders that it be held as soon as Caruso returns to Italy.

The suit in question was started over a year ago and at the time greatly stirred opera-going circles in this country and elsewhere. Testimony developed at the trial that one week after seeing the girl in a Milan shop Caruso secured an introduction to her from her employer and on that same occasion used these words:

"Come, now Signorina, put on your hat and we will start tomorrow, for I have decided to take you away with me. If I had been so fortunate as to make your acquaintance 15 or 20 years ago you would have been my wife by this time. Unfortunately, owing to my professional engagements, I must leave now."

After his departure Caruso bombarded the girl with letters written from Paris and London, in which he renewed his protestations, and in one letter ordered the girl to leave the shop to break with the "common people."

His "Little Sugar Doll."

He sent her many photographs of himself and his children and in writings always addressed her by such endearing names as "Dear Sweet Thing," "Little Sugar Doll" and "My Little Treasure."

One of his most characteristic letters contained the following passages:

"You will see what I will do when you are my wife. How beautiful it will be. You shall be my little queen, and I your faithful and devoted slave. Have you ever accepted some other admirer? Can anybody speak ill of you? Have you always done as your mother instructed you? You assure me that you have, and now I can think only of this—to make you mine as soon as possible."

After the betrothal the shop girl studied French and tried to fit herself to be the wife of the greatest tenor of his time. Caruso at times was chivalrous and generous to her. She had a chaperone whenever she met him and he showered her with presents, including the most costly gowns and much actual money, which she accepted, although reluctant to do so, the trial developed.

Fears Wife Is Held As Slaver Captive

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—Mystery surrounds a search by the police for Mrs. Ernestina Welden, wife of Elwood A. Welden, former Secretary of the American Consulate in Paris and Budapest.

Mrs. Welden was going shopping, she told her husband. That afternoon he received a letter from her telling that she was going away as a traveling companion to a woman. Special Agent Garberino, of the Department of Justice, fears she has fallen into the hands of white slavers.

Shepard Is Carried Past Home of Bride

NEW YORK, June 23.—Persons on a late train from New York a few nights ago heard the porter call "Tarrytown" and wondered why Finley J. Shepard, husband of Helen Gould Shepard, did not alight.

Mr. Shepard only realized that he was going by his station when the train was under way. He is too much of a railroad man not to know the dangers of jumping, and therefore refused to take a chance. Ossining was the next stop. There Mr. Shepard alighted, obtained an automobile and "burned up" the Albany post road back to Irvington.

Ex-Gov. Dix Not to Govern Philippines

WASHINGTON, June 23.—To his visitors President Wilson has made it clear that he will not consider the name of former Governor John A. Dix, of New York, for the office of Governor of the Philippines or for any other post.

The governorship of the Philippines is to be given to one of three or four men already on a tentative list. President Wilson also is understood to have said that New York has been very well provided for in the big appointments.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

by JAMES B. NEVIN

Hark, hark! the dogs do bark, the solons are coming to town—some in rags, and some in tags (but none with jags), and some in velvet gowns!

Or words to that effect!

Anyway, we have with us this evening, gentle readers, the esteemed and ever-venerated Jawjaw Legislature.

It has been coming in on every train for 24 hours or more, and there now is a sufficiency of it on hand for organization purposes if organization were the order of business for the day.

All day long the Kimball House lobby has been alive with statesmen, real and near.

Most of them are optimistic with respect to the outlook, and the more they get acquainted with one another the better they are pleased with themselves.

Not only is the city filling up rapidly with members of the new General Assembly, but dozens of old-timers, legislative veterans now retired, voluntarily and otherwise, to more or less subdued obscurity, also are in our midst, undertaking to get wise to what is what and who is who.

On all sides one hears good words and kind with respect to the incoming Governor, and good wishes for his administration are on everybody's lips.

John M. Slaton, for the first time in sixteen years, is not a member of the Legislature, and while he has been promoted to be the head of the entire State for a season, he knows practically every member of the new Legislature, and in its entirety it seems to wish him mighty well.

Scores of new members have called on the new Governor to-day to pay their respects.

To-night the Legislature will be all but unanimously on hand and ready for business.

Despite the claims and counter claims of the two leading candidates for the Presidency of the Senate, the average legislator still is very much "from Missouri" with respect to that matter.

Both Senator Allen and Senator Anderson claim more than enough to elect, and while nobody believes either is claiming anything less than he really believes, as a matter of fact, few Senators believe that either man actually has sufficient unqualified pledges to put him over.

"These claims remind me," said a prominent South Georgia politician to-day, "of a story they used to tell up in Cedartown on Major W. R. Beck, grand old man, dead these many years, rest his soul!

"The Major was a candidate for Ordinary, or something, and one of his friends was checking over the voters of the city registration list. After checking off all those the Major claimed, his friend then said, 'Well, Major, these men may be depended upon to vote for you, may they?' The old Major looked his friend in the eye, and replied, 'How the h—l do I know—they've promised to, but how the h—l do I know what they will do!'

"The trouble is, it's so hard to tell exactly what constitutes a political promise—men often say and write things that are construed as unqualified promises, when they never intended them that way at all.'

Representative Crawford Wheatley, of Sumter, will introduce his famous lieutenant governor bill again at the forthcoming session of the Legislature.

Mr. Wheatley has been an enthusiastic advocate of creation of this office for many years, and while a member of the Senate he succeeded in passing through that body, almost unanimously, a bill making it part of the Constitution.

The measure was killed in the House, however, and while attempts have been made since then to enact the suggestion into law, they have not succeeded.

The gentleman from Sumter, who is sure to be one of the most popular men in the General Assembly, is very hopeful that this time his pet measure may become a law.

One step toward commission form of government for the city of Greensboro has been made by the publication of notice to the effect that at the next session of the General Assembly a bill will be introduced which will allow the City Council of Greensboro to elect a secretary and treasurer from any citizen who is eligible to act as an alderman.

The notice is published under the signature of H. M. Spinks, City Clerk of Greensboro, and it is thought that the bill will be introduced in the lower branch of the Legislature by Hon. W. F. McWhorter, Greene's Representative.

Much trouble has been experienced by the "city fathers" of Greensboro in the past in securing one of their own number to act as secretary and treasurer, and it is thought that the proposed change will remedy to a great extent some of the cumbersome methods of the city government.

The new Commissioner of Agriculture, James D. Price, of Oconee, got in to-day, and has been as busy as he could be shaking hands and receiving congratulations.

Mr. Price is just up from a sick bed, but doesn't look the part. Everybody likes him, and everybody gives him the glad hand.

He is a practical farmer, knows his way about politically, and the general prediction is that he is sure to make good on his new job.

He expects to be commissioned next Monday, and will present himself at the Executive Department bright and early to receive from the hands of Governor Slaton his warrant to do business.

He likely will be the first new State House officer to be commissioned.

ST. SIMONS TAKEN BY MILITIAMEN

BRUNSWICK, June 23.—The summer inhabitants of St. Simons Island looked out on warlike scenes Monday morning when the troopers of the Second Squadron of cavalry began military maneuvers at Camp Joseph Brown. The first work of the week followed a day of fun and recreation for the soldiers.

The boys were allowed liberties all day Sunday as a sort of compensation for the hard work Saturday, when camp was pitched. That they took advantage of these liberties is verified by hundreds of visitors to the camp.

Perhaps the most amusing thing of all was the surf bathing in which hundreds of troopers took part from 7 o'clock in the morning until evening.

The boys were not content with this, however, for the annual blanket tossing of the "high privates in the rear rank" was indulged in freely, much to the enjoyment of the spectators. One young private was tossed into the limbs of a tree, where he was rescued by several brawny comrades.

NINE DROWN WHEN U. S. BOAT UPSETS

MEMPHIS, June 23.—Nine of a party of fourteen United States engineers and other Government employees were drowned near New Madrid, when the United States survey boat Beaver, which the party was aboard, capsized during a windstorm.

Those drowned are:

J. M. M'CONNELL, of Memphis, a recent graduate of the law department of Cornell.

CAPTAIN LAMB, pilot.

HARRY SHERRELL, mate, Cottonwood, Tenn.

PHIL WRAY, Jackson, Tenn.

—— FREEMAN, deck hand.

Two rodmen, names not known.

When the storm broke the Beaver was making a hurried run back to New Madrid to get medical attention for McConnell, who had been taken suddenly ill, and was within sight of a quarterboat, anchored near this city, when the wind tipped the boat over.

CREMATORY ROW REVIVES WITH INJUNCTION

Destructor Company Declares It Will Continue Work Despite Court's Restraining Order.

With the signing of an injunction by Superior Judge Pendleton Monday morning inhibiting the execution of the crematory contract the wrangle over Atlanta's garbage destroyer began anew, giving promise of contempt of court proceedings and possibly an airing in Recorder's Court.

Evins & Spence, counsel for the Destructor Company, said work positively would continue without interruption, since Council had given his clients permission to carry on operations pending the signing of a new contract. C. P. Goree, attorney for Mayor Woodward, was equally dogmatic in asserting work must stop and that if it did not stop immediately he would go before Judge Pendleton and make a motion to have "everybody connected with it" cited for contempt.

"J. N. Renfroe and Others against the City of Atlanta and Others," is the style of the crematory case originally tried before Judge Pendleton, who refused to grant an injunction stopping work. The case was appealed, the Supreme Court reversing Judge Pendleton's ruling. The order of the Supreme Court reached Judge Pendleton Monday morning, and he immediately signed an injunction restraining further execution of the original crematory contract. The injunction reads:

New Contract Not Barred.

"The judgment of this court refusing to grant an interlocutory injunction in the case having been reversed by the Supreme Court of Georgia, and the judgment of that court having been made the judgment of this court, it is therefore considered, ordered and adjudged by this court that the defendants, the City of Atlanta and the Destructor Company, be and they are hereby enjoined and restrained until final hearing of this case before a jury from carrying out the contract referred to and set out in the original petition in this case and from performing any act under said contract. The city is not enjoined from making any other contract with these people for securing this crematory, so as not to violate the decision of the Supreme Court in this case."

Attorney C. P. Goree said the effect of this injunction would be immediate cessation of work on the crematory. Notwithstanding that Council, after the Supreme Court decree, gave the Destructor Company authority to work on the crematory pending a new contract, Mr. Goree said he would "have them put in jail" if the work was continued. When asked who he would cite for contempt, he replied:

"Everybody that has anything to do with it."

City Attorney Mayson said the city had accepted the court decree, and that Council thereafter granted the Destructor Company authority to proceed, and he, therefore, saw no reason why work should stop.

"Of course, no work can be done under the old contract," said Mr. Mayson; "but, as I see it, the Destructor people can remain in possession of the ground. The decree does not mean that Atlanta can not have a crematory."

Attorney Sam Evins, of Evins & Spence, secured a consultation with Mr. Goree in an endeavor to reach an agreement upon work pending the new contract. Mr. Goree adhered to his statement that all work should cease.

After the consultation with Mr. Evins, Mr. Goree said: "I just told Mr. Evins that if the Destructor Company continued work, it would be under that old contract, and that if they did anything at all, I would proceed against them for contempt."

Sees 1,000,000 Kisses Every Year

Gatekeeper Expert On Osculation

Custom Grows in Favor, He Says

H. T. Lewis, who opines he knows more about kisses than Noah Webster

Many Miss Trains Because They Must Have "Just One More," Declares H. T. Lewis.

When old Noah Webster solemnly set down in his book that a kiss is "a salute or caress given by smacking the lips," he probably thought he had said the last word on the subject, and a great many people have long held the view that Mr. Webster knew—impersonally—more about the kiss than any other man.

But he hadn't and he didn't.

An Atlantan has something to say about the kiss and its habits, and he deposes earnestly that he knows—impersonally, always impersonally—more about osculation than Mr. Webster or anyone else.

Which is by way of introducing H. T. Lewis, guardian of the portals of the Terminal Railway Station, in other words, a gatekeeper. Mr. Lewis declares he has seen more kissing and heard more kissing than any other man in Atlanta, and he is ready to fall in with the fashion and make an affidavit. He took a pencil and a piece of paper Saturday morning, and he "figgered" earnestly for some moments. Then he made this statement:

He figures it this way:

He sees about sixty trains come and go each day, and the passengers average about 80 to a train. Of these about fifty kiss someone, either going or coming, which makes a trifle over a million smacks a year that are delivered and accepted at the gates.

"If it wasn't for the kisses we see and the kisses we hear," he said, "the life of the gatekeeper would be deadly monotony. We see every kind of a kiss here at the gate, from the Marathon kiss of the lover to the bashful peck of the schoolboy and the earnest efforts of people to emulate a clap of thunder."

Mr. Lewis said people are kissing more now than ever before, at least in the railway stations.

FEDERAL INQUIRY IN M'REYNOLDS CASE ASKED

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Representative Kahn, of California, to-day introduced two resolutions, one calling upon Attorney General McReynolds to transmit to the House all papers relating to the prosecution on white slave charges of Maura Diggs and Drew Caminetti and leading up to the resignation of United States District Attorney McNab, of San Francisco. The other calls for the same papers in the case of the prosecution of the Western Fuel Company.

David Starr Jordan, of Leland Stanford University of California, informed President Wilson to-day that he believed the McNab charges false. Dr. Jordan said that he considered that McNab is apparently annoyed over a number of recent occurrences in his office and that he took this occasion to resign "in a blaze of glory."

District Attorney McNab said to-day that he had repeatedly protested against attempts to prevent the prosecution of Caminetti and Diggs, and that Caminetti's father had sought aid in Washington have the case delayed.

On June 1 Caminetti, after he had been appointed Commissioner General of Immigration, wired McNab, asking another delay. McNab replied that the case would be set for July 25. On the same day McNab wrote to Atorney General McReynolds, reviewing the case.

On June 18 McNab received a telegram from the Attorney General ordering him to postpone the trial until autumn. Two days later McNab's resignation was wired to Washington.

Secretary Wilson Says He Delayed Trials.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—"I have stated all the facts. There is nothing further in the case and the public will have to judge for itself."

This is the only statement that Secretary of Labor Wilson will make to-day supplementing his announcement assuming responsibility for the postponement for the Diggs-Caminetti white slave case in San Francisco.

"It was for the benefit of the service that I wished to keep Mr. Caminetti, the Commissioner General of Immigration, in Washington for a time and I could not then see and do not now see any serious interference with justice," said the Secretary.

Movies Catch Pair Spooning; Suspended

CALIFORNIA, PA., June 23.—A moving picture which showed them sitting on a rustic bench in a mossy glen of Hazel Park, "spooning" was the cause of Miss Kathryn Boyd, a co-ed, and B. H. Crago, a student, being indefinitely suspended on the eve of their graduation at the State Normal School here.

The film, depicting park scenes, was shown at a local theater and made a sensation among the students. The news got to the faculty.

Hug and Kiss Are Detective's Reward

NEW YORK, June 23.—Douglas M. Sanderson is still tasting a kiss he got at the auction sale of the furnishings of the Astor House. An aged woman informed the auctioneer that she had lost her pocketbook containing $18.

While Sanderson, who is the house detective, was hunting for the purse, the auctioneer offered it and its contents at auction subject to its being found. The crowd had bid $17 when the detective appeared with the missing wallet.

The aged woman gave the detective a hug and a kiss, much to his embarrassment and to the joy of the crowd.

Railroad Continues Train-Bandit Search

WAYCROSS, June 23.—No developments have been reported here to-day in the hunt for the Kirkland freight train robebrs, but it is known that the search, while abandoned by Coffee County officers, has by no means been given up by agents of the Atlantic Coast Line.

It is believed the men now hiding in Roundabout Swamp will soon be forced to leave the swamp for food supplies, and then an effort will be made to capture them.

Hot Weather 'Don'ts' Given by U. S. Expert

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The last word in hot weather "don'ts" was issued in brief form to-day by Dr. Carl Alsberg, who succeeded Dr. Harvey W. Wiley as chief of the United States Bureau of Chemistry. Here are his "don'ts:"

"Don't eat to excess.

"Don't wear too many clothes.

"Don't drink ice cold beverages.

"Don't look at the thermometer and keep thinking how hot it is."

SONS OF VETERANS MEET.

CHATTANOOGA, June 23.—The Cons of Veterans, U. S. A., of Alabama and Tennessee, convened here to-day in their twenty-fifth annual encampment. John A. Patten, of this city, is expected to be elected to succeed John Tinker, of this city, as division commander.

NOBLE, IN TRANCE A YEAR, AWAKENS

CLEVELAND, June 23.—After being in a state of coma for a year at the State Hospital for the Insane here, Shackery Nasham el Aswad, Syrian nobleman and graduate engineer, has awakened and will be taken home at once by his brother, Captain Kaail el Aswad, wealthy cotton producer and the Governor's chief of staff, who came all the way from Bramana, Mt. Lebanon, Syria, a year ago, and has been patiently awaiting ever since for his brother's recovery.

When Shackery regained consciousness, his brother, who had been in America for twelve months, had gone to New York for a few days. He was hastily summoned and arrived today. The meeting between the brothers was pathetic. They addressed each other by all the pet names they had used in childhood.

Shackery had no recollection of his months in the hospital, where he was sent May 24, 1912, when he appeared in a daze at the Y. M. C. A. here. Only a pocketbook identified him, and through this W. Stanley Hillitt, United States Consul at Beirut, located the stricken man's father, Nasham Assad Bake el Aswad, Syrian of high rank, who sent his other son here at once.

350,000 POSTAL DEPOSITORS.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—There are 12,820 postal depositaries, 350,000 depositors and $85,000,000 in deposits. The Postmaster General is now receiving applications from postmasters for postal savings bonds to be distributed July 1.

SOLONS SEE NEED OF PENAL REFORM

Interviews with leading members of the House and Senate have disclosed that the Assembly, which meets this week, is imbued with a belief in the necessity for practical revision of Georgia's penal and criminal court laws stronger than ever before.

So many specific needs for changes have been urged by the Governor, by members of the Prison Board, by judges and solicitors general throughout the State, and so many plans have been suggested that the creation of a special commission to take up the proposition seems a certainty.

Inasmuch as the creation of this commission will give full opportunity for the expression of all views on the subject and opportunity to sift out the best way of dealing with it, no opposition has developed. Scores of legislators in both the upper and lower House are committed to its support.

Rich Dentist Sued For Divorce; Wife Declares He Beat Her

Three days after her husband went home intoxicated, according to her charge, and beat her with a walking cane, Mrs. Kathryne Steer brought suit in the Superior Court for divorce from Dr. John S. Steer, a dentist, who is reputed to be wealthy. The offense was alleged to have been committed on the night of June 20 at the Steer home, 21 Ashby Street.

Mrs. Steer enjoined Dr. Steer from disposing of his interest in a well-known dental concern. They were married in Kentucky in 1908.

Boll Weevil Here to Stay.

THOMASVILLE.—L. U. Calhoun, of Louisiana, expert from the United States Department of Agriculture, who has been attending farmers' institutes in South Georgia, declares that the boll weevil is in this country to stay and that the chief thing the farmers should concern themselves about now is the best method of warding off its attacks on cotton.

MISSISSIPPI SUES FOR 'PEN' COTTON

JACKSON, MISS., June 23.—Acting under instructions from Governor Brewer, Attorney General Ross A. Collins to-day filed an attachment in the Chancery Court here against all properties in Mississippi of Boyce & Co., Memphis and New Orleans cotton factors and cotton exporters, and also more than 1,000 bales of cotton recently bought by Boyce & Co. from the State, now on the wharves in New Orleans, ready for export.

SAVANNAH, June 23.—That protests have been filed from Savannah against the appointment of David C. Barrow as collector of the port, and that the friends of Captain Stephen N. Perry Belmont Puts Up Home to Get Coin

Flee From Sing Sing; Are Glad to Return

OSSINING, N. Y., June 23.—"Hooray, take us back to Sing Sing!" There was real exultation in the voices of William Forbes and Maurice Clifford, two short-term burglars, who escaped from Sing Sing prison last night, when they were captured to-day. They were trying to return to the prison, but had lost their way.

Forbes and Clifford were covered with mud and their clothes were ripped and torn by brambles and barb wire fences. They were badly bitten by mosquitoes and other insects, and once they had to lie in a creek when the hunt got too close.

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—Red rose bushes set near the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks by Edward Bok, of Marion, were removed because the road officials feared engineers might mistake the blossoms for danger signals.

PLAYERS TO SOLVE RAGTIME PROBLEM

Another effort to solve Atlanta's ragtime problem will be made to-morrow afternoon.

This problem, which has aroused lovers of ragtime music, is whether an expert pianist or a Weatherholt player-piano is the more expert in producing that entrancing syncopated music.

At the contest Friday afternoon Frank Hammond, executive secretary to Mayor Woodward, awarded the decision to the player-piano, after considering the problem overnight.

Mr. Weatherholt has received dozens of letters from admirers of the player-piano who insist that the pianist never lived who can produce ragtime as the player does, and he has received invitations to visit homes of the owners and hear for himself.

Other letters have been received giving names of expert pianists who are declared to be such artists that a player would never get a decision in a contest.

The contest will be held in Weatherholt Hall, 72 North Broad Street, with L. T. Briers, H. H. Bowers, H. C. Wiley, A. D. Beatty and others competing against the player operated by J. A. Mills.

During the contest complimentary tickets to the Elite Theater will be given to the ladies present, through the courtesy of Mr. Briers, who is assistant manager of that theater.

Seven 250-Lb. Women Testify in Fat Case

DENVER, COLO., June 23.—Seventeen hundred pounds of stout women sat on small chairs in the Inspector's office in the Federal building all morning on a hot June day. At least there were seven women, and as none of them owned less than 250 pounds, the total may be fixed in the neighborhood of 1,700.

They were witnesses in a fraud case. For months, they say, they have toiled with the Marjorie Hamilton fat-reducing methods without finding themselves one ounce reduced in weight.

Sale of Summer Dresses

To Bring to the Women of Atlanta the Real Values of the Season

$5.00 to $5.75 Black China Silk Waists

The Waist Department contributes to the day's events! Contributes an interesting item.

Black China silk waists and shirts from our own good stocks and priced regularly there at $5.00 to $5.75 are marked $2.45.

And there is a variety of splendid styles, serviceable and cool. Choose from waists with high and Dutch necks, eyelet embroidered, with little clusters of tucks and buttons on fronts, with tucks over shoulders. Open front or back. Shirts with folds down front, with pocket, with folded or flat collar.

The women of Atlanta shall have a day of it to-morrow! A day to choose the freshest and charmingest of summer dresses at prices that in no wise compare with values as you know them. It is accomplishing such results as this that adds zest to the game of merchandising; that brings the fine sense of a good job well done. We have heard much, very much, of late about dress sales, their whys and wherefores, but somehow or other one advertising pen---that must be truthful ---has had to wait until now for this opportunity. It has arrived with a vengeance! But how to make the most of it?

Simply by reciting the plain and interesting facts to the women of Atlanta, who have yet, when they visit this store, to be undeceived by any statement that Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co. makes.

Our dress buyer has just come in from New York and with him upward of three hundred summer dresses of surpassing beauty. They are anything but the usual kinds, a happy relief from cheap laces, gaudy embroideries, from dresses made down to a price. These are from a maker whose business pride is a great asset. It holds him above any kind of cheapening, of skimping in quality of materials; it keeps him everlastingly working out new and becoming styles. Whether it is early April when he is making dresses and fair profits, or whether it is mid-June, when he is making dresses and readiness for another season, the same thoroughness characterizes his work.

We tell you this now merely because you have not seen the dresses. After your visit to-morrow, when your eyes will have taken in all that the dresses are, you will more fully understand.

There are white voile dresses--all white and with touches of color here and there on collars, cuffs, in girdles; there are striped voile dresses, there are Dresden crepe dresses and flowered crepe dresses---any number of different kinds---so many that, we warrant, the question most women will have to decide is which one or several she likes best.

And back of them all is that fine fact that every one may be bought at a splendid saving. But you will not have to be told of the saving---it is evident. You will know no such attractive affairs could be sold regularly at such prices, you will know they have not been sold at such prices!

$5.00 for $7.50 to $9.75 Dresses

There are fifty of these. You may choose from white voiles or from white crepes, figured and flowered in delicate pinks, blues, lavenders and the like. They are trimmed with laces and embroideries, yokes are often entirely of embroidery—and have belts (some of them) of black velvet or folded satin. The finest five dollars worth we have known, and we believe you will agree—they are so cool and summery, they fit so splendidly.

$6.98 for $10.00 to $12.50 Dresses

One hundred twenty-five of these. There are all white voiles and their laces and embroideries will be a revelation for fineness. There are dresses with white crepe skirts and smart coats of Dresden crepes, in which the daintiest flowers show, rose, Copenhagen, over plain tucked vests and with belt and facings of satin. With these we have put a number of $10.00 and $11.75 black China silk dresses from our own stock. Half-length sleeves, flat round collar.

$8.75 for $12.50 to $15.00 Dresses

There are one hundred twenty-five of these and would there were more! Voiles are the materials, and such voiles, seemingly as crisp and fine as could be woven. Some are white, some are striped in shades favored right now. Those all white are made elegant with embroidery medallions surrounded by laces in yokes, and those striped are newly styled dresses, simple and dainty, that mean worlds of satisfaction for morning trips to town, for afternoon wear.

Old Fogyisms of To-day

By DOROTHY DIX.

ONE of the most interesting plays of the past season was Arnold Bennett's "Milestones." The theory of the drama was growth. It showed how the advanced thought of one day is the conservatism of the next and the old fogyism of the day after.

In the play the hero breaks with his business partner because he wants to build iron ships instead of wooden ships. "You'll be ruined if you do," says the standpatter; "iron ships will never float. You might as well build stone ships."

The progressive man goes on and builds iron ships and makes a fortune, but at middle life his partner wants to build steel ships. "Never," cries the old man, with his conservative old ideas, "iron ships are all right, but steel ships will never float." The young man builds his steel ships, that give us our Mauretanias, and then, when he has grown old, comes a young man talking of building airships, and he cries out, as the other two old men have done about the iron ships and the steel ships, "that airships will never be practicable."

This play, "Milestones," is the biggest suffrage play ever written, and offers the best suffrage argument.

Go back three generations. The question of whether a woman should be given an education then was just as burning a one as the question of whether she should be given a right to vote is now. And precisely the same arguments were brought against it as are brought against woman suffrage now.

An Old Belief.

In our great-grandmothers' time it was contended that it would unsex a woman to teach her geography, and make her bold and unwomanly and kill her sweet feminine charm for her to receive an education. Also that only a few blue stockings among women wanted an education. Therefore, it was foolish and wrong to open college doors to the feminine sex.

Well, by dint of a heroic fight by a few women for all women, the privileges of education were extended to girls, and the learning that our forefathers so feared would unsex and demoralize women has brought about none of the calamities they foretold. Women are still women. They are still sought in marriage, and so far from only a few caring for an education, the girls outnumber the boys in high schools. Education has not unfitted women to be good mothers. It makes them better ones.

Look back at the time when education was thought to endanger women, and you will laugh as you did at the man who was so sure that an iron ship couldn't be made to float.

The next milestone that we have passed is the one that marked the place where women began to go into gainful occupations. In our grandmothers' day the only way a woman had to make a good living was to marry it. By and by a few bold and heroic women rebelled at this state of affairs and demanded a right to go into any kind of business that they were fitted for. The whole conventional world raised one grand howl of protest.

A woman's place is in the home, it cried, whether she's got a home or not, or anything to eat in it or not. If she goes out into the world to work she will become unsexed. She will become coarse and vulgar, and wear short hair and trousers, and smoke and swear, and men won't marry her, and everything will go to the bow-wows.

There are eight million wage earning women in the United States, and if there are any unsexed among them the Eden Musee has failed to get them. So far from the working girl having her love of dress eliminated, the trouble with her is that she's too much given to frills. Also, instead of being opposed to marriage she gets married just when she's most valuable to her employer. The finest woman in the world to-day is the wide-awake, competent business girl, amply able to stand on her own feet, and earn what she needs. She is the prop of her family, and a blessing to society.

It's as absurd to think that people were ever afraid to give women the right to earn an honest living as it is to think that they ever prophesied that you couldn't make a steel ship that would float.

The third milestone that we have passed is the property milestone. Up to our mother's day when a woman married every cent she had passed into her husband's exclusive possession. This was true although the man might be a gambler and a spendthrift, swamped to his chin in debts of which the woman knew nothing, or whether he was a good fellow of the shiftless sort between whose fingers money leaks as water through a sieve.

When it was first proposed to pass property laws securing a woman's money to herself it was fought tooth and nail—even by many women. People said it would break up the home, and produce endless friction between husbands and wives. Women cried out that if they could trust themselves to their husbands they could trust their money. It was contended that for a woman to own her own money would make her bossy and insulting to her husband.

They Worked Well.

Nevertheless some property laws, not adequate ones yet, have been passed, and it has been found out that they worked out for the general good. The right sort of man didn't want to hold up his wife and rob her of her property and the woman who is married to the wrong sort finds out that it is, at least, some consolation to have a roof over her head when her dream of love is broken.

Nobody would now argue that a woman hasn't a right to her own property or to the money she earns, any more than they would contend that we should go back to the old days of the wooden sailing ships.

And now we have come to the last milestone in the march of human progress. It is the demand that women who own property and pay taxes, who form one-half of the population, who are amenable to the law, should stand before that law on an equal platform with men.

Those who object say that for women to vote will unsex them, that it will take away their feminine charm, that men won't want to marry them, that it will break up the home, that not all women want to vote, just as they said these things about educating women, or about women being given a chance to make an honest living, and about women being permitted to control their own property.

Not one single evil prophecy founded on women's advancement has been fulfilled. May we not confidently believe that we may give woman the ballot not only without danger, but that their help is needed in politics just as much as it is needed in the home and the business world? Why should we not then pass this last milestone, too, and set our faces toward the onward journey?

By OLIVETTE.

The other picture shows an afternoon gown of white supple moire. The bodice is a kimono crossed with a small decollete in the V shape, with small plastron of embroidered linen. A shawl collar achieves the yoke. The sleeves are of three-quarter length, with small revers trimmed with three small buttons of the same material, a point going up over the middle front of the bodice.

Too Much for the Chimney

WHEN Grandfather Lickshingle heard it read from a newspaper that Peter Ripley had a lamp chimney which his family had used for thirteen years, he rapped savagely on the floor with his walking stick and said:

"Now, what the dickens is the use of putting such reading in the newspaper? If they want some information about lamp chimneys, let them come to me and get it. When me and your grandmother broke up housekeeping we had a lamp chimney. But it wasn't made in these 'ere shoddy times. I paid a penny for it the day we were married. That was away back somewhere in the last century. We used it night and day for 79 years and eight——"

"Why, grandpa, you didn't have to use it in the daytime, did you?"

"Didn't have to—no. But we did. Used it at night on the lamp, and in the daytime we used it to drive nails with. Sometimes the children cracked nuts with it, and the road surveyor borrowed it several times to pound stones on the streets. One day I thought they had lost it. The workmen had left it on the road, and the street cars ran over it seventeen times before it was found. This lamp chimney had been in a railway collision, 22 lamps had exploded under it during its time, a horse kicked it clean through the side of the stable, and the chimney came out of it all without as much as a crack, but the horse had to be sent to the hospital. However, it's broke now," said grandfather, with a deep sigs.

"Then you were foolish enough to let the servant clean it, were you?" asked mother.

"No, but we might as well. When we gave up keeping house I gave it to a friend. He was hard of hearing, and he wanted it for an ear trumpet. One day a man tried to tell him why he ought to be President, and that he was the only real man for the job, and, by cracky, he burst the chimney into a million pieces."

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

In the amiable way of villagers, they were discussing the matrimonial affairs of a couple who, though recently wed, had begun to find the yoke of Hymen a burden.

"'Tis all along o' them hasty marriages," opined one caustic old gentleman, who had been much to the fore in the discussion. "They did not understand each other. They'd nobbut knowed each other for a matter of seven year."

"Well, that seems long enough," said a listener.

"Long eno'? Bah! Ye're wrong. When a body's courting, he canna be too careful. Why, my courtship with Mary lasted a matter of nineteen years."

"You were certainly careful," agreed the listener; "and did you find your plan successful when you married?"

"Ye jump to conclusions hastily," said the old man. "I understood her then, so I didna marry her!"

A sad-looking man went into a chemist's. "Can you give me," he asked, "something that will drive from my mind the thought of sorrow and bitter recollection?"

Then the chemist nodded, and put him up a little dose of quinine and wormwood and rhubarb and Epsom salts and a dash of castor oil, and gave it to him, and for six months the man could not think of anything in the world except new schemes for getting the taste out of his mouth.

The portly lady had accidentally taken a rear seat in a car reserved for smokers. With unconcealed indignation she watched the man beside her fill his pipe.

"Do it now, ma'am!" said the man, as he carefully lighted up; "then take my advice an' stop it!"

Corporal (to soldiers)—"Why is the blade of the saber curved instead of straight?"

Corporal—"Humbug! The saber is curved so as to fit the scabbard. If it was straight, how would you get it into the crooked scabbard, blockhead?"

Blink (the wholesaler)—"Well, how many orders did you get yesterday?"

Gink (the salesman)—"I got two orders in one shop."

Blink—"What were they?"

Gink—"One was to get out and the other was to stay out."

"Have you a spare cigar about you, old chap?"

"Certainly. But I thought you were going to stop smoking?"

"I am, but not too abruptly. I've already stopped smoking my own cigars."

A factory in Grenoble, France, utilizes the water of a reservoir situated in the mountains at a height of 200 yards. The water reaches the factory through a vertical tube of the same length, with a diameter of considerably less than an inch, the jet being used to move a turbine. Experiments have shown that the strongest men can not cut the jet with the best tempered sword, and in some instances the blade has been broken into fragments without deflecting a drop of the water and with as much violence as a pane of glass may be shattered by a blow from an iron bar. It has been calculated that a jet of water a small fraction of an inch in thickness, moving with sufficient velocity, could not be cut by a rifle bullet.

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

From where Gordon stood the wild windstorm seemed to be rushing directly toward him with twice the speed of the fastest express train, cutting a path five hundred feet wide. Even as he looked the tornado, with a rush and a roar, swept up between the mansion and the huge granite rock in the valley. Gordon dashed for the brook to seek some sheltering bank, but ere he could reach it the cyclone was upon him, or at least the edge of it, and he was picked up as though he was a chip of wood, carried forty feet in the air and hurled to the opposite side of the brook, where he lay stunned.

When Gordon came to his senses he found himself surrounded by four rough looking men, dressed in the garb of the mountaineer. They assisted him to his feet and he worked his arms, legs and body to ascertain if there were any bones broken. Finding himself apparently sound, he smiled.

"I never rode on the wings of a cyclone before," he said, "and I don't believe I ever want to try it again."

None of the men he addressed made direct reply to this cheerful remark. They stood close to him and eyed him critically. Finally one of them, a black-bearded man, said:

"I reckon you're Gordon Kelly."

"I am," replied Gordon, surprised that the stranger should know that name.

Gordon a Prisoner.

As if this answer were a signal for attack, the four men closed in on him. One of them had a rope and he attempted to pinion Gordon's arms. Though taken completely by surprise, Gordon put up a desperate struggle, but was quickly overpowered by the four men, all of whom seemed possessed of uncommon strength. His arms were tied behind his back and he was commanded to walk forward.

"What's the meaning of this?" demanded the prisoner.

The man with the black beard answered.

"I reckon nothin' ain't goin' to harm yer, if yer obey orders. If yer don't we'll make yer. Come along."

But Gordon refused to move. He said in a calm voice.

"Just tell me what this all about, will you, please? You've made a mistake. I have done nothing to you. You've got the wrong man."

"You ain't done nothin' to us, but you're the man we want. Come along, now." The black-bearded man drew a six-shooter from his pocket and grasped the weapon by the barrel. "I don't want to hit yer with this yere pistol, but I reckon I'll have to unless yer do what I tell yer."

Gordon saw that all four men were armed, though the black-bearded man was the only one to make a display. Resistence was useless and might bring him needless injury, so without further words he walked ahead in the direction indicated feeling that in a short time the whole thing would be explained and he would be allowed to go free. His captors followed the brook for nearly a mile and then turned off toward the northwest. They crossed the path of the cyclone, which had long since passed in its fury, leaving destruction in its wake, and continued on through thick forests and over rough and wild mountain country. Gordon tried to secure some information from the men, but they did not reply to his questions.

A Long Walk.

Finally, after walking northwesterly for about three miles, Gordon judged, they came to Pew Creek, the stream that flowed past the settlement bearing the same name nearly fourteen miles to the south of where they were. The prisoner knew the country well, especially the land bordering the creek. He knew not where his captors were taking him, but at least he was familiar with the ground. The bearded man, leading the way—he seemed to be the leader of the four—followed the creek for another mile until he struck the main road. Before reaching the road, however, the party stopped, while one of the men went ahead as a scout, evidently to make sure the road was clear. He waved a signal to advance and the others did so, crossing a bridge where the creek met the road and then plunging due west through another forest. They were getting on higher ground all the time and finally came to a clearing. Then, making a sharp ascent of about one hundred yards, they descended rapidly for another hundred yards and came to a small clump of trees, with underbrush growing high all around it. Walking straight ahead, the bearded man parted the underbrush and with Gordon following close, they passed through it and arrived at a log cabin, evidently of recent construction.

By this time it was almost dark. One of the men stepped inside the cabin and lighted two or three tallow candles, after which he set about preparing the evening meal. When the candles were glowing, the bearded man motioned Gordon to enter, which he did, the others following. Gordon glanced around. There were five rough banks, with a straw on them for bedding. There was no stove, but there was a fireplace in a corner, with a small chimney leading up from it, built of sticks of wood plastered with clay. The only article of furniture in the room was a rude bench. The bearded man then spoke the first words he had uttered since the march began. He said to Gordon:

"Yer won't be hurted none unless yer try to escape. Then we'll shoot." He untied the rope that bound Gordon's arms, one of the other men standing by with a revolver in his hand, and added: 'Maybe yer better git in one of them bunks till grub is ready.'"

Thoughts Busy.

Gordon rubbed the circulation back in his arms and then lay down. He had long since made up his mind to treat the situation good-naturedly, feeling that more could be accomplished that way than being nasty about it. He resolved to trust to cheerfulness and diplomacy in his intercourse with these men. He had not yet been able to figure out what their object was in making him a captive. Perhaps they would demand a ransom for his release. He could not satisfy himself how they knew his name, either. The thought flashed across him that Galen Deery had something to do with the matter. Perhaps the Atlanta capitalist had learned of his companionship with Mildred. It was possible that Shephard, his superintendent, had informed him. He recalled what Mildred had told him about her father's vast project and he tried to connect it with his present predicament.

While his thoughts were busy, the fire under the pots and pans was busy, too. Three of his captors began eating at once, while the fourth stood guard over Gordon with a six-shooter in his hand. Evidently they had planned the whole thing out in advance, as they had not spoken to each other since entering the cabin.

After eating a hearty meal of bacon, corn cakes, stewed beans and crackers, Gordon stretched himself, smiled and announced that he felt better. He thought the other men probably felt in better humor, too, so he tried to start a little conversation.

"Do you men expect to keep me here or will there be some more walking?" he asked, with a good-natured smile.

Allowed to Write.

There was no answer to this remark. Three of the men had lighted pipes. The fourth, who seemed to be somewhat younger than the others, had been relieved of guard duty and was now eating his supper. When he had finished he drew a bag of tobacco and some tissue paper from a pocket and rolled a cigarette. There was silence for a long time and then Gordon began again.

"I don't mind spending a little time with you men, as you appear to be willing to treat me fairly. I suppose you will tell me what this is all about when you get ready to do so. You won't find me troublesome. But I have a favor to ask of you. The people at my home and the people at Deery's house below will be very much worried about me. They may think I was killed in the cyclone. What I want you to do is to get word to them somehow that I am safe; or, if you will allow it, I will write a note that one of you can leave on the doorstep at night. Of course you can read the note before it is sent. What do you say?"

Three of the men looked at the man with the black beard as if expecting him to do all the necessary talking. He smoked in silence for several minutes. Then he spat and said:

"I reckon you all kin write."

CHAPTER XXXVII.

GORDON had a pencil, but no paper. However he discovered a small paper bag, which he slit down the sides with his knife, making of it a long, narrow sheet. Then, with the bottom of a tin plate for a desk, he very slowly wrote the following remarkable letter in a large hand:

Friend Mildred:
I write to tell you I am
Very well and for you and
Elmer and also your
Mother not to worry as
I am being well treated.
Lonely, of course, it is,
Especially as I can not
See my friends; but
No matter; I will keep
On being cheerful and the
Rest will come out right in
The end. I wish you would
Have someone to go
With you to my home (take
Elmer) and please notify
Steve and all the others
That none of them
Must look for me
Yet. I will soon
Have, I expect, another
Opportunity to write
More. You may possibly
Expect it soon.
Love to all.

G. K.

When Mildred received these lines (which she did the following morning) she must have thought it a queer letter to get from the man she was so worried about. It was not a love letter, nor did it seem to say much of anything in any definite degree. Yet Gordon had deliberately written it that way, trusting to the girl's ingenuity to decipher the hidden meaning. As a matter of fact, the meaning was so little hidden that Gordon, as he wrote it, had doubts as to whether it would pass muster.

The Message Sent.

Gordon folded the sheet of paper twice, addressed it on the back to Miss Mildred Deery and handed it to the black-bearded man, who read it slowly; so slowly, in fact, that Gordon feared he had discovered the simple cryptogram. But at last the mountaineer nodded and placed the letter in his pocket, whereat Gordon breathed with relief. Later in the evening the letter was given to the youngest of the four who, after receiving instructions from the bearded man, given in too low a tone for Gordon to distinguish the words, saddled a horse that was tethered nearby, mounted him and rode off in the darkness.

From the moment the rope that bound Gordon's arms had been removed, one of the four men had remained within ten feet of the captive, with a revolver in his hand. Every action of the mountaineers indicated that they meant business and Gordon had long since made up his mind that he would not attempt to escape that night. At intervals he endeavored to draw his captors into conversation, but without success. They were not sullen, or gloomy, or sulky; they simply refused to talk, so at last Gordon requested that he might be allowed to retire for the night.

No Secret About Woman's Beauty

The flashing eye, the elastic step and the brilliant complexion are never companions of organic troubles; but it is the distressed expression, aches and pains, faintness, dizziness, that bearing down feeling, and the blues that are the tell-tale symptoms. If such women would only remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound overcomes such distressing symptoms, womanly beauty would be no longer a secret.

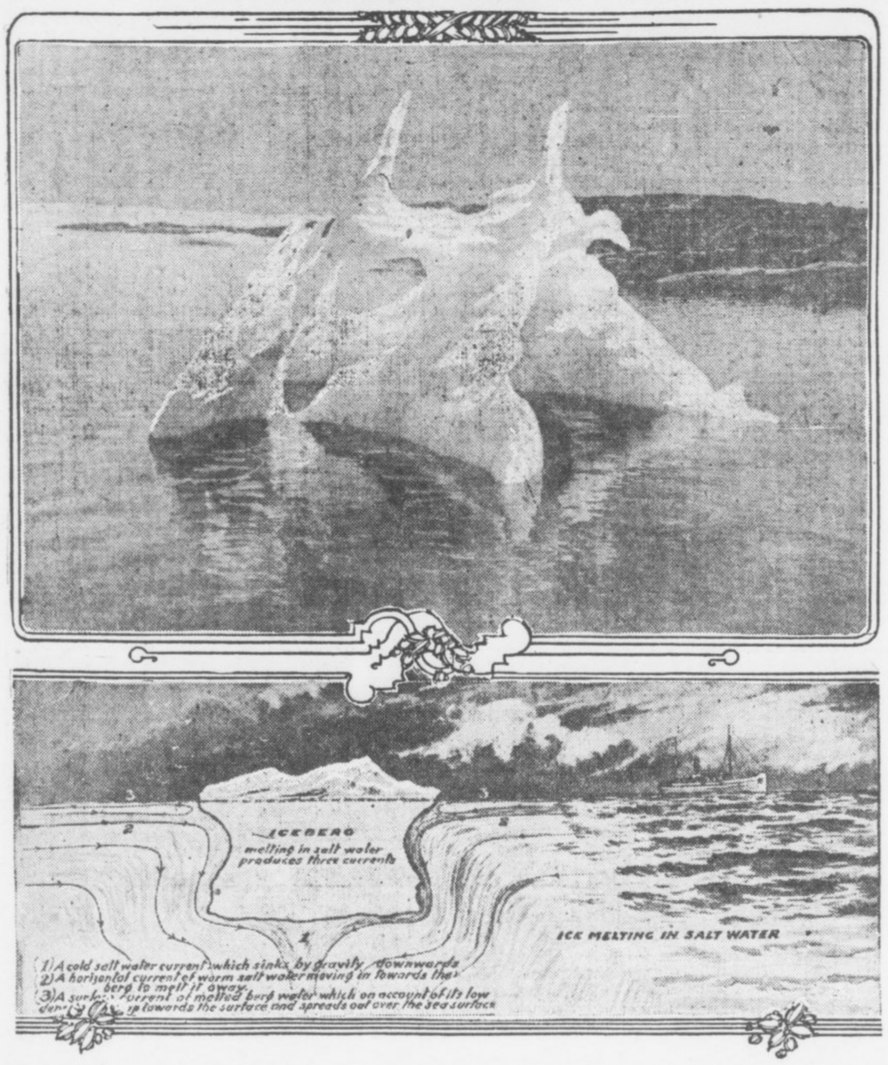
A Device That Traps Icebergs

An Atlantic Liner Can Now Be Provided With Mechanical Senses as Sensative as the Nostrils of a Deer



The top picture is a photograph of a melting iceberg. Underneath is a diagram showing the various currents produced by an iceberg that is slowly dissolving. It is these currents that are "felt" by the micro-thermometer, one of the latest wonderful achievements of science.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

SINCE the sinking of the Titanic, a year ago, icebergs have been studied as never before, and a great amount of curious knowledge about these frozen monsters of the deep has been accumulated, with the result of increasing the safety of ocean navigation.

Just as a living being proclaims its presence, even when it can not be seen, by telltale sounds and vibrations and by emanations which are perceptible at surprising distances to olfactory senses as delicate as those possessed by some of the lower animals, so icebergs betray themselves, in the darkness of the night, or the far more dangerous obscurity of a fog, by their effect upon the temperature of the air and the water.

A remarkable mechanical sense-organ, called the micro-thermometer, which is simply a thermometer of great delicacy and special construction, dragged through the water by a ship, is now employed to measure the changing temperatures of the water in the vicinity of icebergs, and some unexpected facts have been developed by its use.

How It Works.

These instruments reveal facts previously unknown about icebergs. They show that there is a surprising system of currents around and under a great berg, or a fleet of bergs, which produce characteristic temperature changes that may be felt miles away. In truth, the iceberg is a great thermal engine surrounded by a medium of air and water peculiar to itself, and due to its action upon its environment. Upon the air immediately around it the berg produces a cooling effect in consequence of the absorption of heat required to melt it. When water freezes, it gives out heat; when it melts, it absorbs heat. One perilous consequence often is that the moisture in the cooled air around the berg condenses into concealing fogs and mists.

But the effects of the berg upon the underlying and surrounding water are still more remarkable and important. It has been found (as illustrated in the picture of a melting iceberg) that there are three characteristic currents produced in the ocean water by a great berg when it arrives in the comparatively warm water lying along the steamship tracks of the North Atlantic.

In the first place, directly under the vast ice mass there is a great current of cooled salt water, which sinks by its own gravity, because the cold increases its relative density.

In the next place the suction produced by the sinking cold water draws in from all sides warmer surface currents, which eat into the sides of the berg by their melting action, and finally so much reduce the size of the berg beneath the surface, or so change its shape, and its center of gravity, that, at last, the equilibrium of the mass is upset, and it turns over, thrashing the surrounding sea with its immense flanks, huge fragments of which, heavy enough to sink a ship, are detached, and go floating away to form an attendant fleet of small bergs and floes.

Then there is a third current composed of relatively fresh water, formed by the melting of the berg, and which, because of its lesser specific gravity, moves upward from around the berg and flows as a comparatively warm current over the surface of the sea. This current is of the greatest importance in betraying the presence of a berg, for it spreads to a considerable distance and can easily be detected by the micro-thermometer. The warm current has been detected a mile from a berg.

The Real Effect.

In regard to this a recent report of the Canadian Government on iceberg phenomena says: "There is little room to doubt that the real iceberg effect is the rise of temperature, and that the fall (observed when a ship passes abeam of the berg) is due to the colder current in which the berg is being carried."

In some experimental trips when icebergs were passed at a distance of from a half to a quarter of a mile there was observed first a rise of temperature in the water, followed by a fall as the berg was passed abeam.

Similar experiments with the micro-thermometer have shown that the near neighborhood of land is betrayed by a fall of water temperature, and this is believed to be due to the action of the tides and the obstruction offered by the coast line, resulting in a turning up of the under water, which is always much colder than the sea surface.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"My husband shot a burglar," she said, languidly. And then her insolence reached its culmination in a query of her own: "Was his name Griggs?" It was done with splendid art, with a splendid mastery of her own emotions, for, even as she spoke the words, she was remembering those shuddering seconds when she had stood, only a few hours ago, gazing down at the inert bulk that had been a man.

Burke betook himself to another form of attack.

"Oh, you know better than that," he declared, truculently. "You see, we've traced the Maxim silencer. Garson himself bought it up in Hartford."

"But he told me——" she began, then became aware of her indiscretion, and checked herself.

Burke seized on her lapse with avidity.

"What did he tell you?" he questioned, eagerly.

Now, Mary had regained her self-command, and she spoke calmly.

"He told me," she said, without a particle of hesitation, "that he had never seen one. Surely, if he had had anything of the sort, he would have shown it to me then."

"Probably he did, too!" Burke rejoined, without the least suspicion that his surly utterance touched the truth exactly. "Now, see here," he went on, trying to make his voice affable, though with small success, for he was excessively irritated, "I can make it a lot easier for you if you'll talk. Come on, now! Who killed Griggs?"

Mary Stood Rebellious.

"That's for you to find out," she said, sneering.

Burke pressed the button on the desk, and, when the doorman appeared, ordered that the prisoner be returned to her cell.

"I suppose," she said, with a glance of contempt toward Demarest, "that it's useless for me to claim my constitutional rights, and demand to see a lawyer?"

Burke, too, had cast off pretense at last.

Mary spoke to the District Attorney.

"I believe," she said, with a new dignity of bearing, "that such is my constitutional right, is it not, Mr. Demarest?"

The lawyer sought no evasion of the issue. For that matter, he was coming to have an increasing respect, even admiration, for this young woman, who endured insult and ignominy with a spirit so sturdy, and met stratagem with other stratagem better devised. So, now, he made his answer with frank honesty.

Mary turned her clear eyes on the Inspector, and awaited from that official a reply that was not forthcoming. Truth to tell, Burke was far from comfortable under that survey.

"Well, Inspector?" she inquired, at last.

"We've Got Gargon."

Burke took refuge, as his wont was when too hard pressed, in a mighty bellow.

"The constitution don't go here!" It was the best he could do, and it shamed him, for he knew its weakness. Again, wrath surged in him, and it surged high. He welcomed the advent of Cassidy, who came hurrying in with a grin of satisfaction on his stolid face.

"Say, Chief," the detective said with animmation, in response to Burke's glance of inquiry, "we've got Garson."

Mary's face fell, though the change of expression was almost imperceptible. Only Demarest, a student of much experience, observed the fleeting display of repressed emotion. When the Inspector took thought to look at her, she was as impassive as before. Yet, he was minded to try another ruse in his desire to defeat the intelligence of this woman. To this end, he asked Gilder and the District Attorney to withdraw, while he should have a private conversation with the prisoner. As she listened to his request, Mary smiled again in Sphinx-like fashion, and there was still on her lips an expression that caused the official a pang of doubt, when, at last, the two were left alone together, and he darted a surreptitious glance toward her. Nevertheless, he pressed on his device valiantly.

"Now," he said, with a marked softening of manner, "I'm going to be your friend."

"Are you?" Mary's tone was noncommittal.

"Yes," Burke declared, heartily. "And I mean it! Give up the truth about young Gilder. I know he shot Griggs, of course. But I'm not taking any stock in that burglar story—not a little bit. No court would, either. What was really back of the killing?" Burke's eyes narrowed cunningly. "Was he jealous of Griggs? Well, that's what he might do then. He's always been a worthless young cuss. A rotten deal like this would be about his gait. I guess. * * * Tell me, now, why did he shoot Eddie Griggs?"

All Poise Had Fled.

There was coarseness a-plenty in the Inspector's pretense, but it possessed a solitary fundamental virtue; it played on the heart of the woman whom he questioned, aroused it to wrath in defense of her mate. In a second, all poise fled from this girl whose soul was blossoming in the blest realization that a man loved her purely, unselfishly. Her words came stumblingly in their haste. Her eyes were near to black in their anger.

"He didn't kill him! He didn't kill him!" she fairly hissed. "Why, he's the most wonderful man in the world. You sha'n't hurt him! Nobody shall hurt him! I'll fight to the end of my life for Dick Gilder!"

Burke was beaming joyously. At last—a long last!—his finesse had won the victory over this woman's subtleties.

"Well, that's just what I thought," he said, with smug content. "And now, then, who did shoot Griggs? We've got every one of the gang. They're all crooks. See here," he went on, with a sudden change to the respectful in his manner, "why don't you start fresh? I'll give you every chance in the world. I'm dead on the level with you this time."

But he was too late. By now, Mary had herself well in hand again, vastly ashamed of the short period of self-betrayal caused by the official's artifice against her heart. As she listened to the Inspector's assurances, the mocking expression of her face was not encouraging to that astute individual, but he persevered manfully.

"Just you wait," he went on cheerfully, "and I'll prove to you that I'm on the level about this, that I'm really your friend. * * * There was a letter came for you to your apartment. My men brought it down to me. I've read it. Here it is. I'll read it to you!"

He picked up an envelope, which had been lying on the desk, and drew out the single sheet of paper it contained. Mary watched him, wondering much more than her expression revealed over this new development. Then, as she listened, quick interest touched her features to a new life. In her eyes leaped emotions to make or mar a life.

Helen Morris' Letter.

This was the letter:

I can't go without telling you how sorry I am. There won't never be a time that I won't remember it was me got you sent up, that you did time in my place. I ain't going to forgive myself ever, and I swear I'm going straight always. Your true friend,

HELEN MORRIS.

For once, Burke showed a certain delicacy. When he had finished the reading, he said nothing for a long minute—only sat with his cunning eyes on the face of the woman who was immobile there before him. And, as he looked on her in her slender elegance of form and gentlewomanly loveliness of face, a loveliness intelligent and refined beyond that of most women, he felt borne in on his consciousness the fact that here was one to be respected. He fought against the impression. It was to him preposterous, for she was out of that underworld against which he was ruthlessly at war. Yet, he could not altogether overcome his instinct toward a half-reverent admiration. * * * And, as the letter proved, she had been innocent at the outset. She had been the victim of a mistaken justice, made outcast by the law she had never wronged. * * * His mood of respect was inevitable, since he had some sensibilities, though they were coarsened, and they sensed vaguely the maelstrom of emotions that now swirled in the girl's breast.

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

Chapter Eleven.

WHEN Jennie saw her girl friend at the office next day she asked her how she managed to have such nice dresses and such a nice furnished room on the salary she got. The girl winked and laughingly explained, "it was very easy, providing you were pretty and you found the right MAN." But even then little Jennie did not understand what she meant, and asked the girl to explain the meaning of the "right MAN" part of it.

This the girl was very reluctant to do, but finally admitted that one of the young men they were out with the night before gave her money—and that she just worked for the sake of having something to do. But she did NOT tell Jennie that the work also helped her to forget her way of living and to keep her mind off the day when she would NOT be as good looking and when the young man would have transferred his attentions to a younger and prettier girl—and the money wouldn't be so easy to get.

Jennie was quite shocked when she realized her girl friend was taking money from the young man, and as much as she wanted pretty clothes and good times she was sure she could never, never do THAT to obtain them.

Then the girl told her she knew of a place where Jennie could get clothes on credit. By just paying a dollar or so a week she could get all the clothes she wanted if they knew she had a fairly good job for a girl. Jennie was quite excited when she learned there were such places as these. Just think—and you would only have to pay a dollar or two a week. She was getting eight dollars a week. Pooh! she wouldn't miss one dollar of it. So at noon time she and the girl went to a store to pick out some clothes for Jennie.

At the Table

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED

THAT common meeting-ground of the family, the dinner table, should be made a place where harmony reigns and where each one brings his or her best to contribute to the pleasure of the moment. Cheerful talk is as necessary to health and appetite as it is to peace and pleasure of mind. Unpleasant subjects should be avoided resolutely. Such topics as bad news, illnesses, grewsome incidents shocking accidents, troublesome business affairs should not be brought to the table; nor should disagreeable family matters be discussed there. These family affairs may require settlement, but may be talked of elsewhere.

If it is a family principle to be agreeable and talkative at table, there will be greater ease when guests are present.

A woman's duty is to be composed and cheerful at her table, whether at family meals or when there are guests. Her serenity, or the lack of it, influences others. When acting in the capacity of hostess she needs an absolutely placid temper. Self-control must be her watchword. If she appears to be disturbed, worried, absent-minded, if her eyes wander, or she seems distracted in conversation, every one will be uneasy, and the dinner will be dull and dragging. Her duty is not to let her guests know of her moods, disappointments or even of a headache.

If service is slow, or mistakes happen, it is best for a hostess not to offer explanations. No matter what may go wrong, she must appear not to notice it. By passing over a mistake or an imperfection herself it will escape the attention of others, or, at least, will not be regarded as important by them. If a serious accident occurs to precious china or rare glass she must maintain a calm manner. If a careless servant lets something drip on a guest's dress, a hostess must express regret and try to remedy the blunder and then pass on, without too much delay, to other matters. A guest should try to appear undisturbed by any accident of the sort.

If a guest should be so unlucky as to overturn a glass or have any other accident, it is best not to make profuse apologies. Regret may be shown by one's manner. Thus there is less interruption to conversation and to the smooth running of the dinner. By practice a young hostess may acquire facility in being able to talk naturally while at the same time seeing that people are served properly. If an order has to be given it should be done quietly and simply, without any mysterious signals or loud whisperings. A hostess should try not to make her servant nervous by watching her too much as she moves round the table.

Didn't Want Him.

Mike Hennesey, a hefty young Irishman, secured his first foremanship after serving for some years as one of the "gang." Promptly at 7 o'clock in the morning he began his duties by calling the gang to order.

"Ye all have to worruk for me!" he shouted. "Worruk, I say! And I want every wan of yez to understand at wance that I kin lick anny man in the gang!"

All swallowed the insult except one giant-built warrior, who stepped forward and said:

"But you can't lick me, Mike Hennesey!"

"Oh, I can't, can't I? yelled Mike.

"No, you can't," came back the determined answer.

"Well, thin, go to the office and draw your money. I'll have no man in the gang I can't lick!"

Eliza Jane Knew.

The Minister's Wife (to industrial scholar)—Eliza Jane, I'm sorry to hear from your school mistress you are not diligent at your needlework. You know who it is finds work for idle hands to do?

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I WAS reading a book last night that certainly gave me the Willies," said the Manicure Lady. "Wilfred brought it home from the library. It was all about the way them Romans used to go after the church members, and I never seen such terrible accounts of anything in my life. Why, George, them Romans used to burn the Christians in boiling pitch! Gee, I'm glad I wasn't around then, ain't you?"

"If I had been around I would probably have been one of the Romans," said the Head Barber. "I ain't no church member, even though I know that I ought to be one. I am always so tired after Saturday is over that I like to sleep till noon, and in the afternoon and evening me and the Missus usually goes somewhere like to the seashore or out in the country. If I had more time I would go to church, because it don't hurt anybody to go, and think of all the good religion has done."

"That's why I go," said the Manicure Lady. "Sometimes I feel as if the preacher and me don't quite agree on everything he says, but I always make allowance for the preacher. I was just saying to mother last night that the people that goes to church now ought to be very thankful that they didn't live among them Romans and that the brave people who did live in them days was ever on earth to start the churches and bring all that good into the world."

Not So Hard.

"There is a lot of church members now that wouldn't have stood the gaff then," said the Head Barber. "There is a lot more church members now, but the going ain't so hard."

"That is just what I was thinking when I was reading that book," said the Manicure Lady. "There was a smooth, chop-whiskered old geezer in here yesterday to have his nails did, and the way he purred around me and kind of insinuated would make you sick. He said that he lived over in a little Alabama town, and I asked him if he was the same kind of a gay old dog among the Birmingham manicure girls. Mercy, no, he told me. He said that he had to be a different person altogether when he was at home. He said he couldn't imagine what the other pillars of his church would say if a brother deacon got nifty. I asked him if he didn't have any conscience of his own, and he said that he had one, but it always got seasick when he was crossing the Chattahoochee River, so he left it at home.

"It is too bad, George, that old man Nero didn't have a few of that kind of church members for his lions and bonfire men to practice on, instead of the noble people that had to be martyrs. Pa used to go to church a lot when we lived over in South Carolina, but I guess he ran into so many good little toads like the gent of which I am just speaking of that he got sick of the job.

A Perfect Dear.

"The old gent may travel to the sideboard a little too often some evenings, but he ain't no hypocrite, and there is a lot of other men like him that would be there every Sunday when the plate comes around it there wasn't so many old fakes with sidewhiskers carrying the plate.

"I asked the old geezer what he did week days to rest up from going to church, and he said that he had a big factory where children could learn a good trade and grow up useful members of society like him.

"Do you follow me, George? What a perfect old dear he must be to his wife and children! Honest to goodness, George, if I could find out where his wife lived I would send her a synonymous letter and warn her of her husband's complicity, or whatever it is they call that Jekyll and Hyde stuff that makes a man kick up his heels when he gets where the high buildings looms. Gee, the shop seemed airier and better after he had went!"

By Joe Agler.

NEW ORLEANS, June 23.—Lefty Price will put 'em across for the Crackers this afternoon, opposing Rube Evans, and it looks like us for the money. Price is in great shape, and the bunch is working like a clock. If we don't take the whole series and move up to the top, where we belong, you can tell the bunch at the corner that Joe Agler's a bum prophet.

Old Man Rain won the first game here Sunday, owing to the lack of boating facilities in the park. The field offered fine opportunity for swimming early in the day, but the crowd kept on coming, in spite of the rain, and rather than let all that coin get away one game was decided upon. It was slippery as spaghetti, but that hurt nobody.

Game for Atlanta.

The postponed first game will be played on July 3, and will be transferred to Atlanta. We will not pull off a double-header here this trip.

We copped the one game of Sunday, Dent pitching a wet ball in great shape and having splendid support from the fielders. Whitey Alperman was the batting boy, landing two two-baggers and a single in five times up. Bill Bailey made a great running catch and Spencer pulled off one of the most brilliant running catches ever seen on the Pelicans' lot, grabbing Bailey's hot liner with his bare hand, after a long run.

Tommy Long crippled Jakey Atz at third base, nearly breaking Jakey's wrist and putting his thumb on the blink. Williams took Atz's place for the rest of the game.

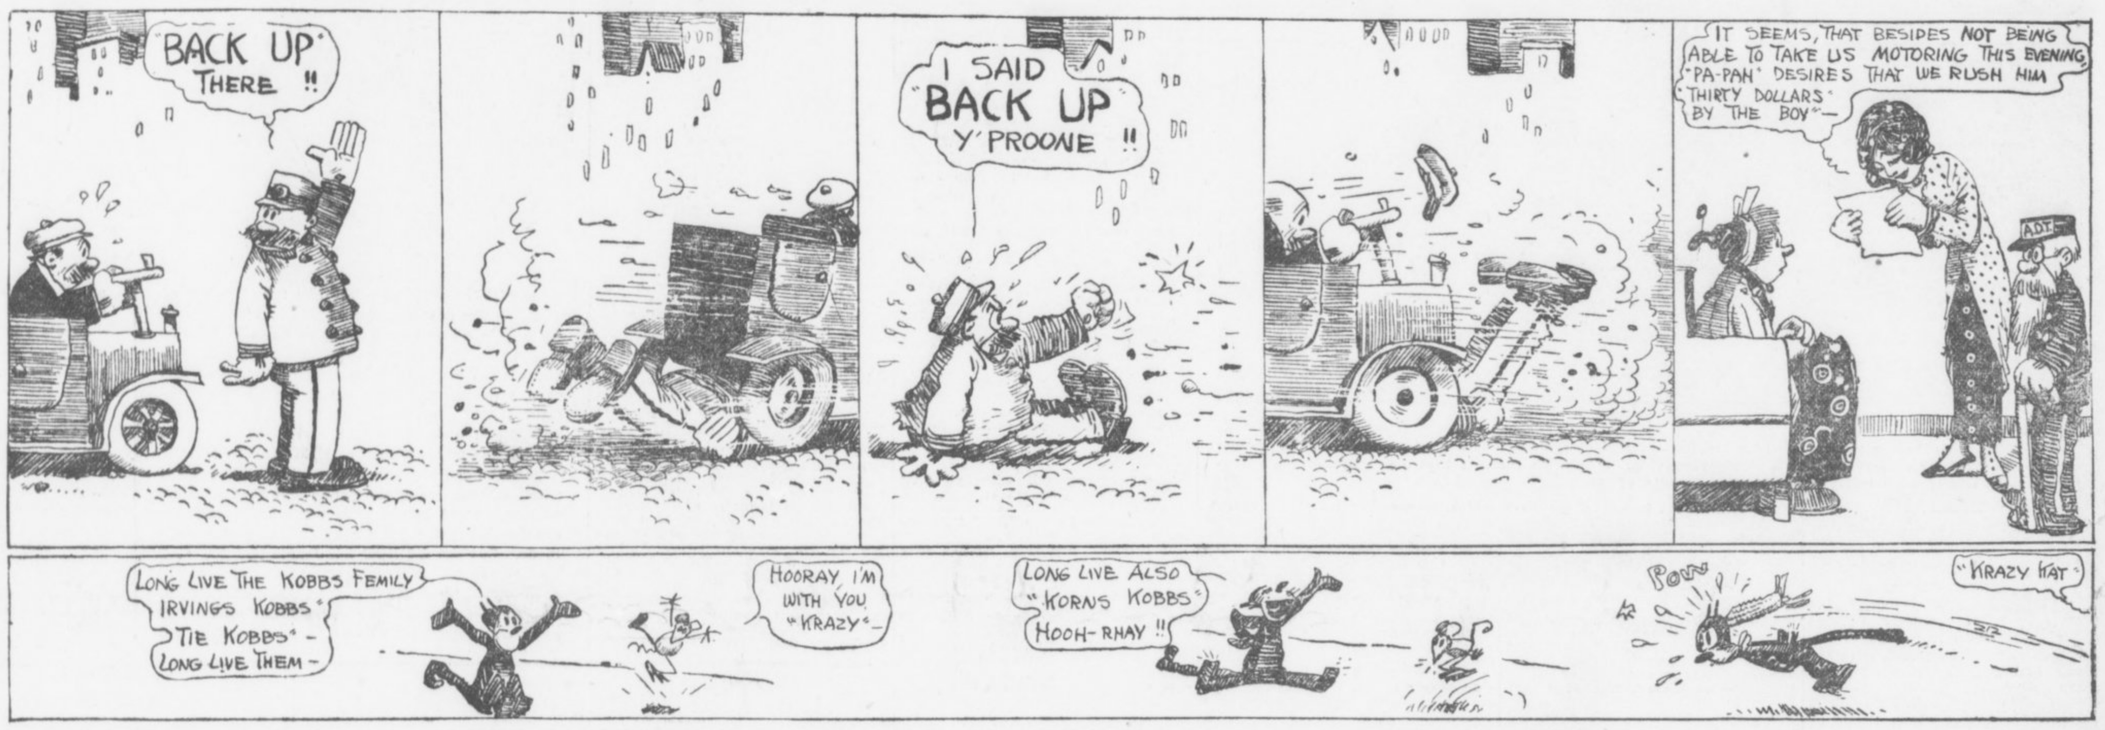
The Old Man Obeys Orders, Too Well



Dundee Faces Hard Task July 15

Murphy Is Tough Boy to Beat

By Left Hook.

Here is a classy boy, one of the top-notch featherweights of America, who, after splitting a draw decision with the world's champion of that division, voluntarily steps into the lightweight grade and invites trouble from the 133-pound battlers. And he is sure to find it.

Dundee chased Johnnie Kilbane around the Vernon ring until both were leg weary. As a reward for his agressiveness the Italian was given a draw. There was no argument, but that of the two, Dundee was the most willing to make a fight.

Following this affair Kilbane went back on the easy money trail after men like Fox and Jimmy Walsh. Dundee, to hold the respect of the public, announced that he would pass up the featherweights as a lot of tame and mediocre boxers, and jump into the lightweight division among a few real fighters.

There is little doubt what this move increased the popularity of the little Italian, but it was a step backward, according to the way the over-managed boxer of to-day is handled, harking back to the days when a man signed a set of articles first and asked about the weight and reputation of his opponent afterwards.

As evidence of his good faith Dundee agreed to take on Ad Wolgast, a fighter from his heart out. Wolgast's broken hand caused the match to be called off at a time when both boys were putting in their last training licks.

* * *

DUNDEE then signed to box "Chicago" Jack White, with the understanding that the winner is to meet "Harlem" Tommy Murphy, the vicious veteran who recently beat Wolgast.

Dundee defeated White in twenty rounds and is now ready to start training for his twenty-round set-to with Tommy Murphy. Before the latter battle Dundee will taken on Tommy Dixon, July 4, but should have little trouble in defeating Jimmy Hurst's protege.

The Murphy battle, however, should prove one tough scrap for Dundee. The Harlemite has met the toughest lightweights in the game to-day and is really in line for a match with Ritchie. Many of the coast critics let out an awful howl when Rivers was given first chance at the title, claiming that Murphy was entitled to the match.

* * *

MURPHY'S latest achievement was a twenty-round victory over Ad Wolgast, but he has also defeated such stars as Owen Moran and Frankie Burns, besides giving McFarland a hard battle for twenty rounds.

Should Dundee manage to beat Murphy, no one in the world will be able to overlook him as a lightweight contender. But the task seems a difficult one. Dundee will be giving away about ten pounds in weight and it looks at this distance as if the extra poundage will be an awful handicap for Johnny. However, fighters of the Dundee type should be admired and he will not lack for admirers when he steps into the ring with Murphy.

Riders Will Dress in Asbestos Fireproof Togs for 'Dromers

THE riders out at the local Motordrome lie awake nights trying to think of something they can put over on somebody else. They are always getting something new with this end in view. For instance, Morty Graves has sent off for a new motorcycle, Georges Renel has bought a lot of new parts for his motorcycle, Manager Noon Hudson has another suit of clothes, Harry Swartz has a new wife and Jack Prince always has a fresh shower up his sleeve that he lets out on race nights.

But it has remained for George Lockner to spring the newest thing—an asbestos suit of clothes. He has wired to St. Louis for one and expects it here in time for use at Wednesday night's races.

These asbestos suits were introduced by a St. Louis rider, Brownie Carslake, and are being rapidly adopted by the other riders.

When They Are Needed.

In motordrome racing there are two reasons why asbestos suits are needed.

One reason is that the blooming motorcycles, fed enormous quantities of gasoline and spitting fire like an old-time dragon, are constantly catching on fire. Naturally, this would be bad enough under ordinary circumstances, but the awful complication arises from the fact that they usually touch themselves off while going at very high speed. The machines are not supplied with brakes and the rider must always choose between sticking on and getting his clothes on fire or falling off and breaking his neck. Harry Lewis, one of the riders at the local Motordrome, caught on fire the afternoon of the opening meet, and only the presence of the riders and a battery of fire extinguishers made it possible to put him out. With an asbestos suit this danger is removed. A man may cook a bit while his machine is slowing down, but he will not blaze.

Useful in a Spill.

The other need for an asbestos suit comes when a fall occurs. Going at high speed, a man is likely to slide a hundred feet or so over the surface of the track. Frequently the friction of such a slide sets the clothes ablaze, and the spectacle of a man on fire—maybe with a lot of bones broken, too—is not uncommon at motordromes. With asbestos suits this danger is removed. No matter what the friction is, the clothes can not catch on fire. As the riders' suits soon become impregnated with oil and are occasionally dashed with gasoline, they are highly inflammable, and the fear of being burned to death will probably drive all the local riders to the asbestos-suit stunt.

Plans are going forward at the local 'drome for the meeting Wednesday night. The program, which was rained out on Saturday night will be carried through at that time, with the Mayor Woodward Sweepstakes as the feature.

The Pirates came up from behind in the eighth in their game against the Reds yesterday and pounded out three runs, which gave them a 5 to 4 victory.

The Naps and the Tigers divided a double-header yesterday, the Detroit aggregation winning the first game in the tenth and the Naps romping home with the second game.

The Tigers by scoring one run in the sixth inning of yesterday's game broke the string of unscored innings which Gregg, of the Naps, was compiling. Up to that time he had pitched 32 innings without yielding a run.

In the second game, Ed Walsh allowed the Browns nine hits and Wellman and Allison allowed the White Sox only four, but the White Sox hits came at opportune times, while Walsh kept the St. Louis hits so scattered that no runs resulted.

Coulon Meets Burns At Kenosha To-night

Much interest is being displayed in the affair, as this is to be the fourth meeting between the pair. Ever since Johnny was given a hair-line decision over Burns at New Orleans in twenty rounds on February 15, 1912, there has been a great deal of rivalry between the boys.

The other bouts between the bantams were no decision affairs and critics usually agreed that they were about even up. As this will be Coulon's recally first tough scrap in over a year fans are anxiously awaiting the outcome. Johnny is billed to meet Kid Williams in a twenty-round go on July 29 and his showing tonight will have much to do in the way the fans bet their money in the title set-to. Coulon rules a 10 to 9 favorite over the Jersey City boy.

FOXEN SAID TO ADMIT HE 'LAID DOWN'

By Percy H. Whiting.

OF course you can't believe all the second-hand, near-beer saloon information that is floating around, but one bit of rumor has drifted in that is worth publishing.

This information is that Bill Foxen admits that he "laid down" on the Atlanta club and purposely played for his release.

We didn't hear this first hand. We aren't on Bill's speaking list. But it came pretty straight and it sounds pretty reasonable.

* * *

THE story is that Foxen admits he played for his release here. He is said to attempt to justify himself with the following statement:

"I got in bad with the Atlanta club because I wouldn't go out boozing with the players. They got sore on me and made it as hard as they could. Under the laws of organized baseball there was only one way to get away. That was by losing games. So I lost games." That may not be the word-for-word admission, but that is probably about the gist of it.

* * *

CASES where players have been accused of "laying down" are plentiful enough in the annals of baseball, but this is perhaps the first time on record where a player has admitted his guilt in the matter.

While nobody in Atlanta feels inclined to excuse Foxen in this matter, it is a fact that the rules of baseball make it pretty hard for a player who is thrown into a team made up of souses and soreheads. He must play with them, "lay down" or leave baseball.

* * *

OF course the only manly thing to do is to see it through, no matter what the conditions are on the team. The public has no love for a quitter. The Atlanta public shows that fact every time Foxen visits the city—and always will as long as he comes here.

Their only regret is that they can not get a shot occasionally at the other member of the hold-out sketch, Pitcher Frock. They would dearly dote on giving him an occasional good time.

Every match in the tournament was a moderately hard one for the winner. But in the second round he faced Hamilton Block in one of the greatest struggles ever witnessed on the East Lake course. Three of the four matches in the second round went into extra holes.

BOXING
News of the Ring Game

Four important bouts will be staged at Vernon, Cal., within the next five weeks. On June 24, Eddie Campi tackles Charley Ledoux; on July 4, Leach Cross meets Bud Anderson; on July 15, Tommy Murphy swaps punches with Johnny Dundee, and while on July 29 Johnny Coulon and Kid Williams fight for the bantamweight championship of the world.

* * *

Hammond, Ind., fight fans are rejoicing to-day over a declaration by Sheriff Whitaker that he would not interfere with boxing matches so long as the limit does not exceed ten rounds. It was the occasion of the home-coming of Jimmy Clabby, who recently defeated Eddie McGoorty. Clabby was banqueted on his return from Butte, Mont., where the bout took place.

* * *

Chicago fans are having a big laugh on Harry Trendall, the St. Louis lightweight. Recently Trendall was matched to meet Charlie White, but dodged the match when he heard of Charlie's hitting power, and instead he took on Eddie Murphy. The latter handed Trendall a neat lacing. White and Murphy are great friends and usually chum together when both are in Chicago.

* * *

* * *

The ringside weights for the return match between Jimmy Duffy and Jack Britton at Buffalo Monday night will be 136 pounds. The raise in the scale comes from Danny Morgan, Britton's manager.

* * *

Gunboat Smith has been made a 2 to 1 favorite over George Rodel, who meet at New York on June 27. The two heavyweights met about four months ago and, although Smith floored the Boer five times, he was unable to put him away.

* * *

Frankie Burns should give Johnny Coulon a tough battle when the two bantams hook up at Kenosha, Wis., on Monday night. Burns has met Johnny on several occasions and has always given a good account of himself.

* * *

Joe Golden, manager of Joe Thomas, is now a boxing promoter. Golden has matched "Wildcat" Ferns and Bobbie Dibbons for a 10-round bout to be staged in Pelican Park, New Orleans, on July 4. The welterweights are scheduled to go ten rounds.

* * *

Billy Nolan and Willie Ritchie have split. The fighter and manager could not agree on financial terms, and Willie has now decided to handle his own business for the present.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 23.—The Giants made a great finish to their Western trip, and I am now convinced that the New York club will win the pennant again. The Phillies appear to be gone, and I do not see any other team on the horizon or the schedule that can stop us.

What tripped up the Philadelphia club was what I had anticipated would stop it all through the season. The pitching staff cracked, and the rest of the team caved behind it. Both Seaton and Alexander, the two men who had carried most of the burden of the pitching so far in the race, were overworked, and the strain told. There are few pitchers who can appear three times a week, one week after another, and get away with it, and these two attempted to do just that. The strain of maintaining the lead also hurt Philadelphia's chances of grabbing the pennant. The Quakers are not altogether out of the fight yet, but I do not think they are the club which the Giants will be forced to beat now. If we once pull them behind, they are liable to go into several parts.

* * *

IT is hard to tell just which team will make the going for us from this point in the journey to its finish. For a long time, it had been my notion that Pittsburg would give the Giants the fight this season. The Pirates looked like one of the best baseball teams I had ever seen when they wound up the season last fall, and they should have been stronger this year. Baseball is certainly a funny thing.

* * *

THE Giants have just returned from one of the most successful Western trips ever made by a ball club. The only one which I have ever made since going out with a professional ball team that even approached it was the final swing around the circuit in 1911, when we grabbed the pennant in the last jump to the wire. On that junket we took eighteen out of twenty-two games, I think. We had to do it then, and we practically had to do it this time if the Giants were to beat Philadelphia back and stay in the race. We were all sitting around the lobby of the hotel in Cincinnati one night last week.

"It looks as if we have caught the Quakers," remarked McGraw.

"I did not expect that they would break as soon as this," volunteered "Larry" Doyle. "After they grabbed that series in Pittsburg it seemed as if they ought to have had renewed confidence."

"It was the cracking of their pitching staff and the spurt of the Giants that did it," answered McGraw. "When a team has been out ahead all season and is still playing good ball, but finds the second runner creeping up on them slowly in spite of their best efforts, it is just heartbreaking. That is one reason why I am none too particular about my team shooting out in front from the first. Every manager must count on at least one slump some time each year. We got ours in the spring. The Phillies are taking theirs now, and are liable never to come back.

"They've got some good pitchers," said Doyle.

"The pitching staff is all right, but overworked," replied McGraw. "Wait until they meet that string of stored-up double headers coming now with the pitching corps in its present run-down condition. The rest of the team I never could see. I never figured them as the pennant winners without wonderful pitching and luck. Baseball would be on the down grade if a club of the caliber of Philadelphia could take the championship in the National League."

JOE RIVERS STARTS HARD GRIND FOR RITCHIE BOUT

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23.—Joe Rivers, who has been at the Ocean Beach for the past few days doing light training, started to work in earnest yesterday. The Los Angeles lightweight put on the gloves in the Seal Rock gymnasium and surprised those who dropped into the big pavilion with his speed and cleverness.

Frank Carter, the welterweight that Manager Levy brought from Los Angeles, was his sparring partner, and the pair went three rounds. Rivers warmed up with four rounds of shadow boxing and was ready to go at a fast clip when Carter stepped into the inclosure. Joe stepped around the Mexican in lively fashion and showered blows on Carter.

CROSS AND LEDOUX TRAIN BEFORE A LARGE CROWD

LOS ANGELES, June 23.—A large crowd stood a 60-minute sun broil for the privilege of seeing Charley Ledoux, of Paris, France, and Leach Cross, of New York, box two rounds in the Vernon ring—and it was worth it, too.

Ledoux, blue-tighted to his neck, began operations with the punching bag. By actual count he landed on the leather just eleven times in nine minutes. Cross, attired in a cherry-colored makeup, stepped on the platform and made the bag beg for mercy.

RITCHIE IS IMPROVING; TO MAKE WEIGHT EASILY

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23.—Willie Ritchie demonstrated two facts in his first Sunday workout ahead of the Fourth of July bout. One is that his style has improved considerably over the days he was battling for recognition and the other is that he will not have the slightest difficulty in the world making 134 ringside and still show up strong. A good afternoon at the beach gave Joe Rivers one of the biggest crowds that has ever packed the pavilion to see boxers in training.

If the Suffs insist on so shoving in their interference it may be necessary to equip English race horses with fenders.

Or, as Bill Hallowell suggests, why not arm each jockey with a lance?

Even the worm will turn, as Confucius once remarked. For instance, the Pirates vary the monotony by winning a game with a margin of one run.

An expert informs us that the Tigers will be a strong team by the time August arrives. Therein they differ from the Browns, who show their greatest strength in December.

One is led to look askance at Mr. McGoorty's statement that the referee became excited and gave the decision to the wrong man. How could any human being become excited over a fight between Messrs. McGoorty and Clabby?

It was expected that these games would permit the staging of a little side issue battle between Ty Cobb and Joe Jackson, the sluggers of the league. But they did not. Cobb, because of a lame leg, was forced to retire in the third inning of the first game, and Jackson "sassed" an umpire a few innings later and was wigwagged out of the game.

Atlantans in Tennis Tourney in Orleans

This cup was originally presented by the Atlanta Athletic Club. It has been won twice by Conrad B. Doyle, of Washington, and Dr. Nat Thornton, of Atlanta, and once each by T. R. Pell, of New York; R. C. Hunt, of California, and C. Y. Smith, of Atlanta.

Atlanta will be well represented at the meet. Carleton Smith, the present title holder, will go to defend his title. His partner in the doubles, Dr. Nat Thornton, will also attend.

B. M. Grant, Charles A. Sisson, E. S. Mansfield and E. V. Carter, Jr., are some of the others who will attend.

Smith and Mansfield will be paired in the doubles, as will Grant and Thornton. The other players will participate in the singles.

Writers Defend Play Barred in Germany

BERLIN, June 23.—The suppression of Hauptmann's "Festspiel" by the authorities of Breslau, because of the complaint made by the Crown Prince and many citizens that it gave too much praise to the French and not enough to the Prussian heroes, has caused angry protests from many literary men and others who are prominent in politics.

The Authors' Protective League entered a formal protest against what is termed the "brutal" prohibition of the play.

Granted Insurance After Lung Trouble

As many cases of Lung Trouble start with a cold or a cough, the best advice that can be given is to get rid of the cold or cough as quickly as possible. Otherwise more serious troubles are likely to follow. If the medicines you are now taking do not bring relief, try Eckman's Alterative, the remedy for Throat and Lung Troubles, which has stood the test of time. Investigate this case:

257 Dean St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Dear Sirs: About a year and a half ago my health rapidly failed until at the end of six months my weight had fallen to 129 pounds. I was troubled with night sweats, a severe cough and was very weak. About this time I consulted a physician, who told me my lungs were affected. Not satisfied, I went to another doctor, who, after examining me, said that I was in the first stages of consumption. At this point I started to take Eckman's Alterative. The night sweats stopped almost immediately, my cough became looser and gradually disappeared. My weight is now 142 pounds and my physician has pronounced me perfectly sound—which, together with the fact that I have been accepted by two different insurance companies for insurance, makes me sure of my entire recovery by Eckman's Alterative."

(Affidavit) W. E. GEE.

Eckman's Alterative has been proved by many years' test to be most effectious in case of severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all of Jacobs' Drug Stores and other leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

GRADY HOSPITAL BARS OUTSIDE PATIENTS

Dr. W. B. Summerall, superintendent of the Grady Hospital, Monday issued a warning to non-residents of Atlanta that they must not send patients to the Grady Hospital. His announcement was a result of a most pathetic case of a young man in the last stages of an infectious disease, who was sent here from Warwick, Ga., by public subscription. Dr. Summerall is preparing to return him to his native town.

"The hospital is too small to accommodate legitimate cases," he declared. "We have been turning down about twelve applications a day from citizens of Atlanta. We certainly can not throw open our doors to persons outside. Yet in the last three months eighteen persons, hopelessly diseased, have been dumped on Atlanta from nearby towns, some of them outside the State. Some persons seem to think they can rid themselves of their unpleasant obligations by sending these helpless ones to Atlanta and forcing us to treat them.

Will Send Outsiders Back.

"We have sent each of the eighteen persons back to their homes, and we will continue this policy."

Early Monday the hospital was notified that there was a sick man at the Terminal Station. They responded to the call and found him, Ernest Harris, of Warwick, Ga., hopelessly ill.

The ambulance surgeon ordered him to Grady, although the hospital has no adequate facilities. Harris was too sick to be left on the streets, so he was taken to the clinic room and there given attention.

Harris told Dr. Summerall that he had had no medical treatment for four months and that he had not been able to get a bath for a month.

Doctors Turned Him Away.

He said there were two physicians in his town, but they had refused to treat him because he had no money. Finally, his condition became so wretched, he said, that a public subscription was taken and he was given a ticket and put on the train for Atlanta.

Dr. Summerall conferred with City Warden Thomas Evans and a railroad ticket back to Warwick has been obtained for Harris. Dr. Summerall declared it was the duty of every community, as long as it was able, to provide for its own mendicants.

"We need six times our present capacity to take care of the negroes in Atlanta who need treatment and four times as much capacity for the white people," said Dr. Summerall.

Hearer Dies as Text Is Read by Pastor

William B. Maner, age 65 years, died from heart failure while attending services at the Collins Springs Baptist Church Sunday morning. Rev. H. G. Mitchell, the pastor, had just announced the text of his sermon when Mr. Maner slipped down in his seat.

The deceased was well known in Atlanta, especially among railroad men. A wife and eight children survive him. Funeral services were held Monday morning at the residence, 6 Guyton Street.

Critics Rave, but All London Does Tango

LONDON, June 23.—Despite the bitterness of its critics the tango apparently has come to stay and the Argentine tango and the Boston, in all the newest elaborations, will be danced in the most fashionable ballrooms.

Mme. Van Dyck, one of London's leading dancing instructors, who has just returned from Paris, said:

"The prejudice which may have existed among society people regarding new dances is certainly disappearing."

ICE CREAM POISONS 26.

ELMIRA, N. Y., June 23.—Twenty-six school children of Mays Mill, near Penn Yan, were poisoned by eating ice cream frozen at home for a school picnic. Physicians worked all night on the cases.

An appeal for decency in life and art was made by the Rev. Dr. Dunbar Ogden at the Central Presbyterian Church Sunday night. The extreme fashion of woman's attire of the present day was declared by him to be a menace to the morals and the nude in art was even more vicious.

Dr. Ogden referred to a number of local instances to illustrate his sermon. Talking of the moving picture film, "Quo Vadis," he said: "We have the illustration of how Rome threw decency to the winds as it indulged in bacchanalian revelry. History tells us of how Rome tottered and fell. Our present trend is toward the moral disintegration which destroyed Rome."

Referring to the recent exhibition of art in the show windows of Atlanta stores, he declared their exhibition to be a crime, and that punishment as such should be meted out to the exhibitors.

Jamaica Is Worried by U. S. Banana Tax

KINGSTON, JAMAICA, June 23.—The receipt of a cablegram from Washington announcing that America will impose a tax on Jamaica bananas caused consternation among the planters here.

The banana industry is the principal one of Jamaica, and as most of the fruit goes to the United States the tax will be a serious blow to it.

It was announced Jamaica will establish a quarantine against Hayti, where bubonic plague is raging.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Keith Bill at the Forsyth.

The headline feature of the bill of vaudeville at the Forsyth this week is Gertrude Vanderbilt, the ever-popular little star of musical comedy. She and George Moore hold a position in vaudeville that has never been reached by any other singing and dancing duo.

The big extra added feature will be "Ideal," the champion lady swimmer and diver, who, Professor John Aldredge, of Columbia University, declares to be the most perfectly formed woman in the world. "Ideal" is going to give an exhibition of fancy swimming and diving in a tank pool sunk in the Forsyth stage.

Other features are the Six Musical Cuttys, pretty Minnie Allen, Dee O'Neil, comedian; Dorothy Richmond and her company, in a sketch, and the Four Hayama Japs, gymnasts. Matinee this afternoon.

"Quo Vadis" at the Grand.

"Quo Vadis," witnessed by thousands at the Grand at daily matinee and night exhibitions last week, commences its second week at the big theater with matinee and night performances to-day. The second week of the engagement of the pictures was arranged to take care of the great demand for seats from people who could not get accommodations last week.

The 10,000 feet of Italian film, in three acts and eight scenes, makes an entertainment continuing two and a quarter hours, and without a single second that fails to interest. The picture is all that has been said for it and more, too.

"The Merry Whirl" at the Bijou.

This week's attraction for the Bijou gives promise of being one of the most interesting and pleasing of the summer season. It is called "The Merry Whirl." There is splendid opportunity for good comedy work and the introduction of catchy musical numbers, in which the chorus takes a prominent part.

"The Merry Whirl" is said to be one of the most pretentious productions that will be seen this season at the Bijou.

Matinees will be given every afternoon at 3 o'clock, except Monday and Saturday. On these days the matinees will take place at 2:30 and 4. Night performances, as usual, at 7:30 and 9.

The Sunday American goes everywhere all over the South. If you have anything to sell The Sunday American is "The Market Place of the South." The Sunday American is the best advertising medium.

CONTESTANTS IN PONY RACE LET CHANCES SLIP

Many Votes To Be Had for the Asking—Energetic Ones Have Better Opportunity.

Every day persons come into The Georgian and American offices and order the paper sent to this or that address, saying nothing about votes. If these persons had been approached by one of the boys or girls in the pony contest the candidate would have been rewarded by a good batch of votes.

This only goes to show that votes are to be had for the asking.

Mail orders from the country, too, show that the boys and girls outside the city are not getting every subscriber they could.

Only Hustlers Win.

Contestants should remember that anyone will feel kindly toward the boy or girl asking them to subscribe for The Georgian and American. Whoever subscribes gets his money's worth, and the candidate gets the votes.

The 22 ponies and the 44 watches are going to be given away. Some one is going to win them. They will go to the contestants who show the greatest amount of activity, who use the greatest amount of intelligent effort.

There is no notch into which a weak, vacillating candidate will fit.

Optimism Big Help.

The idle dreamers and "wishful" candidates will gravitate to the bottom just as surely as a stone sinks in water, or a short-winded man falls behind in a foot race.

Optimism helps every time, and the candidate who believes he can get votes will get them.

Remember, the bonus offer for clubs of five still is in effect. If you need a subscription to complete a club, tell people. They will be just that much more ready to help you.

Campanini Is Given Applause in Paris

PARIS, June 23.—A Beethoven-Verdi-Saint-Saens festival took place at the Paris Opera House under direction alternately of Maestro Campanini, new manager of the Chicago Opera House, and Saint-Saens.

The chief feature was a finished performance of Verdi's "Requiem," conducted by Campanini. He was warmly applauded.

Wilson's Daughter To Sing for Social; To Inspect Prisons

SUPERIOR, WIS., June 23.—Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of President Wilson, on Thursday will take part in a social center entertainment to be given in Madison, Wis. She will sing several songs and dance with the members of the Social Center Club.

Governor Sulzer of New York has just appointed Miss Wilson a member of a commission to investigate the affairs and management of the prisons and reformatories of the State.

U. S. Converted to Need of Headlines

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Salesmen have been making a practice of displaying "pure food" decisions to customers, claiming products of rival concerns were condemned, when as a matter of fact the foods had been declared "O. K." To prevent this, a "headline" will be put over the top of every decision hereafter, stating clearly whether the manufacturer or the Government won.

Heretofore "it was frequently necessary to read the entire notice of judgment in order to learn whether a penalty had been entered or the defendant acquitted," the Department of Agriculture admits in a statement issued to-day. Salesmen took advantage of the average dealer's unwillingness to dig out the real meaning of decisions.

Airman Fined for Aeroplane Collision

PARIS, June 23.—A verdict was delivered in an action brought by two airmen, Captains Dickson and Thomas, to determine who was responsible for an aviation accident in Milan in 1910 when two aeroplanes were in collision.

The judge decided that Dickson was to blame and ordered him to pay $1,000 damages to Thomas and $2,000 damages to the makers of the aeroplanes.

Making Service a Reality!

Advertising SERVICE—or talking SERVICE—or promising SERVICE—or intending to give SERVICE, is about as far as it gets in many instances. Using the word SERVICE seriously involves an obligation easier spoken of than executed. WE HAVE MADE SERVICE A REALITY. CORONER SEEKS VITAL ORGANS OF PAINTER

JACKSONVILLE, June 23.—The fight over the possession of the vital organs of the late Edward Okle Painter reached a tense pitch to-day when Coroner C. D. Abbott left for Baltimore to contest the injunction preventing the removal of the organs to Jacksonville. The injunction was requested by the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company, one of whose policies Painter held to the amount of $20,000, and which has been particularly active in the investigation of incidents surrounding the death of the fertilizer man. The company has announced that it desires a further investigation.

Coroner Wants Organs.

Coroner Abbott has been given until Wednesday to show cause why the injunction should not be granted. He said to-day that he would conduct personally the fight in Baltimore for the possession of the remains, presenting his claims as the only person entitled to conduct an official autopsy. He was accompanied by Deputy Sheriff L. R. Haddock.

The departure of the Coroner and the detention of the vital organs in Baltimore necessitated the postponement of the inquest over Painter's body which had been set for to-day. It probably will be held Thursday or Friday immediately upon the return of the officers from Baltimore.

Grave Still Guarded.

Meanwhile deputies, under Sheriff Dowling, are maintaining their nightly vigil at Painter's grave at the insistent request of Mrs. Painter. The widow seems obsessed by the idea that ghouls have plotted to steal the body, her friends declare.

Sees Female Revolt In Central America

NEW YORK, June 23.—Mrs. Marie Hubbard, the Costa Rican wife of an American merchant in Brussels, before sailing for San Jose was anxious to know if there would be many American men on board. She said she desired to travel with Americans only.

"Every woman in Central and South America wants to marry an American and live in the United States," declared Mrs. Hubbard, "for in this country she is free. There will be a revolution in Central America some day, and it will be led by the women."

DRY GOODS TRADE GOOD; COLLECTIONS ARE NORMAL

"General dry goods business for the past week has shown up well in comparison with the figures for the same period a year ago, with collections about normal. On future business the average sales per man have been higher than for any corresponding week since 1907, and they report that buyers are purchasing more freely than is usual at this season.

"Retailers are doing good business on all sheer summer fabrics and wearing apparel. Wholesale stocks are becoming well cleaned up in preparation for inventory, there being excellent response to the advertising of special offerings.

"The shipping department has been kept fairly busy taking care of immediate orders, the greater percentage of which were received from nearby States, although Eastern business placed through our New York office has been heavy."

COTTON DROPS AS LONGS LIQUIDATE

NEW YORK, June 23.—Influenced by weak Liverpool cables, the cotton market opened easier to-day with first prices at a net decline of 4 to 7 points from Saturday's final. Sentiment was more bearish than for some time past, owing to the dullness of Liverpool summer positions. Weather conditions over Sunday were favorable; also crop advices. However, the buying was rather general on and after the call, resulting in prices rallying some 2 to 5 points in most active positions from the initial level.

During the forenoon the selling became general and looked as if it came from the same source as Saturday, causing the market to weaken, with prices declining some 7 to 13 points from the previous close. The buying was very light and scattered.

During the afternoon session the market was quiet with very little trading. The selling pressure was in less evidence, while some brokers representing the larger spot houses were noticeable buyers. This class of buying caused prices to rally a few points from the early low level, but the market closed steady with prices at a net decline of 4 to 11 points from the final quotations of Saturday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, June 23.—Weather conditions continued favorable over Sunday with a nice rainfall in the Atlantics. Some good scattered showers in the central States and west Texas; temperatures normal; no excesses, warm nights, indications are for partly cloudy to fair and warm weather; some scattered showers.

Washington predicts a week of fair, warm weather—just as needed. Liverpool is poor in all departments; futures out 2 points lower than due; spots 5 points down; sales only 6,000 bales. Political news continues unfavorable and the repeated disappointments at the failure to arrive of peace is bound to work itself a further depression.

The press reports a congestion of old crop, Egyptian cotton in the warehouses in Alexandria with an apparent falling off in the demand. A feature of the spinning situation, especially in America, is the dullness in fine yarns.

This following report from Canton, Miss., shows the active fight made against the boll weevil: "The report says that $250 was distributed in prizes; 450,000 weevils were brought in, representing almost one-tenth of the weevils caught in the county."

This market opened about 7 points lower and weakened steadily. December selling to 11.45 in the second hour. New York reported some influential selling. Consumption prospects affected by the unfavorable political and financial situation is the principal bearish argument.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 23.—J. M. Anderson says: "The volume of trade today was only moderate, the buying and selling was pretty evenly divided, there was selling by the Wall Street interests, who were prominent on that side on Saturday, but a good scattered demand for contracts was found on the slight decline. Liverpool was a buyer and some of the Saturday sellers covered. Weather continues very favorable and local sentiment favors a further decline.

Texas wires: "Reports from all over State most promising; in fact, present conditions so perfect that anything to happen must be detrimental, as there is practically no room for improvement. There are reliable prospects for heavy new crop movement from south Texas in August and some even second half of July. European business so far very unsatisfactory; no demand."

The census report on Thursday, July 3, at noon, Eastern time, will give acreage of cotton this year and condition of crop to June 25.

Liverpool announces that Cotton Exchange will close at noon Saturdays and open at 11 a. m. on Mondays during June, July and August. The market will be closed July 11 and 12.

* * *

The Memphis Commercial-Appeal has the following on the condition of the cotton crop for the week:

"The weather of the past week was very favorable for the growth of cotton over the entire belt. Temperatures were high, with good showers in west and clear skies in the remainder of the belt—just the kind of weather needed. The plant made good progress, although most of its energy was coupled into forming the check placed upon it by the cool weather of the previous week, and for this reason its actual advancement was more real than apparent. As a result of the cool weather, the plant over the entire belt is a bit small, although probably slightly larger than last year, but it is making a bushy growth and shows the health that accompanies a good tap-root and favorable soil conditions.

"Good rains in Texas and portions of Oklahoma supplied the one thing needed in these States for the best growth of the plant. The excellent cultivation that has been a pronounced characteristic of the crop all season was maintained throughout the week and soil is perhaps better worked than ever before at this season. The rains and the fact that farmers were in the wheat harvest allowed some grass to gain headway in in portions of Texas, but the situation is one that a few days' work will soon cure. The other western States, the central valley, Alabama and nearly all of Georgia are nearly 100 per cent with soil in excellent condition. In the Carolinas and a small portion of Georgia a few days more of warm, open weather are needed to further cultivate and the growth of the plant. Arkansas and the central valley are beginning to need rain, but no material damage will result should dry weather continue for another week. The one complaint reported was of boll weevil in Mississippi and Louisiana and isolated sections of Texas and Arkansas. There is a big crop of the pest in Mississippi and Louisiana, but farmers are fighting them under the direction of Government experts and are confident that in most localities they have them whipped."

* * *

* * *

Washington's forecast for week: "Warm and generally fair weather with probably rain coming week in the Southern States; such showers as may occur will be local and widely scattered."

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Hayden, Stone & Co.: Sentiment is now very conservative and it will require lower prices to bring about aggressive buying.

Logan & Bryan: Fewer moderate purchases on further recessions.

Miller & Co.: Think the bears have again sold themselves into a trap.

STOCKS RECOVER SATURDAY'S LOSS

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 23.—The oversold condition of the stock market made it very sensitive to buying at the opening to-day, with the result that prices of nearly all the standard issues jumped upward.

Canadian Pacific opened 1¾ higher, but profit-taking developed which carried away ¾ of the advance. United States Steel common began at a gain of ½, but at the end of a half hour the upturn had been increased to 1 point. Among the other advances were Lehigh Valley, 1¼; Erie, 1st preferred, 1½; St. Paul, 1¼; Chesapeake and Ohio, 1; American Telegraph and Telephone, ⅜; American Can, ⅝; Amalgamated Copper, ⅞; Reading, 1¼; Southern Pacific, ¼, and Union Pacific, 1.

Missouri Pacific began with a fractional loss, but recovered. Baltimore and Ohio was unchanged at the outset, but later lost ½ on selling pressure. American Car and Foundry lost ¼, then recovered. Much of the buying represented covering by board room shorts. At the end of half an hour the buying movement had diminished.

The curb market was steady.

There was more liquidation on the London Stock Exchange at the opening. Dealings in Americans in London were small. Canadian Pacific in London was firm.

The strong tone which prevailed at the opening was maintained through the forenoon with issues making gains of 2 or more points. Union Pacific was the most active of the railroad issues, advancing 2⅞ to 144¾, but an excellent advance was made in Canadian Pacific, 1¾ points to 216⅞. Reading continued on the upward movement, reaching 157¼, a net gain of 2¼. Copper was up ⅜ from the opening, a net gain of 1⅜. Steel, Northern Pacific, Lehigh Valley and all other leading stocks after slight recessions made worthy gains.

Call money loaned at 2 per cent.

After the upturn around noon, the market again sold off in the last hour and prices shaded from the best. Steel sold around 51½, while Union Pacific went to 142⅞, for a loss of 1¼ from the midday level. Later, however, Union Pacific and Lehigh Valley sold down to 143½ for the loss of 1 point from the noon price. Other prices just before the close were Amalgamated Copper 82⅝, American Smelting 61, Erie 23½, Baltimore and Ohio 92¼.

The market closed dull.

Corn closed 1c off and oats were 1@1¼c lower.

OPINION ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, June 23.—Bartlett, Frazier & Co.: Wheat—The weather map shows some precipitation in Canadian Northwest, but very little in the American Northwest. There does not seem much in news to cause any important change in values.

Corn—Since Saturday there have been good rains over the entire corn belt. Prices will doubtless be lower to-day, the extent of the decline depending on the volume of liquidation.

Oats—As in corn, the precipitation will doubtless be more or less of a depressing factor.

Provisions—General sentiment continues bullish, but an easier corn market may give us some decline.

Poultry, Pet and Live Stock

The Hen and Her Cost of Maintenance Versus the Cow

Interesting Facts and Figures Concerning Fowl and Beast—Note on Standard Revision Committee.

By a comparison of the intrinsic value of the individual hen and her cost of maintenance we find that, taking into consideration the value of each, the net profit from the hen exceeds that from the cow. Forty good laying hens are worth about the same as the average dairy cow, considered in the light of practical utility only. Forty good utility pullets given good, fair average treatment will give a profit for a year of at least $50 net, taken at a low estimate for price of eggs at that. If you would go to work and give them special or scientific care the proceeds would be largely increased. Now where is the average dairy cow (common stock), with average care and no more, that will yield anything like $50 after paying expenses of feed, etc.? I will venture the assertion that they will not net their owners more than half that amount. I make this assertion not for the discouragement of dairy interests in the South, not by any manner of means, for we need increased dairy in the South. There is ample room for both the poultry and dairy business, but let it be known by those who have been inclined to think slightly of the poultry part that it needs no overestimation at my hands. The little industrious hen is ready at any time to demonstrate her ability along these lines if only given half a chance for a living. Taken on land that is even too poor to make good grazing land poultry will do well on it, and if the droppings are properly cared for and used on land when the green stuff is raised, the land can soon be made to produce almost anything in the way of crops, at the same time you are reaping a handsome profit. You can not expect, however, that poultry will thrive without care. The trouble with poultry, therefore, is that it has been neglected. The every-day, old-fashioned farmer thinks the hen below his dignity and of little value, and for that reason he has not given her the care that other matters have received at his hands. I say old-fashioned farmers to distinguish them from the up-to-date kind who are fully aware of the value of the hen as compared with the cow and the hog. Now, friends, wake up and see which class of farmers you belong to, and if you find you are with the out-of-date kind I would advise you to lose no time in flopping over to the kind that are now in the lead. You will be in good company, as well as a money-making crowd. There is a saying that the hen will eat anything the hog will and produce much better results. I would like to see the farmers of the South raise more fowls, and more pork, too, for that matter; but give me the chickens.

Standard Revision Committee Meeting at Indianapolis in July.

There will be a meeting of the Standard Revision Committee appointed to revise the American Standard of Perfection for the 1915 edition at the Washington Hotel, Indianapolis, beginning Monday, July 7, and continuing as many days as is necessary to transact the business to come before that body. This is an important meeting to all poultrymen who are in any way interested in the breeding or exhibiting of thoroughbred poultry, no matter of what kind. The meeting was located at Indianapolis, one of the most central points, to accommodate poultrymen from the North, South or East and West. The wish of the committee is that all who are interested in having any changes made in the standard of their breed, or who may be interested in the admission of some new breed, will be on hand and personally lay their claims before the committee. Of course all correspondence will be given every consideration possible, but it's so much more satisfactory to be able to talk a matter over with the parties interested. It would be well for all who are interested to make an effort to meet the committee.

If you can not be there write your wishes to any member of the committee, who will lay your claim before the committee as a whole.

The members are Reese V. Hicks, Topeka, Kans., chairman; W. S. Russell, Ottumwa, Iowa; A. C. Smith, Waltham, Mass.; E. C. Branch, Lee Summit, Mo.; W. C. Pierce, Indianapolis, Ind.; J. H. Drevenstedt, Buffalo, N. Y.; Richard Oke, London, Ont.; F. J. Marshall, College Park, Ga.

Put in your complaints now rather than to growl about things when it is too late to do any good.

ONE of the greatest drawbacks to poultry-raising in the South is lice. They kill more little chicks than all the diseases combined, and when a hen is full of lice you can not expect her to lay many eggs. However, if you start in time you can get rid of these pests without very much trouble. Cleanliness is the main thing to consider; keep the house cleaned out, and once a week, at least, spray thoroughly all the roosts, dropping boards and nests with Pratt's or Conkey's Lice Liquid. They are both good preparations, and are guaranteed to kill. It is also a good plan to use lice powder; a 25c box of Conkey's Lice Powder will dust about 75 hens, and if used in connection with Lice Liquid you can soon have your flock free from these pests and you can soon see the good results from the increased egg production.

ARE your baby chicks lousy? Better examine them, and if they are get a package of Conkey's or Pratt's Head Lice Ointment, prepared especially for baby chicks; rub a little back of the head and under each wing; it will positively kill every louse and not injure the chick. 10c and 25c package.

IT IS NOT a good plan to feed much corn during the hot weather. A great many brands of Scratch Feeds that are offered have about three-fourths corn. The Red Comb brand has only a small percentage, and is by far the best Scratch Feed sold in this market. $2.25 per 100 pounds.

THIS is a good time to feed mash feed The Red Comb Mash is a perfectly balanced ration, just the thing for the hens, also fine for baby chicks. $2.25 per 100 pounds.

WE CARRY a full line of poultry yard supplies, drinking founts, food hoppers, grit and shell boxes, feed pans, in fact everything for the poultryman. Come see our line and get our prices before you buy.

WANTED—Accommodations for the Georgia legislators. They are coming in now and will be in session at the State Capitol from June 25 for FIFTY days. All of them are on the outlook for nice, comfortable and home-like places to eat their meals, or to board or to rent. Many of the places these legislators had last year did not suit them and they desire to find something better. All the legislators will read The Georgian—that's certain. Their attention will be called day after day to the "Legislators' Accommodations" column on the Want Ad pages of The Georgian. This will be a big advantage to you. So if you have eating or boarding places or have rooms, apartments or houses for rent, your ad should be under the "Legislators' Accommodations" heading. An investment of a few cents will keep your house full for the next three months. Phone or send in your ad at once.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Julius Brown Home Placed on Market

One of the finest of the old-time homes on the South Side, the Julius Brown place, at the northwest corner of Washington and Rawson Streets, has been put up for sale in the real estate market through a well-known real estate agency. A sign has been hung out.

The Brown mansion is a three-story brick affair with many rooms. Years ago it was famed for its collection of pictures and Oriental novelties brought from abroad by the owner. North of it is the lot owned and occupied by the late Governor Joseph E. Brown, which was bought recently from the English-Commercial High School.

Exchange of Properties.

The Edwin P. Ansley real estate agency has announced the sale of 442 South Pryor Street, 50 by 170 feet, a two-story, 14-room house, to Mr. Morehead for Mrs. Lucie C. Christian, for $6,800, and of a vacant lot, 25 by 95 feet, on Edgewood Avenue, 50 feet east of the northeast corner of Boulevard and Edgewood, for Mr. Morehead to Mrs. Christian, for $3,500. This was in the nature of a swap.

Sale of Cottage.

C. F. Coppedge has bought from J. F. Schilling a cottage on a 64 by 211 foot lot on Highland Avenue for $2,600, and expects later to improve with twin apartments. This is near Virginia Avenue. The deal was handled by I. W. Harrell, of the George P. Moore agency, who also has announced the sale to James K. Polk for a client a 100 by 220-foot vacant lot on the west side of Germania Avenue, west of Decatur, for $950 cash.

Residences for Peachtree.

Robert Zahner has begun work on a handsome residence which he will erect on the west side of Peachtree Road facing Lakeview Avenue, a few hundred feet south of the estate of Colonel Walter P. Andrews.

J. J. McGrath is finishing his attractive two-story home on Peachtree Road north of the south entrance to the Capital City Country Club.

Do You THINK While You Are Dressing?

The Time Used in Dressing Need Not Be Wasted

(Copyright.)

Man in the process of evolution has got rid of his fur, or feathers, and every day he must put on something to take the place of fur, and every night he must take off the artificial clothing.

One old man in the State of New Jersey killed himself and left a note saying that he died because he was so tired of buttoning and unbuttoning clothes.

There is apparently no greater waste of time than the time that is spent in dressing and undressing.

Bathing, shaving for men and powdering your nose for women, finding what you want to wear and putting it on—it is a tiresome part of every day.

BUT—

The hours in which a human being grows and develops mentally are the hours of solitude.

And a great many of us are practically never alone, except when we are getting dressed or undressed.

Sleep is a time of idleness—no growth there.

When we are with others we listen, learn perhaps, and debate, but we don't really THINK WITH INTENSITY.

The one thing that makes you more of a man than you were last year is intense, solitary thought.

Why not say to yourself: Since I must spend at least 330 hours a year in dressing and undressing, in bathing and shaving and looking for my collar button, I'll also spend that time IN THINKING?

Do you know how many men spend 300 hours a year in actual concentrated thought?

Not one in a thousand.

Suppose you see what you can make out of the hours lost in putting on and taking off the artificial fur and feathers and how much you can grow in the thinking.

Bacon felt that the mind was developed by reading, talking, and writing.

And he said:

Writing maketh an exact man.

Speaking maketh a ready man.

Reading maketh a full man.

Reading fills you with knowledge, speaking makes you quick or ready, writing makes you exact—true.

But more important than reading, writing or speaking IS THINKING.

The real YOU lives inside of your brain alone. And it works at its best when you are alone.

Aristotle taught Alexander the Great walking up and down with the young prince that he might become wise and strong at the same time—that is what they call the peripatetic method of intellectual development.

Why don't you educate yourself in thought as you march up and down from the bed to the bathroom, from the rough towel to the safety razor, and so on through the long, tiresome and usually wasted process of dress?

THE OLD ROMANS

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THEY strutted into the bar room,
Three boys—they were nothing more;
They ordered their drinks with grins and winks,
While their heels hit hard on the floor.
When one of them grew less frisky
And seemed half ready to sink,
Cried the others, "Aw, one more whisky!
That's a good old Roman drink!"

Then I thought of the real "Old Romans"
That I knew long years ago,
When we stuck to the "corn" from night till morn
As fast as the stuff could flow.
There was Billy O'Keefe, of Denver—
Too bad poor Billy is dead
He could pack away three quarts a day
And never rattle his head.

There was Jack McGee of the Morning Bee,
And Flynn of the Fourth Estate,
Larry McCale of the Portland Mail—
All dead before thirty-eight.
There was Blake of the Brooklyn Bugle,
And Grant of the Memphis Sun,
And a dozen more, or maybe a score,
Whisky got them, one by one.

I felt the tear that unbidden starts
When I thought (it hurt like a knife)
Of the nimble brains and the golden hearts
All stilled in the prime of life.
Then I walked from the noisy bar room
And muttered a prayer to God
Now dreamless under the sod.

"I Used To Be"

How many times have you yourself heard men, standing up against a bar, bragging about what they USED to be? Perhaps some were telling about the good jobs they ONCE had; or maybe another one—with the shell of a ONCE fine body—was telling what a great athlete he USED to be, how he ONCE did "the hundred yards in 93-5," but could not now even run for a car without blowing like a grampus. You will also notice that these men usually drink WHISKEY—because, as they put it, it has a stronger "KICK" than other drinks. What better word could define it than KICK? Look around you at the men it has KICKED out of good jobs, good health and good homes into the land of USED TO BE.

HAL COFFMAN.

The Dictograph

The Dictograph, He Says, Is the Electric Symbol of the New Age, of Which the Newspaper Is the Prophet, in Which the Perils of Privacy Will be Matched by Powers of Publicity.

WRITTEN FOR THE GEORGIAN

By REV. DR. JOHN E. WHITE

Pastor Second Baptist Church

ALL the real problems of society have been anticipated. The progress of modern times is manifest in the good answers we are making to ancient questions.

The Dictograph, for instance, is the New Invention of which Old Necessity is the Mother. The Celestial Society of Olympus, which the Romans created to furnish ideals and to set up standards of judgment on mundane matters, considered it.

Momus reported to Jupiter that the great evil among men was secrecy and deceit. He complained against Jupiter that he ought to have provided a glass window in every human breast, just over the heart, so that the inward truth of men's thoughts would be accessible to everybody, so that deceit would have been impossible.

He made such a row about it that he was kicked out of Heaven.

The Dictograph is a sop to Momus, but the fate of Momus is a warning to the dictographer. The application of this little Edisonic device to human affairs will arouse all the modern pagan Furies.

Some Possibilities.

Another Edward Bellamy may now tell us of its development and application to progress in the year A. D. 2500. The addition of a photographic attachment was the next step of invention to increase its effectiveness.

In the highly organized society of the year 2,500 the government had provided Dictographs in every home, hotel room and private office. A central receiving station was arranged for the record of disgraceful family disputes, star-chamber conferences and political conspiracies.

The photographic device was employed for Pan-Hellenic ballrooms, with a special corps of operators between 3 and 6 o'clock in the morning, to obtain truthful pictures of the "tango" and the "turkey trot." After midnight cabs and automobiles were equipped.

During sessions of the Georgia Legislature, in the hotels and boarding houses and private dinner parties at the houses of politicians, it was found particularly useful.

The striking fact Edward Bellamy, Jr., records was that civilization had responded to the restraint of the Dictograph and that its abuse was inconsiderable beside the manifest improvement in the tone and quality of human conduct.

Perils of Privacy.

The Dictograph is not all a joke.

The irresistible movement toward relentless publicity it symbolizes is profoundly supported in social intelligence.

The perils of privacy, secrecy and the suppression of facts are realized.

The basic religious conviction that Deity sees, hears and knows is at work day and night to justify the increasing passion of humanity to see, hear and know.

The Christian assurance that "nothing is secret that shall not be made manifest; neither anything hid that shall not be known and publish itself abroad" is the moral sanction of publicity as the consummation of the highest civilization.

The man who loves darkness better than light is under cosmic condemnation. The guardians of public health ruthlessly placard the places of disease.

The exponents of moral health also are every day bolder and bolder in disregard of any challenge of personal secrecy which conceals sources of moral contagion.

In whatever concerns the public safety the public has a right to the facts.

The outcry against the publication of the Standard Oil letters made no appeal to the American conscience.

The Good of Publicity.

In England the divorce evil is treated as a public matter, and not even the nauseous details are withheld from the public eye. Those who object to the application of that rule in this country should show better reasons for secrecy and privacy in behalf of domestic infidelities than the Fulton County divorce courts afford.

The world adjusted to the law of publicity is the good promise of the times, and the Searchlight, the Newspaper and the Dictograph are its phophetic tokens.

There Is Only One Need in the World---Love

Any Man Can Be Happy With It; No Man Can Be Happy Without It

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

I KNOW the need of the world.
Though it would not have me know.
It would hide its sorrow deep,
Where only God may go.
Yet its secret it cannot keep;
It tells it awake or asleep,
It tells it to all who will heed,
And he who runs may read.
The need of the world I know.

I know the need of the world.
When it boasts of its wealth the loudest,
When it flaunts it in all men's eyes.
When its mien is the gayest and proudest.
Oh! ever it lies—it lies.
For the sound of its laughter dies
In a sob and a smothered moan,
And it weeps when it sits alone.
The need of the world I know.

I know the need of the world.
When the earth shakes under the tread
Of men who march to the fight,
When rivers with blood are red
And there is no law but might,
And the wrong way seems the right;
When he who slaughters the most
Is all men's pride and boast,
The need of the world I know.

I know the need of the world.
When it babbles of gold and fame,
It is only to lead us astray
From the thing that it dare not name,
For this is the sad world's way.
Oh! poor blind world grown gray
With the need of a thing so near,
With the want of a thing so dear,
The need of the world I know.

The need of the world is love.
Deep under the pride of power,
Down under its lust of greed,
For the joys that last but an hour,
There lies forever its need.
For love is the law and the creed
And love is the unnamed goal
Of life, from man to the mole.
Love is the need of the world.

THERE is only one need in the world.

The need to love our neighbors as ourselves.

To do exactly as we would be done by.

The need to understand that the human race is one body; and that when we do anything which harms or hurts one individual, we harm all individuals, ourselves included.

Just as we harm the body, when we injure any member, hand, foot, eye, or ear.

When we stop and think about the world, the whole process of life becomes very pitiful.

Each, being born upon the earth, is striving for happiness, from the cradle to the grave, in his own way.

According to his light, he is doing the best he can.

He does not know it, but the only satisfying things which he can get out of life are peace of mind, self-respect and the love of his fellow men.

Nothing he can obtain without these things, nothing he can achieve or become, is of any real value.

No man can be happy without those three blessings. Any man can be happy with them.

Even though he is saddened by the sorrow he sees about him; the sorrow which results from striving after the needless things of earth; after more than we need; after what does not belong to us; after the possessions of others.

There would be no war; no industrial problems; no prisons; no poor houses; no white slaves; no sex sins; if men and women all set forth early in life on that threefold quest—for peace of mind, for self-respect, for the love of their fellow men.

That is all any soul is seeking; that is all any soul desires; because that is all there is in life worth living for. Yet is there war, and strife; and hatred; and sin; and sorrow and anguish; and misery and poverty.

Because men have not yet learned that there is only one need in the world.

And the need of the world is LOVE.

Belief of Samuel Adams

By WILLIAM VINCENT BYARS.

IT was Samuel Adams, one of the greatest founders of the United States, who said that "truth loves an appeal to the common sense of mankind."

It was this thought which made him powerful.

It made him the greatest Democratic leader of New England in the eighteenth century.

He was born in Boston in 1722, when all New Englanders were royalists. He was born rich. His family made money out of a brewery. He lost money in politics, so that when he died in 1803 he had barely enough to pay for his funeral.

He had helped to found the United States. He held office many years, but he was afraid to make money.

This was the only thing he was afraid of. He was afraid that if he did not keep himself as poor as most other people he would lose his common sense.

He meant by common sense the sense people have when they are trying to be fair to each other instead of over reaching and cheating.

If he found a man who could not read, trying not to cheat and over reach others, he thought him a better judge of truth than a prime minister. He believed that God made all men with sense enough to be honest.

At a time when he would have been hanged by a Tory prime minister, if caught, he said that truth loves an appeal to the common sense of mankind, and that "He who made all men, made the truths necessary for human happiness obvious to all."

This was his answer after he had been declared a traitor.

He spent his life trying to prove that politics may be improved by less cheating and shooting. He thought that finally nearly everyone would agree with him that common honesty and common sense are enough to make the best government on earth.

VENIRE OF 72 FOR FRANK JURY IS DRAWN

Negro Conley Sticks to Affidavit Story When Again Cross-Examined by Dorsey.

The first official action of the court in preparing for the trial of Leo M. Frank for the murder of Mary Phagan was taken Monday afternoon when Judge L. S. Roan impaneled 72 men, from whom a jury to hear the case will be sought.

June 30 was agreed to by Judge Roan for the opening of the case. If a postponement is desired it will now have to be asked for in open court.

As yet Judge Roan said he had received no intimation from the defense that a delay was wanted. Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey said Monday the prosecution was ready for trial.

Trial in Thrower Building.

An extra staff of deputies has been sworn in and subpenas to jurymen impaneled and witnesses are now being served.

No plans for a larger room in which to hear the case have matured, and it is likely that the courtroom of the Superior Court in the Thrower Building will be used at last, despite its size and lack of comfort.

Jim Conley, the negro sweeper, was brought before Solicitor Dorsey Monday morning for another cross-examination. The questions were solely along the lines of the negro's affidavit charging Frank with the crime. As the Solicitor later said, he had only refreshed Conley's mind on the points he had made in his statement. The negro told the same story he told before without deviation.

Mr. Dorsey said that he would call all of the principal witnesses for the State and refresh their minds on the part they will play in the trial.

W. J. Coleman, stepfather of the strangled girl, was summoned by the Solicitor after Conley had been questioned for some time and was brought before the negro. Strict secrecy surrounded the performance, and if anything was gained by confronting the sweeper with Coleman it was not divulged. Mary Phagan's grandfather accompanied Coleman.

Later Coleman said that he had called particularly to ask the Solicitor if Judge Newt Morris, formerly of the Blue Ridge Circuit, could be brought into the case. Mr. Dorsey informed him that the State had made all arrangements for handling the case, but that if he wanted to have the former Judge represent the family there would be no objection.

Attorney Reuben Arnold, for Frank, announced Monday morning that the defense's case was complete. Mr. Arnold said that the testimony of twelve witnesses would form the bulk of Frank's support. He declared that only the inability of one or more of these witnesses to appear at the time set for the trial would cause the defense to ask for a postponement.

Monteen Stover, the young girl who called at the pencil factory office between noon and 12:15 o'clock on the afternoon of the murder, was taken before Jim Conley at the police station Sunday and identified by the negro as the girl he had seen while hiding at the foot of the stairway waiting for Frank's signal.

Conley Identifies Girl.

Detectives went out to the Stover girl's home at 171 South Forsyth Street late in the afternoon and asked that she dress as she had on the afternoon of the murder and go to the police station with them.

CHICAGO, June 23.—"Were it not for the alienists and neurologists of America, the country would in time be inhabited only by insane persons."

This was the statement to-day of Dr. J. Cheston King, of Atlanta, before the convention of neurologists meeting here under the auspices of the Chicago Medical Society.

"There are more insane people in the United States than any other country in the world," he said.

Causes of insanity, he said, were whisky, hereditary weakness, religious excitement and modern life.

"The business man and the society woman," he said, "are falling victims to modern life. The business man often loses his mind through chasing the almighty dollar, and the society woman for various reasons, among them loss of sleep, too much dancing, irregular eating, worry over card games, envy of another's success and too much attention to dress."

"Continued warm weather, with possibly thunder showers late in the afternoon," was the weather outlook for Monday.

Forecaster C. F. VonHerrmann said the backbone of the hot spell was in no danger of being broken. "We are due to have considerable more hot weather through June and July," he said. "If it keeps up much longer this way, the old record of sixteen consecutive days with the temperature above 90 may be broken."

Mr. VonHerrmann said the weather was about the same all over the country, 90 degrees being the average.

The thermometer at noon registered 86 degrees and at 1 o'clock 88 degrees. The maximum temperature, between 2 and 3 o'clock, approximated 90, the lowest maximum of last week.

Woman With Dagger Attacks Policeman

Flora May Bateman, a negro woman, who made an attack on Call Officer T. M. Gorman when placed under arrest for disorderly conduct, will be tried in Recorder's Court Tuesday.

The policeman had a narrow escape when he attempted to arrest the woman. She attacked him with a long dirk she drew from her stocking. She was subdued and placed under arrest only after a lively struggle. The policeman was not hurt.

Bogus Check Charge Causes His Arrest

J. Percival, charged with passing a bogus check for $100 on Charles C. Jones, proprietor of the Rex Saloon, will arrive in Atlanta from Birmingham Monday night in custody of Detective J. W. Hollingsworth.

Percival was arrested in Birmingham Sunday on complaint of Jones, who has preferred the charge.

Slew While Making Arrest; Put on Trial

E. H. Parham, the former policeman who shot and killed John Wright a year ago, was put on trial before Judge L. S. Roan Monday morning for involuntary manslaughter.

Boy Tries to Kill Judge and Attorney

WASHINGTON, June 23.—When Justice Stafford, of the District Supreme Court, refused to parole Ray M. Stewart, 18, convicted of highway robbery, Stewart ripped out a revolver and shot three times at S. McHawkins, prosecuting attorney, but without effect. He then swung around toward Justice Stafford, but was overpowered.

The charge on which Stewart was tried was the holding up of Norman Butler, a negro, last December.

LEGISLATORS ALL HERE; LOBBYING HINTED

Reports That Interests Have Hand in Senate Presidency Fight Are Being Circulated.

Undoubtedly the big and absorbing topic of comment and speculation among the great throng of Georgia legislators statesmen and politicians in Atlanta to-day is the forthcoming election of a President of the Senate.

Judge John T. Allen, of the Twentieth District, and Senator J. Randolph Anderson, of the First District, both advance ironclad claims to election.

Each exhibits that which he considers unqualified pledges of support from more than a sufficient number of Senators to elect.

Senator Anderson gave out an interview Saturday in which he said he had 28 votes signed, sealed and delivered. He said then, and reaffirms it to-day, that he has the race won beyond a doubt.

"Senator Anderson has not 28 votes pledged—he can not have. I do not say he willfully misstates the situation—he may imagine he has the votes—but he misstates it, nevertheless.

Claims 25 Votes.

"I have 25 votes pledged to me in writing, without any qualifications whatever — straightaway promises. Not one man signing these pledges—they are individual, and not in the form of a list—will break his word to me. I shall be elected, for it only requires 23 votes, and I think I shall get five besides the ones I now have pledged.

"It should be remembered, too, that a distinguished South Georgian, Judge Sweat, has four votes, and that another distinguished Senator, Mr. Tyson, has two or three. Judge Sweat is in the race, and so is Senator Tyson—I take it neither would be in unless he had at least one pledged vote.

"Claiming is one thing and showing down the corn is another. I shall have the necessary votes when the roll is called Wednesday.

Denies Aid of Interests.

"As to the rumor that certain corporations and manufacturing interests may be taking a hand in the race for the Senate Presidency, I know nothing more than that no corporation or big manufacturing interest is taking a hand in my race. I can win, and will win, without that. And certainly I would prefer to."

Despite the statements of the rival candidates for the honor of being President of the Senate, and ex-officio Lieutenant Governor of Georgia, the impression is that this race is yet to be won, and will be won between this time and the assembling of the Senate Wednesday.

Politicians of all shades of opinion, all over the State, are watching this fight with intense interest.

Legislators All Here.

Nobody seems to know who is to win the Presidency of the Senate, which carries with it the Lieutenant-Governorship of Georgia.

On the surface of things, the fight seems to be about even between Senator Allen, of the Twentieth, and Senator Anderson, of the First.

Below the surface rumor and gossip speaks of many things not yet talked about the hotel lobbies freely and openly.

The President of the Senate might, in certain circumstances, succeed to the Governorship, and certainly he is sure to be a compelling factor in the shaping of legislation.

Wherefore, one hears it whispered

AUTO BADLY HURTS BOY; DRIVER HELD

Lad Run Down in Marietta Street by Motor of Postoffice Employee.

Hundreds of persons, many of them women and children saw six-year-old Johnny Nickers, a newsboy, residing at 121 West Pine Street, run down by an automobile at Marietta and Forsyth Streets, and seriously injured late Monday afternoon.

The boy was attempting to cross the street when the car bore down upon him. Warning cries from pedestrians were in vain. The lad turned only in time to make a futile dash out of the way of the automibile. It struck him full in the right side and knocked him fifteen feet to the curb.

The boy's screams attracted a crowd which for a time paralyzed traffic. Manning was taken to the police station where a charge of reckless driving was made against him.

Eighteen Ministers In Baseball Game Feature of Picnic

The game was played in the afternoon and followed the weekly morning conference of the ministers. More than 100 "rooters" who participated in the picnic viewed the battle on the improvised diamond.

Dr. John E. White, of the Second Baptist Church, pitched for one side, while Dr. C. A. Ridley, of the Central Baptist, twirled for the other.

President's Currency Plan Pleases Ottley

WASHINGTON, June 23.—John K. Ottley, vice president of the Fourth National Bank of Atlanta, was one of the great crowd in the galleries to hear President Wilson's currency message to Congress Monday. Mr. Ottley was enthusiastic over the program urged by the President.

"President Wilson showed he was thoroughly familiar with the currency situation," said Mr. Ottley. "He said just enough and no more, and I'll swear by every word he said.

"I hope and believe he will get action at this session of Congress."

7 Jurors Secured To Try Mrs. Lanier

WAYCROSS, GA., June 23.—The trial of Mrs. Nina Lanier, charged with the murder of her day-old son, was taken up this afternoon in Superior Court. Seven jurors were secured this afternoon. Forty-eight veniremen have been summoned.

Each time the word "murder" was used to-day the defendant, an unusually pretty young woman, broke into tears and her devoted mother, seated beside her, looked as though she would break down completely.

Anti-U. S. Meeting in Tokio Big Fizzle

TOKIO, June 23.—An anti-American mass meeting held here was attended by not more than 400 persons. These were chiefly workingmen, idlers and agitators.

NEW ORLEANS, June 23.—A heavy downpour just before game time forced the calling off of the Cracker-Pel contest this afternoon. The two teams will probably hook up in a double-header tomorrow. Both teams were out practicing and were about ready to start when Jupiter Pluv butted in. After waiting thirty minutes the umpires and managers decided to call the game off.

Musser and Evans were billed to pitch to-day. The same men will probably twirl the opening game to-morrow afternoon.

WILSON ASKS CONGRESS FOR BANK CHANGE

President in Person Urges Currency Reform With Government as Active Agent.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Repeating his act at the beginning of his administration, when he smashed decades of precedent by personally delivering his message to Congress, President Wilson appeared before a joint assemblage of both houses of Congress to-day and delivered his message on the currency.

President Wilson reached the Capitol at 12:55 o'clock, accompanied by his secretary, Joseph Tumulty, and two secret service men. He went immediately to Speaker Clark's private office, where he was received by a joint committee of Senators and Representatives.

After remaining in the Speaker's office for less than a minute, the President, escorted by the committee, went direct to the House chamber for the reading of his currency message. His appearance in the chamber was greeted with general applause, and the assembled Senators and Representatives arose as he entered.

The committee which met the President and escorted him to the chamber consisted of Senators Kern and Reed and Representatives Underwood, Fitzgerald and Mann.

Cabinet Members Present.

Secretary McAdoo, who helped frame the currency bill, was one of the first Cabinet officers to reach the House to-day. Secretaries Houston, Lane, Wilson and Garrison reached the House shortly in advance of the President and took seats on the floor.

Mrs. Wilson, accompanied by Misses Jessie and Eleanor Wilson and Miss Isabel Hagner, her secretary, reached the Capitol about ten minutes in advance of the President and were shown to seats in the executive gallery.

The President concluded the reading of his message at 1:07 o'clock, having used but ten and a half minutes in its delivery. As he finished he bowed and shook hands with Speaker Clark and Vice President Marshall. Both galleries and Senators and Representatives generously applauded.

Admittance Is Limited.

The House end of the Capitol was closed to the public to-day in anticipation of the visit of President Wilson to deliver his banking and currency message. Policemen stood at the entrances and in the corridors and turned back all those who could not show a ticket of admission.

More than 500 tickets were available for spectators in the galleries, and each Senator and each Representative had one ticket. For the most part these tickets went to the wives of Senators and Congressmen. Representatives who have been out of the city returned early to-day to be on hand when the President appeared.

The Message in Full.

The President's message in full follows:

It is under the compulsion of what seems to me a clear and imperative duty that I have a second time this session sought the privilege of addressing you in person. I know, of course, that the heated season of the year is upon us, that work in these chambers and in the committee rooms is likely to become a burden as the season lengthens, and that every consideration of personal convenience and personal comfort, perhaps, in the cases of some of us, considerations of personal health even, dictate an early conclusion of the deliberations of the session; but there are occasions of public duty when these things which touch us privately seem very small; when the work to be done is so pressing and so fraught with big consequence that we know that we are not at liberty to weigh against it any point of personal sacrifice.

We are now in the presence of such an occasion. It is absolutely imperative that we should give the business men of this country a banking and currency system by means of which they can make use of the freedom of enterprise and of individual initiative which we are about to bestow upon them.

Must Provide the Tools.

We are about to set them free; we must not leave them without the tools of action when they are free. We are about to set them free by removing the trammels of the protective tariff. Ever since the Civil War they have waited for this emancipation and for the free opportunities it will bring with it. It has been reserved for us to give it to them. Some fell in love, indeed, with the slothful security of their dependence upon the Government; some took advantage of the shelter of the nursery to set up a mimic mastery of their own within its walls. Now both the tonic and the discipline of liberty and maturity are to ensue.

There will be some readjustments of purpose and point of view. There will follow a period of expansion and new enterprise, freshly conceived. It is for us to determine now whether it shall be rapid and facile and of easy accomplishment. This it cannot be unless the resourceful business men who are to deal with the new circumstances are to have at hand and ready for use the instrumentalities and conveniences of free enterprise which independent men need when acting on their own initiative.

It is not enough to strike the shackles from business. The duty of statesmanship is not negative merely. It is constructive also. We must show that we understand what business needs and that we know how to supply it. No man, however casual and superficial his observation of the conditions now prevailing in the country, can fail to see that one of the chief things business needs now, and will need increasingly as it gains in scope and vigor in the years immediately ahead, of us, is the proper means by which readily to vitalize its credit, corporate and individual, and its originative brains.

Shows Power of Credit.

What will it profit us to be free if we are not to have the best and most accessible instrumentalities of commerce and enterprise? What will it profit us to be quit of one kind of monopoly if we are to remain in the grip of another and more effective kind? How are we to gain and keep the confidence of the business community unless we show that we know how both to aid and to protect it? What shall we say if we make fresh enterprise necessary and also make it very difficult by leaving all else except the tariff just as we found it? The tyrannies of business, big and little, lie within the field of credit. We know that. Shall we not act upon the knowledge? Do we not know how to act upon it?

If a man cannot make his assets available at pleasure, his assets of capacity and character and resource, what satisfaction is it to him to see opportunity beckoning to him on every hand, when others have the keys of credit in their pockets and treat them as all but their own private possession? It is perfectly clear that it is our duty to supply the new banking and currency system the country needs, and that it will immediately need it more than ever.

The only question is, When shall we supply it—now, or later, after the demands shall have become reproaches that we were so dull and so slow? Shall we hasten to change the tariff laws and then be laggards about making it possible and easy for the country to take advantage of the change? There can be only one answer to that question.

Action Now Is a Duty.

We must act now, at whatever sacrifice to ourselves. It is a duty which the circumstances forbid us to postpone. I should be recreant to my deepest convictions of public obligation did I not press it upon you with solemn and urgent insistence.

The principles upon which we should act are also clear. The country has sought and seen its path in this matter within the last few years—sees it more clearly than when the last legislative proposals on the subject were made. We must have a currency, not rigid as now, but readily, elastically responsive to sound credit, the expanding and contracting credits of everyday transactions, the normal ebb and flow of personal and corporate dealings.

Our banking laws must mobilize reserves; must not permit the concentration anywhere in a few hands of the monetary resources of the country or their use for speculative purposes in such volume as to hinder or impede or stand in the way of other more legitimate, more fruitful uses.

And the control of the system of banking and of issue which our new laws are to set up must be public, not private, must be vested in the Government itself, so that the banks may be the instruments, not the masters, of business and of individual enterprise and initiative.

DIGEST OF CURRENCY REFORM ACT WILSON WANTS THIS SESSION

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Representative Carter Glass, chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency, has made pucilc a digest of the Administration's currency reform bill which he introduced in the House to-day. By the terms of this measure the Federal Reserve Board, which will control the issuance of new currency on application of the regional reserve banks, is to be a Government board entirely.

There will be no retirement of existing national bank circulation, nor of the existing 2 per cent United States bonds used for circulation purposes. Every national bank is allowed to continue its note issue exactly as at present.

Following is the digest prepared by Representative Glass:

"The purpose of the bill is to furnish a comparative revision of the currency system of the country so as to obtain three principal objects:

"First—Provision of a means for rediscounting commercial paper of specified types.

"Second—Provision of a basis for elastic note issues properly safeguarded.

"Third—Provision of machinery for doing foreign banking business.

"Present Law Inadequate."

"In order to accomplish these purposes fully it is necessary to repeal certain portions of existing law; to rectify various conditions in the present national banking system which are in some cases only indirectly connected with the objects sought; to furnish a new class of instructions for the performance of some functions which can not well be intrusted to existing banks, or, at all events, can better be performed by others, and to alter the present reserve system to a very material degree.

"The scope of the bill can best be understood by an analytical review of its contents.

"The present banking situation of the United States rests on the national bank act proper, as slightly modified from time to time, and on the so-called Aldrich-Vreeland act (act of May 30, 1908).

"Of these acts the latter is completely superseded on the ground that it has never become operative. It probably will not become operative except under extreme distress, and never was satisfactory. The national bank act itself is modified in numerous essential particulars.

New Class of Banks.

"Fundamental to the idea of the bill is the creation of a new class of banks to be known as Federal reserve banks, the chief points about which are as follows:

"The number is to be twelve, with possible increase later as provided.

"The ownership is to be in the hands of the stockholding banks of the twelve districts in which the reserve banks are situated. National banks are compelled to be members and State banks and trust companies are permitted to be members.

"The capitalization is to be 20 per cent of the capital of the stockholding banks, one-half paid in and one-half subject to call.

"The business of these Federal reserve banks is to be as follows:

Reserve Banks Business.

"Rediscounting of paper presented by stockholding banks under specified conditions, provided such paper grows out of actual agricultural, commercial or industrial transactions and does not run more than a specified number of days.

"Buying and selling Government securities, gold and silver bullion and foreign coin; foreign exchange and open market bills of given maturity; Government fiscal operations.

"Every national bank is allowed to continue its note issue exactly as at present and in addition Federal reserve treasury notes are authorized to be issued to an amount not exceeding $500,000,000.

These notes will, upon application, be issued to the Federal reserve banks upon prime short-time commercial paper and other liquid collateral.

Gold Reserve Security.

"While the notes will, on their faces, purport to be the obligations of the United States, they are required to be secured by a gold reserve of 33 1-3 per cent provided by the Federal reserve banks, and are a first and paramount lien on all the assets of these banks, and are redeemable in gold on demand at the Treasury Department in Washington or at any Federal reserve bank.

"Stringent provisions are made against counting any of these notes as a part of bank reserves, and the system is guarded against inflation by lodging power with the Federal Reserve Board to exact an interest charge on treasury notes in order to insure their prompt redemption.

"The notes are not made legal tender, but are receivable by the Government and every bank of the system at par without exchange.

"Overseeing the whole system is created a Federal reserve board, consisting of seven members, including the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Agriculture and Comptroller of the Currency as members ex-officio. Four other members are chosen by the President of the United States by and with the consent of the Senate for a term of six years each.

"One of the members thus appointed by the President is to be governor of the Federal reserve board, one vice governor and one secretary.

Banker Member of Board.

"Their term of office is for eight years, except that of those first appointed, one to the serve two years, one four, one six and one eight years. At least one of the members appointed by the President is to be a person of banking experience. Thus it will be noted that the Government will have absolute control of the system.

"The salary of each member of the board, except the two Cabinet officers, who are ex-officio members, is fixed at $10,000, the Comptroller of the Currency to receive $5,000 in addition to the salary which he receives under existing law.

"The powers of the Federal reserve board are as follows:

"(a) To examine at its discretion the accounts and books of each Federal reserve bank and to require such statements and reports as it deems necessary.

"(b) To require or, on application, to permit a Federal reserve bank to rediscount the paper of any other Federal bank.

"(c) To establish each week, or as much oftener as required, a rate of discount which shall be mandatory upon each Federal reserve bank for each class of paper, provided that said rate of discount need not be uniform for all Federal reserve banks, but shall be made with a view to accommodating the commerce of the country and promising a stable price level.

"(d) To suspend for a period not exceeding 30 days (and to renew such suspension for periods not to exceed fifteen days) any and every reserve requirement specified in this act.

Treasury Note Regulation.

"(f) To add to the number of cities classified as reserve and central reserve cities under existing law, in which national banking associations are subject to the reserve requirements set forth in the act, or to reclassify existing reserve and central reserve cities and to designate the banks therein situated by country banks in its discretion.

"(g) To require the removal of officials of Federal reserve banks for incompetency, dereliction of duty, fraud or deceit.

"(h) To acquire the writing off of doubtful or worthless assets upon the books and balance sheets of Federal reserve banks.

"(i) To suspend the further operations of any Federal reserve bank and appoint a receiver therefor.

"(j) To perform the duties, functions or services specified or implied in the act.

To Classify Banking.

"The object of the bill is to effect a moderate division and classification of banking business along indicated lines, the net result, presumably, being summed up as follows:

"(1) National reserve banks will be strictly limited to rediscounting actual commercial and industrial transactions evidenced by very short term paper and on rare occasions, under carefully prescribed conditions to financial operations protected by collateral.

"(2) National banks will be subjected to the same restrictions as at present, with a relaxation in favor of a moderate amount of real estate loans by country banks.

"(3) By a revision of the administrative figures of the national banking act provision will be made for close oversight of national institutions.

"(4) In order to possess themselves of the kind of paper entitling them to rediscounts national banks will find themselves obliged to keep a reasonable proportion of their assets in the paper eligible for rediscounting.

"Subtreasury System Crude."

"It is believed that the present subtreasury system is unsatisfactory, clumsy, injurious to business and difficult to manage in time of stress. The bill, therefore, provides for:

"(1) The placing of all current funds of the Treasury in Federal reserve banks and the payment of Government creditors by check thereon.

"(2) The equalization of the public funds between the different reserve banks by direction of the Secretary of the Treasury and subject to a rate of interest to be fixed by the Federal Reserve Board.

"(3) The trust funds of the Treasury are to be held, as at present, in the vaults of the Treasury.

"Under the terms of the bill the Federal reserve bank, after the payment of all expenses and taxes, is entitled to pay an annual cumulative dividend of 5 per cent on paid-in capital to its stock-holding members. One-half of the next earnings of the bank must be paid into the surplus fund until said fund shall amount to 20 per cent of the paid-in capital of the bank. The remaining one-half of the bank's earnings shall be paid to the United States, and whenever and so long as the surplus fund of each Federal reserve bank amounts to 20 per cent of the paid-in capital, the shareholders having received their permissible dividend of 5 per cent, all excess earnings shall be paid to the United States.

Banks Exempt From Taxes.

"Every Federal reserve bank is exempt from Federal, State and local taxation, except in respect to taxes upon real estate.

"In the belief that the present reserve system is antiquated and unsatisfactory provision has been made for recasting the present bank reserve system. The plan includes:

"(1) Transfer of reserves from existing national banks in reserve and central reserve cities to national reserve banks.

"(2) Spreading out of this process of transfer over a period of 38 months.

"(3) Ultimately the establishment of a reserve system at the end of the transition in which (a) country banks will save 15 per cent of reserve, i. e., 15 per cent of total demand liabilities, such 15 per cent to be held, 5 per cent in the banks' vaults, 5 per cent with the national reserve bank and 5 per cent either at home or with the reserve bank, while (b) reserve and central reserve city banks will have reserves of 20 per cent of demand liabilities, of which 10 per cent will be at home, 5 per cent with the reserve bank of the district and 5 per cent either at home or with the reserve bank.

Blow at Wall Street.

"(4) The presumed effect of this plan will be to end the placing of reserves with central reserve city banks for use in stock market operations.

"The bill authorizes any national banking association with a minimum capital of $1,000,000 to establish branches in foreign countries for the furtherance of foreign commerce of the United States and to act as fiscal agents of the United States abroad.

"The Federal reserve board is required to pass on all applications of national banks to establish such banks abroad."

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SALONIKA, June 23.—A plot fomented by Bulgarians against the life of King Constantine of Greece has been discovered here. A number of Bulgar soldiers, disguised as civilians, were arrested to-day by the Greek military police.

A quantity of explosives had been discovered outside of the city gates and investigation led to the discovery of the conspiracy. One of the Bulgarians who was arrested confessed that an attempt was to have been made to blow up the King's palace.

Constant fighting between Greeks and Bulgarians is going on near here. The city has been strongly fortified on the landward side.

Bulgarians Refuse to Arbitrate; Crisis Near.

SOFIA, June 23.—Bulgaria to-day withdrew its recent acceptance of Czar Nicholas' proposal to arbitrate the territorial dispute between this country on one side and Servia and Greece on the other. This may mean that Russia's attempt to prevent a fresh conflict in the Balkans will prove futile.

The Bulgarian press is bitterly hostile against Russia, charging that the Russian Government is secretly encouraging Servia and Greece to take aggressive measures.

Official newspapers declare that Servia, Greece and Montenegro have entered into a secret league to strip Bulgaria of all the possible spoils of the Balkan war. The situation today was decidedly ominous, and the impression prevailed that the climax would be reached this week.

Penfield May Get U. S. Embassy Place

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Speculation was caused in diplomatic circles when it was learned to-day that Frederick C. Penfield, of New York, was to have a special audience with President Wilson.

The opinion was formed that the President would offer Mr. Penfield one of the five embassies yet unfilled. These include France, Germany, Russia, Austria and Turkey.

The speculation was based largely on the fact that he has had wide experience in the service of the United States abroad.

Pike County Farmer Slays Son-in-Law

ZEBULON, June 23.—J. P. Neal, of Senoia, was shot and killed by his father-in-law, J. W. Vaughn, at the latter's home near Zebulon last night. Vaughn is a prominent farmer. He surrendered to Sheriff Slade and is in jail. There were no eyewitnesses.

'Hello Girl' Knocked Down by Lightning

POTTSVILLE, PA., June 23.—During a heavy electric storm lightning set fire to one of the switchboards in the telephone exchange of the American Telephone Company at Shamokin and threw the operator, Miss Kathryn O'Leary, to the floor. She managed to sound an alarm and was rescued just before the blaze destroyed the building. The loss is estimated at $20,000.

taking an umbrella went with the detectives.

As soon as the Stover girl entered the room he jumped to his feet, exclaiming:

The girl was wearing leather slippers. Later she said she had worn "easy walkers," or tennis shoes, when she went to the pencil factory, as the negro had said.

The negro's identification of the Stover girl proves, apparently, beyond a doubt that he was in the factory building at the time he said in his affidavit. Beyond sustaining that statement, though, no further support to the prosecution's case against Frank is shown by it.

Solicitor Dorsey returned to Atlanta Sunday afternoon from a week's vacation in New York. He called a conference with his assistants, E. A. Stephens and F. A. Hooper, at his home Sunday evening. Following it he announced that he would be ready for trial on June 30 and that unless the defense or the trial judge moved to have the trial postponed he would commence at once summoning witnesses and getting ready.

Solicitor Dorsey would not discuss the return to Atlanta of Mrs. Mina Formby and her announcement that she would go on the stand against Frank. He intimated, however, that he entertained the same opinion as had already been expressed by his assistant, Mr. Hooper, that when the woman left Atlanta she dropped from the case entirely.

Attorney John W. Moore denied emphatically that he had been employed in the case with L. Z. Rosser and Reuben R. Arnold to defend Frank, as was reported by Solicitor Dorsey.

Moore Not Employed.

"I have not been employed in the case and have no other interest in it than that of a citizen. I believe Frank is innocent, and have since he was first drawn into the case, but I am not connected with it in any way. I have never been approached on the subject."

Solicitor Dorsey opened court in the Thrower building Monday morning for a week of criminal trials to clear the jail docket. He will be in court every day until Saturday, and will have to depend on his assistants to summon witnesses and prepare the Frank case in the event of it being set for the following week.

Orphanage Trustees Will Probe Whipping

MACON, June 23.—The whipping of 10-year-old Marvin Williford by W. F. Armor, farm overseer at the Georgia Industrial Home, will be probed this afternoon at a special meeting of the trustees.

The boy has been surrendered by the city officials to the home, assurance having been given that he will not be punished again. When the boy was beaten by Armor with a plowline, he ran away from the orphanage and sought the protection of the police.

Armor is the husband of Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, Georgia temperance lecturer. He admits the flogging.

Girl Dies of Fever; Peril Thought Past

ATHENS, June 23.—Miss Katherine Erwin, aged 20, died unexpectedly yesterday after an illness of several weeks with fever, from which it was thought she had passed the danger point. Her father, Judge A. S. Erwin, who died several years ago, was a prominent lawyer and member of the State Railroad Commission.

The funeral will take place here to-day. She is survived by her mother and several brothers and sisters.

Wilburn-King Trials Come Up in October

GREENSBORO, June 23.—A special session of Jones Superior Court to try Nick Wilburn, charged with the murder of James King, a prominent Jones County farmer, will not be called by Judge James B. Park, of Ocmulgee Circuit.

Wilburn and Mrs. King, charged as accessory, will be tried at the regular October term. Judge Park thinks conditions do not demand a special session.

High Living Cost Cause of Suicide

MACON, June 23.—J. D. Lester, president of the Macon Barbers' Union, killed himself yesterday by drinking an ounce of carbolic acid, after telephoning his wife that he would join her in a few minutes and go to church.

On Saturday Lester told his fellow-workers that the high cost of living was enough to make a man commit suicide. He left a note to his wife, "I could not endure it any longer."

Death Hovers Over Chalk Victim

Poison Baffles Expert Efforts

Doctors Abandon Hope for Life

Here is a picture of little Mary Tribble, the poison chalk victim, taken when she was a few years younger than she is now. She was the pet of the neighborhood then, and has since then been a very much loved little girl in school.

Little Mary Tribble Is Fast Sinking and She May Not Live Through the Day.

Slowly sinking to a death that the physicians regard now as almost certain, little Mary Tribble, daughter of Policeman Tribble, lies now unconscious and now torn by racking convulsions at her home in East Atlanta, the victim of a strange poisoning that developed after she had eaten some brightly colored chalk more than two weeks ago.

The 7-year-old girl, who has been almost entirely paralyzed for the two weeks since she suddenly was stricken, has suffered two convulsions in the last 24 hours, although three physicians have done their utmost to counteract the effect of the mysterious poison.

Another physician offered his services to the family Sunday. He recommended and administered a continuous water treatment throughout the day. For a few hours she appeared brighter and the prospects for her ultimate recovery seemed slightly more hopeful, but at nightfall one of the terrible convulsions contorted her little body and it was thought that the end had come. Monday morning she was the victim of another, and the family practically gave up hope.

W. C. Tribble, father of the girl, said Monday he had arranged to have the crayon which his daughter had eaten analyzed. It is hardly expected that the analysis will be completed in time to be of any benefit to the physicians in prescribing a treatment.

Mary was given the crayons a few days before school ended a week ago last Friday. On the last day of school she came home and fell into the arms of her mother, crying that her head hurt. A few minutes later part of her body was paralyzed and she was seized frequently with agonizing convulsions. She has been in this condition ever since, the only change being that she gradually has been growing weaker.

Dr. Seacord, Dead; Was With Fire Dept.

Dr. Andrew C. Seacord, 38 years old, died at a private sanitarium Monday morning at 2 o'clock. Dr. Seacord for the past fifteen years had been the veterinary surgeon for the Atlanta Fire Department. He lived at 621 Whitehall Street and is survived by a wife and two young sons, Lynn and Robert Seacord.

Funeral services will be held from the chapel of Barclay & Brandon at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, Rev. Dr. A. R. Holderby officiating. Pallbearers will be G. C. Courtney, O. J. Parker, W. H. Clowe, Pas Short, William Butler and W. B. Harrison. Interment will be at Westview.

Family at Church as Robbers Loot Home

While C. W. Seagraves, who lives in Pace's Ferry Road five miles out of Atlanta, was at church with his family Sunday morning, burglars entered his home and stole the valuables. From a trunk $200 in cash was taken, besides silver plate and family jewels.

Seagraves discovered his loss upon returning from church about noon. The county police were notified, but as yet they have made no arrests.

CINCINNATI, June 23.—Rioting broke out here to-day at a meeting of garment strikers, of whom 8,000 quit work this morning.

that certain big corporate and manufacturing interests are deeply concerned as to the outcome of the race for the presidency of the Senate, and, very much on the quiet, are interesting themselves accordingly.

Burwell Called Favorite.

The speakership race generally is conceded to have been won by Burwell of Hancock. Although opposed by such excellent gentlemen as Hardeman of Jefferson and Sheppard of Sumter, Burwell is thought to be very much in the lead and practically sure of election on the first ballot.

Burwell seems to have made a much better getaway in his race than either of his opponents, and for that reason is looked upon as a most likely winner.

Tax reform is the one big topic of legislation discussed most generally.

It seems agreed on all sides that the State must have more revenue or let its various institutions lag woefully. There is an ever-increasing demand for more money in all directions, and the State has been running ahead of its income for several years. The tax rate can not be raised above 5 mills, and 5 mills on present assessments will not produce the revenue needed.

Various special measures for increasing the revenue have been proposed, such as an inheritance tax, a graduated automobile tax, and so forth, but the greater problem is how to get all varieties of property up to where each may bear its righteous portion of the burden of taxation.

It is assured that a child labor bill will be introduced early in the session, with excellent chances of success.

be, and that reforms must be instituted, or the State suffer not only materially within itself, but in reputation abroad.

It is said that former Representative Hooper Alexander, for years an earnest advocate of child labor reform, will prepare a bill for the General Assembly's attention, and that it will be a bill framed along the lines and ideals of the various anti-child labor organizations in the State.

Salvation Army Man, Struck by Auto, Dies

Thomas Jefferson, the aged Salvation Army worker and former Indian instructor, who was struck by an automobile at Mitchell and Whitehall Streets Thursday, died Sunday night at Grady Hospital. He did not regain consciousness. His relatives are not known, and his body, unless claimed, will be buried by the Salvation Army.

No blame is attached to J. L. Hughes, of 380 Peachtree Street, who drove the car. He was driving slowly, according to eyewitnesses. Jefferson leaped in front of Hughes' car to escape another and faster-going machine.

Keeping the Body in Repair

Nature intended that the body should do its own repairing—and it would do so were it not for the fact that most of us live other than a natural life.

Nature didn't intend that we should wear corsets, tight collars or shoes, nor live in badly ventilated and draughty houses, nor eat and drink some of the things that we do, nor ride in street cars when we should walk.

The consequence is that the body when it gets out of order must look for outside help to make the necessary repairs.

PEEKABOO SKIRT, NATURE HOSE, SHOCK PARIS

French Society Beauties Appear Like 'September Morn,' Draped in Filmy Covering.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, June 23.—Even the Parisian journals, used as they are to daring styles in women's dresses, spoke rebukingly to-day of some of the gowns seen yesterday at the fashionable Auteuil race course. Auteuil set the latest word in fashions, the decree being that tight skirts are giving way to transparent garments which are absolutely no obstacle to the eye.

Many women wore skirts of white muslin so transparent they failed utterly to serve the purpose of coverings. The gowns, mostly free from frills, are cut extremely low in front, and even lower in the back.

The slashed skirt devotees exceeded the limit. Some of them were not only slit at the sides, but in the front and rear as well. Most of the slashes reached above the knee.

One woman wore gold sandals without stockings. The sandals were fastened to the feet with pink ribbons. The three-tier skirt made its appearance in white, blue, purple and brown. Most of the hats were small, decorated with aigrettes.

44 Women Want to Clean Phila. Streets

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—Forty-four women took the Civil Service tests in this city for street cleaning inspectors. They toiled all morning on five hundred word treatises showing how they would clean the streets of the municipality and what they thought was the most needed thing to improve the condition of the streets.

They were required among other things to describe the most approved apparatus for the cleaning of the streets. They were asked the difference between some of the various kinds of machines, their purposes and the practical operation, the relation of the street cleaner to the community, the reasons for the excessive litter in certain sections and the value of moral suasion when applied in the proper places.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Miss Edith St. Clair, ingenue for many years in Klaw & Erlanger musical comedies, has voluntarily given up her hope of collecting a judgment for $22,500 against her former employers, and has made affidavits in their favor for use on a motion to have her judgment set aside and a new trial granted.

Phone Girls to Seek Simple Life Plan an Ideal Camp Vacation Fresh Air and Fudge Their Menu

Miss Katherine C. Tatum.

500 Employees of Southern Bell Will Take Two Weeks' Rest in Woods.

The "back to the country" craze has hit the Southern Bell telephone exchange in Atlanta, and 500 hello girls, clerks, stenographers and bookkeepers are going to spend their vacations in the woods.

"Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife," where there are no hurry-up callers to disturb their temper and where the lines never get crossed, they plan to spend two weeks without a care in the world and live on fresh air and fudge.

The time—July 1 to September 31; the place,—M. O. Jackson's 200-acre farm on the Brown's Mill Road, two miles beyond the terminus of the Lakewood car line; the girl—why all of them, every single solitary one of them that operates the boards, keeps the books or takes dictation at the Atlanta branch of the Southern Bell Telephone Company: this is the scene and the synopsis and the whole plot in a nutshell.

Everyone's Talking It.

It's the one topic of conversation at the telephone exchange; everybody's talking about it. If an importunate creditor phones you he will sue if you don't settle, and about that time you hear a sweet voice say, "Won't that be lovely," don't think merely a hello girl talking about the outing to her nearest neighbor at the boards.

Miss Katherine C. Tatum, chief of the stenographic bureau, originated the idea three months ago. She confided to the head operators, Mrs. Mitchell and Misses Ada Mealor, Sammie Dixon and Alice Means, and they liked it. The five of them consulted the telephone officials and received assurances of hearty endorsement and enthusiastic support in every way possible.

FIVE FRANKFORTERS COMING.

"The Five Frankforters," a comedy from the German, based on an episode in the life of the famous Rothschilds and a novelization of which appeared in The Georgian, will be among the early attractions to be seen in this city the coming season. The play was produced in New York last season by the Shuberts and it is under this management that the local engagement will be played.

CUYLER TO REPLY TO WIFE'S CHARGE

Telemon S. Cuyler, formerly Telemon Cruger Cuyler Smith, of Atlanta, is preparing his papers in the divorce suit instituted by his wife, Mrs. Grace Barton Cuyler, of Alameda, Cal., according to information Monday. Mr. Cuyler's attorney is James Austin.

Mystery surrounds the affair. Little authentic information has been gathered. Mr. Cuyler slipped into Atlanta last week, interviewed his attorney and a few friends, then slipped away again, to his country home four miles from Wayside, Ga.

That he has recognized the divorce suit and is preparing his papers through his attorney is not denied by those who have charge of the matter. He also told several friends while here last week that such a divorce proceeding was on. Mr. Cuyler recently returned to this country from Mexico, where he has a large ranch.

Mr. Cuyler's latest hobby—he is a man of hobbies, it is said—is having moving pictures taken of himself so that he may be immortalized. A number of such pictures have been made within the past few months in European cities, where he visits often, as well as in the big cities of America.

ROME, June 23.—That the legal troubles of Enrico Caruso, the world-famous tenor, are anything but over is shown to-day in the decree of the Milan Court of Appeals which has just handed down a decision reversing the lower court which last year denied Elisa Ganelli, the Milan shop girl, who sued him for failure to marry her, damages in a breach of promise suit.

Caruso is in London preparing to spend the summer at his beautiful villa near Florence, and, dispatches say, when shown the decision of the court, he allowed his temper to become greatly ruffled and let off considerable superfluous energy in the form of epithets and adjectives, between which he stated he did not believe the report.

The court, in handing down its decision holds that the decision of the lower court is correct in not providing damages for the injury to the fair name of the plaintiff. The court then goes on to state that, although the relations existing between the singer and the shop girl were reprehensible, it is of the opinion that the girl is entitled to recover the money she spent in fitting herself to become Mrs. Caruso.

Entitled to Expenses.

The decision orders that a new trial be held for the purpose of ascertaining how much the young woman is entitled to for her "pre-nuptial" expenses, and orders that it be held as soon as Caruso returns to Italy.

The suit in question was started over a year ago and at the time greatly stirred opera-going circles in this country and elsewhere. Testimony developed at the trial that one week after seeing the girl in a Milan shop Caruso secured an introduction to her from her employer and on that same occasion used these words:

"Come, now Signorina, put on your hat and we will start tomorrow, for I have decided to take you away with me. If I had been so fortunate as to make your acquaintance 15 or 20 years ago you would have been my wife by this time. Unfortunately, owing to my professional engagements, I must leave now."

After his departure Caruso bombarded the girl with letters written from Paris and London, in which he renewed his protestations, and in one letter ordered the girl to leave the shop to break with the "common people."

His "Little Sugar Doll."

He sent her many photographs of himself and his children and in writings always addressed her by such endearing names as "Dear Sweet Thing," "Little Sugar Doll" and "My Little Treasure."

One of his most characteristic letters contained the following passages:

"You will see what I will do when you are my wife. How beautiful it will be. You shall be my little queen, and I your faithful and devoted slave. Have you ever accepted some other admirer? Can anybody speak ill of you? Have you always done as your mother instructed you? You assure me that you have, and now I can think only of this—to make you mine as soon as possible."

After the betrothal the shop girl studied French and tried to fit herself to be the wife of the greatest tenor of his time. Caruso at times was chivalrous and generous to her. She had a chaperone whenever she met him and he showered her with presents, including the most costly gowns and much actual money, which she accepted, although reluctant to do so, the trial developed.

Fears Wife Is Held As Slaver Captive

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—Mystery surrounds a search by the police for Mrs. Ernestina Welden, wife of Elwood A. Welden, former Secretary of the American Consulate in Paris and Budapest.

Mrs. Welden was going shopping, she told her husband. That afternoon he received a letter from her telling that she was going away as a traveling companion to a woman. Special Agent Garberino, of the Department of Justice, fears she has fallen into the hands of white slavers.

Shepard Is Carried Past Home of Bride

NEW YORK, June 23.—Persons on a late train from New York a few nights ago heard the porter call "Tarrytown" and wondered why Finley J. Shepard, husband of Helen Gould Shepard, did not alight.

Mr. Shepard only realized that he was going by his station when the train was under way. He is too much of a railroad man not to know the dangers of jumping, and therefore refused to take a chance. Ossining was the next stop. There Mr. Shepard alighted, obtained an automobile and "burned up" the Albany post road back to Irvington.

Ex-Gov. Dix Not to Govern Philippines

WASHINGTON, June 23.—To his visitors President Wilson has made it clear that he will not consider the name of former Governor John A. Dix, of New York, for the office of Governor of the Philippines or for any other post.

The governorship of the Philippines is to be given to one of three or four men already on a tentative list. President Wilson also is understood to have said that New York has been very well provided for in the big appointments.

CHICAGO, June 23.—Jacob Zelle, who said he was a Cleveland physician, was found last night walking along North Clark Street with no clothes on. He told a policeman that he was dead and was looking for an undertaker to bury him.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

Hark, hark! the dogs do bark, the solons are coming to town—some in rags, and some in tags (but none with jags), and some in velvet gowns!

Or words to that effect!

Anyway, we have with us this evening, gentle readers, the esteemed and ever-venerated Jawjaw Legislature.

It has been coming in on every train for 24 hours or more, and there now is a sufficiency of it on hand for organization purposes if organization were the order of business for the day.

All day long the Kimball House lobby has been alive with statesmen, real and near.

Most of them are optimistic with respect to the outlook, and the more they get acquainted with one another the better they are pleased with themselves.

Not only is the city filling up rapidly with members of the new General Assembly, but dozens of old-timers, legislative veterans now retired, voluntarily and otherwise, to more or less subdued obscurity, also are in our midst, undertaking to get wise to what is what and who is who.

On all sides one hears good words and kind with respect to the incoming Governor, and good wishes for his administration are on everybody's lips.

John M. Slaton, for the first time in sixteen years, is not a member of the Legislature, and while he has been promoted to be the head of the entire State for a season, he knows practically every member of the new Legislature, and in its entirety it seems to wish him mighty well.

Scores of new members have called on the new Governor to-day to pay their respects.

To-night the Legislature will be all but unanimously on hand and ready for business.

Despite the claims and counter claims of the two leading candidates for the Presidency of the Senate, the average legislator still is very much "from Missouri" with respect to that matter.

Both Senator Allen and Senator Anderson claim more than enough to elect, and while nobody believes either is claiming anything less than he really believes, as a matter of fact, few Senators believe that either man actually has sufficient unqualified pledges to put him over.

"These claims remind me," said a prominent South Georgia politician to-day, "of a story they used to tell up in Cedartown on Major W. R. Beck, grand old man, dead these many years, rest his soul!

"The Major was a candidate for Ordinary, or something, and one of his friends was checking over the voters of the city registration list. After checking off all those the Major claimed, his friend then said, 'Well, Major, these men may be depended upon to vote for you, may they?' The old Major looked his friend in the eye, and replied, 'How the h—l do I know—they've promised to, but how the h—l do I know what they will do!'

"The trouble is, it's so hard to tell exactly what constitutes a political promise—men often say and write things that are construed as unqualified promises, when they never intended them that way at all."

Representative Crawford Wheatley, of Sumter, will introduce his famous lieutenant governor bill again at the forthcoming session of the Legislature.

Mr. Wheatley has been an enthusiastic advocate of creation of this office for many years, and while a member of the Senate he succeeded in passing through that body, almost unanimously, a bill making it part of the Constitution.

The measure was killed in the House, however, and while attempts have been made since then to enact the suggestion into law, they have not succeeded.

The gentleman from Sumter, who is sure to be one of the most popular men in the General Assembly, is very hopeful that this time his pet measure may become a law.

One step toward commission form of government for the city of Greensboro has been made by the publication of notice to the effect that at the next session of the General Assembly a bill will be introduced which will allow the City Council of Greensboro to elect a secretary and treasurer from any citizen who is eligible to act as an alderman.

The notice is published under the signature of H. M. Spinks, City Clerk of Greensboro, and it is thought that the bill will be introduced in the lower branch of the Legislature by Hon. W. F. McWhorter, Greene's Representative.

Much trouble has been experienced by the "city fathers" of Greensboro in the past in securing one of their own number to act as secretary and treasurer, and it is thought that the proposed change will remedy to a great extent some of the cumbersome methods of the city government.

The new Commissioner of Agriculture, James D. Price, of Oconee, got in to-day, and has been as busy as he could be shaking hands and receiving congratulations.

Mr. Price is just up from a sick bed, but doesn't look the part. Everybody likes him, and everybody gives him the glad hand.

He is a practical farmer, knows his way about politically, and the general prediction is that he is sure to make good on his new job.

He expects to be commissioned next Monday, and will present himself at the Executive Department bright and early to receive from the hands of Governor Slaton his warrant to do business.

He likely will be the first new State House officer to be commissioned.

ST. SIMONS TAKEN BY MILITIAMEN

BRUNSWICK, June 23.—The summer inhabitants of St. Simons Island looked out on warlike scenes Monday morning when the troopers of the Second Squadron of cavalry began military maneuvers at Camp Joseph Brown. The first work of the week followed a day of fun and recreation for the soldiers.

The boys were allowed liberties all day Sunday as a sort of compensation for the hard work Saturday, when camp was pitched. That they took advantage of these liberties is verified by hundreds of visitors to the camp.

Perhaps the most amusing thing of all was the surf bathing in which hundreds of troopers took part from 7 o'clock in the morning until evening.

The boys were not content with this, however, for the annual blanket tossing of the "high privates in the rear rank" was indulged in freely, much to the enjoyment of the spectators. One young private was tossed into the limbs of a tree, where he was rescued by several brawny comrades.

NINE DROWN WHEN U. S. BOAT UPSETS

MEMPHIS, June 23.—Nine of a party of fourteen United States engineers and other Government employees were drowned near New Madrid, when the United States survey boat Beaver, which the party was aboard, capsized during a windstorm.

Those drowned are:

C. S. WILLIAMSON, chief engineer, Mason, Ohio.

J. M. M'CONNELL, of Memphis, a recent graduate of the law department of Cornell.

CAPTAIN LAMB, pilot.

A. D. COSTON, engineer.

HARRY SHERRELL, mate, Cottonwood, Tenn.

PHIL WRAY, Jackson, Tenn.

——— FREEMAN, deck hand.

Two rodmen, names not known.

When the storm broke the Beaver was making a hurried run back to New Madrid to get medical attention for McConnell, who had been taken suddenly ill, and was within sight of a quarterboat, anchored near this city, when the wind tipped the boat over.

CREMATORY ROW REVIVES WITH INJUNCTION

Destructor Company Declares It Will Continue Work Despite Court's Restraining Order.

With the signing of an injunction by Superior Judge Pendleton Monday morning inhibiting the execution of the crematory contract the wrangle over Atlanta's garbage destroyer began anew, giving promise of contempt of court proceedings and possibly an airing in Recorder's Court.

Evins & Spence, counsel for the Destructor Company, said work positively would continue without interruption, since Council had given his clients permission to carry on operations pending the signing of a new contract. C. P. Goree, attorney for Mayor Woodward, was equally dogmatic in asserting work must stop and that if it did not stop immediately he would go before Judge Pendleton and make a motion to have "everybody connected with it" cited for contempt.

"J. N. Renfroe and Others against the City of Atlanta and Others," is the style of the crematory case originally tried before Judge Pendleton, who refused to grant an injunction stopping work. The case was appealed, the Supreme Court reversing Judge Pendleton's ruling. The order of the Supreme Court reached Judge Pendleton Monday morning, and he immediately signed an injunction restraining further execution of the original crematory contract. The injunction reads:

New Contract Not Barred.

"The judgment of this court refusing to grant an interlocutory injunction in the case having been reversed by the Supreme Court of Georgia, and the judgment of that court having been made the judgment of this court, it is therefore considered, ordered and adjudged by this court that the defendants, the City of Atlanta and the Destructor Company, be and they are hereby enjoined and restrained until final hearing of this case before a jury from carrying out the contract referred to and set out in the original petition in this case and from performing any act under said contract. The city is not enjoined from making any other contract with these people for securing this crematory, so as not to violate the decision of the Supreme Court in this case."

Attorney C. P. Goree said the effect of this injunction would be immediate cessation of work on the crematory. Notwithstanding that Council, after the Supreme Court decree, gave the Destructor Company authority to work on the crematory pending a new contract, Mr. Goree said he would "have them put in jail" if the work was continued. When asked who he would cite for contempt, he replied:

"Everybody that has anything to do with it."

City Attorney Mayson said the city had accepted the court decree, and that Council thereafter granted the Destructor Company authority to proceed, and he, therefore, saw no reason why work should stop.

"Of course, no work can be done under the old contract," said Mr. Mayson; "but, as I see it, the Destructor people can remain in possession of the ground. The decree does not mean that Atlanta can not have a crematory."

Attorney Sam Evins, of Evins & Spence, secured a consultation with Mr. Goree in an endeavor to reach an agreement upon work pending the new contract. Mr. Goree adhered to his statement that all work should cease.

After the consultation with Mr. Evins, Mr. Goree said: "I just told Mr. Evins that if the Destructor Company continued work, it would be under that old contract, and that if they did anything at all, I would proceed against them for contempt."

Sees 1,000,000 Kisses Every Year

Gatekeeper Expert On Osculation

Custom Grows in Favor, He Says

H. T. Lewis, who opines he knows more about kisses than Noah Webster

Many Miss Trains Because They Must Have "Just One More," Declares H. T. Lewis.

When old Noah Webster solemnly set down in his book that a kiss is "a salute or caress given by smacking the lips," he probably thought he had said the last word on the subject, and a great many people have long held the view that Mr. Webster knew—impersonally—more about the kiss than any other man.

But he hedn't and he didn't.

An Atlantan has something to say about the kiss and its habits, and he deposes earnestly that he knows—impersonally, always impersonally—more about osculation than Mr. Webster or anyone else.

Which is by way of introducing H. T. Lewis, guardian of the portals of the Terminal Railway Station, in other words, a gatekeeper. Mr. Lewis declares he has seen more kissing and heard more kissing than any other man in Atlanta, and he is ready to fall in with the fashion and make an affidavit. He took a pencil and a piece of paper Saturday morning, and he "figgered" earnestly for some moments. Then he made this statement:

"I see 1,000,000 kisses a year—and I've been here six years."

He figures it this way:

He sees about sixty trains come and go each day, and the passengers average about 80 to a train. Of these about fifty kiss someone, either going or coming, which makes a trifle over a million smacks a year that are delivered and accepted at the gates.

"If it wasn't for the kisses we see and the kisses we hear," he said, "the life of the gatekeeper would be deadly monotony. We see every kind of a kiss here at the gate, from the Marathon kiss of the lover to the bashful peck of the schoolboy and the earnest efforts of people to emulate a clap of thunder."

Mr. Lewis said people are kissing more now than ever before, at least in the railway stations.

FEDERAL INQUIRY IN M'REYNOLDS CASE ASKED

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Representative Kahn, of California, to-day introduced two resolutions, one calling upon Attorney General McReynolds to transmit to the House all papers relating to the prosecution on white slave charges of Maura Diggs and Drew Caminetti and leading up to the resignation of United States District Attorney McNab, of San Francisco. The other calls for the same papers in the case of the prosecution of the Western Fuel Company.

David Starr Jordan, of Leland Stanford University of California, informed President Wilson to-day that he believed the McNab charges false. Dr. Jordan said that he considered that McNab is apparently annoyed over a number of recent occurrences in his office and that he took this occasion to resign "in a blaze of glory."

District Attorney McNab said today that he had repeatedly protested against attempts to prevent the prosecution of Caminetti and Diggs, and that Caminetti's father had sought aid in Washington have the case delayed.

On June 1 Caminetti, after he had been appointed Commissioner General of Immigration, wired McNab, asking another delay. McNab replied that the case would be set for July 26. On the same day McNab wrote to Atorney General McReynolds, reviewing the case.

On June 18 McNab received a telegram from the Attorney General ordering him to postpone the trial until autumn. Two days later McNab's resignation was wired to Washington.

Secretary Wilson Says He Delayed Trials.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—"I have stated all the facts. There is nothing further in the case and the public will have to judge for itself."

This is the only statement that Secretary of Labor Wilson will make to-day supplementing his announcement assuming responsibility for the postponement for the Diggs-Caminetti white slave case in San Francisco.

"It was for the benefit of the service that I wished to keep Mr. Caminetti, the Commissioner General of Immigration, in Washington for a time and I could not then see and do not now see any serious interference with justice," said the Secretary.

Movies Catch Pair Spooning; Suspended

CALIFORNIA, PA., June 23.—A moving picture which showed them sitting on a rustic bench in a mossy glen of Hazel Park, "spooning" was the cause of Miss Kathryn Boyd, a co-ed, and B. H. Crago, a student, being indefinitely suspended on the eve of their graduation at the State Normal School here.

The film, depicting park scenes, was shown at a local theater and made a sensation among the students. The news got to the faculty.

Hug and Kiss Are Detective's Reward

NEW YORK, June 23.—Douglas M. Sanderson is still tasting a kiss he got at the auction sale of the furnishings of the Astor House. An aged woman informed the auctioneer that she had lost her pocketbook containing $18.

While Sanderson, who is the house detective, was hunting for the purse, the auctioneer offered it and its contents at auction subject to its being found. The crowd had bid $17 when the detective appeared with the missing wallet.

The aged woman gave the detective a hug and a kiss, much to his embarrassment and to the joy of the crowd.

Railroad Continues Train-Bandit Search

WAYCROSS, June 23.—No developments have been reported here today in the hunt for the Kirkland freight train robebrs, but it is known that the search, while abandoned by Coffee County officers, has by no means been given up by agents of the Atlantic Coast Line.

It is believed the men now hiding in Roundabout Swamp will soon be forced to leave the swamp for food supplies, and then an effort will be made to capture them.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The last word in hot weather "don'ts" was issued in brief form to-day by Dr. Carl Alsberg, who succeeded Dr. Harvey W. Wiley as chief of the United States Bureau of Chemistry. Here are his "don'ts:"

"Don't eat to excess.

"Don't wear too many clothes.

"Don't drink ice cold beverages.

NOBLE, IN TRANCE A YEAR, AWAKENS

CLEVELAND, June 23.—After being in a state of coma for a year at the State Hospital for the Insane here, Shackery Nasham el Aswad, Syrian nobleman and graduate engineer, has awakened and will be taken home at once by his brother, Captain Kaail el Aswad, wealthy cotton producer and the Governor's chief of staff, who came all the way from Bramana, Mt. Lebanon, Syria, a year ago, and has been patiently awaiting ever since for his brother's recovery.

When Shackery regained consciousness, his brother, who had been in America for twelve months, had gone to New York for a few days. He was hastily summoned and arrived today. The meeting between the brothers was pathetic. They addressed each other by all the pet names they had used in childhood.

Shackery had no recollection of his months in the hospital, where he was sent May 24, 1912, when he appeared in a daze at the Y. M. C. A. here. Only a pocketbook identified him, and through this W. Stanley Hillitt, United States Consul at Beirut, located the stricken man's father, Nasham Assad Bake el Aswad, Syrian of high rank, who sent his other son here at once.

SOLONS SEE NEED OF PENAL REFORM

Interviews with leading members of the House and Senate have disclosed that the Assembly, which meets this week, is imbued with a belief in the necessity for practical revision of Georgia's penal and criminal court laws stronger than ever before.

So many specific needs for changes have been urged by the Governor, by members of the Prison Board, by judges and solicitors general throughout the State, and so many plans have been suggested that the creation of a special commission to take up the proposition seems a certainty.

Inasmuch as the creation of this commission will give full opportunity for the expression of all views on the subject and opportunity to sift out the best way of dealing with it, no opposition has developed. Scores of legislators in both the upper and lower House are committed to its support.

Rich Dentist Sued For Divorce; Wife Declares He Beat Her

Three days after her husband went home intoxicated, according to her charge, and beat her with a walking cane, Mrs. Kathryne Steer brought suit in the Superior Court for divorce from Dr. John S. Steer, a dentist, who is reputed to be wealthy. The offense was alleged to have been committed on the night of June 20 at the Steer home, 21 Ashby Street.

Mrs. Steer enjoined Dr. Steer from disposing of his interest in a well-known dental concern. They were married in Kentucky in 1908.

Boll Weevil Here to Stay.

JACKSON, MISS., June 23.—Acting under instructions from Governor Brewer, Attorney General Ross A. Collins to-day filed an attachment in the Chancery Court here against all properties in Mississippi of Boyce & Co., Memphis and New Orleans cotton factors and cotton exporters, and also more than 1,000 bales of cotton recently bought by Boyce & Co. from the State, now on the wharves in New Orleans, ready for export.

OSSINING, N. Y., June 23.—"Hooray, take us back to Sing Sing!" There was real exultation in the voices of William Forbes and Maurice Clifford, two short-term burglars, who escaped from Sing Sing prison last night, when they were captured to-day. They were trying to return to the prison, but had lost their way.

Forbes and Clifford were covered with mud and their clothes were ripped and torn by brambles and barb wire fences. They were badly bitten by mosquitoes and other insects, and once they had to lie in a creek when the hunt got too close.

PLAYERS TO SOLVE RAGTIME PROBLEM

Another effort to solve Atlanta's ragtime problem will be made to-morrow afternoon.

This problem, which has aroused lovers of ragtime music, is whether an expert pianist or a Weatherholt player-piano is the more expert in producing that entrancing syncopated music.

At the contest Friday afternoon Frank Hammond, executive secretary to Mayor Woodward, awarded the decision to the player-piano, after considering the problem overnight.

Mr. Weatherholt has received dozens of letters from admirers of the player-piano who insist that the pianist never lived who can produce ragtime as the player does, and he has received invitations to visit homes of the owners and hear for himself.

Other letters have been received giving names of expert pianists who are declared to be such artists that a player would never get a decision in a contest.

The contest will be held in Weatherholt Hall, 72 North Broad Street, with L. T. Briers, H. H. Bowers, H. C. Wiley, A. D. Beatty and others competing against the player operated by J. A. Mills.

During the contest complimentary tickets to the Elite Theater will be given to the ladies present, through the courtesy of Mr. Briers, who is assistant manager of that theater.

DENVER, COLO., June 23.—Seventeen hundred pounds of stout women sat on small chairs in the Inspector's office in the Federal building all morning on a hot June day. At least there were seven women, and as none of them owned less than 250 pounds, the total may be fixed in the neighborhood of 1,700.

They were witnesses in a fraud case. For months, they say, they have toiled with the Marjorie Hamilton fat-reducing methods without finding themselves one ounce reduced in weight.

You Have Heard Much of Late About Makers' Surplus Stocks of Dresses and the Fine Economy That Their Purchase Has Meant, But It Has Remained for This

Sale of Summer Dresses

To Bring to the Women of Atlanta the Real Values of the Season

$5.00 to $5.75 Black China Silk Waists

The Waist Department contributes to the day's events! Contributes an interesting item.

Black China silk waists and shirts from our own good stocks and priced regularly there at $5.00 to $5.75 are marked $2.45.

And there is a variety of splendid styles, serviceable and cool. Choose from waists with high and Dutch necks, eyelet embroidered, with little clusters of tucks and buttons on fronts, with tucks over shoulders. Open front or back. Shirts with folds down front, with pocket, with folded or flat collar.

The women of Atlanta shall have a day of it to-morrow! A day to choose the freshest and charmingest of summer dresses at prices that in no wise compare with values as you know them. It is accomplishing such results as this that adds zest to the game of merchandising; that brings the fine sense of a good job well done. We have heard much, very much, of late about dress sales, their whys and wherefores, but somehow or other one advertising pen---that must be truthful ---has had to wait until now for this opportunity. It has arrived with a vengeance! But how to make the most of it?

Simply by reciting the plain and interesting facts to the women of Atlanta, who have yet, when they visit this store, to be undeceived by any statement that Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co. makes.

Our dress buyer has just come in from New York and with him upward of three hundred summer dresses of surpassing beauty. They are anything but the usual kinds, a happy relief from cheap laces, gaudy embroideries, from dresses made down to a price. These are from a maker whose business pride is a great asset. It holds him above any kind of cheapening, of skimping in quality of materials; it keeps him everlastingly working out new and becoming styles. Whether it is early April when he is making dresses and fair profits, or whether it is mid-June, when he is making dresses and readiness for another season, the same thoroughness characterizes his work.

We tell you this now merely because you have not seen the dresses. After your visit to-morrow, when your eyes will have taken in all that the dresses are, you will more fully understand.

There are white voile dresses--all white and with touches of color here and there on collars, cuffs, in girdles; there are striped voile dresses, there are Dresden crepe dresses and flowered crepe dresses---any number of different kinds---so many that, we warrant, the question most women will have to decide is which one or several she likes best.

And back of them all is that fine fact that every one may be bought at a splendid saving. But you will not have to be told of the saving---it is evident. You will know no such attractive affairs could be sold regularly at such prices, you will know they have not been sold at such prices!

$5.00 for $7.50 to $9.75 Dresses

There are fifty of these. You may choose from white voiles or from white crepes, figured and flowered in delicate pinks, blues, lavenders and the like. They are trimmed with laces and embroideries, yokes are often entirely of embroidery—and have belts (some of them) of black velvet or folded satin. The finest five dollars worth we have known, and we believe you will agree—they are so cool and summery, they fit so splendidly.

$6.98 for $10.00 to $12.50 Dresses

One hundred twenty-five of these. There are all white voiles and their laces and embroideries will be a revelation for fineness. Old Fogyisms of To-day

By DOROTHY DIX.

ONE of the most interesting plays of the past season was Arnold Bennett's "Milestones." The theory of the drama was growth. It showed how the advanced thought of one day is the conservatism of the next and the old fogyism of the day after.

In the play the hero breaks with his business partner because he wants to build iron ships instead of wooden ships. "You'll be ruined if you do," says the standpatter; "iron ships will never float. You might as well build stone ships."

The progressive man goes on and builds iron ships and makes a fortune, but at middle life his partner wants to build steel ships. "Never," cries the old man, with his conservative old ideas, "iron ships are all right, but steel ships will never float." The young man builds his steel ships, that give us our Mauretanias, and then, when he has grown old, comes a young man talking of building airships, and he cries out, as the other two old men have done about the iron ships and the steel ships, "that airships will never be practicable."

This play, "Milestones," is the biggest suffrage play ever written, and offers the best suffrage argument.

Go back three generations. The question of whether a woman should be given an education then was just as burning a one as the question of whether she should be given a right to vote is now. And precisely the same arguments were brought against it as are brought against woman suffrage now.

An Old Belief.

In our great-grandmothers' time it was contended that it would unsex a woman to teach her geography, and make her bold and unwomanly and kill her sweet feminine charm for her to receive an education. Also that only a few blue stockings among women wanted an education. Therefore, it was foolish and wrong to open college doors to the feminine sex.

Well, by dint of a heroic fight by a few women for all women, the privileges of education were extended to girls, and the learning that our forefathers so feared would unsex and demoralize women has brought about none of the calamities they foretold. Women are still women. They are still sought in marriage, and so far from only a few caring for an education, the girls outnumber the boys in high schools. Education has not unfitted women to be good mothers. It makes them better ones.

Look back at the time when education was thought to endanger women, and you will laugh as you did at the man who was so sure that an iron ship couldn't be made to float.

The next milestone that we have passed is the one that marked the place where women began to go into gainful occupations. In our grandmothers' day the only way a woman had to make a good living was to marry it. By and by a few bold and heroic women rebelled at this state of affairs and demanded a right to go into any kind of business that they were fitted for. The whole conventional world raised one grand howl of protest.

A woman's place is in the home, it cried, whether she's got a home or not, or anything to eat in it or not. If she goes out into the world to work she will become unsexed. She will become coarse and vulgar, and wear short hair and trousers, and smoke and swear, and men won't marry her, and everything will go to the bow-wows.

There are eight million wage earning women in the United States, and if there are any unsexed among them the Eden Musee has failed to get them. So far from the working girl having her love of dress eliminated, the trouble with her is that she's too much given to frills. Also, instead of being opposed to marriage she gets married just when she's most valuable to her employer. The finest woman in the world to-day is the wide-awake, competent business girl, amply able to stand on her own feet, and earn what she needs. She is the prop of her family, and a blessing to society.

It's as absurd to think that people were ever afraid to give women the right to earn an honest living as it is to think that they ever prophesied that you couldn't make a steel ship that would float.

The third milestone that we have passed is the property milestone. Up to our mother's day when a woman married every cent she had passed into her husband's exclusive possession. This was true although the man might be a gambler and a spendthrift, swamped to his chin in debts of which the woman knew nothing, or whether he was a good fellow of the shiftless sort between whose fingers money leaks as water through a sieve.

When it was first proposed to pass property laws securing a woman's money to herself it was fought tooth and nail—even by many women. People said it would break up the home, and produce endless friction between husbands and wives. Women cried out that if they could trust themselves to their husbands they could trust their money. It was contended that for a woman to own her own money would make her bossy and insulting to her husband.

They Worked Well.

Nevertheless some property laws, not adequate ones yet, have been passed, and it has been found out that they worked out for the general good. The right sort of man didn't want to hold up his wife and rob her of her property and the woman who is married to the wrong sort finds out that it is, at least, some consolation to have a roof over her head when her dream of love is broken.

Nobody would now argue that a woman hasn't a right to her own property or to the money she earns, any more than they would contend that we should go back to the old days of the wooden sailing ships.

And now we have come to the last milestone in the march of human progress. It is the demand that women who own property and pay taxes, who form one-half of the population, who are amenable to the law, should stand before that law on an equal platform with men.

Those who object say that for women to vote will unsex them, that it will take away their feminine charm, that men won't want to marry them, that it will break up the home, that not all women want to vote, just as they said those things about educating women, or about women being given a chance to make an honest living, and about women being permitted to control their own property.

Not one single evil prophecy founded on women's advancement has been fulfilled. May we not confidently believe that we may give woman the ballot not only without danger, but that their help is needed in politics just as much as it is needed in the home and the business world? Why should we not then pass this last milestone, too, and set our faces toward the onward journey?

The other picture shows an afternoon gown of white supple moire. The bodice is a kimono crossed with a small decollete in the V shape, with small plastron of embroidered linen. A shawl collar achieves the yoke. The sleeves are of three-quarter length, with small revers trimmed with three small buttons of the same material, a point going up over the middle front of the bodice.

Too Much for the Chimney

WHEN Grandfather Lickshingle heard it read from a newspaper that Peter Ripley had a lamp chimney which his family had used for thirteen years, he rapped savagely on the floor with his walking stick and said:

"Now, what the dickens is the use of putting such reading in the newspaper? If they want some information about lamp chimneys, let them come to me and get it. When me and your grandmother broke up housekeeping we had a lamp chimney. But it wasn't made in these 'ere shoddy times. I paid a penny for it the day we were married. That was away back somewhere in the last century. We used it night and day for 79 years and eight——"

"Why, grandpa, you didn't have to use it in the daytime, did you?"

"Didn't have to—no. But we did. Used it at night on the lamp, and in the daytime we used it to drive nails with. Sometimes the children cracked nuts with it, and the road surveyor borrowed it several times to pound stones on the streets. One day I thought they had lost it. The workmen had left it on the road, and the street cars ran over it seventeen times before it was found. This lamp chimney had been in a railway collision. 22 lamps had exploded under it during its time, a horse kicked it clean through the side of the stable, and the chimney came out of it all without as much as a crack, but the horse had to be sent to the hospital. However, it's broke now," said grandfather, with a deep sigh.

"Then you were foolish enough to let the servant clean it, were you?" asked mother.

"No, but we might as well. When we gave up keeping house I gave it to a friend. He was hard of hearing, and he wanted it for an ear trumpet. One day a man tried to tell him why he ought to be President, and that he was the only real man for the job, and, by cracky, he burst the chimney into a million pieces."

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

In the amiable way of villagers, they were discussing the matrimonial affairs of a couple who, though recently wed, had begun to find the yoke of Hymen a burden.

"'Tis all along o' them hasty marriages," opined one caustic old gentleman, who had been much to the fore in the discussion. "They did not understand each other. They'd nobbut knowed each other for a matter of seven year."

"Well, that seems long enough," said a listener.

"Long eno'? Bah! Ye're wrong. When a body's courting, he canna be too careful. Why, my courtship with Mary lasted a matter of nineteen years."

"You were certainly careful," agreed the listener; "and did you find your plan successful when you married?"

"Ye jump to conclusions hastily," said the old man. "I understood her then, so I didna marry her!"

A sad-looking man went into a chemist's. "Can you give me," he asked, "something that will drive from my mind the thought of sorrow and bitter recollection?"

Then the chemist nodded, and put him up a little dose of quinine and wormwood and rhubarb and Epsom salts and a dash of castor oil, and gave it to him, and for six months the man could not think of anything in the world except new schemes for getting the taste out of his mouth.

The portly lady had accidentally taken a rear seat in a car reserved for smokers. With unconcealed indignation she watched the man beside her fill his pipe.

"Do it now, ma'am!" said the man, as he carefully lighted up; "then take my advice an' stop it!"

Corporal (to soldiers)—"Why is the blade of the saber curved instead of straight?"

Corporal—"Humbug! The saber is curved so as to fit the scabbard. If it was straight, how would you get it into the crooked scabbard, blockhead?"

Blink (the wholesaler)—"Well, how many orders did you get yesterday?"

Gink (the salesman)—"I got two orders in one shop."

Blink—"What were they?"

Gink—"One was to get out and the other was to stay out."

"Have you a spare cigar about you, old chap?"

"Certainly. But I thought you were going to stop smoking?"

"I am, but not too abruptly. I've already stopped smoking my own cigars."

A factory in Grenoble, France, utilizes the water of a reservoir situated in the mountains at a height of 200 yards. The water reaches the factory through a vertical tube of the same length, with a diameter of considerably less than an inch, the jet being used to move a turbine. Experiments have shown that the strongest men can not cut the jet with the best tempered sword, and in some instances the blade has been broken into fragments without deflecting a drop of the water and with as much violence as a pane of glass may be shattered by a blow from an iron bar. It has been calculated that a jet of water a small fraction of an inch in thickness, moving with sufficient velocity, could not be cut by a rifle bullet.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

From where Gordon stood the wild windstorm seemed to be rushing directly toward him with twice the speed of the fastest express train, cutting a path five hundred feet wide. Even as he looked the tornado, with a rush and a roar, swept up between the mansion and the huge granite rock in the valley. Gordon dashed for the brook to seek some sheltering bank, but ere he could reach it the cyclone was upon him, or at least the edge of it, and he was picked up as though he was a chip of wood, carried forty feet in the air and hurled to the opposite side of the brook, where he lay stunned.

When Gordon came to his senses he found himself surrounded by four rough looking men, dressed in the garb of the mountaineer. They assisted him to his feet and he worked his arms, legs and body to ascertain if there were any bones broken. Finding himself apparently sound, he smiled.

"I never rode on the wings of a cyclone before," he said, "and I don't believe I ever want to try it again."

None of the men he addressed made direct reply to this cheerful remark. They stood close to him and eyed him critically. Finally one of them, a black-bearded man, said:

"I reckon you're Gordon Kelly."

"I am," replied Gordon, surprised that the stranger should know that name.

Gordon a Prisoner.

As if this answer were a signal for attack, the four men closed in on him. One of them had a rope and he attempted to pinion Gordon's arms. Though taken completely by surprise, Gordon put up a desperate struggle, but was quickly overpowered by the four men, all of whom seemed possessed of uncommon strength. His arms were tied behind his back and he was commanded to walk forward.

"What's the meaning of this?" demanded the prisoner.

The man with the black beard answered.

"I reckon nothin' ain't goin' to harm yer, if yer obey orders. If yer don't we'll make yer. Come along."

But Gordon refused to move. He said in a calm voice.

"Just tell me what this all about, will you, please? You've made a mistake. I have done nothing to you. You've got the wrong man."

"You ain't done nothin' to us, but you're the man we want. Come along, now." The black-bearded man drew a six-shooter from his pocket and grasped the weapon by the barrel. "I don't want to hit yer with this yere pistol, but I reckon I'll have to unless yer do what I tell yer."

Gordon saw that all four men were armed, though the black-bearded man was the only one to make a display. Resistence was useless and might bring him needless injury, so without further words he walked ahead in the direction indicated feeling that in a short time the whole thing would be explained and he would be allowed to go free. His captors followed the brook for nearly a mile and then turned off toward the northwest. They crossed the path of the cyclone, which had long since passed in its fury, leaving destruction in its wake, and continued on through thick forests and over rough and wild mountain country. Gordon tried to secure some information from the men, but they did not reply to his questions.

A Long Walk.

Finally, after walking northwesterly for about three miles, Gordon judged, they came to Pew Creek, the stream that flowed past the settlement bearing the same name nearly fourteen miles to the south of where they were. The prisoner knew the country well, especially the land bordering the creek. He knew not where his captors were taking him, but at least he was familiar with the ground. The bearded man, leading the way—he seemed to be the leader of the four—followed the creek for another mile until he struck the main road. Before reaching the road, however, the party stopped, while one of the men went ahead as a scout, evidently to make sure the road was clear. He waved a signal to advance and the others did so, crossing a bridge where the creek met the road and then plunging due west through another forest. They were getting on higher ground all the time and finally came to a clearing. Then, making a sharp ascent of about one hundred yards, they descended rapidly for another hundred yards and came to a small clump of trees, with underbrush growing high all around it. Walking straight ahead, the bearded man parted the underbrush and with Gordon following close, they passed through it and arrived at a log cabin, evidently of recent construction.

By this time it was almost dark. One of the men stepped inside the cabin and lighted two or three tallow candles, after which he set about preparing the evening meal. When the candles were glowing, the bearded man motioned Gordon to enter, which he did, the others following. Gordon glanced around. There were five rough banks, with a straw on them for bedding. There was no stove, but there was a fireplace in a corner, with a small chimney leading up from it, built of sticks of wood plastered with clay. The only article of furniture in the room was a rude bench. The bearded man then spoke the first words he had uttered since the march began. He said to Gordon:

"Yer won't be hurted none unless yer try to escape. Then we'll shoot." He untied the rope that bound Gordon's arms, one of the other men standing by with a revolver in his hand, and added: 'Maybe yer better git in one of them bunks till grub is ready.'"

Thoughts Busy.

Gordon rubbed the circulation back in his arms and then lay down. He had long since made up his mind to treat the situation good-naturedly, feeling that more could be accomplished that way than being nasty about it. He resolved to trust to cheerfulness and diplomacy in his intercourse with these men. He had not yet been able to figure out what their object was in making him a captive. Perhaps they would demand a ransom for his release. He could not satisfy himself how they knew his name, either. The thought flashed across him that Galen Deery had something to do with the matter. Perhaps the Atlanta capitalist had learned of his companionship with Mildred. It was possible that Shephard, his superintendent, had informed him. He recalled what Mildred had told him about her father's vast project and he tried to connect it with his present predicament.

While his thoughts were busy, the fire under the pots and pans was busy, too. Three of his captors began eating at once, while the fourth stood guard over Gordon with a six-shooter in his hand. Evidently they had planned the whole thing out in advance, as they had not spoken to each other since entering the cabin.

After eating a hearty meal of bacon, corn cakes, stewed beans and crackers, Gordon stretched himself, smiled and announced that he felt better. He thought the other men probably felt in better humor, too, so he tried to start a little conversation.

"Do you men expect to keep me here or will there be some more walking?" he asked, with a good-natured smile.

Allowed to Write.

There was no answer to this remark. Three of the men had lighted pipes. The fourth, who seemed to be somewhat younger than the others, had been relieved of guard duty and was now eating his supper. When he had finished he drew a bag of tobacco and some tissue paper from a pocket and rolled a cigarette. There was silence for a long time and then Gordon began again.

"I don't mind spending a little time with you men, as you appear to be willing to treat me fairly. I suppose you will tell me what this is all about when you get ready to do so. You won't find me troublesome. But I have a favor to ask of you. The people at my home and the people at Deery's house below will be very much worried about me. They may think I was killed in the cyclone. What I want you to do is to get word to them somehow that I am safe; or, if you will allow it, I will write a note that one of you can leave on the doorstep at night. Of course you can read the note before it is sent. What do you say?"

Three of the men looked at the man with the black beard as if expecting him to do all the necessary talking. He smoked in silence for several minutes. Then he spat and said:

"I reckon you all kin write."

CHAPTER XXXVII.

GORDON had a pencil, but no paper. However he discovered a small paper bag, which he slit down the sides with his knife, making of it a long, narrow sheet. Then, with the bottom of a tin plate for a desk, he very slowly wrote the following remarkable letter in a large hand:

Friend Mildred:
I write to tell you I am
Very well and for you and
Elmer and also your
Mother not to worry as
I am being well treated.
Lonely, of course, it is,
Especially as I can not
See my friends; but
No matter; I will keep
On being cheerful and the
Rest will come out right in
The end. I wish you would
Have someone to go
With you to my home (take
Elmer) and please notify
Steve and all the others
That none of them
Must look for me
Yet. I will soon
Have, I expect, another
Opportunity to write
More. You may possibly
Expect it soon.
Love to all.

G. K.

When Mildred received these lines (which she did the following morning) she must have thought it a queer letter to get from the man she was so worried about. It was not a love letter, nor did it seem to say much of anything in any definite degree. Yet Gordon had deliberately written it that way, trusting to the girl's ingenuity to decipher the hidden meaning. As a matter of fact, the meaning was so little hidden that Gordon, as he wrote it, had doubts as to whether it would pass muster.

The Message Sent.

Gordon folded the sheet of paper twice, addressed it on the back to Miss Mildred Deery and handed it to the black-bearded man, who read it slowly; so slowly, in fact, that Gordon feared he had discovered the simple cryptogram. But at last the mountaineer nodded and placed the letter in his pocket, whereat Gordon breathed with relief. Later in the evening the letter was given to the youngest of the four who, after receiving instructions from the bearded man, given in too low a tone for Gordon to distinguish the words, saddled a horse that was tethered nearby, mounted him and rode off in the darkness.

From the moment the rope that bound Gordon's arms had been removed, one of the four men had remained within ten feet of the captive, with a revolver in his hand. Every action of the mountaineers indicated that they meant business and Gordon had long since made up his mind that he would not attempt to escape that night. At intervals he endeavored to draw his captors into conversation, but without success. They were not sullen, or gloomy, or sulky; they simply refused to talk, so at last Gordon requested that he might be allowed to retire for the night.

No Secret About Woman's Beauty

The flashing eye, the elastic step and the brilliant complexion are never companions of organic troubles; but it is the distressed expression, aches and pains, faintness, dizziness, that bearing down feeling, and the blues that are the tell-tale symptoms. If such women would only remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound overcomes such distressing symptoms, womanly beauty would be no longer a secret.

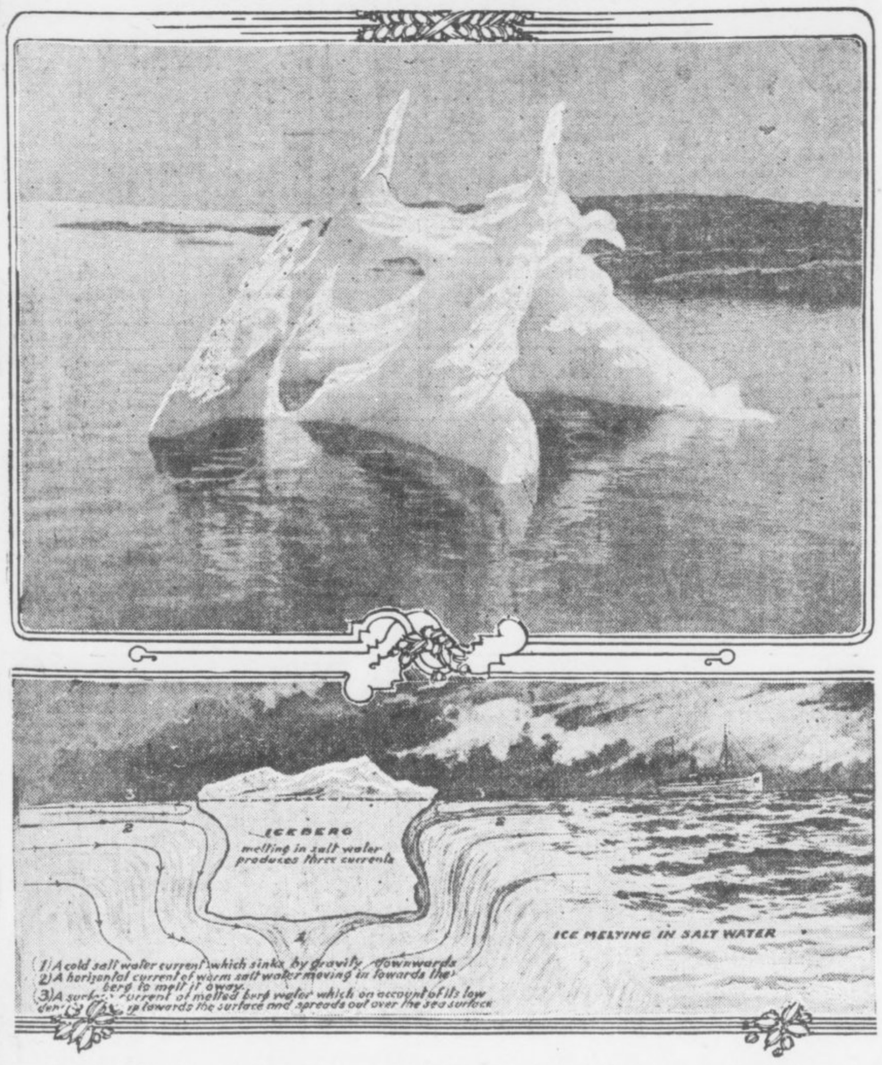
A Device That Traps Icebergs

An Atlantic Liner Can Now Be Provided With Mechanical Senses as Sensative as the Nostrils of a Deer



The top picture is a photograph of a melting iceberg. Underneath is a diagram showing the various currents produced by an iceberg that is slowly dissolving. It is these currents that are "felt" by the micro-thermometer, one of the latest wonderful achievements of science.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

SINCE the sinking of the Titanic, a year ago, icebergs have been studied as never before, and a great amount of curious knowledge about these frozen monsters of the deep has been accumulated, with the result of increasing the safety of ocean navigation.

Just as a living being proclaims its presence, even when it can not be seen, by telltale sounds and vibrations and by emanations which are perceptible at surprising distances to olfactory senses as delicate as those possessed by some of the lower animals, so icebergs betray themselves, in the darkness of the night, or the far more dangerous obscurity of a fog, by their effect upon the temperature of the air and the water.

A remarkable mechanical sense-organ, called the micro-thermometer, which is simply a thermometer of great delicacy and special construction, dragged through the water by a ship, is now employed to measure the changing temperatures of the water in the vicinity of icebergs, and some unexpected facts have been developed by its use.

A great steamship provided with micro-thermometers lowered into the water is like a hunted deer sniffing the air with its sensitive nostrils and detecting its enemies afar off.

How It Works.

These instruments reveal facts previously unknown about icebergs. They show that there is a surprising system of currents around and under a great berg, or a fleet of bergs, which produce characteristic temperature changes that may be felt miles away. In truth, the iceberg is a great thermal engine surrounded by a medium of air and water peculiar to itself, and due to its action upon its environment. Upon the air immediately around it the berg produces a cooling effect in consequence of the absorption of heat required to melt it. When water freezes, it gives out heat; when it melts, it absorbs heat. One perilous consequence often is that the moisture in the cooled air around the berg condenses into concealing fogs and mists.

But the effects of the berg upon the underlying and surrounding water are still more remarkable and important. It has been found (as illustrated in the picture of a melting iceberg) that there are three characteristic currents produced in the ocean water by a great berg when it arrives in the comparatively warm water lying along the steamship tracks of the North Atlantic.

In the first place, directly under the vast ice mass there is a great current of cooled salt water, which sinks by its own gravity, because the cold increases its relative density.

In the next place the suction produced by the sinking cold water draws in from all sides warmer surface currents, which eat into the sides of the berg by their melting action, and finally so much reduce the size of the berg beneath the surface, or so change its shape, and its center of gravity, that, at last, the equilibrium of the mass is upset, and it turns over, thrashing the surrounding sea with its immense flanks, huge fragments of which, heavy enough to sink a ship, are detached, and go floating away to form an attendant fleet of small bergs and floes.

Then there is a third current composed of relatively fresh water, formed by the melting of the berg, and which, because of its lesser specific gravity, moves upward from around the berg and flows as a comparatively warm current over the surface of the sea. This current is of the greatest importance in betraying the presence of a berg, for it spreads to a considerable distance and can easily be detected by the micro-thermometer. The warm current has been detected a mile from a berg.

The Real Effect.

In regard to this a recent report of the Canadian Government on iceberg phenomena says: "There is little room to doubt that the real iceberg effect is the rise of temperature, and that the fall (observed when a ship passes abeam of the berg) is due to the colder current in which the berg is being carried."

In some experimental trips when icebergs were passed at a distance of from a half to a quarter of a mile there was observed first a rise of temperature in the water, followed by a fall as the berg was passed abeam.

Similar experiments with the micro-thermometer have shown that the near neighborhood of land is betrayed by a fall of water temperature, and this is believed to be due to the action of the tides and the obstruction offered by the coast line, resulting in a turning up of the under water, which is always much colder than the sea surface.

At the Table

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED

THAT common meeting-ground of the family, the dinner table, should be made a place where harmony reigns and where each one brings his or her best to contribute to the pleasure of the moment. Cheerful talk is as necessary to health and appetite as it is to peace and pleasure of mind. Unpleasant subjects should be avoided resolutely. Such topics as bad news, illnesses, grewsome incidents shocking accidents, troublesome business affairs should not be brought to the table; nor should disagreeable family matters be discussed there. These family affairs may require settlement, but may be talked of elsewhere.

If it is a family principle to be agreeable and talkative at table, there will be greater ease when guests are present.

A woman's duty is to be composed and cheerful at her table, whether at family meals or when there are guests. Her serenity, or the lack of it, influences others. When acting in the capacity of hostess she needs an absolutely placid temper. Self-control must be her watchword. If she appears to be disturbed, worried, absent-minded, if her eyes wander, or she seems distracted in conversation, every one will be uneasy, and the dinner will be dull and dragging. Her duty is not to let her guests know of her moods, disappointments or even of a headache.

If service is slow, or mistakes happen, it is best for a hostess not to offer explanations. No matter what may go wrong, she must appear not to notice it. By passing over a mistake or an imperfection herself it will escape the attention of others, or, at least, will not be regarded as important by them. If a serious accident occurs to precious china or rare glass she must maintain a calm manner. If a careless servant lets something drip on a guest's dress, a hostess must express regret and try to remedy the blunder and then pass on, without too much delay, to other matters. A guest should try to appear undisturbed by any accident of the sort.

If a guest should be so unlucky as to overturn a glass or have any other accident, it is best not to make profuse apologies. Regret may be shown by one's manner. Thus there is less interruption to conversation and to the smooth running of the dinner. By practice a young hostess may acquire facility in being able to talk naturally while at the same time seeing that people are served properly. If an order has to be given it should be done quietly and simply, without any mysterious signals or loud whisperings. A hostess should try not to make her servant nervous by watching her too much as she moves round the table.

Didn't Want Him.

Mike Hennesey, a hefty young Irishman, secured his first foremanship after serving for some years as one of the "gang." Promptly at 7 o'clock in the morning he began his duties by calling the gang to order.

"Ye all have to worruk for me!" he shouted. "Worruk, I say! And I want every wan of yez to understand at wance that I kin lick anny man in the gang!"

All swallowed the insult except one giant-built warrior, who stepped forward and said:

"But you can't lick me, Mike Hennesey!"

"Oh, I can't, can't I? yelled Mike.

"No, you can't," came back the determined answer.

"Well, thin, go to the office and draw your money. I'll have no man in the gang I can't lick!"

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"My husband shot a burglar," she said; languidly. And then her insolence reached its culmination in a query of her own: "Was his name Griggs?" It was done with splendid art, with a splendid mastery of her own emotions, for, even as she spoke the words, she was remembering those shuddering seconds when she had stood, only a few hours ago, gazing down at the inert bulk that had been a man.

Burke betook himself to another form of attack.

"Oh, you know better than that," he declared, truculently. "You see, we've traced the Maxim silencer. Garson himself bought it up in Hartford."

"But he told me——" she began, then became aware of her indiscretion, and checked herself.

Burke seized on her lapse with avidity.

"What did he tell you?" he questioned, eagerly.

Now, Mary had regained her self-command, and she spoke calmly.

"He told me," she said, without a particle of hesitation, "that he had never seen one. Surely, if he had had anything of the sort, he would have shown it to me then."

"Probably he did, too!" Burke rejoined, without the least suspicion that his surly utterance touched the truth exactly. "Now, see here," he went on, trying to make his voice affable, though with small success, for he was excessively irritated, "I can make it a lot easier for you if you'll talk. Come on, now! Who killed Griggs?"

Mary Stood Rebellious.

"That's for you to find out," she said, sneering.

Burke pressed the button on the desk, and, when the doorman appeared, ordered that the prisoner be returned to her cell.

"I suppose," she said, with a glance of contempt toward Demarest, "that it's useless for me to claim my constitutional rights, and demand to see a lawyer?"

Burke, too, had cast off pretense at last.

Mary spoke to the District Attorney.

"I believe," she said, with a new dignity of bearing, "that such is my constitutional right, is it not, Mr. Demarest?"

The lawyer sought no evasion of the issue. For that matter, he was coming to have an increasing respect, even admiration, for this young woman, who endured insult and ignominy with a spirit so sturdy, and met stratagem with other stratagem better devised. So, now, he made his answer with frank honesty.

Mary turned her clear eyes on the Inspector, and awaited from that official a reply that was not forthcoming. Truth to tell, Burke was far from comfortable under that survey.

"Well, Inspector?" she inquired, at last.

"We've Got Gargon."

Burke took refuge, as his wont was when too hard pressed, in a mighty bellow.

"The constitution don't go here!" It was the best he could do, and it shamed him, for he knew its weakness. Again, wrath surged in him, and it surged high. He welcomed the advent of Cassidy, who came hurrying in with a grin of satisfaction on his stolid face.

"Say, Chief," the detective said with animmation, in response to Burke's glance of inquiry, "we've got Garson."

Mary's face fell, though the change of expression was almost imperceptible. Only Demarest, a student of much experience, observed the fleeting display of repressed emotion. When the Inspector took thought to look at her, she was as impassive as before. Yet, he was minded to try another ruse in his desire to defeat the intelligence of this woman. To this end, he asked Gilder and the District Attorney to withdraw, while he should have a private conversation with the prisoner. As she listened to his request, Mary smiled again in Sphinx-like fashion, and there was still on her lips an expression that caused the official a pang of doubt, when, at last, the two were left alone together, and he darted a surreptitious glance toward her. Nevertheless, he pressed on his device valiantly.

"Now," he said, with a marked softening of manner, "I'm going to be your friend."

"Are you?" Mary's tone was noncommittal.

"Yes," Burke declared, heartily. "And I mean it! Give up the truth about young Gilder. I know he shot Griggs, of course. But I'm not taking any stock in that burglar story—not a little bit. No court would, either. What was really back of the killing?" Burke's eyes narrowed cunningly. "Was he jealous of Griggs? Well, that's what he might do then. He's always been a worthless young cub. A rotten deal like this would be about his gait. I guess. * * * Tell me, now, why did he shoot Eddie Griggs?"

All Poise Had Fled.

There was coarseness a-plenty in the Inspector's pretense, but it possessed a solitary fundamental virtue; it played on the heart of the woman whom he questioned, aroused it to wrath in defense of her mate. In a second, all poise fled from this girl whose soul was blossoming in the blest realization that a man loved her purely, unselfishly. Her words came stumblingly in their haste. Her eyes were near to black in their anger.

"He didn't kill him! He didn't kill him!" she fairly hissed. "Why, he's the most wonderful man in the world. You sha'n't hurt him! Nobody shall hurt him! I'll fight to the end of my life for Dick Gilder!"

Burke was beaming joyously. At last—a long last!—his finesse had won the victory over this woman's subtleties.

"Well, that's just what I thought," he said, with smug content. "An' now, then, who did shoot Griggs? We've got every one of the gang. They're all crooks. See here," he went on, with a sudden change to the respectful in his manner, "why don't you start fresh? I'll give you every chance in the world. I'm dead on the level with you this time."

But he was too late. By now, Mary had herself well in hand again, vastly ashamed of the short period of self-betrayal caused by the official's artifice against her heart. As she listened to the Inspector's assurances, the mocking expression of her face was not encouraging to that astute individual, but he persevered manfully.

"Just you wait," he went on cheerfully, "and I'll prove to you that I'm on the level about this, that I'm really your friend. * * * There was a letter came for you to your apartment. My men brought it down to me. I've read it. Here it is. I'll read it to you!"

He picked up an envelope, which had been lying on the desk, and drew out the single sheet of paper it contained. Mary watched him, wondering much more than her expression revealed over this new development. Then, as she listened, quick interest touched her features to a new life. In her eyes leaped emotions to make or mar a life.

Helen Morris' Letter.

This was the letter:

I can't go without telling you how sorry I am. There won't never be a time that I won't remember it was me got you sent up, that you did time in my place. I ain't going to forgive myself ever, and I swear I'm going straight always. Your true friend,

HELEN MORRIS.

For once, Burke showed a certain delicacy. When he had finished the reading, he said nothing for a long minute—only sat with his cunning eyes on the face of the woman who was immobile there before him. And, as he looked on her in her slender elegance of form and gentlewomanly loveliness of face, a loveliness intelligent and refined beyond that of most women, he felt borne in on his consciousness the fact that here was one to be respected. He fought against the impression. It was to him preposterous, for she was out of that underworld against which he was ruthlessly at war. Yet, he could not altogether overcome his instinct toward a half-reverent admiration. * * * And, as the letter proved, she had been innocent at the outset. She had been the victim of a mistaken justice, made outcast by the law she had never wronged. * * * His mood of respect was inevitable, since he had some sensibilities, though they were coarsened, and they sensed vaguely the maelstrom of emotions that now swirled in the girl's breast.

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

Chapter Eleven.

WHEN Jennie saw her girl friend at the office next day she asked her how she managed to have such nice dresses and such a nice furnished room on the salary she got. The girl winked and laughingly explained, "it was very easy, providing you were pretty and you found the right MAN." But even then little Jennie did not understand what she meant, and asked the girl to explain the meaning of the "right MAN" part of it.

This the girl was very reluctant to do, but finally admitted that one of the young men they were out with the night before gave her money—and that she just worked for the sake of having something to do. But she did NOT tell Jennie that the work also helped her to forget her way of living and to keep her mind off the day when she would NOT be as good looking and when the young man would have transferred his attentions to a younger and prettier girl—and the money wouldn't be so easy to get.

Jennie was quite shocked when she realized her girl friend was taking money from the young man, and as much as she wanted pretty clothes and good times she was sure she could never, never do THAT to obtain them.

Then the girl told her she knew of a place where Jennie could get clothes on credit. By just paying a dollar or so a week she could get all the clothes she wanted if they knew she had a fairly good job for a girl. Jennie was quite excited when she learned there were such places as these. Just think—and you would only have to pay a dollar or two a week. She was getting eight dollars a week. Pooh! she wouldn't miss one dollar of it. So at noon time she and the girl went to a store to pick out some clothes for Jennie.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I WAS reading a book last night that certainly gave me the Willies," said the Manicure Lady. "Wilfred brought it home from the library. It was all about the way them Romans used to go after the church members, and I never seen such terrible accounts of anything in my life. Why, George, them Romans used to burn the Christians in boiling pitch! Gee, I'm glad I wasn't around then, ain't you?"

"If I had been around I would probably have been one of the Romans," said the Head Barber. "I ain't no church member, even though I know that I ought to be one. I am always so tired after Saturday is over that I like to sleep till noon, and in the afternoon and evening me and the Missus usually goes somewhere like to the seashore or out in the country. If I had more time I would go to church, because it don't hurt anybody to go, and think of all the good religion has done."

"That's why I go," said the Manicure Lady. "Sometimes I feel as if the preacher and me don't quite agree on everything he says, but I always make allowance for the preacher. I was just saying to mother last night that the people that goes to church now ought to be very thankful that they didn't live among them Romans and that the brave people who did live in them days was ever on earth to start the churches and bring all that good into the world."

Not So Hard.

"There is a lot of church members now that wouldn't have stood the gaff then," said the Head Barber. "There is a lot more church members now, but the going ain't so hard."

"That is just what I was thinking when I was reading that book," said the Manicure Lady. "There was a smooth, chop-whiskered old geezer in here yesterday to have his nails did, and the way he purred around me and kind of insinuated would make you sick. He said that he lived over in a little Alabama town, and I asked him if he was the same kind of a gay old dog among the Birmingham manicure girls. Mercy, no, he told me. He said that he had to be a different person altogether when he was at home. He said he couldn't imagine what the other pillars of his church would say if a brother deacon got nifty. I asked him if he didn't have any conscience of his own, and he said that he had one, but it always got seasick when he was crossing the Chattahoochee River, so he left it at home.

"It is too bad, George, that old man Nero didn't have a few of that kind of church members for his lions and bonfire men to practice on, instead of the noble people that had to be martyrs. Pa used to go to church a lot when we lived over in South Carolina, but I guess he ran into so many good little toads like the gent of which I am just speaking of that he got sick of the job.

A Perfect Dear.

"The old gent may travel to the sideboard a little too often some evenings, but he ain't no hypocrite, and there is a lot of other men like him that would be there every Sunday when the plate comes around if there wasn't so many old fakes with sidewhiskers carrying the plate.

"I asked the old geezer what he did week days to rest up from going to church, and he said that he had a big factory where children could learn a good trade and grow up useful members of society like him.

"Do you follow me, George? What a perfect old dear he must be to his wife and children! Honest to goodness, George, if I could find out where his wife lived I would send her a synonymous letter and warn her of her husband's complicity, or whatever it is they call that Jekyll and Hyde stuff that makes a man kick up his heels when he gets where the high buildings looms. Gee, the shop seemed airier and better after he had went!"

By Joe Agler.

NEW ORLEANS, June 23.—Lefty Price will put 'em across for the Crackers this afternoon, opposing Rube Evans, and it looks like us for the money. Price is in great shape, and the bunch is working like a clock. If we don't take the whole series and move up to the top, where we belong, you can tell the bunch at the corner that Joe Agler's a bum prophet.

Old Man Rain won the first game here Sunday, owing to the lack of boating facilities in the park. The field offered fine opportunity for swimming early in the day, but the crowd kept on coming, in spite of the rain, and rather than let all that coin get away one game was decided upon. It was slippery as spaghetti, but that hurt nobody.

Game for Atlanta.

The postponed first game will be played on July 3, and will be transferred to Atlanta. We will not pull off a double-header here this trip.

We copped the one game of Sunday, Dent pitching a wet ball in great shape and having splendid support from the fielders. Whitey Alperman was the batting boy, landing two two-baggers and a single in five times up. Bill Bailey made a great running catch and Spencer pulled off one of the most brilliant running catches ever seen on the Pelicans' lot, grabbing Bailey's hot liner with his bare hand, after a long run.

Tommy Long crippled Jakey Atz at third base, nearly breaking Jakey's wrist and putting his thumb on the blink. Williams took Atz's place for the rest of the game.

The Old Man Obeys Orders, Too Well

Dundee Faces Hard Task July 15

Murphy Is Tough Boy to Beat

By Left Hook.

THE case of Johnnie Dundee is a remarkable one.

Here is a classy boy, one of the top-notch featherweights of America, who, after splitting a draw decision with the world's champion of that division, voluntarily steps into the lightweight grade and invites trouble from the 133-pound battlers. And he is sure to find it.

Dundee chased Johnnie Kilbane around the Vernon ring until both were leg weary. As a reward for his agressiveness the Italian was given a draw. There was no argument, but that of the two, Dundee was the most willing to make a fight.

Following this affair Kilbane went back on the easy money trail after men like Fox and Jimmy Walsh. Dundee, to hold the respect of the public, announced that he would pass up the featherweights as a lot of tame and mediocre boxers, and jump into the lightweight division among a few real fighters.

There is little doubt what this move increased the popularity of the little Italian, but it was a step backward, according to the way the over-managed boxer of to-day is handled, harking back to the days when a man signed a set of articles first and asked about the weight and reputation of his opponent afterwards.

As evidence of his good faith Dundee agreed to take on Ad Wolgast, a fighter from his heart out. Wolgast's broken hand caused the match to be called off at a time when both boys were putting in their last training licks.

* * *

DUNDEE then signed to box "Chicago" Jack White, with the understanding that the winner is to meet "Harlem" Tommy Murphy, the vicious veteran who recently beat Wolgast.

Dundee defeated White in twenty rounds and is now ready to start training for his twenty-round set-to with Tommy Murphy. Before the latter battle Dundee will taken on Tommy Dixon, July 4, but should have little trouble in defeating Jimmy Hurst's protege.

The Murphy battle, however, should prove one tough scrap for Dundee. The Harlemite has met the toughest lightweights in the game to-day and is really in line for a match with Ritchie. Many of the coast critics let out an awful howl when Rivers was given first chance at the title, claiming that Murphy was entitled to the match.

* * *

MURPHY'S latest achievement was a twenty-round victory over Ad Wolgast, but he has also defeated such stars as Owen Moran and Frankie Burns, besides giving McFarland a hard battle for twenty rounds.

Should Dundee manage to beat Murphy, no one in the world will be able to overlook him as a lightweight contender. But the task seems a difficult one. Dundee will be giving away about ten pounds in weight and it looks at this distance as if the extra poundage will be an awful handicap for Johnny. However, fighters of the Dundee type should be admired and he will not lack for admirers when he steps into the ring with Murphy.

BRITTON VS. LUCAS.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Jack Britton, the Chicago lightweight, was today matched to meet Willie Lucas, the Quaker City fighter, in a six-round contest at Philadelphia on June 27. They will weigh in at 138 pounds.

Riders Will Dress in Asbestos

Fireproof Togs for 'Dromers

THE riders out at the local Motordrome lie awake nights trying to think of something they can put over on somebody else. They are always getting something new with this end in view. For instance, Morty Graves has sent off for a new motorcycle, Georges Renel has bought a lot of new parts for his motorcycle, Manager Noon Hudson has another suit of clothes, Harry Swartz has a new wife and Jack Prince always has a fresh shower up his sleeve that he lets out on race nights.

But it has remained for George Lockner to spring the newest thing—an asbestos suit of clothes. He has wired to St. Louis for one and expects it here in time for use at Wednesday night's races.

These asbestos suits were introduced by a St. Louis rider, Brownie Carslake, and are being rapidly adopted by the other riders.

When They Are Needed.

In motordrome racing there are two reasons why asbestos suits are needed.

One reason is that the blooming motorcycles, fed enormous quantities of gasoline and spitting fire like an old-time dragon, are constantly catching on fire. Naturally, this would be bad enough under ordinary circumstances, but the awful complication arises from the fact that they usually touch themselves off while going at very high speed. The machines are not supplied with brakes and the rider must always choose between sticking on and getting his clothes on fire or falling off and breaking his neck. Harry Lewis, one of the riders at the local Motordrome, caught on fire the afternoon of the opening meet, and only the presence of the riders and a battery of fire extinguishers made it possible to put him out. With an asbestos suit this danger is removed. A man may cook a bit while his machine is slowing down, but he will not blaze.

Useful in a Spill.

The other need for an asbestos suit comes when a fall occurs. Going at high speed, a man is likely to slide a hundred feet or so over the surface of the track. Frequently the friction of such a slide sets the clothes ablaze, and the spectacle of a man on fire—maybe with a lot of bones broken, too—is not uncommon at motordromes. With asbestos suits this danger is removed. No matter what the friction is, the clothes can not catch on fire. As the riders' suits soon become impregnated with oil and are occasionally dashed with gasoline, they are highly inflammable, and the fear of being burned to death will probably drive all the local riders to the asbestos-suit stunt.

Plans are going forward at the local 'drome for the meeting Wednesday night. The program which was rained out on Saturday night will be carried through at that time, with the Mayor Woodward Sweepstakes as the feature.

The Browns and White Sox divided a double-header yesterday, the Browns winning the first game, 2 to 0, and the White Sox the second by the same score.

* * *

The Pirates came up from behind in the eighth in their game against the Reds yesterday and pounded out three runs, which gave them a 5 to 4 victory.

* * *

The Naps and the Tigers divided a double-header yesterday, the Detroit aggregation winning the first game in the tenth and the Naps romping home with the second game.

* * *

The Tigers by scoring one run in the sixth inning of yesterday's game broke the string of unscored innings which Gregg, of the Naps, was compiling. Up to that time he had pitched 32 innings without yielding a run.

In the second game, Ed Walsh allowed the Browns nine hits and Wellman and Allison allowed the White Sox only four, but the White Sox hits came at opportune times, while Walsh kept the St. Louis hits so scattered that no runs resulted.

Coulon Meets Burns At Kenosha To-night

KENOSHA, WIS., June 23.—Johnny Coulon, bantamweight champion of the world, and Frankie Burns, the Jersey City bantam, are on the edge for their scheduled ten-round battle here to-night.

Much interest is being displayed in the affair, as this is to be the fourth meeting between the pair. Ever since Johnny was given a hair-line decision over Burns at New Orleans in twenty rounds on February 15, 1912, there has been a great deal of rivalry between the boys.

The other bouts between the bantams were no decision affairs and critics usually agreed that they were about even up. As this will be Coulon's recally first tough scrap in over a year fans are anxiously awaiting the outcome. Johnny is billed to meet Kid Williams in a twenty-round go on July 29 and his showing tonight will have much to do in the way the fans bet their money in the tittle set-to. Coulon rules a 10 to 8 favorite over the Jersey City boy.

FOXEN SAID TO ADMIT HE 'LAID DOWN'

By Percy H. Whiting.

OF course you can't believe all the second-hand, near-beer saloon information that is floating around, but one bit of rumor has drifted in that is worth publishing.

This information is that Bill Foxen admits that he "laid down" on the Atlanta club and purposely played for his release.

We didn't hear this first hand. We aren't on Bill's speaking list. But it came pretty straight and it sounds pretty reasonable.

* * *

THE story is that Foxen admits he played for his release here. He is said to attempt to justify himself with the following statement:

"I got in bad with the Atlanta club because I wouldn't go out boozing with the players. They got sore on me and made it as hard as they could. Under the laws of organized baseball there was only one way to get away. That was by losing games. So I lost games." That may not be the word-for-word admission, but that is probably about the gist of it.

* * *

CASES where players have been accused of "laying down" are plentiful enough in the annals of baseball, but this is perhaps the first time on record where a player has admitted his guilt in the matter.

While nobody in Atlanta feels inclined to excuse Foxen in this matter, it is a fact that the rules of baseball make it pretty hard for a player who is thrown into a team made up of souses and soreheads. He must play with them, "lay down" or leave baseball.

* * *

OF course the only manly thing to do is to see it through, no matter what the conditions are on the team. The public has no love for a quitter. The Atlanta public shows that fact every time Foxen visits the city—and always will as long as he comes here.

Their only regret is that they can not get a shot occasionally at the other member of the hold-out sketch, Pitcher Frock. They would dearly dote on giving him an occasional good time.

Every match in the tournament was a moderately hard one for the winner. But in the second round he faced Hamilton Block in one of the greatest struggles ever witnessed on the East Lake course. Three of the four matches in the second round went into extra holes.

BOXING

News of the Ring Game

Four important bouts will be staged at Vernon, Cal., within the next five weeks. On June 24, Eddie Campi tackles Charley Ledoux; on July 4, Leach Cross meets Bud Anderson; on July 15, Tommy Murphy swaps punches with Johnny Dundee, and while on July 29 Johnny Coulon and Kid Williams fight for the bantamweight championship of the world.

* * *

Hammond, Ind., fight fans are rejoicing to-day over a declaration by Sheriff Whitaker that he would not interfere with boxing matches so long as the limit does not exceed ten rounds. It was the occasion of the home-coming of Jimmy Clabby, who recently defeated Eddie McGoorty. Clabby was banqueted on his return from Butte, Mont., where the bout took place.

* * *

Chicago fans are having a big laugh on Harry Trendall, the St. Louis lightweight. Recently Trendall was matched to meet Charlie White, but dodged the match when he heard of Charlie's hitting power, and instead he took on Eddie Murphy. The latter handed Trendall a neat lacing. White and Murphy are great friends and usually chum together when both are in Chicago.

* * *

* * *

The ringside weights for the return match between Jimmy Duffy and Jack Britton at Buffalo Monday night will be 136 pounds. The raise in the scale comes from Danny Morgan, Britton's manager.

* * *

Gunboat Smith has been made a 2 to 1 favorite over George Rodel, who meet at New York on June 27. The two heavyweights met about four months ago and, although Smith floored the Boer five times, he was unable to put him away.

* * *

Frankie Burns should give Johnny Coulon a tough battle when the two bantams hook up at Kenosha, Wis., on Monday night. Burns has met Johnny on several occasions and has always given a good account of himself.

* * *

Joe Golden, manager of Joe Thomas, is now a boxing promoter. Golden has matched "Wildcat" Ferns and Bobbie Dibbons for a 10-round bout to be staged in Pelican Park, New Orleans, on July 4. The welterweights are scheduled to go ten rounds.

* * *

Billy Nolan and Willie Ritchie have split. The fighter and manager could not agree on financial terms, and Willie has now decided to handle his own business for the present.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 23.—The Giants made a great finish to their Western trip, and I am now convinced that the New York club will win the pennant again. The Phillies appear to be gone, and I do not see any other team on the horizon or the schedule that can stop us.

What tripped up the Philadelphia club was what I had anticipated would stop it all through the season. The pitching staff cracked, and the rest of the team caved behind it. Both Seaton and Alexander, the two men who had carried most of the burden of the pitching so far in the race, were overworked, and the strain told. There are few pitchers who can appear three times a week, one week after another, and get away with it, and these two attempted to do just that. The strain of maintaining the lead also hurt Philadelphia's chances of grabbing the pennant. The Quakers are not altogether out of the fight yet, but I do not think they are the club which the Giants will be forced to beat now. If we once pull them behind, they are liable to go into several parts.

* * *

IT is hard to tell just which team will make the going for us from this point in the journey to its finish. For a long time, it had been my notion that Pittsburg would give the Giants the fight this season. The Pirates looked like one of the best baseball teams I had ever seen when they wound up the season last fall, and they should have been stronger this year. Baseball is certainly a funny thing.

* * *

THE Giants have just returned from one of the most successful Western trips ever made by a ball club. The only one which I have ever made since going out with a professional ball team that even approached it was the final swing around the circuit in 1911, when we grabbed the pennant in the last jump to the wire. On that junket we took eighteen out of twenty-two games, I think. We had to do it then, and we practically had to do it this time if the Giants were to beat Philadelphia back and stay in the race. We were all sitting around the lobby of the hotel in Cincinnati one night last week.

"It looks as if we have caught the Quakers," remarked McGraw.

"I did not expect that they would break as soon as this," volunteered "Larry" Doyle. "After they grabbed that series in Pittsburg it seemed as if they ought to have had renewed confidence."

"It was the cracking of their pitching staff and the spurt of the Giants that did it," answered McGraw. "When a team has been out ahead all season and is still playing good ball, but finds the second runner creeping up on them slowly in spite of their best efforts, it is just heartbreaking. That is one reason why I am none too particular about my team shooting out in front from the first. Every manager must count on at least one slump some time each year. We got ours in the spring. The Phillies are taking theirs now, and are liable never to come back.

"They've got some good pitchers," said Doyle.

"The pitching staff is all right, but overworked," replied McGraw. "Wait until they meet that string of stored-up double headers coming now with the pitching corps in its present run-down condition. The rest of the team I never could see. I never figured them as the pennant winners without wonderful pitching and luck. Baseball would be on the down grade if a club of the caliber of Philadelphia could take the championship in the National League."

JOE RIVERS STARTS HARD GRIND FOR RITCHIE BOUT

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23.—Joe Rivers, who has been at the Ocean Beach for the past few days doing light training, started to work in earnest yesterday. The Los Angeles lightweight put on the gloves in the Seal Rock gymnasium and surprised those who dropped into the big pavilion with his speed and cleverness.

Frank Carter, the welterweight that Manager Levy brought from Los Angeles, was his sparring partner, and the pair went three rounds. Rivers warmed up with four rounds of shadow boxing and was ready to go at a fast clip when Carter stepped into the inclosure. Joe stepped around the Mexican in lively fashion and showered blows on Carter.

CROSS AND LEDOUX TRAIN BEFORE A LARGE CROWD

LOS ANGELES, June 23.—A large crowd stood a 60-minute sun broil for the privilege of seeing Charley Ledoux, of Paris, France, and Leach Cross, of New York, box two rounds in the Vernon ring—and it was worth it, too.

Ledoux, blue-tighted to his neck, began operations with the punching bag. By actual count he landed on the leather just eleven times in nine minutes. Cross, attired in a cherry-colored makeup, stepped on the platform and made the bag beg for mercy.

RITCHIE IS IMPROVING; TO MAKE WEIGHT EASILY

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23.—Willie Ritchie demonstrated two facts in his first Sunday workout ahead of the Fourth of July bout. One is that his style has improved considerably over the days he was battling for recognition and the other is that he will not have the slightest difficulty in the world making 134 ringside and still show up strong. A good afternoon at the beach gave Joe Rivers one of the biggest crowds that has ever packed the pavilion to see boxers in training.

If the Suffs insist on so shoving in their interference it may be necessary to equip English race horses with fenders.

Or, as Bill Hallowell suggests, why not arm each jockey with a lance?

Even the worm will turn, as Confucius once remarked. For instance, the Pirates vary the monotony by winning a game with a margin of one run.

An expert informs us that the Tigers will be a strong team by the time August arrives. Therein they differ from the Browns, who show their greatest strength in December.

One is led to look askance at Mr. McGoorty's statement that the referee became excited and gave the decision to the wrong man. How could any human being become excited over a fight between Messrs. McGoorty and Clabby?

It was expected that these games would permit the staging of a little side issue battle between Ty Cobb and Joe Jackson, the sluggers of the league. But they did not. Cobb, because of a lame leg, was forced to retire in the third inning of the first game, and Jackson "sassed" an umpire a few innings later and was wigwagged out of the game.

Atlanta will be well represented at the meet. Carleton Smith, the present title holder, will go to defend his title. His partner in the doubles, Dr. Nat Thornton, will also attend.

B. M. Grant, Charles A. Sisson, E. S. Mansfield and E. V. Carter, Jr., are some of the others who will attend.

Smith and Mansfield will be paired in the doubles, as will Grant and Thornton. The other players will participate in the singles.

Writers Defend Play Barred in Germany

BERLIN, June 23.—The suppression of Hauptmann's "Festspiel" by the authorities of Breslau, because of the complaint made by the Crown Prince and many citizens that it gave too much praise to the French and not enough to the Prussian heroes, has caused angry protests from many literary men and others who are prominent in politic.

The Authors' Protective League entered a formal protest against what is termed the "brutal" prohibition of the play.

Railway at Panama Big Military Asset

Granted Insurance After Lung Trouble

As many cases of Lung Trouble start with a cold or a cough, the best advice that can be given is to get rid of the cold or cough as quickly as possible. Otherwise more serious troubles are likely to follow. If the medicines you are now taking do not bring relief, try Eckman's Alterative, the remedy for Throat and Lung Troubles, which has stood the test of time. Investigate this case:

257 Dean St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Dear Sirs: About a year and a half ago my health rapidly failed until at the end of six months my weight had fallen to 129 pounds. I was troubled with night sweats, a severe cough and was very weak. About this time I consulted a physician, who told me my lungs were affected. Not satisfied, I went to another doctor, who, after examining me, said that I was in the first stages of consumption. At this point I started to take Eckman's Alterative. The night sweats stopped almost immediately, my cough became looser and gradually disappeared. My weight is now 142 pounds and my physician has pronounced me perfectly sound—which, together with the fact that I have been accepted by two different insurance companies for insurance, makes me sure of my entire recovery by Eckman's Alterative."

(Affidavit) W. E. GEE.

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in case of severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all of Jacobs' Drug Stores and other leading druggists. GRADY HOSPITAL BARS OUTSIDE PATIENTS

Dr. W. B. Summerall, superintendent of the Grady Hospital, Monday issued a warning to non-residents of Atlanta that they must not send patients to the Grady Hospital. His announcement was a result of a most pathetic case of a young man in the last stages of an infectious disease, who was sent here from Warwick, Ga., by public subscription. Dr. Summerall is preparing to return him to his native town.

"The hospital is too small to accommodate legitimate cases," he declared. "We have been turning down about twelve applications a day from citizens of Atlanta. We certainly can not throw open our doors to persons outside. Yet in the last three months eighteen persons, hopelessly diseased, have been dumped on Atlanta from nearby towns, some of them outside the State. Some persons seem to think they can rid themselves of their unpleasant obligations by sending those helpless ones to Atlanta and forcing us to treat them.

Will Send Outsiders Back.

"We have sent each of the eighteen persons back to their homes, and we will continue this policy."

Early Monday the hospital was notified that there was a sick man at the Terminal Station. They responded to the call and found him, Ernest Harris, of Warwick, Ga., hopelessly ill.

The ambulance surgeon ordered him to Grady, although the hospital has no adequate facilities. Harris was too sick to be left on the streets, so he was taken to the clinic room and there given attention.

Harris told Dr. Summerall that he had had no medical treatment for four months and that he had not been able to get a bath for a month.

Doctors Turned Him Away.

He said there were two physicians in his town, but they had refused to treat him because he had no money. Finally, his condition became so wretched, he said, that a public subscription was taken and he was given a ticket and put on the train for Atlanta.

Dr. Summerall conferred with City Warden Thomas Evans and a railroad ticket back to Warwick has been obtained for Harris. Dr. Summerall declared it was the duty of every community, as long as it was able, to provide for its own mendicants.

"We need six times our present capacity to take care of the negroes in Atlanta who need treatment and four times as much capacity for the white people," said Dr. Summerall.

Hearer Dies as Text Is Read by Pastor

William B. Maner, age 65 years, died from heart failure while attending services at the Collins Springs Baptist Church Sunday morning. Rev. H. G. Mitchell, the pastor, had just announced the text of his sermon when Mr. Maner slipped down in his seat.

The deceased was well known in Atlanta, especially among railroad men. A wife and eight children survive him. Funeral services were held Monday morning at the residence, 6 Guyton Street.

Mme. Van Dyck, one of London's leading dancing instructors, who has just returned from Paris, said:

"The prejudice which may have existed among society people regarding new dances is certainly disappearing."

Women's Attire and Nude in Art Scored By Dr. Dunbar Ogden

An appeal for decency in life and art was made by the Rev. Dr. Dunbar Ogden at the Central Presbyterian Church Sunday night. The extreme fashion of woman's attire of the present day was declared by him to be a menace to the morals and the nude in art was even more vicious.

Dr. Ogden referred to a number of local instances to illustrate his sermon. Talking of the moving picture film, "Quo Vadis," he said: "We have the illustration of how Rome threw decency to the winds as it indulged in bacchanalian revelry. History tells us of how Rome tottered and fell. Our present trend is toward the moral disintegration which destroyed Rome."

Referring to the recent exhibition of art in the show windows of Atlanta stores, he declared their exhibition to be a crime, and that punishment as such should be meted out to the exhibitors.

Jamaica Is Worried by U. S. Banana Tax

KINGSTON, JAMAICA, June 23.—The receipt of a cablegram from Washington announcing that America will impose a tax on Jamaica bananas caused consternation among the planters here.

The banana industry is the principal one of Jamaica, and as most of the fruit goes to the United States the tax will be a serious blow to it.

It was announced Jamaica will establish a quarantine against Hayti, where bubonic plague is raging.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Keith Bill at the Forsyth.

The headline feature of the bill of vaudeville at the Forsyth this week is Gertrude Vanderbilt, the ever-popular little star of musical comedy. She and George Moore hold a position in vaudeville that has never been reached by any other singing and dancing duo.

The big extra added feature will be "Ideal," the champion lady swimmer and diver, who, Professor John Aldredge, of Columbia University, declares to be the most perfectly formed woman in the world. "Ideal" is going to give an exhibition of fancy swimming and diving in a tank pool sunk in the Forsyth stage.

Other features are the Six Musical Cuttys, pretty Minnie Allen, Doc O'Neil, comedian; Dorothy Richmond and her company, in a sketch, and the Four Hayama Japs, gymnasts. Matinee this afternoon.

"Quo Vadis" at the Grand.

"Quo Vadis," witnessed by thousands at the Grand at daily matinee and night exhibitions last week, commences its second week at the big theater with matinee and night performances to-day. The second week of the engagement of the pictures was arranged to take care of the great demand for seats from people who could not get accommodations last week.

The 10,000 feet of Italian film, in three acts and eight scenes, makes an entertainment continuing two and a quarter hours, and without a single second that fails to interest. The picture is all that has been said for it and more, too.

"The Merry Whirl" at the Bijou.

This week's attraction for the Bijou gives promise of being one of the most interesting and pleasing of the summer season. It is called "The Merry Whirl." There is splendid opportunity for good comedy work and the introduction of catchy musical numbers, in which the chorus takes a prominent part.

"The Merry Whirl" is said to be one of the most pretentious productions that will be seen this season at the Bijou.

Matinees will be given every afternoon at 3 o'clock, except Monday and Saturday. On these days the matinees will take place at 2:30 and 4. Night performances, as usual, at 7:30 and 9.

The Sunday American goes everywhere all over the South. If you have anything to sell The Sunday American is "The Market Place of the South." The Sunday American is the best advertising medium.

CONTESTANTS IN PONY RACE LET CHANCES SLIP

Many Votes To Be Had for the Asking—Energetic Ones Have Better Opportunity.

Every day persons come into The Georgian and American offices and order the paper sent to this or that address, saying nothing about votes. If these persons had been approached by one of the boys or girls in the pony contest the candidate would have been rewarded by a good batch of votes.

This only goes to show that votes are to be had for the asking.

Mail orders from the country, too, show that the boys and girls outside the city are not getting every subscriber they could.

Only Hustlers Win.

Contestants should remember that anyone will feel kindly toward the boy or girl asking them to subscribe for The Georgian and American. Whoever subscribes gets his money's worth, and the candidate gets the votes.

The 22 ponies and the 44 watches are going to be given away. Some one is going to win them. They will go to the contestants who show the greatest amount of activity, who use the greatest amount of intelligent effort.

There is no notch into which a weak, vacillating candidate will fit.

Optimism Big Help.

The idle dreamers and "wishful" candidates will gravitate to the bottom just as surely as a stone sinks in water, or a short-winded man falls behind in a foot race.

Optimism helps every time, and the candidate who believes he can get votes will get them.

Remember, the bonus offer for clubs of five still is in effect. If you need a subscription to complete a club, tell people. They will be just that much more ready to help you.

Campanini Is Given Applause in Paris

PARIS, June 23.—A Beethoven-Verdi-Saint-Saens festival took place at the Paris Opera House under direction alternately of Maestro Campanini, new manager of the Chicago Opera House, and Saint-Saens.

The chief feature was a finished performance of Verdi's "Requiem," conducted by Campanini. He was warmly applauded.

Wilson's Daughter To Sing for Social; To Inspect Prisons

SUPERIOR, WIS., June 23.—Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of President Wilson, on Thursday will take part in a social center entertainment to be given in Madison, Wis. She will sing several songs and dance with the members of the Social Center Club.

Governor Sulzer of New York has just appointed Miss Wilson a member of a commission to investigate the affairs and management of the prisons and reformatories of the State.

U. S. Converted to Need of Headlines

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Salesmen have been making a practice of displaying "pure food" decisions to customers, claiming products of rival concerns were condemned, when as a matter of fact the foods had been declared "O. K." To prevent this, a "headline" will be put over the top of every decision hereafter, stating clearly whether the manufacturer or the Government won.

Heretofore "it was frequently necessary to read the entire notice of judgment in order to learn whether a penalty had been entered or the defendant acquitted," the Department of Agriculture admits in a statement issued to-day. Salesmen took advantage of the average dealer's unwillingness to dig out the real meaning of decisions.

Airman Fined for Aeroplane Collision

PARIS, June 23.—A verdict was delivered in an action brought by two airmen, Captains Dickson and Thomas, to determine who was responsible for an aviation accident in Milan in 1910 when two aeroplanes were in collision.

The judge decided that Dickson was to blame and ordered him to pay $1,000 damages to Thomas and $2,000 damages to the makers of the aeroplanes.

CORONER SEEKS VITAL ORGANS OF PAINTER

JACKSONVILLE, June 23.—The fight over the possession of the vital organs of the late Edward Okle Painter reached a tense pitch to-day when Coroner C. D. Abbott left for Baltimore to contest the injunction preventing the removal of the organs to Jacksonville. The injunction was requested by the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company, one of whose policies Painter held to the amount of $20,000, and which has been particularly active in the investigation of incidents surrounding the death of the fertilizer man. The company has announced that it desires a further investigation.

Coroner Wants Organs.

Coroner Abbott has been given until Wednesday to show cause why the injunction should not be granted. He said to-day that he would conduct personally the fight in Baltimore for the possession of the remains, presenting his claims as the only person entitled to conduct an official autopsy. He was accompanied by Deputy Sheriff L. R. Haddock.

The departure of the Coroner and the detention of the vital organs in Baltimore necessitated the postponement of the inquest over Painter's body which had been set for to-day. It probably will be held Thursday or Friday immediately upon the return of the officers from Baltimore.

Grave Still Guarded.

Meanwhile deputies, under Sheriff Dowling, are maintaining their nightly vigil at Painter's grave at the insistent request of Mrs. Painter. The widow seems obsessed by the idea that ghouls have plotted to steal the body, her friends declare.

Sees Female Revolt In Central America

NEW YORK, June 23.—Mrs. Marie Hubbard, the Costa Rican wife of an American merchant in Brussels, before sailing for San Jose was anxious to know if there would be many American men on board. She said she desired to travel with Americans only.

"Every woman in Central and South America wants to marry an American and live in the United States," declared Mrs. Hubbard, "for in this country she is free. There will be a revolution in Central America some day, and it will be led by the women."

DRY GOODS TRADE GOOD; COLLECTIONS ARE NORMAL

"General dry goods business for the past week has shown up well in comparison with the figures for the same period a year ago, with collections about normal. On future business the average sales per man have been higher than for any corresponding week since 1907, and they report that buyers are purchasing more freely than is usual at this season.

"Retailers are doing good business on all sheer summer fabrics and wearing apparel. Wholesale stocks are becoming well cleaned up in preparation for the ventory, that being excellent response to the advertising of special offerings.

"The shipping department has been kept fairly busy taking care of immediate orders, the greater percentage of which were received from nearby States, although Eastern business placed through our New York office has been heavy."

COTTON DROPS AS LONGS LIQUIDATE

NEW YORK, June 23.—Influenced by weak Liverpool cables, the cotton market opened easier to-day with first prices at a net decline of 4 to 7 points from Saturday's final. Sentiment was more bearish than for some time past, owing to the dullness of Liverpool summer positions. Weather conditions over Sunday were favorable; also crop advices. However, the buying was rather general on and after the call, resulting in prices rallying some 2 to 5 points in most active positions from the initial level.

During the forenoon the selling became general and looked as if it came from the same source as Saturday, causing the market to weaken, with prices declining some 7 to 13 points from the previous close. The buying was very light and scattered.

During the afternoon session the market was quiet with very little trading. The selling pressure was in less evidence, while some brokers representing the larger spot houses were noticeable buyers. This class of buying caused prices to rally a few points from the early low level, but the market closed steady with prices at a net decline of 4 to 11 points from the final quotations of Saturday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, June 23.—Weather conditions continued favorable over Sunday with a nice rainfall in the Atlantics. Some good scattered showers in the central States and west Texas; temperatures normal; no excesses, warm nights, indications are for partly cloudy to fair and warm weather; some scattered showers.

Washington predicts a week of fair, warm weather—just as needed. Liverpool is poor in all departments; futures out 2 points lower than due; spots 5 points down; sales only 6,000 bales. Political news continues unfavorable and the repeated disappointments at the failure to arrive at a settlement is bound to itself in a further depression.

The press reports a congestion of old crop, Egyptian cotton in the warehouses in Alexandria with an apparent falling off in the demand. A feature of the spinning situation, especially in America, is the dullness in fine yarns.

The following report from Canton, Miss., shows the active fight made against the boll weevil: "The report says that $250 was distributed in prizes; 150,000 weevils were brought in, representing almost one-tenth of the weevils caught in the county."

This market opened about 7 points lower and weakened steadily. December selling to 11.45 in the second hour. New York reported some influential selling. Consumption prospects affected by the unfavorable political and financial situation is the principal bearish argument.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 23.—J. M. Anderson says: "The volume of trade today was only moderate, the buying and selling was pretty evenly divided. There was selling by the Wall Street interests, who were prominent on that side on Saturday, but a good scattered demand for contracts was found on the slight decline. Liverpool was a buyer and some of the Saturday sellers covered. Weather continues very favorable and local sentiment favors a further decline.

Texas wires: "Reports from all over State most promising; in fact, present conditions so perfect that anything to happen must be detrimental, as there is practically no room for improvement. There are reliable prospects for heavy new crop movement from south Texas in August and some even second half of July. European business so far very unsatisfactory; no demand."

The census report on Thursday, July 3, at noon, Eastern time, will give acreage of cotton this year and condition of crop to June 25.

Liverpool announces that Cotton Exchange will close at noon Saturdays and open at 11 a. m. on Mondays during June, July and August. The market will be closed July 11 and 12.

The Memphis Commercial-Appeal has the following on the condition of the cotton crop for the week:

"The weather of the past week was very favorable for the growth of cotton over the entire belt. Temperatures were high, with good showers in west and clear skies in the remainder of the belt—just the kind of weather needed. The plant made good progress, although most of its energy was occupied in overcoming the check placed upon it by the cool weather of the previous week, and for this reason its actual advancement was more real than apparent. As a result of the cool weather, the plant over the entire belt is a bit small, although probably slightly larger than last year, but it is making a bushy growth and shows the vitality that accompanies a good tap-root and favorable soil conditions.

"Good rains in Texas and portions of Oklahoma supplied the one thing needed in these States for the best growth of the plant. The excellent cultivation that has been a pronounced characteristic of the crop all season was maintained throughout the week and soil is perhaps better worked than ever before at this season. The rains and the fact that farmers were in the wheat harvest allowed weeds to gain headway in in portions of Texas, but the situation is one that a few days' work will soon cure. The other western States, the central valley, Alabama and nearly all of Georgia are nearly 100 per cent, with soil in excellent condition. In the Carolinas and a small portion of Georgia a few days more of warm, open weather are needed to further cultivation and the growth of the crop. Temperatures in the central valley are beginning to need rain, but no material damage will result should dry weather continue for another week. The one complaint reported was of boll weevil in Mississippi and Louisiana and isolated sections of Texas and Arkansas. There is a big crop of the pest in Mississippi and Louisiana, but farmers are fighting them under the direction of Government experts and are confident that in most localities they have them whipped."

* * *

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, June 23.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map is perfect; shows partly cloudy in the Atlantics and West Texas; fair rest of belt. Fine rains in the Atlantics; some good rains secured in the central States and West Texas; absolutely normal temperatures; no excesses; warm nights.

"Washington's forecast for week: "Warm and generally fair weather, with probably rain coming week in the Southern States; much showers as may occur will be local and widely scattered."

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Hayden, Stone & Co.: Sentiment is now very conservative and it will require lower prices to bring about aggressive buying.

Logan & Bryan: Fewer moderate purchases on further recessions.

Miller & Co.: Think the bears have again sold themselves into a trap.

STOCKS RECOVER SATURDAY'S LOSS

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 23.—The oversold condition of the stock market made it very sensitive to buying at the opening to-day, with the result that prices of nearly all the standard issues jumped upward.

Canadian Pacific opened 1¾ higher, but profit-taking developed which carried away ¾ of the advance. United States Steel common began at a gain of ½, but at the end of a half hour the upturn had been increased to 1 point. Among the other advances were Lehigh Valley, ¾; Erie, ¾; Erie preferred, ½; St. Paul, 1¼; Chesapeake and Ohio, 1; American Telegraph and Telephone, ¾; American Can, ½; Amalgamated Copper, ¾; Reading, ¾; Southern Pacific, ¾, and Union Pacific, 1.

Missouri Pacific began with a fractional loss, but recovered. Baltimore and Ohio was unchanged at the outset, but later lost ½ on selling pressure. American Car and Foundry lost ¼, then recovered. Much of the buying represented covering by board room shorts. At the end of half an hour the buying movement had diminished.

The curb market was steady.

There was more liquidation on the London Stock Exchange at the opening. Dealings in Americans in London were small. Canadian Pacific in London was firm.

The strong tone which prevailed at the opening was maintained through the forenoon with issues making gains of 2 or more points. Union Pacific was the most active of the railroad issues, advancing 2⅞ to 144⅝, but an excellent advance was made in Canadian Pacific, 2¼ points to 216⅛. Reading continued on the upward movement, reaching 157¼, a net gain of 2¼. Copper was up ⅝ from the opening, a net gain of 1⅝. Steel, Northern Pacific, Lehigh Valley and all other leading stocks after slight recessions made worthy gains.

Call money loaned at 2 per cent.

After the upturn around noon, the market again sold off in the last hour and prices shaded from the best. Steel sold around 51⅝, while Union Pacific went to 142⅞, for a loss of 1¼ from the midday level. Later, however, Union Pacific and Lehigh Valley sold down to 143½ for the loss of 1 point from the noon price. Other prices just before the close were Amalgamated Copper 62⅝, American Smelting 61, Erie 23½, Baltimore and Ohio 92, and Canadian Pacific sold down to 215¼ for a decline of 1⅜ from the noon.

The market closed dull.

Government bonds unchanged; other bonds dull.

OPINION ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, June 23.—Bartlett, Frazier & Co.: Wheat—The weather map shows some precipitation in Canadian Northwest, but very little in the American Northwest. There does not seem much in news to cause any important change in values.

Corn—Since Saturday there have been good rains over the entire corn belt. Prices will doubtless be lower to-day, the extent of the decline depending on the volume of liquidation.

Oats—As in corn, the precipitation will doubtless be more or less of a depressing factor.

Provisions—General sentiment continues bullish, but an easier corn market may give us some decline.

Poultry, Pet and Live Stock

The Hen and Her Cost of Maintenance Versus the Cow

By a comparison of the intrinsic value of the individual hen and her cost of maintenance we find that, taking into consideration the value of each, the net profit from the hen exceeds that from the cow. Forty good laying hens are worth about the same as the average dairy cow, considered in the light of practical utility only. Forty good utility pullets given good, fair average treatment will give a profit for a year of at least $50 net, taken at a low estimate for price of eggs at that. If you would go to work and give them special or scientific care the proceeds would be largely increased. Now where is the average dairy cow (common stock), with average care and no more, that will yield anything like $50 after paying expenses of feed, etc.? I will venture the assertion that they will not net their owners more than half that amount. I make this assertion not for the discouragement of dairy interests in the South, not by any manner of means, for we need increased dairy in the South. There is ample room for both the poultry and dairy business, but let it be known by those who have been inclined to think slightly of the poultry part that it needs no overestimation at my hands. The little industrious hen is ready at any time to demonstrate her ability along these lines if only given half a chance for a living. Taken on land that is even too poor to make good grazing land poultry will do well on it, and if the droppings are properly cared for and used on land when the green stuff is raised, the land can soon be made to produce almost anything in the way of crops, at the same time you are reaping a handsome profit. You can not expect, however, that poultry will thrive without care. The trouble with poultry, therefore, is that it has been neglected. The every-day, old-fashioned farmer thinks the hen below his dignity and of little value, and for that reason he has not given her the care that other matters have received at his hands. I say old-fashioned farmers to distinguish them from the up-to-date kind who are fully aware of the value of the hen as compared with the cow and the hog.

Now, friends, wake up and see which class of farmers you belong to, and if you find you are with the out-of-date kind I would advise you to lose no time in flopping over to the kind that are now in the lead. You will be in good company, as well as a money-making crowd. There is a saying that the hen will eat anything the hog will and produce much better results. I would like to see the farmers of the South raise more fowls, and more pork, too, for that matter; but give me the chickens.

Standard Revision Committee Meeting at Indianapolis in July.

There will be a meeting of the Standard Revision Committee appointed to revise the American Standard of Perfection for the 1915 edition at the Washington Hotel, Indianapolis, beginning Monday, July 7, and continuing as many days as is necessary to transact the business to come before that body. This is an important meeting to all poultrymen who are in any way interested in the breeding or exhibiting of thoroughbred poultry, no matter of what kind. The meeting was located at Indianapolis, one of the most central points, to accommodate poultrymen from the North, South or East and West. The wish of the committee is that all who are interested in having any changes made in the standard of their breed, or who may be interested in the admission of some new breed, will be on hand and personally lay their claims before the committee. Of course all correspondence will be given every consideration possible, but it's so much more satisfactory to be able to talk a matter over with the parties interested. It would be well for all who are interested to make an effort to meet the committee.

If you can not be there write your wishes to any member of the committee, who will lay your claim before the committee as a whole.

The members are Reese V. Hicks, Topeka, Kans., chairman; W. S. Russell, Ottumwa, Iowa; A. C. Smith, Waltham, Mass.; E. C. Branch, Lee Summit, Mo.; W. C. Pierce, Indianapolis, Ind.; J. H. Drevenstedt, Buffalo, N. Y.; Richard Oke, London, Ont.; F. J. Marshall, College Park, Ga.

ONE of the greatest drawbacks to poultry-raising in the South is lice. They kill more little chicks than all the diseases combined, and when a hen is full of lice you can not expect her to lay many eggs. However, if you start in time you can get rid of these pests without very much trouble. Cleanliness is the main thing to consider; keep the house cleaned out, and once a week, at least, spray thoroughly all the roosts, dropping boards and nests with Pratt's or Conkey's Lice Liquid. They are both good preparations, and are guaranteed to kill. It is also a good plan to use lice powder; a 25c box of Conkey's Lice Powder will dust about 75 hens, and if used in connection with Lice Liquid you can soon have your flock free from these pests and you can soon see the good results from the increased egg production.

ARE your baby chicks lousy? Better examine them, and if they are get a package of Conkey's or Pratt's Head Lice Ointment, prepared especially for baby chicks; rub a little back of the head and under each wing; it will positively kill every louse and not injure the chick. 10c and 25c package.

IT IS NOT a good plan to feed much corn during the hot weather. A great many brands of Scratch Feeds that are offered have about three-fourths corn. The Red Comb brand has only a small percentage, and is by far the best Scratch Feed sold in this market. $2.25 per 100 pounds.

THIS is a good time to feed mash feed. The Red Comb Mash is a perfectly balanced ration, just the thing for the hens, also fine for baby chicks. $2.25 per 100 pounds.

WE CARRY a full line of poultry yard supplies, drinking founts, feed hoppers, grit and shell boxes, feed pans, in fact everything for the poultryman. Come see our line and get our prices before you buy.

BOARD WANTED.

WANTED—Board by three refined young men in private family; Grant Park section preferred. Address Park, Box 1, care Georgian. 37-20-6

WANTED—Accommodations for the Georgia legislators. They are coming in now and will be in session at the State Capitol from June 25 for FIFTY days. All of them are on the outlook for nice, comfortable and home-like places to eat their meals, or to board or to rent. Many of the places these legislators had last year did not suit them and they desire to find something better. All the legislators will read The Georgian—that's certain. Their attention will be called day after day to the "Legislators' Accommodations" column on the Want Ad pages of The Georgian. This will be a big advantage to you. So if you have eating or boarding places or have rooms, apartments or houses for rent, your ad should be under the "Legislators' Accommodations" heading. An investment of a few cents will keep your house full for the next three months. Phone or send in your ad at once.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Julius Brown Home Placed on Market

One of the finest of the old-time homes on the South Side, the Julius Brown place, at the northwest corner of Washington and Rawson Streets, has been put up for sale in the real estate market through a well-known real estate agency. A sign has been hung out.

The Brown mansion is a three-story brick affair with many rooms. Years ago it was famed for its collection of pictures and Oriental novelties brought from abroad by the owner. North of it is the lot owned and occupied by the late Governor Joseph E. Brown, which was bought recently from the English-Commercial High School.

Exchange of Properties.

The Edwin P. Ansley real estate agency has announced the sale of 442 South Pryor Street, 50 by 170 feet, a two-story, 14-room house, to Mr. Morehead for Mrs. Lucie C. Christian, for $6,800, and of a vacant lot, 25 by 95 feet, on Edgewood Avenue, 50 feet east of the northeast corner of Boulevard and Edgewood, for Mr. Morehead to Mrs. Christian, for $3,500. This was in the nature of a swap.

Sale of Cottage.

C. F. Coppedge has bought from J. F. Schilling a cottage on a 64 by 211 foot lot on Highland Avenue for $2,600, and expects later to improve with twin apartments. This is near Virginia Avenue. The deal was handled by I. W. Harrell, of the George P. Moore agency, who also has announced the sale to James K. Polk for a client a 100 by 220 foot vacant lot on the west side of Germania Avenue, west of Decatur, for $950 cash.

Residences for Peachtree.

Robert Zahner has begun work on a handsome residence which he will erect on the west side of Peachtree Road facing Lakeview Avenue, a few hundred feet south of the estate of Colonel Walter P. Andrews.

J. J. McGrath is finishing his attractive two-story home on Peachtree Road north of the south entrance to the Capital City Country Club.

TARIFF AFFECTS SOUTH LITTLE, SAYS SMITH

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia, member of the sub-committee which considered the cotton schedule in the tariff bill, considers the cotton schedule the one of greatest interest to the South and about the only schedule touching that section as a whole to any extent.

"The most important feature in the cotton schedule is the provision which adds 2 1-2 per cent to the tariff tax on cotton yarns when combed, bleached, dyed or mercerized," he said. "The House has added 2 1-2 per cent to the tariff on cotton cloth when dyed, mercerized or painted. The Senate Finance Committee considered that the same treatment should be given to cotton yarns. Other than in this respect little change was made in the cotton sched

Do You THINK While You Are Dressing?

The Time Used in Dressing Need Not Be Wasted

(Copyright.)

Man in the process of evolution has got rid of his fur, or feathers, and every day he must put on something to take the place of fur, and every night he must take off the artificial clothing.

One old man in the State of New Jersey killed himself and left a note saying that he died because he was so tired of buttoning and unbuttoning clothes.

There is apparently no greater waste of time than the time that is spent in dressing and undressing.

Bathing, shaving for men and powdering your nose for women, finding what you want to wear and putting it on—it is a tiresome part of every day.

BUT—

The hours in which a human being grows and develops mentally are the hours of solitude.

And a great many of us are practically never alone, except when we are getting dressed or undressed.

Sleep is a time of idleness—no growth there.

When we are with others we listen, learn perhaps, and debate, but we don't really THINK WITH INTENSITY.

The one thing that makes you more of a man than you were last year is intense, solitary thought.

Why not say to yourself: Since I must spend at least 330 hours a year in dressing and undressing, in bathing and shaving and looking for my collar button, I'll also spend that time IN THINKING?

Do you know how many men spend 300 hours a year in actual concentrated thought?

Not one in a thousand.

Suppose you see what you can make out of the hours lost in putting on and taking off the artificial fur and feathers and how much you can grow in the thinking.

Bacon felt that the mind was developed by reading, talking, and writing.

And he said:

Writing maketh an exact man.

Speaking maketh a ready man.

Reading maketh a full man.

Reading fills you with knowledge, speaking makes you quick or ready, writing makes you exact—true.

But more important than reading, writing or speaking IS THINKING.

The real YOU lives inside of your brain alone. And it works at its best when you are alone.

Aristotle taught Alexander the Great walking up and down with the young prince that he might become wise and strong at the same time—that is what they call the peripatetic method of intellectual development.

Why don't you educate yourself in thought as you march up and down from the bed to the bathroom, from the rough towel to the safety razor, and so on through the long, tiresome and usually wasted process of dress?

THE OLD ROMANS

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THEY strutted into the bar room,
Three boys—they were nothing more;
They ordered their drinks with grins and winks,
While their heels hit hard on the floor.
When one of them grew less frisky
And seemed half ready to sink,
Cried the others, "Aw, one more whisky!
That's a good old Roman drink!"

Then I thought of the real "Old Romans"
That I knew long years ago,
When we stuck to the "corn" from night till morn
As fast as the stuff could flow.
There was Billy O'Keefe, of Denver—
Too bad poor Billy is dead
He could pack away three quarts a day
And never rattle his head.

There was Jack McGee of the Morning Bee,
And Flynn of the Fourth Estate,
Larry McCale of the Portland Mail—
All dead before thirty-eight.
There was Blake of the Brooklyn Bugle,
And Grant of the Memphis Sun,
And a dozen more, or maybe a score,
Whisky got them, one by one.

I felt the tear that unbidden starts
When I thought (it hurt like a knife)
Of the nimble brains and the golden hearts
All stilled in the prime of life.
Then I walked from the noisy bar room
And muttered a prayer to God
For the souls of the real "Old Romans"
Now dreamless under the sod.

"I Used To Be"

How many times have you yourself heard men, standing up against a bar, bragging about what they USED to be? Perhaps some were telling about the good jobs they ONCE had; or maybe another one—with the shell of a ONCE fine body—was telling what a great athlete he USED to be, how he ONCE did "the hundred yards in 93-5," but could not now even run for a car without blowing like a grampus. You will also notice that these men usually drink WHISKEY—because, as they put it, it has a stronger "KICK" than other drinks. What better word could define it than KICK? Look around you at the men it has KICKED out of good jobs, good health and good homes into the land of USED TO BE.

I KNOW the need of the world.
Though it would not have me know.
It would hide its sorrow deep,
Where only God may go.
Yet its secret it cannot keep;
It tells it awake or asleep,
It tells it to all who will heed,
And he who runs may read.
The need of the world I know.

I know the need of the world.
When it boasts of its wealth the loudest,
When it flaunts it in all men's eyes.
When its mien is the gayest and proudest.
Oh! ever it lies—it lies,
For the sound of its laughter dies
In a sob and a smothered moan,
And it weeps when it sits alone.
The need of the world I know.

I know the need of the world.
When the earth shakes under the tread
Of men who march to the fight,
When rivers with blood are red
And there is no law but might,
And the wrong way seems the right;
When he who slaughters the most
Is all men's pride and boast,
The need of the world I know.

I know the need of the world.
When it babbles of gold and fame,
It is only to lead us astray
From the thing that it dare not name,
For this is the sad world's way.
Oh! poor blind world grown gray
With the need of a thing so near,
With the want of a thing so dear,
The need of the world I know.

The need of the world is love.
Deep under the pride of power,
Down under its lust of greed,
For the joys that last but an hour,
There lies forever its need.
For love is the law and the creed
And love is the unnamed goal
Of life, from man to the mole.
Love is the need of the world.

THERE is only one need in the world.

The need to love our neighbors as ourselves.

To do exactly as we would be done by.

The need to understand that the human race is one body; and that when we do anything which harms or hurts one individual, we harm all individuals, ourselves included.

Just as we harm the body, when we injure any member, hand, foot, eye, or ear.

When we stop and think about the world, the whole process of life becomes very pitiful.

Each, being born upon the earth, is striving for happiness, from the cradle to the grave, in his own way.

According to his light, he is doing the best he can.

He does not know it, but the only satisfying things which he can get out of life are peace of mind, self-respect and the love of his fellow men.

Nothing he can obtain without these things, nothing he can achieve or become, is of any real value.

No man can be happy without those three blessings. Any man can be happy with them.

Even though he is saddened by the sorrow he sees about him; the sorrow which results from striving after the needless things of earth; after more than we need; after what does not belong to us; after the possessions of others.

There would be no war; no industrial problems; no prisons; no poor houses; no white slaves; no sex sins; if men and women all set forth early in life on that threefold quest—for peace of mind, for self-respect, for the love of their fellow men.

That is all any soul is seeking; that is all any soul desires; because that is all there is in life worth living for. Yet is there war, and strife, and hatred; and sin; and sorrow and anguish; and misery and poverty.

Because men have not yet learned that there is only one need in the world.

And the need of the world is LOVE.

The Dictograph

The Dictograph, He Says, Is the Electric Symbol of the New Age, of Which the Newspaper Is the Prophet, in Which the Perils of Privacy Will be Matched by Powers of Publicity.

WRITTEN FOR THE GEORGIAN

By REV. DR. JOHN E. WHITE

Pastor Second Baptist Church

ALL the real problems of society have been anticipated. The progress of modern times is manifest in the good answers we are making to ancient questions.

The Dictograph, for instance, is the New Invention of which Old Necessity is the Mother. The Celestial Society of Olympus, which the Romans created to furnish ideals and to set up standards of judgment on mundane matters, considered it.

Momus reported to Jupiter that the great evil among men was secrecy and deceit. He complained against Jupiter that he ought to have provided a glass window in every human breast, just over the heart, so that the inward truth of men's thoughts would be accessible to everybody, so that deceit would have been impossible.

He made such a row about it that he was kicked out of Heaven.

The Dictograph is a sop to Momus, but the fate of Momus is a warning to the dictographer. The application of this little Edisonic device to human affairs will arouse all the modern pagan Furies.

Some Possibilities.

Another Edward Bellamy may now tell us of its development and application to progress in the year A. D. 2500. The addition of a photographic attachment was the next step of invention to increase its effectiveness.

In the highly organized society of the year 2,500 the government had provided Dictographs in every home, hotel room and private office. A central receiving station was arranged for the record of disgraceful family disputes, star-chamber conferences and political conspiracies.

The photographic device was employed for Pan-Hellenic ballrooms, with a special corps of operators between 3 and 6 o'clock in the morning, to obtain truthful pictures of the "tango" and the "turkey trot." After midnight cabs and automobiles were equipped.

During sessions of the Georgia Legislature, in the hotels and boarding houses and private dinner parties at the houses of politicians, it was found particularly useful.

The striking fact Edward Bellamy, Jr., records was that civilization had responded to the restraint of the Dictograph and that its abuse was inconsiderable beside the manifest improvement in the tone and quality of human conduct.

Perils of Privacy.

The Dictograph is not all a joke.

The exaggeration of its possibilities is not a reductio ad absurdum.

The irresistible movement toward relentless publicity it symbolizes is profoundly supported in social intelligence.

The perils of privacy, secrecy and the suppression of facts are realized.

The basic religious conviction that Deity sees, hears and knows is at work day and night to justify the increasing passion of humanity to see, hear and know.

The Christian assurance that "nothing is secret that shall not be made manifest; neither anything hid that shall not be known and publish itself abroad" is the moral sanction of publicity as the consummation of the highest civilization.

The man who loves darkness better than light is under cosmic condemnation. The guardians of public health ruthlessly placard the places of disease.

The exponents of moral health also are every day bolder and bolder in disregard of any challenge of personal secrecy which conceals sources of moral contagion.

The old sanctity of wrong under the cover of private rights is an exploded theory of social relations.

In whatever concerns the public safety the public has a right to the facts.

The outcry against the publication of the Standard Oil letters made no appeal to the American conscience.

The Good of Publicity.

In England the divorce evil is treated as a public matter, and not even the nauseous details are withheld from the public eye. Those who object to the application of that rule in this country should show better reasons for secrecy and privacy in behalf of domestic infidelities than the Fulton County divorce courts afford.

The world adjusted to the law of publicity is the good promise of the times, and the Searchlight, the Newspaper and the Dictograph are its phophetic tokens.

Belief of Samuel Adams

By WILLIAM VINCENT BYARS.

IT was Samuel Adams, one of the greatest founders of the United States, who said that "truth loves an appeal to the common sense of mankind."

It was this thought which made him powerful.

It made him the greatest Democratic leader of New England in the eighteenth century.

He was born in Boston in 1722, when all New Englanders were royalists. He was born rich. His family made money out of a brewery. He lost money in politics, so that when he died in 1803 he had barely enough to pay for his funeral.

He had helped to found the United States. He held office many years, but he was afraid to make money.

This was the only thing he was afraid of. He was afraid that if he did not keep himself as poor as most other people he would lose his common sense.

He meant by common sense the sense people have when they are trying to be fair to each other instead of over reaching and cheating.

If he found a man who could not read, trying not to cheat and over reach others, he thought him a better judge of truth than a prime minister. He believed that God made all men with sense enough to be honest.

At a time when he would have been hanged by a Tory prime minister, if caught, he said that truth loves an appeal to the common sense of mankind, and that "He who made all men, made the truths necessary for human happiness obvious to all."

This was his answer after he had been declared a traitor.

He spent his life trying to prove that politics may be improved by less cheating and shooting. He thought that finally nearly everyone would agree with him that common honesty and common sense are enough to make the best government on earth.

VENIRE OF 72 FOR FRANK JURY IS DRAWN

Negro Conley Sticks to Affidavit Story When Again Cross-Examined by Dorsey.

The first official action of the court in preparing for the trial of Leo M. Frank for the murder of Mary Phagan was taken Monday afternoon when Judge L. S. Roan impaneled 72 men, from whom a jury to hear the case will be sought.

June 30 was agreed to by Judge Roan for the opening of the case. If a postponement is desired it will now have to be asked for in open court.

As yet Judge Roan said he had received no intimation from the defense that a delay was wanted. Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey said Monday the prosecution was ready for trial.

Trial in Thrower Building.

An extra staff of deputies has been sworn in and subpenas to jurymen impaneled and witnesses are now being served.

No plans for a larger room in which to hear the case have matured, and it is likely that the courtroom of the Superior Court in the Thrower Building will be used at last, despite its size and lack of comfort.

Jim Conley, the negro sweeper, was brought before Solicitor Dorsey Monday morning for another cross-examination. The questions were solely along the lines of the negro's affidavit charging Frank with the crime. As the Solicitor later said, he had only refreshed Conley's mind on the points he had made in his statement. The negro told the same story he told before without deviation.

Mr. Dorsey said that he would call all of the principal witnesses for the State and refresh their minds on the part they will play in the trial.

W. J. Coleman, stepfather of the strangled girl, was summoned by the Solicitor after Conley had been questioned for some time and was brought before the negro. Strict secrecy surrounded the performance, and if anything was gained by confronting the sweeper with Coleman it was not divulged. Mary Phagan's grandfather accompanied Coleman.

Later Coleman said that he had called particularly to ask the Solicitor if Judge Newt Morris, formerly of the Blue Ridge Circuit, could be brought into the case. Mr. Dorsey informed him that the State had made all arrangements for handling the case, but that if he wanted to have the former Judge represent the family there would be no objection.

Attorney Reuben Arnold, for Frank, announced Monday morning that the defense's case was complete. Mr. Arnold said that the testimony of twelve witnesses would form the bulk of Frank's support. He declared that only the inability of one or more of these witnesses to appear at the time set for the trial would cause the defense to ask for a postponement.

Monteen Stover, the young girl who called at the pencil factory office between noon and 12:15 o'clock on the afternoon of the murder, was taken before Jim Conley at the police station Sunday and identified by the negro as the girl he had seen while hiding at the foot of the stairway waiting for Frank's signal.

Conley Identifies Girl.

Detectives went out to the Stover girl's home at 171 South Forsyth Street late in the afternoon and asked that she dress as she had on the afternoon of the murder and go to the police station with them.

The girl put on a small yellow hat with a red ribbon about it, enveloped her body in a yellow raincoat and

CHICAGO, June 23.—"Were it not for the alienists and neurologists of America, the country would in time be inhabited only by insane persons."

This was the statement to-day of Dr. J. Cheston King, of Atlanta, before the convention of neurologists meeting here under the auspices of the Chicago Medical Society.

"There are more insane people in the United States than any other country in the world," he said.

Causes of insanity, he said, were whisky, hereditary weakness, religious excitement and modern life.

"The business man and the society woman," he said, "are falling victims to modern life. The business man often loses his mind through chasing the almighty dollar, and the society woman for various reasons, among them loss of sleep, too much dancing, irregular eating, worry over card games, envy of another's success and too much attention to dress."

Hot Wave Is in No Danger of Breaking, Says Weather Man

"Continued warm weather, with possibly thunder showers late in the afternoon," was the weather outlook for Monday.

Forecaster C. F. VonHerrmann said the backbone of the hot spell was in no danger of being broken. "We are due to have considerable more hot weather through June and July," he said. "If it keeps up much longer this way, the old record of sixteen consecutive days with the temperature above 90 may be broken."

Mr. VonHerrmann said the weather was about the same all over the country, 90 degrees being the average.

The thermometer at noon registered 86 degrees and at 1 o'clock 88 degrees. The maximum temperature, between 2 and 3 o'clock, approximated 90, the lowest maximum of last week.

Woman With Dagger Attacks Policeman

Flora May Bateman, a negro woman, who made an attack on Call Officer T. M. Gorman when placed under arrest for disorderly conduct, will be tried in Recorder's Court Tuesday.

The policeman had a narrow escape when he attempted to arrest the woman. She attacked him with a long dirk she drew from her stocking. She was subdued and placed under arrest only after a lively struggle. The policeman was not hurt.

Bogus Check Charge Causes His Arrest

J. Percival, charged with passing a bogus check for $100 on Charles C. Jones, proprietor of the Rex Saloon, will arrive in Atlanta from Birmingham Monday night in custody of Detective J. W. Hollingsworth.

Percival was arrested in Birmingham Sunday on complaint of Jones, who has preferred the charge.

Slew While Making Arrest; Put on Trial

E. H. Parham, the former policeman who shot and killed John Wright a year ago, was put on trial before Judge L. S. Roan Monday morning for involuntary manslaughter.

Boy Tries to Kill Judge and Attorney

WASHINGTON, June 23.—When Justice Stafford, of the District Supreme Court, refused to parole Ray M. Stewart, 18, convicted of highway robbery, Stewart ripped out a revolver and shot three times at S. McHawkins, prosecuting attorney, but without effect. He then swung around toward Justice Stafford, but was overpowered.

The charge on which Stewart was tried was the holding up of Norman Butler, a negro, last December.

LEGISLATORS ALL HERE; LOBBYING HINTED

Reports That Interests Have Hand in Senate Presidency Fight Are Being Circulated.

Undoubtedly the big and absorbing topic of comment and speculation among the great throng of Georgia legislators statesmen and politicians in Atlanta to-day is the forthcoming election of a President of the Senate.

Judge John T. Allen, of the Twentieth District, and Senator J. Randolph Anderson, of the First District, both advance ironclad claims to election.

Each exhibits that which he considers unqualified pledges of support from more than a sufficient number of Senators to elect.

Senator Anderson gave out an interview Saturday in which he said he had 28 votes signed, sealed and delivered. He said then, and reaffirms it to-day, that he has the race won beyond a doubt.

Judge Allen, on the contrary, gave out the following interview to-day:

"Senator Anderson has not 28 votes pledged—he can not have. I do not say he willfully misstates the situation—he may imagine he has the votes—but he misstates it, nevertheless.

Claims 25 Votes.

"I have 25 votes pledged to me in writing, without any qualifications whatever — straightaway promises. Not one man signing these pledges—they are individual, and not in the form of a list—will break his word to me. I shall be elected, for it only requires 23 votes, and I think I shall get five besides the ones I now have pledged.

"It should be remembered, too, that a distinguished South Georgian, Judge Sweat, has four votes, and that another distinguished Senator, Mr. Tyson, has two or three. Judge Sweat is in the race, and so is Senator Tyson—I take it neither would be in unless he had at least one pledged vote.

"Claiming is one thing and showing down the corn is another. I shall have the necessary votes when the roll is called Wednesday.

Denies Aid of Interests.

"As to the rumor that certain corporations and manufacturing interests may be taking a hand in the race for the Senate Presidency, I know nothing more than that no corporation or big manufacturing interest is taking a hand in my race. I can win, and will win, without that. And certainly I would prefer to."

Despite the statements of the rival candidates for the honor of being President of the Senate, and ex-officio Lieutenant Governor of Georgia, the impression is that this race is yet to be won, and will be won between this time and the assembling of the Senate Wednesday.

Politicians of all shades of opinion, all over the State, are watching this fight with intense interest.

Legislators All Here.

Nobody seems to know who is to win the Presidency of the Senate, which carries with it the Lieutenant-Governorship of Georgia.

On the surface of things, the fight seems to be about even between Senator Allen, of the Twentieth, and Senator Anderson, of the First.

Below the surface rumor and gossip speaks of many things not yet talked about the hotel lobbies freely and openly.

The President of the Senate might, in certain circumstances, succeed to the Governorship, and certainly he is sure to be a compelling factor in the shaping of legislation.

Wherefore, one hears it whispered

CROWDS SEE AGED MAN AND BOY INJURED

Two Automobile Accidents in Downtown Streets—Driver of One Motor Held.

Two persons, one a six-year-old newsboy, were run down and seriously injured by automobiles in the crowded streets of the downtown district late Monday afternoon.

The accidents were witnessed by hundreds of persons, many of them women and children, and attracted such crowds in both instances that blockades of traffic were caused.

The first accident occured when John Nickers, a newsboy whose home is at 121 West Pine Street, was struck by an automobile driven by E. V. D. Manning, a postoffice clerk, 24 Spencer Street, at the corner of Marietta and Forsyth Streets. The boy was attempting to cross the intersecting streets when the machine struck him and knocked him fifteen feet to the curb. He was picked up by pedestrians and rushed to the Grady Hospital. Manning was arrested and charged with reckless driving.

The second accident occured at Whitehall and Alabama Streets. C. W. Motes, an aged man residing at 73 N. Mason Street, said to be a pioneer photographer of the South, was run down by a machine driven by a negro named Major Stephens. Motes' scalp was gashed, his arms and legs were crushed and he suffered internal injuries. The car was said to be the property of Hugh Inman, 105 West Fifteenth Street.

According to a police officer who witnessed the occurence, the negro was driving at a reckless rate of speed.

Mr. Motes was picked up unconscious and hurried to the home of his daughter, Mrs. Mary M. Delbridge, 505 Spring Street.

President's Currency Plan Pleases Ottley

WASHINGTON, June 23.—John K. Ottley, vice president of the Fourth National Bank of Atlanta, was one of the great crowd in the galleries to hear President Wilson's currency message to Congress Monday. Mr. Ottley was enthusiastic over the program urged by the President.

"President Wilson showed he was thoroughly familiar with the currency situation," said Mr. Ottley. "He said just enough and no more, and I'll swear by every word he said.

"I hope and believe he will get action at this session of Congress."

7 Jurors Secured To Try Mrs. Lanier

WAYCROSS, GA., June 23.—The trial of Mrs. Nina Lanier, charged with the murder of her day-old son, was taken up this afternoon in Superior Court. Seven jurors were secured this afternoon. Forty-eight veniremen have been summoned.

Each time the word "murder" was used to-day the defendant, an unusually pretty young woman, broke into tears and her devoted mother, seated beside her, looked as though she would break down completely.

WILSON ASKS CONGRESS FOR BANK CHANGE

President in Person Urges Currency Reform With Government as Active Agent.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Repeating his act at the beginning of his administration, when he smashed decades of precedent by personally delivering his message to Congress, President Wilson appeared before a joint assemblage of both houses of Congress to-day and delivered his message on the currency.

President Wilson reached the Capitol at 12:55 o'clock, accompanied by his secretary, Joseph Tumulty, and two secret service men. He went immediately to Speaker Clark's private office, where he was received by a joint committee of Senators and Representatives.

After remaining in the Speaker's office for less than a minute, the President, escorted by the committee, went direct to the House chamber for the reading of his currency message. His appearance in the chamber was greeted with general applause, and the assembled Senators and Representatives arose as he entered.

The committee which met the President and escorted him to the chamber consisted of Senators Kern and Reed and Representatives Underwood, Fitzgerald and Mann.

Cabinet Members Present.

Secretary McAdoo, who helped frame the currency bill, was one of the first Cabinet officers to reach the House to-day. Secretaries Houston, Lane, Wilson and Garrison reached the House shortly in advance of the President and took seats on the floor.

Mrs. Wilson, accompanied by Misses Jessie and Eleanor Wilson and Miss Isabel Hagner, her secretary, reached the Capitol about ten minutes in advance of the President and were shown to seats in the executive gallery.

The President concluded the reading of his message at 1:07 o'clock, having used but ten and a half minutes in its delivery. As he finished he bowed and shook hands with Speaker Clark and Vice President Marshall. Both galleries and Senators and Representatives generously applauded.

Admittance Is Limited.

The House end of the Capitol was closed to the public to-day in anticipation of the visit of President Wilson to deliver his banking and currency message. Policemen stood at the entrances and in the corridors and turned back all those who could not show a ticket of admission.

More than 500 tickets were available for spectators in the galleries, and each Senator and each Representative had one ticket. For the most part these tickets went to the wives of Senators and Congressmen. Representatives who have been out of the city returned early to-day to be on hand when the President appeared.

The Message in Full.

The President's message in full follows:

It is under the compulsion of what seems to me a clear and imperative duty that I have a second time this session sought the privilege of addressing you in person. I know, of course, that the heated season of the year is upon us, that work in these chambers and in the committee rooms is likely to become a burden as the season lengthens, and that every consideration of personal convenience and personal comfort, perhaps, in the cases of some of us, considerations of personal health even, dictate an early conclusion of the deliberations of the session; but there are occasions of public duty when these things which touch us privately seem very small; when the work to be done is so pressing and so fraught with big consequence that we know that we are not at liberty to weigh against it any point of personal sacrifice.

We are now in the presence of such an occasion. It is absolutely imperative that we should give the business men of this country a banking and currency system by means of which they can make use of the freedom of enterprise and of individual initiative which we are about to bestow upon them.

Must Provide the Tools.

We are about to set them free; we must not leave them without the tools of action when they are free. We are about to set them free by removing the trammels of the protective tariff. Ever since the Civil War they have waited for this emancipation and for the free opportunities it will bring with it. It has been reserved for us to give it to them. Some fell in love, indeed, with the slothful security of their dependence upon the Government; some took advantage of the shelter of the nursery to set up a mimic mastery of their own within its walls. Now both the tonic and the discipline of liberty and maturity are to ensue.

There will be some readjustments of purpose and point of view. There will follow a period of expansion and new enterprise, freshly conceived. It is for us to determine now whether it shall be rapid and facile and of easy accomplishment. This it cannot be unless the resourceful business men who are to deal with the new circumstances are to have at hand and ready for use the instrumentalities and conveniences of free enterprise which independent men need when acting on their own initiative.

It is not enough to strike the shackles from business. The duty of statesmanship is not negative merely. It is constructive also. We must show that we understand what business needs and that we know how to supply it. No man, however casual and superficial his observation of the conditions now prevailing in the country, can fail to see that one of the chief things business needs now, and will need increasingly as it gains in scope and vigor in the years immediately ahead of us, is the proper means by which readily to vitalize its credit, corporate and individual, and its originative brains.

Shows Power of Credit.

What will it profit us to be free if we are not to have the best and most accessible instrumentalities of commerce and enterprise? What will it profit us to be quit of one kind of monopoly if we are to remain in the grip of another and more effective kind? How are we to gain and keep the confidence of the business community unless we show that we know how both to aid and to protect it? What shall we say if we make fresh enterprise necessary and also make it very difficult by leaving all else except the tariff just as we found it? The tyrannies of business, big and little, lie within the field of credit. We know that. Shall we not act upon the knowledge? Do we not know how to act upon it?

If a man cannot make his assets available at pleasure, his assets of capacity and character and resource, what satisfaction is it to him to see opportunity beckoning to him on every hand, when others have the keys of credit in their pockets and treat them as all but their own private possession? It is perfectly clear that it is our duty to supply the new banking and currency system the country needs, and that it will immediately need it more than ever.

The only question is, When shall we supply it—now, or later, after the demands shall have become reproaches that we were so dull and so slow? Shall we hasten to change the tariff laws and then be laggards about making it possible and easy for the country to take advantage of the change? There can be only one answer to that question.

Action Now Is a Duty.

We must act now, at whatever sacrifice to ourselves. It is a duty which the circumstances forbid us to postpone. I should be recreant to my deepest convictions of public obligation did I not press it upon you with solemn and urgent insistence.

The principles upon which we should act are also clear. The country has sought and seen its path in this matter within the last few years—sees it more clearly than when the last legislative proposals on the subject were made. We must have a currency, not rigid as now, but readily, elastically responsive to sound credit, the expanding and contracting credits of everyday transactions, the normal ebb and flow of personal and corporate dealings.

Our banking laws must mobilize reserves; must not permit the concentration anywhere in a few hands of the monetary resources of the country or their use for speculative purposes in such volume as to hinder or impede or stand in the way of other more legitimate, more fruitful uses.

And the control of the system of banking and of issue which our new laws are to set up must be public, not private, must be vested in the Government itself, so that the banks may be the instruments, not the masters, of business and of individual enterprise and initiative.

DIGEST OF CURRENCY REFORM ACT WILSON WANTS THIS SESSION

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Representative Carter Glass, chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency, has made public a digest of the Administration's currency reform bill which he introduced in the House to-day. By the terms of this measure the Federal Reserve Board, which will control the issuance of new currency on application of the regional reserve banks, is to be a Government board entirely.

There will be no retirement of existing national bank circulation, nor of the existing 2 per cent United States bonds used for circulation purposes. Every national bank is allowed to continue its note issue exactly as at present.

Following is the digest prepared by Representative Glass:

"The purpose of the bill is to furnish a comparative revision of the currency system of the country so as to obtain three principal objects:

"First—Provision of a means for rediscounting commercial paper of specified types.

"Second—Provision of a basis for elastic note issues properly 'safeguarded.

"Third—Provision of machinery for doing foreign banking business.

"Present Law Inadequate."

"In order to accomplish these purposes fully it is necessary to repeal certain portions of existing law; to rectify various conditions in the present national banking system which are in some cases only indirectly connected with the objects sought; to furnish a new class of instructions for the performance of some functions which can not well be intrusted to existing banks, or, at all events, can better be performed by others, and to alter the present reserve system to a very material degree.

"The scope of the bill can best be understood by an analytical review of its contents.

"The present banking situation of the United States rests on the national bank act proper, as slightly modified from time to time, and on the so-called Aldrich-Vreeland act (act of May 30, 1908).

"Of these acts the latter is completely superseded on the ground that it has never become operative. It probably will not become operative except under extreme distress, and never was satisfactory. The national bank act itself is modified in numerous essential particulars.

New Class of Banks.

"Fundamental to the idea of the bill is the creation of a new class of banks to be known as Federal reserve banks, the chief points about which are as follows:

"The number is to be twelve, with possible increase later as provided.

"The ownership is to be in the hands of the stockholding banks of the twelve districts in which the reserve banks are situated. National banks are compelled to be members and State banks and trust companies are permitted to be members.

"The capitalization is to be 20 per cent of the capital of the stockholding banks, one-half paid in and one-half subject to call.

"The business of these Federal reserve banks is to be as follows:

Reserve Banks Business.

"Rediscounting of paper presented by stockholding banks under specified conditions, provided such paper grows out of actual agricultural, commercial or industrial transactions and does not run more than a specified number of days.

"Buying and selling Government securities, gold and silver bullion and foreign coin; foreign exchange and open market bills of given maturity; Government fiscal operations.

"Every national bank is allowed to continue its note issue exactly as at present and in addition Federal reserve treasury notes are authorized to be issued to an amount not exceeding $500,000,000.

These notes will, upon application, be issued to the Federal reserve banks upon prime short-time commercial paper and other liquid collateral.

Gold Reserve Security.

"While the notes will, on their faces, purport to be the obligations of the United States, they are required to be secured by a gold reserve of 33 1-3 per cent provided by the Federal reserve banks, and are a first and paramount lien on all the assets of these banks, and are redeemable in gold on demand at the Treasury Department in Washington or at any Federal reserve bank.

"Stringent provisions are made against counting any of these notes as a part of bank reserves, and the system is guarded against inflation by lodging power with the Federal Reserve Board to exact an interest charge on treasury notes in order to insure their prompt redemption.

"The notes are not made legal tender, but are receivable by the Government and every bank of the system at par without exchange.

"Overseeing the whole system is created a Federal reserve board, consisting of seven members, including the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Agriculture and Comptroller of the Currency as members ex-officio. Four other members are chosen by the President of the United States by and with the consent of the Senate for a term of six years each.

"One of the members thus appointed by the President is to be governor of the Federal reserve board, one vice governor and one secretary.

Banker Member of Board.

"Their term of office is for eight years, except that of those first appointed, one to the serve two years, one four, one six and one eight years. At least one of the members appointed by the President is to be a person of banking experience. Thus it will be noted that the Government will have absolute control of the system.

"The salary of each member of the board, except the two Cabinet officers, who are ex-officio members, is fixed at $10,000, the Comptroller of the Currency to receive $5,000 in addition to the salary which he receives under existing law.

"The powers of the Federal reserve board are as follows:

"(a) To examine at its discretion the accounts and books of each Federal reserve bank and to require such statements and reports as it deems necessary.

"(b) To require or, on application, to permit a Federal reserve bank to rediscount the paper of any other Federal bank.

"(c) To establish each week, or as much oftener as required, a rate of discount which shall be mandatory upon each Federal reserve bank for each class of paper, provided that said rate of discount need not be uniform for all Federal reserve banks, but shall be made with a view to accommodating the commerce of the country and promising a stable price level.

"(d) To suspend for a period not exceeding 30 days (and to renew such suspension for periods not to exceed fifteen days) any and every reserve requirement specified in this act.

Treasury Note Regulation.

"(f) To add to the number of cities classified as reserve and central reserve cities under existing law, in which national banking associations are subject to the reserve requirements set forth in the act, or to reclassify existing reserve and central reserve cities and to designate the banks therein situated by country banks in its discretion.

"(g) To require the removal of officials of Federal reserve banks for incompetency, dereliction of duty, fraud or deceit.

"(h) To acquire the writing off of doubtful or worthless assets upon the books and balance sheets of Federal reserve banks.

"(i) To suspend the further operations of any Federal reserve bank and appoint a receiver therefor.

"(j) To perform the duties, functions or services specified or implied in the act.

To Classify Banking.

"The object of the bill is to effect a moderate division and classification of banking business along indicated lines, the net result, presumably, being summed up as follows:

"(1) National reserve banks will be strictly limited to rediscounting actual commercial and industrial transactions evidenced by very short term paper and on rare occasions, under carefully prescribed conditions to financial operations protected by collateral.

"(2) National banks will be subjected to the same restrictions as at present, with a relaxation in favor of a moderate amount of real estate loans by country banks.

"(3) By a revision of the administrative figures of the national banking act provision will be made for close oversight of national institutions.

"(4) In order to possess themselves of the kind of paper entitling them to rediscounts national banks will find themselves obliged to keep a reasonable proportion of their assets in the paper eligible for rediscounting.

"Subtreasury System Crude."

"It is believed that the present subtreasury system is unsatisfactory, clumsy, injurious to business and difficult to manage in time of stress. The bill, therefore, provides for:

"(1) The placing of all current funds of the Treasury in Federal reserve banks and the payment of Government creditors by check thereon.

"(2) The equalization of the public funds between the different reserve banks by direction of the Secretary of the Treasury and subject to a rate of interest to be fixed by the Federal Reserve Board.

"(3) The trust funds of the Treasury are to be held, as at present, in the vaults of the Treasury.

"Under the terms of the bill the Federal reserve bank, after the payment of all expenses and taxes, is entitled to pay an annual cumulative dividend of 5 per cent on paid-in capital to its stock-holding members. One-half of the next earnings of the bank must be paid into the surplus fund until said fund shall amount to 20 per cent of the paid-in capital of the bank. The remaining one-half of the bank's earnings shall be paid to the United States, and whenever and so long as the surplus fund of each Federal reserve bank amounts to 20 per cent of the paid-in capital, the shareholders having received their permissible dividend of 5 per cent, all excess earnings shall be paid to the United States.

Banks Exempt From Taxes.

"Every Federal reserve bank is exempt from Federal, State and local taxation, except in respect to taxes upon real estate.

"In the belief that the present reserve system is antiquated and unsatisfactory provision has been made for recasting the present bank reserve system. The plan includes:

"(1) Transfer of reserves from existing national banks in reserve and central reserve cities to national reserve banks.

"(2) Spreading out of this process of transfer over a period of 38 months.

"(3) Ultimately the establishment of a reserve system at the end of the transition in which (a) country banks will save 15 per cent of reserve, i. e., 15 per cent of total demand liabilities, such 15 per cent to be held, 5 per cent in the banks' vaults, 5 per cent with the national reserve bank and 5 per cent either at home or with the reserve bank, while (b) reserve and central reserve city banks will have reserves of 20 per cent of demand liabilities, of which 10 per cent will be at home, 5 per cent with the reserve bank of the district and 5 per cent either at home or with the reserve bank.

Blow at Wall Street.

"(4) The presumed effect of this plan will be to end the placing of reserves with central reserve city banks for use in stock market operations.

"The bill authorizes any national banking association with a minimum capital of $1,000,000 to establish branches in foreign countries for the furtherance of foreign commerce of the United States and to act as fiscal agents of the United States abroad.

"The Federal reserve board is required to pass on all applications of national banks to establish such banks abroad."

BULGARIAN PLOT TO KILL GREEK KING FOILED

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SALONIKA, June 23.—A plot fomented by Bulgarians against the life of King Constantine of Greece has been discovered here. A number of Bulgar soldiers, disguised as civilians, were arrested to-day by the Greek military police.

A quantity of explosives had been discovered outside of the city gates and investigation led to the discovery of the conspiracy. One of the Bulgarians who was arrested confessed that an attempt was to have been made to blow up the King's palace.

Constant fighting between Greeks and Bulgarians is going on near here. The city has been strongly fortified on the landward side.

Bulgarians Refuse to Arbitrate; Crisis Near.

SOFIA, June 23.—Bulgaria to-day withdrew its recent acceptance of Czar Nicholas' proposal to arbitrate the territorial dispute between this country on one side and Servia and Greece on the other. This may mean that Russia's attempt to prevent a fresh conflict in the Balkans will prove futile.

The Bulgarian press is bitterly hostile against Russia, charging that the Russian Government is secretly encouraging Servia and Greece to take aggressive measures.

Official newspapers declare that Servia, Greece and Montenegro have entered into a secret league to strip Bulgaria of all the possible spoils of the Balkan war. The situation to-day was decidedly ominous, and the impression prevailed that the climax would be reached this week.

Penfield May Get U. S. Embassy Place

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Speculation was caused in diplomatic circles when it was learned to-day that Frederick C. Penfield, of New York, was to have a special audience with President Wilson.

The opinion was formed that the President would offer Mr. Penfield one of the five embassies yet unfilled. These include France, Germany, Russia, Austria and Turkey.

The speculation was based largely on the fact that he has had wide experience in the service of the United States abroad.

Pike County Farmer Slays Son-in-Law

ZEBULON, June 23.—J. P. Neal, of Senoia, was shot and killed by his father-in-law, J. W. Vaughn, at the latter's home near Zebulon last night. Vaughn is a prominent farmer. He surrendered to Sheriff Slade and is in jail. There were no eyewitnesses.

'Hello Girl' Knocked Down by Lightning

POTTSVILLE, PA., June 23.—During a heavy electric storm lightning set fire to one of the switchboards in the telephone exchange of the American Telephone Company at Shamokin and threw the operator, Miss Kathryn O'Leary, to the floor. She managed to sound an alarm and was rescued just before the blaze destroyed the building. The loss is estimated at $20,000.

taking an umbrella went with the detectives.

As soon as the Stover girl entered the room he jumped to his feet, exclaiming:

"That's her; that's her." Then the negro surveyed her wearing apparel.

"She's dressed just as she was that day, only she hasn't got on her 'easy walkers.'

The girl was wearing leather slippers. Later she said she had worn "easy walkers," or tennis shoes, when she went to the pencil factory, as the negro had said.

The negro's identification of the Stover girl proves, apparently, beyond a doubt that he was in the factory building at the time he said in his affidavit. Beyond sustaining that statement, though, no further support to the prosecution's case against Frank is shown by it.

Solicitor Dorsey returned to Atlanta Sunday afternoon from a week's vacation in New York. He called a conference with his assistants, E. A. Stephens and F. A. Hooper, at his home Sunday evening. Following it he announced that he would be ready for trial on June 30 and that unless the defense or the trial judge moved to have the trial postponed he would commence at once summoning witnesses and getting ready.

Solicitor Dorsey would not discuss the return to Atlanta of Mrs. Mina Formby and her announcement that she would go on the stand against Frank. He intimated, however, that he entertained the same opinion as had already been expressed by his assistant, Mr. Hooper, that when the woman left Atlanta she dropped from the case entirely.

Attorney John W. Moore denied emphatically that he had been employed in the case with L. Z. Rosser and Reuben R. Arnold to defend Frank, as was reported by Solicitor Dorsey.

Moore Not Employed.

"I have not been employed in the case and have no other interest in it than that of a citizen. I believe Frank is innocent, and have since he was first drawn into the case, but I am not connected with it in any way. I have never been approached on the subject."

Solicitor Dorsey opened court in the Thrower building Monday morning for a week of criminal trials to clear the jail docket. He will be in court every day until Saturday, and will have to depend on his assistants to summon witnesses and prepare the Frank case in the event of it being set for the following week.

Orphanage Trustees Will Probe Whipping

MACON, June 23.—The whipping of 10-year-old Marvin Williford by W. F. Armor, farm overseer at the Georgia Industrial Home, will be probed this afternoon at a special meeting of the trustees.

The boy has been surrendered by the city officials to the home, assurance having been given that he will not be punished again. When the boy was beaten by Armor with a plowline, he ran away from the orphanage and sought the protection of the police.

Armor is the husband of Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, Georgia temperance lecturer. He admits the flogging.

Girl Dies of Fever; Peril Thought Past

ATHENS, June 23.—Miss Katherine Erwin, aged 20, died unexpectedly yesterday after an illness of several weeks with fever, from which it was thought she had passed the danger point. Her father, Judge A. S. Erwin, who died several years ago, was a prominent lawyer and member of the State Railroad Commission.

The funeral will take place here to-day. She is survived by her mother and several brothers and sisters.

Wilburn-King Trials Come Up in October

GREENSBORO, June 23.—A special session of Jones Superior Court to try Nick Wilburn, charged with the murder of James King, a prominent Jones County farmer, will not be called by Judge James B. Park, of Ocmulgee Circuit.

Wilburn and Mrs. King, charged as accessory, will be tried at the regular October term. Judge Park thinks conditions do not demand a special session.

High Living Cost Cause of Suicide

MACON, June 23.—J. D. Lester, president of the Macon Barbers' Union, killed himself yesterday by drinking an ounce of carbolic acid, after telephoning his wife that he would join her in a few minutes and go to church.

On Saturday Lester told his fellow-workers that the high cost of living was enough to make a man commit suicide. He left a note to his wife, "I could not endure it any longer."

Death Hovers Over Chalk Victim

Poison Baffles Expert Efforts

Doctors Abandon Hope for Life

Here is a picture of little Mary Tribble, the poison chalk victim, taken when she was a few years younger than she is now. She was the pet of the neighborhood then, and has since then been a very much loved little girl in school.

Little Mary Tribble Is Fast Sinking and She May Not Live Through the Day.

Slowly sinking to a death that the physicians regard now as almost certain, little Mary Tribble, daughter of Policeman Tribble, lies now unconscious and now torn by racking convulsions at her home in East Atlanta, the victim of a strange poisoning that developed after she had eaten some brightly colored chalk more than two weeks ago.

The 7-year-old girl, who has been almost entirely paralyzed for the two weeks since she suddenly was stricken, has suffered two convulsions in the last 24 hours, although three physicians have done their utmost to counteract the effect of the mysterious poison.

Another physician offered his services to the family Sunday. He recommended and administered a continuous water treatment throughout the day. For a few hours she appeared brighter and the prospects for her ultimate recovery seemed slightly more hopeful, but at nightfall one of the terrible convulsions contorted her little body and it was thought that the end had come. Monday morning she was the victim of another, and the family practically gave up hope.

W. C. Tribble, father of the girl, said Monday he had arranged to have the crayon which his daughter had eaten analyzed. It is hardly expected that the analysis will be completed in time to be of any benefit to the physicians in prescribing a treatment.

Mary was given the crayons a few days before school ended a week ago last Friday. On the last day of school she came home and fell into the arms of her mother, crying that her head hurt. A few minutes later part of her body was paralyzed and she was seized frequently with agonizing convulsions. She has been in this condition ever since, the only change being that she gradually has been growing weaker.

Dr. Seacord, Dead; Was With Fire Dept.

Dr. Andrew C. Seacord, 38 years old, died at a private sanitarium Monday morning at 2 o'clock. Dr. Seacord for the past fifteen years had been the veterinary surgeon for the Atlanta Fire Department. He lived at 621 Whitehall Street and is survived by a wife and two young sons, Lynn and Robert Seacord.

Funeral services will be held from the chapel of Barclay & Brandon at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, Rev. Dr. A. R. Holderby officiating. Pallbearers will be G. C. Courtney, O. J. Parker, W. H. Clowe, Pas Short, William Butler and W. B. Harrison. Interment will be at Westview.

Family at Church as Robbers Loot Home

While C. W. Seagraves, who lives in Pace's Ferry Road five miles out of Atlanta, was at church with his family Sunday morning, burglars entered his home and stole the valuables. From a trunk $200 in cash was taken, besides silver plate and family jewels.

Seagraves discovered his loss upon returning from church about noon. The county police were notified, but as yet they have made no arrests.

LOBBY IS HINTED AT IN FIGHT IN SENATE

that certain big corporate and manufacturing interests are deeply concerned as to the outcome of the race for the presidency of the Senate, and, very much on the quiet, are interesting themselves accordingly.

Burwell Called Favorite.

The speakership race generally is conceded to have been won by Burwell of Hancock. Although opposed by such excellent gentlemen as Hardeman of Jefferson and Sheppard of Sumter, Burwell is thought to be very much in the lead and practically sure of election on the first ballot.

Burwell Called Favorite.

Burwell seems to have made a much better getaway in his race than either of his opponents, and for that reason is looked upon as a most likely winner.

Tax reform is the one big topic of legislation discussed most generally.

It seems agreed on all sides that the State must have more revenue or let its various institutions lag woefully. There is an ever-increasing demand for more money in all directions, and the State has been running ahead of its income for several years. The tax rate can not be raised above 5 mills, and 5 mills on present assessments will not produce the revenue needed.

Various special measures for increasing the revenue have been proposed, such as an inheritance tax, a graduated automobile tax, and so forth, but the greater problem is how to get all varieties of property up to where each may bear its righteous portion of the burden of taxation.

It is assured that a child labor bill will be introduced early in the session, with excellent chances of success.

be, and that reforms must be instituted, or the State suffer not only materially within itself, but in reputation abroad.

It is said that former Representative Hooper Alexander, for years an earnest advocate of child labor reform, will prepare a bill for the General Assembly's attention, and that it will be a bill framed along the lines and ideals of the various anti-child labor organizations in the State.

Salvation Army Man, Struck by Auto, Dies

Thomas Jefferson, the aged Salvation Army worker and former Indian instructor, who was struck by an automobile at Mitchell and Whitehall Streets Thursday, died Sunday night at Grady Hospital. He did not regain consciousness. His relatives are not known, and his body, unless claimed, will be buried by the Salvation Army.

No blame is attached to J. L. Hughes, of 380 Peachtree Street, who drove the car. He was driving slowly, according to eyewitnesses. Jefferson leaped in front of Hughes' car to escape another and faster-going machine.

Keeping the Body in Repair

Nature intended that the body should do its own repairing—and it would do so were it not for the fact that most of us live other than a natural life.

Nature didn't intend that we should wear corsets, tight collars or shoes, nor live in badly ventilated and draughty houses, nor eat and drink some of the things that we do, nor ride in street cars when we should walk.

The consequence is that the body when it gets out of order must look for outside help to make the necessary repairs.

PEEKABOO SKIRT, NATURE HOSE, SHOCK PARIS

French Society Beauties Appear Like 'September Morn,' Draped in Filmy Covering.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, June 23.—Even the Parisian journals, used as they are to daring styles in women's dresses, spoke rebukingly to-day of some of the gowns seen yesterday at the fashionable Auteuil race course. Auteuil set the latest word in fashions, the decree being that tight skirts are giving way to transparent garments which are absolutely no obstacle to the eye.

Many women wore skirts of white muslin so transparent they failed utterly to serve the purpose of coverings. The gowns, mostly free from frills, are cut extremely low in front, and even lower in the back.

The slashed skirt devotees exceeded the limit. Some of them were not only slit at the sides, but in the front and rear as well. Most of the slashes reached above the knee.

One woman wore gold sandals without stockings. The sandals were fastened to the feet with pink ribbons. The three-tier skirt made its appearance in white, blue, purple and brown. Most of the hats were small, decorated with aigrettes.

44 Women Want to Clean Phila. Streets

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—Forty-four women took the Civil Service tests in this city for street cleaning inspectors. They toiled all morning on five hundred word treatises showing how they would clean the streets of the municipality and what they thought was the most needed thing to improve the condition of the streets.

They were required among other things to describe the most approved apparatus for the cleaning of the streets. They were asked the difference between some of the various kinds of machines, their purposes and the practical operation, the relation of the street cleaner to the community, the reasons for the excessive litter in certain sections and the value of moral suasion when applied in the proper places.

Phone Girls to Seek Simple Life

Plan an Ideal Camp Vacation

Fresh Air and Fudge Their Menu

Miss Katherine C. Tatum.

500 Employees of Southern Bell Will Take Two Weeks' Rest in Woods.

The "back to the country" craze has hit the Southern Bell telephone exchange in Atlanta, and 500 hello girls, clerks, stenographers and bookkeepers are going to spend their vacations in the woods.

"Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife," where there are no hurry-up callers to disturb their temper and where the lines never get crossed, they plan to spend two weeks without a care in the world and live on fresh air and fudge.

The time—July 1 to September 31; the place,—M. O. Jackson's 290-acre farm on the Brown's Mill Road, two miles beyond the terminus of the Lakewood car line; the girl—why all of them, every single solitary one of them that operates the boards, keeps the books or takes dictation at the Atlanta branch of the Southern Bell Telephone Company: this is the scene and the synopsis and the whole plot in a nutshell.

Everyone's Talking It.

It's the one topic of conversation at the telephone exchange; everybody's talking about it. If an importunate creditor phones you he will sue if you don't settle, and about that time you hear a sweet voice say, "Won't that be lovely," don't think merely a hello girl talking about the outing to her nearest neighbor at the boards.

Miss Katherine C. Tatum, chief of the stenographic bureau, originated the idea three months ago. She confided to the head operators, Mrs. Mitchell and Misses Ada Mealor, Sammie Dixon and Alice Means, and they liked it. The five of them consulted the telephone officials and received assurances of hearty endorsement and enthusiastic support in every way possible.

FIVE FRANKFORTERS COMING.

"The Five Frankforters," a comedy from the German, based on an episode in the life of the famous Rothschilds and a novelization of which appeared in The Georgian, will be among the early attractions to be seen in this city the coming season. The play was produced in New York last season by the Shuberts and it is under this management that the local engagement will be played.

CUYLER TO REPLY TO WIFE'S CHARGE

Telemon S. Cuyler, formerly Telemon Cruger Cuyler Smith, of Atlanta, is preparing his papers in the divorce suit instituted by his wife, Mrs. Grace Barton Cuyler, of Alameda, Cal., according to information Monday. Mr. Cuyler's attorney is James Austin.

Mystery surrounds the affair. Little authentic information has been gathered. Mr. Cuyler slipped into Atlanta last week, interviewed his attorney and a few friends, then slipped away again, to his country home four miles from Wayside, Ga.

That he has recognized the divorce suit and is preparing his papers through his attorney is not denied by those who have charge of the matter. He also told several friends while here last week that such a divorce proceeding was on. Mr. Cuyler recently returned to this country from Mexico, where he has a large ranch.

Mr. Cuyler's latest hobby—he is a man of hobbies, it is said—is having moving pictures taken of himself so that he may be immortalized. A number of such pictures have been made within the past few months in European cities, where he visits often, as well as in the big cities of America.

CARUSO IN MAD FIT AT LOSING GIRL'S SUIT

ROME, June 23.—That the legal troubles of Enrico Caruso, the world-famous tenor, are anything but over is shown to-day in the decree of the Milan Court of Appeals which has just handed down a decision reversing the lower court which last year denied Elisa Ganelli, the Milan shop girl, who sued him for failure to marry her, damages in a breach of promise suit.

Caruso is in London preparing to spend the summer at his beautiful villa near Florence, and, dispatches say, when shown the decision of the court, he allowed his temper to become greatly ruffled and let off considerable superfluous energy in the form of epithets and adjectives, between which he stated he did not believe the report.

The court, in handing down its decision holds that the decision of the lower court is correct in not providing damages for the injury to the fair name of the plaintiff. The court then goes on to state that, although the relations existing between the singer and the shop girl were reprehensible, it is of the opinion that the girl is entitled to recover the money she spent in fitting herself to become Mrs. Caruso.

Entitled to Expenses.

The decision orders that a new trial be held for the purpose of ascertaining how much the young woman is entitled to for her "pre-nuptial" expenses, and orders that it be held as soon as Caruso returns to Italy.

The suit in question was started over a year ago and at the time greatly stirred opera-going circles in this country and elsewhere. Testimony developed at the trial that one week after seeing the girl in a Milan shop Caruso secured an introduction to her from her employer and on that same occasion used these words:

"Come, now Signorina, put on your hat and we will start to-morrow, for I have decided to take you away with me. If I had been so fortunate as to make your acquaintance 15 or 20 years ago you would have been my wife by this time. Unfortunately, owing to my professional engagements, I must leave now."

After his departure Caruso bombarded the girl with letters written from Paris and London, in which he renewed his protestations, and in one letter ordered the girl to leave the shop to break with the "common people."

His "Little Sugar Doll."

He sent her many photographs of himself and his children and in writings always addressed her by such endearing names as "Dear Sweet Thing," "Little Sugar Doll" and "My Little Treasure."

One of his most characteristic letters contained the following passages:

"You will see what I will do when you are my wife. How beautiful it will be. You shall be my little queen, and I your faithful and devoted slave. Have you ever accepted some other admirer? Can anybody speak ill of you? Have you always done as your mother instructed you? You assure me that you have, and now I can think only of this—to make you mine as soon as possible."

After the betrothal the shop girl studied French and tried to fit herself to be the wife of the greatest tenor of his time. Caruso at times was chivalrous and generous to her. She had a chaperone whenever she met him and he showered her with presents, including the most costly gowns and much actual money, which she accepted, although reluctant to do so, the trial developed.

Fears Wife Is Held As Slaver Captive

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—Mystery surrounds a search by the police for Mrs. Ernestina Welden, wife of Elwood A. Welden, former Secretary of the American Consulate in Paris and Budapest.

Mrs. Welden was going shopping, she told her husband. That afternoon he received a letter from her telling that she was going away as a traveling companion to a woman. Special Agent Garberino, of the Department of Justice, fears she has fallen into the hands of white slavers.

Shepard Is Carried Past Home of Bride

NEW YORK, June 23.—Persons on a late train from New York a few nights ago heard the porter call "Tarrytown" and wondered why Finley J. Shepard, husband of Helen Gould Shepard, did not alight.

Mr. Shepard only realized that he was going by his station when the train was under way. He is too much of a railroad man not to know the dangers of jumping, and therefore refused to take a chance. Ossining was the next stop. There Mr. Shepard alighted, obtained an automobile and "burned up" the Albany post road back to Irvington.

The governorship of the Philippines is to be given to one of three or four men already on a tentative list. President Wilson also is understood to have said that New York has been very well provided for in the big appointments.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

by JAMES B. NEVIN

Hark, hark! the dogs do bark, the solons are coming to town—some in rags, and some in tags (but none with jags), and some in velvet gowns!

Or words to that effect!

Anyway, we have with us this evening, gentle readers, the esteemed and ever-venerated Jawjaw Legislature.

It has been coming in on every train for 24 hours or more, and there now is a sufficiency of it on hand for organization purposes if organization were the order of business for the day.

All day long the Kimball House lobby has been alive with statesmen, real and near.

Most of them are optimistic with respect to the outlook, and the more they get acquainted with one another the better they are pleased with themselves.

Not only is the city filling up rapidly with members of the new General Assembly, but dozens of old-timers, legislative veterans now retired, voluntarily and otherwise, to more or less subdued obscurity, also are in our midst, undertaking to get wise to what is what and who is who.

On all sides one hears good words and kind with respect to the incoming Governor, and good wishes for his administration are on everybody's lips.

John M. Slaton, for the first time in sixteen years, is not a member of the Legislature, and while he has been promoted to be the head of the entire State for a season, he knows practically every member of the new Legislature, and in its entirety it seems to wish him mighty well.

Scores of new members have called on the new Governor to-day to pay their respects.

To-night the Legislature will be all but unanimously on hand and ready for business.

Despite the claims and counter claims of the two leading candidates for the Presidency of the Senate, the average legislator still is very much "from Missouri" with respect to that matter.

Both Senator Allen and Senator Anderson claim more than enough to elect, and while nobody believes either is claiming anything less than he really believes, as a matter of fact, few Senators believe that either man actually has sufficient unqualified pledges to put him over.

"These claims remind me," said a prominent South Georgia politician to-day, "of a story they used to tell up in Cedartown on Major W. R. Beck, grand old man, dead these many years, rest his soul!

"The Major was a candidate for Ordinary, or something, and one of his friends was checking over the voters of the city registration list. After checking off all those the Major claimed, his friend then said, 'Well, Major, these men may be depended upon to vote for you, may they?' The old Major looked his friend in the eye, and replied, 'How the h—l do I know—they've promised to, but how the h—l do I know what they will do!'

"The trouble is, it's so hard to tell exactly what constitutes a political promise—men often say and write things that are construed as unqualified promises, when they never intended them that way at all."

Representative Crawford Wheatley, of Sumter, will introduce his famous lieutenant governor bill again at the forthcoming session of the Legislature.

Mr. Wheatley has been an enthusiastic advocate of creation of this office for many years, and while a member of the Senate he succeeded in passing through that body, almost unanimously, a bill making it part of the Constitution.

The measure was killed in the House, however, and while attempts have been made since then to enact the suggestion into law, they have not succeeded.

The gentleman from Sumter, who is sure to be one of the most popular men in the General Assembly, is very hopeful that this time his pet measure may become a law.

One step toward commission form of government for the city of Greensboro has been made by the publication of notice to the effect that at the next session of the General Assembly a bill will be introduced which will allow the City Council of Greensboro to elect a secretary and treasurer from any citizen who is eligible to act as an alderman.

The notice is published under the signature of H. M. Spinks, City Clerk of Greensboro, and it is thought that the bill will be introduced in the lower branch of the Legislature by Hon. W. P. McWhorter, Greene's Representative.

Much trouble has been experienced by the "city fathers" of Greensboro in the past in securing one of their own number to act as secretary and treasurer, and it is thought that the proposed change will remedy to a great extent some of the cumbersome methods of the city government.

The new Commissioner of Agriculture, James D. Price, of Oconee, got in to-day, and has been as busy as he could be shaking hands and receiving congratulations.

Mr. Price is just up from a sick bed, but doesn't look the part. Everybody likes him, and everybody gives him the glad hand.

He is a practical farmer, knows his way about politically, and the general prediction is that he is sure to make good on his new job.

He expects to be commissioned next Monday, and will present himself at the Executive Department bright and early to receive from the hands of Governor Slaton, his warrant to do business.

He likely will be the first new State House officer to be commissioned.

ST. SIMONS TAKEN BY MILITIAMEN

BRUNSWICK, June 23.—The summer inhabitants of St. Simons Island looked out on warlike scenes Monday morning when the troopers of the Second Squadron of cavalry began military maneuvers at Camp Joseph Brown. The first work of the week followed a day of fun and recreation for the soldiers.

The boys were allowed liberties all day Sunday as a sort of compensation for the hard work Saturday, when camp was pitched. That they took advantage of these liberties is verified by hundreds of visitors to the camp.

Perhaps the most amusing thing of all was the surf bathing in which hundreds of troopers took part from 7 o'clock in the morning until evening.

The boys were not content with this, however, for the annual blanket tossing of the "high privates in the rear rank" was indulged in freely, much to the enjoyment of the spectators. One young private was tossed into the limbs of a tree, where he was rescued by several brawny comrades.

CREMATORY ROW REVIVES WITH INJUNCTION

Destructor Company Declares It Will Continue Work Despite Court's Restraining Order.

With the signing of an injunction by Superior Judge Pendleton Monday morning inhibiting the execution of the crematory contract the wrangle over Atlanta's garbage destroyer began anew, giving promise of contempt of court proceedings and possibly an airing in Recorder's Court.

Evins & Spence, counsel for the Destructor Company, said work positively would continue without interruption, since Council had given his clients permission to carry on operations pending the signing of a new contract. C. P. Goree, attorney for Mayor Woodward, was equally dogmatic in asserting work must stop and that if it did not stop immediately he would go before Judge Pendleton and make a motion to have "everybody connected with it" cited for contempt.

"J. N. Renfroe and Others against the City of Atlanta and Others," is the style of the crematory case originally tried before Judge Pendleton, who refused to grant an injunction stopping work. The case was appealed, the Supreme Court reversing Judge Pendleton's ruling. The order of the Supreme Court reached Judge Pendleton Monday morning, and he immediately signed an injunction restraining further execution of the original crematory contract. The injunction reads:

New Contract Not Barred.

"The judgment of this court refusing to grant an interlocutory injunction in the case having been reversed by the Supreme Court of Georgia, and the judgment of that court having been made the judgment of this court, it is therefore considered, ordered and adjudged by this court that the defendants, the City of Atlanta and the Destructor Company, be and they are hereby enjoined and restrained until final hearing of this case before a jury from carrying out the contract referred to and set out in the original petition in this case and from performing any act under said contract. The city is not enjoined from making any other contract with these people for securing this crematory, so as not to violate the decision of the Supreme Court in this case."

Attorney C. P. Goree said the effect of this injunction would be immediate cessation of work on the crematory. Notwithstanding that Council, after the Supreme Court decree, gave the Destructor Company authority to work on the crematory pending a new contract, Mr. Goree said he would "have them put in jail" if the work was continued. When asked who he would cite for contempt, he replied:

"Everybody that has anything to do with it."

City Attorney Mayson said the city had accepted the court decree, and that Council thereafter granted the Destructor Company authority to proceed, and he, therefore, saw no reason why work should stop.

"Of course, no work can be done under the old contract," said Mr. Mayson; "but, as I see it, the Destructor people can remain in possession of the ground. The decree does not mean that Atlanta can not have a crematory."

Attorney Sam Evins, of Evins & Spence, secured a consultation with Mr. Goree in an endeavor to reach an agreement upon work pending the new contract. Mr. Goree adhered to his statement that all work should cease.

After the consultation with Mr. Evins, Mr. Goree said: "I just told Mr. Evins that if the Destructor Company continued work, it would be under that old contract, and that if they did anything at all, I would proceed against them for contempt."

H. T. Lewis, who opines he knows more about kisses than Noah Webster

Many Miss Trains Because They Must Have "Just One More," Declares H. T. Lewis.

When old Noah Webster solemnly set down in his book that a kiss is "a salute or caress given by smacking the lips," he probably thought he had said the last word on the subject, and a great many people have long held the view that Mr. Webster knew—impersonally—more about the kiss than any other man.

But he hedn't and he didn't.

An Atlantan has something to say about the kiss and its habits, and he deposes earnestly that he knows—impersonally, always impersonally—more about osculation than Mr. Webster or anyone else.

Which is by way of introducing H. T. Lewis, guardian of the portals of the Terminal Railway Station, in other words, a gatekeeper. Mr. Lewis declares he has seen more kissing and heard more kissing than any other man in Atlanta, and he is ready to fall in with the fashion and make an affidavit. He took a pencil and a piece of paper Saturday morning, and he "figgered" earnestly for some moments. Then he made this statement:

"I see 1,000,000 kisses a year—and I've been here six years."

He figures it this way:

He sees about sixty trains come and go each day, and the passengers average about 80 to a train. Of these about fifty kiss someone, either going or coming, which makes a trifle over a million smacks a year that are delivered and accepted at the gates.

"If it wasn't for the kisses we see and the kisses we hear," he said, "the life of the gatekeeper would be deadly monotony. We see every kind of a kiss here at the gate, from the Marathon kiss of the lover to the bashful peck of the schoolboy and the earnest efforts of people to emulate a clap of thunder."

Mr. Lewis said people are kissing more now than ever before, at least in the railway stations.

The returns will not be complete until Tuesday.

FEDERAL INQUIRY IN M'REYNOLDS CASE ASKED

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Representative Kahn, of California, to-day introduced two resolutions, one calling upon Attorney General McReynolds to transmit to the House all papers relating to the prosecution on white slave charges of Maura Diggs and Drew Caminetti and leading up to the resignation of United States District Attorney McNab, of San Francisco. The other calls for the same papers in the case of the prosecution of the Western Fuel Company.

David Starr Jordan, of Leland Stanford University of California, informed President Wilson to-day that he believed the McNab charges false. Dr. Jordan said that he considered that McNab is apparently annoyed over a number of recent occurrences in his office and that he took this occasion to resign "in a blaze of glory."

District Attorney McNab said to-day that he had repeatedly protested against attempts to prevent the prosecution of Caminetti and Diggs, and that Caminetti's father had sought aid in Washington have the case delayed.

On June 1 Caminetti, after he had been appointed Commissioner General of Immigration, wired McNab, asking another delay. McNab replied that the case would be set for July 26. On the same day McNab wrote to Atorney General McReynolds, reviewing the case.

On June 18 McNab received a telegram from the Attorney General ordering him to postpone the trial until autumn. Two days later McNab's resignation was wired to Washington.

Secretary Wilson Says He Delayed Trials.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—"I have stated all the facts. There is nothing further in the case and the public will have to judge for itself."

This is the only statement that Secretary of Labor Wilson will make to-day supplementing his announcement assuming responsibility for the postponement for the Diggs-Caminetti white slave case in San Francisco.

"If was for the benefit of the service that I wished to keep Mr. Caminetti, the Commissioner General of Immigration, in Washington for a time and I could not then see and do not now see any serious interference with justice," said the Secretary.

Movies Catch Pair Spooning; Suspended

CALIFORNIA, PA., June 23.—A moving picture which showed them sitting on a rustic bench in a mossy glen of Hazel Park, "spooning" was the cause of Miss Kathryn Boyd, a co-ed, and B. H. Crago, a student, being indefinitely suspended on the eve of their graduation at the State Normal School here.

The film, depicting park scenes, was shown at a local theater and made a sensation among the students. The news got to the faculty.

Hug and Kiss Are Detective's Reward

NEW YORK, June 23.—Douglas M. Sanderson is still tasting a kiss he got at the auction sale of the furnishings of the Astor House. An aged woman informed the auctioneer that she had lost her pocketbook containing $18.

While Sanderson, who is the house detective, was hunting for the purse, the auctioneer offered it and its contents at auction subject to its being found. The crowd had bid $17 when the detective appeared with the missing wallet.

The aged woman gave the detective a hug and a kiss, much to his embarrassment and to the joy of the crowd.

Railroad Continues Train-Bandit Search

WAYCROSS, June 23.—No developments have been reported here today in the hunt for the Kirkland freight train robebrs, but it is known that the search, while abandoned by Coffee County officers, has by no means been given up by agents of the Atlantic Coast Line.

It is believed the men now hiding in Roundabout Swamp will soon be forced to leave the swamp for food supplies, and then an effort will be made to capture them.

Schools by Parcel Post Latest Wrinkle

WASHINGTON, June 23.—One, two and four room school houses are now sent by parcel post by the United States Bureau of Education. The school houses are models on which to erect structures in small communities.

They are of cardboard, architecturally correct and altogether complete in hygienic detail.

These models will be of great assistance to school authorities in small rural communities which can not afford to engage a school architect.

Hot Weather 'Don'ts' Given by U. S. Expert

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The last word in hot weather "don'ts" was issued in brief form to-day by Dr. Carl Alsberg, who succeeded Dr. Harvey W. Wiley as chief of the United States Bureau of Chemistry. Here are his "don'ts:"

"Don't eat to excess.

"Don't wear too many clothes.

"Don't drink ice cold beverages.

"Don't look at the thermometer and keep thinking how hot it is."

SONS OF VETERANS MEET.

CHATTANOOGA, June 23.—The Cons of Veterans, U. S. A., of Alabama and Tennessee, convened here to-day in their twenty-fifth annual encampment. John A. Patten, of this city, is expected to be elected to succeed John Tinker, of this city, as division commander.

NOBLE, IN TRANCE A YEAR, AWAKENS

CLEVELAND, June 23.—After being in a state of coma for a year at the State Hospital for the Insane here, Shackery Nasham el Aswad, Syrian nobleman and graduate engineer, has awakened and will be taken home at once by his brother, Captain Kaail el Aswad, wealthy cotton producer and the Governor's chief of staff, who came all the way from Bramana, Mt. Lebanon, Syria, a year ago, and has been patiently awaiting ever since for his brother's recovery.

When Shackery regained consciousness, his brother, who had been in America for twelve months, had gone to New York for a few days. He was hastily summoned and arrived today. The meeting between the brothers was pathetic. They addressed each other by all the pet names they had used in childhood.

Shackery had no recollection of his months in the hospital, where he was sent May 24, 1912, when he appeared in a daze at the Y. M. C. A. here. Only a pocketbook identified him, and through this W. Stanley Hilliit, United States Consul at Beirut, located the stricken man's father, Nasham Assad Bake el Aswad, Syrian of high rank, who sent his other son here at once.

SOLONS SEE NEED OF PENAL REFORM

Interviews with leading members of the House and Senate have disclosed that the Assembly, which meets this week, is imbued with a belief in the necessity for practical revision of Georgia's penal and criminal court laws stronger than ever before.

So many specific needs for changes have been urged by the Governor, by members of the Prison Board, by judges and solicitors general throughout the State, and so many plans have been suggested that the creation of a special commission to take up the proposition seems a certainty.

Inasmuch as the creation of this commission will give full opportunity for the expression of all views on the subject and opportunity to sift out the best way of dealing with it, no opposition has developed. Scores of legislators in both the upper and lower House are committed to its support.

Rich Dentist Sued For Divorce; Wife Declares He Beat Her

Three days after her husband went home intoxicated, according to her charge, and beat her with a walking cane, Mrs. Kathryne Steer brought suit in the Superior Court for divorce from Dr. John S. Steer, a dentist, who is reputed to be wealthy. The offense was alleged to have been committed on the night of June 20 at the Steer home, 21 Ashby Street.

Mrs. Steer enjoined Dr. Steer from disposing of his interest in a well-known dental concern. They were married in Kentucky in 1908.

Boll Weevil Here to Stay.

THOMASVILLE.—L. U. Calhoun, of Louisiana, expert from the United States Department of Agriculture, who has been attending farmers' institutes in South Georgia, declares that the boll weevil is in this country to stay and that the chief thing the farmers should concern themselves about now is the best method of warding off its attacks on cotton.

MISSISSIPPI SUES FOR 'PEN' COTTON

JACKSON, MISS., June 23.—Acting under instructions from Governor Brewer, Attorney General Ross A. Collins to-day filed an attachment in the Chancery Court here against all properties in Mississippi of Boyce & Co., Memphis and New Orleans cotton factors and cotton exporters, and also more than 1,000 bales of cotton recently bought by Boyce & Co. from the State, now on the wharves in New Orleans, ready for export.

Flee From Sing Sing; Are Glad to Return

OSSINING, N. Y., June 23.—"Hooray, take us back to Sing Sing!" There was real exultation in the voices of William Forbes and Maurice Clifford, two short-term burglars, who escaped from Sing Sing prison last night, when they were captured to-day. They were trying to return to the prison, but had lost their way.

Forbes and Clifford were covered with mud and their clothes were ripped and torn by brambles and barb wire fences. They were badly bitten by mosquitoes and other insects, and once they had to lie in a creek when the hunt got too close.

PLAYERS TO SOLVE RAGTIME PROBLEM

Another effort to solve Atlanta's ragtime problem will be made to-morrow afternoon.

This problem, which has aroused lovers of ragtime music, is whether an expert pianist or a Weatherholt player-piano is the more expert in producing that entrancing syncopated music.

At the contest Friday afternoon Frank Hammond, executive secretary to Mayor Woodward, awarded the decision to the player-piano, after considering the problem overnight.

Mr. Weatherholt has received dozens of letters from admirers of the player-piano who insist that the pianist never lived who can produce ragtime as the player does, and he has received invitations to visit homes of the owners and hear for himself.

Other letters have been received giving names of expert pianists who are declared to be such artists that a player would never get a decision in a contest.

The contest will be held in Weatherholt Hall, 72 North Broad Street, with L. T. Briers, H. H. Bowers, H. C. Wiley, A. D. Beatty and others competing against the player operated by J. A. Mills.

During the contest complimentary tickets to the Elite Theater will be given to the ladies present, through the courtesy of Mr. Briers, who is assistant manager of that theater.

Seven 250-Lb. Women Testify in Fat Case

DENVER, COLO., June 23.—Seventeen hundred pounds of stout women sat on small chairs in the Inspector's office in the Federal building all morning on a hot June day. At least there were seven women, and as none of them owned less than 250 pounds, the total may be fixed in the neighborhood of 1,700.

They were witnesses in a fraud case. For months, they say, they have toiled with the Marjorie Hamilton fat-reducing methods without finding themselves one ounce reduced in weight.

You Have Heard Much of Late About Makers' Surplus Stocks of Dresses and the Fine Economy That Their Purchase Has Meant, But It Has Remained for This

Sale of Summer Dresses

To Bring to the Women of Atlanta the Real Values of the Season

$5.00 to $5.75 Black China Silk Waists

$2.45

The Waist Department contributes to the day's events! Contributes an interesting item.

Black China silk waists and shirts from our own good stocks and priced regularly there at $5.00 to $5.75 are marked $2.45.

And there is a variety of splendid styles, serviceable and cool. Choose from waists with high and Dutch necks, eyelet embroidered, with little clusters of tucks and buttons on fronts, with tucks over shoulders. Open front or back. Shirts with folds down front, with pocket, with folded or flat collar.

The women of Atlanta shall have a day of it to-morrow! A day to choose the freshest and charmingest of summer dresses at prices that in no wise compare with values as you know them. It is accomplishing such results as this that adds zest to the game of merchandising; that brings the fine sense of a good job well done. We have heard much, very much, of late about dress sales, their whys and wherefores, but somehow or other one advertising pen---that must be truthful ---has had to wait until now for this opportunity. It has arrived with a vengeance! But how to make the most of it?

Simply by reciting the plain and interesting facts to the women of Atlanta, who have yet, when they visit this store, to be undeceived by any statement that Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co. makes.

Our dress buyer has just come in from New York and with him upward of three hundred summer dresses of surpassing beauty. They are anything but the usual kinds, a happy relief from cheap laces, gaudy embroideries, from dresses made down to a price. These are from a maker whose business pride is a great asset. It holds him above any kind of cheapening, of skimping in quality of materials; it keeps him everlastingly working out new and becoming styles. Whether it is early April when he is making dresses and fair profits, or whether it is mid-June, when he is making dresses and readiness for another season, the same thoroughness characterizes his work.

We tell you this now merely because you have not seen the dresses. After your visit to-morrow, when your eyes will have taken in all that the dresses are, you will more fully understand.

There are white voile dresses--all white and with touches of color here and there on collars, cuffs, in girdles; there are striped voile dresses, there are Dresden crepe dresses and flowered crepe dresses---any number of different kinds---so many that, we warrant, the question most women will have to decide is which one or several she likes best.

And back of them all is that fine fact that every one may be bought at a splendid saving. But you will not have to be told of the saving---it is evident. You will know no such attractive affairs could be sold regularly at such prices, you will know they have not been sold at such prices!

$5.00 for $7.50 to $9.75 Dresses

There are fifty of these. You may choose from white voiles or from white crepes, figured and flowered in delicate pinks, blues, lavenders and the like. They are trimmed with laces and embroideries, yokes are often entirely of embroidery—and have belts (some of them) of black velvet or folded satin. The finest five dollars worth we have known, and we believe you will agree—they are so cool and summery, they fit so splendidly.

$6.98 for $10.00 to $12.50 Dresses

One hundred twenty-five of these. There are all white voiles and their laces and embroideries will be a revelation for fineness. There are dresses with white crepe skirts and smart coats of Dresden crepes, in which the daintiest flowers show, rose, Copenhagen, over plain tucked vests and with belt and facings of satin. With these we have put a number of $10.00 and $11.75 black China silk dresses from our own stock. Half-length sleeves, flat round collar.

$8.75 for $12.50 to $15.00 Dresses

There are one hundred twenty-five of these and would there were more! Voiles are the materials, and such voiles, seemingly as crisp and fine as could be woven. Some are white, some are striped in shades favored right now. Those all white are made elegant with embroidery medallions surrounded by laces in yokes, and those striped are newly styled dresses, simple and dainty, that mean worlds of satisfaction for morning trips to town, for afternoon wear.

Old Fogyisms of To-day

By DOROTHY DIX.

ONE of the most interesting plays of the past season was Arnold Bennett's "Milestones." The theory of the drama was growth. It showed how the advanced thought of one day is the conservatism of the next and the old fogyism of the day after.

In the play the hero breaks with his business partner because he wants to build iron ships instead of wooden ships. "You'll be ruined if you do," says the standpatter; "iron ships will never float. You might as well build stone ships."

The progressive man goes on and builds iron ships and makes a fortune, but at middle life his partner wants to build steel ships. "Never," cries the old man, with his conservative old ideas, "iron ships are all right, but steel ships will never float." The young man builds his steel ships, that give us our Mauretanias, and then, when he has grown old, comes a young man talking of building airships, and he cries out, as the other two old men have done about the iron ships and the steel ships, "that airships will never be practicable."

This play, "Milestones," is the biggest suffrage play ever written, and offers the best suffrage argument.

Go back three generations. The question of whether a woman should be given an education then was just as burning a one as the question of whether she should be given a right to vote is now. And precisely the same arguments were brought against it as are brought against woman suffrage now.

An Old Belief.

In our great-grandmothers' time it was contended that it would unsex a woman to teach her geography, and make her bold and unwomanly and kill her sweet feminine charm for her to receive an education. Also that only a few blue stockings among women wanted an education. Therefore, it was foolish and wrong to open college doors to the feminine sex.

Well, by dint of a heroic fight by a few women for all women, the privileges of education were extended to girls, and the learning that our forefathers so feared would unsex and demoralize women has brought about none of the calamities they foretold. Women are still women. They are still sought in marriage, and so far from only a few caring for an education, the girls outnumber the boys in high schools. Education has not unfitted women to be good mothers. It makes them better ones.

Look back at the time when education was thought to endanger women, and you will laugh as you did at the man who was so sure that an iron ship couldn't be made to float.

The next milestone that we have passed is the one that marked the place where women began to go into gainful occupations. In our grandmothers' day the only way a woman had to make a good living was to marry it. By and by a few bold and heroic women rebelled at this state of affairs and demanded a right to go into any kind of business that they were fitted for. The whole conventional world raised one grand howl of protest.

A woman's place is in the home, it cried, whether she's got a home or not, or anything to eat in it or not. If she goes out into the world to work she will become unsexed. She will become coarse and vulgar, and wear short hair and trousers, and smoke and swear, and men won't marry her, and everything will go to the bow-wows.

There are eight million wage earning women in the United States, and if there are any unsexed among them the Eden Musee has failed to get them. So far from the working girl having her love of dress eliminated, the trouble with her is that she's too much given to frills. Also, instead of being opposed to marriage she gets married just when she's most valuable to her employer. The finest woman in the world to-day is the wide-awake, competent business girl, amply able to stand on her own feet, and earn what she needs. She is the prop of her family, and a blessing to society.

It's as absurd to think that people were ever afraid to give women the right to earn an honest living as it is to think that they ever prophesied that you couldn't make a steel ship that would float.

The third milestone that we have passed is the property milestone. Up to our mother's day when a woman married every cent she had passed into her husband's exclusive possession. This was true although the man might be a gambler and a spendthrift, swamped to his chin in debts of which the woman knew nothing, or whether he was a good fellow of the shiftless sort between whose fingers money leaks as water through a sieve.

When it was first proposed to pass property laws securing a woman's money to herself it was fought tooth and nail—even by many women. People said it would break up the home, and produce endless friction between husbands and wives. Women cried out that if they could trust themselves to their husbands they could trust their money. It was contended that for a woman to own her own money would make her bossy and insulting to her husband.

They Worked Well.

Nevertheless some property laws, not adequate ones yet, have been passed, and it has been found out that they worked out for the general good. The right sort of man didn't want to hold up his wife and rob her of her property and the woman who is married to the wrong sort finds out that it is, at least, some consolation to have a roof over her head when her dream of love is broken.

Nobody would now argue that a woman hasn't a right to her own property or to the money she earns, any more than they would contend that we should go back to the old days of the wooden sailing ships.

And now we have come to the last milestone in the march of human progress. It is the demand that women who own property and pay taxes, who form one-half of the population, who are amenable to the law, should stand before that law on an equal platform with men.

Those who object say that for women to vote will unsex them, that it will take away their feminine charm, that men won't want to marry them, that it will break up the home, that not all women want to vote, just as they said these things about educating women, or about women being given a chance to make an honest living, and about women being permitted to control their own property.

Not one single evil prophecy founded on women's advancement has been fulfilled. May we not confidently believe that we may give woman the ballot not only without danger, but that their help is needed in politics just as much as it is needed in the home and the business world? Why should we not then pass this last milestone, too, and set our faces toward the onward journey?

A bow of velvet of the same tone hides the lower end of the paradise.

The other picture shows an afternoon gown of white supple moire. The bodice is a kimono crossed with a small decollete in the V shape, with small plastron of embroidered linen. A shawl collar achieves the yoke. The sleeves are of three-quarter length, with small revers trimmed with three small buttons of the same material, a point going up over the middle front of the bodice.

The underskirt is straight and buttoned on the front with buttons of the material.

Too Much for the Chimney

WHEN Grandfather Lickshingle heard it read from a newspaper that Peter Ripley had a lamp chimney which his family had used for thirteen years, he rapped savagely on the floor with his walking stick and said:

"Now, what the dickens is the use of putting such reading in the newspaper? If they want some information about lamp chimneys, let them come to me and get it. When me and your grandmother broke up housekeeping we had a lamp chimney. But it wasn't made in these 'ere shoddy times. I paid a penny for it the day we were married. That was away back somewhere in the last century. We used it night and day for 79 years and eight——"

"Why, grandpa, you didn't have to use it in the daytime, did you?"

"Didn't have to—no. But we did. Used it at night on the lamp, and in the daytime we used it to drive nails with. Sometimes the children cracked nuts with it, and the road surveyor borrowed it several times to pound stones on the streets. One day I thought they had lost it. The workmen had left it on the road, and the street cars ran over it seventeen times before it was found. This lamp chimney had been in a railway collision, 22 lamps had exploded under it during its time, a horse kicked it clean through the side of the stable, and the chimney came out of it all without as much as a crack, but the horse had to be sent to the hospital. However, it's broke now," said grandfather, with a deep sigs.

"Then you were foolish enough to let the servant clean it, were you?" asked mother.

"No, but we might as well. When we gave up keeping house I gave it to a friend. He was hard of hearing, and he wanted it for an ear trumpet. One day a man tried to tell him why he ought to be President, and that he was the only real man for the job, and, by cracky, he burst the chimney into a million pieces."

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

In the amiable way of villagers, they were discussing the matrimonial affairs of a couple who, though recently wed, had begun to find the yoke of Hymen a burden.

"'Tis all along o' them hasty marriages," opined one caustic old gentleman, who had been much to the fore in the discussion. "They did not understand each other. They'd nob-but knowed each other for a matter of seven year."

"Well, that seems long enough," said a listener.

"Long eno'? Bah! Ye're wrong. When a body's courting, he canna be too careful. Why, my courtship with Mary lasted a matter of nineteen years."

"You were certainly careful," agreed the listener; "and did you find your plan successful when you married?"

"Ye jump to conclusions hastily," said the old man. "I understood her then, so I didna marry her!"

A sad-looking man went into a chemist's. "Can you give me," he asked, "something that will drive from my mind the thought of sorrow and bitter recollection?"

Then the chemist nodded, and put him up a little dose of quinine and wormwood and rhubarb and Epsom salts and a dash of castor oil, and gave it to him, and for six months the man could not think of anything in the world except new schemes for getting the taste out of his mouth.

The portly lady had accidentally taken a rear seat in a car reserved for smokers. With unconcealed indignation she watched the man beside her fill his pipe.

"Do it now, ma'am!" said the man, as he carefully lighted up; "then take my advice an' stop it!"

Corporal (to soldiers)—"Why is the blade of the saber curved instead of straight?"

Soldier—"It is curved in order to give more force to the blow."

Corporal—"Humbug! The saber is curved so as to fit the scabbard. If it was straight, how would you get it into the crooked scabbard, blockhead?"

Blink (the wholesaler)—"Well, how many orders did you get yesterday?"

Gink (the salesman)—"I got two orders in one shop."

Blink—"What were they?"

Gink—"One was to get out and the other was to stay out."

"Have you a spare cigar about you, old chap?"

"Certainly. But I thought you were going to stop smoking?"

"I am, but not too abruptly. I've already stopped smoking my own cigars."

A factory in Grenoble, France, utilizes the water of a reservoir situated in the mountains at a height of 200 yards. The water reaches the factory through a vertical tube of the same length, with a diameter of considerably less than an inch, the jet being used to move a turbine. Experiments have shown that the strongest men can not cut the jet with the best tempered sword, and in some instances the blade has been broken into fragments without deflecting a drop of the water and with as much violence as a pane of glass may be shattered by a blow from an iron bar. It has been calculated that a jet of water a small fraction of an inch in thickness, moving with sufficient velocity, could not be cut by a rifle bullet.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

From where Gordon stood the wild windstorm seemed to be rushing directly toward him with twice the speed of the fastest express train, cutting a path five hundred feet wide. Even as he looked the tornado, with a rush and a roar, swept up between the mansion and the huge granite rock in the valley. Gordon dashed for the brook to seek some sheltering bank, but ere he could reach it the cyclone was upon him, or at least the edge of it, and he was picked up as though he was a chip of wood, carried forty feet in the air and hurled to the opposite side of the brook, where he lay stunned.

When Gordon came to his senses he found himself surrounded by four rough looking men, dressed in the garb of the mountaineer. They assisted him to his feet and he worked his arms, legs and body to ascertain if there were any bones broken. Finding himself apparently sound, he smiled.

"I never rode on the wings of a cyclone before," he said, "and I don't believe I ever want to try it again."

None of the men he addressed made direct reply to this cheerful remark. They stood close to him and eyed him critically. Finally one of them, a black-bearded man, said:

"I reckon you're Gordon Kelly."

"I am," replied Gordon, surprised that the stranger should know that name.

Gordon a Prisoner.

As if this answer were a signal for attack, the four men closed in on him. One of them had a rope and he attempted to pinion Gordon's arms. Though taken completely by surprise, Gordon put up a desperate struggle, but was quickly overpowered by the four men, all of whom seemed possessed of uncommon strength. His arms were tied behind his back and he was commanded to walk forward.

"What's the meaning of this?" demanded the prisoner.

The man with the black beard answered.

"I reckon nothin' ain't goin' to harm yer, if yer obey orders. If yer don't we'll make yer. Come along."

But Gordon refused to move. He said in a calm voice.

"Just tell me what this all about, will you, please? You've made a mistake. I have done nothing to you. You've got the wrong man."

"You ain't done nothin' to us, but you're the man we want. Come along, now." The black-bearded man drew a six-shooter from his pocket and grasped the weapon by the barrel. "I don't want to hit yer with this yere pistol, but I reckon I'll have to unless yer do what I tell yer."

Gordon saw that all four men were armed, though the black-bearded man was the only one to make a display. Resistance was useless and might bring him needless injury, so without further words he walked ahead in the direction indicated. Feeling that in a short time the whole thing would be explained and he would be allowed to go free, His captors followed the brook for nearly a mile and then turned off toward the northwest. They crossed the path of the cyclone, which had long since passed in its fury, leaving destruction in its wake, and continued on through thick forests and over rough and wild mountain country. Gordon tried to secure some information from the men, but they did not reply to his questions.

A Long Walk.

Finally, after walking northwesterly for about three miles, Gordon judged, they came to Pew Creek, the stream that flowed past the settlement bearing the same name nearly fourteen miles to the south of where they were. The prisoner knew the country well, especially the land bordering the creek. He knew not where his captors were taking him, but at least he was familiar with the ground. The bearded man, leading the way—he seemed to be the leader of the four—followed the creek for another mile until he struck the main road. Before reaching the road, however, the party stopped, while one of the men went ahead as a scout, evidently to make sure the road was clear. He waved a signal to advance and the others did so, crossing a bridge where the creek met the road and then plunging due west through another forest. They were getting on higher ground all the time and finally came to a clearing. Then, making a sharp ascent of about one hundred yards, they descended rapidly for another hundred yards and came to a small clump of trees, with underbrush growing high all around it. Walking straight ahead, the bearded man parted the underbrush and with Gordon following close, they passed through it and arrived at a log cabin, evidently of recent construction.

By this time it was almost dark. One of the men stepped inside the cabin and lighted two or three tallow candles, after which he set about preparing the evening meal. When the candles were glowing, the bearded man motioned Gordon to enter, which he did, the others following. Gordon glanced around. There were five rough banks, with a straw on them for bedding. There was no stove, but there was a fireplace in a corner, with a small chimney leading up from it, built of sticks of wood plastered with clay. The only article of furniture in the room was a rude bench. The bearded man then spoke the first words he had uttered since the march began. He said to Gordon:

"Yer won't be hurted none unless yer try to escape. Then we'll shoot." He untied the rope that bound Gordon's arms, one of the other men standing by with a revolver in his hand, and added: 'Maybe yer better git in one of them bunks till grub is ready.'"

Thoughts Busy.

Gordon rubbed the circulation back in his arms and then lay down. He had long since made up his mind to treat the situation good-naturedly, feeling that more could be accomplished that way than being nasty about it. He resolved to trust to cheerfulness and diplomacy in his intercourse with these men. He had not yet been able to figure out what their object was in making him a captive. Perhaps they would demand a ransom for his release. He could not satisfy himself how they knew his name, either. The thought flashed across him that Galen Deery had something to do with the matter. Perhaps the Atlanta capitalist had learned of his companionship with Mildred. It was possible that Shephard, his superintendent, had informed him. He recalled what Mildred had told him about her father's vast project and he tried to connect it with his present predicament.

While his thoughts were busy, the fire under the pots and pans was busy, too. Three of his captors began eating at once, while the fourth stood guard over Gordon with a six-shooter in his hand. Evidently they had planned the whole thing out in advance, as they had not spoken to each other since entering the cabin.

After eating a hearty meal of bacon, corn cakes, stewed beans and crackers, Gordon stretched himself, smiled and announced that he felt better. He thought the other men probably felt in better humor, too, so he tried to start a little conversation.

"Do you men expect to keep me here or will there be some more walking?" he asked, with a good-natured smile.

The black-bearded man nodded. "Right yere, I reckon," he replied, after some deliberation.

Allowed to Write.

There was no answer to this remark. Three of the men had lighted pipes. The fourth, who seemed to be somewhat younger than the others, had been relieved of guard duty and was now eating his supper. When he had finished he drew a bag of tobacco and some tissue paper from a pocket and rolled a cigarette. There was silence for a long time and then Gordon began again.

"I don't mind spending a little time with you men, as you appear to be willing to treat me fairly. I suppose you will tell me what this is all about when you get ready to do so. You won't find me troublesome. But I have a favor to ask of you. The people at my home and the people at Deery's house below will be very much worried about me. They may think I was killed in the cyclone. What I want you to do is to get word to them somehow that I am safe; or, if you will allow it, I will write a note that one of you can leave on the doorstep at night. Of course you can read the note before it is sent. What do you say?"

Three of the men looked at the man with the black beard as if expecting him to do all the necessary talking. He smoked in silence for several minutes. Then he spat and said:

"I reckon you all kin write."

CHAPTER XXXVII.

GORDON had a pencil, but no paper. However he discovered a small paper bag, which he slit down the sides with his knife, making of it a long, narrow sheet. Then, with the bottom of a tin plate for a desk, he very slowly wrote the following remarkable letter in a large hand:

Friend Mildred:
I write to tell you I am
Very well and for you and
Elmer and also your
Mother not to worry as
I am being well treated.
Lonely, of course, it is,
Especially as I can not
See my friends; but
No matter; I will keep
On being cheerful and the
Rest will come out right in
The end. I wish you would
Have someone to go
With you to my home (take
Elmer) and please notify
Steve and all the others
That none of them
Must look for me
Yet. I will soon
Have, I expect, another
Opportunity to write
More. You may possibly
Expect it soon.
Love to all.

G. K.

When Mildred received these lines (which she did the following morning) she must have thought it a queer letter to get from the man she was so worried about. It was not a love letter, nor did it seem to say much of anything in any definite degree. Yet Gordon had deliberately written it that way, trusting to the girl's ingenuity to decipher the hidden meaning. As a matter of fact, the meaning was so little hidden that Gordon, as he wrote it, had doubts as to whether it would pass muster.

The Message Sent.

Gordon folded the sheet of paper twice, addressed it on the back to Miss Mildred Deery and handed it to the black-bearded man, who read it slowly; so slowly, in fact, that Gordon feared he had discovered the simple cryptogram. But at last the mountaineer nodded and placed the letter in his pocket, whereat Gordon breathed with relief. Later in the evening the letter was given to the youngest of the four who, after receiving instructions from the bearded man, given in too low a tone for Gordon to distinguish the words, saddled a horse that was tethered nearby, mounted him and rode off in the darkness.

From the moment the rope that bound Gordon's arms had been removed, one of the four men had remained within ten feet of the captive, with a revolver in his hand. Every action of the mountaineers indicated that they meant business and Gordon had long since made up his mind that he would not attempt to escape that night. At intervals he endeavored to draw his captors into conversation, but without success. They were not sullen, or gloomy, or sulky; they simply refused to talk, so at last Gordon requested that he might be allowed to retire for the night.

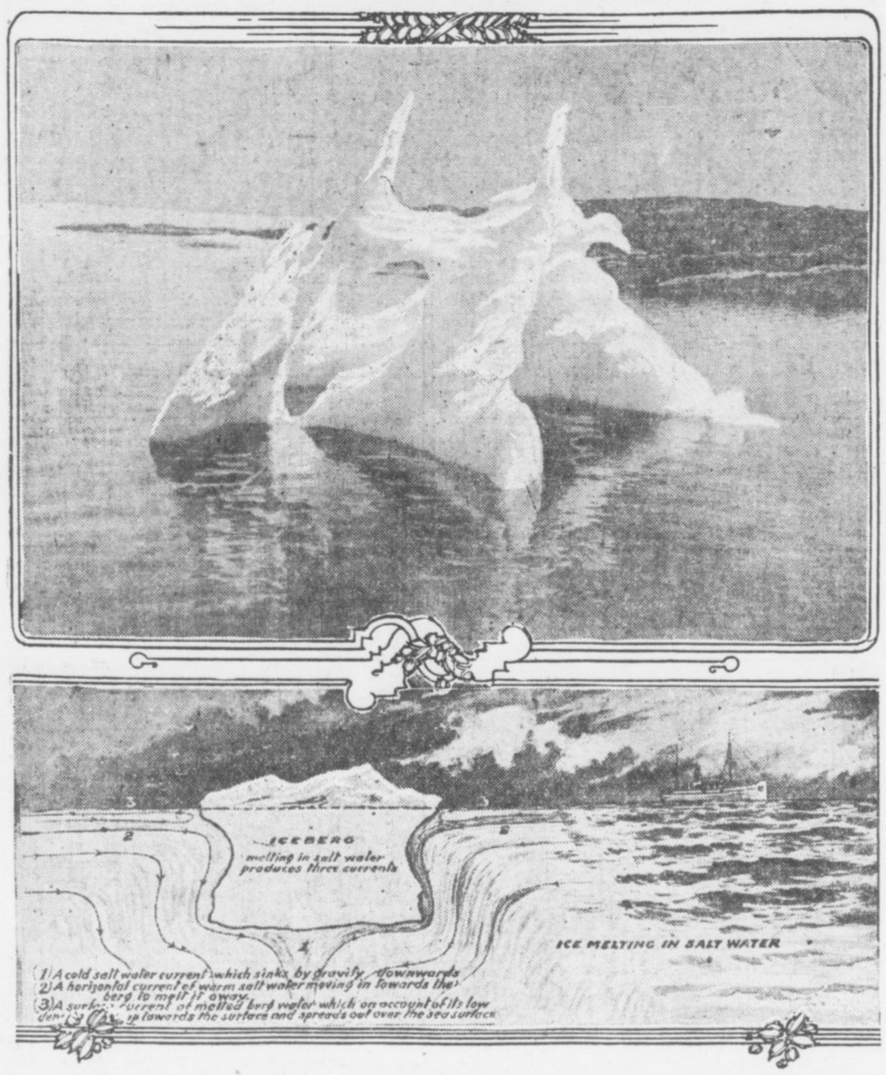
A Device That Traps Icebergs

An Atlantic Liner Can Now Be Provided With Mechanical Senses as Sensative as the Nostrils of a Deer



The top picture is a photograph of a melting iceberg. Underneath is a diagram showing the various currents produced by an iceberg that is slowly dissolving. It is these currents that are "felt" by the micro-thermometer, one of the latest wonderful achievements of science.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

SINCE the sinking of the Titanic, a year ago, icebergs have been studied as never before, and a great amount of curious knowledge about these frozen monsters of the deep has been accumulated, with the result of increasing the safety of ocean navigation.

Just as a living being proclaims its presence, even when it can not be seen, by telltale sounds and vibrations and by emanations which are perceptible at surprising distances to olfactory senses as delicate as those possessed by some of the lower animals, so icebergs betray themselves, in the darkness of the night, or the far more dangerous obscurity of a fog, by their effect upon the temperature of the air and the water.

A remarkable mechanical sense-organ, called the micro-thermometer, which is simply a thermometer of great delicacy and special construction, dragged through the water by a ship, is now employed to measure the changing temperatures of the water in the vicinity of icebergs, and some unexpected facts have been developed by its use.

A great steamship provided with micro-thermometers lowered into the water is like a hunted deer sniffing the air with its sensitive nostrils and detecting its enemies afar off.

How It Works.

These instruments reveal facts previously unknown about icebergs. They show that there is a surprising system of currents around and under a great berg, or a fleet of bergs, which produce characteristic temperature changes that may be felt miles away. In truth, the iceberg is a great thermal engine surrounded by a medium of air and water peculiar to itself, and due to its action upon its environment. Upon the air immediately around it the berg produces a cooling effect in consequence of the absorption of heat required to melt it. When water freezes, it gives out heat; when it melts, it absorbs heat. One perilous consequence often is that the moisture in the cooled air around the berg condenses into concealing fogs and mists.

But the effects of the berg upon the underlying and surrounding water are still more remarkable and important. It has been found (as illustrated in the picture of a melting iceberg) that there are three characteristic currents produced in the ocean water by a great berg when it arrives in the comparatively warm water lying along the steamship tracks of the North Atlantic.

In the first place, directly under the vast ice mass there is a great current of cooled salt water, which sinks by its own gravity, because the cold increases its relative density.

In the next place the suction produced by the sinking cold water draws in from all sides warmer surface currents, which eat into the sides of the berg by their melting action, and finally so much reduce the size of the berg beneath the surface, or so change its shape, and its center of gravity, that, at last, the equilibrium of the mass is upset, and it turns over, thrashing the surrounding sea with its immense flanks, huge fragments of which, heavy enough to sink a ship, are detached, and go floating away to form an attendant fleet of small bergs and floes.

Then there is a third current composed of relatively fresh water, formed by the melting of the berg, and which, because of its lesser specific gravity, moves upward from around the berg and flows as a comparatively warm current over the surface of the sea. This current is of the greatest importance in betraying the presence of a berg, for it spreads to a considerable distance and can easily be detected by the micro-thermometer. The warm current has been detected a mile from a berg.

The Real Effect.

In regard to this a recent report of the Canadian Government on iceberg phenomena says: "There is little room to doubt that the real iceberg effect is the rise of temperature, and that the fall (observed when a ship passes abeam of the berg) is due to the colder current in which the berg is being carried."

In some experimental trips when icebergs were passed at a distance of from a half to a quarter of a mile there was observed first a rise of temperature in the water, followed by a fall as the berg was passed abeam.

Similar experiments with the micro-thermometer have shown that the near neighborhood of land is betrayed by a fall of water temperature, and this is believed to be due to the action of the tides and the obstruction offered by the coast line, resulting in a turning up of the under water, which is always much colder than the sea surface.

At the Table

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED

THAT common meeting-ground of the family, the dinner table, should be made a place where harmony reigns and where each one brings his or her best to contribute to the pleasure of the moment. Cheerful talk is as necessary to health and appetite as it is to peace and pleasure of mind. Unpleasant subjects should be avoided resolutely. Such topics as bad news, illnesses, grewsome incidents shocking accidents, troublesome business affairs should not be brought to the table; nor should disagreeable family matters be discussed there. These family affairs may require settlement, but may be talked of elsewhere.

If it is a family principle to be agreeable and talkative at table, there will be greater ease when guests are present.

A woman's duty is to be composed and cheerful at her table whether at family meals or when there are guests. Her serenity, or the lack of it, influences others. When acting in the capacity of hostess she needs an absolutely placid temper. Self-control must be her watchword. If she appears to be disturbed, worried, absent-minded, if her eyes wander, or she seems distracted in conversation, every one will be uneasy, and the dinner will be dull and dragging. Her duty is not to let her guests know of her moods, disappointments or even of a headache.

If service is slow, or mistakes happen, it is best for a hostess not to offer explanations. No matter what may go wrong, she must appear not to notice it. By passing over a mistake or an imperfection herself it will escape the attention of others, or, at least, will not be regarded as important by them. If a serious accident occurs to precious china or rare glass she must maintain a calm manner. If a careless servant lets something drip on a guest's dress, a hostess must express regret and try to remedy the blunder and then pass on, without too much delay, to other matters. A guest should try to appear undisturbed by any accident of the sort.

If a guest should be so unlucky as to overturn a glass or have any other accident, it is best not to make profuse apologies. Regret may be shown by one's manner. Thus there is less interruption to conversation and to the smooth running of the dinner. By practice a young hostess may acquire facility in being able to talk naturally while at the same time seeing that people are served properly. If an order has to be given it should be done quietly and simply, without any mysterious signals or loud whisperings. A hostess should try not to make her servant nervous by watching her too much as she moves round the table.

Didn't Want Him.

Mike Hennesey, a hefty young Irishman, secured his first foremanship after serving for some years as one of the "gang." Promptly at 7 o'clock in the morning he began his duties by calling the gang to order.

"Ye all have to worruk for me!" he shouted. "Worruk, I say! And I want every wan of yez to understand at wance that I kin lick anny man in the gang!"

All swallowed the insult except one giant-built warrior, who stepped forward and said:

"But you can't lick me, Mike Hennesey!"

"Oh, I can't, can't I? yelled Mike.

"No, you can't," came back the determined answer.

"Well, thin, go to the office and draw your money. I'll have no man in the gang I can't lick!"

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"My husband shot a burglar," she said, languidly. And then her insolence reached its culmination in a query of her own: "Was his name Griggs?" It was done with splendid art, with a splendid mastery of her own emotions, for, even as she spoke the words, she was remembering those shuddering seconds when she had stood, only a few hours ago, gazing down at the inert bulk that had been a man.

Burke betook himself to another form of attack.

"Oh, you know better than that," he declared, truculently. "You see, we've traced the Maxim silencer. Garson himself bought it up in Hartford."

For the first time, Mary was caught off her guard.

"But he told me——" she began, then became aware of her indiscretion, and checked herself.

Burke seized on her lapse with avidity.

"What did he tell you?" he questioned, eagerly.

Now, Mary had regained her self-command, and she spoke calmly.

"He told me," she said, without a particle of hesitation, "that he had never seen one. Surely, if he had had anything of the sort, he would have shown it to me then."

"Probably he did, too!" Burke rejoined, without the least suspicion that his surly utterance touched the truth exactly. "Now, see here," he went on, trying to make his voice affable, though with small success, for he was excessively irritated, "I can make it a lot easier for you if you'll talk. Come on, now! Who killed Griggs?"

Mary Stood Rebellious.

Mary cast off pretense finally, and spoke malignantly.

"That's for you to find out," she said, sneering.

Burke pressed the button on the desk, and, when the doorman appeared, ordered that the prisoner be returned to her cell.

But Mary stood rebellious, and spoke with a resumption of her cynical scorn.

"I suppose," she said, with a glance of contempt toward Demarest, "that it's useless for me to claim my constitutional rights, and demand to see a lawyer?"

Burke, too, had cast off pretense at last.

Mary spoke to the District Attorney.

"I believe," she said, with a new dignity of bearing, "that such is my constitutional right, is it not, Mr. Demarest?"

The lawyer sought no evasion of the issue. For that matter, he was coming to have an increasing respect, even admiration, for this young woman, who endured insult and ignominy with a spirit so sturdy, and met stratagem with other stratagem better devised. So, now, he made his answer with frank honesty.

"It is your constitutional right, Miss Turner."

Mary turned her clear eyes on the Inspector, and awaited from that official a reply that was not forthcoming. Truth to tell, Burke was far from comfortable under that survey.

"Well, Inspector?" she inquired, at last.

"We've Got Gargon."

Burke took refuge, as his wont was when too hard pressed, in a mighty bellow.

"The constitution don't go here!" It was the best he could do, and it shamed him, for he knew its weakness. Again, wrath surged in him, and it surged high. He welcomed the advent of Cassidy, who came hurrying in with a grin of satisfaction on his stolid face.

"Say, Chief," the detective said with animmation, in response to Burke's glance of inquiry, "we've got Garson."

Mary's face fell, though the change of expression was almost imperceptible. Only Demarest, a student of much experience, observed the fleeting display of repressed emotion. When the Inspector took thought to look at her, she was as impassive as before. Yet, he was minded to try another ruse in his desire to defeat the intelligence of this woman. To this end, he asked Gilder and the District Attorney to withdraw, while he should have a private conversation with the prisoner. As she listened to his request, Mary smiled again in Sphinx-like fashion, and there was still on her lips an expression that caused the official a pang of doubt, when, at last, the two were left alone together, and he darted a surreptitious glance toward her. Nevertheless, he pressed on his device valiantly.

"Now," he said, with a marked softening of manner, "I'm going to be your friend."

"Are you?" Mary's tone was noncommittal.

"Yes," Burke declared, heartily. "And I mean it! Give up the truth about young Gilder. I know he shot Griggs, of course. But I'm not taking any stock in that burglar story—not a little bit. No court would, either. What was really back of the killing?" Burke's eyes narrowed cunningly. "Was he jealous of Griggs? Well, that's what he might do then. He's always been a worthless young cub. A rotten deal like this would be about his gait. I guess. * * * Tell me, now, why did he shoot Eddie Griggs?"

All Poise Had Fled.

There was coarseness a-plenty in the Inspector's pretense, but it possessed a solitary fundamental virtue; it played on the heart of the woman whom he questioned, aroused it to wrath in defense of her mate. In a second, all poise fled from this girl whose soul was blossoming in the blest realization that a man loved her purely, unselfishly. Her words came stumblingly in their haste. Her eyes were near to black in their anger.

"He didn't kill him! He didn't kill him!" she fairly hissed. "Why, he's the most wonderful man in the world. You sha'n't hurt him! Nobody shall hurt him! I'll fight to the end of my life for Dick Gilder!"

Burke was beaming joyously. At last—a long last!—his finesse had won the victory over this woman's subtleties.

"Well, that's just what I thought," he said, with smug content. "An' now, then, who did shoot Griggs? We've got every one of the gang. They're all crooks. See here," he went on, with a sudden change to the respectful in his manner, "why don't you start fresh? I'll give you every chance in the world. I'm dead on the level with you this time."

But he was too late. By now, Mary had herself well in hand again, vastly ashamed of the short period of self-betrayal caused by the official's artifice against her heart. As she listened to the Inspector's assurances, the mocking expression of her face was not encouraging to that astute individual, but he persevered manfully.

"Just you wait," he went on cheerfully, "and I'll prove to you that I'm on the level about this, that I'm really your friend. * * * There was a letter came for you to your apartment. My men brought it down to me. I've read it. Here it is. I'll read it to you!"

He picked up an envelope, which had been lying on the desk, and drew out the single sheet of paper it contained. Mary watched him, wondering much more than her expression revealed over this new development. Then, as she listened, quick interest touched her features to a new life. In her eyes leaped emotions to make or mar a life.

Helen Morris' Letter.

This was the letter:

I can't go without telling you how sorry I am. There won't never be a time that I won't remember it was me got you sent up, that you did time in my place. I ain't going to forgive myself ever, and I swear I'm going straight always. Your true friend,

HELEN MORRIS.

For once, Burke showed a certain delicacy. When he had finished the reading, he said nothing for a long minute—only sat with his cunning eyes on the face of the woman who was immobile there before him. And, as he looked on her in her slender elegance of form and gentlewomanly loveliness of face, a loveliness intelligent and refined beyond that of most women, he felt borne in on his consciousness the fact that here was one to be respected. He fought against the impression. It was to him preposterous, for she was out of that underworld against which he was ruthlessly at war. Yet, he could not altogether overcome his instinct toward a half-reverent admiration. * * * And, as the letter proved, she had been innocent at the outset. She had been the victim of a mistaken justice, made outcast by the law she had never wronged. * * * His mood of respect was inevitable, since he had some sensibilities, though they were coarsened, and they sensed vaguely the maelstrom of emotions that now swirled in the girl's breast.

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

Chapter Eleven.

WHEN Jennie saw her girl friend at the office next day she asked her how she managed to have such nice dresses and such a nice furnished room on the salary she got. The girl winked and laughingly explained, "it was very easy, providing you were pretty and you found the right MAN." But even then little Jennie did not understand what she meant, and asked the girl to explain the meaning of the "right MAN" part of it.

This the girl was very reluctant to do, but finally admitted that one of the young men they were out with the night before gave her money—and that she just worked for the sake of having something to do. But she did NOT tell Jennie that the work also helped her to forget her way of living and to keep her mind off the day when she would NOT be as good looking and when the young man would have transferred his attentions to a younger and prettier girl—and the money wouldn't be so easy to get.

Jennie was quite shocked when she realized her girl friend was taking money from the young man, and as much as she wanted pretty clothes and good times she was sure she could never, never do THAT to obtain them.

Then the girl told her she knew of a place where Jennie could get clothes on credit. By just paying a dollar or so a week she could get all the clothes she wanted if they knew she had a fairly good job for a girl. Jennie was quite excited when she learned there were such places as these. Just think—and you would only have to pay a dollar or two a week. She was getting eight dollars a week. Pooh! she wouldn't miss one dollar of it. So at noon time she and the girl went to a store to pick out some clothes for Jennie.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I WAS reading a book last night that certainly gave me the Willies," said the Manicure Lady. "Wilfred brought it home from the library. It was all about the way them Romans used to go after the church members, and I never seen such terrible accounts of anything in my life. Why, George, them Romans used to burn the Christians in boiling pitch! Gee, I'm glad I wasn't around then, ain't you?"

"If I had been around I would probably have been one of the Romans," said the Head Barber. "I ain't no church member, even though I know that I ought to be one. I am always so tired after Saturday is over that I like to sleep till noon, and in the afternoon and evening me and the Missus usually goes somewhere like to the seashore or out in the country. If I had more time I would go to church, because it don't hurt anybody to go, and think of all the good religion has done."

"That's why I go," said the Manicure Lady. "Sometimes I feel as if the preacher and me don't quite agree on everything he says, but I always make allowance for the preacher. I was just saying to mother last night that the people that goes to church now ought to be very thankful that they didn't live among them Romans and that the brave people who did live in them days was ever on earth to start the churches and bring all that good into the world."

Not So Hard.

"There is a lot of church members now that wouldn't have stood the gaff then," said the Head Barber. "There is a lot more church members now, but the going ain't so hard."

"That is just what I was thinking when I was reading that book," said the Manicure Lady. "There was a smooth, chop-whiskered old geezer in here yesterday to have his nails did, and the way he purred around me and kind of insinuated would make you sick. He said that he lived over in a little Alabama town, and I asked him if he was the same kind of a gay old dog among the Birmingham manicure girls. Mercy, no, he told me. He said that he had to be a different person altogether when he was at home. He said he couldn't imagine what the other pillars of his church would say if a brother deacon got nifty. I asked him if he didn't have any conscience of his own, and he said that he had one, but it always got seasick when he was crossing the Chattahoochee River, so he left it at home.

"It is too bad, George, that old man Nero didn't have a few of that kind of church members for his lions and bonfire men to practice on, instead of the noble people that had to be martyrs. Pa used to go to church a lot when we lived over in South Carolina, but I guess he ran into so many good little toads like the gent of which I am just speaking of that he got sick of the job.

A Perfect Dear.

"The old gent may travel to the sideboard a little too often some evenings, but he ain't no hypocrite, and there is a lot of other men like him that would be there every Sunday when the plate comes around if there wasn't so many old fakes with sidewhiskers carrying the plate.

"I asked the old geezer what he did week days to rest up from going to church, and he said that he had a big factory where children could learn a good trade and grow up useful members of society like him.

"Do you follow me, George? What a perfect old dear he must be to his wife and children! Honest to goodness, George, if I could find out where his wife lived I would send her a synonymous letter and warn her of her husband's complicity, or whatever it is they call that Jekyll and Hyde stuff that makes a man kick up his heels when he gets where the high buildings looms. Gee, the shop seemed airier and better after he had went!"

ATLANTA GAINS EXTRA GAME ON EVE OF FOURTH

By Joe Agler.

NEW ORLEANS, June 23.—Lefty Price will put 'em across for the Crackers this afternoon, opposing Rube Evans, and it looks like us for the money. Price is in great shape, and the bunch is working like a clock. If we don't take the whole series and move up to the top, where we belong, you can tell the bunch at the corner that Joe Agler's a bum prophet.

Old Man Rain won the first game here Sunday, owing to the lack of boating facilities in the park. The field offered fine opportunity for swimming early in the day, but the crowd kept on coming, in spite of the rain, and rather than let all that coin get away one game was decided upon. It was slippery as spaghetti, but that hurt nobody.

Game for Atlanta.

The postponed first game will be played on July 3, and will be transferred to Atlanta. We will not pull off a double-header here this trip.

We copped the one game of Sunday, Dent pitching a wet ball in great shape and having splendid support from the fielders. Whitey Alperman was the batting boy, landing two two-baggers and a single in five times up. Bill Bailey made a great running catch and Spencer pulled off one of the most brilliant running catches ever seen on the Pelicans' lot, grabbing Bailey's hot liner with his bare hand, after a long run.

Tommy Long crippled Jakey Atz at third base, nearly breaking Jakey's wrist and putting his thumb on the blink. Williams took Atz's place for the rest of the game.

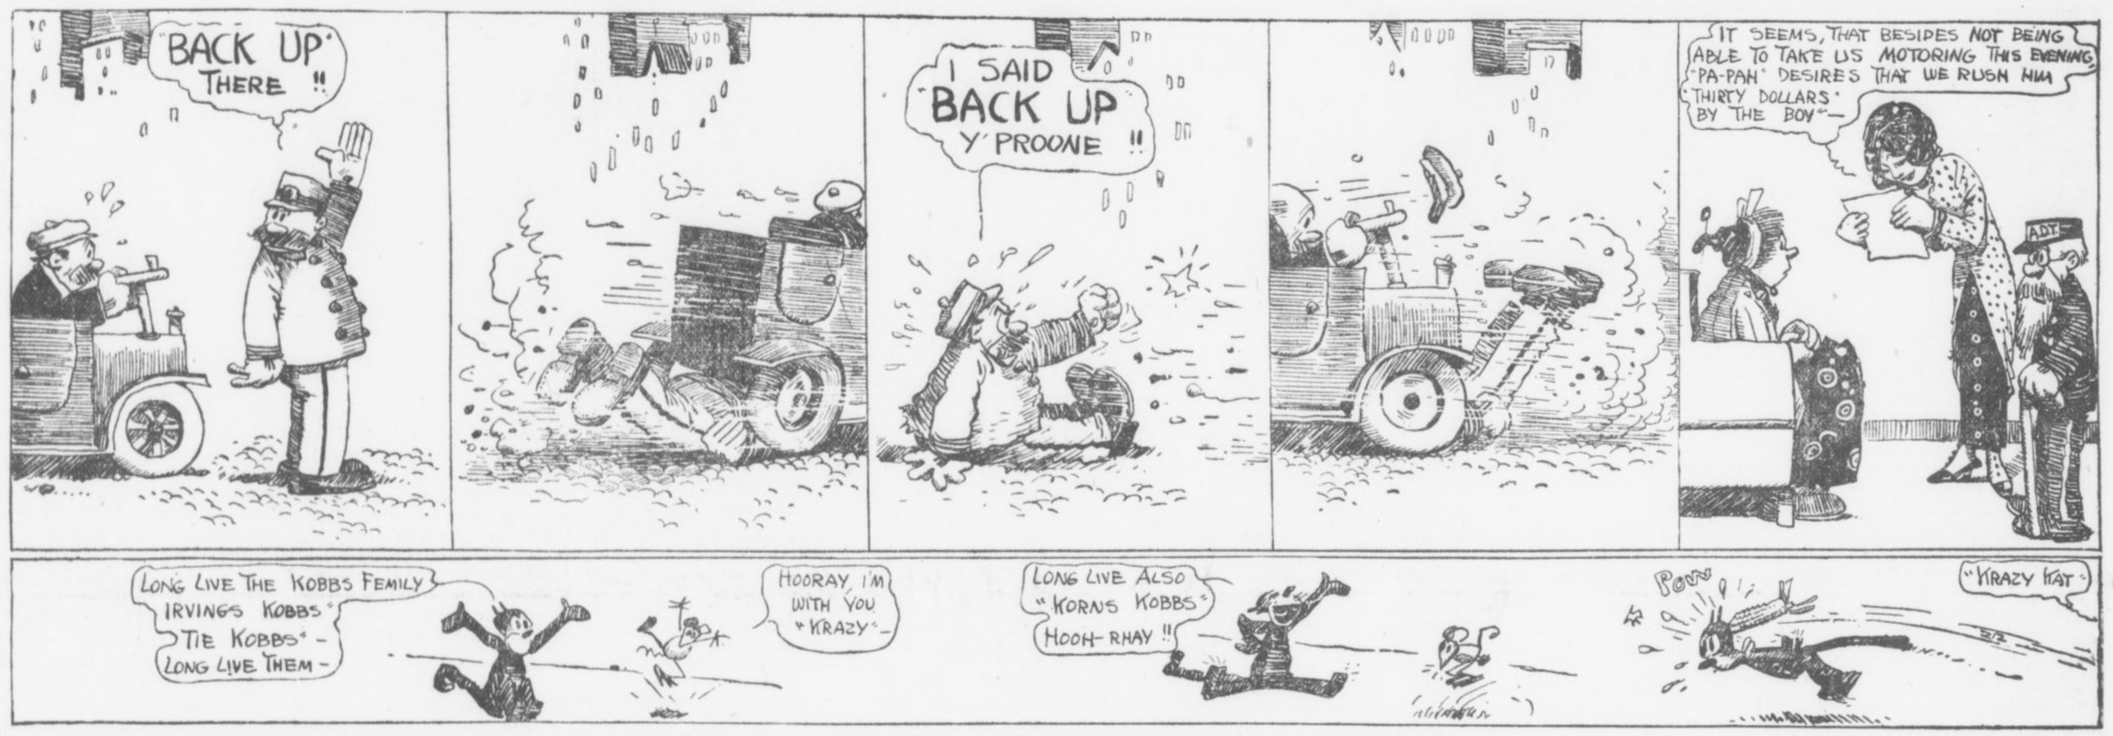
The Old Man Obeys Orders, Too Well



Dundee Faces Hard Task July 15

Murphy Is Tough Boy to Beat

By Left Hook.

THE case of Johnnie Dundee is a remarkable one.

Here is a classy boy, one of the top-notch featherweights of America, who, after splitting a draw decision with the world's champion of that division, voluntarily steps into the lightweight grade and invites trouble from the 133-pound battlers. And he is sure to find it.

Dundee chased Johnnie Kilbane around the Vernon ring until both were leg weary. As a reward for his agressiveness the Italian was given a draw. There was no argument, but that of the two, Dundee was the most willing to make a fight.

Following this affair Kilbane went back on the easy money trail after men like Fox and Jimmy Walsh. Dundee, to hold the respect of the public, announced that he would pass up the featherweights as a lot of tame and mediocre boxers, and jump into the lightweight division among a few real fighters.

There is little doubt what this move increased the popularity of the little Italian, but it was a step backward, according to the way the overmanaged boxer of to-day is handled, harking back to the days when a man signed a set of articles first and asked about the weight and reputation of his opponent afterwards.

As evidence of his good faith Dundee agreed to take on Ad Wolgast, a fighter from his heart out. Wolgast's broken hand caused the match to be called off at a time when both boys were putting in their last training licks.

* * *

DUNDEE then signed to box "Chicago" Jack White, with the understanding that the winner is to meet "Harlem" Tommy Murphy, the vicious veteran who recently beat Wolgast.

Dundee defeated White in twenty rounds and is now ready to start training for his twenty-round set-to with Tommy Murphy. Before the latter battle Dundee will taken on Tommy Dixon, July 4, but should have little trouble in defeating Jimmy Hurst's protege.

The Murphy battle, however, should prove one tough scrap for Dundee. The Harlemite has met the toughest lightweights in the game to-day and is really in line for a match with Ritchie. Many of the coast critics let out an awful howl when Rivers was given first chance at the title, claiming that Murphy was entitled to the match.

* * *

MURPHY'S latest achievement was a twenty-round victory over Ad Wolgast, but he has also defeated such stars as Owen Moran and Frankie Burns, besides giving McFarland a hard battle for twenty rounds.

Should Dundee manage to beat Murphy, no one in the world will be able to overlook him as a lightweight contender. But the task seems a difficult one. Dundee will be giving away about ten pounds in weight and it looks at this distance as if the extra poundage will be an awful handicap for Johnny. However, fighters of the Dundee type should be admired and he will not lack for admirers when he steps into the ring with Murphy.

Riders Will Dress in Asbestos

Fireproof Togs for 'Dromers

THE riders out at the local Motordrome lie awake nights trying to think of something they can put over on somebody else. They are always getting something new with this end in view. For instance, Morty Graves has sent off for a new motorcycle, Georges Renel has bought a lot of new parts for his motorcycle, Manager Noon Hudson has another suit of clothes, Harry Swartz has a new wife and Jack Prince always has a fresh shower up his sleeve that he lets out on race nights.

But it has remained for George Lockner to spring the newest thing—an asbestos suit of clothes. He has wired to St. Louis for one and expects it here in time for use at Wednesday night's races.

These asbestos suits were introduced by a St. Louis rider, Brownie Carslake, and are being rapidly adopted by the other riders.

When They Are Needed.

In motordrome racing there are two reasons why asbestos suits are needed.

One reason is that the blooming motorcycles, fed enormous quantities of gasoline and spitting fire like an old-time dragon, are constantly catching on fire. Naturally, this would be bad enough under ordinary circumstances, but the awful complication arises from the fact that they usually touch themselves off while going at very high speed. The machines are not supplied with brakes and the rider must always choose between sticking on and getting his clothes on fire or falling off and breaking his neck. Harry Lewis, one of the riders at the local Motordrome, caught on fire the afternoon of the opening meet, and only the presence of the riders and a battery of fire extinguishers made it possible to put him out. With an asbestos suit this danger is removed. A man may cook a bit while his machine is slowing down, but he will not blaze.

Useful in a Spill.

The other need for an asbestos suit comes when a fall occurs. Going at high speed, a man is likely to slide a hundred feet or so over the surface of the track. Frequently the friction of such a slide sets the clothes ablaze, and the spectacle of a man on fire—maybe with a lot of bones broken, too—is not uncommon at motordromes. With asbestos suits this danger is removed. No matter what the friction is, the clothes can not catch on fire. As the riders' suits soon become impregnated with oil and are occasionally dashed with gasoline, they are highly inflammable, and the fear of being burned to death will probably drive all the local riders to the asbestos-suit stunt.

Plans are going forward at the local 'drome for the meeting Wednesday night. The program which was rained out on Saturday night will be carried through at that time, with the Mayor Woodward Sweepstakes as the feature.

Coulon Meets Burns At Kenosha To-night

KENOSHA, WIS., June 23.—Johnny Coulon, bantamweight champion of the world, and Frankie Burns, the Jersey City bantam, are on the edge for their scheduled ten-round battle here to-night.

Much interest is being displayed in the affair, as this is to be the fourth meeting between the pair. Ever since Johnny was given a hair-line decision over Burns at New Orleans in twenty rounds on February 15, 1912, there has been a great deal of rivalry between the boys.

The other bouts between the bantams were no decision affairs and critics usually agreed that they were about even up. As this will be Coulon's recally first tough scrap in over a year fans are anxiously awaiting the outcome. Johnny is billed to meet Kid Williams in a twenty-round go on July 29 and his showing to-night will have much to do in the way the fans bet their money in the title set-to. Coulon rules a 10 to 8 favorite over the Jersey City boy.

FOXEN SAID TO ADMIT HE 'LAID DOWN'

By Percy H. Whiting.

OF course you can't believe all the second-hand, near-beer saloon information that is floating around, but one bit of rumor has drifted in that is worth publishing.

This information is that Bill Foxen admits that he "laid down" on the Atlanta club and purposely played for his release.

We didn't hear this first hand. We aren't on Bill's speaking list. But it came pretty straight and it sounds pretty reasonable.

* * *

THE story is that Foxen admits he played for his release here. He is said to attempt to justify himself with the following statement:

"I got in bad with the Atlanta club because I wouldn't go out boozing with the players. They got sore on me and made it as hard as they could. Under the laws of organized baseball there was only one way to get away. That was by losing games. So I lost games." That may not be the word-for-word admission, but that is probably about the gist of it.

* * *

CASES where players have been accused of "laying down" are plentiful enough in the annals of baseball, but this is perhaps the first time on record where a player has admitted his guilt in the matter.

While nobody in Atlanta feels inclined to excuse Foxen in this matter, it is a fact that the rules of baseball make it pretty hard for a player who is thrown into a team made up of souses and soreheads. He must play with them, "lay down" or leave baseball.

* * *

OF course the only manly thing to do is to see it through, no matter what the conditions are on the team. The public has no love for a quitter. The Atlanta public shows that fact every time Foxen visits the city—and always will as long as he comes here.

Their only regret is that they can not get a shot occasionally at the other member of the hold-out sketch, Pitcher Frock. They would dearly dote on giving him an occasional good time.

DILLON-CLABBY BOUT OFF; M'KINNON TO BOX JACK

Bill McKinnon, of Boston, has been substituted for Clabby. Young Saylor, of this city, will box Battling Terry, of Pittsburg, the same night.

BOXING

News of the Ring Game

Four important bouts will be staged at Vernon, Cal., within the next five weeks. On June 24, Eddie Campi tackles Charley Ledoux; on July 4, Leach Cross meets Bud Anderson; on July 15, Tommy Murphy swaps punches with Johnny Dundee, and while on July 29 Johnny Coulon and Kid Williams fight for the bantamweight championship of the world.

* * *

Hammond, Ind., fight fans are rejoicing to-day over a declaration by Sheriff Whitaker that he would not interfere with boxing matches so long as the limit does not exceed ten rounds. It was the occasion of the home-coming of Jimmy Clabby, who recently defeated Eddie McGoorty. Clabby was banqueted on his return from Butte, Mont., where the bout took place.

* * *

Chicago fans are having a big laugh on Harry Trendall, the St. Louis lightweight. Recently Trendall was matched to meet Charlie White, but dodged the match when he heard of Charlie's hitting power, and instead he took on Eddie Murphy. The latter handed Trendall a neat lacing. White and Murphy are great friends and usually chum together when both are in Chicago.

* * *

* * *

The ringside weights for the return match between Jimmy Duffy and Jack Britton at Buffalo Monday night will be 136 pounds. The raise in the scale comes from Danny Morgan, Britton's manager.

* * *

Gunboat Smith has been made a 2 to 1 favorite over George Rodel, who meet at New York on June 27. The two heavyweights met about four months ago and, although Smith floored the Boer five times, he was unable to put him away.

* * *

Frankie Burns should give Johnny Coulon a tough battle when the two bantams hook up at Kenosha, Wis., on Monday night. Burns has met Johnny on several occasions and has always given a good account of himself.

* * *

Joe Golden, manager of Joe Thomas, is now a boxing promoter. Golden has matched "Wildcat" Ferns and Bobbie Dibbons for a 10-round bout to be staged in Pelican Park, New Orleans, on July 4. The welterweights are scheduled to go ten rounds.

* * *

Billy Nolan and Willie Ritchie have split. The fighter and manager could not agree on financial terms, and Willie has now decided to handle his own business for the present.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 23.—The Giants made a great finish to their Western trip, and I am now convinced that the New York club will win the pennant again. The Phillies appear to be gone, and I do not see any other team on the horizon or the schedule that can stop us.

What tripped up the Philadelphia club was what I had anticipated would stop it all through the season. The pitching staff cracked, and the rest of the team caved behind it. Both Seaton and Alexander, the two men who had carried most of the burden of the pitching so far in the race, were overworked, and the strain told. There are few pitchers who can appear three times a week, one week after another, and get away with it, and these two attempted to do just that. The strain of maintaining the lead also hurt Philadelphia's chances of grabbing the pennant. The Quakers are not altogether out of the fight yet, but I do not think they are the club which the Giants will be forced to beat now. If we once pull them behind, they are liable to go into several parts.

* * *

IT is hard to tell just which team will make the going for us from this point in the journey to its finish. For a long time, it had been my notion that Pittsburg would give the Giants the fight this season. The Pirates looked like one of the best baseball teams I had ever seen when they wound up the season last fall, and they should have been stronger this year. Baseball is certainly a funny thing.

* * *

THE Giants have just returned from one of the most successful Western trips ever made by a ball club. The only one which I have ever made since going out with a professional ball team that even approached it was the final swing around the circuit in 1911, when we grabbed the pennant in the last jump to the wire. On that junket we took eighteen out of twenty-two games, I think. We had to do it then, and we practically had to do it this time if the Giants were to beat Philadelphia back and stay in the race. We were all sitting around the lobby of the hotel in Cincinnati one night last week.

"It looks as if we have caught the Quakers," remarked McGraw.

"I did not expect that they would break as soon as this," volunteered "Larry" Doyle. "After they grabbed that series in Pittsburg it seemed as if they ought to have had renewed confidence."

"It was the cracking of their pitching staff and the spurt of the Giants that did it," answered McGraw. "When a team has been out ahead all season and is still playing good ball, but finds the second runner creeping up on them slowly in spite of their best efforts, it is just heartbreaking. That is one reason why I am none too particular about my team shooting out in front from the first. Every manager must count on at least one slump some time each year. We got ours in the spring. The Phillies are taking theirs now, and are liable never to come back.

"They've got some good pitchers," said Doyle.

"The pitching staff is all right, but overworked," replied McGraw. "Wait until they meet that string of stored-up double headers coming now with the pitching corps in its present run-down condition. The rest of the team I never could see. I never figured them as the pennant winners without wonderful pitching and luck. Baseball would be on the down grade if a club of the caliber of Philadelphia could take the championship in the National League."

JOE RIVERS STARTS HARD GRIND FOR RITCHIE BOUT

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23.—Joe Rivers, who has been at the Ocean Beach for the past few days doing light training, started to work in earnest yesterday. The Los Angeles lightweight put on the gloves in the Seal Rock gymnasium and surprised those who dropped into the big pavilion with his speed and cleverness.

Frank Carter, the welterweight that Manager Levy brought from Los Angeles, was his sparring partner, and the pair went three rounds. Rivers warmed up with four rounds of shadow boxing and was ready to go at a fast clip when Carter stepped into the inclosure. Joe stepped around the Mexican in lively fashion and showered blows on Carter.

CROSS AND LEDOUX TRAIN BEFORE A LARGE CROWD

LOS ANGELES, June 23.—A large crowd stood a 60-minute sun broil for the privilege of seeing Charley Ledoux, of Paris, France, and Leach Cross, of New York, box two rounds in the Vernon ring—and it was worth it, too.

Ledoux, blue-tighted to his neck, began operations with the punching bag. By actual count he landed on the leather just eleven times in nine minutes. Cross, attired in a cherry-colored makeup, stepped on the platform and made the bag beg for mercy.

RITCHIE IS IMPROVING; TO MAKE WEIGHT EASILY

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23.—Willie Ritchie demonstrated two facts in his first Sunday workout ahead of the Fourth of July bout. One is that his style has improved considerably over the days he was battling for recognition and the other is that he will not have the slightest difficulty in the world making 134 ringside and still show up strong. A good afternoon at the beach gave Joe Rivers one of the biggest crowds that has ever packed the pavilion to see boxers in training.

If the Suffs insist on so shoving in their interference it may be necessary to equip English race horses with fenders.

Or, as Bill Hallowell suggests, why not arm each jockey with a lance?

Even the worm will turn, as Confucius once remarked. For instance, the Pirates vary the monotony by winning a game with a margin of one run.

An expert informs us that the Tigers will be a strong team by the time August arrives. Therein they differ from the Browns, who show their greatest strength in December.

One is led to look askance at Mr. McGoorty's statement that the referee became excited and gave the decision to the wrong man. How could any human being become excited over a fight between Messrs. McGoorty and Clabby?

Our notion of easy money is to get $100 for refraining from holding converse with an umpire.

It was expected that these games would permit the staging of a little side issue battle between Ty Cobb and Joe Jackson, the sluggers of the league. But they did not. Cobb, because of a lame leg, was forced to retire in the third inning of the first game, and Jackson "sassed" an umpire a few innings later and was wigwagged out of the game.

ROCK ISLAND, ILL., June 23.—Earl Henderson, of Rock Island, boxed ten rounds to a draw with Jimmy Murphy, of Chicago, yesterday.

The Authors' Protective League entered a formal protest against what is termed the "brutal" prohibition of the play.

Granted Insurance After Lung Trouble

As many cases of Lung Trouble start with a cold or a cough, the best advice that can be given is to get rid of the cold or cough as quickly as possible. Otherwise more serious troubles are likely to follow. If the medicines you are now taking do not bring relief, try Eckman's Alterative, the remedy for Throat and Lung Troubles, which has stood the test of time. Investigate this case:

257 Dean St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Dear Sirs: About a year and a half ago my health rapidly failed until at the end of six months my weight had fallen to 129 pounds. I was troubled with night sweats, a severe cough and was very weak. About this time I consulted a physician, who told me my lungs were affected. Not satisfied, I went to another doctor, who, after examining me, said that I was in the first stages of consumption. At this point I started to take Eckman's Alterative. The night sweats stopped almost immediately, my cough became looser and gradually disappeared. My weight is now 142 pounds and my physician has pronounced me perfectly sound—which, together with the fact that I have been accepted by two different insurance companies for insurance, makes me sure of my entire recovery by Eckman's Alterative."

(Affidavit) W. E. GEE.

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in case of severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all of Jacobs' Drug Stores and other leading druggists. GRADY HOSPITAL BARS OUTSIDE PATIENTS

Dr. W. B. Summerall, superintendent of the Grady Hospital, Monday issued a warning to non-residents of Atlanta that they must not send patients to the Grady Hospital. His announcement was a result of a most pathetic case of a young man in the last stages of an infectious disease, who was sent here from Warwick, Ga., by public subscription. Dr. Summerall is preparing to return him to his native town.

"The hospital is too small to accommodate legitimate cases," he declared. "We have been turning down about twelve applications a day from citizens of Atlanta. We certainly can not throw open our doors to persons outside. Yet in the last three months eighteen persons, hopelessly diseased, have been dumped on Atlanta from nearby towns, some of them outside the State. Some persons seem to think they can rid themselves of their unpleasant obligations by sending these helpless ones to Atlanta and forcing us to treat them.

Will Send Outsiders Back.

"We have sent each of the eighteen persons back to their homes, and we will continue this policy."

Early Monday the hospital was notified that there was a sick man at the Terminal Station. They responded to the call and found him, Ernest Harris, of Warwick, Ga., hopelessly ill.

The ambulance surgeon ordered him to Grady, although the hospital has no adequate facilities. Harris was too sick to be left on the streets, so he was taken to the clinic room and there given attention.

Harris told Dr. Summerall that he had had no medical treatment for four months and that he had not been able to get a bath for a month.

Doctors Turned Him Away.

He said there were two physicians in his town, but they had refused to treat him because he had no money. Finally, his condition became so wretched, he said, that a public subscription was taken and he was given a ticket and put on the train for Atlanta.

Dr. Summerall conferred with City Warden Thomas Evans and a railroad ticket back to Warwick has been obtained for Harris. Dr. Summerall declared it was the duty of every community, as long as it was able, to provide for its own mendicants.

"We need six times our present capacity to take care of the negroes in Atlanta who need treatment and four times as much capacity for the white people," said Dr. Summerall.

Hearer Dies as Text Is Read by Pastor

William B. Maner, age 65 years, died from heart failure while attending services at the Collins Springs Baptist Church Sunday morning. Rev. H. G. Mitchell, the pastor, had just announced the text of his sermon when Mr. Maner slipped down in his seat.

The deceased was well known in Atlanta, especially among railroad men. A wife and eight children survive him. Funeral services were held Monday morning at the residence, 6 Guyton Street.

Critics Rave, but All London Does Tango

LONDON, June 23.—Despite the bitterness of its critics the tango apparently has come to stay and the Argentine tango and the Boston, in all the newest elaborations, will be danced in the most fashionable ballrooms.

Mme. Van Dyck, one of London's leading dancing instructors, who has just returned from Paris, said:

The prejudice which may have existed among society people regarding new dances is certainly disappearing."

Women's Attire and Nude in Art Scored By Dr. Dunbar Ogden

An appeal for decency in life and art was made by the Rev. Dr. Dunbar Ogden at the Central Presbyterian Church Sunday night. The extreme fashion of woman's attire of the present day was declared by him to be a menace to the morals and the nude in art was even more vicious.

Dr. Ogden referred to a number of local instances to illustrate his sermon. Talking of the moving picture film, "Quo Vadis," he said: "We have the illustration of how Rome threw decency to the winds as it indulged in bacchanalian revelry. History tells us of how Rome tottered and fell. Our present trend is toward the moral disintegration which destroyed Rome."

Referring to the recent exhibition of art in the show windows of Atlanta stores, he declared their exhibition to be a crime, and that punishment as such should be meted out to the exhibitors.

Jamaica Is Worried by U. S. Banana Tax

KINGSTON, JAMAICA, June 23.—The receipt of a cablegram from Washington announcing that America will impose a tax on Jamaica bananas caused consternation among the planters here.

The banana industry is the principal one of Jamaica, and as most of the fruit goes to the United States the tax will be a serious blow to it.

It was announced Jamaica will establish a quarantine against Hayti, where bubonic plague is raging.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Keith Bill at the Forsyth.

The headline feature of the bill of vaudeville at the Forsyth this week is Gertrude Vanderbilt, the ever-popular little star of musical comedy. She and George Moore hold a position in vaudeville that has never been reached by any other singing and dancing duo.

The big extra added feature will be "Ideal," the champion lady swimmer and diver, who, Professor John Aldredge, of Columbia University, declares to be the most perfectly formed woman in the world. "Ideal" is going to give an exhibition of fancy swimming and diving in a tank pool sunk in the Forsyth stage.

Other features are the Six Musical Cuttys, pretty Minnie Allen, Doc O'Neil, comedian; Dorothy Richmond and her company, in a sketch, and the Four Hayama Japs, gymnasts. Matinee this afternoon.

"Quo Vadis" at the Grand.

"Quo Vadis," witnessed by thousands at the Grand at daily matinee and night exhibitions last week, commences its second week at the big theater with matinee and night performances to-day. The second week of the engagement of the pictures was arranged to take care of the great demand for seats from people who could not get accommodations last week.

The 10,000 feet of Italian film, in three acts and eight scenes, makes an entertainment continuing two and a quarter hours, and without a single second that fails to interest. The picture is all that has been said for it and more, too.

"The Merry Whirl" at the Bijou.

This week's attraction for the Bijou gives promise of being one of the most interesting and pleasing of the summer season. It is called "The Merry Whirl." There is splendid opportunity for good comedy work and the introduction of catchy musical numbers, in which the chorus takes a prominent part.

"The Merry Whirl" is said to be one of the most pretentious productions that will be seen this season at the Bijou.

Matinees will be given every afternoon at 3 o'clock, except Monday and Saturday. On these days the matinees will take place at 2:30 and 4. Night performances, as usual, at 7:30 and 9.

The Sunday American goes everywhere all over the South. If you have anything to sell The Sunday American is "The Market Place of the South." The Sunday American is the best advertising medium.

CONTESTANTS IN PONY RACE LET CHANCES SLIP

Many Votes To Be Had for the Asking—Energetic Ones Have Better Opportunity.

Every day persons come into The Georgian and American offices and order the paper sent to this or that address, saying nothing about votes. If these persons had been approached by one of the boys or girls in the pony contest the candidate would have been rewarded by a good batch of votes.

This only goes to show that votes are to be had for the asking.

Mail orders from the country, too, show that the boys and girls outside the city are not getting every subscriber they could.

Only Hustlers Win.

Contestants should remember that anyone will feel kindly toward the boy or girl asking them to subscribe for The Georgian and American. Whoever subscribes gets his money's worth, and the candidate gets the votes.

The 22 ponies and the 44 watches are going to be given away. Some one is going to win them. They will go to the contestants who show the greatest amount of activity, who use the greatest amount of intelligent effort.

There is no notch into which a weak, vacillating candidate will fit.

Optimism Big Help.

The idle dreamers and "wishful" candidates will gravitate to the bottom just as surely as a stone sinks in water, or a short-winded man falls behind in a foot race.

Optimism helps every time, and the candidate who believes he can get votes will get them.

Remember, the bonus offer for clubs of five still is in effect. If you need a subscription to complete a club, tell people. They will be just that much more ready to help you.

Big gains were shown in the standings yesterday. The race is becoming lively.

Campanini Is Given Applause in Paris

PARIS, June 23.—A Beethoven-Verdi-Saint-Saens festival took place at the Paris Opera House under direction alternately of Maestro Campanini, new manager of the Chicago Opera House, and Saint-Saens.

The chief feature was a finished performance of Verdi's "Requiem," conducted by Campanini. He was warmly applauded.

Wilson's Daughter To Sing for Social; To Inspect Prisons

SUPERIOR, WIS., June 23.—Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of President Wilson, on Thursday will take part in a social center entertainment to be given in Madison, Wis. She will sing several songs and dance with the members of the Social Center Club.

Governor Sulzer of New York has just appointed Miss Wilson a member of a commission to investigate the affairs and management of the prisons and reformatories of the State.

U. S. Converted to Need of Headlines

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Salesmen have been making a practice of displaying "pure food" decisions to customers, claiming products of rival concerns were condemned, when as a matter of fact the foods had been declared "O. K." To prevent this, a "headline" will be put over the top of every decision hereafter, stating clearly whether the manufacturer or the Government won.

Heretofore "it was frequently necessary to read the entire notice of judgment in order to learn whether a penalty had been entered or the defendant acquitted," the Department of Agriculture admits in a statement issued to-day. Salesmen took advantage of the average dealer's unwillingness to dig out the real meaning of decisions.

Airman Fined for Aeroplane Collision

PARIS, June 23.—A verdict was delivered in an action brought by two airmen, Captains Dickson and Thomas, to determine who was responsible for an aviation accident in Milan in 1910 when two aeroplanes were in collision.

The judge decided that Dickson was to blame and ordered him to pay $1,000 damages to Thomas and $2,000 damages to the makers of the aeroplanes.

CORONER SEEKS VITAL ORGANS OF PAINTER

JACKSONVILLE, June 23.—The fight over the possession of the vital organs of the late Edward Okle Painter reached a tense pitch to-day when Coroner C. D. Abbott left for Baltimore to contest the injunction preventing the removal of the organs to Jacksonville. The injunction was requested by the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company, one of whose policies Painter held to the amount of $20,000, and which has been particularly active in the investigation of incidents surrounding the death of the fertilizer man. The company has announced that it desires a further investigation.

Coroner Wants Organs.

Coroner Abbott has been given until Wednesday to show cause why the injunction should not be granted. He said to-day that he would conduct personally the fight in Baltimore for the possession of the remains, presenting his claims as the only person entitled to conduct an official autopsy. He was accompanied by Deputy Sheriff L. R. Haddock.

The departure of the Coroner and the detention of the vital organs in Baltimore necessitated the postponement of the inquest over Painter's body which had been set for to-day. It probably will be held Thursday or Friday immediately upon the return of the officers from Baltimore.

Grave Still Guarded.

Meanwhile deputies, under Sheriff Dowling, are maintaining their nightly vigil at Painter's grave at the insistent request of Mrs. Painter. The widow seems obsessed by the idea that ghouls have plotted to steal the body, her friends declare.

Further developments in this notable insurance investigation must await the return of the Coroner from Baltimore.

Sees Female Revolt In Central America

NEW YORK, June 23.—Mrs. Marie Hubbard, the Costa Rican wife of an American merchant in Brussels, before sailing for San Jose was anxious to know if there would be many American men on board. She said she desired to travel with Americans only.

"Every woman in Central and South America wants to marry an American and live in the United States," declared Mrs. Hubbard, "for in this country she is free. There will be a revolution in Central America some day, and it will be led by the women."

DRY GOODS TRADE GOOD; COLLECTIONS ARE NORMAL

CHICAGO, June 23.—Marshall Field & Co., in their weekly review of the dry goods trade, say:

"General dry goods business for the past week has shown up well in comparison with the figures for the same period a year ago, with collections about normal. On future business the average sales per man have been higher than for any corresponding week since 1907, and they report that buyers are purchasing more freely than is usual at this season.

"Retailers are doing good business on all sheer summer fabrics and wearing apparel. Wholesale stocks are becoming well cleaned up in preparation for inventory, there being excellent response to the advertising of special offerings.

"The shipping department has been kept fairly busy taking care of immediate orders, the greater percentage of which were received from nearby States, although Eastern business placed through our New York office has been heavy."

COTTON DROPS AS LONGS LIQUIDATE

NEW YORK, June 23.—Influenced by weak Liverpool cables, the cotton market opened easier to-day with first prices at a net decline of 4 to 7 points from Saturday's final. Sentiment was more bearish than for some time past, owing to the dullness of Liverpool summer positions. Weather conditions over Sunday were favorable; also crop advices. However, the buying was rather general on and after the call, resulting in prices rallying some 2 to 5 points in most active positions from the initial level.

During the forenoon the selling became general and looked as if it came from the same source as Saturday, causing the market to weaken, with prices declining some 7 to 13 points from the previous close. The buying was very light and scattered.

During the afternoon session the market was quiet with very little trading. The selling pressure was in less evidence, while some brokers representing the larger spot houses were noticeable buyers. This class of buying caused prices to rally a few points from the early low level, but the market closed steady with prices at a net decline of 4 to 11 points from the final quotations of Saturday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, June 23.—Weather conditions continued favorable over Sunday with a nice rainfall in the Atlantics. Some good scattered showers in the central States and even the Texas temperatures normal; no excesses, warm nights, indications are for partly cloudy to fair and warm weather; some scattered showers.

Washington predicts a week of fair, warm weather—just as needed. Liverpool is poor in all departments; futures out 2 points lower than due; spots 5 points down; sales only 6,000 bales. Political news continues unfavorable and the repeated disappointments at the allure to arrive at peace is bound to itself in a further depression.

The press reports a congestion of old crop, Egyptian cotton in the warehouses in Alexandria with an apparent falling off in the demand. A feature of the spinning situation, especially in America, is the dullness in fine yarns.

The following report from Canton, Miss., shows the active fight made against the boll weevil: "The report says that $250 was distributed in prizes; 450,000 weevils were brought in, representing almost one-tenth of the weevils caught in the county."

This market opened about 7 points lower and weakened steadily. December selling to 11.45 in the second hour. New York reported some influential selling. Consumption prospects affected by the unfavorable political and financial situation is the principal bearish argument.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 23.—J. M. Anderson says: "The volume of trade today was only moderate, the buying and selling was pretty evenly divided. There was selling by the Wall Street interests, who were prominent on that side on Saturday, but a good scattered demand for contracts was found on the slight decline. Liverpool was a buyer and some of the Saturday sellers covered. Weather continues very favorable and local sentiment favors a further decline.

Texas wires: "Reports from all over State most promising; in fact, present conditions so perfect that anything to happen must be detrimental, as there is practically no room for improvement. There are reliable prospects for heavy new crop movement from south Texas in August and some even second half of July. European business so far very unsatisfactory; no demand."

The census report on Thursday, July 3, at noon, Eastern time, will give acreage of cotton this year and condition of crop to June 25.

Liverpool announces that Cotton Exchange will close at noon Saturdays and open at 11 a. m. on Mopdays during June, July and August. The market will be closed July 11 and 12.

* * *

The Memphis Commercial-Appeal has the following on the condition of the cotton crop for the week:

"The weather of the past week was very favorable for the growth of cotton over the entire belt. Temperatures were high, with good showers in west and clear skies in the remainder of the belt—just the kind of weather needed. The plant made good progress, although most of its energy was occupied in overcoming the check placed upon it by the cool weather of the previous week, and for this reason its actual advancement was more real than apparent. As a result of the cool weather, the plant over the entire belt is a bit small, although probably slightly larger than last year, but it is making a bushy growth and shows the health that accompanies a good tap-root and favorable soil conditions.

"Good rains in Texas and portions of Oklahoma supplied the one thing needed in these States for the best growth of the plant. The excellent cultivation that has been pronounced characteristic of the crop all season was maintained throughout the week and soil is perhaps better worked than ever before at this season. The rains and the fact that farmers were in the wheat harvest allowed some grass to gain headway in in portions of Texas, but the situation is one that a few days' work will soon cure. The other western States, the central valleys, Alabama and nearly all of Georgia are nearly 106 per cent, with soil in excellent condition. In the Carolinas and a small portion of Georgia a few days more of warm, open weather are needed to further cultivation and the growth of the plant. Arkansas and the central valleys begin to need rain, but no material damage will result should dry weather continue for another week. The one complaint reported was of boll weevil in Mississippi and Louisiana, and Arkansas. There is a big crop of the pest in Mississippi and Louisiana, but farmers are fighting them under the direction of Government experts and are confident that in most localities they have them whipped."

Washington's forecast for week: "Warm and generally fair weather, with probably rain coming week in the Southern States; such showers as may occur will be local and widely scattered."

STOCKS RECOVER SATURDAY'S LOSS

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 23.—The oversold condition of the stock market made it very sensitive to buying at the opening to-day, with the result that prices of nearly all the standard issues jumped upward.

Bullish sentiment was helped by favorable comments from banking interests upon the proposed currency reforms advocated by President Wilson.

Canadian Pacific opened 1⅜ higher, but profit-taking developed which carried away ⅜ of the advance. United Siberian Steel common began at a gain of ½, but at the end of a half hour the upturn had been increased to 1 point. Among the other advances were Lehigh Valley, ¼; Erie, ⅜; Erie preferred, ½; St. Paul, 1¼; Chesapeake and Ohio, 1; American Telegraph and Telephone, ⅜; American Can, ⅝; Amalgamated Copper, ⅞; Reading, 1¼; Southern Pacific, ¼, and Union Pacific, 1.

Missouri Pacific began with a fractional loss, but recovered. Baltimore and Ohio was unchanged at the outset, but later lost ½ on selling pressure. American Car and Foundry lost ¼, then recovered. Much of the buying represented covering by board room shorts. At the end of half an hour the buying movement had diminished.

The curb market was steady.

There was more liquidation on the London Stock Exchange at the opening. Dealings in Americans in London were small. Canadian Pacific in London was firm.

The strong tone which prevailed at the opening was maintained through the forenoon with issues making gains of 2 or more points. Union Pacific was the most active of the railroad issues, advancing 2⅞ to 144⅝, but an excellent advance was made in Canadian Pacific, 3¼ points to 216⅞. Reading continued on the upward movement, reaching 157¼, a net gain of 2¼. Copper was up ⅝ from the opening, a net gain of 1⅝. Steel, Northern Pacific, Lehigh Valley and all other leading stocks after slight recessions made worthy gains.

Call money loaned at 2 per cent.

After the upturn around noon, the market again sold off in the last hour and prices shaded from the best. Steel sold around 51⅛, while Union Pacific sold to 142⅞, for a loss of 1¼ from the midday level. Later, however, Union Pacific and Lehigh Valley sold down to 140½ for the loss of 1 point from the noon price. Other prices just before the close were Amalgamated Copper 62⅝, American Smelting 61, Erie 23½, Baltimore and Ohio 91¾.

Canadian Pacific sold down to 215¼ for a decline of 1⅝ from the noon.

The market closed dull.

Government bonds unchanged; other bonds dull.

CHICAGO, June 23.—There was a weak feeling in wheat at the close today when the price was ½@⅝c lower on selling by many of those who bought early. Corn closed 1c off and oats were 1@1¼c lower.

OPINION ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, June 23.—Bartlett, Frazier & Co.: Wheat—The weather map shows some precipitation in Canadian Northwest, but very little in the American Northwest. There does not seem much in news to cause any important change in values.

Corn.—Since Saturday there have been good rains over the entire corn belt. Prices will doubtless be lower to-day, the extent of the decline depending on the volume of liquidation.

Oats—As in corn, the precipitation will doubtless be more or less of a depressing factor.

Provisions—General sentiment continues bullish, but an easier corn market may give us some decline.

Poultry, Pet and Live Stock

The Hen and Her Cost of Maintenance Versus the Cow

Interesting Facts and Figures Concerning Fowl and Beast—Note on Standard Revision Committee.

Edited by JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL.

By a comparison of the intrinsic value of the individual hen and her cost of maintenance we find that, taking into consideration the value of each, the net profit from the hen exceeds that from the cow. Forty good laying hens are worth about the same as the average dairy cow, considered in the light of practical utility only. Forty good utility pullets given good, fair average treatment will give a profit for a year of at least $50 net, taken at a low estimate for price of eggs at that. If you would go to work and give them special or scientific care the proceeds would be largely increased. Now where is the average dairy cow (common stock), with average care and no more, that will yield anything like $50 after paying expenses of feed, etc.? I will venture the assertion that they will not net their owners more than half that amount. I make this assertion not for the discouragement of dairy interests in the South, not by any manner of means, for we need increased dairy in the South. There is ample room for both the poultry and dairy business, but let it be known by those who have been inclined to think slightly of the poultry part that it needs no overestimation at my hands. The little industrious hen is ready at any time to demonstrate her ability along these lines if only given half a chance for a living. Taken on land that is even too poor to make good grazing land poultry will do well on it, and if the droppings are properly cared for and used on land when the green stuff is raised, the land can soon be made to produce almost anything in the way of crops at the same time you are reaping a handsome profit. You can not expect, however, that poultry will thrive without care. The trouble with poultry, therefore, is that it has been neglected. The every-day, old-fashioned farmer thinks the hen below his dignity and of little value, and for that reason he has not given her the care that other matters have received at his hands. I say old-fashioned farmers to distinguish them from the up-to-date kind who are fully aware of the value of the hen as compared with the cow and the hog.

Now, friends, wake up and see which class of farmers you belong to, and if you find you are with the out-of-date kind I would advise you to lose no time in flopping over to the kind that are now in the lead. You will be in good company, as well as a money-making crowd. There is a saying that the hen will eat anything the hog will and produce much better results. I would like to see the farmers of the South raise more fowls, and more pork, too, for that matter; but give me the chickens.

Standard Revision Committee Meeting at Indianapolis in July.

There will be a meeting of the Standard Revision Committee appointed to revise the American Standard of Perfection for the 1915 edition at the Washington Hotel, Indianapolis, beginning Monday, July 7, and continuing as many days as is necessary to transact the business to come before that body. This is an important meeting to all poultrymen who are in any way interested in the breeding or exhibiting of thoroughbred poultry, no matter of what kind. The meeting was located at Indianapolis, one of the most central points, to accommodate poultrymen from the North, South or East and West. The wish of the committee is that all who are interested in having any changes made in the standard of their breed, or who may be interested in the admission of some new breed, will be on hand and personally lay their claims before the committee. Of course all correspondence will be given every consideration possible, but it's so much more satisfactory to be able to talk a matter over with the parties interested. It would be well for all who are interested to make an effort to meet the committee.

If you can not be there write your wishes to any member of the committee, who will lay your claim before the committee as a whole.

The members are Reese V. Hicks, Topeka, Kans., chairman; W. S. Russell, Ottumwa, Iowa; A. C. Smith, Waltham, Mass.; E. C. Branch, Lee Summit, Mo.; W. C. Pierce, Indianapolis, Ind.; J. H. Drevenstedt, Buffalo, N. Y.; Richard Oke, London, Ont.; F. J. Marshall, College Park, Ga.

ONE of the greatest drawbacks to poultry-raising in the South is lice. They kill more little chicks than all the diseases combined, and when a hen is full of lice you can not expect her to lay many eggs. However, if you start in time you can get rid of these pests without very much trouble. Cleanliness is the main thing to consider; keep the house cleaned out, and once a week, at least, spray thoroughly all the roosts, dropping boards and nests with Pratt's or Conkey's Lice Liquid. They are both good preparations, and are guaranteed to kill. It is also a good plan to use lice powder; a 25c box of Conkey's Lice Powder will dust about 75 hens, and if used in connection with Lice Liquid you can soon have your flock free from these pests and you can soon see the good results from the increased egg production.

ARE your baby chicks lousy? Better examine them, and if they are get a package of Conkey's or Pratt's Head Lice Ointment, prepared especially for baby chicks; rub a little back of the head and under each wing; it will positively kill every louse and not injure the chick. 10c and 25c package.

IT IS NOT a good plan to feed much corn during the hot weather. A great many brands of Scratch Feeds that are offered have about three-fourths corn. The Red Comb brand has only a small percentage, and is by far the best Scratch Feed sold in this market. $2.25 per 100 pounds.

THIS is a good time to feed mash feed. The Red Comb Mash is a perfectly balanced ration, just the thing for the hens, also fine for baby chicks. $2.25 per 100 pounds.

Julius Brown Home Placed on Market

Residence Noted for Antiques. Traders Exchange Properties. More Building on Peachtree.

One of the finest of the old-time homes on the South Side, the Julius Brown place, at the northwest corner of Washington and Rawson Streets, has been put up for sale in the real estate market through a well-known real estate agency. A sign has been hung out.

The Brown mansion is a three-story brick affair with many rooms. Years ago it was famed for its collection of pictures and Oriental novelties brought from abroad by the owner. North of it is the lot owned and occupied by the late Governor Joseph E. Brown, which was bought recently from the English-Commercial High School.

Exchange of Properties.

The Edwin P. Ansley real estate agency has announced the sale of 442 South Pryor Street, 50 by 170 feet, a two-story, 14-room house, to Mr. Morehead for Mrs. Lucie C. Christian, for $6,800, and of a vacant lot, 25 by 95 feet, on Edgewood Avenue, 50 feet east of the northeast corner of Boulevard and Edgewood, for Mr. Morehead to Mrs. Christian, for $3,500. This was in the nature of a swap.

Sale of Cottage.

C. F. Coppedge has bought from J. F. Schilling a cottage on a 64 by 211 foot lot on Highland Avenue for $2,600, and expects later to improve with twin apartments. This is near Virginia Avenue. The deal was handled by I. W. Harrell, of the George P. Moore agency, who also has announced the sale to James K. Polk for a client a 100 by 220 foot vacant lot on the west side of Germania Avenue, west of Decatur, for $950 cash.

Residences for Peachtree.

Robert Zahner has begun work on a handsome residence which he will erect on the west side of Peachtree Road facing Lakeview Avenue, a few hundred feet south of the estate of Colonel Walter P. Andrews.

J. J. McGrath is finishing his attractive two-story home on Peachtree Road north of the south entrance to the Capital City Country Club.

Dillard Jacobs will soon build on Peachtree Road near the McGrath place.

Do You THINK While You Are Dressing?

The Time Used in Dressing Need Not Be Wasted

(Copyright.)

Man in the process of evolution has got rid of his fur, or feathers, and every day he must put on something to take the place of fur, and every night he must take off the artificial clothing.

One old man in the State of New Jersey killed himself and left a note saying that he died because he was so tired of buttoning and unbuttoning clothes.

There is apparently no greater waste of time than the time that is spent in dressing and undressing.

Bathing, shaving for men and powdering your nose for women, finding what you want to wear and putting it on—it is a tiresome part of every day.

BUT—

The hours in which a human being grows and develops mentally are the hours of solitude.

And a great many of us are practically never alone, except when we are getting dressed or undressed.

Sleep is a time of idleness—no growth there.

When we are with others we listen, learn perhaps, and debate, but we don't really THINK WITH INTENSITY.

The one thing that makes you more of a man than you were last year is intense, solitary thought.

Why not say to yourself: Since I must spend at least 330 hours a year in dressing and undressing, in bathing and shaving and looking for my collar button, I'll also spend that time IN THINKING?

Do you know how many men spend 300 hours a year in actual concentrated thought?

Not one in a thousand.

Suppose you see what you can make out of the hours lost in putting on and taking off the artificial fur and feathers and how much you can grow in the thinking.

Bacon felt that the mind was developed by reading, talking, and writing.

And he said:

Writing maketh an exact man.

Speaking maketh a ready man.

Reading maketh a full man.

(We quote the learned gentleman from memory, which is necessary when you write editorials on a railroad train.)

Reading fills you with knowledge, speaking makes you quick or ready, writing makes you exact—true.

But more important than reading, writing or speaking IS THINKING.

The real YOU lives inside of your brain alone. And it works at its best when you are alone.

Aristotle taught Alexander the Great walking up and down with the young prince that he might become wise and strong at the same time—that is what they call the peripatetic method of intellectual development.

Why don't you educate yourself in thought as you march up and down from the bed to the bathroom, from the rough towel to the safety razor, and so on through the long, tiresome and usually wasted process of dress?

THE OLD ROMANS

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THEY strutted into the bar room,
Three boys—they were nothing more;
They ordered their drinks with grins and winks,
While their heels hit hard on the floor.
When one of them grew less frisky
And seemed half ready to sink,
Cried the others, "Aw, one more whisky!
That's a good old Roman drink!"

Then I thought of the real "Old Romans"
That I knew long years ago,
When we stuck to the "corn" from night till morn
As fast as the stuff could flow.
There was Billy O'Keefe, of Denver—
Too bad poor Billy is dead
He could pack away three quarts a day
And never rattle his head.

There was Jack McGee of the Morning Bee,
And Flynn of the Fourth Estate,
Larry McCale of the Portland Mail—
All dead before thirty-eight.
There was Blake of the Brooklyn Bugle,
And Grant of the Memphis Sun,
And a dozen more, or maybe a score,
Whisky got them, one by one.

I felt the tear that unbidden starts
When I thought (it hurt like a knife)
Of the nimble brains and the golden hearts
All stilled in the prime of life.
Then I walked from the noisy bar room
And muttered a prayer to God
For the souls of the real "Old Romans"
Now dreamless under the sod.

"I Used To Be"

How many times have you yourself heard men, standing up against a bar, bragging about what they USED to be? Perhaps some were telling about the good jobs they ONCE had; or maybe another one—with the shell of a ONCE fine body—was telling what a great athlete he USED to be, how he ONCE did "the hundred yards in 93-5," but could not now even run for a car without blowing like a grampus. You will also notice that these men usually drink WHISKEY—because, as they put it, it has a stronger "KICK" than other drinks. What better word could define it than KICK? Look around you at the men it has KICKED out of good jobs, good health and good homes into the land of USED TO BE.

HAL COFFMAN.

Writes on

The Dictograph

The Dictograph, He Says, Is the Electric Symbol of the New Age, of Which the Newspaper Is the Prophet, in Which the Perils of Privacy Will be Matched by Powers of Publicity.

WRITTEN FOR THE GEORGIAN

By REV. DR. JOHN E. WHITE

Pastor Second Baptist Church

ALL the real problems of society have been anticipated. The progress of modern times is manifest in the good answers we are making to ancient questions.

The Dictograph, for instance, is the New Invention of which Old Necessity is the Mother. The Celestial Society of Olympus, which the Romans created to furnish ideals and to set up standards of judgment on mundane matters, considered it.

Momus reported to Jupiter that the great evil among men was secrecy and deceit. He complained against Jupiter that he ought to have provided a glass window in every human breast, just over the heart, so that the inward truth of men's thoughts would be accessible to everybody, so that deceit would have been impossible.

He made such a row about it that he was kicked out of Heaven.

The Dictograph is a sop to Momus, but the fate of Momus is a warning to the dictographer. The application of this little Edisonic device to human affairs will arouse all the modern pagan Furies.

Some Possibilities.

Another Edward Bellamy may now tell us of its development and application to progress in the year A. D. 2500. The addition of a photographic attachment was the next step of invention to increase its effectiveness.

In the highly organized society of the year 2,500 the government had provided Dictographs in every home, hotel room and private office. A central receiving station was arranged for the record of disgraceful family disputes, star-chamber conferences and political conspiracies.

The photographic device was employed for Pan-Hellenic ballrooms, with a special corps of operators between 3 and 6 o'clock in the morning, to obtain truthful pictures of the "tango" and the "turkey trot." After midnight cabs and automobiles were equipped.

During sessions of the Georgia Legislature, in the hotels and boarding houses and private dinner parties at the houses of politicians, it was found particularly useful.

The striking fact Edward Bellamy, Jr., records was that civilization had responded to the restraint of the Dictograph and that its abuse was inconsiderable beside the manifest improvement in the tone and quality of human conduct.

Perils of Privacy.

The Dictograph is not all a joke.

The exaggeration of its possibilities is not a reductio ad absurdum.

The irresistible movement toward relentless publicity it symbolizes is profoundly supported in social intelligence.

The perils of privacy, secrecy and the suppression of facts are realized.

The basic religious conviction that Deity sees, hears and knows is at work day and night to justify the increasing passion of humanity to see, hear and know.

The Christian assurance that "nothing is secret that shall not be made manifest; neither anything hid that shall not be known and publish itself abroad" is the moral sanction of publicity as the consummation of the highest civilization.

The cry of Life is "Light! More light! Light everywhere!" The protest of Death is the cry for privacy and suppression.

The man who loves darkness better than light is under cosmic condemnation. The guardians of public health ruthlessly placard the places of disease.

The exponents of moral health also are every day bolder and bolder in disregard of any challenge of personal secrecy which conceals sources of moral contagion.

The old sanctity of wrong under the cover of private rights is an exploded theory of social relations.

In whatever concerns the public safety the public has a right to the facts.

The outcry against the publication of the Standard Oil letters made no appeal to the American conscience.

The Good of Publicity.

In England the divorce evil is treated as a public matter, and not even the nauseous details are withheld from the public eye. Those who object to the application of that rule in this country should show better reasons for secrecy and privacy in behalf of domestic infidelities than the Fulton County divorce courts afford.

The world adjusted to the law of publicity is the good promise of the times, and the Searchlight, the Newspaper and the Dictograph are its phophetic tokens.

There Is Only One Need in the World---Love

Any Man Can Be Happy With It; No Man Can Be Happy Without It

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

I KNOW the need of the world.
Though it would not have me know.
It would hide its sorrow deep,
Where only God may go.
Yet its secret it cannot keep;
It tells it awake or asleep,
It tells it to all who will heed,
And he who runs may read.
The need of the world I know.

I know the need of the world,
When it boasts of its wealth the loudest,
When it flaunts it in all men's eyes.
When its mien is the gayest and proudest.
Oh! ever it lies—it lies,
For the sound of its laughter dies
In a sob and a smothered moan,
And it weeps when it sits alone.
The need of the world I know.

I know the need of the world.
When the earth shakes under the tread
Of men who march to the fight,
When rivers with blood are red
And there is no law but might,
And the wrong way seems the right;
When he who slaughters the most
Is all men's pride and boast,
The need of the world I know.

I know the need of the world.
When it babbles of gold and fame,
It is only to lead us astray
From the thing that it dare not name,
For this is the sad world's way.
Oh! poor blind world grown gray
With the need of a thing so near,
With the want of a thing so dear.
The need of the world I know.

The need of the world is love.
Deep under the pride of power,
Down under its lust of greed.
For the joys that last but an hour,
There lies forever its need.
For love is the law and the creed
And love is the unnamed goal
Of life, from man to the mole.
Love is the need of the world.

THERE is only one need in the world
The need to love our neighbors as ourselves.

To do exactly as we would be done by.

The need to understand that the human race is one body; and that when we do anything which harms or hurts one individual, we harm all individuals, ourselves included.

Just as we harm the body, when we injure any member, hand, foot, eye, or ear.

When we stop and think about the world, the whole process of life becomes very pitiful.

Each, being born upon the earth, is striving for happiness, from the cradle to the grave, in his own way.

According to his light, he is doing the best he can.

He does not know it, but the only satisfying things which he can get out of life are peace of mind, self-respect and the love of his fellow men.

Nothing he can obtain without these things, nothing he can achieve or become, is of any real value.

No man can be happy without those three blessings. Any man can be happy with them.

Even though he is saddened by the sorrow he sees about him; the sorrow which results from striving after the needless things of earth; after more than we need; after what does not belong to us; after the possessions of others.

There would be no war; no industrial problems; no prisons; no poor houses; no white slaves; no sex sins; if men and women all set forth early in life on that threefold quest—for peace of mind, for self-respect, for the love of their fellow men.

That is all any soul is seeking; that is all any soul desires; because that is all there is in life worth living for. Yet is there war, and strife, and hatred; and sin; and sorrow and anguish; and misery and poverty.

Because men have not yet learned that there is only one need in the world.

And the need of the world is LOVE.

Belief of Samuel Adams

By WILLIAM VINCENT BYARS.

IT was Samuel Adams, one of the greatest founders of the United States, who said that "truth loves an appeal to the common sense of mankind."

It was this thought which made him powerful.

It made him the greatest Democratic leader of New England in the eighteenth century.

He was born in Boston in 1722, when all New Englanders were royalists. He was born rich. His family made money out of a brewery. He lost money in politics, so that when he died in 1803 he had barely enough to pay for his funeral.

He had helped to found the United States. He held office many years, but he was afraid to make money.

This was the only thing he was afraid of. He was afraid that if he did not keep himself as poor as most other people he would lose his common sense.

He meant by common sense the sense people have when they are trying to be fair to each other instead of over reaching and cheating.

If he found a man who could not read, trying not to cheat and over reach others, he thought him a better judge of truth than a prime minister. He believed that God made all men with sense enough to be honest.

At a time when he would have been hanged by a Tory prime minister, if caught, he said that truth loves an appeal to the common sense of mankind, and that "He who made all men, made the truths necessary for human happiness obvious to all."

This was his answer after he had been declared a traitor.

He spent his life trying to prove that politics may be improved by less cheating and shooting. He thought that finally nearly everyone would agree with him that common honesty and common sense are enough to make the best government on earth.

PRESIDENT WILSON POINTS OUT NEEDS OF BUSINESS

"We must show that we understand what business needs and that we know how to supply it. DRAW JURY PANEL FOR FRANK TRIAL

VENIRE OF 72 FOR FRANK JURY IS DRAWN

Negro Conley Sticks to Affidavit Story When Again Cross-Examined by Dorsey.

The first official action of the court in preparing for the trial of Leo M. Frank for the murder of Mary Phagan was taken Monday afternoon when Judge L. S. Roan impaneled 72 men, from whom a jury to hear the case will be sought.

June 30 was agreed to by Judge Roan for the opening of the case. If a postponement is desired it will now have to be asked for in open court.

As yet Judge Roan said he had received no intimation from the defense that a delay was wanted. Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey said Monday the prosecution was ready for trial.

Trial in Thrower Building.

An extra staff of deputies has been sworn in and subpenas to jurymen impaneled and witnesses are now being served.

No plans for a larger room in which to hear the case have matured, and it is likely that the courtroom of the Superior Court in the Thrower Building will be used at last, despite its size and lack of comfort.

Jim Conley, the negro sweeper, was brought before Solicitor Dorsey Monday morning for another cross-examination. The questions were solely along the lines of the negro's affidavit charging Frank with the crime. As the Solicitor later said, he had only refreshed Conley's mind on the points he had made in his statement. The negro told the same story he told before without deviation.

Mr. Dorsey said that he would call all of the principal witnesses for the State and refresh their minds on the part they will play in the trial.

W. J. Coleman, stepfather of the strangled girl, was summoned by the Solicitor after Conley had been questioned for some time and was brought before the negro. Strict secrecy surrounded the performance, and if anything was gained by confronting the sweeper with Coleman it was not divulged. Mary Phagan's grandfather accompanied Coleman.

Later Coleman said that he had called particularly to ask the Solicitor if Judge Newt Morris, formerly of the Blue Ridge Circuit, could be brought into the case. Mr. Dorsey informed him that the State had made all arrangements for handling the case, but that if he wanted to have the former Judge represent the family there would be no objection.

Attorney Reuben Arnold, for Frank, announced Monday morning that the defense's case was complete. Mr. Arnold said that the testimony of twelve witnesses would form the bulk of Frank's support. He declared that only the inability of one or more of these witnesses to appear at the time set for the trial would cause the defense to ask for a postponement.

Monteen Stover, the young girl who called at the pencil factory office between noon and 12:15 o'clock on the afternoon of the murder, was taken before Jim Conley at the police station Sunday and identified by the negro as the girl he had seen while hiding at the foot of the stairway waiting for Frank's signal.

Conley Identifies Girl.

Detectives went out to the Stover girl's home at 171 South Forsyth Street late in the afternoon and asked that she dress as she had on the afternoon of the murder and go to the police station with them.

The girl put on a small yellow hat with a red ribbon about it, enveloped her body in a yellow raincoat and

Atlanta Man Tells Neurologists They Alone Keep U. S. Sane

CHICAGO, June 23.—"Were it not for the alienists and neurologists of America, the country would in time be inhabited only by insane persons."

This was the statement to-day of Dr. J. Cheston King, of Atlanta, before the convention of neurologists meeting here under the auspices of the Chicago Medical Society.

"There are more insane people in the United States than any other country in the world," he said.

Causes of insanity, he said, were whisky, hereditary weakness, religious excitement and modern life.

"The business man and the society woman," he said, "are failing victims to modern life. The business man often loses his mind through chasing the almighty dollar, and the society woman for various reasons, among them loss of sleep, too much dancing, irregular eating, worry over card games, envy of another's success and too much attention to dress."

Hot Wave Is in No Danger of Breaking, Says Weather Man

"Continued warm weather, with possibly thunder showers late in the afternoon," was the weather outlook for Monday.

Forecaster C. F. VonHerrmann said the backbone of the hot spell was in no danger of being broken. "We are due to have considerable more hot weather through June and July," he said. "If it keeps up much longer this way, the old record of sixteen consecutive days with the temperature above 90 may be broken."

Mr. VonHerrmann said the weather was about the same all over the country, 90 degrees being the average.

The thermometer at noon registered 86 degrees and at 1 o'clock 88 degrees. The maximum temperature, between 2 and 3 o'clock, approximated 90, the lowest maximum of last week.

Woman With Dagger Attacks Policeman

Flora May Bateman, a negro woman, who made an attack on Call Officer T. M. Gorman when placed under arrest for disorderly conduct, will be tried in Recorder's Court Tuesday.

The policeman had a narrow escape when he attempted to arrest the woman. She attacked him with a long dirk she drew from her stocking. She was subdued and placed under arrest only after a lively struggle. The policeman was not hurt.

Bogus Check Charge Causes His Arrest

J. Percival, charged with passing a bogus check for $100 on Charles C. Jones, proprietor of the Rex Saloon, will arrive in Atlanta from Birmingham Monday night in custody of Detective J. W. Hollingsworth.

Percival was arrested in Birmingham Sunday on complaint of Jones, who has preferred the charge.

Slew While Making Arrest; Put on Trial

E. H. Parham, the former policeman who shot and killed John Wright a year ago, was put on trial before Judge L. S. Roan Monday morning for involuntary manslaughter.

The shooting culminated an attempt by Parham to put Wright under arrest.

Mrs. Lanier's Trial To Begin Tuesday

WAYCROSS, June 23.—Unless some unforeseen delay arises, the trial of Mrs. W. C. Lanier, the pretty young woman facing a charge of murder of her infant son, will start in Superior Court to-morrow. To-day several minor criminal cases are being disposed of. Judge T. A. Parker will preside.

It is understood that the defense will rely mainly upon the statement of Mrs. Lanier.

LEGISLATORS ALL HERE; LOBBYING HINTED

Reports That Interests Have Hand in Senate Presidency Fight Are Being Circulated.

Undoubtedly the big and absorbing topic of comment and speculation among the great throng of Georgia legislators statesmen and politicians in Atlanta to-day is the forthcoming election of a President of the Senate.

Judge John T. Allen, of the Twentieth District, and Senator J. Randolph Anderson, of the First District, both advance ironclad claims to election.

Each exhibits that which he considers unqualified pledges of support from more than a sufficient number of Senators to elect.

Senator Anderson gave out an interview Saturday in which he said he had 28 votes signed, sealed and delivered. He said then, and reaffirms it to-day, that he has the race won beyond a doubt.

Judge Allen, on the contrary, gave out the following interview to-day:

"Senator Anderson has not 28 votes pledged—he can not have. I do not say he willfully misstates the situation—he may imagine he has the votes—but he misstates it, nevertheless.

Claims 25 Votes.

"I have 25 votes pledged to me in writing, without any qualifications whatever — straightaway promises. Not one man signing these pledges—they are individual, and not in the form of a list—will break his word to me. I shall be elected, for it only requires 23 votes, and I think I shall get five besides the ones I now have pledged.

"It should be remembered, too, that a distinguished South Georgian, Judge Sweat, has four votes, and that another distinguished Senator, Mr. Tyson, has two or three. Judge Sweat is in the race, and so is Senator Tyson—I take it neither would be in unless he had at least one pledged vote.

"Claiming is one thing and showing down the corn is another. I shall have the necessary votes when the roll is called Wednesday.

Denies Aid of Interests.

"As to the rumor that certain corporations and manufacturing interests may be taking a hand in the race for the Senate Presidency, I know nothing more than that no corporation or big manufacturing interest is taking a hand in my race. I can win, and will win, without that. And certainly I would prefer to."

Despite the statements of the rival candidates for the honor of being President of the Senate, and ex-officio Lieutenant Governor of Georgia, the impression is that this race is yet to be won, and will be won between this time and the assembling of the Senate Wednesday.

Politicians of all shades of opinion, all over the State, are watching this fight with intense interest.

Legislators All Here.

Nobody seems to know who is to win the Presidency of the Senate, which carries with it the Lieutenant-Governorship of Georgia.

On the surface of things, the fight seems to be about even between Senator Allen, of the Twentieth, and Senator Anderson, of the First.

Below the surface rumor and gossip speaks of many things not yet talked about the hotel lobbies freely and openly.

The President of the Senate might, in certain circumstances, succeed to the Governorship, and certainly he is sure to be a compelling factor in the shaping of legislation.

Wherefore, one hears it whispered

Yancey Killed One Week Ago; Family Is In Need of Support

One week ago Monday Court Deputy Dave Yancey was stabbed to death by a crazed negro while attempting to preserve law and order, as he had sworn to do. To-day his widow and six children are holding a sad commemoration of that event in their little home on the Jonesboro Road.

What has Atlanta done for the family of the court deputy? The citizens of this city have subscribed about $1,000 to the Yancey fund, $900 of which must go to pay off the mortgage on the farm. The remainder is not sufficient to put this family on a self-supporting basis. More contributions are needed. Let the generosity of the prosperous Gate City continue to assert itself.

Following are contributions to the fund which have not previously been acknowledged by The Georgian:

A. K. Hawke	$10.00
Rev. T. C. Gray and Wife	1.00
Cashier	1.00
Eugene B. Elder	1.00

Tax Delinquents to Face Double Charge In Recorder's Court

Slow tax collections have led city officials to resort to some unusual but very effective methods of securing street taxes. Delinquents are to be punished with no less a penalty than facing the Recorder.

City Marshal James Fuller and Councilman Orville Hall, chairman of the Streets Committee, called at the police station Monday and outlined a system whereby a list of the persons arrested each day will be furnished to the Marshal. Marshal Fuller will check them with his books, and if they have failed to give in or pay their taxes, they will be confronted with double charges in Police Court.

The street tax is $1 per year. Where persons are delinquent $1.50 cost is added.

Eighteen Ministers In Baseball Game Feature of Picnic

A baseball game between eighteen Baptist ministers was the feature of an old-time picnic and barbecue held by the Baptist Ministers' Association of Atlanta at the waterworks Monday.

The game was played in the afternoon and followed the weekly morning conference of the ministers. More than 100 "rooters" who participated in the picnic viewed the battle on the improvised diamond.

Dr. John E. White, of the Second Baptist Church, pitched for one side, while Dr. C. A. Ridley, of the Central Baptist, twirled for the other.

Miss Wilson's Pansy Hat a Capital Hit

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Miss Eleanor Wilson, youngest daughter of the President, has succeeded to the place formerly held by Mrs. Nicholas Longworth and has become the leading society milliner of the capital.

She not only trims her own hats, but she trims the jauntiest hat that adorns a belle's head in Washington. The younger set is particularly taken just now with a new creation Miss Wilson has made, which she calls the pansy hat.

She bought a white hemp shape and a gorgeous mass of purple pansies and soft ribbons. With artistic skill she arranged these about the hat. It has a chic, Parisian effect, and the uninformed would imagine it the work of a leading milliner.

Sickles Can Attend Gettysburg Reunion

ALBANY, N. Y., June 23.—State officials will not prevent General Daniel E. Sickles from going to the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg next month. Attorney General Carmody so advised Daniel P. Hays, counsel for General Sickles.

The State obtained a judgment against General Sickles for failure to account for $23,000 State funds. Carmody says no execution will be issued to prevent Sickles attending the reunion.

WRIT STARTS CREMATORY SQUABBLE AFRESH

Destructor Company Declares It Will Continue Work Despite Court's Restraining Order.

With the signing of an injunction by Superior Judge Pendleton Monday morning inhibiting the execution of the crematory contract the wrangle over Atlanta's garbage destroyer began anew, giving promise of contempt of court proceedings and possibly an airing in Recorder's Court.

Evins & Spence, counsel for the Destructor Company, said work positively would continue without interruption, since Council had given his clients permission to carry on operations pending the signing of a new contract. C. P. Goree, attorney for Mayor Woodward, was equally dogmatic in asserting work must stop and that if it did not stop immediately he would go before Judge Pendleton and make a motion to have "everybody connected with it" cited for contempt.

"J. N. Renfroe and Others against the City of Atlanta and Others," is the style of the crematory case originally tried before Judge Pendleton, who refused to grant an injunction stopping work. The case was appealed, the Supreme Court reversing Judge Pendleton's ruling. The order of the Supreme Court reached Judge Pendleton Monday morning, and he immediately signed an injunction restraining further execution of the original crematory contract. The injunction reads:

New Contract Not Barred.

"The judgment of this court refusing to grant an interlocutory injunction in the case having been reversed by the Supreme Court of Georgia, and the judgment of that court having been made the judgment of this court, it is therefore considered, ordered and adjudged by this court that the defendants, the City of Atlanta and the Destructor Company, be and they are hereby enjoined and restrained until final hearing of this case before a jury from carrying out the contract referred to and set out in the original petition in this case and from performing any act under said contract. The city is not enjoined from making any other contract with these people for securing this crematory, so as not to violate the decision of the Supreme Court in this case."

Attorney C. P. Goree said the effect of this injunction would be immediate cessation of work on the crematory. Notwithstanding that Council, after the Supreme Court decree, gave the Destructor Company authority to work on the crematory pending a new contract, Mr. Goree said he would "have them put in jail" if the work was continued. When asked who he would cite for contempt, he replied:

"Everybody that has anything to do with it."

City Attorney Mayson said the city had accepted the court decree, and that Council thereafter granted the Destructor Company authority to proceed, and he, therefore, saw no reason why work should stop.

"Of course, no work can be done under the old contract," said Mr. Mayson; "but, as I see it, the Destructor people can remain in possession of the ground. The decree does not mean that Atlanta can not have a crematory."

Attorney Sam Evins, of Evins & Spence, secured a consultation with Mr. Goree in an endeavor to reach an agreement upon work pending the new contract. Mr. Goree adhered to his statement that all work should cease.

After the consultation with Mr. Evins, Mr. Goree said: "I just told Mr. Evins that if the Destructor Company continued work, it would be under that old contract, and that if they did anything at all, I would proceed against them for contempt."

NINE DROWN WHEN U. S. BOAT UPSETS

MEMPHIS, June 23.—Nine of a party of fourteen United States engineers and other Government employees were drowned near New Madrid, when the United States survey boat Beaver, which the party was aboard, capsized during a windstorm.

Those drowned are:

C. S. WILLIAMSON, chief engineer, Mason, Ohio.

J. M. M'CONNELL, of Memphis, a recent graduate of the law department of Cornell.

CAPTAIN LAMB, pilot.

A. D. COSTON, engineer.

HARRY SHERRELL, mate, Cottonwood, Tenn.

PHIL WRAY, Jackson, Tenn.

—— FREEMAN, deck hand.

Two rodmen, names not known.

J. H. Miller, civil engineer, of Millersburg, Ky., and four deck hands were the others of the party who reached the bank in safety.

When the storm broke the Beaver was making a hurried run back to New Madrid to get medical attention for McConnell, who had been taken suddenly ill, and was within sight of a quarterboat, anchored near this city, when the wind tipped the boat over.

ST. SIMONS TAKEN BY MILITIAMEN

BRUNSWICK, June 23.—The summer inhabitants of St. Simons Island looked out on warlike scenes Monday morning when the troopers of the Second Squadron of cavalry began military maneuvers at Camp Joseph Brown. The first work of the week followed a day of fun and recreation for the soldiers.

The boys were allowed liberties all day Sunday as a sort of compensation for the hard work Saturday, when camp was pitched. That they took advantage of these liberties is verified by hundreds of visitors to the camp.

Perhaps the most amusing thing of all was the surf bathing in which hundreds of troopers took part from 7 o'clock in the morning until evening.

The boys were not content with this, however, for the annual blanket tossing of the "high privates in the rear rank" was indulged in freely, much to the enjoyment of the spectators. One young private was tossed into the limbs of a tree, where he was rescued by several brawny comrades.

Major Hunter, of the Third Battalion, and Adjutant McCollum are among the busiest men in the camp, for many orders must be issued in the early stages of the encampment. The real work of the week probably will not begin before Tuesday.

WILSON ASKS CONGRESS FOR BANK CHANGE

President in Person Urges Currency Reform With Government as Active Agent.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Repeating his act at the beginning of his administration, when he smashed decades of precedent by personally delivering his message to Congress, President Wilson appeared before a joint assemblage of both houses of Congress to-day and delivered his message on the currency.

President Wilson reached the Capitol at 12:55 o'clock, accompanied by his secretary, Joseph Tumulty, and two secret service men. He went immediately to Speaker Clark's private office, where he was received by a joint committee of Senators and Representatives.

After remaining in the Speaker's office for less than a minute, the President, escorted by the committee, went direct to the House chamber for the reading of his currency message. His appearance in the chamber was greeted with general applause, and the assembled Senators and Representatives arose as he entered.

The committee which met the President and escorted him to the chamber consisted of Senators Kern and Reed and Representatives Underwood, Fitzgerald and Mann.

Cabinet Members Present.

Secretary McAdoo, who helped frame the currency bill, was one of the first Cabinet officers to reach the House to-day. Secretaries Houston, Lane, Wilson and Garrison reached the House shortly in advance of the President and took seats on the floor.

Mrs. Wilson, accompanied by Misses Jessie and Eleanor Wilson and Miss Isabel Hagner, her secretary, reached the Capitol about ten minutes in advance of the President and were shown to seats in the executive gallery.

The President concluded the reading of his message at 1:07 o'clock, having used but ten and a half minutes in its delivery. As he finished he bowed and shook hands with Speaker Clark and Vice President Marshall. Both galleries and Senators and Representatives generously applauded.

Admittance Is Limited.

The House end of the Capitol was closed to the public to-day in anticipation of the visit of President Wilson to deliver his banking and currency message. Policemen stood at the entrances and in the corridors and turned back all those who could not show a ticket of admission.

More than 500 tickets were available for spectators in the galleries, and each Senator and each Representative had one ticket. For the most part these tickets went to the wives of Senators and Congressmen. Representatives who have been out of the city returned early to-day to be on hand when the President appeared.

The Message in Full.

The President's message in full follows:

It is under the compulsion of what seems to me a clear and imperative duty that I have a second time this session sought the privilege of addressing you in person. I know, of course, that the heated season of the year is upon us, that work in these chambers and in the committee rooms is likely to become a burden as the season lengthens, and that every consideration of personal convenience and personal comfort, perhaps, in the cases of some of us, considerations of personal health even, dictate an early conclusion of the deliberations of the session; but there are occasions of public duty when these things which touch us privately seem very small; when the work to be done is so pressing and so fraught with big consequence that we know that we are not at liberty to weigh against it any point of personal sacrifice.

We are now in the presence of such an occasion. It is absolutely imperative that we should give the business men of this country a banking and currency system by means of which they can make use of the freedom of enterprise and of individual initiative which we are about to bestow upon them.

Must Provide the Tools.

We are about to set them free; we must not leave them without the tools of action when they are free. We are about to set them free by removing the trammels of the protective tariff. Ever since the Civil War they have waited for this emancipation and for the free opportunities it will bring with it. It has been reserved for us to give it to them. Some fell in love, indeed, with the slothful security of their dependence upon the Government; some took advantage of the shelter of the nursery to set up a mimic mastery of their own within its walls. Now both the tonic and the discipline of liberty and maturity are to ensue.

There will be some readjustments of purpose and point of view. There will follow a period of expansion and new enterprise, freshly conceived. It is for us to determine now whether it shall be rapid and facile and of easy accomplishment. This it cannot be unless the resourceful business men who are to deal with the new circumstances are to have at hand and ready for use the instrumentalities and conveniences of free enterprise which independent men need when acting on their own initiative.

It is not enough to strike the shackles from business. The duty of statesmanship is not negative merely. It is constructive also. We must show that we understand what business needs and that we know how to supply it. No man, however casual and superficial his observation of the conditions now prevailing in the country, can fail to see that one of the chief things business needs now, and will need increasingly as it gains in scope and vigor in the years immediately ahead of us, is the proper means by which readily to vitalize its credit, corporate and individual, and its originative brains.

Shows Power of Credit.

What will it profit us to be free if we are not to have the best and most accessible instrumentalities of commerce and enterprise? What will it profit us to be quit of one kind of monopoly if we are to remain in the grip of another and more effective kind? How are we to gain and keep the confidence of the business community unless we show that we know how both to aid and to protect it? What shall we say if we make fresh enterprise necessary and also make it very difficult by leaving all else except the tariff just as we found it? The tyrannies of business, big and little, lie within the field of credit. We know that. Shall we not act upon the knowledge? Do we not know how to act upon it?

If a man cannot make his assets available at pleasure, his assets of capacity and character and resource, what satisfaction is it to him to see opportunity beckoning to him on every hand, when others have the keys of credit in their pockets and treat them as all but their own private possession? It is perfectly clear that it is our duty to supply the new banking and currency system the country needs, and that it will immediately need it more than ever.

The only question is, When shall we supply it—now, or later, after the demands shall have become reproaches that we were so dull and so slow? Shall we hasten to change the tariff laws and then be laggards about making it possible and easy for the country to take advantage of the change? There can be only one answer to that question.

Action Now Is a Duty.

We must act now, at whatever sacrifice to ourselves. It is a duty which the circumstances forbid us to postpone. I should be recreant to my deepest convictions of public obligation did I not press it upon you with solemn and urgent insistence.

The principles upon which we should act are also clear. The country has sought and seen its path in this matter within the last few years—sees it more clearly than when the last legislative proposals on the subject were made. We must have a currency, not rigid as now, but readily, elastically responsive to sound credit, the expanding and contracting credits of everyday transactions, the normal ebb and flow of personal and corporate dealings.

Our banking laws must mobilize reserves; must not permit the concentration anywhere in a few hands of the monetary resources of the country or their use for speculative purposes in such volume as to hinder or impede or stand in the way of other more legitimate, more fruitful uses.

And the control of the system of banking and of issue which our new laws are to set up must be public, not private, must be vested in the Government itself, so that the banks may be the instruments, not the masters, of business and of individual enterprise and initiative.

DIGEST OF CURRENCY REFORM ACT WILSON WANTS THIS SESSION

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Representative Carter Glass, chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency, has made public a digest of the Administration's currency reform bill which he introduced in the House to-day. By the terms of this measure the Federal Reserve Board, which will control the issuance of new currency on application of the regional reserve banks, is to be a Government board entirely.

There will be no retirement of existing national bank circulation, nor of the existing 2 per cent United States bonds used for circulation purposes. Every national bank is allowed to continue its note issue exactly as at present.

Following is the digest prepared by Representative Glass:

"The purpose of the bill is to furnish a comparative revision of the currency system of the country so as to obtain three principal objects:

"First—Provision of a means for rediscounting commercial paper of specified types.

"Second—Provision of a basis for elastic note issues properly safeguarded.

"Third—Provision of machinery for doing foreign banking business.

"Present Law Inadequate."

"In order to accomplish these purposes fully it is necessary to repeal certain portions of existing law; to rectify various conditions in the present national banking system which are in some cases only indirectly connected with the objects sought; to furnish a new class of instructions for the performance of some functions which can not well be intrusted to existing banks, or, at all events, can better be performed by others, and to alter the present reserve system to a very material degree.

"The scope of the bill can best be understood by an analytical review of its contents.

"The present banking situation of the United States rests on the national bank act proper, as slightly modified from time to time, and on the so-called Aldrich-Vreeland act (act of May 30, 1908).

"Of these acts the latter is completely superseded on the ground that it has never become operative. It probably will not become operative except under extreme distress, and never was satisfactory. The national bank act itself is modified in numerous essential particulars.

New Class of Banks.

"Fundamental to the idea of the bill is the creation of a new class of banks to be known as Federal reserve banks, the chief points about which are as follows:

"The number is to be twelve, with possible increase later as provided.

"The ownership is to be in the hands of the stockholding banks of the twelve districts in which the reserve banks are situated. National banks are compelled to be members and State banks and trust companies are permitted to be members.

"The capitalization is to be 20 per cent of the capital of the stockholding banks, one-half paid in and one-half subject to call.

"The business of these Federal reserve banks is to be as follows:

Reserve Banks Business.

"Rediscounting of paper presented by stockholding banks under specified conditions, provided such paper grows out of actual agricultural, commercial or industrial transactions and does not run more than a specified number of days.

"Buying and selling Government securities, gold and silver bullion and foreign coin; foreign exchange and open market bills of given maturity; Government fiscal operations.

"Every national bank is allowed to continue its note issue exactly as at present and in addition Federal reserve treasury notes are authorized to be issued to an amount not exceeding $500,000,000.

These notes will, upon application, be issued to the Federal reserve banks upon prime short-time commercial paper and other liquid collateral.

Gold Reserve Security.

"While the notes will, on their faces, purport to be the obligations of the United States, they are required to be secured by a gold reserve of 33 1-3 per cent provided by the Federal reserve banks, and are a first and paramount lien on all the assets of these banks, and are redeemable in gold on demand at the Treasury Department in Washington or at any Federal reserve bank.

"Stringent provisions are made against counting any of these notes as a part of bank reserves, and the system is guarded against inflation by lodging power with the Federal Reserve Board to exact an interest charge on treasury notes in order to insure their prompt redemption.

"The notes are not made legal tender, but are receivable by the Government and every bank of the system at par without exchange.

"Overseeing the whole system is created a Federal reserve board, consisting of seven members, including the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Agriculture and Comptroller of the Currency as members ex-officio. Four other members are chosen by the President of the United States by and with the consent of the Senate for a term of six years each.

"One of the members thus appointed by the President is to be governor of the Federal reserve board, one vice governor and one secretary.

Banker Member of Board.

"Their term of office is for eight years, except that of those first appointed, one to the serve two years, one four, one six and one eight years. At least one of the members appointed by the President is to be a person of banking experience. Thus it will be noted that the Government will have absolute control of the system.

"The salary of each member of the board, except the two Cabinet officers, who are ex-officio members, is fixed at $10,000, the Comptroller of the Currency to receive $5,000 in addition to the salary which he receives under existing law.

"The powers of the Federal reserve board are as follows:

"(a) To examine at its discretion the accounts and books of each Federal reserve bank and to require such statements and reports as it deems necessary.

"(b) To require or, on application, to permit a Federal reserve bank to rediscount the paper of any other Federal bank.

"(c) To establish each week, or as much oftener as required, a rate of discount which shall be mandatory upon each Federal reserve bank for each class of paper, provided that said rate of discount need not be uniform for all Federal reserve banks, but shall be made with a view to accommodating the commerce of the country and promising a stable price level.

"(d) To suspend for a period not exceeding 30 days (and to renew such suspension for periods not to exceed fifteen days) any and every reserve requirement specified in this act.

Treasury Note Regulation.

"(f) To add to the number of cities classified as reserve and central reserve cities under existing law, in which national banking associations are subject to the reserve requirements set forth in the act, or to reclassify existing reserve and central reserve cities and to designate the banks therein situated by country banks in its discretion.

"(g) To require the removal of officials of Federal reserve banks for incompetency, dereliction of duty, fraud or deceit.

"(h) To acquire the writing off of doubtful or worthless assets upon the books and balance sheets of Federal reserve banks.

"(i) To suspend the further operations of any Federal reserve bank and appoint a receiver therefor.

"(j) To perform the duties, functions or services specified or implied in the act.

To Classify Banking.

"The object of the bill is to effect a moderate division and classification of banking business along indicated lines, the net result, presumably, being summed up as follows:

"(1) National reserve banks will be strictly limited to rediscounting actual commercial and industrial transactions evidenced by very short term paper and on rare occasions, under carefully prescribed conditions to financial operations protected by collateral.

"(2) National banks will be subjected to the same restrictions as at present, with a relaxation in favor of a moderate amount of real estate loans by country banks.

"(3) By a revision of the administrative figures of the national banking act provision will be made for close oversight of national institutions.

"(4) In order to possess themselves of the kind of paper entitling them to rediscounts national banks will find themselves obliged to keep a reasonable proportion of their assets in the paper eligible for rediscounting.

"Subtreasury System Crude."

"It is believed that the present subtreasury system is unsatisfactory, clumsy, injurious to business and difficult to manage in time of stress. The bill, therefore, provides for:

"(1) The placing of all current funds of the Treasury in Federal reserve banks and the payment of Government creditors by check thereon.

"(2) The equalization of the public funds between the different reserve banks by direction of the Secretary of the Treasury and subject to a rate of interest to be fixed by the Federal Reserve Board.

"(3) The trust funds of the Treasury are to be held, as at present, in the vaults of the Treasury.

"Under the terms of the bill the Federal reserve bank, after the payment of all expenses and taxes, is entitled to pay an annual cumulative dividend of 5 per cent on paid-in capital to its stock-holding members. One-half of the next earnings of the bank must be paid into the surplus fund until said fund shall amount to 20 per cent of the paid-in capital of the bank. The remaining one-half of the bank's earnings shall be paid to the United States, and whenever and so long as the surplus fund of each Federal reserve bank amounts to 20 per cent of the paid-in capital, the shareholders having received their permissible dividend of 5 per cent, all excess earnings shall be paid to the United States.

Banks Exempt From Taxes.

"Every Federal reserve bank is exempt from Federal, State and local taxation, except in respect to taxes upon real estate.

"In the belief that the present reserve system is antiquated and unsatisfactory provision has been made for recasting the present bank reserve system. The plan includes:

"(1) Transfer of reserves from existing national banks in reserve and central reserve cities to national reserve banks.

"(2) Spreading out of this process of transfer over a period of 38 months.

"(3) Ultimately the establishment of a reserve system at the end of the transition in which (a) country banks will save 15 per cent of reserve, i. e., 15 per cent of total demand liabilities, such 15 per cent to be held, 5 per cent in the banks' vaults, 5 per cent with the national reserve bank and 5 per cent either at home or with the reserve bank, while (b) reserve and central reserve city banks will have reserves of 20 per cent of demand liabilities, of which 10 per cent will be at home, 5 per cent with the reserve bank of the district and 5 per cent either at home or with the reserve bank.

Blow at Wall Street.

"(4) The presumed effect of this plan will be to end the placing of reserves with central reserve city banks for use in stock market operations.

"The bill authorizes any national banking association with a minimum capital of $1,000,000 to establish branches in foreign countries for the furtherance of foreign commerce of the United States and to act as fiscal agents of the United States abroad.

"The Federal reserve board is required to pass on all applications of national banks to establish such banks abroad."

BULGARIAN PLOT TO KILL GREEK KING FOILED

Soldiers Disguised as Citizens Are Arrested—One Confesses Conspiracy to Blow Up Palace.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SALONIKA, June 23.—A plot fomented by Bulgarians against the life of King Constantine of Greece has been discovered here. A number of Bulgar soldiers, disguised as civilians, were arrested to-day by the Greek military police.

A quantity of explosives had been discovered outside of the city gates and investigation led to the discovery of the conspiracy. One of the Bulgarians who was arrested confessed that an attempt was to have been made to blow up the King's palace.

Constant fighting between Greeks and Bulgarians is going on near here. The city has been strongly fortified on the landward side.

Bulgarians Refuse to Arbitrate; Crisis Near.

SOFIA, June 23.—Bulgaria to-day withdrew its recent acceptance of Czar Nicholas' proposal to arbitrate the territorial dispute between this country on one side and Servia and Greece on the other. This may mean that Russia's attempt to prevent a fresh conflict in the Balkans will prove futile.

The Bulgarian press is bitterly hostile against Russia, charging that the Russian Government is secretly encouraging Servia and Greece to take aggressive measures.

Official newspapers declare that Servia, Greece and Montenegro have entered into a secret league to strip Bulgaria of all the possible spoils of the Balkan war. The situation today was decidedly ominous, and the impression prevailed that the climax would be reached this week.

Penfield May Get U. S. Embassy Place

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Speculation was caused in diplomatic circles when it was learned to-day that Frederick C. Penfield, of New York, was to have a special audience with President Wilson.

The opinion was formed that the President would offer Mr. Penfield one of the five embassies yet unfilled. These include France, Germany, Russia, Austria and Turkey.

The speculation was based largely on the fact that he has had wide experience in the service of the United States abroad.

Pike County Farmer Slays Son-in-Law

ZEBULON, June 23.—J. P. Neal, of Senoia, was shot and killed by his father-in-law, J. W. Vaughn, at the latter's home near Zebulon last night. Vaughn is a prominent farmer. He surrendered to Sheriff Slade and is in jail. There were no eyewitnesses.

The Coroner held an inquest and found a verdict of justifiable homicide.

'Hello Girl' Knocked Down by Lightning

POTTSVILLE, PA., June 23.—During a heavy electric storm lightning set fire to one of the switchboards in the telephone exchange of the American Telephone Company at Shamokin and threw the operator, Miss Kathryn O'Leary, to the floor. She managed to sound an alarm and was rescued just before the blaze destroyed the building. The loss is estimated at $20,000.

taking an umbrella went with the detectives.

As soon as the Stover girl entered the room he jumped to his feet, exclaiming:

"That's her; that's her." Then the negro surveyed her wearing apparel.

"She's dressed just as she was that day, only she hasn't got on her 'easy walkers.'

The girl was wearing leather slippers. Later she said she had worn "easy walkers," or tennis shoes, when she went to the pencil factory, as the negro had said.

The negro's identification of the Stover girl proves, apparently, beyond a doubt that he was in the factory building at the time he said in his affidavit. Beyond sustaining that statement, though, no further support to the prosecution's case against Frank is shown by it.

Solicitor Dorsey returned to Atlanta Sunday afternoon from a week's vacation in New York. He called a conference with his assistants, E. A. Stephens and F. A. Hooper, at his home Sunday evening. Following it he announced that he would be ready for trial on June 30 and that unless the defense or the trial judge moved to have the trial postponed he would commence at once summoning witnesses and getting ready.

Solicitor Dorsey would not discuss the return to Atlanta of Mrs. Mina Formby and her announcement that she would go on the stand against Frank. He intimated, however, that he entertained the same opinion as had already been expressed by his assistant, Mr. Hooper, that when the woman left Atlanta she dropped from the case entirely.

Attorney John W. Moore denied emphatically that he had been employed in the case with L. Z. Rosser and Reuben R. Arnold to defend Frank, as was reported by Solicitor Dorsey.

Moore Not Employed.

"I have not been employed in the case and have no other interest in it than that of a citizen. I believe Frank is innocent, and have since he was first drawn into the case, but I am not connected with it in any way. I have never been approached on the subject."

Solicitor Dorsey opened court in the Thrower building Monday morning for a week of criminal trials to clear the jail docket. He will be in court every day until Saturday, and will have to depend on his assistants to summon witnesses and prepare the Frank case in the event of it being set for the following week.

Orphanage Trustees Will Probe Whipping

MACON, June 23.—The whipping of 10-year-old Marvin Williford by W. F. Armor, farm overseer at the Georgia Industrial Home, will be probed this afternoon at a special meeting of the trustees.

The boy has been surrendered by the city officials to the home, assurance having been given that he will not be punished again. When the boy was beaten by Armor with a plowline, he ran away from the orphanage and sought the protection of the police.

Armor is the husband of Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, Georgia temperance lecturer. He admits the flogging.

Girl Dies of Fever; Peril Thought Past

ATHENS, June 23.—Miss Katherine Erwin, aged 20, died unexpectedly yesterday after an illness of several weeks with fever, from which it was thought she had passed the danger point. Her father, Judge A. S. Erwin, who died several years ago, was a prominent lawyer and member of the State Railroad Commission.

The funeral will take place here to-day. She is survived by her mother and several brothers and sisters.

Wilburn-King Trials Come Up in October

GREENSBORO, June 23.—A special session of Jones Superior Court to try Nick Wilburn, charged with the murder of James King, a prominent Jones County farmer, will not be called by Judge James B. Park, of Ocmulgee Circuit.

Wilburn and Mrs. King, charged as accessory, will be tried at the regular October term. Judge Park thinks conditions do not demand a special session.

High Living Cost Cause of Suicide

MACON, June 23.—J. D. Lester, president of the Macon Barbers' Union, killed himself yesterday by drinking an ounce of carbolic acid, after telephoning his wife that he would join her in a few minutes and go to church.

On Saturday Lester told his fellow-workers that the high cost of living was enough to make a man commit suicide. He left a note to his wife, "I could not endure it any longer."

Death Hovers Over Chalk Victim

Poison Baffles Expert Efforts

Doctors Abandon Hope for Life

Here is a picture of little Mary Tribble, the poison chalk victim, taken when she was a few years younger than she is now. She was the pet of the neighborhood then, and has since then been a very much loved little girl in school.

Little Mary Tribble Is Fast Sinking and She May Not Live Through the Day.

Slowly sinking to a death that the physicians regard now as almost certain, little Mary Tribble, daughter of Policeman Tribble, lies now unconscious and now torn by racking convulsions at her home in East Atlanta, the victim of a strange poisoning that developed after she had eaten some brightly colored chalk more than two weeks ago.

The 7-year-old girl, who has been almost entirely paralyzed for the two weeks since she suddenly was stricken, has suffered two convulsions in the last 24 hours, although three physicians have done their utmost to counteract the effect of the mysterious poison.

Another physician offered his services to the family Sunday. He recommended and administered a continuous water treatment throughout the day. For a few hours she appeared brighter and the prospects for her ultimate recovery seemed slightly more hopeful, but at nightfall one of the terrible convulsions contorted her little body and it was thought that the end had come. Monday morning she was the victim of another, and the family practically gave up hope.

W. C. Tribble, father of the girl, said Monday he had arranged to have the crayon which his daughter had eaten analyzed. It is hardly expected that the analysis will be completed in time to be of any benefit to the physicians in prescribing a treatment.

Mary was given the crayons a few days before school ended a week ago last Friday. On the last day of school she came home and fell into the arms of her mother, crying that her head hurt. A few minutes later part of her body was paralyzed and she was seized frequently with agonizing convulsions. She has been in this condition ever since, the only change being that she gradually has been growing weaker.

Dr. Seacord, Dead; Was With Fire Dept.

Dr. Andrew C. Seacord, 38 years old, died at a private sanitarium Monday morning at 2 o'clock. Dr. Seacord for the past fifteen years had been the veterinary surgeon for the Atlanta Fire Department. He lived at 621 Whitehall Street and is survived by a wife and two young sons, Lynn and Robert Seacord.

Funeral services will be held from the chapel of Barclay & Brandon at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, Rev. Dr. A. R. Holderby officiating. Pallbearers will be G. C. Courtney, O. J. Parker, W. H. Clowe, Pas Short, William Butler and W. B. Harrison. Interment will be at Westview.

Family at Church as Robbers Loot Home

While C. W. Seagraves, who lives in Pace's Ferry Road five miles out of Atlanta, was at church with his family Sunday morning, burglars entered his home and stole the valuables. From a trunk $200 in cash was taken, besides silver plate and family jewels.

Seagraves discovered his loss upon returning from church about noon. The county police were notified, but as yet they have made no arrests.

Rioting Breaks Out In Cincinnati Strike

CINCINNATI, June 23.—Rioting broke out here to-day at a meeting of garment strikers, of whom 8,000 quit work this morning.

The trouble came when Business Agent Risenberger of the union read a telegram from the union headquarters in New York ordering the strikers back to work.

Burwell Called Favorite.

The speakership race generally is conceded to have been won by Burwell of Hancock. Although opposed by such excellent gentlemen as Hardeman of Jefferson and Sheppard of Sumter, Burwell is thought to be very much in the lead and practically sure of election on the first ballot.

Burwell seems to have made a much better getaway in his race than either of his opponents, and for that reason is looked upon as a most likely winner.

Tax reform is the one big topic of legislation discussed most generally.

It seems agreed on all sides that the State must have more revenue or let its various institutions lag woefully. There is an ever-increasing demand for more money in all directions, and the State has been running ahead of its income for several years. The tax rate can not be raised above 5 mills, and 5 mills on present assessments will not produce the revenue needed.

Various special measures for increasing the revenue have been proposed, such as an inheritance tax, a graduated automobile tax, and so forth, but the greater problem is how to get all varieties of property up to where each may bear its righteous portion of the burden of taxation.

It is assured that a child labor bill will be introduced early in the session, with excellent chances of success.

be, and that reforms must be instituted, or the State suffer not only materially within itself, but in reputation abroad.

It is said that former Representative Hooper Alexander, for years an earnest advocate of child labor reform, will prepare a bill for the General Assembly's attention, and that it will be a bill framed along the lines and ideals of the various anti-child labor organizations in the State.

Salvation Army Man, Struck by Auto, Dies

Thomas Jefferson, the aged Salvation Army worker and former Indian instructor, who was struck by an automobile at Mitchell and Whitehall Streets Thursday, died Sunday night at Grady Hospital. He did not regain consciousness. His relatives are not known, and his body, unless claimed, will be buried by the Salvation Army.

No blame is attached to J. L. Hughes, of 380 Peachtree Street, who drove the car. He was driving slowly, according to eyewitnesses. Jefferson leaped in front of Hughes' car to escape another and faster-going machine.

Keeping the Body in Repair

Nature intended that the body should do its own repairing—and it would do so were it not for the fact that most of us live other than a natural life.

Nature didn't intend that we should wear corsets, tight collars or shoes, nor live in badly ventilated and draughty houses, nor eat and drink some of the things that we do, nor ride in street cars when we should walk.

The consequence is that the body when it gets out of order must look for outside help to make the necessary repairs.

MME. RAPPOLD'S ROMANCE IS REVEALED

Prima Donna, to Wed Tenor Berger, Waited Long for Freedom, She Says.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Mme. Marie Rappold, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, has told the story of her romance which is to culminate in her marriage this week to Rudolph Berger, the tenor.

She discussed the wedding preparations and told of the great happiness which had come to her after eight years of waiting to gain her freedom and the right to marry the man who had won her heart.

The wedding will take place at Long Branch, N. J., in the home of a friend of the prima donna. It was to have taken place last week, but Mr. Berger was commanded by the Kaiser to remain in Germany during the fest performances.

"Long, Weary, Hard Wait."

"No one but the Kaiser could have prevailed upon my fiance to postpone our wedding any longer," said Mme. Rappold as she smiled.

"It has been a long, weary, hard wait, and never a moment has our love wavered," added the beautiful singer, who recently obtained a Western divorce from Dr. Julius Rappold. "In fact, the five weeks we spent together abroad two months ago were the happiest of my life, and we both felt that we deserved our complete happiness, which, after all, is in marriage. It surely has been a romance stranger than fiction in many ways.

"Eight years ago I signed a contract with Mr. Conried, who felt that he had found in me a great Wagnerian singer. I went at his advice to Bayreuth to study German opera. I reached Bayreuth during the night, and in the morning I went for a drive.

Loved Him at First Sight.

"The very first man I saw was Rudolph Berger. It was extraordinary, for from that instant we were in love—genuinely, beautifully, earnestly in love. I wasted no time in telling my husband of my new-found happiness. We had already found our lives uncongenial, and my life was empty, save in the love I had from my little daughter Lillian.

"I soon found that while Mr. Berger was known as a baritone, his voice really was tenor. He took my advice and came to New York in 1906, spent a year taking instructions from my teacher, Oscar Sanger, and developed, as I knew he would, into perhaps the greatest Wagnerian tenor in the world."

Phone Girls to Seek Simple Life Plan an Ideal Camp Vacation Fresh Air and Fudge Their Menu

Miss Katherine C. Tatum.

500 Employees of Southern Bell Will Take Two Weeks' Rest in Woods.

The "back to the country" craze has hit the Southern Bell telephone exchange in Atlanta, and 500 hello girls, clerks, stenographers and bookkeepers are going to spend their vacations in the woods.

"Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife," where there are no hurry-up callers to disturb their temper and where the lines never get crossed, they plan to spend two weeks without a care in the world and live on fresh air and fudge.

The time—July 1 to September 31; the place,—M. O. Jackson's 290-acre farm on the Brown's Mill Road, two miles beyond the terminus of the Lakewood car line; the girl—why all of them, every single solitary one of them that operates the boards, keeps the books or takes dictation at the Atlanta branch of the Southern Bell Telephone Company: this is the scene and the synopsis and the whole plot in a nutshell.

Everyone's Talking It.

It's the one topic of conversation at the telephone exchange; everybody's talking about it. If an importunate creditor phones you he will sue if you don't settle, and about that time you hear a sweet voice say, "Won't that be lovely," don't think merely a hello girl talking about the outing to her nearest neighbor at the boards.

Miss Katherine C. Tatum, chief of the stenographic bureau, originated the idea three months ago. She confided to the head operators, Mrs. Mitchell and Misses Ada Mealor, Sammie Dixon and Alice Means, and they liked it. The five of them consulted the telephone officials and received assurances of hearty endorsement and enthusiastic support in every way possible.

The girls were consulted, and they jumped at the idea. Miss Tatum completed the details, and the result is best told in her own words.

"Mr. Jackson volunteered to give us all the space we wanted on his 290-acre farm," she said. "His beneficence assured the success of our plan, because the greatest obstacle was to secure a site with abundant good spring water.

All Home Comforts.

"We will have a dozen tents, some of them 12 by 14 feet, others 18 by 20 feet. An average of half a dozen cots will be placed in each tent. We have arranged a perfect sanitary system. There will be running hot and cold water in each tent, and plenty of ice water.

"We will have a community library and will, of course, take the daily papers. We will have telephones, too. In short, we will have all the conveniences of the city together with the comforts and beauties of the country. Our camp site is a cool and beautiful place, free from swamps and malaria and mosquitoes, and we intend to keep it so clean there will be no flies.

"We will have a man cook and a matron. I myself will be in charge of the camp, and I intend to see that it is very home like and just as attractive as it can possibly be. We will have an acetylene gas system and shower baths.

"Careful contracting and financing has made it possible for us to have this outing at 50 cents a day. That's the total cost, and I'd like to know where there is a health resort or summer hotel where you can live as we will live for this price.

"Some of the girls are accustomed to go to New York during their vacations. The fare to New York and back is $48.40. The fare to our camp will be fifteen cents, five cents for the car ride and ten cents for an automobile bus to the camp, or thirty cents for the round trip. As compared with the New York trip, we will save $48.10 on fare alone, to say nothing of other expenses. Besides, we will have a cooler, healthier and nicer time at the camp.

Night Trips For Workers.

"Some few of the girls have already taken their vacations. We have arranged for these girls to go to the camp every night, if they want to. They will leave the office at 5:30 o'clock and get back at 8:30 o'clock the next morning. The trip, including their supper and breakfast, will cost fifty cents."

An idea of the thoroughness of the arrangements for the outing may be gained from the fact that the girls have already contracted for their country produce. Farms adjacent to their camp will provide chickens, eggs, butter, milk, vegetables and fruits. At least once a week an old time barbecue will be served.

Unlimited diversion will be obtainable. The Jackson farm has a magnificent concrete swimming pool, filled with water from the springs, and the girls have been tendered free use of it. A string band has been engaged to make music every night. Visitors, either men or women, will be received until a reasonable hour each night. The camp will accommodate fifty girls a day, and the girls unite in saying they will tax its capacity for the whole three months.

44 Women Want to Clean Phila. Streets

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—Forty-four women took the Civil Service tests in this city for street cleaning inspectors. They toiled all morning on five hundred word treatises showing how they would clean the streets of the municipality and what they thought was the most needed thing to improve the condition of the streets.

They were required among other things to describe the most approved apparatus for the cleaning of the streets. They were asked the difference between some of the various kinds of machines, their purposes and the practical operation, the relation of the street cleaner to the community, the reasons for the excessive litter in certain sections and the value of moral suasion when applied in the proper places.

CARUSO IN MAD FIT AT LOSING GIRL'S SUIT

Italian Court Orders New Trial to Fix Damages due Rejected Sweetheart.

ROME, June 23.—That the legal troubles of Enrico Caruso, the world-famous tenor, are anything but over is shown to-day in the decree of the Milan Court of Appeals which has just handed down a decision reversing the lower court which last year denied Elisa Ganelli, the Milan shop girl, who sued him for failure to marry her, damages in a breach of promise suit.

Caruso is in London preparing to spend the summer at his beautiful villa near Florence, and, dispatches say, when shown the decision of the court, he allowed his temper to become greatly ruffled and let off considerable superfluous energy in the form of epithets and adjectives, between which he stated he did not believe the report.

The court, in handing down its decision holds that the decision of the lower court is correct in not providing damages for the injury to the fair name of the plaintiff. The court then goes on to state that, although the relations existing between the singer and the shop girl were reprehensible, it is of the opinion that the girl is entitled to recover the money she spent in fitting herself to become Mrs. Caruso.

Entitled to Expenses.

The decision orders that a new trial be held for the purpose of ascertaining how much the young woman is entitled to for her "pre-nuptial" expenses, and orders that it be held as soon as Caruso returns to Italy.

The suit in question was started over a year ago and at the time greatly stirred opera-going circles in this country and elsewhere. Testimony developed at the trial that one week after seeing the girl in a Milan shop Caruso secured an introduction to her from her employer and on that same occasion used these words:

"Come, now Signorina, put on your hat and we will start tomorrow, for I have decided to take you away with me. If I had been so fortunate as to make your acquaintance 15 or 20 years ago you would have been my wife by this time. Unfortunately, owing to my professional engagements, I must leave now."

After his departure Caruso bombarded the girl with letters written from Paris and London, in which he renewed his protestations, and in one letter ordered the girl to leave the shop to break with the "common people."

His "Little Sugar Doll."

He sent her many photographs of himself and his children and in writings always addressed her by such endearing names as "Dear Sweet Thing," "Little Sugar Doll" and "My Little Treasure."

One of his most characteristic letters contained the following passages:

"You will see what I will do when you are my wife. How beautiful it will be. You shall be my little queen, and I your faithful and devoted slave. Have you ever accepted some other admirer? Can anybody speak ill of you? Have you always done as your mother instructed you? You assure me that you have, and now I can think only of this—to make you mine as soon as possible."

After the betrothal the shop girl studied French and tried to fit herself to be the wife of the greatest tenor of his time. Caruso at times was chivalrous and generous to her. She had a chaperone whenever she met him and he showered her with presents, including the most costly gowns and much actual money, which she accepted, although reluctant to do so, the trial developed.

Fears Wife Is Held As Slaver Captive

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—Mystery surrounds a search by the police for Mrs. Ernestina Welden, wife of Elwood A. Welden, former Secretary of the American Consulate in Paris and Budapest.

Mrs. Welden was going shopping, she told her husband. That afternoon he received a letter from her telling that she was going away as a traveling companion to a woman. Special Agent Garberino, of the Department of Justice, fears she has fallen into the hands of white slavers.

Shepard Is Carried Past Home of Bride

NEW YORK, June 23.—Persons on a late train from New York a few nights ago heard the porter call "Tarrytown" and wondered why Finley J. Shepard, husband of Helen Gould Shepard, did not alight.

Mr. Shepard only realized that he was going by his station when the train was under way. He is too much of a railroad man not to know the dangers of jumping, and therefore refused to take a chance. Ossining was the next stop. There Mr. Shepard alighted, obtained an automobile and "burned up" the Albany post road back to Irvington.

Ex-Gov. Dix Not to Govern Philippines

WASHINGTON, June 23.—To his visitors President Wilson has made it clear that he will not consider the name of former Governor John A. Dix, of New York, for the office of Governor of the Philippines or for any other post.

The governorship of the Philippines is to be given to one of three or four men already on a tentative list. President Wilson also is understood to have said that New York has been very well provided for in the big appointments.

CHICAGO, June 23.—Jacob Zelle, who said he was a Cleveland physician, was found last night walking along North Clark Street with no clothes on. He told a policeman that he was dead and was looking for an undertaker to bury him.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

Hark, hark! the dogs do bark, the solons are coming to town—some in rags, and some in tags (but none with jags), and some in velvet gowns!

Or words to that effect!

Anyway, we have with us this evening, gentle readers, the esteemed and ever-venerated Jawjaw Legislature.

It has been coming in on every train for 24 hours or more, and there now is a sufficiency of it on hand for organization purposes if organization were the order of business for the day.

All day long the Kimball House lobby has been alive with statesmen, real and near.

Most of them are optimistic with respect to the outlook, and the more they get acquainted with one another the better they are pleased with themselves.

Not only is the city filling up rapidly with members of the new General Assembly, but dozens of old-timers, legislative veterans now retired, voluntarily and otherwise, to more or less subdued obscurity, also are in our midst, undertaking to get wise to what is what and who is who.

On all sides one hears good words and kind with respect to the incoming Governor, and good wishes for his administration are on everybody's lips.

John M. Slaton, for the first time in sixteen years, is not a member of the Legislature, and while he has been promoted to be the head of the entire State for a season, he knows practically every member of the new Legislature, and in its entirety it seems to wish him mighty well.

Scores of new members have called on the new Governor to-day to pay their respects.

To-night the Legislature will be all but unanimously on hand and ready for business.

Despite the claims and counter claims of the two leading candidates for the Presidency of the Senate, the average legislator still is very much "from Missouri" with respect to that matter.

Both Senator Allen and Senator Anderson claim more than enough to elect, and while nobody believes either is claiming anything less than he really believes, as a matter of fact, few Senators believe that either man actually has sufficient unqualified pledges to put him over.

"These claims remind me," said a prominent South Georgia politician to-day, "of a story they used to tell up in Cedartown on Major W. R. Beck, grand old man, dead these many years, rest his soul!

"The Major was a candidate for Ordinary, or something, and one of his friends was checking over the voters of the city registration list. After checking off all those the Major claimed, his friend then said, 'Well, Major, these men may be depended upon to vote for you, may they?' The old Major looked his friend in the eye, and replied, 'How the h—l do I know—they've promised to, but how the h—l do I know what they will do!'

"The trouble is, it's so hard to tell exactly what constitutes a political promise—men often say and write things that are construed as unqualified promises, when they never intended them that way at all."

Representative Crawford Wheatley, of Sumter, will introduce his famous lieutenant governor bill again at the forthcoming session of the Legislature.

Mr. Wheatley has been an enthusiastic advocate of creation of this office for many years, and while a member of the Senate he succeeded in passing through that body, almost unanimously, a bill making it part of the Constitution.

The measure was killed in the House, however, and while attempts have been made since then to enact the suggestion into law, they have not succeeded.

The gentleman from Sumter, who is sure to be one of the most popular men in the General Assembly, is very hopeful that this time his pet measure may become a law.

One step toward commission form of government for the city of Greensboro has been made by the publication of notice to the effect that at the next session of the General Assembly a bill will be introduced which will allow the City Council of Greensboro to elect a secretary and treasurer from any citizen who is eligible to act as an alderman.

The notice is published under the signature of H. M. Spinks, City Clerk of Greensboro, and it is thought that the bill will be introduced in the lower branch of the Legislature by Hon. W. F. McWhorter, Greene's Representative.

Much trouble has been experienced by the "city fathers" of Greensboro in the past in securing one of their own number to act as secretary and treasurer, and it is thought that the proposed change will remedy to a great extent some of the cumbersome methods of the city government.

The new Commissioner of Agriculture, James D. Price, of Oconee, got in to-day, and has been as busy as he could be shaking hands and receiving congratulations.

Mr. Price is just up from a sick bed, but doesn't look the part. Everybody likes him, and everybody gives him the glad hand.

He is a practical farmer, knows his way about politically, and the general prediction is that he is sure to make good on his new job.

He expects to be commissioned next Monday, and will present himself at the Executive Department bright and early to receive from the hands of Governor Slaton his warrant to do business.

He likely will be the first new State House officer to be commissioned.

Women Are Drifting To Double Standard, Dr. White Declares

A spirit of rebellion against parasitism was the explanation given for the rapid spread of the feminist movement by Dr. John E. White in his morning sermon Sunday at the Second Baptist Church.

Dr. White said women had become dissatisfied with the social conditions which made them little more than dependents on their husbands and gave them no activities or opportunities for self-development outside the walls of their own homes.

A significant statement was that the equality of rights, which he believed surely in prospect, undoubtedly would bring man and woman to the same level and would establish a single standard of morals for the two sexes. Either the man would rise to the higher plane upon which woman exists or woman would sink to man's level.

He regretted that the present tendency appeared toward the adoption of man's code of morals by the women.

He thought, however, that this condition was temporary and that man would bring himself to her level.

Dies in 5 Days After Taking Mercury for Toothache Tablets

CHICAGO, June 23.—The final incident in a five days' hopeless battle against death was recorded to-day at the inquest over the body of Lizzie Silverman, 18, who swallowed bichloride of mercury tablets, thinking they were toothache medicine. Her aged mother, now without any one to support her, is in a serious condition.

The last thought of the young woman, who had suffered frightful agony since last Tuesday night, was of her mother. She recalled that her employer owed her $3 in wages. She asked Dr. O. W. Hatz to collect the money and give it to her parent.

Scores of wealthy Chicagoans have sent flowers with offers of financial assistance for the girl's mother.

CORN CLUB WORK TO EXTEND TO NEGRO RACE

Statistics Show Its Members Manage 42 Per Cent of Georgia Farms—Yield Low.

By WALTER G. COOPER,
(Secretary Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.)

So far the Corn Club work hardly has touched the negro.

There have been a few negro farmers trained by demonstration agents who made fine records, but there has been no extensive organization for boys or men in the Corn Clubs or farm demonstration work.

Negroes manage 42 per cent of the farm sin Georgia. They cultivate 38 per cent of improved farm land and make crops worth $80,000,000 or $90,000,000 a year.

The number of negro farmers in Georgia increased 48 per cent in the last decade, while the number of white farmers increased only 19 per cent.

The acreage of improved land cultivated by negro farmers increased 44 per cent in the last decade, while that cultivated by white farmers increased only 3 per cent.

From this it would appear that the proportion of negro farmers cultivating the land of Georgia is gaining rapidly on the proportion of white farmers.

Negro's Land Most Valuable.

It will surprise most people to know that the value of land cultivated by negro farmers is higher than that cultivated by white farmers. The census estimates the value of land cultivated by negro farmers at $14.93 an acre, and that cultivated by white farmers at $13.32.

This is a remarkable circumstance, considering the fact that the white farmer makes more on an acre of his land than the negro. This may be accounted for by the fact that the negro's equipment is inferior to the white man's.

In cotton the white man makes .44 of a bale an acre, and the negro .37. In corn the white man made 12.6, the negro 10.8 bushels an acre in 1910.

There has been a marked increase in the yield since 1910, but there are no figures to show whether the negro has kept up with the white man in that increase.

Of oats the white man made 15.7 bushels, the negro 12.6 in 1910.

Of sweet potatoes the white man made 95.9 bushels, the negro 72.5.

Negroes Building More.

In the past decade buildings on negro farms increased in value 238 per cent, while buildings on white farms increased 126 per cent.

In the same decade the value of implements and machinery on the land of negro farmers increase 171 per cent and on the land of white farmers 101 per cent.

The value of domestic animals, poultry and bees increased 218 per cent in the decade on negro farms and 103 per cent on white farms.

While the proportion of negro farmers owning land is still small—only 12.8 per cent—it has increased from 11,375 in 1900 to 15,698 in 1910, or 38 per cent, while the increase of ownership by white farmers has been from 77,154 to 82,930, or 7.5 per cent.

Negroes are in a majority in 66 Georgia counties, and these counties contain nearly one-half the land of the State, or about 27,406 square miles in a total of 58,725.

To Extend Club Work.

In view of these facts, it is very essential that something be done to improve negro farming. It is inconceivable and would be inexcusable if the great benefits of the corn club work and the farm demonstration work were not extended to a race which conducts 42 per cent of the farms in eGorgia.

Practically without touching this race, the improvement in agriculture has increased the yield of corn about 25,000,000 bushels, or about 60 per cent, in five years. If the same kind of work had gone on among the negroes the increase in the corn crop would have been in proportion and would have brought the total increase to something like 40,000,000 bushels against 25,000,000.

For this reason the corn show committee will give serious consideration to this question. The matter will be taken up with J. Phil Campbell, State agent of the corn clubs. Mr. Campbell is known to favor the extension.

Coxey Has Currency Plan to End Taxes

CANAL DOVER, OHIO, June 23.—General Jacob S. Coxey, of "marching on Washington" fame, has advanced a new plan of currency reform, by which he says the United States could do away with all Federal taxes.

He would have the Government take over all the banks, abolishing the present banking system. Then, by loaning money at 6 per cent on good security, sufficient profit could be made to pay all the expenses of the Federal Government and prevent panics.

Sees 1,000,000 Kisses Every Year

Gatekeeper Expert On Osculation

Custom Grows in Favor, He Says

H. T. Lewis, who opines he knows more about kisses than Noah Webster

Many Miss Trains Because They Must Have "Just One More," Declares H. T. Lewis.

When old Noah Webster solemnly set down in his book that a kiss is "a salute or caress given by smacking the lips," he probably thought he had said the last word on the subject, and a great many people have long held the view that Mr. Webster knew—impersonally—more about the kiss than any other man.

But he hadn't and he didn't.

An Atlantan has something to say about the kiss and its habits, and he deposes earnestly that he knows—impersonally, always impersonally—more about osculation than Mr. Webster or anyone else.

Which is by why of introducing H. T. Lewis, guardian of the portals of the Terminal Railway Station, in other words, a gatekeeper. Mr. Lewis declares he has seen more kissing and heard more kissing than any other man in Atlanta, and he is ready to fall in with the fasnion and make an affidavit. He took a pencil and a piece of paper Saturday morning, and he "figgered" earnestly for some moments. Then he made this statement:

"I see 1,000,000 kisses a year—and I've been here six years."

He figures it this way:

He sees about sixty trains come and go each day, and the passengers average about 80 to a train. Of these about fifty kiss someone, either going or coming, which makes a trifle over a million smacks a year that are delivered and accepted at the gates.

"If it wasn't for the kisses we see and the kisses we hear," he said, "the life of the gatekeeper would be deadly monotony. We see every kind of a kiss here at the gate, from the Marathon kiss of the lover to the bashful peck of the schoolboy and the earnest efforts of people to emulate a clap of thunder."

Mr. Lewis said people are kissing more now than ever before, at least in the railway stations.

'Wishing Sash' Has Come to Stay

Miss Purtell Says It Brings Luck

Anyhow, It Makes Pretty Picture

Miss Myolene Lowe Purtell, who is sure "wishing sash" will be a lasting fad.

The "wishing sash" has come to Atlanta to stay, it seems. Another fair advocate of its use appears in the person of Miss Myolene Lowe Purtell, and this is an added guarantee of its value, which makes certain the fact that it is not a passing fad.

Miss Purtell believes in the "wishing sash." Of all the wishes that she has wished while knotting it about her waist, none has gone ungranted, she says.

But even without its efficacy in making dreams come true, the "wishing sash," as Miss Purtell wears it, has a very distinct reason for being. It is an adorable article of apparel, particularly so in this instance, when the young woman, twining the bright red silk about the waist of her white gown, made the prettiest of pictures.

Remember, it is a long sash, a la Bulgarian, and it is wound about the maiden's waist, and its long ends knotted. The wish is made as the knot is being tied, and the knot remains until the wish comes true. Almost any color will do, and against a white dress the effect is bewitching.

NOBLE, IN TRANCE A YEAR, AWAKENS

Has No Recollection of Months in Hospital—Pathetic Meeting With Brother.

CLEVELAND, June 23.—After being in a state of coma for a year at the State Hospital for the Insane here, Shackery Nasham el Aswad, Syrian nobleman and graduate engineer, has awakened and will be taken home at once by his brother, Captain Kaail el Aswad, wealthy cotton producer and the Governor's chief of staff, who came all the way from Bramana, Mt. Lebanon, Syria, a year ago, and has been patiently awaiting ever since for his brother's recovery.

When Shackery regained consciousness, his brother, who had been in America for twelve months, had gone to New York for a few days. He was hastily summoned and arrived today. The meeting between the brothers was pathetic. They addressed each other by all the pet names they had used in childhood.

Shackery had no recollection of his months in the hospital, where he was sent May 24, 1912, when he appeared in a daze at the Y. M. C. A. here. Only a pocketbook identified him, and through this W. Stanley Hillitt, United States Consul at Beirut, located the stricken man's father, Nasham Assad Bake el Aswad, Syrian of high rank, who sent his other son here at once.

SOLONS SEE NEED OF PENAL REFORM

Interviews with leading members of the House and Senate have disclosed that the Assembly, which meets this week, is imbued with a belief in the necessity for practical revision of Georgia's penal and criminal court laws stronger than ever before.

So many specific needs for changes have been urged by the Governor, by members of the Prison Board, by judges and solicitors general throughout the State, and so many plans have been suggested that the creation of a special commission to take up the proposition seems a certainty.

Inasmuch as the creation of this commission will give full opportunity for the expression of all views on the subject and opportunity to sift out the best way of dealing with it, no opposition has developed. Scores of legislators in both the upper and lower House are committed to its support.

Rich Dentist Sued For Divorce; Wife Declares He Beat Her

Three days after her husband went home intoxicated, according to her charge, and beat her with a walking cane, Mrs. Kathryne Steer brought suit in the Superior Court for divorce from Dr. John S. Mrs. Steer enjoined Dr. Steer from disposing of his interest in a well-known dental concern. They were married in Kentucky in 1908.

MISSISSIPPI SUES FOR 'PEN' COTTON

JACKSON, MISS., June 23.—Acting under instructions from Governor Brewer, Attorney General Ross A. Flee From Sing Sing: Are Glad to Return

OSSINING, N. Y., June 23.—"Hooray, take us back to Sing Sing!" There was real exultation in the voices of William Forbes and Maurice Clifford, two short-term burglars, who escaped from Sing Sing prison last night, when they were captured to-day. They were trying to return to the prison, but had lost their way.

Forbes and Clifford were covered with mud and their clothes were ripped and torn by brambles and barb wire fences. They were badly bitten by mosquitoes and other insects, and once they had to lie in a creek when the hunt got too close.

PLAYERS TO SOLVE RAGTIME PROBLEM

Another effort to solve Atlanta's ragtime problem will be made to-morrow afternoon.

This problem, which has aroused lovers of ragtime music, is whether an expert pianist or a Weatherholt player-piano is the more expert in producing that entrancing syncopated music.

At the contest Friday afternoon Frank Hammond, executive secretary to Mayor Woodward, awarded the decision to the player-piano, after considering the problem overnight.

Mr. Weatherholt has received dozens of letters from admirers of the player-piano who insist that the pianist never lived who can produce ragtime as the player does, and he has received invitations to visit homes of the owners and hear for himself.

Other letters have been received giving names of expert pianists who are declared to be such artists that a player would never get a decision in a contest.

The contest will be held in Weatherholt Hall, 72 North Broad Street, with L. T. Briers, H. H. Bowers, H. C. Wiley, A. D. Beatty and others competing against the player operated by J. A. Mills.

During the contest complimentary tickets to the Elite Theater will be given to the ladies present, through the courtesy of Mr. Briers, who is assistant manager of that theater.

Seven 250-Lb. Women Testify in Fat Case

DENVER, COLO., June 23.—Seventeen hundred pounds of stout women sat on small chairs in the Inspector's office in the Federal building all morning on a hot June day. At least there were seven women, and as none of them owned less than 250 pounds, the total may be fixed in the neighborhood of 1,700.

They were witnesses in a fraud case. For months, they say, they have toiled with the Marjorie Hamilton fat-reducing methods without finding themselves one ounce reduced in weight.

You Have Heard Much of Late About Makers' Surplus Stocks of Dresses and the Fine Economy That Their Purchase Has Meant, But It Has Remained for This

Sale of Summer Dresses

To Bring to the Women of Atlanta the Real Values of the Season

$5.00 to $5.75 Black China Silk Waists

$2.45

The Waist Department contributes to the day's events! Contributes an interesting item.

Black China silk waists and shirts from our own good stocks and priced regularly there at $5.00 to $5.75 are marked $2.45.

And there is a variety of splendid styles, serviceable and cool. Choose from waists with high and Dutch necks, eyelet embroidered, with little clusters of tucks and buttons on fronts, with tucks over shoulders. Open front or back. Shirts with folds down front, with pocket, with folded or flat collar.

The women of Atlanta shall have a day of it to-morrow! A day to choose the freshest and charmingest of summer dresses at prices that in no wise compare with values as you know them. It is accomplishing such results as this that adds zest to the game of merchandising; that brings the fine sense of a good job well done. We have heard much, very much, of late about dress sales, their whys and wherefores, but somehow or other one advertising pen---that must be truthful ---has had to wait until now for this opportunity. It has arrived with a vengeance! But how to make the most of it?

Simply by reciting the plain and interesting facts to the women of Atlanta, who have yet, when they visit this store, to be undeceived by any statement that Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co. makes.

Our dress buyer has just come in from New York and with him upward of three hundred summer dresses of surpassing beauty. They are anything but the usual kinds, a happy relief from cheap laces, gaudy embroideries, from dresses made down to a price. These are from a maker whose business pride is a great asset. It holds him above any kind of cheapening, of skimping in quality of materials; it keeps him everlastingly working out new and becoming styles. Whether it is early April when he is making dresses and fair profits, or whether it is mid-June, when he is making dresses and readiness for another season, the same thoroughness characterizes his work.

We tell you this now merely because you have not seen the dresses. After your visit to-morrow, when your eyes will have taken in all that the dresses are, you will more fully understand.

There are white voile dresses--all white and with touches of color here and there on collars, cuffs, in girdles; there are striped voile dresses, there are Dresden crepe dresses and flowered crepe dresses---any number of different kinds---so many that, we warrant, the question most women will have to decide is which one or several she likes best.

And back of them all is that fine fact that every one may be bought at a splendid saving. But you will not have to be told of the saving---it is evident. You will know no such attractive affairs could be sold regularly at such prices, you will know they have not been sold at such prices!

$5.00 for $7.50 to $9.75 Dresses

There are fifty of these. You may choose from white voiles or from white crepes, figured and flowered in delicate pinks, blues, lavenders and the like. They are trimmed with laces and embroideries, yokes are often entirely of embroidery—and have belts (some of them) of black velvet or folded satin. The finest five dollars worth we have known, and we believe you will agree—they are so cool and summery, they fit so splendidly.

$6.98 for $10.00 to $12.50 Dresses

One hundred twenty-five of these. There are all white voiles and their laces and embroideries will be a revelation for fineness. There are dresses with white crepe skirts and smart coats of Dresden crepes, in which the daintiest flowers show, rose, Copenhagen, over plain tucked vests and with belt and facings of satin. With these we have put a number of $10.00 and $11.75 black China silk dresses from our own stock. Half-length sleeves, flat round collar.

$8.75 for $12.50 to $15.00 Dresses

There are one hundred twenty-five of these and would there were more! Voiles are the materials, and such voiles, seemingly as crisp and fine as could be woven. Some are white, some are striped in shades favored right now. Those all white are made elegant with embroidery medallions surrounded by laces in yokes, and those striped are newly styled dresses, simple and dainty, that mean worlds of satisfaction for morning trips to town, for afternoon wear.

Old Fogyisms of To-day

By DOROTHY DIX.

ONE of the most interesting plays of the past season was Arnold Bennett's "Milestones." The theory of the drama was growth. It showed how the advanced thought of one day is the conservatism of the next and the old fogyism of the day after.

In the play the hero breaks with his business partner because he wants to build iron ships instead of wooden ships. "You'll be ruined if you do," says the standpatter; "iron ships will never float. You might as well build stone ships."

The progressive man goes on and builds iron ships and makes a fortune, but at middle life his partner wants to build steel ships. "Never," cries the old man, with his conservative old ideas, "iron ships are all right, but steel ships will never float." The young man builds his steel ships, that give us our Mauretanias, and then, when he has grown old, comes a young man talking of building airships, and he cries out, as the other two old men have done about the iron ships and the steel ships, "that airships will never be practicable."

This play, "Milestones," is the biggest suffrage play ever written, and offers the best suffrage argument.

Go back three generations. The question of whether a woman should be given an education then was just as burning a one as the question of whether she should be given a right to vote is now. And precisely the same arguments were brought against it as are brought against woman suffrage now.

An Old Belief.

In our great-grandmothers' time it was contended that it would unsex a woman to teach her geography, and make her bold and unwomanly and kill her sweet feminine charm for her to receive an education. Also that only a few blue stockings among women wanted an education. Therefore, it was foolish and wrong to open college doors to the feminine sex.

Well, by dint of a heroic fight by a few women for all women, the privileges of education were extended to girls, and the learning that our forefathers so feared would unsex and demoralize women has brought about none of the calamities they foretold. Women are still women. They are still sought in marriage, and so far from only a few caring for an education, the girls outnumber the boys in high schools. Education has not unfitted women to be good mothers. It makes them better ones.

Look back at the time when education was thought to endanger women, and you will laugh as you did at the man who was so sure that an iron ship couldn't be made to float.

The next milestone that we have passed is the one that marked the place where women began to go into gainful occupations. In our grandmothers' day the only way a woman had to make a good living was to marry it. By and by a few bold and heroic women rebelled at this state of affairs and demanded a right to go into any kind of business that they were fitted for. The whole conventional world raised one grand howl of protest.

A woman's place is in the home, it cried, whether she's got a home or not, or anything to eat in it or not. If she goes out into the world to work she will become unsexed. She will become coarse and vulgar, and wear short hair and trousers, and smoke and swear, and men won't marry her, and everything will go to the bow-wows.

There are eight million wage earning women in the United States, and if there are any unsexed among them the Eden Musee has failed to get them. So far from the working girl having her love of dress eliminated, the trouble with her is that she's too much given to frills. Also, instead of being opposed to marriage she gets married just when she's most valuable to her employer. The finest woman in the world to-day is the wide-awake, competent business girl, amply able to stand on her own feet, and earn what she needs. She is the prop of her family, and a blessing to society.

It's as absurd to think that people were ever afraid to give women the right to earn an honest living as it is to think that they ever prophesied that you couldn't make a steel ship that would float.

The third milestone that we have passed is the property milestone. Up to our mother's day when a woman married every cent she had passed into her husband's exclusive possession. This was true although the man might be a gambler and a spendthrift, swamped to his chin in debts of which the woman knew nothing, or whether he was a good fellow of the shiftless sort between whose fingers money leaks as water through a sieve.

When it was first proposed to pass property laws securing a woman's money to herself it was fought tooth and nail—even by many women. People said it would break up the home, and produce endless friction between husbands and wives. Women cried out that if they could trust themselves to their husbands they could trust their money. It was contended that for a woman to own her own money would make her bossy and insulting to her husband.

They Worked Well.

Nevertheless some property laws, not adequate ones yet, have been passed, and it has been found out that they worked out for the general good. The right sort of man didn't want to hold up his wife and rob her of her property and the woman who is married to the wrong sort finds out that it is, at least, some consolation to have a roof over her head when her dream of love is broken.

Nobody would now argue that a woman hasn't a right to her own property or to the money she earns, any more than they would contend that we should go back to the old days of the wooden sailing ships.

And now we have come to the last milestone in the march of human progress. It is the demand that women who own property and pay taxes, who form one-half of the population, who are amenable to the law, should stand before that law on an equal platform with men.

Those who object say that for women to vote will unsex them, that it will take away their feminine charm, that men won't want to marry them, that it will break up the home, that not all women want to vote, that they said those things about educating women, or about women being given a chance to make an honest living, and about women being permitted to control their own property.

Not one single evil prophecy founded on women's advancement has been fulfilled. May we not confidently believe that we may give woman the ballot not only without danger, but that their help is needed in politics just as much as it is needed in the home and the business world? Why should we not then pass this last milestone, too, and set our faces toward the onward journey?

Modes of the Moment

By OLIVETTE.

SMALL shape of bagal, made of broad "salotte," is shown in the top picture. The brim is made of a black tulle held up by a "laiton." Two flanks of paradise are disposed at the back and a band of small aigrettes turn around the "calotte."

A bow of velvet of the same tone hides the lower end of the paradise.

The other picture shows an afternoon gown of white supple moire. The bodice is a kimono crossed with a small decollete in the V shape, with small plastron of embroidered linen. A shawl collar achieves the yoke. The sleeves are of three-quarter length, with small revers trimmed with three small buttons of the same material, a point going up over the middle front of the bodice.

The underskirt is straight and buttoned on the front with buttons of the material.

Too Much for the Chimney

WHEN Grandfather Lickshingle heard it read from a newspaper that Peter Ripley had a lamp chimney which his family had used for thirteen years, he rapped savagely on the floor with his walking stick and said:

"Now, what the dickens is the use of putting such reading in the newspaper? If they want some information about lamp chimneys, let them come to me and get it. When me and your grandmother broke up housekeeping we had a lamp chimney. But it wasn't made in these 'ere shoddy times. I paid a penny for it the day we were married. That was away back somewhere in the last century. We used it night and day for 79 years and eight——"

"Why, grandpa, you didn't have to use it in the daytime, did you?"

"Didn't have to—no. But we did. Used it at night on the lamp, and in the daytime we used it to drive nails with. Sometimes the children cracked nuts with it, and the road surveyor borrowed it several times to pound stones on the streets. One day I thought they had lost it. The workmen had left it on the road, and the street cars ran over it seventeen times before it was found. This lamp chimney had been in a railway collision, 22 lamps had exploded under it during its time, a horse kicked it clean through the side of the stable, and the chimney came out of it all without as much as a crack, but the horse had to be sent to the hospital. However, it's broke now," said grandfather, with a deep sigs.

"Then you were foolish enough to let the servant clean it, were you?" asked mother.

"No, but we might as well. When we gave up keeping house I gave it to a friend. He was hard of hearing, and he wanted it for an ear trumpet. One day a man tried to tell him why he ought to be President, and that he was the only real man for the job, and, by cracky, he burst the chimney into a million pieces."

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

In the amiable way of villagers, they were discussing the matrimonial affairs of a couple who, though recently wed, had begun to find the yoke of Hymen a burden.

"'Tis all along o' them hasty marriages," opined one caustic old gentleman, who had been much to the fore in the discussion. "They did not understand each other. They'd nobut knowed each other for a matter of seven year."

"Well, that seems long enough," said a listener.

"Long eno'? Bah! Ye're wrong. When a body's courting, he canna be too careful. Why, my courtship with Mary lasted a matter of nineteen years."

"You were certainly careful," agreed the listener; "and did you find your plan successful when you married?"

"Ye jump to conclusions hastily," said the old man. "I understood her then, so I didna marry her!"

A sad-looking man went into a chemist's. "Can you give me," he asked, "something that will drive from my mind the thought of sorrow and bitter recollection?"

Then the chemist nodded, and put him up a little dose of quinine and wormwood and rhubarb and Epsom salts and a dash of castor oil, and gave it to him, and for six months the man could not think of anything in the world except new schemes for getting the taste out of his mouth.

The portly lady had accidentally taken a rear seat in a car reserved for smokers. With unconcealed indignation she watched the man beside her fill his pipe.

"Do it now, ma'am!" said the man, as he carefully lighted up; "then take my advice an' stop it!"

Corporal (to soldiers)—"Why is the blade of the saber curved instead of straight?"

Soldier—"It is curved in order to give more force to the blow."

Corporal—"Humbug! The saber is curved so as to fit the scabbard. If it was straight, how would you get it into the crooked scabbard, blockhead?"

Blink (the wholesaler)—"Well, how many orders did you get yesterday?"

Gink (the salesman)—"I got two orders in one shop."

Blink—"What were they?"

Gink—"One was to get out and the other was to stay out."

"Have you a spare cigar about you, old chap?"

"Certainly. But I thought you were going to stop smoking?"

"I am, but not too abruptly. I've already stopped smoking my own cigars."

Do You Know That—

A factory in Grenoble, France, utilizes the water of a reservoir situated in the mountains at a height of 200 yards. The water reaches the factory through a vertical tube of the same length, with a diameter of considerably less than an inch, the jet being used to move a turbine. Experiments have shown that the strongest men can not cut the jet with the best tempered sword, and in some instances the blade has been broken into fragments without deflecting a drop of the water and with as much violence as a pane of glass may be shattered by a blow from an iron bar. It has been calculated that a jet of water a small fraction of an inch in thickness, moving with sufficient velocity, could not be cut by a rifle bullet.

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

From where Gordon stood the wild windstorm seemed to be rushing directly toward him with twice the speed of the fastest express train, cutting a path five hundred feet wide. Even as he looked the tornado, with a rush and a roar, swept up between the mansion and the huge granite rock in the valley. Gordon dashed for the brook to seek some sheltering bank, but ere he could reach it the cyclone was upon him, or at least the edge of it, and he was picked up as though he was a chip of wood, carried forty feet in the air and hurled to the opposite side of the brook, where he lay stunned.

When Gordon came to his senses he found himself surrounded by four rough looking men, dressed in the garb of the mountaineer. They assisted him to his feet and he worked his arms, legs and body to ascertain if there were any bones broken. Finding himself apparently sound, he smiled.

"I never rode on the wings of a cyclone before," he said, "and I don't believe I ever want to try it again."

None of the men he addressed made direct reply to this cheerful remark. They stood close to him and eyed him critically. Finally one of them, a black-bearded man, said:

"I reckon you're Gordon Kelly."

"I am," replied Gordon, surprised that the stranger should know that name.

Gordon a Prisoner.

As if this answer were a signal for attack, the four men closed in on him. One of them had a rope and he attempted to pinion Gordon's arms. Though taken completely by surprise, Gordon put up a desperate struggle, but was quickly overpowered by the four men, all of whom seemed possessed of uncommon strength. His arms were tied behind his back and he was commanded to walk forward.

"What's the meaning of this?" demanded the prisoner.

The man with the black beard answered.

"I reckon nothin' ain't goin' to harm yer, if yer obey orders. If yer don't we'll make yer. Come along."

But Gordon refused to move. He said in a calm voice.

"Just tell me what this all about, will you, please? You've made a mistake. I have done nothing to you. You've got the wrong man."

"You ain't done nothin' to us, but you're the man we want. Come along, now." The black-bearded man drew a six-shooter from his pocket and grasped the weapon by the barrel. "I don't want to hit yer with this yere pistol, but I reckon I'll have to unless yer do what I tell yer."

Gordon saw that all four men were armed, though the black-bearded man was the only one to make a display. Resistence was useless and might bring him needless injury, so without further words he walked ahead in the direction indicated feeling that in a short time the whole thing would be explained and he would be allowed to go free. His captors followed the brook for nearly a mile and then turned off toward the northwest. They crossed the path of the cyclone, which had long since passed in its fury, leaving destruction in its wake, and continued on through thick forests and over rough and wild mountain country. Gordon tried to secure some information from the men, but they did not reply to his questions.

A Long Walk.

Finally, after walking northwesterly for about three miles, Gordon judged, they came to Pew Creek, the stream that flowed past the settlement bearing the same name nearly fourteen miles to the south of where they were. The prisoner knew the country well, especially the land bordering the creek. He knew not where his captors were taking him, but at least he was familiar with the ground. The bearded man, leading the way—he seemed to be the leader of the four—followed the creek for another mile until he struck the main road. Before reaching the road, however, the party stopped, while one of the men went ahead as a scout, evidently to make sure the road was clear. He waved a signal to advance and the others did so, crossing a bridge where the creek met the road and then plunging due west through another forest. They were getting on higher ground all the time and finally came to a clearing. Then, making a sharp ascent of about one hundred yards, they descended rapidly for another hundred yards and came to a small clump of trees, with underbrush growing high all around it. Walking straight ahead, the bearded man parted the underbrush and with Gordon following close, they passed through it and arrived at a log cabin, evidently of recent construction.

By this time it was almost dark. One of the men stepped inside the cabin and lighted two or three tallow candles, after which he set about preparing the evening meal. When the candles were glowing, the bearded man motioned Gordon to enter, which he did, the others following. Gordon glanced around. There were five rough banks, with a straw on them for bedding. There was no stove, but there was a fireplace in a corner, with a small chimney leading up from it, built of sticks of wood plastered with clay. The only article of furniture in the room was a rude bench. The bearded man then spoke the first words he had uttered since the march began. He said to Gordon:

"Yer won't be hurted none unless yer try to escape. Then we'll shoot." He untied the rope that bound Gordon's arms, one of the other men standing by with a revolver in his hand, and added: 'Maybe yer better git in one of them bunks till grub is ready.'"

Thoughts Busy.

Gordon rubbed the circulation back in his arms and then lay down. He had long since made up his mind to treat the situation good-naturedly, feeling that more could be accomplished that way than being nasty about it. He resolved to trust to cheerfulness and diplomacy in his intercourse with these men. He had not yet been able to figure out what their object was in making him a captive. Perhaps they would demand a ransom for his release. He could not satisfy himself how they knew his name, either. The thought flashed across him that Galen Deery had something to do with the matter. Perhaps the Atlanta capitalist had learned of his companionship with Mildred. It was possible that Shephard, his superintendent, had informed him. He recalled what Mildred had told him about her father's vast project and he tried to connect it with his present predicament.

While his thoughts were busy, the fire under the pots and pans was busy, too. Three of his captors began eating at once, while the fourth stood guard over Gordon with a six-shooter in his hand. Evidently they had planned the whole thing out in advance, as they had not spoken to each other since entering the cabin.

After eating a hearty meal of bacon, corn cakes, stewed beans and crackers, Gordon stretched himself, smiled and announced that he felt better. He thought the other men probably felt in better humor, too, so he tried to start a little conversation.

"Do you men expect to keep me here or will there be some more walking?" he asked, with a good-natured smile.

The black-bearded man nodded. "Right yere, I reckon," he replied, after some deliberation.

Allowed to Write.

There was no answer to this remark. Three of the men had lighted pipes. The fourth, who seemed to be somewhat younger than the others, had been relieved of guard duty and was now eating his supper. When he had finished he drew a bag of tobacco and some tissue paper from a pocket and rolled a cigarette. There was silence for a long time and then Gordon began again.

"I don't mind spending a little time with you men, as you appear to be willing to treat me fairly. I suppose you will tell me what this is all about when you get ready to do so. You won't find me troublesome. But I have a favor to ask of you. The people at my home and the people at Deery's house below will be very much worried about me. They may think I was killed in the cyclone. What I want you to do is to get word to them somehow that I am safe; or, if you will allow it, I will write a note that one of you can leave on the doorstep at night. Of course you can read the note before it is sent. What do you say?"

Three of the men looked at the man with the black beard as if expecting him to do all the necessary talking. He smoked in silence for several minutes. Then he spat and said:

"I reckon you all kin write."

CHAPTER XXXVII.

GORDON had a pencil, but no paper. However he discovered a small paper bag, which he slit down the sides with his knife, making of it a long, narrow sheet. Then, with the bottom of a tin plate for a desk, he very slowly wrote the following remarkable letter in a large hand:

Friend Mildred:
I write to tell you I am
Very well and for you and
Elmer and also your
Mother not to worry as
I am being well treated.
Lonely, of course, it is,
Especially as I can not
See my friends; but
No matter; I will keep
On being cheerful and the
Rest will come out right in
The end. I wish you would
Have someone to go
With you to my home (take
Elmer) and please notify
Steve and all the others
That none of them
Must look for me
Yet. I will soon
Have, I expect, another
Opportunity to write
More. You may possibly
Expect it soon.
Love to all.

G. K.

When Mildred received these lines (which she did the following morning) she must have thought it a queer letter to get from the man she was so worried about. It was not a love letter, nor did it seem to say much of anything in any definite degree. Yet Gordon had deliberately written it that way, trusting to the girl's ingenuity to decipher the hidden meaning. As a matter of fact, the meaning was so little hidden that Gordon, as he wrote it, had doubts as to whether it would pass muster.

The Message Sent.

Gordon folded the sheet of paper twice, addressed it on the back to Miss Mildred Deery and handed it to the black-bearded man, who read it slowly; so slowly, in fact, that Gordon feared he had discovered the simple cryptogram. But at last the mountaineer nodded and placed the letter in his pocket, whereat Gordon breathed with relief. Later in the evening the letter was given to the youngest of the four who, after receiving instructions from the bearded man, given in too low a tone for Gordon to distinguish the words, saddled a horse that was tethered nearby, mounted him and rode off in the darkness.

From the moment the rope that bound Gordon's arms had been removed, one of the four men had remained within ten feet of the captive, with a revolver in his hand. Every action of the mountaineers indicated that they meant business and Gordon had long since made up his mind that he would not attempt to escape that night. At intervals he endeavored to draw his captors into conversation, but without success. They were not sullen, or gloomy, or sulky; they simply refused to talk, so at last Gordon requested that he might be allowed to retire for the night.

No Secret About Woman's Beauty

The flashing eye, the elastic step and the brilliant complexion are never companions of organic troubles; but it is the distressed expression, aches and pains, faintness, dizziness, that bearing down feeling, and the blues that are the tell-tale symptoms. If such women would only remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound overcomes such distressing symptoms, womanly beauty would be no longer a secret.

The top picture is a photograph of a melting iceberg. Underneath is a diagram showing the various currents produced by an iceberg that is slowly dissolving. It is these currents that are "felt" by the micro-thermometer, one of the latest wonderful achievements of science.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

SINCE the sinking of the Titanic, a year ago, icebergs have been studied as never before, and a great amount of curious knowledge about these frozen monsters of the deep has been accumulated, with the result of increasing the safety of ocean navigation.

Just as a living being proclaims its presence, even when it can not be seen, by telltale sounds and vibrations and by emanations which are perceptible at surprising distances to olfactory senses as delicate as those possessed by some of the lower animals, so icebergs betray themselves, in the darkness of the night, or the far more dangerous obscurity of a fog, by their effect upon the temperature of the air and the water.

A remarkable mechanical sense-organ, called the micro-thermometer, which is simply a thermometer of great delicacy and special construction, dragged through the water by a ship, is now employed to measure the changing temperatures of the water in the vicinity of icebergs, and some unexpected facts have been developed by its use.

A great steamship provided with micro-thermometers lowered into the water is like a hunted deer sniffing the air with its sensitive nostrils and detecting its enemies afar off.

How It Works.

These instruments reveal facts previously unknown about icebergs. They show that there is a surprising system of currents around and under a great berg, or a fleet of bergs, which produce characteristic temperature changes that may be felt miles away. In truth, the iceberg is a great thermal engine surrounded by a medium of air and water peculiar to itself, and due to its action upon its environment. Upon the air immediately around it the berg produces a cooling effect in consequence of the absorption of heat required to melt it. When water freezes, it gives out heat; when it melts, it absorbs heat. One perilous consequence often is that the moisture in the cooled air around the berg condenses into concealing fogs and mists.

But the effects of the berg upon the underlying and surrounding water are still more remarkable and important. It has been found (as illustrated in the picture of a melting iceberg) that there are three characteristic currents produced in the ocean water by a great berg when it arrives in the comparatively warm water lying along the steamship tracks of the North Atlantic.

In the first place, directly under the vast ice mass there is a great current of cooled salt water, which sinks by its own gravity, because the cold increases its relative density.

In the next place the suction produced by the sinking cold water draws in from all sides warmer surface currents, which eat into the sides of the berg by their melting action, and finally so much reduce the size of the berg beneath the surface, or so change its shape, and its center of gravity, that, at last, the equilibrium of the mass is upset, and it turns over, thrashing the surrounding sea with its immense flanks, huge fragments of which, heavy enough to sink a ship, are detached, and go floating away to form an attendant fleet of small bergs and floes.

Then there is a third current composed of relatively fresh water, formed by the melting of the berg, and which, because of its lesser specific gravity, moves upward from around the berg and flows as a comparatively warm current over the surface of the sea. This current is of the greatest importance in betraying the presence of a berg, for it spreads to a considerable distance and can easily be detected by the micro-thermometer. The warm current has been detected a mile from a berg.

The Real Effect.

In regard to this a recent report of the Canadian Government on iceberg phenomena says: "There is little room to doubt that the real iceberg effect is the rise of temperature, and that the fall (observed when a ship passes abeam of the berg) is due to the colder current in which the berg is being carried."

In some experimental trips when icebergs were passed at a distance of from a half to a quarter of a mile there was observed first a rise of temperature in the water, followed by a fall as the berg was passed abeam.

Similar experiments with the micro-thermometer have shown that the near neighborhood of land is betrayed by a fall of water temperature, and this is believed to be due to the action of the tides and the obstruction offered by the coast line, resulting in a turning up of the under water, which is always much colder than the sea surface.

At the Table

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED

THAT common meeting-ground of the family, the dinner table, should be made a place where harmony reigns and where each one brings his or her best to contribute to the pleasure of the moment. Cheerful talk is as necessary to health and appetite as it is to peace and pleasure of mind. Unpleasant subjects should be avoided resolutely. Such topics as bad news, illnesses, grewsome incidents shocking accidents, troublesome business affairs should not be brought to the table; nor should disagreeable family matters be discussed there. These family affairs may require settlement, but may be talked of elsewhere.

If it is a family principle to be agreeable and talkative at table, there will be greater ease when guests are present.

A woman's duty is to be composed and cheerful at her table whether at family meals or when there are guests. Her serenity, or the lack of it, influences others. When acting in the capacity of hostess she needs an absolutely placid temper. Self-control must be her watchword. If she appears to be disturbed, worried, absent-minded, if her eyes wander, or she seems distracted in conversation, every one will be uneasy, and the dinner will be dull and dragging. Her duty is not to let her guests know of her moods, disappointments or even of a headache.

If service is slow, or mistakes happen, it is best for a hostess not to offer explanations. No matter what may go wrong, she must appear not to notice it. By passing over a mistake or an imperfection herself it will escape the attention of others, or, at least, will not be regarded as important by them. If a serious accident occurs to precious china or rare glass she must maintain a calm manner. If a careless servant lets something drip on a guest's dress, a hostess must express regret and try to remedy the blunder and then pass on, without too much delay, to other matters. A guest should try to appear undisturbed by any accident of the sort.

If a guest should be so unlucky as to overturn a glass or have any other accident, it is best not to make profuse apologies. Regret may be shown by one's manner. Thus there is less interruption to conversation and to the smooth running of the dinner. By practice a young hostess may acquire facility in being able to talk naturally while at the same time seeing that people are served properly. If an order has to be given it should be done quietly and simply, without any mysterious signals or loud whisperings. A hostess should try not to make her servant nervous by watching her too much as she moves round the table.

Didn't Want Him.

Mike Hennesey, a hefty young Irishman, secured his first foremanship after serving for some years as one of the "gang." Promptly at 7 o'clock in the morning he began his duties by calling the gang to order.

"Ye all have to worruk for me!" he shouted. "Worruk, I say! And I want every wan of yez to understand at wance that I kin lick anny man in the gang!"

All swallowed the insult except one giant-built warrior, who stepped forward and said:

"But you can't lick me, Mike Hennesey!"

"Oh, I can't, can't I? yelled Mike.

"No, you can't," came back the determined answer.

"Well, thin, go to the office and draw your money. I'll have no man in the gang I can't lick!"

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"My husband shot a burglar," she said, languidly. And then her insolence reached its culmination in a query of her own: "Was his name Griggs?" It was done with splendid art, with a splendid mastery of her own emotions, for, even as she spoke the words, she was remembering those shuddering seconds when she had stood, only a few hours ago, gazing down at the inert bulk that had been a man.

Burke betook himself to another form of attack.

"Oh, you know better than that," he declared, truculently. "You see, we've traced the Maxim silencer. Garson himself bought it up in Hartford."

For the first time, Mary was caught off her guard.

"But he told me——" she began, then became aware of her indiscretion, and checked herself.

Burke seized on her lapse with avidity.

"What did he tell you?" he questioned, eagerly.

Now, Mary had regained her self-command, and she spoke calmly.

"He told me," she said, without a particle of hesitation, "that he had never seen one. Surely, if he had had anything of the sort, he would have shown it to me then."

"Probably he did, too!" Burke rejoined, without the least suspicion that his surly utterance touched the truth exactly. "Now, see here," he went on, trying to make his voice affable, though with small success, for he was excessively irritated, "I can make it a lot easier for you if you'll talk. Come on, now! Who killed Griggs?"

Mary Stood Rebellious.

Mary cast off pretense finally, and spoke malignantly.

"That's for you to find out," she said, sneering.

Burke pressed the button on the desk, and, when the doorman appeared, ordered that the prisoner be returned to her cell.

But Mary stood rebellious, and spoke with a resumption of her cynical scorn.

"I suppose," she said, with a glance of contempt toward Demarest, "that it's useless for me to claim my constitutional rights, and demand to see a lawyer?"

Burke, too, had cast off pretense at last.

"Yes," he agreed, with an evil smirk, "you've guessed it right, the first time."

Mary spoke to the District Attorney.

"I believe," she said, with a new dignity of bearing, "that such is my constitutional right, is it not, Mr. Demarest?"

The lawyer sought no evasion of the issue. For that matter, he was coming to have an increasing respect, even admiration, for this young woman, who endured insult and ignominy with a spirit so sturdy, and met stratagem with other stratagem better devised. So, now, he made his answer with frank honesty.

"It is your constitutional right, Miss Turner."

Mary turned her clear eyes on the Inspector, and awaited from that official a reply that was not forthcoming. Truth to tell, Burke was far from comfortable under that survey.

"Well, Inspector?" she inquired, at last.

"We've Got Gargon."

Burke took refuge, as his wont was when too hard pressed, in a mighty bellow.

"The constitution don't go here!" It was the best he could do, and it shamed him, for he knew its weakness. Again, wrath surged in him, and it surged high. He welcomed the advent of Cassidy, who came hurrying in with a grin of satisfaction on his stolid face.

"Say, Chief," the detective said with animmation, in response to Burke's glance of inquiry, "we've got Garson."

Mary's face fell, though the change of expression was almost imperceptible. Only Demarest, a student of much experience, observed the fleeting display of repressed emotion. When the Inspector took thought to look at her, she was as impassive as before. Yet, he was minded to try another ruse in his desire to defeat the intelligence of this woman. To this end, he asked Gilder and the District Attorney to withdraw, while he should have a private conversation with the prisoner. As she listened to his request, Mary smiled again in Sphinx-like fashion, and there was still on her lips an expression that caused the official a pang of doubt, when, at last, the two were left alone together, and he darted a surreptitious glance toward her. Nevertheless, he pressed on his device valiantly.

"Now," he said, with a marked softening of manner, "I'm going to be your friend."

"Are you?" Mary's tone was noncommittal.

"Yes," Burke declared, heartily. "And I mean it! Give up the truth about young Gilder. I know he shot Griggs, of course. But I'm not taking any stock in that burglar story—not a little bit. No court would, either. What was really back of the killing?" Burke's eyes narrowed cunningly. "Was he jealous of Griggs? Well, that's what he might do then. He's always been a worthless young cuo. A rotten deal like this would be about his gait. I guess. * * * Tell me, now, why did he shoot Eddie Griggs?"

All Poise Had Fled.

There was coarseness a-plenty in the Inspector's pretense, but it possessed a solitary fundamental virtue; it played on the heart of the woman whom he questioned, aroused it to wrath in defense of her mate. In a second, all poise fled from this girl whose soul was blossoming in the blest realization that a man loved her purely, unselfishly. Her words came stumblingly in their haste. Her eyes were near to black in their anger.

"He didn't kill him! He didn't kill him!" she fairly hissed. "Why, he's the most wonderful man in the world. You sha'n't hurt him! Nobody shall hurt him! I'll fight to the end of my life for Dick Gilder!"

Burke was beaming joyously. At last—a long last!—his finesse had won the victory over this woman's subtleties.

"Well, that's just what I thought," he said, with smug content. "An' now, then, who did shoot Griggs? We've got every one of the gang. They're all crooks. See here," he went on, with a sudden change to the respectful in his manner, "why don't you start fresh? I'll give you every chance in the world. I'm dead on the level with you this time."

But he was too late. By now, Mary had herself well in hand again, vastly ashamed of the short period of self-betrayal caused by the official's artifice against her heart. As she listened to the Inspector's assurances, the mocking expression of her face was not encouraging to that astute individual, but he persevered manfully.

"Just you wait," he went on cheerfully, "and I'll prove to you that I'm on the level about this, that I'm really your friend. * * * There was a letter came for you to your apartment. My men brought it down to me. I've read it. Here it is. I'll read it to you!"

He picked up an envelope, which had been lying on the desk, and drew out the single sheet of paper it contained. Mary watched him, wondering much more than her expression revealed over this new development. Then, as she listened, quick interest touched her features to a new life. In her eyes leaped emotions to make or mar a life.

Helen Morris' Letter.

This was the letter:

I can't go without telling you how sorry I am. There won't never be a time that I won't remember it was me got you sent up, that you did time in my place. I ain't going to forgive myself ever, and I swear I'm going straight always. Your true friend,
HELEN MORRIS.

For once, Burke showed a certain delicacy. When he had finished the reading, he said nothing for a long minute—only sat with his cunning eyes on the face of the woman who was immobile there before him. And, as he looked on her in her slender elegance of form and gentlewomanly loveliness of face, a loveliness intelligent and refined beyond that of most women, he felt borne in on his consciousness the fact that here was one to be respected. He fought against the impression. It was to him preposterous, for she was out of that underworld against which he was ruthlessly at war. Yet, he could not altogether overcome his instinct toward a half-reverent admiration. * * * And, as the letter proved, she had been innocent at the outset. She had been the victim of a mistaken justice, made outcast by the law she had never wronged. * * * His mood of respect was inevitable, since he had some sensibilities, though they were coarsened, and they sensed vaguely the maelstrom of emotions that now swirled in the girl's breast.

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

Chapter Eleven.

WHEN Jennie saw her girl friend at the office next day she asked her how she managed to have such nice dresses and such a nice furnished room on the salary she got. The girl winked and laughingly explained, "it was very easy, providing you were pretty and you found the right MAN." But even then little Jennie did not understand what she meant, and asked the girl to explain the meaning of the "right MAN" part of it.

This the girl was very reluctant to do, but finally admitted that one of the young men they were out with the night before gave her money—and that she just worked for the sake of having something to do. But she did NOT tell Jennie that the work also helped her to forget her way of living and to keep her mind off the day when she would NOT be as good looking and when the young man would have transferred his attentions to a younger and prettier girl—and the money wouldn't be so easy to get.

Jennie was quite shocked when she realized her girl friend was taking money from the young man, and as much as she wanted pretty clothes and good times she was sure she could never, never do THAT to obtain them.

Then the girl told her she knew of a place where Jennie could get clothes on credit. By just paying a dollar or so a week she could get all the clothes she wanted if they knew she had a fairly good job for a girl. Jennie was quite excited when she learned there were such places as these. Just think—and you would only have to pay a dollar or two a week. She was getting eight dollars a week. Pooh! she wouldn't miss one dollar of it. So at noon time she and the girl went to a store to pick out some clothes for Jennie.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I WAS reading a book last night that certainly gave me the Willies," said the Manicure Lady. "Wilfred brought it home from the library. It was all about the way them Romans used to go after the church members, and I never seen such terrible accounts of anything in my life. Why, George, them Romans used to burn the Christians in boiling pitch! Gee, I'm glad I wasn't around then, ain't you?"

"If I had been around I would probably have been one of the Romans," said the Head Barber. "I ain't no church member, even though I know that I ought to be one. I am always so tired after Saturday is over that I like to sleep till noon, and in the afternoon and evening me and the Missus usually goes somewhere like to the seashore or out in the country. If I had more time I would go to church, because it don't hurt anybody to go, and think of all the good religion has done."

"That's why I go," said the Manicure Lady. "Sometimes I feel as if the preacher and me don't quite agree on everything he says, but I always make allowance for the preacher. I was just saying to mother last night that the people that goes to church now ought to be very thankful that they didn't live among them Romans and that the brave people who did live in them days was ever on earth to start the churches and bring all that good into the world."

Not So Hard.

"There is a lot of church members now that wouldn't have stood the gaff then," said the Head Barber. "There is a lot more church members now, but the going ain't so hard."

"That is just what I was thinking when I was reading that book," said the Manicure Lady. "There was a smooth, chop-whiskered old geezer in here yesterday to have his nails did, and the way he purred around me and kind of insinuated would make you sick. He said that he lived over in a little Alabama town, and I asked him if he was the same kind of a gay old dog among the Birmingham manicure girls. Mercy, no, he told me. He said that he had to be a different person altogether when he was at home. He said he couldn't imagine what the other pillars of his church would say if a brother deacon got nifty. I asked him if he didn't have any conscience of his own, and he said that he had one, but it always got seasick when he was crossing the Chattahoochee River, so he left it at home.

"It is too bad, George, that old man Nero didn't have a few of that kind of church members for his lions and bonfire men to practice on, instead of the noble people that had to be martyrs. Pa used to go to church a lot when we lived over in South Carolina, but I guess he ran into so many good little toads like the gent of which I am just speaking of that he got sick of the job.

A Perfect Dear.

"The old gent may travel to the sideboard a little too often some evenings, but he ain't no hypocrite, and there is a lot of other men like him that would be there every Sunday when the plate comes around if there wasn't so many old fakes with sidewhiskers carrying the plate.

"I asked the old geezer what he did week days to rest up from going to church, and he said that he had a big factory where children could learn a good trade and grow up useful members of society like him.

"Do you follow me, George? What a perfect old dear he must be to his wife and children! Honest to goodness, George, if I could find out where his wife lived I would send her a synonymous letter and warn her of her husband's complicity, or whatever it is they call that Jekyll and Hyde stuff that makes a man kick up his heels when he gets where the high buildings looms. Gee, the shop seemed airier and better after he had went!"

ATLANTA GAINS EXTRA GAME ON EVE OF FOURTH

By Joe Agler.

NEW ORLEANS, June 23.—Lefty Price will put 'em across for the Crackers this afternoon, opposing Rube Evans, and it looks like us for the money. Price is in great shape, and the bunch is working like a clock. If we don't take the whole series and move up to the top, where we belong, you can tell the bunch at the corner that Joe Agler's a bum prophet.

Old Man Rain won the first game here Sunday, owing to the lack of boating facilities in the park. The field offered fine opportunity for swimming early in the day, but the crowd kept on coming, in spite of the rain, and rather than let all that coin get away one game was decided upon. It was slippery as spaghetti, but that hurt nobody.

Game for Atlanta.

The postponed first game will be played on July 3, and will be transferred to Atlanta. We will not pull off a double-header here this trip.

We copped the one game of Sunday, Dent pitching a wet ball in great shape and having splendid support from the fielders. Whitey Alperman was the batting boy, landing two two-baggers and a single in five times up. Bill Bailey made a great running catch and Spencer pulled off one of the most brilliant running catches ever seen on the Pelicans' lot, grabbing Bailey's hot liner with his bare hand, after a long run.

Tommy Long crippled Jakey Atz at third base, nearly breaking Jakey's wrist and putting his thumb on the blink. Williams took Atz's place for the rest of the game.

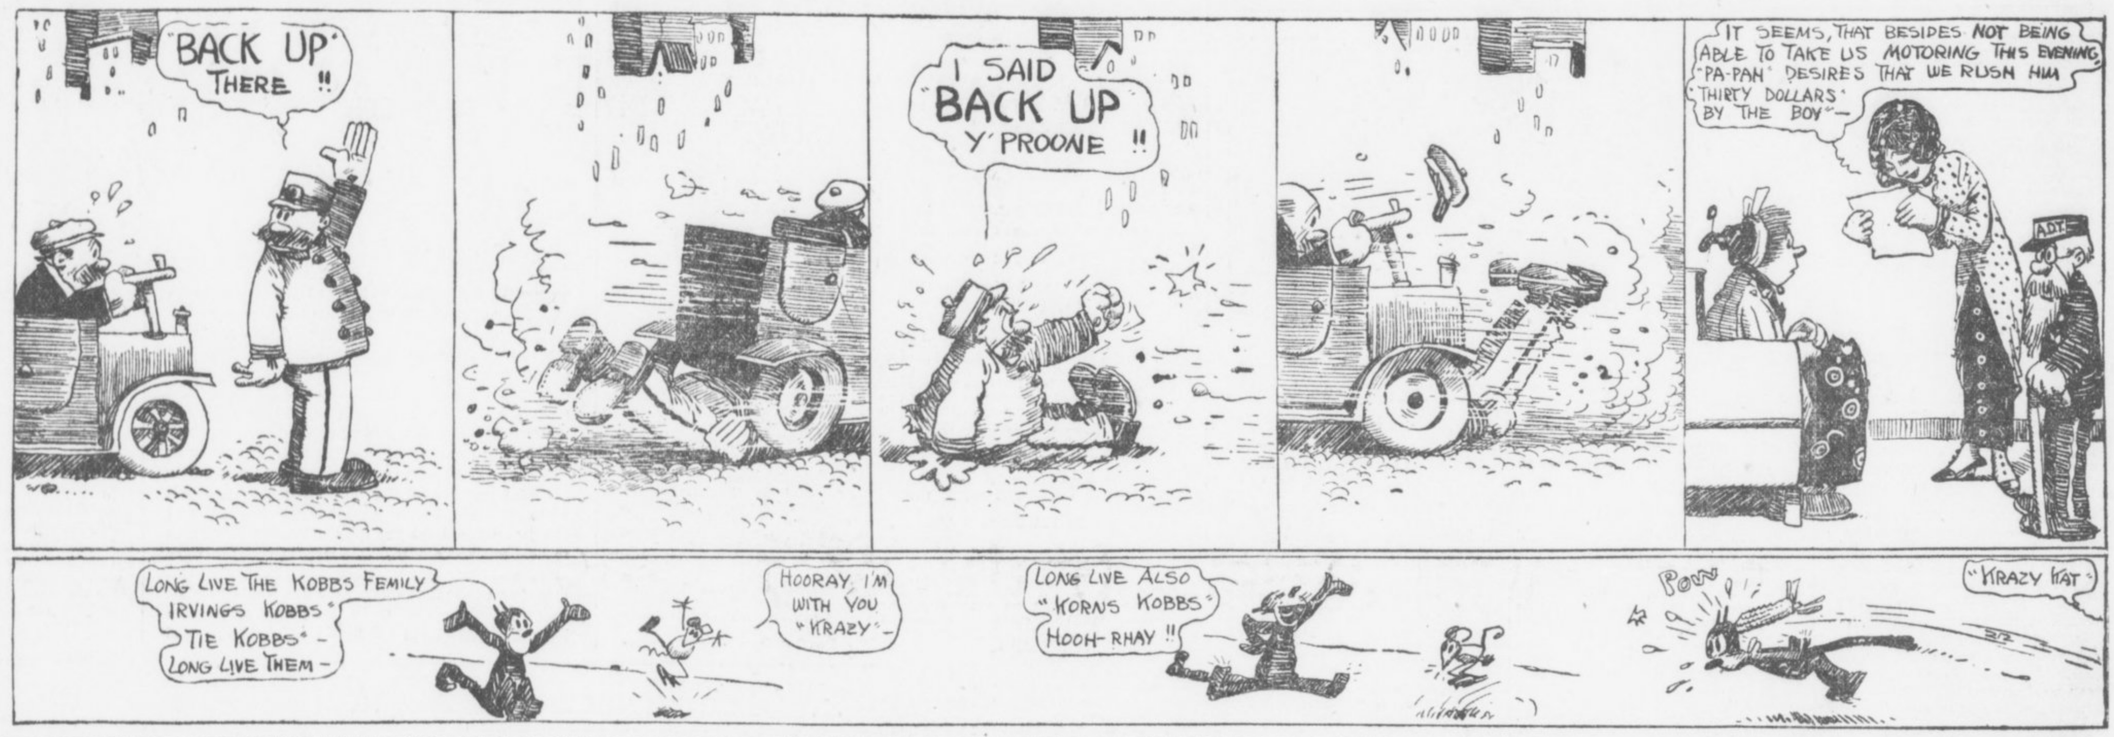
The Old Man Obeys Orders, Too Well



Dundee Faces Hard Task July 15

Murphy Is Tough Boy to Beat

By Left Hook.

THE case of Johnnie Dundee is a remarkable one.

Here is a classy boy, one of the top-notch featherweights of America, who, after splitting a draw decision with the world's champion of that division, voluntarily steps into the lightweight grade and invites trouble from the 133-pound battlers. And he is sure to find it.

Dundee chased Johnnie Kilbane around the Vernon ring until both were leg weary. As a reward for his agressiveness the Italian was given a draw. There was no argument, but that of the two, Dundee was the most willing to make a fight.

Following this affair Kilbane went back on the easy money trail after men like Fox and Jimmy Walsh. Dundee, to hold the respect of the public, announced that he would pass up the featherweights as a lot of tame and mediocre boxers, and jump into the lightweight division among a few real fighters.

There is little doubt what this move increased the popularity of the little Italian, but it was a step backward, according to the way the overmanaged boxer of to-day is handled, harking back to the days when a man signed a set of articles first and asked about the weight and reputation of his opponent afterwards.

As evidence of his good faith Dundee agreed to take on Ad Wolgast, a fighter from his heart out. Wolgast's broken hand caused the match to be called off at a time when both boys were putting in their last training licks.

* * *

DUNDEE then signed to box "Chicago" Jack White, with the understanding that the winner is to meet "Harlem" Tommy Murphy, the vicious veteran who recently beat Wolgast.

Dundee defeated White in twenty rounds and is now ready to start training for his twenty-round set-to with Tommy Murphy. Before the latter battle Dundee will taken on Tommy Dixon, July 4, but should have little trouble in defeating Jimmy Hurst's protege.

The Murphy battle, however, should prove one tough scrap for Dundee. The Harlemite has met the toughest lightweights in the game to-day and is really in line for a match with Ritchie. Many of the coast critics let out an awful howl when Rivers was given first chance at the title, claiming that Murphy was entitled to the match.

* * *

MURPHY'S latest achievement was a twenty-round victory over Ad Wolgast, but he has also defeated such stars as Owen Moran and Frankie Burns, besides giving McFarland a hard battle for twenty rounds.

Should Dundee manage to beat Murphy, no one in the world will be able to overlook him as a lightweight contender. But the task seems a difficult one. Dundee will be giving away about ten pounds in weight and it looks at this distance as if the extra poundage will be an awful handicap for Johnny. However, fighters of the Dundee type should be admired and he will not lack for admirers when he steps into the ring with Murphy.

Riders Will Dress in Asbestos

Fireproof Togs for 'Dromers

THE riders out at the local Motordrome lie awake nights trying to think of something they can put over on somebody else. They are always getting something new with this end in view. For instance, Morty Graves has sent off for a new motorcycle, Georges Renel has bought a lot of new parts for his motorcycle, Manager Noon Hudson has another suit of clothes, Harry Swartz has a new wife and Jack Prince always has a fresh shower up his sleeve that he lets out on race nights.

But it has remained for George Lockner to spring the newest thing—an asbestos suit of clothes. He has wired to St. Louis for one and expects it here in time for use at Wednesday night's races.

These asbestos suits were introduced by a St. Louis rider, Brownie Carslake, and are being rapidly adopted by the other riders.

When They Are Needed.

In motordrome racing there are two reasons why asbestos suits are needed.

One reason is that the blooming motorcycles, fed enormous quantities of gasoline and spitting fire like an old-time dragon, are constantly catching on fire. Naturally, this would be bad enough under ordinary circumstances, but the awful complication arises from the fact that they usually touch themselves off while going at very high speed. The machines are not supplied with brakes and the rider must always choose between sticking on and getting his clothes on fire or falling off and breaking his neck. Harry Lewis, one of the riders at the local Motordrome, caught on fire the afternoon of the opening meet, and only the presence of the riders and a battery of fire extinguishers made it possible to put him out. With an asbestos suit this danger is removed. A man may cook a bit while his machine is slowing down, but he will not blaze.

Useful in a Spill.

The other need for an asbestos suit comes when a fall occurs. Going at high speed, a man is likely to slide a hundred feet or so over the surface of the track. Frequently the friction of such a slide sets the clothes ablaze, and the spectacle of a man on fire—maybe with a lot of bones broken, too—is not uncommon at motordromes. With asbestos suits this danger is removed. No matter what the friction is, the clothes can not catch on fire. As the riders' suits soon become impregnated with oil and are occasionally dashed with gasoline, they are highly inflammable, and the fear of being burned to death will probably drive all the local riders to the asbestos-suit stunt.

Plans are going forward at the local 'drome for the meeting Wednesday night. The program which was rained out on Saturday night will be carried through at that time, with the Mayor Woodward Sweepstakes as the feature.

The Browns and White Sox divided a double-header yesterday, the Browns winning the first game, 2 to 0, and the White Sox the second by the same score.

The Pirates came up from behind in the eighth in their game against the Reds yesterday and pounded out three runs, which gave them a 5 to 4 victory.

The Naps and the Tigers divided a double-header yesterday, the Detroit aggregation winning the first game in the tenth and the Naps romping home with the second game.

The Tigers by scoring one run in the sixth inning of yesterday's game broke the string of unscored innings which Gregg, of the Naps, was compiling. Up to that time he had pitched 32 innings without yielding a run.

In the second game, Ed Walsh allowed the Browns nine hits and Weilman and Allison allowed the White Sox only four, but the White Sox hits came at opportune times, while Walsh kept the St. Louis hits so scattered that no runs resulted.

Coulon Meets Burns At Kenosha To-night

KENOSHA, WIS., June 23.—Johnny Coulon, bantamweight champion of the world, and Frankie Burns, the Jersey City bantam, are on the edge for their scheduled ten-round battle here to-night.

Much interest is being displayed in the affair, as this is to be the fourth meeting between the pair. Ever since Johnny was given a hair-line decision over Burns at New Orleans in twenty rounds on February 15, 1912, there has been a great deal of rivalry between the boys.

The other bouts between the bantams were no decision affairs and critics usually agreed that they were about even up. As this will be Coulon's recally first tough scrap in over a year fans are anxiously awaiting the outcome. Johnny is billed to meet Kid Williams in a twenty-round go on July 29 and his showing tonight will have much to do in the way the fans bet their money in the title set-to. Coulon rules a 10 to 8 favorite over the Jersey City boy.

FOXEN SAID TO ADMIT HE 'LAID DOWN'

By Percy H. Whiting.

OF course you can't believe all the second-hand, near-beer saloon information that is floating around, but one bit of rumor has drifted in that is worth publishing.

This information is that Bill Foxen admits that he "laid down" on the Atlanta club and purposely played for his release.

We didn't hear this first hand. We aren't on Bill's speaking list. But it came pretty straight and it sounds pretty reasonable.

* * *

THE story is that Foxen admits he played for his release here. He is said to attempt to justify himself with the following statement:

"I got in bad with the Atlanta club because I wouldn't go out boozing with the players. They got sore on me and made it as hard as they could. Under the laws of organized baseball there was only one way to get away. That was by losing games. So I lost games." That may not be the word-for-word admission, but that is probably about the gist of it.

* * *

CASES where players have been accused of "laying down" are plentiful enough in the annals of baseball, but this is perhaps the first time on record where a player has admitted his guilt in the matter.

While nobody in Atlanta feels inclined to excuse Foxen in this matter, it is a fact that the rules of baseball make it pretty hard for a player who is thrown into a team made up of souses and soreheads. He must play with them, "lay down" or leave baseball.

* * *

OF course the only manly thing to do is to see it through, no matter what the conditions are on the team. The public has no love for a quitter. The Atlanta public shows that fact every time Foxen visits the city—and always will as long as he comes here.

Their only regret is that they can not get a shot occasionally at the other member of the hold-out sketch, Pitcher Frock. They would dearly dote on giving him an occasional good time.

D. Brown Wins Perry Adair Cup

Plays 26 Holes to Down Block

THE Perry Adair Cup has become the property of Dowdell Brown. In the tournament just completed over the course of the Atlanta Athletic Club Brown won his way through four hard matches to victory.

Every match in the tournament was a moderately hard one for the winner. But in the second round he faced Hamilton Block in one of the greatest struggles ever witnessed on the East Lake course. The end of the eighteenth hole found them all even. They halved the rest of them straight through to the twenty-sixth hole, where Brown gained the advantage. Three of the four matches in the second round went into extra holes.

BOXING
News of the Ring Game

Four important bouts will be staged at Vernon, Cal., within the next five weeks. On June 24, Eddie Campi tackles Charley Ledoux; on July 4, Leach Cross meets Bud Anderson; on July 15, Tommy Murphy swaps punches with Johnny Dundee, and while on July 29 Johnny Coulon and Kid Williams fight for the bantamweight championship of the world.

* * *

Hammond, Ind., fight fans are rejoicing to-day over a declaration by Sheriff Whitaker that he would not interfere with boxing matches so long as the limit does not exceed ten rounds. It was the occasion of the home-coming of Jimmy Clabby, who recently defeated Eddie McGoorty. Clabby was banqueted on his return from Butte, Mont., where the bout took place.

* * *

Chicago fans are having a big laugh on Harry Trendall, the St. Louis lightweight. Recently Trendall was matched to meet Charlie White, but dodged the match when he heard of Charlie's hitting power, and instead he took on Eddie Murphy. The latter handed Trendall a neat lacing. White and Murphy are great friends and usually chum together when both are in Chicago.

* * *

Terry Nelson, Mike Saul, Spider Britt and Kid Young are some of the local boys who are simply pining to get into action in the near future. Saul and Nelson recently ruined a draw at the Auditorium and a return match between the pair should prove a corker.

* * *

The ringside weights for the return match between Jimmy Duffy and Jack Britton at Buffalo Monday night will be 136 pounds. The raise in the scale comes from Danny Morgan, Britton's manager.

* * *

Gunboat Smith has been made a 2 to 1 favorite over George Rodel, who meet at New York on June 27. The two heavyweights met about four months ago and, although Smith floored the Boer five times, he was unable to put him away.

* * *

Frankie Burns should give Johnny Coulon a tough battle when the two bantams hook up at Kenosha, Wis., on Monday night. Burns has met Johnny on several occasions and has always given a good account of himself.

* * *

Joe Golden, manager of Joe Thomas, is now a boxing promoter. Golden has matched "Wildcat" Ferns and Bobbie Dibbons for a 10-round bout to be staged in Pelican Park, New Orleans, on July 4. The welterweights are scheduled to go ten rounds.

* * *

Billy Nolan and Willie Ritchie have split. The fighter and manager could not agree on financial terms, and Willie has now decided to handle his own business for the present.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 23.—The Giants made a great finish to their Western trip, and I am now convinced that the New York club will win the pennant again. The Phillies appear to be gone, and I do not see any other team on the horizon or the schedule that can stop us.

What tripped up the Philadelphia club was what I had anticipated would stop it all through the season. The pitching staff cracked, and the rest of the team caved behind it. Both Seaton and Alexander, the two men who had carried most of the burden of the pitching so far in the race, were overworked, and the strain told. There are few pitchers who can appear three times a week, one week after another, and get away with it, and these two attempted to do just that. The strain of maintaining the lead also hurt Philadelphia's chances of grabbing the pennant. The Quakers are not altogether out of the fight yet, but I do not think they are the club which the Giants will be forced to beat now. If we once pull them behind, they are liable to go into several parts.

* * *

IT is hard to tell just which team will make the going for us from this point in the journey to its finish. For a long time, it had been my notion that Pittsburg would give the Giants the fight this season. The Pirates looked like one of the best baseball teams I had ever seen when they wound up the season last fall, and they should have been stronger this year. Baseball is certainly a funny thing.

* * *

THE Giants have just returned from one of the most successful Western trips ever made by a ball club. The only one which I have ever made since going out with a professional ball team that even approached it was the final swing around the circuit in 1911, when we grabbed the pennant in the last jump to the wire. On that junket we took eighteen out of twenty-two games, I think. We had to do it then, and we practically had to do it this time if the Giants were to beat Philadelphia back and stay in the race. We were all sitting around the lobby of the hotel in Cincinnati one night last week.

"It looks as if we have caught the Quakers," remarked McGraw.

"I did not expect that they would break as soon as this," volunteered "Larry" Doyle. "After they grabbed that series in Pittsburg it seemed as if they ought to have had renewed confidence."

"It was the cracking of their pitching staff and the spurt of the Giants that did it," answered McGraw. "When a team has been out ahead all season and is still playing good ball, but finds the second runner creeping up on them slowly in spite of their best efforts, it is just heartbreaking. That is one reason why I am none too particular about my team shooting out in front from the first. Every manager must count on at least one slump some time each year. We got ours in the spring. The Phillies are taking theirs now, and are liable never to come back.

"They've got some good pitchers," said Doyle.

"The pitching staff is all right, but overworked," replied McGraw. "Wait until they meet that string of stored-up double headers coming now with the pitching corps in its present run-down condition. The rest of the team I never could see. I never figured them as the pennant winners without wonderful pitching and luck. Baseball would be on the down grade if a club of the caliber of Philadelphia could take the championship in the National League."

JOE RIVERS STARTS HARD GRIND FOR RITCHIE BOUT

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23.—Joe Rivers, who has been at the Ocean Beach for the past few days doing light training, started to work in earnest yesterday. The Los Angeles lightweight put on the gloves in the Seal Rock gymnasium and surprised those who dropped into the big pavilion with his speed and cleverness.

Frank Carter, the welterweight that Manager Levy brought from Los Angeles, was his sparring partner, and the pair went three rounds. Rivers warmed up with four rounds of shadow boxing and was ready to go at a fast clip when Carter stepped into the inclosure. Joe stepped around the Mexican in lively fashion and showered blows on Carter.

CROSS AND LEDOUX TRAIN BEFORE A LARGE CROWD

LOS ANGELES, June 23.—A large crowd stood a 60-minute sun broil for the privilege of seeing Charley Ledoux, of Paris, France, and Leach Cross, of New York, box two rounds in the Vernon ring—and it was worth it, too.

Ledoux, blue-tighted to his neck, began operations with the punching bag. By actual count he landed on the leather just eleven times in nine minutes. Cross, attired in a cherry-colored makeup, stepped on the platform and made the bag beg for mercy.

RITCHIE IS IMPROVING; TO MAKE WEIGHT EASILY

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23.—Willie Ritchie demonstrated two facts in his first Sunday workout ahead of the Fourth of July bout. One is that his style has improved considerably over the days he was battling for recognition and the other is that he will not have the slightest difficulty in the world making 134 ringside and still show up strong. A good afternoon at the beach gave Joe Rivers one of the biggest crowds that has ever packed the pavilion to see boxers in training.

Or, as Bill Hallowell suggests, why not arm each jockey with a lance?

Even the worm will turn, as Confucius once remarked. For instance, the Pirates vary the monotony by winning a game with a margin of one run.

An expert informs us that the Tigers will be a strong team by the time August arrives. Therein they differ from the Browns, who show their greatest strength in December.

One is led to look askance at Mr. McGoorty's statement that the referee became excited and gave the decision to the wrong man. How could any human being become excited over a fight between Messrs. McGoorty and Clabby?

Our notion of easy money is to get $100 for refraining from holding converse with an umpire.

It was expected that these game would permit the staging of a little side issue battle between Ty Cobb and Joe Jackson, the sluggers of the league. But they did not. Cobb, because of a lame leg, was forced to retire in the third inning of the first game, and Jackson "sassed" an umpire a few innings later and was wigwagged out of the game.

Atlantans in Tennis Tourney in Orleans

The twenty-sixth annual tennis tournament for the championship of the South begins Monday on the courts of the New Orleans Lawn Tennis Club.

Men's singles, men's doubles and ladies' singles will be the three events. Consolation singles will also be held.

This cup was originally presented by The Atlanta Athletic Club. It has been won twice by Conrad B. Doyle, of Washington, and Dr. Nat Thornton, of Atlanta, and once each by T. R. Pell, of New York; R. C. Hunt, of California, and C. Y. Smith, of Atlanta.

Atlanta will be well represented at the meet. Carleton Smith, the present title holder, will go to defend his title. His partner in the doubles, Dr. Nat Thornton, will also attend.

B. M. Grant, Charles A. Sisson, E. S. Mansfield and E. V. Carter, Jr., are some of the others who will attend.

Smith and Mansfield will be paired in the doubles, as will Grant and Thornton. The other players will participate in the singles.

Writers Defend Play Barred in Germany

BERLIN, June 23.—The suppression of Hauptmann's "Festspiel" by the authorities of Breslau, because of the complaint made by the Crown Prince and many citizens that it gave too much praise to the French and not enough to the Prussian heroes, has caused angry protests from many literary men and others who are prominent in politic.

The Authors' Protective League entered a formal protest against what is termed the "brutal" prohibition of the play.

Granted Insurance After Lung Trouble

As many cases of Lung Trouble start with a cold or a cough, the best advice that can be given is to get rid of the cold or cough as quickly as possible. Otherwise more serious troubles are likely to follow. If the medicines you are now taking do not bring relief, try Eckman's Alterative, the remedy for Throat and Lung Troubles, which has stood the test of time. Investigate this case:

237 Dean St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Dear Sirs: About a year and a half ago my health rapidly failed until at the end of six months my weight had fallen to 129 pounds. I was troubled with night sweats, a severe cough and was very weak. About this time I consulted a physician, who told me my lungs were affected. Not satisfied, I went to another doctor, who, after examining me, said that I was in the first stages of consumption. At this point I started to take Eckman's Alterative. The night sweats stopped almost immediately, my cough became looser and gradually disappeared. My weight is now 142 pounds and my physician has pronounced me perfectly sound—which, together with the fact that I have been accepted by two different insurance companies for insurance, makes me sure of my entire recovery by Eckman's Alterative."

(Affidavit) W. E. GEE.

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in case of severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all of Jacobs' Drug Stores and other leading druggists. GRADY HOSPITAL BARS OUTSIDE PATIENTS

Man From Warwick Last of 18 Sent Back — More Room Is Needed, Says Summerall.

Dr. W. B. Summerall, superintendent of the Grady Hospital, Monday issued a warning to non-residents of Atlanta that they must not send patients to the Grady Hospital. His announcement was a result of a most pathetic case of a young man in the last stages of an infectious disease, who was sent here from Warwick, Ga., by public subscription. Dr. Summerall is preparing to return him to his native town.

"The hospital is too small to accommodate legitimate cases," he declared. "We have been turning down about twelve applications a day from citizens of Atlanta. We certainly can not throw open our doors to persons outside. Yet in the last three months eighteen persons, hopelessly diseased, have been dumped on Atlanta from nearby towns, some of them outside the State. Some persons seem to think they can rid themselves of their unpleasant obligations by sending these helpless ones to Atlanta and forcing us to treat them.

Will Send Outsiders Back.

"We have sent each of the eighteen persons back to their homes, and we will continue this policy."

Early Monday the hospital was notified that there was a sick man at the Terminal Station. They responded to the call and found him, Ernest Harris, of Warwick, Ga., hopelessly ill.

The ambulance surgeon ordered him to Grady, although the hospital has no adequate facilities. Harris was too sick to be left on the streets, so he was taken to the clinic room and there given attention.

Harris told Dr. Summerall that he had had no medical treatment for four months and that he had not been able to get a bath for a month.

Doctors Turned Him Away.

He said there were two physicians in his town, but they had refused to treat him because he had no money. Finally, his condition became so wretched, he said, that a public subscription was taken and he was given a ticket and put on the train for Atlanta.

Dr. Summerall conferred with City Warden Thomas Evans and a railroad ticket back to Warwick has been obtained for Harris. Dr. Summerall declared it was the duty of every community, as long as it was able, to provide for its own mendicants.

"We need six times our present capacity to take care of the negroes in Atlanta who need treatment and four times as much capacity for the white people," said Dr. Summerall.

Hearer Dies as Text Is Read by Pastor

The deceased was well known in Atlanta, especially among railroad men. A wife and eight children survive him. Funeral services were held Monday morning at the residence, 6 Guyton Street.

"The prejudice which may have existed among society people regarding new dances is certainly disappearing."

Women's Attire and Nude in Art Scored By Dr. Dunbar Ogden

An appeal for decency in life and art was made by the Rev. Dr. Dunbar Ogden at the Central Presbyterian Church Sunday night. The extreme fashion of woman's attire of the present day was declared by him to be a menace to the morals and the nude in art was even more vicious.

Dr. Ogden referred to a number of local instances to illustrate his sermon. Talking of the moving picture film, "Quo Vadis," he said: "We have the illustration of how Rome threw decency to the winds as it indulged in bacchanalian revelry. History tells us of how Rome tottered and fell. Our present trend is toward the moral disintegration which destroyed Rome."

Referring to the recent exhibition of art in the show windows of Atlanta stores, he declared their exhibition to be a crime, and that punishment as such should be meted out to the exhibitors.

Jamaica Is Worried by U. S. Banana Tax

KINGSTON, JAMAICA, June 23.—The receipt of a cablegram from Washington announcing that America will impose a tax on Jamaica bananas caused consternation among the planters here.

The banana industry is the principal one of Jamaica, and as most of the fruit goes to the United States the tax will be a serious blow to it.

It was announced Jamaica will establish a quarantine against Hayti, where bubonic plague is raging.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Keith Bill at the Forsyth.

The headline feature of the bill of vaudeville at the Forsyth this week is Gertrude Vanderbilt, the ever-popular little star of musical comedy. She and George Moore hold a position in vaudeville that has never been reached by any other singing and dancing duo.

The big extra added feature will be "Ideal," the champion lady swimmer and diver, who, Professor John Aldredge, of Columbia University, declares to be the most perfectly formed woman in the world. "Ideal" is going to give an exhibition of fancy swimming and diving in a tank pool sunk in the Forsyth stage.

Other features are the Six Musical Cuttys, pretty Minnie Allen, Doc O'Neil, comedian; Dorothy Richmond and her company, in a sketch, and the Four Hayama Japs, gymnasts. Matinee this afternoon.

"Quo Vadis" at the Grand.

"Quo Vadis," witnessed by thousands at the Grand at daily matinee and night exhibitions last week, commences its second week at the big theater with matinee and night performances to-day. The second week of the engagement of the pictures was arranged to take care of the great demand for seats from people who could not get accommodations last week.

The 10,000 feet of Italian film, in three acts and eight scenes, makes an entertainment continuing two and a quarter hours, and without a single second that fails to interest. The picture is all that has been said for it and more, too.

"The Merry Whirl" at the Bijou.

This week's attraction for the Bijou gives promise of being one of the most interesting and pleasing of the summer season. It is called "The Merry Whirl." There is splendid opportunity for good comedy work and the introduction of catchy musical numbers, in which the chorus takes a prominent part.

"The Merry Whirl" is said to be one of the most pretentious productions that will be seen this season at the Bijou.

Matinees will be given every afternoon at 3 o'clock, except Monday and Saturday. On these days the matinees will take place at 2:30 and 4. Night performances, as usual, at 7:30 and 9.

The Sunday American goes everywhere all over the South. If you have anything to sell The Sunday American is "The Market Place of the South." The Sunday American is the best advertising medium.

CONTESTANTS IN PONY RACE LET CHANCES SLIP

Many Votes To Be Had for the Asking—Energetic Ones Have Better Opportunity.

Every day persons come into The Georgian and American offices and order the paper sent to this or that address, saying nothing about votes. If these persons had been approached by one of the boys or girls in the pony contest the candidate would have been rewarded by a good batch of votes.

This only goes to show that votes are to be had for the asking.

Mail orders from the country, too, show that the boys and girls outside the city are not getting every subscriber they could.

Only Hustlers Win.

Contestants should remember that anyone will feel kindly toward the boy or girl asking them to subscribe for The Georgian and American. Whoever subscribes gets his money's worth, and the candidate gets the votes.

The 22 ponies and the 44 watches are going to be given away. Some one is going to win them. They will go to the contestants who show the greatest amount of activity, who use the greatest amount of intelligent effort.

There is no notch into which a weak, vacillating candidate will fit.

Optimism Big Help.

The idle dreamers and "wishful" candidates will gravitate to the bottom just as surely as a stone sinks in water, or a short-winded man falls behind in a foot race.

Optimism helps every time, and the candidate who believes he can get votes will get them.

Remember, the bonus offer for clubs of five still is in effect. If you need a subscription to complete a club, tell people. They will be just that much more ready to help you.

Big gains were shown in the standings yesterday. The race is becoming lively.

SUPERIOR, WIS., June 23.—Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of President Wilson, on Thursday will take part in a social center entertainment to be given in Madison, Wis. She will sing several songs and dance with the members of the Social Center Club.

Governor Sulzer of New York has just appointed Miss Wilson a member of a commission to investigate the affairs and management of the prisons and reformatories of the State.

U. S. Converted to Need of Headlines

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Salesmen have been making a practice of displaying "pure food" decisions to customers, claiming products of rival concerns were condemned, when as a matter of fact the foods had been declared "O. K." To prevent this, a "headline" will be put over the top of every decision hereafter, stating clearly whether the manufacturer or the Government won.

Heretofore "it was frequently necessary to read the entire notice of judgment in order to learn whether a penalty had been entered or the defendant acquitted," the Department of Agriculture admits in a statement issued to-day. Salesmen took advantage of the average dealer's unwillingness to dig out the real meaning of decisions.

Airman Fined for Aeroplane Collision

PARIS, June 23.—A verdict was delivered in an action brought by two airmen, Captains Dickson and Thomas, to determine who was responsible for an aviation accident in Milan in 1910 when two aeroplanes were in collision.

The judge decided that Dickson was to blame and ordered him to pay $1,000 damages to Thomas and $2,000 damages to the makers of the aeroplanes.

CORONER SEEKS VITAL ORGANS OF PAINTER

JACKSONVILLE, June 23.—The fight over the possession of the vital organs of the late Edward Okie Painter reached a tense pitch to-day when Coroner C. D. Abbott left for Baltimore to contest the injunction preventing the removal of the organs to Jacksonville. The injunction was requested by the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company, one of whose policies Painter held to the amount of $20,000, and which has been particularly active in the investigation of incidents surrounding the death of the fertilizer man. The company has announced that it desires a further investigation.

Coroner Wants Organs.

Coroner Abbott has been given until Wednesday to show cause why the injunction should not be granted. He said to-day that he would conduct personally the fight in Baltimore for the possession of the remains, presenting his claims as the only person entitled to conduct an official autopsy. He was accompanied by Deputy Sheriff L. R. Haddock.

The departure of the Coroner and the detention of the vital organs in Baltimore necessitated the postponement of the inquest over Painter's body which had been set for to-day. It probably will be held Thursday or Friday immediately upon the return of the officers from Baltimore.

Grave Still Guarded.

Meanwhile deputies, under Sheriff Dowling, are maintaining their nightly vigil at Painter's grave at the insistent request of Mrs. Painter. The widow seems obsessed by the idea that ghouls have plotted to steal the body, her friends declare.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Mrs. Marie Hubbard, the Costa Rican wife of an American merchant in Brussels, before sailing for San Jose was anxious to know if there would be many American men on board. She said she desired to travel with Americans only.

"Every woman in Central and South America wants to marry an American and live in the United States," declared Mrs. Hubbard, "for in this country she is free. There will be a revolution in Central America some day, and it will be led by the women."

COTTON DROPS AS LONGS LIQUIDATE

NEW YORK, June 23.—Influenced by weak Liverpool cables, the cotton market opened easier to-day with first prices at a net decline of 4 to 7 points from Saturday's final. Sentiment was more bearish than for some time past, owing to the dullness of Liverpool summer positions. Weather conditions over Sunday were favorable; also crop advices. However, the buying was rather general on and after the call, resulting in prices rallying some 2 to 5 points in most active positions from the initial level.

During the forenoon the selling became general and looked as if it came from the same source as Saturday, causing the market to weaken, with prices declining some 7 to 13 points from the previous close. The buying was very light and scattered.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: July, 12.01; August, 11.89; October, 11.40; January, 11.33.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: July, 12.38; August, 12.02; October, 11.47; January, 11.49.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, June 23.—Weather conditions continued favorable over Sunday with a little rainfall in the Atlantics. Some good scattered showers in the central States and west Texas; temperatures normal; no excesses, warm nights, indications are for partly cloudy to fair and warm weather; some scattered showers.

Washington predicts a week of fair, warm weather—just as needed. Liverpool is poor in all departments; futures about 2 points lower than due; spots 5 points down; sales only 6,000 bales. Political news continues unfavorable and the repeated disappointments at the allegra is arriving at a point to bound to w itself in a further depression.

The press reports a congestion of old crop. Egyptian cotton in the warehouses in Alexandria with an apparent falling off in the demand. A feature of the spinning situation, especially in America, is the dullness in fine yarns.

The following report from Canton, Miss., shows the active fight made against the boll weevil: "The report says that $250 was distributed in prizes; 450,000 weevils were brought in, representing almost one-tenth of the weevils caught in the county."

This market opened about 7 points lower and weakened steadily. December selling to 11.45 in the second hour. New York reported some influential selling. Consumption prospects affected by the unfavorable political and financial situation is the principal bearish argument.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Hayden, Stone & Co.: Sentiment is now very conservative and it will require lower prices to bring about aggressive buying.

Logan & Bryan: Fewer moderate purchases on further recessions.

Miller & Co.: Think the bears have again sold themselves into a trap.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 23.—J. M. Anderson says: "The volume of trade to-day was only moderate, the buying and selling was pretty evenly divided. There was selling by the Wall Street interests, who were prominent on that side on Saturday, but a good scattered demand for contracts was found on the slight decline. Liverpool was a buyer and some of the Saturday sellers covered. Weather continues very favorable and local sentiment favors a further decline.

Texas wires: "Reports from all over State most promising; in fact, present conditions so perfect that anything to happen must be detrimental, as there is practically no room for improvement. There are reliable prospects for heavy new crop movement from south Texas in August and some even second half of July European business so far very unsatisfactory; no demand."

The census report on Thursday, July 3, at noon, Eastern time, will give acreage of cotton this year and condition of crop to June 25.

Liverpool announces that Cotton Exchange will close at noon Saturdays and open at 11 a. m. on Mondays during June, July and August. The market will be closed July 11 and 12.

New York wires: "Pell and Baruch steady sellers."

The Memphis Commercial-Appeal has the following on the condition of the cotton crop for the week:

"The weather of the past week was very favorable for the growth of cotton over the entire belt. Temperatures were high, with good showers in west and clear skies in the remainder of the belt—just the kind of weather needed. The plant made good progress, although most of its energy was occupied in overcoming the check placed upon it by the cool weather of the previous week, and for this reason its actual advancement was more real than apparent. As a result of the cool weather, the plant over the entire belt is a bit small, although probably slightly larger than last year but it is making a lushy growth and shows the health that accompanies a good tap-root and favorable soil conditions.

"Good rains in Texas and portions of Oklahoma supplied the one thing needed in these States for the best growth of the plant. Cultivation and fruitation that has been a pronounced characteristic of the crop all season was maintained throughout the week and soil is perhaps better worked than ever before at this season. The rains and the fact that farmers were in the wheat harvest allowed some grass to gain headway in in portions of Texas, but the situation is one that a few days' work will soon cure. The other western States, the central valley, Alabama and nearly all of Georgia are nearly 100 per cent, with soil in excellent condition. In the Carolinas and a small portion of Georgia a few days more of warm, open weather are needed to further cultivation and the growth of the plant. Arkansas and the central valley are beginning to need rain, but no material damage will result should dry weather continue for another week. The one complaint reported was of boll weevil in Mississippi and Louisiana and isolated sections of Texas and Arkansas. There is a big crop of the pest in Mississippi and Louisiana, but farmers are fighting them under the direction of Government experts and are confident that the most localities they have them whipped."

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, June 23.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map is perfect, shows partly cloudy in the Atlantics and West Texas; fair rest of belt. Fine rains in the Atlantics; some good rains scattered in the central States and West Texas; absolutely normal temperatures; no excesses; warm nights.

Washington's forecast for week, "Warm and generally fair weather, with probably a little coming week in the Southern States; such showers as may occur will be local and widely scattered."

DRY GOODS TRADE GOOD; COLLECTIONS ARE NORMAL

CHICAGO, June 23.—Marshall Field & Co., in their weekly review of the dry goods trade, say:

"General dry goods business for the past week has shown up well in comparison with the figures for the same period a year ago, with collections about normal. On future business the average sales per man have been higher than for any corresponding week since 1907, and they report that buyers are purchasing more freely than is usual at this season.

"Retailers are doing good business on all sheer summer fabrics and wearing apparel. Wholesale stocks are becoming well cleaned up in preparation for inventory, there being excellent response to the advertising of special offerings.

"The shipping department has been kept fairly busy taking care of immediate orders, the greater percentage of which were received from nearby States, although Eastern business placed through our New York office has been heavy."

STOCKS RECOVER SATURDAY'S LOSS

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 23.—The oversold condition of the stock market made it very sensitive to buying at the opening to-day, with the result that prices of nearly all the standard issues jumped upward.

Bullish sentiment was helped by favorable comments from banking interests upon the proposed currency reforms advocated by President Wilson.

Canadian Pacific opened 1⅝ higher, but profit-taking developed which carried away ¾ of the advance. United States Steel common began at a gain of ½, but at the end of a half hour the upturn had been increased to 1 point. Among the other advances were Lehigh Valley, 1⅜; Erie preferred, ¾; St. Paul, 1¼; Chesapeake and Ohio, 1; American Telegraph and Telephone, ⅝; American Can, ⅝; Amalgamated Copper, ⅜; Reading, 1¼; Southern Pacific, ¾, and Union Pacific, 1.

Missouri Pacific began with a fractional loss, but recovered. Baltimore and Ohio was unchanged at the outset, but later lost ½ on selling pressure. American Car and Foundry lost ¼, then recovered. Much of the buying represented covering by board room shorts. At the end of half an hour the buying movement had diminished.

The curb market was steady.

There was more liquidation on the London Stock Exchange at the opening. Dealings in Americans in London were small. Canadian Pacific in London was firm.

The strong tone which prevailed at the opening was maintained through the forenoon with issues making gains of 2 or more points. Union Pacific was the most active of the railroad issues, advancing 2⅜ to 144⅜, but an excellent advance was made in Canadian Pacific, points to 216⅞. Reading continued on the upward movement, reaching 157¼, a net gain of 2¼. Copper was up ⅜ from the opening, a net gain of 1⅝. Steel, Northern Pacific, Lehigh Valley and all other leading stocks after slight recessions made worthy gains.

Call money loaned at 2 per cent.

OPINION ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, June 23.—Bartlett, Frazier & Co.: Wheat—The weather map shows some precipitation in Canadian Northwest, but very little in the American Northwest. There does not seem much in news to cause any important change in values.

Corn—Since Saturday there have been good rains over the entire corn belt. Prices will doubtless be lower to-day, the extent of the decline depending on the volume of liquidation.

Oats—As in corn, the precipitation will doubtless be more or less of a depressing factor.

Provisions—General sentiment continues bullish, but an easier corn market may give us some decline.

GRAIN PROSPECTS EXCELLENT.

CHICAGO, June 23.—W. B. Snow wires from Minneapolis: "Western Iowa and Southern and Central Minnesota good. Early wheat heading north to Mankota. Wheat and oats, hard, and color good. Corn late in Missouri Valley bottoms, but in every way promising. General crop prospects above average."

The same party wires from Omaha June 21: "Nebraska has begun harvesting the largest wheat crop in her history, with a larger rate of yield than was ever made by any State east of the Rockies. Corn crop perfect."

VISIBLE SUPPLY CHANGES.

Railroad Continues Train-Bandit Search

WAYCROSS, June 23.—No developments have been reported here to-day in the hunt for the Kirkland freight train robebrs, but it is known that the search, while abandoned by Coffee County officers, has by no means been given up by agents of the Atlantic Coast Line.

It is believed the men now hiding in Roundabout Swamp will soon be forced to leave the swamp for food supplies, and then an effort will be made to capture them.

Schools by Parcel Post Latest Wrinkle

WASHINGTON, June 23.—One, two and four room school houses are now sent by parcel post by the United States Bureau of Education. The school houses are models on which to erect structures in small communities.

They are of cardboard, architecturally correct and altogether complete in hygienic detail.

These models will be of great assistance to school authorities in small rural communities which can not afford to engage a school architect.

Hot Weather 'Don'ts' Given by U. S. Expert

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The last word in hot weather "don'ts" was issued in brief form to-day by Dr. Carl Alsberg, who succeeded Dr. Harvey W. Wiley as chief of the United States Bureau of Chemistry. Here are his "don'ts:"

"Don't eat to excess.

"Don't wear too many clothes.

"Don't drink ice cold beverages.

"Don't look at the thermometer and keep thinking how hot it is."

FIVE FRANKFORTERS COMING.

"The Five Frankforters," a comedy from the German, based on an episode in the life of the famous Rothschilds and a novelization of which appeared in The Georgian, will be among the early attractions to be seen in this city the coming season. The play was produced in New York last season by the Shuberts and it is under this management that the local engagement will be played.

Poultry, Pet and Live Stock

The Hen and Her Cost of Maintenance Versus the Cow

Interesting Facts and Figures Concerning Fowl and Beast—Note on Standard Revision Committee.

Edited by JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL.

By a comparison of the intrinsic value of the individual hen and her cost of maintenance we find that, taking into consideration the value of each, the net profit from the hen exceeds that from the cow. Forty good laying hens are worth about the same as the average dairy cow, considered in the light of practical utility only. Forty good utility pullets given good, fair average treatment will give a profit for a year of at least $50 net, taken at a low estimate for price of eggs at that. If you would go to work and give them special or scientific care the proceeds would be largely increased. Now where is the average dairy cow (common stock), with average care and no more, that will yield anything like $50 after paying expenses of feed, etc.? I will venture the assertion that they will not net their owners more than half that amount. I make this assertion not for the discouragement of dairy interests in the South, not by any manner of means, for we need increased dairy in the South. There is ample room for both the poultry and dairy business, but let it be known by those who have been inclined to think slightly of the poultry part that it needs no overestimation at my hands. The little industrious hen is ready at any time to demonstrate her ability along these lines if only given half a chance for a living. Taken on land that is even too poor to make good grazing land poultry will do well on it, and if the droppings are properly cared for and used on land when the green stuff is raised, the land can soon be made to produce almost anything in the way of crops, at the same time you are reaping a handsome profit. You can get expect, however, that poultry will thrive without care. The trouble with poultry, therefore, is that it has been neglected. The every-day, old-fashioned farmer thinks the hen below his dignity and of little value, and for that reason he has not given her the care that other matters have received at his hands. I say old-fashioned farmers to distinguish them from the up-to-date kind who are fully aware of the value of the hen as compared with the cow and the hog.

Now, friends, wake up and see which class of farmers you belong to, and if you find you are with the out-of-date kind I would advise you to lose no time in flopping over to the kind that are now in the lead. You will be in good company, as well as a money-making crowd. There is a saying that the hen will eat anything the hog will and produce much better results. I would like to see the farmers of the South raise more fowls, and more pork, too, for that matter; but give me the chickens.

Standard Revision Committee Meeting at Indianapolis in July.

There will be a meeting of the Standard Revision Committee appointed to revise the American Standard of Perfection for the 1915 edition at the Washington Hotel, Indianapolis, beginning Monday, July 7, and continuing as many days as is necessary to transact the business to come before that body. This is an important meeting to all poultrymen who are in any way interested in the breeding or exhibiting of thoroughbred poultry, no matter of what kind. The meeting was located at Indianapolis, one of the most central points, to accommodate poultrymen from the North, South or East and West. The wish of the committee is that all who are interested in having any changes made in the standard of their breed, or who may be interested in the admission of some new breed, will be on hand and personally lay their claims before the committee. Of course all correspondence will be given every consideration possible, but it's so much more satisfactory to be able to talk a matter over with the parties interested. It would be well for all who are interested to make an effort to meet the committee.

If you can not be there write your wishes to any member of the committee, who will lay your claim before the committee as a whole.

The members are Reese V. Hicks, Topeka, Kans., chairman; W. S. Russell, Ottumwa, Iowa; A. C. Smith, Waltham, Mass.; E. C. Branch, Lee Summit, Mo.; W. C. Pierce, Indianapolis, Ind.; J. H. Drevenstedt, Buffalo, N. Y.; Richard Oke, London, Ont.; F. J. Marshall, College Park, Ga.

ONE of the greatest drawbacks to poultry-raising in the South is lice. They kill more little chicks than all the diseases combined, and when a hen is full of lice you can not expect her to lay many eggs. However, if you start in time you can get rid of these pests without very much trouble. Cleanliness is the main thing to consider; keep the house cleaned out, and once a week, at least, spray thoroughly all the roosts, dropping boards and nests with Pratt's or Conkey's Lice Liquid. They are both good preparations, and are guaranteed to kill. It is also a good plan to use lice powder; a 25c box of Conkey's Lice Powder will dust about 75 hens, and if used in connection with Lice Liquid you can soon have your flock free from these pests and you can soon see the good results from the increased egg production.

ARE your baby chicks lousy? Better examine them, and if they are get a package of Conkey's or Pratt's Head Lice Ointment, prepared especially for baby chicks; rub a little back of the head and under each wing; it will positively kill every louse and not injure the chick. 10c and 25c package.

IT IS NOT a good plan to feed much corn during the hot weather. A great many brands of Scratch Feeds that are offered have about three-fourths corn. The Red Comb brand has only a small percentage, and is by far the best Scratch Feed sold in this market. $2.25 per 100 pounds.

THIS is a good time to feed mash feed. The Red Comb Mash is a perfectly balanced ration, just the thing for the hens, also fine for baby chicks. $2.25 per 100 pounds.

BOARD WANTED.

WANTED—Board by three refined young men in private family; Grant Park section preferred. Address Park, Box 1, care Georgian. 37-20-6

WANTED—Accommodations for the Georgia legislators. They are coming in now and will be in session at the State Capitol from June 25 for FIFTY days. All of them are on the outlook for nice, comfortable and home-like places to eat their meals, or to board or to rent. Many of the places these legislators had last year did not suit them and they desire to find something better. All the legislators will read The Georgian—that's certain. Their attention will be called day after day to the "Legislators' Accommodations" column on the Want Ad pages of The Georgian. This will be a big advantage to you. So if you have eating or boarding places or have rooms, apartments or houses for rent, your ad should be under the "Legislators' Accommodations" heading. An investment of a few cents will keep your house full for the next three months. Phone or send in your ad at once.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Julius Brown Home Placed on Market

Residence Noted for Antiques. Traders Exchange Properties. More Building on Peachtree.

One of the finest of the old-time homes on the South Side, the Julius Brown place, at the northwest corner of Washington and Rawson Streets, has been put up for sale in the real estate market through a well-known real estate agency. A sign has been hung out.

The Brown mansion is a three-story brick affair with many rooms. Years ago it was famed for its collection of pictures and Oriental novelties brought from abroad by the owner. North of it is the lot owned and occupied by the late Governor Joseph E. Brown, which was bought recently from the English-Commercial High School.

Exchange of Properties.

The Edwin P. Ansley real estate agency has announced the sale of 442 South Pryor Street, 50 by 170 feet, a two-story, 14-room house, to Mr. Morehead for Mrs. Lucie C. Christian, for $6,800, and of a vacant lot, 25 by 95 feet, on Edgewood Avenue, 50 feet east of the northeast corner of Boulevard and Edgewood, for Mr. Morehead to Mrs. Christian, for $3,500. This was in the nature of a swap.

Sale of Cottage.

C. F. Coppedge has bought from J. F. Schilling a cottage on a 64 by 211 foot lot on Highland Avenue for $2,600, and expects later to improve with twin apartments. This is near Virginia Avenue. The deal was handled by I. W. Harrell, of the George P. Moore agency, who also has announced the sale to James K. Polk for a client a 100 by 220 foot vacant lot on the west side of Germania Avenue, west of Decatur, for $950 cash.

Residences for Peachtree.

Robert Zahner has begun work on a handsome residence which he will erect on the west side of Peachtree Road facing Lakeview Avenue, a few hundred feet south of the estate of Colonel Walter P. Andrews.

J. J. McGrath is finishing his attractive two-story home on Peachtree Road north of the south entrance to the Capital City Country Club.

Dillard Jacobs will soon build on Peachtree Road near the McGrath place.

Do You THINK While You Are Dressing?

The Time Used in Dressing Need Not Be Wasted

(Copyright.)

Man in the process of evolution has got rid of his fur, or feathers, and every day he must put on something to take the place of fur, and every night he must take off the artificial clothing.

One old man in the State of New Jersey killed himself and left a note saying that he died because he was so tired of buttoning and unbuttoning clothes.

There is apparently no greater waste of time than the time that is spent in dressing and undressing.

Bathing, shaving for men and powdering your nose for women, finding what you want to wear and putting it on—it is a tiresome part of every day.

BUT—

The hours in which a human being grows and develops mentally are the hours of solitude.

And a great many of us are practically never alone, except when we are getting dressed or undressed.

Sleep is a time of idleness—no growth there.

When we are with others we listen, learn perhaps, and debate, but we don't really THINK WITH INTENSITY.

The one thing that makes you more of a man than you were last year is intense, solitary thought.

Why not say to yourself: Since I must spend at least 330 hours a year in dressing and undressing, in bathing and shaving and looking for my collar button, I'll also spend that time IN THINKING?

Do you know how many men spend 300 hours a year in actual concentrated thought?

Not one in a thousand.

Suppose you see what you can make out of the hours lost in putting on and taking off the artificial fur and feathers and how much you can grow in the thinking.

Bacon felt that the mind was developed by reading, talking, and writing.

And he said:

Writing maketh an exact man.

Speaking maketh a ready man.

Reading maketh a full man.

(We quote the learned gentleman from memory, which is necessary when you write editorials on a railroad train.)

Reading fills you with knowledge, speaking makes you quick or ready, writing makes you exact—true.

But more important than reading, writing or speaking IS THINKING.

The real YOU lives inside of your brain alone. And it works at its best when you are alone.

Aristotle taught Alexander the Great walking up and down with the young prince that he might become wise and strong at the same time—that is what they call the peripatetic method of intellectual development.

Why don't you educate yourself in thought as you march up and down from the bed to the bathroom, from the rough towel to the safety razor, and so on through the long, tiresome and usually wasted process of dress?

THE OLD ROMANS

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THEY strutted into the bar room,
Three boys—they were nothing more;
They ordered their drinks with grins and winks,
While their heels hit hard on the floor.
When one of them grew less frisky
And seemed half ready to sink,
Cried the others, "Aw, one more whisky!
That's a good old Roman drink!"

Then I thought of the real "Old Romans"
That I knew long years ago,
When we stuck to the "corn" from night till morn
As fast as the stuff could flow.
There was Billy O'Keefe, of Denver—
Too bad poor Billy is dead
He could pack away three quarts a day
And never rattle his head.

There was Jack McGee of the Morning Bee,
And Flynn of the Fourth Estate,
Larry McCale of the Portland Mail—
All dead before thirty-eight.
There was Blake of the Brooklyn Bugle,
And Grant of the Memphis Sun,
And a dozen more, or maybe a score,
Whisky got them, one by one.

I felt the tear that unbidden starts
When I thought (it hurt like a knife)
Of the nimble brains and the golden hearts
All stilled in the prime of life.
Then I walked from the noisy bar room
And muttered a prayer to God
For the souls of the real "Old Romans"
Now dreamless under the sod.

"I Used To Be"

How many times have you yourself heard men, standing up against a bar, bragging about what they USED to be? Perhaps some were telling about the good jobs they ONCE had; or maybe another one—with the shell of a ONCE fine body—was telling what a great athlete he USED to be, how he ONCE did "the hundred yards in 93-5," but could not now even run for a car without blowing like a grampus. You will also notice that these men usually drink WHISKEY—because, as they put it, it has a stronger "KICK" than other drinks. What better word could define it than KICK? Look around you at the men it has KICKED out of good jobs, good health and good homes into the land of USED TO BE.

HAL COFFMAN.

The Dictograph

The Dictograph, He Says, Is the Electric Symbol of the New Age, of Which the Newspaper Is the Prophet, in Which the Perils of Privacy Will be Matched by Powers of Publicity.

WRITTEN FOR THE GEORGIAN

By REV. DR. JOHN E. WHITE

Pastor Second Baptist Church

ALL the real problems of society have been anticipated. The progress of modern times is manifest in the good answers we are making to ancient questions.

The Dictograph, for instance, is the New Invention of which Old Necessity is the Mother. The Celestial Society of Olympus, which the Romans created to furnish ideals and to set up standards of judgment on mundane matters, considered it.

Momus reported to Jupiter that the great evil among men was secrecy and deceit. He complained against Jupiter that he ought to have provided a glass window in every human breast, just over the heart, so that the inward truth of men's thoughts would be accessible to everybody, so that deceit would have been impossible.

He made such a row about it that he was kicked out of Heaven.

The Dictograph is a sop to Momus, but the fate of Momus is a warning to the dictographer. The application of this little Edisonic device to human affairs will arouse all the modern pagan Furies.

Some Possibilities.

Another Edward Bellamy may now tell us of its development and application to progress in the year A. D. 2500. The addition of a photographic attachment was the next step of invention to increase its effectiveness.

In the highly organized society of the year 2,500 the government had provided Dictographs in every home, hotel room and private office. A central receiving station was arranged for the record of disgraceful family disputes, star-chamber conferences and political conspiracies.

The photographic device was employed for Pan-Hellenic ballrooms, with a special corps of operators between 3 and 6 o'clock in the morning, to obtain truthful pictures of the "tango" and the "turkey trot." After midnight cabs and automobiles were equipped.

During sessions of the Georgia Legislature, in the hotels and boarding houses and private dinner parties at the houses of politicians, it was found particularly useful.

The striking fact Edward Bellamy, Jr., records was that civilization had responded to the restraint of the Dictograph and that its abuse was inconsiderable beside the manifest improvement in the tone and quality of human conduct.

Perils of Privacy.

The Dictograph is not all a joke.

The exaggeration of its possibilities is not a reductio ad absurdum.

The irresistible movement toward relentless publicity it symbolizes is profoundly supported in social intelligence.

The perils of privacy, secrecy and the suppression of facts are realized.

The basic religious conviction that Deity sees, hears and knows is at work day and night to justify the increasing passion of humanity to see, hear and know.

The Christian assurance that "nothing is secret that shall not be made manifest; neither anything hid that shall not be known and publish itself abroad" is the moral sanction of publicity as the consummation of the highest civilization.

The cry of Life is "Light! More light! Light everywhere!" The protest of Death is the cry for privacy and suppression.

The man who loves darkness better than light is under cosmic condemnation. The guardians of public health ruthlessly placard the places of disease.

The exponents of moral health also are every day bolder and bolder in disregard of any challenge of personal secrecy which conceals sources of moral contagion.

The old sanctity of wrong under the cover of private rights is an exploded theory of social relations.

In whatever concerns the public safety the public has a right to the facts.

The outcry against the publication of the Standard Oil letters made no appeal to the American conscience.

The Good of Publicity.

In England the divorce evil is treated as a public matter, and not even the nauseous details are withheld from the public eye. Those who object to the application of that rule in this country should show better reasons for secrecy and privacy in behalf of domestic infidelities than the Fulton County divorce courts afford.

The world adjusted to the law of publicity is the good promise of the times, and the Searchlight, the Newspaper and the Dictograph are its phophetic tokens.

There Is Only One Need in the World---Love

Any Man Can Be Happy With It; No Man Can Be Happy Without It

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

I KNOW the need of the world.
Though it would not have me know.
It would hide its sorrow deep,
Where only God may go.
Yet its secret it cannot keep;
It tells it awake or asleep,
It tells it to all who will heed,
And he who runs may read.
The need of the world I know.

I know the need of the world.
When it boasts of its wealth the loudest,
When it flaunts it in all men's eyes.
When its mien is the gayest and proudest.
Oh! ever it lies—it lies,
For the sound of its laughter dies
In a sob and a smothered moan,
And it weeps when it sits alone.
The need of the world I know.

I know the need of the world.
When the earth shakes under the tread
Of men who march to the fight,
When rivers with blood are red
And there is no law but might,
And the wrong way seems the right;
When he who slaughters the most
Is all men's pride and boast,
The need of the world I know.

I know the need of the world.
When it babbles of gold and fame,
It is only to lead us astray
From the thing that it dare not name,
For this is the sad world's way.
Oh! poor blind world grown gray
With the need of a thing so near,
With the want of a thing so dear.
The need of the world I know.

The need of the world is love.
Deep under the pride of power,
Down under its lust of greed,
For the joys that last but an hour,
There lies forever its need.
For love is the law and the creed
And love is the unnamed goal
Of life, from man to the mole.
Love is the need of the world.

THERE is only one need in the world
The need to love our neighbors as ourselves.

To do exactly as we would be done by.

The need to understand that the human race is one body; and that when we do anything which harms or hurts one individual, we harm all individuals, ourselves included.

Just as we harm the body, when we injure any member, hand, foot, eye, or ear.

When we stop and think about the world, the whole process of life becomes very pitiful.

Each, being born upon the earth, is striving for happiness, from the cradle to the grave, in his own way.

According to his light, he is doing the best he can.

He does not know it, but the only satisfying things which he can get out of life are peace of mind, self-respect and the love of his fellow men.

Nothing he can obtain without these things, nothing he can achieve or become, is of any real value.

No man can be happy without those three blessings. Any man can be happy with them.

Even though he is saddened by the sorrow he sees about him; the sorrow which results from striving after the needless things of earth; after more than we need; after what does not belong to us; after the possessions of others.

There would be no war; no industrial problems; no prisons; no poor houses; no white slaves; no sex sins; if men and women all set forth early in life on that threefold quest—for peace of mind, for self-respect, for the love of their fellow men.

That is all any soul is seeking; that is all any soul desires; because that is all there is in life worth living for. Yet is there war, and strife, and hatred; and sin; and sorrow and anguish; and misery and poverty.

Because men have not yet learned that there is only one need in the world.

And the need of the world is LOVE.

Belief of Samuel Adams

By WILLIAM VINCENT BYARS.

IT was Samuel Adams, one of the greatest founders of the United States, who said that "truth loves an appeal to the common sense of mankind."

It was this thought which made him powerful.

It made him the greatest Democratic leader of New England in the eighteenth century.

He was born in Boston in 1722, when all New Englanders were royalists. He was born rich. His family made money out of a brewery. He lost money in politics, so that when he died in 1803 he had barely enough to pay for his funeral.

He had helped to found the United States. He held office many years, but he was afraid to make money.

This was the only thing he was afraid of. He was afraid that if he did not keep himself as poor as most other people he would lose his common sense.

He meant by common sense the sense people have when they are trying to be fair to each other instead of over reaching and cheating.

If he found a man who could not read, trying not to cheat and over reach others, he thought him a better judge of truth than a prime minister. He believed that God made all men with sense enough to be honest.

At a time when he would have been hanged by a Tory prime minister, if caught, he said that truth loves an appeal to the common sense of mankind, and that "He who made all men, made the truths necessary for human happiness obvious to all."

This was his answer after he had been declared a traitor.

He spent his life trying to prove that politics may be improved by less cheating and shooting. He thought that finally nearly everyone would agree with him that common honesty and common sense are enough to make the best government on earth.

VENIRE OF 72 FOR FRANK JURY IS DRAWN

Dorsey Announces That Trial Will Start Week of June 30—Active Investigation Continues.

Seventy-two men, from which a jury will be sought to try Leo M. Frank for the murder of Mary Phagan, were empaneled Monday afternoon by Judge L. S. Roan, of the Superior Court.

This action was the first by the court to bring the pencil factory superintendent to trial. The names of the men chosen were not made public. They will be summoned immediately to be present in court when the Phagan case is opened.

Despite the fact that the prosecution previously had announced its case against Frank complete, detectives have continued an active investigation.

Conley Again Examined.

Conley was brought before the Solicitor for another examination late Monday morning. Another effort to break down his affidavit was made by Mr. Dorsey and new questions put to him concerning his part in the tragedy. The outcome of the examination was not made known.

Solicitor General Dorsey, after a conference with Judge Roan Monday morning, announced that the Frank case would go to trial June 30. This decision was made after approval by Judge Roan, who stated that no intimation has been received by him from the defense that a postponement would be asked for, and that therefore any move for a delay now would probably be made in open court when the trial began.

Attorney Reuben Arnold, for Frank, announced Monday morning that the defense's case was complete. Mr. Arnold said that the testimony of twelve witnesses would form the bulk of Frank's support. He declared that only the inability of one or more of these witnesses to appear at the time set for the trial would cause the defense to ask for a postponement.

Dorsey Back From East.

Solicitor Dorsey returned to Atlanta Sunday afternoon from a week's vacation in New York. He called a conference with his assistants, E. A. Stephens and F. A. Hooper, at his home Sunday evening. Following it he announced that he would be ready for trial on June 30 and that unless the defense or the trial judge moved to have the trial postponed he would commence at once summoning witnesses and getting ready.

Solicitor Dorsey would not discuss the return to Atlanta of Mrs. Mina Formby and her announcement that she would go on the stand against Frank. He intimated, however, that he entertained the same opinion as had already been expressed by his assistant, Mr. Hooper, that when the woman left Atlanta she dropped from the case entirely.

Attorney John W. Moore denied emphatically that he had been employed in the case with L. Z. Rosser and Reuben R. Arnold to defend Frank, as was reported by Solicitor Dorsey.

Moore Not Employed.

"I have not been employed in the case and have no other interest in it than that of a citizen. I believe Frank is innocent, and have since he was first drawn into the case, but I am not connected with it in any way. I have never been approached on the subject."

Solicitor Dorsey opened court in the Thrower building Monday morning for a week of criminal trials to clear the jail docket. He will be in court every day until Saturday, and will have to depend on his assistants to summon witnesses and prepare the Frank case in the event of it being set for the following week.

Hot Wave Is in No Danger of Breaking Says Forecaster

"Continued warm weather, with possibly thundershowers late in the afternoon," was the weather outlook for Monday.

Forecaster C. F. VonHerrmann said the backbone of the hot spell was in no danger of being broken. "We are due to have considerable more hot weather through June and July," he said. "If it keeps up much longer this way, the old record of sixteen consecutive days with the temperature above 90 may be broken."

Mr. VonHerrmann said the weather was about the same all over the country, 90 degrees being the average.

The thermometer at noon registered 86 degrees and at 1 o'clock 88 degrees. The maximum temperature, between 2 and 3 o'clock, approximated 90, the lowest maximum of the last week.

Flee From Sing Sing; Are Glad to Return

OSSINING, N. Y., June 23.—"Hooray, take us back to Sing Sing!" There was real exultation in the voices of William Forbes and Maurice Clifford, two short-term burglars, who escaped from Sing Sing prison last night, when they were captured to-day. They were trying to return to the prison, but had lost their way.

Forbes and Clifford were covered with mud and their clothes were ripped and torn by brambles and barb wire fences. They were badly bitten by mosquitoes and other insects, and once they had to lie in a creek when the hunt got too close

DENVER, COLO., June 23.—Seventeen hundred pounds of stout women sat on small chairs in the Inspector's office in the Federal building all morning on a hot June day. At least there were seven women, and as none of them owned less than 250 pounds, the total may be fixed in the neighborhood of 1,700.

They were witnesses in a fraud case. For months, they say, they have toiled with the Marjorie Hamilton fat-reducing methods without finding themselves one ounce reduced in weight.

$10,000,000 Dividend by Ford Motor Co.

DETROIT, June 23.—That a ten million dollar cash dividend has been declared by the Ford Motor Car Company is reported in banking circles.

Mr. Ford, owning 51 per cent of the stock, will get $5,800,000.

James Cozzens gets $1,150,000. An even million goes to Dodge Brothers, while the Gray estate gets $1,050,000. Other big checks go to John W. Anderson and H. H. Rackman who receive half a million each.

Mrs. Lanier's Trial To Begin Tuesday

WAYCROSS, June 23.—Unless some unforeseen delay arises, the trial of Mrs. W. C. Lanier, the pretty young woman facing a charge of murder of her infant son, will start in Superior Court to-morrow. To-day several minor criminal cases are being disposed of. Judge T. A. Parker will preside.

It is understood that the defense will rely mainly upon the statement of Mrs. Lanier.

Merchant Slain in Phenix City Store

COLUMBUS, June 23.—J. J. Folks, a merchant of Phenix City, Ala., was found dead in his store to-day when a clerk opened the place for business. Folks was lying between two counters with his jugular vein almost severed. A meat knife was lying near him. Robbery is believed to have been the motive.

Folks was about 60 years of age.

Roses by Track Like Danger Signs; Moved

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—Red rose bushes set near the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks by Edward Bok, of Marion, were removed because the road officials feared engineers might mistake the blossoms for danger signals.

LEGISLATORS ALL HERE; LOBBYING HINTED

Reports That Interests Have Hand in Senate Presidency Fight Are Being Circulated.

The Georgia Legislature for 1913-14, although it does not assemble for organization until 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, already is all but unanimously in Atlanta.

All Sunday and Monday the members poured into town.

Not only have they come early to discuss the matter of organization in both houses, but they are here to counsel together concerning the legislation to be proposed during the first session.

The Legislature is a new one, and there will be a complete change in administration under the big dome within the week. Every member, therefore, wishes to get as straight a line on the situation as he may.

Monday the hotel lobbies are swarming with politicians and statesmen. They are undertaking to get their bearings, and the getting in some directions is extremely difficult.

Senate Race a Puzzle.

Nobody seems to know who is to win the Presidency of the Senate, which carries with it the Lieutenant-Governorship of Georgia.

On the surface of things, the fight seems to be about even between Senator Allen, of the Twentieth, and Senator Anderson, of the First. Both men claim enough to elect, but few believe either really has the votes nailed down.

Below the surface rumor and gossip speaks of many things not yet talked about the hotel lobbies freely and openly.

The President of the Senate might, in certain circumstances, succeed to the Governorship, and certainly he is sure to be a compelling factor in the shaping of legislation.

Wherefore, one hears it whispered that certain big corporate and manufacturing interests are deeply concerned as to the outcome of the race for the presidency of the Senate, and, very much on the quiet, are interesting themselves accordingly.

Burwell Called Favorite.

The speakership race generally is conceded to have been won by Burwell of Hancock. Although opposed by such excellent gentlemen as Hardeman of Jefferson and Sheppard of Sumter, Burwell is thought to be very much in the lead and practically sure of election on the first ballot.

Burwell Called Favorite.

Burwell seems to have made a much better getaway in his race than either of his opponents, and for that reason is looked upon as a most likely winner.

Tax reform is the one big topic of legislation discussed most generally.

It seems agreed on all sides that the State must have more revenue or let its various institutions lag woefully. There is an ever-increasing demand for more money in all directions, and the State has been running ahead of its income for several years. The tax rate can not be raised above 5 mills, and 5 mills on present assessments will not produce the revenue needed.

Various special measures for increasing the revenue have been proposed, such as an inheritance tax, a graduated automobile tax, and so forth, but the greater problem is how to get all varieties of property up to where each may bear its righteous portion of the burden of taxation.

It is assured that a child labor bill will be introduced early in the session, with excellent chances of success.

be, and that reforms must be instituted, or the State suffer not only materially within itself, but in reputation abroad.

It is said that former Representative Hooper Alexander, for years an earnest advocate of child labor reform, will prepare a bill for the General Assembly's attention, and that it will be a bill framed along the lines and ideals of the various anti-child labor organizations in the State.

Yancey Killed One Week ago; Family Is In Need of Support

One week ago Monday Court Deputy Dave Yancey was stabbed to death by a crazed negro while attempting to preserve law and order, as he had sworn to do. To-day his widow and six children are holding a sad commemoration of that event in their little home on the Jonesboro Road.

What has Atlanta done for the family of the court deputy? The citizens of this city have subscribed about $1,000 to the Yancey fund, $900 of which must go to pay off the mortgage on the farm. The remainder is not sufficient to put this family on a self-supporting basis. More contributions are needed. Let the generosity of the prosperous Gate City continue to assert itself.

Americus Officer's Condition Critical

AMERICUS, June 23.—The condition of Chief of Police W. C. Barrow, who was shot by a negro here Saturday night and whose assailant was lynched shortly afterward on the principal street of the city, is to-day reported as unfavorable. The bullet entered the officer's abdomen and struck his spine.

The city is quiet to-day, following the intense excitement precipitated by the shooting and lynching Saturday night.

Bryan Is Elected Bible Board Head

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Secretary Bryan has been elected president of the Board of Directors of the Winona, Ind., Assembly and Bible Conference.

Billy Sunday was among the directors present at the meeting. Mr. Bryan will open the conference and Chautauqua at Winona August 22 and will probably speak under the auspices of the organization this summer.

Sickles Can Attend Gettysburg Reunion

ALBANY, N. Y., June 23.—State officials will not prevent General Daniel E. Sickles from going to the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg next month. Attorney General Carmody so advised Daniel P. Hays, counsel for General Sickles.

The State obtained a judgment against General Sickles for failure to account for $23,000 State funds. Carmody says no execution will be issued to prevent Sickles attending the reunion.

Guns Hit 15 in 20 at 5-Mile Range in Dark

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23.—Fifteen out of twenty shots fired from one of San Francisco's mortar battery defense struck a target five and a half miles out at sea. For night practice this is regarded as an unusual score.

The target was not visible to the gunners who fired from a pit behind a hill. The range was telephoned to them from stations overlooking the harbor.

Millionaire Warns Of Palatial Homes

OMAHA, NEBR., June 23.—George A. Joslyn, president of the Western Newspaper Union, whose $1,000,000 home in Omaha was partially wrecked in the recent cyclone, denies that he intends building a place in Southern California.

"I've had enough of palaces," said Mr. Joslyn. "When next I build a home it will cost not one cent more than $15,000. If I were worth a billion dollars I wouldn't have a house that cost more than $15,000."

Anti-U. S. Meeting in Tokio Big Fizzle

TOKIO, June 23.—An anti-American mass meeting held here was attended by not more than 400 persons. These were chiefly workingmen, idlers and agitators.

The speeches were of a comparatively mild order.

CARUSO IN A MAD FIT AS GIRL WINS LOVE SUIT

Rejected Sweetheart of Tenor Can Collect Damages, High Court Rules.

ROME, June 23.—That the legal troubles of Enrico Caruso, the world-famous tenor, are anything but over is shown to-day in the decree of the Milan Court of Appeals which has just handed down a decision reversing the lower court which last year denied Elisa Ganelli, the Milan shop girl, who sued him for failure to marry her, damages in a breach of promise suit.

Caruso is in London preparing to spend the summer at his beautiful villa near Florence, and, dispatches say, when shown the decision of the court, he allowed his temper to become greatly ruffled and let off considerable superfluous energy in the form of epithets and adjectives, between which he stated he did not believe the report.

The court, in handing down its decision holds that the decision of the lower court is correct in not providing damages for the injury to the fair name of the plaintiff. The court then goes on to state that, although the relations existing between the singer and the shop girl were reprehensible, it is of the opinion that the girl is entitled to recover the money she spent in fitting herself to become Mrs. Caruso.

Entitled to Expenses.

The decision orders that a new trial be held for the purpose of ascertaining how much the young woman is entitled to for her "pre-nuptial" expenses, and orders that it be held as soon as Caruso returns to Italy.

The suit in question was started over a year ago and at the time greatly stirred opera-going circles in this country and elsewhere. Testimony developed at the trial that one week after seeing the girl in a Milan shop Caruso secured an introduction to her from her employer and on that same occasion used these words:

"Come, now Signorina, put on your hat and we will start tomorrow, for I have decided to take you away with me. If I had been so fortunate as to make your acquaintance 15 or 20 years ago you would have been my wife by this time. Unfortunately, owing to my professional engagements, I must leave now."

After his departure Caruso bombarded the girl with letters written from Paris and London, in which he renewed his protestations, and in one letter ordered the girl to leave the shop to break with the "common people."

His "Little Sugar Doll."

He sent her many photographs of himself and his children and in writings always addressed her by such endearing names as "Dear Sweet Thing," "Little Sugar Doll" and "My Little Treasure."

One of his most characteristic letters contained the following passages:

"You will see what I will do when you are my wife. How beautiful it will be. You shall be my little queen, and I your faithful and devoted slave. Have you ever accepted some other admirer? Can anybody speak ill of you? Have you always done as your mother instructed you? You assure me that you have, and now I can think only of this—to make you mine as soon as possible."

After the betrothal the shop girl studied French and tried to fit herself to be the wife of the greatest tenor of his time. Caruso at times was chivalrous and generous to her. She had a chaperone whenever she met him and he showered her with presents, including the most costly gowns and much actual money, which she accepted, although reluctant to do so, the trial developed.

Death Hovers Over Chalk Victim

Poison Baffles Expert Efforts

Doctors Abandon Hope for Life

Here is a picture of little Mary Tribble, the poison chalk victim, taken when she was a few years younger than she is now. She was the pet of the neighborhood then, and has since then been a very much loved little girl in school.

Little Mary Tribble Is Fast Sinking and She May Not Live Through the Day.

Slowly sinking to a death that the physicians regard now as almost certain, little Mary Tribble, daughter of Policeman Tribble, lies now unconscious and now torn by racking convulsions at her home in East Atlanta, the victim of a strange poisoning that developed after she had eaten some brightly colored chalk more than two weeks ago.

The 7-year-old girl, who has been almost entirely paralyzed for the two weeks since she suddenly was stricken, has suffered two convulsions in the last 24 hours, although three physicians have done their utmost to counteract the effect of the mysterious poison.

Another physician offered his services to the family Sunday. He recommended and administered a continuous water treatment throughout the day. For a few hours she appeared brighter and the prospects for her ultimate recovery seemed slightly more hopeful, but at nightfall one of the terrible convulsions contorted her little body and it was thought that the end had come. Monday morning she was the victim of another, and the family practically gave up hope.

Miss Wilson's Pansy Hat a Capital Hit

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Miss Eleanor Wilson, youngest daughter of the President, has succeeded to the place formerly held by Mrs. Nicholas Longworth and has become the leading society milliner of the capital.

She not only trims her own hats, but she trims the jauntiest hat that adorns a belle's head in Washington. The younger set is particularly taken just now with a new creation Miss Wilson has made, which she calls the pansy hat.

She bought a white hemp shape and a gorgeous mass of purple pansies and soft ribbons. With artistic skill she arranged these about the hat. It has a chic, Parisian effect, and the uninformed would imagine it the work of a leading milliner.

Women Failures as Car Strikebreakers

After a struggle of three hours, however, the manipulation of brakes and dodging of missiles proved too arduous, so they quit.

Police Guard Cars on Birmingham Lines

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., June 23.—Guarded by police and special deputies cars are being operated to-day on the lines of the Birmingham Railway, Light and Power Company. Officials of the company claimed this morning that the strike of conductors and motormen, which began Saturday, prevented less than eight cars being operated to-day.

Trouble is yet feared. The mass meeting held Sunday afternoon by labor men recommended a boycott on all products of the railway, light and power company and the recall of Commissioner of Justice Lane for furnishing police protection to the street car company.

Slew While Making Arrest; Put on Trial

E. H. Parham, the former policeman who shot and killed John Wright a year ago, was put on trial before Judge L. S. Roan Monday morning for involuntary manslaughter.

The shooting culminated an attempt by Parham to put Wright under arrest.

WILSON ASKS CONGRESS FOR BANK CHANGE

President in Person Urges Currency Reform With Government as Active Agent.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Repeating his act at the beginning of his administration, when he smashed decades of precedent by personally delivering his message to Congress, President Wilson appeared before a joint assemblage of both houses of Congress to-day and delivered his message on the currency.

President Wilson reached the Capitol at 12:55 o'clock, accompanied by his secretary, Joseph Tumulty, and two secret service men. He went immediately to Speaker Clark's private office, where he was received by a joint committee of Senators and Representatives.

After remaining in the Speaker's office for less than a minute, the President, escorted by the committee, went direct to the House chamber for the reading of his currency message. His appearance in the chamber was greeted with general applause, and the assembled Senators and Representatives arose as he entered.

The committee which met the President and escorted him to the chamber consisted of Senators Kern and Reed and Representatives Underwood, Fitzgerald and Mann.

Cabinet Members Present.

Secretary McAdoo, who helped frame the currency bill, was one of the first Cabinet officers to reach the House to-day. Secretaries Houston, Lane, Wilson and Garrison reached the House shortly in advance of the President and took seats on the floor.

Mrs. Wilson, accompanied by Misses Jessie and Eleanor Wilson and Miss Isabel Hagner, her secretary, reached the Capitol about ten minutes in advance of the President and were shown to seats in the executive gallery.

The President concluded the reading of his message at 1:07 o'clock, having used but ten and a half minutes in its delivery. As he finished he bowed and shook hands with Speaker Clark and Vice President Marshall. Both galleries and Senators and Representatives generously applauded.

Admittance Is Limited.

The House end of the Capitol was closed to the public to-day in anticipation of the visit of President Wilson to deliver his banking and currency message. Policemen stood at the entrances and in the corridors and turned back all those who could not show a ticket of admission.

More than 500 tickets were available for spectators in the galleries, and each Senator and each Representative had one ticket. For the most part these tickets went to the wives of Senators and Congressmen. Representatives who have been out of the city returned early to-day to be on hand when the President appeared.

The Message in Full.

The President's message in full follows:

It is under the compulsion of what seems to me a clear and imperative duty that I have a second time this session sought the privilege of addressing you in person. I know, of course, that the heated season of the year is upon us, that work in these chambers and in the committee rooms is likely to become a burden as the season lengthens, and that every consideration of personal convenience and personal comfort, perhaps, in the cases of some of us, considerations of personal health even, dictate an early conclusion of the deliberations of the session; but there are occasions of public duty when these things which touch us privately seem very small; when the work to be done is so pressing and so fraught with big consequence that we know that we are not at liberty to weigh against it any point of personal sacrifice.

We are now in the presence of such an occasion. It is absolutely imperative that we should give the business men of this country a banking and currency system by means of which they can make use of the freedom of enterprise and of individual initiative which we are about to bestow upon them.

Must Provide the Tools.

We are about to set them free; we must not leave them without the tools of action when they are free. We are about to set them free by removing the trammels of the protective tariff. Ever since the Civil War they have waited for this emancipation and for the free opportunities it will bring with it. It has been reserved for us to give it to them. Some fell in love, indeed, with the slothful security of their dependence upon the Government; some took advantage of the shelter of the nursery to set up a mimic mastery of their own within its walls. Now both the tonic and the discipline of liberty and maturity are to ensue.

There will be some readjustments of purpose and point of view. There will follow a period of expansion and new enterprise, freshly conceived. It is for us to determine now whether it shall be rapid and facile and of easy accomplishment. This it cannot be unless the resourceful business men who are to deal with the new circumstances are to have at hand and ready for use the instrumentalities and conveniences of free enterprise which independent men need when acting on their own initiative.

It is not enough to strike the shackles from business. The duty of statesmanship is not negative merely. It is constructive also. We must show that we understand what business needs and that we know how to supply it. No man, however casual and superficial his observation of the conditions now prevailing in the country, can fail to see that one of the chief things business needs now, and will need increasingly as it gains in scope and vigor in the years immediately ahead of us, is the proper means by which readily to vitalize its credit, corporate and individual, and its originative brains.

Shows Power of Credit.

What will it profit us to be free if we are not to have the best and most accessible instrumentalities of commerce and enterprise? What will it profit us to be quit of one kind of monopoly if we are to remain in the grip of another and more effective kind? How are we to gain and keep the confidence of the business community unless we show that we know how both to aid and to protect it? What shall we say if we make fresh enterprise necessary and also make it very difficult by leaving all else except the tariff just as we found it? The tyrannies of business, big and little, lie within the field of credit. We know that. Shall we not act upon the knowledge? Do we not know how to act upon it?

If a man cannot make his assets available at pleasure, his assets of capacity and character and resource, what satisfaction is it to him to see opportunity beckoning to him on every hand, when others have the keys of credit in their pockets and treat them as all but their own private possession? It is perfectly clear that it is our duty to supply the new banking and currency system the country needs, and that it will immediately need it more than ever.

The only question is, When shall we supply it—now, or later, after the demands shall have become reproaches that we were so dull and so slow? Shall we hasten to change the tariff laws and then be laggards about making it possible and easy for the country to take advantage of the change? There can be only one answer to that question.

Action Now Is a Duty.

We must act now, at whatever sacrifice to ourselves. It is a duty which the circumstances forbid us to postpone. I should be recreant to my deepest convictions of public obligation did I not press it upon you with solemn and urgent insistence.

The principles upon which we should act are also clear. The country has sought and seen its path in this matter within the last few years—sees it more clearly than when the last legislative proposals on the subject were made. We must have a currency, not rigid as now, but readily, elastically responsive to sound credit, the expanding and contracting credits of everyday transactions, the normal ebb and flow of personal and corporate dealings.

Our banking laws must mobilize reserves; must not permit the concentration anywhere in a few hands of the monetary resources of the country or their use for speculative purposes in such volume as to hinder or impede or stand in the way of other more legitimate, more fruitful uses.

And the control of the system of banking and of issue which our new laws are to set up must be public, not private, must be vested in the Government itself, so that the banks may be the instruments, not the masters, of business and of individual enterprise and initiative.

The committees of the Congress to which legislation of this character is referred have devoted careful and dispassionate study to the means of accomplishing these objects. They have honored me by consulting me. They are ready to suggest action.

DIGEST OF CURRENCY REFORM ACT WILSON WANTS THIS SESSION

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Representative Carter Glass, chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency, has made public a digest of the Administration's currency reform bill which he introduced in the House to-day. By the terms of this measure the Federal Reserve Board, which will control the issuance of new currency on application of the regional reserve banks, is to be a Government board entirely.

There will be no retirement of existing national bank circulation, nor of the existing 2 per cent United States bonds used for circulation purposes. Every national bank is allowed to continue its note issue exactly as at present.

Following is the digest prepared by Representative Glass:

"The purpose of the bill is to furnish a comparative revision of the currency system of the country so as to obtain three principal objects:

"First—Provision of a means for rediscounting commercial paper of specified types.

"Second—Provision of a basis for elastic note issues properly safeguarded.

"Third—Provision of machinery for doing foreign banking business.

"Present Law Inadequate."

"In order to accomplish these purposes fully it is necessary to repeal certain portions of existing law, to rectify various conditions in the present national banking system which are in some cases only indirectly connected with the objects sought; to furnish a new class of instructions for the performance of some functions which can not well be intrusted to existing banks, or, at all events, can better be performed by others, and to alter the present reserve system to a very material degree.

"The scope of the bill can best be understood by an analytical review of its contents.

"The present banking situation of the United States rests on the national bank act proper, as slightly modified from time to time, and on the so-called Aldrich-Vreeland act (act of May 30, 1908).

"Of these acts the latter is completely superseded on the ground that it has never become operative. It probably will not become operative except under extreme distress, and never was satisfactory. The national bank act itself is modified in numerous essential particulars.

New Class of Banks.

"Fundamental to the idea of the bill is the creation of a new class of banks to be known as Federal reserve banks, the chief points about which are as follows:

"The number is to be twelve, with possible increase later as provided.

"The ownership is to be in the hands of the stockholding banks of the twelve districts in which the reserve banks are situated. National banks are compelled to be members and State banks and trust companies are permitted to be members.

"The capitalization is to be 20 per cent of the capital of the stockholding banks, one-half paid in and one-half subject to call.

"The business of these Federal reserve banks is to be as follows:

Reserve Banks Business.

"Rediscounting of paper presented by stockholding banks under specified conditions, provided such paper grows out of actual agricultural, commercial or industrial transactions and does not run more than a specified number of days.

"Buying and selling Government securities, gold and silver bullion and foreign coin; foreign exchange and open market bills of given maturity; Government fiscal operations.

"Every national bank is allowed to continue its note issue exactly as at present and in addition Federal reserve treasury notes are authorized to be issued to an amount not exceeding $500,000,000.

These notes will, upon application, be issued to the Federal reserve banks upon prime short-time commercial paper and other liquid collateral.

Gold Reserve Security.

"While the notes will, on their faces, purport to be the obligations of the United States, they are required to be secured by a gold reserve of 33 1-3 per cent provided by the Federal reserve banks, and are a first and paramount lien on all the assets of these banks, and are redeemable in gold on demand at the Treasury Department in Washington or at any Federal reserve bank.

"Stringent provisions are made against counting any of these notes as a part of bank reserves, and the system is guarded against inflation by lodging power with the Federal Reserve Board to exact an interest charge on treasury notes in order to insure their prompt redemption.

"The notes are not made legal tender, but are receivable by the Government and every bank of the system at par without exchange.

"Overseeing the whole system is created a Federal reserve board, consisting of seven members, including the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Agriculture and Comptroller of the Currency as members ex-officio. Four other members are chosen by the President of the United States by and with the consent of the Senate for a term of six years each.

"One of the members thus appointed by the President is to be governor of the Federal reserve board, one vice governor and one secretary.

Banker Member of Board.

"Their term of office is for eight years, except that of those first appointed, one to the serve two years, one four, one six and one eight years. At least one of the members appointed by the President is to be a person of banking experience. Thus it will be noted that the Government will have absolute control of the system.

"The salary of each member of the board, except the two Cabinet officers, who are ex-officio members, is fixed at $10,000, the Comptroller of the Currency to receive $5,000 in addition to the salary which he receives under existing law.

"The powers of the Federal reserve board are as follows:

"(a) To examine at its discretion the accounts and books of each Federal reserve bank and to require such statements and reports as it deems necessary.

"(b) To require or, on application, to permit a Federal reserve bank to rediscount the paper of any other Federal bank.

"(c) To establish each week, or as much oftener as required, a rate of discount which shall be mandatory upon each Federal reserve bank for each class of paper, provided that said rate of discount need not be uniform for all Federal reserve banks, but shall be made with a view to accommodating the commerce of the country and promising a stable price level.

"(d) To suspend for a period not exceeding 30 days (and to renew such suspension for periods not to exceed fifteen days) any and every reserve requirement specified in this act.

Treasury Note Regulation.

"(f) To add to the number of cities classified as reserve and central reserve cities under existing law, in which national banking associations are subject to the reserve requirements set forth in the act, or to reclassify existing reserve and central reserve cities and to designate the banks therein situated by country banks in its discretion.

"(g) To require the removal of officials of Federal reserve banks for incompetency, dereliction of duty, fraud or deceit.

"(h) To acquire the writing off of doubtful or worthless assets upon the books and balance sheets of Federal reserve banks.

"(i) To suspend the further operations of any Federal reserve bank and appoint a receiver therefor.

"(j) To perform the duties, functions or services specified or implied in the act.

To Classify Banking.

"The object of the bill is to effect a moderate division and classification of banking business along indicated lines, the net result, presumably, being summed up as follows:

"(1) National reserve banks will be strictly limited to rediscounting actual commercial and industrial transactions evidenced by very short term paper and on rare occasions, under carefully prescribed conditions to financial operations protected by collateral.

"(2) National banks will be subjected to the same restrictions as at present, with a relaxation in favor of a moderate amount of real estate loans by country banks.

"(3) By a revision of the administrative figures of the national banking act provision will be made for close oversight of national institutions.

"(4) In order to possess themselves of the kind of paper entitling them to rediscounts national banks will find themselves obliged to keep a reasonable proportion of their assets in the paper eligible for rediscounting.

"Subtreasury System Crude."

"It is believed that the present subtreasury system is unsatisfactory, clumsy, injurious to business and difficult to manage in time of stress. The bill, therefore, provides for:

"(1) The placing of all current funds of the Treasury in Federal reserve banks and the payment of Government creditors by check thereon.

"(2) The equalization of the public funds between the different reserve banks by direction of the Secretary of the Treasury and subject to a rate of interest to be fixed by the Federal Reserve Board.

"(3) The trust funds of the Treasury are to be held, as at present, in the vaults of the Treasury.

"Under the terms of the bill the Federal reserve bank, after the payment of all expenses and taxes, is entitled to pay an annual cumulative dividend of 5 per cent on paid-in capital to its stock-holding members. One-half of the next earnings of the bank must be paid into the surplus fund until said fund shall amount to 20 per cent of the paid-in capital of the bank. The remaining one-half of the bank's earnings shall be paid to the United States, and whenever and so long as the surplus fund of each Federal reserve bank amounts to 20 per cent of the paid-in capital, the shareholders having received their permissible dividend of 5 per cent, all excess earnings shall be paid to the United States.

Banks Exempt From Taxes.

"Every Federal reserve bank is exempt from Federal, State and local taxation, except in respect to taxes upon real estate.

"In the belief that the present reserve system is antiquated and unsatisfactory provision has been made for recasting the present bank reserve system. The plan includes:

"(1) Transfer of reserves from existing national banks in reserve and central reserve cities to national reserve banks.

"(2) Spreading out of this process of transfer over a period of 38 months.

"(3) Ultimately the establishment of a reserve system at the end of the transition in which (a) country banks will save 15 per cent of reserve, i. e., 15 per cent of total demand liabilities, such 15 per cent to be held, 5 per cent in the banks' vaults, 5 per cent with the national reserve bank and 5 per cent either at home or with the reserve bank, while (b) reserve and central reserve city banks will have reserves of 20 per cent of demand liabilities, of which 10 per cent will be at home, 5 per cent with the reserve bank of the district and 5 per cent either at home or with the reserve bank.

Blow at Wall Street.

"(4) The presumed effect of this plan will be to end the placing of reserves with central reserve city banks for use in stock market operations.

"The bill authorizes any national banking association with a minimum capital of $1,000,000 to establish branches in foreign countries for the furtherance of foreign commerce of the United States and to act as fiscal agents of the United States abroad.

"The Federal reserve board is required to pass on all applications of national banks to establish such banks abroad."

CREDIT MEN WANT NEW BANKING LAW

Would Make It a Misdemeanor to Present Check When No Money Covers Amount.

The local credit men's association will endeavor this summer to get through the Legislature a bill making it a misdemeanor to present notes and checks when there is not sufficient funds in the bank to cover the amount. The effort of the association is the result of alleged general practice of this in Atlanta during the past year.

The association, according to Secretary Harry Moore, has every hope of getting the bill through during the early part of the legislative season. The bill will be drawn by the legislative committee of the association, of which Nym McCullough is chairman. Bolling H. Jones, H. E. Choate and A. E. Wilkinson are other members of this committee. A representative from some county other than Fulton probably will be chosen to present the bill.

Aimed at Dishonest Men.

In speaking of the matter Monday Mr. Moore said the bill was not intended to work a hardship on honest men who present checks without sufficient funds from carelessness or through oversight. Such men, he says, will be given the opportunity to make the check good. The bill is intended, however, to break up the general practice of dishonest men who persist in presenting checks without sufficient funds.

Bill Failed Before.

An effort to get a similar bill through two years ago wasd efeated in the House by a narrow margin.

The local delegates to the National Credit Men's Convention in Cincinnati last week returned to Atlanta Saturday night. The delegation consisted of E. L. Adams, Ralph Rosenbaum, S. Frietag, C. B. Logan, E. S. Pappy, J. L. Baldwin, Harry Moore and H. S. Ferris. The convention probably will go to Rochester, N. Y., next year.

Pike County Farmer Slays Son-in-Law

ZEBULON, June 23.—J. P. Neal, of Senoia, was shot and killed by his father-in-law, J. W. Vaughn, at the latter's home near Zebulon last night. Vaughn is a prominent farmer. He surrendered to Sheriff Slade and is in jail. There were no eyewitnesses.

The Coroner held an inquest and found a verdict of justifiable homicide.

Poincare in England On Diplomatic Visit

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, June 23.—President Poincare of France left for England today on his first official visit since he was elected President. High interest is shown in the visit because of the unsettled condition in Southeastern Europe. International politics plays a considerable part in the visit.

President Poincare is accompanied by M. Pichon, French Foreign Minister, and other officials of lesser rank. The visit will last until June 27.

Mrs. Munyon Scores American Husbands

NEW YORK, June 23.—"Ninety per cent of the matrimonial differences are caused by money," said the beautiful Mrs. Pauline Munyon, who recently filed papers for divorce.

"The average American business man has about as much idea about women's clothes, their styles, their prices, etc., as a Chinaman has about corsets. When a rich man marries a poor girl the first thing he should do to insure their happiness is to make her financially his equal."

Newspaper Criticism Court Aid Says Judge

COLORADO SPRINGS, June 23.—Smith McPherson, United States District Judge for the Southern District of Iowa, is a firm believer to-day that newspaper criticism is an aid to the courts.

"No judge has ever yet maintained his dignity and never will by bringing an editor before the court and punishing him because of criticisms made through the columns of the newspaper," says he.

"Criticism of newspapers should be of a kind, and none other, than the editor would use in conversation with the judge. Let editors and writers be gentlemanly toward the judges. And let judges have a due regard to the freedom of the press. The public will then be the beneficiary."

Hug and Kiss Are Detective's Reward

NEW YORK, June 23.—Douglas M. Sanderson is still tasting a kiss he got at the auction sale of the furnishings of the Astor House. An aged woman informed the auctioneer that she had lost her pocketbook containing $18.

While Sanderson, who is the house detective, was hunting for the purse, the auctioneer offered it and its contents at auction subject to its being found. The crowd had bid $17 when the detective appeared with the missing wallet.

The aged woman gave the detective a hug and a kiss, much to his embarrassment and to the joy of the crowd.

Prince of Wales 19; Big Week in London

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 23.—A week of exceptional social activity was ushered in to-day. The Prince of Wales today celebrated his nineteenth birthday. To-morrow the young Prince, as special representative of King George, will welcome President Poincare of France at Portsmouth. Wednesday will be "Alexandra Day," called after the queen mother, when society women, dressed in white, sell flowers in the streets for charity.

On Thursday King George and Queen Mary will give a state ball at Buckingham Palace.

Writers Defend Play Barred in Germany

BERLIN, June 23.—The suppression of Hauptmann's "Festspiel" by the authorities of Breslau, because of the complaint made by the Crown Prince and many citizens that it gave too much praise to the French and not enough to the Prussian heroes, has caused angry protests from many literary men and others who are prominent in politic.

The Authors' Protective League entered a formal protest against what is termed the "brutal" prohibition of the play.

Railway at Panama Big Military Asset

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Directors of the Panama Railroad at a meeting in the office of Secretary of War Garrison regarded it as prime military importance that the railroad be kept up in every way, and it is expected that there will be considerable traffic over the line even after the Canal is open.

The Government will maintain a huge coal depot at the entrace of the Canal. It will also rent bins to private companies.

Critics Rave, but All London Does Tango

LONDON, June 23.—Despite the bitterness of its critics the tango apparently has come to stay and the Argentine tango and the Boston, in all the newest elaborations, will be danced in the most fashionable ballrooms.

Mme. Van Dyck, one of London's leading dancing instructors, who has just returned from Paris, said:

"The prejudice which may have existed among society people regarding new dances is certainly disappearing."

California Bullion Unclaimed 50 Yrs.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—More than half a century ago Uncle Sam was handed three bags of gold worth about $600 and he is still holding them. The Comptroller is at a loss what to do with them.

In 1856 H. J. Peters brought 127.87 worth of gold bullion to the San Francisco mint; in 1858, Joseph Baker presented $333.27 worth, and in 1863, J. M. Souther handed over $156.96 worth. Each was given a receipt and told to come back for a gold certificate. They never returned.

Movies Catch Pair Spooning; Suspended

CALIFORNIA, PA., June 23.—A moving picture which showed them sitting on a rustic bench in a mossy glen of Hazel Park, "spooning" was the cause of Miss Kathryn Boyd, a co-ed, and B. H. Crago, a student, being indefinitely suspended on the eve of their graduation at the State Normal School here.

The film, depicting park scenes, was shown at a local theater and made a sensation among the students. The news got to the faculty.

Hundreds See Boys Drowned in Rapids.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., June 23. Donald Roscoe, 10 years old, and Hubert Moore, 9 years old, both of Niagara Falls, went to their death in a small boat Sunday afternoon in the whirlpool rapids, while hundreds of men watched, helpless, from the shore.

The boys were playing in a flat bottom scow half a mile above the rapids when the rope holding the boat broke and they were carried out into the stream and down the river.

The boys, realizing their fate, stood up as the boat neared the edge of the roaring whirlpool and shook hands in farewell. A second later they were engulfed.

'Hello Girl' Knocked Down by Lightning

POTTSVILLE, PA., June 23.—During a heavy electric storm lightning set fire to one of the switchboards in the telephone exchange of the American Telephone Company at Shamokin and threw the operator, Miss Kathryn O'Leary, to the floor. She managed to sound an alarm and was rescued just before the blaze destroyed the building. The loss is estimated at $20,000.

SOLONS SEE NEED OF PENAL REFORM

Georgia Legislators Giving More Thought to Topic—Brown Will Mention It.

Interviews with leading members of the House and Senate have disclosed that the Assembly, which meets this week, is imbued with a belief in the necessity for practical revision of Georgia's penal and criminal court laws stronger than ever before.

So many specific needs for changes have been urged by the Governor, by members of the Prison Board, by judges and solicitors general throughout the State, and so many plans have been suggested that the creation of a special commission to take up the proposition seems a certainty.

Inasmuch as the creation of this commission will give full opportunity for the expression of all views on the subject and opportunity to sift out the best way of dealing with it, no opposition has developed. Scores of legislators in both the upper and lower House are committed to its support.

It is understood Governor Brown is in favor of changes that will improve the convict road work, and that he will embody some appropriate suggestions in his message. It is believed also that Governor Brown will call the attention of the Legislature to the fact that the State's penal laws have undergone little change during the last half century.

Penfield May Get U. S. Embassy Place

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Speculation was caused in diplomatic circles when it was learned to-day that Frederick C. Penfield, of New York, was to have a special audience with President Wilson.

The opinion was formed that the President would offer Mr. Penfield one of the five embassies yet unfilled. These include France, Germany, Russia, Austria and Turkey.

The speculation was based largely on the fact that he has had wide experience in the service of the United States abroad.

CREMATORY ROW REVIVES WITH INJUNCTION

Destructor Company Declares It Will Continue Work Despite Court's Restraining Order.

With the signing of an injunction by Superior Judge Pendleton Monday morning inhibiting the execution of the crematory contract the wrangle over Atlanta's garbage destroyer began anew, giving promise of contempt of court proceedings and possibly an airing in Recorder's Court.

Evins & Spence, counsel for the Destructor Company, said work positively would continue without interruption, since Council had given his clients permission to carry on operations pending the signing of a new contract. C. P. Goree, attorney for Mayor Woodward, was equally dogmatic in asserting work must stop and that if it did not stop immediately he would go before Judge Pendleton and make a motion to have "everybody connected with it" cited for contempt.

"J. N. Renfroe and Others against the City of Atlanta and Others," is the style of the crematory case originally tried before Judge Pendleton, who refused to grant an injunction stopping work. The case was appealed, the Supreme Court reversing Judge Pendleton's ruling. The order of the Supreme Court reached Judge Pndleton Monday morning, and he immediately signed an injunction restraining further execution of the original crematory contract. The injunction reads:

New Contract Not Barred.

"The judgment of this court refusing to grant an interlocutory injunction in the case having been reversed by the Supreme Court of Georgia, and the judgment of that court having been made the judgment of this court, it is therefore considered, ordered and adjudged by this court that the defendants, the City of Atlanta and the Destructor Company, be and they are hereby enjoined and restrained until final hearing of this case before a jury from carrying out the contract referred to and set out in the original petition in this case and from performing any act under said contract. The city is not enjoined from making any other contract with these people for securing this crematory, so as not to violate the decision of the Supreme Court in this case."

Attorney C. P. Goree said the effect of this injunction would be immediate cessation of work on the crematory. Notwithstanding that Council, after the Supreme Court decree, gave the Destructor Company authority to work on the crematory pending a new contract, Mr. Goree said he would "have them put in jail" if the work was continued. When asked who he would cite for contempt, he replied:

"Everybody that has anything to do with it."

City Attorney Mayson said the city had accepted the court decree, and that Council thereafter granted the Destructor Company authority to proceed, and he, therefore, saw no reason why work should stop.

"Of course, no work can be done under the old contract," said Mr. Mayson; "but, as I see it, the Destructor people can remain in possession of the ground. The decree does not mean that Atlanta can not have a crematory."

Attorney Sam Evins, of Evins & Spence, secured a consultation with Mr. Goree in an endeavor to reach an agreement upon work pending the new contract. Mr. Goree adhered to his statement that all work should cease.

After the consultation with Mr. Evins, Mr. Goree said: "I just told Mr. Evins that if the Destructor Company continued work, it would be under that old contract, and that if they did anything at all, I would proceed against them for contempt."

"Don't wear too many clothes.

"Don't drink ice cold beverages.

"Don't look at the thermometer and keep thinking how hot it is."

CORONER SEEKS VITAL ORGANS OF PAINTER

JACKSONVILLE, June 23.—The fight over the possession of the vital organs of the late Edward Orie Painter reached a tense pitch to-day when Coroner C. D. Abbott left for Baltimore to contest the injunction preventing t ehremoval of the organs to Jacksonville. The injunction was requested by the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company, one of whose policies Painter held to the amount of $20,000 and which has been particularly active in the investigation of incidents surrounding the death of the fertilizer man. The company has announced that it desires a further investigation.

Coroner Wants Organs.

Coroner Abbott has been given until Wednesday to show cause why the injunction should not be granted. He said to-day that he would conduct personally the fight in Baltimore for the possession of the remains, presenting his claims as the only person entitled to conduct an official autopsy. He was accompanied by Deputy Sheriff L. R. Haddock.

The departure of the Coroner and the detention of the vitla organs in Baltimore necessitated the postponement of the inquest over Painter's body which had been set for to-day. It probably will be held Thursday or Friday immediately upon the return of the officers from Baltimore.

Grave Still Guarded.

Meanwhile deputies, under Sheriff Dowling, are maintaining their nightly vigil at Painter's grave at the insistent request of Mrs. Painter. The widow seems obsessed by the idea that ghouls have plotted to steal the body, her friends declare.

ATHENS, June 23.—Miss Katherine Erwin, aged 20, died unexpectedly yesterday after an illness of several weeks with fever, from which it was thought she had passed the danger point. Her father, Judge A. S. Erwin, who died several years ago, was a prominent lawyer and member of the State Railroad Commission.

The funeral will take place here to-day. She is survived by her mother and several brothers and sisters.

GREENSBORO, June 23.—A special session of Jones Superior Court to try Nick Wilburn, charged with the murder of James King, a prominent Jones County farmer, will not be called by Judge James B. Park, of Ocmulgee Circuit.

Wilburn and Mrs. King, charged as accessory, will be tried at the regular October term. Judge Park thinks conditions do not demand a special session.

Phone Girls to Seek Simple Life

Plan an Ideal Camp Vacation

Fresh Air and Fudge Their Menu

Miss Katherine C. Tatum.

500 Employees of Southern Bell Will Take Two Weeks' Rest in Woods.

The "back to the country" craze has hit the Southern Bell telephone exchange in Atlanta, and 500 hello girls, clerks, stenographers and bookkeepers are going to spend their vacations in the woods.

"Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife," where there are no hurry-up callers to disturb their temper and where the lines never get crossed, they plan to spend two weeks without a care in the world and live on fresh air and fudge.

The time—July 1 to September 31; the place,—M. O. Jackson's 290-acre farm on the Brown's Mill Road, two miles beyond the terminus of the Lakewood car line; the girl—why all of them, every single solitary one of them that operates the boards, keeps the books or takes dictation at the Atlanta branch of the Southern Bell Telephone Company: this is the scene and the synopsis and the whole plot in a nutshell.

Everyone's Talking It.

It's the one topic of conversation at the telephone exchange; everybody's talking about it. If an importunate creditor phones you he will sue if you don't settle, and about that time you hear a sweet voice say, "Won't that be lovely," don't think merely a hello girl talking about the outing to her nearest neighbor at the boards.

Miss Katherine C. Tatum, chief of the stenographic bureau, originated the idea three months ago. She confided to the head operators, Mrs. Mitchell and Misses Ada Mealor, Sammie Dixon and Alice Means, and they liked it.—The five of them consulted the telephone officials and received assurances of hearty endorsement and enthusiastic support in every way possible.

The girls were consulted, and they jumped at the idea. Miss Tatum completed the details, and the result is best told in her own words.

"Mr. Jackson volunteered to give us all the space we wanted on his 290-acre farm," she said. "His beneficence assured the success of our plan, because the greatest obstacle was to secure a site with abundant good spring water.

All Home Comforts.

"We will have a dozen tents, some of them 12 by 14 feet, others 18 by 20 feet. An average of half a dozen cots will be placed in each tent. We have arranged a perfect sanitary system. There will be running hot and cold water in each tent, and plenty of ice water.

"We will have a community library and will, of course, take the daily papers. We will have telephones, too. In short, we will have all the conveniences of the city together with the comforts and beauties of the country. Our camp site is a cool and beautiful place, free from swamps and malaria and mosquitoes, and we intend to keep it so clean there will be no flies.

"We will have a man cook and a matron. I myself will be in charge of the camp, and I intend to see that it is very home like and just as attractive as it can possibly be. We will have an acetylene gas system and shower baths.

"Careful contracting and financing has made it possible for us to have this outing at 50 cents a day. That's the total cost, and I'd like to know where there is a health resort or summer hotel where you can live as we will live for this price.

"Some of the girls are accustomed to go to New York during their vacations. The fare to New York and back is $48.40. The fare to our camp will be fifteen cents, five cents for the car ride and ten cents for an automobile bus to the camp, or thirty cents for the round trip. As compared with the New York trip, we will save $48.10 on fare alone, to say nothing of other expenses. Besides, we will have a cooler, healthier and nicer time at the camp.

Night Trips For Workers.

"Some few of the girls have already taken their vacations. We have arranged for these girls to go to the camp every night, if they want to. They will leave the office at 5:30 o'clock and get back at 8:30 o'clock the next morning. The trip, including their supper and breakfast, will cost fifty cents."

An idea of the thoroughness of the arrangements for the outing may be gained from the fact that the girls have already contracted for their country produce. Farms adjacent to their camp will provide chickens, eggs, butter, milk, vegetables and fruits. At least once a week an old time barbecue will be served.

Unlimited diversion will be obtainable. The Jackson farm has a magnificent concrete swimming pool, filled with water from the springs, and the girls have been tendered free use of it. A string band has been engaged to make music every night. Visitors, either men or women, will be received until a reasonable hour each night. The camp will accommodate fifty girls a day, and the girls unite in saying they will tax its capacity for the whole three months.

Perry Belmont Puts Up Home to Get Coin

CHICAGO, June 23.—Jacob Zelle, who said he was a Cleveland physician, was found last night walking along North Clark Street with no clothes on. He told a policeman that he was dead and was looking for an undertaker to bury him.

CORN CLUB WORK TO EXTEND TO NEGRO RACE

Statistics Show Its Members Manage 42 Per Cent of Georgia Farms—Yield Low.

By WALTER G. COOPER.
(Secretary Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.)

So far the Corn Club work hardly has touched the negro.

There have been a few negro farmers trained by demonstration agents who made fine records, but there has been no extensive organization for boys or men in the Corn Clubs or farm demonstration work.

Negroes manage 42 per cent of the farm sin Georgia. They cultivate 38 per cent of improved farm land and make crops worth $80,000,000 or $90,000,000 a year.

The number of negro farmers in Georgia increased 48 per cent in the lact decade, while the number of white farmers increased only 19 per cent.

The acreage of improved land cultivated by negro farmers increased 44 per cent in the last decade, while that cultivated by white farmers increased only 3 per cent.

From this it would appear that the proportion of negro farmers cultivating the land of Georgia is gaining rapidly on the proportion of white farmers.

Negro's Land Most Valuable.

It will surprise most people to know that the value of land cultivated by negro farmers is higher than that cultivated by white farmers. The census estimates the value of land cultivated by negro farmers at $14.93 an acre, and that cultivated by white farmers at $13.32.

This is a remarkable circumstance, considering the fact that the white farmer makes more on an acre of his land than the negro. This may be accounted for by the fact that the negro's equipment is inferior to the white man's.

In cotton the white man makes .44 of a bale an acre, and the negro .37. In corn the white man made 12.6, the negro 10.8 bushels an acre in 1910.

There has been a marked increase in the yield since 1910, but there are no figures to show whether the negro has kept up with the white man in that increase.

Of oats the white man made 15.7 bushels, the negro 12.6 in 1910.

Of sweet potatoes the white man made 95.9 bushels, the negro 72.5.

Negroes Building More.

In the past decade buildings on negro farms increased in value 238 per cent, while buildings on white farms increased 126 per cent.

In the same decade the value of implements and machinery on the land of negro farmers increase 171 per cent and on the land of white farmers 101 per cent.

The value of domestic animals, poultry and bees increased 218 per cent in the decade on negro farms and 103 per cent on white farms.

While the proportion of negro farmers owning land is still small—only 12.8 per cent—it has increased from 11,375 in 1900 to 15,698 in 1910, or 38 per cent, while the increase of ownership by white farmers has been from 77,154 to 82,930, or 7.5 per cent.

Negroes are in a majority in 66 Georgia counties, and these counties contain nearly one-half the land of the State, or about 27,406 square miles in a total of 58,725.

To Extend Club Work.

In view of these facts, it is very essential that something be done to improve negro farming. It is inconceivable and would be inexcusable if the great benefits of the corn club work and the farm demonstration work were not extended to a race which conducts 42 per cent of the farms in eGorgia.

Practically without touching this race, the improvement in agriculture has increased the yield of corn about 25,000,000 bushels, or about 60 per cent, in five years. If the same kind of work had gone on among the negroes the increase in the corn crop would have been in proportion and would have brought the total increase to something like 40,000,000 bushels against 25,000,000.

For this reason the corn show committee will give serious consideration to this question. The matter will be taken up with J. Phil Campbell, State agent of the corn clubs. Mr. Campbell is known to favor the extension.

High Living Cost Cause of Suicide

MACON, June 23.—J. D. Lester, president of the Macon Barbers' Union, killed himself yesterday by drinking an ounce of carbolic acid, after telephoning his wife that he would join her in a few minutes and go to church.

On Saturday Lester told his fellow-workers that the high cost of living was enough to make a man commit suicide. He left a note to his wife, "I could not endure it any longer."

Socrates Victim of Recall, Lawyer Says

CAMBRIDGE, MASS., June 23.—Making a plea for a less hostile attitude toward the judiciary, Zacharias Chaffee, Jr., who is taking his degree as a lawyer at Harvard, said in a commencement speech that the initiative and recall was tried on Alcibiades and Socrates in Athens and worked injustly.

Mr. Chaffee asked: "What is the use of changing one lawyer on the bench for another who thinks in much the same way?"

Family at Church as Robbers Loot Home

While C. W. Seagraves, who lives in Pace's Ferry Road five miles out of Atlanta, was at church with his family Sunday morning, burglars entered his home and stole the valuables. From a trunk $200 in cash was taken, besides silver plate and family jewels.

Seagraves discovered his loss upon returning from church about noon. The county police were notified, but as yet they have made no arrests.

NOBLE, IN TRANCE A YEAR, AWAKENS

Has No Recollection of Months in Hospital—Pathetic Meeting With Brother.

CLEVELAND, June 23.—After being in a state of coma for a year at the State Hospital for the Insane here, Shackery Nasham el Aswad, Syrian nobleman and graduate engineer, has awakened and will be taken home at once by his brother, Captain Kaail el Aswad, wealthy cotton producer and the Governor's chief of staff, who came all the way from Bramana, Mt. Lebanon, Syria, a year ago, and has been patiently awaiting ever since for his brother's recovery.

When Shackery regained consciousness, his brother, who had been in America for twelve months, had gone to New York for a few days. He was hastily summoned and arrived today. The meeting between the brothers was pathetic. They addressed each other by all the pet names they had used in childhood.

Shackery had no recollection of his months in the hospital, where he was sent May 24, 1912, when he appeared in a daze at the Y. M. C. A. here. Only a pocketbook identified him, and through this W. Stanley Hilliit, United States Consul at Beirut, located the stricken man's father, Nasham Assad Bake el Aswad, Syrian of high rank, who sent his other son here at once.

Coxey Has Currency Plan to End Taxes

CANAL DOVER, OHIO, June 23.—General Jacob S. Coxey, of "marching on Washington" fame, has advanced a new plan of currency reform, by which he says the United States could do away with all Federal taxes.

He would have the Government take over all the banks, abolishing the present banking system. Then, by loaning money at 6 per cent on good security, sufficient profit could be made to pay all the expenses of the Federal Government and prevent panics.

$25,000 More for Gettysburg Reunion

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Because of the underestimate by the War Department of the number of guests to be taken care of at the Gettysburg reunion next month Secretary Garrison announced an additional appropriation of $25,000 would be asked of Congress immediately.

There will be 50,000 visitors instead of 40,000 as at first estimated.

OTHERS WANT TO OUST M'REYNOLDS

District Attorney McNab Publishes Orders He Had to Delay Caminetti Trial.

SAN FRANCISO, June 23.—Other requests that Attorney General McReynolds be removed from the Cabinet were expected to follow that of Clayton Harrington, formerly a local judge, on account of the trouble that arose between the Attorney General and District Attorney McNab over the Diggs-Caminetti cases. McNab was awaiting word as to whether his resignation had been accepted at Washington.

Correspondence made public by McNab to-day purported to show that he (McNab) had acted in perfect accord with his duty in trying to bring up for trial Andrew Caminetti and Maury Diggs, accused of violating the white slave law.

McNab also told of the activity of former State Senator A. Caminetti, father of one of the defendants, recently appointed Commissioner General of Immigration, in trying to delay the trial.

McNab also made public telegrams he had received from Attorney General McReynolds ordering him to delay action in the cases of two of the eight directors of the Western Fuel Company indicted by a Federal Grand Jury.

Secretary Wilson Says He Delayed Trials.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—"I have stated all the facts. There is nothing further in the case and the public will have to judge for itself."

This is the only statement that Secretary of Labor Wilson will make to-day supplementing his announcement assuming responsibility for the postponement for the Diggs-Caminetti white slave case in San Francisco.

"It was for the benefit of the service that I wished to keep Mr. Caminetti, the Commissioner General of Immigration, in Washington for a time and I could not then see and do not now see any serious interference with justice," said the Secretary.

U. S. Converted to Need of Headlines

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Salesmen have been making a practice of displaying "pure food" decisions to customers, claiming products of rival concerns were condemned, when as a matter of fact the foods had been declared "O. K." To prevent this, a "headline" will be put over the top of every decision hereafter, stating clearly whether the manufacturer or the Government won.

Heretofore "it was frequently necessary to read the entire notice of judgment in order to learn whether a penalty had been entered or the defendant acquitted," the Department of Agriculture admits in a statement issued to-day. Salesmen took advantage of the average dealer's unwillingness to dig out the real meaning of decisions.

Shepard Is Carried Past Home of Bride

NEW YORK, June 23.—Persons on a late train from New York a few nights ago heard the porter call "Tarrytown" and wondered why Finley J. Shepard, husband of Helen Gould Shepard, did not alight.

Mr. Shepard only realized that he was going by his station when the train was under way. He is too much of a railroad man not to know the dangers of jumping, and therefore refused to take a chance. Ossining was the next stop. There Mr. Shepard alighted, obtained an automobile and "burned up" the Albany post road back to Irvington.

Ex-Gov. Dix Not to Govern Philippines

WASHINGTON, June 23.—To his visitors President Wilson has made it clear that he will not consider the name of former Governor John A. Dix, of New York, for the office of Governor of the Philippines or for any other post.

The governorship of the Philippines is to be given to one of three or four men already on a tentative list. President Wilson also is understood to have said that New York has been very well provided for in the big appointments.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Miss Edith St. Clair, ingenue for many years in Klaw & Erlanger musical comedies, has voluntarily given up her hope of collecting a judgment for $22,500 against her former employers, and has made affidavits in their favor for use on a motion to have her judgment set aside and a new trial granted.

Miss St. Clair sued Klaw & Erlanger to collect a $2,500 installment under an agreement to pay her $25,000 as a compromise under a disputed oral contract with the firm to pay her $75 a week for life.

30,000 in Denver For Big Play Fest

DENVER, COLO., June 23.—More than 30,000 persons will be guests of Denver during the thirty-first Bundesturnfest of North America, which begins this week. The preliminary events began today. The real carnival will begin Wednesday.

Only a Smart Man Can Raise Oranges

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Only the man "so constituted as to derive pleasure from exercising his mental faculties to the fullest extent" can grow oranges or grapefruit successfully. The United States Department of Agriculture says so.

BULGARIAN PLOT TO KILL GREEK KING FOILED

Soldiers Disguised as Citizens Are Arrested—One Confesses Conspiracy to Blow Up Palace.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SALONIKA, June 23.—A plot fomented by Bulgarians against the life of King Constantine of Greece has been discovered here. A number of Bulgar soldiers, disguised as civilians, were arrested to-day by the Greek military police.

A quantity of explosives had been discovered outside of the city gates and investigation led to the discovery of the conspiracy. One of the Bulgarians who was arrested confessed that an attempt was to have been made to blow up the King's palace.

Constant fighting between Greeks and Bulgarians is going on near here. The city has been strongly fortified on the landward side.

Bulgarians Refuse to Arbitrate; Crisis Near.

SOFIA, June 23.—Bulgaria to-day withdrew its recent acceptance of Czar Nicholas' proposal to arbitrate the territorial dispute between this country on one side and Servia and Greece on the other. This may mean that Russia's attempt to prevent a fresh conflict in the Balkans will prove futile.

The Bulgarian press is bitterly hostile against Russia, charging that the Russian Government is secretly encouraging Servia and Greece to take aggressive measures.

Official newspapers declare that Servia, Greece and Montenegro have entered into a secret league to strip Bulgaria of all the possible spoils of the Balkan war. The situation today was decidedly ominous, and the impression prevailed that the climax would be reached this week.

Irvin Cobb Scores on Montague Glass

NEW YORK, June 23.—Irvin S. Cobb's friends are boasting to-day over the ease with which Irvin had "put one over" on Montague Glass.

According to friends, Mr. and Mrs. Cobb were leaving the subway the other night, when they were met by a boy shouting at the top of his voice:

"Get your Saturday Evening Post! All about Montague Glass's latest story."

Mrs. Cobb questioned the boy, who exclaimed:

"Why, Mr. Glass lives right over there, and gives me a quarter for his paper every time he buys one. He's all right, he is."

The next day the same boy was shouting:

"Get your Saturday Evening Post. All about Irvin Cobb's story."

Newport Pleased by New Swedish Tango

NEWPORT, June 23.—A young and pretty dancer from Sweden, Miss Tonegen, has come to Newport to teach society women a number of new dances.

Hughes, Mrs. Shafter Howard and Mrs. Reginald Norman, were present and applauded.

Omaha Is Center of I. W. W. War; 18 Jailed

OMAHA, NEBR., June 23.—Calls went out over the United States today to Industrial Workers of the World, bidding them gather in Omaha and protest against the action of the city authorities in locking up eighteen I. W. W. street speakers.

City authorities, foreseeing trouble here like that at Denver, when the jails were filled, ordered the arrest of all who attempted to hold street meetings.

Calls Morgan's Will Safe Kind; Others Not

PITTSBURG, June 23.—"Don't copy the Harriman will," was the advice given to the members of the Pennsylvania Bankers' Association by Daniel S. Remsen, of the New York Bar, an authority on post mortem administration of wealth, in a plea for the scientific preparation of wills.

He cited the will of J. Pierpont Morgan as a type that is safe and sound. The wills of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy and other persons of wealth, he said, were unsafe to follow.

MORE SUSPECTS HELD IN DUBLIN FOR SLAYINGS

Aged Couple Shot Down at Home. Robbery Motive Believed. Lynching Averted.

DUBLIN, June 23.—Three more negroes—six in all—were arrested Sunday afternoon suspected of being connected with the shocking murder of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Hewell, an aged couple, in front of their home here early Sunday morning.

So inflamed is the feeling in the community over the crime that Sheriff J. J. Flanders and his deputies made the arrests with the utmost secrecy, in order that a lynching, like that which threatened for several hours yesterday afternoon, may not take place.

The three negroes are in the city jail, but their presence was not generally known by the townspeople today. A large force of officers is guarding the jail. The first three negroes arrested were spirited away, presumably to Macon.

Evidence Against Harris.

Late developments in the brutal shooting of Sunday morning have established quite conclusively the connection of Smith Harris, one of the negroes arrested yesterday morning, with the revolting double murder. A suitcase known to have been the property of Hewell and his wife was found in the home of Harris when a search was made by the officers. Robbery plainly was the motive, and to-day's new theory is that it was planned by whites and carried out by the negroes.

The crime was one of the most cold-blooded and dastardly in the annals of Laurens County. Hewell was called from his bed in the early hours of Sunday morning and deliberately shot down. One side of his face was partly shot away by the charge from the gun, and yet he lived for several hours, a blood trail showing where he made his way to a stream nearby, and a returning trail marking his way back to the house and almost to the very spot where he stood when shot.

Woman Shot Down.

Mrs. Hewell, it is supposed, heard the shots and came to her husband's assistance. She was threatened, and turned to go back in the house. As she did so she was shot in the thigh by one of the negroes and she dropped, when another negro shot her full in the back, killing her instantly.

A pack of bloodhounds picked up the trail of the murderers as soon as the news of the crime came to Sheriff Flanders. They followed the scent almost directly to the home of Smith, or Frank, Harris. He was placed under arrest, along with Joe May, who was found at his house. Harris' shoes are said to fit perfectly into the imprints about the Hewell home.

Sheriff Averts Lynching.

The bloodhounds were then put on another scent, where barefoot tracks met those of Harris near the Hewell home. The hounds went to the home of Henry Kitchens. A single-barreled shotgun, evidently recently fired, was found in one of the rooms.

Hundreds of residents, inflamed by the news of the crime, gathered about the jail. The officers put up a firm resistance, and the mob, without a leader, surged back and left a few of their number on guard. They proposed to return at nightfall.

Taking advantage of the respite given by the mob, Sheriff Flanders and other county officers spirited the three negroes out of the jail by a rear exit and hurried them toward Macon on the Eastman Road. The mob returned later to find their quarry gone.

In Jail at Macon.

MACON, June 23.—The three negroes charged with the murder of Mr. and Mrs. Howell at Dublin were lodged in the Bibb County jail at 3 o'clock this morning. They are confined in separate cells. The officers who brought the prisoners to Macon say that the prisoners refused to make any statement regarding the crime. They still refuse to talk.

Sees 1,000,000 Kisses Every Year Gatekeeper Expert On Osculation Custom Grows in Favor, He Says

H. T. Lewis, who opines he knows more about kisses than Noah Webster

Many Miss Trains Because They Must Have "Just One More," Declares H. T. Lewis.

When old Noah Webster solemnly set down in his book that a kiss is "a salute or caress given by smacking the lips," he probably thought he had said the last word on the subject, and a great many people have long held the view that Mr. Webster knew—impersonally—more about the kiss than any other man.

But he hadn't and he didn't.

An Atlantan has something to say about the kiss and its habits, and he deposes earnestly that he knows—impersonally, always impersonally—more about osculation than Mr. Webster or anyone else.

Which is by way of introducing H. T. Lewis, guardian of the portals of the Terminal Railway Station, in other words, a gatekeeper. Mr. Lewis declares he has seen more kissing and heard more kissing than any other man in Atlanta, and he is ready to fall in with the fashion and make an affidavit. He took a pencil and a piece of paper Saturday morning, and he "figgered" earnestly for some moments. Then he made this statement:

Million Kisses Yearly.

"I see 1,000,000 kisses a year—and I've been here six years."

He figures it this way:

He sees about sixty trains come and go each day, and the passengers average about 80 to a train. Of these about fifty kiss someone, either going or coming, which makes a trifle over a million smacks a year that are delivered and accepted at the gates.

Therefore, if seeing 6,000,000 kisses makes a man an authority on kissing, then is Mr. Lewis the last word on osculatory caresses. So listen to what he says about life on the "Bridge of Kisses"—as the station attaches have named the platform leading from the waiting room to the train sheds—and among other things you'll see why he is invariably in a good humor.

"If it wasn't for the kisses we see and the kisses we hear," he said, "the life of the gatekeeper would be deadly monotony. We see every kind of a kiss here at the gate, from the Marathon kiss of the lover to the bashful peck of the schoolboy and the earnest efforts of people to emulate a clap of thunder."

Kissing Gains in Favor.

Mr. Lewis said people are kissing more now than ever before, at least in the railway stations.

"The people who used to bid each other good-by with handclasps are now kissing," he declared. "Some people have to be kissed three or four times before they feel equal to the dangers of a trip. Many are the times I've seen them miss a train because they had to have just one more kiss."

With the 6,000,000 kisses in six years as a basis, certain scientifically inclined souls organized another expedition to Mr. Lewis' paper and pencil, and evolved the following startling and momentous facts:

If the sound of the 6,000,000 kisses were blended into one great burst of noise, it would equal the report of the Presidential salute of 21 cannon.

If the germs transmitted from kissers were placed end to end they would reach from the earth to the moon, or from hither to thither.

Mr. Lewis, growing excited as fact after fact was unfolded, voiced his intention of writing a book on "Six Years on the Bridge of Kisses, or Osculatory Facts and Fancies." In this volume he expects to arrange and classify the kiss, as he has seen it in six years of careful observation. In one chapter he proposes to classify the kiss as follows:

The Syncopated Kiss—Much in vogue among the younger set. Consists of rapid-fire pressures of the lips, accompanied by such phrases as "Be good, Kid."

The Sob Kiss—Used exclusively by those afflicted with newlyweditis, and those about to be.

The Thunder Kiss—Peculiar—almost—to the genus Africanus. This kiss requires a commodious pair of lips.

The Fear Kiss—Used by men whose breath smells of cloves.

The Peachtree Pucker—A possession of women who affect canes and poodle dogs.

Campanini Is Given Applause in Paris

PARIS, June 23.—A Beethoven-Verdi-Saint-Saens festival took place at the Paris Opera House under direction alternately of Maestro Campanini, now manager of the Chicago Opera House, and Saint-Saens.

The chief feature was a finished performance of Verdi's "Requiem," conducted by Campanini. He was warmly applauded.

CONTESTANTS IN PONY RACE LET CHANCES SLIP

Many Votes To Be Had for the Asking—Energetic Ones Have Better Opportunity.

Every day persons come into The Georgian and American offices and order the paper sent to this or that address, saying nothing about votes. If these persons had been approached by one of the boys or girls in the pony contest the candidate would have been rewarded by a good batch of votes.

This only goes to show that votes are to be had for the asking.

Mail orders from the country, too, show that the boys and girls outside the city are not getting every subscriber they could.

Only Hustlers Win.

Contestants should remember that anyone will feel kindly toward the boy or girl asking them to subscribe for The Georgian and American. Whoever subscribes gets his money's worth, and the candidate gets the votes.

The 22 ponies and the 44 watches are going to be given away. Some one is going to win them. They will go to the contestants who show the greatest amount of activity, who use the greatest amount of intelligent effort.

There is no notch into which a weak, vacillating candidate will fit.

Optimism Big Help.

The idle dreamers and "wishful" candidates will gravitate to the bottom just as surely as a stone sinks in water, or a short-winded man falls behind in a foot race.

Optimism helps every time, and the candidate who believes he can get votes will get them.

Remember, the bonus offer for clubs of five still is in effect. If you need a subscription to complete a club, tell people. They will be just that much more ready to help you.

Big gains were shown in the standings yesterday. The race is becoming lively.

Women's Attire and Nude in Art Scored By Dr. Dunbar Ogden

An appeal for decency in life and art was made by the Rev. Dr. Dunbar Ogden at the Central Presbyterian Church Sunday night. The extreme fashion of woman's attire of the present day was declared by him to be a menace to the morals and the nude in art was even more vicious.

Dr. Ogden referred to a number of local instances to illustrate his sermon. Talking of the moving picture film, "Quo Vadis," he said: "We have the illustration of how Rome threw decency to the winds as it indulged in bacchanalian revelry. History tells us of how Rome tottered and fell. Our present trend is toward the moral disintegration which destroyed Rome."

Referring to the recent exhibition of art in the show windows of Atlanta stores, he declared their exhibition to be a crime, and that punishment as such should be meted out to the exhibitors.

Rattlesnake in Bed Bites Boys to Death

BEACH, N. DAK., June 23.—When Mrs. Dave Grant, who lives near here, called her two sons, aged 5 and 7, she found them dead in bed, with a rattlesnake lying between them.

When the boys retired the previous evening each had complained the other was pinching him.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Keith Bill at the Forsyth.

The headline feature of the bill of vaudeville at the Forsyth this week is Gertrude Vanderbilt, the ever-popular little star of musical comedy. She and George Moore hold a position in vaudeville that has never been reached by any other singing and dancing duo.

The big extra added feature will be "Ideal," the champion lady swimmer and diver, who, Professor John Aldredge, of Columbia University, declares to be the most perfectly formed woman in the world. "Ideal" is going to give an exhibition of fancy swimming and diving in a tank pool sunk in the Forsyth stage.

Other features are the Six Musical Cuttys, pretty Minnie Allen, Doc O'Neil, comedian; Dorothy Richmond and her company, in a sketch, and the Four Hayama Japs, gymnasts. Matinee this afternoon.

"Quo Vadis" at the Grand.

"Quo Vadis," witnessed by thousands at the Grand at daily matinee and night exhibitions last week, commences its second week at the big theater with matinee and night performances to-day. The second week of the engagement of the pictures was arranged to take care of the great demand for seats from people who could not get accommodations last week.

The 10,000 feet of Italian film, in three acts and eight scenes, makes an entertainment continuing two and a quarter hours, and without a single second that fails to interest. The picture is all that has been said for it and more, too.

"The Merry Whirl" at the Bijou.

This week's attraction for the Bijou gives promise of being one of the most interesting and pleasing of the summer season. It is called "The Merry Whirl." There is splendid opportunity for good comedy work and the introduction of catchy musical numbers, in which the chorus takes a prominent part.

"The Merry Whirl" is said to be one of the most pretentious productions that will be seen this season at the Bijou.

Matinees will be given every afternoon at 3 o'clock, except Monday and Saturday. On these days the matinees will take place at 2:30 and 4. Night performances, as usual, at 7:30 and 9.

LITTLE STORIES of the TOWN

Trying It on the Guest First.

A little boy, who lives on Ponce DeLeon Avenue, was given two images of plaster, coated on the outside with pink sugar. He wanted to eat the images, but he was warned on no account to do so.

"They are poison," he was told. "If you eat them it will kill you."

However, the boy was dubious. He had been cheated before this by grown-up people. Finally he had a young friend to spend the day with him and that night it was discovered that one of the images had disappeared. His mother, nearly frantic, rushed to him.

"Harold," she said, "where is the pink image?" Harold frowned as he answered, defiantly: "I gave it to Richard, and if he's alive to-morrow I'm going to eat the other one myself."

Sympathy for Poor Little Edwin.

Victor and Edwin, aged 6 and 4, respectively, had just been seated at the table for dinner. There were five older persons present and this was really the first time that either of those kids had been allowed to sit up for the big meal of the day. Victor looked across the snowy board as the dessert was brought on, made a hasty calculation and burst into a loud and long wail.

"What's the matter, Victor," asked one of the elders.

"There's seven of us and there ain't but six desserts. Poor little Edwin ain't goin' to get none!"

Age in Language on Expense Account.

This one was told the other evening by a guest of some officers stationed at Fort McPherson:

An army officer in his expense list on Government service put down:

"Porter, 10 cents."

The officer was requested to report to the War Office, where he was told:

"While executing public duty refreshments are not chargeable to the nation."

"The item does not represent refreshments," he replied, "but a fee to a carrier."

"You should have said 'porterage,'" was then explained to him.

When the officer had occasion to take a hansom, remembering instructions, he wrote in his accounts:

"Cabbage, 50 cents."

Hearer Dies as Text Is Read by Pastor

William B. Maner, age 65 years, died from heart failure while attending services at the Collins Springs Baptist Church Sunday morning. Rev. H. G. Mitchell, the pastor, had just announced the text of his sermon when Mr. Maner slipped down in his seat.

The deceased was well known in Atlanta, especially among railroad men. A wife and eight children survive him. Funeral services were held Monday morning at the residence, 6 Guyton Street.

Lauder Appears in Church as Preacher

LONDON, June 23.—Harry Lauder, the Scotch comedian, appeared in a new role in a church at Bristol yesterday. He preached a sermon and sang several hymns as solos.

The 1,200 admission tickets were rapidly bought up and many people who were anxious to attend were disappointed.

MME. RAPPOLD'S ROMANCE IS REVEALED

Prima Donna, to Wed Tenor Berger, Waited Long for Freedom, She Says.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Mme. Marie Rappold, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, has told the story of her romance which is to culminate in her marriage this week to Rudolph Berger, the tenor.

She discussed the wedding preparations and told of the great happiness which had come to her after eight years of waiting to gain her freedom and the right to marry the man who had won her heart.

The wedding will take place at Long Branch, N. J., in the home of a friend of the prima donna. It was to have taken place last week, but Mr. Berger was commanded by the Kaiser to remain in Germany during the fest performances.

"Long, Weary, Hard Wait."

"No one but the Kaiser could have prevailed upon my fiance to postpone our wedding any longer," said Mme. Rappold as she smiled.

"It has been a long, weary, hard wait, and never a moment has our love wavered," added the beautiful singer, who recently obtained a Western divorce from Dr. Julius Rappold. "In fact, the five weeks we spent together abroad two months ago were the happiest of my life, and we both felt that we deserved our complete happiness, which, after all, is in marriage. It surely has been a romance stranger than fiction in many ways.

"Eight years ago I signed a contract with Mr. Conried, who felt that he had found in me a great Wagnerian singer. I went at his advice to Bayreuth to study German opera. I reached Bayreuth during the night, and in the morning I went for a drive.

Loved Him at First Sight.

"The very first man I saw was Rudolph Berger. It was extraordinary, for from that instant we were in love—genuinely, beautifully, earnestly in love. I wasted no time in telling my husband of my newfound happiness. We had already found our lives uncongenial, and my life was empty, save in the love I had from my little daughter Lillian.

"I soon found that while Mr. Berger was known as a baritone, his voice really was tenor. He took my advice and came to New York in 1906, spent a year taking instructions from my teacher, Oscar Sanger, and developed, as I knew he would, into perhaps the greatest Wagnerian tenor in the world."

'Wishing Sash' Has Come to Stay

Miss Purtell Says It Brings Luck

Anyhow, It Makes Pretty Picture

Miss Myolene Lowe Purtell, who is sure "wishing sash" will be a lasting fad.

Hark, hark! the dogs do bark, the solons are coming to town—some in rags, and some in tags (but none with jags), and some in velvet gowns!

Or words to that effect!

Anyway, we have with us this evening, gentle readers, the esteemed and ever-venerated Jawjaw Legislature.

It has been coming in on every train for 24 hours or more, and there now is a sufficiency of it on hand for organization purposes if organization were the order of business for the day.

All day long the Kimball House lobby has been alive with statesmen, real and near.

Most of them are optimistic with respect to the outlook, and the more they get acquainted with one another the better they are pleased with themselves.

Not only is the city filling up rapidly with members of the new General Assembly, but dozens of oldtimers, legislative veterans now retired, voluntarily and otherwise, to more or less subdued obscurity, also are in our midst, undertaking to get wise to what is what and who is who.

On all sides one hears good words and kind with respect to the incoming Governor, and good wishes for his administration are on everybody's lips.

John M. Slaton, for the first time in sixteen years, is not a member of the Legislature, and while he has been promoted to be the head of the entire State for a season, he knows practically every member of the new Legislature, and in its entirety it seems to wish him mighty well.

Scores of new members have called on the new Governor to-day to pay their respects.

To-night the Legislature will be all but unanimously on hand and ready for business.

Despite the claims and counter claims of the two leading candidates for the Presidency of the Senate, the average legislator still is very much "from Missouri" with respect to that matter.

Both Senator Allen and Senator Anderson claim more than enough to elect, and while nobody believes either is claiming anything less than he really believes, as a matter of fact, few Senators believe that either man actually has sufficient unqualified pledges to put him over.

"These claims remind me," said a prominent South Georgia politician to-day, "of a story they used to tell up in Cedartown on Major W. R. Beck, grand old man, dead these many years, rest his soul!

"The Major was a candidate for Ordinary, or something, and one of his friends was checking over the voters of the city registration list. After checking off all those the Major claimed, his friend then said, 'Well, Major, these men may be depended upon to vote for you, may they?' The old Major looked his friend in the eye, and replied, 'How the h—l do I know—they've promised to, but how the h—l do I know what they will do!'

"The trouble is, it's so hard to tell exactly what constitutes a political promise—men often say and write things that are construed as unqualified promises, when they never intended them that way at all."

Representative Crawford Wheatley, of Sumter, will introduce his famous lieutenant governor bill again at the forthcoming session of the Legislature.

Mr. Wheatley has been an enthusiastic advocate of creation of this office for many years, and while a member of the Senate he succeeded in passing through that body, almost unanimously, a bill making it part of the Constitution.

The measure was killed in the House, however, and while attempts have been made since then to enact the suggestion into law, they have not succeeded.

The gentleman from Sumter, who is sure to be one of the most popular men in the General Assembly, is very hopeful that this time his pet measure may become a law.

One step toward commission form of government for the city of Greensboro has been made by the publication of notice to the effect that at the next session of the General Assembly a bill will be introduced which will allow the City Council of Greensboro to elect a secretary and treasurer from any citizen who is eligible to act as an alderman.

The notice is published under the signature of H. M. Spinks, City Clerk of Greensboro, and it is thought that the bill will be introduced in the lower branch of the Legislature by Hon. W. P. McWhorter, Greene's Representative.

Much trouble has been experienced by the "city fathers" of Greensboro in the past in securing one of their own number to act as secretary and treasurer, and it is thought that the proposed change will remedy to a great extent some of the cumbersome methods of the city government.

The new Commissioner of Agriculture, James D. Price, of Oconee, got in to-day, and has been as busy as he could be shaking hands and receiving congratulations.

Mr. Price is just up from a sick bed, but doesn't look the part. Everybody likes him, and everybody gives him the glad hand.

He is a practical farmer, knows his way about politically, and the general prediction is that he is sure to make good on his new job.

He expects to be commissioned next Monday, and will present himself at the Executive Department bright and early to receive from the hands of Governor Slaton his warrant to do business.

He likely will be the first new State House officer to be commissioned.

TARIFF AFFECTS SOUTH LITTLE, SAYS SMITH

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia, member of the sub-committee which considered the cotton schedule in the tariff bill, considers the cotton schedule the one of greatest interest to the South and about the only schedule touching that section as a whole to any extent.

"The most important feature in the cotton schedule is the provision which adds 2 1-2 per cent to the tariff tax on cotton yarns when combed, bleached, dyed or mercerized," he said. "The House has added 2 1-2 per cent to the tariff on cotton cloth when dyed, mercerized or painted. The Senate Finance Committee considered that the same treatment should be given to cotton yarns. Other than in this respect little change was made in the cotton schedule.

"The Senate committee, however, placed alizarin, anthracene and all carbazol dyes on the free list and made duties obtained from alizarin, anthracene, indigo also free. While these changes will not affect the selling price to the consumer of cotton products, the free dyes aid the manufacturers in meeting the heavy cut placed on the duties of their products and the increased duty for combing, dyeing and mercerized yarns preserving to the yarn products their just relation to the cloth manufacturers.

"Amendments made in the Senate are thoroughly in line with the Democratic platform, and give the first instance of the Senate being even more Democratic than the House."

350,000 POSTAL DEPOSITORS.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—There are 12,820 postal depositaries, 350,000 depositors and $85,000,000 in deposits. The Postmaster General is now receiving applications from postmasters for postal savings bonds to be distributed July 1.

MACON, June 23.—Miss Mary Horne, daughter of Mrs. E. A. Horne, High Street, was rescued from drowning at Lakeside Park, after she had gone down three times, by Joseph Moore, son of Mayor John T. Moore.

The youth jumped into the water with his clothes on. Miss Horne plunged into water twenty feet deep, although barely able to swim.

Women Are Drifting To Double Standard, Dr. White Declares

A spirit of rebellion against parasitism was the explanation given for the rapid spread of the feminist movement by Dr. John E. White in his morning sermon Sunday at the Second Baptist Church.

Dr. White said women had become dissatisfied with the social conditions which made them little more than dependents on their husbands and gave them no activities or opportunities for self-development outside the walls of their own homes.

A significant statement was that the equality of rights, which he believed surely in prospect, undoubtedly would bring man and woman to the same level and would establish a single standard of morals for the two sexes. Either the man would rise to the higher plane upon which woman exists or woman would sink to man's level.

He regretted that the present tendency appeared toward the adoption of man's code of morals by the women.

He thought, however, that this condition was temporary and that man would bring himself to her level.

44 Women Want to Clean Phila. Streets

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—Forty-four women took the Civil Service tests in this city for street cleaning inspectors. They toiled all morning on five hundred word treatises showing how they would clean the streets of the municipality and what they thought was the most needed thing to improve the condition of the streets.

They were required among other things to describe the most approved apparatus for the cleaning of the streets. They were asked the difference between some of the various kinds of machines, their purposes and the practical operation, the relation of the street cleaner to the community, the reasons for the excessive litter in certain sections and the value of moral suasion when applied in the proper places.

Fears Wife Is Held As Slaver Captive

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—Mystery surrounds a search by the police for Mrs. Ernestina Welden, wife of Elwood A. Welden, former Secretary of the American Consulate in Paris and Budapest.

Mrs. Welden was going shopping, she told her husband. That afternoon he received a letter from her telling that she was going away as a traveling companion to a woman. Special Agent Garberino, of the Department of Justice, fears she has fallen into the hands of white slavers.

THE HAGUE, June 23.—The indications are that the elections for members of the Dutch Parliament will result in favor of the coalition of Catholics and anti-revolutionists.

ST. SIMONS TAKEN BY MILITIAMEN

Cavalry Troops Spend Sunday Resting, and Are Ready for Annual Maneuvers.

BRUNSWICK, June 23.—The summer inhabitants of St. Simons Island looked out on warlike scenes Monday morning when the troopers of the Second Squadron of cavalry began military maneuvers at Camp Joseph Brown. The first work of the week followed a day of fun and recreation for the soldiers.

The boys were allowed liberties all day Sunday as a sort of compensation for the hard work Saturday, when camp was pitched. That they took advantage of these liberties is verified by hundreds of visitors to the camp.

Perhaps the most amusing thing of all was the surf bathing in which hundreds of troopers took part from 7 o'clock in the morning until evening.

The boys were not content with this, however, for the annual blanket tossing of the "high privates in the rear rank" was indulged in freely, much to the enjoyment of the spectators. One young private was tossed into the limbs of a tree, where he was rescued by several brawny comrades.

Major Hunter, of the Third Battalion, and Adjutant McCollum are among the busiest men in the camp, for many orders must be issued in the early stages of the encampment. The real work of the week probably will not begin before Tuesday.

Brundidge Wins as Arkansas Governor

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., June 23.—Returns from a majority of the counties in Arkansas show that Stephen Brundidge, of Searcy, has received the gubernatorial nomination of the Democratic party by a comfortable majority.

Judge George W. Hayes has shown surprising strength, especially in the country districts, and his followers have not yet given up the fight.

Girls Refuse to Tell What They Hope for When Tying Knots. Only Laugh.

The "wishing sash" has come to Atlanta to stay, it seems. Another fair advocate of its use appears in the person of Miss Myolene Lowe Purtell, and this is an added guarantee of its value, which makes certain the fact that it is not a passing fad.

Miss Purtell believes in the "wishing sash." Of all the wishes that she has wished while knotting it about her waist, none has gone ungranted, she says.

Miss Purtell, like the other girls who wear the "wishing sash," smilingly refuses to declare the nature of the wishes that have accompanied it. All the wishes that all the "wishing sash" girls have made must have been happy wishes, though, because the girls laugh at you over the secret of them.

But even without its efficacy in making dreams come true, the "wishing sash," as Miss Purtell wears it, has a very distinct reason for being. It is an adorable article of apparel, particularly so in this instance, when the young woman, twining the bright red silk about the waist of her white gown, made the prettiest of pictures.

Those who watched her uttered a fervent wish, themselves. And it was that the "wishing sash" become a permanent institution.

Remember, it is a long sash, a la Bulgarian, and it is wound about the maiden's waist, and its long ends knotted. The wish is made as the knot is being tied, and the knot remains until the wish comes true. Almost any color will do, and against a white dress the effect is bewitching.

PEA FOWL-BUFFALO DUEL.

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—A duel between a buffalo and a pea fowl was witnessed by hundreds at the Zoological Gardens here. The fowl darted in and out, pecking at the buffalo, but finally was crushed.

Old Fogyisms of To-day

By DOROTHY DIX.

ONE of the most interesting plays of the past season was Arnold Bennett's "Milestones." The theory of the drama was growth. It showed how the advanced thought of one day is the conservatism of the next and the old fogyism of the day after.

In the play the hero breaks with his business partner because he wants to build iron ships instead of wooden ships. "You'll be ruined if you do," says the standpatter; "iron ships will never float. You might as well build stone ships."

The progressive man goes on and builds iron ships and makes a fortune, but at middle life his partner wants to build steel ships. "Never," cries the old man, with his conservative old ideas, "iron ships are all right, but steel ships will never float." The young man builds his steel ships, that give us our Mauretanias, and then, when he has grown old, comes a young man talking of building airships, and he cries out, as the other two old men have done about the iron ships and the steel ships, "that airships will never be practicable."

This play, "Milestones," is the biggest suffrage play ever written, and offers the best suffrage argument.

Go back three generations. The question of whether a woman should be given an education then was just as burning a one as the question of whether she should be given a right to vote is now. And precisely the same arguments were brought against it as are brought against woman suffrage now.

An Old Belief.

In our great-grandmothers' time it was contended that it would unsex a woman to teach her geography, and make her bold and unwomanly and kill her sweet feminine charm for her to receive an education. Also that only a few blue stockings among women wanted an education. Therefore, it was foolish and wrong to open college doors to the feminine sex.

Well, by dint of a heroic fight by a few women for all women, the privileges of education were extended to girls, and the learning that our forefathers so feared would unsex and demoralize women has brought about none of the calamities they foretold. Women are still women. They are still sought in marriage, and so far from only a few caring for an education, the girls outnumber the boys in high schools. Education has not unfitted women to be good mothers. It makes them better ones.

Look back at the time when education was thought to endanger women, and you will laugh as you did at the man who was so sure that an iron ship couldn't be made to float.

The next milestone that we have passed is the one that marked the place where women began to go into gainful occupations. In our grandmothers' day the only way a woman had to make a good living was to marry it. By and by a few bold and heroic women rebelled at this state of affairs and demanded a right to go into any kind of business that they were fitted for. The whole conventional world raised one grand howl of protest.

A woman's place is in the home, it cried, whether she's got a home or not, or anything to eat in it or not. If she goes out into the world to work she will become unsexed. She will become coarse and vulgar, and wear short hair and trousers, and smoke and swear, and men won't marry her, and everything will go to the bow-wows.

There are eight million wage earning women in the United States, and if there are any unsexed among them the Eden Musee has failed to get them. So far from the working girl having her love of dress eliminated, the trouble with her is that she's too much given to frills. Also, instead of being opposed to marriage she gets married just when she's most valuable to her employer. The finest woman in the world to-day is the wide-awake, competent business girl, amply able to stand on her own feet, and earn what she needs. She is the prop of her family, and a blessing to society.

It's as absurd to think that people were ever afraid to give women the right to earn an honest living as it is to think that they ever prophesied that you couldn't make a steel ship that would float.

The third milestone that we have passed is the property milestone. Up to our mother's day when a woman married every cent she had passed into her husband's exclusive possession. This was true although the man might be a gambler and a spendthrift, swamped to his chin in debts of which the woman knew nothing, or whether he was a good fellow of the shiftless sort between whose fingers money leaks as water through a sieve.

When it was first proposed to pass property laws securing a woman's money to herself it was fought tooth and nail—even by many women. People said it would break up the home, and produce endless friction between husbands and wives. Women cried out that if they could trust themselves to their husbands they could trust their money. It was contended that for a woman to own her own money would make her bossy and insulting to her husband.

They Worked Well.

Nevertheless some property laws, not adequate ones yet, have been passed, and it has been found out that they worked out for the general good. The right sort of man didn't want to bind up his wife and rob her of her property, and the woman who is married to the wrong sort finds out that it is, at least, some consolation to have a roof over her head when her dream of love is broken.

Nobody would now argue that a woman hasn't a right to her own property or to the money she earns, any more than they would contend that we should go back to the old days of the wooden sailing ships.

And now we have come to the last milestone in the march of woman's progress. It is the demand that women who own property and pay taxes, who form one-half of the population, who are amenable to the law, should stand before that law on an equal platform with men.

Those who object say that for women to vote will unsex them, that it will take away their feminine charm, that men won't want to marry them, that it will break up the home, that not all women want to vote, just as they said these things about educating women, or about women being given a chance to make an honest living, and about women being permitted to control their own property.

Not one single evil prophecy founded on women's advancement has been fulfilled. May we not confidently believe that we may give woman the ballot not only without danger, but that their help is needed in politics just as much as it is needed in the home and the business world? Why should we not then pass this last milestone, too, and set our faces toward the onward journey?

A bow of velvet of the same tone hides the lower end of the paradise.

The other picture shows an afternoon gown of white supple moire. The bodice is a kimono crossed with a small decollete in the V shape, with small plastron of embroidered linen. A shawl collar achieves the yoke. The sleeves are of three-quarter length, with small revers trimmed with three small buttons of the same material, a point going up over the middle front of the bodice.

The underskirt is straight and buttoned on the front with buttons of the material.

Too Much for the Chimney

WHEN Grandfather Lickshingle heard it read from a newspaper that Peter Ripley had a lamp chimney which his family had used for thirteen years, he rapped savagely on the floor with his walking stick and said:

"Now, what the dickens is the use of putting such reading in the newspaper? If they want some information about lamp chimneys, let them come to me and get it. When me and your grandmother broke up housekeeping we had a lamp chimney. But it wasn't made in these 'ere shoddy times. I paid a penny for it the day we were married. That was away back somewhere in the last century. We used it night and day for 79 years and eight——"

"Why, grandpa, you didn't have to use it in the daytime, did you?"

"Didn't have to—no. But we did. Used it at night on the lamp, and in the daytime we used it to drive nails with. Sometimes the children cracked nuts with it, and the road surveyor borrowed it several times to pound stones on the streets. One day I thought they had lost it. The workmen had left it on the road, and the street cars ran over it seventeen times before it was found. This lamp chimney had been in a railway collision, 22 lamps had exploded under it during its time, a horse kicked it clean through the side of the stable, and the chimney came out of it all without as much as a crack, but the horse had to be sent to the hospital. However, it's broke now," said grandfather, with a deep sigs.

"Then you were foolish enough to let the servant clean it, were you?" asked mother.

"No, but we might as well. When we gave up keeping house I gave it to a friend. He was hard of hearing, and he wanted it for an ear trumpet. One day a man tried to tell him why he ought to be President, and that he was the only real man for the job, and, by cracky, he burst the chimney into a million pieces."

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

In the amiable way of villagers, they were discussing the matrimonial affairs of a couple who, though recently wed, had begun to find the yoke of Hymen a burden.

"'Tis all along o' them hasty marriages," opined one caustic old gentleman, who had been much to the fore in the discussion. "They did not understand each other. They'd nobbut knowed each other for a matter of seven year."

"Well, that seems long enough," said a listener.

"Long eno'? Bah! Ye're wrong. When a body's courting, he canna be too careful. Why, my courtship with Mary lasted a matter of nineteen years."

"You were certainly careful," agreed the listener; "and did you find your plan successful when you married?"

"Ye jump to conclusions hastily," said the old man. "I understood her then, so I didna marry her!"

A sad-looking man went into a chemist's. "Can you give me," he asked, "something that will drive from my mind the thought of sorrow and bitter recollection?"

Then the chemist nodded, and put him up a little dose of quinine and wormwood and rhubarb and Epsom salts and a dash of castor oil, and gave it to him, and for six months the man could not think of anything in the world except new schemes for getting the taste out of his mouth.

The portly lady had accidentally taken a rear seat in a car reserved for smokers. With unconcealed indignation she watched the man beside her fill his pipe.

"Do it now, ma'am!" said the man, as he carefully lighted up; "then take my advice an' stop it!"

Corporal (to soldiers)—"Why is the blade of the saber curved instead of straight?"

Soldier—"It is curved in order to give more force to the blow."

Corporal—"Humbug! The saber is curved so as to fit the scabbard. If it was straight, how would you get it into the crooked scabbard, blockhead?"

Blink (the wholesaler)—"Well, how many orders did you get yesterday?"

Gink (the salesman)—"I got two orders in one shop."

Blink—"What were they?"

Gink—"One was to get out and the other was to stay out."

"Have you a spare cigar about you, old chap?"

"Certainly. But I thought you were going to stop smoking?"

"I am, but not too abruptly. I've already stopped smoking my own cigars."

A factory in Grenoble, France, utilizes the water of a reservoir situated in the mountains at a height of 200 yards. The water reaches the factory through a vertical tube of the same length, with a diameter of considerably less than an inch, the jet being used to move a turbine. Experiments have shown that the strongest men can not cut the jet with the best tempered sword, and in some instances the blade has been broken into fragments without deflecting a drop of the water and with as much violence as a pane of glass may be shattered by a blow from an iron bar. It has been calculated that a jet of water a small fraction of an inch in thickness, moving with sufficient velocity, could not be cut by a rifle bullet.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

From where Gordon stood the wild windstorm seemed to be rushing directly toward him with twice the speed of the fastest express train, cutting a path five hundred feet wide. Even as he looked the tornado, with a rush and a roar, swept up between the mansion and the huge granite rock in the valley. Gordon dashed for the brook to seek some sheltering bank, but ere he could reach it the cyclone was upon him, or at least the edge of it, and he was picked up as though he was a chip of wood, carried forty feet in the air and hurled to the opposite side of the brook, where he lay stunned.

When Gordon came to his senses he found himself surrounded by four rough looking men, dressed in the garb of the mountaineer. They assisted him to his feet and he worked his arms, legs and body to ascertain if there were any bones broken. Finding himself apparently sound, he smiled.

"I never rode on the wings of a cyclone before," he said, "and I don't believe I ever want to try it again."

None of the men he addressed made direct reply to this cheerful remark. They stood close to him and eyed him critically. Finally one of them, a black-bearded man, said:

"I reckon you're Gordon Kelly."

"I am," replied Gordon, surprised that the stranger should know that name.

Gordon a Prisoner.

As if this answer were a signal for attack, the four men closed in on him. One of them had a rope and he attempted to pinion Gordon's arms. Though taken completely by surprise, Gordon put up a desperate struggle, but was quickly overpowered by the four men, all of whom seemed possessed of uncommon strength. His arms were tied behind his back and he was commanded to walk forward.

"What's the meaning of this?" demanded the prisoner.

The man with the black beard answered.

"I reckon nothin' ain't goin' to harm yer, if yer obey orders. If yer don't we'll make yer. Come along."

But Gordon refused to move. He said in a calm voice.

"Just tell me what this all about, will you, please? You've made a mistake. I have done nothing to you. You've got the wrong man."

"You ain't done nothin' to us, but you're the man we want. Come along, now." The black-bearded man drew a six-shooter from his pocket and grasped the weapon by the barrel. "I don't want to hit yer with this yere pistol, but I reckon I'll have to unless yer do what I tell yer."

Gordon saw that all four men were armed, though the black-bearded man was the only one to make a display. Resistence was useless and might bring him needless injury, so without further words he walked ahead in the direction indicated feeling that in a short time the whole thing would be explained and he would be allowed to go free. His captors followed the brook for nearly a mile and then turned off toward the northwest. They crossed the path of the cyclone, which had long since passed in its fury, leaving destruction in its wake, and continued on through thick forests and over rough and wild mountain country. Gordon tried to secure some information from the men, but they did not reply to his questions.

A Long Walk.

Finally, after walking northwesterly for about three miles, Gordon judged, they came to Pew Creek, the stream that flowed past the settlement bearing the same name nearly fourteen miles to the south of where they were. The prisoner knew the country well, especially the land bordering the creek. He knew not where his captors were taking him, but at least he was familiar with the ground. The bearded man, leading the way—he seemed to be the leader of the four—followed the creek for another mile until he struck the main road. Before reaching the road, however, the party stopped, while one of the men went ahead as a scout, evidently to make sure the road was clear. He waved a signal to advance and the others did so, crossing a bridge where the creek met the road and then plunging due west through another forest. They were getting on higher ground all the time and finally came to a clearing. Then, making a sharp ascent of about one hundred yards, they descended rapidly for another hundred yards and came to a small clump of trees, with underbrush growing high all around it. Walking straight ahead, the bearded man parted the underbrush and with Gordon following close, they passed through it and arrived at a log cabin, evidently of recent construction.

By this time it was almost dark. One of the men stepped inside the cabin and lighted two or three tallow candles, after which he set about preparing the evening meal. When the candles were glowing, the bearded man motioned Gordon to enter, which he did, the others following. Gordon glanced around. There were five rough banks, with a straw on them for bedding. There was no stove, but there was a fireplace in a corner, with a small chimney leading up from it, built of sticks of wood plastered with clay. The only article of furniture in the room was a rude bench. The bearded man then spoke the first words he had uttered since the march began. He said to Gordon:

"Yer won't be hurted none unless yer try to escape. Then we'll shoot." He untied the rope that bound Gordon's arms, one of the other men standing by with a revolver in his hand, and added: 'Maybe yer better git in one of them bunks till grub is ready.'"

Thoughts Busy.

Gordon rubbed the circulation back in his arms and then lay down. He had long since made up his mind to treat the situation good-naturedly, feeling that more could be accomplished that way than being nasty about it. He resolved to trust to cheerfulness and diplomacy in his intercourse with these men. He had not yet been able to figure out what their object was in making him a captive. Perhaps they would demand a ransom for his release. He could not satisfy himself how they knew his name, either. The thought flashed across him that Galen Deery had something to do with the matter. Perhaps the Atlanta capitalist had learned of his companionship with Mildred. It was possible that Shephard, his superintendent, had informed him. He recalled what Mildred had told him about her father's vast project and he tried to connect it with his present predicament.

While his thoughts were busy, the fire under the pots and pans was busy, too. Three of his captors began eating at once, while the fourth stood guard over Gordon with a six-shooter in his hand. Evidently they had planned the whole thing out in advance, as they had not spoken to each other since entering the cabin.

After eating a hearty meal of bacon, corn cakes, stewed beans and crackers, Gordon stretched himself, smiled and announced that he felt better. He thought the other men probably felt in better humor, too, so he tried to start a little conversation.

"Do you men expect to keep me here or will there be some more walking?" he asked, with a good-natured smile.

The black-bearded man nodded. "Right yere, I reckon," he replied, after some deliberation.

Allowed to Write.

There was no answer to this remark. Three of the men had lighted pipes. The fourth, who seemed to be somewhat younger than the others, had been relieved of guard duty and was now eating his supper. When he had finished he drew a bag of tobacco and some tissue paper from a pocket and rolled a cigarette. There was silence for a long time and then Gordon began again.

"I don't mind spending a little time with you men, as you appear to be willing to treat me fairly. I suppose you will tell me what this is all about when you get ready to do so. You won't find me troublesome. But I have a favor to ask of you. The people at my home and the people at Deery's house below will be very much worried about me. They may think I was killed in the cyclone. What I want you to do is to get word to them somehow that I am safe; or, if you will allow it, I will write a note that one of you can leave on the doorstep at night. Of course you can read the note before it is sent. What do you say?"

Three of the men looked at the man with the black beard as if expecting him to do all the necessary talking. He smoked in silence for several minutes. Then he spat and said:

"I reckon you all kin write."

CHAPTER XXXVII.

GORDON had a pencil, but no paper. However he discovered a small paper bag, which he slit down the sides with his knife, making of it a long, narrow sheet. Then, with the bottom of a tin plate for a desk, he very slowly wrote the following remarkable letter in a large hand:

Friend Mildred:
I write to tell you I am
Very well and for you and
Elmer and also your
Mother not to worry as
I am being well treated.
Lonely, of course, it is,
Especially as I can not
See my friends; but
No matter; I will keep
On being cheerful and the
Rest will come out right in
The end. I wish you would
Have someone to go
With you to my home (take
Elmer) and please notify
Steve and all the others
That none of them
Must look for me
Yet. I will soon
Have, I expect, another
Opportunity to write
More. You may possibly
Expect it soon.
Love to all.

G. K.

When Mildred received these lines (which she did the following morning) she must have thought it a queer letter to get from the man she was so worried about. It was not a love letter, nor did it seem to say much of anything in any definite degree. Yet Gordon had deliberately written it that way, trusting to the girl's ingenuity to decipher the hidden meaning. As a matter of fact, the meaning was so little hidden that Gordon, as he wrote it, had doubts as to whether it would pass muster.

The Message Sent.

Gordon folded the sheet of paper twice, addressed it on the back to Miss Mildred Deery and handed it to the black-bearded man, who read it slowly; so slowly, in fact, that Gordon feared he had discovered the simple cryptogram. But at last the mountaineer nodded and placed the letter in his pocket, whereat Gordon breathed with relief. Later in the evening the letter was given to the youngest of the four who, after receiving instructions from the bearded man, given in too low a tone for Gordon to distinguish the words, saddled a horse that was tethered nearby, mounted him and rode off in the darkness.

From the moment the rope that bound Gordon's arms had been removed, one of the four men had remained within ten feet of the captive, with a revolver in his hand. Every action of the mountaineers indicated that they meant business and Gordon had long since made up his mind that he would not attempt to escape that night. At intervals he endeavored to draw his captors into conversation, but without success. They were not sullen, or gloomy, or sulky; they simply refused to talk, so at last Gordon requested that he might be allowed to retire for the night.

No Secret About Woman's Beauty

The flashing eye, the elastic step and the brilliant complexion are never companions of organic troubles; but it is the distressed expression, aches and pains, faintness, dizziness, that bearing down feeling, and the blues that are the tell-tale symptoms. If such women would only remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound overcomes such distressing symptoms, womanly beauty would be no longer a secret.

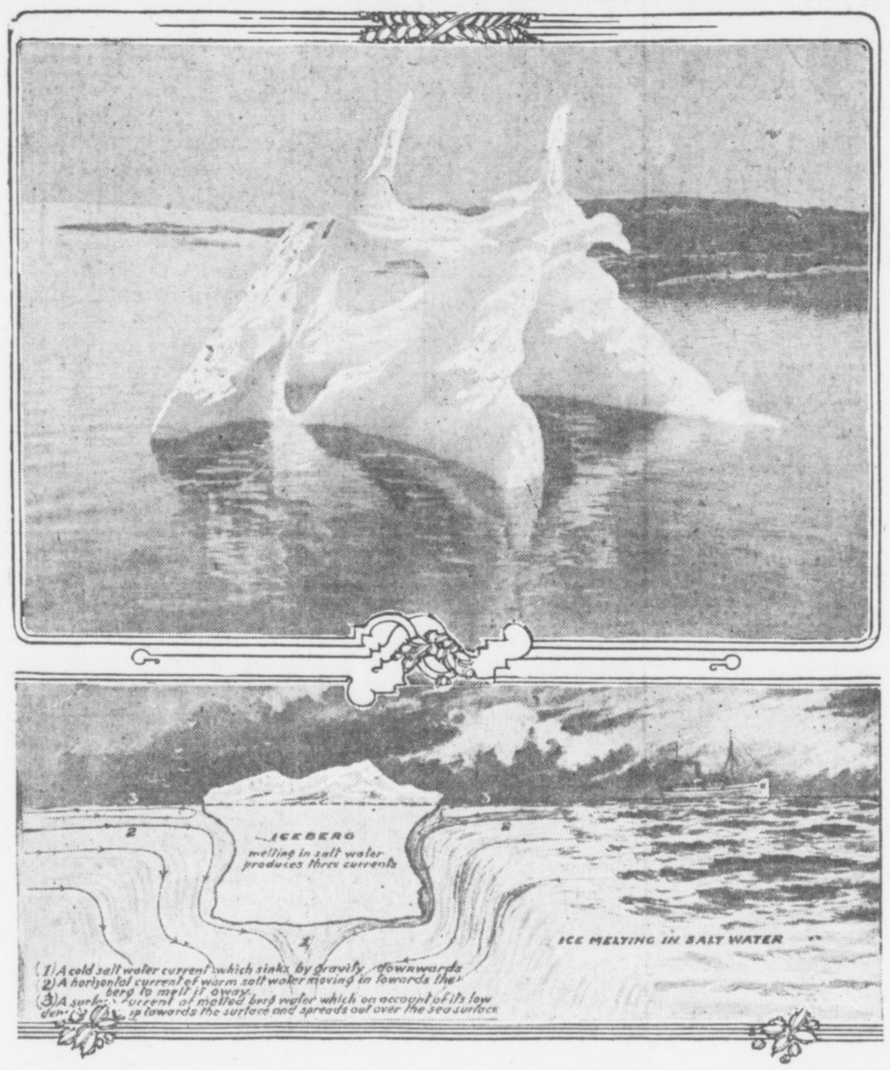
A Device That Traps Icebergs

An Atlantic Liner Can Now Be Provided With Mechanical Senses as Sensative as the Nostrils of a Deer



The top picture is a photograph of a melting iceberg. Underneath is a diagram showing the various currents produced by an iceberg that is slowly dissolving. It is these currents that are "felt" by the micro-thermometer, one of the latest wonderful achievements of science.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

SINCE the sinking of the Titanic, a year ago, icebergs have been studied as never before, and a great amount of curious knowledge about these frozen monsters of the deep has been accumulated, with the result of increasing the safety of ocean navigation.

Just as a living being proclaims its presence, even when it can not be seen, by telltale sounds and vibrations and by emanations which are perceptible at surprising distances to olfactory senses as delicate as those possessed by some of the lower animals, so icebergs betray themselves, in the darkness of the night, or the far more dangerous obscurity of a fog, by their effect upon the temperature of the air and the water.

A remarkable mechanical sense-organ, called the micro-thermometer, which is simply a thermometer of great delicacy and special construction, dragged through the water by a ship, is now employed to measure the changing temperatures of the water in the vicinity of icebergs, and some unexpected facts have been developed by its use.

A great steamship provided with micro-thermometers lowered into the water is like a hunted deer sniffing the air with its sensitive nostrils and detecting its enemies afar off.

How It Works.

These instruments reveal facts previously unknown about icebergs. They show that there is a surprising system of currents around and under a great berg, or a fleet of bergs, which produce characteristic temperature changes that may be felt miles away. In truth, the iceberg is a great thermal engine surrounded by a medium of air and water peculiar to itself, and due to its action upon its environment. Upon the air immediately around it the berg produces a cooling effect in consequence of the absorption of heat required to melt it. When water freezes, it gives out heat; when it melts, it absorbs heat. One perilous consequence often is that the moisture in the cooled air around the berg condenses into concealing fogs and mists.

But the effects of the berg upon the underlying and surrounding water are still more remarkable and important. It has been found (as illustrated in the picture of a melting iceberg) that there are three characteristic currents produced in the ocean water by a great berg when it arrives in the comparatively warm water lying along the steamship tracks of the North Atlantic.

In the first place, directly under the vast ice mass there is a great current of cooled salt water, which sinks by its own gravity, because the cold increases its relative density.

In the next place the suction produced by the sinking cold water draws in from all sides warmer surface currents, which eat into the sides of the berg by their melting action, and finally so much reduce the size of the berg beneath the surface, or so change its shape, and its center of gravity, that, at last, the equilibrium of the mass is upset, and it turns over, thrashing the surrounding sea with its immense flanks, huge fragments of which, heavy enough to sink a ship, are detached, and go floating away to form an attendant fleet of small bergs and floes.

Then there is a third current composed of relatively fresh water, formed by the melting of the berg, and which, because of its lesser specific gravity, moves upward from around the berg and flows as a comparatively warm current over the surface of the sea. This current is of the greatest importance in betraying the presence of a berg, for it spreads to a considerable distance and can easily be detected by the micro-thermometer. The warm current has been detected a mile from a berg.

The Real Effect.

In regard to this a recent report of the Canadian Government on iceberg phenomena says: "There is little room to doubt that the real iceberg effect is the rise of temperature, and that the fall (observed when a ship passes abeam of the berg) is due to the colder current in which the berg is being carried."

In some experimental trips when icebergs were passed at a distance of from a half to a quarter of a mile there was observed first a rise of temperature in the water, followed by a fall as the berg was passed abeam.

Similar experiments with the micro-thermometer have shown that the near neighborhood of land is betrayed by a fall of water temperature, and this is believed to be due to the action of the tides and the obstruction offered by the coast line, resulting in a turning up of the under water, which is always much colder than the sea surface.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"My husband shot a burglar," she said, languidly. And then her insolence reached its culmination in a query of her own: "Was his name Griggs?" It was done with splendid art, with a splendid mastery of her own emotions, for, even as she spoke the words, she was remembering those shuddering seconds when she had stood, only a few hours ago, gazing down at the inert bulk that had been a man.

Burke betook himself to another form of attack.

"Oh, you know better than that," he declared, truculently. "You see, we've traced the Maxim silencer. Garson himself bought it up in Hartford."

For the first time, Mary was caught off her guard.

"But he told me——" she began, then became aware of her indiscretion, and checked herself.

Burke seized on her lapse with avidity.

"What did he tell you?" he questioned, eagerly.

Now, Mary had regained her self-command, and she spoke calmly.

"He told me," she said, without a particle of hesitation, "that he had never seen one. Surely, if he had had anything of the sort, he would have shown it to me then."

"Probably he did, too!" Burke rejoined, without the least suspicion that his surly utterance touched the truth exactly. "Now, see here," he went on, trying to make his voice affable, though with small success, for he was excessively irritated, "I can make it a lot easier for you if you'll talk. Come on, now! Who killed Griggs?"

Mary Stood Rebellious.

Mary cast off pretense finally, and spoke malignantly.

"That's for you to find out," she said, sneering.

Burke pressed the button on the desk, and, when the doorman appeared, ordered that the prisoner be returned to her cell.

But Mary stood rebellious, and spoke with a resumption of her cynical scorn.

"I suppose," she said, with a glance of contempt toward Demarest, "that it's useless for me to claim my constitutional rights, and demand to see a lawyer?"

Burke, too, had cast off pretense at last.

"Yes," he agreed, with an evil smirk, "you've guessed it right, the first time."

Mary spoke to the District Attorney.

"I believe," she said, with a new dignity of bearing, "that such is my constitutional right, is it not, Mr. Demarest?"

The lawyer sought no evasion of the issue. For that matter, he was coming to have an increasing respect, even admiration, for this young woman, who endured insult and ignominy with a spirit so sturdy, and met stratagem with other stratagem better devised. So, now, he made his answer with frank honesty.

"It is your constitutional right, Miss Turner."

Mary turned her clear eyes on the Inspector, and awaited from that official a reply that was not forthcoming. Truth to tell, Burke was far from comfortable under that survey.

"Well, Inspector?" she inquired, at last.

"We've Got Gargon."

Burke took refuge, as his wont was when too hard pressed, in a mighty bellow.

"The constitution don't go here!" It was the best he could do, and it shamed him, for he knew its weakness. Again, wrath surged in him, and it surged high. He welcomed the advent of Cassidy, who came hurrying in with a grin of satisfaction on his stolid face.

"Say, Chief," the detective said with animmation, in response to Burke's glance of inquiry, "we've got Garson."

Mary's face fell, though the change of expression was almost imperceptible. Only Demarest, a student of much experience, observed the fleeting display of repressed emotion. When the Inspector took thought to look at her, she was as impassive as before. Yet, he was minded to try another ruse in his desire to defeat the intelligence of this woman. To this end, he asked Gilder and the District Attorney to withdraw, while he should have a private conversation with the prisoner. As she listened to his request, Mary smiled again in Sphinx-like fashion, and there was still on her lips an expression that caused the official a pang of doubt, when, at last, the two were left alone together, and he darted a surreptitious glance toward her. Nevertheless, he pressed on his device valiantly.

"Now," he said, with a marked softening of manner, "I'm going to be your friend."

"Are you?" Mary's tone was noncommittal.

"Yes," Burke declared, heartily. "And I mean it! Give up the truth about young Gilder. I know he shot Griggs, of course. But I'm not taking any stock in that burglar story—not a little bit. No court would, either. What was really back of the killing?" Burke's eyes narrowed cunningly. "Was he jealous of Griggs? Well, that's what he might do then. He's always been a worthless young cuo. A rotten deal like this would be about his gait. I guess. * * * Tell me, now, why did he shoot Eddie Griggs?"

All Poise Had Fled.

There was coarseness a-plenty in the Inspector's pretense, but it possessed a solitary fundamental virtue; it played on the heart of the woman whom he questioned, aroused it to wrath in defense of her mate. In a second, all poise fled from this girl whose soul was blossoming in the blest realization that a man loved her purely, unselfishly. Her words came stumblingly in their haste. Her eyes were near to black in their anger.

"He didn't kill him! He didn't kill him!" she fairly hissed. "Why, he's the most wonderful man in the world. You sha'n't hurt him! Nobody shall hurt him! I'll fight to the end of my life for Dick Gilder!"

Burke was beaming joyously. At last—a long last!—his finesse had won the victory over this woman's subtleties.

"Well, that's just what I thought," he said, with smug content. "An' now, then, who did shoot Griggs? We've got every one of the gang. They're all crooks. See here," he went on, with a sudden change to the respectful in his manner, "why don't you start fresh? I'll give you every chance in the world. I'm dead on the level with you this time."

But he was too late. By now, Mary had herself well in hand again, vastly ashamed of the short period of self-betrayal caused by the official's artifice against her heart. As she listened to the Inspector's assurances, the mocking expression of her face was not encouraging to that astute individual, but he persevered manfully.

"Just you wait," he went on cheerfully, "and I'll prove to you that I'm on the level about this, that I'm really your friend. * * * There was a letter came for you to your apartment. My men brought it down to me. I've read it. Here it is. I'll read it to you!"

He picked up an envelope, which had been lying on the desk, and drew out the single sheet of paper it contained. Mary watched him, wondering much more than her expression revealed over this new development. Then, as she listened, quick interest touched her features to a new life. In her eyes leaped emotions to make or mar a life.

Helen Morris' Letter.

This was the letter:

I can't go without telling you how sorry I am. There won't never be a time that I won't remember it was me got you sent up, that you did time in my place. I ain't going to forgive myself ever, and I swear I'm going straight always. Your true friend,
HELEN MORRIS.

For once, Burke showed a certain delicacy. When he had finished the reading, he said nothing for a long minute—only sat with his cunning eyes on the face of the woman who was immobile there before him. And, as he looked on her in her slender elegance of form and gentlewomanly loveliness of face, a loveliness intelligent and refined beyond that of most women, he felt borne in on his consciousness the fact that here was one to be respected. He fought against the impression. It was to him preposterous, for she was out of that underworld against which he was ruthlessly at war. Yet, he could not altogether overcome his instinct toward a half-reverent admiration. * * * And, as the letter proved, she had been innocent at the outset. She had been the victim of a mistaken justice, made outcast by the law she had never wronged. * * * His mood of respect was inevitable, since he had some sensibilities, though they were coarsened, and they sensed vaguely the maelstrom of emotions that now swirled in the girl's breast.

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

Chapter Eleven.

WHEN Jennie saw her girl friend at the office next day she asked her how she managed to have such nice dresses and such a nice furnished room on the salary she got. The girl winked and laughingly explained, "It was very easy, providing you were pretty and you found the right MAN." But even then little Jennie did not understand what she meant, and asked the girl to explain the meaning of the "right MAN" part of it.

This the girl was very reluctant to do, but finally admitted that one of the young men they were out with the night before gave her money—and that she just worked for the sake of having something to do. But she did NOT tell Jennie that the work also helped her to forget her way of living and to keep her mind off the day when she would NOT be as good looking and when the young man would have transferred his attentions to a younger and prettier girl—and the money wouldn't be so easy to get.

Jennie was quite shocked when she realized her girl friend was taking money from the young man, and as much as she wanted pretty clothes and good times she was sure she could never, never do THAT to obtain them.

Then the girl told her she knew of a place where Jennie could get clothes on credit. By just paying a dollar or so a week she could get all the clothes she wanted if they knew she had a fairly good job for a girl. Jennie was quite excited when she learned there were such places as these. Just think—and you would only have to pay a dollar or two a week. She was getting eight dollars a week. Pooh! she wouldn't miss one dollar of it. So at noon time she and the girl went to a store to pick out some clothes for Jennie.

At the Table

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED

THAT common meeting-ground of the family, the dinner table, should be made a place where harmony reigns and where each one brings his or her best to contribute to the pleasure of the moment. Cheerful talk is as necessary to health and appetite as it is to peace and pleasure of mind. Unpleasant subjects should be avoided resolutely. Such topics as bad news, illnesses, grewsome incidents shocking accidents, troublesome business affairs should not be brought to the table; nor should disagreeable family matters be discussed there. These family affairs may require settlement, but may be talked of elsewhere.

If it is a family principle to be agreeable and talkative at table, there will be greater ease when guests are present.

A woman's duty is to be composed and cheerful at her table, whether at family meals or when there are guests. Her serenity, or the lack of it, influences others. When acting in the capacity of hostess she needs an absolutely placid temper. Self-control must be her watchword. If she appears to be disturbed, worried, absent-minded, if her eyes wander, or she seems distracted in conversation, every one will be uneasy, and the dinner will be dull and dragging. Her duty is not to let her guests know of her moods, disappointments or even of a headache.

If service is slow, or mistakes happen, it is best for a hostess not to offer explanations. No matter what may go wrong, she must appear not to notice it. By passing over a mistake or an imperfection herself it will escape the attention of others, or, at least, will not be regarded as important by them. If a serious accident occurs to precious china or rare glass she must maintain a calm manner. If a careless servant sets something drip on a guest's dress, a hostess must express regret and try to remedy the blunder and then pass on, without too much delay, to other matters. A guest should try to appear undisturbed by any accident of the sort.

If a guest should be so unlucky as to overturn a glass or have any other accident, it is best not to make profuse apologies. Regret may be shown by one's manner. Thus there is less interruption to conversation and to the smooth running of the dinner. By practice a young hostess may acquire facility in being able to talk naturally while at the same time seeing that people are served properly. If an order has to be given it should be done quietly and simply, without any mysterious signals or loud whisperings. A hostess should try not to make her servant nervous by watching her too much as she moves round the table.

Didn't Want Him.

Mike Hennesey, a hefty young Irishman, secured his first foremanship after serving for some years as one of the "gang." Promptly at 7 o'clock in the morning he began his duties by calling the gang to order.

"Ye'all have to worruk for me!" he shouted. "Worruk, I say! And I want every wan of yez to understand at wance that I kin lick anny man in the gang!"

All swallowed the insult except one giant-built warrior, who stepped forward and said:

"But you can't lick me, Mike Hennesey!"

"Oh, I can't, can't I? yelled Mike.

"No, you can't," came back the determined answer.

"Well, thin, go to the office and draw your money. I'll have no man in the gang I can't lick!"

Eliza Jane Knew.

The Minister's Wife (to industrial scholar)—Eliza Jane, I'm sorry to hear from your school mistress you are not diligent at your needlework. You know who it is finds work for idle hands to do?

Eliza Jane (intensely anxious to propitiate)—Yes'm; please'm, you do.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I WAS reading a book last night that certainly gave me the Willies," said the Manicure Lady. "Wilfred brought it home from the library. It was all about the way them Romans used to go after the church members, and I never seen such terrible accounts of anything in my life. Why, George, them Romans used to burn the Christians in boiling pitch! Gee, I'm glad I wasn't around then, ain't you?"

"If I had been around I would probably have been one of the Romans," said the Head Barber. "I ain't no church member, even though I know that I ought to be one. I am always so tired after Saturday is over that I like to sleep till noon, and in the afternoon and evening me and the Missus usually goes somewhere like to the seashore or out in the country. If I had more time I would go to church, because it don't hurt anybody to go, and think of all the good religion has done."

"That's why I go," said the Manicure Lady. "Sometimes I feel as if the preacher and me don't quite agree on everything he says, but I always make allowance for the preacher. I was just saying to mother last night that the people that goes to church now ought to be very thankful that they didn't live among them Romans and that the brave people who did live in them days was ever on earth to start the churches and bring all that good into the world."

Not So Hard.

"There is a lot of church members now that wouldn't have stood the gaff then," said the Head Barber. "There is a lot more church members now, but the going ain't so hard."

"That is just what I was thinking when I was reading that book," said the Manicure Lady. "There was a smooth, chop-whiskered old geezer in here yesterday to have his nails did, and the way he purred around me and kind of insinuated would make you sick. He said that he lived over in a little Alabama town, and I asked him if he was the same kind of a gay old dog among the Birmingham manicure girls. Mercy, no, he told me. He said that he had to be a different person altogether when he was at home. He said he couldn't imagine what the other pillars of his church would say if a brother deacon got nifty. I asked him if he didn't have any conscience of his own, and he said that he had one, but it always got seasick when he was crossing the Chattahoochee River, so he left it at home.

"It is too bad, George, that old man Nero didn't have a few of that kind of church members for his lions and bonfire men to practice on, instead of the noble people that had to be martyrs. Pa used to go to church a lot when we lived over in South Carolina, but I guess he ran into so many good little toads like the gent of which I am just speaking of that he got sick of the job.

A Perfect Dear.

"The old gent may travel to the sideboard a little too often some evenings, but he ain't no hypocrite, and there is a lot of other men like him that would be there every Sunday when the plate comes around if there wasn't so many old fakes with sidewhiskers carrying the plate.

"I asked the old geezer what he did week days to rest up from going to church, and he said that he had a big factory where children could learn a good trade and grow up useful members of society like him.

"Do you follow me, George? What a perfect old dear he must be to his wife and children! Honest to goodness, George, if I could find out where his wife lived I would send her a synonymous letter and warn her of her husband's complicity, or whatever it is they call that Jekyll and Hyde stuff that makes a man kick up his heels when he gets where the high buildings looms. Gee, the shop seemed airier and better after he had went!"

ATLANTA GAINS EXTRA GAME ON EVE OF FOURTH

By Joe Agler.

NEW ORLEANS, June 23.—Lefty Price will put 'em across for the Crackers this afternoon, opposing Rube Evans, and it looks like us for the money. Price is in great shape, and the bunch is working like a clock. If we don't take the whole series and move up to the top, where we belong, you can tell the bunch at the corner that Joe Agler's a bum prophet.

Old Man Rain won the first game here Sunday, owing to the lack of boating facilities in the park. The field offered fine opportunity for swimming early in the day, but the crowd kept on coming, in spite of the rain, and rather than let all that coin get away one game was decided upon. It was slippery as spaghetti, but that hurt nobody.

Game for Atlanta.

The postponed first game will be played on July 3, and will be transferred to Atlanta. We will not pull off a double-header here this trip.

We copped the one game of Sunday, Dent pitching a wet ball in great shape and having splendid support from the fielders. Whitey Alperman was the batting boy, landing two two-baggers and a single in five times up. Bill Bailey made a great running catch and Spencer pulled off one of the most brilliant running catches ever seen on the Pelicans' lot, grabbing Bailey's hot liner with his bare hand, after a long run.

Tommy Long crippled Jakey Atz at third base, nearly breaking Jakey's wrist and putting his thumb on the blink. Williams took Atz's place for the rest of the game.

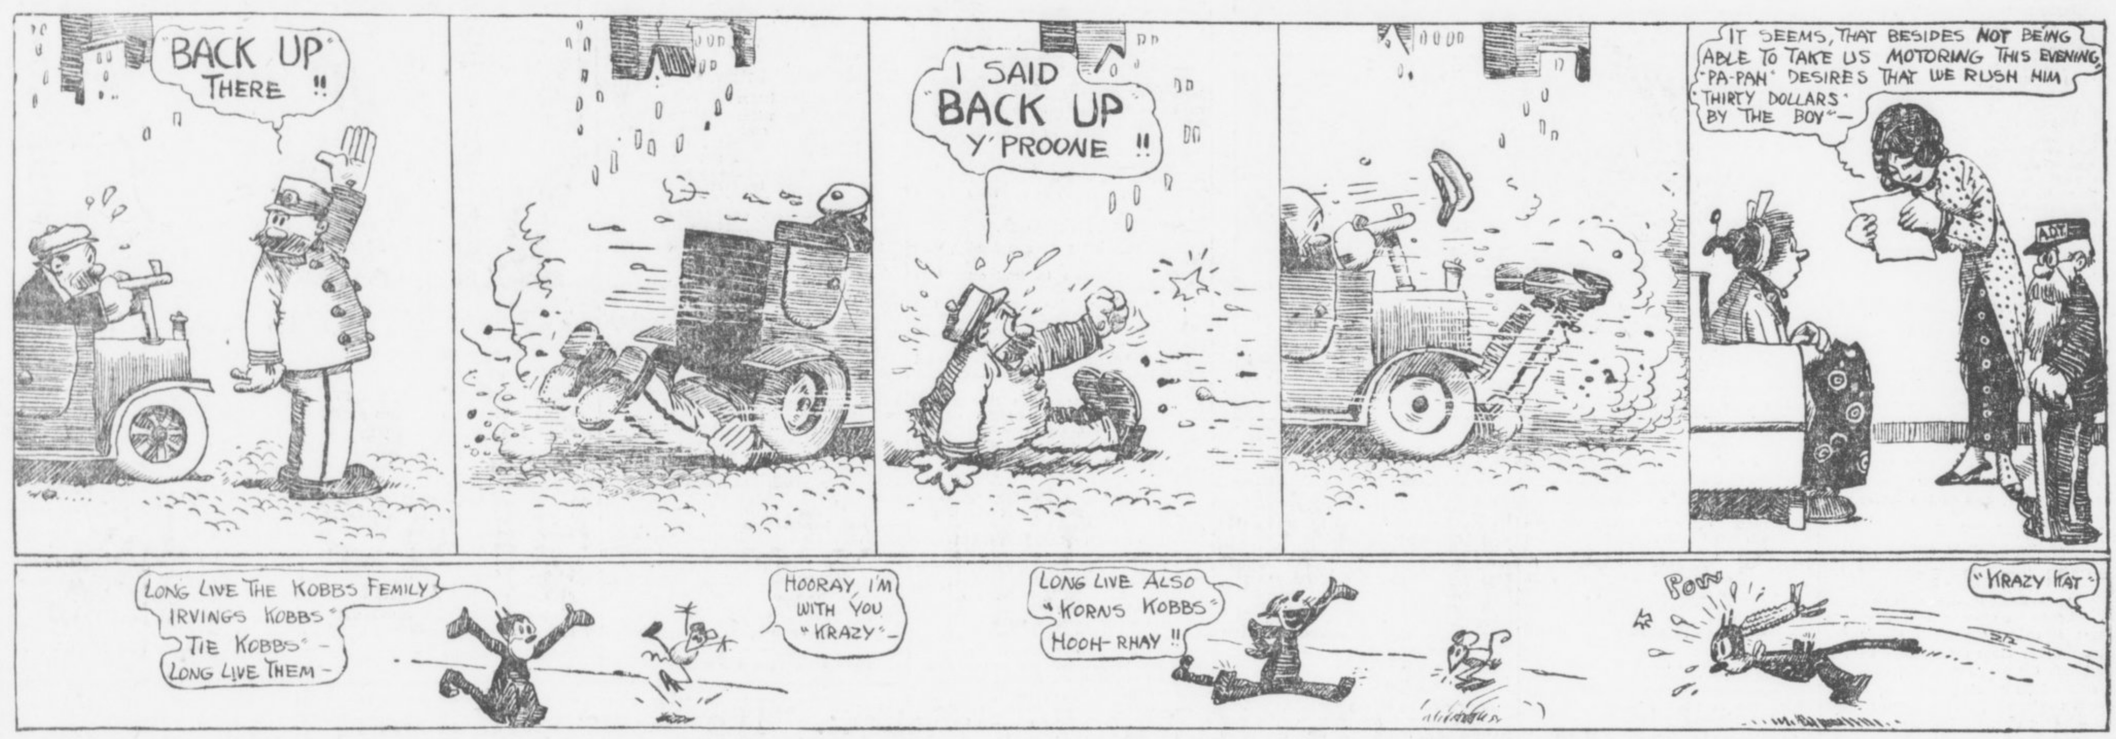
The Old Man Obeys Orders, Too Well



Dundee Faces Hard Task July 15

Murphy Is Tough Boy to Beat

By Left Hook.

THE case of Johnnie Dundee is a remarkable one.

Here is a classy boy, one of the top-notch featherweights of America, who, after splitting a draw decision with the world's champion of that division, voluntarily steps into the lightweight grade and invites trouble from the 133-pound battlers. And he is sure to find it.

Dundee chased Johnnie Kilbane around the Vernon ring until both were leg weary. As a reward for his agressiveness the Italian was given a draw. There was no argument, but that of the two, Dundee was the most willing to make a fight.

Following this affair Kilbane went back on the easy money trail after men like Fox and Jimmy Walsh. Dundee, to hold the respect of the public, announced that he would pass up the featherweights as a lot of tame and mediocre boxers, and jump into the lightweight division among a few real fighters.

There is little doubt what this move increased the popularity of the little Italian, but it was a step backward, according to the way the overmanaged boxer of to-day is handled, harking back to the days when a man signed a set of articles first and asked about the weight and reputation of his opponent afterwards.

As evidence of his good faith Dundee agreed to take on Ad Wolgast, a fighter from his heart out. Wolgast's broken hand caused the match to be called off at a time when both boys were putting in their last training licks.

* * *

DUNDEE then signed to box "Chicago" Jack White, with the understanding that the winner is to meet "Harlem" Tommy Murphy, the vicious veteran who recently beat Wolgast.

Dundee defeated White in twenty rounds and is now ready to start training for his twenty-round set-to with Tommy Murphy. Before the latter battle Dundee will taken on Tommy Dixon, July 4, but should have little trouble in defeating Jimmy Hurst's protege.

The Murphy battle, however, should prove one tough scrap for Dundee. The Harlemite has met the toughest lightweights in the game to-day and is really in line for a match with Ritchie. Many of the coast critics let out an awful howl when Rivers was given first chance at the title, claiming that Murphy was entitled to the match.

* * *

MURPHY'S latest achievement was a twenty-round victory over Ad Wolgast, but he has also defeated such stars as Owen Moran and Frankie Burns, besides giving McFarland a hard battle for twenty rounds.

Should Dundee manage to beat Murphy, no one in the world will be able to overlook him as a lightweight contender. But the task seems a difficult one. Dundee will be giving away about ten pounds in weight and it looks at this distance as if the extra poundage will be an awful handicap for Johnny. However, fighters of the Dundee type should be admired and he will not lack for admirers when he steps into the ring with Murphy.

Riders Will Dress in Asbestos

Fireproof Togs for 'Dromers

THE riders out at the local Motordrome lie awake nights trying to think of something they can put over on somebody else. They are always getting something new with this end in view. For instance, Morty Graves has sent off for a new motorcycle, Georges Renel has bought a lot of new parts for his motorcycle, Manager Noon Hudson has another suit of clothes, Harry Swartz has a new wife and Jack Prince always has a fresh shower up his sleeve that he lets out on race nights.

But it has remained for George Lockner to spring the newest thing—an asbestos suit of clothes. He has wired to St. Louis for one and expects it here in time for use at Wednesday night's races.

These asbestos suits were introduced by a St. Louis rider, Brownie Carslake, and are being rapidly adopted by the other riders.

When They Are Needed.

In motordrome racing there are two reasons why asbestos suits are needed.

One reason is that the blooming motorcycles, fed enormous quantities of gasoline and spitting fire like an old-time dragon, are constantly catching on fire. Naturally, this would be bad enough under ordinary circumstances, but the awful complication arises from the fact that they usually touch themselves off while going at very high speed. The machines are not supplied with brakes and the rider must always choose between sticking on and getting his clothes on fire or falling off and breaking his neck. Harry Lewis, one of the riders at the local Motordrome, caught on fire the afternoon of the opening meet, and only the presence of the riders and a battery of fire extinguishers made it possible to put him out. With an asbestos suit this danger is removed. A man may cook a bit while his machine is slowing down, but he will not blaze.

Useful in a Spill.

The other need for an asbestos suit comes when a fall occurs. Going at high speed, a man is likely to slide a hundred feet or so over the surface of the track. Frequently the friction of such a slide sets the clothes ablaze, and the spectacle of a man on fire—maybe with a lot of bones broken, too—is not uncommon at motordromes. With asbestos suits this danger is removed. No matter what the friction is, the clothes can not catch on fire. As the riders' suits soon become impregnated with oil and are occasionally dashed with gasoline, they are highly inflammable, and the fear of being burned to death will probably drive all the local riders to the asbestos-suit stunt.

Plans are going forward at the local 'drome for the meeting Wednesday night. The program which was rained out on Saturday night will be carried through at that time, with the Mayor Woodward Sweepstakes as the feature.

The Naps and the Tigers divided a double-header yesterday, the Detroit aggregation winning the first game in the tenth and the Naps romping home with the second game.

The Tigers by scoring one run in the sixth inning of yesterday's game broke the string of unscored innings which Gregg, of the Naps, was compiling. Up to that time he had pitched 32 innings without yielding a run.

In the second game, Ed Walsh allowed the Browns nine hits and Weilman and Allison allowed the White Sox only four, but the White Sox hits came at opportune times, while Walsh kept the St. Louis hits so scattered that no runs resulted.

Coulon Meets Burns At Kenosha To-night

KENOSHA, WIS., June 23.—Johnny Coulon, bantamweight champion of the world, and Frankie Burns, the Jersey City bantam, are on the edge for their scheduled ten-round battle here to-night.

Much interest is being displayed in the affair, as this is to be the fourth meeting between the pair. Ever since Johnny was given a hair-line decision over Burns at New Orleans in twenty rounds on February 15, 1912, there has been a great deal of rivalry between the boys.

The other bouts between the bantams were no decision affairs and critics usually agreed that they were about even up. As this will be Coulon's recally first tough scrap in over a year fans are anxiously awaiting the outcome. Johnny is billed to meet Kid Williams in a twenty-round go on July 29 and his showing to-night will have much to do in the way the fans bet their money in the title set-to. Coulon rules a 10 to 8 favorite over the Jersey City boy.

FOXEN SAID TO ADMIT HE 'LAID DOWN'

By Percy H. Whiting.

OF course you can't believe all the second-hand, near-beer saloon information that is floating around, but one bit of rumor has drifted in that is worth publishing.

This information is that Bill Foxen admits that he "laid down" on the Atlanta club and purposely played for his release.

We didn't hear this first hand. We aren't on Bill's speaking list. But it came pretty straight and it sounds pretty reasonable.

* * *

THE story is that Foxen admits he played for his release here. He is said to attempt to justify himself with the following statement:

"I got in bad with the Atlanta club because I wouldn't go out boozing with the players. They got sore on me and made it as hard as they could. Under the laws of organized baseball there was only one way to get away. That was by losing games. So I lost games." That may not be the word-for-word admission, but that is probably about the gist of it.

* * *

CASES where players have been accused of "laying down" are plentiful enough in the annals of baseball, but this is perhaps the first time on record where a player has admitted his guilt in the matter.

While nobody in Atlanta feels inclined to excuse Foxen in this matter, it is a fact that the rules of baseball make it pretty hard for a player who is thrown into a team made up of souses and soreheads. He must play with them, "lay down" or leave baseball.

* * *

OF course the only manly thing to do is to see it through, no matter what the conditions are on the team. The public has no love for a quitter. The Atlanta public shows that fact every time Foxen visits the city—and always will as long as he comes here.

Their only regret is that they can not get a shot occasionally at the other member of the hold-out sketch, Pitcher Frock. They would dearly dote on giving him an occasional good time.

THE Perry Adair Cup has become the property of Dowdell Brown. In the tournament just completed over the course of the Atlanta Athletic Club Brown won his way through four hard matches to victory.

Every match in the tournament was a moderately hard one for the winner. But in the second round he faced Hamilton Block in one of the greatest struggles ever witnessed on the East Lake course. The end of the eighteenth hole found them all even. They halved the rest of them straight through to the twenty-sixth hole, where Brown gained the advantage. Three of the four matches in the second round went into extra holes.

BOXING

News of the Ring Game

Four important bouts will be staged at Vernon, Cal., within the next five weeks. On June 24, Eddie Campi tackles Charley Ledoux; on July 4, Leach Cross meets Bud Anderson; on July 15, Tommy Murphy swaps punches with Johnny Dundee, and while on July 29 Johnny Coulon and Kid Williams fight for the bantamweight championship of the world.

* * *

Hammond, Ind., fight fans are rejoicing to-day over a declaration by Sheriff Whitaker that he would not interfere with boxing matches so long as the limit does not exceed ten rounds. It was the occasion of the home-coming of Jimmy Clabby, who recently defeated Eddie McGoorty. Clabby was banqueted on his return from Butte, Mont., where the bout took place.

* * *

Chicago fans are having a big laugh on Harry Trendall, the St. Louis lightweight. Recently Trendall was matched to meet Charlie White, but dodged the match when he heard of Charlie's hitting power, and instead he took on Eddie Murphy. The latter handed Trendall a neat lacing. White and Murphy are great friends and usually chum together when both are in Chicago.

* * *

* * *

The ringside weights for the return match between Jimmy Duffy and Jack Britton at Buffalo Monday night will be 136 pounds. The raise in the scale comes from Danny Morgan, Britton's manager.

* * *

Gunboat Smith has been made a 2 to 1 favorite over George Rodel, who meet at New York on June 27. The two heavyweights met about four months ago and, although Smith floored the Boer five times, he was unable to put him away.

* * *

Frankie Burns should give Johnny Coulon a tough battle when the two bantams hook up at Kenosha, Wis., on Monday night. Burns has met Johnny on several occasions and has always given a good account of himself.

* * *

Joe Golden, manager of Joe Thomas, is now a boxing promoter. Golden has matched "Wildcat" Ferns and Bobbie Libbons for a 10-round bout to be staged in Pelican Park, New Orleans, on July 4. The welterweights are scheduled to go ten rounds.

* * *

Billy Nolan and Willie Ritchie have split. The fighter and manager could not agree on financial terms, and Willie has now decided to handle his own business for the present.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 23.—The Giants made a great finish to their Western trip, and I am now convinced that the New York club will win the pennant again. The Phillies appear to be gone, and I do not see any other team on the horizon or the schedule that can stop us.

What tripped up the Philadelphia club was what I had anticipated would stop it all through the season. The pitching staff cracked, and the rest of the team caved behind it. Both Seaton and Alexander, the two men who had carried most of the burden of the pitching so far in the race, were overworked, and the strain told. There are few pitchers who can appear three times a week, one week after another, and get away with it, and these two attempted to do just that. The strain of maintaining the lead also hurt Philadelphia's chances of grabbing the pennant. The Quakers are not altogether out of the fight yet, but I do not think they are the club which the Giants will be forced to beat now. If we once pull them behind, they are liable to go into several parts.

* * *

IT is hard to tell just which team will make the going for us from this point in the journey to its finish. For a long time, it had been my notion that Pittsburg would give the Giants the fight this season. The Pirates looked like one of the best baseball teams I had ever seen when they wound up the season last fall, and they should have been stronger this year. Baseball is certainly a funny thing.

* * *

THE Giants have just returned from one of the most successful Western trips ever made by a ball club. The only one which I have ever made since going out with a professional ball team that even approached it was the final swing around the circuit in 1911, when we grabbed the pennant in the last jump to the wire. On that junket we took eighteen out of twenty-two games, I think. We had to do it then, and we practically had to do it this time if the Giants were to beat Philadelphia back and stay in the race. We were all sitting around the lobby of the hotel in Cincinnati one night last week.

"It looks as if we have caught the Quakers," remarked McGraw.

"I did not expect that they would break as soon as this," volunteered "Larry" Doyle. "After they grabbed that series in Pittsburg it seemed as if they ought to have had renewed confidence."

"It was the cracking of their pitching staff and the spurt of the Giants that did it," answered McGraw. "When a team has been out ahead all season and is still playing good ball, but finds the second runner creeping up on them slowly in spite of their best efforts, it is just heartbreaking. That is one reason why I am none too particular about my team shooting out in front from the first. Every manager must count on at least one slump some time each year. We got ours in the spring. The Phillies are taking theirs now, and are liable never to come back.

"They've got some good pitchers," said Doyle.

"The pitching staff is all right, but overworked," replied McGraw. "Wait until they meet that string of stored-up double headers coming now with the pitching corps in its present run-down condition. The rest of the team I never could see. I never figured them as the pennant winners without wonderful pitching and luck. Baseball would be on the down grade if a club of the caliber of Philadelphia could take the championship in the National League."

JOE RIVERS STARTS HARD GRIND FOR RITCHIE BOUT

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23.—Joe Rivers, who has been at the Ocean Beach for the past few days doing light training, started to work in earnest yesterday. The Los Angeles lightweight put on the gloves in the Seal Rock gymnasium and surprised those who dropped into the big pavilion with his speed and cleverness.

Frank Carter, the welterweight that Manager Levy brought from Los Angeles, was his sparring partner, and the pair went three rounds. Rivers warmed up with four rounds of shadow boxing and was ready to go at a fast clip when Carter stepped into the inclosure. Joe stepped around the Mexican in lively fashion and showered blows on Carter.

CROSS AND LEDOUX TRAIN BEFORE A LARGE CROWD

LOS ANGELES, June 23.—A large crowd stood a 60-minute sun broil for the privilege of seeing Charley Ledoux, of Paris, France, and Leach Cross, of New York, box two rounds in the Vernon ring—and it was worth it, too.

Ledoux, blue-tighted to his neck, began operations with the punching bag. By actual count he landed on the leather just eleven times in nine minutes. Cross, attired in a cherry-colored makeup, stepped on the platform and made the bag beg for mercy.

RITCHIE IS IMPROVING; TO MAKE WEIGHT EASILY

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23.—Willie Ritchie demonstrated two facts in his first Sunday workout ahead of the Fourth of July bout. One is that his style has improved considerably over the days he was battling for recognition and the other is that he will not have the slightest difficulty in the world making 134 ringside and still show up strong. A good afternoon at the beach gave Joe Rivers one of the biggest crowds that has ever packed the pavilion to see boxers in training.

If the Suffs insist on so shoving in their interference it may be necessary to equip English race horses with fenders.

Or, as Bill Hallowell suggests, why not arm each jockey with a lance?

Even the worm will turn, as Confucius once remarked. For instance, the Pirates vary the monotony by winning a game with a margin of one run.

An expert informs us that the Tigers will be a strong team by the time August arrives. Therein they differ from the Browns, who show their greatest strength in December.

One is led to look askance at Mr. McGoorty's statement that the referee became excited and gave the decision to the wrong man. How could any human being become excited over a fight between Messrs. McGoorty and Clabby?

Our notion of easy money is to get $100 for refraining from holding converse with an umpire.

It was expected that these games would permit the staging of a little side issue battle between Ty Cobb and Joe Jackson, the sluggers of the league. But they did not. Cobb, because of a lame leg, was forced to retire in the third inning of the first game, and Jackson "sassed" an umpire a few innings later and was wigwagged out of the game.

Atlantans in Tennis Tourney in Orleans

The twenty-sixth annual tennis tournament for the championship of the South begins Monday on the courts of the New Orleans Lawn Tennis Club.

Men's singles, men's doubles and ladies' singles will be the three events. Consolation singles will also be held.

The winner in the men's singles must meet Carleton Y. Smith, of Atlanta, the present title holder, and holder of the challenge cup in that event.

This cup was originally presented by the Atlanta Athletic Club. It has been won twice by Conrad B. Doyle, of Washington, and Dr. Nat Thornton, of Atlanta, and once each by T. R. Peil, of New York; R. C. Hunt, of California, and C. Y. Smith, of Atlanta.

Atlanta will be well represented at the meet. Carleton Smith, the present title holder, will go to defend his title. His partner in the doubles, Dr. Nat Thornton, will also attend.

B. M. Grant, Charles A. Sisson, E. S. Mansfield and E. V. Carter, Jr., are some of the others who will attend.

Smith and Mansfield will be paired in the doubles, as will Grant and Thornton. The other players will participate in the singles.

SECRET ORDERS TO RUSH GUNS TO MANILA

U. S. Arms Philippines as Mikado's Envoys Are Welcomed by Wilson and Bryan.

BY JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Inside information from the War Department to-day is that a number of the fourteen-inch guns intended for the defense of Manila and Honolulu are actually on the way to those exposed points. War Department officials say orders were given for the shipment of these guns from Sandy Hook some time ago.

In connection with this information these officials say the military conclusion is that for the present at least all the energies of the department will be concentrated on Manila and Honolulu rather than Panama. One official said to-day:

"I don't think there is any doubt in any military mind that in case of early hostilities it would be absolutely impossible to prevent the Japanese from capturing the western end of the canal before we could get either ships or guns there.

"If the Japanese should make the attack on the western end, the plan here would be to rush what we have of an army, and especially our artillery, to the eastern end for a prompt campaign and to march across the zone. I don't think any one will question we could dislodge the Japanese."

Meanwhile the Japanese Ambassador, Dr. Soyedo and other visiting Japanese had the ear of the Administration to-day in the White House, and at a luncheon given by Secretary of State Bryan.

Contrary to the general expectation, it was announced to-day by Secretary Bryan the reply of the United States to Japan would be submitted to-morrow to the Cabinet meeting which failed at its last session to frame a definite answer to the Japanese demands.

With regard to the announcement that the United States will not renew the general arbitration treaty with Mexico until after the recognition of the Republic by this Government, officials declare the sole reason for the non-recognition is there is not yet a stable Government in Mexico.

It is believed, in more than one of the Washington Departments, if Japan were to carry out her original military scheme of making a demonstration against the United States, it would be on an understanding with Mexico officials whether sanctioned by the Mexican people or not.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—One, two and four room school houses are now sent by parcel post by the United States Bureau of Education. The school houses are models on which to erect structures in small communities.

They are of cardboard, architecturally correct and altogether complete in hygienic detail.

These models will be of great assistance to school authorities in small rural communities which can not afford to engage a school architect.

Orphanage Trustees Will Probe Whipping

MACON, June 26.—The whipping of 10-year-old Marvin Williford by W. R. Armor, farm overseer at the Georgia Industrial Home, will be probed this afternoon at a special meeting of the trustees.

The boy has been surrendered by the city officials to the home, assurance having been given that he will not be punished again. When the boy was beaten by Armor with a plowline, he ran away from the orphanage and sought the protection of the police.

Armor is the husband of Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, Georgia temperance lecturer. He admits the flogging.

Statue Worth Million Bought for $80,000

FLORENCE, June 23.—After negotiations which have been going on for six years the Government has purchased Donatello's statue of St. John from the Martelli family for $80,000.

The statue is worth almost a million dollars. The Government acquired the statue through the right of preemption.

Granted Insurance After Lung Trouble

As many cases of Lung Trouble start with a cold or a cough, the best advice that can be given is to get rid of the cold or cough as quickly as possible. Otherwise more serious troubles are likely to follow. If the medicines you are now taking do not bring relief, try Eckman's Alterative, the remedy for Throat and Lung Troubles, which has stood the test of time. Investigate this case:

237 Dean St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Dear Sirs: About a year and a half ago my health rapidly failed until at the end of six months my weight had fallen to 129 pounds. I was troubled with night sweats, a severe cough and was very weak. About this time I consulted a physician, who told me my lungs were affected. Not satisfied, I went to another doctor, who, after examining me, said that I was in the first stages of consumption. At this point I started to take Eckman's Alterative. The night sweats stopped almost immediately, my cough became loose and gradually disappeared. My weight is now 142 pounds and my physician has pronounced me perfectly sound—which, together with the fact that I have been accepted by two different insurance companies for insurance, makes me sure of my entire recovery by Eckman's Alterative."

(Affidavit) W. E. GEE.

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most effective in case of severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all of Jacobs' Drug Stores and other leading druggists. Dies in 5 Days After Taking Mercury for Toothache Tablets

CHICAGO, June 23.—The final incident in a five days' hopeless battle against death was recorded to-day at the inquest over the body of Lizzie Silverman, 18, who swallowed bichloride of mercury tablets, thinking they were toothache medicine. Her aged mother, now without any one to support her, is in a serious condition.

The last thought of the young woman, who had suffered frightful agony since last Tuesday night, was of her mother. She recalled that her employer owed her $3 in wages. She asked Dr. O. W. Hatz to collect the money and give it to her parent.

Scores of wealthy Chicagoans have sent flowers with offers of financial assistance for the girl's mother.

PARIS, June 23.—Even the Parisian journals, used as they are to daring styles in women's dresses, spoke rebukingly to-day of some of the gowns seen yesterday at the fashionable Auteuil race course. Auteuil set the latest word in fashions, the decree being that tight skirts are giving way to transparent garments which are absolutely no obstacle to the eye.

Many women wore skirts of white muslin so transparent they failed utterly to serve the purpose of coverings. The gowns, mostly free from frills, are cut extremely low in front, and even lower in the back.

The slashed skirt devotees exceeded the limit. Some of them were not only slit at the sides, but in the front and rear as well. Most of the slashes reached above the knee.

One woman wore gold sandals without stockings. The sandals were fastened to the feet with pink ribbons. The three-tier skirt made its appearance in white, blue, purple and brown. Most of the hats were small, decorated with aigrettes.

Among the Americans at the race track were Mrs. W. E. Corey, Mrs. Perry Belmont, Mrs. Wynn Sewell, Pittsburg; Mrs. Alfred Norris, Philadelphia; Mrs. Marshall Field, Mrs. W. G. Audenried, Philadelphia, and Mrs. Rudolph Spreckels.

Keeping the Body in Repair

Nature intended that the body should do its own repairing—and it would do so were it not for the fact that most of us live other than a natural life.

Nature didn't intend that we should wear corsets, tight collars or shoes, nor live in badly ventilated and draughty houses, nor eat and drink some of the things that we do, nor ride in street cars when we should walk.

The consequence is that the body when it gets out of order must look for outside help to make the necessary repairs.

For weak stomachs and the indigestion or dyspepsia resulting, and the multitude of diseases following therefrom, no medicine can be more adaptable as a curative agent than DR. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

How, why and when this play by "Ty" Cobb should be made?
How and why a catcher "shapes the ball?"
Why the straight, overhand swing is more valuable in obtaining control of the ball than either the side arm or the "rise" ball?
The proper way to make a double play at second?
How a player should hold the bat when laying down a bunt?
Why a catcher should use the snap throw to get a man stealing a base?
The proper way to field a ground ball?
How to make the ball "carry" on a throw?
The proper position for covering second to get a man out stealing?
Why the batter should "choke the bat" to get the best results?

PLEDGES OF JAP RULERS NOT TO BE TRUSTED

Latest Financial Statement From Tokio Gives Evidence of Usual Trickery and Deceit.

By BOERSIANER.

CHICAGO, June 23.—In the world of commerce and finance Japanese perfidy is proverbial. Gross misrepresentations, disregard for contracts—verbal or written—are allowable in the trade ethics of Japan.

That which is common among tradesmen always is a reflection of the code among the authoritative class. This is confirmed by the last statement from the Japanese Government. The document omits an item that is characteristic of the tinkering fiscalism of the Tokio regime.

When, in 1906, Japan's national debt was consolidated, a cardinal stipulation was that all war loans, amounting to $850,000,000, should be redeemed within 30 years—every year 110,000,000 yen should be set aside for the redemption. Though no sinking fund was started—finance ministers promised a beginning "at a more propitious time"—the redemptive clause appeared conspicuously in all annual statements save the latest, where it is strikingly conspicuous by its absence.

Instead, indeed, of decreasing its loans, Japan has increased these to a grave sum. Nine years ago Japan's obligations totaled 1,872,000,000 yen. To-day, despite solemn promises of reduction, the Japanese Government owes 2,716,000,000 yen.

More Armament.

But the end is not yet. The Japanese Diet has actually approved a new naval program, involving 360,000,000 yen, while the newest Finance Minister, Tokohashi, wants 300,000,000 yen for "increasing the efficiency of the army in Korea."

A financial critic is concerned only with finance and political economy. It is his duty to call attention to the pusillanimity of a government that ruthlessly breaks faith with its creditors. But the proposals for increased armaments should arouse more curiosity in Washington than has been manifested so far.

To the political economist it sounds odd to hear California berated for her attitude toward the Japanese who wish to acquire land on the coast. Japan, on her side, has never allowed foreigners to own an inch of land there. Two or three years ago a bill to permit this was passed by the House of Representatives, but it was shelved higher up, never received imperial sanction and never became law.

Foreign Labor Barred.

Japan does not permit any foreign laborers to work in Japan. Not long ago a Japanese contractor, who had undertaken to build a railway line, found himself greatly hampered by strikes among his natives. He, therefore, engaged several hundred Chinese. A few days after these men had arrived at Kobe, the authorities discovered that the laws of Japan provide that no foreign laborers should be allowed to work in Japan, and all the men had to be deported, the loss falling, of course, upon them and on the contractor.

Furthermore, the taxes on foreign insurance companies doing business in Japan have been doubled, and the Government now rigorously forbids foreign vessels to do a coasting trade.

Why, in the circumstances, Washington, or any other government for that matter, should be supersensitive about ruffling Japan's diplomatic susceptibilities is quite beyond the ken of a matter-of-fact economist. Viewed economically, Japan wants everything and will accord nothing.

In the matter of her foreign loans, she has gone very far, indeed, for she has no scruples whatsoever to restrain her. She would borrow to the final farthing, promising the while everything exacted of her—and pay no attention to the exactions. To the government official at Tokio, monetary obligations mean no more than the word of the average Japanese merchant.

YANKEES SEIZE S. AMERICAN TRADE

Zeal of Men From United States Driving Europeans to the Wall.

NEW YORK, June 23.—When Dr. W. E. Aughinbaugh, the commercial globe trotter, of Philadelphia, arrived at the Breslin after an absence of eleven months, he explained that since his last appearance on Broadway he and Mrs. Aughinbaugh had traveled somewhere between 40,000 and 50,000 miles, and that they had visited in that time every country south of the Rio Grande, and incidentally taken in Northern Africa and much of Europe.

Dr. Aughinbaugh has been making a commercial investigation for certain companies interested in the export trade. He says that in the last four years American manufactures and exporters have gone after South American business so zealously that to-day they are almost driving the British and the Germans to the wall. Wonderful fortunes have been made in some of the Latin-American republics, he says, by Americans who went thither with hardly more than a shoestring, and the American advertising man is blossoming and becoming fruitful in Buenos Ayres, and Rio de Janeiro to an extent that would make the highest paid solicitor at home green with envy.

"One of the most interesting journeys we made was up the Parana River into Brazil, and then to Asuncion, the capital of Paraguay. And whom do you think I found there? No less a person than Tex Rickard, who managed the Jeffries-Johnson fight. Rickard is superintending the cattle raising for Percival Farquhar's Company which, besides big cattle ranges, seems to own lots of railroads and street railways and electric lighting plants down there.

Pushing Europeans To Wall.

"What I noticed during my trip especially is that the United States has made tremendous strides in the last four years toward getting possession of South American trade. England and Germany have hitherto had every thing all their own way, but now our exporters are pushing them to the wall. Our people have at last awakened to the possibilities of the great market for their goods that South America furnishes. Take the case of one company that sells a brand of mineral water. It is taking advantage of the fact that throughout South America the water is bad, and it now sends its wares down there by the shipload, and you find them everywhere.

"I do not believe it is generally known up here, but Charles M. Schwab has got in Chile the biggest iron mine in the world. This is in the Southern part of the country, and it has been estimated that it alone will be able to supply all the iron needed in Chile for 200 years. American miners are being brought into the country by the thousand. I was told that $20,000,000 has been invested in the acquisition and operation of the mine. The Braden Company, an American concern owning mines in Chile, has doubled its output of copper within four or five years. The Standard Oil Company has depots all along the coast, and the Du Pont Powder Company has two nitrate plants in Chile. In Peru, the oil fields at Lobitas, in which American, English, and Italian capital is invested, are perhaps the biggest in the world. They have dug into the sandy desert, and it is spouting oil, and they have even sunk wells below the sea and got oil in vast quantities. The Peruvian Steamship Company, which runs to Panama, is now operating its ships by oil.

Preparing For Canal.

"There is not a steamship company in South America that has not placed orders for more ships on account of the approaching opening of the Panama Canal. The United Fruit Company is opening stations all along the barren coast of Western South America, and is preparing to send bananas down there to supply a new market. The United States Steel Company has a big vanadium mine at Cerro de Pasco, Peru, where 3,000 Americans are working at an altitude of 3,000 feet. The Panama Canal has given them a big jolt down there, and they are waking up."

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, June 23.—Influenced by weak Liverpool cables, the cotton market opened easier to-day with first prices at a net decline of 4 to 7 points from Saturday's final. Sentiment was more bearish than for some time past, owing to the dullness of Liverpool summer positions. Weather conditions over Sunday were favorable; also crop advices. However, the buying was rather general on and after the call, resulting in prices rallying some 2 to 5 points in most active positions from the initial level.

During the forenoon the selling became general and looked as if it came from the same source as Saturday, causing the market to weaken, with prices declining some 7 to 13 points from the previous close. The buying was very light and scattered.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: July, 12.01; August, 11.89; October, 11.40; January, 11.33.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Hayden, Stone & Co.: Sentiment is now very conservative and it will require lower prices to bring about aggressive buying.

Logan & Bryan: Fewer moderate purchases on further recessions.

Miller & Co.: Think the bears have again sold themselves into a trap.

COTTON GOSSIP

The Memphis Commercial-Appeal has the following on the condition of the cotton crop for the week:

"The weather of the past week was very favorable for the growth of cotton over the entire belt. Temperatures were high, with good showers in west and clear skies in the remainder of the belt—just the kind of weather needed. The plant made good progress, although most of its energy was occupied in overcoming the check placed upon it by the cool weather of the previous week, and for this reason its actual advancement was more real than apparent. As a result of the cool weather, the plant over the entire belt is a bit small, although probably slightly larger than last year, but it is making a lusty growth and shows the health that accompanies a good tap-root and favorable soil conditions.

"Good rains in Texas and portions of Oklahoma supplied the one thing needed in these States for the best growth of the plant, and excellent cultivation that has been a pronounced characteristic of the crop all season was maintained throughout the week and soil is perhaps better worked than ever before at this season. The rains and the fact that farmers were in the west harvest allowed some grass to gain headway in in portions of Texas, but the situation is one that a few days' work will soon cure. The other western States, the central valley, Alabama and nearly all of Georgia are nearly 100 per cent, with soil in excellent condition. The Carolinas and a small portion of Georgia a few days more of warm, open weather are needed to further cultivation and the growth of the plant. Arkansas and the central valley are beginning to need rain, but no material damage will result should dry weather continue for another week. The one complaint reported was of boll weevil in Mississippi and Louisiana and isolated sections of Texas and Arkansas. There is a big crop of the pest in Mississippi and Louisiana, but farmers are fighting them under the direction of Government experts and are confident that in most localities they have them whipped."

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, June 23.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map is perfect; shows partly cloudy in the Atlantics and West Texas; fair rest of belt. Fine rains in the Atlantics; some good rains scattered in the central States and West Texas; absolutely normal temperatures; no excesses; warm nights.

Washington's forecast for week: "Warm and generally fair weather, with probably rain coming week in the Southern States; such showers as may occur will be local and widely scattered."

Dog Bites Congressman's Son.

SAVANNAH.—Charles Beach, the 8-year-old son of Congressman and Mrs. Charles G. Edwards, is suffering from the bite of a vicious bulldog. It is not believed that the dog was mad. A physician was called at once, however, and the wounds treated.

STOCK MARKET

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 23.—The oversold condition of the stock market made it very sensitive to buying at the opening to-day, with the result that prices of nearly all the standard issues jumped upward.

Bullish sentiment was helped by favorable comments from banking interests upon the proposed currency reforms advocated by President Wilson.

Canadian Pacific opened 1⅜ higher, but profit-taking developed which carried away ⅝ of the advance. United States Steel common began at a gain of ½, but at the end of a half hour the upturn had been increased to 1 point. Among the other advances were Lehigh Valley, ¾; Erie, ⅝; Erie preferred, ⅛; St. Paul, 1¼; Chesapeake and Ohio, 1; American Telegraph and Telephone, ⅝; American Can, ⅝; Amalgamated Copper, ⅞; Reading, 1¼; Southern Pacific, ¼, and Union Pacific, 1.

Missouri Pacific began with a fractional loss, but recovered. Baltimore and Ohio was unchanged at the outset, but later lost ½ on selling pressure. American Car and Foundry lost ¾, then recovered. Much of the buying represented covering by board room shorts. At the end of half an hour the buying movement had diminished.

The curb market was steady.

There was more liquidation on the London Stock Exchange at the opening. Dealings in Americans in London were small. Canadian Pacific in London was firm.

OPINION ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, June 23.—Bartlett, Frazier & Co.: Wheat—The weather map shows some precipitation in Canadian Northwest, but very little in the American Northwest. There does not seem much in news to cause any important change in values.

Corn—Since Saturday there have been good rains over the entire corn belt. Prices will doubtless be lower to-day, the extent of the decline depending on the volume of liquidation.

Oats—As in corn, the precipitation will doubtless be more or less of a depressing factor.

Provisions—General sentiment continues bullish, but an easier corn market may give us some decline.

IRON ORE MINED SHOWS BIG GAIN

Total Production for 1912 Is 25 Per Cent Over Output of Previous Year.

The iron ore mined in the United States in 1912 amounted to the great total of 55,150,147 long tons, compared with 43,876,552 tons mined in 1911, an increase of 11,273,595 tons, or 25.09 per cent, according to an advance statement by Ernest F. Bunchard, of the United States Geological Survey.

The following table gives the quantities of iron ore mined in the various States in 1911 and 1912:

STATES—	1911.	1912.
Alabama	3,827,791	4,563,603
Georgia	203,889	134,637
Michigan	10,329,039	11,191,430
Minnesota	24,645,105	34,431,768
Missouri	65,325	43,480
New Jersey	466,234	364,673
New York	1,061,279	1,216,672
Ohio	15,707	10,346
Pennsylvania	537,506	517,081
Tennessee	463,835	415,885
Utah	39,902	7,280
Virginia	614,023	446,305
Wisconsin	698,660	860,609

The Minnesota iron ranges are producing at present considerably more iron ore than is produced in all the rest of the States together, having furnished nearly 62.5 per cent of the total for the United States in 1912.

Other important districts reported quantities mined in 1912 as follows: Birmingham district, Alabama, 3,957,743 tons, largely of red hematite, but including nearly half a million tons of brown ore; Chattanooga district, Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia, 778,520 tons, about two-thirds of which was red hematite and one-third brown ore.

BANK CLEARINGS SHOW CONSIDERABLE EXPANSION

Bank clearings last week were much more encouraging than for some time past, with an appreciable gain over the corresponding weeks of 1912 and 1911.

Clearings of principal cities, with percentage of change from the same week of last year, follow:

Poultry, Pet and Live Stock

Correct Color and Type of the Black Minorcas

Giving a Fine Idea of the Shade of Chicks When Hatched, When Feathered and Full Grown.

Edited By JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL.

JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL—Will you kindly tell me what should the color be of Black Minorca chicks when matched? Also a description of them when well feathered, that is grown fowls; their size, shape and color of body, etc. I ordered a setting of eggs from a firm in Georgia which was highly recommended, although I got a good hatch, eleven out of fifteen, the color did not come up to my expectations. Mrs. J. R. C.

Palatka, Fla.

Reply—Young Black Minorcas are like all other black breeds, they show a good deal of white, which, to the novice, looks mighty bad, and if they are hatched from purchased eggs they very naturally conclude that they have been badly treated. One can hardly judge as to color in black breeds until they are pretty well matured; the changes are so great, and individual specimens differ so much from each other in their feathering processes. Some change rapidly to a good solid black and others hold on to their white in wings and tails until they are almost fully developed. For this reason the culling process should be carefully handled and not attempted too early in the season. Of course the specimens showing glaring defects, such as red ear lobes, feathers upon the shanks, red feathers in the plumage, etc., in Minorcas, can just as well be culled out one time as another for one cannot hope for improvement along these lines, no matter how much time is given. We would be infringing upon the rights of the Standard of perfection should we give a detailed description of the Minorca. We will say, however, that prime color should be a glossy greenish black, free from foreign color, such as gray or purple sheen, the latter so often being scattered throughout the plumage. The more there is of it the more defective in color the specimen becomes. In general shape the Minorca is long in body with long back sloping slightly downward to where the tail begins with a full flowing tail on males and well expanded tails on females. The carriage should be rather erect, although not too much so of course. The comb is what the novice would call very large, but in standard description is known as large. In males it stands erect and perfectly straight upon the head with four or five uniform points. Should the comb turn over to one side it disqualifies. In females the comb is of the same general shape as that of the male only thinner and smaller and turns over to one side of the head. An erect comb on the female is as defective as one that lops over is on the male. The ear lobes should be something of an oval in shape, smooth and free from wrinkles and pure white in color. Any red showing is a defect and a serious one, according to how much red there is. In old cocks the red often appears from a result of scratches from fighting, etc., and does not detract from the value of the bird, except in the show room. It would not affect his breeding qualities, providing, of course, that they were white when he was younger. In summing up, then, the value of the specimen depends upon how near to the Minorca type it is in general form, carriage, shape of comb, and the quality in color from head to tail. Any one who gets an idea in his head that a black fowl is so easy to breed because it is solid color usually gets his eyes opened before he has bred them very many years. All kinds of little irregularities come to the surface that had not been dreamed of before so that you might as well make up your mind that you have something of an undertaking, right from the start, just as you would handling any parti-colored breed, and be prepared to work it out for the best there is in it.

BOARD WANTED during legislature for self, wife and two children, ages 7 and 3, in private family. Address Box 57, Edison, Ga. 6-19-6

WANTED—Accommodations for the Georgia legislators. They are coming in now and will be in session at the State Capitol from June 25 for FIFTY days. All of them are on the outlook for nice, comfortable and home-like places to eat their meals, or to board or to rent. Many of these legislators had last year did not suit them and they desire to find something better. All the legislators will read The Georgian—that's certain. Their attention will be called day after day to the "Legislators' Accommodations" column on the Want Ad pages of The Georgian. This will be a big advantage to you. So if you have eating or boarding places or have rooms, apartments or houses for rent, your ad should be under the "Legislators' Accommodations" heading. An investment of a few cents will keep your house full for the next three months. Phone or send in your ad at once.

Shelley Ivey In Candler Building. Realty Investment's Sale. Kirkwood Bond Issue.

A central lease on Peachtree, involving a term of 8 years and 4 months and a consideration of $35,000, proved interesting in Saturday's real estate news. Shelley Ivey, manager of the College Co-Op Company at 97 Peachtree, has leased from Asa G. Candler Nos. 119 and 121 Peachtree, the same being in the southern end of the Candler Building. Mr. Ivey will move his stock July 1 and will occupy for the present 119 Peachtree only, 121 being the quarters of the Southern Pacific Railroad, whose offices it is planned to put in the Fourth National Bank Building. If the railroad company can get out soon Mr. Ivey will sub-lease the front of 121 about July 1. Otherwise, he will take possession January 1, 1914, of the remaining portion of the store.

No. 97 Peachtree was leased seven years ago to the College Co-Op by E. W. Alfriend. Mr. Alfriend is in Florida and will take up the matter of re-leasing his place on his return.

Healey, the owner, declared Saturday that he was well pleased with the progress so far made.

Uniform Cotton Oil Grading Predicted

CHICAGO, June 21.—I. G. Priest, of the Bureau of Standards at Washington, addressing the fourth annual meeting of the cotton products analysts, to-day predicted the establishment of a uniform system of grading cotton seed oil. Many disputes, he said, arise over the present imperfect color system of grading.

Chemists from throughout the South, who attended the meeting, will remain for the convention of the Interstate Cotton Seed Crushers' Association next week.

Do You THINK While You Are Dressing?

The Time Used in Dressing Need Not Be Wasted

(Copyright.)

Man in the process of evolution has got rid of his fur, or feathers, and every day he must put on something to take the place of fur, and every night he must take off the artificial clothing.

One old man in the State of New Jersey killed himself and left a note saying that he died because he was so tired of buttoning and unbuttoning clothes.

There is apparently no greater waste of time than the time that is spent in dressing and undressing.

Bathing, shaving for men and powdering your nose for women, finding what you want to wear and putting it on—it is a tiresome part of every day.

BUT—

The hours in which a human being grows and develops mentally are the hours of solitude.

And a great many of us are practically never alone, except when we are getting dressed or undressed.

Sleep is a time of idleness—no growth there.

When we are with others we listen, learn perhaps, and debate, but we don't really THINK WITH INTENSITY.

The one thing that makes you more of a man than you were last year is intense, solitary thought.

Why not say to yourself: Since I must spend at least 330 hours a year in dressing and undressing, in bathing and shaving and looking for my collar button, I'll also spend that time IN THINKING?

Do you know how many men spend 300 hours a year in actual concentrated thought?

Not one in a thousand.

Suppose you see what you can make out of the hours lost in putting on and taking off the artificial fur and feathers and how much you can grow in the thinking.

Bacon felt that the mind was developed by reading, talking, and writing.

And he said:

Writing maketh an exact man.

Speaking maketh a ready man.

Reading maketh a full man.

(We quote the learned gentleman from memory, which is necessary when you write editorials on a railroad train.)

Reading fills you with knowledge, speaking makes you quick or ready, writing makes you exact—true.

But more important than reading, writing or speaking IS THINKING.

The real YOU lives inside of your brain alone. And it works at its best when you are alone.

Aristotle taught Alexander the Great walking up and down with the young prince that he might become wise and strong at the same time—that is what they call the peripatetic method of intellectual development.

Why don't you educate yourself in thought as you march up and down from the bed to the bathroom, from the rough towel to the safety razor, and so on through the long, tiresome and usually wasted process of dress?

THE OLD ROMANS

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THEY strutted into the bar room,
Three boys—they were nothing more;
They ordered their drinks with grins and winks,
While their heels hit hard on the floor.
When one of them grew less frisky
And seemed half ready to sink,
Cried the others, "Aw, one more whisky!
That's a good old Roman drink!"

Then I thought of the real "Old Romans"
That I knew long years ago,
When we stuck to the "corn" from night till morn
As fast as the stuff could flow.
There was Billy O'Keefe, of Denver—
Too bad poor Billy is dead
He could pack away three quarts a day
And never rattle his head.

There was Jack McGee of the Morning Bee,
And Flynn of the Fourth Estate,
Larry McCale of the Portland Mail—
All dead before thirty-eight.
There was Blake of the Brooklyn Bugle,
And Grant of the Memphis Sun,
And a dozen more, or maybe a score,
Whisky got them, one by one.

I felt the tear that unbidden starts
When I thought (it hurt like a knife)
Of the nimble brains and the golden hearts
All stilled in the prime of life.
Then I walked from the noisy bar room
And muttered a prayer to God
For the souls of the real "Old Romans"
Now dreamless under the sod.

"I Used To Be"

How many times have you yourself heard men, standing up against a bar, bragging about what they USED to be? Perhaps some were telling about the good jobs they ONCE had; or maybe another one—with the shell of a ONCE fine body—was telling what a great athlete he USED to be, how he ONCE did "the hundred yards in 93-5," but could not now even run for a car without blowing like a grampus. You will also notice that these men usually drink WHISKEY—because, as they put it, it has a stronger "KICK" than other drinks. What better word could define it than KICK? Look around you at the men it has KICKED out of good jobs, good health and good homes into the land of USED TO BE.

HAL COFFMAN.

Writes on

The Dictograph

The Dictograph, He Says, Is the Electric Symbol of the New Age, of Which the Newspaper Is the Prophet, in Which the Perils of Privacy Will be Matched by Powers of Publicity.

WRITTEN FOR THE GEORGIAN

By REV. DR. JOHN E. WHITE

Pastor Second Baptist Church

ALL the real problems of society have been anticipated. The progress of modern times is manifest in the good answers we are making to ancient questions.

The Dictograph, for instance, is the New Invention of which Old Necessity is the Mother. The Celestial Society of Olympus, which the Romans created to furnish ideals and to set up standards of judgment on mundane matters, considered it.

Momus reported to Jupiter that the great evil among men was secrecy and deceit. He complained against Jupiter that he ought to have provided a glass window in every human breast, just over the heart, so that the inward truth of men's thoughts would be accessible to everybody, so that deceit would have been impossible.

He made such a row about it that he was kicked out of Heaven.

The Dictograph is a sop to Momus, but the fate of Momus is a warning to the dictographer. The application of this little Edisonic device to human affairs will arouse all the modern pagan Furies.

Some Possibilities.

Another Edward Bellamy may now tell us of its development and application to progress in the year A. D. 2500. The addition of a photographic attachment was the next step of invention to increase its effectiveness.

In the highly organized society of the year 2,500 the government had provided Dictographs in every home, hotel room and private office. A central receiving station was arranged for the record of disgraceful family disputes, star-chamber conferences and political conspiracies.

The photographic device was employed for Pan-Hellenic ballrooms, with a special corps of operators between 3 and 6 o'clock in the morning, to obtain truthful pictures of the "tango" and the "turkey trot." After midnight cabs and automobiles were equipped.

During sessions of the Georgia Legislature, in the hotels and boarding houses and private dinner parties at the houses of politicians, it was found particularly useful.

The striking fact Edward Bellamy, Jr., records was that civilization had responded to the restraint of the Dictograph and that its abuse was inconsiderable beside the manifest improvement in the tone and quality of human conduct.

Perils of Privacy.

The Dictograph is not all a joke.

The exaggeration of its possibilities is not a reductio ad absurdum.

The irresistible movement toward relentless publicity it symbolizes is profoundly supported in social intelligence.

The perils of privacy, secrecy and the suppression of facts are realized.

The basic religious conviction that Deity sees, hears and knows is at work day and night to justify the increasing passion of humanity to see, hear and know.

The Christian assurance that "nothing is secret that shall not be made manifest; neither anything hid that shall not be known and publish itself abroad" is the moral sanction of publicity as the consummation of the highest civilization.

The cry of Life is "Light! More light! Light everywhere!" The protest of Death is the cry for privacy and suppression.

The man who loves darkness better than light is under cosmic condemnation. The guardians of public health ruthlessly placard the places of disease.

The exponents of moral health also are every day bolder and bolder in disregard of any challenge of personal secrecy which conceals sources of moral contagion.

The old sanctity of wrong under the cover of private rights is an exploded theory of social relations.

In whatever concerns the public safety the public has a right to the facts.

The outcry against the publication of the Standard Oil letters made no appeal to the American conscience.

The Good of Publicity.

In England the divorce evil is treated as a public matter, and not even the nauseous details are withheld from the public eye. Those who object to the application of that rule in this country should show better reasons for secrecy and privacy in behalf of domestic infidelities than the Fulton County divorce courts afford.

The world adjusted to the law of publicity is the good promise of the times, and the Searchlight, the Newspaper and the Dictograph are its phophetic tokens.

There Is Only One Need in the World---Love

Any Man Can Be Happy With It; No Man Can Be Happy Without It

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

I KNOW the need of the world.
Though it would not have me know.
It would hide its sorrow deep,
Where only God may go.
Yet its secret it cannot keep;
It tells it awake or asleep,
It tells it to all who will heed,
And he who runs may read.
The need of the world I know.

I know the need of the world.
When it boasts of its wealth the loudest,
When it flaunts it in all men's eyes.
When its mien is the gayest and proudest.
Oh! ever it lies—it lies,
For the sound of its laughter dies
In a sob and a smothered moan,
And it weeps when it sits alone.
The need of the world I know.

I know the need of the world.
When the earth shakes under the tread
Of men who march to the fight,
When rivers with blood are red
And there is no law but might,
And the wrong way seems the right;
When he who slaughters the most
Is all men's pride and boast,
The need of the world I know.

I know the need of the world.
When it babbles of gold and fame,
It is only to lead us astray
From the thing that it dare not name,
For this is the sad world's way.
Oh! poor blind world grown gray
With the need of a thing so near,
With the want of a thing so dear.
The need of the world I know.

The need of the world is love.
Deep under the pride of power,
Down under its lust of greed,
For the joys that last but an hour,
There lies forever its need.
For love is the law and the creed
And love is the unnamed goal
Of life, from man to the mole.
Love is the need of the world.

THERE is only one need in the world.

The need to love our neighbors as ourselves.

To do exactly as we would be done by.

The need to understand that the human race is one body; and that when we do anything which harms or hurts one individual, we harm all individuals, ourselves included.

Just as we harm the body, when we injure any member, hand, foot, eye, or ear.

When we stop and think about the world, the whole process of life becomes very pitiful.

Each, being born upon the earth, is striving for happiness, from the cradle to the grave, in his own way.

According to his light, he is doing the best he can.

He does not know it, but the only satisfying things which he can get out of life are peace of mind, self-respect and the love of his fellow men.

Nothing he can obtain without these things, nothing he can achieve or become, is of any real value.

No man can be happy without those three blessings. Any man can be happy with them.

Even though he is saddened by the sorrow he sees about him; the sorrow which results from striving after the needless things of earth; after more than we need; after what does not belong to us; after the possessions of others.

There would be no war; no industrial problems; no prisons; no poor houses; no white slaves; no sex sins; if men and women all set forth early in life on that threefold quest—for peace of mind, for self-respect, for the love of their fellow men.

That is all any soul is seeking; that is all any soul desires; because that is all there is in life worth living for. Yet is there war, and strife; and hatred; and sin; and sorrow and anguish; and misery and poverty.

Because men have not yet learned that there is only one need in the world.

And the need of the world is LOVE.

Belief of Samuel Adams

By WILLIAM VINCENT BYARS.

IT was Samuel Adams, one of the greatest founders of the United States, who said that "truth loves an appeal to the common sense of mankind."

It was this thought which made him powerful.

It made him the greatest Democratic leader of New England in the eighteenth century.

He was born in Boston in 1722, when all New Englanders were royalists. He was born rich. His family made money out of a brewery. He lost money in politics, so that when he died in 1803 he had barely enough to pay for his funeral.

He had helped to found the United States. He held office many years, but he was afraid to make money.

This was the only thing he was afraid of. He was afraid that if he did not keep himself as poor as most other people he would lose his common sense.

He meant by common sense the sense people have when they are trying to be fair to each other instead of over reaching and cheating.

If he found a man who could not read, trying not to cheat and over reach others, he thought him a better judge of truth than a prime minister. He believed that God made all men with sense enough to be honest.

At a time when he would have been hanged by a Tory prime minister, if caught, he said that truth loves an appeal to the common sense of mankind, and that "He who made all men, made the truths necessary for human happiness obvious to all."

This was his answer after he had been declared a traitor.

He spent his life trying to prove that politics may be improved by less cheating and shooting. He thought that finally nearly everyone would agree with him that common honesty and common sense are enough to make the best government on earth.

GIRL, 7, NEAR DEATH OF STRANGE POISON

JUSTICE AIM IN PHAGAN CASE, SAYS HOOPER

Mrs. Formby's Affidavit Eliminated, Says Attorney Who Will Aid Dorsey.

I have not been employed in the case to prosecute Leo M. Frank, but to help find and convict the murderer of Mary Phagan. If the trial proves we are wrong, we will begin work on another angle. We have but one object and idea. It is that justice and the law be vindicated. We are, however, convinced we have a strong case against the accused.

FRANK A. HOOPER,
Attorney.

Mrs. Mina Formby and her sensational affidavit will not be used by the State in the trial of Leo M. Frank, according to a statement Saturday from Attorney Frank A. Hooper, assisting the prosecution.

Mr. Hooper said the State had never attached any importance to the affidavit, except for the first few days, and that when Mrs. Formby mysteriously disappeared from the city, the State eliminated her from the case entirely and made no effort to locate her. He said time set forth in the affidavit and the alleged facts were at too wide a variance with anything the State expected to prove, and there had been no trouble in making the case without her.

Affidavit Did Not Fit.

"The woman's affidavit did not fit in anywhere in our case," said Mr. Hooper. "If it had we would have looked around a long time for witnesses to substantiate it before we put her on the stand. When she left Atlanta we considered her gone for good, and built without her. Mr. Dorsey and myself discussed her statement several times, and we decided she could not be used to any advantage."

Mr. Hooper said it had been decided to put the Frank case on the calendar for the week of June 30 and the State would be ready for trial on that day.

"When Mr. Dorsey returns from New York to-night or Sunday, we will go into a conference and definitely outline the case to be presented by the State," said Mr. Hooper. "We had decided to have it called Monday morning, June 30. Unless the defense asks for a continuance, the case will probably be tried then."

No Weak Points Remain.

He said that he had been acquainted with every bit of evidence that was in the hands of the State and had studied it carefully with the Solicitor. For one week, he said, he and Mr. Dorsey worked incessantly on the sworn statements secured from the probable witnesses.

"Where there was a weak point we either strengthened it or eliminated it entirely. We have not depended on the evidence of any one person alone to build our case on make it stand up. We are prepared for almost any emergency, and feel that we have left no stone unturned in our investigation. We are confident there are no more mysterious witnesses to be heard from, for we feel that we have questioned everyone who could possibly know anything of importance."

Mr. Hooper would not discuss the many conflicting statements of the negro Jim Conley and the part he was expected to play in the State's case.

The strong probability that Leo Frank will not be called for trial June 30 was discussed Saturday by persons interested in the case. The attorneys for the accused man have stated that they were prepared to go into court at any time, although it is not usual to give the defense so little time in a capital case.

Frank was arrested April 29. If his case is called June 30, only two months will have elapsed since he was seriously suspected of being involved in the crime. More time than this ordinarily is given the attorneys for the defense to investigate every circumstance and story which may point to the innocence of their client.

Railroad President Likes Crop Outlook

NEW YORK, June 22.—Howard Elliott, president of the Northern Pacific, is decidedly optimistic regarding the crop and business outlook. While here to-day he said:

"I do not feel blue. While I believe that this is a time to exercise caution and prudence, I see no cause for alarm. In our part of the country, as usual, everything depends upon the crops. A good harvest will create new wealth, cause a brisk consumption of lumber, and generally inspire the merchandise trade. With favorable weather from now on, we should get a good average crop yield, which was exceptional."

Taft to be Orator on Gettysburg Day

GETTYSBURG, June 22.—Following the news that President Wilson would not be present at the celebration of the battle anniversary here, semi-official announcement was made to-day that ex-President Taft would preside over the great gathering and deliver the principal oration on July 4, the closing day.

Steps have been taken to gather together as many as possible of the Gettysburg women who stood in the streets and sang patriotic songs as Buford's cavalry galloped through in preparation for the fight of the first day.

Moral Decline Laid to Equal Suffrage

HARTFORD, June 22.—"The reason why so many happy courtships are followed by unhappy marriages is because the young lady hunters give too much time to weaving nets and not enough to building cakes for men," said Manager James Joseph Fox, S. T. D., associate professor of ethics in the Catholic University of America, 1. graduates of Mount St. Joseph Seminary, an ultra-fashionable school for girls.

"The spirit of woman suffrage is largely responsible for the widespread decline in morals that shows we are reverting to paganism."

Brown Frees Convict Who Had Conscience

Commutation of the sentence of W. J. Collier, who is serving a two years' sentence for burglary and car-breaking, was granted by Governor Brown Saturday morning. The commutation was made for the time served.

Collier was convicted in Richmond County in 1907. He escaped and was unheard of for five years, when he voluntarily surrendered. During his absence he had learned a trade, and he showed letters from his employers showing him to have done good work and to have conducted himself well.

MILITANTS PUT TORCH TO LONDON CHURCH

Again Turn to Fire in War for Votes—Laboratory in Scotland Burned.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 22.—Militant suffragettes renewed their destructive campaign against church property to-day, setting fire to St. John's Church in the south end of London. The loss is estimated at $30,000.

The women chose the early morning when their incendiary efforts would not be interfered with. Part of the interior of the church was soaked with oil and balls of cotton waste, dipped in tar, were scattered about the pews.

Firemen, after a hard fight, extinguished the flames before the building was destroyed.

There also was an outbreak of suffragette incendiarism in Scotland today. Militants burned the east wing of the Gatty Marine Laboratory, destroying many valuable drawings and instruments. The damage is $40,000.

After serving four days of her six months' sentence, Miss Laura Lennox, one of the six suffragettes sentenced for malicious destruction of property Tuesday, was released from Holloway jail to-day because of sickness brought on by a hunger strike.

Miss Lennox had refused to taste a mouthful of food since placed in jail and was the first of the women to break down under the strain. The other five militants and E. A. Clayton, a male adherent, who were sentenced to varying terms at the same time, are still fasting.

Harold Hewitt, the fanatic, badly hurt trying to break up the race for the $17,500 gold cup at Ascot Heath Thursday, suffered a relapse in the Ascot Cottage Hospital. Word from the hospital at 10 o'clock this morning said that he was sinking and might not live until Sunday.

Mother Offers Her Children For Sale

BERLIN, June 22.—For several days past various newspapers of Central Germany have contained an advertisement stating that a mother offers to sell "a beautiful girl of 14, a handsome girl of 5, and a bonny baby boy aged 1" for $750 apiece.

An investigation shows that the woman is a divorcee, who, despairing of making a livelihood for herself or her children, conceived the idea of selling them.

Graft Expose Kills N. Y. Police Captain

NEW YORK, June 22.—Ex-Police Captain Thomas W. Walsh, who was involved in the police graft scandal, died at his home to-day. His health was shattered by the exposure which drove him from the police force.

Walsh, exposed by George A. Sipp, former Raines law hotel keeper, pleaded guilty to bribery and turned State's evidence against four ex-police inspectors, sending them to prison.

French Heel Pumps May Kill Poor Tango

DETROIT, MICH., June 22.—Dancing masters say that French heeled pumps, which are being featured by local shoe dealers, mean the finish to the tango.

"You can't dance the tango in French heeled pumps," declared a prominent shoe dealer, who agrees with the dancing teachers that the tango is doomed.

Only Two Left in Chairmanship Race

WASHINGTON, June 22—The fight for the chairmanship of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee narrowed down to-day to two candidates. They are Representative Cline, of Indiana, and Representative Doremus, of Michigan. The election will be held Monday evening.

Wins $56 Judgment Against Pullman Co.

A jury in the Superior Court Saturday awarded a verdict of $56 damages to George P. Howard in an unusual suit against the Pullman Company for $2,000.

Howard boarded a Pullman car to ride from Atlanta to a point in Tennessee. It was only a few hours' journey and rather than retire he tendered the price of an upper berth and told the conductor he would occupy a seat until he reached his destination. The conductor made him pay the price of a lower berth to occupy the seat.

He took the case up with the Interstate Commerce Commission before it was thrashed out in the courts.

Wood Alcohol Made 14 Blind in New York

NEW YORK, June 22.—The New York Commission for the Prevention of Blindness has written to Mayor Gaynor urging him to sign the ordinance recently passed by the Board of Aldermen requiring manufacturers of wood alcohol in New York to label the liquid "wood poison."

The commission in investigating the causes of blindness in the State has found that during the last year four persons have been killed and fourteen blinded either by drinking or by inhaling wood alcohol.

Felder Back; Denies Having Met Gentry

Colonel T. B. Felder returned to Atlanta Saturday morning, after an absence of a week. While it was rumored that his trip was in connection with the dictograph scandal in which he was named, and that the attorney visited Washington, D. C., and met Stenographer Gentry, who took the dictograph conversation, this was denied.

Mr. Felder declared his trip was on another matter, and that he visited Cincinnati, Louisville and Indianapolis.

Whips Anti-Saloon Head With Dog Lash

"I bought the largest dog whip I could get," said Ullman, "because I did not think a horse whip was good enough."

Cotton Outlook in Adana, Turkey, Fine

MESSINA, June 22.—All indications point to an unusually large cotton crop for 1913 in the Province of Adana, Turkey. There has been an increase of about twenty per cent under cultivation and the spring rains have favored the growth of the plants.

The crop of 1912 yield about 110,000 bales, and this year's crop is expected to amount to 120,000 bales.

Extreme Fashions Shame of Century Says The Rev. Riley

An eloquent plea to the women of Atlanta not to wear the extreme of modern fashions, which he characterized as "the shame of the century," was made by Evangelist W. B. Riley in his sermon to women only at the Baptist Tabernacle Saturday morning.

"The most extreme of modern styles in women's dress is the shame of the century," he said.

Dr. Riley declared that men are not pleased with the brazenness of women in flaunting their suggestive attire on the streets.

"We are not pleading for a return to hoopskirts," Dr. Riley said, "but insisting upon decency. When Ohio legislators seriously discuss how low the decollete can be before a oman walking the streets is open to arrest, and when the Indianapolis Chief of Police orders the arrest of all appearing in slit skirts, it is time for women to understand that men are not so pleased with present fashions as they imagined they might be."

General's Widow Is Cleared of Death

BRIDGEPORT, CONN., June 23—In a finding handed down to-day, Coroner J. B. Phelan exonerates Mrs. Isabel H. Woodford, of New York, widow of General Stewart L. Woodford, from all blame in the death of William Steinhauer, who was fatally injured by being run into by her automobile at Fairfield on the afternoon of June 3.

Model Employee a Thief; Fiancee Aids And Will Wed Him

CHICAGO, June 22.—Charles M. Hoffman, aged 24, was the most trusted employee of a big firm. When thefts of silks amounted to nearly $15,000, every employee of the store was shadowed except Hoffman. His employers told the detectives there was no need of watching their model employee.

Miss Mabel Bauman, stenographer for a silk broker, met Hoffman when he was disposing of his stolen silks to her employers. She did not know they were stolen. Her engagement to Hoffman was announced.

Miss Bauman told Hoffman's employers to-day that she had persuaded her father and brother to make good her sweetheart's thefts, and that she would marry him soon.

Wilson Sees Money Law at This Session

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., June 22.—Day-Wilson believes he will coax the House into passing a currency reform bill at the present session of Congress. He is anxious that no reports of opposition to his currency bill should appear in the newspapers.

While newspaper men were buttonholing members of the committee after last night's conferences at the White House, the President appeared at the entrance to the executive offices and informed the reporters that they could obtain information about the bill from him.

Drys and Home Rule Defeated in Illinois

WASHINGTON, June 22.President light arrived to-day before the Illinois Legislature adjourned sine die. In its final hours the Legislature passed a public utilities bill after striking out the clause that would have given Chicago and other large cities control over the utilities within their borders.

The house turned a "dry" victory into defeat by allowing the residence district bill to die on the calendar.

CHALK HOLDS CHILD IN POISON GRIP

Little Mary Tribble Dying After Two Weeks' Paralysis From Eating Crayon.

Seven-year-old Mary Tribble, daughter of Policeman W. C. Tribble, lies partially paralyzed and speechless at her home, 7 Porter Street, East Atlanta, where her strange case has baffled physicians for the last two weeks.

Two doctors have worked over her almost constantly since she came from school two weeks ago Friday and told of eating some pieces of brightly colored crayon. A few minutes after she complained of being ill her little body was rigid in the mysterious paralysis and she has been able to utter but a few words since.

The physicians say that the coloring matter in the crayons is one of the deadly poisons when taken into the human system.

Physicians Are Powerless.

The case is so unusual they are powerless to combat it. Only a flicker of life apparently remains in the tense body of the stricken child.

The doctors fear this bit of life will go out at any moment.

Mary Tribble's uncle, Policeman Charles H. Brannon, still has in his possession the remnants of the chalk which the girl ate. The imprints of her little teeth plainly are discernible upon it.

The girl was a pupil in the first grade at the Faith School in East Atlanta. Several days before the close of school her parents bought her some of the attractively colored crayons. She had pleaded for them for weeks, saying that she wanted to draw pretty pictures on the blackboard like the other children.

On the last day of school she went home sick. She was questioned by her mother, but was only able to tell that her head hurt.

A little later she was unconscious.

Several of her little schoolmates, among them Ada Parker, who occupied the seat just behind Mary, told Mrs. Tribble that they had seen the child eating some of the colored crayons that are used in the drawing classes of the school.

In Rigor of Death.

Drs. P. F. Pearce and R. E. Stone were called. They were told of the circumstances and came to the conclusion that aniline coloring, a deadly poison, had been used in the crayons. They used every method known to the medical profession to bring the girl out of her strange state, but were unsuccessful.

From that time she has remained as in the rigor of death. The physicians can not hold out much hope. They say that if the condition lasts much longer the girl must surely die. Her quick release from the paralytic state they believe to be the only thing that will save the young life.

The parents are heartbroken. Mary was a bright, happy little child and was one of the bright spots of sunshine in the little home. She was popular with her playmates, and they call every day at the Tribble house to see if there is any sign of improvement.

Case Puzzles Doctors.

Dr. R. E. Stone, the physician who has been in almost constant attendance upon the little girl, told a Georgian reporter Saturday morning that the case is one of the most remarkable in his experience.

"I have never seen anything like it," Dr. Stone said. "The symptoms are unlike those of any disease in my knowledge. Some appear to be those of auto-intoxication, combined with a pressure on the brain that produces a paralytic condition. We have not yet been able to determine whether her condition is the result of eating the chalk, or from some other cause. As a matter of fact, I'll be frank enough to say that we do not know what is the matter with her, though it is evident that she has been poisoned by something."

The little girl rallied for a few moment Saturday morning, and when Dr. Stone called her pulse was stronger than it has been for several days. The physician declared that it is impossible to tell whether she will recover, but said the chances seemed against her. The fact that she has heretofore been strong and healthy, not having required medical attention for several years, is in her favor.

Parent Near Prostration.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Tribble are on the verge of nervous prostration from loss of sleep and worry over the condition of their child. The little girl has no control over her left side, and the little left arm lies apparently lifeless on the covers. Her right eye is useless. The eyeball stares blankly from beneath her opened lids, and her mother said she had not moved the muscles of the right eye for two weeks.

The little child can say but one word. When she came home from school on the last day of school, after winning plaudits by her sweetness and beauty in the closing exercises, she stagged into the house in a stupor. Mrs. Tribble asked her what was the matter, and the child sank into a chair. She tried to talk, but the words would not come. The mother took her in her arms, and the little arms closed tightly about her neck. The little eyes gazed piteously into the face of the mother, and the little lips, after long struggles, articulated three words: "Mamma, my head!" Then she fainted, going into convulsions within a few hours.

Since then the child has spoken only the word "Mamma." When her mother moves about the room where the little body lies tossing in pain the child follows her every move, and she makes pathetic struggles to speak. At times the word "Mamma" comes but nothing more. With her right hand she constantly rubs her face and presses her burning brow. Saturday morning, because of the heat, her golden hair was cut off close, though the mother's eyes dimmed with tears as she used the scissors.

TECH MUST HAVE FUNDS TO ADVANCE

Trustees Declare Standard Can't Be Maintained on Present Appropriation.

The present standard of the Georgia School of Technology can not be maintained unless increased appropriations are made to the maintenance fund, according to the report of the Board of Trustees of the school, filed with Governor Brown by Chairman N. E. Harris, of Macon.

The report declares that more land is needed for campus purposes, and a $30,000 appropriation for a power house. The appropriation of the power house fund will make available a gift of $100,000, offered by friends of the school.

The report also says that the difference between the receipts and expenditures of the school during the past year—only about $6,000—will not be sufficient to run the institution through the month of June.

Increased appropriations also are urged in the report of Dr. K. G. Matheson, president of the school, who says the school can not meet the demands made upon it without more money.

Limited Number to Hear Wilson Monday

WASHINGTON, June 22.—Elaborate preparations are being made to prevent on Monday when President Wilson delivers his currency message to Congress the push and crowding of corridors of the Capitol that marked the reading of a previous message in which the President shattered a precedent.

The order has gone out that each Senator and Representative will have one ticket to the gallery and no more. It will be a case of "no ticket no seat."

Author Guilty on Charge of Slaying

PLYMOUTH, MASS., June 22.—David D. Farnsworth, a magazine writer, of Chicago, was found guilty of manslaughter for killing Thomas Hagen at Bridgewater when he mistook the latter for a hen thief.

The prosecution contended that Hagen was not on Farnsworth's property when shot, but was exercising his dogs on the highway.

First Recruit for Job as Woman Cop Lauds Sex's Ability

Police Chief Beavers Saturday received the first application for a job as a member of his proposed squad of women policemen.

As the Police Commission, however, has not yet decreed that Atlanta shall possess "feminine bluecoats," the Chief filed the application for future reference.

The woman who seeks to aid Chief Beavers in suppressing vice and crime gave her name as Mrs. Elizabeth Abrams, 168 Central Avenue. She explained that she believes she is well fitted to perform the duties of a woman cop, and asked that she be given an opportunity to demonstrate her ability.

Mrs. Abrams also commends the suggestion of the Chief that women policemen would be of great benefit to the police department.

"Women could get information and find out things where men would fall down absolutely," she wrote.

Fallen Woman Is Penitent for Sins; Put on Probation

Recorder Broyles Saturday morning advised Pearl Davis, a young woman arrested in a downtown hotel, to pray constantly for strength to aid her in throwing off the "old life." The woman had pleaded that she wished to reform and redeem herself.

"I've found that the evil life doesn't pay, and I want to quit it," she said. "It has brought me disgrace and unhappiness and sorrow, and I'm going to save myself while there's yet a chance."

Impressed by the woman's apparent penitence, the court placed her on probation and she was taken to the Martha Home by the Rev. G. R. Buford.

Walter Blackman, a young man arrested with the Davis woman, was bound over to the State courts on the charges of stealing a grip in the Union Station and for vagrancy.

NOLL FIRM SUES CITY FOR $40,000

Sewer Builders Claim Atlanta Violated Contract—Case Being Argued in U. S. Court.

Arguments in the case of the Noll Construction Company vs. The City of Atlanta, involving approximately $40,000, which the company seeks to recover for this amount ono the grounds that the city has refused to furnish an estimate of the work done, were heard by Judge Newman in the United States District Court Saturday morning.

Th case is complex. The city and the construction company fail to agree on about 50 pieces of work in sewer building. The largest item is the construction of a sewer two miles long from the county line to the disposal plant in DeKalb County.

Most of the work was finished early this year, and it is alleged by the Noll Construction Company that it was to be allowed the cost of actual construction plus 15 per cent. The company cites the contract in this contention.

It is claimed that in a number of places it was necessary to use reinforced concrete instead of the rougn concrete. The cost of reinforced concrete is $20 per cubic yard, while the plain concrete costs only $7.50.

The city contends that the difference in cost may be considered extra work and that it is not responsible for this additional cost.

Industry Bureau After Big Plants

The new Bureau of Industry and Statistics, created Friday in the appointment of a committee to take charge, is going after some big industries for Atlanta, according to statements Saturday by Chairman J. R. Smith. The first meeting will be held Tuesday afternoon, when a definite plan of campaign will be mapped out and a secretary appointed.

"We are shaping our plans now," said Mr. Smith, "and will have something to say probably after Tuesday's meeting. We intend to go after big industries for Atlanta in addition to holding to what we already have."

Mr. Smith said a permanent secretary, a local man of prominence, probably, will be elected Tuesday afternoon. The secretary will receive a salary and will have supervision of the work of the bureau.

The committee in charge of the bureau consists of J. R. Smith, chairman; Mell R. Wilkinson, V. H. Kriegshaber, David Woodward, A. R. Colcord, W. T. Winn, J. S. Floyd, W. R. Collier and E. H. Shaw. The committee was appointed by President Wilmer Moore, of the Chamber of Commerce, of which the bureau is a branch.

Assailants of Mail Clerk Slip Officers

Secret Service men, at work in the case of W. S. Ware, railway mail clerk, who was attacked, seriously injured and robbed of six registered letters while coming from the Terminal Station, have found no clews as to the identity of the bandits.

The exact sum contained in the six letters has not been given out. Owing to the activity of the inspectors it is believed to be considerable.

PHILADELPHIA, June 22.—A special injunction preventing a rooster from crowing near his sleeping apartment was granted to P. A. Wildermuth, a lawyer who declared that daily for the last three years a rooster, owned by Charles L. Tull, a neighbor, has disturbed his slumbers.

TREATY SIGNED IN CREMATORY ROW

Council to Pass New Contract and Mayor Will Sign—Plant Opens Soon.

An agreement which, it is expected, will effectively end the $260,000 crematory row, was made in Mayor Woodward's office Saturday between the Mayor, Assistant City Attorney W. D. Ellis, Jr., and Alderman J. H. Harwell. A special meeting of Council is to be called early next week and a new contract passed. Mayor Woodward has agreed to sign it.

The Mayor had agreed to the essentials of the deal before Council took its recent action, but Council endeavored to take from his hands the execution. He and his friends immediately resorted to tactics which would have held the matter up for five weeks at least. Now the whole transaction is to be gone over again in a normal way.

It was announced to-day that the new crematory would be in operation within a very short time and that all garbage dump piles immediately abandoned.

High Officials to See Local K. of C. Initiate

Some of the highest officials of the Knights of Columbus in America will come from the East to attend the initiation ceremonies of the Atlanta Lodge Sunday, June 29. By special dispensation the first, second and third degrees will be conferred on a large scale.

The initiation will begin at 9 o'clock. The first and second degrees will be conferred by Dr. J. H. Hines, grand knight of the Atlanta Lodge. The third degree will be given by District Deputy M. C. Carroll. A banquet will be served at the Piedmont.

STATE TO IGNORE FORMBY FRANK AFFIDAVIT

Attorney Hooper, Prosecutor's Aide, Declares Justice Is Aim in Phagan Case.

It is known that Judge L. S. Roan, who will preside at the trial, will be free the weeks of July 14 and July 28. This is interpreted to suggest the possibility that the trial will be postponed to one of those dates.

Reuben Arnold, the probability of whose participation in the Frank trial was indicated by The American three weeks ago, is at Atlantic Beach and will not return to Atlanta until Monday. It was said at his office, however, that definite arrangements for his becoming one of the counsel for the defense had not as yet been made.

Chief Lanford said that the great sheaf of affidavits procured by his department had no use except to guide the memory of his men in their investigations and to hold as a protection in the event of an emergency, such as the sudden change in the testimony of a witness or the disappearance of a witness from the jurisdiction of the court.

Some question had arisen as to the purpose of the large number of affidavits when none of them would be permitted to be introduced as evidence in the trial of Leo Frank, so long as the affiant appeared to testify.

The chief explained that it had been the design of the department to protect itself at all points, and that in case a witness changed his testimony on the stand it would be possible to proceed against him on the charge of perjury.

The affidavits also were obtained to be used in the event that a witness dies before the trial or leaves the jurisdiction of the court.

Defense Also Has Many.

It is known that the defense has in its possession as many affidavits as the prosecution. The attorneys for Frank carefully have investigated every story that has come to their ears, and when it has appeared reliable they have obtained the sworn statement of the person telling of the circumstances.

The main difference in the case of the prosecution and that of the defense is that the contents of most of the affidavits obtained by the detectives are known to the public, while the revelations made to the defense have been most carefully guarded.

Luther Z. Rosser, attorney for Frank, made one public statement, but in it he carefully avoided giving any hint that would aid the prosecution in determining who his witnesses were to be or what they would testify.

Lucy Cobb Girl Success in Drama

Miss Baxter Star as Jeanne d'Arc

Great Career Is Predicted for Her

Miss Helen Baxter, who has won prizes for her successful and talented portrayal of noted characters in drama at Lucy Cobb College, Athens.

A successful theatrical career, should she decide in favor of the stage, is predicted for Miss Helen Baxter by those who saw her in the recent presentation of "Jeanne D'Arc" at Lucy Cobb College. In the title role she made a distinctly pleasing impression upon the large audience.

Miss Baxter is the daughter of Colonel John S. Baxter, of Omaha, Nebr., and has been a student at Lucy Cobb, in Athens, for several years. She is young, talented and unusually pretty, after the intellectual type.

She was awarded the prize for oratory this year, and her studies have been directed toward expression, in which line of work she has excelled.

Besides taking the leading role in "Jeanne D'Arc," Miss Baxter was the piper in the play of that name, which was given in Athens early in the spring.

Life's Worth Living in Georgia

If you prefer city life, there are no better cities in the world than those in Georgia. If you prefer village life, the smaller towns in Georgia offer every inducement.

If you prefer country or farm life, Georgia offers greater inducements than any State in the Union. Georgia lands work the year round, from two to five crops being gathered off of the same land each year---crops that are profitable.

Climate and Soil

The climate is such that farmers do not have to house stock during the winter, there being good grazing the entire year. For raising cattle and stock Georgia offers greater inducements than can be found elsewhere.

The soil is suited for almost anything that grows and can be utilized the entire year. The prices at which good farm land can be purchased at present in Georgia are so low that it is a matter of comment---some thinking that the land is not so good as stated. The land is good, but there are thousands of acres that are now lying idle and the good people of Georgia are anxious for good farmers to come among them. Consequently the land is cheaper here than elsewhere.

TURK CAPTAIN RUNS AMUCK WITH SHIP

Doesn't Know War Is Over, or Thirsts for Blood—American to Stop Him.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 22.—"Quit fighting; war is over." This radio-telegram, addressed to Raour Bey, commander of the Turkish cruiser Hamidieh, was sent out scores of times to-day from every Turkish wireless station in an effort to make the cruiser discontinue its destructive course through the Mediterranean, Aegean and Red Seas.

The Turkish Government is worried. Racur Bey either does not know the war is over or else, imbued with the fighting spirit, he is determined to keep up the war single-handed until stopped by force.

The only person in authority in the Turkish navy who has strong influence over Raour Bey is Bucknam Pasha, the American sailor of fortune, who is a rear admiral in the Ottoman navy. He has been hurriedly recalled from London to make the Hamidieh quit fighting.

The whereabouts of the cruiser is unknown.

Odor From Sewer Puts Lake's Water In False Repute

An open sewer on Piedmont Avenue, emitting noxious odors which were wafted over Piedmont Park, was responsible for the false rumor that the waters of Piedmont bathing lake were polluted. President J. O. Cochran, of the park board, has taken official cognizance of the damaging reports and issued an emphatic denial.

"The water in Piedmont lake is as pure as the water we drink, and the United States Government within the week pronounced our drinking water perfect," said Mr. Cochran Saturday. "Piedmont Lake is a running stream; a million gallons of fresh water are pumped in every day from the reservoir, and a million gallons run out at the other end."

To make matters doubly sure, President Cochran has requested the city bacteriologist to test the lake waters, and the county commissioners already have started work closing the sewer which gave off the unsavory smell.

Valdosta Farmer In Jail, Accused of Slaying His Wife

VALDOSTA, GA., June 22.—Norris Newsome, a leading farmer of this county, is in jail here charged with the murder of his wife, who was found dead under mysterious circumstances last Saturday afternoon. A warrant for Newsome's arrest was sworn out by J. A. Swilley, a brother of the dead woman.

The arrest of Newsome caused a sensation here. It had been supposed Mrs. Newsome committed suicide. She was said to have gone to her room and fired a pistol ball through her head.

Relatives, however, were suspicious, in view of alleged strained relations between the couple. They came to town and before the Coroner's verdict was rendered J. A. Swilley swore out the warrant. It is probable the body of the dead woman will be exhumed for autopsy.

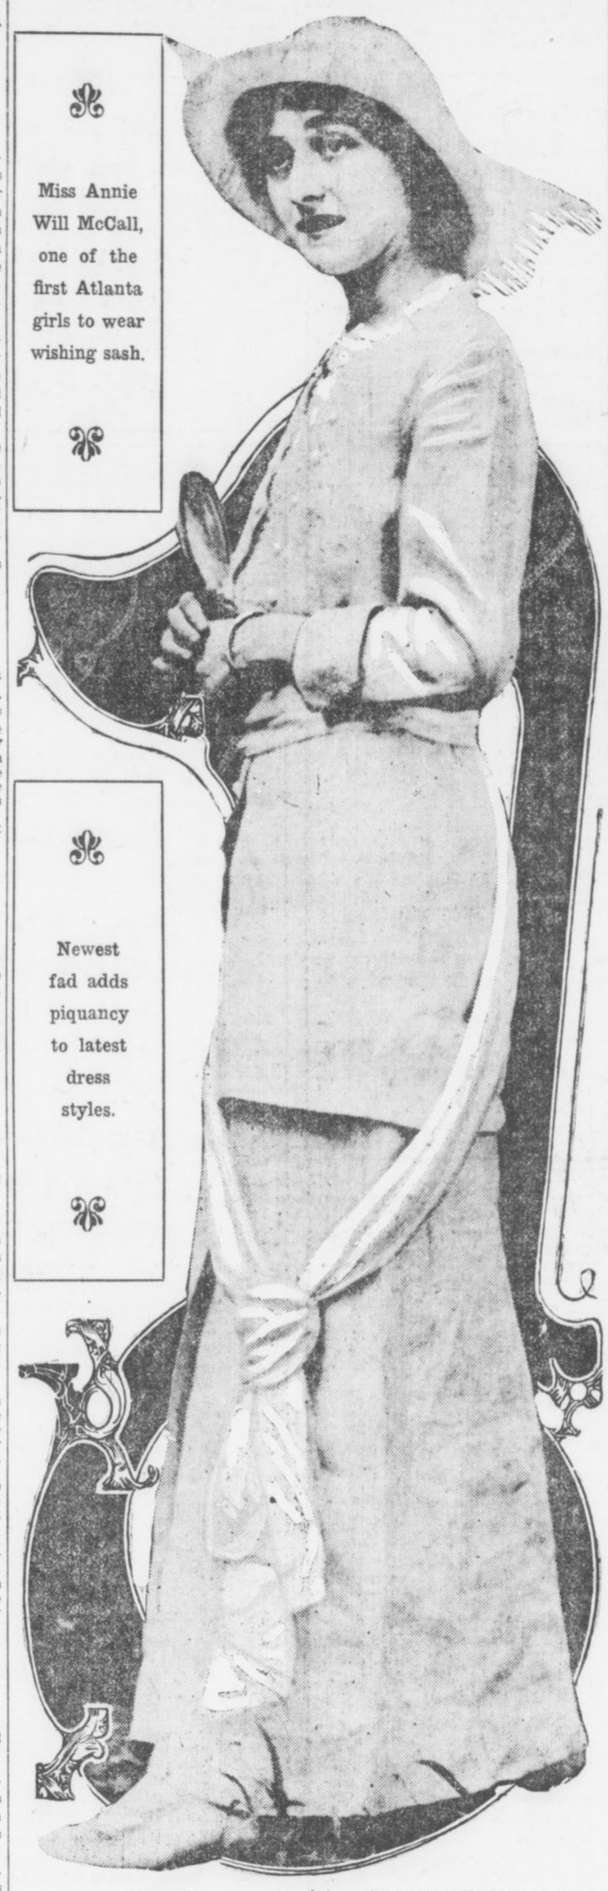
New 'Wishing Sash' Fad Is Here

Springs Into Quick Popularity

Brings What You Most Desire



Miss Annie Will McCall, one of the first Atlanta girls to wear wishing sash.

Newest fad adds piquancy to latest dress styles.

Latest Foible Comes With Other Fashions From War-Torn Balkan States.

As if the Atlanta girls already were not so alluringly decked out with gay gowns and feminine fripperies as to be irresistible to the masculine eye, they have now added another deft touch to enhance their native charm in the "wishing sash."

The wishing sash has just come to town. It is one of the multitudinous fads or fashions that have resulted from the quarrel over there in the Balkans. But its particular feature and that from which it derives its interesting name is that it is "wished on" the fair wearer.

To be more explicit, this sash, which may be red or blue or a mixture, as the fancy of the maiden dictates, is draped by some swain about the waist of his adored. Then the ends are allowed to fall half way to her dainty feet. On bended knee the youth ties these ends in a typical "sailor."

While this knot is being tied, the girl is making a wish. And before she can untie those knots the wish must come true. If the wish never comes true, then the sash never is untied. Only the romantic atmosphere with which it is surrounded prevents this little compact with the Fates from taking on much of the nature of the vow of the man who declares he never will shave again until his candidate for the presidency is elected.

The fashion has sprung into instantaneous popularity in Atlanta.

"I think it's a pretty little fad," said Miss Annie Will McCall, who was one of the first to wear the novel wishing sashes in Atlanta. However, Miss McCall made it very plain that one may wear a "wishing sash" and ignore all the rules about a sweetheart's tying it.

Washington society was the first to be stormed by the new fad. Miss Dorothy Williams, sister of Mrs. Joseph Leiter, introduced the custom there, and it quickly spread over all the East.

YANKEES SEIZE S. AMERICAN TRADE

Zeal of Men From United States Driving Europeans to the Wall.

NEW YORK, June 22.—When Dr. W. E. Aughinbaugh, the commercial globe trotter, of Philadelphia, arrived at the Breslin after an absence of eleven months, he explained that since his last appearance on Broadway he and Mrs. Aughinbaugh had traveled somewhere between 40,000 and 50,000 miles, and that they had visited in that time every country south of the Rio Grande, and incidentally taken in Northern Africa and much of Europe.

Dr. Aughinbaugh has been making a commercial investigation for certain companies interested in the export trade. He says that in the last four years American manufactures and exporters have gone after South American business so zealously that to-day they are almost driving the British and the Germans to the wall. Wonderful fortunes have been made in some of the Latin-American republics, he says, by Americans who went thither with hardly more than a shoestring, and the American advertising man is blossoming and becoming fruitful in Buenos Ayres, and Rio de Janeiro to an extent that would make the highest paid solicitor at home green with envy.

"One of the most interesting journeys we made was up the Parana River into Brazil, and then to Asuncion, the capital of Paraguay. And whom do you think I found there? No less a person than Tex Rickard, who managed the Jeffries-Johnson fight. Rickard is superintending the cattle raising for Percival Farquhar's Company which, besides big cattle ranges, seems to own lots of railroads and street railways and electric lighting plants down there.

Pushing Europeans To Wall.

"What I noticed during my trip especially is that the United States has made tremendous strides in the last four years toward getting possession of South American trade. England and Germany have hitherto had every thing all their own way, but now our exporters are pushing them to the wall. Our people have at last awakened to the possibilities of the great market for their goods that South America furnishes. Take the case of one company that sells a brand of mineral water. It is taking advantage of the fact that throughout South America the water is bad, and it now sends its wares down there by the shipload, and you find them everywhere.

"I do not believe it is generally known up here, but Charles M. Schwab has got in Chile the biggest iron mine in the world. This is in the Southern part of the country, and it has been estimated that it alone will be able to supply all the iron needed in Chile for 200 years. American miners are being brought into the country by the thousand. I was told that $20,000,000 has been invested in the acquisition and operation of the mine. The Braden Company, an American concern owning mines in Chile, has doubled its output of copper within four or five years. The Standard Oil Company has depots all along the coast, and the Du Pont Powder Company has two nitrate plants in Chile. In Peru, the oil fields at Lobitas, in which American, English, and Italian capital is invested, are perhaps the biggest in the world. They have dug into the sandy desert, and it is spouting oil, and they have even sunk wells below the sea and got oil in vast quantities. The Peruvian Steamship Company, which runs to Panama, is now operating its ships by oil.

Preparing For Canal.

"There is not a steamship company in South America that has not placed orders for more ships on account of the approaching opening of the Panama Canal. The United Fruit Company is opening stations all along the barren coast of Western South America, and is preparing to send bananas down there to supply a new market. The United States Steel Company has a big vanadium mine at Cerro de Pasco, Peru, where 3,000 Americans are working at an altitude of 3,000 feet. The Panama Canal has given them a big jolt down there, and they are waking up.

"In Mexico, some years ago, I used to know a man named McAdoo, who at the time was selling electric belts. The next time I saw him he was in La Paz, Boliva. He had arrived there with $1,600 in his pockets, and was wondering what he could find to do. Well, with that small capital and a good deal of bluff, he started in building railways. Not long before I reached La Paz this time, McAdoo got pneumonia up in the high altitudes and died. Mr. Knowles, the American Minister, had to act as administrator of the estate. Mr. Knowles told me himself that an inventory of McAdoo's estate showed that he was worth at the time of his death, $3,700,000. All this McAdoo had accumulated in less than four years. The minister also told me that so far as he could learn McAdoo had not a single relative living.

"Then there was an American named Yount, who went down there to be a railway contractor. He had cleaned up half a million dollars when some of the Indians blew one of his legs off, and he gathered together his money, went to Europe, and bought an automobile, and now doesn't have to work. And railroad-building is not the only thing in which money is made.

Clerk Does Millions.

"I used to know a fellow in La Paz by the name of Harold Deniston, a clerk in the cable office. Two years ago he was discharged. He had only $150 cash, but he went around to the banks, and they, knowing him to be a hustler, gave him credit. He started in doing a general commission business. Last year that man did a business of $2,000,000. That sounds pretty big, but I happen to have seen records that prove it.

"Why, there is a fellow who has the agency for a certain typewriter, an American man, who in a town of 20,000 inhabitants, of whom only six could read and write, sold twenty machines. I asked him how he had managed to do it.

"'Well,' he replied, 'I first got hold of the Chief of Police, and after demonstrating the machine to him, I persuaded him that he ought to have one. He liked to play on the keys. Well, after he had got his typewriter, the rest was easy. He used to spend his time sitting in his window hitting the keys, while a great crowd would gather in the streets exclaiming in enthusiastic wonder that the chief, who knew they could not write, could yet, with that wonderful Americano device, write just as the most learned books were printed. Naturally the Mayor of the town, who also could neither read nor write, saw the chief hammering the typewriter, and when he discovered how easy it was to pose as an educated man, he gave me an order for a typewriter. He, too, took to spending his time in hammering away on the keys in view of the populace, and the other orders came rolling in.'"

EXPECT BATTLE BETWEEN POSSE AND BANDITS

Officers Surround Three Alleged Train Robbers in Swamp Near Kirkland.

WAYCROSS, June 22.—A pitched battle is expected hourly here between officers of the law and three alleged outlaws who have taken refuge in a swamp near Kirkland following an attack on the crew of an eastbound Atlantic Coast Line freight train running from Albany to Waycross. The engine cab was riddled with bullets and the hats of Conductor Leroy McWhite, of Albany, and Flagman J. W. Jennings, of Waycross, were perforated by bullets. A gang of five men made the attack.

Series of Thefts.

This attack followed a series of daring train robberies and store thefts in and near Waycross and at Pearson. Only two arrests have been made so far, that of Jesse Carver, who was lodged in jail at Douglas Friday, charged with having received goods stolen from the Atlantic Coast Line, and Edgar Carver, son of elder Carver, who is held on suspicion of having connection with those who have committed the robberies. Edgar Carver, who is only 22 years old, will aid the officers probably in their efforts to round up the gang of robbers.

Great excitement prevails here, for a pitched battle is said to be certain as the members of the gang are desperate and heavily armed. All the members of the gang are believed to be in hiding in a swamp known as "Roundup," near Kirkland.

Three of Gang Known.

Those known to have taken refuge in this swamp are Randall Solomon, an escaped convict from Barrien County, where he was serving a fifteen-year sentence for arson; his brother, Andrew Solomon, and John Register, a white man, supposed to be an army deserter. Other members of the gang are believed to be close at hand and ready to give battle when arrests are attempted.

Chief G. O. Gobels, of Savannah, was here with bloodhounds and has gone to the scene of the shooting with W. E. Caley, of Waycross, and Sheriff Gillis and deputies of Coffee County. Atlantic Coast Line special officers are aiding also in the search for the gang. It is believed some sensational arrests will be made within the next few hours.

Love God Forsakes Arrows for Phone Wires, but Conquers

Two years of effort by Dan Cupid to use the telephone wires in lieu of a bow and arrow ended late Friday afternoon when Miss Clyde Brown, telephone operator in the Southern Railway Building, and P. S. Anderson, traffic clerk for the N., C. & St. L., secured a long distance connection with Hymen's court, through Judge Girardeau's Hunter Street love exchange. They will make their home for the present with the bride's mother at 66 West Linden Street.

The wedding came after two years of telephonic courtship. Neither saw the other in two years of telephonic courtship.

Two months ago they were introduced by a mutual friend, Dan Cupid canceled his telephone contract and picked up his bow and arrows—and all was well.

How to Withstand Hot Weather

Dr. Summerall Gives Ten Rules

Regulate Yourself, He Advises

His Five Precepts and Five Don'ts Will Help You Endure the Blazing Sun.

"You can't regulate the weather, so why not regulate yourself?"

Dr. W. L. Summerall, superintendent of Grady hospital, asked the question. And in the next breath he told a Georgian reporter it was entirely practicable to mitigate the effects of a scorching sun and stand the heat without serious impairment to one's mental, physical or spiritual make-up.

"Hot weather is something that must be endured," said he. "You can't change it, and unless you are a millionaire you can't run away from it. Cussin' the weather is as futile as praying for rain or voting the Republican ticket in Arkansas. The only thing to do is to regulate your habits; to take the hot weather as a matter of course and counteract the effects of the heat by your daily actions."

Dr. Summerall's advice on how to stand the heat may be summarized in five precepts and five "don'ts." Here are the precepts:

"Take plenty of exercise.
"Breathe fresh air.
"Keep clean, inside and outside.
"Diet yourself.
"Drink soft drinks."

Gives You Five Don'ts.

The five don'ts, practically the same as the precepts, stated inversely, are the following:

"Abstain from heavy and heat producing foods.
"Abstain from alcohol.
"Don't sit under a fan.
"Don't sleep in a closed room.
"Don't be lazy.

"If you come in my office at 3 o'clock any afternoon you would say I didn't know how to stand the heat myself," Dr. Summerall said. "But it is a fact that the effects of a hot day can be greatly lessened and that too, without trouble, expense or loss of time."

Dr. Summerall proceeded to discuss his idea, as follows:

"This is the time of year when your diet tells on you. Heavy and heat producing foods will certainly make you feel the heat. By heavy and heat producing foods I mean meats, dried beans, and the like.

"Fresh vegetables at this time of the year and the fruits of the season are mighty good. It is a part of nature's plan to furnish those foods at the time we need them.

"I do not say abstinence from meats is necessary, but simply that they are heat producing, and there are plenty of fruits and vegetables which are not heat producing to such an extent.

"Alcohol at this time of the year is not going to benefit any one. Plenty of Chattahoochee water is my doctrine. Mineral waters, and the carbonic acid gas in soda fountain drinks are always refreshing. They promote healthful excretions from the skin.

"Exercise is always desirable. A certain amount is necessary to get rid of products that make you feel bad. Exercise is necessary in the hot summer time.

"Bathing helps, because it stimulates the skin. A good rubbing down after a bath is fine.

"Swimming is good exercise—you are working while you are in the water.

"Be attentive to your daily habits. See that your digestive and eliminative organs are working properly.

"Fresh air is necessary. A closed room at night is deleterious, especially at this time of the year. A sleeping porch is a good thing. Circulation of the air is desirable, but don't sit under a fan for it might make you sick.

"No man can say just how much you mitigate the effects of hot weather, but it is undoubtedly true that by dieting, bathing and exercising and careful attention to all daily habits, any one can better withstand the rigors of a hot day than the man who eats anything and drinks anything and does anything he wants to. Nobody can regulate the weather, but anybody, to some extent, can regulate himself, and if you regulate yourself you regulate the effect of the weather on yourself."

Dr. Summerall said the lean man needed to watch himself as well as the fat man, for the fat man might know how to "take things easy better than the lean man."

"The high strung man, the nervous man, the man who is always in a hurry, whom we might designate as the race horse type, because he is so energetic he passes everybody in front of him, is liable in a way to feel the heat more than the languid man who moves slowly and takes things easy. If the lean man would take things a little more moderately and the fat man would take a little more exercise and pay more attention to his daily habits, they would both stand the heat better."

STATE CAVALRY OFF FOR CAMP

Terminal Station presented a warlike appearance Friday night when several troops of cavalry of the Georgia National Guard entrained for the annual summer camp at St. Simons. Three cavalry troops left on the special train—the Governor's Horse Guard, Candler Horse Guards of Gainesville and the headquarters staff.

Major J. O. Seamans, commander of the Second Squadron, will be in charge at the camp. His appearance at the depot drew a cheer from the soldiers. Other troops of the Second Squadron, who left their respective towns last night for Brunswick, are Troop K, Augusta, and Troop B, McIntosh. Troop A, of Savannah, unassigned, will also go into camp with the Second Squadron and be under the command of Major Seamans.

The special train leaving Atlanta last night was composed of two baggage cars, three day coaches and three Pullmans. While the State provides only day coaches for the troops, the Governor's Horse Guard reserved sleeping cars at their own expense.

Lieutenant Arthur McCollum, adjutant of the Second Squadron, looked after the shipments of the heavy material. Lieutenant Fay Wilson is quartermaster of the Second Squadron, and gave the guardsmen assurance that the State had appropriated sufficient money to feed them well while at camp. Captain Ben Pearce will be chief sanitary officer, while Lieutenant A. McD. Wilson will be in charge of rifle practice.

The Candler Horse Guards reached Atlanta Friday afternoon, giving the members several hours in which to take in the sights of the city. The special arrived in Brunswick at 5 o'clock this morning. The soldiers immediately embarked on a special steamer for the island. Ten days will be spent there, when the cavalrymen will be relieved by the Fifth Regiment and other infantry forces.

Movie Snaps French Deputies in Yawns

PARIS, June 22.—Reasoning that moving pictures of the Chamber of Deputies during important debates would stimulate pride and patriotism throughout France, the clerk gave permission to a cinematograph company to work its cameras in the legislative hall. A machine ran several hours before the Deputies knew it. Members in their seats were yawning. Finally the news got around and there was much pretty strutting, fine gesticulating and a universal effort to look solemn and wise.

GIRLS SENT HOME TO CHANGE GOWNS

ROCHESTER, PA., June 22.—I am very sorry miss, but I am compelled under the recent ordinance enacted as a result of recommendations of the Morals Efficiency Committee of Council, to place you under arrest unless you will agree to return to your home and change your mode of dress."

"Sir, what have I done? What is wrong with my costume?"

"You are not properly dressed."

This conversation took place several times to-day between fair pedestrians and policemen. On several occasions the women grew defiant, but finally were persuaded to obey the law.

The Morals Efficiency Committee was authorized at a meeting of council last night to act in conjunction with Burgess Crago in determining what constitutes a modestly dressed woman. Especially were slashed and form-draping skirts, gauze hose and peek-a-boo waists condemned.

The committee, through the Burgess, is expected to issue a proclamation defining the limitations to the length of skirts, thickness of cloth and proper number to wear at one time. Hosiery, waists and other female apparel will also be classified under the head of "permissible" or "undesirable."

PUBLIC COMFORT HOUSE URGED BY GREEN

Park Commissioner Explains Plan for City to Erect Building on Whitehall.

A public comfort building in the heart of Atlanta is a necessity and will be erected if the ideas of Park Commissioner L. C. Green are carried out.

"I shall take the matter up at the next meeting of the Park Board, and I believe they will recommend to Council that a public comfort building be erected in the heart of the business section for the benefit especially of visitors.

"An ideal place, in my opinion, is at Peachtree and Wall Streets, on the east side of the Whitehall Street Viaduct. The structure could be built on the same general plans of the Western and Atlantic Railroad office, giving ample room underneath for the passage of vehicles, and would not interfere with traffic in the least.

"The entrance would be from the viaduct, and could extend as far back as necessary. It would be some 20 feet from the nearest building, and would not interfere with the steps leading down from the viaduct. This building could be erected without cost to the city, and would be a source of revenue instead of an expense.

Would Be Good Investment.

Any business man in the soft drink and cigar and tobacco line would be glad to erect the building for the rental for, say, ten years, when it would revert to the city. Such a place would easily rent for from $200 to $300 per month, and would be a good investment if the city were to build it.

"My idea is that the front of the building be used for an entrance, with a soda fountain and cigar stand, and the rear be divided into two large rooms, one for women and the other for men. These rooms would be in the care of good servants, one woman and one man, who would look after the comfort of the citizens and visitors and see that proper sanitary conditions prevail.

"These servants should be paid by the lessee of the building, relieving the city of any responsibility except that the purposes for which it was erected be carried out. Of course, it would be under the supervision of the public buildings and grounds committee of the Park Board, and the tenant be subject to removal if the place was not conducted in a proper manner.

Other Conveniences Suggested.

"I would suggest that writing tables be provided and that visitors or residents could use them at their convenience, the lessee, of course, carrying in stock writing paper, envelopes and stamps, the pens and ink being furnished.

"A public stenographer could be provided for, and every convenience and comfort be given.

"There are many other places and plans that could be carried out, but I believe the one above would be the best. At any rate, a building should be erected, and I intend to push the matter as far as I can, and I also believe the public will join in the movement and that Council will provide the means."

Homely Ones, cheer up; take a tip from a photographic connoisseur—Miss Pet Evans—who is an expert and knows what she is talking about. You may be real good looking in a photograph, but, Pretty Ones, beware, for your most bewitching beauty may be entirely lacking on the picture man's negative.

Funny, isn't it, and horrid, too, for the good lookers, but it's one of the rules of the game, or, rather, the art of photography, according to Miss Evans. The most homely woman sometimes will produce a prettier picture than the most dazzling beauty, she says—all because there's something lacking in the ont that the photographer's most sensitive glass plate searches out in the other.

And this "something"—well, even Miss Evans admits it's sort of elusive-like, as hard to describe adequately as it is to find some time. Yet, it is there, and this little "it," in its final analysis, Miss Evans believes, is nothing more nor less than "character."

"These baby dolls with minus expressions," said Miss Evans—"oh, it's a hopeless task! They lack that power of expression, indicative of character, absolutely essential for what we call a good picture. The best that we can do in such cases is to make a profile—that's what profiles are for, as you perhaps know.

It's in the Eyes.

"Yes, indeed, give me the face with strong character lines—sparkling full-of-life eyes, and a mouth firm, not set, and I will give you a good picture in return; but give me one of those shallow countenances, with that languid "don't-care-if-I-do" expression, and I shall be forced either to give it up or give you what we call a poor picture."

"Do you mean to say, then, that you would advise persons not blessed with expressions of character not to have their pictures made?" queried the reporter, in some surprise.

"That I do," replied Miss Evans—that is, aside from the business part of it, of course.

"Do you know," continued Miss Evans, "this facial character matter has more to do with pictures and persons than anything else. Why, I can actually size up a person almost the minute he or she walks in by the facial expression.

"I can almost tell how much money a person has in his pocket by the expression on his face."

And here the reporter dug slyly down into his pocket while the pleasant conversationalist continued her discourse on the high art—just 15 cents—a nickel and a dime—greeted his cautious touch.

"In making photos," continued Miss Evans, "one of the first essentials is the expression of the eyes—there should be 'life,' not languidness there, first, last and all the time. Just look at this picture"—turning to a large portrait of a woman, not beautiful—"do you see the sparkle, the 'life,' in those eyes? That's real beauty; but now, look at this one—she really is quite pretty in real life, but not here, for the 'life' and character are lacking."

Another essential for a good picture, Miss Evans said, is a complete loss of self-consciousness. The lack of this in children, she says, is the primary reason for such good pictures.

"And at what ideal age would you have woman pose for her photo?" queried the reporter as he turned to go.

"Not before 30," was the prompt and emphatic reply.

GREAT SNAKES! HIS HIGH COLLAR SAVES MARINER FROM REPTILE'S FANGS!

Jolly Tar and the Jimbaree.

NEW YORK, June 22.—Here's a real snake story and an advertisement for linen collars all in one! The hero and the author of the great reptile yarn is Gerhard Wieder, third officer of the Prinz August Wilhelm, at her dock, after a voyage from the West Indies, with 25,000 bunches of bananas in her hold—but that's another story.

While the Prinz August Wilhelm was lying in Pearl Lagoon, Nicaragua, taking cargo, Wieder had his adventure. He is an ardent collector of moths and butterflies and had gone into the jungle in quest of specimens. He had caught a particularly beautiful insect in his net and stooped to pick up his prize when he was struck a blow on the neck that sent him sprawling.

When he saw the cause he scrambled to his feet fast enough. A snake, known in those parts as the jimbaree and deadly poisonous, had struck him.

Wieder affects exceedingly high collars. In fact, were it not for the ears they would engulf him completely. To this he attributes his life, for the fangs of the jimbaree could not penetrate the stiffly starched linen.

"The collars are warm in the tropics," said Wieder, "but hereafter I shall wear them even if I am half cooked. As soon as I had recovered from my fright I seized a cudgel and started in pursuit of the snake, but he crawled off into the brush."

Wieder is going to try and capture a jimbaree on the next trip to Nicaragua.

Deported for Part in $100,000 Gem Theft

NEW YORK, June 22.—Geza Kline, regarded as the most notorious "fence" in Europe, was put on board the White Star liner Adriatic for England.

Kline is suspected of being the receiver of more than $100,000 worth of loot from a jewelry robbery in London. He was recognized on his arrival here last week and deported as an undesirable alien.

ONLY 'PLUGGING' CAN WIN ONE OF PONIES

Spasmodic Effort Cannot Get Rewards for Boys and Girls in Big Contest.

It is not spasmodic effort that wins prizes. It is constant "plugging." The boys and girls in the Georgian and American pony contests will do well to remember this.

When you have a "big day" and votes come rolling in, do not take that for an excuse to "lay off" for a day or two following. Every day you rest is a day lost, and July 31 is not as far away as it may seem to you.

July 5 is even nearer. On the night of July 5, the bonus votes will be distributed. There are special vote offers for clubs of five subscriptions, either yearly, half yearly or quarterly. These subscriptions do not need to be sent in all at once, but may be sent in one or two at a time, if desired. Indeed, this is a much better plan than "holding back" as many of the contestants now are doing. No offer as good will be made after July 5, and the contestants who delay will miss getting thousands of votes which they might win with no extra effort before them.

There is also an offer of 50,000 extra votes for the first $30 in subscriptions turned in. This offer may be withdrawn at any time.

In Sunday's American the vote standings will be published, and every indication is that some of the erstwhile leaders will be rudely awakened. There has been a great revival of interest in the contest since the special offers and the extra prizes were announced, and many of the contestants who were working not very energetically up to that time are busy as bees now.

The rank and file of the contestants—those who have not shown winning form up to the present time, now are awake to the fact that in some districts, the ponies are anybody's who will get out and do a few days work for them. There's no one safe anywhere, in fact, for the reason that so many are concealing their real strength. Others are boasting of their strength, while in fact they have shown their whole hand, and have all their votes counted.

Dr. Jenkins and Miss Phipps were exploring the Luray caverns when they decided to marry. A minister was summoned and, with the tinkle of trickling water as their wedding music, the ceremony was performed.

Marriage Restraint Is Declared Illegal

TRENTON, N. J., June 22.—Taking the stand that it is against public policy to restrain marriage the Court of Appeals here has refused to affirm a decision of the lower court, setting aside a note for $3,000 given by the late Henry Van Riper, of Paterson, to Mrs. May Lowe.

Mrs. Lowe, who was Miss May Wood, testified that Mr. Van Riper gave her the note on the condition that she should care for him until his death and that she should not marry. The executor of the estate refused payment on the ground that Mrs. Lowe had broken the agreement by marrying.

Marriages by boys at 17 years of age were numerous. At the age of 18 marriage is by no means an exceptional condition, for 511 young men of 18 were married.

The youngest brides are aged 15. There were 539 married women of 16 years.

His Son in Class He Trains for Ministry

Rev. Caleb A. Ridley, pastor of Central Baptist Church, will preach Sunday night on "How to Become an Infidel," the first of a series of five Sunday evening sermons, on "Cool Subjects for Hot Weather." For five weeks Dr. Ridley has been speaking before packed houses and six additions to the church have been recorded.

Dr. Ridley has not confined his religious efforts to preaching, however. Recently he organized a Bible class in which instruction is given to several young men who have pledged themselves to become ministers of the gospel. Among the number is Dr. Ridley's own son, Jeter, who made up his mind to enter the ministry while his father was in St. Louis recently.

MOVIES ON SHIP AND TRAIN HIS PREDICTION

NEW YORK, June 22.—A. Neff, President of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, who has just arrived to make arrangements for the annual convention of the league, predicts historical libraries composed of moving picture films, and ocean steamers and long-distance trains equipped with motion picture shows. These, Mr. Neff prophecies, will be in existence within half a dozen years.

"Although our league was only organized September 12, 1910, we now have thirty-eight State leagues," said Mr. Neff. "The State of Maine will organize another one next Monday. There are no manufacturers in our league and none is connected with it. We are not an association of managers but of men who own theaters. A man cannot belong to the league unless he owns at least part of a theater. Of course, we co-operate with manufacturers, but we also co-operate with many humane societies. We are now running tuberculosis slides in aid of a campaign our Tuberculosis League in Cincinnati is waging.

U. S. Surpasses in Films.

"The motion picture business is the largest business in the world today. In the Unted States alone there are 17,000 moving picture shows, and these represent an outlay of anywhere from $1,000 to $150,000 apiece, while some are being built now that will go beyond the higher figure."

"Is it true that the best films nowadays are made abroad?" he was asked.

"No; America makes the best films in the world. It has all the other countries skinned to a finish. American manufacturers make from 85 to 90 per cent of the films used abroad. Several American manufacturers are establishing plants in other countries.

"So many new things are continually coming up in the moving picture business that you can hardly pick up a paper in the morning and not find some new development. The time is not far distant when every ocean passenger steamer will be equipped with a first-class picture show. That would be a paying investment. You have your audience right there on the boat and it can't get away. You could give the same show every night and the chances are you would gather in the whole crowd, because there would not be any rival attraction.

"Every long-distance train will have a car fitted up containing a motion picture show. I believe that every first-class railroad station in the country will sooner or later have a motion picture waiting room. It would be the best way in the world for persons who are waiting for trains to kill time. Instead of having megaphones roaring out announcements in different parts of a great station, these would be thrown on the moving picture curtain and everybody would read that a train was ten minutes late or that a train was coming in on track 24, and so on.

Great Aid to Press.

"The motion picture has come tremendously to the fore as a disseminator of news. It has become a tremendous auxiliary to the press, because people see with their own eyes portrayals of events that the papers have just told them had happened. I predict that within a very few years a great historical library of motion pictures will be founded. The historian who has been writing the histories of countries for centuries, after all, presents these histories from the standpoint of one man, who has gathered his information from other men. No two men who witness an automobile accident will describe that accident exactly alike, though both may be truthful. When you show by a moving picture how the accident happened, you have a record that cannot be questioned. How much would we give to-day for pictures showing Abraham Lincoln delivering his Gettysburg address or Grant receiving the surrender of Lee at Appomattox; or, to go back further, of Washington crossing the Delaware. Mere stories of those events cannot give the inspiration that moving pictures could. The public generally does not know that the moving picture man has planted the American flag in every city and town of the world where civilization exists, and that he has given people of all the countries of the wortd an opportunity to realize what this country over here is like. As an educator, especially with regard to teaching untraveled people about the United States, the moving picture has done incalculable service."

Christy Mathewson finally has awakened to the fact that the Phillies have a chance to win. This leads one to sus-

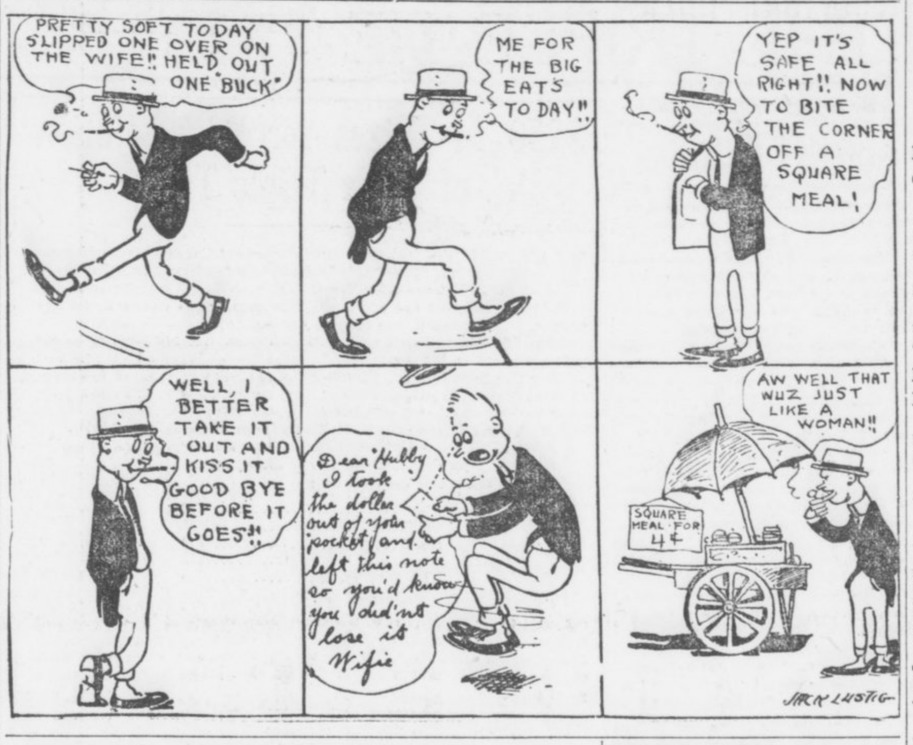
JUST LIKE A WOMAN



SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

by JAMES B. NEVIN

Four separate and distinct political headquarters are in full bloom in the Kimball House nowadays, and in each and every one optimism supposedly is running riot and more or less hot air is in vociferous evidence.

So far as claiming the earth and the fullness thereof is concerned, the innocent bystander at large in the Kimball lobby just now may pay his money and take his choice.

Everybody is going to be elected. Everybody rides, nobody walks. Good night, nurse!

"Bill" Burwell has the Speakership race sewed up in a crinoline sack, and gone. "Bill" says so himself, and so do his 236,798 ardent and rantankerous supporters.

That is to say, however, notwithstanding, but—"Bob" Hardeman says he doesn't know about that. Hardeman says he is some runner himself, even if he has permitted Burwell to do most of the running thus far. He says he will be there with the good from this time forward—says Old Dr. Hardeman, says he. The old Doctor says he has the "dope." Wherefore, he bids Bur-well be-warr-r-r-re!

John T. Allen is going to be elected President of the Senate. Ask him! He has checked the Senate up one side and down the other, cross ways and on the bias, and it's Allen, for a fareyouwell. He has somewhere between 28 and 39 votes to his credit, he forgets which, but it is more than sufficient.

It appears, however, that the new Senate is to have two Presidents, for J. Randolph Anderson is sure as fate that he is to be named President, too—and first, at that! He has 28 votes, signed, sealed and delivered—28, count 'em, 28. That's what he says, anyway. He expects to gather in seven or eleven more as time runs along—not that he needs them, but just for luck.

In the meantime the man who stands around the Kimball House lobby and doesn't believe half he sees and nothing he hears is having rather a hard time putting 2 and 3 together in such wise as to make the sum of 4. Somehow or other, 2 and 3 doesn't seem to make 4, and yet that's what the politicians are insisting upon—or some of them, at least.

Sporting gentlemen incline to view the situation about this way: Burwell to win, 3 to 1; Allen against Anderson, even money, and nothing doing around the board.

Shelby Myrick, one of the Representatives from Chatham County in the Legislature, will introduce a bill at the coming session to permit police officers when on duty, whether in uniform or not, to carry a concealed weapon. This law will be made State-wide in its application.

Myrick has had this measure in mind for some time. The experience of police officers at the Savannah polls recently, who narrowly escaped prosecution for carrying concealed weapons because they were armed while on duty in citizen's clothes about the court house, has made his determination in this direction more emphatic.

"Georgia is one of the few States in the Union," said Myrick, "that does not permit a police officer to go armed when on duty. I believe that an officer of the law should always be permitted to carry a gun when he is attending to his business as such officer.

"I do not anticipate any trouble in passing the proposed bill. I have recently had occasion to study the statutes of several States and have found that in practically all of them except Georgia this privilege is granted.

"I do not pretend to say that an officer when off duty should be allowed to carry a concealed weapon. But when they are on duty, either in uniform or out of it, they should have this means of protection at hand."

The Macon Telegraph has a straight tip that Dan Hughes, of Twiggs County, is to be named Assistant Commissioner of Agriculture under Commissioner James D. Price.

If Mr. Price has determined upon this appointment, it will be a most happy one, indeed. Dan Hughes is the son of Representative "Dud" Hughes, one of the most popular men in Georgia and one of the ablest members of the Georgia Congressional delegation.

The younger Mr. Hughes has the reputation of being one of the very best posted men in the State in the matter of the farming interests, and his recent contributions to "System" and other magazines along that line have attracted a great deal of attention throughouot the country. He is himself a successful farmer, and will lend efficiency and dignity to the Commissioner's office. He is a South Georgian, rather modest and is extremely well liked wherever he is known.

If The Telegraph tip is O. K., Mr. Price doubtless will find that he has made a popular and approved selection for the assistant's place.

Colonel J. Lindsay Johnson, of Rome, Washington and Shanghai, is in Atlanta's midst.

"How about that consulship, Colonel?" ventured one of the Roman's acquaintances in the Kimball lobby to-day.

"Well," said the Colonel, not at all disturbed, even sweetly, "I am not losing any over it, for I am going to get it—at least, I am pretty sure to. You know, they say lightning doesn't strike more places than it does strike, and so if I don't get swatted, I shall not set up a howl. However, it looks mighty like Johnson to me."

Most folks in Georgia are pulling for the Colonel and betting on him, too!

That General Joseph Van Holt Nash and Colonel Frederic J. Paxon will continue as Adjutant General and Chief of Staff, respectively, under Governor Slaton, are two semi-official rumors that will be very pleasing to many people throughout the State.

Both men are highly efficient and extremely popular among the military of Georgia.

Already a score or more members of the new Legislature are in Atlanta, quartered for the session.

Additions are coming in on every train, and it is figured that by Monday evening practically the entire membership of both the Senate and House will be in the Capital, ready for business.

Monday and Tuesday, the new Legislature will meet informally and without organization in the Kimball lobby, to get acquainted.

Wednesday it will be sworn in—and later along, as one promising member put it, it will be "cussed out."

Florida Woman Dies On Visit to Atlanta

Mrs. VanDeman has been visiting here for some time and was ill only a few days. Her death is attributed to heart disease.

Besides her husband, Mrs. VanDeman is survived by two daughters, Mrs. John L. Doggett of Jacksonville, and Mrs. H. W. Brown, of Atlanta; one son, Carl VanDeman, of Jacksonville; one sister, Mrs. Elizabeth DeCottes, and one brother, Frank P. Foster.

GEORGIAN TELLS OF ESCAPE IN SKY FALL

Lieutenant Towers First Man to Tumble Quarter of a Mile and Live.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—Lying on a cot in the Naval Academy Hospital at Annapolis, almost a complete nervous wreck, Lieutenant John A. Towers, of Rome, Ga., told the story of his 1,600-foot drop in an aeroplane which resulted in the death of Ensign William D. Billingsley. Towers' case is puzzling physicians, for while apparently but slightly internally injured, his nerves are shattered. He is the only man on record to tumble a quarter of a mile downward and live to tell the story.

Billingsley and Towers had attained an altitude of 1,625 feet in trying out a hydroplane. They had reached a spot about ten miles down Chesapeake Bay when a sudden gust of wind jerked the airship and threw Billingsley over the steering gear. Another jerk threw him from the machine. He shot downward in the waters of the bay.

Held Fast to Machine.

Towers was thrown from his seat, but held desperately to one of the uprights. Over and over the machine turned, but his grip never loosened. As the hydroplane struck the water he was thrown free of the wreckage and rose rapidly to the surface. He was rescued by parties in a motor boat.

"Oh, it was horrible to see poor Billy shooting downward," he moaned. "We were sailing nicely when a sudden gust of wind threw him out of his seat, while another jerk sent him completely away from it. There was no chance to help him, it all happened so quickly. The only thing that saved me was the fact that I had a tight grip on one of the uprights, and when the plane jerked I locked my grip.

"We shot downward at a terrific rate, but poor Billy was toppling over and over and going downward even faster than we were. It made me sick to see him and know that he was going to his death, and I almost lost my grip. Before we had gone half the distance to the water, the ship turned completely over and braced itself for a moment, only to shoot downward at a greater pace. All I remember of striking the water was a terrific crash, of finding myself struggling to get to the surface. It seemed a year before I shot out above the surface, and the gasp of breath I took seemed as if it would tear me to pieces.

Towers' Home in Rome.

"I suffered a thousand agonies and feared I would drown."

Towers was ashen after his terrifying experience. All indications are that he is but slightly injured physically, but it probably will be several days before his mental faculties resume their normal state. He is the son of Mrs. Mary N. Towers, 10 Seventh Avenue, Rome, Ga. He entered the academy at Annapolis in 1902. In 1911 he was assigned to the aviation corps. He has taken part in many notable aviation meets. Billingsley was from Mississippi.

LITTLE STORIES of the TOWN

Price of Eggs on the Subject.

They were eating at a table d' hote and had come to the course before the last. One of them demurred at the portion of chicken served him.

"They might," said he, "give one a little better portion."

"Oh, I don't know," replied his friend, "what can you expect, considering the present price of eggs?"

Look in the Hat Brought Money.

To the paying teller's window of the bank came a man asking payment on a check.

"Have you got anybody to identify you?" demanded the clerk.

The man was stumped.

"Let me see the inside of your hat," demanded the clerk.

The man obeyed and the next moment found his money coming at him through the grated window. As he said afterward, the strangest part of it all was that he was wearing his brother's hat, though there were no betraying initials in it.

The Latest "Rag" As She Sung It.

Muffled strains of syncopated music came from under a counter in a store and reached the ears of the floor walker. He crept closer and listened. Presently a fluffy head popped up.

"That's a catchy little tune, isn't it?" he asked graciously.

"But you should hear the words," she returned, and she recited the following:

They fool and fool and fool around,
They fuss and fret and fume around,
But nary a cent they spend.

"It's no good without a name," he suggested.

"We have a name, all right. The girls at the bargain counter call it the 'Department Store Rag.'"

Man and Sister on Motorcycle Hurt in Peachtree Accident

M. I. Seals and sister, Miss Bertha Seals, 460 Capitol Avenue, were painfully injured Friday night when, to escape collision with a street car, Mr. Seals turned the motorcycle they were riding into an obstruction at Peachtree and Sixth Streets. They were rushed to Grady Hospital and later taken to their home. The motorcycle was badly damaged.

Seals and his sister were riding "tandem." A trolley car and an automobile hemmed the machine, forcing Mr. Seals to swerve his motorcycle across the curbing to the sidewalk. Both riders were thrown several feet into the air.

Stella Mayhew Is Made a Fire Chief

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., June 22.—Miss Stella Mayhew, the actress, wife of Billie Taylor, is probably the only woman fire chief in the world.

She was presented with a solid gold chief's badge with the inscription, "Miss Stella Mayhew, third assistant chief, fire department, New Rochelle, N. Y.," by Fire Commissioner George W. Floyd, of New Rochelle at a garden party at her home.

PROBE RESENTED BY JUDGE SPEER

Federal Jurist Believes Department of Justice Is Exceeding Constitutional Authority.

MACON, June 22.—Judge Emory Speer thinks that the probe now being made into his judicial record is unconstitutional and is an improper procedure on the part of the Department of Justice. In discussing the investigation with Ben Persons and J. H. Walker, of Eastman, and other attorneys in the United States Court room, Judge Speer declared that he was being shadowed by detectives; that his home was watched, his every movement was followed, his office was under constant observation, his visitors were scrutinized, and, for all he knew, everything that he said was heard by the ears of secret service men.

"I am not even given the courtesy that is shown a common negro who steals a ham," he declared.

The Judge said that he had been asked for no statement, and that the investigation was instituted without the matter having been taken up with him.

Judge Speer further declared that if it should become the practice to have Federal judges investigated and probed at will by secret service men and Department of Justice agents the status of the judiciary would be seriously impaired, since the judges would be almost under the thumb of the department or a man in Washington.

MELBA TO APPEAR IN ENGLISH OPERA

Hammerstein Secures the Noted Songbird and Also Engages Baroni as Conductor.

PARIS, June 22.—Arthur Hammerstein announces the engagement of Giuseppe Baroni as musical conductor for his father's coming season of grand opera in New York. Baroni as a conductor ranks with Toscanini and will receive the same salary, $1,500 a week. He conducted the open air performance of "Aida" at the pyramids at Cairo.

Mr. Hammerstein also announces that Mme. Melba has promised to make some appearances. Emma Eames refused an engagement as she is especially opposed to singing opera in English. Emilio de Gogorza has also declined an offer or an engagement.

Mr. Hammerstein's plans include the production of opera once a week in English for the first season. It will be impossible to do more than this for some time. "Salome," "Louise," "Aida," and one of Wagner's operas will be given in English.

Banker Robin 'Free' While Serving Term

NEW YORK, June 22.—Joseph G. Robin, Northern Bank wrecker, legally serving out a year's sentence on Blackwell's Island, walked out of the Tombs this morning and sauntered through City Hall Park to the office of his lawyer, Robert D. Ireland.

There he worked among his papers connected with the Northern bank. He eats in a restaurant.

Robin has followed this routine four months. He always leaves prison on a writ of habeas corpus issued by Judge Holt placing him in the hands of William H. Willis, referee in bankruptcy.

French Birth Rate Saddens Bertillon

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, June 22.—The vital statistics for 1912 report 760,650 births in France as compared with 742,114 for the year 1911.

Dr. Jacques Bertillon says that the two years, 1911 and 1912, have established the worst record in many years, "clearly demonstrating the persistence of the evil which is driving France to ruin."

USED-PIANO SALE

June 30th closes our 47th year in business in Atlanta and it is only fitting that we should commemorate the anniversary in some way, so why not offer the public a large saving in the way of a quick, economical sale

NOW

Our position is a little unique in Georgia. Owing to the fact of our having exclusive agencies of the most celebrated Pianos and Pianolas in the world, many families of modest means get the notion that we do not carry in stock lower price goods, when, in fact, we make a specialty of good pianos at modest prices. Another thing, we are constantly receiving in exchange, pianos of all grades and makes, many of them in excellent condition. These instruments go through our factory department, and when put on our floors for sale they are marked at bargain prices.

Lately we have been receiving a lot of upright Pianos of various makes in exchange for Steinway and Knabe Pianos and for Pianola-Pianos. These Pianos, as well as the ones returned from rental, we have decided to offer at almost unbelievable prices. They are in our way, our 5th floor is crowded with them, and we had rather sell them now at bargain prices than hold them.

We mention a few below, we have many others. Pianos shipped to any part of the State. Pianos bought now may at any time be exchanged.

Old Fogyisms of To-day

By DOROTHY DIX.

ONE of the most interesting plays of the past season was Arnold Bennett's "Milestones." The theory of the drama was growth. It showed how the advanced thought of one day is the conservatism of the next and the old fogyism of the day after.

In the play the hero breaks with his business partner because he wants to build iron ships instead of wooden ships. "You'll be ruined if you do," says the standpatter; "iron ships will never float. You might as well build stone ships."

The progressive man goes on and builds iron ships and makes a fortune, but at middle life his partner wants to build steel ships. "Never," cries the old man, with his conservative old ideas, "iron ships are all right, but steel ships will never float." The young man builds his steel ships, that give us our Mauretanias, and then, when he has grown old, comes a young man talking of building airships, and he cries out, as the other two old men have done about the iron ships and the steel ships, "that airships will never be practicable."

This play, "Milestones," is the biggest suffrage play ever written, and offers the best suffrage argument.

Go back three generations. The question of whether a woman should be given an education then was just as burning a one as the question of whether she should be given a right to vote is now. And precisely the same arguments were brought against it as are brought against woman suffrage now.

An Old Belief.

In our great-grandmothers' time it was contended that it would unsex a woman to teach her geography, and make her bold and unwomanly and kill her sweet feminine charm for her to receive an education. Also that only a few blue stockings among women wanted an education. Therefore, it was foolish and wrong to open college doors to the feminine sex.

Well, by dint of a heroic fight by a few women for all women, the privileges of education were extended to girls, and the learning that our forefathers so feared would unsex and demoralize women has brought about none of the calamities they foretold. Women are still women. They are still sought in marriage, and so far from only a few caring for an education, the girls outnumber the boys in high schools. Education has not unfitted women to be good mothers. It makes them better ones.

Look back at the time when education was thought to endanger women, and you will laugh as you did at the man who was so sure that an iron ship couldn't be made to float.

The next milestone that we have passed is the one that marked the place where women began to go into gainful occupations. In our grandmothers' day the only way a woman had to make a good living was to marry it. By and by a few bold and heroic women rebelled at this state of affairs and demanded a right to go into any kind of business that they were fitted for. The whole conventional world raised one grand howl of protest.

A woman's place is in the home, it cried, whether she's got a home or not, or anything to eat in it or not. If she goes out into the world to work she will become unsexed. She will become coarse and vulgar, and wear short hair and trousers, and smoke and swear, and men won't marry her, and everything will go to the bow-wows.

There are eight million wage earning women in the United States, and if there are any unsexed among them the Eden Musee has failed to get them. So far from the working girl having her love of dress eliminated, the trouble with her is that she's too much given to frills. Also, instead of being opposed to marriage she gets married just when she's most valuable to her employer. The finest woman in the world to-day is the wide-awake, competent business girl, ampiy able to stand on her own feet, and earn what she needs. She is the prop of her family, and a blessing to society.

It's as absurd to think that people were ever afraid to give women the right to earn an honest living as it is to think that they ever prophesied that you couldn't make a steel ship that would float.

The third milestone that we have passed is the property milestone. Up to our mother's day when a woman married every cent she had passed into her husband's exclusive possession. This was true although the man might be a gambler and a spendthrift, swamped to his chin in debts of which the woman knew nothing, or whether he was a good fellow of the shiftless sort between whose fingers money leaks as water through a sieve.

When it was first proposed to pass property laws securing a woman's money to herself it was fought tooth and nail—even by many women. People said it would break up the home, and produce endless friction between husbands and wives. Women cried out that if they could trust themselves to their husbands they could trust their money. It was contended that for a woman to own her own money would make her bossy and insulting to her husband.

They Worked Well.

Nevertheless some property laws, not adequate ones yet, have been passed, and it has been found out that they worked out for the general good. The right sort of man didn't want to hold up his wife and rob her of her property and the woman who is married to the wrong sort finds out that it is, at least, some consolation to have a roof over her head when her dream of love is broken.

Nobody would now argue that a woman hasn't a right to her own property or to the money she earns, any more than they would contend that we should go back to the old days of the wooden sailing ships.

And now we have come to the last milestone in the march of human progress. It is the demand that women who own property and pay taxes, who form one-half of the population, who are amenable to the law, should stand before that law on an equal platform with men.

Those who object say that for women to vote will unsex them, that it will take away their feminine charm, that men won't want to marry them, that it will break up the home, that not all women want to vote, just as they said these things about educating women, or about women being given a chance to make an honest living, and about women being permitted to control their own property.

Not one single evil prophecy founded on women's advancement has been fulfilled. May we not confidently believe that we may give woman the ballot not only without danger, but that their help is needed in politics just as much as it is needed in the home and the business world? Why should we not then pass this last milestone, too, and set our faces toward the onward journey?

A bow of velvet of the same tone hides the lower end of the paradise.

The other picture shows an afternoon gown of white supple moire. The bodice is a kimono crossed with a small decollete in the V shape, with small plastron of embroidered linen. A shawl collar achieves the yoke. The sleeves are of three-quarter length, with small revers trimmed with three small buttons of the same material, a point going up over the middle front of the bodice.

The underskirt is straight and buttoned on the front with buttons of the material.

Too Much for the Chimney

WHEN Grandfather Lickshingle heard it read from a newspaper that Peter Ripley had a lamp chimney which his family had used for thirteen years, he rapped savagely on the floor with his walking stick and said:

"Now, what the dickens is the use of putting such reading in the newspaper? If they want some information about lamp chimneys, let them come to me and get it. When me and your grandmother broke up housekeeping we had a lamp chimney. But it wasn't made in these 'ere shoddy times. I paid a penny for it the day we were married. That was away back somewhere in the last century. We used it night and day for 79 years and eight——"

"Why, grandpa, you didn't have to use it in the daytime, did you?"

"Didn't have to—no. But we did. Used it at night on the lamp, and in the daytime we used it to drive nails with. Sometimes the children cracked nuts with it, and the road surveyor borrowed it several times to pound stones on the streets. One day I thought they had lost it. The workmen had left it on the road, and the street cars ran over it seventeen times before it was found. This lamp chimney had been in a railway collision, 22 lamps had exploded under it during its time, a horse kicked it clean through the side of the stable, and the chimney came out of it all without as much as a crack, but the horse had to be sent to the hospital. However, it's broke now," said grandfather, with a deep sigs.

"Then you were foolish enough to let the servant clean it, were you?" asked mother.

"No, but we might as well. When we gave up keeping house I gave it to a friend. He was hard of hearing, and he wanted it for an ear trumpet. One day a man tried to tell him why he ought to be President, and that he was the only real man for the job, and, by cracky, he burst the chimney into a million pieces."

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

In the amiable way of villagers, they were discussing the matrimonial affairs of a couple who, though recently wed, had begun to find the yoke of Hymen a burden.

"'Tis all along o' them hasty marriages," opined one caustic old gentleman, who had been much to the fore in the discussion. "They did not understand each other. They'd nobut knowed each other for a matter of seven year."

"Well, that seems long enough," said a listener.

"Long eno'? Bah! Ye're wrong. When a body's courting, he canna be too careful. Why, my courtship with Mary lasted a matter of nineteen years."

"You were certainly careful," agreed the listener; "and did you find your plan successful when you married?"

"Ye jump to conclusions hastily," said the old man. "I understood her then, so I didna marry her!"

A sad-looking man went into a chemist's. "Can you give me," he asked, "something that will drive from my mind the thought of sorrow and bitter recollection?"

Then the chemist nodded, and put him up a little dose of quinine and wormwood and rhubarb and Epsom salts and a dash of castor oil, and gave it to him, and for six months the man could not think of anything in the world except new schemes for getting the taste out of his mouth.

The portly lady had accidentally taken a rear seat in a car reserved for smokers. With unconcealed indignation she watched the man beside her fill his pipe.

"Do it now, ma'am!" said the man, as he carefully lighted up; "then take my advice an' stop it!"

Corporal (to soldiers)—"Why is the blade of the saber curved instead of straight?"

Soldier—"It is curved in order to give more force to the blow."

Corporal—"Humbug! The saber is curved so as to fit the scabbard. If it was straight, how would you get it into the crooked scabbard, blockhead?"

Blink (the wholesaler)—"Well, how many orders did you get yesterday?"

Gink (the salesman)—"I got two orders in one shop."

Blink—"What were they?"

Gink—"One was to get out and the other was to stay out."

"Have you a spare cigar about you, old chap?"

"Certainly. But I thought you were going to stop smoking?"

"I am, but not too abruptly. I've already stopped smoking my own cigars."

A factory in Grenoble, France, utilizes the water of a reservoir situated in the mountains at a height of 200 yards. The water reaches the factory through a vertical tube of the same length, with a diameter of considerably less than an inch, the jet being used to move a turbine. Experiments have shown that the strongest men can not cut the jet with the best tempered sword, and in some instances the blade has been broken into fragments without deflecting a drop of the water and with as much violence as a pane of glass may be shattered by a blow from an iron bar. It has been calculated that a jet of water a small fraction of an inch in thickness, moving with sufficient velocity, could not be cut by a rifle bullet.

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

From where Gordon stood the wild windstorm seemed to be rushing directly toward him with twice the speed of the fastest express train, cutting a path five hundred feet wide. Even as he looked the tornado, with a rush and a roar, swept up between the mansion and the huge granite rock in the valley. Gordon dashed for the brook to seek some sheltering bank, but ere he could reach it the cyclone was upon him, or at least the edge of it, and he was picked up as though he was a chip of wood, carried forty feet in the air and hurled to the opposite side of the brook, where he lay stunned.

When Gordon came to his senses he found himself surrounded by four rough looking men, dressed in the garb of the mountaineer. They assisted him to his feet and he worked his arms, legs and body to ascertain if there were any bones broken. Finding himself apparently sound, he smiled.

"I never rode on the wings of a cyclone before," he said, "and I don't believe I ever want to try it again."

None of the men he addressed made direct reply to this cheerful remark. They stood close to him and eyed him critically. Finally one of them, a black-bearded man, said:

"I reckon you're Gordon Kelly."

"I am," replied Gordon, surprised that the stranger should know that name.

Gordon a Prisoner.

As if this answer were a signal for attack, the four men closed in on him. One of them had a rope and he attempted to pinion Gordon's arms. Though taken completely by surprise, Gordon put up a desperate struggle, but was quickly overpowered by the four men, all of whom seemed possessed of uncommon strength. His arms were tied behind his back and he was commanded to walk forward.

"What's the meaning of this?" demanded the prisoner.

The man with the black beard answered.

"I reckon nothin' ain't goin' to harm yer, if yer obey orders. If yer don't we'll make yer. Come along."

But Gordon refused to move. He said in a calm voice.

"Just tell me what this all about, will you, please? You've made a mistake. I have done nothing to you. You've got the wrong man."

"You ain't done nothin' to us, but you're the man we want. Come along, now." The black-bearded man drew a six-shooter from his pocket and grasped the weapon by the barrel. "I don't want to hit yer with this yere pistol, but I reckon I'll have to unless yer do what I tell yer."

Gordon saw that all four men were armed, though the black-bearded man was the only one to make a display. Resistence was useless and might bring him needless injury, so without further words he walked ahead in the direction indicated feeling that in a short time the whole thing would be explained and he would be allowed to go free. His captors followed the brook for nearly a mile and then turned off toward the northwest. They crossed the path of the cyclone, which had long since passed in its fury, leaving destruction in its wake, and continued on through thick forests and over rough and wild mountain country. Gordon tried to secure some information from the men, but they did not reply to his questions.

A Long Walk.

Finally, after walking northwesterly for about three miles, Gordon judged, they came to Pew Creek, the stream that flowed past the settlement bearing the same name nearly fourteen miles to the south of where they were. The prisoner knew the country well, especially the land bordering the creek. He knew not where his captors were taking him, but at least he was familiar with the ground. The bearded man, leading the way—he seemed to be the leader of the four—followed the creek for another mile until he struck the main road. Before reaching the road, however, the party stopped, while one of the men went ahead as a scout, evidently to make sure the road was clear. He waved a signal to advance and the others did so, crossing a bridge where the creek met the road and then plunging due west through another forest. They were getting on higher ground all the time and finally came to a clearing. Then, making a sharp ascent of about one hundred yards, they descended rapidly for another hundred yards and came to a small clump of trees, with underbrush growing high all around it. Walking straight ahead, the bearded man parted the underbrush and with Gordon following close, they passed through it and arrived at a log cabin, evidently of recent construction.

By this time it was almost dark. One of the men stepped inside the cabin and lighted two or three tallow candles, after which he set about preparing the evening meal. When the candles were glowing, the bearded man motioned Gordon to enter, which he did, the others following. Gordon glanced around. There were five rough banks, with a straw on them for bedding. There was no stove, but there was a fireplace in a corner, with a small chimney leading up from it, built of sticks of wood plastered with clay. The only article of furniture in the room was a rude bench. The bearded man then spoke the first words he had uttered since the march began. He said to Gordon:

"Yer won't be hurted none unless yer try to escape. Then we'll shoot." He untied the rope that bound Gordon's arms, one of the other men standing by with a revolver in his hand, and added: 'Maybe yer better git in one of them bunks till grub is ready.'"

Thoughts Busy.

Gordon rubbed the circulation back in his arms and then lay down. He had long since made up his mind to treat the situation good-naturedly, feeling that more could be accomplished that way than being nasty about it. He resolved to trust to cheerfulness and diplomacy in his intercourse with these men. He had not yet been able to figure out what their object was in making him a captive. Perhaps they would demand a ransom for his release. He could not satisfy himself how they knew his name, either. The thought flashed across him that Galen Deery had something to do with the matter. Perhaps the Atlanta capitalist had learned of his companionship with Mildred. It was possible that Shephard, his superintendent, had informed him. He recalled what Mildred had told him about her father's vast project and he tried to connect it with his present predicament.

While his thoughts were busy, the fire under the pots and pans was busy, too. Three of his captors began eating at once, while the fourth stood guard over Gordon with a six-shooter in his hand. Evidently they had planned the whole thing out in advance, as they had not spoken to each other since entering the cabin.

After eating a hearty meal of bacon, corn cakes, stewed beans and crackers, Gordon stretched himself, smiled and announced that he felt better. He thought the other men probably felt in better humor, too, so he tried to start a little conversation.

"Do you men expect to keep me here or will there be some more walking?" he asked, with a good-natured smile.

The black-bearded man nodded. "Right yere, I reckon," he replied, after some deliberation.

Allowed to Write.

There was no answer to this remark. Three of the men had lighted pipes. The fourth, who seemed to be somewhat younger than the others, had been relieved of guard duty and was now eating his supper. When he had finished he drew a bag of tobacco and some tissue paper from a pocket and rolled a cigarette. There was silence for a long time and then Gordon began again.

"I don't mind spending a little time with you men, as you appear to be willing to treat me fairly. I suppose you will tell me what this is all about when you get ready to do so. You won't find me troublesome. But I have a favor to ask of you. The people at my home and the people at Deery's house below will be very much worried about me. They may think I was killed in the cyclone. What I want you to do is to get word to them somehow that I am safe; or, if you will allow it, I will write a note that one of you can leave on the doorstep at night. Of course you can read the note before it is sent. What do you say?"

Three of the men looked at the man with the black beard as if expecting him to do all the necessary talking. He smoked in silence for several minutes. Then he spat and said:

"I reckon you all kin write."

CHAPTER XXXVII.

GORDON had a pencil, but no paper. However he discovered a small paper bag, which he slit down the sides with his knife, making of it a long, narrow sheet. Then, with the bottom of a tin plate for a desk, he very slowly wrote the following remarkable letter in a large hand:

Friend Mildred:
I write to tell you I am
Very well and for you and
Elmer and also your
Mother not to worry as
I am being well treated.
Lonely, of course, it is,
Especially as I can not
See my friends; but
No matter; I will keep
On being cheerful and the
Rest will come out right in
The end. I wish you would
Have someone to go
With you to my home (take
Elmer) and please notify
Steve and all the others
That none of them
Must look for me
Yet. I will soon
Have, I expect, another
Opportunity to write
More. You may possibly
Expect it soon.
Love to all.

G. K.

When Mildred received these lines (which she did the following morning) she must have thought it a queer letter to get from the man she was so worried about. It was not a love letter, nor did it seem to say much of anything in any definite degree. Yet Gordon had deliberately written it that way, trusting to the girl's ingenuity to decipher the hidden meaning. As a matter of fact, the meaning was so little hidden that Gordon, as he wrote it, had doubts as to whether it would pass muster.

The Message Sent.

Gordon folded the sheet of paper twice, addressed it on the back to Miss Mildred Deery and handed it to the black-bearded man, who read it slowly; so slowly, in fact, that Gordon feared he had discovered the simple cryptogram. But at last the mountaineer nodded and placed the letter in his pocket, whereat Gordon breathed with relief. Later in the evening the letter was given to the youngest of the four who, after receiving instructions from the bearded man, given in too low a tone for Gordon to distinguish the words, saddled a horse that was tethered nearby, mounted him and rode off in the darkness.

From the moment the rope that bound Gordon's arms had been removed, one of the four men had remained within ten feet of the captive, with a revolver in his hand. Every action of the mountaineers indicated that they meant business and Gordon had long since made up his mind that he would not attempt to escape that night. At intervals he endeavored to draw his captors into conversation, but without success. They were not sullen, or gloomy, or sulky; they simply refused to talk, so at last Gordon requested that he might be allowed to retire for the night.

No Secret About Woman's Beauty

The flashing eye, the elastic step and the brilliant complexion are never companions of organic troubles; but it is the distressed expression, aches and pains, faintness, dizziness, that bearing down feeling, and the blues that are the tell-tale symptoms. If such women would only remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound overcomes such distressing symptoms, womanly beauty would be no longer a secret.

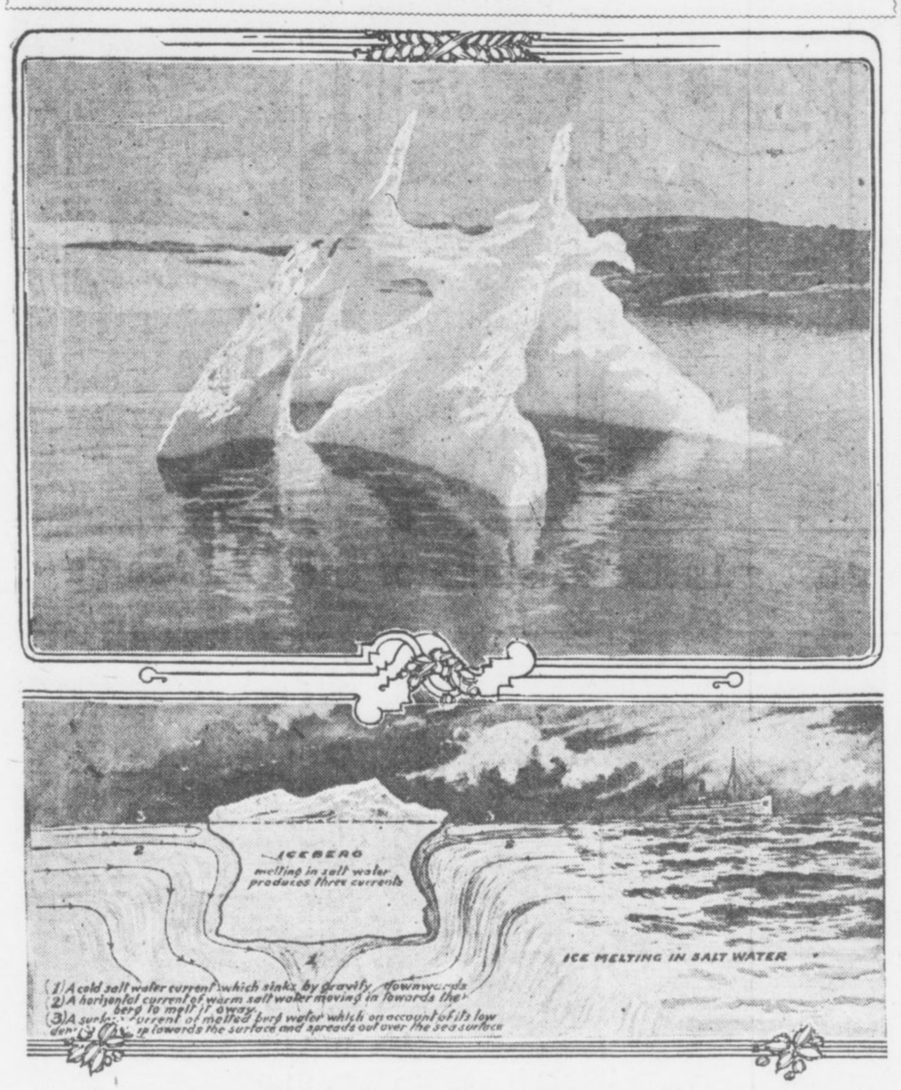
.:. A Device That Traps Icebergs .:.

An Atlantic Liner Can Now Be Provided With Mechanical Senses as Sensative as the Nostrils of a Deer



The top picture is a photograph of a melting iceberg. Underneath is a diagram showing the various currents produced by an iceberg that is slowly dissolving. It is these currents that are "felt" by the micro-thermometer, one of the latest wonderful achievements of science.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

SINCE the sinking of the Titanic, a year ago, icebergs have been studied as never before, and a great amount of curious knowledge about these frozen monsters of the deep has been accumulated, with the result of increasing the safety of ocean navigation.

Just as a living being proclaims its presence, even when it can not be seen, by telltale sounds and vibrations and by emanations which are perceptible at surprising distances to olfactory senses as delicate as those possessed by some of the lower animals, so icebergs betray themselves, in the darkness of the night, or the far more dangerous obscurity of a fog, by their effect upon the temperature of the air and the water.

A remarkable mechanical sense-organ, called the micro-thermometer, which is simply a thermometer of great delicacy and special construction, dragged through the water by a ship, is now employed to measure the changing temperatures of the water in the vicinity of icebergs, and some unexpected facts have been developed by its use.

A great steamship provided with micro-thermometers lowered into the water is like a hunted deer sniffing the air with its sensitive nostrils and detecting its enemies afar off.

How It Works.

These instruments reveal facts previously unknown about icebergs. They show that there is a surprising system of currents around and under a great berg, or a fleet of bergs, which produce characteristic temperature changes that may be felt miles away. In truth, the iceberg is a great thermal engine surrounded by a medium of air and water peculiar to itself, and due to its action upon its environment. Upon the air immediately around it the berg produces a cooling effect in consequence of the absorption of heat required to melt it. When water freezes, it gives out heat; when it melts, it absorbs heat. One perilous consequence often is that the moisture in the cooled air around the berg condenses into concealing fogs and mists.

But the effects of the berg upon the underlying and surrounding water are still more remarkable and important. It has been found (as illustrated in the picture of a melting iceberg) that there are three characteristic currents produced in the ocean water by a great berg when it arrives in the comparatively warm water lying along the steamship tracks of the North Atlantic.

In the first place, directly under the vast ice mass there is a great current of cooled salt water, which sinks by its own gravity, because the cold increases its relative density.

In the next place the suction produced by the sinking cold water draws in from all sides warmer surface currents, which eat into the sides of the berg by their melting action, and finally so much reduce the size of the berg beneath the surface, or so change its shape, and its center of gravity, that, at last, the equilibrium of the mass is upset, and it turns over, thrashing the surrounding sea with its immense flanks, huge fragments of which, heavy enough to sink a ship, are detached, and go floating away to form an attendant fleet of small bergs and floes.

Then there is a third current composed of relatively fresh water, formed by the melting of the berg, and which, because of its lesser specific gravity, moves upward from around the berg and flows as a comparatively warm current over the surface of the sea. This current is of the greatest importance in betraying the presence of a berg, for it spreads to a considerable distance and can easily be detected by the micro-thermometer. The warm current has been detected a mile from a berg.

The Real Effect.

In regard to this a recent report of the Canadian Government on iceberg phenomena says: "There is little room to doubt that the real iceberg effect is the rise of temperature, and that the fall (observed when a ship passes abeam of the berg) is due to the colder current in which the berg is being carried."

In some experimental trips when icebergs were passed at a distance of from a half to a quarter of a mile there was observed first a rise of temperature in the water, followed by a fall as the berg was passed abeam.

Similar experiments with the micro-thermometer have shown that the near neighborhood of land is betrayed by a fall of water temperature, and this is believed to be due to the action of the tides and the obstruction offered by the coast line, resulting in a turning up of the under water, which is always much colder than the sea surface.

.:. .:. At the Table .:. .:.

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED

THAT common meeting-ground of the family, the dinner table, should be made a place where harmony reigns and where each one brings his or her best to contribute to the pleasure of the moment. Cheerful talk is as necessary to health and appetite as it is to peace and pleasure of mind. Unpleasant subjects should be avoided resolutely. Such topics as bad news, illnesses, grewsome incidents shocking accidents, troublesome business affairs should not be brought to the table; nor should disagreeable family matters be discussed there. These family affairs may require settlement, but may be talked of elsewhere.

If it is a family principle to be agreeable and talkative at table, there will be greater ease when guests are present.

A woman's duty is to be composed and cheerful at her table, whether at family meals or when there are guests. Her serenity, or the lack of it, influences others. When acting in the capacity of hostess she needs an absolutely placid temper. Self-control must be her watchword. If she appears to be disturbed, worried, absent-minded, if her eyes wander, or she seems distracted in conversation, every one will be uneasy, and the dinner will be dull and dragging. Her duty is not to let her guests know of her moods, disappointments or even of a headache.

If service is slow, or mistakes happen, it is best for a hostess not to offer explanations. No matter what may go wrong, she must appear not to notice it. By passing over a mistake or an imperfection herself it will escape the attention of others, or, at least, will not be regarded as important by them. If a serious accident occurs to precious china or rare glass she must maintain a calm manner. If a careless servant lets something drip on a guest's dress, a hostess must express regret and try to remedy the blunder and then pass on, without too much delay, to other matters. A guest should try to appear undisturbed by any accident of the sort.

If a guest should be so unlucky as to overturn a glass or have any other accident, it is best not to make profuse apologies. Regret may be shown by one's manner. Thus there is less interruption to conversation and to the smooth running of the dinner. By practice a young hostess may acquire facility in being able to talk naturally while at the same time seeing that people are served properly. If an order has to be given it should be done quietly and simply, without any mysterious signals or loud whisperings. A hostess should try not to make her servant nervous by watching her too much as she moves round the table.

Didn't Want Him.

Mike Hennesey, a hefty young Irishman, secured his first foremanship after serving for some years as one of the "gang." Promptly at 7 o'clock in the morning he began his duties by calling the gang to order.

"Ye all have to worruk for me!" he shouted. "Worruk, I say! And I want every wan of yez to understand at wance that I kin lick anny man in the gang!"

All swallowed the insult except one giant-built warrior, who stepped forward and said:

"But you can't lick me, Mike Hennesey!"

"Oh, I can't, can't I? yelled Mike.

"No, you can't," came back the determined answer.

"Well, thin, go to the office and draw your money. I'll have no man in the gang I can't lick!"

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"My husband shot a burglar," she said, languidly. And then her insolence reached its culmination in a query of her own: "Was his name Griggs?" It was done with splendid art, with a splendid mastery of her own emotions, for, even as she spoke the words, she was remembering those shuddering seconds when she had stood, only a few hours ago, gazing down at the inert bulk that had been a man.

Burke betook himself to another form of attack.

"Oh, you know better than that," he declared, truculently. "You see, we've traced the Maxim silencer. Garson himself bought it up in Hartford."

"But he told me——" she began, then became aware of her indiscretion, and checked herself.

Burke seized on her lapse with avidity.

"What did he tell you?" he questioned, eagerly.

Now, Mary had regained her self-command, and she spoke calmly.

"He told me," she said, without a particle of hesitation, "that he had never seen one. Surely, if he had had anything of the sort, he would have shown it to me then."

"Probably he did, too!" Burke rejoined, without the least suspicion that his surly utterance touched the truth exactly. "Now, see here," he went on, trying to make his voice affable, though with small success, for he was excessively irritated, "I can make it a lot easier for you if you'll talk. Come on, now! Who killed Griggs?"

Mary Stood Rebellious.

"That's for you to find out," she said, sneering.

Burke pressed the button on the desk, and, when the doorman appeared, ordered that the prisoner be returned to her cell.

"I suppose," she said, with a glance of contempt toward Demarest, "that it's useless for me to claim my constitutional rights, and demand to see a lawyer?"

Burke, too, had cast off pretense at last.

Mary spoke to the District Attorney.

"I believe," she said, with a new dignity of bearing, "that such is my constitutional right, is it not, Mr. Demarest?"

The lawyer sought no evasion of the issue. For that matter, he was coming to have an increasing respect, even admiration, for this young woman, who endured insult and ignominy with a spirit so sturdy, and met stratagem with other stratagem better devised. So, now, he made his answer with frank honesty.

Mary turned her clear eyes on the Inspector, and awaited from that official a reply that was not forthcoming. Truth to tell, Burke was far from comfortable under that survey.

"Well, Inspector?" she inquired, at last.

"We've Got Gargon."

Burke took refuge, as his wont was when too hard pressed, in a mighty bellow.

"The constitution don't go here!" It was the best he could do, and it shamed him, for he knew its weakness. Again, wrath surged in him, and it surged high. He welcomed the advent of Cassidy, who came hurrying in with a grin of satisfaction on his stolid face.

"Say, Chief," the detective said with animmation, in response to Burke's glance of inquiry, "we've got Garson."

Mary's face fell, though the change of expression was almost imperceptible. Only Demarest, a student of much experience, observed the fleeting display of repressed emotion. When the Inspector took thought to look at her, she was as impassive as before. Yet, he was minded to try another ruse in his desire to defeat the intelligence of this woman. To this end, he asked Gilder and the District Attorney to withdraw, while he should have a private conversation with the prisoner. As she listened to his request, Mary smiled again in Sphinx-like fashion, and there was still on her lips an expression that caused the official a pang of doubt, when, at last, the two were left alone together, and he darted a surreptitious glance toward her. Nevertheless, he pressed on his device valiantly.

"Now," he said, with a marked softening of manner, "I'm going to be your friend."

"Are you?" Mary's tone was noncommittal.

"Yes," Burke declared, heartily. "And I mean it! Give up the truth about young Gilder. I know he shot Griggs, of course. But I'm not taking any stock in that burglar story—not a little bit. No court would, either. What was really back of the killing?" Burke's eyes narrowed cunningly. "Was he jealous of Griggs? Well, that's what he might do then. He's always been a worthless young cuss. A rotten deal like this would be about his gait. I guess. * * * Tell me, now, why did he shoot Eddie Griggs?"

All Poise Had Fled.

There was coarseness a-plenty in the Inspector's pretense, but it possessed a solitary fundamental virtue; it played on the heart of the woman whom he questioned, aroused it to wrath in defense of her mate. In a second, all poise fled from this girl whose soul was blossoming in the blest realization that a man loved her purely, unselfishly. Her words came stumblingly in their haste. Her eyes were near to black in their anger.

"He didn't kill him! He didn't kill him!" she fairly hissed. "Why, he's the most wonderful man in the world. You sha'n't hurt him! Nobody shall hurt him! I'll fight to the end of my life for Dick Gilder!"

Burke was beaming joyously. At last—a long last!—his finesse had won the victory over this woman's subtleties.

"Well, that's just what I thought," he said, with smug content. "An' now, then, who did shoot Griggs? We've got every one of the gang. They're all crooks. See here," he went on, with a sudden change to the respectful in his manner, "why don't you start fresh? I'll give you every chance in the world. I'm dead on the level with you this time."

But he was too late. By now, Mary had herself well in hand again, vastly ashamed of the short period of self-betrayal caused by the official's artifice against her heart. As she listened to the Inspector's assurances, the mocking expression of her face was not encouraging to that astute individual, but he persevered manfully.

"Just you wait," he went on cheerfully, "and I'll prove to you that I'm on the level about this, that I'm really your friend. * * * There was a letter came for you to your apartment. My men brought it down to me. I've read it. Here it is. I'll read it to you!"

He picked up an envelope, which had been lying on the desk, and drew out the single sheet of paper it contained. Mary watched him, wondering much more than her expression revealed over this new development. Then, as she listened, quick interest touched her features to a new life. In her eyes leaped emotions to make or mar a life.

Helen Morris' Letter.

This was the letter:

I can't go without telling you how sorry I am. There won't never be a time that I won't remember it was me got you sent up, that you did time in my place. I ain't going to forgive myself ever, and I swear I'm going straight always. Your true friend,

HELEN MORRIS.

For once, Burke showed a certain delicacy. When he had finished the reading, he said nothing for a long minute—only sat with his cunning eyes on the face of the woman who was immobile there before him. And, as he looked on her in her slender elegance of form and gentlewomanly loveliness of face, a loveliness intelligent and refined beyond that of most women, he felt borne in on his consciousness the fact that here was one to be respected. He fought against the impression. It was to him preposterous, for she was out of that underworld against which he was ruthlessly at war. Yet, he could not altogether overcome his instinct toward a half-reverent admiration. * * * And, as the letter proved, she had been innocent at the outset. She had been the victim of a mistaken justice, made outcast by the law she had never wronged. * * * His mood of respect was inevitable, since he had some sensibilities, though they were coarsened, and they sensed vaguely the maelstrom of emotions that now swirled in the girl's breast.

The Mistakes of Jennie .:. By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

Chapter Eleven.

WHEN Jennie saw her girl friend at the office next day she asked her how she managed to have such nice dresses and such a nice furnished room on the salary she got. The girl winked and laughingly explained, "it was very easy, providing you were pretty and you found the right MAN." But even then little Jennie did not understand what she meant, and asked the girl to explain the meaning of the "right MAN" part of it.

This the girl was very reluctant to do, but finally admitted that one of the young men they were out with the night before gave her money—and that she just worked for the sake of having something to do. But she did NOT tell Jennie that the work also helped her to forget her way of living and to keep her mind off the day when she would NOT be as good looking and when the young man would have transferred his attentions to a younger and prettier girl—and the money wouldn't be so easy to get.

Jennie was quite shocked when she realized her girl friend was taking money from the young man, and as much as she wanted pretty clothes and good times she was sure she could never, never do THAT to obtain them.

Then the girl told her she knew of a place where Jennie could get clothes on credit. By just paying a dollar or so a week she could get all the clothes she wanted if they knew she had a fairly good job for a girl. Jennie was quite excited when she learned there were such places as these. Just think—and you would only have to pay a dollar or two a week. She was getting eight dollars a week. Pooh! she wouldn't miss one dollar of it. So at noon time she and the girl went to a store to pick out some clothes for Jennie.

.:. The Manicure Lady .:.

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I WAS reading a book last night that certainly gave me the Willies," said the Manicure Lady. "Wilfred brought it home from the library. It was all about the way them Romans used to go after the church members, and I never seen such terrible accounts of anything in my life. Why, George, them Romans used to burn the Christians in boiling pitch! Gee, I'm glad I wasn't around then, ain't you?"

"If I had been around I would probably have been one of the Romans," said the Head Barber. "I ain't no church member, even though I know that I ought to be one. I am always so tired after Saturday is over that I like to sleep till noon, and in the afternoon and evening me and the Missus usually goes somewhere like to the seashore or out in the country. If I had more time I would go to church, because it don't hurt anybody to go, and think of all the good religion has done."

"That's why I go," said the Manicure Lady. "Sometimes I feel as if the preacher and me don't quite agree on everything he says, but I always make allowance for the preacher. I was just saying to mother last night that the people that goes to church now ought to be very thankful that they didn't live among them Romans and that the brave people who did live in them days was ever on earth to start the churches and bring all that good into the world."

Not So Hard.

"There is a lot of church members now that wouldn't have stood the gaff then," said the Head Barber. "There is a lot more church members now, but the going ain't so hard."

"That is just what I was thinking when I was reading that book," said the Manicure Lady. "There was a smooth, chop-whiskered old geezer in here yesterday to have his nails did, and the way he purred around me and kind of insinuated would make you sick. He said that he lived over in a little Alabama town, and I asked him if he was the same kind of a gay old dog among the Birmingham manicure girls. Mercy, no, he told me. He said that he had to be a different person altogether when he was at home. He said he couldn't imagine what the other pillars of his church would say if a brother deacon got nifty. I asked him if he didn't have any conscience of his own, and he said that he had one, but it always got seasick when he was crossing the Chattahoochee River, so he left it at home.

"It is too bad, George, that old man Nero didn't have a few of that kind of church members for his lions and bonfire men to practice on, instead of the noble people that had to be martyrs. Pa used to go to church a lot when we lived over in South Carolina, but I guess he ran into so many good little toads like the gent of which I am just speaking of that he got sick of the job.

A Perfect Dear.

"The old gent may travel to the sideboard a little too often some evenings, but he ain't no hypocrite, and there is a lot of other men like him that would be there every Sunday when the plate comes around if there wasn't so many old fakes with sidewhiskers carrying the plate.

"I asked the old geezer what he did week days to rest up from going to church, and he said that he had a big factory where children could learn a good trade and grow up useful members of society like him.

"Do you follow me, George? What a perfect old dear he must be to his wife and children! Honest to goodness, George, if I could find out where his wife lived I would send her a synonymous letter and warn her of her husband's complicity, or whatever it is they call that Jekyll and Hyde stuff that makes a man kick up his heels when he gets where the high buildings looms. Gee, the shop seemed airier and better after he had went!"

3 Sluggers Bunched; .0017 Separates Trio

The Southern League is enjoying the closest individual batting race it has had in years. Tommy Long, Kid Elberfeld and Dave Robertson are running a neck and neck race, the former leading Robertson, who is third, by a little over 1 point.

Including yesterday's game Long has a batting average of .34844. Elberfeld, the second man, is batting at a .347171 clip, while Robertson has a mark of .34674. Long was the only one of the trio to slump yesterday, the Cracker slugger failing to get a hit out of four times up. Elberfeld was not in the game yesterday, but Robertson managed to get two hits out of four chances.

GOTCH OFFERS SERVICES FOR OLYMPIAN GAMES

CHICAGO, ILL., June 21.—Frank A. Gotch, world's wrestling champion, is to be seen in Chicago in two exhibition matches in connection with the international athletic championships next month in Grant Park. The Humboldt farmer volunteered his services and in a letter addressed to E. C. Brown, general manager of the games, declared he wished to give two exhibitions to show his appreciation of the manner in which Chicagoans always have stood by him in his matches to defend his title.

No dates have yet been set for Gotch's appearance nor have his opponents been selected. It is probable, however, he will give both exhibitions in the evening, as the heat of the day will preclude wrestling under the sun. Gotch probably will be the only professional wrestler to give exhibitions, as the other grappling events will be exclusively for amateurs.

PITTSBURG, June 22.—Caught under the rain of fire due to the explosion of a big nitroglycerin torpedo, Hans Wagner, famous shortstop of the Pirates, narrowly escaped death last night at an oil well near Carnegie, in which he has an interest. Wagner was thrown to the ground flat on his back.

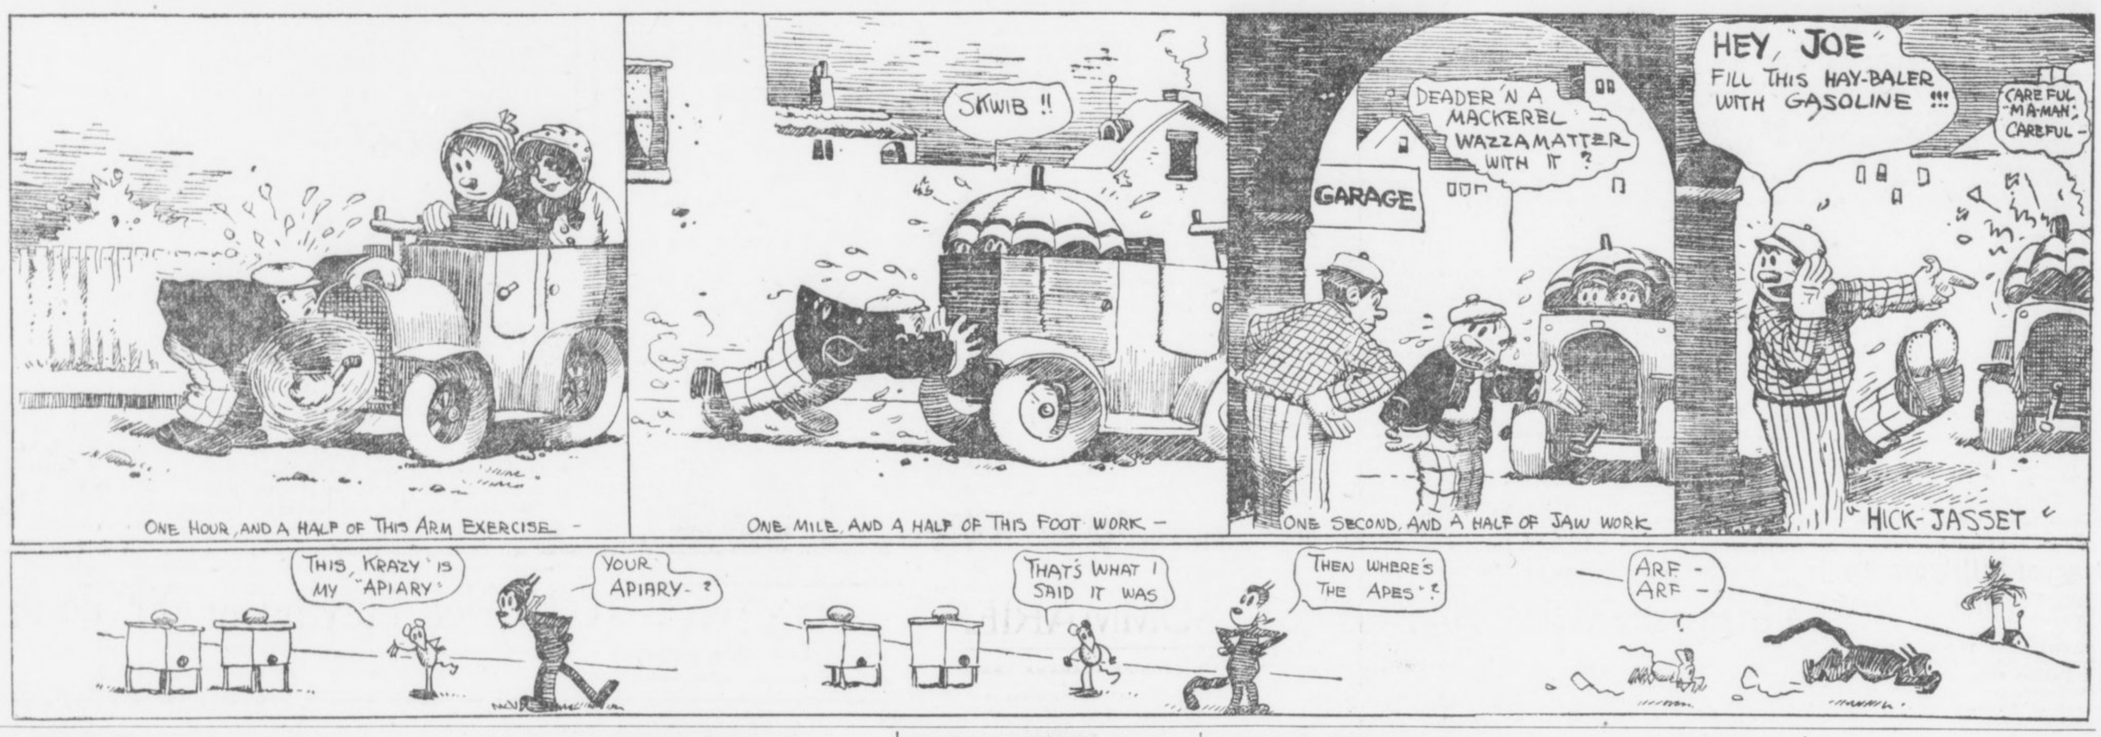
Just a Little Mistake of the Old Man's



CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 22.—The Eastern invasion of the Western clubs in the American League has not proved very much beyond the fact that the Athletics are getting in a better position every day to cinch the flag. I do not see how any club can stop them. Cleveland made a big effort, but the Athletics have been the gainers on this jaunt of the Naps, and none of the other teams in the league are within gunshot of the Philadelphia team. The Naps are in bad shape now. They have suffered from injuries to players this season, and the hard luck which had followed that club for so many years appears to be running true to form and sticking very close now. Birmingham, who has been the life of the team all season, and who would have been a big help actually playing the game, broke a leg early in the season, and has been forced to use Johnston at first base. This player has been doing very well, but he has not the veteran's sense possessed by his leader.

* * *

CHAPMAN, the brilliant young shortstop, has been injured and is out of the game temporarily. Several of the Naps are in the daily battles heavily upholstered with bandages, and such upholstering does not do an athlete any particular good.

The Chicago Americans have fallen down on this trip, and even Boston, rated to be a favorite in the race before the season opened, has not improved its social position in baseball during its home stand. Detroit, St. Louis and New York are up against the proposition of building all over again. Some teams are always up against that proposition.

* * *

CHANCE appears to have hung together a pretty fair infield now. Borton, Zelder, Peckinpaugh and Midkiff. I understand that many American League players are complaining that they cannot hit the ball at the Polo Grounds. Several attempts have been made to explain the cause for the weak hitting of all teams at this field. It is true that the Giants cannot bat as hard at their home park as they do on the road. Look at the showing on this last trip. We have averaged more than a dozen hits to the game on the road, while we were not anywhere near such a mark at home. At one time it was thought that the uncertain background blinded the batters. Formerly advertisements in glaring colors made up the background against which the batter had to pick out a fast one. But the fence for a big space was painted green this spring. The hitting has not increased, however. Other players have advanced the theory that the white shirts of the fans when they take off their coats fooled the batters. But we have had a cold spring. Still others believe it is because the ground is set down under the hill in a poor light. Whatever it is, the jinx has affected the American League batters, too. Men like Cree, of the Yankees, a normal .300 hitter, are away down. But it all helps the pitchers, and, remember, what is fair for one goes for the other, as it was well put some time ago.

Flynn Gets Match With Smith

Injured Hand Is Healing Rapidly

By Ed W. Smith.

CHICAGO, ILL., June 22.—Jim Flynn, the Pueblo fireman, is to make his next fight against Gunboat Smith at New York on August 5. The bout is to take place in Bill Gibson's arena and the heavyweights are billed to go ten rounds.

Flynn left here yesterday for his home in Pueblo, Colo., after he received word from his manager, Jack Curley, that the match was closed. Flynn expects to take a long rest, as he has been doing pretty much boxing of late.

His broken right hand is healing rapidly and he expects the injured member to come around in good shape. Flynn stated while here that he had to call off a match with Jim Savage at Atlanta on account of the bum mitt. Jim said he was wild to keep the date, but that the hand was in such bad shape it was impossible for him to go through with the mill.

* * *

FLYNN is going to ride from Pueblo, Colo., to New York City in his own automobile as part of his training for his fight with Smith. The Pueblo fireman will ride every foot of the way in his own car, accompanied only by his wife. He will leave the Colorado city between June 25 and 30.

* * *

FLYNN is a thorough mechanic, in or out of the ring, and figures that his knowledge of the game will serve him in good stead in driving the car. Not only is he a good mechanic, but he is said to be an excellent driver as well, which will help a whole lot. Not only will his aim be to make the trip in absolute safety, but to break all known records for such a trip. Flynn is doing it merely for his own satisfaction and nothing else. As a side card he figures that the trip will put him in excellent shape to start in training for Smith.

* * *

THERE is apt to be a considerable amount of money wagered on the result of the flyer across the country. Billy Gibson, the New York promoter, has said that he does not believe Flynn has a chance of accomplishing such a thing, even knowing him to be a game and determined man. He is willing to gamble $1,000 that it cannot be done in a 1,800-pound car such as Flynn will drive. He also will wager another $1,000 that Fannie Vedder, Flynn's wife, does not complete the trip as scheduled.

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

SENSATION.

The curfew tolls the knell of parting day,
The smiling fans wend slowly o'er the lea,
And each one to his friend has this to say:
"I saw a wondrous game to-day, by gee!

"Ofttimes I've seen those creatures known as Cubs;
Ofttimes I've seen them smite the bounding ball;
Ofttimes like pennant winners, oft like dubs
I've seen them climb the heights and seen them fall.

"To-day I saw them clout to beat the band.
They smote the pill for many a healthy swat,
But one thing I can never understand
IS—Heinie Nim was not chased off the lot."

In other words, life, to the Great Zim, is just one little vacation after another.

Once in a great while the Great Zim shows his versatility by playing nine whole innings without being exiled.

It is true, as one of our baseball scribes remarks, that the owner of the Cubs is a far-seeing man. He can see a dime at a distance of ten parasangs with the naked eye.

The Duke of Westminster threatens to challenge again, demonstrating that he is a game guy and a glutton for punishment.

Still it is hard to blame those English poloists for desiring to get back home in a hurry. It does not bring up pleasant memories to hang around the spot where one has received a severe kick in the shins.

HEAVYWEIGHTS LACK CLASS OF FORMER STARS

SAN FRANCISCO, June 21.—It is very evident that the days of the heavyweights have about waned. Recent events have shown the whole world that the present crop of big boxers is an absolute and a dismal failure, and for the good of the sport the longsighted ones would show their appreciation if the promoters throughout the length and breadth of the land would forget the so-called hopes for a while and devote all their attention to the little fellows.

There has been a lack of class in the division of the heavies for many years past. Managers, promoters and scouts have gone over the entire world with a fine tooth comb in the hope of finally landing some likely giant who might develop. But every expedition has proved a failure. One after the other has fallen by the wayside, so now it would appear as though the heavyweight division might just as well be forgotten, because the material is not there, and, of course, the interest is bound to wane as a result of lack of class.

No Former Stars.

Gone are the days of the Sullivans, the Ryans, the Kilrains, the Jacksons, the Corbetts, the Fitzsimmons, the Mahers, the Choynskis, the McCoys, the Sharkeys, the Jeffries, and ever so many countless others who helped make ring history. They can't find anybody to fill their shoes, although they have had several years in which to turn the trick. The harder they try, the more hopeless the task looks. It's a lost cause, sure.

The late Luther McCarty looked like the best of a bad lot, and many regarded him as the heavyweight champion. He did all that was expected of him up to the time he met his tragic death. He was a knocker out and evidently a fairly clever boxer, with plenty of brain matter to back up the efforts of his fists.

Now who are they going to wish the so-called championship on to? It begins to look like Gunboat Smith or Arthur Pelky, the man who is held responsible for the death of McCarty. Surely the heavyweight game must be slipping fast.

Willard Lacks Class.

Jess Willard has plenty of height, reach and weight, but we must stop right there. He may be willing enough, but that lets him out. His recent mixup with Smith failed to show the fans of San Francisco anything that they might possibly warm up to. Possibly he is entitled to a return match, but nobody seems to care very much whether he ever gets it or not.

Many of them are of the opinion that a clever old-timer like Tommy Ryan or Kid McCoy might possibly take hold of Willard and teach him a few of the tricks of the trade. This is a good suggestion and is worthy of a trial. Willard is very green and sadly lacking in the knowledge of the game. A few tryouts over the four-round route ought to help him also.

Case, of Billikens, To Be Traded for Doak

NASHVILLE, TENN., June 22.—Information was received here to-day in a dispatch from Akron, Ohio, that Pitcher Charles Case would be recalled from the Montgomery club and traded to Akron for Pitcher Doak, the star twirler of the Interstate League.

Case was sent to Montgomery in exchange for Piggy Paige, who was returned to the Billikens. Case has been of little use to Montgomery, and no trouble is anticipated in securing his return.

All-Filipino Nine Arrives in Frisco

SAN FRANCISCO, June 22.—An all-Filipino baseball squad arrived here on the liner Manchuria from Manila for a series of games which have been planned in this country. The Filipinos this season have defeated both the Waseda and Keio Japanese University nines.

Fifteen full-blooded Filipino youths comprise the squad, which has fair batters and pitchers and a reputation for fast fielding.

A Bit on the Side

MENTAL OVERFLOW.

Cheer up. But a few short months ago you were kicking about the blizzard; now it's nothing but the usual June sizzard, and you had it coming.

* * *

LETTUCE HOPE.

Seven star twirlers Mr. Dooin had;
One blew up, then only six he had.
Six classy heavers in Red Dooin's hive;
The Cubs slammed another one, and then there were five.
Five real flingers—hear Red Dooin roar—
Zim knocked one's leg off, and then there were four.
Four real curve merchants—goodness, gracious me—
One kinked his vertebra, and then there were three.
Warm weather wilted one, and then there were two.
Two flingers on the list, more joy for the Cubs;

"The same fellow who bored you to death last winter when the mercury was bobbing around the zero point by asking, 'Is it cold enough for you?' was around the streets yesterday asking, 'Is it hot enough for you?'"—The Man in the Smoking Compartment.

The twirlers who hoped to thaw out with warm weather now hope to be in shape if the weather man will kindly slip along a little cool spell.

* * *

Why doesn't Heine Zimmerman retire from the game about the fifth inning daily and thus save either Evers or the umpire unnecessary work?

* * *

Nope, Clarence, there is absolutely no truth in the report that Billy Smith will serve gin rickeys free to the fans during the hot spell. Change your brand of dope and frame something possible.

BOXING
News of the Ring Game

Charlie White has already started light work for his 20-round engagement with Jack Britton at New Orleans on July 4. Nate Lewis, manager of White, writes from Chicago that Charlie is to spend most of his time boxing as he realizes that White will have to go at top speed to get to Britton.

* * *

Britton is scheduled to meet Jimmy Duffy at Buffalo on Monday night, but this will be Jack's last bout before he takes on the Chicagoan. Britton knows that White is one of the hardest punchers in the lightweight class and expects to be in great shape when he hooks up with Lewis' protege.

* * *

Johnny Dundee will have to be at his best when he takes on Tommy Murphy on the coast, July 15. Murphy has defeated some of the toughest men in the lightweight division and many are picking him to stop Dundee's rush to the top. Murphy holds victories over Owen Moran and Wolgast, besides giving Packey McFarland a tough scrap for 20 rounds.

* * *

Kid Williams, the Baltimore sensation, will train hard from now on for his coming set-to with Champion Johnny Coulon, which is dated for the last part of next month. Don't be surprised if Williams turns the trick.

* * *

Jack McGuigan, manager of the National A. C., of Philadelphia, is trying to arrange a six-round bout between Frank Klaus and Leo Houck, to be fought on June 27. If this match falls through, McGuigan will make an effort to sign up Young Shugrue and Sam Robinson.

* * *

New York fans are picking Gunboat Smith to stop George Rodel when the pair exchange blows in the Eastern city on June 27. Smith floored Rodel five times in their former bout, but failed to put the Boer out.

* * *

Freddie Welsh, the English lightweight champion, must be going back. The other night he only succeeded in outpointing Billy Campbell.

* * *

Boxing critics are beginning to forget Eddie McGoorty as a contender for the middleweight crown. Eddie's defeat at the hands of Jimmy Clabby last week practically eliminates him from the front ranks. Klaus, Dillon and Clabby have the best claim to the title now.

* * *

Phil Brock is after a return match with Johnny Griffiths. Only a few nights ago the latter stopped Brock in the ninth round, but Brock thinks he can reverse the verdict if given another chance. A promoter at Akron, Ohio, has agreed to stage the go on July 4.

Cobb Not Playing in Old Form

Sam Crane Says Ty Lacks Punch

By Sam Crane.

UNOFFICIAL batting records say that Joe Jackson has headed off Ty Cobb as the leading batsman of the American League. But still the Tiger cyclone has a batting average of slightly over .400, so there seems little need for him to worry.

Now, the question naturally arises as the result of Jackson's jump over Cobb's head into first place as a batter, is Cobb going back?

Cobb has not had as long a baseball career as Lajoie by many years; but it must be taken into consideration that the nimble, ambitious and aspiring Southerner, in his efforts to retain his prestige as the greatest player the game has ever produced and to secure contracts that call for the largest salary paid to any plain ball player, has been very strenuous in his playing. He has stolen more bases than any other player, made more runs, hammered out more safe hits and played an altogether more vigorous game than any of his fellow players who have been co-ordinate with him. Consequently the physical and mental strain he has been under possibly may have sapped his energies to a dangerous degree.

During the Yankee-Detriot series, while Cobb did some good work he did not impress me as being quite up to his old dynamitic self that once carried everything before him. He surely picked out some very poor pitched balls to hit at, and instead of getting the pitcher in the hole, as was his great forte, he allowed himself frequently to be put at a disadvantage by the boxman.

It may be that I am too exacting where Cobb is concerned, for I have long been one of his greatest admirers and have always upheld him as the best player the game ever developed—a player without a weakness—and I hate to see him show any evidence of waning powers or prowess, but still there seems to me to be that something lacking in his work here that has taken a certain quantity of the old "kick" from his past grand performances.

I understood that during the present trip of the Tigers Cobb has been troubled by slight attacks of dyspepsia, owing to change of food, etc., and if that is so there is good reason for his little falling off and possibly means that it is only temporary.

Graham Gets Job; to Manage Columbus

COLUMBUS, MISS., June 22.—Catcher Pat Graham, canned by the Crackers for various reasons, has been named to succeed Bob Kennedy as manager of Columbus of the Cotton States League.

Graham says he will continue to catch and hopes to bring his new team up in the race. Fans here are jubilant over the acquisition of Graham. They expect his hitting power, combined with his all-around ability, to be a big help to the team.

Spring Time Is Blood Cleaning Time

Wonderful How Quickly Your Entire System Awakens When the Blood is Cleansed.

Let S. S. S. Rid You of All Blood Disorders.

If you are down with rheumatism, if you sneeze, feel chilled, are choked with catarrh, have a cough, or your skin is pimpled and irritated with rash, eczema, or any other blood disorder, just remember that almost all the ills of life come from impure blood. And you can easily give your blood a good, thorough cleansing, a bath, by using S. S. S. There is no need for any one to be despondent over the illness of blood impurities. No matter how badly they attack the system, or how unsightly becomes the skin, just remember there is one ingredient in S. S. S. that so stimulates the cellular tissues throughout the body that each part selects its own essential nutriment from the blood.

This means that all decay, all breaking down of the tissues, is checked and repair work begins. S. S. S. has such a specific influence on all local cells as to preserve their mutual welfare and afford a proper relative assistance to each other. More attention is being given to constructive medicine than ever before, and S. S. S. is the highest achievement in this line. For many years people relied upon mercury, iodide of potash, arsenic, "physics," cathartics and "dope" as remedies for blood sickness, but now the pure, vegetable S. S. S. is their safeguard.

You can get S. S. S. in any drug store, but insist upon having it. And you should take no chance by permitting any one to recommend a substitute. And if your blood condition is such that you would like to consult a specialist freely and confidentially, address the Medical Dept., The Swift Specific Company, 137 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Poultry, Pet and Live Stock

Correct Color and Type of the Black Minorcas

Giving a Fine Idea of the Shade of Chicks When Hatched, When Feathered and Full Grown.

Edited By JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL.

JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL—Will you kindly tell me what should the color be of Black Minorca chicks when matched? Also a description of them when well feathered, that is grown fowls; their size, shape and color of body, etc. I ordered a setting of eggs from a firm in Georgia which was highly recommended, although I got a good hatch, eleven out of fifteen, the color did not come up to my expectations. Mrs. J. R. C.

Palatka, Fla.

Reply—Young Black Minorcas are like all other black breeds, they show a good deal of white, which, to the novice, looks mighty bad, and if they are hatched from purchased eggs they very naturally conclude that they have been badly treated. One can hardly judge as to color in black breeds until they are pretty well matured; the changes are so great, and individual specimens differ so much from each other in their feathering processes. Some change rapidly to a good solid black and others hold on to their white in wings and tails until they are almost fully developed. For this reason the culling process should be carefully handled and not attempted too early in the season. Of course the specimens showing glaring defects, such as red ear lobes, feathers upon the shanks, red feathers in the plumage, etc., in Minorcas, can just as well be culled out one time as another for one cannot hope for improvement along these lines, no matter how much time is given. We would be infringing upon the rights of the Standard of perfection should we give a detailed description of the Minorca. We will say, however, that prime color should be a glossy greenish black, free from foreign color, such as gray or purple sheen, the latter so often being scattered throughout the plumage. The more there is of it the more defective in color the specimen becomes. In general shape the Minorca is long in body with long back sloping slightly downward to where the tail begins with a full flowing tail on males and well expanded tails on females. The carriage should be rather erect, although not too much so of course. The comb is what the novice would call very large, but in standard description is known as large. In males it stands erect and perfectly straight upon the head with four or five uniform points. Should the comb turn over to one side it disqualifies. In females the comb is of the same general shape as that of the male only thinner and smaller and turns over to one side of the head. An erect comb on the female is as defective as one that lops over is on the male. The ear lobes should be something of an oval in shape, smooth and free from wrinkles and pure white in color. Any red showing is a defect and a serious one, according to how much red there is. In old cocks the red often appears from a result of scratches from fighting, etc., and does not detract from the value of the bird, except 'n the show room. It would not affect his breeding qualities, providing, of course, that they were white when he was younger. In summing up, then, the value of the specimen depends upon how near to the Minorca type it is in general form, carriage, shape of comb, and the quality in color from head to tail. Any one who gets an idea in his head that a black fowl is so easy to breed because it is solid color usually gets his eyes opened before he has bred them very many years. All kinds of little irregularities come to the surface that had not been dreamed of before so that you might as well make up your mind that you have something of an undertaking, right from the start, just as you would handling any parti-colored breed, and be prepared to work it out for the best there is in it.

Uniform Cotton Oil Grading Predicted

CHICAGO, June 21.—I. G. Priest, of the Bureau of Standards at Washington, addressing the fourth annual meeting of the cotton products analysts, to-day predicted the establishment of a uniform system of grading cotton seed oil. Many disputes, he said, arise over the present imperfect color system of grading.

Chemists from throughout the South, who attended the meeting, will remain for the convention of the Interstate Cotton Seed Crushers' Association next week.

If you have anything to sell advertise in The Sunday American. Largest circulation of any Sunday newspaper in the South.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Peachtree Lease for 8 Years, $35,000

Shelley Ivey in Candler Building. Realty Investment's Sale. Kirkwood Bond Issue.

A central lease on Peachtree, involving a term of 8 years and 4 months and a consideration of $35,000, proved interesting in Saturday's real estate news. Shelley Ivey, manager of the College Co-Op Company at 97 Peachtree, has leased from Asa G. Candler Nos. 119 and 121 Peachtree, the same being in the southern end of the Candler Building. Mr. Ivey will move his stock July 1 and will occupy for the present 119 Peachtree only, 121 being the quarters of the Southern Pacific Railroad, whose offices it is planned to put in the Fourth National Bank Building. If the railroad company can get out soon Mr. Ivey will sub-lease the front of 121 about July 1. Otherwise, he will take possession January 1, 1914, of the remaining portion of the store.

No. 97 Peachtree was leased seven years ago to the College Co-Op by E. W. Alfriend. Mr. Alfriend is in Florida and will take up the matter of re-leasing his place on his return.

Realty Investments Sale.

The Realty Investments have sold to Louis Regenstein the southeast corner of Magnolia and New Mangum Streets, 50x198 feet, for $7,000, on terms of $1,500 cash and notes at 6 per cent. This was at the rate of $140 a front foot.

Kennesaw Avenue Buy.

Misses Mary E. and Emma L. Prichard have bought from Alice E. Thomas, 29 Kennesaw Avenue, 54x214 feet, for $6,000.

Progress on Healey Building.

Workmen have attained the fourth story in their steel work on the Healey Building, and are fast mounting skyward. The arcades between Forsyth and Broad Streets, and from Walton Street to the median line of the building, are fast taking shape, and the riveting is progressing in a satisfactory manner. William T. Healey, the owner, declared Saturday that he was well pleased with the progress so far made.

Do You THINK While You Are Dressing?

The Time Used in Dressing Need Not Be Wasted

(Copyright.)

Man in the process of evolution has got rid of his fur, or feathers, and every day he must put on something to take the place of fur, and every night he must take off the artificial clothing.

One old man in the State of New Jersey killed himself and left a note saying that he died because he was so tired of buttoning and unbuttoning clothes.

There is apparently no greater waste of time than the time that is spent in dressing and undressing.

Bathing, shaving for men and powdering your nose for women, finding what you want to wear and putting it on—it is a tiresome part of every day.

BUT—

The hours in which a human being grows and develops mentally are the hours of solitude.

And a great many of us are practically never alone, except when we are getting dressed or undressed.

Sleep is a time of idleness—no growth there.

When we are with others we listen, learn perhaps, and debate, but we don't really THINK WITH INTENSITY.

The one thing that makes you more of a man than you were last year is intense, solitary thought.

Why not say to yourself: Since I must spend at least 330 hours a year in dressing and undressing, in bathing and shaving and looking for my collar button, I'll also spend that time IN THINKING?

Do you know how many men spend 300 hours a year in actual concentrated thought?

Not one in a thousand.

Suppose you see what you can make out of the hours lost in putting on and taking off the artificial fur and feathers and how much you can grow in the thinking.

Bacon felt that the mind was developed by reading, talking, and writing.

And he said:

Writing maketh an exact man.

Speaking maketh a ready man.

Reading maketh a full man.

(We quote the learned gentleman from memory, which is necessary when you write editorials on a railroad train.)

Reading fills you with knowledge, speaking makes you quick or ready, writing makes you exact—true.

But more important than reading, writing or speaking IS THINKING.

The real YOU lives inside of your brain alone. And it works at its best when you are alone.

Aristotle taught Alexander the Great walking up and down with the young prince that he might become wise and strong at the same time—that is what they call the peripatetic method of intellectual development.

Why don't you educate yourself in thought as you march up and down from the bed to the bathroom, from the rough towel to the safety razor, and so on through the long, tiresome and usually wasted process of dress?

THE OLD ROMANS

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THEY strutted into the bar room,
Three boys—they were nothing more;
They ordered their drinks with grins and winks,
While their heels hit hard on the floor.
When one of them grew less frisky
And seemed half ready to sink,
Cried the others, "Aw, one more whisky!
That's a good old Roman drink!"

Then I thought of the real "Old Romans"
That I knew long years ago,
When we stuck to the "corn" from night till morn
As fast as the stuff could flow.
There was Billy O'Keefe, of Denver—
Too bad poor Billy is dead
He could pack away three quarts a day
And never rattle his head.

There was Jack McGee of the Morning Bee,
And Flynn of the Fourth Estate,
Larry McCale of the Portland Mail—
All dead before thirty-eight.
There was Blake of the Brooklyn Bugle,
And Grant of the Memphis Sun,
And a dozen more, or maybe a score,
Whisky got them, one by one.

I felt the tear that unbidden starts
When I thought (it hurt like a knife)
Of the nimble brains and the golden hearts
All stilled in the prime of life.
Then I walked from the noisy bar room
And muttered a prayer to God
For the souls of the real "Old Romans"
Now dreamless under the sod.

"I Used To Be"

How many times have you yourself heard men, standing up against a bar, bragging about what they USED to be? Perhaps some were telling about the good jobs they ONCE had; or maybe another one—with the shell of a ONCE fine body—was telling what a great athlete he USED to be, how he ONCE did "the hundred yards in 93-5," but could not now even run for a car without blowing like a grampus. You will also notice that these men usually drink WHISKEY—because, as they put it, it has a stronger "KICK" than other drinks. What better word could define it than KICK? Look around you at the men it has KICKED out of good jobs, good health and good homes into the land of USED TO BE.

HAL COFFMAN.

The Dictograph

The Dictograph, He Says, Is the Electric Symbol of the New Age, of Which the Newspaper Is the Prophet, in Which the Perils of Privacy Will be Matched by Powers of Publicity.

WRITTEN FOR THE GEORGIAN

By REV. DR. JOHN E. WHITE

Pastor Second Baptist Church

ALL the real problems of society have been anticipated. The progress of modern times is manifest in the good answers we are making to ancient questions.

The Dictograph, for instance, is the New Invention of which Old Necessity is the Mother. The Celestial Society of Olympus, which the Romans created to furnish ideals and to set up standards of judgment on mundane matters, considered it.

Momus reported to Jupiter that the great evil among men was secrecy and deceit. He complained against Jupiter that he ought to have provided a glass window in every human breast, just over the heart, so that the inward truth of men's thoughts would be accessible to everybody, so that deceit would have been impossible.

He made such a row about it that he was kicked out of Heaven.

The Dictograph is a sop to Momus, but the fate of Momus is a warning to the dictographer. The application of this little Edisonic device to human affairs will arouse all the modern pagan Furies.

Some Possibilities.

Another Edward Bellamy may now tell us of its development and application to progress in the year A. D. 2500. The addition of a photographic attachment was the next step of invention to increase its effectiveness.

In the highly organized society of the year 2,500 the government had provided Dictographs in every home, hotel room and private office. A central receiving station was arranged for the record of disgraceful family disputes, star-chamber conferences and political conspiracies.

The photographic device was employed for Pan-Hellenic ballrooms, with a special corps of operators between 3 and 6 o'clock in the morning, to obtain truthful pictures of the "tango" and the "turkey trot." After midnight cabs and automobiles were equipped.

During sessions of the Georgia Legislature, in the hotels and boarding houses and private dinner parties at the houses of politicians, it was found particularly useful.

The striking fact Edward Bellamy, Jr., records was that civilization had responded to the restraint of the Dictograph and that its abuse was inconsiderable beside the manifest improvement in the tone and quality of human conduct.

Perils of Privacy.

The Dictograph is not all a joke.

The exaggeration of its possibilities is not a reductio ad absurdum.

The irresistible movement toward relentless publicity it symbolizes is profoundly supported in social intelligence.

The perils of privacy, secrecy and the suppression of facts are realized.

The basic religious conviction that Deity sees, hears and knows is at work day and night to justify the increasing passion of humanity to see, hear and know.

The Christian assurance that "nothing is secret that shall not be made manifest; neither anything hid that shall not be known and publish itself abroad" is the moral sanction of publicity as the consummation of the highest civilization.

The cry of Life is "Light! More light! Light everywhere!" The protest of Death is the cry for privacy and suppression.

The man who loves darkness better than light is under cosmic condemnation. The guardians of public health ruthlessly placard the places of disease.

The exponents of moral health also are every day bolder and bolder in disregard of any challenge of personal secrecy which conceals sources of moral contagion.

The old sanctity of wrong under the cover of private rights is an exploded theory of social relations.

In whatever concerns the public safety the public has a right to the facts.

The outcry against the publication of the Standard Oil letters made no appeal to the American conscience.

The Good of Publicity.

In England the divorce evil is treated as a public matter, and not even the nauseous details are withheld from the public eye. Those who object to the application of that rule in this country should show better reasons for secrecy and privacy in behalf of domestic infidelities than the Fulton County divorce courts afford.

The world adjusted to the law of publicity is the good promise of the times, and the Searchlight, the Newspaper and the Dictograph are its phophetic tokens.

There Is Only One Need in the World---Love

Any Man Can Be Happy With It; No Man Can Be Happy Without It

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

I KNOW the need of the world.
Though it would not have me know.
It would hide its sorrow deep,
Where only God may go.
Yet its secret it cannot keep;
It tells it awake or asleep,
It tells it to all who will heed,
And he who runs may read.
The need of the world I know.

I know the need of the world.
When it boasts of its wealth the loudest,
When it flaunts it in all men's eyes.
When its mien is the gayest and proudest.
Oh! ever it lies—it lies,
For the sound of its laughter dies
In a sob and a smothered moan,
And it weeps when it sits alone.
The need of the world I know.

I know the need of the world.
When the earth shakes under the tread
Of men who march to the fight,
When rivers with blood are red
And there is no law but might,
And the wrong way seems the right;
When he who slaughters the most
Is all men's pride and boast,
The need of the world I know.

I know the need of the world.
When it babbles of gold and fame,
It is only to lead us astray
From the thing that it dare not name,
For this is the sad world's way.
Oh! poor blind world grown gray
With the need of a thing so near,
With the want of a thing so dear.
The need of the world I know.

The need of the world is love.
Deep under the pride of power,
Down under its lust of greed,
For the joys that last but an hour,
There lies forever its need.
For love is the law and the creed
And love is the unnamed goal
Of life, from man to the mole.
Love is the need of the world.

THERE is only one need in the world.

The need to love our neighbors as ourselves.

To do exactly as we would be done by.

The need to understand that the human race is one body; and that when we do anything which harms or hurts one individual, we harm all individuals, ourselves included.

Just as we harm the body, when we injure any member, hand, foot, eye, or ear.

When we stop and think about the world, the whole process of life becomes very pitiful.

Each, being born upon the earth, is striving for happiness, from the cradle to the grave, in his own way.

According to his light, he is doing the best he can.

He does not know it, but the only satisfying things which he can get out of life are peace of mind, self-respect and the love of his fellow men.

Nothing he can obtain without these things, nothing he can achieve or become, is of any real value.

No man can be happy without those three blessings. Any man can be happy with them.

Even though he is saddened by the sorrow he sees about him; the sorrow which results from striving after the needless things of earth; after more than we need; after what does not belong to us; after the possessions of others.

There would be no war; no industrial problems; no prisons; no poor houses; no white slaves; no sex sins; if men and women all set forth early in life on that threefold quest—for peace of mind, for self-respect, for the love of their fellow men.

That is all any soul is seeking; that is all any soul desires; because that is all there is in life worth living for. Yet is there war, and strife; and hatred; and sin; and sorrow and anguish; and misery and poverty.

Because men have not yet learned that there is only one need in the world.

And the need of the world is LOVE.

Belief of Samuel Adams

By WILLIAM VINCENT BYARS.

IT was Samuel Adams, one of the greatest founders of the United States, who said that "truth loves an appeal to the common sense of mankind."

It was this thought which made him powerful.

It made him the greatest Democratic leader of New England in the eighteenth century.

He was born in Boston in 1722, when all New Englanders were royalists. He was born rich. His family made money out of a brewery. He lost money in politics, so that when he died in 1803 he had barely enough to pay for his funeral.

He had helped to found the United States. He held office many years, but he was afraid to make money.

This was the only thing he was afraid of. He was afraid that if he did not keep himself as poor as most other people he would lose his common sense.

He meant by common sense the sense people have when they are trying to be fair to each other instead of over reaching and cheating.

If he found a man who could not read, trying not to cheat and over reach others, he thought him a better judge of truth than a prime minister. He believed that God made all men with sense enough to be honest.

At a time when he would have been hanged by a Tory prime minister, if caught, he said that truth loves an appeal to the common sense of mankind, and that "He who made all men, made the truths necessary for human happiness obvious to all."

This was his answer after he had been declared a traitor.

He spent his life trying to prove that politics may be improved by less cheating and shooting. He thought that finally nearly everyone would agree with him that common honesty and common sense are enough to make the best government on earth.
