'I SHOT THOMPSON,' GIRL CONFESSES

HOUSE STARTS LOBBY PROBE

BOYS AIDED IN BLOWING SAFE

CRACKSMAN SHOT IN GUN BATTLE

Kirkwood Residents Capture Postoffice Robber, Who Blows Safe but Gets No Money.

With late developments indicating that Walter Turpin, the yeggman who cracked the safe of the Kirkwood postoffice Friday night, is a "modern Fagin," who takes young boys under his wing and schools them in the ways of crime, the authorities of DeKalb County and Atlanta are scouring the country to capture two boys said to have served as lookouts while Turpin fired the charges of nitroglycerine.

When the posse of citizens and officers, hastily formed after the first explosion in the postoffice, reached the scene, two boys, both wearing knee trousers, leaped from the shadows of the building and ran down the street. The officers yelled at them to halt, but the boys paid no attention and the posse opened fire. Both escaped, apparently without injury.

Turpin, in statements made to the authorities Saturday morning, denied that the boys were with him. He was alone in the attempt to rob the postoffice, he said. Sheriff McCurdy and Chief of Detectives Lanford, however, are of the opinion that Turpin, like the famous Dickens character, conducted a regular school of crime in Atlanta, and that the two boys were children who had come under his influence and whom he was using in his operations.

Turpin Tells Story.

Turpin Saturday morning told the complete story of the attempt to rob the safe and of the events that led up to it.

"I was released from the Federal penitentiary, where I had been sent from Richmond, Va., for counterfeiting, February 22," he said. "I have been working at the Shoe Renury on Auburn Avenue, and before that I worked at several places as a tailor. I planned the robbery of the Kirkwood postoffice about a week ago when I went out and looked over the ground and made my plans.

"Last night I left Atlanta about 11 o'clock and got out to Kirkwood about 11:30. Earlier in the afternoon I got some whisky on Courtland Street near Decatur, and was very drunk when I got to Kirkwood. I entered the building through a window, and in moving around, trying to get my bearings, I fell down the elevator shaft, a distance of about 10 feet. I wrenched my back, and it was five minutes before I could move. Then I managed to get hold of the cables of the elevator and drew it down into the basement, and then rode up to the first floor.

Injury Prevented Escape.

"I found the safe, all right, and prepared to blow it. I had four ounces of nitro-glycerine, which I had made by soaking two sticks of dynamite in water and then squeezing them. I made my soap cup and fired the nitro-glycerine. The first shot raised the handle and combination of the safe. Twenty minutes later I fired the second shot, and it raised—other things. Then people began shooting at me, and I was so busy I hardly know what happened. I had hurt my back so badly in falling down the elevator shaft, however, that I could not have gotten away even had I not been shot."

Turpin says his real name is Walter Turpin, and that he is 36 years old. His home, he says, is in Chester, Pa.

The twisted front door of hte safe and the mass of splinters littering the little grocery store at Kirkwood gives an idea of the dramatic scene.

"I was sleeping on my front porch," said L. J. Cassells, owner of the store and one of the attacking party, "when I was awakened shortly after midnight by an explosion I thought was

WILSON NOW RESTING IN CORNISH

WINDSOR, VT., July 6.—President Wilson arrived here at 10:50 a. m. today to spend the summer. He was met by Mrs. Wilson and two of his daughters, and the party motored to the Summer White House at Cornish, N. H., three miles away.

Upon arrival at the Summer White House the President gave orders that no newspaper correspondents or photographers were to be admitted on any pretext. The President said he was in Cornish to take a rest, and that he would transact no official business nor even consider matters which would tend to disturb his brief vacation.

If anything of public moment occurs, the President said he would return to Washington, but he would not discuss it here. The squad of six secret service men is on hand to see that the President's orders are carried out to the letter.

According to present plans, the President will remain until Tuesday afternoon, but he may stay longer if developments in Washington are not of such a nature as to necessitate his presence.

Cobb, Out of Game, Fears Injury Will End Baseball Career

CLEVELAND, OHIO, July 6.—Tyrus Raymond Cobb, the greatest ball player of this or any other age, is a bench warmer for the Detroit Tigers. Injury has laid him low.

Just how long Ty will be out of the game neither he nor anyone else knows. The Georgia peach is wearing a careworn expression for he fears his injury may be permanent.

Ty's hurt is a bad spike wound on the right knee. His knee is swollen to twice its normal size and he can hardly walk. In the Detroit-Chicago series recently Ty was spiked by Weaver. He stuck in the line-up day after day until the Fourth, simply on his nerve alone.

Cobb went home to Detroit last night when the team left for St. Louis. He will have an X-ray picture taken to find out if the top of the kneecap is cracked.

Mr. Blalock has visited Henry S. Jackson, whose term as collector expired June 30, several times, Mr. Jackson said, and asked him when he would vacate the office.

Mr. Jackson said he would turn the office over to Mr. Blalock when he produced papers ratifying his appointment.

One Egg Causes Railway Strike

Special Cable to The American.

MULHALL'S CHARGES IN BALANCE

Committee to Investigate Charges That Factories Wielded Influence Over Legislation.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—The machinery of the House to-day was set in motion for an investigation of the Mulhall charges when the Rules Committee decided to report a resolution providing for the naming of a committee of seven by the Speaker. This committee will inquire into all the Mulhall charges affecting members of Congress and also determine if in the present Congress or previous Congresses lobbyists of the National Association of Manufacturers "did in fact reach or influence" any officer or employee of the House.

The committee also is to look into the efforts of the National Association of Manufacturers to defeat any candidates for the House.

Another object of the committee is to inquire whether improper influence has been exerted by the National Association of Manufacturers or any other bodies in the selection of committees, and find out if the association now maintains a lobby in Washington and how effective it is.

The special committee is empowered to employ all necessary legal and clerical assistance. Expenses are to be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

Representative Levy declared he was opposed to further inquiries. The Money Trust and steel investigation, he said, had caused only financial unrest.

The resolution was amended so that the investigating committee will be called upon to determine not only what part the National Association of Manufacturers played in defeating members, but also to inquire into the activities of all other organizations and persons along this line.

This makes it possible for the committee to investigate the Anti-Saloon League, the National Woman Suffrage organization, the American Medical Association and all other organizations promoting legislation here.

FULTON CONVICT CHIEF DEFIES JACKSON

Declaring Marion Jackson and his associates on the prison reform commission know absolutely nothing of convicts and religion, and that he would resort to law before he would submit to their conducting long services at the convict camps in Fulton County, Superintendent T. J. Donaldson declined to compromise Saturday morning at a meeting of the Public Works Committee of the County Board.

Jackson said he had the people of the county behind him in his fight to obtain the proper kind of religious services for the convicts, and that while he would rather get what he was after without a fight, he would conduct a campaign against the limit of one-hour services each Sunday if necessary. The Public Works Committee agreed to hold a meeting later and definitely settle the matter.

When Marion Jackson asked the County Board to place the religious services at the convict camps under the direction of Philip Weltner, of the prison reform board, and let him designate lecturers and preachers for a morning and afternoon service, Captain Donaldson for the first time voiced a protest.

Disputing Jackson's assertion that the convicts welcomed the Sunday services, Captain Donaldson said they had voiced their protest at giving up the entire day of rest to services conducted from early Sunday morning until late Sunday afternoon.

He said he had no objection to the men attending one service each Sunday, which should not last more than one hour, provided he should have the selection of the ministers and the number to go to each camp.

The rather heated meeting terminated when Captain Donaldson announced he would consult the law before he would go into any agreement on the subject.

Lower Alabama Rate Denied.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—The Interstate Commerce Commission today reversed its former findings, when it ruled that barrel stave companies of Decatur, Ala., should be granted a rate of 4 cents lower a hundred pounds than manufacturers in Memphis, Tenn., on shipments to Western markets.

Profit Made in Fake Consumption 'Cures' $10,000,000 a Year

NEW YORK, July 6.—Within the last five years, no less than 500 fraudulent "cures" for consumption have been tried on thousands of victims in the United States. Exploiters of these nostrums have reaped a clear profit of not less than $50,000,000. This is an estimate made by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

The association estimates that not less than $20,000,000 is invested in the business of manufacturing and exploiting fake cures for tuberculosis, and that the annual income is $15,000,000. About one-third of this amount is spent for advertising, leavig a profit of $10,000,00 a year, which the association says is "blood money" taken from ignorant consumptives.

The association declares no specific cure for tuberculosis has been discovered, except the well-tried hygienic-dietetic method of fresh air, rest and good food.

Griffin Gasps as Folk Get Glimpse Of Slashed Skirt

GRIFFIN, July 6.—Griffin got its first view of the famous slashed skirt here yesterday when Miss Eleanor McHarris, of Macon, appeared at the Spalding County Fair Grounds during the Fourth of July festivities. She came near breaking up the celebration. Everybody left the barbecued meats, interest was lost in the horse races and nobody cared whether a game of ball was played or not. Miss McHarris made a brave effort to overcome the gaze of the crowd, but failed.

The skirt was not of the ultra-fashionable cut, but it was more than Griffin was accustomed to So Griffin took a good look.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 6.—Mrs. Charles H. Welsh, of Philadelphia, appeared on Thames Street wearing two jeweled ornaments on her ankles. Boy Held as Robber Blames Near Beer

A. L. Jones, a prepossessing young man of a good Carrollton, Ga., family, was bound over Saturday under $500 bond by Recorder Broyles for attempted burglary.

Sergeant W. P. Reed early Saturday morning saw a man at the window of Jacobs' drug store, Mitchell and Whitehall Streets, removing the stripping from the window for the apparent purpose of pulling out the pane and gaining entrance to the store.

Jones explained in Recorder's Court that it must have been the near-beer that made him do it. He said that he had no recollection of trying to get in Jacobs' store.

MRS. BALLUE SOBS FORTH ACCIDENT STORY

Severe Questioning Draws Out Explanation Which Lanford Believes—Couple Out on Bond.

Mrs. Lucy Ballue, of 18 Lynch Street, confessed to Chief of Detectives Newport Lanford Saturday morning that she shot Captain A. C. Thompson, County Warden, while they were drinking together in the reception room of the Owls Club at Pryor and Mitchell streets Friday night. She declares the shooting was accidental, and that Captain Thompson's revolver was discharged while she was examining it.

Mrs. Ballue's confession came after an examination that lasted virtually all morning. When she was first taken into the detectives' office and questioned, she stuck to her original story that she knew nothing of the shooting.

She was taken back to her cell, and half an hour later returned to Chief Lanford's office. After an hour's questioning she admitted her part in the affair.

Tells How It Happened.

"Captain Thompson called me up by telephone yesterday," she said, "and made an appointment for 4 o'clock. I met him at Whitehall and Hunter streets, and after we had stood on the corner and talked for a few moments we went up to the Owls Club. We had two or three drinks there, and then went out for a stroll, and came back after an hour or so.

"When we came into the club again we went into the reception room and had another drink. I drank a glass of wine. After we drank, I was playing the piano and we were talking, when Captain Thompson remarked that it was hot, and took off his coat. He came over and laid the coat and his belt containing his pistol on top of the piano. I was still thumping the piano and he went and sat down on my left. I kept on playing and suddenly I glanced up and saw the revolver.

"I don't know what made me do it, but I was seized with a desire to look at the weapon. So I drew it out of the holster, and began turning it over and over in my hand.

"Suddenly, I don't know how, the revolver exploded with a loud report, and I heard Captain Thompson cry that he was shot. I was frightened almost to death, and I didn't know what to do. I dropped the gun on the floor and covered my face with my hands. I was so scared I didn't know what to do, and I don't remember how I got out of the room."

Lanford Believes Her Story.

Chief Lanford announced he believes the woman's story, and his opinion is concurred in by detectives who have been investigating the case. They declare the nature of the wound is such that it could not have been made save by a weapon that was pointing downward.

After Mrs. Ballue's confession Chief Lanford reduced her bond from $1,000 to $100 and changed the charge to disorderly conduct. It was signed by her brother-in-law, W. H. Holbrook, with whom she resides at 18 Lynch Street.

After the woman's release Captain Thompson was brought to headquarters from Grady Hospital in a cab, and a charge of disorderly conduct was docketed against him. His bond was fixed at $100. It also was signed by Holbrook. After he was released Mrs. Ballue entered the cab and drove away with Captain Thompson.

Members of Mrs. Ballue's family said Saturday morning that Captain Thompson has been paying her attentions for about a year. She is the wife of John Ballue, a structural iron worker, from whom she has been separated for three years. She has no children. For the past year she has been employed at Nunnally's Overall Factory at Marietta and Alexander Streets.

Arrested on Street.

Detectives Doyal and Waggoner, attached to headquarters, arrested Mrs. Ballue at Garnett and Pryor Streets after what they asserted was an attempt to spirit her away by L. C. Raoul, secretary of the Owls' Club.

GIRL CONFESSES SHOOTING AT OWLS CLUB

Declares Wounding of County Warden Was Accident—Both Drinking, She Says.

The detectives, unable to find either the girl or Mr. Raoul at the clubrooms, started a search. They learned the girl and the secretary had slipped quietly down the back stairs half an hour after the shooting of Captain Thompson. They hurried down Pryor Street, hoping to intercept them before the girl was taken away.

As they neared Pryor and Garnett Streets the detectives saw a man and a woman lurking in the shadows of the building. Not knowing whether they were Mrs. Ballue and Mr. Raoul or strangers, Doyal and Waggoner secreted themselves across the street and awaited developments. In a few minutes a cab drove rapidly up to the curbing and the door was flung open. A voice from within the cab commanded the man and woman to enter, and to "hurry up."

As Raoul and Mrs. Ballue rushed across the sidewalk and started to enter the cab the detectives recognized them and hurried across the street. They accosted the two.

Woman Denies Shooting.

According to stories told to Night Chief Jett by Detective Waggoner, both Raoul and the woman were nervous when confronted by the officers. Raoul did not speak, they said, after they grasped his arm, but the woman twisted away from the detective who held her and faced them. She demanded:

"What do you want me for? I didn't shoot him!"

The woman then tried to break away and enter the waiting cab, but the officers ordered her to go to headquarters with them. Raoul, too, went along.

The detectives claim the utterance of the woman when they placed her under arrest was significant. Waggoner, whom she asked why she was wanted, and whom she told she had not shot Captain Thompson, declared that he had not mentioned the shooting or told her why she was wanted. He and his partner, Doyal, had simply told them to wait a moment, catching them just as they started to hurry into the cab.

At headquarters Friday night the woman answered the questions put to her by Chief Jett readily and composedly, and emphatically denied that she had shot Captain Thompson. Her version of the affair, as told to Chief Jett, is as follows:

Other Women in Room.

She has known Captain Thompson for some time, she declared, and last night had gone with him to the club. They entered the reception parlors of the club and took a seat at one of the tables. She claims she had drank but one glass of wine before the shooting. Her escort, it is said, was drinking highballs and rickeys, but was not intoxicated. Two other men, seated at a table near the doorway, were the only other occupants of the room.

After they had sat at the table for perhaps an hour, the woman says, Captain Thompson asked her to play the piano. She played popular music for some moments, she said, and did not hear a shot which, she said, came as she was playing ragtime in a particularly loud key. She said she supposed the sound of the piano drowned the shot. As she softened the tones of the piano she heard the sound of a fall, and turned around on the piano stool.

Then she heard Captain Thompson cry that he was shot and saw him fall to the floor. His revolver lay on the floor beside him. The two women near the door were standing by their table, and gazing in horror at the figure of the captain on the floor.

Mrs. Ballus declared she was dazed by the sight and covered her face with her hands, and when she looked up again the women were gone. A number of men, she declared, were standing over Captain Thompson, and he was telling them he had accidentally shot himself.

Thompson had been accidentally shot and had been taken to his home in a cab. The groans of the wounded man as he lay on a table in a nearby room gave them away, however, and it was discovered that he was still in the club. He was then taken to Grady Hospital for medical attention. Prior to his removal to the hospital, Captain Thompson was questioned by Detectives Vickery and Hamby, who answered the first call to the club, but he refused to talk, and would give no explanation of the shooting.

The officers accompanied the ambulance to the hospital, and continued their quizzing of the wounded man. They claim he remained sullen and defiant, but after being placed on the operating table admitted he had been shot by the girl during a quarrel. Hamby and Vickery visited the hospital again about midnight and again questioned Captain Thompson. This time, they assert, he declared the shooting was an accident, and that Mrs. Ballue had nothing to do with it.

Woman Young and Pretty.

The report that when they entered the club Captain Thompson registered himself and his companion as "Mr. and Mrs. Thompson," is denied by Secretary Raoul. Mrs. Ballue declared her escort did the registering and she did not know what names he wrote. She said she supposed, however, that he had written her real name.

Harry Latham, a court deputy, told the police that when he met Thompson and Mrs. Ballue in the club rooms, Thompson had introduced her to him as Mrs. Thompson, at which Mrs. Ballue became angry and exclaimed that she was not his wife—that she wasn't anyone's wife.

Captain Thompson has been in charge of one of the convict camps of Fulton County for several years. He is 30 years old and unmarried, and lives on the Howell Mill Road.

BUY A TUT, TUT-OPHONE AND SAY WHAT YOU LIKE

("Tut, tut" is President Wilson's fiercest expletive, according to Robert Emmet Taylor, at the Washington Country Club.—NEWS ITEM.)

By HANK

It used to be the custom, when a golf ball disappeared,
For each disgruntled player to go cussing in his beard,
A dot, a dash, an asterisk, would mean some bold expletive
Directed at a golf ball most annoyingly secretive,
But now if something jars you as you "drive," or "swing," or "putt,"
You mustn't venture further than a simple, mild "Tut, tut,"
And if a nail you're driving, and your thumb you neatly squash,
Your feeling can be petted with the exclamation, "Gosh!"
And if your lovely daughter runs away with Chauffeur Percy,
The uttermost that you can say is, "Goodness sake!" and "Mercy!"
The good old days of —!—! and !—!—! have surely vanished, but We're not bereft, there still is left that terrible "Tut, tut!"

U. S. SETS SMOKE AND DRINK RECORD

Consumes 64,500,000 Barrels of Beer, 143,300,000 Gallons of Liquor, 7,707,000,000 Cigars.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—The American people drank more whisky and beer, smoked more cigars and cigarettes, and chewed more tobacco during the fiscal year 1913 than in any other yearly period of the nation's history, according to estimates based to-day upon the record-breaking internal revenue receipts of the Federal Government for twelve months ended June 30.

The drinkers consumed 143,300,000 gallons of whisky and brandy and 64,500,000 barrels of beer.

Smokers puffed 7,707,000,000 cigars and 14,012,000,000 cigarettes. Patrons of the pipe smoked 403,200,000 pounds of tobacco and chewers of snuff disposed of 33,2000,000 pounds.

Despite the high record, the number of saloons of the country decreased by 18,000 during the year, the retail liquor dealers numbering about 450,000.

Assessments on drinking and smoking luxuries, on corporations, and on oleomargarine and other articles taxed by the Federal Government brought into the United States treasury $344,426,884, the greatest amount in history, exceeding the previous high record of 1911 by $21,900,000.

250,000 KAFFIRS REBEL IN AFRICA

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA, July 6.—Many striking gold miners in the Rand district were shot down to-day by British soldiers in the worst fighting which has occurred in the great gold tie-up of South Africa.

This city is held at the mercy of turbulent mobs, armed with rifles and dynamite. One thousand strikers, including many Kaffirs, paraded through the streets shooting up the city and causing a reign of terror.

In one clash with the police 65 men were shot. Half that number were killed. A state of anarchy exists in many districts. A mob of 1,000 rushed the railway station at Braamfontein Park and burned it.

Fighting was in progress here all night and it was estimated that at least $50,000 damage was done. Efforts of the police to control the situation was futile.

A state of revolution has been brought about by the action of the blacks in joining the strikers. At least 250,000 Kaffirs are taking part in the deeds of violence.

The unions are trying to induce members of other trades to join the walk-out, thus completely tying up all the industrial interests in South Africa.

A spirited fight between W. F. Wesley, real estate dealer, with offices in the Empire Building, and Y. A. Gresham, a mining operator of 40 West North Avenue, attracted a big crowd in front of the Empire Building in Mariotta Street Friday morning.

Spectators cheered lustily as first one, then the other, put in a telling punch.

It is said the fight was brought on by a real estate deal. The battle was going nip and tuck between the two men, with blood flowing freely from mouths and noses, when a patrolman separated the combatants.

The scrappers were ordered to appear in police court Monday morning a big firecracker. I rolled over to sleep again.

"It must have been about 30 minutes later when I was awakened by a loud explosion that must have been heard for miles around. My wife and I jumped out of bed and she turned on the light. I turned it off and took my stand to watch at the window, which is only a hundred feet or more from the store.

Robber Seen at Work.

"Pretty soon I saw a faint light in the store and almost immediately I jerked on my trousers and ran to get Mr. Fleming next door. My wife telephoned Marshal Phillips, who joined us, with City Clerk Ray about the time we left the Fleming front gate.

"Stealthily we circled around the little store, finally grouping ourselves at the elevator door, which we found open. A moment later we were inside, and about this time the yeggman saw us. Brandishing his pistol, he dodged behind a barrel.

"From there he retreated only after Marshal Phillips dislodged him with a pistol ball which missed its mark. Turpin then dodged us and made for the elevator room, only to find this blocked by City Clerk Ray.

"It was then that Turpin made his last desperate stand while almost in the center of the little store. There he blazed away with his pistol at every flash of the searchlight which Marshall Phillips flashed to search out his man in the darkness.

Turpin Return Shot for Shot.

"The searching rays of the little light were swallowed up soon in the brilliant flashes of fire which belched from our four guns, Turpin returning every shot in dodging this way and that. Finally, making a charge forward, Phillips grabbed Turpin's gun and bore Turpin to the floor.

Even then, however, Turpin fought like a madman and finally was subdued only by the combined efforts of all four men forming the attacking party. As he sank to the floor, apparently desperately wounded, he murmured his name, Johnson.

"It is a wonder we were not all killed, for the fusillade of shots was terrific. It took all of us to handle the yeggman," said one of the posse.

Turpin's Roommate Held.

A peculiar angle to the Turpin case developed Saturday morning when detectives took in custody 14-year-old Thomas Eberhart, a newsboy, whose home is in Dunwoody, Ga., and who has been Turpin's roommate for the past three weeks. Since last Tuesday Turpin and the boy have been rooming at the home of Stephen Marine, 226 1-2 Marietta Street. Prior to that time they had occupied a room together at the Union Rescue Mission at 230 Marietta Street.

The theory of the police is that Turpin was trying to gain control of the boy so he could use him in his criminal operations. The boy insists that he never has accompanied Turpin out at night.

"Last night I came in about 8 o'clock," the boy told the police. "Turpin was drunk, and lying down on the bed. In about half an hour Turpin got up and said he was going out and didn't know when he would be back. He left his keys and everything he had in his pockets on the dresser.

Had Burglar's Kit.

"Turpin was always nice to me and said some day he would show me how to make some easy money. Ofter he has asked me if I didn't want to make a whole lot of money, but he didn't tell me how. He went out a great deal at night, and always kept a lot of hammers and things in the drawers of his dresser. He said he was a shoemaker and that they were his tools."

"Turpin came to the Mission after he was released from the Federal prison four months ago," said R. E. Boutwell, connected with the Rescue Mission, "and was given a room. Three weeks ago we put the boy in with him. Last Monday Turpin left and said he was going to live at 226 1-2 Marietta Street."

APPLICATION FOR LEE'S RELEASE DELAYED

Watchman's Lawyer Says He Will Await Return of Dorsey Before Filing Habeas Corpus.

On account of the absence from the city of Prosecuting Attorney Hugh M. Dorsey, Bernard L. Chappell, attorney for Newt Lee, announced Saturday that he would not file a writ of habeas corpus until Monday. He claims in the petition for the release of the negro that Lee is being held unlawfully and without any charge against him.

Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey will ask the courts to hold the negro as a material witness for the State, or may charge him with being an accessory. He was determined Friday to take no chances on so important a witness getting out of his control, as he feared the negro might get beyond the jurisdiction of the courts if given his liberty.

Attorney Chappell and Solicitor Dorsey had agreed, when the negro was committed to jail, to keep him there until the trial. Chappell notified Dorsey Wednesday that he wished to withdraw from the agreement and get his client freed.

Chief Discounts Conley Rumor.

The announcement Friday that the defense had secured an important and damaging affidavit that connected the State's star witness, Jim Conley, more directly with the crime created a sensation in the ranks of the prosecution.

Chief of Detectives Newport A. Lanford announced that every movement of the negro on the day of the crime had been "checked up," and that it was a matter of impossibility to find anything more damaging against him than his admission that he helped dispose of the body at the request of Frank.

In commenting on the affidavit secured at the office of Joseph H. Leavitt Thursday the attorney said that it would be almost impossible for the prosecution to break down any statement that was made in the affidavit when the witness was placed on the stand.

Calls Evidence Vital.

He said the witness was a citizen of high standing and would be one of the most important for the defense of Frank.

Attorney Leavitt said that this particular affidavit was one of more than 50 that had been recently secured that dealt almost exclusively with the movements of the negro on the day of the murder. While he would not comment at any length, he intimated that the defense had been able to establish conclusively the exact time Conley entered and left the factory.

He also intimated that affidavits had been secured that would show what time Monteen Stover entered and left the factory and be able to prove she left before Mary Phagan's car reached the vicinity of the pencil factory.

BANK HEAD GETS 6 1-2-YEAR TERM

Judge Brand Sentences J. W. Griffin at Athens—Motion Entered for New Trial.

ATHENS, July 6.—Judge C. H. Brand to-day sentenced J. W. Griffin to 6 1-2 years in the penitentiary for "wrecking" the defunct Athens Trust and Banking Company.

Griffin was found guilty at midnight Thursday, after a long drawn out trial. Some months ago he pleaded guilty, without a trial, and was then sentenced to five years, but a new trial was secured and his new sentence carries eighteen months more imprisonment.

Immediately following the sentence, a motion was made by the defense for a new trial on the grounds that Judge Brand illegally interferred and communicated with the jury before the verdict was given out. This was overruled by Judge Brand and will be decided by the higher court.

COL. PAXON AIDS AND PRAISES MILK FUND

Colonel Frederic J. Paxon, chief of staff for Governor Slaton and one of Atlanta's foremost business men, Saturday morning forwarded his personal check for $25 to the Atlanta Mothers' Congress, through The Georgian, to aid in the campaign to supply the poor babies of the city with milk during the hot months.

In a letter which accompanied his check, Colonel Paxon congratulated the members of the congress on their zeal and hard work in behalf of the poor babies, and characterized the movement as an advanced step along the line of civic development. His letter, in full, follows:

"The Atlanta Georgian, City:

"Gentlemen—I congratulate you, and that most heartily, on your efforts to furnish pure milk to the babies of Atlanta whose mothers can not afford to buy same. A movement such as this must necessarily be recognized as an advanced step along the line of future good citizenship and civic development; for how can we have forceful men and women unless the foundation is laid in earliest childhood?

"Inclosed find my check for $25 toward this worthy cause. I am, Yours,

BULGARS CHARGE GREEK GUNS; 5,000 LOSS

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ATHENS, July 6.—Nearly a quarter of a million soldiers are engaged in a terrific battle which is being fought between Greece and Bulgarian armies north of Salonika.

The battle line extends for 100 miles, and from dispatches received to-day from the Greek military headquarters in Salonika it is estimated that more than 5,000 men had been killed or wounded.

There were 80,000 men in the Greek army, which is opposing a force over 100,000 strong. The Greeks have the advantage in location, occupying a lofty plateau. The Bulgarians charged repeatedly up the shell-swept slopes, exhibiting the utmost gallantry in their efforts to capture the Greek artillery.

Bulgars Charge Up Slope.

More than 150 heavy guns were ranged along the eminence and the most desperate fighting centered around these batteries. With brilliant courage the Bulgarians swept up the sides of the plateau, which was soon covered with dead and wounded troops.

Dispatches from the front said that the result would be decisive. King Constantine directed the operations of the Greek army from headquarters in Salonika, and it was believed here that he would take the field in person if he saw the day were going against his army.

A second Bulgarian army of 30,000 men is reported to be moving to join the troops engaged in battle. The second Bulgar army was at a point south of Tachynos Lake to-day, advancing on a forced march for the battlefield.

Greek Victory Reported.

A Greek victory is reported from Kilkis, where the Bulgarians were crushed by the heavy ordnance of the Hellenes. The Bulgars were unable to bring their artillery into action, owing to the fact that the infantry had outdistanced the artillery in the march upon the Greek forces.

The Bulgarian soldiers were dispersed, leaving behind sixty heavy guns, which the Greeks captured.

Servians Rout Bulgars After Five-Day Battle.

BELGRADE, July 6.—After a battle lasting five days, the Bulgarian army, which has been engaged with a Servian force near Uskub, began a retreat to-day, leaving 1,000 prisoners of war and 300 heavy guns in the hands of the Serbs.

Albanians Resist Advance of Serbs.

DURAZZA, ALBANIA, July 6.—The flame of war is sweeping Albania. Servians and Albanians are engaged in hostilities near Matia, and heavy losses have been inflicted on both sides.

Bulgars Claim Big Victory Over Servians.

SOFIA, July 6.—The Bulgarian Government claims a decisive victory over the Servian first division east of Uskub. Announcement was made to-day by Premier Gueschoff that the Servians had been driven back with enormous losses.

According to dispatches from Bulgarian army headquarters, the Servians are retreating, following a long battle in the Vardar Valley.

Divorce and Death Sequel to Tag Day

SILVER LAKE, WIS., July 6.—An effort was being made to-day to determine whether the drowning of Leroy D. James in Silver Lake was an accident or a suicide. James obtained a divorce recently after he found his wife and G. Frank Greene, of New York, in a hotel room together. Mrs. James had met Greene when she was helping with a "tag day" campaign for charity.

Crazed by Heat, Man Kills Wife and Self

HUNTSVILLE, ALA., July 6.—Crazed by the intense heat, Ben Strong, a well-to-do planter of Meridianville, near this place, emptied the contents of a double-barreled shotgun into his wife's breast, killing her instantly, and calmly reloading the weapon literally blew his head from his body.

Neighbors were attracted to the scene by the screams of the two small children of the couple.

SALVATION ARMY MAID'S 'PUNCH' DOES FOR ROWDY WHO GRABS HER

She delights crowd by struggle with man.

One might not believe pretty Miss Pearl McKay, a sixteen-year-old Salvation Army lassie, has punch enough in her right arm to put out a big, strong man, but there is one man in Atlanta who knows that she has. Generally Miss McKay's uniform entitles her to every protection, but, to quote her own words, "sometimes a rowdy who doesn't know any better tries to get fresh."

Miss McKay sells the "War Cry" in offices, stores, on the streets, and also in near-beer saloons, and only one time during her six months' experience in Atlanta has she had an unpleasant experience.

On this occasion Miss McKay was selling the "War Cry" in a near-beer saloon. Starting out the door, she was seized from behind by a intoxicated man. Quickly turning, Miss McKay struck the man in the face. This angered him, and instead of loosening his hold, he tightened it.

With a desperate effort she tore from his grasp and struck her assailant with all her might. He staggered back, but the little Salvation Army lassie's ire was up, and she went after the man, raining blow after blow on his face and head.

Evidently realizing that there was to be no let-up in the sturdy blows of the angered girl, the man turned and fled, followed by the delighted jeers of the spectators.

Atlanta-Carolina Highway Proposed

ELLIJAY, July 6.—A monster barbecue and good roads meeting was held at Ellijay yesterday in the interest of an automobile highway from Atlanta to Murphy, N. C. Enthusiastic speeches were made by Dr. E. W. Watkins, of Ellijay; C. J. Haden, of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce; Professor Harwood, of the Chamber of Commerce of Murphy, and others.

A practical working scheme suggested is for Gilmer, Pickens and Fannin Counties to pool their convicts and go to work on the road at an early date, raising money by popular subscription for machinery.

Saneness of Fourth Delights Atlantans

Atlanta advocates of a sane Fourth of July are rejoicing Saturday over the saneness of the celebration here. But four accidents were reported, and none of them are regarded as serious. Despite the crowds the ambulance drivers had a quiet day, and throughout it was the most sane Fourth which Atlanta has ever experienced.

Chief of Police Beavers, to prevent disorder, doubled the force throughout the daylight hours. The officers, however, found everything serene.

Senate Is Likely to Ignore Insult to Flag

WASHINGTON, July 6.—No official notice will be taken by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee of the trampling unedr foot of the American flag in Winnipeg, Manitoba, yesterday, if Senator Bacon, chaifman of the committee, has his way. He said to-day:

"I regard this incident as the ebullition of an excited crowd. I am sure no national recognition of the act will be made."

"It seems to have been a very foolish affair," said Representative Broussard, of Louisiana, member of the Foregin Affairs Committee of the House.

NECK BROKEN IN WRECK OF AUTO

One Dead, Two Probably Fatally Injured and Two Seriously Hurt in Gadsden.

GADSDEN, July 6.—One man was killed and four others injured, two probably fatally, when an automobile in which they were taking a joy ride over mountain roads near here, plunged over a 20-foot embankment and turned turtle.

Will Perkins, 25 years old, was caught under a step of the overturned machine and his neck was broken. Charles Galloway, owner and driver of the car, suffered a broken arm, several fractured ribs and internal injuries. Mrs. Cobb was internally injured. Tom Howide's hip was sprained and he received serious internal injuries.

Perkins and Howide had been fishing and were walking home when they met the automobile party and were induced to ride—they had been in the machine only three minutes when the accident took place. Galloway was running fast to frighten the two new passengers and they were begging him to slow down when the machine took its fatal plunge and turned over three times before striking the bottom of the chasm.

Perkins was a married man, having a wife and four children.

R. F. D. Men Urge State Road Body

At the annual meeting of the Rural Mail Carriers' Association of Georgia a resolution was adopted urging the creation of a state highway commission and that all rural routes be made public roads. The carriers, who are among the most active advocates of better roads, were unanimous.

They were given an address of welcome by Mayor Woodward. Fred L. White, of the letter carriers, responded. Congressman Thomas W. Hardwick delivered an address and a number of other talks were made.

At the second session of the meeting Saturday Governor John M. Slaton and W. D. Brown, editor of The R. F. D. News, of Washington, made talks. The meeting was prepared to adjourn after the election of officers.

FIGHTS MAD DOG, SAVING CHILDREN

Youth Holds Animal by Neck 30 Minutes — Police Come and Slay It—Hailed as Hero.

Displaying great courage and judgment, J. A. LaHatte, 17 years old, of 125 Washington Street, held a mad bulldog by the throat 30 minutes Friday afternoon, saving his own life and that of several small children.

LaHatte noticed the dog following and snapping at children playing on Washington Street. He warned them of their danger. The animal turned into the yard of 295 Washington Street and entered the home of Mrs. Mary L. Belcher, trailing after the frightened children to an upstairs bedroom.

LaHatte went to their rescue. In the upstairs apartment the dog leaped at him. He caught the animal in the air and held his jaws apart till an opportunity to clutch its neck presented itself, when he shifted his grip.

Policemen Shumate and Palmer arrived in answer to summons. While LaHatte held the dog, they tied a rope about his neck, lowered it to the ground, tied it to a tree and shot it to death with their revolvers.

Policemen and all the men and women in the neighborhood gave LaHatte an informal levee, complimenting him on his bravery.

Negro's Head Turns Shot; Woman Injured

KANSAS CITY, MO., July 6.—A bullet fired by a negro at George Wren, another negro, struck the latter on the forehead, glanced from his skull and wounded Mrs. Edward T. Smith, 60, who was passing in a street car.

Wren was slightly injured. The shoter escaped.

ARMY OF PAST IN RETREAT FROM GETTYSBURG

Thousands of Blue and Gray Clad Veterans Leave Great Bivouac of Peace.

GETTYSBURG, PA., July 6.—Gettysburg again resounds to the tread of marching men. Thousands of blue and gray clad veterans, the great army of the past that has encamped for six days on the hilltops around the town, are passing through it on their way to railroad stations and homeward. By to-night the great battlefield will be as deserted as it was 50 years ago and the jubilee celebration a thing of the past.

Beginning early this morning, special trains outward bound—north, east, south and west—pulled out of Gettysburg at quarter-hour intervals. It is estimated that 20,000 veterans abandoned camp during the forenoon. The remaining 10,000 will leave during the afternoon. About 25,000 of the old soldiers started for home yesterday.

The 50,000 tents making up the city of canvas will not be removed before next week. On Monday Major Normoyle will set his regulars at work striking the tents and getting them ready for shipment.

Atlantans' Brother Seeks Big U. S. Job

RICHMOND, July 6.—Colonel William H. Chapman, revenue agent in charge of the Virginia District, is being strongly urged for the position of chief revenue agent, with headquarters in Washington. This place is now held by G. W. Trowbridge, a Republican.

Two Drowned Near Savannah on Fourth

SAVANNAH, July 6.—The Fourth took a toll of two deaths near Savannah yesterday. George Egan, 17 years old, of Barrigan, was drowned in a creek near Herb River, Thunderbolt, when he got over his depth while in bathing. But for the timely arrival of a boatman, Dewey Holmes would also have been drowned.

James O. Knight, aged 22, fell from a boat on the Ogeechee River and was drowned before other people in the boat could go to his rescue. He was attending a Sunday school class picnic.

Giant Fish Wounds Boy, 16, in Swimming

MARSHFIELD, WIS., July 6.—The following fish story is vouched for by Dr. Harold Jensen, of Park Falls, Wis., who dressed the wounds of the boy.

A giant muskallonge attacked Frank Haasl, Jr., 16 years old, when he was in bathing and tried to drag him beneath the surface. When the boy was rescued he was covered with scratches and bites, and it was necessary for his swimming companions to carry him in an automobile to the nearest physician.

Effective Home Remedy For Lung Trouble

It is a serious matter when the lungs are affected. A trip away or to a sanatorium is not only expensive, but it involves separation from home and friends. Some are benefited, but few can safely return. Eckman's Alterative is effective for home treatment. For example:

231 S. Atlantic Ave., Haddonfield, N. J.

"Gentlemen: In the fall of 1905 I contracted a very severe cold, which settled on my lungs. At last I began to raise sputum, and my physician then told me I must go to California immediately. At this time I was advised to take Eckman's Alterative. I stayed at home and commenced taking it the last week in October. I began to improve, and the first week in January, 1906, I resumed by regular occupation, having gained 25 pounds, fully restored to health. It is now seven years since my recovery has been effected, and I cannot praise Eckman's Alterative too highly. I have recommended it with excellent results."

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in cases of severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all Jacobs' drugs stores, and other leading druggists. The New Bazar edited for the woman who must keep au courant with the smart world

THE best from each field of art, all the resources of brush, pen and camera, beautiful paper, perfect typography, render it a magazine individual in its expression and absorbing in its interest to the woman of fashion. In its new form, Harper's Bazar is the edition de luxe of women's magazines.

Sparkling with the news of both Europe and America, the Bazar makes instant appeal to the woman of the smart world.

If she would read of social functions, races or sports here or abroad, she finds in it the most noteworthy. If she would discover the latest creations from the ateliers of Paris, she sees here their most recent expression.

The skill of the couturiers, of the artist, of the decorator is displayed in its myriad possibilities. Vexatious questions as to the maintenance of her establishment and any like phases which come within the realm of the woman whose time is much in demand, are discussed by those well versed in these matters.

In the July number, Elsie de Wolfe gives a description and views of her own home; Mrs. August Belmont has an illustrated article concerning the artistic development of the child; the lovely Countess of Warwick reveals the secret of the retention of personal charm.

There are photographs of the newer landscape effects secured in the Rockefeller gardens, and reproductions of the most famous paintings of Mrs. Astor, Mrs. George Gould and other renowned beauties of our times.

What is more, there are the costumes which are most à la mode from the stage, models from Lady Duff Gordon, sketches by Tighe, showing the newest cunning of the French houses and an important message from Henri Bendel as to Fall hats.

For diversion, a new set of Elinor Glyn's piquant letters and another powerful story from the pen of Robert W. Chambers with illustrations by Charles Dana Gibson.

COUNCIL ORDERS W. PEACHTREE MATERIAL

Retaining Walls Will Be Put in Soon, Ready for Grading to Begin September 15.

Council's Streets Committee did not celebrate the Glorious Fourth as a holiday, but spent the afternoon considering plans of improvement.

A resolution by Councilman Jesse Wood was adopted, authorizing Chief of Construction R. M. Clayton to purchase material for the retaining walls on West Peachtree Street. Chairman Shelby Smith, of the County Commission, had sent a communication to the committee announcing the county would be ready to begin the regrading of West Peachtree Street by September 15.

An effort was made to put the county convicts to work at once on the Whitehall Street regrading project, but the committee decided it would be impossible to begin this work before October 15, the date originally agreed upon.

When the Atlanta Gas Light Company made a proposal to sell to the city its tar road binder, Agasco, for six cents a gallon, members of the committee declared they considered it a good idea to use the binder on all chert roads. Councilman Claude L. Ashley said he would endeavor to have it used on Forrest Avenue.

On the request of the Georgia Railway and Power Company the committee decided to recommend to Council that permission to change the river car line be granted so as to relieve congestion at Marietta and Broad Streets, the present terminus of the river line.

The plan is to have the river cars come in Walton street and around into Marietta Street by a loop through Forsyth Street, passengers being taken on at Grady Monument.

Bull Moose Attacks Man in Automobile

DULUTH, MINN., July 6.—A real, dyed-in-the-wool Bull Mooser was put to flight shortly before midnight by one of the largest bull moose seen in these parts for some time.

Floyd Davidson, who voted twice for Roosevelt and who says he'll scratch his ticket for him next election whether he is on the ticket or not, was driving his car down Second Avenue when from the opposite direction charged the infuriated animal with new-grown antlers lowered at the headlights. Davidson swerved his car to one side.

Dislocates Leg as She Dances Tango

PITTSBURG, PA., July 6.—Miss Elizabeth Arbuthnot, society girl and member of one of the leading families of Pittsburg, dislocated a bone in her left leg while dancing tango at a fashionable party in the East End. Boncsetter Reese, of Youngstown, was here, attending the International Elstedfodd.

His services were called into requisition to untango the tangoed limb. Miss Arbuthnot is much improved.

ENJOYED FOURTH WITH PONIES IN GRANT PARK

A rush is on in the contest department of The Georgian and American. This is the last day of the pony contest bonus offer for clubs of five subscriptions, and the contestants are filing in by the score, turning in hundreds of dollars for subscriptions and taking advantage of the opportunity to win extra votes for every group of five into which their lists of subscribers may be divided.

Until midnight Saturday the office will be open to receive subscriptions, but after the tick of midnight the club of five offer will not count.

When the special offer closes the work of tabulation will begin. There is no hope, however, that the contest department will be able to compile all bonuses and award them properly before a week has elapsed. Probably the announcement will be made in The Sunday American a week hence.

Almost every candidate has hustled his best to take full advantage of the offer, and hundreds of dollars for subscriptions have been turned in. Through a misapprehension, many thought Friday the last day on which these clubs could be voted. This was a mistake, but it did no harm. Those who were misguided simply were told they had another day in which to work.

By far the greater number, however, enjoyed the outing at Grant Park. Nine of the pony outfits, some harnessed to buggies and some saddled, left the Alabama Street offices of the contest department at 1 o'clock. Arriving at the park, there was a frolic. Every contestant had a chance to ride or drive a pony, and there was lemonade for all.

BASS VIOLIN MASTER BLINDED, RESTS BOW

'Dolph Wurm, the South's greatest master of the bass violin, has had to rest his bow. Cataract has grown over his eyes. As his light gradually has been shut out the darkness has drawn him more and more into seclusion.

Many, especially old-time, Atlantans, remember him as the slender, serious-looking little man who stood on the left end of the orchestra, wearing a black silk skull-cap and leaning on his big fiddle until he became a natural part of the scenery.

He was the Thor who hurled the theatrical thunder. He was the master who marked the syncopated time of the first "rags" at the society balls, silence before the motives of his music had had time to create the real turkey trot.

Fiddle 123 Years Old.

There is no more interesting figure in Atlanta to-day than the old man in his quiet home down on Pine Street with his old comrade, the fiddle, close beside him as he dreams of other and eventful days.

The fiddle, which Mr. Wurm himself said once could vibrate so strongly that it rattled the window panes, now has a plaintive note on account of its cracks. It was made in Germany in 1790 and was brought to this country by the owner's father in 1848.

Mr. Wurm was for 40 years one of the principal members of the Wurm Orchestra. They furnished the music at all the society events at the old Kimball House, when the Kimball House was the social center of Georgia. For 18 years they formed the orchestra at DeGive's Opera House, now the Bijou Theater. All the members, especially 'Dolph, on account of his big fiddle, grew to be among the best known men in Atlanta.

He Loves the Instrument.

Mr. Wurm took out his fiddle when a Georgian reported called to see him. Tenderly he stroked its strings.

"A bass fiddle is not usually regarded as a very affectionate member of the orchestra," he said. "The other members try to make of it an object of humor. They used to joke me about not being able to sit down when I played.

"Somehow the instrument impressed me differently. When my father began to teach us to play on the different instruments I naturally took to the bass violin. And I have stuck to it ever since, always playing the same fiddle.

"In this day most of the musicians in Atlanta have something else to do which they call their regular vocation. They play for extra money. But I never did anything but play the bass violin. Mind you, I never married, and lived economically.

Once Chess Champion.

"During my leisure I played chess. That program seemed to me the best way to enjoy life."

Mr. Wurm explained that he had not played for a year. He said he also had to give up his beloved chess, of which he was once the champion of Georgia. But in his calm philosophy he remarked:

"My doctor tells me as soon as this cataract is ripe he can operate and restore my sight. Then in a few months I will be playing again, both the fiddle and the game of chess.

"Of course, the old fiddle is cracked. You know it doesn't matter how much you may think of a bass fiddle it is awkward to handle. But the tone of my old violin is still deep and sweet, though not so loud as it once was."

ARREST NEAR OF AUTOIST WHO HIT CHILD

Citizens Join Hunt for Speeder. Declare They Can Identify Guilty Driver.

The police dragnet set for the automobile driver who ran down and seriously injured little Eva Kilpatrick last Wednesday has resulted in the finding of a clew which, it is believed, will result in the arrest of the guilty party within twenty-four hours.

Special Officer J. B. Dorsett, who had been detailed on the case, reported to Captain Poole Saturday morning that he had found several persons who reside in the vicinity of the Kilpatrick home who say they will be able to identify the driver of the car.

Although none of these persons witnessed the accident, they did see the car both before and after the accident, it is said, and furthermore have seen the same car pass down Mills Street on other occasions.

In the meantime the war on speed has been waged so vigorously that Recorder Broyles had not a single case before him Monday morning. He declared, however, that breakers of the law would promptly be sent to the stockade upon conviction.

AUTOISTS!

Take a spin to Crystalake Country Club Sunday (Bennett's Mill) via Jonesboro and Fayetteville. Hour's ride over fine roads. Beautiful grove around 100-acre lake. Good bathing in clean water. Pick you out a nice lot and join the club being formed. Fine fishing. Delightful place to camp and spend summer. Ask for Mr. Carroll, on the grounds.

The proper way to make a double play at second?

How a player should hold the bat when laying down a bunt?

The proper way to field a ground ball?

Why the batter should "choke the bat" to get the best results?

FINDS FARMERS SERFS UNDER U. S. LAWS

By JOHN SPRUNT HILL.
(North Carolina Member American Farm Credits Commission.)

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, July 6.—The banking system of America has until now been conducted too much on city lines. It has neglected the farmer.

Investors will not furnish money to the farmer at the same rates of interest as to railroads and corporations:

Firstly, because of antiquated laws in a majority of the States taxing mortgages at from 2 to 3 per cent, while railroad bonds, payable to bearer, and therefore easily concealed, practically remain untaxed;

U. S. Banking Restrictions.

We have one banking institution for about 4,000 people in the United States, but national banks are prohibited by law from lending money on real estate and a great majority of the State banks, savings banks and trust companies, for some reason which they are unable satisfactorily to define, share this prejudice.

Though along this line in the United States is moulded almost entirely by city bankers who do not come in close contact with the farmer and small land owner. City bankers are apt to assume that principles governing the conduct of business in cities should be applied to the financial affairs of farmers. The result is that the merchants and manufacturers and business men in cities have virtually all the machinery for obtaining cheap credit in their hands while the average farmer is thrown back on such forms of high-priced credit as he can obtain from local merchants.

Financial Serfdom.

The small farmer is, therefore, restricted in the choice of places for buying his supplies, forced to pay at least 33 1-3 percent higher for supplies than other persons paying cash, is also frequently restricted as to the place for selling his products, denied the benefits of competitive prices, and in many cases reduced to a state of financial serfdom.

There is no such discrimination in Europe. Generally speaking, Continental Europe furnishes sound, elastic credit to the farmer on as good or even more favorable basis than to any other class. We need a campaign of education along this line in the United States that will promote a better understanding between our bankers and farmers.

We need a system in the United States by which land mortgages can be quickly and economically mobilized so that collateral trust bonds issued on these aggregated mortgages can be made readily negotiable and marketable.

What is the plain story of Europe should be the story of the United States, namely, that farm lands on a basis of real value, earning power and stability are the best asset in the country. Some day doubtless President Wilson and Bryan and Taft will give more attention to the farmers and less to cities.

In the United States we need co-operation to still the raging winds of discontent and give relief in the sunshine of equal opportunity of organized democratic manhood and brotherly love.

Need of Co-Operation.

Co-operation is necessary to check socialism, which tends always to drag things down to one level. Co-operation is essentially American. Socialism is not American. In many parts of Europe co-operation flourishes, and land is considered a safer and more favorable basis of credit than stocks of corporations and other securities.

The foolish laws and more foolish prejudices against extending credit on land as security should be abolished, and as in Europe, money advanced 5 per cent or less, should be brought within the reach of the small farmer. Our antiquated laws should be reformed, and our farmers should know some of that "new freedom" of whom President Wilson speaks and hopes so much.

Taste for Melons Seems on the Wane

Dealers in watermelons are up in arms over the apparent lost appetite of Atlantans for the luscious fruit or vegetable, as you choose to call it. Despite the fact that a large supply of the juicy fruit was in Atlanta yesterday the demand was small.

"What has become of the old watermelon cutting parties?" queried one dealer. "The sale of watermelons in restaurants is greatly on the increase, but the home consumption is falling off rapidly.

Snubbed by Senate, Suffragists to Ask House for Chamber

Undaunted by the refusal of the Senate to allow them to use the Senate chamber for meeting places, Atlanta suffragists will attempt to obtain the House of Representatives hall. When the House convenes Monday it will find a large delegation of women waiting to make this request.

Floor Leader Blackburn and Representative R. Y. Smith, the suffragists claim, will bring the matter before the House. So far no objection, they say, has been offered to their using the House chamber.

Mrs. Mary McLendon is quite certain the House will grant them the courtesy, which she declared had been accorded them before.

"The spectacle of the women of Georgia having to beg the men for courtesy is truly a pitiful sight," said Mrs. McLendon.

HOUSE PAGE PREDICTS HE WILL BE PRESIDENT

Two D. F. McClatcheys who hold important positions in the Georgia House.

Boy thinks Speaker and Reading Clerk should be one.

Reading Clerk McClatchey's 8-Year-Old Son Has Determined on Career of Public Service.

Eight years of age with three years' experience as a page in the House of Representatives is the luck of D. F. McClatchey, Jr., who is also quite fond of sitting on the knee of his father, who has been Reading Clerk of the House for sixteen years.

Young D. F. bids fair to prove as popular as his father, who manages to inject enough life in the reading of House bills to make it pleasant for the Legislature. Acoustics of the House are not the best in the world, and the powerful voice of D. F. McClatchey is about the only one which has ever overcome this difficulty.

The ambition of young D. F., though, is to combine the positions of Reading Clerk and Speaker. He like his father's job, but he also has a great longing to handle the gavel.

He is sure of a place as page in the House until he is old enough to vote, when he expects to become a full-fledged member of the House. He will then take a turn in the Senate, put in a couple of terms as Governor, try out Congress for a few terms and then make himself President. And there's not a member of the House who does not believe this prediction is more than apt to come true. The youngster can shake hands with you as heartily as any politician who ever lived, or curl up in his father's lap as cute and loving as a youngster should be.

"Keep your eye on that young McClatchey," is the way his father likes to refer to him.

SEARCHING SIDELIGHTS ON POLITICS IN GEORGIA

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

The political hosts in Georgia may not realize it quite, but when William Michael Bairman, of The Macon Telegraph, passed away on Thursday last the best informed man on things political in Georgia ceased to be.

Not only was he the best informed man in Georgia on State politics, but he was one of the sweetest and gentlest characters that ever lived within the Commonwealth.

Mr. Bairman was modest to an extraordinary degree, and one rarely saw his name in print—this writer never saw it figure in the head lines, at least, until those head lines announced Mr. Bairman's untimely death.

He it was who kept for years that remarkable "scrap book" of The Telegraph, so often invoked by his chief, Colonel Pendleton, to the chagrin, humiliation and undoing of an antagonist!

If ever you, Mr. Politician, did anything in Georgia that got into a newspaper somewhere, you may rest assured it was in this fearful and wonderful "scrap book!"

And yet Mr. Bairman did not keep that book for the purpose of humiliating or undoing antagonists so much as he kept it for the honorable and worthy purpose of perpetuating genuine history and keeping the records absolutely right. Far from desiring to hurt unnecessarily the feelings of any person, Bairman would not have hurt the feelings of God's humblest creature if it might be avoided!

Like the other men of his kind one occasionally meets as one passes down the way of life, Mr. Bairman was exceedingly generous to his fellow men, both in judgment upon them and in ministering to their material wants. He rarely if ever spoke an unkind word of any man, and if he ever turned down an appeal for charity few people sem to have known anything about it.

For many years he has been Editor Pendleton's right-hand man—and it is certain that that splendid editor will miss him sorely. But the greatest loss is sustained by the readers of The Telegraph. He has been, often unknown to them, their surest source of information and fact.

Postmaster J. Park Bowie, by the womanly grace of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, will take charge of the Rome office on Tuesday next. When boys and girls together, Mr. Bowie and Mrs. Wilson used to make "mud pies."

Mr. Bowie lost an even $100, and was delayed in going into office two weeks because of a stupid and clumsy mistake made in his commission when it was first issued.

When his first commission arrived it was discovered that it had Rome down as being in "Rome" County instead of in "Floyd" County, and it had to go back for correction. So exacting are the red-tape methods in the Postoffice Department that it was two good weeks before the commission got back, shaped up as it should be.

Postmaster Barclay, the efficient outgoing official, could not see where he stood to shed unnecessary tears over the situation, however, as it rounded up an even $100 for him that he wasn't expecting to get!

Senator E. H. Elkins, of the Fifteenth District, already has grown to be one of the best-known men in the General Assembly.

He is democratic in his ways and the dignity of a Senator, while duly appreciated by him, does not sit too heavily upon him. He is a good mixer and makes friends easily.

Mr. Elkins is a fine business man, and is looked upon generally as safe and sane in judgment, and as a man whose word always is as good as his bond. He evidently is destined to take a high stand in the present Legislature.

Mr. Park, of Liberty, objects to Latin phrases in proposed bills and resolutions.

When Mr. Wright, of Floyd, sent a resolution to the clerk's desk the other day, proposing that certain days to be taken as vacation be declared "dies non," Mr. Park promptly objected. He said he didn't know what "dies non" meant, and he didn't propose to vote for something he didn't know anything whatever about!

Amid the chorus of "noes" entered against Mr. Wright's proposal, Mr. Park's was easily the most vociferous.

The present Legislature, by the way, doesn't seem inclined to do anything calculated to run the legislative session over its natural fifty days' limit.

Mr. Hardwick has announced his intention not to be a candidate to succeed himself. He desires to enter actively into the practice of law, and feels that he can not well spare further time to Congressional service.

The Congressman from the Tenth has had ten years' experience and in that time has risen to be one of the real influential men in the House. He is attentive to his duties, and has a particularly keen insight into things. He is now a member of the House Committee on Rules, which is the highest evidence of his standing among his colleagues.

Hardwick still is a young man, and has many years of usefulness ahead of him. It is a matter of genuine regret to thousands of Georgians that he has elected to retire at the end of his present term.

Next week will see the beginning of real legislative activity.

All the committees of the Senate and House have been organized and are ready for business. There is not a committee of importance, moreover, that hasn't already on hand a more or less jam of business. Between Monday and Saturday there should be reported back to the House a large number of bills with recommendations.

Representative Crawford Wheatley intends working his big Committee on Appropriations to a frazzle, if necessary, in order to get the general appropriations bill on its way to the Senate. But before starting them to work Mr. Wheatley proposes putting them in a perfectly good humor with himself and the world in general by dining them sumptuously.

He will give the committee an elaborate dinner Tuesday evening at the Capital City Club.

FLANDERS CASE ENDED; RUMOR CONFIRMED

Evidence Is Insufficient to Show Woman Had Guilty Knowledge of Slaying, Prosecutor Says.

SWAINSBORO, GA., July 6.—The reports which have been published from time to time that Mrs. Mattie Flanders will never be tried for murder of her husband to-day are formally confirmed by a statement made by A. S. Bradley, of counsel engaged by the Flanders family to prosecute the woman.

"The State does not expect to try the case against Mrs. Flanders, and I will ask the court to enter a nolle prosequi," Mr. Bradley said.

"This in fact seems to be the only honorable course to pursue, frankly, so far as the attorneys representing the prosecution are concerned. We have been convinced of the fact ever since the trial of Dr. McNaughton, and before the jury rendered a verdict the matter was discussed among us. We decided that while the evidence showed beyond a doubt the guilt of Dr. McNaughton it was legally insufficient to connect Mrs. Flanders with the crime.

"There is great distinction between the cases against the two defendants, and this has been especially marked by the line of reasoning the Supreme Court adopted in arriving at a judgment sustaining their verdict against Dr. McNaughton.

"The State is not in possession of sufficient evidence to even lead to a conclusion that Mrs. Flanders was aware that drugs administered to her husband were poisonous.

"We have continued the trial so far for the sole reason that we felt that it might be possible more evidence would be obtained. It has not been obtained and there seems to be no reasonable possibility that any stronger case can be made out at this time. If more evidence can be brought to light in the future it still would be possible to indict the defendant and try her.

"Frankly I always have felt that I did not care to go before a jury and ask it to render a verdict of conviction in a case in which I have absolutely no confidence in the legal sufficiency of the evidence."

Smithsonian Given Star-Spangled Flag

WASHINGTON, July 6.—The Smithsonian Institution announces that the original Star-Spangled Banner was in the possession of the Smithsonian and had been placed on exhibition. This flag floated over Fort McHenry on September 13 and 14, 1814, when the British fleet attacked Baltimore. It is 27 feet 6 inches wide by 32 feet 10 inches long and has fifteen stripes and fifteen stars.

The flag that was the inspiration for the famous patriotic song was kept by Colonel George Armistead, who was in command at Fort McHenry, and handed down to his grandson, Even Appleton, of New York.

RAW DEAL FOR FANS AT PONCY PARK ON 4TH

It's Up to the Local Association to Honor Rain Checks for the Second Game.

By W. S. Farnsworth.

WE have been bunked so many times on fake fights that it doesn't sting when we are forced to separate ourselves from a perfectly good two-dollar bill nowadays to see a pair of alleged boxers stall through ten rounds.

But we had always considered that the good game of baseball would net us a full value return for our money. Yesterday, however, we were "held up" and our pocketbook picked with the skill of an expert light-fingered gent.

It came first in the morning at Poncy Park. The Crackers and Pelicans were scheduled to play to a finish. Instead the game was called at the end of the tenth inning with the score two-all. It was then five minutes after 1 o'clock.

Should Have Played It Out.

All the rest of the afternoon was open and the game should have been played out. But, of course, a tie game is always played off. Thereby the local association will net great profits with a double-header on the next trip of the Pelicans here.

We stood for that bit of "highway" without squealing.

But what a yell we did let out about 6 o'clock last evening.

The Crackers and Pelicans met again in the afternoon. They had battled four innings when it started raining.

Seven thousand fans waited the usual 30 minutes.

The umpires didn't come out on the field and declare themselves one way or the other.

Five thousand fans took it for granted that everything was off for the day. The elements had cheated them out of an opportunity to witness what would have probably proved a mighty interesting battle.

But they were consoled by the fact that tucked away in their coat pockets were rain checks. They would yet be given a run for their money.

Brooms Swept Off Water.

Exactly one hour and five minutes after the game had been called the umpires, players and ground keepers appeared on the field. Brooms swept the tons of water off the base lines and play was resumed.

The management didn't want to honor those rain checks. If one more inning could be played they were in hundreds of dollars. The Pels held a 3 to 1 lead. They never figured the Crackers would tie up the count in the fifth. But they did. Then the game went on for two more innings, and again it was called on account of darkness, and still a tie.

Likewise, the local association, if they take our suggestion, will still honor those rain checks.

Lund, of the Irish-American Athletic Club, New York, broke the only record of the day, throwing the javelin 148 feet 8 inches, a new junior mark.

A feature of the day was the victory of James Ray, of the Illinois Athletic Club, over Strobine, an Olympic point winner in the five-mile run. Ray lay back until nearly the last lap, when he shot ahead and finished 30 yards in front of Strobine, who set the pace practically all the way. The time was 26:39.

PIRATES' GOOD HURLERS FAIL TO LIFT TEAM

ST. LOUIS, July 5.—For the first time in thirteen years, the Pittsburg club is in the second division as late as June 26. During Fred Clarke's regime in the camp of the Corsairs, the club never has finished worse than fourth. The low-water mark was reached in 1904. He has won four pennants and finished second or third on all other occasions. Consequently the Smoketown fans are unable to reconcile themselves to the present lowly position of the team, which, in advance of the season was said to possess just one more pennant kick.

Second division clubs are as unusual in Pittsburg as first division entries are in St. Louis. The Pirate fans get just as excited over their team being in fifth place as local shouters would if either the Cards or Browns burrowed their way into the exclusive quartet at the top of the heap. For that reason there is trouble in the Pittsburg camp.

Just a Few Reasons.

Asked for a reason for the Pirates' fall-down, one of the players placed the blame on Jinx which has pursued the club with a deal of perseverance. Here are a few pertinent facts:

Wagner was on the shelf from April 10 until late in May.

Bobby Byrne had a long batting slump in May.

Artie Hofman deteriorated into a minor leaguer and was released.

"So there you are," said the analyist. "We have had good pitching," he continued. "O'Toole has developed into star. Adams has been going great. So have Camnitz and, at times, Hendrix. We have made our share of hits, as our batting average will prove, but we lacked that punch which is necessary to win. We recently lost six successive games by a margin of one run. We were losing, and couldn't get a break. One error a day would be injected at the wrong time, costing us defeat. It was pretty tough going."

DANNY GOODMAN STOPPED IN EIGHTH BY MURPHY

Jimmy Travers, of Chicago, knocked out Willie Mitchell, of Philadelphia, in the fourth round.

Sports and Such

"TO SETTLE AN ARGUMENT" an earnest party wants to know if the educated or college ball player is more useful on the diamond than the boy who picked up his baseball around the sand lots.

This query may be deftly sidestepped by taking the position that it doesn't make any difference where a ball player learns to play baseball so long as he learns. But such dodges are unworthy. What the correspondent wants to know is whether education is likely to give a man the bulge on the uneducated player, and the answer is: Not so that you can notice it.

Education in any direction is useful only in the exact ratio of its application. Thus, it is easy to see that a profound knowledge of the effect of the political clubs on the life of the Athenian republic is not going to help a man decide in a tenth of a second where to throw the ball when he has nailed a line drive and three men are running in three different directions.

* * *

GIVEN A CERTAIN FAIR PROPORTION of intelligence and adeptness in baseball is a matter of practice. Men who think quickly on the ball field have been used to thinking quickly from infancy as a rule, and in sudden crises their minds from long habit work automatically and correctly. The time is usually too short for conscious thought.

* * *

IN THE MECHANICAL science of the game the same is true. The college professors began explaining the spit-ball a long time after Chesbro and his followers had stood the American League on its head. Chesbro didn't know any more about the physics of the spitball than he knew about the influence of the Medici on the Renaissance, but no college professor could tell him anything about throwing one. Radbourne was curving a baseball at a time when some scientists were holding that the feat was impossible.

John Ward, a real college man and a great ball player, invented the trick of left-handed batting to shorten the run to first base, and his trained mind probably had something to do with that, for it was constructive thought. On the other hand, Buck Ewing, ignorant as dirt, was even a greater baseball man than Ward and infinitely his superior as an executive.

Much of the "inside" baseball of to-day was fathered by "Ten-Thousand-Dollar" Kelly, who is considered one of the swiftest thinkers that ever played the game, yet Kelly had to have help with the menu card when he broke into the league.

Harry Dunlap, the "king of second basemen," was almost entirely without education, but his skill in working out the trapped ball trick is the chief reason that we now have the infield fly rule.

Dunlap was so ignorant that he had to make a mark to his contract in lieu of a signature, but so shrewd was his business mind that he got a $5,000 figure into the same contract, more than 95 per cent of the ball players to-day are drawing. And we know a man of rare mental attainments who once stole second with the bases full.

So there you are.

* * *

FORTUNE IS A JOCULAR dame. Loose-handed Garry Herrmann's team in Cincinnati played a whole game with one ball the other day, while Charlie Murphy's Cubs use up a couple of dozen a day.

CHAVEZ STOPS DELL.

TRINIDAD, COLO., July 4.—Benny Chavez, of this city, knocked out Harry Dell, of San Francisco, in the eleventh round of their scheduled 20-round bout yesterday.

Cross Earns Right to Fight Ritchie for Title

Anderson Was Never in Running With Gothamite

By Paul Armstrong.

Author of the "Escape," "Deep Purple," "Alias Jimmy Valentine" and Other Celebrated Plays.

Yesterday he took the rugged Anderson, strong as a bull, teeming with confidence. From the first stab at the body which opened the fray to the last sizzling right hook that flattened him for ten minutes—never mind the ten seconds—Anderson was second. In the first clinch he was blocked with his right chop at the short ribs. Perhaps the loss of his ace so early in the game too some of his confidence. It is a red, white and blue certainty that two body blows which Cross tore into Anderson in the seventh round took about all his steam. From that on he was kosher.

When they came stripped to the fray, there was little difference in their size—not near as much when seen in clothes. Anderson was coarser, bigger boned and looked more rugged, but Cross looked the class. He carried nothing that he could not use in the ring. He was fit, his flesh like velvet and his eyes bright as a hungry snake's.

He got lucky immediately. Anderson had copped the corner with his back to the sun. A coin was tossed. He moved and sat in the other corner, looking at the sun like an eagle. Leach went about things like a business man. He personally inspected Bud's bandages, ordered his clerks about like slaves and got the store ready for the slaughter. In the meantime Anderson smiled and let the others do their will.

Anderson Was Confident.

Cross looked pretty soft to him, evidently, for the smile of pity was still lurking on his lips when the New York boy came feinting in. He got the distance and went to the body with a left jab. He worked in again and drew a lead. They were tangled in a clinch the next second. Anderson let go a chop with the right to the body and found an elbow between him and the mark. He tried for the head and then dropped it for the short ribs. Nothing doing—years and years ago Cross learned how to block that one.

They sparred a moment. Anderson let go a left hook for the head and reached. Cross still kept working in with his straight left for the body. He was stalling for a chance to use the right. Anderson knew it—everybody knew it. Suddenly it came—short? Bud pulled out of reach with a smile. But there was a lot more Anderson had not figured on. Leach shifted as he let go the right and came winging with a left swing. Down went Anderson. He was up instantly, seemingly unhurt.

Knockdown No Accident.

Murmuring boobs who bet 10 to 7, yea, even as good as 2 to 1 on what should have been the short end at 6 to 5, laughed it away—an accident.

It was not. Not a bit like it.

It was planned and executed with deliberation.

If Merkle instead of McGraw had been kicked in the head we could have solved the mystery in a fraction of a moment. The athlete who kicked him would now be wearing a crutch.

Moreover, how does it happen that Mr. Jennings has allowed Mr. Booe to escape from the majors?

ANTHEMING FOR THE FOURTH.

Oh, say can you see, by the afternoon light,
Why so loudly we root while the blood still is streaming,
As we cash in our bets at the end of the fight,
With the losers still sore and the winners still screaming.
The promoters are there with a flock of hot air,
And a man can't get by till he hands them the fare,
And the Star Spangled Banner in sorrow shall shrug
O'er the land of the pug and the home of the thug.

"DOYLE HITTING, GIANTS UNBEATABLE"—STALLINGS

NEW YORK, July 4.—"Larry Doyle has recovered his old form and that is why the Giants are now leading the National League," said George Stallings, manager of the Boston Braves, to-day. "Until recently Doyle was unable to hit with his usual vigor and the Giants were losing games. But they braced the moment Larry's bat began to meet the ball successfully. HARRY KNIGHT MEETS DEATH IN AUTO RACE

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 4.—"Well, just this once more and I'm done," said Harry Knight as he slipped under his steering wheel of his racing car yesterday and prepared to line up for the 200-mile race.

On the 110th lap Knight was thrown from his car as the result of a blown tire and was run over and killed by the car driven by Johnny Jenkins, his best friend. Milton Michaelis, his mechanician, was so seriously injured that he died soon after. Both men claimed Atlanta as their home, though both came originally from Indianapolis.

The death of Knight resulted from an accident similar to the one that gave him the title of "The Hero of the Indianapolis Track." On this occasion Knight drove his car into the concrete wall surrounding the track to avoid running over a man who had fallen from a car.

Knight had been officially declared out of the race, owing to time lost as a result of engine trouble, but despite the fact that he had no chance for the prizes he insisted on continuing the race. Almost in front of the grandstand a tire blew, the car swerved, went over, righted—throwing both men to the ground. Jenkins, who was chasing Knight, went over his body. Knight was terribly mangled and died instantly.

Ralph Mulford won the race, breaking the world's record for 200 miles on a dirt track. He won the distance in 3 hours 21 minutes and 48 seconds. The previous best time was made on the Columbus track by Spencer Wishart in 3 hours 28 minutes and 4 1-2 seconds.

Harry Endicott was second, with the time of 3 hours 45 minutes and 34 55-100 seconds. Ernest Reeder was third, with the time of 3 hours 47 minutes 53 65-100 seconds. Ralph DePalma finished fourth and just within the prize money, with the time of 4 hours 42 61-100 seconds. Prizes aggregated $5,000.

FULL SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS

DANIEL O'NEILL, a powerful, self-made man, forces his only daughter, Mary, into a loveless marriage with the impecunious and profligate Lord Raa, so that his ambition to have his descendants the rightful heirs of the one earldom in Ellan may be realized. Mary, a convent-raised young woman, shocked to find her husband a man of sordid, sensual passions, refuses utterly to have anything to do with him until such time as he can prove himself worthy of her love. During the honeymoon abroad Alma Lier, a divorcee who had been expelled from the convent Mary attended in Rome, attaches herself to the party, and makes the "honeymoon trip" a long series of slights and insults for Lady Raa.

At last Lady Raa becomes certain of the infidelity of her husband and his misconduct with Alma Lier. On her return to London Mary encounters her old playfellow, Martin Conrad, who has returned from his triumphant expedition to the Antarctic. Drawn into ever-closer relations with the only man for whose friendship she ever cared, Mary finally awakes to the fact that she is hopelessly in love with Martin. Terrified by this knowledge, and finding herself more and more in love with Martin, she determines to run away from the cause of her distress, and go home.

Mary's home-coming to Castle Raa is a sad affair. Her husband fills the tumble-down old mansion with hith his fast friends from London, including Alma Lier, who assumes control of the household. Ultimately the illness of her father offers Mary excuse for escape from the intolerable environment. But before visiting her old home Mary appeals in turn to her Bishop and to her father's lawyer, only to be told that neither Church nor State can offer any relief from her false position. She returns next day to Castle Raa to find that Martin is arriving for a farewell visit, and that by Alma Lier's deceitful scheming the whole house party has gone off for a few days' cruise.

During her three days alone with her lover Mary fights a grim battle with temptation only to find on the last night that her faith in renunciation and the laws of the Church is a fragile thing compared with her overwhelming love for this pure-hearted man. With Martin's passionate words, "You are my real wife. I am your real husband," ringing in her brain she forgets everything else, and with strong steps walks across the corridor to Martin's bedroom. This is the action which Martin has advised as being the only course open to them which is sure to bring the one result they are determined to attain—Mary's divorce from Lord Raa.

Mary determines, after the departure of Martin Conrad, to hide herself in London. She is driven by fear of Lord Raa's discovery of her unfaithfulness to him; she is equally afraid of the venomous tongue of Alma Lier. She is no sooner settled in a cheap little boarding house in London than a great hue and cry is raised by her father. Of all persons, it is Mildred, that one truest friend of her convent days, who ferrets her out; but for Mary's sake she breaks a vow and refuses to give her up. Then comes the report of the loss of Martin's ship in the Antarctic. Desperate with grief and fearful for the unborn child which she hopes shall reconcile her to her empty life and typify her great love for Martin, she flees from Mildred to a still more obscure corner of London.

HALL CAINE.

MY NEW quarters were in the poorer district which stands at the back of Bayswater.

The street was a cul-de-sac (of some ten small houses on either side), which was blocked up at the farther end by the high wall of a factory for the "humanization" of milk, and opened out of a busy thoroughfare of inferior shops like a gulley way off a noisy coast. My home in this street was in number one.

My room, which was of fair size, was on the first floor and had two windows to the street, with yellow holland blinds and white muslin curtains.

The furniture consisted of a large bed, a horse hair sofa, three cane-bottomed chairs, a chest of drawers (which stood between the windows), and a mirror over the mantelpiece, which had pink paper, cut into fanciful patterns, over the gilt frame, to keep off the flies.

The floor was covered with linoleum, but there were two strips of carpet, one before the fire and the other by the bed; the walls were papered by a bright red paper representing peonies in bloom; and there were three pictures—a portrait of a Welsh preacher, an engraving entitled "Feed My Sheep" (showing Jesus carrying a lamb), and a memorial card of some member of the family of the house, in the form of a tomb with a weeping angel on either side.

I paid five shillings a week for my room, and, as this included the use of kettle, cooking utensils and crockery, I found to my great delight at the end of the first week that providing for myself (tea, bread and butter and eggs being my principal food) I had spent only ten shillings altogether, which, according to my present needs, left me enough for my time of waiting and several weeks beyond it.

Every morning I went out with a little hand bag to buy my provisions in the front street, and every afternoon I took a walk in the better part of Bayswater and even into the park (Hyde Park), which was not far off, but never near to Piccadilly, or so far east as Bloomsbury, lest I should meet Sister Mildred or be recognized by the old boarders.

Finding it necessary to account for myself, just as at the boarding house, I had adhered to my former name, but said I was the widow of a commander lately lost at sea, which was as near to the truth as I dare venture.

She Tells of Her Coming Motherhood.

I had also made no disguise of the fact that I was expecting a child, a circumstance which secured me much sympathy from the womanly women who were now my neighbors.

They were all worthy women, generally the wives of men working in the milk factory; and therefore the life of our street was very regular.

At five in the morning you heard the halting step of the old "knocker up" who went up and down the street tapping at the bedroom windows with a long pole like a fishing rod. A little before six you heard the clashing of many front doors and the echoing footsteps of the men going to their work. At half-past seven you heard the whoop of the milkman and the rattling of his cans. At half-past eight you heard the little feet of the children, like the pattering of rain, going off to the Board School round the corner. And a little after four in the afternoon you heard the wild cries of the entire juvenile community let loose from lessons, the boys running iron hoops and the girls skipping rope.

After that, our street hummed like a beehive, with the women, washed and combed, standing knitting at their open doors or exchanging confidences across the areas until darkness fell, and each of the mothers called her children in to bed, as an old hen in the farmyard clucks up her chickens.

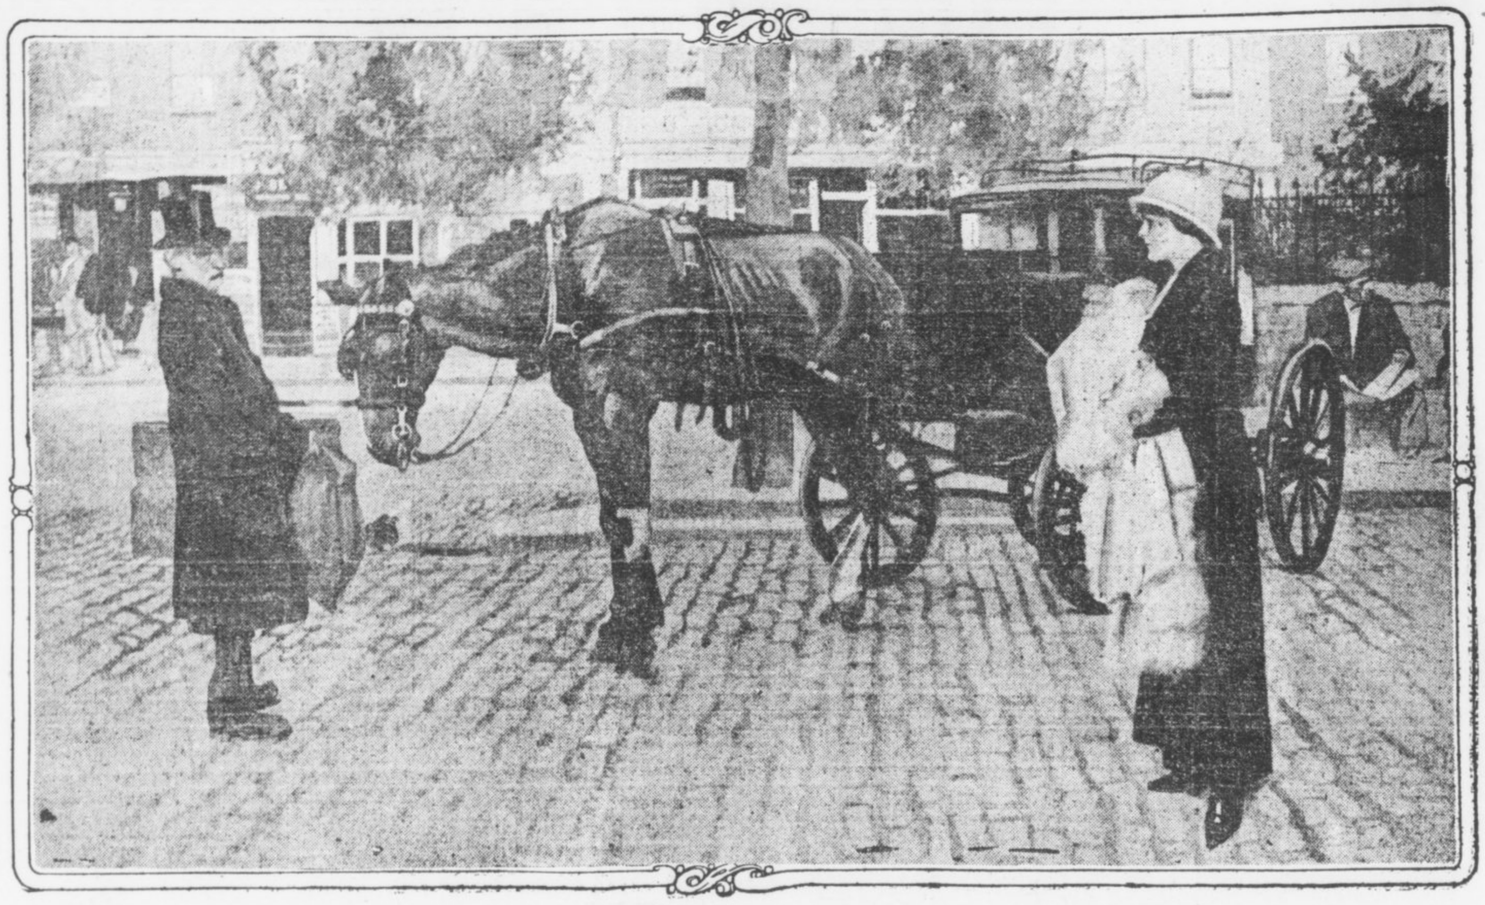
These good creatures were very kind to me. Having satisfied themselves from observation to my habits that I was "respectable," they called me "our lady," and I could not help hearing that I was a "nice young thing," though it was a little against me that I did not go to church or chapel, and had confessed to being a Catholic—for several of our families (including that of my landlady) were members of the Welsh Zion Chapel far away.

Such was the life of the little human cage to which I had confined myself, but I had an inner life that was all my own and very sweet to me.

Getting Ready for The Newcomer.

During the long hours of every day in which I was alone I occupied myself in the making of clothes for my baby—buying linen and flannel and worsted, and borrowing patterns from my Welsh landlady.

This stimulated my tenderness toward the child that was to come, for the heart of a young mother is almost infantile, and I hardly know whether to laugh or cry when I think of the childish things I did and thought and said to myself in those first days when I was alone in my room in that back street in Bayswater.



I asked the old driver how long it would take me to get to Ilford. He looked at me again and said," 'B out 'our and 'alf I should say by the looks of you and you carrying the biby."

Thus long before the baby was born I had christened her. At first I wished to call her Mary, not because I cared for that name myself, but because Martin had said it was the most beautiful in the world. In the end, however, I called her Isabel Mary (because Isabel was my mother's name, and she had been a far better woman than I was), and as I finished my baby's garments one by one I used to put them away in their drawer, saying to myself, "That's Isabel Mary's binder," or "Isabel Mary's christening-robe," as the case might be.

I dare say it was all very foolish. There are tears in my eyes when I think of it now, but there were none then, for, though there were moments when, thinking of Martin, I felt as if life were forever blank and bare, I was almost happy in my poor surroundings, and if it were a cage I had fixed myself in, there was always a bird singing inside of it—the bird that sang in my own bosom.

"When Isabel Mary comes, everything will be all right," I used to think.

This went on for many weeks, and I think it might have gone on until my time was full but for something which, occurring under my eyes, made me tremble with the fear that the life I was living and the hope I was cherishing were really very wrong and selfish.

Of my landlady, Mrs. Williams, I saw very little. She was a rather hard but no doubt heavily laden woman, who had "to do" for a swarm of children, besides two young men lodgers who lived in the kitchen and slept in the room behind mine. Her husband was a quiet man (a carter at the dairy), whom I never saw at all except on the staircase at 10 o'clock at night, when, after winding the tall clock on the landing, he went upstairs to bed in his stocking feet.

Emmerjane, the Family Drudge.

But the outstanding member of the family for me was a shock-headed girl of 14 called Emmerjane, which was a running version of Emma Jane.

I understand that Emmerjane was the illegitimate daughter of Mrs. Williams' dead sister, and that she had been born in Carnarvon, which still shimmered in her memory in purple and gold.

Emmerjane was the drudge of the family, and I first saw her in the street at dusk, mothering a brood of her little cousins.

Afterward she became my drudge also—washing my floor, bringing up my coal and cleaning my grate for sixpence a week, and giving me a great deal of information about my neighbors for nothing.

Thus she told me, speaking broad cockney with a Welsh accent, that the people opposite were named Wagstaffe and that the creaking noise I heard was that of a mangle, which Mrs. Wagstaffe had to keep because her husband was a drunkard.

But the greatest interest of this weird little woman, who had a premature knowledge of things a child ought not to know, was in a house half way down the street on the other side, where steam was always coming from the open door to the front kitchen.

The people who lived there were named Jones. Mrs. Jones "washed" and had a bed-ridden old mother (with two shillings from the parish) and a daughter named Maggie.

Maggie Jones, who was eighteen, and very pretty, used to work in the dairy, but the foreman had taken "advantage of her," and she had just had a baby.

This foreman was named Owen Owens, and he lived at the last number on our side, where two unmarried sisters "kept house" for him and sat in the "singing seat" at Zion.

Maggie thought it was the sisters' fault that Owen Owens did not marry her, so she conceived a great scheme for "besting" them, and this was the tragedy which, through Emmerjane's quick little eyes and her Cockney Welsh tongue, came to me in instalments day by day.

When her baby was a month old Maggie dressed it up "fine" and took it to the photographer's for its "card di visit." The photographs were a long time coming, but when they came they were "heavenly lovely" and Maggie "cried to look at them."

Then she put one in an envelope and addressed it to Owen Owens, and though it had only to cross the street she went out after dark to a pillar-box a long way off lest anybody should see her posting it.

Next day she said: "He'll have it now, for he always comes home to dinner. He'll take it up to his bedroom, look you, and stand it on the washboard, and if either of those sisters touch it he'll give them what's what."

After that she waited anxiously for an acknowledgment and every time the postman passed down our street her pretty pale face would be at the door, saying, "Anything for me to day?" or "Are you sure there's nothing for me, postman?"

Home Cooking

By MAY IRWIN.

THAT the fastidious should look with distrust, if not disgust, upon the hotel or restaurant made hash or ragout, or stew, or minced dish, is quite within my understanding and sympathy. But it is quite different in the well regulated home.

My husband and sons, who are rather spoiled as far as the things of the table are concerned, enjoy beef stews and roast beef hash better than the original roast. Fricassee chicken, when properly prepared, is much better than roast chicken. Spaghetti, when warmed over, is twenty times better than when first cooked. How seldom we eat a really well cooked dish of spaghetti. That is because it is not thoroughly cooked.

Suppose it is Tuesday—ironing day. If there is in your pantry or ice box the skeleton of last night's roast chicken, you are fortunate. From the shreds of meat here and there sticking to the bones you can make an excellent fricassee, or that dish which is a favorite in my household.

Mince the bits of cold chicken together. Chop a small green pepper, a small onion, four mushrooms, a bit of parsley and one cold potato together until very fine. Have a frying pan ready with tablespoonful of hot brown butter, and put the mixture in and stir it well.

Cover it for a few moments and let it brown on one side, as hashed brown potatoes are done. Put on a hot platter and garnish with tomato sauce. This sauce is made by cooking two or three tomatoes for half an hour; strain and add a tablespoonful of butter, salt, pepper and flour enough to thicken a little.

Perhaps you are inclined to toss away three or four tomatoes that are soft, but still good. Their ripeness is no drawback for the favorite breakfast dish of mine, for which I give you the recipe.

HER MINISTRATIONS

THE girl with the silver vanity case tucked a dainty handkerchief into her left glove and sighed.

"It's perfectly awful," she said, "how many persons have dreadful things happen to them these days! Why, all I do is to go to see my poor suffering friends in the hospitals!"

"Who's in the hospital besides Carrie?" asked the girl with the fire-red hat. "How's her appendicitis, anyhow? I sent some carnations, but I've been too busy——"

"Poor Carrie is recovering all right," said the girl with the silver vanity bag. "The house doctor says it is quite remarkable, in view of the seriousness of her case. I wish you could see him, Emma, when he is talking seriously like that. He draws his eyebrows together in a straight line like—oh, who was the actor who always did that? Never mind. Dr. Bennett is perfectly handsome and holds himself like a military man, and in those white linen suits—why on earth don't all doctors dress like that, I'd like to know?

"He can't be a day over 28, and if you could see how crazy the nurses are over him! I think it is perfectly ridiculous of them!

Sympathetic.

"I couldn't help expressing my sympathy one day when we were talking in the hall. I happened to be leaving just as he was through seeing Carrie. 'I should think,' I told him, 'you would get so weary of all this chasing after you, Dr. Bennett! Why, that corridor nurse wouldn't let me get a word in with you while she was in the room! I should think she'd realize that a doctor would like something more entertaining once in a while than chatter about bandages and temperatures and diet!' He quite flushed with gratitude and looked me in the eyes and said I had perfectly wonderful divination, and it was surprising how he lived through it all!

"The only trouble with knowing Dr. Bennett is that every time I go there somebody always sends for him or he has to go to the operating room. The poor man never has any time for a cozy chat."

"Is Carrie——"

"Oh, Carrie's all right," said the girl with the vanity bag. "If she'd only exercise a little self-control and not demand all the doctor's attention whenever he's in the room, she would [illegible] better. Sick people are so selfish, don't you think? Dr. Bennett——"

"You said someone else was sick. Who?"

"Oh, yes!" said the girl with the vanity bag. "My cousin Ralph is at another hospital with a broken leg, and though his family and ours aren't on speaking terms I felt that in a case of illness I mustn't let prejudice stand in the way, so, of course, I ran in to cheer up poor Ralph. I was very careful to find out from the surgeon who set his leg whether it would be bad for Ralph to see me. Dr. Bitts is one of the most noted surgeons in the country. Terribly young for that, too—not more than 35. He has one of those attractive, stern faces, with straight mouth, and looks as though he shaves twice a day, and eyes like razors.

She Was Younger.

"When you talk to him he listens intently and then he has the most disconcerting way of coming to with a jerk and saying: 'Yes, yes; quite so,' and darting off somewhere. I think the poor dear man is worn out by his severe work. I tried to tell him the other day how a sensitive, appreciative woman couldn't help sympathizing with his hardships. He was very brave—he said they weren't hardships."

"Is your Cousin Ralph's leg——"

"Oh, that's mending, all right," said the girl with the vanity bag. "I don't wonder that my family can't stand Ralph's father, if he is anything like Ralph—always thinking of himself. He actually thought I was going to sit and read to him—no consideration at all for Dr. Bitts, who might like a little cheering conversation!"

"You said several——"

"Well, one of mother's friends and an aunt of father's are in the same hospital with typhoid and an operation, and, of course, I am younger than mother, so I do the calling. I told mother quite firmly when she insisted that it was not necessary for me to go every day that I hoped I knew my duty to the sick and suffering. Aunt Lou has a nephew by marriage who is so devoted to her, and he goes to see her frequently. He has the loveliest car, and as I happened to be leaving once when he did he took me home. I did some shopping first, because it was such a good chance to be carried around.

"I wish you could have seen that car. Something must have happened to it, because now he always comes on the street car. It wasn't so bad, because Mrs. Himmers' son—the friend with the operation—comes in his car and usually I am going just when he goes. But, oh, if you could see Dr. Bennett's eyes!"

"I really ought to look in on poor Carrie," mused the girl with the fire red hat. "What time——"

"Come to think of it," objected the girl with the silver vanity case, "the nurse said that Carrie mustn't have too much company—that it made her fever rise! So I guess I'd wait, if I were you."

The First Admiral.

A story sometimes told to ridicule the dialect of Pudsey is that of a traveler who astonished his friend by telling him that the children in Pudsey were the most intelligent children in the world.

"Why, what do they know?" asked his friend.

"They know who was the first naval admiral who ever lived," the traveler replied.

"Not they. Here, can you prove it?"

"Yes. If you wish, we will go to Pudsey and I will ask any child you like that particular question."

The friend agreed.

As the traveler and his friend went through Pudsey they saw a boy about ten years old playing in the street. The traveler went to him and asked:

"Now, my boy, do you know who was the first naval admiral?"

"No-a," bluntly replied the lad.

"There," said the traveler, turning to his friend, "didn't I tell you he would know?"

Willing to Oblige.

Elderly Gentleman—Hi, conductor! Bring the 'bus here. D'ye think I'm going to walk through all this mud?

Conductor—Sutt'nly not, sir. Hif you'll wait 'arf a minnit I'll lay down the carpet an' herect the hawning!

Conspire Against Domestic Harmony

The ills of women seem to conspire against domestic harmony. No husband can understand why a woman should be continually ailing, fretful, nervous and despondent, and he gets out of all patience with her. In nine cases out of ten some organic derangement is the cause of this condition and is easily overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a woman's remedy for woman's ills which has cured more severe cases of this kind than any other remedy we know.

Paper Fingers That Save Time

How many times do typewriter operators come nearly to the bottom of the paper and have to put in another sheet to write just one more line?

The L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter

is equipped with paper fingers that hold the paper so well that it is possible to write on the extreme edge of the paper or card.

These paper fingers, if the operator forgets to push them back into place after writing a card or envelope, move along to the proper place with the advancement of the carriage in either direction.

This is one of the many reasons why the L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter enables the operator to produce more and better work than on any other writing machine ever made.

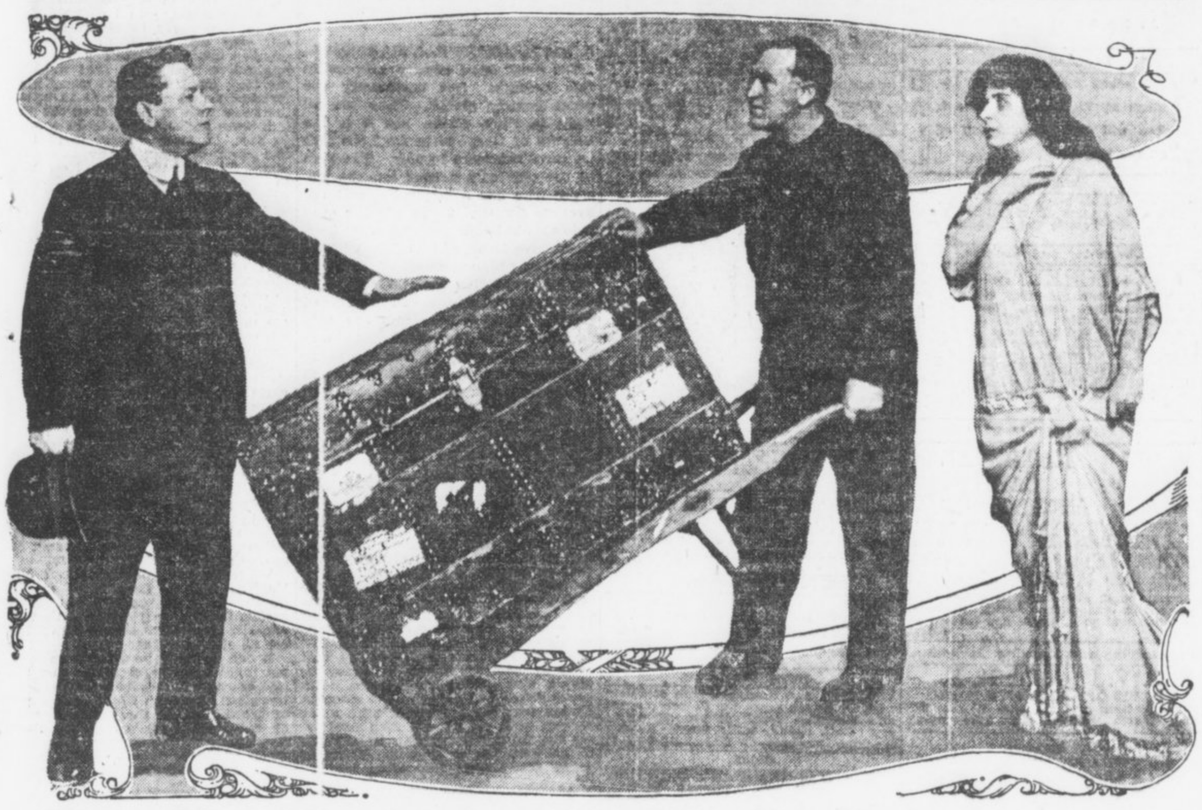
JARVIS' ESCAPE IN THE TRUNK IS HALTED BY THE HOTEL DETECTIVE



"Excuse me, Madam," said the detective, with a kind of dogged hardness, "I don't want to bother you again, but that man—he killed a man up the hall—has got clean away unless he—he——"

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

She smiled and snapped the catch, and then stood gazing at it for several moments before she went to the door and admitted the porter with his small but deadly truck. He was a muscular young man with the intelligent expression of an elderly and amiable cow, the true type of trunk-destroyer, and the Princess shivered when she saw him.

"Have the other trunks gone?" she asked.

"Yes'm—last night," he growled, making swiftly for his prey. He started to tilt it in such a manner that our hardy and valiant knight, Warren of Jarvis, would have been standing on his head, contrary to the canons of chivalry. The Princess hastily intervened.

"This end up—please be sure and have it marked that way and be sure to mark it 'Wanted on Voyage.'"

"Yes'm," grunted Caliban. He rocked the trunk a little, thrust the lip of the truck under it and jerked it forward—blam!

The Princess winced and shuddered. "And please—please—handle it very gently."

"Yes'm."

He had just begun to trundle the trunk and the knight toward the door when the exit was completely blocked by the cubical form of the house detective. The porter stopped and carelessly pitched his burden forward—blam!

The Broken Lock.

"Excuse me, madam," said the detective, with a kind of dogged hardness. "I don't want to bother you again, but that man—he killed a man up the hall—has got clean away unless he—he——"

"Well?" said the Princess coldly.

"Well, would you mind if—if I sort of took a look around? You're sure you were here all the time?"

"Of course," replied Dona Maria quietly. "But my maid will be up presently and you will be welcome to go through these rooms."

His attention was attracted to the trunk by a third "blam!" as the porter prepared to proceed, and he obligingly stepped inside out of the way. As he did so his eyes fell on the broken door lock.

"How'd that lock get broken?" His voice rang out suddenly like a pistol shot and he looked up quickly at the Princess. She inclined her head as if to assure herself that it really was broken, which was overacting the part.

"I think you should call the clerk's attention to it," she said calmly. "It was broken when I came here."

"When—may I ask did you come here?"

"Certainly. Yesterday afternoon."

"Oh, I see, I beg your pardon," he said slowly, and backed out. He did not know why, but he did not entirely believe the frank and self-possessed young woman. He walked down to a turn of the corridor, resolving to keep a close eye on the apartment until it was vacated. In this walk he again passed the trunk, but it suggested nothing. An escape in a trunk has become so common in fact and in fiction that no up-to-date detective believes any one would try it again. So it is still one of the best means, just as, from the other angle, it is a fact that occasionally in spite of comic artists and the like, some one still buys a gold brick.

Thus, in a manner unheroic, by freight elevator and van with divers bumps and bruises and swear words, the good knight Warren of Jarvis set forth to the Spanish Main and the storied hills of Aragon.

Pasting labels on trunks, like pressing the elevator button in the average office building, is more an act in evidence of good faith than in expectation of results. Having up to this time traveled only with a trunk and never in one, Warren Jarvis did not realize this until fairly embarked on his rough passage from the Hotel Vanderbilt to the promenade deck suite on the Lusitania.

For days afterward the memory of that two-mile voyage rode him like a nightmare. So did the divers aches, wrenches and bruises that he acquired by the way. And, finally, when the journey was over and he could have time to decide whether he was one large pain or had been broken up into several thousand small agonies, the trunk was deposited in the parlor of the Princess' suite with the label "This side up," carefully pressed against the carpet.

Dona Maria, anxious for the welfare of her champion, arrived at the stateroom just a few moments later. But she was haunted by an attentive steward, who in her abstraction she neglected to fee, and who declined to end his solicitous attentions until the oversight should be remedied.

While the Princess fidgeted and longed for him to get out he insisted on explaining everything connected with the suite. He opened the door that led onto the deck and pointed out the raised ledge as a trap for the unwary landsman's foot. He opened a door that led into a companionway. He showed her the clothes-pressers and all the while Dona Maria could not take her eyes from the top of the trunk, which displayed no label. Following her glance he offered to place the trunk for her.

"You needn't bother about it now, steward," she interposed quickly as he laid his hands on it. Then as an afterthought: "You might turn it right side up."

He Goes at Last.

"Oh, I'm sorry," he apologized as he noticed the labels. "I hope the contents are not upset."

"I hope not!" agreed Dona Maria, fervently.

"Anything more, madame?"

"Not now, thank you, steward," said Dona Maria nervously. "How soon do we sail?"

"Very soon now," he answered, as a deep raucous voice was heard bellowing afar. "They're calling visitors ashore now, madame."

And at last he was gone. But there was still Nita, the maid, who had doffed her hat and coat and was fussing about the bags.

"Your Highness has the keys to the trunks?" she suggested briskly.

"Hm—yes. You—you may leave the trunk as it is, Nita, until later. Go to your room now and get settled. I'll call you when I want you."

"Yes, Your Highness." But at the door of her room, she paused in some embarrassment. The Princess frowned impatiently.

"Will Your Highness pardon me," said Nita, uncomfortably, "if I am mistaken in thinking I recognize Senor the Duke, your exalted cousin, among the passengers——?"

"My cousin!" exclaimed Dona Maria, with a fine assumption of surprise. "Impossible! He is at Madrid."

Nita inclined her head in that extremely polite unbelief possible to the finished servant. "Yes, Your Highness," she agreed demurely, and withdrew.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

The scene of the story is laid in the Vanderlip Hotel, New York City. The Princess Maria Theresa of Segura, a beautiful Spanish woman, is suddenly awakened in her suite by the sound of pistol shots. She hears a man running down the hall. He crashes against her door, breaking the lock, and enters. She sees he is a tall, good-looking young man, dressed in evening clothes. He is carrying a revolver in his right hand, and blood is dripping from a wound in his left. He begs the Princess to hide him. She, moved by some inlescribable impulse, decides that she will. She directs him to an inner room, and a few minutes later, when the hotel detective knocks on the door, she tells him she is all right and sends him away. The young man, who is Warren Jarvis, of Kentucky, comes out of his hiding place, and the Princess, for the first time, notices his wound. She is moved to sympathy and showers him with questions as to what has occurred. Jarvis tells her about a Kentucky feud between his family and another named Markham. He says he left Kentucky to avoid the feudists, but encountered one of them in the hotel, which explains the shots. The Princess declares she will help him, and then asks the stranger question, "Are you afraid of ghosts?" Jarvis laughs, but grows solemn when the Princess tells him she has dangerous work for him to do. She makes him swear allegiance, and creates him her "vassal." Then she tells him to get her trunk, which is going to be shipped to a steamship on which she sails to Spain the following day. First Jarvis tells her to telephone to his servant, Rusty Snow, a negro. The servant is instructed to procure passage for himself and Jarvis in the ship. Jarvis then prepares to get into the trunk, but first begins to question the Princess about herself.

Now go on with the story.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

MOST DECIDEDLY NOT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-one, and a man two years my senior has made an appointment with me and at the same time with my friend. Would it be fitting for me to keep it, and also, is it proper for him to make the appointment for the same time and place? G. M. T. I.

He is flirting with you, I am sure, and if "by appointment" you mean to meet on some street corner you owe it to yourself to refuse to meet him though he were alone. Ask him to come to your home for you; his reply will give you some insight into his character.

BY BECOMING A MAN.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a boy of twenty, and in love with a girl two years younger than myself. I am deeply in love with the girl, and she doesn't care for me. How can I make her love me? Another boy loves her, but she doesn't love him. T. C.

You rightly term yourself a boy, since you are only twenty. I suggest unfailing courtesy, kindness, appreciation and devotion, but not so much that your attentions distract your head and heart from the more serious and timely task of developing yourself into a manly man.

CHAPTER XLIV.

As soon as Mildred had ordered Steve to bring the big car she hurried to her room and hastily changed her clothes, putting on the khaki suit she wore when fishing. She was very much excited. But before leaving the room she glanced, womanlike, in her mirror. Then, hardly knowing what she was doing, she picked up a little handbag such as women take when they go shopping, containing a handkerchief, a powder rag, a small mirror and a small purse. She rushed on the porch and called Elmer.

"Elmer," she said hurriedly. "I'm going to find Gordon. I can't stand the suspense any longer. Come if you want to; if you don't, I'm going alone."

"Of course, I'm going, too," exclaimed the boy. "That's just like a girl. Didn't I propose the scheme?"

"Well, hurry now, and get my rifle and revolver," cried Mildred.

"That little revolver of yours is no good," remarked Elmer. "You can take it if you want to; I'm going to get dad's big one." And off he went.

In a few minutes Steve appeared with the car and Mildred and Elmer climbed in. Mildred with her handbag and revolver and Elmer with his father's six-shooter.

"Is you all gwine shootin', Miss Mildred?" asked Steve.

"We are going after Mr. Gordon, Steve," replied Mildred, "so hurry, please."

"Lordomassy!" exclaimed the colored boy. He turned the car quickly and they were soon bowling along the main road.

A Serious Affair.

A girl and two boys going in a motor car on a hunt for supposed desperadoes would have been a most ludicrous affair except for the very serious way the three persons involved in the undertaking viewed it. A professional layer of odds, knowing the circumstances, would have wagered anything up to 100 to 1 that the expedition would end in a fizzle, if, indeed, the rescuers did not get themselves in serious trouble. However that might be, the car rolled bravely on and reached the point where the road crossed Pew Creek, inside of half an hour. Mildred had given her instructions to Steve, and as soon as the car stopped she and Elmer started off due west, Elmer leading the way and she following closely, carrying the toy revolver in one hand and the little handbag in the other.

There are few things a woman will not risk for the man she loves. The proper thing for Mildred to have done, of course, was to have gathered all the men at the mansion and sent them on the hunt for Gordon. But she didn't, and that, of course, ends all argument. If Mildred had only realized it, she and Elmer were almost as helpless as the babes in the woods. Unlooked-for things happen, however, and, with the chances at least 100 to 1 against her, an unlooked-for thing happened in this case.

They had not traveled far before Elmer found unmistakable signs that a horse had traveled in the direction they were going, and in certain places they were able to follow the hoofprints.

Moved More Slowly.

"Keep careful track of the distance we travel," whispered Mildred. "You know Gordon said he was three miles due west from the bridge."

When they had covered what they considered about two and a half miles they moved more slowly and more cautiously, and although both were now trembling with excitement (and perhaps fear), they kept bravely on. At last they came to a point where the ground rose sharply for a hundred yards or so. Mildred grasped Elmer by the shoulder and whispered:

"We are near the place, Elmer. We must be very careful and keep under cover."

They crept along behind trees and at length came to the top of the rise. Below them they saw smoke issuing from a clump of trees.

"He's down there," said Mildred in an excited whisper. "I'm sure of it. Oh, what shall we do?"

"Sneak around and maybe we can see something," replied Elmer, hoarsely. His eyes glistened and he was pale, but game.

They circled around cautiously, keeping close together. Suddenly Elmer stopped and dropped to the ground. Mildred, her heart beating wildly, sank behind him.

"I see him; I see him," exclaimed the lad excitedly. He pointed and Mildred saw, not more than 60 yards away, a man seated upon a tree reading a newspaper. It was Gordon Kelly. She would have known him as far as her eyes could reach. She felt as if she were on the point of screaming, or crying, or fainting—she knew not what. She hastily opened the handbag and reached for her handkerchief—a woman's weapon, a woman's protector.

"Keep Quiet!"

"Keep quiet!" hissed Elmer. "There's another man there and he'll see us."

Mildred looked again and saw a man looking on the ground fifteen or twenty feet in front of Gordon.

"What shall we do; what shall we do?" was all she could whisper.

There was a long silence. Finally Elmer said:

"Gee, if I only had a mirror I could sneak down behind that bush and attract his attention."

"Why, I have a little mirror," exclaimed Mildred, reaching for her handbag again. She produced the article and handed it to the boy.

"You crawl behind that tree and wait there," whispered Elmer. A moment later he began worming his way toward the bush he had indicated. This brought him to within less than 150 feet of where Gordon was sitting. Carefully getting his range, he flashed a streak of sunlight across the shaded page of Gordon's newspaper and repeated the operation immediately.

Gordon cautiously glanced over his shoulder. He saw little Elmer peering from behind a bush and beyond the lad he saw a white handkerchief flutter. Mildred could not resist the temptation to signal. Gordon waved an answering sign and then arose. He walked to the log cabin, followed by his armed guard. He took a baseball, slit the seam with his knife; then, saying to his guard, "I want to do a little figuring," took a little book of cigarette papers belonging to the youngest of the mountaineers and wrote these words:

"If you have a gun, place it 20 feet beyond where this ball lands; if not, bring help noon to-morrow."

Guard Did Not Call.

He folded the tissue paper three times longways and once shortways, tucked it into the ripped seam of the baseball with his knife, leaving the edge sticking out (the guard was paying no particular attention to him) and then announced that he guessed he would take a little exercise.

This time the guard did not call a companion, as was the custom when Gordon practiced with bat and ball. The idea of two guards was doubtless originally suggested by the dangerous-looking baseball bat that Gordon swung with such ease. He had become such a cheerful and inoffensive captive, however, that on this occasion his guard decided not to trouble any of his companions, who were at that time on the shady side of the cabin, discussing a letter that had been received that morning from Forrest Cain.

Going out in the open, followed by his guard, pistol in hand, Gordon hit several high flies, catching the ball when it came down. Then, as if inadvertently, he drove it in such a manner that it fell 200 feet away from him and beyond a little clump of bushes.

"What do you think of that?" he exclaimed to his guard. "I'm losing my batting eye, I guess. Let's get a drink of water and then we'll go and get that ball. It cost $1.25."

It took Gordon fifteen minutes to get his drink of water and fuss around the cabin before he started after the ball, with his guard following closely. He had carefully marked the spot where it fell, and when he reached it his eyes beamed, for twenty feet beyond was what he wanted far more than he wanted the ball. Picking up the white object, he walked straight ahead and suddenly sat down facing his guard.

"Sit down and make yourself comfortable," he said. But the guard remained standing.

"By the looks of the sky, I'll bet you we have rain before to-morrow morning," he observed, reaching behind him.

"Turn Around and Walk."

The guard cast his eyes upward and when he lowered them again a six-shooter in the hand of his captor was pointing directly at his heart.

"Drop that gun! Drop it!" said Gordon, in a low, intense tone.

The guard hesitated the fraction of a second and then let the weapon fall to the ground.

"Turn around and walk two steps ahead," commanded Gordon, jumping to his feet and seizing the guard's six-shooter when his command was obeyed.

The rest was merely routine work, as it were.

"On the run, now," ordered Gordon, pointing to the east. "Back to the bridge; be quick about it."

The ex-guard started off, and with Gordon traversed 50 feet before Mildred and Elmer jumped from behind a tree.

"Won't you wait for me, Gordon?" said Mildred. An instant later they were in each other's arms.

"You will have to do all the hugging, Honeybunch," whispered Gordon. "I've got these two six-shooters in my hands, but I'll make up for it as soon as I get a chance. You are the bravest girl in the world. Now, come, dear, we are not out of the woods yet. Good work, Elmer."

Gordon turned over one of his revolvers to Elmer and the procession started, the mountaineer leading the way, followed by Gordon, holding a six-shooter in one hand and Mildred's hand in the other, and Elmer bringing up the rear. Arriving at the bridge where Steve was waiting with the car, Gordon said to his prisoner:

"Go back to your crowd and tell them I'll give them 24 hours to leave this mountain country, and if any of you come back, I'll make you wish you hadn't."

"That other man's comin' up to-morrer," said the mountaineer. They were the first words Gordon had ever heard him utter.

"Here's Your Gun."

"What man?" he demanded.

"That man that's been a-payin' us money."

"Is that so?" mused Gordon. "In that case, you can tell your men to hold on to him until they hear from me. I'll settle with that fellow when I get around to it. Tell your men I won't bother them as long as they hold on to him. Now, you can go back. Here's your gun, but I'll just take the cartridges out of it first. Now, then, Elmer, climb in the front seat. Come, Mildred. Go ahead, Steve."

"Gordon," said Mildred, as soon as the car started, "you need a haircut badly."

It was dark when they reached the mansion, where the appearance of the owner created an immense sensation.

"Mildred, dear," said Gordon, drawing her to one side, "I want you to spend the evening here. There's something I want particularly to say to you. We can have Mrs. Ward for a chaperone," he added, with a smile.

"Not in these clothes, Gordon," replied Mildred. "If you will let Steve drive us home, Elmer and I will both be back in an hour."

When Mildred and the lad returned Gordon, too, had had a change of clothes.

"Who cut your hair?" laughed Mildred.

They sat down to dinner, after which Gordon told Elmer to go and play billiards and then led Mildred into the room he called his office, and which Mildred called his lazy room. The particular something he wanted to tell her required more than half an hour and considerable eloquence to tell. Mildred shook her head at frequent intervals, but finally gave in and murmured, "Yes." Arising, she went to the telephone on Gordon's desk and gave an order. While she was waiting for connections Gordon, happy as a lark, seated himself at the piano, said "Second verse," and sang:

We will build a bower of grasses,
Call it Castle Lullaby;
Drink the south wind as it passes,
Lips o' Poppy—you and I!
Youth will be a friend to cheer us,
Fill our veins with purple wine,
Stand forever watching near us,
Lips o' Poppy, maid of mine!
Pines shall lull us with their moaning;
Golden bees in golden quest
Songs of sweet desire intoning
To the white flower of your breast!
Lips o' Poppy, girl of rapture,
Mine shall be enchantment's power,
Substance of my dreams to capture
In the heart of that white flower!
Lips o' Poppy—eyes entrancing—
Maid of earth or maid of air!
We will pass the years a-dancing
Down the realm of Queen Don't Care.
Come! the purple shades are falling!
Come! it is the Queen's command!
Hark! the nightingales are calling
To the Never Hurry Land!

"That's very nice," said Mildred, "but suppose dad—— Oh, here he is now. That you, dad?—— Oh, fine! Ah—— I am with Mr. Kelly, and—er—Mr. Kelly wants to speak to you a minute. Oh, now, dad, do be nice—— Does he want to talk business? Ha, ha! Yes, I believe he wants to talk business. All right; hold the wire." Mildred clapped her hand over the mouthpiece and whispered excitedly: "Dad was awfully angry at first and wouldn't speak to you, but he suddenly changed his mind. Now, go ahead; don't be afraid."

He Asks for Mildred.

Gordon took up the receiver and this conversation followed:

"Hello, Mr. Deery! I want to ask——"

"What will you take for your property—spot cash?" interrupted Deery.

"I don't want to sell, Mr. Deery."

"Oh, come, come; I'll give you $20,000 for it—cash, mind you."

"I couldn't think of it, Mr. Deery."

"Well, what's it worth, then? Come, you must have a figure."

"Really, Mr. Deery, I don't want to sell at any price, but if you ask me, the property is worth all of $2,000,000."

"Two million dollars!" sputtered Deery. "Am I talking to a crazy man? Ask my daughter to come to the phone, please."

"Just a minute, Mr. Deery. I want to say something very seriously. Please listen. I want to ask your permission to marry your daughter. We love each other and——"

"Now I know you're crazy," Deery broke in. "Call my daughter, please."

"But, Mr. Deery——"

"Not another word. I wish to speak to my daughter."

Mildred took the receiver from Gordon's hand.

"Hello, dad; what's wrong?"

"Come home at once, Mildred."

"Now, dad," pleaded Mildred, "please don't be so angry. Gordon and I——"

"I will not hear another word; I insist that you come home at once."

"Dad, if you're going to act that way, you'll regret it. Please tell mother I wish to speak to her."

"Your mother is not at home and won't be home for an hour, Mildred. I tell you for the last time, come home immediately or I'll come up there and get you."

Benefited Many Who Had Lung Trouble

Those who suffer from Lung Trouble are generally troubled with night sweats, fever, loss of strength and little or no appetite. Eckman's Alterative is a medicine which has been most successful in stopping night sweats, reducing fever and promoting appetite, and many who have used it declare it saved their lives. Investigate what it did in this case:

"Dear Sir: For four years I was troubled with cough, which gradually became worse. I had night sweats and pains in my chest. I was losing my appetite and had become so thin and weak I could not attend to my household duties. A physician pronounced my disease Consumption. Not being satisfied, I was examined by the physicians of the Polyclinic Hospital. They also confirmed my trouble, and I was ordered away for treatment. My nephew would not allow me to go until I had tried Eckman's Alterative. Before I had taken the medicine three weeks, I had marked relief, night sweats ceased, pain in the breast relieved, cough became loose and easy, fever left me, and I commenced getting well. My health became normal. I am in excellent health now and have been for twelve years. I strongly recommend it." (Signed)

THEFT NO WORSE THAN DODGING YOUR DEBTS

By B. C. FORBES.

There is a difference between "Mine" and "Thine." Many individuals, not a few companies and a few States and municipalities need to be reminded of this simple fact. Lax notions are prevalent on the subject.

* * *

A debt is a debt. All debts are debts of honor and should be honored. In these days of unthinking extravagance too many debts are light-heartedly incurred and not paid. The habit of getting into debt, like most bad habits, is alluring at first, but, also, like most bad habits undo their victims in the end.

* * *

The phrase falling "into debt" is apt. The descent is easy enough, but the climb back is usuallypainful.

* * *

This dissertation is inspired by the frequency of late with which corporations have failed to pay off obligations falling due. Instead of walking up to the counter and handing over one hundred cents on the dollar in hard cash, as was stipulated when the debt was inourred, borrowers have too frequently resorted to makeshifts, to temporizing, to compromising, such as offering, in lieu of cash, a new obligation for the old, with an intimation that if this be not accepted the lender will fare much worse.

* * *

The most brazen instance of such questionable conduct is afforded by Atchison, Kans. An issue of some $267,000 bonds of this city fell due Tuesday. Did the lenders promptly receive their money as they were entitled to? Oh, no. In Atchison, Kan., a debt is not a debt of honor, something that must be discharged. Just read what the Mayor has the effrontery to tell the holders, who, of course, have counted upon receiving their money—money which could be used at a high rate of interest to-day:

* * *

Atchison will have $266,950 4 per cent thirty-year bonds issued in 1883, due July 1. In the past, it seems to have been their judgment that a sinking fund was not necessary.

I have inherited a debt—I would not repudiate it, but will defer it by offering a renewal fully as good as the one you hold.

I realize the opportunity of money at present, but as a representative of the taxpayers I can not increase their obligation on account of a temporary stringency in the money market.

A new bond for the old one, with the same rate that has satisfied for thirty years, ought to be acceptable under the adverse circumstances.

I regret that it is the best I have to offer.

"Regrets" don't pay bill. The holders of Atchison's bonds care nothing about the Mayor's sympathies; they want and are absolutely entitled to receive their money, every penny of it, the moment it fell due.

Medium-Sized Acreage Tracts

ALL of us know the profit that is usually made from acreage. It is almost a conceded fact that if a person owns good acreage, he has a sure profit in it sooner or later. When we think of acreage propositions, we think of lots of land, and naturally lots of money, because the usual acreage transaction involves a great deal of money. The demand for good, close-in acreage for subdivision purposes is increasing every day. A trip to the outskirts of the city in any direction you choose to take will convince you of this fact. We are going to offer a tract of about 100 acres, between Decatur and East Lake, which we have cut up into five, ten and fifteen acre tracts. The price and terms on these tracts make it possible for almost anybody to handle them.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Two New Residences Will Total $40,000

Pegram and Kirk Plan Announced. Mr. Little Confirms Report. Small Sales in West End.

John D. Little confirmed Saturday the report that he would build a fine residence on Pace's Ferry Road opposite the property of John W. Grant, who will also build soon.

Mr. Little's plans are not definite, but for some time he has had landscape architects working on his eighteen acres, and W. T. Downing, the well-known architect, has been planning with them to determine the character of house that should be erected.

The town house of Mr. Little at the southwest corner of Peachtree and Eighth Streets will not be sold. It is one of the handsomest houses of colonial type in the city. The new house, said Mr. Little, will not be a duplicate of the other.

There are other signs of activity in this section of North Fulton. Sam Pegram has plans for a $15,000 brick veneer dwelling of two stories at the southeast corner of Muscogee Avenue and Rivers Drive. He will build at once.

E. R. Kirk is building a $25,000 residence on Andrews Avenue, 400 feet north of Peachtree. This is two stories and of brick veneer and stone construction.

Satisfactory progress is being made on the residences of Hunt Chipley, on Wesley Avenue, and Robert Zanner and Clark McMichael, on Peachtree Road, near Wesley Avenue.

West End Park Sales.

The West End Park Company has announced the sale, through Collins Mrothers &Davies, of a two-story residence on Stokes Avenue, near Ontario Avenue, West End Park, to a client of the above agency, for $5,500, and to H. S. Norris from the park company direct of the one-story dwelling at the southwest corner of the same thoroughfares, for $3,500.

Loan Rate Reduction.

Borrowers of money on real estate report a reduction in the last few weeks on loan rates. While money was held at 8 per cent recently, a good deal of it can now be had at 7 per cent. In fact, a local real estate agency is advertising $10,000 at 7 per cent on improved property, and much larger amounts than this can be obtained. Bankers foresaw a temporary stringency and prepared for it, and now they are in a position to extend accommodations in judicious measure.

For Early Whitehall Regrade.

Whitehall regrading will be considered again at the next meeting of Council. Councilman George H. Boynton introduced a resolution providing that work start as soon as Comptroller Goldsmith certifies that the property owners have paid in their share of expense, but objection on the part of Councilman Claude L. Ashley and others caused postponement. It has already been agreed to start the job October 15.

The pith of the objection was that other work more important would suffer if Whitehall were regraded now. The Butler Street sewer work was given as an illustration.

It is estimated that the first installment will be $11,287.97, and property owners have agreed to pay the city the difference between the appropriation of $3,500 and the estimated cost.

To Sell 24 Residence Lots.

J. T. Kimbrough & Co. have placed on private sale 24 building lots on the East Lake, South Decatur, South Kirkwood, Soldiers' Home and Stone Mountain car lines, all the lots within a block of city schools, on terms of $25 down and $10 a month at 7 per cent. The price of the lots is $750. Improvements consist of tile sidewalks, sewerage and water.

Interest in Car Line Change.

The proposal to change the route of the river car line, as presented to Council, has created a great deal of interest on the part of people residing on the west side of the city. General Manager Glenn wants to open the street at Marietta and Forsyth Streets and let incoming river cars run up Walton Street from the Marietta Street intersection. Cars will turn to the right at Forsyth and to the right again at Marietta. Passengers will enter at Marietta and Forsyth Streets, rather than at Broad. The Streets Committee of Council approved the plan.

Start Soon on West Peachtree.

The West Peachtree Improvement Club announced Saturday that all will be in readiness soon for work on West Peachtree retaining walls, the same having been authorized by the Streets Committee of the City Council. The wall work will be started as soon as contracts can be let for materials, the city to do the construction. When the walls are completed the county will do the regrading, and this will be not later than September 15, according to Shelby Smith, of the County Commission.

Prominent in the West Peachtree movement have been Judge Spencer R. Atkinson, Judge E. W. Born, Frank P. Rice, Dr. William Owens, James T. Wright and others.

Frank West in Winnipeg.

H. Frank West, of the A. J. & H. F. West real estate agency, has reached Winnipeg, Manitoba, on an extensive Western trip, and writes back that elaborate preparations are being made to entertain the sixth annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges this month. Mr. West states that special attention will be given the Atlanta delegation.

What Race Track Gambling Did for One Man

It Has Done the Same and Worse for Many Another. No ROMANCE in This

(Copyright, 1912.)

A reader asks us to print a brief account of one man's gambling experience, published in a newspaper at El Paso, Texas.

He writes: "The story is one of the most direct appeals on the subject I have ever read, and if presented with the forcible coloring you are prepared to give it, it will undoubtedly 'go home' to those who are just starting to feel what the man it tells about must have felt when he still had the opportunity of honorably quitting the game."

We print the story exactly as the El Paso newspaper printed it—no "coloring" is needed.

We say once more to the young men tempted by gambling, and to fathers and mothers careless about their sons' associations:

GAMBLING IS THE WORST, MOST DANGEROUS VICE IN CIVILIZATION.

Gambling long maintained will make any man a thief or a worse criminal.

There is NO honorable professional gambler, as there is no honorable professional burglar.

Gambling leads to sorrow, poverty, disgrace and crime.

OLD STORY OF RUIN IN THE RACING GAME.

The Man Who Followed It, Precariously and Otherwise, for Years, and His Sad Ending.

It is the old story of ruin from the racing game. He drifted to El Paso when the Juarez track was opened for the first time. Then he claimed to be representing a string of Eastern papers as racing correspondent. But this was only for the purpose of obtaining a badge and admission to the press box. That first season was a hard one for the followers of the game, and he finally started issuing racing results in the form of posters to be hung in saloons and restaurants and cigar stores at the close of the day's racing. This made him a living and left him a little margin to play on the ponies, and that was all life held for him. In summer, when the racing plant in Juarez was closed, he would drift from place to place, where short meets were held, and he succeeded in getting a living in some manner unknown to his friends.

One rainy Sunday morning, in a little second-class restaurant, he told the story of his downfall. It is the cut-and-dried story of the effect of racing on young men. But it was true as he told it. Once he had been the confidential man and assistant manager of a big book binding and stationery house in Buffalo. He was earning a good salary with the promise of a place in the firm soon. Then the company decided to open a branch plant in Chicago to supply the bank and wholesale trade. The young man was selected as the branch manager because of his ability. He went to Chicago and was doing a big business for the firm and had received a half dozen raises since the branch was opened.

One Saturday afternoon in summer he spent his half holiday at the track where the horses were running. He laid a bet for fun. He won and wagered another. This likewise doubled his money, and he plunged. The germ had entered his blood, and he started a consistent policy of race track gambling.

The inevitable happened and he lost his position. Naturally, he turned to the easy money game which had cost him his job. He became a bookmaker, a sheet writer and a gambler. He followed the game to Florida when it was outlawed in Illinois. From there he went from place to place, finally landing in El Paso. By that time he was middle-aged and there were streaks of gray in his hair. When the races closed last spring he was neither physically nor financially able to follow the crowd to Latonia.

He remained here and lived the best he could. His brooding resulted in his making $1,000,000 mind bets on favorites in races that had been run. Wednesday night he was detained by the police on suspicion of being insane. His brooding over his downfall had been too much for his mind, and it had failed him. He is now in the county jail, where he will be held until he is examined by an insanity board.

An Appeal for a Famous American Name

Julian Hawthorne a few days ago observed his sixty-seventh birthday in the Federal penitentiary here in Atlanta. This month he will be entitled to a parole, and thousands of admirers of his distinguished father and friends of the son, who think him more sinned against than sinning, will shortly lay their views and their appeal before President Wilson.

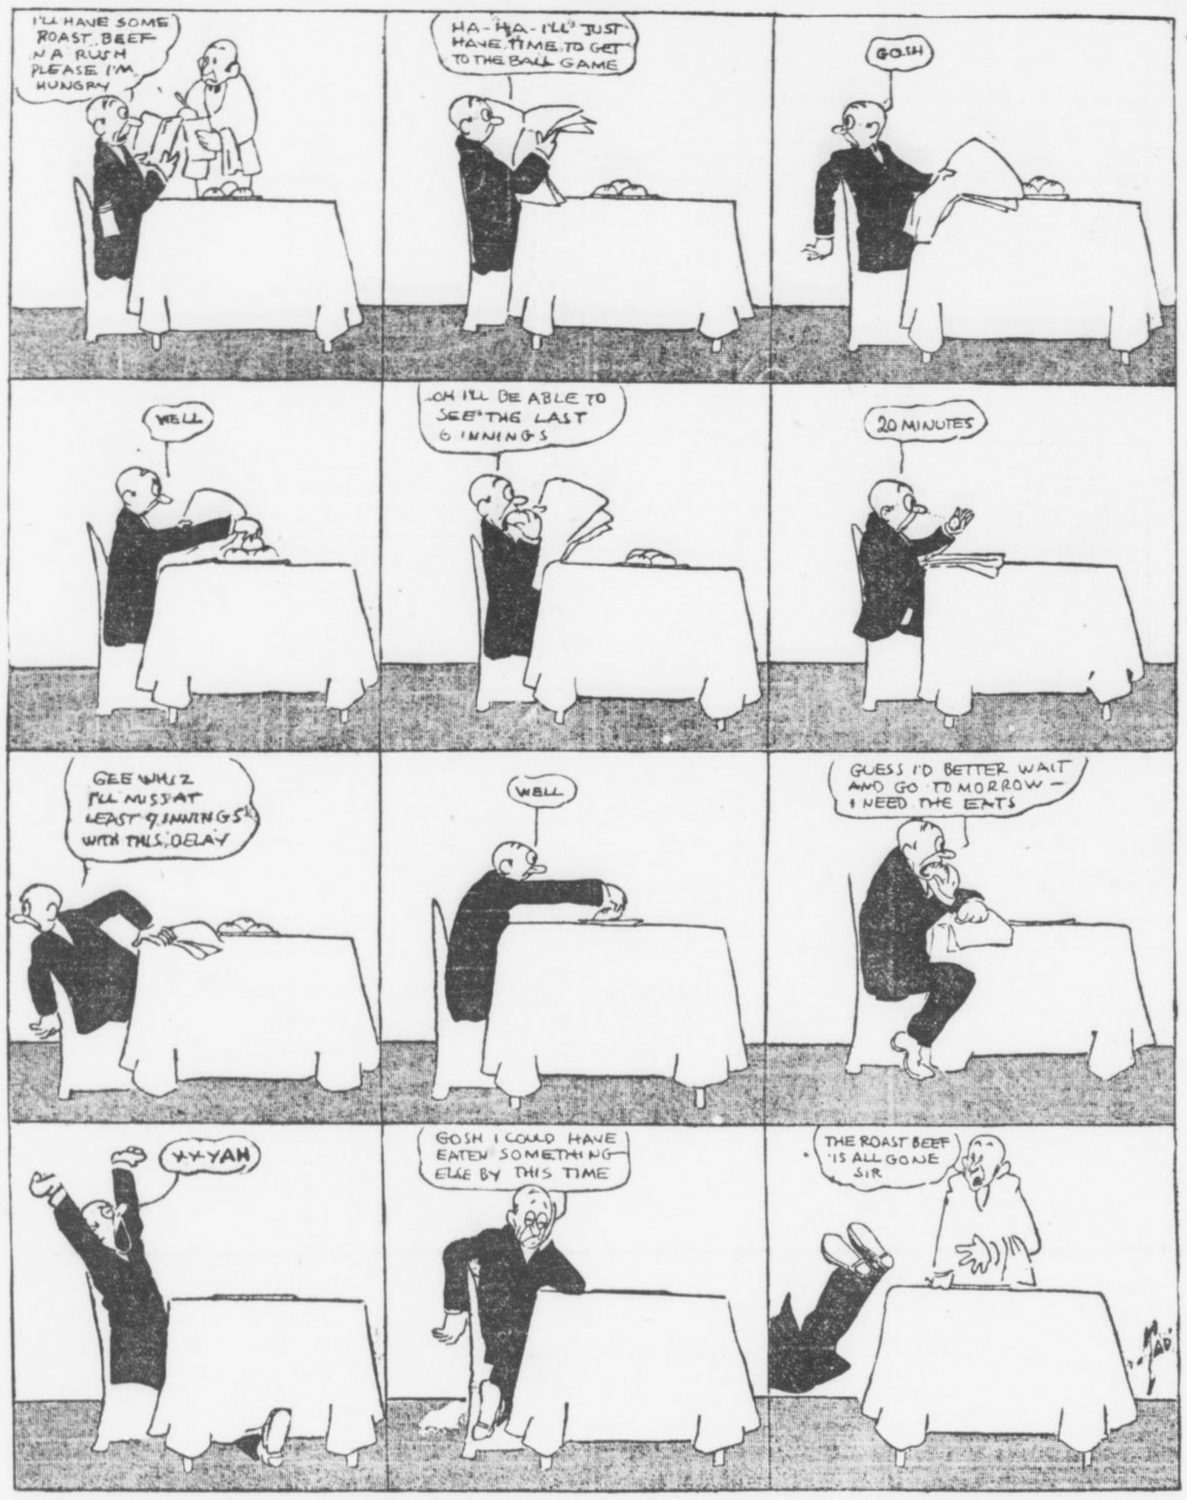
The President will be told that Julian Hawthorne was misled by evil associates in the lending of his name to get-rich-quick swindlers, from which he profited little or nothing; and that he was as much the dupe of his crooked associates as those victims who purchased stocks in the enterprises which his name was used to exploit.

This son of a brilliant American now finds himself in his old age humiliated before the eyes of the nation and in the eyes of the literary men of the world—through his own weakness and ignorance of the harsher ways of the world.

If a chief conspirator, like C. W. Morse, can be pardoned, why not a dupe, after he has been as bitterly punished as has Julian Hawthorne?

This newspaper gladly joins all admirers of Nathaniel Hawthorne in their efforts for his son and in their appeal to the President to relegate, as soon as possible, this record sinister on a famous name to the generous domain of the forgotten.

Did It Ever Occur to You?



Ella Wheeler Wilcox Writes on Motherhood

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

(Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner.)

GIRLS of seventeen are not, as a rule, given to serious thought.

But there are rare exceptions.

Such an exception has been found in a young wife of seventeen, who is suddenly aware that she is to become a mother in four months' time.

Now she is filled with awe, and with anxiety! She says: "I have always had an ideal of exerting a good influence over an unborn child; and now I am distressed to think that all these months have passed without any conscious effort on my part. I have played ball, swam and indulged in other athletics according to my regular custom. And in leisure moments I have read Milton and Shakespeare and Burns.

"I am splendidly well, but I am most anxious lest I have done things I ought not to do, and left undone other things at this critical time.

Moderation in All Things.

"What can I do for the next few months to benefit my unborn child?"

The very best thing this young mother expectant can do is to exercise with moderation, rest when she feels like it, eat and drink with moderation, and wisdom, and be happy and trust God.

Motherhood is the most natural thing in the world for women who are normal and in good health.

It often produces a normal, healthful condition for those who are not well.

Nature never intended any woman to utterly change her mode of life when expecting a child, if her mode of life had been a reasonable and sensible one previously.

Outdoor life and athletics are both reasonable and sensible, and more harm would have resulted to both mother and child by giving them up suddenly, and taking too great concern about a perfectly natural condition, than by continuing to indulge in these pastimes as long as this young woman did.

No doubt the coming child will be strong in body, with excellent lung power.

And its coming into this plane of existence will not be attended with any abnormal difficulties.

Outdoor Life and Exercise.

We must remember that the Indian woman rides her horse, and performs all sorts of laborious tasks up to the very hour of her delivery.

The wife of an army officer told the writer of frequently seeing such women drop out of line for a few hours and return to the tribe later with the new-born child wrapped in a blanket.

All women who live an outdoor life, and who exercise in the open air, have less complications in maternity than those reared under hothouse conditons.

This young mother of seventeen, who takes such a serious view of her responsibility, is certain to bring a strong, beautiful child into the world, and equally sure of guiding it into a splendid maturity.

The Difficult Hours.

She need only fill her mind with love thoughts, and with faith in God and trust in the Unseen Powers which govern this earth, to have all go well with her.

In God's great universe, there are Guardian Angels provided for every mortal, and in such degree as we love and reverence these angels, and as we live worthy of them, do they guide and help us in our difficult hours.

If we refuse to believe in them, or continually think and talk and act in a way to pain them, we alienate them and deprive them of their power to help us.

About the expectnat mother are bands of Shining Ones, and if she will rest happy in the thought of their protection, and regard them as messengers and emissaries from God Himself, great strength and peace and happiness will come to her.

And great blessings upon her child.

For of such are the Kingdom of Heaven.

PERFUMED POWDER

By WEX JONES.

THE newest skirt for woman—it's a risky thing to knock it. For it's cutely fitted up with a cunning pistol pocket.

Oh, should you argue with the fair,
Powder smoke will fill the air;
Bullets whizzy
Will make you dizzy;
You had better bow and scoot
Before the girl begins to shoot.
Because—this here is cowboy lore—
Words are nix with a forty-four.

Still, speaking of this latest fad, this cunning pistol pocket. Here, I think, are several things extremely prone to block it;

A handkerchief
And a powder puff;
Some trading stamps
And a manicure buff;
Smelling salts
And a pocket glass;
Jumbled up
With a theater pass.
A recipe
For custard pie;
A headache cure
And a hook and eye——

The list's a good bit longer, but here I'll have to dock it. For I've used up all the space allowed the lady's pistol pocket.

Rev. John E. White

Writes on

Sex in Religion

Woman Is the Mainstay of the Church and Expresses the Innermost Soul of Religion More Powerfully Than Man; Yet, He Says, She Has Had to Fight Against the Masculine Protest for Every Inch of Recognition in the Affairs of the Church.

WRITTEN FOR THE GEORGIAN

By REV. DR. JOHN E. WHITE

Pastor Second Baptist Church

"MADAM I may not call you, and mistress I loath to call you. I know not what to call you, but I thank you for your good cheer."

These are the words of Queen Elizabeth greeting the wife of Archbishop Parker. They indicate in a kindly temper the ecclesiastical ban on womanhood in the eighteenth century, which made even the wife of an archbishop a nonentity.

Put over against this the words of three great theologians—Tertullian, Erasmus, Rabelais—"Woman, thou art the gate of hell"—"An absurd and ridiculous animal"—"The greater part of them have hardly principles and depend for their morals on those they love."

This is the exhibit of the centuries on the subject of Sex in Religion up to the nineteenth. What we have of it in the twentieth century is equally banal, and much of it lingers in the modern religious world.

The Bar Sinister in Church.

It is an answer seeming fair, and pious to the point, when the limitations of female opportunity are protested, to say that in the church and in religion women have nothing to complain of; that they are free to exercise themselves in the work of the Lord.

If this were true, 'twere very true and very good. But the record of fact is discouraging.

From the beginning women have occupied no position of authority in the church. "Her voice has never been heard at a council, nor has her pen ever formulated a decree. Looking at religion in history, one would suppose at first sight that it was almost entirely a masculine affair.

Man has formulated its metaphysics, erected its theologies, founded and governed its institutions. He is its pope, priest and prophet; its legislator, preacher and pastor." From the Judean Decalogue, which includes the wife—"thy neighbor's wife"—in the list of man's chattels, down to the recent records of the Southern Baptist Convention and the Methodist Conference, the sex "bar-sinister" has persisted.

The fact readily acknowledged that women are the mainstay of religion has been strangely ineffective in overcoming the masculine prejudice against her religious equality.

Religion's Better Half.

The fixed prohibition, "thus far shalt thou come, but no further," has, however, not prevented women from exercising a powerful influence upon religious progress. The woman nature which expresses the innermost soul of religion more intimately than the man's, has projected itself tremendously, notwithstanding the ecclesiastical limitations set upon it.

Indirectly she has sweetened the sour theologians and softened the severe theologies. Through Monica we have Augustine, through Macrina we have Basil and Gregory, "who led them both to the faith and stirred them to their best work."

This list is a long one—through Jacqueline, Paschal, through Paula, Jerome, through Susanna Wesley, the Methodist Church, etc. But these consoling examples only make the wonder deeper that Christianity should have esteemed its most reliable exponent unworthy of absolute equality.

It scarcely meets the case to prove by illustrious examples that women are indispensable factors in religion. So have been the martyrs and the persecuted of all ages through what difficulties we know.

For the past century the woman movement in religion has been breaking through the barriers. In the Protestant communions the battle has gone on steadily and successfully, and so quietly as scarcely to be a battle. Yet in every one of the great denominations the right of woman to recognition as an equal co-laborer with man in the Kingdom of God has been challenged and opposed at every step. Mrs. Doremus for thirty years kept up the fight before the women were permitted to organize the first Woman's Missionary Society.

Among Southern Baptists 25 years ago a similar proposition was silently protested by the majority and outspokenly resisted by thousands. Among Southern Methodists a petition has been pending for years to give the women not equal, but more generous representation in the direction of the missionary funds contributed by themselves.

Fighting for Her Soul.

Speaking by the card, I have made efforts in country churches to organize women's societies, for doing the sort of work every Christian is commanded to do, only to discover insuperable prejudices in the minds of the brethren.

At the bottom of this discreditable history of female repression in religion lies the jealousy of the masculine prerogative. The principle of pernicious proxy, the right of the husband to discharge religious obligations for the wife is persistent to this hour in the practice of the churches.

It amounts in effect to a layman's priest craft, in which the man assumes to stand between the woman's soul and the free and full discharge of its responsibility in practical duty.

Now the clouds are breaking away and man is beginning to relent. It will be a good day for religion when the competency of every woman under God for all the freedom an individual soul is decreed for, without reference to sex, is heartily and universally proclaimed and enforced.

Letters From The Georgian's Readers

THE SYRIANS.

Editor The Georgian:

The recent case of naturalization in which Judge Henry A. M. Smith, of South Carolina, was interested, induces me to write the following: Judge Smith contends that Syrians are not entitled to citizenship in the United States. He has the right to give or refuse naturalization to the Syrian of his State, but the reasons given by him are not based on facts, and history does not support his position.

When we consider the part the Syrians have played in the history and development of the world, we readily see they are in no way connected with or related to the Sudanese. Three of the greatest monarchies of the ancient world—Chaldea, Assayria and Babylonia—were evolved and developed by the Syrian nation.

The inhabitants of Kurdistan, who are regarded as the descendants of the Syrians, not only speak a Semitic language, but believe themselves to be the same race with the Arabs and the same traditions are held of Syrians, who in their brief historical fragments recognize as their kinsmen the later Babylonians, Phoenicians and the Joktonian Arabs.

The Semitic race—that is the name of this division—was derived from Noah's son Shem, and this term Semitic has been adopted by scholars as probably descriptive of that ancient people, who, branching from beyond Syria, carried their tribe into Northern Arabia, across the Red Sea and Upper Egypt into the African Desert, northward into Armenia, westward into Canaan and far out through the Mediterranean, touched the coast of Africa, and reaching even to Europe, Britain and spreading out to America. There has never been any mixing between the Syrians and the Sudanese. A great mountain range has ever separated the two races of people.

"THE HALF-MILLION" CITY.

Editor The Georgian:

I desire to subscribe to the spirit and purpose and to be enrolled as a member of the "Half-Million Club."

Great civic benefit can be accomplished by an emblem which will exemplify the spirit of Atlanta, the "Half-Million City," as advocated by The Georgian. You are to be congratulated in voicing the virile enthusiasm of the people.

Where else can you find a community that will subscribe in a single day something over $75,000 to entertain the Shriners' national convention, and almost a like amount that the city may enjoy, for one week, the most celebrated singers of the world? Atlanta's splendid banks, its lofty buildings, well-appointed hotels, excellent railroad facilities and geographical location make possible the ideal—the "Half-Million City"—in 1920.

TRIES TO DIE ON EVE OF DIVORCE

Phone Operator, Despondent Over New Love Affair, Fails in Suicide Effort.

Propped up in a bed at Grady Hospital, Miss Catherine Reese, the pretty telephone operator who tried to end her life with strychnine Sunday, told a pathetic story of two disappointments in love.

"It just seemed that there was nothing left to live for," she moaned, "but I am sorry I did it now."

Miss Reese was still white-faced and weak Monday from the effects of the poison. It is believed that she will have recovered within two or three days.

She told a graphic tale of the despondency that led her to the attempt at self-destruction and of her bitter grief and despair as she snatched a pad of writing paper to write a last message to her sweetheart even while the poison had her in its grasp.

Unable to Write Death Note.

"Sweetheart, you will never know——" she wrote in a scrawling hand as convulsions seized her. She was unable to finish the sentence.

"I know it was a foolish, foolish thing for me to do," she said at the hospital. "But everything was going against me. My mother was sick. My marriage was unhappy, for it is true that I have been married and that my case for divorce was to have come up to-day. Then came this other disappointment in love. I was tired and exhausted. Everything looked dark and so I just swallowed the strychnine.

"My husband's name is W. A. Skeene. He has been in the navy and we used to travel about the country quite a lot. He did not treat me kindly, though, and I left him soon after we came to Atlanta. I met a young man my the name of Golden Studstill about six months ago. He is a private at Fort McPherson. He paid me a good many attentions and I was attracted by him. He is the one who caused me to try to kill myself. We had a little quarrel the Fourth of July, but we made up afterward. On Saturday I worked on a switchboard from early in the morning until about 11 o'clock at night. When I came out Golden was waiting for me with three other fellows—Patrick Studstill, his brother; a young man by the name of Wood and William Briggs.

Quarreled on Auto Ride.

"We went automobile riding for a long time. Golden got very angry with me about something and was angry when he left me early Sunday morning. I tried to call him at Fort McPherson Sunday, but I couldn't get him. They were provoked at me out at the fort for calling so often. I finally became desperate and when I went to my room in Mrs. Bowers' house at 57 Fraser Street I swallowed the strychnine tablets. There must have been 25 or 30 of them.

"In a few minutes I was in terrible pain. I wanted to send a message to Golden, who was to have married me after I got my divorce. I thought it would be the last he ever would hear from me. I tried to write him, but the pain overcame me before I was finished."

Since her separation from her husband the young woman has been known by her maiden name. She lived for some time at 26 Capitol Avenue. She had lived at the residence of Mrs. Bowers only a week. She was left partially paralyzed by the convulsions induced by the poison, but this condition is wearing off gradually and the physicians expect an early recovery. Her attorney in the suit for divorce is W. H. Lewis. She was married May 31, 1909, and separated from her husband July 1, 1912.

While Studstill was in Waco at the

Auto Truck Crushes Lad, 13, in Decatur Street; May Not Live

Julius Silverman, 13 years old, of 253 East Hunter Street, was run down and badly crushed at Decatur and Butler Streets by a Foote & Davies Company auto truck late Monday afternoon. It is not thought he will live.

J. L. Davis, of 161 Love Street, was driving the truck. He was arrested by Policeman G. E. Butler, pending an investigation of the circumstances of the accident.

The street was crowded and scores of persons were horrified by the spectacle. Davis said he was driving the truck at about five miles an hour, and that it was his opinion the boy must have lost his balance on the bicycle he was riding and fallen under the rear wheel of the truck. He recalled seeing Silverman mounting his bicycle as the truck was approaching.

Policeman Shaw rushed the unconscious boy to Grady Hospital. In addition to internal injuries, it was found that Silverman's left leg was broken in several places.

STEEL TRUST QUIZ BOAST A BLUFF

WASHINGTON, July 7.—Edward Lauterbach, a New York lawyer, today confessed to the Overman lobby investigating committee he had told Lewis Cass Ledyard he was able to prevent or to head off the Congressional investigation of the Steel Trust.

Severely grilled, Lauterbach was forced to admit that, when he had told Ledyard of coming to Washington "to look over the situation," he actually had seen no member of the House or Senate, nor any other official. He had learned "that President Taft was opposed to the investigation from Henry B. Martin, the much-talked-about secretary of the Anti-Trust League."

Calls Claim Exaggeration.

"Then your statement to Ledyard that you had ben to Washington and learned things that prompted you to say the investigation could be stopped was a falsehood?" demanded Senator Reed.

"It was an exaggeration," replied Lauterbach.

Lauterbach, when cornered as to the source of his information about "inside matters" in Washington, each time was forced to admit that David Lamar and Martin were his sole authority for his statements that President Taft did not want the investigation to proceed or that other high officials were opposed to the investigation.

Denies Posing as Power.

The witness declared that in his conversation with Ledyard, February 6, 1912, he did not represent himself either to have seen or to have been in the confidence of any member of the Democratic party.

Lauterbach declared he never had known Lamar in seven years purposely to do a wrong thing. He became acquainted with Lamar in 1906 when litigation regarding the Manhattan and Interborough railway lines in New York was pending, at which time Lamar represented the interests of Russell Sage and H. H. Rogers. He detailed several important lawsuits in which he was engaged as the result of his introduction to Rogers by Lamar.

Confirms Ledyard's Story.

Lauterbach also denied he called Lamar a blackmailer during his talk with Ledyard last year. Ledyard had testified before the committee that Lauterbach said he did not represent himself at that meeting as a representative of any member of the Democratic party. Lauterbach asserted this was correct and that his remark covered all subjects.

The witness asserted he had never discussed with Lamar the alleged forgery of $82,000,000 in the books of the Union Pacific. He repeatedly asserted he knew nothing of Lamar's impersonations of Congressmen until he heard his testimony before the Overman committee.

Lauterbach explained he engineered the purchase of a majority of the stock of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company by J. P. Morgan during the panic of 1907, and that "this panic was engineered by the men who were seeking to buy the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company and that they bought it much cheaper as a result of the financial cataclysm they precipitated."

Explains Wall Street "Pull."

Lauterbach explained that it was on account of his knowledge of the Tennessee Coal and Iron deal that he felt that he could influence Wall Street with regard to the steel investigation.

Lauterbach knew of the steel investigation resolution before it was introduced in the House. Lamar showed it to him. Lauterbach protested and went at once to tell Morgan about it.

OPERATIONS OF SLAVERS IN HOTEL BARED

A new and sensational expose of vice conditions said to be prevalent in Atlanta was made Monday morning by Hattie Smith, a pretty 17-year-old girl, who was arrested in a hotel which was raided Sunday night.

If the statements of the Smith girl, who made a confession of her own guilt to the Chief, are true, Atlanta is in the clutches of one of the best organized vice systems in existence.

Certain downtown hotels, the girl claims, are the rendezvous of women procurers who go out on the streets and entice young girls in where they are provided with every comfort and convenience, in addition to being carried out on long automobile rides by strange men.

Gives Chief Names.

The names of at least one of these procurers has been placed in the hands of Chief Beavers, who will make an arrest before night, it is believed. The name of a prominent citizen of Atlanta also has been given to the Chief, in addition to the names of several women involved in the traffic, it is said.

Hattie Smith's story Monday morning was dramatic in the extreme. She told Chief Beavers how she left her home last Wednesday; how she met the woman procurer; how she was enticed into the hotel in question, and then the other details of her shame. Her confession was complete.

She admitted her guilt and then upon the query of the Chief told all she knew about the conditions, which, she says, she saw with her own eyes.

Tells Who Enticed Her.

In the course of the conversation the girl gave the Chief the names of several parties, including one or more prominent men of Atlanta, in addition to the name of the woman who enticed her to the hotel.

The arrest of a negro elevator boy in a downtown hotel shortly after noon was the first step taken by Chief Beavers in the new probe. The boy is believed to have knowledge of many of the denizens of the vice ring.

A number of downtown hotels are said to be booked for the police dragnet.

Mrs. T. R. Frierson and C. N. Hughes, victims of the vice crusade Sunday night, were bound over under $200 bond each by Recorder Broyles Monday afternoon.

Mrs. William Jones, of 168 South Boulevard, who operates the house where the parties were arrested, was bound over under $500 bond on a charge of rugning a disorderly house. A third victim of the raid was C. R. Hutchinson, who was fined $10.

Mrs. Frierson is well known in Atlanta as the woman who was pardoned some time ago by Mayor Woodward. She says her home is in Jacksonville.

DEPARTMENT TO GOVERN BANKS PROPOSED

Bill, in Both House and Senate, Provides for Supervisor of State Institutions.

A bill providing for the creation of a department of banking to regulate and supervise approximately 600 State banks in Georgia was presented Monday to the House and Senate Committees on Banks and Banking by the Georgia Bankers' Association.

The bill, if passed, will revolutionize the method of supervision of State banks, as it will take such supervision entirely from the hands of the State Comptroller and his assistants.

Haynes McFadden, secretary of the Georgia Bankers' Association, said Monday morning that no lobby for the bill would be conducted; that it would be presented to the House and Senate Banking Committees, which may do as they see fit.

Bill Called Good One.

"The bill is a good one, we think," said Mr. McFadden, "and if passed will be a great benefit in the supervision of the State banks, which are now regulated by the State Comptroller and his two assistants.

"The present regulation and supervision is entirely inadequate, as is obvious, when it is brought out that these three men are supposed to conduct examinations of approximately 600 banks each year. Two examinations per year givese to each one of these men 400 inspections to make in 365 days."

The proposed bill provides for the creation of a department of banking, which shall be in charge of a superintendent appointed by the Governor for a term of four years, the first term beginning January 1, 1915, and expiring January 1, 1919.

Office to Pay $4,000 Year.

The superintendent shall receive a salary of $4,000 a year and shall have the power to appoint from time to time an assistant superintendent, who shall be ex-officio examiner, and such additional examiners and office assistants as may be required to discharge the duties of the office.

The assistant superintendent and special examiners shall be skilled accountants and familiar with the banking business. The assistant superintendent shall receive a salary of $2,000 per annum, while each assistant shall receive a salary of $1,800 per year.

Every bank, trust company and other corporation doing a banking business in the State, excluding private banks, copartnerships or voluntary associations and national banks, shall be subject to supervision by the State department.

Apartment Houses Must Quit Smoking

Chairman R. M. Harwell, of the City Smoke Commission, has warned department house owners who are resisting the anti-smoke law. These people were given until summer to remodel their furnaces so tenants might not be inconvenienced during cold weather. Now, Chairman Harwell says, a number of them have banded together to get the law repealed.

"The department house smoke evil is one of the worst in the city," he said.

"When they fire up in the fall they must comply with the law or be taken before the Recorder."

LEE'S ATTORNEY IS READY FOR WRIT FIGHT

Habeas Corpus Move to Free Negro in Phagan Case Due to Start Monday.

Habeas corpus proceedings in behalf of Newt Lee, negro night watchman at the National Pencil Factory, were promised Monday by the negro's attorney, Bernard L. Chappell. Settlement of this phase of the Phagan murder mystery will determine definitely the status of the negro.

It is known that the State regards Lee as a material witness in building up its case against Frank. The attitude of Mr. Chappell is that his client knows no more about he crime than he already has told, and should therefore be freed. Lee has told the detectives nothing which links any man directly with the crime. By the defense, his story is held to point to the guilt of Leo Frank no more than to the guilt of Conley.

The State, however, will fight any effort to give the negro his liberty. Solicitor Dorsey fears that Lee will get out of the jurisdiction of the court once he is permitted his freedom.

The battle over Lee is the only outward sign of activity in the Phagan case either by the defense or the prosecution, but it is known that the defense is busily engaged completing its case. One new witness was interviewed Saturday by Frank's lawyers, and his affidavit taken before a notary public. A strong net is being woven about Conley. The nature of the testimony is being kept secret, but it is known that the defense expects to free Frank by showing that it was Conley who committed the crime. The negro is said to be enmeshed in the testimony in the hands of the defense.

Despite rumors of another postponement, attorneys for the defense and prosecution said Monday that they would be ready to go ahead with the case at the time set for trial, July 28, and that they knew of no reason for further delay.

Jury to Consider Indicting Conley.

What was considered a direct reference to the Phagan case was made in the charge of Superior Judge George L. Bell to the Grand Jury Monday morning. He said he wanted to place particular emphasis on recent "horrible homicides" and urged the jury to probe deep in an effort to find clews that would lead to perpetrators.

The Grand Jury was organized at 9 o'clock Monday morning with W. D. Beattie foreman. Judge Bell made one of the shortest charges ever delivered in a Fulton County courtroom.

Immediately following the charge the jury went into executive session to consider bills presented by the Solicitor's office. After to-day's session the calendar of criminal business will be disposed of, and the jury will have every opportunity to take up any matters it might see fit.

A meeting will be called later in the week when a definite plan of action will be outlined for the term. It was regarded as likely that the Phagan case would be reopened and an indictment against Jim Conley considered.

Other matters that might be taken up are recent developments with the police department, in which eight patrolmen were suspended for alleged corruption, the counter charges of corruption made by them and charges of open vice.

Wind Storm Wrecks Waycross Churches

WAYCROSS, July 7.—Considerable damage was done in Waycross by a windstorm that swooped down on the city Sunday afternoon with no warning. Four churches were demolished and a dozen small houses blown from their foundations, three of the number turning completely over.

Trees and fences in all parts of the city were blown down and many windows and much plate glass were smashed. A three-story building used by negroes for their lodge meetings was so badly damaged it will have to be rebuilt.

BONUS FOR PONY CLUBS HELPS "TRAILERS"

Less Than Month Left for Contestants — Told to Imitate Milkman.

Three weeks and a few odd days remain of The Georgian and American pony contest. Not a moment of this time can be wasted by the boys and girls who want the beautiful little ponies which the whole city admired when they were paraded July 4.

The big bonus offer for clubs of five has expired. Nearly all the contestants worked hard, and turned in one or more clubs. Some turned in a dozen clubs. As rapidly as possible, these bonuses will be accredited, and the standings announced. Then it will be seen that some of the "trailers" now are out in front.

Good, solid work from now on will ccunt wonderfully. No doubt some of the contestants feel that they have seen every one possible—they can not think of the next place to turn for subscriptions. If they have been working conscientiously, this feeling is natural. But this is a large city. There are hundreds more, probably within walking distance of the contestants' homes, who have not been approached. Boys and girls now should cover their districts like the mailman does, a tireless house to house canvass will bring excellent results.

"Take your receipt books," advises the contest manager, "and go through the stubs. Tabulate carefully all those who took the paper for a month or two months. Note their expiration dates. Then see every one a few days before the time expires. Ten out of every eleven will renew. The sort of paper we are giving subscribers is the best possible help for the contestants. Their friends see they are getting their money's worth, and more."

Painter's Death Accidental, Says Coroner's Jury

JACKSONVILLE, July 7.—E. O. Painter, the wealthy Jacksonville fertilizer manufacturer, who lost his life in the St. Johns River on May 22, came to his death by accidental drowning, according to the Coroner's jury, which to-day completed the Painter inquest. Attorneys for the insurance companies, which carried life and accident policies on Painter, aggregating $1,178,000, were not permitted by Coroner C. D. Abbott to cross-examine witnesses summoned before the jury.

The inquest was delayed several weeks while chemical and pathological analyses of Painter's stomach, brain and other vital organs were being made by chemists in Baltimore, and later because attorneys for one of the insurance companies instituted injunction proceedings to secure possession of Painter's viscera. The jury's verdict was based largely on the report submitted by the Baltimore chemists, that no trace of poison had been found.

Mason Returns Home To Try 9 Policemen

In eight of the trials Tuesday night police officers suspended by Chief Beavers in connection with the Auburn Avenue blind tiger scandal will be defendants.

"The investigation by the commission will be thorough," Chairman Mason said Monday.

COCHRAN TO ASK INVESTIGATION OF SCHOOLS

Fulton Legislator Believes There Has Been Extravagance at the State Agricultural Colleges.

Satisfied that mismanagement, incompetency or extravagance may have been prevalent in the various district agricultural colleges of late, Representative Ralph O. Cochran, of Fulton, will propose a resolution in the House calling for a rigid legislative probe into the same.

Mr. Cochran's idea is that the schools so far have failed pointedly to justify the great outlay of money required to keep them up.

The gentleman from Fulton will not charge any person with deliberate wrongdoing, but he does believe that the schools have not been conducted in a businesslike manner, and that they might, and should, be placed on a basis working to Georgia's greater advantage.

He calls attention to the deficits shown in the Treasurer's reports, and draws the seemingly warranted inference that the colleges are not returning to the State anything like the amount of money they should, considering the money the State spends upon them.

The eleven district schools are supposed to be self-supporting, in a way, but the returns, as indicated by the Treasurer's report, do not show them as approximating anything like that ideal status.

This proposed investigation, coming on the heels of the mix-up in the Experiment Station, is sure to attract widespread attention throughout Georgia, as every congressional district has one of these agricultural schools.

"I do not wish to be placed in the attitude of attacking the district schools,' said Mr. Cochran, discussing his resolution to-day. "I really want their co-operation in benefitting agricultural conditions in Georgia. I am trying to find out exactly what they are doing, and when that has been ascertained, we can proceed as the results indicate."

Marriage Law Is Scored by Judge as He Frees Child-Wife

Declaring the marriage laws instead of the divorce laws of Georgia were in need of a radical reform, Superior Judge George L. Bell directed a jury Monday morning to find a verdict in favor of pretty Mrs. M. S. Stevens, a 15-year-old bride of a year ago, who asked a divorce, alleging cruel treatment.

Judge Bell charged the jury:

"Gentlemen, this is not a case for moralizing. This young woman is entitled to a divorce. It is not the divorce laws that need reforming, but the marriage laws. There should be some way to prevent people marrying at the age this young woman did, and there should be some way for both parties to determine the kind of proposition they are taking on for life."

Senate Once More Denies Its Hall to Women Suffragists

Ineffectual efforts were made by Senator W. D. McNeil, of the Twenty-second district, Monday morning for reconsideration of the resolution granting the Georgia Woman's Suffrage Association the use of the Senate chamber on the evening of Wednesday and Thursday, July 9 and 10.

The Senator's motion to take the resolution from the table, although buttressed with the forceful declaration that the Senate had no right to deny such a request soming from respectable citizens, was lost by a vote of 17 to 15.

Valor of '61 Pastor's Theme to the Young

"Let us forget the hatred," Dr. Foster said, "but remember the bravery of our heroes."

Dr. Foster emphasized the practical advantages of country-wide education and deplored the fact that there were not enough schools in Georgia.

PLANTERS FIGHT TAX ON COTTON EXCHANGES

WASHINGTON, July 7.—Southern planters are protesting to the Senate Finance Committee against the provision in the tariff bill taxing cotton exchange dealers .05 per cent.

This provision was inserted in the tariff bill by Senator Simmons to meet the demand that there shall cease all gambling in cotton futures and on margins. It resulted from attempts to corner the cotton market made by speculators on the New York Cotton Exchange.

The planters contend that with such a tax, amounting to about 50 cents a bale of cotton, no exchange can continue to do business. The planters are opposed to the New York Exchange, but they want the New Orleans and other Southern cotton exchanges to continue.

Defend South's Exchange.

In this argument they present it is held that the New Orleans Exchange and other Southern exchanges are bullish on the cotton market and seek to hold the price to the advantage of the Southern grower. These exchanges make actual deliveries.

The New York Exchange is friendly to the spinners and is bearish, its purpose being to depress the price of cotton. It makes no actual delivery, but serves the spinners for their future needs. Its business is done through the interchange of purchase and sale notes.

Gives Power to England.

With the wiping out of the cotton exchange in this country, the cotton exchange at Liverpool, also bearish, will take command of the cotton market and fix the price just as the sugar market price is fixed in Holland.

It is contended that through the proposed tax a great injustice would be done the cotton growers who are now laboring under the disadvantage of competition with Egyptian cotton, which is of high grade and commands a better price than Southern cotton.

Egyptian cotton, which needs salt air, is being grown in the reclaimed lands of Salton Sea, California, and it is an active competitor of the Southern cotton, which is short on fiber.

Assembly Asked to Increase Pensions

Appeal to the Georgia Legislature for an increase from $60 to $100 a year in pensions for Confederate veterans has been made by Mrs. A. J. Adkins.

Mrs. Adkins sets forth in her letter to the legislators that the increase of pension is entirely logical as the declining years of the veterans make it more and more difficult for them to add to their own support. While $5 a month is acceptable, she says, $8 and a fraction is better.

CLOSING OF BANK INVOLVES 40 MILLIONS

One of the Oldest Institutions in Pittsburg Ordered by U. S. Comptroller to Suspend.

PITTSBURG, July 7.—The First-Second National Bank of Pittsburg, one of the city's oldest banking institutions, closed its doors to-day by direction of the Acting Comptroller of the Currency. The amount involved is said to be between $24,000,000 and $40,000,000. One report is that the amount will reach $200,000,000.

The Pittsburg Clearing House had a special meeting last night to consider the impending failure and to-day another conference was held.

Hundreds of depositors, many of them foreigners employed in the great steel mills, flocked to the bank early to-day but a squad of police kept every one moving.

The First and Second National Banks combined last March and occupied a new 25-story building.

A typewritten notice on the doors stated the institution was in the hands of National Bank Examiner Samuel M. Hann and Sheriff Smith.

A director of the bank to-day made the following statement:

"The officers and directors are a unit in maintaining that a great injustice has been done and that the bank is solvent at this moment. We are also convinced that all claims will be paid in full. If the Treasury Department, operating through the Comptroller of the Currency, had not interfered and had not subjected the bank to a rigid examination by special examiners who were not able to judge values of property and securities in this community, we would have been able to work out to success our problems."

Following the news of the closing of the First-Second National Bank, a steady run started on the Pittsburg Bank for Savings, which also is controlled by the Kuhn interests.

MACON SCANDAL CLIMAX DUE IN LIBEL SUITS

MACON, July 7.—New sensations are expected in the Macon church scandal, in which Professor Frank M. Charlton, choir leader, and Mrs. Effie Lester, secretary of the Ladies' Aid Society, of the First Christian Church, were exonerated Sunday of all charges of wrongdoing, when Attorney Claud Estes, representing Mrs. Lester, and the attorneys for Professor Charlton bring suits for slander in the courts. The damage suits probably will be filed within the next few days, according to statements today of parties involved.

That Macon is promised one of the sharpest legal fights in her history is certain, it is said, as Attorney Julian Urquart, retained by Mrs. Jenkins, one of the accusers, will contest every point of the plaintiffs in defense of his client.

Cleared at Open Meeting.

The aftermath of the affair follows the exoneration of the accused parties at an open session of the First Christian Church Sunday morning, when the report of the elders' investigating committee was read to the congregation.

The session was dramatic. Immediately following the sermon the congregation of the little echurch went into executive session, with Elder Lenoir Erwin, member of the investigating committee, presiding. Seated in the choir directly behind Mr. Erwin was Professor Charlton, slightly pale, but otherwise composed. Near the front was Mrs. Lester, who watched the proceedings with remarkable composure. Mr. Lester sat beside his wife.

Report of Inquiry Complete.

When Elder Roper, chairman of the investigating committee, was called upon to read the report, the congregation leaned forward as if to catch every word of the elder.

The report, as predicted, went into the minutest detail of the whole affair, described every phase of the investigation, pointed out the alleged shallowness of the charges and recommended the complete vindication of the accused.

Elder Roper paused when he had finished reading. There was a dead silence for fully a half minute and then Elder Erwin arose and in solemn tones announced an open meeting for the free discussion of the report.

Woman Speaks for Charlton.

"Speak now or forever hold your peace," said Mr. Erwin.

There was a moment of silence, broken at length by the voice of a woman.

"I have known Professor Charlton for fifteen years," she said, "and in that time I have known him to be a perfect gentleman."

The speaker was Mrs. E. T. Gibson, a member of the Methodist Church and formerly of Bloomington, Ill., the choir leader's old home.

Mrs. Gibson was the only person in the audience to accept the elders' invitation to speak. Elder Irwin then put the question of the guilt of the accused parties to the congregation.

Exoneration Is Unanimous.

Practically every one in the audience arose on the motion to exonerate Professor Charlton and Mrs. Lester. Not one stood when the "nay" vote was put.

Immediately following the vote, the Rev. Mr. Anderson called upon the congregation to sing, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," after which a prayer, one of the most fervent ever heard in the little church, was offered by the pastor. While the vote was being taken Professor Charlton and Mrs. Lester retired from the auditorium. They were greeted by scores of friends following the close of the service.

Place Faith in Accused.

"Our conclusion is," it is stated in the report, "that the parties are innocent of the charges made or others of like nature. We have as much confidence in the integrity and Christian character of both parties as we ever have had and this is the first time we have ever been given occasion to question them."

It is recommended further that the report be published in The Christian Builder and copies for publication be furnished the newspapers and that they become a part of the church records. The report is signed by L. M. Erwin, W. H. Roper, A. W. Smith, A. M. Erwin, Leroy M. Anderson. Elders of the First Christian Church.

Autoist Rams Tree To Save Child's Dog

CHICAGO, July 7.—Robert E. Packard, a wealthy resident of Sheridan Road, is seriously injured and his automobile a wreck as the result of risking his life to save a 7-year-old girl's pet dog.

Packard was driving through Lincoln Park yesterday afternoon when the little dog blocked his way. Making a sudden turn, Packard kept from running over the dog, but sent his machine crashing against a tree.

FLEET BRIDE DARES ANY WOMAN TO OUTRUN HER

Mrs. Grace Murray, who issues sweeping foot race challenge.

She Has Taken First Prize in Every Sprinting Contest Since a Little Girl.

Attention, brides and matrons of Atlanta!

A challenge is issued to you who are fleet of foot for either a hundred-yard sprint or an endurance race by Mrs. Grace Murray, of 222 Rawson Street.

Mrs. Murray is the pretty bride of Stewart Murray, of the Cruickshank Cigar Company. At the annual picnic of the Atlanta Scottish Association July 4, at the grounds of the Burns Club, Mrs. Murray took first prize in the married women's race. She also took first prize in the women's egg and ladle race.

At the picnic of the association last year, Mrs. Murray, then Miss Grace Beddingfield, was winner of the girls' race. She has taken first place in other races, too, and her friends declare she can outrun any one of her sex in Atlanta. She herself says she is willing at any time to enter into a race with any of Atlanta's married women who think they can run.

Mrs. Murray also is a swimmer and diver of ability.

M'NAB'S SLAVERY REPORT GIVEN OUT

Kahn, California, Again Declares Justice Is Being Blocked, and Scores President.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—The publication to-day of former District Attorney McNab's report to Attorney General McReynolds, dated May 21, in the Caminetti-Diggs white slave cases, giving the details of the alleged seduction of the Warrington and Norris girls by young Caminetti and Diggs, aroused new interest in the cases.

Representative Kahn, of California, and other members of the California delegation declared the House Judiciary Committee was wrong in suppressing the McNab report. In the committee report before the House, those parts of the McNab report dealing with the methods used to lead the girls astray; the alleged attempt to suborn perjury and the revelation that Caminetti's counsel had told McNab that Caminetti probably would plead guilty were omitted.

Kahn declared to-day he would demand that all the correspondence in the case be made public. He declared the McNab report justified his charge that a systematized effort was being made to block justice, and that the explanation of the President and Attorney General McReynolds in the case was not well founded.

BULGAR VICTORY COSTS SERVIA 11,000 LIVES

Three Regiments Annihilated in Great Battle Lasting Two Days and Three Nights.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOFIA, July 7.—The tide of victory in the second Balkan war has swung to the Bulgarians. Signal successes are reported.

Eleven thousand Servians of the western wing of the Servian army were reported killed in an engagement near Deslinici. 8,000 others were wounded, many prisoners were taken and the balance were put to flight, according to a dispatch from General Savoff to Czar Ferdinand to-day. It was one of the decisive battles of modern times, according to the Bulgarian Government.

Three Servian regiments were annihilated in the battle which started along the Bregalnitza River in central Macedonia. The fight lasted two days and three nights before the exhausted Servian soldiers gave way before the repeated charges.

The battlefield, which covers an area of nearly 20 square miles, was strewn with dead and wounded, all of whom were left behind.

The Bulgarian casualties were not given.

Intrigue by Austria Blamed for Conflict.

BERLIN, July 7.—A diplomatic intrigue engineered by Austria is responsible for the second Balkan war between Servia, Greece and Montenegro on one hand and Bulgaria on the other, according to a telegram received to-day from Sofia.

Dr. Daneff, one of the leading Bulgarian statesmen, is responsible for the accusation that Austria led Bulgaria to believe that Austrian support would be given Bulgaria in any dispute that country might have with any other of the "allies."

When war was inevitable, Austria withdrew this promise of support on the ground that it might endanger the peace of Europe.

Greeks Ask Powers To Halt Massacres.

ATHENS, July 7.—Greece has appealed to the Powers to prevent further outrages by Bulgarians in Macedonia.

Dispatches from Salonika to-day stated that the Bulgarians had massacred and tortured hundreds of Greek women and children near the town of Negrita. All the able-bodied men are fighting in the Greek armies and there was no one to protect the defenseless families.

Lack of Funds May Halt Balkan War.

ROME, July 7.—Lack of funds probably will put an end to the new Balkan war. All the States in the Balkan league are close to bankruptcy. The powers are expected to refuse any more loans in order to compel the cessation of hostilities.

A Lazy Liver Needs a Dose of Dodson's Liver Tone—Guaranteed to Take Place of Calomel.

When your doctor looks to see if your tongue is coated, he is trying to find out if your liver is working properly. A few years ago doctors had to prescribe calomel—there was nothing else to give.

Recently in many sections of the country Dodson's Liver Tone has practically taken the place of calomel as a liver remedy. Dodson's Liver Tone is mild, pleasant tasting and harmless—which makes it a fine medicine for use when your children become bilious and constipated. But the most remarkable feature of Dodson's Liver Tone is the fact that all druggists who sell it, guarantee it absolutely. The druggist will return your money without argument if a bottle fails to give entire satisfaction.

Price, 50 cents. We suggest that you get a bottle to-day and have it ready for the next member of your family whose liver goes wrong.

U. S. Now Is Fourth In Naval Strength

WASHINGTON, July 7.—The United States is now occupying fourth place among the navies of the world and not third, as is generally supposed.

The real loss of prestige to the navy by reason of the failure to keep up the naval construction program is shown very clearly in Brassey's Manual, whose rating of the nations was discussed generally to-day by officers at the Navy Department.

England 29, Germany 19, France 17, United States 13. Japan is not given.

Lynching Story of 'Seer' Proves Fake

DALTON, July 7.—The fortune teller who informed Mrs. Will Grady that her husband, who disappeared from home, had been hanged by three men and his body disposed of, causing her to come to Dalton to get warrants for the arrest of several men she suspected, has been shown up as a fake by a letter from Grady, who had gone to Alabama.

Mrs. Grady, a bride of three months, was overjoyed and hastened here to stop a search party she thought was looking for her husband's body.

SALE OF A., B. & A. ROAD AROUSES ASSEMBLY

The coming sale of the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad, under foreclosure proceedings, and the rumor that the Louisville and Nashville has its eyes upon it, has started something of a panic among Georgia legislators, particularly as the present Legislature likely will consider seriously the problem of the Western and Atlantic's re-lease in 1919.

There are two parties in the present Legislature with respect to the Western and Atlantic Railway. One favors the re-lease of the State's road as it now stands, the other the extension of the road to the Atlantic seaboard.

If the L. & N. gobbles the A., B. & A., it is held by some that it thereby will have strategic advantage over the State road in the matter of extension to the sea. Indeed, if the L. & N. gets the A., B. & A., it is predicted that the railroad map of Georgia likely will be pretty well changed within a short time.

There are those in the General Assembly who are advocating the purchase of the A., B. & A. by the State, thus extending the W. & A. to the sea. Others hold that the State should keep its hands off the A., B. & A. road and confine itself to such railroad property as it now possesses, with its fine terminal facilities in Atlanta and Chattanooga.

If the L. & N. gets the A., B. & A., it is figured by some legislators that it immediately provide for entry into Atlanta by some other way than that over the State road, as it now comes in. If this is done, it is contended that the W. & A. will will be pretty well put out of busines.

Ansley Manager to Banquet Hotel Men

The Atlanta Hotel Men's Association and friends Monday night will be entertained by Jack F. Letton, manager of the Ansley Hotel.

Those who will be present are Albert Keen, Georgian Terrace; J. Lee Barnes, Majestic; Fred Houser, Journal; Lee Jourdon, attorney; Harry Dutton, Piedmont; J. H. Evans, Imperial; Ed Brown, New Kimball; Bruno Buckofer, Terminal; Jim Williams, Cafe Durand, and Frank Harrell, Aragon.

Ten Collegians Are Believed Drowned

BUFFALO, July 7.—Ten young men, all said to be graduates of English and Canadian colleges, are believed to have ben drowned last night in Lake Erie just off Crescent Beach opposite Buffalo.

The young men were in canoes, and two of the canoes, overturned, were found floating in the Niagara River near Fort Erie this morning.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Two Headliners at Forsyth.

Two headliners will be offered with five other features at the Forsyth this week. There will be the usual daily bargain matinees, and, of course, the ever popular night performances.

Cecil Leane and his company in "The Moving Picture Man" will be one of the headline features. Miss Eva Taylor and her company of three people will present "After the Wedding," one of the cleverest farce sketches in the catalog of good things.

Among the other acts will be Warren and Blanchard, the blank face comedians; the pretty Grace Sisters, who are expert dancers; Hines and Fox, the singer and the piano player; Kennedy and Melrose, the bouncing gymnasts, and Houghton and Hughton, who are expert trick bicyclists.

Talking Pictures at Grand.

Ten cents will pay the way to see and hear Edison's Talking Pictures and the highest grade of first-run motion pictures at any time from 2:30 in the afternoon until 10:30 at night, at the Grand during the week that starts this afternoon.

A big program of the talking pictures was put on last week at higher prices and served to draw large attendance after the pictures had proven their value. The management decided on another week, with a change of subjects, and because of the interest in the pictures and because of the tremendous seating capacity of the theater, determined upon the policy of continuous operation at the dime price.

The Biograph, Vitagraph, Lubin, Selig, Pathe, Essanay, Kalem, Edison and Melies' releases will be presented with entire change of program daily. The Talking Pictures will be changed every other day.

"Along Broadway" at the Bijou.

The musical comedy attractions that are playing the Bijou these days have become immensely popular with patrons of amusement. Each week brings a new company, presenting a new piece, and it is safe to say that nothing in the amusement line has pleased Bijou patrons better than the attractions that are playing from week to week. The bill that is being offered this weeks is the 1912 Cabaret Revue, "Along Broadway," which will be presented by a big company of fun-makers, headed by Will Stanton and Rosalind May.

Edison Talking Pictures Grand daily 2:20 to 10:30. All seats 10 cents.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

by JAMES B. NEVIN

The Legislature, even as a tentative proposition, already is finding the matter of tax reform a perplexing problem, and one calculated to give it much trouble before it is adjusted.

Particularly is the question of tax equalization bothersome and full of difficulty.

Mr. Lipscombe, of Clarke, has an equalization bill pending in the House, and Mr. Cole, of Bartow, and Mr. Swift, of Muscogee, have inheritance tax bills.

The former was drawn by one of the most eminent lawyers in Georgia—an ex-Supreme Court Justice—and is thought to be as nearly perfect as such a measure can be made. Members are non-committal with respect to it, however.

The latter two bills, both carefully prepared, seem to have attracted considerable favorable attention, and both have the backing of the administration, in a general way, but whether either will pass is problematical.

The Legislature plainly is inclined to reform the tax laws, but it just as plainly does not know exactly how to go about it or where to begin.

"One trouble in the situation," said a well-known member of the House to-day, "is the real or imaginary opposition of the farmers to a board of tax equalizers.

"As a matter of fact, I do not believe the farmers, in any very large proportion, anyway, oppose the tax equalization idea. Perhaps a few of them do, but I fail to see where any honest farmer—and the majority of Georgia farmers are honest—should.

"Instead of putting up the farmers' taxes, an equalization act much more likely would put them down. If assessments were adjusted in Georgia as they should be, the total would be so much larger than it is now that taxes, in the average amount paid would come down rather than go up—and the farmer would find himself immensely benefited by this. Instead of a State rate of 5 mills, if taxes were equalized, we probably should be able to get along with a rate of 2 1-2 or 3 mills.

"So, if a farmer's lands were raised—they might not be, and would not be in many cases, of course—a trifle, the total of his taxes likely would be less than now.

"The purpose of a tax equalization act is to catch the tax-dodgers, and to catch them in the open. Such a measure would catch them, too. And if the dodgers were made to come to time, the present taxpayers of the State would find themselves charged up with less of the public expense instead of more.

"It is to be hoped that the present Legislature will pass some genuine tax reform measures, even if it does nothing else during the present session."

Contrary to general expectation and prediction, the Tippins bill, so called in the last Legislature, has not been re-introduced in the present House.

It has been stated, time and again, that the prohibitionists of Georgia generally look upon this measure as useless and of doubtful judgment at this time, and a sort of "let-well-enough-alone" sentiment appears to be spreading among temperance advocates.

The truth of the matter is, prohibitionists seem fairly well satisfied with the status of things in Georgia, and agitation in the present Legislature—or, anyway, in the present session—seems unlikely.

The Chattanooga News recently stated, in an editorial praising Atlanta, that Georgia has the best enforced prohibition laws of any prohibition State in the nation, and far better than Tennessee. This seems to be agreed to all around, and the fact that the Tippins bill has not been re-introduced, notwithstanding the confident predictions that it would be, lends color to the thought that prohibitionists in Georgia incline to agree with The Chattanooga News.

The old expression, "I wouldn't vote for that fellow for dog catcher," has no humiliating significance in Savannah.

There the office of dog catcher is an ancient and honorable institution, and one to which folks generally look up in indicated awe.

Announcement of the appointment of E. H. Henry as official dog catcher for the city of Savannah, in compliance with the ordinance adopted by City Council at its last meeting, has been made by Mayor R. J. Davant. Bond in the sume of $100 has been furnished by Henry, who begins his official duties at once.

The catcher will be provided with a wagon, in which a crate will be placed to retain the impounded animals. A net will also be provided for use in catching the dogs, and a "pound" will be constructed at police headquarters.

As soon as the equipment can be completed the catcher will start on his rounds.

To Mr. Adams, of Hall, belongs the honor and distinction of starting the House roll call in the way it should go.

His name, like Abou Ben Adhem's, leads all the rest, and many a time he has set the fashion in voting, to see himself vindicated in the final round-up.

Adams rarely is absent from his seat in the House. When Clerk Bolfeuilet begins the call every morning, Adams is the first to answer "present," unless Mr. Edmondson, of Brooks, beats him to it and moves that he roll call be dispensed with.

The last name to be called is "Mr. Speaker." He generally votes one way or the other, although Speakers many times have inclined to refrain from going on record unless compelled to.

Says He Got $4,000 For Slaying a Girl

LOS ANGELES, July 7.—The police to-day sent to the State authorities of Ohio a copy of the remarkable "confession" of Simon P. Heffensteine, aged 52, who said that he killed Pearl Bryan and committed six other murders.

According to Heffensteine he killed Pearl Bryan at Toledo, Ohio, and took her body to the place where Jackson and Walling, the men who died for the murder, dissected it. He said he received $4,000 for the murder.

Suffragist Predicts Ballots for Bullets

That all wars since historical times began have taken a toll of 15,000,000,000 lives, was the statement made Sunday by Dr. Thomas E. Green, a lyceum lecturer stopping at the Hotel Ansley.

"Militarism is the burden of the nations," said Dr. Green, "and I look to woman suffrage to lift it from the shoulders of humanity. Equal suffrage is a stepping stone to universal peace, for when it comes the battles of the world will be fought with ballots instead of bullets."

LEGISLATURE TO VISIT CITY OF AUGUSTA

Members Will Spend Whole Day as City's Guests July 16—Many Bills Offered.

The Senate Monday morning concurred in a House resolution accepting an invitation to visit Augusta Wednesday, July 16. This will be the first time in 125 years that the Georgia Legislature has visited Augusta. That city will transport her guests on a special train, leaving Atlanta at 7:30 o'clock.

A report from the Committee on Rules was adopted changing the name of the Committee on Immigration and Labor to the Committee on Commerce and Labor.

Several bills of importance were introduced. Following is the list:

By Senator W. J. Bush—Making adultery the only cause for divorce.

By G. M. Hute—Constitutional amendment increasing the number of senatorial districts to 60, and providing that each of the six counties with the largest population have one Senator.

By Fred Kea—Removing the disabilities preventing W. B. Kent, of Alamo, from resuming the practice of law.

By J. T. Peyton—Giving the Railroad Commission power to exempt railroads of less than 100 miles' trackage from the electric headlight requirement.

House to Allow Women Use of Hall.

One of the first things in the House Tuesday morning will be a vote on permitting the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association to meet in the House chamber July 9-10. A bill to this effect was introduced by Representative John Y. Smith, of Fulton, Monday morning. A motion to refer it to the Rules and Floor Committee met with defeat. A new charter for Atlanta was filed by the Fulton County delegation in the House Monday. It provides for the present division of ten wards and allows the Mayor to succeed himself for one term.

The House concurred with the Senate in an invitation to Herbert Myrick to address a joint session of the two bodies July 15.

A resolution was adopted inviting Senator Hoke Smith to address the Legislature.

Doctors' Opinions About POSTUM

Are best expressed in their own words

Writing under date of May 13, 1913, one physician says:

"From past experience I have become a strong friend of Postum. I am now advising its use over that of coffee altogether, and find that most of those who give Postum a trial become users of it.

"It is however sometimes very hard or impossible to get folks to purchase something when they 'don't know anything about it,' and 'don't want to throw away money on a chance of liking it.'

"Now, it occurs to me these people are not to be criticised for such feelings, but at the same time I am sure many of them would become friends of Postum if they could but have a sample of it placed in their hands.

"If you think this is a good suggestion, and will send me samples from time to time, I will see that they are placed among my patients where they will do the most good, for I believe it is to their interest to drink Postum rather than coffee. Postum is used in our home, but we buy it of our grocer, and we expect to keep right on doing so."

Thousands of coffee drinkers are victims of headache, nervousness, biliousness, heart trouble and indigestion, without knowing the cause.

More and more, physicians are naming coffee as a common cause of these ills. Not every physician, however, finds time to send a sample following his prescription of

INSTANT POSTUM

If your physician recommends that you "stop coffee," or your own distress suggests a change, send your name and address with 2c stamp (for postage), to Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich., and a 5-cup tin of the new food-drink—Instant Postum—will be mailed immediately. Nothing is so convincing as the happy results of personal experience.

GEORGIA WOMAN SUFFRAGE BODY FACES ROW

Split in Atlanta League, Whose Members Are Barred, Will Be Brought Before Convention.

Little hope was seen Monday for a settlement of the strife in the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association until the convention here July 9 and 10.

Within their ranks disagreements have arisen which are not so easily disposed of. One side is led by Mrs. M. L. McLendon, president of the Atlanta Civic League and the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association, and the other by Mrs. F. S. Whiteside, whom a number have urged for official recognition.

Parade Cause of Trouble.

The trouble began early this year when advocates of woman suffrage were anticipating the parade in Washington. Mrs. McLendon was president of the Atlanta Civic League and Mrs. Amelia B. Woodall was secretary. The officers of the organization were to be the representatives in Washington, but it was time for re-election.

The election was postponed several times, until Mrs. McLendon and Mrs. Woodall automatically became the official representatives. On their return they were met by the charge from Mrs. Whiteside that they had manipulated postponements that just such things might result.

New League Is Formed.

And the story is that Mrs. Ida B. McClellan, in a speech, precipitated the actual split.

This situation, some time ago, resulted in Mrs. McLendon and her supporters in the Atlanta Civic League forming the Atlanta Equal Suffrage League.

Now, on the eve of the meeting of the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association, the members of the Atlanta Civic League have been denied admission on the grounds that they have not paid up their dues.

Efforts to bring about an amicable adjustment have failed. It is asserted that a rival organization to the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association may be formed.

PURE MILK FOR ONLY 31 POOR BABIES

The Mothers' Congress, which has inaugurated a campaign for pure milk for babies through the hot months, adopted the unique method Monday of distributing milk bottles at grocery stores for the collection of pennies and nickels with which to buy milk.

Mrs. John Rowlett, 186 East Pine Street, who heads the congress, said the campaign would be the best ever conducted for the health of Atlanta infants.

So far but 31 of the hundreds of babies of the poor have been provided for by the fund. Certificates calling for milk throughout the three summer months have been given the mothers of the infants.

"We want every baby in Atlanta to have good, pure milk through the hot spell," Mrs. Rowlett said, "and, if possible, we shall see that this is accomplished."

Sunday, Mrs. Rowlett said, she went to the home of Mrs. W. J. Denson, at 4 Ella Street, to see a baby that had been reported to her. The visit was too late. The baby was dead, and the mother sobbed regret that aid had not come sooner.

Grandma Talks About Babies

Has a Large Circle of Listeners Who Profit by Her Wisdom and Experience.

In almost any settled community there is a grandma who knows Mother's Friend. Not only is she reminiscent of her own experience, but it was through her recommendation that so many young, expectant mothers derived the comfort and blessing of this famous remedy.

Mother's Friend is applied externally to the abdomen, stomach and breasts, allays all pain, avoids all nausea, and prevents caking of the breasts.

It is quickly and wonderfully penetrating, permits the muscles to expand without the strain on the ligaments and prepares the system so thoroughly that the crisis is passed almost without the slightest distress. Thus there need be no such thing as dread or fear.

No better nor more cheering advice can be given the expectant mother than to suggest the use of Mother's Friend. She will take courage from the beginning. The days will be cheerful, the nights restful. Thus the health is preserved, the mind is in repose and the period is an unending one of quiet, joyful anticipation.

You can obtain Mother's Friend of any druggist at $1 a bottle. Do not forget nor neglect to be supplied with this greatest remedy ever devised for motherhood. It is unfailing. Write at once to Bradfield Regulator Company, 133 Lamar Building, Atlanta, Ga., for their very interesting and instructive book of advice for expectant mothers.

Announcing the First Showing in Atlanta of

The New Fall Suits

There Are Many Interesting Style Points About Them

The women of Atlanta may see now, may select now, the suits that will be fashionable this fall!

They are here in a quantity and variety that amount to a DISPLAY of the new styles.

Rather early, you ask?

No! We would be falling short of what is expected of us did we not show AUTHENTIC styles the moment AUTHENTIC styles are adopted.

So here they are!

And the woman going to the mountains, to the "cool spots" of America will appreciate not only the newness of these suits, but also the somewhat greater weight of them.

But what are the new styles?

Only hints here, we would rather your eyes take in all the interesting points.

Coats are longer, 38 to 42 inches this fall. Cutaways are prominent, perhaps we should say eminent.

They are varied, too—a cutaway, pointed at the back, will have a bit of fullness at the side waist that you are accustomed to associate only with a blouse—novel, distinctive.

Skirts—the tendency is toward "dressy drapes." They are more marked than ever, also more graceful than ever, a sort of evolution of draping. And the slashed skirt is favored; some of the most charming models have skirts slashed four and six inches.

Materials also show the new scheme of things. You will term them "fancy." Even soft-finished cloths show self-stripes; crepons are revived—more, they are given wonderful newness and beauty by smart weavers, who put little blocks and squares and figures in them; Bayadere poplins are as attractive as can be; and velour broadcloths and, for the more tailored suits, men's-wear serges.

And the rich, beautiful colors you may choose from—mahogany, cinnamon, amethyst, prune, navy, of course, a darker Copenhagen than we know and green.

However, these are but the details, your pleasure will come of seeing how these details have been embodied into elegant suits new and out-of-the-ordinary.

There will be no importuning you to buy—we want you to enoy the privilege that is yours, to see the AUTHENTIC styles in fall suits.

FULL SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS

DANIEL O'NEILL, a powerful, self-made man, forces his only daughter, Mary, into a loveless marriage with the impecunious and profligate Lord Raa, so that his ambition to have his descendants the rightful heirs of the one earldom in Ellan may be realized. Mary, a convent-raised young woman, shocked to find her husband a man of sordid, sensual passions, refuses utterly to have anything to do with him until such time as he can prove himself worthy of her love. During the honeymoon abroad Alma Lier, a divorcee who had been expelled from the convent Mary attended in Rome, attaches herself to the party, and makes the "honeymoon trip" a long series of slights and insults for Lady Raa.

At last Lady Raa becomes certain of the infidelity of her husband and his misconduct with Alma Lier. On her return to London Mary encounters her old playfellow, Martin Conrad, who has returned from his triumphant expedition to the Antarctic. Drawn into ever-closer relations with the only man for whose friendship she ever cared, Mary finally awakes to the fact that she is hopelessly in love with Martin. Terrified by this knowledge, and finding herself more and more in love with Martin, she determines to run away from the cause of her distress, and go home.

Mary's home-coming to Castle Raa is a sad affair. Her husband fills the tumble-down old mansion with hith his fast friends from London, including Alma Lier, who assumes control of the household. Ultimately the illness of her father offers Mary excuse for escape from the intolerable environment. But before visiting her old home Mary appeals in turn to her Bishop and to her father's lawyer, only to be told that neither Church nor State can offer any relief from her false position. She returns next day to Castle Raa to find that Martin is arriving for a farewell visit, and that by Alma Lier's deceitful scheming the whole house party has gone off for a few days' cruise.

During her three days alone with her lover Mary fights a grim battle with temptation, only to find on the last night that her faith in renunciation and the laws of the Church is a fragile thing compared with her overwhelming love for this pure-hearted man. "With Martin's passionate words, "You are my real wife, I am your real husband," ringing in her brain she forgets everything else, and with strong steps walks across the corridor to Martin's bedroom. This is the action which Martin has advised as being the only course open to them which is sure to bring the one result they are determined to attain—Mary's divorce from Lord Raa.

Mary determines, after the departure of Martin Conrad, to hide herself in London. She is driven by fear of Lord Raa's discovery of her unfaithfulness to him; she is equally afraid of the venomous tongue of Alma Lier. She is no sooner settled in a cheap little boarding house in London than a great hue and cry is raised by her father. Of all persons, it is Mildred, that one truest friend of her convent days, who ferrets her out, but for Mary's sake she breaks a vow and refuses to give her up. Then comes the report of the loss of Martin's ship in the Antarctic. Desperate with grief and fearful for the unborn child which she hopes shall reconcile her to her empty life and typify her great love for Martin, she flees from Mildred to a still more obscure corner of London.

I asked the old driver how long it would take me to get to Ilford. He looked at me again and said," 'B out 'our and 'alf I should say by the looks of you and you carrying the biby."

MY NEW quarters were in the poorer district which stands at the back of Bayswater.

The street was a cul-de-sac (of some ten small houses on either side), which was blocked up at the farther end by the high wall of a factory for the "humanization" of milk, and opened out of a busy thoroughfare of inferior shops like a gulley way off a noisy coast. My home in this street was in number one.

My room, which was of fair size, was on the first floor and had two windows to the street, with yellow holland blinds and white muslin curtains.

The furniture consisted of a large bed, a horse hair sofa, three cane-bottomed chairs, a chest of drawers (which stood between the windows), and a mirror over the mantelpiece, which had pink paper, cut into fanciful patterns, over the gilt frame, to keep off the flies.

The floor was covered with linoleum, but there were two strips of carpet, one before the fire and the other by the bed; the walls were papered by a bright red paper representing peonies in bloom; and there were three pictures—a portrait of a Welsh preacher, an engraving entitled "Feed My Sheep" (showing Jesus carrying a lamb), and a memorial card of some member of the family of the house, in the form of a tomb with a weeping angel on either side.

I paid five shillings a week for my room, and, as this included the use of kettle, cooking utensils and crockery, I found to my great delight at the end of the first week that providing for myself (tea, bread and butter and eggs being my principal food) I had spent only ten shillings altogether, which, according to my present needs, left me enough for my time of waiting and several weeks beyond it.

Every morning I went out with a little hand bag to buy my provisions in the front street, and every afternoon I took a walk in the better part of Bayswater and even into the park (Hyde Park), which was not far off, but never near to Piccadilly, or so far east as Bloomsbury, lest I should meet Sister Mildred or be recognized by the old boarders.

Finding it necessary to account for myself, just as at the boarding house, I had adhered to my former name, but said I was the widow of a commander lately lost at sea, which was as near to the truth as I dare venture.

She Tells of Her Coming Motherhood.

I had also made no disguise of the fact that I was expecting a child, a circumstance which secured me much sympathy from the womanly women who were now my neighbors.

They were all worthy women, generally the wives of men working in the milk factory; and therefore the life of our street was very regular.

At five in the morning you heard the halting step of the old "knocker up" who went up and down the street tapping at the bedroom windows with a long pole like a fishing rod. A little before six you heard the clashing of many front doors and the echoing footsteps of the men going to their work. At half-past seven you heard the whoop of the milkman and the rattling of his cans. At half-past eight you heard the little feet of the children, like the pattering of rain, going off to the Board School round the corner. And a little after four in the afternoon you heard the wild cries of the entire juvenile community let loose from lessons, the boys running iron hoops and the girls skipping rope.

After that, our street hummed like a beehive, with the women, washed and combed, standing knitting at their open doors or exchanging confidences across the areas until darkness fell, and each of the mothers called her children in to bed, as an old hen in the farmyard clucks up her chickens.

These good creatures were very kind to me. Having satisfied themselves from observation to my habits that I was "respectable," they called me "our lady," and I could not help hearing that I was a "nice young thing," though it was a little against me that I did not go to church or chapel, and had confessed to being a Catholic—for several of our families (including that of my landlady) were members of the Welsh Zion Chapel far away.

Such was the life of the little human cage to which I had confined myself, but I had an inner life that was all my own and very sweet to me.

Getting Ready for The Newcomer.

During the long hours of every day in which I was alone I occupied myself in the making of clothes for my baby—buying linen and flannel and worsted, and borrowing patterns from my Welsh landlady.

This stimulated my tenderness toward the child that was to come, for the heart of a young mother is almost infantile, and I hardly know whether to laugh or cry when I think of the childish things I did and thought and said to myself in those first days when I was alone in my room in that back street in Bayswater.

Thus long before the baby was born I had christened her. At first I wished to call her Mary, not because I cared for that name myself, but because Martin had said it was the most beautiful in the world. In the end, however, I called her Isabel Mary (because Isabel was my mother's name, and she had been a far better woman than I was), and as I finished my baby's garments one by one I used to put them away in their drawer, saying to myself, "That's Isabel Mary's binder," or "Isabel Mary's christening-robe," as the case might be.

I dare say it was all very foolish. There are tears in my eyes when I think of it now, but there were none then, for, though there were moments when, thinking of Martin, I felt as if life were forever blank and bare, I was almost happy in my poor surroundings, and if it were a cage I had fixed myself in, there was always a bird singing inside of it—the bird that sang in my own bosom.

"When Isabel Mary comes, everything will be all right," I used to think.

This went on for many weeks, and I think it might have gone on until my time was full but for something which, occurring under my eyes, made me tremble with the fear that the life I was living and the hope I was cherishing were really very wrong and selfish.

Of my landlady, Mrs. Williams, I saw very little. She was a rather hard but no doubt heavily laden woman, who had "to do" for a swarm of children, besides two young men lodgers who lived in the kitchen and slept in the room behind mine. Her husband was a quiet man (a carter at the dairy), whom I never saw at all except on the staircase at 10 o'clock at night, when, after winding the tall clock on the landing, he went upstairs to bed in his stocking feet.

Emmerjane, the Family Drudge.

But the outstanding member of the family for me was a shock-headed girl of 14 called Emmerjane, which was a running version of Emma Jane.

I understand that Emmerjane was the illegitimate daughter of Mrs. Williams' dead sister, and that she had been born in Carnarvon, which still shimmered in her memory in purple and gold.

Emmerjane was the drudge of the family, and I first saw her in the street at dusk, mothering a brood of her little cousins.

Afterward she became my drudge also—washing my floor, bringing up my coal and cleaning my grate for sixpence a week, and giving me a great deal of information about my neighbors for nothing.

Thus she told me, speaking broad cockney with a Welsh accent, that the people opposite were named Wagstaffe and that the creaking noise I heard was that of a mangle, which Mrs. Wagstaffe had to keep because her husband was a drunkard.

But the greatest interest of this weird little woman, who had a premature knowledge of things a child ought not to know, was in a house half way down the street on the other side, where steam was always coming from the open door to the front kitchen.

The people who lived there were named Jones. Mrs. Jones "washed" and had a bed-ridden old mother (with two shillings from the parish) and a daughter named Maggie.

Maggie Jones, who was eighteen, and very pretty, used to work in the dairy, but the foreman had taken "advantage of her," and she had just had a baby.

This foreman was named Owen Owens, and he lived at the last number on our side, where two unmarried sisters "kept house" for him and sat in the "singing seat" at Zion.

Maggie thought it was the sisters' fault that Owen Owens did not marry her, so she conceived a great scheme for "besting" them, and this was the tragedy which, through Emmerjane's quick little eyes and her Cockney Welsh tongue, came to me in instalments day by day.

When her baby was a month old Maggie dressed it up "fine" and took it to the photographer's for its "card di visit." The photographs were a long time coming, but when they came they were "heavenly lovely" and Maggie "cried to look at them."

Then she put one in an envelope and addressed it to Owen Owens, and though it had only to cross the street she went out after dark to a pillar-box a long way off lest anybody should see her posting it.

Next day she said: "He'll have it now, for he always comes home to dinner. He'll take it up to his bedroom, look you, and stand it on the washboard, and if either of those sisters touch it he'll give them what's what."

After that she waited anxiously for an acknowledgment and every time the postman passed down our street her pretty pale face would be at the door, saying, "Anything for me to day?" or "Are you sure there's nothing for me, postman?"

Home Cooking

By MAY IRWIN.

THAT the fastidious should look with distrust, if not disgust, upon the hotel or restaurant made hash or ragout, or stew, or minced dish, is quite within my understanding and sympathy. But it is quite different in the well regulated home.

My husband and sons, who are rather spoiled as far as the things of the table are concerned, enjoy beef stews and roast beef hash better than the original roast. Fricassee chicken, when properly prepared, is much better than roast chicken. Spaghetti, when warmed over, is twenty times better than when first cooked. How seldom we eat a really well cooked dish of spaghetti. That is because it is not thoroughly cooked.

Suppose it is Tuesday—ironing day. If there is in your pantry or ice box the skeleton of last night's roast chicken, you are fortunate. From the shreds of meat here and there sticking to the bones you can make an excellent fricassee, or that dish which is a favorite in my household.

Mince the bits of cold chicken together. Chop a small green pepper, a small onion, four mushrooms, a bit of parsley and one cold potato together until very fine. Have a frying pan ready with tablespoonful of hot brown butter, and put the mixture in and stir it well.

Cover it for a few moments and let it brown on one side, as hashed brown potatoes are done. Put on a hot platter and garnish with tomato sauce. This sauce is made by cooking two or three tomatoes for half an hour; strain and add a tablespoonful of butter, salt, pepper and flour enough to thicken a little.

Perhaps you are inclined to toss away three or four tomatoes that are soft, but still good. Their ripeness is no drawback for the favorite breakfast dish of mine, for which I give you the recipe.

Cut a slice from the top of each tomato. Remove enough of the pulp to enable you to drop into each tomato a bit of butter the size of your thumb nail and a raw egg. Pin with a toothpick a strip of raw bacon around each tomato. Sprinkle a little salt and pepper over the top and put into a very hot oven until the eggs are set. This will be from five to eight minutes.

HER MINISTRATIONS

THE girl with the silver vanity case tucked a dainty handkerchief into her left glove and sighed.

"It's perfectly awful," she said, "how many persons have dreadful things happen to them these days! Why, all I do is to go to see my poor suffering friends in the hospitals!"

"Who's in the hospital besides Carrie?" asked the girl with the fire-red hat. "How's her appendicitis, anyhow? I sent some carnations, but I've been too busy——"

"Poor Carrie is recovering all right," said the girl with the silver vanity bag. "The house doctor says it is quite remarkable, in view of the seriousness of her case. I wish you could see him, Emma, when he is talking seriously like that. He draws his eyebrows together in a straight line like—oh, who was the actor who always did that? Never mind. Dr. Bennett is perfectly handsome and holds himself like a military man, and in those white linen suits—why on earth don't all doctors dress like that, I'd like to know?

"He can't be a day over 28, and if you could see how crazy the nurses are over him! I think it is perfectly ridiculous of them!

Sympathetic.

"I couldn't help expressing my sympathy one day when we were talking in the hall. I happened to be leaving just as he was through seeing Carrie. 'I should think,' I told him, 'you would get so weary of all this chasing after you, Dr. Bennett! Why, that corridor nurse wouldn't let me get a word in with you while she was in the room! I should think she'd realize that a doctor would like something more entertaining once in a while than chatter about bandages and temperatures and diet!' He quite flushed with gratitude and looked me in the eyes and said I had perfectly wonderful divination, and it was surprising how he lived through it all!

"The only trouble with knowing Dr. Bennett is that every time I go there somebody always sends for him or he has to go to the operating room. The poor man never has any time for a cozy chat."

"Is Carrie——"

"Oh, Carrie's all right," said the girl with the vanity bag. "If she'd only exercise a little self-control and not demand all the doctor's attention whenever he's in the room, she would get on better. Sick people are so selfish, don't you think? Dr. Bennett——"

"You said someone else was sick. Who?"

"Oh, yes!" said the girl with the vanity bag. "My cousin Ralph is at another hospital with a broken leg, and though his family and ours aren't on speaking terms I felt that in a case of illness I mustn't let prejudice stand in the way, so, of course, I ran in to cheer up poor Ralph. I was very careful to find out from the surgeon who set his leg whether it would be bad for Ralph to see me. Dr. Bitts is one of the most noted surgeons in the country. Terribly young for that, too—not more than 35. He has one of those attractive, stern faces, with straight mouth, and looks as though he shaves twice a day, and eyes like razors.

She Was Younger.

"When you talk to him he listens intently and then he has the most disconcerting way of coming to with a jerk and saying: 'Yes, yes; quite so,' and darting off somewhere. I think the poor dear man is worn out by his severe work. I tried to tell him the other day how a sensitive, appreciative woman couldn't help sympathizing with his hardships. He was very brave—he said they weren't hardships."

"Is your Cousin Ralph's leg——"

"Oh, that's mending, all right," said the girl with the vanity bag. "I don't wonder that my family can't stand Ralph's father, if he is anything like Ralph—always thinking of himself. He actually thought I was going to sit and read to him—no consideration at all for Dr. Bitts, who might like a little cheering conversation!"

"You said several——"

"Well, one of mother's friends and an aunt of father's are in the same hospital with typhoid and an operation, and, of course, I am younger than mother, so I do the calling. I told mother quite firmly when she insisted that it was not necessary for me to go every day that I hoped I knew my duty to the sick and suffering. Aunt Lou has a nephew by marriage who is so devoted to her, and he goes to see her frequently. He has the loveliest car, and as I happened to be leaving once when he did he took me home. I did some shopping first, because it was such a good chance to be carried around.

"I wish you could have seen that car. Something must have happened to it, because now he always comes on the street car. It wasn't so bad, because Mrs. Himmers' son—the friend with the operation—comes in his car and usually I am going just when he goes. But, oh, if you could see Dr. Bennett's eyes!"

"I really ought to look in on poor Carrie," mused the girl with the fire red hat. "What time——"

"Come to think of it," objected the girl with the silver vanity case, "the nurse said that Carrie mustn't have too much company—that it made her fever rise! So I guess I'd wait, if I were you."

The First Admiral.

A story sometimes told to ridicule the dialect of Pudsey is that of a traveler who astonished his friend by telling him that the children in Pudsey were the most intelligent children in the world.

"Why, what do they know?" asked his friend.

"They know who was the first naval admiral who ever lived," the traveler replied.

"Not they. Here, can you prove it?"

"Yes. If you wish, we will go to Pudsey and I will ask any child you like that particular question."

The friend agreed.

As the traveler and his friend went through Pudsey they saw a boy about ten years old playing in the street. The traveler went to him and asked:

"Now, my boy, do you know who was the first naval admiral?"

"No-a," bluntly replied the lad.

"There," said the traveler, turning to his friend, "didn't I tell you he would know?"

Willing to Oblige.

Elderly Gentleman—Hi, conductor! Bring the 'bus here. D'ye think I'm going to walk through all this mud?

Conductor—Sutt'nly not, sir. Hif you'll wait 'arf a minnit I'll lay down the carpet an' 'erect the hawning!

Conspire Against Domestic Harmony

The ills of women seem to conspire against domestic harmony. No husband can understand why a woman should be continually ailing, fretful, nervous and despondent, and he gets out of all patience with her. In nine cases out of ten some organic derangement is the cause of this condition and is easily overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a woman's remedy for woman's ills which has cured more severe cases of this kind than any other remedy we know.

Paper Fingers That Save Time
How many times do typewriter operators come nearly to the bottom of the paper and have to put in another sheet to write just one more line?
The L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter
is equipped with paper fingers that hold the paper so well that it is possible to write on the extreme edge of the paper or card.
These paper fingers, if the operator forgets to push them back into place after writing a card or envelope, move along to the proper place with the advancement of the carriage in either direction.
This is one of the many reasons why the L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter enables the operator to produce more and better work than on any other writing machine ever made.

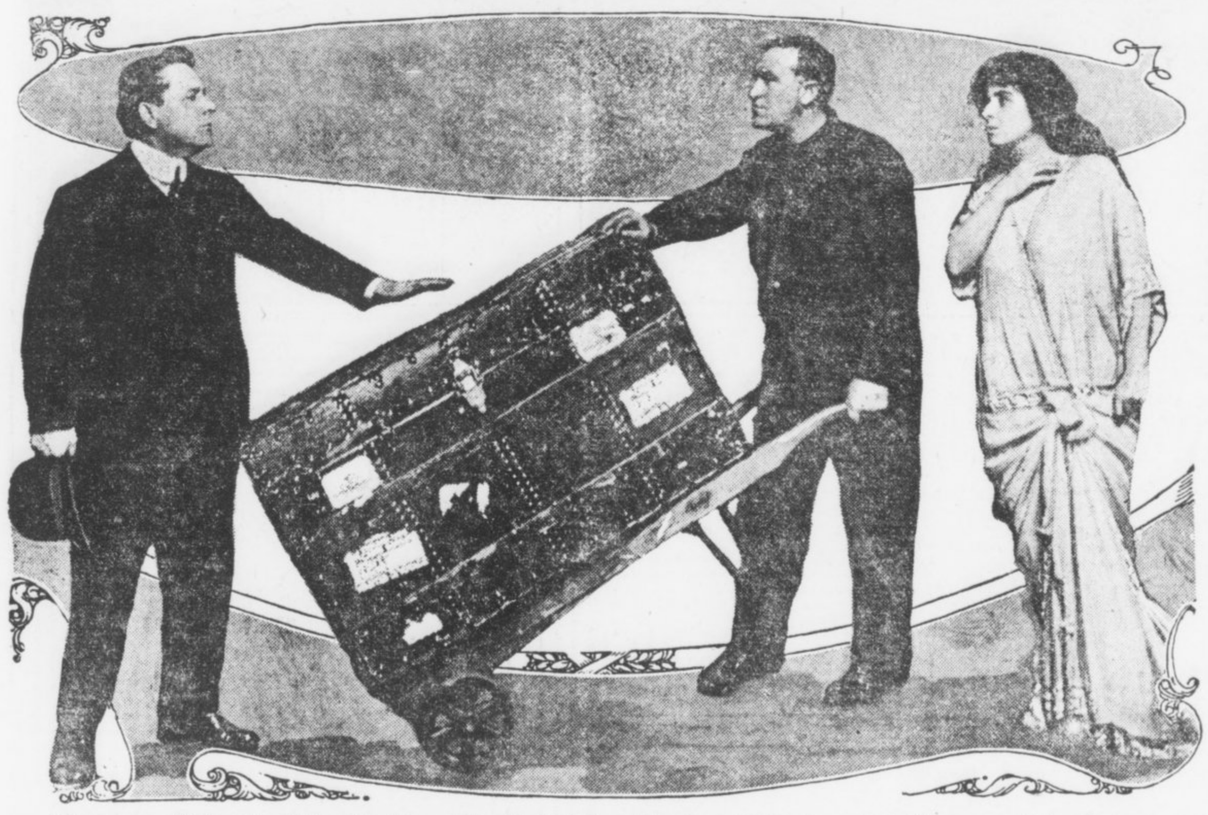
JARVIS' ESCAPE IN THE TRUNK IS HALTED BY THE HOTEL DETECTIVE



"Excuse me, Madam," said the detective, with a kind of dogged hardness, "I don't want to bother you again, but that man—he killed a man up the hall—has got clean away unless he—he——"

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

She smiled and snapped the catch, and then stood gazing at it for several moments before she went to the door and admitted the porter with his small but deadly truck. He was a muscular young man with the intelligent expression of an elderly and amiable cow, the true type of trunk-destroyer, and the Princess shivered when she saw him.

"Have the other trunks gone?" she asked.

"Yes'm—last night," he growled, making swiftly for his prey. He started to tilt it in such a manner that our hardy and valiant knight, Warren of Jarvis, would have been standing on his head, contrary to the canons of chivalry. The Princess hastily intervened.

"This end up—please be sure and have it marked that way and be sure to mark it 'Wanted on Voyage.'"

"Yes'm," grunted Caliban. He rocked the trunk a little, thrust the lip of the truck under it and jerked it forward—blam!

The Princess winced and shuddered.

"And please—please—handle it very gently."

"Yes'm."

He had just begun to trundle the trunk and the knight toward the door when the exit was completely blocked by the cubical form of the house detective. The porter stopped and carelessly pitched his burden forward—blam!

The Broken Lock.

"Excuse me, madam," said the detective, with a kind of dogged hardness. "I don't want to bother you again, but that man—he killed a man up the hall—has got clean away unless he—he——"

"Well?" said the Princess coldly.

"Well, would you mind if—if I sort of took a look around? You're sure you were here all the time?"

"Of course," replied Dona Maria quietly. "But my maid will be up presently and you will be welcome to go through these rooms."

His attention was attracted to the trunk by a third "blam!" as the porter prepared to proceed, and he obligingly stepped inside out of the way. As he did so his eyes fell on the broken door lock.

"How'd that lock get broken?" His voice rang out suddenly like a pistol shot and he looked up quickly at the Princess. She inclined her head as if to assure herself that it really was broken, which was overacting the part.

"I think you should call the clerk's attention to it," she said calmly. "It was broken when I came here."

"When—may I ask did you come here?"

"Certainly. Yesterday afternoon."

"Oh, I see, I beg your pardon," he said slowly, and backed out. He did not know why, but he did not entirely believe the frank and self-possessed young woman. He walked down to a turn of the corridor, resolving to keep a close eye on the apartment until it was vacated. In this walk he again passed the trunk, but it suggested nothing. An escape in a trunk has become so common in fact and in fiction that no up-to-date detective believes any one would try it again. So it is still one of the best means, just as, from the other angle, it is a fact that occasionally in spite of comic artists and the like, some one still buys a gold brick.

Thus, in a manner unheroic, by freight elevator and van with divers bumps and bruises and swear words, the good knight Warren of Jarvis set forth to the Spanish Main and the storied hills of Aragon.

Pasting labels on trunks, like pressing the elevator button in the average office building, is more an act in evidence of good faith than in expectation of results. Having up to this time traveled only with a trunk and never in one, Warren Jarvis did not realize this until fairly embarked on his rough passage from the Hotel Vanderbilt to the promenade deck suite on the Lusitania.

For days afterward the memory of that two-mile voyage rode him like a nightmare. So did the divers aches, wrenches and bruises that he acquired by the way. And, finally, when the journey was over and he could have time to decide whether he was one large pain or had been broken up into several thousand small agonies, the trunk was deposited in the parlor of the Princess' suite with the label "This side up," carefully pressed against the carpet.

Dona Maria, anxious for the welfare of her champion, arrived at the stateroom just a few moments later. But she was haunted by an attentive steward, who in her abstraction she neglected to fee, and who declined to end his solicitous attentions until the oversight should be remedied.

While the Princess fidgeted and longed for him to get out he insisted on explaining everything connected with the suite. He opened the door that led onto the deck and pointed out the raised ledge as a trap for the unwary landsman's foot. He opened a door that led into a companionway. He showed her the clothes-pressers and all the while Dona Maria could not take her eyes from the top of the trunk, which displayed no label. Following her glance he offered to place the trunk for her.

"You needn't bother about it now, steward," she interposed quickly as he laid his hands on it. Then as an afterthought: "You might turn it right side up."

He Goes at Last.

"Oh, I'm sorry," he apologized as he noticed the labels. "I hope the contents are not upset."

"I hope not!" agreed Dona Maria, fervently.

"Anything more, madame?"

"Not now, thank you, steward," said Dona Maria nervously. "How soon do we sail?"

"Very soon now," he answered, as a deep raucous voice was heard bellowing afar. "They're calling visitors ashore now, madame."

And at last he was gone. But there was still Nita, the maid, who had doffed her hat and coat and was fussing about the bags.

"Your Highness has the keys to the trunks?" she suggested briskly.

"Hm—yes. You—you may leave the trunk as it is, Nita, until later. Go to your room now and get settled. I'll call you when I want you."

"Yes, Your Highness." But at the door of her room, she paused in some embarrassment. The Princess frowned impatiently.

"Will Your Highness pardon me," said Nita, uncomfortably, "if I am mistaken in thinking I recognize Senor the Duke, your exalted cousin, among the passengers——?"

"My cousin!" exclaimed Dona Maria, with a fine assumption of surprise. "Impossible! He is at Madrid."

Nita inclined her head in that extremely polite unbelief possible to the finished servant. "Yes, Your Highness," she agreed demurely, and withdrew.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

The scene of the story is laid in the Vanderlip Hotel, New York City. The Princess Maria Theresa of Segura, a beautiful Spanish woman, is suddenly awakened in her suite by the sound of pistol shots. She hears a man running down the hall. He crashes against her door, breaking the lock, and enters. She sees he is a tall, good-looking young man, dressed in evening clothes. He is carrying a revolver in his right hand, and blood is dripping from a wound in his left. He begs the Princess to hide him. She, moved by some indescribable impulse, decides that she will. She directs him to an inner room, and a few minutes later, when the hotel detective knocks on the door, she tells him she is all right and sends him away. The young man, who is Warren Jarvis, of Kentucky, comes out of his hiding place, and the Princess, for the first time, notices his wound. She is moved to sympathy and showers him with questions as to what has occurred. Jarvis tells her about a Kentucky feud between his family and another named Markham. He says he left Kentucky to avoid the feudists, but encountered one of them in the hotel, which explains the shots. The Princess declares she will help him, and then asks the stranger question, "Are you afraid of ghosts?" Jarvis laughs, but grows solemn when the Princess tells him she has dangerous work for him to do. She makes him swear allegiance, and creates him her "vassal." Then she tells him to get her trunk, which is going to be shipped to a steamship on which she sails to Spain the following day. First Jarvis tells her to telephone to his servant, Rusty Snow, a negro. The servant is instructed to procure passage for himself and Jarvis in the ship. Jarvis then prepares to get into the trunk, but first begins to question the Princess about herself.

Now go on with the story.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

CHAPTER XLIV.

As soon as Mildred had ordered Steve to bring the big car she hurried to her room and hastily changed her clothes, putting on the khaki suit she wore when fishing. She was very much excited. But before leaving the room she glanced, womanlike, in her mirror. Then, hardly knowing what she was doing she picked up a little handbag such as women take when they go shopping, containing a handkerchief, a powder rag, a small mirror and a small purse. She rushed on the porch and called Elmer.

"Elmer," she said hurriedly. "I'm going to find Gordon. I can't stand the suspense any longer. Come if you want to; if you don't, I'm going alone."

"Of course, I'm going, too," exclaimed the boy. "That's just like a girl. Didn't I propose the scheme?"

"Well, hurry now, and get my rifle and revolver," cried Mildred.

"That little revolver of yours is no good," remarked Elmer. "You can take it if you want to; I'm going to get dad's big one." And off he went.

In a few minutes Steve appeared with the car and Mildred and Elmer climbed in. Mildred with her handbag and revolver and Elmer with his father's six-shooter.

"Is you all gwine shootin', Miss Mildred?" asked Steve.

"We are going after Mr. Gordon, Steve," replied Mildred, "so hurry, please."

"Lordomassy!" exclaimed the colored boy. He turned the car quickly and they were soon bowling along the main road.

A Serious Affair.

A girl and two boys going in a motor car on a hunt for supposed desperadoes would have been a most ludicrous affair except for the very serious way the three persons involved in the undertaking viewed it. A professional layer of odds, knowing the circumstances, would have wagered anything up to 100 to 1 that the expedition would end in a fizzle, if, indeed, the rescuers did not get themselves in serious trouble. However that might be, the car rolled bravely on and reached the point where the road crossed Pew Creek, inside of half an hour. Mildred had given her instructions to Steve, and as soon as the car stopped she and Elmer started off due west, Elmer leading the way and she following closely, carrying the toy revolver in one hand and the little handbag in the other.

There are few things a woman will not risk for the man she loves. The proper thing for Mildred to have done, of course, was to have gathered all the men at the mansion and sent them on the hunt for Gordon. But she didn't, and that, of course, ends all argument. If Mildred had only realized it, she and Elmer were almost as helpless as the babes in the woods. Unlooked-for things happen, however, and, with the chances at least 100 to 1 against her, an unlooked-for thing happened in this case.

They had not traveled far before Elmer found unmistakable signs that a horse had traveled in the direction they were going, and in certain places they were able to follow the hoof-prints.

Moved More Slowly.

"Keep careful track of the distance we travel," whispered Mildred. "You know Gordon said he was three miles due west from the bridge."

When they had covered what they considered about two and a half miles they moved more slowly and more cautiously, and although both were now trembling with excitement (and perhaps fear), they kept bravely on. At last they came to a point where the ground rose sharply for a hundred yards or so. Mildred grasped Elmer by the shoulder and whispered:

"We are near the place, Elmer. We must be very careful and keep under cover."

They crept along behind trees and at length came to the top of the rise. Below them they saw smoke issuing from a clump of trees.

"He's down there," said Mildred in an excited whisper. "I'm sure of it. Oh, what shall we do?"

"Sneak around and maybe we can see something," replied Elmer, hoarsely. His eyes glistened and he was pale, but game.

They circled around cautiously, keeping close together. Suddenly Elmer stopped and dropped to the ground. Mildred, her heart beating wildly, sank behind him.

"I see him, I see him," exclaimed the lad excitedly. He pointed and Mildred saw, not more than 60 yards away, a man seated upon a tree reading a newspaper. It was Gordon Kelly. She would have known him as far as her eyes could reach. She felt as if she were on the point of screaming, or crying, or fainting—she knew not what. She hastily opened the handbag and reached for her handkerchief—a woman's weapon, a woman's protector.

"Keep Quiet!"

"Keep quiet!" hissed Elmer. "There's another man there and he'll see us."

Mildred looked again and saw a man looking on the ground fifteen or twenty feet in front of Gordon.

"What shall we do; what shall we do?" was all she could whisper.

There was a long silence. Finally Elmer said:

"Gee, if I only had a mirror I could sneak down behind that bush and attract his attention."

"Why, I have a little mirror," exclaimed Mildred, reaching for her handbag again. She produced the article and handed it to the boy.

"You crawl behind that tree and wait there," whispered Elmer. A moment later he began worming his way toward the bush he had indicated. This brought him to within less than 150 feet of where Gordon was sitting. Carefully getting his range, he flashed a streak of sunlight across the shaded page of Gordon's newspaper and repeated the operation immediately.

Gordon cautiously glanced over his shoulder. He saw little Elmer peering from behind a bush and beyond the lad he saw a white handkerchief flutter. Mildred could not resist the temptation to signal. Gordon waved an answering sign and then arose. He walked to the log cabin, followed by his armed guard. He took a baseball, slit the seam with his knife; then, saying to his guard, "I want to do a little figuring," took a little book of cigarette papers belonging to the youngest of the mountaineers and wrote these words:

"If you have a gun, place it 20 feet beyond where this ball lands; if not, bring help noon to-morrow."

Guard Did Not Call.

He folded the tissue paper three times longways and once shortways, tucked it into the ripped seam of the baseball with his knife, leaving the edge sticking out (the guard was paying no particular attention to him) and then announced that he guessed he would take a little exercise.

This time the guard did not call a companion, as was the custom when Gordon practiced with bat and ball. The idea of two guards was doubtless originally suggested by the dangerous-looking baseball bat that Gordon swung with such ease. He had become such a cheerful and inoffensive captive, however, that on this occasion his guard decided not to trouble any of his companions, who were at that time on the shady side of the cabin, discussing a letter that had been received that morning from Forrest Cain.

Going out in the open, followed by his guard, pistol in hand, Gordon hit several high flies, catching the ball when it came down. Then, as if inadvertently, he drove it in such a manner that it fell 200 feet away from him and beyond a little clump of bushes.

"What do you think of that?" he exclaimed to his guard. "I'm losing my batting eye, I guess. Let's get a drink of water and then we'll go and get that ball. It cost $1.25."

It took Gordon fifteen minutes to get his drink of water and fuss around the cabin before he started after the ball, with his guard following closely. He had carefully marked the spot where it fell, and when he reached it his eyes beamed, for twenty feet beyond was what he wanted far more than he wanted the ball. Picking up the white object, he walked straight ahead and suddenly sat down facing his guard.

"Sit down and make yourself comfortable," he said. But the guard remained standing.

"By the looks of the sky, I'll bet you we have rain before to-morrow morning," he observed, reaching behind him.

"Turn Around and Walk."

The guard cast his eyes upward and when he lowered them again a six-shooter in the hand of his captor was pointing directly at his heart.

"Drop that gun! Drop it!" said Gordon, in a low, intense tone.

The guard hesitated the fraction of a second and then let the weapon fall to the ground.

"Turn around and walk two steps ahead," commanded Gordon, jumping to his feet and seizing the guard's six-shooter when his command was obeyed.

The rest was merely routine work, as it were.

"On the run, now," ordered Gordon, pointing to the east. "Back to the bridge; be quick about it."

The ex-guard started off, and with Gordon traversed 50 feet before Mildred and Elmer jumped from behind a tree.

"Won't you wait for me, Gordon?" said Mildred. An instant later they were in each other's arms.

"You will have to do all the hugging, Honeybunch," whispered Gordon. "I've got these two six-shooters in my hands, but I'll make up for it as soon as I get a chance. You are the bravest girl in the world. Now, come, dear, we are not out of the woods yet. Good work, Elmer."

Gordon turned over one of his revolvers to Elmer and the procession started, the mountaineer leading the way, followed by Gordon, holding a six-shooter in one hand and Mildred's hand in the other, and Elmer bringing up the rear. Arriving at the bridge where Steve was waiting with the car, Gordon said to his prisoner:

"Go back to your crowd and tell them I'll give them 24 hours to leave this mountain country, and if any of you come back, I'll make you wish you hadn't."

"That other man's comin' up to-morrer," said the mountaineer. They were the first words Gordon had ever heard him utter.

"Here's Your Gun."

"What man?" he demanded.

"That man that's been a-payin' us money."

"Is that so?" mused Gordon. "In that case, you can tell your men to hold on to him until they hear from me. I'll settle with that fellow when I get around to it. Tell your men I won't bother them as long as they hold on to him. Now, you can go back. Here's your gun, but I'll just take the cartridges out of it first. Now, then, Elmer, climb in the front seat. Come, Mildred. Go ahead, Steve."

"Gordon," said Mildred, as soon as the car started, "you need a haircut badly."

It was dark when they reached the mansion, where the appearance of the owner created an immense sensation.

"Mildred, dear," said Gordon, drawing her to one side, "I want you to spend the evening here. There's something I want particularly to say to you. We can have Mrs. Ward for a chaperone," he added, with a smile.

"Not in these clothes, Gordon," replied Mildred. "If you will let Steve drive us home, Elmer and I will both be back in an hour."

When Mildred and the lad returned Gordon, too, had had a change of clothes.

"Who cut your hair?" laughed Mildred.

They sat down to dinner, after which Gordon told Elmer to go and play billiards and then led Mildred into the room he called his office, and which Mildred called his lazy room. The particular something he wanted to tell her required more than half an hour and considerable eloquence to tell. Mildred shook her head at frequent intervals, but finally gave in and murmured, "Yes." Arising, she went to the telephone on Gordon's desk and gave an order. While she was waiting for connections Gordon, happy as a lark, seated himself at the piano, said "Second verse," and sang:

We will build a bower of grasses,
Call it Castle Lullaby;
Drink the south wind as it passes,
Lips o' Poppy—you and I!
Youth will be a friend to cheer us,
Fill our veins with purple wine,
Stand forever watching near us,
Lips o' Poppy, maid of mine!
Pines shall lull us with their moaning;
Golden bees in golden guest
Songs of sweet desire intoning
To the white flower of your breast!
Lips o' Poppy, girl of rapture,
Mine shall be enchantment's power,
Substance of my dreams to capture
In the heart of that white flower!
Lips o' Poppy—eyes entrancing—
Maid of earth or maid of air!
We will pass the years a-dancing
Down the realm of Queen Don't Care.
Come! the purple shades are falling!
Come! it is the Queen's command!
Hark! the nightingales are calling
To the Never Hurry Land!

"That's very nice," said Mildred, "but suppose dad—— Oh, here he is now. That you, dad?—— Oh, fine! Ah—— I am with Mr. Kelly, and—er—Mr. Kelly wants to speak to you a minute. Oh, now, dad, do be nice—— Does he want to talk business? Ha, ha! Yes, I believe he wants to talk business. All right; hold the wire." Mildred clapped her hand over the mouthpiece and whispered excitedly: "Dad was awfully angry at first and wouldn't speak to you, but he suddenly changed his mind. Now, go ahead; don't be afraid."

He Asks for Mildred.

Gordon took up the receiver and this conversation followed:

"Hello, Mr. Deery! I want to ask——"

"What will you take for your property—spot cash?" interrupted Deery.

"I don't want to sell, Mr. Deery."

"Oh, come, come; I'll give you $20,000 for it—cash, mind you."

"I couldn't think of it, Mr. Deery."

"Well, what's it worth, then? Come, you must have a figure."

"Really, Mr. Deery, I don't want to sell at any price, but if you ask me, the property is worth all of $2,000,000."

"Two million dollars!" sputtered Deery. "Am I talking to a crazy man? Ask my daughter to come to the phone, please."

"Just a minute, Mr. Deery. I want to say something very seriously. Please listen. I want to ask your permission to marry your daughter. We love each other and——"

"Now I know you're crazy," Deery broke in. "Call my daughter, please."

"But, Mr. Deery——"

"Not another word. I wish to speak to my daughter."

Mildred took the receiver from Gordon's hand.

"Hello, dad; what's wrong?"

"Come home at once, Mildred."

"Now, dad," pleaded Mildred, "please don't be so angry. Gordon and I——"

"I will not hear another word; I insist that you come home at once."

"Dad, if you're going to act that way, you'll regret it. Please tell mother I wish to speak to her."

"Your mother is not at home and won't be home for an hour. Mildred, I tell you for the last time, come home immediately or I'll come up there and get you."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

MOST DECIDEDLY NOT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-one, and a man two years my senior has made an appointment with me and at the same time with my friend. Would it be fitting for me to keep it, and also, is it proper for him to make the appointment for the same time and place? G. M. T. I.

He is flirting with you, I am sure, and if "by appointment" you mean to meet on some street corner you owe it to yourself to refuse to meet him though he were alone. Ask him to come to your home for you; his reply will give you some insight into his character.

BY BECOMING A MAN.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a boy of twenty, and in love with a girl two years younger than myself. I am deeply in love with the girl, and she doesn't care for me. How can I make her love me? Another boy loves her, but she doesn't love him. T. C.

You rightly term yourself a boy, since you are only twenty. I suggest unfailing courtesy, kindness, appreciation and devotion, but not so much that your attentions distract your head and heart from the more serious and timely task of developing yourself into a manly man.

Benefited Many Who Had Lung Trouble

Those who suffer from Lung Trouble are generally troubled with night sweats, fever, loss of strength and little or no appetite. Eckman's Alterative is a medicine which has been most successful in stopping night sweats, reducing fever and promoting appetite, and many who have used it declare it saved their lives. Investigate what it did in this case:

"Dear Sir: For four years I was troubled with cough, which gradually became worse. I had night sweats and pains in my chest. I was losing my appetite and had become so thin and weak I could not attend to my household duties. A physician pronounced my disease Consumption. Not being satisfied, I was examined by the physicians of the Polyclinic Hospital. They also confirmed my trouble, and I was ordered away for treatment. My nephew would not allow me to go until I had tried Eckman's Alterative. Before I had taken the medicine three weeks, I had marked relief, night sweats ceased, pain in the breast relieved, cough became loose and easy, fever left me, and I commenced getting well. My health became normal. I am in excellent health now and have been for twelve years. I strongly recommend it." (Signed)

RACE MIGHTY TIGHT; LOCAL CLUB IN HUNT

If Crackers Can Keep Playing As They Did Last Week They Will Cop Pennant.

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE Southern League race is a rip-snorter. Mobile, Montgomery, Chattanooga and Atlanta are within .041 of each other. Birmingham, Memphis and Nashville are far from out of the race. It's getting better every minute.

The Crackers have the chance of their career to make a showing now. Two of the next three clubs they face on home ground are ahead of them. If they can hammer the Turtles to pieces, get a few games back that the Gulls owe them and plaster something on Montgomery they will be right up in the race again.

They have it in them, too.

You can't lose confidence in a team that pulls games out of the fire the way the Crackers were yanking them last week. Saturday's game, for instance, was as poor from a fielding viewpoint as any man would care to witness, but the locals had the old kick that was needed to get them out of danger. They saved two games Friday that appeared totally lost. They won all the way Thursday. Both of the games with Mobile were won after they had been lost. And altogether, the Crackers are showing real recuperative power.

If the players will pull together, forget all the inside politics and work exclusively for Atlanta and for the pennant there will be nothing to it but another rag for Atlanta.

* * *

BUCK" WEAVER is winning a game now and then for the Meridian team and may come around and make a pitcher of himself yet. It is possible that now he is away from the alcoholic possibilities of Atlanta's many social (?) clubs he may settle down and do some good work. He has the natural ability, all right.

* * *

* * *

IF old Rube Benton were only with a ball club he might be a wonder. The other day in a game against the Cardinals he made three hits, scored three runs and perpetrated a sacrifice fly. It was a very hot day, too.

Ordinarily, Rube hits like a suffragette.

* * *

GUESS the Naps will never win a ball game. Usually they haven't any team. When they have, it is wrecked by internal dissension. When it isn't, as this year, accidents do the rest.

Here are the accidents since May 1:

May 4.—Catcher Grover Land broke his hand.

May 12—Joe Birmingham broke an ankle.

June 11—Twirler Steen broke his pitching arm.

This is only a partial list of the wounded. Ray Chapman, the Naps' shortstop, was hurt the day Steen broke his arm and couldn't play for two weeks. "Buddy" Ryan, center fielder, is playing with a broken thumb.

* * *

PERCY SKILLEN, former Dartmouth pitcher, now in the sporting goods business has invented a device which he thinks will help pitchers develop control, a thing which Percy lacked or he might now be a big leaguer. It is a dummy that stands at the plate, bat in hand, so that a twirler can pitch to it hours at a time, if he feels like it, and never fear that wild shots will do any damage.

"Dutch" Meyers, who is in business with Percy, tried to sell one of these devices to Jimmy Callahan to help steady young Sox pitchers.

"I don't deny that your idea may work out all right," Manager Callahan told Meyers. "But you needn't send any of those things around."

"Why not?" persisted Meyers.

"What do I want with another dummy, when I have three or four on my team now?" asked Callahan. "I'll just use one of them."

'Tear-In' Fighters Are Popular

Sluggers Usually Capture Title

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 7.—Discussions have arisen in England and Australia as to whether the "tear-in" fighters of the present day are better boxers than the clever fellows who made a business of pugilism fifteen or twenty years ago. Some of the arguments used in support of the various views expressed are highly interesting, but one very important matter has been overlooked. There are no "tear-in" fighters now—at least, none worth talking about. The clever fellows have come into their own again.

Take the smaller men. When Terry McGovern, with bent back, lowered head and rapidly revolving fists, began demolishing the nations of the earth, the opinions that many persons held in respect to the noble art of self-defense were revolutionized. After the Brooklyn whirlwind had run amuck for a year or two, grave doubts existed as to whether there was any scientific side to boxing, for had not the game developed a youth who, by determined onslaught, could upset all ideas of leading, countering, timing, sidestepping and what not?

And when Terry spread-eagled Peddler Palmer, the pride of British pugdom, in one round, the belief that forthrightness was the one and only antidote for cleverness became a firmer ground than ever.

Nelson Greatest Slugger.

Terry strutted his brief period and then went under to another "tear-in" fighter in the person of Young Corbett. It is worthy of note, by the way, that each of these "tear-in" specialists fell a victim to a fellow who also operated along "tear-in" lines. Corbett did fairly well until he ran afoul of Battling Nelson, who was possibly the most headlong fighter of them all—greater even than Terry McGovern, the founder of the "tear-in" dynasty.

Nelson did more than any of them to show that cleverness could be made to succumb to direct methods. Among other things, he won from Joe Gans, who was possibly the most scientific lightweight the world ever has known.

When Nelson's time came it was another "tear-in" fighter who accounted for him. This was Ad Wolgast, and while Wolgast, still untroubled with the spasms of appendicitis, the toughest experience he ever had was with still another "tear-in" fighter, to-wit, Knockout Brown.

From the lightweights down, the clever lads are in the ascendant again. Packey McFarland, who can claim to be a lightweight, now that the weight limit has been hunched, is nothing if not clever, and unless Jack Britton has changed tactics since he went East he is also a boxer of the brainy, resourceful stamp.

Jimmy Duffy, the Lockport boy, who is fast forging to the front, is another exponent of scientific pugilism, while Ritchie Ritchie, Mandot, Leach Cross and Freddie Welsh are all performers of the "hit, step and get away" school.

The welter, middle and light-heavy classes are so fussed now that it is impossible to tell "who is who" in the divisions named, but it can certainly be said that Mike Gibbons and Jimmy Clabby, a pair of really clever workmen, seem to be able to give away lots of weight and gain decisions from the best men that can be found for them.

Kilbane and Coulon Clever.

Johnnie Kilbane, the featherweight champion, and Johnny Coulon, the prince of bantams, have held their positions by dint of clever boxing and the manner in which little Eddi Campi handled the mercurial Frenchman, Ledoux, at Los Angeles recently, also favors the argument that cleverness is asserting itself in matters pugilistic again.

The heavyweight situation is so muddled that it is not easy to figure out what has contributed to success in that particular department, but in a general way it can be shown that cleverness has made itself tell among the big fellows during the past few years. This, too, despite the fact that Bombardier Wells, the most finished boxer England has produced in years, has been defeated practically every time he started.

Jack Johnson's long suit was cleverness, and there is no occasion to recall what he has done. He was certainly the greatest heavyweight since Jeffries was in his heyday.

McCarty a Second Corbett.

The most pronounced "tear-in" fighters of the heavyweight class in recent times were Jim Flynn and Al Palzer, but Luther McCarty, who was in a way a second Jim Corbett, disposed of the pair within a few weeks.

McCarty is gone, Johnson has fallen upon evil days and it is hard to tell what is in store for the heavyweights. But in respect to pugilism generally, it can be said that in the whirligig of time the artists of the Queensberry ring have gained the ascendancy over the sluggers.

There is no assurance that the present order of things will continue and about the only thing existing conditions prove is that evolution has not produced any permanent change in fighting methods.

Just now they are fighting the way they fought a quarter of a century ago.

EMPIRE LEAGUE NOTES

Shortstop Murphy, of the Thomasville team, continues to hit the ball as if he means to stay at the top of the Empire's batters. Murphy is also a sensational fielder and will undoubtedly move up when the season ends.

* * *

Manager Moran, of Brunswick, has secured Third Baseman Crowe from Thomasasville and if the youngster continues his splendid work will probably keep him.

* * *

Almost without exception the players who have been cut loose by Waycross have made good elsewhere. Bitting, released as third baseman, landed with Charleston and is going fine. "Red" Stiles, a pitcher, signed with Thomasville, has won nearly all his games since leaving Waycross. Dacey, an outfielder, went to Americus and is putting up a neat article of ball.

* * *

McManus is one of the newest men in the Empire. He is a pitcher and has been signed by Waycross.

* * *

Almost as fast as teams change players the Empire is changing umpires. Derrick is the latest to join the league's staff. Morton, one of the new men, has been criticised a great deal on account of his work and may be released.

* * *

Cordele has in Wilder a pitcher who makes more noise than any man in the league. Wilder holds the league's strike-out record so far, fifteen, and is apt to cut loose some new capers almost any game.

* * *

South Atlantic League scouts have been through the Empire, and inside information says quite a few players will be taken in the Class C league after this season.

* * *

Brunswick will turn loose about six players this week. Moran says Brunswick is going to stay at the top, and he means it, too.

* * *

"Closed for ball game" is not an uncommon sign to see hanging on a store's front door in Empire League cities. Baseball comes first with almost everybody now.

* * *

Waycross plays six games at home this week and Manager Clark has tipped his team off that when the week-end arrives Waycross must be somewhere else besides at the bottom.

* * *

Reports from Thomasville indicate that fans in that city will always remember the stinging defeats given Valdosta last week. Both those towns are old time baseball rivals.

* * *

Otto Jordan, of Valdosta, can sell three of his four pitchers any day in the week, according to the dope from Valdosta. He has four good ones and it is said managers of almost every South Atlantic team is anxious to get contracts with them.

* * *

As far as individual players go, there is hardly any team in the Empire that has anything on the others. But when it comes to team work and pitchers—well—the league standing tells the story.

* * *

College players who have joined teams in the Empire are making good with a rush. Davenport, playing first at Thomasville; Holliday, the same for Waycross, and Bowen, short for Americus, are three players who have shown up exceptionally strong. Whitted, a college player, is one of the Waycross additions and is expected to make good with ease.

* * *

Heine Zimmerman's brother, who has been playing second for Waycross, will probably be worked in the outfield.

* * *

First Baseman Day, of Cordele, has shown that when it comes to a pinch he can pitch as well as play the bag. Day is a clever fellow, and has many friends in every city of the league.

* * *

Thomsville has a Day that is having days whenever he pitches. He is the handsome fellow of the league, and is winning so regularly now that there seems no end to his victories.

GOVERNOR MAY INTERVENE AT PORTER RACE TRACK

PORTER, IND., July 7.—State intervention at the Mineral Springs race track near here, which was successful last year, will be repeated this year if gamblers continue to bet on the races. Prosecutor Fabing, of Porter County, to-day returned from Indianapolis, where he obtained a promise from Governor Ralston that if there was any more gambling at the track State troops would come to Porter and close the course. Last year Governor Marshall used this method with success.

Ritchie May Take Trip Abroad

Wolgast Is Not All In--Naughton

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., July 7.—Now that Willie Ritchie has shown himself every inch a champion—that is, by comparison with contemporaneous lightweights, which is the only way to judge a rising young fighter—the question is, What will he do next?

There is some talk of Ritchie taking a trip to Europe. If his wishes lie in that direction, no one can say him nay, for he has intrenched himself in such a way with fair-minded sports that no chance remains to taunt him with being afraid of the issue with any man of his size.

The story goes that Ritchie long ago set his heart upon a trip through the older lands and that he wants to take advantage of his present position and earning power to fulfill his desire. He is sensible enough to know that a ring man's grip of the topmost rung is at all times insecure, and he thinks it best to indulge in a long-felt hankering while things are coming his way.

This is a better way of putting it than asserting that he is in need of a rest, for Ritchie is only just back from a six months' lay-off and can hardly boast of tired muscles and frayed nerves.

Whenever Willie gets ready to resume fistic activities he will find several worthy opponents. Freddie Welsh wants a crack at the title and so does Harlem Tommy Murphy. Leach Cross has the bee buzzing in his bonnet and Ad Wolgast has begun agitation for a return match.

In Wolgast's case, the fact that his advances are not taken over seriously is due to himself. Wolgast has had several chances to redeem himself, but he has not trained sufficiently on any one occasion. He could easily make himself a strong drawing card with the public if he would forsake city life for a few months and spend his time on his farm. Then if he came back armed with a physician's certificate setting forth that he had stored up plenty of vitality during his sojourn in the country, he would attract attention from the promoters.

SLOW BEAT OF HEART GIVES MEN ENDURANCE

BATTLING NELSON'S theory that his slow heart was the cause of his phenomenal endurance is being substantiated right along. The normal number of beats a minute for the human heart is 72. The Battler's heart beats but 52 times a minute, and to this he laid his ability to take a walloping and win.

Now Marathon and other distance runners come forward with hearts that put Nelson's in the shade when it comes to slowness. Harry J. Smith, the national ten-mile champion, is also the champion of the slow-heart brigade. His heart beats but 48 times a minute.

Smith entered the Boston A. A. Marathon, and Dr. J. H. Cunningham, of Boston, examined his heart. less than a minute after he had crossed the finish line. Though Smith had just completed a run that put him under one of the hardest heart strains known, his heart was banging away so a minute—just eight above normal for the average person.

Recently he took a life insurance examination and was informed that in 27,000 hearts examined his had the slowest beat.

George Bonhag, the middle distance runner, is another slow-pulsed man. His heart has a peculiarity. It goes 64 a minute while he is standing, but lets up ten beats as soon as he lies down. Another one of the brigade is Mike Ryan, a New York distance runner.

Recently he was operated on at a New York hospital, and his heart was tested before he was given ether. Under conditions making for slowness, his heart beat but 42 for the minute. He resisted ether and had to be given enough to put ten men to sleep, but his "Marathon heart" was unaffected.

BANTAM WILLIAMS DESIRES JUST ONE LOOK AT COULON

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., July 7.—When Champion Johnny Coulon comes out here to negotiate for a renewal of his many-times postponed fight with Kid Williams, it looks as though they will have to lock the estimable Mr. Gutenko in a cellar until the session is over and Collins has fled to the mountains.

Williams swears he will "jump" the bantamweight champion in the street.

"It's no use trying to get him into a ring with me," said the Kid, tearfully. "He'd sign all the articles for a fight somewhere in Siberia and then telegraph that he had a stomach ache again and beat it on the run for some other mountains somewhere.

"The only way is for me to meet the guy on the street and hand him what's coming to him right there. I'd like to have two or three fellers standin' round to see it because it will be good, and I wouldn't want to waste it."

Not to be outdone, in desperation Sammy Harris tremblingly produced five one-hundred dollar bills and deposited them with Tom McCarey, an act which indicated a state of fury no less frightful than that of Kid Williams; there are different ways of expressing emotion.

When the "Kid" is torn with an agony of rage he wishes to punch some one; Sammy pulls out a hundred bill; same thing in a different dialect.

AUGUSTA TEAM WINS DOUBLES IN S. A. EVENT

AUGUSTA, GA., July 7.—Garrett and Gary, of Augusta, defeated the Waring brothers, of Columbia, S. C., Sunday afternoon for the championship of the South Atlantic States.

Play was continued from Saturday afternoon until Sunday on account of darkness, and when the four players resumed Sunday afternoon, the sets stood two all, and Garrett and Gary were four games to their opponents' two on the fifth set.

The score on the final set was 6—2, and the scores for the entire match of five games were as follows: 5—7, 7—5, 7—5, 4—6, 6—2. With the completion of the Garrett and Gary-Waring brothers match, the tournament of 1913 came to an end.

The championship in singles went to E. V. Carter, Jr., of Atlanta. The ladies' singles championship went to Mrs. Robert Johnson, of Asheville, N. C., and the mixed doubles championship to Miss Adger, of Greenville, S. C., and James Edwin, of Spartanburg, S. C.

The local enthusiasts were delighted to keep the doubles title at home, against strong opposition from Atlanta and other cities.

There was great disappointment because Nat Thornton, of Atlanta, decided not to defend his title, as the possibilities of a match between Thornton and Carter were alluring to the spectators.

KELLY GREATEST TIMBER TOPPER, SAYS MITCHELL

By James S. Mitchell.

World's Campion Weight Thrower.

NEW YORK, July 7.—Fred W. Kelly, of the University of Southern California, the present Olympic high hurdling champion, who won the national A. A. U. title at the Chicago carnival on Saturday and who won the high and low hurdles in the collegiate meet on Thursday, is unquestionably the greatest timber-topper on earth to-day.

On his native heath, Kelly has equaled the world's record of 15 seconds for the 120-yard hurdles, and this feat for a young man of 21 is unprecedented in the history of athletics. What Kelly will do to the records in the years to come can only be imagined.

Like a Bird Over Hurdles.

Long and powerful of limb and with great development of the back muscles, the Californian possesses the ideal points of the real racer over the sticks. When crossing the obstacles he has such a fine spread that his body does not have to rise high in the air and he simply strides over the hurdles, as it were.

I did not happen to get a good look at the Los Angeles man till he began to practice at Stockholm prior to the Olympic games last year. Without delay I picked him as the winner, despite the fact that the Englishmen were very sweet on their man Anderson, who was supposed to have shown 15 seconds for the 120 yards.

Many Caught Time at 14 4-5.

Kelly justified my opinion by winning in 15 1-10 seconds, in undoubtedly the most sensational hurdle race ever seen. Several private timers, Americans as well as myself, made the time 14 4-5 seconds.

J. E. Sullivan, the American commissioner, said it was the fastest hurdle race he had ever seen, and is prepared to see Kelly do better than 15 seconds any day.

The citizens of Los Angeles contributed the money to take Kelly on the Olympic team, and their generosity has been highly praised ever since, and Kelly, by his great performances, has shown that his admirers made no mistake.

Tortorich Offers Big Purse for Title Go

SAN FRANCISCO, July 7.—D. J. Tortorich, owner of the Westside Athletic Club at New Orleans, wired Willie Ritchie to-day offering a purse of $20,000 for a twenty-round fight between the champion and Jack Britton, of Chicago. If accepted, the fight will take place September 7. Danny Morgan, manager of Britton, has already accepted for his protege.

REDS PURCHASE ROBINSON FROM SAVANNAH CLUB

SAVANNAH, GA., July 6.—Announcement has been made of the consummation of negotiations which have been pending between the Cincinnati Baseball Club and the owners of the local association of the South Atlantic League for the sale of pitcher Dick Robertson. The purchase price is said to be $4,000.

Robertson will be delivered to the Cincinnati club at the end of the South Atlantic season. President Armstrong has stated that the present Indian combination will be kept intact throughout the year. When announcement was made of the sale of Robertson it was stated that the young spitball artist will remain in Savannah for the balance of the season.

CHAPPELLE IS MOTOTCYCLE CHAMP; DEFEATS C. DAVIS

NEW YORK, July 7.—Arthur Chappelle, the motorcycle speed king, is to-day the holder of the professional championship of America. At the Motordrome—at Brighten Beach last night Chappelle won the third and deciding race of the series for the championship from Charles Davis. Each had won a match and this was the deciding one, and consisted of a ten-mile and two five-mile heats.

Martin Kessler, of Newark, was badly cut about the mouth when he fell from his machine while trying to avoid mixing up in a spill in the two-mile novice race.

ZEIDER READY TO PLAY; CHANCE TO MAKE CHANGES

NEW YORK, July 7.—After to-day's double-header with the Senators the New Yorks leave for Chicago to begin their second Western trip.

Frank Chance has received word from Rollie Zeider that he would join the team on Wednesday, ready to play second base in the opening game with the White Sox. Zeider's absence has cost the Yankees many games. With Zeider on the middle bag, Hartzell will supplant Daniels or Wolter in the outfield.

GUTHRIE PITCHER HURLS ONLY 54 BALLS IN GAME

GUTHRIE, OKLA., July 7.—Andrew Jelsama, pitching for the Elks team of the Guthrie City League, is believed to have made a record in a game against the Santa Fe Railroad team when he delivered only 54 balls during the entire nine innings. He allowed three hits, striking out one man.

DENVER CLUB ON SALE.

DENVER, COLO., July 7.—President McGill wants to sell the Denver team of the Western League, it is said, and retire at the end of the season.

Cross After Match With Ritchie

Leach Wants Plenty of Action

By H. M. Walker.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., July 7.—It's Leach Cross, the pride of the walk in Los Angeles. Whatever admiration was bestowed upon Mexican Joe Rivers now goes for Cross double. Fight bugs are fairly marveling at the showing of the New Yorker, and from the talk at sporting headquarters it seems to be the consensus of opinion that the New Yorker would defeat Ritchie for the championship.

Leach, with Brother Sam and Trainer Harry Lee, were about town Sunday accepting congratulations on all sides, but more eager to know the next probable date for his services than anything else.

The New Yorker is decorated with a handsome black eye, the left optic being badly swollen and discolored clear over the cheekbone, but Leach is parading this proudly in honor of the occasion and said if he had been a loser he would bend his head and take up an alleyway.

"I want Ritchie in a match for the championship of the world," said Cross, "and I want to know within a few days whether the champion is going to give me this chance. It would be a great fight and I like my chances with him, for our styles are very similar. He's cleverer than I am and I think he's the classiest champion we have had since Joe Gans, but this is the wing that spells kick," and the dentist-boxer closed his right fist and smiled confidently.

"Will you take on Rivers if the match is postponed and there is nothing doing for the present with Ritchie?" was asked. "I'm ready to take on Rivers the last of July, regardless of whether I meet the champion, and then I will fight again the next month and take Ritchie Labor Day. That's me, for I'm in better form the oftener I work."

Just what the immediate plans of the Eastern boxer will be is not quite known. Unless something positive is placed for Cross early this week the New Yorker will start back East, probably taking a date with Harry Trendall at St. Louis, and then on to New York, where he is offered a match with Young Shugrue.

Bud Anderson came into town with Manager Dick Donald yesterday and, although somewhat disappointed and forlorn, he expressed a manly version of the outcome and gave the victor all just dues, saying that he only hoped there would soon be a time when he can command another accounting with Mr. Cross. Bud's lips were considerably swollen and his right eye discolored. Anderson and Manager Donald are not certain of future plans, but will remain over until to-morrow, then returning to Medford.

RINGSIDE NOTES

Who will get the next chance at Willie Ritchie's title? This is a question that is worrying boxing fans these days. Freddie Welsh, Leach Cross, Tommy Murphy and Jack Britton are all clamoring for the prize match.

* * *

At the present time it looks very much as if Cross will beat his rivals to the big bout. Cross' recent victory over Anderson has made him a big card on the coast. The dentist's great punching power should give him a great chance to cop the championship from Ritchie.

* * *

Friends of Charlie White should not take his defeat at the hands of Jack Britton to heart. When it is taken into consideration that White weighed but 129 pounds against 136 for Britton the showing made by Charlie was nothing to be ashamed of. Although Britton is credited with a knockout he failed to drop White once during the entire mill. The bout was stopped by the sheriff.

* * *

Poor Joe Thomas is certainly hitting the toboggan. Frankie Whitney pushed the New Orleans boy still further down the ladder by handing Joe Golden's protege a neat lacing in ten rounds last Friday.

* * *

The Ritchie-Rivers championship battle at San Francisco drew a $30,000 house. Ritchie was guaranteed $17,000 win, lose or draw. Rivers drew down about $5,000 for his end.

* * *

When Johnny Kilbane was recently asked in Cleveland why he didn't knock out more of his opponents he said: "I have always said that I am a boxer and not a fighter. I am not in the ring to kill the other fellow, but to simply outbox him. I won the featherweight championship of the world by using this method and will not change my style now."

The next big bout to be staged on the coast will be the twenty-round engagement between Charley Ledoux and Kid Williams at Los Angeles on July 29. The winner has been promised a match with either Eddie Campi or Johnny Coulon.

* * *

Kid Young, the local newsboy boxer, is still waiting to hear from Charlie Lee in regard to the latter's challenge. Young says he will sign up for the match at once and will also give Lee a $50 side bet.

* * *

George Chip and Jack Dillon meet in a 12-round setto at Boston on July 8. The winner is to be matched with Frank Klaus.

* * *

Eddie Craney, who staged the Rivers-Ritchie mill, is now anxious to arrange a match between Jack Britton and Tommy Murphy. He has already wired an offer to Danny Morgan, manager of Britton.

* * *

Billy Papke, former middelweight, wishes to announce that he is still in the boxing game. Papke has agreed to meet any middleweight the Milwaukee promoters pick for him. The Kewanee boy says his injured hand is again in shape for a tough scrap.

* * *

The recent 20-round bout between Campi and Ledoux at the Pacific Athletic Club, of Vernon Cal., drew $4,900. Ledoux received $1,225, which was 25 per cent of the gross receipts. Campi, for winning got $1,470, having boxed for 30 per cent of the receipts.

* * *

Nick Pagoalos and Sam Fountas, local Greek featherweights, will clash in a private 10-round bout here Friday. Terry Nelson has been selected to referee the go. The winner will seek a match with Kid Young.

KRAMER AND CAVANAUGH WIN GREAT CYCLE RACE

NEWARK, N. J., July 7.—A victory for the team of Kramer and Cavanaugh in the three-cornered tandem match race and a dead heat between Frank Kramer, of New Jersey, and Alfred Grenda, of Australia, were features of the racing at the Velodrome here yesterday.

In the two-mile event Grenda had a lead of twenty yards on the last lap, but Kramer spurted and managed to cross the line with his rival. In the three-cornered match Kramer and Cavanaugh nosed out Joe Fogler, of Brooklyn, and Al Goulet, of Australia, and Jackie Clark and Grenda, both Australians, got third. The victory was in straight heats of one mile each.

CARPENTIER AND PALZER MAY CLASH IN PARIS GO

NEW YORK, July 7.—Tom O'Rourke is in receipt of a letter from Monsieur Vienne, the Parisian boxing promoter, offering him a match for Palzer with Carpentier some time this fall. Carpentier is all the rage in fight circles in France and would draw an immense gate with a white man of reputation who had not fought in Paris. O'Rourke thinks well of the proposition and will proceed to close the match with Monsieur Vienne.

RICHARDS WINS A WIFE IF HE WINS 2 RACES

IT'S leaked out on "Tex" Richards, rider at the local Motordrome. Old "Tex" is going to be married. That is, maybe?

You see it's this way.

So she wrote "Tex" that if he would win both races at the next meet she would have him—and the quicker the better.

Yes, it sounds like a press agent's yarn. And like as not the girl got the idea out of a novel or a newspaper. A lot of things come from such places. But anyhow, the story is true. If "Tex" wins both races he gets a wife. If he doesn't, there will be another wait. And "Tex" has waited quite a while.

Naturally a thing like this will spur Richards to the utmost Tuesday night. And he will need it. Jock McNeil has the old J. A. P. running as never before. And Mortie Graves' new Excelsior has shown speed in practice that is fast enough to win any race ever run on this Motordrome or any other.

Tuesday's races will be among those three riders. The experts believe that Graves is the winner if all goes well. But McNeil's machine has never been beaten when it was running right. And "Tex" Richards has never yet run that old Indian No. 23 as he will run it Tuesday night.

In case of rain Tuesday night the meeting will be postponed until Wednesday night. There will also be racing Friday night.

LEDOUX AND WILLIAMS WORKING FOR GO JULY 15

LOS ANGELES, July 7.—Charley Ledoux and Kid Williams are going after the training stunt as though they meant to make the July 15 bout a businesslike affair. The two have met in the ring before, and as both claim a victory at that meeting, the rivalry is especially keen.

The French bantamweight appears to be in great shape and went through his best work-outs since arriving in California yesterday at his Vernon camp. He showed considerable improvement over his previous work here.

At Venice Kid Williams gave a large crowd of assembled fans a good idea of his condition and showed them something of what he intends to do to Ledoux next week.

JOY FOR FRANK CHANCE.

Spending a section of the Fourth at the ringside while Carl Morris is attempting to fight is a great little pastime for one who has a lot of perfectly good time to throw away.

Samuel E. Debs is leading Edward P. Weston in their hike athwart the continent. Sam has more speed than Ed, but not a bit more sense.

Without cracking a smile, Fred Toney up and says he is glad to get a chance to work regularly. Fred will have his little joke.

By this time Mr. Toney is able to find his way from Chicago to Louisville and vice versa with his eyes shut.

ROUGH-HOUSE.

Lives of Phillies all remind us
We can play a rough-house game,
And, departing, leave behind us
Spike marks on another's frame.

It is said that the Cincinnati Reds once went through a whole season without losing a game. There is a feeling among baseball experts that this will not happen again for at least a couple of years.

In view of what happend to W. Heinrich Schmidt it is surprising that the English newspapers have not begun to chide McLoughlin on the cut of his trousers or the color of his hose.

The consensus of opinion is that Mr. Quigley is a good umpire—if there is such a thing as a good umpire.

SLIDING.

Toboggan-sliding days have come,
The saddest of the season,
When baseball teams go on the bum
For no apparent reason.

The Phils that led the bloomin' league
Are headed for the bottom.
Their pitchers suffer from fatigue,
And all the batters swat 'em.

Bad Year for Georgia Players

Cobb--Rucker Both Out of Whack

BROOKLYN, N. Y., July 7.—This seems to be a hard year on celebrated Georgia ball players. Ty Cobb is in bad shape. And now Nap Rucker also has gone bad.

"Nap" may not pitch in his old form for some time to come. He will not pitch at all for the present if he takes the advice of his physician. The big Georgian has a bad arm, so bad in fact that for over two weeks his curve ball has been a myth.

The trouble with the arm is the indirect result of an accident he met with in the team's long stay at home early in the season. In a game against the St. Louis Cardinals "Nap" had the thumb of his pitching hand knocked out of gear.

Instead of waiting until the injured member had entirely healed, "Nap" got back into the game because he argued that he could pitch without using his thumb. He changed his style of delivery because of the damaged thumb, and it is believed, in doing so, he put too much of a strain on certain muscles in his shoulder. "Nap" says for two weeks he has not been able to pitch a curve ball, which accounts for the peculiar exhibitions that he has been giving of late.

THE big Georgian said yesterday that he does not know how he ever got through that extra-inning game with the Phillies. He says he was able to beat the Giants because the McGrawites were looking for him to pitch curve balls and "Nap" was not pitching them for the very good reason that he couldn't.

President Ebbets sent "Nap" to a specialist. The specialist gave it as his opinion that while the arm was not seriously injured, "Nap" would be unable to get his arm back in shape unless he gave it a good rest. The rest thing does not make a hit with "Nap." He said yesterday that he did not know whether to stay out or not.

* * *

THREE years ago Rucker had trouble with his arm and it was caused by fooling with different kinds of deliveries. At that time he had developed quite a spitter and was using it with great success. Then his arm started to bother him.

One day he mentioned it to Hank O'Day. According to "Nap," Hank proceeded to give him a fine little bawling out for using the spitball. The veteran umpire attributed all the trouble to "Nap" changing his style of delivery, by which he put a strain on muscles that "Nap" did not bring into play with his regular delivery.

Carl Thompson May Be Signed by Smith

Carl Thompson, former University of Georgia star, may be signed by Manager Billy Smith to take the place of one of his wavering hurlers—probably Paul Musser. It will depend on what terms can be agreed upon.

Thompson has had a bad season with Birmingham and was finally turned back by Molesworth on the New York Americans. They wanted to send him to the New England League, but he preferred to pitch in the South. If Smith can make a deal with him he will probably give him a trial. The local manager believes that hard luck and weak batting support beat Thompson in most of his games with the Barons and that with the local team he will be a winner.

CARDS SIGN ANOTHER PITCHER.

ST. LOUIS, MO., July 7.—Another hurler is coming to aid the Cardinals in the National League pennant race. He is Rice Williams, a member of the Great Falls club of the Union Association. The newcomer will not join Huggins' crew until September 14. The announced price for the pitcher was $2,500.

BEARISH ADVICES DEPRESS COTTON

NEW YORK, July 7.—Buying of August contracts was the only feature at the opening of the cotton market today. This position opened 13 points higher, but other prices ranged 2 to 4 points higher than last Thursday's closing quotations. Changes at Liverpool over the holidays were slight and weather conditions were very favorable.

A little pressure in new crop positions after the call due to private crop advices from the South, and prices worked off sharply. August suffered the greatest loss by declining from 12.18, reporting quotations, to 12 cents. Other positions show recessions aggregating from 6 to 8 points from the opening range.

Trading during the forenoon was very small and sentiment was extremely bearish. It was reported that Liverpool was a fair seller of August, which, of course, had its effect. Later the market recovered a few points of the early loss, price movement being 1 to 3 points under the previous close.

During the afternoon session the volume of business was extremely light. Sentiment was against the market, but the crowd was afraid to push their commitments to any great extent, owing to the small stock on hand and price fluctuated within a moderate range.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net decline of 8 to 11 points from the final quotations of last Thursday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, July 7.—Weather conditions since Thursday were favorable, particularly the return of fair weather in the Western States, which had enough rain. The central and Atlantic States had further good showers, which were particularly needed in Arkansas. Indications are for generally fair, warm weather, except probably showers and cooler in Northwest Texas, Northwestern Oklahoma, East Tennessee and North Carolina.

Political news from Europe is bad and reflected in a decline in English Consols.

Our market opened about 7 points lower on new crops, but ruled very steady at the decline without selling pressure.

New York says the trade is bearish, but fears the situation in the old crop months, owing to very small stock, which is expected to be down to 15,000 bales by the end of the month.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Logan & Bryan: We feel that lower range of values will ensue, although we would not follow the short side too closely.

A. Norden & Co.: We continue to feel that a better policy for the present will be to buy on such breaks as we had today.

Morris H. Rothschild & Co.: We continue to advise purchases of cotton around present levels.

Habersham King, in his latest report, says about 15 per cent of the belt rain is needed to prevent deterioration. As to the remaining 85 per cent, he considers conditions as near perfect as they well can be, particularly in the two Carolinas and Texas. Since date of this report the dry districts had general rain, relieving danger.

* * *

Trading in the market to-day was in a small volume. Sentiment was very bearish. There was practically no feature.

* * *

Gwathmey and Russell were good buyers of August at the outset to-day. Liverpool, however, sold the option.

Dallas wires: "Texas clear and warm, Oklahoma generally partly cloudy and clear."

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, July 7.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map favorable; partly cloudy in the northern border of the belt, fair rest of the belt; nice rains in Arkansas, central Mississippi, Gulf districts and along the Atlantic Coast. Indications are for generally fair, except in Northwest Texas, Oklahoma and North Carolina, which may get some showers.

* * *

* * *

Vicksburg, Greenwood, Shreveport, Monroe, clear and hot.

* * *

Washington forecast for week: Generally fair during week; may be a few scattered thundershowers; seasonable temperatures.

* * *

The Memphis Commercial-Appeal summary shows that last week probably was the most favorable of the season on the cotton crop. At least the crop made better progress than during any other similar period this year. Under the stimulus of good rains plenty of sunshine and warm days and nights the plant made splendid growth, and, while still a bit late, made up much lost time during the week. The plant is strong and stock is beginning to branch out and is blooming and fruiting heavily.

Rains fell in sections all over the belt during the week. They were the heaviest and more nearly general in Texas and Oklahoma, where practically the entire area of both States received good rains. In the central valley the drouth was relieved and the altered local conditions that comprise a very small total area. In the east no great need of moisture had been felt, but good rains fell at the end of the week.

The high state of cultivation that has characterized the crop from the start was in no way abated during the week. Fields are almost universally clean and tilth of soil probably is more nearly perfect than ever before known. The feature of the crop places the plant in the best shape to withstand another drouth or rain with the least possible damage.

There is still complaint of boll weevil in infested districts. They are numerous in sections of Mississippi and hardly worth mentioning to date is hardly worth mentioning. Farmers are continuing a relentless war against the pest, and in some sections they seem to have won their fight.

STOCKS WEAK ON BAD CABLE NEWS

Pittsburg Bank Failure Also Was Depressing Factor — Street Awaits U. S. Report.

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, July 7.—Following the three-day holiday the stock market opened weak to-day and prices ranged from fractions over a point lower.

Chesapeake and Ohio was sold in considerable quantity, going to 53⅜ for a loss of 1⅜. Union Pacific sold off ⅝.

Among the other declines were Amalgamated Copper ⅝, American Can ⅜, American Smelting ⅛, Atchison ⅝, United States Steel common ⅛, Southern Pacific ⅜, New York Central ⅛, Reading ½, Northern Pacific ⅛, Anaconda ⅛ and Canadian Pacific ⅝. Baltimore and Ohio rose ⅛ and St. Paul gained ⅜.

After half an hour some issues rallied and a firmer tone was evident.

The curb was steady.

Americans in London were firm and Canadian Pacific there was steady.

The situation in the Balkans is exercising a depressive influence over the European money market and to-day $3,000,000 gold was engaged in New York for London.

There was little to the trading during the forenoon. Union Pacific was freely supplied, declining to 145½; Canadian Pacific moved up to 214⅝; Amalgamated Copper and Pennsylvania Railroad were off ⅛. Steel remained unchanged. There was fractional recessions in Reading, Southern Pacific, Atchison and New York Central. The tone was dull before noon.

Call money was easy at 2 per cent.

The market was depressed by the Pittsburg bank failures and losses were sustained in the last hour. Compared with the noon range of prices, the following declines were sffuered:

Amalgamated Copper, ⅛; American Can, ⅝; Canadian Pacific, ¾; St. Paul, ½; Reading, ⅜; Union Pacific, 1, and Steel, ¼. In the last few minutes the list slightly strengthened.

The market closed dull. Governments unchanged; other bonds steady.

STOCK GOSSIPS

The New York Financial Bureau says: "Would buy standard and attractive issues conservatively on fair opportunities. Information channels favor a trading position."

* * *

Dow Jones says: "Result of strike vote among conductors and trainmen of Eastern railroads to be announced to-morrow. Democratic caucus of tariff bill will be held to-day. American stocks in London easy, unchanged to ⅝ off. Twelve industrials decline .01. Twenty active rails advanced .01."

* * *

Potter, of N. L. Carpenter & Co., says: "The market may show a reactionary tendency to-day on account of the European situation. The prospects of a big railroad strike and a poor bank statement to-morrow, do not expect any decline to carry prices very far from this level and would accumulate stocks carefully on weak spots. The Government crop report on grain due this week will give condition of corn, which is most important, and from private estimates it should be very satisfactory."

* * *

The weakness of the market is due to the foreign situation, but the Government crop report, which will be published this week, should be very favorable. Private estimates show the corn crop will be over 3,000,000,000 bushels. Should the Government figures show these estimates to be correct, it should help prices and cause a moderate rally. —Potter.

MINING STOCKS.

BOSTON, July 7.—Opening. Alaska, 17⅝; Smelting, 46.

Grain Notes

King, of Toledo, says in his Missouri crop report: "Wheat yield 16 bushels, against 12.6 last year when crop was 22,000,000; 86 per cent of crop is harvested, against 51 per cent last year; quality 96. On Government acreage, yield suggests 38,000,000 bushels. Oats, condition 56 per cent, against 68 per cent in June and 94 per cent last year, when the crop was 30,000,000 bushels. Crop indicated 20,000,000 bushels."

* * *

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. says: "There has been some rain in Northwest with generally favorable temperatures. Primary receipts to-day will doubtless show a large total as a result of accumulations over the holidays and the visible will doubtless again show a decrease. We are inclined to look for a steady wheat market to-day without important price changes.

"Corn—The belt has received very little rainfall since Thursday, and some extremely high temperatures have prevailed in Kansas, but lower temperatures report this morning with some rains in Nebraska and Missouri.

"Oats—Buyers seem to come in on all fair recessions, basing purchases on general belief that moderate yield.

"Provisions—Market may have some setbacks, but we do not look for any decline of moment."

* * *

Private messages from Winnipeg, Duluth, Glenwood, Thief River Falls, Hankinson, Harvey, Portal and Endlin indicate clear weather with temperatures around 60 degrees.

Weather since Thursday: North Dakota and Minnesota had excellent rains; Illinois scattered rains, mostly over good parts of States; South Dakota, some rains, but light. Canadian Northwest had fair rain.

B. W. Snow's crop report for July 1: "Condition of corn 85.9, against 83.8 per cent last year. Acreage 108,000,000, or 1 per cent increase. Crop indicated on basis July par for condition, 2,964,000 000 bushels, against a similar indication of 2,811,000,000 last year.

"If present condition should be maintained until harvest it would forecast a crop of 3,147,000,000 bushels, against 3,125,000,000 last year. Winter wheat condition 81, a decline of 4 points since the June 1 report, and indicates a crop of about 487,000,000 bushels on an estimate of acreage and about 480,000,000 on the Government estimate. Loss mainly in Kansas. Spring wheat condition drops from 93 to 77.8, mainly as a result of drouth in South Dakota. On the basis of condition this makes July indicated crop about 230,000,000 bushels, against an indicated crop similarly figured a year ago of 271,000,000 bushels.

"If present condition maintained until harvest it would forecast a crop of 251,000,000 bushels, against 339,000,000 yield last year. This makes July indicated total crop, wheat 710,000,000 bushels, against 629,000,000 last July and if present conditions are maintained until harvest, an indication for 731,000,000 bushels, against a final estimate last year of 730,000,000 bushels.

"Condition of oats 75.8 against 87 per cent last month. On the basis of July par for condition this indicates (on Snow's acreage) a crop of 983,000,000 bushels, or on Government acreage, 1,023,000 bushels.

"Last year the July 1 Government indication was 1,239,000,000 estimated, was raised to 1,418,000,000 bushels."

ATLANTA LIVE STOCK MARKET.

By W. H. White, Jr., of the White Provision Company.

Cattle receipts increasing with the larger supply of grass stock. Good kinds scarce and reasonably strong. While the bulk coming is of only medium quality and is only ordinary flesh, which is considered generally as undesirable killers, and while the prices have ranged lower, the quality is considerably below that of the beef coming three weeks ago. The demand has been light for the past several days, which together with the plain class of cattle has caused the market to be unsettled and values are probably a full quarter lower on medium and a half lower on common grades than a week ago.

Tennessee sheep and lambs are plentiful and the extreme prices of two weeks ago have been lowered by about 1 cent per pound.

Hog supply about equal to the demand. The yards are kept cleaned up from day to day. Several loads of extra choice packers were among the week's receipts and brought top prices. Market active.

Good to choice steers, 1,000 to 1,200, $5.50@6.50; good steers, 800 to 1,00, $5.25@6.00; medium to good steers, 700 to 850, $5.00@5.50.

Good to choice beef cows, 800 to 900, $4.50@5.25; medium to good cows, 700 to 800, $4.25@5.00.

Good to choice heifers, 750 to 850, $4.75@5.25; medium to good heifers, 650 to 750, $4.00@4.50.

Medium to common steers, if fat, 800 to 900, $4.00@5.00; medium to common cows, if fat, 700 to 800, $3.75@4.25; mixed common, 600 to 800, $3.25@3.75; good butcher bulls, $3.50@4.00.

Prime hogs, 160 to 200, $8.50@8.80; good butcher hogs, 140 to 160, $8.40@8.50; good butcher pigs, 100 to 140, $8.25@8.50; light pigs, 80 to 100, $7.75@8.00.

Above quotations apply to corn-fed hogs; mash and peanut fattened, 1 to 1½ cents.

CLEARINGS SOMEWHAT OFF.

Atlanta's clearings for June were $44,655,193, and for the first six months of 1913 they were $335,143,406, both figures being but slightly below last year's levels.

Slow collections and complete absence of speculation are given as causes by Bradstreet's, which further remarks that in view of the halt of speculation, the showing is remarkably good.

MILLER & COTTER COTTON LETTER.

MEMPHIS, July 7.—Crop news is favorable and weather over holiday was ideal, rains falling East of the river and none in Texas and Oklahoma, but in absence of speculation markets show no definite tendency. Sentiment is bearish, but talent is afraid to sell it with summer months in hands of manipulators. Pending legislation is also killing off business.

HOGS HIGHER; RECEIPTS LIGHT.

CHICAGO, July 7.—Because of the holiday live stock loading in the country for Monday's market was light and prices advanced. Cattle and hogs gained 10 to 15 cents, while live muttons were marked up 15 to 25 cents. Hogs sold up to 9.20, with the bulk at 9.15. There were 91,000 at eleven markets, against 102,000 last week. Cattle sold largely at 8.60 to 8.50 and lambs crossed the 8-cent line.

How to Distinguish Good Reds From Poor Ones When Buying

Article Is Written for Benefit of the New Breeder of Reds.

What I have to say is for the benefit of the new breeder of Reds, or those who are contemplating starting with Reds, enabling them to tell a good red from a poor one and help them decide for themselves the value of Rhode Island Reds you buy. There are plenty of breeders of Reds that do not know what a really good Red should be, and these breeders are doing the breed harm on all sides by telling what they think they know, and selling beginners fowls that come nearer the stand of Buff Rock or Buff Wyandottes than Rhode Island Reds. In a general way we will discuss Rhode Island Reds and try to arrive at some definite conclusion as to what one should be in shape and color. First, the head. Reds should have a pretty fair sized comb with five points, red ear lobes, red eyes, and a horn colored beak, all in proportion. Common defects are too many points to comb, lopped comb and eyes not red. Now, the feet and legs should be yellow with a red pigment down the sides and free from feathers. The common defects are slaty legs in females and feathers on the legs and feet of the males. Now, for the body of a Red. The general shape should be a horizontal back, broad on the shoulders and free from pinched effect at the tail. A long keel bone and the body carried in such a way that it will be oblong in shape, and not long, as the Wyandotte. Common defects of shape are short back, pinched tail, upright carriage with wings pointing downward instead of a horizontal position, short keel bone and narrow backs. Pay especial attention to shape, as that is the most important part and characteristic that differs from all the other breeds. This is the utility part. It makes the good layers and the good fryers, too. The color of a Rhode Island Red should be RED, with the exception of its tail, which should be black, and with black markings in the wings. The females have ticking in the hackle, and the males should be free from it. This is the main thing, they should be RED, red on top and red to the skin, and a Rhode Island Red is not a Red unless he is red. The common defects of color are washed out buff females, or females very dark in color and smutty under color. I had rather have a buff female with good clean under color than a dark hen with smutty color. This is choosing the lesser evil. A good male is the same color from head to tail with a red or salmon under color and a black tail. It is hard to get them with the same shade of red all over, and they are most likely to have light colored hackle and dark wing bows. An otherwise fine bird often has white or smut in under color of hackle, or near the root of his tail. You will often find light patches in under color over the hips and dark places on the back. These are minor points and faults of birds that are otherwise often the finest of specimens. Now that we must not breed from the bird that has any of these faults mentioned, that we must take all these things into consideration in sizing them up and breed from the best you have, and gradually you will get them nearer and nearer the ideal Rhode Island Red. Do not stress color at the expense of shape, size and vigor. As the three last mentioned are the mainstays of this breed, as well as all the others. You may have a beautiful cockerel, but he may lack the size and vigor to make a good breeder, and if you use him you will be a sadder and wiser man. Rhode Island Reds given a free range are likely to have the best plumage at the fall fair.

Medium-Sized Acreage Tracts

ALL of us know the profit that is usually made from acreage. It is almost a conceded fact that if a person owns good acreage, he has a sure profit in it sooner or later. When we think of acreage propositions, we think of lots of land, and naturally lots of money, because the usual acreage transaction involves a great deal of money. The demand for good, close-in acreage for subdivision purposes is increasing every day. A trip to the outskirts of the city in any direction you choose to take will convince you of this fact. We are going to offer a tract of about 100 acres, between Decatur and East Lake, which we have cut up into five, ten and fifteen acre tracts. The price and terms on these tracts make it possible for almost anybody to handle them.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Big Profits Made In Acreage Deal

Mrs. Harper Buys English Property. To Name Realty Head—New York Times on Candler Investments.

Captain James W. English has given a warranty deed to Mrs. Lelah O. Harper on 80 acres of land in land lot 187, the consideration being $8,247, or at the rate of $105 an acre, and Saturday Mrs. Harper sold 21 acres to Harper Brothers for $10,500, or at the rate of $500 an acre. The enhancement covered a period of a little more than seven years, the deal between Captain English and Mrs. Harper having taken place February 28, 1906.

This property is between Bryant's District and Oakland City. The part sold by Captain English was the north half of the land lot, excepting 9.15 acres, being lots 1 to 9 and 12 to 16, inclusive, in block 4. Mrs. Harper sold to Harper Brothers the southeast corner of Harper Street and DeFoor Avenue.

To Name Realty Head.

Members of the Atlanta Real Estate Board will hold their regular monthly dinner the night of July 18 at the Cafe Durand, at which time a new head for the board will be elected, to succeed Charles P. Glover. Some propositions will be heard to change the by-laws. One of these would make it possible for the president to succeed himself.

There has been much speculation over the probable president. Among the names suggested are Harris G. White, now vice president of the board; W. A. Foster, of Foster & Robson; S. B. Turman, of Turman, Black & Calhoun, and Carlos Lynes, of Thomson & Lynes.

The nominating committee will name a man and he will be voted in by the members. Charles P. Glover, ex-officio; M. F. Ramsey, J. H. Ewing, M. C. Kiser and H. W. Dews are on this committee.

Sells Three Corners.

Ex-Governor Joseph M. Brown has been in a unique real estate deal, involving the transfer of three corners out of four in a 50-foot radius. Ex-Governor Brown sold for the estate of the late Julius L. Brown the northeast, southeast and southwest corners of Crew and Little Streets to Victor R. Smith for $5,500. Mr. Smith has also bought a bond-for-title interest in a parcel on Currier Street west of Courtland from Thomas J. Lynch for $5,000 cash, notes and the assumption of certain incumbrances.

Sales in Piedmont Heights.

W. H. Allen, of the Edwin P. Ansley Real Estate Agency, has sold for himself to C. C. Braswell two residence lots in Piedmont Heights for a total of $5,200. The buy was for investment.

Pace's Ferry Road Transfer.

An interesting warranty deed has gone to record in the transfer of a 280 by 600 foot lot on Pace's Ferry Road, 1,118 feet west of Tuxedo Drive, from Mrs. Allison B. Morrison to W. B. Disbro for $14,000, or at the rate of $50 a front foot.

Three Homes and 25 Lots Sold.

J. W. Dobbins & Co. have sold three houses and 25 lots in the East Lake Land and Improvement Company's subdivision at East Lake. Mr. Dobbins has also sold three bungalows in various sections for a total of $10,250.

Mr. McCrory's Salesmanship.

I. C. McCrory, the well-known College Park citizen, is receiving the congratulations of friends on a rather remarkable achievement in real estate salesmanship. At the conclusion of the Odd Fellows' Fourth of July barbecue at College Park Mr. McCrory put up 23 residence lots and sold them in short order. No notice of the contemplated sale had been given. The lots adjoined the place where the barbecue was held.

Interest in New Subdivision.

A good deal of interest has been caused by the announcement that the Atlanta Development Company will open up July 15 Highland View, a new subdivision of forty 50 by 250 foot lots west of Druid Hills and north of Ponce DeLeon Avenue. The prices will be $1,400 to $1,700 per lot. Robert H. Jones will handle the property for the development concern, but plats will also be placed with various realty agencies.

Many Plans for Club.

Since the publication of tentative plans for a new University Club home, additional details have been given out. The club is also figuring with William Worth Martin on a site on the north side of East Baker Street back of the old Goldsmith property on Peachtree Street; with the owners of the Atlanta School of Medicine building at the northeast corner of Bartow and Luckie Streets; with the proprietors of the Stafford apartments on Carnegie Way; with Walter G. Cooper on his property at the northeast corner of Luckie and Spring Streets, to erect a bachelors' apartment and club combined, and with the owners of the Roy property on the north side of East Ellis Street back of the Robert F. Maddox place on Peachtree.

The University Club is looking for a place with 20 bedrooms and a 40 by 50 foot assembly hall for meetings. The executive council thinks it may find a place of this kind already built. Otherwise, it may be necessary to build or remodel. If the medical college site should be procured the building would be thoroughly overhauled.

Comment on Candler Move.

Asa G. Candler has chosen wisely in his New York and Atlanta investments, thinks a writer in The New York Times. Mr. Candler is compared with Frank W. Woolworth, the capitalist, as follows:

"The prejudice which financial institutions and corporations have held against real estate investments for many years is dying out. More and more we find conservative banking institutions handling real estate securities. They are beginning to realize the soundness of an investment which has from time immemorial been the bedrock foundation of savings bank strength. We find individuals of wealth like Frank W. Woolworth and Asa G. Candler putting into improved real estate profits earned in merchandise.

"The latter illustrates the trend of the time by building in both Atlanta and New York. We find corporations like the United Cigar Stores buying the property, where it can, on which their stores stand. We see the New York Central Railroad building not only a railroad terminal but income-producing office buildings.

"Real estate is coming into its own because wealthy and conservative men and corporations are investing in it, and they are investing only where facts and figures prove that a profit is to be paid on the money expended. Real estate is not bought and sold, dwelling and office buildings are not erected in the haphazard way that obtained not so many years since.

"That very definition of real estate has changed. We used to think of it as a lot, bare ground. The Woolworth Building is real estate; so is the Metropolitan Tower; so is the Verona apartment house. Before the Woolworth Building was erected its owner knew how many persons passed its portals in the course of a day.

"He knew, so far as could be known, the number of vacancies in the downtown office buildings. He studied downtown land values and rental values, he studied the trend of occupancy in the various trades and professions, he studied the service given tenants by other office buildings."

What Race Track Gambling Did for One Man

It Has Done the Same and Worse for Many Another. No ROMANCE in This

(Copyright, 1913.)

A reader asks us to print a brief account of one man's gambling experience, published in a newspaper at El Paso, Texas.

He writes: "The story is one of the most direct appeals on the subject I have ever read, and if presented with the forcible coloring you are prepared to give it, it will undoubtedly 'go home' to those who are just starting to feel what the man it tells about must have felt when he still had the opportunity of honorably quitting the game."

We print the story exactly as the El Paso newspaper printed it—no "coloring" is needed.

We say once more to the young men tempted by gambling, and to fathers and mothers careless about their sons' associations:

GAMBLING IS THE WORST, MOST DANGEROUS VICE IN CIVILIZATION.

Gambling long maintained will make any man a thief or a worse criminal.

There is NO honorable professional gambler, as there is no honorable professional burglar.

Gambling leads to sorrow, poverty, disgrace and crime.

OLD STORY OF RUIN IN THE RACING GAME.

The Man Who Followed It, Precariously and Otherwise, for Years, and His Sad Ending.

It is the old story of ruin from the racing game. He drifted to El Paso when the Juarez track was opened for the first time. Then he claimed to be representing a string of Eastern papers as racing correspondent. But this was only for the purpose of obtaining a badge and admission to the press box. That first season was a hard one for the followers of the game, and he finally started issuing racing results in the form of posters to be hung in saloons and restaurants and cigar stores at the close of the day's racing. This made him a living and left him a little margin to play on the ponies, and that was all life held for him. In summer, when the racing plant in Juarez was closed, he would drift from place to place, where short meets were held, and he succeeded in getting a living in some manner unknown to his friends.

One rainy Sunday morning, in a little second-class restaurant, he told the story of his downfall. It is the cut-and-dried story of the effect of racing on young men. But it was true as he told it. Once he had been the confidential man and assistant manager of a big book binding and stationery house in Buffalo. He was earning a good salary with the promise of a place in the firm soon. Then the company decided to open a branch plant in Chicago to supply the bank and wholesale trade. The young man was selected as the branch manager because of his ability. He went to Chicago and was doing a big business for the firm and had received a half dozen raises since the branch was opened.

One Saturday afternoon in summer he spent his half holiday at the track where the horses were running. He laid a bet for fun. He won and wagered another. This likewise doubled his money, and he plunged. The germ had entered his blood, and he started a consistent policy of race track gambling.

The inevitable happened and he lost his position. Naturally, he turned to the easy money game which had cost him his job. He became a bookmaker, a sheet writer and a gambler. He followed the game to Florida when it was outlawed in Illinois. From there he went from place to place, finally landing in El Paso. By that time he was middle-aged and there were streaks of gray in his hair. When the races closed last spring he was neither physically nor financially able to follow the crowd to Latonia.

He remained here and lived the best he could. His brooding resulted in his making $1,000,000 mind bets on favorites in races that had been run. Wednesday night he was detained by the police on suspicion of being insane. His brooding over his downfall had been too much for his mind, and it had failed him. He is now in the county jail, where he will be held until he is examined by an insanity board.

An Appeal for a Famous American Name

Julian Hawthorne a few days ago observed his sixty-seventh birthday in the Federal penitentiary here in Atlanta. This month he will be entitled to a parole, and thousands of admirers of his distinguished father and friends of the son, who think him more sinned against than sinning, will shortly lay their views and their appeal before President Wilson.

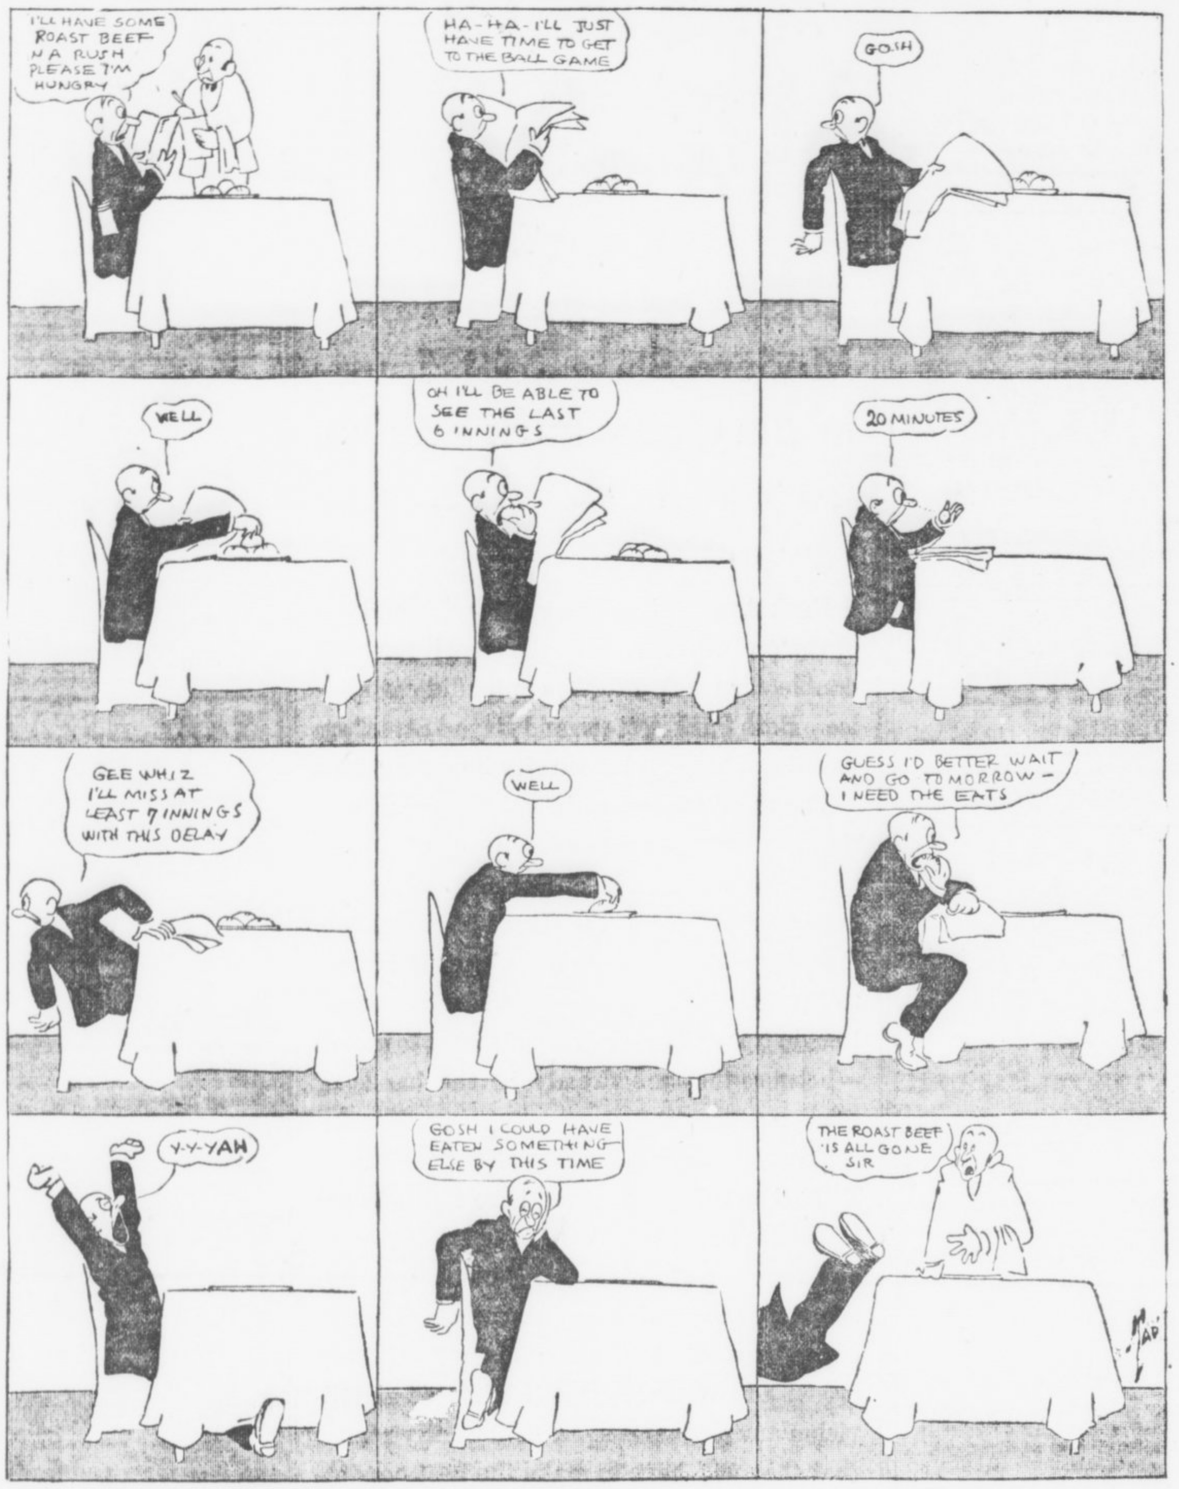
The President will be told that Julian Hawthorne was misled by evil associates in the lending of his name to get-rich-quick swindlers, from which he profited little or nothing; and that he was as much the dupe of his crooked associates as those victims who purchased stocks in the enterprises which his name was used to exploit.

This son of a brilliant American now finds himself in his old age humiliated before the eyes of the nation and in the eyes of the literary men of the world—through his own weakness and ignorance of the harsher ways of the world.

If a chief conspirator, like C. W. Morse, can be pardoned, why not a dupe, after he has been as bitterly punished as has Julian Hawthorne?

This newspaper gladly joins all admirers of Nathaniel Hawthorne in their efforts for his son and in their appeal to the President to relegate, as soon as possible, this record sinister on a famous name to the generous domain of the forgotten.

Did It Ever Occur to You?



Ella Wheeler Wilcox Writes on Motherhood

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

(Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner.)

GIRLS of seventeen are not, as a rule, given to serious thought.

But there are rare exceptions.

Such an exception has been found in a young wife of seventeen, who is suddenly aware that she is to become a mother in four months' time.

Now she is filled with awe, and with anxiety! She says: "I have always had an ideal of exerting a good influence over an unborn child; and now I am distressed to think that all these months have passed without any conscious effort on my part. I have played ball, swam and indulged in other athletics according to my regular custom. And in leisure moments I have read Milton and Shakespeare and Burns.

"I am splendidly well, but I am most anxious lest I have done things I ought not to do, and left undone other things at this critical time.

Moderation in All Things.

"What can I do for the next few months to benefit my unborn child?"

The very best thing this young mother expectant can do is to exercise with moderation, rest when she feels like it, eat and drink with moderation, and wisdom, and be happy and trust God.

Motherhood is the most natural thing in the world for women who are normal and in good health.

It often produces a normal, healthful condition for those who are not well.

Nature never intended any woman to utterly change her mode of life when expecting a child, if her mode of life had been a reasonable and sensible one previously.

Outdoor life and athletics are both reasonable and sensible, and more harm would have resulted to both mother and child by giving them up suddenly, and taking too great concern about a perfectly natural condition, than by continuing to indulge in these pastimes as long as this young woman did.

No doubt the coming child will be strong in body, with excellent lung power.

And its coming into this plane of existence will not be attended with any abnormal difficulties.

Outdoor Life and Exercise.

We must remember that the Indian woman rides her horse, and performs all sorts of laborious tasks up to the very hour of her delivery.

The wife of an army officer told the writer of frequently seeing such women drop out of line for a few hours and return to the tribe later with the new-born child wrapped in a blanket.

All women who live an outdoor life, and who exercise in the open air, have less complications in maternity than those reared under hothouse conditons.

This young mother of seventeen, who takes such a serious view of her responsibility, is certain to bring a strong, beautiful child into the world, and equally sure of guiding it into a splendid maturity.

The Difficult Hours.

She need only fill her mind with love thoughts, and with faith in God and trust in the Unseen Powers which govern this earth, to have all go well with her.

In God's great universe, there are Guardian Angels provided for every mortal, and in such degree as we love and reverence these angels, and as we live worthy of them, do they guide and help us in our difficult hours.

If we refuse to believe in them, or continually think and talk and act in a way to pain them, we alienate them and deprive them of their power to help us.

About the expectnat mother are bands of Shining Ones, and if she will rest happy in the thought of their protection, and regard them as messengers and emissaries from God Himself, great strength and peace and happiness will come to her.

And great blessings upon her child.

For of such are the Kingdom of Heaven.

PERFUMED POWDER

By WEX JONES.

THE newest skirt for woman—it's a risky thing to knock it.
For it's cutely fitted up with a cunning pistol pocket.

Oh, should you argue with the fair,
Powder smoke will fill the air;
Bullets whizzy
Will make you dizzy;
You had better bow and scoot
Before the girl begins to shoot,
Because—this here is cowboy lore—
Words are nix with a forty-four.

Still, speaking of this latest fad, this cunning pistol pocket,
Here, I think, are several things extremely prone to block it;

A handkerchief
And a powder puff;
Some trading stamps
And a manicure buff;
Smelling salts
And a pocket glass;
Jumbled up
With a theater pass.
A recipe
For custard pie;
A headache cure
And a hook and eye——

The list's a good bit longer, but here I'll have to dock it.
For I've used up all the space allowed the lady's pistol pocket.

Rev. John E. White Writes on Sex in Religion

Woman Is the Mainstay of the Church and Expresses the Innermost Soul of Religion More Powerfully Than Man; Yet, He Says, She Has Had to Fight Against the Masculine Protest for Every Inch of Recognition in the Affairs of the Church.

WRITTEN FOR THE GEORGIAN

By REV. DR. JOHN E. WHITE

Pastor Second Baptist Church

"MADAM I may not call you, and mistress I loath to call you. I know not what to call you, but I thank you for your good cheer."

These are the words of Queen Elizabeth greeting the wife of Archbishop Parker. They indicate in a kindly temper the ecclesiastical ban on womanhood in the eighteenth century, which made even the wife of an archbishop a nonentity.

Put over against this the words of three great theologians—Tertullian, Erasmus, Rabelais—"Woman, thou art the gate of hell"—"An absurd and ridiculous animal"—"The greater part of them have hardly principles and depend for their morals on those they love."

This is the exhibit of the centuries on the subject of Sex in Religion up to the nineteenth. What we have of it in the twentieth century is equally banal, and much of it lingers in the modern religious world.

The Bar Sinister in Church.

It is an answer seeming fair, and pious to the point, when the limitations of female opportunity are protested, to say that in the church and in religion women have nothing to complain of; that they are free to exercise themselves in the work of the Lord.

If this were true, 'twere very true and very good. But the record of fact is discouraging.

From the beginning women have occupied no position of authority in the church. "Her voice has never been heard at a council, nor has her pen ever formulated a decree. Looking at religion in history, one would suppose at first sight that it was almost entirely a masculine affair.

Man has formulated its metaphysics, erected its theologies, founded and governed its institutions. He is its pope, priest and prophet; its legislator, preacher and pastor." From the Judean Decalogue, which includes the wife—"thy neighbor's wife"—in the list of man's chattels, down to the recent records of the Southern Baptist Convention and the Methodist Conference, the sex "bar-sinister" has persisted.

The fact readily acknowledged that women are the mainstay of religion has been strangely ineffective in overcoming the masculine prejudice against her religious equality.

Religion's Better Half.

The fixed prohibition, "thus far shalt thou come, but no further," has, however, not prevented women from exercising a powerful influence upon religious progress. The woman nature which expresses the innermost soul of religion more intimately than the man's, has projected itself tremendously, notwithstanding the ecclesiastical limitations set upon it.

Indirectly she has sweetened the sour theologians and softened the severe theologies. Through Monica we have Augustine, through Macrina we have Basil and Gregory, "who led them both to the faith and stirred them to their best work."

This list is a long one—through Jacqueline, Paschal, through Paula, Jerome, through Susanna Wesley, the Methodist Church, etc. But these consoling examples only make the wonder deeper that Christianity should have esteemed its most reliable exponent unworthy of absolute equality.

It scarcely meets the case to prove by illustrious examples that women are indispensable factors in religion. So have been the martyrs and the persecuted of all ages through what difficulties we know.

For the past century the woman movement in religion has been breaking through the barriers. In the Protestant communions the battle has gone on steadily and successfully, and so quietly as scarcely to be a battle. Yet in every one of the great denominations the right of woman to recognition as an equal co-laborer with man in the Kingdom of God has been challenged and opposed at every step. Mrs. Doremus for thirty years kept up the fight before the women were permitted to organize the first Woman's Missionary Society.

Among Southern Baptists 25 years ago a similar proposition was silently protested by the majority and outspokenly resisted by thousands. Among Southern Methodists a petition has been pending for years to give the women not equal, but more generous representation in the direction of the missionary funds contributed by themselves.

Fighting for Her Soul.

Speaking by the card, I have made efforts in country churches to organize women's societies, for doing the sort of work every Christian is commanded to do, only to discover insuperable prejudices in the minds of the brethren.

At the bottom of this discreditable history of female repression in religion lies the jealousy of the masculine prerogative. The principle of pernicious proxy, the right of the husband to discharge religious obligations for the wife is persistent to this hour in the practice of the churches.

It amounts in effect to a layman's priest craft, in which the man assumes to stand between the woman's soul and the free and full discharge of its responsibility in practical duty.

Now the clouds are breaking away and man is beginning to relent. It will be a good day for religion when the competency of every woman under God for all the freedom an individual soul is decreed for, without reference to sex, is heartily and universally proclaimed and enforced.

Letters From The Georgian's Readers

THE SYRIANS.

Editor The Georgian:

The recent case of naturalization in which Judge Henry A. M. Smith, of South Carolina, was interested, induces me to write the following: Judge Smith contends that Syrians are not entitled to citizenship in the United States. He has the right to give or refuse naturalization to the Syrian of his State, but the reasons given by him are not based on facts, and history does not support his position.

When we consider the part the Syrians have played in the history and development of the world, we readily see they are in no way connected with or related to the Sudanese. Three of the greatest monarchies of the ancient world—Chaldea, Assayria and Babylonia—were evolved and developed by the Syrian nation.

The inhabitants of Kurdistan, who are regarded as the descendants of the Syrians, not only speak a Semitic language, but believe themselves to be the same race with the Arabs and the same traditions are held of Syrians, who in their brief historical fragments recognize as their kinsmen the later Babylonians, Phoenicians and the Joktonian Arabs.

The Semitic race—that is the name of this division—was derived from Noah's son Shem, and this term Semitic has been adopted by scholars as probably de-who, branching from beyond Syria, carried their tribe into Northern Arabia, across the Red Sea and Upper Egypt into the African Desert, northward into Armenia, westward into Canaan and far out through the Mediterranean, touched the coast of Africa, and reaching even to Europe, Britain and spreading out to America. There has never been any mixing between the Syrians and the Sudanese. A great mountain range has ever separated the two races of people.

"THE HALF-MILLION" CITY.

Editor The Georgian:

I desire to subscribe to the spirit and purpose and to be enrolled as a member of the "Half-Million Club."

Great civic benefit can be accomplished by an emblem which will exemplify the spirit of Atlanta, the "Half-Million City," as advocated by The Georgian. You are to be congratulated in voicing the virile enthusiasm of the people.

Where else can you find a community that will subscribe in a single day something over $75,000 to entertain the Shriners' national convention, and almost a like amount that the city may enjoy, for one week, the most celebrated singers of the world? Atlanta's splendid banks, its lofty buildings, well-appointed hotels, excellent railroad facilities and geographical location make possible the ideal—the "Half-Million City"—in 1920.

GIRL TELLS OF VICE TRUST HERE

OPERATIONS OF SLAVERS BARED

A new and sensational expose of vice conditions said to be prevalent in Atlanta was made Monday morning by Hattie Smith, a pretty 17-year-old girl, who was arrested in a hotel which was raided Sunday night.

If the statements of the Smith girl, who made a confession of her own guilt to the Chief, are true, Atlanta is in the clutches of one of the best organized vice systems in existence.

Certain downtown hotels, the girl claims, are the rendezvous of women procurers who go out on the streets and entice young girls in where they are provided with every comfort and convenience, in addition to being carried out on long automobile rides by strange men.

Gives Chief Names.

The names of at least one of these procurers has been placed in the hands of Chief Beavers, who will make an arrest before night, it is believed. The name of a prominent citizen of Atlanta also has been given to the Chief, in addition to the names of several women involved in the traffic, it is said.

Hattie Smith's story Monday morning was dramatic in the extreme. She told Chief Beavers how she left her home last Wednesday; how she met the woman procurer; how she was enticed into the hotel in question, and then the other details of her shame. Her confession was complete.

She admitted her guilt and then upon the query of the Chief told all she knew about the conditions, which, she says, she saw with her own eyes.

Tells Who Enticed Her.

In the course of the conversation the girl gave the Chief the names of several parties, including one or more prominent men of Atlanta, in addition to the name of the woman who enticed her to the hotel.

The arrest of a negro elevator boy in a downtown hotel shortly after noon was the first step taken by Chief Beavers in the new probe. The boy is believed to have knowledge of many of the denizens of the vice ring.

A number of downtown hotels are said to be booked for the police dragnet.

Mrs. T. R. Frierson and C. N. Hughes, victims of the vice crusade Sunday night, were bound over under $200 bond each by Recorder Broyles Monday afternoon.

Mrs. William Jones, of 168 South Boulevard, who operates the house where the parties were arrested, was bound over under $500 bond on a charge of running a disorderly house. A third victim of the raid was C. R. Hutchinson, who was fined $10.

Mrs. Frierson is well known in Atlanta as the woman who was pardoned some time ago by Mayor Woodward. She says her home is in Jacksonville.

Robber Held, Failing To Make $1,500 Bond

Walter Turpin, alias J. W. Johnson, who confessed to blowing the Kirkwood postoffice safe last Friday night, was bound over on $1,500 bond Monday morning in a preliminary hearing at Decatur, DeKalb County, before Justices A. Shelverton and W. P. House, of Kirkwood.

Turpin failed to make bond and was sent back to his cell to await trial the first week in September.

Auto Truck Crushes Lad, 13, in Decatur Street; May Not Live

Julius Silverman, 13 years old, of 253 East Hunter Street, was run down and badly crushed at Decatur and Butler Streets by a Foote & Davies Company auto truck late Monday afternoon. It is not thought he will live.

J. L. Davis, of 161 Love Street, was driving the truck. He was arrested by Policeman G. E. Butler, pending an investigation of the circumstances of the accident.

The street was crowded and scores of persons were horrified by the spectacle. Davis said he was driving the truck at about five miles an hour, and that it was his opinion the boy must have lost his balance on the bicycle he was riding and fallen under the rear wheel of the truck. He recalled seeing Silverman mounting his bicycle as the truck was approaching.

Policeman Shaw rushed the unconscious boy to Grady Hospital. In addition to internal injuries, it was found that Silverman's left leg was broken in several places.

Fascination of Death Leads Girl to Suicide

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, July 7.—Fascination for the mystery of death led Miss McDuff, a young American woman of wealth, beauty and ideals, to take her life in a little inn in the village of Villebon, according to a theory formed to-day by the police, who have been investigating the tragedy.

Miss McDuff is said to come from either a New York or a Cambridge, Mass., family.

The young woman, accompanied by an Englishman, arrived at Villacoublay a month ago. At the hotel where she lived she aroused much curiosity by her theories concerning death.

STEEL TRUST QUIZ BOAST A BLUFF

WASHINGTON, July 7.—Edward Lauterbach, a New York lawyer, today confessed to the Overman lobby investigating committee he had told Lewis Cass Ledyard he was able to prevent or to head off the Congressional investigation of the Steel Trust.

Severely grilled, Lauterbach was forced to admit that, when he had told Ledyard of coming to Washington "to look over the situation," he actually had seen no member of the House or Senate, nor any other official. He had learned "that President Taft was opposed to the investigation from Henry B. Martin, the much-talked-about secretary of the Anti-Trust League."

Calls Claim Exaggeration.

"Then your statement to Ledyard that you had ben to Washington and learned things that prompted you to say the investigation could be stopped was a falsehood?" demanded Senator Reed.

"It was an exaggeration," replied Lauterbach.

Lauterbach, when cornered as to the source of his information about "inside matters" in Washington, each time was forced to admit that David Lamar and Martin were his sole authority for his statements that President Taft did not want the investigation to proceed or that other high officials were opposed to the investigation.

Denies Posing as Power.

The witness declared that in his conversation with Ledyard, February 6, 1912, he did not represent himself either to have seen or to have been in the confidence of any member of the Democratic party.

Lauterbach declared he never had known Lamar in seven years purposely to do a wrong thing. He became acquainted with Lamar in 1906 when litigation regarding the Manhattan and Interborough railway lines in New York was pending, at which time Lamar represented the interests of Russell Sage and H. H. Rogers. He detailed several important lawsuits in which he was engaged as the result of his introduction to Rogers by Lamar.

Confirms Ledyard's Story.

Lauterbach also denied he called Lamar a blackmailer during his talk with Ledyard last year. Ledyard had testified before the committee that Lauterbach said he did not represent himself at that meeting as a representative of any member of the Democratic party. Lauterbach asserted this was correct and that his remark covered all subjects.

The witness asserted he had never discussed with Lamar the alleged forgery of $82,000,000 in the books of the Union Pacific. He repeatedly asserted he knew nothing of Lamar's impersonations of Congressmen until he heard his testimony before the Overman committee.

Lauterbach explained he engineered the purchase of a majority of the stock of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company by J. P. Morgan during the panic of 1907, and that "this panic was engineered by the men who were seeking to buy the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company and that they bought it much cheaper as a result of the financial cataclysm they precipitated."

Explains Wall Street "Pull."

Lauterbach explained that it was on account of his knowledge of the Tennessee Coal and Iron deal that he felt that he could influence Wall Street with regard to the steel investigation.

Lauterbach knew of the steel investigation resolution before it was introduced in the House. Lamar showed it to him. Lauterbach protested and went at once to tell Morgan about it.

TRIES TO DIE ON EVE OF DIVORCE

Propped up in a bed at Grady Hospital, Miss Catherine Reese, the pretty telephone operator who tried to end her life with strychnine Sunday, told a pathetic story of two disappointments in love.

"It just seemed that there was nothing left to live for," she moaned, "but I am sorry I did it now."

Miss Reese was still white-faced and weak Monday from the effects of the poison. It is believed that she will have recovered within two or three days.

She told a graphic tale of the despondency that led her to the attempt at self-destruction and of her bitter grief and despair as she snatched a pad of writing paper to write a last message to her sweetheart even while the poison had her in its grasp.

Unable to Write Death Note.

"Sweetheart, you will never know——" she wrote in a scrawling hand as convulsions seized her. She was unable to finish the sentence.

"I know it was a foolish, foolish thing for me to do," she said at the hospital. "But everything was going against me. My mother was sick. My marriage was unhappy, for it is true that I have been married and that my case for divorce was to have come up to-day. Then came this other disappointment in love. I was tired and exhausted. Everything looked dark and so I just swallowed the strychnine.

"My husband's name is W. A. Skeene. He has been in the navy and we used to travel about the country quite a lot. He did not treat me kindly, though, and I left him soon after we came to Atlanta. I met a young man my the name of Golden Studstill about six months ago. He is a private at Fort McPherson. He paid me a good many attentions and I was attracted by him. He is the one who caused me to try to kill myself. We had a little quarrel the Fourth of July, but we made up afterward. On Saturday I worked on a switchboard from early in the morning until about 11 o'clock at night. When I came out Golden was waiting for me with three other fellows—Patrick Studstill, his brother; a young man by the name of Wood and William Briggs.

Quarreled on Auto Ride.

"We went automobile riding for a long time. Golden got very angry with me about something and was angry when he left me early Sunday morning. I tried to call him at Fort McPherson Sunday, but I couldn't get him. They were provoked at me out at the fort for calling so often. I finally became desperate and when I went to my room in Mrs. Bowers' house at 57 Fraser Street I swallowed the strychnine tablets. There must have been 25 or 30 of them.

"In a few minutes I was in terrible pain. I wanted to send a message to Golden, who was to have married me after I got my divorce. I thought it would be the last he ever would hear from me. I tried to write him, but the pain overcame me before I was finished."

Since her separation from her husband the young woman has been known by her maiden name. She lived for some time at 26 Capitol Avenue. She had lived at the residence of Mrs. Bowers only a week. She was left partially paralyzed by the convulsions induced by the poison, but this condition is wearing off gradually and the physicians expect an early recovery. Her attorney in the suit for divorce is W. H. Lewis. She was married May 31, 1909, and separated from her husband July 1, 1912.

While Studstill was in Waco at the

DEPARTMENT TO GOVERN BANKS PROPOSED

Bill, in Both House and Senate, Provides for Supervisor of State Institutions.

A bill providing for the creation of a department of banking to regulate and supervise approximately 600 State banks in Georgia was presented Monday to the House and Senate Committees on Banks and Banking by the Georgia Bankers' Association.

The bill, if passed, will revolutionize the method of supervision of State banks, as it will take such supervision entirely from the hands of the State Comptroller and his assistants.

Haynes McFadden, secretary of the Georgia Bankers' Association, said Monday morning that no lobby for the bill would be conducted; that it would be presented to the House and Senate Banking Committees, which may do as they see fit.

Bill Called Good One.

"The bill is a good one, we think," said Mr. McFadden, "and if passed will be a great benefit in the supervision of the State banks, which are now regulated by the State Comptroller and his two assistants.

"The present regulation and supervision is entirely inadequate, as is obvious, when it is brought out that these three men are supposed to conduct examinations of approximately 600 banks each year. Two examinations per year givese to each one of these men 400 inspections to make in 365 days."

The proposed bill provides for the creation of a department of banking, which shall be in charge of a superintendent appointed by the Governor for a term of four years, the first term beginning January 1, 1915, and expiring January 1, 1919.

Office to Pay $4,000 Year.

The superintendent shall receive a salary of $4,000 a year and shall have the power to appoint from time to time an assistant superintendent, who shall be ex-officio examiner, and such additional examiners and office assistants as may be required to discharge the duties of the office.

The assistant superintendent and special examiners shall be skilled accountants and familiar with the banking business. The assistant superintendent shall receive a salary of $2,000 per annum, while each assistant shall receive a salary of $1,800 per year.

Every bank, trust company and other corporation doing a banking business in the State, excluding private banks, copartnerships or voluntary associations and national banks, shall be subject to supervision by the State department.

Apartment Houses Must Quit Smoking

Chairman R. M. Harwell, of the City Smoke Commission, has warned department house owners who are resisting the anti-smoke law. These people were given until summer to remodel their furnaces so tenants might not be inconvenienced during cold weather. Now, Chairman Harwell says, a number of them have banded together to get the law repealed.

"The department house smoke evil is one of the worst in the city," he said.

"When they fire up in the fall they must comply with the law or be taken before the Recorder."

LEE'S ATTORNEY IS READY FOR WRIT FIGHT

Habeas Corpus Move to Free Negro in Phagan Case Due to Start Monday.

Habeas corpus proceedings in behalf of Newt Lee, negro night watchman at the National Pencil Factory, were promised Monday by the negro's attorney, Bernard L. Chappell. Settlement of this phase of the Phagan murder mystery will determine definitely the status of the negro.

It is known that the State regards Lee as a material witness in building up its case against Frank. The attitude of Mr. Chappell is that his client knows no more about he crime than he already has told, and should therefore be freed. Lee has told the detectives nothing which links any man directly with the crime. By the defense, his story is held to point to the guilt of Leo Frank no more than to the guilt of Conley.

The State, however, will fight any effort to give the negro his liberty. Solicitor Dorsey fears that Lee will get out of the jurisdiction of the court once he is permitted his freedom.

The battle over Lee is the only outward sign of activity in the Phagan case either by the defense or the prosecution, but it is known that the defense is busily engaged completing its case. One new witness was interviewed Saturday by Frank's lawyers, and his affidavit taken before a notary public. A strong net is being woven about Conley. The nature of the testimony is being kept secret, but it is known that the defense expects to free Frank by showing that it was Conley who committed the crime. The negro is said to be enmeshed in the testimony in the hands of the defense.

Despite rumors of another postponement, attorneys for the defense and prosecution said Monday that they would be ready to go ahead with the case at the time set for trial, July 28, and that they knew of no reason for further delay.

Jury to Consider Indicting Conley.

What was considered a direct reference to the Phagan case was made in the charge of Superior Judge George L. Bell to the Grand Jury Monday morning. He said he wanted to place particular emphasis on recent "horrible homicides" and urged the jury to probe deep in an effort to find clews that would lead to perpetrators.

The Grand Jury was organized at 9 o'clock Monday morning with W. D. Beattie foreman. Judge Bell made one of the shortest charges ever delivered in a Fulton County courtroom.

Immediately following the charge the jury went into executive session to consider bills presented by the Solicitor's office. After to-day's session the calendar of criminal business will be disposed of, and the jury will have every opportunity to take up any matters it might see fit.

A meeting will be called later in the week when a definite plan of action will be outlined for the term. It was regarded as likely that the Phagan case would be reopened and an indictment against Jim Conley considered.

Other matters that might be taken up are recent developments with the police department, in which eight patrolmen were suspended for alleged corruption, the counter charges of corruption made by them and charges of open vice.

Wind Storm Wrecks Waycross Churches

WAYCROSS, July 7.—Considerable damage was done in Waycross by a windstorm that swooped down on the city Sunday afternoon with no warning. Four churches were demolished and a dozen small houses blown from their foundations, three of the number turning completely over.

Trees and fences in all parts of the city were blown down and many windows and much plate glass were smashed. A three-story building used by negroes for their lodge meetings was so badly damaged it will have to be rebuilt.

BONUS FOR PONY CLUBS HELPS "TRAILERS"

Less Than Month Left for Contestants — Told to Imitate Milkman.

Three weeks and a few odd days remain of The Georgian and American pony contest. Not a moment of this time can be wasted by the boys and girls who want the beautiful little ponies which the whole city admired when they were paraded July 4.

The big bonus offer for clubs of five has expired. Nearly all the contestants worked hard, and turned in one or more clubs. Some turned in a dozen clubs. As rapidly as possible, these bonuses will be accredited, and the standings announced. Then it will be seen that some of the "trailers" now are out in front.

Good, solid work from now on will ccunt wonderfully. No doubt some of the contestants feel that they have seen every one possible—they can not think of the next place to turn for subscriptions. If they have been working conscientiously, this feeling is natural. But this is a large city. There are hundreds more, probably within walking distance of the contestants' homes, who have not been approached. Boys and girls now should cover their districts like the mailman does, a tireless house to house canvass will bring excellent results.

"Take your receipt books," advises the contest manager, "and go through the stubs. Tabulate carefully all those who took the paper for a month or two months. Note their expiration dates. Then see every one a few days before the time expires. Ten out of every eleven will renew. The sort of paper we are giving subscribers is the best possible help for the contestants. Their friends see they are getting their money's worth, and more."

Painter's Death Accidental, Says Coroner's Jury

JACKSONVILLE, July 7.—E. O. Painter, the wealthy Jacksonville fertilizer manufacturer, who lost his life in the St. Johns River on May 22, came to his death by accidental drowning, according to the Coroner's jury, which to-day completed the Painter inquest. Attorneys for the insurance companies, which carried life and accident policies on Painter, aggregating $1,178,000, were not permitted by Coroner C. D. Abbott to cross-examine witnesses summoned before the jury.

The inquest was delayed several weeks while chemical and pathological analyses of Painter's stomach, brain and other vital organs were being made by chemists in Baltimore, and later because attorneys for one of the insurance companies instituted injunction proceedings to secure possession of Painter's viscera. The jury's verdict was based largely on the report submitted by the Baltimore chemists, that no trace of poison had been found.

In eight of the trials Tuesday night police officers suspended by Chief Beavers in connection with the Auburn Avenue blind tiger scandal will be defendants.

COCHRAN TO ASK INVESTIGATION OF SCHOOLS

Fulton Legislator Believes There Has Been Extravagance at the State Agricultural Colleges.

Satisfied that mismanagement, incompetency or extravagance may have been prevalent in the various district agricultural colleges of late, Representative Ralph O. Cochran, of Fulton, will propose a resolution in the House calling for a rigid legislative probe into the same.

Mr. Cochran's idea is that the schools so far have failed pointedly to justify the great outlay of money required to keep them up.

The gentleman from Fulton will not charge any person with deliberate wrongdoing, but he does believe that the schools have not been conducted in a businesslike manner, and that they might, and should, be placed on a basis working to Georgia's greater advantage.

He calls attention to the deficits shown in the Treasurer's reports, and draws the seemingly warranted inference that the colleges are not returning to the State anything like the amount of money they should, considering the money the State spends upon them.

The eleven district schools are supposed to be self-supporting, in a way, but the returns, as indicated by the Treasurer's report, do not show them as approximating anything like that ideal status.

This proposed investigation, coming on the heels of the mix-up in the Experiment Station, is sure to attract widespread attention throughout Georgia, as every congressional district has one of these agricultural schools.

"I do not wish to be placed in the attitude of attacking the district schools,' said Mr. Cochran, discussing his resolution to-day. "I really want their co-operation in benefitting agricultural conditions in Georgia. I am trying to find out exactly what they are doing, and when that has been ascertained, we can proceed as the results indicate."

Marriage Law Is Scored by Judge as He Frees Child-Wife

Declaring the marriage laws instead of the divorce laws of Georgia were in need of a radical reform, Superior Judge George L. Bell directed a jury Monday morning to find a verdict in favor of pretty Mrs. M. S. Stevens, a 15-year-old bride of a year ago, who asked a divorce, alleging cruel treatment.

Judge Bell charged the jury:

"Gentlemen, this is not a case for moralizing. This young woman is entitled to a divorce. It is not the divorce laws that need reforming, but the marriage laws. There should be some way to prevent people marrying at the age this young woman did, and there should be some way for both parties to determine the kind of proposition they are taking on for life."

Senate Once More Denies Its Hall to Women Suffragists

Ineffectual efforts were made by Senator W. D. McNeil, of the Twenty-second district, Monday morning for reconsideration of the resolution granting the Georgia Woman's Suffrage Association the use of the Senate chamber on the evening of Wednesday and Thursday, July 9 and 10.

The Senator's motion to take the resolution from the table, although buttressed with the forceful declaration that the Senate had no right to deny such a request somimg from respectable citizens, was lost by a vote of 17 to 15.

Under the circumstances, I could not have the nerve to write to you. I don't think that I am worth 2 cents. That is the way I feel now. You may find someone that can do better than I. I am certain that you can. Good-bye.

Lovingly,

G. A. S.

In a postscript he added: "I am a mistake all through."

Valor of '61 Pastor's Theme to the Young

Lessons from the war between the States were inculcated at the West End Christian Church Sunday by the Rev. William C. Foster, the pastor, who appealed to young people in particular to fight life's battle with the valor exhibited by the soldiers of Robert E. Lee.

"Let us forget the hatred," Dr. Foster said, "but remember the bravery of our heroes."

Dr. Foster emphasized the practical advantages of country-wide education and deplored the fact that there were not enough schools in Georgia.

PLANTERS FIGHT TAX ON COTTON EXCHANGES

WASHINGTON, July 7.—Southern planters are protesting to the Senate Finance Committee against the provision in the tariff bill taxing cotton exchange dealers .05 per cent.

This provision was inserted in the tariff bill by Senator Simmons to meet the demand that there shall cease all gambling in cotton futures and on margins. It resulted from attempts to corner the cotton market made by speculators on the New York Cotton Exchange.

The planters contend that with such a tax, amounting to about 50 cents a bale of cotton, no exchange can continue to do business. The planters are opposed to the New York Exchange, but they want the New Orleans and other Southern cotton exchanges to continue.

Defend South's Exchange.

In this argument they present it is held that the New Orleans Exchange and other Southern exchanges are bullish on the cotton market and seek to hold the price to the advantage of the Southern grower. These exchanges make actual deliveries.

The New York Exchange is friendly to the spinners and is bearish, its purpose being to depress the price of cotton. It makes no actual delivery, but serves the spinners for their future needs. Its business is done through the interchange of purchase and sale notes.

Gives Power to England.

With the wiping out of the cotton exchange in this country, the cotton exchange at Liverpool, also bearish, will take command of the cotton market and fix the price just as the sugar market price is fixed in Holland.

It is contended that through the proposed tax a great injustice would be done the cotton growers who are now laboring under the disadvantage of competition with Egyptian cotton, which is of high grade and commands a better price than Southern cotton.

Egyptian cotton, which needs salt air, is being grown in the reclaimed lands of Salton Sea, California, and it is an active competitor of the Southern cotton, which is short on fiber.

Author Justified in Killing Unruly Negro

MACON, July 7.—Harry Stillwell Edwards, author and Macon postmaster, and his son, Prentiss Edwards, were justified in killing Harrison Newton, a negro farm hand, according to the verdict returned by the Coroner's jury.

Newton was shot at the Edwards farm, near Macon, Saturday night and died Sunday in the Macon Hospital. The negro, while intoxicated, had attacked his wife and children with an ax, when Edwards and his son went to their aid.

Assembly Asked to Increase Pensions

Appeal to the Georgia Legislature for an increase from $60 to $100 a year in pensions for Confederate veterans has been made by Mrs. A. J. Adkins.

Mrs. Adkins sets forth in her letter to the legislators that the increase of pension is entirely logical as the declining years of the veterans make it more and more difficult for them to add to their own support. While $5 a month is acceptable, she says, $8 and a fraction is better.

CLOSING OF BANK INVOLVES 40 MILLIONS

One of the Oldest Institutions in Pittsburg Ordered by U. S. Comptroller to Suspend.

PITTSBURG, July 7.—The First-Second National Bank of Pittsburg, one of the city's oldest banking institutions, closed its doors to-day by direction of the Acting Comptroller of the Currency. The amount involved is said to be between $24,000,000 and $40,000,000. One report is that the amount will reach $200,000,000.

The Pittsburg Clearing House had a special meeting last night to consider the impending failure and today another conference was held.

Hundreds of depositors, many of them foreigners employed in the great steel mills, flocked to the bank early to-day but a squad of police kept every one moving.

The First and Second National Banks combined last March and occupied a new 25-story building.

A typewritten notice on the doors stated the institution was in the hands of National Bank Examiner Samuel M. Hann and Sheriff Smith.

A director of the bank to-day made the following statement:

"The officers and directors are a unit in maintaining that a great injustice has been done and that the bank is solvent at this moment. We are also convinced that all claims will be paid in full. If the Treasury Department, operating through the Comptroller of the Currency, had not interfered and had not subjected the bank to a rigid examination by special examiners who were not able to judge values of property and securities in this community, we would have been able to work out to success our problems."

Following the news of the closing of the First-Second National Bank, a steady run started on the Pittsburg Bank for Savings, which also is controlled by the Kuhn interests.

McKeesport, Pa., Bank Closes, Also.

PITTSBURG, July 7.—The First National Bank of McKeesport closed its doors at 10:30 this morning.

"On account of the First-Second National Bank of Pittsburg asking for a reeciver it is thought best for all of our depositors to close this bank for the present."

MACON SCANDAL CLIMAX DUE IN LIBEL SUITS

MACON, July 7.—New sensations are expected in the Macon church scandal, in which Professor Frank M. Charlton, choir leader, and Mrs. Effie Lester, secretary of the Ladies' Aid Society, of the First Christian Church, were exonerated Sunday of all charges of wrongdoing, when Attorney Claud Estes, representing Mrs. Lester, and the attorneys for Professor Charlton bring suits for slander in the courts. The damage suits probably will be filed within the next few days, according to statements today of parties involved.

That Macon is promised one of the sharpest legal fights in her history is certain, it is said, as Attorney Julian Urquart, retained by Mrs. Jenkins, one of the accusers, will contest every point of the plaintiffs in defense of his client.

Cleared at Open Meeting.

The aftermath of the affair follows the exoneration of the accused parties at an open session of the First Christian Church Sunday morning, when the report of the elders' investigating committee was read to the congregation.

The session was dramatic. Immediately following the sermon the congregation of the little echurch went into executive session, with Elder Lenoir Erwin, member of the investigating committee, presiding. Seated in the choir directly behind Mr. Erwin was Professor Charlton, slightly pale, but otherwise composed. Near the front was Mrs. Lester, who watched the proceedings with remarkable composure. Mr. Lester sat beside his wife.

Report of Inquiry Complete.

When Elder Roper, chairman of the investigating committee, was called upon to read the report, the congregation leaned forward as if to catch every word of the elder.

The report, as predicted, went into the minutest detail of the whole affair, described every phase of the investigation, pointed out the alleged shallowness of the charges and recommended the complete vindication of the accused.

Elder Roper paused when he had finished reading. There was a dead silence for fully a half minute and then Elder Erwin arose and in solemn tones announced an open meeting for the free discussion of the report.

Woman Speaks for Charlton.

"Speak now or forever hold your peace," said Mr. Erwin.

There was a moment of silence, broken at length by the voice of a woman.

"I have known Professor Charlton for fifteen years," she said, "and in that time I have known him to be a perfect gentleman."

The speaker was Mrs. E. T. Gibson, a member of the Methodist Church and formerly of Bloomington, Ill., the choir leader's old home.

Mrs. Gibson was the only person in the audience to accept the elders' invitation to speak. Elder Irwin then put the question of the guilt of the accused parties to the congregation.

Exoneration Is Unanimous.

Practically every one in the audience arose on the motion to exonerate Professor Charlton and Mrs. Lester. Not one stood when the "nay" vote was put.

Immediately following the vote, the Rev. Mr. Anderson called upon the congregation to sing, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," after which a prayer, one of the most fervent ever heard in the little church, was offered by the pastor. While the vote was being taken Professor Charlton and Mrs. Lester retired from the auditorium. They were greeted by scores of friends following the close of the service.

Place Faith in Accused.

"Our conclusion is," it is stated in the report, "that the parties are innocent of the charges made or others of like nature. We have as much confidence in the integrity and Christian character of both parties as we ever have had and this is the first time we have ever been given occasion to question them."

It is recommended further that the report be published in The Christian Builder and copies for publication be furnished the newspapers and that they become a part of the church records. The report is signed by L. M. Erwin, W. H. Roper, A. W. Smith, A. M. Erwin, Leroy M. Anderson. Elders of the First Christian Church.

Autoist Rams Tree To Save Child's Dog

CHICAGO, July 7.—Robert E. Packard, a wealthy resident of Sheridan Road, is seriously injured and his automobile a wreck as the result of risking his life to save a 7-year-old girl's pet dog.

Packard was driving through Lincoln Park yesterday afternoon when the little dog blocked his way. Making a sudden turn, Packard kept from running over the dog, but sent his machine crashing against a tree.

FLEET BRIDE DARES ANY WOMAN TO OUTRUN HER

Mrs. Grace Murray, who issues sweeping foot race challenge.

She Has Taken First Prize in Every Sprinting Contest Since a Little Girl.

Attention, brides and matrons of Atlanta!

A challenge is issued to you who are fleet of foot for either a hundred-yard sprint or an endurance race by Mrs. Grace Murray, of 222 Rawson Street.

Mrs. Murray is the pretty bride of Stewart Murray, of the Cruickshank Cigar Company. At the annual picnic of the Atlanta Scottish Association July 4, at the grounds of the Burns Club, Mrs. Murray took first prize in the married women's race. She also took first prize in the women's egg and ladle race.

At the picnic of the association last year, Mrs. Murray, then Miss Grace Beddingfield, was winner of the girls' race. She has taken first place in other races, too, and her friends declare she can outrun any one of her sex in Atlanta. She herself says she is willing at any time to enter into a race with any of Atlanta's married women who think they can run.

Mrs. Murray also is a swimmer and diver of ability.

M'NAB'S SLAVERY REPORT GIVEN OUT

Kahn, California, Again Declares Justice Is Being Blocked, and Scores President.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—The publication to-day of former District Attorney McNab's report to Attorney General McReynolds, dated May 21, in the Caminetti-Diggs white slave cases, giving the details of the alleged seduction of the Warrington and Norris girls by young Caminetti and Diggs, aroused new interest in the cases.

Representative Kahn, of California, and other members of the California delegation declared the House Judiciary Committee was wrong in suppressing the McNab report. In the committee report before the House, those parts of the McNab report dealing with the methods used to lead the girls astray; the alleged attempt to suborn perjury and the revelation that Caminetti's counsel had told McNab that Caminetti probably would plead guilty were omitted.

Kahn declared to-day he would demand that all the correspondence in the case be made public. He declared the McNab report justified his charge that a ystematized effort was being made to block justice, and that the explanation of the President and Attorney General McReynolds in the case was not well founded.

BULGAR VICTORY COSTS SERVIA 11,000 LIVES

Three Regiments Annihilated in Great Battle Lasting Two Days and Three Nights.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOFIA, July 7.—The tide of victory in the second Balkan war has swung to the Bulgarians. Signal successes are reported.

Eleven thousand Servians of the western wing of the Servian army were reported killed in an engagement near Deslinici, 8,000 others were wounded, many prisoners were taken and the balance were put to flight, according to a dispatch from General Savoff to Czar Ferdinand to-day. It was one of the decisive battles of modern times, according to the Bulgarian Government.

Three Servian regiments were annihilated in the battle which started along the Bregalnitza River in central Macedonia. The fight lasted two days and three nights before the exhausted Servian soldiers gave way before the repeated charges.

The battlefield, which covers an area of nearly 20 square miles, was strewn with dead and wounded, all of whom were left behind.

The Bulgarian casualties were not given.

Intrigue by Austria Blamed for Conflict.

BERLIN, July 7.—A diplomatic intrigue engineered by Austria is responsible for the second Balkan war between Servia, Greece and Montenegro on one hand and Bulgaria on the other, according to a telegram received to-day from Sofia.

Dr. Daneff, one of the leading Bulgarian statesmen, is responsible for the accusation that Austria led Bulgaria to believe that Austrian support would be given Bulgaria in any dispute that country might have with any other of the "allies."

When war was inevitable, Austria withdrew this promise of support on the ground that it might endanger the peace of Europe.

Greeks Ask Powers To Halt Massacres.

ATHENS, July 7.—Greece has appealed to the Powers to prevent further outrages by Bulgarians in Macedonia.

Dispatches from Salonika to-day stated that the Bulgarians had massacred and tortured hundreds of Greek women and children near the town of Negrita. All the able-bodied men are fighting in the Greek armies and there was no one to protect the defenseless families.

Lack of Funds May Halt Balkan War.

ROME, July 7.—Lack of funds probably will put an end to the new Balkan war. All the States in the Balkan league are close to bankruptcy. The powers are expected to refuse any more loans in order to compel the cessation of hostilities.

COATED TONGUE MEANS LAZY LIVER

When your doctor looks to see if your tongue is coated, he is trying to find out if your liver is working properly. A few years ago doctors had to prescribe calomel—there was nothing else to give.

Recently in many sections of the country Dodson's Liver Tone has practically taken the place of calomel as a liver remedy. Dodson's Liver Tone is mild, pleasant tasting and harmless—which makes it a fine medicine for use when your children become bilious and constipated. But the most remarkable feature of Dodson's Liver Tone is the fact that all druggists who sell it, guarantee it absolutely. The druggist will return your money without argument if a bottle fails to give entire satisfaction.

Price, 50 cents. We suggest that you get a bottle to-day and have it ready for the next member of your family whose liver goes wrong.

U. S. Now Is Fourth In Naval Strength

WASHINGTON, July 7.—The United States is now occupying fourth place among the navies of the world and not third, as is generally supposed.

The real loss of prestige to the navy by reason of the failure to keep up the naval construction program is shown very clearly in Brassey's Manual, whose rating of the nations was discussed generally to-day by officers at the Navy Department.

England 29, Germany 19, France 17, United States 13. Japan is not given.

Lynching Story of 'Seer' Proves Fake

DALTON, July 7.—The fortune teller who informed Mrs. Will Grady that her husband, who disappeared from home, had been hanged by three men and his body disposed of, causing her to come to Dalton to get warrants for the arrest of several men she suspected, has been shown up as a fake by a letter from Grady, who had gone to Alabama.

Mrs. Grady, a bride of three months, was overjoyed and hastened here to stop a search party she thought was looking for her husband's body.

SALE OF A., B. & A. ROAD AROUSES ASSEMBLY

The coming sale of the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad, under foreclosure proceedings, and the rumor that the Louisville and Nashville has its eyes upon it, has started something of a panic among Georgia legislators, particularly as the present Legislature likely will consider seriously the problem of the Western and Atlantic's re-lease in 1919.

There are two parties in the present Legislature with respect to the Western and Atlantic Railway. One favors the re-lease of the State's road as it now stands, the other the extension of the road to the Atlantic seaboard.

If the L. & N. gobbles the A., B. & A., it is held by some that it thereby will have strategic advantage over the State road in the matter of extension to the sea. Indeed, if the L. & N. gets the A., B. & A., it is predicted that the railroad map of Georgia likely will be pretty well changed within a short time.

There are those in the General Assembly who are advocating the purchase of the A., B. & A. by the State, thus extending the W. & A. to the sea. Others hold that the State should keep its hands off the A., B. & A. road and confine itself to such railroad property as it now possesses, with its fine terminal facilities in Atlanta and Chattanooga.

If the L. & N. gets the A., B. & A., it is figured by some legislators that it immediately provide for entry into Atlanta by some other way than that over the State road, as it now comes in. If this is done, it is contended that the W. & A. will will be pretty well put out of busines.

Ten Collegians Are Believed Drowned

BUFFALO, July 7.—Ten young men, all said to be graduates of English and Canadian colleges, are believed to have ben drowned last night in Lake Erie just off Crescent Beach opposite Buffalo.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Two Headliners at Forsyth.

Two headliners will be offered with five other features at the Forsyth this week. There will be the usual daily bargain matinees, and, of course, the ever popular night performances.

Cecil Leane and his company in "The Moving Picture Man" will be one of the headline features. Miss Eva Taylor and her company of three people will present "After the Wedding," one of the cleverest farce sketches in the catalog of good things.

Among the other acts will be Warren and Blanchard, the black face comedians; the pretty Grace Sisters, who are expert dancers; Hines and Fox, the singer and the piano player; Kennedy and Melrose, the bouncing gymnasts, and Houghton and Houghton, who are expert trick bicyclists.

Talking Pictures at Grand.

Ten cents will pay the way to see and hear Edison's Talking Pictures and the highest grade of first-run motion pictures at any time from 2:30 in the afternoon until 10:30 at night, at the Grand during the week that starts this afternoon.

A big program of the talking pictures was put on last week at higher prices and served to draw large attendance after the pictures had proven their value. The management decided on another week, with a change of subjects, and because of the interest in the pictures and because of the tremendous seating capacity of the theater, determined upon the policy of continuous operation at the dime price.

The Biograph, Vitagraph, Lubin, Selig, Pathe, Essanay, Kalem, Edison and Melies' releases will be presented with entire change of program daily. The Talking Pictures will be changed every other day.

"Along Broadway" at the Bijou.

The musical comedy attractions that are playing the Bijou these days have become immensely popular with patrons of amusement. Each week brings a new company, presenting a new piece, and it is safe to say that nothing in the amusement line has pleased Bijou patrons better than the attractions that are playing from week to week. The bill that is being offered this weeks is the 1912 Cabaret Revue, "Along Broadway," which will be presented by a big company of fun-makers, headed by Will Stanton and Rosalind May.

Edison Talking Pictures Grand daily 2:30 to 10:30. All seats 10 cents.

By JAMES B. NEVIN

The Legislature, even as a tentative proposition, already is finding the matter of tax reform a perplexing problem, and one calculated to give it much trouble before it is adjusted.

Particularly is the question of tax equalization bothersome and full of difficulty.

Mr. Lipscombe, of Clarke, has an equalization bill pending in the House, and Mr. Cole, of Bartow, and Mr. Swift, of Muscogee, have inheritance tax bills.

The former was drawn by one of the most eminent lawyers in Georgia —an ex-Supreme Court Justice—and is thought to be as nearly perfect as such a measure can be made. Members are non-commital with respect to it, however.

The latter two bills, both carefully prepared, seem to have attracted considerable favorable attention, and both have the backing of the administration, in a general way, but whether either will pass is problematical.

The Legislature plainly is inclined to reform the tax laws, but it just as plainly does not know exactly how to go about it or where to begin.

"One trouble in the situation," said a well-known member of the House to-day, "is the real or imaginary opposition of the farmers to a board of tax equalizers.

"As a matter of fact, I do not believe the farmers, in any very large proportion, anyway, oppose the tax equalization idea. Perhaps a few of them do, but I fail to see where any honest farmer—and the majority of Georgia farmers are honest—should.

"Instead of putting up the farmers' taxes, an equalization act much more likely would put them down. If assessments were adjusted in Georgia as they should be, the total would be so much larger than it is now that taxes, in the average amount paid, would come down rather than go up—and the farmer would find himself immensely benefited by this. Instead of a State rate of 5 mills, if taxes were equalized, we probably should be able to get along with a rate of 2 1-2 or 3 mills.

"So, if a farmer's lands were raised —they might not be, and would not be in many cases, of course—a trifle, the total of his taxes likely would be less than now.

"The purpose of a tax equalization act is to catch the tax-dodgers, and to catch them in the open. Such a measure would catch them, too. And if the dodgers were made to come to time, the present taxpayers of the State would find themselves charged up with less of the public expense instead of more.

"It is to be hoped that the present Legislature will pass some genuine tax reform measures, even if it does nothing else during the present session."

Contrary to general expectation and prediction, the Tippins bill, so called in the last Legislature, has not been re-introduced in the present House.

It has been stated, time and again, that the prohibitionists of Georgia generally look upon this measure as useless and of doubtful judgment at this time, and a sort of "let-well-enough-alone" sentiment apears to be spreading among temperance advocates.

The truth of the matter is, prohibitionists seem fairly well satisfied with the status of things in Georgia, and agitation in the present Legislature—or, anyway, in the present session—seems unlikely.

The Chattanooga News recently stated, in an editorial praising Atlanta, that Georgia has the best enforced prohibition laws of any prohibition State in the nation, and far better than Tennessee. This seems to be agreed to all around, and the fact that the Tippins bill has not been re-introduced, notwithstanding the confident predictions that it would be, lends color to the thought that prohibitionists in Georgia incline to agree with The Chattanooga News.

The old expression, "I wouldn't vote for that fellow for dog catcher," has no humiliating significance in Savannah.

There the office of dog catcher is an ancient and honora'le institution, and one to which folks generally look up in indicated awe.

Announcement of the appointment of E. H. Henry as official dog catcher for the city of Savannah, in compliance with the ordinance adopted by City Council at its last meeting, has been made by Mayor R. J. Davant. Bond in the sume of $160 has been furnished by Henry, who begins his official duties at once.

The catcher will be provided with a wagon, in which a crate will be placed to retain the impounded animals. A net will also be provided for use in catching the dogs, and a "pound" will be constructed at police headquarters.

As soon as the equipment can be completed the catcher will start on his rounds.

To Mr. Adams, of Hall, belongs the honor and distinction of starting the House roll call in the way it should go.

His name, like Abou Ben Adhem's, leads all the rest, and many a time he has set the fashion in voting, to see himself vindicated in the final round-up.

Adams rarely is absent from his seat in the House. When Clerk Bolfeuillet begins the call every morning, Adams is the first to answer "present," unless Mr. Edmondson, of Brooks, beats him to it and moves that he roll call be dispensed with.

The last name to be called is "Mr. Speaker." He generally votes one way or the other, although Speakers many times have inclined to refrain from going on record unless compelled to.

Suffragist Predicts Ballots for Bullets

That all wars since historical times began have taken a toll of 15,000,000,000 lives, was the statement made Sunday by Dr. Thomas E. Green, a lyceum lecturer stopping at the Hotel Ansley.

"Militarism is the burden of the nations," said Dr. Green, "and I look to woman suffrage to lift it from the shoulders of humanity. Equal suffrage is a stepping stone to universal peace, for when it comes the battles of the world will be fought with ballots instead of bullets."

Several bills of importance were introduced. Following is the list:

House to Allow Women Use of Hall.

A bill to this effect was introduced by Representative John Y. Smith, of Fulton, Monday morning. A motion to refer it to the Rules and Floor Committee met with defeat. Under the House rules the resolution was laid on the desk until to-morrow.

The suffragists busied themselves early Monday morning. A letter was laid on the desk of each member of the House urging him to grant them the courtesy. It is believed the House will grant the request.

A new charter for Atlanta was filed by the Fulton County delegation in the House Monday. It provides for the present division of ten wards and allows the Mayor to succeed himself for one term.

An invitation from the Chamber of Commerce of Augusta, inviting members of the Legislature to visit Augusta, was adopted.

The House concurred with the Senate in an invitation to Herbert Myrick to address a joint session of the two bodies July 15.

A resolution was adopted inviting Senator Hoke Smith to address the Legislature.

Guarantee Closes Up Its Richmond Branch

RICHMOND, VA., July 7.—The crisis in the affairs of the Guarantee Trust and Banking Company of Atlanta is reflected here in the form of a notice on the door of the company's Richmond branch reading:

"Office closed. Direct all communications to the home office in care of the Guarantee Trust and Banking Company, box 1424, Atlanta, Ga."

The company also had branches in Norfolk, Lynchburg and Roanoke. Complaints indicate that a considerable number of the company's obligations are outstanding in Virginia.

Chief Believes Park Fire Was Incendiary

The burning of the commissionaire stand at Grant Park early Sunday morning has started an investigation by Fire Chief Cummings as to the probable incendiary firing of the building.

The building said to have been worth $10,000, carried a small amount of insurance. The first floor held a soda fountain and confectionery stand. The upper floor was used as a dancing pavilion.

Atlanta Pastor Weds Two a Day for Week

GEORGIA WOMAN SUFFRAGE BODY FACES ROW

Split in Atlanta League, Whose Members Are Barred, Will Be Brought Before Convention.

Little hope was seen Monday for a settlement of the strife in the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association until the convention here July 9 and 10.

Within their ranks disagreements have arisen which are not so easily disposed of. One side is led by Mrs. M. L. McLendon, president of the Atlanta Civic League and the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association, and the other by Mrs. F. S. Whiteside, whom a number have urged for official recognition.

Parade Cause of Trouble.

The trouble began early this year when advocates of woman suffrage were anticipating the parade in Washington. Mrs. McLendon was president of the Atlanta Civic League and Mrs. Amelia B. Woodall was secretary. The officers of the organization were to be the representatives in Washington, but it was time for re-election.

The election was postponed several times, until Mrs. McLendon and Mrs. Woodall automatically became the official representatives. On their return they were met by the charge from Mrs. Whiteside that they had manipulated postponements that just such things might result.

New League Is Formed.

And the story is that Mrs. Ida B. McClellan, in a speech, precipitated the actual split.

This situation, some time ago, resulted in Mrs. McLendon and her supporters in the Atlanta Civic League forming the Atlanta Equal Suffrage League.

Now, on the eve of the meeting of the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association, the members of the Atlanta Civic League have been denied admission on the grounds that they have not paid up their dues.

Efforts to bring about an amicable adjustment have failed. It is asserted that a rival organization to the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association may be formed.

PURE MILK FOR ONLY 31 POOR BABIES

The Mothers' Congress, which has inaugurated a campaign for pure milk for babies through the hot months adopted the unique method Monday of distributing milk bottles at grocery stores for the collection of pennies and nickels with which to buy milk.

Mrs. John Rowlett, 186 East Pine Street, who heads the congress, said the campaign would be the best ever conducted for the health of Atlanta infants.

So far but 31 of the hundreds of babies of the poor have ben provided for by the fund. Certificates calling for milk throughout the three summer months have been given the mothers of the infants.

"We want every baby in Atlanta to have good, pure milk through the hot spell," Mrs. Rowlett said, "and, if possible, we shall see that this is accomplished."

Sunday, Mrs. Rowlett said, she went to the home of Mrs. W. J. Denson, at 4 Ella Street, to see a baby that had been reported to her. The visit was too late. The baby was dead, and the mother sobbed regret that aid had not come sooner.

Doctors' Opinions About POSTUM

Are best expressed in their own words

Writing under date of May 13, 1913, one physician says:

"From past experience I have become a strong friend of Postum. I am now advising its use over that of coffee altogether, and find that most of those who give Postum a trial become users of it.

"It is however sometimes very hard or impossible to get folks to purchase something when they 'don't know anything about it,' and 'don't want to throw away money on a chance of liking it.'

"Now, it occurs to me these people are not to be criticised for such feelings, but at the same time I am sure many of them would become friends of Postum if they could but have a sample of it placed in their hands.

"If you think this is a good suggestion, and will send me samples from time to time, I will see that they are placed among my patients where they will do the most good, for I believe it is to their interest to drink Postum rather than coffee. Postum is used in our home, but we buy it of our grocer, and we expect to keep right on doing so."

Thousands of coffee drinkers are victims of headache, nervousness, biliousness, heart trouble and indigestion, without knowing the cause.

More and more, physicians are naming coffee as a common cause of these ills. Not every physician, however, finds time to send a sample following his prescription of

Announcing the First Showing in Atlanta of
The New Fall Suits
There Are Many Interesting Style Points About Them

The women of Atlanta may see now, may select now, the suits that will be fashionable this fall!

They are here in a quantity and variety that amount to a DISPLAY of the new styles.

Rather early, you ask?

No! We would be falling short of what is expected of us did we not show AUTHENTIC styles the moment AUTHENTIC styles are adopted.

So here they are!

And the woman going to the mountains, to the "cool spots" of America will appreciate not only the newness of these suits, but also the somewhat greater weight of them.

But what are the new styles?

Only hints here, we would rather your eyes take in all the interesting points.

Coats are longer, 38 to 42 inches this fall. Cutaways are prominent, perhaps we should say eminent.

They are varied, too—a cutaway, pointed at the back, will have a bit of fullness at the side waist that you are accustomed to associate only with a blouse—novel, distinctive.

Skirts—the tendency is toward "dressy drapes." They are more marked than ever, also more graceful than ever, a sort of evolution of draping. And the slashed skirt is favored; some of the most charming models have skirts slashed four and six inches.

Materials also show the new scheme of things. You will term them "fancy." Even soft-finished cloths show self-stripes; crepons are revived—more, they are given wonderful newness and beauty by smart weavers, who put little blocks and squares and figures in them; Bayadere poplins are as attractive as can be; and velour broadcloths and, for the more tailored suits, men's-wear serges.

And the rich, beautiful colors you may choose from—mahogany, cinnamon, amethyst, prune, navy, of course, a darker Copenhagen than we know and green.

However, these are but the details, your pleasure will come of seeing how these details have been embodied into elegant suits new and out-of-the-ordinary.

There will be no importuning you to buy—we want you to enoy the privilege that is yours, to see the AUTHENTIC styles in fall suits.

THE WOMAN THOU GAVEST ME

By reading the synopsis and installment printed here of the most daring serial of the year you can continue it in Hearst's Magazine for July, just out.

FULL SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS

DANIEL O'NEILL, a powerful, self-made man, forces his only daughter, Mary, into a loveless marriage with the impecunious and profligate Lord Raa, so that his ambition to have his descendants the rightful heirs of the one earldom in Elian may be realized. Mary, a convent-raised young woman, shocked to find her husband a man of sordid, sensual passions, refuses utterly to have anything to do with him until such time as he can prove himself worthy of her love. During the honeymoon abroad Alma Lier, a divorcee who had been expelled from the convent Mary attended in Rome, attaches herself to the party, and makes the "honeymoon trip" a long series of slights and insults for Lady Raa.

At last Lady Raa becomes certain of the infidelity of her husband and his misconduct with Alma Lier. On her return to London Mary encounters her old playfellow, Martin Conrad, who has returned from his triumphant expedition to the Antarctic. Drawn into ever-closer relations with the only man for whose friendship she ever cared, Mary finally awakes to the fact that she is hopelessly in love with Martin. Terrified by this knowledge, and finding herself more and more in love with Martin, she determines to run away from the cause of her distress, and go home.

Mary's home-coming to Castle Raa is a sad affair. Her husband fills the tumble-down old mansion with hith his fast friends from London, including Alma Lier, who assumes control of the household. Ultimately the illness of her father offers Mary excuse for escape from the intolerable environment. But before visiting her old home Mary appeals in turn to her Bishop and to her father's lawyer, only to be told that neither Church nor State can offer any relief from her false position. She returns next day to Castle Raa to find that Martin is arriving for a farewell visit, and that by Alma Lier's deceitful scheming the whole house party has gone off for a few days' cruise.

During her three days alone with her lover Mary fights a grim battle with temptation only to find on the last night that her faith in renunciation and the laws of the Church is a fragile thing compared with her overwhelming love for this pure-hearted man. With Martin's passionate words, "You are my real wife. I am your real husband," ringing in her brain she forgets everything else, and with strong steps walks across the corridor to Martin's bedroom. This is the action which Martin has advised as being the only course open to them which is sure to bring the one result they are determined to attain—Mary's divorce from Lord Raa.

Mary determines, after the departure of Martin Conrad, to hide herself in London. She is driven by fear of Lord Raa's discovery of her unfaithfulness to him; she is equally afraid of the venomous tongue of Alma Lier. She is no sooner settled in a cheap little boarding house in London than a great hue and cry is raised by her father. Of all persons, it is Mildred, that one truest friend of her convent days, who ferrets her out; but for Mary's sake she breaks a vow and refuses to give away her trail. Then comes the report of the loss of Martin's ship in the Antarctic. Desperate with grief and fearful for the unborn child which she hopes shall reconcile her to her empty life and typify her great love for Martin, she flees from Mildred to a still more obscure corner of London.

I asked the old driver how long it would take me to get to Ilford. He looked at me again and said," 'B out 'our and 'alf I should say by the looks of you and you carrying the biby."

By HALL CAINE.

MY NEW quarters were in the poorer district which stands at the back of Bayswater.

The street was a cul-de-sac (of some ten small houses on either side), which was blocked up at the farther end by the high wall of a factory for the "humanization" of milk, and opened out of a busy thoroughfare of inferior shops like a gulley way off a noisy coast. My home in this street was in number one.

My room, which was of fair size, was on the first floor and had two windows to the street, with yellow holland blinds and white muslin curtains.

The furniture consisted of a large bed, a horse hair sofa, three cane-bottomed chairs, a chest of drawers (which stood between the windows), and a mirror over the mantelpiece, which had pink paper, cut into fanciful patterns, over the gilt frame, to keep off the flies.

The floor was covered with linoleum, but there were two strips of carpet, one before the fire and the other by the bed; the walls were papered by a bright red paper representing peonies in bloom; and there were three pictures—a portrait of a Welsh preacher, an engraving entitled "Feed My Sheep" (showing Jesus carrying a lamb), and a memorial card of some member of the family of the house, in the form of a tomb with a weeping angel on either side.

I paid five shillings a week for my room, and, as this included the use of kettle, cooking utensils and crockery, I found to my great delight at the end of the first week that providing for myself (tea, bread and butter and eggs being my principal food) I had spent only ten shillings altogether, which, according to my present needs, left me enough for my time of waiting and several weeks beyond it.

Every morning I went out with a little hand bag to buy my provisions in the front street, and every afternoon I took a walk in the better part of Bayswater and even into the park (Hyde Park), which was not far off, but never near to Piccadilly, or so far east as Bloomsbury, lest I should meet Sister Mildred or be recognized by the old boarders.

Finding it necessary to account for myself, just as at the boarding house, I had adhered to my former name, but said I was the widow of a commander lately lost at sea, which was as near to the truth as I dare venture.

She Tells of Her Coming Motherhood.

I had also made no disguise of the fact that I was expecting a child, a circumstance which secured me much sympathy from the womanly women who were now my neighbors.

They were all worthy women, generally the wives of men working in the milk factory; and therefore the life of our street was very regular.

At five in the morning you heard the halting step of the old "knocker up" who went up and down the street tapping at the bedroom windows with a long pole like a fishing rod. A little before six you heard the clashing of many front doors and the echoing footsteps of the men going to their work. At half-past seven you heard the whoop of the milkman and the rattling of his cans. At half-past eight you heard the little feet of the children, like the pattering of rain, going off to the Board School round the corner. And a little after four in the afternoon you heard the wild cries of the entire juvenile community let loose from lessons, the boys running iron hoops and the girls skipping rope.

After that, our street hummed like a beehive, with the women, washed and combed, standing knitting at their open doors or exchanging confidences across the areas until darkness fell, and each of the mothers called her children in to bed, as an old hen in the farmyard clucks up her chickens.

These good creatures were very kind to me. Having satisfied themselves from observation to my habits that I was "respectable," they called me "our lady," and I could not help hearing that I was a "nice young thing," though it was a little against me that I did not go to church or chapel, and had confessed to being a Catholic—for several of our families (including that of my landlady) were members of the Welsh Zion Chapel far away.

Such was the life of the little human cage to which I had confined myself, but I had an inner life that was all my own and very sweet to me.

Getting Ready for The Newcomer.

During the long hours of every day in which I was alone I occupied myself in the making of clothes for my baby—buying linen and flannel and worsted, and borrowing patterns from my Welsh landlady.

This stimulated my tenderness toward the child that was to come, for the heart of a young mother is almost infantile, and I hardly know whether to laugh or cry when I think of the childish things I did and thought and said to myself in those first days when I was alone in my room in that back street in Bayswater.

Thus long before the baby was born I had christened her. At first I wished to call her Mary, not because I cared for that name myself, but because Martin had said it was the most beautiful in the world. In the end, however, I called her Isabel Mary (because Isabel was my mother's name, and she had been a far better woman than I was), and as I finished my baby's garments one by one I used to put them away in their drawer, saying to myself, "That's Isabel Mary's binder," or "Isabel Mary's christening-robe," as the case might be.

I dare say it was all very foolish. There are tears in my eyes when I think of it now, but there were none then, for, though there were moments when, thinking of Martin, I felt as if life were forever blank and bare, I was almost happy in my poor surroundings, and if it were a cage I had fixed myself in, there was always a bird singing inside of it—the bird that sang in my own bosom.

"When Isabel Mary comes, everything will be all right," I used to think.

This went on for many weeks, and I think it might have gone on until my time was full but for something which, occurring under my eyes, made me tremble with the fear that the life I was living and the hope I was cherishing were really very wrong and selfish.

Of my landlady, Mrs. Williams, I saw very little. She was a rather hard but no doubt heavily laden woman, who had "to do" for a swarm of children, besides two young men lodgers who lived in the kitchen and slept in the room behind mine. Her husband was a quiet man (a carter at the dairy), whom I never saw at all except on the staircase at 10 o'clock at night, when, after winding the tall clock on the landing, he went upstairs to bed in his stocking feet.

Emmerjane, the Family Drudge.

But the outstanding member of the family for me was a shock-headed girl of 14 called Emmerjane, which was a running version of Emma Jane.

I understand that Emmerjane was the illegitimate daughter of Mrs. Williams' dead sister, and that she had been born in Carnarvon, which still shimmered in her memory in purple and gold.

Emmerjane was the drudge of the family, and I first saw her in the street at dusk, mothering a brood of her little cousins.

Afterward she became my drudge also—washing my floor, bringing up my coal and cleaning my grate for sixpence a week, and giving me a great deal of information about my neighbors for nothing.

Thus she told me, speaking broad cockney with a Welsh accent, that the people opposite were named Wagstaffe and that the creaking noise I heard was that of a mangle, which Mrs. Wagstaffe had to keep because her husband was a drunkard.

But the greatest interest of this weird little woman, who had a premature knowledge of things a child ought not to know, was in a house half way down the street on the other side, where steam was always coming from the open door to the front kitchen.

The people who lived there were named Jones. Mrs. Jones "washed" and had a bed-ridden old mother (with two shillings from the parish) and a daughter named Maggie.

Maggie Jones, who was eighteen, and very pretty, used to work in the dairy, but the foreman had taken "advantage of her," and she had just had a baby.

This foreman was named Owen Owens, and he lived at the last number on our side, where two unmarried sisters "kept house" for him and sat in the "singing seat" at Zion.

Maggie thought it was the sisters' fault that Owen Owens did not marry her, so she conceived a great scheme for "besting" them, and this was the tragedy which, through Emmerjane's quick little eyes and her Cockney Welsh tongue, came to me in instalments day by day.

When her baby was a month old Maggie dressed it up "fine" and took it to the photographer's for its "card di visit." The photographs were a long time coming, but when they came they were "heavenly lovely" and Maggie "cried to look at them."

Then she put one in an envelope and addressed it to Owen Owens, and though it had only to cross the street she went out after dark to a pillar-box a long way off lest anybody should see her posting it.

Next day she said: "He'll have it now, for he always comes home to dinner. He'll take it up to his bedroom, look you, and stand it on the washboard, and if either of those sisters touch it he'll give them what's what."

After that she waited anxiously for an acknowledgment and every time the postman passed down our street her pretty pale face would be at the door, saying, "Anything for me to day?" or "Are you sure there's nothing for me, postman?"

Home Cooking

By MAY IRWIN.

THAT the fastidious should look with distrust, if not disgust, upon the hotel or restaurant made hash or ragout, or stew, or minced dish, is quite within my understanding and sympathy. But it is quite different in the well regulated home.

My husband and sons, who are rather spoiled as far as the things of the table are concerned, enjoy beef stews and roast beef hash better than the original roast. Fricassee chicken, when properly prepared, is much better than roast chicken. Spaghetti, when warmed over, is twenty times better than when first cooked. How seldom we eat a really well cooked dish of spaghetti. That is because it is not thoroughly cooked.

Suppose it is Tuesday—ironing day. If there is in your pantry or ice box the skeleton of last night's roast chicken, you are fortunate. From the shreds of meat here and there sticking to the bones you can make an excellent fricassee, or that dish which is a favorite in my household.

Mince the bits of cold chicken together. Chop a small green pepper, a small onion, four mushrooms, a bit of parsley and one cold potato together until very fine. Have a frying pan ready with tablespoonful of hot brown butter, and put the mixture in and stir it well.

Cover it for a few moments and let it brown on one side, as hashed brown potatoes are done. Put on a hot platter and garnish with tomato sauce. This sauce is made by cooking two or three tomatoes for half an hour; strain and add a tablespoonful of butter, salt, pepper and flour enough to thicken a little.

Perhaps you are inclined to toss away three or four tomatoes that are soft, but still good. Their ripeness is no drawback for the favorite breakfast dish of mine, for which I give you the recipe.

Cut a slice from the top of each tomato. Remove enough of the pulp to enable you to drop into each tomato a bit of butter the size of your thumb nail and a raw egg. Pin with a toothpick a strip of raw bacon around each tomato. Sprinkle a little salt and pepper over the top and put into a very hot oven until the eggs are set. This will be from five to eight minutes.

HER MINISTRATIONS

THE girl with the silver vanity case tucked a dainty handkerchief into her left glove and sighed.

"It's perfectly awful," she said, "how many persons have dreadful things happen to them these days! Why, all I do is to go to see my poor suffering friends in the hospitals!"

"Who's in the hospital besides Carrie?" asked the girl with the fire-red hat. "How's her appendicitis, anyhow? I sent some carnations, but I've been too busy——"

"Poor Carrie is recovering all right," said the girl with the silver vanity bag. "The house doctor says it is quite remarkable, in view of the seriousness of her case. I wish you could see him, Emma, when he is talking seriously like that. He draws his eyebrows together in a straight line like—oh, who was the actor who always did that? Never mind. Dr. Bennett is perfectly handsome and holds himself like a military man, and in those white linen suits—why on earth don't all doctors dress like that, I'd like to know?

"He can't be a day over 28, and if you could see how crazy the nurses are over him! I think it is perfectly ridiculous of them!

Sympathetic.

"I couldn't help expressing my sympathy one day when we were talking in the hall. I happened to be leaving just as he was through seeing Carrie. 'I should think,' I told him, 'you would get so weary of all this chasing after you, Dr. Bennett! Why, that corridor nurse wouldn't let me get a word in with you while she was in the room! I should think she'd realize that a doctor would like something more entertaining once in a while than chatter about bandages and temperatures and diet!' He quite flushed with gratitude and looked me in the eyes and said I had perfectly wonderful divination, and it was surprising how he lived through it all!

"The only trouble with knowing Dr. Bennett is that every time I go there somebody always sends for him or he has to go to the operating room. The poor man never has any time for a cozy chat."

"Is Carrie——"

"Oh, Carrie's all right," said the girl with the vanity bag. "If she'd only exercise a little self-control and not demand all the doctor's attention whenever he's in the room, she would get on better. Sick people are so selfish, don't you think? Dr. Bennett——"

"You said someone else was sick. Who?"

"Oh, yes!" said the girl with the vanity bag. "My cousin Ralph is at another hospital with a broken leg, and though his family and ours aren't on speaking terms I felt that in a case of illness I mustn't let prejudice stand in the way, so, of course, I ran in to cheer up poor Ralph. I was very careful to find out from the surgeon who set his leg whether it would be bad for Ralph to see me. Dr. Bitts is one of the most noted surgeons in the country. Terribly young for that, too—not more than 35. He has one of those attractive, stern faces, with straight mouth, and looks as though he shaves twice a day, and eyes like razors.

She Was Younger.

"When you talk to him he listens intently and then he has the most disconcerting way of coming to with a jerk and saying: 'Yes, yes; quite so,' and darting off somewhere. I think the poor dear man is worn out by his severe work. I tried to tell him the other day how a sensitive, appreciative woman couldn't help sympathizing with his hardships. He was very brave—he said they weren't hardships."

"Is your Cousin Ralph's leg——"

"Oh, that's mending, all right," said the girl with the vanity bag. "I don't wonder that my family can't stand Ralph's father, if he is anything like Ralph—always thinking of himself. He actually thought I was going to sit and read to him—no consideration at all for Dr. Bitts, who might like a little cheering conversation!"

"You said several——"

"Well, one of mother's friends and an aunt of father's are in the same hospital with typhoid and an operation, and, of course, I am younger than mother, so I do the calling. I told mother quite firmly when she insisted that it was not necessary for me to go every day that I hoped I knew my duty to the sick and suffering. Aunt Lou has a nephew by marriage who is so devoted to her, and he goes to see her frequently. He has the loveliest car, and as I happened to be leaving once when he did he took me home. I did some shopping first, because it was such a good chance to be carried around.

"I wish you could have seen that car. Something must have happened to it, because now he always comes on the street car. It wasn't so bad, because Mrs. Himmers' son—the friend with the operation—comes in his car and usually I am going just when he goes. But, oh, if you could see Dr. Bennett's eyes!"

"I really ought to look in on poor Carrie," mused the girl with the fire red hat. "What time——"

"Come to think of it," objected the girl with the silver vanity case, "the nurse said that Carrie mustn't have too much company—that it made her fever rise! So I guess I'd wait, if I were you."

The First Admiral.

A story sometimes told to ridicule the dialect of Pudsey is that of a traveler who astonished his friend by telling him that the children in Pudsey were the most intelligent children in the world.

"Why, what do they know?" asked his friend.

"They know who was the first naval admiral who ever lived," the traveler replied.

"Not they. Here, can you prove it?"

"Yes. If you wish, we will go to Pudsey and I will ask any child you like that particular question."

The friend agreed.

As the traveler and his friend went through Pudsey they saw a boy about ten years old playing in the street. The traveler went to him and asked:

"Now, my boy, do you know who was the first naval admiral?"

"No-a," bluntly replied the lad.

"There," said the traveler, turning to his friend, "didn't I tell you he would know?"

Willing to Oblige.

Elderly Gentleman—Hi, conductor! Bring the 'bus here. D'ye think I'm going to walk through all this mud?

Conductor—Sutt'nly not, sir. Hif you'll wait 'arf a minnit I'll lay down the carpet an' 'erect the hawning!

Conspire Against Domestic Harmony

The ills of women seem to conspire against domestic harmony. No husband can understand why a woman should be continually ailing, fretful, nervous and despondent, and he gets out of all patience with her. In nine cases out of ten some organic derangement is the cause of this condition and is easily overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a woman's remedy for woman's ills which has cured more severe cases of this kind than any other remedy we know.

Paper Fingers That Save Time

How many times do typewriter operators come nearly to the bottom of the paper and have to put in another sheet to write just one more line?

The L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter

is equipped with paper fingers that hold the paper so well that it is possible to write on the extreme edge of the paper or card.

These paper fingers, if the operator forgets to push them back into place after writing a card or envelope, move along to the proper place with the advancement of the carriage in either direction.

This is one of the many reasons why the L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter enables the operator to produce more and better work than on any other writing machine ever made.

JARVIS' ESCAPE IN THE TRUNK IS HALTED BY THE HOTEL DETECTIVE

She smiled and snapped the catch, and then stood gazing at it for several moments before she went to the door and admitted the porter with his small but deadly truck. He was a muscular young man with the intelligent expression of an elderly and amiable cow, the true type of trunk-destroyer, and the Princess shivered when she saw him.

"Have the other trunks gone?" she asked.

"Yes'm—last night," he growled, making swiftly for his prey. He started to tilt it in such a manner that our hardy and valiant knight, Warren of Jarvis, would have been standing on his head, contrary to the canons of chivalry. The Princess hastily intervened.

"This end up—please be sure and have it marked that way and be sure to mark it 'Wanted on Voyage.'"

"Yes'm," grunted Caliban. He rocked the trunk a little, thrust the lip of the truck under it and jerked it forward—blam!

The Princess winced and shuddered.

"And please—please—handle it very gently."

"Yes'm."

He had just begun to trundle the trunk and the knight toward the door when the exit was completely blocked by the cubical form of the house detective. The porter stopped and carelessly pitched his burden forward—blam!

The Broken Lock.

"Excuse me, madam," said the detective, with a kind of dogged hardness. "I don't want to bother you again, but that man—he killed a man up the hall—has got clean away unless he—he——"

"Well?" said the Princess coldly.

"Well, would you mind if—if I sort of took a look around? You're sure you were here all the time?"

"Of course," replied Dona Maria quietly. "But my maid will be up presently and you will be welcome to go through these rooms."

His attention was attracted to the trunk by a third "blam!" as the porter prepared to proceed, and he obligingly stepped inside out of the way. As he did so his eyes fell on the broken door lock.

"How'd that lock get broken?" His voice rang out suddenly like a pistol shot and he looked up quickly at the Princess. She inclined her head as if to assure herself that it really was broken, which was overacting the part.

"I think you should call the clerk's attention to it," she said calmly. "It was broken when I came here."

"When—may I ask did you come here?"

"Certainly. Yesterday afternoon."

"Oh, I see, I beg your pardon," he said slowly, and backed out. He did not know why, but he did not entirely believe the frank and self-possessed young woman. He walked down to a turn of the corridor, resolving to keep a close eye on the apartment until it was vacated. In this walk he again passed the trunk, but it suggested nothing. An escape in a trunk has become so common in fact and in fiction that no up-to-date detective believes any one would try it again. So it is still one of the best means, just as, from the other angle, it is a fact that occasionally in spite of comic artists and the like, some one still buys a gold brick.

Thus, in a manner unheroic, by freight elevator and van with divers bumps and bruises and swear words, the good knight Warren of Jarvis set forth to the Spanish Main and the storied hills of Aragon.

Pasting labels on trunks, like pressing the elevator button in the average office building, is more an act in evidence of good faith than in expectation of results. Having up to this time traveled only with a trunk and never in one, Warren Jarvis did not realize this until fairly embarked on his rough passage from the Hotel Vanderbilt to the promenade deck suite on the Lusitania.

For days afterward the memory of that two-mile voyage rode him like a nightmare. So did the divers aches, wrenches and bruises that he acquired by the way. And, finally, when the journey was over and he could have time to decide whether he was one large pain or had been broken up into several thousand small agonies, the trunk was deposited in the parlor of the Princess' suite with the label "This side up," carefully pressed against the carpet.

Dona Maria, anxious for the welfare of her champion, arrived at the stateroom just a few moments later. But she was haunted by an attentive steward, who in her abstraction she neglected to fee, and who declined to end his solicitous attentions until the oversight should be remedied.

While the Princess fidgeted and longed for him to get out he insisted on explaining everything connected with the suite. He opened the door that led onto the deck and pointed out the raised ledge as a trap for the unwary landsman's foot. He opened a door that led into a companionway. He showed her the clothes-pressers and all the while Dona Maria could not take her eyes from the top of the trunk, which displayed no label. Following her glance he offered to place the trunk for her.

"You needn't bother about it now, steward," she interposed quickly as he laid his hands on it. Then as an afterthought: "You might turn it right side up."

He Goes at Last.

"Oh, I'm sorry," he apologized as he noticed the labels. "I hope the contents are not upset."

"I hope not!" agreed Dona Maria, fervently.

"Anything more, madame?"

"Not now, thank you, steward," said Dona Maria nervously. "How soon do we sail?"

"Very soon now," he answered, as a deep raucous voice was heard bellowing afar. "They're calling visitors ashore now, madame."

And at last he was gone. But there was still Nita, the maid, who had doffed her hat and coat and was fussing about the bags.

"Your Highness has the keys to the trunks?" she suggested briskly.

"Hm—yes. You—you may leave the trunk as it is, Nita, until later. Go to your room now and get settled. I'll call you when I want you."

"Yes, Your Highness." But at the door of her room, she paused in some embarrassment. The Princess frowned impatiently.

"Will Your Highness pardon me," said Nita, uncomfortably, "if I am mistaken in thinking I recognize Senor the Duke, your exalted cousin, among the passengers——?"

"My cousin!" exclaimed Dona Maria, with a fine assumption of surprise. "Impossible! He is at Madrid."

Nita inclined her head in that extremely polite unbelief possible to the finished servant. "Yes, Your Highness," she agreed, demurely, and withdrew.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

The scene of the story is laid in the Vanderlip Hotel, New York City. The Princess Maria Theresa of Segura, a beautiful Spanish woman, is suddenly awakened in her suite by the sound of pistol shots. She hears a man running down the hall. He crashes against her door, breaking the lock, and enters. She sees he is a tall, good-looking young man, dressed in evening clothes. He is carrying a revolver in his right hand, and blood is dripping from a wound in his left. He begs the Princess to hide him. She, moved by some indescribable impulse, decides that she will. She directs him to an inner room, and a few minutes later, when the hotel detective knocks on the door, she tells him she is all right and sends him away. The young man, who is Warren Jarvis, of Kentucky, comes out of his hiding place, and the Princess, for the first time, notices his wound. She is moved to sympathy and showers him with questions as to what has occurred. Jarvis tells her about a Kentucky feud between his family and another named Markham. He says he left Kentucky to avoid the feudists, but encountered one of them in the hotel, which explains the shots. The Princess declares she will help him, and then asks the stranger question, "Are you afraid of ghosts?" Jarvis laughs, but grows solemn when the Princess tells him she has dangerous work for him to do. She makes him swear allegiance, and creates him her "vassal." Then she tells him to get her trunk, which is going to be shipped to a steamship on which she sails to Spain the following day. First Jarvis tells her to telephone to his servant, Rusty Snow, a negro. The servant is instructed to procure passage for himself and Jarvis in the ship. Jarvis then prepares to get into the trunk, but first begins to question the Princess about herself.

Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER XLIV.

As soon as Mildred had ordered Steve to bring the big car she hurried to her room and hastily changed her clothes, putting on the khaki suit she wore when fishing. She was very much excited. But before leaving the room she glanced, womanlike, in her mirror. Then, hardly knowing what she was doing, she picked up a little handbag such as women take when they go shopping, containing a handkerchief, a powder rag, a small mirror and a small purse. She rushed on the porch and called Elmer.

"Elmer," she said hurriedly. "I'm going to find Gordon. I can't stand the suspense any longer. Come if you want to; if you don't, I'm going alone."

"Of course, I'm going, too," exclaimed the boy. "That's just like a girl. Didn't I propose the scheme?"

"Well, hurry now, and get my rifle and revolver," cried Mildred.

"That little revolver of yours is no good," remarked Elmer. "You can take it if you want to; I'm going to get dad's big one." And off he went.

In a few minutes Steve appeared with the car and Mildred and Elmer climbed in. Mildred with her handbag and revolver and Elmer with his father's six-shooter.

"Is you all gwine shootin', Miss Mildred?" asked Steve.

"We are going after Mr. Gordon, Steve," replied Mildred, "so hurry, please."

"Lordomassy!" exclaimed the colored boy. He turned the car quickly and they were soon bowling along the main road.

A Serious Affair.

A girl and two boys going in a motor car on a hunt for supposed desperadoes would have been a most ludicrous affair except for the very serious way the three persons involved in the undertaking viewed it. A professional layer of odds, knowing the circumstances, would have wagered anything up to 100 to 1 that the expedition would end in a fizzle, if, indeed, the rescuers did not get themselves in serious trouble. However that might be, the car rolled bravely on and reached the point where the road crossed Pew Creek, inside of half an hour. Mildred had given her instructions to Steve, and as soon as the car stopped she and Elmer started off due west, Elmer leading the way and she following closely, carrying the toy revolver in one hand and the little handbag in the other.

There are few things a woman will not risk for the man she loves. The proper thing for Mildred to have done, of course, was to have gathered all the men at the mansion and sent them on the hunt for Gordon. But she didn't, and that, of course, ends all argument. If Mildred had only realized it, she and Elmer were almost as helpless as the babes in the woods. Unlooked-for things happen, however, and, with the chances at least 100 to 1 against her, an unlooked-for thing happened in this case.

They had not traveled far before Elmer found unmistakable signs that a horse had traveled in the direction they were going, and in certain places they were able to follow the hoof-prints.

Moved More Slowly.

"Keep careful track of the distance we travel," whispered Mildred. "You know Gordon said he was three miles due west from the bridge."

When they had covered what they considered about two and a half miles they moved more slowly and more cautiously, and although both were now trembling with excitement (and perhaps fear), they kept bravely on. At last they came to a point where the ground rose sharply for a hundred yards or so. Mildred grasped Elmer by the shoulder and whispered:

"We are near the place, Elmer. We must be very careful and keep under cover."

They crept along behind trees and at length came to the top of the rise. Below them they saw smoke issuing from a clump of trees.

"He's down there," said Mildred in an excited whisper. "I'm sure of it. Oh, what shall we do?"

"Sneak around and maybe we can see something," replied Elmer, hoarsely. His eyes glistened and he was pale, but game.

They circled around cautiously, keeping close together. Suddenly Elmer stopped and dropped to the ground. Mildred, her heart beating wildly, sank behind him.

"I see him, I see him," exclaimed the lad excitedly. He pointed and Mildred saw, not more than 60 yards away, a man seated upon a tree reading a newspaper. It was Gordon Kelly. She would have known him as far as her eyes could reach. She felt as if she were on the point of screaming, or crying, or fainting—she knew not what. She hastily opened the handbag and reached for her handkerchief—a woman's weapon, a woman's protector.

"Keep Quiet!"

"Keep quiet!" hissed Elmer. "There's another man there and he'll see us."

Mildred looked again and saw a man looking on the ground fifteen or twenty feet in front of Gordon.

"What shall we do; what shall we do?" was all she could whisper.

There was a long silence. Finally Elmer said:

"Gee, if I only had a mirror I could sneak down behind that bush and attract his attention."

"Why, I have a little mirror," exclaimed Mildred, reaching for her handbag again. She produced the article and handed it to the boy.

"You crawl behind that tree and wait there," whispered Elmer. A moment later he began worming his way toward the bush he had indicated. This brought him to within less than 150 feet of where Gordon was sitting. Carefully getting his range, he flashed a streak of sunlight across the shaded page of Gordon's newspaper and repeated the operation immediately.

Gordon cautiously glanced over his shoulder. He saw little Elmer peering from behind a bush and beyond the lad he saw a white handkerchief flutter. Mildred could not resist the temptation to signal. Gordon waved an answering sign and then arose. He walked to the log cabin, followed by his armed guard. He took a baseball, slit the seam with his knife; then, saying to his guard, "I want to do a little figuring," took a little book of cigarette papers belonging to the youngest of the mountaineers and wrote these words:

"If you have a gun, place it 20 feet beyond where this ball lands; if not, bring help noon to-morrow."

Guard Did Not Call.

He folded the tissue paper three times longways and once shortways, tucked it into the ripped seam of the baseball with his knife, leaving the edge sticking out (the guard was paying no particular attention to him) and then announced that he guessed he would take a little exercise.

This time the guard did not call a companion, as was the custom when Gordon practiced with bat and ball. The idea of two guards was doubtless originally suggested by the dangerous-looking baseball bat that Gordon swung with such ease. He had become such a cheerful and inoffensive captive, however, that on this occasion his guard decided not to trouble any of his companions, who were at that time on the shady side of the cabin, discussing a letter that had been received that morning from Forrest Cain.

Going out in the open, followed by his guard, pistol in hand, Gordon hit several high flies, catching the ball when it came down. Then, as if inadvertently, he drove it in such a manner that it fell 200 feet away from him and beyond a little clump of bushes.

"What do you think of that?" he exclaimed to his guard. "I'm losing my batting eye, I guess. Let's get a drink of water and then we'll go and get that ball. It cost $1.25."

It took Gordon fifteen minutes to get his drink of water and fuss around the cabin before he started after the ball, with his guard following closely. He had carefully marked the spot where it fell, and when he reached it his eyes beamed, for twenty feet beyond was what he wanted far more than he wanted the ball. Picking up the white object, he walked straight ahead and suddenly sat down facing his guard.

"Sit down and make yourself comfortable," he said. But the guard remained standing.

"By the looks of the sky, I'll bet you we have rain before to-morrow morning," he observed, reaching behind him.

"Turn Around and Walk."

The guard cast his eyes upward and when he lowered them again a six-shooter in the hand of his captor was pointing directly at his heart.

"Drop that gun! Drop it!" said Gordon, in a low, intense tone.

The guard hesitated the fraction of a second and then let the weapon fall to the ground.

"Turn around and walk two steps ahead," commanded Gordon, jumping to his feet and seizing the guard's six-shooter when his command was obeyed.

The rest was merely routine work, as it were.

"On the run, now," ordered Gordon, pointing to the east. "Back to the bridge; be quick about it."

The ex-guard started off, and with Gordon traversed 50 feet before Mildred and Elmer jumped from behind a tree.

"Won't you wait for me, Gordon?" said Mildred. An instant later they were in each other's arms.

"You will have to do all the hugging, Honeybunch," whispered Gordon. "I've got these two six-shooters in my hands, but I'll make up for it as soon as I get a chance. You are the bravest girl in the world. Now, come, dear, we are not out of the woods yet. Good work, Elmer."

Gordon turned over one of his revolvers to Elmer and the procession started, the mountaineer leading the way, followed by Gordon, holding a six-shooter in one hand and Mildred's hand in the other, and Elmer bringing up the rear. Arriving at the bridge where Steve was waiting with the car, Gordon said to his prisoner:

"Go back to your crowd and tell them I'll give them 24 hours to leave this mountain country, and if any of you come back, I'll make you wish you hadn't."

"That other man's comin' up to-morrer," said the mountaineer. They were the first words Gordon had ever heard him utter.

"Here's Your Gun."

"What man?" he demanded.

"That man that's been a-payin' us money."

"Is that so?" mused Gordon. "In that case, you can tell your men to hold on to him until they hear from me. I'll settle with that fellow when I get around to it. Tell your men I won't bother them as long as they hold on to him. Now, you can go back. Here's your gun, but I'll just take the cartridges out of it first. Now, then, Elmer, climb in the front seat. Come, Mildred. Go ahead, Steve."

"Gordon," said Mildred, as soon as the car started, "you need a haircut badly."

It was dark when they reached the mansion, where the appearance of the owner created an immense sensation.

"Mildred, dear," said Gordon, drawing her to one side, "I want you to spend the evening here. There's something I want particularly to say to you. We can have Mrs. Ward for a chaperone," he added, with a smile.

"Not in these clothes, Gordon," replied Mildred. "If you will let Steve drive us home, Elmer and I will both be back in an hour."

When Mildred and the lad returned Gordon, too, had had a change of clothes.

"Who cut your hair?" laughed Mildred.

They sat down to dinner, after which Gordon told Elmer to go and play billiards and then led Mildred into the room he called his office, and which Mildred called his lazy room. The particular something he wanted to tell her required more than half an hour and considerable eloquence to tell. Mildred shook her head at frequent intervals, but finally gave in and murmured, "Yes." Arising, she went to the telephone on Gordon's desk and gave an order. While she was waiting for connections Gordon, happy as a lark, seated himself at the piano, said "Second verse," and sang:

We will build a bower of grasses,
Call it Castle Lullaby;
Drink the south wind as it passes,
Lips o' Poppy—you and I!
Youth will be a friend to cheer us,
Fill our veins with purple wine,
Stand forever watching near us,
Lips o' Poppy, maid of mine!
Pines shall lull us with their moaning;
Golden bees in golden quest
Songs of sweet desire intoning
To the white flower of your breast!
Lips o' Poppy, girl of rapture,
Mine shall be enchantment's power,
Substance of my dreams to capture
In the heart of that white flower!
Lips o' Poppy—eyes entrancing—
Maid of earth or maid of air!
We will pass the years a-dancing
Down the realm of Queen Don't Care.
Come! the purple shades are falling!
Come! it is the Queen's command!
Hark! the nightingales are calling
To the Never Hurry Land!

"That's very nice," said Mildred, "but suppose dad—— Oh, here he is now. That you, dad?—— Oh, fine! Ah—— I am with Mr. Kelly, and—er—Mr. Kelly wants to speak to you a minute. Oh, now, dad, do be nice—— Does he want to talk business? Ha, ha! Yes, I believe he wants to talk business. All right; hold the wire." Mildred clapped her hand over the mouthpiece and whispered excitedly: "Dad was awfully angry at first and wouldn't speak to you, but he suddenly changed his mind. Now, go ahead; don't be afraid."

He Asks for Mildred.

Gordon took up the receiver and this conversation followed:

"Hello, Mr. Deery! I want to ask——"

"What will you take for your property—spot cash?" interrupted Deery.

"I don't want to sell, Mr. Deery."

"Oh, come, come; I'll give you $20,000 for it—cash, mind you."

"I couldn't think of it, Mr. Deery."

"Well, what's it worth, then? Come, you must have a figure."

"Really, Mr. Deery, I don't want to sell at any price, but if you ask me, the property is worth all of $2,000,000."

"Two million dollars!" sputtered Deery. "Am I talking to a crazy man? Ask my daughter to come to the phone, please."

"Just a minute, Mr. Deery. I want to say something very seriously. Please listen. I want to ask your permission to marry your daughter. We love each other and——"

"Now I know you're crazy," Deery broke in. "Call my daughter, please."

"But, Mr. Deery——"

"Not another word. I wish to speak to my daughter."

Mildred took the receiver from Gordon's hand.

"Hello, dad; what's wrong?"

"Come home at once, Mildred."

"Now, dad," pleaded Mildred, "please don't be so angry. Gordon and I——"

"I will not hear another word; I insist that you come home at once."

"Dad, if you're going to act that way, you'll regret it. Please tell mother I wish to speak to her."

"Your mother is not at home and won't be home for an hour, Mildred, I tell you for the last time, come home immediately or I'll come up there and get you."

Benefited Many Who Had Lung Trouble

Those who suffer from Lung Trouble are generally troubled with night sweats, fever, loss of strength and little or no appetite. Eckman's Alterative is a medicine which has been most successful in stopping night sweats, reducing fever and promoting appetite and many who have used it declare it saved their lives. Investigate what it did in this case:

"Dear Sir: For four years I was troubled with cough, which gradually became worse. I had night sweats and pains in my chest. I was losing my appetite and had become so thin and weak I could not attend to my household duties. A physician pronounced my disease Consumption. Not being satisfied, I was examined by the physicians of the Polyclinic Hospital. They also confirmed my trouble, and I was ordered away for treatment. My nephew would not allow me to go until I had tried Eckman's Alterative. Before I had taken the medicine three weeks, I had marked relief, night sweats ceased, pain in the breast relieved, cough became loose and easy, fever left me, and I commenced getting well. My health became normal. I am in excellent health now and have been for twelve years. I strongly recommend it." (Signed)

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

MOST DECIDEDLY NOT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-one, and a man two years my senior has made an appointment with me and at the same time with my friend. Would it be fitting for me to keep it, and also, is it proper for him to make the appointment for the same time and place? G. M. T. I.

He is flirting with you, I am sure, and if "by appointment" you mean to meet on some street corner you owe it to yourself to refuse to meet him though he were alone. Ask him to come to your home for you; his reply will give you some insight into his character.

BY BECOMING A MAN.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a boy of twenty, and in love with a girl two years younger than myself. I am deeply in love with the girl, and she doesn't care for me. How can I make her love me? Another boy loves her, but she doesn't love him. T. C.

You rightly term yourself a boy, since you are only twenty. I suggest unfailing courtesy, kindness, appreciation and devotion, but not so much that your attentions distract your head and heart from the more serious and timely task of developing yourself into a manly man.

RACE MIGHTY TIGHT; LOCAL CLUB IN HUNT

If Crackers Can Keep Playing As They Did Last Week They Will Cop Pennant.

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE Southern League race is a rip-snorter. Mobile, Montgomery, Chattanooga and Atlanta are within .041 of each other. Birmingham, Memphis and Nashville are far from out of the race. It's getting better every minute.

The Crackers have the chance of their career to make a showing now. Two of the next three clubs they face on home ground are ahead of them. If they can hammer the Turtles to pieces, get a few games back that the Gulls owe them and plaster something on Montgomery they will be right up in the race again.

They have it in them, too.

You can't lose confidence in a team that pulls games out of the fire the way the Crackers were yanking them last week. Saturday's game, for instance, was as poor from a fielding viewpoint as any man would care to witness, but the locals had the old kick that was needed to get them out of danger. They saved two games Friday that appeared totally lost. They won all the way Thursday. Both of the games with Mobile were won after they had been lost. And altogether, the Crackers are showing real recuperative power.

If the players will pull together, forget all the inside politics and work exclusively for Atlanta and for the pennant there will be nothing to it but another rag for Atlanta.

• • •

BUCK" WEAVER is winning a game now and then for the Meridian team and may come around and make a pitcher of himself yet. It is possible that now he is away from the alcoholic possibilities of Atlanta's many social (?) clubs he may settle down and do some good work. He has the natural ability, all right.

• • •

BILL SMITH has shown a lot of judgment this year in getting rid of the "slikker" fighters on his team. Old Red Eye wrecked the Crackers last year. Smith isn't taking any chances with distillery supporters this year.

• • •

IF old Rube Benton were only with a ball club he might be a wonder. The other day in a game against the Cardinals he made three hits, scored three runs and perpetrated a sacrifice fly. It was a very hot day, too.

Ordinarily, Rube hits like a suffragette.

• • •

GUESS the Naps will never win a ball game. Usually they haven't any team. When they have, it is wrecked by internal dissensions. When it isn't, as this year, accidents do the rest.

Here are the accidents since May 1:

May 4.—Catcher Grover Land broke his hand.

May 11—Larry Lajoie broke a finger and a thumb.

May 12—Joe Birmingham broke an ankle.

June 11—Twirler Steen broke his pitching arm.

This is only a partial list of the wounded. Ray Chapman, the Naps' shortstop, was hurt the day Steen broke his arm and couldn't play for two weeks. "Buddy" Ryan, center fielder, is playing with a broken thumb.

• • •

PERCY SKILLEN, former Dartmouth pitcher, now in the sporting goods business, has invented a device which he thinks will help pitchers develop control, a thing which Percy lacked or he might now be a big leaguer. It is a dummy that stands at the plate, bat in hand, so that a twirler can pitch to it hours at a time if he feels like it, and never fear that wild shots will do any damage.

"Dutch" Meyers, who is in business with Percy, tried to sell one of these devices to Jimmy Callahan to help steady young Sox pitchers.

"I don't deny that your idea may work out all right," Manager Callahan told Meyers. "But you needn't send any of those things around."

"Why not?" persisted Meyers.

"What do I want with another dummy, when I have three or four on my team now?" asked Callahan. "I'll just use one of them."

'Tear-In' Fighters Are Popular

Sluggers Usually Capture Title

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 7.—Discussions have arisen in England and Australia as to whether the "tear-in" fighters of the present day are better boxers than the clever fellows who made a business of pugilism fifteen or twenty years ago. Some of the arguments used in support of the various views expressed are highly interesting, but one very important matter has been overlooked. There are no "tear-in" fighters now—at least, none worth talking about. The clever fellows have come into their own again.

Take the smaller men. When Terry McGovern, with bent back, lowered head and rapidly revolving fists, began demolishing the nations of the earth, the opinions that many persons held in respect to the noble art of self-defense were revolutionized. After the Brooklyn whirlwind had run amuck for a year or two, grave doubts existed as to whether there was any scientific side to boxing, for had not the game developed a youth who, by determined onslaught, could upset all ideas of leading, countering, timing, sidestepping and what not?

And when Terry spread-eagled Pedlar Palmer, the pride of British pugdom, in one round, the belief that forthrightness was the one and only antidote for cleverness became a firmer ground than ever.

Nelson Greatest Slugger.

Terry strutted his brief period and then went under to another "tear-in" fighter in the person of Young Corbett. It is worthy of note, by the way, that each of these "tear-in" specialists fell a victim to a fellow who also operated along "tear-in" lines. Corbett did fairly well until he ran afoul of Battling Nelson, who was possibly the most headlong fighter of them all—greater even than Terry McGovern, the founder of the "tear-in" dynasty.

Nelson did more than any of them to show that cleverness could be made to succumb to direct methods. Among other things, he won from Joe Gans, who was possibly the most scientific lightweight the world ever has known.

When Nelson's time came it was another "tear-in" fighter who accounted for him. This was Ad Wolgast, and while Wolgast, still untroubled with the spasms of appendicitis the toughest experience he ever had was with still another "tear-in" fighter, to-wit, Knockout Brown.

From the lightweights down, the clever lads are in the ascendant again. Packey McFarland, who can claim to be a lightweight, now that the weight limit has been hunched, is nothing if not clever, and unless Jack Britton has changed tactics since he went East he is also a boxer of the brainy, resourceful stamp.

Jimmy Duffy, the Lockport boy, who is fast forging to the front, is another exponent of scientific pugilism, while Ritchie Rivers, Mandot, Leach Cross and Freddie Welsh are all performers of the "hit, step and get away" school.

The welter, middle and light-heavy classes are so fused now that it is impossible to tell "who is who" in the divisions named, but it can certainly be said that Mike Gibbons and Jimmy Clabby, a pair of really clever workmen, seem to be able to give away lots of weight and gain decisions from the best men that can be found for them.

Kilbane and Coulon Clever.

Johnnie Kilbane, the featherweight champion, and Johnny Coulon, the prince of bantams, have held their positions by dint of clever boxing and the manner in which little Eddi Campi handled the mercurial Frenchman, Ledoux, at Los Angeles recently, also favors the argument that cleverness is asserting itself in matters pugilistic again.

The heavyweight situation is so muddled that it is not easy to figure out what has contributed to success in that particular department, but in a general way it can be shown that cleverness has made itself tell among the big fellows during the past few years. This, too, despite the fact that Bombardier Wells, the most finished boxer England has produced in years, has been defeated practically every time he started.

Jack Johnson's long suit was cleverness, and there is no occasion to recall what he has done. He was certainly the greatest heavyweight since Jeffries was in his heyday.

McCarty a Second Corbett.

The most pronounced "tear-in" fighters of the heavyweight class in recent times were Jim Flynn and Al Palzer, but Luther McCarty, who was in a way a second Jim Corbett, disposed of the pair within a few weeks.

McCarty is gone, Johnson has fallen upon evil days and it is hard to tell what is in store for the heavyweights. But in respect to pugilism generally, it can be said that in the whirligig of time the artists of the Queensberry ring have gained the ascendancy over the sluggers.

There is no assurance that the present order of things will continue and about the only thing existing conditions prove is that evolution has not produced any permanent change in fighting methods.

Just now they are fighting the way they fought a quarter of a century ago.

EMPIRE LEAGUE NOTES

Shortstop Murphy, of the Thomasville team, continues to hit the ball as if he means to stay at the top of the Empire's batters. Murphy is also a sensational fielder and will undoubtedly move up when the season ends.

• • •

Manager Moran, of Brunswick, has secured Third Baseman Crowe from Thomasasville and if the youngster continues his splendid work will probably keep him.

• • •

Almost without exception the players who have been cut loose by Waycross have made good elsewhere. Bitting, released as third baseman, landed with Charleston and is going fine. "Red" Stiles, a pitcher, signed with Thomasville, has won nearly all his games since leaving Waycross Dacey, an outfielder, went to Americus and is putting up a neat article of ball.

• • •

McManus is one of the newest men in the Empire. He is a pitcher and has been signed by Waycross.

• • •

Almost as fast as teams change players the Empire is changing umpires. Derrick is the latest to join the league's staff. Morton, one of the new men, has been criticised a great deal on account of his work and may be released.

• • •

Cordele has in Wilder a pitcher who makes more noise than any man in the league. Wilder holds the league's strike-out record so far, fifteen, and is apt to cut loose some new capers almost any game.

• • •

South Atlantic League scouts have been through the Empire, and inside information says quite a few players will be taken in the Class C league after this season.

• • •

Brunswick will turn loose about six players this week. Moran says Brunswick is going to stay at the top, and he means it, too.

• • •

"Closed for ball game" is not an uncommon sign to see hanging on a store's front door in Empire League cities. Baseball comes first with almost everybody now.

• • •

Waycross plays six games at home this week and Manager Clark has tipped his team off that when the week-end arrives Waycross must be somewhere else besides at the bottom.

• • •

Reports from Thomasville indicate that fans in that city will always remember the stinging defeats given Valdosta last week. Both those towns are old time baseball rivals.

• • •

Otto Jordan, of Valdosta, can sell three of his four pitchers any day in the week, according to the dope from Valdosta. He has four good ones and it is said managers of almost every South Atlantic team is anxious to get contracts with them.

• • •

As far as individual players go, there is hardly any team in the Empire that has anything on the others. But when it comes to team work and pitchers—well—the league standing tells the story.

• • •

College players who have joined teams in the Empire are making good with a rush. Davenport, playing first at Thomasville; Holliday, the same for Waycross, and Bowen, short for Americus, are three players who have shown up exceptionally strong. Whitted, a college player, is one of the Waycross additions and is expected to make good with ease.

• • •

Heine Zimmerman's brother, who has been playing second for Waycross, will probably be worked in the outfield.

• • •

First Baseman Day, of Cordele, has shown that when it comes to a pinch he can pitch as well as play the bag. Day is a clever fellow, and has many friends in every city of the league.

• • •

Thomsville has a Day that is having days whenever he pitches. He is the handsome fellow of the league, and is winning so regularly now that there seems no end to his victories.

GOVERNOR MAY INTERVENE AT PORTER RACE TRACK

PORTER, IND., July 7.—State intervention at the Mineral Springs race track near here, which was successful last year, will be repeated this year if gamblers continue to bet on the races. Prosecutor Fabing, of Porter County, to-day returned from Indianapolis, where he obtained a promise from Governor Ralston that if there was any more gambling at the track State troops would come to Porter and close the course. Last year Governor Marshall used this method with success.

Ritchie May Take Trip Abroad

Wolgast Is Not All In--Naughton

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., July 7.—Now that Willie Ritchie has shown himself every inch a champion—that is, by comparison with contemporaneous lightweights, which is the only way to judge a rising young fighter—the question is, What will he do next?

There is some talk of Ritchie taking a trip to Europe. If his wishes lie in that direction, no one can say him nay, for he has intrenched himself in such a way with fair-minded sports that no chance remains to taunt him with being afraid of the issue with any man of his size.

The story goes that Ritchie long ago set his heart upon a trip through the older lands and that he wants to take advantage of his present position and earning power to fulfill his desire. He is sensible enough to know that a ring man's grip of the topmost rung is at all times insecure, and he thinks it best to indulge in a long-felt hankering while things are coming his way.

This is a better way of putting it than asserting that he is in need of a rest, for Ritchie is only just back from a six months' lay-off and can hardly boast of tired muscles and frayed nerves.

Whenever Willie gets ready to resume fistic activities he will find several worthy opponents. Freddie Welsh wants a crack at the title and so does Harlem Tommy Murphy. Leach Cross has the bee buzzing in his bonnet and Ad Wolgast has begun agitation for a return match.

In Wolgast's case, the fact that his advances are not taken over seriously is due to himself. Wolgast has had several chances to redeem himself, but he has not trained sufficiently on any one occasion. He could easily make himself a strong drawing card with the public if he would forsake city life for a few months and spend his time on his farm. Then if he came back armed with a physician's certificate setting forth that he had stored up plenty of vitality during his sojourn in the country, he would attract attention from the promoters.

SLOW BEAT OF HEART GIVES MEN ENDURANCE

BATTLING NELSON'S theory that his slow heart was the cause of his phenomenal endurance is being substantiated right along. The normal number of beats a minute for the human heart is 72. The Battler's heart beats but 52 times a minute, and to this he laid his ability to take a walloping and win.

Now Marathon and other distance runners come forward with hearts that put Nelson's in the shade when it comes to slowness. Harry J. Smith, the national ten-mile champion, is also the champion of the slow-heart brigade. His heart beats but 48 times a minute.

Smith entered the Boston A. A. Marathon, and Dr. J. H. Cunningham, of Boston, examined his heart less than a minute after he had crossed the finish line. Though Smith had just completed a run that put him under one of the hardest heart strains known, his heart was banging away 80 a minute—just eight above normal for the average person.

Recently he took a life insurance examination and was informed that in 27,000 hearts examined his had the slowest beat.

George Benhag, the middle distance runner, is another slow-pulsed man. His heart has a peculiarity. It goes 64 a minute while he is standing, but lets up ten beats as soon as he lies down. Another one of the brigade is Mike Ryan, a New York distance runner.

Recently he was operated on at a New York hospital, and his heart was tested before he was given ether. Under conditions making for slowness, his heart beat but 42 for the minute. He resisted ether and had to be given enough to put ten men to sleep, but his "Marathon heart" was unaffected.

BANTAM WILLIAMS DESIRES JUST ONE LOOK AT COULON

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., July 7.—When Champion Johnny Coulon comes out here to negotiate for a renewal of his many-times postponed fight with Kid Williams, it looks as though they will have to lock the estimable Mr. Gutenko in a cellar until the session is over and Collins has fled to the mountains.

Williams swears he will "jump" the bantamweight champion in the street.

"It's no use trying to get him into a ring with me," said the Kid, tearfully. "He'd sign all the articles fer a fight somewhere in Siberia and then telegraph that he had a stomach ache again and beat it on the run for some other mountains somewhere.

"The only way is fer me to meet the guy on the street and hand him what's coming to him right there. I'd like to have two or three fellers standin' round to see it because it will be good, and I wouldn't want to waste it."

Not to be outdone, in desperation Sammy Harris tremblingly produced five one-hundred dollar bills and deposited them with Tom McCarey, an act which indicated a state of fury no less frightful than that of Kid Williams; there are different ways of expressing emotion.

When the "Kid" is torn with an agony of rage he wishes to punch some one; Sammy pulls out a hundred bill; same thing in a different dialect.

AUGUSTA TEAM WINS DOUBLES IN S. A. EVENT

AUGUSTA, GA., July 7.—Garrett and Gary, of Augusta, defeated the Waring brothers, of Columbia, S. C., Sunday afternoon for the championship of the South Atlantic States.

Play was continued from Saturday afternoon until Sunday on account of darkness, and when the four players resumed Sunday afternoon, the sets stood two all, and Garrett and Gary were four games to their opponents' two on the fifth set.

The score on the final set was 6—2, and the scores for the entire match of five games were as follows: 5—7, 7—5, 7—5, 4—6, 6—2. With the completion of the Garrett and Gary-Waring brothers match, the tournament of 1913 came to an end.

The championship in singles went to E. V. Carter, Jr., of Atlanta. The ladies' singles championship went to Mrs. Robert Johnson, of Asheville, N. C., and the mixed doubles championship to Miss Adger, of Greenville, S. C., and James Edwin, of Spartanburg, S. C.

The local enthusiasts were delighted to keep the doubles title at home, against strong opposition from Atlanta and other cities.

There was great disappointment because Nat Thornton, of Atlanta, decided not to defend his title, as the possibilities of a match between Thornton and Carter were alluring to the spectators.

KELLY GREATEST TIMBER TOPPER, SAYS MITCHELL

By James S. Mitchell.

World's Campion Weight Thrower.

NEW YORK, July 7.—Fred W. Kelly, of the University of Southern California, the present Olympic high hurdling champion, who won the national A. A. U. title at the Chicago carnival on Saturday and who won the high and low hurdles in the collegiate meet on Thursday, is unquestionably the greatest timber-topper on earth to-day.

On his native heath, Kelly has equaled the world's record of 15 seconds for the 120-yard hurdles, and this feat for a young man of 21 is unprecedented in the history of athletics. What Kelly will do to the records in the years to come can only be imagined.

Like a Bird Over Hurdles.

Long and powerful of limb and with great development of the back muscles, the Californian possesses the ideal points of the real racer over the sticks. When crossing the obstacles he has such a fine spread that his body does not have to rise high in the air and he simply strides over the hurdles, as it were.

I did not happen to get a good look at the Los Angeles man till he began to practice at Stockholm prior to the Olympic games last year. Without delay I picked him as the winner, despite the fact that the Englishmen were very sweet on their man Anderson, who was supposed to have shown 15 seconds for the 120 yards.

Many Caught Time at 14 4-5.

Kelly justified my opinion by winning in 15 1-10 seconds, in undoubtedly the most sensational hurdle race ever seen. Several private timers, Americans as well as myself, made the time 14 4-5 seconds.

J. E. Sullivan, the American commissioner, said it was the fastest hurdle race he had ever seen, and is prepared to see Kelly do better than 15 seconds any day.

The citizens of Los Angeles contributed the money to take Kelly on the Olympic team, and their generosity has been highly praised ever since, and Kelly, by his great performances, has shown that his admirers made no mistake.

Tortorich Offers Big Purse for Title Go

SAN FRANCISCO, July 7.—D. J. Tortorich, owner of the Westside Athletic Club at New Orleans, wired Willie Ritchie to-day offering a purse of $20,000 for a twenty-round fight between the champion and Jack Britton, of Chicago. If accepted, the fight will take place September 7. Danny Morgan, manager of Britton, has already accepted for his protege.

REDS PURCHASE ROBINSON FROM SAVANNAH CLUB

SAVANNAH, GA., July 6.—Announcement has been made of the consummation of negotiations which have been pending between the Cincinnati Baseball Club and the owners of the local association of the South Atlantic League for the sale of pitcher Dick Robertson. The purchase price is said to be $4,000.

Robertson will be delivered to the Cincinnati club at the end of the South Atlantic season. President Armstrong has stated that the present Indian combination will be kept intact throughout the year. When announcement was made of the sale of Robertson it was stated that the young spitball artist will remain in Savannah for the balance of the season.

CHAPPELLE IS MOTOTCYCLE CHAMP; DEFEATS C. DAVIS

NEW YORK, July 7.—Arthur Chappelle, the motorcycle speed king, is to-day the holder of the professional championship of America. At the Motordrome—at Brighten Beach last night Chappelle won the third and deciding race of the series for the championship from Charles Davis. Each had won a match and this was the deciding one, and consisted of a ten-mile and two five-mile heats.

Billy Vanderbury, of Philadelphia, captured the three-mile professional race, winning all three heats.

Martin Kessler, of Newark, was badly cut about the mouth when he fell from his machine while trying to avoid mixing up in a spill in the two-mile novice race.

ZEIDER READY TO PLAY; CHANCE TO MAKE CHANGES

NEW YORK, July 7.—After to-day's double-header with the Senators the New Yorks leave for Chicago to begin their second Western trip.

Frank Chance has received word from Rollie Zeider that he would join the team on Wednesday, ready to play second base in the opening game with the White Sox. Zeider's absence has cost the Yankees many games. With Zeider on the middle bag, Hartzell will supplant Daniels or Wolter in the outfield.

GUTHRIE PITCHER HURLS ONLY 54 BALLS IN GAME

GUTHRIE, OKLA., July 7.—Andrew Jelsama, pitching for the Elks team of the Guthrie City League, is believed to have made a record in a game against the Santa Fe Railroad team when he delivered only 54 balls during the entire nine innings. He allowed three hits, striking out one man.

DENVER CLUB ON SALE.

DENVER, COLO., July 7.—President McGill wants to sell the Denver team of the Western League, it is said, and retire at the end of the season.

Cross After Match With Ritchie

Leach Wants Plenty of Action

By H. M. Walker.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., July 7.—It's Leach Cross, the pride of the walk in Los Angeles. Whatever admiration was bestowed upon Mexican Joe Rivers now goes for Cross double. Fight bugs are fairly marveling at the showing of the New Yorker, and from the talk at sporting headquarters it seems to be the consensus of opinion that the New Yorker would defeat Ritchie for the championship.

Leach, with Brother Sam and Trainer Harry Lee, were about town Sunday accepting congratulations on all sides, but more eager to know the next probable date for his services than anything else.

The New Yorker is decorated with a handsome black eye, the left optic being badly swollen and discolored clear over the cheekbone, but Leach is parading this proudly in honor of the occasion and said if he had been a loser he would bend his head and take up an alleyway.

"I want Ritchie in a match for the championship of the world," said Cross, "and I want to know within a few days whether the champion is going to give me this chance. It would be a great fight and I like my chances with him, for our styles are very similar. He's cleverer than I am and I think he's the classiest champion we have had since Joe Gans, but this is the wing that spells kick," and the dentist-boxer closed his right fist and smiled confidently.

"Will you take on Rivers if the match is postponed and there is nothing doing for the present with Ritchie?" was asked. "I'm ready to take on Rivers the last of July, regardless of whether I meet the champion, and then I will fight again the next month and take Ritchie Labor Day. That's me, for I'm in better form the oftener I work."

Just what the immediate plans of the Eastern boxer will be is not quite known. Unless something positive is placed for Cross early this week the New Yorker will start back East, probably taking a date with Harry Trendall at St. Louis and then on to New York, where he is offered a match with Young Shugrue.

Bud Anderson came into town with Manager Dick Donald yesterday and, although somewhat disappointed and forlorn, he expressed a manly version of the outcome and gave the victor all just dues, saying that he only hoped there would soon be a time when he can command another accounting with Mr. Cross. Bud's lips were considerably swollen and his right eye discolored. Anderson and Manager Donald are not certain of future plans, but will remain over until to-morrow, then returning to Medford.

RINGSIDE NOTES

Who will get the next chance at Willie Ritchie's title? This is a question that is worrying boxing fans these days. Freddie Welsh, Leach Cross, Tommy Murphy and Jack Britton are all clamoring for the prize match.

* * *

At the present time it looks very much as if Cross will beat his rivals to the big bout. Cross' recent victory over Anderson has made him a big card on the coast. The dentist's great punching power should give him a great chance to cop the championship from Ritchie.

* * *

Friends of Charlie White should not take his defeat at the hands of Jack Britton to heart. When it is taken into consideration that White weighed but 129 pounds against 136 for Britton the showing made by Charlie was nothing to be ashamed of. Although Britton is credited with a knockout he failed to drop White once during the entire mill. The bout was stopped by the sheriff.

* * *

Poor Joe Thomas is certainly hitting the toboggan. Frankie Whitney pushed the New Orleans boy still further down the ladder by handing Joe Golden's protege a neat lacing in ten rounds last Friday.

* * *

The Ritchie-Rivers championship battle at San Francisco drew a $20,000 house. Ritchie was guaranteed $17,000 win, lose or draw. Rivers drew down about $5,000 for his end.

* * *

When Johnny Kilbane was recently asked in Cleveland why he didn't knock out more of his opponents he said: "I have always said that I am a boxer and not a fighter. I am not in the ring to kill the other fellow, but to simply outbox him. I won the featherweight championship of the world by using this method and will not change my style now."

The next big bout to be staged on the coast will be the twenty-round engagement between Charley Ledoux and Kid Williams at Los Angeles on July 29. The winner has been promised a match with either Eddie Campi or Johnny Coulon.

* * *

Kid Young, the local newsboy boxer, is still waiting to hear from Charlie Lee in regard to the latter's challenge. Young says he will sign up for the match at once and will also give Lee a $50 side bet.

* * *

George Chip and Jack Dillon meet in a 12-round setto at Boston on July 8. The winner is to be matched with Frank Klaus.

* * *

Eddie Craney, who staged the Rivers-Ritchie mill, is now anxious to arrange a match between Jack Britton and Tommy Murphy. He has already wired an offer to Danny Morgan, manager of Britton.

* * *

Billy Papke, former middelweight, wishes to announce that he is still in the boxing game. Papke has agreed to meet any middleweight the Milwaukee promoters pick for him. The Kewanee boy says his injured hand is again in shape for a tough scrap.

* * *

The recent 20-round bout between Campi and Ledoux at the Pacific Athletic Club, of Vernon Cal., drew $4,900. Ledoux received $1,325, which was 25 per cent of the gross receipts. Campi, for winning got $1,470, having boxed for 30 per cent of the receipts.

* * *

Nick Pagoalos and Sam Fountas, local Greek featherweights, will clash in a private 10-round bout here Friday. Terry Nelson has been selected to referee the go. The winner will seek a match with Kid Young.

KRAMER AND CAVANAUGH WIN GREAT CYCLE RACE

NEWARK, N. J., July 7.—A victory for the team of Kramer and Cavanaugh in the three-cornered tandem match race and a dead heat between Frank Kramer, of New Jersey, and Alfred Grenda, of Australia, were features of the racing at the Velodrome here yesterday.

In the two-mile event Grenda had a lead of twenty yards on the last lap, but Kramer spurted and managed to cross the line with his rival. In the three-cornered match Kramer and Cavanaugh nosed out Joe Fogler, of Brooklyn, and Al Goulet, of Australia, and Jackie Clark and Grenda, both Australians, got third. The victory was in straight heats of one mile each.

CARPENTIER AND PALZER MAY CLASH IN PARIS GO

NEW YORK, July 7.—Tom O'Rourke is in receipt of a letter from Monsieur Vienne, the Parisian boxing promoter, offering him a match for Palzer with Carpentier some time this fall. Carpentier is all the rage in fight circles in France and would draw an immense gate with a white man of reputation who had not fought in Paris. O'Rourke thinks well of the proposition and will proceed to close the match with Monsieur Vienne.

RICHARDS WINS A WIFE IF HE WINS 2 RACES

IT'S leaked out on "Tex" Richards, rider at the local Motordrome. Old "Tex" is going to be married. That is, maybe?

You see it's this way.

So she wrote "Tex" that if he would win both races at the next meet she would have him—and the quicker the better.

Yes, it sounds like a press agent's yarn. And like as not the girl got the idea out of a novel or a newspaper. A lot of things come from such places. But anyhow, the story is true. If "Tex" wins both races he gets a wife. If he doesn't, there will be another wait. And "Tex" has waited quite a while.

Naturally a thing like this will spur Richards to the utmost Tuesday night. And he will need it. Jock McNeil has the old J. A. P. running as never before. And Mortie Graves' new Excelsior has shown speed in practice that is fast enough to win any race ever run on this Motordrome or any other.

Tuesday's races will be among those three riders. The experts believe that Graves is the winner if all goes well. But McNeil's machine has never been beaten when it was running right. And "Tex" Richards has never yet run that old Indian No. 23 as he will run it Tuesday night.

In case of rain Tuesday night the meeting will be postponed until Wednesday night. There will also be racing Friday night.

LEDOUX AND WILLIAMS WORKING FOR GO JULY 15

LOS ANGELES, July 7.—Charley Ledoux and Kid Williams are going after the training stunt as though they meant to make the July 15 bout a businesslike affair. The two have met in the ring before, and as both claim a victory at that meeting, the rivalry is especially keen.

The French bantamweight appears to be in great shape and went through his best work-outs since arriving in California yesterday at his Vernon camp. He showed considerable improvement over his previous work here.

At Venice Kid Williams gave a large crowd of assembled fans a good idea of his condition and showed them something of what he intends to do to Ledoux next week.

JOY FOR FRANK CHANCE.

NEW YORK, July 7.—F. Leroy Chance has moved from a pennant contender to a tail-ender. At first glance this would appear to be quite a jolt. But Chance accepts the situation with a philosophical calm. He no longer has to manage Heinie Zimmerman.

Spending a section of the Fourth at the ringside while Carl Morris is attempting to fight is a great little pastime for one who has a lot of perfectly good time to throw away.

Samuel E. Debs is leading Edward P. Weston in their hike athwart the continent. Sam has more speed than Ed, but not a bit more sense.

Without cracking a smile, Fred Toney up and says he is glad to get a chance to work regularly. Fred will have his little joke.

By this time Mr. Toney is able to find his way from Chicago to Louisville and vice versa with his eyes shut.

ROUGH-HOUSE.

Lives of Phillies all remind us
We can play a rough-house game,
And, departing, leave behind us
Spike marks on another's frame.

It is said that the Cincinnati Reds once went through a whole season without losing a game. There is a feeling among baseball experts that this will not happen again for at least a couple of years.

In view of what happend to W. Heinrich Schmidt it is surprising that the English newspapers have not begun to chide McLoughlin on the cut of his trousers or the color of his hose.

The consensus of opinion is that Mr. Quigley is a good umpire—if there is such a thing as a good umpire.

SLIDING.

Toboggan-sliding days have come,
The saddest of the season,
When baseball teams go on the bum
For no apparent reason.

The Phils that led the bloomin' league
Are headed for the bottom.
Their pitchers suffer from fatigue,
And all the batters swat 'em.

Tom Jones is one of the saddest persons extant. Imagine a fight for the lightweight title and some one else there to count the gate receipts.

After being walloped, stepped on and otherwise abused, John McGraw draws a five-day suspension. Mr. Lynch shows almost intelligence enough to be accepted on a jury.

Bad Year for Georgia Players

Cobb--Rucker Both Out of Whack

BROOKLYN, N. Y., July 7.—This seems to be a hard year on celebrated Georgia ball players. Ty Cobb is in bad shape. And now Nap Rucker also has gone bad.

"Nap" may not pitch in his old form for some time to come. He will not pitch at all for the present if he takes the advice of his physician. The big Georgian has a bad arm, so bad in fact that for over two weeks his curve ball has been a myth.

The trouble with the arm is the indirect result of an accident he met with in the team's long stay at home early in the season. In a game against the St. Louis Cardinals "Nap" had the thumb of his pitching hand knocked out of gear.

Instead of waiting until the injured member had entirely healed, "Nap" got back into the game because he argued that he could pitch without using his thumb. He changed his style of delivery because of the damaged thumb, and it is believed, in doing so, he put too much of a strain on certain muscles in his shoulder. "Nap" says for two weeks he has not been able to pitch a curve ball, which accounts for the peculiar exhibitions that he has been giving of late.

THE big Georgian said yesterday that he does not know how he ever got through that extra-inning game with the Phillies. He says he was able to beat the Giants because the McGrawites were looking for him to pitch curve balls and "Nap" was not pitching them for the very good reason that he couldn't.

President Ebbets sent "Nap" to a specialist. The specialist gave it as his opinion that while the arm was not seriously injured, "Nap" would be unable to get his arm back in shape unless he gave it a good rest. The rest thing does not make a hit with "Nap." He said yesterday that he did not know whether to stay out or not.

* * *

THREE years ago Rucker had trouble with his arm and it was caused by fooling with different kinds of deliveries. At that time he had developed quite a spitter and was using it with great success. Then his arm started to bother him.

One day he mentioned it to Hank O'Day. According to "Nap," Hank proceeded to give him a fine little bawling out for using the spitball. The veteran umpire attributed all the trouble to "Nap" changing his style of delivery, by which he put a strain on muscles that "Nap" did not bring into play with his regular delivery.

Carl Thompson May Be Signed by Smith

Carl Thompson, former University of Georgia star, may be signed by Manager Billy Smith to take the place of one of his wavering hurlers—probably Paul Musser. It will depend on what terms can be agreed upon.

Thompson has had a bad season with Birmingham and was finally turned back by Molesworth on the New York Americans. They wanted to send him to the New England League, but he preferred to pitch in the South. If Smith can make a deal with him he will probably give him a trial. The local manager believes that hard luck and weak batting support beat Thompson in most of his games with the Barons and that with the local team he will be a winner.

CARDS SIGN ANOTHER PITCHER.

ST. LOUIS, MO., July 7.—Another hurler is coming to aid the Cardinals in the National League pennant race. He is Rice Williams, a member of the Great Falls club of the Union Association. The newcomer will not join Huggins' crew until September 14. The announced price for the pitcher was $2,500.

BEARISH ADVICES DEPRESS COTTON

NEW YORK, July 7.—Buying of August contracts was the only feature at the opening of the cotton market today. This position opened 13 points higher, but other prices ranged 2 to 4 points higher than last Thursday's closing quotations. Changes at Liverpool over the holidays were slight and weather conditions were very favorable.

A little pressure in new crop positions after the call due to private crop advices from the South, and prices worked off sharply. August suffered the greatest loss by declining from 12.18, opening quotations, to 12 cents. Other positions show recessions aggregating from 6 to 8 points from the opening range.

Trading during the forenoon was very small and sentiment was extremely bearish. It was reported that Liverpool was a fair seller of August, which, of course, had its effect. Later the market recovered a few points of the early loss, price movement being 1 to 3 points under the previous close.

During the afternoon session the volume of business was extremely light. Sentiment was against the market, but the crowd was afraid to push their commitments to any great extent, owing to the small stock on hand and price fluctuated within a moderate range.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net decline of 8 to 11 points from the final quotations of last Thursday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, July 7.—Weather conditions since Thursday were favorable, particularly the return of fair weather in the Western States, which had enough rain. The central and Atlantic States had further good showers, which were particularly needed in Arkansas. Indications are for generally fair, warm weather, except probably showers and cooler in Northwest Texas, Northwestern Oklahoma, East Tennessee and North Carolina.

Political news from Europe is bad and reflected in a decline in English Consols.

Our market opened about 7 points lower on new crops, but ruled very steady at the decline without selling pressure.

New York says the trade is bearish, but fears the situation in the old crop months, owing to very small stock, which is expected to be down to 15,000 bales by the end of the month.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Logan & Bryan: We feel that lower range of values will ensue, although we would not follow the short side too closely.

A. Norden & Co.: We continue to feel that a better policy for the present will be to buy on such breaks as we had today.

Morris H. Rothschild & Co.: We continue to advise purchases of cotton around present levels.

Habersham King, in his latest report, says about 15 per cent of the belt rain is needed to prevent deterioration. As to the remaining 85 per cent, he considers conditions as near perfect as they well can be, particularly in the two Carolinas and Texas. Since date of this report the dry districts had general rain, relieving danger.

Trading in the market to-day was in a small volume. Sentiment was very bearish. There was practically no feature.

Gwathmey and Russell were good buyers of August at the outset to-day. Liverpool, however, sold the option.

Dallas wires: "Texas clear and warm. Oklahoma generally partly cloudy and clear."

NEW ORLEANS, July 7.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map favorable; partly cloudy in the northern border of the belt, fair rest of the belt; nice rains in Arkansas, central Mississippi, Gulf districts and along the Atlantic Coast. Indications are for generally fair, except in Northwest Texas, Oklahoma and North Carolina, which may get some showers.

Washington forecast for week: Generally fair during week; may be a few scattered thundershowers; seasonable temperatures.

* * *

The Memphis Commercial-Appeal summary shows that last week probably was the most favorable of the season on the cotton crop. At least the crop made better progress than during any other similar period this year. Under the stimulus of good rains plenty of sunshine and warm days and nights the plant made splendid growth and, while still a little late, made up much lost time during the week. The plant is strong and stock is beginning to branch out and is blooming and fruiting heavily.

Rains fell in sections all over the belt during the week. They were the heaviest and most nearly general in Texas and Oklahoma, where practically the entire area of both States received good rains. In the central valley the drouth was relieved, except in scattered localities that comprise a very small total area. In the east no great need of moisture had been felt, but good rains fell at the end of the week.

The high state of cultivation that has characterized the crop from the start was in no way abated during the week. Fields are almost universally clean and fifth of soil probably is more nearly perfect than ever before known. The feature of the crop places the plant in the best shape to withstand another drouth or rain with the least possible damage.

There is still complaint of boll weevil in infested districts. They are numerous in sections of Mississippi and hardly worth mentioning to date is hardly worth mentioning. Farmers are continuing a relentless war against the pest, and in some sections they seem to have won their fight.

STOCKS WEAK ON BAD CABLE NEWS

Pittsburg Bank Failure Also Was Depressing Factor — Street Awaits U. S. Report.

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, July 7.—Following the three-day holiday the stock market opened weak to-day and prices ranged from fractions over a point lower.

Chesapeake and Ohio was sold in considerable quantity, going to 53¼ for a loss of 1⅛. Union Pacific sold off ⅝.

Among the other declines were Amalgamated Copper ⅝, American Can ⅝, American Smelting ⅛, Atchison ⅝, United States Steel common ½, Southern Pacific ⅝, New York Central ½, Reading ½, Northern Pacific ⅛, Anaconda ⅛ and Canadian Pacific ⅝. Baltimore and Ohio rose ½ and St. Paul gained ⅝.

After half an hour some issues rallied and a firmer tone was evident.

The curb was steady.

Americans in London were firm and Canadian Pacific there was steady.

The situation in the Balkans is exercising a depressive influence over the European money market and to-day $3,000,000 gold was engaged in New York for London.

There was little to the trading during the forenoon. Union Pacific was freely supplied, declining to 145½; Canadian Pacific moved up to 214⅝; Amalgamated Copper and Pennsylvania Railroad were off ⅛. Steel remained unchanged. There was fractional recessions in Reading, Southern Pacific, Atchison and New York Central. The tone was dull before noon.

Call money loaning at 2 per cent.

The confidence was depressed by the Pittsburg bank failures and losses were sustained in the last hour. Compared with the noon range of prices, the following declines were suffered:

Amalgamated Copper, ⅛; American Can, ⅝; Canadian Pacific, ½; St. Paul ⅛; Reading, ⅜; Union Pacific, 1, and Steel, ¼. In the last few minutes the list slightly strengthened.

The market closed dull. Governments unchanged; other bonds steady.

STOCK GOSSIPS

The New York Financial Bureau says: "Would buy standard and attractive issues conservatively on fair opportunities. Information channels favor a trading position."

* * *

Dow Jones says: "Result of strike vote among conductors and trainmen of Eastern railroads to be announced to-morrow. Democratic caucus of tariff to-day. American stocks in London easy, unchanged to ⅝ off. Twelve industrials decline .01. Twenty active rails advanced .01."

* * *

Potter, of N. L. Carpenter & Co., says: "The market may show a reactionary tendency to-day on account of the European situation. The prospects of a big railroad strike and a poor bank statement. However, do not expect any decline to carry prices very far from this level and would accumulate stocks carefully on weak spots. The Government crop report on grain due this week will give condition of corn, which is most important, and its private estimates it should be very satisfactory."

* * *

The weakness of the market is due to the foreign situation, but the Government crop report, which will be published this week, should be very favorable. Private estimates show the corn crop will be over 3,000,000,000 bushels. Should the Government figures show these estimates to be correct, it should help prices and cause a moderate rally. —Potter.

Grain Notes

King, of Toledo, says in his Missouri crop report: "Wheat yield 16 bushels, against 12.6 last year when crop was 22,000,000; 85 per cent of crop is harvested, against 51 per cent last year; quality 96. On Government acreage, yield suggests 38,000,000 bushels. Oats, condition 86 per cent, against 68 per cent in June and 94 per cent last year, when the crop was 30,000,000 bushels. Crop indicated 20,000,000 bushels."

* * *

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. says: "There has been some rain in Northwest with generally favorable temperatures. Primary receipts to-day will doubtless show a large total as a result of accumulations over the holidays and the visible will doubtless again show a decrease. We are inclined to look for a steady wheat market to-day without important price changes.

"Corn—The belt has received very little rainfall since Thursday, and some extremely high temperatures have prevailed in Kansas, but lower temperatures report this morning with some rains in Nebraska and Missouri.

"Oats—Buyers seem to come in on all fair recessions, basing purchases on general belief of a moderate yield.

"Cotton—Market may have some setbacks, but we do not look for any decline of moment."

* * *

Private messages from Winnipeg, Duluth, Glenwood, Thief River Falls, Hankinson, Harvey, Portal and Endlin indicate clear weather with temperatures around 60 degrees.

"Weather since Thursday: North Dakota and Minnesota had excellent rains; Illinois scattered rains, mostly over good parts of States; South Dakota, some rains, but light. Canadian Northwest had fair rain."

* * *

B. W. Snow's crop report for July 1: "Condition of corn 85.9, against 83.8 per cent last year. Acreage 108,000,000, or 1 per cent increase. Crop indicated on basis July par for condition, 2,964,000 000 bushels, against a similar indication of 2,811,000,000 last year.

"If present condition should be maintained until harvest it would forecast a crop of 3,147,000,000 bushels, against 3,-125,000,000 last year. Winter wheat condition 81, a decline of 4 points since the June 1 report, and indicates a crop of about 487,000,000 bushels on an estimate of acreage and about 480,000,000 on the Government estimate. Loss mainly in Kansas. Spring wheat condition drops from 93 to 87.8, mainly as a result of drouth in South Dakota. On the basis of July par of condition this indicates crop about 230,000,000 bushels, against an indicated crop similarly figured a year ago of 271,000,000 bushels.

"If present condition maintained until harvest it would forecast a crop of 251,-000,000 bushels, against 330,000,000 yield last year. This makes a July indication total crop, wheat 710,000,000 bushels, against 629,000,000 last July and if present conditions are maintained until harvest, an indication for 731,000,000 bushels, against a final estimate last year of 730,000,000 bushels.

"Condition of oats 75.8 against 87 per cent last month. On the basis of July par for condition this indicates (on Snow's acreage) a crop of 983,000,000 bushels or on Government acreage, 1,-023,000 bushels.

"Last year the July 1 Government indication was 1,239,000,000 estimated, was raised to 1,418,000,000 bushels."

ATLANTA LIVE STOCK MARKET.

By W. H. White, Jr., of the White Provision Company.

Cattle receipts increasing with the larger supply of grass fed stock. Good kinds scarce and reasonably strong. While the bulk coming is of only medium quality and is only ordinary flesh, which is considered generally as undesirable killers, and while the prices have ranged lower, the quality is considerably better than the receipts three weeks ago. The demand has been light for the past several days, which together with the plain class of cattle has depressed the market and values are probably a full quarter lower on medium and a half lower on common grades than a week ago.

Tennessee sheep and lambs are plentiful and the extreme prices of two weeks ago have been lowered by about 1 cent per pound.

Hog supply about equal to the demand and the yards are kept cleaned up from day to day. Several loads of extra choice packers were among the week's receipts and brought top prices. Market is steady.

Good to choice steers, 1,000 to 1,200, $5.50@6.00; good steers, 800 to 1,00, $5.25@6.00; medium to good steers, 700 to 850, $5.00@5.50.

Good to choice beef cows, 800 to 900, $4.50@5.50; medium to good cows, 700 to 800, $4.25@5.00.

Good to choice heifers, 750 to 850, $4.75@5.25; medium to good heifers, 650 to 750, $4.00@4.50.

Medium to common steers, if fat, 800 to 900, $4.00@5.00; medium to common cows, if fat, 700 to 800, $3.75@4.25; mixed common, 600 to 800, $3.25@3.75; good butcher bulls, $3.50@4.00.

Prime hogs, 160 to 200, $8.50@8.80; good butcher hogs, 140 to 160, $8.40@8.50; good butcher pigs, 100 to 140, $8.25@8.50; light pigs, 80 to 100, $7.75@8.00.

Above quotations apply to corn-fed hogs; mash and peanut fattened, 1 to 1½ cents.

CLEARINGS SOMEWHAT OFF.

Atlanta's clearings for June were $44,695,193, and for the first six months of 1913 they were $335,143,406, both figures being but slightly below last year's levels.

Slow collections and complete absence of speculation are given as causes by Bradstreet's, which further remarks that in view of the halt of speculation, the showing is remarkably good.

MILLER & COTTER COTTON LETTER.

MEMPHIS, July 7.—Crop news is favorable and weather over holiday was ideal, rains falling East of the river and none in Texas and Oklahoma, but in absence of speculation markets show no definite tendency. Sentiment is bearish, but talent is afraid to sell it with summer months in hands of manipulators. Pending legislation is also killing off business.

HOGS HIGHER; RECEIPTS LIGHT.

CHICAGO, July 7.—Because of the holiday live stock loading in the country for Monday's market was light and prices advanced. Cattle and hogs gained 10 to 15 cents, while live mutons were marked up 15 to 25 cents. Hogs sold up to 9.20, with the bulk at 9.15. There were 21,000 at eleven markets, against 102,000 last week. Cattle sold largely at 5.60 to 8.50 and lambs crossed the 8-cent line.

Article Is Written for Benefit of the New Breeder of Reds.

What I have to say is for the benefit of the new breeder of Reds, or those who are contemplating starting with Reds, enabling them to tell a good red from a poor one and help them decide for themselves the value of Rhode Island Reds you buy. There are plenty of breeders of Reds that do not know what a really good Red should be, and these breeders are doing the breed harm on all sides by telling what they think they know, and selling beginners fowls that come nearer the stand of Buff Rock or Buff Wyandottes than Rhode Island Reds. In a general way we will discuss Rhode Island Reds and try to arrive at some definite conclusion as to what one should be in shape and color. First, the head. Reds should have a pretty fair sized comb with five points, red ear lobes, red eyes, and a horn colored beak, all in proportion. Common defects are too many points to comb, lopped comb and eyes not red. Now, the feet and legs should be yellow with a red pigment down the sides and free from feathers. The common defects are slaty legs in females and feathers on the legs and feet of the males. Now, for the body of a Red. The general shape should be a horizontal back, broad on the shoulders and free from pinched effect at the tail. A long keel bone and the body carried in such a way that it will be oblong in shape, and not long, as the Wyandotte. Common defects of shape are short back, pinched tail, upright carriage with wings pointing downward instead of a horizontal position, short keel bone and narrow backs. Pay especial attention to shape, as that is the most important part and characteristic that differs from all the other breeds. This is the utility part. It makes the good layers and the good fryers, too. The color of a Rhode Island Red should be RED, with the exception of its tail, which should be black, and with black markings in the wings. The females have ticking in the hackle, and the males should be free from it. This is the main thing, they should be RED, red on top and red to the skin, and a Rhode Island Red is not a Red unless he is red. The common defects of color are washed out buff females, or females very dark in outer color and smutty under color. I had rather have a buff female with good clean under color than a dark hen with smutty color. This is choosing the lesser evil. A good male is the same color from head to tail with a red or salmon under color and a black tail. It is hard to get them with the same shade of red all over, and they are most likely to have light colored hackle and dark wing bows. An otherwise fine bird often has white or smut in under color of hackle, or near the root of his tail. You will often find light patches in under color over the hips and dark places on the back. These are minor points and faults of birds that are otherwise often the finest of specimens. Now that we must not breed from the bird that has any of these faults mentioned, that we must take all these things into consideration in sizing them up and breed from the best you have, and gradually you will get them nearer and nearer the ideal Rhode Island Red. Do not stress color at the expense of shape, size and vigor. As the three last mentioned are the mainstays of this breed, as well as all the others. You may have a beautiful cockerel, but he may lack the size and vigor to make a good breeder, and if you use him you will be a sadder and wiser man. Rhode Island Reds given a free range are likely to have the best plumage at the fall fair.

Medium-Sized Acreage Tracts

ALL of us know the profit that is usually made from acreage.

It is almost a conceded fact that if a person owns good acreage, he has a sure profit in it sooner or later. When we think of acreage propositions, we think of lots of land, and naturally lots of money, because the usual acreage transaction involves a great deal of money. The demand for good, close-in acreage for subdivision purposes is increasing every day. A trip to the outskirts of the city in any direction you choose to take will convince you of this fact. We are going to offer a tract of about 100 acres, between Decatur and East Lake, which we have cut up into five, ten and fifteen acre tracts. The price and terms on these tracts make it possible for almost anybody to handle them.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Big Profits Made In Acreage Deal

Mrs. Harper Buys English Property. To Name Realty Head—New York Times on Candler Investments.

Captain James W. English has given a warranty deed to Mrs. Lelah O. Harper on 80 acres of land in land lot 187, the consideration being $8,247, or at the rate of $105 an acre, and Saturday Mrs. Harper sold 21 acres to Harper Brothers for $10,500, or at the rate of $500 an acre. The enhancement covered a period of a little more than seven years, the deal between Captain English and Mrs. Harper having taken place February 28, 1906.

This property is between Bryant's District and Oakland City. The part sold by Captain English was the north half of the land lot, excepting 9.15 acres, being lots 1 to 9 and 12 to 16, inclusive, in block 4. Mrs. Harper sold to Harper Brothers the southeast corner of Harper Street and DeFoor Avenue.

To Name Realty Head.

Members of the Atlanta Real Estate Board will hold their regular monthly dinner the night of July 18 at the Cafe Durand, at which time a new head for the board will be elected, to succeed Charles P. Glover. Some propositions will be heard to change the by-laws. One of these would make it possible for the president to succeed himself.

There has been much speculation over the probable president. Among the names suggested are Harris G. White, now vice president of the board; W. A. Foster, of Foster & Robson; S. B. Turman, of Turman, Black & Calhoun, and Carlos Lynes, of Thomson & Lynes.

The nominating committee will name a man and he will be voted in by the members. Charles P. Glover, ex-officio; M. F. Ramsey, J. H. Ewing, M. C. Kiser and H. W. Dews are on this committee.

Sells Three Corners.

Ex-Governor Joseph M. Brown has been in a unique real estate deal, involving the transfer of three corners out of four in a 50-foot radius. Ex-Governor Brown sold for the estate of the late Julius L. Brown the north east, southeast and southwest corners of Crew and Little Streets to Victor R. Smith for $5,500. Mr. Smith has also bought a bond-for-title interest in a parcel on Currier Street west of Courtland from Thomas J. Lynch for $5,000 cash, notes and the assumption of certain incumbrances.

Sales in Piedmont Heights.

W. H. Allen, of the Edwin P. Ansley Real Estate Agency, has sold for himself to C. C. Braswell two residence lots in Piedmont Heights for a total of $5,200. The buy was for investment.

Pace's Ferry Road Transfer.

An interesting warranty deed has gone to record in the transfer of a 280 by 600 foot lot on Pace's Ferry Road, 1,118 feet west of Tuxedo Drive, from Mrs. Allison B. Morrison to W. B. Disbro for $14,000, or at the rate of $50 a front foot.

Three Homes and 25 Lots Sold.

J. W. Dobbins & Co. have sold three houses and 25 lots in the East Lake Land and Improvement Company's subdivision at East Lake. Mr. Dobbins has also sold three bungalows in various sections for a total of $10,250.

Mr. McCrory's Salesmanship.

I. C. McCrory, the well-known College Park citizen, is receiving the congratulations of friends on a rather remarkable achievement in real estate salesmanship. At the conclusion of the Odd Fellows' Fourth of July barbecue at College Park Mr. McCrory put up 23 residence lots and sold them in short order. No notice of the contemplated sale had been given. The lots adjoined the place where the barbecue was held.

Interest in New Subdivision.

A good deal of interest has been caused by the announcement that the Atlanta Development Company will open up July 15 Highland View, a new subdivision of forty 50 by 250 foot lots west of Druid Hills and north of Ponce DeLeon Avenue. The prices will be $1,400 to $1,700 per lot. Robert H. Jones will handle the property for the development concern, but plats will also be placed with various realty agencies.

Many Plans for Club.

Since the publication of tentative plans for a new University Club home, additional details have been given out. The club is also figuring with William Worth Martin on a site on the north side of East Baker Street back of the old Goldsmith property on Peachtree Street; with the owners of the Atlanta School of Medicine building at the northeast corner of Bartow and Luckie Streets; with the proprietors of the Stafford apartments on Carnegie Way; with Walter G. Cooper on his property at the northeast corner of Luckie and Spring Streets, to erect a bachelors' apartment and club combined, and with the owners of the Roy property on the north side of East Ellis Street back of the Robert F. Maddox place on Peachtree.

The University Club is looking for a place with 20 bedrooms and a 40 by 50 foot assembly hall for meetings. The executive council thinks it may find a place of this kind already built. Otherwise, it may be necessary to build or remodel. If the medical college site should be procured the building would be thoroughly overhauled.

Comment on Candler Move.

Asa G. Candler has chosen wisely in his New York and Atlanta investments, thinks a writer in The New York Times. Mr. Candler is compared with Frank W. Woolworth, the capitalist, as follows:

"The prejudice which financial institutions and corporations have held against real estate investments for many years is dying out. More and more we find conservative banking institutions handling real estate securities. They are beginning to realize the soundness of an investment which has from time immemorial been the bedrock foundation of savings bank strength. We find individuals of wealth like Frank W. Woolworth and Asa G. Candler putting into improved real estate profits earned in merchandise.

"The latter illustrates the trend of the time by building in both Atlanta and New York. We find corporations like the United Cigar Stores buying the property, where it can, on which their stores stand. We see the New York Central Railroad building not only a railroad terminal but income-producing office buildings.

"Real estate is coming into its own because wealthy and conservative men and corporations are investing in it, and they are investing only where facts and figures prove that a profit is to be paid on the money expended. Real estate is not bought and sold, dwelling and office buildings are not erected in the haphazard way that obtained not so many years since.

"That very definition of real estate has changed. We used to think of it as a lot, bare ground. The Woolworth Building is real estate; so is the Metropolitan Tower; so is the Verona apartment house. Before the Woolworth Building was erected its owner knew how many persons passed its portals in the course of a day.

"He knew, so far as could be known, the number of vacancies in the downtown office buildings. He studied downtown land values and rental values, he studied the trend of occupancy in the various trades and professions, he studied the service given tenants by other office buildings."

What Race Track Gambling Did for One Man

It Has Done the Same and Worse for Many Another. No ROMANCE in This

(Copyright, 1913.)

A reader asks us to print a brief account of one man's gambling experience, published in a newspaper at El Paso, Texas.

He writes: "The story is one of the most direct appeals on the subject I have ever read, and if presented with the forcible coloring you are prepared to give it, it will undoubtedly 'go home' to those who are just starting to feel what the man it tells about must have felt when he still had the opportunity of honorably quitting the game."

We print the story exactly as the El Paso newspaper printed it—no "coloring" is needed.

We say once more to the young men tempted by gambling, and to fathers and mothers careless about their sons' associations:

GAMBLING IS THE WORST, MOST DANGEROUS VICE IN CIVILIZATION.

It is worse than drink, for it destroys honor, as well as health.

Gambling long maintained will make any man a thief or a worse criminal.

There is NO honorable professional gambler, as there is no honorable professional burglar.

Gambling leads to sorrow, poverty, disgrace and crime.

Here is the plain story of one gambler, published in the Texas newspaper:

OLD STORY OF RUIN IN THE RACING GAME.

The Man Who Followed It, Precariously and Otherwise, for Years, and His Sad Ending.

It is the old story of ruin from the racing game. He drifted to El Paso when the Juarez track was opened for the first time. Then he claimed to be representing a string of Eastern papers as racing correspondent. But this was only for the purpose of obtaining a badge and admission to the press box. That first season was a hard one for the followers of the game, and he finally started issuing racing results in the form of posters to be hung in saloons and restaurants and cigar stores at the close of the day's racing. This made him a living and left him a little margin to play on the ponies, and that was all life held for him. In summer, when the racing plant in Juarez was closed, he would drift from place to place, where short meets were held, and he succeeded in getting a living in some manner unknown to his friends.

One rainy Sunday morning, in a little second-class restaurant, he told the story of his downfall. It is the cut-and-dried story of the effect of racing on young men. But it was true as he told it. Once he had been the confidential man and assistant manager of a big book binding and stationery house in Buffalo. He was earning a good salary with the promise of a place in the firm soon. Then the company decided to open a branch plant in Chicago to supply the bank and wholesale trade. The young man was selected as the branch manager because of his ability. He went to Chicago and was doing a big business for the firm and had received a half dozen raises since the branch was opened.

One Saturday afternoon in summer he spent his half holiday at the track where the horses were running. He laid a bet for fun. He won and wagered another. This likewise doubled his money, and he plunged. The germ had entered his blood, and he started a consistent policy of race track gambling.

The inevitable happened and he lost his position. Naturally, he turned to the easy money game which had cost him his job. He became a bookmaker, a sheet writer and a gambler. He followed the game to Florida when it was outlawed in Illinois. From there he went from place to place, finally landing in El Paso. By that time he was middle-aged and there were streaks of gray in his hair. When the races closed last spring he was neither physically nor financially able to follow the crowd to Latonia.

He remained here and lived the best he could. His brooding resulted in his making $1,000,000 mind bets on favorites in races that had been run. Wednesday night he was detained by the police on suspicion of being insane. His brooding over his downfall had been too much for his mind, and it had failed him. He is now in the county jail, where he will be held until he is examined by an insanity board.

An Appeal for a Famous American Name

Julian Hawthorne a few days ago observed his sixty-seventh birthday in the Federal penitentiary here in Atlanta. This month he will be entitled to a parole, and thousands of admirers of his distinguished father and friends of the son, who think him more sinned against than sinning, will shortly lay their views and their appeal before President Wilson.

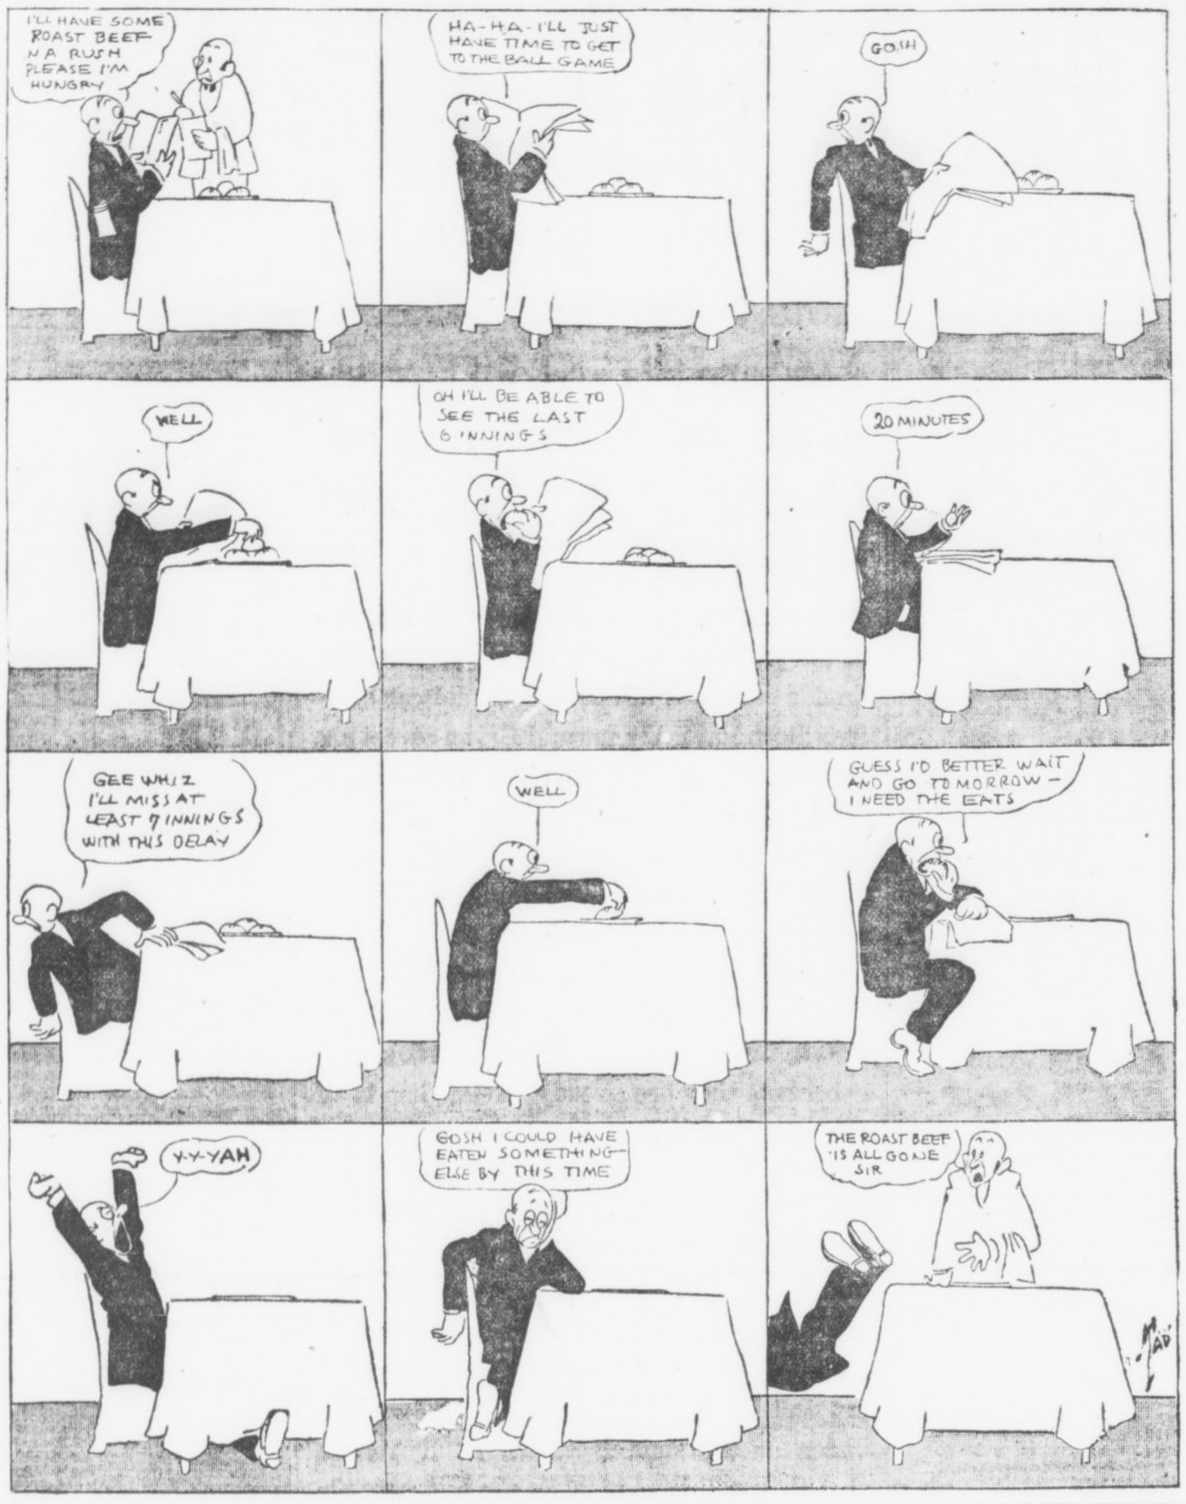
The President will be told that Julian Hawthorne was misled by evil associates in the lending of his name to get-rich-quick swindlers, from which he profited little or nothing; and that he was as much the dupe of his crooked associates as those victims who purchased stocks in the enterprises which his name was used to exploit.

This son of a brilliant American now finds himself in his old age humiliated before the eyes of the nation and in the eyes of the literary men of the world—through his own weakness and ignorance of the harsher ways of the world.

If a chief conspirator, like C. W. Morse, can be pardoned, why not a dupe, after he has been as bitterly punished as has Julian Hawthorne?

This newspaper gladly joins all admirers of Nathaniel Hawthorne in their efforts for his son and in their appeal to the President to relegate, as soon as possible, this record sinister on a famous name to the generous domain of the forgotten.

Did It Ever Occur to You?



Ella Wheeler Wilcox Writes on Motherhood

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

(Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner.)

GIRLS of seventeen are not, as a rule, given to serious thought.

But there are rare exceptions.

Such an exception has been found in a young wife of seventeen, who is suddenly aware that she is to become a mother in four months' time.

Now she is filled with awe, and with anxiety! She says: "I have always had an ideal of exerting a good influence over an unborn child; and now I am distressed to think that all these months have passed without any conscious effort on my part. I have played ball, swam and indulged in other athletics according to my regular custom. And in leisure moments I have read Milton and Shakespeare and Burns.

"I am splendidly well, but I am most anxious lest I have done things I ought not to do, and left undone other things at this critical time.

Moderation in All Things.

"What can I do for the next few months to benefit my unborn child?"

The very best thing this young mother expectant can do is to exercise with moderation, rest when she feels like it, eat and drink with moderation, and wisdom, and be happy and trust God.

Motherhood is the most natural thing in the world for women who are normal and in good health.

It often produces a normal, healthful condition for those who are not well.

Nature never intended any woman to utterly change her mode of life when expecting a child, if her mode of life had been a reasonable and sensible one previously.

Outdoor life and athletics are both reasonable and sensible, and more harm would have resulted to both mother and child by giving them up suddenly, and taking too great concern about a perfectly natural condition, than by continuing to indulge in these pastimes as long as this young woman did.

No doubt the coming child will be strong in body, with excellent lung power.

And its coming into this plane of existence will not be attended with any abnormal difficulties.

Outdoor Life and Exercise.

We must remember that the Indian woman rides her horse, and performs all sorts of laborious tasks up to the very hour of her delivery.

The wife of an army officer told the writer of frequently seeing such women drop out of line for a few hours and return to the tribe later with the new-born child wrapped in a blanket.

All women who live an outdoor life, and who exercise in the open air, have less complications in maternity than those reared under hothouse conditons.

This young mother of seventeen, who takes such a serious view of her responsibility, is certain to bring a strong, beautiful child into the world, and equally sure of guiding it into a splendid maturity.

The Difficult Hours.

She need only fill her mind with love thoughts, and with faith in God and trust in the Unseen Powers which govern this earth, to have all go well with her.

In God's great universe, there are Guardian Angels provided for every mortal, and in such degree as we love and reverence these angels, and as we live worthy of them, do they guide and help us in our difficult hours.

If we refuse to believe in them, or continually think and talk and act in a way to pain them, we alienate them and deprive them of their power to help us.

About the expectnat mother are bands of Shining Ones, and if she will rest happy in the thought of their protection, and regard them as messengers and emissaries from God Himself, great strength and peace and happiness will come to her.

And great blessings upon her child.

For of such are the Kingdom of Heaven.

PERFUMED POWDER

By WEX JONES.

THE newest skirt for woman—it's a risky thing to knock it.
For it's cutely fitted up with a cunning pistol pocket.

Oh, should you argue with the fair,
Powder smoke will fill the air;
Bullets whizzy
Will make you dizzy;
You had better bow and scoot
Before the girl begins to shoot,
Because—this here is cowboy lore—
Words are nix with a forty-four.

Still, speaking of this latest fad, this cun[illegible] pistol pocket,
Here, I think, are several things extremely prone to block it;

A handkerchief
And a powder puff;
Some trading stamps
And a manicure buff;
Smelling salts
And a pocket glass;
Jumbled up
With a theater pass.
A recipe
For custard pie,
A headache cure
And a hook and eye——

The list's a good bit longer, but here I'll have to dock it,
For I've used up all the space allowed the lady's pistol pocket.

Rev. John E. White

Writes on

Sex in Religion

Woman Is the Mainstay of the Church and Expresses the Innermost Soul of Religion More Powerfully Than Man; Yet, He Says, She Has Had to Fight Against the Masculine Protest for Every Inch of Recognition in the Affairs of the Church.

WRITTEN FOR THE GEORGIAN

By REV. DR. JOHN E. WHITE

Pastor Second Baptist Church

"MADAM I may not call you, and mistress I loath to call you. I know not what to call you, but I thank you for your good cheer."

These are the words of Queen Elizabeth greeting the wife of Archbishop Parker. They indicate in a kindly temper the ecclesiastical ban on womanhood in the eighteenth century, which made even the wife of an archbishop a nonentity.

Put over against this the words of three great theologians—Tertullian, Erasmus, Rabelais—"Woman, thou art the gate of hell"—"An absurd and ridiculous animal"—"The greater part of them have hardly principles and depend for their morals on those they love."

This is the exhibit of the centuries on the subject of Sex in Religion up to the nineteenth. What we have of it in the twentieth century is equally banal, and much of it lingers in the modern religious world.

The Bar Sinister in Church.

It is an answer seeming fair, and pious to the point, when the limitations of female opportunity are protested, to say that in the church and in religion women have nothing to complain of; that they are free to exercise themselves in the work of the Lord.

If this were true, 'twere very true and very good. But the record of fact is discouraging.

From the beginning women have occupied no position of authority in the church. "Her voice has never been heard at a council, nor has her pen ever formulated a decree. Looking at religion in history, one would suppose at first sight that it was almost entirely a masculine affair.

Man has formulated its metaphysics, erected its theologies, founded and governed its institutions. He is its pope, priest and prophet; its legislator, preacher and pastor." From the Judean Decalogue, which includes the wife—"thy neighbor's wife"—in the list of man's chattels, down to the recent records of the Southern Baptist Convention and the Methodist Conference, the sex "bar-sinister" has persisted.

The fact readily acknowledged that women are the mainstay of religion has been strangely ineffective in overcoming the masculine prejudice against her religious equality.

Religion's Better Half.

The fixed prohibition, "thus far shalt thou come, but no further," has, however, not prevented women from exercising a powerful influence upon religious progress. The woman nature which expresses the innermost soul of religion more intimately than the man's, has projected itself tremendously, notwithstanding the ecclesiastical limitations set upon it.

Indirectly she has sweetened the sour theologians and softened the severe theologies. Through Monica we have Augustine, through Macrina we have Basil and Gregory, "who led them both to the faith and stirred them to their best work."

This list is a long one—through Jacqueline, Paschal, through Paula, Jerome, through Susanna Wesley, the Methodist Church, etc. But these consoling examples only make the wonder deeper that Christianity should have esteemed its most reliable exponent unworthy of absolute equality.

It scarcely meets the case to prove by illustrious examples that women are indispensable factors in religion. So have been the martyrs and the persecuted of all ages through what difficulties we know.

For the past century the woman movement in religion has been breaking through the barriers. In the Protestant communions the battle has gone on steadily and successfully, and so quietly as scarcely to be a battle. Yet in every one of the great denominations the right of woman to recognition as an equal co-laborer with man in the Kingdom of God has been challenged and opposed at every step. Mrs. Doremus for thirty years kept up the fight before the women were permitted to organize the first Woman's Missionary Society.

Among Southern Baptists 25 years ago a similar proposition was silently protested by the majority and outspokenly resisted by thousands. Among Southern Methodists a petition has been pending for years to give the women not equal, but more generous representation in the direction of the missionary funds contributed by themselves.

Fighting for Her Soul.

Speaking by the card, I have made efforts in country churches to organize women's societies, for doing the sort of work every Christian is commanded to do, only to discover insuperable prejudices in the minds of the brethren.

At the bottom of this discreditable history of female repression in religion lies the jealousy of the masculine prerogative. The principle of pernicious proxy, the right of the husband to discharge religious obligations for the wife is persistent to this hour in the practice of the churches.

It amounts in effect to a layman's priest craft, in which the man assumes to stand between the woman's soul and the free and full discharge of its responsibility in practical duty.

Now the clouds are breaking away and man is beginning to relent. It will be a good day for religion when the competency of every woman under God for all the freedom an individual soul is decreed for, without reference to sex, is heartily and universally proclaimed and enforced.

Letters From The Georgian's Readers

THE SYRIANS.

Editor The Georgian:

The recent case of naturalization in which Judge Henry A. M. Smith, of South Carolina, was interested, induces me to write the following: Judge Smith contends that Syrians are not entitled to citizenship in the United States. He has the right to give or refuse naturalization to the Syrian of his State, but the reasons given by him are not based on facts, and history does not support his position.

When we consider the part the Syrians have played in the history and development of the world, we readily see they are in no way connected with or related to the Sudanese. Three of the greatest monarchies of the ancient world—Chaldea, Assayria and Babylonia—were evolved and developed by the Syrian nation.

The inhabitants of Kurdistan, who are regarded as the descendants of the Syrians, not only speak a Semitic language, but believe themselves to be the same race with the Arabs and the same traditions are held of Syriana, who in their brief historical fragments recognize as their kinsmen the later Babylonians, Phoenicians and the Joktonian Arabs.

The Semitic race—that is the name of this division—was derived from Noah's son Shem, and this term Semitic has been adopted by scholars as probably descriptive of that ancient people who, branching from beyond Syria, carried their tribe into Northern Arabia, across the Red Sea and Upper Egypt into the African Desert, northward into Armenia, westward into Canaan and far out through the Mediterranean, touched the coast of Africa, and reaching even to Europe, Britain and spreading out to America. There has never been any mixing between the Syrians and the Sudanese. A great mountain range has ever separated the two races of people.

"THE HALF-MILLION" CITY.

Editor The Georgian:

I desire to subscribe to the spirit and purpose and to be enrolled as a member of the "Half-Million Club."

Great civic benefit can be accomplished by an emblem which will exemplify the spirit of Atlanta, the "Half-Million City," as advocated by The Georgian. You are to be congratulated in voicing the virile enthusiasm of the people.

Where else can you find a community that will subscribe in a single day something over $75,000 to entertain the Shriners' national convention, and almost a like amount that the city may enjoy, for one week, the most celebrated singers of the world? Atlanta's splendid banks, its lofty buildings, well-appointed hotels, excellent railroad facilities and geographical location make possible the ideal—the "Half-Million City"—in 1920.

GIRL TAKES 30 POISON TABLETS

Phone Operator, Despondent Over New Love Affair, Fails in Effort to Die.

Propped up in a bed at Grady Hospital, Miss Catherine Reese, the pretty telephone operator who tried to end her life with strychnine Sunday, told a pathetic story of two disappointments in love.

"It just seemed that there was nothing left to live for," she moaned, "but I am sorry I did it now."

Miss Reese was still white-faced and weak Monday from the effects of the poison. It is believed that she will have recovered within two or three days.

She told a graphic tale of the despondency that led her to the attempt at self-destruction and of her bitter grief and despair as she snatched a pad of writing paper to write a last message to her sweetheart even while the poison had her in its grasp.

Unable to Write Death Note.

"Sweetheart, you will never know——" she wrote in a scrawling hand as convulsions seized her. She was unable to finish the sentence.

"I know it was a foolish, foolish thing for me to do," she said at the hospital. "But everything was going against me. My mother was sick. My marriage was unhappy, for it is true that I have been married and that my case for divorce was to have come up to-day. Then came this other disappointment in love. I was tired and exhausted. Everything looked dark and so I just swallowed the strychnine.

"My husband's name is W. A. Skeene. He has been in the navy and we used to travel about the country quite a lot. He did not treat me kindly, though, and I left him soon after we came to Atlanta. I met a young man my the name of Golden Studstill about six months ago. He is a private at Fort McPherson. He paid me a good many attentions and I was attracted by him. He is the one who caused me to try to kill myself. We had a little quarrel the Fourth of July, but we made up afterward. On Saturday I worked on a switchboard from early in the morning until about 11 o'clock at night. When I came out Golden was waiting for me with three other fellows—Patrick Studstill, his brother; a young man by the name of Wood and William Briggs.

Quarreled on Auto Ride.

"We went automobile riding for a long time. Golden got very angry with me about something and was angry when he left me early Sunday morning. I tried to call him at Fort McPherson Sunday, but I couldn't get him. They were provoked at me out at the fort for calling so often. I finally became desperate and when I went to my room in Mrs. Bowers' house at 57 Fraser Street I swallowed the strychnine tablets. There must have been 25 or 30 of them.

"In a few minutes I was in terrible pain. I wanted to send a message to Golden, who was to have married me after I got my divorce. I thought it would be the last he ever would hear from me. I tried to write him, but the pain overcame me before I was finished."

Since her separation from her husband the young woman has been known by her maiden name. She lived for some time at 26 Capitol Avenue. She had lived at the residence of Mrs. Bowers only a week. She was left partially paralyzed by the convulsions induced by the poison, but this condition is wearing off gradually and the physicians expect an early recovery. Her attorney in the suit for divorce is W. H. Lewis. She was married May 31, 1909, and separated from her husband July 1, 1912.

While Studstill was in Waco at the Council Will Place Tax Receiver Under Rule of Assessors

The long fight between city tax officials will reach a climax at the meeting of Council Monday afternoon when a resolution to place the Tax Receiver George Beauchamp under the direction of the Tax Assessors is passed. The resolution calls on the Legislature to so amend the city charter.

It is expected by many that Mayor Woodward will veto the resolution and that Council will have to go over the whole affair again.

The Tax Assessors, C. D. Meador J. L. Harrison and John Malone, claim that Mr. Beauchamp has destroyed co-operation in the tax office.

The election of Messrs. Meador and Harrison comes up at the meeting. It is said that there will be no opposition to either of them.

2 Aviators Escape In 300-Foot Plunge

CHICAGO, July 7.—Glenn Martin, Los Angeles aviator, and Charles H. Day, his mechanician, escaped death by a small margin to-day when their hydro-aeroplane collapsed in Lake Michigan while going at a rate of 40 miles an hour.

Martin attempted to glide to the water from a height of about 300 feet when the machine shot downward and struck the water with terrific force.

The two men clung to the disabled plane until help reached them.

Boy Drowned While Bathing in River

Nat Jones, a 12-year-old boy, was drowned in the Chattahoochee River at Center Hill Monday morning. The boy was one of a crowd in swimming. According to witnesses of the tragedy, he became paralyzed with cramps and went down before anyone could reach him.

His body was brought up a short time later by C. C. Heard, county policeman. The boy lived with his stepfather, Sam Sparks, on the Mayson and Turner Road.

Robber Held, Failing To Make $1,500 Bond

Turpin failed to make bond and was sent back to his cell to await trial the first week in September.

STEEL TRUST QUIZ BOAST A BLUFF

WASHINGTON, July 7.—Edward Lauterbach, a New York lawyer, today confessed to the Overman lobby investigating committee he had told Lewis Cass Ledyard he was able to prevent or to head off the Congressional investigation of the Steel Trust.

Severely grilled, Lauterbach was forced to admit that, when he had told Ledyard of coming to Washington "to look over the situation," he actually had seen no member of the House or Senate, nor any other official. He had learned "that President Taft was opposed to the investigation from Henry B. Martin, the much-talked-about secretary of the Anti-Trust League."

Calls Claim Exaggeration.

"Then your statement to Ledyard that you had ben to Washington and learned things that prompted you to say the investigation could be stopped was a falsehood?" demanded Senator Reed.

"It was an exaggeration," replied Lauterbach.

Lauterbach, when cornered as to the source of his information about "inside matters" in Washington, each time was forced to admit that David Lamar and Martin, were his sole authority for his statements that President Taft did not want the investigation to proceed or that other high officials were opposed to the investigation.

Denies Posing as Power.

The witness declared that in his conversation with Ledyard, February 6, 1912, he did not represent himself either to have seen or to have been in the confidence of any member of the Democratic party.

Lauterbach declared he never had known Lamar in seven years purposely to do a wrong thing. He became acquainted with Lamar in 1906 when litigation regarding the Manhattan and Interborough railway lines in New York was pending, at which time Lamar represented the interests of Russell Sage and H. H. Rogers. He detailed several important lawsuits in which he was engaged as the result of his introduction to Rogers by Lamar.

Confirms Ledyard's Story.

Lauterbach also denied he called Lamar a blackmailer during his talk with Ledyard last year. Ledyard had testified before the committee that Lauterbach said he did not represent himself at that meeting as a representative of any member of the Democratic party. Lauterbach asserted this was correct and that his remark covered all subjects.

The witness asserted he had never discussed with Lamar the alleged forgery of $82,000,000 in the books of the Union Pacific. He repeatedly asserted he knew nothing of Lamar's impersonations of Congressmen until he heard his testimony before the Overman committee.

Lauterbach explained he engineered the purchase of a majority of the stock of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company by J. P. Morgan during the panic of 1907, and that "this panic was engineered by the men who were seeking to buy the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company and that they bought it much cheaper as a result of the financial cataclysm they precipitated."

Explains Wall Street "Pull."

Lauterbach explained that it was on account of his knowledge of the Tennessee Coal and Iron deal that he felt that he could influence Wall Street with regard to the steel investigation.

Lauterbach knew of the steel investigation resolution before it was introduced in the House. Lamar showed it to him. Lauterbach protested and went at once to tell Morgan about it.

Auto Truck Crushes Lad, 13, in Decatur Street; May Not Live

Julius Silverman, 13 years old, of 253 East Hunter Street, was run down and badly crushed at Decatur and Butler Streets by a Foote & Davies Company auto truck late Monday afternoon. It is not thought he will live.

J. L. Davis, of 161 Love Street, was driving the truck. He was arrested by Policeman G. E. Butler, pending an investigation of the circumstances of the accident.

The street was crowded and scores of persons were horrified by the spectacle. Davis said he was driving the truck at about five miles an hour, and that it was his opinion the boy must have lost his balance on the bicycle he was riding and fallen under the rear wheel of the truck. He recalled seeing Silverman mounting his bicycle as the truck was approaching.

Policeman Shaw rushed the unconscious boy to Grady Hospital. In addition to internal injuries, it was found that Silverman's left leg was broken in several places.

Painter's Death Accidental, Says Coroner's Jury

JACKSONVILLE, July 7.—E. O. Painter, the wealthy Jacksonville fertilizer manufacturer, who lost his life in the St. Johns River on May 22, came to his death by accidental drowning, according to the Coroner's jury, which to-day completed the Painter inquest. Attorneys for the insurance companies, which carried life and accident policies on Painter, aggregating $1,178,000, were not permitted by Coroner C. D. Abbott to cross-examine witnesses summoned before the jury.

The inquest was delayed several weeks while chemical and pathological analyses of Painter's stomach, brain and other vital organs were being made by chemists in Baltimore, and later because attorneys for one of the insurance companies instituted injunction proceedings to secure possession of Painter's vicera. The jury's verdict was based largely on the report submitted by the Baltimore chemists, that no trace of poison had been found.

Marriage Law Is Scored by Judge as He Frees Child-Wife

Declaring the marriage laws instead of the divorce laws of Georgia were in need of a radical reform, Superior Judge George L. Bell directed a jury Monday morning to find a verdict in favor of pretty Mrs. M. S. Stevens, a 15-year-old bride of a year ago, who asked a divorce, alleging cruel treatment.

Judge Bell charged the jury:

"Gentlemen, this is not a case for moralizing. This young woman is entitled to a divorce. It is not the divorce laws that need reforming, but the marriage laws. There should be some way to prevent people marrying at the age this young woman did, and there should be some way for both parties to determine the kind of proposition they are taking on for life."

Senate Once More Denies Its Hall to Women Suffragists

Ineffectual efforts were made by Senator W. D. McNeil, of the Twenty-second district, Monday morning for reconsideration of the resolution granting the Georgia Woman's Suffrage Association the use of the Senate chamber on the evening of Wednesday and Thursday, July 9 and 10.

The Senator's motion to take the resolution from the table, although buttressed with the forceful declaration that the Senate had no right to deny such a request coming from respectable citizens, was lost by a vote of 17 to 15.

Mason Returns Home To Try 9 Policemen

Carlos Mason, chairman of the Police Commission, returned to Atlanta Monday, having cut short his vacation to preside over nine trials before the commission Tuesday night. He had spent three weeks of a projected 30-day trip to New York, Washington and other points East.

In eight of the trials Tuesday night police officers suspended by Chief Beavers in connection with the Auburn Avenue blind tiger scandal will be defendants.

"The investigation by the ocmmission will be thorough," Chairman Mason said Monday.

Carolina Men Fight Fatal Pistol Duel

SAVANNAH, July 7.—A pistol duel between W. C. Mears, of Tarboro, and William Barnhill, of Tillman, S. C., resulted in the fatal wounding of Mears, who died in a hospital in Savannah.

There had been bad blood between the men for some time. Barnhill sent word to Mears that he would shoot him on sight. They met at Tillman, when Barnhill immediately began shooting. Mears fired several shots after he fell. Barnhill is under arrest.

Militants Fire Pier King Was to Visit

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOUTHPORT, ENGLAND, July 7. Militant suffragettes attempted to burn the famous Southport pier early to-day. If it had not been for volunteer firemen the structure would have been lost. Fishermen went to the aid of the firemen and succeeded in quenching the flames.

The damage is estimated at about $50,000. The women evidently intended the conflagration as a royal rebuke, as King George was scheduled to pass before the pier this afternoon.

LIVERPOOL, July 7.—A suffrage bomb was exploded in the cellar of the Liverpool Stock Exchange to-day and the building was partially destroyed.

Fascination of Death Leads Girl to Suicide

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, July 7.—Fascination for the mystery of death led Miss McDuff, a young American woman of wealth, beauty and ideals, to take her life in a little inn in the village of Villebon, according to a theory formed to-day by the police, who have been investigating the tragedy.

Miss McDuff is said to come from either a New York or a Cambridge, Mass., family.

The young woman, accompanied by an Englishman, arrived at Villacoublay a month ago. At the hotel where she lived she aroused much curiosity by her theories concerning death.

Clubwomen Waging Fight to Save Birds

Led by Miss Nina Hornady, a prominent woman educator, Georgia club women are making a vigorous protest against the Clapp amendment, permitting wild birds to be killed or trapped. Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, head of the Federation of Women's Clubs in Georgia, is giving her support to Miss Hornady, and Mrs. Shepard W. Foster, State D. A. R. regent, is assisting.

"The time is at hand when every man, woman and child who loves the little feathered song-birds must aid in preserving them to our woods and forests," said Miss Hornady.

Gen. Bourne, Leader Of State U. C. V., Dead

SAVANNAH, July 7.—The funeral of General William Henry Bourne took place this afternoon. He was commander of McLaws Camp and brigadier general of the Georgia Division, United Confederate Veterans.

General Bourne died Saturday night after an illness of a little more than two hours, following an attack of acute indigestion.

OPERATIONS OF SLAVERS IN HOTELS BARED

A new and sensational expose of vice conditions said to be prevalent in Atlanta was made Monday morning by Hattie Smith, a pretty 17-year-old girl, who was arrested in a hotel which was raided Sunday night.

If the statements of the Smith girl, who made a confession of her own guilt to the Chief, are true, Atlanta is in the clutches of one of the best organized vice systems in existence.

Certain downtown hotels, the girl claims, are the rendezvous of women procurers who go out on the streets and entice young girls in where they are provided with every comfort and convenience, in addition to being carried out on long automobile rides by strange men.

Gives Chief Names.

The names of at least one of these procurers has been placed in the hands of Chief Beavers, who will make an arrest before night, it is believed. The name of a prominent citizen of Atlanta also has been given to the Chief, in addition to the names of several women involved in the traffic, it is said.

Hattie Smith's story Monday morning was dramatic in the extreme. She told Chief Beavers how she left her home last Wednesday; how she met the woman procurer; how she was enticed into the hotel in question, and then the other details of her shame. Her confession was complete.

She admitted her guilt and then upon the query of the Chief told all she knew about the conditions, which, she says, she saw with her own eyes.

Tells Who Enticed Her.

In the course of the conversation the girl gave the Chief the names of several parties, including one or more prominent men of Atlanta, in addition to the name of the woman who enticed her to the hotel.

The arrest of a negro elevator boy in a downtown hotel shortly after noon was the first step taken by Chief Beavers in the new probe. The boy is believed to have knowledge of many of the denizens of the vice ring.

A number of downtown notels are said to be booked for the police dragnet.

Mrs. T. R. Frierson and C. N. Hughes, victims of the vice crusade Sunday night, were bound over under $200 bond each by Recorder Broyles Monday afternoon.

Mrs. William Jones, of 168 South Boulevard, who operates the house where the parties were arrested, was bound over under $500 bond on a charge of running a disorderly house. A third victim of the raid was C. R. Hutchinson, who was fined $10.

Mrs. Frierson is well known in Atlanta as the woman who was pardoned some time ago by Mayor Woodward. She says her home is in Jacksonville.

Local Stock Dealers See Trade Revival

Atlanta dealers in stocks and bonds report some revival of business. Disbursement of July dividends at a time when the prices of local stocks are low has brought some reinvestment demand, they say.

Several good-sized dividend checks have been turned over to investment dealers with instructions to purchase the "stamped" stock of the Georgia Railway and Electric Company, which is a guaranteed 8 per cent security, selling just now around 118. This stock has held firm, compared with other local securities.

"Power common" is attracting attention, too.

DEPARTMENT TO GOVERN BANKS PROPOSED

Bill, in Both House and Senate, Provides for Supervisor of State Institutions.

A bill providing for the creation of a department of banking to regulate and supervise approximately 600 State banks in Georgia was presented Monday to the House and Senate Committees on Banks and Banking by the Georgia Bankers' Association.

The bill, if passed, will revolutionize the method of supervision of State banks, as it will take such supervision entirely from the hands of the State Comptroller and his assistants.

Haynes McFadden, secretary of the Georgia Bankers' Association, said Monday morning that no lobby for the bill would be conducted; that it would be presented to the House and Senate Banking Committees, which may do as they see fit.

Bill Called Good One.

"The bill is a good one, we think," said Mr. McFadden, "and if passed will be a great benefit in the supervision of the State banks, which are now regulated by the State Comptroller and his two assistants.

"The present regulation and supervision is entirely inadequate, as is obvious, when it is brought out that these three men are supposed to conduct examinations of approximately 600 banks each year. Two examinations per year gives to each one of these men 400 inspections to make in 365 days."

The proposed bill provides for the creation of a department of banking, which shall be in charge of a superintendent appointed by the Governor for a term of four years, the first term beginning January 1, 1915, and expiring January 1, 1919.

Office to Pay $4,000 Year.

The superintendent shall receive a salary of $4,000 a year and shall have the power to appoint from time to time an assistant superintendent, who shall be ex-officio examiner, and such additional examiners and office assistants as may be required to discharge the duties of the office.

The assistant superintendent and special examiners shall be skilled accountants and familiar with the banking business. The assistant superintendent shall receive a salary of $2,000 per annum, while each assistant shall receive a salary of $1,800 per year.

Every bank, trust company and other corporation doing a banking business in the State, excluding private banks, copartnerships or voluntary associations and national banks, shall be subject to supervision by the State department.

Apartment Houses Must Quit Smoking

Chairman R. M. Harwell, of the City Smoke Commission, has warned department house owners who are resisting the anti-smoke law. These people were given until summer to remodel their furnaces so tenants might not be inconvenienced during cold weather. Now, Chairman Harwell says, a number of them have banded together to get the law repealed.

"The department house smoke evil is one of the worst in the city," he said.

"When they fire up in the fall they must comply with the law or be taken before the Recorder."

LEE'S ATTORNEY IS READY FOR WRIT FIGHT

Habeas Corpus Move to Free Negro in Phagan Case Due to Start Monday.

Habeas corpus proceedings in behalf of Newt Lee, negro night watchman at the National Pencil Factory, were promised Monday by the negro's attorney, Bernard L. Chappell. Settlement of this phase of the Phagan murder mystery will determine definitely the status of the negro.

It is known that the State regards Lee as a material witness in building up its case against Frank. The attitude of Mr. Chappell is that his client knows no more about he crime than he already has told, and should therefore be freed. Lee has told the detectives nothing which links any man directly with the crime. By the defense, his story is held to point to the guilt of Leo Frank no more than to the guilt of Conley.

The State, however, will fight any effort to give the negro his liberty. Solicitor Dorsey fears that Lee will get out of the jurisdiction of the court once he is permitted his freedom.

The battle over Lee is the only outward sign of activity in the Phagan case either by the defense or the prosecution, but it is known that the defense is busily engaged completing its case. One new witness was interviewed Saturday by Frank's lawyers, and his affidavit taken before a notary public. A strong net is being woven about Conley. The nature of the testimony is being kept secret, but it is known that the defense expects to free Frank by showing that it was Conley who committed the crime. The negro is said to be enmeshed in the testimony in the hands of the defense.

Despite rumors of another postponement, attorneys for the defense and prosecution said Monday that they would be ready to go ahead with the case at the time set for trial, July 28, and that they knew of no reason for further delay.

Jury to Consider Indicting Conley.

What was considered a direct reference to the Phagan case was made in the charge of Superior Judge George L. Bell to the Grand Jury Monday morning. He said he wanted to place particular emphasis on recent "horrible homicides" and urged the jury to probe deep in an effort to find clews that would lead to perpetrators.

The Grand Jury was organized at 9 o'clock Monday morning with W. D. Beattie foreman. Judge Bell made one of the shortest charges ever delivered in a Fulton County courtroom.

Immediately following the charge the jury went into executive session to consider bills presented by the Solicitor's office. After to-day's session the calendar of criminal business will be disposed of, and the jury will have every opportunity to take up any matters it might see fit.

A meeting will be called later in the week when a definite plan of action will be outlined for the term. It was regarded as likely that the Phagan case would be reopened and an indictment against Jim Conley considered.

Other matters that might be taken up are recent developments with the police department, in which eight patrolmen were suspended for alleged corruption, the counter charges of corruption made by them and charges of open vice.

Wind Storm Wrecks Waycross Churches

WAYCROSS, July 7.—Considerable damage was done in Waycross by a windstorm that swooped down on the city Sunday afternoon with no warning. Four churches were demolished and a dozen small houses blown from their foundations, three of the number turning completely over.

Trees and fences in all parts of the city were blown down and many windows and much plate glass were smashed. A three-story building used by negroes for their lodge meetings was so badly damaged it will have to be rebuilt.

BONUS FOR PONY CLUBS HELPS "TRAILERS"

Less Than Month Left for Contestants — Told to Imitate Milkman.

Three weeks and a few odd days remain of The Georgian and American pony contest. Not a moment of this time can be wasted by the boys and girls who want the beautiful little ponies which the whole city admired when they were paraded July 4.

The big bonus offer for clubs of five has expired. Nearly all the contestants worked hard, and turned in one or more clubs. Some turned in a dozen clubs. As rapidly as possible, these bonuses will be accredited, and the standings announced. Then it will be seen that some of the "trailers" now are out in front.

Good, solid work from now on will ccunt wonderfully. No doubt some of the contestants feel that they have seen every one possible—they can not think of the next place to turn for subscriptions. If they have been working conscientiously, this feeling is natural. But this is a large city. There are hundreds more, probably within walking distance of the contestants' homes, who have not been approached. Boys and girls now should cover their districts like the mailman does, a tireless house to house canvass will bring excellent results.

"Take your receipt books," advises the contest manager, "and go through the stubs. Tabulate carefully all those who took the paper for a month or two months. Note their expiration dates. Then see every one a few days before the time expires. Ten out of every eleven will renew. The sort of paper we are giving subscribers is the best possible help for the contestants. Their friends see they are getting their money's worth, and more."

Carnegie Explains Gift to Vanderbilt

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 7.—Andrew Carnegie, passing through London en route to Skibbo Castle, was seen by a representative of the Hearst papers in reefrence to the action of nine bishops of the Methodist Church over the $1,000,000 gift for the Vanderbilt University Medical School.

Mr. Carnegie wrote the following:

"The proper authorities have accepted Mr. Carnegie's gift and he has nothing whatever to say—he never gives to sectarian educational institutions, feeling that no one should be debarred from a medical education on account of his theological views."

Pastor Prefers Life Of Mule to Convict

"I would rather be one of Fulton County's mules than a convict in its convict camp," declared Dr. A. R. Holderby Sunday morning at Moore Memorial Church in a sermon on "The Shame of Georgia's Diabolical Convict System."

Dr. Holderby declared that it cost the county 48 cents a day per head to feed its mules, while only 10 cents a day was expended in feeding each convict. He stated that the convict laws instead of encouraging a man to a better life, bring out all the evil in his nature.

COCHRAN TO ASK INVESTIGATION OF SCHOOLS

Fulton Legislator Believes There Has Been Extravagance at the State Agricultural Colleges.

Satisfied that mismanagement, incompetency or extravagance may have been prevalent in the various district agricultural colleges of late, Representative Ralph O. Cochran, of Fulton, will propose a resolution in the House calling for a rigid legislative probe into the same.

Mr. Cochran's idea is that the schools so far have failed pointedly to justify the great outlay of money required to keep them up.

The gentleman from Fulton will not charge any person with deliberate wrongdoing, but he does believe that the schools have not been conducted in a businesslike manner, and that they might, and should, be placed on a basis working to Georgia's greater advantage.

He calls attention to the deficits shown in the Treasurer's reports, and draws the seemingly warranted inference that the colleges are not returning to the State anything like the amount of money they should, considering the money the State spends upon them.

The eleven district schools are supposed to be self-supporting, in a way, but the returns, as indicated by the Treasurer's report, do not show them as approximating anything like that ideal status.

This proposed investigation, coming on the heels of the mix-up in the Experiment Station, is sure to attract widespread attention throughout Georgia, as every congressional district has one of these agricultural schools.

"I do not wish to be placed in the attitude of attacking the district schools,' said Mr. Cochran, discussing his resolution to-day. "I really want their co-operation in benefitting agricultural conditions in Georgia. I am trying to find out exactly what they are doing, and when that has been ascertained, we can proceed as the results indicate."

Coleman, who is charged with the murder of Leon Melvin, a Wilcox County youth, and who several weeks ago was brought to Ben Hill County jail for safe-keeping, but later carried back to Wilcox, is back in Ben Hill County jail on account of an attempt to lynch him at Abbeville last week.

Coleman was carried to Vienna, but the Sheriff of Dooly County refused to take him. From Vienna he was carried to Cordele, where the Crisp Sheriff likewise refused him. He was brought on to Fitzgerald, where he is at present.

Valor of '61 Pastor's Theme to the Young

Lessons from the war between the States were inculcated at the West End Christian Church Sunday by the Rev. William C. Foster, the pastor, who appealed to young people in particular to fight life's battle with the valor exhibited by the soldiers of Robert E. Lee.

"Let us forget the hatred," Dr. Foster said, "but remember the bravery of our heroes."

Dr. Foster emphasized the practical advantages of country-wide education and deplored the fact that there were not enough schools in Georgia.

PLANTERS FIGHT TAX ON COTTON EXCHANGES

WASHINGTON, July 7.—Southern planters are protesting to the Senate Finance Committee against the provision in the tariff bill taxing cotton exchange dealers .05 per cent.

This provision was inserted in the tariff bill by Senator Simmons to meet the demand that there shall cease all gambling in cotton futures and on margins. It resulted from attempts to corner the cotton market made by speculators on the New York Cotton Exchange.

The planters contend that with such a tax, amounting to about 50 cents a bale of cotton, no exchange can continue to do business. The planters are opposed to the New York Exchange, but they want the New Orleans and other Southern cotton exchanges to continue.

Defend South's Exchange.

In this argument they present it is held that the New Orleans Exchange and other Southern exchanges are bullish on the cotton market and seek to hold the price to the advantage of the Southern grower. These exchanges make actual deliveries.

The New York Exchange is friendly to the spinners and is bearish, its purpose being to depress the price of cotton. It makes no actual delivery, but serves the spinners for their future needs. Its business is done through the interchange of purchase and sale notes.

Gives Power to England.

With the wiping out of the cotton exchange in this country, the cotton exchange at Liverpool, also bearish, will take command of the cotton market and fix the price just as the sugar market price is fixed in Holland.

It is contended that through the proposed tax a great injustice would be done the cotton growers who are now laboring under the disadvantage of competition with Egyptian cotton, which is of high grade and commands a better price than Southern cotton.

Egyptian cotton, which needs salt air, is being grown in the reclaimed lands of Salton Sea, California, and it is an active competitor of the Southern cotton, which is short on fiber.

Author Justified in Killing Unruly Negro

MACON, July 7.—Harry Stillwell Edwards, author and Macon postmaster, and his son, Prentiss Edwards, were justified in killing Harrison Newton, a negro farm hand, according to the verdict returned by the Coroner's jury.

Newton was shot at the Edwards farm, near Macon, Saturday night and died Sunday in the Macon Hospital. The negro, while intoxicated, had attacked his wife and children with an ax, when Edwards and his son went to their aid.

Assembly Asked to Increase Pensions

Appeal to the Georgia Legislature for an increase from $60 to $100 a year in pensions for Confederate veterans has been made by Mrs. A. J. Adkins.

Mrs. Adkins sets forth in her letter to the legislators that the increase of pension is entirely logical as the declining years of the veterans make it more and more difficult for them to add to their own support. While $5 a month is acceptable, she says, $8 and a fraction is better.

CLOSING OF BANK INVOLVES 40 MILLIONS

One of the Oldest Institutions in Pittsburg Ordered by U. S. Comptroller to Suspend.

PITTSBURG, July 7.—The First-Second National Bank of Pittsburg, one of the city's oldest banking institutions, closed its doors to-day by direction of the Acting Comptroller of the Currency. The amount involved is said to be between $24,000,000 and $40,000,000. One report is that the amount will reach $200,000,000.

The Pittsburg Clearing House had a special meeting last night to consider the impending failure and to-day another conference was held.

Hundreds of depositors, many of them foreigners employed in the great steel mills, flocked to the bank early to-day but a squad of police kept every one moving.

The First and Second National Banks combined last March and occupied a new 25-story building.

A typewritten notice on the doors stated the institution was in the hands of National Bank Examiner Samuel M. Hann and Sheriff Smith.

A director of the bank to-day made the following statement:

"The officers and directors are a unit in maintaining that a great injustice has been done and that the bank is solvent at this moment. We are also convinced that all claims will be paid in full. If the Treasury Department, operating through the Comptroller of the Currency, had not interfered and had not subjected the bank to a rigid examination by special examiners who were not able to judge values of property and securities in this community, we would have been able to work out to success our problems."

Following the news of the closing of the First-Second National Bank, a steady run started on the Pittsburg Bank for Savings, which also is controlled by the Kuhn interests.

MACON SCANDAL CLIMAX DUE IN LIBEL SUITS

MACON, July 7.—New sensations are expected in the Macon church scandal, in which Professor Frank M. Charlton, choir leader, and Mrs. Effie Lester, secretary of the Ladies' Aid Society, of the First Christian Church, were exonerated Sunday of all charges of wrongdoing, when Attorney Claud Estes, representing Mrs. Lester, and the attorneys for Professor Charlton bring suits for slander in the courts. The damage suits probably will be filed within the next few days, according to statements today of parties involved.

That Macon is promised one of the sharpest legal fights in her history is certain, it is said, as Attorney Julian Urquart, retained by Mrs. Jenkins, one of the accusers, will contest every point of the plaintiffs in defense of his client.

Cleared at Open Meeting.

The aftermath of the affair follows the exoneration of the accused parties at an open session of the First Christian Church Sunday morning, when the report of the elders' investigating committee was read to the congregation.

The session was dramatic. Immediately following the sermon the congregation of the little echurch went into executive session, with Elder Lenoir Erwin, member of the investigating committee, presiding. Seated in the choir directly behind Mr. Erwin was Professor Charlton, slightly pale, but otherwise composed. Near the front was Mrs. Lester, who watched the proceedings with remarkable composure. Mr. Lester sat beside his wife.

Report of Inquiry Complete.

When Elder Roper, chairman of the investigating committee, was called upon to read the report, the congregation leaned forward as if to catch every word of the elder.

The report, as predicted, went into the minutest detail of the whole affair, described every phase of the investigation, pointed out the alleged shallowness of the charges and recommended the complete vindication of the accused.

Elder Roper paused when he had finished reading. There was a dead silence for fully a half minute and then Elder Erwin arose and in solemn tones announced an open meeting for the free discussion of the report.

Woman Speaks for Charlton.

"Speak now or forever hold your peace," said Mr. Erwin.

There was a moment of silence, broken at length by the voice of a woman.

"I have known Professor Charlton for fifteen years," she said, "and in that time I have known him to be a perfect gentleman."

The speaker was Mrs. E. T. Gibson, a member of the Methodist Church and formerly of Bloomington, Ill., the choir leader's old home.

Mrs. Gibson was the only person in the audience to accept the elders' invitation to speak. Elder Irwin then put the question of the guilt of the accused parties to the congregation.

Exoneration Is Unanimous.

Practically every one in the audience arose on the motion to exonerate Professor Charlton and Mrs. Lester. Not one stood when the "nay" vote was put.

Immediately following the vote, the Rev. Mr. Anderson called upon the congregation to sing, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," after which a prayer, one of the most fervent ever heard in the little church, was offered by the pastor. While the vote was being taken Professor Charlton and Mrs. Lester retired from the auditorium. They were greeted by scores of friends following the close of the service.

Place Faith in Accused.

"Our conclusion is," it is stated in the report, "that the parties are innocent of the charges made or others of like nature. We have as much confidence in the integrity and Christian character of both parties as we ever have had and this is the first time we have ever been given occasion to question them."

It is recommended further that the report be published in The Christian Builder and copies for publication be furnished the newspapers and that they become a part of the church records. The report is signed by L. M. Erwin, W. H. Roper, A. W. Smith, A. M. Erwin, Leroy M. Anderson. Elders of the First Christian Church.

FLEET BRIDE DARES ANY WOMAN TO OUTRUN HER

Mrs. Grace Murray, who issues sweeping foot race challenge.

She Has Taken First Prize in Every Sprinting Contest Since a Little Girl.

Attention, brides and matrons of Atlanta!

A challenge is issued to you who are fleet of foot for either a hundred-yard sprint or an endurance race by Mrs. Grace Murray, of 222 Rawson Street.

Mrs. Murray is the pretty bride of Stewart Murray, of the Cruickshank Cigar Company. At the annual picnic of the Atlanta Scottish Association July 4, at the grounds of the Burns Club, Mrs. Murray took first prize in the married women's race. She also took first prize in the women's egg and ladle race.

At the picnic of the association last year, Mrs. Murray, then Miss Grace Beddingfield, was winner of the girls' race. She has taken first place in other races, too, and her friends declare she can outrun any one of her sex in Atlanta. She herself says she is willing at any time to enter into a race with any of Atlanta's married women who think they can run.

Mrs. Murray also is a swimmer and diver of ability.

M'NAB'S SLAVERY REPORT GIVEN OUT

Kahn, California, Again Declares Justice Is Being Blocked, and Scores President.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—The publication to-day of former District Attorney McNab's report to Attorney General McReynolds, dated May 21, in the Caminetti-Diggs white slave cases, giving the details of the alleged seduction of the Warrington and Norris girls by young Caminetti and Diggs, aroused new interest in the cases.

Representative Kahn, of California, and other members of the California delegation declared the House Judiciary Committee was wrong in suppressing the McNab report. In the committee report before the House, those parts of the McNab report dealing with the methods used to lead the girls astray; the alleged attempt to suborn perjury and the revelation that Caminetti's counsel had told McNab that Caminetti probably would plead guilty were omitted.

Kahn declared to-day he would demand that all the correspondence in the case be made public. He declared the McNab report justified his charge that a systematized effort was being made to block justice, and that the explanation of the President and Attorney General McReynolds in the case was not well founded.

BULGAR VICTORY COSTS SERVIA 11,000 LIVES

Three Regiments Annihilated in Great Battle Lasting Two Days and Three Nights.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOFIA, July 7.—The tide of victory in the second Balkan war has swung to the Bulgarians. Signal successes are reported.

Eleven thousand Servians of the western wing of the Servian army were reported killed in an engagement near Deslinici, 8,000 others were wounded, many prisoners were taken and the balance were put to flight, according to a dispatch from General Savoff to Czar Ferdinand to-day. It was one of the decisive battles of modern times, according to the Bulgarian Government.

Three Servian regiments were annihilated in the battle which started along the Bregalnitza River in central Macedonia. The fight lasted two days and three nights before the exhausted Servian soldiers gave way before the repeated charges.

The battlefield, which covers an area of nearly 20 square miles, was strewn with dead and wounded, all of whom were left behind.

The Bulgarian casualties were not given.

Intrigue by Austria Blamed for Conflict.

BERLIN, July 7.—A diplomatic intrigue engineered by Austria is responsible for the second Balkan war between Servia, Greece and Montenegro on one hand and Bulgaria on the other, according to a telegram received to-day from Sofia.

Dr. Daneff, one of the leading Bulgarian statesmen, is responsible for the accusation that Austria led Bulgaria to believe that Austrian support would be given Bulgaria in any dispute that country might have with any other of the "allies."

When war was inevitable, Austria withdrew this promise of support on the ground that it might endanger the peace of Europe.

Greeks Ask Powers To Halt Massacres.

ATHENS, July 7.—Greece has appealed to the Powers to prevent further outrages by Bulgarians in Macedonia.

Dispatches from Salonika to-day stated that the Bulgarians had massacred and tortured hundreds of Greek women and children near the town of Negrita. All the able-bodied men are fighting in the Greek armies and there was no one to protect the defenseless families.

Lack of Funds May Halt Balkan War.

ROME, July 7.—Lack of funds probably will put an end to the new Balkan war. All the States in the Balkan league are close to bankruptcy. The powers are expected to refuse any more loans in order to compel the cessation of hostilities.

When your doctor looks to see if your tongue is coated, he is trying to find out if your liver is working properly. A few years ago doctors had to prescribe calomel—there was nothing else to give.

Dodson's Liver Tone is mild, pleasant tasting and harmless—which makes it a fine medicine for use when your children become bilious and constipated. But the most remarkable feature of Dodson's Liver Tone is the fact that all druggists who sell it, guarantee it absolutely. The druggist will return your money without argument if a bottle fails to give entire satisfaction.

U. S. Now Is Fourth In Naval Strength

WASHINGTON, July 7.—The United States is now occupying fourth place among the navies of the world and not third, as is generally supposed.

The real loss of prestige to the navy by reason of the failure to keep up the naval construction program is shown very clearly in Brassey's Manual, whose rating of the nations was discussed generally to-day by officers at the Navy Department.

England 29, Germany 19, France 17, United States 13. Japan is not given.

Lynching Story of 'Seer' Proves Fake

DALTON, July 7.—The fortune teller who informed Mrs. Will Grady that her husband, who disappeared from home, had been hanged by three men and his body disposed of, causing her to come to Dalton to get warrants for the arrest of several men she suspected, has been shown up as a fake by a letter from Grady, who had gone to Alabama.

Mrs. Grady, a bride of three months, was overjoyed and hastened here to stop a search party she thought was looking for her husband's body.

SALE OF A., B. & A. ROAD AROUSES ASSEMBLY

Rumor That Louisville & Nashville Seeks Line Stirs Interest in Fate of W. & A.

The coming sale of the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad, under foreclosure proceedings, and the rumor that the Louisville and Nashville has its eyes upon it, has started something of a panic among Georgia legislators, particularly as the present Legislature likely will consider seriously the problem of the Western and Atlantic's re-lease in 1919.

There are two parties in the present Legislature with respect to the Western and Atlantic Railway. One favors the re-lease of the State's road as it now stands, the other the extension of the road to the Atlantic seaboard.

If the L. & N. gobbles the A., B. & A., it is held by some that it thereby will have strategic advantage over the State road in the matter of extension to the sea. Indeed, if the L. & N. gets the A., B. & A., it is predicted that the railroad map of Georgia likely will be pretty well changed within a short time.

There are those in the General Assembly who are advocating the purchase of the A., B. & A. by the State, thus extending the W. & A. to the sea. Others hold that the State should keep its hands off the A., B. & A. road and confine itself to such railroad property as it now possesses, with its fine terminal facilities in Atlanta and Chattanooga.

If the L. & N. gets the A., B. & A., it is figured by some legislators that it immediately provide for entry into Atlanta by some other way than that over the State road, as it now comes in. If this is done, it is contended that the W. & A. will will be pretty well put out of busines.

Ansley Manager to Banquet Hotel Men

The Atlanta Hotel Men's Association and friends Monday night will be entertained by Jack F. Letton, manager of the Ansley Hotel.

Those who will be present are Albert Keen, Georgian Terrace; J. Lee Barnes, Majestic; Fred Houser, Journal; Lee Jourdon, attorney; Harry Dutton, Piedmont; J. H. Evans, Imperial; Ed Brown, New Kimball; Bruno Buckofer, Terminal; Jim Williams, Cafe Durand, and Frank Harrell, Aragon.

Ten Collegians Are Believed Drowned

BUFFALO, July 7.—Ten young men, all said to be graduates of English and Canadian colleges, are believed to have ben drowned last night in Lake Erie just off Crescent Beach opposite Buffalo.

The young men were in canoes, and two of the canoes, overturned, were found floating in the Niagara River near Fort Erie this morning.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Two Headliners at Forsyth.

Two headliners will be offered with five other features at the Forsyth this week. There will be the usual daily bargain matinees, and, of course, the ever popular night performances.

Cecil Leane and his company in "The Moving Picture Man" will be one of the headline features. Miss Eva Taylor and her company of three people will present "After the Wedding," one of the cleverest farce sketches in the catalog of good things.

Among the other acts will be Warren and Blanchard, the black face comedians; the pretty Grace Sisters, who are expert dancers; Hines and Fox, the singer and the piano player; Kennedy and Melrose, the bouncing gymnasts, and Houghton and Hughton, who are expert trick bicyclists.

Talking Pictures at Grand.

Ten cents will pay the way to see and hear Edison's Talking Pictures and the highest grade of first-run motion pictures at any time from 2:30 in the afternoon until 10:30 at night, at the Grand during the week that starts this afternoon.

A big program of the talking pictures was put on last week at higher prices and served to draw large attendance after the pictures had proven their value. The management decided on another week, with a change of subjects, and because of the interest in the pictures and because of the tremendous seating capacity of the theater, determined upon the policy of continuous operation at the dime price.

The Biograph, Vitagraph, Lubin, Selig, Pathe, Essanay, Kalem, Edison and Melies' releases will be presented with entire change of program daily. The Talking Pictures will be changed every other day.

"Along Broadway" at the Bijou.

The musical comedy attractions that are playing the Bijou these days have become immensely popular with patrons of amusement. Each week brings a new company, presenting a new piece, and it is safe to say that nothing in the amusement line has pleased Bijou patrons better than the attractions that are playing from week to week. The bill that is being offered this weeks is the 1912 Cabaret Revue, "Along Broadway," which will be presented by a big company of fun-makers, headed by Will Stanton and Rosalind May.

Edison Talking Pictures Grand daily 2:30 to 10:30. All seats 10 cents.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

The Legislature, even as a tentative proposition, already is finding the matter of tax reform a perplexing problem, and one calculated to give it much trouble before it is adjusted.

Particularly is the question of tax equalization bothersome and full of difficulty.

Mr. Lipscombe, of Clarke, has an equalization bill pending in the House, and Mr. Cole, of Bartow, and Mr. Swift, of Muscogee, have inheritance tax bills.

The former was drawn by one of the most eminent lawyers in Georgia—an ex-Supreme Court Justice—and is thought to be as nearly perfect as such a measure can be made. Members are non-committal with respect to it, however.

The latter two bills, both carefully prepared, seem to have attracted considerable favorable attention, and both have the backing of the administration, in a general way, but whether either will pass is problematical.

The Legislature plainly is inclined to reform the tax laws, but it just as plainly does not know exactly how to go about it or where to begin.

"One trouble in the situation," said a well-known member of the House to-day, "is the real or imaginary opposition of the farmers to a board of tax equalizers.

"As a matter of fact, I do not believe the farmers, in any very large proportion, anyway, oppose the tax equalization idea. Perhaps a few of them do, but I fail to see where any honest farmer—and the majority of Georgia farmers are honest—should.

"Instead of putting up the farmers' taxes, an equalization act much more likely would put them down. If assessments were adjusted in Georgia as they should be, the total would be so much larger than it is now that taxes, in the average amount paid would come down rather than go up—and the farmer would find himself immensely benefited by this. Instead of a State rate of 5 mills, if taxes were equalized, we probably should be able to get along with a rate of 2 1-2 or 3 mills.

"So, if a farmer's lands were raised—they might not be, and would not be in many cases, of course—a trifle, the total of his taxes likely would be less than now.

"The purpose of a tax equalization act is to catch the tax-dodgers, and to catch them in the open. Such a measure would catch them, too. And if the dodgers were made to come to time, the present taxpayers of the State would find themselves charged up with less of the public expense instead of more.

"It is to be hoped that the present Legislature will pass some genuine tax reform measures, even if it does nothing else during the present session."

Contrary to general expectation and prediction, the Tippins bill, so called in the last Legislature, has not been re-introduced in the present House.

It has been stated, time and again, that the prohibitionists of Georgia generally look upon this measure as useless and of doubtful judgment at this time, and a sort of "let-well-enough-alone" sentiment apoears to be spreading among temperance advocates.

The truth of the matter is, prohibitionists seem fairly well satisfied with the status of things in Georgia, and agitation in the present Legislature—or, anyway, in the present session—seems unlikely.

The Chattanooga News recently stated, in an editorial praising Atlanta, that Georgia has the best enforced prohibition laws of any prohibition State in the nation, and far better than Tennessee. This seems to be agreed to all around, and the fact that the Tippins bill has not been reintroduced, notwithstanding the confident predictions that it would be, lends color to the thought that prohibitionists in Georgia incline to agree with The Chattanooga News.

The old expression, "I wouldn't vote for that fellow for dog catcher," has no humiliating significance in Savannah.

There the office of dog catcher is an ancient and honorable institution, and one to which folks generally look up in indicated awe.

Announcement of the appointment of E. H. Henry as official dog catcher for the city of Savannah, in compliance with the ordinance adopted by City Council at its last meeting, has been made by Mayor R. J. Davant. Bond in the sume of $100 has been furnished by Henry, who begins his official duties at once.

The catcher will be provided with a wagon, in which a crate will be placed to retain the impounded animals. A net will also be provided for use in catching the dogs, and a "pound" will be constructed at police headquarters.

As soon as the equipment can be completed the catcher will start on his rounds.

To Mr. Adams, of Hall, belongs the honor and distinction of starting the House roll call in the way it should go.

His name, like Abou Ben Adhem's, leads all the rest, and many a time he has set the fashion in voting, to see himself vindicated in the final round-up.

Adams rarely is absent from his seat in the House. When Clerk Bolfeuillet begins the call every morning, Adams is the first to answer "present," unless Mr. Edmondson, of Brooks, beats him to it and moves that he roll call be dispensed with.

The last name to be called is "Mr. Speaker." He generally votes one way or the other, although Speakers many times have inclined to refrain from going on record unless compelled to.

Suffragist Predicts Ballots for Bullets

That all wars since historical times began have taken a toll of 15,000,000,000 lives, was the statement made Sunday by Dr. Thomas E. Green, a lyceum lecturer stopping at the Hotel Ansley.

"Militarism is the burden of the nations," said Dr. Green, "and I look to woman suffrage to lift it from the shoulders of humanity. Equal suffrage is a stepping stone to universal peace, for when it comes the battles of the world will be fought with ballots instead of bullets."

LEGISLATURE TO VISIT CITY OF AUGUSTA

A report from the Committee on Rules was adopted changing the name of the Committee on Immigration and Labor to the Committee on Commerce and Labor.

Several bills of importance were introduced. Following is the list:

House to Allow Women Use of Hall.

One of the first things in the House Tuesday morning will be a vote on permitting the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association to meet in the House chamber July 9-10. A bill to this effect was introduced by Representative John Y. Smith, of Fulton, Monday morning. A motion to refer it to the Rules and Floor Committee met with defeat. Under the House rules the resolution was laid on the desk until to-morrow.

The suffragists busied themselves early Monday morning. A letter was laid on the desk of each member of the House urging him to grant them the courtesy. It is believed the House will grant the request.

A new charter for Atlanta was filed by the Fulton County delegation in the House Monday. It provides for the present division of ten wards and allows the Mayor to succeed himself for one term.

An invitation from the Chamber of Commerce of Augusta, inviting members of the Legislature to visit Augusta, was adopted.

The House concurred with the Senate in an invitation to Herbert Myrick to address a joint session of the two bodies July 15.

A resolution was adopted inviting Senator Hoke Smith to address the Legislature.

LEXINGTON, July 7.—Arson and murder were committed in the burning of three residences at Somerset, Ky. Guarantee Closes Up Its Richmond Branch

RICHMOND, VA., July 7.—The crisis in the affairs of the Guarantee Trust and Banking Company of Atlanta is reflected here in the form of a notice on the door of the company's Richmond branch reading:

"Office closed. Direct all communications to the home office in care of the Guarantee Trust and Banking Company, box 1424, Atlanta, Ga."

The company also had branches in Norfolk, Lynchburg and Roanoke. Complaints indicate that a considerable number of the company's obligations are outstanding in Virginia.

Chief Believes Park Fire Was Incendiary

The burning of the commissionaire stand at Grant Park early Sunday morning has started an investigation by Fire Chief Cummings as to the probable incendiary firing of the building.

The building, said to have been worth $10,000, carried a small amount of insurance. The first floor held a soda fountain and confectionery stand. The upper floor was used as a dancing pavilion.

Atlanta Pastor Weds Two a Day for Week

Dr. Ridley is in Monticello, Ga., this week holding meetings at the Baptist Church there.

GEORGIA WOMAN SUFFRAGE BODY FACES ROW

Split in Atlanta League, Whose Members Are Barred, Will Be Brought Before Convention.

Little hope was seen Monday for a settlement of the strife in the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association until the convention here July 9 and 10.

Within their ranks disagreements have arisen which are not so easily disposed of. One side is led by Mrs. M. L. McLendon, president of the Atlanta Civic League and the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association, and the other by Mrs. F. S. Whiteside, whom a number have urged for official recognition.

Parade Cause of Trouble.

The trouble began early this year when advocates of woman suffrage were anticipating the parade in Washington. Mrs. McLendon was president of the Atlanta Civic League and Mrs. Amelia B. Woodall was secretary. The officers of the organization were to be the representatives in Washington, but it was time for re-election.

The election was postponed several times, until Mrs. McLendon and Mrs. Woodall automatically became the official representatives. On their return they were met by the charge from Mrs. Whiteside that they had manipulated postponements that just such things might result.

New League Is Formed.

And the story is that Mrs. Ida B. McClellan, in a speech, precipitated the actual split.

This situation, some time ago, resulted in Mrs. McLendon and her supporters in the Atlanta Civic League forming the Atlanta Equal Suffrage League.

Now, on the eve of the meeting of the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association, the members of the Atlanta Civic League have been denied admission on the grounds that they have not paid up their dues.

Efforts to bring about an amicable adjustment have failed. It is asserted that a rival organization to the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association may be formed.

PURE MILK FOR ONLY 31 POOR BABIES

The Mothers' Congress, which has inaugurated a campaign for pure milk for babies through the hot months adopted the unique method Monday of distributing milk bottles at grocery stores for the collection of pennies and nickels with which to buy milk.

Mrs. John Rowlett, 186 East Pine Street, who heads the congress, said the campaign would be the best ever conducted for the health of Atlanta infants.

So far but 31 of the hundreds of babies of the poor have been provided for by the fund. Certificates calling for milk throughout the three summer months have been given the mothers of the infants.

"We want every baby in Atlanta to have good, pure milk through the hot spell," Mrs. Rowlett said, "and, if possible, we shall see that this is accomplished."

Sunday, Mrs. Rowlett said, she went to the home of Mrs. W. J. Denson, at 4 Ella Street, to see a baby that had been reported to her. The visit was too late. The baby was dead, and the mother sobbed regret that aid had not come sooner.

Doctors' Opinions About POSTUM

Are best expressed in their own words

Writing under date of May 13, 1913, one physician says:

"From past experience I have become a strong friend of Postum. I am now advising its use over that of coffee altogether, and find that most of those who give Postum a trial become users of it.

"It is however sometimes very hard or impossible to get folks to purchase something when they 'don't know anything about it,' and 'don't want to throw away money on a chance of liking it.'

"Now, it occurs to me these people are not to be criticised for such feelings, but at the same time I am sure many of them would become friends of Postum if they could but have a sample of it placed in their hands.

"If you think this is a good suggestion, and will send me samples from time to time, I will see that they are placed among my patients where they will do the most good, for I believe it is to their interest to drink Postum rather than coffee. Postum is used in our home, but we buy it of our grocer, and we expect to keep right on doing so."

Thousands of coffee drinkers are victims of headache, nervousness, biliousness, heart trouble and indigestion, without knowing the cause.

More and more, physicians are naming coffee as a common cause of these ills. Not every physician, however, finds time to send a sample following his prescription of

The New Fall Suits

There Are Many Interesting Style Points About Them

The women of Atlanta may see now, may select now, the suits that will be fashionable this fall!

They are here in a quantity and variety that amount to a DISPLAY of the new styles.

Rather early, you ask?

No! We would be falling short of what is expected of us did we not show AUTHENTIC styles the moment AUTHENTIC styles are adopted.

So here they are!

And the woman going to the mountains, to the "cool spots" of America will appreciate not only the newness of these suits, but also the somewhat greater weight of them.

But what are the new styles?

Only hints here, we would rather your eyes take in all the interesting points.

Coats are longer, 38 to 42 inches this fall. Cutaways are prominent, perhaps we should say eminent.

They are varied, too—a cutaway, pointed at the back, will have a bit of fullness at the side waist that you are accustomed to associate only with a blouse—novel, distinctive.

Skirts—the tendency is toward "dressy drapes." They are more marked than ever, also more graceful than ever, a sort of evolution of draping. And the slashed skirt is favored; some of the most charming models have skirts slashed four and six inches.

Materials also show the new scheme of things. You will term them "fancy." Even soft-finished cloths show self-stripes; crepons are revived—more, they are given wonderful newness and beauty by smart weavers, who put little blocks and squares and figures in them; Bayadere poplins are as attractive as can be; and velour broadcloths and, for the more tailored suits, men's-wear serges.

And the rich, beautiful colors you may choose from—mahogany, cinnamon, amethyst, prune, navy, of course, a darker Copenhagen than we know and green.

However, these are but the details, your pleasure will come of seeing how these details have been embodied into elegant suits new and out-of-the-ordinary.

There will be no importuning you to buy—we want you to enoy the privilege that is yours, to see the AUTHENTIC styles in fall suits.

THE WOMAN THOU GAVEST ME

By reading the synopsis and installment printed here of the most daring serial of the year you can continue it in Hearst's Magazine for July, just out.

FULL SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS

DANIEL O'NEILL, a powerful, self-made man, forces his only daughter, Mary, into a loveless marriage with the impecunious and profligate Lord Raa, so that his ambition to have his descendants the rightful heirs of the one earldom in Ellan may be realized. Mary, a convent-raised young woman, shocked to find her husband a man of sordid, sensual passions, refuses utterly to have anything to do with him until such time as he can prove himself worthy of her love. During the honeymoon abroad Alma Lier, a divorcee who had been expelled from the convent Mary attended in Rome, attaches herself to the party, and makes the "honeymoon trip" a long series of slights and insults for Lady Raa.

At last Lady Raa becomes certain of the infidelity of her husband and his misconduct with Alma Lier. On her return to London Mary encounters her old playfellow, Martin Conrad, who has returned from his triumphant expedition to the Antarctic. Drawn into ever-closer relations with the only man for whose friendship she ever cared, Mary finally awakes to the fact that she is hopelessly in love with Martin. Terrified by this knowledge, and finding herself more and more in love with Martin, she determines to run away from the cause of her distress, and go home.

Mary's home-coming to Castle Raa is a sad affair. Her husband fills the tumble-down old mansion with hith his fast friends from London, including Alma Lier, who assumes control of the household. Ultimately the illness of her father offers Mary excuse for escape from the intolerable environment. But before visiting her old home Mary appeals in turn to her Bishop and to her father's lawyer, only to be told that neither Church nor State can offer any relief from her false position. She returns next day to Castle Raa to find that Martin is arriving for a farewell visit, and that by Alma Lier's deceitful scheming the whole house party has gone off for a few days' cruise.

During her three days alone with her lover Mary fights a grim battle with temptation, only to find on the last night that her faith in renunciation and the laws of the Church is a fragile thing compared with her overwhelming love for this pure-hearted man. With Martin's passionate words, "You are my real wife. I am your real husband," ringing in her brain she forgets everything else, and with strong steps walks across the corridor to Martin's bedroom. This is the action which Martin has advised as being the only course open to them which is sure to bring the one result they are determined to attain—Mary's divorce from Lord Raa.

Mary determines, after the departure of Martin Conrad, to hide herself in London. She is driven by fear of Lord Raa's discovery of her unfaithfulness to him; she is equally afraid of the venomous tongue of Alma Lier. She is no sooner settled in a cheap little boarding house in London than a great hue and cry is raised by her father. Of all persons, it is Mildred, that one truest friend of her convent days, who ferrets her out; but for Mary's sake she breaks a vow and refuses to give her up. Then comes the report of the loss of Martin's ship in the Antarctic. Desperate with grief and fearful for the unborn child which she hopes shall reconcile her to her empty life and typify her great love for Martin, she flees from Mildred to a still more obscure corner of London.

I asked the old driver how long it would take me to get to Ilford. He looked at me again and said," 'B out 'our and 'alf I should say by the looks of you and you carrying the biby."

By HALL CAINE.

(Copyright, 1913, by Hearst's Magazine. Copyrighted in Great Britain.)

MY NEW quarters were in the poorer district which stands at the back of Bayswater.

The street was a cul-de-sac (of some ten small houses on either side), which was blocked up at the farther end by the high wall of a factory for the "humanization" of milk, and opened out of a busy thoroughfare of inferior shops like a gulley way off a noisy coast. My home in this street was in number one.

My room, which was of fair size, was on the first floor and had two windows to the street, with yellow holland blinds and white muslin curtains.

The furniture consisted of a large bed, a horse hair sofa, three cane-bottomed chairs, a chest of drawers (which stood between the windows), and a mirror over the mantelpiece, which had pink paper, cut into fanciful patterns, over the gilt frame, to keep off the flies.

The floor was covered with linoleum, but there were two strips of carpet, one before the fire and the other by the bed; the walls were papered by a bright red paper representing peonies in bloom; and there were three pictures—a portrait of a Welsh preacher, an engraving entitled "Feed My Sheep" (showing Jesus carrying a lamb), and a memorial card of some member of the family of the house, in the form of a tomb with a weeping angel on either side.

I paid five shillings a week for my room, and, as this included the use of kettle, cooking utensils and crockery, I found to my great delight at the end of the first week that providing for myself (tea, bread and butter and eggs being my principal food) I had spent only ten shillings altogether, which, according to my present needs, left me enough for my time of waiting and several weeks beyond it.

Every morning I went out with a little hand bag to buy my provisions in the front street, and every afternoon I took a walk in the better part of Bayswater and even into the park (Hyde Park), which was not far off, but never near to Piccadilly, or so far east as Bloomsbury, lest I should meet Sister Mildred or be recognized by the old boarders.

Finding it necessary to account for myself, just as at the boarding house, I had adhered to my former name, but said I was the widow of a commander lately lost at sea, which was as near to the truth as I dare venture.

She Tells of Her Coming Motherhood.

I had also made no disguise of the fact that I was expecting a child, a circumstance which secured me much sympathy from the womanly women who were now my neighbors.

They were all worthy women, generally the wives of men working in the milk factory; and therefore the life of our street was very regular.

At five in the morning you heard the halting step of the old "knocker up" who went up and down the street tapping at the bedroom windows with a long pole like a fishing rod. A little before six you heard the clashing of many front doors and the echoing footsteps of the men going to their work. At half-past seven you heard the whoop of the milkman and the rattling of his cans. At half-past eight you heard the little feet of the children, like the pattering of rain, going off to the Board School round the corner. And a little after four in the afternoon you heard the wild cries of the entire juvenile community let loose from lessons, the boys running iron hoops and the girls skipping rope.

After that, our street hummed like a beehive, with the women, washed and combed, standing knitting at their open doors or exchanging confidences across the areas until darkness fell, and each of the mothers called her children in to bed, as an old hen in the farmyard clucks up her chickens.

These good creatures were very kind to me. Having satisfied themselves from observation to my habits that I was "respectable," they called me "our lady," and I could not help hearing that I was a "nice young thing," though it was a little against me that I did not go to church or chapel, and had confessed to being a Catholic—for several of our families (including that of my landlady) were members of the Welsh Zion Chapel far away.

Such was the life of the little human cage to which I had confined myself, but I had an inner life that was all my own and very sweet to me.

Getting Ready for The Newcomer.

During the long hours of every day in which I was alone I occupied myself in the making of clothes for my baby—buying linen and flannel and worsted, and borrowing patterns from my Welsh landlady.

This stimulated my tenderness toward the child that was to come, for the heart of a young mother is almost infantile, and I hardly know whether to laugh or cry when I think of the childish things I did and thought and said to myself in those first days when I was alone in my room in that back street in Bayswater.

Thus long before the baby was born I had christened her. At first I wished to call her Mary, not because I cared for that name myself, but because Martin had said it was the most beautiful in the world. In the end, however, I called her Isabel Mary (because Isabel was my mother's name, and she had been a far better woman than I was), and as I finished my baby's garments one by one I used to put them away in their drawer, saying to myself, "That's Isabel Mary's binder," or "Isabel Mary's christening-robe," as the case might be.

I dare say it was all very foolish. There are tears in my eyes when I think of it now, but there were none then, for, though there were moments when, thinking of Martin, I felt as if life were forever blank and bare, I was almost happy in my poor surroundings, and if it were a cage I had fixed myself in, there was always a bird singing inside of it—the bird that sang in my own bosom.

"When Isabel Mary comes, everything will be all right," I used to think.

This went on for many weeks, and I think it might have gone on until my time was full but for something which, occurring under my eyes, made me tremble with the fear that the life I was living and the hope I was cherishing were really very wrong and selfish.

Of my landlady, Mrs. Williams, I saw very little. She was a rather hard but no doubt heavily laden woman, who had "to do" for a swarm of children, besides two young men lodgers who lived in the kitchen and slept in the room behind mine. Her husband was a quiet man (a carter at the dairy), whom I never saw at all except on the staircase at 10 o'clock at night, when, after winding the tall clock on the landing, he went upstairs to bed in his stocking feet.

Emmerjane, the Family Drudge.

But the outstanding member of the family for me was a shock-headed girl of 14 called Emmerjane, which was a running version of Emma Jane.

I understand that Emmerjane was the illegitimate daughter of Mrs. Williams' dead sister, and that she had been born in Carnarvon, which still shimmered in her memory in purple and gold.

Emmerjane was the drudge of the family, and I first saw her in the street at dusk, mothering a brood of her little cousins.

Afterward she became my drudge also—washing my floor, bringing up my coal and cleaning my grate for sixpence a week, and giving me a great deal of information about my neighbors for nothing.

Thus she told me, speaking broad cockney with a Welsh accent, that the people opposite were named Wagstaffe and that the creaking noise I heard was that of a mangle, which Mrs. Wagstaffe had to keep because her husband was a drunkard.

But the greatest interest of this weird little woman, who had a premature knowledge of things a child ought not to know, was in a house half way down the street on the other side, where steam was always coming from the open door to the front kitchen.

The people who lived there were named Jones. Mrs. Jones "washed" and had a bed-ridden old mother (with two shillings from the parish) and a daughter named Maggie.

Maggie Jones, who was eighteen, and very pretty, used to work in the dairy, but the foreman had taken "advantage of her," and she had just had a baby.

This foreman was named Owen Owens, and he lived at the last number on our side, where two unmarried sisters "kept house" for him and sat in the "singing seat" at Zion.

Maggie thought it was the sisters' fault that Owen Owens did not marry her, so she conceived a great scheme for "besting" them, and this was the tragedy which, through Emmerjane's quick little eyes and her Cockney Welsh tongue, came to me in instalments day by day.

When her baby was a month old Maggie dressed it up "fine" and took it to the photographer's for its "card di visit." The photographs were a long time coming, but when they came they were "heavenly lovely" and Maggie "cried to look at them."

Then she put one in an envelope and addressed it to Owen Owens, and though it had only to cross the street she went out after dark to a pillar-box a long way off lest anybody should see her posting it.

Next day she said: "He'll have it now, for he always comes home to dinner. He'll take it up to his bedroom, look you, and stand it on the washboard, and if either of those sisters touch it he'll give them what's what."

After that she waited anxiously for an acknowledgment and every time the postman passed down our street her pretty pale face would be at the door, saying, "Anything for me to day?" or "Are you sure there's nothing for me, postman?"

Home Cooking

By MAY IRWIN.

THAT the fastidious should look with distrust, if not disgust, upon the hotel or restaurant made hash or ragout, or stew, or minced dish, is quite within my understanding and sympathy. But it is quite different in the well regulated home.

My husband and sons, who are rather spoiled as far as the things of the table are concerned, enjoy beef stews and roast beef hash better than the original roast. Fricassee chicken, when properly prepared, is much better than roast chicken. Spaghetti, when warmed over, is twenty times better than when first cooked. How seldom we eat a really well cooked dish of spaghetti. That is because it is not thoroughly cooked.

Suppose it is Tuesday—ironing day. If there is in your pantry or ice box the skeleton of last night's roast chicken, you are fortunate. From the shreds of meat here and there sticking to the bones you can make an excellent fricassee, or that dish which is a favorite in my household.

Mince the bits of cold chicken together. Chop a small green pepper, a small onion, four mushrooms, a bit of parsley and one cold potato together until very fine. Have a frying pan ready with tablespoonful of hot brown butter, and put the mixture in and stir it well.

Cover it for a few moments and let it brown on one side, as hashed brown potatoes are done. Put on a hot platter and garnish with tomato sauce. This sauce is made by cooking two or three tomatoes for half an hour; strain and add a tablespoonful of butter, salt, pepper and flour enough to thicken a little.

Perhaps you are inclined to toss away three or four tomatoes that are soft, but still good. Their ripeness is no drawback for the favorite breakfast dish of mine, for which I give you the recipe.

Cut a slice from the top of each tomato. Remove enough of the pulp to enable you to drop into each tomato a bit of butter the size of your thumb nail and a raw egg. Pin with a toothpick a strip of raw bacon around each tomato. Sprinkle a little salt and pepper over the top and put into a very hot oven until the eggs are set. This will be from five to eight minutes.

HER MINISTRATIONS

THE girl with the silver vanity case tucked a dainty handkerchief into her left glove and sighed.

"It's perfectly awful," she said, "how many persons have dreadful things happen to them these days! Why, all I do is to go to see my poor suffering friends in the hospitals!"

"Who's in the hospital besides Carrie?" asked the girl with the fire-red hat. "How's her appendicitis, anyhow? I sent some carnations, but I've been too busy——"

"Poor Carrie is recovering all right," said the girl with the silver vanity bag. "The house doctor says it is quite remarkable, in view of the seriousness of her case. I wish you could see him, Emma, when he is talking seriously like that. He draws his eyebrows together in a straight line like—oh, who was the actor who always did that? Never mind. Dr. Bennett is perfectly handsome and holds himself like a military man, and in those white linen suits—why on earth don't all doctors dress like that, I'd like to know?

"He can't be a day over 28, and if you could see how crazy the nurses are over him! I think it is perfectly ridiculous of them!

Sympathetic.

"I couldn't help expressing my sympathy one day when we were talking in the hall. I happened to be leaving just as he was through seeing Carrie. 'I should think,' I told him, 'you would get so weary of all this chasing after you, Dr. Bennett! Why, that corridor nurse wouldn't let me get a word in with you while she was in the room! I should think she'd realize that a doctor would like something more entertaining once in a while than chatter about bandages and temperatures and diet!' He quite flushed with gratitude and looked me in the eyes and said I had perfectly wonderful divination, and it was surprising how he lived through it all!

"The only trouble with knowing Dr. Bennett is that every time I go there somebody always sends for him or he has to go to the operating room. The poor man never has any time for a cozy chat."

"Is Carrie——"

"Oh, Carrie's all right," said the girl with the vanity bag. "If she'd only exercise a little self-control and not demand all the doctor's attention whenever he's in the room, she would get on better. Sick people are so selfish, don't you think? Dr. Bennett——"

"You said someone else was sick. Who?"

"Oh, yes!" said the girl with the vanity bag. "My cousin Ralph is at another hospital with a broken leg, and though his family and ours aren't on speaking terms I felt that in a case of illness I mustn't let prejudice stand in the way, so, of course, I ran in to cheer up poor Ralph. I was very careful to find out from the surgeon who set his leg whether it would be bad for Ralph to see me. Dr. Bitts is one of the most noted surgeons in the country. Terribly young for that, too—not more than 35. He has one of those attractive, stern faces, with straight mouth, and looks as though he shaves twice a day, and eyes like razors.

She Was Younger.

"When you talk to him he listens intently and then he has the most disconcerting way of coming to with a jerk and saying: 'Yes, yes; quite so,' and darting off somewhere. I think the poor dear man is worn out by his severe work. I tried to tell him the other day how a sensitive, appreciative woman couldn't help sympathizing with his hardships. He was very brave—he said they weren't hardships."

"Is your Cousin Ralph's leg——"

"Oh, that's mending, all right," said the girl with the vanity bag. "I don't wonder that my family can't stand Ralph's father, if he is anything like Ralph—always thinking of himself. He actually thought I was going to sit and read to him—no consideration at all for Dr. Bitts, who might like a little cheering conversation!"

"You said several——"

"Well, one of mother's friends and an aunt of father's are in the same hospital with typhoid and an operation, and, of course, I am younger than mother, so I do the calling. I told mother quite firmly when she insisted that it was not necessary for me to go every day that I hoped I knew my duty to the sick and suffering. Aunt Lou has a nephew by marriage who is so devoted to her, and he goes to see her frequently. He has the loveliest car, and as I happened to be leaving once when he did he took me home. I did some shopping first, because it was such a good chance to be carried around.

"I wish you could have seen that car. Something must have happened to it, because now he always comes on the street car. It wasn't so bad, because Mrs. Himmers' son—the friend with the operation—comes in his car and usually I am going just when he goes. But, oh, if you could see Dr. Bennett's eyes!"

"I really ought to look in on poor Carrie," mused the girl with the fire red hat. "What time——"

"Come to think of it," objected the girl with the silver vanity case, "the nurse said that Carrie mustn't have too much company—that it made her fever rise! So I guess I'd wait, if I were you."

The First Admiral.

A story sometimes told to ridicule the dialect of Pudsey is that of a traveler who astonished his friend by telling him that the children in Pudsey were the most intelligent children in the world.

"Why, what do they know?" asked his friend.

"They know who was the first naval admiral who ever lived," the traveler replied.

"Not they. Here, can you prove it?"

"Yes. If you wish, we will go to Pudsey and I will ask any child you like that particular question."

The friend agreed.

As the traveler and his friend went through Pudsey they saw a boy about ten years old playing in the street. The traveler went to him and asked:

"Now, my boy, do you know who was the first naval admiral?"

"No-a," bluntly replied the lad.

"There," said the traveler, turning to his friend, "didn't I tell you he would know?"

Willing to Oblige.

Elderly Gentleman—Hi, conductor! Bring the 'bus here. D'ye think I'm going to walk through all this mud?

Conductor—Sutt'nly not, sir. Hif you'll wait 'arf a minnit I'll lay down the carpet an' 'erect the hawning!

Conspire Against Domestic Harmony

The ills of women seem to conspire against domestic harmony. No husband can understand why a woman should be continually ailing, fretful, nerveus and despondent, and he gets out of all patience with her. In nine cases out of ten some organic derangement is the cause of this condition and is easily overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a woman's remedy for woman's ills which has cured more severe cases of this kind than any other remedy we know.

Paper Fingers That Save Time
How many times do typewriter operators come nearly to the bottom of the paper and have to put in another sheet to write just one more line?
The L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter
is equipped with paper fingers that hold the paper so well that it is possible to write on the extreme edge of the paper or card.
These paper fingers, if the operator forgets to push them back into place after writing a card or envelope, move along to the proper place with the advancement of the carriage in either direction.
This is one of the many reasons why the L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter enables the operator to produce more and better work than on any other writing machine ever made.

She smiled and snapped the catch, and then stood gazing at it for several moments before she went to the door and admitted the porter with his small but deadly truck. He was a muscular young man with the intelligent expression of an elderly and amiable cow, the true type of trunk-destroyer, and the Princess shivered when she saw him.

"Have the other trunks gone?" she asked.

"Yes'm—last night," he growled, making swiftly for his prey. He started to tilt it in such a manner that our hardy and valiant knight, Warren of Jarvis, would have been standing on his head, contrary to the canons of chivalry. The Princess hastily intervened.

"This end up—please be sure and have it marked that way and be sure to mark it 'Wanted on Voyage.'"

"Yes'm," grunted Caliban. He rocked the trunk a little, thrust the lip of the truck under it and jerked it forward—blam!

The Princess winced and shuddered.

"And please—please—handle it very gently."

"Yes'm."

He had just begun to trundle the trunk and the knight toward the door when the exit was completely blocked by the cubical form of the house detective. The porter stopped and carelessly pitched his burden forward—blam!

The Broken Lock.

"Excuse me, madam," said the detective, with a kind of dogged hardness. "I don't want to bother you again, but that man—he killed a man up the hall—has got clean away unless he—he——"

"Well?" said the Princess coldly.

"Well, would you mind if—if I sort of took a look around? You're sure you were here all the time?"

"Of course," replied Dona Maria quietly. "But my maid will be up presently and you will be welcome to go through these rooms."

His attention was attracted to the trunk by a third "blam!" as the porter prepared to proceed, and he obligingly stepped inside out of the way. As he did so his eyes fell on the broken door lock.

"How'd that lock get broken?" His voice rang out suddenly like a pistol shot and he looked up quickly at the Princess. She inclined her head as if to assure herself that it really was broken, which was overacting the part.

"I think you should call the clerk's attention to it," she said calmly. "It was broken when I came here."

"When—may I ask did you come here?"

"Certainly. Yesterday afternoon."

"Oh, I see, I beg your pardon," he said slowly, and backed out. He did not know why, but he did not entirely believe the frank and self-possessed young woman. He walked down to a turn of the corridor, resolving to keep a close eye on the apartment until it was vacated. In this walk he again passed the trunk, but it suggested nothing. An escape in a trunk has become so common in fact and in fiction that no up-to-date detective believes any one would try it again. So it is still one of the best means, just as, from the other angle, it is a fact that occasionally in spite of comic artists and the like, some one still buys a gold brick.

Thus, in a manner unheroic, by freight elevator and van with divers bumps and bruises and swear words, the good knight Warren of Jarvis set forth to the Spanish Main and the storied hills of Aragon.

Pasting labels on trunks, like pressing the elevator button in the average office building, is more an act in evidence of good faith than in expectation of results. Having up to this time traveled only with a trunk and never in one, Warren Jarvis did not realize this until fairly embarked on his rough passage from the Hotel Vanderbilt to the promenade deck suite on the Lusitania.

For days afterward the memory of that two-mile voyage rode him like a nightmare. So did the divers aches, wrenches and bruises that he acquired by the way. And, finally, when the journey was over and he could have time to decide whether he was one large pain or had been broken up into several thousand small agonies, the trunk was deposited in the parlor of the Princess' suite with the label "This side up," carefully pressed against the carpet.

Dona Maria, anxious for the welfare of her champion, arrived at the stateroom just a few moments later. But she was haunted by an attentive steward, who in her abstraction she neglected to fee, and who declined to end his solicitous attentions until the oversight should be remedied.

While the Princess fidgeted and longed for him to get out he insisted on explaining everything connected with the suite. He opened the door that led onto the deck and pointed out the raised ledge as a trap for the unwary landsman's foot. He opened a door that led into a companionway. He showed her the clothes-pressers and all the while Dona Maria could not take her eyes from the top of the trunk, which displayed no label. Following her glance he offered to place the trunk for her.

"You needn't bother about it now, steward," she interposed quickly as he laid his hands on it. Then as an afterthought: "You might turn it right side up."

He Goes at Last.

"Oh, I'm sorry," he apologized as he noticed the labels. "I hope the contents are not upset."

"I hope not!" agreed Dona Maria, fervently.

"Anything more, madame?"

"Not now, thank you, steward," said Dona Maria nervously. "How soon do we sail?"

"Very soon now," he answered, as a deep raucous voice was heard bellowing afar. "They're calling visitors ashore now, madame."

And at last he was gone. But there was still Nita, the maid, who had doffed her hat and coat and was fussing about the bags.

"Your Highness has the keys to the trunks?" she suggested briskly.

"Hm—yes. You—you may leave the trunk as it is, Nita, until later. Go to your room now and get settled. I'll call you when I want you."

"Yes, Your Highness." But at the door of her room, she paused in some embarrassment. The Princess frowned impatiently.

"Will Your Highness pardon me," said Nita, uncomfortably, "if I am mistaken in thinking I recognize Senor the Duke, your exalted cousin, among the passengers——?"

"My cousin!" exclaimed Dona Maria, with a fine assumption of surprise. "Impossible! He is at Madrid."

Nita inclined her head in that extremely polite unbelief possible to the finished servant. "Yes, Your Highness," she agreed, demurely, and withdrew.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

The scene of the story is laid in the Vanderlip Hotel, New York City. The Princess Maria Theresa of Segura, a beautiful Spanish woman, is suddenly awakened in her suite by the sound of pistol shots. She hears a man running down the hall. He crashes against her door, breaking the lock, and enters. She sees he is a tall, good-looking young man, dressed in evening clothes. He is carrying a revolver in his right hand, and blood is dripping from a wound in his left. He begs the Princess to hide him. She, moved by some indescribable impulse, decides that she will. She directs him to an inner room, and a few minutes later, when the hotel detective knocks on the door, she tells him she is all right and sends him away. The young man, who is Warren Jarvis, of Kentucky, comes out of his hiding place, and the Princess, for the first time, notices his wound. She is moved to sympathy and showers him with questions as to what has occurred. Jarvis tells her about a Kentucky feud between his family and another named Markham. He says he left Kentucky to avoid the feudists, but encountered one of them in the hotel, which explains the shots. The Princess declares she will help him, and then asks the stranger question, "Are you afraid of ghosts?" Jarvis laughs, but grows solemn when the Princess tells him she has dangerous work for him to do. She makes him swear allegiance, and creates him her "vassal." Then she tells him to get her trunk, which is going to be shipped to a steamship on which she sails to Spain the following day. First Jarvis tells her to telephone to his servant, Rusty Snow, a negro. The servant is instructed to procure passage for himself and Jarvis in the ship. Jarvis then prepares to get into the trunk, but first begins to question the Princess about herself.

Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER XLIV.

As soon as Mildred had ordered Steve to bring the big car she hurried to her room and hastily changed her clothes, putting on the khaki suit she wore when fishing. She was very much excited. But before leaving the room she glanced, womanlike, in her mirror. Then, hardly knowing what she was doing, she picked up a little handbag such as women take when they go shopping, containing a handkerchief, a powder rag, a small mirror and a small purse. She rushed on the porch and called Elmer.

"Elmer," she said hurriedly. "I'm going to find Gordon. I can't stand the suspense any longer. Come if you want to; if you don't, I'm going alone."

"Of course, I'm going, too," exclaimed the boy. "That's just like a girl. Didn't I propose the scheme?"

"Well, hurry now, and get my rifle and revolver," cried Mildred.

"That little revolver of yours is no good," remarked Elmer. "You can take it if you want to; I'm going to get dad's big one." And off he went.

In a few minutes Steve appeared with the car and Mildred and Elmer climbed in. Mildred with her handbag and revolver and Elmer with his father's six-shooter.

"Is you all gwine shootin', Miss Mildred?" asked Steve.

"We are going after Mr. Gordon, Steve," replied Mildred, "so hurry, please."

"Lordomassy!" exclaimed the colored boy. He turned the car quickly and they were soon bowling along the main road.

A Serious Affair.

A girl and two boys going in a motor car on a hunt for supposed desperadoes would have been a most ludicrous affair except for the very serious way the three persons involved in the undertaking viewed it. A professional layer of odds, knowing the circumstances, would have wagered anything up to 100 to 1 that the expedition would end in a fizzle, if, indeed, the rescuers did not get themselves in serious trouble. However that might be, the car rolled bravely on and reached the point where the road crossed Pew Creek, inside of half an hour. Mildred had given her instructions to Steve, and as soon as the car stopped she and Elmer started off due west. Elmer leading the way and she following closely, carrying the toy revolver in one hand and the little handbag in the other.

There are few things a woman will not risk for the man she loves. The proper thing for Mildred to have done, of course, was to have gathered all the men at the mansion and sent them on the hunt for Gordon. But she didn't, and that, of course, ends all argument. If Mildred had only realized it, she and Elmer were almost as helpless as the babes in the woods. Unlooked-for things happen, however, and, with the chances at least 100 to 1 against her, an unlooked-for thing happened in this case.

They had not traveled far before Elmer found unmistakable signs that a horse had traveled in the direction they were going, and in certain places they were able to follow the hoof-prints.

Moved More Slowly.

"Keep careful track of the distance we travel," whispered Mildred. "You know Gordon said he was three miles due west from the bridge."

When they had covered what they considered about two and a half miles they moved more slowly and more cautiously, and although both were now trembling with excitement (and perhaps fear), they kept bravely on. At last they came to a point where the ground rose sharply for a hundred yards or so. Mildred grasped Elmer by the shoulder and whispered:

"We are near the place, Elmer. We must be very careful and keep under cover."

They crept along behind trees and at length came to the top of the rise. Below them they saw smoke issuing from a clump of trees.

"He's down there," said Mildred in an excited whisper. "I'm sure of it. Oh, what shall we do?"

"Sneak around and maybe we can see something," replied Elmer, hoarsely. His eyes glistened and he was pale, but game.

They circled around cautiously, keeping close together. Suddenly Elmer stopped and dropped to the ground. Mildred, her heart beating wildly, sank behind him.

"I see him, I see him," exclaimed the lad excitedly. He pointed and Mildred saw, not more than 60 yards away, a man seated upon a tree reading a newspaper. It was Gordon Kelly. She would have known him as far as her eyes could reach. She felt as if she were on the point of screaming, or crying, or fainting—she knew not what. She hastily opened the handbag and reached for her handkerchief—a woman's weapon, a woman's protector.

"Keep Quiet!"

"Keep quiet!" hissed Elmer. "There's another man there and he'll see us."

Mildred looked again and saw a man looking on the ground fifteen or twenty feet in front of Gordon.

"What shall we do; what shall we do?" was all she could whisper.

There was a long silence. Finally Elmer said:

"Gee, if I only had a mirror I could sneak down behind that bush and attract his attention."

"Why, I have a little mirror," exclaimed Mildred, reaching for her handbag again. She produced the article and handed it to the boy.

"You crawl behind that tree and wait there," whispered Elmer. A moment later he began worming his way toward the bush he had indicated. This brought him to within less than 150 feet of where Gordon was sitting. Carefully getting his range, he flashed a streak of sunlight across the shaded page of Gordon's newspaper and repeated the operation immediately.

Gordon cautiously glanced over his shoulder. He saw little Elmer peering from behind a bush and beyond the lad he saw a white handkerchief flutter. Mildred could not resist the temptation to signal. Gordon waved an answering sign and then arose. He walked to the log cabin, followed by his armed guard. He took a baseball, slit the seam with his knife; then, saying to his guard, "I want to do a little figuring," took a little book of cigarette papers belonging to the youngest of the mountaineers and wrote these words:

"If you have a gun, place it 20 feet beyond where this ball lands; if not, bring help noon to-morrow."

Guard Did Not Call.

He folded the tissue paper three times longways and once shortways, tucked it into the ripped seam of the baseball with his knife, leaving the edge sticking out (the guard was paying no particular attention to him) and then announced that he guessed he would take a little exercise.

This time the guard did not call a companion, as was the custom when Gordon practiced with bat and ball. The idea of two guards was doubtless originally suggested by the dangerous-looking baseball bat that Gordon swung with such ease. He had become such a cheerful and inoffensive captive, however, that on this occasion his guard decided not to trouble any of his companions, who were at that time on the shady side of the cabin, discussing a letter that had been received that morning from Forrest Cain.

Going out in the open, followed by his guard, pistol in hand, Gordon hit several high flies, catching the ball when it came down. Then, as if inadvertently, he drove it in such a manner that it fell 200 feet away from him and beyond a little clump of bushes.

"What do you think of that?" he exclaimed to his guard. "I'm losing my batting eye, I guess. Let's get a drink of water and then we'll go and get that ball. It cost $1.25."

It took Gordon fifteen minutes to get his drink of water and fuss around the cabin before he started after the ball, with his guard following closely. He had carefully marked the spot where it fell, and when he reached it his eyes beamed, for twenty feet beyond was what he wanted far more than he wanted the ball. Picking up the white object, he walked straight ahead and suddenly sat down facing his guard.

"Sit down and make yourself comfortable," he said. But the guard remained standing.

"By the looks of the sky, I'll bet you we have rain before to-morrow morning," he observed, reaching behind him.

"Turn Around and Walk."

The guard cast his eyes upward and when he lowered them again a six-shooter in the hand of his captor was pointing directly at his heart.

"Drop that gun! Drop it!" said Gordon, in a low, intense tone.

The guard hesitated the fraction of a second and then let the weapon fall to the ground.

"Turn around and walk two steps ahead," commanded Gordon, jumping to his feet and seizing the guard's six-shooter when his command was obeyed.

The rest was merely routine work, as it were.

"On the run, now," ordered Gordon, pointing to the east. "Back to the bridge; be quick about it."

The ex-guard started off, and with Gordon traversed 50 feet before Mildred and Elmer jumped from behind a tree.

"Won't you wait for me, Gordon?" said Mildred. An instant later they were in each other's arms.

"You will have to do all the hugging, Honeybunch," whispered Gordon. "I've got these two six-shooters in my hands, but I'll make up for it as soon as I get a chance. You are the bravest girl in the world. Now, come, dear, we are not out of the woods yet. Good work, Elmer."

Gordon turned over one of his revolvers to Elmer and the procession started, the mountaineer leading the way, followed by Gordon, holding a six-shooter in one hand and Mildred's hand in the other, and Elmer bringing up the rear. Arriving at the bridge where Steve was waiting with the car, Gordon said to his prisoner:

"Go back to your crowd and tell them I'll give them 24 hours to leave this mountain country, and if any of you come back, I'll make you wish you hadn't."

"That other man's comin' up to-morrer," said the mountaineer. They were the first words Gordon had ever heard him utter.

"Here's Your Gun."

"What man?" he demanded.

"That man that's been a-payin' us money."

"Is that so?" mused Gordon. "In that case, you can tell your men to hold on to him until they hear from me. I'll settle with that fellow when I get around to it. Tell your men I won't bother them as long as they hold on to him. Now, you can go back. Here's your gun, but I'll just take the cartridges out of it first. Now, then, Elmer, climb in the front seat. Come, Mildred. Go ahead, Steve."

"Gordon," said Mildred, as soon as the car started, "you need a haircut badly."

It was dark when they reached the mansion, where the appearance of the owner created an immense sensation.

"Mildred, dear," said Gordon, drawing her to one side, "I want you to spend the evening here. There's something I want particularly to say to you. We can have Mrs. Ward for a chaperone," he added, with a smile.

"Not in these clothes, Gordon," replied Mildred. "If you will let Steve drive us home, Elmer and I will both be back in an hour."

When Mildred and the lad returned Gordon, too, had had a change of clothes.

"Who cut your hair?" laughed Mildred.

"Oh, we have always had a barber here," replied Gordon, with a smile.

They sat down to dinner, after which Gordon told Elmer to go and play billiards and then led Mildred into the room he called his office, and which Mildred called his lazy room. The particular something he wanted to tell her required more than half an hour and considerable eloquence to tell. Mildred shook her head at frequent intervals, but finally gave in and murmured, "Yes." Arising, she went to the telephone on Gordon's desk and gave an order. While she was waiting for connections Gordon, happy as a lark, seated himself at the piano, said "Second verse," and sang:

We will build a bower of grasses,
Call it Castle Lullaby;
Drink the south wind as it passes,
Lips o' Poppy—you and I!
Youth will be a friend to cheer us,
Fill our veins with purple wine,
Stand forever watching near us,
Lips o' Poppy, maid of mine!
Pines shall lull us with their moaning;
Golden bees in golden quest
Songs of sweet desire intoning
To the white flower of your breast!
Lips o' Poppy, girl of rapture,
Mine shall be enchantment's power,
Substance of my dreams to capture
In the heart of that white flower!
Lips o' Poppy—eyes entrancing—
Maid of earth or maid of air!
We will pass the years a-dancing
Down the realm of Queen Don't Care.
Come! the purple shades are falling!
Come! it is the Queen's command!
Hark! the nightingales are calling
To the Never Hurry Land!

"That's very nice," said Mildred, "but suppose dad—— Oh, here he is now. That you, dad?—— Oh, fine! Ah—— I am with Mr. Kelly, and—er—Mr. Kelly wants to speak to you a minute. Oh, now, dad, do be nice—— Does he want to talk business? Ha, ha! Yes, I believe he wants to talk business. All right; hold the wire." Mildred clapped her hand over the mouthpiece and whispered excitedly: "Dad was awfully angry at first and wouldn't speak to you, but he suddenly changed his mind. Now, go ahead; don't be afraid."

He Asks for Mildred.

Gordon took up the receiver and this conversation followed:

"Hello, Mr. Deery! I want to ask——"

"What will you take for your property—spot cash?" interrupted Deery.

"I don't want to sell, Mr. Deery."

"Oh, come, come; I'll give you $20,000 for it—cash, mind you."

"I couldn't think of it, Mr. Deery."

"Well, what's it worth, then? Come, you must have a figure."

"Really, Mr. Deery, I don't want to sell at any price, but if you ask me, the property is worth all of $2,000,000."

"Two million dollars!" sputtered Deery. "Am I talking to a crazy man? Ask my daughter to come to the phone, please."

"Just a minute, Mr. Deery. I want to say something very seriously. Please listen. I want to ask your permission to marry your daughter. We love each other and——"

"Now I know you're crazy," Deery broke in. "Call my daughter, please."

"But, Mr. Deery——"

"Not another word. I wish to speak to my daughter."

Mildred took the receiver from Gordon's hand.

"Hello, dad; what's wrong?"

"Come home at once, Mildred."

"Now, dad," pleaded Mildred, "please don't be so angry. Gordon and I——"

"I will not hear another word; I insist that you come home at once."

"Dad, if you're going to act that way, you'll regret it. Please tell mother I wish to speak to her."

"Your mother is not at home and won't be home for an hour. Mildred, I tell you for the last time, come home immediately or I'll come up there and get you."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

MOST DECIDEDLY NOT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-one, and a man two years my senior has made an appointment with me and at the same time with my friend. Would it be fitting for me to keep it, and also, is it proper for him to make the appointment for the same time and place? G. M. T. I.

He is flirting with you, I am sure, and if "by appointment" you mean to meet on some street corner you owe it to yourself to refuse to meet him though he were alone. Ask him to come to your home for you; his reply will give you some insight into his character.

BY BECOMING A MAN.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a boy of twenty, and in love with a girl two years younger than myself. I am deeply in love with the girl, and she doesn't care for me. How can I make her love me? Another boy loves her, but she doesn't love him. T. C.

You rightly term yourself a boy, since you are only twenty. I suggest unfailing courtesy, kindness, appreciation and devotion, but not so much that your attentions distract your head and heart from the more serious and timely task of developing yourself into a manly man.

Rather Slow.

Little Miggs—I should just think so! Why, the check you promised to send me ten days ago hasn't arrived yet!

Benefited Many Who Had Lung Trouble

Those who suffer from Lung Trouble are generally troubled with night sweats, fever, loss of strength and little or no appetite. Eckman's Alterative is a medicine which has been most successful in stopping night sweats, reducing fever and promoting appetite, and many who have used it declare it saved their lives. Investigate what it did in this case:

"Dear Sir: For four years I was troubled with cough, which gradually became worse. I had night sweats and pains in my chest. I was losing my appetite and had become so thin and weak I could not attend to my household duties. A physician pronounced my disease Consumption. Not being satisfied, I was examined by the physicians of the Polyclinic Hospital. They also confirmed my trouble, and I was ordered away for treatment. My nephew would not allow me to go until I had tried Eckman's Alterative. Before I had taken the medicine three weeks, I had marked relief, night sweats ceased, pain in the breast relieved, cough became loose and easy, fever left me, and I commenced getting well. My health became normal. I am in excellent health now and have been for twelve years. I strongly recommend it." (Signed)

RACE MIGHTY TIGHT; LOCAL CLUB IN HUNT

If Crackers Can Keep Playing As They Did Last Week They Will Cop Pennant.

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE Southern League race is a rip-snorter. Mobile, Montgomery, Chattanooga and Atlanta are within .041 of each other. Birmingham, Memphis and Nashville are far from out of the race. It's getting better every minute.

The Crackers have the chance of their career to make a showing now. Two of the next three clubs they face on home ground are ahead of them. If they can hammer the Turtles to pieces, get a few games back that the Gulls owe them and plaster something on Montgomery they will be right up in the race again.

They have it in them, too.

You can't lose confidence in a team that pulls games out of the fire the way the Crackers were yanking them last week. Saturday's game, for instance, was as poor from a fielding viewpoint as any man would care to witness, but the locals had the old kick that was needed to get them out of danger. They saved two games Friday that appeared totally lost. They won all the way Thursday. Both of the games with Mobile were won after they had been lost. And altogether, the Crackers are showing real recuperative power.

If the players will pull together, forget all the inside politics and work exclusively for Atlanta and for the pennant there will be nothing to it but another rag for Atlanta.

* * *

BUCK" WEAVER is winning a game now and then for the Meridian team and may come around and make a pitcher of himself yet. It is possible that now he is away from the alcoholic possibilities of Atlanta's many social (?) clubs he may settle down and do some good work. He has the natural ability, all right.

* * *

* * *

IF old Rube Benton were only with a ball club he might be a wonder. The other day in a game against the Cardinals he made three hits, scored three runs and perpetrated a sacrifice fly. It was a very hot day, too.

Ordinarily, Rube hits like a suffragette.

* * *

GUESS the Naps will never win a ball game. Usually they haven't any team. When they have, it is wrecked by internal dissensions. When it isn't, as this year, accidents do the rest.

Here are the accidents since May 1.

May 4.—Catcher Grover Land broke his hand.

May 11—Larry Lajoie broke a finger and a thumb.

May 12—Joe Birmingham broke an ankle.

June 11—Twirler Steen broke his pitching arm.

This is only a partial list of the wounded. Ray Chapman, the Naps' shortstop, was hurt the day Steen broke his arm and couldn't play for two weeks. "Buddy" Ryan, center fielder, is playing with a broken thumb.

* * *

PERCY SKILLEN, former Dartmouth pitcher, now in the sporting goods business, has invented a device which he thinks will help pitchers develop control, a thing which Percy lacked or he might now be a big leaguer. It is a dummy that stands at the plate, bat in hand, so that a twirler can pitch to it hours at a time if he feels like it, and never fear that wild shots will do any damage.

"Dutch" Meyers, who is in business with Percy, tried to sell one of these devices to Jimmy Callahan to help steady young Sox pitchers.

"I don't deny that your idea may work out all right," Manager Callahan told Meyers. "But you needn't send any of those things around."

"Why not?" persisted Meyers.

"What do I want with another dummy, when I have three or four on my team now?" asked Callahan. "I'll just use one of them."

'Tear-In' Fighters Are Popular

Sluggers Usually Capture Title

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 7.—Discussions have arisen in England and Australia as to whether the "tear-in" fighters of the present day are better boxers than the clever fellows who made a business of pugilism fifteen or twenty years ago. Some of the arguments used in support of the various views expressed are highly interesting, but one very important matter has been overlooked. There are no "tear-in" fighters now—at least, none worth talking about. The clever fellows have come into their own again.

Take the smaller men. When Terry McGovern, with bent back, lowered head and rapidly revolving fists, began demolishing the nations of the earth, the opinions that many persons held in respect to the noble art of self-defense were revolutionized. After the Brooklyn whirlwind had run amuck for a year or two, grave doubts existed as to whether there was any scientific side to boxing, for had not the game developed a youth who, by determined onslaught, could upset all ideas of leading, countering, timing, sidestepping and what not?

And when Terry spread-eagled Peddler Palmer, the pride of British pugdom, in one round, the belief that forthrightness was the one and only antidote for cleverness became a firmer ground than ever.

Nelson Greatest Slugger.

Terry strutted his brief period and then went under to another "tear-in" fighter in the person of Young Corbett. It is worthy of note, by the way, that each of these "tear-in" specialists fell a victim to a fellow who also operated along "tear-in" lines. Corbett did fairly well until he ran afoul of Battling Nelson, who was possibly the most headlong fighter of them all—greater even than Terry McGovern, the founder of the "tear-in" dynasty.

Nelson did more than any of them to show that cleverness could be made to succumb to direct methods. Among other things, he won from Joe Gans, who was possibly the most scientific lightweight the world ever has known.

When Nelson's time came it was another "tear-in" fighter who accounted for him. This was Ad Wolgast, and while Wolgast, still untroubled with the spasms of appendicitis, the toughest experience he ever had was with still another "tear-in" fighter, to-wit, Knockout Brown.

From the lightweights down, the clever lads are in the ascendant again. Packey McFarland, who can claim to be a lightweight, now that the weight limit has been hunched, is nothing if not clever, and unless Jack Britton has changed tactics since he went East he is also a boxer of the brainy, resourceful stamp.

Jimmy Duffy, the Lockport boy, who is fast forging to the front, is another exponent of scientific pugilism, while Ritchie Rivers, Mandot, Leach Cross and Freddie Welsh are all performers of the "hit, step and get away" school.

The welter, middle and light-heavy classes are so fussed now that it is impossible to tell "who is who" in the divisions named, but it can certainly be said that Mike Gibbons and Jimmy Clabby, a pair of really clever workmen, seem to be able to give away lots of weight and gain decisions from the best men that can be found for them.

Kilbane and Coulon Clever.

Johnnie Kilbane, the featherweight champion, and Johnny Coulon, the prince of bantams, have held their positions by dint of clever boxing and the manner in which little Eddi Campi handled the mercurial Frenchman, Ledoux, at Los Angeles recently, also favors the argument that cleverness is asserting itself in matters pugilistic again.

The heavyweight situation is so muddled that it is not easy to figure out what has contributed to success in that particular department, but in a general way it can be shown that cleverness has made itself tell among the big fellows during the past few years. This, too, despite the fact that Bombardier Wells, the most finished boxer England has produced in years, has been defeated practically every time he started.

Jack Johnson's long suit was cleverness, and there is no occasion to recall what he has done. He was certainly the greatest heavyweight since Jeffries was in his heyday.

McCarty a Second Corbett.

The most pronounced "tear-in" fighters of the heavyweight class in recent times were Jim Flynn and Al Palzer, but Luther McCarty, who was in a way a second Jim Corbett, disposed of the pair within a few weeks.

McCarty is gone, Johnson has fallen upon evil days and it is hard to tell what is in store for the heavyweights. But in respect to pugilism generally, it can be said that in the whirligig of time the artists of the Queensberry ring have gained the ascendancy over the sluggers.

There is no assurance that the present order of things will continue and about the only thing existing conditions prove is that evolution has not produced any permanent change in fighting methods.

Just now they are fighting the way they fought a quarter of a century ago.

EMPIRE LEAGUE NOTES

Shortstop Murphy, of the Thomasville team, continues to hit the ball as if he means to stay at the top of the Empire's batters. Murphy is also a sensational fielder and will undoubtedly move up when the season ends.

* * *

Manager Moran, of Brunswick, has secured Third Baseman Crowe from Thomasasville and if the youngster continues his splendid work will probably keep him.

* * *

Almost without exception the players who have been cut loose by Waycross have made good elsewhere. Bitting, released as third baseman, landed with Charleston and is going fine. "Red" Stiles, a pitcher, signed with Thomasville, has won nearly all his games since leaving Waycross. Dacey, an outfielder, went to Americus and is putting up a neat article of ball.

* * *

McManus is one of the newest men in the Empire. He is a pitcher and has been signed by Waycross.

* * *

Almost as fast as teams change players the Empire is changing umpires. Derrick is the latest to join the league's staff. Morton, one of the new men, has been criticised a great deal on account of his work and may be released.

* * *

Cordele has in Wilder a pitcher who makes more noise than any man in the league. Wilder holds the league's strike-out record so far, fifteen, and is apt to cut loose some new capers almost any game.

* * *

South Atlantic League scouts have been through the Empire, and inside information says quite a few players will be taken in the Class C league after this season.

* * *

Brunswick will turn loose about six players this week. Moran says Brunswick is going to stay at the top, and he means it, too.

* * *

"Closed for ball game" is not an uncommon sign to see hanging on a store's front door in Empire League cities. Baseball comes first with almost everybody now.

* * *

Waycross plays six games at home this week and Manager Clark has tipped his team off that when the week-end arrives Waycross must be somewhere else besides at the bottom.

* * *

Reports from Thomasville indicate that fans in that city will always remember the stinging defeats given Valdosta last week. Both those towns are old time baseball rivals.

* * *

Otto Jordan, of Valdosta, can sell three of his four pitchers any day in the week, according to the dope from Valdosta. He has four good ones and it is said managers of almost every South Atlantic team is anxious to get contracts with them.

* * *

As far as individual players go, there is hardly any team in the Empire that has anything on the others. But when it comes to team work and pitchers—well—the league standing tells the story.

* * *

College players who have joined teams in the Empire are making good with a rush. Davenport, playing first at Thomasville; Holliday, the same for Waycross, and Bowen, short for Americus, are three players who have shown up exceptionally strong. Whitted, a college player, is one of the Waycross additions and is expected to make good with ease.

* * *

Heine Zimmerman's brother, who has been playing second for Waycross, will probably be worked in the outfield.

* * *

First Baseman Day, of Cordele, has shown that when it comes to a pinch he can pitch as well as play the bag. Day is a clever fellow, and has many friends in every city of the league.

* * *

Thomsville has a Day that is having days whenever he pitches. He is the handsome fellow of the league, and is winning so regularly now that there seems no end to his victories.

GOVERNOR MAY INTERVENE AT PORTER RACE TRACK

PORTER, IND., July 7.—State intervention at the Mineral Springs race track near here, which was successful last year, will be repeated this year if gamblers continue to bet on the races. Prosecutor Fabing, of Porter County, to-day returned from Indianapolis, where he obtained a promise from Governor Ralston that if there was any more gambling at the track State troops would come to Porter and close the course. Last year Governor Marshall used this method with success.

Ritchie May Take Trip Abroad

Wolgast Is Not All In--Naughton

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., July 7.—Now that Willie Ritchie has shown himself every inch a champion—that is, by comparison with contemporaneous lightweights, which is the only way to judge a rising young fighter—the question is, What will he do next?

There is some talk of Ritchie taking a trip to Europe. If his wishes lie in that direction, no one can say him nay, for he has intrenched himself in such a way with fair-minded sports that no chance remains to taunt him with being afraid of the issue with any man of his size.

The story goes that Ritchie long ago set his heart upon a trip through the older lands and that he wants to take advantage of his present position and earning power to fulfill his desire. He is sensible enough to know that a ring man's grip of the topmost rung is at all times insecure, and he thinks it best to indulge in a long-felt hankering while things are coming his way.

This is a better way of putting it than asserting that he is in need of a rest, for Ritchie is only just back from a six months' lay-off and can hardly boast of tired muscles and frayed nerves.

Whenever Willie gets ready to resume fistic activities he will find several worthy opponents. Freddie Welsh wants a crack at the title and so does Harlem Tommy Murphy. Leach Cross has the bee buzzing in his bonnet and Ad Wolgast has begun agitation for a return match.

In Wolgast's case, the fact that his advances are not taken over seriously is due to himself. Wolgast has had several chances to redeem himself, but he has not trained sufficiently on any one occasion. He could easily make himself a strong drawing card with the public if he would forsake city life for a few months and spend his time on his farm. Then if he came back armed with a physician's certificate setting forth that he had stored up plenty of vitality during his sojourn in the country, he would attract attention from the promoters.

In the writer's opinion, Wolgast is far from being a back number.

SLOW BEAT OF HEART GIVES MEN ENDURANCE

BATTLING NELSON'S theory that his slow heart was the cause of his phenomenal endurance is being substantiated right along. The normal number of beats a minute for the human heart is 72. The Battler's heart beats but 52 times a minute, and to this he laid his ability to take a walloping and win.

Now Marathon and other distance runners come forward with hearts that put Nelson's in the shade when it comes to slowness. Harry J. Smith, the national ten-mile champion, is also the champion of the slow-heart brigade. His heart beats but 48 times a minute.

Smith entered the Boston A. A. Marathon, and Dr. J. H. Cunningham, of Boston, examined his heart less than a minute after he had crossed the finish line. Though Smith had just completed a run that put him under one of the hardest heart strains known, his heart was banging away 80 a minute—just eight above normal for the average person.

Recently he took a life insurance examination and was informed that in 27,000 hearts examined his had the slowest beat.

George Benhag, the middle distance runner, is another slow-pulsed man. His heart has a peculiarity. It goes 64 a minute while he is standing, but lets up ten beats as soon as he lies down. Another one of the brigade is Mike Ryan, a New York distance runner.

Recently he was operated on at a New York hospital, and his heart was tested before he was given ether. Under conditions making for slowness, his heart beat but 42 for the minute. He resisted ether and had to be given enough to put ten men to sleep, but his "Marathon heart" was unaffected.

BANTAM WILLIAMS DESIRES JUST ONE LOOK AT COULON

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., July 7.—When Champion Johnny Coulon comes out here to negotiate for a renewal of his many-times postponed fight with Kid Williams, it looks as though they will have to lock the estimable Mr. Gutenko in a cellar until the session is over and Collins has fled to the mountains.

Williams swears he will "jump" the bantamweight champion in the street. "It's no use trying to get him into a ring with me," said the Kid, tearfully. "He'd sign all the articles fer a fight somewhere in Siberia and then telegraph that he had a stomach ache again and beat it on the run for some other mountains somewhere.

"The only way is fer me to meet the guy on the street and hand him what's coming to him right there. I'd like to have two or three fellers standin' round to see it because it will be good, and I wouldn't want to waste it."

Not to be outdone in desperation Sammy Harris tremblingly produced five one-hundred dollar bills and deposited them with Tom McCarey, an act which indicated a state of fury no less frightful than that of Kid Williams; there are different ways of expressing emotion.

When the "Kid" is torn with an agony of rage he wishes to punch some one; Sammy pulls out a hundred bill; same thing in a different dialect.

AUGUSTA TEAM WINS DOUBLES IN S. A. EVENT

AUGUSTA, GA., July 7.—Garrett and Gary, of Augusta, defeated the Waring brothers, of Columbia, S. C., Sunday afternoon for the championship of the South Atlantic States.

Play was continued from Saturday afternoon until Sunday on account of darkness, and when the four players resumed Sunday afternoon, the sets stood two all, and Garrett and Gary were four games to their opponents' two on the fifth set.

The score on the final set was 6—2, and the scores for the entire match of five games were as follows: 5—7, 7—5, 7—5, 4—6, 6—2. With the completion of the Garrett and Gary-Waring brothers match, the tournament of 1913 came to an end.

The championship in singles went to E. V. Carter, Jr., of Atlanta. The ladies' singles championship went to Mrs. Robert Johnson, of Asheville, N. C., and the mixed doubles championship to Miss Adger, of Greenville, S. C., and James Edwin, of Spartanburg, S. C.

The local enthusiasts were delighted to keep the doubles title at home, against strong opposition from Atlanta and other cities.

There was great disappointment because Nat Thornton, of Atlanta, decided not to defend his title, as the possibilities of a match between Thornton and Carter were alluring to the spectators.

KELLY GREATEST TIMBER TOPPER, SAYS MITCHELL

By James S. Mitchell.

World's Campion Weight Thrower.

NEW YORK, July 7.—Fred W. Kelly, of the University of Southern California, the present Olympic high hurdling champion, who won the national A. A. U. title at the Chicago carnival on Saturday and who won the high and low hurdles in the collegiate meet on Thursday, is unquestionably the greatest timber-topper on earth to-day.

On his native heath, Kelly has equaled the world's record of 15 seconds for the 120-yard hurdles, and this feat for a young man of 21 is unprecedented in the history of athletics. What Kelly will do to the records in the years to come can only be imagined.

Like a Bird Over Hurdles.

Long and powerful of limb and with great development of the back muscles, the Californian possesses the ideal points of the real racer over the sticks. When crossing the obstacles he has such a fine spread that his body does not have to rise high in the air and he simply strides over the hurdles, as it were.

I did not happen to get a good look at the Los Angeles man till he began to practice at Stockholm prior to the Olympic games last year. Without delay I picked him as the winner, despite the fact that the Englishmen were very sweet on their man Anderson, who was supposed to have shown 15 seconds for the 120 yards.

Many Caught Time at 14 4-5.

Kelly justified my opinion by winning in 15 1-10 seconds, in undoubtedly the most sensational hurdle race ever seen. Several private timers, Americans as well as myself, made the time 14 4-5 seconds.

J. E. Sullivan, the American commissioner, said it was the fastest hurdle race he had ever seen, and is prepared to see Kelly do better than 15 seconds any day.

The citizens of Los Angeles contributed the money to take Kelly on the Olympic team, and their generosity has been highly praised ever since, and Kelly, by his great performances, has shown that his admirers made no mistake.

Tortorich Offers Big Purse for Title Go

SAN FRANCISCO, July 7.—D. J. Tortorich, owner of the Westside Athletic Club at New Orleans, wired Willie Ritchie to-day offering a purse of $20,000 for a twenty-round fight between the champion and Jack Britton, of Chicago. If accepted, the fight will take place September 7. Danny Morgan, manager of Britton, has already accepted for his protege.

REDS PURCHASE ROBINSON FROM SAVANNAH CLUB

SAVANNAH, GA., July 6.—Announcement has been made of the consummation of negotiations which have been pending between the Cincinnati Baseball Club and the owners of the local association of the South Atlantic League for the sale of pitcher Dick Robertson. The purchase price is said to be $4,000.

Robertson will be delivered to the Cincinnati club at the end of the South Atlantic season. President Armstrong has stated that the present Indian combination will be kept intact throughout the year. When announcement was made of the sale of Robertson it was stated that the young spitball artist will remain in Savannah for the balance of the season.

CHAPPELLE IS MOTOTCYCLE CHAMP; DEFEATS C. DAVIS

NEW YORK, July 7.—Arthur Chappelle, the motorcycle speed king, is to-day the holder of the professional championship of America. At the Motordrome—at Brighten Beach last night Chappelle won the third and deciding race of the series for the championship from Charles Davis. Each had won a match and this was the deciding one, and consisted of a ten-mile and two five-mile heats.

Billy Vanderbury, of Philadelphia, captured the three-mile professional race, winning all three heats.

Martin Kessler, of Newark, was badly cut about the mouth when he fell from his machine while trying to avoid mixing up in a spill in the two-mile novice race.

ZEIDER READY TO PLAY; CHANCE TO MAKE CHANGES

NEW YORK, July 7.—After to-day's double-header with the Senators the New Yorks leave for Chicago to begin their second Western trip.

Frank Chance has received word from Rollie Zeider that he would join the team on Wednesday, ready to play second base in the opening game with the White Sox. Zeider's absence has cost the Yankees many games. With Zeider on he middle bag, Hartzell will supplant Daniels or Wolter in the outfield.

GUTHRIE PITCHER HURLS ONLY 54 BALLS IN GAME

GUTHRIE, OKLA., July 7.—Andrew Jelsama, pitching for the Elks team of the Guthrie City League, is believed to have made a record in a game against the Santa Fe Railroad team when he delivered only 54 balls during the entire nine innings. He allowed three hits, striking out one man.

DENVER CLUB ON SALE.

DENVER, COLO., July 7.—President McGill wants to sell the Denver team of the Western League, it is said, and retire at the end of the season.

Cross After Match With Ritchie

Leach Wants Plenty of Action

By H. M. Walker.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., July 7.—It's Leach Cross, the pride of the walk in Los Angeles. Whatever admiration was bestowed upon Mexican Joe Rivers now goes for Cross double. Fight bugs are fairly marveling at the showing of the New Yorker, and from the talk at sporting headquarters it seems to be the consensus of opinion that the New Yorker would defeat Ritchie for the championship.

Leach, with Brother Sam and Trainer Harry Lee, were about town Sunday accepting congratulations on all sides, but more eager to know the next probable date for his services than anything else.

The New Yorker is decorated with a handsome black eye, the left optic being badly swollen and discolored clear over the cheekbone, but Leach is parading this proudly in honor of the occasion and said if he had been a loser he would bend his head and take up an alleyway.

"I want Ritchie in a match for the championship of the world," said Cross, "and I want to know within a few days whether the champion is going to give me this chance. It would be a great fight and I like my chances with him, for our styles are very similar. He's cleverer than I am and I think he's the classiest champion we have had since Joe Gans, but this is the wing that spells kick," and the dentist-boxer closed his right fist and smiled confidently.

"Will you take on Rivers if the match is postponed and there is nothing doing for the present with Ritchie?" was asked. "I'm ready to take on Rivers the last of July, regardless of whether I meet the champion, and then I will fight again the next month and take Ritchie Labor Day. That's me, for I'm in better form the oftener I work."

Just what the immediate plans of the Eastern boxer will be is not quite known. Unless something positive is placed for Cross early this week the New Yorker will start back East, probably taking a date with Harry Trendall at St. Louis, and then on to New York, where he is offered a match with Young Shugrue.

Bud Anderson came into town with Manager Dick Donald yesterday and, although somewhat disappointed and forlorn, he expressed a manly version of the outcome and gave the victor all just dues, saying that he only hoped there would soon be a time when he can command another accounting with Mr. Cross. Bud's lips were considerably swollen and his right eye discolored. Anderson and Manager Donald are not certain of future plans, but will remain over until to-morrow, then returning to Medford.

RICHARDS WINS A WIFE IF HE WINS 2 RACES

IT'S leaked out on "Tex" Richards, rider at the local Motordrome. Old "Tex" is going to be married. That is, maybe?

You see it's this way.

The girl is an awful Motordrome enthusiast. Also it takes a peck of money to get married.

So she wrote "Tex" that if he would win both races at the next meet she would have him—and the quicker the better.

Yes, it sounds like a press agent's yarn. And like as not the girl got the idea out of a novel or a newspaper. A lot of things come from such places. But anyhow, the story is true. If "Tex" wins both races he gets a wife. If he doesn't, there will be another wait. And "Tex" has waited quite a while.

Naturally a thing like this will spur Richards to the utmost Tuesday night. And he will need it. Jock McNeil has the old J. A. P. running as never before. And Mortie Graves' new Excelsior has shown speed in practice that is fast enough to win any race ever run on this Motordrome or any other.

Tuesday's races will be among those three riders. The experts believe that Graves is the winner if all goes well. But McNeil's machine has never been beaten when it was running right. And "Tex" Richards has never yet run that old Indian No. 23 as he will run it Tuesday night.

In case of rain Tuesday night the meeting will be postponed until Wednesday night. There will also be racing Friday night.

LEDOUX AND WILLIAMS WORKING FOR GO JULY 15

LOS ANGELES, July 7.—Charley Ledoux and Kid Williams are going after the training stunt as though they meant to make the July 15 bout a businesslike affair. The two have met in the ring before, and as both claim a victory at that meeting, the rivalry is especially keen.

The French bantamweight appears to be in great shape and went through his best work-outs since arriving in California yesterday at his Vernon camp. He showed considerable improvement over his previous work here.

At Venice Kid Williams gave a large crowd of assembled fans a good idea of his condition and showed them something of what he intends to do to Ledoux next week.

JOY FOR FRANK CHANCE.

NEW YORK, July 7.—F. Leroy Chance has moved from a pennant contender to a tail-ender. At first glance this would appear to be quite a jolt. But Chance accepts the situation with a philosophical calm. He no longer has to manage Heinie Zimmerman.

RINGSIDE NOTES

Who will get the next chance at Willie Ritchie's title? This is a question that is worrying boxing fans these days. Freddie Welsh, Leach Cross, Tommy Murphy and Jack Britton are all clamoring for the prize match.

* * *

At the present time it looks very much as if Cross will beat his rivals to the big bout. Cross' recent victory over Anderson has made him a big card on the coast. The dentist's great punching power should give him a great chance to cop the championship from Ritchie.

* * *

Friends of Charlie White should not take his defeat at the hands of Jack Britton to heart. When it is taken into consideration that White weighed but 129 pounds against 136 for Britton the showing made by Charlie was nothing to be ashamed of. Although Britton is credited with a knockout he failed to drop White once during the entire mill. The bout was stopped by the sheriff.

* * *

Poor Joe Thomas is certainly hitting the toboggan. Frankie Whitney pushed the New Orleans boy still further down the ladder by handing Joe Golden's protege a neat lacing in ten rounds last Friday.

* * *

The Ritchie-Rivers championship battle at San Francisco drew a $30,000 house. Ritchie was guaranteed $17,000 win, lose or draw. Rivers drew down about $5,000 for his end.

* * *

When Johnny Kilbane was recently asked in Cleveland why he didn't knock out more of his opponents he said: "I have always said that I am a boxer and not a fighter. I am not in the ring to kill the other fellow, but to simply outbox him. I won the featherweight championship of the world by using this method and will not change my style now."

The next big bout to be staged on the coast will be the twenty-round engagement between Charley Ledoux and Kid Williams at Los Angeles on July 29. The winner has been promised a match with either Eddie Campi or Johnny Coulon.

* * *

Kid Young, the local newsboy boxer, is still waiting to hear from Charlie Lee in regard to the latter's challenge. Young says he will sign up for the match at once and will also give Lee a $50 side bet.

* * *

George Chip and Jack Dillon meet in a 12-round setto at Boston on July 8. The winner is to be matched with Frank Klaus.

* * *

Eddie Craney, who staged the Rivers-Ritchie mill, is now anxious to arrange a match between Jack Britton and Tommy Murphy. He has already wired an offer to Danny Morgan, manager of Britton.

* * *

Billy Papke, former middelweight, wishes to announce that he is still in the boxing game. Papke has agreed to meet any middleweight the Milwaukee promoters pick for him. The Kewanee boy says his injured hand is again in shape for a tough scrap.

* * *

The recent 20-round bout between Campi and Ledoux at the Pacific Athletic Club, of Vernon Cal., drew $4,900. Ledoux received $1,225, which was 25 per cent of the gross receipts. Campi, for winning got $1,470, having boxed for 30 per cent of the receipts.

* * *

Nick Pagoalos and Sam Fountas, local Greek featherweights, will clash in a private 10-round bout here Friday. Terry Nelson has been selected to referee the go. The winner will seek a match with Kid Young.

KRAMER AND CAVANAUGH WIN GREAT CYCLE RACE

NEWARK, N. J., July 7.—A victory for the team of Kramer and Cavanaugh in the three-cornered tandem match race and a dead heat between Frank Kramer, of New Jersey, and Alfred Grenda, of Australia, were features of the racing at the Velodrome here yesterday.

In the two-mile event Grenda had a lead of twenty yards on the last lap, but Kramer spurted and managed to cross the line with his rival. In the three-cornered match Kramer and Cavanaugh nosed out Joe Fogler, of Brooklyn, and Al Goulet, of Australia, and Jackie Clark and Grenda, both Australians, got third. The victory was in straight heats of one mile each.

CARPENTIER AND PALZER MAY CLASH IN PARIS GO

NEW YORK, July 7.—Tom O'Rourke is in receipt of a letter from Monsieur Vienne, the Parisian boxing promoter, offering him a match for Palzer with Carpentier some time this fall. Carpentier is all the rage in fight circles in France and would draw an immense gate with a white man of reputation who had not fought in Paris. O'Rourke thinks well of the proposition and will proceed to close the match with Monsieur Vienne.

Spending a section of the Fourth at the ringside while Carl Morris is attempting to fight is a great little pastime for one who has a lot of perfectly good time to throw away.

Samuel E. Debs is leading Edward P. Weston in their hike athwart the continent. Sam has more speed than Ed, but not a bit more sense.

Without cracking a smile, Fred Toney up and says he is glad to get a chance to work regularly. Fred will have his little joke.

By this time Mr. Toney is able to find his way from Chicago to Louisville and vice versa with his eyes shut.

ROUGH-HOUSE.

Lives of Phillies all remind us
We can play a rough-house game,
And, departing, leave behind us
Spike marks on another's frame.

It is said that the Cincinnati Reds once went through a whole season without losing a game. There is a feeling among baseball experts that this will not happen again for at least a couple of years.

In view of what happend to W. Heinrich Schmidt it is surprising that the English newspapers have not begun to chide McLoughlin on the cut of his trousers or the color of his hose.

The consensus of opinion is that Mr. Quigley is a good umpire—if there is such a thing as a good umpire.

SLIDING.

Toboggan-sliding days have come,
The saddest of the season,
When baseball teams go on the bum
For no apparent reason.

The Phils that led the bloomin' league
Are headed for the bottom.
Their pitchers suffer from fatigue,
And all the batters swat 'em.

Tom Jones is one of the saddest persons extant. Imagine a fight for the lightweight title and some one else there to count the gate receipts.

After being walloped, stepped on and otherwise abused, John McGraw draws a five-day suspension. Mr. Lynch shows almost intelligence enough to be accepted on a jury.

Bad Year for Georgia Players

Cobb--Rucker Both Out of Whack

BROOKLYN, N. Y., July 7.—This seems to be a hard year on celebrated Georgia ball players. Ty Cobb is in bad shape. And now Nap Rucker also has gone bad.

"Nap" may not pitch in his old form for some time to come. He will not pitch at all for the present if he takes the advice of his physician. The big Georgian has a bad arm, so bad in fact that for over two weeks his curve ball has been a myth.

The trouble with the arm is the indirect result of an accident he met with in the team's long stay at home early in the season. In a game against the St. Louis Cardinals "Nap" had the thumb of his pitching hand knocked out of gear.

Instead of waiting until the injured member had entirely healed, "Nap" got back into the game because he argued that he could pitch without using his thumb. He changed his style of delivery because of the damaged thumb, and it is believed, in doing so, he put too much of a strain on certain muscles in his shoulder. "Nap" says for two weeks he has not been able to pitch a curve ball, which accounts for the peculiar exhibitions that he has been giving of late.

THE big Georgian said yesterday that he does not know how he ever got through that extra-inning game with the Phillies. He says he was able to beat the Giants because the McGrawites were looking for him to pitch curve balls and "Nap" was not pitching them for the very good reason that he couldn't.

President Ebbets sent "Nap" to a specialist. The specialist gave it as his opinion that while the arm was not seriously injured, "Nap" would be unable to get his arm back in shape unless he gave it a good rest. The rest thing does not make a hit with "Nap." He said yesterday that he did not know whether to stay out or not.

* * *

THREE years ago Rucker had trouble with his arm and it was caused by fooling with different kinds of deliveries. At that time he had developed quite a spitter and was using it with great success. Then his arm started to bother him.

One day he mentioned it to Hank O'Day. According to "Nap," Hank proceeded to give him a fine little bawling out for using the spitball. The veteran umpire attributed all the trouble to "Nap" changing his style of delivery, by which he put a strain on muscles that "Nap" did not bring into play with his regular delivery.

Carl Thompson May Be Signed by Smith

Carl Thompson, former University of Georgia star, may be signed by Manager Billy Smith to take the place of one of his wavering hurlers—probably Paul Musser. It will depend on what terms can be agreed upon.

Thompson has had a bad season with Birmingham and was finally turned back by Molesworth on the New York Americans. They wanted to send him to the New England League, but he preferred to pitch in the South. If Smith can make a deal with him he will probably give him a trial. The local manager believes that hard luck and weak batting support beat Thompson in most of his games with the Barons and that with the local team he will be a winner.

CARDS SIGN ANOTHER PITCHER.

ST. LOUIS, MO., July 7.—Another hurler is coming to aid the Cardinals in the National League pennant race. He is Rice Williams, a member of the Great Falls club of the Union Association. The newcomer will not join Huggins' crew until September 14. The announced price for the pitcher was $2,500.

BEARISH ADVICES DEPRESS COTTON

In Absence of Speculation Market Shows No Definite Tendency. Sentiment Is Bearish.

NEW YORK, July 7.—Buying of August contracts was the only feature at the opening of the cotton market today. This position opened 13 points higher, but other prices ranged 2 to 4 points higher than last Thursday's closing quotations. Changes at Liverpool over the holidays were slight and weather conditions were very favorable.

A little pressure in new crop positions after the call due to private crop advices from the South, and prices worked off sharply. August suffered the greatest loss by declining from 12.18, opening quotations, to 12 cents. Other positions show recessions aggregating from 6 to 8 points from the opening range.

Trading during the forenoon was very small and sentiment was extremely bearish. It was reported that Liverpool was a fair seller of August, which, of course, had its effect. Later the market recovered a few points of the early loss, price movement being 1 to 3 points under the previous close.

During the afternoon session the volume of business was extremely light. Sentiment was against the market, but the crowd was afraid to push their commitments to any great extent, owing to the small stock on hand and price fluctuated within a moderate range.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net decline of 8 to 11 points from the final quotations of last Thursday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, July 7.—Weather conditions since Thursday were favorable, particularly the return of fair weather in the Western States, which had enough rain. The central and Atlantic States had further good showers, which were particularly needed in Arkansas. Indications are for generally fair, warm weather, except probably showers and cooler in Northwest Texas, Northwestern Oklahoma, East Tennessee and North Carolina.

Political news from Europe is bad and reflected in a decline in English Consols.

Our market opened about 7 points lower on new crops, but ruled very steady at the decline without selling pressure.

New York says the trade is bearish, but fears the situation in the old crop months, owing to very small stock, which is expected to be down to 15,000 bales by the end of the month.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Logan & Bryan: We feel that lower range of values will ensue, although we would not follow the short side too closely.

A. Norden & Co.: We continue to feel that a better policy for the present will be to buy on such breaks as we had today.

Morris H. Rothschild & Co.: We continue to advise purchases of cotton around present levels.

Habersham King, in his latest report, says about 15 per cent of the belt rain is needed to prevent deterioration. As to the remaining 85 per cent, he considers conditions as near perfect as they well can be, particularly in the two Carolinas and Texas. Since date of this report the dry districts had general rain, relieving danger.

* * *

Trading in the market to-day was in a small volume. Sentiment was very bearish. There was practically no feature.

* * *

Gwathmey and Russell were good buyers of August at the outset to-day. Liverpool, however, sold the option.

Dallas wires: "Texas clear and warm. Oklahoma generally partly cloudy and clear."

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, July 7.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map favorable; partly cloudy in the northern border of the belt, half rest of the belt rains in Arkansas, central Mississippi, Gulf districts and along the Atlantic Coast. Indications are for generally fair, except in Northwest Texas, Oklahoma and North Carolina, which may get some showers.

* * *

Rainfall: Fort Smith, Ark., .58; Little Rock, .12; Vicksburg, .01; New Orleans, .78; Mobile, .18; Charleston, .16; Savannah, .08; Jacksonville, .30; Jackson, Miss., 1.64.

* * *

Vicksburg, Greenwood, Shreveport, Monroe, clear and hot.

* * *

Washington forecast for week: Generally fair during week; may be a few scattered thundershowers; seasonable temperatures.

* * *

The Memphis Commercial-Appeal summary shows that last week probably was the most favorable of the season on the cotton crop. At least the crop made better progress than during any other similar period this year. Under the stimulus of good rains plenty of sunshine and warm days and nights the plant made splendid growth, and, while still a bit late, made up much lost time during the week. The plant is strong and stock is beginning to branch out and is blooming and fruiting heavily.

Rains fell in sections all over the belt during the week. They were the heaviest and more nearly general in Texas and Oklahoma, where practically the entire area of both States received good rains. In the central valley the drouth was relieved, except in scattered localities that comprise a very small total area. In the east no great need of moisture had been felt, but good rains fell at the end of the week.

The high state of cultivation that has characterized the crop from the start was in no way abated during the week. Fields are universally clean and stilth of soil probably is more nearly perfect than ever before known. The feature of the crop places the plant in the best shape to withstand another drouth or rain with the least possible damage.

There is still complaint of boll weevil in infested districts. They are numerous in sections of Mississippi and hardly worth mentioning to date is hardly worth mentioning. Farmers are continuing a relentless war against the pest, and in some sections they seem to have won their fight.

Mill Takings for Week 226,000 Bales

According to Secretary Hester, the visible supply of American cotton for the week ending Friday, July 4, shows a decrease of 194,585 bales, as compared with a decrease of 165,588 bales for the corresponding week last year, against a decrease of 125,935 bales for the same week the year before.

Other kinds decreased 54,000 bales, against a decrease of 73,000 bales for the same week in 1912, compared with a decrease of 40,000 bales for the corresponding week in 1911.

The total visible supply of American during the week decreased 248,585 bales, compared with a decrease of 238,388 bales during the same week last year and a decrease of 165,935 bales for the same week the year before.

STOCKS WEAK ON BAD CABLE NEWS

Pittsburg Bank Failure Also Was Depressing Factor — Street Awaits U. S. Report.

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, July 7.—Following the three-day holiday the stock market opened weak to-day and prices ranged from fractions over a point lower.

Chesapeake and Ohio was sold in considerable quantity, going to 53⅛ for a loss of 1⅛. Union Pacific sold off ¾.

Among the other declines were Amalgamated Copper ⅜, American Can ⅜, American Smelting ⅛, Atchison ⅜, United States Steel common ⅛, Southern Pacific ⅜, New York Central ½, Reading ½, Northern Pacific ⅛, Anaconda ⅛ and Canadian Pacific ⅝. Baltimore and Ohio rose ½ and St. Paul gained ⅝.

After half an hour some issues rallied and a firmer tone was evident.

The curb was steady.

Americans in London were firm and Canadian Pacific there was steady.

The situation in the Balkans is exercising a depressive influence over the European money market and to-day $3,000,000 gold was engaged in New York for London.

There was little to the trading during the forenoon. Union Pacific was freely supplied, declining to 145½; Canadian Pacific moved up to 214⅝; Amalgamated Copper and Pennsylvania Railroad were off ⅜. Steel remained unchanged. There was fractional recessions in Reading, Southern Pacific, Atchison and New York Central. The tone was dull before noon.

Call money loaning at 2 per cent.

The market was depressed by the Pittsburg bank failures and losses were sustained in the last hour. Compared with the noon range of prices, the following declines were sffuered:

Amalgamated Copper, ⅛; American Can, ⅝; Canadian Pacific, ⅛; St. Paul, ⅛; Reading, ⅜; Union Pacific, 1, and Steel, ⅛. In the last few minutes the list slightly strengthened.

The market closed dull. Governments unchanged; other bonds steady.

STOCK GOSSIPS

The New York Financial Bureau says: "Would buy standard and attractive issues conservatively on fair opportunities. Information channels favor a trading position."

* * *

Dow Jones says: "Result of strike vote among conductors and trainmen of Eastern railroads to be announced to-morrow. Democratic caucus of tariff to-day. American stocks in London easy, unchanged to ⅛ off. Twelve industrials decline .01. Twenty active rails advanced .01."

* * *

Potter, of N. L. Carpenter & Co., says: "The market may show a reactionary tendency to-day on account of the European situation. The prospects of a big railroad strike and a poor bank statement. However, do not expect any decline to carry prices very far from the level and would accumulate stocks carefully on weak spots. The Government crop report on grain due this week will give condition of corn, which is most important, and from private estimates it should be very satisfactory."

* * *

The weakness of the market is due to the foreign situation, but the Government crop report, which will be published this week, should be very favorable. Private estimates show the corn crop will be over 3,000,000,000 bushels. Should the Government figures show these estimates to be correct, it should help prices and cause a moderate rally.—Potter.

MINING STOCKS.

BOSTON, July 7.—Opening: Alaska, 17⅝; Smelting, 49.

Grain Notes

King, of Toledo, says in his Missouri crop report: "Wheat yield 16 bushels, against 12.6 last year when crop was 22,000,000; 88 per cent of crop is harvested, against 51 per cent last year; quality 96. On Government acreage, yield suggests 38,000,000 bushels. Oats, condition 56 per cent, against 68 per cent in June and 94 per cent last year, when the crop was 30,000,000 bushels. Crop indicated 20,000,000 bushels."

* * *

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. says: "There has been some rain in Northwest with generally favorable temperatures. Primary receipts to-day will doubtless show a large total as a result of accumulations over the holidays and the visible will doubtless again show a decrease. We are inclined to look for a steady wheat market to-day without important price changes.

"Corn—The belt has received very little rainfall since Thursday, and some extremely high temperatures have prevailed in Kansas, but lower temperatures report this morning with some rains in Nebraska and Missouri.

"Oats—Buyers seem to come in on all fair recessions, basing purchases on general belief of a moderate yield.

"Provisions—Market may have some setbacks, but we do not look for any decline of moment."

* * *

Private messages from Winnipeg, Duluth, Glenwood, Thief River Falls, Hankinson, Harvey, Portal and Endlin indicate clear weather with temperatures around 60 degrees.

Weather since Thursday: North Dakota and Minnesota had excellent rains; Illinois scattered rains, mostly over good parts of States; South Dakota, some rains, but light. Canadian Northwest had fair rain.

* * *

B. W. Snow's crop report for July 1: "Condition of corn 85.9, against 83.8 per cent last year. Acreage 108,000,000, or 1 per cent increase. Crop indicated on basis July par for condition, 2,964,000,000 bushels, against a similar indication of 2,811,000,000 last year.

"If present condition should be maintained until harvest it would forecast a crop of 3,147,000,000 bushels, against 3,125,000,000 last year. Winter wheat condition 83, a decline of 4 points since the June 1 report, and indicates a crop of about 487,000,000 bushels on an estimate of acreage and about 480,000,000 on the Government estimate. Loss mainly in Kansas. Spring wheat condition drops from 93 to 77.8, mainly as a result of drouth in South Dakota. On the basis of July par of condition this indicates crop of 275,000,000 bushels, against an indicated crop similarly figured a year ago of 271,000,000 bushels.

"If present condition maintained until harvest it would forecast a crop of 251,000,000 bushels, against 339,000,000 yield last year. This makes a July indication total crop, now 710,000,000 bushels, against 629,000,000 last July and if present conditions are maintained until harvest, an indication for 731,000,000 bushels, against a final estimate last year of 730,000,000 bushels.

"Condition of oats 75.8 against 87 per cent last month. On the basis of July par for condition this indicates (on Snow's acreage) a crop of 983,000,000 bushels, or on Government acreage, 1,023,000 bushels.

"Last year the July 1 Government indication was 1,229,000,000 estimated, was raised to 1,418,000,000 bushels."

ATLANTA LIVE STOCK MARKET.

By W. H. White, Jr., of the White Provision Company.

Cattle receipts increasing with the larger supply of grass stock. Good kinds scarce and reasonably strong. While the bulk coming is of only medium quality and is only ordinary flesh, which is considered generally as unprofitable killers, and while the prices have ranged lower, the quality is considerably below that of the beef coming three weeks ago. The demand has been light for the past several days, which together with the plain class of cattle has depressed the market and values are probably a full quarter lower on medium and a half lower on common grades than a week ago.

Tennessee sheep and lambs are plentiful and the extreme prices of two weeks ago have been lowered by about 1 cent per pound.

Hog supply about equal to the demand. The yards are kept cleaned up from day to day. Several loads of extra choice packers were among the week's receipts and brought top prices. Market is steady.

Good to choice steers, 1,000 to 1,200, $5.50@6.50; good steers, 800 to 1,00, $5.25@6.00; medium to good steers, 700 to 850, $5.00@5.50.

Good to choice beef cows, 800 to 900, $4.50@5.50; medium to good cows, 700 to 800, $4.25@5.00.

Good to choice heifers, 750 to 850, $4.75@5.25; medium to good heifers, 650 to 750, $4.00@4.50.

Medium to common steers, if fat, 800 to 900, $4.00@5.00; medium to common cows, if fat, 700 to 800, $3.75@4.25; mixed common, 600 to 800, $3.25@3.75; good butcher bulls, $3.50@4.00.

Prime hogs, 190 to 200, $8.50@8.80; good butcher hogs, 140 to 160, $8.40@8.50; good butcher pigs, 100 to 140, $8.25@8.50; light pigs, 80 to 100, $7.75@8.00.

Above quotations apply to corn-fed hogs; mash and peanut fattened, 1 to 1½ cents.

CLEARINGS SOMEWHAT OFF.

Atlanta clearings for June were $44,695,153, and for the first six months of 1913 they were $335,143,406, both figures being but slightly below last year's levels.

Slow collections and complete absence of speculation are given as causes by Bradstreet's, which further remarks that in view of the halt of speculation, the showing is remarkably good.

MILLER & COTTER COTTON LETTER.

MEMPHIS, July 7.—Crop news is favorable and weather over holiday was ideal, rains falling East of the river and none in Texas and Oklahoma, but in absence of speculation markets show no definite tendency. Sentiment is bearish, but talent is afraid to sell it with summer months in hands of manipulators. Pending legislation is also killing off business.

HOGS HIGHER; RECEIPTS LIGHT.

CHICAGO, July 7.—Because of the holiday live stock loading in the country for Monday's market was light and prices advanced. Cattle and hogs gained 10 to 15 cents, while live mutttons were marked up 15 to 25 cents. Hogs sold up to 9.20, with the bulk at 9.15. There were 91,000 at eleven markets, against 102,000 last week. Cattle sold largely at 8.00 to 8.50 and lambs crossed the 8-cent line.

How to Distinguish Good Reds From Poor Ones When Buying

Article Is Written for Benefit of the New Breeder of Reds.

What I have to say is for the benefit of the new breeder of Reds, or those who are contemplating starting with Reds, enabling them to tell a good red from a poor one and help them decide for themselves the value of Rhode Island Reds you buy. There are plenty of breeders of Reds that do not know what a really good Red should be, and these breeders are doing the breed harm on all sides by telling what they think they know, and selling beginners fowls that come nearer the stand of Buff Rock or Buff Wyandottes than Rhode Island Reds. In a general way we will discuss Rhode Island Reds and try to arrive at some definite conclusion as to what one should be in shape and color. First, the head. Reds should have a pretty fair sized comb with five points, red ear lobes, red eyes, and a horn colored beak, all in proportion. Common defects are too many points to comb, lopped comb and eyes not red. Now, the feet and legs should be yellow with a red pigment down the sides and free from feathers. The common defects are slaty legs in females and feathers on the legs and feet of the males. Now, for the body tail, upright carriage with wings pointing downward instead of a horizontal position, short keel bone and narrow backs. Pay especial attention to shape, as that is the most important part and characteristic that differs from all the other breeds. This is the utility part. It makes the good layers and the good fryers, too. The color of a Rhode Island Red should be RED, with the exception of its tail, which should be black, and with black markings in the wings. The females have ticking in the hackle, and the males should be free from it. This is the main thing, they should be RED red on top and red to the skin, and a Rhode Island Red is not a Red unless he is red. The common defects of color are washed out buff females, or females very dark in outer color and smutty under color. I had rather have a buff female with good clean under color than a dark hen with smutty color. This is choosing the lesser evil. A good male is the same color from head to tail with a red or salmon under color and a black tail. It is hard to get them with the same shade of red all over, and they are most likely to have light colored hackle and dark wing bows. An otherwise fine bird often has white or smut in under color of hackle, or near the root of his tail. You will often find light patches in under color over the hips and dark places on the back. These are minor points and faults of birds that are otherwise often the finest of specimens. Now that we must not breed from the bird that has any of these faults mentioned, that we must take all these things into consideration in sizing them up and breed from the best you have, and gradually you will get them nearer and nearer the ideal Rhode Island Red. Do not stress color at the expense of shape, size and vigor. As the three last mentioned are the mainstays of this breed, as well as all the others. You may have a beautiful cockerel, but he may lack the size and vigor to make a good breeder, and if you use him you will be a sadder and wiser man. Rhode Island Reds given a free range are likely to have the best plumage at the fall fair.

Medium-Sized Acreage Tracts

ALL of us know the profit that is usually made from acreage. It is almost a conceded fact that if a person owns good acreage, he has a sure profit in it sooner or later. When we think of acreage propositions, we think of lots of land, and naturally lots of money, because the usual acreage transaction involves a great deal of money. The demand for good, close-in acreage for subdivision purposes is increasing every day. A trip to the outskirts of the city in any direction you choose to take will convince you of this fact. We are going to offer a tract of about 100 acres, between Decatur and East Lake, which we have cut up into five, ten and fifteen acre tracts. The price and terms on these tracts make it possible for almost anybody to handle them.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Big Profits Made In Acreage Deal

Mrs. Harper Buys English Property. To Name Realty Head—New York Times on Candler Investments.

Captain James W. English has given a warranty deed to Mrs. Lelah O. Harper on 80 acres of land in land lot 187, the consideration being $8,247, or at the rate of $105 an acre, and Saturday Mrs. Harper sold 21 acres to Harper Brothers for $10,500, or at the rate of $500 an acre. The enhancement covered a period of a little more than seven years, the deal between Captain English and Mrs. Harper having taken place February 28, 1906.

This property is between Bryant's District and Oakland City. The part sold by Captain English was the north half of the land lot, excepting 9.15 acres, being lots 1 to 9 and 12 to 16, inclusive, in block 4. Mrs. Harper sold to Harper Brothers the southeast corner of Harper Street and DeFoor Avenue.

To Name Realty Head.

Members of the Atlanta Real Estate Board will hold their regular monthly dinner the night of July 18 at the Cafe Durand, at which time a new head for the board will be elected, to succeed Charles P. Glover. Some propositions will be heard to change the by-laws. One of these would make it possible for the president to succeed himself.

There has been much speculation over the probable president. Among the names suggested are Harris G. White, now vice president of the board; W. A. Foster, of Foster & Robson; S. B. Turman, of Turman, Black & Calhoun, and Carlos Lynes, of Thomson & Lynes.

The nominating committee will name a man and he will be voted in by the members. Charles P. Glover, ex-officio; M. F. Ramsey, J. H. Ewing, M. C. Kiser and H. W. Dews are on this committee.

Sells Three Corners.

Ex-Governor Joseph M. Brown has been in a unique real estate deal, involving the transfer of three corners out of four in a 50-foot radius. Ex-Governor Brown sold for the estate of the late Julius L. Brown the northeast, southeast and southwest corners of Crew and Little Streets to Victor R. Smith for $5,500. Mr. Smith has also bought a bond-for-title interest in a parcel on Currier Street west of Courtland from Thomas J. Lynch for $5,000 cash, notes and the assumption of certain incumbrances.

Sales in Piedmont Heights.

W. H. Allen, of the Edwin P. Ansley Real Estate Agency, has sold for himself to C. C. Braswell two residence lots in Piedmont Heights for a total of $5,200. The buy was for investment.

Pace's Ferry Road Transfer.

An interesting warranty deed has gone to record in the transfer of a 280 by 600 foot lot on Pace's Ferry Road, 1,118 feet west of Tuxedo Drive, from Mrs. Allison B. Morrison to W. B. Disbro for $14,000, or at the rate of $50 a front foot.

Three Homes and 25 Lots Sold.

J. W. Dobbins & Co. have sold three houses and 25 lots in the East Lake Land and Improvement Company's subdivision at East Lake. Mr. Dobbins has also sold three bungalows in various sections for a total of $10,250.

Mr. McCrory's Salesmanship.

I. C. McCrory, the well-known College Park citizen, is receiving the congratulations of friends on a rather remarkable achievement in real estate salesmanship. At the conclusion of the Odd Fellows' Fourth of July barbecue at College Park Mr. McCrory put up 23 residence lots and sold them in short order. No notice of the contemplated sale had been given. The lots adjoined the place where the barbecue was held.

Interest in New Subdivision.

A good deal of interest has been caused by the announcement that the Atlanta Development Company will open up July 15 Highland View, a new subdivision of forty 50 by 250 foot lots west of Druid Hills and north of Ponce DeLeon Avenue. The prices will be $1,400 to $1,700 per lot. Robert H. Jones will handle the property for the development concern, but plats will also be placed with various realty agencies.

Many Plans for Club.

Since the publication of tentative plans for a new University Club home, additional details have been given out. The club is also figuring with William Worth Martin on a site on the north side of East Baker Street back of the old Goldsmith property on Peachtree Street; with the owners of the Atlanta School of Medicine building at the northeast corner of Bartow and Luckie Streets; with the proprietors of the Stafford apartments on Carnegie Way; with Walter G. Cooper on his property at the northeast corner of Luckie and Spring Streets, to erect a bachelors' apartment and club combined, and with the owners of the Roy property on the north side of East Ellis Street back of the Robert F. Maddox place on Peachtree.

The University Club is looking for a place with 20 bedrooms and a 40 by 50 foot assembly hall for meetings. The executive council thinks it may find a place of this kind already built. Otherwise, it may be necessary to build or remodel. If the medical college site should be procured the building would be thoroughly overhauled.

Comment on Candler Move.

Asa G. Candler has chosen wisely in his New York and Atlanta investments, thinks a writer in The New York Times. Mr. Candler is compared with Frank W. Woolworth, the capitalist, as follows:

"The prejudice which financial institutions and corporations have held against real estate investments for many years is dying out. More and more we find conservative banking institutions handling real estate securities. They are beginning to realize the soundness of an investment which has from time immemorial been the bedrock foundation of savings bank strength. We find individuals of wealth like Frank W. Woolworth and Asa G. Candler putting into improved real estate profits earned in merchandise.

"The latter illustrates the trend of the time by building in both Atlanta and New York. We find corporations like the United Cigar Stores buying the property, where it can, on which their stores stand. We see the New York Central Railroad building not only a railroad terminal but income-producing office buildings.

"Real estate is coming into its own because wealthy and conservative men and corporations are investing in it, and they are investing only where facts and figures prove that a profit is to be paid on the money expended. Real estate is not bought and sold, dwelling and office buildings are not erected in the haphazard way that obtained not so many years since.

"That very definition of real estate has changed. We used to think of it as a lot, bare ground. The Woolworth Building is real estate; so is the Metropolitan Tower; so is the Verona apartment house. Before the Woolworth Building was erected its owner knew how many persons passed its portals in the course of a day.

"He knew, so far as could be known, the number of vacancies in the downtown office buildings. He studied downtown land values and rental values, he studied the trend of occupancy in the various trades and professions, he studied the service given tenants by other office buildings."

What Race Track Gambling Did for One Man

It Has Done the Same and Worse for Many Another. No ROMANCE in This

(Copyright, 1913.)

A reader asks us to print a brief account of one man's gambling experience, published in a newspaper at El Paso, Texas.

He writes: "The story is one of the most direct appeals on the subject I have ever read, and if presented with the forcible coloring you are prepared to give it, it will undoubtedly 'go home' to those who are just starting to feel what the man it tells about must have felt when he still had the opportunity of honorably quitting the game."

We print the story exactly as the El Paso newspaper printed it—no "coloring" is needed.

We say once more to the young men tempted by gambling, and to fathers and mothers careless about their sons' associations:

GAMBLING IS THE WORST, MOST DANGEROUS VICE IN CIVILIZATION.

It is worse than drink, for it destroys honor, as well as health.

Gambling long maintained will make any man a thief or a worse criminal.

There is NO honorable professional gambler, as there is no honorable professional burglar.

Gambling leads to sorrow, poverty, disgrace and crime.

Here is the plain story of one gambler, published in the Texas newspaper:

OLD STORY OF RUIN IN THE RACING GAME.

The Man Who Followed It, Precariously and Otherwise, for Years, and His Sad Ending.

It is the old story of ruin from the racing game. He drifted to El Paso when the Juarez track was opened for the first time. Then he claimed to be representing a string of Eastern papers as racing correspondent. But this was only for the purpose of obtaining a badge and admission to the press box. That first season was a hard one for the followers of the game, and he finally started issuing racing results in the form of posters to be hung in saloons and restaurants and cigar stores at the close of the day's racing. This made him a living and left him a little margin to play on the ponies, and that was all life held for him. In summer, when the racing plant in Juarez was closed, he would drift from place to place, where short meets were held, and he succeeded in getting a living in some manner unknown to his friends.

One rainy Sunday morning, in a little second-class restaurant, he told the story of his downfall. It is the cut-and-dried story of the effect of racing on young men. But it was true as he told it. Once he had been the confidential man and assistant manager of a big book binding and stationery house in Buffalo. He was earning a good salary with the promise of a place in the firm soon. Then the company decided to open a branch plant in Chicago to supply the bank and wholesale trade. The young man was selected as the branch manager because of his ability. He went to Chicago and was doing a big business for the firm and had received a half dozen raises since the branch was opened.

One Saturday afternoon in summer he spent his half holiday at the track where the horses were running. He laid a bet for fun. He won and wagered another. This likewise doubled his money, and he plunged. The germ had entered his blood, and he started a consistent policy of race track gambling.

The inevitable happened and he lost his position. Naturally, he turned to the easy money game which had cost him his job. He became a bookmaker, a sheet writer and a gambler. He followed the game to Florida when it was outlawed in Illinois. From there he went from place to place, finally landing in El Paso. By that time he was middle-aged and there were streaks of gray in his hair. When the races closed last spring he was neither physically nor financially able to follow the crowd to Latonia.

He remained here and lived the best he could. His brooding resulted in his making $1,000,000 mind bets on favorites in races that had been run. Wednesday night he was detained by the police on suspicion of being insane. His brooding over his downfall had been too much for his mind, and it had failed him. He is now in the county jail, where he will be held until he is examined by an insanity board.

An Appeal for a Famous American Name

Julian Hawthorne a few days ago observed his sixty-seventh birthday in the Federal penitentiary here in Atlanta. This month he will be entitled to a parole, and thousands of admirers of his distinguished father and friends of the son, who think him more sinned against than sinning, will shortly lay their views and their appeal before President Wilson.

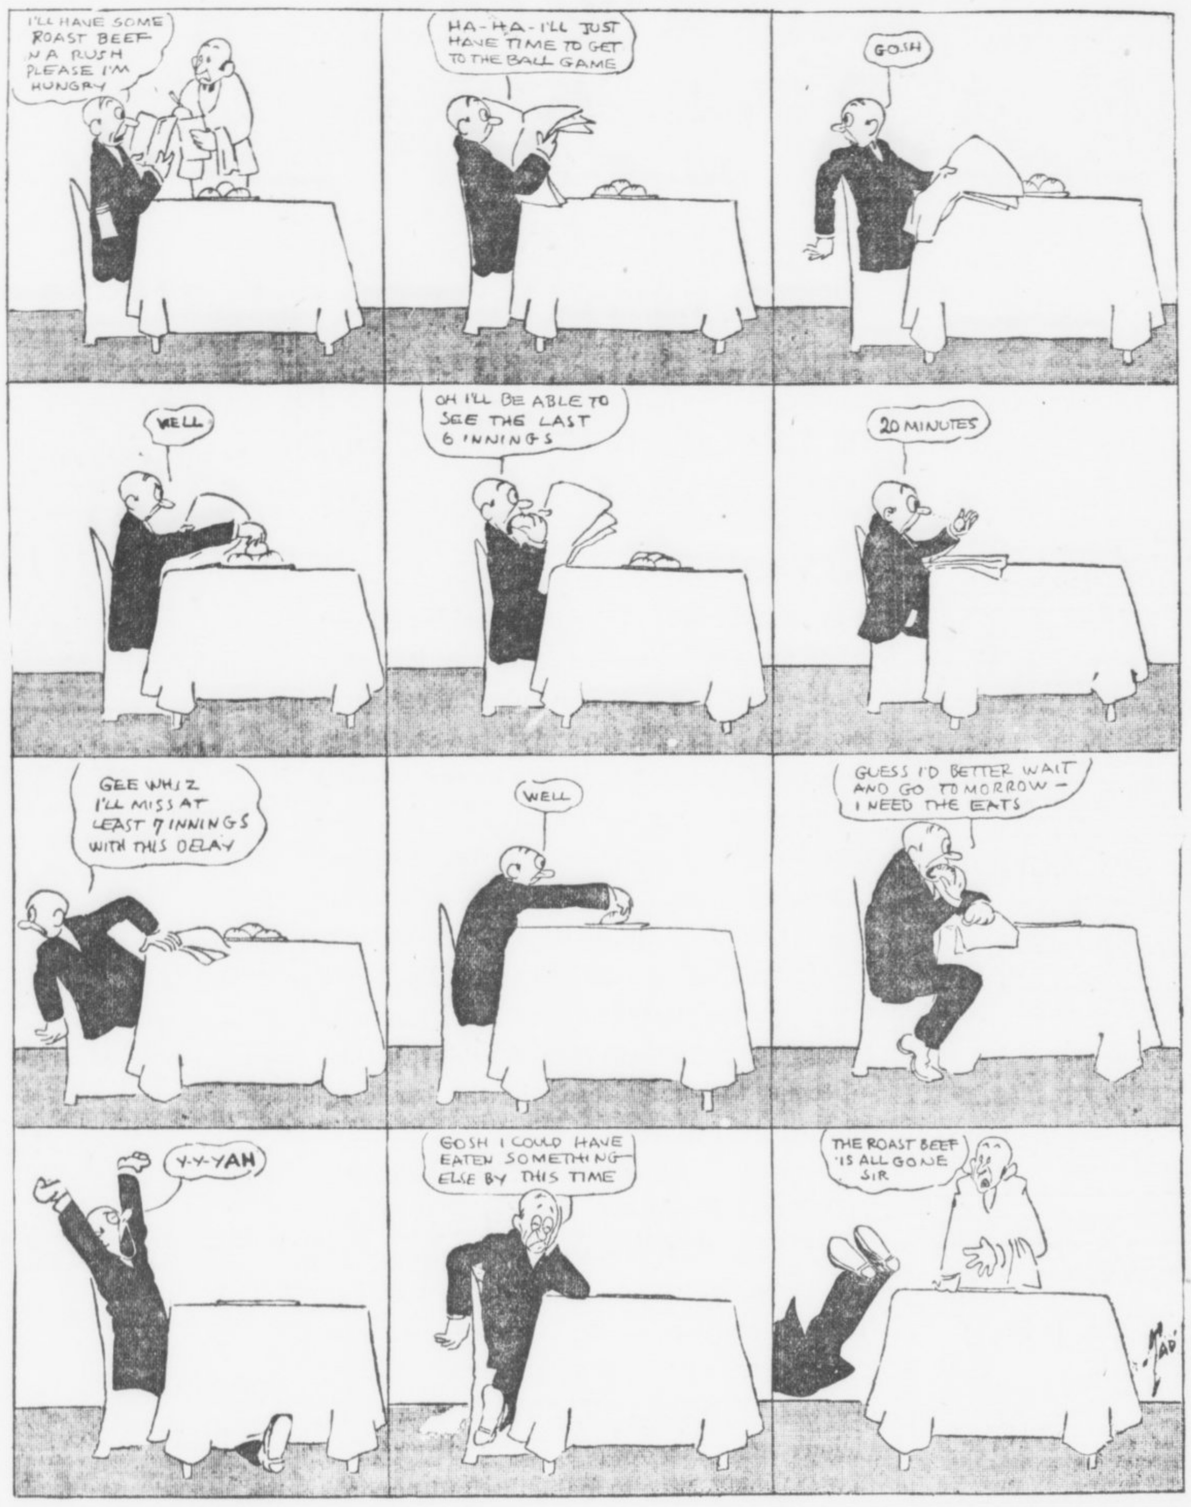
The President will be told that Julian Hawthorne was misled by evil associates in the lending of his name to get-rich-quick swindlers, from which he profited little or nothing; and that he was as much the dupe of his crooked associates as those victims who purchased stocks in the enterprises which his name was used to exploit.

This son of a brilliant American now finds himself in his old age humiliated before the eyes of the nation and in the eyes of the literary men of the world—through his own weakness and ignorance of the harsher ways of the world.

If a chief conspirator, like C. W. Morse, can be pardoned, why not a dupe, after he has been as bitterly punished as has Julian Hawthorne?

This newspaper gladly joins all admirers of Nathaniel Hawthorne in their efforts for his son and in their appeal to the President to relegate, as soon as possible, this record sinister on a famous name to the generous domain of the forgotten.

Did It Ever Occur to You?



Ella Wheeler Wilcox Writes on Motherhood

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

(Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner.)

GIRLS of seventeen are not, as a rule, given to serious thought.

Even marriage at sixteen seldom awakens the real woman in a year.

But there are rare exceptions.

Such an exception has been found in a young wife of seventeen, who is suddenly aware that she is to become a mother in four months' time.

Now she is filled with awe, and with anxiety! She says: "I have always had an ideal of exerting a good influence over an unborn child; and now I am distressed to think that all these months have passed without any conscious effort on my part. I have played ball, swam and indulged in other athletics according to my regular custom. And in leisure moments I have read Milton and Shakespeare and Burns.

"I am splendidly well, but I am most anxious lest I have done things I ought not to do, and left undone other things at this critical time.

Moderation in All Things.

"What can I do for the next few months to benefit my unborn child?"

The very best thing this young mother expectant can do is to exercise with moderation, rest when she feels like it, eat and drink with moderation, and wisdom, and be happy and trust God.

Motherhood is the most natural thing in the world for women who are normal and in good health.

It often produces a normal, healthful condition for those who are not well.

Nature never intended any woman to utterly change her mode of life when expecting a child, if her mode of life had been a reasonable and sensible one previously.

Outdoor life and athletics are both reasonable and sensible, and more harm would have resulted to both mother and child by giving them up suddenly, and taking too great concern about a perfectly natural condition, than by continuing to indulge in these pastimes as long as this young woman did.

No doubt the coming child will be strong in body, with excellent lung power.

And its coming into this plane of existence will not be attended with any abnormal difficulties.

Outdoor Life and Exercise.

We must remember that the Indian woman rides her horse, and performs all sorts of laborious tasks up to the very hour of her delivery.

The wife of an army officer told the writer of frequently seeing such women drop out of line for a few hours and return to the tribe later with the new-born child wrapped in a blanket.

All women who live an outdoor life, and who exercise in the open air, have less complications in maternity than those reared under hothouse conditons.

This young mother of seventeen, who takes such a serious view of her responsibility, is certain to bring a strong, beautiful child into the world, and equally sure of guiding it into a splendid maturity.

The Difficult Hours.

She need only fill her mind with love thoughts, and with faith in God and trust in the Unseen Powers which govern this earth, to have all go well with her.

In God's great universe, there are Guardian Angels provided for every mortal, and in such degree as we love and reverence these angels, and as we live worthy of them, do they guide and help us in our difficult hours.

If we refuse to believe in them, or continually think and talk and act in a way to pain them, we alienate them and deprive them of their power to help us.

About the expectnat mother are bands of Shining Ones, and if she will rest happy in the thought of their protection, and regard them as messengers and emissaries from God Himself, great strength and peace and happiness will come to her.

And great blessings upon her child.

For of such are the Kingdom of Heaven.

PERFUMED POWDER

By WEX JONES.

THE newest skirt for woman—it's a risky thing to knock it.
For it's cutely ditted up with a cunning pistol pocket.

Oh, should you argue with the fair,
Powder smoke will fill the air;
Bullets whizzy
Will make you dizzy;
You had better bow and scoot
Before the girl begins to shoot,
Because—this here is cowboy lore—
Words are nix with a forty-four.

Still, speaking of this latest fad, this cunning pistol pocket,
Here, I think, are several things extremely prone to block it;

A handkerchief
And a powder puff;
Some trading stamps
And a manicure buff;
Smelling salts

Rev. John E. White Writes on Sex in Religion

Woman Is the Mainstay of the Church and Expresses the Innermost Soul of Religion More Powerfully Than Man; Yet, He Says, She Has Had to Fight Against the Masculine Protest for Every Inch of Recognition in the Affairs of the Church.

WRITTEN FOR THE GEORGIAN

By REV. DR. JOHN E. WHITE

Pastor Second Baptist Church

"MADAM I may not call you, and mistress I loath to call you. I know not what to call you, but I thank you for your good cheer."

These are the words of Queen Elizabeth greeting the wife of Archbishop Parker. They indicate in a kindly temper the ecclesiastical ban on womanhood in the eighteenth century, which made even the wife of an archbishop a nonentity.

Put over against this the words of three great theologians—Tertullian, Erasmus, Rabelais—"Woman, thou art the gate of hell"—"An absurd and ridiculous animal"—"The greater part of them have hardly principles and depend for their morals on those they love."

This is the exhibit of the centuries on the subject of Sex in Religion up to the nineteenth. What we have of it in the twentieth century is equally banal, and much of it lingers in the modern religious world.

The Bar Sinister in Church.

It is an answer seeming fair, and pious to the point, when the limitations of female opportunity are protested, to say that in the church and in religion women have nothing to complain of; that they are free to exercise themselves in the work of the Lord.

If this were true, 'twere very true and very good. But the record of fact is discouraging.

From the beginning women have occupied no position of authority in the church. "Her voice has never been heard at a council, nor has her pen ever formulated a decree. Looking at religion in history, one would suppose at first sight that it was almost entirely a masculine affair.

Man has formulated its metaphysics, erected its theologies, founded and governed its institutions. He is its pope, priest and prophet; its legislator, preacher and pastor." From the Judean Decalogue, which includes the wife—"thy neighbor's wife"—in the list of man's chattels, down to the recent records of the Southern Baptist Convention and the Methodist Conference, the sex "bar-sinister" has persisted.

The fact readily acknowledged that women are the mainstay of religion has been strangely ineffective in overcoming the masculine prejudice against her religious equality.

Religion's Better Half.

The fixed prohibition, "thus far shalt thou come, but no further," has, however, not prevented women from exercising a powerful influence upon religious progress. The woman nature which expresses the innermost soul of religion more intimately than the man's, has projected itself tremendously, notwithstanding the ecclesiastical limitations set upon it.

Indirectly she has sweetened the sour theologians and softened the severe theologies. Through Monica we have Augustine, through Macrina we have Basil and Gregory, "who led them both to the faith and stirred them to their best work."

This list is a long one—through Jacqueline, Paschal, through Paula, Jerome, through Susanna Wesley, the Methodist Church, etc. But these consoling examples only make the wonder deeper that Christianity should have esteemed its most reliable exponent unworthy of absolute equality.

It scarcely meets the case to prove by illustrious examples that women are indispensable factors in religion. So have been the martyrs and the persecuted of all ages through what difficulties we know.

For the past century the woman movement in religion has been breaking through the barriers. In the Protestant communions the battle has gone on steadily and successfully, and so quietly as scarcely to be a battle. Yet in every one of the great denominations the right of woman to recognition as an equal co-laborer with man in the Kingdom of God has been challenged and opposed at every step. Mrs. Doremus for thirty years kept up the fight before the women were permitted to organize the first Woman's Missionary Society.

Among Southern Baptists 25 years ago a similar proposition was silently protested by the majority and outspokenly resisted by thousands. Among Southern Methodists a petition has been pending for years to give the women not equal, but more generous representation in the direction of the missionary funds contributed by themselves.

Fighting for Her Soul.

Speaking by the card, I have made efforts in country churches to organize women's societies, for doing the sort of work every Christian is commanded to do, only to discover insuperable prejudices in the minds of the brethren.

At the bottom of this discreditable history of female repression in religion lies the jealousy of the masculine prerogative. The principle of pernicious proxy, the right of the husband to discharge religious obligations for the wife is persistent to this hour in the practice of the churches.

It amounts in effect to a layman's priest craft, in which the man assumes to stand between the woman's soul and the free and full discharge of its responsibility in practical duty.

Now the clouds are breaking away and man is beginning to relent. It will be a good day for religion when the competency of every woman under God for all the freedom an individual soul is decreed for, without reference to sex, is heartily and universally proclaimed and enforced.

Letters From The Georgian's Readers

THE SYRIANS.

Editor The Georgian:

The recent case of naturalization in which Judge Henry A. M. Smith, of South Carolina, was interested, induces me to write the following: Judge Smith contends that Syrians are not entitled to citizenship in the United States. He has the right to give or refuse naturalization to the Syrian of his State, but the reasons given by him are not based on facts, and history does not support his position.

When we consider the part the Syrians have played in the history and development of the world, we readily see they are in no way connected with or related to the Sudanese. Three of the greatest monarchies of the ancient world—Chaldea, Assayria and Babylonia—were evolved and developed by the Syrian nation.

The inhabitants of Kurdistan, who are regarded as the descendants of the Syrians, not only speak a Semitic language, but believe themselves to be the same race with the Arabs and the same traditions are held of Syrians, who in their brief historical fragments recognize as their kinsmen the later Babylonians, Phoenicians and the Joktonian Arabs.

The Semitic race—that is the name of this division—was derived from Noah's son Shem, and this term Semitic has been adopted by scholars as probably de-

who, branching from beyond Syria, carried their tribe into Northern Arabia, across the Red Sea and Upper Egypt into the African Desert, northward into Armenia, westward into Canaan and far out through the Mediterranean, touched the coast of Africa, and reaching even to Europe, Britain and spreading out to America. There has never been any mixing between the Syrians and the Sudanese. A great mountain range has ever separated the two races of people.

"THE HALF-MILLION" CITY.

Editor The Georgian:

I desire to subscribe to the spirit and purpose and to be enrolled as a member of the "Half-Million Club."

Great civic benefit can be accomplished by an emblem which will exemplify the spirit of Atlanta, the "Half-Million City," as advocated by The Georgian. You are to be congratulated in voicing the virile enthusiasm of the people.

Where else can you find a community that will subscribe in a single day something over $75,000 to entertain the Shriners' national convention, and almost a like amount that the city may enjoy, for one week, the most celebrated singers of the world? Atlanta's splendid banks, its lofty buildings, well-appointed hotels, excellent railroad facilities and geographical location make possible the ideal—the "Half-Million City"—in 1920.

VICE RING IN ATLANTA, GIRL TELLS CHIEF

ATTEMPTS SUICIDE ON EVE OF DIVORCE HEARING

GIRL TAKES 30 POISON TABLETS

Phone Operator, Despondent Over New Love Affair, Fails in Effort to Die.

Propped up in a bed at Grady Hospital, Miss Catherine Reese, the pretty telephone operator who tried to end her life with strychnine Sunday, told a pathetic story of two disappointments in love.

"It just seemed that there was nothing left to live for," she moaned, "but I am sorry I did it now."

Miss Reese was still white-faced and weak Monday from the effects of the poison. It is believed that she will have recovered within two or three days.

She told a graphic tale of the despondency that led her to the attempt at self-destruction and of her bitter grief and despair as she snatched a pad of writing paper to write a last message to her sweetheart even while the poison had her in its grasp.

Unable to Write Death Note.

"Sweetheart, you will never know——" she wrote in a scrawling hand as convulsions seized her. She was unable to finish the sentence.

"I know it was a foolish, foolish thing for me to do," she said at the hospital. "But everything was going against me. My mother was sick. My marriage was unhappy, for it is true that I have been married and that my case for divorce was to have come up to-day. Then came this other disappointment in love. I was tired and exhausted. Everything looked dark and so I just swallowed the strychnine.

"My husband's name is W. A. Skeene. He has been in the navy and we used to travel about the country quite a lot. He did not treat me kindly, though, and I left him soon after we came to Atlanta. I met a young man my the name of Golden Studstill about six months ago. He is a private at Fort McPherson. He paid me a good many attentions and I was attracted by him. He is the one who caused me to try to kill myself. We had a little quarrel the Fourth of July, but we made up afterward. On Saturday I worked on a switchboard from early in the morning until about 11 o'clock at night. When I came out Golden was waiting for me with three other fellows—Patrick Studstill, his brother; a young man by the name of Wood and William Briggs.

Quarreled on Auto Ride.

"We went automobile riding for a long time. Golden got very angry with me about something and was angry when he left me early Sunday morning. I tried to call him at Fort McPherson Sunday, but I couldn't get him. They were provoked at me out at the fort for calling so often. I finally became desperate and when I went to my room in Mrs. Bowers' House at 57 Fraser Street I swallowed the strychnine tablets. There must have been 25 or 30 of them.

"In a few minutes I was in terrible pain. I wanted to send a message to Golden, who was to have married me after I got my divorce. I thought it would be the last he ever would hear

CLASH NEAR OVER SENATE GAG RULE

Simmons' Efforts to Pledge Members in Tariff Bill Legislation Fought by Many.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—A decisive vote affecting the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill will be taken in the Democratic Senate caucus late today when Chairman Simmons attempts to put through a resolution binding Democratic Senators to support the bill and pledging them to offer no amendments and to reject any amendment not proposed by the Finance Committee.

Senator Simmons proposes to make an appeal for the resolution on the ground that the present bill represents genuine Democratic tariff views, realizing an extended fight on the measure is due should the "gag rule" be defeated.

Senators Thornton, Walsh and Newlands are opposed to the resolution and there is a feeling among other Senators that a strict caucus rule among Democrats means much trouble for the party eventually. Senator Simmons postponed action on the rule Saturday when much opposition to it was shown. Hurry calls have been sent to all Democrats to be present at the caucus to-day.

THE WEATHER.
Forecast for Atlanta and Georgia—Generally fair Monday and Tuesday.

GROCERS' 'TRUST' HEARING STARTED

Officers and Members of Southern Association Face Federal Court at Birmingham.

BIRMINGHAM, July 7.—The corridors and Federal Court room were crowded to-day when shortly after 11 o'clock Judge W. I Grubb, of the United States District Court, took up the hearing against the Southern Wholesale Grocers' Association and the president, other officers and individual members of the association cited to show cause why they should not be held in contempt, after a decree had been handed down some time ago to dissolve the organization as a combination in restraint of trade in violation of the Sherman law.

General Luke E. Wright, of Memphis, and Walker Percy, of Birmingham, representing the defendants, announced they would offer a number of demurrers to the amended petition of the Government. O. D. Street, United States District Attorney, and Special Counsel Hinton Clabaugh are in charge of the Government's side. One hundred and sixty witnesses, scattered over the United States, were served with subpenas. Witnesses will draw mileage for 18,000 miles, at the rate of 5 cents per mile. Every step of the case is being fought.

Lauterbach's Lobbying Claims Riddled

STEEL TRUST QUIZ BOAST A BLUFF

Lauterbach Admits to Lobby Committee He Claimed He Could Block Inquiry.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—Edward Lauterbach, a New York lawyer, today confessed to the Overman lobby investigating committee he had told Lewis Cass Ledyard he was able to prevent or to head off the Congressional investigation of the Steel Trust.

Severely grilled, Lauterbach was forced to admit that, when he had told Ledyard of coming to Washington "to look over the situation," he actually had seen no member of the House or Senate, nor any other official. He had learned "that President Taft was opposed to the investigation from Henry B. Martin, the much-talked-about secretary of the Anti-Trust League."

Calls Claim Exaggeration.

"Then your statement to Ledyard that you had ben to Washington and learned things that prompted you to say the investigation could be stopped was a falsehood?" demanded Senator Reed.

"It was an exaggeration," replied Lauterbach.

Lauterbach, when cornered as to the source of his information about "inside matters" in Washington, each time was forced to admit that David Lamar and Martin were his sole authority for his statements that President Taft did not want the investigation to proceed or that other high officials were opposed to the investigation.

Denies Posing as Power.

The witness declared that in his conversation with Ledyard, February 6, 1912, he did not represent himself either to have seen or to have been in the confidence of any member of the Democratic party.

Lauterbach declared he never had known Lamar in seven years purposely to do a wrong thing. He became acquainted with Lamar in 1906 when litigation regarding the Manhattan and Interborough railway lines in New York was pending, at which time Lamar represented the interests of Russell Sage and H. H. Rogers. He detailed several important lawsuits in which he was engaged as the result of his introduction to Rogers by Lamar.

Confirms Ledyard's Story.

Lauterbach also denied he called Lamar a blackmailer during his talk with Ledyard last year. Ledyard had testified before the committee that Lauterbach said he did not represent himself at that meeting as a representative of any member of the Democratic party. Lauterbach asserted this was correct and that his remark covered all subjects.

The witness asserted he had never discussed with Lamar the alleged forgery of $82,000,000 in the books of the Union Pacific. He repeatedly asserted he knew nothing of Lamar's impersonations of Congressmen until he heard his testimony before the Overman committee.

Lauterbach explained he engineered the purchase of a majority of the stock of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company by J. P. Morgan during the panic of 1907, and that "this panic was engineered by the men who were seeking to buy the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company and that they bought it much cheaper as a result of the financial cataclysm they precipitated."

Explains Wall Street "Pull."

Lauterbach explained that it was on account of his knowledge of the Tennessee Coal and Iron deal that he felt that he could influence Wall Street with regard to the steel investigation.

Lauterbach knew of the steel investigation resolution before it was introduced in the House. Lamar showed it to him. Lauterbach protested and went at once to tell Morgan about it.

Departing Suitor Is Taught 'Checkers;' 'Moves' When Rocked

Lee Baldwin, of 58 Ellis Street, was the participant in a unique game of "checkers" when he called on a young woman at 99 Clarence Avenue last night. His "move" came when eight young men pelted him with rocks after he had bidden his girl good-night. Noise of the combat attracted the young woman's attention and she frantically notified police headquarters.

From time immemorial there has been a custom among certain young men residing in the southeastern portion of Atlanta, it is said, to "rock" young men from other sections of the city when they went calling there. The familiar salutation is: "Do you know how to play checkers?" Somewhat surprised, the young man will answer, "Yes." "Well, it's your move," is the information handed out, and then a shower of rocks and some rough handling.

Baldwin managed to make his escape to a car, his eight assailants endeavoring to pull him off. The police are investigating and arrests are expected to follow to-day.

Council Will Place Tax Receiver Under Rule of Assessors

The long fight between city tax officials will reach a climax at the meeting of Council Monday afternoon when a resolution to place the Tax Receiver George Beauchamp under the direction of the Tax Assessors is passed. The resolution calls on the Legislature to so amend the city charter.

It is expected by many that Mayor Woodward will veto the resolution and that Council will have to go over the whole affair again.

The Tax Assessors, C. D. Meador J. L. Harrison and John Malone, claim that Mr. Beauchamp has destroyed co-operation in the tax office.

The election of Messrs. Meador and Harrison comes up at the meeting. It is said that there will be no opposition to either of them.

Clubwomen Waging Fight to Save Birds

Led by Miss Nina Hornady, a prominent woman educator, Georgia club women are making a vigorous protest against the Clapp amendment, permitting wild birds to be killed or trapped. Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, head of the Federation of Women's Clubs in Georgia, is giving her support to Miss Hornady, and Mrs. Shepard W. Foster, State D. A. R. regent, is assisting.

"The time is at hand when every man, woman and child who loves the little feathered song-birds must aid in preserving them to our woods and forests," said Miss Hornady.

2 Aviators Escape In 300-Foot Plunge

CHICAGO, July 7.—Glenn Martin, Los Angeles aviator, and Charles H. Day, his mechanician, escaped death by a small margin to-day when their hydro-aeroplane collapsed in Lake Michigan while going at a rate of 40 miles an hour.

Martin attempted to glide to the water from a height of about 300 feet when the machine shot downward and struck the water with terrific force.

The two men clung to the disabled plane until help reached them.

Robber Held, Failing To Make $1,500 Bond

Walter Turpin, alias J. W. Johnson, who confessed to blowing the Kirkwood postoffice safe last Friday night, was bound over on $1,500 bond Monday morning in a preliminary hearing at Decatur, DeKalb County, before Justices A. Shelverton and W. P. House, of Kirkwood.

Turpin failed to make bond and was sent back to his cell to await trial the first week in September.

COCHRAN TO ASK SCHOOL INQUIRY

Fulton Legislator Believes There Has Been Extravagance at the State Agricultural Colleges.

Satisfied that mismanagement, incompetency or extravagance may have been prevalent in the various district agricultural colleges of late, Representative Ralph O. Cochran, of Fulton, will propose a resolution in the House calling for a rigid legislative probe into the same.

Mr. Cochran's idea is that the schools so far have failed pointedly to justify the great outlay of money required to keep them up.

The gentleman from Fulton will not charge any person with deliberate wrongdoing, but he does believe that the schools have not been conducted in a businesslike manner, and that they might, and should, be placed on a basis working to Georgia's greater advantage.

He calls attention to the deficits shown in the Treasurer's reports, and draws the seemingly warranted inference that the colleges are not returning to the State anything like the amount of money they should, considering the money the State spends upon them.

The eleven district schools are supposed to be self-supporting, in a way, but the returns, as indicated by the Treasurer's report, do not show them as approximating anything like that ideal status.

This proposed investigation, coming on the heels of the mix-up in the Experiment Station, is sure to attract widespread attention throughout Georgia, as every congressional district has one of these agricultural schools.

"I do not wish to be placed in the attitude of attacking the district schools,' said Mr. Cochran, discussing his resolution to-day. "I really want their co-operation in benefitting agricultural conditions in Georgia. I am trying to find out exactly what they are doing, and when that has been ascertained, we can proceed as the results indicate."

Militants Fire Pier King Was to Visit

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOUTHPORT, ENGLAND, July 7. Militant suffragettes attempted to burn the famous Southport pier early to-day. If it had not been for volunteer firemen the structure would have been lost. Fishermen went to the aid of the firemen and succeeded in quenching the flames.

The damage is estimated at about $50,000. The women evidently intended the conflagration as a royal rebuke, as King George was scheduled to pass before the pier this afternoon.

LIVERPOOL, July 7.—A suffrage bomb was exploded in the cellar of the Liverpool Stock Exchange to-day and the building was partially destroyed.

Lady Sackville Wins $5,000,000 Bequest

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 7.—A verdict against the plaintiffs was rendered to-day in the suit brought in an effort to break the will of the late Sir John Murray Scott because he bequeathed Lady Sackville $5,000,000 in cash, real estate and art treasures.

The special jury in the case reported to Justice Evans this afternoon that the evidence showed that Lady Sackville had exercised no undue influence over Sir John.

Marriage Law Is Scored by Judge as He Frees Child-Wife

Declaring the marriage laws instead of the divorce laws of Georgia were in need of a radical reform, Superior Judge George L. Bell directed a jury Monday morning to find a verdict in favor of pretty Mrs. M. S. Stevens, a 15-year-old bride of a year ago, who asked a divorce, alleging cruel treatment.

Judge Bell charged the jury:

"Gentlemen, this is not a case for moralizing. This young woman is entitled to a divorce. It is not the divorce laws that need reforming, but the marriage laws. There should be some way to prevent people marrying at the age this young woman did, and there should be some way for both parties to determine the kind of proposition they are taking on for life."

Senate Once More Denies Its Hall to Women Suffragists

Ineffectual efforts were made by Senator W. D. McNeil, of the Twenty-second district, Monday morning for reconsideration of the resolution granting the Georgia Woman's Suffrage Association the use of the Senate chamber on the evening of Wednesday and Thursday, July 9 and 10.

The Senator's motion to take the resolution from the table, although buttressed with the forceful declaration that the Senate had no right to deny such a request soming from respectable citizens, was lost by a vote of 17 to 15.

Fascination of Death Leads Girl to Suicide

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, July 7.—Fascination for the mystery of death led Miss McDuff, a young American woman of wealth, beauty and ideals, to take her life in a little inn in the village of Villebon, according to a theory formed to-day by the police, who have been investigating the tragedy.

Miss McDuff is said to come from either a New York or a Cambridge, Mass., family.

The young woman, accompanied by an Englishman, arrived at Villacoublay a month ago. At the hotel where she lived she aroused much curiosity by her theories concerning death.

Boy Drowned While Battling in River

Nat Jones, a 12-year-old boy, was drowned in the Chattahoochee River at Center Hill Monday morning. The boy was one of a crowd in swimming. According to witnesses of the tragedy, he became paralyzed with cramps and went down before anyone could reach him.

His body was brought up a short time later by C. C. Jones, county policeman. The boy lived with his stepfather, Sam Sparks, on the Mayson and Turner Road.

Wilson Motors Sixty Miles for Golf Game

WOODSTOCK, VT., July 7.—With the mercury hovering about 50, President Wilson motored 60 miles to play golf with Dr. Grayson to-day. The President left Cornish early and made quick time to the Woodstock links, the public golf course nearest the summer capital.

After a round with Dr. Grayson, the President lunched at the Woodstock Inn and then motored back to Cornish. He will leave for Washington to-morrow.

Gen. Bourne, Leader Of State U. C. V., Dead

SAVANNAH, July 7.—The funeral of General William Henry Bourne took place this afternoon. He was commander of McLaws Camp and brigadier general of the Georgia Division, United Confederate Veterans.

General Bourne died Saturday night after an illness of a little more than two hours, following an attack of acute indigestion.

OPERATIONS OF SLAVERS IN HOTELS BARED

Victim Tells Beavers Names of Women and Man Engaged in Traffic in Girls.

A new and sensational expose of vice conditions said to be prevalent in Atlanta was made Monday morning by Hattie Smith, a pretty 17-year-old girl, who was arrested in a hotel which was raided Sunday night.

If the statements of the Smith girl, who made a confession of her own guilt to the Chief, are true, Atlanta is in the clutches of one of the best organized vice systems in existence.

Certain downtown hotels, the girl claims, are the dendezvous of women procurers who go out on the streets and entice young girls in where they are provided with every comfort and convenience, in addition to being carried out on long automobile rides by strange men.

Gives Chief Names.

The names of at least one of these procurers has been placed in the hands of Chief Beavers, who will make an arrest before night, it is believed. The name of a prominent citizen of Atlanta also has been given to the Chief, in addition to the names of several women involved in the traffic, it is said.

Hattie Smith's story Monday morning was dramatic in the extreme. She told Chief Beavers how she left her home last Wednesday; how she met the woman procurer; how she was enticed into the hotel in question, and then the other details of her shame. Her confession was complete.

She admitted her guilt and then upon the query of the Chief told all she knew about the conditions, which, she says, she saw with her own eyes.

Tells Who Enticed Her.

In the course of the conversation the girl gave the Chief the names of several parties, including one or more prominent men of Atlanta, in addition to the name of the woman who enticed her to the hotel.

The arrest of a negro elevator boy in a downtown hotel shortly after noon was the first step taken by Chief Beavers in the new probe. The boy is believed to have knowledge of many of the denizens of the vice ring.

Additional information was furnished the police chief by the Rev. Hugh Wallace, of the Jones Avenue Baptist Church, who called at the police state following publication of the new charges.

A number of downtown hotels are said to be booked for the police dragnet.

Local Stock Dealers See Trade Revival

Atlanta dealers in stocks and bonds report some revival of business. Disbursement of July dividends at a time when the prices of local stocks are low has brought some reinvestment demand, they say.

Several good-sized dividend checks have been turned over to investment dealers with instructions to purchase the "stamped" stock of the Georgia Railway and Electric Company, which is a guaranteed 8 per cent security, selling just now around 118. This stock has held firm, compared with other local securities.

"Power common" is attracting attention, too.

DEPARTMENT TO GOVERN BANKS PROPOSED

Bill, in Both House and Senate, Provides for Supervisor of State Institutions.

A bill providing for the creation of a department of banking to regulate and supervise approximately 600 State banks in Georgia was presented Monday to the House and Senate Committees on Banks and Banking by the Georgia Bankers' Association.

The bill, if passed, will revolutionize the method of supervision of State banks, as it will take such supervision entirely from the hands of the State Comptroller and his assistants.

Haynes McFadden, secretary of the Georgia Bankers' Association, said Monday morning that no lobby for the bill would be conducted; that it would be presented to the House and Senate Banking Committees, which may do as they see fit.

Bill Called Good One.

"The bill is a good one, we think," said Mr. McFadden, "and if passed will be a great benefit in the supervision of the State banks, which are now regulated by the State Comptroller and his two assistants.

"The present regulation and supervision is entirely inadequate, as is obvious, when it is brought out that these three men are supposed to conduct examinations of approximately 600 banks each year. Two examinations per year givese to each one of these men 400 inspections to make in 365 days."

The proposed bill provides for the creation of a department of banking, which shall be in charge of a superintendent appointed by the Governor for a term of four years, the first term beginning January 1, 1915, and expiring January 1, 1919.

Office to Pay $4,000 Year.

The superintendent shall receive a salary of $4,000 a year and shall have the power to appoint from time to time an assistant superintendent, who shall be ex-officio examiner, and such additional examiners and office assistants as may be required to discharge the duties of the office.

The assistant superintendent and special examiners shall be skilled accountants and familiar with the banking business. The assistant superintendent shall receive a salary of $2,000 per annum, while each assistant shall receive a salary of $1,800 per year.

Every bank, trust company and other corporation doing a banking business in the State, excluding private banks, copartnerships or voluntary associations and national banks, shall be subject to supervision by the State department.

Apartment Houses Must Quit Smoking

Chairman R. M. Harwell, of the City Smoke Commission, has warned department house owners who are resisting the anti-smoke law. These people were given until summer to remodel their furnaces so tenants might not be inconvenienced during cold weather. Now, Chairman Harwell says, a number of them have banded together to get the law repealed.

"The department house smoke evil is one of the worst in the city," he said.

"When they fire up in the fall they must comply with the law or be taken before the Recorder."

LEE'S ATTORNEY IS READY FOR WRIT FIGHT

Habeas Corpus Move to Free Negro in Phagan Case Due to Start Monday.

Habeas corpus proceedings in behalf of Newt Lee, negro night watchman at the National Pencil Factory, were promised Monday by the negro's attorney, Bernard L. Chappell. Settlement of this phase of the Phagan murder mystery will determine definitely the status of the negro.

It is known that the State regards Lee as a material witness in building up its case against Frank. The attitude of Mr. Chappell is that his client knows no more about he crime than he already has told, and should therefore be freed. Lee has told the detectives nothing which links any man directly with the crime. By the defense, his story is held to point to the guilt of Leo Frank no more than to the guilt of Conley.

The State, however, will fight any effort to give the negro his liberty. Solicitor Dorsey fears that Lee will get out of the jurisdiction of the court once he is permitted his freedom.

The battle over Lee is the only outward sign of activity in the Phagan case either by the defense or the prosecution, but it is known that the defense is busily engaged completing its case. One new witness was interviewed Saturday by Frank's lawyers, and his affidavit taken before a notary public. A strong net is being woven about Conley. The nature of the testimony is being kept secret, but it is known that the defense expects to free Frank by showing that it was Conley who committed the crime. The negro is said to be enmeshed in the testimony in the hands of the defense.

Despite rumors of another postponement, attorneys for the defense and prosecution said Monday that they would be ready to go ahead with the case at the time set for trial, July 28, and that they knew of no reason for further delay.

Jury to Consider Indicting Conley.

What was considered a direct reference to the Phagan case was made in the charge of Superior Judge George L. Bell to the Grand Jury Monday morning. He said he wanted to place particular emphasis on recent "horrible homicides" and urged the jury to probe deep in an effort to find clews that would lead to perpetrators.

The Grand Jury was organized at 9 o'clock Monday morning with W. D. Beattie foreman. Judge Bell made one of the shortest charges ever delivered in a Fulton County courtroom.

Immediately following the charge the jury went into executive session to consider bills presented by the Solicitor's office. After to-day's session the calendar of criminal business will be disposed of, and the jury will have every opportunity to take up any matters it might see fit.

A meeting will be called later in the week when a definite plan of action will be outlined for the term. It was regarded as likely that the Phagan case would be reopened and an indictment against Jim Conley considered.

Other matters that might be taken up are recent developments with the police department, in which eight patrolmen were suspended for alleged corruption, the counter charges of corruption made by them and charges of open vice.

Author Justified in Killing Unruly Negro

MACON, July 7.—Harry Stillwell Edwards, author and Macon postmaster, and his son, Prentiss Edwards, were justified in killing Harrison Newton, a negro farm hand, according to the verdict returned by the Coroner's jury.

Newton was shot at the Edwards farm, near Macon, Saturday night and died Sunday in the Macon Hospital. The negro, while intoxicated, had attacked his wife and children with an ax, when Edwards and his son went to their aid.

BONUS FOR PONY CLUBS HELPS "TRAILERS"

Less Than Month Left for Contestants — Told to Imitate Milkman.

Three weeks and a few odd days remain of The Georgian and American pony contest. Not a moment of this time can be wasted by the boys and girls who want the beautiful little ponies which the whole city admired when they were paraded July 4.

The big bonus offer for clubs of five has expired. Nearly all the contestants worked hard, and turned in one or more clubs. Some turned in a dozen clubs. As rapidly as possible, these bonuses will be accredited, and the standings announced. Then it will be seen that some of the "trailers" now are out in front.

Good, solid work from now on will ccunt wonderfully. No doubt some of the contestants feel that they have seen every one possible—they can not think of the next place to turn for subscriptions. If they have been working conscientiously, this feeling is natural. But this is a large city. There are hundreds more, probably within walking distance of the contestants' homes, who have not been approached. Boys and girls now should cover their districts like the mailman does, a tireless house to house canvass will bring excellent results.

"Take your receipt books," advises the contest manager, "and go through the stubs. Tabulate carefully all those who took the paper for a month or two months. Note their expiration dates. Then see every one a few days before the time expires. Ten out of every eleven will renew. The sort of paper we are giving subscribers is the best possible help for the contestants. Their friends see they are getting their money's worth, and more."

Pastor Prefers Life Of Mule to Convict

"I would rather be one of Fulton County's mules than a convict in its convict camp," declared Dr. A. R. Holderby Sunday morning at Moore Memorial Church in a sermon on "The Shame of Georgia's Diabolical Convict System."

Dr. Holderby declared that it cost the county 48 cents a day per head to feed its mules, while only 10 cents a day was expended in feeding each convict. He stated that the convict laws instead of encouraging a man to a better life, bring out all the evil in his nature.

Victim of Joy Ride Dies From Injuries

MACON, July 7.—Myrtis Brown, 23 years old, died at the Macon Hospital as the result of a broken back sustained four weeks ago when an automobile in which she and three friends were "joy riding" crashed into a telephone pole on the Houston Road. Her spinal column was fractured between the shoulder blades, and three ribs were broken.

The accident took place June 8. In the machine at the time were E. M. Devore, of Atlanta; L. M. Heath, May Lavinsky and Myrtis Brown.

Assembly Asked to Increase Pensions

Appeal to the Georgia Legislature for an increase from $60 to $100 a year in pensions for Confederate veterans has been made by Mrs. A. J. Adkins.

Mrs. Adkins sets forth in her letter to the legislators that the increase of pension is entirely logical as the declining years of the veterans make it more and more difficult for them to add to their own support. While $5 a month is acceptable, she says, $8 and a fraction is better.

Relatives of Actor Who Slew Wife and Self Sought Here

The death of Frank Bailey, an old Atlanta boy, who committed suicide in Kansas City Sunday after killing his wife and stage teammate, Mazie Edwards, has resulted in a close search for relatives of Bailey, who are said to reside in Atlanta. Persons living at the address given by George E. Greenwood, manager of a theatrical agency, said they had never heard of the Baileys.

Both Bailey and Mazie Edwards, who lived in Denver, were well known in Atlanta, where they have been booked several times. Bailey started his stage career here years ago. Mazie Edwards began her career in Montgomery, Ala. The pair played at the Bijou last winter in a singing and dancing act.

"The proper authorities have accepted Mr. Carnegie's gift and he has nothing whatever to say—he never gives to sectarian educational institutions, feeling that no one should be debarred from a medical education on account of his theological views."

PLANTERS FIGHT TAX ON COTTON EXCHANGES

Declare Present Scheme Would Deliver Price-Making Power Into England's Hands.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—Southern planters are protesting to the Senate Finance Committee against the provision in the tariff bill taxing cotton exchange dealers .05 per cent.

This provision was inserted in the tariff bill by Senator Simmons to meet the demand that there shall cease all gambling in cotton futures and on margins. It resulted from attempts to corner the cotton market made by speculators on the New York Cotton Exchange.

The planters contend that with such a tax, amounting to about 50 cents a bale of cotton, no exchange can continue to do business. The planters are opposed to the New York Exchange, but they want the New Orleans and other Southern cotton exchanges to continue.

Defend South's Exchange.

In this argument they present it is held that the New Orleans Exchange and other Southern exchanges are bullish on the cotton market and seek to hold the price to the advantage of the Southern grower. These exchanges make actual deliveries.

The New York Exchange is friendly to the spinners and is bearish, its purpose being to depress the price of cotton. It makes no actual delivery, but serves the spinners for their future needs. Its business is done through the interchange of purchase and sale notes.

Gives Power to England.

With the wiping out of the cotton exchange in this country, the cotton exchange at Liverpool, also bearish, will take command of the cotton market and fix the price just as the sugar market price is fixed in Holland.

It is contended that through the proposed tax a great injustice would be done the cotton growers who are now laboring under the disadvantage of competition with Egyptian cotton, which is of high grade and commands a better price than Southern cotton.

Egyptian cotton, which needs salt air, is being grown in the reclaimed lands of Salton Sea, California, and it is an active competitor of the Southern cotton, which is short on fiber.

Bones of Snake as Poisonous as Fangs

VIDALIA, July 7.—That the deadly poison of the rattlesnake is effective, even after the reptile has lain dead and the bones bleached in the sun for several months, was demonstrated when Cicero Johnson, a negro, stepped upon the bones of a dead rattler while cutting oats on the Beasley farm near Normantown.

The negro was barefooted at the time and his foot was severely lacerated by the bones. Swelling immediately ensued and it is likely that amputation will be necessary.

"Honorary mention" also is given Atlanta for showing a gain of more than 100 members the past fiscal year, having initiated 268. In charity Atlanta gave $1,542 during the year.

Georgia reports 29 Elks lodges with a total of 5,353 members, a gain of 498 over last year.

Valor of '61 Pastor's Theme to the Young

Lessons from the war between the States were inculcated at the West End Christian Church Sunday by the Rev. William C. Foster, the pastor, who appealed to young people in particular to fight life's battle with the valor exhibited by the soldiers of Robert E. Lee.

"Let us forget the hatred," Dr. Foster said, "but remember the bravery of our heroes."

Dr. Foster emphasized the practical advantages of country-wide education and deplored the fact that there were not enough schools in Georgia.

CLOSING OF BANK INVOLVES 40 MILLIONS

One of the Oldest Institutions in Pittsburg Ordered by U. S. Comptroller to Suspend.

PITTSBURG, July 7.—The First-Second National Bank of Pittsburg, one of the city's oldest banking institutions, closed its doors to-day by direction of the Acting Comptroller of the Currency. The amount involved is said to be between $24,000,000 and $40,000,000. One report is that the amount will reach $200,000,000.

The Pittsburg Clearing House had a special meeting last night to consider the impending failure and to-day another conference was held.

Hundreds of depositors, many of them foreigners employed in the great steel mills, flocked to the bank early to-day but a squad of police kept every one moving.

The First and Second National Banks combined last March and occupied a new 25-story building.

A typewritten notice on the doors stated the institution was in the hands of National Bank Examiner Samuel M. Hann and Sheriff Smith.

A director of the bank to-day made the following statement:

"The officers and directors are a unit in maintaining that a great injustice has been done and that the bank is solvent at this moment. We are also convinced that all claims will be paid in full. If the Treasury Department, operating through the Comptroller of the Currency, had not interfered and had not subjected the bank to a rigid examination by special examiners who were not able to judge values of property and securities in this community, we would have been able to work out to success our problems."

Following the news of the closing of the First-Second National Bank, a steady run started on the Pittsburg Bank for Savings, which also is controlled by the Kuhn interests.

McKeesport, Pa., Bank Closes, Also.

PITTSBURG, July 7.—The First National Bank of McKeesport closed its doors at 10:30 this morning.

The following unsigned notice was posted on the door of the institution:

"On account of the First-Second National Bank of Pittsburg asking for a receiver it is thought best for all of our depositors to close this bank for the present."

from me. I tried to write him, but the pain overcame me before I was finished."

Since her separation from her husband the young woman has been known by her maiden name. She lived for some time at 26 Capitol Avenue. She had lived at the residence of Mrs. Bowers only a week. She was left partially paralyzed by the convulsions induced by the poison, but this condition is wearing off gradually and the physicians expect an early recovery. Her attorney in the suit for divorce is W. H. Lewis. She was married May 31, 1909, and separated from her husband July 1, 1912.

While Studstill was in Waco at the rifle practice last May she corresponded with him frequently. One of the letters from him read:

Dear Kate: I have just a few minutes to write you in. I am very sorry I could not do what I wanted to do, but you have done your part, although I have failed.

Under the circumstances, I could not have the nerve to write to you. I don't think that I am worth 2 cents. That is the way I feel now. You may find someone that can do better than I. I am certain that you can. Good-bye.

Lovingly,

G. A. S.

In a postscript he added: "I am a mistake all through."

MACON SCANDAL CLIMAX DUE IN LIBEL SUITS

Accuser Will Fight Actions for Damages by Exonerated Members of Christian Church.

MACON, July 7.—New sensations are expected in the Macon church scandal, in which Professor Frank M. Charlton, choir leader, and Mrs. Effie Lester, secretary of the Ladies' Aid Society, of the First Christian Church, were exonerated Sunday of all charges of wrongdoing, when Attorney Claud Estes, representing Mrs. Lester, and the attorneys for Professor Charlton bring suits for slander in the courts. The damage suits probably will be filed within the next few days, according to statements today of parties involved.

That Macon is promised one of the sharpest legal fights in her history is certain, it is said, as Attorney Julian Urquart, retained by Mrs. Jenkins, one of the accusers, will contest every point of the plaintiffs in defense of his client.

Cleared at Open Meeting.

The aftermath of the affair follows the exoneration of the accused parties at an open session of the First Christian Church Sunday morning, when the report of the elders' investigating committee was read to the congregation.

The session was dramatic. Immediately following the sermon the congregation of the little echurch went into executive session, with Elder Lenoir Erwin, member of the investigating committee, presiding. Seated in the choir directly behind Mr. Erwin was Professor Charlton, slightly pale, but otherwise composed. Near the front was Mrs. Lester, who watched the proceedings with remarkable composure. Mr. Lester sat beside his wife.

Report of Inquiry Complete.

When Elder Roper, chairman of the investigating committee, was called upon to read the report, the congregation leaned forward as if to catch every word of the elder.

The report, as predicted, went into the minutest detail of the whole affair, described every phase of the investigation, pointed out the alleged shallowness of the charges and recommended the complete vindication of the accused.

Elder Roper paused when he had finished reading. There was a dead silence for fully a half minute and then Elder Erwin arose and in solemn tones announced an open meeting for the free discussion of the report.

Woman Speaks for Charlton.

"Speak now or forever hold your peace," said Mr. Erwin.

There was a moment of silence, broken at length by the voice of a woman.

"I have known Professor Charlton for fifteen years," she said, "and in that time I have known him to be a perfect gentleman."

The speaker was Mrs. E. T. Gibson, a member of the Methodist Church and formerly of Bloomington, Ill., the choir leader's old home.

Mrs. Gibson was the only person in the audience to accept the elders' invitation to speak. Elder Irwin then put the question of the guilt of the accused parties to the congregation.

Exoneration Is Unanimous.

Practically every one in the audience arose on the motions to exonerate Professor Charlton and Mrs. Lester. Not one stood when the "nay" vote was put.

Immediately following the vote, the Rev. Mr. Anderson called upon the congregation to sing, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," after which a prayer, one of the most fervent ever heard in the little church, was offered by the pastor. While the vote was being taken Professor Charlton and Mrs. Lester retired from the auditorium. They were greeted by scores of friends following the close of the service.

Place Faith in Accused.

"Our conclusion is," it is stated in the report, "that the parties are innocent of the charges made or others of like nature. We have as much confidence in the integrity and Christian character of both parties as we ever have had and this is the first time we have ever been given occasion to question them."

It is recommended further that the report be published in The Christian Builder and copies for publication be furnished the newspapers and that they become a part of the church records. The report is signed by L. M. Erwin, W. H. Roper, A. W. Smith, A. M. Erwin, Leroy M. Anderson, Elders of the First Christian Church.

She Has Taken First Prize in Every Sprinting Contest Since a Little Girl.

Attention, brides and matrons of Atlanta!

A challenge is issued to you who are fleet of foot for either a hundred-yard sprint or an endurance race by Mrs. Grace Murray, of 222 Rawson Street.

Mrs. Murray is the pretty bride of Stewart Murray, of the Cruickshank Cigar Company. She also took first prize in the women's egg and ladle race.

At the picnic of the association last year, Mrs. Murray, then Miss Grace Beddingfield, was winner of the girls' race. She has taken first place in other races, too, and her friends declare she can outrun any one of her sex in Atlanta. She herself says she is willing at any time to enter into a race with any of Atlanta's married women who think they can run.

Mrs. Murray also is a swimmer and diver of ability.

M'NAB'S SLAVERY REPORT GIVEN OUT

Kahn, California, Again Declares Justice Is Being Blocked, and Scores President.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—The publication to-day of former District Attorney McNab's report to Attorney General McReynolds, dated May 21, in the Caminetti-Diggs white slave cases, giving the details of the alleged seduction of the Warrington and Norris girls by young Caminetti and Diggs, aroused new interest in the cases.

Representative Kahn, of California, and other members of the California delegation declared the House Judiciary Committee was wrong in suppressing the McNab report. In the committee report before the House, those parts of the McNab report dealing with the methods used to lead the girls astray; the alleged attempt to suborn perjury and the revelation that Caminetti's counsel had told McNab that Caminetti probably would plead guilty were omitted.

Kahn declared to-day he would demand that all the correspondence in the case be made public. He declared the McNab report justified his charge that a ystematized effort was being made to block justice, and that the explanation of the President and Attorney General McReynolds in the case was not well founded.

BULGAR VICTORY COSTS SERVIA 11,000 LIVES

Three Regiments Annihilated in Great Battle Lasting Two Days and Three Nights.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOFIA, July 7.—The tide of victory in the second Balkan war has swung to the Bulgarians. Signal successes are reported.

Eleven thousand Servians of the western wing of the Servian army were reported killed in an engagement near Deslinici, 8,000 others were wounded, many prisoners were taken and the balance were put to flight, according to a dispatch from General Savoff to Czar Ferdinand to-day. It was one of the decisive battles of modern times, according to the Bulgarian Government.

Three Servian regiments were annihilated in the battle which started along the Bregalnitza River in central Macedonia. The fight lasted two days and three nights before the exhausted Servian soldiers gave way before the repeated charges.

The battlefield, which covers an area of nearly 20 square miles, was strewn with dead and wounded, all of whom were left behind.

The Bulgarian casualties were not given.

Intrigue by Austria Blamed for Conflict.

BERLIN, July 7.—A diplomatic intrigue engineered by Austria is responsible for the second Balkan war between Servia, Greece and Montenegro on one hand and Bulgaria on the other, according to a telegram received to-day from Sofia.

Dr. Daneff, one of the leading Bulgarian statesmen, is responsible for the accusation that Austria led Bulgaria to believe that Austrian support would be given Bulgaria in any dispute that country might have with any other of the "allies."

When war was inevitable, Austria withdrew this promise of support on the ground that it might endanger the peace of Europe.

Greeks Ask Powers To Halt Massacres.

ATHENS, July 7.—Greece has appealed to the Powers to prevent further outrages by Bulgarians in Macedonia.

Dispatches from Salonika to-day stated that the Bulgarians had massacred and tortured hundreds of Greek women and children near the town of Negrita. All the able-bodied men are fighting in the Greek armies and there was no one to protect the defenseless families.

Lack of Funds May Halt Balkan War.

ROME, July 7.—Lack of funds probably will put an end to the new Balkan war. All the States in the Balkan league are close to bankruptcy. The powers are expected to refuse any more loans in order to compel the cessation of hostilities.

But the most remarkable feature of Dodson's Liver Tone is the fact that all druggists who sell it, guarantee it absolutely. The druggist will return your money without argument if a bottle fails to give entire satisfaction.

U. S. Now Is Fourth In Naval Strength

WASHINGTON, July 7.—The United States is now occupying fourth place among the navies of the world and not third, as is generally supposed.

The real loss of prestige to the navy by reason of the failure to keep up the naval construction program is shown very clearly in Brassey's Manual, whose rating of the nations was discussed generally to-day by officers at the Navy Department.

Rear Admiral Bradley Fiske, chief of staff of Secretary Daniels, pointed out the real comparative strength of the nations as shown by Brassey's figures, as follows:

England 29, Germany 19, France 17, United States 13. Japan is not given.

SALE OF A., B. & A. ROAD AROUSES ASSEMBLY

Rumor That Louisville & Nashville Seeks Line Stirs Interest in Fate of W. & A.

The coming sale of the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad, under foreclosure proceedings, and the rumor that the Louisville and Nashville has its eyes upon it, has started something of a panic among Georgia legislators, particularly as the present Legislature likely will consider seriously the problem of the Western and Atlantic's re-lease in 1919.

There are two parties in the present Legislature with respect to the Western and Atlantic Railway. One favors the re-lease of the State's road as it now stands, the other the extension of the road to the Atlantic seaboard.

If the L. & N. gobbles the A., B. & A., it is held by some that it thereby will have strategic advantage over the State road in the matter of extension to the sea. Indeed, if the L. & N. gets the A., B. & A., it is predicted that the railroad map of Georgia likely will be pretty well changed within a short time.

There are those in the General Assembly who are advocating the purchase of the A., B. & A. by the State, thus extending the W. & A. to the sea. Others hold that the State should keep its hands off the A., B. & A. road and confine itself to such railroad property as it now possesses, with its fine terminal facilities in Atlanta and Chattanooga.

If the L. & N. gets the A., B. & A., it is figured by some legislators that it immediately provide for entry into Atlanta by some other way than that over the State road, as it now comes in. If this is done, it is contended that the W. & A. will will be pretty well put out of busines.

Those who will be present are Albert Keen, Georgian Terrace; J. Lee Barnes, Majestic; Fred Houser, Journal; Lee Jourdon, attorney; Harry Dutton, Piedmont; J. H. Evans, Imperial; Ed Brown, New Kimball; Bruno Buckofer, Terminal; Jim Williams, Cafe Durand, and Frank Harrell, Aragon.

Ten Collegians Are Believed Drowned

BUFFALO, July 7.—Ten young men, all said to be graduates of English and Canadian colleges, are believed to have ben drowned last night in Lake Erie just off Crescent Beach opposite Buffalo.

The young men were in canoes, and two of the canoes, overturned, were found floating in the Niagara River near Fort Erie this morning.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Two Headliners at Forsyth.

Two headliners will be offered with five other features at the Forsyth this week. There will be the usual daily bargain matinees, and, of course, the ever popular night performances.

Cecil Leane and his company in "The Moving Picture Man" will be one of the headline features. Miss Eva Taylor and her company of three people will present "After the Wedding," one of the cleverest farce sketches in the catalog of good things.

Among the other acts will be Warren and Blanchard, the black face comedians; the pretty Grace Sisters, who are expert dancers; Hines and Fox, the singer and the piano player; Kennedy and Melrose, the bouncing gymnasts, and Houghton and Hughton, who are expert trick bicyclists.

Talking Pictures at Grand.

Ten cents will pay the way to see and hear Edison's Talking Pictures and the highest grade of first-run motion pictures at any time from 2:30 in the afternoon until 10:30 at night, at the Grand during the week that starts this afternoon.

A big program of the talking pictures was put on last week at higher prices and served to draw large attendance after the pictures had proven their value. The management decided on another week, with a change of subjects, and because of the interest in the pictures and because of the tremendous seating capacity of the theater, determined upon the policy of continuous operation at the dime price.

The Biograph, Vitagraph, Lubin, Selig, Pathe, Essanay, Kalem, Edison and Melies' releases will be presented with entire change of program daily. The Talking Pictures will be changed every other day.

"Along Broadway" at the Bijou.

The musical comedy attractions that are playing the Bijou these days have become immensely popular with patrons of amusement. Each week brings a new company, presenting a new piece, and it is safe to say that nothing in the amusement line has pleased Bijou patrons better than the attractions that are playing from week to week. The bill that is being offered this weeks is the 1912 Cabaret Revue, "Along Broadway," which will be presented by a big company of fun-makers, headed by Will Stanton and Rosalind May.

Edison Talking Pictures Grand daily 2:30 to 10:30. All seats 10 cents.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

by JAMES B. NEVIN

The Legislature, even as a tentative proposition, already is finding the matter of tax reform a perplexing problem, and one calculated to give it much trouble before it is adjusted.

Particularly is the question of tax equalization bothersome and full of difficulty.

Mr. Lipscombe, of Clarke, has an equalization bill pending in the House, and Mr. Cole, of Bartow, and Mr. Swift, of Muscogee, have inheritance tax bills.

The former was drawn by one of the most eminent lawyers in Georgia—an ex-Supreme Court Justice—and is thought to be as nearly perfect as such a measure can be made. Members are non-committal with respect to it, however.

The latter two bills, both carefully prepared, seem to have attracted considerable favorable attention, and both have the backing of the administration, in a general way, but whether either will pass is problematical.

The Legislature plainly is inclined to reform the tax laws, but it, just as plainly does not know exactly how to go about it or where to begin.

"One trouble in the situation," said a well-known member of the House to-day, "is the real or imaginary opposition of the farmers to a board of tax equalizers.

"As a matter of fact, I do not believe the farmers, in any very large proportion, anyway, oppose the tax equalization idea. Perhaps a few of them do, but I fail to see where any honest farmer—and the majority of Georgia farmers are honest—should.

"Instead of putting up the farmers' taxes, an equalization act much more likely would put them down. If assessments were adjusted in Georgia as they should be, the total would be so much larger than it is now that taxes, in the average amount paid would come down rather than go up—and the farmer would find himself immensely benefited by this. Instead of a State rate of 5 mills, if taxes were equalized, we probably should be able to get along with a rate of 2 1-2 or 3 mills.

"So, if a farmer's lands were raised—they might not be, and would not be in many cases, of course—a trifle, the total of his taxes likely would be less than now.

"The purpose of a tax equalization act is to catch the tax-dodgers, and to catch them in the open. Such a measure would catch them, too. And if the dodgers were made to come to time, the present taxpayers of the State would find themselves charged up with less of the public expense instead of more.

"It is to be hoped that the present Legislature will pass some genuine tax reform measures, even if it does nothing else during the present session."

Contrary to general expectation and prediction, the Tippins bill, so called in the last Legislature, has not been re-introduced in the present House.

It has been stated, time and again, that the prohibitionists of Georgia generally look upon this measure as useless and of doubtful judgment at this time, and a sort of "let-well-enough-alone" sentiment apnears to be spreading among temperance advocates.

The truth of the matter is, prohibitionists seem fairly well satisfied with the status of things in Georgia, and agitation in the present Legislature—or, anyway, in the present session—seems unlikely.

The Chattanooga News recently stated, in an editorial praising Atlanta, that Georgia has the best enforced prohibition laws of any prohibition State in the nation, and far better than Tennessee. This seems to be agreed to all around, and the fact that the Tippins bill has not been re-introduced, notwithstanding the confident predictions that it would be, lends color to the thought that prohibitionists in Georgia incline to agree with The Chattanooga News.

The old expression, "I wouldn't vote for that fellow for dog catcher," has no humiliating significance in Savannah.

There the office of dog catcher is an ancient and honora'le institution, and one to which folks generally look up in indicated awe.

Announcement of the appointment of E. H. Henry as official dog catcher for the city of Savannah, in compliance with the ordinance adopted by City Council at its last meeting, has been made by Mayor R. J. Davant. Bond in the sume of $100 has been furnished by Henry, who begins his official duties at once.

The catcher will be provided with a wagon, in which a crate will be placed to retain the impounded animals. A net will also be provided for use in catching the dogs, and a "pound" will be constructed at police headquarters.

As soon as the equipment can be completed the catcher will start on his rounds.

To Mr. Adams, of Hall, belongs the honor and distinction of starting the House roll call in the way it should go.

His name, like Abou Ben Adhem's leads all the rest, and many a time he has set the fashion in voting, to see himself vindicated in the final round-up.

Adams rarely is absent from his seat in the House. When Clerk Boifeuillet begins the call every morning, Adams is the first to answer "present," unless Mr. Edmondson, of Brooks, beats him to it and moves that he roll call be dispensed with.

The last name to be called is "Mr. Speaker." He generally votes one way or the other, although Speakers many times have inclined to refrain from going on record unless compelled to.

Suffragist Predicts Ballots for Bullets

That all wars since historical times began have taken a toll of 15,000,000,000 lives, was the statement made Sunday by Dr. Thomas E. Green, a lyceum lecturer stopping at the Hotel Ansley.

"Militarism is the burden of the nations," said Dr. Green, "and I look to woman suffrage to lift it from the shoulders of humanity. Equal suffrage is a stepping stone to universal peace, for when it comes the battles of the world will be fought with ballots instead of bullets."

Under the House rules the resolution was laid on the desk until to-morrow.

The suffragists busied themselves early Monday morning. A letter was laid on the desk of each member of the House urging him to grant them the courtesy. It is believed the House will grant the request.

A new charter for Atlanta was filed by the Fulton County delegation in the House Monday. It provides for the present division of ten wards and allows the Mayor to succeed himself for one term.

An invitation from the Chamber of Commerce of Augusta, inviting members of the Legislature to visit Augusta, was adopted.

The House concurred with the Senate in an invitation to Herbert Myrick to address a joint session of the two bodies July 15.

A resolution was adopted inviting Senator Hoke Smith to address the Legislature.

Guarantee Closes Up Its Richmond Branch

RICHMOND, VA., July 7.—The crisis in the affairs of the Guarantee Trust and Banking Company of Atlanta is reflected here in the form of a notice on the door of the company's Richmond branch reading:

The company also had branches in Norfolk, Lynchburg and Roanoke. Complaints indicate that a considerable number of the company's obligations are outstanding in Virginia.

Chief Believes Park Fire Was Incendiary

The burning of the commissionaire stand at Grant Park early Sunday morning has started an investigation by Fire Chief Cummings as to the probable incendiary firing of the building.

The building; said to have been worth $10,000, carried a small amount of insurance. The first floor held a soda fountain and confectionery stand. The upper floor was used as a dancing pavilion.

GEORGIA WOMAN SUFFRAGE BODY FACES ROW

Split in Atlanta League, Whose Members Are Barred, Will Be Brought Before Convention.

Little hope was seen Monday for a settlement of the strife in the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association until the convention here July 9 and 10.

Within their ranks disagreements have arisen which are not so easily disposed of. One side is led by Mrs. M. L. McLendon, president of the Atlanta Civic League and the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association, and the other by Mrs. F. S. Whiteside, whom a number have urged for official recognition.

Parade Cause of Trouble.

The trouble began early this year when advocates of woman suffrage were anticipating the parade in Washington. Mrs. McLendon was president of the Atlanta Civic League and Mrs. Amelia B. Woodall was secretary. The officers of the organization were to be the representatives in Washington, but it was time for re-election.

The election was postponed several times, until Mrs. McLendon and Mrs. Woodall automatically became the official representatives. On their return they were met by the charge from Mrs. Whiteside that they had manipulated postponements that just such things might result.

New League Is Formed.

And the story is that Mrs. Ida B. McClellan, in a speech, precipitated the actual split.

This situation, some time ago, resulted in Mrs. McLendon and her supporters in the Atlanta Civic League forming the Atlanta Equal Suffrage League.

Now, on the eve of the meeting of the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association, the members of the Atlanta Civic League have been denied admission on the grounds that they have not paid up their dues.

Efforts to bring about an amicable adjustment have failed. It is asserted that a rival organization to the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association may be formed.

PURE MILK FOR ONLY 31 POOR BABIES

Hundreds of Others Suffer Because Mothers' Congress Has Not Sufficient Funds.

The Mothers' Congress, which has inaugurated a campaign for pure milk for babies through the hot months adopted the unique method Monday of distributing milk bottles at grocery stores for the collection of pennies and nickels with which to buy milk.

Mrs. John Rowlett, 186 East Pine Street, who heads the congress, said the campaign would be the best ever conducted for the health of Atlanta infants.

So far but 31 of the hundreds of babies of the poor have ben provided for by the fund. Certificates calling for milk throughout the three summer months have been given the mothers of the infants.

"We want every baby in Atlanta to have good, pure milk through the hot spell," Mrs. Rowlett said, "and, if possible, we shall see that this is accomplished."

Sunday, Mrs. Rowlett said, she went to the home of Mrs. W. J. Denson, at 4 Ella Street, to see a baby that had been reported to her. The visit was too late. The baby was dead, and the mother sobbed regret that aid had not come sooner.

Doctors' Opinions About POSTUM

Are best expressed in their own words

Writing under date of May 13, 1913, one physician says:

"From past experience I have become a strong friend of Postum. I am now advising its use over that of coffee altogether, and find that most of those who give Postum a trial become users of it.

"It is however sometimes very hard or impossible to get folks to purchase something when they 'don't know anything about it,' and 'don't want to throw away money on a chance of liking it.'

"Now, it occurs to me these people are not to be criticised for such feelings, but at the same time I am sure many of them would become friends of Postum if they could but have a sample of it placed in their hands.

"If you think this is a good suggestion, and will send me samples from time to time, I will see that they are placed among my patients where they will do the most good, for I believe it is to their interest to drink Postum rather than coffee. Postum is used in our home, but we buy it of our grocer, and we expect to keep right on doing so."

Thousands of coffee drinkers are victims of headache, nervousness, biliousness, heart trouble and indigestion, without knowing the cause.

More and more, physicians are naming coffee as a common cause of these ills. Not every physician, however, finds time to send a sample following his prescription of

INSTANT POSTUM

If your physician recommends that you "stop coffee," or your own distress suggests a change, send your name and address with 2c stamp (for postage), to Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich., and a 5-cup tin of the new food-drink—Instant Postum—will be mailed immediately. Nothing is so convincing as the happy results of personal experience.

The New Fall Suits

There Are Many Interesting Style Points About Them

The women of Atlanta may see now, may select now, the suits that will be fashionable this fall!

They are here in a quantity and variety that amount to a DISPLAY of the new styles.

Rather early, you ask?

No! We would be falling short of what is expected of us did we not show AUTHENTIC styles the moment AUTHENTIC styles are adopted.

So here they are!

And the woman going to the mountains, to the "cool spots" of America will appreciate not only the newness of these suits, but also the somewhat greater weight of them.

But what are the new styles?

Only hints here, we would rather your eyes take in all the interesting points.

Coats are longer, 38 to 42 inches this fall. Cutaways are prominent, perhaps we should say eminent.

They are varied, too—a cutaway, pointed at the back, will have a bit of fullness at the side waist that you are accustomed to associate only with a blouse—novel, distinctive.

Skirts—the tendency is toward "dressy drapes." They are more marked than ever, also more graceful than ever, a sort of evolution of draping. And the slashed skirt is favored; some of the most charming models have skirts slashed four and six inches.

Materials also show the new scheme of things. You will term them "fancy." Even soft-finished cloths show self-stripes; crepons are revived—more, they are given wonderful newness and beauty by smart weavers, who put little blocks and squares and figures in them; Bayadere poplins are as attractive as can be; and velour broadcloths and, for the more tailored suits, men's-wear serges.

And the rich, beautiful colors you may choose from—mahogany, cinnamon, amethyst, prune, navy, of course, a darker Copenhagen than we know and green.

However, these are but the details, your pleasure will come of seeing how these details have been embodied into elegant suits new and out-of-the-ordinary.

There will be no importuning you to buy—we want you to enoy the privilege that is yours, to see the AUTHENTIC styles in fall suits.

Hall Caine's Greatest Story, Now Running in Hearst's Magazine

THE WOMAN THOU GAVEST ME

By reading the synopsis and installment printed here of the most daring serial of the year you can continue it in Hearst's Magazine for July, just out.

FULL SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS

DANIEL O'NEILL, a powerful, self-made man, forces his only daughter, Mary, into a loveless marriage with the impecunious and profligate Lord Raa, so that his ambition to have his descendants the rightful heirs of the one earldom in Ellan may be realized. Mary, a convent-raised young woman, shocked to find her husband a man of sordid, sensual passions, refuses utterly to have anything to do with him until such time as he can prove himself worthy of her love. During the honeymoon abroad Alma Lier, a divorcee who had been expelled from the convent Mary attended in Rome, attaches herself to the party, and makes the "honeymoon trip" a long series of slights and insults for Lady Raa.

At last Lady Raa becomes certain of the infidelity of her husband and his misconduct with Alma Lier. On her return to London Mary encounters her old playfellow, Martin Conrad, who has returned from his triumphant expedition to the Antarctic. Drawn into ever-closer relations with the only man for whose friendship she ever cared, Mary finally awakes to the fact that she is hopelessly in love with Martin. Terrified by this knowledge, and finding herself more and more in love with Martin, she determines to run away from the cause of her distress, and go home.

Mary's home-coming to Castle Raa is a sad affair. Her husband fills the tumble-down old mansion with filth his fast friends from London, including Alma Lier, who assumes control of the household. Ultimately the illness of her father offers Mary excuse for escape from the intolerable environment. But before visiting her old home Mary appeals in turn to her Bishop and to her father's lawyer, only to be told that neither Church nor State can offer any relief from her false position. She returns next day to Castle Raa to find that Martin is arriving for a farewell visit, and that by Alma Lier's deceitful scheming the whole house party has gone off for a few days' cruise.

During her three days alone with her lover Mary fights a grim battle with temptation, only to find on the last night that her faith in renunciation and the laws of the Church is a fragile thing compared with her overwhelming love for this pure-hearted man. With Martin's passionate words, "You are my real wife. I am your real husband," ringing in her brain she forgets everything else, and with strong steps walks across the corridor to Martin's bedroom. This is the action which Martin has advised as being the only course open to them which is sure to bring the one result they are determined to attain—Mary's divorce from Lord Raa.

Mary determines, after the departure of Martin Conrad, to hide herself in London. She is driven by fear of Lord Raa's discovery of her unfaithfulness to him; she is equally afraid of the venomous tongue of Alma Lier. She is no sooner settled in a cheap little boarding house in London than a great hue and cry is raised by her father. Of all persons, it is Mildred, that one truest friend of her convent days, who ferrets her out; but for Mary's sake she breaks a vow and refuses to give her up. Then comes the report of the loss of Martin's ship in the Antarctic. Desperate with grief and fearful for the unborn child which she hopes shall reconcile her to her empty life and typify her great love for Martin, she flees from Mildred to a still more obscure corner of London.

MY NEW quarters were in the poorer district which stands at the back of Bayswater.

The street was a cul-de-sac (of some ten small houses on either side), which was blocked up at the farther end by the high wall of a factory for the "humanization" of milk, and opened out of a busy thoroughfare of inferior shops like a gulley way off a noisy coast. My home in this street was in number one.

My room, which was of fair size, was on the first floor and had two windows to the street, with yellow holland blinds and white muslin curtains.

The furniture consisted of a large bed, a horse hair sofa, three cane-bottomed chairs, a chest of drawers (which stood between the windows), and a mirror over the mantelpiece, which had pink paper, cut into fanciful patterns, over the gilt frame, to keep off the flies.

The floor was covered with linoleum, but there were two strips of carpet, one before the fire and the other by the bed; the walls were papered by a bright red paper representing peonies in bloom; and there were three pictures—a portrait of a Welsh preacher, an engraving entitled "Feed My Sheep" (showing Jesus carrying a lamb), and a memorial card of some member of the family of the house, in the form of a tomb with a weeping angel on either side.

I paid five shillings a week for my room, and, as this included the use of kettle, cooking utensils and crockery, I found to my great delight at the end of the first week that providing for myself (tea, bread and butter and eggs being my principal food) I had spent only ten shillings altogether, which, according to my present needs, left me enough for my time of waiting and several weeks beyond it.

Every morning I went out with a little hand bag to buy my provisions in the front street, and every afternoon I took a walk in the better part of Bayswater and even into the park (Hyde Park), which was not far off, but never near to Piccadilly, or so far east as Bloomsbury, lest I should meet Sister Mildred or be recognized by the old boarders.

Finding it necessary to account for myself, just as at the boarding house, I had adhered to my former name, but said I was the widow of a commander lately lost at sea, which was as near to the truth as I dare venture.

She Tells of Her Coming Motherhood.

I had also made no disguise of the fact that I was expecting a child, a circumstance which secured me much sympathy from the womanly women who were now my neighbors.

They were all worthy women, generally the wives of men working in the milk factory; and therefore the life of our street was very regular.

At five in the morning you heard the halting step of the old "knocker up" who went up and down the street tapping at the bedroom windows with a long pole like a fishing rod. A little before six you heard the clashing of many front doors and the echoing footsteps of the men going to their work. At half-past seven you heard the whoop of the milkman and the rattling of his cans. At half-past eight you heard the little feet of the children, like the pattering of rain, going off to the Board School round the corner. And a little after four in the afternoon you heard the wild cries of the entire juvenile community let loose from lessons, the boys running iron hoops and the girls skipping rope.

After that, our street hummed like a beehive, with the women, washed and combed, standing knitting at their open doors or exchanging confidences across the areas until darkness fell, and each of the mothers called her children in to bed, as an old hen in the farmyard clucks up her chickens.

These good creatures were very kind to me. Having satisfied themselves from observation to my habits that I was "respectable," they called me "our lady," and I could not help hearing that I was a "nice young things" though it was a little against me that I did not go to church or chapel, and had confessed to being a Catholic—for several of our families (including that of my landlady) were members of the Welsh Zion Chapel far away.

Such was the life of the little human cage to which I had confined myself, but I had an inner life that was all my own and very sweet to me.

Getting Ready for The Newcomer.

During the long hours of every day in which I was alone I occupied myself in the making of clothes for my baby—buying linen and flannel and worsted, and borrowing patterns from my Welsh landlady.

This stimulated my tenderness toward the child that was to come, for the heart of a young mother is almost infantile, and I hardly know whether to laugh or cry when I think of the childish things I did and thought and said to myself in those first days when I was alone in my room in that back street in Bayswater.

Thus long before the baby was born I had christened her. At first I wished to call her Mary, not because I cared for that name myself, but because Martin had said it was the most beautiful in the world. In the end, however, I called her Isabel Mary (because Isabel was my mother's name, and she had been a far better woman than I was), and as I finished my baby's garments one by one I used to put them away in their drawer, saying to myself, "That's Isabel Mary's binder," or "Isabel Mary's christening-robe," as the case might be.

I dare say it was all very foolish. There are tears in my eyes when I think of it now, but there were none then, for, though there were moments when, thinking of Martin, I felt as if life were forever blank and bare, I was almost happy in my poor surroundings, and if it were a cage I had fixed myself in, there was always a bird singing inside of it—the bird that sang in my own bosom.

"When Isabel Mary comes, everything will be all right," I used to think.

This went on for many weeks, and I think it might have gone on until my time was full but for something which, occurring under my eyes, made me tremble with the fear that the life I was living and the hope I was cherishing were really very wrong and selfish.

Of my landlady, Mrs. Williams, I saw very little. She was a rather hard but no doubt heavily laden woman, who had "to do" for a swarm of children, besides two young men lodgers who lived in the kitchen and slept in the room behind mine. Her husband was a quiet man (a carter at the dairy), whom I never saw at all except on the staircase at 10 o'clock at night, when, after winding the tall clock on the landing, he went upstairs to bed in his stocking feet.

Emmerjane, the Family Drudge.

But the outstanding member of the family for me was a shock-headed girl of 14 called Emmerjane, which was a running version of Emma Jane.

I understand that Emmerjane was the illegitimate daughter of Mrs. Williams' dead sister, and that she had been born in Carnarvon, which still shimmered in her memory in purple and gold.

Emmerjane was the drudge of the family, and I first saw her in the street at dusk, mothering a brood of her little cousins.

Afterward she became my drudge also—washing my floor, bringing up my coal and cleaning my grate for sixpence a week, and giving me a great deal of information about my neighbors for nothing.

Thus she told me, speaking broad cockney with a Welsh accent, that the people opposite were named Wagstaffe and that the creaking noise I heard was that of a mangle, which Mrs. Wagstaffe had to keep because her husband was a drunkard.

But the greatest interest of this weird little woman, who had a premature knowledge of things a child ought not to know, was in a house half way down the street on the other side, where steam was always coming from the open door to the front kitchen.

The people who lived there were named Jones. Mrs. Jones "washed" and had a bed-ridden old mother (with two shillings from the parish) and a daughter named Maggie.

Maggie Jones, who was eighteen, and very pretty, used to work in the dairy, but the foreman had taken "advantage of her," and she had just had a baby.

This foreman was named Owen Owens, and he lived at the last number on our side, where two unmarried sisters "kept house" for him and sat in the "singing seat" at Zion.

Maggie thought it was the sisters' fault that Owen Owens did not marry her, so she conceived a great scheme for "besting" them, and this was the tragedy which, through Emmerjane's quick little eyes and her Cockney Welsh tongue, came to me in instalments day by day.

When her baby was a month old Maggie dressed it up "fine" and took it to the photographer's for its "card di visit." The photographs were a long time coming, but when they came they were "heavenly lovely" and Maggie "cried to look at them."

Then she put one in an envelope and addressed it to Owen Owens, and though it had only to cross the street she went out after dark to a pillar-box a long way off lest anybody should see her posting it.

Next day she said: "He'll have it now, for he always comes home to dinner. He'll take it up to his bedroom, look you, and stand it on the washboard, and if either of those sisters touch it he'll give them what's what."

After that she waited anxiously for an acknowledgment and every time the postman passed down our street her pretty pale face would be at the door, saying, "Anything for me to-day?" or "Are you sure there's nothing for me, postman?"

Home Cooking

By MAY IRWIN.

THAT the fastidious should look with distrust, if not disgust, upon the hotel or restaurant made hash or ragout, or stew, or minced dish, is quite within my understanding and sympathy. But it is quite different in the well regulated home.

My husband and sons, who are rather spoiled as far as the things of the table are concerned, enjoy beef stews and roast beef hash better than the original roast. Fricassee chicken, when properly prepared, is much better than roast chicken. Spaghetti, when warmed over, is twenty times better than when first cooked. How seldom we eat a really well cooked dish of spaghetti. That is because it is not thoroughly cooked.

Suppose it is Tuesday—ironing day. If there is in your pantry or ice box the skeleton of last night's roast chicken, you are fortunate. From the shreds of meat here and there sticking to the bones you can make an excellent fricassee, or that dish which is a favorite in my household.

Mince the bits of cold chicken together. Chop a small green pepper, a small onion, four mushrooms, a bit of parsley and one cold potato together until very fine. Have a frying pan ready with tablespoonful of hot brown butter, and put the mixture in and stir it well.

Cover it for a few moments and let it brown on one side, as hashed brown potatoes are done. Put on a hot platter and garnish with tomato sauce. This sauce is made by cooking two or three tomatoes for half an hour; strain and add a tablespoonful of butter, salt, pepper and flour enough to thicken a little.

Perhaps you are inclined to toss away three or four tomatoes that are soft, but still good. Their ripeness is no drawback for the favorite breakfast dish of mine, for which I give you the recipe.

Cut a slice from the top of each tomato. Remove enough of the pulp to enable you to drop into each tomato a bit of butter the size of your thumb nail and a raw egg. Pin with a toothpick a strip of raw bacon around each tomato. Sprinkle a little salt and pepper over the top and put into a very hot oven until the eggs are set. This will be from five to eight minutes.

HER MINISTRATIONS

THE girl with the silver vanity case tucked a dainty handkerchief into her left glove and sighed.

"It's perfectly awful," she said, "how many persons have dreadful things happen to them these days! Why, all I do is to go to see my poor suffering friends in the hospitals!"

"Who's in the hospital besides Carrie?" asked the girl with the fire-red hat. "How's her appendicitis, anyhow? I sent some carnations, but I've been too busy——"

"Poor Carrie is recovering all right," said the girl with the silver vanity bag. "The house doctor says it is quite remarkable, in view of the seriousness of her case. I wish you could see him, Emma, when he is talking seriously like that. He draws his eyebrows together in a straight line like—oh, who was the actor who always did that? Never mind. Dr. Bennett is perfectly handsome and holds himself like a military man, and in those white linen suits—why on earth don't all doctors dress like that, I'd like to know?

"He can't be a day over 28, and if you could see how crazy the nurses are over him! I think it is perfectly ridiculous of them!

Sympathetic.

"I couldn't help expressing my sympathy one day when we were talking in the hall. I happened to be leaving just as he was through seeing Carrie. 'I should think,' I told him, 'you would get so weary of all this chasing after you, Dr. Bennett!' Why, that corridor nurse wouldn't let me get a word in with you while she was in the room! I should think she'd realize that a doctor would like something more entertaining once in a while than chatter about bandages and temperatures and diet! He quite flushed with gratitude and looked me in the eyes and said I had perfectly wonderful divination, and it was surprising how he lived through it all!

"The only trouble with knowing Dr. Bennett is that every time I go there somebody always sends for him or he has to go to the operating room. The poor man never has any time for a cozy chat."

"Is Carrie——"

"Oh, Carrie's all right," said the girl with the vanity bag. "If she'd only exercise a little self-control and not demand all the doctor's attention whenever he's in the room, she would get on better. Sick people are so selfish, don't you think? Dr. Bennett——"

"You said someone else was sick. Who?"

"Oh, yes!" said the girl with the vanity bag. "My cousin Ralph is at another hospital with a broken leg, and though his family and ours aren't on speaking terms I felt that in a case of illness I mustn't let prejudice stand 'in the way, so, of course, I ran in to cheer up poor Ralph. I was very careful to find out from the surgeon who set his leg whether it would be bad for Ralph to see me. Dr. Bitts is one of the most noted surgeons in the country. Terribly young for that, too—not more than 35. He has one of those attractive, stern faces, with straight mouth, and looks as though he shaves twice a day, and eyes like razors.

She Was Younger.

"When you talk to him he listens intently and then he has the most disconcerting way of coming to with a jerk and saying: 'Yes, yes; quite so,' and darting off somewhere. I think the poor dear man is worn out by his severe work. I tried to tell him the other day how a sensitive, appreciative woman couldn't help sympathizing with his hardships. He was very brave—he said they weren't hardships."

"Is your Cousin Ralph's leg——"

"Oh, that's mending all right," said the girl with the vanity bag. "I don't wonder that my family can't stand Ralph's father, if he is anything like Ralph—always thinking of himself. He actually thought I was going to sit and read to him—no consideration at all for Dr. Bitts, who might like a little cheering conversation!"

"You said several——"

"Well, one of mother's friends and an aunt of father's are in the same hospital with typhoid and an operation, and, of course, I am younger than mother, so I do the calling. I told mother quite firmly when she insisted that it was not necessary for me to go every day that I hoped I knew my duty to the sick and suffering. Aunt Lou has a nephew by marriage who is so devoted to her, and he goes to see her frequently. He has the loveliest car, and as I happened to be leaving once when he did he took me home. I did some shopping first, because it was such a good chance to be carried around.

"I wish you could have seen that car. Something must have happened to it, because now he always comes on the street car. It wasn't so bad, because Mrs. Himmers' son—the friend with the operation—comes in his car and usually I am going just when he goes. But, oh, if you could see Dr. Bennett's eyes!"

"I really ought to look in on poor Carrie," mused the girl with the fire red hat. "What time——"

"Come to think of it," objected the girl with the silver vanity case, "the nurse said that Carrie mustn't have too much company—that it made her fever rise! So I guess I'd wait, if I were you."

The First Admiral.

A story sometimes told to ridicule the dialect of Pudsey is that of a traveler who astonished his friend by telling him that the children in Pudsey were the most intelligent children in the world.

"Why, what do they know?" asked his friend.

"They know who was the first naval admiral who ever lived," the traveler replied.

"Not they. Here, can you prove it?"

"Yes. If you wish, we will go to Pudsey and I will ask any child you like that particular question."

The friend agreed.

As the traveler and his friend went through Pudsey they saw a boy about ten years old playing in the street. The traveler went to him and asked:

"Now, my boy, do you know who was the first naval admiral?"

"No-a," bluntly replied the lad.

"There," said the traveler, turning to his friend, "didn't I tell you he would know?"

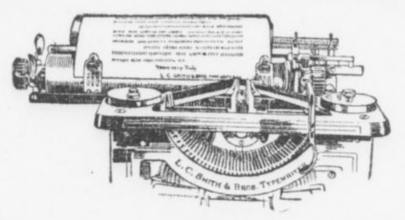
Conspire Against Domestic Harmony
The ills of women seem to conspire against domestic harmony. No husband can understand why a woman should be continually ailing, fretful, nervous and despondent, and he gets out of all patience with her. In nine cases out of ten some organic derangement is the cause of this condition and is easily overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a woman's remedy for woman's ills which has cured more severe cases of this kind than any other remedy we know.



Paper Fingers That Save Time
How many times do typewriter operators come nearly to the bottom of the paper and have to put in another sheet to write just one more line?
The L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter
is equipped with paper fingers that hold the paper so well that it is possible to write on the extreme edge of the paper or card.
These paper fingers, if the operator forgets to push them back into place after writing a card or envelope, move along to the proper place with the advancement of the carriage in either direction.
This is one of the many reasons why the L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter enables the operator to produce more and better work than on any other writing machine ever made.

JARVIS' ESCAPE IN THE TRUNK IS HALTED BY THE HOTEL DETECTIVE

She smiled and snapped the catch, and then stood gazing at it for several moments before she went to the door and admitted the porter with his small but deadly truck. He was a muscular young man with the intelligent expression of an elderly and amiable cow, the true type of trunk-destroyer, and the Princess shivered when she saw him.

"Have the other trunks gone?" she asked.

"Yes'm—last night," he growled, making swiftly for his prey. He started to tilt it in such a manner that our hardy and valiant knight, Warren of Jarvis, would have been standing on his head, contrary to the canons of chivalry. The Princess hastily intervened.

"This end up—please be sure and have it marked that way and be sure to mark it 'Wanted on Voyage.'"

"Yes'm," grunted Caliban. He rocked the trunk a little, thrust the lip of the truck under it and jerked it forward—blam!

The Princess winced and shuddered. "And please—please—handle it very gently."

"Yes'm."

He had just begun to trundle the trunk and the knight toward the door when the exit was completely blocked by the cubical form of the house detective. The porter stopped and carelessly pitched his burden forward—blam!

The Broken Lock.

"Excuse me, madam," said the detective, with a kind of dogged hardness. "I don't want to bother you again, but that man—he killed a man up the hall—has got clean away unless he—he——"

"Well?" said the Princess coldly.

"Well, would you mind if—if I sort of took a look around? You're sure you were here all the time?"

"Of course," replied Dona Maria quietly. "But my maid will be up presently and you will be welcome to go through these rooms."

His attention was attracted to the trunk by a third "blam!" as the porter prepared to proceed, and he obligingly stepped inside out of the way. As he did so his eyes fell on the broken door lock.

"How'd that lock get broken?" His voice rang out suddenly like a pistol shot and he looked up quickly at the Princess. She inclined her head as if to assure herself that it really was broken, which was overacting the part.

"I think you should call the clerk's attention to it," she said calmly. "It was broken when I came here."

"When—may I ask did you come here?"

"Certainly. Yesterday afternoon."

"Oh, I see, I beg your pardon," he said slowly, and backed out. He did not know why, but he did not entirely believe the frank and self-possessed young woman. He walked down to a turn of the corridor, resolving to keep a close eye on the apartment until it was vacated. In this walk he again passed the trunk, but it suggested nothing. An escape in a trunk has become so common in fact and in fiction that no up-to-date detective believes any one would try it again. So it is still one of the best means, just as, from the other angle, it is a fact that occasionally in spite of comic artists and the like, some one still buys a gold brick.

Thus, in a manner unheroic, by freight elevator and van with divers bumps and bruises and swear words, the good knight Warren of Jarvis set forth to the Spanish Main and the storied hills of Aragon.

Pasting labels on trunks, like pressing the elevator button in the average office building, is more an act in evidence of good faith than in expectation of results. Having up to this time traveled only with a trunk and never in one, Warren Jarvis did not realize this until fairly embarked on his rough passage from the Hotel Vanderbilt to the promenade deck suite on the Lusitania.

For days afterward the memory of that two-mile voyage rode him like a nightmare. So did the divers aches, wrenches and bruises that he acquired by the way. And, finally, when the journey was over and he could have time to decide whether he was one large pain or had been broken up into several thousand small agonies, the trunk was deposited in the parlor of the Princess' suite with the label "This side up," carefully pressed against the carpet.

Dona Maria, anxious for the welfare of her champion, arrived at the stateroom just a few moments later. But she was haunted by an attentive steward, who in her abstraction she neglected to fee, and who declined to end his solicitous attentions until the oversight should be remedied.

While the Princess fidgeted and longed for him to get out he insisted on explaining everything connected with the suite. He opened the door that led onto the deck and pointed out the raised ledge as a trap for the unwary landsman's foot. He opened a door that led into a companionway. He showed her the clothes-pressers and all the while Dona Maria could not take her eyes from the top of the trunk, which displayed no label. Following her glance he offered to place the trunk for her.

"You needn't bother about it now, steward," she interposed quickly as he laid his hands on it. Then as an afterthought: "You might turn it right side up."

He Goes at Last.

"Oh, I'm sorry," he apologized as he noticed the labels. "I hope the contents are not upset."

"I hope not!" agreed Dona Maria, fervently.

"Anything more, madame?"

"Not now, thank you, steward," said Dona Maria nervously. "How soon do we sail?"

"Very soon now," he answered, as a deep raucous voice was heard bellowing afar. "They're calling visitors ashore now, madame."

And at last he was gone. But there was still Nita, the maid, who had doffed her hat and coat and was fussing about the bags.

"Your Highness has the keys to the trunks?" she suggested briskly.

"Hm—yes. You—you may leave the trunk as it is, Nita, until later. Go to your room now and get settled. I'll call you when I want you."

"Yes, Your Highness." But at the door of her room, she paused in some embarrassment. The Princess frowned impatiently.

"Will Your Highness pardon me," said Nita, uncomfortably, "if I am mistaken in thinking I recognize Senor the Duke, your exalted cousin, among the passengers——?"

"My cousin!" exclaimed Dona Maria, with a fine assumption of surprise. "Impossible! He is at Madrid."

Nita inclined her head in that extremely polite unbelief possible to the finished servant. "Yes, Your Highness," she agreed, demurely, and withdrew.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

The scene of the story is laid in the Vanderlip Hotel, New York City. The Princess Maria Theresa of Segura, a beautiful Spanish woman, is suddenly awakened in her suite by the sound of pistol shots. She hears a man running down the hall. He crashes against her door, breaking the lock, and enters. She sees he is a tall, good-looking young man, dressed in evening clothes. He is carrying a revolver in his right hand, and blood is dripping from a wound in his left. He begs the Princess to hide him. She, moved by some indescribable impulse, decides that she will. She directs him to an inner room, and a few minutes later, when the hotel detective knocks on the door, she tells him she is all right and sends him away. The young man, who is Warren Jarvis, of Kentucky, comes out of his hiding place, and the Princess, for the first time, notices his wound. She is moved to sympathy and showers him with questions as to what has occurred. Jarvis tells her about a Kentucky feud between his family and another named Markham. He says he left Kentucky to avoid the feudists, but encountered one of them in the hotel, which explains the shots. The Princess declares she will help him, and then asks the stranger question, "Are you afraid of ghosts?" Jarvis laughs, but grows solemn when the Princess tells him she has dangerous work for him to do. She makes him swear allegiance, and creates him her "vassal." Then she tells him to get her trunk, which is going to be shipped to a steamship on which she sails to Spain the following day. First Jarvis tells her to telephone to his servant, Rusty Snow, a negro. The servant is instructed to procure passage for himself and Jarvis in the ship. Jarvis then prepares to get into the trunk, but first begins to question the Princess about herself.

Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER XLIV.

As soon as Mildred had ordered Steve to bring the big car she hurried to her room and hastily changed her clothes, putting on the khaki suit she wore when fishing. She was very much excited. But before leaving the room she glanced, womanlike, in her mirror. Then, hardly knowing what she was doing, she picked up a little handbag such as women take when they go shopping, containing a handkerchief, a powder rag, a small mirror and a small purse. She rushed on the porch and called Elmer.

"Elmer," she said hurriedly. "I'm going to find Gordon. I can't stand the suspense any longer. Come if you want to; if you don't, I'm going alone."

"Of course, I'm going, too," exclaimed the boy. "That's just like a girl. Didn't I propose the scheme?"

"Well, hurry now, and get my rifle and revolver," cried Mildred.

"That little revolver of yours is no good," remarked Elmer. "You can take it if you want to; I'm going to get dad's big one." And off he went.

In a few minutes Steve appeared with the car and Mildred and Elmer climbed in. Mildred with her handbag and revolver and Elmer with his father's six-shooter.

"Is you all gwine shootin', Miss Mildred?" asked Steve.

"We are going after Mr. Gordon, Steve," replied Mildred, "so hurry, please."

"Lordomassy!" exclaimed the colored boy. He turned the car quickly and they were soon bowling along the main road.

A Serious Affair.

A girl and two boys going in a motor car on a hunt for supposed desperadoes would have been a most ludicrous affair except for the very serious way the three persons involved in the undertaking viewed it. A professional layer of odds, knowing the circumstances, would have wagered anything up to 100 to 1 that the expedition would end in a fizzle, if, indeed, the rescuers did not get themselves in serious trouble. However that might be, the car rolled bravely on and reached the point where the road crossed Pew Creek, inside of half an hour. Mildred had given her instructions to Steve, and as soon as the car stopped she and Elmer started off due west, Elmer leading the way and she following closely, carrying the toy revolver in one hand and the little handbag in the other.

There are few things a woman will not risk for the man she loves. The proper thing for Mildred to have done, of course, was to have gathered all the men at the mansion and sent them on the hunt for Gordon. But she didn't, and that, of course, ends all argument. If Mildred had only realized it, she and Elmer were almost as helpless as the babes in the woods. Unlooked-for things happen, however, and, with the chances at least 100 to 1 against her, an unlooked-for thing happened in this case.

They had not traveled far before Elmer found unmistakable signs that a horse had traveled in the direction they were going, and in certain places they were able to follow the hoof-prints.

Moved More Slowly.

"Keep careful track of the distance we travel," whispered Mildred. "You know Gordon said he was three miles due west from the bridge."

When they had covered what they considered about two and a half miles they moved more slowly and more cautiously, and although both were now trembling with excitement (and perhaps fear), they kept bravely on. At last they came to a point where the ground rose sharply for a hundred yards or so. Mildred grasped Elmer by the shoulder and whispered:

"We are near the place, Elmer. We must be very careful and keep under cover."

They crept along behind trees and at length came to the top of the rise. Below them they saw smoke issuing from a clump of trees.

"He's down there," said Mildred in an excited whisper. "I'm sure of it. Oh, what shall we do?"

"Sneak around and maybe we can see something," replied Elmer, hoarsely. His eyes glistened and he was pale, but game.

They circled around cautiously, keeping close together. Suddenly Elmer stopped and dropped to the ground. Mildred, her heart beating wildly, sank behind him.

"I see him, I see him," exclaimed the lad excitedly. He pointed and Mildred saw, not more than 60 yards away, a man seated upon a tree reading a newspaper. It was Gordon Kelly. She would have known him as far as her eyes could reach. She felt as if she were on the point of screaming, or crying, or fainting—she knew not what. She hastily opened the handbag and reached for her handkerchief—a woman's weapon, a woman's protector.

"Keep Quiet!"

"Keep quiet!" hissed Elmer. "There's another man there and he'll see us."

Mildred looked again and saw a man looking on the ground fifteen or twenty feet in front of Gordon.

"What shall we do; what shall we do?" was all she could whisper.

There was a long silence. Finally Elmer said:

"Gee, if I only had a mirror I could sneak down behind that bush and attract his attention."

"Why, I have a little mirror," exclaimed Mildred, reaching for her handbag again. She produced the article and handed it to the boy.

"You crawl behind that tree and wait there," whispered Elmer. A moment later he began worming his way toward the bush he had indicated. This brought him to within less than 150 feet of where Gordon was sitting. Carefully getting his range, he flashed a streak of sunlight across the shaded page of Gordon's newspaper and repeated the operation immediately.

Gordon cautiously glanced over his shoulder. He saw little Elmer peering from behind a bush and beyond the lad he saw a white handkerchief flutter. Mildred could not resist the temptation to signal. Gordon waved an answering sign and then arose. He walked to the log cabin, followed by his armed guard. He took a baseball, slit the seam with his knife; then, saying to his guard, "I want to do a little figuring," took a little book of cigarette papers belonging to the youngest of the mountaineers and wrote these words:

"If you have a gun, place it 20 feet beyond where this ball lands; if not, bring help noon to-morrow."

Guard Did Not Call.

He folded the tissue paper three times longways and once shortways, tucked it into the ripped seam of the baseball with his knife, leaving the edge sticking out (the guard was paying no particular attention to him) and then announced that he guessed he would take a little exercise.

This time the guard did not call a companion, as was the custom when Gordon practiced with bat and ball. The idea of two guards was doubtless originally suggested by the dangerous-looking baseball bat that Gordon swung with such ease. He had become such a cheerful and inoffensive captive, however, that on this occasion his guard decided not to trouble any of his companions, who were at that time on the shady side of the cabin, discussing a letter that had been received that morning from Forrest Cain.

Going out in the open, followed by his guard, pistol in hand, Gordon hit several high flies, catching the ball when it came down. Then, as if inadvertently, he drove it in such a manner that it fell 200 feet away from him and beyond a little clump of bushes.

"What do you think of that?" he exclaimed to his guard. "I'm losing my batting eye, I guess. Let's get a drink of water and then we'll go and get that ball. It cost $1.25."

It took Gordon fifteen minutes to get his drink of water and fuss around the cabin before he started after the ball, with his guard following closely. He had carefully marked the spot where it fell, and when he reached it his eyes beamed, for twenty feet beyond was what he wanted far more than he wanted the ball. Picking up the white object, he walked straight ahead and suddenly sat down facing his guard.

"Sit down and make yourself comfortable," he said. But the guard remained standing.

"By the looks of the sky, I'll bet you we have rain before to-morrow morning," he observed, reaching behind him.

"Turn Around and Walk."

The guard cast his eyes upward and when he lowered them again a six-shooter in the hand of his captor was pointing directly at his heart.

"Drop that gun! Drop it!" said Gordon, in a low, intense tone.

The guard hesitated the fraction of a second and then let the weapon fall to the ground.

"Turn around and walk two steps ahead," commanded Gordon, jumping to his feet and seizing the guard's six-shooter when his command was obeyed.

The rest was merely routine work, as it were.

"On the run, now," ordered Gordon, pointing to the east. "Back to the bridge; be quick about it."

The ex-guard started off, and with Gordon traversed 50 feet before Mildred and Elmer jumped from behind a tree.

"Won't you wait for me, Gordon?" said Mildred. An instant later they were in each other's arms.

"You will have to do all the hugging, Honeybunch," whispered Gordon. "I've got these two six-shooters in my hands, but I'll make up for it as soon as I get a chance. You are the bravest girl in the world. Now, come, dear, we are not out of the woods yet. Good work, Elmer."

Gordon turned over one of his revolvers to Elmer and the procession started, the mountaineer leading the way, followed by Gordon, holding a six-shooter in one hand and Mildred's hand in the other, and Elmer bringing up the rear. Arriving at the bridge where Steve was waiting with the car, Gordon said to his prisoner:

"Go back to your crowd and tell them I'll give them 24 hours to leave this mountain country, and if any of you come back, I'll make you wish you hadn't."

"That other man's comin' up to-morrer," said the mountaineer. They were the first words Gordon had ever heard him utter.

"Here's Your Gun."

"What man?" he demanded.

"That man that's been a-payin' us money."

"Is that so?" mused Gordon. "In that case, you can tell your men to hold on to him until they hear from me. I'll settle with that fellow when I get around to it. Tell your men I won't bother them as long as they hold on to him. Now, you can go back. Here's your gun, but I'll just take the cartridges out of it first. Now, then, Elmer, climb in the front seat. Come, Mildred. Go ahead, Steve."

"Gordon," said Mildred, as soon as the car started, "you need a haircut badly."

It was dark when they reached the mansion, where the appearance of the owner created an immense sensation.

"Mildred, dear," said Gordon, drawing her to one side, "I want you to spend the evening here. There's something I want particularly to say to you. We can have Mrs. Ward for a chaperone," he added, with a smile.

"Not in these clothes, Gordon," replied Mildred. "If you will let Steve drive us home, Elmer and I will both be back in an hour."

When Mildred and the lad returned Gordon, too, had had a change of clothes.

"Who cut your hair?" laughed Mildred.

"Oh, we have always had a barber here," replied Gordon, with a smile.

They sat down to dinner, after which Gordon told Elmer to go and play billiards and then led Mildred into the room he called his office, and which Mildred called his lazy room. The particular something he wanted to tell her required more than half an hour and considerable eloquence to tell. Mildred shook her head at frequent intervals, but finally gave in and murmured, "Yes." Arising, she went to the telephone on Gordon's desk and gave an order. While she was waiting for connections Gordon, happy as a lark, seated himself at the piano, said "Second verse," and sang:

We will build a bower of grasses,
Call it Castle Lullaby;
Drink the south wind as it passes,
Lips o' Poppy—you and I!
Youth will be a friend to cheer us,
Fill our veins with purple wine,
Stand forever watching near us,
Lips o' Poppy, maid of mine!
Pines shall lull us with their moaning;
Golden bees in golden quest
Songs of sweet desire intoning
To the white flower of your breast!
Lips o' Poppy, girl of rapture,
Mine shall be enchantment's power,
Substance of my dreams to capture
In the heart of that white flower!
Lips o' Poppy—eyes entrancing—
Maid of earth or maid of air!
We will pass the years a-dancing
Down the realm of Queen Don't Care.
Come! the purple shades are falling!
Come! it is the Queen's command!
Hark! the nightingales are calling
To the Never Hurry Land!

"That's very nice," said Mildred, "but suppose dad—— Oh, here he is now. That you, dad?—— Oh, fine! Ah—— I am with Mr. Kelly, and—er—Mr. Kelly wants to speak to you a minute. Oh, now, dad, do be nice—— Does he want to talk business? Ha, ha! Yes, I believe he wants to talk business. All right; hold the wire." Mildred clapped her hand over the mouthpiece and whispered excitedly: "Dad was awfully angry at first and wouldn't speak to you, but he suddenly changed his mind. Now, go ahead; don't be afraid."

He Asks for Mildred.

Gordon took up the receiver and this conversation followed:

"Hello, Mr. Deery! I want to ask——"

"What will you take for your property—spot cash?" interrupted Deery.

"I don't want to sell, Mr. Deery."

"Oh, come, come; I'll give you $20,000 for it—cash, mind you."

"I couldn't think of it, Mr. Deery."

"Well, what's it worth, then? Come, you must have a figure."

"Really, Mr. Deery, I don't want to sell at any price, but if you ask me, the property is worth all of $2,000,000."

"Two million dollars!" sputtered Deery. "Am I talking to a crazy man? Ask my daughter to come to the phone, please."

"Just a minute, Mr. Deery. I want to say something very seriously. Please listen. I want to ask your permission to marry your daughter. We love each other and——"

"Now I know you're crazy," Deery broke in. "Call my daughter, please."

"But, Mr. Deery——"

"Not another word. I wish to speak to my daughter."

Mildred took the receiver from Gordon's hand.

"Hello, dad; what's wrong?"

"Come home at once, Mildred."

"Now, dad," pleaded Mildred, "please don't be so angry. Gordon and I——"

"I will not hear another word; I insist that you come home at once."

"Dad, if you're going to act that way, you'll regret it. Please tell mother I wish to speak to her."

"Your mother is not at home and won't be home for an hour. Mildred, I tell you for the last time, come home immediately or I'll come up there and get you."

Benefited Many Who Had Lung Trouble

Those who suffer from Lung Trouble are generally troubled with night sweats, fever, loss of strength and little or no appetite. Eckman's Alterative is a medicine which has been most successful in stopping night sweats, reducing fever and promoting appetite, and many who have used it declare it saved their lives. Investigate what it did in this case:

"Dear Sir: For four years I was troubled with cough, which gradually became worse. I had night sweats and pains in my chest. I was losing my appetite and had become so thin and weak I could not attend to my household duties. A physician pronounced my disease Consumption. Not being satisfied, I was examined by the physicians of the Polyclinic Hospital. They also confirmed my trouble, and I was ordered away for treatment. My nephew would not allow me to go until I had tried Eckman's Alterative. Before I had taken the medicine three weeks, I had marked relief, night sweats ceased, pain in the breast relieved, cough became loose and easy, fever left me, and I commenced getting well. My health became normal. I am in excellent health now and have been for twelve years. I strongly recommend it." (Signed)

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

MOST DECIDEDLY NOT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-one, and a man two years my senior has made an appointment with me and at the same time with my friend. Would it be fitting for me to keep it, and also, is it proper for him to make the appointment for the same time and place? G. M. T. I.

He is flirting with you, I am sure, and if "by appointment" you mean to meet on some street corner you owe it to yourself to refuse to meet him though he were alone. Ask him to come to your home for you; his reply will give you some insight into his character.

BY BECOMING A MAN.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a boy of twenty, and in love with a girl two years younger than myself. I am deeply in love with the girl, and she doesn't care for me. How can I make her love me? Another boy loves her, but she doesn't love him. T. C.

You rightly term yourself a boy, since you are only twenty. I suggest unfailing courtesy, kindness, appreciation and devotion, but not so much that your attentions distract your head and heart from the more serious and timely task of developing yourself into a manly man.

Rather Slow.

RACE MIGHTY TIGHT; LOCAL CLUB IN HUNT

If Crackers Can Keep Playing As They Did Last Week They Will Cop Pennant.

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE Southern League race is a rip-snorter. Mobile, Montgomery, Chattanooga and Atlanta are within .041 of each other. Birmingham, Memphis and Nashville are far from out of the race. It's getting better every minute.

The Crackers have the chance of their career to make a showing now. Two of the next three clubs they face on home ground are ahead of them. If they can hammer the Turtles to pieces, get a few games back that the Gulls owe them and plaster something on Montgomery they will be right up in the race again.

They have it in them, too.

You can't lose confidence in a team that pulls games out of the fire the way the Crackers were yanking them last week. Saturday's game, for instance, was as poor from a fielding viewpoint as any man would care to witness, but the locals had the old kick that was needed to get them out of danger. They saved two games Friday that appeared totally lost. They won all the way Thursday. Both of the games with Mobile were won after they had been lost. And altogether, the Crackers are showing real recuperative power.

If the players will pull together, forget all the inside politics and work exclusively for Atlanta and for the pennant there will be nothing to it but another rag for Atlanta.

* * *

BUCK" WEAVER is winning a game now and then for the Meridian team and may come around and make a pitcher of himself yet. It is possible that now he is away from the alcoholic possibilities of Atlanta's many social (?) clubs he may settle down and do some good work. He has the natural ability, all right.

* * *

* * *

IF old Rube Benton were only with a ball club he might be a wonder. The other day in a game against the Cardinals he made three hits, scored three runs and perpetrated a sacrifice fly. It was a very hot day, too.

Ordinarily, Rube hits like a suffragette.

* * *

GUESS the Naps will never win a ball game. Usually they haven't any team. When they have, it is wrecked by internal dissensions. When it isn't, as this year, accidents do the rest.

Here are the accidents since May 1:

May 4.—Catcher Grover Land broke his hand.

May 11—Larry Lajoie broke a finger and a thumb.

May 12—Joe Birmingham broke an ankle.

June 11—Twirler Steen broke his pitching arm.

This is only a partial list of the wounded. Ray Chapman, the Naps' shortstop, was hurt the day Steen broke his arm and couldn't play for two weeks. "Buddy" Ryan, center fielder, is playing with a broken thumb.

* * *

PERCY SKILLEN, former Dartmouth pitcher, now in the sporting goods business, has invented a device which he thinks will help pitchers develop control, a thing which Percy lacked or he might now be a big leaguer. It is a dummy that stands at the plate, bat in hand, so that a twirler can pitch to it hours at a time, if he feels like it, and never fear that wild shots will do any damage.

"Dutch" Meyers, who is in business with Percy, tried to sell one of these devices to Jimmy Callahan to help steady young Sox pitchers.

"I don't deny that your idea may work out all right," Manager Callahan told Meyers. "But you needn't send any of those things around."

"Why not?" persisted Meyers.

"What do I want with another dummy, when I have three or four on my team now?" asked Callahan. "I'll just use one of them."

'Tear-In' Fighters Are Popular

Sluggers Usually Capture Title

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 7.—Discussions have arisen in England and Australia as to whether the "tear-in" fighters of the present day are better boxers than the clever fellows who made a business of pugilism fifteen or twenty years ago. Some of the arguments used in support of the various views expressed are highly interesting, but one very important matter has been overlooked. There are no "tear-in" fighters now—at least, none worth talking about. The clever fellows have come into their own again.

Take the smaller men. When Terry McGovern, with bent back, lowered head and rapidly revolving fists, began demolishing the nations of the earth, the opinions that many persons held in respect to the noble art of self-defense were revolutionized. After the Brooklyn whirlwind had run amuck for a year or two, grave doubts existed as to whether there was any scientific side to boxing, for had not the game developed a youth who, by determined onslaught, could upset all ideas of leading, countering, timing, sidestepping and what not?

And when Terry spread-eagled Peddler Palmer, the pride of British pugdom, in one round, the belief that forthrightness was the one and only antidote for cleverness became a firmer ground than ever.

Nelson Greatest Slugger.

Terry strutted his brief period and then went under to another "tear-in" fighter in the person of Young Corbett. It is worthy of note, by the way, that each of these "tear-in" specialists fell a victim to a fellow who also operated along "tear-in" lines. Corbett did fairly well until he ran afoul of Battling Nelson, who was possibly the most headlong fighter of them all—greater even than Terry McGovern, the feunder of the "tear-in" dynasty.

Nelson did more than any of them to show that cleverness could be made to succumb to direct methods. Among other things, he won from Joe Gans, who was possibly the most scientific lightweight the world ever has known.

When Nelson's time came it was another "tear-in" fighter who accounted for him. This was Ad Wolgast, and while Wolgast, still untroubled with the spasms of appendicitis, the toughest experience he ever had was with still another "tear-in" fighter, to-wit, Knockout Brown.

From the lightweights down, the clever lads are in the ascendant again. Packey McFarland, who can claim to be a lightweight, now that the weight limit has been hunched, is nothing if not clever, and unless Jack Britton has changed tactics since he went East he is also a boxer of the brainy, resourceful stamp.

Jimmy Duffy, the Lockport boy, who is fast forging to the front, is another exponent of scientific pugilism, while Ritchie, Rivers, Mandot, Leach Cross and Freddie Welsh are all performers of the "hit, step and get away" school.

The welter, middle and light-heavy classes are so fussed now that it is impossible to tell "who is who" in the divisions named, but it can certainly be said that Mike Gibbons and Jimmy Clabby, a pair of really clever workmen, seem to be able to give away lots of weight and gain decisions from the best men that can be found for them.

Kilbane and Coulon Clever.

Johnnie Kilbane, the featherweight champion, and Johnny Coulon, the prince of bantams, have held their positions by dint of clever boxing and the manner in which little Eddie Campi handled the mercurial Frenchman, Ledoux, at Los Angeles recently, also favors the argument that cleverness is asserting itself in matters pugilistic again.

The heavyweight situation is so muddled that it is not easy to figure out what has contributed to success in that particular department, but in a general way it can be shown that cleverness has made itself felt among the big fellows during the past few years. This, too, despite the fact that Bombardier Wells, the most finished boxer England has produced in years, has been defeated practically every time he started.

Jack Johnson's long suit was cleverness, and there is no occasion to recall what he has done. He was certainly the greatest heavyweight since Jeffries was in his heyday.

McCarty a Second Corbett.

The most pronounced "tear-in" fighters of the heavyweight class in recent times were Jim Flynn and Al Palzer, but Luther McCarty, who was in a way a second Jim Corbett, disposed of the pair within a few weeks.

McCarty is gone, Johnson has fallen upon evil days and it is hard to tell what is in store for the heavyweights. But in respect to pugilism generally, it can be said that in the whirligig of time the artists of the Queensberry ring have gained the ascendancy over the sluggers.

There is no assurance that the present order of things will continue and about the only thing existing conditions prove is that evolution has not produced any permanent change in fighting methods.

Just now they are fighting the way they fought a quarter of a century ago.

EMPIRE LEAGUE NOTES

Shortstop Murphy, of the Thomasville team, continues to hit the ball as if he means to stay at the top of the Empire's batters. Murphy is also a sensational fielder and will undoubtedly move up when the season ends.

* * *

Manager Moran, of Brunswick, has secured Third Baseman Crowe from Thomasasville and if the youngster continues his splendid work will probably keep him.

* * *

Almost without exception the players who have been cut loose by Waycross have made good elsewhere. Bitting, released as third baseman, landed with Charleston and is going fine. "Red" Stiles, a pitcher, signed with Thomasville, has won nearly all his games since leaving Waycross. Dacey, an outfielder, went to Americus and is putting up a neat article of ball.

* * *

McManus is one of the newest men in the Empire. He is a pitcher and has been signed by Waycross.

* * *

Almost as fast as teams change players the Empire is changing umpires. Derrick is the latest to join the league's staff. Morton, one of the new men, has been criticised a great deal on account of his work and may be released.

* * *

Cordele has in Wilder a pitcher who makes more noise than any man in the league. Wilder holds the league's strike-out record so far, fifteen, and is apt to cut loose some new capers almost any game.

* * *

South Atlantic League scouts have been through the Empire, and inside information says quite a few players will be taken in the Class C league after this season.

* * *

Brunswick will turn loose about six players this week. Moran says Brunswick is going to stay at the top, and he means it, too.

* * *

"Closed for ball game" is not an uncommon sign to see hanging on a store's front door in Empire League cities. Baseball comes first with almost everybody now.

* * *

Waycross plays six games at home this week and Manager Clark has tipped his team off that when the week-end arrives Waycross must be somewhere else besides at the bottom.

* * *

Reports from Thomasville indicate that fans in that city will always remember the stinging defeats given Valdosta last week. Both those towns are old time baseball rivals.

* * *

Otto Jordan, of Valdosta, can sell three of his four pitchers any day in the week, according to the dope from Valdosta. He has four good ones and it is said managers of almost every South Atlantic team is anxious to get contracts with them.

* * *

As far as individual players go, there is hardly any team in the Empire that has anything on the others. But when it comes to team work and pitchers—well—the league standing tells the story.

* * *

College players who have joined teams in the Empire are making good with a rush. Davenport, playing first at Thomasville; Holliday, the same for Waycross, and Bowen, short for Americus, are three players who have shown up exceptionally strong. Whitted, a college player, is one of the Waycross additions and is expected to make good with ease.

Heine Zimmerman's brother, who has been playing second for Waycross, will probably be worked in the outfield.

* * *

First Baseman Day, of Cordele, has shown that when it comes to a pinch he can pitch as well as play the bag. Day is a clever fellow, and has many friends in every city of the league.

* * *

Thomasville has a Day that is having days whenever he pitches. He is the handsome fellow of the league, and is winning so regularly now that there seems no end of his victories.

Ritchie May Take Trip Abroad

Wolgast Is Not All In--Naughton

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., July 7.—Now that Willie Ritchie has shown himself every inch a champion—that is, by comparison with contemporaneous lightweights, which is the only way to judge a rising young fighter—the question is, What will he do next?

There is some talk of Ritchie taking a trip to Europe. If his wishes lie in that direction, no one can say him nay, for he has intrenched himself in such a way with fair-minded sports that no chance remains to taunt him with being afraid of the issue with any man of his size.

The story goes that Ritchie long ago set his heart upon a trip through the older lands and that he wants to take advantage of his present position and earning power to fulfill his desire. He is sensible enough to know that a ring man's grip of the topmost rung is at all times insecure, and he thinks it best to indulge in a long-felt hankering while things are coming his way.

This is a better way of putting it than asserting that he is in need of a rest, for Ritchie is only just back from a six months' lay-off and can hardly boast of tired muscles and frayed nerves.

Whenever Willie gets ready to resume fistic activities he will find several worthy opponents. Freddie Welsh wants a crack at the title and so does Harlem Tommy Murphy. Leach Cross has the bee buzzing in his bonnet and Ad Wolgast has begun agitation for a return match.

In Wolgast's case, the fact that his advances are not taken over seriously is due to himself. Wolgast has had several chances to redeem himself, but he has not trained sufficiently on any one occasion. He could easily make himself a strong drawing card with the public if he would forsake city life for a few months and spend his time on his farm. Then if he came back armed with a physician's certificate setting forth that he had stored up plenty of vitality during his sojourn in the country, he would attract attention from the promoters.

In the writer's opinion, Wolgast is far from being a back number.

SLOW BEAT OF HEART GIVES MEN ENDURANCE

BATTLING NELSON'S theory that his slow heart was the cause of his phenomenal endurance is being substantiated right along. The normal number of beats a minute for the human heart is 72. The Battler's heart beats but 52 times a minute, and to this he laid his ability to take a walloping and win.

Now Marathon and other distance runners come forward with hearts that put Nelson's in the shade when it comes to slowness. Harry J. Smith, the national ten-mile champion, is also the champion of the slow-heart brigade. His heart beats out 45 times a minute.

Smith entered the Boston A. A. Marathon, and Dr. J. H. Cunningham, of Boston, examined his heart less than a minute after he had crossed the finish line. Though Smith had just completed a run that put him under one of the hardest heart strains known, his heart was banging away 80 a minute—just eight above normal for the average person.

Recently he took a life insurance examination and was informed that in 27,000 hearts examined his had the slowest beat.

George Bonhag, the middle distance runner, is another slow-pulsed man. His heart has a peculiarity. It goes 64 a minute while he is standing, but lets up ten beats as soon as he lies down. Another one of the brigade is Mike Ryan, a New York distance runner.

Recently he was operated on at a New York hospital, and his heart was tested before he was given ether. Under conditions making for slowness, his heart beat but 42 for the minute. He resisted ether and had to be given enough to put ten men to sleep, but his "Marathon heart" was unaffected.

AUGUSTA TEAM WINS DOUBLES IN S. A. EVENT

AUGUSTA, GA., July 7.—Garrett and Gary, of Augusta, defeated the Waring brothers, of Columbia, S. C., Sunday afternoon for the championship of the South Atlantic States.

Play was continued from Saturday afternoon until Sunday on account of darkness, and when the four players resumed Sunday afternoon, the sets stood two all, and Garrett and Gary were four games to their opponents' two on the fifth set.

The score on the final set was 6—2, and the scores for the entire match of five games were as follows: 5—7, 7—5, 7—5, 4—6, 6—2. With the completion of the Garrett and Gary-Waring brothers match, the tournament of 1913 came to an end.

The championship in singles went to E. V. Carter, Jr., of Atlanta. The ladies' singles championship went to Mrs. Robert Johnson, of Asheville, N. C., and themixed doubles championship to Miss Adger, of Greenville, S. C., and James Edwin, of Spartanburg, S. C.

The local enthusiasts were delighted to keep the doubles title at home, against strong opposition from Atlanta and other cities.

There was great disappointment because Nat Thornton, of Atlanta, decided not to defend his title, as the possibilities of a match between Thornton and Carter were alluring to the spectators.

BANTAM WILLIAMS DESIRES JUST ONE LOOK AT COULON

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., July 7.—When Champion Johnny Coulon comes out here to negotiate for a renewal of his many-times postponed fight with Kid Williams, it looks as though they will have to lock the estimable Mr. Gutenko in a cellar until the session is over and Collins has fled to the mountains.

Williams swears he will "jump" the bantamweight champion in the street.

"It's no use trying to get him into a ring with me," said the Kid, tearfully. "He'd sign all the articles fer a fight somewhere in Siberia and then telegraph that he had a stomach ache again and beat it on the run for some other mountains somewhere.

"The only way is fer me to meet the guy on the street and hand him what's coming to him right there. I'd like to have two or three fellers standin' round to see it because it will be good, and I wouldn't want to waste it."

Not to be outdone, in desperation Sammy Harris tremblingly produced five one-hundred dollar bills and deposited them with Tom McCarey, an act which indicated a state of fury no less frightful than that of Kid Williams; there are different ways of expressing emotion.

When the "Kid" is torn with an agony of rage he wishes to punch some one; Sammy pulls out a hundred bill; same thing in a different dialect.

KELLY GREATEST TIMBER TOPPER, SAYS MITCHELL

By James S. Mitchell.
World's Campion Weight Thrower.

NEW YORK, July 7.—Fred W. Kelly, of the University of Southern California, the present Olympic high hurdling champion, who won the national A. A. U. title at the Chicago carnival on Saturday and who won the high and low hurdles in the collegiate meet on Thursday, is unquestionably the greatest timber-topper on earth to-day.

On his native heath, Kelly has equaled the world's record of 15 seconds for the 120-yard hurdles, and this feat for a young man of 21 is unprecedented in the history of athletics. What Kelly will do to the records in the years to come can only be imagined.

Like a Bird Over Hurdles.

Long and powerful of limb and with great development of the back muscles, the Californian possesses the ideal points of the real racer over the sticks. When crossing the obstacles he has such a fine spread that his body does not have to rise high in the air and he simply strides over the hurdles, as it were.

I did not happen to get a good look at the Los Angeles man till he began to practice at Stockholm prior to the Olympic games last year. Without delay I picked him as the winner, despite the fact that the Englishmen were very sweet on their man Anderson, who was supposed to have shown 15 seconds for the 120 yards.

Many Caught Time at 14 4-5.

Kelly justified my opinion by winning in 15 1-10 seconds, in undoubtedly the most sensational hurdle race ever seen. Several private timers, Americans as well as myself, made the time 14 4-5 seconds.

J. E. Sullivan, the American commissioner, said it was the fastest hurdle race he had ever seen, and is prepared to see Kelly do better than 15 seconds any day.

The citizens of Los Angeles contributed the money to take Kelly on the Olympic team, and their generosity has been highly praised ever since, and Kelly, by his great performances, has shown that his admirers made no mistake.

Tortorich Offers Big Purse for Title Go

SAN FRANCISCO, July 7.—D. J. Tortorich, owner of the Westside Athletic Club at New Orleans, wired Willie Ritchie to-day offering a purse of $20,000 for a twenty-round fight between the champion and Jack Britton, of Chicago. If accepted, the fight will take place September 7. Danny Morgan, manager of Britton, has already accepted for his protege.

REDS PURCHASE ROBINSON FROM SAVANNAH CLUB

SAVANNAH, GA., July 6.—Announcement has been made of the consummation of negotiations which have been pending between the Cincinnati Baseball Club and the owners of the local association of the South Atlantic League for the sale of pitcher Dick Robertson. The purchase price is said to be $4,000.

Robertson will be delivered to the Cincinnati club at the end of the South Atlantic season. President Armstrong has stated that the present Indian combination will be kept intact throughout the year. When announcement was made of the sale of Robertson it was stated that the young spitball artist will remain in Savannah for the balance of the season.

CHAPPELLE IS MOTOTCYCLE CHAMP; DEFEATS C. DAVIS

NEW YORK, July 7.—Arthur Chappelle, the motorcycle speed king, is to-day the holder of the professional championship of America. At the Motordrome—at Brighten Beach last night Chappelle won the third and deciding race of the series for the championship from Charles Davis. Each had won a match and this was the deciding one, and consisted of a ten-mile and two five-mile heats.

Billy Vanderbury, of Philadelphia, captured the three-mile professional race, winning all three heats.

Martin Kessler, of Newark, was badly cut about the mouth when he fell from his machine while trying to avoid mixing up in a spill in the two-mile novice race.

ZEIDER READY TO PLAY; CHANCE TO MAKE CHANGES

NEW YORK, July 7.—After to-day's double-header with the Senators the New Yorks leave for Chicago to begin their second Western trip.

Frank Chance has received word from Rollie Zeider that he would join the team on Wednesday, ready to play second base in the opening game with the White Sox. Zeider's absence has cost the Yankees many games. With Zeider on he middle bag, Hartzell will supplant Daniels or Wolter in the outfield.

GUTHRIE PITCHER HURLS ONLY 54 BALLS IN GAME

GUTHRIE, OKLA., July 7.—Andrew Delsama, pitching for the Elks team of the Guthrie City League, is believed to have made a record in a game against the Santa Fe Railroad team when he delivered only 54 balls during the entire nine innings. He allowed three hits, striking out one man.

DENVER CLUB ON SALE.

DENVER, COLO., July 7.—President McGill wants to sell the Denver team of the Western League. It is said, and retire at the end of the season.

Cross After Match With Ritchie

Leach Wants Plenty of Action

By H. M. Walker.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., July 7.—It's Leach Cross, the pride of the walk in Los Angeles. Whatever admiration was bestowed upon Mexican Joe Rivers now goes for Cross double. Fight bugs are fairly marveling at the showing of the New Yorker, and from the talk at sporting headquarters it seems to be the consensus of opinion that the New Yorker would defeat Ritchie for the championship.

Leach, with Brother Sam and Trainer Harry Lee, were about town Sunday accepting congratulations on all sides, but more eager to know the next probable date for his services than anything else.

The New Yorker is decorated with a handsome black eye, the left optic being badly swollen and discolored clear over the cheekbone, but Leach is parading this proudly in honor of the occasion and said if he had been a loser he would bend his head and take up an alleyway.

"I want Ritchie in a match for the championship of the world," said Cross, "and I want to know within a few days whether the champion is going to give me this chance. It would be a great fight and I like my chances with him, for our styles are very similar. He's cleverer than I am and I think he's the classiest champion we have had since Joe Gans, but this is the wing that spells kick," and the dentist-boxer closed his right fist and smiled confidently.

"Will you take on Rivers if the match is postponed and there is nothing doing for the present with Ritchie?" was asked. "I'm ready to take on Rivers the last of July, regardless of whether I meet the champion, and then I will fight again the next month and take Ritchie Labor Day. That's me, for I'm in better form the oftener I work."

Just what the immediate plans of the Eastern boxer will be is not quite known. Unless something positive is placed for Cross early this week the New Yorker will start back East, probably taking a date with Harry Trendall at St. Louis, and then on to New York, where he is offered a match with Young Shugrue.

Bud Anderson came into town with Manager Dick Donald yesterday and, although somewhat disappointed and forlorn, he expressed a manly version of the outcome and gave the victor all just dues, saying that he only hoped there would soon be a time when he can command another accounting with Mr. Cross. Bud's lips were considerably swollen and his right eye discolored. Anderson and Manager Donald are not certain of future plans, but will remain over until to-morrow, then returning to Medford.

RINGSIDE NOTES

Who will get the next chance at Willie Ritchie's title? This is a question that is worrying boxing fans these days. Freddie Welsh, Leach Cross, Tommy Murphy and Jack Britton are all clamoring for the prize match.

* * *

At the present time it looks very much as if Cross will beat his rivals to the big bout. Cross' recent victory over Anderson has made him a big card on the coast. The dentist's great punching power should give him a great chance to cop the championship from Ritchie.

* * *

Friends of Charlie White should not take his defeat at the hands of Jack Britton to heart. When it is taken into consideration that White weighed but 125 pounds against 136 for Britton the showing made by Charlie was nothing to be ashamed of. Although Britton is credited with a knockout he failed to drop White once during the entire mill. The bout was stopped by the sheriff.

* * *

Poor Joe Thomas is certainly hitting the toboggan. Frankie Whitney pushed the New Orleans boy still further down the ladder by handing Joe Golden's protege a neat lacing in ten rounds last Friday.

* * *

The Ritchie-Rivers championship battle at San Francisco drew a $20,000 house. Ritchie was guaranteed $17,000 win, lose or draw. Rivers drew down about $5,000 for his end.

* * *

When Johnny Kilbane was recently asked in Cleveland why he didn't knock out more of his opponents he said: "I have always said that I am a boxer and not a fighter. I am not in the ring to kill the other fellow, but to simply outbox him. I won the featherweight championship of the world by using this method and will not change my style now."

The next big bout to be staged on the coast will be the twenty-round engagement between Charley Ledoux and Kid Williams at Los Angeles on July 29. The winner has been promised a match with either Eddie Campi or Johnny Coulon.

* * *

Kid Young, the local newsboy boxer, is still waiting to hear from Charlie Lee in regard to the latter's challenge. Young says he will sign up for the match at once and will also give Lee a $50 side bet.

* * *

George Chip and Jack Dillon meet in a 12-round setto at Boston on July 8. The winner is to be matched with Frank Klaus.

* * *

Eddie Craney, who staged the Rivers-Ritchie mill, is now anxious to arrange a match between Jack Britton and Tommy Murphy. He has already wired an offer to Danny Morgan, manager of Britton.

* * *

Billy Papke, former middelweight, wishes to announce that he is still in the boxing game. Papke has agreed to meet any middleweight the Milwaukee promoters pick for him. The Kewanee boy says his injured hand is again in shape for a tough scrap.

* * *

The recent 20-round bout between Campi and Ledoux at the Pacific Athletic Club, of Vernon Cal., drew $4,900. Ledoux received $1,225, which was 25 per cent of the gross receipts. Campi, for winning got $1,470, having boxed for 30 per cent of the receipts.

* * *

Nick Pagoalos and Sam Fountas, local Greek featherweights, will clash in a private 10-round bout here Friday. Terry Nelson has been selected to referee the go. The winner will seek a match with Kid Young.

KRAMER AND CAVANAUGH WIN GREAT CYCLE RACE

NEWARK, N. J., July 7.—A victory for the team of Kramer and Cavanaugh in the three-cornered tandem match race and a dead heat between Frank Kramer, of New Jersey, and Alfred Grenda, of Australia, were features of the racing at the Velodrome here yesterday.

In the two-mile event Grenda had a lead of twenty yards on the last lap, but Kramer sputted and managed to cross the line with his rival. In the three-cornered match Kramer and Cavanaugh nosed out Joe Fogler, of Brooklyn, and Al Goulet, of Australia, and Jackie Clark and Grenda, both Australians, got third. The victory was in straight heats of one mile each.

CARPENTIER AND PALZER MAY CLASH IN PARIS GO

NEW YORK, July 7.—Tom O'Rourke is in receipt of a letter from Monsieur Vienne, the Parisian boxing promoter, offering him a match for Palzer with Carpentier some time this fall. Carpentier is all the rage in fight circles in France and would draw an immense gate with a white man of reputation who had not fought in Paris. O'Rourke thinks well of the proposition and will proceed to close the match with Monsieur Vienne.

RICHARDS WINS A WIFE IF HE WINS 2 RACES

IT'S leaked out on "Tex" Richards, rider at the local Motordrome. Old "Tex" is going to be married.

That is, maybe?

You see it's this' way.

The girl is an awful Motordrome enthusiast. Also it takes a peck of money to get married.

So she wrote "Tex" that if he would win both races at the next meet she would have him—and the quicker the better.

Yes, it sounds like a press agent's yarn. And like as not the girl got the idea out of a novel or a newspaper. A lot of things come from such places. But anyhow, the story is true. If "Tex" wins both races he gets a wife. If he doesn't, there will be another wait. And "Tex" has waited quite a while.

Naturally a thing like this will spur Richards to the utmost Tuesday night. And he will need it. Jock McNeil has the old J. A. P. running as never before. And Mortie Graves' new Excelsior has shown speed in practice that is fast enough to win any race ever run on this Motordrome or any other.

Tuesday's races will be among those three riders. The experts believe that Graves is the winner if all goes well. But McNeil's machine has never been beaten when it was running right. And "Tex" Richards has never yet run that old Indian No. 23 as he will run it Tuesday night.

In case of rain Tuesday night the meeting will be postponed until Wednesday night. There will also be racing Friday night.

LEDOUX AND WILLIAMS WORKING FOR GO JULY 15

LOS ANGELES, July 7.—Charley Ledoux and Kid Williams are going after the training stunt as though they meant to make the July 15 bout a businesslike affair. The two have met in the ring before, and as both claim a victory at that meeting, the rivalry is especially keen.

The French bantamweight appears to be in great shape and went through his best work-outs since arriving in California yesterday at his Vernon camp. He showed considerable improvement over his previous work here.

At Venice Kid Williams gave a large crowd of assembled fans a good idea of his condition and showed them something of what he intends to do to Ledoux next week.

JOY FOR FRANK CHANCE.

Sporting Food

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

Spending a section of the Fourth at the ringside while Carl Morris is attempting to fight is a great little pastime for one who has a lot of perfectly good time to throw away.

Samuel E. Debs is leading Edward P. Weston in their hike athwart the continent. Sam has more speed than Ed, but not a bit more sense.

Without cracking a smile, Fred Toney up and says he is glad to get a chance to work regularly. Fred will have his little joke.

By this time Mr. Toney is able to find his way from Chicago to Louisville and vice versa with his eyes shut.

ROUGH-HOUSE.

Lives of Phillies all remind us
We can play a rough-house game,
And, departing, leave behind us
Spike marks on another's frame.

It is said that the Cincinnati Reds once went through a whole season without losing a game. There is a feeling among baseball experts that this will not happen again for at least a couple of years.

In view of what happend to W. Heinrich Schmidt it is surprising that the English newspapers have not begun to chide McLoughlin on the cut of his trousers or the color of his hose.

The consensus of opinion is that Mr. Quigley is a good umpire—if there is such a thing as a good umpire.

SLIDING.

Toboggan-sliding days have come,
The saddest of the season,
When baseball teams go on the bum
For no apparent reason.

The Phils that led the bloomin' league
Are headed for the bottom.
Their pitchers suffer from fatigue,
And all the batters swat 'em.

Tom Jones is one of the saddest persons extant. Imagine a fight for the lightweight title and some one else there to count the gate receipts.

After being walloped, stepped on and otherwise abused, John McGraw draws a five-day suspension. Mr. Lynch shows almost intelligence enough to be accepted on a jury.

Bad Year for Georgia Players

Cobb--Rucker Both Out of Whack

BROOKLYN, N. Y., July 7.—This seems to be a hard year on celebrated Georgia ball players. Ty Cobb is in bad shape. And now Nap Rucker also has gone bad.

"Nap" may not pitch in his old form for some time to come. He will not pitch at all for the present if he takes the advice of his physician. The big Georgian has a bad arm, so bad in fact that for over two weeks his curve ball has been a myth.

The trouble with the arm is the indirect result of an accident he met with in the team's long stay at home early in the season. In a game against the St. Louis Cardinals "Nap" had the thumb of his pitching hand knocked out of gear.

Instead of waiting until the injured member had entirely healed, "Nap" got back into the game because he argued that he could pitch without using his thumb. He changed his style of delivery because of the damaged thumb, and it is believed, in doing so, he put too much of a strain on certain muscles in his shoulder. "Nap" says for two weeks he has not been able to pitch a curve ball, which accounts for the peculiar exhibitions that he has been giving of late.

THE big Georgian said yesterday that he does not know how he ever got through that extra-inning game with the Phillies. He says he was able to beat the Giants because the McGrawites were looking for him to pitch curve balls and "Nap" was not pitching them for the very good reason that he couldn't.

President Ebbets sent "Nap" to a specialist. The specialist gave it as his opinion that while the arm was not seriously injured, "Nap" would be unable to get his arm back in shape unless he gave it a good rest. The rest thing does not make a hit with "Nap." He said yesterday that he did not know whether to stay out or not.

* * *

THREE years ago Rucker had trouble with his arm and it was caused by fooling with different kinds of delliveries. At that time he had developed quite a spitter and was using it with great success. Then his arm started to bother him.

One day he mentioned it to Hank O'Day. According to "Nap," Hank proceeded to give him a fine little bawling out for using the spitball. The veteran umpire attributed all the trouble to "Nap" changing his style of delivery, by which he put a strain on muscles that "Nap" did not bring into play with his regular delivery.

Carl Thompson May Be Signed by Smith

Carl Thompson, former University of Georgia star, may be signed by Manager Billy Smith to take the place of one of his wavering hurlers—probably Paul Musser. It will depend on what terms can be agreed upon.

Thompson has had a bad season with Birmingham and was finally turned back by Molesworth on the New York Americans. They wanted to send him to the New England League, but he preferred to pitch in the South. If Smith can make a deal with him he will probably give him a trial. The local manager believes that hard luck and weak batting support beat Thompson in most of his games with the Barons and that with the local team he will be a winner.

CARDS SIGN ANOTHER PITCHER.

ST. LOUIS, MO., July 7.—Another hurler is coming to aid the Cardinals in the National League pennant race. He is Rice Williams, a member of the Great Falls club of the Union Association. The newcomer will not join Huggins' crew until September 14. The announced price for the pitcher was $2,500.

BEARISH ADVICES DEPRESS COTTON

In Absence of Speculation Market Shows No Definite Tendency. Sentiment Is Bearish.

NEW YORK, July 7.—Buying of August contracts was the only feature at the opening of the cotton market today. This position opened 13 points higher, but other prices ranged 2 to 4 points higher than last Thursday's closing quotations. Changes at Liverpool over the holidays were slight and weather conditions were very favorable.

A little pressure in new crop positions after the call due to private crop advices from the South, and prices worked off sharply. August suffered the greatest loss by declining from 12.18, opening quotations, to 12 cents. Other positions show recessions aggregating from 6 to 8 points from the opening range.

Trading during the forenoon was very small and sentiment was extremely bearish. It was reported that Liverpool was a fair seller of August, which, of course, had its effect. Later the market recovered a few points of the early loss, price movement being 1 to 3 points under the previous close.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: July, 12.01; August, 12.00; October, 11.38; January, 11.30.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, July 7.—Weather conditions since Thursday were favorable, particularly the return of fair weather in the Western States, which had enough rain. The central and Atlantic States had further good showers, which were particularly needed in Arkansas. Indications are for generally fair, warm weather, except probably showers and cooler in Northwest Texas, Northwestern Oklahoma, East Tennessee and North Carolina.

Political news from Europe is bad and reflected in a decline in English Consols.

Our market opened about 7 points lower on new crops, but ruled very steady at the decline without selling pressure.

New York says the trade is bearish, but fears the situation in the old crop months, owing to very small stock, which is expected to be down to 15,000 bales by the end of the month.

MILLER & COTTER COTTON LETTER.

MEMPHIS, July 7.—Crop news is favorable and weather over holiday was ideal, rains falling East of the river and none in Texas and Oklahoma, but in absence of speculation markets show no definite tendency. Sentiment is bearish, but talent is afraid to sell it with summer months in hands of manipulators. Pending legislation is also killing off business.

Habersham King, in his latest report, says about 15 per cent of the belt rain is needed to prevent deterioration. As to the remaining 85 per cent, he considers conditions as near perfect as they well can be, particularly in the two Carolinas and Texas. Since date of this report the dry districts had general rain, relieving danger.

* * *

Trading in the market to-day was in a small volume. Sentiment was very bearish. There was practically no feature.

* * *

Gwathmey and Russell were good buyers of August at the outset to-day. Liverpool, however, sold the option.

Dallas wires: "Texas clear and warm. Oklahoma generally partly cloudy and clear."

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, July 7.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map favorable; partly cloudy in the northern border of the belt, fair rest of the belt; nice rains in Arkansas, central Mississippi, Gulf districts and along the Atlantic Coast. Indications are for generally fair, except in Northwest Texas, Oklahoma and North Carolina, which may get some showers.

* * *

* * *

Vicksburg, Greenwood, Shreveport, Monroe, clear and hot.

* * *

Washington forecast for week: Generally fair during week; may be a few scattered thundershowers; seasonable temperatures.

* * *

The Memphis Commercial-Appeal summary shows that last week probably was the most favorable of the season on the cotton crop. At least the crop made better progress than during any other similar period this year. Under the stimulus of good rains plenty of sunshine and warm days and nights the plant made splendid growth, and, while still a bit late, made up much lost time during the week. The plant is strong and stock is beginning to branch out and is blooming and fruiting heavily.

Rains fell in sections all over the belt during the week. They were the heaviest and more nearly general in Texas and Oklahoma, where practically the entire area of both States received good rains. In the central valley the drouth was relieved, except in scattered localities that comprise a very small total area. In the east no great need of moisture had been felt, but good rains fell at the end of the week.

The high state of cultivation that has characterized the crop from the start was in no way abated during the week. Fields are almost universally clean and tilth of soil probably is more nearly perfect than ever before known. The feature of the crop places the plant in the best shape to withstand another drouth or rain with the least possible damage.

There is still complaint of boll weevil in infested districts. They are numerous in sections of Mississippi and hardly worth mentioning to date is hardly worth mentioning. Farmers are continuing a relentless war against the pest, and in some sections they seem to have won their fight.

ATLANTA LIVE STOCK MARKET.

By W. H. White, Jr., of the White Provision Company.

Cattle receipts increasing with the larger supply of grass stock. Good kinds scarce and reasonably strong. While the bulk coming is of only medium quality and is only ordinary flesh, which is considered generally as undesirable killers, and while the prices have ranged lower, the quality is considerably below that of the beef coming three weeks ago. The demand has been light for the past several days, which together with the plain class of cattle has depressed the market and values are probably a full quarter lower on medium and a half lower on common grades than a week ago.

Tennessee sheep and lambs are plentiful and the extreme prices of two weeks ago have been lowered by about 1 cent per pound.

Hog supply about equal to the demand. The yards are kept cleaned up from day to day. Several loads of extra choice packers were among the week's receipts and brought top prices. Market is steady.

Good to choice steers, 1,000 to 1,200, $5.50@6.50; good steers, 800 to 1,00, $5.25@6.00; medium to good steers, 700 to 850, $5.00@5.50.

Good to choice beef cows, 800 to 900, $4.50@5.50; medium to good cows, 700 to 800, $4.25@5.00.

STOCKS WEAK ON BAD CABLE NEWS

Street Awaiting Government Grain Report, Which Is Expected To Be Very Favorable.

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, July 7.—Following the three-day holiday the stock market opened weak to-day and prices ranged from fractions over a point lower.

Chesapeake and Ohio was sold in considerable quantity, going to 53½ for a loss of 1½. Union Pacific sold off ¾.

Among the other declines were Amalgamated Copper ⅝, American Can ⅝, American Smelting ½, Atchison ⅝, United States Steel common ½, Southern Pacific ⅝, New York Central ½, Reading ½, Northern Pacific ¼, Anaconda ⅛ and Canadian Pacific ¼. Baltimore and Ohio rose ⅛ and St. Paul gained ⅝.

After half an hour some issues rallied and a firmer tone was evident.

The curb was steady.

Americans in London were firm and Canadian Pacific there was steady.

The situation in the Balkans is exercising a depressive influence over the European money market and to-day $3,000,000 gold was engaged in New York for London.

There was little to the trading during the forenoon. Union Pacific was freely supplied, declining to 145½; Canadian Pacific moved up to 214⅝; Amalgamated Copper and Pennsylvania Railroad were off ¼. Steel remained unchanged. There was fractional recessions in Reading, Southern Pacific, Atchison and New York Central. The tone was dull before noon.

Call money loaning at 2 per cent.

* * *

Potter, of N. L. Carpenter & Co., says: "The market may show a reactionary tendency to-day on account of the European situation. The prospects of a big railroad strike and a poor bank statement. However, do not expect any decline to carry prices very far from this level and would accumulate stocks carefully on weak spots. The Government crop report on grain due this week will give condition of corn, which is most important, and from private estimates it should be very satisfactory."

* * *

The weakness of the market is due to the foreign situation, but the Government crop report, which will be published this week, should be very favorable. Private estimates show the corn crop will be over 3,000,000,000 bushels. Should the Government figures show these estimates to be correct, it should help prices and cause a moderate rally. —Potter.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Logan & Bryan: We feel that lower range of values will ensue, although we would not follow the short side too closely.

A. Norden & Co.: We continue to feel that a better policy for the present will be to buy on such breaks as we had to-day.

Morris H. Rothschild & Co.: We continue to advise purchases of cotton around present levels.

Grain Notes

King, of Toledo, says in his Missouri crop report: "Wheat yield 16 bushels, against 12.6 last year when crop was 22,000,000; 86 per cent of crop is harvested, against 51 per cent last year; quality 96. On Government acreage, yield suggests 38,000,000 bushels. Oats, condition 56 per cent, against 68 per cent in June and 94 per cent last year, when the crop was 30,000,000 bushels. Crop indicated 20,000,000 bushels."

* * *

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. says: "There has been some rain in Northwest with generally favorable temperatures. Primary receipts to-day will doubtless show a large total as a result of accumulations over the holidays and the visible will doubtless again show a decrease. We are inclined to look for a steady wheat market to-day without important price changes.

"Corn—The belt has received very little rainfall since Thursday, and some extremely high temperatures have prevailed in Kansas, but lower temperatures report this morning with some rains in Nebraska and Missouri.

"Oats—Buyers seem to come in on all fair recessions, basing purchases on general belief of a moderate yield.

"Provisions—Market may have some setbacks, but we do not look for any decline of moment."

* * *

Private messages from Winnipeg, Duluth, Glenwood, Thief River Falls, Hankinson, Harvey, Portal and Endlin indicate clear weather with temperatures around 60 degrees.

Weather since Thursday: North Dakota and Minnesota had excellent rains; Illinois scattered rains, mostly over good parts of States; South Dakota, some rains, but light. Canadian Northwest had fair rain.

B. W. Snow's crop report for July 1: "Condition of corn 85.5, against 83.8 per cent last year. Acreage 108,000,000, or 1 per cent increase. Crop indicated on basis July par for condition, 2,964,000 000 bushels, against a similar indication of 2,811,000,000 last year.

"If present condition should be maintained until harvest it would forecast a crop of 3,147,000,000 bushels, against 3,125,000,000 last year. Winter wheat condition 81, a decline of 4 points since the June 1 report, and indicates a crop of about 487,000,000 bushels on an estimate of acreage and about 480,000,000 on the Government estimate. Loss mainly in Kansas. Spring wheat condition drops from 93 to 77.8, mainly as a result of drouth in South Dakota. On the basis of July par of condition this indicates crop about 230,000,000 bushels, against an indicated crop similarly figured a year ago of 271,000,000 bushels.

"If present condition maintained until harvest it would forecast a crop of 251,000,000 bushels, against 320,000,000 yield last year. This makes a July indication total crop, wheat 710,000,000 bushels, against 629,000,000 last July and if present conditions are maintained until harvest, an indication for 731,000,000 bushels, against a final estimate last year of 730,000,000 bushels.

"Condition of oats 75.8 against 87 per cent last month. On the basis of July par for condition this indicates (on Snow's acreage) a crop of 983,000,000 bushels, or on Government acreage, 1,023,000 bushels.

"Last year the July 1 Government indication was 1,229,000,000 estimated, was raised to 1,418,000,000 bushels."

CLEARINGS SOMEWHAT OFF.

Atlanta's clearings for June were $44,696,193, and for the first six months of 1913 they were $335,143,406, both figures being but slightly below last year's levels.

Slow collections and complete absence of speculation are given as causes by Bradstreet's, which further remarks that in view of the halt of speculation, the showing is remarkably good.

How to Distinguish Good Reds From Poor Ones When Buying

Article Is Written for Benefit of the New Breeder of Reds.

What I have to say is for the benefit of the new breeder of Reds, or those who are contemplating starting with Reds, enabling them to tell a good red from a poor one and help them decide for themselves the value of Rhode Island Reds you buy. There are plenty of breeders of Reds that do not know what a really good Red should be, and these breeders are doing the breed harm on all sides by telling what they think they know, and selling beginners fowls that come nearer the stand of Buff Rock or Buff Wyandottes than Rhode Island Reds. In a general way we will discuss Rhode Island Reds and try to arrive at some definite conclusion as to what one should be in shape and color. First, the head. Reds should have a pretty fair sized comb with five points, red ear lobes, red eyes, and a horn colored beak, all in proportion. Common defects are too many points to comb, lopped comb and eyes not red. Now, the feet and legs should be yellow with a red pigment down the sides and free from feathers. The common defects are slaty legs in females and feathers on the legs and feet of the males. Now, for the body of a Red. The general shape should be a horizontal back, broad on the shoulders and free from pinched effect at the tail. A long keel bone and the body carried in such a way that it will be oblong in shape, and not long, as the Wyandotte. Common defects of shape are short back, pinched tail, upright carriage with wings pointing downward instead of a horizontal position, short keel bone and narrow backs. Pay especial attention to shape, as that is the most important part and characteristic that differs from all the other breeds. This is the utility part. It makes the good layers and the good fryers, too. The color of a Rhode Island Red should be RED, with the exception of its tail, which should be black, and with black markings in the wings. The females have ticking in the hackle, and the males should be free from it. This is the main thing, they should be RED, red on top and red to the skin, and a Rhode Island Red is not a Red unless he is red. The common defects of color are washed out buff females, or females very dark in outer color and smutty under color. I had rather have a buff female with good clean under color than a dark hen with smutty color. This is choosing the lesser evil. A good male is the same color from head to tail with a red or salmon under color and a black tail. It is hard to get them with the same shade of red all over, and they are most likely to have light colored hackle and dark wing bows. An otherwise fine bird often has white or smut in under color of hackle, or near the root of his tail. You will often find light patches in under color over the hips and dark places on the back. These are minor points and faults of birds that are otherwise often the finest of specimens. Now that we must not breed from the bird that has any of these faults mentioned, that we must take all these things into consideration in sizing them up and breed from the best you have, and gradually you will get them nearer and nearer the ideal Rhode Island Red. Do not stress color at the expense of shape, size and vigor. As the three last mentioned are the mainstays of this breed, as well as all the others. You may have a beautiful cockerel, but he may lack the size and vigor to make a good breeder, and if you use him you will be a sadder and wiser man. Rhode Island Reds given a free range are likely to have the best plumage at the fall fair.

Medium-Sized Acreage Tracts

ALL of us know the profit that is usually made from acreage. It is almost a conceded fact that if a person owns good acreage, he has a sure profit in it sooner or later. When we think of acreage propositions, we think of lots of land, and naturally lots of money, because the usual acreage transaction involves a great deal of money. The demand for good, close-in acreage for subdivision purposes is increasing every day. A trip to the outskirts of the city in any direction you choose to take will convince you of this fact. We are going to offer a tract of about 100 acres, between Decatur and East Lake, which we have cut up into five, ten and fifteen acre tracts. The price and terms on these tracts make it possible for almost anybody to handle them.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Big Profits Made In Acreage Deal

Mrs. Harper Buys English Property. To Name Realty Head—New York Times on Candler Investments.

Captain James W. English has given a warranty deed to Mrs. Lelah O. Harper on 80 acres of land in land lot 187, the consideration being $8,247, or at the rate of $105 an acre, and Saturday Mrs. Harper sold 21 acres to Harper Brothers for $10,500, or at the rate of $500 an acre. The enhancement covered a period of a little more than seven years, the deal between Captain English and Mrs. Harper having taken place February 28, 1906.

This property is between Bryant's District and Oakland City. The part sold by Captain English was the north half of the land lot, excepting 9.15 acres, being lots 1 to 9 and 12 to 16, inclusive, in block 4. Mrs. Harper sold to Harper Brothers the southeast corner of Harper Street and DeFoor Avenue.

To Name Realty Head.

Members of the Atlanta Real Estate Board will hold their regular monthly dinner the night of July 18 at the Cafe Durand, at which time a new head for the board will be elected, to succeed Charles P. Glover. Some propositions will be heard to change the by-laws. One of these would make it possible for the president to succeed himself.

There has been much speculation over the probable president. Among the names suggested are Harris G. White, now vice president of the board; W. A. Foster, of Foster & Robson; S. B. Turman, of Turman, Black & Calhoun, and Carlos Lynes, of Thomson & Lynes.

The nominating committee will name a man and he will be voted in by the members. Charles P. Glover, ex-officio; M. F. Ramsey, J. H. Ewing, M. C. Kiser and H. W. Dews are on this committee.

Sells Three Corners.

Ex-Governor Joseph M. Brown has been in a unique real estate deal, involving the transfer of three corners out of four in a 50-foot radius. Ex-Governor Brown sold for the estate of the late Julius L. Brown the northeast, southeast and southwest corners of Crew and Little Streets to Victor R. Smith for $5,500. Mr. Smith has also bought a bond-for-title interest in a parcel on Currier Street west of Courtland from Thomas J. Lynch for $5,000 cash, notes and the assumption of certain incumbrances.

Sales in Piedmont Heights.

W. H. Allen, of the Edwin P. Ansley Real Estate Agency, has sold for himself to C. C. Braswell two residence lots in Piedmont Heights for a total of $5,200. The buy was for investment.

Pace's Ferry Road Transfer.

An interesting warranty deed has gone to record in the transfer of a 280 by 600 foot lot on Pace's Ferry Road, 1,118 feet west of Tuxedo Drive, from Mrs. Allison B. Morrison to W. B. Disbro for $14,000, or at the rate of $50 a front foot.

Three Homes and 25 Lots Sold.

J. W. Dobbins & Co. have sold three houses and 25 lots in the East Lake Land and Improvement Company's subdivision at East Lake. Mr. Dobbins has also sold three bungalows in various sections for a total of $10,250.

Mr. McCrory's Salesmanship.

I. C. McCrory, the well-known College Park citizen, is receiving the congratulations of friends on a rather remarkable achievement in real estate salesmanship. At the conclusion of the Odd Fellows' Fourth of July barbecue at College Park Mr. McCrory put up 23 residence lots and sold them in short order. No notice of the contemplated sale had been given. The lots adjoined the place where the barbecue was held.

Interest in New Subdivision.

A good deal of interest has been caused by the announcement that the Atlanta Development Company will open up July 15 Highland View, a new subdivision of forty 50 by 250 foot lots west of Druid Hills and north of Ponce DeLeon Avenue. The prices will be $1,400 to $1,700 per lot. Robert H. Jones will handle the property for the development concern, but plats will also be placed with various realty agencies.

Many Plans for Club.

Since the publication of tentative plans for a new University Club home, additional details have been given out. The club is also figuring with William Worth Martin on a site on the north side of East Baker Street back of the old Goldsmith property on Peachtree Street; with the owners of the Atlanta School of Medicine building at the northeast corner of Bartow and Luckie Streets; with the proprietors of the Stafford Apartments on Carnegie Way; with Walter G. Cooper on his property at the northeast corner of Luckie and Spring Streets, to erect a bachelors' apartment and club combined, and with the owners of the Roy property on the north side of East Ellis Street back of the Robert F. Maddox place on Peachtree.

The University Club is looking for a place with 20 bedrooms and a 40 by 50 foot assembly hall for meetings. The executive council thinks it may find a place of this kind already built. Otherwise, it may be necessary to build or remodel. If the medical college site should be procured the building would be thoroughly overhauled.

Comment on Candler Move.

Asa G. Candler has chosen wisely in his New York and Atlanta investments, thinks a writer in The New York Times. Mr. Candler is compared with Frank W. Woolworth, the capitalist, as follows:

"The prejudice which financial institutions and corporations have held against real estate investments for many years is dying out. More and more we find conservative banking institutions handling real estate securities. They are beginning to realize the soundness of an investment which has from time immemorial been the bedrock foundation of savings bank strength. We find individuals of wealth like Frank W. Woolworth and Asa G. Candler putting into improved real estate profits earned in merchandise.

"The latter illustrates the trend of the time by building in both Atlanta and New York. We find corporations like the United Cigar Stores buying the property, where it can, on which their stores stand. We see the New York Central Railroad building not only a railroad terminal but income-producing office buildings.

"Real estate is coming into its own because wealthy and conservative men and corporations are investing in it, and they are investing only where facts and figures prove that a profit is to be paid on the money expended. Real estate is not bought and sold, dwelling and office buildings are not erected in the haphazard way that obtained not so many years since.

"That very definition of real estate has changed. We used to think of it as a lot, bare ground. The Woolworth Building is real estate; so is the Metropolitan Tower; so is the Verona apartment house. Before the Woolworth Building was erected its owner knew how many persons passed its portals in the course of a day.

"He knew, so far as could be known, the number of vacancies in the downtown office buildings. He studied downtown land values and rental values, he studied the trend of occupancy in the various trades and professions, he studied the service given tenants by other office buildings."

What Race Track Gambling Did for One Man

It Has Done the Same and Worse for Many Another. No ROMANCE in This

(Copyright, 1913.)

A reader asks us to print a brief account of one man's gambling experience, published in a newspaper at El Paso, Texas.

He writes: "The story is one of the most direct appeals on the subject I have ever read, and if presented with the forcible coloring you are prepared to give it, it will undoubtedly 'go home' to those who are just starting to feel what the man it tells about must have felt when he still had the opportunity of honorably quitting the game."

We print the story exactly as the El Paso newspaper printed it—no "coloring" is needed.

We say once more to the young men tempted by gambling, and to fathers and mothers careless about their sons' associations:

GAMBLING IS THE WORST, MOST DANGEROUS VICE IN CIVILIZATION.

It is worse than drink, for it destroys honor, as well as health.

Gambling long maintained will make any man a thief or a worse criminal.

There is NO honorable professional gambler, as there is no honorable professional burglar.

Gambling leads to sorrow, poverty, disgrace and crime.

Here is the plain story of one gambler, published in the Texas newspaper:

OLD STORY OF RUIN IN THE RACING GAME.

The Man Who Followed It, Precariously and Otherwise, for Years, and His Sad Ending.

It is the old story of ruin from the racing game. He drifted to El Paso when the Juarez track was opened for the first time. Then he claimed to be representing a string of Eastern papers as racing correspondent. But this was only for the purpose of obtaining a badge and admission to the press box. That first season was a hard one for the followers of the game, and he finally started issuing racing results in the form of posters to be hung in saloons and restaurants and cigar stores at the close of the day's racing. This made him a living and left him a little margin to play on the ponies, and that was all life held for him. In summer, when the racing plant in Juarez was closed, he would drift from place to place, where short meets were held, and he succeeded in getting a living in some manner unknown to his friends.

One rainy Sunday morning, in a little second-class restaurant, he told the story of his downfall. It is the cut-and-dried story of the effect of racing on young men. But it was true as he told it. Once he had been the confidential man and assistant manager of a big book binding and stationery house in Buffalo. He was earning a good salary with the promise of a place in the firm soon. Then the company decided to open a branch plant in Chicago to supply the bank and wholesale trade. The young man was selected as the branch manager because of his ability. He went to Chicago and was doing a big business for the firm and had received a half dozen raises since the branch was opened.

One Saturday afternoon in summer he spent his half holiday at the track where the horses were running. He laid a bet for fun. He won and wagered another. This likewise doubled his money, and he plunged. The germ had entered his blood, and he started a consistent policy of race track gambling.

The inevitable happened and he lost his position. Naturally, he turned to the easy money game which had cost him his job. He became a bookmaker, a sheet writer and a gambler. He followed the game to Florida when it was outlawed in Illinois. From there he went from place to place, finally landing in El Paso. By that time he was middle-aged and there were streaks of gray in his hair. When the races closed last spring he was neither physically nor financially able to follow the crowd to Latonia.

He remained here and lived the best he could. His brooding resulted in his making $1,000,000 mind bets on favorites in races that had been run. Wednesday night he was detained by the police on suspicion of being insane. His brooding over his downfall had been too much for his mind, and it had failed him. He is now in the county jail, where he will be held until he is examined by an insanity board.

An Appeal for a Famous American Name

Julian Hawthorne a few days ago observed his sixty-seventh birthday in the Federal penitentiary here in Atlanta. This month he will be entitled to a parole, and thousands of admirers of his distinguished father and friends of the son, who think him more sinned against than sinning, will shortly lay their views and their appeal before President Wilson.

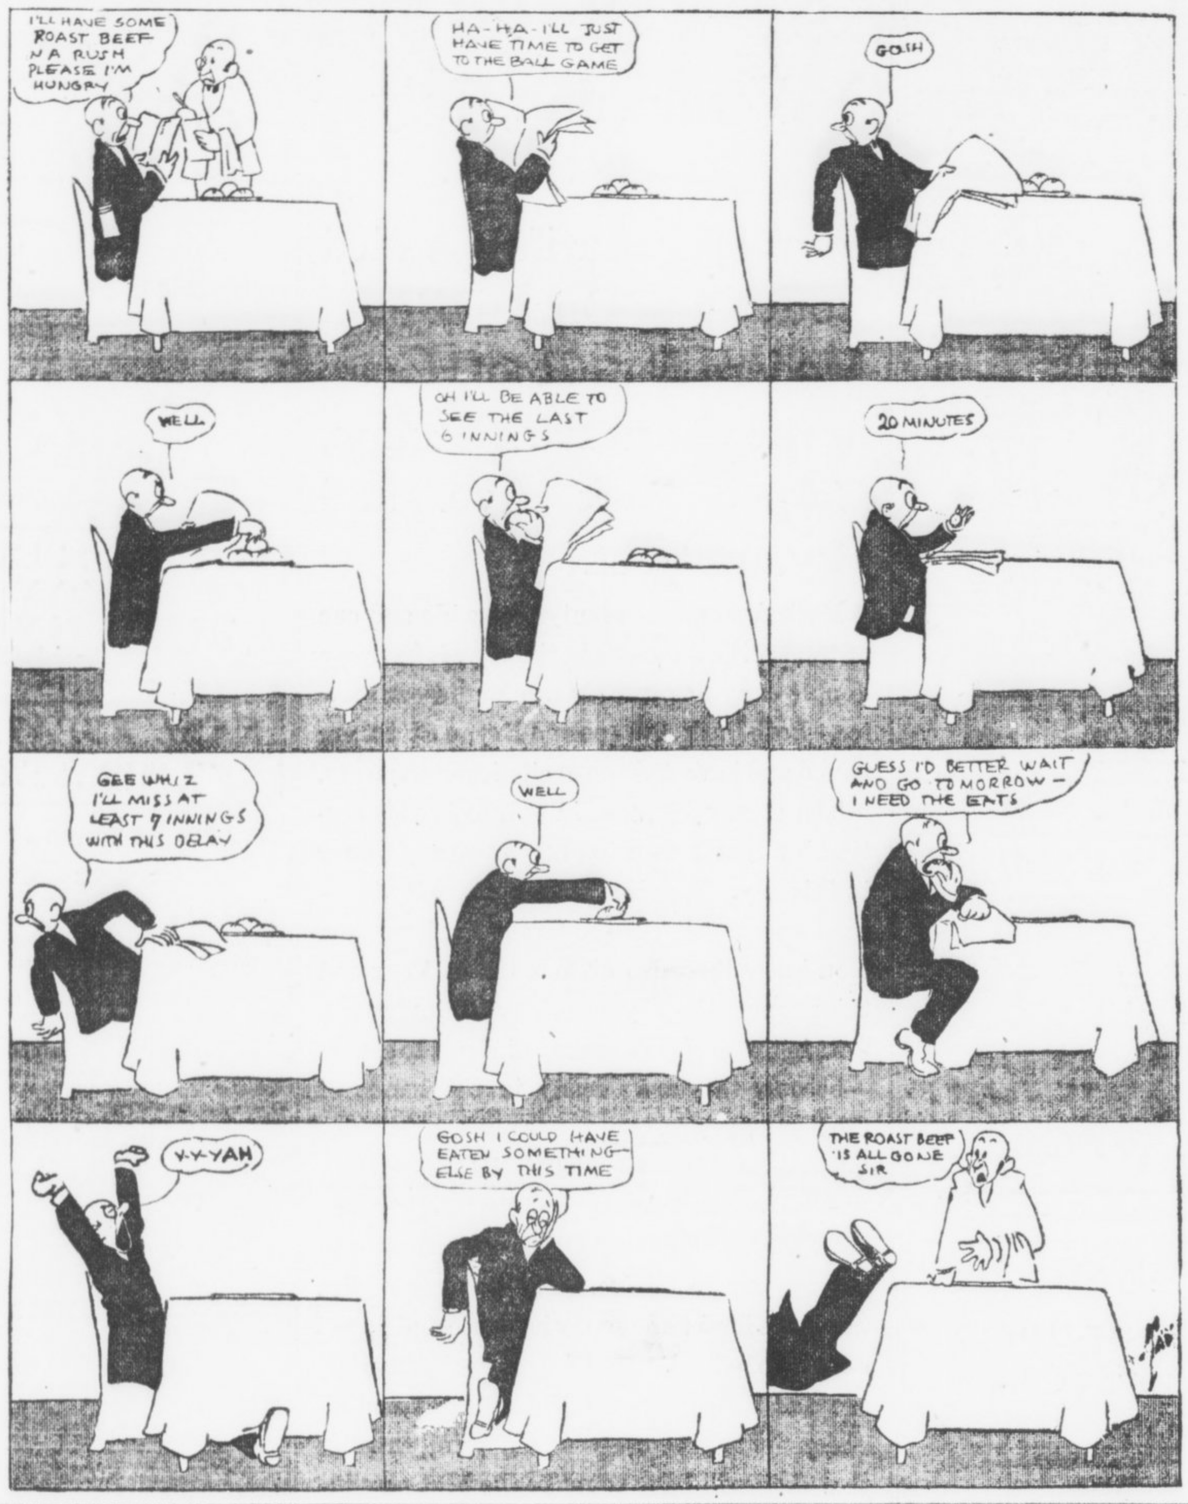
The President will be told that Julian Hawthorne was misled by evil associates in the lending of his name to get-rich-quick swindlers, from which he profited little or nothing; and that he was as much the dupe of his crooked associates as those victims who purchased stocks in the enterprises which his name was used to exploit.

This son of a brilliant American now finds himself in his old age humiliated before the eyes of the nation and in the eyes of the literary men of the world—through his own weakness and ignorance of the harsher ways of the world.

If a chief conspirator, like C. W. Morse, can be pardoned, why not a dupe, after he has been as bitterly punished as has Julian Hawthorne?

This newspaper gladly joins all admirers of Nathaniel Hawthorne in their efforts for his son and in their appeal to the President to relegate, as soon as possible, this record sinister on a famous name to the generous domain of the forgotten.

Did It Ever Occur to You?



Ella Wheeler Wilcox Writes on Motherhood

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

(Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner.)

GIRLS of seventeen are not, as a rule, given to serious thought.

Even marriage at sixteen seldom awakens the real woman in a year.

But there are rare exceptions.

Such an exception has been found in a young wife of seventeen, who is suddenly aware that she is to become a mother in four months' time.

Now she is filled with awe, and with anxiety! She says: "I have always had an ideal of exerting a good influence over an unborn child; and now I am distressed to think that all these months have passed without any conscious effort on my part. I have played ball, swam and indulged in other athletics according to my regular custom. And in leisure moments I have read Milton and Shakespeare and Burns.

"I am splendidly well, but I am most anxious lest I have done things I ought not to do, and left undone other things at this critical time.

Moderation in All Things.

"What can I do for the next few months to benefit my unborn child?"

The very best thing this young mother expectant can do is to exercise with moderation, rest when she feels like it, eat and drink with moderation, and wisdom, and be happy and trust God.

Motherhood is the most natural thing in the world for women who are normal and in good health.

It often produces a normal, healthful condition for those who are not well.

Nature never intended any woman to utterly change her mode of life when expecting a child, if her mode of life had been a reasonable and sensible one previously.

Outdoor life and athletics are both reasonable and sensible, and more harm would have resulted to both mother and child by giving them up suddenly, and taking too great concern about a perfectly natural condition, than by continuing to indulge in these pastimes as long as this young woman did.

No doubt the coming child will be strong in body, with excellent lung power.

And its coming into this plane of existence will not be attended with any abnormal difficulties.

Outdoor Life and Exercise.

We must remember that the Indian woman rides her horse, and performs all sorts of laborious tasks up to the very hour of her delivery.

The wife of an army officer told the writer of frequently seeing such women drop out of line for a few hours and return to the tribe later with the new-born child wrapped in a blanket.

All women who live an outdoor life, and who exercise in the open air, have less complications in maternity than those reared under hothouse conditons.

This young mother of seventeen, who takes such a serious view of her responkibility, is certain to bring a strong, beautiful child into the world, and equally sure of guiding it into a splendid maturity.

The Difficult Hours.

She need only fill her mind with love thoughts, and with faith in God and trust in the Unseen Powers which govern this earth, to have all go well with her.

In God's great universe, there are Guardian Angels provided for every mortal, and in such degree as we love and reverence these angels, and as we live worthy of them, do they guide and help us in our difficult hours.

If we refuse to believe in them, or continually think and talk and act in a way to pain them, we alienate them and deprive them of their power to help us.

About the expectnat mother are bands of Shining Ones, and if she will rest happy in the thought of their protection, and regard them as messengers and emissaries from God Himself, great strength and peace and happiness will come to her.

And great blessings upon her child.

For of such are the Kingdom of Heaven.

PERFUMED POWDER

By WEX JONES.

THE newest skirt for woman—it's a risky thing to knock it. For it's cutely fitted up with a cunning pistol pocket.

Oh, should you argue with the fair,
Powder smoke will fill the air;
Bullets whizzy
Will make you dizzy;
You had better bow and scoot
Before the girl begins to shoot,
Because—this here is cowboy lore—
Words are nix with a forty-four.

Still, speaking of this latest fad, this cunning pistol pocket.
Here, I think, are several things extremely prone to block it;

A handkerchief
And a powder puff;
Some trading stamps
And a manicure buff;
Smelling salts
And a pocket glass;
Jumbled up
With a theater pass
A recipe
For custard pie,
A headache cure
And a hook and eye——

The list's a good bit longer, but here I'll have to dock it.
For I've used up all the space allowed the lady's pistol pocket.

Rev. John E. White Writes on Sex in Religion

Woman Is the Mainstay of the Church and Expresses the Innermost Soul of Religion More Powerfully Than Man; Yet, He Says, She Has Had to Fight Against the Masculine Protest for Every Inch of Recognition in the Affairs of the Church.

WRITTEN FOR THE GEORGIAN

By REV. DR. JOHN E. WHITE

Pastor Second Baptist Church

"MADAM I may not call you, and mistress I loath to call you. I know not what to call you, but I thank you for your good cheer."

These are the words of Queen Elizabeth greeting the wife of Archbishop Parker. They indicate in a kindly temper the ecclesiastical ban on womanhood in the eighteenth century, which made even the wife of an archbishop a nonentity.

Put over against this the words of three great theologians—Tertullian, Erasmus, Rabelais—"Woman, thou art the gate of hell"—"An absurd and ridiculous animal"—"The greater part of them have hardly principles and depend for their morals on those they love."

This is the exhibit of the centuries on the subject of Sex in Religion up to the nineteenth. What we have of it in the twentieth century is equally banal, and much of it lingers in the modern religious world.

The Bar Sinister in Church.

It is an answer seeming fair, and pious to the point, when the limitations of female opportunity are protested, to say that in the church and in religion women have nothing to complain of; that they are free to exercise themselves in the work of the Lord.

If this were true, 'twere very true and very good. But the record of fact is discouraging.

From the beginning women have occupied no position of authority in the church. "Her voice has never been heard at a council, nor has her pen ever formulated a decree. Looking at religion in history, one would suppose at first sight that it was almost entirely a masculine affair.

Man has formulated its metaphysics, erected its theologies, founded and governed its institutions. He is its pope, priest and prophet; its legislator, preacher and pastor." From the Judean Decalogue, which includes the wife—"thy neighbor's wife"—in the list of man's chattels, down to the recent records of the Southern Baptist Convention and the Methodist Conference, the sex "bar-sinister" has persisted.

The fact readily acknowledged that women are the mainstay of religion has been strangely ineffective in overcoming the masculine prejudice against her religious equality.

Religion's Better Half.

The fixed prohibition, "thus far shalt thou come, but no further," has, however, not prevented women from exercising a powerful influence upon religious progress. The woman nature which expresses the innermost soul of religion more intimately than the man's, has projected itself tremendously, notwithstanding the ecclesiastical limitations set upon it.

Indirectly she has sweetened the sour theologians and softened the severe theologies. Through Monica we have Augustine, through Macrina we have Basil and Gregory, "who led them both to the faith and stirred them to their best work."

This list is a long one—through Jacqueline, Paschal, through Paula, Jerome, through Susanna Wesley, the Methodist Church, etc. But these consoling examples only make the wonder deeper that Christianity should have esteemed its most reliable exponent unworthy of absolute equality.

It scarcely meets the case to prove by illustrious examples that women are indispensable factors in religion. So have been the martyrs and the persecuted of all ages through what difficulties we know.

For the past century the woman movement in religion has been breaking through the barriers. In the Protestant communions the battle has gone on steadily and successfully, and so quietly as scarcely to be a battle. Yet in every one of the great denominations the right of woman to recognition as an equal co-laborer with man in the Kingdom of God has been challenged and opposed at every step. Mrs. Doremus for thirty years kept up the fight before the women were permitted to organize the first Woman's Missionary Society.

Among Southern Baptists 25 years ago a similar proposition was silently protested by the majority and outspokenly resisted by thousands. Among Southern Methodists a petition has been pending for years to give the women not equal, but more generous representation in the direction of the missionary funds contributed by themselves.

Fighting for Her Soul.

Speaking by the card, I have made efforts in country churches to organize women's societies, for doing the sort of work every Christian is commanded to do, only to discover insuperable prejudices in the minds of the brethren.

At the bottom of this discreditable history of female repression in religion lies the jealousy of the masculine prerogative. The principle of pernicious proxy, the right of the husband to discharge religious obligations for the wife is persistent to this hour in the practice of the churches.

It amounts in effect to a layman's priest craft, in which the man assumes to stand between the woman's soul and the free and full discharge of its responsibility in practical duty.

Now the clouds are breaking away and man is beginning to relent. It will be a good day for religion when the competency of every woman under God for all the freedom an individual soul is decreed for, without reference to sex, is heartily and universally proclaimed and enforced.

Letters From The Georgian's Readers

THE SYRIANS.

Editor The Georgian:

The recent case of naturalization in which Judge Henry A. M. Smith, of South Carolina, was interested, induces me to write the following: Judge Smith contends that Syrians are not entitled to citizenship in the United States. He has the right to give or refuse naturalization to the Syrian of his State, but the reasons given by him are not based on facts, and history does not support his position.

When we consider the part the Syrians have played in the history and development of the world, we readily see they are in no way connected with or related to the Sudanese. Three of the greatest monarchies of the ancient world—Chaldea, Assayria and Babylonia—were evolved and developed by the Syrian nation.

The inhabitants of Kurdistan, who are regarded as the descendants of the Syrians, not only speak a Semitic language, but believe themselves to be the same race with the Arabs and the same traditions are held of Syrians, who in their brief historical fragments recognize as their kinsmen the later Babylonians, Phoenicians and the Joktonian Arabs.

The Semitic race—that is the name of this division—was derived from Noah's son Shem, and this term Semitic has been adopted by scholars as probably descriptive of that ancient people who, branching from beyond Syria, carried their tribe into Northern Arabia, across the Red Sea and Upper Egypt into the African Desert, northward into Armenia, westward into Canaan and far out through the Mediterranean, touched the coast of Africa, and reaching even to Europe, Britain and spreading out to America. There has never been any mixing between the Syrians and the Sudanese. A great mountain range has ever separated the two races of people.

"THE HALF-MILLION" CITY.

Editor The Georgian:

I desire to subscribe to the spirit and purpose and to be enrolled as a member of the "Half-Million Club."

Great civic benefit can be accomplished by an emblem which will exemplify the spirit of Atlanta, the "Half-Million City," as advocated by The Georgian. You are to be congratulated in voicing the virile enthusiasm of the people.

Where else can you find a community that will subscribe in a single day something over $75,000 to entertain the Shriners' national convention, and almost a like amount that the city may enjoy, for one week, the most celebrated singers of the world? Atlanta's splendid banks, its lofty buildings, well-appointed hotels, excellent railroad facilities and geographical location make possible the ideal—the "Half-Million City"—in 1920.

VICE TRUST HERE, GIRL CHARGES

Girl Takes Poison, Writes to Sweetheart

MYSTERY IN ATTEMPT TO DIE

Phone Operator Near Death From Strychnine, After Despondency Over a Love Affair.

Despondency because of her fiance's inattention is said to have caused Miss Catheryn Reece, a telephone operator, to take an overdose of strychnine Sunday afternoon.

For hours her life was despaired of, but shortly after 9 o'clock Monday morning it was stated that she had a chance to recover.

No reason was given by Miss Reece for her action, beyond a note which she hurriedly wrote upon a pad, when the poison began to affect her. It read: "Sweetheart, you will never know." At the hospital Monday morning she denied that she had taken the strychnine with suicidal intent, but that she had made a mistake and taken an overdose.

Came Home Exhausted.

Miss Reece was taken to the hospital at 7 o'clock Sunday night from her boarding house at 57 Fraser Street. While it is not known at just what time she took the strychnine, it is thought she swallowed it before 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon, when she had returned to the house. Her regular hours of work were during the afternoon and night. She failed to return home Saturday night, and upon her arrival there Sunday afternoon stated that she was completely worn out—that she had worked 36 hours and was "nearly dead."

She went into her room and lay down. She had been boarding there but a week, and little was known of her. She roomed with Mrs. Etta Berry, whose sister, Mrs. Carter, runs the boarding house. A short while after she went to the room, Mrs. Berry heard her groaning and went into the room.

Her condition became so serious that Dr. E. D. Highsmith was summoned. After an examination he said that she was simply worn out, and gave her some capsules to relieve her. This was about ten minutes past six.

Asks Friend Be Notified.

It was about 6:30 o'clock that Miss Reese went into convulsions, and declared that she was going to die. She asked Mrs. Berry to call Miss Vera Casey, giving her two telephone numbers. Mrs. Berry was so busy trying to relieve Miss Reese that she did not have time to call Miss Casey. Instead she went to the phone and called Dr. Highsmith again. While she was gone from the room, Miss Reese seized a pad and wrote the note, "Sweetheart you will never know."

The girl then had heavy convulsions and Mrs. Berry hastily summoned an ambulance. She was removed to the Grady Hospital and the hard fight of the physicians to save her life began. An examination of the capsules by the hospital surgeons revealed the fact that they were harmless. No trace of the strychnine could be found in her room, and it is believed that she took it before she arrived home, three hours before her true condition was discovered.

Fascination of Death Leads Girl to Suicide

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, July 7.—Fascination for the mystery of death led Miss McDuff, a young American woman of wealth, beauty and ideals, to take her life in a little inn in the village of Villebon, according to a theory formed to-day by the police, who have been investigating the tragedy.

Miss McDuff is said to come from either a New York or a Cambridge, Mass., family.

The young woman, accompanied by an Englishman, arrived at Villacoublay a month ago. At the hotel where she lived she aroused much curiosity by her theories concerning death.

Departing Suitor Is Taught 'Checkers;' 'Moves' When Rocked

Lee Baldwin, of 58 Ellis Street, was the participant in a unique game of "checkers" when he called on a young woman at 99 Clarence Avenue last night. His "move" came when eight young men pelted him with rocks after he had bidden his girl good-night. Noise of the combat attracted the young woman's attention and she frantically notified police headquarters.

From time immemorial there has been a custom among certain young men residing in the southeastern portion of Atlanta, it is said, to "rock" young men from other sections of the city when they went calling there. The familiar salutation is: "Do you know how to play checkers?" Somewhat surprised, the young man will answer, "Yes." "Well, it's your move," is the information handed out, and then a shower of rocks and some rough handling.

Baldwin managed to make his escape to a car, his eight assailants endeavoring to pull him off. The police are investigating and arrests are expected to follow to-day.

Carolina Men Fight Fatal Pistol Duel

SAVANNAH, July 7.—A pistol duel between W. C. Mears, of Tarboro, and William Barnhill, of Tillman, S. C., resulted in the fatal wounding of Mears, who died in a hospital in Savannah.

There had been had blood between the men for some time. Barnhill sent word to Mears that he would shoot him on sight. They met at Tillman, when Barnhill immediately began shooting. Mears fired several shots after he fell. Barnhill is under arrest.

2 Aviators Escape In 300-Foot Plunge

CHICAGO, July 7.—Glenn Martin, Los Angeles aviator, and Charles H. Day, his mechanician, escaped death by a small margin to-day when their hydro-aeroplane collapsed in Lake Michigan while going at a rate of 40 miles an hour.

Martin attempted to glide to the water from a height of about 300 feet when the machine shot downward and struck the water with terrific force.

The two men clung to the disabled plane until help reached them.

Blazing Heat Back, After Cool Sunday

After a cool and pleasant Sunday, through which the thermometer did not rise above 84 degrees, a hot Monday faces Atlantans. At 8 o'clock it was 80 degrees, with the mercury steadily climbing.

Cool breezes and the low temperature made front porches as attractive as the parks Sunday afternoon, and the usual Sunday crowds were missing at Piedmont Park, Grant Park, Lakewood and the other places usually sought on hot Sunday afternoons.

Priest Gives Boxing Matches for Parish

NEW YORK, July 7.—With Mike Donovan, who once was Colonel Roosevelt's boxing instructor, as the chief star of the occasion, the Rev. Father H. P. Heffernan, pastor of the Sayville Roman Catholic Church, gave a series of boxing bouts in a club house near his church.

Father Heffernan, who believes every young man should learn the art of defending himself with his fists, was in his younger days an expert with the gloves.

Chief Believes Park Fire Was Incendiary

The burning of the commissionaire stand at Grant Park early Sunday morning has started an investigation by Fire Chief Cummings as to the probable incendiary firing of the building.

The building, said to have been worth $10,000, carried a small amount of insurance. The first floor held a soda fountain and confectionery stand. The upper floor was used as a dancing pavilion.

COCHRAN TO ASK SCHOOL INQUIRY

Fulton Legislator Believes There Has Been Extravagance at the State Agricultural Colleges.

Satisfied that mismanagement, incompetency or extravagance may have been prevalent in the various district agricultural colleges of late, Representative Ralph O. Cochran, of Fulton, will propose a resolution in the House calling for a rigid legislative probe into the same.

Mr. Cochran's idea is that the schools so far have failed pointedly to justify the great outlay of money required to keep them up.

The gentleman from Fulton will not charge any person with deliberate wrongdoing, but he does believe that the schools have not been conducted in a businesslike manner, and that they might, and should, be placed on a basis working to Georgia's greater advantage.

He calls attention to the deficits shown in the Treasurer's reports, and draws the seemingly warranted inference that the colleges are not returning to the State anything like the amount of money they should, considering the money the State spends upon them.

The eleven district schools are supposed to be self-supporting, in a way, but the returns, as indicated by the Treasurer's report, do not show them as approximating anything like that ideal status.

This proposed investigation, coming on the heels of the mix-up in the Experiment Station, is sure to attract widespread attention throughout Georgia, as every congressional district has one of these agricultural schools.

"I do not wish to be placed in the attitude of attacking the district schools,' said Mr. Cochran, discussing his resolution to-day. "I really want their co-operation in benefitting agricultural conditions in Georgia. I am trying to find out exactly what they are doing, and when that has been ascertained, we can proceed as the results indicate."

Before locating in New York Lieutenant Burt probably will visit his mother on Alta Avenue.

'FOUR-FLUSHED' LAUTERBACH'S ADMISSION

Confesses Boast That He Could Halt Steel Quiz Was Based on Flimsy Grounds.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—Edward Lauterbach, a New York lawyer, today confessed to the Overman lobby investigating committee he had told Lewis Cass Ledyard he was able to prevent or to head off the Congressional investigation of the steel trust.

Severely grilled, Lauterbach was forced to admit that, when he had told Ledyard of coming to Washington "to look over the situation," he actually had seen no member of the House nor Senate, nor any other official. He had learned "that President Taft was opposed to the investigation from Henry B. Martin, the much talked about secretary of the Anti-Trust League."

Calls Claim Exaggeration.

"Then your statement to Ledyard that you had ben to Washington and learned things that prompted you to say the investigation could be stopped was a falsehood?" demanded Senator Reed.

"It was an exaggeration," replied Lauterbach.

Lauterbach, when cornered as to the source of his information about "inside matters" in Washington, each time was forced to admit that David Lamar and Martin were his sole authority for his statements that President Taft did not want the investigation to proceed or that other high officials were opposed to the investigation.

Denies Posing as Power.

The witness declared that in his conversation with Ledyard, February 6, 1912, he did not represent himself either to have seen or to have been in the confidence of any member of the Democratic party.

Lauterbach declared he never had known Lamar in seventeen years purposely to do a wrong thing. He became acquainted with Lamar in 1906 when litigation regarding the Manhattan and Interborough railway lines in New York was pending, at which time Lamar represented the interests of Russell Sage and H. H. Rogers. He detailed several important lawsuits in which he was engaged as the result of his introduction to Rogers by Lamar.

Confirms Ledyard's Story.

Lauterbach also denied he called Lamar a blackmailer during his talk with Ledyard last year. Ledyard had testified before the committee that Lauterbach said he did not represent himself at that meeting as a representative of any member of the Democratic party. Lauterbach asserted this was correct and that his remark covered all subjects.

Council Will Place Tax Receiver Under Rule of Assessors

The long fight between city tax officials will reach a climax at the meeting of Council Monday afternoon when a resolution to place the Tax Receiver George eBauchamp, under the direction of the Tax Assessors is passed. The resolution calls on the Legislature to so amend the city charter.

It is expected by many that Mayor Woodward will veto the resolution and that Council will have to go over the whole affair again.

The Tax Assessors, C. D. Meador and John Malone, claim that Mr. Beauchamp has destroyed co-operation in the tax office.

The election of Messrs. Meador and Harrison comes up at the meeting. It is said that there will be no opposition to either of them.

Ellen Terry and Husband Deny They Intend to Separate

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 7.—Miss Ellen Terry and her husband, James Carew, denied emphatically to-day the report that they had separated. In a signed statement, Mr. and Mrs. Carew say:

"Absurd. Common report is a common liar; this is the first we have heard of it."

Miss Terry was first married to George Frederick Watts, the famous painter. She married him when very young, and they soon separated. Her second husband was Charles Wardell, an actor. Her present husband was formerly leading man in her company.

Militants Fire Pier King Was to Visit

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOUTHPORT, ENGLAND, July 7. Militant suffragettes attempted to burn the famous Southport pier early to-day. If it had not been for volunteer firemen the structure would have been lost. Fishermen went to the aid of the firemen and succeeded in quenching the flames.

The damage is estimated at about $50,000. The women evidently intended the conflagration as a royal rebuke, as King George was scheduled to pass before the pier this afternoon.

LIVERPOOL, July 7.—A suffrage bomb was exploded in the cellar of the Liverpool Stock Exchange to-day and the building was partially destroyed.

PLANTERS FIGHT TAX ON COTTON EXCHANGES

Declare Present Scheme Would Deliver Price-Making Power Into England's Hands.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—Southern planters are protesting to the Senate Finance Committee against the provision in the tariff bill taxing cotton exchange dealers .05 per cent.

This provision was inserted in the tariff bill by Senator Simmons to meet the demand that there shall cease all gambling in cotton futures and on margins. It resulted from attempts to corner the cotton market made by speculators on the New York Cotton Exchange.

The planters contend that with such a tax, amounting to about 50 cents a bale of cotton, no exchange can continue to do business. The planters are opposed to the New York Exchange, but they want the New Orleans and other Southern cotton exchanges to continue.

Defend South's Exchange.

In this argument they present it is held that the New Orleans Exchange and other Southern exchanges are bullish on the cotton market and seek to hold the price to the advantage of the Southern grower. These exchanges make actual deliveries.

The New York Exchange is friendly to the spinners and is bearish, its purpose being to depress the price of cotton. It makes no actual delivery, but serves the spinners for their future needs. Its business is done through the interchange of purchase and sale notes.

Gives Power to England.

With the wiping out of the cotton exchange in this country, the cotton exchange at Liverpool, also bearish, will take command of the cotton market and fix the price just as the sugar market price is fixed in Holland.

It is contended that through the proposed tax a great injustice would be done the cotton growers who are now laboring under the disadvantage of competition with Egyptian cotton, which is of high grade and commands a better price than Southern cotton.

Egyptian cotton, which needs salt air, is being grown in the reclaimed lands of Salton Sea, California, and it is an active competitor of the Southern cotton, which is short on fiber.

"Honorary mention" also is given Atlanta for showing a gain of more than 100 members the past fiscal year, having initiated 268. In charity Atlanta gave $1,542 during the year.

Georgia reports 29 Elks lodges with a total of 5,353 members, a gain of 498 over last year.

BARES PLOT OF SLAVERS TO CHIEF

Victim Tells Beavers Names of Women and Man Engaged in Traffic in Girls.

A new and sensational expose of vice conditions said to be prevalent in Atlanta was made Monday morning by Hattie Smith, a pretty 17-year-old girl, who was arrested in a hotel which was raided Sunday night.

If the statements of the Smith girl, who made a confession of her own guilt to the Chief, are true, Atlanta is in the clutches of one of the best organized vice systems in existence.

Certain downtown hotels, the girl claims, are the rendesvauz of women procurers who go out on the streets and entice young girls in where they are provided with every comfort and convenience, in addition to being carried out on long automobile rides by strange men.

Gives Chief Names.

At least the name of one of these procurers has been placed in the hands of Chief Beavers, who will make an arrest before night, it is believed. The name of a prominent citizen of Atlanta also has been given to the Chief, in addition to the names of several women involved in the traffic, it is said.

Hattie Smith's story Monday morning was dramatic in the extreme. She told Chief Beavers how she left her home last Wednesday; how she met the woman procurer; how she was enticed into the hotel in question, and then the other details of her shame. Her confession was complete.

She admitted her guilt and then upon the query of the Chief told all she knew about the conditions, which, she says, she saw with her own eyes.

Tells Who Enticed Her.

In the course of the conversation the girl gave the Chief the names of sevearl parties, including one or more prominent men of Atlanta, in addition to the name of the woman who enticed her to the hotel.

Following the examination of the girl, the Chief lost no time in beginning a most rigid investigation, and arrests likely will be made within the next two or three hours.

A number of downtown hotels are said to be booked for the police dragnet.

Local Stock Dealers See Trade Revived

Atlanta dealers in stocks and bonds report some revival of business. Disbursement of July dividends at a time when the prices of local stocks are low has brought some reinvestment demand, they say.

Several good-sized dividend checks have been turned over to investment dealers with instructions to purchase the "stamped" stocks of the Georgia Railway and Electric Company, which is a guaranteed 8 per cent security, selling just now around 118. This stock has held firm, compared with other local securities.

"Power common" is attracting attention, too.

Clubwomen Waging Fight to Save Birds

Led by Miss Nina Hornady, a prominent woman educator, Georgia club women are making a vigorous protest against the Clapp amendment, permitting wild birds to be killed or trapped. Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, head of the Federation of Women's Clubs in Georgia, is giving her support to Miss Hornady, and Mrs. Shepard W. Foster, State D. A. R. regent, is assisting.

"The time is at hand when every man, woman and child who loves the little feathered song-birds must aid in preserving them to our woods and forests," said Miss Hornady.

DEPARTMENT TO GOVERN BANKS PROPOSED

Bill, in Both House and Senate, Provides for Supervisor of State Institutions.

A bill providing for the creation of a department of banking to regulate and supervise approximately 600 State banks in Georgia was presented Monday to the House and Senate Committees on Banks and Banking by the Georgia Bankers' Association.

The bill, if passed, will revolutionize the method of supervision of State banks, as it will take such supervision entirely from the hands of the State Comptroller and his assistants.

Haynes McFadden, secretary of the Georgia Bankers' Association, said Monday morning that no lobby for the bill would be conducted; that it would be presented to the House and Senate Banking Committees, which may do as they see fit.

Bill Called Good One.

"The bill is a good one, we think," said Mr. McFadden, "and if passed will be a great benefit in the supervision of the State banks, which are now regulated by the State Comptroller and his two assistants.

"The present regulation and supervision is entirely inadequate, as is obvious, when it is brought out that these three men are supposed to conduct examinations of approximately 600 banks each year. Two examinations per year givese to each one of these men 400 inspections to make in 365 days."

The proposed bill provides for the creation of a department of banking, which shall be in charge of a superintendent appointed by the Governor for a term of four years, the first term beginning January 1, 1915, and expiring January 1, 1919.

Office to Pay $4,000 Year.

The superintendent shall receive a salary of $4,000 a year and shall have the power to appoint from time to time an assistant superintendent, who shall be ex-officio examiner, and such additional examiners and office assistants as may be required to discharge the duties of the office.

The assistant superintendent and special examiners shall be skilled accountants and familiar with the banking business. The assistant superintendent shall receive a salary of $2,000 per annum, while each assistant shall receive a salary of $1,800 per year.

Every bank, trust company and other corporation doing a banking business in the State, excluding private banks, copartnerships or voluntary associations and national banks, shall be subject to supervision by the State department.

New York Stares At Trouser-Skirt

NEW YORK, July 7.—New York was first astonished and then amused to-day when the first suffragette trouser-skirt arrived here.

The skirt or trouser—it may be called either—came from Paris with Mrs. Nat Spingold, known to the world as Mme. Francis. She arrived on the steamer La Provence and paraded around the deck to give New York a real good look.

The skirt is equipped with two pockets, one so large it will immediately find favor among the English militants as a likely place to carry bombs, while real suspender buttons range around the waist band.

Perhaps the most startling effect is produced by the sleeveless waist which must accompany the new affair. The body of the waist is plain but attractive, but the sight of two bare arms sticking from it is rather curious.

Coleman in Ben Hill Jail for Safekeeping

FITZGERALD, July 7.—W. A. Coleman, who is charged with the murder of Leon Melvin, a Wilcox County youth, and who several weeks ago was brought to Ben Hill County jail for safe-keeping, but later carried back to Wilcox, is back in Ben Hill County jail on account of an attempt to lynch him at Abbeville last week.

Coleman was carried to Vienna, but the Sheriff of Dooly County refused to take him. From Vienna he was carried to Cordele, where the Crisp Sheriff likewise refused him. He was brought on to Fitzgerald, where he is at present.

SAFE-BLOWER, IN SILENCE, WAITS HIS HEARING

Walter Turpin, Held for Blowing Kirkwood Postoffice, Denies Having Police Record.

Walter Turpin, alias J. W. Johnson, who blew the Kirkwood postoffice safe last Friday night, will receive a preliminary hearing Monday in Decatur, DeKalb County. Justices of the Peace A. Shelverton, of Decatur, and W. P. House, of Kirkwood, will preside.

Apparently unconcerned as to what was done with him, Turpin sat indifferently in his cell in the DeKalb County jail awaiting a hearing on the bold attempt at burglary.

"I've said all I'm going to until my trial comes," he responded to all questions. "All this talk about my being a crook with a long police record is nonsense. I will tell the truth when I am brought up for trial."

Turpin, from the talkative prisoner he was when first taken, has become taciturn and sits in the back of his cell most of the time.

His wounds are much better, and it is believed that he will not suffer from them after a few days.

Bones of Snake as Poisonous as Fangs

VIDALIA, July 7.—That the deadly poison of the rattlesnake is effective, even after the reptile has lain dead and the bones bleached in the sun for several months, was demonstrated when Cicero Johnson, a negro, stepped upon the bones of a dead rattler while cutting oats on the Beasley farm near Normantown.

The negro was barefooted at the time and his foot was severely lacerated by the bones. Swelling immediately ensued and it is likely that amputation will be necessary.

Author Justified in Killing Unruly Negro

MACON, July 7.—Harry Stillwell Edwards, author and Macon postmaster, and his son, Prentiss Edwards, were justified in killing Harrison Newton, a negro farm hand, according to the verdict returned by the Coroner's jury.

Newton was shot at the Edwards farm, near Macon, Saturday night and died Sunday in the Macon Hospital. The negro, while intoxicated, had attacked his wife and children with an ax, when Edwards and his son went to their aid.

No Ban Yet Needed On Waycross Gowns

WAYCROSS, July 7.—Women and girls in Waycross have not passed the decency point in dress, according to the police, and it is not probable that the Chief of Police or the Mayor will be called upon to issue a proclamation to women warning them about their attire in public.

A few slit skirts, however, have made their appearance here.

BONUS FOR PONY CLUBS HELPS "TRAILERS"

Less Than Month Left for Contestants — Told to Imitate Milkman.

Three weeks and a few odd days remain of The Georgian and American pony contest. Not a moment of this time can be wasted by the boys and girls who want the beautiful little ponies which the whole city admired when they were paraded July 4.

The big bonus offer for clubs of five has expired. Nearly all the contestants worked hard, and turned in one or more clubs. Some turned in a dozen clubs. As rapidly as possible, these bonuses will be accredited, and the standings announced. Then it will be seen that some of the "trailers" now are out in front.

Good, solid work from now on will count wonderfully. No doubt some of the contestants feel that they have seen every one possible—they can not think of the next place to turn for subscriptions. If they have been working conscientiously, this feeling is natural. But this is a large city. There are hundreds more, probably within walking distance of the contestants' homes, who have not been approached. Boys and girls now should cover their districts like the mailman does, a tireless house to house canvass will bring excellent results.

"Take your receipt books," advises the contest manager, "and go through the stubs. Tabulate carefully all those who took the paper for a month or two months. Note their expiration dates. Then see every one a few days before the time expires. Ten out of every eleven will renew. The sort of paper we are giving subscribers is the best possible help for the contestants. Their friends see they are getting their money's worth, and more."

Pastor Prefers Life Of Mule to Convict

"I would rather be one of Fulton County's mules than a convict in its convict camp," declared Dr. A. R. Holderby Sunday morning at Moore Memorial Church in a sermon on "The Shame of Georgia's Diabolical Convict System."

Dr. Holderby declared that it cost the county 48 cents a day per head to feed its mules, while only 10 cents a day was expended in feeding each convict. He stated that the convict laws instead of encouraging a man to a better life, bring out all the evil in his nature.

Victim of Joy Ride Dies From Injuries

MACON, July 7.—Myrtis Brown, 23 years old, died at the Macon Hospital as the result of a broken back sustained four weeks ago when an automobile in which she and three friends were "joy riding" crashed into a telephone pole on the Houston Road. Her spinal column was fractured between the shoulder blades, and three ribs were broken.

The accident took place June 8. In the machine at the time were E. M. Devore, of Atlanta; I. M. Heath, May Lavinsky and Myrtis Brown.

Assembly Asked to Increase Pensions

Appeal to the Georgia Legislature for an increase from $60 to $100 a year in pensions for Confederate veterans has been made by Mrs. A. J. Adkins.

Mrs. Adkins sets forth in her letter to the legislators that the increase of pension is entirely logical as the declining years of the veterans make it more and more difficult for them to add to their own support. While $5 a month is acceptable, she says, $8 and a fraction is better.

LEE'S ATTORNEY IS READY FOR WRIT FIGHT

Habeas Corpus Move to Free Negro in Phagan Case Due to Start Monday.

Habeas corpus proceedings in behalf of Newt Lee, negro night watchman at the National Pencil Factory, were promised Monday by the negro's attorney, Bernard L. Chappell. Settlement of this phase of the Phagan murder mystery will determine definitely the status of the negro.

It is known that the State regards Lee as a material witness in building up its case against Frank. The attitude of Mr. Chappell is that his client knows no more about he crime than he already has told, and should therefore be freed. Lee has told the detectives nothing which links any man directly with the crime. By the defense, his story is held to point to the guilt of Leo Frank no more than to the guilt of Conley.

The State, however, will fight any effort to give the negro his liberty. Solicitor Dorsey fears that Lee will get out of the jurisdiction of the court once he is permitted his freedom.

The battle over Lee is the only outward sign of activity in the Phagan case either by the defense or the prosecution, but it is known that the defense is busily engaged completing its case. One new witness was interviewed Saturday by Frank's lawyers, and his affidavit taken before a notary public. A strong net is being woven about Conley. The nature of the testimony is being kept secret, but it is known that the defense expects to free Frank by showing that it was Conley who committed the crime. The negro is said to be enmeshed in the testimony in the hands of the defense.

Despite rumors of another postponement, attorneys for the defense and prosecution said Monday that they would be ready to go ahead with the case at the time set for trial, July 28, and that they knew of no reason for further delay.

Jury to Consider Indicting Conley.

What was considered a direct reference to the Phagan case was made in the charge of Superior Judge George L. Bell to the Grand Jury Monday morning. He said he wanted to place particular emphasis on recent "horrible homicides" and urged the jury to probe deep in an effort to find clews that would lead to perpetrators.

The Grand Jury was organized at 9 o'clock Monday morning with W. D. Beattie foreman. Judge Bell made one of the shortest charges ever delivered in a Fulton County courtroom.

Immediately following the charge the jury went into executive session to consider bills presented by the Solicitor's office. After to-day's session the calendar of criminal business will be disposed of, and the jury will have every opportunity to take up any matters it might see fit.

A meeting will be called later in the week when a definite plan of action will be outlined for the term. It was regarded as likely that the Phagan case would be reopened and an indictment against Jim Conley considered.

Other matters that might be taken up are recent developments with the police department, in which eight patrolmen were suspended for alleged corruption, the counter charges of corruption made by them and charges of open vice.

Carnegie Explains Gift to Vanderbilt

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 7.—Andrew Carnegie, passing through London en route to Skibbo Castle, was seen by a representative of the Hearst papers in reefrence to the action of nine bishops of the Methodist Church over the $1,000,000 gift for the Vanderbilt University Medical School.

Mr. Carnegie wrote the following.

"The proper authorities have accepted Mr. Carnegie's gift and he has nothing whatever to say—he never gives to sectarian educational institutions, feeling that no one should be debarred from a medical education on account of his theological views."

Valor of '61 Pastor's Theme to the Young

Lessons from the war between the States were inculcated at the West End Christian Church Sunday by the Rev. William C. Foster, the pastor, who appealed to young people in particular to fight life's battle with the valor exhibited by the soldiers of Robert E. Lee.

"Let us forget the hatred," Dr. Foster said, "but remember the bravery of our heroes."

Dr. Foster emphasized the practical advantages of country-wide education and deplored the fact that there were not enough schools in Georgia.

Suffragist Predicts Ballots for Bullets

That all wars since historical times began have taken a toll of 15,000,000,000 lives, was the statement made Sunday by Dr. Thomas E. Green, a lyceum lecturer stopping at the Hotel Ansley.

"Militarism is the burden of the nations," said Dr. Green, "and I look to woman suffrage to lift it from the shoulders of humanity. Equal suffrage is a stepping stone to universal peace, for when it comes the battles of the world will be fought with ballots instead of bullets."

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

by JAMES B. NEVIN

The Legislature, even as a tentative proposition, already is finding the matter of tax reform a perplexing problem, and one calculated to give it much trouble before it is adjusted.

Particularly is the question of tax equalization bothersome and full of difficulty.

Mr. Lipscombe, of Clarke, has an equalization bill pending in the House, and Mr. Cole, of Bartow, and Mr. Swift, of Muscogee, have inheritance tax bills.

The former was drawn by one of the most eminent lawyers in Georgia—an ex-Supreme Court Justice—and is thought to be as nearly perfect as such a measure can be made. Members are non-committal with respect to it, however.

The latter two bills, both carefully prepared, seem to have attracted considerable favorable attention, and both have the backing of the administration, in a general way, but whether either will pass is problematical.

The Legislature plainly is inclined to reform the tax laws, but it just as plainly does not know exactly how to go about it or where to begin.

"One trouble in the situation," said a well-known member of the House to-day, "is the real or imaginary opposition of the farmers to a board of tax equalizers.

"As a matter of fact, I do not believe the farmers, in any very large proportion, anyway, oppose the tax equalization idea. Perhaps a few of them do, but I fail to see where any honest farmer—and the majority of Georgia farmers are honest—should.

"Instead of putting up the farmers' taxes, an equalization act much more likely would put them down. If assessments were adjusted in Georgia as they should be, the total would be so much larger than it is now that taxes, in the average amount paid would come down rather than go up—and the farmer would find himself immensely benefited by this. Instead of a State rate of 5 mills, if taxes were equalized, we probably should be able to get along with a rate of 2 1-2 or 3 mills.

"So, if a farmer's lands were raised—they might not be, and would not be in many cases, of course—a trifle, the total of his taxes likely would be less than now.

"The purpose of a tax equalization act is to catch the tax-dodgers, and to catch them in the open. Such a measure would catch them, too. And if the dodgers were made to come to time, the present taxpayers of the State would find themselves charged up with less of the public expense instead of more.

"It is to be hoped that the present Legislature will pass some genuine tax reform measures, even if it does nothing else during the present session."

Contrary to general expectation and prediction, the Tippins bill, so called in the last Legislature, has not been re-introduced in the present House.

It has been stated, time and again, that the prohibitionists of Georgia generally look upon this measure as useless and of doubtful judgment at this time, and a sort of "let-well-enough-alone" sentiment appears to be spreading among temperance advocates.

The truth of the matter is, prohibitionists seem fairly well satisfied with the status of things in Georgia, and agitation in the present Legislature—or, anyway, in the present session—seems unlikely.

The Chattanooga News recently stated, in an editorial praising Atlanta, that Georgia has the best enforced prohibition laws of any prohibition State in the nation, and far better than Tennessee. This seems to be agreed to all around, and the fact that the Tippins bill has not been reintroduced, notwithstanding the confident predictions that it would be, lends color to the thought that prohibitionists in Georgia incline to agree with The Chattanooga News.

The old expression, "I wouldn't vote for that fellow for dog catcher," has no humiliating significance in Savannah.

There the office of dog catcher is an ancient and honorable institution, and one to which folks generally look up in indicated awe.

Announcement of the appointment of E. H. Henry as official dog catcher for the city of Savannah, in compliance with the ordinance adopted by City Council at its last meeting, has been made by Mayor R. J. Davant. Bond in the sume of $100 has been furnished by Henry, who begins his official duties at once.

The catcher will be provided with a wagon, in which a crate will be placed to retain the impounded animals. A net will also be provided for use in catching the dogs, and a "pound" will be constructed at police headquarters.

As soon as the equipment can be completed the catcher will start on his rounds.

To Mr. Adams, of Hall, belongs the honor and distinction of starting the House roll call in the way it should go.

His name, like Abou Ben Adhem's, leads all the rest, and many a time he has set the fashion in voting, to see himself vindicated in the final round-up.

Adams rarely is absent from his seat in the House. When Clerk Bolfeutlet begins the call every morning, Adams is the first to answer "present," unless Mr. Edmondson, of Brooks, beats him to it and moves that he roll call be dispensed with.

The last name to be called is "Mr. Speaker." He generally votes one way or the other, although Speakers many times have inclined to refrain from going on record unless compelled to.

MOBS IN FLORIDA LYNCH 2 NEGROES

Assailant of Child Near Pensacola and Slayer of Sheriff, Near Jacksonville.

PENSACOLA, July 7.—A negro, charged with assaulting the 6-year-old daughter of a prominent Holmes County farmer, living near Esto, was lynched to-day at Milton, Santa Rosa County. It is said that parties from Bonifay and Marianna took part. The child was attacked Saturday night and is now at the point of death.

The negro was arrested Saturday night, and the Holmes County Sheriff, fearing a lynching, was bringing him to Pensacola for safekeeping when, according to passengers, a mob at Milton held up the train ten minutes, finally finding the negro and taking him from the Sheriff.

The lynching was deferred until this morning, awaiting the arrival of parties from Bonifay and Marianna in automobiles.

Clay County Mob Avenges Slaying.

JACKSONVILLE, July 7.—Roscoe Smith, a negro, was lynched on Sunday at Yellow River, near here, for the murder of Sheriff T. S. Cherry, of Clay County, Fla., when the officer attempted to arrest him for gambling at Stuart & Harrison's turpentine still.

A mob of fully 100 men pursued and captured the negro, returning to the scene of the killing, where they shot Smith to death. His ears were cut off for souvenirs. No further trouble is expected.

Wind Storm Wrecks Waycross Churches

WAYCROSS, July 7.—Considerable damage was done in Waycross by a windstorm that swooped down on the city Sunday afternoon with no warning. Four churches were demolished and a dozen small houses blown from their foundations, three of the number turning completely over.

Trees and fences in all parts of the city were blown down and many windows and much plate glass were smashed. A three-story building used by negroes for their lodge meetings was so badly damaged it will have to be rebuilt.

SALE OF A., B. & A. ROAD AROUSES ASSEMBLY

Rumor That Louisville & Nashville Seeks Line Rouses Interest in Fate of W. & A.

The coming sale of the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad, under foreclosure proceedings, and the rumor that the Louisville and Nashville has its eyes upon it, has started something of a panic among Georgia legislators, particularly as the present Legislature likely will consider seriously the problem of the Western and Atlantic's re-lease in 1919.

There are two parties in the present Legislature with respect to the Western and Atlantic Railway. One favors the re-lease of the State's road as it now stands, the other the extension of the road to the Atlantic seaboard.

If the L. & N. gobbles the A., B. & A., it is held by some that it thereby will have strategic advantage over the State road in the matter of extension to the sea. Indeed, if the L. & N. gets the A., B. & A., it is predicted that the railroad map of Georgia likely will be pretty well changed within a short time.

There are those in the General Assembly who are advocating the purchase of the A., B. & A. by the State, thus extending the W. & A. to the sea. Others hold that the State should keep its hands off the A., B. & A. road and confine itself to such railroad property as it now possesses, with its fine terminal facilities in Atlanta and Chattanooga.

If the L. & N. gets the A., B. & A., it is figured by some legislators that it immediately provide for entry into Atlanta by some other way than that over the State road, as it now comes in. If this is done, it is contended that the W. & A. will will be pretty well put out of busines.

Traveling Man Drops False Arrest Charge Against 2 Policemen

No charges will be filed with the Police Commissioners by C. H. Griffith, the New Orleans traveling man who declared he was subjected to false arrest Saturday morning by Sergeant Brown and Patrolman Rivers. Griffith made his complaint to Mayor Woodward. His failure to follow up the charges was because of business engagements in Montgomery and Mobile. He also said that it would be necessary for him to bring the women whom he was with Friday night into the case, which he did not care to do.

Chief Beavers is authority for the statement that no charges will be filed with the board.

Mayor Woodward will inform the board officially of the complaint registered by Griffith, but that is probably all the investigation will amount to.

CHAUTAUQUA, N. Y., July 7.—Oscar Williams, a steeplejack by trade, was instantly killed at Mayville while performing a "slide for life."

Hanging by his teeth to a pulley on a rope stretched from the courthouse dome to a tree about 350 feet distant, he succeeded in making the slide, but the buffer of grain sacks proved inadequate and his brains were dashed out against the tree.

CLOSING OF BANK INVOLVES 40 MILLIONS

One of the Oldest Institutions In Pittsburg Ordered by U. S. Comptroller to Suspend.

PITTSBURG, July 7.—The First-Second National Bank of Pittsburg, one of the city's oldest banking institutions, closed its doors to-day by direction of the Acting Comptroller of the Currency. The amount involved is said to be between $24,000,000 and $40,000,000. One report is that the amount will reach $200,000,000.

The Pittsburg Clearing House had a special meeting last night to consider the impending failure and to-day another conference was held.

Hundreds of depositors, many of them foreigners employed in the great steel mills, flocked to the bank early to-day but a squad of police kept every one moving.

The First and Second National Banks combined last March and occupied a new 25-story building.

A typewritten notice on the doors stated the institution was in the hands of National Bank Examiner Samuel M. Hann and Sheriff Smith.

A director of the bank to-day made the following statement:

"The officers and directors are a unit in maintaining that a great injustice has been done and that the bank is solvent at this moment. We are also convinced that all claims will be paid in full. If the Treasury Department, operating through the Comptroller of the Currency, had not interfered and had not subjected the bank to a rigid examination by special examiners who were not able to judge values of property and securities in this community, we would have been able to work out to success our problems."

McKeesport, Pa., Bank Closes, Also.

PITTSBURG, July 7.—The First National Bank of McKeesport closed its doors at 10:30 this morning.

The following unsigned notice was posted on the door of the institution:

"On account of the First-Second National Bank of Pittsburg asking for a receiver it is thought best for all of our depositors to close this bank for the present."

MACON SCANDAL CLIMAX DUE IN LIBEL SUITS

Accuser Will Fight Actions for Damages by Exonerated Members of Christian Church.

MACON, July 7.—New sensations are expected in the Macon church scandal, in which Professor Frank M. Charlton, choir leader, and Mrs. Effie Lester, secretary of the Ladies' Aid Society, of the First Christian Church, were exonerated Sunday of all charges of wrongdoing, when Attorney Claud Estes, representing Mrs. Lester, and the attorneys for Professor Charlton bring suits for slander in the courts. The damage suits probably will be filed within the next few days, according to statements today of parties involved.

That Macon is promised one of the sharpest legal fights in her history is certain, it is said, as Attorney Julian Urquart, retained by Mrs. Jenkins, one of the accusers, will contest every point of the plaintiffs in defense of his client.

Cleared at Open Meeting.

The aftermath of the affair follows the exoneration of the accused parties at an open session of the First Christian Church Sunday morning, when the report of the elders' investigating committee was read to the congregation.

The session was dramatic. Immediately following the sermon the congregation of the little echurch went into executive session, with Elder Lenoir Erwin, member of the investigating committee, presiding. Seated in the choir directly behind Mr. Erwin was Professor Charlton, slightly pale, but otherwise composed. Near the front was Mrs. Lester, who watched the proceedings with remarkable composure. Mr. Lester sat beside his wife.

Report of Inquiry Complete.

When Elder Roper, chairman of the investigating committee, was called upon to read the report, the congregation leaned forward as if to catch every word of the elder.

The report, as predicted, went into the minutest detail of the whole affair, described every phase of the investigation, pointed out the alleged shallowness of the charges and recommended the complete vindication of the accused.

Elder Roper paused when he had finished reading. There was a dead silence for fully a half minute and then Elder Erwin arose and in solemn tones announced an open meeting for the free discussion of the report.

Woman Speaks for Charlton.

"Speak now or forever hold your peace," said Mr. Erwin.

There was a moment of silence, broken at length by the voice of a woman.

"I have known Professor Charlton for fifteen years," she said, "and in that time I have known him to be a perfect gentleman."

The speaker was Mrs. E. T. Gibson, a member of the Methodist Church and formerly of Bloomington, Ill., the choir leader's old home.

Mrs. Gibson was the only person in the audience to accept the elders' invitation to speak. Elder Irwin then put the question of the guilt of the accused parties to the congregation.

Exoneration Is Unanimous.

Practically every one in the audience arose on the motion to exonerate Professor Charlton and Mrs. Lester. Not one stood when the "nay" vote was put.

Immediately following the vote, the Rev. Mr. Anderson called upon the congregation to sing, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," after which a prayer, one of the most fervent ever heard in the little church, was offered by the pastor. While the vote was being taken Professor Charlton and Mrs. Lester retired from the auditorium. They were greeted by scores of friends following the close of the service.

Place Faith in Accused.

"Our conclusion is," it is stated in the report, "that the parties are innocent of the charges made or others of like nature. We have as much confidence in the integrity and Christian character of both parties as we ever have had and this is the first time we have ever been given occasion to question them."

It is recommended further that the report be published in The Christian Builder and copies for publication be furnished the newspapers and that they become a part of the church records. The report is signed by L. M. Erwin, W. H. Roper, A. W. Smith, A. M. Erwin, Leroy M. Anderson, Elders of the First Christian Church.

M'NAB'S SLAVERY REPORT GIVEN OUT

Kahn, California, Again Declares Justice Is Being Blocked, and Scores President.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—The publication to-day of former District Attorney McNab's report to Attorney General McReynolds, dated May 21, in the Caminetti-Diggs white slave cases, giving the details of the alleged seduction of the Warrington and Norris girls by young Caminetti and Diggs, aroused new interest in the cases.

Representative Kahn, of California, and other members of the California delegation declared the House Judiciary Committee was wrong in suppressing the McNab report. In the committee report before the House, those parts of the McNab report dealing with the methods used to lead the girls astray; the alleged attempt to suborn perjury and the revelation that Caminetti's counsel had told McNab that Caminetti probably would plead guilty were omitted.

Kahn declared to-day he would demand that all the correspondence in the case be made public. He declared the McNab report justified his charge that a ystematized effort was being made to block justice, and that the explanation of the President and Attorney General McReynolds in the case was not well founded.

She also took first prize in the women's egg and ladle race.

At the picnic of the association last year, Mrs. Murray, then Miss Grace Beddingfield, was winner of the girls' race. She has taken first place in other races, too, and her friends declare she can outrun any one of her sex in Atlanta. She herself says she is willing at any time to enter into a race with any of Atlanta's married women who think they can run.

Mrs. Murray also is a swimmer and diver of ability.

BULGAR VICTORY COSTS SERVIA 11,000 LIVES

Three Regiments Annihilated in Great Battle Lasting Two Days and Three Nights.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOFIA, July 7.—The tide of victory in the second Balkan war has swung to the Bulgarians. Signal successes are reported.

Eleven thousand Servians of the western wing of the Servian army were reported killed in an engagement near Deslinici, 8,000 others were wounded, many prisoners were taken and the balance were put to flight, according to a dispatch from General Savoff to C'zar Ferdinand to-day. It was one of the decisive battles of modern times, according to the Bulgarian Government.

Three Servian regiments were annihilated in the battle which started along the Bregalnitza River in central Macedonia. The fight lasted two days and three nights before the exhausted Servian soldiers gave way before the repeated charges.

The battlefield, which covers an area of nearly 20 square miles, was strewn with dead and wounded, all of whom were left behind.

The Bulgarian casualties were not given.

Intrigue by Austria Blamed for Conflict.

BERLIN, July 7.—A diplomatic intrigue engineered by Austria is responsible for the second Balkan war between Servia, Greece and Montenegro on one hand and Bulgaria on the other, according to a telegram received to-day from Sofia.

Dr. Daneff, one of the leading Bulgarian statesmen, is responsible for the accusation that Austria led Bulgaria to believe that Austrian support would be given Bulgaria in any dispute that country might have with any other of the "allies."

When war was inevitable, Austria withdrew this promise of support on the ground that it might endanger the peace of Europe.

Greeks Ask Powers To Halt Massacres.

ATHENS, July 7.—Greece has appealed to the Powers to prevent further outrages by Bulgarians in Macedonia.

Dispatches from Salonika to-day stated that the Bulgarians had massacred and tortured hundreds of Greek women and children near the town of Negrita. All the able-bodied men are fighting in the Greek armies and there was no one to protect the defenseless families.

Lack of Funds May Halt Balkan War.

ROME, July 7.—Lack of funds probably will put an end to the new Balkan war. All the States in the Balkan league are close to bankruptcy. The powers are expected to refuse any more loans in order to compel the cessation of hostilities.

COATED TONGUE MEANS LAZY LIVER

A Lazy Liver Needs a Dose of Dodson's Liver Tone—Guaranteed to Take Place of Calomel.

When your doctor looks to see if your tongue is coated, he is trying to find out if your liver is working properly. A few years ago doctors had to prescribe calomel—there was nothing else to give.

Recently in many sections of the country Dodson's Liver Tone has practically taken the place of calomel as a liver remedy. Dodson's Liver Tone is mild, pleasant tasting and harmless—which makes it a fine medicine for use when your children become bilious and constipated. But the most remarkable feature of Dodson's Liver Tone is the fact that all druggists who sell it, guarantee it absolutely. The druggist will return your money without argument if a bottle fails to give entire satisfaction.

Price, 50 cents. We suggest that you get a bottle to-day and have it ready for the next member of your family whose liver goes wrong.

U. S. Now Is Fourth In Naval Strength

WASHINGTON, July 7.—The United States is now occupying fourth place among the navies of the world and not third, as is generally supposed.

The real loss of prestige to the navy by reason of the failure to keep up the naval construction program is shown very clearly in Brassey's Manual, whose rating of the nations was discussed generally to-day by officers at the Navy Department.

Rear Admiral Bradley Fiske, chief of staff of Secretary Daniels, pointed out the real comparative strength of the nations as shown by Brassey's figures, as follows:

England 29, Germany 19, France 17, United States 13. Japan is not given.

Lynching Story of 'Seer' Proves Fake

DALTON, July 7.—The fortune teller who informed Mrs. Will Grady that her husband, who disappeared from home, had been hanged by three men and his body disposed of, causing her to come to Dalton to get warrants for the arrest of several men she suspected, has been shown up as a fake by a letter from Grady, who had gone to Alabama.

Mrs. Grady, a bride of three months was overjoyed and hastened here to stop a search party she thought was looking for her husband's body.

THE WOMAN THOU GAVEST ME

By reading the synopsis and installment printed here of the most daring serial of the year you can continue it in Hearst's Magazine for July, just out.

FULL SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS

DANIEL O'NEILL, a powerful, self-made man, forces his only daughter, Mary, into a loveless marriage with the impecunious and profligate Lord Raa, so that his ambition to have his descendants the rightful heirs of the one earldom in Ellan may be realized. Mary, a convent-raised young woman, shocked to find her husband a man of sordid, sensual passions, refuses utterly to have anything to do with him until such time as he can prove himself worthy of her love. During the honeymoon abroad Alma Lier, a divorcee who had been expelled from the convent Mary attended in Rome, attaches herself to the party, and makes the "honeymoon trip" a long series of slights and insults for Lady Raa.

At last Lady Raa becomes certain of the infidelity of her husband and his misconduct with Alma Lier. On her return to London Mary encounters her old playfellow, Martin Conrad, who has returned from his triumphant expedition to the Antarctic. Drawn into ever-closer relations with the only man for whose friendship she ever cared, Mary finally awakes to the fact that she is hopelessly in love with Martin. Terrified by this knowledge, and finding herself more and more in love with Martin, she determines to run away from the cause of her distress, and go home.

Mary's home-coming to Castle Raa is a sad affair. Her husband fills the tumble-down old mansion with hith his fast friends from London, including Alma Lier, who assumes control of the household. Ultimately the illness of her father offers Mary excuse for escape from the intolerable environment. But before visiting her old home Mary appeals in turn to her Bishop and to her father's lawyer, only to be told that neither Church nor State can offer any relief from her false position. She returns next day to Castle Raa to find that Martin is arriving for a farewell visit, and that by Alma Lier's deceitful scheming the whole house party has gone off for a few days' cruise.

During her three days alone with her lover Mary fights a grim battle with temptation only to find on the last night that her faith in renunciation and the laws of the Church is a fragile thing compared with her overwhelming love for this pure-hearted man. With Martin's passionate words, "You are my real wife. I am your real husband," ringing in her brain she forgets everything else, and with strong steps walks across the corridor to Martin's bedroom. This is the action which Martin has advised as being the only course open to them which is sure to bring the one result they are determined to attain—Mary's divorce from Lord Raa.

Mary determines, after the departure of Martin Conrad, to hide herself in London. She is driven by fear of Lord Raa's discovery of her unfaithfulness to him; she is equally afraid of the venomous tongue of Alma Lier. She is no sooner settled in a cheap little boarding house in London than a great hue and cry is raised by her father. Of all persons, it is Mildred, that one truest friend of her convent days, who ferrets her out; but for Mary's sake she breaks a vow and refuses to give her up. Then comes the report of the loss of Martin's ship in the Antarctic. Desperate with grief and fearful for the unborn child which she hopes shall reconcile her to her empty life and typify her great love for Martin, she flees from Mildred to a still more obscure corner of London.

I asked the old driver how long it would take me to get to Ilford. He looked at me again and said," 'B out 'our and 'alf I should say by the looks of you and you carrying the biby."

By HALL CAINE.

(Copyright, 1913, by Hearst's Magazine. Copyrighted in Great Britain.)

MY NEW quarters were in the poorer district which stands at the back of Bayswater. The street was a cul-de-sac (of some ten small houses on either side), which was blocked up at the farther end by the high wall of a factory for the "humanization" of milk, and opened out of a busy thoroughfare of inferior shops like a gulley way off a noisy coast. My home in this street was in number one.

My room, which was of fair size, was on the first floor and had two windows to the street, with yellow holland blinds and white muslin curtains.

The furniture consisted of a large bed, a horse hair sofa, three cane-bottomed chairs, a chest of drawers (which stood between the windows), and a mirror over the mantelpiece, which had pink paper, cut into fanciful patterns, over the gilt frame, to keep off the flies.

The floor was covered with linoleum, but there were two strips of carpet, one before the fire and the other by the bed; the walls were papered by a bright red paper representing peonies in bloom; and there were three pictures—a portrait of a Welsh preacher, an engraving entitled "Feed My Sheep" (showing Jesus carrying a lamb), and a memorial card of some member of the family of the house, in the form of a tomb with a weeping angel on either side.

I paid five shillings a week for my room, and, as this included the use of kettle, cooking utensils and crockery, I found to my great delight at the end of the first week that providing for myself (tea, bread and butter and eggs being my principal food) I had spent only ten shillings altogether, which, according to my present needs, left me enough for my time of waiting and several weeks beyond it.

Every morning I went out with a little hand bag to buy my provisions in the front street, and every afternoon I took a walk in the better part of Bayswater and even into the park (Hyde Park), which was not far off, but never near to Piccadilly, or so far east as Bloomsbury, lest I should meet Sister Mildred or be recognized by the old boarders.

Finding it necessary to account for myself, just as at the boarding house, I had adhered to my former name, but said I was the widow of a commander lately lost at sea, which was as near to the truth as I dare venture.

She Tells of Her Coming Motherhood.

I had also made no disguise of the fact that I was expecting a child, a circumstance which secured me much sympathy from the womanly women who were now my neighbors.

They were all worthy women, generally the wives of men working in the milk factory, and therefore the life of our street was very regular.

At five in the morning you heard the halting step of the old "knocker up" who went up and down the street tapping at the bedroom windows with a long pole like a fishing rod. A little before six you heard the clashing of many front doors and the echoing footsteps of the men going to their work. At half-past seven you heard the whoop of the milkman and the rattling of his cans. At half-past eight you heard the little feet of the children, like the pattering of rain, going off to the Board School round the corner. And a little after four in the afternoon you heard the wild cries of the entire juvenile community let loose from lessons, the boys running iron hoops and the girls skipping rope.

After that, our street hummed like a beehive, with the women, washed and combed, standing knitting at their open doors or exchanging confidences across the areas until darkness fell, and each of the mothers called her children in to bed, as an old hen in the farmyard clucks up her chickens.

These good creatures were very kind to me. Having satisfied themselves from observation to my habits that I was "respectable," they called me "our lady," and I could not help hearing that I was a "nice young thing," though it was a little against me that I did not go to church or chapel, and had confessed to being a Catholic—for several of our families (including that of my landlady) were members of the Welsh Zion Chapel far away.

Such was the life of the little human cage to which I had confined myself, but I had an inner life that was all my own and very sweet to me.

Getting Ready for The Newcomer.

During the long hours of every day in which I was alone I occupied myself in the making of clothes for my baby—buying linen and flannel and worsted, and borrowing patterns from my Welsh landlady.

This stimulated my tenderness toward the child that was to come, for the heart of a young mother is almost infantile, and I hardly know whether to laugh or cry when I think of the childish things I did and thought and said to myself in those first days when I was alone in my room in that back street in Bayswater.

Thus long before the baby was born I had christened her. At first I wished to call her Mary, not because I cared for that name myself, but because Martin had said it was the most beautiful in the world. In the end, however, I called her Isabel Mary (because Isabel was my mother's name, and she had been a far better woman than I was), and as I finished my baby's garments one by one I used to put them away in their drawer, saying to myself, "That's Isabel Mary's binder," or "Isabel Mary's christening-robe," as the case might be.

I dare say it was all very foolish. There are tears in my eyes when I think of it now, but there were none then, for, though there were moments when, thinking of Martin, I felt as if life were forever blank and bare, I was almost happy in my poor surroundings, and if it were a cage I had fixed myself in, there was always a bird singing inside of it—the bird that sang in my own bosom.

"When Isabel Mary comes, everything will be all right," I used to think.

This went on for many weeks, and I think it might have gone on until my time was full but for something which, occurring under my eyes, made me tremble with the fear that the life I was living and the hope I was cherishing were really very wrong and selfish.

Of my landlady, Mrs. Williams, I saw very little. She was a rather hard but no doubt heavily laden woman, who had "to do" for a swarm of children, besides two young men lodgers who lived in the kitchen and slept in the room behind mine. Her husband was a quiet man (a carter at the dairy), whom I never saw at all except on the staircase at 10 o'clock at night, when, after winding the tall clock on the landing, he went upstairs to bed in his stocking feet.

Emmerjane, the Family Drudge.

But the outstanding member of the family for me was a shock-headed girl of 14 called Emmerjane, which was a running version of Emma Jane.

I understand that Emmerjane was the illegitimate daughter of Mrs. Williams' dead sister, and that she had been born in Carnarvon, which still shimmered in her memory in purple and gold.

Emmerjane was the drudge of the family, and I first saw her in the street at dusk, mothering a brood of her little cousins.

Afterward she became my drudge also—washing my floor, bringing up my coal and cleaning my grate for sixpence a week, and giving me a great deal of information about my neighbors for nothing.

Thus she told me, speaking broad cockney with a Welsh accent, that the people opposite were named Wagstaffe and that the creaking noise I heard was that of a mangle, which Mrs. Wagstaffe had to keep because her husband was a drunkard.

But the greatest interest of this weird little woman, who had a premature knowledge of things a child ought not to know, was in a house half way down the street on the other side, where steam was always coming from the open door to the front kitchen.

The people who lived there were named Jones. Mrs. Jones "washed" and had a bed-ridden old mother (with two shillings from the parish) and a daughter named Maggie.

Maggie Jones, who was eighteen, and very pretty, used to work in the dairy, but the foreman had taken "advantage of her," and she had just had a baby.

This foreman was named Owen Owens, and he lived at the last number on our side, where two unmarried sisters "kept house" for him and sat in the "singing seat" at Zion.

Maggie thought it was the sisters' fault that Owen Owens did not marry her, so she conceived a great scheme for "besting" them, and this was the tragedy which, through Emmerjane's quick little eyes and her Cockney Welsh tongue, came to me in instalments day by day.

When her baby was a month old Maggie dressed it up "fine" and took it to the photographer's for its "card di visit." The photographs were a long time coming, but when they came they were "heavenly lovely" and Maggie "cried to look at them."

Then she put one in an envelope and addressed it to Owen Owens, and though it had only to cross the street she went out after dark to a pillar-box a long way off lest anybody should see her posting it.

Next day she said: "He'll have it now, for he always comes home to dinner. He'll take it up to his bedroom, look you, and stand it on the washboard, and if either of those sisters touch it he'll give them what's what."

After that she waited anxiously for an acknowledgment and every time the postman passed down our street her pretty pale face would be at the door, saying, "Anything for me to-day?" or "Are you sure there's nothing for me, postman?"

Home Cooking

By MAY IRWIN.

THAT the fastidious should look with distrust, if not disgust, upon the hotel or restaurant made hash or ragout, or stew, or minced dish, is quite within my understanding and sympathy. But it is quite different in the well regulated home.

My husband and sons, who are rather spoiled as far as the things of the table are concerned enjoy beef stews and roast beef hash better than the original roast. Fricassee chicken, when properly prepared, is much better than roast chicken. Spaghetti, when warmed over, is twenty times better than when first cooked. How seldom we eat a really well cooked dish of spaghetti. That is because it is not thoroughly cooked.

Suppose it is Tuesday—ironing day. If there is in your pantry or ice box the skeleton of last night's roast chicken, you are fortunate. From the shreds of meat here and there sticking to the bones you can make an excellent fricassee, or that dish which is a favorite in my household.

Mince the bits of cold chicken together. Chop a small green pepper, a small onion, four mushrooms, a bit of parsley and one cold potato together until very fine. Have a frying pan ready with tablespoonful of hot brown butter, and put the mixture in and stir it well.

Cover it for a few moments and let it brown on one side, as hashed brown potatoes are done. Put on a hot platter and garnish with tomato sauce. This sauce is made by cooking two or three tomatoes for half an hour, strain and add a tablespoonful of butter, salt, pepper and flour enough to thicken a little.

Perhaps you are inclined to toss away three or four tomatoes that are soft, but still good. Their ripeness is no drawback for the favorite breakfast dish of mine, for which I give you the recipe.

Cut a slice from the top of a tomato. Remove enough of the w to enable you to drop into each tomato a bit of butter the size of your thumb nail and a raw egg. Pin with a toothpick a strip of raw bacon around each tomato. Sprinkle a little salt and pepper over the top and put into a very hot oven until the eggs are set. This will be from five to eight minutes.

HER MINISTRATIONS

THE girl with the silver vanity case tucked a dainty handkerchief into her left glove and sighed.

"It's perfectly awful," she said, "how many persons have dreadful things happen to them these days! Why, all I do is to go to see my poor suffering friends in the hospitals!"

"Who's in the hospital besides Carrie?" asked the girl with the fire-red hat. "How's her appendicitis, anyhow? I sent some carnations, but I've been too busy——"

"Poor Carrie is recovering all right," said the girl with the silver vanity bag. "The house doctor says it is quite remarkable, in view of the seriousness of her case. I wish you could see him, Emma, when he is talking seriously like that. He draws his eyebrows together in a straigh, line like—oh, who was the actor who always did that? Never mind. Dr. Bennett is perfectly handsome and holds himself like a military man, and in those white linen suits—why on earth don't all doctors dress like that. I'd like to know?"

"He can't be a day over 28, and if you could see how crazy the nurses are over him! I think it is perfectly ridiculous of them!

Sympathetic.

"I couldn't help expressing my sympathy one day when we were talking in the hall. I happened to be leaving just as he was through seeing Carrie. 'I should think,' I told him, 'you would get so weary of all this chasing after you, Dr. Bennett! Why, that corridor nurse wouldn't let me get a word in with you while she was in the room! I should think she'd realize that a doctor would like something more entertaining once in a while than chatter about bandages and temperatures and diet!' He quite flushed with gratitude and looked me in the eyes and said I had perfectly wonderful divination, and it was surprising how he lived through it all!

"The only trouble with knowing Dr. Bennett is that every time I go there somebody always sends for him or he has to go to the operating room. The poor man never has any time for a cozy chat."

"Is Carrie——"

"Oh, Carrie's all right," said the girl with the vanity bag. "If she'd only exercise a little self-control and not demand all the doctor's attention whenever he's in the room, she would get on better. Sick people are so selfish, don't you think? Dr. Bennett——"

"You said someone else was sick. Who?"

"Oh, yes!" said the girl with the vanity bag. "My cousin Ralph is in another hospital with a broken leg, and though his family and ours aren't on speaking terms I felt that in a case of illness I mustn't let prejudice stand in the way, so, of course, I ran in to cheer up poor Ralph. I was very careful to find out from the surgeon who set his leg whether it would be bad for Ralph to see me. Dr. Bitts is one of the most noted surgeons in the country. Terribly young for that, too—not more than 35. He has one of those attractive, stern faces, with straight mouth, and looks as though he shaves twice a day, and eyes like razors.

She Was Younger.

"When you talk to him he listens intently and then he has the most disconcerting way of coming to with a jerk and saying: 'Yes, yes; quite so,' and darting off somewhere. I think the poor dear man is worn out by his severe work. I tried to tell him the other day how a sensitive, appreciative woman couldn't help sympathizing with his hardships. He was very brave—he said they weren't hardships."

"Is your Cousin Ralph's leg——"

"Oh, that's mending, all right," said the girl with the vanity bag. "I don't wonder that my family can't stand Ralph's father, if he is anything like Ralph—always thinking of himself. He actually thought I was going to sit and read to him—no consideration at all for Dr. Bitts, who might like a little cheering conversation!"

"You said several——"

"Well, one of mother's friends and an aunt of father's are in the same hospital with typhoid and an operation, and, of course, I am younger than mother, so I do the calling. I told mother quite firmly when she insisted that it was not necessary for me to go every day that I hoped I knew my duty to the sick and suffering. Aunt Lou has a nephew by marriage who is so devoted to her, and he goes to see her frequently. He has the loveliest car, and as I happened to be leaving once when he did he took me home. I did some shopping first, because it was such a good chance to be carried around.

"I wish you could have seen that car. Something must have happened to it, because now he always comes on the street car. It wasn't so bad, because Mrs. Himmers' son—the friend with the operation—comes in his car and usually I am going just when he goes. But, oh, if you could see Dr. Bennett's eyes!"

"I really ought to look in on poor Carrie," mused the girl with the fire red hat. "What time——"

"Come to think of it," objected the girl with the silver vanity case, "the nurse said that Carrie mustn't have too much company—that it made her fever rise! So I guess I'd wait, if I were you."

The First Admiral.

A story sometimes told to ridicule the dialect of Pudsey is that of a traveler who astonished his friend by telling him that the children in Pudsey were the most intelligent children in the world.

"Why, what do they know?" asked his friend.

"They know who was the first naval admiral who ever lived," the traveler replied.

"Not they. Here, can you prove it?"

"Yes. If you wish, we will go to Pudsey and I will ask any child you like that particular question."

The friend agreed.

As the traveler and his friend went through Pudsey they saw a boy about ten years old playing in the street. The traveler went to him and asked:

"Now, my boy, do you know who was the first naval admiral?"

"No-a," bluntly replied the lad.

"There," said the traveler, turning to his friend, "didn't I tell you he would know?"

Willing to Oblige.

Elderly Gentleman—Hi, conductor! Bring the 'bus here. D'ye think I'm going to walk through all this mud?

Conductor—Sutt'nly not, sir. Hif you'll wait 'arf a minnit I'll lay down the carpet an' herect the hawning!

Conspire Against Domestic Harmony

The ills of women seem to conspire against domestic harmony. No husband can understand why a woman should be continually ailing, fretful, nervous and despondent, and he gets out of all patience with her. In nine cases out of ten some organic derangement is the cause of this condition and is easily overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a woman's remedy for woman's ills which has cured more severe cases of this kind than any other remedy we know.

Paper Fingers That Save Time

How many times do typewriter operators come nearly to the bottom of the paper and have to put in another sheet to write just one more line?

The L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter

is equipped with paper fingers that hold the paper so well that it is possible to write on the extreme edge of the paper or card.

These paper fingers, if the operator forgets to push them back into place after writing a card or envelope, move along to the proper place with the advancement of the carriage in either direction.

This is one of the many reasons why the L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter enables the operator to produce more and better work than on any other writing machine ever made.

She smiled and snapped the catch, and then stood gazing at it for several moments before she went to the door and admitted the porter with his small but deadly truck. He was a muscular young man with the intelligent expression of an elderly and amiable cow, the true type of trunk-destroyer, and the Princess shivered when she saw him.

"Have the other trunks gone?" she asked.

"Yes'm—last night," he growled, making swiftly for his prey. He started to tilt it in such a manner that our hardy and valiant knight, Warren of Jarvis, would have been standing on his head, contrary to the canons of chivalry. The Princess hastily intervened.

"This end up—please be sure and have it marked that way and be sure to mark it 'Wanted on Voyage.'"

"Yes'm," grunted Caliban. He rocked the trunk a little, thrust the lip of the truck under it and jerked it forward—blam!

The Princess winced and shuddered.

"And please—please—handle it very gently."

"Yes'm."

He had just begun to trundle the trunk and the knight toward the door when the exit was completely blocked by the cubical form of the house detective. The porter stopped and carelessly pitched his burden forward—blam!

The Broken Lock.

"Excuse me, madam," said the detective, with a kind of dogged hardness. "I don't want to bother you again, but that man—he killed a man up the hall—has got clean away unless he—he——"

"Well?" said the Princess coldly.

"Well, would you mind if—if I sort of took a look around? You're sure you were here all the time?"

"Of course," replied Dona Maria quietly. "But my maid will be up presently and you will be welcome to go through these rooms."

His attention was attracted to the trunk by a third "blam!" as the porter prepared to proceed, and he obligingly stepped inside out of the way. As he did so his eyes fell on the broken door lock.

"How'd that lock get broken?" His voice rang out suddenly like a pistol shot and he looked up quickly at the Princess. She inclined her head as if to assure herself that it really was broken, which was overacting the part.

"I think you should call the clerk's attention to it," she said calmly. "It was broken when I came here."

"When—may I ask did you come here?"

"Certainly. Yesterday afternoon."

"Oh, I see, I beg your pardon," he said slowly, and backed out. He did not know why, but he did not entirely believe the frank and self-possessed young woman. He walked down to a turn of the corridor, resolving to keep a close eye on the apartment until it was vacated. In this walk he again passed the trunk, but it suggested nothing. An escape in a trunk has become so common in fact and in fiction that no up-to-date detective believes any one would try it again. So it is still one of the best means, just as, from the other angle, it is a fact that occasionally in spite of comic artists and the like, some one still buys a gold brick.

Thus, in a manner unheroic, by freight elevator and van with divers bumps and bruises and swear words, the good knight Warren of Jarvis set forth to the Spanish Main and the storied hills of Aragon.

Pasting labels on trunks, like pressing the elevator button in the average office building, is more an act in evidence of good faith than in expectation of results. Having up to this time traveled only with a trunk and never in one, Warren Jarvis did not realize this until fairly embarked on his rough passage from the Hotel Vanderbilt to the promenade deck suite on the Lusitania.

For days afterward the memory of that two-mile voyage rode him like a nightmare. So did the divers aches, wrenches and bruises that he acquired by the way. And, finally, when the journey was over and he could have time to decide whether he was one large pain or had been broken up into several thousand small agonies, the trunk was deposited in the parlor of the Princess' suite with the label "This side up," carefully pressed against the carpet.

Dona Maria, anxious for the welfare of her champion, arrived at the stateroom just a few moments later. But she was haunted by an attentive steward, who in her abstraction she neglected to fee, and who declined to end his solicitous attentions until the oversight should be remedied.

While the Princess fidgeted and longed for him to get out he insisted on explaining everything connected with the suite. He opened the door that led onto the deck and pointed out the raised ledge as a trap for the unwary landsman's foot. He opened a door that led into a companionway. He showed her the clothes-pressers and all the while Dona Maria could not take her eyes from the top of the trunk, which displayed no label. Following her glance he offered to place the trunk for her.

"You needn't bother about it now, steward," she interposed quickly as he laid his hands on it. Then as an afterthought: "You might turn it right side up."

He Goes at Last.

"Oh, I'm sorry," he apologized as he noticed the labels. "I hope the contents are not upset."

"I hope not!" agreed Dona Maria, fervently.

"Anything more, madame?"

"Not now, thank you, steward," said Dona Maria nervously. "How soon do we sail?"

"Very soon now," he answered, as a deep raucous voice was heard bellowing afar. "They're calling visitors ashore now, madame."

And at last he was gone. But there was still Nita, the maid, who had doffed her hat and coat and was fussing about the bags.

"Your Highness has the keys to the trunks?" she suggested briskly.

"Hm—yes. You—you may leave the trunk as it is, Nita, until later. Go to your room now and get settled. I'll call you when I want you."

"Yes, Your Highness." But at the door of her room, she paused in some embarrassment. The Princess frowned impatiently.

"Will Your Highness pardon me," said Nita, uncomfortably, "if I am mistaken in thinking I recognize Senor the Duke, your exalted cousin, among the passengers——?"

"My cousin!" exclaimed Dona Maria, with a fine assumption of surprise. "Impossible! He is at Madrid."

Nita inclined her head in that extremely polite unbelief possible to the finished servant. "Yes, Your Highness," she agreed, demurely, and withdrew.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

The scene of the story is laid in the Vanderlip Hotel, New York City. The Princess Maria Theresa of Segura, a beautiful Spanish woman, is suddenly awakened in her suite by the sound of pistol shots. She hears a man running down the hall. He crashes against her door, breaking the lock, and enters. She sees he is a tall, good-looking young man, dressed in evening clothes. He is carrying a revolver in his right hand, and blood is dripping from a wound in his left. He begs the Princess to hide him. She, moved by some indescribable impulse, decides that she will. She directs him to an inner room, and a few minutes later, when the hotel detective knocks on the door, she tells him she is all right and sends him away. The young man, who is Warren Jarvis, of Kentucky, comes out of his hiding place, and the Princess, for the first time, notices his wound. She is moved to sympathy and showers him with questions as to what has occurred. Jarvis tells her about a Kentucky feud between his family and another named Markham. He says he left Kentucky to avoid the feudists, but encountered one of them in the hotel, which explains the shots. The Princess declares she will help him, and then asks the stranger question, "Are you afraid of ghosts?" Jarvis laughs, but grows solemn when the Princess tells him she has dangerous work for him to do. She makes him swear allegiance, and creates him her "vassal." Then she tells him to get her trunk, which is going to be shipped to a steamship on which she sails to Spain the following day. First Jarvis tells her to telephone to his servant, Rusty Snow, a negro. The servant is instructed to procure passage for himself and Jarvis in the ship. Jarvis then prepares to get into the trunk, but first begins to question the Princess about herself.

Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER XLIV.

As soon as Mildred had ordered Steve to bring the big car she hurried to her room and hastily changed her clothes, putting on the khaki suit she wore when fishing. She was very much excited. But before leaving the room she glanced, womanlike, in her mirror. Then, hardly knowing what she was doing, she picked up a little handbag such as women take when they go shopping, containing a handkerchief, a powder rag, a small mirror and a small purse. She rushed on the porch and called Elmer.

"Elmer," she said hurriedly. "I'm going to find Gordon. I can't stand the suspense any longer. Come if you want to; if you don't, I'm going alone."

"Of course, I'm going, too," exclaimed the boy. "That's just like a girl. Didn't I propose the scheme?"

"Well, hurry now, and get my rifle and revolver," cried Mildred.

"That little revolver of yours is no good," remarked Elmer. "You can take it if you want to; I'm going to get dad's big one." And off he went.

In a few minutes Steve appeared with the car and Mildred and Elmer climbed in. Mildred with her handbag and revolver and Elmer with his father's six-shooter.

"Is you all gwine shootin', Miss Mildred?" asked Steve.

"We are going after Mr. Gordon, Steve," replied Mildred, "so hurry, please."

"Lordomassy!" exclaimed the colored boy. He turned the car quickly and they were soon bowling along the main road.

A Serious Affair.

A girl and two boys going in a motor car on a hunt for supposed desperadoes would have been a most ludicrous affair except for the very serious way the three persons involved in the undertaking viewed it. A professional layer of odds, knowing the circumstances, would have wagered anything up to 100 to 1 that the expedition would end in a fizzle, if, indeed, the rescuers did not get themselves in serious trouble. However that might be, the car rolled bravely on and reached the point where the road crossed Pew Creek, inside of half an hour. Mildred had given her instructions to Steve, and as soon as the car stopped she and Elmer started off due west, Elmer leading the way and she following closely, carrying the toy revolver in one hand and the little handbag in the other.

There are few things a woman will not risk for the man she loves. The proper thing for Mildred to have done, of course, was to have gathered all the men at the mansion and sent them on the hunt for Gordon. But she didn't, and that, of course, ends all argument. If Mildred had only realized it, she and Elmer were almost as helpless as the babes in the woods. Unlooked-for things happen, however, and, with the chances at least 100 to 1 against her, an unlooked-for thing happened in this case.

They had not traveled far before Elmer found unmistakable signs that a horse had traveled in the direction they were going, and in certain places they were able to follow the hoof-prints.

Moved More Slowly.

"Keep careful track of the distance we travel," whispered Mildred. "You know Gordon said he was three miles due west from the bridge."

When they had covered what they considered about two and a half miles they moved more slowly and more cautiously, and although both were now trembling with excitement (and perhaps fear), they kept bravely on. At last they came to a point where the ground rose sharply for a hundred yards or so. Mildred grasped Elmer by the shoulder and whispered:

"We are near the place, Elmer. We must be very careful and keep under cover."

They crept along behind trees and at length came to the top of the rise. Below them they saw smoke issuing from a clump of trees.

"He's down there," said Mildred in an excited whisper. "I'm sure of it. Oh, what shall we do?"

"Sneak around and maybe we can see something," replied Elmer, hoarsely. His eyes glistened and he was pale, but game.

They circled around cautiously, keeping close together. Suddenly Elmer stopped and dropped to the ground. Mildred, her heart beating wildly, sank behind him.

"I see him, I see him," exclaimed the lad excitedly. He pointed and Mildred saw, not more than 60 yards away, a man seated upon a tree reading a newspaper. It was Gordon Kelly. She would have known him as far as her eyes could reach. She felt as if she were on the point of screaming, or crying, or fainting—she knew not what. She hastily opened the handbag and reached for her handkerchief—a woman's weapon, a woman's protector.

"Keep Quiet!"

"Keep quiet!" hissed Elmer. "There's another man there and he'll see us."

Mildred looked again and saw a man looking on the ground fifteen or twenty feet in front of Gordon.

"What shall we do; what shall we do?" was all she could whisper.

There was a long silence. Finally Elmer said:

"Gee, if I only had a mirror I could sneak down behind that bush and attract his attention."

"Why, I have a little mirror," exclaimed Mildred, reaching for her handbag again. She produced the article and handed it to the boy.

"You crawl behind that tree and wait there," whispered Elmer. A moment later he began worming his way toward the bush he had indicated. This brought him to within less than 150 feet of where Gordon was sitting. Carefully getting his range, he flashed a streak of sunlight across the shaded page of Gordon's newspaper and repeated the operation immediately.

Gordon cautiously glanced over his shoulder. He saw little Elmer peering from behind a bush and beyond the lad he saw a white handkerchief flutter. Mildred could not resist the temptation to signal. Gordon waved an answering sign and then arose. He walked to the log cabin, followed by his armed guard. He took a baseball, slit the seam with his knife; then, saying to his guard, "I want to do a little figuring," took a little book of cigarette papers belonging to the youngest of the mountaineers and wrote these words:

"If you have a gun, place it 20 feet beyond where this ball lands; if not, bring help noon to-morrow."

Guard Did Not Call.

He folded the tissue paper three times longways and once shortways, tucked it into the ripped seam of the baseball with his knife, leaving the edge sticking out (the guard was paying no particular attention to him) and then announced that he guessed he would take a little exercise.

This time the guard did not call a companion, as was the custom when Gordon practiced with bat and ball. The idea of two guards was doubtless originally suggested by the dangerous-looking baseball bat that Gordon swung with such ease. He had become such a cheerful and inoffensive captive, however, that on this occasion his guard decided not to trouble any of his companions, who were at that time on the shady side of the cabin, discussing a letter that had been received that morning from Forrest Cain.

Going out in the open, followed by his guard, pistol in hand, Gordon hit several high flies, catching the ball when it came down. Then, as if inadvertently, he drove it in such a manner that it fell 200 feet away from him and beyond a little clump of bushes.

"What do you think of that?" he exclaimed to his guard. "I'm losing my batting eye, I guess. Let's get a drink of water and then we'll go and get that ball. It cost $1.25."

It took Gordon fifteen minutes to get his drink of water and fuss around the cabin before he started after the ball, with his guard following closely. He had carefully marked the spot where it fell, and when he reached it his eyes beamed, for twenty feet beyond was what he wanted far more than he wanted the ball. Picking up the white object, he walked straight ahead and suddenly sat down facing his guard.

"Sit down and make yourself comfortable," he said. But the guard remained standing.

"By the looks of the sky, I'll bet you we have rain before to-morrow morning," he observed, reaching behind him.

"Turn Around and Walk."

The guard cast his eyes upward and when he lowered them again a six-shooter in the hand of his captor was pointing directly at his heart.

"Drop that gun! Drop it!" said Gordon, in a low, intense tone.

The guard hesitated the fraction of a second and then let the weapon fall to the ground.

"Turn around and walk two steps ahead," commanded Gordon, jumping to his feet and seizing the guard's six-shooter when his command was obeyed.

The rest was merely routine work, as it were.

"On the run, now," ordered Gordon, pointing to the east. "Back to the bridge; be quick about it."

The ex-guard started off, and with Gordon traversed 50 feet before Mildred and Elmer jumped from behind a tree.

"Won't you wait for me, Gordon?" said Mildred. An instant later they were in each other's arms.

"You will have to do all the hugging, Honeybunch," whispered Gordon. "I've got these two six-shooters in my hands, but I'll make up for it as soon as I get a chance. You are the bravest girl in the world. Now, come, dear, we are not out of the woods yet. Good work, Elmer."

Gordon turned over one of his revolvers to Elmer and the procession started, the mountaineer leading the way, followed by Gordon, holding a six-shooter in one hand and Mildred's hand in the other, and Elmer bringing up the rear. Arriving at the bridge where Steve was waiting with the car, Gordon said to his prisoner:

"Go back to your crowd and tell them I'll give them 24 hours to leave this mountain country, and if any of you come back, I'll make you wish you hadn't."

"That other man's comin' up to-morrer," said the mountaineer. They were the first words Gordon had ever heard him utter.

"Here's Your Gun."

"What man?" he demanded.

"That man that's been a-payin' us money."

"Is that so?" mused Gordon. "In that case, you can tell your men to hold on to him until they hear from me. I'll settle with that fellow when I get around to it. Tell your men I won't bother them as long as they hold on to him. Now, you can go back. Here's your gun, but I'll just take the cartridges out of it first. Now, then, Elmer, climb in the front seat. Come, Mildred. Go ahead, Steve."

"Gordon," said Mildred, as soon as the car started, "you need a haircut badly."

It was dark when they reached the mansion, where the appearance of the owner created an immense sensation.

"Mildred, dear," said Gordon, drawing her to one side, "I want you to spend the evening here. There's something I want particularly to say to you. We can have Mrs. Ward for a chaperone," he added, with a smile.

"Not in these clothes, Gordon," replied Mildred. "If you will let Steve drive us home, Elmer and I will both be back in an hour."

When Mildred and the lad returned Gordon, too, had had a change of clothes.

"Who cut your hair?" laughed Mildred.

"Oh, we have always had a barber here," replied Gordon, with a smile.

They sat down to dinner, after which Gordon told Elmer to go and play billiards and then led Mildred into the room he called his office, and which Mildred called his lazy room. The particular something he wanted to tell her required more than half an hour and considerable eloquence to tell. Mildred shook her head at frequent intervals, but finally gave in and murmured, "Yes." Arising, she went to the telephone on Gordon's desk and gave an order. While she was waiting for connections Gordon, happy as a lark, seated himself at the piano, said "Second verse," and sang:

We will build a bower of grasses,
Call it Castle Lullaby;
Drink the south wind as it passes,
Lips o' Poppy—you and I!
Youth will be a friend to cheer us,
Fill our veins with purple wine,
Stand forever watching near us,
Lips o' Poppy, maid of mine!
Pines shall lull us with their moaning;
Golden bees in golden guest
Songs of sweet desire intoning
To the white flower of your breast!
Lips o' Poppy, girl of rapture,
Mine shall be enchantment's power,
Substance of my dreams to capture
In the heart of that white flower!
Lips o' Poppy—eyes entrancing—
Maid of earth or maid of air!
We will pass the years a-dancing
Down the realm of Queen Don't Care.
Come! the purple shades are falling!
Come! it is the Queen's command!
Hark! the nightingales are calling
To the Never Hurry Land!

"That's very nice," said Mildred, "but suppose dad—— Oh, here he is now. That you, dad?—— Oh, fine! Ah—— I am with Mr. Kelly, and—er—Mr. Kelly wants to speak to you a minute. Oh, now, dad, do be nice—— Does he want to talk business? Ha, ha! Yes, I believe he wants to talk business. All right; hold the wire." Mildred clapped her hand over the mouthpiece and whispered excitedly: "Dad was awfully angry at first and wouldn't speak to you, but he suddenly changed his mind. Now, go ahead; don't be afraid."

He Asks for Mildred.

Gordon took up the receiver and this conversation followed:

"Hello, Mr. Deery! I want to ask——"

"What will you take for your property—spot cash?" interrupted Deery.

"I don't want to sell, Mr. Deery."

"Oh, come, come; I'll give you $20,000 for it—cash, mind you."

"I couldn't think of it, Mr. Deery."

"Well, what's it worth, then? Come, you must have a figure."

"Really, Mr. Deery, I don't want to sell at any price, but if you ask me, the property is worth all of $2,000,000."

"Two million dollars!" sputtered Deery. "Am I talking to a crazy man? Ask my daughter to come to the phone, please."

"Just a minute, Mr. Deery. I want to say something very seriously. Please listen. I want to ask your permission to marry your daughter. We love each other and——"

"Now I know you're crazy," Deery broke in. "Call my daughter, please."

"But, Mr. Deery——"

"Not another word. I wish to speak to my daughter."

Mildred took the receiver from Gordon's hand.

"Hello, dad; what's wrong?"

"Come home at once, Mildred."

"Now, dad," pleaded Mildred, "please don't be so angry. Gordon and I——"

"I will not hear another word; I insist that you come home at once."

"Dad, if you're going to act that way, you'll regret it. Please tell mother I wish to speak to her."

"Your mother is not at home and won't be home for an hour, Mildred. I tell you for the last time, come home immediately or I'll come up there and get you."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

MOST DECIDEDLY NOT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-one, and a man two years my senior has made an appointment with me and at the same time with my friend. Would it be fitting for me to keep it, and also, is it proper for him to make the appointment for the same time and place? G. M. T. I.

He is flirting with you, I am sure, and if "by appointment" you mean to meet on some street corner you owe it to yourself to refuse to meet him though he were alone. Ask him to come to your home for you; his reply will give you some insight into his character.

BY BECOMING A MAN.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a boy of twenty, and in love with a girl two years younger than myself. I am deeply in love with the girl, and she doesn't care for me. How can I make her love me? Another boy loves her, but she doesn't love him. T. C.

You rightly term yourself a boy, since you are only twenty. I suggest unfailing courtesy, kindness, appreciation and devotion, but not so much that your attentions distract your head and heart from the more serious and timely task of developing yourself into a manly man.

Rather Slow.

Benefited Many Who Had Lung Trouble

Those who suffer from Lung Trouble are generally troubled with night sweats, fever, loss of strength and little or no appetite. Eckman's Alterative is a medicine which has been most successful in stopping night sweats, reducing fever and promoting appetite and many who have used it declare it saved their lives. Investigate what it did in this case:

"Dear Sir: For four years I was troubled with cough, which gradually became worse. I had night sweats and pains in my chest. I was losing my appetite and had become so thin and weak I could not attend to my household duties. A physician pronounced my disease Consumption. Not being satisfied, I was examined by the physicians of the Polyclinic Hospital. They also confirmed my trouble, and I was ordered away for treatment. My nephew would not allow me to go until I had tried Eckman's Alterative. Before I had taken the medicine three weeks, I had marked relief, night sweats ceased, pain in the breast relieved, cough became loose and easy, fever left me, and I commenced getting well. My health became normal. I am in excellent health now and have been for twelve years. I strongly recommend it." (Signed)

RACE MIGHTY TIGHT; LOCAL CLUB IN HUNT

If Crackers Can Keep Playing As They Did Last Week They Will Cop Pennant.

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE Southern League race is a rip-snorter. Mobile, Montgomery, Chattanooga and Atlanta are within .041 of each other. Birmingham, Memphis and Nashville are far from out of the race. It's getting better every minute.

The Crackers have the chance of their career to make a showing now. Two of the next three clubs they face on home ground are ahead of them. If they can hammer the Turtles to pieces, get a few games back that the Gulls owe them and plaster something on Montgomery they will be right up in the race again.

They have it in them, too.

You can't lose confidence in a team that pulls games out of the fire the way the Crackers were yanking them last week. Saturday's game, for instance, was as poor from a fielding viewpoint as any man would care to witness, but the locals had the old kick that was needed to get them out of danger. They saved two games Friday that appeared totally lost. They won all the way Thursday. Both of the games with Mobile were won after they had been lost. And altogether, the Crackers are showing real recuperative power.

If the players will pull together, forget all the inside politics and work exclusively for Atlanta and for the pennant there will be nothing to it but another rag for Atlanta.

* * *

BUCK" WEAVER is winning a game now and then for the Meridian team and may come around and make a pitcher of himself yet. It is possible that now he is away from the alcoholic possibilities of Atlanta's many social (?) clubs he may settle down and do some good work. He has the natural ability, all right.

* * *

* * *

IF old Rube Benton were only with a ball club he might be a wonder. The other day in a game against the Cardinals he made three hits, scored three runs and perpetrated a sacrifice fly. It was a very hot day, too.

Ordinarily, Rube hits like a suffragette.

* * *

GUESS the Naps will never win a ball game. Usually they haven't any team. When they have, it is wrecked by internal dissensions. When it isn't, as this year, accidents do the rest.

Here are the accidents since May 1:

May 4—Catcher Grover Land broke his hand.

May 11—Larry Lajoie broke a finger and a thumb.

May 12—Joe Birmingham broke an ankle.

June 11—Twirler Steen broke his pitching arm.

This is only a partial list of the wounded. Ray Chapman, the Naps' shortstop, was hurt the day Steen broke his arm and couldn't play for two weeks. "Buddy" Ryan, center fielder, is playing with a broken thumb.

* * *

PERCY SKILLEN, former Dartmouth pitcher, now in the sporting goods business, has invented a device which he thinks will help pitchers develop control, a thing which Percy lacked or he might now be a big leaguer. It is a dummy that stands at the plate, bat in hand, so that a twirler can pitch to it hours at a time if he feels like it, and never fear that wild shots will do any damage.

"Dutch" Meyers, who is in business with Percy, tried to sell one of these devices to Jimmy Callahan to help steady young Sox pitchers.

"I don't deny that your idea may work out all right," Manager Callahan told Meyers. "But you needn't send any of those things around."

"Why not?" persisted Meyers.

"What do I want with another dummy, when I have three or four on my team now?" asked Callahan. "I'll just use one of them."

'Tear-In' Fighters Are Popular

Sluggers Usually Capture Title

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 7.—Discussions have arisen in England and Australia as to whether the "tear-in" fighters of the present day are better boxers than the clever fellows who made a business of pugilism fifteen or twenty years ago. Some of the arguments used in support of the various views expressed are highly interesting, but one very important matter has been overlooked. There are no "tear-in" fighters now—at least, none worth talking about. The clever fellows have come into their own again.

Take the smaller men. When Terry McGovern, with bent back, lowered head and rapidly revolving fists, began demolishing the nations of the earth, the opinions that many persons held in respect to the noble art of self-defense were revolutionized. After the Brooklyn whirlwind had run amuck for a year or two, grave doubts existed as to whether there was any scientific side to boxing, for had not the game developed a youth who, by determined onslaught, could upset all ideas of leading, countering, timing, sidestepping and what not?

And when Terry spread-eagled Peddler Palmer, the pride of British pugdom, in one round, the belief that forthrightness was the one and only antidote for cleverness became a firmer ground than ever.

Nelson Greatest Slugger.

Terry strutted his brief period and then went under to another "tear-in" fighter in the person of Young Corbett. It is worthy of note, by the way, that each of these "tear-in" specialists fell a victim to a fellow who also operated along "tear-in" lines. Corbett did fairly well until he ran afoul of Battling Nelson, who was possibly the most headlong fighter of them all—greater even than Terry McGovern, the founder of the "tear-in" dynasty.

Nelson did more than any of them to show that cleverness could be made to succumb to direct methods. Among other things, he won from Joe Gans, who was possibly the most scientific lightweight the world ever has known.

When Nelson's time came it was another "tear-in" fighter who accounted for him. This was Ad Wolgast, and while Wolgast, still untroubled with the spasms of appendicitis, the toughest experience he ever had was with still another "tear-in" fighter, to-wit, Knockout Brown.

From the lightweights down, the clever lads are in the ascendant again. Packey McFarland, who can claim to be a lightweight, now that the weight limit has been hunched, is nothing if not clever, and unless Jack Britton has changed tactics since he went East he is also a boxer of the brainy, resourceful stamp.

Jimmy Duffy, the Lockport boy, who is fast forging to the front, is another exponent of scientific pugilism, while Ritchie, Rivers, Mandot, Leach Cross and Freddie Welsh are all performers of the "hit, step and get away" school.

The welter, middle and light-heavy classes are so fussed now that it is impossible to tell "who is who" in the divisions named, but it can certainly be said that Mike Gibbons and Jimmy Clabby, a pair of really clever workmen, seem to be able to give away lots of weight and gain decisions from the best men that can be found for them.

Kilbane and Coulon Clever.

Johnnie Kilbane, the featherweight champion, and Johnny Coulon, the prince of bantams, have held their positions by dint of clever boxing and the manner in which little Eddi Campi handled the mercurial Frenchman, Ledoux, at Los Angeles recently, also favors the argument that cleverness is asserting itself in matters pugilistic again.

The heavyweight situation is so muddled that it is not easy to figure out what has contributed to success in that particular department, but in a general way it can be shown that cleverness has made itself tell among the big fellows during the past few years. This, too, despite the fact that Bombardier Wells, the most finished boxer England has produced in years, has been defeated practically every time he started.

Jack Johnson's long suit was cleverness, and there is no occasion to recall what he has done. He was certainly the greatest heavyweight since Jeffries was in his heyday.

McCarty a Second Corbett.

The most pronounced "tear-in" fighters of the heavyweight class in recent times were Jim Flynn and Al Palzer, but Luther McCarty, who was in a way a second Jim Corbett, disposed of the pair within a few weeks.

McCarty is gone, Johnson has fallen upon evil days and it is hard to tell what is in store for the heavyweights. But in respect to pugilism generally, it can be said that in the whirligig of time the artists of the Queensberry ring have gained the ascendancy over the sluggers.

There is no assurance that the present order of things will continue and about the only thing existing conditions prove is that evolution has not produced any permanent change in fighting methods.

Just now they are fighting the way they fought a quarter of a century ago.

EMPIRE LEAGUE NOTES

Shortstop Murphy, of the Thomasville team, continues to hit the ball as if he means to stay at the top of the Empire's batters. Murphy is also a sensational fielder and will undoubtedly move up when the season ends.

* * *

Manager Moran, of Brunswick, has secured Third Baseman Crowe from Thomasasville and if the youngster continues his splendid work will probably keep him.

* * *

Almost without exception the players who have been cut loose by Waycross have made good elsewhere. Bitting, released as third baseman, landed with Charleston and is going fine. "Red" Stiles, a pitcher, signed with Thomasville, has won nearly all his games since leaving Waycross. Dacey, an outfielder, went to Americus and is putting up a neat article of ball.

* * *

McManus is one of the newest men in the Empire. He is a pitcher and has been signed by Waycross.

* * *

Almost as fast as teams change players the Empire is changing umpires. Derrick is the latest to join the league's staff. Morton, one of the new men, has been criticised a great deal on account of his work and may be released.

* * *

Cordele has in Wilder a pitcher who makes more noise than any man in the league. Wilder holds the league's strike-out record so far, fifteen, and is apt to cut loose some new capers almost any game.

* * *

South Atlantic League scouts have been through the Empire, and inside information says quite a few players will be taken in the Class C league after this season.

* * *

Brunswick will turn loose about six players this week. Moran says Brunswick is going to stay at the top, and he means it, too.

* * *

"Closed for ball game" is not an uncommon sign to see hanging on a store's front door in Empire League cities. Baseball comes first with almost everybody now.

* * *

Waycross plays six games at home this week and Manager Clark has tipped his team off that when the week-end arrives Waycross must be somewhere else besides at the bottom.

* * *

Reports from Thomasville indicate that fans in that city will always remember the stinging defeats given Valdosta last week. Both those towns are old time baseball rivals.

* * *

Otto Jordan, of Valdosta, can sell three of his four pitchers any day in the week, according to the dope from Valdosta. He has four good ones and it is said managers of almost every South Atlantic team is anxious to get contracts with them.

* * *

As far as individual players go, there is hardly any team in the Empire that has anything on the others. But when it comes to team work and pitchers—well—the league standing tells the story.

* * *

College players who have joined teams in the Empire are making good with a rush. Davenport, playing first at Thomasville; Holliday, the same for Waycross, and Bowen, short for Americus, are three players who have shown up exceptionally strong. Whitted, a college player, is one of the Waycross additions and is expected to make good with ease.

Heine Zimmerman's brother, who has been playing second for Waycross, will probably be worked in the outfield.

* * *

First Baseman Day, of Cordele, has shown that when it comes to a pinch he can pitch as well as play the bag. Day is a clever fellow, and has many friends in every city of the league.

* * *

Thomsville has a Day that is having days whenever he pitches. He is the handsome fellow of the league, and is winning so regularly now that there seems no end of his victories.

Ritchie May Take Trip Abroad

Wolgast Is Not All In--Naughton

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., July 7.—Now that Willie Ritchie has shown himself every inch a champion—that is, by comparison with contemporaneous lightweights, which is the only way to judge a rising young fighter—the question is, What will he do next?

There is some talk of Ritchie taking a trip to Europe. If his wishes lie in that direction, no one can say him nay, for he has intrenched himself in such a way with fair-minded sports that no chance remains to taunt him with being afraid of the issue with any man of his size.

The story goes that Ritchie long ago set his heart upon a trip through the older lands and that he wants to take advantage of his present position and earning power to fulfill his desire. He is sensible enough to know that a ring man's grip of the topmost rung is at all times insecure, and he thinks it best to indulge in a long-felt hankering while things are coming his way.

This is a better way of putting it than asserting that he is in need of a rest, for Ritchie is only just back from a six months' lay-off and can hardly boast of tired muscles and frayed nerves.

Whenever Willie gets ready to resume fistic activities he will find several worthy opponents. Freddie Welsh wants a crack at the title and so does Harlem Tommy Murphy. Leach Cross has the bee buzzing in his bonnet and Ad Wolgast has begun agitation for a return match.

In Wolgast's case, the fact that his advances are not taken over seriously is due to himself. Wolgast has had several chances to redeem himself, but he has not trained sufficiently on any one occasion. He could easily make himself a strong drawing card with the public if he would forsake city life for a few months and spend his time on his farm. Then if he came back armed with a physician's certificate setting forth that he had stored up plenty of vitality during his sojourn in the country, he would attract attention from the promoters.

In the writer's opinion, Wolgast is far from being a back number.

SLOW BEAT OF HEART GIVES MEN ENDURANCE

BATTLING NELSON'S theory that his slow heart was the cause of his phenomenal endurance is being substantiated right along. The normal number of beats a minute for the human heart is 72. The Battler's heart beats but 52 times a minute, and to this he laid his ability to take a walloping and win.

Now Marathon and other distance runners come forward with hearts that put Nelson's in the shade when it comes to slowness. Harry J. Smith, the national ten-mile champion, is also the champion of the slow-heart brigade. His heart beats but 48 times a minute.

Smith entered the Boston A. A. Marathon, and Dr. J. H. Cunningham, of Boston, examined his heart less than a minute after he had crossed the finish line. Though Smith had just completed a run that put him under one of the hardest heart strains known, his heart was banging away 80 a minute—just eight above normal for the average person.

Recently he took a life insurance examination and was informed that in 27,000 hearts examined his had the slowest beat.

George Bonhag, the middle distance runner, is another slow-pulsed man. His heart has a peculiarity. It goes 64 a minute while he is standing, but lets up ten beats as soon as he lies down. Another one of the brigade is Mike Ryan, a New York distance runner.

Recently he was operated on at a New York hospital, and his heart was tested before he was given ether. Under conditions making for slowness, his heart beat but 42 for the minute. He resisted ether and had to be given enough to put ten men to sleep, but his "Marathon heart" was unaffected.

AUGUSTA TEAM WINS DOUBLES IN S. A. EVENT

AUGUSTA, GA., July 7.—Garrett and Gary, of Augusta, defeated the Waring brothers, of Columbia, S. C., Sunday afternoon for the championship of the South Atlantic States.

Play was continued from Saturday afternoon until Sunday on account of darkness, and when the four players resumed Sunday afternoon, the sets stood two all, and Garrett and Gary were four games to their opponents' two on the fifth set.

The score on the final set was 6—2, and the scores for the entire match of five games were as follows: 5—7, 7—5, 7—5, 4—6, 6—2. With the completion of the Garrett and Gary-Waring brothers match, the tournament of 1913 came to an end.

The championship in singles went to E. V. Carter, Jr., of Atlanta. The ladies' singles chapionship went to Mrs. Robert Johnson, of Asheville, N. C., and themixed doubles championship to Miss Adger, of Greenville, S. C., and James Edwin, of Spartanburg, S. C.

The local enthusiasts were delighted to keep the doubles itile at home, against strong opposition from Atlanta and other cities.

There was great disappointment because Nat Thornton, of Atlanta, decided not to defend his title, as the possibilities of a match between Thornton and Carter were alluring to the spectators.

BANTAM WILLIAMS DESIRES JUST ONE LOOK AT COULON

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., July 7.—When Champion Johnny Coulon comes out here to negotiate for a renewal of his many-times postponed fight with Kid Williams, it looks as though they will have to lock the estimable Mr. Gutenko in a cellar until the session is over and Collins has fled to the mountains.

Williams swears he will "jump" the bantamweight champion in the street.

"It's no use trying to get him into a ring with me," said the Kid, tearfully. "He'd sign all the articles fer a fight somewhere in Siberia and then telegraph that he had a stomach ache again and beat it on the run for some other mountains somewhere.

"The only way is fer me to meet the guy on the street and hand him what's coming to him right there. I'd like to have two or three fellers standin' round to see it because it will be good, and I wouldn't want to waste it."

Not to be outdone, in desperation Sammy Harris tremblingly produced five one-hundred dollar bills and deposited them with Tom McCarey, an act which indicated a state of fury no less frightful than that of Kid Williams; there are different ways of expressing emotion.

When the "Kid" is torn with an agony of rage he wishes to punch some one; Sammy pulls out a hundred bill; same thing in a different dialect.

KELLY GREATEST TIMBER TOPPER, SAYS MITCHELL

Winner of the National A. A. U. Champion Due to Hang Up a ;onderful Record.

By James S. Mitchell.

World's Campion Weight Thrower.

NEW YORK, July 7.—Fred W. Kelly, of the University of Southern California, the present Olympic high hurdling champion, who won the national A. A. U. title at the Chicago carnival on Saturday and who won the high and low hurdles in the collegiate meet on Thursday, is unquestionably the greatest timber-topper on earth to-day.

On his native heath, Kelly has equaled the world's record of 15 seconds for the 120-yard hurdles, and this feat for a young man of 21 is unprecedented in the history of athletics. What Kelly will do to the records in the years to come can only be imagined.

Like a Bird Over Hurdles.

Long and powerful of limb and with great development of the back muscles, the Californian possesses the ideal points of the real racer over the sticks. When crossing the obstacles he has such a fine spread that his body does not have to rise high in the air and he simply strides over the hurdles, as it were.

I did not happen to get a good look at the Los Angeles man till he began to practice at Stockholm prior to the Olympic games last year. Without delay I picked him as the winner, despite the fact that the Englishmen were very sweet on their man Anderson, who was supposed to have shown 15 seconds for the 120 yards.

Many Caught Time at 14 4-5.

Kelly justified my opinion by winning in 15 1-10 seconds, in undoubtedly the most sensational hurdle race ever seen. Several private timers, Americans as well as myself, made the time 14 4-5 seconds.

J. E. Sullivan, the American commissioner, said it was the fastest hurdle race he had ever seen, and is prepared to see Kelly do better than 15 seconds any day.

The citizens of Los Angeles contributed the money to take Kelly on the Olympic team, and their generosity has been highly praised ever since, and Kelly, by his great performances, has shown that his admirers made no mistake.

Carl Thompson May Be Signed by Smith

Carl Thompson, former University of Georgia star, may be signed by Manager Billy Smith to take the place of one of his wavering hurlers—probably Paul Musser. It will depend on what terms can be agreed upon.

Thompson has had a bad season with Birmingham and was finally turned back by Molesworth on the New York Americans. They wanted to send him to the New England League, but he preferred to pitch in the South. If Smith can make a deal with him he will probably give him a trial. The local manager believes that hard luck and weak batting support beat Thompson in most of his games with the Barons and that with the local team he will be a winner.

CARDS SIGN ANOTHER PITCHER.

ST. LOUIS, MO., July 7.—Another hurler is coming to aid the Cardinals in the National League pennant race. He is Rice Williams, a member of the Great Falls club of the Union Association. The newcomer will not join Huggins' crew until September 14. The announced price for the pitcher was $2,500.

Cross After Match With Ritchie

Leach Wants Plenty of Action

By H. M. Walker.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., July 7.—It's Leach Cross, the pride of the walk in Los Angeles. Whatever admiration was bestowed upon Mexican Joe Rivers now goes for Cross double. Fight bugs are fairly marveling at the showing of the New Yorker, and from the talk at sporting headquarters it seems to be the consensus of opinion that the New Yorker would defeat Ritchie for the championship.

Leach, with Brother Sam and Trainer Harry Lee, were about town Sunday accepting congratulations on all sides, but more eager to know the next probable date for his services than anything else.

The New Yorker is decorated with a handsome black eye, the left optic being badly swollen and discolored clear over the cheekbone, but Leach is parading this proudly in honor of the occasion and said if he had been a loser he would bend his head and take up an alleyway.

"I want Ritchie in a match for the championship of the world," said Cross, "and I want to know within a few days whether the champion is going to give me this chance. It would be a great fight and I like my chances with him, for our styles are very similar. He's cleverer than I am and I think he's the classiest champion we have had since Joe Gans, but this is the wing that spells kick," and the dentist-boxer closed his right fist and smiled confidently.

"Will you take on Rivers if the match is postponed and there is nothing doing for the present with Ritchie?" was asked. "I'm ready to take on Rivers the last of July, regardless of whether I meet the champion, and then I will fight again the next month and take Ritchie Labor Day. That's me, for I'm in better form the oftener I work."

Just what the immediate plans of the Eastern boxer will be is not quite known. Unless something positive is placed for Cross early this week the New Yorker will start back East, probably taking a date with Harry Trendall at St. Louis, and then on to New York, where he is offered a match with Young Shugrue.

Bud Anderson came into town with Manager Dick Donald yesterday and, although somewhat disappointed and forlorn, he expressed a manly version of the outcome and gave the victor all just dues, saying that he only hoped there would soon be a time when he can command another accounting with Mr. Cross. Bud's lips were considerably swollen and his right eye discolored. Anderson and Manager Donald are not certain of future plans, but will remain over until to-morrow, then returning to Medford.

RINGSIDE NOTES

Who will get the next chance at Willie Ritchie's title? This is a question that is worrying boxing fans these days. Freddie Welsh, Leach Cross, Tommy Murphy and Jack Britton are all clamoring for the prize match.

* * *

At the present time it looks very much as if Cross will beat his rivals to the big bout. Cross' recent victory over Anderson has made him a big card on the coast. The dentist's great punching power should give him a great chance to cop the championship from Ritchie.

* * *

Friends of Charlie White should not take his defeat at the hands of Jack Britton to heart. When it is taken into consideration that White weighed but 122 pounds against 136 for Britton the showing made by Charlie was nothing to be ashamed of. Although Britton is credited with a knockout he failed to drop White once during the entire mill. The bout was stopped by the sheriff.

Poor Joe Thomas is certainly hitting the toboggan. Frankie Whitney pushed the New Orleans boy still further down the ladder by handing Joe Golden's protege a neat lacing in ten rounds last Friday.

The Ritchie-Rivers championship battle at San Francisco drew a $30,000 house. Ritchie was guaranteed $17,000 win, lose or draw. Rivers drew down about $5,000 for his end.

When Johnny Kilbane was recently asked in Cleveland why he didn't knock out more of his opponents he said: "I have always said that I am a boxer and not a fighter. I am not in the ring to kill the other fellow, but to simply outbox him. I won the featherweight championship of the world by using this method and will not change my style now."

The next big bout to be staged on the coast will be the twenty-round engagement between Charley Ledoux and Kid Williams at Los Angeles on July 29. The winner has been promised a match with either Eddie Campi or Johnny Coulon.

* * *

Kid Young, the local newsboy boxer, is still waiting to hear from Charlie Lee in regard to the latter's challenge. Young says he will sign up for the match at once and will also give Lee a $50 side bet.

George Chip and Jack Dillon meet in a 12-round setto at Boston on July 8. The winner is to be matched with Frank Klaus.

* * *

Eddie Craney, who staged the Rivers-Ritchie mill, is now anxious to arrange a match between Jack Britton and Tommy Murphy. He has already wired an offer to Danny Morgan, manager of Britton.

* * *

Billy Papke, former middleweight, wishes to announce that he is still in the boxing game. Papke has agreed to meet any middleweight the Milwaukee promoters pick for him. The Kewanee boy says his injured hand is again in shape for a tough scrap.

The recent 20-round bout between Campi and Ledoux at the Pacific Athletic Club, of Vernon Cal., drew $4,900. Ledoux received $1,225, which was 25 per cent of the gross receipts. Campi, for winning got $1,470, having boxed for 30 per cent of the receipts.

Nick Pagoalos and Sam Fountas, local Greek featherweights, will clash in a private 10-round bout here Friday. Terry Nelson has been selected to referee the go. The winner will seek a match with Kid Young.

REDS PURCHASE ROBINSON FROM SAVANNAH CLUB

SAVANNAH, GA., July 6.—Announcement has been made of the consummation of negotiations which have been pending between the Cincinnati Baseball Club and the owners of the local association of the South Atlantic League for the sale of pitcher Dick Robertson. The purchase price is said to be $4,000.

Robertson will be delivered to the Cincinnati club at the end of the South Atlantic season. President Armstrong has stated that the present Indian combination will be kept intact throughout the year. When announcement was made of the sale of Robertson it was stated that the young spitball artist will remain in Savannah for the balance of the season.

GUTHRIE PITCHER HURLS ONLY 54 BALLS IN GAME

GUTHRIE, OKLA., July 7.—Andrew Jelsama, pitching for the Elks team of the Guthrie City League, is believed to have made a record in a game against the Santa Fe Railroad team when he delivered only 54 balls during the entire nine innings. He allowed three hits, striking out one man.

ZEIDER READY TO PLAY; CHANCE TO MAKE CHANGES

NEW YORK, July 7.—After today's double-header with the Senators the New Yorks leave for Chicago to begin their second Western trip.

Frank Chance has received word from Rollie Zeider that he would join the team on Wednesday, ready to play second base in the opening game with the White Sox. Zeider's absence has cost the Yankees many games. With Zeider on the middle bag, Hartzell will supplant Daniels or Wolter in the outfield.

CARPENTIER AND PALZER MAY CLASH IN PARIS GO

NEW YORK, July 7.—Tom O'Rourke is in receipt of a letter from Monsieur Vienne, the Parisian boxing promoter, offering him a match for Palzer with Carpentier some time this fall. Carpentier is all the rage in fight circles in France and would draw an immense gate with a white man of reputation who had not fought in Paris. O'Rourke thinks well of the proposition and will proceed to close the match with Monsieur Vienne.

OLD FIGHTING SPIRIT WINS, SAYS TEBEAU

By Patsy Tebeau.

(Manager of Famous Cleveland "Spiders.")

SHOW me a ball club out there fighting every inch of the way and I'll show you a team that is after the pennant.

This having players going through the parlor business of shaking hands every time they meet is foolish. It gives the fans the wrong impression.

You've got to get that old fighting spirit to win. Keep 'em hustling.

We never thought of greeting our opponents. Our idea was to get out there and lick 'em, and lick 'em good and quick. I can see some guy sliding back to first with me playing the bag and getting his head bumped with the ball.

Think I'd apologize? Not Patsy Tebeau. "Get your nut out of the way and you won't get hurt," would be more like it.

I haven't seen many games this year, but those I have seen were a lot different from the ones we played. The tactics were different.

About a year ago I saw a fellow steal second. He came up all dust, and what do you think happened? Why, the second baseman helped him dust his uniform.

And that team finished last in the race. That isn't my brand of baseball.

From what I've heard the teams that are winning are playing the same system the old "Spiders" used. That's why they're winning. That's the real stuff! Rush the other guys off their feet. Make 'em think you're tough. Scare 'em to death and you got them licked.

We used to sit on the bench and flic our spikes. They had to be sharp to give when they cut into the ground and at the same time the other team knew we wouldn't give an inch in a pinch.

One day I was sharpening my spikes when I heard a guy on the other team say, "When Tebeau slides into me you bet I'm going to get out of the way." I had him bluffed, you see?

They're trying to tone down baseball and they are killing the interest. You don't have to poke anyone in the jaw, step on or kick a player to win, but you don't have to wear kid gloves, either.

Pretty soon some of these league presidents will be fining a man for sliding and soiling his uniform.

There's a difference between rowdyism and aggressiveness. The aggressive player will be on top when the parlor boy is at the bottom. Off the field, oh, well, that's different. On the field, fight 'em to the last.

THIS CLUB PRESIDENT DOES HIS OWN UMPIRING

NEW YORK, July 7.—Arthur Chappelle, the motorcycle speed king, is to-day the holder of the professional championship of America. At the Motordrome at Brighton Beach last night Chappelle won the third and deciding race of the series for the championship from Charles Davis. Each had won a match and this was the deciding one, and consisted of a ten-mile and two five-mile heats.

Billy Vanderbury, of Philadelphia, captured the three-mile professional race, winning all three heats.

Martin Kessler, of Newark, was badly cut about the mouth when he fell from his machine while trying to avoid mixing up in a spill in the two-mile novice race.

KRAMER AND CAVANAUGH WIN GREAT CYCLE RACE

NEWARK, N. J., July 7.—A victory for the team of Kramer and Cavanaugh in the three-cornered tandem match race and a dead heat between Frank Kramer, of New Jersey, and Alfred Grenda, of Australia, were features of the racing at the Velodrome here yesterday.

In the two-mile event Grenda had a lead of twenty yards on the last lap, but Kramer spurted and managed to cross the line with his rival. In the three-cornered match Kramer and Cavanaugh nosed out Joe Fogler, of Brooklyn, and Al Goulet, of Australia, and Jackie Clark and Grenda, both Australians, got third. The victory was in straight heats of one mile each.

Sporting Food

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

Spending a section of the Fourth at the ringside while Carl Morris is attempting to fight is a great little pastime for one who has a lot of perfectly good time to throw away.

Samuel E. Debs is leading Edward P. Weston in their hike athwart the continent. Sam has more speed than Ed, but not a bit more sense.

Without cracking a smile, Fred Toney up and says he is glad to get a chance to work regularly. Fred will have his little joke.

By this time Mr. Toney is able to find his way from Chicago to Louisville and vice versa with his eyes shut.

ROUGH-HOUSE.

Lives of Phillies all remind us
We can play a rough-house game,
And, departing, leave behind us
Spike marks on another's frame.

It is said that the Cincinnati Reds once went through a whole season without losing a game. There is a feeling among baseball experts that this will not happen again for at least a couple of years.

In view of what happend to W. Heinrich Schmidt it is surprising that the English newspapers have not begun to chide McLoughlin on the cut of his trousers or the color of his hose.

The consensus of opinion is that Mr. Quigley is a good umpire—if there is such a thing as a good umpire.

SLIDING.

Toboggan-sliding days have come,
The saddest of the season,
When baseball teams go on the bum
For no apparent reason.

The Phils that led the bloomin' league
Are headed for the bottom.
Their pitchers suffer from fatigue,
And all the batters swat 'em.

Tom Jones is one of the saddest persons extant. Imagine a fight for the lightweight title and some one else there to count the gate receipts.

After being walloped, stepped on and otherwise abused, John McGraw draws a five-day suspension. Mr. Lynch shows almost intelligence enough to be accepted on a jury.

HOFMAN TO LEACH.

When you were a Pirate and I was a Cub
In the summer of 1910,
They said you were slipping and couldn't last,
And I was a whirlwind then.
They said you were feeble and old and lame,
While Artie was fast and young,
But Fred Clarke sighs as he reckons back,
And solemnly answers, "Stung!"

GOVERNOR MAY INTERVENE AT PORTER RACE TRACK

PORTER, IND., July 7.—State intervention at the Mineral Springs race track near here, which was successful last year, will be repeated this year if gamblers continue to bet on the races. Prosecutor Fabing, of Porter County, to-day returned from Indianapolis, where he obtained a promise from Governor Ralston that if there was any more gambling at the track State troops would come to Porter and close the course. Last year Governor Marshall used this method with success.

SHRUBB'S RECORD BEATEN.

STOCKHOLM, July 7.—Jean Rouin, the French runner, in the one-hour race at the Stadium yesterday covered 19,021.90 meters (11 miles 1,443 yards). This beats the world's record of 11 miles 1,136 yards made by Alfred Shrubb, the English champion, in 1904, by 307 yards.

CAPRON IS BACK.

BALTIMORE, July 7.—Ralph Capron is back in the game for Baltimore, his injured ankle having mended.

DO YOU ITCH?

If so, use Tetterine. It cures eczema, ground itch, ringworm, itching piles, infant sore head and all other skin troubles. Read what C. B. Raus, Indianapolis, says:

RICHARDS WINS A WIFE IF HE WINS 2 RACES

IT'S leaked out on "Tex" Richards, rider at the local Motordrome.

Old "Tex" is going to be married.

That is, maybe?

You see it's this way.

The girl is an awful Motordrome enthusiast. Also it takes a peck of money to get married.

So she wrote "Tex" that if he would win both races at the next meet she would have him—and the quicker the better.

Yes, it sounds like a press agent's yarn. And like as not the girl got the idea out of a novel or a newspaper. A lot of things come from such places. But anyhow, the story is true. If "Tex" wins both races he gets a wife. If he doesn't, there will be another wait. And "Tex" has waited quite a while.

Naturally a thing like this will spur Richards to the utmost Tuesday night. And he will need it. Jock McNeil has the old J. A. P. running as never before. And Mortie Graves' new Excelsior has shown speed in practice that is fast enough to win any race ever run on this Motordrome or any other.

Tuesday's races will be among those three riders. The experts believe that Graves is the winner if all goes well. But McNeil's machine has never been beaten when it was running right. And "Tex" Richards has never yet run that old Indian No. 23 as he will run it Tuesday night.

In case of rain Tuesday night the meeting will be postponed until Wednesday night. There will also be racing Friday night.

Fortorich Offers Big Purse for Title Go

SAN FRANCISCO, July 7.—D. J. Tortorich, owner of the Westside Athletic Club at New Orleans, wired Willie Ritchie to-day offering a purse of $20,000 for a twenty-round fight between the champion and Jack Britton, of Chicago. If accepted, the fight will take place September 7. Danny Morgan, manager of Britton, has already accepted for his protege.

LEDOUX AND WILLIAMS WORKING FOR GO JULY 15

LOS ANGELES, July 7.—Charley Ledoux and Kid Williams are going after the training stunt as though they meant to make the July 15 bout a businesslike affair. The two have met in the ring before, and as both claim a victory at that meeting, the rivalry is especially keen.

The French bantamweight appears to be in great shape and went through his best work-outs since arriving in California yesterday at his Vernon camp. He showed considerable improvement over his previous work here.

At Venice Kid Williams gave a large crowd of assembled fans a good idea of his condition and showed them something of what he intends to do to Ledoux next week.

JOY FOR FRANK CHANCE.

NEW YORK, July 7.—F. Leroy Chance has moved from a pennant contender to a tail-ender. At first glance this would appear to be quite a jolt. But Chance accepts the situation with a philosophical calm. He no longer has to manage Heinie Zimmerman.

Bad Year for Georgia Players

Cobb--Rucker Both Out of Whack

BROOKLYN, N. Y., July 7.—This seems to be a hard year on celebrated Georgia ball players. Ty Cobb is in bad shape. And now Nap Rucker also has gone bad.

"Nap" may not pitch in his old form for some time to come. He will not pitch at all for the present if he takes the advice of his physician. The big Georgian has a bad arm, so bad in fact that for over two weeks his curve ball has been a myth.

The trouble with the arm is the indirect result of an accident he met with in the team's long stay at home early in the season. In a game against the St. Louis Cardinals "Nap" had the thumb of his pitching hand knocked out of gear.

Instead of waiting until the injured member had entirely healed, "Nap" got back into the game because he argued that he could pitch without using his thumb. He changed his style of delivery because of the damaged thumb, and it is believed, in doing so, he put too much of a strain on certain muscles in his shoulder. "Nap" says for two weeks he has not been able to pitch a curve ball, which accounts for the peculiar exhibitions that he has been giving of late.

THE big Georgian said yesterday that he does not know how he ever got through that extra-inning game with the Phillies. He says he was able to beat the Giants because the McGrawites were looking for him to pitch curve balls and "Nap" was not pitching them for the very good reason that he couldn't.

President Ebbets sent "Nap" to a specialist. The specialist gave it as his opinion that while the arm was not seriously injured, "Nap" would be unable to get his arm back in shape unless he gave it a good rest. The rest thing does not make a hit with "Nap." He said yesterday that he did not know whether to stay out or not.

* * *

THREE years ago Rucker had trouble with his arm and it was caused by fooling with different kinds of deliveries. At that time he had developed quite a spitter and was using it with great success. Then his arm started to bother him.

One day He mentioned it to Hank O'Day. According to "Nap," Hank proceeded to give him a fine little bawling out for using the spitball. The veteran umpire attributed all the trouble to "Nap" changing his style of delivery, by which he put a strain on muscles that "Nap" did not bring into play with his regular delivery.

FODDER FOR FANS

The effete East should worry. Statistics compiled to-day show that Eddie Collins, of the Athletics, and Tris Speaker, of the Boston Americans, outbatted Ty Cobb and Joe Jackson, two mighty swat artists during the Eastern tour of the Western clubs.

* * *

When the Yankees leave to-night for Chicago, Manager Chance will carry two new hands with him. The new men are Tom Hanley, a left-handed pitcher, and Daniel Costello. Hanley is said to be able to unleash some of the wildest curves in captivity.

* * *

Charley McDonald, the Boston Braves third baseman, who is just now leading the National League in hitting, is a protege of John J. McGraw. The Giants' chief recommended the slugging youngster to Garry Herrman, of the Cincinnati Reds, who bought him from Dallas, of the Texas League.

* * *

It is estimated that the Boston Nationals will clean up $50,000 this year. Predictions are made that George Stallings will have a first division team next year.

* * *

The baseball jinx has moved to Brooklyn. Charley Stengel, Bill Fisher and Bob Fisher have been swept from the Dodger line-up and Nap Rucker is reported to be nursing a sore shoulder.

* * *

"Stalling" was responsible for the Cubs' defeat in the second game of the Chicago-St. Louis double-header in the Windy City Sunday. A time limit had been set and the Cubs tried to delay the game. After warning Manager Evers three times, Umpire Eason declared the game forfeited to St. Louis.

* * *

The Cincinnati Reds used up three pitchers in the first game of their double-header with the Pirates Sunday. The Pirates won both games.

* * *

Charley Sterrett, former Princeton idol who signed with the Yankees last season, has been released to the Vernon, Cal., club of the Pacific Coast League.

* * *

In an interview published here to-day Christy Mathewson, of the Giants, predicts that the Phillies are now out of the running for the National League pennant. Nothing to it but the Giants, said Christy.

* * *

The White Sox got but one hit in the second game of their double header with the Cleveland Naps yesterday. The Naps took both games.

ACTOR SUICIDE'S KIN SOUGHT IN ATLANTA

Frank Bailey, Who Shot Wife and Himself in Kansas City, Mo., Started Career Here.

The death of Frank Bailey, an old Atlanta boy, who committed suicide in Kansas City Sunday after killing his wife and stage teammate, Mazie Edwards, has resulted in a close search for relatives of Bailey, who are said to reside in Atlanta. Persons living at the address given by George E. Greenwood, manager of a theatrical agency, said they had never heard of the Baileys.

Bailey, according to dispatches from Kansas City, shot his wife as she lay in bed and then trained the gun on himself.

The pair arrived in Kansas City Saturday night for a week's engagement. Jealousy is ascribed as the cause of the tragedy.

Both Bailey and Mazie Edwards, who lived in Denver, were well known in Atlanta, where they have been booked several times. Bailey started his stage career here years ago. Mazie Edwards began her career in Montgomery, Ala. The pair played at the Bijou last winter in a singing and dancing act.

Mrs. Bailey was a member of the "Bluebeard" company, playing at the Iroquois Theater in Chicago when fire destroyed the playhouse and burned 600 persons.

Princess Mary.

YOUNG PRINCESSES WORRY QUEEN MARY

Princess Patricia and Grand Duke Adolph, of Mecklenburg-Strelitz.

Rumor Has It That Mary Will Be Bethrothed to Grand Duke Adolph.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 7.—It is quite certain that the Princess "Pat" will not become the wife of the hereditary Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, for the Grand Duke Adolph does not like the Princess any too well, and he has taken active steps to find out who is the author of the reports which betroth him to Princess Patricia of Connaught. She is too sarcastic by far for this German prince.

But it becomes more and more apparent that there is something on the cards for Grand Duke Adolph and Princess Mary, the daughter of King George and Queen Mary. The Princess is only 16, but it is known that the Queen would be not at all adverse to having her daughter marry young, providing she also married well.

Princess Too Democratic.

One reason Queen Mary and her royal consort are so reconciled to an early marriage of their daughter is the fact that for several years Princess Mary has been something of a problem for them. The Princess has never known what it is to have a girl companion of her own age. Her constant companions have been her five small brothers.

The result is that she is as full of slang as a boy, is given to romps, and even has developed a certain independence of spirit that England never forgives in a woman.

The little Princess has been severely punished by her mother on more than one occasion because of her propensity for getting out of the bounds of the royal estates and picking up chance acquaintances after her own heart.

Chums With Squire's Daughter.

Not so long ago the Princess was out with the Norfolk Hounds. But while she was supposed to be following the hounds, she fell into conversation with the two daughters of a squire, one of whom was her own age. She rode home with them and invited herself to tea at their house.

In the meanwhile riders from York cottage had been scouring the country for the little Princess. The little Princess was taken to her mother. She was obliged to write to her new friends that she was sorry that she would have to defer their visit, that she was going to London.

A number of boys and girls, sons and daughters of Sandringham tenants, passed, running a paper chase, and the Princess shouted to them.

They stopped.

"Don't stop," she exclaimed. "I'll go a bit of the way with you."

Had a "Jolly Row."

And she did. It was late when she again returned to York cottage. She had fallen in a ditch on the way of the paper chase.

"And I had a jolly bit of a row with mother over it," she subsequently confided to one of the girls who had taken part with her in the paper chase.

The Princess had picked up much slang from her brothers. A member of the Privy Council is always to her a "Dilly Wig," her father's chamberlain is "sausage," luncheon is "lunko," the Prime Minister is "captain" and tea time is "tucker." Once King George sent her from the room when he heard her refer to a possible councillor as a "Dilly Wig."

Baby's Screams Save Woman From Burglar

CHICAGO, July 7.—Mrs. Genevieve Willis to-day owes her life to her two-year-old daughter. She awoke just before dawn and saw a masked man standing over her, holding a hammer poised, ready to strike her on the head.

Mrs. Willis was too frightened to scream, but her little daughter was not. She gave several lusty cries and the burglar fled.

Says He Got $4,000 For Slaying a Girl

LOS ANGELES, July 7.—The police to-day sent to the State authorities of Ohio a copy of the remarkable "confession" of Simon P. Heffensteine, aged 52, who said that he killed Pearl Bryan and committed six other murders.

According to Heffensteine he killed Pearl Bryan at Toledo, Ohio, and took her body to the place where Jackson and Walling, the men who died for the murder, dissected it. He said he received $4,000 for the murder.

Doctors' Opinions
About POSTUM

Are best expressed in their own words

Writing under date of May 13, 1913, one physician says:

"From past experience I have become a strong friend of Postum. I am now advising its use over that of coffee altogether, and find that most of those who give Postum a trial become users of it.

"It is however sometimes very hard or impossible to get folks to purchase something when they 'don't know anything about it,' and 'don't want to throw away money on a chance of liking it.'

"Now, it occurs to me these people are not to be criticised for such feelings, but at the same time I am sure many of them would become friends of Postum if they could but have a sample of it placed in their hands.

"If you think this is a good suggestion, and will send me samples from time to time, I will see that they are placed among my patients where they will do the most good, for I believe it is to their interest to drink Postum rather than coffee. Postum is used in our home, but we buy it of our grocer, and we expect to keep right on doing so."

Thousands of coffee drinkers are victims of headache, nervousness, biliousness, heart trouble and indigestion, without knowing the cause.

More and more, physicians are naming coffee as a common cause of these ills. Not every physician, however, finds time to send a sample following his prescription of

INSTANT POSTUM

If your physician recommends that you "stop coffee," or your own distress suggests a change, send your name and address with 2c stamp (for postage), to Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich., and a 5-cup tin of the new food-drink—Instant Postum—will be mailed immediately. Nothing is so convincing as the happy results of personal experience.

GEORGIA WOMAN SUFFRAGE BODY FACES ROW

Split in Atlanta League, Whose Members Are Barred, Will Be Brought Before Convention.

Little hope was seen Monday for a settlement of the strife in the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association until the convention here July 9 and 10.

The House of Representatives Monday will consider a resolution by Representative J. Y. Smith, of Fulton County, granting them the use of the hall. It is also gossiped that the Senate may reconsider its action and grant the petition of the women for use of the Senate chamber. There is no doubt that the women will hold their convention in the Capitol.

Within their ranks disagreements have arisen which are not so easily disposed of. One side is led by Mrs. M. L. McLendon, president of the Atlanta Civic League and the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association, and the other by Mrs. F. S. Whiteside, whom a number have urged for official recognition.

Parade Cause of Trouble.

The trouble began early this year when advocates of woman suffrage were anticipating the parade in Washington. Mrs. McLendon was president of the Atlanta Civic League and Mrs. Amelia B. Woodall was secretary. The officers of the organization were to be the representatives in Washington, but it was time for reelection.

The election was postponed several times, until Mrs. McLendon and Mrs. Woodall automatically became the official representatives. On their return they were met by the charge from Mrs. Whiteside that they had manipulated postponements that just such things might result.

New League Is Formed.

And the story is that Mrs. Ida B. McClellan, in a speech, precipitated the actual split.

This situation, some time ago, resulted in Mrs. McLendon and her supporters in the Atlanta Civic League forming the Atlanta Equal Suffrage League.

Now, on the eve of the meeting of the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association, the members of the Atlanta Civic League have been denied admission on the grounds that they have not paid up their dues.

Efforts to bring about an amicable adjustment have failed. It is asserted that a rival organization to the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association may be formed.

Atlanta Pastor Weds Two a Day for Week

Marrying a couple a day is the record of Dr. Caleb A. Ridley, pastor of the Central Baptist Church, for the last week. Dr. Ridley says July seems to be as propitious for weddings as June. He performed his seventh ceremony for the week Sunday morning on his way home from church.

Dr. Ridley is in Monticello, Ga., this week holding meetings at the Baptist Church there.

VIRGINIA OFFICE OF GUARANTEE IS CLOSED

Manager Is Sought as Atlanta Banking Company's Branch in Richmond Suspends.

RICHMOND, VA., July 7.—The crisis in the affairs of the Guarantee Trust and Banking Company of Atlanta is reflected here in the form of a notice on the door of the company's Richmond branch in the Virginia Railway and Power Company's building, reading as follows:

"Office closed. Direct all communications to the home office in care of the Guarantee Trust and Banking Company, box 1424, Atlanta, Ga."

Although the latest issue of the City Directory gives G. B. Paylor as the name of the local manager, efforts to locate him here in the last few days have been futile.

The company also had branches in Norfolk, Lynchburg and Roanoke. One of its widely published advertisements offered for sale easy-payment, profit-sharing 5 per cent coupon trust bonds, paying interest semi-annually and issued in denominations of $1,000 and more.

A local holder of several of the company's bonds states that interest payments have for some time been omitted. Similar complaints lodged by other citizens indicate that a considerable number of the company's obligations are outstanding in Virginia.

STOCK EXCHANGE SHOULD PROBE OWN AFFAIRS

Forbes Suggests Appointment of Investigating Committee and Watching Public Pulse.

By B. C. FORBES.

The greatest industry in the United States is—what?

Iron and steel making?

Weaving textiles and manufacturing clothing?

Railroading?

No.

INVESTING ITS OWN AND FOREIGN MONEY.

* * *

This, the most important, is the least studied and worst managed business in the country.

* * *

The protection of investors is nobody's duty. The Government can not start criminal proceedings until crime has been committed—until, in other words, it is too late.

* * *

If the New York Stock Exchange is not to wizen up through dry rot, if it is to keep in front of the march of progress instead of continue to fall lamentably behind, it must bestir itself to safeguard investors, it must arrange to keep its finger on the public pulse, it must become the monitor and not the slave of corporations issuing securities to the public.

* * *

I have been asked by governors of the Stock Exchange and others: What do you suggest ought to be done? How can the reforms you advocate be brought about? Is it not the Government's business rather than ours to regulate the acts of corporations?

Here is my first suggestion, offered in all friendliness and with a desire to assist, not assail:

Let the governors of the Exchange appoint a commission of the leading brokers and others, including office or inside members of firms, who come into personal touch with the investing public, and have this commission thoroughly investigate the whole subject, draw up recommendations for remedial action and present them to the governors for consideration and adoption.

* * *

The Stock Exchange governors who spend every day on the floor of the institution mingling only with others similarly employed do NOT have their fingers on the public pulse. They are ignorant of throbbing public sentiment. They live in isolation, in a professional, artificial atmosphere. They buy and sell honestly—and feel that ends their duties. Their horizon is circumscribed by the four walls of the Exchange.

* * *

The brokers who have to meet the customers, the men who have to pacify those who buy listed securities that go wrong, the heads of the statistical and information departments, those whose business it is to analyze securities and advise clients—all these are daily confronted with the great problem of protecting investors, of collecting trustworthy information, of trying to peer behind the barriers raised by many corporations whose securities fluctuate in a way that enables insiders to make easy fortunes at the expense of outside holders.

* * *

Secretary Ely, of the Stock Exchange, discussing the movement for more frequent reports from corporations, said yesterday:

The conditions surrounding large business interests are so varied that some corporations can not make accurate reports more frequently than once a year. Such corporations having vast interests distributed over the world are unable to make returns except upon definite inventories taken annually. The committee feels that estimated returns would be much more undesirable for shareholders than awaiting the actual figures for longer periods.

* * *

If directors give stockholders, say, once every three months, all the information at command, detailed reports would not be essential. Stockholders do not ask the impossible. But they do demand to share the knowledge that comes into possession of their representatives, the directors, so that the outsiders may not work in the dark and the insiders in the light.

* * *

Certain governors have told me that it is none of the Exchange's business to see that investors receive information. The sooner they make it their business the brighter will become the prospects for the Exchange's future—none too bright at the moment. The proportion of bond and stock trading done on the Exchange has dwindled abnormally and will continue to dwindle unless something effective be done.

* * *

I have only scratched the surface to-day. The subject will be gone into more in detail by-and-by.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Logan & Bryan: We feel that lower range of values will ensue, although we would not follow the short side too closely.

A. Norden & Co.: We continue to feel that a better policy for the present will be to buy on such breaks as we had to-day.

Morris H. Rothschild & Co.: We continue to advise purchases of cotton around present levels.

THIS CLUB PRESIDENT DOES HIS OWN UMPIRING

CAIRO, ILL., July 7.—President Frank Bassett, of the league organization that includes Cairo, Paducah and other river towns, thinks he knows how to put down war in his league.

Three hours after Bassett learned that Manager McNairn, of the Cairo team, had knocked out the umpire, he wired McNairn's suspension and suspended Manager Brouthers, of the Paducah team, for refusing to play under a new umpire. Then Bassett hurried to Cairo to umpire Saturday's double-header himself.

Cotton Markets

NEW YORK, July 7.—Buying of August contracts was the only feature at the opening of the cotton market today. This position opened 13 points higher, but other prices ranged 2 to 4 points higher than last Thursday's closing quotations. Changes at Liverpool over the holidays were slight and weather conditions were very favorable.

A little pressure in new crop positions after the call due to private crop advices from the South, and prices worked off sharply. August suffered the greatest loss by declining from 12.18, opening quotations, to 12 cents. Other positions show recessions aggregating from 6 to 8 points from the opening range.

Trading during the forenoon was very small and sentiment was extremely bearish. It was reported that Liverpool was a fair seller of August, which, of course, had its effect. Later the market recovered a few points of the early loss, price movement being 1 to 3 points under the previous close.

Stock Markets

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, July 7.—Following the three-day holiday the stock market opened weak to-day and prices ranged from fractions over a point lower.

Chesapeake and Ohio was sold in considerable quantity, going to 53⅛ for a loss of 1⅛. Union Pacific sold off ¾.

Among the other declines were Amalgamated Copper ⅝, American Can ⅝, American Smelting ⅛, Atchison ⅜, United States Steel common ⅛, Southern Pacific ⅝, New York Central ½, Reading ⅛, Northern Pacific ⅛, Anaconda ⅛ and Canadian Pacific ⅝. Baltimore and Ohio rose ½ and St. Paul gained ⅜.

After half an hour some issues rallied and a firmer tone was evident.

The curb was steady.

Americans in London were firm and Canadian Pacific there was steady.

The situation in the Balkans is exercising a depressive influence over the European money market and to-day $3,000,000 gold was engaged in New York for London.

There was little to the trading during the forenoon. Union Pacific was freely supplied, declining to 145½; Canadian Pacific moved up to 214⅝; Amalgamated Copper and Pennsylvania Railroad were off ⅛. Steel remained unchanged. There was fractional recessions in Reading, Southern Pacific, Atchison and New York Central. The tone was dull before noon.

Call money loaning at 2 per cent.

STOCK GOSSIPS

The New York Financial Bureau says: "Would buy standard and attractive issues conservatively on fair opportunities. Information channels favor a trading position."

* * *

Dow Jones says: "Result of strike vote among conductors and trainmen of Eastern railroads to be announced to-morrow. Democratic caucus of tariff to-day. American stocks in London easy, unchanged to ⅛ off. Twelve industrials decline .01. Twenty active rails advanced .01."

* * *

Potter, of N. L. Carpenter & Co., says: "The market may show a reactionary tendency to-day on account of the European situation. The prospects of a big railroad strike and a poor bank statement. However, do not expect any decline to carry prices very far from this level and would accumulate stocks carefully on weak spots. The Government crop report on grain due this week will give condition of corn, which is most important, and from private estimates it should be very satisfactory."

ATLANTA LIVE STOCK MARKET.

By W. H. White, Jr., of the White Provision Company.

Cattle receipts increasing with the larger supply of grass stock. Good kinds scarce and reasonably strong. While the bulk coming is of only medium quality and is only ordinary flesh, which is considered generally as undesirable killers, and while the prices have ranged lower, the quality is considerably below that of the beef coming three weeks ago. The demand has been light for the past several days, which together with the plain class of cattle has depressed the market and values are probably a full quarter lower on medium and a half lower on common grades than a week ago.

Tennessee sheep and lambs are plentiful and the extreme prices of two weeks ago have been lowered by about 1 cent per pound.

Hog supply about equal to the demand. The yards are kept cleaned up from day to day. Several loads of extra choice packers were among the week's receipts and brought top prices. Market is steady.

Good to choice steers, 1,000 to 1,200, $5.50@6.50; good steers, 800 to 1,00, $5.25@6.00; medium to good steers, 700 to 850, $5.00@5.50.

Good to choice beef cows, 800 to 900, $4.50@5.50; medium to good cows, 700 to 800, $4.25@5.00.

Good to choice heifers, 750 to 850, $4.75@5.25; medium to good heifers, 650 to 750, $4.00@4.50.

Medium to common steers, if fat, 800 to 900, $4.00@5.00; medium to common cows, if fat, 700 to 800, $3.75@4.25; mixed common, 600 to 800, $3.25@3.75; good butcher bulls, $3.50@4.00.

Prime hogs, 160 to 200, $8.50@8.80; good butcher hogs, 140 to 160, $8.40@8.50; good butcher pigs, 100 to 140, $8.25@8.50; light pigs, 80 to 100, $7.75@8.00.

Above quotations apply to corn-fed hogs; mash and peanut fattened, 1 to 1½ cents.

Grain Markets

CHICAGO, July 7.—Wheat was ⅝@¾c lower this morning on cooler weather in the Northwest and the bearish Missouri crop report, which showed a wheat yield of 16 bushels, compared with a yield of 12.6 last year. July sold at 90 cents down to 89¼, September at 90½ down to 89⅞@90. The movement of wheat in the Northwest and primary markets was liberal.

Oats were ¼c lower in sympathy with the other grains.

Provisions were better.

Grain Notes

King, of Toledo, says in his Missouri crop report: "Wheat yield 16 bushels, against 12.6 last year when crop was 22,000,000; 85 per cent of crop is harvested, against 51 per cent last year; quality 96. On Government acreage, yield suggests 28,000,000 bushels. Oats, condition 56 per cent, against 68 per cent in June and 94 per cent last year, when the crop was 30,000,000 bushels. Crop indicated 20,000,000 bushels."

* * *

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. says: "There has been some rain in Northwest with generally favorable temperatures. Primary receipts to-day will doubtless show a large total as a result of accumulations over the holidays and the visible will doubtless again show a decrease. We are inclined to look for a steady wheat market to-day without important price changes.

"Corn—The belt has received very little rainfall since Thursday, and some extremely high temperatures have prevailed in Kansas, but lower temperatures report this morning with some rains in Nebraska and Missouri.

"Oats—Buyers seem to come in on all fair recessions, basing purchases on general belief of a moderate yield.

"Provisions—Market may have some setbacks, but we do not look for any decline of moment."

* * *

Private messages from Winnipeg, Duluth, Glenwood, Thief River Falls, Hankinson, Harvey, Portal and Endlin indicate clear weather with temperatures around 60 degrees.

Weather since Thursday: North Dakota and Minnesota had excellent rains; Illinois scattered rains, mostly over good parts of States; South Dakota, some rains, but light. Canadian Northwest had fair rain.

CLEARINGS SOMEWHAT OFF.

Atlanta's clearings for June were $44,695,193, and for the first six months of 1913 they were $235,143,406, both figures being but slightly below last year's levels.

Slow collections and complete absence of speculation are given as causes by Bradstreet's, which further remarks that in view of the halt of speculation, the showing is remarkably good.

LIVERPOOL GRAIN MARKET.

LIVERPOOL, July 7.—Wheat opened unchanged to ¼d higher; at 1:30 p. m. the market was ⅛ to ½d higher; closed ¼ to ⅜d higher.

Corn opened ⅛d higher at 1:30 p. m. the market was ¼d higher; closed ¼d higher.

Trading in the market to-day was in a small volume. Sentiment was very bearish. There was practically no feature.

Gwathmey and Russell were good buyers of August at the outset to-day Liverpool, however, sold the option.

Dallas wires: "Texas clear and warm, Oklahoma generally partly cloudy and clear."

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, July 7.—Hayward & Clark: "The weather map favorable; partly cloudy in the northern border of the belt, fair rest of the belt; nice rains in Arkansas, central Mississippi, Gulf districts and along the Atlantic Coast. Indications are for generally fair, except in Northwest Texas, Oklahoma and North Carolina, which may get some showers.

Vicksburg, Greenwood, Shreveport, Monroe, clear and hot.

* * *

Washington forecast for week: Generally fair during week; may be a few scattered thundershowers; seasonable temperatures.

* * *

The Memphis Commercial-Appeal summary shows that last week probably was the most favorable of the season on the cotton crop. At least the crop made better progress than during any other similar period this year. Under the stimulus of good rains plenty of sunshine and warm days and nights the plant made splendid growth, and, while still a bit late, made up much lost time during the week. The plant is strong and stocky, is beginning to branch out and is blooming and fruiting heavily.

Rains fell in sections all over the belt during the week. They were the heaviest and more nearly general in Texas and Oklahoma, where practically the entire area of both States received good rains. In the central valley the drouth was relieved, except in scattered localities that comprise a very small total area. In the east no great need of moisture had been felt, but good rains fell at the end of the week.

The high state of cultivation that has characterized the crop from the start was in no way abated during the week. Fields are almost universally clean and tilth of soil probably is more nearly perfect than ever before known. The feature of the crop places the plant in the best shape to withstand either drouth or rain with the least possible damage.

There is still complaint of boll weevil in infested districts. They are numerous in sections of Mississippi and hardly worth mentioning to date is hardly worth mentioning. Farmers are continuing a relentless war against the pest, and in some sections they seem to have won their fight.

THEFT NO WORSE THAN DODGING YOUR DEBTS

Line Between 'Mine' and 'Thine' Too Badly Blurred at Present, Says Forbes.

By B. C. FORBES.

There is a difference between "Mine" and "Thine." Many individuals, not a few companies and a few States and municipalities need to be reminded of this simple fact. Lax notions are prevalent on the subject.

* * *

A debt is a debt. All debts are debts of honor and should be honored. In these days of unthinking extravagance too many debts are light-heartedly incurred and not paid. The habit of getting into debt, like most bad habits, is alluring at first, but, also, like most bad habits undo their victims in the end.

* * *

The phrase falling "into debt" is apt. The descent is easy enough, but the climb back is usuallypainful.

* * *

This dissertation is inspired by the frequency of late with which corporations have failed to pay off obligations falling due. Instead of walking up to the counter and handing over one hundred cents on the dollar in hard cash, as was stipulated when the debt was incurred, borrowers have too frequently resorted to makeshifts, to temporizing, to compromising, such as offering, in lieu of cash, a new obligation for the old, with an intimation that if this be not accepted the lender will fare much worse.

* * *

The most brazen instance of such questionable conduct is afforded by Atchison, Kans. An issue of some $267,000 bonds of this city fell due Tuesday. Did the lenders promptly receive their money as they were entitled to? Oh, no. In Atchison, Kan., a debt is not a debt of honor, something that must be discharged. Just read what the Mayor has the effrontery to tell the holders, who, of course, have counted upon receiving their money—money which could be used at a high rate of interest to-day:

* * *

Atchison will have $266,950 4 per cent thirty-year bonds issued in 1883, due July 1. In the past, it seems to have been their judgment that a sinking fund was not necessary.

I have inherited a debt—I would not repudiate it, but will defer it by offering a renewal fully as good as the one you hold.

I realize the opportunity of money at present, but as a representative of the taxpayers I can not increase their obligation on account of a temporary stringency in the money market.

A new bond for the old one, with the same rate that has satisfied for thirty years, ought to be acceptable under the adverse circumstances.

I regret that it is the best I have to offer.

* * *

"Regrets" don't pay bill. The holders of Atchison's bonds care nothing about the Mayor's sympathies; they want and are absolutely entitled to receive their money, every penny of it, the moment it fell due.

Poultry, Pet and Live Stock

Raise Some Poultry In Your Back Yard. It Will Surely Pay

Eggs Alone Will More Than Pay for the Feed and Trouble.

Edited by JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL.

We need more poultry keepers in this country. Not necessarily the great poultry plants. They are all right in their places, but it is the keepers of from 10 to 100 hens that we have reference to now. The man in the city with a back lot, the villager who has a larger lot, and the average farmer. These are the ones who should be maintaining what hens their premises will hold without crowding, producing eggs of the finest quality, supplying first their family's demands, selling any extras at good prices. How many places are void of chickens in this country, both in town and country? There are many farmers who do not keep hens enough to supply their own tables, but run to town and buy salt pork instead. Some keep no chickens at all, claiming that poultry does not pay or that they have not the time to bother with it. We need the interest in poultry keeping awakened. A good part of the year eggs are beyond reach of the average person who wants to supply his family. Poultry meat is the same way. Why not be independent and fix your own premises so you can keep a few chickens

Medium-Sized Acreage Tracts

ALL of us know the profit that is usually made from acreage.

It is almost a conceded fact that if a person owns good acreage, he has a sure profit in it sooner or later. When we think of acreage propositions, we think of lots of land, and naturally lots of money, because the usual acreage transaction involves a great deal of money. The demand for good, close-in acreage for subdivision purposes is increasing every day. A trip to the outskirts of the city in any direction you choose to take will convince you of this fact. We are going to offer a tract of about 100 acres, between Decatur and East Lake, which we have cut up into five, ten and fifteen acre tracts. The price and terms on these tracts make it possible for almost anybody to handle them.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Two New Residences Will Total $40,000

Pegram and Kirk Plan Announced. Mr. Little Confirms Report. Small Sales in West End.

John D. Little confirmed Saturday the report that he would build a fine residence on Pace's Ferry Road opposite the property of John W. Grant, who will also build soon.

Mr. Little's plans are not definite, but for some time he has had landscape architects working on his eighteen acres, and W. T. Downing, the well-known architect, has been planning with them to determine the character of house that should be erected.

The town house of Mr. Little at the southwest corner of Peachtree and Eighth Streets will not be sold. It is one of the handsomest houses of colonial type in the city. The new house, said Mr. Little, will not be a duplicate of the other.

There are other signs of activity in this section of North Fulton. Sam Pegram has plans for a $15,000 brick veneer dwelling of two stories at the southeast corner of Muscogee Avenue and Rivers Drive. He will build at once.

E. R. Kirk is building a $25,000 residence on Andrews Avenue, 400 feet north of Peachtree. This is two stories and of brick veneer and stone construction.

Satisfactory progress is being made on the residences of Hunt Chipley, on Wesley Avenue, and Robert Zanner and Clark McMichael, on Peachtree Road, near Wesley Avenue.

West End Park Sales.

The West End Park Company has announced the sale, through Collins Brothers & Davies, of a two-story residence on Stokes Avenue, near Ontario Avenue, West End Park, to a client of the above agency, for $5,500, and to H. S. Norris from the park company direct of the one-story dwelling at the southwest corner of the same thoroughfares, for $3,500.

Loan Rate Reduction.

Borrowers of money on real estate report a reduction in the last few weeks on loan rates. While money was held at 8 per cent recently, a good deal of it can now be had at 7 per cent. In fact, a local real estate agency is advertising $10,000 at 7 per cent on improved property, and much larger amounts than this can be obtained. Bankers foresaw a temporary stringency and prepared for it, and now they are in a position to extend accommodations in judicious measure.

For Early Whitehall Regrade.

Whitehall regrading will be considered again at the next meeting of Council. Councilman George H. Boynton introduced a resolution providing that work start as soon as Comptroller Goldsmith certifies that the property owners have paid in their share of expense, but objection on the part of Councilman Claude L. Ashley and others caused postponement. It has already been agreed to start the job October 15.

The pith of the objection was that other work more important would suffer if Whitehall were regraded now. The Butler Street sewer work was given as an illustration.

It is estimated that the first installment will be $11,287.97, and property owners have agreed to pay the city the difference between the appropriation of $3,500 and the estimated cost.

To Sell 24 Residence Lots.

J. T. Kimbrough & Co. have placed on private sale 24 building lots on the East Lake, South Decatur, South Kirkwood, Soldiers' Home and Stone Mountain car lines, all the lots within a block of city schools, on terms of $25 down and $10 a month at 7 per cent. The price of the lots is $750. Improvements consist of tile sidewalks, sewerage and water.

Interest in Car Line Change.

The proposal to change the route of the river car line, as presented to Council, has created a great deal of interest on the part of people residing on the west side of the city. General Manager Glenn wants to open the street at Marietta and Forsyth Streets and let incoming river cars run up Walton Street from the Marietta Street intersection. Cars will turn to the right at Forsyth and to the right again at Marietta. Passengers will enter at Marietta and Forsyth Streets, rather than at Broad. The Streets Committee of Council approved the plan.

Start Soon on West Peachtree.

The West Peachtree Improvement Club announced Saturday that all will be in readiness soon for work on West Peachtree retaining walls, the same having been authorized by the Streets Committee of the City Council. The wall work will be started as soon as contracts can be let for materials, the city to do the construction. When the walls are completed the county will do the regrading, and this will be not later than September 15, according to Shelby Smith, of the County Commission.

Prominent in the West Peachtree movement have been Judge Spencer R. Atkinson, Judge E. W. Born, Frank P. Rice, Dr. William Owens, James T. Wright and others.

Frank West in Winnipeg.

H. Frank West, of the A. J. & H. F. West real estate agency, has reached Winnipeg, Manitoba, on an extensive Western trip, and writes back that elaborate preparations are being made to entertain the sixth annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges this month. Mr. West states that special attention will be given the Atlanta delegation.

What Race Track Gambling Did for One Man

It Has Done the Same and Worse for Many Another. No ROMANCE in This

(Copyright, 1913.)

A reader asks us to print a brief account of one man's gambling experience, published in a newspaper at El Paso, Texas.

He writes: "The story is one of the most direct appeals on the subject I have ever read, and if presented with the forcible coloring you are prepared to give it, it will undoubtedly 'go home' to those who are just starting to feel what the man it tells about must have felt when he still had the opportunity of honorably quitting the game."

We print the story exactly as the El Paso newspaper printed it—no "coloring" is needed.

We say once more to the young men tempted by gambling, and to fathers and mothers careless about their sons' associations:

GAMBLING IS THE WORST, MOST DANGEROUS VICE IN CIVILIZATION.

It is worse than drink, for it destroys honor, as well as health.

Gambling long maintained will make any man a thief or a worse criminal.

There is NO honorable professional gambler, as there is no honorable professional burglar.

Gambling leads to sorrow, poverty, disgrace and crime.

Here is the plain story of one gambler, published in the Texas newspaper:

OLD STORY OF RUIN IN THE RACING GAME.

The Man Who Followed It, Precariously and Otherwise, for Years, and His Sad Ending.

It is the old story of ruin from the racing game. He drifted to El Paso when the Juarez track was opened for the first time. Then he claimed to be representing a string of Eastern papers as racing correspondent. But this was only for the purpose of obtaining a badge and admission to the press box. That first season was a hard one for the followers of the game, and he finally started issuing racing results in the form of posters to be hung in saloons and restaurants and cigar stores at the close of the day's racing. This made him a living and left him a little margin to play on the ponies, and that was all life held for him. In summer, when the racing plant in Juarez was closed, he would drift from place to place, where short meets were held, and he succeeded in getting a living in some manner unknown to his friends.

One rainy Sunday morning, in a little second-class restaurant, he told the story of his downfall. It is the cut-and-dried story of the effect of racing on young men. But it was true as he told it. Once he had been the confidential man and assistant manager of a big book binding and stationery house in Buffalo. He was earning a good salary with the promise of a place in the firm soon. Then the company decided to open a branch plant in Chicago to supply the bank and wholesale trade. The young man was selected as the branch manager because of his ability. He went to Chicago and was doing a big business for the firm and had received a half dozen raises since the branch was opened.

One Saturday afternoon in summer he spent his half holiday at the track where the horses were running. He laid a bet for fun. He won and wagered another. This likewise doubled his money, and he plunged. The germ had entered his blood, and he started a consistent policy of race track gambling.

The inevitable happened and he lost his position. Naturally, he turned to the easy money game which had cost him his job. He became a bookmaker, a sheet writer and a gambler. He followed the game to Florida when it was outlawed in Illinois. From there he went from place to place, finally landing in El Paso. By that time he was middle-aged and there were streaks of gray in his hair. When the races closed last spring he was neither physically nor financially able to follow the crowd to Latonia.

He remained here and lived the best he could. His brooding resulted in his making $1,000,000 mind bets on favorites in races that had been run. Wednesday night he was detained by the police on suspicion of being insane. His brooding over his downfall had been too much for his mind, and it had failed him. He is now in the county jail, where he will be held until he is examined by an insanity board.

An Appeal for a Famous American Name

Julian Hawthorne a few days ago observed his sixty-seventh birthday in the Federal penitentiary here in Atlanta. This month he will be entitled to a parole, and thousands of admirers of his distinguished father and friends of the son, who think him more sinned against than sinning, will shortly lay their views and their appeal before President Wilson.

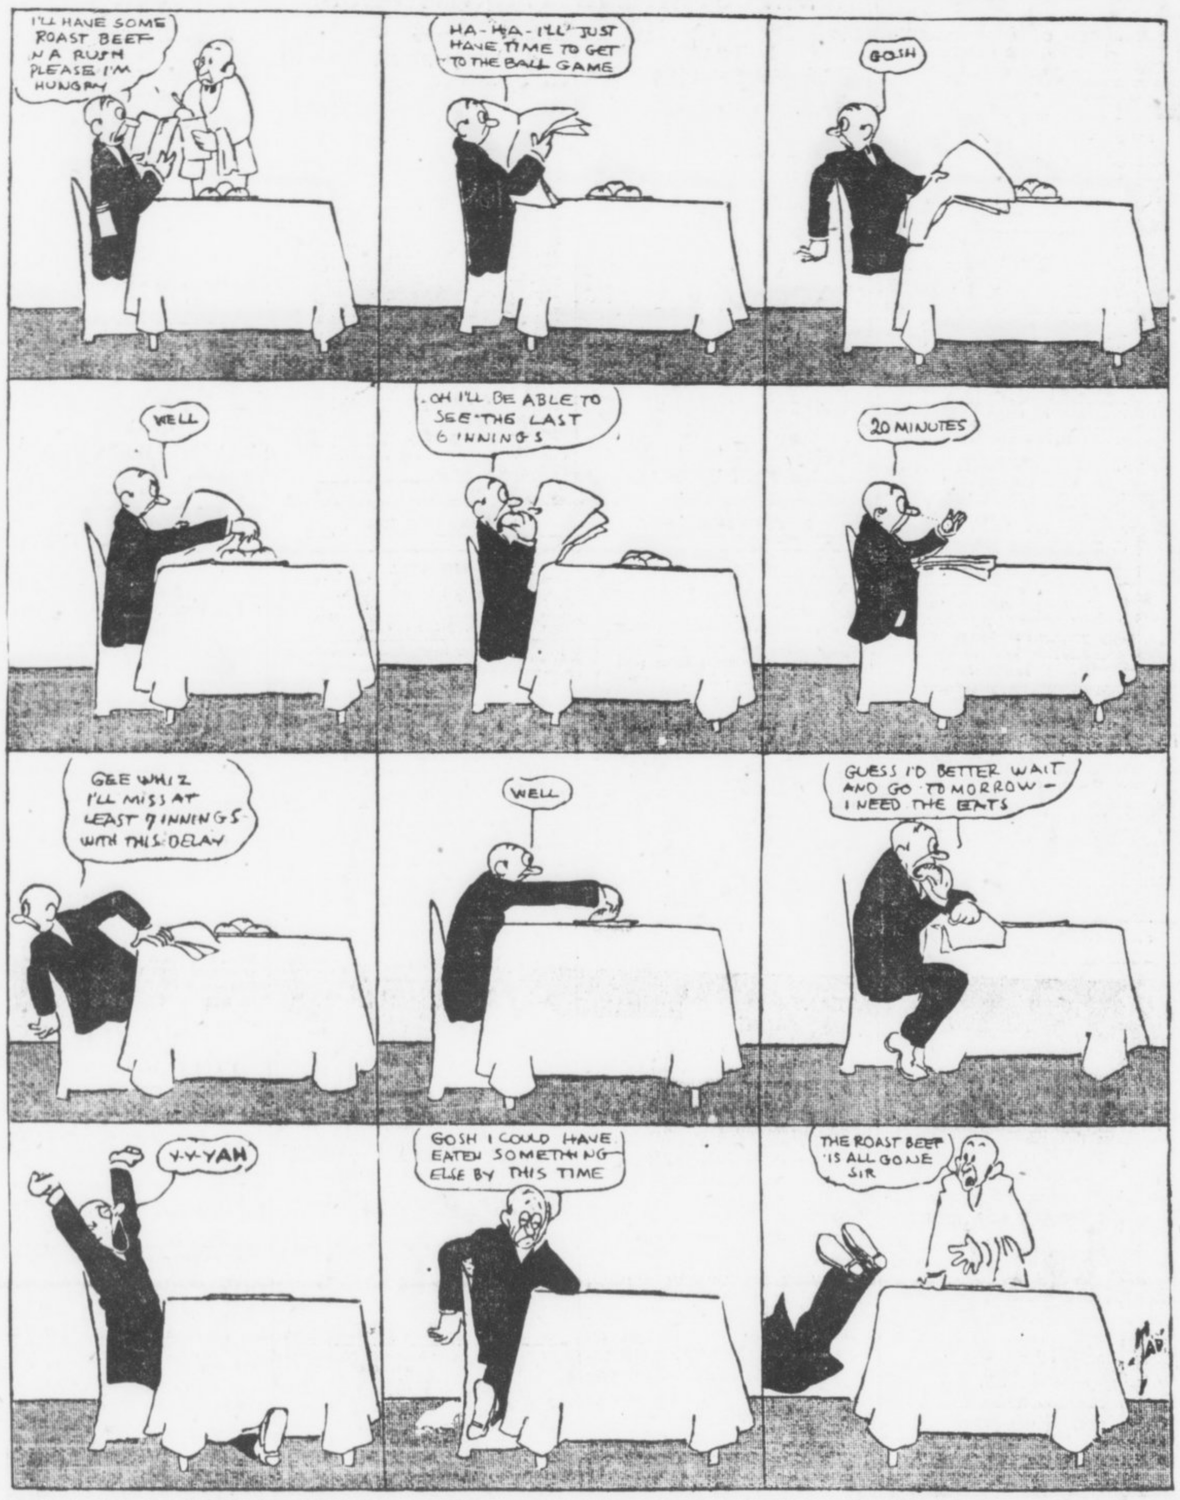
The President will be told that Julian Hawthorne was misled by evil associates in the lending of his name to get-rich-quick swindlers, from which he profited little or nothing; and that he was as much the dupe of his crooked associates as those victims who purchased stocks in the enterprises which his name was used to exploit.

This son of a brilliant American now finds himself in his old age humiliated before the eyes of the nation and in the eyes of the literary men of the world—through his own weakness and ignorance of the harsher ways of the world.

If a chief conspirator, like C. W. Morse, can be pardoned, why not a dupe, after he has been as bitterly punished as has Julian Hawthorne?

This newspaper gladly joins all admirers of Nathaniel Hawthorne in their efforts for his son and in their appeal to the President to relegate, as soon as possible, this record sinister on a famous name to the generous domain of the forgotten.

Did It Ever Occur to You?



Ella Wheeler Wilcox Writes on Motherhood

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

(Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner.)

GIRLS of seventeen are not, as a rule, given to serious thought.

Even marriage at sixteen seldom awakens the real woman in a year.

But there are rare exceptions.

Such an exception has been found in a young wife of seventeen, who is suddenly aware that she is to become a mother in four months' time.

Now she is filled with awe, and with anxiety! She says: "I have always had an ideal of exerting a good influence over an unborn child; and now I am distressed to think that all these months have passed without any conscious effort on my part. I have played ball, swam and indulged in other athletics according to my regular custom. And in leisure moments I have read Milton and Shakespeare and Burns.

"I am splendidly well, but I am most anxious lest I have done things I ought not to do, and left undone other things at this critical time.

Moderation in All Things.

"What can I do for the next few months to benefit my unborn child?"

The very best thing this young mother expectant can do is to exercise with moderation, rest when she feels like it, eat and drink with moderation, and wisdom, and be happy and trust God.

Motherhood is the most natural thing in the world for women who are normal and in good health.

It often produces a normal, healthful condition for those who are not well.

Nature never intended any woman to utterly change her mode of life when expecting a child, if her mode of life had been a reasonable and sensible one previously.

Outdoor life and athletics are both reasonable and sensible, and more harm would have resulted to both mother and child by giving them up suddenly, and taking too great concern about a perfectly natural condition, than by continuing to indulge in these pastimes as long as this young woman did.

No doubt the coming child will be strong in body, with excellent lung power.

And its coming into this plane of existence will not be attended with any abnormal difficulties.

Outdoor Life and Exercise.

We must remember that the Indian woman rides her horse, and performs all sorts of laborious tasks up to the very hour of her delivery.

The wife of an army officer told the writer of frequently seeing such women drop out of line for a few hours and return to the tribe later with the new-born child wrapped in a blanket.

All women who live an outdoor life, and who exercise in the open air, have less complications in maternity than those reared under hothouse conditons.

This young mother of seventeen, who takes such a serious view of her responsibility, is certain to bring a strong, beautiful child into the world, and equally sure of guiding it into a splendid maturity.

The Difficult Hours.

She need only fill her mind with love thoughts, and with faith in God and trust in the Unseen Powers which govern this earth, to have all go well with her.

In God's great universe, there are Guardian Angels provided for every mortal, and in such degree as we love and reverence these angels, and as we live worthy of them, do they guide and help us in our difficult hours.

If we refuse to believe in them, or continually think and talk and act in a way to pain them, we alienate them and deprive them of their power to help us.

About the expectnat mother are bands of Shining Ones, and if she will rest happy in the thought of their protection, and regard them as messengers and emissaries from God Himself, great strength and peace and happiness will come to her.

And great blessings upon her child.

For of such are the Kingdom of Heaven.

PERFUMED POWDER

By WEX JONES.

THE newest skirt for woman—it's a risky thing to knock it.
For it's cutely fitted up with a cunning pistol pocket.

Oh, should you argue with the fair,
Powder smoke will fill the air;
Bullets whizzy
Will make you dizzy;
You had better bow and scoot
Before the girl begins to shoot,
Because—this here is cowboy lore—
Words are nix with a forty-four.

Still, speaking of this latest fad, this cunning pistol pocket,
Here, I think, are several things extremely prone to block it;

A handkerchief
And a powder puff;
Some trading stamps
And a manicure buff;
Smelling salts
And a pocket glass;
Jumbled up
With a theater pass.
A recipe
For custard pie;
A headache cure
And a hook and eye——

The list's a good bit longer, but here I'll have to dock it,
For I've used up all the space allowed the lady's pistol pocket.

Rev. John E. White

Writes on

Sex in Religion

Woman Is the Mainstay of the Church and Expresses the Innermost Soul of Religion More Powerfully Than Man; Yet, He Says, She Has Had to Fight Against the Masculine Protest for Every Inch of Recognition in the Affairs of the Church.

WRITTEN FOR THE GEORGIAN

By REV. DR. JOHN E. WHITE

Pastor Second Baptist Church

"MADAM I may not call you, and mistress I loath to call you. I know not what to call you, but I thank you for your good cheer."

These are the words of Queen Elizabeth greeting the wife of Archbishop Parker. They indicate in a kindly temper the ecclesiastical ban on womanhood in the eighteenth century, which made even the wife of an archbishop a nonentity.

Put over against this the words of three great theologians—Tertullian, Erasmus, Rabelais—"Woman, thou art the gate of hell"—"An absurd and ridiculous animal"—"The greater part of them have hardly principles and depend for their morals on those they love."

This is the exhibit of the centuries on the subject of Sex in Religion up to the nineteenth. What we have of it in the twentieth century is equally banal, and much of it lingers in the modern religious world.

The Bar Sinister in Church.

It is an answer seeming fair, and pious to the point, when the limitations of female opportunity are protested, to say that in the church and in religion women have nothing to complain of; that they are free to exercise themselves in the work of the Lord.

If this were true, 'twere very true and very good. But the record of fact is discouraging.

From the beginning women have occupied no position of authority in the church. "Her voice has never been heard at a council, nor has her pen ever formulated a decree. Looking at religion in history, one would suppose at first sight that it was almost entirely a masculine affair.

Man has formulated its metaphysics, erected its theologies, founded and governed its institutions. He is its pope, priest and prophet; its legislator, preacher and pastor." From the Judean Decalogue, which includes the wife—"thy neighbor's wife"—in the list of man's chattels, down to the recent records of the Southern Baptist Convention and the Methodist Conference, the sex "bar-sinister" has persisted.

The fact readily acknowledged that women are the mainstay of religion has been strangely ineffective in overcoming the masculine prejudice against her religious equality.

Religion's Better Half.

The fixed prohibition, "thus far shalt thou come, but no further," has, however, not prevented women from exercising a powerful influence upon religious progress. The woman nature which expresses the innermost soul of religion more intimately than the man's, has projected itself tremendously, notwithstanding the ecclesiastical limitations set upon it.

Indirectly she has sweetened the sour theologians and softened the severe theologies. Through Monica we have Augustine, through Macrina we have Basil and Gregory, "who led them both to the faith and stirred them to their best work."

This list is a long one—through Jacqueline, Paschal, through Paula, Jerome, through Susanna Wesley, the Methodist Church, etc. But these consoling examples only make the wonder deeper that Christianity should have esteemed its most reliable exponent unworthy of absolute equality.

It scarcely meets the case to prove by illustrious examples that women are indispensable factors in religion. So have been the martyrs and the persecuted of all ages through what difficulties we know.

For the past century the woman movement in religion has been breaking through the barriers. In the Protestant communions the battle has gone on steadily and successfully, and so quietly as scarcely to be a battle. Yet in every one of the great denominations the right of woman to recognition as an equal co-laborer with man in the Kingdom of God has been challenged and opposed at every step. Mrs. Doremus for thirty years kept up the fight before the women were permitted to organize the first Woman's Missionary Society.

Among Southern Baptists 25 years ago a similar proposition was silently protested by the majority and outspokenly resisted by thousands. Among Southern Methodists a petition has been pending for years to give the women not equal, but more generous representation in the direction of the missionary funds contributed by themselves.

Fighting for Her Soul.

Speaking by the card, I have made efforts in country churches to organize women's societies, for doing the sort of work every Christian is commanded to do, only to discover insuperable prejudices in the minds of the brethren.

At the bottom of this discreditable history of female repression in religion lies the jealousy of the masculine prerogative. The principle of pernicious proxy, the right of the husband to discharge religious obligations for the wife is persistent to this hour in the practice of the churches.

It amounts in effect to a layman's priest craft, in which the man assumes to stand between the woman's soul and the free and full discharge of its responsibility in practical duty.

Now the clouds are breaking away and man is beginning to relent. It will be a good day for religion when the competency of every woman under God for all the freedom an individual soul is decreed for, without reference to sex, is heartily and universally proclaimed and enforced.

Letters From The Georgian's Readers

THE SYRIANS.

Editor The Georgian:

The recent case of naturalization in which Judge Henry A. M. Smith, of South Carolina, was interested, induces me to write the following: Judge Smith contends that Syrians are not entitled to citizenship in the United States. He has the right to give or refuse naturalization to the Syrian of his State, but the reasons given by him are not based on facts, and history does not support his position.

When we consider the part the Syrians have played in the history and development of the world, we readily see they are in no way connected with or related to the Sudanese. Three of the greatest monarchies of the ancient world—Chaldea, Assayria and Babylonia—were evolved and developed by the Syrian nation.

The inhabitants of Kurdistan, who are regarded as the descendants of the Syrians, not only speak a Semitic language, but believe themselves to be the same race with the Arabs and the same traditions are held of Syrians, who in their brief historical fragments recognize as their kinsmen the later Babylonians, Phoenicians and the Joktonian Arabs.

The Semitic race—that is the name of this division—was derived from Noah's son Shem, and this term Semitic has been adopted by scholars as probably descriptive of that ancient people, who, branching from beyond Syria, carried their tribe into Northern Arabia, across the Red Sea and Upper Egypt into the African Desert, northward into Armenia, westward into Canaan and far out through the Mediterranean, touched the coast of Africa, and reaching even to Europe, Britain and spreading out to America. There has never been any mixing between the Syrians and the Sudanese. A great mountain range has ever separated the two races of people.

"THE HALF-MILLION" CITY.

Editor The Georgian:

I desire to subscribe to the spirit and purpose and to be enrolled as a member of the "Half-Million Club."

Great civic benefit can be accomplished by an emblem which will exemplify the spirit of Atlanta, the "Half-Million City," as advocated by The Georgian. You are to be congratulated in voicing the virile enthusiasm of the people.

Where else can you find a community that will subscribe in a single day something over $75,000 to entertain the Shriners' national convention, and almost a like amount that the city may enjoy, for one week, the most celebrated singers of the world? Atlanta's splendid banks, its lofty buildings, well-appointed hotels, excellent railroad facilities and geographical location make possible the ideal—the "Half-Million City"—in 1920.

Newton was shot at the Edwards farm, near Macon, Saturday night and died Sunday in the Macon Hospital. The negro, while intoxicated, had attacked his wife and children with an ax, when Edwards and his son went to their aid.

Florida Mob Holds Lynching on Sunday

JACKSONVILLE, July 7.—Roscoe Smith, a negro, was lynched on Sunday at Yellow River, near here, for the murder of Sheriff T. S. Cherry, of Clay County, Fla., when the officer attempted to arrest him for gambling at Stuart & Harrison's turpentine still.

A mob of fully 100 men pursued and captured the negro, returning to the scene of the killing, where they shot Smith to death. His ears were cut off for souvenirs. No further trouble is expected.

Priest Gives Boxing Matches for Parish

NEW YORK, July 7.—With Mike Donovan, who once was Colonel Roosevelt's boxing instructor, as the chief star of the occasion, the Rev. Father H. P. Heffernan, pastor of the Sayville Roman Catholic Church, gave a series of boxing bouts in a club house near his church.

Father Heffernan, who believes every young man should learn the art of defending himself with his fists, was in his younger days an expert with the gloves.

Atlanta Pastor Weds Two a Day for Week

Marrying a couple a day is the record of Dr. Caleb A. Ridley, pastor of the Central Baptist Church, for the last week. Dr. Ridley says July seems to be as propitious for weddings as June. He performed his seventh ceremony for the week Sunday morning on his way home from church.

Dr. Ridley is in Monticello, Ga., this week holding meetings at the Baptist Church there.

Jack London, Ill, to Undergo Operation

SAN FRANCISCO, July 7.—Surgeons at the Merritt Hospital in Oakland decided to operate on Jack London, the author, for appendicitis, either to-day or to-morrow.

Dr. W. S. Porter, of the hospital, said that London was in excellent condition for the operation. The attack of the disease came suddenly Sunday.

Says He Got $4,000 For Slaying a Girl

LOS ANGELES, July 7.—The police to-day sent to the State authorities of Ohio a copy of the remarkable "confession" of Simon P. Heffensteine, aged 52, who said that he killed Pearl Bryan and committed six other murders.

According to Heffensteine he killed Pearl Bryan at Toledo, Ohio, and took her body to the place where Jackson and Walling, the men who died for the murder, dissected it. He said he received $4,000 for the murder.

Sensation Expected in Church Row

COCHRAN TO ASK SCHOOL INQUIRY

Fulton Legislator Believes There Has Been Extravagance at the State Agricultural Colleges.

Satisfied that mismanagement, incompetency or extravagance likely has been prevalent in the various district agricultural colleges of late, Representative Ralph O. Cochran, of Fulton, will propose a resolution in the House calling for a rigid legislative probe into the same.

Mr. Cochran's idea is that the schools so far have failed pointedly to justify the great outlay of money required to keep them up.

The gentleman from Fulton will not charge any person with deliberate wrongdoing, but he does believe that the schools have not been conducted in a businesslike manner, and that they might, and should, be placed on a basis working to Georgia's greater advantage.

Cites Deficits in Reports.

He calls attention to the deficits shown in the Treasurer's reports, and draws the seemingly warranted inference that the colleges are not returning to the State anything like the amount of money they should, considering the money the State spends upon them.

The eleven district schools are supposed to be self-supporting, in a way, but the returns, as indicated by the Treasurer's report, do not show them as approximating anything like that ideal status.

This proposed investigation, coming on the heels of the mix-up in the Experiment Station, is sure to attract widespread attention throughout Georgia, as every congressional district has one of these agricultural schools.

Assembly to Rush Work.

Mr. Cochran proposes to introduce his resolution without prejudice, as all he hopes or desires to accomplish through its introduction is the establishment of the truth, and the adjustment of the district schools to their greatest usefulness at a minimum of expense to the State.

The General Assembly will let little grass grow under its feet from this time forward.

Both the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House have announced their intention to push matters to the very limit in getting business going and keeping it going.

Every committee of either House that has business before it—and practically every one of them has—is in session to-day, and to-morrow should see a score or more of bills, introduced since the session began, recommended back to the House for some sort of action.

The first part of the week will be given over to general measures, and on Saturday the first batch of local measures will be put on passage.

No Hurry in County Hearings.

By the end of the week, both the Senate and the House will have disposed of an enormous amount of business.

While there is an evident disposition in the General Assembly to dispose of the various new county propositions as speedily as possible, and to that end the House Constitutional Amendment Committee will bend its every energy, there still is a manifest desire to give all parties these propositions a full a free hearing.

Many of the new counties have aggressive and influential backing, and the Legislature seems inclined to hear why every one proposed has come into court, even if not all of them, or very many of them, have particularly bright chances of passing.

THE WEATHER.

Forecast for Atlanta and Georgia—Generally fair Monday and Tuesday.

Departing Suitor Is Taught 'Checkers;' 'Moves' When Rocked

Lee Baldwin, of 58 Ellis Street, was the participant in a unique game of "checkers" when he called on a young woman at 99 Clarence Avenue last night. His "move" came when eight young men pelted him with rocks after he had bidden his girl good-night. Noise of the combat attracted the young woman's attention and she frantically notified police headquarters.

From time immemorial there has been a custom among certain young men residing in the southeastern portion of Atlanta, it is said, to "rock" young men from other sections of the city when they went calling there. The familiar salutation is: "Do you know how to play checkers?" Somewhat surprised, the young man will answer, "Yes." "Well, it's your move," is the information handed out, and then a shower of rocks and some rough handling.

Baldwin managed to make his escape to a car, his eight assailants endeavoring to pull him off. The police are investigating and arrests are expected to follow to-day.

Atlanta Conspicuous As One of 31 Cities With Thousand Elks

ROCHESTER, N. Y., July 7.—Atlanta is getting conspicuous mention in reports to the Grand Lodge of Elks here. It is one of only 31 lodges in the order having a membership in excess of 1,000. Atlanta's roll includes 1,013 names.

"Honorary mention" also is given Atlanta for showing a gain of more than 100 members the past fiscal year, having initiated 268. In charity Atlanta gave $1,542 during the year.

Georgia reports 29 Elks lodges with a total of 5,353 members, a gain of 498 over last year.

Pastor Prefers Life Of Mule to Convict

"I would rather be one of Fulton County's mules than a convice in its convice camp," declared Dr. A. R. Holderby Sunday morning at Moore Memorial Church in a sermon on "The Shame of Georgia's Diabolical Convict System."

Dr. Holderby declared that it cost the county 48 cents a day per mule to feed its mules, while only 10 cents a day was expended in feeding each convict. He stated that the convict laws instead of encouraging a man to a better life, bring out all the evil in his nature.

LIBEL SUITS CAP MACON SCANDAL

Church Members, Exonerated, Will Seek Damages—Accusers to Fight—Expect Sensation.

MACON, July 7.—New sensations are expected in the Macon church scandal, in which Professor Frank M. Charlton, choir leader, and Mrs. Effie Lester, secretary of the Ladies' Aid Society, of the First Christian Church, were exonerated Sunday of all charges of wrongdoing, when Attorney Claud Estes, representing Mrs. Lester, and the attorneys for Professor Charlton bring suits for slander in the courts. The damage suits probably will be filed within the next few days, according to statements today of parties involved.

That Macon is promised one of the sharpest legal fights in her history is certain, it is said, as Attorney Julian Urquart, retained by Mrs. Jenkins, one of the accusers, will contest every point of the plaintiffs in defense of his client.

Cleared at Open Meeting.

The aftermath of the affair follows the exoneration of the accused parties at an open session of the First Christian Church Sunday morning, when the report of the elders' investigating committee was read to the congregation.

The session was dramatic. Immediately following the sermon the congregation of the little echurch went into executive session, with Elder Lenoir Erwin, member of the investigating committee, presiding. Seated in the choir directly behind Mr. Erwin was Professor Charlton, slightly pale, but otherwise composed. Near the front was Mrs. Lester, who watched the proceedings with remarkable composure. Mr. Lester sat beside his wife.

Report of Inquiry Complete.

When Elder Roper, chairman of the investigating committee, was called upon to read the report, the congregation leaned forward as if to catch every word of the elder.

The report, as predicted, went into the minutest detail of the whole affair, described every phase of the investigation, pointed out the alleged shallowness of the charges and recommended the complete vindication of the accused.

Elder Roper paused when he had finished reading. There was a dead silence for fully a half minute and then Elder Erwin arose and in solemn tones announced an open meeting for the free discussion of the report.

Woman Speaks for Charlton.

"Speak now or forever hold your peace," said Mr. Erwin.

There was a moment of silence, broken at length by the voice of a woman.

"I have known Professor Charlton for fifteen years," she said, "and in that time I have known him to be a perfect gentleman."

The speaker was Mrs. E. T. Gibson, a member of the Methodist Church and formerly of Bloomington, Ill., the choir leader's old home.

Mrs. Gibson was the only person in the audience to accept the elders' invitation to speak. Elder Irwin then put the question of the guilt of the accused parties to the congregation.

Exoneration is Unanimous.

Practically every one in the audience arose on the motion to exonerate Professor Charlton and Mrs. Lester. Not one stood when the "nay" vote was put.

Immediately following the vote, the Rev. Mr. Anderson called upon the congregation to sing, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," after which a prayer, one of the most fervent ever heard in the little church, was offered by the pastor. While the vote was being taken Professor Charlton and Mrs. Lester retired from the auditorium. They were greeted by scores of friends following the close of the service.

Ellen Terry and Husband Deny They Intend to Separate

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 7.—Miss Ellen Terry and her husband, James Carew, denied emphatically to-day the report that they had separated. In a signed statement, Mr. and Mrs. Carew say:

"Absurd. Common report is a common liar; this is the first we have heard of it."

Miss Terry was first married to George Frederick Watts, the famous painter. She married him when very young, and they soon separated. Her second husband was Charles Wardell, an actor. Her present husband was formerly leading man in her company.

Women, in Trousers, Defeat Men in Skirts In Baseball Match

PHILADELPHIA, July 7.—A baseball game between nine women, clad in trousers, and a team of men wearing hobble skirts and corsets was the principal attraction at the Drexel-Biddle Bible Class Home in Lansdowne. More than 1,000 persons assembled to witness this unique contest.

The women's team, composed of members of the Bible classes, defeated the men by the score of 12 to 5.

Fascination of Death Leads Girl to Suicide

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, July 7.—Fascination for the mystery of death led Miss McDuff, a young American woman of wealth, beauty and ideals, to take her life in a little inn in the village of Villebon, according to a theory formed to-day by the police, who have been investigating the tragedy.

Miss McDuff is said to come from either a New York or a Cambridge, Mass., family.

The young woman, accompanied by an Englishman, arrived at Villacoublay a month ago. At the hotel where she lived she aroused much curiosity by her theories concerning death.

Victim of Joyride Dies From Injuries

MACON, July 7.—Mystis Brown, 22 years old, died at the Macon Hospital as the result of a broken back sustained four weeks ago when an automobile in which she and three friends were "joy-riding" crashed into a telephone pole on the Hoston Road. Her spinal column was fractured between the shoulder blades, and three ribs were broken.

The accident ook place June 8. In the machine at the time were E. M. Devore, of Atlanta; L. M. Heath, May Lavinsky and Myrtis Brown.

Assembly Asked to Increase Pensions

Appeal to the Georgia Legislature for an increase from $60 to $100 a year in pensions for Confederate veterans has been made by Mrs. A. J. Adkins.

Mrs. Adkins sets forth in her letter to the Legislators that the increase of pension is entirely logical as the declining years of the veterans make it more and more difficult for them to add to their own support. While $5 a month is acceptable, she says, $8 and a fraction is better.

MYSTERY IN ATTEMPT OF GIRL TO DIE

Phone Operator Near Death From Strychnine, After Despondency Over a Love Affair.

Despondency because of her fiance's inattention is said to have caused Miss Catheryn Reece, a telephone operator, to take an overdose of strychnine Sunday afternoon.

For hours her life was despaired of, but shortly after 9 o'clock Monday morning it was stated that she had a chance to recover.

No reason was given by Miss Reece for her action, beyond a note which she hurriedly wrote upon a pad, when the poison began to affect her. It read: "Sweetheart, you will never know." At the hospital Monday morning she denied that she had taken the strychnine with suicidal intent, but that she had made a mistake and taken an overdose.

Came Home Exhausted.

Miss Reece was taken to the hospital at 7 o'clock Sunday night from her boarding house at 87 Fraser Street. While it is not known at just what time she took the strychnine, it is thought she swallowed it before 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon, when she had returned to the house. Her regular hours of work were during the afternoon and night. She failed to return home Saturday night, and upon her arrival there Sunday afternoon stated that she was completely worn out—that she had worked 36 hours and was "nearly dead."

She went into her room and lay down. Sher had been boarding there but a week, and little was known of her. She roomed with Mrs. Etta Berry, whose sister, Mrs. Carter, runs the boarding house. A short while after she went to the room, Mrs. Berry heard her groaning and went into the room.

Her condition became so serious that Dr. E. D. Highsmith was summoned. After an examination he said that she was simply worn out, and gave her some capsules to relieve her. This was about ten minutes past six.

Asks Friend Be Notified.

It was about 6:30 o'clock that Miss Reese went into convulsions, and declared that she was going to die. She asked Mrs. Berry to call Miss Vera Casey, giving her two telephone numbers. Mrs. Berry was so busy trying to relieve Miss Reese that she did not have time to call Mis Casey. Instead she went to the phone and called Dr. Highsmith again. While she was gone from the room, Miss Reese seized a pad and wrote the note, "Sweetheart you will never know."

The girl then had heavy convulsions and Mrs. Berry hastily summoned an ambulance. She was removed to the Grady Hospital and the hard fight of the physicians to save her life began. An examination of the capsules by the hospital surgeons revealed the fact that they were harmless. No trace of the strychnine could be found in her room, and it is believed that she took it before she arrived home, three hours before her true condition was discovered.

ARSON AND SLAYING CHARGED.

LEXINGTON, July 7.—Arson and murder were committed in the burning of three residences at Somerset, Ky. The charred bodies of Clarence Renfroe and his 3-year-old boy were taken from the burning buildings by firemen. The Coroner's verdict declares they were murdered. Ellis Ingram, who fought with Renfro, is in jail.

SALE OF A., B. & A. ROAD AROUSES ASSEMBLY

Rumor That Louisville & Nashville Seeks Line Rouses Interest in Fate of W. & A.

The coming sale o fthe Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad, under foreclosure proceedings, and the rumor that the Louisville and Nashville has its eyes upon it, has started something of a panic among Georgia legislators, particularly as the present Legislature likely will consider seriously the problem of the Western and Atlantic's re-lease in 1919.

There are two parties in the present Legislature with respect to the Western and Atlantic Railway. One favors the re-lease of the State's road as it now stands, the other the extension of the road to the Atlantic seaboard.

If the L. and N. gobbles the A., B. and A., it is held by some that it thereby will have strategic advantage over the State road in the matetr of extension to the sea. Indeed, if the L. and N. gets the A., B. and A., it is predicted that the railroad map of Georgia likely will be pretty well changed within a short time.

There are those in the General Assembly who are advocating the purchase of the A., B. & A. by the State, thus extending the W. & A. to the sea. Others hold that the State should kep its hands off the A., B. & A. Road and confine itself to such railroad property as it now possesses, with its fine terminal facilities in Atlanta and Chattanooga.

If the L. & N. gets the A., B. & A., it is figured by some legislators that it immediately provide for entry into Atlanta by some other way than that over the State road, as it now comes in. If this is don, it is contended that the W. & A. will will be pretty well put out of busines.

Traveling Man Drops False Arrest Charge Against 2 Policemen

No charges will be filed with the Police Commissioners by C. H. Griffith, the New Orleans traveling man who declared he was subjected to false arrest Saturday morning by Sergeant Brown and Patrolman Rivers. Griffith made his complaint to Mayor Woodward. His failure to follow up the charges was because of business engagements in Montgomery and Mobile. He also said that it would be necessary for him to bring the women whom he was with Friday night into the case, which he did not care to do.

Chief Beavers is authority for the statement that no charges will be filed with the board.

Mayor Woodward will inform the board officially of the complaint registered by Griffith, but that is probably all the investigation will amount to.

NEW GRAND JURY LIKELY TO TAKE UP VICE QUIZ

Practically Certain Judge Bell Will Urge Thorough Probe in Charge to Body.

Reference to the Phagan case was included in the charge of Bell to the Grand Jury Monday morning. He urged the jurors to take notice of the homicides that have been perpetrated in Atlanta recently, and to use every effort in obtaining clews to the perpetrator. W. D. Beattie is the foreman of the new Grand Jury.

The new Grand Jury will be sworn in Monday morning, and in all probability will be charged by Superior Judge Bell, who instructed the last jury to make an extensive investigation of the vice conditions in Atlanta. The jury had such a large amount of routine criminal business presented by the Solicitor that it found little time for anything else.

The Grand Jury for this term will have practically no criminal business and will be able to carry on the investigation not completed by the last Grand Jury. While none of the judges would discuss any feature that might be contained in the charges, it was practically certain the sensational developments in police circles the last few weeks and the attending charges of corruption would come in for a share of the Grand Jury's attention.

Should Judge Bell charge the jury it is practically certain he will urge a more exhaustive investigation of vice conditions and alleged police corruption than any yet undertaken by a Fulton Grand Jury.

The suspension of eight members of the police force after the Grand Jury finished its vice probe and the charges since hurled at the department substantiated the charge of Judge Bell that vice conditions ought to be looked into.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Two Headlines at Forsyth.

Two headliners will be offered with five other features at the Forsyth this week. There will be the usual daily bargain matinees, and, of course, the ever popular night performances.

Cecil Leane and his company in "The Moving Picture Man," will be one of the headline feature. Miss Eva Taylor and her company of three people will present "After the Wedding," one of the cleverest farce sketches in the catalog of good things.

Among the other acts will be Warren and Blanchard, the black face comedians; the pretty Grace Sisters, who are expert dancers; Hines and Fox, the singer and the piano player; Kennedy and Melrose, the bounding gymnasts, and Houghton and Hughton, who are expert trick bicyclists.

Talking Pictures at Grand.

Ten cents will pay the way to see and hear Edison's Talking Pictures and the highest grade of first-run motion pictures at any time from 2:30 in the afternoon until 10:30 at night, at the Grand during the week that starts this afternoon.

A big program of the talking pictures was put on last week at higher prices and served to draw large attendance after the pictures had proven their value. The management decided on another week, with a change of subjects and because of the interest in the pictures and because of the tremendous seating capacity of the theater, determined upon the policy of continuous operation at the dim price.

The Biograph, Vitagraph, Lubin, Selig, Pathet Essanay, Kalem, Edison and Melies' releases will be presented with entire change of program daily. The Talking Pictures will be changed every other day.

"Along Broadway" at the Bijou.

The musical comedy attractions that the playing the Bijou these days have become immensely popular with patrons of amusement. Each week brings a new company, presenting a new piece, and it is safe to say that nothing in the amusement line has pleased Bijou patrons better than the attractions that are playing from week to week. The bill that is being offered this week s the 1912 cabaret Revue, "Along Broadway," which will be presented by a big company of fun-makers, headed by Will Stanton and Rosalind May.

SIDELIGHTS ON POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

The Legislature, even as a tentative proposition, already is finding the matter of tax reform a perplexing problem, and one calculated to give it much trouble before it is adjusted.

Particularly is the question of tax equalization bothersome and full of difficulty.

Mr. Lipscombe, of Clarke, has an equalization bill pending in the House, and Mr. Cole, of Bartow, and Mr. Swift, of Muscogee, have inheritance tax bills.

The former was drawn by one of the most eminent lawyers in Georgia—an ex-Supreme Court Justice—and is thought to be as nearly perfect as such a measure can be made. Members are non-committal with respect to it, however.

The latter two bills, both carefully prepared, seem to have attracted considerable favorable attention, and both have the backing of the administration, in a general way, but whether either will pass is problematical.

The Legislature plainly is inclined to reform the tax laws, but it just as plainly does not know exactly how to go about it or where to begin.

"One trouble in the situation," said a well-known member of the House to-day, "is the real or imaginary opposition of the farmers to a board of tax equalizers.

"As a matter of fact, I do not believe the farmers, in any very large proportion, anyway, oppose the tax equalization idea. Perhaps a few of them do, but I fail to see where any honest farmer—and the majority of Georgia farmers are honest—should.

"Instead of putting up the farmers' taxes, an equalization act much more likely would put them down. If assessments were adjusted in Georgia as they should be, the total would be so much larger than it is now that taxes, in the average amount paid would come down rather than go up—and the farmer would find himself immensely benefited by this. Instead of a State rate of 5 mills, if taxes were equalized, we probably should be able to get along with a rate of 2 1-2 or 3 mills.

"So, if a farmer's lands were raised—they might not be, and would not be in many cases, of course—a trifle, the total of his taxes likely would be less than now.

"The purpose of a tax equalization act is to catch the tax-dodgers, and to catch them in the open. Such a measure would catch them, too. And if the dodgers were made to come to time, the present taxpayers of the State would find themselves charged up with less of the public expense instead of more.

"It is to be hoped that the present Legislature will pass some genuine tax reform measures, even if it does nothing else during the present session."

Contrary to general expectation and prediction, the Tippins bill, so called in the last Legislature, has not been re-introduced in the present House.

It has been stated, time and again, that the prohibitionists of Georgia generally look upon this measure as useless and of doubtful judgment at this time, and a sort of "let-well-enough-alone" sentiment appears to be spreading among temperance advocates.

The truth of the matter is, prohibitionists seem fairly well satisfied with the status of things in Georgia, and agitation in the present Legislature—or, anyway, in the present session—seems unlikely.

The Chattanooga News recently stated, in an editorial praising Atlanta, that Georgia has the best enforced prohibition laws of any prohibition State in the nation, and far better than Tennessee. This seems to be agreed to all around, and the fact that the Tippins bill has not been re-introduced, notwithstanding the confident predictions that it would be, lends color to the thought that prohibitionists in Georgia incline to agree with The Chattanooga News.

The old expression, "I wouldn't vote for that fellow for dog catcher," has no humiliating significance in Savannah.

There the office of dog catcher is an ancient and honoral le institution, and one to which folks generally look up in indicated awe.

Announcement of the appointment of E. H. Henry as official dog catcher for the city of Savannah, in compliance with the ordinance adopted by City Council at its last meeting, has been made by Mayor R. J. Davant. Bond in the sume of $100 has been furnished by Henry, who begins his official duties at once.

The catcher will be provided with a wagon, in which a crate will be placed to retain the impounded animals. A net will also be provided for use in catching the dogs, and a "pound" will be constructed at police headquarters.

As soon as the equipment can be completed the catcher will start on his rounds.

FLEET BRIDE DARES ANY WOMAN TO OUTRUN HER

Mrs. Grace Murray, who issues sweeping foot race challenge.

She Has Taken First Prize in Every Sprinting Contest Since a Little Girl.

Attention, brides and matrons of Atlanta!

A challenge is issued to you who are fleet of foot for either a hundred-yard sprint or an endurance race by Mrs. Grace Murray, of 222 Rawson Street.

Mrs. Murray is the pretty bride of Stewart Murray, of the Cruickshank Cigar Company. At the annual picnic of the Atlanta Scottish Association July 4, at the grounds of the Burns Club, Mrs. Murray took first prize in the married women's race. She also took first prize in the women's egg and ladle race.

At the picnic of the association last year, Mrs. Murray, then Miss Grace Beddingfield, was winner of the girls' race. She has taken first place in other races, too, and her friends declare she can outrun any one of her sex in Atlanta. She herself says she is willing at any time to enter into a race with any of Atlanta's married women who think they can run.

Mrs. Murray also is a swimmer and diver of ability.

CHIEF SAYS FIRE WAS INCENDIARY

Investigation of $10,000 Blaze Is Started — Commissionaire Stand Alone Destroyed.

The burning of the commissionaire stand at Grant Park early Sunday morning has started an investigation by Fire Chief Cummings as to the probable incendiary firing of the building. There are strong indications that it was not of accidental origin.

The fire was discovered shortly after 3 o'clock. Residents of the Grant Park vicinity turned in the alarm, but by the time the fire department arrived the roof was falling in. The heat was so intense that a plug 200 feet from the building was too hot for the firemen to use.

"In a fire of this kind it is difficult to learn the origin," said Chief Cummings Monday morning. "The structure was a frame building and probably had been burning some time before the alarm was turned in. The roof was falling in when the firemen arrived, and it required hard work to keep the flames from spreading. We hope to ascertain the exact cause of the fire."

The building, said to have been worth $10,000, carried a small amount of insurance. The first floor held a soda fountain and confectionery stand. The upper floor was used as a dancing pavilion. The main dancing pavilion is a short distance away and was not touched by the flames.

'Slide-for-Life' Hero Dashes Out Brains

CHAUTAUQUA, N. Y., July 7.—Oscar Williams, a steeplejack by trade, was instantly killed at Mayville while performing a "slide for life."

Hanging by his teeth to a pulley on a rope stretched from the courthouse dome to a tree about 350 feet distant, he succeeded in making the slide, but the buffer of grain sacks proved inadequate and his brains were dashed out against the tree.

THE SUNDAY AMERICAN'S GREAT BASEBALL TEAM

All the important leagues of baseball are now in action. So are tens of thousands of fans. So are also the men who write of the doings of the diamond stars for those same fans to read.

It is the newspaper with the STAR TEAM of writers that makes the strongest appeal to baseball enthusiasts.

BUT—to be stars, baseball players and writers about the diamond warriors must be fair and square. That is an essential part of KNOWING THE GAME.

Here Is The Hearst Sunday American Team for 1913

CHRISTY MATHEWSON—For years the famous pitcher for the New York Giants. Known everywhere as one of the brainiest players in the business and one of the squarest in whatever he writes about the game of which he is master.

JOE AGLER—The Crackers' sensational first-sacker. He is giving local fans all the "inside" news of Billy Smith's aggregation. His comments on plays are immense.

W. S. FARNSWORTH—His stories of the big league teams are right up to the minute. Having traveled with the New York Yankees, New York Giants and Boston Red Sox during the past seven years, he is able to tell of the "workings" of the major league clubs.

PERCY H. WHITING—For over seven years he has been writing Southern League baseball. He is the dean of Southern diamond experts and has the largest following this side of the Mason and Dixon line. He is fearless in his writings and always tells the truth.

SAM CRANE—A big league ball player for years and personally acquainted with all the major leaguers. For the past twenty years he has been writing baseball and is considered the greatest student of the game in the world. He travels with the National League Champion Giants.

DAMON RUNYON—The wittiest baseball writer in the East. He tells of the big league games in a manner that has a laugh in every line. But he never gets away from baseball like most of the humorous followers of the diamond warriors.

W. J. McBETH—His "inside" stories of big league games cannot be beaten. He sticks to facts and figures and his predictions are followed by thousands of fans. He has traveled as "war correspondent" with nearly every big league team during the past ten years.

CHARLEY DRYDEN—The Mark Twain of baseball. For years he has traveled with New York, Philadelphia and Chicago teams and his writings are baseball classics. He is personally acquainted with every big league player and probably has the largest following of any baseball expert in the country.

A. H. C. MITCHELL—Considered the greatest expert in the New England States. His stories of last fall's world's series were marvels. He roasts when a roast is coming and praises when praise is due. He has been writing baseball for twenty years.

ALLEN SANGREE—He is well known in the South, having been here with big league teams on training trips for the past fifteen years. He will travel with the New York Yankees this season, and his stories of Russell Ford and Ed Sweeney, former Crackers, will be of especial interest to local fandom.

J. W. McCONAUGHY—Popular with Eastern baseball fans because of his fearless writings. He never gets away from the truth, but tells a straight, readable story. He has been writing baseball in St. Louis and New York for twelve years.

J. W. HEISMAN—Considered the greatest college coach in the South. His college stories are copied by every paper in this part of the United States. His predictions are seldom wrong, and his weekly review of Southern college teams cannot be beaten.

JOE BEAN—As coach of Marist he has led all the other prep school coaches a merry chase. A few years ago he was the star shortstop of the New York Giants. His stories are bright and interesting.

INNIS BROWN For four years he was considered one of the greatest athletes that ever attended Vanderbilt. His baseball stories of college teams are read by every undergraduate and graduate in the South.

In the General Sporting Field

As well as in baseball, The Sunday American scores an exceptionally large number of base hits in all other branches of sports.

Ben Adams, hero of the Olympic games, writes interesting stories about track and field athletics. The boxing world is well covered by Ed W. Smith, W. W. Naughton, H. M. Walker, Ed Curley and "Left Hook." Tick Tichenor takes care of the golf. He knows every golfer in the South and his stories are real live "bearcats." Tennis and automobiles are two other branches of sport that are covered thoroughly in The Sunday American.

EUROPE'S FARMS CONSERVATION ARGUMENTS

Member of American Commission Describes Methods That Produce Four Crops a Year.

By J. H. HASLAM,
Regina, Saskatchewan, Chairman Commission to Investigate Agricultural Credits, Also European Wheat Markets.
Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, July 7.—My journey through Europe has been a surprise and a delight to me, and has been instructive beyond all my expectations.

I have seen on the plains of Lombardy agriculture carried on in a way unequaled in any other part of the world. There four successive crops are garnered annually, and eight crops of grass are cut from the same land every year. There lands which have been cultivated from an earlier date than history records are more fertile now than ever.

The conservation of the natural resources of the country we have visited is brought to a pitch that an American or Canadian would have thought impossible had he not seen it.

Hungarian Grain Best.

We have seen the splendid agriculture of Hungary, where grain of a higher quality is grown than in any other part of the world and converted into flour in the mills of Budapest of a greater excellency than anywhere else.

The agricultural and industrial development of Germany is something that we were in a measure prepared to see. We scarcely expected to find a country no larger than Minnesota and North Dakota, and with a soil altogether inferior, supporting a population of 65,000,000 people and producing 90 per cent of the food necessary to feed them.

We were likewise told that the Germans could produce by their scientific methods of agriculture from their reluctant and sandy soil enough food for 100,000,000 people.

Shows America's Chance.

We have seen good crops grown by the use of commercial fertilizers on what looked like pure sand. The industry of Germany, which has been developed from very small beginnings in a little more than a generation, is only an indication and prophecy to us of what our America can produce and become with its infinitely greater natural resources.

There is scarcely a natural condition found in America which we think incapable of development which either in Italy, Switzerland, Hungary, Germany, Belgium, Holland or France has not been overcome. All of these countries, together with England, have not a very large fraction of the agricultural possibilities, and in all have a population about four times greater.

We have seen much done less well than in the United States and Canada. In Europe they do not utilize labor-saving implements to the same extent, and in agriculture there seems to be a tremendous waste of human energy. The horses, cattle, sheep and pigs have as a rule not been brought to such a high general development.

Parcel Post a Model.

The European railway systems are not as highly efficient as ours, and charge much higher rates, but we have not developed the parcel post system as continental Europe has done, and we must adopt their system of transportation on rivers and canals if we are properly to utilize the best system of natural inland waterways in the world.

We also must adopt means of utilizing the low-grade natural products we have, and manufacture them in the locality in which they exist and thereby save transportation.

The cost of distribution of goods in America is an economic crime, and the lack of organization among farmers is yearly driving the best blood of the nation from agriculture.

U. S. IS FOURTH AMONG NAVIES OF WORLD

Expert's Estimate of Fighting Strength Puts England, Germany and Prance Ahead.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—The United States is now occupying fourth place among the navies of the world and not third, as is generally supposed.

The real loss of prestige to the navy by reason of the failure to keep up the naval construction program is shown very clearly in Brassey's Manual, whose rating of the nations was discussed generally to-day by officers at the Navy Department.

Rear Admiral Bradley Fiske, chief of staff of Secretary Daniels, pointed out the real comparative strength of the nations as shown by Brassey's figures is:

England 29, Germany 19, France 17, United States 13. Japan is not given.

These figures represent the ships that would count in war at the present day. The United States is credited with 38 battleships and Great Britain wth 77, but a great many eliminations would have to be made for a fight at the present day, so the true standard is that given by Brassey. Naval officers here at least think so, and have he best of reasons for their opinions.

Admiral Fiske ventured a new opinion on the subject of the building of ships. He said:

"You hear it said from time to time that the navy is a burden to the poor. That is not so. Ships are built by the proceeds of imports largely. It is the champagne, the diamonds, the emeraldsh, silks, satins and furs that pay for ships and the disbursement of the Navy Department provide work for thousands and thousands of the laboring men of tht land.

BULGAR VICTORY COSTS SERVIA 11,000 LIVES

Three Regiments Annihilated in Great Battle Lasting Two Days and Three Nights.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOFIA, July 7.—The tide of victory in the second Balkan war has swung to the Bulgarians. Signal successes are reported.

Eleven thousand Servians of the western wing of the Servian army were reported killed in an engagement near Deslinici, 8,000 others were wounded, many prisoners were taken and the balance were put to flight, according to a dispatch from General Savoff to Czar Ferdinand to-day. It was one of the decisive battles of modern times, according to the Bulgarian Government.

Three Servian regiments were annihilated in the battle which started along the Bregalnitza River in central Macedonia. The fight lasted two days and three nights before the exhausted Servian soldiers gave way before the repeated charges.

The battlefield, which covers an area of nearly 20 square miles, was strewn with dead and wounded, all of whom were left behind.

The Bulgarian casualties were not given.

Rumor Now Has It That Mary Will Be Betrothed to Grand Duke Adolph.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 7.—It is quite certain that the Princess "Pat" will not become the wife of the hereditary Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, for the Grand Duke Adolph does not like the Princess any too well, and he has taken active steps to find out who is the author of the reports which betroth him to Princess Patricia of Connaught. She is too sarcastic by far for this German prince.

But it becomes more and more apparent that there is something on the cards for Grand Duke Adolph and Princess Mary, the daughter of King George and Queen Mary. The Princess is only 16, but it is known that the Queen would be not at all adverse to having her daughter marry young, providing she also married well.

Princess Too Democratic.

One reason Queen Mary and her royal consort are so reconciled to an early marriage of their daughter is the fact that for several years Princess Mary has been something of a problem for them. The Princess has never known what it is to have a girl companion of her own age. Her constant companions have been her five small brothers.

The result is that she is as full of slang as a boy, is given to romps, and even has developed a certain independence of spirit that England never forgives in a woman.

The little Princess has been severely punished by her mother on more than one occasion because of her propensity for getting out of the bounds of the royal estates and picking up chance acquaintances after her own heart.

Chums With Squire's Daughter.

Not so long ago the Princess was out with the Norfolk Hounds. But while she was supposed to be following the hounds, she fell into conversation with the two daughters of a squire, one of whom was her own age. She rode home with them and invited herself to tea at their house.

In the meanwhile riders from York cottage had been scouring the country for the little Princess. The little Princess was taken to her mother. She was obliged to write to her new friends that she was sorry that she would have to defer their visit, that she was going to London.

A number of boys and girls, sons and daughters of Sandringham tenants, passed, running a paper chase, and the Princess shouted to them.

They stopped.

"Don't stop," she exclaimed. "I'll go a bit of the way with you."

Had a "Jolly Row."

And she did. It was late when she again returned to York cottage. She had fallen in a ditch on the way of the paper chase.

"And I had a jolly bit of a row with mother over it," she subsequently confided to one of the girls who had taken part with her in the paper chase.

The Princess had picked up much slang from her brothers. A member of the Privy Council is always to her a "Dilly Wig," her father's chamberlain is "sausage," luncheon is "lunko," the Prime Minister is "captain" and tea time is "tucker." Once King George sent her from the room when he heard her refer to a possible councillor as a "Dilly Wig."

Kearney stood at the head of his class in the high school. He is large for his age and of athletic build. He expects to meet expenses by writing.

STOCK EXCHANGE SHOULD PROBE OWN AFFAIRS

Forbes Suggests Appointment of Investigating Committee and Watching Public Pulse.

By B. C. FORBES.

The greatest industry in the United States is—what?

Iron and steel making?

Weaving textiles and manufacturing clothing?

Railroading?

No.

INVESTIGATING ITS OWN AND FOREIGN MONEY.

* * *

This, the most important, is the least studied and worst managed business in the country.

* * *

The protection of investors is nobody's duty. The Government can not start criminal proceedings until crime has been committed—until, in other words, it is too late.

* * *

If the New York Stock Exchange is not to widen up through dry rot, if it is to keep in front of the march of progress instead of continue to fall lamentably behind, it must bestir itself to safeguard investors, it must arrange to keep its finger on the public pulse, it must become the monitor and not the slave of corporations issuing securities to the public.

* * *

I have been asked by governors of the Stock Exchange and others: What do you suggest ought to be done? How can the reforms you advocate be brought about? Is it not the Government's business rather than ours to regulate the acts of corporations?

Here is my first suggestion, offered in all friendliness and with a desire to assist, not assail:

Let the governors of the Exchange appoint a commission of the leading brokers and others, including office or inside members of firms, who come into personal touch with the investing public, and have this commission thoroughly investigate the whole subject, draw up recommendations for remedial action and present them to the governors for consideration and adoption.

* * *

The Stock Exchange governors who spend every day on the floor of the institution mingling only with others similarly employed do NOT have their fingers on the public pulse. They are ignorant of throbbing public sentiment. They live in isolation, in a professional, artificial atmosphere. They buy and sell honestly—and feel that ends their duties. Their horizon is circumscribed by the four walls of the Exchange.

* * *

The brokers who have to meet the customers, the men who have to pacify those who buy listed securities that go wrong, the heads of the statistical and information departments, those whose business it is to analyze securities and advise clients—all these are daily confronted with the great problem of protecting investors, of collecting trustworthy information, of trying to peer behind the barriers raised by many corporations whose securities fluctuate in a way that enables insiders to make easy fortunes at the expense of outside holders.

* * *

Secretary Ely, of the Stock Exchange, discussing the movement for more frequent reports from corporations, said yesterday:

The conditions surrounding large business interests are so varied that some corporations can not make accurate reports more frequently than once a year. Such corporations having vast interests distributed over the world are unable to make returns except upon definite inventories taken annually. The committee feels that estimated returns would be much more undesirable for shareholders than awaiting the actual figures for longer periods.

* * *

If directors give stockholders, say, once every three months, all the information at command, detailed reports would not be essential. Stockholders do not ask the impossible. But they do demand to share the knowledge that comes into possession of their representatives, the directors, so that the outsiders may not work in the dark and the insiders in the light.

* * *

Certain governors have told me that it is none of the Exchange's business to see that investors receive information. The sooner they make it their business the brighter will become the prospects for the Exchange's future—none too bright at the moment. The proportion of bond and stock trading done on the Exchange has dwindled abnormally and will continue to dwindle unless something effective be done.

* * *

I have only scratched the surface to-day. The subject will be gone into more in detail by-and-by.

Doctors' Opinions About POSTUM

Are best expressed in their own words

Writing under date of May 13, 1913, one physician says:

"From past experience I have become a strong friend of Postum. I am now advising its use over that of coffee altogether, and find that most of those who give Postum a trial become users of it.

"It is however sometimes very hard or impossible to get folks to purchase something when they 'don't know anything about it,' and 'don't want to throw away money on a chance of liking it.'

"Now, it occurs to me these people are not to be criticised for such feelings, but at the same time I am sure many of them would become friends of Postum if they could but have a sample of it placed in their hands.

"If you think this is a good suggestion, and will send me samples from time to time, I will see that they are placed among my patients where they will do the most good, for I believe it is to their interest to drink Postum rather than coffee. Postum is used in our home, but we buy it of our grocer, and we expect to keep right on doing so."

Thousands of coffee drinkers are victims of headache, nervousness, biliousness, heart trouble and indigestion, without knowing the cause.

More and more, physicians are naming coffee as a common cause of these ills. Not every physician, however, finds time to send a sample following his prescription of

MILITANTS FIRE PIER KING WAS TO CROSS

Great Structure at Southport, England, Is Saved by Volunteers and Fishermen.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOUTHPORT, ENGLAND, July 7. Militant suffragettes attempted to burn the famous Southport pier early to-day. If it had not been for volunteer firemen the structure would have been lost. Fishermen went to the aid of the firemen and succeeded in quenching the flames.

The damage is estimated at about $50,000. The women evidently intended the conflagration as a royal rebuke, as King George was scheduled to pass before the pier this afternoon.

The women left placards scattered about the ruins.

Southport pier is a mile long and one of the most important institutions of its kind on the Irish Sea.

Gates Denies He Had Fight in Cafe With Father-in-Law

NEW YORK, July 7.—There are two sides to every story, and when Charles G. Gates, son of the late John W. Gates, arrived in the city on a special train from Minneapolis, he had another side to tell of the reported row between himself and Frank Hopwood, his father-in-law.

The latter, it was said, knocked Gates down, cuffed him and dragged him by the shoulders from a cafe.

"Absolue lie," said Gates. "I had the best father in the world, and Frank Hopwood is the best father-in-law in the world. I'm here to attend a directors' meetiag, and am going to take that special back, and I will make some one in Minneapolis suffer for that story."

New York Stares At Trouser-Skirt

NEW YORK, July 7.—New York was first astonished and then amused to-day when the first suffragette trouser-skirt arrived here.

The skirt or trouser—it may be called either—came from Paris with Mrs. Nat Spingold, known to the world as Mme. Francis. She arrived on the steamer La Provence and paraded around the deck to give New York a real good look.

The skirt is equipped with two pockets, one so large it will immediately find favor among the English militants as a likely place to carry bombs, while real suspender buttons range around the waist band.

Perhaps the most startling effect is produced by the sleeveless waist which must accompany the new affair. The body of the waist is plain but attractive, but the sight of two bare arms sticking from it is rather curious.

If you have decided to spend a few months away from home this summer and would like to have some one take care of your home during that time, we know of no better and quicker way to find reliable parties to care for it than to place a small "Want Ad" in Hearst's Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian. BONUS FOR PONY CLUBS HELPS "TRAILERS"

Less Than Month Left for Contestants — Told to Imitate Mackman.

Three weeks and a few odd days remain of The Georgian and American pony contest. Not a moment of this time can be wasted by the boys and girls who want the beautiful little ponies which the whole city admired when they were paraded July 4.

The big bonus offer for clubs of five has expired. Nearly all the contestants worked hard, and turned in one or more clubs. Some turned in a dozen clubs. As rapidly as possible, these bonuses will be accredited, and the standings announced. Then it will be seen that some of the "trailers" now are out in front.

Good, solid work from now on will ccunt wonderfully. No doubt some of the contestants feel that they have seen every one possible—they can not think of the next place to turn for subscriptions. If they have been working conscientiously, this feeling is natural. But this is a large city. There are hundreds more, probably within walking distance of the contestants' homes, who have not been approached. Boys and girls now should cover their districts like the mailman does, a tireless house to house canvass will bring excellent results.

"Take your receipt books," advises the contest manager, "and go through the stubs. Tabulate carefully all those who took the paper for a month or two months. Note their expiration dates. Then see every one a few days before the time expires. Ten out of every elevn will rnew. Th sort of paper we are giving subscribers is the best posisble help for the contestants. Their friends see they are getting their money's worth, and more."

PLANTERS FIGHT TAX ON COTTON EXCHANGES

Declare Present Scheme Would Deliver Price-Making Power Into England's Hands.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—Southern planters are protesting to the Senate Finance Committee against the provision in the tariff bill taxing cotton exchange dealers .05 per cent.

This provision was inserted in the tariff bill by Senator Simmons to meet the demand that there shall cease all gambling in cotton futures and on margins. It resulted from attempts to corner the cotton market made by speculators on the New York Cotton Exchange.

The planters contend that with such a tax, amounting to about 50 cents a bale of cotton, no exchange can continue to do business. The planters are opposed to the New York Exchange, but they want the New Orleans and other Southern cotton exchanges to continue.

Defend South's Exchange.

In this argument they present it is held that the New Orleans Exchange and other Southern exchanges are bullish on the cotton market and seek to hold the price to the advantage of the Southern grower. These exchanges make actual deliveries.

The New York Exchange is friendly to the spinners and is bearish, its purpose being to depress the price of cotton. It makes no actual delivery, but serves the spinners for their future needs. Its business is done through the interchange of purchase and sale notes.

Gives Power to England.

With the wiping out of the cotton exchange in this country, the cotton exchange at Liverpool, also bearish, will take command of the cotton market and fix the price just as the sugar market price is fixed in Holland.

It is contended that through the proposed tax a great injustice would be done the cotton growers who are now laboring under the disadvantage of competition with Egyptian cotton, which is of high grade and commands a better price than Southern cotton.

Egyptian cotton, which needs salt air, is being grown in the reclaimed lands of Salton Sea, California, and it is an active competitor of the Southern cotton, which is short on fiber.

Carnegie Explains Gift to Vandervilt

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 7.—Andrew Carnegie, passing through London en route to Skibbo Castle, was seen by a representative of the Hearst papers in reefrence to the action of nine bishops of the Methodist Church over the $1,000,000 gift for the Vanderbilt University Medical School.

Mr. Carnegie wrote the following.

"The proper authorities have accepted Mr. Carnegie's gift and he has nothing whatever to say—he never gives to sectarian educational institutions, feeling that no one should be debarred from a medical education on account of his theological views."

The New Bazar

edited for the woman who must keep au courant
with the smart world

THE best from each field of art, all the resources of brush, pen and camera, beautiful paper, perfect typography, render it a magazine individual in its expression and absorbing in its interest to the woman of fashion. In its new form, Harper's Bazar is the edition de luxe of women's magazines.

Sparkling with the news of both Europe and America, the Bazar makes instant appeal to the woman of the smart world.

If she would read of social functions, races or sports here or abroad, she finds in it the most noteworthy. If she would discover the latest creations from the ateliers of Paris, she sees here their most recent expression.

The skill of the couturière, of the artist, of the decorator is displayed in its myriad possibilities. Vexatious questions as to the maintenance of her establishment and any like phases which come within the realm of the woman whose time is much in demand, are discussed by those well versed in these matters.

In the July number, Elsie de Wolfe gives a description and views of her own home; Mrs. August Belmont has an illustrated article concerning the artistic development of the child; the lovely Countess of Warwick reveals the secret of the retention of personal charm.

There are photographs of the newer landscape effects secured in the Rockefeller gardens, and reproductions of the most famous paintings of Mrs. Astor, Mrs. George Gould and other renowned beauties of our times.

What is more, there are the costumes which are most à la mode from the stage, models from Lady Duff Gordon, sketches by Tighe, showing the newest cunning of the French houses and an important message from Henri Bendel as to Fall hats.

For diversion, a new set of Elinor Glyn's piquant letters and another powerful story from the pen of Robert W. Chambers with illustrations by Charles Dana Gibson.

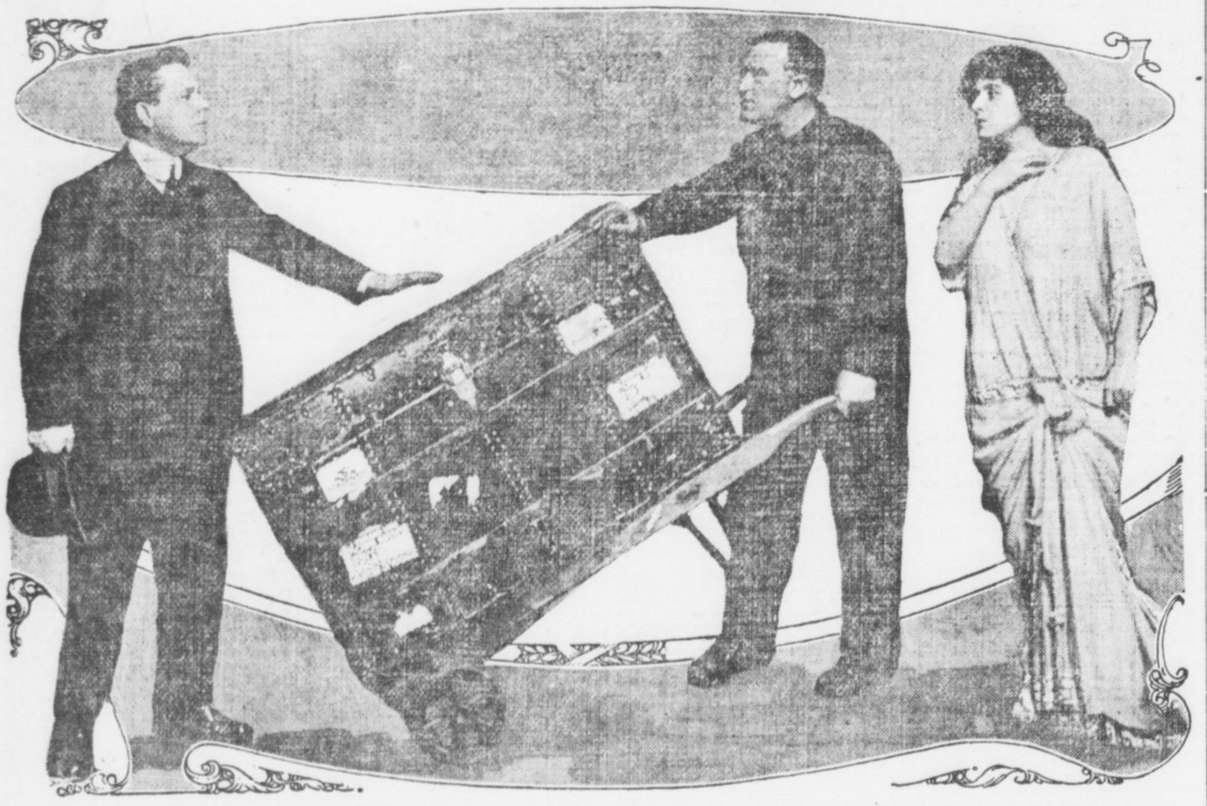
JARVIS' ESCAPE IN THE TRUNK IS HALTED BY THE HOTEL DETECTIVE



"Excuse me, Madam," said the detective, with a kind of dogged hardness, "I don't want to bother you again, but that man—he killed a man up the hall—has got clean away unless he—he——"

She smiled and snapped the catch, and then stood gazing at it for several moments before she went to the door and admitted the porter with his small but deadly truck. He was a muscular young man with the intelligent expression of an elderly and amiable cow, the true type of trunk-destroyer, and the Princess shivered when she saw him.

"Have the other trunks gone?" she asked.

"Yes'm—last night," he growled, making swiftly for his prey. He started to tilt it in such a manner that our hardy and valiant knight, Warren of Jarvis, would have been standing on his head, contrary to the canons of chivalry. The Princess hastily intervened.

"This end up—please be sure and have it marked that way and be sure to mark it 'Wanted on Voyage.'"

"Yes'm," grunted Caliban. He rocked the trunk a little, thrust the lip of the truck under it and jerked it forward—blam!

The Princess winced and shuddered.

"And please—please—handle it very gently."

"Yes'm."

He had just begun to trundle the trunk and the knight toward the door when the exit was completely blocked by the cubical form of the house detective. The porter stopped and carelessly pitched his burden forward—blam!

The Broken Lock.

"Excuse me, madam," said the detective, with a kind of dogged hardness. "I don't want to bother you again, but that man—he killed a man up the hall—has got clean away unless he—he——"

"Well?" said the Princess coldly.

"Well, would you mind if—if I sort of took a look around? You're sure you were here all the time?"

"Of course," replied Dona Maria quietly. "But my maid will be up presently and you will be welcome to go through these rooms."

His attention was attracted to the trunk by a third "blam!" as the porter prepared to proceed, and he obligingly stepped inside out of the way. As he did so his eyes fell on the broken door lock.

"How'd that lock get broken?" His voice rang out suddenly like a pistol shot and he looked up quickly at the Princess. She inclined her head as if to assure herself that it really was broken, which was overacting the part.

"I think you should call the clerk's attention to it," she said calmly. "It was broken when I came here."

"When—may I ask did you come here?"

"Certainly. Yesterday afternoon."

"Oh, I see, I beg your pardon," he said slowly, and backed out. He did not know why, but he did not entirely believe the frank and self-possessed young woman. He walked down to a turn of the corridor, resolving to keep a close eye on the apartment until it was vacated. In this walk he again passed the trunk, but it suggested nothing. An escape in a trunk has become so common in fact and in fiction that no up-to-date detective believes any one would try it again. So it is still one of the best means, just as, from the other angle, it is a fact that occasionally in spite of comic artists and the like, some one still buys a gold brick.

Thus, in a manner unheroic, by freight elevator and van with divers bumps and bruises and swear words, the good knight Warren of Jarvis set forth to the Spanish Main and the storied hills of Aragon.

Pasting labels on trunks, like pressing the elevator button in the average office building, is more an act in evidence of good faith than in expectation of results. Having up to this time traveled only with a trunk and never in one, Warren Jarvis did not realize this until fairly embarked on his rough passage from the Hotel Vanderbilt to the promenade deck suite on the Lusitania.

For days afterward the memory of that two-mile voyage rode him like a nightmare. So did the divers aches, wrenches and bruises that he acquired by the way. And, finally, when the journey was over and he could have time to decide whether he was one large pain or had been broken up into several thousand small agonies, the trunk was deposited in the parlor of the Princess' suite with the label "This side up," carefully pressed against the carpet.

Dona Maria, anxious for the welfare of her champion, arrived at the stateroom just a few moments later. But she was haunted by an attentive steward, who in her abstraction she neglected to fee, and who declined to end his solicitous attentions until the oversight should be remedied.

While the Princess fidgeted and longed for him to get out he insisted on explaining everything connected with the suite. He opened the door that led onto the deck and pointed out the raised ledge as a trap for the unwary landsman's foot. He opened a door that led into a companionway. He showed her the clothes-pressers and all the while Dona Maria could not take her eyes from the top of the trunk, which displayed no label. Following her glance he offered to place the trunk for her.

"You needn't bother about it now, steward," she interposed quickly as he laid his hands on it. Then as an afterthought: "You might turn it right side up."

He Goes at Last.

"Oh, I'm sorry," he apologized as he noticed the labels. "I hope the contents are not upset."

"I hope not!" agreed Dona Maria, fervently.

"Anything more, madame?"

"Not now, thank you, steward," said Dona Maria nervously. "How soon do we sail?"

"Very soon now," he answered, as a deep raucous voice was heard bellowing afar. "They're calling visitors ashore now, madame."

And at last he was gone. But there was still Nita, the maid, who had doffed her hat and coat and was fussing about the bags.

"Your Highness has the keys to the trunks?" she suggested briskly.

"Hm—yes. You—you may leave the trunk as it is, Nita, until later. Go to your room now and get settled. I'll call you when I want you."

"Yes, Your Highness." But at the door of her room, she paused in some embarrassment. The Princess frowned impatiently.

"Will Your Highness pardon me," said Nita, uncomfortably, "if I am mistaken in thinking I recognize Senor the Duke, your exalted cousin, among the passengers——?"

"My cousin!" exclaimed Dona Maria, with a fine assumption of surprise. "Impossible! He is at Madrid."

Nita inclined her head in that extremely polite unbelief possible to the finished servant. "Yes, Your Highness," she agreed, demurely, and withdrew.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

The scene of the story is laid in the Vanderlip Hotel, New York City. The Princess Maria Theresa of Segura, a beautiful Spanish woman, is suddenly awakened in her suite by the sound of pistol shots. She hears a man running down the hall. He crashes against her door, breaking the lock, and enters. She sees he is a tall, good-looking young man, dressed in evening clothes. He is carrying a revolver in his right hand, and blood is dripping from a wound in his left. He begs the Princess to hide him. She, moved by some indescribable impulse, decides that she will. She directs him to an inner room, and a few minutes later, when the hotel detective knocks on the door, she tells him she is all right and sends him away. The young man, who is Warren Jarvis, of Kentucky, comes out of his hiding place, and the Princess, for the first time, notices his wound. She is moved to sympathy and showers him with questions as to what has occurred. Jarvis tells her about a Kentucky feud between his family and another named Markham. He says he left Kentucky to avoid the feudists, but encountered one of them in the hotel, which explains the shots. The Princess declares she will help him, and then asks the stranger question. "Are you afraid of ghosts?" Jarvis laughs, but grows solemn when the Princess tells him she has dangerous work for him to do. She makes him swear allegiance, and creates him her "vassal." Then she tells him to get her trunk, which is going to be shipped to a steamship on which she sails to Spain the following day. First Jarvis tells her to telephone to his servant, Rusty Snow, a negro. The servant is instructed to procure passage for himself and Jarvis in the ship. Jarvis then prepares to get into the trunk, but first begins to question the Princess about herself.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

MOST DECIDEDLY NOT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-one, and a man two years my senior has made an appointment with me and at the same time with my friend. Would it be fitting for me to keep it, and also, is it proper for him to make the appointment for the same time and place? G. M. T. I.

He is flirting with you, I am sure, and if "by appointment" you mean to meet on some street corner you owe it to yourself to refuse to meet him though he were alone. Ask him to come to your home for you; his reply will give you some insight into his character.

BY BECOMING A MAN.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a boy of twenty, and in love with a girl two years younger than myself. I am deeply in love with the girl, and she doesn't care for me. How can I make her love me? Another boy loves her, but she doesn't love him. T. C.

You rightly term yourself a boy, since you are only twenty. I suggest unfailing courtesy, kindness, appreciation and devotion, but not so much that your attentions distract your head and heart from the more serious and timely task of developing yourself into a manly man.

CHAPTER XLIV.

As soon as Mildred had ordered Steve to bring the big car she hurried to her room and hastily changed her clothes, putting on the khaki suit she wore when fishing. She was very much excited. But before leaving the room she glanced, womanlike, in her mirror. Then, hardly knowing what she was doing, she picked up a little handbag such as women take when they go shopping, containing a handkerchief, a powder rag, a small mirror and a small purse. She rushed on the porch and called Elmer.

"Elmer," she said hurriedly, "I'm going to find Gordon. I can't stand the suspense any longer. Come if you want to; if you don't, I'm going alone."

"Of course, I'm going, too," exclaimed the boy. "That's just like a girl. Didn't I propose the scheme?"

"Well, hurry now, and get my rifle and revolver," cried Mildred.

"That little revolver of yours is no good," remarked Elmer. "You can take it if you want to; I'm going to get dad's big one." And off he went.

In a few minutes Steve appeared with the car and Mildred and Elmer climbed in. Mildred with her handbag and revolver and Elmer with his father's six-shooter.

"Is you all gwine shootin', Miss Mildred?" asked Steve.

"We are going after Mr. Gordon, Steve," replied Mildred, "so hurry, please."

"Lordomassy!" exclaimed the colored boy. He turned the car quickly and they were soon bowling along the main road.

A Serious Affair.

A girl and two boys going in a motor car on a hunt for supposed desperadoes would have been a most ludicrous affair except for the very serious way the three persons involved in the undertaking viewed it. A professional layer of odds, knowing the circumstances, would have wagered anything up to 100 to 1 that the expedition would end in a fizzle, if, indeed, the rescuers did not get themselves in serious trouble. However that might be, the car rolled bravely on and reached the point where the road crossed Pew Creek, inside of half an hour. Mildred had given her instructions to Steve, and as soon as the car stopped she and Elmer started off due west, Elmer leading the way and she following closely, carrying the toy revolver in one hand and the little handbag in the other.

There are few things a woman will not risk for the man she loves. The proper thing for Mildred to have done, of course, was to have gathered all the men at the mansion and sent them on the hunt for Gordon. But she didn't, and that, of course, ends all argument. If Mildred had only realized it, she and Elmer were almost as helpless as the babes in the woods. Unlooked-for things happen, however, and, with the chances at least 100 to 1 against her, an unlooked-for thing happened in this case.

They had not traveled far before Elmer found unmistakable signs that a horse had traveled in the direction they were going, and in certain places they were able to follow the hoof-prints.

Moved More Slowly.

"Keep careful track of the distance we travel," whispered Mildred. "You know Gordon said he was three miles due west from the bridge."

When they had covered what they considered about two and a half miles they moved more slowly and more cautiously, and although both were now trembling with excitement (and perhaps fear), they kept bravely on. At last they came to a point where the ground rose sharply for a hundred yards or so. Mildred grasped Elmer by the shoulder and whispered:

"We are near the place, Elmer. We must be very careful and keep under cover."

They crept along behind trees and at length came to the top of the rise. Below them they saw smoke issuing from a clump of trees.

"He's down there," said Mildred in an excited whisper. "I'm sure of it. Oh, what shall we do?"

"Sneak around and maybe we can see something," replied Elmer, hoarsely. His eyes glistened and he was pale, but game.

They circled around cautiously, keeping close together. Suddenly Elmer stopped and dropped to the ground. Mildred, her heart beating wildly, sank behind him.

"I see him, I see him," exclaimed the lad excitedly. He pointed and Mildred saw, not more than 60 yards away, a man seated upon a tree reading a newspaper. It was Gordon Kelly. She would have known him as far as her eyes could reach. She felt as if she were on the point of screaming, or crying, or fainting—she knew not what. She hastily opened the handbag and reached for her handkerchief—a woman's weapon, a woman's protector.

"Keep Quiet!"

"Keep quiet!" hissed Elmer. "There's another man there and he'll see us."

Mildred looked again and saw a man looking on the ground fifteen or twenty feet in front of Gordon.

"What shall we do; what shall we do?" was all she could whisper.

There was a long silence. Finally Elmer said:

"Gee, if I only had a mirror I could sneak down behind that bush and attract his attention."

"Why, I have a little mirror," exclaimed Mildred, reaching for her handbag again. She produced the article and handed it to the boy.

"You crawl behind that tree and wait there," whispered Elmer. A moment later he began worming his way toward the bush he had indicated. This brought him to within less than 150 feet of where Gordon was sitting. Carefully getting his range, he flashed a streak of sunlight across the shaded page of Gordon's newspaper and repeated the operation immediately.

Gordon cautiously glanced over his shoulder. He saw little Elmer peering from behind a bush and beyond the lad he saw a white handkerchief flutter. Mildred could not resist the temptation to signal. Gordon waved an answering sign and then arose. He walked to the log cabin, followed by his armed guard. He took a baseball, slit the seam with his knife; then, saying to his guard, "I want to do a little figuring," took a little book of cigarette papers belonging to the youngest of the mountaineers and wrote these words:

"If you have a gun, place it 20 feet beyond where this ball lands; if not, bring help noon to-morrow."

Guard Did Not Call.

He folded the tissue paper three times longways and once shortways, tucked it into the ripped seam of the baseball with his knife, leaving the edge sticking out (the guard was paying no particular attention to him) and then announced that he guessed he would take a little exercise.

This time the guard did not call a companion, as was the custom when Gordon practiced with bat and ball. The idea of two guards was doubtless originally suggested by the dangerous-looking baseball bat that Gordon swung with such ease. He had become such a cheerful and inoffensive captive, however, that on this occasion his guard decided not to trouble any of his companions, who were at that time on the shady side of the cabin, discussing a letter that had been received that morning from Forrest Cain.

Going out in the open, followed by his guard, pistol in hand, Gordon hit several high flies, catching the ball when it came down. Then, as if inadvertently, he drove it in such a manner that it fell 200 feet away from him and beyond a little clump of bushes.

"What do you think of that?" he exclaimed to his guard. "I'm losing my batting eye, I guess. Let's get a drink of water and then we'll go and get that ball. It cost $1.25."

It took Gordon fifteen minutes to get his drink of water and fuss around the cabin before he started after the ball, with his guard following closely. He had carefully marked the spot where it fell, and when he reached it his eyes beamed, for twenty feet beyond was what he wanted far more than he wanted the ball. Picking up the white object, he walked straight ahead and suddenly sat down facing his guard.

"Sit down and make yourself comfortable," he said. But the guard remained standing.

"By the looks of the sky, I'll bet you we have rain before to-morrow morning," he observed, reaching behind him.

"Turn Around and Walk."

The guard cast his eyes upward and when he lowered them again a six-shooter in the hand of his captor was pointing directly at his heart.

"Drop that gun! Drop it!" said Gordon, in a low, intense tone.

The guard hesitated the fraction of a second and then let the weapon fall to the ground.

"Turn around and walk two steps ahead," commanded Gordon, jumping to his feet and seizing the guard's six-shooter when his command was obeyed.

The rest was merely routine work, as it were.

"On the run, now," ordered Gordon, pointing to the east. "Back to the bridge; be quick about it."

The ex-guard started off, and with Gordon traversed 50 feet before Mildred and Elmer jumped from behind a tree.

"Won't you wait for me, Gordon?" said Mildred. An instant later they were in each other's arms.

"You will have to do all the hugging, Honeybunch," whispered Gordon. "I've got these two six-shooters in my hands, but I'll make up for it as soon as I get a chance. You are the bravest girl in the world. Now, come, dear, we are not out of the woods yet. Good work, Elmer."

Gordon turned over one of his revolvers to Elmer and the procession started, the mountaineer leading the way, followed by Gordon, holding a six-shooter in one hand and Mildred's hand in the other, and Elmer bringing up the rear. Arriving at the bridge where Steve was waiting with the car, Gordon said to his prisoner:

"Go back to your crowd and tell them I'll give them 24 hours to leave this mountain country, and if any of you come back, I'll make you wish you hadn't."

"That other man's comin' up to-morrer," said the mountaineer. They were the first words Gordon had ever heard him utter.

"Here's Your Gun."

"What man?" he demanded.

"That man that's been a-payin' us money."

"Is that so?" mused Gordon. "In that case, you can tell your men to hold on to him until they hear from me. I'll settle with that fellow when I get around to it. Tell your men I won't bother them as long as they hold on to him. Now, you can go back. Here's your gun, but I'll just take the cartridges out of it first. Now, then, Elmer, climb in the front seat. Come, Mildred. Go ahead, Steve."

"Gordon," said Mildred, as soon as the car started, "you need a haircut badly."

It was dark when they reached the mansion, where the appearance of the owner created an immense sensation.

"Mildred, dear," said Gordon, drawing her to one side, "I want you to spend the evening here. There's something I want particularly to say to you. We can have Mrs. Ward for a chaperone," he added, with a smile.

"Not in these clothes, Gordon," replied Mildred. "If you will let Steve drive us home, Elmer and I will both be back in an hour."

When Mildred and the lad returned Gordon, too, had had a change of clothes.

"Who cut your hair?" laughed Mildred.

"Oh, we have always had a barber here," replied Gordon, with a smile.

They sat down to dinner, after which Gordon told Elmer to go and play billiards and then led Mildred into the room he called his office, and which Mildred called his lazy room. The particular something he wanted to tell her required more than half an hour and considerable eloquence to tell. Mildred shook her head at frequent intervals, but finally gave in and murmured, "Yes." Arising, she went to the telephone on Gordon's desk and gave an order. While she was waiting for connections Gordon, happy as a lark, seated himself at the piano, said "Second verse," and sang:

We will build a bower of grasses,
Call it Castle Lullaby;
Drink the south wind as it passes,
Lips o' Poppy—you and I!
Youth will be a friend to cheer us,
Fill our veins with purple wine,
Stand forever watching near us,
Lips o' Poppy, maid of mine!
Pines shall lull us with their moaning;
Golden bees in golden guest
Songs of sweet desire intoning
To the white flower of your breast!
Lips o' Poppy, girl of rapture,
Mine shall be enchantment's power,
Substance of my dreams to capture
In the heart of that white flower!
Lips o' Poppy—eyes entrancing—
Maid of earth or maid of air!
We will pass the years a-dancing
Down the realm of Queen Don't Care.
Come! the purple shades are falling!
Come! it is the Queen's command!
Hark! the nightingales are calling
To the Never Hurry Land!

"That's very nice," said Mildred, "but suppose dad—— Oh, here he is now. That you, dad?—— Oh, fine! Ah—— I am with Mr. Kelly, and—er—Mr. Kelly wants to speak to you a minute. Oh, now, dad, do be nice—— Does he want to talk business? Ha, ha! Yes, I believe he wants to talk business. All right; hold the wire." Mildred clapped her hand over the mouthpiece and whispered excitedly: "Dad was awfully angry at first and wouldn't speak to you, but he suddenly changed his mind. Now, go ahead; don't be afraid."

He Asks for Mildred.

Gordon took up the receiver and this conversation followed:

"Hello, Mr. Deery! I want to ask——"

"What will you take for your property—spot cash?" interrupted Deery.

"I don't want to sell, Mr. Deery."

"Oh, come, come; I'll give you $20,000 for it—cash, mind you."

"I couldn't think of it, Mr. Deery."

"Well, what's it worth, then? Come, you must have a figure."

"Really, Mr. Deery, I don't want to sell at any price, but if you ask me, the property is worth all of $2,000,000."

"Two million dollars!" sputtered Deery. "Am I talking to a crazy man? Ask my daughter to come to the phone, please."

"Just a minute, Mr. Deery. I want to say something very seriously. Please listen. I want to ask your permission to marry your daughter. We love each other and——"

"Now I know you're crazy," Deery broke in. "Call my daughter, please."

"But, Mr. Deery——"

"Not another word. I wish to speak to my daughter."

Mildred took the receiver from Gordon's hand.

"Hello, dad; what's wrong?"

"Come home at once, Mildred."

"Now, dad," pleaded Mildred, "please don't be so angry. Gordon and I——"

"I will not hear another word; I insist that you come home at once."

"Dad, if you're going to act that way, you'll regret it. Please tell mother I wish to speak to her."

"Your mother is not at home and won't be home for an hour. Mildred, I tell you for the last time, come home immediately or I'll come up there and get you."

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Benefited Many Who Had Lung Trouble

Those who suffer from Lung Trouble are generally troubled with night sweats, fever, loss of strength and little or no appetite. Eckman's Alterative is a medicine which has been most successful in stopping night sweats, reducing fever and promoting appetite, and many who have used it declare it saved their lives. Investigate what it did in this case:

"Dear Sir: For four years I was troubled with cough, which gradually became worse. I had night sweats and pains in my chest. I was losing my appetite and had become so thin and weak I could not attend to my household duties. A physician pronounced my disease Consumption. Not being satisfied, I was examined by the physicians of the Polyclinic Hospital. They also confirmed my trouble, and I was ordered away for treatment. My nephew would not allow me to go until I had tried Eckman's Alterative. Before I had taken the medicine three weeks, I had marked relief, night sweats ceased, pain in the breast relieved, cough became loose and easy, fever left me, and I commenced getting well. My health became normal. I am in excellent health now and have been for twelve years. I strongly recommend it." (Signed)

FULL SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS

DANIEL O'NEILL, a powerful, self-made man, forces his only daughter, Mary, into a loveless marriage with the impecunious and profligate Lord Raa, so that his ambition to have his descendants the rightful heirs of the one earldom in Ellan may be realized. Mary, a convent-raised young woman, shocked to find her husband a man of sordid, sensual passions, refuses utterly to have anything to do with him until such time as he can prove himself worthy of her love. During the honeymoon abroad Alma Lier, a divorcee who had been expelled from the convent Mary attended in Rome, attaches herself to the party, and makes the "honeymoon trip" a long series of slights and insults for Lady Raa.

At last Lady Raa becomes certain of the infidelity of her husband and his misconduct with Alma Lier. On her return to London Mary encounters her old playfellow, Martin Conrad, who has returned from his triumphant expedition to the Antarctic. Drawn into ever-closer relations with the only man for whose friendship she ever cared, Mary finally awakes to the fact that she is hopelessly in love with Martin. Terrified by this knowledge, and finding herself more and more in love with Martin, she determines to run away from the cause of her distress, and go home.

Mary's home-coming to Castle Raa is a sad affair. Her husband fills the tumble-down old mansion with filth: his fast friends from London, including Alma Lier, who assumes control of the household. Ultimately the illness of her father offers Mary excuse for escape from the intolerable environment. But before visiting her old home Mary appeals in turn to her Bishop and to her father's lawyer, only to be told that neither Church nor State can offer any relief from her false position. She returns next day to Castle Raa to find that Martin is arriving for a farewell visit, and that by Alma Lier's deceitful scheming the whole house party has gone off for a few days' cruise.

During her three days alone with her lover Mary fights a grim battle with temptation, only to find on the last night that her faith in renunciation and the laws of the Church is a fragile thing compared with her overwhelming love for this pure-hearted man. With Martin's passionate words, "You are my real wife. I am your real husband," ringing in her brain she forgets everything else, and with strong steps walks across the corridor to Martin's bedroom. This is the action which Martin has advised as being the only course open to them which is sure to bring the one result they are determined to attain—Mary's divorce from Lord Raa.

Mary determines, after the departure of Martin Conrad, to hide herself in London. She is driven by fear of Lord Raa's discovery of her unfaithfulness to him; she is equally afraid of the venomous tongue of Alma Lier. She is no sooner settled in a cheap little boarding house in London than a great hue and cry is raised by her father. Of all persons, it is Mildred, that one truest friend of her convent days, who ferrets her out; but for Mary's sake she breaks a vow and refuses to give her up. Then comes the report of the loss of Martin's ship in the Antarctic. Desperate with grief and fearful for the unborn child which she hopes shall reconcile her to her empty life and typify her great love for Martin, she flees from Mildred to a still more obscure corner of London.

I asked the old driver how long it would take me to get to Ilford. He looked at me again and said," 'B out 'our and 'alf I should say by the looks of you and you carrying the biby."

HALL CAINE.

(Copyright, 1913, by Hearst's Magazine. Copyrighted in Great Britain.)

MY NEW quarters were in the poorer district which stands at the back of Bayswater.

The street was a cul-de-sac (of some ten small houses on either side), which was blocked up at the farther end by the high wall of a factory for the "humanization" of milk, and opened out of a busy thoroughfare of inferior shops like a gulley way off a noisy coast. My home in this street was in number one.

My room, which was of fair size, was on the first floor and had two windows to the street, with yellow holland blinds and white muslin curtains.

The furniture consisted of a large bed, a horse hair sofa, three cane-bottomed chairs, a chest of drawers (which stood between the windows), and a mirror over the mantelpiece, which had pink paper, cut into fanciful patterns, over the gilt frame, to keep off the flies.

The floor was covered with linoleum, but there were two strips of carpet, one before the fire and the other by the bed; the walls were papered by a bright red paper representing peonies in bloom; and there were three pictures—a portrait of a Welsh preacher, an engraving entitled "Feed My Sheep" (showing Jesus carrying a lamb), and a memorial card of some member of the family of the house, in the form of a tomb with a weeping angel on either side.

I paid five shillings a week for my room, and, as this included the use of kettle, cooking utensils and crockery, I found to my great delight at the end of the first week that providing for myself (tea, bread and butter and eggs being my principal food) I had spent only ten shillings altogether, which, according to my present needs, left me enough for my time of waiting and several weeks beyond it.

Every morning I went out with a little hand bag to buy my provisions in the front street, and every afternoon I took a walk in the better part of Bayswater and even into the park (Hyde Park), which was not far off, but never near to Piccadilly, or so far east as Bloomsbury, lest I should meet Sister Mildred or be recognized by the old boarders.

Finding it necessary to account for myself, just as at the boarding house, I had adhered to my former name, but said I was the widow of a commander lately lost at sea, which was as near to the truth as I dare venture.

She Tells of Her Coming Motherhood.

I had also made no disguise of the fact that I was expecting a child, a circumstance which secured me much sympathy from the womanly women who were now my neighbors.

They were all worthy women, generally the wives of men working in the milk factory; and therefore the life of our street was very regular.

At five in the morning you heard the halting step of the old "knocker up" who went up and down the street tapping at the bedroom windows with a long pole like a fishing rod. A little before six you heard the clashing of many front doors and the echoing footsteps of the men going to their work. At half-past seven you heard the whoop of the milkman and the rattling of his cans. At half-past eight you heard the little feet of the children, like the pattering of rain, going off to the Board School round the corner. And a little after four in the afternoon you heard the wild cries of the entire juvenile community let loose from lessons, the boys running iron hoops and the girls skipping rope.

After that, our street hummed like a beehive, with the women, washed and combed, standing knitting at their open doors or exchanging confidences across the areas until darkness fell, and each of the mothers called her children in to bed, as an old hen in the farmyard clucks up her chickens.

These good creatures were very kind to me. Having satisfied themselves from observation to my habits that I was "respectable," they called me "our lady," and I could not help hearing that I was a "nice young thing," though it was a little against me that I did not go to church or chapel, and had confessed to being a Catholic—for several of our families (including that of my landlady) were members of the Welsh Zion Chapel far away.

Such was the life of the little human cage to which I had confined myself, but I had an inner life that was all my own and very sweet to me.

Getting Ready for The Newcomer.

During the long hours of every day in which I was alone I occupied myself in the making of clothes for my baby—buying linen and flannel and worsted, and borrowing patterns from my Welsh landlady.

This stimulated my tenderness toward the child that was to come, for the heart of a young mother is almost infantile, and I hardly know whether to laugh or cry when I think of the childish things I did and thought and said to myself in those first days when I was alone in my room in that back street in Bayswater.

Thus long before the baby was born I had christened her. At first I wished to call her Mary, not because I cared for that name myself, but because Martin had said it was the most beautiful in the world. In the end, however, I called her Isabel Mary (because Isabel was my mother's name, and she had been a far better woman than I was), and as I finished my baby's garments one by one I used to put them away in their drawer, saying to myself, "That's Isabel Mary's binder," or "Isabel Mary's christening-robe," as the case might be.

I dare say it was all very foolish. There are tears in my eyes when I think of it now, but there were none then, for, though there were moments when, thinking of Martin, I felt as if life were forever blank and bare, I was almost happy in my poor surroundings, and if it were a cage I had fixed myself in, there was always a bird singing inside of it—the bird that sang in my own bosom.

"When Isabel Mary comes, everything will be all right," I used to think.

This went on for many weeks, and I think it might have gone on until my time was full but for something which, occurring under my eyes, made me tremble with the fear that the life I was living and the hope I was cherishing were really very wrong and selfish.

Of my landlady, Mrs. Williams, I saw very little. She was a rather hard but no doubt heavily laden woman, who had "to dó" for a swarm of children, besides two young men lodgers who lived in the kitchen and slept in the room behind mine. Her husband was a quiet man (a carter at the dairy), whom I never saw at all except on the staircase at 10 o'clock at night, when, after winding the tall clock on the landing, he went upstairs to bed in his stocking feet.

Emmerjane, the Family Drudge.

But the outstanding member of the family for me was a shock-headed girl of 14 called Emmerjane, which was a running version of Emma Jane.

I understand that Emmerjane was the illegitimate daughter of Mrs. Williams' dead sister, and that she had been born in Carnarvon, which still shimmered in her memory in purple and gold.

Emmerjane was the drudge of the family, and I first saw her in the street at dusk, mothering a brood of her little cousins.

Afterward she became my drudge also—washing my floor, bringing up my coal and cleaning my grate for sixpence a week, and giving me a great deal of information about my neighbors for nothing.

Thus she told me, speaking broad cockney with a Welsh accent, that the people opposite were named Wagstaffe and that the creaking noise I heard was that of a mangle, which Mrs. Wagstaffe had to keep because her husband was a drunkard.

But the greatest interest of this weird little woman, who had a premature knowledge of things a child ought not to know, was in a house half way down the street on the other side, where steam was always coming from the open door to the front kitchen.

The people who lived there were named Jones. Mrs. Jones "washed" and had a bed-ridden old mother (with two shillings from the parish) and a daughter named Maggie.

Maggie Jones, who was eighteen, and very pretty, used to work in the dairy, but the foreman had taken "advantage of her," and she had just had a baby.

This foreman was named Owen Owens, and he lived at the last number on our side, where two unmarried sisters "kept house" for him and sat in the "singing seat" at Zion.

Maggie thought it was the sisters' fault that Owen Owens did not marry her, so she conceived a great scheme for "besting" them, and this was the tragedy which, through Emmerjane's quick little eyes and her Cockney Welsh tongue, came to me in instalments day by day.

When her baby was a month old Maggie dressed it up "fine" and took it to the photographer's for its "card di visit." The photographs were a long time coming, but when they came they were "heavenly lovely" and Maggie "cried to look at them."

Then she put one in an envelope and addressed it to Owen Owens, and though it had only to cross the street she went out after dark to a pillar-box a long way off lest anybody should see her posting it.

Next day she said: "He'll have it now, for he always comes home to dinner. He'll take it up to his bedroom, look you, and stand it on the washboard, and if either of those sisters touch it he'll give them what's what."

After that she waited anxiously for an acknowledgment and every time the postman passed down our street her pretty pale face would be at the door, saying, "Anything for me to day?" or "Are you sure there's nothing for me, postman?"

Home Cooking

By MAY IRWIN.

THAT the fastidious should look with distrust, if not disgust, upon the hotel or restaurant made hash or ragout, or stew, or minced dish, is quite within my understanding and sympathy. But it is quite different in the well regulated home.

My husband and sons, who are rather spoiled as far as the things of the table are concerned, enjoy beef stews and roast beef hash better than the original roast. Fricassee chicken, when properly prepared, is much better than roast chicken. Spaghetti, when warmed over, is twenty times better than when first cooked. How seldom we eat a really well cooked dish of spaghetti. That is because it is not thoroughly cooked.

Suppose it is Tuesday—ironing day. If there is in your pantry or ice box the skeleton of last night's roast chicken, you are fortunate. From the shreds of meat here and there sticking to the bones you can make an excellent fricassee, or that dish which is a favorite in my household.

Mince the bits of cold chicken together. Chop a small green pepper, a small onion, four mushrooms, a bit of parsley and one cold potato together until very fine. Have a frying pan ready with tablespoonful of hot brown butter, and put the mixture in and stir it well.

Cover it for a few moments and let it brown on one side, as hashed brown potatoes are done. Put on a hot platter and garnish with tomato sauce. This sauce is made by cooking two or three tomatoes for half an hour; strain and add a tablespoonful of butter, salt, pepper and flour enough to thicken a little.

Perhaps you are inclined to toss away three or four tomatoes that are soft, but still good. Their ripeness is no drawback for the favorite breakfast dish of mine, for which I give you the recipe.

Cut a slice from the top of each tomato. Remove enough of the pulp to enable you to drop into each tomato a bit of butter the size of your thumb nail and a raw egg. Pin with a toothpick a strip of raw bacon around each tomato. Sprinkle a little salt and pepper over the top and put into a very hot oven until the eggs are set. This will be from five to eight minutes.

HER MINISTRATIONS

THE girl with the silver vanity case tucked a dainty handkerchief into her left glove and sighed.

"It's perfectly awful," she said, "how many persons have dreadful things happen to them these days! Why, all I do is to go to see my poor suffering friends in the hospitals!"

"Who's in the hospital besides Carrie?" asked the girl with the fire-red hat. "How's her appendicitis, anyhow? I sent some carnations, but I've been too busy——"

"Poor Carrie is recovering all right," said the girl with the silver vanity bag. "The house doctor says it is quite remarkable, in view of the seriousness of her case. I wish you could see him, Emma, when he is talking seriously like that. He draws his eyebrows together in a straight line like—oh, who was the actor who always did that? Never mind. Dr. Bennett is perfectly handsome and holds himself like a military man, and in those white linen suits—why on earth don't all doctors dress like that, I'd like to know?

"He can't be a day over 28, and if you could see how crazy the nurses are over him! I think it is perfectly ridiculous of them!

Sympathetic.

"I couldn't help expressing my sympathy one day when we were talking in the hall. I happened to be leaving just as he was through seeing Carrie. 'I should think,' I told him, 'you would get so weary of all this chasing after you, Dr. Bennett! Why, that corridor nurse wouldn't let me get a word in with you while she was in the room!' I should think she'd realize that a doctor would like something more entertaining once in a while than chatter about bandages and temperatures and diet! He quite flushed with gratitude and looked me in the eyes and said I had perfectly wonderful divination, and it was surprising how he lived through it all!

"The only trouble with knowing Dr. Bennett is that every time I go there somebody always sends for him or he has to go to the operating room. The poor man never has any time for a cozy chat."

"Is Carrie——"

"Oh, Carrie's all right," said the girl with the vanity bag. "If she'd only exercise a little self-control and not demand all the doctor's attention whenever he's in the room, she would get on better. Sick people are so selfish, don't you think? Dr. Bennett——"

"You said someone else was sick. Who?"

"Oh, yes!" said the girl with the vanity bag. "My cousin Ralph is at another hospital with a broken leg, and though his family and ours aren't on speaking terms I felt that in a case of illness I mustn't let prejudice stand in the way, so, of course, I ran in to cheer up poor Ralph. I was very careful to find out from the surgeon who set his leg whether it would be bad for Ralph to see me. Dr. Bitts is one of the most noted surgeons in the country. Terribly young for that, too—not more than 35. He has one of those attractive, stern faces, with straight mouth, and looks as though he shaves twice a day, and eyes like razors.

She Was Younger.

"When you talk to him he listens intently and then he has the most disconcerting way of coming to with a jerk and saying: 'Yes, yes; quite so,' and darting off somewhere. I think the poor dear man is worn out by his severe work. I tried to tell him the other day how a sensitive, appreciative woman couldn't help sympathizing with his hardships. He was very brave—he said they weren't hardships."

"Is your Cousin Ralph's leg——"

"Oh, that's mending, all right," said the girl with the vanity bag. "I don't wonder that my family can't stand Ralph's father, if he is anything like Ralph—always thinking of himself. He actually thought I was going to sit and read to him—no consideration at all for Dr. Bitts, who might like a little cheering conversation!"

"You said several——"

"Well, one of mother's friends and an aunt of father's are in the same hospital with typhoid and an operation, and, of course, I am younger than mother, so I do the calling. I told mother quite firmly when she insisted that it was not necessary for me to go every day that I hoped I knew my duty to the sick and suffering. Aunt Lou has a nephew by marriage who is so devoted to her, and he goes to see her frequently. He has the loveliest car, and as I happened to be leaving once when he did he took me home. I did some shopping first, because it was such a good chance to be carried around.

"I wish you could have seen that car. Something must have happened to it, because now he always comes on the street car. It wasn't so bad, because Mrs. Himmers' son—the friend with the operation—comes in his car and usually I am going just when he goes. But, oh, if you could see Dr. Bennett's eyes!"

"I really ought to look in on poor Carrie," mused the girl with the fire red hat. "What time——"

"Come to think of it," objected the girl with the silver vanity case, "the nurse said that Carrie mustn't have too much company—that it made her fever rise! So I guess I'd wait, if I were you."

The First Admiral.

A story sometimes told to ridicule the dialect of Pudsey is that of a traveler who astonished his friend by telling him that the children in Pudsey were the most intelligent children in the world.

"Why, what do they know?" asked his friend.

"They know who was the first naval admiral who ever lived," the traveler replied.

"Not they. Here, can you prove it?"

"Yes. If you wish, we will go to Pudsey and I will ask any child you like that particular question."

The friend agreed.

As the traveler and his friend went through Pudsey they saw a boy about ten years old playing in the street. The traveler went to him and asked:

"Now, my boy, do you know who was the first naval admiral?"

"No-a," bluntly replied the lad.

"There," said the traveler, turning to his friend, "didn't I tell you he would know?"

Willing to Oblige.

Elderly Gentleman—Hi, conductor! Bring the 'bus here. D'ye think I'm going to walk through all this mud?

Conductor—Sutt'nly not, sir. Hif you'll wait 'arf a minnit I'll lay down the carpet an' herect the hawning!

Conspire Against Domestic Harmony

The ills of women seem to conspire against domestic harmony. No husband can understand why a woman should be continually ailing, fretful, nervous and despondent, and he gets out of all patience with her. In nine cases out of ten some organic derangement is the cause of this condition and is easily overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a woman's remedy for woman's ills which has cured more severe cases of this kind than any other remedy we know.

Paper Fingers
That Save Time
How many times do typewriter operators come nearly to the bottom of the paper and have to put in another sheet to write just one more line?
The L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter
is equipped with paper fingers that hold the paper so well that it is possible to write on the extreme edge of the paper or card.
These paper fingers, if the operator forgets to push them back into place after writing a card or envelope, move along to the proper place with the advancement of the carriage in either direction.
This is one of the many reasons why the L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter enables the operator to produce more and better work than on any other writing machine ever made.

RACE MIGHTY TIGHT; LOCAL CLUB IN HUNT

If Crackers Can Keep Playing As They Did Last Week They Will Cop Pennant.

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE Southern League race is a rip-snorter. Mobile, Montgomery, Chattanooga and Atlanta are within .041 of each other. Birmingham, Memphis and Nashville are far from out of the race. It's getting better every minute.

The Crackers have the chance of their career to make a showing now. Two of the next three clubs they face on home ground are ahead of them. If they can hammer the Turtles to pieces, get a few games back that the Gulls owe them and plaster something on Montgomery they will be right up in the race again.

They have it in them, too.

You can't lose confidence in a team that pulls games out of the fire the way the Crackers were yanking them last week. Saturday's game, for instance, was as poor from a fielding viewpoint as any man would care to witness, but the locals had the old kick that was needed to get them out of danger. They saved two games Friday that appeared totally lost. They won all the way Thursday. Both of the games with Mobile were won after they had been lost. And altogether, the Crackers are showing real recuperative power.

If the players will pull together, forget all the inside politics and work exclusively for Atlanta and for the pennant there will be nothing to it but another rag for Atlanta.

* * *

BUCK" WEAVER is winning a game now and then for the Meridian team and may come around and make a pitcher of himself yet. It is possible that now he is away from the alcoholic possibilities of Atlanta's many social (?) clubs he may settle down and do some good work. He has the natural ability, all right.

* * *

* * *

IF old Rube Benton were only with a ball club he might be a wonder. The other day in a game against the Cardinals he made three hits, scored three runs and perpetrated a sacrifice fly. It was a very hot day, too.

Ordinarily, Rube hits like a suffragette.

* * *

GUESS the Naps will never win a ball game. Usually they haven't any team. When they have, it is wrecked by internal dissensions. When it isn't, as this year, accidents do the rest.

Here are the accidents since May 1:

May 4.—Catcher Grover Land broke his hand.

May 11—Larry Lajoie broke a finger and a thumb.

May 12—Joe Birmingham broke an ankle.

June 11—Twirler Steen broke his pitching arm.

This is only a partial list of the wounded. Ray Chapman, the Naps' shortstop, was hurt the day Steen broke his arm and couldn't play for two weeks. "Buddy" Ryan, center fielder, is playing with a broken thumb.

* * *

PERCY SKILLEN, former Dartmouth pitcher, now in the sporting goods business, has invented a device which he thinks will help pitchers develop control, a thing which Percy lacked or he might now be a big leaguer. It is a dummy that stands at the plate, bat in hand, so that a twirler can pitch to it hours at a time, if he feels like it, and never fear that wild shots will do any damage.

"Dutch" Meyers, who is in business with Percy, tried to sell one of these devices to Jimmy Callahan to help steady young Sox pitchers.

"I don't deny that your idea may work out all right," Manager Callahan told Meyers. "But you needn't send any of those things around."

"Why not?" persisted Meyers.

"What do I want with another dummy, when I have three or four on my team now?" asked Callahan. "I'll just use one of them."

'Tear-In' Fighters Are Popular

Sluggers Usually Capture Title

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 7.—Discussions have arisen in England and Australia as to whether the "tear-in" fighters of the present day are better boxers than the clever fellows who made a business of pugilism fifteen or twenty years ago. Some of the arguments used in support of the various views expressed are highly interesting, but one very important matter has been overlooked. There are no "tear-in" fighters now—at least, none worth talking about. The clever fellows have come into their own again.

Take the smaller men. When Terry McGovern, with bent back, lowered head and rapidly revolving fists, began demolishing the nations of the earth, the opinions that many persons held in respect to the noble art of self-defense were revolutionized. After the Brooklyn whirlwind had run amuck for a year or two, grave doubts existed as to whether there was any scientific side to boxing, for had not the game developed a youth who, by determined onslaught, could upset all ideas of leading, countering, timing, sidestepping and what not?

And when Terry spread-eagled Pedlier Palmer, the pride of British pugdom, in one round, the belief that forthrightness was the one and only antidote for cleverness became a firmer ground than ever.

Nelson Greatest Slugger.

Terry strutted his brief period and then went under to another "tear-in" fighter in the person of Young Corbett. It is worthy of note, by the way, that each of these "tear-in" specialists fell a victim to a fellow who also operated along "tear-in" lines. Corbett did fairly well until he ran afoul of Battling Nelson, who was possibly the most headlong fighter of them all—greater even than Terry McGovern, the founder of the "tear-in" dynasty.

Nelson did more than any of them to show that cleverness could be made to succumb to direct methods. Among other things, he won from Joe Gans, who was possibly the most scientific lightweight the world ever has known.

When Nelson's time came it was another "tear-in" fighter who accounted for him. This was Ad Wolgast, and while Wolgast, still untroubled with the spasms of appendicitis, the toughest experience he ever had was with still another "tear-in" fighter, to-wit, Knockout Brown.

From the lightweights down, the clever lads are in the ascendant again. Packey McFarland, who can claim to be a lightweight, now that the weight limit has been hunched, is nothing if not clever, and unless Jack Britton has changed tactics since he went East he is also a boxer of the brainy, resourceful stamp.

Jimmy Duffy, the Lockport boy, who is fast forging to the front, is another exponent of scientific pugilism, while Ritchie, Rivers, Mandot, Leach Cross and Freddie Welsh are all performers of the "hit, step and get away" school.

The welter, middle and light-heavy classes are so fussed now that it is impossible to tell "who is who" in the divisions named, but it can certainly be said that Mike Gibbons and Jimmy Clabby, a pair of really clever workmen, seem to be able to give away lots of weight and gain decisions from the best men that can be found for them.

Kilbane and Coulon Clever.

Johnnie Kilbane, the featherweight champion, and Johnny Coulon, the prince of bantams, have held their positions by dint of clever boxing and the manner in which little Eddi Campi handled the mercurial Frenchman, Ledoux, at Los Angeles recently, also favors the argument that cleverness is asserting itself in matters pugilistic again.

The heavyweight situation is so muddled that it is not easy to figure out what has contributed to success in that particular department, but in a general way it can be shown that cleverness has made itself tell among the big fellows during the past few years. This, too, despite the fact that Bombardier Wells, the most finished boxer England has produced in years, has been defeated practically every time he started.

Jack Johnson's long suit was cleverness, and there is no occasion to recall what he has done. He was certainly the greatest heavyweight since Jeffries was in his heyday.

McCarty a Second Corbett.

The most pronounced "tear-in" fighters of the heavyweight class in recent times were Jim Flynn and Al Palzer, but Luther McCarty, who was in a way a second Jim Corbett, disposed of the pair within a few weeks.

McCarty is gone, Johnson has fallen upon evil days and it is hard to tell what is in store for the heavyweights. But in respect to pugilism generally, it can be said that in the whirligig of time the artists of the Queensberry ring have gained the ascendancy over the sluggers.

There is no assurance that the present order of things will continue and about the only thing existing conditions prove is that evolution has not produced any permanent change in fighting methods.

Just now they are fighting the way they fought a quarter of a century ago.

CHICAGO ATHLETES GOOD.

CHICAGO, July 7.—Members of the Chicago Athletic Association are today rejoicing over the showing made by its members in the international athletic penthathlon at Grant Park yesterday. C. C. Cook captured the event. Harry Hutchinson was second and Max Bachelman third.

BROWNS SIGN SLUGGER.

DETROIT, MICH., July 7.—Joseph Bell, star outfielder of the University of Michigan, has signed a contract with the St. Louis American League club. Bell batted .425 in the college games this year.

EMPIRE LEAGUE NOTES

Shortstop Murphy, of the Thomasville team, continues to hit the ball as if he means to stay at the top of the Empire's batters. Murphy is also a sensational fielder and will undoubtedly move up when the season ends.

* * *

Manager Moran, of Brunswick, has secured Third Baseman Crowe from Thomasasville and if the youngster continues his splendid work will probably keep him.

* * *

Almost without exception the players who have been cut loose by Waycross have made good elsewhere. Bitting, released as third baseman, landed with Charleston and is going fine. "Red" Stiles, a pitcher, signed with Thomasville, has won nearly all his games since leaving Waycross. Dacey, an outfielder, went to Americus and is putting up a neat article of ball.

* * *

McManus is one of the newest men in the Empire. He is a pitcher and has been signed by Waycross.

* * *

Almost as fast as teams change players the Empire is changing umpires. Derrick is the latest to join the league's staff. Morton, one of the new men, has been criticised a great deal on account of his work and may be released.

* * *

Cordele has in Wilder a pitcher who makes more noise than any man in the league. Wilder holds the league's strike-out record so far, fifteen, and is apt to cut loose some new capers almost any game.

* * *

South Atlantic League scouts have been through the Empire, and inside information says quite a few players will be taken in the Class C league after this season.

* * *

Brunswick will turn loose about six players this week. Moran says Brunswick is going to stay at the top, and he means it, too.

* * *

"Closed for ball game" is not an uncommon sign to see hanging on a store's front door in Empire League cities. Baseball comes first with almost everybody now.

* * *

Waycross plays six games at home this week and Manager Clark has tipped his team off that when the week-end arrives Waycross must be somewhere else besides at the bottom.

* * *

Reports from Thomasville indicate that fans in that city will always remember the stinging defeats given Valdosta last week. Both those towns are old time baseball rivals.

* * *

Otto Jordan, of Valdosta, can sell three of his four pitchers any day in the week, according to the dope from Valdosta. He has four good ones and it is said managers of almost every South Atlantic team is anxious to get contracts with them.

* * *

As far as individual players go, there is hardly any team in the Empire that has anything on the others. But when it comes to team work and pitchers—well—the league standing tells the story.

* * *

College players who have joined teams in the Empire are making good with a rush. Davenport, playing first at Thomasville; Holliday, the same for Waycross, and Bowen, short for Americus, are three players who have shown up exceptionally strong. Whitted, a college player, is one of the Waycross additions and is expected to make good with ease.

Heine Zimmerman's brother, who has been playing second for Waycross, will probably be worked in the outfield.

* * *

First Baseman Day, of Cordele, has shown that when it comes to a pinch he can pitch as well as play the bag. Day is a clever fellow, and has many friends in every city of the league.

* * *

Thomsville has a Day that is having days whenever he pitches. He is the handsome fellow of the league, and is winning so regularly now that there seems no end of his victories.

Ritchie May Take Trip Abroad

Wolgast Is Not All In--Naughton

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., July 7.—Now that Willie Ritchie has shown himself every inch a champion—that is, by comparison with contemporaneous lightweights, which is the only way to judge a rising young fighter—the question is, What will he do next?

There is some talk of Ritchie taking a trip to Europe. If his wishes lie in that direction, no one can say him nay, for he has intrenched himself in such a way with fair-minded sports that no chance remains to taunt him with being afraid of the issue with any man of his size.

The story goes that Ritchie long ago set his heart upon a trip through the older lands and that he wants to take advantage of his present position and earning power to fulfill his desire. He is sensible enough to know that a ring man's grip of the topmost rung is at all times insecure, and he thinks it best to indulge in a long-felt hankering while things are coming his way.

This is a better way of putting it than asserting that he is in need of a rest, for Ritchie is only just back from a six months' lay-off and can hardly boast of tired muscles and frayed nerves.

Whenever Willie gets ready to resume fistic activities he will find several worthy opponents. Freddie Welsh wants a crack at the title and so does Harlem Tommy Murphy. Leach Cross has the bee buzzing in his bonnet and Ad Wolgast has begun agitation for a return match.

In Wolgast's case, the fact that his advances are not taken over seriously is due to himself. Wolgast has had several chances to redeem himself, but he has not trained sufficiently on any one occasion. He could easily make himself a strong drawing card with the public if he would forsake city life for a few months and spend his time on his farm. Then if he came back armed with a physician's certificate setting forth that he had stored up plenty of vitality during his sojourn in the country, he would attract attention from the promoters.

SLOW BEAT OF HEART GIVES MEN ENDURANCE

BATTLING NELSON'S theory that his slow heart was the cause of his phenomenal endurance is being substantiated right along. The normal number of beats a minute for the human heart is 72. The Battler's heart beats but 52 times a minute, and to this he laid his ability to take a walloping and win.

Now Marathon and other distance runners come forward with hearts that put Nelson's in the shade when it comes to slowness. Harry J. Smith, the national ten-mile champion, is also the champion of the slow-heart brigade. His heart beats but 48 times a minute.

Smith entered the Boston A. A. Marathon, and Dr. J. H. Cunningham, of Boston, examined his heart less than a minute after he had crossed the finish line. Though Smith had just completed a run that put him under one of the hardest heart strainz known, his heart was banging away 80 a minute—just eight above normal for the average person.

Recently he took a life insurance examination and was informed that in 27,000 hearts examined his had the slowest beat.

George Benhag, the middle distance runner, is another slow-pulsed man. His heart has a peculiarity. It goes 64 a minute while he is standing, but lets up ten beats as soon as he lies down. Another one of the brigade is Mike Ryan, a New York distance runner.

Recently he was operated on at a New York nospital, and his heart was tested before he was given ether. Under conditions making for slowness, his heart beat but 42 for the minute. He resisted ether and had to be given enough to put ten men to sleep, but his "Marathon heart" was unaffected.

BANTAM WILLIAMS DESIRES JUST ONE LOOK AT COULON

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., July 7.—When Champion Johnny Coulon comes out here to negotiate for a renewal of his many-times postponed fight with Kid Williams, it looks as though they will have to lock the estimable Mr. Gutenko in a cellar until the session is over and Collins has fled to the mountains.

Williams swears he will "jump" the bantamweight champion in the street.

"It's no use trying to get him into a ring with me," said the Kid, tearfully. "He'd sign all the articles fer a fight somewhere in Siberia and then telegraph that he had a stomach ache again and beat it on the run for some other mountains somewhere.

"The only way is fer me to meet the guy on the street and hand him what's coming to him right there. I'd like to have two or three fellers standin' round to see it because it will be good, and I wouldn't want to waste it."

Not to be outdone, in desperation Sammy Harris tremblingly produced five one-hundred dollar bills and deposited them with Tom McCarey, an act which indicated a state of fury no less frightful than that of Kid Williams; there are different ways of expressing emotion.

When the "Kid" is torn with an agony of rage he wishes to punch some one; Sammy pulls out a hundred bill; same thing in a different dialect.

AUGUSTA TEAM WINS DOUBLES IN S. A. EVENT

AUGUSTA, GA., July 7.—Garrett and Gary, of Augusta, defeated the Waring brothers, of Columbia, S. C., Sunday afternoon for the championship of the South Atlantic States.

Play was continued from Saturday afternoon until Sunday on account of darkness, and when the four players resumed Sunday afternoon, the sets stood two all, and Garrett and Gary were four games to their opponents' two on the fifth set.

The score on the final set was 6—2, and the scores for the entire match of five games were as follows: 5—7, 7—5, 7—5, 4—6, 6—2. With the completion of the Garrett and Gary-Waring brothers match, the tournament of 1913 came to an end.

The championship in singles went to E. V. Carter, Jr., of Atlanta. The ladies' singles chapionship went to Mrs. Robert Johnson, of Asheville, N. C., and themixed doubles championship to Miss Adger, of Greenville, S. C., and James Edwin, of Spartanburg, S. C.

The local enthusiasts were delighted to keep the doubles title at home, against strong opposition from Atlanta and other cities.

There was great disappointment because Nat Thornton, of Atlanta, decided not to defend his title, as the possibilities of a match between Thornton and Carter were alluring to the spectators.

KELLY GREATEST TIMBER TOPPER, SAYS MITCHELL

Winner of the National A. A. U. Champion Due to Hang Up a Wonderful Record.

By James S. Mitchell.

World's Campion Weight Thrower.

NEW YORK, July 7.—Fred W. Kelly, of the University of Southern California, the present Olympic high hurdling champion, who won the national A. A. U. title at the Chicago carnival on Saturday and who won the high and low hurdles in the collegiate meet on Thursday, is unquestionably the greatest timber-topper on earth to-day.

On his native heath, Kelly has equaled the world's record of 15 seconds for the 120-yard hurdles, and this feat for a young man of 21 is unprecedented in the history of athletics. What Kelly will do to the records in the years to come can only be imagined.

Like a Bird Over Hurdles.

Long and powerful of limb and with great development of the back muscles, the Californian possesses the ideal points of the real racer over the sticks. When crossing the obstacles he has such a fine spread that his body does not have to rise high in the air and he simply strides over the hurdles, as it were.

I did not happen to get a good look at the Los Angeles man till he began to practice at Stockholm prior to the Olympic games last year. Without delay I picked him as the winner, despite the fact that the Englishmen were very sweet on their man Anderson, who was supposed to have shown 15 seconds for the 120 yards.

Many Caught Time at 14 4-5.

Kelly justified my opinion by winning in 15 1-10 seconds, in undoubtedly the most sensational hurdle race ever seen. Several private timers, Americans as well as myself, made the time 14 4-5 seconds.

J. E. Sullivan, the American commissioner, said it was the fastest hurdle race he had ever seen, and is prepared to see Kelly do better than 15 seconds any day.

The citizens of Los Angeles contributed the money to take Kelly on the Olympic team, and their generosity has been highly praised ever since, and Kelly, by his great performances, has shown that his admirers made no mistake.

Cross After Match With Ritchie

Leach Wants Plenty of Action

By H. M. Walker.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., July 7.—It's Leach Cross, the pride of the walk in Los Angeles. Whatever admiration was bestowed upon Mexican Joe Rivers now goes for Cross double. Fight bugs are fairly marveling at the showing of the New Yorker, and from the talk at sporting headquarters it seems to be the consensus of opinion that the New Yorker would defeat Ritchie for the championship.

Leach, with Brother Sam and Trainer Harry Lee, were about town Sunday accepting congratulations on all sides, but more eager to know the next probable date for his services than anything else.

The New Yorker is decorated with a handsome black eye, the left optic being badly swollen and discolored clear over the cheekbone, but Leach is parading this proudly in honor of the occasion and said if he had been a loser he would bend his head and take up an alleyway.

"I want Ritchie in a match for the championship of the world," said Cross, "and I want to know within a few days whether the champion is going to give me this chance. It would be a great fight and I like my chances with him, for our styles are very similar. He's cleverer than I am and I think he's the classiest champion we have had since Joe Gans, but this is the wing that spells kick," and the dentist-boxer closed his right fist and smiled confidently.

"Will you take on Rivers if the match is postponed and there is nothing doing for the present with Ritchie?" was asked. "I'm ready to take on Rivers the last of July, regardless of whether I meet the champion, and then I will fight again the next month and take Ritchie Labor Day. That's me, for I'm in better form the oftener I work."

Just what the immediate plans of the Eastern boxer will be is not quite known. Unless something positive is placed for Cross early this week the New Yorker will start back East, probably taking a date with Harry Trendall at St. Louis, and then on to New York, where he is offered a match with Young Shugrue.

Bud Anderson came into town with Manager Dick Donald yesterday and, although somewhat disappointed and forlorn, he expressed a manly version of the outcome and gave the victor all just dues, saying that he only hoped there would soon be a time when he can command another accounting with Mr. Cross. Bud's lips were considerably swollen and his right eye discolored. Anderson and Manager Donald are not certain of future plans, but will remain over until to-morrow, then returning to Medford.

OLD FIGHTING SPIRIT WINS, SAYS TEBEAU

By Patsy Tebeau.

(Manager of Famous Cleveland "Spiders.")

SHOW me a ball club out there fighting every inch of the way and I'll show you a team that is after the pennant.

This having players going through the parlor business of shaking hands every time they meet is foolish. It gives the fans the wrong impression.

We never thought of greeting our opponents. Our idea was to get out there and lick 'em, and lick 'em good and quick. I can see some guy sliding back to first with me playing the bag and getting his head bumped with the ball.

Think I'd apologize? Not Patsy Tebeau. "Get your nut out of the way and you won't get hurt," would be more like it.

I haven't seen many games this year, but those I have seen were a lot different from the ones we played. The tactics were different.

About a year ago I saw a fellow steal second. He came up all dust, and what do you think happened? Why, the second baseman helped him dust his uniform.

And that team finished last in the race. That isn't my brand of baseball.

From what I've heard the teams that are winning are playing the same system the old "Spiders" used. That's why they're winning. That's the real stuff! Rush the other guys off their feet. Make 'em think you're tough. Scare 'em to death and you got them licked.

We used to sit on the bench and file our spikes. They had to be sharp to give when they cut into the ground and at the same time the other team knew we wouldn't give an inch in a pinch.

One day I was sharpening my spikes when I heard a guy on the other team say, "When Tebeau slides into me you bet I'm going to get out of the way." I had him bluffed, you see?

They're trying to tone down baseball and they are killing the interest. You don't have to poke anyone in the jaw, step on or kick a player to win, but you don't have to wear kid gloves, either.

Pretty soon some of these league presidents will be fining a man for sliding and soiling his uniform.

There's a difference between rowdyism and aggressiveness. The aggressive player will be on top when the parlor boy is at the bottom. Off the field, oh, well, that's different. On the field, fight 'em to the last.

Sporting Food

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

Spending a section of the Fourth at the ringside while Carl Morris is attempting to fight is a great little pastime for one who has a lot of perfectly good time to throw away.

Samuel E. Debs is leading Edward P. Weston in their hike athwart the continent. Sam has more speed than Ed, but not a bit more sense.

Without cracking a smile, Fred Toney up and says he is glad to get a chance to work regularly. Fred will have his little joke.

By this time Mr. Toney is able to find his way from Chicago to Louisville and vice versa with his eyes shut.

ROUGH-HOUSE.

Lives of Phillies all remind us
We can play a rough-house game,
And, departing, leave behind us
Spike marks on another's frame.

It is said that the Cincinnati Reds once went through a whole season without losing a game. There is a feeling among baseball experts that this will not happen again for at least a couple of years.

In view of what happend to W. Heinrich Schmidt it is surprising that the English newspapers have not begun to chide McLoughlin on the cut of his trousers or the color of his hose.

The consensus of opinion is that Mr. Quigley is a good umpire—if there is such a thing as a good umpire.

SLIDING.

Toboggan-sliding days have come,
The saddest of the season,
When baseball teams go on the bum
For no apparent reason.

The Phils that led the bloomin' league
Are headed for the bottom.
Their pitchers suffer from fatigue,
And all the batters swat 'em.

Tom Jones is one of the saddest persons extant. Imagine a fight for the lightweight title and some one else there to count the gate receipts.

After being walloped, stepped on and otherwise abused, John McGraw draws a five-day suspension. Mr. Lynch shows almost intelligence enough to be accepted on a jury.

HOFMAN TO LEACH.

When you were a Pirate and I was a Cub
In the summer of 1910,
They said you were slipping and couldn't last,
And I was a whirlwind then.
They said you were feeble and old and lame,
While Artic was fast and young,
But Fred Clarke sighs as he reckons back,
And solemnly answers, "Stung!"

RICHARDS WINS A WIFE IF HE WINS 2 RACES

IT'S leaked out on "Tex" Richards, rider at the local Motordrome. Old "Tex" is going to be married. That is, maybe?

You see it's this way.

The girl is an awful Motordrome enthusiast. Also it takes a peck of money to get married.

So she wrote "Tex" that if he would win both races at the next meet she would have him—and the quicker the better.

Yes, it sounds like a press agent's yarn. And like as not the girl got the idea out of a novel or a newspaper. A lot of things come from such places. But anyhow, the story is true. If "Tex" wins both races he gets a wife. If he doesn't, there will be another wait. And "Tex" has waited quite a while.

Naturally a thing like this will spur Richards to the utmost Tuesday night. And he will need it. Jock McNeil has the old J. A. P. running as never before. And Mortie Graves' new Excelsior has shown speed in practice that is fast enough to win any race ever run on this Motordrome or any other.

Tuesday's races will be among those three riders. The experts believe that Graves is the winner if all goes well. But McNeil's machine has never been beaten when it was running right. And "Tex" Richards has never yet run that old Indian No. 23 as he will run it Tuesday night.

In case of rain Tuesday night the meeting will be postponed until Wednesday night. There will also be racing Friday night.

Bad Year for Georgia Players

Cobb--Rucker Both Out of Whack

BROOKLYN, N. Y., July 7.—This seems to be a hard year on celebrated Georgia ball players. Ty Cobb is in bad shape. And now Nap Rucker also has gone bad.

"Nap" may not pitch in his old form for some time to come. He will not pitch at all for the present if he takes the advice of his physician. The big Georgian has a bad arm, so bad in fact that for over two weeks his curve ball has been a myth.

The trouble with the arm is the indirect result of an accident he met with in the team's long stay at home early in the season. In a game against the St. Louis Cardinals "Nap" had the thumb of his pitching hand knocked out of gear.

Instead of waiting until the injured member had entirely healed, "Nap" got back into the game because he argued that he could pitch without using his thumb. He changed his style of delivery because of the damaged thumb, and it is believed, in doing so, he put too much of a strain on certain muscles in his shoulder. "Nap" says for two weeks he has not been able to pitch a curve ball, which accounts for the peculiar exhibitions that he has been giving of late.

THE big Georgian said yesterday that he does not know how he ever got through that extra-inning game with the Phillies. He says he was able to beat the Giants because the McGrawites were looking for him to pitch curve balls and "Nap" was not pitching them for the very good reason that he couldn't.

President Ebbets sent "Nap" to a specialist. The specialist gave it as his opinion that while the arm was not seriously injured, "Nap" would be unable to get his arm back in shape unless he gave it a good rest. The rest thing does not make a hit with "Nap." He said yesterday that he did not know whether to stay out or not.

* * *

THREE years ago Rucker had trouble with his arm and it was caused by fooling with different kinds of deliveries. At that time he had developed quite a spitter and was using it with great success. Then his arm started to bother him.

One day he mentioned it to Hank O'Day. According to "Nap," Hank proceeded to give him a fine little bawling out for using the spitball. The veteran umpire attributed all the trouble to "Nap" changing his style of delivery, by which he put a strain on muscles that "Nap" did not bring into play with his regular delivery.

Carl Thompson May Be Signed by Smith

Carl Thompson, former University of Georgia star, may be signed by Manager Billy Smith to take the place of one of his wavering hurlers—probably Paul Musser. It will depend on what terms can be agreed upon.

Thompson has had a bad season with Birmingham and was finally turned back by Molesworth on the New York Americans. They wanted to send him to the New England League, but he preferred to pitch in the South. If Smith can make a deal with him he will probably give him a trial. The local manager believes that hard luck and weak batting support beat Thompson in most of his games with the Barons and that with the local team he will be a winner.

CARDS SIGN ANOTHER PITCHER.

ST. LOUIS, MO., July 7.—Another hurler is coming to aid the Cardinals in the National League pennant race. He is Rice Williams, a member of the Great Falls club of the Union Association. The newcomer will not join Huggins' crew until September 14. The announced price for the pitcher was $2,500.

RINGSIDE NOTES

Who will get the next chance at Willie Ritchie's title? This is a question that is worrying boxing fans these days. Freddie Welsh, Leach Cross, Tommy Murphy and Jack Britton are all clamoring for the prize match.

* * *

At the present time it looks very much as if Cross will beat his rivals to the big bout. Cross' recent victory over Anderson has made him a big card on the coast. The dentist's great punching power should give him a great chance to cop the championship from Ritchie.

* * *

Friends of Charlie White should not take his defeat at the hands of Jack Britton to heart. When it is taken into consideration that White weighed but 129 pounds against 136 for Britton the showing made by Charlie was nothing to be ashamed of. Although Britton is credited with a knockout he failed to drop White once during the entire mill. The bout was stopped by the sheriff.

* * *

Poor Joe Thomas is certainly hitting the toboggan. Frankie Whitney pushed the New Orleans boy still further down the ladder by handing Joe Golden's protege a neat lacing in ten rounds last Friday.

* * *

The Ritchie-Rivers championship battle at San Francisco drew a $30,000 house. Ritchie was guaranteed $17,000 win, lose or draw. Rivers drew down about $5,000 for his end.

* * *

When Johnny Kilbane was recently asked in Cleveland why he didn't knock out more of his opponents he said: "I have always said that I am a boxer and not a fighter. I am not in the ring to kill the other fellow, but to simply outbox him. I won the featherweight championship of the world by using this method and will not change my style now."

The next big bout to be staged on the coast will be the twenty-round engagement between Charley Ledoux and Kid Williams at Los Angeles on July 29. The winner has been promised a match with either Eddie Campi or Johnny Coulon.

* * *

Kid Young, the local newsboy boxer, is still waiting to hear from Charlie Lee in regard to the latter's challenge. Young says he will sign up for the match at once and will also give Lee a $50 side bet.

* * *

George Chip and Jack Dillon meet in a 12-round setto at Boston on July 8. The winner is to be matched with Frank Klaus.

* * *

Eddie Craney, who staged the Rivers-Ritchie mill, is now anxious to arrange a match between Jack Britton and Tommy Murphy. He has already wired an offer to Danny Morgan, manager of Britton.

* * *

Billy Papke, former middelweight, wishes to announce that he is still in the boxing game. Papke has agreed to meet any middleweight the Milwaukee promoters pick for him. The Kewanee boy says his injured hand is again in shape for a tough scrap.

* * *

The recent 20-round bout between Campi and Ledoux at the Pacific Athletic Club, of Vernon Cal., drew $4,900. Ledoux received $1,225, which was 25 per cent of the gross receipts. Campi, for winning got $1,470, having boxed for 30 per cent of the receipts.

* * *

Nick Pagoalos and Sam Fountas, local Greek featherweights, will clash in a private 10-round bout here Friday. Terry Nelson has been selected to referee the go. The winner will seek a match with Kid Young.

REDS PURCHASE ROBINSON FROM SAVANNAH CLUB

SAVANNAH, GA., July 6.—Announcement has been made of the consummation of negotiations which have been pending between the Cincinnati Baseball Club and the owners of the local association of the South Atlantic League for the sale of pitcher Dick Robertson. The purchase price is said to be $4,000.

Robertson will be delivered to the Cincinnati club at the end of the South Atlantic season. President Armstrong has stated that the present Indian combination will be kept intact throughout the year. When announcement was made of the sale of Robertson it was stated that the young spitball artist will remain in Savannah for the balance of the season.

GUTHRIE PITCHER HURLS ONLY 54 BALLS IN GAME

GUTHRIE, OKLA., July 7.—Andrew Jelsama, pitching for the Elks team of the Guthrie City League, is believed to have made a record in a game against the Santa Fe Railroad team when he delivered only 54 balls during the entire nine innings. He allowed three hits, striking out one man.

ZEIDER READY TO PLAY; CHANCE TO MAKE CHANGES

NEW YORK, July 7.—After to-day's double-header with the Senators the New Yorks leave for Chicago to begin their second Western trip.

Frank Chance has received word from Rollie Zeider that he would join the team on Wednesday, ready to play second base in the opening game with the White Sox. Zeider's absence has cost the Yankees many games. With Zeider on the middle bag, Hartzell will supplant Daniels or Wolter in the outfield.

CARPENTIER AND PALZER MAY CLASH IN PARIS GO

NEW YORK, July 7.—Tom O'Rourke is in receipt of a letter from Monsieur Vienne, the Parisian boxing promoter, offering him a match for Palzer with Carpentier some time this fall. Carpentier is all the rage in fight circles in France and would draw an immense gate with a white man of reputation who had not fought in Paris. O'Rourke thinks well of the proposition and will proceed to close the match with Monsieur Vienne.

THIS CLUB PRESIDENT DOES HIS OWN UMPIRING

NEW YORK, July 7.—Arthur Chappelle, the motorcycle speed king, is to-day the holder of the professional championship of America. At the Motordrome at Brighton Beach last night Chappelle won the third and deciding race of the series for the championship from Charles Davis. Each had won a match and this was the deciding one, and consisted of a ten-mile and two five-mile heats.

Billy Vanderbury, of Philadelphia, captured the three-mile professional race, winning all three heats.

Martin Kessler, of Newark, was badly cut about the mouth when he fell from his machine while trying to avoid mixing up in a spill in the two-mile novice race.

KRAMER AND CAVANAUGH WIN GREAT CYCLE RACE

NEWARK, N. J., July 7.—A victory for the team of Kramer and Cavanaugh in the three-cornered tandem match race and a dead heat between Frank Kramer, of New Jersey, and Alfred Grenda, of Australia, were features of the racing at the Velodrome here yesterday.

In the two-mile event Grenda had a lead of twenty yards on the last lap, but Kramer spurted and managed to cross the line with his rival. In the three-cornered match Kramer and Cavanaugh nosed out Joe Fogler, of Brooklyn, and Al Goulet, of Australia, and Jackie Clark and Grenda, both Australians, got third. The victory was in straight heats of one mile each.

GOVERNOR MAY INTERVENE AT PORTER RACE TRACK

PORTER, IND., July 7.—State intervention at the Mineral Springs race track near here, which was successful last year, will be repeated this year if gamblers continue to bet on the races. Prosecutor Fabing, of Porter County, to-day returned from Indianapolis, where he obtained a promise from Governor Ralston that if there was any more gambling at the track State troops would come to Porter and close the course. Last year Governor Marshall used this method with success.

SHRUBB'S RECORD BEATEN.

STOCKHOLM, July 7.—Jean Rouin, the French runner, in the one-hour race at the Stadium yesterday covered 19,021.90 meters (11 miles 1,443 yards). This beats the world's record of 11 miles 1,136 yards made by Alfred Shrubb, the English champion, in 1904, by 307 yards.

CAPRON IS BACK.

BALTIMORE, July 7.—Ralph Capron is back in the game for Baltimore, his injured ankle having mended.

DO YOU ITCH?

If so, use Tetterine. It cures eczema, ground itch, ringworm, itching piles, infant sore head and all other skin troubles. Read what C. B. Raus, Indianapolis, says:

Enclosed find $1. Send me that value in Tetterine. One box of Tetterine has done more for eczema in my family than $50 worth of other remedies I have tried.

Use Tetterine

It relieves skin trouble that has baffled the best medical skill. It will cure you. Get it to-day—Tetterine.

50c at druggists, or by mail. SHUPTRINE CO., SAVANNAH, GA.

Fortorich Offers Big Purse for Title Go

SAN FRANCISCO, July 7.—D. J. Tortorich, owner of the Westside Athletic Club at New Orleans, wired Willie Ritchie to-day offering a purse of $20,000 for a twenty-round fight between the champion and Jack Britton, of Chicago. If accepted, the fight will take place September 7. Danny Morgan, manager of Britton, has already accepted for his protege.

LEDOUX AND WILLIAMS WORKING FOR GO JULY 15

LOS ANGELES, July 7.—Charley Ledoux and Kid Williams are going after the training stunt as though they meant to make the July 15 bout a businesslike affair. The two have met in the ring before, and as both claim a victory at that meeting, the rivalry is especially keen.

The French bantamweight appears to be in great shape and went through his best work-outs since arriving in California yesterday at his Vernon camp. He showed considerable improvement over his previous work here.

At Venice Kid Williams gave a large crowd of assembled fans a good idea of his condition and showed them something of what he intends to do to Ledoux next week.

JOY FOR FRANK CHANCE.

NEW YORK, July 7.—F. Leroy Chance has moved from a pennant contender to a tail-ender. At first glance this would appear to be quite a jolt. But Chance accepts the situation with a philosophical calm. He no longer has to manage Heinie Zimmerman.

DENVER CLUB ON SALE.

DENVER, COLO., July 7.—President McGill wants to sell the Denver team of the Western League, it is said, and retire at the end of the season.

FODDER FOR FANS

The effete East should worry. Statistics compiled to-day show that Eddie Collins, of the Athletics, and Tris Speaker, of the Boston Americans, outbatted Ty Cobb and Joe Jackson, two mighty swat artists during the Eastern tour of the Western clubs.

* * *

When the Yankees leave to-night for Chicago, Manager Chance will carry two new hands with him. The new men are Tom Hanley, a left-handed pitcher, and Daniel Costello. Hanley is said to be able to unlesh some of the widest curves in captivity.

* * *

It is estimated that the Boston Nationals will clean up $50,000 this year. Predictions are made that George Stallings will have a first division team next year.

* * *

The baseball jinx has moved to Brooklyn. Charley Stengel, Bill Fisher and Bob Fisher have been swept from the Dodger line-up and Nap Rucker is reported to be nursing a sore shoulder.

* * *

"Stalling" was responsible for the Cubs' defeat in the second game of the Chicago-St. Louis double-header in the Windy City Sunday. A time limit had been set and the Cubs tried to delay the game. After warning Manager Evers three times, Umpire Eason declared the game forfeited to St. Louis.

* * *

The Cincinnati Reds used up three pitchers in the first game of their double-header with the Pirates Sunday. The Pirates won both games.

* * *

Charley Sterrett, former Princeton idol who signed with the Yankees last season, has been released to the Vernon, Cal., club of the Pacific Coast League.

* * *

In an interview published here to-day Christy Mathewson, of the Giants, predicts that the Phillies are now out of the running for the National League pennant. Nothing to it but the Giants, said Christy.

* * *

The White Sox got but one hit in the second game of their double-header with the Cleveland Naps yesterday. The Naps took both games.

THEFT NO WORSE THAN DODGING YOUR DEBTS

By B. C. FORBES.

There is a difference between "Mine" and "Thine." Many individuals, not a few companies and a few States and municipalities need to be reminded of this simple fact. Lax notions are prevalent on the subject.

* * *

A debt is a debt. All debts are debts of honor and should be honored. In these days of unthinking extravagance too many debts are light-heartedly incurred and not paid. The habit of getting into debt, like most bad habits, is alluring at first, but, also, like most bad habits undo their victims in the end.

* * *

The phrase falling "into debt" is apt. The descent is easy enough, but the climb back is usuallypainful.

* * *

This dissertation is inspired by the frequency of late with which corporations have failed to pay off obligations falling due. Instead of walking up to the counter and handing over one hundred cents on the dollar in hard cash, as was stipulated when the debt was incurred, borrowers have too frequently resorted to makeshifts, to temporizing, to compromising, such as offering, in lieu of cash, a new obligation for the old, with an intimation that if this be not accepted the lender will fare much worse.

* * *

The most brazen instance of such questionable conduct is afforded by Atchison, Kans. An issue of some $267,000 bonds of this city fell due Tuesday. Did the lenders promptly receive their money as they were entitled to? Oh, no. In Atchison, Kan., a debt is not a debt of honor, something that must be discharged. Just read what the Mayor has the effrontery to tell the holders, who, of course, have counted upon receiving their money—money which could be used at a high rate of interest to-day:

* * *

Atchison will have $266,950 4 per cent thirty-year bonds, issued in 1883, due July 1. In the past, it seems to have been their judgment that a sinking fund was not necessary.

I have inherited a debt—I would not repudiate it, but will defer it by offering a renewal fully as good as the one you hold.

I realize the opportunity of money at present, but as a representative of the taxpayers I can not increase their obligation on account of a temporary stringency in the money market.

A new bond for the old one, with the same rate that has satisfied for thirty years, ought to be acceptable under the adverse circumstances.

I regret that it is the best I have to offer.

* * *

"Regrets" don't pay bill. The holders of Atchison's bonds care nothing about the Mayor's sympathies; they want and are absolutely entitled to receive their money, every penny of it, the moment it fell due.

Medium-Sized Acreage Tracts

ALL of us know the profit that is usually made from acreage.

It is almost a conceded fact that if a person owns good acreage, he has a sure profit in it sooner or later. When we think of acreage propositions, we think of lots of land, and naturally lots of money, because the usual acreage transaction involves a great deal of money. The demand for good, close-in acreage for subdivision purposes is increasing every day. A trip to the outskirts of the city in any direction you choose to take will convince you of this fact. We are going to offer a tract of about 100 acres, between Decatur and East Lake, which we have cut up into five, ten and fifteen acre tracts. The price and terms on these tracts make it possible for almost anybody to handle them.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Two New Residences Will Total $40,000

Pegram and Kirk Plan Announced. Mr. Little Confirms Report. Small Sales in West End.

John D. Little confirmed Saturday the report that he would build a fine residence on Pace's Ferry Road opposite the property of John W. Grant, who will also build soon.

Mr. Little's plans are not definite, but for some time he has had landscape architects working on his eighteen acres, and W. T. Downing, the well-known architect, has been planning with them to determine the character of house that should be erected.

The town house of Mr. Little at the southwest corner of Peachtree and Eighth Streets will not be sold. It is one of the handsomest houses of colonial type in the city. The new house, said Mr. Little, will not be a duplicate of the other.

There are other signs of activity in this section of North Fulton. Sam Pegram has plans for a $15,000 brick veneer dwelling of two stories at the southeast corner of Muscogee Avenue and Rivers Drive. He will build at once.

E. R. Kirk is building a $25,000 residence on Andrews Avenue, 400 feet north of Peachtree. This is two stories and of brick veneer and stone construction.

Satisfactory progress is being made on the residences of Hunt Chipley, on Wesley Avenue, and Robert Zanner and Clark McMichael, on Peachtree Road, near Wesley Avenue.

West End Park Sales.

The West End Park Company has announced the sale, through Collins Mrothers & Davies, of a two-story residence on Stokes Avenue, near Ontario Avenue, West End Park, to a client of the above agency, for $5,500, and to H. S. Norris from the park company direct of the one-story dwelling at the southwest corner of the same thoroughfares, for $3,500.

Loan Rate Reduction.

Borrowers of money on real estate report a reduction in the last few weeks on loan rates. While money was held at 8 per cent recently, a good deal of it can now be had at 7 per cent. In fact, a local real estate agency is advertising $10,000 at 7 per cent on improved property, and much larger amounts than this can be obtained. Bankers foresaw a temporary stringency and prepared for it, and now they are in a position to extend accommodations in judicious measure.

For Early Whitehall Regrade.

Whitehall regrading will be considered again at the next meeting of Council. Councilman George H. Boynton introduced a resolution providing that work start as soon as Comptroller Goldsmith certifies that the property owners have paid in their share of expense, but objection on the part of Councilman Claude L. Ashley and others caused postponement. It has already been agreed to start the job October 15.

The pith of the objection was that other work more important would suffer if Whitehall were regraded now. The Butler Street sewer work was given as an illustration.

It is estimated that the first installment will be $11,287.97, and property owners have agreed to pay the city the difference between the appropriation of $3,500 and the estimated cost.

To Sell 24 Residence Lots.

J. T. Kimbrough & Co. have placed on private sale 24 building lots on the East Lake, South Decatur, South Kirkwood, Soldiers' Home and Stone Mountain car lines, all the lots within a block of city schools, on terms of $25 down and $10 a month at 7 per cent. The price of the lots is $750. Improvements consist of tile sidewalks, sewerage and water.

Interest in Car Line Change.

The proposal to change the route of the river car line, as presented to Council, has created a great deal of interest on the part of people residing on the west side of the city. General Manager Glenn wants to open the street at Marietta and Forsyth Streets and let incoming river cars run up Walton Street from the Marietta Street intersection. Cars will turn to the right at Forsyth and to the right again at Marietta. Passengers will enter at Marietta and Forsyth Streets, rather than at Broad. The Streets Committee of Council approved the plan.

Start Soon on West Peachtree.

The West Peachtree Improvement Club announced Saturday that all will be in readiness soon for work on West Peachtree retaining walls, the same having been authorized by the Streets Committee of the City Council. The wall work will be started as soon as contracts can be let for materials, the city to do the construction. When the walls are completed the county will do the regrading, and this will be not later than September 15, according to Shelby Smith, of the County Commission.

Prominent in the West Peachtree movement have been Judge Spencer R. Atkinson, Judge E. W. Born, Frank P. Rice, Dr. William Owens, James T. Wright and others.

Frank West in Winnipeg.

H. Frank West, of the A. J. & H. F. West real estate agency, has reached Winnipeg, Manitoba, on an extensive Western trip, and writes back that elaborate preparations are being made to entertain the sixth annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges this month. Mr. West states that special attention will be given the Atlanta delegation.

What Race Track Gambling Did for One Man

It Has Done the Same and Worse for Many Another. No ROMANCE in This

(Copyright, 1913.)

A reader asks us to print a brief account of one man's gambling experience, published in a newspaper at El Paso, Texas.

He writes: "The story is one of the most direct appeals on the subject I have ever read, and if presented with the forcible coloring you are prepared to give it, it will undoubtedly 'go home' to those who are just starting to feel what the man it tells about must have felt when he still had the opportunity of honorably quitting the game."

We print the story exactly as the El Paso newspaper printed it—no "coloring" is needed.

We say once more to the young men tempted by gambling, and to fathers and mothers careless about their sons' associations:

GAMBLING IS THE WORST, MOST DANGEROUS VICE IN CIVILIZATION.

It is worse than drink, for it destroys honor, as well as health.

Gambling long maintained will make any man a thief or a worse criminal.

There is NO honorable professional gambler, as there is no honorable professional burglar.

Gambling leads to sorrow, poverty, disgrace and crime.

Here is the plain story of one gambler, published in the Texas newspaper:

OLD STORY OF RUIN IN THE RACING GAME.

The Man Who Followed It, Precariously and Otherwise, for Years, and His Sad Ending.

It is the old story of ruin from the racing game. He drifted to El Paso when the Juarez track was opened for the first time. Then he claimed to be representing a string of Eastern papers as racing correspondent. But this was only for the purpose of obtaining a badge and admission to the press box. That first season was a hard one for the followers of the game, and he finally started issuing racing results in the form of posters to be hung in saloons and restaurants and cigar stores at the close of the day's racing. This made him a living and left him a little margin to play on the ponies, and that was all life held for him. In summer, when the racing plant in Juarez was closed, he would drift from place to place, where short meets were held, and he succeeded in getting a living in some manner unknown to his friends.

One rainy Sunday morning, in a little second-class restaurant, he told the story of his downfall. It is the cut-and-dried story of the effect of racing on young men. But it was true as he told it. Once he had been the confidential man and assistant manager of a big book binding and stationery house in Buffalo. He was earning a good salary with the promise of a place in the firm soon. Then the company decided to open a branch plant in Chicago to supply the bank and wholesale trade. The young man was selected as the branch manager because of his ability. He went to Chicago and was doing a big business for the firm and had received a half dozen raises since the branch was opened.

One Saturday afternoon in summer he spent his half holiday at the track where the horses were running. He laid a bet for fun. He won and wagered another. This likewise doubled his money, and he plunged. The germ had entered his blood, and he started a consistent policy of race track gambling.

The inevitable happened and he lost his position. Naturally, he turned to the easy money game which had cost him his job. He became a bookmaker, a sheet writer and a gambler. He followed the game to Florida when it was outlawed in Illinois. From there he went from place to place, finally landing in El Paso. By that time he was middle-aged and there were streaks of gray in his hair. When the races closed last spring he was neither physically nor financially able to follow the crowd to Latonia.

He remained here and lived the best he could. His brooding resulted in his making $1,000,000 mind bets on favorites in races that had been run. Wednesday night he was detained by the police on suspicion of being insane. His brooding over his downfall had been too much for his mind, and it had failed him. He is now in the county jail, where he will be held until he is examined by an insanity board.

An Appeal for a Famous American Name

Julian Hawthorne a few days ago observed his sixty-seventh birthday in the Federal penitentiary here in Atlanta. This month he will be entitled to a parole, and thousands of admirers of his distinguished father and friends of the son, who think him more sinned against than sinning, will shortly lay their views and their appeal before President Wilson.

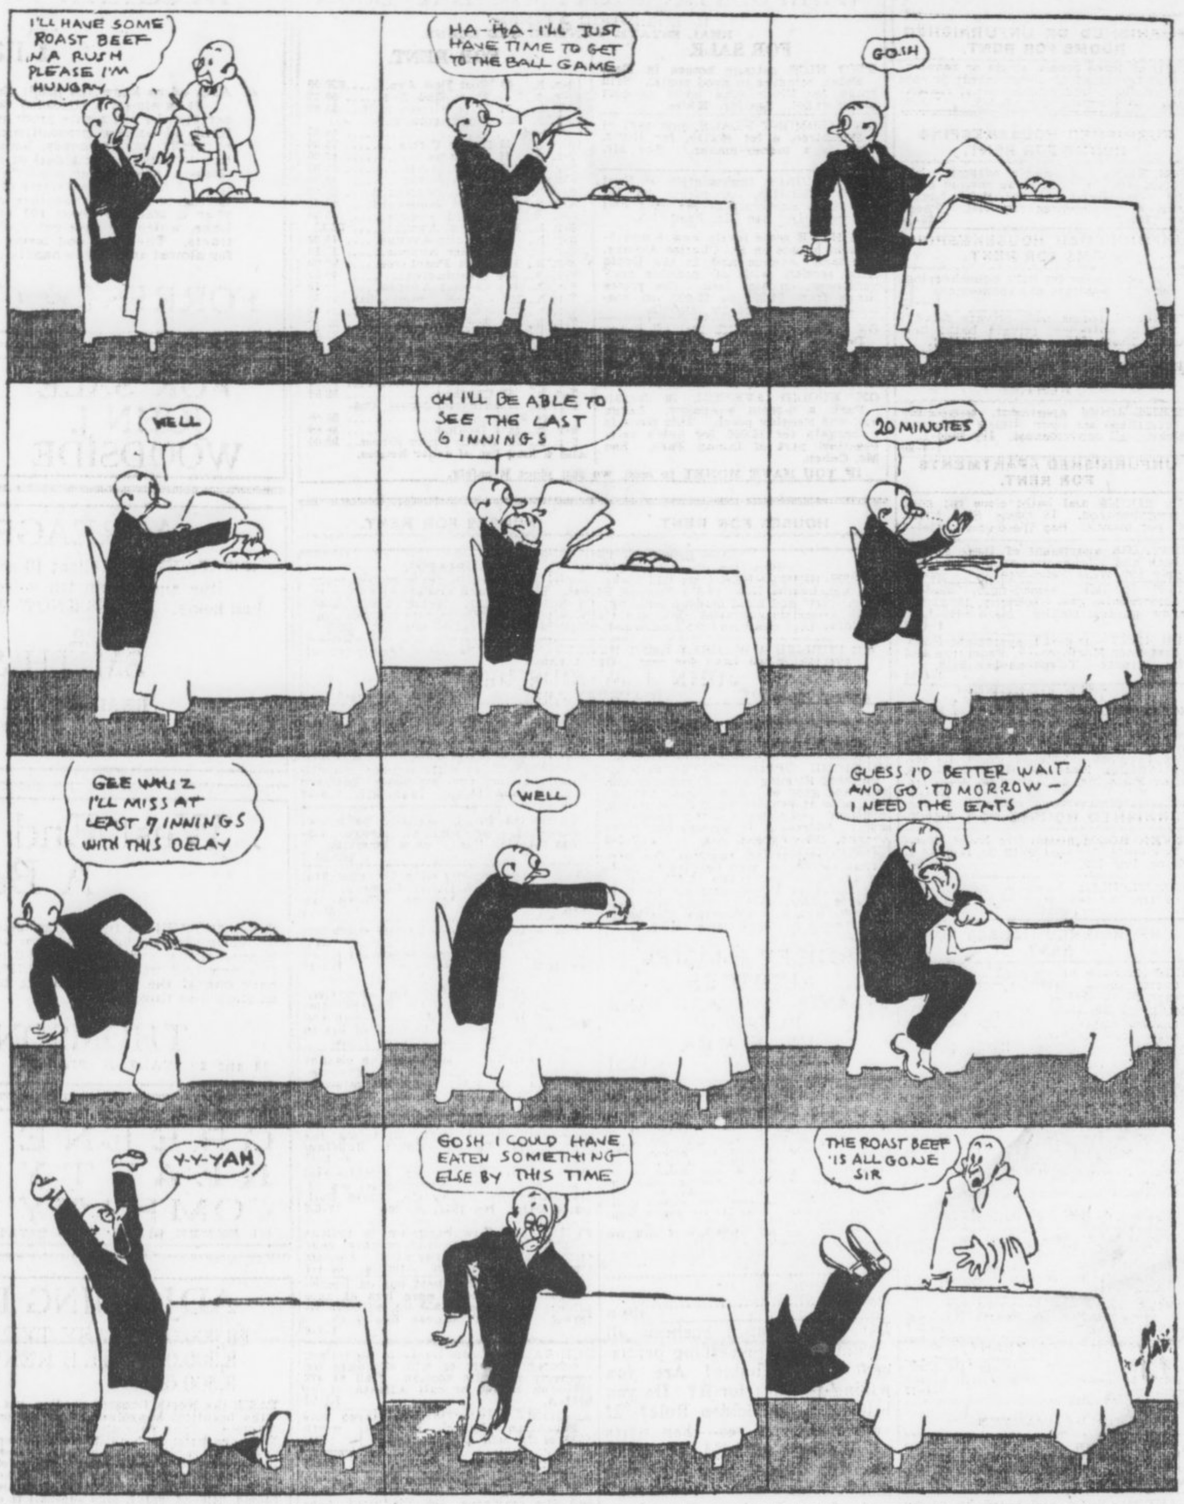
The President will be told that Julian Hawthorne was misled by evil associates in the lending of his name to get-rich-quick swindlers, from which he profited little or nothing; and that he was as much the dupe of his crooked associates as those victims who purchased stocks in the enterprises which his name was used to exploit.

This son of a brilliant American now finds himself in his old age humiliated before the eyes of the nation and in the eyes of the literary men of the world—through his own weakness and ignorance of the harsher ways of the world.

If a chief conspirator, like C. W. Morse, can be pardoned, why not a dupe, after he has been as bitterly punished as has Julian Hawthorne?

This newspaper gladly joins all admirers of Nathaniel Hawthorne in their efforts for his son and in their appeal to the President to relegate, as soon as possible, this record sinister on a famous name to the generous domain of the forgotten.

Did It Ever Occur to You?



Ella Wheeler Wilcox Writes on Motherhood

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

(Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner.)

GIRLS of seventeen are not, as a rule, given to serious thought.

Even marriage at sixteen seldom awakens the real woman in a year.

But there are rare exceptions.

Such an exception has been found in a young wife of seventeen, who is suddenly aware that she is to become a mother in four months' time.

Now she is filled with awe, and with anxiety! She says: "I have always had an ideal of exerting a good influence over an unborn child; and now I am distressed to think that all these months have passed without any conscious effort on my part. I have played ball, swam and indulged in other athletics according to my regular custom. And in leisure moments I have read Milton and Shakespeare and Burns.

"I am splendidly well, but I am most anxious lest I have done things I ought not to do, and left undone other things at this critical time.

Moderation in All Things.

"What can I do for the next few months to benefit my unborn child?"

The very best thing this young mother expectant can do is to exercise with moderation, rest when she feels like it, eat and drink with moderation, and wisdom, and be happy and trust God.

Motherhood is the most natural thing in the world for women who are normal and in good health.

It often produces a normal, healthful condition for those who are not well.

Nature never intended any woman to utterly change her mode of life when expecting a child, if her mode of life had been a reasonable and sensible one previously.

Outdoor life and athletics are both reasonable and sensible, and more harm would have resulted to both mother and child by giving them up suddenly, and taking too great concern about a perfectly natural condition, than by continuing to indulge in these pastimes as long as this young woman did.

No doubt the coming child will be strong in body, with excellent lung power.

And its coming into this plane of existence will not be attended with any abnormal difficulties.

Outdoor Life and Exercise.

We must remember that the Indian woman rides her horse, and performs all sorts of laborious tasks up to the very hour of her delivery.

The wife of an army officer told the writer of frequently seeing such women drop out of line for a few hours and return to the tribe later with the new-born child wrapped in a blanket.

All women who live an outdoor life, and who exercise in the open air, have less complications in maternity than those reared under hothouse conditons.

This young mother of seventeen, who takes such a serious view of her responsibility, is certain to bring a strong, beautiful child into the world, and equally sure of guiding it into a splendid maturity.

The Difficult Hours.

She need only fill her mind with love thoughts, and with faith in God and trust in the Unseen Powers which govern this earth, to have all go well with her.

In God's great universe, there are Guardian Angels provided for every mortal, and in such degree as we love and reverence these angels, and as we live worthy of them, do they guide and help us in our difficult hours.

If we refuse to believe in them, or continually think and talk and act in a way to pain them, we alienate them and deprive them of their power to help us.

About the expectnat mother are bands of Shining Ones, and if she will rest happy in the thought of their protection, and regard them as messengers and emissaries from God Himself, great strength and peace and happiness will come to her.

And great blessings upon her child.

For of such are the Kingdom of Heaven.

PERFUMED POWDER

By WEX JONES.

THE newest skirt for woman—it's a risky thing to knock it.
For it's cutely fitted up with a cunning pistol pocket.

Oh, should you argue with the fair,
Powder smoke will fill the air;
Bullets whizzy
Will make you dizzy;
You had better bow and scoot
Before the girl begins to shoot.
Because—this here is cowboy lore—
Words are nix with a forty-four.

Still, speaking of this latest fad, this cunning pistol pocket,
Here, I think, are several things extremely prone to block it;

A handkerchief
And a powder puff;
Some trading stamps
And a manicure buff;
Smelling salts
And a pocket glass;
Jumbled up
With a theater pass.
A recipe
For custard pie;
A headache cure
And a hook and eye——

The list's a good bit longer, but here I'll have to dock it.
For I've used up all the space allowed the lady's pistol pocket.

Rev. John E. White Writes on Sex in Religion

Woman Is the Mainstay of the Church and Expresses the Innermost Soul of Religion More Powerfully Than Man; Yet, He Says, She Has Had to Fight Against the Masculine Protest for Every Inch of Recognition in the Affairs of the Church.

WRITTEN FOR THE GEORGIAN

By REV. DR. JOHN E. WHITE

Pastor Second Baptist Church

"MADAM I may not call you, and mistress I loath to call you. I know not what to call you, but I thank you for your good cheer."

These are the words of Queen Elizabeth greeting the wife of Archbishop Parker. They indicate in a kindly temper the ecclesiastical ban on womanhood in the eighteenth century, which made even the wife of an archbishop a nonentity.

Put over against this the words of three great theologians—Tertullian, Erasmus, Rabelais—"Woman, thou art the gate of hell"—"An absurd and ridiculous animal"—"The greater part of them have hardly principles and depend for their morals on those they love."

This is the exhibit of the centuries on the subject of Sex in Religion up to the nineteenth. What we have of it in the twentieth century is equally banal, and much of it lingers in the modern religious world.

The Bar Sinister in Church.

It is an answer seeming fair, and pious to the point, when the limitations of female opportunity are protested, to say that in the church and in religion women have nothing to complain of; that they are free to exercise themselves in the work of the Lord.

If this were true, 'twere very true and very good. But the record of fact is discouraging.

From the beginning women have occupied no position of authority in the church. "Her voice has never been heard at a council, nor has her pen ever formulated a decree. Looking at religion in history, one would suppose at first sight that it was almost entirely a masculine affair.

Man has formulated its metaphysics, erected its theologies, founded and governed its institutions. He is its pope, priest and prophet; its legislator, preacher and pastor." From the Judean Decalogue, which includes the wife—"thy neighbor's wife"—in the list of man's chattels, down to the recent records of the Southern Baptist Convention and the Methodist Conference, the sex "bar-sinister" has persisted.

The fact readily acknowledged that women are the mainstay of religion has been strangely ineffective in overcoming the masculine prejudice against her religious equality.

Religion's Better Half.

The fixed prohibition, "thus far shalt thou come, but no further," has, however, not prevented women from exercising a powerful influence upon religious progress. The woman nature which expresses the innermost soul of religion more intimately than the man's, has projected itself tremendously, notwithstanding the ecclesiastical limitations set upon it.

Indirectly she has sweetened the sour theologians and softened the severe theologies. Through Monica we have Augustine, through Macrina we have Basil and Gregory, "who led them both to the faith and stirred them to their best work."

This list is a long one—through Jacqueline, Paschal, through Paula, Jerome, through Susanna Wesley, the Methodist Church, etc. But these consoling examples only make the wonder deeper that Christianity should have esteemed its most reliable exponent unworthy of absolute equality.

It scarcely meets the case to prove by illustrious examples that women are indispensable factors in religion. So have been the martyrs and the persecuted of all ages through what difficulties we know.

For the past century the woman movement in religion has been breaking through the barriers. In the Protestant communions the battle has gone on steadily and successfully, and so quietly as scarcely to be a battle. Yet in every one of the great denominations the right of woman to recognition as an equal co-laborer with man in the Kingdom of God has been challenged and opposed at every step. Mrs. Doremus for thirty years kept up the fight before the women were permitted to organize the first Woman's Missionary Society.

Among Southern Baptists 25 years ago a similar proposition was silently protested by the majority and outspokenly resisted by thousands. Among Southern Methodists a petition has been pending for years to give the women not equal, but more generous representation in the direction of the missionary funds contributed by themselves.

Fighting for Her Soul.

Speaking by the card, I have made efforts in country churches to organize women's societies, for doing the sort of work every Christian is commanded to do, only to discover insuperable prejudices in the minds of the brethren.

At the bottom of this discreditable history of female repression in religion lies the jealousy of the masculine prerogative. The principle of pernicious proxy, the right of the husband to discharge religious obligations for the wife is persistent to this hour in the practice of the churches.

It amounts in effect to a layman's priest craft, in which the man assumes to stand between the woman's soul and the free and full discharge of its responsibility in practical duty.

Now the clouds are breaking away and man is beginning to relent. It will be a good day for religion when the competency of every woman under God for all the freedom an individual soul is decreed for, without reference to sex, is heartily and universally proclaimed and enforced.

Letters From The Georgian's Readers

THE SYRIANS.

Editor The Georgian:

The recent case of naturalization in which Judge Henry A. M. Smith, of South Carolina, was interested, induces me to write the following: Judge Smith contends that Syrians are not entitled to citizenship in the United States. He has the right to give or refuse naturalization to the Syrian of his State, but the reasons given by him are not based on facts, and history does not support his position.

When we consider the part the Syrians have played in the history and development of the world, we readily see they are in no way connected with or related to the Sudanese. Three of the greatest monarchies of the ancient world—Chaldea, Assayria and Babylonia—were evolved and developed by the Syrian nation.

The inhabitants of Kurdistan, who are regarded as the descendants of the Syrians, not only speak a Semitic language, but believe themselves to be the same race with the Arabs and the same traditions are held of Syrians, who in their brief historical fragments recognize as their kinsmen the later Babylonians, Phoenicians and the Joktonian Arabs.

The Semitic race—that is the name of this division—was derived from Noah's son Shem, and this term Semitic has been adopted by scholars as probably de-

who, branching from beyond Syria, carried their tribe into Northern Arabia, across the Red Sea and Upper Egypt into the African Desert, northward into Armenia, westward into Canaan and far out through the Mediterranean, touched the coast of Africa, and reaching even to Europe, Britain and spreading out to America. There has never been any mixing between the Syrians and the Sudanese. A great mountain range has ever separated the two races of people.

"THE HALF-MILLION" CITY.

Editor The Georgian:

I desire to subscribe to the spirit and purpose and to be enrolled as a member of the "Half-Million Club."

Great civic benefit can be accomplished by an emblem which will exemplify the spirit of Atlanta, the "Half-Million City," as advocated by The Georgian. You are to be congratulated in voicing the virile enthusiasm of the people.

Where else can you find a community that will subscribe in a single day something over $75,000 to entertain the Shriners' national convention, and almost a like amount that the city may enjoy, for one week, the most celebrated singers of the world? Atlanta's splendid banks, its lofty buildings, well-appointed hotels, excellent railroad facilities and geographical location make possible the ideal—the "Half-Million City"—in 1920.
