MISSISSIPPI EXPRESS IS LOOTED

Masked Robbers Hold Up Illinois Central Passenger at Lonely Spot South of Memphis.

MEMPHIS, TENN., July 4.—Illinois Central train No. 1, bound from Chicago to New Orleans, was held up by four masked men early to-day one and one-half miles south of Batesville, Miss.

It was believed the men obtained $25,000, although the local officials of the American Express Company say the amount was not that large.

Official news of the hold-up reached Memphis offices of the Illinois Central just before noon. The message said the bandits flagged the train at the Tallahatchie River bridge, near Batesville, Miss., and compelled Engineer A. E. Norton to abandon his cab.

The negro fireman was kept in the engine cab, guarded by a bandit who kept him covered with a revolver, while the others went back and uncoupled the passenger coaches from the mail, baggage and express cars.

Deny Heavy Loss.

The negro fireman ran the cars through Batesville to a point one mile south of the town and stopped in a dense river bottom forest.

Officials of the American Express Company said the bandits did not obtain more than $5,000. Five charges of dynamite was exploded before the safe was opened. Every registered mail pouch was rifled, but postal authorities in Memphis said that money shipments were small because of the holiday.

Following the robbery the bandits ran the engine ten miles south when the fire under the boilers went out. Believing the negro fireman had allowed the fire to die in order to trick them, the bandits threw him out of the cab while the engine was moving rapidly. He was slightly injured. The men abandoned the engine one mile north of Enid, Miss., and entered the forest.

A special train arrived from Jackson, Miss, bringing officers and bloodhounds. A party of Deputy United States Marshals from Memphis, left to take up the chase for the bandits.

Car Nearly Wrecked.

Sheriff W. Lemaster, of Batesville, was the first man to reach the express car after the bandits left it. He found the car nearly wrecked.

"By peering into a crack in the safe, which was not completely demolished," said Sheriff Lemaster, "I could see two packages. One was marked '$20,000' and the other '$10,000.' Just inside the outer door of the safe I picked up nearly $500 in loose bills and silver."

Officials of the road say they believe the hold-up men were the same ones who have held up several trains in the last few months in the South. Express Messenger R. E. Hooks, of Cairo, Ill., wired the authorities in Memphis a good description of one of the bandits.

He said as he jumped from the train at the command of the hold-up men he tripped and in falling caught at one of the bandits. His fingers caught the man's mask and jerked it off. The robber cursed him and jabbed him in the ribs with a revolver.

Hold-Up in Wild Region.

Batesville, Miss., is 50 miles from Memphis, Tenn., and is the center of a hilly, thickly-wooded country.

Within the past year there have been numerous train robberies in the South.

The first was in Mississippi, on the Queen and Crescent, near Meridian, when robbers stopped a train and rifled the express car. The express company never made an official statement of the amount stolen, but it was estimated at $18,000. The robbers escaped on horseback through canebrakes into the river bottom. Presumably they waded their horses some distance up the shallow stream, for hounds lost the scent at the river bank.

FEARS LIBEL AFTERMATH IN SCANDAL

Mrs. Jenkins Hires Lawyer to Fight Expected Suits of Macon Church Folk.

MACON, July 4.—The elders of the First Christian Church have framed a report to be submitted to the congregation on Sunday morning in regard to the charge that Mrs. Effie L. Lester, the secretary of the Ladies' Aid Society, has been too friendly with Professor Frank M. Charlton, the choir leader. This charge is made by Mrs. J. W. Jenkins and Mrs. Alma Armstrong, and is supported by testimony of Mr. Jenkins and his grown son, Rufus.

It is regarded as certain that the elder's report will exonerate Mrs. Lester and Professor Charlton of any wrongdoing and urge that the congregation continue confidence in them and thereby further establish the vindication.

That this will be followed by action in the courts by both Professor Charlton and Mr. Lester there is hardly any doubt. In anticipation of being sued for libel or prosecuted for slander, Mrs. Jenkins has engaged Attorney Julian Urquhart to represent her. He states that not only will Mrs. Jenkins contend that she heard Professor Charlton make an appointment over the telephone to be at Mrs. Lester's home on the night of June 5, while her husband was away, at 9 o'clock, and that Professor Charlton was chased out of the premises, but that her son, Rufus, pursued him five blocks, and in Tattnall Square Park had a hand-to-hand encounter with the music instructor.

'Enough of Lamar,' Says Senator Walsh

WASHINGTON, July 4.—Senator Walsh, a member of the Senate lobby inquiry committee, does not expect J. P. Morgan, of New York, to be called as a witness as a result of allegations of David Lamar.

"Lamar has not shown that he succeeded in getting any one to pay any attention to his claims of influence with members of Congress," said Senator Walsh to-day, "and he has disclaimed that he had any such influence. I think we've had about enough of David Lamar."

Before play started Wilding was nervous and predicted that he would be defeated by McLoughlin.

Urges Track Survey Of Railroads; Would Swell City's Income

Councilman Orville Hall has evolved a plan for increasing the tax assessments of railroads within Atlanta $50,000. At the meeting of Council Monday he will introduce a resolution appropriating $500 to make a survey of the tracks within the city, thereby proving that the railroads should pay more taxes.

Councilman Hall declares that no survey of the railroad tracks within Atlanta has been made in twenty years, and that a new survey will cause the Comptroller to increase his assessments.

The elections of Tax Assessors J. L. Harrison and C. D. Meador come up at the meeting of Council Monday. It is said that both will be elected without opposition.

WILSON PAYS VETERANS TRIBUTE

Princetonian Is First President Since Lincoln to Speak on Historic Battlefield.

GETTYSBURG, PA., July 5.—President Wilson sounded the final note of the battle of peace at the golden anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg in an address before several thousand of the veterans, both blue and gray, in the great reunion tent to-day.

Although practically every President since the great war, including Lincoln, has visited the battlefield here, Wilson is the first, except Lincoln, who came to address the old veterans, and for whom the national salute of 21 guns was fired. He is the first since Lincoln to come in an official capacity.

As the President alighted from the train down in Gettysburg a battery of field artillery from Fort Myer, Va., stationed at the Pennsylvania College on Seminary Ridge, fired the national salute of 21 guns. He was met by Colonel Schoonmaker, president of the Gettysburg celebration commission, who escorted him in an automobile to the tent two miles away.

Out on old historic, battlesweept Emmittsburg Road they went, covering in five minutes in a swift motor the path taken by Lincoln, who took half an hour in an old carriage.

Thousands Greet President.

The greatest number to see the President doubtless were the great mass of visitors stopping in the city and the thousands who came from the countryside. The entire tent had been reserved for the veterans and there was much vacant space.

This was due to the fact that many veterans had a misunderstanding as to whether the President was actually coming, a rumor having spread broadcast throughout the camp last night that he had again canceled his engagement. Others felt the President was indifferent and still others had gone home.

The President was received by Assistant Secretary of War Breckinridge, as representing the War Department in charge of the camp, and he was introduced to the audience by Governor Tener, representing the State of Pennsylvania as host to the veterans.

Immediately upon concluding his address the President was escorted from the rear of the tent to his car, which had been switched around through the camp, and he passed out through Long Lane, the central thoroughfare of the great camp.

He did not attempt to make an inspection, but was carried through to the main line of the road and started at once for Cornish, N. H.

Nearly 10,000 veterans left this morning and an equal number will get away this afternoon, if the trains can handle them.

About 6,000 had left previously up to this morning. The greater part of the army of the veterans will leave to-morrow, although the War Department is prepared to keep them Saturday night and feed them Sunday morning.

The President's Address.

President Wilson, in addressing the veterans, said:

"Friends and Fellow Citizens: I need not tell you what the battle of Gettysburg meant. These gallant men in blue and gray sit all about us here. Many of them met here upon this ground in grim and deadly struggle. Upon these famous fields and hillsides their comrades died about them. In their presence it were an impertinence to discourse on how the battle went, how it ended, what it signified. But 50 years have gone by since then, and I crave the privilege of speaking to you for a few minutes of what those 50 years have meant.

"What have they meant? They have meant peace and union and vigor and the maturity and might of a great nation. How wholesome and healing the past has been. We have found one another again as brothers and comrades in arms, enemies no longer, generous friends rather, our battle song past, the quarrel forgotten—except that we shall not forget the splendid valor, the manly devotion of the men then arrayed against one another, now grasping hands and smiling into each other's eyes. How complete union has become and how dear to all of us and how unquestioned, how majestic, as State after State has been added to this, our great family of free men.

WILSON SPEAKS TO THRONGS AT GETTYSBURG

President, in Stirring Address, Rejoices in Great Reunited Nation—Lauds Heroes.

"Heirs to Mighty Heritage."

"How handsome the vigor, the maturity, the might of the great nation we love with undivided hearts; how full of large and confident praise that life will be wrought out that will crown a strength with greater justice and with a happy welfare that will touch all alike with deep contentment. We are debtors to those 50 crowded years; they have made us heirs to a mighty heritage.

"But do we deem the nation complete and finished? These venerable men, crowding here to this famous field, have set us a great example of devotion and other sacrifices. They were willing to die that the people might live.

"But their task is done. Their day is turned into evening. They look to us to perfect what they established. Their work is handed on to us to be done in another way, but not in another spirit. Our day is not over; it is upon us in full tide.

"Have affairs paused? Does the nation stand still? Is what the 50 years have wrought since those days of battle finished, rounded out and completed?

Calls Nation Secure.

"Here is a great people—great with every force that has ever beaten in the life blood of mankind. And it is secure. There is no one within its borders, there is no power among the nations of the earth to make it afraid. But has it squared itself with its own great standards set up at its birth, when it made its first noble, naive appeal to the moral judgment of mankind to take notice that a government had now been established which was to serve men, not masters?

"It is secure in everything except satisfaction that its life is right, adjusted to the uttermost to the standards of righeousness and humanity. The days of sacrifice and cleansing are not closed. We have harder things to do than were done in these heroic days of war, because harder to see clearly, requiring more vision, more balance of judgment, a more candid searching of the very springs of right.

"Look around you upon the fields of Gettysburg. Picture the array, the fierce heats and agony of battle, column hurled against column, batteries bellowing to batteries. Valor? Yes, greater no man shall see in war; and self-sacrifice and loss to the uttermost; the high recklessness of exalted devotion which does not count the cost.

The Cost of a Great Nation.

"We are made by these tragic, epic things to know what it costs to make a nation—the blood and sacrifice of multitudes of unknown men, lifted to a greater stature in the view of all generations by knowing no limit to their manly willingness to serve.

"In armies thus marshaled from the ranks of free men you will see, as it were, a nation embattled, the leaders and the led, and may know, if you will, how little except in form its actions differ in days of peace from its actions in days of war.

"May we break camp now and be at ease? Are the forces that fight for the nation dispersed, disbanded, gone to their homes forgetful of the common cause? Are our forces disorganized, without constituted leaders and the might of men consciously united because we contend not with armies, but with principalities and powers and wickedness in high places?

"Are we content to lie still? Does our union mean sympathy, our peace contentment, our maturity self-comprehension and a clear confidence in choosing what we shall do? War fitted us for action, and action never ceases.

Refers to Another Host.

"I have been chosen the leader of the nation. I can not justify the choice by any qualities of my own, but so it has come about, and here I stand. Whom do I command? The ghostly hosts who fought upon these battlefields long ago and are gone? These gallant gentlemen, stricken in years, whose fighting days are over, their glory won? What are the orders for them, and who rallies them?

"I have in mind another host, whom these set free of civil strife in order that they might work out, in days of peace and settled order, the life of a great nation. That host is the people themselves, the great and small, without class, or difference, or kind, or race, or origin, and undivided in interests if we have but the vision to guide and direct them and order their lives aright in what we do.

"Our Constitutions are their articles of enlistment. Their orders of to-day are the laws upon our statute books. What we strive for is their freedom, their rights to lift themselves from day to day and behold the things they have hoped for, and so make way for still better days for those whom they love who are to come after them.

"The recruits are the little children crowding in. The quartermasters' stores are in the mines and forests and fields, in the shops and factories. Every day something must be done to push the campaign forward, and it must be done by plan and with an eye to some great destiny.

"Builded by Gdd's Hands."

"How shall we hold such thought in our hearts and not be moved? I would not have you live even to-day wholly in the past, but would wish to stand with you in the light that streams upon us now out of that great day gone by. Here is a nation that God has builded by our hands. What shall we do with it?

"Who stands ready to act again and always in the spirit of this day of reunion and hope and patriotic fervor? The day of our country's life has but broadened into morning. Do not put uniforms by. Put the harness of the present on. Lift your arms to the great tracks of life yet to be conquered in the interest of righteous peace, of that prosperity which lies in a people's hearts and outlasts all wars and errors of men.

"Come, let us be comrades and soldiers, yet to serve our fellowmen in quiet counsel where the blare of trumpets is neither heard nor heeded and where the things are done which make blessed the nations of the world in peace and righteousness and love."

HOUSE READY TO PROBE LOBBY CHARGES

Rules Committee Virtually Decides to Order Inquiry—Graft Accusations First.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—The House Rules Committee to-day, after hearing statements by Minority Leader Mann and Progressive Leader Murdock, practically decided to order an investigation by the House of the Mulhall lobby charges, to see if members of Congress actually have been corrupted through the lobby activities of the National Association of Manufacturers. A special committee of seven, consisting of four Democrats, two Republicans and one Progressive, will be appointed.

Representative Mann urged the committee to investigate the charges reflecting on the integrity of former members of Congress, particularly former Speaker Cannon.

"Any statement that Uncle Joe Cannon manipulated committees is false," said Mann.

Leader Murdock declared his belief that committees had been manipulated, but said he believed the greatest field for the investigation would be into the activities of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Murdock insisted that the investigation also cover the charge that members of Congress were used to break up strikes.

President Guilty in Athens Bank Failure

ATHENS, July 4.—J. W. Griffin, who was president of the defunct Athens Bank and Trust Company and who was indicted for feloniously "wrecking" the bank, was found guilty by the jury at midnight after being out eight hours, and recommended to the mercy of the court. He will be sentenced by Judge Brand to-morrow. Immediately upon the verdict notice of a motion for a new trial was served.

R. H. McCrary, cashier of the bank, pleaded guilty before Griffin's trial and was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary.

Two Secret Service Men Guard President.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—President Wilson left Washington at 7 a. m. to-day for Gettysburg. His private secretary, Joseph Tumulty; Representative Mitchell Palmer, of Pennsylvania; two secret service men, two White House clerks and a corps of newspaper men accompanied him.

A special car attached to a Pennsylvania Railroad train conveyed the party.

FOURTH QUIETLY OBSERVED; 4 INJURED

Picnics and Athletic Contests Feature Day — Thousands Enjoy Piedmont Lake Bathing.

Four little children, all under 14 years of age, lie in the hospitals of the city, the first victims here in the annual toll of death and injury taken by the celebration of Independence Day.

The injured are:

Walter Pete, 13, 85 Pratt Street.

Charles Garrison, 12, 193 Davis Street.

John Garrison, 9, 193 Davis Street.

O. B. Biggers, 12, 348 Glenn Street.

Walter Pete's hand was painfully lacerated when a toy pistol with which he was playing accidentally exploded.

Charles and John Garrison were seriously injured by the explosion of a toy cannon early in the morning. Eager to celebrate the day, they went out of doors soon after dawn. A few minutes later their mother was startled by their cries of pain. Charles was burned about the face and there is danger that he has lost his sight. Johnny was standing up when the cannon exploded and was hurt about the legs.

Police Guard Doubled.

The first of the accidents occurred last night, when 12-year-old O. B. Biggers was painfully wounded by the discharge of a blank shell held by his playmate, Henry Kalmcannon.

Atlanta police will work double turn to-day in an effort to prevent accidents. The night men who quit at 8 a. m. will work until noon. The evening men who come on at 4 p. m. will come on to-day at noon. The day patrolmen who quit at 4 p. m. will remain on duty until 8 p. m.

Chief Beavers states that this is purely to doubly enforce the law, and that any kind of firecrackers or fireworks in the streets will not be tolerated. Pistols are absolutely forbidden and anyone caught with a firearm, even if it is loaded with blanks, will be arrested for carrying a weapon.

Outings Feature Day.

The Fourth of July is being appropriately celebrated in Atlanta to-day. Many downtown buildings and homes in the residence sections are flying American flags in honor of the nation's birthday anniversary, and thousands of Atlantans are enjoying the day in the parks, at barbecues, athletic contests and other places of amusement.

Most of the stores will be closed for the greater part of the day, that the clerks and employees may do their part in making the day a real holiday.

The eyes of the athletically inclined are turned to Piedmont Park as the place to spend the Fourth. Besides the bathing in the lake a field meet was begun this morning under the direction of Joe Bean, physical director of Marist College. The entries include some of Atlanta's foremost athletes, among them representatives of Marist College, Atlanta Athletic Club and the Fifth Regiment.

Patriotic services, to which representatives of all religious and patriotic bodies have been invited, are being held at St. Philip's Cathedral this morning. The services are in the nature of an expression of thanksgiving and a prayer for the continued prosperity of America. The Daughters of the American Revolution are taking a leading part in the services.

Scotch and Germans Celebrate.

Among the outings will be a big barbecue at the Battle Hill Tuberculosis Sanitarium, when the institution will welcome its former patients. The barbecue will begin at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

One of the big celebrations of the day will be held at the Burns Club grounds this afternoon, when the members of the Atlanta Scottish Association will gather for their second annual picnic. Scotch games and exercises will feature the celebration.

2-Cent Passenger Rates for Arkansas

LITTLE ROCK, July 4.—The two-cent passenger rate went into effect in Arkansas to-day following an agreement reached between counsel for the Railroad Commission and the railroads and based largely on the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court, which upheld the right of States to fix rates.

This ends a long legal battle by the railroads to annul the two-cent rate law enacted seven years ago.

RURAL CARRIERS HAVE WARM TILT OVER MEMBERSHIP DUES

L. D. King, of Covington, president of the State Rural Carriers' Association.

He apparently is not greatly worried by the hot fight over payment of dues.

Controversy Precipitated in State Convention by Ruling on Payments in Advance.

A warm controversy was precipitated into the tenth annual convention of the Rural Letter Carriers' Association of Georgia, in session at the Kimball House, when the question of membership termination came up.

Virtually every carrier paid his dues Friday morning, a long recess having been taken for the purpose. Receipts given out covered the year ending with the present convention, but a large and determined number of carriers insisted they should cover a year from July 4, the date of payment. It is generally understood the constitution and by-laws committee will submit a ruling that dues paid are to be considered as in advance, instead of for the preceding year, as at present. The submission of this report was made Friday afternoon.

"There is going to be one more hot fight about it, and no one knows how it will end," said President L. D. King.

P. C. Coker, the first rural route man in Fulton County, and an ex-president of the District and State Associations, will attempt the organization of a ladies' auxiliary, which he says will be the first in America.

Mayor Woodward made the welcoming address Friday morning. He told the carriers if they were taken before Judge Broyles to be sure to do something bad enough to warrant a sentence of more than 29 days, so he could pardon them. Attorney Paul L. Lindsay, of Atlanta, formerly a rural route man and president of the National Association, made a felicitous talk. Addresses also were made by Clark Howell and Congressman Thomas W. Hardwick.

The convention will be in session through Saturday.

NEW TESTIMONY LAYS CRIME TO CONLEY

Frank Defense Locates Witness Who Points to the Negro Sweeper as Slayer.

A new witness, said to have the most damaging evidence yet produced against Jim Conley, the negro sweeper in the National Pencil factory, entered the Phagan case Thursday and made an affidavit, the contents fo which are carefully guarded by attorneys for Leo M. Frank, charged with causing the death of the factory girl.

The identity of the witness is as much a secret as the exact nature of his testimony. It was learned, though, that the affidavit was made in the law office of Joseph Leavitt in the Grant Building and was witnessed by Mr. Leavitt's stenographer.

It is said the testimony of this man connects Conley more directly with the crime than any other statement or affidavit yet procured by the defense. The witness is understood to have seen Conley on the afternoon of the crime and to have heard him make remarks in his drunken condition which were extremely incriminating.

Conley Faces Arrest.

The new affidavit is interpreted to mean that a warrant soon will be sworn out through a magistrate's court for the arrest of Conley. William M. Smith, attorney for Conley, said several days ago that if his client was made a defendant in the case he would retaliate upon the lawyers for Frank by issuing subpenas duces tecum, commanding them to appear in court with all the important statements and affidavits which they have obtained from witnesses for their side of the case.

Such a move would be giving the attorneys for Frank a little of their own medicine, as Attorney Rosser created a sensation a week ago by issuing subpenas duces tecum for Solicitor Dorsey, Chief Beavers, Chief Lanford, Pinkerton Detective Harry Scott and all the city detectives who had worked on the Phagan mystery.

They were commanded to bring into court all affidavits and statements of Jim Conley, Newt Lee, W. M. Matthews, Monteen Stover and other vital witnesses for the State.

Branded as "Trick."

Solicitor Dorsey and Attorney Frank A. Hooper, who is associated with Mr. Dorsey in the prosecution, at once branded the move as a thin trick for the purpose of discrediting the State's witnesses. The sworn statements would be used, they said, to compare with the testimony of the State's witnesses when on the stand.

If there were the slightest deviation through a natural lapse of memory or through trifling inaccuracy, the prosecution asserted, the defense would seek to take advantage of this to impeach the witnesses' testimony.

Dine Minus Coats In Philly Hotels

PHILADELPHIA, July 4.—(Tip to Atlanta hotel proprietors from Georgian correspondent):

In the men's grillroom of the Bellevue-Stratford fifteen tables were occupied by parties of lawyers, business men, politicians, etc. Every man had his coat off.

As soon as a guest entered, a waiter stepped forward and said:

"Coat, sir?"

The waiter took it, hung it on a hook near the guest, and served luncheon. And there is no tip for coat-hanging.

"Quite the regular thing, sir," said head waiters in all the big hotels. "Gentlemen dining alone always take their coats off. Don't they do it in Atlanta, sir?"

Many persons have good tenants moving into their property to-day merely because yesterday they had an ad in The Georgian's For Rent Columns. Phone Main 8000 or Atlanta 8000.

ATLANTA BABIES NEED YOUR MITE

Mothers' Congress to Put Bottles in Stores for Contributions to Milk Fund.

Every Atlantan willing to spare a few cents to save a baby life will be given an opportunity Monday to contribute to the "Milk for Poor Babies" fund started by the Atlanta Mothers' Congress, under the direction of Mrs. John Rowlett, of 186 East Pine Street.

Mrs. Rowlett said Friday morning that Monday morning milk bottles would be placed in every downtown store for the receipt of contributions. The bottles will be in conspicuous places in the store.

You may drop into the bottles a nickel or a dime or a quarter; or any amount you feel like giving. A subscription of any size will be welcome and will be appreciated by the good women who are trying to give the poor babies of Atlanta a chance to live through the summer. Every nickel donated will help in the fight for the babies.

The Mothers' Congress has decided to put the bottles in stores because responses to their appeal for a quart of milk a day have not been generous enough to take care of all the babies that require milk. The demand almost doubles the supply.

Already 38 children have been placed on the lists.

Besides the twenty quarts a day subscribed by William Randolph Hearst, there have been but nine people in Atlanta who have shown enough interest. Seven of these subscriptions provide for a quart of milk each a day and two for pints.

SON WOULD PROBE DEATH OF FATHER

Coroner Orders Another Autopsy Before Funeral of Tampa Veteran With Girl-Wife.

TAMPA, July 4.—Samuel R. Payne's funeral was held here over a body from which the stomach had been taken an hour before the preacher called the services to order.

Payne died suddenly Tuesday at noon. He left a wife 23 years old. He was 75.

Almon Payne, of Pensacola, son of the dead man, consulted with Coroner Jackson and the latter ordered an autopsy. The doctors have not finished the examination of the stomach.

Payne, who was a Union veteran, left a small lestate. He had drawn a pension of $30 a month.

"Pluck Out Tonsil," Doctor's New Method

CHICAGO, July 4.—Instead of cutting out a tonsil, Dr. Harold Foster, of New York, announced to-day that he could pluck, and has plucked, out a diseased tonsil "as a man would pluck a cherry."

Only long fingers and a firm grip are needed, he says.

This remarkable declaration was made at the meeting of the American Homeopathic Society.

HEAT IS BROKEN BUT FOR SHORT TIME ONLY

Light Showers Give Little Surcease to Throngs Trying to Keep Cool in Parks.

Light showers falling shortly after 2 o'clock Friday afternoon brought temporary relief to the sweltering city. The mercury, fanned by cooling breezes, dropped considerably. However, the surcease was of but short duration. Before an hour had elapsed the sun reappeared and it was hot again.

At noon the thermometer registered 92 degrees, and the Weather Bureau announced it probably would rise above 93, and go possibly to 94. At 2 o'clock, however, the wind and clouds, which obscured the sunlight, caused a drop of about 5 degrees.

Atlanta received the full force of the heat wave which swept over the country Friday, in marked contrast to the last three weeks, when the maximum heat marks in the city were from 2 to 10 degrees lower than elsewhere. Had it not been for the clouds which gathered at 2 o'clock the day would have been unusually oppressive, in view of the high humidity, and many prostrations might have resulted.

THOUSANDS FLEE FROM HEAT TO COOL PARKS

Lake at Piedmont Gives Relief to Sweltering Throngs—Grant Is Crowded.

Thousands of pleasure seekers Friday splashed about in the waters of Piedmont Lake or sought refuge from the hottest Fourth of July sun in years in the shady drives of the various parks.

Piedmont Park probably drew the greatest crowds of people. They came in droves. Families brought their lunch baskets with them and made a day of it. It was too hot for the strenuous exertion of an old-time celebration, but in spite of the torridity all apeared to enjoy the day of rest and to find some relief in the fact that the celebration was not as noisy as in some years.

Many of the children found their greatest enjoyment at Grant Park about the Zoo, where they stod for hours watching tahe tigers, lions and monkeys.

In all the parks there were scores of picnic parties. The occasional sputter of the small firecracker was heard, and every now and then some one would set off a deafening giant cracker, but most of this was confined to the downtown districts where the "newsies" occupied their spare time in shattering the nerves of the pedestrians.

The golf courses, tennis courts and lakes of the Capital City and East Lake Country Clubs were crowded all days, especially in the afternoon.

Cobb Suspect Jailed Here to Escape Mob

Fearing an attempt at lynching, Cobb County authorities brought Cato Wilson, a 25-year-old negro, to Atlanta Friday morning. He was put in the Fulton County jail.

The negro is accused of attacking the daughter of a Cobb County farmer.

ATLANTA-MADE GOODS EXHIBIT IS CERTAIN

Manufacturers in Meeting Decide to Organize and Set Up Permanent Display.

Atlanta manufacturers will establish in a downtown building an elaborate permanent display of articles made at home.

Four sites are offered, no one of them more than five minutes' walk from Five Points.

Twenty-three of the 100 manufacturers who gathered for a banquet at Hotel Ansley Thursday night pledged themselves to take space in the exhibit hall.

Within four days an Atlanta manufacturers' association will be organized, to handle the exhibit and to wrestle with problems of interest to factory men. Within ten days, one of the four offers of a building will be accepted. Whether the building will be leased, bought or leased with privilege of purchase, is to be worked out.

It was Mr. Morgan who laid the plan before the gathering, after a year's study and preparation. Necessary to the success of the plan is a pledged revenue of $22,500 a year for five years, he said.

Factories Make Realty Values.

"Atlanta should have four times the payroll it now has," he asserted. "The maintenance of real estate values and the future growth of Atlanta absolutely depend upon the growth of manufacturing. We have 600 manufacturing plants in the city now. I doubt if we need more. My idea is that we should build those we have into giant industrial establishments. Some people deny this, but I want to say that Atlanta-made goods can be sold right in Atlanta. it only is necessary to let the people know what we have here."

Bolling H. Jones told the other manufacturers that Evansville, Ind., established such a display, and found that goods could be sold through it at a selling cost of 3 per cent.

"This convinced me," said Mr. Jones. "Did any one here ever sell goods at a cost of 3 per cent?"

C. S. Dobbs made a forceful talk on the advertising value of the exhibit. "The man who makes good products and doesn't tell about it," he said, "is like the man who winks at a girl in the dark—he knows all about it, but she doesn't. Besides, it doesn't get him anywhere."

Adair Is Emphatic.

Forrest Adair was emphatic in his approval.

"I may not be orthodox," he said, "but there is one subject on which I am rabid. That is the talk about the smoke nuisance. I wish to goodness some one would turn 500 more smokestacks loose on us. We need factories.

"But the public does not know about those we have. I met a bank director to-day who did not know that most of the railroad cars rolling out of here roll on wheels made in Atlanta—and another who thought that Mr. Orr had his shoes made in Boston, and simply jobbed them here. The public must have things rubbed in before it remember."

J. K. Orr, J. P. Stevens and others voiced their approval.

On the call for pledges to take space in the exhbiit hall, the following manufacturers "signed up:"

J. P. Stevens Manufacturing Company, J. K. Orr Shoe Company, F. E. Block Company, Atlanta Stove Works, Foote & Davies Company, L. & L. Manufacturing Company, Byrd Printing Company, Nunnally & McCrea Manufacturing Company, A. M. Robinson Company, Southern Engraving Company, Atlanta Paper Company, Burnett, Bell & Klapper Furniture Company, Van Winkle Motor Truck Company, Norris, Inc., White Provision Company, Empire Cotton Oil Company, Mitchell Manufacturing Company, Atlanta Gas Light Company, All-Star Manufacturing Company, Southern Spring Bed Company and the Southern Saw and Machine Works.

World Gold Supply Affected by Strike

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

JOHANNESBURG, AFRICA, July 4.—The world's gold supply is being seriously affected by the strike in the Rand. A large percentage of the world's supply of gold comes from this district and leaders of the various unions are trying to shut it off completely.

Serious rioting occurred to-day. Fifty soldiers and three times that number of strikers were hurt in the clashes.

Government Bonds Sell Under Par

NEW YORK, July 4.—A very unusual situation has developed in the market for United States bonds. Within the last few days, for the first time since the 2 per cent bonds which become payable in 1930 have been issued, they have sold on the Stock Exchange at less than par.

This condition is a direct result of the proposal in the currency bill that the bonds of the United States be deprived of their use by national banks to secure circulation.

Gulf Stream Speeds Up; Hurries Steamer

BOSTON, July 4.—Carried along at great speed by an unusually swift current in the Golf Stream, the steamer Sosua, from Costa Rica, reached here a day ahead of time.

Captain Bjonnes said that the waters of the Stream were strangely active, and the steamer began moving so rapidly that the engines were slowed down to half speed. Even after that the Sosua logged off the miles at an amazing rate.

Accused Slayer Kills Himself in His Cell

ANNISTON, July 4.—G. H. Bailey, a prominent merchant, charged with the murder of C. W. Saunders here about two weeks ago, committed suicide in the county jail by cutting his throat. It is thought that he used a safety razor blade, as other prisoners in the jail had such blades.

A relative says that Bailey was despondent after his preliminary trial, when he was refused bail. His body was turned over to Coroner Murphy to be prepared for burial. He leaves a wife and several children.

SLATON DOUBTS RIGHT TO PAY TEACHERS

Governor Asks Opinion on Amendment Purporting to Add Power in Expenditures.

Governor Slaton has grave doubts whether the recently ratified constitutional amendment purporting to increase the Executive's borrowing power has not really put a limitation upon his powers rather than extended them.

So serious are these doubts in the Governor's mind that he has referred the matter to the Attorney General for an opinion, and will not undertake to do anything in relieving the present situation with respect to paying the common-schoolteachers until his mind has been cleared up by that official.

If the amendment has fully authorized the Governor to proceed to the relief of the teachers, unquestionably he will give the matter that direction, but the peculiar wording of the amendment, coupled with the statutes involved, has given rise to perplexing doubts in the Executive mind as to just exactly what the law does contemplate, and he hesitates to attempt a loan for any purpose whatever until he knows exactly what terms and conditions a loan under the amendment would impose, not only upon the State, but upon the source of the loan.

Anxious to Pay Teachers.

Governor Slaton is anxious to see the school teachers paid. Of that there is no doubt. But the uncertainty in his mind as to the law in the case, as well as the marked stringency of the money market at this time, has prompted him to make haste slowly.

If it might be so arranged the Governor prefers that such loan or loans as he may contract be made with Georgia bankers and financiers. If the matter can not take this direction, however, the Governor will be forced to go East for such funds as he needs, and he has reason to suspect that it will be rather expensive borrowing at this time.

Naturally, the Governor does not wish to involve the State in a transaction calling for an abnormal expense item by way of interest.

The Governor wishes to relieve the present pressing necessities of the common-school teachers, and in addition to that he hopes to secure from the present General Assembly early legislation of a character calculated to avoid delaying the payment of the teachers in the future.

Legislature to Co-operate.

There is a marked disposition in the Legislature, moreover, to co-operate cordially with the Governor in this matter.

During the present three-day recess of the House and the Senate the Governor will address his attention almost exclusively to the problem of financing the teachers in their present necessities and planning for their permanent relief.

When the Legislature meets again Monday it is likely that the Governor will put himself immediately in touch with that body, to the end that the present troublesome status of affairs may be worked out legally, equitably and speedily.

BABY, 7 MONTHS OLD, HAPPY PLAYING FIDDLE

Child's unusual love of music discovered entirely through accident.

June Howard Stollard, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Stollard, "The Fiddlin' Baby."

Neighborhood attraction is not content unless musical instrument is within easy reach.

Hail the fiddling baby!

Seven months old, and never happy unless he is picking at a violin.

Feed him milk and mush and he is apt to be as cross as a bear; stick a violin between his fat feet and fingers and he will immediately begin picking at the strings, a smile of cherubic joy will wrinkle his plump face—and he is in the seventh heaven of delight.

Atlanta's latest prodigy is June Howard Stollard, the only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Stollard, of 44 East Main Street, and he bids fair to develop into another Mischa Elman.

But it was not until he was five months old and crawling over everything in the house that the love of music that possessed the little soul became known, and then only through accident. One morning the baby crawled into a closet, and, discovering an old violin that had belonged to Mrs. Stoddard's father, calmly took possession of it and began giving an impromptu concert. He had the violin cuddled up between his toes and fingers and was picking at the strings with both feet and hands. And out of the medley of sounds emitted by the protesting violin came now and then notes of surprising clearness.

Since then open season has been declared on violins in the Stollard household. The fiddling baby has become a neighborhood attraction. Like all geniuses, the child is content to sit and fiddle all day long, whether he has an audience or not. He has gained confidence with experience, and now he picks and pecks at the violin strings for dear life. The child puts his whole heart into his fiddling and spurns tempting offers of milk while he is playing. He quits only when he is tired, and sometimes he does not get tired for hours at a time. His mother and father are even now planning his musical education.

POSSE IN BATTLE WITH BANDITS

One of Solomon Brothers Killed and Another Probably Fatally Wounded.

DOUGLAS, July 4.—Andrew Solomon is dead and Randall Solomon, his brother, to-day is in a hospital here probably fatally wounded, as the result of a battle between the Solomon train bandits and a posse headed by Sheriff Gillis at the Roundabout Swamp, near Kirkland.

The Solomon gang had been hunted by officers of Coffee and Ware Counties and detectives of the Atlantic Coast Line for two weeks for a series of daring freight train and other robberies in this section. They were trailed to the Roundabout Swamp, where they took refuge in the fastnesses where men and dogs could not trail them. There they remained until Thursday afternoon.

When Sheriff Gillis and his posse surrounded the bandits, a pitched battle ensued in which Andrew and Randall Solomon were shot. None of the Sheriff's posse was wounded. A relief party went from here to Kirkland to bring in the dead and wounded.

Postal Employees Have Half-Holiday

Atlanta postal employees had a half-holiday Friday. All the offices closed at 1 o'clock and the deliveries of mail were curtailed. One delivery was made to the residential section and two in the business section in the morning. There were no deliveries in the afternoon.

The general delivery and the stamp windows closed promptly at noon.

'Phone Girls Will Open Summer Camp With Out-door Dance

With an informal reception and a dance in an open-air pavilion the girls of the Southern Bell Telephone Company, 500 in number, will dedicate their summer playground, "Camp Wyanoke," at 8 o'clock Friday night. The camp covers seven acres of wooded hillside on the plantation of B. D. Jackson, and is equipped with electric lights, sewer facilities and running hot and cold water.

The camp was planned by Miss Cathryn C. Tatum, chief of the stenographic bureau of the telephone company, assisted by the head operators. The telephone company donated the equipment, costing over $1,000. Practically every one of the 500 girls who work as operators, stenographers and bookkeepers will spend their vacation there, the cost being only 50 cents a day. The camp will be open till late in September or early October.

FLOOD OF SPEED FIEND CHARGES STIRS CHIEF

Beavers Posts Plain Clothes Men to Nab Drivers Who Endanger Children's Lives.

Following the excitement caused by the accident on Mills Street Wednesday afternoon when little Eva Kilpatrick was run down by a speeding automobile and left to her fate, Chief Beavers is receiving complaints of speeding autoists from all parts of the city.

The strongest complaints have come from merchants and residents along Ponce DeLeon Avenue and Marietta Street. Autoists have turned Marietta Street into a speedway, the Chief is told, and run their cars at a terrific rate of speed at all hours of the day and night. Several accidents narrowly have been averted, and pedestrians who are forced to cross Marietta Street are in constant danger.

Out on Ponce DeLeon Avenue conditions, according to complaints, are as bad as they are on Marietta Street. At night, residents of the street claim, the automobilists who use the street throw their mufflers wide open and sleep is impossible.

Children Kept From Street.

Little children living on Ponce DeLeon Avenue have been forbidden by their parents to cross the street unless their elders are with them, so dangerous and reckless have the automobile drivers become.

One complaint made to the chief declared that an 8-year-old girl narrowly escaped with her life only a few days ago. The driver made no attempt to turn his machine or avoid running over the child, and the complaint declares that as he flew past he cursed the little girl for getting in the road.

Chief Beavers, following the receipt of the complaints, started a vigorous campaign that it is hoped will end in the arrest and punishment of the speeding autoists. Every policeman on the force has been instructed to watch carefully for speeders, and also ordered to enforce all the automobile regulations strictly.

Police Put on Watch.

Plainclothes men will be sent to the various portions of the city that have become known as haunts of the speed maniac, and nothing will be left undone to break up the practice that has made the streets of Atlanta a source of danger to all who venture upon them.

Chief Beavers also has started a thorough inquiry into the accident which nearly cost Eva Kilpatrick her life, and if the autoist who ran down the little girl and then fled is captured, an example will be made of him. The investigation has been placed in the hands of Captain Poole, and a squad of men have been detailed to act under his orders. Every person in the neighborhood of the accident who could have seen the car will be questioned.

Columbus Draws Law To Curb Autoists.

COLUMBUS, July 4.—An ordiannce window of Luden & Bates' piano store the Columbus City Council to force all automobile drivers to bring their cars to a standstill when approaching a street car which has stopped. The ordinance also provides that no one who operates a motorcycle shall allow anyone else to ride on the machine with them, nor can they carry packages that would tend to obstruct their view.

Anniston Wars on Speeders.

GADSDEN, ALA., July 4.—Following an order issued by Mayor Holcomb yesterday, the police last night arrested two automobile drivers, charging them with exceeding the speed limit. They will be given a hearing in Police Court Monday. The Mayor told the police to arrest everyone driving fast, regardless of his station in life.

Contestants Drive and Ride Pretty Shetland Prizes in Parade as Guests of Hearst Papers.

Boys and girls in The Georgian and American pony contests, their parents, their relatives and their friends are at Grant Park celebrating the Fourth as the guests of the Hearst papers.

Promptly at 10 o'clock nine of the ponies which are to be awarded as prizes in the contest started in parade formation from The Georgian and American offices in Alabama Street.

It was a pretty sight. The buggies were swathed in flags, and the ponies, sleek and shining, proudly, wore tiny flags on all parts of their harnesses. Five of the ponies were hitched to buggies; the others were saddled.

Nine of the most eager contestants were chosen to drive and ride the ponies to the park, but with attendants close at hand to prevent any mishap, for the Shetlands are spirited. While gentle, still they are not getting the work they should and are inclined to be lively.

At the park every contestant is being given a ride or a drive. Lemonade and other refreshments are being served. Dan Carey, superintendent of parks, said The Georgian's guests could "own the park" for the afternoon, and they took him at his word.

Men from The Georgian and American offices were delegated to look after the children, so that parents who let them go unattended need have no worry as to their safety.

STARK BITTERLY ARRAIGNED BY SUFFRAGIST

Mrs. McLendon Scores Lawmaker for Opposition—Fight for Senate Chamber Renewed.

Characterizing Senator W. W. Stark as a man of small mental caliber, Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, president of the Georgia Woman's Suffrage Association, said Frdiay the suffragists would renew the fight for the use of the Senate chamber during their State convention.

When Senator Stark ascertained the suffragists intended to enlighten the Senators on the question of votes for women, and then moved the tabling of a resolution to grant them the use of the Senate chamber on the nights of July 9 and 10, he provoked the ire of Mrs. McLendon.

Mrs. McLendon declared the suffragists of Atlanta and Georgia were indignant. She believed that common courtesy should have impelled the Senators to willingly grant them the use of the Senate chamber, irrespective of the Senators' views on suffrage.

She Calls Condition "Pitiful."

"It is pitiful that women have to beg the men for such things as that," she said.

During a brief recess Mrs. McLendon asked Senator Stark why he opposed granting the use of the Senate chamber to the suffragists, and he replied it was because the Saviour did not call a woman as one of His disciples.

"The answer seemed so absurd, so little to the point," she asserted.

"I asked him if he didn't know that the women of Georgia helped to build that State House, and that we had as much right there as anybody else. Governor Brown let four cowboys from Washington ride horses up the steps, yet the women of Georgia can not meet there."

Plan to Renew Fight.

"We are going to renew the fight for the use of the Senate chamber," Mrs. McLendon continued.

"Mr. John Y. Smith said he would reopen the question for us next Monday. Mr. Blackburn said he would, too. Mr. Blackburn is not in favor of woman suffrage, but his personal belief has nothing to do with this question. No, I don't think we'll get the use of the Senate chamber, but we'll show the smallness of the average Georgia legislator. Just because they are elected by the men people they try to keep the women down. They are afraid the women might rise against them, so they keep their heels on the women's necks."

Mrs. J. K. Ottley, a suffragist sympathizer, said she had no opinion regarding Senator Stark or the reasons he advanced for opposing suffrage, but she was surprised at the Senate's refusal to allow the women to meet there.

Mrs. Ottley Is Surprised.

"I should think they would be very glad to extend the use of the Senate chamber to any association which was neither incendiary nor objectionable," she said, "and, judging by the headway made in other States, the suffragist associations are neither incendiary nor objectionable.

"I am surprised that they should have denied the use of the Senate chamber to any group of respectable Georgia women seeking something they believed to be for the State's good."

Mrs. Ottley said she believed woman's suffrage would come, but she would probably never make an effort to bring it.

Militants Burn Large Warehouse.

BIRMINGHAM, ENGLAND, July 4. Militant suffragettes burned a big warehouse here to-day, doing $25,000 damage. On a nearby building they posted a placard saying:

"Fires will never cease until women vote."

Bill to Reimburse Dairymen Drafted

A cattle bill, providing for the reimbursing of the dairymen for cows killed by order of the Health Department, will be introduced by Representative R. Frank Smith, of DeKalb County, at the request of the Georgia Dairymen's Association, which has been agitating the matter for years.

It provides that the owner shall be reimbursed in the value of the animal killed as shown upon the tax books.

3 Drowned as Engine Topples Into River

MEMPHIS, July 4.—A switch engine on the Illinois Central to-day toppled off a bridge over a small river near Darnell, Miss.

Three men were drowned.

LITTLE GIRL IS A HOTEL VETERAN; SHE HAS NEVER MADE MUD PIES

Demure Miss at the Majestic Can Order Dinner Like a Real Epicure.

Think of it! Tobe 7 years old and not know what a mud pie looks like.

That is little Miss Christine Lewis, demure, pretty, petite daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Lewis, who has spent all of her blissful seven years in a hotel and wouldn't live anywhere else even if her parents insisted.

Miss Christine is at the Majestic at present. She can order a dinner as well as her mother, and she orders the porters and bellmen around with the nonchalance of a legislator. From the time she awakes in the morning and takes here seat in the dining room at 9 o'clock until she is tucked in bed at 8, after bidding guests on the veranda good-night, she is the sunshine of the hotel.

Miss Christine is a veteran.

"Waiter," she beckons at the table, "I don't care for consomme to-night. You may bring me chicken, if you have it, and veg'tables. And I want ice cream. And it's hot in here; I wish you'd start the 'lectric fan. Please don't forget the ice cream."

Mud pies are unknown to her. Miss Christine's frocks know not the stain of the red Georgia soil. In the afternoon, instead of playing in the street as most children do, she goes to a picture show. And there she sits up straight and watches the romances unreel. It is more fun, says Miss Christine, than playing in the hot sun.

Miss Christine Lewis, who has spent all of her seven years in hotels.

Doesn't want to live in a residence ever, says petitie miss, who is the pet of the Majestic's guests.

Likes picture shows better than romping, because romping soils her dresses.

GRIFFIN, July 4.—The Confederate veterans of Spalding County have determined to erect a monument to the memory of the late John McIntosh Kell, famous Confederate naval officer on the Alabama. He was a native of this county.

Dr. Wood Will Preach At First Christian

Dr. John S. Wood, secretary of the Christian Benevolent Association, will occupy the pulpit of the First Christian Church next Sunday morning and evening, in place of the regular pastor, Rev. L. O. Bricker.

At the Sunday school services Paul Reese, former president of the Ad Men's Club and for several years superintendent of the Trinity Methodist Church Sunday school, will teach Dr Bricker's Bible class.

FEVER EPIDEMIC SURE TO COME

We have already this season experienced the hottest weather known in eleven years. Look out for all kinds of fever during the next few months.

Dr. Verdier's Liver Ease is the very latest discovery in medicine to take the place of calomel. Remember that calomel is a poison, made of a heavy powdered metal that heats and inflames the tissues all through your entire body. It is never eliminated from the system—it's too heavy. It will damage you and make you prematurely old.

Dr. Verdier's Liver Ease taken at the first sign of any bad feeling will ward off fever in grown-ups, diarrhoea in children and insure perfect health. You can't afford to neglect yourself when you can get a safe remedy at so small a cost.

Fifty cents for a large bottle at any drug store in Atlanta, fully guaranteed or money back. Ask for Liver Ease in a pink package.

You will certainly not be out any more money if not cured. Consultation and Examination are Free for the next thirty days.

If I decide that your condition will not yield readily to my treatment, I will be honest with you and tell you so, and not accept your money under a promise of a cure.

KIDNEY, BLADDER AND URINARY TROUBLE, STRICTURE, VARICOCELE, HYDROCELE, NERVOUS DEBILITY, RUPTURE, ULCERS AND SKIN DISEASES, CONTAGIOUS BLOOD POISON

WAVES U. S. FLAG IN CANADA AND STARTS RIOT

Overpatriotic American Flaunts Emblem in Regiment's Face and Is Beaten Up.

WINNIPEG, July 4.—An overpatriotic American started a small-sized riot on Main Street here to-day by waving an American flag in the face of the Tenth Canadian Regiment as they were returning home from camp. In the fight that followed, soldiers and civilians alike participated.

The American was roughly handled and the flag tossed into the street and trampled on by the marching soldiers. Before the police could interfere several who took part in the fight received black eyes and cuts on the face.

The incident happened when the streets were crowded with friends of the returning soldiers. The young American, who is employed in a local restaurant, as he waved the flag at the soldiers shouted, "Hurrah for the American Eagle!"

Colonel J. B. Mitchell, in command of the regiment, ordered one of his men to quiet the American and tell him to put the flag down. As the soldier sprang forward to obey, several civilians closed in on the American and a fight commenced, which finally was quelled by the police.

No arrests were made. In all probability the matter will be taken up with the American Consul General.

U. S. Is Paying More For Seamen's Food

WASHINGTON, July 4.—The increasing cost of living is demonstrated in contracts for feeding the officers and men of the Revenue Cutter Service during the fiscal year beginning July 1.

New York City shows the greatest increase. It will cost $.436 a day to feed each sailor there this year as against $.38 last year. Baltimore and Boston are the only cities showing decreases, the cost in Baltimore dropping from $.41 to $.401, and in Boston from $.387 to $.383.

Electric Fan Demand Swamps Local Shops

The hot weather of the past several days has developed an electric fan famine. The demand has so increased that orders can not be filled. Electrical concerns have long waiting lists to be filled as soon as new shipments arrive.

More than 1,000 fans have been rented and sold within the last few days by one concern.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

Keith Vaudeville at Forsyth.

Edward Abeles, the distinguished comedy actor, who has created a number of important leading roles with great plays, is making himself a real favorite with the patrons of the Forsyth this week, in the presentation of his excellent playlet, called "He Tried To Be Nice." Miss Charlotte Lander gives valuable assistance to the star in the act and it has won applause that made extra curtain calls at every performance. The bill is one of exceptional quality and real interest. There are acts that are of a keen and drawing power and collectively make up a program that is full of good things.

Matinee and night performances of Edison's talking pictures will be continued Friday and Saturday at the Grand. The program is new—different from the first part of the week, and just as interesting. Interest in the pictures has grown steadily. The Edison novelty has won on pure merit and the big Grand is being well filled at every performance.

Extra Matinee at Bijou To-day.

The pleasing impression made by "A Trip to Paris" on Monday at the Bijou has brought crowded houses to the theater all week. The warm weather has not affected the attendance, and Bijou patrons have shown their appreciation by the generous applause and frequent curtain calls. "A Trip to Paris" is one of the best tabloids that has been offered. Extra matinee to-day at 2:30.

Stabs Son-in-Law In Fight Over Wife

DAHLONEGA, July 4.—When William Stover, of Auraria, started a row with Lon Jett, Gus Stover interfered and was seriously stabbed by Jett. Gus Stover is a son of William Stover and a son-in-law of Jett. Remarks that the elder Stover made about Jett's daughter, Gus Stover's wife, started the difficulty.

Sheriff T. M. Ray was notified and reached Jett's home shortly afterward. He was arrested and placed in jail. Gus Stove is in a serious condition.

Court Held on 4th; First in 3 Decades

For the first time in 30 years the Fulton Superior Court was in session July 4.

A phase of the Guarantee Bank and Trust Company case was being argued, and Judge John T. Pendleton declined to adjourn court until it was completed.

Exchange to Fight Cotton Future Tax

NEW YORK, July 4.—A formal protest by the Cotton Exchange will probably be made against the amendment to the tariff bill providing for taxing sales of cotton futures one-tenth of a cent a pound.

Cotton brokers and spinning interests declared that the taxation of one-tenth of a cent a pound on sales of futures would drive the market for cotton to Liverpool, where there are no such restrictions.

Poison Kills Wife of Greensboro's Mayor

GREENSBORO, July 4.—Mrs. Mary Lizzie Branch, wife of Mayor L. Henry Branch, died to-day, after an illness of two days, of blood poisoning. She was 43 years old and is survived by her husband, a young daughter, Rachel, and several brothers and sisters.

Interment will be in Greensboro cemetery.

PRINCE SAYS KIN WON'T SLIGHT U. S. BRIDE

Austrian Noble Also Denies King Blocks His Marriage to San Francisco Girl.

LOS ANGELES, July 4.—"Miss Marie Freeze is the equal of any princess of Austria, and as my wife she will be received at the imperial court beyond any question," declared Prince Stanislaus Sulkowski, of Austria, in reply to a report that lack of royal consent was delaying his marriage to the Los Angeles girl.

"It is not true that Countess Szechenyi, who was Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, was not received at court or was coldly treated by the nobility of Austria-Hungary," he added.

Prince Sulkowski said he awaited the consent of the ministry of war to the marriage, a consent made necessary by the fact that he is an officer in the Second Dragoons.

Prince Sulkowski insists, in spite of reports of Gladys Vanderbilt's unhappy experiences, that there will not be the slightest disposition on the part of the nobility of his country to turn a cold shoulder to Miss Freeze when he takes her to Vienna as his bride.

Thieves Ambushed By Elkin Drug Clerk

Through the vigilance of R. W. McRoberts, an Elkin Drug Company clerk, six negro thieves, who, for some months past, have caused annoyance and considerable loss to the company, were arrested and bound over on $200 bond each.

Candied cherries, perfume and drugs were the principal things taken, but the negroes became more bold and carried out bottles of alcohol in the bottom of the trash cans.

McRoberts and three others secreted themselves in the basement and captured the negroes.

LONGSTREET'S WIDOW TELLS OF REUNION

Describes Meeting Sharpshooter Detailed to Kill Husband, Whom General Captured.

By HELEN D. LONGSTREET.

GETTYSBURG, July 4.—The tents of America's loyalty are pitched today on the world's greatest battlefield. Gettysburg's bugles echo today over a reunited nation.

Standing on the borderland of eternity, with its shadows touching their bent forms and silvered heads, these last survivors of an army the like of which the world shall see no more have gathered here, not Northern, not Southern, but all American, bridging the bloody rift of the sixties with fraternal unity more ancient than sectionalism, more lasting than hate.

To the youth of this nation the inspirational value of this day on Gettysburg's field will outweigh the sordid accumulations of all the Rockefellers the world will ever produce.

"Where did you lose your arm?" I asked of one melancholy-faced soldier in blue, who walked a little lamely notwithstanding his brave efforts.

Detailed to Kill General.

"After the battle of Chickamauga," he said, "I was one of twenty sharpshooters detailed to kill Longstreet. He captured us all and I lost my right arm. Did you ever see Longstreet?" he inquired pathetically. "How sorry I am that he did not live to be here."

Gazing over seas of Old Glory, miles of which stream from the houses and dot the hillsides, swathing the trees and bridging the streets, until a loyal canopy of red, white and blue almost conceals the blue heavens above.

"Oh, isn't it glorious!" I said to a veteran in gray. "How could you look on the old flag and know its meaning and fire on it?"

The veteran in gray said, brokenly, as he looked with me upon the shining colors of our country's standard:

"That's My Flag Forever."

"I didn't stop to think so much about what we were fighting about; my land and my people called to me. They were in trouble; it was about the same as if it had been my mother. Right or wrong, I would rush to her rescue."

"But now you are glad," I said, "glad that you didn't win; glad that the American Union lives."

He bared his head and, pointing to the glorious sweep of color, said reverently:

"That is my flag, the flag of my fathers, the flag of my country, my children's flag forever. God keep it in the skies. It means strength and progress and peace that will endure. It blazed the only road to national happiness and greatness."

A melancholy-eyed veteran in worn gray, gazing wistfully across Cemetery Ridge, had gone back to the daring days of the long past. Lost to the present, oblivious of surroundings, he said sadly:

Mourns Over Pickett's Charge.

"If Pickett hadn't made that charge we stood a good chance of whipping the Yankees."

"But," I said, "it is best for us all that you didn't whip them; and they are no longer Yankees, just Americans; and, looking toward the East, shoulder to shoulder, heart beating close to heart, our country's mighty destiny is our common hope and glory."

"I know all that," he said, "but I just sometimes can't help feeling powerful sad when I think of them brave boys who had to die out there for nothing."

"Oh," I replied, "nobody ever dies for nothing who dies for right."

On this field of tearful memories a sea of brown tents stretching miles in all directions, it is learned that no provision whatever has been made for the participation in this greatest event in the country's peace history of the women who sent husbands and fathers and sons and sweethearts to answer the call at the first tap of the drum in 1861. The hardship, the suffering, the agony of the women who waited in the war homes of the nation may never be told.

Veteran Longs for Wife.

Some day a grateful Government will erect a monument that will pierce the blue heavens from Gettysburg's stateliest, sunniest slope, and on it will stand the figure of one in whose courageous soul every battle was fought and every victory won—the woman who placed the flag of her faith in the hands of her best beloved and sent it to the front when the first gun was fired on Fort Sumter.

A veteran, shambling rather dejectedly along up Emmitsburg Road, overtook me. He was hot, dusty, tired. I said: "Do take my umbrella. I really would rather walk without it."

He straightened up with some of the old fire and vigor.

"Pshaw! I was fighting up this road before you wuz born. I guess I kin stand a little sun now. But how I wish Jane wuz here. She had a harder time than I did enduring the war."

Later a little woman with faded eyes overtook us "up Emmitsburg Road."

"I wasn't expected," she said, "but I just couldn't help coming. Jim was killed along here somewhere. I think it must have been about here."

Pausing at a clump of trees, she rested a thin hand on one of the outstretched branches.

Going to Her Sweetheart.

"Your husband?" I said.

"Oh, no, he was just my sweetheart, but I told him that I would wait until he came back. I won't have much longer to wait now. He did not come back to me, but I am going to him."

Some time there will be another and a greater reunion on this field. The next time it will include the real soldiers who made the four years of fighting possible.

On that day, a rich, grateful Republic will pour out its millions, and all the gray, bent Janes who had "a harder time" than their husbands on the field, and all the sad-eyed Sarahs who are still waiting for sweethearts that never came back will gather here on the scene of a Republic's trials, tribulations, and sufferings, and that will be a real reunion of the white souls that laid the supreme offering on the altar of country, of the tortured hearts that wrestled with the uncomplaining pain through the long four years when the nation's harpstrings were tuneless because her daughters could not sing the old songs.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

By refusing the perfectly reasonable request, legitimately entered, of certain advocates of woman suffrage in Georgia that they be permitted to use the Senate chamber for a meeting, at a time definitely sure not to conflict with any busines of the Senate, it is extremely doubtful whether the Senate has covered itself with any amazing amount of glory or erected a perpetual monument to its common sense.

That is the way a great many people appear to view the matter, anyway!

Moreover, if the Senate is opposed to woman suffrage, which it is agreed all around it has a right to be, it doubtless has helped the cause rather than injured it in Georgia by refusing the request noted.

Woman suffrage may not be popular in Georgia—on the contrary, it may be more popular than some folks imagine—but certainly its advocates thus far working in the open are women of extraordinary intelligence and marked conservatism of action.

To deny them a request that would have been granted, readily enough, to the State Democratic executive committee, say, is not particularly convincing in the minds of some people that woman suffrage is either an error or a monstrous wrong.

To be sure, the women may hold their meeting elsewhere, but in view of the fact that all sorts of political meetings have been permitted in the Senate chamber—which is a public place—and all sorts of people permitted to speak therein, in season and out, the needless turning down of a handful of women, desirous of holding a welfare meeting in behalf of their own organization, seems to have been rather out of place, if not absolutely cheap.

The Senate of Georgia before this time, however, has strained at gnats only to swallow camels subsequently. It appears that the present Senate was not loathe to let it be known that it could do that old act itself, if occasion seemed to require the performance.

It is the opinion of a number of people that the Senate's refusal of the request of the women involved was extremely ungracious, to say the least of it!

It should be borne in mind that neither Representative McArthur nor Representative Browning, of the new counties of Wheeler and Bleckley, respectively, were expelled from the House.

Both gentlemen had been sworn in, but that fact did not make them members de jure of the House, necessarily. The constitutionality of their titles to their seats was raised and sustained by the House, and their seats therefore were declared vacant, or, rather, their seats were declared never to have existed.

Both gentlemen are very popular, and are citizens of the very highest integrity and standing. Indeed, as a purely personal matter, the disposition of the House undoubtedly was to seat them. However, the House, after thrashing the matter out exhaustively, decided that the law plainly was against them and very properly it acted accordingly.

Discussing this matter to-day, Representative Hardeman, who made a speech denying the right of the gentlemen to their seats, said: "It is a tribute to the patriotism and genuine worth of the House that it acted as it did in this matter, despite its heavy personal inclination to vote otherwise. My own vote was embarrassing, in a way—I hated to vote against these two splendid men, but I could not afford to do that which I feared would Legislature, and so I voted as I did.

"I think the George House of this year may be depended upon to do the right thing in all matters, judging by the way it acted in this very trying situation."

Close behind the introduction of a bill in the Georgia Senate by Hon. J. L. Sweat, of the Fifth District, Waycross will organize for a determined campaign in favor of extending the State road to the sea, via Waycross.

Right-of-way through Ware has been pledged, and the county convicts will be loaned, if necessary, to the State for the road construction.

Other counties through the Ware County section have agreed to make similar offers, and all will exert themselves to get favorable action by the Legislature.

Governor John M. Slaton's suggestion of a State Highways Commission has met with the hearty approval of the farmers of Floyd County, and they have not been at all slow in making that fact known.

Meetings were held throughout the county Thursday, warmly approving the idea, and the Rome Chamber of Commerce has set the seal of its indorsement upon it.

Howard Ennis, of Baldwin, who defeated former Speaker Pro Tem Carl Vinson for re-election to the present House by the squeaky margin of five votes, has made marked progress in the esteem and respect of his fellow members. Already Ennis of Baldwin is known of everybody, and is most generally approved.

Despite the fact that Ennis defeated Vinson as aforesaid, the two men are the warmest of friends, and may be seen almost any day that Vinson is in Atlanta, arm in arm, and as thick as can be. Both are high-class men.

Representative Barry Wright, of Floyd County, a former member of the House and legislator of experience, has just been re-elected president of the Cherokee Life Insurance Company of Rome.

Mr. Wright is one of the younger members of the present House of Representatives, and is perhaps the very youngest life insurance president in the United States.

D. F. McClatchey, the House reading clerk, not only has a powerful and sonorous voice, but one possessed of marvelous powers of concentration.

In reading a bill for the first or second time Mr. McClatchey frequently condenses pages into paragraphs, and paragraphs into sentences. Sometimes he gets by with a sentence so fast that the audience can not hear it at all!

By condensing things after the manner he does, Mr. McClatchey undoubtedly saves the State thousands of dollars annually in the mere matter of time prevented from going to waste. If McClatchey didn't get over the ground orally as fast as he does the entire time of the House doubtless would be taken up listening to bills read.

Mother's Advice To Her Daughter

A Real Live Doll to Fondle Is Woman's Greatest Happiness.

One of the most important matters about which women concern themselves is their future status as a grandmother. And she is wisdom itself who knows of or learns of that famous remedy, Mother's Friend. This is an external application for the abdominal muscles and breasts. It certainly has a wonderful influence, allays all fear, banishes all pain, is a most grateful encouragement to the young, expectant mother, and permits her to go through the period happy in mind, free in body and thus destined to anticipate woman's greatest happiness as nature intended she should.

The action of Mother's Friend makes the muscles free, pliant and responsive to expansion. Thus all strain and tension upon the nerves and ligaments is avoided, and, in place of a period of discomfort and consequent dread, it is a season of calm repose and joyful expectation.

There is no nausea, no morning sickness, no nervous twitching, none of that constant strain known to so many women, hence Mother's Friend is really one of the greatest blessings that could be devised.

This splendid and certain remedy can be had of any druggist at $1.00 a bottle, and is sure to prove of inestimable value, not only upon the mother, but upon the health and future of the child. Write to Bradfield Regulator Co., 132 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for their book to expectant mothers.

JUDGES CHOSEN FOR SLOGAN CONTEST

Georgian's Prize Offer for Best Button Caption Increases Interest in 500,000 Club.

The Georgian's 500,000 club movement was given a new impetus Thursday when three of the best known men in Atlanta became actively identified with it as judges of the $25 slogan prize contest. They are:

John W. Grant, Wilmer L. Moore and Walter C. Taylor.

"The constant stimulus our newspapers give to the Atlanta spirit is one of the finest things in the city, or any city in the country for that matter," said Mr. Grant. "The 500,000 booster club idea will result in much good, and the census of 1920 will be ample proof of it."

"I want to help the 500,000 club all I can," said Mr. Moore.

"I often think that we don't know how to appreciate Atlanta until we get out of it," said Walter Taylor. "Often when I was in other towns and heard of the things being done in Atlanta, I got as homesick as when I first left home as a boy.

"Every traveling man, every Atlantan who goes away for a trip, as well as all good boosters at home, should wear one of the 500,000 club buttons. You can't calculate the boosting that such a plan will effect."

Since The Georgian offered $25 for the best slogan for the buttons interest has greatly increased in the enterprise to get 500,000 people into Atlanta by 1920.

The contest will last for ten days, the winner of the prize to be announced in Hearst's Sunday American of July 13. All entrants must mail their slogans to the Contest Editor, Atlanta Georgian. They will be transmitted to the judges and merit will decide. The originator of the one selected will be given $25 in cash.

It is an easy way to make $25. It's a chance to render a civic service. Thousands of buttons bearing the slogan will be distributed. A few words penned in an idle moment may speak volumes.

BUSINESS IN WOOL IS TAKING ON LIFE

Prices on Free Trade Basis Except for Medium Fleeces—London Auctions Open.

BOSTON, July 4.—More wool has been sold in Boston during the past week, and the market has assumed an appearance of activity lacking for months. Transfers foot up well over 1,500,000 pounds, including territories, fleeces and Texas wools. Prices have been low, keeping the market down practically to a free wool basis on all grades except medium fleeces. Active buying in the West now is largely confined to Montana, where the new clipping season is just getting under way. Other States have been fairly well cleaned up, the best wools having been purchased and the heavier wools consigned. Business in foreign wools remains at a standstill, as manufacturers will not pay the duties in the face of free wool. The London auction sales opened about as expected with American buyers unusually active for the first day.

Receipts of wool in pounds for the week ended and including Wednesday were as follows:

	1913.	1912.
Domestic	4,534,887	8,130,912
Foreign	181,560	3,420,304
Totals	4,716,447	11,551,216

Receipts in pounds from and including January 1, 1913, as compared with the corresponding period of 1912, were as follows:

LITTLE STORIES of the TOWN

Sneezetown Is Up in Wisconsin.

Here's a story told by a visitor at the Transportation Club the other evening:

The elderly matron with the bundles, who was journeying to a point in Wisconsin and occupied a seat near the middle of the car, had fallen asleep. One the seat in front of her sat a little boy. The brakeman opened the door of the car and called out the name of the station the train was approaching. The elderly lady roused herself with a jerk and inquired hurriedly of the boy:

"Where are we, Bobby?"

"I don't know, grandma," answered the little boy.

"Didn't the brakeman say something just now?"

"No, he just stuck his head inside the door and sneezed."

"Help me with these things, Bobby!" she exclaimed, hurriedly. "This is Oskosh. It's where we get off."

Wouldn't Stand To Have It Filed.

The conversation led to surgical operations and Congressman John H. Small of North Carolina told of the experience of a Southern blacksmith.

The blacksmith sprained his wrist one afternoon, and lost no time in hustling to the office of a physician.

The doctor examined the wrist and then took a small bottle from a shelf, but found it empty.

"James," said he, turning to an assistant, "go upstairs and bring me down a couple of those phials."

"What's tha?" exclaimed the patient, suddenly showing large signs of emotion.

"I was merely asking my assistant to bring me down a couple of phials from upstairs," answered the doctor.

"Files!" cried the blacksmith, with a look of determination. "No, you don't, Doc! If that hand has got to come off you will use an ax or a saw!"

Real Modesty From Down State.

The only unoccupied room in the hotel—one with a private bath in connection with it—was given to the stranger from the wiregrass. The next morning the clerk was approached by the guest when the latter was ready to check out.

"Well, did you have a good night's rest?" the clerk asked.

"No, I didn't," replied the guest. "The room was all right, and the bed was pretty good, but I couldn't sleep very much, for I was afraid someone would want to take a bath, and the only door to it was through my room."

RECORDER FINES DE LAMATER ON WIFE'S PLEA

Druggist Promises Court He Will Not Molest Estranged Spouse Again—Injunction Pending.

The last twenty-four hours were eventful ones for Ira J. DeLamater, of the DeLamater-Lawrence Drug Company.

Here is what happened to him:

Arrested on the story of his wife, who is suing him for divorce, that he was at her home in an abusive and intoxicated condition.

Locked in the police station for two hours.

Served with a temporary injunction preventing him from molesting or visiting his wife.

Given notice that action has been taken to have him adjudged in contempt of court.

Summoned to appear as defendant in the Recorder's Court Friday morning.

Fined $10.75 by Recorder Broyles for intoxication and disorderly conduct.

Notified that he will have to appear August 16 before Judge L. S. Roan when decision will be made on the permanency of the injunction standing against him and when he will be given opportunity to answer to the contempt charge.

DeLamater was let off with a light fine in the court of Recorder Broyles Friday morning on his promise that he would not seek to see his wife again and would not in any way molest her.

His trial was the sequel of an exciting scene at his wife's residence, 60 Currier Street, Thursday afternoon. He is said to have gone there in an intoxicated condition and uttered threats against her father, City Comptroller J. H. Goldsmith.

Mrs. DeLamater called Policemen Nashburn and Pate. They warned him to leave, and when he disregarded their orders, placed him under arrest. He explained at the police station that he was at his wife's residence only to see his children and to try to effect a reconciliation with Mrs. DeLamater.

Mrs. DeLamater's attorneys, Daley & Chambers, obtained a temporary injunction from Judge L. S. Roan, restraining DeLamater from visiting at her home, and at the same time made application to have him adjudged in contempt of court for his failure to pay the $75 a month temporary alimony which Mrs. DeLamater is said to have been awarded pending the settlement of her divorce suit.

U.S. ASSETS FIXED AT $2,000,000,000

Surplus of $40,083,229 Wiped Out by Canal Expenditures. $275,000 in Reserve.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—Uncle Sam closed the fiscal year 1913 with a surplus of $40,083,229, a gain of $8,750,000. Panama Canal expenditures and public debt transactions, however, wiped out this surplus and created a deficit of $2,449,000.

Total receipts were $723,782,921, and ordinary disbursements $683,699,692. Corporation taxes yielded the Government $34,948,870. Custom receipts reached $318,142,000, an increase of nearly $7,000,000.

The Government spent $41,741,000 on the Panama Canal, making a total of $318,229,000 spent to date.

Secretary McAdoo to-night announced that the daily treasury statement in future would be issued in a completely changed form, designed to show at a glance the assets and liabilities of the Government.

The first statement will show, the Secretary said, that the grand total of assets of the Government is nearly $2,000,000,000, against which there are liabilities including the gold and silver certificates aggregating about $1,725,000,000, leaving a balance in the treasury of from $250,000,000 to $275,000, including the gold reserve of $150,000,000.

THE GHOST BREAKER

By G. W. GODDARD and PAUL DICKEY

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

The scene of the story is laid in the Vanderlip Hotel, New York City. The Princess Maria Theresa of Segura, a beautiful Spanish woman, is suddenly awakened in her suite by the sound of pistol shots. She hears a man running down the hall. He crashes against her door, breaking the lock, and enters. She sees he is a tall, good-looking young man, dressed in evening clothes. He is carrying a revolver in his right hand, and blood is dripping from a wound in his left. He begs the Princess to hide him. She, moved by some indescribable impulse, decides that she will. She directs him to an inner room, and a few minutes later, when the hotel detective knocks on the door, she tells him she is all right and sends him away. The young man, who is Warren Jarvis, of Kentucky, comes out of his hiding place, and the Princess, for the first time, notices his wound. She is moved to sympathy and showers him with questions as to what has occurred. Jarvis tells her about a Kentucky feud between his family and another named Markham. He says he left Kentucky to avoid the feudists, but encountered one of them in the hotel, which explains the shots.

Now go on with the story.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

A quick shade passed over his face and he pressed his lips together.

"No, never," he declared, in a steady voice.

"You have no fear of death?"

He lifted his eyebrows slightly by way of reply.

Dona Maria moved nearer and lowered her voice to a tense undertone:

"You are—you are not afraid of ghosts?"

Some brilliant student of humanics once figured that the essential difference between a brave man and a coward is that while both are sure to be frightened the coward is panic-stricken in the presence of danger and the brave man is likely to go to pieces after the danger has passed.

Possibly this is the reason that Warren Jarvis and the Princess of Aragon could discuss so calmly their future plans when the one was a murderer in the eyes of the law, a wounded and trapped fugitive; and the other was coolly harboring a criminal to use him for her own private ends. As adventures are for the venturous, so romance is for the romantic. Both were young, both were romantic and both were fearless.

And so it was that Jarvis could smile with unaffected amusement when Dona Maria asked if he was afraid of ghosts. But Dona Maria did not smile.

"Ghosts," she repeated soberly, in response to his puzzled query. Jarvis threw back his head and laughed silently.

"After what I've been through?" he said. "No, I'm not afraid of ghosts."

Dona Maria held him with her gaze until the mirth died out of his face.

"If you escape from here," she said slowly, "it will be because I helped you. We might say I saved your life. If what you tell me is true and if I try to save your life——" she paused for an instant and then went on steadily—"it will be for a selfish motive entirely. It will be because I have work for you to do. Do you understand? Work—hard work—dangerous work! It—it may mean your life in the end," she added, and her voice faltered slightly.

A Real Peril.

Jarvis studied curiously the dark, beautiful face. He did not feel inclined to laugh now. He felt that there was something deadly serious back of his child's talk of ghosts. Whatever the service might be that she demanded of him it was certain that she believed the peril it entailed to be really active.

"You are frank, anyway," he remarked.

"It's a chance," she reminded him.

There was a certain medieval brutality about this last suggestion that completely won him. Indeed, it never occurred to either that there was any true moral obliquity in their attitude or actions. When Jarvis drew his pistol and shot his man to death there burned in his bosom as pure a flame of fanatical belief in the justice of his cause as that which steeled the lance point of the Red Cross Knight. And in the same spirit Dona Maria would swear him to her service and send him to a possible death. He smiled at the thought.

JARVIS SWEARS TO GET THE GHOST

"Kneel then, Warren of Jarvis," she commanded, "and repeat this oath."

"And my reward?"

"—— is your life," she replied instantly.

Jarvis again burst into a short silent laugh. "Well, that's something. And if I agree——?"

"You will begin by taking the ancient feudal oath of my country," said Dona Maria, gravely.

"Oath!" exclaimed Jarvis. "Isn't my word enough?"

The Princess waved her hand in a truly royal manner.

"You will pardon me if I insist."

The young man smiled and shrugged his shoulders. "Very well. If it pleases you, I'll swear the blackest oath you can utter. Let's hear it."

However lightly he might take it, the ceremony held nothing of the mirthful for Dona Maria. As solemnly as if feudalism had not long ago been reduced to a show of pomp to please those whom it amused, she asked his name.

"Jarvis," he told her.

"Your full name?"

"Warren Jarvis."

Royally Dona Maria pointed to the rug at her feet.

"Kneel, then, Warren Jarvis," she commanded, "and repeat this oath."

He Kneels.

"Oh, come, now," he objected, sheepishly—but Dona Maria only looked and pointed. At last he grinned and began to get down first with one knee and then the other, and finally came down awkwardly with both at once. It was distinctly ungraceful and against the best forms of feudal ceremony. Dona Maria was embarrassed.

"No! not that way," she said hastily. "On one knee. Ah! That is better. Now, repeat after me—'I, Warren of Jarvis' "——

"I, Warren of Jarvis," repeated the young man, with mock solemnity, though he was not insensible to the romantic charm of the ceremony.

"'Senor of all the domains, fiefs, keeps and marches of Warren of Kentucky' "—

"Whew!" He thought of what the boys around the Galt House would say of these "fiefs and marches," but he obeyed.

"Senor of all the domains, fiefs, keeps and marches of Warren of Kentucky' "—

"'Do convey to Maria Theresa, of Aragon, all my worldly titles and possessions' "——

"Sounds like I was marrying her," he muttered. "'Do convey to Maria Theresa, of Aragon, all my worldly titles and possessions' "——

"Now, take my left hand in both of yours," ordered Dona Maria. He obeyed with wonderful enthusiasm and felt that he was going to like the oath more and more as it progressed.

"'And receive them back as vassal and retainer and to faithfully fight in my lady's cause, according to the feudal laws of Castile and Aragon. So help me God, Our Lady and St. James!' "

Jarvis looked up into the glowing face and shining eyes as she repeated the solemn closing words of the oath and a swift change came over him as the soft hand that he held in both his had carried some thrilling current from her soul to his. He felt somewhat like the scoffer who strolls into a church and is humbled by the simple faith he sees about him. There was no mockery in his voice and little in his heart when he repeated them after her. And the kiss that he pressed on the back of her hand when she said, "Arise, vassal," was wholly sincere.

Confused.

She drew back quickly, for the first time confused.

"That is part of the ceremony," she admitted, in a small voice, "but I meant to omit it."

So the serious moment passed. "It seemed the only sensible part," he laughed. "But who on earth is this Maria Theresa that I am hired man to?"

Dona Maria straightened her slender figure and drew the folds of her dressing gown more closely about her.

"I," she said, with the dignity of a queen, "am Her Supreme Highness, Maria Theresa of Segura, Princess of Aragon."

Jarvis' jaw did not drop, because it was not that kind of a jaw, but he was enough of a democrat to be sufficiently impressed.

"Good Lord!" he groaned, after a short season of speechlessness. "A princess!—and I've been ordering you around with a gun!"

"Never mind that now," his liege lady ordered lightly, mollified by her vassal's appreciation of her position; "you will be properly punished, my vassal. There are dungeons in my castle."

"Sh—h!" cautioned Jarvis quickly. There was a sound of swift footsteps in the hall. They passed the door and died away, but the incident brought them back to a consideration of the present situation.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

She—Anyhow, you must admit he is a well-bred man. Did you notice his knowledge of Ruskin?

It's Up to the Judges Now

"The Triple Tie" Contest Came to an End at Noon Yesterday

Noon yesterday was the time limit fixed for the close of "The Triple Tie" contest and up to that hour many contributions were received. Some of them came by special delivery. Some of the packages were bulky, others small, but if one may be permitted to judge from exterior looks, all those who tried a hand at writing a logical conclusion for the great baseball story were very much in earnest.

All the contributions will be turned over to the three judges, as announced, and it will be up to these disinterested persons to go through the mass of replies and indicate those which they consider the best.

On Monday we shall continue the publication of "The Triple Tie," giving the ending of this remarkable serial just as Mr. Mitchell, the author, wrote it. We regard "The Triple Tie" as one of the most interesting stories ever published by The Georgian. Much of its appeal lay in the fact that it contained local color in generous measure.

The Way of a Man

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

ONE who signs herself "Broken Hearted," and who I am sure isn't, writes me as follows:

"I am keeping company with a young man and like him very much, but he doesn't show his love for me as I do for him. Every time he comes to see me he sits in a chair reading a book. Do you think I should continue keeping company with him?"

My dear, you love him; you want him to love you, and you want to become his wife. Isn't that so? Yet you rebel against the attention he gives you, and which is the kind you will always receive as his wife. He will always "Sit in a chair reading a book." In that manner is every wife in the world entertained.

This is the husband-like treatment, and not the lover-like. He gives you the treatment a husband gives his wife for the reason that you have let him see "you are already won!" You say he doesn't show his love for you as "you do for him." Of course not. A man is naturally a lazy animal and makes no effort that is unnecessary. An effort to win your love is unnecessary.

When a man goes courting he makes the effort of a man catching a street car. After he has caught the car he seats himself comfortably and begins to read his newspaper. No further effort is necessary, so why make it? This man has won your love; you have made him as sure of it as he is sure he has caught the car when his feet are on the steps. Naturally, the next thing he does is to sit down and rest.

I do not blame him. Really, sometimes when I see the way girls lay their hearts at the feet of men, so often without any solicitation from the men, I wonder that courting stays in fashion.

I wonder that men spend their money on flowers, books, candy, theater tickets and for little outings, all to win the love of a girl, when so many girls seem to stand ready with their love in their hands, begging the acceptance of it by any man who looks their way.

I wonder that men prize a girl's love as highly as they do, remembering it was so lightly won.

Get the book habit. Never again tell him you love him. Never nag because he reads, but, rather, encourage him, letting him see that you would rather he read than bore you by talking.

You have given him the impression that he is sure of you. Efface that impression, but efface it so gently he will never know just when the process of obliteration began. Let him realize that your heart doesn't hang on a low branch, ready to drop into his hand if he will outstretch it; give him to know it grows higher up and that he must climb for it.

I am quite sure if you go about it with discretion he will close his book till you are his wife.

And then make up your mind to this and accept it as inevitable, how he will read to make up for lost time!

Men and the Cook Stove .:. .:. .:. By Dorothy Dix

IT is announced that nine young men students at Cornell University this year registered in the domestic science department and took cooking lessons.

This is glad news on many accounts. For one thing, it opens up to men a lucrative occupation, for there are few professions so well paid as that of the expert cook, and it is a pity that more American boys do not fit themselves to fill it, instead of compelling us to send abroad for a French chef whenever we want a culinary artist.

But whether a man intends to be a professional cook or not, it's a good thing for him to learn at least the rudiments of domestic science if for no other reason than because it establishes a common bond of interest and sympathy between him and his wife when he gets married.

Undoubtedly one of the chief reasons why marriage is a failure is because the average man and woman in this country lead such distinct and separate lives, and have so little knowledge of the problems with which each has to grapple, and I am persuaded that nothing would do more to promote domestic felicity than for every boy before he is married to have served an apprenticeship in the kitchen, and every girl to have done a couple of years' work in a business office.

Certainly the man who knows something practical about cooking, who has wrestled with the frying pan, and been up against the pots and the kettles will be able to extend a heart-to-heart comprehension to his wife when the steak is tough, and the potatoes watery, of which the unculinary, half-baked husband is utterly incapable.

What Dickens Says.

Dickens says, in one of his stories that no educated man ever looks at even the back of a book in the way that an ignorant person does, and precisely the same thing applies to housekeeping. The man whose whole experience in cooking consists in offering gratuitous criticism every time anything is overdone or underdone can never behold a dinner with the same exquisite perception of all the time and labor and worry it took to produce it that the man will show who knows from personal experience of the deceitfulness of butchers' meat and the iniquity of the gas range.

As it is now, the household critic has nothing but contemptuous pity for the female intellect that can not manage two servants without getting gray and wrinkled in the process, while he bosses half a hundred employees without turning a hair. The man who has been through the domestic mill on his own account will never speak in that tone of voice to his wife.

He will know, from experience, that no rules that apply to other labor have any bearing on the servant girl question. Like the wind, she cometh and she goeth as she listeth, and no man or woman knows when or for how long she is going to list. Neither will this paragon of a husband make unfavorable comments on the culinary products of Hilda and Mary Jane. He will eat what is set before him, asking no questions for sympathy sake, and reflecting when things go wrong that he would get no better results in his own affairs if he had to depend for his help on those who neither wanted to learn their business nor desired to keep their places.

A Difference.

And just as it is a good thing for men to learn to cook, it is also well for a woman to have had the actual experience of earning her own living before she is married.

No woman who has ever earned a dollar looks at one as does the woman who has always had her spending money given her. To the one it means something that comes easy and goes easy. To the other it represents toil and weariness, sometimes the very life blood of a person. She knows how hard it is to win, how hard to keep, and the anxiety and humiliation it means to be without it, and she spends it prudently and judiciously.

The woman who has never earned her own living thinks that business is a picnic, and that when a man goes downtown of a morning he departs to enjoy himself with his friends. No woman who has stood behind the counter, or bent over a typewriter and taken part in the daily grind of business cherishes any illusions about its being fun. She knows it for the heart wearing, nerve wrecking thing it is, and her comprehension of its trials keeps her from inflicting on her husband many of the unconscious cruelties that the woman who is totally ignorant of business practices upon her suffering spouse.

Also the business woman remembers how, when she came home at night exhausted and with nerves fretted to fiddle strings, it seemed to her that just one more calamity would strain things to the breaking point. You may be sure that such a woman never meets a weary man at the front door with a catalogue of everything that has gone wrong in the house during the day. Neither does she expect a man with weighty affairs on his mind, and whose time is money, to stop downtown to match samples, or hunt through a department store for a spool of elephant breath silk thread.

What we need is a common plane of mutual helpfulness and understanding on which the sexes can meet. Men and women should know the trials and tribulations under which each labors in order to sympathize with them. It's because men have never done women's work that they think that cooking and sewing and mending and baby tending is a job so easy that a woman could do it with one hand tied behind her. It is because women have never had to get up, sick or well, and go down town to work that they think that a man's business is a cinch.

It is because men have never had to ask for every cent they spend that they do not realize how humiliating it is to a woman to have no personal income of her own. It is because few women care to smoke that the average wife nags her husband about scenting up the parlor curtains with tobacco.

With personal knowledge of the difficulties of the situation will come sympathy and toleration. So the man who can cook, and the woman who has kept books will meet on a common plane of mutual good will that will make matrimony a success instead of the failure it so often is through the sheer inability of husband or wife to comprehend the difficulties the other faces.

Injun Giver.

Robbie met a neighbor who was smoking some fine, fragrant tobacco sent by his son in America. He took out his own pipe ostentatiously.

"Have you a match, Sandy?" he queried.

The match was forthcoming, but nothing more.

"I do believe," said Robbie, "I hae left ma tobacco at hame."

"Then," said Sandy, after a silence, "ye micht gie ma back ma match."

How Strict Are You with Your Daughter?

—answer it, parents. Are you too strict, or aren't you strict enough? Either course is liable to be disastrous. Your daughter's welfare means as much to you as anything else in the world, yet do you know what to watch in bringing her up.

There are few men who know the problem as Judge Freschi does. For years a magistrate in the City of New York, his work has brought him into personal contact with thousands of girls and their stories. He has had an opportunity to analyze the causes of their failure. His name has become known throughout the country as their benefactor.

The angle from which he discusses the diverse elements that enter into the upbringing of the girl is a new one that you probably have never thought of. As a thoughtful mother or father you ought to read what he says in his article, "How Strict Are You with Your Daughter?" It appears in the

Woman's Proper Place

By DOROTHY DIX.

EVERY few days I get a letter from some man who emits a wild and heartbroken wail because, he says, woman has gotten out of her proper place. Many of these melancholy gentlemen go so far as to express the further opinion that it is the business of the press to try to shoo the feminine sex back to where it belongs.

Speaking for myself, I should gladly use what little influence I have with women in trying to corral them in their own particular little stockade if I only knew where that sacred spot was.

What is woman's proper place, anyhow? Will some wise brother please arise in meeting and speak right out and tell us?

Is woman's proper place the home? None of us deny it, and the great majority of women will answer the call in person if you ring their front door bell.

A Foolish Waste.

But what about the tens of thousands of women who have no home in which to stay, whom no man asked to marry them, and who are fated to never know the cling of little children's arms about their necks? It is all right to say, "Back to the home for yours, sister," to the woman who has got a good husband, and babies, and a cottage or a flat of her own, but how are you going to keep women in the domestic sphere who have neither a kitchen, nor a nursery, nor a man of their own? I give it up.

Is the woman who paints pictures, or writes, or acts out of her proper place? I take it that when the good God put talent into a woman's head that He knew what He was about, and that He intended her to use the gifts He gave her. Otherwise it would be a foolish waste of valuable material.

Certainly we should all be much poorer if there had been no Rosa Bonheurs, no George Eliots, no Charlotte Brontes, no Mrs. Humphry Wards, none of the thousand delicate and facile female pens that delight and entertain us every day of our lives.

Is Maude Adams out of her sphere when she makes us cry? Is Rose Stahl out of her sphere when she makes laugh? Are Melba and Tetrazzini and Cavallieri out of their places when they lift us up to the seventh heaven with their voices? Yet all of these women occupy conspicuous places and are very much in public.

A Question.

Evidently the men who complain of women being out of their proper places are thinking about the business women. Is a clever, strong, healthy young girl out of her place when she goes to work to support herself instead of sitting down idly at home and adding to the burden of a poor, weary, hump-shouldered old father, who has toiled like a dray horse to raise his family and has come almost to the end of his strength?

Are the girls of a family who have good business positions and who bring their money home to make an old mother comfortable and educate younger brothers and sisters out of their places during working hours?

Is the woman who is married to a man whose health fails out of her place because she puts her shoulder to the wheel and helps the domestic wagon out of the ditch instead of letting it sink down into the mire?

If you ask my opinion, I think that every woman who needs money for herself, or for her family, is exactly where she ought to be when she is earning it by her honest work. If the men of her family can't support her, there is no reason why she should not support herself, and help them, too, if they need it. For my part, I have never been able to see why it isn't just as feminine a thing, and as much in her line of duty, for a woman to be a prop to a man as it is to be a millstone about his neck.

Is woman out of her place when she belongs to clubs? Isn't it woman's place to add to the sweetness and light of life, and haven't the women's clubs done more toward fostering the higher education, beautifying towns, supporting art galleries and picture shows, and giving the country a general esthetic uplift, than all other causes combined?

Is the woman of wealth, and intelligence, and leisure out of her place when she devotes her energies to public reforms and charities? Where else would we look for our great philanthropies? Who would raise the money for our hospitals, for our fresh-air funds, for our tuberculosis camps, for our societies for the prevention of cruelty to animals? There is not a community in this country that hasn't some old maid or childless widow who is its good Samaritan, and nobody accuses her of being out of her proper sphere, except the evildoers on whose corns she treads.

Out of Place?

There are those who contend that a woman is out of her proper place—oh, millions of miles out of it—when she takes an interest in politics and wants to vote. Why? Has she not as much at stake in the country as any man? Does she not pay as many taxes? Is she not affected by the laws just as men are? If food prices advance, does not the burden of making the family income go further fall upon her? If the streets are dirty and the water supply impure, does she not have to nurse her sick, because of it, and if they die, is not her heart broken over their loss even more than any man's? How can she be out of her place when considering the questions that are most vital to her?

The truth is, there is no place in all the wide world that is not woman's place. First at the cradle and last at the tomb, she pillows man's head in infancy on her breast, and kisses shut his eyes when he dies, and there is no hope, no joy, no struggle, no labor, no victory, no defeat in his life in which her place is not always by his side.

It is idle to talk about sending woman back to her place. The earth is hers, and the fullness thereof, just as much as it is a man's.

Daysey Mayme's July 4

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THE call had read "Ladies Not Admitted," and while a crowd of little girls stood outside pouting, crying and even kicking on the closed door in the modern, ladylike way of expressing opposition, a band of grave-faced little men in blouse and bib held serious deliberation on the inside.

"We are assembled," said President Chauncey Devere Appleton, "to utter protest against the parentally expurgated plan of a Fourth of July. We are here to make public our opinion of any parent who would have children spend the Fourth as if the corpse of Freedom lay shrouded in the next room."

A Riot.

Every delegate was on his feet at once; there were motions, countermotions, protests, howls and hisses, a confusion that was augmented by the discovery that the ladies on the outside were peeking through the keyhole. After the president had put the seal of secrecy on the proceedings by closing the keyhole with a borrowed piece of chewing gum, order was restored, and the following resolutions were adopted:

"That life is not what it used to be when a boy could put a cannon cracker under a maiden aunt's chair and gorge himself with ice cream while the family were bringing her to;

"That unless a boy has a chance to make himself look like a bursted firecracker, there is no way for him to become distinguished, and mothers have no right to monopolize all the surgical operations;

"That if this demand for everything noiseless isn't checked soon, mothers will be refusing the boy babies the doctors bring them because they are not equipped with rubber tires;

"That girls are ideal creatures because they are happy with dolls, and the only noise in playing with a doll is a squeak that is squeaked out the first day;

What Father Did.

"That mothers place too much stress on boys getting their hands shot off, considering that they never look at their sons' hands without screaming out that they need washing;

"That father used cannon crackers when he was young, and still has hands left to spank us."

The discovery that the ladies on the outside had used the eternal feminine weapon of defense in boring a hole through the seal of secrecy broke up the meeting, and the gentlemen poured out and the ladies poured in, in wild confusion.

Why He Left.

A dispute once arose between a landlord and his tenant. The latter had given notice to quit, but would not put a bill in his window to say that his house was "To Be Let."

To make matters worse, they went to law about it. The judge, having heard the case, made an order for the defendant to put a bill up within fourteen days.

The landlord was so overjoyed at his victory that on the fourteenth day he took a friend with him around to the house to chaff his tenant. The bill was up in the window plain enough, but under it was another bill, which ran as follows:

"Cause of leaving—bad drains."

Stop Experimenting

There are but few depilatories sold. You think there are hundreds because you have used the same identical preparations under several different names. This is easily explained. Women stop using

So-Called Hair Removers

when they learn that they are harmful. Therefore, they can not be sold under the same name for any length of time. Then the identical, worthless, harmful concoctions are given new names and advertised again as totally different preparations to who innocently buy them over and over again under different names, and this will continue as long as women are so unwise as to experiment with unknown, so-called hair removers.

De Miracle has been sold as De Miracle for over eleven years, and its name has never been changed. It is acknowledged the world over by eminent authorities as the one safe, perfected hair remover, therefore it is the only depilatory you can use without experimenting.

Leaves No Tell-Tale Smell

If you use De Miracle it will be impossible for any curious person to know that you have used a hair remover because De Miracle evaporates immediately after accomplishing its work, therefore leaves no odor whatever. On the other hand, if you use any depilatory with a distinctive odor, an offensive, tell-tale smell will cling to your skin for hours.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DON'T BE DISCOURAGED.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 18 and am employed by one of the largest railroads in the East.

I have been keeping steady company with a young lady two years my senior and visit this girl about two or three times a week. I asked her to become my wife and she told me I would have to get her father's consent. I had a conference with her father, and the only opposition he has to our marriage is that I am too short. I am 5 feet 3 inches and receive a good salary. Would you advise me to discontinue my attentions to this girl or continue to keep company with her, in the hope that her father will see the folly of his ways and consent to our marriage? GEORGE W.

If her father's objections are based solely on your height, I am sure that in time he will withdraw them.

You need time for a more important reason: If your stature were all that is desired, your age is not. Trust me in this, my boy—no boy at 18 is old enough to select a wife. For your own sake, be glad to wait.

IT WILL BE A GOOD LOSS.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

young man two years my senior,

I am deeply in love with a and we have been keeping company for the past nine months, but lately at a party to which he had taken me he met a girl and took her home. I wrote him the next day asking him if I had done anything to offend him. I have not received an answer. Should I write to him again, as I would not like to lose him? C. V. M.

He treated you most rudely, and you would show a finer spirit if you resented it and refused to see him again. Do not write, and make up your mind to this: The best thing that can happen to a girl is to "lose" an escort who is not a gentleman, for such a one behaves much worse after marriage.

DON'T CALL AGAIN.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 19 and very popular. Lately I received word from a young man who used to call on me pretty steady that he would like to have me call him on the telephone. I was informed he was not in, and, as he is a traveling salesman, I believed this, but called a few days later only to be told the same story; this time leaving my name saying he should call me up. Now, as the young man who received my message is also a good friend of mine, and spoke quite confidential to me on the phone, also telling me that the other young man is just jollying me along, I am in doubt as to what course to pursue.

BABE.

You should not have called in the first place, and your second effort does not speak much for your dignity.

The young man, my dear, who is worth having will always take the initiative. He will always make every effort to communicate with the girl he loves, and ask only that she be pleased at his overtures.

Preparing Her.

Farmer Wayback (starting home from the station)—"Please, ma'am, do you wear false teeth?"

On Independence Day

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

THE hour: Nine in the evening. The day: The Fourth of July. The year: That is immaterial, since the story told that night is always young. The personnel: A young man of 24 and a girl of 19.

The scene: A secluded corner of a porch step. Around this young man and woman were other young men and women who were showing their patriotism with firecrackers, torpedoes, skyrockets and other illuminating and noisy means. There was a momentary darkness. The last skyrocket had proved a fizzle and there was some delay in starting another. Under cover of the darkness, and unheard by the others in their merriment, the young man whispered in the girl's ear, "I love you," and she replied "And I love you."

First Avowal.

It was their first avowal of affection, and some years later, the girl, who had become a matron, sighed and said: "You know I lost my independence on Independence Day."

Every one who loves and is loved loses a measure of independence, and this woman was such a clinging, helpless creature, that she lost all she had. Perhaps that was because she heard her little love story in a day when girls were taught that to be happy sweethearts and wives they must be long-suffering and submissive.

She made no reservation of her affection, and their courtship proved a stormy one. He flirted, there was coolness, heat, anger, love, indifference, impatience, cruelty or kindness personified as the mood suited him. Through every change in him she remained the same patient, grateful, loving girl, always with arms outstretched to welcome him when he deigned to turn her way.

No Nation Free.

She put herself beneath his feet in her excessive humility, and after they were married he saw to it that she remained there. She had put her own pricemark on herself. We all do. He looked at the mark, and saw that it resembled the tag Public Opinion put many centuries ago on the worm.

There is an independence of nations, and an independence of individuals, and the former depends on the latter. No nation is free if its citizens are bound by diplomatic treatment, terminate, as a mob of violence is quelled by the cold water of the firemen, rather than by the bullets of the police.

Called a Brute.

The social animal man is sometimes called a brute, and frequently is a brute.

He thinks he knows it all and wants to be the head and boss of the house.

No woman who is a pal to her husband need ever fear any other woman. Her husband will not join another lodge so that he can get one more night out a week.

If the "other woman" gets him she is a better pal to him. She jollies rather than scolds, she laughs and does not cry, she is a good sport, she gets his money, and she has a good time.

If he is as old as Methuselah she calls him a "boy." He likes it and spends his cash.

Few men are natural pikers with their chums. They take a certain pride in playing the limit.

The woman with the harnessed lap dog gives out a suspicion that she is no longer a "pal" to her husband. She has the dog in leash, but there are no strings on the man. "To have and to hold" each other's hearts.

It is not so much that they live together as that they love each other.

The two lives who hope, fear, plan, play, enjoy, suffer, deny, possess, work and win together need no divorce court to adjust their difficulties.

They are united in life and in death they are not divided.

Inference Obvious.

Knickerbockered and resplendent in dazzling tartan stockings, Algernon sauntered from the clubhouse to the golf links; and there, on the first tee, having carefully adjusted his monocle and "addressed" the ball for a prodigious length of time, began his game.

"By the way, caddie," he remarked pleasantly, "what sort of a game does Mr. McJones play?"

The diminutive young Scotchman screwed up his weather-beaten face.

"Mr. McJones? He canna play at all."

"Ah!" said Algernon. "You see, I'm playing a match with him tomorrow. Suppose I shall beat him easily—what?"

The caddie shook his head wisely.

"Na," he replied; "that ye will not."

Adding Fuel to Flame.

A quarrelsome couple, having exhausted many subjects, came to discussing tombstones, and the husband asked:

"My dear, what kind of stone do you suppose they will give me when I die?"

"Brimstone," was the reply.

As Easy To Keep The Hair From Turning Gray As To Keep The Scalp Clean

AND there is no reason in the world why you should hesitate to restore to your hair its lost color and vitality, if it is fading and turning gray, any more than that you should foolishly refuse to use a remedy for dandruff or any other scalp trouble.

Sickness, nervousness, impoverished blood or deficient scalp nutrition may cause premature grayness; sometimes it is inherited. Whatever the cause, gray hair adds from 10 to 20 years to the age, and a young woman, even 25 or 20, with very gray hair is passed as old.

Robinnaire Hair Dye is a pure tonic restorative to bring back to faded or gray hair its own original color and lost beauty. It is not to bleach or change the original color, and should not be confused with such. It is prepared in our own laboratory from a formula we know to be beneficial, and we guarantee it to be non-injurious. It keeps the hair soft, lustrous and in its beautiful, natural color, and as it does not stain the scalp cannot be detected. Prepared for light, medium and dark brown and black hair and is for sale at druggists and toilet goods departments. 75c. By parcel post, 83c.

The Divorce Question

By JERE R. COOKE.

(It may be asked why I, of all men, should write upon questions affecting marriage and other relations. In reply, I would say that one who has gone through what I have, suffered as much as I have, and seen so much of the world and its hard side may possibly have something to say that will be of use to others. I hope so at least.—JERE COOKE.)

A WOMAN recently gave the reason why she desired a divorce from her husband as "so they may cultivate a beautiful friendship."

It goes without saying that it is easier to be a friend than a helpmeet, but to sacrifice the one for the other is to barter the real jewel for the past brilliant. There can be no harmony among such people.

No sympathy, whether he be called by the sacred name of helpmeet or the uncertain cognomen of friend.

The best friend a man can have is his wife, and marriage is the mold into which the highest friendship is poured.

The true secret of success in marriage is that the wife is the best friend or chum or "pal" her husband has. Why shouldn't she be? She shares his sorrows; why not his joys?

It is not an uncommon thing that the man weds the sweetheart of his childhood, the playmate of his boyish days, when, hand in hand, they roamed together and no boy chum could tear them apart.

Puppy love is supplanted by the great transcendental love that cements a life-long intimate friendship. A great man proved his appreciation of this and his desire for its continuance by replying, when asked the question what one thing he would most desire should he have to depart this life, "My wife's second husband."

Three Reasons.

He was not like the man who, being asked how many times he was married, replied:

"Three times. Once for love and twice for general housework."

Pity the poor woman who slaves for her husband, only to die of hard labor and leave her savings to his second wife.

A woman who was ill-mated once complained, "My friend is so much more sympathetic than my husband. He is so considerate, so kind."

It afterward developed that this friend grew weary of his attentions in a much shorter time than the husband. Comparisons are always fatal.

The man who holds his tired, hard-working wife in comparison to the painted woman he meets upon the street always loses. Poverty is one curse of domestic infelicity, but the wife who can share it with her husband has found the marriage goal. There is an argument for incompatibility which does not extend to the statutory ground.

No woman should be compelled to spend her earthly existence with a brute, an inebriate, or a libertine, and no man should be forced to abide with a woman who has dropped from her pinnacle as a helpmeet to a nag or a shrew.

An unwise man once attempted to cure his wrangling wife by breaking a piece of the best china at every one of these spells. It was expensive and not effective.

Another friend, with more success used to call in a doctor every time hysteria developed. The patient improved rapidly.

A seemingly unending wrangle can,

Do You Know---

The Prussian Guards, whom King George and the German Emperor reviewed recently, were originated by Frederick I, whose ambition it was to form a royal bodyguard of giants. Every country was ransacked by his agents to supply recruits, and no head that towered above the crowd, even in the bazaars of Aleppo or Cairo, could escape the crimps of the Prussian King. The most extravagant sums were offered to men of exceptional inches, an Irishmen, more than seven feet high, who was picked up by the Prussian Ambassador in London, receiving a bounty of $6,000.

Should the United States purchase from Mexico 250,000 square miles of Mexico for $30,000,000 it will not be the first addition by purchase to the great American Commonwealth. A century ago Napoleon I relinquished France's claim to Louisiana and Arkansas for $15,000,000, and in 1867 Russia exchanged Alaska for a cash payment by the United States of $7,000,000. More recently a strip of Central America, embracing five miles on either side of the Panama Canal, was purchased for $10,000,000 from the Republic of Panama.

Nothing is more amusing than to watch on a winter's day the marvelous intelligence with which the pigeons of St. Mark's, in Venice, can discriminate between residents and visitors in the grand square of that city, the Plaza of St. Mark. The moment a foreigner shows his face in the plaza the pigeons set upon him in crowds, hoping to be fed. They do not trouble the natives, who may be sunning themselves by the hundred in the square.

CONFIDENCE MEN SHOW TARHEEL EASY MONEY

He Goes Home From New York for More Funds and There Learns Something More.

NEW YORK, July 4.—During all the many years that Edward Lee Baxter Davidson had been living in the progressive town of Charlotte, N. C., it was his foolish belief that the only way to make money is to work for it.

Leading about $1,000 in cash and a draft for $10,000 by the right hand, he arrived in this hospitable village on June 24. Four days later he was going to accompany a steamship to the other side.

He registered at the Hotel Martinique, and there met a well-dressed young man.

In the cafe the well-dressed young man was met by a friend who almost tore a pocket in trying to remove an obese roll of yellowbacks in an unostentatious manner.

Easy, Too Easy.

"This is a mere nothing," said the friend, carelessly. "When I see so many really intelligent young men working for money it breaks my weak heart."

That called for an explanation, and it was given. By tapping the wires that carry racing results one could make a fortune in 20 minutes.

After several minutes Davidson at length persuaded the young man to accept a few dollars from him for sample bets. He was successful. He wanted to know more about this road to riches and, on being assured that the more money you put up the more you made, he handed $700 to the well-dressed young man.

Goes Home for Money.

Somehow or other the money was lost, but, said the well-dressed one, Davidson should not be discouraged. He should make a bigger bet.

"Could you use this $10,000 draft?" he asked.

They could, if they knew that Mr. Davidson really had the money. Mr. Davidson replied quickly he could prove that he had by going to his home and getting it. He went back to Charlotte and there opened his heart to Frank Osborne, brother of James W. Osborne, the lawyer, of this city. Frank Osborne, suspicious, instructed Davidson to see James W. This he did and Mr. Osborne took Davidson to Deputy Police Commission Dougherty, who wired Frank Osborne to telegraph to the suspects when they would arrive.

The two tappers were arrested when they met Davidson. The North Carolinan took a liner to Europe.

ATHLETIC CLUB TEAM WINNER IN LOCAL MEET

By Innis Brown.

SEVERAL hundred spectators braved the sizzling rays of a July sun at Piedmont Park Friday morning to watch the first field meet pulled off by the Playgrounds Committee of city parks. In one or two of the events they were repaid for their bravery, and the fact that a larger number did not beat a hurried retreat to the waters of Piedmont lake is evidence of the fact that there is real local interest in such athletic events.

A large number of entrants had been registered for the various events. However, the broiling sun, no doubt, caused many of these to change their minds, even after they had reached the scene. This was especially true in the running events, and accounts for the fact that more starters did not toe the mark.

In the 100-yard dash, the opening event, Hill, of the Athletic Club, came home ahead of a good margin. In fact, he held the field well enough in hand to look back over his shoulder as he reached the tape. Brannen, also of the Athletic Club, ran second, and a clubmate, Allen, took third. A large number were carded to go in this race, but all save four or five were scratched.

440 Is Great Race.

The quarter-mile run furnished the best contest of the meet. Four contestants entered, but within the first 100 yards the race had narrowed down to Allen and Locke, both of the Athletic Club. The former reached the finish first by a step, the time being 52 2-5 seconds.

Locke came back in the half-mile event, winning as he pleased. Five men faced the starter, and by the time the first turn was reached Locke had opened up a nice lead, which he improved all the way. He finished 30 yards ahead of the field, without extending himself. Jarvis came in second, with Weaver third.

The running high jump was taken by Walter Robinson, of the Athletic Club, with a jump of five feet five inches. J. M. Beutell, affiliated with the same club, was second, with "Buss" Beutell, unattached, third.

"Buss" Beutell reversed the decision in the running broad jump with a leap of 18 feet 10 inches. Hill was second, and Dubard third.

Ben Montgomery, of the Athletic Club, won the pole vault at 8 feet 9 inches. Buss Beutell finished second in this event, with Blodgett and Sullivan tied for third place.

Walter Dubard had comparatively easy sailing in the shotput. He got 42 feet 6 1-2 inches in one heave of the preliminary. This was enough by more than a foot. West, of the Fifth Regiment, came second with a put of 41 feet 4 inches. Jones scored third with 39 feet 11 inches.

Hugh Mauck ran away with the hammer throw. His best effort was 139 feet. This was more than 33 feet better than his next opponent. MacKinnon scored second best with 105 feet 10 inches. Brannen was third with 100 feet 2 inches.

Sullivan Wins Steeplechase.

The steeplechase was run over a course beginning on the east side of the lake and finishing at the regular mark on the track. It included swimming the neck of the lake near the bridge. Wesley Meyers got away ahead and completed the aquatic performance with a lead of 20 paces. He crossed the green from the lake to the track with such a margin. Sullivan, however, caught him tiring when less than 100 yards from the finish and won by ten paces. Weaver ran third.

A summary of points according to clubs shows the Athletic Club ahead with a total of 44. The Fifth Regiment made second place with 11 points, and S. V. D. scored 8. Winners of the remaining 17 points entered unattached.

The meet was handled by the following officials: J. O. Cochran, referee; J. W. Heisman, judge of finish; Dr. Dan Sage, timer; Joe Bean, clerk of course. Charlie Wahoo, judge of weight contests; Ben Adams, starter; Willis Westmoreland, announcer.

VETERANS WIN HONORS

Grant-Thornton Cop Georgia Title

GRANT and Thornton, in their prime the greatest double tennis team of all Dixie, demonstrated that they are strong players even now by defeating Mansfield and Smith on the courts of the Piedmont Driving Club Thursday afternoon, 6-4, 11-9, 7-5. The match was started several weeks ago, but was postponed in the second set and was taken up where it was left off.

Grant and Thornton won the opening game yesterday, making the score 8-7 in their favor, but Smith and Mansfield won the next and deuced the set again. Not until a total of twenty games had been played was the set decided.

In the third set after Grant and Thornton had Smith and Mansfield 3-1, the latter won the fifth game, and with the score fifteen-forty against them in the sixth pulled up and finally won, tying the score 3 all.

The only time that Smith and Manning led in games during the afternoon was in the third set when they had their opponents 5-4, but Grant and Thornton came strong in the next game, winning it and also the next two, which gave them the game 7-5 and also the match.

Mansfield did some pretty playing. Grant and Thornton directed most of their clouts at him and he handled them well. Grant and Thornton played him almost entirely throughout the match, preferring his returns to the rifle-like shots of Smith.

In the finals in the mixed doubles Miss Stanton and Thornton won by default from Miss Muse and Carter, as Carter is playing in the tournament now going on at Augusta.

DIRECTORS DID NOT ASK SMITH ABOUT PITCHER

Manager Billy's Advice Was Not Sought in Purchase of "Pop-Boy" Smith.

ALTHOUGH Bill Smith, manager of the Crackers, does not know anything about the desire of the local team to get Clarence "Pop Boy" Smith, it is more than probable that the Crackers will have to do without the White Sox hurler.

According to a report from local headquarters Comiskey offered Smith to the Crackers for $2,000, under optional agreement. This was in a night letter Tuesday night. The local club accepted his proposition by wire on Wednesday morning.

Bill Smith, when called up this morning over the phone, said he knew nothing of the deal. This seems to be a queer condition of affairs, as the Cracker manager is usually notified of all deals.

Smith pitched the last four innings of the game against the Tigers on Wednesday, and held that hard-hitting crowd to one hit. This made such an impression that the White Sox decided to call off the trade.

The local club, however, is still after Smith and hopes to land him before the month is over. The Crackers are badly in need of another good twirler right now to help Conzelman, Dent, Price, Musser and Brady.

There is also a rumor going the rounds these days that everything is not running smooth between the local directors and Billy Smith. Smith's ignorance in the White Sox deal can not be accounted for, unless the directors are discouraged with several deals the Cracker manager has pulled off. There is still some talk about the way the local club has been stung in the Dent trade when they turned over $2,000 to Washington for the twirler.

GUNBOAT SMITH WANTS GO WITH GEORGE CARPENTER

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 5.—Gunboat Smith, claimant of the world's title for heavyweight boxers, has challenged George Carpentier, the young French champion of Europe, to a 20-round contest for $5,000 a side in England, France or Belgium. If Carpentier agrees the match probably will be arranged to take place during this summer.

SULLIVAN WINS; AHEARN KNOCKS OUT BARTFIELD

BUFFALO, July 4.—Jack Twin Sullivan outpointed Barney Williams in a fast ten-round bout here last night.

Young Ahearn knocked out Soldier Bartfield in eight rounds.

Tommy Bresnahan drew with Willie Houck.

TURF RACING A LUXURY.

PARIS, July 5.—The average cost of keeping a race horse in France is placed at $1,000 a year. The total training expenses in France, not taking into account the capital invested in the various stables, is placed at $5,600,000. The total of the prizes offered is $3,600,000. Hence the owners support an annual deficit of $2,000,000.

EMPIRE LEAGUE NOTES

Waycross has released Second Baseman Brouthers, who has signed with Americus. He will play the outfield as well as the infield, and while with Waycross led the team at the bat and in base stealing. Internal dissension is given as the reason for his release. He is a clever player and will make good wherever he plays.

While not so well pleased with the start of the season, fans in Waycross are banking on Wild Bill Clark to give Waycross a pennant winning team.

In Chancy the Americus team has an outfielder that is bound to go up. He is a steady hitter, getting two and three hits a day almost as easy as some people eat watermelon. He is fast on his feet, too, and gets many hard chances in right.

By swapping a three-game series to enable Valdosta to play at home next week for a celebration Brunswick will play six straight games in Brunswick this month with Valdosta.

In Griffin, Americus has a first baseman who makes friends wherever he goes. He is always happy—in fact, has a winning smile besides a batting eye.

Few teams in any league boast of as many reliable left-handers as the Valdosta team. Otto Jordan seems to know good men when he sees them from the kind of material his team is made up of, even if the best of them have off days once in a while.

Some idea of the class of baseball that the Empire is capable of might be found in a daily comparison with the scores of the big leagues. There is hardly a bad game played in the Empire but what a worse one is found in a higher league.

Claiming that the Americus team had thirteen men in uniform on the Waycross diamond Wednesday, Waycross filed a protest for the first game of the double bill. President Groover attended the game and had his attention called to the alleged violation of the 12-player rule.

No one in the Empire circuit any longer doubts that the league will be in existence next year. Plans have already been made in Cordele and one or two other cities for next year's schedule.

Practically every team in the league wants to win the race in the second half, and with this in view are making a number of changes. The race from now on is going to be a keen one and much faster baseball will be seen than ever before in the new league.

"Goat" Holliday, of Atlanta, the Empire's benedict, continues to pull off sensational plays at first. He has made a home in Waycross and can stay here as long as he pleases. "Goat's" wife is at every game to see him play and, needless to say, the youngster does even better than heretofore, which is saying a great deal.

Attendance reports continue to show that fans in the cities of this league will support good baseball. None of the cities expected to make money the first season and yet it is stated on good authority that more than one city is well ahead of the game financially and hopes to finish the season with a neat pile in the treasury. All of which sounds good for next year's season.

FRED TONEY IS LET OUT; BACK TO LOUISVILLE CLUB

CHICAGO, ILL., July 4.—Fred Toney, heavyweight pitcher of the Cub team, was given notice of his release to the Louisville team of the American Association. The big fellow never was much of a big league success, though pitching a fair sort of game now and then.

This release brings the Cubs down to the limit of twenty-five players.

Carter Plays Ramspeck in Finals

AUGUSTA, July 4.—The ladies' tennis championship was won here Thursday by Mrs. Johnson after three terrific sets, by a score of 7-9, 6-2, 6-3. Miss Adger's forehand drive is one that would do credit to anyone, either man or woman, and it was on the strength of this drive that she won the first set. Mrs. Johnson won the rest on her ability to cover her court and her placing.

The men's singles were carried through the semi-finals, the survivors being E. V. Carter, Jr., of Atlanta, ex-South Atlantic champion, and Carl Ramspeck, also of Atlanta and also an ex-South Atlantic States champion.

The final between these two will be played off this afternoon about 6 o'clock, and should prove one of the prettiest matches ever seen in Augusta. These two have met once before in Augusta, the event being the challenge round two years ago, when Ramspeck was champion and Carter challenger. Carter won on this occasion in straight sets on a rather wet court.

The results in the men's doubles were as follows:

First Round—Erwin brothers defeated Phinizy and Ridgeley, 6-2, 6-4.

Second Round—A. Capers and M. Kennedy defeated Ferris and Brand, 6-2, 5-7, 6-2. Hall and Parks won by default from Brinson and Branch. Waring brothers defeated Carter and Griffith, 6-3, 6-4. R. Capers and Mikell won by default from White and Bredenberg. Marrett and Gary defeated Hester and Wall, 6-4, 5-7, 6-2.

Third Round—Waring brothers defeated Hall and Parks, 6-1, 6-3, and by winning get a place in the semi-final in the top half.

The following are the results of the matches played in the consolation singles:

Second Round—Crockerson defeated Roseboro by default. Matthews defeated Harper, 6-2, 6-3. Capers defeated Wright, 6-4, 6-4. Stulb defeated Berkmire, 6-2, 6-4. Roseman defeated Sheridan, 6-1, 6-1.

The results of the mixed doubles matches are as follows:

First Round—Mrs. Milam and Reynolds defeated Miss Emily Thomas and J. K. Orr, Jr., 3-6, 6-4, 7-5. Mrs. Johnson and G. W. Waring defeated Miss Thorn and Ramspeck, 6-0, 6-1.

LOOKS BRIGHT ONCE MORE FOR CRACKER CLUB

Their Fourth Straight Victory Is One Fine Ball Game—Pennant Hopes Revive.

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE Crackers came home from their road trip looking like pennant winners. They went crazy with the stick, ran bases at will and played errorless ball.

No team has looked better here this year.

Of course any hyper-enthusiasm can be discounted two ways, to wit:

First Way—The Crackers have looked like pennant winners a score of times this season—and the next day it rained. You get the idea?

Second Way—The local team was playing against one of Dixie's saddest little teams, the puny Pelicans.

BUT after you've discounted all the notes of gloom and after you've made due allowances for everything, the Crackers still keep right on looking like a million dollars.

They not only won Thursday's game against the Pelicans, 9 to 0, but just previous to that they had won two from the league-leading Gulls and one from the powerful Billiken club. Also they just managed to lose the semi-final Billiken game by one run and a miracle.

Price pitched a positively bully game yesterday. The Crackers hammered Walker clean sideways, and the whole affair was fine.

There wasn't a sad note struck until after the game, when the current gave out and left most of the baseball cars stranded, half-way between Ponce De Leon and Atlanta. It must have clouded up out at Bull Sluice or sprinkled in Marietta.

THURSDAY'S game was illuminated by some of the most brilliant fielding that good old Ponce De Leon ever saw. The star performance by an infielder was made by McDowell. In the third, with Price on first (and he got there with hits three out of his four times up), Welchonce grounded briskly about ten feet to the right of second base. McDowell went for it, reached out, caught the ball, fell down and threw to second, all with one motion. Price was forced and McDowell sprawled all over the ground, with the ringing cheers of the Atlanta spectators in his ears.

Tommy Long absolutely discounted that. In the ninth Spencer hit a low fly to right field. It sailed, almost on a line, right smack to the right field sign boards—which are deep as the bottomless pit. How Tommy Long got back there nobody knew, but he did, made a terrific leap and plucked the pill right off the sign board. He came down all spraddled and it was not until he climbed back on his feet that the spectators realized he had held the ball.

WHEN the game was over Charley Frank strolled out to his limousine (oh, yes, he rides in 'em now) grinning. It was too awful to worry about. And surely the Pelicans would be any man's idea of nothing on earth to worry about. It's a great team, but it isn't synchronized. Nothing comes off right. They hit—but nobody is on. They cover bases—but somebody has just covered it for them. They run bases—but arrive too late. They field brilliantly at odd times—but bobble in the pinches.

However, Charley Frank may wake them up yet. He has several players on the team—and up to the time he hooked up with Cleveland he was mighty resourceful about getting players when he needed them.

CHANGES IN COLUMBUS TEAM; KREBS IS RELEASED

COLUMBUS, GA., July 4.—Changes in the line-up of the Columbus baseball team have come thick and fast in the past few days and as a result the Foxes are now claimed to be stronger than they have been at any time in recent years.

Krebs, principal backstop for Columbus for several years past, has been released outright and has joined the Jackson team. Dick Moore, who has been playing second, has been benched, and Keating is holding down the keystone bag. Connie Lewis, an old-time favorite, has joined the team again, while Morrow has been traded to Albany for Brooks.

CAPONI, EASY WINNER, FOULS FREDDIE HICKS

WINNIPEG, MANITOBA, July 4.—After going six full rounds, Freddie Hicks, of Detroit, received an unintentional foul blow from Tony Capino, of Chicago, which put a stop to their scheduled twelve-round bout here. Caponi outfought and outpointed Hicks at almost every stage of the game, Hicks only getting a shade in the second round.

Caponi almost floored his opponent in the first round, Hicks being forced to one knee.

CARL MORRIS BATTLES JACK GEYER TO DRAW

DENVER, COLO., July 4.—Carl Morris, of Oklahoma, and Jack Geyer, of Denver, heavyweights, fought ten rounds to a draw last night.

DROME RACES TO-NIGHT WILL BE HANDICAPS

TO make things interesting in to-night's races it has been agreed to handicap Jock McNeil and "Tex" Richards a quarter of a lap in all preliminary heats and a half-lap in all final heats. This is about the margin by which these two speedsters have been winning and it ought to make the races very close.

Preparations are being made to handle an extra large crowd to-night because of the fact that it is a holiday and that the sport lovers of the city will naturally want to top off a big day by seeing the one sporting event of the night—the motordrome races.

The amateur races will start at 8:10. Jock McNeil will ride his mile against the track record at 8:27. The regular program will begin at 8:30.

Cars will leave Five Points at brief intervals.

Here is the program:

Novice Race.
(Mile heats, 2-mile final.)

ENDURANCE TO DECIDE TITLE GO ANDERSON-CROSS BOUT A SLUGFEST

By Paul Armstrong.
(Famous Playwright and Fight Expert.)

LOS ANGELES, July 4.—Bud Anderson, who is to fight Leach Cross this afternoon, has been put out but once. Once and only once has he known what it means to be dropped for true. But he got it good once and that was from a horse.

Forty-some times has Anderson been matched against men, most of them demanding catch weights and taking a shade anywhere from 10 to 50 pounds, but nobody has ever done as well as the horse.

For two years, which about covers his career as a professional boxer, Bud has won about half his bouts with a knock-out, and the rest, barring a draw or two, were his on decisions. Knock-out Brown, with a wild, desperate swing, dropped and dazed him just enough to win for himself a draw, but what a lacing Brown did get next time to repay for that one swing.

George Memsic was the original discoverer of Anderson. Memsic had fought them all and, beginning to show the ravages of time and hard usage, he went hunting local favorites.

Memsic Unearthed Anderson.

The local favorite of a small but boisterous burg was Tommy Ryan's game. He wrote that stuff. The boisterous burg, once it has a favorite, will turn out to a man and bet some coin that "their boy" can at least stay with those old-timers. Ryan got rich hunting up those spots. Not so with Memsic. He started badly. He picked Anderson. On his return he called to witness and declared that this Bud Anderson had hit him harder than ever he had been hit before in his whole life. He did not know where the punch came from; he did not care.

All he wished to do was to warn people against Anderson. Of course that made Bud's road a little rougher.

And now for one minute let us toy with eugenics again. Anderson represents the last word in rearing for the rugged game. In the woods or breaking horses he has been working at rough labor all his life. Perched on a stage coach in his youth with four half-wild horses and a mountain road before him his eyes and nerves were tested to the limit. Later, when he took up the fighting game he got them at all weights and with murder in their eye. None of the mob he waded through to recognition had a bank account and frequently the little purse they fought for meant all there was in sight.

Bud Never Refused Match.

They did not mind being hurt. They did not know when they were hurt. One has only to see the left guard that Anderson has developed to know that at some time men have swung at him with all they had in the hope of finishing him then and there. But as Anderson once sat still and cold as chilled steel guiding wild horses down a mountain road, so he timed their frantic efforts at his undoing. One by one he dropped them and asked that better men come. Never has he refused a match, never has he picked. He is a real contender for the championship and every living lightweight knows it and knows it well.

Anderson has a perfect left hand, hits straight and knows how to hook. He has got a right which will drop any middleweight if he lands it fair.

But will he beat Cross? Ah, now we come to it. Buddie is short on experience. He has never fought as smart a man as Cross in his life. It's a certainty that Leach will show him many a trick.

Facts Concerning To-day's Big Fights

RITCHIE-RIVERS—Favorite, Ritchie. Odds, 10 to 7. Weight, 134 pounds. Number of rounds scheduled, 20. Arena, San Francisco.

CROSS - ANDERSON — Favorite, Anderson. Odds, 10 to 8. Weight, 133 pounds. Number of rounds scheduled, 20. Arena, Los Angeles.

BRITTON-WHITE—Betting even. Weight, Britton, about 133; White, about 127. Number of rounds scheduled, 20. Arena, New Orleans.

FERNS-DENNY—Favorite, Ferns, 10 to 9. Weight, 145 pounds. Number of rounds scheduled, 10. Arena, New Orleans.

WHITNEY-THOMAS—Betting even. Weight, 133 pounds. Number of rounds scheduled, 10. Arena, New Orleans.

BRITTON AND WHITE READY FOR BATTLE

NEW ORLEANS, July 4.—Jack Britton and Charley White are in great condition for their 20-round battle here to-day. Even money prevails with the betting contingent and thousands of dollars will change hands on the award of the referee.

White's two great victories, both knock-outs, over Joe Thomas have made him a great card here. Two weeks ago he ruled a 10 to 8 favorite. But those who have witnessed the clever Britton in action of late have spread wondrous reports about him. As a result, it is even money and take your pick this morning.

The White men figure that he may be outpointed in the early rounds, but that his stamina and great punch will surely wear Britton down in the last seven or eight rounds. Many of the White followers believe that Charley will win by a knock-out.

Britton is verily figuring on outpointing his opponent. He has been training for speed alone, and in his final work-out of four rounds yesterday he was as fast as lightning.

THOMAS VS. WHITNEY; FERNS MEETS DENNY

NEW ORLEANS, July 4.—There are two corking 10-round bouts to be staged at Joe Golden's Club to-day. In one of them Frank Whitney, of Cedar Rapids, meets Joe Thomas, of New Orleans. In the other, Young Denny, of New Orleans, mixes with Wildcat Ferns, of Chicago.

Whitney and Thomas are expected to put up a swell fight. These boys fought in Atlanta last winter. The decision was a draw. Many thought Thomas had the shade, while others figured that Whitney had proved to be the better man. To-day they will settle once and for all which is the superior boxer. The betting on the outcome is at evens.

Denny has been making a wonderful showing in New Orleans. But the fact that Ferns is the harder hitter and the veteran 10 to 9 are the odds offered, with Wildcat on the short end.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 4.—In the case of the Ritchie-Rivers contest proving a long-drawn-out affair, which of the lightweights is the more likely to retain his fighting strength?

This is one of the questions undergoing discussion on the eve of the battle, and it is a very important one. Moreover, it is a hard one to answer.

When two pugilists are to meet at a certain weight, the average student tries to discover which of the pair will find it easier reaching the notch.

Every old trainer knows that a fighter is apt to lose several pounds during a trying bout, and a wise betting man must keep this in view. It is to his interest to know which of the pugilists is likely to be the more seriously affected by the sloughing off of poundage in the ring.

Weight Surely Favors Rivers.

Right off the reel one would say that Rivers is the one less likely to become weak if the contest is waged at a fast pace and goes over the fifteen-round mark. He is a pudgy fellow, and, while he has had to work to make 134 pounds, it is certain that he can box at 125 pounds if occasion demands it. This means that if Rivers loses a few pounds while battling with Ritchie, no inroads will have been made on his strength.

It may be, as it was with Ad Wolgast in his first match with Tommy Murphy, Rivers, while growing lighter, may simply be fighting himself into better condition.

Now, in the ordinary course of things one could not imagine Willie Ritchie as losing weight to his advantage while a mill was in progress. The champion is a heavy lightweight. This is shown by the fact that he demanded that the notch for the coming mill be fixed at a pound above the lightweight scale.

Came Down From 154 Pounds.

Billy Nolan says that Ritchie weighed fully 154 pounds when he began training for his championship match with Ad Wolgast. This gives an idea of what a big fellow Ritchie is "walking about."

Of course, he did not weigh anything like that when he went into camp for the present match. He had learned his lesson, and by keeping himself actively engaged during his six months of theatrical work he held himself around the 140-pound mark.

But, irrespective of what he weighed when starting out on the present training spell, Ritchie will be pretty well dried out and as lean as any one of Pharaohs kine when he steps into the ring to-day. He will have nothing to come and go on, as is the case with Rivers.

Now, if this were an infallible line of reasoning, Ritchie's friends would have to admit that the longer the fight continued the bluer would become the outlook for Willie Ritchie. But it is not infallible.

All Depends on Endurance.

There is such a difference in ringmen that what would prove a serious disadvantage to one would mean little or no detriment to another.

And it all hinges on that innate quality—ENDURANCE.

BILLIKINS, 7; VOLS, 2.

BALL PARK, NASHVILLE, TENN., July 4.—Montgomery took the morning game from the Vols in easy fashion, 7 to 2, driving More from the rubber in the fifth. Williams checked the heavy scoring. The game came near ending in a riot when the entire Montgomery team began to crab over a decision at third, a fight between Manager Dobbs and Umpire Stockdale being third. A fight between Manager narrowly averted.

Case humbled his former pals, holding the Vols to five widely scattered hits. The Vols played a listless game.

ZIMMERMAN GETS PRIZE; GOOD FOR TWO WEEKS

CHICAGO, July 4.—Heine Zimmerman, the pugnacious third sacker of the Cubs, is $100 richer to-day because he has not sassed, assaulted or assassinated even one umpire in two whole weeks.

A fortnight ago a Cub fan promised Zimmerman $100 if he would remain on his good behavior for two weeks and not be chased from the game for "run ins" with arbitrators. Heine has been a very nice young man for the past two weeks, but yesterday—the last day of the time limit—he almost forgot about the $100 when he was called out at home on a close play.

"DOYLE HITTING, GIANTS UNBEATABLE"—STALLINGS

NEW YORK, July 4.—"Larry Doyle has recovered his old form and that is why the Giants are now leading the National League," said George Stallings, manager of the Boston Braves, to-day. "Until recently Doyle was unable to hit with his usual vigor and the Giants were losing games. But they braced the moment Larry's bat began to meet the ball successfully. He is the king pin of the New York team, and now that he is himself McGraw's men can not be headed off.

BOXING
News of the Ring Game

Quite a number of big fights will be held throughout the country on the Glorious Fourth. The most important are the Ritchie-Rivers; Britton-White and Anderson-Cross affairs. All are scheduled to go 20 rounds.

* * *

Bud Anderson, who is one of the sensations of the season and who has put a stop to a number of good boxers, might also spring a surprise on Cross. The latter, though, has the advantage of being an exceedingly heavy hitter as well as a great ring general.

* * *

It would not be much of a surprise if the fans would wake up on the fifth and discover a new lightweight champion in the person of Joe Rivers.

* * *

Local fans are showing much interest in the Whitney-Thomas bout at New Orleans to-day. Both boys have fought here and have a large following. They are billed to go

Poultry, Pet and Live Stock

Light Brahmas Are The Largest Fowls In Poultry Breeding

Judge F. J. Marshall: Which are the largest breeds of chickens in their respective order as to size, feathered on non-feathered legs, and where can some be procured of pure breed; the largest variety of game chickens, color and where obtainable of pure breed?

Blue Ridge, Ga. H. W. B.

Reply—The largest chicken bred and recognized in the Standard of Perfection (the guide to all thoroughbred poultry breeding) is the Light Brahmas; weights are, cocks, 12 pounds; cockerels, 10 pounds; hens, 9 1-2 pounds, and pullets, 8 pounds. They have pea combs and feathered shanks. Their body color is white with a black stripe down the center on each feather on the neck, and black tails. Inside of wings black not showing on the surface when the wing is folded. The next range in size comes these varieties, all of the same weight: Dark Brahmas, Black, White, Buff and Partridge Cochins, the weights being just one pound lighter than the Light Brahmas all through. All feathered-leg varieties, the Dark Brahmas are the same in characteristics as the Lights. The color is a black penciling on a gray ground color, the penciling being very narrow and conforming to the edge of the feathers in shape. The male has a black tail. The female's tail is black, except the two top feathers, which are penciled. Cochins are next in size; weight, 11 pounds; cockerels, 9 pounds; hens, 8 1-2 pounds, and pullets, 7 pounds. Cochins are noted for their extreme full feathering and very short legs, which make them appear to be almost one big, fluffy ball of soft feathers from head to toes. The general outline might be described as round, being short from head to tail, with high rounded back in female and full back in male; tails very short; in fact, the tail of the female scarcely shows at all. They are bred in four varieties, Buff, Black, White and Partridge. In form of penciling the Partridge is the same as the Dark Brahma, but the color of the penciling is dark brown on a surface of mahogany red. The Brahmas and Cochins are all feather-legged varieties, the Cochins being much more profuse than the Brahmas. The Cochin has a small single comb. The next in size are the Orpingtons, Buff, Black and White, all smooth-shanked varieties. Weights are, cocks, 10 pounds; cockerels, 8 1-2 pounds; hens, 8 pounds; pullets, 7 pounds. Comb, single, of medium size and five points. In shape the Orpingtons are rather shorter than the Plymouth Rocks, but not so blocky as the Wyandotte; legs rather large and stocky. The skin and flesh are white, as is the case with all fowls of English origin and make-up. The Buffs should be clear buff throughout, the Blacks solid black, and the Whites solid white. The buffs have a tendency to throw some black in tails, so when a little of it shows up there it should not be considered an impurity of blood. Breeders of these varieties should advertise in The Georgian.

July the Month to Get Most for Your Money Buying Good Stock

For those who are striving to be economical in their outlay for good stock July is the month of the year in which to get the most for their money purchasing good breeding stock. Any one who is regularly in the business has before this time hatched all the young stock he can handle and as a rule has not the room to carry over all his breeding stock, and for the sake of making them move off lively will offer them at a greatly reduced price. A few dollars invested at this time with some good breeder for a pen of first-class chickens would be money well placed. True, you would have to carry them through the molt, but that does not begin to offset the big reduction secured. A pen of chickens bought now and fed lightly for a month and the feed increased after that time should soon come into laying, and with judicious management a few fall chickens could be raised and still have the parent stock ready for early spring business. This is not a theory of ours, it is a custom of many of the best poultry people all over the country, and beneficial to both buyer and seller.

In your endeavors to make a purchase of this character be sure you strike some one who really has a surplus he does not wish to carry over, and for that reason will let them go for a sacrifice. A few hundreds of dollars invested in this way by the farmers of the South at this time to get good stock with which to supplant their scrubs would mean thousands of dollars to them during the next twelve months.

We only wish each and every one could see it as we have seen it tried, time and again in our experience in traveling over the country, and how we have been told by those who had made the experiment, as they called it, of the increased profits they had derived by handling first-class, thoroughbred poultry. So well satisfied are they that they could not be hired to go back to the old plan of the "scrub is good enough for me."

There is no experiment about it, it is a business proposition.

Eggs—All Varieties.

THE EGGS of different varieties of fowls will be found classified under their respective breeds in the future, instead of under the classification of "Eggs."

Medium-Sized Acreage Tracts

ALL of us know the profit that is usually made from acreage. It is almost a conceded fact that if a person owns good acreage, he has a sure profit in it sooner or later. When we think of acreage propositions, we think of lots of land, and naturally lots of money, because the usual acreage transaction involves a great deal of money. The demand for good, close-in acreage for subdivision purposes is increasing every day. A trip to the outskirts of the city in any direction you choose to take will convince you of this fact. We are going to offer a tract of about 100 acres, between Decatur and East Lake, which we have cut up into five, ten and fifteen acre tracts. The price and terms on these tracts make it possible for almost anybody to handle them.

Park Community To Cost $150,000

Twenty West Peachtree Cottages. To Sell James Home—University Club Plans—Aragon Hotel Offer.

A park community plan which will involve the expenditure of probably $150,000 and revolutionize a section of West Peachtree has been evolved by Lavender Ray, owner of considerable property on West Fourteenth and West Peachtree. Mr. Ray will utilize the depressed northeast corner of West Peachtree and West Fourteenth Streets for a handsome three-story apartment house and erect 20 artistic cottages for young married couples in a park space which he owns between West Fourteenth and West Fifteenth Streets, with frontage on West Peachtree.

"I hope to build the apartment house for $25,000, although it may cost more," declared Mr. Ray in speaking of his plans, "and to spend an average of $4,000 to $5,000 on the cottages. A handsome colonnade will extend over the West Peachtree entrance and the colonnade effect will be carried out through the string of ten cottages on either side, with portecochere effects between the dwellings. The trees will make it possible to provide a little park and playground for children.

"I hope to provide a restaurant where all couples can get their meals, and to supply all the cottages with heat from a central heating plant, possibly from the apartment house. The dwellings will be uniform in size and architecture."

Mr. Ray has drawn rough plans for the colonnade and will soon begin sketches for the dwellings. His frontage on West Peachtree is 175 feet and the depth between the other streets 572 feet. He expects to cut a street like Grant Place through the center of the property, to be 50 feet wide at the front and 40 feet wide at the other extremity. Attractive alleyways will be provided for automobiles and other conveyances behind the cottages, and entrance can also be effected through the rear.

The West Peachtree frontage for the apartment is 100 feet, and the frontage on Fourteenth Street is 118 feet.

To Sell Peachtree Home.

John H. James, the well-known banker and real estate operator, has placed on private sale his former home place at 314 Peachtree, on the west side of the street between Porter Place and Baker Street, and just south of the old J. Scott Todd lot. This property was bought by Mr. James fifteen years ago for $7,000, or at the rate of a little less than $130 a foot. The two-story frame home cost him about the same amount. To-day property in this block is held at $1,500 to $1,600 a foot, which would make the 54 by 175-foot lot worth $81,000 to $86,400. The dwelling is now rented as a boarding house.

Mr. James is also the owner of the property at 135 Whitehall Street, on which is located the Martin & Knott Furniture Company. This is on the west side of the street just north of Trinity Avenue. Mr. James bought it a number of years ago for about $15,000, and to-day holds it at $50,000. He is not yet ready to sell this parcel, however.

University Club Plans.

Hal F. Hentz, of the firm of Hentz & Reid, architects, has been put to work on plans a new University Club home, and is expected to complete a tentative sketch shortly. The University Club has under consideration a building in the neighborhood of the Aragon Hotel, which will be extensively remodeled if the plans of the executive committee are carried out. It is planned to install shower baths, a swimming pool, a gymnasium for light exercises, lockers, etc., and to take the building on a lease.

Members of the club are desirous of obtaining a location close to Five Points, and for this reason nothing has been considered seriously north of Baker Street. Among places mentioned have been the J. R. Hopkins home at the southeast corner of Baker and Peachtree, the former home of Charles E. Sciple at the northwest corner of Kimball and Cypress Streets, and the Joseph Rhodes Building back of the Winecoff Hotel, on West Ellis Street.

The University Club must vacate the old Abbott home in October, and on account of the short space of time the executive committee have gone ahead with preparations to move.

Offer on Aragon Hotel.

It has been learned on good authority that an offer was refused the other day on the Aragon Hotel property, the owners declining to name any price. This is the property that a would-be purchaser offered several years ago to cover with dollars, and was told by the late George W. Collier that he could get a warranty deed if he would put the coins on edge. The new prospects were not even given this opportunity.

The Aragon is under lease to the Harrels for hotel purposes.

Job Still Unfinished.

Although the impression has gone abroad that Peachtree Road paving has been completed from Buckhead to the DeKalb County line, property owners north of William S. Witham's deny it in positive terms. They declare that the bulk of the convicts have been transferred to Peachtree work south of Buckhead and that only a handful are left on the other job. The said property owners have been placated, however, through circumstances. Whereas the outlying work has not been completed, the closer-in job is getting good attention.

The convicts, by the way, are taking a rest until the Fourth of July has passed.

Railroad Rumblings Heard.

Where is the railroad "lightning" going to strike on the West Side? A hundred property owners would like to know, since their land will jump far above what they paid for it. "I have a large tract on the West Side," declared a young business man Thursday, "and I would give a good deal to know if any railroads are coming through my property."

One of the best posted real estate men in the city declared that something big was going on and he couldn't find it out. "They haven't let me on to it," he said, "but I expect to get in before they are through. I have had some quiet offers on my property, but I have not set any price. My tip is to watch Walton Street. I believe a spur track will run up this thoroughfare before long and I shouldn't be surprised if the Seaboard will use it. The Seaboard is dependent on the N., C. and St. L., and through it, the L. and N., for both its freight and passenger terminals in Atlanta, and I believe is figuring on an arrangement of its own. I expect them to build both passenger and freight depots on the West Side."

Plans for running a connection between the Southern and the A., B. and A. near Mangum Street, and for putting a spur track adjacent to property of Judge E. C. Kontz and Philip Weltner for manufacturing purposes have already been told. That there is something else in the nature of a big surprise, however, is the belief of many, and the railroads are being watched closely.

Twelfth Story on Skyscraper.

Workmen are now ready to put the steel on the twelfth story of the Healey Building. Having placed the girders on the tenth floor, they are going two higher. The Healy Building now towers above the Grant Building and will soon surpass the Empire.

To Sell Lots at Auction.

Five lots and a six-room house at the corner of Park Avenue and Bryant Street, Grant Park section, will be sold July 9 by William A. Vernoy.

Ansley Park Buy.

Harry L. Waters has bought from A. C. Woolley a California bungalow on a 50 by 240-foot lot at 85 East Park Lane, Ansley Park, for $7,500. The deal was handled through W. L. & John O. DuPree.

Demand for Apartment Houses.

Atlanta continues to be a good market for apartment houses. Although a number are constantly building, there seems to be little trouble disposing of them at good prices. Cordial interest accordingly centered around the transfer of the Byron on West Peachtree, near Linden, from Byron Souders to I. P. Bradley, of Newnan, at $150,000. This was in the nature of a swap, Mr. Bradley putting in a Coweta County farm, besides assuming a loan of $40,000 placed June 30 through the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company, and giving notes for most of the difference.

The property is 84 by 200 feet and adjoins a 100-foot parcel which Mr. Souders owns at the southwest corner of Linden and West Peachtree and which was the old Bewick place.

The Byron contains eighteen apartments and rents for $15,000 a year. It is distinctive in the possession of grotesque masks with which the front pillars are studded. Mr. Souders got these from a cast made by a local artist, and he introduced many other innovations picked up here and there.

Remodeling Eiseman Store.

The Eiseman Brothers' Company has begun making alterations on its store at 11, 13, 15 and 17 Whitehall, the same to cost about $4,000. The front stairway is being closed up and will be placed toward the rear, and more attractive show windows are being built. The Krueger Manufacturing Company has the contract. Business is going on as usual.

Prominent Atlantans Buy.

A. V. Gude, Jr., J. R. Moore, A. A. and Joseph Doonan, Lee M. Jordan, John J. Lynch, Joel Hunter and Chas. S. Kingsbery have bought a batch of ten large building lots in Cobb County just over the Chattahoochee River and on the river car line. The seller was the L. P. Grant estate, and the aggregate consideration $6,000. Mr. Lynch and Mr. Hunter bought two each and the others one each.

The lots are 100 by 400 feet, in the neighborhood of the residences of Howard Matthews, Sid Mitchell and others. A road through them is due to be paved soon.

Exchange Completed.

Details of the recent exchange of properties between Dr. M. A. Massoud and Jonathan B. Frost have been announced. Mr. Frost takes the S. Y. Tupper place at the northeast corner of West Peachtree and North Avenue for $44,000 and gives as part payment 209 Washington Street, formerly the Massoud home, at $25,000, and a vacant lot on the northeast side of Marietta Street, near Pine Street, at $6,000, and assumes the difference.

The Tupper corner is 68 feet on West Peachtree Street and 84 feet on North Avenue. It has been occupied lately by a fraternity house with a chapter at Tech. The lot netted Dr. Massoud $14,000 in three months.

Why Some Influential Bankers Fight the New Currency Bill Secretly, but Bitterly

Some eminent bankers in private conversation object to the Government control of the new currency system in the same angry and intolerant spirit that the railroad men denounced the creation of the Interstate Commerce Commission to supervise their operations in 1887. And yet so greatly has the idea of the supervision of the railroads by a Government board sitting at Washington grown in the popular mind, and SO GREATLY HAVE THE RAILROADS PROSPERED UNDER THIS LAW since 1887, that the only changes since asked by the people have been to strengthen the law and to enlarge the powers of the commission. And the chief desire of the railroads now is TO GET UNDER THE PROTECTION OF THE NATIONAL BOARD to escape from the tyrannies and operations of various State boards.

The bankers of the United States will have to accept the idea of Government control of the new currency system because the power to issue $500,000,000 of emergency notes to prevent panics and to maintain a more stable rate of interest throughout the country is too great a power to vest in the uncontrolled discretion of private citizens.

PRIVATE credit is left where it belongs under the new system, exclusively the concern of the PRIVATE banker. The use of PUBLIC credit is reserved to the nation. The Government can not interfere with any national bank in its ordinary operations any more under the new system than under the old. It can not force any bank either to grant or to refuse credit to any individual; it can not force any bank to discount a single note. It leaves every bank's relations with its own customers unchanged and unaffected.

The Government takes added cognizance only of the twelve Reserve Banks, but these are to be managed by local directors, two-thirds of whom will always be chosen by their own stockholders—the banks—so that in all ordinary operations the banks will be as closely managed by the bankers, without interference by the Government, as the railroads are now managed by railroad men without unwarranted interference by the Government.

The greatest opposition to the proposed law will come CHIEFLY FROM THOSE BANKS AND BANKERS THAT HAVE BEEN MOST ACTIVE IN THE PAST IN CONTROLLING THE RESERVES OF THE BANKS, THE PROMOTION AND FLOTATION OF NEW TRUSTS OR CORPORATIONS, AND THE CREDIT OF LARGE BORROWERS.

How completely this control has been concentrated in a few private hands of late years we shall now show by three highest expert authorities—first, by President George M. Reynolds, of the Continental and Commercial National Bank of Chicago. This bank, in its holding of the deposits of other banks, is the largest in the United States. In an address before the National Business Congress in Chicago, on December 12, 1911, Mr. Reynolds said:

"THE MONEY POWER OF THE COUNTRY NOW LIES IN THE HANDS OF A DOZEN MEN. I PLEAD GUILTY TO BEING IN THE LAST ANALYSIS ONE OF THESE MEN. . . FOUR OR FIVE BANKERS IN NEW YORK, TWO OR THREE IN CHICAGO, TWO OR THREE IN ST. LOUIS, CAN CONTROL THE QUESTION OF WHETHER LARGE LOANS SHALL BE MADE TO BANKING CORRESPONDENTS THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY."

The late J. P. Morgan and his most intimate banker associate, George F. Baker, of the First National, testifying before the Pujo Committee last winter, admitted almost as great concentration of money-power as that described by Mr. Reynolds. But both vehemently denied the existence of a "Money Trust," because, they said in substance, these enormous reserves of other banks were concentrated in such vast heaps under the control of Mr. Morgan, Mr. Baker and their associates only because the owners of the money trusted these bankers, in their integrity and prudence, and FOUND BY EXPERIENCE THAT THE MONEY WAS USED PROFITABLY TO ITS OWNERS. The other banks could withdraw the funds at will. There was no agreement, and no compulsion, and therefore no "Money Trust." Everything was entirely voluntary, legal, regular.

Mr. Baker admitted that the "concentration of capital had gone pretty far—probably far enough," and that "in the hands of bad men it would be extremely dangerous." But he added in effect that only great and good men could retain the confidence of bankers in such degree as to be intrusted with such power by other bankers voluntarily.

Without such concentrations of both credit and capital the vast underwritings and the extraordinary overcapitalization of many trusts which the country has witnessed would be impossible.

Undoubtedly these eminent bankers who have been and still are in control of credit have handled all the money intrusted to them PRUDENTLY AND PROFITABLY FOR THE OWNERS OF THE MONEY. But how have their operations affected the public interest?

In the coffee valorization scheme, in the manipulation of the Coal roads, in the making of the Steel Corporation, the small deposits of millions of Americans, through the banks, were used by these Masters of Credit to create overcapitalized companies, to distribute watered stock to the public, and to raise prices of necessaries of life to consumers.

The people's money has thus been used against themselves by the very trustees to whom the public and private credit was temporarily intrusted.

The operation is very profitable—to the trustees. We shall see, also from official sources, the testimony of bankers before the Stanley Investigating Committee, only a single instance to show how profitable the underwriting by syndicates of new trusts sometimes is. The instance is the launching of the largest of all the trusts in which Mr. Morgan was the chief, and Mr. Baker and, we believe, Mr. Reynolds were among his principal associates.

The United States Steel Underwriting Syndicate was for two hundred millions and it floated more than FOURTEEN HUNDRED MILLIONS OF SECURITIES. Only one call for $25,000,000, or 12½ per cent, was made on the underwriting syndicate. For that it received 649,988 shares of preferred and a similar amount of common stock. This stock was sold to the public through the Stock Exchange at an average price of about 44 for the common and 94 for the preferred, netting the syndicate $90,500,000. Expenses of the syndicate totaled $3,000,000, thereby involving $28,000,000 actual cash. Deducting the latter amount from $90,500,000, there remains $62,500,000 representing the profits of the syndicate.

Of that amount J. P. Morgan & Co., as managers, received $12,500,000, and the underwriters the remaining $50,000,000. There were paid four cash dividends of $10,000,000 each, which were paid to the syndicate members, and a final dividend of $6,000,000, a total of $46,000,000. The remaining $4,000,000 was subscribed to a second syndicate organized for the purpose of converting preferred stock into bonds, and the underwriters also made a profit on this transaction.

Simultaneously with the sale of this stock to the public, the prices of iron and steel in all their manifold forms were advanced all along the line, so that the Steel Corporation would show large earnings and its stock be made salable to the public at enhanced prices.

It is not from any doubt of the splendid ability or the financial integrity of the men who did this thing, and countless other things of the same kind, that the people of the United States refuse to put all their banks and credit, and the issue of "emergency currency," under the uncontrolled discretion of private bankers, however powerful, experienced or sagacious they may be.

THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES DO NOT WANT GOVERNMENT BY BANKERS OR BY THE MONEY POWER. THEY WANT GOVERNMENT BY THE GOVERNMENT IN THE INTERESTS OF THE WHOLE PEOPLE.

We Should Worry To-day!

This Astonishing Fourth of July at Gettysburg

This is indeed a glorious Fourth of July! The Republic of heroic reminiscence is massed to-day at Gettysburg.

It is not easy for the times about us to grasp the idea of Gettysburg.

It is difficult for this metropolis of the New South—this vast composite of North and South, East and West, of all races and of every creed—busy, practical, prosperous and peaceful—to comprehend the fact that fifty years ago the Americans north of the Potomac and the Americans south of the Potomac, with their bloody hands at each other's throats, were grappling at Gettysburg in the great decisive battle of a long and bloody war.

Ninety thousand Americans under Meade met seventy thousand Americans under Lee in the climax of the ferocious argument over State's Rights and Federal sovereignty, and when they parted at the foot of Cemetery Ridge, fifty thousand Americans, dead or wounded upon the three days' battlefield, made up the appalling holocaust offered upon the altar of a conflicting theory of government which was no more settled by the bloody sacrifice than when the first gun was fired at Sumter in 1861.

Two years later Ulysses Grant at Appomattox wrote with his sword in the final terms of surrender an affirmative recognition of both sides.

And to-day the citizens of Massachusetts resent as jealously an infringement of the Rights of the States as the people of Georgia appeal in emergency to the Power of the Federal Government!

Thousands of survivors of these one hundred and sixty thousand soldiers—survivors and their children—are gathered in joyous reunion at Gettysburg to-day. And the flag of their fathers—serene and splendid—floats over the survivors of Meade and the survivors of Lee—aged and gray or honored and gay, "in mutual well beseeming ranks marching all one way," toward the sunset of life which leaves the indestructible Republic united and glorious in the zenith of its power and its fame.

There will be a thousand vivid reminiscences and a thousand noble lessons taught above the hero sod of Gettysburg to-day. It is no longer the Confederacy's "Field of Grief," but a great nation's mighty Plain of Reunion!

The astonishing number of the survivors attending the national revival of to-day should teach our youth that a brave spirit and a forgiving temper are the great preservers of life, and the promoters of longevity. There were no braver spirits than those at Gettysburg. Nor any more forgiving. For the victors never boasted of their triumph and the vanquished carried no bitterness to defeat.

Also the field of Gettysburg is the historic reservoir from which we draw our fiery and convincing proof of the nation's martial qualities. There was never in human history a more gallant and heroic feat than Pickett's magnificent charge up Cemetery Ridge, and never a steadier and more magnificent answer than Hancock's superb defense.

So that in the martial qualities of offensive and defensive warfare there is writ at Gettysburg the deathless national record of imperishable valor which may be read and spoken to the comfort of our country's friends and to the stern warning of any who may think to be our country's foes.

Give ample battleships and ample guns to the sons of the sires who fought at Gettysburg, and our country will guarantee to keep the world at peace with us.

A Merger That Is in the Interest of Progress

The merging of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons and the Atlanta Medical College into a great and amplified Atlanta Medical College is a matter of far-reaching importance to Atlanta, and the boards of management of the two institutions are to be congratulated that they have effected a consolidation so satisfactory.

Not only will the colleges themselves benefit tremendously by joining hands, but the graduates thereof will enjoy an immediate standing in the medical profession that heretofore it has been impossible for either institution to give them.

The new college has been made eligible to membership in the American Medical Association, which gives all graduates the right at once to practice medicine anywhere in the world.

Plans for the necessarily enlarged quarters of the new institution are ambitious, but there is every reason to suspect that they will be carried to a successful conclusion. And to that end, The Georgian feels sure all Atlanta will cordially co-operate with the gentleman having those plans in charge.

Caesar and Franklin

By WILLIAM VINCENT BYARS

WHEN Julius Caesar wished to show the meaning of the greatest triumph in life, he first combed his hair carefully over a bald spot. He was so careful about this bald spot that it is said he always scratched his head with one finger after combing his hair down over it.

Perhaps this is a lie. But what he did next was to put a wreath of laurel leaves on his head. He then put on a costly purple-bordered cloak. Taking a branch of laurel in one hand and scepter in the other, he passed out the street door and mounted a car drawn by four horses. Then he drove through the streets, and listened to the crowd that shouted for him. While they were shouting, people in the crowd watched the long line of Caesar's soldiers behind the car and of his prisoners in front of it.

Caesar's Great Triumphs.

After Caesar was tired of standing up to listen to the shouting, he had money scattered to the crowd. Then he gave them bread tickets, or what amounted to the same thing. He also gave them free admission to the circus. At the circus he supplied prisoners to fight lions to amuse those who had shouted for him when he was proclaimed a triumphant conqueror and a dictator.

This was the greatest "triumph" in Rome about 46 years before the birth of Christ.

About 1745 years after the birth of Christ, Benjamin Franklin undertook the greatest triumph of history in the small city of Philadelphia. He pulled off his coat and walked out into the street. Then he took hold of the handles of a wheelbarrow and rolled it through the street. Nobody shouted. Some laughed. He came back with the wheelbarrow in about half an hour. Taking a bundle of paper from it, he went inside. Then he printed a newspaper.

This was one way he had of becoming triumphant, but it was not the only one. After printing the newspaper, he washed the ink off his hands and began to experiment with another one of his ideas.

He wanted to catch a jar full of lightning. In his newspaper he tried to persuade his readers to use their common sense. He tried to show them that common sense is always triumphant when it is really used. They thought he had lost his own common sense when he tried to catch lightning in a jar. But he did it. He finally got enough lightning out of a cloud down the string of a kite to fill a jar, so that he could get sparks out of the jar. When he had done this, it was the greatest triumph in history. He had shown that electricity and lightning are the same; that electricity is a "universal force" which can be used in commonsense ways.

This was a "triumph" in Philadelphia about A. D. 1752.

Julius Caesar was born 100 years before Christ. He was born in a great family. It was the "illustrious Julian gens." "Gens" means family. A "gentleman" then did not have to be "gentle." He did have to be born in an illustrious "gens." Caesar did not think it ungentlemanly to have the hands of his prisoners cut off when he was not pleased with them after he had conquered them. He despised people who had nothing but common sense. He was a great genius and one of the greatest conquerors of any age. He conquered his own country. Before he was stabbed to death in Rome, March 15, 44 B. C., he had destroyed the freedom of the greatest republic of the world. After his time, Romans who could not live unless they were free stabbed themselves.

No Illustrious Forefathers.

Franklin did not belong to an illustrious "gens." When he was born in Boston in 1706, he was fifteenth of the seventeen children of Josiah Franklin. Josiah was a poor candlemaker. Poor as he was, he gave his children "the key of all knowledge." He taught them to spell and showed them how to learn to read. In 1790, when Benjamin Franklin died, he had done more than any other man to make his country free and great. His last act was to sign a paper to make the world freer. But his greatest triumph was in discovering the use of common sense. Spell out or read as much as you can use from the best book you can get. Then do not stop to talk about it. Get your common sense to work and see what you can do with what you have learned. Then go on that way, learning and using your own common sense as long as you live. That is the Franklin way to win triumphs.

In the Dog Days

By WEX JONES.

IN the dog days, beloved, remember on account of your health to eschew
Greeting a husker person with the words, "Is it hot enough weather for you?"

And forget not to shun all advice on sure methods of keeping you cool.
For you'll get all mixed up and distressed and you'll feel like a boiling hot fool.

You will read that cold drinks are injurious; you'll read that hot drinks kill you dead;
You will read you should sleep under blankets; and also with none on your bed.

Some say that cold baths will inflame you till you feel like a stove that's red-hot.
Some say that cold tea is just poison, while asserting that coffee is not.

You'll be told that corned beef and potatoes are too heavy for hot weather lunch;
And again you'll be urged to make luncheon on some food that is there with the punch.

You'll be told to wear plenty of flannel, howe'er it may tickle your skin;
And you'll hear that you'll die in ten minutes unless all your clothing is thin.

It's unsafe and moreover it's foolish to toil through the heat of the day,
So one says; the other declares that it's simply fatal to play.

Then, beloved, avoid all these tipsters, who'll make you feel like a fool,
And take the advice of an expert that all you need do is keep cool.

MISSISSIPPI EXPRESS IS LOOTED

Masked Robbers Hold Up Illinois Central Passenger at Lonely Spot South of Memphis.

MEMPHIS, TENN., July 4.—Illinois Central train No. 1, bound from Chicago to New Orleans, was held up by four masked men early to-day one and one-half miles south of Batesville, Miss.

It was believed the men obtained $25,000, although the local officials of the American Express Company say the amount was not that large.

Official news of the hold-up reached Memphis offices of the Illinois Central just before noon. The message said the bandits flagged the train at the Tallahatchie River bridge, near Batesville, Miss., and compelled Engineer A. E. Norton to abandon his cab.

The negro fireman was kept in the engine cab, guarded by a bandit who kept him covered with a revolver, while the others went back and uncoupled the passenger coaches from the mail, baggage and express cars.

Deny Heavy Loss.

The negro fireman ran the cars through Batesville to a point one mile south of the town and stopped in a dense river bottom forest.

Officials of the American Express Company said the bandits did not obtain more than $5,000. Five charges of dynamite was exploded before the safe was opened. Every registered mail pouch was rifled, but postal authorities in Memphis said that money shipments were small because of the holiday.

Following the robbery the bandits ran the engine ten miles south when the fire under the boilers went out. Believing the negro fireman had allowed the fire to die in order to trick them, the bandits threw him out of the cab while the engine was moving rapidly. He was slightly injured. The men abandoned the engine one mile north of Enid, Miss., and entered the forest.

A special train arrived from Jackson, Miss., bringing officers and bloodhounds. A party of Deputy United States Marshals from Memphis, left to take up the chase for the bandits

Car Nearly Wrecked.

Sheriff W. Lemaster, of Batesville, was the first man to reach the express car after the bandits left it. He found the car nearly wrecked.

"By peering into a crack in the safe, which was not completely demolished," said Sheriff Lemaster, "I could see two packages. One was marked '$20,000' and the other '$10,000.' Just inside the outer door of the safe I picked up nearly $500 in loose bills and silver."

Officials of the road say they believe the hold-up men were the same ones who have held up several trains in the last few months in the South. Express Messenger R. E. Hooks, of Cairo, Ill., wired the authorities in Memphis a good description of one of the bandits.

He said as he jumped from the train at the command of the hold-up men he tripped and in falling caught at one of the bandits. His fingers caught the man's mask and jerked it off. The robber cursed him and jabbed him in the ribs with a revolver.

Hold-Up in Wild Region.

Batesville, Miss., is 50 miles from Memphis, Tenn., and is the center of a hilly, thickly-wooded country.

Within the past year there have been numerous train robberies in the South.

The first was in Mississippi, on the Queen and Crescent, near Meridian, when robbers stopped a train and rifled the express car. The express company never made an official statement of the amount stolen, but it was estimated at $18,000. The robbers escaped on horseback through canebrakes into the river bottom. Presumably they waded their horses some distance up the shallow stream, for hounds lost the scent at the river bank.

WILSON PAYS VETERANS TRIBUTE

Princetonian Is First President Since Lincoln to Speak on Historic Battlefield.

GETTYSBURG, PA., July 5.—President Wilson sounded the final note of the battle of peace at the golden anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg in an address before several thousand of the veterans, both blue and gray, in the great reunion tent to-day.

Although practically every President since the great war, including Lincoln, has visited the battlefield here, Wilson is the first, except Lincoln, who came to address the old veterans, and for whom the national salute of 21 guns was fired. He is the first since Lincoln to come in an official capacity.

As the President alighted from the train down in Gettysburg a battery of field artillery from Fort Myer, Va., stationed at the Pennsylvania College on Seminary Ridge, fired the national salute of 21 guns. He was met by Colonel Schoonmaker, president of the Gettysburg celebration commission, who escorted him in an automobile to the tent two miles away.

Out on old historic, battleswept Emmittsburg Road they went, covering in five minutes in a swift motor the path taken by Lincoln, who took half an hour in an old carriage.

Thousands Greet President.

The greatest number to see the President doubtless were the great mass of visitors stopping in the city and the thousands who came from the countryside. The entire tent had been reserved for the veterans and there was much vacant space.

This was due to the fact that many veterans had a misunderstanding as to whether the President was actually coming, a rumor having spread broadcast throughout the camp last night that he had again canceled his engagement. Others felt the President was indifferent and still others had gone home.

The President was received by Assistant Secretary of War Breckinridge, as representing the War Department in charge of the camp, and he was introduced to the audience by Governor Tener, representing the State of Pennsylvania as host to the veterans.

Immediately upon concluding his address the President was escorted from the rear of the tent to his car, which had been switched around through the camp, and he passed out through Long Lane, the central thoroughfare of the great camp.

He did not attempt to make an inspection, but was carried through to the main line of the road and started at once for Cornish, N. H.

Nearly 10,000 veterans left this morning and an equal number will get away this afternoon, if the trains can handle them.

About 6,000 had left previously up to this morning. The greater part of the army of the veterans will leave to-morrow, although the War Department is prepared to keep them Saturday night and feed them Sunday morning.

The President's Address.

President Wilson, in addressing the veterans, said:

"Friends and Fellow Citizens: I need not tell you what the battle of Gettysburg meant. These gallant men in blue and gray sit all about us here. Many of them met here upon this ground in grim and deadly struggle. Upon these famous fields and hillsides their comrades died about them. In their presence it were an impertinence to discourse on how the battle went, how it ended, what it signified. But 50 years have gone by since then, and I crave the privilege of speaking to you for a few minutes of what those 50 years have meant.

"What have they meant? They have meant peace and union and vigor and the maturity and might of a great nation. How wholesome and healing the past has been. We have found one another again as brothers and comrades in arms, enemies no longer, generous friends rather, our battle song past, the quarrel forgotten—ex-

BRISTOL, ENGLAND, July 4.—Intense excitement was caused here today when a militant suffragette hurled a petition for "votes for women" at the head of King George while he and Queen Mary were driving through the streets to the Royal Agricultural Show.

Alperman singled over Wilson's head, and on a passed ball Whitey raced to third. Bailey and Smith fanned. Bisland out, Clancy to Bagby. ONE HIT, NO RUNS.

Boy Overpowers Mad Dog in Battle

While the panic-stricken family barricaded itself on the first floor of the home of Mrs. M. L. Belcher, at 295 Washington Street, J. A. Lafitte, aged 16, rushed to the second floor and overpowered a mad bulldog that had terrorized the neighborhood. Police later shot the brute.

WILSON SPEAKS TO THRONGS AT GETTYSBURG

President, in Stirring Address, Rejoices in Great Reunited Nation—Lauds Heroes.

cept that we shall not forget the splendid valor, the manly devotion of the men then arrayed against one another, now grasping hands and smiling into each other's eyes. How complete union has become and how dear to all of us and how unquestioned, how majestic, as State after State has been added to this, our great family of free men.

"Heirs to Mighty Heritage."

"How handsome the vigor, the maturity, the might of the great nation we love with undivided hearts; how full of large and confident praise that life will be wrought out that will crown a strength with greater justice and with a happy welfare that will touch all alike with deep contentment. We are debtors to those 50 crowded years; they have made us heirs to a mighty heritage.

"But do we deem the nation complete and finished? These venerable men, crowding here to this famous field, have set us a great example of devotion and other sacrifices. They were willing to die that the people might live.

"But their task is done. Their day is turned into evening. They look to us to perfect what they established. Their work is handed on to us to be done in another way, but not in another spirit. Our day is not over; it is upon us in full tide.

"Have affairs paused? Does the nation stand still? Is what the 50 years have wrought since those days of battle finished, rounded out and completed?

Calls Nation Secure.

"Here is a great people—great with every force that has ever beaten in the life blood of mankind. And it is secure. There is no one within its borders, there is no power among the nations of the earth to make it afraid. But has it squared itself with its own great standards set up at its birth, when it made its first noble, naive appeal to the moral judgment of mankind to take notice that a government had now been established which was to serve men, not masters?

"It is secure in everything except satisfaction that its life is right, adjusted to the uttermost to the standards of righeousness and humanity. The days of sacrifice and cleansing are not closed. We have harder things to do than were done in these heroic days of war, because harder to see clearly, requiring more vision, more balance of judgment, a more candid searching of the very springs of right.

"Look around you upon the fields of Gettysburg. Picture the array, the fierce heats and agony of battle, column hurled against column, batteries bellowing to batteries. Valor? Yes, greater no man shall see in war; and self-sacrifice and loss to the uttermost; the high recklessness of exalted devotion which does not count the cost.

The Cost of a Great Nation.

"We are made by these tragic, epic things to know what it costs to make a nation—the blood and sacrifice of multitudes of unknown men, lifted to a greater stature in the view of all generations by knowing no limit to their manly willingness to serve.

"In armies thus marshaled from the ranks of free men you will see, as it were, a nation embattled, the leaders and the led, and may know, if you will, how little except in form its actions differ in days of peace from its actions in days of war.

"May we break camp now and be at ease? Are the forces that fight for the nation dispersed, disbanded, gone to their homes forgetful of the common cause? Are our forces disorganized, without constituted leaders and the might of men consciously united because we contend not with armies, but with principalities and powers and wickedness in high places?

"Are we content to lie still? Does our union mean sympathy, our peace contentment, our maturity self-comprehension and a clear confidence in choosing what we shall do? War fitted us for action, and action never ceases.

Refers to Another Host.

"I have been chosen the leader of the nation. I can not justify the choice by any qualities of my own, but so it has come about, and here I stand. Whom do I command? The ghostly hosts who fought upon these battlefields long ago and are gone? These gallant gentlemen, stricken in years, whose fighting days are over, their glory won? What are the orders for them, and who rallies them?

"I have in mind another host, whom these set free of civil strife in order that they might work out, in days of peace and settled order, the life of a great nation. That host is the people themselves, the great and small, without class, or difference, or kind, or race, or origin, and undivided in interests if we have but the vision to guide and direct them and order their lives aright in what we do.

"Our Constitutions are their articles of enlistment. Their orders of to-day are the laws upon our statute books. What we strive for is their freedom, their rights to lift themselves from day to day and behold the things they have hoped for, and so make way for still better days for those whom they love who are to come after them.

"The recruits are the little children crowding in. The quartermasters' stores are in the mines and forests and fields, in the shops and factories. Every day something must be done to push the campaign forward, and it must be done by plan and with an eye to some great destiny.

"Builded by God's Hands."

"How shall we hold such thought in our hearts and not be moved? I would not have you live even to-day wholly in the past, but would wish to stand with you in the light that streams upon us now out of that great day gone by. Here is a nation that God has builded by our hands. What shall we do with it?

"Who stands ready to act again and always in the spirit of this day of reunion and hope and patriotic fervor? The day of our country's life has but broadened into morning. Do not put uniforms by. Put the harness of the present on. Lift your arms to the great tracks of life yet to be conquered in the interest of righteous peace, of that prosperity which lies in a people's hearts and outlasts all wars and errors of men.

"Come, let us be comrades and soldiers, yet to serve our fellowmen in quiet counsel where the blare of trumpets is neither heard nor heeded and where the things are done which make blessed the nations of the world in peace and righteousness and love."

HOUSE READY TO PROBE LOBBY CHARGES

Rules Committee Virtually Decides to Order Inquiry—Graft Accusations First.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—The House Rules Committee to-day, after hearing statements by Minority Leader Mann and Progressive Leader Murdock, practically decided to order an investigation by the House of the Mulhall lobby charges, to see if members of Congress actually have been corrupted through the lobby activities of the National Association of Manufacturers. A special committee of seven, consisting of four Democrats, two Republicans and one Progressive, will be appointed.

Representative Mann urged the committee to investigate the charges reflecting on the integrity of former members of Congress, particularly former Speaker Cannon.

"Any statement that Uncle Joe Cannon manipulated committees is false," said Mann.

Leader Murdock declared his belief that committees had been manipulated, but said he believed the greatest field for the investigation would be into the activities of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Murdock insisted that the investigation also cover the charge that members of Congress were used to break up strikes.

President Guilty in Athens Bank Failure

ATHENS, July 4.—J. W. Griffin, who was president of the defunct Athens Bank and Trust Company and who was indicted for feloniously "wrecking" the bank, was found guilty by the jury at midnight after being out eight hours, and recommended to the mercy of the court. He will be sentenced by Judge Brand to-morrow. Immediately upon the verdict notice of a motion for a new trial was served.

R. H. McCrary, cashier of the bank, pleaded guilty before Griffin's trial and was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary.

FOURTH QUIETLY OBSERVED; 4 INJURED

Picnics and Athletic Contests Feature Day — Thousands Enjoy Piedmont Lake Bathing.

Four little children, all under 14 years of age, lie in the hospitals of the city, the first victims here in the annual toll of death and injury taken by the celebration of Independence Day.

The injured are:

Walter Pete, 13, 85 Pratt Street.

Charles Garrison, 12, 193 Davis Street.

John Garrison, 9, 193 Davis Street.

O. B. Biggers, 12, 348 Glenn Street.

Walter Pete's hand was painfully lacerated when a toy pistol with which he was playing accidentally exploded.

Charles and John Garrison were seriously injured by the explosion of a toy cannon early in the morning. Eager to celebrate the day, they went out of doors soon after dawn. A few minutes later their mother was startled by their cries of pain. Charles was burned about the face and there is danger that he has lost his sight. Johnny was standing up when the cannon exploded and was hurt about the legs.

Police Guard Doubled.

The first of the accidents occurred last night, when 12-year-old O. B. Biggers was painfully wounded by the discharge of a blank shell held by his playmate, Henry Kaincannon.

Atlanta police will work double turn to-day in an effort to prevent accidents. The night men who quit at 8 a. m. will work until noon. The evening men who come on at 4 p. m. will come on to-day at noon. The day patrolmen who quit at 4 p. m. will remain on duty until 8 p. m.

Chief Beavers states that this is purely to doubly enforce the law, and that any kind of firecrackers or fireworks in the streets will not be tolerated. Pistols are absolutely forbidden and anyone caught with a firearm, even if it is loaded with blanks, will be arrested for carrying a weapon.

Outings Feature Day.

The Fourth of July is being appropriately celebrated in Atlanta to-day. Many downtown buildings and homes in the residence sections are flying American flags in honor of the nation's birthday anniversary, and thousands of Atlantans are enjoying the day in the parks, at barbecues, athletic contests and other places of amusement.

Most of the stores will be closed for the greater part of the day, that the clerks and employees may do their part in making the day a real holiday.

The eyes of the athletically inclined are turned to Piedmont Park as the place to spend the Fourth. Besides the bathing in the lake a field meet was begun this morning, under the direction of Joe Bean, physical director of Marist College. The entries include some of Atlanta's foremost athletes, among them representatives of Marist College, Atlanta Athletic Club and the Fifth Regiment.

Patriotic services, to which representatives of all religious and patriotic bodies have been invited, are being held at St. Philip's cathedral this morning. The services are in the nature of an expression of thanksgiving and a prayer for the continued prosperity of America. The Daughters of the American Revolution are taking a leading part in the services.

Scotch and Germans Celebrate.

Among the outings will be a big barbecue at the Battle Hill Tuberculosis Sanitarium, when the institution will welcome its former patients. The barbecue will begin at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

One of the big celebrations of the day will be held at the Burns Club grounds this afternoon, when the members of the Atlanta Scottish Association will gather for their second annual picnic. Scotch games and exercises will feature the celebration.

2-Cent Passenger Rates for Arkansas

LITTLE ROCK, July 4.—The two-cent passenger rate went into effect in Arkansas to-day following an agreement reached between counsel for the Railroad Commission and the railroads and based largely on the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court, which upheld the right of States to fix rates.

This ends a long legal battle by the railroads to annul the two-cent rate law enacted seven years ago.

RURAL CARRIERS HAVE WARM TILT OVER MEMBERSHIP DUES

L. D. King, of Covington, president of the State Rural Carriers' Association.

He apparently is not greatly worried by the hot fight over payment of dues.

Controversy Precipitated in State Convention by Ruling on Payments in Advance.

A warm controversy was precipitated into the tenth annual convention of the Rural Letter Carriers' Association of Georgia, in session at the Kimball House, when the question of membership termination came up.

Virtually every carrier paid his dues Friday morning, a long recess having been taken for the purpose. Receipts given out covered the year ending with the present convention, but a large and determined number of carriers insisted they should cover a year from July 4, the date of payment. It is generally understood the constitution and by-laws committee will submit a ruling that dues paid are to be considered as in advance, instead of for the preceding year, as at present. The submission of this report was made Friday afternoon.

"There is going to be one more hot fight about it, and no one knows how it will end," said President L. D. King.

P. C. Coker, the first rural route man in Fulton County, and an ex-president of the District and State Associations, will attempt the organization of a ladies' auxiliary, which he says will be the first in America.

Mayor Woodward made the welcoming address Friday morning. He told the carriers if they were taken before Judge Broyles to be sure to do something bad enough to warrant a sentence of more than 29 days, so he could pardon them. Attorney Paul L. Lindsay, of Atlanta, formerly a rural route man and president of the National Association, made a felicitous talk. Addresses also were made by Clark Howell and Congressman Thomas W. Hardwick.

The convention will be in session through Saturday.

NEW TESTIMONY LAYS CRIME TO CONLEY

Frank Defense Locates Witness Who Points to the Negro Sweeper as Slayer.

A new witness, said to have the most damaging evidence yet produced against Jim Conley, the negro sweeper in the National Pencil factory, entered the Phagan case Thursday and made an affidavit, the contents to which are carefully guarded by attorneys for Leo M. Frank, charged with causing the death of the factory girl.

The identity of the witness is as much a secret as the exact nature of his testimony. It was learned, though, that the affidavit was made in the law office of Joseph Leavitt in the Grant Building and was witnessed by Mr. Leavitt's stenographer.

It is said the testimony of this man connects Conley more directly with the crime than any other statement or affidavit yet procured by the defense. The witness is understood to have seen Conley on the afternoon of the crime and to have heard him make remarks in his drunken condition which were extremely incriminating.

Conley Faces Arrest.

The new affidavit is interpreted to mean that a warrant soon will be sworn out through a magistrate's court for the arrest of Conley. William M. Smith, attorney for Conley, said several days ago that if his client was made a defendant in the case he would retaliate upon the lawyers for Frank by issuing subpenas duces tecum, commanding them to appear in court with all the important statements and affidavits which they have obtained from witnesses for their side of the case.

Such a move would be giving the attorneys for Frank a little of their own medicine, as Attorney Rosser created a sensation a week ago by issuing subpenas duces tecum for Solicitor Dorsey, Chief Beavers, Chief Lanford, Pinkerton Detective Harry Scott and all the city detectives who had worked on the Phagan mystery.

They were commanded to bring into court all affidavits and statements of Jim Conley, Newt Lee, W. M. Matthews, Monteen Stover and other vital witnesses for the State.

Branded as "Trick."

Solicitor Dorsey and Attorney Frank A. Hooper, who is associated with Mr. Dorsey in the prosecution, at once branded the move as a thin trick for the purpose of discrediting the State's witnesses. The sworn statements would be used, they said, to compare with the testimony of the State's witnesses when on the stand.

If there were the slightest deviation through a natural lapse of memory or through trifling inaccuracy, the prosecution asserted, the defense would seek to take advantage of this to impeach the witnesses' testimony.

Dine Minus Coats In Philly Hotels

PHILADELPHIA, July 4.—(Tip to Atlanta hotel proprietors from Georgian correspondent):

In the men's grillroom of the Bellevue-Stratford fifteen tables were occupied by parties of lawyers, business men, politicians, etc. Every man had his coat off.

As soon as a guest entered, a waiter stepped forward and said:

"Coat, sir?"

The waiter took it, hung it on a hook near the guest, and served luncheon. And there is no tip for coat-hanging.

"Quite the regular thing, sir," said head waiters in all the big hotels. "Gentlemen dining alone always take their coats off. Don't they do it in Atlanta, sir?"

ATLANTA BABIES NEED YOUR MITE

Mothers' Congress to Put Bottles in Stores for Contributions to Milk Fund.

Every Atlantan willing to spare a few cents to save a baby life will be given an opportunity Monday to contribute to the "Milk for Poor Babies" fund started by the Atlanta Mothers' Congress, under the direction of Mrs. John Rowlett, of 186 East Pine Street.

Mrs. Rowlett said Friday morning that Monday morning milk bottles would be placed in every downtown store for the receipt of contributions. The bottles will be in conspicuous places in the store.

You may drop into the bottles a nickel or a dime or a quarter; or any amount you feel like giving. A subscription of any size will be welcome and will be appreciated by the good women who are trying to give the poor babies of Atlanta a chance to live through the summer. Every nickel donated will help in the fight for the babies.

The Mothers' Congress has decided to put the bottles in stores because responses to their appeal for a quart of milk a day have not been generous enough to take care of all the babies that require milk. The demand almost doubles the supply.

Already 38 children have been placed on the lists.

Besides the twenty quarts a day subscribed by William Randolph Hearst, there have been but nine people in Atlanta who have shown enough interest. Seven of these subscriptions provide for a quart of milk each a day and two for pints.

SON WOULD PROBE DEATH OF FATHER

Coroner Orders Another Autopsy Before Funeral of Tampa Veteran With Girl-Wife.

TAMPA, July 4.—Samuel R. Payne's funeral was held here over a body from which the stomach had been taken an hour before the preacher called the services to order.

Payne died suddenly Tuesday at noon. He left a wife 23 years old. He was 75.

Almon Payne, of Pensacola, son of the dead man, consulted with Coroner Jackson and the latter ordered an autopsy. The doctors have not finished the examination of the stomach.

Payne, who was a Union veteran, left a small lestate. He had drawn a pension of $30 a month.

"Pluck Out Tonsil," Doctor's New Method

CHICAGO, July 4.—Instead of cutting out a tonsil, Dr. Harold Foster, of New York, announced to-day that he could pluck, and has plucked, out a diseased tonsil "as a man would pluck a cherry."

Only long fingers and a firm grip are needed, he says.

This remarkable declaration was made at the meeting of the American Homeopathic Society.

HEAT IS BROKEN BUT FOR SHORT TIME ONLY

Light Showers Give Little Surcease to Throngs Trying to Keep Cool in Parks.

Light showers falling shortly after 2 o'clock Friday afternoon brought temporary relief to the sweltering city. The mercury, fanned by cooling breezes, dropped considerably. However, the surcease was of but short duration. Before an hour had elapsed the sun reappeared and it was hot again.

At noon the thermometer registered 92 degrees, and the Weather Bureau announced it probably would rise above 93, and go possibly to 94. At 2 o'clock, however, the wind and clouds, which obscured the sunlight, caused a drop of about 5 degrees.

Atlanta received the full force of the heat wave which swept over the country Friday, in marked contrast to the last three weeks, when the maximum heat marks in the city were from 2 to 10 degrees lower than elsewhere. Had it not been for the clouds which gathered at 2 o'clock the day would have been unusually oppressive, in view of the high humidity, and many prostrations might have resulted.

FEAR LIBEL AS AFTERMATH OF SCANDAL

Mrs. Jenkins Hires Lawyer to Fight Expected Suits of Macon Church Folk.

MACON, July 4.—The elders of the First Christian Church have framed a report to be submitted to the congregation on Sunday morning in regard to the charge that Mrs. Effie L. Lester, the secretary of the Ladies' Aid Society, has been too friendly with Professor Frank M. Charlton, the choir leader. This charge is made by Mrs. J. W. Jenkins and Mrs. Alma Armstrong, and is supported by testimony of Mr. Jenkins and his grown son, Rufus.

It is regarded as certain that the elder's report will exonerate Mrs. Lester and Professor Charlton of any wrongdoing and urge that the congregation continue confidence in them and thereby further establish the vindication.

That this will be followed by action in the courts by both Professor Charlton and Mr. Lester there is hardly any doubt. In anticipation of being sued for libel or prosecuted for slander, Mrs. Jenkins has engaged Attorney Julian Urquhart to represent her. He states that not only will Mrs. Jenkins contend that she heard Professor Charlton make an appointment over the telephone to be at Mrs. Lester's home on the night of June 5, while her husband was away, at 9 o'clock, and that Professor Charlton was chased out of the premises, but that her son, Rufus, pursued him five blocks, and in Tattnall Square Park had a hand-to-hand encounter with the music instructor.

ATLANTA-MADE GOODS EXHIBIT IS CERTAIN

Manufacturers in Meeting Decide to Organize and Set Up Permanent Display.

Atlanta manufacturers will establish in a downtown building an elaborate permanent display of articles made at home.

Four sites are offered, no one of them more than five minutes' walk from Five Points.

Twenty-three of the 100 manufacturers who gathered for a banquet at Hotel Ansley Thursday night pledged themselves to take space in the exhibit hall.

Within four days an Atlanta manufacturers' association will be organized, to handle the exhibit and to wrestle with problems of interest to factory men. Within ten days, one of the four offers of a building will be accepted. Whether the building will be leased, bought or leased with privilege of purchase, is to be worked out.

It was Mr. Morgan who laid the plan before the gathering, after a year's study and preparation. Necessary to the success of the plan is a pledged revenue of $22,500 a year for five years, he said.

Factories Make Realty Values.

"Atlanta should have four times the payroll it now has," he asserted. "The maintenance of real estate values and the future growth of Atlanta absolutely depend upon the growth of manufacturing. We have 600 manufacturing plants in the city now. I doubt if we need more. My idea is that we should build those we have into giant industrial establishments. Some people deny this, but I want to say that Atlanta-made goods can be sold right in Atlanta. It only is necessary to let the people know what we have here."

Bolling H. Jones told the other manufacturers that Evansville, Ind., established such a display, and found that goods could be sold through it at a selling cost of 3 per cent.

"This convinced me," said Mr. Jones. "Did any one here ever sell goods at a cost of 3 per cent?"

C. S. Dobbs made a forceful talk on the advertising value of the exhibit. "The man who makes good products and doesn't tell about it," he said, "is like the man who winks at a girl in the dark—he knows all about it, but she doesn't. Besides, it doesn't get him anywhere."

Adair Is Emphatic.

Forrest Adair was emphatic in his approval.

"I may not be orthodox," he said, "but there is one subject on which I am rabid. That is the talk about the smoke nuisance. I wish to goodness some one would turn 500 more smokestacks loose on us. We need factories.

"But the public does not know about those we have. I met a bank director to-day who did not know that most of the railroad cars rolling out of here roll on wheels made in Atlanta—and another who thought that Mr. Orr had his shoes made in Boston, and simply jobbed them here. The public must have things rubbed in before it remember."

J. K. Orr, J. P. Stevens and others voiced their approval.

On the call for pledges to take space in the exhbiit hall, the following manufacturers "signed up:"

J. P. Stevens Manufacturing Company, J. K. Orr Shoe Company, F. E. Block Company, Atlanta Stove Works, Foote & Davies Company, L. & L. Manufacturing Company, Byrd Printing Company, Nunnally & McCrea Manufacturing Company, A. M. Robinson Company, Southern Engraving Company, Atlanta Paper Company, Burnett, Bell & Klapper Furniture Company, Van Winkle Motor Truck Company, Norris, Inc., White Provision Company, Empire Cotton Oil Company, Mitchell Manufacturing Company, Atlanta Gas Light Company, All-Star Manufacturing Company, Southern Spring Bed Company and the Southern Saw and Machine Works.

World Gold Supply Affected by Strike

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

JOHANNESBURG, AFRICA, July 4.—The world's gold supply is being seriously affected by the strike in the Rand. A large percentage of the world's supply of gold comes from this district and leaders of the various unions are trying to shut it off completely.

Serious rioting occurred to-day. Fifty soldiers and three times that number of strikers were hurt in the clashes.

Government Bonds Sell Under Par

NEW YORK, July 4.—A very unusual situation has developed in the market for United States bonds. Within the last few days, for the first time since the 2 per cent bonds which become payable in 1930 have been issued, they have sold on the Stock Exchange at less than par.

This condition is a direct result of the proposal in the currency bill that the bonds of the United States be deprived of their use by national banks to secure circulation.

Gulf Stream Speeds Up; Hurries Steamer

BOSTON, July 4.—Carried along at great speed by an unusually swift current in the Golf Stream, the steamer Sosua, from Costa Rica, reached here a day ahead of time.

Captain Bjonnes said that the waters of the Stream were strangely active, and the steamer began moving so rapidly that the engines were slowed down to half speed. Even after that the Sosua logged off the miles at an amazing rate.

Accused Slayer Kills Himself in His Cell

ANNISTON, July 4.—G. H. Bailey, a prominent merchant, charged with the murder of C. W. Saunders here about two weeks ago, committed suicide in the county jail by cutting his throat. It is thought that he used a safety razor blade, as other prisoners in the jail had such blades.

A relative says that Bailey was despondent after his preliminary trial, when he was refused bail. His body was turned over to Coroner Murphy to be prepared for burial. He leaves a wife and several children.

SLATON DOUBTS RIGHT TO PAY TEACHERS

Governor Asks Opinion on Amendment Purporting to Add Power in Expenditures.

Governor Slaton has grave doubts whether the recently ratified constitutional amendment purporting to increase the Executive's borrowing power has not really put a limitation upon his powers rather than extended them.

So serious are these doubts in the Governor's mind that he has referred the matter to the Attorney General for an opinion, and will not undertake to do anything in relieving the present situation with respect to paying the common-schoolteachers until his mind has been cleared up by that official.

If the amendment has fully authorized the Governor to proceed to the relief of the teachers, unquestionably he will give the matter that direction, but the peculiar wording of the amendment, coupled with the statutes involved, has given rise to perplexing doubts in the Executive mind as to just exactly what the law does contemplate, and he hesitates to attempt a loan for any purpose whatever until he knows exactly what terms and conditions a loan under the amendment would impose, not only upon the State, but upon the source of the loan.

Anxious to Pay Teachers.

Governor Slaton is anxious to see the school teachers paid. Of that there is no doubt. But the uncertainty in his mind as to the law in the case, as well as the marked stringency of the money market at this time, has prompted him to make haste slowly.

If it might be so arranged the Governor prefers that such loan or loans as he may contract be made with Georgia bankers and financiers. If the matter can not take this direction, however, the Governor will be forced to go East for such funds as he needs, and he has reason to suspect that it will be rather expensive borrowing at this time.

Naturally, the Governor does not wish to involve the State in a transaction calling for an abnormal expense item by way of interest.

The Governor wishes to relieve the present pressing necessities of the common-school teachers, and in addition to that he hopes to secure from the present General Assembly early legislation of a character calculated to avoid delaying the payment of the teachers in the future.

Legislature to Co-operate.

There is a marked disposition in the Legislature, moreover, to co-operate cordially with the Governor in this matter.

During the present three-day recess of the House and the Senate the Governor will address his attention almost exclusively to the problem of financing the teachers in their present necessities and planning for their permanent relief.

When the Legislature meets again Monday it is likely that the Governor will put himself immediately in touch with that body, to the end that the present troublesome status of affairs may be worked out legally, equitably and speedily.

BABY, 7 MONTHS OLD, HAPPY PLAYING FIDDLE

Child's unusual love of music discovered entirely through accident.

June Howard Stollard, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Stollard, "The Fiddlin' Baby."

Neighborhood attraction is not content unless musical instrument is within easy reach.

Hail the fiddling baby!

Seven months old, and never happy unless he is picking at a violin.

Feed him milk and mush and he is apt to be as cross as a bear; stick a violin between his fat feet and fingers and he will immediately begin picking at the strings, a smile of cherubic joy will wrinkle his plump face—and he is in the seventh heaven of delight.

Atlanta's latest prodigy is June Howard Stollard, the only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Stollard, of 44 East Main Street, and he bids fair to develop into another Mischa Elman.

But it was not until he was five months old and crawling over everything in the house that the love of music that possessed the little soul became known, and then only through accident. One morning the baby crawled into a closet, and, discovering an old violin that had belonged to Mrs. Stoddard's father, calmly took possession of it and began giving an impromptu concert. He had the violin cuddled up between his toes and fingers and was picking at the strings with both feet and hands. And out of the medley of sounds emitted by the protesting violin came now and then notes of surprising clearness.

Since then open season has been declared on violins in the Stollard household. The fiddling baby has become a neighborhood attraction. Like all geniuses, the child is content to sit and fiddle all day long, whether he has an audience or not. He has gained confidence with experience, and now he picks and pecks at the violin strings for dear life. The child puts his whole heart into his fiddling and spurns tempting offers of milk while he is playing. He quits only when he is tired, and sometimes he does not get tired for hours at a time. His mother and father are even now planning his musical education.

POSSE IN BATTLE WITH BANDITS

One of Solomon Brothers Killed and Another Probably Fatally Wounded.

DOUGLAS, July 4.—Andrew Solomon is dead and Randall Solomon, his brother, to-day is in a hospital here probably fatally wounded, as the result of a battle between the Solomon train bandits and a posse headed by Sheriff Gillis at the Roundabout Swamp, near Kirkland.

The Solomon gang had been hunted by officers of Coffee and Ware Counties and detectives of the Atlantic Coast Line for two weeks for a series of daring freight train and other robberies in this section. They were trailed to the Roundabout Swamp, where they took refuge in the fastnesses where men and dogs could not trail them. There they remained until Thursday afternoon.

When Sheriff Gillis and his posse surrounded the bandits, a pitched battle ensued in which Andrew and Randall Solomon were shot. None of the Sheriff's posse was wounded. A relief party went from here to Kirkland to bring in the dead and wounded.

Postal Employees Have Half-Holiday

Atlanta postal employees had a half-holiday Friday. All the offices closed at 1 o'clock and the deliveries of mail were curtailed. One delivery was made to the residential section and two in the business section in the morning. There were no deliveries in the afternoon.

The general delivery and the stamp windows closed promptly at noon.

FLOOD OF SPEED FIEND CHARGES STIRS CHIEF

Beavers Posts Plain Clothes Men to Nab Drivers Who Endanger Children's Lives.

Following the excitement caused by the accident on Mills Street Wednesday afternoon when little Eva Kilpatrick was run down by a speeding automobile and left to her fate, Chief Beavers is receiving complaints of speeding autoists from all parts of the city.

The strongest complaints have come from merchants and residents along Ponce DeLeon Avenue and Marietta Street. Autoists have turned Marietta Street into a speedway, the Chief is told, and run their cars at a terrific rate of speed at all hours of the day and night. Several accidents narrowly have been averted, and pedestrians who are forced to cross Marietta Street are in constant danger.

Out on Ponce DeLeon Avenue conditions, according to complaints, are as bad as they are on Marietta Street. At night, residents of the street claim, the automobilists who use the street throw their mufflers wide open and sleep is impossible.

Children Kept From Street.

Little children living on Ponce DeLeon Avenue have been forbidden by their parents to cross the street unless their elders are with them, so dangerous and reckless have the automobile drivers become.

One complaint made to the chief declared that an 8-year-old girl narrowly escaped with her life only a few days ago. The driver made no attempt to turn his machine or avoid running over the child, and the complaint declares that as he flew past he cursed the little girl for getting in the road.

Chief Beavers, following the receipt of the complaints, started a vigorous campaign that it is hoped will end in the arrest and punishment of the speeding autoists. Every policeman on the force has been instructed to watch carefully for speeders, and also ordered to enforce all the automobile regulations strictly.

Police Put on Watch.

Plainclothes men will be sent to the various portions of the city that have become known as haunts of the speed maniac, and nothing will be left undone to break up the practice that has made the streets of Atlanta a source of danger to all who venture upon them.

Chief Beavers also has started a thorough inquiry into the accident which nearly cost Eva Kilpatrick her life, and if the autoist who ran down the little girl and then fled is captured, an example will be made of him. The investigation has been placed in the hands of Captain Poole, and a squad of men have been detailed to act under his orders. Every person in the neighborhood of the accident who could have seen the car will be questioned.

Columbus Draws Law To Curb Autoists.

COLUMBUS, July 4.—An ordiannce window of Luden & Bates' piano store the Columbus City Council to force all automobile drivers to bring their cars to a standstill when approaching a street car which has stopped. The ordinance also provides that no one who operates a motorcycle shall allow anyone else to ride on the machine with them, nor can they carry packages that would tend to obstruct their view.

Anniston Wars on Speeders.

GADSDEN, ALA., July 4.—Following an order issued by Mayor Holcomb yesterday, the police last night arrested two automobile drivers, charging them with exceeding the speed limit. They will be given a hearing in Police Court Monday. The Mayor told the police to arrest everyone driving fast, regardless of his station in life.

Contestants Drive and Ride Pretty Shetland Prizes in Parade as Guests of Hearst Papers.

Boys and girls in The Georgian and American pony contests, their parents, their relatives and their friends are at Grant Park celebrating the Fourth as the guests of the Hearst papers.

Promptly at 10 o'clock nine of the ponies which are to be awarded as prizes in the contest started in parade formation from The Georgian and American offices in Alabama Street.

It was a pretty sight. The buggies were swathed in flags, and the ponies, sleek and shining, proudly wore tiny flags on all parts of their harnesses. Five of the ponies were hitched to buggies; the others were saddled.

Nine of the most eager contestants were chosen to drive and ride the ponies to the park, but with attendants close at hand to prevent any mishap, for the Shetlands are spirited. While gentle, still they are not getting the work they should and are inclined to be lively.

At the park every contestant is being given a ride or a drive. Lemonade and other refreshments are being served. Dan Carey, superintendent of parks, said The Georgian's guests could "own the park" for the afternoon, and they took him at his word.

Men from The Georgian and American offices were delegated to look after the children, so that parents who let them go unattended need have no worry as to their safety.

STARK BITTERLY ARRAIGNED BY SUFFRAGIST

Mrs. McLendon Scores Lawmaker for Opposition—Fight for Senate Chamber Renewed.

Characterizing Senator W. W. Stark as a man of small mental caliber, Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, president of the Georgia Woman's Suffrage Association, said Frdiay the suffragists would renew the fight for the use of the Senate chamber during their State convention.

When Senator Stark ascertained the suffragists intended to enlighten the Senators on the question of votes for women, and then moved the tabling of a resolution to grant them the use of the Senate chamber on the nights of July 9 and 10, he provoked the ire of Mrs. McLendon.

Mrs. McLendon declared the suffragists of Atlanta and Georgia were indignant. She believed that common courtesy should have impelled the Senators to willingly grant them the use of the Senate chamber, irrespective of the Senators' views on suffrage.

She Calls Condition "Pitiful."

"It is pitiful that women have to beg the men for such things as that," she said.

During a brief recess Mrs. McLendon asked Senator Stark why he opposed granting the use of the Senate chamber to the suffragists, and he replied it was because the Saviour did not call a woman as one of His disciples.

"The answer seemed so absurd, so little to the point," she asserted.

"I asked him if he didn't know that the women of Georgia helped to build that State House, and that we had as much right there as anybody else. Governor Brown let four cowboys from Washington ride horses up the steps, yet the women of Georgia can not meet there."

Plan to Renew Fight.

"We are going to renew the fight for the use of the Senate chamber," Mrs. McLendon continued.

"Mr. John Y. Smith said he would reopen the question for us next Monday. Mr. Blackburn said he would, too. Mr. Blackburn is not in favor of woman suffrage, but his personal belief has nothing to do with this question. No, I don't think we'll get the use of the Senate chamber, but we'll show the smallness of the average Georgia legislator. Just because they are elected by the men people they try to keep the women down. They are afraid the women might rise against them, so they keep their heels on the women's necks."

Mrs. J. K. Ottley, a suffragist sympathizer, said she had no opinion regarding Senator Stark or the reasons he advanced for opposing suffrage, but she was surprised at the Senate's refusal to allow the women to meet there.

Mrs. Ottley Is Surprised.

"I should think they would be very glad to extend the use of the Senate chamber to any association which was neither incendiary nor objectionable," she said, "and, judging by the headway made in other States, the suffragist associations are neither incendiary nor objectionable.

"I am surprised that they should have denied the use of the Senate chamber to any group of respectable Georgia women seeking something they believed to be for the State's good."

Mrs. Ottley said she believed woman's suffrage would come, but she would probably never make an effort to bring it.

Militants Burn Large Warehouse.

LITTLE GIRL IS A HOTEL VETERAN; SHE HAS NEVER MADE MUD PIES

Demure Miss at the Majestic Can Order Dinner Like a Real Epicure.

Think of it! Tobe 7 years old and not know what a mud pie looks like.

That is little Miss Christine Lewis, demure, pretty, petite daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Lewis, who has spent all of her blissful seven years in a hotel and wouldn't live anywhere else even if her parents insisted.

Miss Christine is at the Majestic at present. She can order a dinner as well as her mother, and she orders the porters and bellmen around with the nonchalance of a legislator. From the time she awakes in the morning and takes here seat in the dining room at 9 o'clock until she is tucked in bed at 8, after bidding guests on the veranda good-night, she is the sunshine of the hotel.

Miss Christine is a veteran.

"Waiter," she beckons at the table, "I don't care for consomme to-night. You may bring me chicken, if you have it, and veg'tables. And I want ice cream. And it's hot in here; I wish you'd start the 'lectric fan. Please don't forget the ice cream."

Mud pies are unkonwn to her. Miss Christine's frocks know not the stain of the red Georgia soil. In the afternoon, instead of playing in the street as most children do, she goes to a picture show. And there she sits up straight and watches the romances unreel. It is more fun, says Miss Christine, than playing in the hot sun.

Miss Christine Lewis, who has spent all of her seven years in hotels.

Doesn't want to live in a residence ever, says petitie miss, who is the pet of the Majestic's guests.

Likes picture shows better than romping. because romping soils her dresses.

We have already this season experienced the hottest weather known in eleven years. Look out for all kinds of fever during the next few months.

Dr. Verdier's Liver Ease is the very latest discovery in medicine to take the place of calomel. It will damage you and make you prematurely old.

Dr. Verdier's Liver Ease taken at the first sign of any bad feeling will ward off fever in grown-ups, diarrhoea in children and insure perfect health. You can't afford to neglect yourself when you can get a safe remedy at so small a cost.

Fifty cents for a large bottle at any drug store in Atlanta, fully guaranteed or money back. Ask for Liver Ease in a pink package.

WAVES U. S. FLAG IN CANADA AND STARTS RIOT

Overpatriotic American Flaunts Emblem in Regiment's Face and Is Beaten Up.

WINNIPEG, July 4.—An overpatriotic American started a small-sized riot on Main Street here to-day by waving an American flag in the face of the Tenth Canadian Regiment as they were returning home from camp. In the fight that followed, soldiers and civilians alike participated.

The American was roughly handled and the flag tossed into the street and trampled on by the marching soldiers. Before the police could interfere several who took part in the fight received black eyes and cuts on the face.

The incident happened when the streets were crowded with friends of the returning soldiers. The young American, who is employed in a local restaurant, as he waved the flag at the soldiers shouted, "Hurrah for the American Eagle!"

Colonel J. B. Mitchell, in command of the regiment, ordered one of his men to quiet the American and tell him to put the flag down. As the soldier sprang forward to obey, several civilians closed in on the American and a fight commenced, which finally was quelled by the police.

No arrests were made. In all probability the matter will be taken up with the American Consul General.

U. S. Is Paying More For Seamen's Food

WASHINGTON, July 4.—The increasing cost of living is demonstrated in contracts for feeding the officers and men of the Revenue Cutter Service during the fiscal year beginning July 1.

New York City shows the greatest increase. It will cost $.436 a day to feed each sailor there this year as against $.38 last year. Baltimore and Boston are the only cities showing decreases, the cost in Baltimore dropping from $.41 to $.401, and in Boston from $.387 to $.383.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

Keith Vaudeville at Forsyth.

Edward Abeles, the distinguished comedy actor, who has created a number of important leading roles with great plays, is making himself a real favorite with the patrons of the Forsyth this week, in the presentation of his excellent playlet, called "He Tried To Be Nice." Miss Charlotte Lander gives valuable assistance to the star in the act and it has won applause that made extra curtain calls at every performance. The bill is one of exceptional quality and real interest. There are acts that are of a keen and drawing power and collectively make up a program that is full of good things.

Matinee and night performances of Edison's talking pictures will be continued Friday and Saturday at the Grand. The program is new—different from the first part of the week, and just as interesting. Interest in the pictures has grown steadily. The Edison novelty has won on pure merit and the big Grand is being well filled at every performance.

Extra Matinee at Bijou To-day.

The pleasing impression made by "A Trip to Paris" on Monday at the Bijou has brought crowded houses to the theater all week. The warm weather has not affected the attendance, and Bijou patrons have shown their appreciation by the generous applause and frequent curtain calls. "A Trip to Paris" is one of the best tabloids that has been offered. Extra matinee to-day at 2:30.

DAHLONEGA, July 4.—When William Stover, of Auraria, started a row with Lon Jett, Gus Stover interfered and was seriously stabbed by Jett. Gus Stover is a son of William Stover and a son-in-law of Jett. Remarks that the elder Stover made about Jett's daughter, Gus Stover's wife, started the difficulty.

Sheriff T. M. Ray was notified and reached Jett's home shortly afterward. He was arrested and placed in jail. Gus Stove is in a serious condition.

Exchange to Fight Cotton Future Tax

NEW YORK, July 4.—A formal protest by the Cotton Exchange will probably be made against the amendment to the tariff bill providing for taxing sales of cotton futures one-tenth of a cent a pound.

Cotton brokers and spinning interests declared that the taxation of one-tenth of a cent a pound on sales of futures would drive the market for cotton to Liverpool, where there are no such restrictions.

PRINCE SAYS KIN WON'T SLIGHT U. S. BRIDE

Austrian Noble Also Denies King Blocks His Marriage to San Francisco Girl.

LOS ANGELES, July 4.—"Miss Marie Freeze is the equal of any princess of Austria, and as my wife she will be received at the imperial court beyond any question," declared Prince Stanislaus Sulkowski, of Austria, in reply to a report that lack of royal consent was delaying his marriage to the Los Angeles girl.

"It is not true that Countess Szechenyi, who was Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, was not received at court or was coldly treated by the nobility of Austria-Hungary," he added.

Prince Sulkowski said he awaited the consent of the ministry of war to the marriage, a consent made necessary by the fact that he is an officer in the Second Dragoons.

Prince Sulkowski insists, in spite of reports of Gladys Vanderbilt's unhappy experiences, that there will not be the slightest disposition on the part of the nobility of his country to turn a cold shoulder to Miss Freeze when he takes her to Vienna as his bride.

Thieves Ambushed By Elkin Drug Clerk

Through the vigilance of R. W. McRoberts, an Elkin Drug Company clerk, six negro thieves, who, for some months past, have caused annoyance and considerable loss to the company, were arrested and bound over on $200 bond each.

Candied cherries, perfume and drugs were the principal things taken, but the negroes became more bold and carried out bottles of alcohol in the bottom of the trash cans.

McRoberts and three others secreted themselves in the basement and captured the negroes.

LONGSTREET'S WIDOW TELLS OF REUNION

Describes Meeting Sharpshooter Detailed to Kill Husband, Whom General Captured.

By HELEN D. LONGSTREET.

GETTYSBURG, July 4.—The tents of America's loyalty are pitched today on the world's greatest battlefield. Gettysburg's bugles echo today over a reunited nation.

Standing on the borderland of eternity, with its shadows touching their bent forms and silvered heads, these last survivors of an army the like of which the world shall see no more have gathered here, not Northern, not Southern, but all American, bridging the bloody rift of the sixties with fraternal unity more ancient than sectionalism, more lasting than hate.

To the youth of this nation the inspirational value of this day on Gettysburg's field will outweigh the sordid accumulations of all the Rockefellers the world will ever produce.

"Where did you lose your arm?" I asked of one melancholy-faced soldier in blue, who walked a little lamely notwithstanding his brave efforts.

Detailed to Kill General.

"After the battle of Chickamauga," he said, "I was one of twenty sharpshooters detailed to kill Longstreet. He captured us all and I lost my right arm. Did you ever see Longstreet?" he inquired pathetically. "How sorry I am that he did not live to be here."

Gazing over seas of Old Glory, miles of which stream from the houses and dot the hillsides, swathing the trees and bridging the streets, until a loyal canopy of red, white and blue almost conceals the blue heavens above.

"Oh, isn't it glorious!" I said to a veteran in gray. "How could you look on the old flag and know its meaning and fire on it?"

The veteran in gray said, brokenly, as he looked with me upon the shining colors of our country's standard:

"That's My Flag Forever."

"I didn't stop to think so much about what we were fighting about; my land and my people called to me. They were in trouble; it was about the same as if it had been my mother. Right or wrong, I would rush to her rescue."

"But now you are glad," I said, "glad that you didn't win; glad that the American Union lives."

He bared his head and, pointing to the glorious sweep of color, said reverently:

"That is my flag, the flag of my fathers, the flag of my country, my children's flag forever. God keep it in the skies. It means strength and progress and peace that will endure. It blazed the only road to national happiness and greatness."

A melancholy-eyed veteran in worn gray, gazing wistfully across Cemetery Ridge, had gone back to the daring days of the long past. Lost to the present, oblivious of surroundings, he said sadly:

Mourns Over Pickett's Charge.

"If Pickett hadn't made that charge we stood a good chance of whipping the Yankees."

"But," I said, "it is best for us all th..t you didn't whip them; and they are no longer Yankees, just Americans; and, looking toward the East, shoulder to shoulder, heart beating close to heart, our country's mighty destiny is our common hope and glory."

"I know all that," he said, "but I just sometimes can't help feeling powerful sad when I think of them brave boys who had to die out there for nothing."

"Oh," I replied, "nobody ever dies for nothing who dies for right."

On this field of tearful memories a sea of brown tents stretching miles in all directions, it is learned that no provision whatever has been made for the participation in this greatest event in the country's peace history of the women who sent husbands and fathers and sons and sweethearts to answer the call at the first tap of the drum in 1861. The hardship, the suffering, the agony of the women who waited in the war homes of the nation may never be told.

Veteran Longs for Wife.

Some day a grateful Government will erect a monument that will pierce the blue heavens from Gettysburg's stateliest, sunniest slope, and on it will stand the figure of one in whose courageous soul every battle was fought and every victory won—the woman who placed the flag of her faith in the hands of her best beloved and sent it to the front when the first gun was fired on Fort Sumter.

A veteran, shambling rather dejectedly along up Emmitsburg Road, overtook me. He was hot, dusty, tired. I said: "Do take my umbrella. I really would rather walk without it."

He straightened up with some of the old fire and vigor.

"Pshaw! I was fighting up this road before you wuz born. I guess I kin stand a little sun now. But how I wish Jane wuz here. She had a harder time than I did enduring the war."

Later a little woman with faded eyes overtook us "up Emmitsburg Road."

"I wasn't expected," she said, "but I just couldn't help coming. Jim was killed along here somewhere. I think it must have been about here."

Pausing at a clump of trees, she rested a thin hand on one of the outstretched branches.

Going to Her Sweetheart.

"Your husband?" I said.

"Oh, no, he was just my sweetheart, but I told him that I would wait until he came back. I won't have much longer to wait now. He did not come back to me, but I am going to him."

Some time there will be another and a greater reunion on this field. The next time it will include the real soldiers who made the four years of fighting possible.

On that day, a rich, grateful Republic will pour out its millions, and all the gray, bent Janes who had "a harder time" than their husbands on the field, and all the sad-eyed Sarahs who are still waiting for sweethearts that never came back will gather here on the scene of a Republic's trials, tribulations, and sufferings, and that will be a real reunion of the white souls that laid the supreme offering on the altar of country, of the tortured hearts that wrestled with the uncomplaining pain through the long four years when the nation's harpstrings were tuneless because her daughters could not sing the old songs.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

By refusing the perfectly reasonable request, legitimately entered, of certain advocates of woman suffrage in Georgia that they be permitted to use the Senate chamber for a meeting, at a time definitely sure not to conflict with any busines of the Senate, it is extremely doubtful whether the Senate has covered itself with any amazing amount of glory or erected a perpetual monument to its common sense.

That is the way a great many people appear to view the matter, anyway!

Moreover, if the Senate is opposed to woman suffrage, which it is agreed all around it has a right to be, it doubtless has helped the cause rather than injured it in Georgia by refusing the request noted.

Woman suffrage may not be popular in Georgia—on the contrary, it may be more popular than some folks imagine—but certainly its advocates thus far working in the open are women of extraordinary intelligence and marked conservatism of action.

To deny them a request that would have been granted, readily enough, to the State Democratic executive committee, say, is not particularly convincing in the minds of some people that woman suffrage is either an error or a monstrous wrong.

To be sure, the women may hold their meeting elsewhere, but in view of the fact that all sorts of political meetings have been permitted in the Senate chamber—which is a public place—and all sorts of people permitted to speak therein, in season and out, the needless turning down of a handful of women, desirous of holding a welfare meeting in behalf of their own organization, seems to have been rather out of place, if not absolutely cheap.

The Senate of Georgia before this time, however, has strained at gnats only to swallow camels subsequently. It appears that the present Senate was not loathe to let it be known that it could do that old act itself, if occasion seemed to require the performance.

It is the opinion of a number of people that the Senate's refusal of the request of the women involved was extremely ungracious, to say the least of it!

It should be borne in mind that neither Representative McArthur nor Representative Browning, of the new counties of Wheeler and Bleckley, respectively, were expelled from the House.

Both gentlemen had been sworn in, but that fact did not make them members de jure of the House, necessarily. The constitutionality of their titles to their seats was raised and sustained by the House, and their seats therefore were declared vacant, or, rather, their seats were declared never to have existed.

Both gentlemen are very popular, and are citizens of the very highest integrity and standing. Indeed, as a purely personal matter, the disposition of the House undoubtedly was to seat them. However, the House, after thrashing the matter out exhaustively, decided that the law plainly was against them and very properly it acted accordingly.

Discussing this matter to-day, Representative Hardeman, who made a speech denying the right of the gentlemen to their seats, said: "It is a tribute to the patriotism and genuine worth of the House that it acted as it did in this matter, despite its heavy personal inclination to vote otherwise. My own vote was embarrassing, in a way—I hated to vote against these two splendid men, but I could not afford to do that which I feared would Legislature, and so I voted as I did.

"I think the George House of this year may be depended upon to do the right thing in all matters, judging by the way it acted in this very trying situation."

Close behind the introduction of a bill in the Georgia Senate by Hon. J. L. Sweat, of the Fifth District, Waycross will organize for a determined campaign in favor of extending the State road to the sea, via Waycross.

Right-of-way through Ware has been pledged, and the county convicts will be loaned, if necessary, to the State for the road construction.

Other counties through the Ware County section have agreed to make similar offers, and all will exert themselves to get favorable action by the Legislature.

Governor John M. Slaton's suggestion of a State Highways Commission has met with the hearty approval of the farmers of Floyd County, and they have not been at all slow in making that fact known.

Meetings were held throughout the county Thursday, warmly approving the idea, and the Rome Chamber of Commerce has set the seal of its indorsement upon it.

Howard Ennis, of Baldwin, who defeated former Speaker Pro Tem Carl Vinson for re-election to the present House by the squeaky margin of five votes, has made marked progress in the esteem and respect of his fellow members. Already Ennis of Baldwin is known of everybody, and is most generally approved.

Despite the fact that Ennis defeated Vinson as aforesaid, the two men are the warmest of friends, and may be seen almost any day that Vinson is in Atlanta, arm in arm, and as thick as can be. Both are high-class men.

Representative Barry Wright, of Floyd County, a former member of the House and legislator of experience, has just been re-elected president of the Cherokee Life Insurance Company of Rome.

Mr. Wright is one of the younger members of the present House of Representatives, and is perhaps the very youngest life insurance president in the United States.

D. F. McClatchey, the House reading clerk, not only has a powerful and sonorous voice, but one possessed of marvelous powers of concentration.

In reading a bill for the first or second time Mr. McClatchey frequently condenses pages into paragraphs, and paragraphs into sentences. Sometimes he gets by with a sentence so fast that the audience can not hear it at all!

By condensing things after the manner he does, Mr. McClatchey undoubtedly saves the State thousands of dollars annually in the mere matter of time prevented from going to waste. If McClatchey didn't get over the ground orally as fast as he does the entire time of the House doubtless would be taken up listening to bills read.

Mother's Advice To Her Daughter

A Real Live Doll to Fondle Is Woman's Greatest Happiness.

One of the most important matters about which women concern themselves is their future status as a grandmother. And she is wisdom itself who knows of or learns of that famous remedy, Mother's Friend. This is an external application for the abdominal muscles and breasts. It certainly has a wonderful influence, allays all fear, banishes all pain, is a most grateful encouragement to the young, expectant mother, and permits her to go through the period happy in mind, free in body and thus destined to anticipate woman's greatest happiness as nature intended she should.

The action of Mother's Friend makes the muscles free, pliant and responsive to expansion. Thus all strain and tension upon the nerves and ligaments is avoided, and, in place of a period of discomfort and consequent dread, it is a season of calm repose and joyful expectation.

There is no nausea, no morning sickness, no nervous twitching, none of that constant strain known to so many women, hence Mother's Friend is really one of the greatest blessings that could be devised.

This splendid and certain remedy can be had of any druggist at $1.00 a bottle, and is sure to prove of inestimable value, not only upon the mother, but upon the health and future of the child. Write to Bradfield Regulator Co., 132 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for their book to expectant mothers.

JUDGES CHOSEN FOR SLOGAN CONTEST

Georgian's Prize Offer for Best Button Caption Increases Interest in 500,000 Club.

The Georgian's 500,000 club movement was given a new impetus Thursday when three of the best known men in Atlanta became actively identified with it as judges of the $25 slogan prize contest. They are:

John W. Grant, Wilmer L. Moore and Walter C. Taylor.

"The constant stimulus our newspapers give to the Atlanta spirit is one of the finest things in the city, or any city in the country for that matter," said Mr. Grant. "The 500,000 booster club idea will result in much good, and the census of 1920 will be ample proof of it."

"I want to help the 500,000 club all I can," said Mr. Moore.

"I often think that we don't know how to appreciate Atlanta until we get out of it," said Walter Taylor. "Often when I was in other towns and heard of the things being done in Atlanta, I got as homesick as when I first left home as a boy.

"Every traveling man, every Atlantan who goes away for a trip, as well as all good boosters at home, should wear one of the 500,000 club buttons. You can't calculate the boosting that such a plan will effect."

Since The Georgian offered $25 for the best slogan for the buttons interest has greatly increased in the enterprise to get 500,000 people into Atlanta by 1920.

The contest will last for ten days, the winner of the prize to be announced in Hearst's Sunday American of July 13. All entrants must mail their slogans to the Contest Editor, Atlanta Georgian. They will be transmitted to the judges and merit will decide. The originator of the one selected will be given $25 in cash.

It is an easy way to make $25. It's a chance to render a civic service. Thousands of buttons bearing the slogan will be distributed. A few words penned in an idle moment may speak volumes.

Mrs. Palmer, in her own yacht, the Joyette, outsailed and outmaneuvered her husband in a thrilling race, which she won by seventeen seconds.

On April 1 he became sales manager of the Cleveland-Manning Company, and after seeing the rapid strides this concern has made in the retail piano field, he purchased stock and was elected to his present position at a meeting of the board of directors.

BUSINESS IN WOOL IS TAKING ON LIFE

Prices on Free Trade Basis Except for Medium Fleeces—London Auctions Open.

BOSTON, July 4.—More wool has been sold in Boston during the past week, and the market has assumed an appearance of activity lacking for months Transfers foot up well over 1,500,000 pounds, including territories, fleeces and Texas wools. Prices have been low, keeping the market down practically to a free wool basis on all grades except medium fleeces. Active buying in the West now is largely confined to Montana, where the new clipping season is just getting under way. Other States have been fairly well cleaned up, the best wools having been purchased and the heavier wools consigned. Business in foreign wools remains at a standstill, as manufacturers will not pay the duties in the face of free wool. The London auction sales opened about as expected with American buyers unusually active for the first day.

Receipts of wool in pounds for the week ended and including Wednesday were as follows:

	1913.	1912.
Domestic	4,534,887	8,130,912
Foreign	181,560	3,420,304
Totals	4,716,447	11,551,216

Receipts in pounds from and including January 1, 1913, as compared with the corresponding period of 1912, were as follows:

LITTLE STORIES of the TOWN

Sneezetown Is Up in Wisconsin.

Here's a story told by a visitor at the Transportation Club the other evening:

The elderly matron with the bundles, who was journeying to a point in Wisconsin and occupied a seat near the middle of the car, had fallen asleep. One the seat in front of her sat a little boy. The brakeman opened the door of the car and called out the name of the station the train was approaching. The elderly lady roused herself with a jerk and inquired hurriedly of the boy:

"Where are we, Bobby?"

"I don't know, grandma," answered the little boy.

"Didn't the brakeman say something just now?"

"No, he just stuck his head inside the door and sneezed."

"Help me with these things, Bobby!" she exclaimed, hurriedly. "This is Oskosh. It's where we get off."

Wouldn't Stand To Have It Filed.

The conversation led to surgical operations and Congressman John H. Small of North Carolina told of the experience of a Southern blacksmith.

The blacksmith sprained his wrist one afternoon, and lost no time in hustling to the office of a physician.

The doctor examined the wrist and then took a small bottle from a shelf, but found it empty.

"James," said he, turning to an assistant, "go upstairs and bring me down a couple of those phials."

"What's tha?" exclaimed the patient, suddenly showing large signs of emotion.

"I was merely asking my assistant to bring me down a couple of phials from upstairs," answered the doctor.

"Files!" cried the blacksmith, with a look of determination. "No, you don't, Doc! If that hand has got to come off you will use an ax or a saw!"

Real Modesty From Down State.

The only unoccupied room in the hotel—one with a private bath in connection with it—was given to the stranger from the wiregrass. The next morning the clerk was approached by the guest when the latter was ready to check out.

"Well, did you have a good night's rest?" the clerk asked.

"No, I didn't," replied the guest. "The room was all right, and the bed was pretty good, but I couldn't sleep very much, for I was afraid someone would want to take a bath, and the only door to it was through my room."

RECORDER FINES DE LAMATER ON WIFE'S PLEA

Druggist Promises Court He Will Not Molest Estranged Spouse Again—Injunction Pending.

The last twenty-four hours were eventful ones for Ira J. DeLamater, of the DeLamater-Lawrence Drug Company.

Here is what happened to him:

Arrested on the story of his wife, who is suing him for divorce, that he was at her home in an abusive and intoxicated condition.

Locked in the police station for two hours.

Served with a temporary injunction preventing him from molesting or visiting his wife.

Given notice that action has been taken to have him adjudged in contempt of court.

Summoned to appear as defendant in the Recorder's Court Friday morning.

Fined $10.75 by Recorder Broyles for intoxication and disorderly conduct.

Notified that he will have to appear August 16 before Judge L. S. Roan when decision will be made on the permanency of the injunction standing against him and when he will be given opportunity to answer to the contempt charge.

DeLamater was let off with a light fine in the court of Recorder Broyles Friday morning on his promise that he would not seek to see his wife again and would not in any way molest her.

His trial was the sequel of an exciting scene at his wife's residence, 60 Currier Street, Thursday afternoon. He is said to have gone there in an intoxicated condition and uttered threats against her father, City Comptroller J. H. Goldsmith.

Mrs. DeLamater called Policemen Nashburn and Pate. They warned him to leave, and when he disregarded their orders, placed him under arrest. He explained at the police station that he was at his wife's residence only to see his children and to try to effect a reconciliation with Mrs. DeLamater.

Mrs. DeLamater's attorneys, Daley & Chambers, obtained a temporary injunction from Judge L. S. Roan, restraining DeLamater from visiting at her home, and at the same time made application to have him adjudged in contempt of court for his failure to pay the $75 a month temporary allimony which Mrs. DeLamater is said to have been awarded pending the settlement of her divorce suit.

U.S. ASSETS FIXED AT $2,000,000,000

Surplus of $40,083,229 Wiped Out by Canal Expenditures. $275,000 in Reserve.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—Uncle Sam closed the fiscal year 1913 with a surplus of $40,083,229, a gain of $8,750,000. Panama Canal expenditures and public debt transactions, however, wiped out this surplus and created a deficit of $2,449,000.

Total receipts were $723,782,921, and ordinary disbursements $683,699,692. Corporation taxes yielded the Government $34,948,870. Custom receipts reached $318,142,000, an increase of nearly $7,000,000.

The Government spent $41,741,000 on the Panama Canal, making a total of $318,229,000 spent to date.

Secretary McAdoo to-night announced that the daily treasury statement in future would be issued in a completely changed form, designed to show at a glance the assets and liabilities of the Government.

The first statement will show, the Secretary said, that the grand total of assets of the Government is nearly $2,000,000,000, against which there are liabilities including the gold and silver certificates aggregating about $1,725,000,000, leaving a balance in the treasury of from $250,000,000 to $275,000, including the gold reserve of $150,000,000.

THE GHOST BREAKER

By G. W. GODDARD and PAUL DICKEY

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

The scene of the story is laid in the Vanderlip Hotel, New York City. The Princess Maria Theresa of Segura, a beautiful Spanish woman, is suddenly awakened in her suite by the sound of pistol shots. She hears a man running down the hall. He crashes against her door, breaking the lock, and enters. She sees he is a tall, good-looking young man, dressed in evening clothes. He is carrying a revolver in his right hand, and blood is dripping from a wound in his left. He begs the Princess to hide him. She, moved by some indescribable impulse, decides that she will. She directs him to an inner room, and a few minutes later, when the hotel detective knocks on the door, she tells him she is all right and sends him away. The young man, who is Warren Jarvis, of Kentucky, comes out of his hiding place, and the Princess, for the first time, notices his wound. She is moved to sympathy and showers him with questions as to what has occurred. Jarvis tells her about a Kentucky feud between his family and another named Markham. He says he left Kentucky to avoid the feudists, but encountered one of them in the hotel, which explains the shots.

Now go on with the story.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

A quick shade passed over his face and he pressed his lips together.

"No, never," he declared, in a steady voice.

"You have no fear of death?"

He lifted his eyebrows slightly by way of reply.

Dona Maria moved nearer and lowered her voice to a tense undertone:

"You are—you are not afraid of ghosts?"

Some brilliant student of humanics once figured that the essential difference between a brave man and a coward is that while both are sure to be frightened the coward is panic-stricken in the presence of danger and the brave man is likely to go to pieces after the danger has passed.

Possibly this is the reason that Warren Jarvis and the Princess of Aragon could discuss so calmly their future plans when the one was a murderer in the eyes of the law, a wounded and trapped fugitive; and the other was coolly harboring a criminal to use him for her own private ends. As adventures are for the venturous, so romance is for the romantic. Both were young, both were romantic and both were fearless.

And so it was that Jarvis could smile with unaffected amusement when Dona Maria asked if he was afraid of ghosts. But Dona Maria did not smile.

"Ghosts," she repeated soberly, in response to his puzzled query. Jarvis threw back his head and laughed silently.

"After what I've been through?" he said. "No, I'm not afraid of ghosts."

Dona Maria held him with her gaze until the mirth died out of his face.

"If you escape from here," she said slowly, "it will be because I helped you. We might say I saved your life. If what you tell me is true and if I try to save your life——" she paused for an instant and then went on steadily—"it will be for a selfish motive entirely. It will be because I have work for you to do. Do you understand? Work—hard work—dangerous work! It—it may mean your life in the end," she added, and her voice faltered slightly.

A Real Peril.

Jarvis studied curiously the dark, beautiful face. He did not feel inclined to laugh now. He felt that there was something deadly serious back of this child's talk of ghosts. Whatever the service might be that she demanded of him it was certain that she believed the peril it entailed to be really active.

"You are frank, anyway," he remarked.

"It's a chance," she reminded him.

There was a certain medieval brutality about this last suggestion that completely won him. Indeed, it never occurred to either that there was any true moral obliquity in their attitude or actions. When Jarvis drew his pistol and shot his man to death there burned in his bosom as pure a flame of fanatical belief in the justice of his cause as that which steeled the lance point of the Red Cross Knight. And in the same spirit Dona Maria would swear him to her service and send him to a possible death. He smiled at the thought.

JARVIS SWEARS TO GET THE GHOST

"Kneel then, Warren of Jarvis," she commanded, "and repeat this oath."

"And my reward?"

"—— is your life," she replied instantly.

Jarvis again burst into a short silent laugh. "Well, that's something. And if I agree——?"

"You will begin by taking the ancient feudal oath of my country," said Dona Maria, gravely.

"Oath!" exclaimed Jarvis. "Isn't my word enough?"

The Princess waved her hand in a truly royal manner.

"You will pardon me if I insist."

The young man smiled and shrugged his shoulders. "Very well. If it pleases you, I'll swear the blackest oath you can utter. Let's hear it."

However lightly he might take it, the ceremony held nothing of the mirthful for Dona Maria. As solemnly as if feudalism had not long ago been reduced to a show of pomp to please those whom it amused, she asked his name.

"Jarvis," he told her.

"Your full name?"

"Warren Jarvis."

Royally Dona Maria pointed to the rug at her feet.

"Kneel, then, Warren Jarvis," she commanded, "and repeat this oath."

He Kneels.

"Oh, come, now," he objected, sheepishly—but Dona Maria only looked and pointed. At last he grinned and began to get down first with one knee and then the other, and finally came down awkwardly with both at once. It was distinctly ungraceful and against the best forms of feudal ceremony. Dona Maria was embarrassed.

"No! not that way," she said hastily. "On one knee. Ah! That is better. Now, repeat after me—'I, Warren of Jarvis' "——

"I, Warren of Jarvis," repeated the young man, with mock solemnity, though he was not insensible to the romantic charm of the ceremony.

"'Senor of all the domains, fiefs, keeps and marches of Warren of Kentucky' "—

"Whew!" He thought of what the boys around the Galt House would say of these "fiefs and marches," but he obeyed.

"Senor of all the domains, fiefs, keeps and marches of Warren of Kentucky' "—

"'Do convey to Maria Theresa, of Aragon, all my worldly titles and possessions' "——

"Sounds like I was marrying her," he muttered. "'Do convey to Maria Theresa, of Aragon, all my worldly titles and possessions' "——

"Now, take my left hand in both of yours," ordered Dona Maria. He obeyed with wonderful enthusiasm and felt that he was going to like the oath more and more as it progressed.

"'And receive them back as vassal and retainer and to faithfully fight in my lady's cause, according to the feudal laws of Castile and Aragon. So help me God, Our Lady and St. James!' "

Jarvis looked up into the glowing face and shining eyes as she repeated the solemn closing words of the oath and a swift change came over him as the soft hand that he held in both his had carried some thrilling current from her soul to his. He felt somewhat like the scoffer who strolls into a church and is humbled by the simple faith he sees about him. There was no mockery in his voice and little in his heart when he repeated them after her. And the kiss that he pressed on the back of her hand when she said, "Arise, vassal," was wholly sincere.

Confused.

She drew back quickly, for the first time confused.

"That is part of the ceremony," she admitted, in a small voice, "but I meant to omit it."

So the serious moment passed. "It seemed the only sensible part," he laughed. "But who on earth is this Maria Theresa that I am hired man to?"

Dona Maria straightened her slender figure and drew the folds of her dressing gown more closely about her.

"I," she said, with the dignity of a queen, "am Her Supreme Highness, Maria Theresa of Segura, Princess of Aragon."

Jarvis' jaw did not drop, because it was not that kind of a jaw, but he was enough of a democrat to be sufficiently impressed.

"Good Lord!" he groaned, after a short season of speechlessness. "A princess!—and I've been ordering you around with a gun!"

"Never mind that now," his liege lady ordered lightly, mollified by her vassal's appreciation of her position; "you will be properly punished, my vassal. There are dungeons in my castle."

"Sh—h!" cautioned Jarvis quickly. There was a sound of swift footsteps in the hall. They passed the door and died away, but the incident brought them back to a consideration of the present situation.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Very True.

She—Anyhow, you must admit he is a well-bred man. Did you notice his knowledge of Ruskin?

He—I did, and if you want my candid opinion, I don't believe he's ever been there.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THIS is vacashun time & I toald Pa that I had a chanst to malk sum munny, so I wuddent have to ask him for any spending munny all summer. I had a nice offer to be a boy actor with a moving picter cumpany & I thought sure Pa wud let me go, but he sed No, my son, I want you to be a lawyer or a doctor wen you grow up. I do not want you to git any idee of ever going on the stage.

I was kind of mad at Pa to think that he wuddent give me such a fine chanst, but I dident say any moar, beekaus he knows best, I suppoas. Pa sed that he nevver took any stock in peepul that made thare living pretending thay was something that thay wasent. Take them fortune tellers & clarevoy-ants, for instens, sed Pa; thay have ads in the paper that tell what wonders thay are & how thay can tell the past from the present & read the future & all that. Thay malk me tired, sed Pa. I doant want my son to be anything excep sum good, reeliable lawyer or doctor.

It was kind of funny that Pa spoak about clarevoy-ants, beekaus I saw a ad that saim afternoon & it sed Boy Wanted. I went in & it was a clarevoy-ant offis that wanted the boy. He sed he wud give me $8 a week to ware a Orien-tal custom & stand neer him wen he was telling peepul about the future. I had to ware a mask, too, & it was offul hot, but I dident kick beekaus $8 was quite a lot of munny eeven if I cuddent git the $20 job. So I went to work.

It's Up to the Judges Now

"The Triple Tie" Contest Came to an End at Noon Yesterday

Noon yesterday was the time limit fixed for the close of "The Triple Tie" contest and up to that hour many contributions were received. Some of them came by special delivery. Some of the packages were bulky, others small, but if one may be permitted to judge from exterior looks, all those who tried a hand at writing a logical conclusion for the great baseball story were very much in earnest.

All the contributions will be turned over to the three judges, as announced, and it will be up to these disinterested persons to go through the mass of replies and indicate those which they consider the best.

On Monday we shall continue the publication of "The Triple Tie," giving the ending of this remarkable serial just as Mr. Mitchell, the author, wrote it. We regard "The Triple Tie" as one of the most interesting stories ever published by The Georgian. Much of its appeal lay in the fact that it contained local color in generous measure.

The Way of a Man

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

ONE who signs herself "Broken Hearted," and who I am sure isn't, writes me as follows:

"I am keeping company with a young man and like him very much, but he doesn't show his love for me as I do for him. Every time he comes to see me he sits in a chair reading a book. Do you think I should continue keeping company with him?"

My dear, you love him; you want him to love you, and you want to become his wife. Isn't that so? Yet you rebel against the attention he gives you, and which is the kind you will always receive as his wife. He will always "Sit in a chair reading a book." In that manner is every wife in the world entertained.

This is the husband-like treatment, and not the lover-like. He gives you the treatment a husband gives his wife for the reason that you have let him see "you are already won!" You say he doesn't show his love for you as "you do for him." Of course not. A man is naturally a lazy animal and makes no effort that is unnecessary. An effort to win your love is unnecessary.

When a man goes courting he makes the effort of a man catching a street car. After he has caught the car he seats himself comfortably and begins to read his newspaper. No further effort is necessary, so why make it? This man has won your love; you have made him as sure of it as he is sure he has caught the car when his feet are on the steps. Naturally, the next thing he does is to sit down and rest.

I do not blame him. Really, sometimes when I see the way girls lay their hearts at the feet of men, so often without any solicitation from the men, I wonder that courting stays in fashion.

I wonder that men spend their money on flowers, books, candy, theater tickets and for little outings, all to win the love of a girl, when so many girls seem to stand ready with their love in their hands, begging the acceptance of it by any man who looks their way.

I wonder that men prize a girl's love as highly as they do, remembering it was so lightly won.

Get the book habit. Never again tell him you love him. Never nag because he reads, but, rather, encourage him, letting him see that you would rather he read than bore you by talking.

You have given him the impression that he is sure of you. Efface that impression, but efface it so gently he will never know just when the process of obliteration began. Let him realize that your heart doesn't hang on a low branch, ready to drop into his hand if he will outstretch it; give him to know it grows higher up and that he must climb for it.

I am quite sure if you go about it with discretion he will close his book till you are his wife.

And then make up your mind to this and accept it as inevitable, how he will read to make up for lost time!

Men and the Cook Stove .:. .:. .:. By Dorothy Dix

IT is announced that nine young men students at Cornell University this year registered in the domestic science department and took cooking lessons.

This is glad news on many accounts. For one thing, it opens up to men a lucrative occupation, for there are few professions so well paid as that of the expert cook, and it is a pity that more American boys do not fit themselves to fill it, instead of compelling us to send abroad for a French chef whenever we want a culinary artist.

But whether a man intends to be a professional cook or not, it's a good thing for him to learn at least the rudiments of domestic science if for no other reason than because it establishes a common bond of interest and sympathy between him and his wife when he gets married.

Undoubtedly one of the chief reasons why marriage is a failure is because the average man and woman in this country lead such distinct and separate lives, and have so little knowledge of the problems with which each has to grapple, and I am persuaded that nothing would do more to promote domestic felicity than for every boy before he is married to have served an apprenticeship in the kitchen, and every girl to have done a couple of years' work in a business office.

Certainly the man who knows something practical about cooking, who has wrestled with the frying pan, and been up against the pots and the kettles will be able to extend a heart-to-heart comprehension to his wife when the steak is tough, and the potatoes watery, of which the unculinary, half-baked husband is utterly incapable.

What Dickens Says.

Dickens says, in one of his stories that no educated man ever looks at even the back of a book in the way that an ignorant person does, and precisely the same thing applies to housekeeping. The man whose whole experience in cooking consists in offering gratuitous criticism every time anything is overdone or underdone can never behold a dinner with the same exquisite perception of all the time and labor and worry it took to produce it that the man will show who knows from personal experience of the deceitfulness of butchers' meat and the iniquity of the gas range.

As it is now, the household critic has nothing but contemptuous pity for the female intellect that can not manage two servants without getting gray and wrinkled in the process, while he bosses half a hundred employees without turning a hair. The man who has been through the domestic mill on his own account will never speak in that tone of voice to his wife.

He will know, from experience, that no rules that apply to other labor have any bearing on the servant girl question. Like the wind, she cometh and she goeth as she listeth, and no man or woman knows when or for how long she is going to list. Neither will this paragon of a husband make unfavorable comments on the culinary products of Hilda and Mary Jane. He will eat what is set before him, asking no questions for sympathy sake, and reflecting when things go wrong that he would get no better results in his own affairs if he had to depend for his help on those who neither wanted to learn their business nor desired to keep their places.

A Difference.

And just as it is a good thing for men to learn to cook, it is also well for a woman to have had the actual experience of earning her own living before she is married.

No woman who has ever earned a dollar looks at one as does the woman who has always had her spending money given her. To the one it means something that comes easy and goes easy. To the other it represents toil and weariness, sometimes the very life blood of a person. She knows how hard it is to win, how hard to keep, and the anxiety and humiliation it means to be without it, and she spends it prudently and judiciously.

The woman who has never earned her own living thinks that business is a picnic, and that when a man goes downtown of a morning he departs to enjoy himself with his friends. No woman who has stood behind the counter, or bent over a typewriter and taken part in the daily grind of business cherishes any illusions about its being fun. She knows it for the heart wearing, nerve wrecking thing it is, and her comprehension of its trials keeps her from inflicting on her husband many of the unconscious cruelties that the woman who is totally ignorant of business practices upon her suffering spouse.

Also the business woman remembers how, when she came home at night exhausted and with nerves fretted to fiddle strings, it seemed to her that just one more calamity would strain things to the breaking point. You may be sure that such a woman never meets a weary man at the front door with a catalogue of everything that has gone wrong in the house during the day. Neither does she expect a man with weighty affairs on his mind, and whose time is money, to stop downtown to match samples, or hunt through a department store for a spool of elephant breath silk thread.

What we need is a common plane of mutual helpfulness and understanding on which the sexes can meet. Men and women should know the trials and tribulations under which each labors in order to sympathize with them. It's because men have never done women's work that they think that cooking and sewing and mending and baby tending is a job so easy that a woman could do it with one hand tied behind her. It is because women have never had to get up, sick or well, and go down town to work that they think that a man's business is a cinch.

It is because men have never had to ask for every cent they spend that they do not realize how humiliating it is to a woman to have no personal income of her own. It is because few women care to smoke that the average wife nags her husband about scenting up the parlor curtains with tobacco.

With personal knowledge of the difficulties of the situation will come sympathy and toleration. So the man who can cook, and the woman who has kept books will meet on a common plane of mutual good will that will make matrimony a success instead of the failure it so often is through the sheer inability of husband or wife to comprehend the difficulties the other faces.

Injun Giver.

Robbie met a neighbor who was smoking some fine, fragrant tobacco sent by his son in America. He took out his own pipe ostentatiously.

"Have you a match, Sandy?" he queried.

The match was forthcoming, but nothing more.

"I do believe," said Robbie, "I hae left ma tobacco at hame."

"Then," said Sandy, after a silence, "ye micht gie ma back ma match."

How Strict Are You with Your Daughter?

—answer it, parents. Are you too strict, or aren't you strict enough? Either course is liable to be disastrous. Your daughter's welfare means as much to you as anything else in the world, yet do you know what to watch in bringing her up.

There are few men who know the problem as Judge Freschi does. For years a magistrate in the City of New York, his work has brought him into personal contact with thousands of girls and their stories. He has had an opportunity to analyze the causes of their failure. His name has become known throughout the country as their benefactor.

The angle from which he discusses the diverse elements that enter into the upbringing of the girl is a new one that you probably have never thought of. As a thoughtful mother or father you ought to read what he says in his article, "How Strict Are You with Your Daughter?" It appears in the

By DOROTHY DIX.

EVERY few days I get a letter from some man who emits a wild and heartbroken wail because, he says, woman has gotten out of her proper place. Many of these melancholy gentlemen go so far as to express the further opinion that it is the business of the press to try to shoo the feminine sex back to where it belongs.

Speaking for myself, I should gladly use what little influence I have with women in trying to corral them in their own particular little stockade if I only knew where that sacred spot was.

What is woman's proper place, anyhow? Will some wise brother please arise in meeting and speak right out and tell us?

Is woman's proper place the home? None of us deny it, and the great majority of women will answer the call in person if you ring their front door bell.

A Foolish Waste.

But what about the tens of thousands of women who have no home in which to stay, whom no man asked to marry them, and who are fated to never know the cling of little children's arms about their necks? It is all right to say, "Back to the home for yours, sister," to the woman who has got a good husband, and babies, and a cottage or a flat of her own, but how are you going to keep women in the domestic sphere who have neither a kitchen, nor a nursery, nor a man of their own? I give it up.

Is the woman who paints pictures, or writes, or acts out of her proper place? I take it that when the good God put talent into a woman's head that He knew what He was about, and that He intended her to use the gifts He gave her. Otherwise it would be a foolish waste of valuable material.

Certainly we should all be much poorer if there had been no Rosa Bonheurs, no George Eliots, no Charlotte Brontes, no Mrs. Humphry Wards, none of the thousand delicate and facile female pens that delight and entertain us every day of our lives.

Is Maude Adams out of her sphere when she makes us cry? Is Rose Stahl out of her sphere when she makes laugh? Are Melba and Tetrazzini and Cavallieri out of their places when they lift us up to the seventh heaven with their voices? Yet all of these women occupy conspicuous places and are very much in public.

A Question.

Evidently the men who complain of women being out of their proper places are thinking about the business women. Is a clever, strong, healthy young girl out of her place when she goes to work to support herself instead of sitting down idly at home and adding to the burden of a poor, weary, hump-shouldered old father, who has toiled like a dray horse to raise his family and has come almost to the end of his strength?

Are the girls of a family who have good business positions and who bring their money home to make an old mother comfortable and educate younger brothers and sisters out of their places during working hours?

Is the woman who is married to a man whose health fails out of her place because she puts her shoulder to the wheel and helps the domestic wagon out of the ditch instead of letting it sink down into the mire?

If you ask my opinion, I think that every woman who needs money for herself, or for her family, is exactly where she ought to be when she is earning it by her honest work. If the men of her family can't support her, there is no reason why she should not support herself, and help them, too, if they need it. For my part, I have never been able to see why it isn't just as feminine a thing, and as much in her line of duty, for a woman to be a prop to a man as it is to be a millstone about his neck.

Is woman out of her place when she belongs to clubs? Isn't it woman's place to add to the sweetness and light of life, and haven't the women's clubs done more toward fostering the higher education, beautifying towns, supporting art galleries and picture shows, and giving the country a general esthetic uplift, than all other causes combined?

Is the woman of wealth, and intelligence, and leisure out of her place when she devotes her energies to public reforms and charities? Where else would we look for our great philanthropies? Who would raise the money for our hospitals, for our fresh-air funds, for our tuberculosis camps, for our societies for the prevention of cruelty to animals? There is not a community in this country that hasn't some old maid or childless widow who is its good Samaritan, and nobody accuses her of being out of her proper sphere, except the evildoers on whose corns she treads.

Out of Place?

There are those who contend that a woman is out of her proper place—oh, millions of miles out of it—when she takes an interest in politics and wants to vote. Why? Has she not as much at stake in the country as any man? Does she not pay as many taxes? Is she not affected by the laws just as men are? If food prices advance, does not the burden of making the family income go further fall upon her? If the streets are dirty and the water supply impure, does she not have to nurse her sick, because of it, and if they die, is not her heart broken over their loss even more than any man's? How can she be out of her place when considering the questions that are most vital to her?

The truth is, there is no place in all the wide world that is not woman's place. First at the cradle and last at the tomb, she pillows man's head in infancy on her breast, and kisses shut his eyes when he dies, and there is no hope, no joy, no struggle, no labor, no victory, no defeat in his life in which her place is not always by his side.

It is idle to talk about sending woman back to her place. The earth is hers, and the fullness thereof, just as much as it is a man's.

Daysey Mayme's July 4

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THE call had read "Ladies Not Admitted," and while a crowd of little girls stood outside pouting, crying and even kicking on the closed door in the modern, ladylike way of expressing opposition, a band of grave-faced little men in blouse and bib held serious deliberation on the inside.

"We are assembled," said President Chauncey Devere Appleton, "to utter protest against the parentally expurgated plan of a Fourth of July. We are here to make public our opinion of any parent who would have children spend the Fourth as if the corpse of Freedom lay shrouded in the next room."

A Riot.

Every delegate was on his feet at once; there were motions, countermotions, protests, howls and hisses, a confusion that was augmented by the discovery that the ladies on the outside were peeking through the keyhole. After the president had put the seal of secrecy on the proceedings by closing the keyhole with a borrowed piece of chewing gum, order was restored, and the following resolutions were adopted:

"That life is not what it used to be when a boy could put a cannon cracker under a maiden aunt's chair and gorge himself with ice cream while the family were bringing her to;

"That unless a boy has a chance to make himself look like a bursted firecracker, there is no way for him to become distinguished, and mothers have no right to monopolize all the surgical operations;

"That if this demand for everything noiseless isn't checked soon, mothers will be refusing the boy babies the doctors bring them because they are not equipped with rubber tires;

"That girls are ideal creatures because they are happy with dolls, and the only noise in playing with a doll is a squeak that is squeaked out the first day;

What Father Did.

"That mothers place too much stress on boys getting their hands shot off, considering that they never look at their sons' hands without screaming out that they need washing;

"That father used cannon crackers when he was young, and still has hands left to spank us."

The discovery that the ladies on the outside had used the eternal feminine weapon of defense in boring a hole through the seal of secrecy broke up the meeting, and the gentlemen poured out and the ladies poured in, in wild confusion.

Why He Left.

A dispute once arose between a landlord and his tenant. The latter had given notice to quit, but would not put a bill in his window to say that his house was "To Be Let."

To make matters worse, they went to law about it. The judge, having heard the case, made an order for the defendant to put a bill up within fourteen days.

The landlord was so overjoyed at his victory that on the fourteenth day he took a friend with him around to the house to chaff his tenant. The bill was up in the window plain enough, but under it was another bill, which ran as follows:

"Cause of leaving—bad drains."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DON'T BE DISCOURAGED.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 18 and am employed by one of the largest railroads in the East.

I have been keeping steady company with a young lady two years my senior and visit this girl about two or three times a week. I asked her to become my wife and she told me I would have to get her father's consent. I had a conference with her father, and the only opposition he has to our marriage is that I am too short. I am 5 feet 3 inches and receive a good salary. Would you advise me to discontinue my attentions to this girl or continue to keep company with her, in the hope that her father will see the folly of his ways and consent to our marriage? GEORGE W.

If her father's objections are based solely on your height, I am sure that in time he will withdraw them.

You need time for a more important reason: If your stature were all that is desired, your age is not. Trust me in this, my boy—no boy at 18 is old enough to select a wife. For your own sake, be glad to wait.

IT WILL BE A GOOD LOSS.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

young man two years my senior. I am deeply in love with a and we have been keeping company for the past nine months, but lately at a party to which he had taken me he met a girl and took her home. I wrote him the next day asking him if I had done anything to offend him. I have not received an answer. Should I write to him again, as I would not like to lose him? C. V. M.

He treated you most rudely, and you would show a finer spirit if you resented it and refused to see him again. Do not write, and make up your mind to this: The best thing that can happen to a girl is to "lose" an escort who is not a gentleman, for such a one behaves much worse after marriage.

DON'T CALL AGAIN.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 19 and very popular. Lately I received word from a young man who used to call on me pretty steady that he would like to have me call him on the telephone. I was informed he was not in, and, as he is a traveling salesman, I believed this, but called a few days later only to be told the same story; this time leaving my name saying he should call me up. Now, as the young man who received my message is also a good friend of mine, and spoke quite confidential to me on the phone, also telling me that the other young man is just jollying me along, I am in doubt as to what course to pursue.

BABE.

You should not have called in the first place, and your second effort does not speak much for your dignity.

The young man, my dear, who is worth having will always take the initiative. He will always make every effort to communicate with the girl he loves, and ask only that she be pleased at his overtures.

Preparing Her.

Farmer Wayback (starting home from the station)—"Please, ma'am, do you wear false teeth?"

Fair Boarder (for summer)—"Sir?"

As Easy To Keep The Hair From Turning Gray As To Keep The Scalp Clean

AND there is no reason in the world why you should hesitate to restore to your hair its lost color and vitality, if it is fading and turning gray, any more than that you should foolishly refuse to use a remedy for dandruff or any other scalp trouble.

Sickness, nervousness; impoverished blood or deficient scalp nutrition may cause premature grayness; sometimes it is inherited. Whatever the cause, gray hair adds from 10 to 20 years to the age, and a young woman, even 25 or 30, with very gray hair is passed as old.

Robinaire Hair Dye is a pure tonic restorative to bring back to faded or gray hair its own original color and lost beauty. It is not to bleach or change the original color, and should not be confused with such. It is prepared in our own laboratory from a formula we know to be beneficial, and we guarantee it to be non-injurious. It keeps the hair soft, lustrous and in its beautiful, natural color, and as it does not stain the scalp cannot be detected. On Independence Day

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

THE hour: Nine in the evening. The day: The Fourth of July. The year: That is immaterial, since the story told that night is always young. The personnel: A young man of 24 and a girl of 19.

The scene: A secluded corner of a porch step. Around this young man and woman were other young men and women who were showing their patriotism with firecrackers, torpedoes, skyrockets and other illuminating and noisy means. There was a momentary darkness. The last skyrocket had proved a fizzle and there was some delay in starting another. Under cover of the darkness, and unheard by the others in their merriment, the young man whispered in the girl's ear, "I love you," and she replied "And I love you."

First Avowal.

It was their first avowal of affection, and some years later, the girl, who had become a matron, sighed and said: "You know I lost my independence on Independence Day."

Every one who loves and is loved loses a measure of independence, and this woman was such a clinging, helpless creature, that she lost all she had. Perhaps that was because she heard her little love story in a day when girls were taught that to be happy sweethearts and wives they must be long-suffering and submissive.

She made no reservation of her affection, and their courtship proved a stormy one. He flirted, there was coolness, heat, anger, love, indifference, impatience, cruelty or kindness personified as the mood suited him. Through every change in him she remained the same patient, grateful, loving girl, always with arms outstretched to welcome him when he deigned to turn her way.

No Nation Free.

She put herself beneath his feet in her excessive humility, and after they were married he saw to it that she remained there. She had put her own pricemark on herself. We all do. He looked at the mark, and saw that it resembled the tag Public Opinion put many centuries ago on the worm.

There is an independence of nations, and an independence of individuals, and the former depends on the latter. No nation is free if its citizens are united

The men are independent and free. The women are gradually achieving an independence that will give them every right enjoyed by the men.

It is a great thing, but not enough. I want an independence for every girl who loves, and which she, and she alone, must secure.

I want her to hold her little head and heart high, and give her love and life to no man who will treat them lightly.

I want her, when she says "I love you," to add, "but my happiness, my usefulness, my well-being, do not depend on becoming the wife of any man."

Then he will love her, appreciate her and want her all the more.

Inference Obvious.

Knickerbockered and resplendent in dazzling tartan stockings, Algernon sauntered from the clubhouse to the golf links; and there, on the first tee, having carefully adjusted his monocle and "addressed" the ball for a prodigious length of time, began his game.

"By the way, caddie," he remarked pleasantly, "what sort of a game does Mr. McJones play?"

The diminutive young Scotchman screwed up his weather-beaten face.

"Mr. McJones? He canna play at all."

"Ah!" said Algernon. "You see, I'm playing a match with him tomorrow. Suppose I shall beat him easily—what?"

The caddie shook his head wisely.

"Na," he replied; "that ye will not."

Adding Fuel to Flame.

A quarrelsome couple, having exhausted many subjects, came to discussing tombstones, and the husband asked:

"My dear, what kind of stone do you suppose they will give me when I die?"

"Brimstone," was the reply.

: The Divorce Question :

By JERE R. COOKE.

(It may be asked why I, of all men, should write upon questions affecting marriage and other relations. In reply, I would say that one who has gone through what I have, suffered as much as I have, and seen so much of the world and its hard side may possibly have something to say that will be of use to others. I hope so at least.—JERE COOKE.)

A WOMAN recently gave the reason why she desired a divorce from her husband as "so they may cultivate a beautiful friendship."

It goes without saying that it is easier to be a friend than a helpmeet, but to sacrifice the one for the other is to barter the real jewel for the past brilliant. There can be no harmony among such people.

No sympathy, whether he be called by the sacred name of helpmeet or the uncertain cognomen of friend.

The best friend a man can have is his wife, and marriage is the mold into which the highest friendship is poured.

The true secret of success in marriage is that the wife is the best friend or chum or "pal" her husband has. Why shouldn't she be? She shares his sorrows; why not his joys?

It is not an uncommon thing that the man weds the sweetheart of his childhood, the playmate of his boyish days, when, hand in hand, they roamed together and no boy chum could tear them apart.

Puppy love is supplanted by the great transcendental love that cements a life-long intimate friendship. A great man proved his appreciation of this and his desire for its continuance by replying, when asked the question what one thing he would most desire should he have to depart this life, "My wife's second husband."

Three Reasons.

He was not like the man who, being asked how many times he was married, replied:

"Three times. Once for love and twice for general housework."

Pity the poor woman who slaves for her husband, only to die of hard labor and leave her savings to his second wife.

A woman who was ill-mated once complained, "My friend is so much more sympathetic than my husband. He is so considerate, so kind."

It afterward developed that this friend grew weary of his attentions in a much shorter time than the husband. Comparisons are always fatal.

The man who holds his tired, hard-working wife in comparison to the painted woman he meets upon the street always loses. Poverty is one curse of domestic infelicity, but the wife who can share it with her husband has found the marriage goal. There is an argument for incompatibility which does not extend to the statutory ground.

No woman should be compelled to spend her earthly existence with a brute, an inebriate, or a libertine, and no man should be forced to abide with a woman who has dropped from her pinnacle as a helpmeet to a nag or a shrew.

An unwise man once attempted to cure his wrangling wife by breaking a piece of the best china at every one of these spells. It was expensive and not effective.

Another friend, with more success used to call in a doctor every time hysteria developed. The patient improved rapidly.

A seemingly unending wrangle can, by diplomatic treatment, terminate, as a mob of violence is quelled by the cold water of the firemen, rather than by the bullets of the police.

Called a Brute.

The social animal man is sometimes called a brute, and frequently is a brute.

He thinks he knows it all and wants to be the head and boss of the house.

No woman who is a pal to her husband need ever fear any other woman. Her husband will not join another lodge so that he can get one more night out a week.

If the "other woman" gets him she is a better pal to him. She jollies rather than scolds, she laughs and does not cry, she is a good sport, she gets his money, and she has a good time.

If he is as old as Methuselah she calls him a "boy." He likes it and spends his cash.

Few men are natural pikers with their chums. They take a certain pride in playing the limit.

The woman with the harnessed lap dog gives out a suspicion that she is no longer a "pal" to her husband. She has the dog in leash, but there are no strings on the man. "To have and to hold" each other's hearts.

It is not so much that they live together as that they love each other.

The two lives who hope, fear, plan, play, enjoy, suffer, deny, possess, work and win together need no divorce court to adjust their difficulties.

They are united in life and in death they are not divided.

Do You Know---

The Prussian Guards, whom King George and the German Emperor reviewed recently, were originated by Frederick I, whose ambition it was to form a royal bodyguard of giants. Every country was ransacked by his agents to supply recruits, and no head that towered above the crowd, even in the bazaars of Aleppo or Cairo, could escape the crimps of the Prussian King. The most extravagant sums were offered to men of exceptional inches, an Irishmen, more than seven feet high, who was picked up by the Prussian Ambassador in London, receiving a bounty of $6,000.

Should the United States purchase from Mexico 250,000 square miles of Mexico for $30,000,000 it will not be the first addition by purchase to the great American Commonwealth. A century ago Napoleon I relinquished France's claim to Louisiana and Arkansas for $15,000,000, and in 1867 Russia exchanged Alaska for a cash payment by the United States of $7,000,000. More recently a strip of Central America, embracing five miles on either side of the Panama Canal, was purchased for $10,000,000 from the Republic of Panama.

Nothing is more amusing than to watch on a winter's day the marvelous intelligence with which the pigeons of St. Mark's, in Venice, can discriminate between residents and visitors in the grand square of that city, the Plaza of St. Mark. The moment a foreigner shows his face in the plaza the pigeons set upon him in crowds, hoping to be fed. They do not trouble the natives, who may be sunning themselves by the hundred in the square.

CONFIDENCE MEN SHOW TARHEEL EASY MONEY

He Goes Home From New York for More Funds and There Learns Something More.

NEW YORK, July 4.—During all the many years that Edward Lee Baxter Davideon had been living in the progressive town of Charlotte, N. C., it was his foolish belief that the only way to make money is to work for it.

Leading about $1,000 in cash and a draft for $10,000 by the right hand, he arrived in this hospitable village on June 24. Four days later he was going to accompany a steamship to the other side.

He registered at the Hotel Martinique, and there met a well-dressed young man.

In the cafe the well-dressed young man was met by a friend who almost tore a pocket in trying to remove an obese roll of yellowbacks in an unostentatious manner.

Easy, Too Easy.

"This is a mere nothing," said the friend, carelessly. "When I see so many really intelligent young men working for money it breaks my weak heart."

That called for an explanation, and it was given. By tapping the wires that carry racing results one could make a fortune in 20 minutes.

After several minutes Davidson at length persuaded the young man to accept a few dollars from him for sample bets. He was successful. He wanted to know more about this road to riches and, on being assured that the more money you put up the more you made, he handed $700 to the well-dressed young man.

Goes Home for Money.

Somehow or other the money was lost, but, said the well-dressed one, Davidson should not be discouraged. He should make a bigger bet.

"Could you use this $10,000 draft?" he asked.

They could, if they knew that Mr. Davidson really had the money. Mr. Davidson replied quickly he could prove that he had by going to his home and getting it. He went back to Charlotte and there opened his heart to Frank Osborne, brother of James W. Osborne, the lawyer, of this city. Frank Osborne, suspicious, instructed Davidson to see James W. This he did and Mr. Osborne took Davidson to Deputy Police Commission Dougherty, who wired Frank Osborne to telegraph to the suspects when they would arrive.

The two tappers were arrested when they met Davidson. The North Carolinan took a liner to Europe.

Davidson Reputed Wealthy.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., July 4.—Baxter Davidson is one of Charlotte's best known men. He is a bachelor somewhat beyond middle age and a capitalist. He is a member of one of North Carolina's most prominent families.

Following the declaration of J. O. ATHLETIC CLUB TEAM WINNER IN LOCAL MEET

By Innis Brown.

SEVERAL hundred spectators braved the sizzling rays of a July sun at Piedmont Park Friday morning to watch the first field meet pulled off by the Playgrounds Committee of city parks. In one or two of the events they were repaid for their bravery, and the fact that a larger number did not beat a hurried retreat to the waters of Piedmont lake is evidence of the fact that there is real local interest in such athletic events.

A large number of entrants had been registered for the various events. However, the broiling sun, no doubt, caused many of these to change their minds, even after they had reached the scene. This was especially true in the running events, and accounts for the fact that more starters did not toe the mark.

In the 100-yard dash, the opening event, Hill, of the Athletic Club, came home ahead of a good margin. In fact, he held the field well enough in hand to look back over his shoulder as he reached the tape. Brannen, also of the Athletic Club, ran second, and a clubmate, Allen, took third. A large number were carded to go in this race, but all save four or five were scratched.

440 Is Great Race.

The quarter-mile run furnished the best contest of the meet. Four contestants entered, but within the first 100 yards the race had narrowed down to Allen and Locke, both of the Athletic Club. The former reached the finish first by a step, the time being 52 2-5 seconds.

Locke came back in the half-mile event, winning as he pleased. Five men faced the starter, and by the time the first turn was reached Locke had opened up a nice lead, which he improved all the way. He finished 30 yards ahead of the field, without extending himself. Jarvis came in second, with Weaver third.

The running high jump was taken by Walter Robinson, of the Athletic Club, with a jump of five feet five inches. J. M. Beutell, affiliated with the same club, was second, with "Buss" Beutell, unattached, third.

"Buss" Beutell reversed the decision in the running broad jump with a leap of 18 feet 10 inches. Hill was second, and Dubard third.

Ben Montgomery, of the Athletic Club, won the pole vault at 8 feet 9 inches. Buss Beutell finished second in this event, with Blodgett and Sullivan tied for third place.

Walter Dubard had comparatively easy sailing in the shotput. He got 42 feet 6 1-2 inches in one heave of the preliminary. This was enough by more than a foot. West, of the Fifth Regiment, came second with a put of 41 feet 4 inches. Jones scored third with 29 feet 11 inches.

Hugh Mauck ran away with the hammer throw. His best effort was 139 feet. This was more than 33 feet better than his next opponent. MacKinnon scored second best with 105 feet 10 inches. Brannen was third with 100 feet 2 inches.

Sullivan Wins Steeplechase.

The steeplechase was run over a course beginning on the east side of the lake and finishing at the regular mark on the track. It included swimming the neck of the lake near the bridge. Wesley Meyers got away ahead and completed the aquatic performance with a lead of 20 paces. He crossed the green from the lake to the track with such a margin. Sullivan, however, caught him tiring when less than 100 yards from the finish and won by ten paces. Weaver ran third.

A summary of points according to clubs shows the Athletic Club ahead with a total of 44. The Fifth Regiment made second place with 11 points, and S. V. D. scored 8. Winners of the remaining 17 points entered unattached.

The meet was handled by the following officials: J. O. Cochran, referee; J. W. Helsman, judge of finish; Dr. Dan Sage, timer; Joe Bean, clerk of course. Charlie Wahoo, judge of weight contests; Ben Adams, starter; Willis Westmoreland, announcer.

Results:

One Hundred-Yard Dash—Hill (A. A. C.), first; Brannen (A. A. C.), second; Allen (A. A. C.), third. Time, 10 4-5 seconds.

Four Hundred and Forty-Yard Run—Allen (A. A. C.), first; Locke (A. A. C.), second; Thomas (S. V. D.), third. Time, 52 2-5 seconds.

Half-Mile Run—Lock (A. A. C.), first; Jarvis (Fifth Regiment), second; Weaver (A. A. C.), third. Time, 2 minutes 13 2-5 seconds.

Running High Jump—Robinson (unattached), first; J. M. Beutell (A. A. C.), second; R. L. Beutell (unattached), third. Height, 5 feet 5 inches.

VETERANS WIN HONORS

Grant-Thornton Cop Georgia Title

GRANT and Thornton, in their prime the greatest double tennis team of all Dixie, demonstrated that they are strong players even now by defeating Mansfield and Smith on the courts of the Piedmont Driving Club Thursday afternoon, 6-4, 11-9, 7-5. The match was started several weeks ago, but was postponed in the second set and was taken up where it was left off.

Grant and Thornton won the opening game yesterday, making the score 8-7 in their favor, but Smith and Mansfield won the next and deuced the set again. Not until a total of twenty games had been played was the set decided.

In the third set after Grant and Thornton had Smith and Mansfield 3-1, the latter won the fifth game, and with the score fifteen-forty against them in the sixth pulled up and finally won, tying the score 3 all.

The only time that Smith and Manning led in games during the afternoon was in the third set when they had their opponents 5-4, but Grant and Thornton came strong in the next game, winning it and also the next two, which gave them the game 7-5 and also the match.

Mansfield did some pretty playing. Grant and Thornton directed most of their clouts at him and he handled them well. Grant and Thornton played him almost entirely throughout the match, preferring his returns to the rifle-like shots of Smith.

In the finals in the mixed doubles Miss Stanton and Thornton won by default from Miss Muse and Carter, as Carter is playing in the tournament now going on at Augusta.

DIRECTORS DID NOT ASK SMITH ABOUT PITCHER

Manager Billy's Advice Was Not Sought in Purchase of "Pop-Boy" Smith.

ALTHOUGH Bill Smith, manager of the Crackers, does not know anything about the desire of the local team to get Clarence "Pop Boy" Smith, it is more than probable that the Crackers will have to do without the White Sox hurler.

According to a report from local headquarters Comiskey offered Smith to the Crackers for $2,000, under optional agreement. This was in a night letter Tuesday night. The local club accepted his proposition by wire on Wednesday morning.

Bill Smith, when called up this morning over the phone, said he knew nothing of the deal. This seems to be a queer condition of affairs, as the Cracker manager is usually notified of all deals.

Smith pitched the last four innings of the game against the Tigers on Wednesday, and held that hard-hitting crowd to one hit. This made such an impression that the White Sox decided to call off the trade.

The local club, however, is still after Smith and hopes to land him before the month is over. The Crackers are badly in need of another good twirler right now to help Conzelman, Dent, Price, Musser and Brady.

There is also a rumor going the rounds these days that everything is not running smooth between the local directors and Billy Smith. Smith's ignorance in the White Sox deal can not be accounted for, unless the directors are discouraged with several deals the Cracker manager has pulled off. There is still some talk about the way the local club has been stung in the Dent trade when they turned over $2,000 to Washington for the twirler.

GUNBOAT SMITH WANTS GO WITH GEORGE CARPENTER

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 5.—Gunboat Smith, claimant of the world's title for heavyweight boxers, has challenged George Carpentier, the young French champion of Europe, to a 20-round contest for $5,000 a side in England, France or Belgium. If Carpentier agrees the match probably will be arranged to take place during this summer.

SULLIVAN WINS; AHEARN KNOCKS OUT BARTFIELD

BUFFALO, July 4.—Jack Twin Sullivan outpointed Barney Williams in a fast ten-round bout here last night.

Young Ahearn knocked out Soldier Bartfield in eight rounds.

Tommy Bresnahan drew with Willie Houck.

TURF RACING A LUXURY.

PARIS, July 5.—The average cost of keeping a race horse in France is placed at $1,000 a year. The total training expenses in France, not taking into account the capital invested in the various stables, is placed at $5,600,000. The total of the prizes offered is $3,600,000. Hence the owners support an annual deficit of $2,000,000.

EMPIRE LEAGUE NOTES

Waycross has released Second Baseman Brouthers, who has signed with Americus. He plays the outfield as well as the infield, and while with Waycross led the team at the bat and in base stealing. Internal dissension is given as the reason for his release. He is a clever player and will make good wherever he plays.

While not so well pleased with the start of the season, fans in Waycross are banking on Wild Bill Clark to give Waycross a pennant winning team.

In Chancy the Americus team has an outfielder that is bound to go up. He is a steady hitter, getting two and three hits a day almost as easy as some people eat watermelon. He is fast on his feet, too, and gets many hard chances in right.

By swapping a three-game series to enable Valdosta to play at home next week for a celebration Brunswick will play six straight games in Brunswick this month with Valdosta.

In Griffin, Americus has a first baseman who makes friends wherever he goes. He is always happy—in fact, has a winning smile besides a batting eye.

Few teams in any league boast of as many reliable left-handers as the Valdosta team. Otto Jordan seems to know good men when he sees them from the kind of material his team is made up of, even if the best of them have off days once in a while.

Some idea of the class of baseball that the Empire is capable of might be found in a daily comparison with the scores of the big leagues. There is hardly a bad game played in the Empire but what a worse one is found in a higher league.

Claiming that the Americus team had thirteen men in uniform on the Waycross diamond Wednesday, Waycross has filed a protest for the first game of the double bill. President Groover attended the game and had his attention called to the alleged violation of the 12-player rule.

No one in the Empire circuit any longer doubts that the league will be in existence next year. Plans have already been made in Cordele and one or two other cities for next year's schedule.

Practically every team in the league wants to win the race in the second half, and with this in view are making a number of changes. The race from now on is going to be a keen one and much faster baseball will be seen than ever before in the new league.

"Goat" Holliday, of Atlanta, the Empire's benedict, continues to pull off sensational plays at first. He has made a home in Waycross and can stay here as long as he pleases. "Goat's" wife is at every game to see him play and, needless to say, the youngster does even better than heretofore, which is saying a great deal.

Attendance reports continue to show that fans in the cities of this league will support good baseball. None of the cities expected to make money the first season and yet it is stated on good authority that more than one city is well ahead of the game financially and hopes to finish the season with a neat pile in the treasury. All of which sounds good for next year's season.

FRED TONEY IS LET OUT; BACK TO LOUISVILLE CLUB

CHICAGO, ILL., July 4.—Fred Toney, heavyweight pitcher of the Cub team, was given notice of his release to the Louisville team of the American Association. The big fellow never was much of a big league success, though pitching a fair sort of game now and then.

This release brings the Cubs down to the limit of twenty-five players.

Carter Plays Ramspeck in Finals

AUGUSTA, July 4.—The ladies' tennis championship was won here Thursday by Mrs. Johnson after three terrific sets, by a score of 7-9, 6-2, 6-3. Miss Adger's forehand drive is one that would do credit to anyone, either man or woman, and it was on the strength of this drive that she won the first set. Mrs Johnson won the rest on her ability to cover her court and her placing.

The men's singles were carried through the semi-finals, the survivors being E. V. Carter, Jr., of Atlanta, ex-South Atlantic champion, and Carl Ramspeck, also of Atlanta and also an ex-South Atlantic States champion.

The final between these two will be played off this afternoon about 6 o'clock, and should prove one of the prettiest matches ever seen in Augusta. These two have met once before in Augusta, the event being the challenge round two years ago, when Ramspeck was champion and Carter challenger. Carter won on this occasion in straight sets on a rather wet court.

The results in the men's doubles were as follows:

First Round—Erwin brothers defeated Phinizy and Ridgeley, 6-2, 6-4.

Second Round—A. Capers and M. Kennedy defeated Ferris and Brand, 6-2, 5-7, 6-2. Hall and Parks won by default from Brinson and Branch. Waring brothers defeated Carter and Griffith, 6-3, 6-4. R. Capers and Mikell won by default from White and Bredenberg. Marrett and Gary defeated Hester and Wall, 6-4, 5-7, 6-2.

Third Round—Waring brothers defeated Hall and Parks, 6-1, 6-3, and by winning get a place in the semi-final in the top half.

The following are the results of the matches played in the consolation singles:

Second Round—Crockerson defeated Roseboro by default. Matthews defeated Harper, 6-2, 6-3. Capers defeated Wright, 6-4, 6-4. Stulb defeated Berkmire, 6-2, 6-4. Roseman defeated Sheridan, 6-1, 6-1.

The results of the mixed doubles matches are as follows:

First Round—Mrs. Milam and Reynolds defeated Miss Emily Thomas and J. K. Orr, Jr., 3-6, 6-4, 7-5. Mrs. Johnson and G. W. Waring defeated Miss Thorn and Ramspeck, 6-0, 6-1.

LOOKS BRIGHT ONCE MORE FOR CRACKER CLUB

Their Fourth Straight Victory Is One Fine Ball Game—Pennant Hopes Revive.

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE Crackers came home from their road trip looking like pennant winners. They went crazy with the stick, ran bases at will and played errorless ball.

No team has looked better here this year.

Of course any hyper-enthusiasm can be discounted two ways, to wit:

First Way—The Crackers have looked like pennant winners a score of times this season—and the next day it rained. You get the idea?

Second Way—The local team was playing against one of Dixie's saddest little teams, the puny Pelicans.

BUT after you've discounted all the notes of gloom and after you've made due allowances for everything, the Crackers still keep right on looking like a million dollars.

They not only won Thursday's game against the Pelicans, 9 to 0, but just previous to that they had won two from the league-leading Gulls and one from the powerful Billiken club. Also they just managed to lose the semi-final Billiken game by one run and a miracle.

Price pitched a positively bully game yesterday. The Crackers hammered Walker clean sideways, and the whole affair was fine.

There wasn't a sad note struck until after the game, when the current gave out and left most of the baseball cars stranded, half-way between Ponce De Leon and Atlanta. It must have clouded up out at Bull Sluice or sprinkled in Marietta.

THURSDAY'S game was illuminated by some of the most brilliant fielding that good old Ponce De Leon ever saw. The star performance by an infielder was made by McDowell. In the third, with Price on first (and he got there with hits three out of his four times up), Welchonce grounded briskly about ten feet to the right of second base. McDowell went for it, reached out, caught the ball, fell down and threw to second, all with one motion. Price was forced and McDowell sprawled all over the ground, with the ringing cheers of the Atlanta spectators in his ears.

Tommy Long absolutely discounted that. In the ninth Spencer hit a low fly to right field. It sailed, almost on a line, right smack to the right field sign boards—which are deep as the bottomless pit. How Tommy Long got back there nobody knew, but he did, made a terrific leap and plucked the pill right off the sign board. He came down all spraddled and it was not until he climbed back on his feet that the spectators realized he had held the ball.

WHEN the game was over Charley Frank strolled out to his limousine (oh, yes, he rides in 'em now) grinning. It was too awful to worry about. And surely the Pelicans would be any man's idea of nothing on earth to worry about. It's a great team, but it isn't synchronized. Nothing comes off right. They hit—but nobody is on. They cover bases—but somebody has just covered it for them. They run bases—but arrive too late. They field brilliantly at odd times—but bobble in the pinches.

However, Charley Frank may wake them up yet. He has several players on the team—and up to the time he hooked up with Cleveland he was mighty resourceful about getting players when he needed them.

CHANGES IN COLUMBUS TEAM; KREBS IS RELEASED

COLUMBUS, GA., July 4.—Changes in the line-up of the Columbus baseball team have come thick and fast in the past few days and as a result the Foxes are now claimed to be stronger than they have been at any time in recent years.

Krebs, principal backstop for Columbus for several years past, has been released outright and has joined the Jackson team. Dick Moore, who has been playing second, has been benched, and Keating is holding down the keystone bag. Connie Lewis, an old-time favorite, has joined the team again, while Morrow has been traded to Albany for Brooks.

CAPONI, EASY WINNER, FOULS FREDDIE HICKS

WINNIPEG, MANITOBA, July 4.—After going six full rounds, Freddie Hicks, of Detroit, received an unintentional foul blow from Tony Capino, of Chicago, which put a stop to their scheduled twelve-round bout here. Capini outfought and outpointed Hicks at almost every stage of the game, Hicks only getting a shade in the second round.

Caponi almost floored his opponent in the first round, Hicks being forced to one knee.

CARL MORRIS BATTLES JACK GEYER TO DRAW

DENVER, COLO., July 4.—Carl Morris, of Oklahoma, and Jack Geyer, of Denver, heavyweights, fought ten rounds to a draw last night.

DROME RACES TO-NIGHT WILL BE HANDICAPS

TO make things interesting in to-night's races it has been agreed to handicap Jock McNeil and "Tex" Richards a quarter of a lap in all preliminary heats and a half-lap in all final heats. This is about the margin by which these two speedsters have been winning and it ought to make the races very close.

Preparations are being made to handle an extra large crowd to-night because of the fact that it is a holiday and that the sport lovers of the city will naturally want to top off a big day by seeing the one sporting event of the night—the motordrome races.

The amateur races will start at 8:10. Jock McNeil will ride his mile against the track record at 8:27. The regular program will begin at 8:30.

Cars will leave Five Points at brief intervals.

Here is the program:

ENDURANCE TO DECIDE TITLE GO ANDERSON-CROSS BOUT A SLUGFEST

By Paul Armstrong.
(Famous Playwright and Fight Expert.)

LOS ANGELES, July 4.—Bud Anderson, who is to fight Leach Cross this afternoon, has been put out but once. Once and only once has he known what it means to be dropped for true. But he got it good once and that was from a horse.

Forty-some times has Anderson been matched against men, most of them demanding catch weights and taking a shade anywhere from 10 to 50 pounds, but nobody has ever done as well as the horse.

For two years, which about covers his career as a professional boxer, Bud has won about half his bouts with a knock-out, and the rest, barring a draw or two, were his on decisions. Knock-out Brown, with a wild, desperate swing, dropped and dazed him just enough to win for himself a draw, but what a lacing Brown did get next time to repay for that one swing.

George Memsic was the original discoverer of Anderson. Memsic had fought them all and, beginning to show the ravages of time and hard usage, he went hunting local favorites.

Memsic Unearthed Anderson.

The local favorite of a small but boisterous burg was Tommy Ryan's game. He wrote that stuff. The boisterous burg, once it has a favorite, will turn out to a man and bet some coin that "their boy" can at least stay with those old-timers. Ryan got rich hunting up those spots. Not so with Memsic. He started badly. He picked Anderson. On his return he called to witness and declared that this Bud Anderson had hit him harder than ever he had been hit before in his whole life. He did not know where the punch came from; he did not care.

All he wished to do was to warn people against Anderson. Of course that made Bud's road a little rougher.

And now for one minute let us toy with eugenics again. Anderson represents the last word in rearing for the rugged game. In the woods or breaking horses he has been working at rough labor all his life. Perched on a stage coach in his youth with four half-wild horses and a mountain road before him his eyes and nerves were tested to the limit. Later, when he took up the fighting game he got them at all weights and with murder in their eye. None of the mob he waded through to recognition had a bank account and frequently the little purse they fought for meant all there was in sight.

Bud Never Refused Match.

They did not mind being hurt. They did not know when they were hurt. One has only to see the left guard that Anderson has developed to know that at some time men have swung at him with all they had in the hope of finishing him then and there. But as Anderson once sat still and cold as chilled steel guiding wild horses down a mountain road, so he timed their frantic efforts at his undoing. One by one he dropped them and asked that better men come. Never has he refused a match, never has he picked. He is a real contender for the championship and every living lightweight knows it and knows it well.

Anderson has a perfect left hand, hits straight and knows how to hook. He has got a right which will drop any middleweight if he lands it fair.

But will he beat Cross? Ah, now we come to it. Buddie is short on experience. He has never fought as smart a man as Cross in his life. It's a certainty that Leach will show him many a trick.

BRITTON AND WHITE READY FOR BATTLE

NEW ORLEANS, July 4.—Jack Britton and Charley White are in great condition for their 20-round battle here to-day. Even money prevails with the betting contingent and thousands of dollars will change hands on the award of the referee.

White's two great victories, both knock-outs, over Joe Thomas have made him a great card here. Two weeks ago he ruled a 10 to 8 favorite. But those who have witnessed the clever Britton in action of late have spread wondrous reports about him. As a result, it is even money and take your pick this morning.

The White men figure that he may be outpointed in the early rounds, but that his stamina and great punch will surely wear Britton down in the last seven or eight rounds. Many of the White followers believe that Charley will win by a knock-out.

Britton is verily figuring on outpointing his opponent. He has been training for speed alone, and in his final work-out of four rounds yesterday he was as fast as lightning.

THOMAS VS. WHITNEY; FERNS MEETS DENNY

NEW ORLEANS, July 4.—There are two corking 10-round bouts to be staged at Joe Golden's Club to-day. In one of them Frank Whitney, of Cedar Rapids, meets Joe Thomas, of New Orleans. In the other, Young Denny, of New Orleans, mixes with Wildcat Ferns, of Chicago.

Whitney and Thomas are expected to put up a swell fight. These boys fought in Atlanta last winter. The decision was a draw. Many thought Thomas had the shade, while others figured that Whitney had proved to be the better man. To-day they will settle once and for all which is the superior boxer. The betting on the outcome is at evens.

Denny has been making a wonderful showing in New Orleans. But the fact that Ferns is the harder hitter and the veteran 10 to 9 are the odds offered, with Wildcat on the short end.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 4.—In the case of the Ritchie-Rivers contest proving a long-drawn-out affair, which of the lightweights is the more likely to retain his fighting strength?

This is one of the questions undergoing discussion on the eve of the battle, and it is a very important one. Moreover, it is a hard one to answer.

When two pugilists are to meet at a certain weight, the average student tries to discover which of the pair will find it easier reaching the notch.

Every old trainer knows that a fighter is apt to lose several pounds during a trying bout, and a wise betting man must keep this in view. It is to his interest to know which of the pugilists is likely to be the more seriously affected by the sloughing off of poundage in the ring.

Weight Surely Favors Rivers.

Right off the reel one would say that Rivers is the one less likely to become weak if the contest is waged at a fast pace and goes over the fifteen-round mark. He is a pudgy fellow, and, while he has had to work to make 134 pounds, it is certain that he can box at 125 pounds if occasion demands it. This means that if Rivers loses a few pounds while battling with Ritchie, no inroads will have been made on his strength.

It may be, as it was with Ad Wolgast in his first match with Tommy Murphy, Rivers, while growing lighter, may simply be fighting himself into better condition.

Now, in the ordinary course of things one could not imagine Willie Ritchie as losing weight to his advantage while a mill was in progress. The champion is a heavy lightweight. This is shown by the fact that he demanded that the notch for the coming mill be fixed at a pound above the lightweight scale.

Came Down From 154 Pounds.

Billy Nolan says that Ritchie weighed fully 154 pounds when he began training for his championship match with Ad Wolgast. This gives an idea of what a big fellow Ritchie is "walking about."

Of course, he did not weigh anything like that when he went into camp for the present match. He had learned his lesson, and by keeping himself actively engaged during his six months of theatrical work he held himself around the 140-pound mark.

But, irrespective of what he weighed when starting out on the present training spell, Ritchie will be pretty well dried out and as lean as any one of Pharaoh5s kine when he steps into the ring to-day. He will have nothing to come and go on, as is the case with Rivers.

Now, if this were an infallible line of reasoning, Ritchie's friends would have to admit that the longer the fight continued the bluer would become the outlook for Willie Ritchie. But it is not infallible.

All Depends on Endurance.

There is such a difference in ringmen that what would prove a serious disadvantage to one would mean little or no detriment to another.

And it all hinges on that innate quality—ENDURANCE.

BILLIKINS, 7; VOLS, 2.

BALL PARK, NASHVILLE, TENN., July 4.—Montgomery took the morning game from the Vols in easy fashion, 7 to 2, driving More from the rubber in the fifth. Williams checked the heavy scoring. The game came near ending in a riot when the entire Montgomery team began to crab over a decision at third, a fight between Manager Dobbs and Umpire Stockdale being third. A fight between Manager narrowly averted.

Case humbled his former pals, holding the Vols to five widely scattered hits. The Vols played a listless game.

ZIMMERMAN GETS PRIZE; GOOD FOR TWO WEEKS

CHICAGO, July 4.—Heine Zimmerman, the pugnacious third sacker of the Cubs, is $100 richer to-day because he has not sassed, assaulted or assassinated even one umpire in two whole weeks.

A fortnight ago a Cub fan promised Zimmerman $100 if he would remain on his good behavior for two weeks and not be chased from the game for "run ins" with arbitrators. Heine has been a very nice young man for the past two weeks, but yesterday—the last day of the time limit—he almost forgot about the $100 when he was called out at home on a close play.

"DOYLE HITTING, GIANTS UNBEATABLE"—STALLINGS

NEW YORK, July 4.—"Larry Doyle has recovered his old form and that is why the Giants are now leading the National League," said George Stallings, manager of the Boston Braves, to-day. "Until recently Doyle was unable to hit with his usual vigor and the Giants were losing games. But they braced the moment Larry's bat began to meet the ball successfully. He is the king pin of the New York team, and now that he is himself McGraw's men can not be headed off.

BOXING
News of the Ring Game

Quite a number of big fights will be held throughout the country on the Glorious Fourth. The most important are the Ritchie-Rivers; Britton-White and Anderson-Cross affairs. All are scheduled to go 20 rounds.

Bud Anderson, who is one of the sensations of the season and who has put a stop to a number of good boxers, might also spring a surprise on Cross. The latter, though, has the advantage of being an exceedingly heavy hitter as well as a great ring general.

It would not be much of a surprise if the fans would wake up on the fifth and discover a new lightweight champion in the person of Joe Rivers.

Light Brahmas Are The Largest Fowls In Poultry Breeding

Judge F. J. Marshall: Which are the largest breeds of chickens in their respective order as to size, feathered on non-feathered legs, and where can some be procured of pure breed; the largest variety of game chickens, color and where obtainable of pure breed?

Blue Ridge, Ga. H. W. B.

Reply—The largest chicken bred and recognized in the Standard of Perfection (the guide to all thoroughbred poultry breeding) is the Light Brahmas; weights are, cocks, 12 pounds; cockerels, 10 pounds; hens, 9 1-2 pounds; and pullets, 8 pounds. They have pea combs and feathered shanks. Their body color is white with a black stripe down the center on each feather on the neck, and black tails. Inside of wings black not showing on the surface when the wing is folded. The next range in size comes these varieties, all of the same weight: Dark Brahmas, Black, White, Buff and Partridge Cochins, the weights being just one pound lighter than the Light Brahmas all through. All feathered-leg varieties, the Dark Brahmas are the same in characteristics as the Lights. The color is a black penciling on a gray ground color, the penciling being very narrow and conforming to the edge of the feathers in shape. The male has a black tail. The female's tail is black, except the two top feathers, which are penciled. Cochins are next in size; weight, 11 pounds; cockerels, 9 pounds; hens, 8 1-2 pounds, and pullets, 7 pounds. Cochins are noted for their extreme full feathering and very short legs, which make them appear to be almost one big, fluffy ball of soft feathers from head to toes. The general outline might be described as round, being short from head to tail, with high rounded back in female and full back in male; tails very short; in fact, the tail of the female scarcely shows at all. They are bred in four varieties, Buff, Black, White and Partridge. In form of penciling the Partridge is the same as the Dark Brahma, but the color of the penciling is dark brown on a surface of mahogany red. The Brahmas and Cochins are all feathered-legged varieties, the Cochins being much more profuse than the Brahmas. The Cochin has a small single comb. The next in size are the Orpingtons, Buff, Black and White, all smooth-shanked varieties. Weights are, cocks, 10 pounds; cockerels, 8 1-2 pounds; hens, 8 pounds; pullets, 7 pounds. Comb, single, of medium size and five points. In shape the Orpingtons are rather shorter than the Plymouth Rocks, but not so blocky as the Wyandotte; legs rather large and stocky. The skin and flesh are white, as is the case with all fowls of English origin and make-up. The Buffs should be clear buff throughout, the Blacks solid black, and the Whites solid white. The buffs have a tendency to throw some black in tails, so when a little of it shows up there it should not be considered an impurity of blood. Breeders of these varieties should advertise in The Georgian.

July the Month to Get Most for Your Money Buying Good Stock

For those who are striving to be economical in their outlay for good stock July is the month of the year in which to get the most for their money purchasing good breeding stock. Any one who is regularly in the business has before this time hatched all the young stock he can handle and as a rule has not the room to carry over all his breeding stock, and for the sake of making them move off lively will offer them at a greatly reduced price. A few dollars invested at this time with some good breeder for a pen of first-class chickens would be money well placed. True, you would have to carry them through the molt, but that does not begin to offset the big reduction secured. A pen of chickens bought now and fed lightly for a month and the feed increased after that time should soon come into laying, and with judicious management a few fall chickens could be raised and still have the parent stock ready for early spring business. This is not a theory of ours, it is a custom of many of the best poultry people all over the country, and beneficial to both buyer and seller.

In your endeavors to make a purchase of this character be sure you strike some one who really has a surplus he does not wish to carry over, and for that reason will let them go for a sacrifice. A few hundreds of dollars invested in this way by the farmers of the South at this time to get good stock with which to supplant their scrubs would mean thousands of dollars to them during the next twelve months.

We only wish each and every one could see it as we have seen it tried, time and again in our experience in traveling over the country, and how we have been told by those who had made the experiment, as they called it, of the increased profits they had derived by handling first-class, thoroughbred poultry. So well satisfied are they that they could not be hired to go back to the old plan of the "scrub is good enough for me."

There is no experiment about it, it is a business proposition.

ON PIEDMONT AVENUE, near school, on the car line, we have one of the best bungalows to be found in the city. Built by the present owner for a home out of the best material and workmanship. Never expected to sell it, but keep it for a home. The lot cost him $3,000 vacant. If vacant to-day could not be bought for $4,000.

This bungalow has seven rooms—fine shaded east front lot—all conveniences, one year old.

The owner's work has called him to Florida, and he must sell by August 1.

We have had this place listed at $7,000, and cheap at that—but the owner says he must sell—therefore, he is putting the price down to $6,250. This should sell at once.

Medium-Sized Acreage Tracts

ALL of us know the profit that is usually made from acreage.

It is almost a conceded fact that if a person owns good acreage, he has a sure profit in it sooner or later. When we think of acreage propositions, we think of lots of land, and naturally lots of money, because the usual acreage transaction involves a great deal of money. The demand for good, close-in acreage for subdivision purposes is increasing every day. A trip to the outskirts of the city in any direction you choose to take will convince you of this fact. We are going to offer a tract of about 100 acres, between Decatur and East Lake, which we have cut up into five, ten and fifteen acre tracts. The price and terms on these tracts make it possible for almost anybody to handle them.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Park Community To Cost $150,000

Twenty West Peachtree Cottages. To Sell James Home—University Club Plans—Aragon Hotel Offer.

A park community plan which will involve the expenditure of probably $150,000 and revolutionize a section of West Peachtree has been evolved by Lavender Ray, owner of considerable property on West Fourteenth and West Peachtree. Mr. Ray will utilize the depressed northeast corner of West Peachtree and West Fourteenth Streets for a handsome three-story apartment house and erect 20 artistic cottages for young married couples in a park space which he owns between West Fourteenth and West Fifteenth Streets, with frontage on West Peachtree.

"I hope to build the apartment house for $25,000, although it may cost more," declared Mr. Ray in speaking of his plans, "and to spend an average of $4,000 to $5,000 on the cottages. A handsome colonnade will extend over the West Peachtree entrance and the colonnade effect will be carried out through the string of ten cottages on either side, with portecochere effects between the dwellings. The trees will make it possible to provide a little park and playground for children.

"I hope to provide a restaurant where all couples can get their meals, and to supply all the cottages with heat from a central heating plant, possibly from the apartment house. The dwellings will be uniform in size and architecture."

Mr. Ray has drawn rough plans for the colonnade and will soon begin sketches for the dwellings. His frontage on West Peachtree is 175 feet and the depth between the other streets 572 feet. He expects to cut a street like Grant Place through the center of the property, to be 50 feet wide at the front and 40 feet wide at the other extremity. Attractive alleyways will be provided for automobiles and other conveyances behind the cottages, and entrance can also be effected through the rear.

The West Peachtree frontage for the apartment is 100 feet, and the frontage on Fourteenth Street is 118 feet.

To Sell Peachtree Home.

John H. James, the well-known banker and real estate operator, has placed on private sale his former home place at 314 Peachtree, on the west side of the street between Porter Place and Baker Street, and just south of the old J. Scott Todd lot. This property was bought by Mr. James fifteen years ago for $7,000, or at the rate of a little less than $130 a foot. The two-story frame home cost him about the same amount. To-day property in this block is held at $1,500 to $1,600 a foot, which would make the 54 by 175-foot lot worth $81,000 to $86,400. The dwelling is now rented as a boarding house.

Mr. James is also the owner of the property at 135 Whitehall Street, on which is located the Martin & Knott Furniture Company. This is on the west side of the street just north of Trinity Avenue. Mr. James bought it a number of years ago for about $15,000, and to-day holds it at $50,000. He is not yet ready to sell this parcel, however.

University Club Plans.

Hal F. Hentz, of the firm of Hentz & Reid, architects, has been put to work on plans a new University Club home, and is expected to complete a tentative sketch shortly. The University Club has under consideration a building in the neighborhood of the Aragon Hotel, which will be extensively remodeled if the plans of the executive committee are carried out. It is planned to install shower baths, a swimming pool, a gymnasium for light exercises, lockers, etc., and to take the building on a lease.

Members of the club are desirous of obtaining a location close to Five Points, and for this reason nothing has been considered seriously north of Baker Street. Among places mentioned have been the J. R. Hopkins home at the southeast corner of Baker and Peachtree, the former home of Charles E. Sciple at the northwest corner of Kimball and Cypress Streets, and the Joseph Rhodes Building back of the Winecoff Hotel, on West Ellis Street.

The University Club must vacate the old Abbott home in October, and on account of the short space of time the executive committee have gone ahead with preparations to move.

Offer on Aragon Hotel.

It has been learned on good authority that an offer was refused the other day on the Aragon Hotel property, the owners declining to name any price. This is the property that a would-be purchaser offered several years ago to cover with dollars, and was told by the late George W. Collier that he could get a warranty deed if he would put the coins on edge. The new prospects were not even given this opportunity.

The Aragon is under lease to the Harrels for hotel purposes.

Job Still Unfinished.

Although the impression has gone abroad that Peachtree Road paving has been completed from Buckhead to the DeKalb County line, property owners north of William S. Witham's deny it in positive terms. They declare that the bulk of the convicts have been transferred to Peachtree work south of Buckhead and that only a handful are left on the other job. The said property owners have been placated, however, through circumstances. Whereas the outlying work has not been completed, the closer-in job is getting good attention.

The convicts, by the way, are taking a rest until the Fourth of July has passed.

Railroad Rumblings Heard.

Where is the railroad "lightning" going to strike on the West Side? A hundred property owners would like to know, since their land will jump far above what they paid for it. "I have a large tract on the West Side," declared a young business man Thursday, "and I would give a good deal to know if any railroads are coming through my property."

One of the best posted real estate men in the city declared that something big was going on and he couldn't find it out. "They haven't let me on to it," he said, "but I expect to get in before they are through. I have had some quiet offers on my property, but I have not set any price. My tip is to watch Walton Street. I believe a spur track will run up this thoroughfare before long and I shouldn't be surprised if the Seaboard will use it. The Seaboard is dependent on the N., C. and St. L., and through it, the L. and N., for both its freight and passenger terminals in Atlanta, and I believe is figuring on an arrangement of its own. I expect them to build both passenger and freight depots on the West Side."

Plans for running a connection between the Southern and the A., B. and A. near Mangum Street, and for putting a spur track adjacent to property of Judge E. C. Kontz and Philip Weltner for manufacturing purposes have already been told. That there is something else in the nature of a big surprise, however, is the belief of many, and the railroads are being watched closely.

Twelfth Story on Skyscraper.

Workmen are now ready to put the steel on the twelfth story of the Healey Building. Having placed the girders on the tenth floor, they are going two higher. The Healy Building now towers above the Grant Building and will soon surpass the Empire.

To Sell Lots at Auction.

Five lots and a six-room house at the corner of Park Avenue and Bryant Street, Grant Park section, will be sold July 9 by William A. Vernoy.

Ansley Park Buy.

Harry L. Waters has bought from A. C. Woolley a California bungalow on a 50 by 240-foot lot at 85 East Park Lane, Ansley Park, for $7,500. The deal was handled through W. L. & John O. DuPree.

Demand for Apartment Houses.

Atlanta continues to be a good market for apartment houses. Although a number are constantly building, there seems to be little trouble disposing of them at good prices. Cordial interest accordingly centered around the transfer of the Byron on West Peachtree, near Linden, from Byron Souders to I. P. Bradley, of Newnan, at $150,000. This was in the nature of a swap, Mr. Bradley putting in a Coweta County farm, besides assuming a loan of $40,000 placed June 30 through the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company, and giving notes for most of the difference.

The property is 84 by 200 feet and adjoins a 100-foot parcel which Mr. Souders owns at the southwest corner of Linden and West Peachtree and which was the old Bewick place.

The Byron contains eighteen apartments and rents for $15,000 a year. It is distinctive in the possession of grotesque masks with which the front pillars are studded. Mr. Souders got these from a cast made by a local artist, and he introduced many other innovations picked up here and there.

Remodeling Eiseman Store.

The Eiseman Brothers' Company has begun making alterations on its store at 11, 13, 15 and 17 Whitehall, the same to cost about $4,000. The front stairway is being closed up and will be placed toward the rear, and more attractive show windows are being built. The Krueger Manufacturing Company has the contract. Business is going on as usual.

Prominent Atlantans Buy.

A. V. Gude, Jr., J. R. Moore, A. A. and Joseph Doonan, Lee M. Jordan, John J. Lynch, Joel Hunter and Chas. S. Kingsbery have bought a batch of ten large building lots in Cobb County just over the Chattahoochee River and on the river car line. The seller was the L. P. Grant estate, and the aggregate consideration $6,000. Mr. Lynch and Mr. Hunter bought two each and the others one each.

The lots are 100 by 400 feet, in the neighborhood of the residences of Howard Matthews, Sid Mitchell and others. A road through them is due to be paved soon.

Exchange Completed.

Details of the recent exchange of properties between Dr. M. A. Massoud and Jonathan B. Frost have been announced. Mr. Frost takes the S. Y. Tupper place at the northeast corner of West Peachtree and North Avenue for $44,000 and gives as part payment 209 Washington Street, formerly the Massoud home, at $25,000, and a vacant lot on the northeast side of Marietta Street, near Pine Street, at $6,000, and assumes the difference.

The Tupper corner is 68 feet on West Peachtree Street and 84 feet on North Avenue. It has been occupied lately by a fraternity house with a chapter at Tech. The lot netted Dr. Massoud $14,000 in three months.

Why Some Influential Bankers Fight the New Currency Bill Secretly, but Bitterly

Some eminent bankers in private conversation object to the Government control of the new currency system in the same angry and intolerant spirit that the railroad men denounced the creation of the Interstate Commerce Commission to supervise their operations in 1887. And yet so greatly has the idea of the supervision of the railroads by a Government board sitting at Washington grown in the popular mind, and SO GREATLY HAVE THE RAILROADS PROSPERED UNDER THIS LAW since 1887, that the only changes since asked by the people have been to strengthen the law and to enlarge the powers of the commission. And the chief desire of the railroads now is TO GET UNDER THE PROTECTION OF THE NATIONAL BOARD to escape from the tyrannies and operations of various State boards.

The bankers of the United States will have to accept the idea of Government control of the new currency system because the power to issue $500,000,000 of emergency notes to prevent panics and to maintain a more stable rate of interest throughout the country is too great a power to vest in the uncontrolled discretion of private citizens.

PRIVATE credit is left where it belongs under the new system, exclusively the concern of the PRIVATE banker. The use of PUBLIC credit is reserved to the nation. The Government can not interfere with any national bank in its ordinary operations any more under the new system than under the old. It can not force any bank either to grant or to refuse credit to any individual; it can not force any bank to discount a single note. It leaves every bank's relations with its own customers unchanged and unaffected.

The Government takes added cognizance only of the twelve Reserve Banks, but these are to be managed by local directors, two-thirds of whom will always be chosen by their own stockholders—the banks—so that in all ordinary operations the banks will be as closely managed by the bankers, without interference by the Government, as the railroads are now managed by railroad men without unwarranted interference by the Government.

The greatest opposition to the proposed law will come CHIEFLY FROM THOSE BANKS AND BANKERS THAT HAVE BEEN MOST ACTIVE IN THE PAST IN CONTROLLING THE RESERVES OF THE BANKS, THE PROMOTION AND FLOTATION OF NEW TRUSTS OR CORPORATIONS, AND THE CREDIT OF LARGE BORROWERS.

How completely this control has been concentrated in a few private hands of late years we shall now show by three highest expert authorities—first, by President George M. Reynolds, of the Continental and Commercial National Bank of Chicago. This bank, in its holding of the deposits of other banks, is the largest in the United States. In an address before the National Business Congress in Chicago, on December 12, 1911, Mr. Reynolds said:

"THE MONEY POWER OF THE COUNTRY NOW LIES IN THE HANDS OF A DOZEN MEN. I PLEAD GUILTY TO BEING IN THE LAST ANALYSIS ONE OF THESE MEN. . . FOUR OR FIVE BANKERS IN NEW YORK, TWO OR THREE IN CHICAGO, TWO OR THREE IN ST. LOUIS, CAN CONTROL THE QUESTION OF WHETHER LARGE LOANS SHALL BE MADE TO BANKING CORRESPONDENTS THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY."

The late J. P. Morgan and his most intimate banker associate, George F. Baker, of the First National, testifying before the Pujo Committee last winter, admitted almost as great concentration of money-power as that described by Mr. Reynolds. But both vehemently denied the existence of a "Money Trust," because, they said in substance, these enormous reserves of other banks were concentrated in such vast heaps under the control of Mr. Morgan, Mr. Baker and their associates only because the owners of the money trusted these bankers, in their integrity and prudence, and FOUND BY EXPERIENCE THAT THE MONEY WAS USED PROFITABLY TO ITS OWNERS. The other banks could withdraw the funds at will. There was no agreement, and no compulsion, and therefore no "Money Trust." Everything was entirely voluntary, legal, regular.

Mr. Baker admitted that the "concentration of capital had gone pretty far—probably far enough," and that "in the hands of bad men it would be extremely dangerous." But he added in effect that only great and good men could retain the confidence of bankers in such degree as to be intrusted with such power by other bankers voluntarily.

Without such concentrations of both credit and capital the vast underwritings and the extraordinary overcapitalization of many trusts which the country has witnessed would be impossible.

Undoubtedly these eminent bankers who have been and still are in control of credit have handled all the money intrusted to them PRUDENTLY AND PROFITABLY FOR THE OWNERS OF THE MONEY. But how have their operations affected the public interest?

In the coffee valorization scheme, in the manipulation of the Coal roads, in the making of the Steel Corporation, the small deposits of millions of Americans, through the banks, were used by these Masters of Credit to create overcapitalized companies, to distribute watered stock to the public, and to raise prices of necessaries of life to consumers.

The people's money has thus been used against themselves by the very trustees to whom the public and private credit was temporarily intrusted.

The operation is very profitable—to the trustees. We shall take, also from official sources, the testimony of bankers before the Stanley Investigating Committee, only a single instance to show how profitable the underwriting by syndicates of new trusts sometimes is. The instance is the launching of the largest of all the trusts in which Mr. Morgan was the chief, and Mr. Baker and, we believe, Mr. Reynolds were among his principal associates.

The United States Steel Underwriting Syndicate was for two hundred millions and it floated more than FOURTEEN HUNDRED MILLIONS OF SECURITIES. Only one call for $25,000,000, or 12½ per cent, was made on the underwriting syndicate. For that it received 649,988 shares of preferred and a similar amount of common stock. This stock was sold to the public through the Stock Exchange at an average price of about 44 for the common and 94 for the preferred, netting the syndicate $90,500,000. Expenses of the syndicate totaled $3,000,000, thereby involving $28,000,000 actual cash. Deducting the latter amount from $90,500,000, there remains $62,500,000 representing the profits of the syndicate.

Of that amount J. P. Morgan & Co., as managers, received $12,500,000, and the underwriters the remaining $50,000,000. There were paid four cash dividends of $10,000,000 each, which were paid to the syndicate members, and a final dividend of $6,000,000, a total of $46,000,000. The remaining $4,000,000 was subscribed to a second syndicate organized for the purpose of converting preferred stock into bonds, and the underwriters also made a profit on this transaction.

Simultaneously with the sale of this stock to the public, the prices of iron and steel in all their manifold forms were advanced all along the line, so that the Steel Corporation would show large earnings and its stock be made salable to the public at enhanced prices.

It is not from any doubt of the splendid ability or the financial integrity of the men who did this thing, and countless other things of the same kind, that the people of the United States refuse to put all their banks and credit, and the issue of "emergency currency," under the uncontrolled discretion of private bankers, however powerful, experienced or sagacious they may be.

THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES DO NOT WANT GOVERNMENT BY BANKERS OR BY THE MONEY POWER. THEY WANT GOVERNMENT BY THE GOVERNMENT IN THE INTERESTS OF THE WHOLE PEOPLE.

We Should Worry To-day!

This Astonishing Fourth of July at Gettysburg

This is indeed a glorious Fourth of July! The Republic of heroic reminiscence is massed to-day at Gettysburg.

It is not easy for the times about us to grasp the idea of Gettysburg.

It is difficult for this metropolis of the New South—this vast composite of North and South, East and West, of all races and of every creed—busy, practical, prosperous and peaceful—to comprehend the fact that fifty years ago the Americans north of the Potomac and the Americans south of the Potomac, with their bloody hands at each other's throats, were grappling at Gettysburg in the great decisive battle of a long and bloody war.

Ninety thousand Americans under Meade met seventy thousand Americans under Lee in the climax of the ferocious argument over State's Rights and Federal sovereignty, and when they parted at the foot of Cemetery Ridge, fifty thousand Americans, dead or wounded upon the three days' battlefield, made up the appalling holocaust offered upon the altar of a conflicting theory of government which was no more settled by the bloody sacrifice than when the first gun was fired at Sumter in 1861.

Two years later Ulysses Grant at Appomattox wrote with his sword in the final terms of surrender an affirmative recognition of both sides.

And to-day the citizens of Massachusetts resent as jealously an infringement of the Rights of the States as the people of Georgia appeal in emergency to the Power of the Federal Government!

Thousands of survivors of these one hundred and sixty thousand soldiers—survivors and their children—are gathered in joyous reunion at Gettysburg to-day. And the flag of their fathers—serene and splendid—floats over the survivors of Meade and the survivors of Lee—aged and gray or honored and gay, "in mutual well beseeming ranks marching all one way," toward the sunset of life which leaves the indestructible Republic united and glorious in the zenith of its power and its fame.

There will be a thousand vivid reminiscences and a thousand noble lessons taught above the hero sod of Gettysburg to-day. It is no longer the Confederacy's "Field of Grief," but a great nation's mighty Plain of Reunion!

The astonishing number of the survivors attending the national revival of to-day should teach our youth that a brave spirit and a forgiving temper are the great preservers of life, and the promoters of longevity. There were no braver spirits than those at Gettysburg. Nor any more forgiving. For the victors never boasted of their triumph and the vanquished carried no bitterness to defeat.

Also the field of Gettysburg is the historic reservoir from which we draw our fiery and convincing proof of the nation's martial qualities. There was never in human history a more gallant and heroic feat than Pickett's magnificent charge up Cemetery Ridge, and never a steadier and more magnificent answer than Hancock's superb defense.

So that in the martial qualities of offensive and defensive warfare there is writ at Gettysburg the deathless national record of imperishable valor which may be read and spoken to the comfort of our country's friends and to the stern warning of any who may think to be our country's foes.

Give ample battleships and ample guns to the sons of the sires who fought at Gettysburg, and our country will guarantee to keep the world at peace with us.

A Merger That Is in the Interest of Progress

The merging of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons and the Atlanta Medical College into a great and amplified Atlanta Medical College is a matter of far-reaching importance to Atlanta, and the boards of management of the two institutions are to be congratulated that they have effected a consolidation so satisfactory.

Not only will the colleges themselves benefit tremendously by joining hands, but the graduates thereof will enjoy an immediate standing in the medical profession that heretofore it has been impossible for either institution to give them.

The new college has been made eligible to membership in the American Medical Association, which gives all graduates the right at once to practice medicine anywhere in the world.

Plans for the necessarily enlarged quarters of the new institution are ambitious, but there is every reason to suspect that they will be carried to a successful conclusion. And to that end, The Georgian feels sure all Atlanta will cordially co-operate with the gentleman having those plans in charge.

Caesar and Franklin .:. By WILLIAM VINCENT BYARS

WHEN Julius Caesar wished to show the meaning of the greatest triumph in life, he first combed his hair carefully over a bald spot. He was so careful about this bald spot that it is said he always scratched his head with one finger after combing his hair down over it.

Perhaps this is a lie. But what he did next was to put a wreath of laurel leaves on his head. He then put on a costly purple-bordered cloak. Taking a branch of laurel in one hand and scepter in the other, he passed out the street door and mounted a car drawn by four horses. Then he drove through the streets, and listened to the crowd that shouted for him. While they were shouting, people in the crowd watched the long line of Caesar's soldiers behind the car and of his prisoners in front of it.

Caesar's Great Triumphs.

After Caesar was tired of standing up to listen to the shouting, he had money scattered to the crowd. Then he gave them bread tickets, or what amounted to the same thing. He also gave them free admission to the circus. At the circus he supplied prisoners to fight lions to amuse those who had shouted for him when he was proclaimed a triumphant conqueror and a dictator.

This was the greatest "triumph" in Rome about 46 years before the birth of Christ.

About 1745 years after the birth of Christ, Benjamin Franklin undertook the greatest triumph of history in the small city of Philadelphia. He pulled off his coat and walked out into the street. Then he took hold of the handles of a wheelbarrow and rolled it through the street. Nobody shouted. Some laughed. He came back with the wheelbarrow in about half an hour. Taking a bundle of paper from it, he went inside. Then he printed a newspaper.

This was one way he had of becoming triumphant, but it was not the only one. After printing the newspaper, he washed the ink off his hands and began to experiment with another one of his ideas.

He wanted to catch a jar full of lightning. In his newspaper he tried to persuade his readers to use their common sense. He tried to show them that common sense is always triumphant when it is really used. They thought he had lost his own common sense when he tried to catch lightning in a jar. But he did it. He finally got enough lightning out of a cloud down the string of a kite to fill a jar, so that he could get sparks out of the jar. When he had done this, it was the greatest triumph in history. He had shown that electricity and lightning are the same; that electricity is a "universal force" which can be used in commonsense ways.

This was a "triumph" in Philadelphia about A. D. 1752.

Julius Caesar was born 100 years before Christ. He was born in a great family. It was the "illustrious Julian gens." "Gens" means family. A "gentleman" then did not have to be "gentle." He did have to be born in an illustrious "gens." Caesar did not think it ungentlemanly to have the hands of his prisoners cut off when he was not pleased with them after he had conquered them. He despised people who had nothing but common sense. He was a great genius and one of the greatest conquerors of any age. He conquered his own country. Before he was stabbed to death in Rome, March 15, 44 B. C., he had destroyed the freedom of the greatest republic of the world. After his time, Romans who could not live unless they were free stabbed themselves.

No Illustrious Forefathers.

Franklin did not belong to an illustrious "gens." When he was born in Boston in 1706, he was fifteenth of the seventeen children of Josiah Franklin. Josiah was a poor candlemaker. Poor as he was, he gave his children "the key of all knowledge." He taught them to spell and showed them how to learn to read. In 1790, when Benjamin Franklin died, he had done more than any other man to make his country free and great. His last act was to sign a paper to make the world freer. But his greatest triumph was in discovering the use of common sense. Spell out or read as much as you can use from the best book you can get. Then do not stop to talk about it. Get your common sense to work and see what you can do with what you have learned. Then go on that way, learning and using your own common sense as long as you live. That is the Franklin way to win triumphs.

In the Dog Days

By WEX JONES.

IN the dog days, beloved, remember on account of your health to eschew
Greeting a husker person with the words, "Is it hot enough weather for you?"

And forget not to shun all advice on sure methods of keeping you cool,
For you'll get all mixed up and distressed and you'll feel like a boiling hot fool.

You will read that cold drinks are injurious; you'll read that hot drinks kill you dead;
You will read you should sleep under blankets; and also with none on your bed.

Some say that cold baths will inflame you till you feel like a stove that's red-hot.
Some say that cold tea is just poison, while asserting that coffee is not.

You'll be told that corned beef and potatoes are too heavy for hot weather lunch;
And again you'll be urged to make luncheon on some food that is there with the punch.

You'll be told to wear plenty of flannel, howe'er it may tickle your skin;
And you'll hear that you'll die in ten minutes unless all your clothing is thin.

It's unsafe and moreover it's foolish to toil through the heat of the day,
So one says; the other declares that it's simply fatal to play.

Then, beloved, avoid all these tipsters, who'll make you feel like a fool,
And take the advice of an expert that all you need do is keep cool.

RITCHIE PUTS RIVERS OUT IN 11TH

Champion, Forced Hard All the Way Makes Mexican Quit Fighting.

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 4.—Willie Ritchie successfully defended his lightweight crown against Joe Rivers here this afternoon, making the Mexican quit in the eleventh round.

It was a hard, even fight up to the eleventh, but the champion tore open in this round and floored the Mexican with a right to the jaw. Rivers was on one knee when the official time-keeper counted "eight, nine, out."

He did not appear to be in bad condition and could have probably continued the fight had he so desired.

ROUND ONE.

Both men began fighting at 2:27. Rivers bored in to a clinch, blocking a left hook. Rivers landed lightly with the right on the face, and they punched each other while holding. Rivers got in a good body dig with a free left. They broke and feinted. Ritchie got in a left hook on the body and tehy closed in again. Rivers missed with the right and took a right on the ear. Rivers got in two left pokes on the chin at close quarters, and Ritchie met Rivers with a solid straight left, and followed with left and right on the side of the head They closed, and Rivers worked a free right to the jaw twice. Rivers put a left to chin. Rivers shot in a straight right. Rivers crowded Ritchie into a corner and reached the face with both hands. Ritchie retaliating with straight left on the mouth.

ROUND TWO.

They closed in and Rivers put a right to ear. When they broke Ritchie planted a straight left on the face and sent home two rights on the ear. Ritchie scored with a good right uppercut and Rivers jarred Ritchie with right hard right on chin. Rivers sent in two straight lefts and there was blood on Ritchie's lips. Ritchie missed with several attempts, and Rivers drove a hard right into the body. Ritchie whipped a right across on the jaw, and Rivers scored with a hard left hook. Ritchie repeated with the left hook and missed with the right. He crownded Rivers to the ropes. Rivers swung a left to the body and fell to his knees when he missed. Ritchie sept in several lefts and rights and kept punching Rivers after the bell rang. Graney pushed the champion to his corner.

ROUND THREE.

Rivers covered and blacked a left hook. He kept covered and Ritchie was unable to break through his guard. Ritchie was there with a light right facer and Rivers hooked the champion on the jaw with the left. Ritchie swung straight left on the chin and drew away from Rivers' right. Ritchie sent home a straight right body blow and followed with left to the face. Ritchie put a hard right on the body. Rivers staggered Ritchie with a right on the jaw. They clung together and Rivers had the best of the slugging. Ritchie's head was wagging from the Southerner's right. They broke and Rivers fell to his knees when Ritchie ducked a couple of vicious rights. They mixed it freely and Rivers had the better of the scoring.

ROUND FOUR.

Rivers blocked straight lefts that Ritchie put in. Rivers planted both fists on the stomach and shot in a straight left on the mouth. Spider Kelly shouted to Rivers not to let his man rest. Each man missed with vicious swings and then Rivers scored with three left hooks in succession. There was a swelling under Rivers' right eye. They each kept at arms' length, but Rivers jumped close and got to the face with left and right swings. Ritchie seemed inclined to hold. Ritchie whipped a left into the stomach and drove Rivers back with a left swing on the chin. Rivers covered from right uppercuts and pinned Ritchie in a corner with left and right swings, both reaching the head.

ROUND FIVE.

Rivers shot in a straight left and they went into a clinch. Each used a left on the body while holding. Ritchie scored with a straight left on the body. Rivers bored in with his head covered and swung an overhand right on the neck. Rivers was there with a left hook. Rivers ducked a right cross and sent his right against the ear. Ritchie got there with a straight left and Rivers swung a fierce left to the chin. Ritchie held

CROSS STOPS ANDERSON IN 12TH

Hard-Hitting New Yorker Proves Too Rugged a Walloper for Los Angeles Boy.

By H. M. Walker.

LOS ANGELES, July 4.—Leach Cross knocked out Bud Anderson in the twelfth round of a vicious fight here this afternoon. It was a give-and-take battle all the way, with the New Yorker nearly always in the lead.

ROUND 1—Anderson shot in a straight left on the mouth. Clinch. Cross poked two lefts in on the body and whipped the right over on the jaw. Bud landed a left on the chest. Bud reddened Leach's right eye. Leach sent in two straight lefts on the face. They danced around the ring and Leach suddenly whipped over the right on the jaw. Anderson went to the floor. He jumped up quickly. Cross tried to take advantage of his opportunity, but Bud danced out of harm's way. Cross displayed much more cleverness and ducked under many of Bud's right swings.

ROUND 2—Cross reached the ribs with a light left and they mauled each other on the head and ribs. Leach put a short right on the jaw. Bud reached the jaw with a right. Each landed lefts on the jaw, and Anderson ducked two swings for the jaw. From a clinch Cross reached the jaw with a right. Cross reached the jaw lightly with the right. Anderson tried twice with his left before it reached the mouth. Cross put the right on the jaw again. Cross' round.

ROUND 3—Cross again led with the left on the ribs. This time Bud reached a stinging right on the jaw and Cross grabbed Bud and held on. Bud danced away from Leach's right, coming out of the clinch. Leach then sent in a series of left-facers and brought a smear of blood over Bud's face. They went to a clinch and Leach hammered the back of the head and the kidneys. Cross fell short with a right for the jaw and they went to a clinch. Cross kept hammering the mouth. Bud stuck a hard right hook on the jaw, and a moment later staggered the Jew with another right on the jaw. Bud made the New Yorker miss three right swings by beating him to the blows. A moment after the bell Leach landed a left on the jaw.

ROUND 4—Bud smashed a left on the mouth and hooked jaw with the right. Cross planted two rights on the ribs. Cross ripped a stiff right uppercut on the mouth coming out of a clinch. Bud planted a left on the wind and then beat Cross to two lefts on the face. Leach landed on the jaw with a right hook. Bud planted two lefts in the mouth and another on Leach's sore eye. Clinch. Both reached the face with lefts. Leach swung a back-hand left on the jaw and followed it with a right lightly on the same spot. The two blows coming in rapid succession half turned Bud on his feet.

ROUND 5—They feinted. Bud struck two lefts on the face and Leach sent in a series of right and left facers. Anderson sent Leach's head back with a running left to the face. Clinch. Bud reached the face with a left and tripped over Leach's foot and went to his knee. Bud danced back from a right lead, but shot in another left-facer, while he leaped toward the New Yorker. They clinched, they went into another clinch and Cross reached the face with left and right. After they broke Leach placed left and right again on each side of the face and Bud feinted the air foolishly for half a second.

ROUND 6—Bud placed a hard left on the jaw and followed in a second with the right on the jaw. Cross covered up. Bud kept on top of his man and tore in terrific lefts and rights on the jaw. Bud had Leach wobbly on his feet from the mauling he was giving him. Leach could not defend himself, but kept his guard up as best he could. Leach wobbled about the ring for half the round. Suddenly he seemed to regain his strength and tore in a series of rights, but they failed to reach their mark. Cross reached the face with the left, then shot the right over the jaw just as the bell rang. Ringsiders all during the round cautioned Bud to look out; that the New Yorker was stalling.

WILSON SPEAKS TO THRONGS AT GETTYSBURG

President, in Stirring Address, Rejoices in Great Reunited Nation—Lauds Heroes.

GETTYSBURG, PA., July 5.—President Wilson sounded the final note of the battle of peace at the golden anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg in an address before several thousand of the veterans, both blue and gray, in the great reunion tent to-day.

Although practically every President since the great war, including Lincoln, has visited the battlefield here, Wilson is the first, except Lincoln, who came to address the old veterans, and for whom the national salute of 21 guns was fired. He is the first since Lincoln to come in an official capacity.

As the President alighted from the train down in Gettysburg a battery of field artillery from Fort Myer, Va., stationed at the Pennsylvania College on Seminary Ridge, fired the national salute of 21 guns. He was met by Colonel Schoonmaker, president of the Gettysburg celebration commission, who escorted him in an automobile to the tent two miles away.

Out on old historic, battleswept Emmittsburg Road they went, covering in five minutes in a swift motor the path taken by Lincoln, who took half an hour in an old carriage.

Thousands Greet President.

The greatest number to see the President doubtless were the great mass of visitors stopping in the city and the thousands who came from the countryside. The entire tent had been reserved for the veterans and there was much vacant space.

This was due to the fact that many veterans had a misunderstanding as to whether the President was actually coming, a rumor having spread broadcast throughout the camp last night that he had again canceled his engagement. Others felt the President was indifferent and still others had gone home.

The President was received by Assistant Secretary of War Breckinridge, as representing the War Department in charge of the camp, and he was introduced to the audience by Governor Tener, representing the State of Pennsylvania as host to the veterans.

Immediately upon concluding his address the President was escorted from the rear of the tent to his car, which had been switched around through the camp, and he passed out through Long Lane, the central thoroughfare of the great camp.

He did not attempt to make an inspection, but was carried through to the main line of the road and started at once for Cornish, N. H.

Nearly 10,000 veterans left this morning and an equal number will get away this afternoon, if the trains can handle them.

About 6,000 had left previously up to this morning. The greater part of the army of the veterans will leave to-morrow, although the War Department is prepared to keep them Saturday night and feed them Sunday morning.

The President's Address.

President Wilson, in addressing the veterans, said:

"Friends and Fellow Citizens: I need not tell you what the battle of Gettysburg meant. These gallant men in blue and gray sit all about us here. Many of them met here upon this ground in grim and deadly struggle. Upon these famous fields and hillsides their comrades died about them. In their presence it were an impertinence to discourse on how the battle went, how it ended, what it signified. But 50 years have gone by since then, and I crave the privilege of speaking to you for a few minutes of what those 50 years have meant.

"What have they meant? They have meant peace and union and vigor and the maturity and might of a great nation. How wholesome and healing the past has been. We have found one another again as brothers and comrades in arms, enemies no longer, generous friends rather, our battle song past, the quarrel forgotten—except that we shall not forget the splendid valor, the manly devotion of the men then arrayed against one another, now grasping hands and smiling into each other's eyes. How complete union has become and how dear to all of us and how unquestioned, how majestic, as State after State has been added to this, our great family of free men.

"Heirs to Mighty Heritage."

"How handsome the vigor, the maturity, the might of the great nation we love with undivided hearts; how full of large and confident praise that life will be wrought out that will crown a strength with greater justice and with a happy welfare that will touch all alike with deep contentment. We are debtors to those 50 crowded years; they have made us heirs to a mighty heritage.

"But do we deem the nation complete and finished? These venerable men, crowding here to this famous field, have set us a great example of devotion and other sacrifices. They were willing to die that the people might live.

"But their task is done. Their day is turned into evening. They look to us to perfect what they established. Their work is handed on to us to be done in another way, but not in another spirit. Our day is not over; it is upon us in full tide.

"Have affairs paused? Does the nation stand still? Is what the 50 years have wrought since those days of battle finished, rounded out and completed?

Calls Nation Secure.

"Here is a great people—great with every force that has ever beaten in the life blood of mankind. And it is secure. There is no one within its borders, there is no power among the nations of the earth to make it afraid. But has it squared itself with its own great standards set up at its birth, when it made its first noble, naive appeal to the moral judgment of mankind to take notice that a government had now been established which was to serve men, not masters?

"It is secure in everything except satisfaction that its life is right, adjusted to the uttermost to the standards of righeousness and humanity. The days of sacrifice and cleansing are not closed. We have harder things to do than were done in these heroic days of war, because harder to see clearly, requiring more vision, more balance of judgment, a more candid searching of the very springs of right.

"Look around you upon the fields of Gettysburg. Picture the array, the fierce heats and agony of battle, column hurled against column, batteries bellowing to batteries. Valor? Yes, greater no man shall see in war; and self-sacrifice and loss to the uttermost; the high recklessness of exalted devotion which does not count the cost.

The Cost of a Great Nation.

"We are made by these tragic, epic things to know what it costs to make a nation—the blood and sacrifice of multitudes of unknown men, lifted to a greater stature in the view of all generations by knowing no limit to their manly willingness to serve.

"In armies thus marshaled from the ranks of free men you will see, as it were, a nation embattled, the leaders and the led, and may know, if you will, how little except in form its actions differ in days of peace from its actions in days of war.

"May we break camp now and be at ease? Are the forces that fight for the nation dispersed, disbanded, gone to their homes forgetful of the common cause? Are our forces disorganized, without constituted leaders and the might of men consciously united because we contend not with armies, but with principalities and powers and wickedness in high places?

"Are we content to lie still? Does our union mean sympathy, our peace contentment, our maturity self-comprehension and a clear confidence in choosing what we shall do? War fitted us for action, and action never ceases.

Refers to Another Host.

"I have been chosen the leader of the nation. I can not justify the choice by any qualities of my own, but so it has come about, and here I stand. Whom do I command? The ghostly hosts who fought upon these battlefields long ago and are gone? These gallant gentlemen, stricken in years, whose fighting days are over, their glory won? What are the orders for them, and who rallies them?

"I have in mind another host, whom these set free of civil strife in order that they might work out, in days of peace and settled order, the life of a great nation. That host is the people themselves, the great and small, without class, or difference, or kind, or race, or origin, and undivided in interests if we have but the vision to guide and direct them and order their lives aright in what we do.

"Our Constitutions are their articles of enlistment. Their orders of to-day are the laws upon our statute books. What we strive for is their freedom, their rights to lift themselves from day to day and behold the things they have hoped for, and so make way for still better days for those whom they love who are to come after them.

"The recruits are the little children crowding in. The quartermasters' stores are in the mines and forests and fields, in the shops and factories. Every day something must be done to push the campaign forward, and it must be done by plan and with an eye to some great destiny.

"Builded by God's Hands."

"How shall we hold such thought in our hearts and not be moved? I would not have you live even to-day wholly in the past, but would wish to stand with you in the light that streams upon us now out of that great day gone by. Here is a nation that God has builded by our hands. What shall we do with it?

"Who stands ready to act again and always in the spirit of this day of reunion and hope and patriotic fervor? The day of our country's life has but broadened into morning. Do not put uniforms by. Put the harness of the present on. Lift your arms to the great tracks of life yet to be conquered in the interest of righteous peace, of that prosperity which lies in a people's hearts and outlasts all wars and errors of men.

"Come, let us be comrades and soldiers, yet to serve our fellowmen in quiet counsel where the blare of trumpets is neither heard nor heeded and where the things are done which make blessed the nations of the world in peace and righteousness and love."

RITCHIE KNOCKS RIVERS OUT IN 11TH

on in the clinch that followed. As they broke Ritchie whipped a left to the stomach. Ritchie got a right uppercut and Rivers sent his head back with a straight left. Ritchie followed Rivers, shooting in straight lefts. Rivers tried left swings, Ritchie ducking. Ritchie was the aggressor, sending in face and body punches with both hands. Ritchie's friends were cheering.

ROUND SIX.

Ritchie missed a body blow and they closed. Ritchie got there with a straight left and repeated a second later. Ritchie got there with two lefts, one to the body and one on the face. Rivers swung a left on the jaw. They landed mutually with straight lefts. Ritchie drew back from Rivers' leads and scored cleanly with straight lefts. Ritchie whipped in a right above the belt line and Rivers landed with a high right hook. Ritchie landed both hands to the body and for a while scored three punches to Rivers, one dividing his attention between ribs and face. Rivers brightened and used both hands with effect on the side of the head. They slowed up for a while by mutual consent, but were slashing out at the bell.

ROUND SEVEN.

Ritchie was there with a straight left and drew back from a return. Ritchie hooked the ear with a right. Rivers' left doubled around Ritchie's neck, and Ritchie nailed Joe with a left uppercut. Rivers missed a left swing and Ritchie peppered him with rights and lefts. Ritchie continued to score, and Rivers swung two hard lefts on the jaw. Rivers piled Ritchie into a corner. Ritchie missed his footing and fell on the lower rope. When he stood up Rivers swung a right to the neck. Ritchie forced Rivers to the ropes and then to the center of the ring. It is a very vicious fight.

ROUND EIGHT.

They went close together and exchanged lefts and rights, Ritchie landing left and right hooks and sending home straight lefts. Ritchie was close and tilted the Mexicans head with a right swing. Ritchie landed a right against the ribs. Rivers was there with two straight rights to the ear. Rivers covered from right uppercuts and missed left swing. Rivers sent Ritchie's head back with a brace of left swings. A straight left brought blood from Rivers' mouth. Ritchie kept the blood owing with right uppercuts, and it was now Rivers' turn to hold on. Ritchie's straight left was continually in evidence. Then Rivers go to the side of the head with right swings. Rivers swung the left on the neck as the round ended.

ROUND NINE.

Rivers backed away and swung a left on the face. Ritchie whipped the body with the left and then swung a left on the ear. Ritchie was there with a straight left, and Rivers came back with a left hook. They closed in and fought at the body. They broke and Rivers scored with a left hook. Rivers planted a left hook and Ritchie came back with a fusillade of lefts and rights. Rivers backed to the ropes and covered up, while Ritchie hammered at his gloves. Rivers cut loose with left and right swings, knocking Ritchie's head from side to side. They closed in and Rivers held on. Ritchie used a free left in the clench. They broke and Rivers scored with lefts and right swings, following with an extra right which turned Ritchie's head aside.

ROUND TEN.

ROUND ELEVEN.

Rivers swung a left in the hollow of the neck and backed away as Ritchie forced him. Ritchie was there with a right uppercut and Joe held on. Ritchie put in a left body blow and followed with a light right to the chin. Ritchie crowded him, bringing him down on his hands and knees with a hard righthander. There was blood coming from Rivers' mouth and nose, but he did not appear to be knocked out. There was plenty of intelligence in his eyes as he hunched his back and raised himself partly from the floor. He still had one knee touching the mat when Time Keeper George Harting counted "eight, nine, out." And he was standing up a second later. It looked like a clear case of quitting, so far as Rivers was concerned. He had been discouraged for many rounds, and he probably decided to retire at about the first opportunity.

RURAL CARRIERS HAVE WARM TILT OVER MEMBERSHIP DUES

L. D. King, of Covington, president of the State Rural Carriers' Association.

He apparently is not greatly worried by the hot fight over payment of dues.

Controversy Precipitated in State Convention by Ruling on Payments in Advance.

A warm controversy was precipitated into the tenth annual convention of the Rural Letter Carriers' Association of Georgia, in session at the Kimball House, when the question of membership termination came up.

Virtually every carrier paid his dues Friday morning, a long recess having been taken for the purpose. Receipts given out covered the year ending with the present convention, but a large and determined number of carriers insisted they should cover a year from July 4, the date of payment. It is generally understood the constitution and by-laws committee will submit a ruling that dues paid are to be considered as in advance, instead of for the preceding year, as at present. The submission of this report was made Friday afternoon.

"There is going to be one more hot fight about it, and no one knows how it will end," said President L. D. King.

P. C. Coker, the first rural route man in Fulton County, and an ex-president of the District and State Associations, will attempt the organization of a ladies' auxiliary, which he says will be the first in America.

Mayor Woodward made the welcoming address Friday morning. He told the carriers if they were taken before Judge Broyles to be sure to do something bad enough to warrant a sentence of more than 29 days, so he could pardon them. Attorney Paul L. Lindsay, of Atlanta, formerly a rural route man and president of the National Association, made a felicitous talk. Addresses also were made by Clark Howell and Congressman Thomas W. Hardwick.

The convention will be in session through Saturday.

CROSS DEFEATS ANDERSON IN 9TH

heart. Leach began slugging and reached the face with lefts and rights at close quarters until Bud backed out of harm's way. Anderson poked the face with the left and swung the right on the jaw. He repeated the trick a moment later, but the blows were not hard ones. They went to a long clinch. Leach reached the chest with the left and the ribs with the right. Anderson reached the face with a left as the bell sounded. Both boys fought as if they were a bit tired during this round.

ROUND 8—Leach walked slowly out of his corner and they went to a short clinch. Leach sent two lefts around the neck and they went close. Bud reached the face twice with the left and missed a right swing. Bud again tripped and went to his knees. Cross reached the face with two light lefts and they went to a long clinch. Cross planted a stiff left on the jaw, but appeared to be afraid to get close enough to follow with the right, which went short. Cross then reached the point of the chin with the right. Bud turned Cross half around with a short right on the jaw and then followed it with a left-facer.

ROUND 9—Leach reached the body with a left and Bud the face with a left. Cross reached the jaw with a left. Bud rapped Leach's sore eye with two rights. Bud ducked under a vicious right swing and Leach rapped him between the shoulders as he turned. As they came close, Leach's left went round Bud's neck. Leach missed a left uppercut coming out of a clinch. Leach got to the face with a left, and as they came closer shot the right on the jaw. Bud never crouched away from these blows, however. He stood straight and danced away when he could or ducked them. Leach tore in with rights and lefts and a right on the jaw just at the bell.

Round 10—Both reached the face with lefts and went into a short clinch. Leach put the left on the ribs and then quickly switched it to the face. Leach sent Bud through the ropes with a short right on the jaw. Bud did not wait long until he was up. Leach kept cooly after his man right in the face with both hands. Bud fought back but he was stunned. Leached reached the jaw with the right again and Anderson held on in the clinch that followed. Bud's eyes had a glassy look. In a clinch Leach again reached the jaw with left and right. Then Bud planted two rights on the Jaw and Leach covered up for an instant.

ROUND 11—They fought cautiously and Bud appeared a little awkward on his feet. Anderson reached the mouth with left and they clinched. Both reached the jaw with lefts. Leach then sent the left again against the jaw and brought it back-hand fashion against the other side. Leach rammed the left into the stomach and brought the right lightly upon the face. Leach switched the left across Bud's face and then brought it back, quickly following with the right on the jaw. Each seemed to wan to rest. Leach's left went around Bud's neck as they went to another clinch at the bell.

ROUND 12.—Leach reached the face with two lefts, Bud seemed very slow with his feet and missed his mark three times in succession in close quarters. He tore a right uppercut to the jaw. Cross tore in and mauled his man to a groggy state with right and left facers. Bud hung on at the first opportunity, but had no judgment. Bud even failed to keep his guard up. Leach landed a hard right on the jaw. Leach mauled his man all over the ring. He finally floored Bud with a short right on the jaw. Bud fell through the ropes and the referee began counting. Bud's seconds yelled at him to stay down, but Anderson had no sense of his own, nor could he heed the advice of his handlers. He rose as quickly as his weak knees could lift his feet. Cross seemed to take compassion on his opponent and hesitated before landing another blow, apparently expecting Bud's handlers, who had crawled half way along the length of the ring outside the ropes, to toss in the towel, but they would not give up. Then Leach sent his right across the jaw again and Bud went on his back. Leach now showed that he had been thoroughly frightened. He rushed astride on the limp body, and lifting his head in his two hands shook it violently. Bud's seconds rushed in with a sponge full of water, but they could not resuscitate the lad. He was dragged to his corner, where it took several minutes of vigorous attention to bring him about.

Boy Overpowers Mad Dog in Battle

While the panic-stricken family barricaded itself on the first floor of the home of Mrs. M. L. Belcher, at 295 Washington Street, J. A. Lafitte, aged 16, rushed to the second floor and overpowered a mad bulldog that had terrorized the neighborhood. Police later shot the brute.

HEAT IS BROKEN BUT FOR SHORT TIME ONLY

Light Showers Give Little Surcease to Throngs Trying to Keep Cool in Parks.

Light showers falling shortly after 2 o'clock Friday afternoon brought temporary relief to the sweltering city. The mercury, fanned by cooling breezes, dropped considerably. However, the surcease was of but short duration. Before an hour had elapsed the sun reappeared and it was hot again.

At noon the thermometer registered 92 degrees, and the Weather Bureau announced it probably would rise above 93, and go possibly to 94. At 2 o'clock, however, the wind and clouds, which obscured the sunlight, caused a drop of about 5 degrees.

Atlanta received the full force of the heat wave which swept over the country Friday, in marked contrast to the last three weeks, when the maximum heat marks in the city were from 2 to 10 degrees lower than elsewhere. Had it not been for the clouds which gathered at 2 o'clock the day would have been unusually oppressive, in view of the high humidity, and many prostrations might have resulted.

FEAR LIBEL AS AFTERMATH OF SCANDAL

Mrs. Jenkins Hires Lawyer to Fight Expected Suits of Macon Church Folk.

MACON, July 4.—The elders of the First Christian Church have framed a report to be submitted to the congregation on Sunday morning in regard to the charge that Mrs. Effie L. Lester, the secretary of the Ladies' Aid Society, has been too friendly with Professor Frank M. Charlton, the choir leader. This charge is made by Mrs. J. W. Jenkins and Mrs. Alma Armstrong, and is supported by testimony of Mr. Jenkins and his grown son, Rufus.

It is regarded as certain that the elder's report will exonerate Mrs. Lester and Professor Charlton of any wrongdoing and urge that the congregation continue confidence in them and thereby further establish the vindication.

That this will be followed by action in the courts by both Professor Charlton and Mr. Lester there is hardly any doubt. In anticipation of being sued for libel or prosecuted for slander, Mrs. Jenkins has engaged Attorney Julian Urquhart to represent her. He states that not only will Mrs. Jenkins contend that she heard Professor Charlton make an appointment over the telephone to be at Mrs. Lester's home on the night of June 5, while her husband was away, at 9 o'clock, and that Professor Charlton was chased out of the premises, but that her son, Rufus, pursued him five blocks, and in Tattnall Square Park had a hand-to-hand encounter with the music instructor.

SOUTHERN TRAIN BANDIT GET $25,000

Masked Robbers Hold Up Illinois Central Passenger at Lonely Spot South of Memphis.

MEMPHIS, TENN., July 4.—Illinois Central train No. 1, bound from Chicago to New Orleans, was held up by four masked men early to-day one and one-half miles south of Batesville, Miss.

It was believed the men obtained $25,000, although the local officials of the American Express Company say the amount was not that large.

Official news of the hold-up reached Memphis offices of the Illinois Central just before noon. The message said the bandits flagged the train at the Tallahatchie River bridge, near Batesville, Miss., and compelled Engineer A. E. Norton to abandon his cab.

The negro fireman was kept in the engine cab, guarded by a bandit who kept him covered with a revolver, while the others went back and uncoupled the passenger coaches from the mail, baggage and express cars.

Deny Heavy Loss.

The negro fireman ran the cars through Batesville to a point one mile south of the town and stopped in a dense river bottom forest.

Officials of the American Express Company said the bandits did not obtain more than $5,000. Five charges of dynamite was exploded before the safe was opened. Every registered mail pouch was rifled, but postal authorities in Memphis said that money shipments were small because of the holiday.

Following the robbery the bandits ran the engine ten miles south when the fire under the boilers went out. Believing the negro fireman had allowed the fire to die in order to trick them, the bandits threw him out of the cab while the engine was moving rapidly. He was slightly injured. The men abandoned the engine one mile north of Enid, Miss., and entered the forest.

A special train arrived from Jackson, Miss, bringing officers and bloodhounds. A party of Deputy United States Marshals from Memphis, left to take up the chase for the bandits.

Car Nearly Wrecked.

Sheriff W. Lemaster, of Batesville, was the first man to reach the express car after the bandits left it. He found the car nearly wrecked.

"By peering into a crack in the safe, which was not completely demolished," said Sheriff Lemaster, "I could see two packages. One was marked '$20,000' and the other '$10,000.' Just inside the outer door of the safe I picked up nearly $500 in loose bills and silver."

Officials of the road say they believe the hold-up men were the same ones who have held up several trains in the last few months in the South. Express Messenger R. E. Hooks, of Cairo, Ill., wired the authorities in Memphis a good description of one of the bandits.

He said as he jumped from the train at the command of the hold-up men he tripped and in falling caught at one of the bandits. His fingers caught the man's mask and jerked it off. The robber cursed him and jabbed him in the ribs with a revolver.

Hold-Up in Wild Region.

Batesville, Miss., is 50 miles from Memphis, Tenn., and is the center of a hilly, thickly-wooded country.

Within the past year there have been numerous train robberies in the South.

The first was in Mississippi, on the Queen and Crescent, near Meridian, when robbers stopped a train and rifled the express car. The express company never made an official statement of the amount stolen, but it was estimated at $18,000. The robbers escaped on horseback through canebrakes into the river bottom. Presumably they waded their horses some distance up the shallow stream, for hounds lost the scent at the river bank.

Accused Slayer Kills Himself in His Cell

ANNISTON, July 4.—G. H. Bailey, a prominent merchant, charged with the murder of C. W. Saunders here about two weeks ago, committed suicide in the county jail by cutting his throat. It is thought that he used a safety razor blade, as other prisoners in the jail had such blades.

A relative says that Bailey was despondent after his preliminary trial, when he was refused bail. His body was turned over to Coroner Murphy to be prepared for burial. He leaves a wife and several children.

BABY, 7 MONTHS OLD, HAPPY PLAYING FIDDLE

Child's unusual love of music discovered entirely through accident.

June Howard Stollard, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Stollard, "The Fiddlin' Baby."

Neighborhood attraction is not content unless musical instrument is within easy reach.

Hail the fiddling baby!

Seven months old, and never happy unless he is picking at a violin.

Feed him milk and mush and he is apt to be as cross as a bear; stick a violin between his fat feet and fingers and he will immediately begin picking at the strings, a smile of cherubic joy will wrinkle his plump face—and he is in the seventh heaven of delight.

Atlanta's latest prodigy is June Howard Stollard, the only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Stollard, of 44 East Main Street, and he bids fair to develop into another Mischa Elman.

But it was not until he was five months old and crawling over everything in the house that the love of music that possessed the little soul became known, and then only through accident. One morning the baby crawled into a closet, and, discovering an old violin that had belonged to Mrs. Stoddard's father, calmly took possession of it and began giving an impromptu concert. He had the violin cuddled up between his toes and fingers and was picking at the strings with both feet and hands. And out of the medley of sounds emitted by the protesting violin came now and then notes of surprising clearness.

Since then open season has been declared on violins in the Stollard household. The fiddling baby has become a neighborhood attraction. Like all geniuses, the child is content to sit and fiddle all day long, whether he has an audience or not. He has gained confidence with experience, and now he picks and pecks at the violin strings for dear life. The child puts his whole heart into his fiddling and spurns tempting offers of milk while he is playing. He quits only when he is tired, and sometimes he does not get tired for hours at a time. His mother and father are even now planning his musical education.

'Phone Girls Will Open Summer Camp With Out-door Dance

With an informal reception and a dance in an open-air pavilion the girls of the Southern Bell Telephone Company, 500 in number, will dedicate their summer playground, "Camp Wyanoke," at 8 o'clock Friday night. The camp covers seven acres of wooded hillside on the plantation of B. D. Jackson, and is equipped with electric lights, sewer facilities and running hot and cold water.

The camp was planned by Miss Cathryn C. Tatum, chief of the stenographic bureau of the telephone company, assisted by the head operators. The telephone company donated the equipment, costing over $1,000. Practically every one of the 500 girls who work as operators, stenographers and bookkeepers will spend their vacation there, the cost being only 50 cents a day. The camp will be open till late in September or early October.

SLATON DOUBTS RIGHT TO PAY TEACHERS

Governor Asks Opinion on Amendment Purporting to Add Power in Expenditures.

Governor Slaton has grave doubts whether the recently ratified constitutional amendment purporting to increase the Executive's borrowing power has not really put a limitation upon his powers rather than extended them.

So serious are these doubts in the Governor's mind that he has referred the matter to the Attorney General for an opinion, and will not undertake to do anything in relieving the present situation with respect to paying the common-schoolteachers until his mind has been cleared up by that official.

If the amendment has fully authorized the Governor to proceed to the relief of the teachers, unquestionably he will give the matter that direction, but the peculiar wording of the amendment, coupled with the statutes involved, has given rise to perplexing doubts in the Executive mind as to just exactly what the law does contemplate, and he hesitates to attempt a loan for any purpose whatever until he knows exactly what terms and conditions a loan under the amendment would impose, not only upon the State, but upon the source of the loan.

Anxious to Pay Teachers.

Governor Slaton is anxious to see the school teachers paid. Of that there is no doubt. But the uncertainty in his mind as to the law in the case, as well as the marked stringency of the money market at this time, has prompted him to make haste slowly.

If it might be so arranged the Governor prefers that such loan or loans as he may contract be made with Georgia bankers and financiers. If the matter can not take this direction, however, the Governor will be forced to go East for such funds as he needs, and he has reason to suspect that it will be rather expensive borrowing at this time.

Naturally, the Governor does not wish to involve the State in a transaction calling for an abnormal expense item by way of interest.

The Governor wishes to relieve the present pressing necessities of the common-school teachers, and in addition to that he hopes to secure from the present General Assembly early legislation of a character calculated to avoid delaying the payment of the teachers in the future.

Legislature to Co-operate.

There is a marked disposition in the Legislature, moreover, to co-operate cordially with the Governor in this matter.

During the present three-day recess of the House and the Senate the Governor will address his attention almost exclusively to the problem of financing the teachers in their present necessities and planning for their permanent relief.

When the Legislature meets again Monday it is likely that the Governor will put himself immediately in touch with that body, to the end that the present troublesome status of affairs may be worked out legally, equitably and speedily.

POSSE IN BATTLE WITH BANDITS

One of Solomon Brothers Killed and Another Probably Fatally Wounded.

DOUGLAS, July 4.—Andrew Solomon is dead and Randall Solomon, his brother, to-day is in a hospital here probably fatally wounded, as the result of a battle between the Solomon train bandits and a posse headed by Sheriff Gillis at the Roundabout Swamp, near Kirkland.

The Solomon gang had been hunted by officers of Coffee and Ware Counties and detectives of the Atlantic Coast Line for two weeks for a series of daring freight train and other robberies in this section. They were trailed to the Roundabout Swamp, where they took refuge in the fastnesses where men and dogs could not trail them. There they remained until Thursday afternoon.

When Sheriff Gillis and his posse surrounded the bandits, a pitched battle ensued in which Andrew and Randall Solomon were shot. None of the Sheriff's posse was wounded. A relief party went from here to Kirkland to bring in the dead and wounded.

FLOOD OF SPEED FIEND CHARGES STIRS CHIEF

Beavers Posts Plain Clothes Men to Nab Drivers Who Endanger Children's Lives.

Following the excitement caused by the accident on Mills Street Wednesday afternoon when little Eva Kilpatrick was run down by a speeding automobile and left to her fate, Chief Beavers is receiving complaints of speeding autoists from all parts of the city.

The strongest complaints have come from merchants and residents along Ponce DeLeon Avenue and Marietta Street. Autoists have turned Marietta Street into a speedway, the Chief is told, and run their cars at a terrific rate of speed at all hours of the day and night. Several accidents narrowly have been averted, and pedestrians who are forced to cross Marietta Street are in constant danger.

Out on Ponce DeLeon Avenue conditions, according to complaints, are as bad as they are on Marietta Street. At night, residents of the street claim, the automobilists who use the street throw their mufflers wide open and sleep is impossible.

Children Kept From Street.

Little children living on Ponce DeLeon Avenue have been forbidden by their parents to cross the street unless their elders are with them, so dangerous and reckless have the automobile drivers become.

One complaint made to the chief declared that an 8-year-old girl narrowly escaped with her life only a few days ago. The driver made no attempt to turn his machine or avoid running over the child, and the complaint declares that as he flew past he cursed the little girl for getting in the road.

Chief Beavers, following the receipt of the complaints, started a vigorous campaign that it is hoped will end in the arrest and punishment of the speeding autoists. Every policeman on the force has been instructed to watch carefully for speeders, and also ordered to enforce all the automobile regulations strictly.

Police Put on Watch.

Plainclothes men will be sent to the various portions of the city that have become known as haunts of the speed maniac, and nothing will be left undone to break up the practice that has made the streets of Atlanta a source of danger to all who venture upon them.

Chief Beavers also has started a thorough inquiry into the accident which nearly cost Eva Kilpatrick her life, and if the autoist who ran down the little girl and then fled is captured, an example will be made of him. The investigation has been placed in the hands of Captain Poole, and a squad of men have been detailed to act under his orders. Every person in the neighborhood of the accident who could have seen the car will be questioned.

Columbus Draws Law To Curb Autoists.

COLUMBUS, July 4.—An ordiannce window of Luden & Bates' piano store the Columbus City Council to force all automobile drivers to bring their cars to a standstill when approaching a street car which has stopped. The ordinance also provides that no one who operates a motorcycle shall allow anyone else to ride on the machine with them, nor can they carry packages that would tend to obstruct their view.

Anniston Wars on Speeders.

GADSDEN, ALA., July 4.—Following an order issued by Mayor Holcomb yesterday, the police last night arrested two automobile drivers, charging them with exceeding the speed limit. They will be given a hearing in Police Court Monday. The Mayor told the police to arrest everyone driving fast, regardless of his station in life.

Contestants Drive and Ride Pretty Shetland Prizes in Parade as Guests of Hearst Papers.

Boys and girls in The Georgian and American pony contests, their parents, their relatives and their friends are at Grant Park celebrating the Fourth as the guests of the Hearst papers.

Promptly at 10 o'clock nine of the ponies which are to be awarded as prizes in the contest started in parade formation from The Georgian and American offices in Alabama Street.

It was a pretty sight. The buggies were swathed in flags, and the ponies, sleek and shining, proudly wore tiny flags on all parts of their harnesses. Five of the ponies were hitched to buggies; the others were saddled.

Nine of the most eager contestants were chosen to drive and ride the ponies to the park, but with attendants close at hand to prevent any mishap, for the Shetlands are spirited. While gentle, still they are not getting the work they should and are inclined to be lively.

At the park every contestant is being given a ride or a drive. Lemonade and other refreshments are being served. Dan Carey, superintendent of parks, said The Georgian's guests could "own the park" for the afternoon, and they took him at his word.

Men from The Georgian and American offices were delegated to look after the children, so that parents who let them go unattended need have no worry as to their safety.

STARK BITTERLY ARRAIGNED BY SUFFRAGIST

Mrs. McLendon Scores Lawmaker for Opposition—Fight for Senate Chamber Renewed.

Characterizing Senator W. W. Stark as a man of small mental caliber, Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, president of the Georgia Woman's Suffrage Association, said Frdiay the suffragists would renew the fight for the use of the Senate chamber during their State convention.

When Senator Stark ascertained the suffragists intended to enlighten the Senators on the question of votes for women, and then moved the tabling of a resolution to grant them the use of the Senate chamber on the nights of July 9 and 10, he provoked the ire of Mrs. McLendon.

Mrs. McLendon declared the suffragists of Atlanta and Georgia were indignant. She believed that common courtesy should have impelled the Senators to willingly grant them the use of the Senate chamber, irrespective of the Senators' views on suffrage.

She Calls Condition "Pitiful."

"It is pitiful that women have to beg the men for such things as that," she said.

During a brief recess Mrs. McLendon asked Senator Stark why he opposed granting the use of the Senate chamber to the suffragists, and he replied it was because the Saviour did not call a woman as one of His disciples.

"The answer seemed so absurd, so little to the point," she asserted.

"I asked him if he didn't know that the women of Georgia helped to build that State House, and that we had as much right there as anybody else. Governor Brown let four cowboys from Washington ride horses up the steps, yet the women of Georgia can not meet there."

Plan to Renew Fight.

"We are going to renew the fight for the use of the Senate chamber," Mrs. McLendon continued.

"Mr. John Y. Smith said he would reopen the question for us next Monday. Mr. Blackburn said he would, too. Mr. Blackburn is not in favor of woman suffrage, but his personal belief has nothing to do with this question. No, I don't think we'll get the use of the Senate chamber, but we'll show the smallness of the average Georgia legislator. Just because they are elected by the men people they try to keep the women down. They are afraid the women might rise against them, so they keep their heels on the women's necks."

Mrs. J. K. Ottley, a suffragist sympathizer, said she had no opinion regarding Senator Stark or the reasons he advanced for opposing suffrage, but she was surprised at the Senate's refusal to allow the women to meet there.

Mrs. Ottley Is Surprised.

"I should think they would be very glad to extend the use of the Senate chamber to any association which was neither incendiary nor objectionable," she said, "and, judging by the headway made in other States, the suffragist associations are neither incendiary nor objectionable.

"I am surprised that they should have denied the use of the Senate chamber to any group of respectable Georgia women seeking something they believed to be for the State's good."

Mrs. Ottley said she believed woman's suffrage would come, but she would probably never make an effort to bring it.

Militants Burn Large Warehouse.

BIRMINGHAM, ENGLAND, July 4. Militant suffragettes burned a big warehouse here to-day, doing $25,000 damage. On a nearby building they posted a placard saying:

"Fires will never cease until women vote."

Bill to Reimburse Dairymen Drafted

A cattle bill, providing for the reimbursing of the dairymen for cows killed by order of the Health Department, will be introduced by Representative R. Frank Smith, of DeKalb County, at the request of the Georgia Dairymen's Association, which has been agitating the matter for years.

It provides that the owner shall be reimbursed in the value of the animal killed as shown upon the tax books.

LITTLE GIRL IS A HOTEL VETERAN; SHE HAS NEVER MADE MUD PIES

Demure Miss at the Majestic Can Order Dinner Like a Real Epicure.

Think of it! Tobe 7 years old and not know what a mud pie looks like.

That is little Miss Christine Lewis, demure, pretty, petite daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Lewis, who has spent all of her blissful seven years in a hotel and wouldn't live anywhere else even if her parents insisted.

Miss Christine is at the Majestic at present. She can order a dinner as well as her mother, and she orders the porters and bellmen around with the nonchalance of a legislator. From the time she awakes in the morning and takes here seat in the dining room at 9 o'clock until she is tucked in bed at 8, after bidding guests on the veranda good-night, she is the sunshine of the hotel.

Miss Christine is a veteran.

"Waiter," she beckons at the table, "I don't care for consomme to-night. You may bring me chicken, if you have it, and vegtables. And I want ice cream. And it's hot in here; I wish you'd start the 'lectric fan. Please don't forget the ice cream."

Mud pies are unkonwn to her. Miss Christine's frocks know not the stain of the red Georgia soil. In the afternoon, instead of playing in the street as most children do, she goes to a picture show. And there she sits up straight and watches the romances unreel. It is more fun, says Miss Christine, than playing in the hot sun.

Miss Christine Lewis, who has spent all of her seven years in hotels.

Doesn't want to live in a residence ever, says petitie miss, who is the pet of the Majestic's guests.

Likes picture shows better than romping. because romping soils her dresses.

FEVER EPIDEMIC SURE TO COME

We have already this season experienced the hottest weather known in eleven years. Look out for all kinds of fever during the next few months.

Dr. Verdier's Liver Ease is the very latest discovery in medicine to take the place of calomel. Remember that calomel is a poison, made of a heavy powdered metal that heats and inflames the tissues all through your entire body. It is never eliminated from the system—it's too heavy. It will damage you and make you prematurely old.

Dr. Verdier's Liver Ease taken at the first sign of any bad feeling will ward off fever in grown-ups, diarrhoea in children and insure perfect health. You can't afford to neglect yourself when you can get a safe remedy at so small a cost.

Fifty cents for a large bottle at any drug store in Atlanta, fully guaranteed or money back. Ask for Liver Ease in a pink package.

WAVES U. S. FLAG IN CANADA AND STARTS RIOT

Overpatriotic American Flaunts Emblem in Regiment's Face and Is Beaten Up.

WINNIPEG, July 4.—An overpatriotic American started a small-sized riot on Main Street here to-day by waving an American flag in the face of the Tenth Canadian Regiment as they were returning home from camp. In the fight that followed, soldiers and civilians alike participated.

The American was roughly handled and the flag tossed into the street and trampled on by the marching soldiers. Before the police could interfere several who took part in the fight received black eyes and cuts on the face.

The incident happened when the streets were crowded with friends of the returning soldiers. The young American, who is employed in a local restaurant, as he waved the flag at the soldiers shouted, "Hurrah for the American Eagle!"

Colonel J. B. Mitchell, in command of the regiment, ordered one of his men to quiet the American and tell him to put the flag down. As the soldier sprang forward to obey, several civilians closed in on the American and a fight commenced, which finally was quelled by the police.

No arrests were made. In all probability the matter will be taken up with the American Consul General.

U. S. Is Paying More For Seamen's Food

WASHINGTON, July 4.—The increasing cost of living is demonstrated in contracts for feeding the officers and men of the Revenue Cutter Service during the fiscal year beginning July 1.

New York City shows the greatest increase. It will cost $.436 a day to feed each sailor there this year as against $.38 last year. Baltimore and Boston are the only cities showing decreases, the cost in Baltimore dropping from $.41 to $.401, and in Boston from $.387 to $.383.

Electric Fan Demand Swamps Local Shops

The hot weather of the past several days has developed an electric fan famine. The demand has so increased that orders can not be filled. Electrical concerns have long waiting lists to be filled as soon as new shipments arrive.

More than 1,000 fans have been rented and sold within the last few days by one concern.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

Keith Vaudeville at Forsyth.

Edward Abeles, the distinguished comedy actor, who has created a number of important leading roles with great plays, is making himself a real favorite with the patrons of the Forsyth this week, in the presentation of his excellent playlet, called "He Tried To Be Nice." Miss Charlotte Lander gives valuable assistance to the star in the act and it has won applause that made extra curtain calls at every performance. The bill is one of exceptional quality and real interest. There are acts that are of a keen and drawing power and collectively make up a program that is full of good things.

Talking Pictures at the Grand.

Matinee and night performances of Edison's talking pictures will be continued Friday and Saturday at the Grand. The program is new—different from the first part of the week, and just as interesting. Interest in the pictures has grown steadily. The Edison novelty has won on pure merit and the big Grand is being well filled at every performance.

Extra Matinee at Bijou To-day.

The pleasing impression made by "A Trip to Paris" on Monday at the Bijou has brought crowded houses to the theater all week. The warm weather has not affected the attendance, and Bijou patrons have shown their appreciation by the generous applause and frequent curtain calls. "A Trip to Paris" is one of the best tabloids that has been offered. Extra matinee to-day at 2:30.

Stabs Son-in-Law In Fight Over Wife

DAHLONEGA, July 4.—When William Stover, of Auraria, started a row with Lon Jett, Gus Stover interfered and was seriously stabbed by Jett. Gus Stover is a son of William Stover and a son-in-law of Jett. Remarks that the elder Stover made about Jett's daughter, Gus Stover's wife, started the difficulty.

Sheriff T. M. Ray was notified and reached Jett's home shortly afterward. He was arrested and placed in jail. Gus Stove is in a serious condition.

Exchange to Fight Cotton Future Tax

NEW YORK, July 4.—A formal protest by the Cotton Exchange will probably be made against the amendment to the tariff bill providing for taxing sales of cotton futures one-tenth of a cent a pound.

Cotton brokers and spinning interests declared that the taxation of one-tenth of a cent a pound on sales of futures would drive the market for cotton to Liverpool, where there are no such restrictions.

Poison Kills Wife of Greensboro's Mayor

PRINCE SAYS KIN WON'T SLIGHT U. S. BRIDE

Austrian Noble Also Denies King Blocks His Marriage to San Francisco Girl.

LOS ANGELES, July 4.—"Miss Marie Freeze is the equal of any princess of Austria, and as my wife she will be received at the imperial court beyond any question," declared Prince Stanislaus Sulkowski, of Austria, in reply to a report that lack of royal consent was delaying his marriage to the Los Angeles girl.

"It is not true that Countess Szechenyi, who was Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, was not received at court or was coldly treated by the nobility of Austria-Hungary," he added.

Prince Sulkowski said he awaited the consent of the ministry of war to the marriage, a consent made necessary by the fact that he is an officer in the Second Dragoons.

Prince Sulkowski insists, in spite of reports of Gladys Vanderbilt's unhappy experiences, that there will not be the slightest disposition on the part of the nobility of his country to turn a cold shoulder to Miss Freeze when he takes her to Vienna as his bride.

Thieves Ambushed By Elkin Drug Clerk

Through the vigilance of R. W. McRoberts, an Elkin Drug Company clerk, six negro thieves, who, for some months past, have caused annoyance and considerable loss to the company, were arrested and bound over on $200 bond each.

Candied cherries, perfume and drugs were the principal things taken, but the negroes became more bold and carried out bottles of alcohol in the bottom of the trash cans.

McRoberts and three others secreted themselves in the basement and captured the negroes.

LONGSTREET'S WIDOW TELLS OF REUNION

Describes Meeting Sharpshooter Detailed to Kill Husband, Whom General Captured.

By HELEN D. LONGSTREET.

GETTYSBURG, July 4.—The tents of America's loyalty are pitched today on the world's greatest battlefield. Gettysburg's bugles echo today over a reunited nation.

Standing on the borderland of eternity, with its shadows touching their bent forms and silvered heads, these last survivors of an army the like of which the world shall see no more have gathered here, not Northern, not Southern, but all American, bridging the bloody rift of the sixties with fraternal unity more ancient than sectionalism, more lasting than hate.

To the youth of this nation the inspirational value of this day on Gettysburg's field will outweigh the sordid accumulations of all the Rockefellers the world will ever produce.

"Where did you lose your arm?" I asked of one melancholy-faced soldier in blue, who walked a little lamely notwithstanding his brave efforts.

Detailed to Kill General.

"After the battle of Chickamauga," he said, "I was one of twenty sharpshooters detailed to kill Longstreet. He captured us all and I lost my right arm. Did you ever see Longstreet?" he inquired pathetically. "How sorry I am that he did not live to be here."

Gazing over seas of Old Glory, miles of which stream from the houses and dot the hillsides, swathing the trees and bridging the streets, until a loyal canopy of red, white and blue almost conceals the blue heavens above.

"Oh, isn't it glorious!" I said to a veteran in gray. "How could you look on the old flag and know its meaning and fire on it?"

The veteran in gray said, brokenly, as he looked with me upon the shining colors of our country's standard:

"That's My Flag Forever."

"I didn't stop to think so much about what we were fighting about; my land and my people called to me. They were in trouble; it was about the same as if it had been my mother. Right or wrong, I would rush to her rescue."

"But now you are glad," I said, "glad that you didn't win; glad that the American Union lives."

He bared his head and, pointing to the glorious sweep of color, said reverently:

"That is my flag, the flag of my fathers, the flag of my country, my children's flag forever. God keep it in the skies. It means strength and progress and peace that will endure. It blazed the only road to national happiness and greatness."

A melancholy-eyed veteran in worn gray, gazing wistfully across Cemetery Ridge, had gone back to the daring days of the long past. Lost to the present, oblivious of surroundings, he said sadly:

Mourns Over Pickett's Charge.

"If Pickett hadn't made that charge we stood a good chance of whipping the Yankees."

"But," I said, "it is best for us all that you didn't whip them; and they are no longer Yankees, just Americans; and, looking toward the East, shoulder to shoulder, heart beating close to heart, our country's mighty destiny is our common hope and glory."

"I know all that," he said, "but I just sometimes can't help feeling powerful sad when I think of them brave boys who had to die out there for nothing."

"Oh," I replied, "nobody ever dies for nothing who dies for right."

On this field of tearful memories a sea of brown tents stretching miles in all directions, it is learned that no provision whatever has been made for the participation in this greatest event in the country's peace history of the women who sent husbands and fathers and sons and sweethearts to answer the call at the first tap of the drum in 1861. The hardship, the suffering, the agony of the women who waited in the war homes of the nation may never be told.

Veteran Longs for Wife.

Some day a grateful Government will erect a monument that will pierce the blue heavens from Gettysburg's stateliest, sunniest slope, and on it will stand the figure of one in whose courageous soul every battle was fought and every victory won—the woman who placed the flag of her faith in the hands of her best beloved and sent it to the front when the first gun was fired on Fort Sumter.

A veteran, shambling rather dejectedly along up Emmitsburg Road, overtook me. He was hot, dusty, tired. I said: "Do take my umbrella. I really would rather walk without it."

He straightened up with some of the old fire and vigor.

"Pshaw! I was fighting up this road before you wuz born. I guess I kin stand a little sun now. But how I wish Jane wuz here. She had a harder time than I did enduring the war."

Later a little woman with faded eyes overtook us "up Emmitsburg Road."

"I wasn't expected," she said, "but I just couldn't help coming. Jim was killed along here somewhere. I think it must have been about here."

Pausing at a clump of trees, she rested a thin hand on one of the outstretched branches.

Going to Her Sweetheart.

"Your husband?" I said.

"Oh, no, he was just my sweetheart, but I told him that I would wait until he came back. I won't have much longer to wait now. He did not come back to me, but I am going to him."

Some time there will be another and a greater reunion on this field. The next time it will include the real soldiers who made the four years of fighting possible.

On that day, a rich, grateful Republic will pour out its millions, and all the gray, bent Janes who had "a harder time" than their husbands on the field, and all the sad-eyed Sarahs who are still waiting for sweethearts that never came back, will gather here on the scene of a Republic's trials, tribulations, and sufferings, and that will be a real reunion of the white souls that laid the supreme offering on the altar of country, of the tortured hearts that wrestled with the uncomplaining pain through the long four years when the nation's harpstrings were tuneless because her daughters could not sing the old songs.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

by JAMES B. NEVIN

By refusing the perfectly reasonable request, legitimately entered, of certain advocates of woman suffrage in Georgia that they be permitted to use the Senate chamber for a meeting, at a time definitely sure not to conflict with any busines of the Senate, it is extremely doubtful whether the Senate has covered itself with any amazing amount of glory or erected a perpetual monument to its common sense.

That is the way a great many people appear to view the matter, anyway!

Moreover, if the Senate is opposed to woman suffrage, which it is agreed all around it has a right to be, it doubtless has helped the cause rather than injured it in Georgia by refusing the request noted.

Woman suffrage may not be popular in Georgia—on the contrary, it may be more popular than some folks imagine—but certainly its advocates thus far working in the open are women of extraordinary intelligence and marked conservatism of action.

To deny them a request that would have been granted, readily enough, to the State Democratic executive committee, say, is not particularly convincing in the minds of some people that woman suffrage is either an error or a monstrous wrong.

To be sure, the women may hold their meeting elsewhere, but in view of the fact that all sorts of political meetings have been permitted in the Senate chamber—which is a public place—and all sorts of people permitted to speak therein, in season and out, the needless turning down of a handful of women, desirous of holding a welfare meeting in behalf of their own organization, seems to have been rather out of place, if not absolutely cheap.

The Senate of Georgia before this time, however, has strained at gnats only to swallow camels subsequently. It appears that the present Senate was not loathe to let it be known that it could do that old act itself, if occasion seemed to require the performance.

It is the opinion of a number of people that the Senate's refusal of the request of the women involved was extremely ungracious, to say the least of it!

It should be borne in mind that neither Representative McArthur nor Representative Browning, of the new counties of Wheeler and Bleckley, respectively, were expelled from the House.

Both gentlemen had been sworn in, but that fact did not make them members de jure of the House, necessarily. The constitutionality of their titles to their seats was raised and sustained by the House, and their seats therefore were declared vacant, or, rather, their seats were declared never to have existed.

Both gentlemen are very popular, and are citizens of the very highest integrity and standing. Indeed, as a purely personal matter, the disposition of the House undoubtedly was to seat them. However, the House, after thrashing the matter out exhaustively, decided that the law plainly was against them and very properly it acted accordingly.

Discussing this matter to-day, Representative Hardeman, who made a speech denying the right of the gentlemen to their seats, said: "It is a tribute to the patriotism and genuine worth of the House that it acted as it did in this matter, despite its heavy personal inclination to vote otherwise. My own vote was embarrassing, in a way—I hated to vote against these two splendid men, but I could not afford to do that which I feared would Legislature, and so I voted as I did.

"I think the George House of this year may be depended upon to do the right thing in all matters, judging by the way it acted in this very trying situation."

Close behind the introduction of a bill in the Georgia Senate by Hon. J. L. Sweat, of the Fifth District, Waycross will organize for a determined campaign in favor of extending the State road to the sea, via Waycross.

Right-of-way through Ware has been pledged, and the county convicts will be loaned, if necessary, to the State for the road construction.

Other counties through the Ware County section have agreed to make similar offers, and all will exert themselves to get favorable action by the Legislature.

Governor John M. Slaton's suggestion of a State Highways Commission has met with the hearty approval of the farmers of Floyd County, and they have not been at all slow in making that fact known.

Meetings were held throughout the county Thursday, warmly approving the idea, and the Rome Chamber of Commerce has set the seal of its indorsement upon it.

Howard Ennis, of Baldwin, who defeated former Speaker Pro Tem Carl Vinson for re-election to the present House by the squeaky margin of five votes, has made marked progress in the esteem and respect of his fellow members. Already Ennis of Baldwin is known of everybody, and is most generally approved.

Despite the fact that Ennis defeated Vinson as aforesaid, the two men are the warmest of friends, and may be seen almost any day that Vinson is in Atlanta, arm in arm, and as thick as can be. Both are high-class men.

Representative Barry Wright, of Floyd County, a former member of the House and legislator of experience, has just been re-elected president of the Cherokee Life Insurance Company of Rome.

Mr. Wright is one of the younger members of the present House of Representatives, and is perhaps the very youngest life insurance president in the United States.

D. F. McClatchey, the House reading clerk, not only has a powerful and sonorous voice, but one possessed of marvelous powers of concentration.

In reading a bill for the first or second time Mr. McClatchey frequently condenses pages into paragraphs, and paragraphs into sentences. Sometimes he gets by with a sentence so fast that the audience can not hear it at all!

By condensing things after the manner he does, Mr. McClatchey undoubtedly saves the State thousands of dollars annually in the mere matter of time prevented from going to waste. If McClatchey didn't get over the ground orally as fast as he does the entire time of the House doubtless would be taken up listening to bills read.

Mother's Advice To Her Daughter

A Real Live Doll to Fondle Is Woman's Greatest Happiness.

One of the most important matters about which women concern themselves is their future status as a grandmother. And she is wisdom itself who knows of or learns of that famous remedy, Mother's Friend. This is an external application for the abdominal muscles and breasts. It certainly has a wonderful influence, allays all fear, banishes all pain, is a most grateful encouragement to the young, expectant mother, and permits her to go through the period happy in mind, free in body and thus destined to anticipate woman's greatest happiness as nature intended she should.

The action of Mother's Friend makes the muscles free, pliant and responsive to expansion. Thus all strain and tension upon the nerves and ligaments is avoided, and, in place of a period of discomfort and consequent dread, it is a season of calm repose and joyful expectation.

There is no nausea, no morning sickness, no nervous twitching, none of that constant strain known to so many women, hence Mother's Friend is really one of the greatest blessings that could be devised.

This splendid and certain remedy can be had of any druggist at $1.00 a bottle, and is sure to prove of inestimable value, not only upon the mother, but upon the health and future of the child. Write to Bradfield Regulator Co., 152 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for their book to expectant mothers.

JUDGES CHOSEN FOR SLOGAN CONTEST

Georgian's Prize Offer for Best Button Caption Increases Interest in 500,000 Club.

The Georgian's 500,000 club movement was given a new impetus Thursday when three of the best known men in Atlanta became actively identified with it as judges of the $25 slogan prize contest. They are:

John W. Grant, Wilmer L. Moore and Walter C. Taylor.

"The constant stimulus our newspapers give to the Atlanta spirit is one of the finest things in the city, or any city in the country for that matter," said Mr. Grant. "The 500,000 booster club idea will result in much good, and the census of 1920 will be ample proof of it."

"I want to help the 500,000 club all I can," said Mr. Moore.

"I often think that we don't know how to appreciate Atlanta until we get out of it," said Walter Taylor. "Often when I was in other towns and heard of the things being done in Atlanta, I got as homesick as when I first left home as a boy.

"Every traveling man, every Atlantan who goes away for a trip, as well as all good boosters at home, should wear one of the 500,000 club buttons. You can't calculate the boosting that such a plan will effect."

Since The Georgian offered $25 for the best slogan for the buttons interest has greatly increased in the enterprise to get 500,000 people into Atlanta by 1920.

The contest will last for ten days, the winner of the prize to be announced in Hearst's Sunday American of July 13. All entrants must mail their slogans to the Contest Editor, Atlanta Georgian. They will be transmitted to the judges and merit will decide. The originator of the one selected will be given $25 in cash.

It is an easy way to make $25. It's a chance to render a civic service. Thousands of buttons bearing the slogan will be distributed. A few words penned in an idle moment may speak volumes.

BUSINESS IN WOOL IS TAKING ON LIFE

Prices on Free Trade Basis Except for Medium Fleeces—London Auctions Open.

BOSTON, July 4.—More wool has been sold in Boston during the past week, and the market has assumed an appearance of activity lacking for months. Transfers foot up well over 1,500,000 pounds, including territories, fleeces and Texas wools. Prices have been low, keeping the market down practically to a free wool basis on all grades except medium fleeces. Active buying in the West now is largely confined to Montana, where the new clipping season is just getting under way. Other States have been fairly well cleaned up, the best wools having been purchased and the heavier wools consigned. Business in foreign wools remains at a standstill, as manufacturers will not pay the duties in the face of free wool. The London auction sales opened about as expected with American buyers unusually active for the first day.

Receipts of wool in pounds for the week ended and including Wednesday were as follows:

	1913.	1912.
Domestic	4,584,887	8,130,912
Foreign	181,560	3,420,304
Totals	4,776,447	11,551,216

Receipts in pounds from and including January 1, 1913, as compared with the corresponding period of 1912, were as follows:

LITTLE STORIES of the TOWN

Sneezetown Is Up in Wisconsin.

Here's a story told by a visitor at the Transportation Club the other evening:

The elderly matron with the bundles, who was journeying to a point in Wisconsin and occupied a seat near the middle of the car, had fallen asleep. One the seat in front of her sat a little boy. The brakeman opened the door of the car and called out the name of the station the train was approaching. The elderly lady roused herself with a jerk and inquired hurriedly of the boy:

"Where are we, Bobby?"

"I don't know, grandma," answered the little boy.

"Didn't the brakeman say something just now?"

"No, he just stuck his head inside the door and sneezed."

"Help me with these things, Bobby!" she exclaimed, hurriedly. "This is Oskosh. It's where we get off."

Wouldn't Stand To Have It Filed.

The conversation led to surgical operations and Congressman John H. Small of North Carolina told of the experience of a Southern blacksmith.

The blacksmith sprained his wrist one afternoon, and lost no time in hustling to the office of a physician.

The doctor examined the wrist and then took a small bottle from a shelf, but found it empty.

"James," said he, turning to an assistant, "go upstairs and bring me down a couple of those phials."

"What's tha?" exclaimed the patient, suddenly showing large signs of emotion.

"I was merely asking my assistant to bring me down a couple of phials from upstairs," answered the doctor.

"Files!" cried the blacksmith, with a look of determination. "No, you don't, Doc! If that hand has got to come off you will use an ax or a saw!"

Real Modesty From Down State.

The only unoccupied room in the hotel—one with a private bath in connection with it—was given to the stranger from the wiregrass. The next morning the clerk was approached by the guest when the latter was ready to check out.

"Well, did you have a good night's rest?" the clerk asked.

"No, I didn't," replied the guest. "The room was all right, and the bed was pretty good, but I couldn't sleep very much, for I was afraid someone would want to take a bath, and the only door to it was through my room."

RECORDER FINES DE LAMATER ON WIFE'S PLEA

Druggist Promises Court He Will Not Molest Estranged Spouse Again—Injunction Pending.

The last twenty-four hours were eventful ones for Ira J. DeLamater, of the DeLamater-Lawrence Drug Company.

Here is what happened to him:

Arrested on the story of his wife, who is suing him for divorce, that he was at her home in an abusive and intoxicated condition.

Locked in the police station for two hours.

Served with a temporary injunction preventing him from molesting or visiting his wife.

Given notice that action has been taken to have him adjudged in contempt of court.

Summoned to appear as defendant in the Recorder's Court Friday morning.

Fined $10.75 by Recorder Broyles for intoxication and disorderly conduct.

Notified that he will have to appear August 16 before Judge L. S. Roan when decision will be made on the permanency of the injunction standing against him and when he will be given opportunity to answer to the contempt charge.

DeLamater was let off with a light fine in the court of Recorder Broyles Friday morning on his promise that he would not seek to see his wife again and would not in any way molest her.

His trial was the sequel of an exciting scene at his wife's residence, 60 Currier Street, Thursday afternoon. He is said to have gone there in an intoxicated condition and uttered threats against her father, City Comptroller J. H. Goldsmith.

Mrs. DeLamater called Policemen Nashburn and Pate. They warned him to leave, and when he disregarded their orders, placed him under arrest. He explained at the police station that he was at his wife's residence only to see his children and to try to effect a reconciliation with Mrs. DeLamater.

Mrs. DeLamater's attorneys, Daley & Chambers, obtained a temporary injunction from Judge L. S. Roan, restraining DeLamater from visiting at her home, and at the same time made application to have him adjudged in contempt of court for his failure to pay the $75 a month temporary allimony which Mrs. DeLamater is said to have been awarded pending the settlement of her divorce suit.

U.S. ASSETS FIXED AT $2,000,000,000

Surplus of $40,083,229 Wiped Out by Canal Expenditures. $275,000 in Reserve.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—Uncle Sam closed the fiscal year 1913 with a surplus of $40,083,229, a gain of $8,750,000. Panama Canal expenditures and public debt transactions, however, wiped out this surplus and created a deficit of $2,449,000.

Total receipts were $723,782,931, and ordinary disbursements $683,699,692. Corporation taxes yielded the Government $34,948,870. Custom receipts reached $318,142,000, an increase of nearly $7,000,000.

The Government spent $41,741,000 on the Panama Canal, making a total of $318,229,000 spent to date.

Secretary McAdoo to-night announced that the daily treasury statement in future would be issued in a completely changed form, designed to show at a glance the assets and liabilities of the Government.

The first statement will show, the Secretary said, that the grand total of assets of the Government is nearly $2,000,000,000, against which there are liabilities including the gold and silver certificates aggregating about $1,725,000,000, leaving a balance in the treasury of from $250,000,000 to $275,000, including the gold reserve of $150,000,000.

Skirts at Savings

Woolen skirts and white washable skirts, both values that will commend themselves to the woman with a sense of economy, but who at the same time does not lose sight of style points. However, there are not more than thirty of the woolen skirts to be distributed at this price, certainly not enough to last out the half-day. So the cool of the morning will be the best time to visit the Ready-to-Wear Department.

$1.50 For $5.00 Woolen Skirts

The materials are Scotch mixtures in brown, and black-and-white effects, and a soft tan-and-white striped fabric. Splendidly tailored, of graceful lines, with two little tailored straps in front. High waist line. $1.50 does not pay for the material!

69c For $1.00 Washable Skirts

Of a smoothly finished white linene—that will make many successful trips to the laundry. Four-piece skirts, broad tuck in back, closes side front with large pearl buttons, patch pocket at right side. Indeed an unusual value at $1.00, now 69c.

50c & 75c Brassieres 29c

For a busy half-day! A likely lot of brassieres that were 50c and 75c (because they were—and are—worth those prices) now 29c. Choose from several styles of embroidery and lace trimmings—all neat; all of fine cambric.

THE GHOST BREAKER

By G. W. GODDARD and PAUL DICKEY

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

The scene of the story is laid in the Vanderlip Hotel, New York City. The Princess Maria Theresa of Segura, a beautiful Spanish woman, is suddenly awakened in her suite by the sound of pistol shots. She hears a man running down the hall. He crashes against her door, breaking the lock, and enters. She sees he is a tall, good-looking young man, dressed in evening clothes. He is carrying a revolver in his right hand, and blood is dripping from a wound in his left. He begs the Princess to hide him. She, moved by some indescribable impulse, decides that she will. She directs him to an inner room, and a few minutes later, when the hotel detective knocks on the door, she tells him she is all right and sends him away. The young man, who is Warren Jarvis, of Kentucky, comes out of his hiding place, and the Princess, for the first time, notices his wound. She is moved to sympathy and showers him with questions as to what has occurred. Jarvis tells her about a Kentucky feud between his family and another named Markham. He says he left Kentucky to avoid the feudists, but encountered one of them in the hotel, which explains the shots.

Now go on with the story.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

A quick shade passed over his face and he pressed his lips together.

"No, never," he declared, in a steady voice.

"You have no fear of death?"

He lifted his eyebrows slightly by way of reply.

Dona Maria moved nearer and lowered her voice to a tense undertone:

"You are—you are not afraid of ghosts?"

Some billiant student of humanics once figured that the essential difference between a brave man and a coward is that while both are sure to be frightened the coward is panic-stricken in the presence of danger and the brave man is likely to go to pieces after the danger has passed.

Possibly this is the reason that Warren Jarvis and the Princess of Aragon could discuss so calmly their future plans when the one was a murderer in the eyes of the law, a wounded and trapped fugitive; and the other was coolly harboring a criminal to use him for her own private ends. As adventures are for the venturous, so romance is for the romantic. Both were young, both were romantic and both were fearless.

And so it was that Jarvis could smile with unaffected amusement when Dona Maria asked if he was afraid of ghosts. But Dona Maria did not smile.

"Ghosts," she repeated soberly, in response to his puzzled query. Jarvis threw back his head and laughed silently.

"After what I've been through?" he said. "No, I'm not afraid of ghosts."

Dona Maria held him with her gaze until the mirth died out of his face.

"If you escape from here," she said slowly, "it will be because I helped you. We might say I saved your life. If what you tell me is true and if I try to save your life——" she paused for an instant and then went on steadily—"it will be for a selfish motive entirely. It will be because I have work for you to do. Do you understand? Work—hard work—dangerous work! It—it may mean your life in the end," she added, and her voice faltered slightly.

A Real Peril.

Jarvis studied curiously the dark, beautiful face. He did not feel inclined to laugh now. He felt that there was something deadly serious back of his child's talk of ghosts. Whatever the service might be that she demanded of him it was certain that she believed the peril it entailed to be really active.

"You are frank, anyway," he remarked.

"It's a chance," she reminded him.

There was a certain medieval brutality about this last suggestion that completely won him. Indeed, it never occurred to either that there was any true moral obliquity in their attitude or actions. When Jarvis drew his pistol and shot his man to death there burned in his bosom as pure a flame of fanatical belief in the justice of his cause as that which steeled the lance point of the Red Cross Knight. And in the same spirit Dona Maria would swear him to her service and send him to a possible death. He smiled at the thought.

JARVIS SWEARS TO GET THE GHOST

"Kneel then, Warren of Jarvis," she commanded, "and repeat this oath."

"And my reward?"

"—— is your life," she replied instantly.

Jarvis again burst into a short silent laugh. "Well, that's something. And if I agree——?"

"You will begin by taking the ancient feudal oath of my country," said Dona Maria, gravely.

"Oath!" exclaimed Jarvis. "Isn't my word enough?"

The Princess waved her hand in a truly royal manner.

"You will pardon me if I insist."

The young man smiled and shrugged his shoulders. "Very well. If it pleases you, I'll swear the blackest oath you can utter. Let's hear it."

However lightly he might take it, the ceremony held nothing of the mirthful for Dona Maria. As solemnly as if feudalism had not long ago been reduced to a show of pomp to please those whom it amused, she asked his name.

"Jarvis," he told her.

"Your full name?"

"Warren Jarvis."

Royally Dona Maria pointed to the rug at her feet.

"Kneel, then, Warren Jarvis," she commanded, "and repeat this oath."

He Kneels.

"Oh, come, now," he objected, sheepishly—but Dona Maria only looked and pointed. At last he grinned and began to get down first with one knee and then the other, and finally came down awkwardly with both at once. It was distinctly ungraceful and against the best forms of feudal ceremony. Dona Maria was embarrassed.

"No! not that way," she said hastily. "On one knee. Ah! That is better. Now, repeat after me—'I, Warren of Jarvis' "——

"I, Warren of Jarvis," repeated the young man, with mock solemnity, though he was not insensible to the romantic charm of the ceremony.

" 'Senor of all the domains, fiefs, keeps and marches of Warren of Kentucky' "—

"Whew!" He thought of what the boys around the Galt House would say of these "fiefs and marches," but he obeyed.

"Senor of all the domains, fiefs, keeps and marches of Warren of Kentucky' "—

" 'Do convey to Maria Theresa, of Aragon, all my worldly titles and possessions' "——

"Sounds like I was marrying her," he muttered. " 'Do convey to Maria Theresa, of Aragon, all my worldly titles and possessions' "——

"Now, take my left hand in both of yours," ordered Dona Maria. He obeyed with wonderful enthusiasm and felt that he was going to like the oath more and more as it progressed.

" 'And receive them back as vassal and retainer and to faithfully fight in my lady's cause, according to the feudal laws of Castile and Aragon. So help me God, Our Lady and St. James!' "

Jarvis looked up into the glowing face and shining eyes as she repeated the solemn closing words of the oath and a swift change came over him as the soft hand that he held in both his had carried some thrilling current from her soul to his. He felt somewhat like the scoffer who strolls into a church and is humbled by the simple faith he sees about him. There was no mockery in his voice and little in his heart when he repeated them after her. And the kiss that he pressed on the back of her hand when she said, "Arise, vassal," was wholly sincere.

Confused.

She drew back quickly, for the first time confused.

"That is part of the ceremony," she admitted, in a small voice, "but I meant to omit it."

So the serious moment passed. "It seemed the only sensible part," he laughed. "But who on earth is this Maria Theresa that I am hired man to?"

Dona Maria straightened her slender figure and drew the folds of her dressing gown more closely about her.

"I," she said, with the dignity of a queen, "am Her Supreme Highness, Maria Theresa of Segura, Princess of Aragon."

Jarvis' jaw did not drop, because it was not that kind of a jaw, but he was enough of a democrat to be sufficiently impressed.

"Good Lord!" he groaned, after a short season of speechlessness. "A princess!—and I've been ordering you around with a gun!"

"Never mind that now," his liege lady ordered lightly, mollified by her vassal's appreciation of her position; "you will be properly punished, my vassal. There are dungeons in my castle."

"Sh—h!" cautioned Jarvis quickly. There was a sound of swift footsteps in the hall. They passed the door and died away, but the incident brought them back to a consideration of the present situation.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Very True.

She—Anyhow, you must admit he is a well-bred man. Did you notice his knowledge of Ruskin?

He—I did, and if you want my candid opinion, I don't believe he's ever been there.

It's Up to the Judges Now

"The Triple Tie" Contest Came to an End at Noon Yesterday

Noon yesterday was the time limit fixed for the close of "The Triple Tie" contest and up to that hour many contributions were received. Some of them came by special delivery. Some of the packages were bulky, others small, but if one may be permitted to judge from exterior looks, all those who tried a hand at writing a logical conclusion for the great baseball story were very much in earnest.

All the contributions will be turned over to the three judges, as announced, and it will be up to these disinterested persons to go through the mass of replies and indicate those which they consider the best.

On Monday we shall continue the publication of "The Triple Tie," giving the ending of this remarkable serial just as Mr. Mitchell, the author, wrote it. We regard "The Triple Tie" as one of the most interesting stories ever published by The Georgian. Much of its appeal lay in the fact that it contained local color in generous measure.

The Way of a Man

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

ONE who signs herself "Broken Hearted," and who I am sure isn't, writes me as follows:

"I am keeping company with a young man and like him very much, but he doesn't show his love for me as I do for him. Every time he comes to see me he sits in a chair reading a book. Do you think I should continue keeping company with him?"

My dear, you love him; you want him to love you, and you want to become his wife. Isn't that so? Yet you rebel against the attention he gives you, and which is the kind you will always receive as his wife. He will always "Sit in a chair reading a book." In that manner is every wife in the world entertained.

This is the husband-like treatment, and not the lover-like. He gives you the treatment a husband gives his wife for the reason that you have let him see "you are already won!" You say he doesn't show his love for you as "you do for him." Of course not. A man is naturally a lazy animal and makes no effort that is unnecessary. An effort to win your love is unnecessary.

When a man goes courting he makes the effort of a man catching a street car. After he has caught the car he seats himself comfortably and begins to read his newspaper. No further effort is necessary, so why make it? This man has won your love; you have made him as sure of it as he is sure he has caught the car when his feet are on the steps. Naturally, the next thing he does is to sit down and rest.

I do not blame him. Really, sometimes when I see the way girls lay their hearts at the feet of men, so often without any solicitation from the men, I wonder that courting stays in fashion.

I wonder that men spend their money on flowers, books, candy, theater tickets and for little outings, all to win the love of a girl, when so many girls seem to stand ready with their love in their hands, begging the acceptance of it by any man who looks their way.

I wonder that men prize a girl's love as highly as they do, remembering it was so lightly won.

Get the book habit. Never again tell him you love him. Never nag because he reads, but, rather, encourage him, letting him see that you would rather he read than bore you by talking.

You have given him the impression that he is sure of you. Efface that impression, but efface it so gently he will never know just when the process of obliteration began. Let him realize that your heart doesn't hang on a low branch, ready to drop into his hand if he will outstretch it; give him to know it grows higher up and that he must climb for it.

I am quite sure if you go about it with discretion he will close his book till you are his wife.

And then make up your mind to this and accept it as inevitable, how he will read to make up for lost time!

Men and the Cook Stove .:. .:. .:. By Dorothy Dix

IT is announced that nine young men students at Cornell University this year registered in the domestic science department and took cooking lessons.

This is glad news on many accounts. For one thing, it opens up to men a lucrative occupation, for there are few professions so well paid as that of the expert cook, and it is a pity that more American boys do not fit themselves to fill it, instead of compelling us to send abroad for a French chef whenever we want a culinary artist.

But whether a man intends to be a professional cook or not, it's a good thing for him to learn at least the rudiments of domestic science if for no other reason than because it establishes a common bond of interest and sympathy between him and his wife when he gets married.

Undoubtedly one of the chief reasons why marriage is a failure is because the average man and woman in this country lead such distinct and separate lives, and have so little knowledge of the problems with which each has to grapple, and I am persuaded that nothing would do more to promote domestic felicity than for every boy before he is married to have served an apprenticeship in the kitchen, and every girl to have done a couple of years' work in a business office.

Certainly the man who knows something practical about cooking, who has wrestled with the frying pan, and been up against the pots and the kettles will be able to extend a heart-to-heart comprehension to his wife when the steak is tough, and the potatoes watery, of which the unculinary, half-baked husband is utterly incapable.

What Dickens Says.

Dickens says, in one of his stories that no educated man ever looks at even the back of a book in the way that an ignorant person does, and precisely the same thing applies to housekeeping. The man whose whole experience in cooking consists in offering gratuitous criticism every time anything is overdone or underdone can never behold a dinner with the same exquisite perception of all the time and labor and worry it took to produce it that the man will show who knows from personal experience of the deceitfulness of butchers' meat and the iniquity of the gas range.

As it is now, the household critic has nothing but contemptuous pity for the female intellect that can not manage two servants without getting gray and wrinkled in the process, while he bosses half a hundred employees without turning a hair. The man who has been through the domestic mill on his own account will never speak in that tone of voice to his wife.

He will know, from experience, that no rules that apply to other labor have any bearing on the servant girl question. Like the wind, she cometh and she goeth as she listeth, and no man or woman knows when or for how long she is going to list. Neither will this paragon of a husband make unfavorable comments on the culinary products of Hilda and Mary Jane. He will eat what is set before him, asking no questions for sympathy sake, and reflecting when things go wrong that he would get no better results in his own affairs if he had to depend for his help on those who neither wanted to learn their business nor desired to keep their places.

A Difference.

And just as it is a good thing for men to learn to cook, it is also well for a woman to have had the actual experience of earning her own living before she is married.

No woman who has ever earned a dollar looks at one as does the woman who has always had her spending money given her. To the one it means something that comes easy and goes easy. To the other it represents toil and weariness, sometimes the very life blood of a person. She knows how hard it is to win, how hard to keep, and the anxiety and humiliation it means to be without it, and she spends it prudently and judiciously.

The woman who has never earned her own living thinks that business is a picnic, and that when a man goes downtown of a morning he departs to enjoy himself with his friends. No woman who has stood behind the counter, or bent over a typewriter and taken part in the daily grind of business cherishes any illusions about its being fun. She knows it for the heart wearing, nerve wrecking thing it is, and her comprehension of its trials keeps her from inflicting on her husband many of the unconscious cruelties that the woman who is totally ignorant of business practices upon her suffering spouse.

Also the business woman remembers how, when she came home at night exhausted and with nerves fretted to fiddle strings, it seemed to her that just one more calamity would strain things to the breaking point. You may be sure that such a woman never meets a weary man at the front door with a catalogue of everything that has gone wrong in the house during the day. Neither does she expect a man with weighty affairs on his mind, and whose time is money, to stop downtown to match samples, or hunt through a department store for a spool of elephant breath silk thread.

What we need is a common plane of mutual helpfulness and understanding on which the sexes can meet. Men and women should know the trials and tribulations under which each labors in order to sympathize with them. It's because men have never done women's work that they think that cooking and sewing and mending and baby tending is a job so easy that a woman could do it with one hand tied behind her. It is because women have never had to get up, sick or well, and go down town to work that they think that a man's business is a cinch.

It is because men have never had to ask for every cent they spend that they do not realize how humiliating it is to a woman to have no personal income of her own. It is because few women care to smoke that the average wife nags her husband about scenting up the parlor curtains with tobacco.

With personal knowledge of the difficulties of the situation will come sympathy and toleration. So the man who can cook, and the woman who has kept books will meet on a common plane of mutual good will that will make matrimony a success instead of the failure it so often is through the sheer inability of husband or wife to comprehend the difficulties the other faces.

Injun Giver.

Robbie met a neighbor who was smoking some fine, fragrant tobacco sent by his son in America. He took out his own pipe ostentatiously.

"Have you a match, Sandy?" he queried.

The match was forthcoming, but nothing more.

"I do believe," said Robbie, "I hae left ma tobacco at hame."

"Then," said Sandy, after a silence, "ye micht gie ma back ma match."

How Strict Are You with Your Daughter?

—answer it, parents. Are you too strict, or aren't you strict enough? Either course is liable to be disastrous. Your daughter's welfare means as much to you as anything else in the world, yet do you know what to watch in bringing her up.

There are few men who know the problem as Judge Freschi does. For years a magistrate in the City of New York, his work has brought him into personal contact with thousands of girls and their stories. He has had an opportunity to analyze the causes of their failure. His name has become known throughout the country as their benefactor.

The angle from which he discusses the diverse elements that enter into the upbringing of the girl is a new one that you probably have never thought of. As a thoughtful mother or father you ought to read what he says in his article, "How Strict Are You with Your Daughter?" It appears in the

By DOROTHY DIX.

EVERY few days I get a letter from some man who emits a wild and heartbroken wail because, he says, woman has gotten out of her proper place. Many of these melancholy gentlemen go so far as to express the further opinion that it is the business of the press to try to shoo the feminine sex back to where it belongs.

Speaking for myself, I should gladly use what little influence I have with women in trying to corral them in their own particular little stockade if I only knew where that sacred spot was.

What is woman's proper place, anyhow? Will some wise brother please arise in meeting and speak right out and tell us?

Is woman's proper place the home? None of us deny it, and the great majority of women will answer the call in person if you ring their front door bell.

A Foolish Waste.

But what about the tens of thousands of women who have no home in which to stay, whom no man asked to marry them, and who are fated to never know the cling of little children's arms about their necks? It is all right to say, "Back to the home for yours, sister," to the woman who has got a good husband, and babies, and a cottage or a flat of her own, but how are you going to keep women in the domestic sphere who have neither a kitchen, nor a nursery, nor a man of their own? I give it up.

Is the woman who paints pictures, or writes, or acts out of her proper place? I take it that when the good God put talent into a woman's head that He knew what He was about, and that He intended her to use the gifts He gave her. Otherwise it would be a foolish waste of valuable material.

Certainly we should all be much poorer if there had been no Rosa Bonheurs, no George Eliots, no Charlotte Brontes, no Mrs. Humphry Wards, none of the thousand delicate and facile female pens that delight and entertain us every day of our lives.

Is Maude Adams out of her sphere when she makes us cry? Is Rose Stahl out of her sphere when she makes laugh? Are Melba and Tetrazzini and Cavallieri out of their places when they lift us up to the seventh heaven with their voices? Yet all of these women occupy conspicuous places and are very much in public.

A Question.

Evidently the men who complain of women being out of their proper places are thinking about the business women. Is a clever, strong, healthy young girl out of her place when she goes to work to support herself instead of sitting down idly at home and adding to the burden of a poor, weary, hump-shouldered old father, who has toiled like a dray horse to raise his family and has come almost to the end of his strength?

Are the girls of a family who have good business positions and who bring their money home to make an old mother comfortable and educate younger brothers and sisters out of their places during working hours?

Is the woman who is married to a man whose health fails out of her place because she puts her shoulder to the wheel and helps the domestic wagon out of the ditch instead of letting it sink down into the mire?

If you ask my opinion, I think that every woman who needs money for herself, or for her family, is exactly where she ought to be when she is earning it by her honest work. If the men of her family can't support her, there is no reason why she should not support herself, and help them, too, if they need it. For my part, I have never been able to see why it isn't just as feminine a thing, and as much in her line of duty, for a woman to be a prop to a man as it is to be a millstone about his neck.

Is woman out of her place when she belongs to clubs? Isn't it woman's place to add to the sweetness and light of life, and haven't the women's clubs done more toward fostering the higher education, beautifying towns, supporting art galleries and picture shows, and giving the country a general esthetic uplift, than all other causes combined?

Is the woman of wealth, and intelligence, and leisure out of her place when she devotes her energies to public reforms and charities? Where else would we look for our great philanthropies? Who would raise the money for our hospitals, for our fresh-air funds, for our tuberculosis camps, for our societies for the prevention of cruelty to animals? There is not a community in this country that hasn't some old maid or childless widow who is its good Samaritan, and nobody accuses her of being out of her proper sphere, except the evildoers on whose corns she treads.

Out of Place?

There are those who contend that a woman is out of her proper place—oh, millions of miles out of it—when she takes an interest in politics and wants to vote. Why? Has she not as much at stake in the country as any man? Does she not pay as many taxes? Is she not affected by the laws just as men are? If food prices advance, does not the burden of making the family income go further fall upon her? If the streets are dirty and the water supply impure, does she not have to nurse her sick, because of it, and if they die, is not her heart broken over their loss even more than any man's? How can she be out of her place when considering the questions that are most vital to her?

The truth is, there is no place in all the wide world that is not woman's place. First at the cradle and last at the tomb, she pillows man's head in infancy on her breast, and kisses shut his eyes when he dies, and there is no hope, no joy, no struggle, no labor, no victory, no defeat in his life in which her place is not always by his side.

It is idle to talk about sending woman back to her place. The earth is hers, and the fullness thereof, just as much as it is a man's.

Daysey Mayme's July 4

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THE call had read "Ladies Not Admitted," and while a crowd of little girls stood outside pouting, crying and even kicking on the closed door in the modern, ladylike way of expressing opposition, a band of grave-faced little men in blouse and bib held serious deliberation on the inside.

"We are assembled," said President Chauncey Devere Appleton, "to utter protest against the parentally expurgated plan of a Fourth of July. We are here to make public our opinion of any parent who would have children spend the Fourth as if the corpse of Freedom lay shrouded in the next room."

A Riot.

Every delegate was on his feet at once; there were motions, countermotions, protests, howls and hisses, a confusion that was augmented by the discovery that the ladies on the outside were peeking through the keyhole. After the president had put the seal of secrecy on the proceedings by closing the keyhole with a borrowed piece of chewing gum, order was restored, and the following resolutions were adopted:

"That life is not what it used to be when a boy could put a cannon cracker under a maiden aunt's chair and gorge himself with ice cream while the family were bringing her to;

"That unless a boy has a chance to make himself look like a bursted firecracker, there is no way for him to become distinguished, and mothers have no right to monopolize all the surgical operations;

"That if this demand for everything noiseless isn't checked soon, mothers will be refusing the boy babies the doctors bring them because they are not equipped with rubber tires;

"That girls are ideal creatures because they are happy with dolls, and the only noise in playing with a doll is a squeak that is squeaked out the first day;

What Father Did.

"That mothers place too much stress on boys getting their hands shot off, considering that they never look at their sons' hands without screaming out that they need washing;

"That father used cannon crackers when he was young, and still has hands left to spank us."

The discovery that the ladies on the outside had used the eternal feminine weapon of defense in boring a hole through the seal of secrecy broke up the meeting, and the gentlemen poured out and the ladies poured in, in wild confusion.

Why He Left.

A dispute once arose between a landlord and his tenant. The latter had given notice to quit, but would not put a bill in his window to say that his house was "To Be Let."

To make matters worse, they went to law about it. The judge, having heard the case, made an order for the defendant to put a bill up within fourteen days.

The landlord was so overjoyed at his victory that on the fourteenth day he took a friend with him around to the house to chaff his tenant. The bill was up in the window plain enough, but under it was another bill, which ran as follows:

"Cause of leaving—bad drains."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DON'T BE DISCOURAGED.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 18 and am employed by one of the largest railroads in the East.

I have been keeping steady company with a young lady two years my senior and visit this girl about two or three times a week. I asked her to become my wife and she told me I would have to get her father's consent. I had a conference with her father, and the only opposition he has to our marriage is that I am too short. I am 5 feet 3 inches and receive a good salary. Would you advise me to discontinue my attentions to this girl or continue to keep company with her, in the hope that her father will see the folly of his ways and consent to our marriage? GEORGE W.

If her father's objections are based solely on your height, I am sure that in time he will withdraw them.

You need time for a more important reason: If your stature were all that is desired, your age is not. Trust me in this, my boy—no boy at 18 is old enough to select a wife. For your own sake, be glad to wait.

IT WILL BE A GOOD LOSS.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

young man two years my senior, I am deeply in love with a and we have been keeping company for the past nine months, but lately at a party to which he had taken me he met a girl and took her home. I wrote him the next day asking him if I had done anything to offend him. I have not received an answer. Should I write to him again, as I would not like to lose him? C. V. M.

He treated you most rudely, and you would show a finer spirit if you resented it and refused to see him again. Do not write, and make up your mind to this: The best thing that can happen to a girl is to "lose" an escort who is not a gentleman, for such a one behaves much worse after marriage.

DON'T CALL AGAIN.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 19 and very popular. Lately I received word from a young man who used to call on me pretty steady that he would like to have me call him on the telephone. I was informed he was not in, and, as he is a traveling salesman, I believed this, but called a few days later only to be told the same story; this time leaving my name saying he should call me up. Now, as the young man who received my message is also a good friend of mine, and spoke quite confidential to me on the phone, also telling me that the other young man is just jollying me along, I am in doubt as to what course to pursue. BABE.

You should not have called in the first place, and your second effort does not speak much for your dignity.

The young man, my dear, who is worth having will always take the initiative. He will always make every effort to communicate with the girl he loves, and ask only that she be pleased at his overtures.

Preparing Her.

On Independence Day

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

THE hour: Nine in the evening. The day: The Fourth of July. The year: That is immaterial, since the story told that night is always young. The personnel: A young man of 24 and a girl of 19.

The scene: A secluded corner of a porch step. Around this young man and woman were other young men and women who were showing their patriotism with firecrackers, torpedoes, skyrockets and other illuminating and noisy means. There was a momentary darkness. The last skyrocket had proved a fizzle and there was some delay in starting another. Under cover of the darkness, and unheard by the others in their merriment, the young man whispered in the girl's ear, "I love you," and she replied "And I love you."

First Avowal.

It was their first avowal of affection, and some years later, the girl, who had become a matron, sighed and said: "You know I lost my independence on Independence Day."

Every one who loves and is loved loses a measure of independence, and this woman was such a clinging, helpless creature, that she lost all she had. Perhaps that was because she heard her little love story in a day when girls were taught that to be happy sweethearts and wives they must be long-suffering and submissive.

She made no reservation of her affection, and their courtship proved a stormy one. He flirted, there was coolness, heat, anger, love, indifference, impatience, cruelty or kindness personified as the mood suited him. Through every change in him she remained the same patient, grateful, loving girl, always with arms outstretched to welcome him when he deigned to turn her way.

No Nation Free.

She put herself beneath his feet in her excessive humility, and after they were married he saw to it that she remained there. She had put her own pricemark on herself. We all do. He looked at the mark, and saw that it resembled the tag Public Opinion put many centuries ago on the worm.

There is an independence of nations, and an independence of individuals, and the former depends on the latter. No

The men are independent and free. The women are gradually achieving an independence that will give them every right enjoyed by the men.

It is a great thing, but not enough. I want an independence for every girl who loves, and which she, and she alone, must secure.

I want her to hold her little head and heart high, and give her love and life to no man who will treat them lightly.

I want her, when she says "I love you," to add, "but my happiness, my usefulness, my well-being, do not depend on becoming the wife of any man."

Then he will love her, appreciate her and want her all the more.

Inference Obvious.

Knickerbockered and resplendent in dazzling tartan stockings, Algernon sauntered from the clubhouse to the golf links; and there, on the first tee, having carefully adjusted his monocle and "addressed" the ball for a prodigious length of time, began his game.

"By the way, caddie," he remarked pleasantly, "what sort of a game does Mr. McJones play?"

The diminutive young Scotchman screwed up his weather-beaten face.

"Mr. McJones? He canna play at all."

"Ah!" said Algernon. "You see, I'm playing a match with him tomorrow. Suppose I shall beat him easily—what?"

The caddie shook his head wisely.

"Na," he replied; "that ye will not."

Adding Fuel to Flame.

A quarrelsome couple, having exhausted many subjects, came to discussing tombstones, and the husband asked:

"My dear, what kind of stone do you suppose they will give me when I die?"

"Brimstone," was the reply.

The Divorce Question

By JERE R. COOKE.

(It may be asked why I, of all men, should write upon questions affecting marriage and other relations. In reply, I would say that one who has gone through what I have, suffered as much as I have, and seen so much of the world and its hard side may possibly have something to say that will be of use to others. I hope so at least.—JERE COOKE.)

A WOMAN recently gave the reason why she desired a divorce from her husband as "so they may cultivate a beautiful friendship."

It goes without saying that it is easier to be a friend than a helpmeet, but to sacrifice the one for the other is to barter the real jewel for the past brilliant. There can be no harmony among such people.

No sympathy, whether he be called by the sacred name of helpmeet or the uncertain cognomen of friend.

The best friend a man can have is his wife, and marriage is the mold into which the highest friendship is poured.

The true secret of success in marriage is that the wife is the best friend or chum or "pal" her husband has. Why shouldn't she be? She shares his sorrows; why not his joys?

It is not an uncommon thing that the man weds the sweetheart of his childhood, the playmate of his boyish days, when, hand in hand, they roamed together and no boy chum could tear them apart.

Puppy love is supplanted by the great transcendental love that cements a life-long intimate friendship. A great man proved his appreciation of this and his desire for its continuance by replying, when asked the question what one thing he would most desire should he have to depart this life, "My wife's second husband."

Three Reasons.

He was not like the man who, being asked how many times he was married, replied:

"Three times. Once for love and twice for general housework."

Pity the poor woman who slaves for her husband, only to die of hard labor and leave her savings to his second wife.

A woman who was ill-mated once complained, "My friend is so much more sympathetic than my husband. He is so considerate, so kind."

It afterward developed that this friend grew weary of his attentions in a much shorter time than the husband. Comparisons are always fatal.

The man who holds his tired, hard-working wife in comparison to the painted woman he meets upon the street always loses. Poverty is one curse of domestic infelicity, but the wife who can share it with her husband has found the marriage goal. There is an argument for incompatibility which does not extend to the statutory ground.

No woman should be compelled to spend her earthly existence with a brute, an inebriate, or a libertine, and no man should be forced to abide with a woman who has dropped from her pinnacle as a helpmeet to a nag or a shrew.

An unwise man once attempted to cure his wrangling wife by breaking a piece of the best china at every one of these spells. It was expensive and not effective.

Another friend, with more success used to call in a doctor every time hysteria developed. The patient improved rapidly.

A seemingly unending wrangle can, by diplomatic treatment, terminate, as a mob of violence is quelled by the cold water of the firemen, rather than by the bullets of the police.

Called a Brute.

The social animal man is sometimes called a brute, and frequently is a brute.

He thinks he knows it all and wants to be the head and boss of the house.

No woman who is a pal to her husband need ever fear any other woman. Her husband will not join another lodge so that he can get one more night out a week.

If the "other woman" gets him she is a better pal to him. She jollies rather than scolds, she laughs and does not cry, she is a good sport, she gets his money, and she has a good time.

If he is as old as Methuselah she calls him a "boy." He likes it and spends his cash.

Few men are natural pikers with their chums. They take a certain pride in playing the limit.

The woman with the harnessed lap dog gives out a suspicion that she is no longer a "pal" to her husband. She has the dog in leash, but there are no strings on the man. "To have and to hold" each other's hearts.

It is not so much that they live together as that they love each other.

The two lives who hope, fear, plan, play, enjoy, suffer, deny, possess, work and win together need no divorce court to adjust their difficulties.

They are united in life and in death they are not divided.

Do You Know---

The Prussian Guards, whom King George and the German Emperor reviewed recently, were originated by Frederick I, whose ambition it was to form a royal bodyguard of giants. Every country was ransacked by his agents to supply recruits, and no head that towered above the crowd, even in the bazaars of Aleppo or Cairo, could escape the crimps of the Prussian King. The most extravagant sums were offered to men of exceptional inches, an Irishmen, more than seven feet high, who was picked up by the Prussian Ambassador in London, receiving a bounty of $6,000.

Should the United States purchase from Mexico 250,000 square miles of Mexico for $30,000,000 it will not be the first addition by purchase to the great American Commonwealth. A century ago Napoleon I relinquished France's claim to Louisiana and Arkansas for $15,000,000, and in 1867 Russia exchanged Alaska for a cash payment by the United States of $7,000,000. More recently a strip of Central America, embracing five miles on either side of the Panama Canal, was purchased for $10,000,000 from the Republic of Panama.

Nothing is more amusing than to watch on a winter's day the marvelous intelligence with which the pigeons of St. Mark's, in Venice, can discriminate between residents and visitors in the grand square of that city, the Plaza of St. Mark. The moment a foreigner shows his face in the plaza the pigeons set upon him in crowds, hoping to be fed. They do not trouble the natives, who may be sunning themselves by the hundred in the square.

In your hand you hold a five-cent piece.

Right at the grocer's hand is a moisture-proof package of Uneeda Biscuit. He hands you the package—you hand him the coin. A trifling transaction?

No! A remarkable one—for you have spent the smallest sum that will buy a package of good food; and the grocer has sold you the most nutritious food made from flour—as clean and crisp and delicious as it was when it came from the oven.

Superfluous Hair Truths

Stop Experimenting

There are but few depilatories sold. You think there are hundreds because you have used the same identical preparations under several different names. This is easily explained. Women stop using

So-Called Hair Removers

when they learn that they are harmful. Therefore, they can not be sold under the same name for any length of time. Then the identical, worthless, harmful concoctions are given new names and advertised again as totally different preparations to who innocently buy them over and over again under different names, and this will continue as long as women are so unwise as to experiment with unknown, so-called hair removers.

De Miracle

Has Stood the Test of Time

De Miracle has been sold as De Miracle for over eleven years, and its name has never been changed. It is acknowledged the world over by eminent authorities as the one safe, perfected hair remover, therefore it is the only depilatory you can use without experimenting.

Leaves No Tell-Tale Smell

If you use De Miracle it will be impossible for any curious person to know that you have used a hair remover because De Miracle evaporates immediately after accomplishing its work, therefore leaves no odor whatever. On the other hand, if you use any depilatory with a distinctive odor, an offensive, tell-tale smell will cling to your skin for hours.

As Easy To Keep The Hair From Turning Gray As To Keep The Scalp Clean

AND there is no reason in the world why you should hesitate to restore to your hair its lost color and vitality, if it is fading and turning gray, any more than that you should foolishly refuse to use a remedy for dandruff or any other scalp trouble.

Sickness, nervousness, impoverished blood or deficient scalp nutrition may cause premature grayness; sometimes it is inherited. Whatever the cause, gray hair adds from 10 to 20 years to the age, and a young woman, even 25 or 30, with very gray hair is passed as old.

Robinnaire Hair Dye is a pure tonic restorative to bring back to faded or gray hair its own original color and lost beauty. It is not to bleach or change the original color, and should not be confused with such. It is prepared in our own laboratory from a formula we know to be beneficial, and we guarantee it to be non-injurious. It keeps the hair soft, lustrous and in its beautiful, natural color, and as it does not stain the scalp cannot be detected. Prepared for light, medium and dark brown and black hair and is for sale at druggists and toilet goods departments. 75c. By parcel post 83c.

Send us the name of your druggist if he cannot supply you, and we will send you FREE samples of the famous Robinnaire Face Powder and Rose Cold Cream. Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta, Ga.

CONFIDENCE MEN SHOW TARHEEL EASY MONEY

He Goes Home From New York for More Funds and There Learns Something More.

NEW YORK, July 4.—During all the many years that Edward Lee Baxter Davidson had been living in the progressive town of Charlotte, N. C., it was his foolish belief that the only way to make money is to work for it.

Leading about $1,000 in cash and a draft for $10,000 by the right hand, he arrived in this hospitable village on June 24. Four days later he was going to accompany a steamship to the other side.

He registered at the Hotel Martinique, and there met a well-dressed young man.

In the cafe the well-dressed young man was met by a friend who almost tore a pocket in trying to remove an obese roll of yellowbacks in an unostentatious manner.

Easy, Too Easy.

"This is a mere nothing," said the friend, carelessly. "When I see so many really intelligent young men working for money it breaks my weak heart."

That called for an explanation, and it was given. By tapping the wires that carry racing results one could make a fortune in 20 minutes.

After several minutes Davidson at length persuaded the young man to accept a few dollars from him for sample bets. He was successful. He wanted to know more about this road to riches and, on being assured that the more money you put up the more you made, he handed $700 to the well-dressed young man.

Goes Home for Money.

Somehow or other the money was lost, but, said the well-dressed one, Davidson should not be discouraged. He should make a bigger bet.

"Could you use this $10,000 draft?" he asked.

They could, if they knew that Mr. Davidson really had the money. Mr. Davidson replied quickly he could prove that he had by going to his home and getting it. He went back to Charlotte and there opened his heart to Frank Osborne, brother of James W. Osborne, the lawyer, of this city. Frank Osborne, suspicious, instructed Davidson to see James W. This he did and Mr. Osborne took Davidson to Deputy Police Commission Dougherty, who wired Frank Osborne to telegraph to the suspects when they would arrive.

The two tappers were arrested when they met Davidson. The North Carolinan took a liner to Europe.

Davidson Reputed Wealthy.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., July 4.—Baxter Davidson is one of Charlotte's best known men. He is a bachelor somewhat beyond middle age and a capitalist. He is a member of one of North Carolina's most prominent families.

ATHLETIC CLUB TEAM WINNER IN LOCAL MEET

By Innis Brown.

SEVERAL hundred spectators braved the sizzling rays of a July sun at Piedmont Park Friday morning to watch the first field meet pulled off by the Playgrounds Committee of city parks. In one or two of the events they were repaid for their bravery, and the fact that a larger number did not beat a hurried retreat to the waters of Piedmont lake is evidence of the fact that there is real local interest in such athletic events.

A large number of entrants had been registered for the various events. However, the broiling sun, no doubt, caused many of these to change their minds, even after they had reached the scene. This was especially true in the running events, and accounts for the fact that more starters did not toe the mark.

In the 100-yard dash, the opening event, Hill, of the Athletic Club, came home ahead of a good margin. In fact, he held the field well enough in hand to look back over his shoulder as he reached the tape. Brannen, also of the Athletic Club, ran second, and a clubmate, Allen, took third. A large number were carded to go in this race, but all save four or five were scratched.

440 Is Great Race.

The quarter-mile run furnished the best contest of the meet. Four contestants entered, but within the first 100 yards the race had narrowed down to Allen and Locke, both of the Athletic Club. The former reached the finish first by a step, the time being 52 2-5 seconds.

Locke came back in the half-mile event, winning as he pleased. Five men faced the starter, and by the time the first turn was reached Locke had opened up a nice lead, which he improved all the way. He finished 30 yards ahead of the field, without extending himself. Jarvis came in second, with Weaver third.

The running high jump was taken by Walter Robinson, of the Athletic Club, with a jump of five feet five inches. J. M. Beutell, affiliated with the same club, was second, with "Buss" Beutell, unattached, third.

"Buss" Beutell reversed the decision in the running broad jump with a leap of 18 feet 10 inches. Hill was second, and Dubard third.

Ben Montgomery, of the Athletic Club, won the pole vault at 8 feet 9 inches. Buss Beutell finished second in this event, with Blodgett and Sullivan tied for third place.

Walter Dubard had comparatively easy sailing in the shotput. He got 42 feet 6 1-2 inches in one heave of the preliminary. This was enough by more than a foot. West, of the Fifth Regiment, came second with a put of 41 feet 4 inches. Jones scored third with 39 feet 11 inches.

Hugh Mauck ran away with the hammer throw. His best effort was 129 feet. This was more than 33 feet better than his next opponent. MacKinnon scored second best with 105 feet 10 inches. Brannen was third with 100 feet 2 inches.

Sullivan Wins Steeplechase.

The steeplechase was run over a course beginning on the east side of the lake and finishing at the regular mark on the track. It included swimming the neck of the lake near the bridge. Wesley Meyers got away ahead and completed the aquatic performance with a lead of 20 paces. He crossed the green from the lake to the track with such a margin. Sullivan, however, caught him tiring when less than 100 yards from the finish and won by ten paces. Weaver ran third.

A summary of points according to clubs shows the Athletic Club ahead with a total of 44. The Fifth Regiment made second place with 11 points, and S. V. D. scored 8. Winners of the remaining 17 points entered unattached.

The meet was handled by the following officials: J. O. Cochran, referee; J. W. Heisman, judge of finish; Dr. Dan Sage, timer; Joe Bean, clerk of course. Charlie Wahoo, judge of weight contests; Ben Adams, starter; Willis Westmoreland, announcer.

Results:

VETERANS WIN HONORS

Grant-Thornton Cop Georgia Title

GRANT and Thornton, in their prime the greatest double tennis team of all Dixie, demonstrated that they are strong players even now by defeating Mansfield and Smith on the courts of the Piedmont Driving Club Thursday afternoon, 6-4, 11-9, 7-5. The match was started several weeks ago, but was postponed in the second set and was taken up where it was left off.

Grant and Thornton won the opening game yesterday, making the score 8-7 in their favor, but Smith and Mansfield won the next and deuced the set again. Not until a total of twenty games had been played was the set decided.

In the third set after Grant and Thornton had Smith and Mansfieldment now going on at Augusta. 3-1, the latter won the fifth game, and with the score fifteen-forty against them in the sixth pulled up and finally won, tying the score 3 all.

The only time that Smith and Manning led in games during the afternoon was in the third set when they had their opponents 5-4, but Grant and Thornton came strong in the next game, winning it and also the next two, which gave them the game 7-5 and also the match.

Mansfield did some pretty playing. Grant and Thornton directed most of their clouts at him and he handled them well. Grant and Thornton played him almost entirely throughout the match, preferring his returns to the rifle-like shots of Smith.

In the finals in the mixed doubles Miss Stanton and Thornton won by default from Miss Muse and Carter, as Carter is playing in the tournament now going on at Augusta.

DIRECTORS DID NOT ASK SMITH ABOUT PITCHER

Manager Billy's Advice Was Not Sought in Purchase of "Pop-Boy" Smith.

ALTHOUGH Bill Smith, manager of the Crackers, does not know anything about the desire of the local team to get Clarence "Pop Boy" Smith, it is more than probable that the Crackers will have to do without the White Sox hurler.

According to a report from local headquarters Comiskey offered Smith to the Crackers for $2,000, under optional agreement. This was in a night letter Tuesday night. The local club accepted his proposition by wire on Wednesday morning.

Bill Smith, when called up this morning over the phone, said he knew nothing of the deal. This seems to be a queer condition of affairs, as the Cracker manager is usually notified of all deals.

Smith pitched the last four innings of the game against the Tigers on Wednesday, and held that hard-hitting crowd to one hit. This made such an impression that the White Sox decided to call off the trade.

The local club, however, is still after Smith and hopes to land him before the month is over. The Crackers are badly in need of another good twirler right now to help Conzelman, Dent, Price, Musser and Brady.

There is also a rumor going the rounds these days that everything is not running smooth between the local directors and Billy Smith. Smith's ignorance in the White Sox deal can not be accounted for, unless the directors are discouraged with several deals the Cracker manager has pulled off. There is still some talk about the way the local club has been stung in the Dent trade when they turned over $2,000 to Washington for the twirler.

GUNBOAT SMITH WANTS GO WITH GEORGE CARPENTER

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 5.—Gunboat Smith, claimant of the world's title for heavyweight boxers, has challenged George Carpentier, the young French champion of Europe, to a 20-round contest for $5,000 a side in England, France or Belgium. If Carpentier agrees the match probably will be arranged to take place during this summer.

SULLIVAN WINS; AHEARN KNOCKS OUT BARTFIELD

BUFFALO, July 4.—Jack Twin Sullivan outpointed Barney Williams in a fast ten-round bout here last night.

Young Ahearn knocked out Soldier Bartfield in eight rounds.

Tommy Bresnahan drew with Willie Houck.

TURF RACING A LUXURY.

PARIS, July 5.—The average cost of keeping a race horse in France is placed at $1,000 a year. The total training expenses in France, not taking into account the capital invested in the various stables, is placed at $5,600,000. The total of the prizes offered is $3,600,000. Hence the owners support an annual deficit of $2,000,000.

EMPIRE LEAGUE NOTES

Waycross has released Second Baseman Brouthers, who has signed with Americus. He plays the outfield as well as the infield, and while with Waycross led the team at the bat and in base stealing. Internal dissension is given as the reason for his release. He is a clever player and will make good wherever he plays.

While not so well pleased with the start of the season, fans in Waycross are banking on Wild Bill Clark to give Waycross a pennant winning team.

In Chancy the Americus team has an outfielder that is bound to go up. He is a steady hitter, getting two and three hits a day almost as easy as some people eat watermelon. He is fast on his feet, too, and gets many hard chances in right.

By swapping a three-game series to enable Valdosta to play at home next week for a celebration Brunswick will play six straight games in Brunswick this month with Valdosta.

In Griffin, Americus has a first baseman who makes friends wherever he goes. He is always happy—in fact, has a winning smile besides a batting eye.

Few teams in any league boast of as many reliable left-handers as the Valdosta team. Otto Jordan seems to know good men when he sees them from the kind of material his team is made up of, even if the best of them have off days once in a while.

Some idea of the class of baseball that the Empire is capable of might be found in a daily comparison with the scores of the big leagues. There is hardly a bad game played in the Empire but what a worse one is found in a higher league.

Claiming that the Americus team had thirteen men in uniform on the Waycross diamond Wednesday, Waycross has filed a protest for the first game of the double bill. President Groover attended the game and had his attention called to the alleged violation of the 12-player rule.

No one in the Empire circuit any longer doubts that the league will be in existence next year. Plans have already been made in Cordele and one or two other cities for next year's schedule.

Practically every team in the league wants to win the race in the second half, and with this in view are making a number of changes. The race from now on is going to be a keen one and much faster baseball will be seen than ever before in the new league.

"Goat" Holliday, of Atlanta, the Empire's benedict, continues to pull off sensational plays at first. He has made a home in Waycross and can stay here as long as he pleases. "Goat's" wife is at every game to see him play and, needless to say, the youngster does even better than heretofore, which is saying a great deal.

Attendance reports continue to show that fans in the cities of this league will support good baseball. None of the cities expected to make money the first season and yet it is stated on good authority that more than one city is well ahead of the game financially and hopes to finish the season with a neat pile in the treasury. All of which sounds good for next year's season.

FRED TONEY IS LET OUT; BACK TO LOUISVILLE CLUB

CHICAGO, ILL., July 4.—Fred Toney, heavyweight pitcher of the Cub team, was given notice of his release to the Louisville team of the American Association. The big fellow never was much of a big league success, though pitching a fair sort of game now and then.

This release brings the Cubs down to the limit of twenty-five players.

Carter Plays Ramspeck in Finals

AUGUSTA, July 4.—The ladies' tennis championship was won here Thursday by Mrs. Johnson after three terrific sets, by a score of 7-9, 6-2, 6-3. Miss Adger's forehand drive is one that would do credit to anyone, either man or woman, and it was on the strength of this drive that she won the first set. Mrs Johnson won the rest on her ability to cover her court and her placing.

The men's singles were carried through the semi-finals, the survivors being E. V. Carter, Jr., of Atlanta, ex-South Atlantic champion, and Carl Ramspeck, also of Atlanta and also an ex-South Atlantic States champion.

The final between these two will be played off this afternoon about 6 o'clock, and should prove one of the prettiest matches ever seen in Augusta. These two have met once before in Augusta, the event being the challenge round two years ago, when Ramspeck was champion and Carter challenger. Carter won on this occasion in straight sets on a rather wet court.

The results in the men's doubles were as follows:

First Round—Erwin brothers defeated Phinizy and Ridgeley, 6-2, 6-4.

Second Round—A. Capers and M. Kennedy defeated Ferris and Brand, 6-2, 5-7, 6-2. Hall and Parks won by default from Brinson and Branch. Waring brothers defeated Carter and Griffith, 6-3, 6-4. R. Capers and Mikell won by default from White and Bredenberg. Marrett and Gary defeated Hester and Wall, 6-4, 5-7, 6-2.

Third Round—Waring brothers defeated Hall and Parks, 6-1, 6-3, and by winning get a place in the semi-final in the top half.

The following are the results of the matches played in the consolation singles:

Second Round—Crockerson defeated Roseboro by default. Matthews defeated Harper, 6-2, 6-3. Capers defeated Wright, 6-4, 6-4. Stulb defeated Berkmire, 6-2, 6-4. Roseman defeated Sheridan, 6-1, 6-1.

The results of the mixed doubles matches are as follows:

First Round—Mrs. Milam and Reynolds defeated Miss Emily Thomas and J. K. Orr, Jr., 3-6, 6-4, 7-5. Mrs. Johnson and G. W. Waring defeated Miss Thorn and Ramspeck, 6-0, 6-1.

LOOKS BRIGHT ONCE MORE FOR CRACKER CLUB

Their Fourth Straight Victory Is One Fine Ball Game—Pennant Hopes Revive.

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE Crackers came home from their road trip looking like pennant winners. They went crazy with the stick, ran bases at will and played errorless ball.

No team has looked better here this year.

Of course any hyper-enthusiasm can be discounted two ways, to wit:

First Way—The Crackers have looked like pennant winners a score of times this season—and the next day it rained. You get the idea?

Second Way—The local team was playing against one of Dixie's saddest little teams, the puny Pelicans.

BUT after you've discounted all the notes of gloom and after you've made due allowances for everything, the Crackers still keep right on looking like a million dollars.

They not only won Thursday's game against the Pelicans, 9 to 0, but just previous to that they had won two from the league-leading Gulls and one from the powerful Billiken club. Also they just managed to lose the semi-final Billiken game by one run and a miracle.

Price pitched a positively bully game yesterday. The Crackers hammered Walker clean sideways, and the whole affair was fine.

There wasn't a sad note struck until after the game, when the current gave out and left most of the baseball cars stranded, half-way between Ponce De Leon and Atlanta. It must have clouded up out at Bull Sluice or sprinkled in Marietta.

THURSDAY'S game was illuminated by some of the most brilliant fielding that good old Ponce De Leon ever saw. The star performance by an infielder was made by McDowell. In the third, with Price on first (and he got there with hits three out of his four times up), Welchonce grounded briskly about ten feet to the right of second base. McDowell went for it, reached out, caught the ball, fell down and threw to second, all with one motion. Price was forced and McDowell sprawled all over the ground, with the ringing cheers of the Atlanta spectators in his ears.

Tommy Long absolutely discounted that. In the ninth Spencer hit a low fly to right field. It sailed, almost on a line, right smack to the right field sign boards—which are deep as the bottomless pit. How Tommy Long got back there nobody knew, but he did, made a terrific leap and plucked the pill right off the sign board. He came down all spraddled and it was not until he climbed back on his feet that the spectators realized he had held the ball.

WHEN the game was over Charley Frank strolled out to his limousine (oh, yes, he rides in 'em now) grinning. It was too awful to worry about. And surely the Pelicans would be any man's idea of nothing on earth to worry about. It's a great team, but it isn't synchronized. Nothing comes off right. They hit—but nobody is on. They cover bases—but somebody has just covered it for them. They run bases—but arrive too late. They field brilliantly at odd times—but bobble in the pinches.

However, Charley Frank may wake them up yet. He has several players on the team—and up to the time he hooked up with Cleveland he was mighty resourceful about getting players when he needed them.

CHANGES IN COLUMBUS TEAM; KREBS IS RELEASED

COLUMBUS, GA., July 4.—Changes in the line-up of the Columbus baseball team have come thick and fast in the past few days and as a result the Foxes are now claimed to be stronger than they have been at any time in recent years.

Krebs, principal backstop for Columbus for several years past, has been released outright and has joined the Jackson team. Dick Moore, who has been playing second, has been benched, and Keating is holding down the keystone bag. Connie Lewis, an old-time favorite, has joined the team again, while Morrow has been traded to Albany for Brooks.

CAPONI, EASY WINNER, FOULS FREDDIE HICKS

WINNIPEG, MANITOBA, July 4.—After going six full rounds, Freddie Hicks, of Detroit, received an unintentional foul blow from Tony Caponi, of Chicago, which put a stop to their scheduled twelve-round bout here. Caponi outfought and outpointed Hicks at almost every stage of the game. Hicks only getting a shade in the second round.

Caponi almost floored his opponent in the first round, Hicks being forced to one knee.

CARL MORRIS BATTLES JACK GEYER TO DRAW

DENVER, COLO., July 4.—Carl Morris, of Oklahoma, and Jack Geyer, of Denver, heavyweights, fought ten rounds to a draw last night.

DROME RACES TO-NIGHT WILL BE HANDICAPS

TO make things interesting in to-night's races it has been agreed to handicap Jock McNeil and "Tex" Richards a quarter of a lap in all preliminary heats and a half-lap in all final heats. This is about the margin by which these two speedsters have been winning and it ought to make the races very close.

Preparations are being made to handle an extra large crowd to-night because of the fact that it is a holiday and that the sport lovers of the city will naturally want to top off a big day by seeing the one sporting event of the night—the motor-drome races.

The amateur races will start at 8:10. Jock McNeil will ride his mile against the track record at 8:27. The regular program will begin at 8:30.

Cars will leave Five Points at brief intervals.

Here is the program:

ENDURANCE TO DECIDE TITLE GO ANDERSON-CROSS BOUT A SLUGFEST

By Paul Armstrong.
(Famous Playwright and Fight Expert.)

LOS ANGELES, July 4.—Bud Anderson, who is to fight Leach Cross this afternoon, has been put out but once. Once and only once has he known what it means to be dropped for true. But he got it good once and that was from a horse.

Forty-some times has Anderson been matched against men, most of them demanding catch weights and taking a shade anywhere from 10 to 50 pounds, but nobody has ever done as well as the horse.

For two years, which about covers his career as a professional boxer, Bud has won about half his bouts with a knock-out, and the rest, barring a draw or two, were his on decisions. Knock-out Brown, with a wild, desperate swing, dropped and dazed him just enough to win for himself a draw, but what a lacing Brown did get next time to repay for that one swing.

George Memsic was the original discoverer of Anderson. Memsic had fought them all and, beginning to show the ravages of time and hard usage, he went hunting local favorites.

Memsic Unearthed Anderson.

The local favorite of a small but boisterous burg was Tommy Ryan's game. He wrote that stuff. The boisterous burg, once it has a favorite, will turn out to a man and bet some coin that "their boy" can at least stay with those old-timers. Ryan got rich hunting up those spots. Not so with Memsic. He started badly. He picked Anderson. On his return he called to witness and declared that this Bud Anderson had hit him harder than ever he had been hit before in his whole life. He did not know where the punch came from; he did not care.

All he wished to do was to warn people against Anderson. Of course that made Bud's road a little rougher.

And now for one minute let us toy with eugenics again. Anderson represents the last word in rearing for the rugged game. In the woods or breaking horses he has been working at rough labor all his life. Perched on a stage coach in his youth with four half-wild horses and a mountain road before him his eyes and nerves were tested to the limit. Later, when he took up the fighting game he got them at all weights and with murder in their eye. None of the mob he waded through to recognition had a bank account and frequently the little purse they fought for meant all there was in sight.

Bud Never Refused Match.

They did not mind being hurt. They did not know when they were hurt. One has only to see the left guard that Anderson has developed to know that at some time men have swung at him with all they had in the hope of finishing him then and there. But as Anderson once sat still and cold as chilled steel guiding wild horses down a mountain road, so he timed their frantic efforts at his undoing. One by one he dropped them, and asked that better men come. Never has he refused a match, never has he picked. He is a real contender for the championship and every living lightweight knows it and knows it well.

Anderson has a perfect left hand, hits straight and knows how to hook. He has got a right which will drop any middleweight if he lands it fair.

But will he beat Cross? Ah, now we come to it. Buddie is short on experience. He has never fought as smart a man as Cross in his life. It's a certainty that Leach will show him many a trick.

Facts Concerning To-day's Big Fights

RITCHIE-RIVERS—Favorite, Ritchie. Odds, 10 to 7. Weight, 134 pounds. Number of rounds scheduled, 20. Arena, San Francisco.

CROSS - ANDERSON — Favorite, Anderson. Odds, 10 to 8. Weight, 133 pounds. Number of rounds scheduled, 20. Arena, Los Angeles.

BRITTON-WHITE—Betting even. Weight, Britton, about 133; White, about 127. Number of rounds scheduled, 20. Arena, New Orleans.

FERNS-DENNY—Favorite, Ferns, 10 to 9. Weight, 145 pounds. Number of rounds scheduled, 10. Arena, New Orleans.

WHITNEY-THOMAS—Betting even. Weight, 133 pounds. Number of rounds scheduled, 10. Arena, New Orleans.

BRITTON AND WHITE READY FOR BATTLE

NEW ORLEANS, July 4.—Jack Britton and Charley White are in great condition for their 20-round battle here to-day. Even money prevails with the betting contingent and thousands of dollars will change hands on the award of the referee.

White's two great victories, both knock-outs, over Joe Thomas have made him a great card here. Two weeks ago he ruled a 10 to 8 favorite. But those who have witnessed the clever Britton in action of late have spread wondrous reports about him. As a result, it is even money and take your pick this morning.

The White men figure that he may be outpointed in the early rounds, but that his stamina and great punch will surely wear Britton down in the last seven or eight rounds. Many of the White followers believe that Charley will win by a knock-out.

Britton is verily figuring on outpointing his opponent. He has been training for speed alone, and in his final work-out of four rounds yesterday he was as fast as lightning.

THOMAS VS. WHITNEY; FERNS MEETS DENNY

NEW ORLEANS, July 4.—There are two corking 10-round bouts to be staged at Joe Golden's Club to-day. In one of them Frank Whitney, of Cedar Rapids, meets Joe Thomas, of New Orleans. In the other, Young Denny, of New Orleans, mixes with Wildcat Ferns, of Chicago.

Whitney and Thomas are expected to put up a swell fight. These boys fought in Atlanta last winter. The decision was a draw. Many thought Thomas had the shade, while others figured that Whitney had proved to be the better man. To-day they will settle once and for all which is the superior boxer. The betting on the outcome is at evens.

Denny has been making a wonderful showing in New Orleans. But the fact that Ferns is the harder hitter and the veteran 10 to 9 are the odds offered, with Wildcat on the short end.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 4.—In the case of the Ritchie-Rivers contest proving a long-drawn-out affair, which of the lightweights is the more likely to retain his fighting strength?

This is one of the questions undergoing discussion on the eve of the battle, and it is a very important one. Moreover, it is a hard one to answer.

When two pugilists are to meet at a certain weight, the average student tries to discover which of the pair will find it easier reaching the notch.

Every old trainer knows that a fighter is apt to lose several pounds during a trying bout, and a wise betting man must keep this in view. It is to his interest to know which of the pugilists is likely to be the more seriously affected by the sloughing off of poundage in the ring.

Weight Surely Favors Rivers.

Right off the reel one would say that Rivers is the one less likely to become weak if the contest is waged at a fast pace and goes over the fifteen-round mark. He is a pudgy fellow, and, while he has had to work to make 134 pounds, it is certain that he can box at 125 pounds if occasion demands it. This means that if Rivers loses a few pounds while battling with Ritchie, no inroads will have been made on his strength.

It may be, as it was with Ad Wolgast in his first match with Tommy Murphy, Rivers, while growing lighter, may simply be fighting himself into better condition.

Now, in the ordinary course of things one could not imagine Willie Ritchie as losing weight to his advantage while a mill was in progress. The champion is a heavy lightweight. This is shown by the fact that he demanded that the notch for the coming mill be fixed at a pound above the lightweight scale.

Came Down From 154 Pounds.

Billy Nolan says that Ritchie weighed fully 154 pounds when he began training for his championship match with Ad Wolgast. This gives an idea of what a big fellow Ritchie is "walking about."

Of course, he did not weigh anything like that when he went into camp for the present match. He had learned his lesson, and by keeping himself actively engaged during his six months of theatrical work he held himself around the 140-pound mark.

But, irrespective of what he weighed when starting out on the present training spell, Ritchie will be pretty well dried out and as lean as any one of Pharaoh's kine when he steps into the ring to-day. He will have nothing to come and go on, as is the case with Rivers.

Now, if this were an infallible line of reasoning, Ritchie's friends would have to admit that the longer the fight continued the bluer would become the outlook for Willie Ritchie. But it is not infallible.

All Depends on Endurance.

There is such a difference in ringmen that what would prove a serious disadvantage to one would mean little or no detriment to another.

And it all hinges on that innate quality—ENDURANCE.

BILLIKINS, 7; VOLS, 2.

BALL PARK, NASHVILLE, TENN., July 4.—Montgomery took the morning game from the Vols in easy fashion, 7 to 2, driving More from the rubber in the fifth. Williams checked the heavy scoring. The game came near ending in a riot when the entire Montgomery team began to crab over a decision at third, a fight between Manager Dobbs and Umpire Stockdale being third. A fight between Manager narrowly averted.

Case humbled his former pals, holding the Vols to five widely scattered hits. The Vols played a listless game.

ZIMMERMAN GETS PRIZE; GOOD FOR TWO WEEKS

CHICAGO, July 4.—Heine Zimmerman, the pugnacious third sacker of the Cubs, is $100 richer to-day because he has not sassed, assaulted or assassinated even one umpire in two whole weeks.

A fortnight ago a Cub fan promised Zimmerman $100 if he would remain on his good behavior for two weeks and not be chased from the game for "run ins" with arbitrators. Heine has been a very nice young man for the past two weeks, but yesterday—the last day of the time limit—he almost forgot about the $100 when he was called out at home on a close play.

"DOYLE HITTING, GIANTS UNBEATABLE"—STALLINGS

NEW YORK, July 4.—"Larry Doyle has recovered his old form and that is why the Giants are now leading the National League," said George Stallings, manager of the Boston Braves, to-day. "Until recently Doyle was unable to hit with his usual vigor and the Giants were losing games. But they braced the moment Larry's bat began to meet the ball successfully. He is the king pin of the New York team, and now that he is himself McGraw's men can not be headed off.

BOXING
News of the Ring Game

Quite a number of big fights will be held throughout the country on the Glorious Fourth. The most important are the Ritchie-Rivers; Britton-White and Anderson-Cross affairs. All are scheduled to go 20 rounds.

* * *

Bud Anderson, who is one of the sensations of the season and who has put a stop to a number of good boxers, might also spring a surprise on Cross. The latter, though, has the advantage of being an exceedingly heavy hitter as well as a great ring general.

* * *

It would not be much of a surprise if the fans would wake up on the fifth and discover a new lightweight champion in the person of Joe Rivers.

* * *

Local fans are showing much interest in the Whitney-Thomas bout at New Orleans to-day. Both boys have fought here and have a large following. They are billed to go

Light Brahmas Are The Largest Fowls In Poultry Breeding

Judge F. J. Marshall: Which are the largest breeds of chickens in their respective order as to size, feathered on non-feathered legs, and where can some be procured of pure breed; the largest variety of game chickens, color and where obtainable of pure breed?

Blue Ridge, Ga. H. W. B.

Reply—The largest chicken bred and recognized in the Standard of Perfection (the guide to all thoroughbred poultry breeding) is the Light Brahmas; weights are, cocks, 12 pounds; cockerels, 10 pounds; hens, 9 1-2 pounds, and pullets, 8 pounds. They have pea combs and feathered shanks. Their body color is white with a black stripe down the center on each feather on the neck, and black tails. Inside of wings black not showing on the surface when the wing is folded. The next range in size comes these varieties, all of the same weight: Dark Brahmas, Black, White, Buff and Partridge Cochins; the weights being just one pound lighter than the Light Brahmas all through. All feathered-leg varieties, the Dark Brahmas are the same in characteristics as the Lights. The color is a black penciling on a gray ground color, the penciling being very narrow and conforming to the edge of the feathers in shape. The male has a black tail. The female's tail is black, except the two top feathers, which are penciled. Cochins are next in size; weight, 11 pounds; cockerels, 9 pounds; hens, 8 1-2 pounds, and pullets, 7 pounds. Cochins are noted for their extreme full feathering and very short legs, which make them appear to be almost one big, fluffy ball of soft feathers from head to toes. The general outline might be described as round, being short from head to tail, with high rounded back in female and full back in male; tails very short; in fact, the tail of the female scarcely shows at all. They are bred in four varieties, Buff, Black, White and Partridge. In form of penciling the Partridge is the same as the Dark Brahma, but the color of the penciling is dark brown on a surface of mahogany red. The Brahmas and Cochins are all feathered-legged varieties, the Cochins being much more profuse than the Brahmas. The Cochin has a small single comb. The next in size are the Orpingtons, Buff, Black and White, all smooth-shanked varieties. Weights are, cocks, 10 pounds; cockerels, 8 1-2 pounds; hens, 8 pounds; pullets, 7 pounds. Comb, single, of medium size and five points. In shape the Orpingtons are rather shorter than the Plymouth Rocks, but not so blocky as the Wyandotte; legs rather large and stocky. The skin and flesh are white, as is the case with all fowls of English origin and make-up. The Buffs should be clear buff throughout, the Blacks solid black, and the Whites solid white. The buffs have a tendency to throw some black in tails, so when a little of it shows up there it should not be considered an impurity of blood. Breeders of these varieties should advertise in The Georgian.

July the Month to Get Most for Your Money Buying Good Stock

For those who are striving to be economical in their outlay for good stock July is the month of the year in which to get the most for their money purchasing good breeding stock. Any one who is regularly in the business has before this time hatched all the young stock he can handle and as a rule has not the room to carry over all his breeding stock, and for the sake of making them move off lively will offer them at a greatly reduced price. A few dollars invested at this time with some good breeder for a pen of first-class chickens would be money well placed. True, you would have to carry them through the molt, but that does not begin to offset the big reduction secured. A pen of chickens bought now and fed lightly for a month and the feed increased after that time should soon come into laying, and with judicious management a few fall chickens could be raised and still have the parent stock ready for early spring business. This is not a theory of ours, it is a custom of many of the best poultry people all over the country, and beneficial to both buyer and seller.

In your endeavors to make a purchase of this character be sure you strike some one who really has a surplus he does not wish to carry over, and for that reason will let them go for a sacrifice. A few hundreds of dollars invested in this way by the farmers of the South at this time to get good stock with which to supplant their scrubs would mean thousands of dollars to them during the next twelve months.

We only wish each and every one could see it as we have seen it tried, time and again in our experience in traveling over the country, and how we have been told by those who had made the experiment, as they called it, of the increased profits they had derived by handling first-class, thoroughbred poultry. So well satisfied are they that they could not be hired to go back to the old plan of the "scrub is good enough for me."

There is no experiment about it, it is a business proposition.

Medium-Sized Acreage Tracts

ALL of us know the profit that is usually made from acreage. It is almost a conceded fact that if a person owns good acreage, he has a sure profit in it sooner or later. When we think of acreage propositions, we think of lots of land, and naturally lots of money, because the usual acreage transaction involves a great deal of money. The demand for good, close-in acreage for subdivision purposes is increasing every day. A trip to the outskirts of the city in any direction you choose to take will convince you of this fact. We are going to offer a tract of about 100 acres, between Decatur and East Lake, which we have cut up into five, ten and fifteen acre tracts. The price and terms on these tracts make it possible for almost anybody to handle them.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Park Community To Cost $150,000

Twenty West Peachtree Cottages. To Sell James Home—University Club Plans—Aragon Hotel Offer.

A park community plan which will involve the expenditure of probably $150,000 and revolutionize a section of West Peachtree has been evolved by Lavender Ray, owner of considerable property on West Fourteenth and West Peachtree. Mr. Ray will utilize the depressed northeast corner of West Peachtree and West Fourteenth Streets for a handsome three-story apartment house and erect 20 artistic cottages for young married couples in a park space which he owns between West Fourteenth and West Fifteenth Streets, with frontage on West Peachtree.

"I hope to build the apartment house for $25,000, although it may cost more," declared Mr. Ray in speaking of his plans, "and to spend an average of $4,000 to $5,000 on the cottages. A handsome colonnade will extend over the West Peachtree entrance and the colonnade effect will be carried out through the string of ten cottages on either side, with portecochere effects between the dwellings. The trees will make it possible to provide a little park and playground for children.

"I hope to provide a restaurant where all couples can get their meals, and to supply all the cottages with heat from a central heating plant, possibly from the apartment house. The dwellings will be uniform in size and architecture."

Mr. Ray has drawn rough plans for the colonnade and will soon begin sketches for the dwellings. His frontage on West Peachtree is 175 feet and the depth between the other streets 572 feet. He expects to cut a street like Grant Place through the center of the property, to be 50 feet wide at the front and 40 feet wide at the other extremity. Attractive alleyways will be provided for automobiles and other conveyances behind the cottages, and entrance can also be effected through the rear.

The West Peachtree frontage for the apartment is 100 feet, and the frontage on Fourteenth Street is 118 feet.

To Sell Peachtree Home.

John H. James, the well-known banker and real estate operator, has placed on private sale his former home place at 314 Peachtree, on the west side of the street between Porter Place and Baker Street, and just south of the old J. Scott Todd lot. This property was bought by Mr. James fifteen years ago for $7,000, or at the rate of a little less than $130 a foot. The two-story frame home cost him about the same amount. To-day property in this block is held at $1,500 to $1,600 a foot, which would make the 54 by 175-foot lot worth $81,000 to $86,400. The dwelling is now rented as a boarding house.

Mr. James is also the owner of the property at 135 Whitehall Street, on which is located the Martin & Knott Furniture Company. This is on the west side of the street just north of Trinity Avenue. Mr. James bought it a number of years ago for about $15,000, and to-day holds it at $50,000. He is not yet ready to sell this parcel, however.

University Club Plans.

Hal F. Hentz, of the firm of Hentz & Reid, architects, has been put to work on plans a new University Club home, and is expected to complete a tentative sketch shortly. The University Club has under consideration a building in the neighborhood of the Aragon Hotel, which will be extensively remodeled if the plans of the executive committee are carried out. It is planned to install shower baths, a swimming pool, a gymnasium for light exercises, lockers, etc., and to take the building on a lease.

Members of the club are desirous of obtaining a location close to Five Points, and for this reason nothing has been considered seriously north of Baker Street. Among places mentioned have been the J. R. Hopkins home at the southeast corner of Baker and Peachtree, the former home of Charles E. Sciple at the northwest corner of Kimball and Cypress Streets, and the Joseph Rhodes Building back of the Winecoff Hotel, on West Ellis Street.

The University Club must vacate the old Abbott home in October, and on account of the short space of time the executive committee have gone ahead with preparations to move.

Offer on Aragon Hotel.

It has been learned on good authority that an offer was refused the other day on the Aragon Hotel property, the owners declining to name any price. This is the property that a would-be purchaser offered several years ago to cover with dollars, and was told by the late George W. Collier that he could get a warranty deed if he would put the coins on edge. The new prospects were not even given this opportunity.

The Aragon is under lease to the Harrels for hotel purposes.

Job Still Unfinished.

Although the impression has gone abroad that Peachtree Road paving has been completed from Buckhead to the DeKalb County line, property owners north of William S. Witham's deny it in positive terms. They declare that the bulk of the convicts have been transferred to Peachtree work south of Buckhead and that only a handful are left on the other job. The said property owners have been placated, however, through circumstances. Whereas the outlying work has not been completed, the closer-in job is getting good attention.

The convicts, by the way, are taking a rest until the Fourth of July has passed.

Railroad Rumblings Heard.

Where is the railroad "lightning" going to strike on the West Side? A hundred property owners would like to know, since their land will jump far above what they paid for it. "I have a large tract on the West Side," declared a young business man Thursday, "and I would give a good deal to know if any railroads are coming through my property."

One of the best posted real estate men in the city declared that something big was going on and he couldn't find it out. "They haven't let me on to it," he said, "but I expect to get in before they are through. I have had some quiet offers on my property, but I have not set any price. My tip is to watch Walton Street. I believe a spur track will run up this thoroughfare before long and I shouldn't be surprised if the Seaboard will use it. The Seaboard is dependent on the N., C. and St. L., and through it, the L. and N., for both its freight and passenger terminals in Atlanta, and I believe is figuring on an arrangement of its own. I expect them to build both passenger and freight depots on the West Side."

Plans for running a connection between the Southern and the A., B. and A. near Mangum Street, and for putting a spur track adjacent to property of Judge E. C. Kontz and Philip Weltner for manufacturing purposes have already been told. That there is something else in the nature of a big surprise, however, is the belief of many, and the railroads are being watched closely.

Twelfth Story on Skyscraper.

Workmen are now ready to put the steel on the twelfth story of the Healey Building. Having placed the girders on the tenth floor, they are going two higher. The Healy Building now towers above the Grant Building and will soon surpass the Empire.

To Sell Lots at Auction.

Five lots and a six-room house at the corner of Park Avenue and Bryant Street, Grant Park section, will be sold July 9 by William A. Vernoy.

Ansley Park Buy.

Harry L. Waters has bought from A. C. Woolley a California bungalow on a 50 by 240-foot lot at 85 East Park Lane, Ansley Park, for $7,500. The deal was handled through W. L. & John O. DuPree.

Demand for Apartment Houses.

Atlanta continues to be a good market for apartment houses. Although a number are constantly building, there seems to be little trouble disposing of them at good prices. Cordial interest accordingly centered around the transfer of the Byron on West Peachtree, near Linden, from Byron Souders to I. P. Bradley, of Newnan, at $150,000. This was in the nature of a swap, Mr. Bradley putting in a Coweta County farm, besides assuming a loan of $40,000 placed June 30 through the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company, and giving notes for most of the difference.

The property is 84 by 200 feet and adjoins a 100-foot parcel which Mr. Souders owns at the southwest corner of Linden and West Peachtree and which was the old Bewick place.

The Byron contains eighteen apartments and rents for $15,000 a year. It is distinctive in the possession of grotesque masks with which the front pillars are studded. Mr. Souders got these from a cast made by a local artist, and he introduced many other innovations picked up here and there.

Remodeling Eiseman Store.

The Eiseman Brothers' Company has begun making alterations on its store at 11, 13, 15 and 17 Whitehall, the same to cost about $4,000. The front stairway is being closed up and will be placed toward the rear, and more attractive show windows are being built. The Krueger Manufacturing Company has the contract. Business is going on as usual.

Prominent Atlantans Buy.

A. V. Gude, Jr., J. R. Moore, A. A. and Joseph Doonan, Lee M. Jordan, John J. Lynch, Joel Hunter and Chas. S. Kingsbery have bought a batch of ten large building lots in Cobb County just over the Chattahoochee River and on the river car line. The seller was the L. P. Grant estate, and the aggregate consideration $6,000. Mr. Lynch and Mr. Hunter bought two each and the others one each.

The lots are 100 by 400 feet, in the neighborhood of the residences of Howard Matthews, Sid Mitchell and others. A road through them is due to be paved soon.

Exchange Completed.

Details of the recent exchange of properties between Dr. M. A. Massoud and Jonathan B. Frost have been announced. Mr. Frost takes the S. Y. Tupper place at the northeast corner of West Peachtree and North Avenue for $44,000 and gives as part payment 209 Washington Street, formerly the Massoud home, at $25,000, and a vacant lot on the northeast side of Marietta Street, near Pine Street, at $6,000, and assumes the difference.

The Tupper corner is 68 feet on West Peachtree Street and 84 feet on North Avenue. It has been occupied lately by a fraternity house with a chapter at Tech. The lot netted Dr. Massoud $14,000 in three months.

Why Some Influential Bankers Fight the New Currency Bill Secretly, but Bitterly

Some eminent bankers in private conversation object to the Government control of the new currency system in the same angry and intolerant spirit that the railroad men denounced the creation of the Interstate Commerce Commission to supervise their operations in 1887. And yet so greatly has the idea of the supervision of the railroads by a Government board sitting at Washington grown in the popular mind, and SO GREATLY HAVE THE RAILROADS PROSPERED UNDER THIS LAW since 1887, that the only changes since asked by the people have been to strengthen the law and to enlarge the powers of the commission. And the chief desire of the railroads now is TO GET UNDER THE PROTECTION OF THE NATIONAL BOARD to escape from the tyrannies and operations of various State boards.

The bankers of the United States will have to accept the idea of Government control of the new currency system because the power to issue $500,000,000 of emergency notes to prevent panics and to maintain a more stable rate of interest throughout the country is too great a power to vest in the uncontrolled discretion of private citizens.

PRIVATE credit is left where it belongs under the new system, exclusively the concern of the PRIVATE banker. The use of PUBLIC credit is reserved to the nation. The Government can not interfere with any national bank in its ordinary operations any more under the new system than under the old. It can not force any bank either to grant or to refuse credit to any individual; it can not force any bank to discount a single note. It leaves every bank's relations with its own customers unchanged and unaffected.

The Government takes added cognizance only of the twelve Reserve Banks, but these are to be managed by local directors, two-thirds of whom will always be chosen by their own stockholders—the banks—so that in all ordinary operations the banks will be as closely managed by the bankers, without interference by the Government, as the railroads are now managed by railroad men without unwarranted interference by the Government.

The greatest opposition to the proposed law will come CHIEFLY FROM THOSE BANKS AND BANKERS THAT HAVE BEEN MOST ACTIVE IN THE PAST IN CONTROLLING THE RESERVES OF THE BANKS, THE PROMOTION AND FLOTATION OF NEW TRUSTS OR CORPORATIONS, AND THE CREDIT OF LARGE BORROWERS.

How completely this control has been concentrated in a few private hands of late years we shall now show by three highest expert authorities—first, by President George M. Reynolds, of the Continental and Commercial National Bank of Chicago. This bank, in its holding of the deposits of other banks, is the largest in the United States. In an address before the National Business Congress in Chicago, on December 12, 1911, Mr. Reynolds said:

"THE MONEY POWER OF THE COUNTRY NOW LIES IN THE HANDS OF A DOZEN MEN. I PLEAD GUILTY TO BEING IN THE LAST ANALYSIS ONE OF THESE MEN. . . FOUR OR FIVE BANKERS IN NEW YORK, TWO OR THREE IN CHICAGO, TWO OR THREE IN ST. LOUIS, CAN CONTROL THE QUESTION OF WHETHER LARGE LOANS SHALL BE MADE TO BANKING CORRESPONDENTS THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY."

The late J. P. Morgan and his most intimate banker associate, George F. Baker, of the First National, testifying before the Pujo Committee last winter, admitted almost as great concentration of money-power as that described by Mr. Reynolds. But both vehemently denied the existence of a "Money Trust," because, they said in substance, these enormous reserves of other banks were concentrated in such vast heaps under the control of Mr. Morgan, Mr. Baker and their associates only because the owners of the money trusted these bankers, in their integrity and prudence, and FOUND BY EXPERIENCE THAT THE MONEY WAS USED PROFITABLY TO ITS OWNERS. The other banks could withdraw the funds at will. There was no agreement, and no compulsion, and therefore no "Money Trust." Everything was entirely voluntary, legal, regular.

Mr. Baker admitted that the "concentration of capital had gone pretty far—probably far enough," and that "in the hands of bad men it would be extremely dangerous." But he added in effect that only great and good men could retain the confidence of bankers in such degree as to be intrusted with such power by other bankers voluntarily.

Without such concentrations of both credit and capital the vast underwritings and the extraordinary overcapitalization of many trusts which the country has witnessed would be impossible.

Undoubtedly these eminent bankers who have been and still are in control of credit have handled all the money intrusted to them PRUDENTLY AND PROFITABLY FOR THE OWNERS OF THE MONEY. But how have their operations affected the public interest?

In the coffee valorization scheme, in the manipulation of the Coal roads, in the making of the Steel Corporation, the small deposits of millions of Americans, through the banks, were used by these Masters of Credit to create overcapitalized companies, to distribute watered stock to the public, and to raise prices of necessaries of life to consumers.

The people's money has thus been used against themselves by the very trustees to whom the public and private credit was temporarily intrusted.

The operation is very profitable—to the trustees. We shall take, also from official sources, the testimony of bankers before the Stanley Investigating Committee, only a single instance to show how profitable the underwriting by syndicates of new trusts sometimes is. The instance is the launching of the largest of all the trusts in which Mr. Morgan was the chief, and Mr. Baker and, we believe, Mr. Reynolds were among his principal associates.

The United States Steel Underwriting Syndicate was for two hundred millions and it floated more than FOURTEEN HUNDRED MILLIONS OF SECURITIES. Only one call for $25,000,000, or 12½ per cent, was made on the underwriting syndicate. For that it received 649,988 shares of preferred and a similar amount of common stock. This stock was sold to the public through the Stock Exchange at an average price of about 44 for the common and 94 for the preferred, netting the syndicate $90,500,000. Expenses of the syndicate totaled $3,000,000, thereby involving $28,000,000 actual cash. Deducting the latter amount from $90,500,000, there remains $62,500,000 representing the profits of the syndicate.

Of that amount J. P. Morgan & Co., as managers, received $12,500,000, and the underwriters the remaining $50,000,000. There were paid four cash dividends of $10,000,000 each, which were paid to the syndicate members, and a final dividend of $6,000,000, a total of $46,000,000. The remaining $4,000,000 was subscribed to a second syndicate organized for the purpose of converting preferred stock into bonds, and the underwriters also made a profit on this transaction.

Simultaneously with the sale of this stock to the public, the prices of iron and steel in all their manifold forms were advanced all along the line, so that the Steel Corporation would show large earnings and its stock be made salable to the public at enhanced prices.

It is not from any doubt of the splendid ability or the financial integrity of the men who did this thing, and countless other things of the same kind, that the people of the United States refuse to put all their banks and credit, and the issue of "emergency currency," under the uncontrolled discretion of private bankers, however powerful, experienced or sagacious they may be.

THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES DO NOT WANT GOVERNMENT BY BANKERS OR BY THE MONEY POWER. THEY WANT GOVERNMENT BY THE GOVERNMENT IN THE INTERESTS OF THE WHOLE PEOPLE.

We Should Worry To-day!

This Astonishing Fourth of July at Gettysburg

This is indeed a glorious Fourth of July! The Republic of heroic reminiscence is massed to-day at Gettysburg.

It is not easy for the times about us to grasp the idea of Gettysburg.

It is difficult for this metropolis of the New South—this vast composite of North and South, East and West, of all races and of every creed—busy, practical, prosperous and peaceful—to comprehend the fact that fifty years ago the Americans north of the Potomac and the Americans south of the Potomac, with their bloody hands at each other's throats, were grappling at Gettysburg in the great decisive battle of a long and bloody war.

Ninety thousand Americans under Meade met seventy thousand Americans under Lee in the climax of the ferocious argument over State's Rights and Federal sovereignty, and when they parted at the foot of Cemetery Ridge, fifty thousand Americans, dead or wounded upon the three days' battlefield, made up the appalling holocaust offered upon the altar of a conflicting theory of government which was no more settled by the bloody sacrifice than when the first gun was fired at Sumter in 1861.

Two years later Ulysses Grant at Appomattox wrote with his sword in the final terms of surrender an affirmative recognition of both sides.

And to-day the citizens of Massachusetts resent as jealously an infringement of the Rights of the States as the people of Georgia appeal in emergency to the Power of the Federal Government!

Thousands of survivors of these one hundred and sixty thousand soldiers—survivors and their children—are gathered in joyous reunion at Gettysburg to-day. And the flag of their fathers—serene and splendid—floats over the survivors of Meade and the survivors of Lee—aged and gray or honored and gay, "in mutual well beseeming ranks marching all one way," toward the sunset of life which leaves the indestructible Republic united and glorious in the zenith of its power and its fame.

There will be a thousand vivid reminiscences and a thousand noble lessons taught above the hero sod of Gettysburg today. It is no longer the Confederacy's "Field of Grief," but a great nation's mighty Plain of Reunion!

The astonishing number of the survivors attending the national revival of to-day should teach our youth that a brave spirit and a forgiving temper are the great preservers of life, and the promoters of longevity. There were no braver spirits than those at Gettysburg. Nor any more forgiving. For the victors never boasted of their triumph and the vanquished carried no bitterness to defeat.

Also the field of Gettysburg is the historic reservoir from which we draw our fiery and convincing proof of the nation's martial qualities. There was never in human history a more gallant and heroic feat than Pickett's magnificent charge up Cemetery Ridge, and never a steadier and more magnificent answer than Hancock's superb defense.

So that in the martial qualities of offensive and defensive warfare there is writ at Gettysburg the deathless national record of imperishable valor which may be read and spoken to the comfort of our country's friends and to the stern warning of any who may think to be our country's foes.

Give ample battleships and ample guns to the sons of the sires who fought at Gettysburg, and our country will guarantee to keep the world at peace with us.

A Merger That Is in the Interest of Progress

The merging of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons and the Atlanta Medical College into a great and amplified Atlanta Medical College is a matter of far-reaching importance to Atlanta, and the boards of management of the two institutions are to be congratulated that they have effected a consolidation so satisfactory.

Not only will the colleges themselves benefit tremendously by joining hands, but the graduates thereof will enjoy an immediate standing in the medical profession that heretofore it has been impossible for either institution to give them.

The new college has been made eligible to membership in the American Medical Association, which gives all graduates the right at once to practice medicine anywhere in the world.

Plans for the necessarily enlarged quarters of the new institution are ambitious, but there is every reason to suspect that they will be carried to a successful conclusion. And to that end, The Georgian feels sure all Atlanta will cordially co-operate with the gentleman having those plans in charge.

Caesar and Franklin

By WILLIAM VINCENT BYARS

WHEN Julius Caesar wished to show the meaning of the greatest triumph in life, he first combed his hair carefully over a bald spot. He was so careful about this bald spot that it is said he always scratched his head with one finger after combing his hair down over it.

Perhaps this is a lie. But what he did next was to put a wreath of laurel leaves on his head. He then put on a costly purple-bordered cloak. Taking a branch of laurel in one hand and scepter in the other, he passed out the street door and mounted a car drawn by four horses. Then he drove through the streets, and listened to the crowd that shouted for him. While they were shouting, people in the crowd watched the long line of Caesar's soldiers behind the car and of his prisoners in front of it.

Caesar's Great Triumphs.

After Caesar was tired of standing up to listen to the shouting, he had money scattered to the crowd. Then he gave them bread tickets, or what amounted to the same thing. He also gave them free admission to the circus. At the circus he supplied prisoners to fight lions to amuse those who had shouted for him when he was proclaimed a triumphant conqueror and a dictator.

This was the greatest "triumph" in Rome about 46 years before the birth of Christ.

About 1745 years after the birth of Christ, Benjamin Franklin undertook the greatest triumph of history in the small city of Philadelphia. He pulled off his coat and walked out into the street. Then he took hold of the handles of a wheelbarrow and rolled it through the street. Nobody shouted. Some laughed. He came back with the wheelbarrow in about half an hour. Taking a bundle of paper from it, he went inside. Then he printed a newspaper.

This was one way he had of becoming triumphant, but it was not the only one. After printing the newspaper, he washed the ink off his hands and began to experiment with another one of his ideas.

He wanted to catch a jar full of lightning. In his newspaper he tried to persuade his readers to use their common sense. He tried to show them that common sense is always triumphant when it is really used. They thought he had lost his own common sense when he tried to catch lightning in a jar. But he did it. He finally got enough lightning out of a cloud down the string of a kite to fill a jar, so that he could get sparks out of the jar. When he had done this, it was the greatest triumph in history. He had shown that electricity and lightning are the same; that electricity is a "universal force" which can be used in common-sense ways.

This was a "triumph" in Philadelphia about A. D. 1752.

Julius Caesar was born 100 years before Christ. He was born in a great family. It was the "illustrious Julian gens." "Gens" means family. A "gentleman" then did not have to be "gentle." He did have to be born in an illustrious "gens." Caesar did not think it ungentlemanly to have the hands of his prisoners cut off when he was not pleased with them after he had conquered them. He despised people who had nothing but common sense. He was a great genius and one of the greatest conquerors of any age. He conquered his own country. Before he was stabbed to death in Rome, March 15, 44 B. C., he had destroyed the freedom of the greatest republic of the world. After his time, Romans who could not live unless they were free stabbed themselves.

No Illustrious Forefathers.

Franklin did not belong to an illustrious "gens." When he was born in Boston in 1706, he was fifteenth of the seventeen children of Josiah Franklin. Josiah was a poor candlemaker. Poor as he was, he gave his children "the key of all knowledge." He taught them to spell and showed them how to learn to read. In 1790, when Benjamin Franklin died, he had done more than any other man to make his country free and great. His last act was to sign a paper to make the world freer. But his greatest triumph was in discovering the use of common sense. Spell out or read as much as you can use from the best book you can get. Then do not stop to talk about it. Get your common sense to work and see what you can do with what you have learned. Then go on that way, learning and using your own common sense as long as you live. That is the Franklin way to win triumphs.

In the Dog Days

By WEX JONES.

IN the dog days, beloved, remember on account of your health to eschew
Greeting a husker person with the words, "Is it hot enough weather for you?"

And forget not to shun all advice on sure methods of keeping you cool,
For you'll get all mixed up and distressed and you'll feel like a boiling hot fool.

You will read that cold drinks are injurious; you'll read that hot drinks kill you dead;
You will read you should sleep under blankets; and also with none on your bed.

Some say that cold baths will inflame you till you feel like a stove that's red-hot.
Some say that cold tea is just poison, while asserting that coffee is not.

You'll be told that corned beef and potatoes are too heavy for hot weather lunch;
And again you'll be urged to make luncheon on some food that is there with the punch.

You'll be told to wear plenty of flannel, howe'er it may tickle your skin;
And you'll hear that you'll die in ten minutes unless all your clothing is thin.

It's unsafe and moreover it's foolish to toil through the heat of the day,
So one says; the other declares that it's simply fatal to play.

Then, beloved, avoid all these tipsters, who'll make you feel like a fool,
And take the advice of an expert that all you need do is keep cool.

TRAIN ROBBERS ESCAPE WITH $25,000

MISSISSIPPI EXPRESS IS LOOTED

Masked Robbers Hold Up Illinois Central Passenger at Lonely Spot South of Memphis.

MEMPHIS, TENN., July 4.—Illinois Central train No. 1, bound from Chicago to New Orleans, was held up by four masked men early to-day one and one-half miles south of Batesville, Miss.

It was believed the men obtained $25,000, although the local officials of the American Express Company say the amount was not that large.

When the train stopped in response to signals set by the bandits, two men climbed on board the engine and with revolvers compelled the engineer to pull the baggage, mail and express cars more than a mile down the track. While the engine crew was being guarded, the other two men blew the safe in the express car.

Bind Clerks With Ropes.

At the points of their revolvers they forced the mail clerks into a corner and bound them with ropes. They spent several minutes ransacking the mail for valuable registered packages.

Forcing the trainmen to stand beside the track, the four robbers boarded the engine and ran it to a point a few miles south of Enid, Miss., where they deserted it.

A posse was organized and bloodhounds were put on the trail of the bandits. The passengers in the cars left standing where the train was stopped knew nothing of the hold-up until after the robbers had escaped.

Hold-Up in Wild Region.

Batesville, Miss., is 50 miles from Memphis, Tenn., and is the center of a hilly, thickly-wooded country.

Within the past year there have been numerous train robberies in the South.

The first was in Mississippi, on the Queen and Crescent, near Meridian, when robbers stopped a train and rifled the express car. The express company never made an official statement of the amount stolen, but it was estimated at $18,000. The robbers escaped on horseback through canebrakes into the river bottom. Presumably they waded their horses some distance up the shallow stream, for hounds lost the scent at the river bank.

Soon afterward the Louisville and Nashville road's New Orleans-New York "flyer" was held up in the swamps along the Gulf Coast. The passengers were relieved of valuables, and the express car robbed. One robber then climbed into the locomotive cab and ordered the engineer to proceed. The engineer, when the robber glanced away to see just where the train was, struck the bandit in the back of the head with a wrench, nearly killed him, and brought him bound to jail.

In another case, a Texas and Pacific express messenger in Texas killed two hold-up men who invaded his car.

President Guilty in Athens Bank Failure

ATHENS, July 4.—J. W. Griffin, who was president of the defunct Athens Bank and Trust Company and who was indicted for feloniously "wrecking" the bank, was found guilty by the jury at midnight after being out eight hours, and recommended to the mercy of the court. He will be sentenced by Judge Brand to-morrow. Immediately upon the verdict notice of a motion for a new trial was served.

R. H. McCrary, cashier of the bank, pleaded guilty before Griffin's trial and was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary.

Bryan President Of U. S.—For a Day

WASHINGTON, July 4.—With President Wilson, Vice President Marshall and every other member of the White House staff away to-day, Secretary Bryan held alone the reins of government and was acting President. His succession to this temporary dignity is statutory.

Every branch of the public service in Washington was at a standstill, with the exception of such work as had to be carried on.

Vote Plea Hurled At King's Head by Frenzied Militant

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BRISTOL, ENGLAND, July 4.—Intense excitement was caused here to-day when a militant suffragette hurled a petition for "votes for women" at the head of King George while he and Queen Mary were driving through the streets to the Royal Agricultural Show.

It was first believed an attempt had been made to assassinate the King, and the crowd, which had been held back by police and soldiers, broke through the lines and crowded into the streets, shouting "Lynch the assassin."

After a struggle the crowds were driven back and the woman was arrested.

Sheriff Blamed for Americus Lynching

AMERICUS, July 4.—No indictments were found by the Sumter County Grand Jury, which for the past four days had been investigating the lynching of Will Reddill, a negro, in the streets of Americus.

None of the 150 witnesses summoned would tell the names of those who composed the mob, according to the Grand Jury report.

Vigorous criticism was given Sheriff Fuller, however, as the Grand Jury declared he had been very lax in allowing the prisoner to be taken from the jail.

Declares John D. Is Drifting to Socialism

CHICAGO, July 4.—John D. Rockefeller will be a socialist if he lives long enough, according to a statement to-day by Dean Albion W. Small, head of the department of sociology at the University of Chicago.

Dean Small said it was only a matter of years before Rockefeller and other wealthy men of the country would recognize "the fallacy of modern capitalism."

Deputy's Wife Aids In Thwarting Mob

ABBEVILLE, GA., July 4.—A mob last night attempted to take W. A. Coleman from the jail here and lynch him, but their efforts were thwarted by Deputy Sheriff O. L. Smith and his wife.

Coleman is charged with murdering Leon Melvin, a young boy, last spring. No further trouble is expected at this time.

TRIBUTE PAID TO REUNITED VETERANS

President, in Masterly Speech, Stirs the Great Throngs on Historic Battlefield.

GETTYSBURG, PA., July 4.—President Woodrow Wilson, in addressing the veterans of the battle of Gettysburg at the reunion here to-day, said:

"Friends and Fellow Citizens: I need not tell you what the battle of Gettysburg meant. These gallant men in blue and gray sit all about us here. Many of them met here upon this ground in grim and deadly struggle. Upon these famous fields and hillsides their comrades died about them. In their presence it were an impertinence to discourse on how the battle went, how it ended, what it signified. But 50 years have gone by since then, and I crave the privilege of speaking to you for a few minutes of what those 50 years have meant.

"What have they meant? They have meant peace and union and vigor and the maturity and might of a great nation. How wholesome and healing the past has been. We have found one another again as brothers and comrades in arms, enemies no longer, generous friends rather, our battle song past, the quarrel forgotten—except that we shall not forget the splendid valor, the manly devotion of the men then arrayed against one another, now grasping hands and smiling into each other's eyes. How complete union has become and how dear to all of us and how unquestioned, how majestic, as State after State has been added to this, our great family of free men.

"Heirs to Mighty Heritage."

"How handsome the vigor, the maturity, the might of the great nation we love with undivided hearts; how full of large and confident praise that life will be wrought out that will crown a strength with greater justice and with a happy welfare that will touch all alike with deep contentment. We are debtors to those 50 crowded years; they have made us heirs to a mighty heritage.

"But do we deem the nation complete and finished? These venerable men, crowding here to this famous field, have set us a great example of devotion and other sacrifices. They were willing to die that the people might live.

"But their task is done. Their day is turned into evening. They look to us to perfect what they established Their work is handed on to us to be done in another way, but not in another spirit. Our day is not over; it is upon us in full tide.

"Have affairs paused? Does the nation stand still? Is what the 50 years have wrought since those days of battle finished, rounded out and completed?

Calls Nation Secure.

"Here is a great people—great with every force that has ever beaten in the life blood of mankind. And it is secure. There is no one within its borders, there is no power among the nations of the earth to make it afraid But has it squared itself with its own great standards set up at its birth, when it made its first noble, naive appeal to the moral judgment of mankind to take notice that a government had now been established which was to serve men, not masters?

"It is secure in everything except satisfaction that its life is right, adjusted to the uttermost to the standards of righeousness and humanity. The days of sacrifice and cleansing are not closed. We have harder things to do than were done in these heroic days of war, because harder to see clearly, requiring more vision, more balance of judgment, a more

4 VICTIMS OF FOURTH IN HOSPITALS

Children Maimed and Burned by Firecrackers—Day Observed Quietly in Atlanta.

Four little children, all under 14 years of age, lie in the hospitals of the city, the first victims here in the annual toll of death and injury taken by the celebration of Independence Day.

The injured are:

Walter Pete, 13, 85 Pratt Street.

Charles Garrison, 12, 193 Davis Street.

John Garrison, 9, 193 Davis Street.

O. B. Biggers, 12, 348 Glenn Street.

Walter Pete's hand was painfully lacerated when a toy pistol with which he was playing accidentally exploded.

Charles and John Garrison were seriously injured by the explosion of a toy cannon early in the morning. Eager to celebrate the day, they went out of doors soon after dawn. A few minutes later their mother was startled by their cries of pain. Charles was burned about the face and there is danger that he has lost his sight. Johnny was standing up when the cannon exploded and was hurt about the legs.

Police Guard Doubled.

The first of the accidents occurred last night, when 12-year-old O. B. Biggers was painfully wounded by the discharge of a blank shell held by his playmate, Henry Kaincannon.

Atlanta police will work double turn to-day in an effort to prevent accidents. The night men who quit at 8 a. m. will work until noon. The evening men who come on at 4 p. m. will come on to-day at noon. The day patrolmen who quit at 4 p. m. will remain on duty until 8 p. m.

Chief Beavers states that this is purely to doubly enforce the law, and that any kind of firecrackers or fireworks in the streets will not be tolerated. Pistols are absolutely forbidden and anyone caught with a firearm, even if it is loaded with blanks, will be arrested for carrying a weapon.

EAGLE SCREAMS ON NATAL DAY IN ATLANTA

Fourth Is Celebrated in Appropriate Style—Athletic Carnival, Picnics and Fireworks.

Outings Feature Day.

The Fourth of July is being appropriately celebrated in Atlanta today. Many downtown buildings and homes in the residence sections are flying American flags in honor of the nation's birthday anniversary, and thousands of Atlantans are enjoying the day in the parks, at barbecues, athletic contests and other places of amusement.

Most of the stores will be closed for the greater part of the day, that the clerks and employees may do their part in making the day a real holiday.

The eyes of the athletically inclined are turned to Piedmont Park as the place to spend the Fourth. Besides the bathing in the lake a field meet was begun this morning, under the direction of Joe Bean, physical director of Marist College. The entries include some of Atlanta's foremost athletes, among them representatives of Marist College, Atlanta Athletic Club and the Fifth Regiment.

Patriotic services, to which representatives of all religious and patriotic bodies have been invited, are being held at St. Philip's Cathedral this morning. The services are in the nature of an expression of thanksgiving and a prayer for the continued prosperity of America. The Daughters of the American Revolution are taking a leading part in the services.

Scotch and Germans Celebrate.

Among the outings will be a big barbecue at the Battle Hill Tuberculosis Sanitarium, when the institution will welcome its former patients. The barbecue will begin at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

One of the big celebrations of the day will be held at the Burns Club grounds this afternoon, when the members of the Atlanta Scottish Association will gather for their second annual picnic. Scotch games and exercises will feature the celebration. Every family invited is expected to take along a basket filled with good things to eat, and after the program a big feast will be spread.

The Atlanta Turners have arranged for an outing and patriotic celebration at Germania Park that promises to be one of the biggest the local Turn Verein has ever held. It is an all-day event, and a big feast will be spread for all who attend, with light refreshments late in the afternoon. Delegations of Turners from Mobile, Nashville, Chattanooga and other cities are expected to attend the picnic.

The negroes of Atlanta have been invited to celebrate the Fourth at the Morris Brown Colige, and the gates of that institution will be open to visitors all day.

Cobb Suspect Jailed Here to Escape Mob

Fearing an attempt at lynching, Cobb County authorities brought Cato Wilson, a 25-year-old negro, to Atlanta Friday morning. He was put in the Fulton County jail.

The negro is accused of attacking the daughter of a Cobb County farmer.

NEW TESTIMONY LAYS CRIME TO CONLEY

Frank Defense Locates Witness Who Points to the Negro Sweeper as Slayer.

A new witness, said to have the most damaging evidence yet produced against Jim Conley, the negro sweeper in the National Pencil factory, entered the Phagan case Thursday and made an affidavit, the contents fo which are carefully guarded by attorneys for Leo M. Frank, charged with causing the death of the factory girl.

The identity of the witness is as much a secret as the exact nature of his testimony. It was learned, though, that the affidavit was made in the law office of Joseph Leavitt in the Grant Building and was witnessed by Mr. Leavitt's stenographer.

It is said the testimony of this man connects Conley more directly with the crime than any other statement or affidavit yet procured by the defense. The witness is understood to have seen Conley on the afternoon of the crime and to have heard him make remarks in his drunken condition which were extremely incriminating.

Conley Faces Arrest.

The new affidavit is interpreted to mean that a warrant soon will be sworn out through a magistrate's court for the arrest of Conley. William M. Smith, attorney for Conley, said several days ago that if his client was made a defendant in the case he would retaliate upon the lawyers for Frank by issuing subpenas duces tecum, commanding them to appear in court with all the important statements and affidavits which they have obtained from witnesses for their side of the case.

Such a move would be giving the attorneys for Frank a little of their own medicine, as Attorney Rosser created a sensation a week ago by issuing subpenas duces tecum for Solicitor Dorsey, Chief Beavers, Chief Lanford, Pinkerton Detective Harry Scott and all the city detectives who had worked on the Phagan mystery.

They were commanded to bring into court all affidavits and statements of Jim Conley, Newt Lee, W. M. Matthews, Monteen Stover and other vital witnesses for the State.

Branded as "Trick."

Solicitor Dorsey and Attorney Frank A. Hooper, who is associated with Mr. Dorsey in the prosecution, at once branded the move as a thin trick for the purpose of discrediting the State's witnesses. The sworn statements would be used, they said, to compare with the testimony of the State's witnesses when on the stand.

If there were the slightest deviation through a natural lapse of memory or through trifling inaccuracy, the prosecution asserted, the defense would seek to take advantage of this to impeach the witnesses' testimony.

Fifth's Legislators After Farm School

Representatives from counties comprising the Fifth District have joined forces in a fight for an agricultural school for that section. There are five counties in the Fifth—Fulton, DeKalb, Rockdale, Campbell and Douglas.

Floor Leader R. B. Blackburn, of Atlanta, with John Y. Smith and Ralph O. Cochran, the other two Fulton County Representatives, are leading the fight. The towns of Lithonia, Stone Mountain, Clarkston and Decatur already have offered sites for the school.

SERBS DRAFTING TURKS IN WAR ON BULGARS

Czar Ferdinand to Head His Army in Field—Bulgarians Win Big Battle.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BELGRADE, July 4.—Servia is drafting Turkish prisoners of war to fight against the Bulgarians. General Petroff, Bulgarian chief of staff, has taken the field in eastern Macedonia.

It was reported from Sofia that Czar Ferdinand probably will head his Bulgarian army if the fighting continues.

Bulgarians Defeat Servians at Uskub.

SOFIA, July 4.—Bulgarian troops have inflicted a crushing defeat on the Servian army east of Uskub.

According to dispatches received to-day from General Savoff, Bulgarian commander-in-chief, in the field, heavy casualties were inflicted upon the Servians.

The Bulgarian cabinet resigned today. Dr. Daneff has been commissioned to form another. General Savoff, the commander-in-chief, will be next Minister of War.

Urges Track Survey Of Railroads; Would Swell City's Income

Councilman Orville Hall has evolved a plan for increasing the tax assessments of railroads within Atlanta $50,000. At the meeting of Council Monday he will introduce a resolution appropriating $500 to make a survey of the tracks within the city, thereby proving that the railroads should pay more taxes.

Councilman Hall declares that no survey of the railroad tracks within Atlanta has been made in twenty years, and that a new survey will cause the Comptroller to increase his assessments.

The elections of Tax Assessors J. L. Harrison and C. D. Meador come up at the meeting of Council Monday. It is said that both will be elected without opposition.

Dine Minus Coats In Philly Hotels

PHILADELPHIA, July 4.—(Tip to Atlanta hotel proprietors from Georgian correspondent):

In the men's grillroom of the Bellevue-Stratford fifteen tables were occupied by parties of lawyers, business men, politicians, etc. Every man had his coat off.

As soon as a guest entered, a waiter stepped forward and said:

"Coat, sir?"

The waiter took it, hung it on a hook near the guest, and served luncheon. And there is no tip for coat-hanging.

"Quite the regular thing, sir," said head waiters in all the big hotels. "Gentlemen dining alone always take their coats off. Don't they do it in Atlanta, sir?"

"Pluck Out Tonsil," Doctor's New Method

CHICAGO, July 4.—Instead of cutting out a tonsil, Dr. Harold Foster, of New York, announced to-day that he could pluck, and has plucked, out a diseased tonsil "as a man would pluck a cherry."

Only long fingers and a firm grip are needed, he says.

This remarkable declaration was made at the meeting of the American Homeopathic Society.

WILSON SPEAKS TO THRONGS AT GETTYSBURG

President, in Stirring Address, Rejoices in Great Reunited Nation—Lauds Heroes.

candid searching of the very springs of right.

"Look around you upon the fields of Gettysburg. Picture the array, the fierce heats and agony of battle, column hurled against column, batteries bellowing to batteries. Valor? Yes, greater no man shall see in war; and self-sacrifice and loss to the uttermost; the high recklessness of exalted devotion which does not count the cost.

The Cost of a Great Nation.

"We are made by these tragic, epic things to know what it costs to make a nation—the blood and sacrifice of multitudes of unknown men, lifted to a greater stature in the view of all generations by knowing no limit to their manly willingness to serve.

"In armies thus marshaled from the ranks of free men you will see, as it were, a nation embattled, the leaders and the led, and may know, if you will, how little except in form its actions differ in days of peace from its actions in days of war.

"May we break camp now and be at ease? Are the forces that fight for the nation dispersed, disbanded, gone to their homes forgetful of the common cause? Are our forces disorganized, without constituted leaders and the might of men consciously united because we contend not with armies, but with principalities and powers and wickedness in high places?

"Are we content to lie still? Does our union mean sympathy, our peace contentment, our maturity self-comprehension and a clear confidence in choosing what we shall do? War fitted us for action, and action never ceases.

Refers to Another Host.

"I have been chosen the leader of the nation. I can not justify the choice by any qualities of my own, but so it has come about, and here I stand. Whom do I command? The ghostly hosts who fought upon these battlefields long ago and are gone? These gallant gentlemen, stricken in years, whose fighting days are over, their glory won? What are the orders for them, and who rallies them?

"I have in mind another host, whom these set free of civil strife in order that they might work out, in days of peace and settled order, the life of a great nation. That host is the people themselves, the great and small, without class, or difference, or kind, or race, or origin, and undivided in interests if we have but the vision to guide and direct them and order their lives aright in what we do.

"Our Constitutions are their articles of enlistment. Their orders of to-day are the laws upon our statute books. What we strive for is their freedom, their rights to lift themselves from day to day and behold the things they have hoped for, and so make way for still better days for those whom they love who are to come after them.

"The recruits are the little children crowding in. The quartermasters' stores are in the mines and forests and fields, in the shops and factories. Every day something must be done to push the campaign forward, and it must be done by plan and with an eye to some great destiny.

"Builded by God's Hands."

"How shall we hold such thought in our hearts and not be moved? I would not have you live even today wholly in the past, but would wish to stand with you in the light that streams upon us now out of that great day gone by. Here is a nation that God has builded by our hands. What shall we do with it?

"Who stands ready to act again and always in the spirit of this day of reunion and hope and patriotic fervor? The day of our country's life has but broadened into morning. Do not put uniforms by. Put the harness of the present on. Lift your arms to the great tracks of life yet to be conquered in the interest of righteous peace, of that prosperity which lies in a people's hearts and outlasts all wars and errors of men.

"Come, let us be comrades and soldiers, yet to serve our fellowmen in quiet counsel where the blare of trumpets is neither heard nor heeded and where the things are done which make blessed the nations of the world in peace and righteousness and love."

Two Secret Service Men Guard President.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—President Wilson left Washington at 7 a. m. today for Gettysburg. His private secretary, Joseph Tumulty; Representative Mitchell Palmer, of Pennsylvania; two secret service men, two White House clerks and a corps of newspaper men accompanied him.

A special car attached to a Pennsylvania Railroad train conveyed the party.

Macon Editor Dies From Typhoid Fever

MACON, July 4.—William Bairman, associate editor of The Macon Telegraph, died at the Macon Hospital last night after an illness of ten days with typhoid fever. He was 53 years of age and is survived by a wife and daughter.

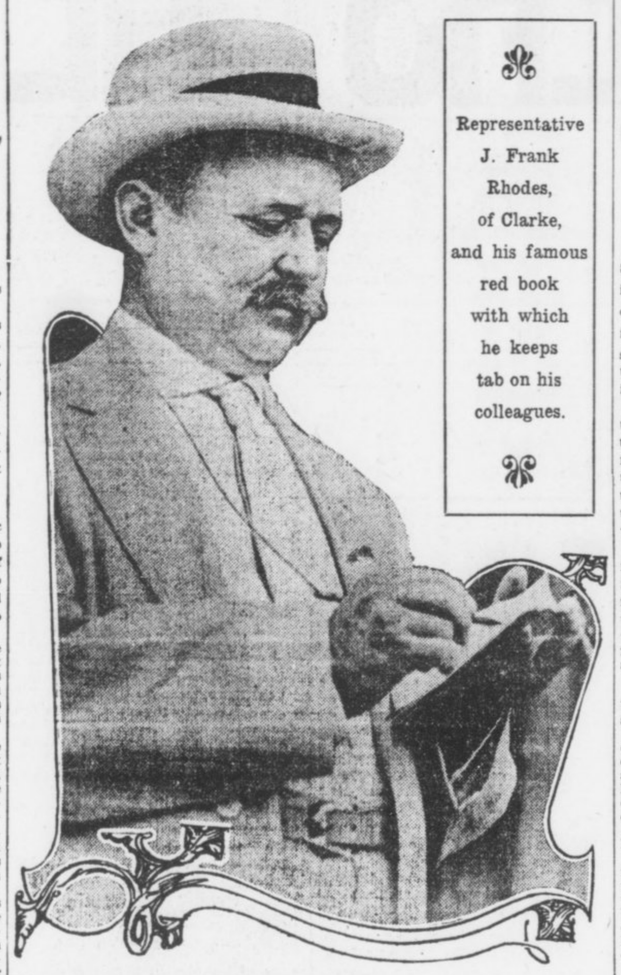
Mr Bairman came from Philadelphia to Savannah 25 years ago and later he was employed by the Franklin Printing Company in Atlanta. His connection with The Telegraph dated from 1895, but he has been in the editorial department only since 1909.

Private Telephones Asked for Firemen

Council's electric lights committee on Thursday recommended a private telephone exchange for the fire department. The plan was outlined by Chief W. B. Cummings and a representative of the Southern Bell Telephone Company.

It was argued that while the exchange would cost $300, it would save the city $138 a year.

KEEPS TAB ON EVERY LAWMAKER IN HOUSE



Representative J. Frank Rhodes, of Clarke, and his famous red book with which he keeps tab on his colleagues.

Representative From Athens Writes Down in Little Red Book All He Finds Out.

Representative Frank Rhodes of Clarke County, once Mayor of Athens, is the blue-ribbon figurer and notemaker of the House.

Mr. Rhodes knows the name, habits, affiliations, religion, race, color, and previous conditions of servitude of each and every member of the House and he keeps his records of them handy at all times.

Rhodes has a fearful and wonderful little red leather book, in which everything about everybody in the Legislature is carefully and accurately set down.

The gentleman from Clarke has no sinister purpose in thus keeping tab on his fellow members. He is a wholesouled person, with malice toward none and charity for all. But he is of an inquisitive turn of mind and likes to have a thorough knowledge of anything and everything in which he is concerned. Wherefore, the frank and candid red leather book, in which he makes his daily jottings!

In Athens they yet talk about what a good Mayor Mr. Rhodes made. He had another little red book on that job, too, and long before election day it was packed and jammed with information, minute and searching, about every individual voter in town. Rhodes knew all about 'em before a ballot was cast, and he figured himself a winner, all right! He won, moreover, hands down.

The gentleman from Clarke is a business man, and a successful business man at that. He is happily married and has six children, every one of whom he is training up to the little red book habit.

If ever one of that Rhodes outfit should run for Governor, there will not be a voter in Georgia whose pedigree and history will not be set down accurately and precisely in one of the Rhodes' little red books.

HOT DAY FOLLOWS SCORCHING NIGHT

Atlantans, Kept From Sleep by Temperature, Face Torrid Fourth of July.

High temperature is in store for Atlanta Friday, following the hottest and most oppressive night of the summer. The United States Weather Bureau announced Friday there would be no perceptible diminution of the heat wave which is general over the Central, Eastern, Northern and Southern States.

The minimum temperature of the night was 74, and that was not reached until 5 o'clock Friday morning. The mercury hung near 80 practically all night long. During sleeping hours the humidity was comparatively high, serving as a deterrent to rest and peaceful dreams. The average citizen began the "Glorious Fourth" feeling like the morning after.

At 7 o'clock Thursday afternoon the mercury stood at 86. An hour later it had dropped only 2 degrees. At 9 o'clock it recorded 83. At 10 o'clock, just when everybody wanted to go to sleep, the temperature was 81, and it was well on to midnight before the mercury started to drop. At 11:30 o'clock it began to ascend, and at midnight the mark was 79. It was the same at 1 o'clock, and it dropped 1 degree each hour for three hours.

At 7 o'clock Friday morning the thermometer took another jump, the mark being 77, or slightly higher than recent temperature records at the same hour of the day. By 8 o'clock the mercury had risen to 82 degrees. Thirty minutes later it had jumped 2 more degrees, and was moving rapidly, with every indication of passing the 90 mark before noon.

U.S. ASSETS FIXED AT $2,000,000,000

Surplus of $40,083,229 Wiped Out by Canal Expenditures. $275,000 in Reserve.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—Uncle Sam closed the fiscal year 1913 with a surplus of $40,083,229, a gain of $3,750,000. Panama Canal expenditures and public debt transactions, however, wiped out this surplus and created a deficit of $2,449,000.

Total receipts were $723,782,921, and ordinary disbursements $683,699,692. Corporation taxes yielded the Government $24,948,870. Custom receipts reached $318,142,000, an increase of nearly $7,000,000.

The Government spent $41,741,000 on the Panama Canal, making a total of $318,229,000 spent to date.

Secretary McAdoo to-night announced that the daily treasury statement in future would be issued in a completely changed form, designed to show at a glance the assets and liabilities of the Government.

The first statement will show, the Secretary said, that the grand total of assets of the Government is nearly $2,000,000,000, against which there are liabilities including the gold and silver certificates aggregating about $1,725,000,000, leaving a balance in the treasury of from $250,000,000 to $275,000, including the gold reserve of $150,000,000.

STARK BITTERLY ARRAIGNED BY SUFFRAGIST

Mrs. McLendon Scores Lawmaker for Opposition—Fight for Senate Chamber Renewed.

Characterizing Senator W. W. Stark as a man of small mental caliber, Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, president of the Georgia Woman's Suffrage Association, said Frdiay the suffragists would renew the fight for the use of the Senate chamber during their State convention.

When Senator Stark ascertained the suffragists intended to enlighten the Senators on the question of votes for women, and then moved the tabling of a resolution to grant them the use of the Senate chamber on the nights of July 9 and 10, he provoked the ire of Mrs. McLendon.

Mrs. McLendon declared the suffragists of Atlanta and Georgia were indignant. She believed that common courtesy should have impelled the Senators to willingly grant them the use of the Senate chamber, irrespective of the Senators' views on suffrage.

She Calls Condition "Pitiful."

"It is pitiful that women have to beg the men for such things as that," she said.

During a brief recess Mrs. McLendon asked Senator Stark why he opposed granting the use of the Senate chamber to the suffragists, and he replied it was because the Saviour did not call a woman as one of His disciples.

"The answer seemed so absurd, so little to the point," she asserted.

"I asked him if he didn't know that the women of Georgia helped to build that State House, and that we had as much right there as anybody else. Governor Brown let four cowboys from Washington ride horses up the steps, yet the women of Georgia can not meet there."

Plan to Renew Fight.

"We are going to renew the fight for the use of the Senate chamber," Mrs. McLendon continued.

"Mr. John Y. Smith said he would reopen the question for us next Monday. Mr. Blackburn said he would, too. Mr. Blackburn is not in favor of woman suffrage, but his personal belief has nothing to do with this question. No, I don't think we'll get the use of the Senate chamber, but we'll show the smallness of the average Georgia legislator. Just because they are elected by the men people they try to keep the women down. They are afraid the women might rise against them, so they keep their heels on the women's necks."

Mrs. J. K. Ottley, a suffragist sympathizer, said she had no opinion regarding Senator Stark or the reasons he advanced for opposing suffrage, but she was surprised at the Senate's refusal to allow the women to meet there.

Mrs. Ottley Is Surprised.

"I should think they would be very glad to extend the use of the Senate chamber to any association which was neither incendiary nor objectionable," she said, "and, judging by the headway made in other States, the suffragist associations are neither incendiary nor objectionable.

"I am surprised that they should have denied the use of the Senate chamber to any group of respectable Georgia women seeking something they believed to be for the State's good."

Mrs. Ottley said she believed woman's suffrage would come, but she would probably never make an effort to bring it.

Militants Burn Large Warehouse.

"Fires will never cease until women vote."

FLOOD OF SPEED FIEND CHARGES STIRS CHIEF

Beavers Posts Plain Clothes Men to Nab Drivers Who Endanger Children's Lives.

Following the excitement caused by the accident on Mills Street Wednesday afternoon when little Eva Kilpatrick was run down by a speeding automobile and left to her fate, Chief Beavers is receiving complaints of speeding autoists from all parts of the city.

The strongest complaints have come from merchants and residents along Ponce DeLeon Avenue and Marietta Street. Autoists have turned Marietta Street into a speedway, the Chief is told, and run their cars at a terrific rate of speed at all hours of the day and night. Several accidents narrowly have been averted, and pedestrians who are ferced to cross Marietta Street are in constant danger.

Out on Ponce DeLeon Avenue conditions, according to complaints, are as bad as they are on Marietta Street. At night, residents of the street claim, the automobilists who use the street throw their mufflers wide open and sleep is impossible.

Children Kept From Street.

Little children living on Ponce DeLeon Avenue have been forbidden by their parents to cross the street unless their elders are with them, so dangerous and reckless have the automobile drivers become.

One complaint made to the chief declared that an 8-year-old girl narrowly escaped with her life only a few days ago. The driver made no attempt to turn his machine or avoid running over the child, and the complaint declares that as he flew past he cursed the little girl for getting in the road.

Chief Beavers, following the receipt of the complaints, started a vigorous campaign that it is hoped will end in the arrest and punishment of the speeding autoists. Every policeman on the force has been instructed to watch carefully for speeders, and also ordered to enforce all the automobile regulations strictly.

Police Put on Watch.

Plainclothes men will be sent to the various portions of the city that have become known as haunts of the speed maniac, and nothing will be left undone to break up the practice that has made the streets of Atlanta a source of danger to all who venture upon them.

Chief Beavers also has started a thorough inquiry into the accident which nearly cost Eva Kilpatrick her life, and if the autoist who ran down the little girl and then fled is captured, an example will be made of him. The investigation has been placed in the hands of Captain Poole, and a squad of men have been detailed to act under his orders. Every person in the neighborhood of the accident who could have seen the car will be questioned.

ATLANTA-MADE GOODS EXHIBIT IS CERTAIN

Manufacturers in Meeting Decide to Organize and Set Up Permanent Display.

Atlanta manufacturers will establish in a downtown building an elaborate permanent display of articles made at home.

Four sites are offered, no one of them more than five minutes' walk from Five Points.

Twenty-three of the 100 manufacturers who gathered for a banquet at Hotel Ansley Thursday night pledged themselves to take space in the exhibit hall.

Within four days an Atlanta manufacturers' association will be organized, to handle the exhibit and to wrestle with problems of interest to factory men. Within ten days, one of the four offers of a building will be accepted. Whether the building will be leased, bought or leased with privilege of purchase, is to be worked out.

It was Mr. Morgan who laid the plan before the gathering, after a year's study and preparation. Necessary to the success of the plan is a pledged revenue of $22,500 a year for five years, he said.

Factories Make Realty Values.

"Atlanta should have four times the payroll it now has," he asserted. "The maintenance of real estate values and the future growth of Atlanta absolutely depend upon the growth of manufacturing. We have 600 manufacturing plants in the city now. I doubt if we need more. My idea is that we should build those we have into giant industrial establishments. Some people deny this, but I want to say that Atlanta-made goods can be sold right in Atlanta. It only is necessary to let the people know what we have here."

Bolling H. Jones told the other manufacturers that Evansville, Ind., established such a display, and found that goods could be sold through it at a selling cost of 3 per cent.

"This convinced me," said Mr. Jones. "Did any one here ever sell goods at a cost of 3 per cent?"

C. S. Dobbs made a forceful talk on the advertising value of the exhibit. "The man who makes good products and doesn't tell about it," he said, "is like the man who winks at a girl in the dark—he knows all about it, but she doesn't. Besides, it doesn't get him anywhere."

Adair Is Emphatic.

Forrest Adair was emphatic in his approval.

"I may not be orthodox," he said, "but there is one subject on which I am rabid. That is the talk about the smoke nuisance. I wish to goodness some one would turn 500 more smokestacks loose on us. We need factories.

"But the public does not know about those we have. I met a bank director to-day who did not know that most of the railroad cars rolling out of here roll on wheels made in Atlanta—and another who thought that Mr. Orr had his shoes made in Boston, and simply jobbed them here. The public must have things rubbed in before it remember."

J. K. Orr, J. P. Stevens and others voiced their approval.

On the call for pledges to take space in the exhbiit hall, the following manufacturers "signed up:"

J. P. Stevens Manufacturing Company, J. K. Orr Shoe Company, P. E. Block Company, Atlanta Stove Works, Foote & Davies Company, L. & L. Manufacturing Company, Byrd Printing Company, Nunnally & McCrea Manufacturing Company, A. M. Robinson Company, Southern Engraving Company, Atlanta Paper Company, Burnett, Bell & Klapper Furniture Company, Van Winkle Motor Truck Company, Norris, Inc., White Provision Company, Empire Cotton Oil Company, Mitchell Manufacturing Company, Atlanta Gas Light Company, All-Star Manufacturing Company, Southern Spring Bed Company and the Southern Saw and Machine Works.

World Gold Supply Affected by Strike

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

JOHANNESBURG, AFRICA, July 4.—The world's gold supply is being seriously affected by the strike in the Rand. A large percentage of the world's supply of gold comes from this district and leaders of the various unions are trying to shut it off completely.

Serious rioting occurred to-day. Fifty soldiers and three times that number of strikers were hurt in the clashes.

Government Bonds Sell Under Par

NEW YORK, July 4.—A very unusual situation has developed in the market for United States bonds. Within the last few days, for the first time since the 2 per cent bonds which become payable in 1930 have been issued, they have sold on the Stock Exchange at less than par.

This condition is a direct result of the proposal in the currency bill that the bonds of the United States be deprived of their use by national banks to secure circulation.

Gulf Stream Speeds Up; Hurries Steamer

BOSTON, July 4.—Carried along at great speed by an unusually swift current in the Golf Stream, the steamer Sosua, from Costa Rica, reached here a day ahead of time.

Captain Bjonnes said that the waters of the Stream were strangely active, and the steamer began moving so rapidly that the engines were slowed down to half speed. Even after that the Sosua logged off the miles at an amazing rate.

Accused Slayer Kills Himself in His Cell

ANNISTON, July 4.—G. H. Bailey, a prominent merchant, charged with the murder of C. W. Saunders here about two weeks ago, committed suicide in the county jail by cutting his throat. It is thought that he used a safety razor blade, as other prisoners in the jail had such blades.

A relative says that Bailey was despondent after his preliminary trial, when he was refused bail. His body was turned over to Coroner Murphy to be prepared for burial. He leaves a wife and several children.

CHILDREN ENJOY FOURTH IN PARK WITH PONIES

Contestants Drive and Ride Pretty Shetland Prizes in Parade as Guests of Hearst Papers.

Boys and girls in The Georgian and American pony contests, their parents, their relatives and their friends are at Grant Park celebrating the Fourth as the guests of the Hearst papers.

Promptly at 10 o'clock nine of the ponies which are to be awarded as prizes in the contest started in parade formation from The Georgian and American offices in Alabama Street. It was a pretty sight. The buggies were swathed in flags, and the ponies, sleek and shining, proudly wore tiny flags on all parts of their harnesses. Five of the ponies were hitched to buggies; the others were saddled.

Nine of the most eager contestants were chosen to drive and ride the ponies to the park, but with attendants close at hand to prevent any mishap, for the Shetlands are spirited. While gentle, still they are not getting the work they should and are inclined to be lively.

At the park every contestant is being given a ride or a drive. Lemonade and other refreshments are being served. Dan Carey, superintendent of parks, said The Georgian's guests could "own the park" for the afternoon, and they took him at his word.

Men from The Georgian and American offices were delegated to look after the children, so that parents who let them go unattended need have no worry as to their safety.

Stabs Son-in-Law In Fight Over Wife

DAHLONEGA, July 4.—When William Stover, of Auraria, started a row with Lon Jett, Gus Stover interfered and was seriously stabbed by Jett. Gus Stover is a son of William Stover and a son-in-law of Jett. Remarks that the elder Stover made about Jett's daughter, Gus Stover's wife, started the difficulty.

Sheriff T. M. Ray was notified and reached Jett's home shortly afterward. He was arrested and placed in jail. Gus Stove is in a serious condition.

7-MONTHS BABY ONLY HAPPY PLAYING FIDDLE

Child's unusual love of music discovered entirely through accident.

June Howard Stollard, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Stollard, "The Fiddlin' Baby."

Neighborhood attraction is not content unless musical instrument is within easy reach.

Hail the fiddling baby!

Seven months old, and never happy unless he is picking at a violin.

Feed him milk and mush and he is apt to be as cross as a bear; stick a violin between his fat feet and fingers and he will immediately begin picking at the strings, a smile of cherubic joy will wrinkle his plump face—and he is in the seventh heaven of delight.

Atlanta's latest prodigy is June Howard Stollard, the only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Stollard, of 44 East Main Street, and he bids fair to develop into another Mischa Elman.

But it was not until he was five months old and crawling over everything in the house that the love of music that possessed the little soul became known, and then only through accident. One morning the baby crawled into a closet, and, discovering an old violin that had belonged to Mrs. Stoddard's father, calmly took possession of it and began giving an impromptu concert. He had the violin cuddled up between his toes and fingers and was picking at the strings with both feet and hands. And out of the medley of sounds emitted by the protesting violin came now and then notes of surprising clearness.

Since then open season has been declared on violins in the Stollard household. The fiddling baby has become a neighborhood attraction. Like all geniuses, the child is content to sit and fiddle all day long, whether he has an audience or not. He has gained confidence with experience, and now he picks and pecks at the violin strings for dear life. The child puts his whole heart into his fiddling and spurns tempting offers of milk while he is playing. He quits only when he is tired, and sometimes he does not get tired for hours at a time. His mother and father are even now planning his musical education.

'Phone Girls Will Open Summer Camp With Out-door Dance

With an informal reception and a dance in an open-air pavilion the girls of the Southern Bell Telephone Company, 500 in number, will dedicate their summer playground, "Camp Wyanoke," at 8 o'clock Friday night. The camp covers seven acres of wooded hillside on the plantation of B. D. Jackson, and is equipped with electric lights, sewer facilities and running hot and cold water.

The camp was planned by Miss Cathryn C. Tatum, chief of the stenographic bureau of the telephone company, assisted by the head operators. The telephone company donated the equipment, costing over $1,000. Practically every one of the 500 girls who work as operators, stenographers and bookkeepers will spend their vacation there, the cost being only 50 cents a day. The camp will be open till late in September or early October.

THE GHOST BREAKER

By G. W. GODDARD and PAUL DICKEY

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

The scene of the story is laid in the Vanderlip Hotel, New York City. The Princess Maria Theresa of Segura, a beautiful Spanish woman, is suddenly awakened in her suite by the sound of pistol shots. She hears a man running down the hall. He crashes against her door, breaking the lock, and enters. She sees he is a tall, good-looking young man, dressed in evening clothes. He is carrying a revolver in his right hand, and blood is dripping from a wound in his left. He begs the Princess to hide him. She, moved by some indescribable impulse, decides that she will. She directs him to an inner room, and a few minutes later, when the hotel detective knocks on the door, she tells him she is all right and sends him away. The young man, who is Warren Jarvis, of Kentucky, comes out of his hiding place, and the Princess, for the first time, notices his wound. She is moved to sympathy and showers him with questions as to what has occurred. Jarvis tells her about a Kentucky feud between his family and another named Markham. He says he left Kentucky to avoid the feudists, but encountered one of them in the hotel, which explains the shots.

Now go on with the story.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

A quick shade passed over his face and he pressed his lips together.

"No, never," he declared, in a steady voice.

"You have no fear of death?"

He lifted his eyebrows slightly by way of reply.

Dona Maria moved nearer and lowered her voice to a tense undertone:

"You are—you are not afraid of ghosts?"

Some brilliant student of humanics once figured that the essential difference between a brave man and a coward is that while both are sure to be frightened the coward is panic-stricken in the presence of danger and the brave man is likely to go to pieces after the danger has passed.

Possibly this is the reason that Warren Jarvis and the Princess of Aragon could discuss so calmly their future plans when the one was a murderer in the eyes of the law, a wounded and trapped fugitive; and the other was coolly harboring a criminal to use him for her own private ends. As adventures are for the venturous, so romance is for the romantic. Both were young, both were romantic and both were fearless.

And so it was that Jarvis could smile with unaffected amusement when Dona Maria asked if he was afraid of ghosts. But Dona Maria did not smile.

"Ghosts," she repeated soberly, in response to his puzzled query. Jarvis threw back his head and laughed silently.

"After what I've been through?" he said. "No, I'm not afraid of ghosts."

Dona Maria held him with her gaze until the mirth died out of his face.

"If you escape from here," she said slowly, "it will be because I helped you. We might say I saved your life. If what you tell me is true and if I try to save your life——" she paused for an instant and then went on steadily—"it will be for a selfish motive entirely. It will be because I have work for you to do. Do you understand? Work—hard work—dangerous work! It—it may mean your life in the end," she added, and her voice faltered slightly.

A Real Peril.

Jarvis studied curiously the dark, beautiful face. He did not feel inclined to laugh now. He felt that there was something deadly serious back of this child's talk of ghosts. Whatever the service might be that she demanded of him it was certain that she believed the peril it entailed to be really active.

"You are frank, anyway," he remarked.

"It's a chance," she reminded him.

There was a certain medieval brutality about this last suggestion that completely won him. Indeed, it never occurred to either that there was any true moral obliquity in their attitude or actions. When Jarvis drew his pistol and shot his man to death there burned in his bosom as pure a flame of fanatical belief in the justice of his cause as that which steeled the lance point of the Red Cross Knight. And in the same spirit Dona Maria would swear him to her service and send him to a possible death. He smiled at the thought.

JARVIS SWEARS TO GET THE GHOST

"Kneel then, Warren of Jarvis," she commanded, "and repeat this oath."

"And my reward?"

"—— is your life," she replied instantly.

Jarvis again burst into a short silent laugh. "Well, that's something. And if I agree——?"

"You will begin by taking the ancient feudal oath of my country," said Dona Maria, gravely.

"Oath!" exclaimed Jarvis. "Isn't my word enough?"

The Princess waved her hand in a truly royal manner.

"You will pardon me if I insist."

The young man smiled and shrugged his shoulders. "Very well. If it pleases you, I'll swear the blackest oath you can utter. Let's hear it."

However lightly he might take it, the ceremony held nothing of the mirthful for Dona Maria. As solemnly as if feudalism had not long ago been reduced to a show of pomp to please those whom it amused, she asked his name.

"Jarvis," he told her.

"Your full name?"

"Warren Jarvis."

Royally Dona Maria pointed to the rug at her feet.

"Kneel, then, Warren Jarvis," she commanded, "and repeat this oath."

He Kneels.

"Oh, come, now," he objected, sheepishly—but Dona Maria only looked and pointed. At last he grinned and began to get down first with one knee and then the other, and finally came down awkwardly with both at once. It was distinctly ungraceful and against the best forms of feudal ceremony. Dona Maria was embarrassed.

"No! not that way," she said hastily. "On one knee. Ah! That is better. Now, repeat after me—'I, Warren of Jarvis' "——

"I, Warren of Jarvis," repeated the young man, with mock solemnity, though he was not insensible to the romantic charm of the ceremony.

"'Senor of all the domains, fiefs, keeps and marches of Warren of Kentucky'"—

"Whew!" He thought of what the boys around the Galt House would say of these "fiefs and marches," but he obeyed.

"Senor of all the domains, fiefs, keeps and marches of Warren of Kentucky'"—

"'Do convey to Maria Theresa, of Aragon, all my worldly titles and possessions'"——

"Sounds like I was marrying her," he muttered. "'Do convey to Maria Theresa, of Aragon, all my worldly titles and possessions'"——

"Now, take my left hand in both of yours," ordered Dona Maria. He obeyed with wonderful enthusiasm and felt that he was going to like the oath more and more as it progressed.

"'And receive them back as vassal and retainer and to faithfully fight in my lady's cause, according to the feudal laws of Castile and Aragon. So help me God, Our Lady and St. James!'"

Jarvis looked up into the glowing face and shining eyes as she repeated the solemn closing words of the oath and a swift change came over him as the soft hand that he held in both his had carried some thrilling current from her soul to his. He felt somewhat like the scoffer who strolls into a church and is humbled by the simple faith he sees about him. There was no mockery in his voice and little in his heart when he repeated them after her. And the kiss that he pressed on the back of her hand when she said, "Arise, vassal," was wholly sincere.

Confused.

She drew back quickly, for the first time confused.

"That is part of the ceremony," she admitted, in a small voice, "but I meant to omit it."

So the serious moment passed. "It seemed the only sensible part," he laughed. "But who on earth is this Maria Theresa that I am hired man to?"

Dona Maria straightened her slender figure and drew the folds of her dressing gown more closely about her.

"I," she said, with the dignity of a queen, "am Her Supreme Highness, Maria Theresa of Segura, Princess of Aragon."

Jarvis' jaw did not drop, because it was not that kind of a jaw, but he was enough of a democrat to be sufficiently impressed.

"Good Lord!" he groaned, after a short season of speechlessness. "A princess!—and I've been ordering you around with a gun!"

"Never mind that now," his liege lady ordered lightly, mollified by her vassal's appreciation of her position; "you will be properly punished, my vassal. There are dungeons in my castle."

"Sh—h!" cautioned Jarvis quickly. There was a sound of swift footsteps in the hall. They passed the door and died away, but the incident brought them back to a consideration of the present situation.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Very True.

She—Anyhow, you must admit he is a well-bred man. Did you notice his knowledge of Ruskin?

He—I did, and if you want my candid opinion, I don't believe he's ever been there.

I had a nice offer to be a boy actor with a moving picter cumpany & I thought sure Pa wud let me go, but he sed No, my son, I want you to be a lawyer or a doctor wen you grow up. I do not want you to git any idee of ever going on the stage.

I was kind of mad at Pa to think that he wuddent give me such a fine chanst, but I dident say any moar, beekaus he knows best, I suppoas. Pa sed that he nevver took any stock in peepul that made thare living preetending thay was something that thay wasent. Take them fortune tellers & clarevoy-ants, for instens, sed Pa; thay have ads in the paper that tell what wonders thay are & how thay can tell the past from the present & read the future & all that. Thay maik me tired, sed Pa. I doant want my son to be anything excep sum good, reeliable lawyer or doctor.

It was kind of funny that Pa spoak about clarevoy-ants, beekaus I saw a ad that saim afternoon & it sed Boy Wanted. I went in & it was a clarevoy-ant offis that wanted the boy. He sed he wud give me $8 a week to ware a Orien-tal custom & stand near him wen he was telling peepul about the future. I had to ware a mask, too, & it was offul hot, but I dident kick beekaus $8 was quite a lot of munny eeven if I cuddent git the $20 job. So I went to work.

This afternoon I was standing neer the tabel ware the clarevoy-ant was gitting the munny, & who caim in excep Pa. He kind of sneeked in, & he looked all around him. I was scared at first, beekaus I thot maybe he was looking for me, but he was thare to have his fortune toald, & beesides I had on my mask. That is my Pa, I whispered to the man wich hired me; he has been married fifteen years, to a woman with dark hair & blue eyes. He thinks he will be President sum day. Tell him sumthing awful about his future if he doant let his son be a moving picter actor. So the man did. This is what he toald Pa:

My eyes have been closed for twenty centuries, tho you think it but a instant. I see you beefoar me as you stood on yure marriage day, with a butiful woman with dark hair & blue eyes. That was fifteen years ago. Those yeers passed happily. A White House looms before me. She is to grace it some day, this wondrous woman with the dark hair and blue eyes, & you, her husband, are to be President.

Wunderful, sed Pa; here is ten moar dollars.

You have a son with rare talent, sed the man to Pa. He will be the greatest moving picter actor that lived. It will be his munny that finances yure campain & maike you President. Good-day, I am very tired now. So Pa went out.

Bobbie, sed Pa to me wen I caim hoam to-nite, I have thot it all oaver, & you can be a moving picter actor if you want to.

It's Up to the Judges Now

"The Triple Tie" Contest Came to an End at Noon Yesterday

Noon yesterday was the time limit fixed for the close of "The Triple Tie" contest and up to that hour many contributions were received. Some of them came by special delivery. Some of the packages were bulky, others small, but if one may be permitted to judge from exterior looks, all those who tried a hand at writing a logical conclusion for the great baseball story were very much in earnest.

All the contributions will be turned over to the three judges, as announced, and it will be up to these disinterested persons to go through the mass of replies and indicate those which they consider the best.

On Monday we shall continue the publication of "The Triple Tie," giving the ending of this remarkable serial just as Mr. Mitchell, the author, wrote it. We regard "The Triple Tie" as one of the most interesting stories ever published by The Georgian. Much of its appeal lay in the fact that it contained local color in generous measure.

The Way of a Man

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

ONE who signs herself "Broken Hearted," and who I am sure isn't, writes me as follows:

"I am keeping company with a young man and like him very much, but he doesn't show his love for me as I do for him. Every time he comes to see me he sits in a chair reading a book. Do you think I should continue keeping company with him?"

My dear, you love him; you want him to love you, and you want to become his wife. Isn't that so? Yet you rebel against the attention he gives you, and which is the kind you will always receive as his wife. He will always "Sit in a chair reading a book." In that manner is every wife in the world entertained.

This is the husband-like treatment, and not the lover-like. He gives you the treatment a husband gives his wife for the reason that you have let him see "you are already won!" You say he doesn't show his love for you as "you do for him." Of course not. A man is naturally a lazy animal and makes no effort that is unnecessary. An effort to win your love is unnecessary.

When a man goes courting he makes the effort of a man catching a street car. After he has caught the car he seats himself comfortably and begins to read his newspaper. No further effort is necessary, so why make it? This man has won your love; you have made him as sure of it as he is sure he has caught the car when his feet are on the steps. Naturally, the next thing he does is to sit down and rest.

I do not blame him. Really, sometimes when I see the way girls lay their hearts at the feet of men, so often without any solicitation from the men, I wonder that courting stays in fashion.

I wonder that men spend their money on flowers, books, candy, theater tickets and for little outings, all to win the love of a girl, when so many girls seem to stand ready with their love in their hands, begging the acceptance of it by any man who looks their way.

I wonder that men prize a girl's love as highly as they do, remembering it was so lightly won.

Get the book habit. Never again tell him you love him. Never nag because he reads, but, rather, encourage him, letting him see that you would rather he read than bore you by talking.

You have given him the impression that he is sure of you. Efface that impression, but efface it so gently he will never know just when the process of obliteration began. Let him realize that your heart doesn't hang on a low branch, ready to drop into his hand if he will outstretch it; give him to know it grows higher up and that he must climb for it.

I am quite sure if you go about it with discretion he will close his book till you are his wife.

And then make up your mind to this and accept it as inevitable, how he will read to make up for lost time!

Men and the Cook Stove .:. .:. .:. By Dorothy Dix

IT is announced that nine young men students at Cornell University this year registered in the domestic science department and took cooking lessons.

This is glad news on many accounts. For one thing, it opens up to men a lucrative occupation, for there are few professions so well paid as that of the expert cook, and it is a pity that more American boys do not fit themselves to fill it, instead of compelling us to send abroad for a French chef whenever we want a culinary artist.

But whether a man intends to be a professional cook or not, it's a good thing for him to learn at least the rudiments of domestic science if for no other reason than because it establishes a common bond of interest and sympathy between him and his wife when he gets married.

Undoubtedly one of the chief reasons why marriage is a failure is because the average man and woman in this country lead such distinct and separate lives, and have so little knowledge of the problems with which each has to grapple, and I am persuaded that nothing would do more to promote domestic felicity than for every boy before he is married to have served an apprenticeship in the kitchen, and every girl to have done a couple of years' work in a business office.

Certainly the man who knows something practical about cooking, who has wrestled with the frying pan, and been up against the pots and the kettles will be able to extend a heart-to-heart comprehension to his wife when the steak is tough, and the potatoes watery, of which the unculinary, half-baked husband is utterly incapable.

What Dickens Says.

Dickens says, in one of his stories, that no educated man ever looks at even the back of a book in the way that an ignorant person does, and precisely the same thing applies to housekeeping. The man whose whole experience in cooking consists in offering gratuitous criticism every time anything is overdone or underdone can never behold a dinner with the same exquisite perception of all the time and labor and worry it took to produce it that the man will show who knows from personal experience of the deceitfulness of butchers' meat and the iniquity of the gas range.

As it is now, the household critic has nothing but contemptuous pity for the female intellect that can not manage two servants without getting gray and wrinkled in the process, while he bosses half a hundred employees without turning a hair. The man who has been through the domestic mill on his own account will never speak in that tone of voice to his wife.

He will know, from experience, that no rules that apply to other labor have any bearing on the servant girl question. Like the wind, she cometh and she goeth as she listeth, and no man or woman knows when or for how long she is going to list. Neither will this paragon of a husband make unfavorable comments on the culinary products of Hilda and Mary Jane. He will eat what is set before him, asking no questions for sympathy sake, and reflecting when things go wrong that he would get no better results in his own affairs if he had to depend for his help on those who neither wanted to learn their business nor desired to keep their places.

A Difference.

And just as it is a good thing for men to learn to cook, it is also well for a woman to have had the actual experience of earning her own living before she is married.

No woman who has ever earned a dollar looks at one as does the woman who has always had her spending money given her. To the one it means something that comes easy and goes easy. To the other it represents toil and weariness, sometimes the very life blood of a person. She knows how hard it is to win, how hard to keep, and the anxiety and humiliation it means to be without it, and she spends it prudently and judiciously.

The woman who has never earned her own living thinks that business is a picnic, and that when a man goes downtown of a morning he departs to enjoy himself with his friends. No woman who has stood behind the counter, or bent over a typewriter and taken part in the daily grind of business cherishes any illusions about its being fun. She knows it for the heart wearing, nerve wrecking thing it is, and her comprehension of its trials keeps her from inflicting on her husband many of the unconscious cruelties that the woman who is totally ignorant of business practices upon her suffering spouse.

Also the business woman remembers how, when she came home at night exhausted and with nerves fretted to fiddle strings, it seemed to her that just one more calamity would strain things to the breaking point. You may be sure that such a woman never meets a weary man at the front door with a catalogue of everything that has gone wrong in the house during the day. Neither does she expect a man with weighty affairs on his mind, and whose time is money, to stop downtown to match samples, or hunt through a department store for a spool of elephant breath silk thread.

What we need is a common plane of mutual helpfulness and understanding on which the sexes can meet. Men and women should know the trials and tribulations under which each labors in order to sympathize with them. It's because men have never done women's work that they think that cooking and sewing and mending and baby tending is a job so easy that a woman could do it with one hand tied behind her. It is because women have never had to get up, sick or well, and go down town to work that they think that a man's business is a cinch.

It is because men have never had to ask for every cent they spend that they do not realize how humiliating it is to a woman to have no personal income of her own. It is because few women care to smoke that the average wife nags her husband about scenting up the parlor curtains with tobacco.

With personal knowledge of the difficulties of the situation will come sympathy and toleration. So the man who can cook, and the woman who has kept books will meet on a common plane of mutual good will that will make matrimony a success instead of the failure it so often is through the sheer inability of husband or wife to comprehend the difficulties the other faces.

Injun Giver.

Robbie met a neighbor who was smoking some fine, fragrant tobacco sent by his son in America. He took out his own pipe ostentatiously.

"Have you a match, Sandy?" he queried.

The match was forthcoming, but nothing more.

"I do believe," said Robbie, "I hae left ma tobacco at hame."

"Then," said Sandy, after a silence, "ye micht gie ma back ma match."

How Strict Are You with Your Daughter?

—answer it, parents. Are you too strict, or aren't you strict enough? Either course is liable to be disastrous. Your daughter's welfare means as much to you as anything else in the world, yet do you know what to watch in bringing her up.

There are few men who know the problem as Judge Freschi does. For years a magistrate in the City of New York, his work has brought him into personal contact with thousands of girls and their stories. He has had an opportunity to analyze the causes of their failure. His name has become known throughout the country as their benefactor.

The angle from which he discusses diverse elements that enter into the upbringing of the girl is a new one that you probably have never thought of. As a thoughtful mother or father you ought to read what he says in his article, "How Strict Are You with Your Daughter?" It appears in the

By DOROTHY DIX.

EVERY few days I get a letter from some man who emits a wild and heartbroken wail because, he says, woman has gotten out of her proper place. Many of these melancholy gentlemen go so far as to express the further opinion that it is the business of the press to try to shoo the feminine sex back to where it belongs.

Speaking for myself, I should gladly use what little influence I have with women in trying to corral them in their own particular little stockade if I only knew where that sacred spot was.

What is woman's proper place, anyhow? Will some wise brother please arise in meeting and speak right out and tell us?

Is woman's proper place the home? None of us deny it, and the great majority of women will answer the call in person if you ring their front door bell.

A Foolish Waste.

But what about the tens of thousands of women who have no home in which to stay, whom no man asked to marry them, and who are fated to never know the cling of little children's arms about their necks? It is all right to say, "Back to the home for yours, sister," to the woman who has got a good husband, and babies, and a cottage or a flat of her own, but how are you going to keep women in the domestic sphere who have neither a kitchen, nor a nursery, nor a man of their own? I give it up.

Is the woman who paints pictures, or writes, or acts out of her proper place? I take it that when the good God put talent into a woman's head that He knew what He was about, and that He intended her to use the gifts He gave her. Otherwise it would be a foolish waste of valuable material.

Certainly we should all be much poorer if there had been no Rosa Bonheurs, no George Eliots, no Charlotte Brontes, no Mrs. Humphry Wards, none of the thousand delicate and facile female pens that delight and entertain us every day of our lives.

Is Maude Adams out of her sphere when she makes us cry? Is Rose Stahl out of her sphere when she makes laugh? Are Melba and Tetrazzini and Cavallieri out of their places when they lift us up to the seventh heaven with their voices? Yet all of these women occupy conspicuous places and are very much in public.

A Question.

Evidently the men who complain of women being out of their proper places are thinking about the business women. Is a clever, strong, healthy young girl out of her place when she goes to work to support herself instead of sitting down idly at home and adding to the burden of a poor, weary, hump-shouldered old father, who has toiled like a dray horse to raise his family and has come almost to the end of his strength?

Are the girls of a family who have good business positions and who bring their money home to make an old mother comfortable and educate younger brothers and sisters out of their places during working hours?

Is the woman who is married to a man whose health fails out of her place because she puts her shoulder to the wheel and helps the domestic wagon out of the ditch instead of letting it sink down into the mire?

If you ask my opinion, I think that every woman who needs money for herself, or for her family, is exactly where she ought to be when she is earning it by her honest work. If the men of her family can't support her, there is no reason why she should not support herself, and help them, too, if they need it. For my part, I have never been able to see why it isn't just as feminine a thing, and as much in her line of duty, for a woman to be a prop to a man as it is to be a millstone about his neck.

Is woman out of her place when she belongs to clubs? Isn't it woman's place to add to the sweetness and light of life, and haven't the women's clubs done more toward fostering the higher education, beautifying towns, supporting art galleries and picture shows, and giving the country a general esthetic uplift, than all other causes combined?

Is the woman of wealth, and intelligence, and leisure out of her place when she devotes her energies to public reforms and charities? Where else would we look for our great philanthropies? Who would raise the money for our hospitals, for our fresh-air funds, for our tuberculosis camps, for our societies for the prevention of cruelty to animals? There is not a community in this country that hasn't some old maid or childless widow who is its good Samaritan, and nobody accuses her of being out of her proper sphere, except the evildoers on whose corns she treads.

Out of Place?

There are those who contend that a woman is out of her proper place—oh, millions of miles out of it—when she takes an interest in politics and wants to vote. Why? Has she not as much at stake in the country as any man? Does she not pay as many taxes? Is she not affected by the laws just as men are? If food prices advance, does not the burden of making the family income go further fall upon her? If the streets are dirty and the water supply impure, does she not have to nurse her sick, because of it, and if they die, is not her heart broken over their loss even more than any man's? How can she be out of her place when considering the questions that are most vital to her?

The truth is, there is no place in all the wide world that is not woman's place. First at the cradle and last at the tomb, she pillows man's head in infancy on her breast, and kisses shut his eyes when he dies, and there is no hope, no joy, no struggle, no labor, no victory, no defeat in his life in which her place is not always by his side.

It is idle to talk about sending woman back to her place. The earth is hers, and the fullness thereof, just as much as it is a man's.

: The Divorce Question :

By JERE R. COOKE.

(It may be asked why I, of all men, should write upon questions affecting marriage and other relations. In reply, I would say that one who has gone through what I have, suffered as much as I have, and seen so much of the world and its hard side may possibly have something to say that will be of use to others. I hope so at least.—JERE COOKE.)

A WOMAN recently gave the reason why she desired a divorce from her husband as "so they may cultivate a beautiful friendship."

It goes without saying that it is easier to be a friend than a helpmeet, but to sacrifice the one for the other is to barter the real jewel for the past brilliant. There can be no harmony among such people.

No sympathy, whether he be called by the sacred name of helpmeet or the uncertain cognomen of friend.

The best friend a man can have is his wife, and marriage is the mold into which the highest friendship is poured.

The true secret of success in marriage is that the wife is the best friend or chum or "pal" her husband has. Why shouldn't she be? She shares his sorrows; why not his joys?

It is not an uncommon thing that the man weds the sweetheart of his childhood, the playmate of his boyish days, when, hand in hand, they roamed together and no boy chum could tear them apart.

Puppy love is supplanted by the great transcendental love that cements a life-long intimate friendship. A great man proved his appreciation of this and his desire for its continuance by replying, when asked the question what one thing he would most desire should he have to depart this life, "My wife's second husband."

Three Reasons.

He was not like the man who, being asked how many times he was married, replied:

"Three times. Once for love and twice for general housework."

Pity the poor woman who slaves for her husband, only to die of hard labor and leave her savings to his second wife.

A woman who was ill-mated once complained, "My friend is so much more sympathetic than my husband. He is so considerate, so kind."

It afterward developed that this friend grew weary of his attentions in a much shorter time than the husband. Comparisons are always fatal.

The man who holds his tired, hard-working wife in comparison to the painted woman he meets upon the street always loses. Poverty is one curse of domestic infelicity, but the wife who can share it with her husband has found the marriage goal. There is an argument for incompatibility which does not extend to the statutory ground.

No woman should be compelled to spend her earthly existence with a brute, an inebriate, or a libertine, and no man should be forced to abide with a woman who has dropped from her pinnacle as a helpmeet to a nag or a shrew.

An unwise man once attempted to cure his wrangling wife by breaking a piece of the best china at every one of these spells. It was expensive and not effective.

Another friend, with more success used to call in a doctor every time hysteria developed. The patient improved rapidly.

A seemingly unending wrangle can, by diplomatic treatment, terminate, as a mob of violence is quelled by the cold water of the firemen, rather than by the bullets of the police.

Called a Brute.

The social animal man is sometimes called a brute, and frequently is a brute.

He thinks he knows it all and wants to be the head and boss of the house.

No woman who is a pal to her husband need ever fear any other woman. Her husband will not join another lodge so that he can get one more night out a week.

If the "other woman" gets him she is a better pal to him. She jollies rather than scolds, she laughs and does not cry, she is a good sport, she gets his money, and she has a good time.

If he is as old as Methuselah she calls him a "boy." He likes it and spends his cash.

Few men are natural pikers with their chums. They take a certain pride in playing the limit.

The woman with the harnessed lap dog gives out a suspicion that she is no longer a "pal" to her husband. She has the dog in leash, but there are no strings on the man. "To have and to hold" each other's hearts.

It is not so much that they live together as that they love each other.

The two lives who hope, fear, plan, play, enjoy, suffer, deny, possess, work and win together need no divorce court to adjust their difficulties.

They are united in life and in death they are not divided.

Do You Know---

The Prussian Guards, whom King George and the German Emperor reviewed recently, were originated by Frederick I, whose ambition it was to form a royal bodyguard of giants. Every country was ransacked by his agents to supply recruits, and no head that towered above the crowd, even in the bazaars of Aleppo or Cairo, could escape the crimps of the Prussian King. The most extravagant sums were offered to men of exceptional inches, an Irishmen, more than seven feet high, who was picked up by the Prussian Ambassador in London, receiving a bounty of $6,000.

Should the United States purchase from Mexico 250,000 square miles of Mexico for $30,000,000 it will not be the first addition by purchase to the great American Commonwealth. A century ago Napoleon I relinquished France's claim to Louisiana and Arkansas for $15,000,000, and in 1867 Russia exchanged Alaska for a cash payment by the United States of $7,000,000. More recently a strip of Central America, embracing five miles on either side of the Panama Canal, was purchased for $10,000,000 from the Republic of Panama.

Nothing is more amusing than to watch on a winter's day the marvelous intelligence with which the pigeons of St. Mark's, in Venice, can discriminate between residents and visitors in the grand square of that city, the Plaza of St. Mark. The moment a foreigner shows his face in the plaza the pigeons set upon him in crowds, hoping to be fed. They do not trouble the natives, who may be sunning themselves by the hundred in the square.

Daysey Mayme's July 4

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THE call had read "Ladies Not Admitted," and while a crowd of little girls stood outside pouting, crying and even kicking on the closed door in the modern, ladylike way of expressing opposition, a band of grave-faced little men in blouse and bib held serious deliberation on the inside.

"We are assembled," said President Chauncey Devere Appleton, "to utter protest against the parentally expurgated plan of a Fourth of July. We are here to make public our opinion of any parent who would have children spend the Fourth as if the corpse of Freedom lay shrouded in the next room."

A Riot.

Every delegate was on his feet at once; there were motions, countermotions, protests, howls and hisses, a confusion that was augmented by the discovery that the ladies on the outside were peeking through the keyhole. After the president had put the seal of secrecy on the proceedings by closing the keyhole with a borrowed piece of chewing gum, order was restored, and the following resolutions were adopted:

"That life is not what it used to be when a boy could put a cannon cracker under a maiden aunt's chair and gorge himself with ice cream while the family were bringing her to;

"That unless a boy has a chance to make himself look like a bursted firecracker, there is no way for him to become distinguished, and mothers have no right to monopolize all the surgical operations;

"That if this demand for everything noiseless isn't checked soon, mothers will be refusing the boy babies the doctors bring them because they are not equipped with rubber tires;

"That girls are ideal creatures because they are happy with dolls, and the only noise in playing with a doll is a squeak that is squeaked out the first day;

What Father Did.

"That mothers place too much stress on boys getting their hands shot off, considering that they never look at their sons' hands without screaming out that they need washing;

"That father used cannon crackers when he was young, and still has hands left to spank us."

The discovery that the ladies on the outside had used the eternal feminine weapon of defense in boring a hole through the seal of secrecy broke up the meeting, and the gentlemen poured out and the ladies poured in, in wild confusion.

Why He Left.

A dispute once arose between a landlord and his tenant. The latter had given notice to quit, but would not put a bill in his window to say that his house was "To Be Let."

To make matters worse, they went to law about it. The judge, having heard the case, made an order for the defendant to put a bill up within fourteen days.

The landlord was so overjoyed at his victory that on the fourteenth day he took a friend with him around to the house to chaff his tenant. The bill was up in the window plain enough, but under it was another bill, which ran as follows:

"Cause of leaving—bad drains."

Superfluous Hair Truths

Stop Experimenting

There are but few depilatories sold. You think there are hundreds because you have used the same identical preparations under several different names. This is easily explained. Women stop using

So-Called Hair Removers

when they learn that they are harmful. Therefore, they can not be sold under the same name for any length of time. Then the identical, worthless, harmful concoctions are given new names and advertised again as totally different preparations to

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DON'T BE DISCOURAGED.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 18 and am employed by one of the largest railroads in the East.

I have been keeping steady company with a young lady two years my senior and visit this girl about two or three times a week. I asked her to become my wife and she told me I would have to get her father's consent. I had a conference with her father, and the only opposition he has to our marriage is that I am too short. I am 5 feet 3 inches and receive a good salary. Would you advise me to discontinue my attentions to this girl or continue to keep company with her, in the hope that her father will see the folly of his ways and consent to our marriage? GEORGE W.

If her father's objections are based solely on your height, I am sure that in time he will withdraw them.

You need time for a more important reason: If your stature were all that is desired, your age is not. Trust me in this, my boy—no boy at 18 is old enough to select a wife. For your own sake, be glad to wait.

IT WILL BE A GOOD LOSS.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

young man two years my senior,

I am deeply in love with a and we have been keeping company for the past nine months, but lately at a party to which he had taken me he met a girl and took her home. I wrote him the next day asking him if I had done anything to offend him. I have not received an answer. Should I write to him again, as I would not like to lose him? C. V. M.

He treated you most rudely, and you would show a finer spirit if you resented it and refused to see him again. Do not write, and make up your mind to this: The best thing that can happen to a girl is to "lose" an escort who is not a gentleman, for such a one behaves much worse after marriage.

DON'T CALL AGAIN.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 19 and very popular. Lately I received word from a young man who used to call on me pretty steady that he would like to have me call him on the telephone. I was informed he was not in, and, as he is a traveling salesman, I believed this, but called a few days later only to be told the same story; this time leaving my name saying he should call me up. Now, as the young man who received my message is also a good friend of mine, and spoke quite confidential to me on the phone, also telling me that the other young man is just jollying me along, I am in doubt as to what course to pursue.

BABE.

You should not have called in the first place, and your second effort does not speak much for your dignity.

The young man, my dear, who is worth having will always take the initiative. He will always make every effort to communicate with the girl he loves, and ask only that she be pleased at his overtures.

Preparing Her.

Farmer Wayback (starting home from the station)—"Please, ma'am, do you wear false teeth?"

Fair Boarder (for summer)—"Sir?"

Farmer Wayback—"Oh, I don't mean to be curious. Only this road is a leetle rough, and if your teeth ain't good and fast you'd better put 'em in your pocket."

On Independence Day

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

THE hour: Nine in the evening. The day: The Fourth of July. The year: That is immaterial, since the story told that night is always young. The personnel: A young man of 24 and a girl of 19.

The scene: A secluded corner of a porch step. Around this young man and woman were other young men and women who were showing their patriotism with firecrackers, torpedoes, skyrockets and other illuminating and noisy means. There was a momentary darkness. The last skyrocket had proved a fizzle and there was some delay in starting another. Under cover of the darkness, and unheard by the others in their merriment, the young man whispered in the girl's ear, "I love you," and she replied "And I love you."

First Avowal.

It was their first avowal of affection, and some years later, the girl, who had become a matron, sighed and said: "You know I lost my independence on Independence Day."

Every one who loves and is loved loses a measure of independence, and this woman was such a clinging, helpless creature, that she lost all she had. Perhaps that was because she heard her little love story in a day when girls were taught that to be happy sweethearts and wives they must be long-suffering and submissive.

She made no reservation of her affection, and their courtship proved a stormy one. He flirted, there was coolness, heat, anger, love, indifference, impatience, cruelty or kindness personified as the mood suited him. Through every change in him she remained the same patient, grateful, loving girl, always with arms outstretched to welcome him when he deigned to turn her way.

No Nation Free.

She put herself beneath his feet in her excessive humility, and after they were married he saw to it that she remained there. She had put her own pricemark on herself. We all do. He looked at the mark, and saw that it resembled the tag Public Opinion put many centuries ago on the worm.

There is an independence of nations, and an independence of individuals, and the former depends on the latter. No nation is free if its citizens are bound.

The men are independent and free. The women are gradually achieving an independence that will give them every right enjoyed by the men.

It is a great thing, but not enough. I want an independence for every girl who loves, and which she, and she alone, must secure.

I want her to hold her little head and heart high, and give her love and life to no man who will treat them lightly.

I want her, when she says "I love you," to add, "but my happiness, my usefulness, my well-being, do not depend on becoming the wife of any man."

Then he will love her, appreciate her and want her all the more.

Inference Obvious.

Knickerbockered and resplendent in dazzling tartan stockings, Algernon sauntered from the clubhouse to the golf links; and there, on the first tee, having carefully adjusted his monocle and "addressed" the ball for a prodigious length of time, began his game.

"By the way, caddie," he remarked pleasantly, "what sort of a game does Mr. McJones play?"

The diminutive young Scotchman screwed up his weather-beaten face.

"Mr. McJones? He canna play at all."

"Ah!" said Algernon. "You see, I'm playing a match with him tomorrow. Suppose I shall beat him easily—what?"

The caddie shook his head wisely. "Na," he replied; "that ye will not."

Adding Fuel to Flame.

A quarrelsome couple, having exhausted many subjects, came to discussing tombstones, and the husband asked:

"My dear, what kind of stone do you suppose they will give me when I die?"

"Brimstone," was the reply.

In your hand you hold a five-cent piece.

Right at the grocer's hand is a moisture-proof package of Uneeda Biscuit. He hands you the package—you hand him the coin. A trifling transaction?

No! A remarkable one—for you have spent the smallest sum that will buy a package of good food; and the grocer has sold you the most nutritious food made from flour—as clean and crisp and delicious as it was when it came from the oven.

As Easy To Keep The Hair From Turning Gray As To Keep The Scalp Clean

AND there is no reason in the world why you should hesitate to restore to your hair its lost color and vitality, if it is fading and turning gray, any more than that you should foolishly refuse to use a remedy for dandruff or any other scalp trouble.

Sickness, nervousness, impoverished blood or deficient scalp nutrition may cause premature grayness; sometimes it is inherited. Whatever the cause, gray hair adds from 10 to 20 years to the age, and a young woman, even 25 or 30, with very gray hair is passed as old.

Robinnaire Hair Dye is a pure tonic restorative to bring back to faded or gray hair its own original color and lost beauty. It is not to bleach or change the original color, and should not be confused with such. It is prepared in our own laboratory from a formula we know to be beneficial, and we guarantee it to be non-injurious. It keeps the hair soft, lustrous and in its beautiful, natural color, and as it does not stain the scalp cannot be detected. Prepared for light, medium and dark brown and black hair and is for sale at druggists and toilet goods departments. 75c. By parcel post, 83c.

Send us the name of your druggist if he cannot supply you, and we will send you FREE samples of the famous Robinnaire Face Powder and Rose Cold Cream. Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta, Ga.

SLATON DOUBTS RIGHT TO PAY TEACHERS

Governor Asks Opinion on Amendment Purporting to Add Power in Expenditures.

Governor Slaton has grave doubts whether the recently ratified constitutional amendment purporting to increase the Executive's borrowing power has not really put a limitation upon his powers rather than extended them.

So serious are these doubts in the Governor's mind that he has referred the matter to the Attorney General for an opinion, and will not undertake to do anything in relieving the present situation with respect to paying the common-schoolteachers until his mind has been cleared up by that official.

If the amendment has fully authorized the Governor to proceed to the relief of the teachers, unquestionably he will give the matter that direction, but the peculiar wording of the amendment, coupled with the statutes involved, has given rise to perplexing doubts in the Executive mind as to just exactly what the law does contemplate, and he hesitates to attempt a loan for any purpose whatever until he knows exactly what terms and conditions a loan under the amendment would impose, not only upon the State, but upon the source of the loan.

Anxious to Pay Teachers.

Governor Slaton is anxious to see the school teachers paid. Of that there is no doubt. But the uncertainty in his mind as to the law in the case, as well as the marked stringency of the money market at this time, has prompted him to make haste slowly.

If it might be so arranged the Governor prefers that such loan or loans as he may contract be made with Georgia bankers and financiers. If the matter can not take this direction, however, the Governor will be forced to go East for such funds as he needs, and he has reason to suspect that it will be rather expensive borrowing at this time.

Naturally, the Governor does not wish to involve the State in a transaction calling for an abnormal expense item by way of interest.

The Governor wishes to relieve the present pressing necessities of the common-school teachers, and in addition to that he hopes to secure from the present General Assembly early legislation of a character calculated to avoid delaying the payment of the teachers in the future.

Legislature to Co-operate.

There is a marked disposition in the Legislature, moreover, to co-operate cordially with the Governor in this matter.

During the present three-day recess of the House and the Senate the Governor will address his attention almost exclusively to the problem of financing the teachers in their present necessities and planning for their permanent relief.

When the Legislature meets again Monday it is likely that the Governor will put himself immediately in touch with that body, to the end that the present troublesome status of affairs may be worked out legally, equitably and speedily.

Head of Navy Yard Makes 'Bossy' Ruling

WASHINGTON, July 4.—The Secretary of the Navy has telegraphed the commandant of the navy yard at Portsmouth, N. H., asking if there is anything in the Constitution to prevent a certain woman's cow from crossing the navy yard to its annual pasturage at Kittery.

Secretary Daniels does not give the name of the woman, but he says she has had the privilege of getting a cow across for about 30 years. He doesn't know why any objection was raised this year and he proposes to find out.

Mother's Advice To Her Daughter

A Real Live Doll to Fondle Is Woman's Greatest Happiness.

One of the most important matters about which women concern themselves is their future status as a grandmother. And she is wisdom itself who knows of or learns of that famous remedy, Mother's Friend. This is an external application for the abdominal muscles and breasts. It certainly has a wonderful influence, allays all fear, banishes all pain, is a most grateful encouragement to the young, expectant mother, and permits her to go through the period happy in mind, free in body and thus destined to anticipate woman's greatest happiness as nature intended she should.

The action of Mother's Friend makes the muscles free, pliant and responsive to expansion. Thus all strain and tension upon the nerves and ligaments is avoided, and, in place of a period of discomfort and consequent dread, it is a season of calm repose and joyful expectation.

There is no nausea, no morning sickness, no nervous twitching, none of that constant strain known to so many women, hence Mother's Friend is really one of the greatest blessings that could be devised.

This splendid and certain remedy can be had of any druggist at $1.00 a bottle, and is sure to prove of inestimable value, not only upon the mother, but upon the health and future of the child. Write to Bradfield Regulator Co., 122 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for their book to expectant mothers.

Board Commends City Park Ice Cream

Following the declaration of J. O. Cochran, president of the City Park Board, that he would have the city health officers investigate the quality of ice cream and soft drinks sold in the city parks by Concessionaire C. L. Chosewood, several members of the Park Board went out and, after a test of some of Mr. Chosewood's ice cream, exonerated him on their own authority.

Those who testified in his behalf were Commissioners S. S. Shepard, M. B. Young, R. A. Burnett and L. C. Green. A resolution recommending the quality of the refreshments was then proposed by Commissioner Young and adopted.

Commodore Palmer Loses Race to Wife

NEW YORK, July 4.—Mrs. Edgar Palmer, wife of Rear Commodore Palmer, of the American Yacht Club, yesterday administered a good beating to her husband—in a yacht race.

Mrs. Palmer, in her own yacht, the Joyette, outsailed and outmaneuvered her husband in a thrilling race, which she won by seventeen seconds.

WAVES U. S. FLAG IN CANADA AND STARTS RIOT

Overpatriotic American Flaunts Emblem in Regiment's Face and Is Beaten Up.

WINNIPEG, July 4.—An overpatriotic American started a small-sized riot on Main Street here to-day by waving an American flag in the face of the Tenth Canadian Regiment as they were returning home from camp. In the fight that followed, soldiers and civilians alike participated.

The American was roughly handled and the flag tossed into the street and trampled on by the marching soldiers. Before the police could interfere several who took part in the fight received black eyes and cuts on the face.

The incident happened when the streets were crowded with friends of the returning soldiers. The young American, who is employed in a local restaurant, as he waved the flag at the soldiers shouted, "Hurrah for the American Eagle!"

Colonel J. B. Mitchell, in command of the regiment, ordered one of his men to quiet the American and tell him to put the flag down. As the soldier sprang forward to obey, several civilians closed in on the American and a fight commenced, which finally was quelled by the police.

No arrests were made. In all probability the matter will be taken up with the American Consul General.

GIRL, 7, HOTEL VETERAN; NEVER MADE MUD PIES

Miss Christine Lewis, who has spent all of her seven years in hotels.

Doesn't want to live in a residence ever, says petitie miss, who is the pet of the Majestic's guests.

Likes picture shows better than romping, because romping soils her dresses.

Demure Miss at the Majestic Can Order Dinner Like a Real Epicure.

Think of it! Tobe 7 years old and not know what a mud pie looks like.

That is little Miss Christine Lewis, demure, pretty, petite daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Lewis, who has spent all of her blissful seven years in a hotel and wouldn't live anywhere else even if her parents insisted.

Miss Christine is at the Majestic at present. She can order a dinner as well as her mother, and she orders the porters and bellmen around with the nonchalance of a legislator. From the time she awakes in the morning and takes here seat in the dining room at 9 o'clock until she is tucked in bed at 8, after bidding guests on the veranda good-night, she is the sunshine of the hotel.

Miss Christine is a veteran.

"Waiter," she beckons at the table, "I don't care for consomme to-night. You may bring me chicken, if you have it, and veg'tables. And I want ice cream. And it's hot in here; I wish you'd start the 'lectric fan. Please don't forget the ice cream."

Mud pies are unkonwn to her. Miss Christine's frocks know not the stain of the red Georgia soil. In the afternoon, instead of playing in the street as most children do, she goes to a picture show. And there she sits up straight and watches the romances unreel. It is more fun, says Miss Christine, than playing in the hot sun.

NEED MORE FUNDS TO SAVE INFANTS

Contributions for Free Milk Exhausted and Needy Babies Are Found Every Day.

Contributions to buy milk for needy infants through July, August and September continue to come in to Mrs. Rowlett, leader in the campaign waged by the Atlanta Mothers' Congress, but not near enough money has been received to supply the demand. More of Atlanta's more fortunate citizens must give to the worthy cause if the little lives are to be saved.

All the contributions received so far have been distributed. Mothers of 29 babies have been given enough free milk tickets to last three months. All the milk purchased by the Mothers' Congress is passed upon by the City Health Inspector, and pure, fresh milk is assured.

If the present high rate of infant mortality is to be reduced, contributions enough to supply all needy infants with good milk from now until October 1 must be made. A check for $10 will give a baby a quart of nourishing milk daily for three months. Without this milk it stands a poor chance of surviving.

Send in that contribution to-day, and perhaps save a little life.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

Keith Vaudeville at Forsyth.

Edward Abeles, the distinguished comedy actor, who has created a number of important leading roles with great plays, is making himself a real favorite with the patrons of the Forsyth this week, in the presentation of his excellent playlet, called "He Tried To Be Nice." Miss Charlotte Lander gives valuable assistance to the star in the act and it has won applause that made extra curtain calls at every performance. The bill is one of exceptional quality and real interest. There are acts that are of a keen and drawing power and collectively make up a program that is full of good things.

Talking Pictures at the Grand.

Matinee and night performances of Edison's talking pictures will be continued Friday and Saturday at the Grand. The program is new—different from the first part of the week, and just as interesting. Interest in the pictures has grown steadily. The Edison novelty has won on pure merit and the big Grand is being well filled at every performance.

Extra Matinee at Bijou To-day.

The pleasing impression made by "A Trip to Paris" on Monday at the Bijou has brought crowded houses to the theater all week. The warm weather has not affected the attendance, and Bijou patrons have shown their appreciation by the generous applause and frequent curtain calls. "A Trip to Paris" is one of the best tabloids that has been offered. Extra matinee to-day at 2:30.

JUDGES CHOSEN FOR SLOGAN CONTEST

Georgian's Prize Offer for Best Button Caption Increases Interest in 500,000 Club.

The Georgian's 500,000 club movement was given a new impetus Thursday when three of the best known men in Atlanta became actively identified with it as judges of the $25 slogan prize contest. They are:

John W. Grant, Wilmer L. Moore and Walter C. Taylor.

"The constant stimulus our newspapers give to the Atlanta spirit is one of the finest things in the city, or any city in the country for that matter," said Mr. Grant. "The 500,000 booster club idea will result in much good, and the census of 1920 will be ample proof of it."

"I want to help the 500,000 club all I can," said Mr. Moore.

"I often think that we don't know how to appreciate Atlanta until we get out of it," said Walter Taylor. "Often when I was in other towns and heard of the things being done in Atlanta, I got as homesick as when I first left home as a boy.

"Every traveling man, every Atlantan who goes away for a trip, as well as all good boosters at home, should wear one of the 500,000 club buttons. You can't calculate the boosting that such a plan will effect."

Since The Georgian offered $25 for the best slogan for the buttons interest has greatly increased in the enterprise to get 500,000 people into Atlanta by 1920.

The contest will last for ten days, the winner of the prize to be announced in Hearst's Sunday American of July 13. All entrants must mail their slogans to the Contest Editor, Atlanta Georgian. They will be transmitted to the judges and merit will decide. The originator of the one selected will be given $25 in cash.

It is an easy way to make $25. It's a chance to render a civic service. Thousands of buttons bearing the slogan will be distributed. A few words penned in an idle moment may speak volumes.

Optical Tucks to Cure 'Cross Eyes'

CHICAGO, July 4.—Tucks are being used a great deal this year as a remedy for the perplexing ailment known to the laity as "cross eyes" and to men of science as convergent strabismus.

Such was the gist of a paper read by Dr. George A. Suffa for the American Homeopathic Society.

The method of clearing the complicated visions of these unfortunates consists in taking a tuck in one of the muscles that control the ball of the eye.

DILLON KNOCKS OUT M'KINNON IN TEN ROUNDS

INDIANAPOLIS, July 4.—Jack Dillon, of Indianapolis, scored a knock-out over Bill McKinnon, of Boston, at the American Association ball park last night in the tenth round after the Easterner had been floored five times in the round. He was led to his corner a few seconds before the time for the final bell.

McKinnon was outclassed throughout and was sent to the mat on eleven different occasions.

In the semi-wind-up, scheduled for ten rounds, Young Saylor, of Indianapolis, stopped Battling Terry, of Pittsburg, in the fourth round.

BOXING
News of the Ring Game

Quite a number of big fights will be held throughout the country on the Glorious Fourth. The most important are the Ritchie-Rivers; Britton-White and Anderson-Cross affairs. All are scheduled to go 20 rounds.

Bud Anderson, who is one of the sensations of the season and who has put a stop to a number of good boxers, might also spring a surprise on Cross. The latter, though, has the advantage of being an exceedingly heavy hitter as well as a great ring general.

It would not be much of a surprise if the fans would wake up on the fifth and discover a new lightweight champion in the person of Joe Rivers.

Local fans are showing much interest in the Whitney-Thomas bout at New Orleans to-day. Both boys have fought here and have a large following. They are billed to go ten rounds.

Jimmy Gardner did not go very far in his come-back effort. Frank Klaus stopped the Lowell boy in a few rounds the other night at Boston.

Tommy Murphy says it is too hot to fight and has called off his match with Johnny Dundee for July 15. Jack White may take Murphy's place.

Tom McCarey, coast promoter, threatens to bill the Williams-Ledoux bout on July 29 as a championship battle. Coulon's refusal to fight has disgusted the Western promoter.

In the interest of clean sport, it is an excellent thing that the attendance was large. Smith and Rodel were profusely billed as the two stars of the white heavyweights, and no one who gave up real money to see their antics will ever be guilty of the same offense again.

PRIZE FIGHTING AT ITS best is open to most any criticism that any intelligent man cares to make. At its worst it is what was delivered last Friday night.

* * *

JUDGED MERELY BY THE standard set up for the sport by those interested, the Smith-Rodel fight was without apology. They were advertised as boxers, or prize fighters, and neither understood the rudiments of his trade. You can see more skill and scientific self-defense in the average barroom fight than either of these men displayed.

* * *

INASMUCH AS NOTHING IS produced without reason, the White Hope has had his mission. It was to make money. Ostensibly the idea was that a white fighter would be developed who would wrest the championship from the black man. No one, excepting a number of men who hated work, was particularly exercised over the black guardianship of the title. Most of us, if we thought of it at all, didn't care a jot who held it. But these men insisted that there ought to be a white champion, and a part of the public took their word for it.

* * *

THEN THE MERRY PROCESSion began, and we have had it for three years—a stream of clumsy, shovel-footed, pungle-fisted, slow-witted mutts that might be serving posterity by digging irrigation canals in the West. In the shelter of ruling that barred all of the real fighters in the world—the color line—they have been paraded before us and "matched" and "eliminated."

And out of the mess we have —Gunboat Smith.

YES, GENTLE READER, GUNboat Smith has been "developed." He is the works now. He is the White Hope. He has been developed in the White Hope elimination stakes. He quit in one fight. He doesn't know enough about boxing to tell his right from his left hand. He can hit a hard punch if the other doesn't know enough to move his chin out of the way of it within the ten seconds that elapse between the time it starts and the time it lands.

But it cost about $250,000 in paid admissions to "develop" him, and we ought to be proud of him.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

A CLUB which has improved within the last month is the Chicago American League team, and it looks now as if the White Sox might creep up into the race with the Athletics, although I do not see how they can make it close because they lost so much ground at the beginning of the season. If any team is to make a fight with Connie Mack's club it must be one possessing a good pitching staff, and Callahan has the Chicago twirlers working right now.

When big Ed Walsh edges around into his true form, as he is bound to do, the strength of the staff will be increased at least one-third. Walsh is rapidly nearing his normal form.

Hal Chase appears to have helped the White Sox to a great extent, and he is playing his old-time game at first base and hitting better than he has for several seasons.

Things do not appear to be running as smoothly as they might in Cleveland, and the Naps threaten to fall back after the spectacular spurt they made in the beginning of the season. Birmingham deserves all kinds of credit for the great early season fight which his club put up, and which carried it along with the Athletics for several weeks. The great showing of the Cleveland pitchers had much to do with this, especially the return of Falkenberg to form, the man who was sent back to the minors last year as no longer of big league caliber. But Falkenberg has been failing recently, and the rest of the pitching staff has not been producing the results it was showing in the earlier stages of the race. Perhaps the Naps have merely hit the slump which is due all teams in the course of the season, but the disconcerting reports about disagreements on the club does not increase the confidence in the club to any great extent.

Lajoie is not playing regularly, and the rumors of the big leagues have it that he has had trouble with the management. Maybe it is that the great Frenchman is reaching the end of his baseball route because of age, which slows the stars. I sincerely hope not, because I hate to see the great stars go, even when they are opponents of mine. Without Lajoie in the Cleveland line-up, the batting strength of the team is greatly reduced. It was the staunch batting, combined with the pitching, which produced the excellent results in the first part of the race.

But it is even more serious if Lajoie does not think he is yet ready to be retired to the bench, since this is bound to split the club into factions, and a team cut into cliques never is a success. I hope that the Naps regain their feet and make a tough fight, because it has always been a club that I admired.

SOMETHING must be said about what Chance has done with the Yankees at this stage. Figures show he has improved the club greatly. But he had to improve the team. There was no room for him to go back any further. Up and through the tenth of May Chance had won four games and lost sixteen. Since the tenth of May he has won slightly more than one-third of his battles, and they say he smiles once in a while now. The improvement is due to the increased efficiency of the infield combined with the brace taken by the pitching staff.

It would not surprise me to see the Yankees beat out either the St. Louis or Detroit teams. They are the only two that can be passed by the New York club to my way of thinking, but watch Chance next year. He is building slowly and surely, and every man who gets a regular berth on the team for next year will know Chance baseball. The former Cub can afford to experiment this season, as he has nothing to lose.

"NO wonder Chance and Jennings are practically nervous wrecks after managing ball teams for so many years," said Tinker, the other day. "I believe I am going 'nutty' myself. Managing a tail-end club is no nerve tonic. Look at the gray hairs in my head. And when you are losing, everything breaks against you, although understand that I am not whining about the breaks. The Reds just can't seem to get together on the fine points of the game, and they are what count in big league baseball."

The work of Tinker behind the Reds is beginning to show results now, however. It filled Joe's heart with delight to trim the Cubs in the series last week because, as is well known in baseball, there is no good feeling lost between Evers and Tinker.

"If there is one club we will beat out, it is Chicago," remarked Tinker at the beginning of the season. It does not look as if he could make good on that prediction now, but he has put a lot of fight into his team, and Tinker baseball is going to do a lot for Cincinnati if they will give Joe a chance out there. The Reds should crawl out of last place this year, I believe.

ONCE more the Pirates are in trouble because Wagner's knee has crowded him out of the game, and, with Honus gone, the infield is brittle. The Pittsburg team just appeared to be recovering its balance when this latest accident befell Fred Clarke's crew. The Pittsburg catchers were beginning to recover and this was helping the pitching staff. Instead of fighting for the pennant now, the Pirates have got to put up a stubborn battle to land in the first division. It has practically narrowed down to a question of whether they can beat the Cubs, and they will have to play a lot of baseball to do it. I do not figure them to head Philadelphia, Brooklyn or the Giants now.

THERE have been reports that McGraw was attempting to trade Burns and Herzog to Cincinnati for Beecher. McGraw does not discuss his prospective deals with me, but he has an old motto which is:

"Never break up a winner."

The trade looks ridiculous on the face of it. Herzog is one of the most reliable infielders in the league, and Burns is fast becoming a great outfielder.

BALDWIN HAS EASY TIME BEATING YOUNG SHUGRUE

NEW HAVEN, CONN., July 4.—Matty Baldwin, of Boston, had the better of the fifteen-round go with Young Shugrue, of Jersey City, last night. In the third and seventh Shugrue evened things, but at no other time was the Boston boy in any danger.

JIMMY SHECKARD GOES TO CINCINNATI CLUB

CINCINNATI, July 4.—It was announced from the office of the Cincinnati baseball club to-day that the deal for James Sheckard, the St. Louis National League team outfielder, has been officially consummated. Manager Tinker refused to waive claim on Sheckard.

EMPIRE LEAGUE NOTES

Waycross has released Second Baseman Brouthers, who has signed with Americus. He plays the outfield as well as the infield, and while with Waycross led the team at the bat and in base stealing. Internal dissension is given as the reason for his release. He is a clever player and will make good wherever he plays.

While not so well pleased with the start of the season, fans in Waycross are banking on Wild Bill Clark to give Waycross a pennant winning team.

In Chancy the Americus team has an outfielder that is bound to go up. He is a steady hitter, getting two and three hits a day almost as easy as some people eat watermelon. He is fast on his feet, too, and gets many hard chances in right.

By swapping a three-game series to enable Valdosta to play at home next week for a celebration Brunswick will play six straight games in Brunswick this month with Valdosta.

In Griffin, Americus has a first baseman who makes friends wherever he goes. He is always happy—in fact, has a winning smile besides a batting eye.

Few teams in any league boast of as many reliable left-handers as the Valdosta team. Otto Jordan seems to know good men when he sees them from the kind of material his team is made up of, even if the best of them have off days once in a while.

Some idea of the class of baseball that the Empire is capable of might be found in a daily comparison with the scores of the big leagues. There is hardly a bad game played in the Empire but what a worse one is found in a higher league.

Claiming that the Americus team had thirteen men in uniform on the Waycross diamond Wednesday, Waycross has filed a protest for the first game of the double bill. President Groover attended the game and had his attention called to the alleged violation of the 12-player rule.

No one in the Empire circuit any longer doubts that the league will be in existence next year. Plans have already been made in Cordele and one or two other cities for next year's schedule.

Practically every team in the league wants to win the race in the second half, and with this in view are making a number of changes. The race from now on is going to be a keen one and much faster baseball will be seen than ever before in the new league.

"Goat" Holliday, of Atlanta, the Empire's benedict, continues to pull off sensational plays at first. He has made a home in Waycross and can stay here as long as he plesses. "Goat's" wife is at every game to see him play and, needless to say, the youngster does even better than heretofore, which is saying a great deal.

Attendance reports continue to show that fans in the cities of this league will support good baseball. None of the cities expected to make money the first season and yet it is stated on good authority that more than one city is well ahead of the game financially and hopes to finish the season with a neat pile in the treasury. All of which sounds good for next year's season.

DIRECTORS DID NOT ASK SMITH ABOUT PITCHER

Manager Billy's Advice Was Not Sought in Purchase of "Pop-Boy" Smith.

ALTHOUGH Bill Smith, manager of the Crackers, does not know anything about the desire of the local team to get Clarence "Pop Boy" Smith, it is more than probable that the Crackers will have to do without the White Sox hurler.

According to a report from local headquarters Comiskey offered Smith to the Crackers for $2,000, under optional agreement. This was in a night letter Tuesday night. The local club accepted his proposition by wire on Wednesday morning.

Bill Smith, when called up this morning over the phone, said he knew nothing of the deal. This seems to be a queer condition of affairs, as the Cracker manager is usually notified of all deals.

Smith pitched the last four innings of the game against the Tigers on Wednesday, and held that hard-hitting crowd to one hit. This made such an impression that the White Sox decided to call off the trade.

The local club, however, is still after Smith and hopes to land him before the month is over. The Crackers are badly in need of another good twirler right now to help Conzelman, Dent, Price, Musser and Brady.

There is also a rumor going the rounds these days that everything is not running smooth between the local directors and Billy Smith. Smith's ignorance in the White Sox deal can not be accounted for, unless the directors are discouraged with several deals the Cracker manager has pulled off. There is still some talk about the way the local club has been stung in the Dent trade when they turned over $2,000 to Washington for the twirler.

BRAVES GET NEW CATCHER FROM ZANESVILLE TEAM

ZANESVILLE, O., July ...—Catcher Walter Tragresser, of the Zanesville Inter-State League Club, has been sold to the Boston National League Club for immediate delivery. The price is unknown.

Scout Bud Sharp, of the Boston club, followed Tragresser for several days and recommended him to be purchased. His batting average is .323. He is fifth among the ten leading sluggers and tenth among the leading run-getters of the league. His pegging to bases has been superior to any catcher in the league.

GIANT WEIGHT THROWERS MAY COMPETE IN MEET

LOS ANGELES, CAL., July ...—Mike Kiely, of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, has challenged Pat Donovan, of San Francisco, to throw the 56-pound weight for height in the coming all-around track and field meet here July 12. Kiely holds the world's intercollegiate record for heaving the pill over a bar, while Donovan holds the world's record for throwing the weight in the air, but not over a given height.

Southern Golf Improving Fast

Qualifying Scores Tell Story

By W. R. Tichenor.

SOME weeks ago I wrote that I was of the opinion that there had been a great improvement in the golf of our Southern players in the last few years. At the time this opinion was written I had at my command but few figures to show what improvement in the game had really been made.

In the Atlanta Athletic Club, with which I am more familiar than any other, I knew that there had been a sure but steady improvement in the scores returned in club tournaments each year.

I can well remember when it was something to be proud of for a player to "break" a 90, while now there is less noise made about "breaking" an 80.

But has there been the same progress made in the other clubs of the Southern circuit as there has been in Atlanta?

While it is of course impossible for any one person to be in close touch with the individual improvement of all of th eplayers of the various clubs of the South, still if we take the average scores of the first 32 players in the qualifying round of the Southern championship as a basis—and I am sure that you will agree with me that this is a fair basis—this question must be answered in the affirmative.

MY digging up the dope of the qualifying round o fthe Southern championship in 1907 I find that the average score of the first 32 in this event was 96.28, while at Montgomery this year the average of the same number of players was 80.75, which is an improvement of nearly a stroke a hole, or, to be exact, of 15.53 strokes in six years.

This is an improvement of slightly better than two strokes a year in the average of the players who attend the Southern.

If there has been this improvement in the play of our best players, then it necessarily follows that the play of the medium players has increased equally. It is surely easier for the man who plays around 90 or 95 to cut off two or more strokes from his score than it is for the man who is down at the 80 mark.

IF you have any doubts about the progress gradually taking place, examine the following table of the average scores returned during the last seven years by the first 32 players in the qualifying round of the Southern championship, and then doubt, if you can:

	Average Score.
1907—Atlanta	96.28
1908—Memphis	86.78
1909—Memphis	86.39
1910—Atlanta	89.09
1911—Nashville	81.54
1912—Chattanooga	84.75
1913—Montgomery	80.75

The increase in the average score in 1910 over that of 1909 was, I think, due largely to the fact that the Atlanta course is at least four strokes harder than Memphis, which, when taken into consideration, really makes a slight improvement over the previous year.

* * *

THE enormous decrease in the average score in 1911 was, in a measure, due to the adamant condition of the Nashville course. At this tournament it was nothing for the first hole, which is usually a good drive and a stiff half iron, to be reached and even overran with a tee shot. Drives of 300 yards were not at all unusual for even an ordinary player, while some of the shots pulled off were almost beyond belief.

* * *

IN 1909, 1910, 1911 and 1912 the qualifying round of the Southern was 36 holes. Now, if we take the best one of the two rounds returned by the first 32 players, we will find that the average of them was as follows:

	Average Best Round.
1909—Memphis	84.15
1910—Atlanta	87.06
1911—Nashville	79.81
1912—Chattanooga	82.40

In the amateur championship of the United States at Apawamis in 1911 the average score of the first 32 players in the qualifying round was 79.5, while at Wheaton last year the average was 79.21.

Now, on the face of the scores returned it would appear that the average at Montgomery was only a stroke and a half worse than the golf played at Wheaton last year; while if we look only at the average scores made this is true. Still we must take into consideration the fact that Wheaton is a harder course to play than Montgomery, and if the Southern had been played at Wheaton instead of Montgomery the average would have been several strokes more. Then, too, there is the fact that the difference of a stroke and a half average, when it is down at the 80 mark, is a far greater difference than it appears.

But look at it from whatever angle you desire the fact remains that the last seven years has brought forth a considerable improvement in the general play of our players, and while we have not yet attained the proficiency of the Eastern and Western golfers, still the difference is not near so great as it was a few years ago.

A NEW trophy has this year been offered by Charles D. Stickney, of New York, to be contested for by the clubs, which are members of the United States Golf Association, on the Saturday before the qualifying round in the amateur championship. The competition will consist of four-ball, best-ball matches. Two players from the same club will compose each side and the best medal score returned by any pair for 18 holes will determine the winner. Under the terms of this offer a club may enter as many pairs as it desires.

This trophy is to be played for each year and is to be held for a year by the winning club, but can never be won outright. It will consist of a regulation driver made in solid silver to which will be attached every year a silver ball. On one side of this ball will be engraved the names and score of the winning pair. On the other side will be inscribed the date, the place where played and the name of the winning club. To each of the winning pair will be given a handsome gold medal.

As it is proposed to have this contest on the Saturday before the opening of the tournament, it ought to prove most interesting, and especially is this so as the Saturday before the tournament is now given over to playing of four-ball matches by the entrants.

VETERANS WIN HONORS

Grant-Thornton Cop Georgia Title

GRANT and Thornton, in their prime the greatest double tennis team of all Dixie, demonstrated that they are strong players even now by defeating Mansfield and Smith on the courts of the Piedmont Driving Club Thursday afternoon, 6-4, 11-9, 7-5. The match was started several weeks ago, but was postponed in the second set and was taken up where it was left off.

Grant and Thornton won the opening game yesterday, making the score 8-7 in their favor, but Smith and Mansfield won the next and deuced the set again. Not until a total of twenty games had been played was the set decided.

In the third set after Grant and Thornton had Smith and Mansfield 3-1, the latter won the fifty game, and with the score fifteen-forty against them in the sixth pulled up and finally won, tying the score 3 all.

The only time that Smith and Manning led in games during the afternoon was in the third set when they had their opponents 5-4, but Grant and Thornton came strong in the next game, winning it and also the next two, which gave them the game 7-5 and also the match.

Mansfield did some pretty playing. Grant and Thornton directed most of their clouts at him and he handled them well. Grant and Thornton played him almost entirely throughout the match, preferring his returns to the rifle-like shots of Smith.

In the finals in the mixed doubles Miss Stanton and Thornton won by default from Miss Muse and Carter, as Carter is playing in the tournament now going on at Augusta.

Or poked some fellow athlete on the eye.

I hope to read a baseball yarn
wherein no low-browed gent
With pounds of solid bone beneath
his hat
Essays to break a jawbone or to register a dent
Upon his rival's coco with a bat.

We note that after some one had fractured his jaw with a wallop, Umpire McNulty retired from the game. This shows that Mr. McNulty is endowed with much intelligence.

Mr. Brennan of the Phillies put John McGraw away in less than a round, demonstrating that as a pitcher he is a great little pugilist.

We agree with Ed Smith that a belt is a hoodoo to a pugilist, especially if it lands in the region of the lower jaw.

An expert informs us that Mr. Beall used his head in a ball game. Jud Daley also uses his—as a place whereon to hang his cap.

The report that there will be 250 motorcycles in the Elgin road race leads one to suspect that said race will not smell like a garden of roses.

To Packey Mahoney of Ireland belongs the proud distinction of being the only white heavyweight pugilist Bombardier Wells can knock out.

Carl Morris is scheduled to perpetrate an alleged battle in Denver, showing how careless Denver is.

In addition to sizzling in the heat, Fred Clarke has to sit around and watch Tommy Leach in the act of burning up the league.

The fact that some of our citizens are heated over a polo match demonstrates how easy it is to heat some of our citizens.

"The Athletics will win in a walk," quoth Danny Murphy. Dan could have picked them to win in a crawl and still be conservative.

Having named the worst umpire in the world, it behooves Mr. Chance to tell us whom he considers the worst magnate.

It is passing strange that an athlete with a name like Eayrs should have escaped the eagle eye of Hugh Jennings.

The Boston Braves, in the act of driving Nap Rucker to cover, demonstrate that the heat affects some persons in peculiar ways.

After the Schalk deal it is hard to blame Milwaukee for declining to do business with the White Sox. Some persons have a prejudice against being stung twice in the same spot.

Jim Flynn avers that he will quit fighting after his next fracas. This will surprise those who suspected that he had quit fighting in Los Angeles some months ago.

FODDER FOR FANS

About the worst beating handed to any team this year was that which the Braves gave the Dodgers yesterday when they harvested seventeen runs and twenty hits against four runs and eleven hits for the Dodgers.

* * *

Mann, the Braves' outfielder, ambled to the plate six times yesterday, and drew a base on balls, a homer, two doubles and three singles.

* * *

Hendrix, of the Pirates, yielded ten hits to the Cardinals yesterday, but nary a Cardinal could cross the finish line, while four Pirates pattered over the pan during the combat.

* * *

A home run by Ping Bodie with Hal Chase on base enabled the White Sox to tie the score in the sixth inning, and they won out in the tenth over the Browns.

* * *

One of the reasons advanced for the numerous defeats suffered by the Yankees is that when their pitchers are pitching fine ball the batters are not batting and when the batters are batting to all portions of the lot the pitchers are weak and permit the opposition to outbat the New Yorkers. Which is a pretty substantial reason.

* * *

Otis Clymer, the outfielder, has been sold by the Cubs to the Braves.

* * *

Walter Johnson, the speed king of the Senators, never gave a more remarkable exhibition of his skill and coolness in pinches than in the fifteen-inning game against the Red Sox, when he held the Bostonians runless, despite the fact that they touched him for fifteen hits, including four doubles.

* * *

Kahler was in about the best form he has shown for the Naps this season, and as a result his team was enabled to triumph, 3 to 1, over the Tigers.

* * *

The Giants whaled the Phillies for the fourth successive time yesterday, boosting their own average to .652 and shoving the one-time league leaders down to .603, only 56 points ahead of the third place Dodgers.

* * *

All four first division clubs were winners in the American League yesterday.

* * *

The Athletics had the easiest sort of a time yesterday taking the fourth straight game of the series from the Yankees.

* * *

The Athletics and Yankees have clashed sixteen times this year and the Yankees have won just one lone game. All of which makes Connie Mack quite happy when he scans the schedule sheet and finds that his white elephants are billed for a combat with the New Yorkers.

* * *

It was "Birmingham" day in Cleveland yesterday, and about 8,000 fans turned out to cheer the youthful manager of the Naps and assure him that they did not believe one word Ban Johnson said about Birmy being an incompetent.

* * *

Jackson, of the Naps, increased his leadership as an American League batsman yesterday by cracking out three hits in four times up.

FRED TONEY IS LET OUT; BACK TO LOUISVILLE CLUB

CHICAGO, ILL., July 4.—Fred Toney, heavyweight pitcher of the Cub team, was given notice of his release to the Louisville team of the American Association. The big fellow never was much of a big league success, though pitching a fair sort of game now and then.

This release brings the Cubs down to the limit of twenty-five players.

DULUTH, MINN., July 4.—Elmer Smith, Duluth's right fielder and leading home-run getter of the Northern League, has been suspended by Manager O'Brien, who received a telegram from the secretary of the National Baseball Commission ordering such action. The Jackson club of the Southern Michigan League claims Smith.

Carter Plays Ramspeck in Finals

AUGUSTA, July 4.—The ladies' tennis championship was won here Thursday by Mrs. Johnson after three terrific sets, by a score of 7-9, 6-2, 6-3. Miss Adger's forehand drive is one that would do credit to anyone, either man or woman, and it was on the strength of this drive that she won the first set. Mrs. Johnson won the rest on her ability to cover her court and her placing.

The men's singles were carried through the semi-finals, the survivors being E. V. Carter, Jr., of Atlanta, ex-South Atlantic champion, and Carl Ramspeck, also of Atlanta and also an ex-South Atlantic States champion.

The final between these two will be played off this afternoon about 6 o'clock, and should prove one of the prettiest matches ever seen in Augusta. These two have met once before in Augusta, the event being the challenge round two years ago, when Ramspeck was champion and Carter challenger. Carter won on this occasion in straight sets on a rather wet court.

The results in the men's doubles were as follows:

First Round—Erwin brothers defeated Phinizy and Ridgeley, 6-2, 6-4.

Second Round—A. Capers and M. Kennedy defeated Ferris and Brand, 6-2, 5-7, 6-2. Hall and Parks won by default from Brinson and Branch. Waring brothers defeated Carter and Griffith, 6-3, 6-4. R. Capers and Mikell won by default from White and Bredenberg. Marrett and Gary defeated Hester and Wall, 6-4, 5-7, 6-2.

Third Round—Waring brothers defeated Hall and Parks, 6-1, 6-3, and by winning get a place in the semi-final in the top half.

The following are the results of the matches played in the consolation singles:

Second Round—Crockerson defeated Roseboro by default. Matthews defeated Harper, 6-2, 6-3. Capers defeated Wright, 6-4, 6-4. Stulb defeated Berkmire, 6-2, 6-4. Roseman defeated Sheridan, 6-1, 6-1.

The results of the mixed doubles matches are as follows:

First Round—Mrs. Milam and Reynolds defeated Miss Emily Thomas and J. K. Orr, Jr., 3-6, 6-4, 7-5. Mrs. Johnson and G. W. Waring defeated Miss Thorn and Ramspeck, 6-0, 6-1.

LOOKS BRIGHT ONCE MORE FOR CRACKER CLUB

Their Fourth Straight Victory Is One Fine Ball Game—Pennant Hopes Revive.

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE Crackers came home from their road trip looking like pennant winners. They went crazy with the stick, ran bases at will and played errorless ball.

No team has looked better here this year.

Of course any hyper-enthusiasm can be discounted two ways, to wit:

First Way—The Crackers have looked like pennant winners a score of times this season—and the next day it rained. You get the idea?

Second Way—The local team was playing against one of Dixie's saddest little teams, the puny Pelicans.

BUT after you've discounted all the notes of gloom and after you've made due allowances for everything, the Crackers still keep right on looking like a million dollars.

They not only won Thursday's game against the Pelicans, 9 to 0, but just previous to that they had won two from the league-leading Gulls and one from the powerful Billiken club. Also they just managed to lose the semi-final Billiken game by one run and a miracle.

Price pitched a positively bully game yesterday. The Crackers hammered Walker clean sideways, and the whole affair was fine.

There wasn't a sad note struck until after the game, when the current gave out and left most of the baseball cars stranded, half-way between Ponce De Leon and Atlanta. It must have clouded up out at Bull Sluice or sprinkled in Marietta.

THURSDAY'S game was illuminated by some of the most brilliant fielding that good old Ponce De Leon ever saw. The star performance by an infielder was made by McDowell. In the third, with Price on first (and he got there with hits three out of his four times up), Welchonce grounded briskly about ten feet to the right of second base. McDowell went for it, reached out, caught the ball, fell down and threw to second, all with one motion. Price was forced and McDowell sprawled all over the ground, with the ringing cheers of the Atlanta spectators in his ears.

Tommy Long absolutely discounted that. In the ninth Spencer hit a low fly to right field. It sailed, almost on a line, right smack to the right field sign boards—which are deep as the bottomless pit. How Tommy Long got back there nobody knew, but he did, made a terrific leap and plucked the pill right off the sign board. He came down all spraddled and it was not until he climbed back on his feet that the spectators realized he had held the ball.

WHEN the game was over Charley Frank strolled out to his limousine (oh, yes, he rides in 'em now) grinning. It was too awful to worry about. And surely the Pelicans would be any man's idea of nothing on earth to worry about. It's a great team, but it isn't synchronized. Nothing comes off right. They hit—but nobody is on. They cover bases—but somebody has just covered it for them. They run bases—but arrive too late. They field brilliantly at odd times—but bobble in the pinches.

However, Charley Frank may wake them up yet. He has several players on the team—and up to the time he hooked up with Cleveland he was mighty resourceful about getting players when he needed them.

CHANGES IN COLUMBUS TEAM; KREBS IS RELEASED

COLUMBUS, GA., July 4.—Changes in the line-up of the Columbus baseball team have come thick and fast in the past few days and as a result the Foxes are now claimed to be stronger than they have been at any time in recent years.

Krebs, principal backstop for Columbus for several years past, has been released outright and has joined the Jackson team. Dick Moore, who has been playing second, has been benched, and Keating is holding down the keystone bag. Connie Lewis, an old-time favorite, has joined the team again, while Morrow has been traded to Albany for Brooks.

CAPONI, EASY WINNER, FOULS FREDDIE HICKS

WINNIPEG, MANITOBA, July 4.—After going six full rounds, Freddie Hicks, of Detroit, received an unintentional foul blow from Tony Caplno, of Chicago, which put a stop to their scheduled twelve-round bout here. Caponi outfought and outpointed Hicks at almost every stage of the game. Hicks only getting a shade in the second round.

Caponi almost floored his opponent in the first round, Hicks being forced to one knee.

DROME RACES TO-NIGHT WILL BE HANDICAPS

TO make things interesting in to-night's races it has been agreed to handicap Jock McNeil and "Tex" Richards a quarter of a lap in all preliminary heats and a half-lap in all final heats. This is about the margin by which these two speedsters have been winning and it ought to make the races very close.

Preparations are being made to handle an extra large crowd to-night because of the fact that it is a holiday and that the sport lovers of the city will naturally want to top off a big day by seeing the one sporting event of the night—the motordrome races.

The amateur races will start at 8:10. Jock McNeil will ride his mile against the track record at 8:27. The regular program will begin at 8:30.

Cars will leave Five Points at brief intervals.

Here is the program:

WILLIAMS TO CLAIM TITLE; M'CAREY WARNS COULON

LOS ANGELES, CAL., July 4.—Promoter McCarey has wired Johnny Coulon that if he does not come through to-day with an agreement to defend his title Kid Williams will be declared the champion of the world and will become the possessor of the McCarey belt, emblematic of the title.

McCarey wants to see an active champion at the head of the bantam division, and if he puts Williams to the front as champion it is safe to state that the Baltimore boy will be busy from now on.

Manager Sam Harris has agreed that if McCarey is willing to proclaim Williams the champion the latter will box Ledoux, Campi and Burns in the order named and then meet Coulon if the Chicago boy still wants to have a try at the title.

CARL MORRIS BATTLES JACK GEYER TO DRAW

DENVER, COLO., July 4.—Carl Morris, of Oklahoma, and Jack Geyer, of Denver, heavyweights, fought ten rounds to a draw last night.

ENDURANCE TO DECIDE TITLE GO
ANDERSON-CROSS BOUT A SLUGFEST

By Paul Armstrong.

(Famous Playwright and Fight Expert.)

LOS ANGELES, July 4.—Bud Anderson, who is to fight Leach Cross this afternoon, has been put out but once. Once and only once has he known what it means to be dropped for true. But he got it good once and that was from a horse.

Forty-some times has Anderson been matched against men, most of them demanding catch weights and taking a shade anywhere from 10 to 50 pounds, but nobody has ever done as well as the horse.

For two years, which about covers his career as a professional boxer, Bud has won about half his bouts with a knock-out, and the rest, barring a draw or two, were his on decisions. Knock-out Brown, with a wild, desperate swing, dropped and dazed him just enough to win for himself a draw, but what a lacing Brown did get next time to repay for that one swing.

George Memsic was the original discoverer of Anderson. Memsic had fought them all and, beginning to show the ravages of time and hard usage, he went hunting local favorites.

Memsic Unearthed Anderson.

The local favorite of a small but boisterous burg was Tommy Ryan's game. He wrote that stuff. The boisterous burg, once it has a favorite, will turn out to a man and bet some coin that "their boy" can at least stay with those old-timers. Ryan got rich hunting up those spots. Not so with Memsic. He started badly. He picked Anderson. On his return he called to witness and declared that this Bud Anderson had hit him harder than ever he had been hit before in his whole life. He did not know where the punch came from; he did not care.

All he wished to do was to warn people against Anderson. Of course that made Bud's road a little rougher.

And now for one minute let us toy with eugenics again. Anderson represents the last word in rearing for the rugged game. In the woods or breaking horses he has been working at rough labor all his life. Perched on a stage coach in his youth with four half-wild horses and a mountain road before him his eyes and nerves were tested to the limit. Later, when he took up the fighting game he got them at all weights and with murder in their eye. None of the mob he waded through to recognition had a bank account and frequently the little purse they fought for meant all there was in sight.

Bud Never Refused Match.

They did not mind being hurt. They did not know when they were hurt. One has only to see the left guard that Anderson has developed to know that at some time men have swung at him with all they had in the hope of finishing him then and there. But as Anderson once sat still and cold as chilled steel guiding wild horses down a mountain road, so he timed their frantic efforts at his undoing. One by one he dropped them and asked that better men come. Never has he refused a match, never has he picked. He is a real contender for the championship and every living lightweight knows it and knows it well.

Anderson has a perfect left hand, hits straight and knows how to hook. He has got a right which will drop any middleweight if he lands it fair.

But will he beat Cross? Ah, now we come to it. Buddie is short on experience. He has never fought as smart a man as Cross in his life. It's a certainty that Leach will show him many a trick.

Facts Concerning To-day's Big Fights

RITCHIE-RIVERS—Favorite, Ritchie. Odds, 10 to 7. Weight, 134 pounds. Number of rounds scheduled, 20. Arena, San Francisco.

CROSS-ANDERSON — Favorite, Anderson. Odds, 10 to 8. Weight, 133 pounds. Number of rounds scheduled, 20. Arena, Los Angeles.

BRITTON-WHITE—Betting even. Weight, Britton, about 133; White, about 127. Number of rounds scheduled, 20. Arena, New Orleans.

FERNS-DENNY—Favorite, Ferns, 10 to 9. Weight, 145 pounds. Number of rounds scheduled, 10. Arena, New Orleans.

WHITNEY-THOMAS—Betting even. Weight, 133 pounds. Number of rounds scheduled, 10. Arena, New Orleans.

BRITTON AND WHITE READY FOR BATTLE

NEW ORLEANS, July 4.—Jack Britton and Charley White are in great condition for their 20-round battle here to-day. Even money prevails with the betting contingent and thousands of dollars will change hands on the award of the referee.

White's two great victories, both knock-outs, over Joe Thomas have made him a great card here. Two weeks ago he ruled a 10 to 8 favorite. But those who have witnessed the clever Britton in action of late have spread wondrous reports about him. As a result, it is even money and take your pick this morning.

The White men figure that he may be outpointed in the early rounds, but that his stamina and great punch will surely wear Britton down in the last seven or eight rounds. Many of the White followers believe that Charley will win by a knock-out.

Britton is verily figuring on outpointing his opponent. He has been training for speed alone, and in his final work-out of four rounds yesterday he was as fast as lightning.

THOMAS VS. WHITNEY; FERNS MEETS DENNY

NEW ORLEANS, July 4.—There are two corking 10-round bouts to be staged at Joe Golden's Club to-day. In one of them Frank Whitney, of Cedar Rapids, meets Joe Thomas, of New Orleans. In the other, Young Denny, of New Orleans, mixes with Wildcat Ferns, of Chicago.

Whitney and Thomas are expected to put up a swell fight. These boys fought in Atlanta last winter. The decision was a draw. Many thought Thomas had the shade, while others figured that Whitney had proved to be the better man. To-day they will settle once and for all which is the superior boxer. The betting on the outcome is at evens.

Denny has been making a wonderful showing in New Orleans. But the fact that Ferns is the harder hitter and the veteran 10 to 9 are the odds offered, with Wildcat on the short end.

"DOYLE HITTING, GIANTS UNBEATABLE"—STALLINGS

NEW YORK, July 4.—"Larry Doyle has recovered his old form and that is why the Giants are now leading the National League," said George Stallings, manager of the Boston Braves, to-day. "Until recently Doyle was unable to hit with his usual vigor and the Giants were losing games. But they braced the moment Larry's bat began to meet the ball successfully. He is the king pin of the New York team, and now that he is himself McGraw's men can not be headed off.

"In my opinion the Giants have an edge on every other major league team in speed. It would not surprise me a bit if they defeated the American League champions in the world's series next fall."

GERMAN TEAM VICTORS.

WIMBLEDON, ENGLAND, July 4. The German Davis Cup players, Friedrich Wilhelm Rahe and Heinrich Kleinschroth, beat J. F. Parke and A. E. Beamish in the final round of the all-England men's doubles championship lawn tennis tournament by three straight sets, 6-3, 6-2, 6-4. The Germans play C. P. Dixon and H. ZIMMERMAN GETS PRIZE; GOOD FOR TWO WEEKS

CHICAGO, July 4.—Heine Zimmerman, the pugnacious third sacker of the Cubs, is $100 richer to-day because he has not sassed, assaulted or assassinated even one umpire in two whole weeks.

A fortnight ago a Cub fan promised Zimmerman $100 if he would remain on his good behavior for two weeks and not be chased from the game for "run ins" with arbitrators. Heine has been a very nice young man for the past two weeks, but yesterday—the last day of the time limit—he almost forgot about the $100 when he was called out at home on a close play.

50 ATHLETES TAKING PART IN BIG MEET

FIFTY athletes, stars of Atlanta in their respective lines, are struggling this morning over the Piedmont Park track and field in the first annual Fourth of July meet under the auspices of the Atlanta Playgrounds Department.

Shortly after 9 o'clock the first field got away in the first event of the morning, the 100-yard dash, and after the winners had breasted the tape there was a scramble to rush the many events to completion.

This affair gives promise to-day of being the most successful meet of its sort ever held in Atlanta. The athletes competing are the pick of the city and some marks will be made which will be very close to the amateur records.

The great feature of the meet will be the steeplechase, which will be the last event on the program. In this event the competitors will take a good run through the park, will swim the lake and finish on the west side of the track.

Poultry, Pet and Live Stock

Feather-Eating Is Largely Caused By Crowded Runs

Soft-Shell Eggs Due to Various Things—Remember Value of Meat in Some Form.

Edited by JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL.

Feather-eating is largely caused by crowded runs, with nothing to induce the fowls to exercise. They bolt their food and then stand around ready for mischief. The careless owner will usually let lice and mites get the start of him on the poultry; they lay eggs upon the stem of the feather around the vent. They irritate the parts and in their endeavors to rid themselves of them they get a taste of the sap, or at times, blood, in the stem of the new feathers; this causes them to continue their investigation. Other hens see what's going on and are soon helping in the removing of feathers, until it is soon a flock of feather eaters. The skin is bare and red, and sometimes the work is carried still further and they get to picking the raw flesh until it is raw and sore. The remedy is to feed lightly of a well-balanced ration and make them dig for every bit they get. Feed some fresh cut bone or raw meat, if possible. Clean them of all lice and mites and put them in the pink of condition, and there will be little excuse for such work. The leaders or worst ones at the business can be very materially checked by taking a sharp pocket knife and trimming the sharp point or curve of the upper madible or beak. They are then unable to pick so easily.

Many soft-shelled eggs are layed at this time of the year, due to various causes. Many of us are so eager for all the eggs that we can get that we push our hens for all they are worth, feeding rich mashes and adding egg producers at all times, most of which contain stimulants of various kinds. Heavy mash feeding tends to produce fat, especially on the two-year-old hens; over-fat hens often lay soft-shelled eggs.

Where your hens have this soft-egg tendency, let up on the soft feed to a certain extent at least and feed more of the dry grain with a good supply of green stuff, and do not forget to supply the oyster shell.

Bowel troubles of all kinds are usually caused by feeding sloppy or sour feed. Filthy quarters and exposure to sudden changes of the weather will affect the little ones very quickly. Often a lack of good clean grains, both in the shape of cracked grains and dry mashes. When the trouble has already appeared it is best handled by feeding well-cooked rice, dry bread or cracker crumbs soaked in hot milk. As soon as an improvement is noticed alternate the rice and bread and milk with other things. Keep the little ones warm when the weather changes to cold, and furnish shade for them in very hot times.

Remember the value of meat in some form for growing chicks, as well as to the laying hens. The cheapest shape to furnish it is in fresh cut green bone. Buy a good cutter, one that will do the work in a workmanlike manner, fasten it up somewhere so that it will be perfectly solid, and it will be but little trouble to operate. You can usually get the bones and scraps fresh from the market. They will save them for you by paying them a little each time, amounting to a quarter or a half-cent per pound. This will make the youngsters a month old grow up like weeds. Start them on it gradually a little at a time and increase it as they become accustomed to it. It should be fed at least twice a week, and a little every day is better, if you can have it. In the absence of this, use the dried beef scraps, by all means, which can be obtained at all poultry supply houses at from three and a half to five cents per pound, according to the quality purchased. It is really safer to feed to young chicks than the fresh bone, but does not supply so much nitriment, of course. In feeding it to young chicks it can be sifted through a coarse seive and the coarser particles given to the laying hens.

Do not neglect the dust bath for the laying hens, especially at this season when the weather is getting hot and lice and mites are multiplying by the millions. See that the dust is perfectly dry and the addition of some sulphur will help to make the dose more effectual. The roost poles and nest boxes should be movable so that they can be taken out and cleaned and given a dose of kerosene, or a mixture of kerosene and naphtholine flakes, about a half a pound to a gallon of oil, to which add a pint of gasoline. This should be applied with a small-spouted oil can to the roost poles, boxes and sides of the house where the poles rest. Prepare your mixture just as you are going to use it. To kill head lice that cling to the head of both young and old chickens, mix a little oil of tar with vaseline and rub onto the head occasionally.

The laying contests being conducted in different sections of the country will prove the benefits of the trap nest. They are bringing out some wonderful results. Some years ago a hen that would lay 125 to 150 eggs per year was counted a great layer, but now they are getting 200 and 250-egg hens.

FOR SALE

ON PIEDMONT AVENUE, near school, on the car line, we have one of the best bungalows to be found in the city. Built by the present owner for a home out of the best material and workmanship. Never expected to sell it, but keep it for a home. The lot cost him $3,000 vacant. If vacant to-day could not be bought for $4,000.

This bungalow has seven rooms—fine shaded east front lot—all conveniences, one year old.

The owner's work has called him to Florida, and he must sell by August 1.

We have had this place listed at $7,000, and cheap at that—but the owner says he must sell—therefore, he is putting the price down to $6,250. This should sell at once.

Medium-Sized Acreage Tracts

ALL of us know the profit that is usually made from acreage. It is almost a conceded fact that if a person owns good acreage, he has a sure profit in it sooner or later. When we think of acreage propositions, we think of lots of land, and naturally lots of money, because the usual acreage transaction involves a great deal of money. The demand for good, close-in acreage for subdivision purposes is increasing every day. A trip to the outskirts of the city in any direction you choose to take will convince you of this fact. We are going to offer a tract of about 100 acres, between Decatur and East Lake, which we have cut up into five, ten and fifteen acre tracts. The price and terms on these tracts make it possible for almost anybody to handle them.

Details Given Out On $228,000 Lease

Silvey Building Work Rushed—John W. Grant to Build—Office Rent Going Up.

Some details of considerable interest to building managers and tenants were given out Thursday in regard to the lease on the Silvey Building and plans for improving the same.

The Silvey Building Company leased the nine-story basement building from the John Silvey estate for 20 years, agreeing to pay $8,000 a year for the first three years and $12,000 a year for the remaining 17 years. This makes an aggregate rental for the 20 years of $228,000, or an average of $11,400 a year. The Silvey Building Company expects to sub-lease to various firms and individuals, several leases already having been made. The return under the sub-lease arrangement will be about $40,000 a year, the basement and ground floor netting $17,000, and the solid floors above $3,000 each.

Improvements now being put in will cost the company $67,000. These consist of a thorough renovation and the installation of two elevators and mahogany similar to that used in the Third National Bank Building. The structure will be fireproof, and a feature of the improvements will be the placing of windows in the wall that faces Peachtree. This wall was built 20 years ago under party arrangement between the late George W. Collier and the late John Silvey.

The construction work is in charge of W. E. Mashburn, who expects to have the upper stories ready October 1. Part of the work is done, and the business offices of The Georgian and Hearst's Sunday American are located on the ground floor, with frontage on both Decatur Street and Edgewood Avenue. Other tenants will be Chess Lagomarsino, E. C. Johnson and R. M. McRaney. These have already signed up for space.

Interest in Mr. Grant's Plans.

Much interest centered Thursday in the announcement that John W. Grant will build on Pace's Ferry Road, a short distance west of Buckhead and a few rods east of such property owners as Robert F. Maddox, James L. Dickey, Jr., M. C. Kiser, J. N. Goddard, Morris Brandon and others. Mr. Grant's handsome town house on the east side of Peachtree between Pine and Currier Streets has been crowded and he will soon build a fine country residence. He has extensive acreage and will lend his efforts toward making a handsome country estate similar to the others in the vicinity. W. T. Downing, the well-known architect, is drawing some plans for Mr. Grant and expects to have them out soon.

In this connection it was announced that a new roadway is to be cut through from Peachtree to a point fronting Mr. Grant's place. This will be known as Andrews Drive, being a continuation of the thoroughfare that now starts west of Colonel Walter P. Andrews' estate and joins Habersham Road in Peachtree Heights Park. Property owners will defray the expense of the road work. The plan has been laid before the County Commissioners and has their approval.

Pace's Ferry Road has attractions for still other residents. It is being talked that John D. Little will build close to the Grant place. He bought two years ago a large lot at the southeast corner of Habersham Road for about $25,000 and has since refused handsome profits and will fix no price to sell it.

Meeting of Renting Agents.

The matter of more signs than one on houses to be rented was discussed freely at a meeting in Charles P. Glover's office Wednesday afternoon. No action was taken, the desire of those present being to postpone the meeting until next Wednesday at the same hour.

Big Deals Pending.

Several large real estate deals are in contract stage and will be announced shortly. One of these has to do with an apartment house on the North Side, at a nice figure.

Change in Offices.

Galloway & Smith, real estate agents, have moved their office from 516 to 213 Empire Building, where they have acquired more floor space. The Lockridge-McClain-Moon Company are now located at 4 North Pryor Street, having moved from the old Y. M. C. A. Building on Auburn Avenue.

J. Frank Meador to Build.

J. Frank Meador will begin soon the erection of an attractive residence on the West Fourteenth Street lot which he purchased Saturday, according to information given out Thursday. The site is 50 by 175 feet, on the north side of the street, half a block from West Peachtree. The lot was bought from Lavender Ray for $3,000 cash, or at the rate of $60 a front foot. A few years ago lots on West Fourteenth, between the Peachtrees, could be bought for $20 a foot, while the ordinary time price to-day is $70 and $80 for elevated parcels.

Skyscraper Rentals Increase.

With the expiration of leases on offices in certain skyscrapers this fall new rates will prevail. This is made necessary, declare the office building men, by the increased cost scale in other lines essential to the skyscraper business. Recently the manager of a leading office building gave notice of an increase to the New York home office of a local branch. The manager replied by letter that ordinarily his concern was opposed to paying more rent this year, but that he would not contest the raise in Atlanta. This was taken by the skyscraper man to indicate that the firm enjoyed a good measure of prosperity in this section. All tenants in office buildings need not be alarmed, however. Not all the buildings will raise rents, and where an increase is contemplated it concerns the lease which is about up, and not the one that has some time to run.

Why Some Influential Bankers Fight the New Currency Bill Secretly, but Bitterly

Some eminent bankers in private conversation object to the Government control of the new currency system in the same angry and intolerant spirit that the railroad men denounced the creation of the Interstate Commerce Commission to supervise their operations in 1887. And yet so greatly has the idea of the supervision of the railroads by a Government board sitting at Washington grown in the popular mind, and SO GREATLY HAVE THE RAILROADS PROSPERED UNDER THIS LAW since 1887, that the only changes since asked by the people have been to strengthen the law and to enlarge the powers of the commission. And the chief desire of the railroads now is TO GET UNDER THE PROTECTION OF THE NATIONAL BOARD to escape from the tyrannies and operations of various State boards.

The bankers of the United States will have to accept the idea of Government control of the new currency system because the power to issue $500,000,000 of emergency notes to prevent panics and to maintain a more stable rate of interest throughout the country is too great a power to vest in the uncontrolled discretion of private citizens.

PRIVATE credit is left where it belongs under the new system, exclusively the concern of the PRIVATE banker. The use of PUBLIC credit is reserved to the nation. The Government can not interfere with any national bank in its ordinary operations any more under the new system than under the old. It can not force any bank either to grant or to refuse credit to any individual; it can not force any bank to discount a single note. It leaves every bank's relations with its own customers unchanged and unaffected.

The Government takes added cognizance only of the twelve Reserve Banks, but these are to be managed by local directors, two-thirds of whom will always be chosen by their own stockholders—the banks—so that in all ordinary operations the banks will be as closely managed by the bankers, without interference by the Government, as the railroads are now managed by railroad men without unwarranted interference by the Government.

The greatest opposition to the proposed law will come CHIEFLY FROM THOSE BANKS AND BANKERS THAT HAVE BEEN MOST ACTIVE IN THE PAST IN CONTROLLING THE RESERVES OF THE BANKS, THE PROMOTION AND FLOTATION OF NEW TRUSTS OR CORPORATIONS, AND THE CREDIT OF LARGE BORROWERS.

How completely this control has been concentrated in a few private hands of late years we shall now show by three highest expert authorities—first, by President George M. Reynolds, of the Continental and Commercial National Bank of Chicago. This bank, in its holding of the deposits of other banks, is the largest in the United States. In an address before the National Business Congress in Chicago, on December 12, 1911, Mr. Reynolds said:

"THE MONEY POWER OF THE COUNTRY NOW LIES IN THE HANDS OF A DOZEN MEN. I PLEAD GUILTY TO BEING IN THE LAST ANALYSIS ONE OF THESE MEN. . . FOUR OR FIVE BANKERS IN NEW YORK, TWO OR THREE IN CHICAGO, TWO OR THREE IN ST. LOUIS, CAN CONTROL THE QUESTION OF WHETHER LARGE LOANS SHALL BE MADE TO BANKING CORRESPONDENTS THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY."

The late J. P. Morgan and his most intimate banker associate, George F. Baker, of the First National, testifying before the Pujo Committee last winter, admitted almost as great concentration of money-power as that described by Mr. Reynolds. But both vehemently denied the existence of a "Money Trust," because, they said in substance, these enormous reserves of other banks were concentrated in such vast heaps under the control of Mr. Morgan, Mr. Baker and their associates only because the owners of the money trusted these bankers, in their integrity and prudence, and FOUND BY EXPERIENCE THAT THE MONEY WAS USED PROFITABLY TO ITS OWNERS. The other banks could withdraw the funds at will. There was no agreement, and no compulsion, and therefore no "Money Trust." Everything was entirely voluntary, legal, regular.

Mr. Baker admitted that the "concentration of capital had gone pretty far—probably far enough," and that "in the hands of bad men it would be extremely dangerous." But he added in effect that only great and good men could retain the confidence of bankers in such degree as to be intrusted with such power by other bankers voluntarily.

Without such concentrations of both credit and capital the vast underwritings and the extraordinary overcapitalization of many trusts which the country has witnessed would be impossible.

Undoubtedly these eminent bankers who have been and still are in control of credit have handled all the money intrusted to them PRUDENTLY AND PROFITABLY FOR THE OWNERS OF THE MONEY. But how have their operations affected the public interest?

In the coffee valorization scheme, in the manipulation of the Coal roads, in the making of the Steel Corporation, the small deposits of millions of Americans, through the banks, were used by these Masters of Credit to create overcapitalized companies, to distribute watered stock to the public, and to raise prices of necessaries of life to consumers.

The people's money has thus been used against themselves by the very trustees to whom the public and private credit was temporarily intrusted.

The operation is very profitable—to the trustees. We shall take, also from official sources, the testimony of bankers before the Stanley Investigating Committee, only a single instance to show how profitable the underwriting by syndicates of new trusts sometimes is. The instance is the launching of the largest of all the trusts in which Mr. Morgan was the chief, and Mr. Baker and, we believe, Mr. Reynolds were among his principal associates.

The United States Steel Underwriting Syndicate was for two hundred millions and it floated more than FOURTEEN HUNDRED MILLIONS OF SECURITIES. Only one call for $25,000,000, or 12½ per cent, was made on the underwriting syndicate. For that it received 649,988 shares of preferred and a similar amount of common stock. This stock was sold to the public through the Stock Exchange at an average price of about 44 for the common and 94 for the preferred, netting the syndicate $90,500,000. Expenses of the syndicate totaled $3,000,000, thereby involving $28,000,000 actual cash. Deducting the latter amount from $90,500,000, there remains $62,500,000 representing the profits of the syndicate.

Of that amount J. P. Morgan & Co., as managers, received $12,500,000, and the underwriters the remaining $50,000,000. There were paid four cash dividends of $10,000,000 each, which were paid to the syndicate members, and a final dividend of $6,000,000, a total of $46,000,000. The remaining $4,000,000 was subscribed to a second syndicate organized for the purpose of converting preferred stock into bonds, and the underwriters also made a profit on this transaction.

Simultaneously with the sale of this stock to the public, the prices of iron and steel in all their manifold forms were advanced all along the line, so that the Steel Corporation would show large earnings and its stock be made salable to the public at enhanced prices.

It is not from any doubt of the splendid ability or the financial integrity of the men who did this thing, and countless other things of the same kind, that the people of the United States refuse to put all their banks and credit, and the issue of "emergency currency," under the uncontrolled discretion of private bankers, however powerful, experienced or sagacious they may be.

THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES DO NOT WANT GOVERNMENT BY BANKERS OR BY THE MONEY POWER. THEY WANT GOVERNMENT BY THE GOVERNMENT IN THE INTERESTS OF THE WHOLE PEOPLE.

We Should Worry To-day!

This Astonishing Fourth of July at Gettysburg

This is indeed a glorious Fourth of July! The Republic of heroic reminiscence is massed to-day at Gettysburg.

It is not easy for the times about us to grasp the idea of Gettysburg.

It is difficult for this metropolis of the New South—this vast composite of North and South, East and West, of all races and of every creed—busy, practical, prosperous and peaceful—to comprehend the fact that fifty years ago the Americans north of the Potomac and the Americans south of the Potomac, with their bloody hands at each other's throats, were grappling at Gettysburg in the great decisive battle of a long and bloody war.

Ninety thousand Americans under Meade met seventy thousand Americans under Lee in the climax of the ferocious argument over State's Rights and Federal sovereignty, and when they parted at the foot of Cemetery Ridge, fifty thousand Americans, dead or wounded upon the three days' battlefield, made up the appalling holocaust offered upon the altar of a conflicting theory of government which was no more settled by the bloody sacrifice than when the first gun was fired at Sumter in 1861.

Two years later Ulysses Grant at Appomattox wrote with his sword in the final terms of surrender an affirmative recognition of both sides.

And to-day the citizens of Massachusetts resent as jealously an infringement of the Rights of the States as the people of Georgia appeal in emergency to the Power of the Federal Government!

Thousands of survivors of these one hundred and sixty thousand soldiers—survivors and their children—are gathered in joyous reunion at Gettysburg to-day. And the flag of their fathers—serene and splendid—floats over the survivors of Meade and the survivors of Lee—aged and gray or honored and gay, "in mutual well beseeming ranks marching all one way," toward the sunset of life which leaves the indestructible Republic united and glorious in the zenith of its power and its fame.

There will be a thousand vivid reminiscences and a thousand noble lessons taught above the hero sod of Gettysburg to-day. It is no longer the Confederacy's "Field of Grief," but a great nation's mighty Plain of Reunion!

The astonishing number of the survivors attending the national revival of to-day should teach our youth that a brave spirit and a forgiving temper are the great preservers of life, and the promoters of longevity. There were no braver spirits than those at Gettysburg. Nor any more forgiving. For the victors never boasted of their triumph and the vanquished carried no bitterness to defeat.

Also the field of Gettysburg is the historic reservoir from which we draw our fiery and convincing proof of the nation's martial qualities. There was never in human history a more gallant and heroic feat than Pickett's magnificent charge up Cemetery Ridge, and never a steadier and more magnificent answer than Hancock's superb defense.

So that in the martial qualities of offensive and defensive warfare there is writ at Gettysburg the deathless national record of imperishable valor which may be read and spoken to the comfort of our country's friends and to the stern warning of any who may think to be our country's foes.

Give ample battleships and ample guns to the sons of the sires who fought at Gettysburg, and our country will guarantee to keep the world at peace with us.

A Merger That Is in the Interest of Progress

The merging of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons and the Atlanta Medical College into a great and amplified Atlanta Medical College is a matter of far-reaching importance to Atlanta, and the boards of management of the two institutions are to be congratulated that they have effected a consolidation so satisfactory.

Not only will the colleges themselves benefit tremendously by joining hands, but the graduates thereof will enjoy an immediate standing in the medical profession that heretofore it has been impossible for either institution to give them.

The new college has been made eligible to membership in the American Medical Association, which gives all graduates the right at once to practice medicine anywhere in the world.

Plans for the necessarily enlarged quarters of the new institution are ambitious, but there is every reason to suspect that they will be carried to a successful conclusion. And to that end, The Georgian feels sure all Atlanta will cordially co-operate with the gentleman having those plans in charge.

Caesar and Franklin

By WILLIAM VINCENT BYARS

WHEN Julius Caesar wished to show the meaning of the greatest triumph in life, he first combed his hair carefully over a bald spot. He was so careful about this bald spot that it is said he always scratched his head with one finger after combing his hair down over it.

Perhaps this is a lie. But what he did next was to put a wreath of laurel leaves on his head. He then put on a costly purple-bordered cloak. Taking a branch of laurel in one hand and scepter in the other, he passed out the street door and mounted a car drawn by four horses. Then he drove through the streets, and listened to the crowd that shouted for him. While they were shouting, people in the crowd watched the long line of Caesar's soldiers behind the car and of his prisoners in front of it.

Caesar's Great Triumphs.

After Caesar was tired of standing up to listen to the shouting, he had money scattered to the crowd. Then he gave them bread tickets, or what amounted to the same thing. He also gave them free admission to the circus. At the circus he supplied prisoners to fight lions to amuse those who had shouted for him when he was proclaimed a triumphant conqueror and a dictator.

This was the greatest "triumph" in Rome about 46 years before the birth of Christ.

About 1745 years after the birth of Christ, Benjamin Franklin undertook the greatest triumph of history in the small city of Philadelphia. He pulled off his coat and walked out into the street. Then he took hold of the handles of a wheelbarrow and rolled it through the street. Nobody shouted. Some laughed. He came back with the wheelbarrow in about half an hour. Taking a bundle of paper from it, he went inside. Then he printed a newspaper.

This was one way he had of becoming triumphant, but it was not the only one. After printing the newspaper, he washed the ink off his hands and began to experiment with another one of his ideas.

He wanted to catch a jar full of lightning. In his newspaper he tried to persuade his readers to use their common sense. He tried to show them that common sense is always triumphant when it is really used. They thought he had lost his own common sense when he tried to catch lightning in a jar. But he did it. He finally got enough lightning out of a cloud down the string of a kite to fill a jar, so that he could get sparks out of the jar. When he had done this, it was the greatest triumph in history. He had shown that electricity and lightning are the same; that electricity is a "universal force" which can be used in commonsense ways.

This was a "triumph" in Philadelphia about A. D. 1752.

Julius Caesar was born 100 years before Christ. He was born in a great family. It was the "illustrious Julian gens." "Gens" means family. A "gentleman" then did not have to be "gentle." He did have to be born in an illustrious "gens." Caesar did not think it ungentlemanly to have the hands of his prisoners cut off when he was not pleased with them after he had conquered them. He despised people who had nothing but common sense. He was a great genius and one of the greatest conquerors of any age. He conquered his own country. Before he was stabbed to death in Rome, March 15, 44 B. C., he had destroyed the freedom of the greatest republic of the world. After his time, Romans who could not live unless they were free stabbed themselves.

No Illustrious Forefathers.

Franklin did not belong to an illustrious "gens." When he was born in Boston in 1706, he was fifteenth of the seventeen children of Josiah Franklin. Josiah was a poor candlemaker. Poor as he was, he gave his children "the key of all knowledge." He taught them to spell and showed them how to learn to read. In 1790, when Benjamin Franklin died, he had done more than any other man to make his country free and great. His last act was to sign a paper to make the world freer. But his greatest triumph was in discovering the use of common sense. Spell out or read as much as you can use from the best book you can get. Then do not stop to talk about it. Get your common sense to work and see what you can do with what you have learned. Then go on that way, learning and using your own common sense as long as you live. That is the Franklin way to win triumphs.

In the Dog Days

By WEX JONES.

IN the dog days, beloved, remember on account of your health to eschew
Greeting a husker person with the words, "Is it hot enough weather for you?"

And forget not to shun all advice on sure methods of keeping you cool,
For you'll get all mixed up and distressed and you'll feel like a boiling hot fool.

You will read that cold drinks are injurious; you'll read that hot drinks kill you dead;
You will read you should sleep under blankets; and also with none on your bed.

Some say that cold baths will inflame you till you feel like a stove that's red-hot.
Some say that cold tea is just poison, while asserting that coffee is not.

You'll be told that corned beef and potatoes are too heavy for hot weather lunch;
And again you'll be urged to make luncheon on some food that is there with the punch.

You'll be told to wear plenty of flannel, howe'er it may tickle your skin;
And you'll hear that you'll die in ten minutes unless all your clothing is thin.

It's unsafe and moreover it's foolish to toil through the heat of the day,
So one says; the other declares that it's simply fatal to play.

Then, beloved, avoid all these tipsters, who'll make you feel like a fool,

THOUSANDS CHEER PRESIDENT AT GETTYSBURG

RURAL CARRIERS HAVE WARM TILT OVER MEMBERSHIP DUES

L. D. King, of Covigton, president of the State Rural Carriers' Association.

He apparently is not greatly worried by the hot fight over payment of dues.

Controversy Precipitated in State Convention by Ruling on Payments in Advance.

A warm controversy was precipitated into the tenth annual convention of the Rural Letter Carriers' Association of Georgia, in session at the Kimball House, when the question of membership termination came up.

Virtually every carrier paid his dues Friday morning, a long recess having been taken for the purpose. Receipts given out covered the year ending with the present convention, but a large and determined number of carriers insisted they should cover a year from July 4, the date of payment. It is generally understood the constitution and by-laws committee will submit a ruling that dues paid are to be considered as in advance, instead of for the preceding year, as at present. The submission of this report was made Friday afternoon.

"There is going to be one more hot fight about it, and no one knows how it will end," said President L. D. King.

P. C. Coker, the first rural route man in Fulton County, and an ex-president of the District and State Associations, will attempt the organization of a ladies' auxiliary, which he says will be the first in America.

Mayor Woodward made the welcoming address Friday morning. He told the carriers if they were taken before Judge Broyles to be sure to do something bad enough to warrant a sentence of more than 29 days, so he could pardon them. Attorney Paul L. Lindsay, of Atlanta, formerly a rural route man and president of the National Association, made a felicitous talk. Addresses also were made by Clark Howell and Congressman Thomas W. Hardwick.

The convention will be in session through Saturday.

FOURTH QUIETLY CELEBRATED IN ATLANTA

Picnics and Athletic Contests Feature Day — Thousands Enjoy Piedmont Lake Bathing.

Four little children, all under 14 years of age, lie in the hospitals of the city, the first victims here in the annual toll of death and injury taken by the celebration of Independence Day.

The injured are:

Walter Pete, 13, 85 Pratt Street.

Charles Garrison, 12, 193 Davis Street.

John Garrison, 9, 193 Davis Street.

O. B. Biggers, 12, 348 Glenn Street.

Walter Pete's hand was painfully lacerated when a toy pistol with which he was playing accidentally exploded.

Charles and John Garrison were seriously injured by the explosion of a toy cannon early in the morning. Eager to celebrate the day, they went out of doors soon after dawn. A few minutes later their mother was startled by their cries of pain. Charles was burned about the face and there is danger that he has lost his sight. Johnny was standing up when the cannon exploded and was hurt about the legs.

Police Guard Doubled.

The first of the accidents occurred last night, when 12-year-old O. B. Biggers was painfully wounded by the discharge of a blank shell held by his playmate, Henry Kaincannon.

Atlanta police will work double turn to-day in an effort to prevent accidents. The night men who quit at 8 a. m. will work until noon. The evening men who come on at 4 p. m. will come on to-day at noon. The day patrolmen who quit at 4 p. m. will remain on duty until 8 p. m.

Chief Beavers states that this is purely to doubly enforce the law, and that any kind of firecrackers or fireworks in the streets will not be tolerated. Pistols are absolutely forbidden and anyone caught with a firearm, even if it is loaded with blanks, will be arrested for carrying a weapon.

Outings Feature Day.

The Fourth of July is being appropriately celebrated in Atlanta today. Many downtown buildings and homes in the residence sections are flying American flags in honor of the nation's birthday anniversary, and thousands of Atlantans are enjoying the day in the parks, at barbecues, athletic contests and other places of amusement.

Most of the stores will be closed for the greater part of the day, that the clerks and employees may do their part in making the day a real holiday.

HEAT BROKEN BY CLOUDS; RAIN PREDICTED

Prospect of Record Climb of Mercury Shattered by Overcast Sky and Breezes.

"Probably showers Friday afternoon and night," is the weather forecast.

Cool breezes and gathering clouds, pregnant with moisture and indicating rain, caused perceptible lowering of the temperature at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon and shattered prospects for a record-breaking temperature.

At noon the thermometer registered 92 degrees, and the Weather Bureau announced it probably would rise above 93, and go possibly to 94. At 2 o'clock, however, the wind and clouds, which obscured the sunlight, caused a drop of about 5 degrees.

Atlanta received the full force of the heat wave which swept over the country Friday, in marked contrast to the last three weeks, when the maximum heat marks in the city were from 2 to 10 degrees lower than elsewhere. Had it not been for the clouds which gathered at 2 o'clock the day would have been unusually oppressive, in view of the high humidity, and many prostrations might have resulted.

McLaughlin Loses Tennis Title; Badly Beaten by Wilding

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 4.—A. F. Wilding to-day won the lawn tennis championship of the world, beating Maurice McLaughlin, of San Francisco, in straight sets.

Although the championship played off to-day is for the premiership of England, it is regarded in sporting circles as the championship of the world.

Before play started Wilding was nervous and predicted that he would be defeated by McLaughlin.

Wilding won the third set by the score of 10-8.

Watchman, 65, Near Death From a Fall

J. T. Harwell, 65 years old, of 362 Flat Shoals Avenue, is at Grady Hospital in a serious condition this morning, as a result of a fall Thursday night at the Ward-Truitt Building, Decatur and Pratt Streets, where he is employed as night watchman.

His right leg and right shoulder blade were broken.

Urges Track Survey Of Railroads; Would Swell City's Income

Councilman Orville Hall has evolved a plan for increasing the tax assessments of railroads within Atlanta $50,000. At the meeting of Council Monday he will introduce a resolution appropriating $500 to make a survey of the tracks within the city, thereby proving that the railroads should pay more taxes.

Councilman Hall declares that no survey of the railroad tracks within Atlanta has been made in twenty years, and that a new survey will cause the Comptroller to increase his assessments.

The elections of Tax Assessors J. L. Harrison and C. D. Meador come up at the meeting of Council Monday. It is said that both will be elected without opposition.

Auto Pilot Killed in California Road Race

LOS ANGELES, July 4.—Harris Hanshue, in an Apperson car, was killed near Fresno when his car overturned in the Los Angeles-Sacramento auto road race to-day.

'Eleanor Mint' To Be Tango Party Drink

All the new-fangled terpsichorean diversions will have their innings at the Ansley Hotel Friday night when a "tango party" will be given under the auspices of the Joseph Habersham Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution.

Besides the dancing of the tango one of the features will be the serving of the "Eleanor mint," a new temperance drink that has been named after President Wilson's daughter.

The proceeds of the affair will be devoted to charity.

Still Is Raided, but Owners Are Absent

George Mathieson and John Oliver, of the county police, assisted by Revenue Officer Brown, raided an illicit distillery in the "Ben Hill" District Friday morning, taking the still back to the courthouse. They found three barrels of "beer," but the operatives had been tipped off in advance and were nowhere to be found.

The county police are scouring the adjacent territory for the wildcatters.

Bandits Escape With $25,000

MISSISSIPPI EXPRESS IS LOOTED

Masked Robbers Hold Up Illinois Central Passenger at Lonely Spot South of Memphis.

MEMPHIS, TENN., July 4.—Illinois Central train No. 1, bound from Chicago to New Orleans, was held up by four masked men early to-day one and one-half miles south of Batesville, Miss.

It was believed the men obtained $25,000, although the local officials of the American Express Company say the amount was not that large.

Official news of the hold-up reached Memphis offices of the Illinois Central just before noon. The message said the bandits flagged the train at the Tallahatchie River bridge, near Batesville, Miss., and compelled Engineer A. E. Norton to abandon his cab.

The negro fireman was kept in the engine cab, guarded by a bandit who kept him covered with a revolver, while the others went back and uncoupled the passenger coaches from the mail, baggage and express cars.

Deny Heavy Loss.

The negro fireman ran the cars through Batesville to a point one mile south of the town and stopped in a dense river bottom forest.

Officials of the American Express Company said the bandits did not obtain more than $5,000. Five charges of dynamite was exploded before the safe was opened. Every registered mail pouch was rifled, but postal authorities in Memphis said that money shipments were small because of the holiday.

Following the robbery the bandits ran the engine ten miles south when the fire under the boilers went out. Believing the negro fireman had allowed the fire to die in order to trick them, the bandits threw him out of the cab while the engine was moving rapidly. He was slightly injured. The men abandoned the engine one mile north of Enid, Miss., and entered the forest.

A special train arrived from Jackson, Miss., bringing officers and bloodhounds. A party of Deputy United States Marshals from Memphis, left to take up the chase for the bandits.

Car Nearly Wrecked.

Sheriff W. Lemaster, of Batesville, was the first man to reach the express car after the bandits left it. He found the car nearly wrecked.

"By peering into a crack in the safe, which was not completely demolished," said Sheriff Lemaster, "I could see two packages. One was marked '$20,000' and the other '$10,000.' Just inside the outer door of the safe I picked up nearly $500 in loose bills and silver."

Officials of the road say they believe the hold-up men were the same ones who have held up several trains in the last few months in the South. Express Messenger R. E. Hooke, of Cairo, Ill., wired the authorities in Memphis a good description of one of the bandits.

He said as he jumped from the train at the command of the hold-up men he tripped and in falling caught at one of the bandits. His fingers caught the man's mask and jerked it off. The robber cursed him and jabbed him in the ribs with a revolver.

Hold-Up in Wild Region.

Batesville, Miss., is 50 miles from Memphis, Tenn., and is the center of a hilly, thickly-wooded country.

Within the past year there have been numerous train robberies in the South.

The first was in Mississippi, on the Queen and Crescent, near Meridian, when robbers stopped a train and rifled the express car. The express company never made an official statement of the amount stolen, but it was estimated at $18,000. The robbers escaped on horseback through canebrakes into the river bottom. Presumably they waded their horses some distance up the shallow stream, for hounds lost the scent at the river bank.

FEARS LIBEL AFTERMATH IN SCANDAL

Mrs. Jenkins Hires Lawyer to Fight Expected Suits of Macon Church Folk.

MACON, July 4.—The elders of the First Christian Church have framed a report to be submitted to the congregation on Sunday morning in regard to the charge that Mrs. Effie L. Lester, the secretary of the Ladies' Aid Society, has been too friendly with Professor Frank M. Charlton, the choir leader. This charge is made by Mrs. J. W. Jenkins and Mrs. Alma Armstrong, and is supported by testimony of Mr. Jenkins and his grown son, Rufus.

It is regarded as certain that the elder's report will exonerate Mrs. Lester and Professor Charlton of any wrongdoing and urge that the congregation continue confidence in them and thereby further establish the vindication.

That this will be followed by action in the courts by both Professor Charlton and Mr. Lester there is hardly any doubt. In anticipation of being sued for libel or prosecuted for slander, Mrs. Jenkins has engaged Attorney Julian Urquhart to represent her. He states that not only will Mrs. Jenkins contend that she heard Professor Charlton make an appointment over the telephone to be at Mrs. Lester's home on the night of June 5, while her husband was away, at 9 o'clock, and that Professor Charlton was chased out of the premises, but that her son, Rufus, pursued him five blocks, and in Tattnall Square Park had a hand-to-hand encounter with the music instructor.

3 Fatalities Due to Heat in Chattanooga

CHATTANOOGA, July 4.—The total death list here as the result of the intense heat has been increased to three.

John W. Stanton, a student of the University of the South, Sewanee, died last night following a cerebral hemorrhage contracted while playing tennis in the sun. Walter Snyder, of Dalton, dropped dead on the street last night from the direct effects of the heat. One other death occurred last week.

Bryan President Of U. S.—For a Day

WASHINGTON, July 4.—With President Wilson, Vice President Marshall and every other member of the White House staff away today, Secretary Bryan held alone the reins of government and was acting President. His succession to this temporary dignity is statutory.

Every branch of the public service in Washington was at a standstill, with the exception of such work as had to be carried on.

Vote Plea Hurled At King's Head by Frenzied Militant

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BRISTOL, ENGLAND, July 4.—Intense excitement was caused here today when a militant suffragette hurled a petition for "votes for women" at the head of King George while he and Queen Mary were driving through the streets to the Royal Agricultural Show.

It was first believed an attempt had been made to assassinate the King, and the crowd, which had been held back by police and soldiers, broke through the lines and crowded into the streets, shouting "Lynch the assassin."

After a struggle the crowds were driven back and the woman was arrested.

Misses First 'Fourth' Salute in 127 Years

SAVANNAH, July 4.—For the first time in 127 years, a Fourth of July salute was not fired by the Chatham Artillery in the Park Extension at sunrise to-day because ammunition, for which requisition had been made, failed to arrive.

Salutes were fired by the cruiser Tacoma and at Fort Screven. Business houses and public buildings are closed, while the people are celebrating the day at resorts, motor cycle races, boat races, baseball games and rifle matches.

Declares John D. Is Drifting to Socialism

CHICAGO, July 4.—John D. Rockefeller will be a socialist if he lives long enough, according to a statement to-day by Dean Albion W. Small, head of the department of sociology at the University of Chicago.

Dean Small said it was only a matter of years before Rockefeller and other wealthy men of the country would recognize "the fallacy of modern capitalism."

WILSON PAYS VETERANS TRIBUTE

President, in Masterly Speech, Stirs the Great Throngs on Historic Battlefield.

GETTYSBURG, PA., July 5.—President Wilson sounded the final note of the battle of peace at the golden anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg in an address before several thousand of the veterans, both blue and gray, in the great reunion tent to-day.

Although practically every President since the great war, including Lincoln, has visited the battlefield here, Wilson is the first, except Lincoln, who came to address the old veterans, and for whom the national salute of 21 guns was fired. He is the first since Lincoln to come in an official capacity.

As the President alighted from the train down in Gettysburg a battery of field artillery from Fort Myer, Va., stationed at the Pennsylvania College on Seminary Ridge, fired the national salute of 21 guns. He was met by Colonel Schoonmaker, president of the Gettysburg celebration commission, who escorted him in an automobile to the tent two miles away.

Out on old historic, battleswept Emmittsburg Road they went, covering in five minutes in a swift motor the path taken by Lincoln, who took half an hour in an old carriage.

Thousands Greet President.

The greatest number to see the President doubtless were the great mass of visitors stopping in the city and the thousands who came from the countryside. The entire tent had been reserved for the veterans as there was much vacant space.

This was due to the fact that many veterans had a misunderstanding as to whether the President was actually coming, a rumor having spread broadcast throughout the camp last night that he had again canceled his engagement. Others felt the President was indifferent and still others had gone home.

The President was received by Assistant Secretary of War Breckinridge, as representing the War Department in charge of the camp, and he was introduced to the audience by Governor Tener, representing the State of Pennsylvania as host to the veterans.

Immediately upon concluding his address the President was escorted from the rear of the tent to his car, which had been switched around through the camp, and he passed out through Long Lane, the central thoroughfare of the great camp.

He did not attempt to make an inspection, but was carried through to the main line of the road and started at once for Cornish, N. H.

Nearly 10,000 veterans left this morning and an equal number will get away this afternoon, if the trains can handle them.

About 6,000 had left previously up to this morning. The greater part of the army of the veterans will leave to-morrow, although the War Department is prepared to keep them Saturday night and feed them Sunday morning.

The President's Address.

President Wilson, in addressing the veterans, said:

"Friends and Fellow Citizens: I need not tell you what the battle of Gettysburg meant. These gallant men in blue and gray sit all about us here. Many of them met here upon this ground in grim and deadly struggle. Upon these famous fields and hillsides their comrades died about them. In their presence it were an impertinence to discourse on how the battle went, how it ended, what it signified. But 50 years have gone by since then, and I crave the privilege of speaking to you for a few minutes of what those 50 years have meant.

"What have they meant? They have meant peace and union and vigor and the maturity and might of a great nation. How wholesome and healing the past has been. We have found one another again as brothers and comrades in arms, enemies no longer, generous friends rather, our battle song past, the quarrel forgotten—except that we shall not forget the splendid valor, the manly devotion of the men then arrayed against one another, now grasping hands and smiling into each other's eyes. How complete union has become and how dear to all of us and how unquestioned, how majestic, as State after State has been added to this, our great family of free men.

WILSON SPEAKS TO THRONGS AT GETTYSBURG

President, in Stirring Address, Rejoices in Great Reunited Nation—Lauds Heroes.

"Heirs to Mighty Heritage."

"How handsome the vigor, the maturity, the might of the great nation we love with undivided hearts; how full of large and confident praise that life will be wrought out that will crown a strength with greater justice and with a happy welfare that will touch all alike with deep contentment. We are debtors to those 50 crowded years; they have made us heirs to a mighty heritage.

"But do we deem the nation complete and finished? These venerable men, crowding here to this famous field, have set us a great example of devotion and other sacrifices. They were willing to die that the people might live.

"But their task is done. Their day is turned into evening. They look to us to perfect what they established. Their work is handed on to us to be done in another way, but not in another spirit. Our day is not over; it is upon us in full tide.

"Have affairs paused? Does the nation stand still? Is what the 50 years have wrought since those days of battle finished, rounded out and completed?

Calls Nation Secure.

"Here is a great people—great with every force that has ever beaten in the life blood of mankind. And it is secure. There is no one within its borders, there is no power among the nations of the earth to make it afraid But has it squared itself with its own great standards set up at its birth, when it made its first noble, naive appeal to the moral judgment of mankind to take notice that a government had now been established which was to serve men, not masters?

"It is secure in everything except satisfaction that its life is right, adjusted to the uttermost to the standards of righeousness and humanity. The days of sacrifice and cleansing are not closed. We have harder things to do than were done in these heroic days of war, because harder to see clearly, requiring more vision, more balance of judgment, a more candid searching of the very springs of right.

"Look around you upon the fields of Gettysburg. Picture the array, the fierce heats and agony of battle, column hurled against column, batteries bellowing to batteries. Valor? Yes, greater no man shall see in war, and self-sacrifice and loss to the uttermost; the high recklessness of exalted devotion which does not count the cost.

The Cost of a Great Nation.

"We are made by these tragic, epic things to know what it costs to make a nation—the blood and sacrifice of multitudes of unknown men, lifted to a greater stature in the view of all generations by knowing no limit to their manly willingness to serve.

"In armies thus marshaled from the ranks of free men you will see, as it were, a nation embattled, the leaders and the led, and may know, if you will, how little except in form its actions differ in days of peace from its actions in days of war.

"May we break camp now and be at ease? Are the forces that fight for the nation dispersed, disbanded, gone to their homes forgetful of the common cause? Are our forces disorganized, without constituted leaders and the might of men consciously united because we contend not with armies, but with principalities and powers and wickedness in high places?

"Are we content to lie still? Does our union mean sympathy, our peace contentment, our maturity self-comprehension and a clear confidence in choosing what we shall do? War fitted us for action, and action never ceases.

Refers to Another Host.

"I have been chosen the leader of the nation. I can not justify the choice by any qualities of my own, but so it has come about, and here I stand. Whom do I command? The ghostly hosts who fought upon these battlefields long ago and are gone? These gallant gentlemen, stricken in years, whose fighting days are over, their glory won? What are the orders for them, and who rallies them?

"I have in mind another host, whom these set free of civil strife in order that they might work out, in days of peace and settled order, the life of a great nation. That host is the people themselves, the great and small, without class, or difference, or kind, or race, or origin, and undivided in interests if we have but the vision to guide and direct them and order their lives aright in what we do.

"Our Constitutions are their articles of enlistment. Their orders of to-day are the laws upon our statute books. What we strive for is their freedom, their rights to lift themselves from day to day and behold the things they have hoped for, and so make way for still better days for those whom they love who are to come after them.

"The recruits are the little children crowding in. The quartermasters' stores are in the mines and forests and fields, in the shops and factories. Every day something must be done to push the campaign forward, and it must be done by plan and with an eye to some great destiny.

"Builded by God's Hands."

"How shall we hold such thought in our hearts and not be moved? I would not have you live even today wholly in the past, but would wish to stand with you in the light that streams upon us now out of that great day gone by. Here is a nation that God has builded by our hands. What shall we do with it?

"Who stands ready to act again, and always in the spirit of this day of reunion and hope and patriotic fervor? The day of our country's life has but broadened into morning. Do not put uniforms by. Put the harness of the present on. Lift your arms to the great tracks of life yet to be conquered in the interest of righteous peace, of that prosperity which lies in a people's hearts and outlasts all wars and errors of men.

"Come, let us be comrades and soldiers, yet to serve our fellowmen in quiet counsel where the blare of trumpets is neither heard nor heeded and where the things are done which make blessed the nations of the world in peace and righteousness and love."

HOUSE READY TO PROBE LOBBY CHARGES

Rules Committee Virtually Decides to Order Inquiry—Graft Accusations First.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—The House Rules Committee to-day, after hearing statements by Minority Leader Mann and Progressive Leader Murdock, practically decided to order an investigation by the House of the Mulhall lobby charges, to see if members of Congress actually have been corrupted through the lobby activities of the National Association of Manufacturers. A special committee of seven, consisting of four Democrats, two Republicans and one Progressive, will be appointed.

Representative Mann urged the committee to investigate the charges reflecting on the integrity of former members of Congress, particularly former Speaker Cannon.

"Any statement that Uncle Joe Cannon manipulated committees is false," said Mann.

Leader Murdock declared his belief that committees had been manipulated, but said he believed the greatest field for the investigation would be into the activities of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Murdock insisted that the investigation also cover the charge that members of Congress were used to break up strikes.

President Guilty in Athens Bank Failure

ATHENS, July 4.—J. W. Griffin, who was president of the defunct Athens Bank and Trust Company and who was indicted for feloniously "wrecking" the bank, was found guilty by the jury at midnight after being out eight hours, and recommended to the mercy of the court. He will be sentenced by Judge Brand to-morrow. Immediately upon the verdict notice of a motion for a new trial was served.

R. H. McCrary, cashier of the bank, pleaded guilty before Griffin's trial and was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary.

A special car attached to a Pennsylvania Railroad train conveyed the party.

It was reported from Sofia that Czar Ferdinand probably will head his Bulgarian army if the fighting continues.

Bulgarians Defeat Servians at Uskub.

SOFIA, July 4.—Bulgarian troops have inflicted a crushing defeat on the Servian army east of Uskub.

According to dispatches received to-day from General Savoff, Bulgarian commander-in-chief, in the field, heavy casualties were inflicted upon the Servians.

The Bulgarian cabinet resigned today. Dr. Daneff has been commissioned to form another. General Savoff, the commander-in-chief, will be next Minister of War.

Dine Minus Coats In Philly Hotels

PHILADELPHIA, July 4.—(Tip to Atlanta hotel proprietors from Georgian correspondent):

In the men's grillroom of the Bellevue-Stratford fifteen tables were occupied by parties of lawyers, business men, politicians, etc. Every man had his coat off.

As soon as a guest entered, a waiter stepped forward and said:

"Coat, sir?"

The waiter took it, hung it on a hook near the guest, and served luncheon. And there is no tip for coat-hanging.

"Quite the regular thing, sir," said head waiters in all the big hotels. "Gentlemen dining alone always take their coats off. Don't they do it in Atlanta, sir?"

"Pluck Out Tonsil," Doctor's New Method

CHICAGO, July 4.—Instead of cutting out a tonsil, Dr. Harold Foster, of New York, announced to-day that he could pluck, and has plucked, out a diseased tonsil "as a man would pluck a cherry."

Only long fingers and a firm grip are needed, he says.

This remarkable declaration was made at the meeting of the American Homeopathic Society.

Children's Services At Second Baptist

Children will take a leading part in "Banner Day" exercises at the Second Baptist Church Sunday morning. All of the classes that won banners in June will be given a part in the day's exercises, which will be of a patriotic nature. Charles D. Tillman will lead the singing. He also will sing several solos.

Private Telephones Asked for Firemen

Council's electric lights committee on Thursday recommended a private telephone exchange for the fire department. The plan was outlined by Chief W. B. Cummings and a representative of the Southern Bell Telephone Company.

It was argued that while the exchange would cost $309, it would save the city $158 a year.

UNBIASED IN THE FLANDERS CASE, SAYS SLATON

New Governor Declares He Will Take Action After Hearing All Sides.

Governor Slaton has formed no opinion in the famous McNaughton-Mattie Flanders murder case, and says he will make no decision until he has heard all sides. The new Governor says he has not talked to the former Governor about the case. He will hear, he said, all arguments without prejudice.

It is known that the hopes of McNaughton's friends for commutation of sentence, if not pardon, have been greatly strengthened now that Governor Slaton is in the executive office.

The statement, made time and again, to the effect that Mrs. Mattie Flanders, alleged co-conspirator with Dr. W. J. McNaughton, never will be tried, has been renewed now that Governor Brown, who stood so long between Dr. McNaughton and the gallows, has been succeeded.

It was said months ago to be the purpose of those urging that the law be permitted to take its course against Dr. McNaughton to kick the case along from one court to another until a change in administrations had been effected in Atlanta. Governor Brown let it be known all along that he would not permit Dr. McNaughton to hang so long as the case against Mrs. Flanders remained undisposed of.

Waiting Game Played.

The case against Mrs. Flanders was passed along from one court to another until last March Governor Brown respited the doctor to September 5, which sets the date of his execution well into Governor Slaton's term. Had the case against Mrs. Flanders been nol-prossed in Governor Brown's term of office there is little, if any, doubt that Dr. McNaughton's sentence of death would have been promptly commuted to life imprisonment, or less, even if he was not pardoned outright. Governor Brown is known to have viewed the evident disinclination of the State to push the case against Mrs. Flanders as a circumstance in Dr. McNaughton's favor, but whether Governor Slaton will take that view of it is problematical.

It will be contended that the State dare not try the case against Mrs. Flanders for fear o ftheeby acquitting her alleged accomplice, Dr. McNaughton. It is freely admitted that all hope of convicting Mrs. Flanders in Emanuel County has been abandoned. Partisans of Dr. McNaughton contend that if she is not guilty, the doctor can not possibly be guilty. They hold that Mrs. Flanders' cooperation in the killing of Fred Flanders, her husband, was necessarily essential to the conviction of Dr. McNaughton.

State Charged Conspiracy.

The State's original theory of the killing of Fred Flanders was that his murder was effected through criminal conspiracy between Dr. McNaughton and Flanders' wife, the motive being to secure the life insurance of Flanders, and to promote an alleged too ardent intimacy between Mrs. Flanders and McNaughton.

McNaughton's attorneys hold that if Mrs. Flanders is not guilty fo her part of the original allegations, Dr. McNaughton can not be, and this is the point of view that will be urged upon the new Executive.

Those who have studied this case are generally firm in the belief that McNaughton never will hang, if the case against Mrs. Flanders is dropped.

Public With McNaughton.

Public opinion, which originally was very strong against Dr. McNaughton, is said to have swung around very much in his favor of late, and his attorneys now contend that he would be freed of all charges, if he might be tried again in Emanuel County. They say that opinion is heavily favorable to him now.

He has been in prison more than two years, awaiting the disposition of the case against his alleged co-conspirator, and has been respited half a dozen times pending her trial.

McMichael Charges Fertilizer 'Trust'

One of the problems which Commissioner of Agriculture Price faces is the providing of fertilizer inspectors for South Georgia for a longer term than four months, much complaint having been made by the people of that section on account of inspectors being no nearer than Barnesville.

Commercial fertilizers will come in for much attention on the part of the Legislature. Representative E. H. McMichael, of Marion County, charges that several big corporations controlling the supply of materials from which the fertilizer is manufactured practically form a trust.

2-Cent Passenger Rates for Arkansas

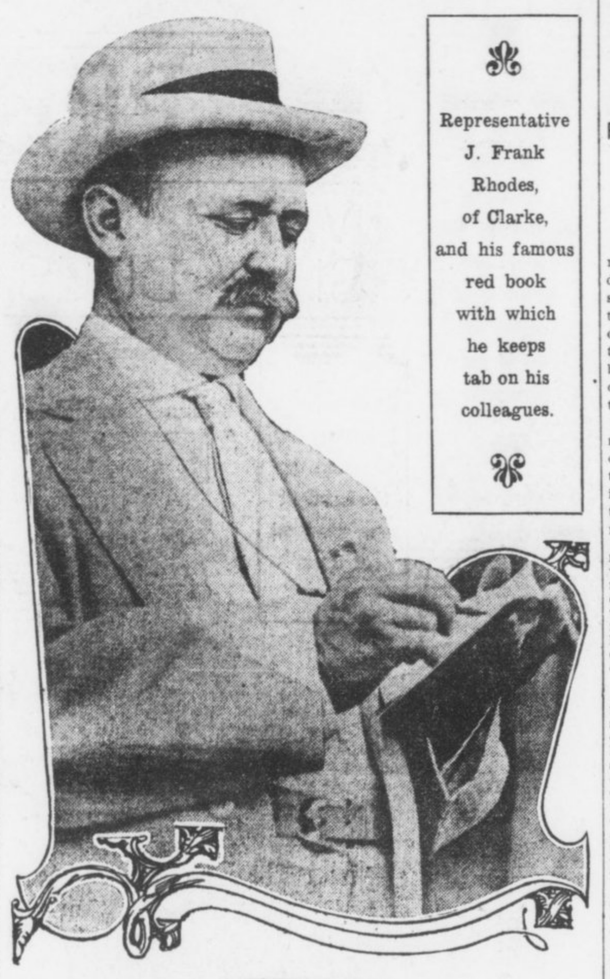
LITTLE ROCK, July 4.—The two-cent passenger rate went into effect in Arkansas to-day following an agreement reached between counsel for the Railroad Commission and the railroads and based largely on the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court, which upheld the right of States to fix rates.

This ends a long legal battle by the railroads to annul the two-cent rate law enacted seven years ago.

Aged Woman Dies.

VIDALIA.—Mrs. Ann Todd died at the home of her son, H. N. Todd, near here, after an illness of two years. She was 79 years old and was a native of Tatnall County.

KEEPS TAB ON EVERY LAWMAKER IN HOUSE



Representative J. Frank Rhodes, of Clarke, and his famous red book with which he keeps tab on his colleagues.

Representative From Athens Writes Down in Little Red Book All He Finds Out.

Representative Frank Rhodes of Clarke County, once Mayor of Athens, is the blue-ribbon figurer and note-maker of the House.

Mr. Rhodes knows the name, habits, affiliations, religion, race, color, and previous conditions of servitude of each and every member of the House and he keeps his records of them handy at all times.

Rhodes has a fearful and wonderful little red leather book, in which everything about everybody in the Legislature is carefully and accurately set down.

The gentleman from Clarke has no sinister purpose in thus keeping tab on his fellow members. He is a wholesouled person, with malice toward none and charity for all. But he is of an inquisitive turn of mind and likes to have a thorough knowledge of anything and everything in which he is concerned. Wherefore, the frank and candid red leather book, in which he makes his daily jottings!

In Athens they yet talk about what a good Mayor Mr. Rhodes made. He had another little red book on that job, too, and long before election day it was packed and jammed with information, minute and searching, about every individual voter in town. Rhodes knew all about 'em before a ballot was cast, and he figured himself a winner, all right! He won, moreover, hands down.

The gentleman from Clarke is a business man, and a successful business man at that. He is happily married and has six children, every one of whom he is training up to the little red book habit.

If ever one of that Rhodes outfit should run for Governor, there will not be a voter in Georgia whose pedigree and history will not be set down accurately and precisely in one of the Rhodes' little red books.

SON WOULD PROBE DEATH OF FATHER

Coroner Orders Another Autopsy Before Funeral of Tampa Veteran With Girl-Wife.

TAMPA, July 4.—Samuel R. Payne's funeral was held here over a body from which the stomach had been taken an hour before the preacher called the services to order.

Payne died suddenly Tuesday at noon. He left a wife 23 years old. He was 75.

Almon Payne, of Pensacola, son of the dead man, consulted with Coroner Jackson and the latter ordered an autopsy. The doctors have not finished the examination of the stomach.

Payne, who was a Union veteran, left a small estate. He had drawn a pension of $30 a month.

'Enough of Lamar,' Says Senator Walsh

WASHINGTON, July 4.—Senator Walsh, a member of the Senate lobby inquiry committee, does not expect J. P. Morgan, of New York, to be called as a witness as a result of allegations of David Lamar.

"Lamar has not shown that he succeeded in getting any one to pay any attention to his claims of influence with members of Congress," said Senator Walsh to-day, "and he has disclaimed that he had any such influence. I think we've had about enough of David Lamar."

Harrison to Run for Alderman in Third

It was announced Friday by friends of J. C. Harrison, ex-Councilman from the Third Ward, that Mr. Harrison would be in the race for Alderman from that ward.

Alderman James E. Warren, also Mayor Pro Tem, will seek re-election from the ward. A spirited fight for the place seems certain.

ATLANTA BABIES NEED YOUR MITE

Mothers' Congress to Put Bottles in Stores for Contributions to Milk Fund.

Every Atlantan willing to spare a few cents to save a baby life will be given an opportunity Monday to contribute to the "Milk for Poor Babies" fund started by the Atlanta Mothers' Congress, under the direction of Mrs. John Rowlett, of 186 East Pine Street.

Mrs. Rowlett said Friday morning that Monday morning milk bottles would be placed in every downtown store for the receipt of contributions. The bottles will be in conspicuous places in the store.

You may drop into the bottles a nickel or a dime or a quarter; or any amount you feel like giving. A subscription of any size will be welcome and will be appreciated by the good women who are trying to give the poor babies of Atlanta a chance to live through the summer. Every nickel donated will help in the fight for the babies.

The Mothers' Congress has decided to put the bottles in stores because responses to their appeal for a quart of milk a day have not been generous enough to take care of all the babies that require milk. The demand almost doubles the supply.

Already 38 children have been placed on the lists.

Besides the twenty quarts a day subscribed by William Randolph Hearst, there have been but nine people in Atlanta who have shown enough interest. Seven of these subscriptions provide for a quart of milk each a day and two for pints.

NEW TESTIMONY LAYS CRIME TO CONLEY

Frank Defense Locates Witness Who Points to the Negro Sweeper as Slayer.

A new witness, said to have the most damaging evidence yet produced against Jim Conley, the negro sweeper in the National Pencil factory, entered the Phagan case Thursday and made an affidavit, the contents fo which are carefully guarded by attorneys for Leo M. Frank, charged with causing the death of the factory girl.

The identity of the witness is as much a secret as the exact nature of his testimony. It was learned, though, that the affidavit was made in the law office of Joseph Leavitt in the Grant Building and was witnessed by Mr. Leavitt's stenographer.

It is said the testimony of this man connects Conley more directly with the crime than any other statement or affidavit yet procured by the defense. The witness is understood to have seen Conley on the afternoon of the crime and to have heard him make remarks in his drunken condition which were extremely incriminating.

Conley Faces Arrest.

The new affidavit is interpreted to mean that a warrant soon will be sworn out through a magistrate's court for the arrest of Conley. William M. Smith, attorney for Conley, said several days ago that if his client was made a defendant in the case he would retaliate upon the lawyers for Frank by issuing subpenas duces tecum, commanding them to appear in court with all the important statements and affidavits which they have obtained from witnesses for their side of the case.

Such a move would be giving the attorneys for Frank a little of their own medicine, as Attorney Rosser created a sensation a week ago by issuing subpenas duces tecum for Solicitor Dorsey, Chief Beavers, Chief Lanford, Pinkerton Detective Harry Scott and all the city detectives who had worked on the Phagan mystery.

They were commanded to bring into court all affidavits and statements of Jim Conley, Newt Lee, W. M. Matthews, Monteen Stover and other vital witnesses for the State.

Branded as "Trick."

Solicitor Dorsey and Attorney Frank A. Hooper, who is associated with Mr. Dorsey in the prosecution, at once branded the move as a thin trick for the purpose of discrediting the State's witnesses. The sworn statements would be used, they said, to compare with the testimony of the State's witnesses when on the stand.

If there were the slightest deviation through a natural lapse of memory or through trifling inaccuracy, the prosecution asserted, the defense would seek to take advantage of this to impeach the witnesses' testimony.

Sheriff Blamed for Americus Lynching

AMERICUS, July 4.—No indictments were found by the Sumter County Grand Jury, which for the past four days had been investigating the lynching of Will Reddill, a negro, in the streets of Americus.

None of the 150 witnesses summoned would tell the names of those who composed the mob, according to the Grand Jury report.

Vigorous criticism was given Sheriff Fuller, however, as the Grand Jury declared he had been very lax in allowing the prisoner to be taken from the jail.

THOUSANDS FLEE FROM HEAT TO COOL PARKS

Lake at Piedmont Gives Relief to Sweltering Throngs—Grant Is Crowded.

Thousands of pleasure seekers Friday splashed about in the waters of Piedmont Lake or sought refuge from the hottest Fourth of July sun in years in the shady drives of the various parks.

Piedmont Park probably drew the greatest crowds of people. They came in droves. Families brought their lunch baskets with them and made a day of it. It was too hot for the strenuous exertion of an old-time celebration, but in spite of the torridity all apeared to enjoy the day of rest and to find some relief in the fact that the celebration was not as noisy as in some years.

Many of the children found their greatest enjoyment at Grant Park about the Zoo, where they stod for hours watching tahe tigers, lions and monkeys.

In all the parks there were scores of picnic parties. The occasional sputter of the small firecracker was heard, and every now and then some one would set off a deafening giant cracker, but most of this was confined to the downtown districts where the "newsies" occupied their spare time in shattering the nerves of the pedestrians.

The golf courses, tennis courts and lakes of the Capital City and East Lake Country Clubs were crowded all days, especially in the afternoon.

Cobb Suspect Jailed Here to Escape Mob

Fearing an attempt at lynching, Cobb County authorities brought Cato Wilson, a 25-year-old negro, to Atlanta Friday morning. He was put in the Fulton County jail.

The negro is accused of attacking the daughter of a Cobb County farmer.

ATLANTA-MADE GOODS EXHIBIT IS CERTAIN

Manufacturers in Meeting Decide to Organize and Set Up Permanent Display.

Atlanta manufacturers will establish in a downtown building an elaborate permanent display of articles made at home.

Four sites are offered, no one of them more than five minutes' walk from Five Points.

Twenty-three of the 100 manufacturers who gathered for a banquet at Hotel Ansley Thursday night pledged themselves to take space in the exhibit hall.

Within four days an Atlanta manufacturers' association will be organized, to handle the exhibit and to wrestle with problems of interest to factory men. Within ten days, one of the four offers of a building will be accepted. Whether the building will be leased, bought or leased with privilege of purchase, is to be worked out.

It was Mr. Morgan who laid the plan before the gathering, after a year's study and preparation. Necessary to the success of the plan is a pledged revenue of $22,500 a year for five years, he said.

Factories Make Realty Values.

"Atlanta should have four times the payroll it now has," he asserted. "The maintenance of real estate values and the future growth of Atlanta absolutely depend upon the growth of manufacturing. We have 600 manufacturing plants in the city now. I doubt if we need more. My idea is that we should build those we have into giant industrial establishments. Some people deny this, but I want to say that Atlanta-made goods can be sold right in Atlanta. It only is necessary to let the people know what we have here."

Bolling H. Jones told the other manufacturers that Evansville, Ind., established such a display, and found that goods could be sold through it at a selling cost of 3 per cent.

"This convinced me," said Mr. Jones. "Did any one here ever sell goods at a cost of 3 per cent?"

C. S. Dobbs made a forceful talk on the advertising value of the exhibit. "The man who makes good products and doesn't tell about it," he said, "is like the man who winks at a girl in the dark—he knows all about it, but she doesn't. Besides, it doesn't get him anywhere."

Adair Is Emphatic.

Forrest Adair was emphatic in his approval.

"I may not be orthodox," he said, "but there is one subject on which I am rabid. That is the talk about the smoke nuisance. I wish to goodness some one would turn 500 more smokestacks loose on us. We need factories.

"But the public does not know about those we have. I met a bank director to-day who did not know that most of the railroad cars rolling out of here roll on wheels made in Atlanta—and another who thought that Mr. Orr had his shoes made in Boston, and simply jobbed them here. The public must have things rubbed in before it remember."

J. K. Orr, J. P. Stevens and others voiced their approval.

On the call for pledges to take space in the exhibit hall, the following manufacturers "signed up:"

J. P. Stevens Manufacturing Company, J. K. Orr Shoe Company, F. E. Block Company, Atlanta Stove Works, Foote & Davies Company, L. & L. Manufacturing Company, Byrd Printing Company, Nunnally & McCrea Manufacturing Company, A. M. Robinson Company, Southern Engraving Company, Atlanta Paper Company, Burnett, Bell & Klapper Furniture Company, Van Winkle Motor Truck Company, Norris, Inc., White Provision Company, Empire Cotton Oil Company, Mitchell Manufacturing Company, Atlanta Gas Light Company, All-Star Manufacturing Company, Southern Spring Bed Company and the Southern Saw and Machine Works.

World Gold Supply Affected by Strike

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

JOHANNESBURG, AFRICA, July 4.—The world's gold supply is being seriously affected by the strike in the Rand. A large percentage of the world's supply of gold comes from this district and leaders of the various unions are trying to shut it off completely.

Serious rioting occurred to-day. Fifty soldiers and three times that number of strikers were hurt in the clashes.

Government Bonds Sell Under Par

NEW YORK, July 4.—A very unusual situation has developed in the market for United States bonds. Within the last few days, for the first time since the 2 per cent bonds which become payable in 1930 have been issued, they have sold on the Stock Exchange at less than par.

This condition is a direct result of the proposal in the currency bill that the bonds of the United States be deprived of their use by national banks to secure circulation.

Gulf Stream Speeds Up; Hurries Steamer

BOSTON, July 4.—Carried along at great speed by an unusually swift current in the Golf Stream, the steamer Sosua, from Costa Rica, reached here a day ahead of time.

Captain Bjonnes said that the waters of the Stream were strangely active, and the steamer began moving so rapidly that the engines were slowed down to half speed. Even after that the Sosua logged off the miles at an amazing rate.

Accused Slayer Kills Himself in His Cell

ANNISTON, July 4.—G. H. Bailey, a prominent merchant, charged with the murder of C. W. Saunders here about two weeks ago, committed suicide in the county jail by cutting his throat. It is thought that he used a safety razor blade, as other prisoners in the jail had such blades.

A relative says that Bailey was despondent after his preliminary trial, when he was refused bail. His body was turned over to Coroner Murphy to be prepared for burial. He leaves a wife and several children.

BABY, 7 MONTHS OLD, HAPPY PLAYING FIDDLE

Child's unusual love of music discovered entirely through accident.

June Howard Stollard, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Stollard, "The Fiddlin' Baby."

Neighborhood attraction is not content unless musical instrument is within easy reach.

Hail the fiddling baby!

Seven months old, and never happy unless he is picking at a violin.

Feed him milk and mush and he is apt to be as cross as a bear; stick a violin between his fat feet and fingers and he will immediately begin picking at the strings, a smile of cherubic joy will wrinkle his plump face—and he is in the seventh heaven of delight.

Atlanta's latest prodigy is June Howard Stollard, the only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Stollard, of 44 East Main Street, and he bids fair to develop into another Mischa Elman.

But it was not until he was five months old and crawling over everything in the house that the love of music that possessed the little soul became known, and then only through accident. One morning the baby crawled into a closet, and, discovering an old violin that had belonged to Mrs. Stoddard's father, calmly took possession of it and began giving an impromptu concert. He had the violin cuddled up between his toes and fingers and was picking at the strings with both feet and hands. And out of the medley of sounds emitted by the protesting violin came now and then notes of surprising clearness.

Since then open season has been declared on violins in the Stollard household. The fiddling baby has become a neighborhood attraction. Like all geniuses, the child is content to sit and fiddle all day long, whether he has an audience or not. He has gained confidence with experience, and now he picks and pecks at the violin strings for dear life. The child puts his whole heart into his fiddling and spurns tempting offers of milk while he is playing. He quits only when he is tired, and sometimes he does not get tired for hours at a time. His mother and father are even now planning his musical education.

'Phone Girls Will Open Summer Camp With Out-door Dance

With an informal reception and a dance in an open-air pavilion the girls of the Southern Bell Telephone Company, 500 in number, will dedicate their summer playground, "Camp Wyanoke," at 8 o'clock Friday night. The camp covers seven acres of wooded hillside on the plantation of B. D. Jackson, and is equipped with electric lights, sewer facilities and running hot and cold water.

The camp was planned by Miss Cathryn C. Tatum, chief of the stenographic bureau of the telephone company, assisted by the head operators. The telephone company donated the equipment, costing over $1,000. Practically every one of the 500 girls who work as operators, stenographers and bookkeepers will spend their vacation there, the cost being only 50 cents a day. The camp will be open till late in September or early October.

SLATON DOUBTS RIGHT TO PAY TEACHERS

Governor Asks Opinion on Amendment Purporting to Add Power in Expenditures.

Governor Slaton has grave doubts whether the recently ratified constitutional amendment purporting to increase the Executive's borrowing power has not really put a limitation upon his powers rather than extended them.

So serious are these doubts in the Governor's mind that he has referred the matter to the Attorney General for an opinion, and will not undertake to do anything in relieving the present situation with respect to paying the common-schoolteachers until his mind has been cleared up by that official.

If the amendment has fully authorized the Governor to proceed to the relief of the teachers, unquestionably he will give the matter that direction, but the peculiar wording of the amendment, coupled with the statutes involved, has given rise to perplexing doubts in the Executive mind as to just exactly what the law does contemplate, and he hesitates to attempt a loan for any purpose whatever until he knows exactly what terms and conditions a loan under the amendment would impose, not only upon the State, but upon the source of the loan.

Anxious to Pay Teachers.

Governor Slaton is anxious to see the school teachers paid. Of that there is no doubt. But the uncertainty in his mind as to the law in the case, as well as the marked stringency of the money market at this time, has prompted him to make haste slowly.

If it might be so arranged the Governor prefers that such loan or loans as he may contract be made with Georgia bankers and financiers. If the matter can not take this direction, however, the Governor will be forced to go East for such funds as he needs, and he has reason to suspect that it will be rather expensive borrowing at this time.

Naturally, the Governor does not wish to involve the State in a transaction calling for an abnormal expense item by way of interest.

The Governor wishes to relieve the present pressing necessities of the common-school teachers, and in addition to that he hopes to secure from the present General Assembly early legislation of a character calculated to avoid delaying the payment of the teachers in the future.

Legislature to Co-operate.

There is a marked disposition in the Legislature, moreover, to co-operate cordially with the Governor in this matter.

During the present three-day recess of the House and the Senate the Governor will address his attention almost exclusively to the problem of financing the teachers in their present necessities and planning for their permanent relief.

When the Legislature meets again Monday it is likely that the Governor will put himself immediately in touch with that body, to the end that the present troublesome status of affairs may be worked out legally, equitably and speedily.

POSSE IN BATTLE WITH BANDITS

One of Solomon Brothers Killed and Another Probably Fatally Wounded.

DOUGLAS, July 4.—Andrew Solomon is dead and Randall Solomon, his brother, to-day is in a hospital here probably fatally wounded, as the result of a battle between the Solomon train bandits and a posse headed by Sheriff Gillis at the Roundabout Swamp, near Kirkland.

The Solomon gang had been hunted by officers of Coffee and Ware Counties and detectives of the Atlantic Coast Line for two weeks for a series of daring freight train and other robberies in this section. They were trailed to the Roundabout Swamp, where they took refuge in the fastnesses where men and dogs could not trail them. There they remained until Thursday afternoon.

When Sheriff Gillis and his posse surrounded the bandits, a pitched battle ensued in which Andrew and Randall Solomon were shot. None of the Sheriff's posse was wounded. A relief party went from here to Kirkland to bring in the dead and wounded.

FLOOD OF SPEED FIEND CHARGES STIRS CHIEF

Beavers Posts Plain Clothes Men to Nab Drivers Who Endanger Children's Lives.

Following the excitement caused by the accident on Mills Street Wednesday afternoon when little Eva Kilpatrick was run down by a speeding automobile and left to her fate, Chief Beavers is receiving complaints of speeding autoists from all parts of the city.

The strongest complaints have come from merchants and residents along Ponce DeLeon Avenue and Marietta Street. Autoists have turned Marietta Street into a speedway, the Chief is told, and run their cars at a terrific rate of speed at all hours of the day and night. Several accidents narrowly have been averted, and pedestrians who are forced to cross Marietta Street are in constant danger.

Out on Ponce DeLeon Avenue conditions, according to complaints, are as bad as they are on Marietta Street. At night, residents of the street claim, the automobilists who use the street throw their mufflers wide open and sleep is impossible.

Children Kept From Street.

Little children living on Ponce DeLeon Avenue have been forbidden by their parents to cross the street unless their elders are with them, so dangerous and reckless have the automobile drivers become.

One complaint made to the chief declared that an 8-year-old girl narrowly escaped with her life only a few days ago. The driver made no attempt to turn his machine or avoid running over the child, and the complaint declares that as he flew past he cursed the little girl for getting in the road.

Chief Beavers, following the receipt of the complaints, started a vigorous campaign that it is hoped will end in the arrest and punishment of the speeding autoists. Every policeman on the force has been instructed to watch carefully for speeders, and also ordered to enforce all the automobile regulations strictly.

Police Put on Watch.

Plainclothes men will be sent to the various portions of the city that have become known as haunts of the speed maniac, and nothing will be left undone to break up the practice that has made the streets of Atlanta a source of danger to all who venture upon them.

Chief Beavers also has started a thorough inquiry into the accident which nearly cost Eva Kilpatrick her life, and if the autoist who ran down the little girl and then fled is captured, an example will be made of him. The investigation has been placed in the hands of Captain Poole, and a squad of men have been detailed to act under his orders. Every person in the neighborhood of the accident who could have seen the car will be questioned.

Columbus Draws Law To Curb Autoists.

COLUMBUS, July 4.—An ordiannce window of Luden & Bates' piano store the Columbus City Council to force all automobile drivers to bring their cars to a standstill when approaching a street car which has stopped. The ordinance also provides that no one who operates a motorcycle shall allow anyone else to ride on the machine with them, nor can they carry packages that would tend to obstruct their view.

Anniston Wars on Speeders.

GADSDEN, ALA., July 4.—Following an order issued by Mayor Holcomb yesterday, the police last night arrested two automobile drivers charging them with exceeding the speed limit. They will be given a hearing in Police Court Monday. The Mayor told the police to arrest everyone driving fast, regardless of his station in life.

Contestants Drive and Ride Pretty Shetland Prizes in Parade as Guests of Hearst Papers.

Boys and girls in The Georgian and American pony contests, their parents, their relatives and their friends are at Grant Park celebrating the Fourth as the guests of the Hearst papers.

Promptly at 10 o'clock nine of the ponies which are to be awarded as prizes in the contest started in parade formation from The Georgian and American offices in Alabama Street.

It was a pretty sight. The buggies were swathed in flags, and the ponies, sleek and shining, proudly wore tiny flags on all parts of their harnesses. Five of the ponies were hitched to buggies; the others were saddled.

Nine of the most eager contestants were chosen to drive and ride the ponies to the park, but with attendants close at hand to prevent any mishap, for the Shetlands are spirited. While gentle, still they are not getting the work they should and are inclined to be lively.

At the park every contestant is being given a ride or a drive. Lemonade and other refreshments are being served. Dan Carey, superintendent of parks, said The Georgian's guests could "own the park" for the afternoon, and they took him at his word.

Men from The Georgian and American offices were delegated to look after the children, so that parents who let them go unattended need have no worry as to their safety.

STARK BITTERLY ARRAIGNED BY SUFFRAGIST

Mrs. McLendon Scores Lawmaker for Opposition—Fight for Senate Chamber Renewed.

Characterizing Senator W. W. Stark as a man of small mental caliber, Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, president of the Georgia Woman's Suffrage Association, said Frdiay the suffragists would renew the fight for the use of the Senate chamber during their State convention.

When Senator Stark ascertained the suffragists intended to enlighten the Senators on the question of votes for women, and then moved the tabling of a resolution to grant them the use of the Senate chamber on the nights of July 9 and 10, he provoked the ire of Mrs. McLendon.

Mrs. McLendon declared the suffragists of Atlanta and Georgia were indignant. She believed that common courtesy should have impelled the Senators to willingly grant them the use of the Senate chamber, irrespective of the Senators' views on suffrage.

She Calls Condition "Pitiful."

"It is pitiful that women have to beg the men for such things as that," she said.

During a brief recess Mrs. McLendon asked Senator Stark why he opposed granting the use of the Senate chamber to the suffragists, and he replied it was because the Saviour did not call a woman as one of His disciples.

"The answer seemed so absurd, so little to the point," she asserted.

"I asked him if he didn't know that the women of Georgia helped to build that State House, and that we had as much right there as anybody else. Governor Brown let four cowboys from Washington ride horses up the steps, yet the women of Georgia can not meet there."

Plan to Renew Fight.

"We are going to renew the fight for the use of the Senate chamber," Mrs. McLendon continued.

"Mr. John Y. Smith said he would reopen the question for us next Monday. Mr. Blackburn said he would, too. Mr. Blackburn is not in favor of woman suffrage, but his personal belief has nothing to do with this question. No, I don't think we'll get the use of the Senate chamber, but we'll show the smallness of the average Georgia legislator. Just because they are elected by the men people they try to keep the women down. They are afraid the women might rise against them, so they keep their heels on the women's necks."

Mrs. J. K. Ottley, a suffragist sympathizer, said she had no opinion regarding Senator Stark or the reasons he advanced for opposing suffrage, but she was surprised at the Senate's refusal to allow the women to meet there.

Mrs. Ottley Is Surprised.

"I should think they would be very glad to extend the use of the Senate chamber to any association which was neither incendiary nor objectionable," she said, "and, judging by the headway made in other States, the suffragist associations are neither incendiary nor objectionable.

"I am surprised that they should have denied the use of the Senate chamber to any group of respectable Georgia women seeking something they believed to be for the State's good."

Mrs. Ottley said she believed woman's suffrage would come, but she would probably never make an effort to bring it.

Militants Burn Large Warehouse.

BIRMINGHAM, ENGLAND, July 4. Militant suffragettes burned a big warehouse here to-day, doing $25,000 damage. On a nearby building they posted a placard saying:

"Fires will never cease until women vote."

Bill to Reimburse Dairymen Drafted

A cattle bill, providing for the reimbursing of the dairymen for cows killed by order of the Health Department, will be introduced by Representative R. Frank Smith, of DeKalb County, at the request of the Georgia Dairymen's Association, which has been agitating the matter for years.

It provides that the owner shall be reimbursed in the value of the animal killed as shown upon the tax books.

LITTLE GIRL IS A HOTEL VETERAN; SHE HAS NEVER MADE MUD PIES

Demure Miss at the Majestic Can Order Dinner Like a Real Epicure.

Think of it! Tobe 7 years old and not know what a mud pie looks like.

That is little Miss Christine Lewis, demure, pretty, petite daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Lewis, who has spent all of her blissful seven years in a hotel and wouldn't live anywhere else even if her parents insisted.

Miss Christine is at the Majestic at present. She can order a dinner as well as her mother, and she orders the porters and bellmen around with the nonchalance of a legislator. From the time she awakes in the morning and takes here seat in the dining room at 9 o'clock until she is tucked in bed at 8, after bidding guests on the veranda good-night, she is the sunshine of the hotel.

Miss Christine is a veteran.

"Waiter," she beckons at the table, "I don't care for consomme to-night. You may bring me chicken, if you have it, and vegetables. And I want ice cream. And it's hot in here; I wish you'd start the 'lectric fan. Please don't forget the ice cream."

Mud pies are unknown to her. Miss Christine's frocks know not the stain of the red Georgia soil. In the afternoon, instead of playing in the street as most children do, she goes to a picture show. And there she sits up straight and watches the romances unreel. It is more fun, says Miss Christine, than playing in the hot sun.

Miss Christine Lewis, who has spent all of her seven years in hotels.

Doesn't want to live in a residence ever, says petitie miss, who is the pet of the Majestic's guests.

Likes picture shows better than romping. because romping soils her dresses.

WAVES U. S. FLAG IN CANADA AND STARTS RIOT

Overpatriotic American Flaunts Emblem in Regiment's Face and Is Beaten Up.

WINNIPEG, July 4.—An overpatriotic American started a small-sized riot on Main Street here to-day by waving an American flag in the face of the Tenth Canadian Regiment as they were returning home from camp. In the fight that followed, soldiers and civilians alike participated.

The American was roughly handled and the flag tossed into the street and trampled on by the marching soldiers. Before the police could interfere several who took part in the fight received black eyes and cuts on the face.

The incident happened when the streets were crowded with friends of the returning soldiers. The young American, who is employed in a local restaurant, as he waved the flag at the soldiers shouted, "Hurrah for the American Eagle!"

Colonel J. B. Mitchell, in command of the regiment, ordered one of his men to quiet the American and tell him to put the flag down. As the soldier sprang forward to obey, several civilians closed in on the American and a fight commenced, which finally was quelled by the police.

No arrests were made. In all probability the matter will be taken up with the American Consul General.

U. S. Is Paying More For Seamen's Food

WASHINGTON, July 4.—The increasing cost of living is demonstrated in contracts for feeding the officers and men of the Revenue Cutter Service during the fiscal year beginning July 1.

New York City shows the greatest increase. It will cost $.436 a day to feed each sailor there this year as against $.38 last year. Baltimore and Boston are the only cities showing decreases, the cost in Baltimore dropping from $.41 to $.401, and in Boston from $.387 to $.383.

Electric Fan Demand Swamps Local Shops

The hot weather of the past several days has developed an electric fan famine. The demand has so increased that orders can not be filled. Electrical concerns have long waiting lists to be filled as soon as new shipments arrive.

More than 1,000 fans have been rented and sold within the last few days by one concern.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

Keith Vaudeville at Forsyth.

Edward Abeles, the distinguished comedy actor, who has created a number of important leading roles with great plays, is making himself a real favorite with the patrons of the Forsyth this week, in the presentation of his excellent playlet, called "He Tried To Be Nice." Miss Charlotte Lander gives valuable assistance to the star in the act and it has won applause that made extra curtain calls at every performance. The bill is one of exceptional quality and real interest. There are acts that are of a keen and drawing power and collectively make up a program that is full of good things.

Talking-Pictures at the Grand.

Matinee and night performances of Edison's talking pictures will be continued Friday and Saturday at the Grand. The program is new—different from the first part of the week, and just as interesting. Interest in the pictures has grown steadily. The Edison novelty has won on pure merit and the big Grand is being well filled at every performance.

Extra Matinee at Bijou To-day.

The pleasing impression made by "A Trip to Paris" on Monday at the Bijou has brought crowded houses to the theater all week. The warm weather has not affected the attendance, and Bijou patrons have shown their appreciation by the generous applause and frequent curtain calls. "A Trip to Paris" is one of the best tabloids that has been offered. Extra matinee to-day at 2:30.

Stabs Son-in-Law In Fight Over Wife

DAHLONEGA, July 4.—When William Stover, of Auraria, started a row with Lon Jett, Gus Stover interfered and was seriously stabbed by Jett. Gus Stover is a son of William Stover and a son-in-law of Jett. Remarks that the elder Stover made about Jett's daughter, Gus Stover's wife, started the difficulty.

Sheriff T. M. Ray was notified and reached Jett's home shortly afterward. He was arrested and placed in jail. Gus Stove is in a serious condition.

Exchange to Fight Cotton Future Tax

NEW YORK, July 4.—A formal protest by the Cotton Exchange will probably be made against the amendment to the tariff bill providing for taxing sales of cotton futures one-tenth of a cent a pound.

Cotton brokers and spinning interests declared that the taxation of one-tenth of a cent a pound on sales of futures would drive the market for cotton to Liverpool, where there are no such restrictions.

PRINCE SAYS KIN WON'T SLIGHT U. S. BRIDE

Austrian Noble Also Denies King Blocks His Marriage to San Francisco Girl.

LOS ANGELES, July 4.—"Miss Marie Freeze is the equal of any princess of Austria, and as my wife she will be received at the imperial court beyond any question," declared Prince Stanislaus Sulkowski, of Austria, in reply to a report that lack of royal consent was delaying his marriage to the Los Angeles girl.

"It is not true that Countess Szechenyi, who was Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, was not received at court or was coldly treated by the nobility of Austria-Hungary," he added.

Prince Sulkowski said he awaited the consent of the ministry of war to the marriage, a consent made necessary by the fact that he is an officer in the Second Dragoons.

Prince Sulkowski insists, in spite of reports of Gladys Vanderbilt's unhappy experiences, that there will not be the slightest disposition on the part of the nobility of his country to turn a cold shoulder to Miss Freeze when he takes her to Vienna as his bride.

Thieves Ambushed By Elkin Drug Clerk

Through the vigilance of R. W. McRoberts, an Elkin Drug Company clerk, six negro thieves, who, for some months past, have caused annoyance and considerable loss to the company, were arrested and bound over on $200 bond each.

Candied cherries, perfume and drugs were the principal things taken, but the negroes became more bold and carried out bottles of alcohol in the bottom of the trash cans.

McRoberts and three others secreted themselves in the basement and captured the negroes.

LONGSTREET'S WIDOW TELLS OF REUNION

Describes Meeting Sharpshooter Detailed to Kill Husband, Whom General Captured.

By HELEN D. LONGSTREET.

GETTYSBURG, July 4.—The tents of America's loyalty are pitched today on the world's greatest battlefield. Gettysburg's bugles echo today over a reunited nation.

Standing on the borderland of eternity, with its shadows touching their bent forms and silvered heads, these last survivors of an army the like of which the world shall see no more have gathered here, not Northern, not Southern, but all American, bridging the bloody rift of the sixties with fraternal unity more ancient than sectionalism, more lasting than hate.

To the youth of this nation the inspirational value of this day on Gettysburg's field will outweigh the sordid accumulations of all the Rockefellers the world will ever produce.

"Where did you lose your arm?" I asked of one melancholy-faced soldier in blue, who walked a little lamely notwithstanding his brave efforts.

Detailed to Kill General.

"After the battle of Chickamauga," he said, "I was one of twenty sharpshooters detailed to kill Longstreet. He captured us all and I lost my right arm. Did you ever see Longstreet?" he inquired pathetically. "How sorry I am that he did not live to be here."

Gazing over seas of Old Glory, miles of which stream from the houses and dot the hillsides, swathing the trees and bridging the streets, until a loyal canopy of red, white and blue almost conceals the blue heavens above.

"Oh, isn't it glorious!" I said to a veteran in gray. "How could you look on the old flag and know its meaning and fire on it?"

The veteran in gray said, brokenly, as he looked with me upon the shining colors of our country's standard:

"That's My Flag Forever."

"I didn't stop to think so much about what we were fighting about; my land and my people called to me. They were in trouble; it was about the same as if it had been my mother. Right or wrong, I would rush to her rescue."

"But now you are glad," I said, "glad that you didn't win; glad that the American Union lives."

He bared his head and, pointing to the glorious sweep of color, said reverently:

"That is my flag, the flag of my fathers, the flag of my country, my children's flag forever. God keep it in the skies. It means strength and progress and peace that will endure. It blazed the only road to national happiness and greatness."

A melancholy-eyed veteran in worn gray, gazing wistfully across Cemetery Ridge, had gone back to the daring days of the long past. Lost to the present, oblivious of surroundings, he said sadly:

Mourns Over Pickett's Charge.

"If Pickett hadn't made that charge we stood a good chance of whipping the Yankees."

"But," I said, "it is best for us all that you didn't whip them; and they are no longer Yankees, just Americans; and, looking toward the East, shoulder to shoulder, heart beating close to heart, our country's mighty destiny is our common hope and glory."

"I know all that," he said, "but I just sometimes can't help feeling powerful sad when I think of them brave boys who had to die out there for nothing."

"Oh," I replied, "nobody ever dies for nothing who dies for right."

On this field of tearful memories a sea of brown tents stretching miles in all directions, it is learned that no provision whatever has been made for the participation in this greatest event in the country's peace history of the women who sent husbands and fathers and sons and sweethearts to answer the call at the first tap of the drum in 1861. The hardship, the suffering, the agony of the women who waited in the war homes of the nation may never be told.

Veteran Longs for Wife.

Some day a grateful Government will erect a monument that will pierce the blue heavens from Gettysburg's statelilest, sunniest slope, and on it will stand the figure of one in whose courageous soul every battle was fought and every victory won—the woman who placed the flag of her faith in the hands of her best beloved and sent it to the front when the first gun was fired on Fort Sumter.

A veteran, shambling rather dejectedly along up Emmitsburg Road, overtook me. He was hot, dusty, tired. I said: "Do take my umbrella. I really would rather walk without it."

He straightened up with some of the old fire and vigor.

"Pshaw! I was fighting up this road before you wuz born. I guess I kin stand a little sun now. But how I wish Jane wuz here. She had a harder time than I did enduring the war."

Later a little woman with faded eyes overtook us "up Emmitsburg Road."

"I wasn't expected," she said, "but I just couldn't help coming. Jim was killed along here somewhere. I think it must have been about here."

Pausing at a clump of trees, she rested a thin hand on one of the outstretched branches.

Going to Her Sweetheart.

"Your husband?" I said.

"Oh, no, he was just my sweetheart, but I told him that I would wait until he came back. I won't have much longer to wait now. He did not come back to me, but I am going to him."

Some time there will be another and a greater reunion on this field. The next time it will include the real soldiers who made the four years of fighting possible.

On that day, a rich, grateful Republic will pour out its millions, and all the gray, bent Janes who had "a harder time" than their husbands on the field, and all the sad-eyed Sarahs who are still waiting for sweethearts that never came back will gather here on the scene of a Republic's trials, tribulations, and sufferings, and that will be a real reunion of the white souls that laid the supreme offering on the altar of country, of the tortured hearts that wrestled with the uncomplaining pain through the long four years when the nation's harpstrings were tuneless because her daughters could not sing the old songs.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

by JAMES B. NEVIN

By refusing the perfectly reasonable request, legitimately entered, of certain advocates of woman suffrage in Georgia that they be permitted to use the Senate chamber for a meeting, at a time definitely sure not to conflict with any busines of the Senate, it is extremely doubtful whether the Senate has covered itself with any amazing amount of glory or erected a perpetual monument to its common sense.

That is the way a great many people appear to view the matter, anyway!

Moreover, if the Senate is opposed to woman suffrage, which it is agreed all around it has a right to be, it doubtless has helped the cause rather than injured it in Georgia by refusing the request noted.

Woman suffrage may not be popular in Georgia—on the contrary, it may be more popular than some folks imagine—but certainly its advocates thus far working in the open are women of extraordinary intelligence and marked conservatism of action.

To deny them a request that would have been granted, readily enough, to the State Democratic executive committee, say, is not particularly convincing in the minds of some people that woman suffrage is either an error or a monstrous wrong.

To be sure, the women may hold their meeting elsewhere, but in view of the fact that all sorts of political meetings have been permitted in the Senate chamber—which is a public place—and all sorts of people permitted to speak therein, in season and out, the needless turning down of a handful of women, desirous of holding a welfare meeting in behalf of their own organization, seems to have been rather out of place, if not absolutely cheap.

The Senate of Georgia before this time, however, has strained at gnats only to swallow camels subsequently. It appears that the present Senate was not loathe to let it be known that it could do that old act itself, if occasion seemed to require the performance.

It is the opinion of a number of people that the Senate's refusal of the request of the women involved was extremely ungracious, to say the least of it!

It should be borne in mind that neither Representative McArthur nor Representative Browning, of the new counties of Wheeler and Bleckley, respectively, were expelled from the House.

Both gentlemen had been sworn in, but that fact did not make them members de jure of the House, necessarily. The constitutionality of their titles to their seats was raised and sustained by the House, and their seats therefore were declared vacant, or, rather, their seats were declared never to have existed.

Both gentlemen are very popular, and are citizens of the very highest integrity and standing. Indeed, as a purely personal matter, the disposition of the House undoubtedly was to seat them. However, the House, after thrashing the matter out exhaustively, decided that the law plainly was against them and very properly it acted accordingly.

Discussing this matter to-day, Representative Hardeman, who made a speech denying the right of the gentlemen to their seats, said: "It is a tribute to the patriotism and genuine worth of the House that it acted as it did in this matter, despite its heavy personal inclination to vote otherwise. My own vote was embarrassing, in a way—I hated to vote against these two splendid men, but I could not afford to do that which I feared would Legislature, and so I voted as I did.

"I think the George House of this year may be depended upon to do the right thing in all matters, judging by the way it acted in this very trying situation."

Close behind the introduction of a bill in the Georgia Senate by Hon. J. L. Sweat, of the Fifth District, Waycross will organize for a determined campaign in favor of extending the State road to the sea, via Waycross.

Right-of-way through Ware has been pledged, and the county convicts will be loaned, if necessary, to the State for the road construction.

Other counties through the Ware County section have agreed to make similar offers, and all will exert themselves to get favorable action by the Legislature.

Governor John M. Slaton's suggestion of a State Highways Commission has met with the hearty approval of the farmers of Floyd County, and they have not been at all slow in making that fact known.

Meetings were held throughout the county Thursday, warmly approving the idea, and the Rome Chamber of Commerce has set the seal of its indorsement upon it.

Howard Ennis, of Baldwin, who defeated former Speaker Pro Tem Carl Vinson for re-election to the present House by the squeaky margin of five votes, has made marked progress in the esteem and respect of his fellow members. Already Ennis of Baldwin is known of everybody, and is most generally approved.

Despite the fact that Ennis defeated Vinson, as aforesaid, the two men are the warmest of friends, and may be seen almost any day that Vinson is in Atlanta, arm in arm, and as thick as can be. Both are high-class men.

Representative Barry Wright, of Floyd County, a former member of the House and legislator of experience, has just been re-elected president of the Cherokee Life Insurance Company of Rome.

Mr. Wright is one of the younger members of the present House of Representatives, and is perhaps the very youngest life insurance president in the United States.

D. F. McClatchey, the House reading clerk, not only has a powerful and sonorous voice, but one possessed of marvelous powers of concentration.

In reading a bill for the first or second time Mr. McClatchey frequently condenses pages into paragraphs, and paragraphs into sentences. Sometimes he gets by with a sentence so fast that the audience can not hear it at all!

By condensing things after the manner he does, Mr. McClatchey undoubtedly saves the State thousands of dollars annually in the mere matter of time prevented from going to waste. If McClatchey didn't get over the ground orally as fast as he does the entire time of the House doubtless would be taken up listening to bills read.

Mother's Advice To Her Daughter

A Real Live Doll to Fondle Is Woman's Greatest Happiness.

One of the most important matters about which women concern themselves is their future status as a grandmother. And she is wisdom itself who knows of or learns of that famous remedy, Mother's Friend. This is an external application for the abdominal muscles and breasts. It certainly has a wonderful influence, allays all fear, banishes all pain, is a most grateful encouragement to the young, expectant mother, and permits her to go through the period happy in mind, free in body and thus destined to anticipate woman's greatest happiness as nature intended she should.

The action of Mother's Friend makes the muscles free, pliant and responsive to expansion. Thus all strain and tension upon the nerves and ligaments is avoided, and, in place of a period of discomfort and consequent dread, it is a season of calm repose and joyful expectation.

There is no nausea, no morning sickness, no nervous twitching, none of that constant strain known to so many women, hence Mother's Friend is really one of the greatest blessings that could be devised.

This splendid and certain remedy can be had of any druggist at $1.00 a bottle, and is sure to prove of inestimable value, not only upon the mother, but upon the health and future of the child. Write to Bradfield Regulator Co., 122 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for their book to expectant mothers.

JUDGES CHOSEN FOR SLOGAN CONTEST

Georgian's Prize Offer for Best Button Caption Increases Interest in 500,000 Club.

The Georgian's 500,000 club movement was given a new impetus Thursday when three of the best known men in Atlanta became actively identified with it as judges of the $25 slogan prize contest. They are:

John W. Grant, Wilmer L. Moore and Walter C. Taylor.

"The constant stimulus our newspapers give to the Atlanta spirit is one of the finest things in the city, or any city in the country for that matter," said Mr. Grant. "The 500,000 booster club idea will result in much good, and the census of 1920 will be ample proof of it."

"I want to help the 500,000 club all I can," said Mr. Moore.

"I often think that we don't know how to appreciate Atlanta until we get out of it," said Walter Taylor. "Often when I was in other towns and heard of the things being done in Atlanta, I got as homesick as when I first left home as a boy.

"Every traveling man, every Atlantan who goes away for a trip, as well as all good boosters at home, should wear one of the 500,000 club buttons. You can't calculate the boosting that such a plan will effect."

Since The Georgian offered $25 for the best slogan for the buttons interest has greatly increased in the enterprise to get 500,000 people into Atlanta by 1920.

The contest will last for ten days, the winner of the prize to be announced in Hearst's Sunday American of July 13. All entrants must mail their slogans to the Contest Editor, Atlanta Georgian. They will be transmitted to the judges and merit will decide. The originator of the one selected will be given $25 in cash.

It is an easy way to make $25. It's a chance to render a civic service. Thousands of buttons bearing the slogan will be distributed. A few words penned in an idle moment may speak volumes.

BUSINESS IN WOOL IS TAKING ON LIFE

Prices on Free Trade Basis Except for Medium Fleeces—London Auctions Open.

BOSTON, July 4.—More wool has been sold in Boston during the past week, and the market has assumed an appearance of activity lacking for months. Transfers foot up well over 1,500,000 pounds, including territories, fleeces and Texas wools. Prices have been low, keeping the market down practically to a free wool basis on all grades except medium fleeces. Active buying in the West now is largely confined to Montana, where the new clipping season is just getting under way. Other States have been fairly well cleaned up, the best wools having been purchased and the heavier wools consigned. Business in foreign wools remains at a standstill, as manufacturers will not pay the duties in the face of free wool. The London auction sales opened about as expected with American buyers unusually active for the first day.

Receipts of wool in pounds for the week ended and including Wednesday were as follows:

	1913.	1912.
Domestic	4,534,887	8,130,912
Foreign	181,560	3,420,304
Totals	4,716,447	11,551,216

Receipts in pounds from and including January 1, 1913, as compared with the corresponding period of 1912, were as follows:

LITTLE STORIES of the TOWN

Sneezetown Is Up in Wisconsin.

Here's a story told by a visitor at the Transportation Club the other evening:

The elderly matron with the bundles, who was journeying to a point in Wisconsin and occupied a seat near the middle of the car, had fallen asleep. One the seat in front of her sat a little boy. The brakeman opened the door of the car and called out the name of the station the train was approaching. The elderly lady roused herself with a jerk and inquired hurriedly of the boy:

"Where are we, Bobby?"

"I don't know, grandma," answered the little boy.

"Didn't the brakeman say something just now?"

"No, he just stuck his head inside the door and sneezed."

"Help me with these things, Bobby!" she exclaimed, hurriedly. "This is Oskosh. It's where we get off."

Wouldn't Stand To Have It Filed.

The conversation led to surgical operations and Congressman John H. Small of North Carolina told of the experience of a Southern blacksmith.

The blacksmith sprained his wrist one afternoon, and lost no time in hustling to the office of a physician.

The doctor examined the wrist and then took a small bottle from a shelf, but found it empty.

"James," said he, turning to an assistant, "go upstairs and bring me down a couple of those phials."

"What's tha?" exclaimed the patient, suddenly showing large signs of emotion.

"I was merely asking my assistant to bring me down a couple of phials from upstairs," answered the doctor.

"Files!" cried the blacksmith, with a look of determination. "No, you don't, Doc! If that hand has got to come off you will use an ax or a saw!"

Real Modesty From Down State.

The only unoccupied room in the hotel—one with a private bath in connection with it—was given to the stranger from the wiregrass. The next morning the clerk was approached by the guest when the latter was ready to check out.

"Well, did you have a good night's rest?" the clerk asked.

"No, I didn't," replied the guest. "The room was all right, and the bed was pretty good, but I couldn't sleep very much, for I was afraid someone would want to take a bath, and the only door to it was through my room."

Arrested on the story of his wife, who is suing him for divorce, that he was at her home in an abusive and intoxicated condition.

Locked in the police station for two hours.

Served with a temporary injunction preventing him from molesting or visiting his wife.

Given notice that action has been taken to have him adjudged in contempt of court.

Summoned to appear as defendant in the Recorder's Court Friday morning.

Fined $10.75 by Recorder Broyles for intoxication and disorderly conduct.

Notified that he will have to appear August 16 before Judge L. S. Roan when decision will be made on the permanency of the injunction standing against him and when he will be given opportunity to answer to the contempt charge.

DeLamater was let off with a light fine in the court of Recorder Broyles Friday morning on his promise that he would not seek to see his wife again and would not in any way molest her.

His trial was the sequel of an exciting scene at his wife's residence, 60 Currier Street, Thursday afternoon. He is said to have gone there in an intoxicated condition and uttered threats against her father, City Comptroller J. H. Goldsmith.

Mrs. DeLamater called Policemen Nashburn and Pate. They warned him to leave, and when he disregarded their orders, placed him under arrest. He explained at the police station that he was at his wife's residence only to see his children and to try to effect a reconciliation with Mrs. DeLamater.

Mrs. DeLamater's attorneys, Daley & Chambers, obtained a temporary injunction from Judge L. S. Roan, restraining DeLamater from visiting at her home, and at the same time made application to have him adjudged in contempt of court for his failure to pay the $75 a month temporary alimony which Mrs. DeLamater is said to have been awarded pending the settlement of her divorce suit.

Head of Navy Yard Makes 'Bossy' Ruling

WASHINGTON, July 4.—The Secretary of the Navy has telegraphed the commandant of the navy yard at Portsmouth, N. H., asking if there is anything in the Constitution to prevent a certain woman's cow from crossing the navy yard to its annual pasturage at Kittery.

Secretary Daniels does not give the name of the woman, but he says she has had the privilege of getting a cow across for about 30 years. He doesn't know why any objection was raised this year and he proposes to find out.

Citizens Win Fight On Fertilizer Plant

CORDELE, July 4.—Because the City Council granted the Empire Cotton Oil Company a permit to erect a fertilizer-mixing plant a short distance from the residence section of Northern Heights more than 50 citizens of that section appeared before that body last night, urging that the permit be revoked.

Council voted to withdraw the permit. It is understood that the company will bring legal proceedings.

Demand for Beer Bottles Increasing

TERRE HAUTE, IND., July 4.—Glass factories here which make more beer bottles than in any other city in the United States report an unprecedented demand in June, one factory shipping 300 carloads to breweries. The usual July shutdown has been waived.

Manufacturers are installing fans, running water, etc., so that blowers may be able to work during the hot weather.

U.S. ASSETS FIXED AT $2,000,000,000

Surplus of $40,083,229 Wiped Out by Canal Expenditures. $275,000 in Reserve.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—Uncle Sam closed the fiscal year 1913 with a surplus of $40,083,229, a gain of $3,750,000. Panama Canal expenditures and public debt transactions, however, wiped out this surplus and created a deficit of $2,449,000.

Total receipts were $723,782,921, and ordinary disbursements $638,699,692. Corporation taxes yielded the Government $24,948,570. Custom receipts reached $318,142,000, an increase of nearly $7,000,000.

The Government spent $41,741,000 on the Panama Canal, making a total of $315,229,000 spent to date.

Secretary McAdoo to-night announced that the daily treasury statement in future would be issued in a completely changed form, designed to show at a glance the assets and liabilities of the Government.

The first statement will show, the Secretary said, that the grand total of assets of the Government is nearly $2,000,000,000, against which there are liabilities including the gold and silver certificates aggregating about $1,725,000,000, leaving a balance in the treasury of from $250,000,000 to $275,000, including the gold reserve of $150,000,000.

THE GHOST BREAKER

By G. W. GODDARD and PAUL DICKEY

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

The scene of the story is laid in the Vanderlip Hotel, New York City. The Princess Maria Theresa of Segura, a beautiful Spanish woman, is suddenly awakened in her suite by the sound of pistol shots. She hears a man running down the hall. He crashes against her door, breaking the lock, and enters. She sees he is a tall, good-looking young man, dressed in evening clothes. He is carrying a revolver in his right hand, and blood is dripping from a wound in his left. He begs the Princess to hide him. She, moved by some indescribable impulse, decides that she will. She directs him to an inner room, and a few minutes later, when the hotel detective knocks on the door, she tells him she is all right and sends him away. The young man, who is Warren Jarvis, of Kentucky, comes out of his hiding place, and the Princess, for the first time, notices his wound. She is moved to sympathy and showers him with questions as to what has occurred. Jarvis tells her about a Kentucky feud between his family and another named Markham. He says he left Kentucky to avoid the feudists, but encountered one of them in the hotel, which explains the shots.

Now go on with the story.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

A quick shade passed over his face and he pressed his lips together.

"No, never," he declared, in a steady voice.

"You have no fear of death?"

He lifted his eyebrows slightly by way of reply.

Dona Maria moved nearer and lowered her voice to a tense undertone:

"You are—you are not afraid of ghosts?"

Some brilliant student of humanics once figured that the essential difference between a brave man and a coward is that while both are sure to be frightened the coward is panic-stricken in the presence of danger and the brave man is likely to go to pieces after the danger has passed.

Possibly this is the reason that Warren Jarvis and the Princess of Aragon could discuss so calmly their future plans when the one was a murderer in the eyes of the law, a wounded and trapped fugitive; and the other was coolly harboring a criminal to use him for her own private ends. As adventures are for the venturous, so romance is for the romantic. Both were young, both were romantic and both were fearless.

And so it was that Jarvis could smile with unaffected amusement when Dona Maria asked if he was afraid of ghosts. But Dona Maria did not smile.

"Ghosts," she repeated soberly, in response to his puzzled query. Jarvis threw back his head and laughed silently.

"After what I've been through?" he said. "No, I'm not afraid of ghosts."

Dona Maria held him with her gaze until the mirth died out of his face.

"If you escape from here," she said slowly, "it will be because I helped you. We might say I saved your life. If what you tell me is true and if I try to save your life——" she paused for an instant and then went on steadily—"it will be for a selfish motive entirely. It will be because I have work for you to do. Do you understand? Work—hard work—dangerous work! It—it may mean your life in the end," she added, and her voice faltered slightly.

A Real Peril.

Jarvis studied curiously the dark, beautiful face. He did not feel inclined to laugh now. He felt that there was something deadly serious back of this child's talk of ghosts. Whatever the service might be that she demanded of him it was certain that she believed the peril it entailed to be really active.

"You are frank, anyway," he remarked.

"It's a chance," she reminded him.

There was a certain medieval brutality about this last suggestion that completely won him. Indeed, it never occurred to either that there was any true moral obliquity in their attitude or actions. When Jarvis drew his pistol and shot his man to death there burned in his bosom as pure a flame of fanatical belief in the justice of his cause as that which steeled the lance point of the Red Cross Knight. And in the same spirit Dona Maria would swear him to her service and send him to a possible death. He smiled at the thought.

JARVIS SWEARS TO GET THE GHOST

"Kneel then, Warren of Jarvis," she commanded, "and repeat this oath."

"And my reward?"

"—— is your life," she replied instantly.

Jarvis again burst into a short silent laugh. "Well, that's something. And if I agree——?"

"You will begin by taking the ancient feudal oath of my country," said Dona Maria, gravely.

"Oath!" exclaimed Jarvis. "Isn't my word enough?"

The Princess waved her hand in a truly royal manner.

"You will pardon me if I insist."

The young man smiled and shrugged his shoulders. "Very well. If it pleases you, I'll swear the blackest oath you can utter. Let's hear it."

However lightly he might take it, the ceremony held nothing of the mirthful for Dona Maria. As solemnly as if feudalism had not long ago been reduced to a show of pomp to please those whom it amused, she asked his name.

"Jarvis," he told her.

"Your full name?"

"Warren Jarvis."

Royally Dona Maria pointed to the rug at her feet.

"Kneel, then, Warren Jarvis," she commanded, "and repeat this oath."

He Kneels.

"Oh, come, now," he objected, sheepishly—but Dona Maria only looked and pointed. At last he grinned and began to get down first with one knee and then the other, and finally came down awkwardly with both at once. It was distinctly ungraceful and against the best forms of feudal ceremony. Dona Maria was embarrassed.

"No! not that way," she said hastily. "On one knee. Ah! That is better. Now, repeat after me—'I, Warren of Jarvis' "——

"I, Warren of Jarvis," repeated the young man, with mock solemnity, though he was not insensible to the romantic charm of the ceremony.

"'Senor of all the domains, fiefs, keeps and marches of Warren of Kentucky' "—

"Whew!" He thought of what the boys around the Galt House would say of these "fiefs and marches," but he obeyed.

"Senor of all the domains, fiefs, keeps and marches of Warren of Kentucky' "—

"'Do convey to Maria Theresa, of Aragon, all my worldly titles and possessions' "——

"Sounds like I was marrying her," he muttered. "'Do convey to Maria Theresa, of Aragon, all my worldly titles and possessions' "——

"Now, take my left hand in both of yours," ordered Dona Maria. He obeyed with wonderful enthusiasm and felt that he was going to like the oath more and more as it progressed.

"'And receive them back as vassal and retainer and to faithfully fight in my lady's cause, according to the feudal laws of Castile and Aragon. So help me God, Our Lady and St. James!' "

Jarvis looked up into the glowing face and shining eyes as she repeated the solemn closing words of the oath and a swift change came over him as the soft hand that he held in both his had carried some thrilling current from her soul to his. He felt somewhat like the scoffer who strolls into a church and is humbled by the simple faith he sees about him. There was no mockery in his voice and little in his heart when he repeated them after her. And the kiss that he pressed on the back of her hand when she said, "Arise, vassal," was wholly sincere.

Confused.

She drew back quickly, for the first time confused.

"That is part of the ceremony," she admitted, in a small voice, "but I meant to omit it."

So the serious moment passed. "It seemed the only sensible part," he laughed. "But who on earth is this Maria Theresa that I am hired man to?"

Dona Maria straightened her slender figure and drew the folds of her dressing gown more closely about her.

"I," she said, with the dignity of a queen, "am Her Supreme Highness, Maria Theresa of Segura, Princess of Aragon."

Jarvis' jaw did not drop, because it was not that kind of a jaw, but he was enough of a democrat to be sufficiently impressed.

"Good Lord!" he groaned, after a short season of speechlessness. "A princess!—and I've been ordering you around with a gun!"

"Never mind that now," his liege lady ordered lightly, mollified by her vassal's appreciation of her position; "you will be properly punished, my vassal. There are dungeons in my castle."

"Sh—h!" cautioned Jarvis quickly. There was a sound of swift footsteps in the hall. They passed the door and died away, but the incident brought them back to a consideration of the present situation.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Very True.

She—Anyhow, you must admit he is a well-bred man. Did you notice his knowledge of Ruskin?

It's Up to the Judges Now

"The Triple Tie" Contest Came to an End at Noon Yesterday

Noon yesterday was the time limit fixed for the close of "The Triple Tie" contest and up to that hour many contributions were received. Some of them came by special delivery. Some of the packages were bulky, others small, but if one may be permitted to judge from exterior looks, all those who tried a hand at writing a logical conclusion for the great baseball story were very much in earnest.

All the contributions will be turned over to the three judges, as announced, and it will be up to these disinterested persons to go through the mass of replies and indicate those which they consider the best.

On Monday we shall continue the publication of "The Triple Tie," giving the ending of this remarkable serial just as Mr. Mitchell, the author, wrote it. We regard "The Triple Tie" as one of the most interesting stories ever published by The Georgian. Much of its appeal lay in the fact that it contained local color in generous measure.

The Way of a Man

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

ONE who signs herself "Broken Hearted," and who I am sure isn't, writes me as follows:

"I am keeping company with a young man and like him very much, but he doesn't show his love for me as I do for him. Every time he comes to see me he sits in a chair reading a book. Do you think I should continue keeping company with him?"

My dear, you love him; you want him to love you, and you want to become his wife. Isn't that so? Yet you rebel against the attention he gives you, and which is the kind you will always receive as his wife. He will always "Sit in a chair reading a book." In that manner is every wife in the world entertained.

This is the husband-like treatment, and not the lover-like. He gives you the treatment a husband gives his wife for the reason that you have let him see "you are already won!" You say he doesn't show his love for you as "you do for him." Of course not. A man is naturally a lazy animal and makes no effort that is unnecessary. An effort to win your love is unnecessary.

When a man goes courting he makes the effort of a man catching a street car. After he has caught the car he seats himself comfortably and begins to read his newspaper. No further effort is necessary, so why make it? This man has won your love; you have made him as sure of it as he is sure he has caught the car when his feet are on the steps. Naturally, the next thing he does is to sit down and rest.

I do not blame him. Really, sometimes when I see the way girls lay their hearts at the feet of men, so often without any solicitation from the men, I wonder that courting stays in fashion.

I wonder that men spend their money on flowers, books, candy, theater tickets and for little outings, all to win the love of a girl, when so many girls seem to stand ready with their love in their hands, begging the acceptance of it by any man who looks their way.

I wonder that men prize a girl's love as highly as they do, remembering it was so lightly won.

Get the book habit. Never again tell him you love him. Never nag because he reads, but, rather, encourage him, letting him see that you would rather he read than bore you by talking.

You have given him the impression that he is sure of you. Efface that impression, but efface it so gently he will never know just when the process of obliteration began. Let him realize that your heart doesn't hang on a low branch, ready to drop into his hand if he will outstretch it; give him to know it grows higher up and that he must climb for it.

I am quite sure if you go about it with discretion he will close his book till you are his wife.

And then make up your mind to this and accept it as inevitable, how he will read to make up for lost time!

Men and the Cook Stove .:. .:. .:. By Dorothy Dix

IT is announced that nine young men students at Cornell University this year registered in the domestic science department and took cooking lessons.

This is glad news on many accounts. For one thing, it opens up to men a lucrative occupation, for there are few professions so well paid as that of the expert cook, and it is a pity that more American boys do not fit themselves to fill it, instead of compelling us to send abroad for a French chef whenever we want a culinary artist.

But whether a man intends to be a professional cook or not, it's a good thing for him to learn at least the rudiments of domestic science if for no other reason than because it establishes a common bond of interest and sympathy between him and his wife when he gets married.

Undoubtedly one of the chief reasons why marriage is a failure is because the average man and woman in this country lead such distinct and separate lives, and have so little knowledge of the problems with which each has to grapple, and I am persuaded that nothing would do more to promote domestic felicity than for every boy before he is married to have served an apprenticeship in the kitchen, and every girl to have done a couple of years' work in a business office.

Certainly the man who knows something practical about cooking, who has wrestled with the frying pan, and been up against the pots and the kettles will be able to extend a heart-to-heart comprehension to his wife when the steak is tough, and the potatoes watery, of which the unculinary, half-baked husband is utterly incapable.

What Dickens Says.

Dickens says, in one of his stories, that no educated man ever looks at even the back of a book in the way that an ignorant person does, and precisely the same thing applies to housekeeping. The man whose whole experience in cooking consists in offering gratuitous criticism every time anything is overdone or underdone can never behold a dinner with the same exquisite perception of all the time and labor and worry it took to produce it that the man will show who knows from personal experience of the deceitfulness of butchers' meat and the iniquity of the gas range.

As it is now, the household critic has nothing but contemptuous pity for the female intellect that can not manage two servants without getting gray and wrinkled in the process, while he bosses half a hundred employees without turning a hair. The man who has been through the domestic mill on his own account will never speak in that tone of voice to his wife.

He will know, from experience, that no rules that apply to other labor have any bearing on the servant girl question. Like the wind, she cometh and she goeth as she listeth, and no man or woman knows when or for how long she is going to list. Neither will this paragon of a husband make unfavorable comments on the culinary products of Hilda and Mary Jane. He will eat what is set before him, asking no questions for sympathy sake, and reflecting when things go wrong that he would get no better results in his own affairs if he had to depend for his help on those who neither wanted to learn their business nor desired to keep their places.

A Difference.

And just as it is a good thing for men to learn to cook, it is also well for a woman to have had the actual experience of earning her own living before she is married.

No woman who has ever earned a dollar looks at one as does the woman who has always had her spending money given her. To the one it means something that comes easy and goes easy. To the other it represents toil and weariness, sometimes the very life blood of a person. She knows how hard it is to win, how hard to keep, and the anxiety and humiliation it means to be without it, and she spends it prudently and judiciously.

The woman who has never earned her own living thinks that business is a picnic, and that when a man goes downtown of a morning he departs to enjoy himself with his friends. No woman who has stood behind the counter, or bent over a typewriter and taken part in the daily grind of business cherishes any illusions about its being fun. She knows it for the heart wearing, nerve wrecking thing it is, and her comprehension of its trials keeps her from inflicting on her husband many of the unconscious cruelties that the woman who is totally ignorant of business practices upon her suffering spouse.

Also the business woman remembers how, when she came home at night exhausted and with nerves fretted to fiddle strings, it seemed to her that just one more calamity would strain things to the breaking point. You may be sure that such a woman never meets a weary man at the front door with a catalogue of everything that has gone wrong in the house during the day. Neither does she expect a man with weighty affairs on his mind, and whose time is money, to stop downtown to match samples, or hunt through a department store for a spool of elephant breath silk thread.

What we need is a common plane of mutual helpfulness and understanding on which the sexes can meet. Men and women should know the trials and tribulations under which each labors in order to sympathize with them. It's because men have never done women's work that they think that cooking and sewing and mending and baby tending is a job so easy that a woman could do it with one hand tied behind her. It is because women have never had to get up, sick or well, and go down town to work that they think that a man's business is a cinch.

It is because men have never had to ask for every cent they spend that they do not realize how humiliating it is to a woman to have no personal income of her own. It is because few women care to smoke that the average wife nags her husband about scenting up the parlor curtains with tobacco.

With personal knowledge of the difficulties of the situation will come sympathy and toleration. So the man who can cook, and the woman who has kept books will meet on a common plane of mutual good will that will make matrimony a success instead of the failure it so often is through the sheer inability of husband or wife to comprehend the difficulties the other faces.

Injun Giver.

Robbie met a neighbor who was smoking some fine, fragrant tobacco sent by his son in America. He took out his own pipe ostentatiously.

"Have you a match, Sandy?" he queried.

The match was forthcoming, but nothing more.

"I do believe," said Robbie, "I hae left ma tobacco at hame."

"Then," said Sandy, after a silence, "ye micht gie ma back ma match."

How Strict Are You with Your Daughter?

—answer it, parents. Are you too strict, or aren't you strict enough? Either course is liable to be disastrous. Your daughter's welfare means as much to you as anything else in the world, yet do you know what to watch in bringing her up.

There are few men who know the problem as Judge Freschi does. For years a magistrate in the City of New York, his work has brought him into personal contact with thousands of girls and their stories. He has had an opportunity to analyze the causes of their failure. His name has become known throughout the country as their benefactor.

The angle from which he discusses the diverse elements that enter into the upbringing of the girl is a new one that you probably have never thought of. As a thoughtful mother or father you ought to read what he says in his article, "How Strict Are You with Your Daughter?" It appears in the

By DOROTHY DIX.

EVERY few days I get a letter from some man who emits a wild and heartbroken wail because, he says, woman has gotten out of her proper place. Many of these melancholy gentlemen go so far as to express the further opinion that it is the business of the press to try to shoo the feminine sex back to where it belongs.

Speaking for myself, I should gladly use what little influence I have with women in trying to corral them in their own particular little stockade if I only knew where that sacred spot was.

What is woman's proper place, anyhow? Will some wise brother please arise in meeting and speak right out and tell us?

Is woman's proper place the home? None of us deny it, and the great majority of women will answer the call in person if you ring their front door bell.

A Foolish Waste.

But what about the tens of thousands of women who have no home in which to stay, whom no man asked to marry them, and who are fated to never know the cling of little children's arms about their necks? It is all right to say, "Back to the home for yours, sister," to the woman who has got a good husband, and babies, and a cottage or a flat of her own, but how are you going to keep women in the domestic sphere who have neither a kitchen, nor a nursery, nor a man of their own? I give it up.

Is the woman who paints pictures, or writes, or acts out of her proper place? I take it that when the good God put talent into a woman's head that He knew what He was about, and that He intended her to use the gifts He gave her. Otherwise it would be a foolish waste of valuable material.

Certainly we should all be much poorer if there had been no Rosa Bonheurs, no George Eliots, no Charlotte Brontes, no Mrs. Humphry Wards, none of the thousand delicate and facile female pens that delight and entertain us every day of our lives.

Is Maude Adams out of her sphere when she makes us cry? Is Rose Stahl out of her sphere when she makes laugh? Are Melba and Tetrazzini and Cavallieri out of their places when they lift us up to the seventh heaven with their voices? Yet all of these women occupy conspicuous places and are very much in public.

A Question.

Evidently the men who complain of women being out of their proper places are thinking about the business women. Is a clever, strong, healthy young girl out of her place when she goes to work to support herself instead of sitting down idly at home and adding to the burden of a poor, weary, hump-shouldered old father, who has toiled like a dray horse to raise his family and has come almost to the end of his strength?

Are the girls of a family who have good business positions and who bring their money home to make an old mother comfortable and educate younger brothers and sisters out of their places during working hours?

Is the woman who is married to a man whose health fails out of her place because she puts her shoulder to the wheel and helps the domestic wagon out of the ditch instead of letting it sink down into the mire?

If you ask my opinion, I think that every woman who needs money for herself, or for her family, is exactly where she ought to be when she is earning it by her honest work. If the men of her family can't support her, there is no reason why she should not support herself, and help them, too, if they need it. For my part, I have never been able to see why it isn't just as feminine a thing, and as much in her line of duty, for a woman to be a prop to a man as it is to be a millstone about his neck.

Is woman out of her place when she belongs to clubs? Isn't it woman's place to add to the sweetness and light of life, and haven't the women's clubs done more toward fostering the higher education, beautifying towns, supporting art galleries and picture shows, and giving the country a general esthetic uplift, than all other causes combined?

Is the woman of wealth, and intelligence, and leisure out of her place when she devotes her energies to public reforms and charities? Where else would we look for our great philanthropies? Who would raise the money for our hospitals, for our fresh-air funds, for our tuberculosis camps, for our societies for the prevention of cruelty to animals? There is not a community in this country that hasn't some old maid or childless widow who is its good Samaritan, and nobody accuses her of being out of her proper sphere, except the evildoers on whose corns she treads.

Out of Place?

There are those who contend that a woman is out of her proper place—oh, millions of miles out of it—when she takes an interest in politics and wants to vote. Why? Has she not as much at stake in the country as any man? Does she not pay as many taxes? Is she not affected by the laws just as men are? If food prices advance, does not the burden of making the family income go further fall upon her? If the streets are dirty and the water supply impure, does she not have to nurse her sick, because of it, and if they die, is not her heart broken over their loss even more than any man's? How can she be out of her place when considering the questions that are most vital to her?

The truth is, there is no place in all the wide world that is not woman's place. First at the cradle and last at the tomb, she pillows man's head in infancy on her breast, and kisses shut his eyes when he dies, and there is no hope, no joy, no struggle, no labor, no victory, no defeat in his life in which her place is not always by his side.

It is idle to talk about sending woman back to her place. The earth is hers, and the fullness thereof, just as much as it is a man's.

Daysey Mayme's July 4

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THE call had read "Ladies Not Admitted," and while a crowd of little girls stood outside pouting, crying and even kicking on the closed door in the modern, ladylike way of expressing opposition, a band of grave-faced little men in blouse and bib held serious deliberation on the inside.

"We are assembled," said President Chauncey Devere Appleton, "to utter protest against the parentally expurgated plan of a Fourth of July. We are here to make public our opinion of any parent who would have children spend the Fourth as if the corpse of Freedom lay shrouded in the next room."

A Riot.

Every delegate was on his feet at once; there were motions, countermotions, protests, howls and hisses, a confusion that was augmented by the discovery that the ladies on the outside were peeking through the keyhole. After the president had put the seal of secrecy on the proceedings by closing the keyhole with a borrowed piece of chewing gum, order was restored, and the following resolutions were adopted:

"That life is not what it used to be when a boy could put a cannon cracker under a maiden aunt's chair and gorge himself with ice cream while the family were bringing her to;

"That unless a boy has a chance to make himself look like a bursted firecracker, there is no way for him to become distinguished, and mothers have no right to monopolize all the surgical operations;

"That if this demand for everything noiseless isn't checked soon, mothers will be refusing the boy babies the doctors bring them because they are not equipped with rubber tires;

"That girls are ideal creatures because they are happy with dolls, and the only noise in playing with a doll is a squeak that is squeaked out the first day;

What Father Did.

"That mothers place too much stress on boys getting their hands shot off, considering that they never look at their sons' hands without screaming out that they need washing;

"That father used cannon crackers when he was young, and still has hands left to spank us."

The discovery that the ladies on the outside had used the eternal feminine weapon of defense in boring a hole through the seal of secrecy broke up the meeting, and the gentlemen poured out and the ladies poured in, in wild confusion.

Why He Left.

A dispute once arose between a landlord and his tenant. The latter had given notice to quit, but would not put a bill in his window to say that his house was "To Be Let."

To make matters worse, they went to law about it. The judge, having heard the case, made an order for the defendant to put a bill up within fourteen days.

The landlord was so overjoyed at his victory that on the fourteenth day he took a friend with him around to the house to chaff his tenant. The bill was up in the window plain enough, but under it was another bill, which ran as follows:

"Cause of leaving—bad drains."

Superfluous Hair Truths

Stop Experimenting

There are but few depilatories sold. You think there are hundreds because you have used the same identical preparations under several different names. This is easily explained. Women stop using

So-Called Hair Removers

when they learn that they are harmful. Therefore, they can not be sold under the same name for any length of time. Then the identical, worthless, harmful concoctions are given new names and advertised again as totally different preparations to who innocently buy them over and over again under different names, and this will continue as long as women are so unwise as to experiment with unknown, so-called hair removers.

Defraud the Same Foolish Women

De Miracle

Has Stood the Test of Time

De Miracle has been sold as De Miracle for over eleven years, and its name has never been changed. It is acknowledged the world over by eminent authorities as the one safe, perfected hair remover, therefore it is the only depilatory you can use without experimenting.

Leaves No Tell-Tale Smell

If you use De Miracle it will be impossible for any curious person to know that you have used a hair remover because De Miracle evaporates immediately after accomplishing its work, therefore leaves no odor whatever. On the other hand, if you use any depilatory with a distinctive odor, an offensive, tell-tale smell will cling to your skin for hours.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DON'T BE DISCOURAGED.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 18 and am employed by one of the largest railroads in the East.

I have been keeping steady company with a young lady two years my senior and visit this girl about two or three times a week. I asked her to become my wife and she told me I would have to get her father's consent. I had a conference with her father, and the only opposition he has to our marriage is that I am too short. I am 5 feet 3 inches and receive a good salary. Would you advise me to discontinue my attentions to this girl or continue to keep company with her, in the hope that her father will see the folly of his ways and consent to our marriage? GEORGE W.

If her father's objections are based solely on your height, I am sure that in time he will withdraw them.

You need time for a more important reason: If your stature were all that is desired, your age is not. Trust me in this, my boy—no boy at 18 is old enough to select a wife. For your own sake, be glad to wait.

IT WILL BE A GOOD LOSS.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

young man two years my senior, I am deeply in love with a and we have been keeping company for the past nine months, but lately at a party to which he had taken me he met a girl and took her home. I wrote him the next day asking him if I had done anything to offend him. I have not received an answer. Should I write to him again, as I would not like to lose him? C. V. M.

He treated you most rudely, and you would show a finer spirit if you resented it and refused to see him again. Do not write, and make up your mind to this: The best thing that can happen to a girl is to "lose" an escort who is not a gentleman, for such a one behaves much worse after marriage.

DON'T CALL AGAIN.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 19 and very popular. Lately I received word from a young man who used to call on me pretty steady that he would like to have me call him on the telephone. I was informed he was not in, and, as he is a traveling salesman, I believed this, but called a few days later only to be told the same story; this time leaving my name saying he should call me up. Now, as the young man who received my message is also a good friend of mine, and spoke quite confidential to me on the phone, also telling me that the other young man is just jollying me along, I am in doubt as to what course to pursue.

BABE.

You should not have called in the first place, and your second effort does not speak much for your dignity.

The young man, my dear, who is worth having will always take the initiative. He will always make every effort to communicate with the girl he loves, and ask only that she be pleased at his overtures.

Preparing Her.

Farmer Wayback (starting home from the station)—"Please, ma'am, do you wear false teeth?"

Fair Boarder (for summer)—"Sir?"

Farmer Wayback—"Oh, I don't mean to be curious. Only this road is a leetle rough, and ef your teeth ain't good and fast you'd better put 'em in your pocket."

On Independence Day

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

THE hour: Nine in the evening. The day: The Fourth of July. The year: That is immaterial, since the story told that night is always young. The personnel: A young man of 24 and a girl of 19.

The scene: A secluded corner of a porch step. Around this young man and woman were other young men and women who were showing their patriotism with firecrackers, torpedoes, skyrockets and other illuminating and noisy means. There was a momentary darkness. The last skyrocket had proved a fizzle and there was some delay in starting another. Under cover of the darkness, and unheard by the others in their merriment, the young man whispered in the girl's ear, "I love you," and she replied "And I love you."

First Avowal.

It was their first avowal of affection, and some years later, the girl, who had become a matron, sighed and said: "You know I lost my independence on Independence Day."

Every one who loves and is loved loses a measure of independence, and this woman was such a clinging, helpless creature, that she lost all she had. Perhaps that was because she heard her little love story in a day when girls were taught that to be happy sweethearts and wives they must be long-suffering and submissive.

She made no reservation of her affection, and their courtship proved a stormy one. He flirted, there was coolness, heat, anger, love, indifference, impatience, cruelty or kindness personified as the mood suited him. Through every change in him she remained the same patient, grateful, loving girl, always with arms outstretched to welcome him when he deigned to turn her way.

No Nation Free.

She put herself beneath his feet in her excessive humility, and after they were married he saw to it that she remained there. She had put her own pricemark on herself. We all do. He looked at the mark, and saw that it resembled the tag Public Opinion put many centuries ago on the worm.

There is an independence of nations, and an independence of individuals, and the former depends on the latter. No nation is free if its citizens are bound.

The men are independent and free. The women are gradually achieving an independence that will give them every right enjoyed by the men.

It is a great thing, but not enough. I want an independence for every girl who loves, and which she, and she alone, must secure.

I want her to hold her little head and heart high, and give her love and life to no man who will treat them lightly.

I want her, when she says "I love you," to add, "but my happiness, my usefulness, my well-being, do not depend on becoming the wife of any man."

Then he will love her, appreciate her and want her all the more.

Inference Obvious.

Knickerbockered and resplendent in dazzling tartan stockings, Algernon sauntered from the clubhouse to the golf links; and there, on the first tee, having carefully adjusted his monocle and "addressed" the ball for a prodigious length of time, began his game.

"By the way, caddie," he remarked pleasantly, "what sort of a game does Mr. McJones play?"

The diminutive young Scotchman screwed up his weather-beaten face.

"Mr. McJones? He canna play at all."

"Ah!" said Algernon. "You see, I'm playing a match with him tomorrow. Suppose I shall beat him easily—what?"

The caddie shook his head wisely.

"Na," he replied; "that ye will not."

Adding Fuel to Flame.

A quarrelsome couple, having exhausted many subjects, came to discussing tombstones, and the husband asked:

"My dear, what kind of stone do you suppose they will give me when I die?"

"Brimstone," was the reply.

As Easy To Keep The Hair From Turning Gray As To Keep The Scalp Clean

AND there is no reason in the world why you should hesitate to restore to your hair its lost color and vitality, if it is fading and turning gray, any more than that you should foolishly refuse to use a remedy for dandruff or any other scalp trouble.

Sickness, nervousness, impoverished blood or deficient scalp nutrition may cause premature grayness; sometimes it is inherited. Whatever the cause, gray hair adds from 10 to 20 years to the age, and a young woman, even 25 or 30, with very gray hair is passed as old.

Robinnaire Hair Dye is a pure tonic restorative to bring back to faded or gray hair its own original color and lost beauty. It is not to bleach or change the original color, and should not be confused with such. It is prepared in our own laboratory from a formula we know to be beneficial, and we guarantee it to be non-injurious. It keeps the hair soft, lustrous and in its beautiful, natural color, and as it does not stain the scalp cannot be detected. Prepared for light, medium and dark brown and black hair and is for sale at druggists and toilet goods departments. 75c. By parcel post 83c.

Send us the name of your druggist if he cannot supply you, and we will send you FREE samples of the famous Robinnaire Face Powder and Rose Cold Cream. Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta, Ga.

The Divorce Question

By JERE R. COOKE.

(It may be asked why I, of all men, should write upon questions affecting marriage and other relations. In reply, I would say that one who has gone through what I have, suffered as much as I have, and seen so much of the world and its hard side may possibly have something to say that will be of use to others. I hope so at least.—JERE COOKE.)

A WOMAN recently gave the reason why she desired a divorce from her husband as "so they may cultivate a beautiful friendship."

It goes without saying that it is easier to be a friend than a helpmeet, but to sacrifice the one for the other is to barter the real jewel for the past brilliant. There can be no harmony among such people.

No sympathy, whether he be called by the sacred name of helpmeet or the uncertain cognomen of friend.

The best friend a man can have is his wife, and marriage is the mold into which the highest friendship is poured.

The true secret of success in marriage is that the wife is the best friend or chum or "pal" her husband has. Why shouldn't she be? She shares his sorrows; why not his joys?

It is not an uncommon thing that the man weds the sweetheart of his childhood, the playmate of his boyish days, when, hand in hand, they roamed together and no boy chum could tear them apart.

Puppy love is supplanted by the great transcendental love that cements a life-long intimate friendship. A great man proved his appreciation of this and his desire for its continuance by replying, when asked the question what one thing he would most desire should he have to depart this life, "My wife's second husband."

Three Reasons.

He was not like the man who, being asked how many times he was married, replied:

"Three times. Once for love and twice for general housework."

Pity the poor woman who slaves for her husband, only to die of hard labor and leave her savings to his second wife.

A woman who was ill-mated once complained, "My friend is so much more sympathetic than my husband. He is so considerate, so kind."

It afterward developed that this friend grew weary of his attentions in a much shorter time than the husband. Comparisons are always fatal.

The man who holds his tired, hard-working wife in comparison to the painted woman he meets upon the street always loses. Poverty is one curse of domestic infelicity, but the wife who can share it with her husband has found the marriage goal. There is an argument for incompatibility which does not extend to the statutory ground.

No woman should be compelled to spend her earthly existence with a brute, an inebriate, or a libertine, and no man should be forced to abide with a woman who has dropped from her pinnacle as a helpmeet to a nag or a shrew.

An unwise man once attempted to cure his wrangling wife by breaking a piece of the best china at every one of these spells. It was expensive and not effective.

Another friend, with more success, used to call in a doctor every time hysteria developed. The patient improved rapidly.

A seemingly unending wrangle can, by diplomatic treatment, terminate, as a mob of violence is quelled by the cold water of the firemen, rather than by the bullets of the police.

Called a Brute.

The social animal man is sometimes called a brute, and frequently is a brute.

He thinks he knows it all and wants to be the head and boss of the house.

No woman who is a pal to her husband need ever fear any other woman. Her husband will not join another lodge so that he can get one more night out a week.

If the "other woman" gets him she is a better pal to him. She jollies rather than scolds, she laughs and does not cry, she is a good sport, she gets his money, and she has a good time.

If he is as old as Methuselah she calls him a "boy." He likes it and spends his cash.

Few men are natural pikers with their chums. They take a certain pride in playing the limit.

The woman with the harnessed lap dog gives out a suspicion that she is no longer a "pal" to her husband. She has the dog in leash, but there are no strings on the man. "To have and to hold" each other's hearts.

It is not so much that they live together as that they love each other.

The two lives who hope, fear, plan, play, enjoy, suffer, deny, possess, work and win together need no divorce court to adjust their difficulties.

They are united in life and in death they are not divided.

Do You Know---

The Prussian Guards, whom King George and the German Emperor reviewed recently, were originated by Frederick I, whose ambition it was to form a royal bodyguard of giants. Every country was ransacked by his agents to supply recruits, and no head that towered above the crowd, even in the bazaars of Aleppo or Cairo, could escape the crimps of the Prussian King. The most extravagant sums were offered to men of exceptional inches, an Irishmen, more than seven feet high, who was picked up by the Prussian Ambassador in London, receiving a bounty of $6,000.

Should the United States purchase from Mexico 250,000 square miles of Mexico for $30,000,000 it will not be the first addition by purchase to the great American Commonwealth. A century ago Napoleon I relinquished France's claim to Louisiana and Arkansas for $15,000,000, and in 1867 Russia exchanged Alaska for a cash payment by the United States of $7,000,000. More recently a strip of Central America, embracing five miles on either side of the Panama Canal, was purchased for $10,000,000 from the Republic of Panama.

Nothing is more amusing than to watch on a winter's day the marvelous intelligence with which the pigeons of St. Mark's, in Venice, can discriminate between residents and visitors in the grand square of that city, the Plaza of St. Mark. The moment a foreigner shows his face in the plaza the pigeons set upon him in crowds, hoping to be fed. They do not trouble the natives, who may be sunning themselves by the hundred in the square.

CONFIDENCE MEN SHOW TARHEEL EASY MONEY

He Goes Home From New York for More Funds and There Learns Something More.

NEW YORK, July 4.—During all the many years that Edward Lee Baxter Davideon had been living in the progressive town of Charlotte, N. C., it was his foolish belief that the only way to make money is to work for it.

Leading about $1,000 in cash and a draft for $10,000 by the right hand, he arrived in this hospitable village on June 24. Four days later he was going to accompany a steamship to the other side.

He registered at the Hotel Martinique, and there met a well-dressed young man.

In the cafe the well-dressed young man was met by a friend who almost tore a pocket in trying to remove an obese roll of yellowbacks in an unostentatious manner.

Easy, Too Easy.

"This is a mere nothing," said the friend, carelessly. "When I see so many really intelligent young men working for money it breaks my weak heart."

That called for an explanation, and it was given. By tapping the wires that carry racing results one could make a fortune in 20 minutes.

After several minutes Davidson at length persuaded the young man to accept a few dollars from him for sample bets. He was successful. He wanted to know more about this road to riches and, on being assured that the more money you put up the more you made, he handed $700 to the well-dressed young man.

Goes Home for Money.

Somehow or other the money was lost, but, said the well-dressed one, Davidson should not be discouraged. He should make a bigger bet.

"Could you use this $10,000 draft?" he asked.

They could, if they knew that Mr. Davidson really had the money. Mr. Davidson replied quickly he could prove that he had by going to his home and getting it. He went back to Charlotte and there opened his heart to Frank Osborne, brother of James W. Osborne, the lawyer, of this city. Frank Osborne, suspicious, instructed Davidson to see James W. This he did and Mr. Osborne took Davidson to Deputy Police Commission Dougherty, who wired Frank Osborne to telegraph to the suspects when they would arrive.

The two tappers were arrested when they met Davidson. The North Carolinan took a liner to Europe.

Davidson Reputed Wealthy.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., July 4.—Baxter Davidson is one of Charlotte's best known men. He is a bachelor somewhat beyond middle age and a capitalist. He is a member of one of North Carolina's most prominent families.

DIRECTORS DID NOT ASK SMITH ABOUT PITCHER

Manager Billy's Advice Was Not Sought in Purchase of "Pop-Boy" Smith.

ALTHOUGH Bill Smith, manager of the Crackers, does not know anything about the desire of the local team to get Clarence "Pop Boy" Smith, it is more than probable that the Crackers will have to do without the White Sox hurler.

According to a report from local headquarters Comiskey offered Smith to the Crackers for $2,000, under optional agreement. This was in a night letter Tuesday night. The local club accepted his proposition by wire on Wednesday morning.

Bill Smith, when called up this morning over the phone, said he knew nothing of the deal. This seems to be a queer condition of affairs, as the Cracker manager is usually notified of all deals.

Smith pitched the last four innings of the game against the Tigers on Wednesday, and held that hard-hitting crowd to one hit. This made such an impression that the White Sox decided to call off the trade.

The local club, however, is still after Smith and hopes to land him before the month is over. The Crackers are badly in need of another good twirler right now to help Conzelman, Dent, Price, Musser and Brady.

There is also a rumor going the rounds these days that everything is not running smooth between the local directors and Billy Smith. Smith's ignorance in the White Sox deal can not be accounted for, unless the directors are discouraged with several deals the Cracker manager has pulled off. There is still some talk about the way the local club has been stung in the Dent trade when they turned over $2,000 to Washington for the twirler.

GUNBOAT SMITH WANTS GO WITH GEORGE CARPENTER

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 4.—Gunboat Smith, claimant of the world's title for heavyweight boxers, has challenged George Carpentier, the young French champion of Europe, to a 20-round contest for $5,000 a side in England, France or Belgium. If Carpentier agrees the match probably will be arranged to take place during this summer.

SULLIVAN WINS; AHEARN KNOCKS OUT BARTFIELD

BUFFALO, July 4.—Jack Twin Sullivan outpointed Barney Williams in a fast ten-round bout here last night.

Young Ahearn knocked out Soldier Bartfield in eight rounds.

Tommy Bresnahan drew with Willie Houck.

BALDWIN HAS EASY TIME BEATING YOUNG SHUGRUE

NEW HAVEN, CONN., July 4.—Matty Baldwin, of Boston, had the better of the fifteen-round go with Young Shugrue, of Jersey City, last night. In the third and seventh Shugrue evened things, but at no other time was the Boston boy in any danger.

BRANNIGAN AND MARS GO 10 ROUNDS TO DRAW

CINCINNATI, July 4.—Patsy Brannigan, of Pittsburg, and "Knockout" Mars fought ten rounds to a draw last night.

TURF RACING A LUXURY.

PARIS, July 4.—The average cost of keeping a race horse in France is placed at $1,000 a year. The total training expenses in France, not taking into account the capital invested in the various stables, is placed at $5,600,000. The total of the prizes offered is $3,600,000. Hence the owners support an annual deficit of $2,000,000.

VETERANS WIN HONORS

Grant-Thornton Cop Georgia Title

GRANT and Thornton, in their prime the greatest double tennis team of all Dixie, demonstrated that they are strong players even now by defeating Mansfield and Smith on the courts of the Piedmont Driving Club Thursday afternoon, 6-4, 11-9, 7-5. The match was started several weeks ago,, but was postponed in the second set and was taken up where it was left off.

Grant and Thornton won the opening game yesterday, making the score 8-7 in their favor, but Smith and Mansfield won the next and deuced the set again. Not until a total of twenty games had been played was the set decided.

In the third set after Grant and Thornton had Smith and Mansfield 3-1, the latter won the fifth game, and with the score fifteen-forty against them in the sixth pulled up and finally won, tying the score 3 all.

The only time that Smith and Manning led in games during the afternoon was in the third set when they had their opponents 5-4, but Grant and Thornton came strong in the next game, winning it and also the next two, which gave them the game 7-5 and also the match.

Mansfield did some pretty playing. Grant and Thornton directed most of their clouts at him and he handled them well. Grant and Thornton played him almost entirely throughout the match, preferring his returns to the rifle-like shots of Smith.

In the finals in the mixed doubles Miss Stanton and Thornton won by default from Miss Muse and Carter, as Carter is playing in the tournament now going on at Augusta.

EMPIRE LEAGUE NOTES

Waycross has released Second Baseman Brouthers, who has signed with Americus. He plays the outfield as well as the infield, and while with Waycross led the team at the bat and in base stealing. Internal dissension is given as the reason for his release. He is a clever player and will make good wherever he plays.

While not so well pleased with the start of the season, fans in Waycross are banking on Wild Bill Clark to give Waycross a pennant winning team.

In Chancy the Americus team has an outfielder that is bound to go up. He is a steady hitter, getting two and three hits a day almost as easy as some people eat watermelon. He is fast on his feet, too, and gets many hard chances in right.

By swapping a three-game series to enable Valdosta to play at home next week for a celebration Brunswick will play six straight games in Brunswick this month with Valdosta.

In Griffin, Americus has a first baseman who makes friends wherever he goes. He is always happy—in fact, has a winning smile besides a batting eye.

Few teams in any league boast of as many reliable left-handers as the Valdosta team. Otto Jordan seems to know good men when he sees them from the kind of material his team is made up of, even if the best of them have off days once in a while.

Some idea of the class of baseball that the Empire is capable of might be found in a daily comparison with the scores of the big leagues. There is hardly a bad game played in the Empire but what a worse one is found in a higher league.

Claiming that the Americus team had thirteen men in uniform on the Waycross diamond Wednesday, Waycross has filed a protest for the first game of the double bill. President Groover attended the game and had his attention called to the alleged violation of the 12-player rule.

No one in the Empire circuit any longer doubts that the league will be in existence next year. Plans have already been made in Cordele and one or two other cities for next year's schedule.

Practically every team in the league wants to win the race in the second half, and with this in view are making a number of changes. The race from now on is going to be a keen one and much faster baseball will be seen than ever before in the new league.

"Goat" Holliday, of Atlanta, the Empire's benedict, continues to pull off sensational plays at first. He has made a home in Waycross and can stay here as long as he pleases. "Goat's" wife is at every game to see him play and, needless to say, the youngster does even better than heretofore, which is saying a great deal.

Attendance reports continue to show that fans in the cities of this league will support good baseball. None of the cities expected to make money the first season and yet it is stated on good authority that more than one city is well ahead of the game financially and hopes to finish the season with a neat pile in the treasury. All of which sounds good for next year's season.

YANKEES OFFER EXTRA $1,000 FOR INFIELD PICK

TERRE HAUTE, IND., July 4.—The New York Americans, who bought Third Baseman Pick and Outfielder Kroy at $2,000 each for delivery at the end of the Central League season, made an offer of $1,000 additional for the immediate delivery of Pick, who is wanted at once by the Toronto club, where Chance will place him. The offer will be accepted.

JIMMY SHECKARD GOES TO CINCINNATI CLUB

CINCINNATI, July 4.—It was announced from the office of the Cincinnati baseball club to-day that the deal for James Sheckard, the St. Louis National League team outfielder, has been officially consummated. Manager Tinker refused to waive claim on Sheckard.

JUST A HOPE.

I hope to have the luck some day to read a sporting sheet
And fail to find some roughneck
baseball guy
Has walked upon an umpire's frame
with both his heavy feet
Or poked some fellow athlete on the eye.

I hope to read a baseball yarn
whercin no low-browed gent
With pounds of solid bone beneath
his hat
Essays to break a jawbone or to register a dent
Upon his rival's coco with a bat.

We note that after some one had fractured his jaw with a wallop, Umpire McNulty retired from the game. This shows that Mr. McNulty is endowed with much intelligence.

Mr. Brennan of the Phillies put John McGraw away in less than a round, demonstrating that as a pitcher he is a great little pugilist.

We agree with Ed Smith that a belt is a hoodoo to a pugilist, especially if it lands in the region of the lower jaw.

An expert informs us that Mr. Beall used his head in a ball game. Jud Daley also uses his—as a place whereon to hang his cap.

The report that there will be 250 motorcycles in the Elgin road race leads one to suspect that said race will not smell like a garden of roses.

To Packey Mahoney of Ireland belongs the proud distinction of being the only white heavyweight pugilist Bombardier Wells can knock out.

CREDIT.

We give the players credit when a
polo game is won,
We cheer the noble athletics out
there working in the sun,
We cheer them as they gallop, as they dodge and bump and jerk
And forget the little ponies that are doing all the work.

Carl Morris is scheduled to perpetrate an alleged battle in Denver, showing how careless Denver is.

In addition to sizzling in the heat, Fred Clarke has to sit around and watch Tommy Leach in the act of burning up the league.

The fact that some of our citizens are heated over a polo match demonstrates how easy it is to heat some of our citizens.

"The Athletics will win in a walk," quoth Danny Murphy. Dan could have picked them to win in a crawl and still be conservative.

Having named the worst umpire in the world, it behooves Mr. Chance to tell us whom he considers the worst magnate.

It is passing strange that an athlete with a name like Eayrs should have escaped the eagle eye of Hugh Jennings.

The Boston Braves, in the act of driving Nap Rucker to cover, demonstrate that the heat affects some persons in peculiar ways.

After the Schalk deal it is hard to blame Milwaukee for declining to do business with the White Sox. Some persons have a prejudice against being stung twice in the same spot.

Jim Flynn avers that he will quit fighting after his next fracas. This will surprise those who suspected that he had quit fighting in Los Angeles some months ago.

LAJOIE.

Poor Larry is old and decrepit,
His eyesight is feeble and dim;
Poor Larry is just about ready to die
But many a magnate would give his right eye
For a couple of cripples like him.

FODDER FOR FANS

About the worst beating handed to any team this year was that which the Braves gave the Dodgers yesterday when they harvested seventeen runs and twenty hits against four runs and eleven hits for the Dodgers.

* * *

Mann, the Braves' outfielder, ambled to the plate six times yesterday, and drew a base on balls, a homer, two doubles and three singles.

* * *

Hendrix, of the Pirates, yielded ten hits to the Cardinals yesterday, but nary a Cardinal could cross the finish line, while four Pirates pattered over the pan during the combat.

* * *

A home run by Ping Bodie with Hal Chase on base enabled the White Sox to tie the score in the sixth inning, and they won out in the tenth over the Browns.

* * *

One of the reasons advanced for the numerous defeats suffered by the Yankees is that when their pitchers are pitching fine ball the batters are not batting and when the batters are batting to all portions of the lot the pitchers are weak and permit the opposition to outbat the New Yorkers. Which is a pretty substantial reason.

* * *

Otis Clymer, the outfielder, has been sold by the Cubs to the Braves.

* * *

Walter Johnson, the speed king of the Senators, never gave a more remarkable exhibition of his skill and coolness in pinches than in the fifteen-inning game against the Red Sox, when he held the Bostonians runless, despite the fact that they touched him for fifteen hits, including four doubles.

* * *

Kahler was in about the best form he has shown for the Naps this season, and as a result his team was enabled to triumph, 3 to 1, over the Tigers.

* * *

The Giants whaled the Phillies for the fourth successive time yesterday, boosting their own average to .652 and shoving the one-time league leaders down to .603, only 56 points ahead of the third place Dodgers.

* * *

All four first division clubs were winners in the American League yesterday.

* * *

The Athletics had the easiest sort of a time yesterday taking the fourth straight game of the series from the Yankees.

* * *

The Athletics and Yankees have clashed sixteen times this year and the Yankees have won just one lone game. All of which makes Connie Mack quite happy when he scans the schedule sheet and finds that his white elephants are billed for a combat with the New Yorkers.

* * *

It was "Birmingham" day in Cleveland yesterday, and about 8,000 fans turned out to cheer the youthful manager of the Naps and assure him that they did not believe one word Ban Johnson said about Birmy being an incompetent.

* * *

Jackson, of the Naps, increased his leadership as an American League batsman yesterday by cracking out three hits in four times up.

FRED TONEY IS LET OUT; BACK TO LOUISVILLE CLUB

CHICAGO, ILL., July 4.—Fred Toney, heavyweight pitcher of the Cub team, was given notice of his release to the Louisville team of the American Association. The big fellow never was much of a big league success, though pitching a fair sort of game now and then.

This release brings the Cubs down to the limit of twenty-five players.

M'FARLAND WILL BOX FOR JOLIET PRISONERS TO-DAY

JOLIET, ILL., July 4.—Packey McFarland will give exhibition bouts at Joliet prison this afternoon for the entertainment of the prisoners. He will box Kid Mack, of Joliet, and other local pugilists. Warden Allen is a friend of McFarland.

ELMER SMITH SUSPENDED.

DULUTH, MINN., July 4.—Elmer Smith, Duluth's right fielder and leading home-run getter of the Northern League, has been suspended by Manager O'Brien, who received a telegram from the secretary of the National Baseball Commission ordering such action. The Jackson club of the Southern Michigan League claims Smith.

Carter Plays Ramspeck in Finals

AUGUSTA, July 4.—The ladies' tennis championship was won here Thursday by Mrs. Johnson after three terrific sets, by a score of 7-9, 6-2, 6-3. Miss Adger's forehand drive is one that would do credit to anyone, either man or woman, and it was on the strength of this drive that she won the first set. Mrs. Johnson won the rest on her ability to cover her court and her placing.

The men's singles were carried through the semi-finals, the survivors being E. V. Carter, Jr., of Atlanta, ex-South Atlantic champion, and Carl Ramspeck, also of Atlanta and also an ex-South Atlantic States champion.

The final between these two will be played off this afternoon about 6 o'clock, and should prove one of the prettiest matches ever seen in Augusta. These two have met once before in Augusta, the event being the challenge round two years ago, when Ramspeck was champion and Carter challenger. Carter won on this occasion in straight sets on a rather wet court.

The results in the men's doubles were as follows:

First Round—Erwin brothers defeated Phinizy and Ridgeley, 6-2, 6-4.

Second Round—A. Capers and M. Kennedy defeated Ferris and Brand, 6-2, 5-7, 6-2. Hall and Parks won by default from Brinson and Branch. Waring brothers defeated Carter and Griffith, 6-3, 6-4. R. Capers and Mikell won by default from White and Bredenberg. Marrett and Gary defeated Hester and Wall, 6-4, 5-7, 6-2.

Third Round—Waring brothers defeated Hall and Parks, 6-1, 6-3, and by winning get a place in the semi-final in the top half.

The following are the results of the matches played in the consolation singles:

Second Round—Crockerson defeated Roseboro by default. Matthews defeated Harper, 6-2, 6-3. Capers defeated Wright, 6-4, 6-4. Stulb defeated Berkmire, 6-2, 6-4. Roseman defeated Sheridan, 6-1, 6-1.

The results of the mixed doubles matches are as follows:

First Round—Mrs. Milam and Reynolds defeated Miss Emily Thomas and J. K. Orr, Jr., 3-6, 6-4, 7-5. Mrs. Johnson and G. W. Waring defeated Miss Thorn and Ramspeck, 6-0, 6-1.

LOOKS BRIGHT ONCE MORE FOR CRACKER CLUB

Their Fourth Straight Victory Is One Fine Ball Game—Pennant Hopes Revive.

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE Crackers came home from their road trip looking like pennant winners. They went crazy with the stick, ran bases at will and played errorless ball.

No team has looked better here this year.

Of course any hyper-enthusiasm can be discounted two ways, to wit:

First Way—The Crackers have looked like pennant winners a score of times this season—and the next day it rained. You get the idea?

Second Way—The local team was playing against one of Dixie's saddest little teams, the puny Pelicans.

BUT after you've discounted all the notes of gloom and after you've made due allowances for everything, the Crackers still keep right on looking like a million dollars.

They not only won Thursday's game against the Pelicans, 9 to 0, but just previous to that they had won two from the league-leading Gulls and one from the powerful Billiken club. Also they just managed to lose the semi-final Billiken game by one run and a miracle.

Price pitched a positively bully game yesterday. The Crackers hammered Walker clean sideways, and the whole affair was fine.

There wasn't a sad note struck until after the game, when the current gave out and left most of the baseball cars stranded, half-way between Ponce De Leon and Atlanta. It must have clouded up out at Bull Sluice or sprinkled in Marietta.

THURSDAY'S game was illuminated by some of the most brilliant fielding that good old Ponce De Leon ever saw. The star performance by an infielder was made by McDowell. In the third, with Price on first (and he got there with his three out of his four times up), Welchonce grounded briskly about ten feet to the right of second base. McDowell went for it, reached out, caught the ball, fell down and threw to second, all with one motion. Price was forced and McDowell sprawled all over the ground, with the ringing cheers of the Atlanta spectators in his ears.

Tommy Long absolutely discounted that. In the ninth Spencer hit a low fly to right field. It sailed, almost on a line, right smack to the right field sign boards—which are deep as the bottomless pit. How Tommy Long got back there nobody knew, but he did, made a terrific leap and plucked the pill right off the sign board. He came down all spraddled and it was not until he climbed back on his feet that the spectators realized he had held the ball.

* * *

WHEN the game was over Charley Frank strolled out to his limousine (oh, yes, he rides in 'em now) grinning. It was too awful to worry about. And surely the Pelicans would be any man's idea of nothing on earth to worry about. It's a great team, but it isn't synchronized. Nothing comes off right. They hit—but nobody is on. They cover bases—but somebody has just covered it for them. They run bases—but arrive too late. They field brilliantly at odd times—but bobble in the pinches.

However, Charley Frank may wake them up yet. He has several players on the team—and up to the time he hooked up with Cleveland he was mighty resourceful about getting players when he needed them.

CHANGES IN COLUMBUS TEAM; KREBS IS RELEASED

COLUMBUS, GA., July 4.—Changes in the line-up of the Columbus baseball team have come thick and fast in the past few days and as a result the Foxes are now claimed to be stronger than they have been at any time in recent years.

Krebs, principal backstop for Columbus for several years past, has been released outright and has joined the Jackson team. Dick Moore, who has been playing second, has been benched, and Keating is holding down the keystone bag. Connie Lewis, an old-time favorite, has joined the team again, while Morrow has been traded to Albany for Brooks.

CAPONI, EASY WINNER, FOULS FREDDIE HICKS

WINNIPEG, MANITOBA, July 4.—After going six full rounds, Freddie Hicks, of Detroit, received an unintentional foul blow from Tony Capino, of Chicago, which put a stop to their scheduled twelve-round bout here. Caponi outfought and outpointed Hicks at almost every stage of the game, Hicks only getting a shade in the second round.

Caponi almost floored his opponent in the first round, Hicks being forced to one knee.

CARL MORRIS BATTLES JACK GEYER TO DRAW

DENVER, COLO., July 4.—Carl Morris, of Oklahoma, and Jack Geyer, of Denver, heavyweights, fought ten rounds to a draw last night.

DROME RACES TO-NIGHT WILL BE HANDICAPS

TO make things interesting in to-night's races it has been agreed to handicap Jock McNeil and "Tex" Richards a quarter of a lap in all preliminary heats and a half-lap in all final heats. This is about the margin by which these two speedsters have been winning and it ought to make the races very close.

Preparations are being made to handle an extra large crowd to-night because of the fact that it is a holiday and that the sport lovers of the city will naturally want to top off a big day by seeing the one sporting event of the night—the motordrome races.

The amateur races will start at 8:10. Jock McNeil will ride his mile against the track record at 8:27. The regular program will begin at 8:30.

Cars will leave Five Points at brief intervals.

Here is the program:

Novice Race.

(Mile heats, 2-mile final.)

First Heat—No. 11, Houston Crane; No. 12, Nemo Lancaster. Second Heat—No. 14, "Happy" Kimbrough; No. 15, Ralph Rout. Final heat at two miles.

ENDURANCE TO DECIDE TITLE GO ANDERSON-CROSS BOUT A SLUGFEST

By Paul Armstrong.
(Famous Playwright and Fight Expert.)

LOS ANGELES, July 4.—Bud Anderson, who is to fight Leach Cross this afternoon, has been put out but once. Once and only once has he known what it means to be dropped for true. But he got it good once and that was from a horse.

Forty-some times has Anderson been matched against men, most of them demanding catch weights and taking a shade anywhere from 10 to 50 pounds, but nobody has ever done as well as the horse.

For two years, which about covers his career as a professional boxer, Bud has won about half his bouts with a knock-out, and the rest, barring a draw or two, were his on decisions. Knock-out Brown, with a wild, desperate swing, dropped and dazed him just enough to win for himself a draw, but what a lacing Brown did get next time to repay for that one swing.

George Memsic was the original discoverer of Anderson. Memsic had fought them all and, beginning to show the ravages of time and hard usage, he went hunting local favorites.

Memsic Unearthed Anderson.

The local favorite of a small but boisterous burg was Tommy Ryan's game. He wrote that stuff. The boisterous burg, once it has a favorite, will turn out to a man and bet some coin that "their boy" can at least stay with those old-timers. Ryan got rich hunting up those spots. Not so with Memsic. He started badly. He picked Anderson. On his return he called to witness and declared that this Bud Anderson had hit him harder than ever he had been hit before in his whole life. He did not know where the punch came from; he did not care.

All he wished to do was to warn people against Anderson. Of course that made Bud's road a little rougher.

And now for one minute let us toy with eugenics again. Anderson represents the last word in rearing for the rugged game. In the woods or breaking horses he has been working at rough labor all his life. Perched on a stage coach in his youth with four half-wild horses and a mountain road before him his eyes and nerves were tested to the limit. Later, when he took up the fighting game he got them at all weights and with murder in their eye. None of the mob he waded through to recognition had a bank account and frequently the little purse they fought for meant all there was in sight.

Bud Never Refused Match.

They did not mind being hurt. They did not know when they were hurt. One has only to see the left guard that Anderson has developed to know that at some time men have swung at him with all they had in the hope of finishing him then and there. But as Anderson once sat still and cold as chilled steel guiding wild horses down a mountain road, so he timed their frantic efforts at his undoing. One by one he dropped them and asked that better men come. Never has he refused a match, never has he picked. He is a real contender for the championship and every living lightweight knows it and knows it well.

Anderson has a perfect left hand, hits straight and knows how to hook. He has got a right which will drop any middleweight if he lands it fair.

But will he beat Cross? Ah, now we come to it. Buddie is short on experience. He has never fought as smart a man as Cross in his life. It's a certainty that Leach will show him many a trick.

Facts Concerning To-day's Big Fights

RITCHIE-RIVERS—Favorite, Ritchie. Odds, 10 to 7. Weight, 134 pounds. Number of rounds scheduled, 20. Arena, San Francisco.

CROSS - ANDERSON — Favorite, Anderson. Odds, 10 to 8. Weight, 133 pounds. Number of rounds scheduled, 20. Arena, Los Angeles.

BRITTON-WHITE—Betting even. Weight, Britton, about 133; White, about 127. Number of rounds scheduled, 20. Arena, New Orleans.

FERNS-DENNY—Favorite, Ferns, 10 to 9, Weight, 145 pounds. Number of rounds scheduled, 10. Arena, New Orleans.

WHITNEY-THOMAS—Betting even. Weight, 133 pounds. Number of rounds scheduled, 10. Arena, New Orleans.

BRITTON AND WHITE READY FOR BATTLE

NEW ORLEANS, July 4.—Jack Britton and Charley White are in great condition for their 20-round battle here to-day. Even money prevails with the betting contingent and thousands of dollars will change hands on the award of the referee.

White's two great victories, both knock-outs, over Joe Thomas have made him a great card here. Two weeks ago he ruled a 10 to 8 favorite. But those who have witnessed the clever Britton in action of late have spread wondrous reports about him. As a result, it is even money and take your pick this morning.

The White men figure that he may be outpointed in the early rounds, but that his stamina and great punch will surely wear Britton down in the last seven or eight rounds. Many of the White followers believe that Charley will win by a knock-out.

Britton is verily figuring on outpointing his opponent. He has been training for speed alone, and in his final work-out of four rounds yesterday he was as fast as lightning.

THOMAS VS. WHITNEY; FERNS MEETS DENNY

NEW ORLEANS, July 4.—There are two corking 10-round bouts to be staged at Joe Golden's Club to-day. In one of them Frank Whitney, of Cedar Rapids, meets Joe Thomas, of New Orleans. In the other, Young Denny, of New Orleans, mixes with Wildcat Ferns, of Chicago.

Whitney and Thomas are expected to put up a swell fight. These boys fought in Atlanta last winter. The decision was a draw. Many thought Thomas had the shade, while others figured that Whitney had proved to be the better man. To-day they will settle once and for all which is the superior boxer. The betting on the outcome is at evens.

Denny has been making a wonderful showing in New Orleans. But the fact that Ferns is the harder hitter and the veteran 10 to 9 are the odds offered, with Wildcat on the short end.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 4.—In the case of the Ritchie-Rivers contest proving a long-drawn-out affair, which of the lightweights is the more likely to retain his fighting strength?

This is one of the questions undergoing discussion on the eve of the battle, and it is a very important one. Moreover, it is a hard one to answer.

When two pugilists are to meet at a certain weight, the average student tries to discover which of the pair will find it easier reaching the notch.

Every old trainer knows that a fighter is apt to lose several pounds during a trying bout, and a wise betting man must keep this in view. It is to his interest to know which of the pugilists is likely to be the more seriously affected by the sloughing off of poundage in the ring.

Weight Surely Favors Rivers.

Right off the reel one would say that Rivers is the one less likely to become weak if the contest is waged at a fast pace and goes over the fifteen-round mark. He is a pudgy fellow, and, while he has had to work to make 134 pounds, it is certain that he can box at 125 pounds if occasion demands it. This means that if Rivers loses a few pounds while battling with Ritchie, no inroads will have been made on his strength.

It may be, as it was with Ad Wolgast in his first match with Tommy Murphy, Rivers, while growing lighter, may simply be fighting himself into better condition.

Now, in the ordinary course of things one could not imagine Willie Ritchie as losing weight to his advantage while a mill was in progress. The champion is a heavy lightweight. This is shown by the fact that he demanded that the notch for the coming mill be fixed at a pound above the lightweight scale.

Came Down From 154 Pounds.

Billy Nolan says that Ritchie weighed fully 154 pounds when he began training for his championship match with Ad Wolgast. This gives an idea of what a big fellow Ritchie is "walking about."

Of course, he did not weigh anything like that when he went into camp for the present match. He had learned his lesson, and by keeping himself actively engaged during his six months of theatrical work he held himself around the 140-pound mark.

But, irrespective of what he weighed when starting out on the present training spell, Ritchie will be pretty well dried out and as lean as any one of Pharaoh5s kine when he steps into the ring to-day. He will have nothing to come and go on, as is the case with Rivers.

Now, if this were an infallible line of reasoning, Ritchie's friends would have to admit that the longer the fight continued the bluer would become the outlook for Willie Ritchie. But it is not infallible.

All Depends on Endurance.

There is such a difference in ringmen that what would prove a serious disadvantage to one would mean little or no detriment to another.

And it all hinges on that innate quality—ENDURANCE.

BILLIKINS, 7; VOLS, 2.

BALL PARK, NASHVILLE, TENN., July 4.—Montgomery took the morning game from the Vols in easy fashion, 7 to 2, driving More from the rubber in the fifth. Williams checked the heavy scoring. The game came near ending in a riot when the entire Montgomery team began to crab over a decision at third, a fight between Manager Dobbs and Umpire Stockdale being third. A fight between Manager narrowly averted.

Case humbled his former pals, holding the Vols to five widely scattered hits. The Vols played a listless game.

ZIMMERMAN GETS PRIZE; GOOD FOR TWO WEEKS

CHICAGO, July 4.—Heine Zimmerman, the pugnacious third sacker of the Cubs, is $100 richer to-day because he has not sassed, assaulted or assassinated even one umpire in two whole weeks.

A fortnight ago a Cub fan promised Zimmerman $100 if he would remain on his good behavior for two weeks and not be chased from the game for "run ins" with arbitrators. Heine has been a very nice young man for the past two weeks, but yesterday—the last day of the time limit—he almost forgot about the $100 when he was called out at home on a close play.

"DOYLE HITTING, GIANTS UNBEATABLE"—STALLINGS

NEW YORK, July 4.—"Larry Doyle has recovered his old form and that is why the Giants are now leading the National League," said George Stallings, manager of the Boston Braves, to-day. "I still recently Doyle was unable to hit with his usual vigor and the Giants were losing games. But they braced the moment Larry's bat began to meet the ball successfully. He is the king pin of the New York team, and now that he is himself McGraw's men can not be headed off.

BOXING
News of the Ring Game

Quite a number of big fights will be held throughout the country on the Glorious Fourth. The most important are the Ritchie-Rivers, Britton-White and Anderson-Cross affairs. All are scheduled to go 20 rounds.

* * *

Bud Anderson, who is one of the sensations of the season and who has put a stop to a number of good boxers, might also spring a surprise on Cross. The latter, though, has the advantage of being an exceedingly heavy hitter as well as a great ring general.

* * *

It would not be much of a surprise if the fans would wake up on the fifth and discover a new lightweight champion in the person of Joe Rivers.

* * *

Local fans are showing much interest in the Whitney-Thomas bout at New Orleans to-day. Both boys have fought here and have a large following. They are billed to

Poultry, Pet and Live Stock

Light Brahmas Are The Largest Fowls In Poultry Breeding

Judge F. J. Marshall: Which are the largest breeds of chickens in their respective order as to size, feathered on non-feathered legs, and where can some be procured of pure breed; the largest variety of game chickens, color and where obtainable of pure breed?

Blue Ridge, Ga. H. W. B.

Reply—The largest chicken bred and recognized in the Standard of Perfection (the guide to all thoroughbred poultry breeding) is the Light Brahmas; weights are, cocks, 12 pounds; cockerels, 10 pounds; hens, 9 1-2 pounds, and pullets, 8 pounds. They have pea combs and feathered shanks. Their body color is white with a black stripe down the center on each feather on the neck, and black tails. Inside of wings black not showing on the surface when the wing is folded. The next range in size comes these varieties, all of the same weight: Dark Brahmas, Black, White, Buff and Partridge Cochins, the weights being just one pound lighter than the Light Brahmas all through. All feathered-leg varieties, the Dark Brahmas are the same in characteristics as the Lights. The color is a black penciling on a gray ground color, the penciling being very narrow and conforming to the edge of the feathers in shape. The male has a black tail. The female's tail is black, except the two top feathers, which are penciled. Cochins are next in size; weight, 11 pounds; cockerels, 9 pounds; hens, 8 1-2 pounds, and pullets, 7 pounds. Cochins are noted for their extreme full feathering and very short legs, which make them appear to be almost one big, fluffy ball of soft feathers from head to toes. The general outline might be described as round, being short from head to tail, with high rounded back in female and full back in male; tails very short; in fact, the tail of the female scarcely shows at all. They are bred in four varieties, Buff, Black, White and Partridge. In form of penciling the Partridge is the same as the Dark Brahma, but the color of the penciling is dark brown on a surface of mahogany red. The Brahmas and Cochins are all feathered-legged varieties, the Cochins being much more profuse than the Brahmas. The Cochin has a small single comb. The next in size are the Orpingtons, Buff, Black and White, all smooth-shanked varieties. Weights are, cocks, 10 pounds; cockerels, 8 1-2 pounds; hens, 8 pounds; pullets, 7 pounds. Comb, single, of medium size and five points. In shape the Orpingtons are rather shorter than the Plymouth Rocks, but not so blocky as the Wyandotte; legs rather large and stocky. The skin and flesh are white, as is the case with all fowls of English origin and make-up. The Buffs should be clear buff throughout, the Blacks solid black, and the Whites solid white. The buffs have a tendency to throw some black in tails, so when a little of it shows up there it should not be considered an impurity of blood. Breeders of these varieties should advertise in The Georgian.

July the Month to Get Most for Your Money Buying Good Stock

For those who are striving to be economical in their outlay for good stock July is the month of the year in which to get the most for their money purchasing good breeding stock. Any one who is regularly in the business has before this time hatched all the young stock he can handle and as a rule has not the room to carry over all his breeding stock, and for the sake of making them move off lively will offer them at a greatly reduced price. A few dollars invested at this time with some good breeder for a pen of first-class chickens would be money well placed. True, you would have to carry them through the molt, but that does not begin to offset the big reduction secured. A pen of chickens bought now and fed lightly for a month and the feed increased after that time should soon come into laying, and with judicious management a few fall chickens could be raised and still have the parent stock ready for early spring business. This is not a theory of ours, it is a custom of many of the best poultry people all over the country, and beneficial to both buyer and seller.

In your endeavors to make a purchase of this character be sure you strike some one who really has a surplus he does not wish to carry over, and for that reason will let them go for a sacrifice. A few hundreds of dollars invested in this way by the farmers of the South at this time to get good stock with which to supplant their scrubs would mean thousands of dollars to them during the next twelve months.

We only wish each and every one could see it as we have seen it tried, time and again in our experience in traveling over the country, and how we have been told by those who had made the experiment, as they called it, of the increased profits they had derived by handling first-class, thoroughbred poultry. So well satisfied are they that they could not be hired to go back to the old plan of the "scrub is good enough for me."

There is no experiment about it, it is a business proposition.

Medium-Sized Acreage Tracts

ALL of us know the profit that is usually made from acreage. It is almost a conceded fact that if a person owns good acreage, he has a sure profit in it sooner or later. When we think of acreage propositions, we think of lots of land, and naturally lots of money, because the usual acreage transaction involves a great deal of money. The demand for good, close-in acreage for subdivision purposes is increasing every day. A trip to the outskirts of the city in any direction you choose to take will convince you of this fact. We are going to offer a tract of about 100 acres, between Decatur and East Lake, which we have cut up into five, ten and fifteen acre tracts. The price and terms on these tracts make it possible for almost anybody to handle them.

Park Community To Cost $150,000

Twenty West Peachtree Cottages. To Sell James Home—University Club Plans—Aragon Hotel Offer.

A park community plan which will involve the expenditure of probably $150,000 and revolutionize a section of West Peachtree has been evolved by Lavender Ray, owner of considerable property on West Fourteenth and West Peachtree. Mr. Ray will utilize the depressed northeast corner of West Peachtree and West Fourteenth Streets for a handsome three-story apartment house and erect 20 artistic cottages for young married couples in a park space which he owns between West Fourteenth and West Fifteenth Streets, with frontage on West Peachtree.

"I hope to build the apartment house for $25,000, although it may cost more," declared Mr. Ray in speaking of his plans, "and to spend an average of $4,000 to $5,000 on the cottages. A handsome colonnade will extend over the West Peachtree entrance and the colonnade effect will be carried out through the string of ten cottages on either side, with porte-cochere effects between the dwellings. The trees will make it possible to provide a little park and playground for children.

"I hope to provide a restaurant where all couples can get their meals, and to supply all the cottages with heat from a central heating plant, possibly from the apartment house. The dwellings will be uniform in size and architecture."

Mr. Ray has drawn rough plans for the colonnade and will soon begin sketches for the dwellings. His frontage on West Peachtree is 175 feet and the depth between the other streets 572 feet. He expects to cut a street like Grant Place through the center of the property, to be 50 feet wide at the front and 40 feet wide at the other extremity. Attractive alleyways will be provided for automobiles and other conveyances behind the cottages, and entrance can also be effected through the rear.

The West Peachtree frontage for the apartment is 100 feet, and the frontage on Fourteenth Street is 118 feet.

To Sell Peachtree Home.

John H. James, the well-known banker and real estate operator, has placed on private sale his former home place at 314 Peachtree, on the west side of the street between Porter Place and Baker Street, and just south of the old J. Scott Todd lot. This property was bought by Mr. James fifteen years ago for $7,000, or at the rate of a little less than $130 a foot. The two-story frame home cost him about the same amount. To-day property in this block is held at $1,500 to $1,600 a foot, which would make the 54 by 175-foot lot worth $81,000 to $86,400. The dwelling is now rented as a boarding house.

Mr. James is also the owner of the property at 135 Whitehall Street, on which is located the Martin & Knott Furniture Company. This is on the west side of the street just north of Trinity Avenue. Mr. James bought it a number of years ago for about $15,000, and to-day holds it at $50,000. He is not yet ready to sell this parcel, however.

University Club Plans.

Hal F. Hentz, of the firm of Hentz & Reid, architects, has been put to work on plans a new University Club home, and is expected to complete a tentative sketch shortly. The University Club has under consideration a building in the neighborhood of the Aragon Hotel, which will be extensively remodeled if the plans of the executive committee are carried out. It is planned to install shower baths, a swimming pool, a gymnasium for light exercises, lockers, etc., and to take the building on a lease.

Members of the club are desirous of obtaining a location close to Five Points, and for this reason nothing has been considered seriously north of Baker Street. Among places mentioned have been the J. R. Hopkins home at the southeast corner of Baker and Peachtree, the former home of Charles E. Seiple at the northwest corner of Kimball and Cypress Streets, and the Joseph Rhodes Building back of the Winecoff Hotel, on West Ellis Street.

The University Club must vacate the old Abbott home in October, and on account of the short space of time the executive committee have gone ahead with preparations to move.

Offer on Aragon Hotel.

It has been learned on good authority that an offer was refused the other day on the Aragon Hotel property, the owners declining to name any price. This is the property that a would-be purchaser offered several years ago to cover with dollars, and was told by the late George W. Collier that he could get a warranty deed if he would put the coins on edge. The new prospects were not even given this opportunity.

The Aragon is under lease to the Harrels for hotel purposes.

Job Still Unfinished.

Although the impression has gone abroad that Peachtree Road paving has been completed from Buckhead to the DeKalb County line, property owners north of William S. Witham's deny it in positive terms. They declare that the bulk of the convicts have been transferred to Peachtree work south of Buckhead and that only a handful are left on the other job. The said property owners have begn placated, however, through circumstances. Whereas the outlying work has not been completed, the closer-in job is getting good attention.

The convicts, by the way, are taking a rest until the Fourth of July has passed.

Railroad Rumblings Heard.

Where is the railroad "lightning" going to strike on the West Side? A hundred property owners would like to know, since their land will jump far above what they paid for it. "I have a large tract on the West Side," declared a young business man Thursday, "and I would give a good deal to know if any railroads are coming through my property."

One of the best posted real estate men in the city declared that something big was going on and he couldn't find it out. "They haven't let me on to it," he said, "but I expect to get in before they are through. I have had some quiet offers on my property, but I have not set any price. My tip is to watch Walton Street. I believe a spur track will run up this thoroughfare before long and I shouldn't be surprised if the Seaboard will use it. The Seaboard is dependent on the N., C. and St. L., and through it, the L. and N., for both its freight and passenger terminals in Atlanta, and I believe is figuring on an arrangement of its own. I expect them to build both passenger and freight depots on the West Side."

Plans for running a connection between the Southern and the A., B. and A. near Mangum Street, and for putting a spur track adjacent to property of Judge E. C. Kontz and Philip Weltner for manufacturing purposes have already been told. That there is something else in the nature of a big surprise, however, is the belief of many, and the railroads are being watched closely.

Twelfth Story on Skyscraper.

Workmen are now ready to put the steel on the twelfth story of the Healey Building. Having placed the girders on the tenth floor, they are going two higher. The Healy Building now towers above the Grant Building and will soon surpass the Empire.

To Sell Lots at Auction.

Five lots and a six-room house at the corner of Park Avenue and Bryant Street, Grant Park section, will be sold July 9 by William A. Vernoy.

Ansley Park Buy.

Harry L. Waters has bought from A. C. Woolley a California bungalow on a 50 by 240-foot lot at 85 East Park Lane, Ansley Park, for $7,500. The deal was handled through W. L. & John O. DuFree.

Demand for Apartment Houses.

Atlanta continues to be a good market for apartment houses. Although a number are constantly building, there seems to be little trouble disposing of them at good prices. Cordial interest accordingly centered around the transfer of the Byron on West Peachtree, near Linden, from Byron Souders to I. P. Bradley, of Newnan, at $150,000. This was in the nature of a swap, Mr. Bradley putting in a Coweta County farm, besides assuming a loan of $40,000 placed June 30 through the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company, and giving notes for most of the difference.

The property is 84 by 200 feet and adjoins a 100-foot parcel which Mr. Souders owns at the southwest corner of Linden and West Peachtree and which was the old Bewick place.

The Byron contains eighteen apartments and rents for $15,000 a year. It is distinctive in the possession of grotesque masks with which the front pillars are studded. Mr. Souders got these from a cast made by a local artist, and he introduced many other innovations picked up here and there.

Remodeling Eiseman Store.

The Eiseman Brothers' Company has begun making alterations on its store at 11, 13, 15 and 17 Whitehall, the same to cost about $4,000. The front stairway is being closed up and will be placed toward the rear, and more attractive show windows are being built. The Krueger Manufacturing Company has the contract. Business is going on as usual.

Prominent Atlantans Buy.

A. V. Gude, Jr., J. R. Moore, A. A. and Joseph Doonan, Lee M. Jordan, John J. Lynch, Joel Hunter and Chas. S. Kingsbery have bought a batch of ten large building lots in Cobb County just over the Chattahoochee River and on the river car line. The seller was the L. P. Grant estate, and the aggregate consideration $6,000. Mr. Lynch and Mr. Hunter bought two each and the others one each.

The lots are 100 by 400 feet, in the neighborhood of the residences of Howard Matthews, Sid Mitchell and others. A road through them is due to be paved soon.

Exchange Completed.

Details of the recent exchange of properties between Dr. M. A. Massoud and Jonathan B. Frost have been announced. Mr. Frost takes the S. Y. Tupper place at the northeast corner of West Peachtree and North Avenue for $44,000 and gives as part payment 209 Washington Street, formerly the Massoud home, at $25,000, and a vacant lot on the northeast side of Marietta Street, near Pine Street, at $6,000, and assumes the difference.

The Tupper corner is 68 feet on West Peachtree Street and 84 feet on North Avenue. It has been occupied lately by a fraternity house with a chapter at Tech. The lot netted Dr. Massoud $76,000 in three months.

Why Some Influential Bankers Fight the New Currency Bill Secretly, but Bitterly

Some eminent bankers in private conversation object to the Government control of the new currency system in the same angry and intolerant spirit that the railroad men denounced the creation of the Interstate Commerce Commission to supervise their operations in 1887. And yet so greatly has the idea of the supervision of the railroads by a Government board sitting at Washington grown in the popular mind, and SO GREATLY HAVE THE RAILROADS PROSPERED UNDER THIS LAW since 1887, that the only changes since asked by the people have been to strengthen the law and to enlarge the powers of the commission. And the chief desire of the railroads now is TO GET UNDER THE PROTECTION OF THE NATIONAL BOARD to escape from the tyrannies and operations of various State boards.

The bankers of the United States will have to accept the idea of Government control of the new currency system because the power to issue $500,000,000 of emergency notes to prevent panics and to maintain a more stable rate of interest throughout the country is too great a power to vest in the uncontrolled discretion of private citizens.

PRIVATE credit is left where it belongs under the new system, exclusively the concern of the PRIVATE banker. The use of PUBLIC credit is reserved to the nation. The Government can not interfere with any national bank in its ordinary operations any more under the new system than under the old. It can not force any bank either to grant or to refuse credit to any individual; it can not force any bank to discount a single note. It leaves every bank's relations with its own customers unchanged and unaffected.

The Government takes added cognizance only of the twelve Reserve Banks, but these are to be managed by local directors, two-thirds of whom will always be chosen by their own stockholders—the banks—so that in all ordinary operations the banks will be as closely managed by the bankers, without interference by the Government, as the railroads are now managed by railroad men without unwarranted interference by the Government.

The greatest opposition to the proposed law will come CHIEFLY FROM THOSE BANKS AND BANKERS THAT HAVE BEEN MOST ACTIVE IN THE PAST IN CONTROLLING THE RESERVES OF THE BANKS, THE PROMOTION AND FLOTATION OF NEW TRUSTS OR CORPORATIONS, AND THE CREDIT OF LARGE BORROWERS.

How completely this control has been concentrated in a few private hands of late years we shall now show by three highest expert authorities—first, by President George M. Reynolds, of the Continental and Commercial National Bank of Chicago. This bank, in its holding of the deposits of other banks, is the largest in the United States. In an address before the National Business Congress in Chicago, on December 12, 1911, Mr. Reynolds said:

"THE MONEY POWER OF THE COUNTRY NOW LIES IN THE HANDS OF A DOZEN MEN. I PLEAD GUILTY TO BEING IN THE LAST ANALYSIS ONE OF THESE MEN. . . FOUR OR FIVE BANKERS IN NEW YORK, TWO OR THREE IN CHICAGO, TWO OR THREE IN ST. LOUIS, CAN CONTROL THE QUESTION OF WHETHER LARGE LOANS SHALL BE MADE TO BANKING CORRESPONDENTS THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY."

The late J. P. Morgan and his most intimate banker associate, George F. Baker, of the First National, testifying before the Pujo Committee last winter, admitted almost as great concentration of money-power as that described by Mr. Reynolds. But both vehemently denied the existence of a "Money Trust," because, they said in substance, these enormous reserves of other banks were concentrated in such vast heaps under the control of Mr. Morgan, Mr. Baker and their associates only because the owners of the money trusted these bankers, in their integrity and prudence, and FOUND BY EXPERIENCE THAT THE MONEY WAS USED PROFITABLY TO ITS OWNERS. The other banks could withdraw the funds at will. There was no agreement, and no compulsion, and therefore no "Money Trust." Everything was entirely voluntary, legal, regular.

Mr. Baker admitted that the "concentration of capital had gone pretty far—probably far enough," and that "in the hands of bad men it would be extremely dangerous." But he added in effect that only great and good men could retain the confidence of bankers in such degree as to be intrusted with such power by other bankers voluntarily.

Without such concentrations of both credit and capital the vast underwritings and the extraordinary overcapitalization of many trusts which the country has witnessed would be impossible.

Undoubtedly these eminent bankers who have been and still are in control of credit have handled all the money intrusted to them PRUDENTLY AND PROFITABLY FOR THE OWNERS OF THE MONEY. But how have their operations affected the public interest?

In the coffee valorization scheme, in the manipulation of the Coal roads, in the making of the Steel Corporation, the small deposits of millions of Americans, through the banks, were used by these Masters of Credit to create overcapitalized companies, to distribute watered stock to the public, and to raise prices of necessaries of life to consumers.

The people's money has thus been used against themselves by the very trustees to whom the public and private credit was temporarily intrusted.

The operation is very profitable—to the trustees. We shall take, also from official sources, the testimony of bankers before the Stanley Investigating Committee, only a single instance to show how profitable the underwriting by syndicates of new trusts sometimes is. The instance is the launching of the largest of all the trusts in which Mr. Morgan was the chief, and Mr. Baker and, we believe, Mr. Reynolds were among his principal associates.

The United States Steel Underwriting Syndicate was for two hundred millions and it floated more than FOURTEEN HUNDRED MILLIONS OF SECURITIES. Only one call for $25,000,000, or 12½ per cent, was made on the underwriting syndicate. For that it received 649,988 shares of preferred and a similar amount of common stock. This stock was sold to the public through the Stock Exchange at an average price of about 44 for the common and 94 for the preferred, netting the syndicate $90,500,000. Expenses of the syndicate totaled $3,000,000, thereby involving $28,000,000 actual cash. Deducting the latter amount from $90,500,000, there remains $62,500,000 representing the profits of the syndicate.

Of that amount J. P. Morgan & Co., as managers, received $12,500,000, and the underwriters the remaining $50,000,000. There were paid four cash dividends of $10,000,000 each, which were paid to the syndicate members, and a final dividend of $6,000,000, a total of $46,000,000. The remaining $4,000,000 was subscribed to a second syndicate organized for the purpose of converting preferred stock into bonds, and the underwriters also made a profit on this transaction.

Simultaneously with the sale of this stock to the public, the prices of iron and steel in all their manifold forms were advanced all along the line, so that the Steel Corporation would show large earnings and its stock be made salable to the public at enhanced prices.

It is not from any doubt of the splendid ability or the financial integrity of the men who did this thing, and countless other things of the same kind, that the people of the United States refuse to put all their banks and credit, and the issue of "emergency currency," under the uncontrolled discretion of private bankers, however powerful, experienced or sagacious they may be.

THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES DO NOT WANT GOVERNMENT BY BANKERS OR BY THE MONEY POWER. THEY WANT GOVERNMENT BY THE GOVERNMENT IN THE INTERESTS OF THE WHOLE PEOPLE.

We Should Worry To-day!

This Astonishing Fourth of July at Gettysburg

This is indeed a glorious Fourth of July! The Republic of heroic reminiscence is massed to-day at Gettysburg.

It is not easy for the times about us to grasp the idea of Gettysburg.

It is difficult for this metropolis of the New South—this vast composite of North and South, East and West, of all races and of every creed—busy, practical, prosperous and peaceful—to comprehend the fact that fifty years ago the Americans north of the Potomac and the Americans south of the Potomac, with their bloody hands at each other's throats, were grappling at Gettysburg in the great decisive battle of a long and bloody war.

Ninety thousand Americans under Meade met seventy thousand Americans under Lee in the climax of the ferocious argument over State's Rights and Federal sovereignty, and when they parted at the foot of Cemetery Ridge, fifty thousand Americans, dead or wounded upon the three days' battlefield, made up the appalling holocaust offered upon the altar of a conflicting theory of government which was no more settled by the bloody sacrifice than when the first gun was fired at Sumter in 1861.

Two years later Ulysses Grant at Appomattox wrote with his sword in the final terms of surrender an affirmative recognition of both sides.

And to-day the citizens of Massachusetts resent as jealously an infringement of the Rights of the States as the people of Georgia appeal in emergency to the Power of the Federal Government!

Thousands of survivors of these one hundred and sixty thousand soldiers—survivors and their children—are gathered in joyous reunion at Gettysburg to-day. And the flag of their fathers—serene and splendid—floats over the survivors of Meade and the survivors of Lee—aged and gray or honored and gay, "in mutual well beseeming ranks marching all one way," toward the sunset of life which leaves the indestructible Republic united and glorious in the zenith of its power and its fame.

There will be a thousand vivid reminiscences and a thousand noble lessons taught above the hero sod of Gettysburg to-day. It is no longer the Confederacy's "Field of Grief," but a great nation's mighty Plain of Reunion!

The astonishing number of the survivors attending the national revival of to-day should teach our youth that a brave spirit and a forgiving temper are the great preservers of life, and the promoters of longevity. There were no braver spirits than those at Gettysburg. Nor any more forgiving. For the victors never boasted of their triumph and the vanquished carried no bitterness to defeat.

Also the field of Gettysburg is the historic reservoir from which we draw our fiery and convincing proof of the nation's martial qualities. There was never in human history a more gallant and heroic feat than Pickett's magnificent charge up Cemetery Ridge, and never a steadier and more magnificent answer than Hancock's superb defense.

So that in the martial qualities of offensive and defensive warfare there is writ at Gettysburg the deathless national record of imperishable valor which may be read and spoken to the comfort of our country's friends and to the stern warning of any who may think to be our country's foes.

Give ample battleships and ample guns to the sons of the sires who fought at Gettysburg, and our country will guarantee to keep the world at peace with us.

A Merger That Is in the Interest of Progress

The merging of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons and the Atlanta Medical College into a great and amplified Atlanta Medical College is a matter of far-reaching importance to Atlanta, and the boards of management of the two institutions are to be congratulated that they have effected a consolidation so satisfactory.

Not only will the colleges themselves benefit tremendously by joining hands, but the graduates thereof will enjoy an immediate standing in the medical profession that heretofore it has been impossible for either institution to give them.

The new college has been made eligible to membership in the American Medical Association, which gives all graduates the right at once to practice medicine anywhere in the world.

Plans for the necessarily enlarged quarters of the new institution are ambitious, but there is every reason to suspect that they will be carried to a successful conclusion. And to that end, The Georgian feels sure all Atlanta will cordially co-operate with the gentleman having those plans in charge.

Caesar and Franklin

By WILLIAM VINCENT BYARS

WHEN Julius Caesar wished to show the meaning of the greatest triumph in life, he first combed his hair carefully over a bald spot. He was so careful about this bald spot that it is said he always scratched his head with one finger after combing his hair down over it.

Perhaps this is a lie. But what he did next was to put a wreath of laurel leaves on his head. He then put on a costly purple-bordered cloak. Taking a branch of laurel in one hand and scepter in the other, he passed out the street door and mounted a car drawn by four horses. Then he drove through the streets, and listened to the crowd that shouted for him. While they were shouting, people in the crowd watched the long line of Caesar's soldiers behind the car and of his prisoners in front of it.

Caesar's Great Triumphs.

After Caesar was tired of standing up to listen to the shouting, he had money scattered to the crowd. Then he gave them bread tickets, or what amounted to the same thing. He also gave them free admission to the circus. At the circus he supplied prisoners to fight lions to amuse those who had shouted for him when he was proclaimed a triumphant conqueror and a dictator.

This was the greatest "triumph" in Rome about 46 years before the birth of Christ.

About 1745 years after the birth of Christ, Benjamin Franklin undertook the greatest triumph of history in the small city of Philadelphia. He pulled off his coat and walked out into the street. Then he took hold of the handles of a wheelbarrow and rolled it through the street. Nobody shouted. Some laughed. He came back with the wheelbarrow in about half an hour. Taking a bundle of paper from it, he went inside. Then he printed a newspaper.

This was one way he had of becoming triumphant, but it was not the only one. After printing the newspaper, he washed the ink off his hands and began to experiment with another one of his ideas.

He wanted to catch a jar full of lightning. In his newspaper he tried to persuade his readers to use their common sense. He tried to show them that common sense is always triumphant when it is really used. They thought he had lost his own common sense when he tried to catch lightning in a jar. But he did it. He finally got enough lightning out of a cloud down the string of a kite to fill a jar, so that he could get sparks out of the jar. When he had done this, it was the greatest triumph in history. He had shown that electricity and lightning are the same; that electricity is a "universal force" which can be used in common-sense ways.

This was a "triumph" in Philadelphia about A. D. 1752.

Julius Caesar was born 100 years before Christ. He was born in a great family. It was the "illustrious Julian gens." "Gens" means family. A "gentleman" then did not have to be "gentle." He did have to be born in an illustrious "gens." Caesar did not think it ungentlemanly to have the hands of his prisoners cut off when he was not pleased with them after he had conquered them. He despised people who had nothing but common sense. He was a great genius and one of the greatest conquerors of any age. He conquered his own country. Before he was stabbed to death in Rome, March 15, 44 B. C., he had destroyed the freedom of the greatest republic of the world. After his time, Romans who could not live unless they were free stabbed themselves.

No Illustrious Forefathers.

Franklin did not belong to an illustrious "gens." When he was born in Boston in 1706, he was fifteenth of the seventeen children of Josiah Franklin. Josiah was a poor candlemaker. Poor as he was, he gave his children "the key of all knowledge." He taught them to spell and showed them how to learn to read. In 1790, when Benjamin Franklin died, he had done more than any other man to make his country free and great. His last act was to sign a paper to make the world freer. But his greatest triumph was in discovering the use of common sense. Spell out or read as much as you can use from the best book you can get. Then do not stop to talk about it. Get your common sense to work and see what you can do with what you have learned. Then go on that way, learning and using your own common sense as long as you live. That is the Franklin way to win triumphs.

In the Dog Days

By WEX JONES.

IN the dog days, beloved, remember on account of your health to eschew
Greeting a husker person with the words, "Is it hot enough weather for you?"

And forget not to shun all advice on sure methods of keeping you cool,
For you'll get all mixed up and distressed and you'll feel like a boiling hot fool.

You will read that cold drinks are injurious; you'll read that hot drinks kill you dead;
You will read you should sleep under blankets; and also with none on your bed.

Some say that cold baths will inflame you till you feel like a stove that's red-hot.
Some say that cold tea is just poison, while asserting that coffee is not.

You'll be told that corned beef and potatoes are too heavy for hot weather lunch;
And again you'll be urged to make luncheon on some food that is there with the punch.

You'll be told to wear plenty of flannel, howe'er it may tickle your skin;
And you'll hear that you'll die in ten minutes unless all your clothing is thin.

It's unsafe and moreover it's foolish to toil through the heat of the day,
So one says; the other declares that it's simply fatal to play.

Then, beloved, avoid all these tipsters, who'll make you feel like a fool,
And take the advice of an expert that all you need do is keep cool.

Wilson Addresses Heroes of Gettysburg

TRIBUTE PAID TO REUNITED VETERANS

President, in Masterly Speech, Stirs the Great Throngs on Historic Battlefield.

GETTYSBURG, PA., July 4.—President Woodrow Wilson, in addressing the veterans of the battle of Gettysburg at the reunion here to-day, said:

"Friends and Fellow Citizens: I need not tell you what the battle of Gettysburg meant. These gallant men in blue and gray sit all about us here. Many of them met here upon this ground in grim and deadly struggle. Upon these famous fields and hillsides their comrades died about them. In their presence it were an impertinence to discourse on how the battle went, how it ended, what it signified. But 50 years have gone by since then, and I crave the privilege of speaking to you for a few minutes of what those 50 yeare have meant.

"What have they meant? They have meant peace and union and vigor and the maturity and might of a great nation. How wholesome and healing the past has been. We have found one another again as brothers and comrades in arms, enemies no longer, generous friends rather, our battle song past the quarrel forgotten—except that we shall not forget the splendid valor, the manly devotion of the men then arrayed against one another, now grasping hands and smiling into each other's eyes. How complete union has become and how dear to all of us and how unquestioned, how majestic, as State after State has been added to this, our great family of free men.

"Heirs to Mighty Heritage."

"How handsome the vigor, the maturity, the might of the great nation we love with undivided hearts; how full of large and confident praise that life will be wrought out that will crown a strength with greater justice and with a happy welfare that will touch all alike with deep contentment. We are debtors to those 50 crowded years; they have made us heirs to a mighty heritage.

"But do we deem the nation complete and finished? These venerable men, crowding here to this famous field, have set us a great example of devotion and other sacrifices. They were willing to die that the people might live.

"But their task is done. Their day is turned into evening. They look to us to perfect what they established. Their work is handed on to us to be done in another way, but not in another spirit. Our day is not over; it is upon us in full tide.

"Have affairs paused? Does the nation stand still? Is what the 50 years have wrought since those days of battle finished, rounded out and completed?

Calls Nation Secure.

"Here is a great people—great with every force that has ever beaten in the life blood of mankind. And it is secure. There is no one within its borders, there is no power among the nations of the earth to make it afraid. But has it squared itself with its own great standards set up at its birth, when it made its first noble, naive appeal to the moral judgment of mankind to take notice that a government had now been established which was to serve men, not masters?

"It is secure in everything except satisfaction that its life is right, adjusted to the uttermos to he sandards of righeousness and humanity. The days of sacrifice and cleansing are not closed. We have harder things to do than were done in these heroic days of war, because harder to see clearly, requiring more vision, more balance of judgment, a more candid searching of the very springs of right.

"Look around you upon the fields of Gettysburg. Picture the array, the fierce heats and agony of battle, column hurled against column, batteries bellowing to batteries. Valor? Yes, greater no man shall see in war; and self-sacrifice and loss to the uttermost; the high recklessness of ex-

Rural Carriers in Atlanta for Meet; To Hear Gov. Slaton

Rural letter carriers of Georgia are convening for their second day's session in the Senate chamber of the Capitol Friday morning. The feature of the meeting will be an address by Governor Slaton, his first public speech since the inauguration.

Mayor Woodward will deliver an address of welcome, while Postmaster H. L. McKee and Clark Howell also will address the gathering. The Kimball House is the carriers' official headquarters.

George C. Bond will preside. Speakers for the afternoon will be Congressman Thomas W. Hardwick and W. D. Brown, editor of The R. F. D. News.

Head of Navy Yard Makes 'Bossy' Ruling

WASHINGTON, July 4.—The Secretary of the Navy has telegraphed the commandant of the navy yard at Portsmouth, N. H., asking if there is anything in the Constitution to prevent a certain woman's cow from crossing the navy yard to its annual pasturage at Kittery.

Secretary Daniels does not give the name of the woman, but he says she has had the privilege of getting a cow across for about 30 years. He doesn't know why any objection was raised this year and he proposes to find out.

Eight Balloons Start In Elimination Race

KANSAS CITY, MO., July 4.—Eight balloons will start this afternoon in the national elimination race to select three bags to represent America in the international race this fall. They are The Kansas Post, Kansas City II., The Drifter, Miss Sophie II, Million Population Club, Dusseldorf, Goodyear and Capital City.

Two pilot balloons will be sent up before the race starts, one of them carrying three society girls as passengers.

Government Bonds Sell Under Par

NEW YORK, July 4.—A very unusual situation has developed in the market for United States bonds. Within the last few days, for the first time since the 2 per cent bonds which become payable in 1930 have been issued, they have sold on the Stock Exchange at less than par.

This condition is a direct result of the proposal in the currency bill that the bonds of the United States be deprived of their use by national banks to secure circulation.

World Gold Supply Affected by Strike

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

JOHANNESBURG, AFRICA, July 4.—The world's gold supply is being seriously affected by the strike in the Rand. A large percentage of the world's supply of gold comes from this district and leaders of the various unions are trying to shut it off completely.

Serious rioting occurred to-day. Fifty soldiers and three times that number of strikers were hurt in the clashes.

Gulf Stream Speeds Up; Hurries Steamer

BOSTON, July 4.—Carried along at great speed by an unusually swift current in the Golf Stream, the steamer Sosua, from Costa Rica, reached here a day ahead of time.

Captain Bjonnes said that the waters of the Stream were strangely active, and the steamer began moving so rapidly that the engines were slowed down to half speed. Even after that the Sosua logged off the miles at an amazing rate.

Commodore Palmer Loses Race to Wife

NEW YORK, July 4.—Mrs. Edgar Palmer, wife of Rear Commodore Palmer, of the American Yacht Club, yesterday administered a good beating to her husband—in a yacht race.

Mrs. Palmer, in her own yacht, the Joyette, outsailed and outmaneuvered her husband in a thrilling race, which she won by seventeen seconds.

SUFFRAGIST ARRAIGNS STARK

Mrs. McLendon Scores Lawmaker for Opposition—Fight for Senate Chamber Renewed.

Characterizing Senator W. W. Stark as a man of small mental caliber, Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, president of the Georgia Woman's Suffrage Association, said Frdiay the suffragists would renew the fight for the use of the Senate chamber during their State convention.

When Senator Stark ascertained the suffragists intended to enlighten the Senators on the question of votes for women, and then moved the tabling of a resolution to grant them the use of the Senate chamber on the nights of July 9 and 10, he provoked the ire of Mrs. McLendon.

Mrs. McLendon declared the suffragists of Atlanta and Georgia were indignant. She believed that common courtesy should have impelled the Senators to willingly grant them the use of the Senate chamber, irrespective of the Senators' views on suffrage.

She Calls Condition "Pitiful."

"It is pitiful that women have to beg the men for such things as that," she said.

During a brief recess Mrs. McLendon asked Senator Stark why he opposed granting the use of the Senate chamber to the suffragists, and he replied it was bceause the Saviour did not call a woman as one of His disciples.

"The answer seemed so absurd, so little to the point," she asserted.

"I asked him if he didn't know that the women of Georgia helped to build that State House, and that we had as much right there as anybody else. Governor Brown let four cowboys from Washington ride horses up the steps, yet the women of Georgia can not meet there."

Plan to Renew Fight.

"We are going to renew the fight for the use of the Senate chamber," Mrs. McLendon continued.

"Mr. John Y. Smith said he would reopen the question for us next Monday. Mr. Blackburn said he would, too. Mr. Blackburn is not in favor of woman suffrage, but his personal belief has nothing to do with this question. No, I don't think we'll get the use of the Senate chamber, but we'll show the smallness of the average Georgia legislator. Just because they are elected by the men people they try to keep the women down. They are afraid the women might rise against them, so they keep their heels on the women's necks."

Mrs. J. K. Ottley, a suffragist sympathizer, said she had no opinion regarding Senator Stark or the reasons he advanced for opposing suffrage, but she was surprised at the Senate's refusal to allow the women to meet there.

Mrs. Ottley Is Surprised.

"I should think they would be very glad to extend the use of the Senate chamber to any association which was neither incendiary nor objectionable," she said, "and, judging by the headway made in other States, the suffragist associations are neither incendiary nor objectionable.

"I am surprised that they should have denied the use of the Senate chamber to any group of respectable Georgia women seeking something they believed to be for the State's good."

Mrs. Ottley said she believed woman's suffrage would come, but she would probably never make an effort to bring it.

"Pluck Out Tonsil," Doctor's New Method

CHICAGO, July 4.—Instead of cutting out a tonsil, Dr. Harold Foster, of New York, announced to-day that he could pluck, and has plucked, out a diseased tonsil "as a man would pluck a cherry."

Only long fingers and a firm grip are needed, he says.

This remarkable declaration was made at the meeting of the American Homeopathic Society.

Urges Track Survey Of Railroads; Would Swell City's Income

Councilman Orville Hall has evolved a plan for increasing the tax assessments of railroads within Atlanta $50,000. At the meeting of Council Monday he will introduce a resolution appropriating $500 to make a survey of the tracks within the city, thereby proving that the railroads should pay more taxes.

Councilman Hall declares that no survey of the railroad tracks within Atlanta has been made in twenty years, and that a new survey will cause the Comptroller to increase his assessments.

The elections of Tax Assessors J. L. Harrison and C. D. Meador come up at the meeting of Council Monday. It is said that both will be elected without opposition.

Jury Disagrees Over Girl Rioter's Trial

PATERSON, N. J., July 4.—The jury in the case of Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, the Industrial Worker of the World leader, on trial for inciting to riot, disagreed after being out 28 hours and was discharged.

Dine Minus Coats In Philly Hotels

PHILADELPHIA, July 4.—(Tip to Atlanta hotel proprietors from Georgian correspondent):

In the men's grillroom of the Bellevue-Stratford fifteen tables were occupied by parties of lawyers, business men, politicians, etc. Every man had his coat off.

As soon as a guest entered, a waiter stepped forward and said:

"Coat, sir?"

The waiter took it, hung it on a hook near the guest, and served luncheon. And there is no tip for coat-hanging.

"Quite the regular thing, sir," said head waiters in all the big hotels. "Gentlemen dining alone always take their coats off. Don't they do it in Atlanta, sir?"

Board Commends City Park Ice Cream

Following the declaration of J. O. Cochran, president of the City Park Board, that he would have the city health officers investigate the quality of ice cream and soft drinks sold in the city parks by Concessionaire C. L. Chosewood, several members of the Park Board went out and, after a test of some of Mr. Chosewood's ice cream, exonerated him on their own authority.

Those who testified in his behalf were Commissioners S. S. Shepard, M. B. Young, R. A. Burnett and L. C. Green. A resolution recommending the quality of the refreshments was then proposed by Commissioner Young and adopted.

U. S. Is Paying More For Seamen's Food

WASHINGTON, July 4.—The increasing cost of living is demonstrated in contracts for feeding the officers and men of the Revenue Cutter Service during the fiscal year beginning July 1.

New York City shows the greatest increase. It will cost $.436 a day to feed each sailor there this year as against $.38 last year. Baltimore and Boston are the only cities showing decreases, the cost in Baltimore dropping from $.41 to $.401, and in Boston from $.387 to $.383.

4 VICTIMS OF FOURTH IN HOSPITALS

Children Maimed and Burned by Firecrackers—Day Observed Quietly in Atlanta.

Four little children, all under 14 years of age, lie in the hospitals of the city, the first victims here in the annual toll of death and injury taken by the celebration of Independence Day.

The injured are:

Walter Pete, 13, 85 Pratt Street.

Charles Garrison, 12, 193 Davis Street.

John Garrison, 9, 193 Davis Street.

O. B. Biggers, 12, 348 Glenn Street.

Walter Pete's hand was painfully lacerated when a toy pistol with which he was playing accidentally exploded.

Charles and John Garrison were seriously injured by the explosion of a toy cannon early in the morning. Eager to celebrate the day, they went out of doors soon after dawn. A few minutes later their mother was startled by their cries of pain. Charles was burned about the face and there is danger that he has lost his sight. Johnny was standing up when the cannon exploded and was hurt about the legs.

Police Guard Doubled.

The first of the accidents occurred last night, when 12-year-old O. B. Biggers was painfully wounded by the discharge of a blank shell held by

GIRL, 7, HOTEL VETERAN; NEVER MADE MUD PIES

Miss Christine Lewis, who has spent all of her seven years in hotels.

Doesn't want to live in a residence ever, says petitie miss, who is the pet of the Majestic's guests.

Likes picture shows better than romping, because romping soils her dresses.

Demure Miss at the Majestic Can Order Dinner Like a Real Epicure.

Think of it! Tobe 7 years old and not know what a mud pie looks like.

That is little Miss Christine Lewis, demure, pretty, petite daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Lewis, who has spent all of her blissful seven years in a hotel and wouldn't live anywhere else even if her parents insisted.

Miss Christine is at the Majestic at present. She can order a dinner as well as her mother, and she orders the porters and bellmen around with the nonchalance of a legislator. From the time she awakes in the morning and takes here seat in the dining room at 9 o'clock until she is tucked in bed at 8, after bidding guests on the veranda good-night, she is the sunshine of the hotel.

Miss Christine is a veteran.

"Waiter," she beckons at the table, "I don't care for consomme to-night. You may bring me chicken, if you have it, and vegtables. And I want ice cream. And it's hot in here; I wish you'd start the 'lectric fan. Please don't forget the ice cream."

Mud pies are unkonwn to her. Miss Christine's frocks know not the stain of the red Georgia soil. In the afternoon, instead of playing in the street as most children do, she goes to a picture show. And there she sits up straight and watches the romances unreel. It is more fun, says Miss Christine, than playing in the hot sun.

Accused Slayer Kills Himself in His Cell

ANNISTON, July 4.—G. H. Bailey, a prominent merchant, charged with the murder of C. W. Saunders here about two weeks ago, committed suicide in the county jail by cutting his throat. It is thought that he used a safety razor blade, as other prisoners in the jail had such blades.

A relative says that Bailey was despondent after his preliminary trial, when he was refused bail. His body was turnedo ver to Coroner Murphy to be prepared for burial. He leaves a wife and several children.

MISSISSIPPI EXPRESS IS LOOTED BY 4 MEN

Masked Robbers Hold Up Illinois Central Passenger at Lonely Spot South of Memphis.

MEMPHIS, TENN., July 4.—Illinois Central train No. 1, bound from Chicago to New Orleans, was held up by four masked men early to-day one and one-half miles south of Batesville, Miss.

It was believed the men obtained $25,000, although the local officials of the American Express Company say the amount was not that large.

When the train stopped in response to signals set by the bandits, two men climbed on board the engine and with revolvers compelled the engineer to pull the baggage, mail and express cars more than a mile down the track. While the engine crew was being guarded, the other two men blew the safe in the express car.

Bind Clerks With Ropes.

At the points of their revolvers they forced the mail clerks into a corner and bound them with ropes. They spent several minutes ransacking the mail for valuable registered packages.

Forcing the trainmen to stand beside the track, the four robbers boarded the engine and ran it to a point a few miles south of End, Miss., where they deserted it.

A posse was organized and bloodhounds were put on the trail of the bandits. The passengers in the cars left standing where the train was stopped knew nothing of the hold-up until after the robbers had escaped.

Hold-Up in Wild Region.

Batesville, Miss., is 50 miles from Memphis, Tenn., and is the center of a hilly, thickly-wooded country.

Within the past year, there have been numerous train robberies in the South.

The first was in Mississippi, on the Queen and Crescent, near Meridian, when robbers stopped a train and rifled the express car. The express company never made an official statement of the amount stolen, but it was estimated at $18,000. The robbers escaped on horseback through canebrakes into the river bottom. Presumably they waded their horses some distance up the shallow stream, for hounds lost the scent at the river bank.

Soon afterward the Louisville and Nashville road's New Orleans-New York "flyer" was held up in the swamps along the Gulf Coast. The passengers were relieved of valuables, and the express car robbed. One robber then climbed into the locomotive cab and ordered the engineer to proceed. The engineer, when the robber glanced away to see just where the train was, struck the bandit in the back of the head with a wrench, nearly killed him, and brought him bound to jail.

In another case, a Texas and Pacific express messenger in Texas killed two hold-up men who invaded his car.

Postal Employees to Have Half-Holiday

Atlanta postal employees will have a half holiday to-day, all departments of the postoffice closing at 12 o'clock for the day. The deliveries of mail will also be curtailed. One delivery will be made this morning in the residence section of the city and two in the business section. There will be no deliveries in the afternoon.

The general delivery windows and the stamp sales windows will close promptly at 12 o'clock.

Private Telephones Asked for Firemen

Council's electric lights committee on Thursday recommended a private telephone exchange for the fire department. The plan was outlined by Chief W. B. Cummings and a representative of the Southern Bell Telephone Company.

It was argued that while the exchange would cost $200, it would save the city $138 a year.

EAGLE SCREAMS ON NATAL DAY IN ATLANTA

Fourth Is Celebrated in Appropriate Style—Athletic Carnival, Picnics and Fireworks.

his playmate, Henry Kaincannon.

Atlanta police will work double turn to-day in an effort to prevent accidents. The night men who quit at 8 a. m. will work until noon. The evening men who come on at 4 p. m. will come on to-day at noon. The day patrolmen who quit at 4 p. m. will remain on duty until 8 p. m.

Chief Beavers states that this is purely to doubly enforce the law, and that any kind of firecrackers or fireworks in the streets will not be tolerated. Pistols are absolutely forbidden and anyone caught with a firearms, even if it is loaded with blanks, will be arrested for carrying a weapon.

Outings Feature Day.

The Fourth of July is being appropriately celebrated in Atlanta to-day. Many downtown buildings and homes in the residence sections are flying American flags in honor of the nation's birthday anniversary, and thousands of Atlantans are enjoying the day in the parks, at barbecues, athletic contests and other places of amusement.

Most of the stores will be closed for the greater part of the day, that the clerks and employees may do their part in making the day a real holiday.

The eyes of the athletically inclined are turned to Piedmont Park as the place to spend the Fourth. Besides the bathing in the lake a field meet was begun this morning, under the direction of Joe Bean, physical director of Marist College. The entries include some of Atlanta's foremost athletes, among them representatives of Marist College, Atlanta Athletic Club and the Fifth Regiment.

Patriotic services, to which representatives of all religious and patriotic bodies have been invited, are being held at St. Philip's Cathedral this morning. The services are in the nature of an expression of thanksgiving and a prayer for the continued prosperity of America. The Daughters of the American Revolution are taking a leading part in the services.

Scotch and Germans Celebrate.

Among the outings will be a big barbecue at the Battle Hill Tuberculosis Sanitarium, when the institution will welcome its former patients. The barbecue will begin at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

One of the big celebrations of the day will be held at the Burns Club grounds this afternoon, when the members of the Atlanta Scottish Association will gather for their second annual picnic. Scotch games and exercises will feature the celebration. Every family invited is expected to take along a basket filled with good things to eat, and after the program a big feast will be spread.

The Atlanta Turners have arranged for an outing and patriotic celebration at Germania Park that promises to be one of the biggest the local Turn Verein has ever held. It is an all-day event, and a big feast will be spread for all who attend, with light refreshments late in the afternoon. Delegations of Turners from Mobile, Nashville, Chattanooga and other cities are expected to attend the picnic.

The negroes of Atlanta have been invited to celebrate the Fourth at the Morris Brown Collge, and the gates of that institution will be open to visitors all day.

Fifth's Legislators After Farm School

Representatives from counties comprising the Fifth District have joined forced in a fight for an agricultural school for that section. There are five counties in the Fifth—Fulton, DeKalb, Rockdale, Campbell and Douglas.

Floor Leader R. B. Blackburn, of Atlanta, with John Y. Smith and Ralph O. Cochran, the other two Fulton County Representatives, are leading the fight. The towns of Lithonia, Stone Mountain, Clarkston and Decatur already have offered sites for the school.

Exchange to Fight Cotton Future Tax

NEW YORK, July 4.—A formal protest by the Cotton Exchange will probably be made against the amendment to the tariff bill providing for taxing sales of cotton futures one-tenth of a cent a pound.

Cotton brokers and spinning interests declared that the taxation of one-tenth of a cent a pound on sales of futures would drive the market for cotton to Liverpool, where there are no such restrictions.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

By refusing the perfectly reasonable request, legitimately entered, of certain advocates of woman suffrage in Georgia that they be permitted to use the Senate chamber for a meeting, at a time definitely sure not to conflict with any busines of the Senate, it is extremely doubtful whether the Senate has covered itself with any amazing amount of glory or erected a perpetual monument to its common sense.

That is the way a great many people appear to view the matter, anyway!

Moreover, if the Senate is opposed to woman suffrage, which it is agreed all around it has a right to be, it doubtless has helped the cause rather than injured it in Georgia by refusing the request noted.

Woman suffrage may not be popular in Georgia—on the contrary, it may be more popular than some folks imagine—but certainly its advocates thus far working in the open are women of extraordinary intelligence and marked conservatism of action.

To deny them a request that would have been granted, readily enough, to the State Democratic executive committee, say, is not particularly convincing in the minds of some people that woman suffrage is either an error or a monstrous wrong.

To be sure, the women may hold their meeting elsewhere, but in view of the fact that all sorts of political meetings have been permitted in the Senate chamber—which is a public place—and all sorts of people permitted to speak therein, in season and out, the needless turning down of a handful of women, desirous of holding a welfare meeting in behalf of their own organization, seems to have been rather out of place, if not absolutely cheap.

The Senate of Georgia before this time, however, has strained at gnats only to swallow camels subsequently. It appears that the present Senate was not loathe to let it be known that it could do that old act itself, if occasion seemed to require the performance.

It is the opinion of a number of people that the Senate's refusal of the request of the women involved was extremely ungracious, to say the least of it!

It should be borne in mind that neither Representative McArthur nor Representative Browning, of the new counties of Wheeler and Bleckley, respectively, were expelled from the House.

Both gentlemen had been sworn in, but that fact did not make them members de jure of the House, necessarily. The constitutionality of their titles to their seats was raised and sustained by the House, and their seats therefore were declared vacant, or, rather, their seats were declared never to have existed.

Both gentlemen are very popular, and are citizens of the very highest integrity and standing. Indeed, as a purely personal matter, the disposition of the House undoubtedly was to seat them. However, the House, after thrashing the matter out exhaustively, decided that the law plainly was against them and very properly it acted accordingly.

Discussing this matter to-day, Representative Hardeman, who made a speech denying the right of the gentlemen to their seats, said: "It is a tribute to the patriotism and genuine worth of the House that it acted as it did in this matter, despite its heavy personal inclination to vote otherwise. My own vote was embarrassing, in a way—I hated to vote against these two splendid men, but I could not afford to do that which I feared would Legislature, and so I voted as I did.

"I think the George House of this year may be depended upon to do the right thing in all matters, judging by the way it acted in this very trying situation."

Close behind the introduction of a bill in the Georgia Senate by Hon. J. L. Sweat, of the Fifth District, Waycross will organize for a determined campaign in favor of extending the State road to the sea, via Waycross.

Right-of-way through Ware has been pledged, and the county convicts will be loaned, if necessary, to the State for the road construction.

Other counties through the Ware County section have agreed to make similar offers, and all will exert themselves to get favorable action by the Legislature.

Governor John M. Slaton's suggestion of a State Highways Commission has met with the hearty approval of the farmers of Floyd County, and they have not been at all slow in making that fact known.

Meetings were held throughout the county Thursday, warmly approving the idea, and the Rome Chamber of Commerce has set the seal of its indorsement upon it.

Howard Ennis, of Baldwin, who defeated former Speaker Pro Tem Carl Vinson for re-election to the present House by the squeaky margin of five votes, has made marked progress in the esteem and respect of his fellow members. Already Ennis of Baldwin is known of everybody, and is most generally approved.

Despite the fact that Ennis defeated Vinson as aforesaid, the two men are the warmest of friends, and may be seen almost any day that Vinson is in Atlanta, arm in arm, and as thick as can be. Both are high-class men.

Representative Barry Wright, of Floyd County, a former member of the House and legislator of experience, has just been re-elected president of the Cherokee Life Insurance Company of Rome.

Mr. Wright is one of the younger members of the present House of Representatives, and is perhaps the very youngest life insurance president in the United States.

D. F. McClatchey, the House reading clerk, not only has a powerful and sonorous voice, but one possessed of marvelous powers of concentration.

In reading a bill for the first or second time Mr. McClatchey frequently condenses pages into paragraphs, and paragraphs into sentences. Sometimes he gets by with a sentence so fast that the audience can not hear it at all!

By condensing things after the manner he does, Mr. McClatchey undoubtedly saves the State thousands of dollars annually in the mere matter of time prevented from going to waste. If McClatchey didn't get over the ground orally as fast as he does the entire time of the House doubtless would be taken up listening to bills read.

WILSON SPEAKS TO THRONGS AT GETTYSBURG

alted devotion which does not count the cost.

The Cost of a Great Nation.

"We are made by these tragic, epic things to know what it costs to make a nation—the blood and sacrifice of multitudes of unknown men, lifted to a greater statue in the view of all generations by knowing no limit to their manly willingness to serve.

"In armies thus marshaled from the ranks of free me nyou will see ,as it were, a nation embattled, the leaders and the led, and may know, if you will, how little except in form its action differs in days of peace from its actions in days of war.

"May we break camp now and be at ease? Are the forces that fight for the nation dispersed, disbanded, gone to their homes forgetful of the common cause? Are our forces disorganized, without constituted leaders and the might of men consciously united because we contend not with armies, bu wih principalities and powers and wickedness in high places.

"Are we content to lie still? Does our union mean sympathy, our peace contentment, our maturity self-comprehension and a clear confidence in choosing what we shall do? War fitted us for action, and action never ceases.

Refers to Another Host.

"I have been chosen the leader of the nation. I can not justify the choice by any qualities of my own, but so it has come about, and here I stand. Whom do I command? The ghostly hosts who fought upon these battlefields long ago and are gone? These gallant gentlemen, stricken in years, whose fighting days are over, their glory won? What are the orders for them, and who rallies them?

"I have in mind another host, whom these set free of civil strife in order that they might work out, in days of peace and settled order, the life of a great nation. That host is the people themselves, the great and small, without class, or difference, or kind, or race, or origin, and undivided in interests if we have but the vision to guide and direct them and order their lives aright in what we do.

"Our Constitutions are their articles of enlistment. Their orders of to-day are the laws upon our statute books. What we strive for is their freedom, their rights to lift themselves from day to day and behold the things they have hoped for, and so make way for still better days for those whom they love who are to come after them.

"The recruits are the little children crowding in. The quartermasters' stores are in the mines and forests and fields, in the shops and factories. Every day something must be done to push the campaign forward, and it must be done by plan and with an eye to some great destiny.

"Builded by God's Hands."

"How shall we hold such thought in our hearts and not be moved? I would not have you live even to-day wholly in the past, but would wish to stand with you in the light that streams upon us now out of that great day gone by. Here is a nation that God has builded by our hands. What shall we do with it?

"Who stands ready to act again and always in the spirit of this day of reunion and hope and patriotic fervor? The day of our country's life has but broadened into morning. Do not put uniforms by. Put the harness of the present on. Lift your arms to the great tracks of life yet to be conquered in the interest of righteous peace, of that prosperity which lies in a people's hearts and outlasts all wars and errors of men.

"Come, let us be comrades and soldiers, yet to serve our fellowmen in quiet counsel where the blare of trumpets is neither heard nor heeded and where the things are done which make blessed the nations of the world in peace and righteousness and love."

KEEPS TAB ON EVERY LAWMAKER IN HOUSE

Representative J. Frank Rhodes, of Clarke, and his famous red book with which he keeps tab on his colleagues.

Representative From Athens Writes Down in Little Red Book All He Finds Out.

Representative Frank Rhodes of Clarke County, once Mayor of Athens, is the blue-ribbon figurer and notemaker of the House.

Mr. Rhodes knows the name, habits, affiliations, religion, race, color, and previous conditions of servitude of each and every member of the House and he keeps his records of them handy at all times.

Rhodes has a fearful and wonderful little red leather book, in which everything about everybody in the Legislature is carefully and accurately set down.

The gentleman from Clarke has no sinister purpose in thus keeping tab on his fellow members. He is a wholesouled person, with malice toward none and charity for all. But he is of an inquisitive turn of mind and likes to have a thorough knowledge of anything and everything in which he is concerned. Wherefore, the frank and candid red leather book, in which he makes his daily jottings!

In Athens they yet talk about what a good Mayor Mr. Rhodes made. He had another little red book on that job, too, and long before election day it was packed and jammed with information, minute and searching, about every individual voter in town. Rhodes knew all about 'em before a ballot was cast, and he figured himself a winner, all right! He won, moreover, hands down.

The gentleman from Clarke is a business man, and a successful business man at that. He is happily married and has six children, every one of whom he is training up to the little red book habit.

If ever one of that Rhodes outfit should run for Governor, there will not be a voter in Georgia whose pedigree and history will not be set down accurately and precisely in one of the Rhodes' little red books.

JUDGES CHOSEN FOR SLOGAN CONTEST

Georgian's Prize Offer for Best Button Caption Increases Interest in 500,000 Club.

The Georgian's 500,000 club movement was given a new impetus Thursday when three of the best known men in Atlanta became actively identified with it as judges of the $25 slogan prize contest. They are:

John W. Grant, Wilmer L. Moore and Walter C. Taylor.

"The constant stimulus our newspapers give to the Atlanta spirit is one of the finest things in the city, or any city in the country for that matter," said Mr. Grant. "The 500,000 booster club idea will result in much good, and the census of 1920 will be ample proof of it."

"I want to help the 500,000 club all I can," said Mr. Moore.

"I often think that we don't know how to appreciate Atlanta until we get out of it," said Walter Taylor. "Often when I was in other towns and heard of the things being done in Atlanta, I got as homesick as when I first left home as a boy.

"Every traveling man, every Atlantan who goes away for a trip, as well as all good boosters at home, should wear one of the 500,0000 club buttons. You can't calculate the boosting that such a plan will effect."

Since The Georgian offered $25 for the best slogan for the buttons interest has greatly increased in the enterprise to get 500,000 people into Atlanta by 1920.

The contest will last for ten days, the winner of the prize to be announced in Hearst's Sunday American of July 13. All entrants must mail their slogans to the Contest Editor, Atlanta Georgian. They will be transmitted to the judges and merit will decide. The originator of the one selected will be given $25 in cash.

It is an easy way to make $25. It's a chance to render a civic service. Thousands of buttons bearing the slogan will be distributed. A few words penned in an idle moment may speak volumes.

How Strict Are You with Your Daughter?

—answer it, parents. Are you too strict, or aren't you strict enough? Either course is liable to be disastrous. Your daughter's welfare means as much to you as anything else in the world, yet do you know what to watch in bringing her up.

There are few men who know the problem as Judge Freschi does. For years a magistrate in the City of New York, his work has brought him into personal contact with thousands of girls and their stories. He has had an opportunity to analyze the causes of their failure. His name has become known throughout the country as their benefactor.

The angle from which he discusses the diverse elements that enter into the upbringing of the girl is a new one that you probably have never thought of. As a thoughtful mother or father you ought to read what he says in his article, "How Strict Are You with Your Daughter?" It appears in the

LONGSTREET'S WIDOW TELLS OF REUNION

Describes Meeting Sharpshooter Detailed to Kill Husband, Whom General Captured.

By HELEN D. LONGSTREET.

GETTYSBURG, July 4.—The tents of America's loyalty are pitched today on the world's greatest battlefield. Gettysburg's bugles echo today over a reunited nation.

Standing on the borderland of eternity, with its shadows touching their bent forms and silvered heads, these last survivors of an army the like of which the world shall see no more have gathered here, not Northern, not Southern, but all American, bridging the bloody rift of the sixties with fraternal unity more ancient than sectionalism, more lasting than hate.

To the youth of this nation the inspirational value of this day on Gettysburg's field will outweigh the sordid accumulations of all the Rockefellers the world will ever produce.

"Where did you lose your arm?" I asked of one melancholy-faced soldier in blue, who walked a little lamely notwithstanding his brave efforts.

Detailed to Kill General.

"After the battle of Chickamauga," he said, "I was one of twenty sharpshooters detailed to kill Longstreet. He captured us all and I lost my right arm. Did you ever see Longstreet?" he inquired pathetically. "How sorry I am that he did not live to be here."

Gazing over seas of Old Glory, miles of which stream from the houses and dot the hillsides, swathing the trees and bridging the streets, until a loyal canopy of red, white and blue almost conceals the blue heavens above.

"Oh, isn't it glorious!" I said to a veteran in gray. "How could you look on the old flag and know its meaning and fire on it?"

The veteran in gray said, brokenly, as he looked with me upon the shining colors of our country's standard:

"That's My Flag Forever."

"I didn't stop to think so much about what we were fighting about; my land and my people called to me. They were in trouble; it was about the same as if it had been my mother. Right or wrong, I would rush to her rescue."

"But now you are glad," I said, "glad that you didn't win; glad that the American Union lives."

He bared his head and, pointing to the glorious sweep of color, said reverently:

"That is my flag, the flag of my fathers, the flag of my country, my children's flag forever. God keep it in the skies. It means strength and progress and peace that will endure. It blazed the only road to national happiness and greatness."

A melancholy-eyed veteran in worn gray, gazing wistfully across Cemetery Ridge, had gone back to the daring days of the long past. Lost to the present, oblivious of surroundings, he said sadly:

Mourns Over Pickett's Charge.

"If Pickett hadn't made that charge we stood a good chance of whipping the Yankees."

"But," I said, "it is best for us all that you didn't whip them; and they are no longer Yankees, just Americans; and, looking toward the East, shoulder to shoulder, heart beating close to heart, our country's mighty destiny is our common hope and glory."

"I know all that," he said, "but I just sometimes can't help feeling powerful sad when I think of them brave boys who had to die out there for nothing."

"Oh," I replied, "nobody ever dies for nothing who dies for right."

On this field of tearful memories a sea of brown tents stretching miles in all directions, it is learned that no provision whatever has been made for the participation in this greatest event in the country's peace history of the women who sent husbands and fathers and sons and sweethearts to answer the call at the first tap of the drum in 1861. The hardship, the suffering, the agony of the women who waited in the war homes of the nation may never be told.

Veteran Longs for Wife.

Some day a grateful Government will erect a monument that will pierce the blue heavens from Gettysburg's stateliest, sunniest slope, and on it will stand the figure of one in whose courageous soul every battle was fought and every victory won—the woman who placed the flag of her faith in the hands of her best beloved and sent it to the front when the first gun was fired on Fort Sumter.

A veteran, shambling rather dejectedly along up Emmitsburg Road, overtook me. He was hot, dusty, tired. I said: "Do take my umbrella. I really would rather walk without it."

He straightened up with some of the old fire and vigor.

"Pshaw! I was fighting up this road before you wuz born. I guess I kin stand a little sun now. But how I wish Jane wuz here. She had a harder time than I did enduring the war."

Later a little woman with faded eyes overtook us "up Emmitsburg Road."

"I wasn't expected," she said, "but I just couldn't help coming. Jim was killed along here somewhere. I think it must have been about here."

Pausing at a clump of trees, she rested a thin hand on one of the outstretched branches.

Going to Her Sweetheart.

"Your husband?" I said.

"Oh, no, he was just my sweetheart, but I told him that I would wait until he came back. I won't have much longer to wait now. He did not come back to me, but I am going to him."

Some time there will be another and a greater reunion on this field. The next time it will include the real soldiers who made the four years of fighting possible.

On that day, a rich, grateful Republic will pour out its millions, and all the gray, bent Janes who had "a harder time" than their husbands on the field, and all the sad-eyed Sarahs who are still waiting for sweethearts that never came back will gather here on the scene of a Republic's trials, tribulations, and sufferings, and that will be a real reunion of the white souls that laid the supreme offering on the altar of country, of the tortured hearts that wrestled with the uncomplaining pain through the long four years when the nation's harpstrings were tuneless because her daughters could not sing the old songs.

SLATON DOUBTS RIGHT TO PAY TEACHERS

Governor Slaton has grave doubts whether the recently ratified constitutional amendment purporting to increase the Executive's borrowing power has not really put a limitation upon his powers rather than extended them.

So serious are these doubts in the Governor's mind that he has referred the matter to the Attorney General for an opinion, and will not undertake to do anything in relieving the present situation with respect to paying the common school teachers until his mind has been cleared up by that official.

If the amendment has fully authorized the Governor to proceed to the relief of the teachers, unquestionably he will give the matter that direction, but the peculiar wording of the amendment, coupled with the statutes involved, has given rise to perplexing doubts in the Executive mind as to just exactly what the law does contemplate, and he hesitates to attempt a loan for any purpose whatever until he knows exactly what terms and conditions a loan under the amendment would impose, not only upon the State, but upon the source of the loan.

Anxious to Pay Teachers.

Governor Slaton is anxious to see the school teachers paid. Of that there is no doubt. But the uncertainty in his mind as to the law in the case, as well as the marked stringency of the money market at this time, has prompted him to make haste slowly.

If it might be so arranged the Governor prefers that such loan or loans as he may contract be made with Georgia bankers and financiers. If the matter can not take this direction, however, the Governor will be forced to go East for such funds as he needs, and he has reason to suspect that it will be rather expensive borrowing at this time.

Naturally, the Governor does not wish to involve the State in a transaction calling for an abnormal expense item by way of interest.

The Governor wishes to relieve the present pressing necessities of the common school teacners, and in addition to that he hopes to secure from the present General Assembly early legislation of a character calculated to avoid delaying the payment of the teachers in the future.

Legislature to Co-operate.

There is a marked disposition in the Legislature, moreover, to co-operate cordially with the Governor in this matter.

During the present three-day recess of the House and the Senate the Governor will address his attention almost exclusively to the problem of financing the teachers in their present necessities and planning for their permanent relief.

When the Legislature meets again Monday it is likely that the Governor will put himself immediately in touch with that body, to the end that the present troublesome status of affairs may be worked out legally, equitably and speedily.

Optical Tucks to Cure 'Cross Eyes'

CHICAGO, July 4.—Tucks are being used a great deal this year as a remedy for the perplexing ailment known to the laity as "cross eyes" and to men of science as convergent strabismus.

Such was the gist of a paper read by Dr. George A. Suffa for the American Homeopathic Society.

The method of clearing the complicated visions of these unfortunates consists in taking a tuck in one of the muscles that control the ball of the eye.

Bill to Reimburse Dairymen Drafted

A cattle bill, providing for the reimbursing of the dairymen for cows killed by order of the Health Department, will be introduced by Representative R. Frank Smith, of DeKalb County, at the request of the Georgia Dairymen's Association, which has been agitating the matter for years.

It provides that the owner shall be reimbursed in the value of the animal killed as shown upon the tax books.

7-MONTHS BABY ONLY HAPPY PLAYING FIDDLE

Child's unusual love of music discovered entirely through accident.

June Howard Stollard, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Stollard, "The Fiddlin' Baby."

Neighborhood attraction is not content unless musical instrument is within easy reach.

Hail the fiddling baby!

Seven months old, and never happy unless he is picking at a violin.

Feed him milk and mush and he is apt to be as cross as a bear; stick a violin between his fat feet and fingers and he will immediately begin picking at the strings, a smile of cherubic joy will wrinkle his plump face—and he is in the seventh heaven of delight.

Atlanta's latest prodigy is June Howard Stollard, the only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Stollard, of 44 East Main Street, and he bids fair to develop into another Mischa Elman.

But it was not until he was five months old and crawling over everything in the house that the love of music that possessed the little soul became known, and then only through accident. One morning the baby crawled into a closet, and, discovering an old violin that had belonged to Mrs. Stoddard's father, calmly took possession of it and began giving an impromptu concert. He had the violin cuddled up between his toes and fingers and was picking at the strings with both feet and hands. And out of the medley of sounds emitted by the protesting violin came now and then notes of surprising clearness.

Since then open season has been declared on violins in the Stollard household. The fiddling baby has become a neighborhood attraction. Like all geniuses, the child is content to sit and fiddle all day long, whether he has an audience or not. He has gained confidence with experience, and now he picks and pecks at the violin strings for dear life. The child puts his whole heart into his fiddling and spurns tempting offers of milk while he is playing. He quits only when he is tired, and sometimes he does not get tired for hours at a time. His mother and father are even now planning his musical education.

DELAMATER TRIED; ROWDY, SAYS WIFE

Druggist to Plead Guilty to Escape Notoriety of Public Hearing, It Is Declared.

Dr. Ira DeLamater, of the DeLamater-Lawrence Drug Company in the Equitable Building, will be given a hearing before Judge Broyles Friday on charges of disorderly conduct brought against him by his wife, who called the police after he is alleged to have gone to his home in an intoxicated condition Thursday afternoon and refused to leave.

"It is understood the druggist will plead guilty in order to avoid the notoriety of a trial, and will accept a fine.

The row at the DeLamater home at 60 Currier Street Thursday was the climax of a series of sensational incidents in which Dr. DeLamater has been involved during the last few months. Some time ago he created a sensation by barricading himself in a house on Capitol Avenue and defying the police to arrest him. Because of this and similar affairs, it is asserted that Mrs. DeLamater has filed suit for divorce and the custody of their children.

Thursday afternoon, according to Dr. DeLamater, he went to his home to effect a reconciliation with his wife and to visit his children. Mrs. DeLamater ordered him away and it is alleged he became boisterous. The police were called and Dr. DeLamater was arrested.

'Phone Girls Will Open Summer Camp With Out-door Dance

With an informal reception and a dance in an open-air pavilion the girls of the Southern Bell Telephone Company, 500 in number, will dedicate their summer playground, "Camp Wyanoke," at 8 o'clock Friday night. The camp covers seven acres of wooded hillside on the plantation of B. D. Jackson, and is equipped with electric lights, sewer facilities and running hot and cold water.

The camp was planned by Miss Cathryn C. Tatum, chief of the stenographic bureau of the telephone company, assisted by the head operators. The telephone company donated the equipment, costing over $1,000. Practically every one of the 500 girls who work as operators, stenographers and bookkeepers will spend their vacation there, the cost being only 50 cents a day. The camp will be open till late in September or early October.

CONFIDENCE MEN SHOW TARHEEL EASY MONEY

He Goes Home From New York for More Funds and There Learns Something More.

NEW YORK, July 4.—During all the many years that Edward Lee Baxter Davidson had been living in the progressive town of Charlotte, N. C., it was his foolish belief that the only way to make money is to work for it.

Leading about $1,000 in cash and a draft for $10,000 by the right hand, he arrived in this hospitable village on June 24. Four days later he was going to accompany a steamship to the other side.

He registered at the Hotel Martinique, and there met a well-dressed young man.

In the cafe the well-dressed young man was met by a friend who almost tore a pocket in trying to remove an obese roll of yellowbacks in an unostentatious manner.

Easy, Too Easy.

"This is a mere nothing," said the friend, carelessly. "When I see so many really intelligent young men working for money it breaks my weak heart."

That called for an explanation, and it was given. By tapping the wires that carry racing results one could make a fortune in 20 minutes.

After several minutes Davidson at length persuaded the young man to accept a few dollars from him for sample bets. He was successful. He wanted to know more about this road to riches and, on being assured that the more money you put up the more you made, he handed $700 to the well-dressed young man.

Goes Home for Money.

Somehow or other the money was lost, but, said the well-dressed one, Davidson should not be discouraged. He should make a bigger bet.

"Could you use this $10,000 draft?" he asked.

They could, if they knew that Mr. Davidson really had the money. Mr. Davidson replied quickly he could prove that he had by going to his home and getting it. He went back to Charlotte and there opened his heart to Frank Osborne, brother of James W. Osborne, the lawyer, of this city. Frank Osborne, suspicious, instructed Davidson to see James W. This he did and Mr. Osborne took Davidson to Deputy Police Commission Dougherty, who wired Frank Osborne to telegraph to the suspects when they would arrive.

The two tappers were arrested when they met Davidson. The North Carolinan took a liner to Europe.

Davidson Reputed Wealthy.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., July 4.—Baxter Davidson is one of Charlotte's best known men. He is a bachelor somewhat beyond middle age and a capitalist. He is a member of one of North Carolina's most prominent families.

DILLON KNOCKS OUT M'KINNON IN TEN ROUNDS

INDIANAPOLIS, July 4.—Jack Dillon, of Indianapolis, scored a knock-out over Bill McKinnon, of Boston, at the American Association ball park last night in the tenth round after the Easterner had been floored five times in the round. He was led to his corner a few seconds before the time for the final bell.

McKinnon was outclassed throughout and was sent to the mat on eleven different occasions.

In the semi-wind-up, scheduled for ten rounds, Young Saylor, of Indianapolis, stopped Battling Terry, of Pittsburg, in the fourth round.

BOXING
News of the Ring Game

Quite a number of big fights will be held throughout the country on the Glorious Fourth. The most important are the Ritchie-Rivers; Britton-White and Anderson-Cross affairs. All are scheduled to go 20 rounds.

* * *

Bud Anderson, who is one of the sensations of the season and who has put a stop to a number of good boxers, might also spring a surprise on Cross. The latter, though, has the advantage of being an exceedingly heavy hitter as well as a great ring general.

* * *

It would not be much of a surprise if the fans would wake up on the fifth and discover a new lightweight champion in the person of Joe Rivers.

* * *

Local fans are showing much interest in the Whitney-Thomas bout at New Orleans to-day. Both boys have fought here and have a large following. They are billed to go ten rounds.

* * *

Jimmy Gardner did not go very far in his come-back effort. Frank Klaus stopped the Lowell boy in a few rounds the other night at Boston.

* * *

Tommy Murphy says it is too hot to fight and has called off his match with Johnny Dundee for July 15. Jack White may take Murphy's place.

* * *

Tom McCarey, coast promoter, threatens to bill the Williams-Ledoux bout on July 29 as a championship battle. Coulon's refusal to fight has disgusted the Western promoter.

* * *

Eddie Clabby, brother to Jimmy Clabby, has issued a challenge to any lightweight in the world. Jimmy says he will back his brother for $1,000.

* * *

George "K. O." Brown will also get into action to-day. George is to meet Jimmy Howard in a 20-round set-to at Butte, Mont. Tommy Walsh will handle Brown in this scrap.

* * *

Joe Thomas refuses to pick the winner of the White-Britton go. Joe says that both boys are great two-handed fighters and expects the mill to go the limit.

Delicia Can't Wear Silk Stockings---Guess Why

Sports and Such

THE MORE OR LESS PRIZE fight between Gunboat Smith and George Rodel, the South African Squash, in New York, the other night probably marks the close of the twilight period of the White Hopes—the most amusing bunk that has been handed a long-suffering public in many years.

In the interest of clean sport, it is an excellent thing that the attendance was large. Smith and Rodel were profusely billed as the two stars of the white heavyweights, and no one who gave up real money to see their antics will ever be guilty of the same offense again.

PRIZE FIGHTING AT ITS best is open to most any criticism that any intelligent man cares to make. At its worst it is what was delivered last Friday night.

* * *

JUDGED MERELY BY THE standard set up for the sport by those interested, the Smith-Rodel fight was without apology. They were advertised as boxers, or prize fighters, and neither understood the rudiments of his trade. You can see more skill and scientific self-defense in the average barroom fight than either of these men displayed.

* * *

INASMUCH AS NOTHING IS produced without reason, the White Hope has had his mission. It was to make money. Ostensibly the idea was that a white fighter would be developed who would wrest the championship from the black man. No one, excepting a number of men who hated work, was particularly exercised over the black guardianship of the title. Most of us, if we thought of it at all, didn't care a lot who held it. But these men insisted that there ought to be a white champion, and a part of the public took their word for it.

* * *

THEN THE MERRY PROCESsion began, and we have had it for three years—a stream of clumsy, shovel-footed, pungle-fisted, slow-witted mutts that might be serving posterity by digging irrigation canals in the West. In the shelter of ruling that barred all of the real fighters in the world—the color line—they have been paraded before us and "matched" and "eliminated."

And out of the mess we have—Gunboat Smith.

YES, GENTLE READER, GUNboat Smith has been "developed." He is the works now. He is the White Hope. He has been developed in the White Hope elimination stakes. He quit in one fight. He doesn't know enough about boxing to tell his right from his left hand. He can hit a hard punch if the other doesn't know enough to move his chin out of the way of it within the ten seconds that elapse between the time it starts and the time it lands.

But it cost about $250,000 in paid admissions to "develop" him, and we ought to be proud of him.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

A CLUB which has improved within the last month is the Chicago American League team, and it looks now as if the White Sox might creep up into the race with the Athletics, although I do not see how they can make it close because they lost so much ground at the beginning of the season. If any team is to make a fight with Connie Mack's club it must be one possessing a good pitching staff, and Callahan has the Chicago twirlers working right now.

When big Ed Walsh edges around into his true form, as he is bound to do, the strength of the staff will be increased at least one-third. Walsh is rapidly nearing his normal form.

Hal Chase appears to have helped the White Sox to a great extent, and he is playing his old-time game at first base and hitting better than he has for several seasons.

Things do not appear to be running as smoothly as they might in Cleveland, and the Naps threaten to fall back after the spectacular spurt they made in the beginning of the season. Birmingham deserves all kinds of credit for the great early season fight which his club put up, and which carried it along with the Athletics for several weeks. The great showing of the Cleveland pitchers had much to do with this, especially the return of Falkenberg to form, the man who was sent back to the minors last year as no longer of big league caliber. But Falkenberg has been failing recently, and the rest of the pitching staff has not been producing the results it was showing in the earlier stages of the race. Perhaps the Naps have merely hit the slump which is due all teams in the course of the season, but the disconcerting reports about disagreements on the club does not increase the confidence in the club to any great extent.

Lajoie is not playing regularly, and the rumors of the big leagues have it that he has had trouble with the management. Maybe it is that the great Frenchman is reaching the end of his baseball route because of age, which slows the stars. I sincerely hope not, because I hate to see the great stars go, even when they are opponents of mine. Without Lajoie in the Cleveland line-up, the batting strength of the team is greatly reduced. It was the staunch batting, combined with the pitching, which produced the excellent results in the first part of the race.

But it is even more serious if Lajoie does not think he is yet ready to be retired to the bench, since this is bound to split the club into factions, and a team cut into cliques never is a success. I hope that the Naps regain their feet and make a tough fight, because it has always been a club that I admired.

SOMETHING must be said about what Chance has done with the Yankees at this stage. Figures show he has improved the club greatly. But he had to improve the team. There was no room for him to go back any further. Up and through the tenth of May Chance had won four games and lost sixteen. Since the tenth of May he has won slightly more than one-third of his battles, and they say he smiles once in a while now. The improvement is due to the increased efficiency of the infield combined with the brace taken by the pitching staff.

It would not surprise me to see the Yankees beat out either the St. Louis or Detroit teams. They are the only two that can be passed by the New York club to my way of thinking, but watch Chance next year. He is building slowly and surely, and every man who gets a regular berth on the team for next year will know Chance baseball. The former Cub can afford to experiment this season, as he has nothing to lose.

"NO wonder Chance and Jennings are practically nervous wrecks after managing ball teams for so many years," said Tinker, the other day. "I believe I am going 'nutty' myself. Managing a tail-end club is no nerve tonic. Look at the gray hairs in my head. And when you are losing, everything breaks against you, although understand that I am not whining about the breaks. The Reds just can't seem to get together on the fine points of the game, and they are what count in big league baseball."

The work of Tinker behind the Reds is beginning to show results now, however. It filled Joe's heart with delight to trim the Cubs in the series last week because, as is well known in baseball, there is no good feeling lost between Evers and Tinker.

"If there is one club we will beat out, it is Chicago," remarked Tinker at the beginning of the season. It does not look as if he could make good on that prediction now, but he has put a lot of fight into his team, and Tinker baseball is going to do a lot for Cincinnati if they will give Joe a chance out there. The Reds should crawl out of last place this year, I believe.

ONCE more the Pirates are in trouble because Wagner's knee has crowded him out of the game, and, with Honus gone, the infield is brittle. The Pittsburg team just appeared to be recovering its balance when this latest accident befell Fred Clarke's crew. The Pittsburg catchers were beginning to recover and this was helping the pitching staff. Instead of fighting for the pennant now, the Pirates have got to put up a stubborn battle to land in the first division. It has practically narrowed down to a question of whether they can beat the Cubs, and they will have to play a lot of baseball to do it. I do not figure them to head Philadelphia, Brooklyn or the Giants now.

THERE have been reports that McGraw was attempting to trade Burns and Herzog to Cincinnati for Beecher. McGraw does not discuss his prospective deals with me, but he has an old motto which is:

"Never break up a winner."

The trade looks ridiculous on the face of it. Herzog is one of the most reliable infielders in the league, and Burns is fast becoming a great outfielder.

BALDWIN HAS EASY TIME BEATING YOUNG SHUGRUE

NEW HAVEN, CONN., July 4.—Matty Baldwin, of Boston, had the better of the fifteen-round go with Young Shugrue, of Jersey City, last night. In the third and seventh Shugrue evened things, but at no other time was the Boston boy in any danger.

JIMMY SHECKARD GOES TO CINCINNATI CLUB

CINCINNATI, July 4.—It was announced from the office of the Cincinnati baseball club to-day that the deal for James Sheckard, the St. Louis National League team outfielder, has been officially consummated. Manager Tinker refused to waive claim on Sheckard.

EMPIRE LEAGUE NOTES

Waycross has released Second Baseman Brouthers, who has signed with Americus. He plays the outfield as well as the infield, and while with Waycross led the team at the bat and in base stealing. Internal dissension is given as the reason for his release. He is a clever player and will make good wherever he plays.

While not so well pleased with the start of the season, fans in Waycross are banking on Wild Bill Clark to give Waycross a pennant winning team.

In Chancy the Americus team has an outfielder that is bound to go up. He is a steady hitter, getting two and three hits a day almost as easy as some people eat watermelon. He is fast on his feet, too, and gets many hard chances in right.

By swapping a three-game series to enable Valdosta to play at home next week for a celebration Brunswick will play six straight games in Brunswick this month with Valdosta.

In Griffin, Americus has a first baseman who makes friends wherever he goes. He is always happy—in fact, has a winning smile besides a batting eye.

Few teams in any league boast of as many reliable left-handers as the Valdosta team. Otto Jordan seems to know good men when he sees them from the kind of material his team is made up of, even if the best of them have off days once in a while.

Some idea of the class of baseball that the Empire is capable of might be found in a daily comparison with the scores of the big leagues. There is hardly a bad game played in the Empire but what a worse one is found in a higher league.

Claiming that the Americus team had thirteen men in uniform on the Waycross diamond Wednesday, Waycross has filed a protest for the first game of the double bill. President Grouver attended the game and had his attention called to the alleged violation of the 12-player rule.

No one in the Empire circuit any longer doubts that the league will be in existence next year. Plans have already been made in Cordele and one or two other cities for next year's schedule.

Practically every team in the league wants to win the race in the second half, and with this in view are making a number of changes. The race from now on is going to be a keen one and much faster baseball will be seen than ever before in the new league.

"Goat" Holliday, of Atlanta, the Empire's benedict, continues to pull off sensational plays at first. He has made a home in Waycross and can stay here as long as he pleases. "Goat's" wife is at every game to see him play and, needless to say, the youngster does even better than heretofore, which is saying a great deal.

Attendance reports continue to show that fans in the cities of this league will support good baseball. None of the cities expected to make money the first season and yet it is stated on good authority that more than one city is well ahead of the game financially and hopes to finish the season with a neat pile in the treasury. All of which sounds good for next year's season.

DIRECTORS DID NOT ASK SMITH ABOUT PITCHER

Manager Billy's Advice Was Not Sought in Purchase of "Pop-Boy" Smith.

ALTHOUGH Bill Smith, manager of the Crackers, does not know anything about the desire of the local team to get Clarence "Pop Boy" Smith, it is more than probable that the Crackers will have to do without the White Sox hurler.

According to a report from local headquarters Comiskey offered Smith to the Crackers for $2,000, under optional agreement. This was in a night letter Tuesday night. The local club accepted his proposition by wire on Wednesday morning.

Bill Smith, when called up this morning over the phone, said he knew nothing of the deal. This seems to be a queer condition of affairs, as the Cracker manager is usually notified of all deals.

Smith pitched the last four innings of the game against the Tigers on Wednesday, and held that hard-hitting crowd to one hit. This made such an impression that the White Sox decided to call off the trade.

The local club, however, is still after Smith and hopes to land him before the month is over. The Crackers are badly in need of another good twirler right now to help Conzelman, Dent, Price, Musser and Brady.

There is also a rumor going the rounds these days that everything is not running smooth between the local directors and Billy Smith. Smith's ignorance in the White Sox deal can not be accounted for, unless the directors are discouraged with several deals the Cracker manager has pulled off. There is still some talk about the way the local club has been stung in the Dent trade when they turned over $2,000 to Washington for the twirler.

BRAVES GET NEW CATCHER FROM ZANESVILLE TEAM

ZANESVILLE, O., July 4.—Catcher Walter Tragresser, of the Zanesville Inter-State League Club, has been sold to the Boston National League Club for immediate delivery. The price is unknown.

Scout Bud Sharp, of the Boston club, followed Tragresser for several days and recommended him to be purchased. His batting average is .323. He is fifth among the ten leading sluggers and tenth among the leading run-getters of the league. His pegging to bases has been superior to any catcher in the league.

GIANT WEIGHT THROWERS MAY COMPETE IN MEET

LOS ANGELES, CAL., July 4.—Mike Kiely, of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, has challenged Pat Donovan, of San Francisco, to throw the 56-pound weight for height in the coming all-around track and field meet here July 12. Kiely holds the world's intercollegiate record for heaving the pill over a bar, while Donovan holds the world's record for throwing the weight in the air, but not over a given height.

GUNBOAT SMITH WANTS GO WITH GEORGE CARPENTER

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 4.—Gunboat Smith, claimant of the world's title for heavyweight boxers, has challenged George Carpentier, the young French champion of Europe, to a 20-round contest for $5,000 a side in England, France or Belgium. If Carpentier agrees the match probably will be arranged to take place during this summer.

YANKEES OFFER EXTRA $1,000 FOR INFIELD PICK

TERRE HAUTE, IND., July 4.—The New York Americans, who bought Third Baseman Pick and Outfielder Kroy at $2,000 each for delivery at the end of the Central League season, made an offer of $1,000 additional for the immediate delivery of Pick, who is wanted at once by the Toronto club where Chance will place him. The offer will be accepted.

SULLIVAN WINS; AHEARN KNOCKS OUT BARTFIELD

BUFFALO, July 4.—Jack Twin Sullivan outpointed Barney Williams in a fast ten-round bout here last night.

Young Ahearn knocked out Soldier Bartfield in eight rounds.

Tommy Bresnahan drew with Willie Houck.

TURF RACING A LUXURY.

PARIS, July 4.—The average cost of keeping a race horse in France is placed at $1,000 a year. The total training expenses in France, not taking into account the capital invested in the various stables, is placed at $5,600,000. The total of the prizes offered is $3,600,000. Hence the owners support an annual deficit of $2,000,000.

GRAHAM WORKS HARD.

TORONTO, CANADA, July 4.—Peaches Graham stands up well under the strain of catching every day for Toronto. It will soon be six weeks since Harry Bemis was injured and Graham has been in every game played since that time. The Minnesota citizen likes work, but he knows when he has had enough.

Southern Golf Improving Fast

Qualifying Scores Tell Story

By W. R. Tichenor.

SOME weeks ago I wrote that I was of the opinion that there had been a great improvement in the golf of our Southern players in the last few years. At the time this opinion was written I had at my command but few figures to show what improvement in the game had really been made.

In the Atlanta Athletic Club, with which I am more familiar than any other, I knew that there had been a sure but steady improvement in the scores returned in club tournaments each year.

I can well remember when it was something to be proud of for a player to "break" a 90, while now there is less noise made about "breaking" an 80.

But has there been the same progress made in the other clubs of the Southern circuit as there has been in Atlanta?

While it is of course impossible for any one person to be in close touch with the individual improvement of all of th eplayers of the various clubs of the South, still if we take the average scores of the first 32 players in the qualifying round of the Southern championship as a basis—and I am sure that you will agree with me that this is a fair basis—this question must be answered in the affirmative.

MY digging up the dope of the qualifying round o fthe Southern championship in 1907 I find that the average score of the first 32 in this event was 96.28, while at Montgomery this year the average of the same number of players was 80.75, which is an improvement of nearly a stroke a hole, or, to be exact, of 15.53 strokes in six years.

This is an improvement of slightly better than two strokes a year in the average of the players who attend the Southern.

If there has been this improvement in the play of our best players, then it necessarily follows that the play of the medium players has increased equally. It is surely easier for the man who plays around 90 or 95 to cut off two or more strokes from his score than it is for the man who is down at the 80 mark.

* * *

IF you have any doubts about the progress gradually taking place, examine the following table of the average scores returned during the last seven years by the first 32 players in the qualifying round of the Southern championship, and then doubt, if you can:

	Average Score.
1907—Atlanta	96.28
1908—Memphis	86.78
1909—Memphis	86.39
1910—Atlanta	89.09
1911—Nashville	81.54
1912—Chattanooga	84.75
1913—Montgomery	80.75

The increase in the average score in 1910 over that of 1909 was, I think, due largely to the fact that the Atlanta course is at least four strokes harder than Memphis, which, when taken into consideration, really makes a slight improvement over the previous year.

* * *

THE enormous decrease in the average score in 1911 was, in a measure, due to the adamant condition of the Nashville course. At this tournament it was nothing for the first hole, which is usually a good drive and a stiff half iron, to be reached and even overran with a tee shot. Drives of 300 yards were not at all unusual for even an ordinary player, while some of the shots pulled off were almost beyond belief.

* * *

IN 1909, 1910, 1911 and 1912 the qualifying round of the Southern was 36 holes. Now, if we take the best one of the two rounds returned by the first 32 players, we will find that the average of them was as follows:

	Average Best Round.
1909—Memphis	84.15
1910—Atlanta	87.06
1911—Nashville	79.81
1912—Chattanooga	82.40

In the amateur championship of the United States at Apawamis in 1911 the average score of the first 32 players in the qualifying round was 79.5, while at Wheaton last year the average was 79.21.

Now, on the face of the scores returned it would appear that the average at Montgomery was only a stroke and a half worse than the golf played at Wheaton last year; while if we look only at the average scores made this is true. Still we must take into consideration the fact that Wheaton is a harder course to play than Montgomery, and if the Southern had been played at Wheaton instead of Montgomery the average would have been several strokes more. Then, too, there is the fact that the difference of a stroke and a half average, when it is down at the 80 mark, is a far greater difference than it appears.

But look at it from whatever angle you desire the fact remains that the last seven years has brought forth a considerable improvement in the general play of our players, and while we have not yet attained the proficiency of the Eastern and Western golfers, still the difference is not near so great as it was a few years ago.

A NEW trophy has this year been offered by Charles D. Stickney, of New York, to be contested for by the clubs, which are members of the United States Golf Association, on the Saturday before the qualifying round in the amateur championship. The competition will consist of four-ball, best-ball matches. Two players from the same club will compose each side and the best medal score returned by any pair for 18 holes will determine the winner. Under the terms of this offer a club may enter as many pairs as it desires.

This trophy is to be played for each year and is to be held for a year by the winning club, but can never be won outright. It will consist of a regulation driver made in solid silver to which will be attached every year a silver ball. On one side of this ball will be engraved the names and score of the winning pair. On the other side will be inscribed the date, the place where played and the name of the winning club. To each of the winning pair will be given a handsome gold medal.

As it is proposed to have this contest on the Saturday before the opening of the tournament, it ought to prove most interesting, and especially is this so as the Saturday before the tournament is now given over to playing of four-ball matches by the entrants.

VETERANS WIN HONORS

Grant-Thornton Cop Georgia Title

GRANT and Thornton, in their prime the greatest double tennis team of all Dixie, demonstrated that they are strong players even now by defeating Mansfield and Smith on the courts of the Piedmont Driving Club Thursday afternoon, 6-4, 11-9, 7-5. The match was started several weeks ago, but was postponed in the second set and was taken up where it was left off.

Grant and Thornton won the opening game yesterday, making the score 8-7 in their favor, but Smith and Mansfield won the next and deuced the set again. Not until a total of twenty games had been played was the set decided.

In the third set after Grant and Thornton had Smith and Mansfield 3-1, the latter won the fifth game, and with the score fifteen-forty against them in the sixth pulled up and finally won, tying the score 3 all.

The only time that Smith and Manning led in games during the afternoon was in the third set when they had their opponents 5-4, but Grant and Thornton came strong in the next game, winning it and also the next two, which gave them the game 7-5 and also the match.

Mansfield did some pretty playing, Grant and Thornton directed most of their clouts at him and he handled them well. Grant and Thornton played him almost entirely throughout the match, preferring his returns to the rifle-like shots of Smith.

In the finals in the mixed doubles Miss Stanton and Thornton won by default from Miss Muse and Carter, as Carter is playing in the tournament now going on at Augusta.

JUST A HOPE.

I hope to have the luck some day to read a sporting sheet
And fail to find some roughneck baseball guy
Has walked upon an umpire's frame
with both his heavy feet
Or poked some fellow athlete on the eye.

I hope to read a baseball yarn
wherein no low-browed gent
With pounds of solid bone beneath
his hat
Essays to break a jawbone or to register a dent
Upon his rival's coco with a bat.

We note that after some one had fractured his jaw with a wallop, Umpire McNulty retired from the game. This shows that Mr. McNulty is endowed with much intelligence.

Mr. Brennan of the Phillies put John McGraw away in less than a round, demonstrating that as a pitcher he is a great little pugilist.

We agree with Ed Smith that a belt is a hoodoo to a pugilist, especially if it lands in the region of the lower jaw.

An expert informs us that Mr. Beall used his head in a ball game. Jud Daley also uses his—as a place whereon to hang his cap.

The report that there will be 250 motorcycles in the Elgin road race leads one to suspect that said race will not smell like a garden of roses.

To Packey Mahoney of Ireland belongs the proud distinction of being the only white heavyweight pugilist Bombardier Wells can knock out.

We give the players credit when a

We cheer the noble athletics out
there working in the sun,
We cheer them as they gallop, as they

And forget the little ponies that are

Carl Morris is scheduled to perpetrate an alleged battle in Denver, showing how careless Denver is.

In addition to sizzling in the heat, Fred Clarke has to sit around and watch Tommy Leach in the act of burning up the league.

The fact that some of our citizens are heated over a polo match demonstrates how easy it is to heat some of our citizens.

"The Athletics will win in a walk," quoth Danny Murphy. Dan could have picked them to win in a crawl and still be conservative.

Having named the worst umpire in the world, it behooves Mr. Chance to tell us whom he considers the worst magnate.

It is passing strange that an athlete with a name like Eayrs should have escaped the eagle eye of Hugh Jennings.

The Boston Braves, in the act of driving Nap Rucker to cover, demonstrate that the heat affects some persons in peculiar ways.

After the Schalk deal it is hard to blame Milwaukee for declining to do business with the White Sox. Some persons have a prejudice against being stung twice in the same spot.

Jim Flynn avers that he will quit fighting after his next fracas. This will surprise those who suspected that he had quit fighting in Los Angeles some months ago.

FODDER FOR FANS

About the worst beating handed to any team this year was that which the Braves gave the Dodgers yesterday when they harvested seventeen runs and twenty hits against four runs and eleven hits for the Dodgers.

* * *

Mann, the Braves' outfielder, ambled to the plate six times yesterday, and drew a base on balls, a homer, two doubles and three singles.

* * *

Hendrix, of the Pirates, yielded ten hits to the Cardinals yesterday, but nary a Cardinal could cross the finish line, while four Pirates pattered over the pan during the combat.

* * *

A home run by Ping Bodie with Hal Chase on base enabled the White Sox to tie the score in the sixth inning, and they won out in the tenth over the Browns.

* * *

One of the reasons advanced for the numerous defeats suffered by the Yankees is that when their pitchers are pitching fine ball the batters are not batting and when the batters are batting to all portions of the lot the pitchers are weak and permit the opposition to outbat the New Yorkers. Which is a pretty substantial reason.

* * *

Otis Clymer the outfielder, has been sold by the Cubs to the Braves.

* * *

Walter Johnson, the speed king of the Senators, never gave a more remarkable exhibition of his skill and coolness in pinches than in the fifteen-inning game against the Red Sox, when he held the Bostonians runless, despite the fact that they touched him for fifteen hits, including four doubles.

* * *

Kahler was in about the best form he has shown for the Naps this season, and as a result his team was enabled to triumph, 3 to 1, over the Tigers.

* * *

The Giants whaled the Phillies for the fourth successive time yesterday, boosting their own average to .652 and shoving the one-time league leaders down to .603, only 56 points ahead of the third place Dodgers.

* * *

All four first division clubs were winners in the American League yesterday.

* * *

The Athletics had the easiest sort of a time yesterday taking the fourth straight game of the series from the Yankees.

* * *

The Athletics and Yankees have clashed sixteen times this year and the Yankees have won just one lone game. All of which makes Connie Mack quite happy when he scans the schedule sheet and finds that his white elephants are billed for a combat with the New Yorkers.

* * *

It was "Birmingham" day in Cleveland yesterday, and about 8,000 fans turned out to cheer the youthful manager of the Naps and assure him that they did not believe one word Ban Johnson said about Birmy being an incompetent.

* * *

Jackson, of the Naps, increased his leadership as an American League batsman yesterday by cracking out three hits in four times up.

FRED TONEY IS LET OUT; BACK TO LOUISVILLE CLUB

CHICAGO, ILL., July 4.—Fred Toney, heavyweight pitcher of the Cub team, was given notice of his release to the Louisville team of the American Association. The big fellow never was much of a big league success, though pitching a fair sort of game now and then. This release brings the Cubs down to the limit of twenty-five players.

JOLIET, ILL., July 4.—Packey McFarland will give exhibition bouts at Joliet prison this afternoon for the entertainment of the prisoners. He will box Kid Mack, of Joliet, and other local pugilists. Warden Allen is a friend of McFarland.

ELMER SMITH SUSPENDED.

DULUTH, MINN., July 4.—Elmer Smith, Duluth's right fielder and leading home-run getter of the Northern League, has been suspended by Manager O'Brien, who received a telegram from the secretary of the National Baseball Commission ordering such action. The Jackson club of the Southern Michigan League claims Smith.

Carter Plays Ramspeck in Finals

AUGUSTA, July 4.—The ladies' tennis championship was won here Thursday by Mrs. Johnson after three terrific sets, by a score of 7-9, 6-2, 6-3. Miss Adger's forehand drive is one that would do credit to anyone, either man or woman, and it was on the strength of this drive that she won the first set. Mrs. Johnson won the rest on her ability to cover her court and her placing.

The men's singles were carried through the semi-finals, the survivors being E. V. Carter, Jr., of Atlanta, ex-South Atlantic champion, and Carl Ramspeck, also of Atlanta and also an ex-South Atlantic States champion.

The final between these two will be played off this afternoon about 6 o'clock, and should prove one of the prettiest matches ever seen in Augusta. These two have met once before in Augusta, the event being the challenge round two years ago, when Ramspeck was champion and Carter challenger. Carter won on this occasion in straight sets on a rather wet court.

The results in the men's doubles were as follows:

First Round—Erwin brothers defeated Phinizy and Ridgeley, 6-2, 6-4.

Second Round—A. Capers and M. Kennedy defeated Ferris and Brand, 6-2, 5-7, 6-2. Hall and Parks won by default from Brinson and Branch. Waring brothers defeated Carter and Griffith, 6-3, 6-4. R. Capers and Mikell won by default from White and Bredenberg. Marrett and Gary defeated Hester and Wall, 6-4, 5-7, 6-2.

Third Round—Waring brothers defeated Hall and Parks, 6-1, 6-3, and by winning get a place in the semi-final in the top half.

The following are the results of the matches played in the consolation singles:

Second Round—Crockerson defeated Roseboro by default. Matthews defeated Harper, 6-2, 6-3. Capers defeated Wright, 6-4, 6-4. Stulb defeated Berkmire, 6-2, 6-4. Roseman defeated Sheridan, 6-1, 6-1.

The results of the mixed doubles matches are as follows:

First Round—Mrs. Milam and Reynolds defeated Miss Emily Thomas and J. K. Orr, Jr., 3-6, 6-4, 7-5. Mrs. Johnson and G. W. Waring defeated Miss Thorn and Ramspeck, 6-0, 6-1.

LOOKS BRIGHT ONCE MORE FOR CRACKER CLUB

Their Fourth Straight Victory Is One Fine Ball Game—Pennant Hopes Revive.

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE Crackers came home from their road trip looking like pennant winners. They went crazy with the stick, ran bases at will and played errorless ball.

No team has looked better here this year.

Of course any hyper-enthusiasm can be discounted two ways, to wit:

First Way—The Crackers have looked like pennant winners a score of times this season—and the next day it rained. You get the idea?

Second Way—The local team was playing against one of Dixie's saddest little teams, the puny Pelicans.

BUT after you've discounted all the notes of gloom and after you've made due allowances for everything, the Crackers still keep right on looking like a million dollars.

They not only won Thursday's game against the Pelicans, 9 to 0, but just previous to that they had won two from the league-leading Gulls and one from the powerful Billiken club. Also they just managed to lose the semi-final Billiken game by one run and a miracle.

Price pitched a positively bully game yesterday. The Crackers hammered Walker clean sideways, and the whole affair was fine.

There wasn't a sad note struck until after the game, when the current gave out and left most of the baseball cars stranded, half-way between Ponce De Leon and Atlanta. It must have clouded up out at Bull Sluice or sprinkled in Marietta.

THURSDAY'S game was illuminated by some of the most brilliant fielding that good old Ponce De Leon ever saw. The star performance by an infielder was made by McDowell. In the third, with Price on first (and he got there with hits three out of his four times up), Welchonce grounded briskly about ten feet to the right of second base. McDowell went for it, reached out, caught the ball, fell down and threw to second, all with one motion. Price was forced and McDowell sprawled all over the ground, with the ringing cheers of the Atlanta spectators in his ears.

Tommy Long absolutely discounted that. In the ninth Spencer hit a low fly to right field. It sailed, almost on a line, right smack to the right field sign boards—which are deep as the bottomless pit. How Tommy Long got back there nobody knew, but he did, made a terrific leap and plucked the pill right off the sign board. He came down all spraddled and it was not until he climbed back on his feet that the spectators realized he had held the ball.

* * *

WHEN the game was over Charley Frank strolled out to his limousine (oh, yes, he rides in 'em now) grinning. It was too awful to worry about. And surely the Pelicans would be any man's idea of nothing on earth to worry about. It's a great team, but it isn't synchronized. Nothing comes off right. They hit—but nobody is on. They cover bases—but somebody has just covered it for them. They run bases—but arrive too late. They field brilliantly at odd times—but bobble in the pinches.

However, Charley Frank may wake them up yet. He has several players on the team—and up to the time he hooked up with Cleveland he was mighty resourceful about getting players when he needed them.

CHANGES IN COLUMBUS TEAM; KREBS IS RELEASED

COLUMBUS, GA., July 4.—Changes in the line-up of the Columbus baseball team have come thick and fast in the past few days and as a result the Foxes are now claimed to be stronger than they have been at any time in recent years.

Krebs, principal backstop for Columbus for several years past, has been released outright and has joined the Jackson team. Dick Moore, who has been playing second, has been benched, and Keating is holding down the keystone bag. Connie Lewis, an old-time favorite, has joined the team again, while Morrow has been traded to Albany for Brooks.

CAPONI, EASY WINNER, FOULS FREDDIE HICKS

WINNIPEG, MANITOBA, July 4.—After going six full rounds, Freddie Hicks, of Detroit, received an unintentional foul blow from Tony Capino, of Chicago, which put a stop to their scheduled twelve-round bout here. Caponi outfought and outpointed Hicks at almost every stage of the game, Hicks only getting a shade in the second round.

Caponi almost floored his opponent in the first round, Hicks being forced to one knee.

TO make things interesting in to-night's races it has been agreed to handicap Jock McNeil and "Tex" Richards a quarter of a lap in all preliminary heats and a half-lap in all final heats. This is about the margin by which these two speedsters have been winning and it ought to make the races very close.

Preparations are being made to handle an extra large crowd to-night because of the fact that it is a holiday and that the sport lovers of the city will naturally want to top off a big day by seeing the one sporting event of the night—the motordrome races.

The amateur races will start at 8:10. Jock McNeil will ride his mile against the track record at 8:27. The regular program will begin at 8:30.

WILLIAMS TO CLAIM TITLE; M'CAREY WARNS COULON

LOS ANGELES, CAL., July 4.—Promoter McCarey has wired Johnny Coulon that if he does not come through to-day with an agreement to defend his title Kid Williams will be declared the champion of the world and will become the possessor of the McCarey belt, emblematic of the title.

McCarey wants to see an active champion at the head of the bantam division, and if he puts Williams to the front as champion it is safe to state that the Baltimore boy will be busy from now on.

Manager Sam Harris has agreed that if McCarey is willing to proclaim Williams the champion the latter will box Ledoux, Campi and Burns in the order named and then meet Coulon if the Chicago boy still wants to have a try at the title.

ENDURANCE TO DECIDE TITLE GO ANDERSON-CROSS BOUT A SLUGFEST

By Paul Armstrong.

(Famous Playwright and Fight Expert.)

LOS ANGELES, July 4.—Bud Anderson, who is to fight Leach Cross this afternoon, has been put out but once. Once and only once has he known what it means to be dropped for true. But he got it good once and that was from a horse.

Forty-some times has Anderson been matched against men, most of them demanding catch weights and taking a shade anywhere from 10 to 50 pounds, but nobody has ever done as well as the horse.

For two years, which about covers his career as a professional boxer, Bud has won about half his bouts with a knock-out, and the rest, barring a draw or two, were his on decisions. Knock-out Brown, with a wild, desperate swing, dropped and dazed him just enough to win for himself a draw, but what a lacing Brown did get next time to repay for that one swing.

George Memsic was the original discoverer of Anderson. Memsic had fought them all and, beginning to show the ravages of time and hard usage, he went hunting local favorites.

Memsic Unearthed Anderson.

The local favorite of a small but boisterous burg was Tommy Ryan's game. He wrote that stuff. The boisterous burg, once it has a favorite, will turn out to a man and bet some coin that "their boy" can at least stay with those old-timers. Ryan got rich hunting up those spots. Not so with Memsic. He started badly. He picked Anderson. On his return he called to witness and declared that this Bud Anderson had hit him harder than ever he had been hit before in his whole life. He did not know where the punch came from; he did not care.

All he wished to do was to warn people against Anderson. Of course that made Bud's road a little rougher.

And now for one minute let us toy with eugenics again. Anderson represents the last word in rearing for the rugged game. In the woods or breaking horses he has been working at rough labor all his life. Perched on a stage coach in his youth with four half-wild horses and a mountain road before him his eyes and nerves were tested to the limit. Later, when he took up the fighting game he got them at all weights and with murder in their eye. None of the mob he waded through to recognition had a bank account and frequently the little purse they fought for meant all there was in sight.

Bud Never Refused Match.

They did not mind being hurt. They did not know when they were hurt. One has only to see the left guard that Anderson has developed to know that at some time men have swung at him with all they had in the hope of finishing him then and there. But as Anderson once sat still and cold as chilled steel guiding wild horses down a mountain road, so he timed their frantic efforts at his undoing. One by one he dropped them and asked that better men come. Never has he refused a match, never has he picked. He is a real contender for the championship and every living lightweight knows it and knows it well.

Anderson has a perfect left hand, hits straight and knows how to hook. He has got a right which will drop any middleweight if he lands it fair.

But will he beat Cross? Ah, now we come to it. Buddie is short on experience. He has never fought as smart a man as Cross in his life. It's a certainty that Leach will show him many a trick.

Facts Concerning To-day's Big Fights

RITCHIE-RIVERS—Favorite, Ritchie. Odds, 10 to 7. Weight, 134 pounds. Number of rounds scheduled, 20. Arena, San Francisco.

CROSS-ANDERSON — Favorite, Anderson. Odds, 10 to 8. Weight, 133 pounds. Number of rounds scheduled, 20. Arena, Los Angeles.

BRITTON-WHITE—Betting even. Weight, Britton, about 133; White, about 127. Number of rounds scheduled, 20. Arena, New Orleans.

FERNS-DENNY—Favorite, Ferns, 10 to 9. Weight, 145 pounds. Number of rounds scheduled, 10. Arena, New Orleans.

WHITNEY-THOMAS—Betting even. Weight, 133 pounds. Number of rounds scheduled, 10. Arena, New Orleans.

BRITTON AND WHITE READY FOR BATTLE

NEW ORLEANS, July 4.—Jack Britton and Charley White are in great condition for their 20-round battle here to-day. Even money prevails with the betting contingent and thousands of dollars will change hands on the award of the referee.

White's two great victories, both knock-outs, over Joe Thomas have made him a great card here. Two weeks ago he ruled a 10 to 8 favorite. But those who have witnessed the clever Britton in action of late have spread wondrous reports about him. As a result, it is even money and take your pick this morning.

The White men figure that he may be outpointed in the early rounds, but that his stamina and great punch will surely wear Britton down in the last seven or eight rounds. Many of the White followers believe that Charley will win by a knock-out.

Britton is verily figuring on outpointing his opponent. He has been training for speed alone, and in his final work-out of four rounds yesterday he was as fast as lightning.

THOMAS VS. WHITNEY; FERNS MEETS DENNY

NEW ORLEANS, July 4.—There are two corking 10-round bouts to be staged at Joe Golden's Club to-day. In one of them Frank Whitney, of Cedar Rapids, meets Joe Thomas, of New Orleans. In the other, Young Denny, of New Orleans, mixes with Wildcat Ferns, of Chicago.

Whitney and Thomas are expected to put up a swell fight. These boys fought in Atlanta last winter. The decision was a draw. Many thought Thomas had the shade, while others figured that Whitney had proved to be the better man. To-day they will settle once and for all which is the superior boxer. The betting on the outcome is at evens.

Denny has been making a wonderful showing in New Orleans. But the fact that Ferns is the harder hitter and the veteran 10 to 9 are the odds offered, with Wildcat on the short end.

"DOYLE HITTING, GIANTS UNBEATABLE"—STALLINGS

NEW YORK, July 4.—"Larry Doyle has recovered his old form and that is why the Giants are now leading the National League," said George Stallings, manager of the Boston Braves, to-day. "Until recently Doyle was unable to hit with his usual vigor and the Giants were losing games. But they braced the moment Larry's bat began to meet the ball successfully. He is the king pin of the New York team, and now that he is himself McGraw's men can not be headed off.

"In my opinion the Giants have an edge on every other major league team in speed. It would not surprise me a bit if they defeated the American League champions in the world's series next fall."

ALBUQUERQUE, N. MEX., July 4.—With large delegations in town, interest centers in the odds on to-day's scheduled ten-round bout between Johnny Dundee, the New York featherweight, and Tommy Dixon, of Kansas City. Dundee rules a 3 to 1 favorite. The contest is scheduled to start at 3 o'clock.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 4.—In the case of the Ritchie-Rivers contest proving a long-drawn-out affair, which of the lightweights is the more likely to retain his fighting strength?

This is one of the questions undergoing discussion on the eve of the battle, and it is a very important one. Moreover, it is a hard one to answer.

When two pugilists are to meet at a certain weight, the average student tries to discover which of the pair will find it easier reaching the notch.

Every old trainer knows that a fighter is apt to lose several pounds during a trying bout, and a wise betting man must keep this in view. It is to his interest to know which of the pugilists is likely to be the more seriously affected by the sloughing off of poundage in the ring.

Weight Surely Favors Rivers.

Right off the reel one would say that Rivers is the one less likely to become weak if the contest is waged at a fast pace and goes over the fifteen-round mark. He is a pudgy fellow, and, while he has had to work to make 134 pounds, it is certain that he can box at 125 pounds if occasion demands it. This means that if Rivers loses a few pounds while battling with Ritchie, no inroads will have been made on his strength.

It may be, as it was with Ad Wolgast in his first match with Tommy Murphy, Rivers, while growing lighter, may surely be fighting himself into better condition.

Now, in the ordinary course of things one could not imagine Willie Ritchie as losing weight to his advantage while a mill was in progress. The champion is a heavy lightweight. This is shown by the fact that he demanded that the notch for the coming mill be fixed at a pound above the lightweight scale.

Came Down From 154 Pounds.

Billy Nolan says that Ritchie weighed fully 154 pounds when he began training for his championship match with Ad Wolgast. This gives an idea of what a big fellow Ritchie is "walking about."

Of course, he did not weigh anything like that when he went into camp for the present match. He had learned his lesson, and by keeping himself actively engaged during his six months of theatrical work he held himself around the 140-pound mark.

But, irrespective of what he weighed when starting out on the present training spell, Ritchie will be pretty well dried out and as lean as any one of Pharaoh's kine when he steps into the ring to-day. He will have nothing to come and go on, as is the case with Rivers.

Now, if this were an infallible line of reasoning, Ritchie's friends would have to admit that the longer the fight continued the bluer would become the outlook for Willie Ritchie. But it is not infallible.

All Depends on Endurance.

There is such a difference in ringmen that what would prove a serious disadvantage to one would mean little or no detriment to another.

And it all hinges on that innate quality—ENDURANCE.

You are particular who you have in your home. The Want Ad Man will assist you in securing refined tenants. Phone Main 8000 or Atlanta 8000.

The largest field of the season is playing to-day in the qualifying round for the President's Cup over the course of the Atlanta Athletic Club at East Lake.

Only the qualifying round will be played to-day. The match play rounds will follow shortly.

Next to the club championship and the invitation tournament this is the most important trophy of the season at the East Lake course.

The course is in excellent condition and the scores should be unusually low.

ZIMMERMAN GETS PRIZE; GOOD FOR TWO WEEKS

CHICAGO, July 4.—Heine Zimmerman, the pugnacious third sacker of the Cubs, is $100 richer to-day because he has not sassed, assaulted or assassinated even one umpire in two whole weeks.

A fortnight ago a Cub fan promised Zimmerman $100 if he would remain on his good behavior for two weeks and not be chased from the game for "run ins" with arbitrators. Heine has been a very nice young man for the past two weeks, but yesterday—the last day of the time limit—he almost forgot about the $100 when he was called out at home on a close play.

50 ATHLETES TAKING PART IN BIG MEET

FIFTY athletes, stars of Atlanta in their respective lines, are struggling this morning over the Piedmont Park track and field in the first annual Fourth of July meet under the auspices of the Atlanta Playgrounds Department.

Shortly after 9 o'clock the first field got away in the first event of the morning, the 100-yard dash, and after the winners had breasted the tape there was a scramble to rush the many events to completion.

This affair gives promise to-day of being the most successful meet of its sort ever held in Atlanta. The athletes competing are the pick of the city and some marks will be made which will be very close to the amateur records.

The great feature of the meet will be the steeplechase, which will be the last event on the program. In this event the competitors will take a good run through the park, will swim the lake and finish on the west side of the track.

THE GHOST BREAKER

By G. W. GODDARD and PAUL DICKEY

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

The scene of the story is laid in the Vanderlip Hotel, New York City. The Princess Maria Theresa of Segura, a beautiful Spanish woman, is suddenly awakened in her suite by the sound of pistol shots. She hears a man running down the hall. He crashes against her door, breaking the lock, and enters. She sees he is a tall, good-looking young man, dressed in evening clothes. He is carrying a revolver in his right hand, and blood is dripping from a wound in his left. He begs the Princess to hide him. She, moved by some indescribable impulse, decides that she will. She directs him to an inner room, and a few minutes later, when the hotel detective knocks on the door, she tells him she is all right and sends him away. The young man, who is Warren Jarvis, of Kentucky, comes out of his hiding place, and the Princess, for the first time, notices his wound. She is moved to sympathy and showers him with questions as to what has occurred. Jarvis tells her about a Kentucky feud between his family and another named Markham. He says he left Kentucky to avoid the feudists, but encountered one of them in the hotel, which explains the shots.

Now go on with the story.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

A quick shade passed over his face and he pressed his lips together.

"No, never," he declared, in a steady voice.

"You have no fear of death?"

He lifted his eyebrows slightly by way of reply.

Dona Maria moved nearer and lowered her voice to a tense undertone:

"You are—you are not afraid of ghosts?"

Some brilliant student of humanics once figured that the essential difference between a brave man and a coward is that while both are sure to be frightened the coward is panic-stricken in the presence of danger and the brave man is likely to go to pieces after the danger has passed.

Possibly this is the reason that Warren Jarvis and the Princess of Aragon could discuss so calmly their future plans when the one was a murderer in the eyes of the law, a wounded and trapped fugitive; and the other was coolly harboring a criminal to use him for her own private ends. As adventures are for the venturous, so romance is for the romantic. Both were young, both were romantic and both were fearless.

And so it was that Jarvis could smile with unaffected amusement when Dona Maria asked if he was afraid of ghosts. But Dona Maria did not smile.

"Ghosts," she repeated soberly, in response to his puzzled query. Jarvis threw back his head and laughed silently.

"After what I've been through?" he said. "No, I'm not afraid of ghosts."

Dona Maria held him with her gaze until the mirth died out of his face.

"If you escape from here," she said slowly, "it will be because I helped you. We might say I saved your life. If what you tell me is true and if I try to save your life——" she paused for an instant and then went on steadily—"it will be for a selfish motive entirely. It will be because I have work for you to do. Do you understand? Work—hard work—dangerous work! It—it may mean your life in the end," she added, and her voice faltered slightly.

A Real Peril.

Jarvis studied curiously the dark, beautiful face. He did not feel inclined to laugh now. He felt that there was something deadly serious back of this child's talk of ghosts. Whatever the service might be that she demanded of him it was certain that she believed the peril it entailed to be really active.

"You are frank, anyway," he remarked.

"It's a chance," she reminded him.

There was a certain medieval brutality about this last suggestion that completely won him. Indeed, it never occurred to either that there was any true moral obliquity in their attitude or actions. When Jarvis drew his pistol and shot his man to death there burned in his bosom as pure a flame of fanatical belief in the justice of his cause as that which steeled the lance point of the Red Cross Knight. And in the same spirit Dona Maria would swear him to her service and send him to a possible death. He smiled at the thought.

JARVIS SWEARS TO GET THE GHOST

"Kneel then, Warren of Jarvis," she commanded, "and repeat this oath."

"And my reward?"

"—— is your life," she replied instantly.

Jarvis again burst into a short silent laugh. "Well, that's something. And if I agree——?"

"You will begin by taking the ancient feudal oath of my country," said Dona Maria, gravely.

"Oath?" exclaimed Jarvis. "Isn't my word enough?"

The Princess waved her hand in a truly royal manner.

"You will pardon me if I insist."

The young man smiled and shrugged his shoulders. "Very well. If it pleases you, I'll swear the blackest oath you can utter. Let's hear it."

However lightly he might take it, the ceremony held nothing of the mirthful for Dona Maria. As solemnly as if feudalism had not long ago been reduced to a show of pomp to please those whom it amused, she asked his name.

"Jarvis," he told her.

"Your full name?"

"Warren Jarvis."

Royally Dona Maria pointed to the rug at her feet.

"Kneel, then, Warren Jarvis," she commanded, "and repeat this oath."

He Kneels.

"Oh, come, now," he objected, sheepishly—but Dona Maria only looked and pointed. At last he grinned and began to get down first with one knee and then the other, and finally came down awkwardly with both at once. It was distinctly ungraceful and against the best forms of feudal ceremony. Dona Maria was embarrassed.

"No! not that way," she said hastily. "On one knee. Ah! That is better. Now, repeat after me—'I, Warren of Jarvis' "——

"I, Warren of Jarvis," repeated the young man, with mock solemnity, though he was not insensible to the romantic charm of the ceremony.

"'Senor of all the domains, fiefs, keeps and marches of Warren of Kentucky' "—

"Whew!" He thought of what the boys around the Galt House would say of these "fiefs and marches," but he obeyed.

"Senor of all the domains, fiefs, keeps and marches of Warren of Kentucky' "—

"'Do convey to Maria Theresa, of Aragon, all my worldly titles and possessions' "——

"Sounds like I was marrying her," he muttered. "'Do convey to Maria Theresa, of Aragon, all my worldly titles and possessions' "——

"Now, take my left hand in both of yours," ordered Dona Maria. He obeyed with wonderful enthusiasm and felt that he was going to like the oath more and more as it progressed.

"'And receive them back as vassal and retainer and to faithfully fight in my lady's cause, according to the feudal laws of Castile and Aragon. So help me God, Our Lady and St. James!' "

Jarvis looked up into the glowing face and shining eyes as she repeated the solemn closing words of the oath and a swift change came over him as the soft hand that he held in both his had carried some thrilling current from her soul to his. He felt somewhat like the scoffer who strolls into a church and is humbled by the simple faith he sees about him. There was no mockery in his voice and little in his heart when he repeated them after her. And the kiss that he pressed on the back of her hand when she said, "Arise, vassal," was wholly sincere.

Confused.

She drew back quickly, for the first time confused.

"That is part of the ceremony," she admitted, in a small voice, "but I meant to omit it."

So the serious moment passed. "It seemed the only sensible part," he laughed. "But who on earth is this Maria Theresa that I am hired man to?"

Dona Maria straightened her slender figure and drew the folds of her dressing gown more closely about her.

"I," she said, with the dignity of a queen, "am Her Supreme Highness, Maria Theresa of Segura, Princess of Aragon."

Jarvis' jaw did not drop, because it was not that kind of a jaw, but he was enough of a democrat to be sufficiently impressed.

"Good Lord!" he groaned, after a short season of speechlessness. "A princess!—and I've been ordering you around with a gun!"

"Never mind that now," his liege lady ordered lightly, mollified by her vassal's appreciation of her position; "you will be properly punished, my vassal. There are dungeons in my castle."

"Sh—h!" cautioned Jarvis quickly. There was a sound of swift footsteps in the hall. They passed the door and died away, but the incident brought them back to a consideration of the present situation.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Very True.

She—Anyhow, you must admit he is a well-bred man. Did you notice his knowledge of Ruskin?

He—I did, and if you want my candid opinion, I don't believe he's ever been there.

It's Up to the Judges Now

"The Triple Tie" Contest Came to an End at Noon Yesterday

Noon yesterday was the time limit fixed for the close of "The Triple Tie" contest and up to that hour many contributions were received. Some of them came by special delivery. Some of the packages were bulky, others small, but if one may be permitted to judge from exterior looks, all those who tried a hand at writing a logical conclusion for the great baseball story were very much in earnest.

All the contributions will be turned over to the three judges, as announced, and it will be up to these disinterested persons to go through the mass of replies and indicate those which they consider the best.

On Monday we shall continue the publication of "The Triple Tie," giving the ending of this remarkable serial just as Mr. Mitchell, the author, wrote it. We regard "The Triple Tie" as one of the most interesting stories ever published by The Georgian. Much of its appeal lay in the fact that it contained local color in generous measure.

The Way of a Man

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

ONE who signs herself "Broken Hearted," and who I am sure isn't, writes me as follows:

"I am keeping company with a young man and like him very much, but he doesn't show his love for me as I do for him. Every time he comes to see me he sits in a chair reading a book. Do you think I should continue keeping company with him?"

My dear, you love him; you want him to love you, and you want to become his wife. Isn't that so? Yet you rebel against the attention he gives you, and which is the kind you will always receive as his wife. He will always "Sit in a chair reading a book." In that manner is every wife in the world entertained.

This is the husband-like treatment, and not the lover-like. He gives you the treatment a husband gives his wife for the reason that you have let him see "you are already won!" You say he doesn't show his love for you as "you do for him." Of course not. A man is naturally a lazy animal and makes no effort that is unnecessary. An effort to win your love is unnecessary.

When a man goes courting he makes the effort of a man catching a street car. After he has caught the car he seats himself comfortably and begins to read his newspaper. No further effort is necessary, so why make it? This man has won your love; you have made him as sure of it as he is sure he has caught the car when his feet are on the steps. Naturally, the next thing he does is to sit down and rest.

I do not blame him. Really, sometimes when I see the way girls lay their hearts at the feet of men, so often without any solicitation from the men, I wonder that courting stays in fashion.

I wonder that men spend their money on flowers, books, candy, theater tickets and for little outings, all to win the love of a girl, when so many girls seem to stand ready with their love in their hands, begging the acceptance of it by any man who looks their way.

I wonder that men prize a girl's love as highly as they do, remembering it was so lightly won.

Get the book habit. Never again tell him you love him. Never nag because he reads, but, rather, encourage him, letting him see that you would rather he read than bore you by talking.

You have given him the impression that he is sure of you. Efface that impression, but efface it so gently he will never know just when the process of obliteration began. Let him realize that your heart doesn't hang on a low branch, ready to drop into his hand if he will outstretch it; give him to know it grows higher up and that he must climb for it.

I am quite sure if you go about it with discretion he will close his book till you are his wife.

And then make up your mind to this and accept it as inevitable, how he will read to make up for lost time!

Men and the Cook Stove .:. .:. .:. By Dorothy Dix

IT is announced that nine young men students at Cornell University this year registered in the domestic science department and took cooking lessons.

This is glad news on many accounts. For one thing, it opens up to men a lucrative occupation, for there are few professions so well paid as that of the expert cook, and it is a pity that more American boys do not fit themselves to fill it, instead of compelling us to send abroad for a French chef whenever we want a culinary artist.

But whether a man intends to be a professional cook or not, it's a good thing for him to learn at least the rudiments of domestic science if for no other reason than because it establishes a common bond of interest and sympathy between him and his wife when he gets married.

Undoubtedly one of the chief reasons why marriage is a failure is because the average man and woman in this country lead such distinct and separate lives, and have so little knowledge of the problems with which each has to grapple, and I am persuaded that nothing would do more to promote domestic felicity than for every boy before he is married to have served an apprenticeship in the kitchen, and every girl to have done a couple of years' work in a business office.

Certainly the man who knows something practical about cooking, who has wrestled with the frying pan, and been up against the pots and the kettles will be able to extend a heart-to-heart comprehension to his wife when the steak is tough, and the potatoes watery, of which the unculinary, half-baked husband is utterly incapable.

What Dickens Says.

Dickens says, in one of his stories that no educated man ever looks at even the back of a book in the way that an ignorant person does, and precisely the same thing applies to housekeeping. The man whose whole experience in cooking consists in offering gratuitous criticism every time anything is overdone or underdone can never behold a dinner with the same exquisite perception of all the time and labor and worry it took to produce it that the man will show who knows from personal experience of the deceitfulness of butchers' meat and the iniquity of the gas range.

As it is now, the household critic has nothing but contemptuous pity for the female intellect that can not manage two servants without getting gray and wrinkled in the process, while he bosses half a hundred employees without turning a hair. The man who has been through the domestic mill on his own account will never speak in that tone of voice to his wife.

He will know, from experience, that no rules that apply to other labor have any bearing on the servant girl question. Like the wind, she cometh and she goeth as she listeth, and no man or woman knows when or for how long she is going to list. Neither will this paragon of a husband make unfavorable comments on the culinary products of Hilda and Mary Jane. He will eat what is set before him, asking no questions for sympathy sake, and reflecting when things go wrong that he would get no better results in his own affairs if he had to depend for his help on those who neither wanted to learn their business nor desired to keep their places.

A Difference.

And just as it is a good thing for men to learn to cook, it is also well for a woman to have had the actual experience of earning her own living before she is married.

No woman who has ever earned a dollar looks at one as does the woman who has always had her spending money given her. To the one it means something that comes easy and goes easy. To the other it represents toil and weariness, sometimes the very life blood of a person. She knows how hard it is to win, how hard to keep, and the anxiety and humiliation it means to be without it, and she spends it prudently and judiciously.

The woman who has never earned her own living thinks that business is a picnic, and that when a man goes downtown of a morning he departs to enjoy himself with his friends. No woman who has stood behind the counter, or bent over a typewriter and taken part in the daily grind of business cherishes any illusions about its being fun. She knows it for the heart wearing, nerve wrecking thing it is, and her comprehension of its trials keeps her from inflicting on her husband many of the unconscious cruelties that the woman who is totally ignorant of business practices upon her suffering spouse.

Also the business woman remembers how, when she came home at night exhausted and with nerves fretted to fiddle strings, it seemed to her that just one more calamity would strain things to the breaking point. You may be sure that such a woman never meets a weary man at the front door with a catalogue of everything that has gone wrong in the house during the day. Neither does she expect a man with weighty affairs on his mind, and whose time is money, to stop downtown to match samples, or hunt through a department store for a spool of elephant breath silk thread.

What we need is a common plane of mutual helpfulness and understanding on which the sexes can meet. Men and women should know the trials and tribulations under which each labors in order to sympathize with them. It's because men have never done women's work that they think that cooking and sewing and mending and baby tending is a job so easy that a woman could do it with one hand tied behind her. It is because women have never had to get up, sick or well, and go down town to work that they think that a man's business is a cinch.

It is because men have never had to ask for every cent they spend that they do not realize how humiliating it is to a woman to have no personal income of her own. It is because few women care to smoke that the average wife nags her husband about scenting up the parlor curtains with tobacco.

With personal knowledge of the difficulties of the situation will come sympathy and toleration. So the man who can cook, and the woman who has kept books will meet on a common plane of mutual good will that will make matrimony a success instead of the failure it so often is through the sheer inability of husband or wife to comprehend the difficulties the other faces.

Injun Giver.

Robbie met a neighbor who was smoking some fine, fragrant tobacco sent by his son in America. He took out his own pipe ostentatiously.

"Have you a match, Sandy?" he queried.

The match was forthcoming, but nothing more.

"I do believe," said Robbie, "I hae left ma tobacco at hame."

"Then," said Sandy, after a silence, "ye micht gie ma back ma match."

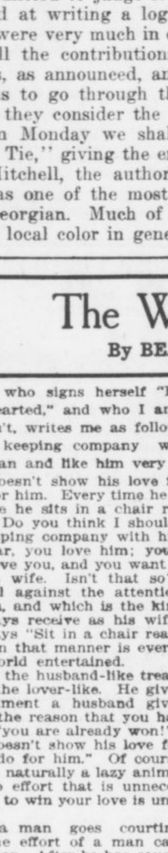
How Strict Are You with Your Daughter?



—answer it, parents. Are you too strict, or aren't you strict enough? Either course is liable to be disastrous. Your daughter's welfare means as much to you as anything else in the world, yet do you know what to watch in bringing her up.

There are few men who know the problem as Judge Freschi does. For years a magistrate in the City of New York, his work has brought him into personal contact with thousands of girls and their stories. He has had an opportunity to analyze the causes of their failure. His name has become known throughout the country as their benefactor.

Woman's Proper Place

By DOROTHY DIX.

EVERY few days I get a letter from some man who emits a wild and heartbroken wail because, he says, woman has gotten out of her proper place. Many of these melancholy gentlemen go so far as to express the further opinion that it is the business of the press to try to shoo the feminine sex back to where it belongs.

Speaking for myself, I should gladly use what little influence I have with women in trying to corral them in their own particular little stockade if I only knew where that sacred spot was.

What is woman's proper place, anyhow? Will some wise brother please arise in meeting and speak right out and tell us?

Is woman's proper place the home? None of us deny it, and the great majority of women will answer the call in person if you ring their front door bell.

A Foolish Waste.

But what about the tens of thousands of women who have no home in which to stay, whom no man asked to marry them, and who are fated to never know the cling of little children's arms about their necks? It is all right to say, "Back to the home for yours, sister," to the woman who has got a good husband, and babies, and a cottage or a flat of her own, but how are you going to keep women in the domestic sphere who have neither a kitchen, nor a nursery, nor a man of their own? I give it up.

Is the woman who paints pictures, or writes, or acts out of her proper place? I take it that when the good God put talent into a woman's head that He knew what He was about, and that He intended her to use the gifts He gave her. Otherwise it would be a foolish waste of valuable material.

Certainly we should all be much poorer if there had been no Rosa Bonheurs, no George Eliots, no Charlotte Brontes, no Mrs. Humphry Wards, none of the thousand delicate and facile female pens that delight and entertain us every day of our lives.

Is Maude Adams out of her sphere when she makes us cry? Is Rose Stahl out of her sphere when she makes laugh? Are Melba and Tetrazzini and Cavallieri out of their places when they lift us up to the seventh heaven with their voices? Yet all of these women occupy conspicuous places and are very much in public.

A Question.

Evidently the men who complain of women being out of their proper places are thinking about the business women. Is a clever, strong, healthy young girl out of her place when she goes to work to support herself instead of sitting down idly at home and adding to the burden of a poor, weary, hump-shouldered old father, who has toiled like a dray horse to raise his family and has come almost to the end of his strength?

Are the girls of a family who have good business positions and who bring their money home to make an old mother comfortable and educate younger brothers and sisters out of their places during working hours?

Is the woman who is married to a man whose health fails out of her place because she puts her shoulder to the wheel and helps the domestic wagon out of the ditch instead of letting it sink down into the mire?

If you ask my opinion, I think that every woman who needs money for herself, or for her family, is exactly where she ought to be when she is earning it by her honest work. If the men of her family can't support her, there is no reason why she should not support herself, and help them, too, if they need it. For my part, I have never been able to see why it isn't just as feminine a thing, and as much in her line of duty, for a woman to be a prop to a man as it is to be a millstone about his neck.

Is woman out of her place when she belongs to clubs? Isn't it woman's place to add to the sweetness and light of life, and haven't the women's clubs done more toward fostering the higher education, beautifying towns, supporting art galleries and picture shows, and giving the country a general esthetic uplift, than all other causes combined?

Is the woman of wealth, and intelligence, and leisure out of her place when she devotes her energies to public reforms and charities? Where else would we look for our great philanthropies? Who would raise the money for our hospitals, for our fresh-air funds, for our tuberculosis camps, for our societies for the prevention of cruelty to animals? There is not a community in this country that hasn't some old maid or childless widow who is its good Samaritan, and nobody accuses her of being out of her proper sphere, except the evildoers on whose corns she treads.

Out of Place?

There are those who contend that a woman is out of her proper place—oh, millions of miles out of it—when she takes an interest in politics and wants to vote. Why? Has she not as much at stake in the country as any man? Does she not pay as many taxes? Is she not affected by the laws just as men are? If food prices advance, does not the burden of making the family income go further fall upon her? If the streets are dirty and the water supply impure, does she not have to nurse her sick, because of it, and if they die, is not her heart broken over their loss even more than any man's? How can she be out of her place when considering the questions that are most vital to her?

The truth is, there is no place in all the wide world that is not woman's place. First at the cradle and last at the tomb, she pillows man's head in infancy on her breast, and kisses shut his eyes when he dies, and there is no hope, no joy, no struggle, no labor, no victory, no defeat in his life in which her place is not always by his side.

It is idle to talk about sending woman back to her place. The earth is hers, and the fullness thereof, just as much as it is a man's.

The Divorce Question

By JERE R. COOKE.

(It may be asked why I, of all men, should write upon questions affecting marriage and other relations. In reply, I would say that one who has gone through what I have, suffered as much as I have, and seen so much of the world and its hard side may possibly have something to say that will be of use to others. I hope so at least.—JERE COOKE.)

A WOMAN recently gave the reason why she desired a divorce from her husband as "so they may cultivate a beautiful friendship."

It goes without saying that it is easier to be a friend than a helpmeet, but to sacrifice the one for the other is to barter the real jewel for the past brilliant. There can be no harmony among such people.

No sympathy, whether he be called by the sacred name of helpmeet or the uncertain cognomen of friend.

The best friend a man can have is his wife, and marriage is the mold into which the highest friendship is poured.

The true secret of success in marriage is that the wife is the best friend or chum or "pal" her husband has. Why shouldn't she be? She shares his sorrows; why not his joys?

It is not an uncommon thing that the man weds the sweetheart of his childhood, the playmate of his boyish days, when, hand in hand, they roamed together and no boy chum could tear them apart.

Puppy love is supplanted by the great transcendental love that cements a life-long intimate friendship. A great man proved his appreciation of this and his desire for its continuance by replying, when asked the question what one thing he would most desire should he have to depart this life, "My wife's second husband."

Three Reasons.

He was not like the man who, being asked how many times he was married, replied:

"Three times. Once for love and twice for general housework."

Pity the poor woman who slaves for her husband, only to die of hard labor and leave her savings to his second wife.

A woman who was ill-mated once complained, "My friend is so much more sympathetic than my husband. He is so considerate, so kind."

It afterward developed that this friend grew weary of his attentions in a much shorter time than the husband. Comparisons are always fatal.

The man who holds his tired, hard-working wife in comparison to the painted woman he meets upon the street always loses. Poverty is one curse of domestic infelicity, but the wife who can share it with her husband has found the marriage goal. There is an argument for incompatibility which does not extend to the statutory ground.

No woman should be compelled to spend her earthly existence with a brute, an inebriate, or a libertine, and no man should be forced to abide with a woman who has dropped from her pinnacle as a helpmeet to a nag or a shrew.

An unwise man once attempted to cure his wrangling wife by breaking a piece of the best china at every one of these spells. It was expensive and not effective.

Another friend, with more success, used to call in a doctor every time hysteria developed. The patient improved rapidly.

A seemingly unending wrangle can, by diplomatic treatment, terminate, as a mob of violence is quelled by the cold water of the firemen, rather than by the bullets of the police.

Called a Brute.

The social animal man is sometimes called a brute, and frequently is a brute.

He thinks he knows it all and wants to be the head and boss of the house.

No woman who is a pal to her husband need ever fear any other woman. Her husband will not join another lodge so that he can get one more night out a week.

If the "other woman" gets him she is a better pal to him. She jollies rather than scolds, she laughs and does not cry, she is a good sport, she gets his money, and she has a good time.

If he is as old as Methuselah she calls him a "boy." He likes it and spends his cash.

Few men are natural pikers with their chums. They take a certain pride in playing the limit.

The woman with the harnessed lap dog gives out a suspicion that she is no longer a "pal" to her husband. She has the dog in leash, but there are no strings on the man. "To have and to hold" each other's hearts.

It is not so much that they live together as that they love each other.

The two lives who hope, fear, plan, play, enjoy, suffer, deny, possess, work and win together need no divorce court to adjust their difficulties.

They are united in life and in death they are not divided.

Do You Know---

The Prussian Guards, whom King George and the German Emperor reviewed recently, were originated by Frederick I, whose ambition it was to form a royal bodyguard of giants. Every country was ransacked by his agents to supply recruits, and no head that towered above the crowd, even in the bazaars of Aleppo or Cairo, could escape the crimps of the Prussian King. The most extravagant sums were offered to men of exceptional inches, an Irishmen, more than seven feet high, who was picked up by the Prussian Ambassador in London, receiving a bounty of $6,000.

Should the United States purchase from Mexico 250,000 square miles of Mexico for $30,000,000 it will not be the first addition by purchase to the great American Commonwealth. A century ago Napoleon I relinquished France's claim to Louisiana and Arkansas for $15,000,000, and in 1867 Russia exchanged Alaska for a cash payment by the United States of $7,000,000. More recently a strip of Central America, embracing five miles on either side of the Panama Canal, was purchased for $10,000,000 from the Republic of Panama.

Nothing is more amusing than to watch on a winter's day the marvelous intelligence with which the pigeons of St. Mark's, in Venice, can discriminate between residents and visitors in the grand square of that city, the Plaza of St. Mark. The moment a foreigner shows his face in the plaza the pigeons set upon him in crowds, hoping to be fed. They do not trouble the natives, who may be sunning themselves by the hundred in the square.

Daysey Mayme's July 4

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

THE call had read "Ladies Not Admitted," and while a crowd of little girls stood outside pouting, crying and even kicking on the closed door in the modern, ladylike way of expressing opposition, a band of grave-faced little men in blouse and bib held serious deliberation on the inside.

"We are assembled," said President Chauncey Devere Appleton, "to utter protest against the parentally expurgated plan of a Fourth of July. We are here to make public our opinion of any parent who would have children spend the Fourth as if the corpse of Freedom lay shrouded in the next room."

A Riot.

Every delegate was on his feet at once; there were motions, countermotions, protests, howls and hisses, a confusion that was augmented by the discovery that the ladies on the outside were peeking through the keyhole. After the president had put the seal of secrecy on the proceedings by closing the keyhole with a borrowed piece of chewing gum, order was restored, and the following resolutions were adopted:

"That life is not what it used to be when a boy could put a cannon cracker under a maiden aunt's chair and gorge himself with ice cream while the family were bringing her to;

"That unless a boy has a chance to make himself look like a bursted firecracker, there is no way for him to become distinguished, and mothers have no right to monopolize all the surgical operations;

"That if this demand for everything noiseless isn't checked soon, mothers will be refusing the boy babies the doctors bring them because they are not equipped with rubber tires;

"That girls are ideal creatures because they are happy with dolls, and the only noise in playing with a doll is a squeak that is squeaked out the first day;

What Father Did.

"That mothers place too much stress on boys getting their hands shot off, considering that they never look at their sons' hands without screaming out that they need washing;

"That father used cannon crackers when he was young, and still has hands left to spank us."

The discovery that the ladies on the outside had used the eternal feminine weapon of defense in boring a hole through the seal of secrecy broke up the meeting, and the gentlemen poured out and the ladies poured in, in wild confusion.

Why He Left.

A dispute once arose between a landlord and his tenant. The latter had given notice to quit, but would not put a bill in his window to say that his house was "To Be Let."

To make matters worse, they went to law about it. The judge, having heard the case, made an order for the defendant to put a bill up within fourteen days.

The landlord was so overjoyed at his victory that on the fourteenth day he took a friend with him around to the house to chaff his tenant. The bill was up in the window plain enough, but under it was another bill, which ran as follows:

"Cause of leaving—bad drains."

Superfluous Hair Truths

Stop Experimenting

There are but few depilatories sold. You think there are hundreds because you have used the same identical preparations under several different names. This is easily explained. Women stop using

So-Called Hair Removers

when they learn that they are harmful. Therefore, they can not be sold under the same name for any length of time. Then the identical, worthless, harmful concoctions are given new names and advertised again as totally different preparations to who innocently buy them over and over again under different names, and this will continue as long as women are so unwise as to experiment with unknown, so-called hair removers.

Defraud the Same Foolish Women

DeMiracle

Has Stood the Test of Time

De Miracle has been sold as De Miracle for over eleven years, and its name has never been changed. It is acknowledged the world over by eminent authorities as the one safe, perfected hair remover, therefore it is the only depilatory you can use without experimenting.

Leaves No Tell-Tale Smell

If you use De Miracle it will be impossible for any curious person to know that you have used a hair remover because De Miracle evaporates immediately after accomplishing its work, therefore leaves no odor whatever. On the other hand, if you use any depilatory with a distinctive odor, an offensive, tell-tale smell will cling to your skin for hours.

Avoid Permanent Disfigurement

by refusing substitutes. If your dealer will not supply you send $1.00 direct. Free information how to determine which depilatories are harmful and worthless sent in plain, sealed envelope.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DON'T BE DISCOURAGED.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 18 and am employed by one of the largest railroads in the East.

I have been keeping steady company with a young lady two years my senior and visit this girl about two or three times a week. I asked her to become my wife and she told me I would have to get her father's consent. I had a conference with her father, and the only opposition he has to our marriage is that I am too short. I am 5 feet 3 inches and receive a good salary. Would you advise me to discontinue my attentions to this girl or continue to keep company with her, in the hope that her father will see the folly of his ways and consent to our marriage? GEORGE W.

If her father's objections are based solely on your height, I am sure that in time he will withdraw them.

You need time for a more important reason: If your stature were all that is desired, your age is not. Trust me in this, my boy—no boy at 18 is old enough to select a wife. For your own sake, be glad to wait.

IT WILL BE A GOOD LOSS.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

young man two years my senior,

I am deeply in love with a and we have been keeping company for the past nine months, but lately at a party to which he had taken me he met a girl and took her home. I wrote him the next day asking him if I had done anything to offend him. I have not received an answer. Should I write to him again, as I would not like to lose him? C. V. M.

He treated you most rudely, and you would show a finer spirit if you resented it and refused to see him again. Do not write, and make up your mind to this: The best thing that can happen to a girl is to "lose" an escort who is not a gentleman, for such a one behaves much worse after marriage.

DON'T CALL AGAIN.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 19 and very popular. Lately I received word from a young man who used to call on me pretty steady that he would like to have me call him on the telephone. I was informed he was not in, and, as he is a traveling salesman, I believed this, but called a few days later only to be told the same story; this time leaving my name saying he should call me up. Now, as the young man who received my message is also a good friend of mine, and spoke quite confidential to me on the phone, also telling me that the other young man is just jollying me along, I am in doubt as to what course to pursue.

BABE.

You should not have called in the first place, and your second effort does not speak much for your dignity.

The young man, my dear, who is worth having will always take the initiative. He will always make every effort to communicate with the girl he loves, and ask only that she be pleased at his overtures.

Preparing Her.

Farmer Wayback (starting home from the station)—"Please, ma'am, do you wear false teeth?"

Fair Boarder (for summer)—"Sir?"

Farmer Wayback—"Oh, I don't mean to be curious. Only this road is a leetle rough, and ef your teeth ain't good and fast you'd better put 'em in your pocket."

On Independence Day

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

THE hour: Nine in the evening. The day: The Fourth of July. The year: That is immaterial, since the story told that night is always young. The personnel: A young man of 24 and a girl of 19.

The scene: A secluded corner of a porch step. Around this young man and woman were other young men and women who were showing their patriotism with firecrackers, torpedoes, skyrockets and other illuminating and noisy means. There was a momentary darkness. The last skyrocket had proved a fizzle and there was some delay in starting another. Under cover of the darkness, and unheard by the others in their merriment, the young man whispered in the girl's ear, "I love you," and she replied "And I love you."

First Avowal.

It was their first avowal of affection, and some years later, the girl, who had become a matron, sighed and said: "You know I lost my independence on Independence Day."

Every one who loves and is loved loses a measure of independence, and this woman was such a clinging, helpless creature, that she lost all she had. Perhaps that was because she heard her little love story in a day when girls were taught that to be happy sweethearts and wives they must be long-suffering and submissive.

She made no reservation of her affection, and their courtship proved a stormy one. He flirted, there was coolness, heat, anger, love, indifference, impatience, cruelty or kindness personified as the mood suited him. Through every change in him she remained the same patient, grateful, loving girl, always with arms outstretched to welcome him when he deigned to turn her way.

No Nation Free.

She put herself beneath his feet in her excessive humility, and after they were married he saw to it that she remained there. She had put her own pricemark on herself. We all do. He looked at the mark, and saw that it resembled the tag Public Opinion put many centuries ago on the worm.

There is an independence of nations, and an independence of individuals, and the former depends on the latter. No nation is free if its citizens are bound.

The men are independent and free. The women are gradually achieving an independence that will give them every right enjoyed by the men.

It is a great thing, but not enough. I want an independence for every girl who loves, and which she, and she alone, must secure.

I want her to hold her little head and heart high, and give her love and life to no man who will treat them lightly.

I want her, when she says "I love you," to add, "but my happiness, my usefulness, my well-being, do not depend on becoming the wife of any man."

Then he will love her, appreciate her and want her all the more.

Inference Obvious.

Knickerbockered and resplendent in dazzling tartan stockings, Algernon sauntered from the clubhouse to the golf links; and there, on the first tee, having carefully adjusted his monocle and "addressed" the ball for a prodigious length of time, began his game.

"By the way, caddie," he remarked pleasantly, "what sort of a game does Mr. McJones play?"

The diminutive young Scotchman screwed up his weather-beaten face.

"Mr. McJones? He canna play at all."

"Ah!" said Algernon. "You see, I'm playing a match with him tomorrow. Suppose I shall beat him easily—what?"

The caddie shook his head wisely.

"Na," he replied; "that ye will not."

Adding Fuel to Flame.

A quarrelsome couple, having exhausted many subjects, came to discussing tombstones, and the husband asked:

"My dear, what kind of stone do you suppose they will give me when I die?"

"Brimstone," was the reply.

In your hand you hold a five-cent piece.

Right at the grocer's hand is a moisture-proof package of Uneeda Biscuit. He hands you the package—you hand him the coin. A trifling transaction?

No! A remarkable one—for you have spent the smallest sum that will buy a package of good food; and the grocer has sold you the most nutritious food made from flour—as clean and crisp and delicious as it was when it came from the oven.

As Easy To Keep The Hair From Turning Gray As To Keep The Scalp Clean

AND there is no reason in the world why you should hesitate to restore to your hair its lost color and vitality, if it is fading and turning gray, any more than that you should foolishly refuse to use a remedy for dandruff or any other scalp trouble.

Sickness, nervousness, impoverished blood or deficient scalp nutrition may cause premature grayness; sometimes it is inherited. Whatever the cause, gray hair adds from 10 to 20 years to the age, and a young woman, even 25 or 30, with very gray hair is passed as old.

Robinnaire Hair Dye is a pure tonic restorative to bring back to faded or gray hair its own original color and lost beauty. It is not to bleach or change the original color, and should not be confused with such. It is prepared in our own laboratory from a formula we know to be beneficial, and we guarantee it to be non-injurious. It keeps the hair soft, lustrous and in its beautiful, natural color, and as it does not stain the scalp cannot be detected. Prepared for light, medium and dark brown and black hair and is for sale at druggists and toilet goods departments. 75c. By parcel post, 83c.

Poultry, Pet and Live Stock

Feather-Eating Is Largely Caused By Crowded Runs

Soft-Shell Eggs Due to Various Things—Remember Value of Meat In Some Form.

Edited by JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL.

Feather-eating is largely caused by crowded runs, with nothing to induce the fowls to exercise. They bolt their food and then stand around ready for mischief. The careless owner will usually let lice and mites get the start of him on the poultry; they lay eggs upon the stem of the feather around the vent. They irritate the parts and in their endeavors to rid themselves of them they get a taste of the sap, or at times, blood, in the stem of the new feathers; this causes them to continue their investigation. Other hens see what's going on and are soon helping in the removing of feathers, until it is soon a flock of feather eaters. The skin is bare and red, and sometimes the work is carried still further and they get to picking the raw flesh until it is raw and sore. The remedy is to feed lightly of a well-balanced ration and make them dig for every bit they get. Feed some fresh cut bone or raw meat, if possible. Clean them of all lice and mites and put them in the pink of condition, and there will be little excuse for such work. The leaders or worst ones at the business can be very materially checked by taking a sharp pocket knife and trimming the sharp point or curve of the upper madible or beak. They are then unable to pick so easily.

Many soft-shelled eggs are layed at this time of the year, due to various causes. Many of us are so eager for all the eggs that we can get that we push our hens for all they are worth, feeding rich mashes and adding egg producers at all times, most of which contain stimulants of various kinds. Heavy mash feeding tends to produce fat, especially on the two-year-old hens; over-fat hens often lay soft-shelled eggs.

Where your hens have this soft-egg tendency, let up on the soft feed to a certain extent at least and feed more of the dry grain with a good supply of green stuff, and do not forget to supply the oyster shell.

Bowel troubles of all kinds are usually caused by feeding sloppy or sour feed. Filthy quarters and exposure to sudden changes of the weather will affect the little ones very quickly. Often a lack of good clean grains, both in the shape of cracked grains and dry mashes. When the trouble has already appeared it is best handled by feeding well-cooked rice, dry bread or cracker crumbs soaked in hot milk. As soon as an improvement is noticed alternate the rice and bread and milk with other things. Keep the little ones warm when the weather changes to cold, and furnish shade for them in very hot times.

Remember the value of meat in some form for growing chicks, as well as to the laying hens. The cheapest shape to furnish it is in fresh cut green bone. Buy a good cutter, one that will do the work in a workmanlike manner, fasten it up somewhere so that it will be perfectly solid, and it will be but little trouble to operate. You can usually get the bones and scraps fresh from the market. They will save them for you by paying them a little each time, amounting to a quarter or a half-cent per pound. This will make the youngsters a month old grow up like weeds. Start them on it gradually a little at a time and increase it as they become accustomed to it. It should be fed at least twice a week, and a little every day is better, if you can have it. In the absence of this, use the dried beef scraps, by all means, which can be obtained at all poultry supply houses at from three and a half to five cents per pound, according to the quality purchased. It is really safer to feed to young chicks than the fresh bone, but does not supply so much nitriment, of course. In feeding it to young chicks it can be sifted through a coarse seive and the coarser particles given to the laying hens.

Do not neglect the dust bath for the laying hens, especially at this season when the weather is getting hot and lice and mites are multiplying by the millions. See that the dust is perfectly dry, and the addition of some sulphur will help to make the dose more effectual. The roost poles and nest boxes should be movable so that they can be taken out and cleaned and given a dose of kerosene, or a mixture of kerosene and naphtholine flakes, about a half a pound to a gallon of oil, to which add a pint of gasoline. This should be applied with a small-spouted oil can to the roost poles, boxes and sides of the house where the poles rest. Prepare your mixture just as you are going to use it. To kill head lice that cling to the head of both young and old chickens, mix a little oil of tar with vaseline and rub onto the head occasionally.

The laying contests being conducted in different sections of the country will prove the benefits of the trap nest. They are bringing out some wonderful results. Some years ago a hen that would lay 125 to 150 eggs per year was counted a great layer, but now they are getting 200 and 250-egg hens.

Medium-Sized Acreage Tracts

ALL of us know the profit that is usually made from acreage. It is almost a conceded fact that if a person owns good acreage, he has a sure profit in it sooner or later. When we think of acreage propositions, we think of lots of land, and naturally lots of money, because the usual acreage transaction involves a great deal of money. The demand for good, close-in acreage for subdivision purposes is increasing every day. A trip to the outskirts of the city in any direction you choose to take will convince you of this fact. We are going to offer a tract of about 100 acres, between Decatur and East Lake, which we have cut up into five, ten and fifteen acre tracts. The price and terms on these tracts make it possible for almost anybody to handle them.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Details Given Out On $228,000 Lease

Silvey Building Work Rushed—John W. Grant to Build—Office Rent Going Up.

Some details of considerable interest to building managers and tenants were given out Thursday in regard to the lease on the Silvey Building and plans for improving the same.

The Silvey Building Company leased the nine-story basement building from the John Silvey estate for 20 years, agreeing to pay $8,000 a year for the first three years and $12,000 a year for the remaining 17 years. This makes an aggregate rental for the 20 years of $228,000, or an average of $11,400 a year. The Silvey Building Company expects to sub-lease to various firms and individuals, several leases already having been made. The return under the sub-lease arrangement will be about $40,000 a year, the basement and ground floor netting $17,000, and the solid floors above $3,000 each.

Improvements now being put in will cost the company $67,000. These consist of a thorough renovation and the installation of two elevators and mahogany similar to that used in the Third National Bank Building. The structure will be fireproof, and a feature of the improvements will be the placing of windows in the wall that faces Peachtree. This wall was built 20 years ago under party arrangement between the late George W. Collier and the late John Silvey.

The construction work is in charge of W. E. Mashburn, who expects to have the upper stories ready October 1. Part of the work is done, and the business offices of The Georgian and Hearst's Sunday American are located on the ground floor, with frontage on both Decatur Street and Edgewood Avenue. Other tenants will be Chess Lagomarsino, E. C. Johnson and R. M. McRaney. These have already signed up for space.

Interest in Mr. Grant's Plans.

Much interest centered Thursday in the announcement that John W. Grant will build on Pace's Ferry Road, a short distance west of Buckhead and a few rods east of such property owners as Robert F. Maddox, James L. Dickey, Jr., M. C. Kiser, J. N. Goddard, Morris Brandon and others. Mr. Grant's handsome town house on the east side of Peachtree between Pine and Currier Streets has been crowded and he will soon build a fine country residence. He has extensive acreage and will lend his efforts toward making a handsome country estate similar to the others in the vicinity. W. T. Downing, the well-known architect, is drawing some plans for Mr Grant and expects to have them out soon.

In this connection it was announced that a new roadway is to be cut through from Peachtree to a point fronting Mr. Grant's place. This will be known as Andrews Drive, being a continuation of the thoroughfare that now starts west of Colonel Walter P. Andrews' estate and joins Habersham Road in Peachtree Heights Park. Property owners will defray the expense of the road work. The plan has been laid before the County Commissioners and has their approval.

Pace's Ferry Road has attractions for still other residents. It is being talked that John D. Little will build close to the Grant place. He bought two years ago a large lot at the southeast corner of Habersham Road for about $25,000 and has since refused handsome profits and will fix no price to sell it.

Meeting of Renting Agents.

The matter of more signs than one on houses to be rented was discussed freely at a meeting in Charles P. Glover's office Wednesday afternoon. No action was taken, the desire of those present being to postpone the meeting until next Wednesday at the same hour.

Big Deals Pending.

Several large real estate deals are in contract stage and will be announced shortly. One of these has to do with an apartment house on the North Side, at a nice figure.

Change in Offices.

Galloway & Smith, real estate agents, have moved their office from 516 to 213 Empire Building, where they have acquired more floor space. The Lockridge-McClain-Moon Company are now located at 4 North Pryor Street, having moved from the old Y. M. C. A. Building on Auburn Avenue.

J. Frank Meador to Build.

J. Frank Meador will begin soon the erection of an attractive residence on the West Fourteenth Street lot which he purchased Saturday, according to information given out Thursday. The site is 50 by 175 feet, on the north side of the street, half a block from West Peachtree. The lot was bought from Lavender Ray for $3,000 cash, or at the rate of $60 a front foot. A few years ago lots on West Fourteenth, between the Peachtrees, could be bought for $20 a foot, while the ordinary time price to-day is $70 and $80 for elevated parcels.

Skyscraper Rentals Increase.

With the expiration of leases on offices in certain skyscrapers this fall new rates will prevail. This is made necessary, declare the office building men, by the increased cost scale in other lines essential to the skyscraper business. Recently the manager of a leading office building gave notice of an increase to the New York home office of a local branch. The manager replied by letter that ordinarily his concern was opposed to paying more rent this year, but that he would not contest the raise in Atlanta. This was taken by the skyscraper man to indicate that this firm enjoyed a good measure of prosperity in this section.

All tenants in office buildings need not be alarmed, however. Not all the buildings will raise rents, and where an increase is contemplated it concerns the lease which is about up, and not the one that has some time to run.

Why Some Influential Bankers Fight the New Currency Bill Secretly, but Bitterly

Some eminent bankers in private conversation object to the Government control of the new currency system in the same angry and intolerant spirit that the railroad men denounced the creation of the Interstate Commerce Commission to supervise their operations in 1887. And yet so greatly has the idea of the supervision of the railroads by a Government board sitting at Washington grown in the popular mind, and SO GREATLY HAVE THE RAILROADS PROSPERED UNDER THIS LAW since 1887, that the only changes since asked by the people have been to strengthen the law and to enlarge the powers of the commission. And the chief desire of the railroads now is TO GET UNDER THE PROTECTION OF THE NATIONAL BOARD to escape from the tyrannies and operations of various State boards.

The bankers of the United States will have to accept the idea of Government control of the new currency system because the power to issue $500,000,000 of emergency notes to prevent panics and to maintain a more stable rate of interest throughout the country is too great a power to vest in the uncontrolled discretion of private citizens.

PRIVATE credit is left where it belongs under the new system, exclusively the concern of the PRIVATE banker. The use of PUBLIC credit is reserved to the nation. The Government can not interfere with any national bank in its ordinary operations any more under the new system than under the old. It can not force any bank either to grant or to refuse credit to any individual; it can not force any bank to discount a single note. It leaves every bank's relations with its own customers unchanged and unaffected.

The Government takes added cognizance only of the twelve Reserve Banks, but these are to be managed by local directors, two-thirds of whom will always be chosen by their own stockholders—the banks—so that in all ordinary operations the banks will be as closely managed by the bankers, without interference by the Government, as the railroads are now managed by railroad men without unwarranted interference by the Government.

The greatest opposition to the proposed law will come CHIEFLY FROM THOSE BANKS AND BANKERS THAT HAVE BEEN MOST ACTIVE IN THE PAST IN CONTROLLING THE RESERVES OF THE BANKS, THE PROMOTION AND FLOTATION OF NEW TRUSTS OR CORPORATIONS, AND THE CREDIT OF LARGE BORROWERS.

How completely this control has been concentrated in a few private hands of late years we shall now show by three highest expert authorities—first, by President George M. Reynolds, of the Continental and Commercial National Bank of Chicago. This bank, in its holding of the deposits of other banks, is the largest in the United States. In an address before the National Business Congress in Chicago, on December 12, 1911, Mr. Reynolds said:

"THE MONEY POWER OF THE COUNTRY NOW LIES IN THE HANDS OF A DOZEN MEN. I PLEAD GUILTY TO BEING IN THE LAST ANALYSIS ONE OF THESE MEN. . . FOUR OR FIVE BANKERS IN NEW YORK, TWO OR THREE IN CHICAGO, TWO OR THREE IN ST. LOUIS, CAN CONTROL THE QUESTION OF WHETHER LARGE LOANS SHALL BE MADE TO BANKING CORRESPONDENTS THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY."

The late J. P. Morgan and his most intimate banker associate, George F. Baker, of the First National, testifying before the Pujo Committee last winter, admitted almost as great concentration of money-power as that described by Mr. Reynolds. But both vehemently denied the existence of a "Money Trust," because, they said in substance, these enormous reserves of other banks were concentrated in such vast heaps under the control of Mr. Morgan, Mr. Baker and their associates only because the owners of the money trusted these bankers, in their integrity and prudence, and FOUND BY EXPERIENCE THAT THE MONEY WAS USED PROFITABLY TO ITS OWNERS. The other banks could withdraw the funds at will. There was no agreement, and no compulsion, and therefore no "Money Trust." Everything was entirely voluntary, legal, regular.

Mr. Baker admitted that the "concentration of capital had gone pretty far—probably far enough," and that "in the hands of bad men it would be extremely dangerous." But he added in effect that only great and good men could retain the confidence of bankers in such degree as to be intrusted with such power by other bankers voluntarily.

Without such concentrations of both credit and capital the vast underwritings and the extraordinary overcapitalization of many trusts which the country has witnessed would be impossible.

Undoubtedly these eminent bankers who have been and still are in control of credit have handled all the money intrusted to them PRUDENTLY AND PROFITABLY FOR THE OWNERS OF THE MONEY. But how have their operations affected the public interest?

In the coffee valorization scheme, in the manipulation of the Coal roads, in the making of the Steel Corporation, the small deposits of millions of Americans, through the banks, were used by these Masters of Credit to create overcapitalized companies, to distribute watered stock to the public, and to raise prices of necessaries of life to consumers.

The people's money has thus been used against themselves by the very trustees to whom the public and private credit was temporarily intrusted.

The operation is very profitable—to the trustees. We shall take, also from official sources, the testimony of bankers before the Stanley Investigating Committee, only a single instance to show how profitable the underwriting by syndicates of new trusts sometimes is. The instance is the launching of the largest of all the trusts in which Mr. Morgan was the chief, and Mr. Baker and, we believe, Mr. Reynolds were among his principal associates.

The United States Steel Underwriting Syndicate was for two hundred millions and it floated more than FOURTEEN HUNDRED MILLIONS OF SECURITIES. Only one call for $25,000,000, or 12½ per cent, was made on the underwriting syndicate. For that it received 649,988 shares of preferred and a similar amount of common stock. This stock was sold to the public through the Stock Exchange at an average price of about 44 for the common and 94 for the preferred, netting the syndicate $90,500,000. Expenses of the syndicate totaled $3,000,000, thereby involving $28,000,000 actual cash. Deducting the latter amount from $90,500,000, there remains $62,500,000 representing the profits of the syndicate.

Of that amount J. P. Morgan & Co., as managers, received $12,500,000, and the underwriters the remaining $50,000,000. There were paid four cash dividends of $10,000,000 each, which were paid to the syndicate members, and a final dividend of $6,000,000, a total of $46,000,000. The remaining $4,000,000 was subscribed to a second syndicate organized for the purpose of converting preferred stock into bonds, and the underwriters also made a profit on this transaction.

Simultaneously with the sale of this stock to the public, the prices of iron and steel in all their manifold forms were advanced all along the line, so that the Steel Corporation would show large earnings and its stock be made salable to the public at enhanced prices.

It is not from any doubt of the splendid ability or the financial integrity of the men who did this thing, and countless other things of the same kind, that the people of the United States refuse to put all their banks and credit, and the issue of "emergency currency," under the uncontrolled discretion of private bankers, however powerful, experienced or sagacious they may be.

THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES DO NOT WANT GOVERNMENT BY BANKERS OR BY THE MONEY POWER. THEY WANT GOVERNMENT BY THE GOVERNMENT IN THE INTERESTS OF THE WHOLE PEOPLE.

We Should Worry To-day!

This Astonishing Fourth of July at Gettysburg

This is indeed a glorious Fourth of July! The Republic of heroic reminiscence is massed to-day at Gettysburg.

It is not easy for the times about us to grasp the idea of Gettysburg.

It is difficult for this metropolis of the New South—this vast composite of North and South, East and West, of all races and of every creed—busy, practical, prosperous and peaceful—to comprehend the fact that fifty years ago the Americans north of the Potomac and the Americans south of the Potomac, with their bloody hands at each other's throats, were grappling at Gettysburg in the great decisive battle of a long and bloody war.

Ninety thousand Americans under Meade met seventy thousand Americans under Lee in the climax of the ferocious argument over State's Rights and Federal sovereignty, and when they parted at the foot of Cemetery Ridge, fifty thousand Americans, dead or wounded upon the three days' battlefield, made up the appalling holocaust offered upon the altar of a conflicting theory of government which was no more settled by the bloody sacrifice than when the first gun was fired at Sumter in 1861.

Two years later Ulysses Grant at Appomattox wrote with his sword in the final terms of surrender an affirmative recognition of both sides.

And to-day the citizens of Massachusetts resent as jealously an infringement of the Rights of the States as the people of Georgia appeal in emergency to the Power of the Federal Government!

Thousands of survivors of these one hundred and sixty thousand soldiers—survivors and their children—are gathered in joyous reunion at Gettysburg to-day. And the flag of their fathers—serene and splendid—floats over the survivors of Meade and the survivors of Lee—aged and gray or honored and gay, "in mutual well beseeming ranks marching all one way," toward the sunset of life which leaves the indestructible Republic united and glorious in the zenith of its power and its fame.

There will be a thousand vivid reminiscences and a thousand noble lessons taught above the hero sod of Gettysburg to-day. It is no longer the Confederacy's "Field of Grief," but a great nation's mighty Plain of Reunion!

The astonishing number of the survivors attending the national revival of to-day should teach our youth that a brave spirit and a forgiving temper are the great preservers of life, and the promoters of longevity. There were no braver spirits than those at Gettysburg. Nor any more forgiving. For the victors never boasted of their triumph and the vanquished carried no bitterness to defeat.

Also the field of Gettysburg is the historic reservoir from which we draw our fiery and convincing proof of the nation's martial qualities. There was never in human history a more gallant and heroic feat than Pickett's magnificent charge up Cemetery Ridge, and never a steadier and more magnificent answer than Hancock's superb defense.

So that in the martial qualities of offensive and defensive warfare there is writ at Gettysburg the deathless national record of imperishable valor which may be read and spoken to the comfort of our country's friends and to the stern warning of any who may think to be our country's foes.

Give ample battleships and ample guns to the sons of the sires who fought at Gettysburg, and our country will guarantee to keep the world at peace with us.

A Merger That Is in the Interest of Progress

The merging of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons and the Atlanta Medical College into a great and amplified Atlanta Medical College is a matter of far-reaching importance to Atlanta, and the boards of management of the two institutions are to be congratulated that they have effected a consolidation so satisfactory.

Not only will the colleges themselves benefit tremendously by joining hands, but the graduates thereof will enjoy an immediate standing in the medical profession that heretofore it has been impossible for either institution to give them.

The new college has been made eligible to membership in the American Medical Association, which gives all graduates the right at once to practice medicine anywhere in the world.

Plans for the necessarily enlarged quarters of the new institution are ambitious, but there is every reason to suspect that they will be carried to a successful conclusion. And to that end, The Georgian feels sure all Atlanta will cordially co-operate with the gentleman having those plans in charge.

Caesar and Franklin

By WILLIAM VINCENT BYARS

WHEN Julius Caesar wished to show the meaning of the greatest triumph in life, he first combed his hair carefully over a bald spot. He was so careful about this bald spot that it is said he always scratched his head with one finger after combing his hair down over it.

Perhaps this is a lie. But what he did next was to put a wreath of laurel leaves on his head. He then put on a costly purple-bordered cloak. Taking a branch of laurel in one hand and scepter in the other, he passed out the street door and mounted a car drawn by four horses. Then he drove through the streets, and listened to the crowd that shouted for him. While they were shouting, people in the crowd watched the long line of Caesar's soldiers behind the car and of his prisoners in front of it.

Caesar's Great Triumphs.

After Caesar was tired of standing up to listen to the shouting, he had money scattered to the crowd. Then he gave them bread tickets, or what amounted to the same thing. He also gave them free admission to the circus. At the circus he supplied prisoners to fight lions to amuse those who had shouted for him when he was proclaimed a triumphant conqueror and a dictator.

This was the greatest "triumph" in Rome about 46 years before the birth of Christ.

About 1745 years after the birth of Christ, Benjamin Franklin undertook the greatest triumph of history in the small city of Philadelphia. He pulled off his coat and walked out into the street. Then he took hold of the handles of a wheelbarrow and rolled it through the street. Nobody shouted. Some laughed. He came back with the wheelbarrow in about half an hour. Taking a bundle of paper from it, he went inside. Then he printed a newspaper.

This was one way he had of becoming triumphant, but it was not the only one. After printing the newspaper, he washed the ink off his hands and began to experiment with another one of his ideas.

He wanted to catch a jar full of lightning. In his newspaper he tried to persuade his readers to use their common sense. He tried to show them that common sense is always triumphant when it is really used. They thought he had lost his own common sense when he tried to catch lightning in a jar. But he did it. He finally got enough lightning out of a cloud down the string of a kite to fill a jar, so that he could get sparks out of the jar. When he had done this, it was the greatest triumph in history. He had shown that electricity and lightning are the same; that electricity is a "universal force" which can be used in common-sense ways.

This was a "triumph" in Philadelphia about A. D. 1752.

Julius Caesar was born 100 years before Christ. He was born in a great family. It was the "illustrious Julian gens." "Gens" means family. A "gentleman" then did not have to be "gentle." He did have to be born in an illustrious "gens." Caesar did not think it ungentlemanly to have the hands of his prisoners cut off when he was not pleased with them after he had conquered them. He despised people who had nothing but common sense. He was a great genius and one of the greatest conquerors of any age. He conquered his own country. Before he was stabbed to death in Rome, March 15, 44 B. C., he had destroyed the freedom of the greatest republic of the world. After his time, Romans who could not live unless they were free stabbed themselves.

No Illustrious Forefathers.

Franklin did not belong to an illustrious "gens." When he was born in Boston in 1706, he was fifteenth of the seventeen children of Josiah Franklin. Josiah was a poor candlemaker. Poor as he was, he gave his children "the key of all knowledge." He taught them to spell and showed them how to learn to read. In 1790, when Benjamin Franklin died, he had done more than any other man to make his country free and great. His last act was to sign a paper to make the world freer. But his greatest triumph was in discovering the use of common sense. Spell out or read as much as you can use from the best book you can get. Then do not stop to talk about it. Get your common sense to work and see what you can do with what you have learned. Then go on that way, learning and using your own common sense as long as you live. That is the Franklin way to win triumphs.

In the Dog Days

By WEX JONES.

IN the dog days, beloved, remember on account of your health to eschew
Greeting a husker person with the words, "Is it hot enough weather for you?"

And forget not to shun all advice on sure methods of keeping you cool,
For you'll get all mixed up and distressed and you'll feel like a boiling hot fool.

You will read that cold drinks are injurious; you'll read that hot drinks kill you dead;
You will read you should sleep under blankets; and also with none on your bed.

Some say that cold baths will inflame you till you feel like a stove that's red-hot.
Some say that cold tea is just poison, while asserting that coffee is not.

You'll be told that corned beef and potatoes are too heavy for hot weather lunch;
And again you'll be urged to make luncheon on some food that is there with the punch.

You'll be told to wear plenty of flannel, howe'er it may tickle your skin;
And you'll hear that you'll die in ten minutes unless all your clothing is thin.

It's unsafe and moreover it's foolish to toil through the heat of the day,
So one says; the other declares that it's simply fatal to play.

Then, beloved, avoid all these tipsters, who'll make you feel like a fool.
And take the advice of an expert that all you need do is keep cool.
