NEW TAX LAW IS CRYING NEED, SAYS ANDERSON

President of Senate Declares That Archaic System Now in Vogue Is State's Great Drawback.

GEORGIA'S CREDIT IS HURT

Reasonable Loans Can't Be Made on Georgia Property on Account of Absurd Returns.

J. Randolph Anderson, President of the Senate of Georgia, in an interview furnished The Sunday American, discusses the great problem of tax reform, now the paramount issue before the General Assembly.

Mr. Anderson, experienced in legislation and far-seeing in business affairs, has no illusions as to what tax reform means, and as to how it must be accomplished.

He regards it as a most perplexing proposition, and he thinks that it will test the ingenuity and statesmanship of the Legislature heavily to effect tax reform equitably and in result-getting shape.

Mr. Anderson said:

The military nature of the original colony of Georgia gave to our people characteristics of order, discipline or conservatism and steadiness which persist to this day. In our own time when the people of some of the States of this country are running after new gods and ideals in politics, Georgia, one of the most progressive of them all, in all essentials to health and happiness, has not been swept off her feet by either agitation or fanaticism, but holds fast to her well-tried moorings and her ancient faiths.

In this spirit we come to-day to grapple with the problems that confront us. So far as this General Assembly is concerned the most urgent and most important question that faces us is the financial condition of Georgia. We all know that there is a serious deficit in our treasury. It is a situation with which I am quite familiar, and I believe I was the first to point out its existence and the need for taking steps to remedy it.

Toward the close of the session of 1910 I was asked by the then chairman of the Senate Appropriation Committee, now the distinguished Speaker of the House, to give him some information about the condition of the State treasury to use in a speech he wished to make in the Senate. After the close of that session I gave out an interview publishing the result of my investigation, in which I pointed out the existence of a deficit and calculated that by the year 1913 it would amount to $787,000.

Prediction Was Correct.

It may be remembered that my views and conclusions were biterly assailed in the public press, and that it finally resulted in an audit being had of the State's financial status. To-day we realize the painful truth that my prediction was approximately correct. This deficit, we know, is not due to any lack of material resources in the State, but simply to the miserably inadequate and insufficient methods we have under our laws for the ascertainment and collection of taxes.

The State, instead of being run as a business institution, is practically an object of charity so far as its tax revenues are concerned.

We boast of being the Empire State of the South, yet the figures we are compelled to exhibit to the world do not bear out our claim. The condition is injurious to the State and to our people in more ways than a failure to provide sufficient revenues to run the State and its institutions.

A friend of mine in a county adjacent to this one attempted to effect arrangements in the North and East for securing money to lend out on Georgia real estate. His glowing descriptions of the wealth and progress of Georgia were cut short by the simple reply: "Yuor State's figures show you to be among the poorest of States. You have tax values of only about $50 millions, while much smaller States have values in excess of one billion, and States of aproximately your size show values of two billions and upward." In this way the present system is a serious injury to the State's credit, and this is a grave matter for us to consider, especially at this time when we have to refund some three millions of the State's debt. This same system is also a direct injury to the individual citizen.

This friend I have mentioned had an application for a loan of $2,800 upon a piece of property which he considered to be worth at least $6,000. He recommended the loan, but was notified he had omitted to send on the tax valuation of the property. On looking this up he was horrified to find that it was returned at only $500. In the face of this sworn return the loan was declined.

Evils Are Recognized.

The evils, the injustice and the rank discriminations of the present system are now apparently recognized and admitted by every one. What is the remedy? To such new sources of taxes will be adding only a drop in the bucket. Some new taxes may be wise, but they will only be palliative. They will not cure the ills we suffer from, and on many of our people the tax burden is already felt to be a heavy one. In my judgment, what is needed most of all and first of all, is a thoroughgoing revision of our whole taxing and financial system, and the installation, under the advice of expert accountants, of a modern up-to-date system of keeping the accounts of the State and of its various departments and institutions, with adequate provisions for proper periodic auditing. This is the foundation which must first be laid, and after this is done, and not till then, can we wisely or safely say what our further needs may really require.

The cornerstone of the whole business is and must be a proper and conservative method of tax equalization. Kansas is a poorer State than Georgia, yet in Kansas the tax values are over two billions. We have in reality more than that. If we see to it that our real values, or even approximately our real values, are put upon the books, we could reduce our tax rate from five mills to two and a half mills and yet receive a half million more in revenues than we now get from our ad valorem taxes.

The problem is one which the present General Assembly has to solve. We see our school teachers remaining unpaid, though more than half the year is gone. We see our State institutions unable to keep pace with the needs which the growth of the State is imperatively demanding of them.

Boll Weevil Is Coming.

We know that the boll weevil is crossing our borders—the greatest menace that has threatened our prosperity in a generation—yet we have no money to take any adequate steps to protect our fields and our farmers from its ravages. The situation is one to make us hang our heads in shame that a great State—our State—should be brought so low; but I am not dismayed. I know the men and the temper of this General Assembly. They have come here to do business. They have learned that the root of our troubles is the lack of a proper system of tax equalization and with the firmness and steadiness of our people they will go straight to the mark, and will not rest until the work is done. I confidently expect that by another year Georgia can lift up her head again and say to her sister States, "I have put my house in order, who can boast of a fairer domain or can make a better showing now than I?"

Husband Enjoined From Killing Wife

Woman Enters Suit for Divorce and Then Obtains Restraining Order to Prevent Slaying.

HUNTINGTON, W. VA., July 12.—Mrs. Bertha A. Nigh, after filing a suit for divorce in the Circuit Court, applied to Judge Graham for an injunction that would restrain her husband from "murdering her."

After listening to the woman's story of abuse from her husband, Judge Graham granted the injunction and sent an officer to serve it on Nigh with instructions to bring him into court unless he agreed to stay out of the section of the city where his wife was living.

When Mrs. Nigh left her husband a few days ago and went to live with a woman friend, she told him that she was going to seek a divorce. Nigh tried to kill her, but was stopped by neighbors. He then threatened that he would kill her the first time he had the opportunity.

Law Perils Loveliest Limb Display

Council Would Drape Its Glories And World's Shapeliest Are Billed

At the top is shown Mlle. Spinelli, who Paris says owns the most beautiful nether limbs, while below are Rena Wandell and Marjorie Beverelly, her foremost American rivals.

Mlle. Spinelli Is on Her Way to America, and Follies Are Traveling.

Atlanta, it seems, will lose the opportunity it might have had to view the most delectable attractions that the American stage of next season will offer.

For one thing, Mlle. Spinelli is coming to America in vaudeville, and probably to Atlanta. And Mlle. Spinelli, be it known, is the reigning sensation of Paris, dear, discriminating Paris, because, besides her winsomeness and charm, she is said to possess the most artistic and perfectly shaped legs in all Europe.

Everyone Knows Ziegfeld's Specialty.

And then Ziegfeld's Follies already has started its 1913 tour, with Atlanta booked along the route. All the world and his brother knows that Florenz Ziegfeld is a connoisseur of feminine beauty, particularly that variety of beauty that is displayed to best advantage by a costume of tights and abbreviated skirts. In the Follies of 1913 especially are two young women, Rena Wandell and Marjorie Beverelly, who are said to possess the most artistic and perfectly shaped nether limbs in all America.

In the theatrical world the legs of Spinelli and those of Ziegfeld's Follies' cast have come to be regarded as contestants for the crown of beauty. At some time a decision must be made, now that both parties to the contest are in Atlanta. Atlanta might have had an opportunity to judge, but——

But There's Boynton.

George M. Boynton, of the City Council of Atlanta, has presented to that body a resolution asking for an ordinance prohibiting the appearance of girls wearing tights or too short or scant dresses in theaters. The reporters who record the news and views of the Council are ready to prophesy the passage of the ordinance. If they are correct, then it means that Atlanta's most promising stage features of the 1913 season might as well be canceled.

For a Ziegfeld show decorously clad is no Ziegfeld show at all, and Spinelli with her artistic legs sheathed is a glory veiled.

Ambassador in Novel Declares Himself Ashamed of Native Section.

Aroused over statements Walter H. Page, Ambassador to the Court of St. James, made in his book, "The Southerners," in which it is declared he abused and derided Southerners through a false portrayal of them, the editors of Neale's Magazine in their July issue question Mr. Page's ability to represent the American people. The sharp criticism of the Ambassador, who is a native of the South, is the first offering in the publication and is entitled "Ambassador Page No Southerner."

The novel "The Southerners" first appeared as a serial in the Atlantic Monthly, and was written by Mr. Page under the pseudonym of "Nicholas Worth. Besides the review of the book there is editorial comment in Neale's Magazine questioning Mr. Page's Americanism, one paragraph of which reads:

"But Ambassador Page seems to hold the American section in which he was born and reared—a section that comprises about one-fourth the area and nearly one-fourth of the population of the United States—to be un-American because sectional. We are all Americans—unless Mr. Page be an exception—and worthier Americans because of our affection for the ward, borough, city, county and State in which we live."

Looked Down on By All.

Some of the criticisms of Mr. Page in the review of his book follow:

"We found that Nicholas Worth, the professed author of the book, was a man whose environment in the South had evidently been among persons who were not recognized in that section as typical—in fact, who had no social recognition whatever, but who lived to themselves and were looked down upon by whites and blacks alike.

"There are scenes in this book that are so coarse that we will not bring them into this review. It is sufficient to say that they were used to vilify the white race.

"Nicholas Worth and his kind never stood socially high in the South; he was no gentleman; his associates were not gentlemen; his antecedents had a defective sense of the difference that exists between right and wrong.

"Nicholas Worth holds Confederate veterans in utter contempt, and throughout his book Confederates are roundly abused, and he also abuses their organization and other Southern patriotic bodies, such as the Daughters of the Confederacy. Nicholas Worth denies that there was any intellectuality among the women of the South. He frequently speaks of the lack of culture of all the people among whom he was reared.

Ashamed of Section.

"Nicholas Worth, the Southerner, is ashamed of being a Southerner. He holds that there is no negro social problem. He does not find objectionable the marriage of a mulatto girl to a white man. He meets the negro woman on the terms of equality.

"The book now becomes important because of Mr. Page's position as the Ambassador of all the American people to Great Britain. In London the book is being hailed as a true expression of the South, for Mr. Page was born in the South, and they naturally suppose that a Southern President appointing a man of Southern birth has appointed a representative Southerner."

3 Chicken Freaks Are Born in 10 Days

Naked Leghorn, Horned Rhode Island Red, and Whistling "Biddy" All on One Farm.

EVERETT, WASH., July 12.—Jay Sigworth, a poultry fancier, is the possessor of three barnyard freaks, hatched within ten days, and is wondering what new creation his chickens will spring on him. He defies even Winsted, Conn., to beat the following combination:

A White Leghorn hen hatched one chick which runs about as naked as a lizard. A Rhode Island chick has a well defined horn protruding from near the tip of its beak.

Another chick refuses to "peep" as a proper chick should and takes great delight in its talent for whistling. It will stand apart from its mates and whistle a distinct note, lasting about twelve seconds.

Savannah to Save On Street Sweeping

City Engineer Declares Atlanta Gets Brooms $10 Each Cheaper Than He Has Been Paying.

SAVANNAH, July 12.—As a result of the recent inspection by City Engineer E. R. Conant of street paving in other cities, a saving of about $600 annually will be effected in Savannah in the matter of street-sweeping brooms.

Atlanta, Conant found, is paying a little more than $4 apiece for its brooms, while Savannah has for years been buying them at $14. In Atlanta a laborer is employed by the city to make the brooms, the city purchasing the necessary materials. The laborer gets $1.50 a day.

Arrangements will at once be made to have these brooms made in Savannah as they are in Atlanta.

Poor Roads Called Cause of Illiteracy

President of Association Says Good Schools Will Come With Improved Highways.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 12.—Illiteracy is caused chiefly by poor roads, according to Charles H. Davis, president of the National Highway Association, in an address before the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education at its twenty-first annual convention.

"We can not have good schools, unless we have good roads," he said.

Albert Ross Hill, president of the University of Missouri, arraigned the State Legislature, alleging that their false economy crippled the State universities.

Monkeys Wanted in Pellagra Research

Advertisement Posted by Marine Hospital in Savannah—Sailors May Supply Simians.

SAVANNAH, July 12.—An advertisement for twelve monkeys posted at the customs house has aroused interest among sailors. The simians are wanted for use in the Marine Hospital Service. Sealed proposals will be received until noon July 16.

It is presumed that the monkeys are wanted for experimental purposes to learn whether moldy and spoiled corn will cause pellagra. Dr. C. H. Laindar, in charge of the hospital, will not discuss the matter, but it is known that experiments with monkeys are being made in this connection.

MAYOR AUTHORIZED TO GET TEMPORARY LOAN

SAVANNAH, July 12.—In order to overcome all legal obstacles, and acting on the advice of the City Attorney, the City Council has passed a resolution authorizing Mayor Richard J. Davant to obtain a temporary loan of $80,000 to supply a casual inefficiency in the city treasury incident to the purchase of a refuse incinerating plant.

EVERY ARTIST CALLED INSANE BY ALIENISTS

Chicago Colony Excited by the Charge Made at Convention of Nerve Specialists.

CHICAGO, July 12.—A wave of excited indignation rolled up from Chicago's art colony and beat upon the Hotel Sherman, where prominent alienists and nerve specialists are holding convention.

The direct charge by the lunacy specialists that all artists, sculptors and poets are essentially unbalanced and the intimation that had Rubens, Michelangelo, Hugo, Browning, Byron, Keats and Shelley been examined by competent alienists they would have been put in insane asylums, provoked all the warmth.

"Such statements," said Director French, of the Chicago Art Institute, "lead artists to believe that all doctors, or at least all alienists, are insane and should be incarcerated in a big madhouse."

Having consigned the persons of temperament to the asylum, the alienists took a fresh tack. Dr. Cheston King, of Atlanta, Ga., who volunteered that exaggerated ideas of love and beauty had caused the mental downfall of the artists and poets, worked the discussion around to a pronouncement that "love itself is only a form of insanity."

CARNEGIE, THE LAUGHING MILLIONAIRE, AS THE LATE WILLIAM T. STEAD SAW HIM

Famous Editor Gives a Lot of Reasons Why the Steel-Master Is Able to Laugh, and Quotes Some of His Terse Remarks.

Has No Sympathy or Desire to Aid the Average Man, but Thinks Help Should Be Bestowed to Assist Brilliant Men Higher.

The following life story of Andrew Carnegie is interesting, not only as the record of a successful business man, but also as one of the last writings of William T. Stead, the famous editor, who went down with the Titanic.

Mr. Stead's acquaintance with Carnegie enabled him to write with conviction.

By W. T. STEAD.

Mr. Carnegie is a millionaire who laughs. He is one of the greatest of millionaires and yet he is at the same time one of the heartiest of laughers. He says:

"Beyond a competence for old age, wealth lessens rather than increases human happiness. The most miserable of men, as old age approaches, are those who have made money-making their God, like flies bound to the wheel those unfortunates fondly believed they were really driving it, only to find when tired and craving rest that it is impossible for them to get off and they are lost—passing into nothingness, leaving their money behind for heirs to quarrel over, only because they can not take it with them—a melancholy end much less enviable then that of their poorer fellows."

How is it, then, that Mr. Carnegie has escaped the common doom of the limited but unfortunate class to which he belongs? How is it that instead of being a careworn custodian of wealth beyond the dreams of avarice he is still a millionaire who laughs?

He has passed the three-score years and ten, the proverbial span of human life. But old age has neither saddened him nor soured him.

Mr. Metchnikoff recently propounded the theory, based largely upon a study of the life of Goethe, that youth is the period of pessimism and that it is only in old age man ripens into optimism. Andrew Carnegie is certainly not less an optimist in his seventy-second year than he was when he was 17.

It is difficult for strangers to realize the youthful enthusiasm which makes this man, laden with the care of millions, as light-hearted as a boy of 16 without a penny in his pocket.

Some of the Reasons Why He Laughs.

The contributory causes of this desirable and rare equipoise are many. To begin with, he inherited a good constitution. He came of splendid old Scottish stock, and was brought up on porridge and the Book of Proverbs.

He honored his father and his mother, and his days have been long according to the promise, for he eschewed all the vices of youth, and devoted himself from the first decade to helping his parents to meet the household expenses.

He has never smoked, and, if he is not an absolute teetotaler, he is certainly extremely abstemious in the matter of alcohol.

To look habitually upon the bright side of things, always to take short views and to encounter the future with a cheerful confidence that the tendency is upward and onward, and that the law governing all things tends to the survival of the fittest and the evolution of the best, such is the comfortable philosophy with which Mr. Carnegie has confronted the world.

Mr. Herbert Spencer, when he visited Mr. Carnegie in his domain, remarked that a month in Pittsburg would justify any man in committing suicide. Mr. Carnegie does not live in Pittsburg. He spends half of the year in New York and the rest of it at his country seat, Skibo Castle, on Dornoch Firth.

Mr. Carnegie amassed his millions much more easily than he can give them away. He started less than ten years ago on the task of distribution. He had then $300,000,000, which brought him in an annual income of between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000. He has succeeded in giving away $125,000,000, and the capital of his fortune is larger than it was when he started.

The pile won't grow smaller. The more he gives away the more it increases. It is the miracle of the widow's cruse over again. In 1911 Mr. Carnegie said to me, "I shall find it a much heavier task giving it away than making it. It is so easy to do harm when you wish to do good, but I intend to apply myself to the study of the best methods of using this vast accumulation of wealth."

Mr. Carnegie has given away $41,000 in round numbers every day for ten years past.

Mr. Carnegie long ago wrote: "The man who dies rich dies disgraced." It is long odds that he himself will die disgraced. He is over 70 years old, and if he were to start now to give away $50 a second if he lived to be 100 he would still have a few millions left with which to keep his daughter from the workhouse.

Mr. Carnegie sets his face as a flint against helping the helpless. He is dead against lifting lame dogs over stiles. Talking to my eldest son, who visited him in his Scotch retreat, he said he did not believe in helping the average man.

The average man was all very well, but the man who needed help and assistance was he who was endowed with more than the average ability. Probably the best method in which a millionaire, who wished to help on the advance of the race could spend his wealth was by placing within the reach of the capable the opportunities which would enable them to develop their natural gifts. To him that hath it shall be given, and from him who hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath.

When the time comes for writing his epitaph it is Mr. Carnegie's declared belief that the State ought to levy a death duty of 50 per cent upon whatever fortune he leaves behind.

Ministers Snub Evangelist Sunday

New Bedford Preachers Decide Not to Invite the Former Baseball Player.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS., July 12.—Protestant ministers of New Bedford, after discussing Billy Sunday, the evangelist, in frank fashion, at their annual Cuttyhunk outing, voted unanimously not to invite Sunday to conduct revivals here, as had been planned.

The chief objections advanced were that Sunday requires Protestant churches to abandon all but their Sunday School services during his stay, and that the expense would be very heavy.

But there was also discussion as to Sunday's preachings and as to his motives. Appropriately enough—since Sunday played big league ball once upon a time, the ministers took a recess and played a game themselves before coming to their final decision. A letter from Sunday was read at the meeting.

Wins Suit for $100 He Bet on Marriage

Bridegroom Wagered He Would Wed in Year When Taker Backed, He Resorted to Court.

WELCH, W. VA., July 12.—One of the most unusual civil suits in the history of the State was decided here when Dr. J. L. Sameth was awarded $100, with interest for a year, against George D. Kendrick. During the latter part of the year 1911, during a conversation about matrimony, Kendrick told Dr. Sameth he would give him $100 if he married before January.

The men had been friends for fifteen years. Dr. Sameth had previously made arrangements to be married in January, and after this proposition was made he prevailed on his fiancee to be married before January 1. From time to time Dr. Sameth asked Kendrick for the money, but the latter always declared it a joke. Dr. Sameth entered suit and won.

Singing Fish Keep Town From Sleep

Poetess Thinks Lonely Pout Are Calling Their Mates, but Others Call It Nuisance.

BELLEVUE, OHIO, July 12.—This town is all excited over certain singing fish which keep the villagers awake o' nights. These fish, a variety of bull pout, live in the subterranean streams which flow under the place, and, possibly becoming lonesome, come to the surface and sing.

Anyway, they gather at the surface of cisterns and quiet pools in the gathering dusk and chant in chorus what a prominent poetess of Bellevue calls a sweet, sad, haunting melody, which she likens to the moaning of night winds through lonely, brooding pines. But the citizens who are kept awake are beginning to cuss the gosh blamed noise.

Girl Runs Foundry as Father Breaks Down

Daughter for Six Years After Parent's Health Failed Assumed Executive Duties of Business.

GREAT FALLS, MONT., July 12.—The directing force of the Great Falls Iron Works is a woman—Miss N. Cerula Woodbury. On the company's official roster she is designated as secretary-treasurer, but as the daughter of L. S. Woodbury, president of the company, she has for six years assumed the duties and responsibilities of her father, who has been in failing health and has passed most of his time in travel.

Miss Woodbury is at the office each day and keeps in close touch with all departments of the business.

Berry Growers Seek To Ship Crop by Post

Farmers of Ozark Say That Express Companies Have Been Getting Half Their Revenue.

SPRINGDALE, ARK., July 12.—Moving the strawberry crop by parcel post may be undertaken by the growers of this and other berry growing districts next season. Efforts to obtain a special rate from the Government may be undertaken by the berry associations within a very short time.

It is asserted by association managers of the Southern Ozarks, whence formerly 1,000 to 1,500 cars of berries were marketed annually, the express companies and the commission houses have taken more than 50 per cent of the revenue from the berry crop.

Greek Theater To Seat 10,000 Planned

California Man Wants to Have Massive Structure Ready for Christmas Day Performance.

LOS ANGELES, July 12.—A Greek theater of concrete, with stage of classic lines, with concentric rings of concrete for tiers of seats rising higher and higher, that will accommodate 10,000 persons, will be built by Colonel Griffith J. Griffith, in Vermont Canyon, Griffith Park, Hollywood, and will be presented to the city.

"I hope to have the stage and enough of the theater completed by Christmas to seat 10,000 or 15,000 people," said Colonel Griffith, "so that a celebration may be held there Christmas day."

RECOVERS $380 FOR HIS WORK AS FATHER-IN-LAW

BOZEMAN, MONT., July 12.—J. E. McCallum was awarded $380 by the jury in the District Court as wages alleged to be due him for his services as father-in-law in the household of Geo. Taylor, his son-in-law, recently separated from his wife.

McCallum asked for this sum alleging that the work he had done in the house of his son-in-law, helping with the washing, dishes, etc., was worthy of payment.

The jury decided, after hearing the testimony, that the old man's efforts demanded more than mere board and room, and gave the plaintiff all he asked for.

cemetery at Carrollton, exhumed the body and then began the chemical analysis to which he has just testified.

Counsel for the contesting heirs now intimate that a more exhaustive investigation of the poison mystery will probably be made and that indictments may be sought before the Grand Jury.

Joshua B. Crawford was a well known character in Atlanta for many years. He was recognized as shrewd in business deals and close to the last penny in all financial transactions in his own and his first wife's name. He owned $75,000 to $100,000 in real estate and $20,000 to $25,000 in cash, notes and other negotiable paper. He loaned much money and added to his fortune by demanding every penny of interest called for in the notes and mortgages, as well as the full principal when due. If payment was not forthcoming he realized on the security he invariably required.

Crawford was born in October, 1833. His first wife, Mrs. Nancy E. Crawford, was eight years his junior. She died early in 1908, at the age of 66. Twelve months later he married again, his second wife being probably 20 years younger than the first. Within a month or six weeks after this marriage he died, at the age of 75.

Made Wills in 1907.

Crawford and his first wife made their wills at the same time in 1907, about a year before she died and two years before his death. By her will he inherited her estate. His will provided that in the event he survived his wife the estate should go to the four minor children of George Crawford, an adopted son, and to C. S. Crawford, a nephew, and Lula Miller, a niece. Following his second marriage, a new will was not made and the old will was automatically set aside, she inheriting the property.

A contest was set up by George Crawford, for his minor children, and C. S. Crawford and Lula Miller, beneficiaries named in Crawford's will. In 1910 a compromise was reached whereby property estimated at between $25,000 and $30,000 was carved out of the estate for these contestants, this being estimated as the value of the Nancy E. Crawford estate that had descended to Joshua B. Crawford upon his first wife's death. But none of that property has yet come into actual possession of these heirs, as one legal question after another has been raised to keep the estate tied up in litigation.

Undue Influence Claimed.

In 1912 thirtten other heirs at law—brothers, sisters, nephews and nieces of Joshua and Nancy Crawford—jointly brought suit to set aside this settlement, C. S. Crawford being one of the number, contending that his second wife exerted an undue influence over Crawford while he was in his dotage of more than three-score and ten years and practically forced him to marry her, and hinting at something mysterious in his death so soon after that marriage. Testimony in that suit is now being heard before J. A. Anderson, acting as auditor of the estate for the court.

The thirteen contesting heirs are M. T. Byrd, Mrs. C. B. Cash, V. A. Prater, C. Z. Crawford, C. W. Walton, Mrs. R. Adeline Crawford, J. F. Cornett, Mrs. G. A. Thurmond, Mrs. Fannie Cornett, Mrs. Nannie Moore, J. H. Harris, John F. Harris and M. C. Crawford. George Crawford, for his minor children, and Lula Miller are fighting this suit with the second Mrs. Crawford, seeking to sustain the settlement previously agreed upon.

Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, the second wife, is a native of Pennsylvania. She was formerly Mrs. Mary Belle Savage. She lived at Uniontown and later at Pittsburg. A few years ago she came South, going to St. Augustine, where she opened a boarding house for winter tourists and health seekers visiting the Florida city.

Early in 1909 Crawford, accompanied by his niece, Lula Miller, went to Augustine for his health. They stopped at Mrs. Savage's boarding house. After a few weeks in St. Augustine, they returned to Atlanta. Then Crawford confided to J. J. Barge, his attorney and named in his will as executor of his estate, that he was going to mrary Mrs. Savage just as soon as she could close out her business in St. Augustine.

Death Followed in Month.

The wedding took place a few days later. Crawford's death followed about a month later. His body was taken to his old home in Carroll County and was buried beside his first wife's grave. He had erected a stone to mark both graves, marking it with the names of himself and wife, the dates of birth and the date of his wife's death, leaving only the date of his own death to be added.

The contests over the estate soon followed and have never ended.

CORONER SAYS MERCURY BICHLORIDE KILLED WOMAN

SAVANNAH, July 12.—Bichloride of mercury was the cause of the death of Mrs. Frank G. Hughes, according to Coroner Harry Y. Righton.

It was discovered that Mrs. Hughes purchased a dram of powdered bichloride of mercury from a druggist, telling him she wanted the poison to kill insects.

SAVANNAH MASONIC LODGE GIVES JEWEL TO STOVALL

SAVANNAH, July 12.—In the nature of a farewell was the presentation by Zerubbabel Masonic Lodge of a past-master's jewel to Pleasant A. Stovall, who is soon to leave for Switzerland to assume his duties as American Minister in that country. W. B. Stubbs made the presentation address and Colonel Stovall made a fitting reply. The presentation was a special feature of a regular meeting this week.

Wife Elopes to Fill Role of Life Saver

Writes Husband She Left With Admirer to Keep Him From Slaying Himself.

NEW YORK, July 12.—James Stevens, of Ashburton Avenue, Yonkers, received a note yesterday from his wife Sarah, explaining that she had eloped with James Barber to save the man's life.

Barber, so she said, became so infatuated with her that he threatened to kill himself unless she fled with him. He even showed her a revolver, so she agreed to go in order to prevent a tragedy. Stevens has asked the police to find her.

TOWN GETS ITS MAIL BY STAGE ALWAYS WEEK LATE

SALEM, July 12.—"Mail is always a week behind where I live," said Charles E. Oliver, County School Superintendent of Lake County, who is here in connection with the examination of public school teachers. "There is a school at Butte, near Wagontire Mountain, that probably has the poorest mail service in the United States.

The mail, no matter if sent from Lakeview, the county seat, goes first to Salt Lake City or Reno, Nev., and then through a roundabout way filters into the Oregon town. It is transported a considerable distance by stage.

Boy Takes Rattler For His Playmate

Brings Serpent in House and Is Not Hurt by Experience With Snake.

BELLEVUE, FLA., July 12.—J. H. Maxwell, Jr., two-year-old son of J. H. Maxwell, of this place, is alive and playing just as usual to-day despite the fact that he had as a playmate for a few minutes yesterday a rattlesnake which he picked up in the yard of his father's home.

The little fellow came running into the house with the snake in his hand, laughing at his find. The snake was wriggling and attempting to strike him when his father seized and killed it.

CHURCH WINS PROPERTY AFTER 48 YEARS LITIGATION

SALEM, OREG., July 12.—After court proceedings for 48 years, the Society of Sisters of the Holy Name of Jesus and Mary have undisputed possession of the property on which is located the Catholic school. Circuit Judge Galloway has granted an order quieting the title to the property.

The property was donated to the society in 1855, and has been used by it since.

About fifty persons, with Edward Davignon as principal, were interested in the suit.

JOE BROWN'S MESSAGE IS DENOUNCED BY UNIONS

Labor Leaders Declare Former Governor Is Endeavoring to Array Country Against City to Further His Political Ambitions.

Address on Supremacy of Law in Connection With Augusta Strike Is Called a Studied Effort to Discredit Workingmen's Cause.

The Georgia Federation of Labor is out in a statement "To the Public," in which it bitterly condemns former Governor Joseph M. Brown for a speech he delivered last year and for his recent message to the General Assembly. Both utterances of the Governor had blamed striking employees of the Georgia Railroad Company and of the Augusta street car system for acts of disorder, and the first utterance, the Augusta speech of October 30, 1912, voiced the Governor's intention to deal summarily, through an exercise of military power, with offending strikers of the future.

To-day's statement of the labor unions, which was authorized at the recent convention of union men, charges Governor Brown with political insincerity in his declarations, in that he attempted, it is said, to array the country voters against the workingmen of the city; charges him with prejudices favorable to the railroads, and with partial responsibility for the death of several persons who were shot by troops in Augusta during the strike there. The charge of the labor men is that the action of the troops was without legal basis.

Question Legality of Act.

The statement was prepared by an empowered committee, consisting of Jerome Jones, editor of The Journal of Labor; W. C. Puckett, third vice president of the State Federation, and Louie P. Marquardt, labor organizer for Atlanta. The three called to their aid C. T. Ladson, attorney for the State Federation, for the discussion of the legality of the act of 1912, under which the troops were rushed to Augusta. The statement, in part, follows:

To the Public:

The speech delivered by the then Governor, Joseph M. Brown, on October 29, 1912, at a banquet given by his military staff, entitled, "The Supremacy of the Law," was full of venom and misstatements of facts concerning the recent Georgia Railroad strike and the previous street car strike at Augusta, and particularly directed against organized labor.

In his message to the General Assembly last week the Governor rehashed his diatribe against organized labor.

That he, in such a speech, attempted to array the country voter against the town and city voter is demonstrably true. A more cruel yet clumsy effort to arouse the prejudices of the rural voter against his brothers who toil upon the railroads, in factories and in workshops has never been exhibited.

While parts of his flamboyant address breathed noble platitudinal sentiments, other parts were filled with anarchistic, inflammatory utterances, with a decided tendency to subvert law and order.

Charge Political Purpose.

The Governor took as his text the then recent strike upon the Georgia Railroad. The strike had been virtually settled by arbitration, and it seems the Governor wanted to notify, all and singular, the union railway employees of Georgia that he, Joseph Mackey Brown, would not stand for any more strikes upon the railroads of the State; and, as we have calmly stated above, he seems to have used this subject as a pretext to array the country against the town, for selfish political ends.

A conductor and a flagman had been discharged. These men belonged to their respective railway brotherhoods. Both had served as members of the local brotherhood's grievance committees. As members of such grievance committees they were, at times, compelled to appear before Superintendent Brand in the discharge of their duties to the brotherhood, to protect the rights of their fellow members. And the sequel proved they incurred the enmity of Mr. Brand.

For a period of nearly four months

Potomac Water for Perspiring Senators

Lawmakers Thought They Were Drinking Mineral Spring Product Until Page Told Secret.

WASHINGTON, July 12—The poor, perspiring Senators have been deceived by the pages.

Some time ago the economy campaign eliminated mineral waters from the summer comforts of the Senators. Despite this, the mineral waters seemed still to be in the water bottles and the Senators drank deep and long.

A well-known Senator stepped up and drink three glasses to-day.

"There never was a water as good as this," he boasted, "and I have tried them all."

A page sitting by fell over in shrieks of mirth.

"It is Potomac water in the old bottles," he laughed. He knew, for he had seen it drawn from the faucet.

Princess Royal Fights Daughter in Courts

Rare Suit Is Being Waged in Secret by Relatives of King George.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—A legal dispute between two members of the royal family, a very rare occurrence, is now being secretly argued in the London courts. The litigants are the Princess Royal, widow of the Duke of Fife and sister of King George, and her daughter, the present Duchess.

The Duke left no male heir, the title descending to the elder daughter, the Princess Louise Duff. The dispute relates to property left by the Duke.

The action came before Justice Neville after the ordinary court hours, the procedure being equivalent to hearing in camera, press and public being excluded. The questions involved are so intricate that prolonged argument is necessary.

'Miss Freedom' Given Her Biennial Bath

New Jewelry Will Adorn Graceful Figure on Dome of United States Capitol.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Freedom, the gorgeous lady whose graceful form surmounts the dome of the Capitol, made her biennial toilet to-day. A score of husky workmen clambered to the top of the dome and gave Freedom a bath, using a heavy lather of castile soap and scrubbing brushes to remove the dust and grime that has accumulated on the face and figure of the lady of the Capitol since her last ablutions were performed in the summer of 1910.

The lady's jewelry will be replaced, as the seven platinum tips which surmount her headdress have been badly damaged by lightning bolts. Seven hundred dollars in the precious metal will adorn her brows and protect her from the elements.

St. Louis Man to Wed German Baroness

New Railroad Magnate Will Take Bride to South America to Make Home.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Baroness Ursula Barbara VonKalinsowski, of Wiesbaden, Germany, who, with her brother, Baron Kalinsowski, is staying at the Waldorf-Astoria, will be married to James Hurley, a prominent St. Louis man, this month. The exact date of the wedding has not yet been set. The Baroness and her brother will leave within a few days for St. Louis.

Mr. Hurley has recently bought extensive railroad interests in South America and he and his bride will go there on their wedding trip. The Baroness has with her two dogs which were the gifts of the Emperor and Empress of Germany.

Silk Sash and Hat Latest Bathing Suit

Opening of Seashore Resorts Offers Tremendous Scope to Fashionable Modistes of France.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 12.—The opening of the seashore resorts on the French coasts offers the modistes almost as much scope as does the opening of the racing season. The latest bathing style for women consists of nothing more than a silk sash wound several times round the hips and knotted in front. That's all—except a broad-brimmed hat.

AFFIDAVITS TO BACK MINCEY STORY FOUND

Attorney Leavitt Declares Tale That Conley Admitted Killing Girl Will Stand Test.

NEWT LEE STILL HELD IN JAIL

Solicitor General Hugh Dorsey Promises to Present a Bill Against Him as Suspect.

That several negro women overheard Jim Conley when he ran the insurance agent, Mincey, away with the alleged statement that he had just killed a girl and didn't want to kill anyone else, and that the affidavits from the women are in the hands of the attorneys for the defense, was stated Saturday by Attorney J. H. Leavitt, who aided in obtaining the sensational affidavit from Mincey.

Attorney Leavitt defended the character of the man who made the affidavit and denied emphatically that Mincey even asked about the money he would receive as a witness, except whether his railroad fare would be paid if he were out of the city.

Explains Dukes' Doubts.

"I am attorney for the American Insurance Company and know its manager, J. S. Dukes, very well," said Leavitt. "He sought to discredit the affidavit very likely because Mincey left his employ to get a better position, and he had to do some of the outside work. Mincey is a college graduate and is well known in Atlanta. It will be utterly impossible to shake his evidence.

"I am not employed to represent Frank and aided in getting this affidavit purely because I happened to stumble on to the information. Before I submitted it to Mr. Rosser, Frank's attorney, I spent eleven days investigating the character of the man, questioning the women in the neighborhood and generally verifying the facts. When I turned it over to him I was convinced of its absolute truth and that it would stand the acid test."

Habeas Corpus Fight Fails.

Habeas corpus proceedings to release Newt Lee collapsed in the court of Judge Ellis Saturday morning.

By agreement, Bernard L. Chappell, representing Lee, withdrew his application for a habeas corpus; Solicitor Dorsey promised to present a bill against Lee as a suspect in the Phagan murder case, with the expectation that a "no bill" would be returned. This appeared satisfactory to the attorneys for Lee, as well as to the State.

Luther Z. Rosser, Reuben R. Arnold and Herbert J. Haas, of counsel for Frank, were in court to fight against the appearance of Frank as a witness. William M. Smith represented Conley, one of the witnesses subpenaed.

Conley Gets Third Degree.

Jim Conley underwent a racking third degree late Friday afternoon at the hands of Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey and Attorney Frank A. Hooper in an effort to verify or discredit the W. H. Mincey affidavit, in which the negro was charged with confessing to the murder of a girl on the afternoon that Mary Phagan met her death.

The grilling of nearly four hours followed The Georgian's publication of the details of Mincey's accusations and was undertaken with the utmost secrecy, an attempt being made to avoid knowledge of the "sweating" becoming public by taking Conley to the Commissioners' room on the second floor of the police station by a circuitous route.

Alfonso Eager to Send Ship in Canal

Spanish King Plans to Reproduce Caraval in Which Columbus Started on Discovery Voyage.

Special Cable to The American.

MADRID, July 12.—The suggestion that a Spanish ship be the first through the Panama Canal has made a deep impression upon King Alfonso and has aroused great enthusiasm in Spain.

Senor Don Lopez DeMunos, Minister of State, has declared that if an official invitation is sent to the Spanish Government, it will be accepted in the most friendly and grateful spirit. It is suggested that the vessel used, if the idea is carried out, be a full-sized model of Columbus' caraval, in which he sailed on his voyage of discovery.

Prince Raises $50 on Queen Mary's Letters

King George's Son Sells Mother's Missives to Schoolmate When She Refuses Him Money.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—Prince Henry, the third son of King George, who is at preparatory school at Broadstairs, is allowed $2.50 per week pocket money. Recently he asked his parents to double the allowance, which was peremptorily refused by his mother.

A few days ago it came to Queen Mary's knowledge that the young prince had raised $50 by selling letters from her and other members of the royal family to a schoolmate named Behrens who is related to Lord Rothschild. The Queen immediately wrote to Headmaster Saunders to obtain all the letters from Behrens, send them to her and refund the $50, which was done to-day.

Prince Henry was warned if he raised money this way again he will be tutored at home instead of being sent to Eton.

Lady Sackville Invites Jurors to Tea Party

Winner of Suit for Fortune of Sir John Murray Scott Wishes to Show Gratitude.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—Lady Sackville, as proof of her gratitude to the jurors who established her right to the great fortune left her by Sir John Murray Scott, has invited them to tea at Knole Park, Sevenoaks, Kent, on Saturday.

This droll entertainment will permit the jurors to inspect the famous country club and its art treasures which were preserved to Lord Sackville by Sir John's generous gift of money before his death.

Lady Sackville has asked many friends to assist in entertaining her guests, to whom none is of her "station in society," as she said of a lady during the now famous trial.

Scott bequeathed Lady Sackville art treasures in his Paris house worth about $1,750,000.

Taft's Tub Too Large, Wilson Asks a Shower

Bath for New President Will Be Built in Cellar of White House.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—There is to be a shower bath in the cellar of the White House. It has been requested by no less a person than the President, and it is evidently intended to keep him cool while he is spending his summers in Washington.

When President Taft first arrived at the White House he demanded, not a shower bath, but a tub big enough for his huge proportions. He got it. There is wonder here if that tub is still in the White House, for, if it is, it must be too large by far for the new President.

Red Spots in Aura Sure Sign of Love

Lecturer Tells Swains to Watch for Their Appearance and Then Propose Immediately.

CHICAGO, July 12.—Watch for the five reddish pink spots in the human aura, then propose. It is a ten to one wager that the girl will say yes, for just at that particular time the girl will be experiencing a rush of affection.

This advice to the lovelorn was gleaned from a lecture by Dr. Edwin B. Beckwith at Besant Hall.

Of course, the lovelorn would have to carry a sensitive screen of dicyanin, possibly a vest-pocket edition, through which he could gaze at the "only girl."

Mabel Taliaferro Is Wed in Daisy Field

Former Wife of Frederic Thompson Takes Every Precaution to Keep Her Marriage Secret.

ST. LOUIS, July 12.—After keeping her marriage to Thomas J. Carrigan, of LaPeer, Mich., a secret for more than a month, Mabel Taliaferro, of Chicago, the actress, formerly wife of Frederic Thompson, New York theatrical promoter, admitted here to-day she had been married June 1 in the Michigan city.

The marriage took place before a Justice of the Peace in a field of daisies that edged down to a river bank just outside of LaPeer, in order that all possible secrecy might be maintained.

Crawford Widow Leaves Atlanta

New Warrant in Poison Mystery

Exhaustive Inquiry Now Promised

Mrs. J. B. Crawford is shown in the upper picture. She is reported to be in Carroll County as officers seek her in Fulton to serve warrant.

In the lower picture is the late J. B. Crawford, wealthy Atlantan, whose sudden death is now attributed to poison plot by heirs contesting his will.

Anna Held to Wear Diamond Stockings

Makes Announcement That She Will Appear in Gowns Without Corsets and Bejeweled Hosiery.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—Anna Held made an announcement to-day which is expected to startle the stage door "johnnies" more than anything which has occurred this season.

"I shall wear gowns without corsets and stockings with diamonds—lots of them, diamonds I mean—when I appear in the Revue, 'Come Over Here' next Monday," said Miss Held to-day.

Miss Held has been living quietly in Paris for several months and will celebrate her coming out of retirement with the most gorgeous display of gowns she has yet made. The stockings which she will wear are made of heavy silk network and in each square is set a tiny diamond giving an appearance of the frocking being made entirely of diamonds.

Girls at Chevy Chase In 'Dew Bath' Frolics

Barefooted and in Bathing Suits Young Society Women Gambol on Lawn.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Chevy Chase has become a dew-bath resort.

Fashionable summer residents seeking health or conserving beauty take their morning "dip" in their own yards or nearby woods. They wear real bathing suits and go barefooted. They dance new Greek dances and roll and gambol on the green like children.

Among the bathers are Mrs. George Howard and her daughter Miss Margaret Perin, Miss Katherine Britton, Miss Janet Allen and a number of their friends.

Joyfully Celebrates Departure of Wife

Fireman Decorates House and Fires Salutes When He Finds She Has Moved Her Belongings.

WINSTED, CONN., July 12.—The home of Henry S. Henderling, a baggage master of the New Haven Railway, is to-day decorated with hundreds of yards of red, white and blue bunting, many American flags and Japanese lanterns, while throughout the day Henderling has been firing salutes from a large caliber revolver which he purchased especially for the occasion. Between salutes Henderling took time to explain that he was celebrating the removal of his wife and their two children to another part of the town.

OLYMPIC TURBINES FAIL; LINER MAKES SLOW TIME

Special Cable to The American.

BELFAST, IRELAND, July 12.—Shortly before the Olympic sailed on her present trip to New York it was discovered that one of her turbines had been seriously damaged. Since starting on her trip the vessel has not been able to make within several knots of her regular speed. It is now believed that the liner will have to be drydocked as soon as she returns from her present trip in order to repair the engines.

Nephew Brings Charge When Carroll Coroner's Authority Is Ruled Void by Fulton Court.

The Crawford will case, which for four years has been fought back and forth in the courts of Fulton County, and which is still apparently far from a final settlement, has developed into a "poison mystery."

This new and sensational turn to the litigation over the more than $100,000 estates of the late J. B. Crawford and his first wife, Mrs. Nancy E. Crawford, came when Dr. F. C. Harris, secretary of the State Board of Health, declared that chemical analysis of Crawford's stomach showed opium and morphine in large quantities, and that his lungs showed no indications of death from pneumonia.

When he died in March, 1909, his physician, Dr. J. W. Hurt, who is also the physician for the Coroner of Fulton County, gave pneumonia as the cause of death.

A warrant signed by the Coroner of Carroll County was issued for the arrest of Mrs. Crawford Saturday, but a decision of Superior Court Justice Pendleton held that it was not enforceable in Fulton County. On this C. Z. Crawford, a nephew and beneficiary under the $250,000 will, swore out a warrant in Atlanta. When constables went to serve the paper, Mrs. Crawford had disappeared. It was reported she had gone to Carrollton.

Body Exhumed Year Ago.

Just one year ago, on June 12, 1912, and more than three years after Crawford's death, Dr. Harris, with the Coroner of Carroll County, where the body was interred in the family

PRESIDENT IS LINKED WITH GOMPERS IN LABOR LOBBY

Mulhall Writes to the National Association of Manufacturers of Agreement to Send Hughes to the Senate to Combat Capital.

Lobbyist Boasts in Correspondence of Success in Having Men Elected to Congress Favorable to His Organization's Interests.

Secretary of Labor Is Assailed as Practicing Nepotism in Appointing Office Force for Committee. Bird Is Summoned by Inquiry.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Samuel Gompers, John Mitchell and J. P. Bird, general manager of the National Association of Manufacturers, will be called before the Senate lobby committee Monday to explain their activities in the interests of labor and capital.

Mr. Gompers' testimony will be heard with great interest in view of new and amazing revelations made by Colonel Mulhall, for ten years publicity and field agent for the manufacturers. These revelations The American herewith presents for whatever they may be worth.

Here is Mulhall's letter to Bird:

Atlantic City, N. J.

Mr. Philip Bird, General Manager National Association of Manufacturers, No. 30 Church Street, New York.

Dear Sir: I received your letter some time ago, but did not answer on account of being pressed with work for the past eight or ten days. I know you will be pleased to learn that Mr. John J. Gardner has won a complete victory over two very strong opponents in the Cecond Congressional District of this city, and has won the nomination again with a majority of about 2,000 votes, which the official count will give him.

Since you wrote me I have also visited Mr. George W. Fairchild's district, and at his request will continue to do some work for him until the close of the campaign. This is the third victory that I have participated in since last April.

Mr. James McDermott was renominated in the Fourth Illinois District and, he claims, largely by my help.

Wilson's Pledge Recalled.

The principal reason for my writing this letter to you is to call your attention to the fact that I feel that every manufacturer in this country should unite and help to defeat William Hughes, late of the Sixth New Jersey District. I know it is not necessary for me to say a word to you concerning Hughes' record, for I feel that every manufacturer throughout the country who is interested in honest legislation and against class legislation knows what his record is.

I have got positive information that when Mr. Samuel Gompers and Mr. Frank Morrison and other members of the executive board of the American Federation of Labor called on Governor Wilson at his home in Seagirt around the first day of last July that they exacted a promise from Governor Wilson to support Hughes for the United States Senatorship in this State, and that Governor Wilson has carried out his agreement to the letter, and that is why Hughes is the nominee of the Democratic party at the present time.

I feel positive and sure that if the manufacturers that belong to your organization and other organizations in favor of a square deal will do their duty in this coming election, Gardner will be returned to Congress by a greater majority than he ever got before, and that Hughes will be overwhelmingly defeated.

I feel that it is the duty of all the leaders of your organization to see that this treacherous demagogue is not promoted, for if he is sent to the Senate for the next six years he will simply be as he has been for the past eight years—a paid attorney of the American Federation of Labor, and will continue to be their tool in passing class legislation against the industries of this country for the next six years.

Very sincerely yours,
W. M. MULHALL.
Haddon Hall, Atlantic City.

Bird Acknowledges Letter.

Here is Bird's acknowledgment:
September 30, 1912.

Colonel M. M. Mulhall,
Haddon Hall, Atlantic City, N. J.
Dear Sir:

Your letter of September 27, detailing your experiences for some little time and the results, has been received and it is a pleasure for me to know of your successes.

I note what you say in reference to Congressman Hughes. All of this I have been advised of before, I remain, yours very truly,

J. P. BIRD, General Manager.

Hughes, as events proved, received the personal backing of Governor Wilson, who made a personal stumping campaign for him against James Smith, Jr. Hughes received the Democratic indorsement for Senator at the primaries, and was later elected.

Still bearing out the allegations of Mulhall, of which Bird "had been advised before," Wilson, after becoming President, signed the sundry civil appropriations bill, which carried a provision exempting labor unions and farmers' beneficial organizations from prosecution under the Sherman law.

This is the bill which Taft vetoed as encouraging class legislation.

Will Tell of Conversation.

In all likelihood Gompers will be asked to tell about his visit to Seagirt and to throw light on his conversations with Governor Wilson. At present Gompers and Morrison, with John Mitchell, are in contempt of court, and have been granted an appeal to the Supreme Court. All three were convicted of violating an injunction against boycotting.

The following letter from Mulhall to John Kirby deals with Secretary of Labor Wilson:

Washington, D. C., April 20, 1911.
Mr. John Kirby, Jr., President National Association of Manufacturers, Reibold Building, Dayton, Ohio.

My Dear Kirby: I wish to call your attention to a matter that has taken place here in Washington, which I feel the business interests of the country should be somewhat interested in.

One of the most important committees of the House, which should in a great sense be non-partisan, has been completely turned over to the radical wing of the American Federation of Labor. The Democratic leaders of the House of Representatives have made chairman for this committee Mr. Wilson, of the Fifteenth Pennsylvania District.

For eight years Mr. Wilson was secretary and treasurer of the Miners' International Union.

Mr. Wilson was always considered an active member amnog the radical members of the American Federation of Labor, and he was pushed and urged by Mr. Samuel Gompers and the other radicals of the executive board of the above named organization for the chairmanship of this committee.

Daughter Made Clerk.

Not being satisfied to have Mr. Wilson made chairman of the committee on labor, they had his daughter, Agnes Wilson, appointed as secretary and clerk of the Committee on Labor, and when this committee was called together last Thursday to organize at this session of Congress, Miss Agnes Wilson was elected to this office.

In addition to this, Mr. Wilson has also appointed his wife as the messenger of this committee, and if the public now wishes to call on this committee for information concerning bills that come before it, when you visit the committee room at the Capitol you have got to face the whole Wilson family to secure the information desired.

This has established a new precedent in the appointments around the Capitol.

the committees of the House of

As a general rule the members of Representatives have something to say about who the clerk of the committee shall be, but Mr. Wilson has entirely ignored the other members of this committee, and $3,000 worth of patronage that should go to his district and to those who have helped to send him to Congress has been entirely turned over to the Wilson family.

I have been informed that Mr. Wilson has taken this step of having his own relatives appointed to the official positions of this committee in order to have the business public shut out from securing any information concerning the bills that are sent before it, such as an eight-hour law and all labor legislation that comes before it.

I am sending you this letter thinking that there should be publicity given to this matter. So, hoping to hear that you have taken hold of it, in your old vigorous way, believe me to be, very sincerely yours,

M. M. MULHALL.

KNOXVILLE FAIR TO MAKE LAND SHOW FEATURE

Value of Soil Will Be One of the Principal Lessons of Conservation Exposition.

KNOXVILLE, July 12.—Realizing that land is primarily the basis of all wealth and that from the land must come food and clothing for the present and future generations, the management of the National Conservation Exposition has prepared for the greatest land show ever held in the South and one of the greatest land shows ever held anywhere.

Scientists say that the land of the United States must be conserved, must be nurtured and cared for, must be nursed and doctored and in no wise maltreated if the nation is to maintain its present proud position at the head of all the nations of the earth.

Tremendous Land Building.

It is to teach the lesson of the necessity of conserving lands, as well as of teaching the lessons of conservation of other resources, that the National Conservation Exposition comes into being. In the big new land building on the exposition grounds the land show will be held.

The land building, completed to the last nail, is one of six big exposition buildings erected for the Conservation Exposition. Attached to it is an annex with an auditorium that will seat 3,000 persons. The United States Government display in the land building as well as State displays will be particularly fine and comprehensive. The exposition will open on September 1 and will continue until November 1.

Merchants to Visit Fair.

Incidentally, Knoxville is planning a great boosting campaign to be conducted in connection with the exposition.

Fifteen thousand merchants and jobbers in the territory continguous to Knoxville have been invited to visit the city while the exposition is on. The invitations have been sent out by the Commercial Club of Knoxville.

The entertainment of these out-of-town buyers is part of a general boosting movement that is astir in Knoxville and has been inspired by the exposition. The merchants and jobbers of Knoxville are making every effort to extend their trade and figure that while the exposition is in progress there will be a large influx of visitors into the city. Hence the plan of inviting the outside merchants to Knoxville. Acceptances to the invitations are being received rapidly.

Pauline Frederick Lives a Part

Fails to Find Happiness in Riches

Pauline Frederick, beautiful actress, who has returned to stage after failing to find happiness with wealthy husband.

Beautiful Actress Says He Tired of Being Pointed to as Man Who Married Her.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Pauline Frederick, the actress-wife of Frank M. Andrews, the well-known architect, who last autumn returned to her beloved profession, bent upon re-establishing herself as one of the leading women on the American stage, is playing a real life part similar to that of Sarah in "The Little Princess," it was learned yesterday.

The sudden change of social station for this beautiful young woman, she declared yesterday to a reporter for The Sunday American, is because her rich husband is in some business trouble and has failed to provide properly for her maintenance. She still resides in a handsome apartment, but even this is to be given up just as soon as the lease expires.

Where she will then reside she does not know and won't know for some time. It depends upon the income she will make hereafter, and also upon a settlement with her husband.

There have been continuous rumors for several months that Mr. and Mrs. Andrews were legally separated. This is not so. They are living in separate apartments.

"When I married Mr. Andrews, about four years ago," said Miss Frederick, "I decided to choose a career of love instead of fame. But I soon saw that the pursuit of love and happiness was not a silvery path through a garden of roses. Mr. Andrews seemed to glory in being the companion of a stage celebrity, but after our marriage he soon let me know that he objected to being looked upon merely as 'Pauline Frederick's husband.'

"Last fall I decided to go back to the stage. I did so partly because my husband seemed indifferent as to what I did and partly because I feared that he was in love with another woman, the daughter of an American diplomat and the wife of an officer of the Royal Dragoon Guards, England's crack cavalry regiment.

"My opportunity to go back to the stage came when 'Joseph and His Brethren' was produced at the Century.

"All of my expenses have been met from my own income since I returned to my profession—a heavy expense for one who had become accustomed to the luxury of Mr. Andrews' life that had been thrust upon me. But with my brave little mother beside me I have been doing my best—my motto being, 'Single blessedness forever more.'

"Of course, I have struggled in the past—worked hard before getting my chance to rise from the chorus. Then it was pleasant, indeed, to step into a position of affluence and to have a home, but these do not bring happiness without the things that make a home lovely. So I am back to work."

Efforts to reach Mr. Andrews were futile. His secretary stated for him that he would have nothing to say.

FRANK JAMES SPENDING LAST YEARS AT HOME

Former Famous Bandit Traced Back to Missouri Farm Where Brother Jesse Is Buried.

DENVER, July 12.—Within the last few months there have come many stories regarding Frank James, the one-time bandit. Frank James has died in Oregon, California and a few other States, he has "gotten religion" in the East, and he has been active generally. And the queer part about it is that he is alive and in good health, and is spending his last days on the old James farm a few miles from Kearney, Mo., where Jesse James is buried.

Brings Citizens' Statement.

This is the information that is brought to Denver by L. Wright, a motion picture proprietor, who recently made a visit to the farm in Missouri. When he returned he brought a statement with him, signed by various citizens of Kearney, and which reads as follows:

To Whom It May Concern:

This is to certify that we, the following citizens of Kearney, Clay County, Missouri, hereby affirm that we are personally acquainted with the original Frank. James, brother of Jesse James, and that he is now enjoying good health and is living on the old James homestead about three miles northeast of this city, and we furthermore state that he is an honored and respected citizen of this community.

"I went back to get Mr. James' opinion regarding law and order," Mr. Wright said. "I am the proprietor of a set of Jesse James pictures and I had received the criticism that they were not moral. I contended exactly the opposite—that they showed the bad effects of a life of crime. So I went back to get some expression from Frank James on it. He told me this.

James Maintains Innocence.

"'If anyone thinks he can violate the law and make a success of it, I consider him insane, and his finish will be the gallows or the penitentiary.'"

Frank James contends that he was innocent of all the charges of outlawry placed against him. He points to his acquittal as evidence.

LOGGER KILLED AS HE TRIES TO LIGHT DYNAMITE FUSE

BAYFIELD, WIS., July 12.—George Andrews, logger, loaded six stumps with dynamite and lighted all the fuses. One of the fuses appeared to have failed, and, after waiting a minute, Andrews went to relight it. As he leaned over the stump the charge exploded and killed him instantly.

PONY CONTEST CANDIDATES TO MEET IN PARK

Boys and Girls Will Be Entertained by Manager of Race at Grant Playground.

Boys and girls in The Georgian and American pony contest will enjoy an informal gathering at Grant Park Sunday afternoon, at the invitation of the contest manager. The ponies will be on hand, and there will be rides and drives for all who care to enjoy this pleasure.

Parents of the contestants are particularly invited. The contest manager is anxious to meet them and to discuss with them ways and means of helping the contestants through the last few days of the race. Sixteen more week days only remain before the contest ends. Six days only remain during which the bonus offer is in effect.

Race Keeps Close.

There is no candidate who can claim yet to be a winner. There is not enough difference between the leaders and the tail-enders so that any one can say who will get a pony. This is as it should be. It makes the contest interesting up to the very last.

The bonus offer should inspire every contestant. There are 20,000 extra votes to be awarded for every club of $35 turned in for subscriptions; 12,500 extra votes will be given for every club of $25 and 6,000 for every club of $15.

Assuming that a contestant turned in six yearly subscriptions; he would turn in $37.50, and be credited with 21,000 votes. In addition he would be credited with a $35 club, and 20,000 extra votes in consequence. In other words, the voting power under such circumstances would almost be doubled—41,000 votes for $37.50 in subscriptions. But the beauty of this club offer is that the clubs need not be made up of yearly subscriptions. They can be made up of short term subscriptions, even one month trial orders.

Should Use Every Effort.

The contestant who does not strain every nerve to take advantage of this chance is foolish, and is not doing his full duty to himself, or to the friends who are aiding him.

Sixteen more working days only remain. The strain of the contest soon will be over, and the contestants may take a well-earned rest. Naturally, it will be much more fun to rest and recreate with the aid of a pony and cart than to rest, thinking of defeat. That is why the next two weeks should be crammed with effort, and well directed effort.

"Keeping everlastingly at it brings success," says the contest manager, and he is right.

UNIONS REPLY TO BROWN'S MESSAGE

the representatives of the men vainly sought to have this injustice redressed, without result. Often their efforts to obtain interviews with President Scott and Superintendent Brand were brusquely refused and repulsed.

"Why did not Governor Brown tell all the facts? Does he not know that the executive officers of these great railway brotherhoods are men of considerable intelligence, wide experience, much administrative skill, and, as was shown in this identical case, of a long-suffering patience?

Men Ordered Restored.

"For four long months they tried their level best to get these Georgia Railroad officials to reinstate these wrongfully discharged men. And the sequel proved that the men were wrongfully discharged, for when the board of arbitration, under the Federal Erdman Act, came to pass judgment in the premises they ordered the restoration of these men, with payment of back wages.

"Does not Governor Brown know that the executive officers of railway and other labor organizations, as a general rule, only resort to strikes as a last resort? That they recognize strikes as costly things, not only to the railroads, but to their members? And that they recognize, also, that the general public, at times, is involved—made to suffer inconvenience and damage? And does he not know that before they order or concur in a strike, they must be sure that their cause of quarrel is just? That to succeed they must be entitled to and have the sympathy of the public?

The Governor further said: "The management hired other men and attempted to operate some of the trains. These men were beset by mobs who made themselves the fighting partners of the strikers at the terminal stations and at some local points, and were violently beaten or otherwise driven from service." And he goes on to say that 400,000 citizens of Georgia, wholly or partly dependent upon this road for travel or supplies, were curbed and hampered by this strike.

Strikers Not in Disorder.

Now, let us analyze this statement of the Governor. He admits (which was the truth) that the disorders were caused by the members of the general public, "the fighting partners" of the striking employees, and not by the employees themselves.

In point of fact, as the Governor was compelled thus to admit, the strikers themselves remained aloof, and did not participate in any of the disorders. Such disorders as occurred (and the Governor grossly exaggerates them) were committed by the general public, part of those 400,000 citizens affected, as the Governor says, by this strike.

Queer, you say? Not at all, once the facts are rightly understood. These railway employees live along the line of the Georgia Railroad and at its terminals. They are a pretty good lot of citizens, manly, husky fellows, who are engaged in a pitilessly dangerous vocation. The percentage of deaths and injuries which comes to the railroad employees is pathetically large. No army with banners loses a greater percentage of its men in battle than does this army of railroad employees annually place upon the altar of progress and civilization.

And so, when these neighbors and friends learned through the daily press of the contemptible tactics of the officers of the Georgia Railroad in tyrannously and unjustly discharging these faithful servants, their gorge rose, they got mad through and through, and they showed their anger at times in rather unmistakable manner to the Hessian strike-breakers imported from the "pig alleys" and other vile purlieus of the large cities of the East, to take the jobs of the striking employees.

Just Human Nature.

Something rough about this? Deplorable? Granted. But it is shot through and through with human nature, human nature as it is, the Pecksniffs and Chadbrands to the contrary, notwithstanding and human nature as it is likely to remain for many generations yet to come!

when the strike was first ordered, the men in the Joint Terminals yards, it is true, went out, too, under a misapprehension, they believing that the Joint Terminals Company was one and the same with the Georgia Railroad Company; they believed but one contract covered the Georgia Railroad and the Joint Terminals, as both concerns were apparently run under the same management.

As the strike on the Georgia Railroad progressed, Murdock and Gregg discovered that the other big trunk lines were violating their contract of neutrality whereby they had "bound themselves in law and in honor," and, of course, they were properly notified that unless they complied with such solemn contract that their men, too, would be ordered out. It was at this juncture that the whole strike was brought to a close, the employees being amply vindicated by the findings of the United States Arbitration Board.

Sees Only Railroad's Side.

Why, we ask, did not the Governor state these facts? In the wrongful discharge of the conductor and flagman by the Georgia Railroad, which eventually caused the strike, the Governor sees only the railroad's side of the controversy, and he utterly ignores the just position and contentions of the striking employees.

We have, with deep sincerity, asked the question, Was the Governor actuated by political motives in this whole affair?

But just here it may be as well to refer to Governor Brown's antecedents and see if therefrom he has any undue bias in favor of railroad companies.

Barring his political jobs, the only work he has done in the last 25 years has been as a railroad official. Perhaps, ordinarily, that might account for his excessive zeal in standing by, and for, the railroad companies, right or wrong.

The Governor's main contention is that railroad employees have no legal right to "strike."

The United States Supreme Court, and nearly every other court of last resort in the several States (including Georgia, of course), has repeatedly held that railroad and other employees have a right to "strike," notwithstanding inconvenience and damage may sometimes result to the general public therefrom.

Everybody but Governor Brown knows that for these two wrongfully discharged men to have taken the Georgia Railroad into the courts for legal redress would have been the merest child's play.

And remember, the lawmaking bodies of the land, in such abritration acts, recognizing, we say, the impracticability of resorting to the ordinary forms of litigation, have themeselves provided a more effective method.

These striking Georgia Railroad employees promptly offered to submit the justice of their claims to the Federal Board of Arbitration, and for months the railroad refused to agree thereto. Therefore, by every token of law and logic, it was the Georgia Railroad which flouted the only effective tribunal set up by the lawmakers, and not the men.

Railroad Acted Anarchist.

According to Governor Brown's reasoning, it was the railroad which acted the anarchist by refusing to place itself under the impartial arbitration of Government officials; and it was the railroad which was responsible for the continuation of the strike.

Therefore, what becomes of all the Governor's hectoring and denunciation of the striking employees? Indeed, obsessed with his crazy desire to subvert the civil authorities with the militia, he unblushingly declares that "if such an emergency comes again during this administration, the State will not await the slow process of arbitration, but will promptly meet the issue tendered her, and enforce her laws."

The Governor does not know that labor organizations have obtained better wages for their members, and as a corollary, for non-union laborers as well, for he bitterly but disingenuously rails at them therefore. In reprehensible fashion he tries to arouse the prejudices of the farmers against the urban working men and women.

Does not this would-be protagonist of the farmers know that the farmers themselves have formed splendid unions to help get just pay for their labor, in better and fairer prices for their farm products?

As we have said before, these railroad men risk their lives with every turn of the wheels. They are charged with heavy responsibilities of human life, and with the safekeeping and conduct of millions of dollars of the property of their employers, and they do not receive more than they are entitled to, and this contention of the Governor is utter claptrap, grossly unjust, wholly stupid, and made, we are forced to believe, to get the farmers' vote.

The Governor, being of archaic mental make-up, erroneously conceives that by reason of occasional strike disturbances (and strikes are mighty rare in Georgia) there is a lot of prejudice in the minds of some people against labor unions, and so having alienated the labor unionists and thinking that there were only 12,000 possible antagonistic votes as against 370,000 other votes in the State (though he may find his figures grossly in error so far as the number of union laborers is concerned, there being, in point of fact, more than five times as many labor union men than his guess would indicate), he conceives the occasion of the military banquet, and the subject of the Georgia railroad strike, a fitting time and place to make a grandstand assault upon organized labor, and tell 270,000 farmers that they were being grievously outraged because they did not earn as much money on their farms as these pesky conductors earned in their vocation, and that the poor farmer was in danger of becoming a serf to the "aristocracy of union labor."

Called Incitement to Murder.

Here is a man clamoring for the "supremacy of the law," and yet he says that if another strike is brought about, and a railroad is tied up, then, ye gods! the people will rise in their anarchistic wrath and burn the homes of the strikers and their families will be scorched by the flames, and perchance these 7,000 wicked and desperate railroad employees would likely be hanged to 7,000 lampposts!

What is this but a crazy incitement to murder?

Governor Brown concludes his speech by extolling the action of the militia in killing three non-offending citizens of Augusta during the street car strike, a short time previously. But as surely as God lives, the militia, who ruthlessly and unlawfully shot these innocent victims down in cold blood, are guilty of manslaughter.

These people were not connected with the strike. They were simply going alone the public streets, wholly ignorant that the military had established an imaginary, or unmarked, "dead line." There was nothing of a physical nature to show that any such "dead line" had been ordered or fixed, and no previous warning was given them, or known command given to halt.

Nothing in this whole wretched speech shows more convincingly Governor Brown's true bent of mind than this laudation of "half-cocked," irresponsible militia. Governor Brown is another Glasscock of West Virginia, types of men who would violate Federal and State Constitutions by exalting the military above the civil powers. He would substitute military rule for civil government, running ruthlessly counter to the very spirit and letter of republican institutions.

Legislation Is Dangerous.

The act of 1912 is the most insidiously dangerous piece of legislation ever enacted in Georgia. The first bloody fruits of such legislation were made terribly manifest at Augusta. What locality will suffer next?

The Augusta massacre should be investigated by a legislative committee.

The workingmen, particularly of the South, being "to the manner born," object to having their labor regulated by bullets and bayonets, as did their fathers powerfully revolt against Federal bayonets and bullets, regulating their ballots during Reconstruction days.

We of the South, laborers and capitalists alike, and other classes of citizens, are of good old American stock, a homogeneous people, songs of Revolutionary sires, people who won't submit to military ascendency over the civil authorities.

In conclusion, we beg to say that while organized labor has its faults (what institution or organization has not?) it is the only practical method yet devised by man which measurably protects and uplifts the working clases, and until some better plan be devised it will continue to be the greatest power for good to the toilers of the civilized world.

And it has no apologies to make to the Browns, and Posts, and Kirbys and Parrys, and others who let their spleen becloud their judgments and embitter their hearts.

BILL PLANS TO LET U. S. FLOAT LOANS FOR FARMERS

Measure Provides That Clubs of 25 Can Make Quick Long-Time Notes With the Government at Reasonable Rate of Interest.

Tremendous Benefit to Southern Cotton Growers Seen in Law of Progressive Republican — Will Insure Financing of the Crop.

Yearly Payments Will Be Devoted to Retiring Original Debt, While Secretary of Treasury May Sell Bonds to Raise Needed Money.

By HUGH S. MILLER.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—A measure which, if passed, will remove one of the most serious obstacles with which the Southern cotton growers have to contend, the lack of money at the proper time with which to properly care for and market their crops, has been introduced in the House by Representative Willis J. Huling, of Pennsylvania, a Progressive Republican.

In the last yearbook of the Department of Agriculture, considerable space was given to pointing out the advantage of organization of the cotton growers in communities, both to raise money at crop time and to establish co-operatively improved facilities for handling their product.

The bill introduced by Mr. Hulings devises a plan whereby an association of not less than 25 farmers may borrow money from the Government at low rates of interest on mortgages on their farms, repaying the loan in payments arranged to give the farmer ample time.

Will Encourage Organization.

The effect of this plan, it is claimed, would be to encourage the farmers in a community to organize in just such a way as was advised by the Department of Agriculture in its articles on improved methods of handling and marketing cotton.

"Under the present system, farmers are charged ruinous rates for money," said Mr. Hulings. "Often the farmer finds it impossible to obtain loans, because banks are not permitted to lend on real estate security, and no bank likes to lend on more than four months' time.

"Of course, if the farmer's credit is good and he can furnish commercial paper, he can borrow from a bank at customary rates; but this measure is designed for the benefit of the men whose only security is the land they are working, and who need money to cover the time between planting and selling their crops.

"Under the plan I suggest subscribers will organize an association somewhat as national banks are organized, paying 10 per cent cash, and in addition giving their notes payable to trustees for the use of the United States for the amount of their subscription, and these notes are secured by mortgages on improved farm lands of an assessed valuation of double the amount of the mortgage.

Twenty Years Covered.

"The association will then make its note to the Secretary of the Treasury for the amount of the capital stock, and payable in installments of 3 per cent annually for three years; 7 per cent for three years; 8 for the next three; 9 for the next three, and 10 per cent annually for the last five years, covering twenty years in all.

"These installments when paid will cancel the association note with accrued 3 per cent interest, and of course will cancel the mortgage also.

"As a collateral security for the payment of any or all of these installments, the subscribers' personal notes and mortgages are deposited with the Secretary of the Treasury, together with the official bonds of the trustees for the faithful discharge of their duties, and approved assurances that the mortgages are a valid security.

"When these matters are in proper shape, the Secretary places the personal notes and mortgages in the possession of the trustees for the purposes of collection as the same fall due, and from these collections to pay maturing installments of the association note and to see that taxes are paid, and the liens of the mortgages are not impaired.

"The association is then entitled to receive money of the United States to the amount of its capital stock, which is then distributed among the subscribers of the shares in the proportion in which they have given their notes secured by the mortgages.

"The association lends no money except to its stockholders.

"Each stockholder has one vote without respect to the number of his shares.

Secretary Can Sell Bonds.

"To provide funds the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to sell 3 per cent twenty-year bonds when necessary.

"The rate of interest the association charges the subscriber is immaterial so long as it charges enough to repay the government loan at 3 per cent and the administration expenses of making the loan, because if the subscriber is charged more than the cost it all comes back to him in the windup.

"Allowing for moderate administration expense and repayment to the Government as indicated, it will be found that borrowers may have the use of an average sum of $24,000 during the entire twenty years, at an average rate of 3.8 per cent. In other words, the payment of 6 per cent annually of the sum borrowed, pays both debt and interest and accumulates in the treasury of the association $13,965, a sum equal to 51 per cent of the sum borrowed.

"The advantage of the system is shown by comparing the results with a straight loan of $24,890 at 6 per cent interest for twenty years. The sum paid for interest would be $29,868.

"Under the proposed system the use of the same sum could be secured for the same length of time at a net cost of $18,893, making a saving of $10,975. This shows what compound interest will do for the farmer when it is working for him."

WITH THE WILSONS AT CORNISH

President and Mrs. Wilson have followed the fashion set by Prince Ernest August of Cumberland and Princess Victoria Louise, who appeared frequently in the streets of Berlin before their marriage walking hand in hand. The President and Mrs. Wilson are here shown taking a hand-in-hand stroll at the summer capital at Cornish, N. H. In the lower picture the President, Miss Eleanor Wilson and Mrs. Wilson are enjoying an auto ride through the New Hampshire hills.

GIRL MASKED AS DOCTOR CAUSES THRILL AT BALL

Kisses Pretty Married Woman, Who Cries for Husband, but He Is Disguised as Woman.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 12.—A comedy of errors was staged aboard the Pacific Mail steamer Nile. Miss Gene Yarborough, clothed in the uniform of the ship's surgeon, played the principal role and, for a time, had the passengers guessing and almost caused a domestic tragedy.

One day out of Honolulu the passengers held a masquerade ball to relieve the tedium of the voyage, and the outcome far exceeded the most optimistic expectations. That this was so was due in a great measure to Miss Yarborough.

While everybody on board was having a glorious time and the fun was waxing fast and furious, two maskers, one attired in Miss Yarborough's Japanese kimono and the other in the uniform of the Nile's doctor, entered the saloon and were the liveliest in the fun.

"Doctor" Dances Divinely.

The doctor danced divinely, and lacked not for partners. Little actions on the part of the physician, however, caused frowns on the brows of many of his fair partners. Squeezes of the hands and unnecessary pressure about the waists caused many to wonder at the liberties. Several were openly kissed. Some of the married women objected, but there were several who did not.

Then the doctor asked to dance with Mrs. R. E. Purinton, wife of a Government teacher of Osaka. While the two glided over the floor of the saloon Mrs. Purinton was gathered in the doctor's arms and a resounding kiss was planted on her lips. She screamed and immediately demanded that her husband be sent for.

Husband Is Missing.

A search was instituted, but no trace of Purinton could be found. Then the indignant passengers proceeded to snatch the mask from the face of the surgeon.

As the disguise came off a peal of laughter rang out, and Miss Yarborough was revealed.

The question arose concerning the identity of the passenger in the kimono, and Purinton was discovered. A plot had been hatched between the two, and Miss Yarborough had entered heartily into the spirit of the thing. Their farce met with far more success than either had dreamed of. The entire difficulty was quickly adjusted, however, and the ball was resumed with greater merriment than before.

Miss Yarborough has her home with her mother at 2158 Sutter Street, and has ben touring the Orient with the Anglo-American players, presenting American comedies.

Jap Baby Baptized With American Flag

Stars and Stripes and Bible Used to Consecrate Boy to Patriotism and Piety.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 12.—A year ago Roy T. Masuda, a native of Japan, and Miss Mena Gilbertson, a Minnesota girl, were married by Rev. G. L. Morrill. Their two-month-old boy, George Washington Masuda, was consecrated, Rev. Mr. Morrill officiating.

The service is said to have been unique. Mr. Morrill formerly was a Baptist minister and does not approve of sprinkling as a form of baptism, and the baby was too young for immersion. The parents were anxious not only that the child receive some form of baptism and they also were firm in their desire that Rev. Mr. Morrill perform the ceremony. Hence, a compromise was agreed upon.

The boy was consecrated, the minister using the Bible and an American flag in the ceremony, pledging the father and mother to teach the youngster patriotism and piety.

Town Seeks in Vain For Man for Mayor

Political Parties Offer Place to Several, but Each of Them Refuses the Nomination.

BOONVILLE, IND., July 12.—Political parties of Boonville are experiencing much trouble to find availables to make the race for city offices in the coming elections.

The office of Mayor, to be vacated by Dr. T. D. Scales, is one particularly begging. On the expiration of his term Dr. Scales, it is understood, will be appointed on the State Board of Tax Commissioners by Governor Ralston.

Louis Kinderman, a hardware dealer; Henry Maurer, a department store owner, and Philip Lutz, Jr., an attorney, are suggested for the Democratic nomination, but each refuses to become a candidate. Jasper H. Thornburg, Councilman, is suggested for the Republican nomination.

Children Will Be Taught How to Lose

Town Employs Playmaster Who Will Attempt to Engender Better Spirit of Sportmanship.

CHICAGO, July 12.—Henry F. Kallenberg has just been appointed official playmaster to the children of River Forest, a suburb. Besides teaching them how to play, one of the imporfant duties of the position will be to show young Americans how to be good losers, which they are not, he says.

"The American baseball fan is a bad loser, because his education in sportsmanship has been sadly neglected," the playmaster told members of the village board of River Forest. "His interest in baseball can be traced back to the corner lot game, where he spent 40 minutes of every hour in arguing and 20 minutes playing ball."

County Without Bible Will Obtain One Free

Commonwealth Finds it Possesses No Copy of Scriptures When Book Is Needed in Court.

WILKESBARRE, PA., July 12.—While boasting of a $2,000,000 courthouse and of being one of the wealthiest counties in the State, Luzerne County has no Bible which it can call its own.

This fact came to light recently when the court wanted a Bible for use in a trial. The courthouse was searched from cellar to garret, but no Bible could be found.

No order for a Bible has been placed since that time, and now the county has been put to shame by the Bible class of the Sixth Ward of Edwardsville, which has raised sufficient money by public subscription to buy a suitable Bible for the county.

Perfect Policeman Joins Boston Force

New Patrolman Makes 100 Mark on All Tests—Doesn't Smoke, Drink, or Swear.

BOSTON, July 12.—A policeman who neither drinks, smokes nor swears, and incidentally boasts of a thousand other unusual virtues, has been added to the police force of this city. It is the first time Boston has had a perfect policeman, an officer who scores 100 points in every department of policed esirability, according to the examination tests.

He is William McLaught, for two years a hoseman attached to Engine No. 26 in Charlestown. McLaught surprised the examining officials when he scored 100 per cent in the strength, balance and health trials of the civil service test.

Senator Lewis Sets New Summer Style

Illinois Mold of Fashion Shows Colleagues What They Should Wear During Sizzling Days.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Members of the Senate who have been appearing daily in summer apparel, including linen pongee, silk, mohair and seersucker suits, learned to-day from Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, the arbiter elegantiarum of the Upper House of Congress, just what constitutes the absolutely correct negligee for a United States Senator.

It was the first time Senator Lewis had discarded his formal morning grays and browns. This is what he wore:

Blue coat, with white pin stripe, blue tie with white stripe; white figured waistcoat, white duck trousers; white silk socks, white shoes, and white silk gloves. Crowning it all was a yellow Panama hat, with a draped band of black silk.

CLARK'S OLD OPPONENT GETS PLACE FOR LOYALTY

MONTGOMERY, MO., July 12.—Attorney Claude Bell to-day telegraphed Speaker Champ Clark accepting the proffered appointment as Attorney General to the Territory of Hawaii.

Mr. Bell was Clark's opponent for Congress last year and after the Speaker failed to be nominated for the Presidency he withdrew from the race. He is now receiving his reward for his loyalty.

MINNESOTA BARS SALE OF CIGARETTES ON TRAINS

ST. PAUL, July 12.—Cigarettes can not be sold on trains in Minnesota, according to an opinion given by the State Attorney General's office.

A law adopted at the last session of the Legislature provided for the sale of cigarettes by licensed dealers. The Attorney General's office says the law provides for the sale of cigarettes only at one place and in a definite municipality, which conditions are violated by trains.

VOWS REVENGE FOR CHILDREN WIFE DROWNED

Husband of Woman Who Killed Stepchildren Says He Will See Her on Gallows.

UNION CITY, TENN., July 12.—Remorseless, dry-eyed, deserted by every relative and every friend, looked upon with horror by the people of an entire State, Mrs. James Yates, who forced her young daughter to aid her in drowning her two stepchildren at Troy, near here, Wednesday, sits today in the Obion County Jail here, by no means safe from the vengeance of the country people, who still are murmuring threats to renew their attempts to lynch her.

The woman will be tried in September. She has engaged no attorneys and refuses to discuss her crime or to defend herself. Insanity probably will be her plea.

Her husband will be the chief prosecutor, and states that he will do everything in his power to send his wife, the mother of his youngest child, to the gallows.

Hated Husband's Children.

The crime was committed Wednesday and she and her daughter confessed Thursday. Possesesd of a deep and intense hatred of the two children of her husband's former wife, she caught them wading in a creek near her home and, with the assistance of her daughter, Floy Farris, child of her former husband, strangled them and held them under the water until both were dead.

The victims were Ida May Yates, a girl of 12, and Ligon Yates, a boy of 10.

Soon afterward their bodies were discovered by the father. He immediately accused his wife, and a Coroner's Jury was summoned. She was held for first degree murder and her daughter as an accessory. That night, when news of the crime became general, a mob gathered and went to the county jail. Sheriff Finch had been warned, and when the mob arrived the mother and daughter were being taken out by a back passage. They were placed in an automobile and brought to Union City.

The woman indignantly denied the crime.

Daughter Breaks Down.

In the Union City Jail Thursday she still clung to her story, but the little daughter, who is barely 16, told everything she knew. The mother then reluctantly confessed.

She said that since she married Yates several years before, his children had been the bane of her existence. She said that she came upon them wading in the stream. They began to call her vile names, and she could not resist the temptation to drown them.

The story of Floy Farris was far more harrowing in detail than that given by her mother. She said she, with her mother, came upon the little children while they were wading.

"Let's drown them, Floy," the mother is alleged to have said. The girl at first objected strenuously, but declares that when her mother choked her and told her she would drown her also if she did not help, she said she acceded and helped hold the girl while the mother pushed the little one under water.

Girl Pursues Boy.

The boy had climbed out on the bank in the meanwhile, said Floy, and she ran through the stream and caught him. She brought him back, and her mother succeeded in holding him under the water alone.

The woman has a 16-month-old child by James Yates. The infant she kept with her in the Union City prison the first day of her incarceration, but when she confessed the little one was taken from her.

Mrs. Leiter Designs Her Children's Shoes

Wealthy Washington Society Matron Invents Healthy Cloth Sandals for Comfort of Youngsters.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Mrs. Joseph Leiter, who is often held up as an example of the perfect American mother of wealth, has designed shoes for her children which she claims gives them comfort in the summer playtime.

These shoes are something like the old-fashioned sandals, but are made of cloth instead of leather, and have side pieces to support the ankles.

Mr. and Mrs. Leiter and their two little sons are spending the summer days in their country home in the Virginia woods on the shore of the Potomac. This house is called the "Glass House in the Woods."

Greater Police Force In New York Blocked

Borough President Halts Effort to Increase Strength—Criticises Methods of Commissioner Waldo.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Borough President McAneny yesterday held up action by the Board of Estimates and Apportionment on a resolution authorizing an increase of 454 men in the police department. McAneny took the ground a study of the use of the men already in the department should be made before any increase was allowed. Mayor Gaynor and Comptroller Prendergast urged immediate action.

McAneny declared that Commissioner Waldo had too many men in clerical positions, and in his opinion the fixed post system as maintained by Waldo required more men than necessary.

CORNWALLIS-WEST DIVORCE SUIT ATTRACTS LONDON

Special Cable to The Georgian.

LONDON, July 12.—The divorce petition filed by Mrs. Cornwallis-West will be brought up for a hearing before the higher Court here within a few days. The case is expected to arouse considerable interest among fashionable London. Mrs. West obtained a decree on March 3 for restitution of conjugal rights.

SWIFT CLEARED BY JURY OF BAD MEAT CHARGE

Americus Investigators Return 'No Bill' Against Chicago Packers After Clean-Up Campaign.

AMERICUS, July 12.—Because there was insufficient evidence on which to base an indictment, the Sumter County Grand Jury, in special session, has returned a "no bill" against the local agent of Swift & Co., the big Chicago meat packers.

Charges were recently preferred against the agent of Swift & Co. by City Physician Chambliss and State Food Inspector Methvin, following a rigid inspection of meat markets, slaughter pens and grocery stores of Americus.

They condemned a quantity of meat and some live stock as being unfit. Some of the meat markets and slaughter pens were ordered closed and others were ordered cleaned and otherwise improved for the more sanitary handling of their wares.

Because of the large volume of business done by Swift & Co. in Americus and vicinity through the local distributing plant the impression prevailed that some of the tainted meat had been supplied by this concern. However, when the Grand Jury heard the evidence it was found that Swift & Co. had not either intentionally or unintentionally furnished such meat and the charges against the local agent were dismissed with a "no bill" indorsement by the Grand Jurors.

City Physician Chambliss is still active in his campaign against impure foods, having this week condemned a carload of watermelons, after several persons who had partaken of the fruit became ill. These were termed "bitter melons," the sale of which is prohibited by the State pure food laws. They came from a South Georgia truck farm.

LA GRANGE TO GREET GEORGIA WEEKLY EDITORS

Governor Slaton Will Attend Sessions and Outing to Brunswick Will Follow Meeting.

LAGRANGE, July 12.—The Georgia Weekly Press Association will hold its annual meeting in LaGrange July 22 and 23. Governor and Mrs. Slaton will attend.

Representative C. M. Methvin, of Eastman, president of the association, has announced the following program for the meeting:

Tuesday Morning, July 22—Address of welcome on behalf of the city of LaGrange, Mayor John D. Edmondson; address of welcome on behalf of LaGrange Chamber of Commerce, President W. A. Reeves; response to addresses of welcome, W. S. Coleman, Cedartown Standard; address, "The Influence of the Georgia Press on the Government of the State," John N. Holder, Jackson Herald.

Tuesday Evening—"What Line of Organized Endeavor Would Result in Greatest Good to This Association?" C. B. Chapman, Sandersville Herald; "Do We Need a Pure Advertisement Law in Georgia?" J. F. Shannon, Commerce News; "Free Plate and the Press Bureaus," W. M. Hobby, Sylvania Telephone; "Subscription Cash in Advance," J. C. Flannigan, Gwinnett Journal; "How to Get Together on Prices for Job Printing," Clifford Grubb, Worth County Local; "How to Get Together on Advertising Rates," W. T. Bacon, Madison Madisonian.

Wednesday Morning—"Cost System for a Country Shop," R. Y. Beckham, Laurens County Herald; "To Get Good Results in the Composing Room," C. E. Benns, Butler Herald; "Blotters," L. F. Scott, Jonesboro Enterprise; "Effect of Parcel Post on the Newspaper Business," R. R. Powell, Calhoun County Courier; "The Business End of a Country Paper," E. H. Graves, Toccoa Record; "Reforms Needed in State Printing," P. F. Callahan, DeKalb New Era; "Country Publisher of America," Frank Reagan, Henry County Weekly.

At 11:50 o'clock Tuesday morning the association members will go to West Point, and the afternoon will be spent as guests of that city. A barbecue will be tendered the visitors at West Point, and the weather permitting, the party will return by auto, leaving West Point about 4 o'clock.

On Wednesday afternoon a barbecue will be tendered the visitors at Ferrell's Gardens by Fuller E. Calloway, and the remainder of the afternoon will be filled with entertainment by the people of LaGrange.

On Wednesday evening a banquet will be served as a climax to the grand entertainment arranged by LaGrange. Governor and Mrs. Slaton have accepted invitations to attend the banquet, and a leading feature of this occasion will be an address by the Governor.

On Thursday morning the entire press party will leave LaGrange in special cars over the A. B. & A. Railroad for Brunswick, at which place on Friday the party will be guests of the Chamber of Commerce of that city. A boat excursion, fish dinner and other features of entertainment have been planned by the Brunswick people for the pleasure of the press crowd.

Dalton Methodist Conference Closes

Delegates to North Georgia Gathering Are Named at District Meeting.

DALTON, July 12.—Following the biggest and most interesting meetings of its history, the Dalton District, North Georgia Methodist Conference, adjourned yesterday, to meet next year in Cartersville.

Among the prominent speakers present were Dr. C. E. Dowman, of Emory College; President R. W. Smith, of Wesleyan College, and Rev. Tillman Eakes, of the church extension work of the conference.

District delegates to the annual conference of the North Georgia Methodists were elected as follows: Colonel W. C. Martin, of Dalton; Thomas Harbin, of Calhoun; J. W. Knight, of Cartersville, and T. A. Jackson, of LaFayette.

Between 150 and 200 delegates were here for the conference.

VETERAN OF GETTYSBURG IS STRICKEN ON BATTLEFIELD

ROME, July 12.—As the representative of the Rome Commandery of Knights Templar, Dr. W. L. Funkhouser, an officer of the order, has gone to Lancaster, Pa., to be with Dr. R. B. Headden. Dr. Headden participated in the battle of Gettysburg and was wounded. On almost the same spot where he escaped death as a soldier of the Confederacy 50 years ago he was stricken with apoplexy and very little hopes are entertained for his recovery. He was pastor of the First Baptist Church in Rome for 30 years and but recently resigned.

"GYPSY" SMITH TO CONDUCT REVIVAL AT CARTERSVILLE

CARTERSVILLE, July 12.—To come direct from London, England, to Cartersville to conduct an evangelistic meeting at the Sam Jones Tabernacle, is what "Gypsy" Smith will do when the annual tabernacle meetings start here August 3. Much interest is being manifested by the members of all denominations and his coming is being looked forward to with a great deal of interest. He will be assisted by Rev. Bob Jones, the Alabama evangelist. The meeting will run for ten days.

NINTH DISTRICT MASONS TO MEET IN GAINESVILLE

GAINESVILLE, July 12.—Grandmaster Robert L. Colding, of Savannah, will speak before a Masonic gathering in Gainesville August 6. It will be the occasion of the Ninth District Masonic convention, representing 69 lodges, and there will be about 150 delegates in attendance. A watermelon cutting at Chattahoochee Park, trolley rides and other features of entertainment will be enjoyed.

GROUND IS BROKEN FOR CHURCH IN GAINESVILLE

GAINESVILLE, July 12.—Ground has been broken for the new Grace Episcopal Church here, to be erected at a cost of not less than $2,000. The present church building is now being moved across town, a distance of half a mile, and will be used as a Sunday school room after the new building is built. Bishop Nelson purchased the lot and presented it to Grace Church.

EIGHTH DISTRICT MASONS MEET IN ATHENS AUGUST 13

ATHENS, July 12.—The Eighth District Masonic Convention will meet in Athens on August 13, and the local lodges are making preparations already for the entertainment of the visitors. This has become an annual convention for Athens and many of the prominent Masons of the district will be in attendance.

Firemen's Mascot Is Killed Making Run

'Blitz,' Cartersville Department's Prize Fox Terrier, Buried in Flower-Decked Grave.

CARTERSVILLE, July 12.—Cartersville's fire department is just now mourning the death of one of its most active and interesting members.

This member was the department's dog "Blitz," a comely little fox terrier, which has practically grown up with the department.

Never was there a fire that Blitz, at the tap of the gong, didn't hop to the driver's seat and on his haunches ride to the blaze and then he found duty's call in keeping watch over the hose wagon and paraphernalia. The boys had trained him to go for the mail or go to a store for cigars, tobacco or ice cream. When hungry he would go to the meat market and bark for his regular meal until he got it.

In a grave with flowers on it near the rear door of the engine house rests his body.

Wednesday morning, while on the run to a fire, the hoof of one of the horses knocked him down and the wagon wheels passed over his body.

HELEN, WHICH IS A TOWN, TO ASK INCORPORATION

GAINESVILLE, July 12.—Helen, a town at the extreme northern end of the Gainesville and Northwestern Railroad, will, through the Representative of White County, make application for incorporation this session of the Legislature.

The first mail was this week carried between this place and Helen. Mail trains are run each day.

SUMMER SCHOOL STUDENTS TAKE A TRIP TO TALLULAH

ATHENS, July 12.—Four hundred summer school students and nearly as many of the people of Athens made up a special train party that visited Tallulah Falls yesterday. This is an annual features of the summer school and many more took advantage of the trip this year because it is the last chance to see the Falls before their beauty is marred by the turning of the water from the fall into the power canal.

HEAVY DOCKET AWAITS HALL SUPERIOR COURT

GAINESVILLE, July 12.—About 300 cases are to come up before the July semi-annual Superior Court of Hall County to convene, Monday, July 21.

The term will occupy a full two weeks. Of these about 100 are on the criminal docket and subject to trial. There is one murder case. The remaining number are on the civil docket, and for 56 of them it is the appearance term.

PIONEER TRAPPER, HUNTER AND FISHERMAN DIES AT 101

ROME, July 12.—A. J. Reed, who moved to Floyd County when Indians roamed the woods and fished in its streams, is dead. Reed was 101 years old. Reed had been a resident of Floyd County for nearly 85 years, and used to be a trapper, hunter and fisherman. He was 48 years old when the war broke out. He served in the Confederate army.

HOME CAPITAL TO BUILD RAILROAD FOR FORSYTH

GAINESVILLE, July 12.—A railroad is proposed for Forsyth County, which now has none. It is likely the road will be built with home capital. The route proposed is from Cumming, the county site, to a point on the Southern Railway, probably to connect with the Lawrenceville road to the county seat of Gwinnett.

BOY SCOUTS ON 40-MILE MARCH TO TENNESSEE

Chattanooga Is Destination of Atlanta and Dalton Troops Taking Long Hike.

DALTON, July 12.—Accompanied by Scout Master W. M. Sapp and the Dalton Troop of Boy Scouts, Troop 3, Boy Scouts, of Atlanta, under Scout Master E. G. Everritt, left early this morning for the 40-mile hike to Chattanooga. They will make the hike by easy stages, traveling about ten miles daily.

The Atlanta Scouts arrived in a special car over the Southern Railway yesterday morning, being met at the depot by the Dalton Troop. From the depot they formed in line and marched to Hamilton street, where the "orders of the day" were received, the troop then breaking ranks and accompanying the Dalton Scouts to their homes for lunch. During the afternoon they drove in automobiles over the city, and at night were the guests of the Daughters of the American Revolution at an entertainment in the auditorium of the City Park School.

The Atlanta Scouts came well equipped for the long hike, John McLemore, in the role of chef, accompanying them. They will return to Dalton on July 20 and will catch the 5:30 train for the return trip to Atlanta.

Scout Master Everritt is accompanied by the following members of his troop:

Washington Fans Go 30 Miles for Game

Stores Close When 250 Travel Through Country to See Home Team Meet Elberton.

ELBERTON, July 12.—That Washington, Wilkes County, is an enthusiastic baseball town was demonstrated when 250 loyal fans came 30 miles through the country to Elberton to see their team meet the local nine. Every store in Washington closed, and the clerks and heads of the firms were here to root loud and long for their team.

Elberton won from Washington Tuesday and Washington won from Elberton Wednesday.

Elberton took the last game, the score being 17 to 3.

The next games will be with Madison here Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week.

To Sell 'General's' Whistle at Auction

Owner of War Relic to Give Proceeds to Decatur Orphans' Home.

DALTON, July 12.—James Barry, of this city, who owns the whistle which was on the engine "General" when it was captured by Andrews' raiders, has determined to offer the whistle for sale to the highest bidder, the proceeds from the sale to be given to the Orphans' Home at Decatur.

Mr. Barry drove the "General" when it was a main line engine on the Western and Atlantic Road for several years after the war. When the engine was abandoned he removed the whistle and kept it. The bell also was removed, and is a valued possession of ex-Governor Joseph M. Brown. Another whistle and bell were put on the engine when it was removed to Chattanooga and stationed in the Union Depot there.

J. J. BROWN MAY OPPOSE TRIBBLE FOR CONGRESS

ELBERTON, July 12.—J. J. Brown, former Assistant Commissioner of Agriculture, is being urged by friends to oppose Samuel Tribble for Congress next year. He may announce in a few days. He was in Waycross to-day at a Farmers' Union rally, but will return home next week. Congressman Tribble is serving his second term as the Eighth District representative.

BAPTISTS START CAMPAIGN TO ADVERTISE REVIVAL

DALTON, July 12.—Although their meeting is more than two months distant, the members of the First Baptist Church have begun an extensive campaign of advertising for a revival. Bulletins will be issued weekly from now until the meeting starts September 14, and newspaper space has been contracted for. The meeting will be under the direction of Rev. J. H. Dew, of Missouri.

TEACHERS AT INSTITUTE WILL GET THEIR PAY

DALTON, July 12.—The teachers of this county are making preparations for the annual teachers' institute, which begins Monday morning. Miss C. S. Parrish, State School Supervisor for North Georgia, will conduct the program. The Board of Education at is meeting this week made arrangements for borrowing money to pay all teachers who attend.

MOTHERLESS CHILDREN LIVED ON BLACKBERRIES

GAINESVILLE, July 12.—When the Rev. Matt Hawkins, of the Decatur Orphans' Home, went to Bellton, in Hall County, to get the three little motherless children of James Cantrell, who is in jail on a murder charge, he found that the children for days had been living on blackberries and were hungry.

LAWMAKERS IN ATHENS TO SEE STATE SCHOOLS

Chamber of Commerce and Citizens Unite in Entertaining Legislature at Barbecue.

ATHENS, July 12.—The Georgia Senate and House of Representatives, several hundred strong, invaded Athens to-day and were entertained elaborately by the Chamber of Commerce and Athens citizens in general, who invited both houses to come to Georgia's Classic City for a view of the State's educational property here.

Practically every branch of the State University—that is, old Franklin College, the Agricultural College and the Normal School—are asking for increased appropriations this year, and it was sought in this trip of the Assemblies to Athens to have the lawmakers see for themselves what is being done here and what is really needed.

President Randolph Anderson, of the Senate, and Speaker W. H. Burwell, of the House, both expressed themselves as favoring an increase in the appropriations to the State's educational institutions, especially those that stand for advanced education, but this is well nigh impossible under the present tax situation.

The body was the guest of the Athens Chamber of Commerce from the time it boarded the special in Atlanta until it reached the Union depot tonight. On arriving here at 12 o'clock the State Normal School plant was visited. At Tibbets Park, with several thousand Athenians, an old-fashioned Georgia barbecue was held. At 3 o'clock the University and the State College of Agriculture were visited and at 6 the special train returned to Atlanta.

Ask Government to Drain Large Swamp

Whitfield County Farmers Seek to Reclaim Wide Area of Land Now Useless.

DALTON, July 12.—The farmers of the east side of Whitfield County are deeply interested in a project to drain Coahulla Creek and reclaim thousands of acres of farm lands rendered practically useless now because of the fact that they are inundated most of the year.

Recently they took the matter up with the United States Government, and C. L. Foster has received a letter from S. H. McCroy, engineer in charge of drainage investigations, that J. V. Phillips, drainage engineer stationed at Savannah, would be sent here to make the preliminary examination.

The creek is filled with logs and other rubbish, causing water to overflow and back up over farm lands whenever a rain of any consequence falls.

Town Asks Country To All-Day Singing

Elberton Committee Invites People From Surrounding Section to Attend Old-Fashioned Song Session.

ELBERTON, July 12.—Instead of the town people going to the country to enjoy an "all-day" singing, the country people are coming to town Saturday, July 26.

A committee composed of A. A. Seymour, A. L. Thornton, J. N. Adams, J. S. Mann and R. B. Sanders has invited everybody—"the old and young, the boys and girls, the rich and poor, to take part in the meeting."

CARTERSVILLE TO STOP SELLING LIGHT FIXTURES

CARTERSVILLE, July 12.—Cartersville will no longer engage in the business of furnishing light and gas supplies or do any electric wiring, due to a petition filed by a local hardware house a few days ago. Ever since the city has owned and operated its electric and gas plants it has been conducting this business, not for the purpose of making money, but to create a demand for light and power.

NEW SANITARY LAWS PASSED AT ELBERTON

ELBERTON, July 12.—City Council of Elberton has made it compulsory upon fruit and ice cream venders and meat venders to protect from flies all of their products offered for sale. An ordinance has also been passed compelling barbers to thoroughly cleanse their hands before shaving each person and prohibiting the use of a towel on more than one patron.

CAMPERS LEAP TO SAFETY AS VEHICLE TURNS TURTLE

DALTON, July 12.—A hasty leap from the hack in which they were riding as it was overturned and rolled down a mountainside in Murray County, saved several local couples from a nasty fall, if not serious injury. The party was headed over the rough mountain roads for Jack River when the hack overturned. One of the horses was so badly injured that it could not proceed. None of the campers was injured.

REVIVAL IN PROGRESS AT ELBERTON CHURCH

ELBERTON, July 12.—Rev. Raleigh Wright, evangelist, assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Blankenship, is conducting a successful revival at the First Baptist Church. Many have signified their intention of joining the churches of the city, and much interest is being shown in the meeting.

For news of social happenings of the whole South see Page 8 of this section and the Society Section.

Superintendents Ask One Mill School Tax

Memorial to Legislature Would Require Every County to Provide Educational Fund.

ATHENS, July 12.—The County School Superintendents of the State, who have been in conference session here this week, finished their program Friday and adjourned. More than 50 counties were represented. It is expected that practically every superintendent in the State will be here next year as this was the first meeting of this kind ever held in Georgia.

The sessions were addressed by State Superintendent M. L. Brittain, Miss Celeste Parrish, of Atlanta; Professor Lawson, of Augusta; W. K. Tate, of South Carolina, and other well known educators.

The Superintendents adopted a resolution directed to the Georgia Legislature, asking that a constitutional amendment be submitted to the people of Georgia that every county be required to levy a tax of one mill for school purposes only and that this be increased to five mills if so recommended by a county board of education. Twenty-six counties in the State already levy a similar tax.

Gainesville Ready For New Power Line

Chattahoochee and Tallulah Falls Both to Supply Electricity to North Georgia City.

GAINESVILLE, July 12.—A new set of transformers is being arranged and connected to receive the current from the Tallulah Falls dam of the Georgia Power Company for use in Gainesville and contiguous territory.

With 11,000 voltage from the Chattahoochee dam near Gainesville, a part of the 110,000 voltage of Tallulah Falls will be consumed for power, heat and light in Gainesville. This can be used in addition to the present supply of electricity or in its place.

PARSON JAILED WITH WIFE OF PARISHIONER

Elopers Caught in Marked Tree, Ark., and Taken Back to Cartersville by Sheriff.

CARTERSVILLE, July 12.—Rev. John Wheeler and Mrs. Mattie Lee Porter, an eloping couple, now occupy cells in the Bartow County Jail, Sheriff Charlie Smith returning from Cotton Plant, Ark., with them Thursday afternoon.

At Christmastide last year Rev. Mr. Wheeler, leaving his wife and several children, and Mrs. Porter, leaving her husband and one child, eloped, and the officers have been in pursuit.

They both lived in the little community of Sugar Valley, just a few miles from Cartersville, and the intimacy between the two was not known until they ran away. The Grand Jury at the January term of Superior Court found true bills against each.

Rev. Mr. Wheeler is 51 years old, and for about 25 years has resided in this county. He worked as a machinist at Cotton Plant, which was his old trade. Prior to his elopement he filled engagements nearly every Sunday in many country communities.

Mrs. Porter is about 25 years old and her husband was a respected citizen of Sugar Valley. She is the mother of several small children and brought back with her a baby about four months old.

GET BIDS ON POSTOFFICE.

CARTERSVILLE, July 12.—Bids are now being received for the construction of the new $65,000 postoffice building and the contract will probably be awarded about August 1, and it is expected that work will be started by September 1.

CLEARS NAME FOR COMRADE AFTER 50 YRS.

Soldier Branded as Deserter Is Proved by Indiana Tomb to Have Died in Hospital.

ROME, July 12.—Placed on the roll as a deserted by his comrades in gray 50 years ago, the name of a Georgia soldier has been cleared. Through a mere accident one of the surviving members of his company, W. O. Connor, of Rome, found that the man, who for years had been held in disgrace, died in an Indiana hospital.

Connor has been in Indianapolis attending a conference of principals and superintendents for the deaf. While there he had occasion to visit the Green Lawn Cemetery, near Indianapolis, where are interred hundreds of Confederate and Federal soldiers. He read the names of many of them and was surprised to find that six members of his company were resting there.

There names were found that Connor's company had been unable to account for: J. L. Bass, B. F. Barnett, a brother of Dan Barnett of Rome; and Samuel C. Hamby. Bass, after the surrender of Vicksburg, was placed upon the roll of the company as a deserter, and his name until to-day has always borne that stigma. This week, however, it was found that he died honorably as a prisoner of war in Camp Morton, Ind. Connor says his company was in Vicksburg nine days after the surrender and thinks that Bass became ill and was carried to a hospital.

TO START DALTON REVIVAL.

DALTON, July 12.—Rev. E. B. Farrar, of Alabama, will tomorrow start a protracted meeting at the Second Baptist Church.

TWINS TANGLE PRE-NATAL PLAN FOR SUPPORT

Extra Arrival Upsets Financial Arrangement Made by Couple Who Separated Quickly.

AUGUSTA, July 12.—Can a husband and wife separate and agree upon the amount the father shall pay to the mother for the support of an unborn child?

Judge Hammond, of the Richmond Superior Court, says that they can not.

F. A. Jones was married to Miss Margaret Rountree in 1908. Three months after their marriage they separated and Jones gave his wife $1,200 in settlement of all her claims against him for the support of her and of her unborn child. Six months after the separation twin sons were born to Mrs. Jones.

The mother, through her attorneys, Isaac S. Peebles, Jr., and E. Foster Brigham, recently brought action to compel the father to help support his children, it being alleged that there were two children instead of one, and that the agreement between Jones and his wife stipulated that the $1,200 he paid was for the support of her and of her unborn child, and in view of the fact that one of the twins was not mentioned, it was up to the father to contribute toward its support.

Jones agreed to support both of the children in his answer to plaintiff's petition, but stated that if he had to support them he wanted the custody of them.

Judge Hammond decided that both of the children should stay with their mother, that the father pay $25 per month for their support, and also the attorneys' fees.

The court held that the father and mother had no right to enter into an agreement regarding the support of any unborn child; that the first rights of an individual come when he is actually born into the world.

The Jones twins are handsome little fellows, four years of age. Their mother makes a good salary, while the father is also well to do.

Augusta Wiping Out Contagious Diseases

Typhoid Almost Forgotten Since Board of Health Inaugurated 'Swat the Fly' Campaign.

AUGUSTA, July 12.—There is less malaria and typhoid fever in Augusta now than in many years, and probably in the history of the city, according to Dr. Eugene E. Murphey, president of the Board of Health.

"There has been only one death from typhoid fever in Augusta this summer," said Dr. Murphey, "and there are comparatively few cases. Better milk, fewer flies and inoculation have improved conditions wonderfully.

"There has not been a single case of typhoid fever at the camp of the Georgia-Carolina Power Company at Stevens Creek, and with a population of between 1,500 and 2,000 it is remarkable indeed."

Orders Dividend Paid To Bank's Creditors

Judge Hammond Directs Distribution of Citizens Trust Funds at Augusta.

AUGUSTA, July 12.—Lacking about a week of one year from the time the Citizens Trust Company went into the hands of a receiver, an order to-day was passed by the Superior Court for a distribution of the assets of the defunct concern. Judge Hammond directed that a dividend of 20 per cent be paid on liabilities amounting to approximately $174,000.

The receiver reported that he had collected approximately $40,000, and about $2,500 of that amount is due for taxes to city, State and county. Also the receiver and his attorneys must be paid. The court ordered the 20 per cent dividend paid, even though the entire amount in the hands of the receiver will be exhausted. The receiver, J. Armstrong, expects to collect some additional money, although just how much can not as yet be ascertained.

HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS

Macon Bar Votes to Abolish J. P. Courts

Association Favors Bill Proposed by Representative Miller—Will Elect Judge January 1.

MACON, July 12.—The Macon Bar Association to-day indorsed without change the bill proposed by Representative Wallace Miller for the abolition of the justice of the peace courts and the creation of a new municipal court.

The fight in the association hinged on the proposition of electing the judge by the people, and those in favor of electing the judge finally won out by a substantial majority. The indorsement of the bill will be forwarded to the Bibb delegation in the Legislature.

The justice courts in the city, not those in the county, will be abolished. The judge of the new court will be elected every four years, and will receive a salary of $3,000 a year. The sheriff, clerk and deputies will be appointed by the judge.

There has been much interest manifested in the proposition of creating the new municipal court, especially on the plan of electing the judge. Public sentiment here is opposed to the appointment of the judge by the Governor, and this was reflected in the action of the bar association.

The new court will be established January 1.

$10,000 Yearly for State Fair Sought

Macon Men to Ask Assembly for Annual Appropriation for Agricultural Awards.

MACON, July 12.—A committee of prominent Macon men will appear before the Appropriation Committee of the House on Tuesday afternoon and urge a favorable report on the bill providing for ten annual appropriations of $10,000 each to the Georgia State Fair.

It is intended that this money shall be used as cash awards for the best results in agriculture. It will be urged that many other States contribute to the maintenance of their State fairs, and that Georgia should fall in line.

Already the fair association gives $15,000 every year in prizes, this money being taken form the gate receipts.

The committee to appear before the Legislators consists of Julius H. Otto, W. G. Lee, H. B. Erminger, C. B. Lewis, W. E. Dunwody, E. W. Stetson, J. T. Moore, W. A. Huff, O C. Gibson and H. C. Robert.

Pythians to Extend Order to England

T. J. Carling of Macon, Supreme Chancellor, Has Ambitious Plans For Fraternal Organization.

MACON, July 12.—The Knights of Pythias are going to establish lodges in England as soon as they can be organized. T. J. Carling, of Macon, supreme chancellor of the Grand Lodge, has appointed Fred S. Attwood, of Minneapolis, deputy supreme chancellor for England, and Mr. Attwood will leave this month to begin his duties.

Mr. Carling plans to extend, during his administration, the scope of the Pythian organization to all of the countries of Europe. The campaigns in other countries will not be undertaken, however, until lodges are formed in England.

Mr. Carling is now in New York, visiting the subordinate lodges of that State.

Central Is Adjusting Station Site Claims

All Settlements Must Be Made With Owners Before Depot Plan Gets State's O. K.

MACON, July 12.—Committees from Council and the Chamber of Commerce are co-operating with the Central of Georgia Railroad officials in an effort to arrange settlements with the property owners on lower Cherry street who assert that their property will be damaged by the closing up of Cherry street at Fifth, where it is proposed to build the union station.

The Central has agreed to pay all reasonable claims, and must report to the Railroad Commission that all claims have been settled before the depot proposition will be sanctioned by the commission.

SIX CANDIDATES FOR CITY TREASURY PLACE

MACON, July 12.—There are six candidates for the office of City Treasurer, which was made vacant this week by the death of A. R. Tinsley, who had been treasurer for 25 years. The applicants are J. H. Timberlake, J. E. P. Stevens, Steve McKenna, J. E. Guilford, Harrison Johnson and Harry McKay. The new treasurer will be elected by the City Council Tuesday night.

JUDGE SPEER GOE; TO HIS MOUNTAIN RESORT

MACON, July 12.—Judge Emory Speer left to-day for Mount Airy, N. C., where he has a summer home. He was accompanied by Mrs. Speer and by his private secretary, W. A. Cameron, and Mrs. Cameron.

Judge Speer will remain at Mount Airy until about November 1. He is a sufferer with hay fever, and it is for that reason he seeks a cooler climate every year.

SALVATION ARMY MAN GETS IMPORTANT POST

MACON, July 12.—Ensign Louis Coleman, who has been in charge of the Macon Post of the Salvation Army for six years, has been transferred to Savannah. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Coleman, who actively assists him in his work. Ensign Coleman will conduct farewell services in one of the Macon churches on July 20.

NEGRO INJURED BY TRAIN MAY DIE OF NEGLECT

Laurens Officials Would Not Take Burden Off Macon, Dublin and Savannah Road.

DUBLIN, July 12.—The problem of what to do with a negro who was hurt by jumping off a moving train on the Macon, Dublin and Savannah Railroad near Montrose, Laurens County, because he was stealing a ride and was seen by some of the train crew, developed into an interesting situation here this week, in which the negro, George Farmer, is the ultimate sufferer and may not recover from his injuries.

Farmer jumped from a passenger train near Montrose several days ago while stealing a ride, and the train stopped, picked him up and carried him to Danville, the next stop. There he was left in the care of someone, who set his arm that was badly fractured, but neglected his broken jawbone, a large cut on his forehead and several bruises. There he stayed for a day or two getting barely enough to eat, and his condition growing worse daily from neglect. Then the company brought him to Dublin and turned him over to the county authorities as a pauper. The Commissioners ruled that the negro was in no sense a pauper and refused to take charge of him. Then the company endeavored to have him arrested on a warrant charging him with stealing a ride, so as to have him put in jail and receive medical treatment. However, no one would serve the warrant.

Finally persons who knew about the case took the negro in charge and got him a place to stay and someone to take care of him. A physician volunteered his services free.

New Administration Now Governs Dublin

Council Elects Complete Corps of City Officials at First Session.

DUBLIN, July 12.—The county now has a new administration, the new Mayor and Aldermen having been sworn in this week and are now in charge. At the first meeting of the new officials the following city officials were elected for the year:

Mayor Pro tem, T. R. Ramsay; Treasurer, J. S. Simons; Clerk of Council, A. H. Graham; Recorder, J. B. Green; Chief of Police, J. B. Hightower; policemen, D. J. Forehand, J. W. Thompkins, H. L. Cox, A. W. McCracken and G. T. Rowe; City Attorney, W. C. Davis; City Engineer, M. J. Guyton; City Physician, T. H. Hall; superintendent of streets, S. J. Hattaway; firemen, W. R. Locke and R. E. Orr; members of Board of Education, G. H. Williams, W. L. Joiner and L. Q. Stubbs; trustees of Carnegie Library, H. M. Carrerre and R. D. Flynt; Sexton, E. S. Overstreet.

Refusing to Swear, Witnesses Useless

"Saints of Christ and Children of God" Lose Standing in Court Because of Scruples.

MACON, July 12.—Three negro women were arraigned before Recorder Daly for trial on the charge of disturbing church worship. Twenty members of the congregation of Saints of Christ and Children of God Church stood up as witnesses. "Swear the witnesses," said the Recorder. "We don't swear," replied one of the twenty; "it is against our religion."

"Cases dismissed," announced Judge Daly. The three defendants had brought fifteen witnesses to court, and they offered to take the oath.

DUBLIN DISTRICT SHOWS $500,000 PROPERTY GAIN

DUBLIN, July 12.—The Tax Receiver of Laurens County is now consolidating the returns for 1913, and present indications are that the increase in values in Dublin district alone will run to $500,000. The digest is not yet completed, but there is every indication of a healthy increase all over the county.

HER WHITE POODLE MISSING, WOMAN JAILS YOUNG MAN

AUGUSTA, July 12.—Jailed because he couldn't produce a dog which it was alleged he had in his possession, Mose Levy, a young white man, was released on habeas corpus proceedings brought by Isaac S. Peebles, Jr., his attorney.

Lillian Woodward alleged that her white poodle had been taken by Levy and that he refused to give it up. Accordingly she brought action against him in Magistrate E. T. Bennett's Court.

BIBB COUNTY OFFICERS FILE QUARTERLY STATEMENTS

MACON, July 12.—All of the Bibb County officers have filed their statements of receipts and disbursements for the second quarter with the comptroller general. These figures show that the officers have approximately the following incomes per year:

Sheriff, $9,000; Clerk of the Superior Court, $8,500; Clerk of the City Court, $8,000; Tax Collector, $7,500; Ordinary, $5,000; Solicitor General of the Macon Circuit, $12,000.

KENTUCKY PASTOR FILLS DUBLIN BAPTIST PULPIT

DUBLIN, July 12.—The Rev. J. C. Stillions, of Louisville, Ky., will fill the pulpit of the First Baptist Church here during the remainder of the month of July, beginning to-morrow. The church is without a pastor at this time, and Mr. Stillions is acting as a supply.

W. A. Clark, at 71, Begins as Reformer

Makes Fight for Better Administration of County's Funds, and With Success.

AUGUSTA, July 12.—Joseph W. Folk began his "fight for a State" in his thirties. Walter A. Clark has begun his "fight for a county" in his seventies. It is most unusual for a man who is a septuagenarian to begin to be a reformer. Reforming usually is too hard a task for young and vigorous man, but when a man of Mr. Clark's age and physical condition tackles the problem of reforming a county, it is remarkable.

The man who has set about to reform Richmond County, or at least help the situation here, is a veteran and is 71 years of age. He now is County Treasurer and has been since 1897. From 1870 to 1876 he represented this county in the Legislature. After an interval of a decade, he began serving the county again, and from 1886 until the present time he has been connected with the county government in one capacity or another.

It was because Mr. Clark paid the bills of Richmond County that he came to tackle the job of bettering conditions. He saw where thousands of dollars of the people's money were being expended and the county not getting the proper results. He found waste and extravagance in various places, and in a remarkable series of letters published in both of the Augusta papers he made his "fight for a county."

Cordele Women Hurt In Runaway Accident

Mrs. Johnnie Whitsett and Miss Estelle Holt Victims—Wheelbarrow Frightens Horse.

CORDELE, July 12.—Mrs. Johnnie Whitsett was seriously injured and Miss Estelle Holt sustained painful, though not serious, wounds to-day when a horse ran away with them, overturning the buggy in which they were riding, dashing them violently against the ground.

The accident took place in front of the new postoffice building, the horses becoming frightened at a negro pushing a wheelbarrow. For more than an hour Mrs. Whitsett was unconscious. She fell on a shoulder and her head when the buggy overturned. Physicians do not think that her skull was fractured or that she is suffering from concussion of the brain. Miss Holt was able to walk within half an hour after the accident.

Despondent Girl's Recovery Predicted

Young Woman Who Drank Carbolic Acid Now Wants to Escape Death.

CORDELE, July 12.—Miss Georgia Williams, 18 years of age, who attempted to end her life by drinking carbolic acid several days ago because she was despondent over continued ill health, now has an excellent chance to recover. At first little hope was held out for her recovery.

Though Miss Williams has declared before taking the poison that "life for her was not worth living," the experience of the past few days has completely reversed her opinion and she is now anxious to regain her normal health.

Auto Catches Fire, Women Just Escape

Gasoline in Flooded Carbureter Ignites and Touring Car Is Destroyed Quickly.

CORDELE, July 12.—An automobile party of Cordele women had a narrow escape at dusk yesterday when the car caught fire and was quickly destroyed.

In the party were Mrs. A. C. Frasuer Mrs. J. S. Comer, Mrs. Hope Roberts and little daughter, and Mrs. G. E. Miller.

The carbureter became flooded and the motor refused to work. While the driver was trying to make the necessary repairs, the gasoline in the carbureter became ignited and soon the car was enveloped in flames, scarcely giving the occupants time to escape.

Slashed Skirt Has All Cordele Looking

Handsome Visitor Walks Right Down Main Street With an Unconcerned Air—Town Aghast.

CORDELE, July 12.—A handsome woman wearing one of the new style slashed skirts created a near-sensation in Cordele yesterday.

As men started from the stores, the object of their attention, who was a visitor in the city for a day, strolled down the sidewalk on the main business street with head high and an unconcerned air.

Such an attraction is rare in Cordele—not the lady, but the skirt.

SCHOOL SITE INJUNCTION SUIT HEARING POSTPONED

CORDELE, July 12.—Hearing for permanent injunction in the case of citizens of Northern Heights, a popular residence section of Cordele, against the Bond Commission, composed of Dr. D. J. Williams, Jerry Slade and O. S. Bazemore, to restrain the officials from erecting a ward school on a site unsatisfactory to the residents, was postponed by Judge W. F. George, of Superior Court, to-day. A temporary restraining order against the commission was granted ten days ago.

COURT WILL CONFIRM SALE OF BANKRUPT FIRM'S GOODS

AUGUSTA, July 12.—At Mount Airy Monday, Judge Emory Speer will be asked to confirm the sale of the real and personal property of the Perkins Manufacturing Company, bankrupt. The realty, including the real estate, buildings and machinery, brought $66,000, the amount of the first mortgage bonds with accrued interest, and was bought by Mrs. Ruth B. Carpenter and other bondholders. The personal property, including the stock of lumber on hand, the horses, mules, wagons, etc., was purchased by Jacob Phinizy, representing the second mortgage bondholders, for $11,000. The sale is not a sale, however, until confirmed by the court.

DEPOT DANGERS AROUSE GRIFFIN FOLK TO ACTION

Congestion of Trains at One Morning Hour Imperils Lives, Declare Petitioners.

GRIFFIN, July 12.—Griffin people are making complaints on the dangerous conditions at the passenger depot of the Southern and Central Railways. A strong petition has been circulated among the people, and a long list of names has been affixed, that it may be submitted to the Railroad Commission.

The cause of Griffin's complaint is the fact that at 9 o'clock each morning four trains are at the same time receiving and discharging passengers and baggage on parallel tracks at the depot.

Three of the trains arrive at the same time, and approach the depot and waiting passengers in opposite directions. Confusion and danger arise every moment, and it is an every day occurrence for some one to have to be pulled off the track of one train while he is trying to dodge another. As the trains come to a stand on parallel tracks, with only a few feet of space between them, it is necessary for women and children to trudge back and forth between the trains and baggage trucks in order to get aboard the trains they want.

Only a few days ago Miss Bessie Greer was struck by a Southern train as she was trying to evade a Central train. She has just been discharged from the hospital. Shortly before Miss Greer's life was endangered another young woman was hurled some distance under similar circumstances. More than once in recent days similar narrow escapes have been noted.

The matter has been laid before the Commission with the request that something be done to make a visit to the depot here a little more safe.

Chairman Murphey Candler, of the Commission, has been in communication with some of the signers of the petition and gives notice that the Commission will attend to the petition immediately.

Pastor to Put on 'Lid' At Big Campmeeting

Soft Drinks and Other Palatables Will Not Be Sold on Sunday at Mount Zion.

GRIFFIN, July 12.—The Rev. Thomas M. Elliott, pastor in charge of the Griffin Circuit of Methodist churches, in which is located the famous Mount Zion campground, gives promise that the "lid" will be put on good and tight during the campmeeting this year. For several years considerable trouble has been experienced on account of the buying and selling of soft drinks and other palatables on Sunday at the campmeetings.

Mr. Elliott has given notice that nothing shall be sold at the campground on Sunday, so long as he is pastor of the meeting, and that in all probability the public tent will not be run even in the week days. This determination has been reached because of the annoyance in years past and of the hindrance to the success of the spiritual work of the meeting by the buying and selling at the public tent.

The campmeeting this year gives promise of being the best in years. To co-operate with the pastor in the meetings, the Revs. W. G. Crawley, of Oxford; J. M. Tumlin, of Thomaston, and F. R. Seaborn, of Stockbridge, will be present. Charlie D. Tillman will conduct the singing.

Two Funerals Held Over Suicide's Body

Sister of Dead Man Faints at Second Service, Year After Death.

GRIFFIN, July 12.—The unusual experience of burying a man a year after his death came to Rev. J. C. Adams, one of Griffin's ministers, this week. And the funeral service conducted by Mr. Adams was the second one over this body.

Last August, while living in Illinois, near East St. Louis, E. J. Brown committed suicide by shooting himself through the head. At that time he was buried in the town where he died. His wife and mother-in-law came to Griffin to reside with his people, and have been here for eleven months.

Recently Mrs. Brown and her mother decided to have the body exhumed in Illinois and shipped here for final interment. Upon arrival here the body was reinterred in the city cemetery. Mrs. Staten, sister of the dead man, fainted just as the minister began the second funeral service.

Baptists to Improve Locust Grove School

Flint River Association to Meet at Griffin on Monday to Discuss Plans.

GRIFFIN, July 12.—A very important meeting to take place here next Monday is the conference of the pastors and laymen of the Flint River Association of Georgia Baptists. It is expected that at least 100 of the representatives of the Baptist denomination will be on hand. A prominent phase of the work they will give attention to at this meeting will be the physical improvement of the Locust Grove Institute, which is under the care of the Baptists.

Rev. J. E. Sammons, pastor of the Griffin First Baptist Church, will preside at the pastors' conference, while J. P. Nichols, a prominent layman, of Griffin, will be in charge of the deliberations of the laymen. Rev. J. J. Bennett, corresponding secretary of the Georgia Baptist Convention Board of Missions, is to be present and deliver an address.

BRUNSWICK GAY WITH FLAGS FOR STATE REUNION

Confederate Veterans of Georgia to Hold Annual Meeting Next Wednesday and Thursday.

BRUNSWICK, July 12.—Already the streets of Brunswick have taken on a martial appearance in the form of decorations for the approaching State reunion of Georgia Confederate Veterans, which takes place in this city next week. All the committees are now actively at work preparing for the reception of the visitors. When the division chaplain delivers his prayer at the Glynn County courthouse on Wednesday morning it is expected upward of 2,000 visitors will be present.

Governor to Speak.

Governor John M. Slaton, who arrived here to-day, will address the veterans Wednesday afternoon, to be followed by the presentation of the sponsors, matrons of honor and maids of honor, one of the important social events of a reunion. The address of J. O. Preston, of Macon, promises to be one of the most interesting of the reunion, as it is expected it will deal entirely with future reunions, a subject of much interest to the veteran.

The fight for next year's reunion is expected to be very keen this year. Already three cities have been mentioned, and it is probable several others will be entered before the balloting starts on Thursday morning.

To Visit State Guard.

For the first time in years the veterans and the State troops will meet together on camp field when the boys of '61 will be guests of the Fifth Regiment on St. Simons Thursday. This event is being looked forward to with much pleasure by local people, and it is expected on that day at least 3,500 people will visit the island.

The reunion will end Thursday night and the visitors will leave for their homes Friday morning.

Commander Arrives Tuesday.

Major General H. T. Davenport, commander of the Georgia Division, United Confederate Veterans, and Captain John A. Cobb, adjutant general and chief of staff, both of Americus, will arrive in Brunswick Tuesday, accompanied by a large number of veterans from their home camp and an escort of Sons of Veterans.

The fact that Commander Davenport and Captain Cobb are such intimate friends makes their association as the head officers of the veterans of Georgia unusually pleasant. Commander Davenport was only 18 years old when he joined the Confederate Army, having enlisted as a member of Company A, Twelfth Georgia Regiment, June 26, 1861. After going through a major part of the heavy fighting in which that regiment was engaged, he was finally captured in the battle of Spottsylvania Courthouse and sent to Elmira prison. He had just been paroled from prison when Lee surrendered.

General Davenport became commander of Americus Camp, No. 642, in 1902. Through the successive stages of lieutenant colonel on the staff and brigadier general, he rose to be major general of the Georgia Division, the position which he now holds and to which he was chosen last year. His popularity among the veterans of the State is marked. No schoolboy will be happier than he when he meets his comrades at the seashore this week.

Captain Cobb will be the "right-hand man" of Commander Davenport at the Brunswick reunion.

As Americus this year is the home of both the commander and adjutant general and chief of staff of the Georgia Division, a large number of veterans will come from that section of the State.

SAVANNAH TO PUBLISH ALL PURE FOOD ARRESTS

SAVANNAH, July 12.—That publicity is the cure for many public ills is the sincere conviction of Alderman John W. Daniel, chairman of the Health Committee of City Council. Where unsound foodstuffs are condemned in the future Alderman Daniel proposes to make public the fact, giving the names of the offending firms and the circumstances under which the city has made seizures. It has been the custom heretofore to condemn and say nothing about the matter.

SCOTT T. BEATON TO RUN FOR MAYOR OF WAYCROSS

WAYCROSS, July 12.—Following the announcement that J. E. T. Bowden will become a candidate for Mayor, it is stated to-day that Scott T. Beaton, Alderman of the Fourth, will announce.

He admits that he has the matter under consideration, but does not think the time is ripe for announcements.

He is one of the active members of Council and has a following that will make his entry interesting. At least four men will seek the office this fall. The others are Jet Bowden, James Sinclair and J. W. Strickland.

BALKAN WAR NAMES ARE BARRED IN SPELLING BEE

WAYCROSS, July 12.—Mayor Harry D. Reed captained one of two teams of spellers in an old-time spelling bee given here last night for the benefit of the public library. V. L. Stanton, president of the Board of Education, led the other team.

Prominent men and women of the city made up the teams and the contest was one of the most interesting ever held in the city. Balkan war names were ruled out of order and probably saved many a citizen's reputation for spelling.

Plan to Halt Weevil Pest Gets Approval

Cotton Factors of Savannah Think Senator Smith's Suggestion Most Reasonable.

SAVANNAH, July 12.—The majority of Savannah cotton factors are not practical farmers, but they believe United States Senator Smith of South Carolina has advanced a feasible plan for checking the eastward advance of the boll weevil.

Most of them give the plan suggested by Senator Smith hearty approval. The plan is for the Federal Government, with State co-operation, to prohibit the growing of cotton in a belt which would separate the Atlantic Coast States which the weevil has not yet invaded from the Southwestern States, where the pest annually destroys millions of dollars worth of cotton.

DEAL CLOSED TO BUILD GAS PLANT FOR WAYCROSS

WAYCROSS, July 12.—Negotiations have about been closed for the erection of a modern gas plant. Work was started several months ago, but plans were changed and nothing has been done since. The new deal means that work will start at once and be rushed to completion. The plant probably will be ready for business within twelve months.

MATRON CHANGES WATCH TO LEARN POLICE METHODS

SAVANNAH, July 12.—In order to become acquainted with night work at the police station Mrs. Annie Fisher, police matron, has changed her shift, and now goes on duty at 9 o'clock at night and remains until 7 in the morning.

Mrs. Fisher has become thoroughly familiar with the procedure during the day at the police station.

SPARTANBURG COAL RATES HELD TO BE UNREASONABLE

WASHINGTON, July 12.—The Interstate Commerce Commission to-day found that rates on steam coal in carloads from the Coal Creek region in Eastern Tennessee and adjacent coal regions grouped therewith, over the Southern Railway and the Louisville and Nashville Railroad to Spartanburg, S. C., were unreasonable. A flat rate of ten cents a ton was fixed as proper.

Waycross Country Club Nearly Done

Handsome Home on Banks of Satilla River Soon Ready for Use of Members.

WAYCROSS, July 12.—The new home of the Waycross Country Club will be finished next week and as soon as possible the home will be furnished and thrown open. The club occupies a site just east of the city on the Satilla River.

Dr. R. P. Izler is president of the organization. A number of Blackshear people have joined.

WARE COMMISSIONERS TO SELECT FARM SITE

WAYCROSS, July 12.—Next week Ware County's Board of Commissioners will visit sites for the proposed county farm and reach some decision regarding its establishment. The Grand Jury in May recommended that the county buy a centrally located farm, of 500 to 1,000 acres, and use it as headquarters for the county's chaingang and road machinery.

GOVERNOR JOINS FIFTH REGIMENT AT SAINT SIMONS

Slaton and Party Inspect Atlanta Soldiers After Being Entertained in Brunswick.

BRUNSWICK, July 12.—Governor John M. Slaton, former Governor Joseph M. Brown and the Governor's staff, Adjutant General J. VanHolt Nash, General R. K. Evans, U. S. A., and Colonel Barth, his adjutant, reached Brunswick at 9 o'clock this morning over the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad from Atlanta.

The party was met by Mayor Hopkins and the Board of Trade and, after a general handshaking with old friends, the Governor and party boarded automobiles provided by prominent citizens and were driven for a sightseeing tour of the city.

Shortly before noon the party embarked on a steamer for St. Simons Island, where the Fifth Regiment, Georgia National Guard, from Atlanta, is in camp. Governor Slaton, as commander-in-chief of the State Guard, will enjoy camp life over Sunday. This afternoon he witnessed an exhibition drill and inspected the regiment. The Governor leaves the camp Sunday afternoon.

TO REBUILD BURNED PLANT.

POLLARD, ALA., July 12.—The plant of the Lindsay Lumber Company, which was destroyed by fire Wednesday night, will be rebuilt at once. The mill and dry kilns were destroyed. Insurance on the plant amounted to about $27,000.

Pay Electric Bills By Light of Candles

Waycross Folk Have Amusing Experience With Joke on Light Company.

WAYCROSS, July 12.—Paying for electric light service by candle light is an experience that the uncertain electric light service the city is getting just now forced upon light patrons who went to the city office of the light company at night to settle their last month's bills.

Entering the office customers were welcomed by numerous candles, each flickering and doing its best under the circumstances. And light patrons could not help feel amused at handing over money to an electric light company's representative who signed the receipt by a candle's light. Waycross has gotten used to such happenings and looks for no relief until the new machinery is installed at the light plant.

Farmers' Union Men Heard at Waycross

Between 4,000 and 5,000 Attend Big Ware County Speaking and Barbecue.

WAYCROSS, July 12.—Between 4,000 and 5,000 people attended the big picnic given here to-day by the local labor unions, Board of Trade, and Ware County Farmers' Union. Guests of honor included Charles S. Barrett, president of the National Farmers' Union; M. L. Rhoads, of Tennessee, and J. J. Brown, former Assistant Commissioner of Agriculture of Georgia. All made addresses at an open-air meeting preceding the barbecue in Mary Street Park.

James Cowart, president of the Ware County Farmers' Union, introduced the speakers. W. W. Lambdin welcomed the visitors, acting in the unavoidable absence of Mayor Harry D. Reed.

Sick Monkey Invades Y. W. C. A.; Girls Flee

Simian Infected With Pellagra Escapes From Hospital and Scares Women.

SAVANNAH, July 12.—A monkey used for esearch work at the Marine Hospital, took a French leave, raised a rumpus among the girls at the Young Women's Christian Association afterward, and created excitement throughout the neighborhood when it became known the animal was afflicted with pellagra.

The young women thought the animal looked too much like a miniature man to be nosing about in their quarters. They accordingly retreated to the street in whatever kind of apparel they chanced to be, which was mostly negligee.

New York Fat Man Enjoys Georgia Heat

356-Pounder Goes About Smiling Sympathetically at Discomforts of Others.

SAVANNAH, July 12.—It is not unusual for thin and middleweight persons to withstand the heat sturdily, but when a man who tips the scales at nearly 400 pounds goes through a Georgia July day smilingly, it is time for the others to freeze up.

Frank Giles, of New York, who is in Savannah with a crew of salesmen, representing a Northern match company, is just now Savannah's biggest man. He balances the scales at 356 pounds. He is 5 feet 10 inches tall, and has a waist measurement of 58 inches. No matter how hot it is he just smiles.

CHARTER PLANS FOR WAYCROSS NOW COMPLETE

Committee to Report Recommendations for Revision to Board of Trade Next Wednesday.

WAYCROSS, July 12.—At a called meeting of the Waycross Board of Trade next Wednesday night revision of the city charter will be taken up, the special committee named by President Sirmans, of the Board of Trade, Colonel W. W. Lambdin, chairman, making a report at that time.

The committee will recommend a revision of the charter so as to allow the Mayor full authority in all matters pertaining to the executive end of the city's affairs; an increase in the present number of six Councilmen to thirteen, the thirteenth man to be elected at large as President of the City Council, and the Council will have full charge of the legislative end; all city employees to be put under civil service, and a Recorder elected, taking the Police Court work off the Mayor. Various other changes are also outlined.

Colonel Lambdin is not altogether satisfied with the recommendations of the committee, and he will ask the Board of Trade to adopt the "City Manager" plan, which gives the city a manager just like any corporation or business concern, he being subject to discharge by the Council in case the Mayor, who appoints him with the approval of Council, does not remove him when he is unsatisfactory to the people. This will take the office of the man, who will really be the executor of all laws and city ordinances, out of politics, giving him a free hand. The plan is now working successfully at Staunton, Va., and Sumter, S. C., and has become a State-wide law for cities of less than 50,000 population in New York State and a constitutional amendment to the statutes of Oregon.

The meeting is awaited with interest by all of Waycross, for the enterprise of the move, fathered by the Board of Trade, and the novelty of the City Manager plan seems to appeal to the substantial citizenship.

WAYCROSS MAN INHERITS $250,000 SHARE IN ESTATE

WAYCROSS, July 12.—Edwin G. Kastenhuber, formerly of New York, but for several years a resident of Waycross, to-day was notified of the settlement of an estate by which he comes into possession of $250,000, mostly in securities and cash. The property has been held in trust for a number of years, and Thursday was divided among the heirs, of whom the Waycross man is one.

AMENDMENT TO PREVENT KILLING OF STRAY DOGS LOST

SAVANNAH, July 12.—Although Alderman H. H. Livingston delivered an appeal for its passage, his amendment to the present dog ordinance has been defeated, not an Alderman voting with him.

This means the death clause will remain in the ordinance, and that dogs captured will be killed in a humane manner, provided they are not claimed within three days after they are impounded.

Junior Trade Board Planned in Waycross

Secretary Bailey to Organize Young Men for Civic Work Under Senior Body.

WAYCROSS, July 12.—Secretary T. Jeff Bailey, of the Waycross Board of Trade, is preparing details for launching a Junior Board of Trade, to be composed of young men between the ages of 16 and 20 years of age, and will soon have the matter in shape to call for members and begin to perfect the organization.

The object of this move on behalf of the secretary is to train young men and boys in the work of the Board of Trade, for their own benefit, and then for the real value that they will become to the senior organization after they have had service on every committee and in every capacity that senior members work. They will handle their own work, under Secretary Bailey's supervision, and will name their own officers.

Waycross Federal Building to Open

New Structure Nears Completion, but Already Is Regarded as Too Small.

WAYCROSS, July 12.—The Federal Building here will be finished and turned over to the Government for use before 30 days pass, and when this is done all Waycross is going to celebrate. The Federal Building is not what Waycross people feel they deserve, but it is a handsome little building and will do for a few years.

Since work started on the postoffice Waycross has nearly doubled in size and Congressman Walker already has received a request to get an appropriation for an addition.

JESUP BUSINESS MEN FOR SAVANNAH-FLORIDA ROAD

JESUP, July 12.—Many of the business men of this city have sent telegrams to Representative Meadows indorsing the Slater-Savannah-Florida highway bill. They are in favor of a highway from Savannah to Florida through Jesup.

RUNAWAY LADS FROM SAVANNAH ARE CAPTURED

Royce Monts and Lonnie Beckham Arrested in Jacksonville With $850 Stolen Cash.

JACKSONVILLE, July 12.—Armed with a pistol and with more than $850, said to have been stolen from his mother, Royce Monts, who lives at No. 316 Liberty street, West Savannah, Ga., in company with Lonnie Beckham, also of Savannah, arrived in Jacksonville to-day. In less than two hours both lads were in the custody of the local police and their parents notified of their apprehension.

When caught by Detective P. H. Lord, the boys were in the act of buying motorcycles. The Monts lad was handling the money, and was noticed to be carrying a large roll, apparently too much for one boy to have. This fact led to suspicion, and Detective Lord was notified. When asked where they desired to have the motorcycles shipped, the boys hesitated, having not made up their minds where they wanted to go.

At the police station the Monts lad, who claims that he is the son of J. M. Monts, a railway conductor on the Seaboard Air Line out of Savannah, after being questioned by detectives, stated that he took the money yesterday afternoon from his mother, who had intended to put it in the bank.

MONEY IN BANK WITH NO DEBTS FOR MUSCOGEE

Georgia County Has Unusual Record—Business Methods Used in Administering Affairs.

COLUMBUS, July 12.—The boast of Muscogee County is the splendid system of public roads and the three County Commissioners, who have not only made the roads but who have put the county on possibly the soundest financial rating of any in Georgia.

The county has $35,271.76 in Columbus banks; does not owe one cent; has never had a bond issue of any kind and never allowed expenditures to exceed the receipts to an extent greater than could be paid upon demand. In addition to being out of debt and having the healthy balance on hand the county has a courthouse valued at $107,000; jail worth $76,000; pauper home and farm, $9,129.75; roads and bridges, $312,500, and other improvements, $48,600, making a grand total of $597,805.79.

Established 40 Years.

The County Commission in Muscogee was established 40 years ago, when the late Louis F. Garrard was in his prime as an attorney. He was a member of the first board, and it was largely through his keen foresight that that body was able to accomplish what it did not, only when he was a member, but since he died. The Muscogee County courthouse, one of the handsomest in the South, was built during his administration.

The present commissioners are Frank U. Garrard, a son of Louis F. Garrard; L. A. Scarbrough, a prominent warehouseman, and J. C. Alexander, a real estate and business man, who was recently elected to succeed Captain B. H. Hardaway, one of the South's largest contractors. Such men have always been on the board and they have known the needs of the county and have worked out its business affairs as they have their own.

Roads Like Boulevards.

The roads of the county are 35 and 40 feet wide and are boulevards compared to those in many other counties of the State. The road work is under the direct supervision of Julian R. Lane, County Road Engineer. He is ranked as one of the best road builders in the State. He is now constructing roads at $2,000 per mile that are pronounced by experts to equal others that are costing as high as $8,000 in other counties.

Muscogee County is using convict labor on the roads, there being four camps established where the highest type of road building machinery can be found. The county now has more than 60 miles of first-class public roads and the four gangs are building other roads as rapidly as men and means can be used to construct them.

Women Make War On Liquor Selling

Form Law and Order League and Have Alabama Merchant Arrested.

COLUMBUS, July 12.—Because of dereliction on the part of men in suppressing the illegal sale of liquors in the vicinity of Malone, Randolph County, Alabama, the women of the community have banded themselves together in a Law and Order League to stop it.

The first step was to call on H. Y. Carwyle, a small merchant, whom it was claimed was selling whisky illegally, and ask him to stop. Carwyle did not heed their request, and the women had him arrested. He was carried before Probate Judge John T. Heflin, tried, convicted, and fined $300. Carwyle appealed the case.

The leader among the women is Mrs. Nixon Lucas, wife of a prominent and wealthy turpentine man.

Georgians, Stranded In California, Ask Aid

Alleged Labor Agent Who Enticed Them From Homes Is Sought for Grand Jury.

COLUMBUS, July 12.—In the latter part of 1912, there appeared in Columbus, Phenix City and Girard, a man claiming to be Jack Miller, superintendent of Oakland, Cal., cotton mills, who induced about 25 persons to leave this section and go to California.

Now Solicitor General George C. Palmer, of the Chattahoochee circuit, has received letters from four or five of them claiming they are stranded. He has taken up the matter with District Attorney Hynes, of Almeida, Cal., who has promised whatever recourse is possible. In the meantime Solicitor Palmer is endeavoring to obtain evidence to have Miller indicted by the Muscogee County Grand Jury, and brought to this city for trial.

TURKEY TROT ENDS WITH KNIFE AND RAZOR FIGHT

COLUMBUS, July 12.—At a negro dance hall in Columbus, where the turkey trot was the favorite pastime, Effie Arnold and Virginia Lee became engaged in a dispute over the affection of a black Beau Brummel and started a row, in which knives, razors and chairs were the weapons. The police quelled the disturbance and Recorder Foley sent both women to the rockpile for 30 days.

GETS GEORGIA COURT JOB.

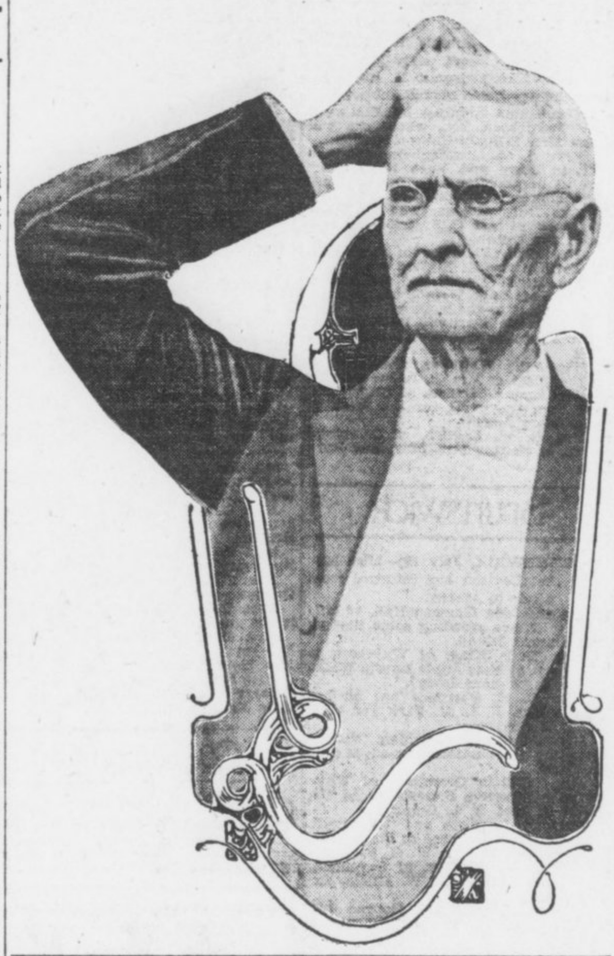
COLUMBUS, July 12.—R. O. Perkins, who for the past year has been the official stenographer of the court of the Fifth Judicial Circuit in Alabama, has been appointed official stenographer for the City Court of Columbus. He will continue to hold his appointment in Alabama.

SECRET ORDER MAN DIES.

COLUMBUS, July 12.—Will Clarady, a well-known secret order man who died yesterday at the City Hospital following an operation for appendicitis, was buried this afternoon. His body was interred in Pine Grove Cemetery, in Phenix City, Ala.

Captain J. J. Slade

The oldest member of the present Legislature of Georgia. "Uncle Jerry" is the pet of the House, and the promptness with which committees report on his measures is an evidence of his popularity. He is the senior Representative from Muscogee County.



Negro Found Under Bed Gets 10 Years

Another Culprit Given Long Sentence Because Temptation to Speak Overcame Him.

TIFTON, July 12.—Henry Harris, a negro, was sentenced by Judge Thomas in Tift Superior Court to ten years on the chaingang. Harris was discovered under the bed of Mrs. I. B. Hall, wife of the man who has been sentenced to hang in Tift County jail Friday, August 22. Mrs. Hall had retired and for some cause got up and moved the bed. In doing so she moved it over the negro and when she went to get back in bed stepped against him.

Harris pleaded guilty to burglary and was given ten years. Sentence was passed on the negro in less than one week after the crime was committed.

Jack Mackey, who killed Sid Davis, another negro, at Hogansville, February 3, was given a sentence of fourteen years. Henry Wilson, negro, was tried under a charge of assault with intent to murder, and found guilty of assault and fined $50. There was another indictment against him for carrying a pistol without license. To this charge he entered a plea of guilty, but the opportunity to speak before a crowd got the best of him. He told the judge that he was drunk and did not know what he was doing. Judge Thomas said he considered a negro with a pistol and full of bad liquor more dangerous than a rattlesnake and gave him twelve months on the gang on this charge.

City Court Reduces Superior Sessions

Tift County Shows Record as Compared With Colquitt and Worth.

TIFTON, July 12.—It required only one day and two hours to complete the civil docket of the July term of Tift Superior Court. Comparing this time with that required in the neighboring counties of Colquitt and Worth, Tift has the record.

The rapidity with which the Tift County Superior Court calendar is cleared is explained by the fact that Tift County has a City Court, while in the other two counties the City Court has been abolished. In these counties there are four terms of Superior Court yearly, while Tift has only two, still the four terms have failed to clear the dockets in Colquitt and Worth.

'Turkey Trot Gait to Hell,' Pulpit Theme

Columbus Presiding Elder to Attack New Dances in His Sunday Sermon.

COLUMBUS, July 12.—The dancers of the turkey trot, the tango and several other of the dances that have recently become popular in Columbus are somewhat "in the air" over an announcement made by Dr. A. M. Williams, Presiding Elder of the Columbus District, that to-morrow at St. Luke's Methodist Church he would preach a sermon on the subject, "The Summer Sins and the Turkey-Trot Gait to Hell."

Owing to the fact that the new dances have been much in evidence recently, the general impression prevails that Dr. Williams will make some caustic comments.

TIFT SUPERIOR COURT GRANTS NEW CHARTERS

TIFTON, July 12.—Tift Superior Court has granted charters to the Foy-Adams Company, the Alapaha River Telephone Company and the Tifton Farm Tool Manufacturing Company. The latter is a petition for change in charter of the Tifton Foundry and Machine Company.

Starts His Twelfth Term in Chaingang

Muscogee Negro Tells Guards to Save His Suit for His Return.

COLUMBUS, July 12.—Reddick Jones, a negro, has begun serving his twelfth term on the chaingang of Muscogee County, his last sentence for four months having been given him after he had entered a plea of guilty of stealing a pair of shoes.

Jones has served sentences during the past 20 years ranging from one month to a year. He only left the chaingang a week ago to-day, and he told his guards to put his suit and other possessions away, for he would be back soon. He has fulfilled his promise.

Bond of Embezzler Increased by Court

Release of J. H. Cason on $2,000 Security Refused by Judge Thomas.

MOULTRIE, July 12.—Judge W. E. Thomas, of the Southern Circuit, has ordered the Sheriff of Colquitt County not to release J. H. Cason, the self-confessed bank embezzler, under the $2,000 bond assessed by Justice Howell. Judge Thomas increased the bond to $6,000, in default of which Cason is now in jail.

The Bank of Crosland, which closed down for several weeks as a result of Cason's defalcation, has resumed business, the shortage of $7,500 being made good by the directors of the institution.

JULY COURT TERM BEGINS AT CARTERSVILLE MONDAY

CARTERSVILLE, July 12.—The regular July term of Bartow Superior Court will convene Monday morning. There are very few cases of interest coming up. Judge A. W. Fite will preside.

BRIDEGROOM, 60, WINS 3RD BRIDE, JUST 20 YEARS OLD

ROME, July 12.—A courtship of only a few weeks has culminated in the marriage of Miss Ida Sanders and John Roach. The bride is just 20 years old. The bridegroom is past 60. This is Roach's third matrimonial venture.

FALLING LIMB ALMOST SCALPS ELBERTON WOMAN

ELBERTON, July 12.—While picking berries, Mrs. Gus Schlock had half her head scalped by a falling limb from a nearby tree.

PENSACOLA-NEW ORLEANS BARGE LINE TO OPERATE

PENSACOLA, July 11.—Beginning next Wednesday, weekly freight service between Pensacola and New Orleans will be inaugurated by the New Orleans and Alabama Transportation Company. The Bernhardt, one of the largest barges of the company, will leave New Orleans next Wednesday for this port and regularly thereafter. It will be of great benefit to the city in lowering freight rates, especially after municipal docks are completed and free wharfage privileges extended to the line.

FIVE INJURED AS CAR OVERTURNS NEAR AMERICUS

C. H. Farris, Wife, Two Daughters and Son, of Smithville, Auto Accident Victims.

AMERICUS, July 12.—In a fifteen-foot plunge in a heavy automobile from the embankment of Muckalee Creek, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Farris, two daughters and son almost miraculously escaped death to-day. The car landed bottom upward on a barbed wire fence at the muddy edge of the creek, and from beneath it emerged the five passengers, badly bruised and scarred, but still alive.

The Farris family, from Smithville, were on their way to Americus, coasting down Muckalee hill, when the accident occurred. Mr. Farris had been driving the car, but had shut off the power so that his son could shift to the driver's seat. The fact that the car was going very slowly at the time is attributed by Mr. Farris as the only thing that saved the lives of himself and family.

Melons Make Many Ill; Poison Feared

Entire Car Lot of South Georgia Product Condemned and Authorities Take Sample.

AMERICUS, July 12.—As the result of a number of people having been made ill by eating watermelons shipped to a local dealer from a South Georgia grower, the entire car of melons was condemned, while a sample of one of the melons has been submitted to the State Board of Health for analysis to determine if the melons contained poison.

The theory advanced here is that the melons may have been treated with injections of poison on account of thieves, having later been shipped out by mistake. Whatever the cause may be, City Physician Chambliss is endeavoring to lay it bare.

Wheatley Honored By School He Aided

Catalog Shows Dormitory Named for Man Who Has Given Assistance to Institution.

AMERICUS, July 12.—Prominent upon the frontispiece of the most recent catalog of the Third District Agricultural and Mechanical School, located here, is a large picture of Wheatley Hall, the new girls' dormitory at the school, which was named after Representative Crawford Wheatley.

A smaller cut of Mr. Wheatley is found on the page with the cut of the dormitory. This is a tribute of the school authorities to the helpful work done by Mr. Wheatley, who is also treasurer of the school and the leading spirit in the Commercial City Bank.

Albany Residents Dodge Street Taxes

Collector Busy Serving 1,100 Subpenas on Citizens Who Balk at Payment.

ALBANY, July 12.—Street Tax Collector Nesbitt is having a "time." Last year about $5,938 was collected in taxes without much persuasion, very few city cases being made. People just landing in Albany were watched, and if the tax receipt from their previous place of abode was not forthcoming, they were made to pay the necessary three bills. In the meantime the City Code of Albany has been changed to assist the collector in his work, and every assistance given him.

Those who paid so easily last year have decided to test the law, and as a result Collector Nesbitt is busy serving 1,100 street tax subpenas.

TWO BIG PECAN FARMS SOLD TO CHICAGO FIRM

ALBANY, July 12.—Two land deals of unusual importance to the pecan industry have just been closed in Dougherty County. The Coolawahee place of Colonel John P. Fort, embracing 2,500 acres, nine miles south of Albany, has been sold to Jesse & Hand, Chicago pecan growers. The same firm also purchased the Smuteye place, containing about 750 acres, from Waxelbaum & Co., of Macon, and will plant it in pecans. Several other important pecan deals are being considered.

NOT EVEN SOFT DRINKS FOR AMERICUS SUNDAYS

AMERICUS, July 12.—Orders were given Friday night by Chief of Police Johnson to each member of the Americus police force to keep the lid on tight Sunday against every seller of soft drinks, following the instructions given by the City Council at its last session.

Fertilizer Plant to Be Built at Albany

Swift and Company to Erect Large Factory on Central and Seaboard Roads.

ALBANY, July 12.—O. E. Burton, of Atlanta, Southern manager for Swift & Co., was in the city this week conferring with local parties regarding a new fertilizer factory which is soon to be started at this point. While definite information regarding the plant was not forthcoming, the general size and dimensions are known.

The plant will be about 288 by 128 feet. It will be located north of Albany, and on the Central of Georgia and Seaboard Air Line Railroads. That portion of the plant where the machinery and conveyers are located will be of reinforced concrete. The plant when finished will be one of the most up-to-date in the South.

Car Line in Albany Is To Be Extended

Work Begins This Week Pushing Tracks Three-fourths Mile Out State Street.

ALBANY, July 12.—Already Albany has found it necessary to build an extension to the new street car line. The branch running out Madison street has ended at the corner of Madison and State, but the citizens have been successful in seeking an extension.

Work will start this week on a line out State street, which will be about three-fourths of a mile long. This will also open up one of the prettiest sections of the city.

Central of Georgia Laying Out Farm

Albany Chamber of Commerce Aiding Railroad Which Hopes to Get 100 Families.

ALBANY, July 12.—T. J. Chastin and J. F. Jackson, agricultural agents of the Central of Georgia Railway, were in Albany this week, and work of laying off the new 3,000-acre farm of the Central was begun.

Borings were made for samples of the soil, which will be analyzed and descriptions of the various solis made; lines were run; plats were laid off and stakes set for the roads which will be cut through.

The Albany Chamber of Commerce will assist. It is hoped that 100 or more families of good farmers will be secured before the end of the year.

FOUR POLICEMEN ADDED TO THE ALBANY FORCE

ALBANY, July 12.—Four policemen have been added to Albany's force. The force in the past has consisted of six policemen, a chief and an assistant chief. Two men will now patrol the Tift Park section.

ONCE-A-WEEK HOLIDAY IMPOSSIBLE IN ALBANY

ALBANY, July 12.—The spirit shown by several Albany merchants has made it necessary to call off the one-day-a-week holiday that seemed a surety.

The list was carried around and the merchants were asked to place their names thereon. Most of them did so, but one or two that are considered the "leading spirits" would not.

POLICE GIVEN LITTLE BOOK FOR USE IN MAKING ARREST

AMERICUS, July 12.—Every Americus policeman in future will be equipped with a pamphlet containing the sections of every ordinance in the city code relating to the duties of members of the police force. This innovation has been brought about by certain phases of the killing here recently of Chief of Police Barrow.

ONLY 225 REGISTER FOR ALBANY BOND ELECTION

ALBANY, July 12.—The books have been closed for registration for the coming bond election, July 24. Only 225 registered.

Many were disbarred as their taxes were not paid before January 24. Only about 500 will be qualified, when the vote should be near 900.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE FAVORS COMMERCE COURT

ALBANY, July 12.—At a meeting of the Albany Chamber of Commerce held this week resolutions were adopted favoring the retention of the United States Commerce Court. Traffic Manager Phillips believes that the court has remedied conditions in this district, and more is expected.

NEW TIFTON ADMINISTRATION BOASTS OF ITS SAVINGS

TIFTON, July 12.—Tifton's city administration, installed January 1, is boasting of its record for the first half year which shows a total saving of $4,987.12, over the same time for 1912.

MONSTER EAGLE ATTACKS WOMAN NEAR MOULTRIE

Mrs. C. W. Hall Badly Hurt Before Husband Slays the American Bird.

MOULTRIE, July 12.—Mrs. C. W. Hall, aged 70, residing in the northern part of Colquitt County, was attacked by a monster eagle to-day.

Mrs. Hall heard a shoat squealing and went to see what was the matter, and discovered the hog in the throes of death from wounds produced by the bird. She tried to drive the bird away when it attacked her. The aged woman was badly scratched and beaten up by the bird's talons and wings. Her husband, at work near by, attracted by the noise of the battle, hurried to his wife's aid.

The eagle, still defiant, remained on the ground and was killed by Mr. Hall with a fence rail. It measured from tip to tip of its wings nine feet, and is the largest ever killed in this section. The eagle is thought to have come from the great cypress swamps on Warrior River.

Almost Drowns Doing 'Water-Walking' Feat

Boys Remove Plank and Spoil Colquitt Farmer's Exhibition of "Gift Fron on High."

MOULTRIE, July 12.—R. P. Ricks, a farmer in the eastern part of Colquitt County, came very near drowning while trying to "walk on water."

Ricks had built a plank, walk a few inches under the surface of the water in order to successfully carry out the feat. Two boys discovered the walk while in bathing during the afternoon and removed some of the planks. When Ricks was giving his exhibition in the presence of a big crowd that thought he had a "gift from on high" things went well until he reached the point where part of the walk was missing. Then he sank.

FALLS ON HIS HEAD AND DIES OF HEART FAILURE

ALBANY, July 12.—After carrying a bunch of shingles up to the roof of the Albany Plumbing Company, Jim Williams, a negro, when starting to descend, was seized with a fainting spell and fell to the ground, landing on his head. Death followed in a few minutes. Doctors state that the fall injured the heart, which caused death.

Armours Plan Big Georgia Hog Farm

Option Is Taken on 10,000 Acres of Dougherty County Land, Near Albany.

ALBANY, July 12.—The Armour packing interests have purchased an option on a 10,000-acre lot of land in the southwest part of Dougherty County. It is the intention of the packers, if the deal is closed, to use this place for hog raising. Active heads of Armour & Co. will come to Albany about August 1 and go over the land.

This plat is known as the old Sutherlin place and lies along Coolawahee Creek. The grandfather of Judge Samuel Smith owned this place before the war and annually raised more than 1,000 head of hogs.

WEALTHY MOULTRIE MAN FACES TRIAL THIS WEEK

MOULTRIE, July 12.—When Superior Court convenes in this city next week the largest criminal docket in the history of the county will be taken. Several murder cases will be tried. But interest will center in the trial of Joe J. Battle, who is one of the wealthiest men in this part of the State. He will face a charge of assault and attempt to murder as a result of shooting Walter P. Brown, a well-known young man of Moultrie, about two months ago.

FINDS GRAPES THRIVE IN SOIL OF SOUTH GEORGIA

THOMASVILLE, July 12.—C. L. Whitney, living a few miles out from Thomasville, has brought in this week some very fine grapes. Mr. Whitney moved to Thomas County a few years ago from the North and has been experimenting in farming in South Georgia, with the result that he has found very few things which will not grow here and the soil he thinks especially good for the culture of grapes.

Picture of Neptune Company Unearthed

Organization Really Military in Nature Predecessor to Present Thomasville Fire Departmnt.

THOMASVILLE, July 12.—In appreciation of the fact that the city council has named the motor fire truck for him, Captain John Triplett has presented to the city a large picture of the old Neptune Fire Company of Thomasville, of which he was the first foreman and which was not only the first fire company organized in this city, but is said to have been the first in South Georgia.

This company was organized here in 1868 and its roster shows the names of a number of Thomasville's most prominent citizens, who were of course very young men at that time.

This as well as the other volunteer fire companies of South Georgia, while organized ostensibly for fighting fire, were in reality military in their nature and were for protection during the reconstruction period.

FEARS STRANGE BUG IS DREADED BOLL WEEVIL

THOMASVILLE, July 12.—Frank Hancock fears that bugs that are injuring his cotton are the advance guard of the dreaded boll weevil. He lives in the district of Thomas County just across from Ocklocknee River. The bugs have many of the characteristics of the boll weevil. They eat the lower edge of the boll, causing it to drop off. Mr. Hancock has found a number of them on his cotton within the past few days. He has sent samples of them to the State Entomologist that he may find out just what they are.

PAVO EDITOR ELOPES AND MARRIES AT MOULTRIE

THOMASVILLE, July 12.—C. Tex Irwin, editor of The Pavo Progress, joined the ranks of the benedicts this week, being united in marriage to Miss Dempsey Alderman, also of Pavo. Mr. Irwin won his bride by the Gretna Green route, the marriage being performed in Moultrie by the Rev. Mr. Tyler, of the Presbyterian Church. There being some objection on the part of the bride's parents, the young couple met by appointment in that city and were quietly married.

NEW TAX LAW IS CRYING NEED, SAYS ANDERSON

President of Senate Declares That Archaic System Now in Vogue Is State's Great Drawback.

GEORGIA'S CREDIT IS HURT

Reasonable Loans Can't Be Made on Georgia Property on Account of Absurd Returns.

J. Randolph Anderson, President of the Senate of Georgia, in an interview furnished The Sunday American, discusses the great problem of tax reform, now the paramount issue before the General Assembly.

Mr. Anderson, experienced in legislation and far-seeing in business affairs, has no illusions as to what tax reform means, and as to how it must be accomplished.

He regards it as a most perplexing proposition, and he thinks that it will test the ingenuity and statesmanship of the Legislature heavily to effect tax reform equitably and in result-getting shape.

Mr. Anderson said:

The military nature of the original colony of Georgia gave to our people characteristics of order, discipline or conservatism and steadiness which persist to this day. In our own time when the people of some of the States of this country are running after new gods and ideals in politics, Georgia, one of the most progressive of them all, in all essentials to health and happiness, has not been swept off her feet by either agitation or fanaticism, but holds fast to her well-tried moorings and her ancient faiths.

In this spirit we come to-day to grapple with the problems that confront us. So far as this General Assembly is concerned the most urgent and most important question that faces us is the financial condition of Georgia. We all know that there is a serious deficit in our treasury. It is a situation with which I am quite familiar, and I believe I was the first to point out its existence and the need for taking steps to remedy it.

Toward the close of the session of 1910 I was asked by the then chairman of the Senate Appropriation Committee, now the distinguished Speaker of the House, to give him some information about the condition of the State treasury to use in a speech he wished to make in the Senate. After the close of that session I gave out an interview publishing the result of my investigation, in which I pointed out the existence of a deficit and calculated that by the year 1913 it would amount to $787,000.

Prediction Was Correct.

It may be remembered that my views and conclusions were bitterly assailed in the public press, and that it finally resulted in an audit being had of the State's financial status. To-day we realize the painful truth that my prediction was approximately correct. This deficit, we know, is not due to any lack of material resources in the State, but simply to the miserably inadequate and insufficient methods we have under our laws for the ascertainment and collection of taxes.

The State, instead of being run as a business institution, is practically an object of charity so far as its tax revenues are concerned.

We boast of being the Empire State of the South, yet the figures we are compelled to exhibit to the world do not bear out our claim. The condition is injurious to the State and to our people in more ways than a failure to provide sufficient revenues to run the State and its institutions.

A friend of mine in a county adjacent to this one attempted to effect arrangements in the North and East for securing money to lend out on Georgia real estate. His glowing descriptions of the wealth and progress of Georgia were cut short by the simple reply: "Yuor State's figures show you to be among the poorest of States. You have tax values of only about 850 millions, while much smaller States have values in excess of one billion, and States of aproximately your size show values of two billions and upward." In this way the present system is a serious injury to the State's credit, and this is a grave matter for us to consider, especially at this time when we have to refund some three millions of the State's debt. This same system is also a direct injury to the individual citizen.

This friend I have mentioned had an application for a loan of $2,800 upon a piece of property which he considered to be worth at least $6,000. He recommended the loan, but was notified he had omitted to send on the tax valuation of the property. On looking this up he was horrified to find that it was returned at only $500. In the face of this sworn return the loan was declined.

Evils Are Recognized.

The evils, the injustice and the rank discriminations of the present system are now apparently recognized and admitted by every one. What is the remedy? To such new sources of taxes will be adding only a drop in the bucket. Some new taxes may be wise, but they will only be palliative. They will not cure the ills we suffer from, and on many of our people the tax burden is already felt to be a heavy one. In my judgment, what is needed most of all and first of all, is a thoroughgoing revision of our whole taxing and financial system, and the installation, under the advice of expert accountants, of a modern up-to-date system of keeping the accounts of the State and of its various departments and institutions, with adequate provisions for proper periodic auditing. This is the foundation which must first be laid, and after this is done, and not till then, can we wisely or safely say what our further needs may really require.

The cornerstone of the whole business is and must be a proper and conservative method of tax equalization. Kansas is a poorer State than Georgia, yet in Kansas the tax values are over two billions. We have in reality more than that. If we see to it that our real values, or even approximately our real values, are put upon the books, we could reduce our tax rate from five mills to two and a half mills and yet receive a half million more in revenues than we now get from our ad valorem taxes.

The problem is one which the present General Assembly has to solve. We see our school teachers remaining unpaid, though more than half the year is gone. We see our State institutions unable to keep pace with the needs which the growth of the State is imperatively demanding of them.

Boll Weevil Is Coming.

We know that the boll weevil is crossing our borders—the greatest menace that has threatened our prosperity in a generation—yet we have no money to take any adequate steps to protect our fields and our farmers from its ravages. The situation is one to make us hang our heads in shame that a great State—our State—should be brought so low; but I am not dismayed. I know the men and the temper of this General Assembly. They have come here to do business. They have learned that the root of our troubles is the lack of a proper system of tax equalization and with the firmness and steadiness of our people they will go straight to the mark, and will not rest until the work is done. I confidently expect that by another year Georgia can lift up her head again and say to her sister States, "I have put my house in order, who can boast of a fairer domain or can make a better showing now than I?"

Husband Enjoined From Killing Wife

Woman Enters Suit for Divorce and Then Obtains Restraining Order to Prevent Slaying.

HUNTINGTON, W. VA., July 12.—Mrs. Bertha A. Nigh, after filing a suit for divorce in the Circuit Court, applied to Judge Graham for an injunction that would restrain her husband from "murdering her."

After listening to the woman's story of abuse from her husband, Judge Graham granted the injunction and sent an officer to serve it on Nigh with instructions to bring him into court unless he agreed to stay out of the section of the city where his wife was living.

When Mrs. Nigh left her husband a few days ago and went to live with a woman friend, she told him that she was going to seek a divorce. Nigh tried to kill her, but was stopped by neighbors. He then threatened that he would kill her the first time he had the opportunity.

Law Perils Loveliest Limb Display

Council Would Drape Its Glories

And World's Shapeliest Are Billed

At the top is shown Mlle. Spinelli, who Paris says owns the most beautiful nether limbs, while below are Rena Wandell and Marjorie Beverelly, her foremost American rivals.

Mlle. Spinelli Is on Her Way to America, and Follies Are Traveling.

Atlanta, it seems, will lose the opportunity it might have had to view the most delectable attractions that the American stage of next season will offer.

For one thing, Mlle. Spinelli is coming to America in vaudeville, and probably to Atlanta. And Mlle. Spinelli, be it known, is the reigning sensation of Paris, dear, discriminating Paris, because, besides her winsomeness and charm, she is said to possess the most artistic and perfectly shaped legs in all Europe.

Everyone Knows Ziegfeld's Specialty.

And then Ziegfeld's Follies already has started its 1913 tour, with Atlanta booked along the route. All the world and his brother knows that Florenz Ziegfeld is a connoisseur of feminine beauty, particularly that variety of beauty that is displayed to best advantage by a costume of tights and abbreviated skirts. In the Follies of 1913 especially are two young women, Rena Wandell and Marjorie Beverelly, who are said to possess the most artistic and perfectly shaped nether limbs in all America.

In the theatrical world the legs of Spinelli and those of Ziegfeld's Follies' cast have come to be regarded as contestants for the crown of beauty. At some time a decision must be made, now that both parties to the contest are in Atlanta. Atlanta might have had an opportunity to judge, but——

But There's Boynton.

George M. Boynton, of the City Council of Atlanta, has presented to that body a resolution asking for an ordinance prohibiting the appearance of girls wearing tights or too short or scant dresses in theaters. The reporters who record the news and views of the Council are ready to prophesy the passage of the ordinance. If they are correct, then it means that Atlanta's most promising stage features of the 1913 season might as well be canceled.

For a Ziegfeld show decorously clad is no Ziegfeld show at all, and Spinelli with her artistic legs sheathed is a glory veiled.

Ambassador in Novel Declares Himself Ashamed of Native Section.

Aroused over statements Walter H. Page, Ambassador to the Court of St. James, made in his book, "The Southerners," in which it is declared he abused and derided Southerners through a false portrayal of them, the editors of Neale's Magazine in their July issue question Mr. Page's ability to represent the American people. The sharp criticism of the Ambassador, who is a native of the South, is the first offering in the publication and is entitled "Ambassador Page No Southerner."

The novel "The Southerners" first appeared as a serial in the Atlantic Monthly, and was written by Mr. Page under the pseudonym of "Nicholas Worth. Besides the review of the book there is editorial comment in Neale's Magazine questioning Mr. Page's Americanism, one paragraph of which reads:

"But Ambassador Page seems to hold the American section in which he was born and reared—a section that comprises about one-fourth the area and nearly one-fourth of the population of the United States—to be un-American because sectional. We are all Americans—unless Mr. Page be an exception—and worthier Americans because of our affection for the ward, borough, city, county and State in which we live."

Looked Down on By All.

Some of the criticisms of Mr. Page in the review of his book follow:

"We found that Nicholas Worth, the professed author of the book, was a man whose environment in the South had evidently been among persons who were not recognized in that section as typical—in fact, who had no social recognition whatever, but who lived to themselves and were looked down upon by whites and blacks alike.

"There are scenes in this book that are so coarse that we will not bring them into this review. It is sufficient to say that they were used to vilify the white race.

"Nicholas Worth and his kind never stood socially high in the South; he was no gentleman; his associates were not gentlemen; his antecedents had a defective sense of the difference that exists between right and wrong.

"Nicholas Worth holds Confederate veterans in utter contempt, and throughout his book Confederates are roundly abused, and he also abuses their organization and other Southern patriotic bodies, such as the Daughters of the Confederacy. Nicholas Worth denies that there was any intellectuality among the women of the South. He frequently speaks of the lack of culture of all the people among whom he was reared.

Ashamed of Section.

"Nicholas Worth, the Southerner, is ashamed of being a Southerner. He holds that there is no negro social problem. He does not find objectionable the marriage of a mulatto girl to a white man. He meets the negro woman on the terms of equality.

"The book now becomes important because of Mr. Page's position as the Ambassador of all the American people to Great Britain. In London the book is being hailed as a true expression of the South, for Mr. Page was born in the South, and they naturally suppose that a Southern President appointing a man of Southern birth has appointed a representative Southerner."

3 Chicken Freaks Are Born in 10 Days

Naked Leghorn, Horned Rhode Island Red, and Whistling "Biddy" All on One Farm.

EVERETT, WASH., July 12.—Jay Sigworth, a poultry fancier, is the possessor of three barnyard freaks, hatched within ten days, and is wondering what new creation his chickens will spring on him. He defies even Winsted, Conn., to beat the following combination:

A White Leghorn hen hatched one chick which runs about as naked as a lizard. A Rhode Island chick has a well defined horn protruding from near the tip of its beak.

Another chick refuses to "peep" as a proper chick should and takes great delight in its talent for whistling. It will stand apart from its mates and whistle a distinct note, lasting about twelve seconds.

Savannah to Save On Street Sweeping

City Engineer Declares Atlanta Gets Brooms $10 Each Cheaper Than He Has Been Paying.

SAVANNAH, July 12.—As a result of the recent inspection by City Engineer E. R. Conant of street paving in other cities, a saving of about $600 annually will be effected in Savannah in the matter of street-sweeping brooms.

Atlanta, Conant found, is paying a little more than $4 apiece for its brooms, while Savannah has for years been buying them at $14. In Atlanta a laborer is employed by the city to make the brooms, the city purchasing the necessary materials. The laborer gets $1.50 a day.

Arrangements will at once be made to have these brooms made in Savannah as they are in Atlanta.

Poor Roads Called Cause of Illiteracy

President of Association Says Good Schools Will Come With Improved Highways.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 12.—Illiteracy is caused chiefly by poor roads, according to Charles H. Davis, president of the National Highway Association, in an address before the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education at its twenty-first annual convention.

"We can not have good schools, unless we have good roads," he said.

Albert Ross Hill, president of the University of Missouri, arraigned the State Legislature, alleging that their false economy crippled the State universities.

Monkeys Wanted in Pellagra Research

Advertisement Posted by Marine Hospital in Savannah—Sailors May Supply Simians.

SAVANNAH, July 12.—An advertisement for twelve monkeys posted at the customs house has aroused interest among sailors. The simians are wanted for use in the Marine Hospital Service. Sealed proposals will be received until noon July 16.

It is presumed that the monkeys are wanted for experimental purposes to learn whether moldy and spoiled corn will cause pellagra. Dr. C. H. Laindar, in charge of the hospital, will not discuss the matter, but it is known that experiments with monkeys are being made in this connection.

MAYOR AUTHORIZED TO GET TEMPORARY LOAN

SAVANNAH, July 12.—In order to overcome all legal obstacles, and acting on the advice of the City Attorney, the City Council has passed a resolution authorizing Mayor Richard J. Davant to obtain a temporary loan of $80,000 to supply a casual inefficiency in the city treasury incident to the purchase of a refuse incinerating plant.

EVERY ARTIST CALLED INSANE BY ALIENISTS

Chicago Colony Excited by the Charge Made at Convention of Nerve Specialists.

CHICAGO, July 12.—A wave of excited indignation rolled up from Chicago's art colony and beat upon the Hotel Sherman, where prominent alienists and nerve specialists are holding convention.

The direct charge by the lunacy specialists that all artists, sculptors and poets are essentially unbalanced and the intimation that had Rubens, Michelangelo, Hugo, Browning, Byron, Keats and Shelley been examined by competent alienists they would have been put in insane asylums, provoked all the warmth.

"Such statements," said Director French, of the Chicago Art Institute, "lead artists to believe that all doctors, or at least all alienists, are insane and should be incarcerated in a big madhouse."

Having consigned the persons of temperament to the asylum, the alienists took a fresh tack. Dr. Cheston King, of Atlanta, Ga., who volunteered that exaggerated ideas of love and beauty had caused the mental downfall of the artists and poets, worked the discussion around to a pronouncement that "love itself is only a form of insanity."

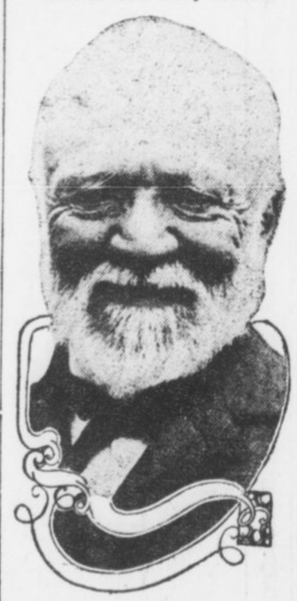
CARNEGIE, THE LAUGHING MILLIONAIRE, AS THE LATE WILLIAM T. STEAD SAW HIM

Famous Editor Gives a Lot of Reasons Why the Steel-Master Is Able to Laugh, and Quotes Some of His Terse Remarks.

Has No Sympathy or Desire to Aid the Average Man, but Thinks Help Should Be Bestowed to Assist Brilliant Men Higher.

Andrew Carnegie, man of many millions and many smiles.



The following life story of Andrew Carnegie is interesting, not only as the record of a successful business man, but also as one of the last writings of William T. Stead, the famous editor, who went down with the Titanic.

Mr. Stead's acquaintance with Carnegie enabled him to write with conviction.

By W. T. STEAD.

Mr. Carnegie is a millionaire who laughs. He is one of the greatest of millionaires and yet he is at the same time one of the heartiest of laughers. He says:

"Beyond a competence for old age, wealth lessens rather than increases human happiness. The most miserable of men, as old age approaches, are those who have made money-making their God, like flies bound to the wheel those unfortunates fondly believed they were really driving it, only to find when tired and craving rest that it is impossible for them to get off and they are lost—passing into nothingness, leaving their money behind for heirs to quarrel over, only because they can not take it with them—a melancholy end much less enviable then that of their poorer fellows."

How is it, then, that Mr. Carnegie has escaped the common doom of the limited but unfortunate class to which he belongs? How is it that instead of being a careworn custodian of wealth beyond the dreams of avarice he is still a millionaire who laughs?

He has passed the three-score years and ten, the proverbial span of human life. But old age has neither saddened him nor soured him.

Mr. Metchnikoff recently propounded the theory, based largely upon a study of the life of Goethe, that youth is the period of pessimism and that it is only in old age man ripens into optimism. Andrew Carnegie is certainly not less an optimist in his seventy-second year than he was when he was 17.

It is difficult for strangers to realize the youthful enthusiasm which makes this man, laden with the care of millions, as light-hearted as a boy of 16 without a penny in his pocket.

Some of the Reasons Why He Laughs.

The contributory causes of this desirable and rare equipoise are many. To begin with, he inherited a good constitution. He came of splendid old Scottish stock, and was brought up on porridge and the Book of Proverbs.

He honored his father and his mother, and his days have been long according to the promise, for he eschewed all the vices of youth, and devoted himself from the first decade to helping his parents to meet the household expenses.

He has never smoked, and, if he is not an absolute teetotaler, he is certainly extremely abstemious in the matter of alcohol.

To look habitually upon the bright side of things, always to take short views and to encounter the future with a cheerful confidence that the tendency is upward and onward, and that the law governing all things tends to the survival of the fittest and the evolution of the best, such is the comfortable philosophy with which Mr. Carnegie has confronted the world.

Mr. Carnegie sets his face as a flint against helping the helpless. He is dead against lifting lame dogs over stiles. Talking to my eldest son, who visited him in his Scotch retreat, he said he did not believe in helping the average man.

The average man was all very well, but the man who needed help and assistance was he who was endowed with more than the average ability. Probably the best method in which a millionaire, who wished to help on the advance of the race could spend his wealth was by placing within the reach of the capable the opportunities which would enable them to develop their natural gifts. To him that hath it shall be given, and from him who hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath.

When the time comes for writing his epitaph it is Mr. Carnegie's declared belief that the State ought to levy a death duty of 50 per cent upon whatever fortune he leaves behind.

Mr. Herbert Spencer, when he visited Mr. Carnegie in his domain, remarked that a month in Pittsburg would justify any man in committing suicide. Mr. Carnegie does not live in Pittsburg. He spends half of the year in New York and the rest of it at his country seat, Skibo Castle, on Dornoch Firth.

Mr. Carnegie amassed his millions much more easily than he can give them away. He started less than ten years ago on the task of distribution. He had then $300,000,000, which brought him in an annual income of between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000. He has succeeded in giving away $125,000,000, and the capital of his fortune is larger than it was when he started.

The pile won't grow smaller. The more he gives away the more it increases. It is the miracle of the widow's cruse over again. In 1911 Mr. Carnegie said to me, "I shall find it a much heavier task giving it away than making it. It is so easy to do harm when you wish to do good, but I intend to apply myself to the study of the best methods of using this vast accumulation of wealth."

Mr. Carnegie has given away $41,000 in round numbers every day for ten years past.

Mr. Carnegie long ago wrote: "The man who dies rich dies disgraced." It is long odds that he himself will die disgraced. He is over 70 years old, and if he were to start now to give away $50 a second if he lived to be 100 he would still have a few millions left with which to keep his daughter from the workhouse.

Ministers Snub Evangelist Sunday

New Bedford Preachers Decide Not to Invite the Former Baseball Player.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS., July 12.—Protestant ministers of New Bedford, after discussing Billy Sunday, the evangelist, in frank fashion, at their annual Cuttyhunk outing, voted unanimously not to invite Sunday to conduct revivals here, as had been planned.

The chief objections advanced were that Sunday requires Protestant churches to abandon all but their Sunday School services during his stay, and that the expense would be very heavy.

But there was also discussion as to Sunday's preachings and as to his motives. Appropriately enough—since Sunday played big league ball once upon a time, the ministers took a recess and played a game themselves before coming to their final decision. A letter from Sunday was read at the meeting.

Wins Suit for $100 He Bet on Marriage

Bridegroom Wagered He Would Wed in Year When Taker Backed, He Resorted to Court.

WELCH, W. VA., July 12.—One of the most unusual civil suits in the history of the State was decided here when Dr. J. L. Sameth was awarded $100, with interest for a year, against George D. Kendrick. During the latter part of the year 1911, during a conversation about matrimony, Kendrick told Dr. Sameth he would give him $100 if he married before January.

The men had been friends for fifteen years. Dr. Sameth had previously made arrangements to be married in January, and after this proposition was made he prevailed on his fiancee to be married before January 1. From time to time Dr. Sameth asked Kendrick for the money, but the latter always declared it a joke. Dr. Sameth entered suit and won.

Singing Fish Keep Town From Sleep

Poetess Thinks Lonely Pout Are Calling Their Mates, but Others Call It Nuisance.

BELLEVUE, OHIO, July 12.—This town is all excited over certain singing fish which keep the villagers awake o' nights. These fish, a variety of bull pout, live in the subterranean streams which flow under the place, and, possibly becoming lonesome, come to the surface and sing.

Anyway, they gather at the surface of cisterns and quiet pools in the gathering dusk and chant in chorus what a prominent poetess of Bellevue calls a sweet, sad, haunting melody, which she likens to the moaning of night winds through lonely, brooding pines. But the citizens who are kept awake are beginning to cuss the gosh blamed noise.

Girl Runs Foundry as Father Breaks Down

Daughter for Six Years After Parent's Health Failed Assumed Executive Duties of Business.

GREAT FALLS, MONT., July 12.—The directing force of the Great Falls Iron Works is a woman—Miss N. Cerula Woodbury. On the company's official roster she is designated as secretary-treasurer, but as the daughter of L. S. Woodbury, president of the company, she has for six years assumed the duties and responsibilities of her father, who has been in failing health and has passed most of his time in travel.

Miss Woodbury is at the office each day and keeps in close touch with all departments of the business.

Berry Growers Seek To Ship Crop by Post

Farmers of Ozark Say That Express Companies Have Been Getting Half Their Revenue.

SPRINGDALE, ARK., July 12.—Moving the strawberry crop by parcel post may be undertaken by the growers of this and other berry growing districts next season. Efforts to obtain a special rate from the Government may be undertaken by the berry associations within a very short time.

It is asserted by association managers of the Southern Ozarks, whence formerly 1,000 to 1,500 cars of berries were marketed annually, the express companies and the commission houses have taken more than 50 per cent of the revenue from the berry crop.

Greek Theater To Seat 10,000 Planned

California Man Wants to Have Massive Structure Ready for Christmas Day Performance.

LOS ANGELES, July 12.—A Greek theater of concrete, with stage of classic lines, with concentric rings of concrete for tiers of seats rising higher and higher, that will accommodate 10,000 persons, will be built by Colonel Griffith J. Griffith, in Vermont Canyon, Griffith Park, Hollywood, and will be presented to the city.

"I hope to have the stage and enough of the theater completed by Christmas to seat 10,000 or 15,000 people," said Colonel Griffith, "so that a celebration may be held there Christmas day."

RECOVERS $380 FOR HIS WORK AS FATHER-IN-LAW

BOZEMAN, MONT., July 12.—J. E. McCallum was awarded $380 by the jury in the District Court as wages alleged to be due him for his services as father-in-law in the household of Geo. Taylor, his son-in-law, recently separated from his wife.

McCallum asked for this sum alleging that the work he had done in the house of his son-in-law, helping with the washing, dishes, etc., was worthy of payment.

The jury decided, after hearing the testimony, that the old man's efforts demanded more than mere board and room, and gave the plaintiff all he asked for.

POISON REPORT STIRS HEIRS IN CRAWFORD CASE

cemetery at Carrollton, exhumed the body and then began the chemical analysis to which he has just testified.

Counsel for the contesting heirs now intimate that a more exhaustive investigation of the poison mystery will probably be made and that indictments may be sought before the Grand Jury.

Joshua B. Crawford was a well known character in Atlanta for many years. He was recognized as shrewd in business deals and close to the last penny in all financial transactions in his own and his first wife's name. He owned $75,000 to $100,000 in real estate and $20,000 to $25,000 in cash, notes and other negotiable paper. He loaned much money and added to his fortune by demanding every penny of interest called for in the notes and mortgages, as well as the full principal when due. If payment was not forthcoming he realized on the security he invariably required.

Crawford was born in October, 1833. His first wife, Mrs. Nancy E. Crawford, was eight years his junior. She died early in 1908, at the age of 66. Twelve months later he married again, his second wife being probably 20 years younger than the first. Within a month or six weeks after this marriage he died, at the age of 75.

Made Wills in 1907.

Crawford and his first wife made their wills at the same time in 1907, about a year before she died and two years before his death. By her will he inherited her estate. His will provided that in the event he survived his wife the estate should go to the four minor children of George Crawford, an adopted son, and to C. S. Crawford, a nephew, and Lula Miller, a niece. Following his second marriage, a new will was not made and the old will was automatically set aside, she inheriting the property.

A contest was set up by George Crawford, for his minor children, and C. S. Crawford and Lula Miller, beneficiaries named in Crawford's will. In 1910 a compromise was reached whereby property estimated at between $25,000 and $30,000 was carved out of the estate for these contestants, this being estimated as the value of the Nancy E. Crawford estate that had descended to Joshua B. Crawford upon his first wife's death. But none of that property has yet come into actual possession of these heirs, as one legal question after another has been raised to keep the estate tied up in litigation.

Undue Influence Claimed.

In 1912 thirtten other heirs at law—brothers, sisters, nephews and nieces of Joshua and Nancy Crawford—jointly brought suit to set aside this settlement, C. S. Crawford being one of the number, contending that his second wife exerted an undue influence over Crawford while he was in his dotage of more than three-score and ten years and practically forced him to marry her, and hinting at something mysterious in his death so soon after that marriage. Testimony in that suit is now being heard before J. A. Anderson, acting as auditor of the estate for the court.

The thirteen contesting heirs are M. T. Byrd, Mrs. C. B. Cash, V. A. Prater, C. Z. Crawford, C. W. Walton, Mrs. R. Adeline Crawford, J. F. Cornett, Mrs. G. A. Thurmond, Mrs. Fannie Cornett, Mrs. Nannie Moore, J. H. Harris, John F. Harris and M. C. Crawford. George Crawford, for his minor children, and Lula Miller are fighting this suit with the second Mrs. Crawford, seeking to sustain the settlement previously agreed upon.

Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, the second wife, is a native of Pennsylvania. She was formerly Mrs. Mary Belle Savage. She lived at Uniontown and later at Pittsburg. A few years ago she came South, going to St. Augustine, where she opened a boarding house for winter tourists and health seekers visiting the Florida city.

Early in 1909 Crawford, accompanied by his niece, Lula Miller, went to Augustine for his health. They stopped at Mrs. Savage's boarding house. After a few weeks in St. Augustine, they returned to Atlanta. Then Crawford confided to J. J. Barge, his attorney and named in his will as executor of his estate, that he was going to mrary Mrs. Savage just as soon as she could close out her business in St. Augustine.

Death Followed in Month.

The wedding took place a few days later. Crawford's death followed about a month later. His body was taken to his old home in Carroll County and was buried beside his first wife's grave. He had erected a stone to mark both graves, marking it with the names of himself and wife, the dates of birth and the date of his wife's death, leaving only the date of his own death to be added.

The contests over the estate soon followed and have never ended.

CORONER SAYS MERCURY BICHLORIDE KILLED WOMAN

SAVANNAH, July 12.—Bichloride of mercury was the cause of the death of Mrs. Frank G. Hughes, according to Coroner Harry Y. Righton.

It was discovered that Mrs. Hughes purchased a dram of powdered bichloride of mercury from a druggist, telling him she wanted the poison to kill insects.

AUTOMATIC TELEPHONE SYSTEM IS PROPOSED

SAVANNAH, July 12.—K. S. Bernard, of New York, is in Savannah to look over the field with a view to establishing an automatic telephone system. Bernard represents Northern financial interests which recently incorporated an automatic telephone company in Nashville. He is also president of the Southern Automatic Telephone and Telegraph Company. Jackson and Nashville are two Southern cities that already have the system.

SAVANNAH MASONIC LODGE GIVES JEWEL TO STOVALL

SAVANNAH, July 12.—In the nature of a farewell was the presentation by Zerubbabel Masonic Lodge of a past-master's jewel to Pleasant A. Stovall, who is soon to leave for Switzerland to assume his duties as American Minister in that country. W. B. Stubbs made the presentation address and Colonel Stovall made a fitting reply. The presentation was a special feature of a regular meeting this week.

Wife Elopes to Fill Role of Life Saver

Writes Husband She Left With Admirer to Keep Him From Slaying Himself.

NEW YORK, July 12.—James Stevens, of Ashburton Avenue, Yonkers, received a note yesterday from his wife Sarah, explaining that she had eloped with James Barber to save the man's life.

Barber, so she said, became so infatuated with her that he threatened to kill himself unless she fled with him. He even showed her a revolver, so she agreed to go in order to prevent a tragedy. Stevens has asked the police to find her.

TOWN GETS ITS MAIL BY STAGE ALWAYS WEEK LATE

SALEM, July 12.—"Mail is always a week behind where I live," said Charles E. Oliver, County School Superintendent of Lake County, who is here in connection with the examination of public school teachers. "There is a school at Butte, near Wagontire Mountain, that probably has the poorest mail service in the United States.

The mail, no matter if sent from Lakeview, the county seat, goes first to Salt Lake City or Reno, Nev., and then through a roundabout way filters into the Oregon town. It is transported a considerable distance by stage.

Boy Takes Rattler For His Playmate

Brings Serpent in House and Is Not Hurt by Experience With Snake.

BELLEVUE, FLA., July 12.—J. H. Maxwell, Jr., two-year-old son of J. H. Maxwell, of this place, is alive and playing just as usual to-day despite the fact that he had as a playmate for a few minutes yesterday a rattlesnake which he picked up in the yard of his father's home.

The little fellow came running into the house with the snake in his hand, laughing at his find. The snake was wriggling and attempting to strike him when his father seized and killed it.

CHURCH WINS PROPERTY AFTER 48 YEARS LITIGATION

SALEM, OREG., July 12.—After court proceedings for 48 years, the Society of Sisters of the Holy Name of Jesus and Mary have undisputed possession of the property on which is located the Catholic school. Circuit Judge Galloway has granted an order quieting the title to the property.

The property was donated to the society in 1885, and has been used by it since.

About fifty persons, with Edward Davignon as principal, were interested in the suit.

CRAWFORD WILL CASE BECOMES POISON PUZZLE

Report of Chemist After Body Is Exhumed Indicates Presence of Quantities of Morphine.

ACTIVITY AMONG MAN'S HEIRS

Parties to Litigation Now Promise Searching Inquiry, and Fulton Grand Jury May Act.

The Crawford will case, which for four years has been fought back and forth in the courts of Fulton County, and which is still apparently far from a final settlement, has developed into a "poison mystery."

This new and sensational turn to the litigation over the more than $100,000 estates of the late J. B. Crawford and his first wife, Mrs. Nancy E. Crawford, came when Dr. F. C. Harris, secretary of the State Board of Health, declared that chemical analysis of Crawford's stomach showed opium and morphine in large quantities, and that his lungs showed no indications of death from pneumonia.

When he died in March, 1909, his physician, Dr. J. W. Hurt, who is also the physician for the Coroner of Fulton County, gave pneumonia as the cause of death.

Body Exhumed Year Ago.

Just one year ago, on June 12, 1912, and more than three years after Crawford's death, Dr. Harris, with the Coroner of Carroll County, where the body was interred in the family cemetery at Carrollton, exhumed the body and then began the chemical analysis to which he has just testified.

Counsel for the contesting heirs now intimate that a more exhaustive investigation of the poison mystery will probably be made and that indictments may be sought before the Grand Jury.

Joshua B. Crawford was a well known character in Atlanta for many years. He was recognized as shrewd in business deals and close to the last penny in all financial transactions in his own and his first wife's name. He owned $75,000 to $100,000 in real estate and $20,000 to $25,000 in cash, notes and other negotiable paper. He loaned much money and added to his fortune by demanding every penny of interest called for in the notes and mortgages, as well as the full principal when due. If payment was not forthcoming he realized on the security he invariably required.

Crawford was born in October, 1833. His first wife, Mrs. Nancy E. Crawford, was eight years his junior. She died early in 1908, at the age of 66. Twelve months later he married again, his second wife being probably 20 years younger than the first. Within a month or six weeks after this marriage he died, at the age of 75.

Made Wills in 1907.

Crawford and his first wife made their wills at the same time in 1907, about a year before she died and two years before his death. By her will he inherited her estate. His will provided that in the event he survived his wife the estate should go to the four minor children of George Crawford, an adopted son, and to C. S. Crawford, a nephew, and Lula Miller, a niece. Following his second marriage, a new will was not made and the old will was automatically set aside, she inheriting the property.

A contest was set up by George Crawford, for his minor children, and C. S. Crawford and Lula Miller, beneficiaries named in Crawford's will. In 1910 a compromise was reached whereby property estimated at between $25,000 and $30,000 was carved out of the estate for these contestants, this being estimated as the value of the Nancy E. Crawford estate that had descended to Joshua B. Crawford upon his first wife's death. But none of that property has yet come into actual possession of these heirs, as one legal question after another has been raised to keep the estate tied up in litigation.

Undue Influence Claimed.

In 1912 thirtten other heirs at law—brothers, sisters, nephews and nieces of Joshua and Nancy Crawford—jointly brought suit to set aside this settlement, C. S. Crawford being one of the number, contending that his second wife exerted an undue influence over Crawford while he was

Potomac Water for Perspiring Senators

Lawmakers Thought They Were Drinking Mineral Spring Product Until Page Told Secret.

WASHINGTON, July 12—The poor, perspiring Senators have been deceived by the pages.

Some time ago the economy campaign eliminated mineral waters from the summer comforts of the Senators. Despite this, the mineral waters seemed still to be in the water bottles and the Senators drank deep and long.

A well-known Senator stepped up and drink three glasses to-day.

"There never was a water as good as this," he boasted, "and I have tried them all."

A page sitting by fell over in shrieks of mirth.

"It is Potomac water in the old bottles," he laughed. He knew, for he had seen it drawn from the faucet.

PrincessRoyal Fights Daughter in Courts

Rare Suit Is Being Waged in Secret by Relatives of King George.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—A legal dispute between two members of the royal family, a very rare occurrence, is now being secretly argued in the London courts. The litigants are the Princess Royal, widow of the Duke of Fife and sister of King George, and her daughter, the present Duchess.

The Duke left no male heir, the title descending to the elder daughter, the Princess Louise Duff. The dispute relates to property left by the Duke.

The action came before Justice Neville after the ordinary court hours, the procedure being equivalent to hearing in camera, press and public being excluded. The questions involved are so intricate that prolonged argument is necessary.

'Miss Freedom' Given Her Biennial Bath

New Jewelry Will Adorn Graceful Figure on Dome of United States Capitol.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Freedom, the gorgeous lady whose graceful form surmounts the dome of the Capitol, made her biennial toilet to-day. A score of husky workmen clambered to the top of the dome and gave Freedom a bath, using a heavy lather of castile soap and scrubbing brushes to remove the dust and grime that has accumulated on the face and figure of the lady of the Capitol since her last ablutions were performed in the summer of 1910.

The lady's jewelry will be replaced, as the seven platinum tips which surmount her headdress have been badly damaged by lightning bolts. Seven hundred dollars in the precious metal will adorn her brows and protect her from the elements.

St. Louis Man to Wed German Baroness

New Railroad Magnate Will Take Bride to South America to Make Home.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Baroness Ursula Barbara VonKalinsowski, of Wiesbaden, Germany, who, with her brother, Baron Kalinsowski, is staying at the Waldorf-Astoria, will be married to James Hurley, a prominent St. Louis man, this month. The exact date of the wedding has not yet been set. The Baroness and her brother will leave within a few days for St. Louis.

Mr. Hurley has recently bought extensive railroad interests in South America and he and his bride will go there on their wedding trip. The Baroness has with her two dogs which were the gifts of the Emperor and Empress of Germany.

$34.64 Each Man's Share of U. S. Money

Government Report on Currency of Nation Says This Amount Is Per Capita Average.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—The total amount of money in the United States at the beginning of the new fiscal year amounted to $3,718,379,000, an increase of $12,456,000 over a month ago. Of this, $3,371,326,000 was in circulation and $347,053,000 was held in the treasury as assets of the Government. Estimating the population of the country as 97,537,000, the treasury announced that the per capita circulation was $34.64, or an increase of 10 cents within a month.

ANOTHER CURE IS CLAIMED FOR CANCER GROWTH

Hungarian Chemists in Passaic, N. J., Declare Also They Have Conquered Tuberculosis.

REMEDY MADE FROM HERBS

Postmaster Mahony and Congressman Bremner, Patients, Express Confidence in Treatment.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Daniel O. Dancz and Alexander Horovitz, Hungarian chemists who have been treating with their new cancer remedy Congressman Robert Bremner and Postmaster D W. Mahony, of Passaic, announced yesterday that they had discovered a positive cure for both tuberculosis and cancer.

These two men, whose efforts to save Mr. Mahony and Congressman Bremner have aroused much interest in the medical profession, came to America two months ago, going at once to the residence of Charles A. Biczak, at 220 Third Street, Passaic.

Thinks He Is Recovering.

"I heard of these men through my friend Biczak and decided to try their treatment," said Postmaster Mahony yesterday in St. Mary's Hospital. "I had received no benefit by the treatment from my physicians. I gained their consent to allow these men to treat me and now I feel I am well on the road to recovery."

Mr. Mahony's optimistic view was shared by Dr. R. N. MacGuffie, house surgeon at St. Marys Hospital.

"Mr. Mahony's condition was critical until two weeks ago, when this treatment was applied," said Dr. MacGuffie.

Congressman Bremner, who for only one week has been undergoing this treatment, feels much better, too, it was said at his residence.

One of the patients whose physician has allowed the appliciation of the cure for tuberculosis, is Seward Wright, of 114 Second Avenue, Paterson. Last week he received his first treatment and now he is confident that in four weks he will be well.

Herb Medicine Used.

The treatment for both cancer and tuberculosis is the administration, both internally and externally, of medicines derived from herbs.

The cures are distinct, even the method of administration being totally different.

The two young men worked side by side for ten years, both at the Gymnasium and at the Royal University in Budapest. Mr. Horovitz is the expert on cancer and Mr. Dancz has made a specialty of tuberculosis.

"Our treatment for cancer," said Mr. Horovitz, "consists of the administration of brown pills from several herbs. There is a liquid wash, also made of herbs. Besides these, there is a compound made from some twenty different herbs, applied to the cancer by poultices."

Experimented on Animals.

"For five years we studied and experimented on animals before we learned of the compounds," said Mr. Dancz. "Then we applied our discoveries, first to animals and then to patients in Hungary. We began our experiments because of a deep interest in botany. In fact, many of our herbs were discovered by the simple process of watching animals.

"For instance, I would take two swine to the woods. One would be well and one sick. I would watch closely, seeing what herbs they would eat. Instinct seemed to direct them and by experiments later I learned exactly what herbs were necessary to cure certain ailments."

Suffragist Leader Would Carry Pistol

Following Permit Granted Colonel Roosevelt and Attorney Whitman, She Asks Court Same Privilege.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Following the granting of permission to Colonel Theodore Roosevelt and District Attorney Whitman to carry revolvers, Mrs. Robert H. Elder, the suffragist leader of Brooklyn and wife of a former assistant district attorney of Kings county, appeared before Chief Magistrate Kemper and requested to be allowed the same privilege. The judge gave her application blanks and said he would see that she received the permit.

Prince Raises $50 on Queen Mary's Letters

King George's Son Sells Mother's Missives to Schoolmate When She Refuses Him Money.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—Prince Henry, the third son of King George, who is at preparatory school at Broadstairs, is allowed $2.50 per week pocket money. Recently he asked his parents to double the allowance, which was peremptorily refused by his mother.

A few days ago it came to Queen Mary's knowledge that the young prince had raised $50 by selling letters from her and other members of the royal family to a schoolmate named Behrens who is related to Lord Rothschild. The Queen immediately wrote to Headmaster Saunders to obtain all the letters from Behrens, send them to her and refund the $50, which was done to-day.

Prince Henry was warned if he raised money this way again he will be tutored at home instead of being sent to Eton.

LadySackvilleInvites Jurors to Tea Party

Winner of Suit for Fortune of Sir John Murray Scott Wishes to Show Gratitude.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—Lady Sackville, as proof of her gratitude to the jurors who established her right to the great fortune left her by Sir John Murray Scott, has invited them to tea at Knole Park, Sevenoaks, Kent, on Saturday.

This droll entertainment will permit the jurors to inspect the famous country club and its art treasures which were preserved to Lord Sackville by Sir John's generous gift of money before his death.

Lady Sackville has asked many friends to assist in entertaining her guests, to whom none is of her "station in society," as she said of a lady during the now famous trial.

Scott bequeathed Lady Sackville art treasures in his Paris house worth about $1,750,000.

Taft's Tub Too Large, Wilson Asks a Shower

Bath for New President Will Be Built in Cellar of White House.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—There is to be a shower bath in the cellar of the White House. It has been requested by no less a person than the President, and it is evidently intended to keep him cool while he is spending his summers in Washington.

When President Taft first arrived at the White House he demanded, not a shower bath, but a tub big enough for his huge proportions. He got it. There is wonder here if that tub is still in the White House, for, if it is, it must be too large by far for the new President.

Red Spots in Aura Sure Sign of Love

Lecturer Tells Swains to Watch for Their Appearance and Then Propose Immediately.

CHICAGO, July 12.—Watch for the five reddish pink spots in the human aura, then propose. It is a ten to one wager that the girl will say yes, for just at that particular time the girl will be experiencing a rush of affection.

This advice to the lovelorn was gleaned from a lecture by Dr. Edwin B. Beckwith at Besant Hall.

Of course, the lovelorn would have to carry a sensitive screen of dicyanin, possibly a vest-pocket edition, through which he could gaze at the "only girl."

Mabel Taliaferro Is Wed in Daisy Field

Former Wife of Frederic Thompson Takes Every Precaution to Keep Her Marriage Secret.

ST. LOUIS, July 12.—After keeping her marriage to Thomas J. Carrigan, of LaPeer, Mich., a secret for more than a month, Mabel Taliaferro, of Chicago, the actress, formerly wife of Frederic Thompson, New York theatrical promoter, admitted here to-day she had been married June 1 in the Michigan city.

The marriage took place before a Justice of the Peace in a field of daisies that edged down to a river bank just outside of LaPeer, in order that all possible secrecy might be maintained.

LAUTERBACH BLAMES 'WOLF'

Life Wrecked by Lamar's Friendship

Lawyer Quails at Lobby Inquiry

MRS. PHILIP VAN VOLKENBURGH and Mrs. Edward Lauterbach are shown at the top. Below is Edward Lauterbach. He was once leader in politics, the law and finance, but his fall from wealth and influence has been almost as rapid as his ascension. His wife, to whom he attributed much of his early training for a career that was filled with success, divorced him—the first real downward step in his fall. Mrs. Van Volkenburgh, the "$10,000,000 widow," once his client, was reported in various circles as having played a part in the divorce won by Mrs. Lauterbach.

One-Time Leader of New York Republicans Presents a Pitiful Spectacle as He Tells of Relations With Wall St. Adventurer

Tells Senate Investigators That All of His Misdeeds Were Committed to Restore Other Man to Favor Among the Financiers

The story of a remarkable friendship existing between David Lamar, known as "the wolf of Wall Street" because of his subtly unscrupulous operations, and Edward Lauterbach, broken and discredited lawyer, is the net result of the week's investigation by the Senate Lobby Committee at Washington.

How Lamar posed as the emissary and spokesman of Senators and Congressmen, how he impersonated high Government officials in his conversations over the telephone to Wall Street operators, how he sought to frighten them into one concession and another by threat of proposed Congressional action—and all this not so much for his own gain as to demand recognition for his unfortunate lawyer friend, Lauterbach, he said—is the story.

Lamar long has been a figure of disrepute on Wall Street, and none knew this better than Lamar. Cynical, sarcastic, bitter, he told the Senate committee that he had been fighting to force Wall Street into recognition of himself and of his friend Lauterbach. He charged his Wall Street enemies with having circulated false reports about him. The substance of his confession was that he would drive them into the open by his impersonation of the powers at Washington.

Hatred for Ledyard.

The bitterest hatred of Lamar and Lauterbach was for Lewis Cass Ledyard, attorney for J. P. Morgan & Co. This was revealed on the witness stand when the two admitted having told Ledyard that they had held conferences with the Democratic leaders at Washington, including Senator Stone, Speaker Clark, Congressmen Riordan and Palmer.

"I determined to fix a game to force Ledyard into the open," declared Lamar, his voice shaking with emotion, "when I telephoned in the name of Congressman Palmer. For years men in Wall Street have been circulating stories of blackmail against us. Ledyard and his associates had ruined many men. I was determined that he should not ruin me."

On the stand Lauterbach saddled Lamar with the responsibility of most of the impersonations. Once Lauterbach went to see J. P. Morgan, bearing a resolution calling for an investigation of the Steel Trust by the House of Representatives. He declared that he did it to heal the breach between Morgan and Lamar.

"I thought if Mr. Morgan would ask Lamar to stop it, it would create good feeling between the two men," he said.

The figure of Edward Lauterbach, shrinking, timid, before the investigators, is the most remarkable thing of the week's revelations. Once Lauterbach held a position of power in politics. Of him had been written at one time:

"There is one man in New York at the present time who is, perhaps, entitled to more favors at the hands of his party than any other citizen of this State."

Once Republican Leader.

The paragraph was written of Edward Lauterbach in 1898 when he was a leader among the Republicans, a man of high place in the law, of weight in finance, a connoisseur of art, the owner of a home in the richest millionaire block in the world.

And then—

Consider Edward Lauterbach, cowering before the Lobby Investigating Committee at Washington, almost tearfully making the admission that he had lied to Lewis Cass Ledyard in an effort to get employment, and had lied by saying that he could hold out influence with Democrats, in a Democratic administration, that the corporations might profit by the weakness of the popular Representatives.

Such, in a fast, impressionistic outline, is the story of the fall of Edward Lauterbach, the eclipse of a

Singing Fish Keep Town From Sleep

Poetess Thinks Lonely Pout Are Calling Their Mates, but Others Call It Nuisance.

BELLEVUE, OHIO, July 12.—This town is all excited over certain singing fish which keep the villagers awake o' nights. These fish, a variety of bull pout, live in the subterranean streams which flow under the place, and, possibly becoming lonesome, come to the surface and sing.

Anyway, they gather at the surface of cisterns and quiet pools in the gathering dusk and chant in chorus what a prominent poetess of Bellevue calls a sweet, sad, haunting melody, which she likens to the moaning of night winds through lonely, brooding pines. But the citizens who are kept awake are beginning to cuss the gosh blamed noise

Farmers of Ozark Say That Express Companies Have Been Getting Half Their Revenue.

SPRINGDALE, ARK., July 12.—Moving the strawberry crop by parcel post may be undertaken by the growers of this and other berry growing districts next season. Efforts to obtain a special rate from the Government may be undertaken by the berry associations within a very short time.

It is asserted by association managers of the Southern Ozarks, whence formerly 1,000 to 1,500 cars of berries were marketed annually, the express companies and the commission houses have taken more than 50 per cent of the revenue from the berry crop.

'Death Merely Habit,' Says 'New Thinker'

PORTLAND, OREG., July 12—"There is no reason in the world why a person should ever die," declared Harry Gaze, editor of "Life Culture" and author of "How to Live Forever," at the annual convention of the National New Thought Alliance, in session here.

"At 100 years," he continued, "a person should be better to look at, more fit to live, than he was at 40 years. Death is merely a habit."

LAUTERBACH IS PITIFUL FIGURE BEFORE INQUIRY

Former Republican Leader Quails as He Tells Investigators of Relations With Wall St. Wolf.

man of talent who rose from poverty to high place, only to lose his place and his fortune in the bog mire of finance and politics.

Associate of Lamar.

Lauterbach to-day presents the miserable spectacle of being arraigned as the working partner of David Lamar, a party to his schemes and the benefactor of the evil genius of the subtle "Wolf" whose snapping was directed at all men—except Lauterbach. And verily the friendship of the "Wolf" was more blighting than his enmity.

Out of the haze of obscurity came Lauterbach. His father was Solon Lauterbach; his mother Mina. He was born August 12, 1844, in New York. He went to the public schools, then to the College of the City of New York, whence he was graduated in 1864. He was admitted to the bar in 1866 and was first employed with the firm of Townsend, Dyett & Morrison. He progressed until in 1877 he became a member of the firm of Hoadley, Lauterbach & Johnson. Many important law cases came his way. He grew rich.

He was a director in many corporations. At one time he was president of the Alabama Great Southern Railway, one of the chief links in the Southern System. In the Emigrant Aid Society, the Society for Ethical Culture, the Home for Aged and Infirm, the Hebrew Benevolent and Orphan Asylum, the Hebrew Technical Institute and many other organizations he was a worker and officer.

Was McKinley Partisan.

Lauterbach was one of the State's Big Four at the national convention that named McKinley at St. Louis. He was chairman of the Republican County Committee, and in 1898 was a candidate for the United States Senate to succeed Senator Murphy.

He became the right-hand man of Boss Platt, only to be sidetracked when he fought his chief, and Lemuel Ely Quigg was given the Lauterbach scepter. In all of the political events of his party and his time he had a part and a voice. He championed the cause of the Jews at all times, sought to relieve their oppression at home and abroad, and in many ways earned the gratitude of many people who will never forget his goodly acts in the mass of condemnation he has brought upon himself.

His Son's Death.

The decline set in during the year 1908 when Lauterbach's son, Alfred, was killed in an automobile accident while crossing a bridge in Westchester. Lauterbach had married, in his days of poverty, Amanda Friedman, who had saved a dot from the administration of her father's household expenses. She was a woman of grace in the days when she came to his home. To them were born four children: Mrs. Edith McDavitt, Mrs. Florence Hirschfield, Miss Alice Lauterbach and Alfred Lauterbach.

Shortly after the death of the son friends of the family heard that Lauterbach and his wife had separated and that the home at 761 Fifth Avenue no longer contained the pair.

It soon developed that the family split upon the question of suing the New Haven Road for killing the son. Upon the details of the suit the husband and wife quarreled and she finally filed suit for divorce, charging him with intimacy with women of questionable character, with cruelty and with failure to provide. That suit brought the beginning of the end to the Lauterbach career. Likewise it injected into the story the name of a woman who occupied high position and who was esteemed to possess millions.

What Wife Told.

The divorce was granted in 1911 and the court ordered the papers sealed. But the wife made public enough charges to make talk and to throw a new and strange light upon the career of the man she sued. She charged that she took him as an uncouth young man to whom her family objected; that she loaned him the money she had saved from her father's household; that she taught him the ways of polite society.

A year after the divorce Lauterbach indignantly denied that he had sustained friendly relations with Mrs. Philip Van Volkenburgh, widely known as the "$10,000,000 widow." Mrs. Van-Volkenburgh, who lived at the St. Regis, was being sued for a picture that Samuel J. Wolf, an artist, had painted. Lauterbach was a witness, and Alexander Strouse, counsel for the artist, asked Lauterbach to explain his relations with Mrs. Philip Van Volkenburgh.

Society papers toasted the lawyer for his defense, in heated fashion, of the woman of fashion and means. Later it was stated that Philip Van Volkenburgh had named Lauterbach in some way in a divorce suit he had filed in a double-barreled proceeding in which each of the Van Volkenburghs sued the other.

The truth concerning these matters was never made public.

Loses Ground Fast.

Lauterbach, in the meantime, was losing groung fast. He was no longer known as a factor in Republican politics. It was discovered that he had been one of the favored lawyers of the Wall Street element that held the Morgans and others. H. H. Rogers had employed him in a large matter, and he was esteemed to have an inside line of pull in the financial district. This hold, too, faded, and his friends did not understand the reason.

Now it has all come to the front, when Lauterbach, dragged by the collar into the light in connection with the Lamar exposure, was found to have been dropped by the financial forces because of his communion with familiar spirits of the Lamar brand, and with Lamar in particular.

With flushed face and bowed head, Lauterbach faced his tormentors as he sat before the Senate committee and had the chairman tear from him the last shred of his once great reputation.

The fall of Lauterbach is one of the distressing stories of real life that make men of real mental strength feel the emotions of pity and regret. Lifting himself from obscurity and poverty, he came to wealth and power. By his own hand he was pushed back from the eminence to which he climbed.

Weds Sixth Husband; Now Leads Daughter

Seventy-five-Year-Old Woman Starts New Marital Venture—Distances Goodwin and Hopper.

GRAND JUNCTION, COLO., July 12.—One more lap in the matrimonial race between Mrs. Dora Johnson-Davis - Howard-Steele- Jensen - Hill-Moore and her stepdaughter, Mrs. Grace Steele-Camron-Pruitt-Howard-Staley-Marquam, which has extended over the last twenty years, was completed recently in Long Beach, Cal., by the former, when she married G. A. Moore, her sixth husband.

Mrs. Moore, now 75 years old, so far as weddings are concerned, is one in the lead of Nat C. Goodwin and DeWolf Hopper.

Mrs. Marquam, the stepdaughter, is temporarily out of the running, for the courts have not yet freed her from Chester Ray Marquam, her fifth husband.

Insect Eggs Hatch After 17 Years' Wait

Kansas City Trees Filled With Pest of Locust Family—Noise Grows Daily.

KANSAS CITY, July 12.—That shrill, high-pitched, rasping chorus that has come from almost every tree in and around Kansas City the past few weeks and is growing each day in intensity is the noise of the cicada septendecim, wrongly known as the seventeen-year locust.

A brood of this fellow is hatching out this year in Western Missouri and Eastern Kansas, and hardly a tree in all that territory is without his song.

But the insects that are singing in the trees this summer are not locusts at all, and they do not eat the foliage of trees or any green thing, although they do considerable damage to trees.

The eggs which bore the countless billions of the brood that is appearing now were laid in the summer of 1896 in twigs.

Rats Catch Leeches, Fishing With Tails

Barber's Supply of Blood Suckers Is Mysteriously Drained—Rodents Show Skill as Anglers.

SHARON, PA., July 12.—When John Ephraim & Son stocked their jar with a fresh lot of Viennese leeches, they did not intend to give the rats a meal, but to treat such patrons of their barber shop as might have black eyes or the gout.

The rats saw the leeches and laid their plans. Seventy-two leeches disappeared in three nights. This is the way they went, according to an eye-witness. At night a rat with a long tail fished in the leech jar, having first cleared away the paper covering.

Seeing the tail dangling in the water, the leeches attached themselves to it. When the rat was ready, he pulled out his tail and the rats feasted.

POISON REPORT STIRS HEIRS IN CRAWFORD CASE

In his dotage of more than three-score and ten years and practically forced him to marry her, and hinting at something mysterious in his death so soon after that marriage. Testimony in that suit is now being heard before J. A. Anderson, acting as auditor of the estate for the court.

The thirteen contesting heirs are M. T. Byrd, Mrs. C. B. Cash, V. A. Prater, C. Z. Crawford, C. W. Walton, Mrs. R. Adeline Crawford, J. F. Cornett, Mrs. G. A. Thurmond, Mrs. Fannie Cornett, Mrs. Nannie Moore, J. H. Harris, John F. Harris and M. C. Crawford. George Crawford, for his minor children, and Lula Miller are fighting this suit with the second Mrs. Crawford, seeking to sustain the settlement previously agreed upon.

Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, the second wife, is a native of Pennsylvania. She was formerly Mrs. Mary Belle Savage. She lived at Uniontown and later at Pittsburg. A few years ago she came South, going to St. Augustine, where she opened a boarding house for winter tourists and health seekers visiting the Florida city.

Early in 1909 Crawford, accompanied by his niece, Lula Miller, went to Augustine for his health. They stopped at Mrs. Savage's boarding house. After a few weeks in St. Augustine, they returned to Atlanta. Then Crawford confided to J. J. Barge, his attorney and named in his will as executor of his estate, that he was going to marry Mrs. Savage just as soon as she could close out her business in St. Augustine.

Death Followed in Month.

The wedding took place a few days later. Crawford's death followed about a month later. His body was taken to his old home in Carroll County and was buried beside his first wife's grave. He had erected a stone to mark both graves, marking it with the names of himself and wife, the dates of birth and the date of his wife's death, leaving only the date of his own death to be added.

The contests over the estate soon followed and have never ended.

County Without Bible Will Obtain One Free

Commonwealth Finds It Possesses No Copy of Scriptures When Book Is Needed in Court.

WILKESBARRE, PA., July 12.—While boasting of a $2,000,000 courthouse and of being one of the wealthiest counties in the State, Luzerne County has no Bible which it can call its own.

This fact came to light recently when the court wanted a Bible for use in a trial. The courthouse was searched from cellar to garret, but no Bible could be found.

No order for a Bible has been placed since that time, and now the county has been put to shame by the Bible class of the Sixth Ward of Edwardsville, which has raised sufficient money by public subscription to buy a suitable Bible for the county.

Perfect Policeman Joins Boston Force

New Patrolman Makes 100 Mark on All Tests—Doesn't Smoke, Drink, or Swear.

BOSTON, July 12.—A policeman who neither drinks, smokes nor swears, and incidentally boasts of a thousand other unusual virtues, has been added to the police force of this city. It is the first time Boston has had a perfect policeman, an officer who scores 100 points in every department of policed esirability, according to the examination tests.

He is William McLaught, for two years a hoseman attached to Engine No. 26 in Charlestown. McLaught surprised the examining officials when he scored 100 per cent in the strength, balance and health trials of the civil service test.

SWIFT CLEARED BY JURY OF BAD MEAT CHARGE

Americus Investigators Return 'No Bill' Against Chicago Packers After Clean-Up Campaign.

AMERICUS, July 12.—Because there was insufficient evidence on which to base an indictment, the Sumter County Grand Jury, in special session, has returned a "no bill" against the local agent of Swift & Co., the big Chicago meat packers.

Charges were recently preferred against the agent of Swift & Co. by City Physician Chambliss and State Food Inspector Methvin, following a rigid inspection of meat markets, slaughter pens and grocery stores of Americus.

They condemned a quantity of meat and some live stock as being unfit. Some of the meat markets and slaughter pens were ordered closed and others were ordered cleaned and otherwise improved for the more sanitary handling of their wares.

Because of the large volume of business done by Swift & Co. in Americus and vicinity through the local distributing plant the impression prevailed that some of the tainted meat had been supplied by this concern. However, when the Grand Jury heard the evidence it was found that Swift & Co. had not either intentionally or unintentionally furnished such meat and the charges against the local agent were dismissed with a "no bill" indorsement by the Grand Jurors.

City Physician Chambliss is still active in his campaign against impure foods, having this week condemned a carload of watermelons, after several persons who had partaken of the fruit became ill. These were termed "bitter melons," the sale of which is prohibited by the State pure food laws. They came from a South Georgia truck farm.

3 Chicken Freaks Are Born in 10 Days

Naked Leghorn, Horned Rhode Island Red, and Whistling "Biddy" All on One Farm.

EVERETT, WASH., July 12.—Jay Sigworth, a poultry fancier, is the possessor of three barnyard freaks, hatched within ten days, and is wondering what new creation his chickens will spring on him. He defies even Winsted, Conn., to beat the following combination:

A White Leghorn hen hatched one chick which runs about as naked as a lizard. A Rhode Island chick has a well defined horn protruding from near the tip of its beak.

Another chick refuses to "peep" as a proper chick should and takes great delight in its talent for whistling. It will stand apart from its mates and whistle a distinct note, lasting about twelve seconds.

Boy Takes Rattler For His Playmate

Brings Serpent in House and Is Not Hurt by Experience With Snake.

BELLEVUE, FLA., July 12.—J. H. Maxwell, Jr., two-year-old son of J. H. Maxwell, of this place, is alive and playing just as usual to-day despite the fact that he had as a playmate for a few minutes yesterday a rattlesnake which he picked up in the yard of his father's home.

The little fellow came running into the house with the snake in his hand, laughing at his find. The snake was wriggling and attempting to strike him when his father seized and killed it.

Poor Roads Called Cause of Illiteracy

President of Association Says Good Schools Will Come With Improved Highways.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 12,—Illiteracy is caused chiefly by poor roads, according to Charles H. Davis, president of the National Highway Association, in an address before the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education at its twenty-first annual convention.

"We can not have good schools, unless we have good roads," he said.

Albert Ross Hill, president of the University of Missouri, arraigned the State Legislature, alleging that their false economy crippled the State universities.

Wife Elopes to Fill Role of Life Saver

Writes Husband She Left With Admirer to Keep Him From Slaying Himself.

NEW YORK, July 12.—James Stevens, of Ashburton Avenue, Yonkers, received a note yesterday from his wife Sarah, explaining that she had eloped with James Barber to save the man's life.

Barber, so she said, became so infatuated with her that he threatened to kill himself unless she fled with him. He even showed her a revolver, so she agreed to go in order to prevent a tragedy. Stevens has asked the police to find her.

TOWN GETS ITS MAIL BY STAGE ALWAYS WEEK LATE

SALEM, July 12.—"Mail is always a week behind where I live," said Charles E. Oliver, County School Superintendent of Lake County, who is here in connection with the examination of public school teachers. "There is a school at Butte, near Wagontire Mountain, that probably has the poorest mail service in the United States. The mail, no matter if sent from Lakeview, the county seat, goes first to Salt Lake City or Reno, Nev., and then through a roundabout way filters into the Oregon town. It is transported a considerable distance by stage.

WITH THE WILSONS AT CORNISH

President and Mrs. Wilson have followed the fashion set by Prince Ernest August of Cumberland and Princess Victoria Louise, who appeared frequently in the streets of Berlin before their marriage walking hand in hand. The President and Mrs. Wilson are here shown taking a hand-in-hand stroll at the summer capital at Cornish, N. H. In the lower picture the President, Miss Eleanor Wilson and Mrs. Wilson are enjoying an auto ride through the New Hampshire hills.

Girl Runs Foundry as Father Breaks Down

Daughter for Six Years After Parent's Health Failed Assumed Executive Duties of Business.

GREAT FALLS, MONT., July 12.—The directing force of the Great Falls Iron Works is a woman—Miss N. Cerula Woodbury. On the company's official roster she is designated as secretary-treasurer, but as the daughter of L. S. Woodbury, president of the company, she has for six years assumed the duties and responsibilities of her father, who has been in failing health and has passed most of his time in travel.

Miss Woodbury is at the office each day and keeps in close touch with all departments of the business.

Greek Theater To Seat 10,000 Planned

California Man Wants to Have Massive Structure Ready for Christmas Day Performance.

LOS ANGELES, July 12.—A Greek theater of concrete, with stage of classic lines, with concentric rings of concrete for tiers of seats rising higher and higher, that will accommodate 10,000 persons, will be built by Colonel Griffith J. Griffith, in Vermont Canyon, Griffith Park, Hollywood, and will be presented to the city.

"I hope to have the stage and enough of the theater completed by Christmas to seat 10,000 or 15,000 people," said Colonel Griffith, "so that a celebration may be held there Christmas day."

RECOVERS $380 FOR HIS WORK AS FATHER-IN-LAW

BOZEMAN, MONT., July 12.—J. E. McCallum was awarded $380 by the jury in the District Court as wages alleged to be due him for his services as father-in-law in the household of Geo. Taylor, his son-in-law, recently separated from his wife.

McCallum asked for this sum alleging that the work he had done in the house of his son-in-law, helping with the washing, dishes, etc., was worthy of payment.

The jury decided, after hearing the testimony, that the old man's efforts demanded more than mere board and room, and gave the plaintiff all he asked for.

Wins Suit for $100 He Bet on Marriage

Bridegroom Wagered He Would Wed in Year When Taker Backed, He Resorted to Court.

WELCH, W. VA., July 12.—One of the most unusual civil suits in the history of the State was decided here when Dr. J. L. Sameth was awarded $100, with interest for a year, against George D. Kendrick. During the latter part of the year 1911, during a conversation about matrimony, Kendrick told Dr. Sameth he would give him $100 if he married before January 1. From time to time Dr. Sameth asked Kendrick for the money, but the latter always declared it a joke. Dr. Sameth entered suit and won.

Ministers Snub Evangelist Sunday

New Bedford Preachers Decide Not to Invite the Former Baseball Player.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS., July 12.—Protestant ministers of New Bedford, after discussing Billy Sunday, the evangelist, in frank fashion, at their annual Cuttyhunk outing, voted unanimously not to invite Sunday to conduct revivals here, as had been planned.

The chief objections advanced were that Sunday requires Protestant churches to abandon all but their Sunday School services during his stay, and that the expense would be very heavy.

But there was also discussion as to Sunday's preachings and as to his motives. Appropriately enough—since Sunday played big league ball once upon a time, the ministers took a recess and played a game themselves before coming to their final decision. A letter from Sunday was read at the meeting.

FIND GOLD IN INDIAN GRAVE.

SAN BERNARDINO, CAL., July 12. Two pots of gold and a skeleton were unearthed here by G. W. Tyler while conducting street grading operations. The gold, in dust and nuggets, was worth about $500.

FRANK JAMES SPENDING LAST YEARS AT HOME

Former Famous Bandit Traced Back to Missouri Farm Where Brother Jesse Is Buried.

DENVER, July 12.—Within the last few months there have come many stories regarding Frank James, the one-time bandit. Frank James has died in Oregon, California and a few other States, he has "gotten religion" in the East, and he has been active generally. And the queer part about it is that he is alive and in good health, and is spending his last days on the old James farm a few miles from Kearney, Mo., where Jesse James is buried.

Brings Citizens' Statement.

This is the information that is brought to Denver by L. Wright, a motion picture proprietor, who recently made a visit to the farm in Missouri. When he returned he brought a statement with him, signed by various citizens of Kearney, and which reads as follows:

To Whom It May Concern:

This is to certify that we, the following citizens of Kearney, Clay County, Missouri, hereby affirm that we are personally acquainted with the original Frank James, brother of Jesse James, and that he is now enjoying good health and is living on the old James homestead about three miles northeast of this city, and we furthermore state that he is an honored and respected citizen of this community.

"I went back to get Mr. James' opinion regarding law and order," Mr. Wright said. "I am the proprietor of a set of Jesse James pictures and I had received the criticism that they were not moral. I contended exactly the opposite—that they showed the bad effects of a life of crime. So I went back to get some expression from Frank James on it. He told me this.

James Maintains Innocence.

"'If anyone thinks he can violate the law and make a success of it, I consider him insane, and his finish will be the gallows or the penitentiary.'"

Frank James contends that he was innocent of all the charges of outlawry placed against him. He points to his acquittal as evidence.

RELIGIOUS WAR SAVES NARCOTIC FOR REDSKINS

United States Senate Permits Indians to Use Peyote When Told It Makes Them Peaceful.

By SIDNEY ESPEY.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—The United States Senate recently was caught between two warring religious factions and diplomatically settled the dispdute by doing nothing. Therefore does the Indian continue the use of peyote, a narcotic of most peculiar properties.

It was urged by several missionaries and others bent on reforming the Indians that the use of peyote, a furry, dried button gathered from a Mexican plant, bred a habit similar to that which users of cocaine and morphine acquire. None of the missionaries gave the Senate Indian Committee first-hand information regarding this, and as it was vigorously disputed by Indians the Senate struck from the Indian appropriation bill a provision that a part of the appropriation for the suppression of the liquor traffic should also be devoted to stamping out the peyote habit.

Indians Defend Peyote.

Indians who wrote to the committee declared that the peyote is not a habit-maker and that, instead, it has induced a frame of mind among Indians which accords well with the governmental policy to make the Indians self-supporting and able to care for the vast properties which the Government now holds for them in trust.

Washington, excepting Indian reservations themselves, is perhaps the greatest Indian center in the United States. There are three or four hotels along the lower part of Pennsylvania Avenue, which in days past were aristocratic hostelries, where the barbaric brilliance of Indian costume may be seen almost any day.

Some wear blankets of varied colors, some adopt the habiliments of the white man, except that their garb is a riot of color that would make Senator James Hamilton Lewis look like a monotone in water color.

But whatever their garb, Poor Lo gets out among the Congressmen. And there he seems to have done a nifty job of lobbying in favor of peyote.

Narcotic Effect Slow.

Last winter a group of Indians visited a Congressman and brought with them a pocket full of peyote. They described its effects. The peyote is either chewed or is steeped and the liquor is then drunk. The narcotic effect is slow. One must take at least a whole night to get the benefit of a peyote spree.

But instead of inflaming the imagination and prompting the Indian to deeds of violence, it has an effect quite opposite. Instead the peyote user becomes introspective, considers his relations to his fellow men, weighs the wrongs he has inflicted on others and acquires, for the time being, at least, an altruistic philosophy quite at variance with the general tendency of Indians.

Nor, according to what this group of Indians told the Congressman, does the effect pass away with the recovery from the narcotic effects of the peyote. The dreamer awakes, but he retains for a time his humility of spirit and his wish to be of some value to his fellow men instead of an incumbrance. So eloquent, in fact, was the description that the particular Congressman decided that a treatment of peyote might not be bad for him. So the Indians left a few buttons and departed.

CHURCH WINS PROPERTY AFTER 48 YEARS LITIGATION

SALEM, OREG., July 12.—After court proceedings for 48 years, the Society of Sisters of the Holy Name of Jesus and Mary have undisputed possession of the property on which is located the Catholic school. Circuit Judge Galloway has granted an order quieting the title to the property.

The property was donated to the society in 1865, and has been used by it since.

About fifty persons, with Edward Davignon as principal, were interested in the suit.

PAGE BRANDED FOE OF SOUTH BY MAGAZINE

Ambassador in Novel Declares Himself Ashamed of Native Section.

SCOFFS OLD CONFEDERATES

Diplomat Finds No Objection to Marriage of Mulattoes and Whites, Article Asserts.

Aroused over statements Walter H. Page, Ambassador to the Court of St. James, made in his book, "The Southerners," in which it is declared he abused and derided Southerners through a false portrayal of them, the editors of Neale's Magazine in their July issue question Mr. Page's ability to represent the American people. The sharp criticism of the Ambassador, who is a native of the South, is the first offering in the publication and is entitled "Ambassador Page No Southerner."

The novel "The Southerners" first appeared as a serial in the Atlantic Monthly, and was written by Mr. Page under the pseudonym of "Nicholas Worth. Besides the review of the book there is editorial comment in Neale's Magazine questioning Mr. Page's Americanism, one paragraph of which reads:

"But Ambassador Page seems to hold the American section in which he was born and reared—a section that comprises about one-fourth the area and nearly one-fourth of the population of the United States—to be un-American because sectional. We are all Americans—unless Mr. Page be an exception—and worthier Americans because of our affection for the ward, borough, city, county and State in which we live."

Looked Down on By All.

Some of the criticisms of Mr. Page in the review of his book follow:

"We found that Nicholas Worth, the professed author of the book, was a man whose environment in the South had evidently been among persons who were not recognized in that section as typical—in fact, who had no social recognition whatever, but who lived to themselves and were looked down upon by whites and blacks alike.

"There are scenes in this book that are so coarse that we will not bring them into this review. It is sufficient to say that they were used to vilify the white race.

"Nicholas Worth and his kind never stood socially high in the South; he was no gentleman; his associates were not gentlemen; his antecedents had a defective sense of the difference that exists between right and wrong.

"Nicholas Worth holds Confederate veterans in utter contempt, and throughout his book Confederates are roundly abused, and he also abuses their organization and other Southern patriotic bodies, such as the Daughters of the Confederacy. Nicholas Worth denies that there was any intellectuality among the women of the South. He frequently speaks of the lack of culture of all the people among whom he was reared.

Ashamed of Section.

"Nicholas Worth, the Southerner, is ashamed of being a Southerner. He holds that there is no negro social problem. He does not find objectionable the marriage of a mulatto girl to a white man. He meets the negro woman on the terms of equality.

"He says that he found his 'intellectual emancipation' at Harvard. He does not seem ever to have been in any sort of home in the South—unless in the home of some negro; or, should we say that he seemed quite 'at home' when among negroes?

"Throughout the book Nicholas Worth continually dwells on his intellectual superiority to the people of the section where he was born. He praises his own scholarship as if amazed that a skull so small as his had the capacity for storing away so much erudition. As an evidence of his extraordinary knowledge, he says: 'Yet not a man or women who alluded to 'scholarly diversion' knew even the Greek alphabet, nor (sic) had any desire to learn it.

"The book now becomes important because of Mr. Page's position as the Ambassador of all the American people to Great Britain. In London the book is being hailed as a true expression of the South, for Mr. Page was born in the South, and they naturally suppose that a Southern President appointing a man of Southern birth has appointed a representative Southerner."

FARM HAND WINS $5 BY CARRYING CALF 2 MILES

MARTINETTE, WIS., July 12.—To win the value of the animal, $5, John Gross, a farm hand for Henry Dworak, Casco, Wis., carried a calf, weighing 122 pounds, two miles without putting the calf down.

Dworak told Gross to harness a team to take the calf to town. The farm hand said he would not harness a team for such a little load and that he could carry the calf to town.

Dworak then told him he could have the price the calf brought for veal if he performed the feat.

Adele Ritchie's Husband Scored First Wife Calls Him a Bigamist Pledges Life to Punishing Him

Adele Ritchie, the celebrated musical comedy actress, is seen in the upper picture, while below is Mrs. C. N. Bell No. 1, who charges that Miss Ritchie's new husband is a bigamist.

Mrs. C. N. Bell Declares She Was Left Friendless and Penniless to Starve in England.

Special Cable to The American.

LIVERPOOL, July 12.—Ill, practically penniless, dependent on the charity of an humble Liverpool shopkeeper, Mrs. Charles Nelson Bell, wife of the wealthy wine agent of New York who married Adele Ritchie, the musical comedy star, a few weeks ago, to-day told a pitiful story of how she had been left friendless in England to starve by her husband. She further declared that he had never obtained a divorce and asserted that she would not rest until she had raised enough money to return to the United States and prosecute him for the bigamy she declares he is guilty of.

Bell, the son of a banker of Asbury Park, and Adele Ritchie were married quietly a few weeks ago. At the time of the nuptials Miss Ritchie announced that she was marrying for money and her husband knew it.

Mrs. Bell says she was served with notice of divorce proceedings, but they were withdrawn after she had refused an offer of $750 to let the suit go uncontested.

"Such a proposal was a degrading insult," said Mrs. Bell, who wept as she told of her plight. "Starvation is agony, but I would rather starve to death a hundred times than to sell my good name, my reputation.

"Next I heard of my husband's marriage to Adele Ritchie—to her, of all women. I might have forgiven his cruelty, but now I shall punish him as he deserves, if there be justice left in America—if a law against bigamy exists there still.

Mrs. Bell was found at No. 38 St. Paul's Road, Seacombe, Cheshire, a suburb of Liverpool. She was once a model for Charles Dana Gibson. She is only twenty-eight years old.

She said falteringly as her feelings mastered her:

"I married Charles Nelson Bell September 21, 1906, at the Episcopal Church at Fort Hamilton, New York City. My maiden name was Louise McNaughton and my mother now lives at No. 101 Bay Thirty-fourth Street, Bensonhurst.

"Ours was a runaway marriage. My mother strongly objected to Mr. Bell. I loved him, but was soon disillusioned.

Sent Her to Europe.

"It is true that he gave me what is called 'a good time.' We lived at a good hotel, but I quickly realized that so far from being the sole object of my husband's affections I was only one among many.

"My husband sent me to England in May, 1911; he came to the pier, bid me bon voyage, loaded me with flowers and fruit, and sent me off happier than I had been for months, believing he loved me. I was sorry for the separation.

"Time drifted on and he was always making pretexts for me to stay here. One was that he had entered a new business and was head over heels in work. But weekly remittances arrived regularly. His letters were most affectionate, so I was not worried. Eventually I got homesick and wrote telling him so. He replied on May 31, 1912, that he was cabling me passage money.

"That is the last I heard from him. No letter arrived for the next few weeks, so I cabled. Still there was no reply. My money gave out; the hotel manager, who had been very forbearing, told me I must give up my room and my baggage because my bill was not paid.

"I stepped into the street with just a few shillings in my pocket and with nothing but the clothes I wore. I asked Mrs. Heaton, a shopkeeper, if she would lodge me for a short time until my remittance arrived. She did so, but I was penniless by then and, unwilling to acquaint her with my predicament, I went out at meal times and walked the streets starving.

"Mrs. Heaton finally discovered this and insisted on feeding me. She also got me a situation as a lady's help.

"Then suddenly last August someone served me with divorce papers. The shock made me ill. It seems that my husband had gone to Chicago and filed suit on the grounds of desertion, while I had been suffering awful privations here, unable to get money or even a letter from him or to return to America.

"Plainly, Mr. Bell thought the suit would be defended. I swore it would be.

"I went to the American Consul at Liverpool, but was merely shown the door. They told me if they had to assist every American in distress they would have a fine time.

"I then found a kind lawyer in Liverpool who came to my aid. He instructed Ferguson & Goodnow, lawyers, of State Street, Chicago, to defend my case.

"Immediately the defense was filed. I am informed that Bell dropped the case. Then, through my lawyers, knowing me to be penniless, he offered me $750 to allow the case to go through undefended. I refused and asked Ferguson & Goodnow to sue Mr. Bell for maintenance. They replied that Mr. Bell had left Chicago and they were unable to proceed."

GIRL MASKED AS DOCTOR CAUSES THRILL AT BALL

Kisses Pretty Married Woman, Who Cries for Husband, but He Is Disguised as Woman.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 12.—A comedy of errors was staged aboard the Pacific Mail steamer Nile. Miss Gene Yarborough, clothed in the uniform of the ship's surgeon, played the principal role and, for a time, had the passengers guessing and almost caused a domestic tragedy.

One day out of Honolulu the passengers held a masquerade ball to relieve the tedium of the voyage, and the outcome far exceeded the most optimistic expectations. That this was so was due in a great measure to Miss Yarborough.

While everybody on board was having a glorious time and the fun was waxing fast and furious, two maskers, one attired in Miss Yarborough's Japanese kimono and the other in the uniform of the Nile's doctor, entered the saloon and were the liveliest in the fun.

"Doctor" Dances Divinely.

The doctor danced divinely, and lacked not for partners. Little actions on the part of the physician, however, caused frowns on the brows of many of his fair partners. Squeezes of the hands and unnecessary pressure about the waists caused many to wonder at the liberties. Several were openly kissed. Some of the married women objected, but there were several who did not.

Then the doctor asked to dance with Mrs. R. E. Purinton, wife of a Government teacher of Osaka. While the two glided over the floor of the saloon Mrs. Purinton was gathered in the doctor's arms and a resounding kiss was planted on her lips. She screamed and immediately demanded that her husband be sent for.

Husband Is Missing.

A search was instituted, but no trace of Purinton could be found. Then the indignant passengers proceeded to snatch the mask from the face of the surgeon.

As the disguise came off a peal of laughter rang out, and Miss Yarborough was revealed.

The question arose concerning the identity of the passenger in the kimono, and Purinton was discovered. A plot had been hatched between the two, and Miss Yarborough had entered heartily into the spirit of the thing. Their farce met with far more success than either had dreamed of. The entire difficulty was quickly adjusted, however, and the ball was resumed with greater merriment than before.

Miss Yarborough has her home with her mother at 2158 Sutter Street, and has been touring the Orient with the Anglo-American players, presenting American comedies.

Jap Baby Baptized With American Flag

Stars and Stripes and Bible Used to Consecrate Boy to Patriotism and Piety.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 12.—A year ago Roy T. Masuda, a native of Japan, and Miss Mena Gilbertson, a Minnesota girl, were married by Rev. G. L. Morrill. Their two-month-old boy, George Washington Masuda, was consecrated, Rev. Mr. Morrill officiating.

The service is said to have been unique. Mr. Morrill formerly was a Baptist minister and does not approve of sprinkling as a form of baptism, and the baby was too young for immersion. The parents were anxious not only that the child receive some form of baptism and they also were firm in their desire that Rev. Mr. Morrill perform the ceremony. Hence, a compromise was agreed upon.

The boy was consecrated, the minister using the Bible and an American flag in the ceremony, pledging the father and mother to teach the youngster patriotism and piety.

Town Seeks in Vain For Man for Mayor

Political Parties Offer Place to Several, but Each of Them Refuses the Nomination.

BOONVILLE, IND., July 12.—Political parties of Boonville are experiencing much trouble to find availables to make the race for city offices in the coming elections.

The office of Mayor, to be vacated by Dr. T. D. Scales, is one particularly begging. On the expiration of his term Dr. Scales, it is understood, will be appointed on the State Board of Tax Commissioners by Governor Ralston.

Louis Kinderman, a hardware dealer; Henry Maurer, a department store owner, and Philip Lutz, Jr., an attorney, are suggested for the Democratic nomination, but each refuses to become a candidate. Jasper H. Thornburg, Councilman, is suggested for the Republican nomination.

Children Will Be Taught How to Lose

Town Employs Playmaster Who Will Attempt to Engender Better Spirit of Sportmanship.

CHICAGO, July 12.—Henry F. Kallenberg has just been appointed official playmaster to the children of River Forest, a suburb. Besides teaching them how to play, one of the important duties of the position will be to show young Americans how to be good losers, which they are not, he says.

"The American baseball fan is a bad loser, because his education in sportsmanship has been sadly neglected," the playmaster told members of the village board of River Forest.

"His interest in baseball can be traced back to the corner lot game, where he spent 40 minutes of every hour in arguing and 20 minutes playing ball."

MINNESOTA BARS SALE OF CIGARETTES ON TRAINS

ST. PAUL, July 12.—Cigarettes can not be sold on trains in Minnesota, according to an opinion given by the State Attorney General's office.

A law adopted at the last session of the Legislature provided for the sale of cigarettes by licensed dealers. The Attorney General's office says the law provides for the sale of cigarettes only at one place and in a definite municipality, which conditions are violated by trains.

GIRL DESERTS CHAUFFEUR SHE WEDS ON LARK

Banker's Daughter, in Tears, Tells of Escapade When Confronted With Marriage License.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Helen Anna Dowsey, 16 years old, a daughter of Dr. George H. Dowsey, former president of the First National Bank of Great Neck, L. I., was married secretly Wednesday afternoon to George Lephardt, 22 years old, a chauffeur, of 22 Ash Street, Flushing. Dr. Dowsey learned of the elopement yesterday afternoon in an unusual manner.

When a reporter called at the Dowsey home Dr. Dowsey refused to believe that his daughter was married. He insisted there must be a confusion of names, as his daughter was at home the night before as usual.

Denies She Is Bride.

When he called the young woman, she laughingly agreed her father was correct, and denied she was a bride. When a copy of the marriage license, returned to the City Clerk by the officiating clergyman, was displayed, she broke down, wept and confessed she had been married to Lephardt.

Because of the bride's age Dr. Dowsey at first declared he would call upon the District Attorney to proceed against the bridegroom. Later his brother, James Dowsey, a lawyer, stated that only action to annul the marriage would be taken by the young woman's family.

Through her tears, Mrs. Lephardt explained she had viewed the wedding more as a lark than otherwise, as she had been assured by members of the wedding party that inasmuch as she was not of age, she could have it annulled later if she so desired. She returned home on Wednesday afternoon, within an hour after the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Raymond L. Forman in the parsonage of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Flushing.

Chauffeur Awaits Her.

The couple, accompanied by a brother of the bridegroom and a young woman whom the bride said she had never met before and whose name she could not remember, went directly to the clergyman from the City Clerk's office in Long Island City. They had met earlier in the day in Port Washington, where Miss Dowsey had told her family she was going to visit friends, but where Lephardt and the others were waiting for her with an automobile.

When applying for the license, she gave her age as 18 years and her residence at 22 Ash Street, Flushing, the home of the bridegroom. After the ceremony the bride was driven to her home.

To her father Mrs. Lephardt said she first met Lephardt when he was employed as a chauffeur by a resident of Great Neck. Dr. Dowsey and Miss Ethel Dowsey, the sister of the young bride, did not recall ever having seen him.

TWO HAIRCUTS FOR NICKEL SAVE MONEY FOR STATE

LINCOLN, NEBR., July 12.—Superintendent R. V. Clark, of the State Industrial School, has evolved plans for saving the State money. A voucher received from that institution shows that for forty-six hair cuts given to inmates of his school, Superintendent Clark paid the sum of $1.15—at the rate of two for a nickel.

BANK ROBBER LOCAL FAVORITE; HIS DUAL ROLE

Young Man Who Held Up Cashier of Oregon Institution Read Cheap Novels on the Sly.

FOUND IN A LONELY CABIN

Hunt on for Desperado Who Had Won Golden Opinions From All His Acquaintances.

ROSEBURG, OREG., July 12.—Ray Diamond, the youthful desperado who held up Cashier Smith, of the Glendale State Bank, and secured $2,800 in money, lived a dual life, according to detectives who have been trying to capture him.

Diamond lived in Glendale five years, and conducted himself in a manner which won for him the esteem of his acquaintances. He was industrious and worked steadily.

He was welcomed in the best social circles in this district. Only a few weeks ago he played the leading par in a home talent play, for which h received high commendation. He wa an Odd Fellow, while the cashier he held up was the Noble Grand of his lodge.

Young Diamond did not drink, he was quiet and unassuming and talked little. He loved literature and was familiar with the works of the best authors. He was well versed on current events, and was a conversationalist of more than ordinary intelligence.

Has Refined Features.

In all, Diamond's outward life suggested nothing that would indicate that he was desperate and that he would ransack a bank. On the contrary, his features indicated refinement.

There was another side to Diamond's life, however, which was only known to himself. While a reader of heavy literature, Diamond also read much of notorious character, including John Tornow, the Washington desperado, and Harry Tracy, the Oregon outlaw. It is believed he learned to admire these men, and was fascinated by the possibility of himself gaining notoriety for daring.

In the sleeping room of a lonely cabin on the outskirts of Glendale were found hundreds of papers and books, the pages of which were filled with thrilling scenes.

Indications are that when finally the time came for his adventure he laid his plans carefully. He probably recalled the expression of Tracy that "any fool could rob a bank, but there were few who could get away."

Purchasing supplies, Diamond carried them to a point somewhere in the dense timber within a few miles of Glendale, and waited the chance to enter the bank in true desperado style.

A Society Bandit.

That Diamond was planning the hold-up and robbery at the very time he participated in home talent plays and mingled with Glendale's best society the officers say there can be no doubt.

Even the bank officials speak in high terms of Diamond's past life, and are unable to give a satisfactory explanation of his crime. He had $400 of his own money and consequently was not driven to desperation through lack of funds.

Cashier Smith, the victim of the hold-up, says he knew Diamond well, and would have been no more surprised had any of Glendale's merchants committed the act.

Diamond may emerge from the mountain districts in the vicinity of Grants Pass or may continue on his way down the coast to Crescent City, where he could leave the country by boat.

Woman Own Lawyer In Divorce Hearing

Takes Advantage of Statute Permitting One Party in Action to Plead Case Personally.

LITTLE ROCK, July 12.—Mrs. Mary B. Corney, plaintiff in one of the best-known divorce cases ever in the Arkansas courts, appeared as her own attorney in the hearing in the Supreme Court.

Though she had not studied law, Mrs. Corney was permitted to make her arguments under the section of the Constitution which permits one of the parties in an action at law to be heard.

The Corney case is one of the most noted of West Arkansas. Dr. Corney, now a resident of Little Rock, was married to Mrs. Corney in New York and later moved to VanBuren. The divorce proceedings which started there, have volumes of court reports.

SITKA, ALASKA, July 12.—The 112 tourists being conducted on an 8,000-mile trip through Alaska by the Seattle Chamber of Commerce arrived here today, and were shown over the Government experiment station by Professor Georgeson. Seth Mann, of San Francisco, representing President Wilson, is taking active interest, and acquiring intimate knowledge of the country's resources and possibilities for his report to Washington.

Mourned as Dead, Reads Own Obituary

Man Reported Killed in Mexico by Rebels Suddenly Reappears in His California Home.

CHICO, CAL., July 12.—Tim Aubrey, who married a prominent Chico girl a year ago, and left for Mexico soon afterward, returned last night and read his own obituary in the local papers.

Word was received here several weeks ago that he had been killed by rebels and he was mourned as dead. His unexpected appearance created a sensation here last night.

Law Perils Loveliest Limb Display

Council Would Drape Its Glories And World's Shapeliest Are Billed

At the top is shown Mlle. Spinelli, who Paris says owns the most beautiful nether limbs, while below are Rena Wandell and Marjorie Beverelly, her foremost American rivals.

Mlle. Spinelli Is on Her Way to America, and Follies Are Traveling.

Atlanta, it seems, will lose the opportunity it might have had to view the most delectable attractions that the American stage of next season will offer.

For one thing, Mlle. Spinelli is coming to America in vaudeville, and probably to Atlanta. And Mlle. Spinelli, be it known, is the reigning sensation of Paris, dear, discriminating Paris, because, besides her winsomeness and charm, she is said to possess the most artistic and perfectly shaped legs in all Europe.

Everyone Knows Ziegfeld's Specialty.

And then Ziegfeld's Follies already has started its 1913 tour, with Atlanta booked along the route. All the world and his brother knows that Florenz Ziegfeld is a connoisseur of feminine beauty, particularly that variety of beauty that is displayed to best advantage by a costume of tights and abbreviated skirts. In the Follies of 1913 especially are two young women, Rena Wandell and Marjorie Beverelly, who are said to possess the most artistic and perfectly shaped nether limbs in all America.

In the theatrical world the legs of Spinelli and those of Ziegfeld's Follies' cast have come to be regarded as contestants for the crown of beauty. At some time a decision must be made now that both parties to the contest are in Atlanta. Atlanta might have had an opportunity to judge, but—

But There's Boynton.

George M. Boynton, of the City Council of Atlanta, has presented to that body a resolution asking for an ordinance prohibiting the appearance of girls wearing tights or too short or scant dresses in theaters. The reporters who record the news and views of the Council are ready to prophesy the passage of the ordinance. If they are correct, then it means that Atlanta's most promising stage features of the 1913 season might as well be canceled.

For a Ziegfeld show decorously clad is no Ziegfeld show at all, and Spinelli with her artistic legs sheathed is a glory veiled.

LOVE OF HUSBAND FOR SOLITAIRE CAUSES SUIT

DETROIT, July 12.—Judge VanZile granted Mrs. Elvina Kidde a divorce from her husband, Regnar Kidde, manager of the Detroit Lubricator Company, after she testified he had been in the habit of remaining aloof from her and living his life in the seclusion of his den.

His companions, she said, always were cards and books, and seldom, if ever, herself. On returning from his work, she told the court, he would retire to his den on the third floor of their home and there play solitaire and read. His salary, she said, was $5,000 a year.

Husband Enjoined From Killing Wife

Woman Enters Suit for Divorce and Then Obtains Restraining Order to Prevent Slaying.

HUNTINGTON, W. VA., July 12.—Mrs. Bertha A. Nigh, after filing a suit for divorce in the Circuit Court, applied to Judge Graham for an injunction that would restrain her husband from "murdering her."

After listening to the woman's story of abuse from her husband, Judge Graham granted the injunction and sent an officer to serve it on Nigh with instructions to bring him into court unless he agreed to stay out of the section of the city where his wife was living.

When Mrs. Nigh left her husband a few days ago and went to live with a woman friend, she told him that she was going to seek a divorce. Nigh tried to kill her, but was stopped by neighbors. He then threatened that he would kill her the first time he had the opportunity.

BATHS DECLARED CURE FOR DELINQUENT CHILDREN

CHICAGO, July 12.—Given a delinquent child, this, according to Miss Delphia M. Culver, head of the Juvenile Detention Home in Chicago, is the way to make a good and normal child—if there is a way:

Shampoo him.
Scrub him.
Put him in an antiseptic bath.
Put him under a shower bath.
Call a doctor.

Miss Culver addressed the current events class of the Evanston Congregational Church yesterday on "Our Ministry to Delinquent Boys and Girls."

"Most of them are a product of destitute conditions," she said, "and it is necessary to apply sanitary measures first of all."

PASTOR IN PERIL WHEN FOLDING BED CLOSES UP

Minister Seeks Non-Collapsible Couch With Sprained Back and Numerous Bruises

GREELEY, COL., July 12.—A folding bed in which the Rev. J. L. Thompson, of this city, was sleeping folded during the night and the minister had a narrow escape from death.

The whole town is laughing at the incident and wondering what the preacher said when he battled fiercely to free himself from the malicious and violent mechanical bed, but his friends declare that Dr. Thompson came very near to death.

As it is he is confined to another bed (non-folding) with a badly sprained back and is suffering from numerous bruises and strains received during his go with the silent and merciless foe bent upon his destruction.

Dr. Thompson was secretary of the State Sunday School Association now in session here and his absence was felt at the meeting. A number of the visiting ministers called to offer condolences.

When the bed folded, Dr. Thompson was sound asleep, it is declared. The cover was thrown over his head in such a manner that his cries for help could not be heard. By the most violent efforts he was able to extricate himself sufficiently to cry out and help came.

When the bed was pulled down the minister was completely exhausted from his struggles.

Jury Finds for Both; Legal Tangle Result

Verdict Is Returned for Plaintiff and Defendant as Result of Auto Collision.

KANSAS CITY, July 12.—An accommodating jury in Judge Robinson's court brought in a verdict both for the plaintiff and the defendant in a suit for damages, thereby bringing up all sorts of legal complications.

Charles H. Apple was suing J. M. Smith for $800 damages to his motor car as a result of a collision with Smith's car two years ago. Smith filed a bill asking the same amount as Apple for damages to his car. Both asserted the other was careless and driving at a high rate of speed.

The jury believed Apple's car was damaged the worse, and ordered Smith to pay him $350, while they ordered Apple to pay Smith $85.

RICH MEN MADE POLICEMEN TO STOP SPEED NUISANCE

AURORA, ILL., July 12.—Twenty-five Aurora bankers, manufacturers and merchants were sworn in as special automobile policemen by City Clerk Flannigan.

The wealth of the twenty-five will total more than $5,000,000. There is one millionaire and two are worth $500,000. All have been furnished with stars by Chief of Police Frank Michels and will patrol the streets of Aurora nightly. Numerous complaints of speeding caused Mayor Thomas Sanders to issue an appeal asking for volunteer police among the motorists.

KNOXVILLE FAIR TO MAKE LAND SHOW FEATURE

Value of Soil Will Be One of the Principal Lessons of Conservation Exposition.

KNOXVILLE, July 12.—Realizing that land is primarily the basis of all wealth and that from the land must come food and clothing for the present and future generations, the management of the National Conservation Exposition has prepared for the greatest land show ever held in the South and one of the greatest land shows ever held anywhere.

Scientists say that the land of the United States must be conserved, must be nurtured and cared for, must be nursed and doctored and in no wise maltreated if the nation is to maintain its present proud position at the head of all the nations of the earth.

Tremendous Land Building.

It is to teach the lesson of the necessity of conserving lands, as well as of teaching the lessons of conservation of other resources, that the National Conservation Exposition comes into being. In the big new land building on the exposition grounds the land show will be held.

The land building, completed to the last nail, is one of six big exposition buildings erected for the Conservation Exposition. Attached to it is an annex with an auditorium that will seat 3,000 persons. The United States Government display in the land building as well as State displays will be particularly fine and comprehensive. The exposition will open on September 1 and will continue until November 1.

Merchants to Visit Fair.

Incidentally, Knoxville is planning a great boosting campaign to be conducted in connection with the exposition.

Fifteen thousand merchants and jobbers in the territory continguous to Knoxville have been invited to visit the city while the exposition is on. The invitations have been sent out by the Commercial Club of Knoxville.

The entertainment of these out-of-town buyers is part of a general boosting movement that is astir in Knoxville and has been inspired by the exposition. The merchants and jobbers of Knoxville are making every effort to extend their trade and figure that while the exposition is in progress there will be a large influx of visitors into the city. Hence the plan of inviting the outside merchants to Knoxville. Acceptances to the invitations are being received rapidly.

Kansas To Be Netted With Trolley Lines

Several New Roads Are Being Projected From Topeka and More Are Contemplated.

TOPEKA, KANS., July 12.—Even as Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Eastern States are covered with interurban railway systems, so Kansas promises to be covered before many years have passed.

Several new roads are projected, the largest and more extensive being the electric line from Independence through Neodesha, Yates Center, Burlington, Lyndon and Scranton to Topeka. Maps have been completed for this line and work is being done at the southern end.

Sheep Shame Camels On Drink Question

U. S. Government Report Shows That Woolly Animals Go Four Months Without Water.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—The old saying which always ended with an interrogatory about a camel's ability to go eight days without water, but who wanted to be a camel, must be discarded.

The Utah sheep has the camel beaten by whole weeks and months if a hot weather story issued by the new press agent of Secretary Houston's Department of Agriculture is to be believed, and a term more expressive by comparison than "piker" will have to be coined to describe the patient ship of the desert.

"Sheep on the Nebo national forest, Utah, go four and a half months without water except for such moisture as they get from the dew and the juice of forage plants," says the Department bulletin.

Flagman Sticks to Train Despite Riches

Wife Gets Fortune, but Says She'll Just Fix Up Home a Little Bit.

SPOKANE, July 12.—Latest reports received from Springfield, Ill., by Mrs. Minnie Beadle, of 401 Chelan Street, who recently was made one of the heirs to a $175,000 estate left by a sister in that city, places her share at more than $45,000, or double what was at first thought to be her share. Beadle is a flagman for the Spokane and Island Empire Railroad.

"We like our place here," said Mrs. Beadle. "We have made it our home and it would be hard for us to give it up. Mr. Beadle likes his work and I think that we will stay here and go on as before. We will fix our home up nicer now."

Mrs. Beadle is the daughter of Rev. N. G. Collins, formerly pastor of the Baptist Church at Bellingham, Wash.

Heir to Earldom One Of Harvard Faculty

Future Lord Russell Will Teach Mathematical Philosophy—Wife Is American Girl.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS., July 12.—When Harvard reopens in the fall the university will have among its faculty a member of the English nobility, the heir presumptive to the earldom of Russell, the Hon. Bertrand Arthur William Russell, of Cambridge, England.

The new professor comes from Trinity College, Cambridge University, to teach philosophy, with special reference to the mathematical and moral sides of the subject. Mrs. Russell was Miss Alys Smith, daughter of R. Pearall Smith, of Philadelphia.

Gold Nugget Worth $1,500 Is Discovered

Placer Miners Get What Is Thought To Be Biggest Single Lump in Northwest.

BAKER, OREG., July 12.—Probably the largest nugget ever found in the Northwest was panned by George Armstrong and Richard Staurton, on their Dutch Gulch placer claim, three miles from Susanville and 60 miles from Baker. The nugget was of gold, worth $1,500. It weighs 6¾ pounds and is worth $17.50 an ounce.

The largest nugget previously taken out in Eastern Oregon was worth $728 in the same district a few years ago. The Humboldt placers in the Mormon Basin two years ago unearthed a $720 nugget.

FREE RIDES FOR PASSENGERS ON ALASKAN ROAD

Failure of Rate Cards to Arrive Causes Officials to Give Every One a Pass.

SEWARD, ALASKA, July 12.—A train of the Alaska Northern Railroad left for the front recently with the first load of freight this year. Since the arrival of Colonel Swanitz some few weeks ago the work of getting the roadbed clear of snow and in shape to stand traffic has been going steadily ahead.

A startling reduction is a cut of 8 cents per mile in the pasenger traffic, the former price of 20 cents per mile having been reduced to 12 cents per mile. This will prove a boon to prospectors.

Owing to the fact that the new passenger tariff sheet is not yet in the hands of the railroad officials, and in view of the fact that to carry passengers and charge them for the service is in direct opposition to one of the most stringent rules as set forth by the Interstate Commerce Commission, passengers are now riding free and will be doing the same until the new tariff sheets are printed and posted.

The fact that there is no charge for riding on the Alaska Northern Railway is being taken advantage of by many prospectors, and many outfits are getting away for the hills at least two weeks earlier than would otherwise be the case. A big gasoline automobile will be placed in commission during the coming week, and a regular passenger schedule maintained during the season.

EVERY ARTIST CALLED INSANE BY ALIENISTS

Chicago Colony Excited by the Charge Made at Convention of Nerve Specialists.

CHICAGO, July 12.—A wave of excited indignation rolled up from Chicago's art colony and beat upon the Hotel Sherman, where prominent alienists and nerve specialists are holding convention.

The direct charge by the lunacy specialists that all artists, sculptors and poets are essentially unbalanced and the intimation that had Rubens, Michelangelo, Hugo, Browning, Byron, Keats and Shelley been examined by competent alienists they would have been put in insane asylums, provoked all the warmth.

"Such statements," said Director French, of the Chicago Art Institute, "lead artists to believe that all doctors, or at least all alienists, are insane and should be incarcerated in a big madhouse."

Having consigned the persons of temperament to the asylum, the alienists took a fresh tack. Dr. Cheston King, of Atlanta, Ga., who volunteered that exaggerated ideas of love and beauty had caused the mental downfall of the artists and poets, worked the discussion around to a pronouncement that "love itself is only a form of insanity."

CARNEGIE, THE LAUGHING MILLIONAIRE, AS THE LATE WILLIAM T. STEAD SAW HIM

Famous Editor Gives a Lot of Reasons Why the Steel-Master Is Able to Laugh, and Quotes Some of His Terse Remarks.

Has No Sympathy or Desire to Aid the Average Man, but Thinks Help Should Be Bestowed to Assist Brilliant Men Higher.

Andrew Carnegie, man of many millions and many smiles.

The following life story of Andrew Carnegie is interesting, not only as the record of a successful business man, but also as one of the last writings of William T. Stead, the famous editor, who went down with the Titanic.

Mr. Stead's acquaintance with Carnegie enabled him to write with conviction.

By W. T. STEAD.

Mr. Carnegie is a millionaire who laughs. He is one of the greatest of millionaires and yet he is at the same time one of the heartiest of laughers. He says:

"Beyond a competence for old age, wealth lessens rather than increases human happiness. The most miserable of men, as old age approaches, are those who have made money-making their God, like flies bound to the wheel those unfortunates fondly believed they were really driving it, only to find when tired and craving rest that it is impossible for them to get off and they are lost—passing into nothingness, leaving their money behind for heirs to quarrel over, only because they can not take it with them—a melancholy end much less enviable then that of their poorer fellows."

How is it, then, that Mr. Carnegie has escaped the common doom of the limited but unfortunate class to which he belongs? How is it that instead of being a careworn custodian of wealth beyond the dreams of avarice he is still a millionaire who laughs?

He has passed the three-score years and ten, the proverbial span of human life. But old age has neither saddened him nor soured him.

Mr. Metchnikoff recently propounded the theory, based largely upon a study of the life of Goethe, that youth is the period of pessimism and that it is only in old age man ripens into optimism. Andrew Carnegie is certainly not less an optimist in his seventy-second year than he was when he was 17.

It is difficult for strangers to realize the youthful enthusiasm which makes this man, laden with the care of millions, as light-hearted as a boy of 16 without a penny in his pocket.

Some of the Reasons Why He Laughs.

The contributory causes of this desirable and rare equipoise are many. To begin with, he inherited a good constitution. He came of splendid old Scottish stock, and was brought up on porridge and the Book of Proverbs.

He honored his father and his mother, and his days have been long according to the promise, for he eschewed all the vices of youth, and devoted himself from the first decade to helping his parents to meet the household expenses.

He has never smoked, and, if he is not an absolute teetotaler, he is certainly extremely abstemious in the matter of alcohol.

To look habitually upon the bright side of things, always to take short views and to encounter the future with a cheerful confidence that the tendency is upward and onward, and that the law governing all things tends to the survival of the fittest and the evolution of the best, such is the comfortable philosophy with which Mr. Carnegie has confronted the world.

Mr. Herbert Spencer, when he visited Mr. Carnegie in his domain, remarked that a month in Pittsburg would justify any man in committing suicide. Mr. Carnegie does not live in Pittsburg. He spends half of the year in New York and the rest of it at his country seat, Skibo Castle, on Dornoch Firth.

Mr. Carnegie amassed his millions much more easily than he can give them away. He started less than ten years ago on the task of distribution. He had then $300,000,000, which brought him in an annual income of between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000. He has succeeded in giving away $125,000,000, and the capital of his fortune is larger than it was when he started.

The pile won't grow smaller. The more he gives away the more it increases. It is the miracle of the widow's cruse over again. In 1911 Mr. Carnegie said to me, "I shall find it a much heavier task giving it away than making it. It is so easy to do harm when you wish to do good, but I intend to apply myself to the study of the best methods of using this vast accumulation of wealth."

Mr. Carnegie has given away $41,000 in round numbers every day for ten years past.

Mr. Carnegie long ago wrote: "The man who dies rich dies disgraced." It is long odds that he himself will die disgraced. He is over 70 years old, and if he were to start now to give away $50 a second if he lived to be 100 he would still have a few millions left with which to keep his daughter from the workhouse.

Mr. Carnegie sets his face as a flint against helping the helpless. He is dead against lifting lame dogs over stiles. Talking to my eldest son, who visited him in his Scotch retreat, he said he did not believe in helping the average man.

The average man was all very well, but the man who needed help and assistance was he who was endowed with more than the average ability. Probably the best method in which a millionaire, who wished to help on the advance of the race could spend his wealth was by placing within the reach of the capable the opportunities which would enable them to develop their natural gifts. To him that hath it shall be given, and from him who hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath.

When the time comes for writing his epitaph it is Mr. Carnegie's declared belief that the State ought to levy a death duty of 50 per cent upon whatever fortune he leaves behind.

Angry Husband Parades Spouse's Admirer, Scantily Clad, Before Large Gathering of Neighbors.

DAYTON, OHIO, July 12.—Claiming that he had discovered his wife Adella Bender, and Charles Kaelber were in love, John H. Bender, a wealthy horseman, brought suit in the local court for divorce. Mrs. Bender is the daughter of Jacob B. Dust, one of the most prominent residents of this city.

Bender declared he had been away on a business trip and returning suddenly surprised the couple. According to Bender, after he had found his wife and Kaelber together he fired four blank cartridges into the air to summon some neighbors. He then paraded Kaelber in dishabille in front of the Bender home for the edification of the neighbors.

After Kaelber had been exhibited to a throng who were drawn to the Bender home, a photographer was hurriedly called and several negatives taken of Kaelber.

"I Do" Ties Marriage Knot, Court Rules

Widow of Man Who Dropped Dead at Altar Sues to Establish Her Status.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, July 12.—The question of at what point in a marriage ceremony the parties become man and wife was passed upon by Judge E. B. Dillon in the case of Julia E. Roberts vs. The Estate of Albert Roberts.

While she was being married to Roberts in 1904 he fell dead. Her claim to his estate as his widow was resisted by other heirs on the ground that only at the conclusion of the ceremony could she have been his wife.

Her attorney proved that the ceremony had passed the point at which each party said, "I do," in response to the minister's question, and held that that completed the contract. Judge Dillon decided that she was Roberts' widow, but sustained a motion for a rehearing of the case.

Flirting Squad Will Rid City of Mashers

Twenty Veteran Policemen Will Patrol Shopping District of Philadelphia to Protect Girls.

PHILADELPHIA, July 12.—To stop flirting in the public highways, Director Porter to-morrow will organize a squad of twenty veteran policemen in plain clothes to catch the "mashers." In the past three days eleven men have been arrested for "mashing."

Yesterday a young woman started down the subway steps when a youth put his arm about her waist. Two reserve policemen were necessary to take him to City Hall. He got ten days in the county prison.

Last night another young man stepped up to a young woman in Market Street, seized her by the arm and tried to walk up the street with her. The girl collared him and turned him over to the police. He also was given ten days.

Judge Orders 12 Women Not to Talk

Can These Jurors Remain Silent Over Sunday Is Western Problem.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 12.—Can twelve women, with the same subject filling all their minds, refrain from talking about it? That question is being settled here by the first jury of women ever drawn to try a felony case.

The women will try Mrs. Bertha J. Williams, accused of sending a threatening letter with a view to extortion.

After choosing them from 60 talesmen, Judge Dunne dismissed them until Monday, with this admonition:

"Do not discuss this case among yourselves, or with any persons on earth between now and the trial of this case."

Mustard Foot Bath Convict's Cure-All

Prisoner's Pedal Ablutions Build Him Up From Physical Wreck to Healthiest Man in Jail.

TRENTON, N. J., July 12.—Thomas Doyle, a 20-year-old prisoner at the State prison, has discovered something which has attracted the attention of medical men. Doyle came into the prison several years ago with a delicate constitution. He commenced to steam his feet every night with mustard and hot water, followed by a brisk massage. His health is now above that of the other inmates of the institution and his belief is that the strange pedal treatment is what built up his system.

Saved From Snake By Woman Charmer

Show Manager Almost Crushed to Death by Huge Python—Flageolet Music Stops Serpent.

PUNXSUTAWNEY, PA., July 12.—Mlle. La Benetos, a snake charmer, yesterday saved the life of James Harvey Stenger, the manager of the J. R. Smith Carnival Company, after a 25-foot python had wrapped itself about the man and was slowly strangling him to death. Mlle. Beneto used a flageolet, on which she played a low, weird melody, and the moment the giant snake heard it he unwrapped his coils and released the man, who was by that time unconscious.

Salvation Officer Is Named in Suit

Blue Eyes and Sweet Voice of Evangelist Causes of Woman's Marital Differences.

MONTROSE, COLO., July 12.—The blue eyes and sweet voice used in converting sinners of Captain John Hicks, of the Salvation Army, caused Albert Goodman to sue his wife for a divorce, and when Mrs. Goodman admitted in court that she was "converted" by the captain, the decree was granted.

Captain Hicks a few weeks ago talked about sinners in such a fetching manner that Mrs. Goodman cried. The captain met Mrs. Goodman after the services, and from that time on a strong friendship sprung up.

SWEDENBORGAN SOCIETY GETS $200,000 BEQUEST

SEATTLE, July 12.—H. W. Peters, pioneer, left the bulk of his fortune to promote the teachings of Swedenborg.

By the will, the general convention of the New Jerusalem of the United States of America, with headquarters in Boston, is bequeathed one-half of a $200,000 estate, and the remaining portion to the American Swedenborg Printing and Publishing Society, of New York, except $12,000 out of the estate, devised to relatives.

MOTHER USES ENDLESS CHAIN TO FIND CHILD

Sends Out Circulars and Asks That Word Be Sent on to Track Kidnaped Girl.

BOSTON, July 12.—One of the most remarkable searches for a lost person ever undertaken is now being conducted from Boston.

Olga N. Ellis, aged 5 1-2 years and described as light-complexioned, blue-eyed, with light wavy hair and a dimple in each cheek, was taken away by her father on February 2 last. Her mother has called to her aid not only Superintendent William H. Pierce, of the Boston police, but the "endless chain."

Circular Describes Child.

The circular sent out by the Boston police gives this description of John Ellis, the father, who is wanted for kidnaping the child:

"John Ellis, age 45 years; height, 5 feet 9 inches; weight, 145 pounds; medium complexion, smooth shaven, light brown hair, gray at temples, bald on top, hands noticeably small, with peculiar fleshy nails; India ink dot at base of one thumb; was at one time a clergyman, but was lately employed as agent selling stocks.

Written at the top of the circulars is this message: "Won't you be a link in an endless chain around the world to help find Olga? She is too small to help herself. We must find her. Please make this circular count." On the bottom is a petition that the receiver will try to enlist the newspapers in his section to assist in the search.

Ellis has been successively a minister, a journalist, a stock broker and telegraph operator.

Gets Custody of Girl.

Mrs. Ellis says that the first two years of her married life were comparatively happy. They were married in Dedham, Mass., and went to live in Mount Clemens, Mich. Then, according to her story, followed a period of fascinations on the part of the husband for one woman after another. Finally a divorce, Mrs. Ellis being given custody of the child, Olga. The father, however, was to be allowed to see her at such times as the mother thought suitable, but she was not to be taken out of the State of Massachusetts, where the divorce had been granted.

"I never," said Mrs. Ellis, "knew when my husband was coming to see Olga, but I tried to be very fair about letting him see her."

On February 2, 1913, Ellis called for the child, and he was to have her from 9:30 in the morning until 7:30 at night. Since that hour nothing has been heard from either the child or the father.

Woman Asks in Vain For a Saloon License

Town Is Divided as to Whether Fashionable Hotel Should Receive Liquor Permit.

COLORADO SPRINGS, July 14.—The resort town of Manitou is divided as to whether a liquor license should be granted the Madisons Hotel. Mrs. Finis P. Ernest, formerly of Denver, a woman of wealth and social prominence, interested in the Mansions Hotel property, has spoken her mind to the town board about the "Dutch room" of the hotel. She said she frequently took her daughter there last summer for lunch.

The Rev. Robert P. Carson, Mrs. Ernest declared, had never raised his voice in protest until other liquor licenses had been granted, then "he had a spasm and got out this petition." Nevertheless, the board again voted not to grant the liquor license. The petition against a license had 120 signatures, against nearly 200 favoring it.

Kidnaped as Boy; Returns Home a Man

Kentucky Youth Taken Away Ten Years Ago by Stranger Who Posed as Preacher.

CAMPBELLSVILLE, KY., July 12. Kidnaped here ten years ago by a man representing himself as a minister, Charles Rexroat, who left as a barefooted boy, has returned a young man. Rexroat was taken to Missouri by his captor and forced to submit to many hardships.

To strangers the kidnaper represented Rexrat as his son. The lad was watched closely and never given a chance to escape. Recently a former resident of Campbellsville recognized Rexroat on the streets of Alton, Mo. The young man was delighted to hear from his relatives and immediately returned home.

Copper Poison Found In Stalks of Celery

U. S. Department of Agriculture Warns Consumers to Wash Bunches Before Eating.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—The Department of Agriculture, acting on complaints from a number of health officers, has found that much table celery marketed contained slight amounts of copper in the form of dried Bordeaux mixture, which farmers use to protect celery plants from disease.

The department has requested celery growers to spray their plants with efficient apparatus and warns consumers to break the bunches of celery open and wash the stalks thoroughly before they are eaten.

MOST GORGEOUS BRIDAL GOWN IN ALL THE WORLD

June is the month of brides. And the month of gowns, too. But here is shown what fashion experts of England have called the world's most gorgeous parading gown. It was made for the daughter of a wealthy English family, and its creation was due to one of the largest dressmaking establishments in England.

GARDEN IS SHIRKED WIFE ASKS DIVORCE

Woman Declares Husband Neglected to Work Plot Depended on for Table Vegetables.

"Edna, Edna, dutiful wife,
How does your garden grow?"
"It doesn't grow at all," she said;
"My husband hates it so.

"I wanted a plot for garden sass;
My spouse has ne'er gainsayed it.
The lot was there, but the garden—not!
My husband wouldn't spade it."
—Ballads of a Garden Lover.

LOS ANGELES, July 12.—This explains the situation of Mrs. Edna Napier, whose suit for divorce against James S. Napier, brought on grounds of desertion, was heard to-day by Judge Monroe. The decree was withheld for lack of sufficient testimony and the case continued to July 14.

Mrs. Napier testified that she wanted to raise a garden to supply vegetables for her boarding table, but that her husband wouldn't let her and refused to spade up the lot for her. When she upbraided him for this he bade permanent adieu to her in 1911 and has not been seen since.

77,400 Eggs Broken To Be Shipped Frozen

Whites Are Separated From Yolks in New Process of Canning Poultry Products.

SEDALIA, MO., July 12.—Twenty-four girls broke 3,225 eggs each at the Murray & Schmidt plant under the supervision of the Bureau of Chemistry, United States Department of Agriculture.

The whites having been separated from the yolks, the eggs were put into 30-pound cans and frozen for shipment. The freezing of these 77,400 eggs was only an average day's work.

The laboratory was located here for the education of the chicken raisers of Missouri.

GRAND CANYON GRANDEUR TO BE A FAIR FEATURE

$300,000 Arizona Exhibit Will Be Faithful Copy of Great Work of Nature.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 12.—W. F. Sesser, manager of the Santa Fe exhibits, who will have charge of the $300,000 reproduction of the Grand Canyon of Arizona at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, gave some interesting information about the construction of the exhibit.

"In the production of this work," said Sesser, "I have had with me at the canyon Walter W. Burridge, one of America's greatest painters; Charles R. Fisher, J. C. Schwerdt and a full equipment of guides and helpers. Captain John Hance, the hermit of the canyon, has been with us all the time. We have made studies at ten of the principal points of the canyon that will embrace in the exhibit we are to make the most grand and magnificent portions of the canyon.

Use Original Material.

"We are gathering rocks, trees, cactus and shrubbery of all kinds from the rim of the canyon, which we will use in constructing the facsimile rim at the Grand Canyon exhibit. We will build a portion of Hermit Trail, showing a trail party moving down the trail, in motion, actual figures being constructed in correct position to accomplish this effect. In one section we will reproduce a storm in the canyon. We will also in another section have the effects of moonlight and sunset, with beautiful El Tovar Hotel illuminated at night on the rim.

Indian Villages Planned.

"The Pueblo villages will be an important feature, occupying the second floor of our front construction. In this part of the exhibit will be housed Hopi and Navajo Indian villages.

"Here the Indians will be engaged in their daily occupations, as in their original villages, making pottery, weaving blankets, spinning yarn, weaving baskets, grinding grain with a primitive mortar and pestle, making bread in their primitive ovens, silversmiths hammering out jewelry from crude silver, and all of the occupations that are carried on in the native villages.

"The public will have an opportunity of coming into close personal observation of this Indian life."

HEN BORN WITH 2 TEETH; GROWS WAY FROM SHELL

MARINETTE, WIS., July 12.—The old saw, "Scarce as hen's teeth," is threatened with annihilation if Marinette hens continue to hatch chickens like one exhibited by Andrew Gipp. It had two tiny teeth visible in its bill. It lived only a few minutes after it had pecked or gnawed its way out of its shell. The freak had only one eye.

RUNAWAY BOY RETURNS HOME A MILLIONAIRE

Amasses Big Fortune, Then Comes Back to Show Relatives He "Made Good."

DENVER, July 12.—Wade Deal, twenty-eight, who ran away from home thirteen years ago, penniless, returned last week a multi-millionaire. During the years of his absence his relatives had no inkling of his financial success.

His announcement to his stepfather and sisters was that he had come to show them he had "made good." He is the stepson of E. A. Kenyon, of No. 580 Franklin Street, professor in the South Denver High School.

Thirteen years ago Dean left home to try to make his own way.

He rarely communicated with his people. Occasionally they would learn that the boy was somewhere in the Northwest. Young Dean was too busy making money to think about letters.

His first work was with a construction company on the Columbia River. He advanced and was finally able to go into agricultural work, of which he was very fond. To-day he is the owner of 6,000 acres of land, valued at $500 an acre, near White Salmon, Oregon. He began a small telephone system in White Salmon and the business now extends to sixteen cities.

Dean married when he was twenty-two and has three children.

Young Dean passed through some harrowing experiences, but Fortune beamed upon him as continuously as the sun. Each way he turned his enterprises coined money for him.

In order to celebrate his homecoming he has planned a pleasure trip for his relatives to Yellowstone Park.

Child Waves Bonnet And Prevents Wreck

Passengers Give Purse of $100 to Little Heroine Whose Forethought Saved Lives.

HOT SPRINGS, ARK., July 12.—Passengers on an Iron Mountain train running between Kansas City and Hot Springs owe their safety to Bertha Kay, 14, who lives with her parents on a farm twelve miles from this place.

Bertha and her little sister were walking when they discovered a railroad bridge in flames. Bertha realized that the Kansas City-Hot Springs flyer would arrive in a few minutes.

The child frantically waved her sunbonnet and the engineer applied the brakes and stopped the engine within eight feet of the bridge.

The passengers collected $100 for the little heroine.

To Look and Feel Bright in Hot Weather

(From The Woman Beautiful.)

This is the season when she who would have a rose-leaf complexion, lily-white neck and hands, should turn her thoughts to mercolized wax, the firm friend of the summer girl. Nothing so effectually overcomes the soiling effects of sun, wind, dust and dirt. The wax literally absorbs the scorched, discolored, withered or coarsened cuticle, bringing forth a brand new skin, clear, soft and girlishly beautiful. It also unclogs the pores, removing blackheads and increasing the skin's breathing capacity. An ounce of mercolized wax, obtainable at any drugstore, applied nightly like cold cream, and washed off mornings, will gradually improve the worst complexion.

When depressed by the heat and you want to freshen up for the evening, bathe the face in a lotion made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half-pint witchhazel. You'll find this more refreshing than an hour's rest. It is fine for smoothing out wrinkles, even the deeper ones.

PIE KILLS OCTOGENARIAN.

WILMINGTON, DEL., July 12.—After having been struck by a train and having met with all kinds of serious accidents, Hurnell J. Lynch, aged 89, died on his farm near Middletown, Del., from the effects of eating huckleberry pie. The ailment was acute indigestion.

Are Rheumatic Sufferers Negligent?

Many Suffer Excruciating Agony for Years Without Investigating the Cause of Their Pain or Its Cure.

Rheumatism frequently comes from uric acid poisoning. Uric acid accumulates from undigested food remaining in stomach and intestines, which ferments and putrefies and generates this poisonous acid. If not expelled promptly it gets into the blood, and finally forms crystalline deposits which settle in joints and muscles and stiffen them.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT has been remarkably successful in the treatment of rheumatism resulting from uric acid poisoning. It is a true uric acid solvent which will break up the deposits already formed, dissolve the uric acid out of the tissues and hold it in solution until expelled in the urine. It will not cure your rheumatism overnight; neither did your rheumatism come overnight. But JACOBS' LIVER SALT will relieve you more promptly and surely than anything else because it thoroughly purges the system of fermenting waste, eliminates the poisonous uric acid and purifies the blood.

Almost without exception the sufferer from rheumatism is subject to constipation, biliousness or dyspepsia, and a sluggish liver is at the bottom of the whole trouble. JACOBS' LIVER SALT stimulates both liver and kidneys and makes them keep your system clean. No other liver medicine has the same solvent action upon uric acid, therefore insist that your druggist give you the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. If he hasn't it, full size jar sent upon receipt of price, 25c, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

FOR MILADY'S WARDROBE

By MME. HAUTE MONDE.

AMONG the novelties promised for autumn is brocaded moire. This is described as moire cloth with brocaded satin floral figures in old French designs. Brocaded crepe de chine, which was a conspicuous offering this spring, promises to be a favorite material for evening gowns. In the heavier materials all "pile fabrics," including velvets, chinchillas, plushes and velours de laine, are going to be worn.

Black charmeuse is enjoying continued popularity this summer. The detailed accounts of the gowns worn by the most fashionable women at the French and the English races have fairly bristled with the word "black." A "black charmeuse with embroidered coatee," a "black satin with lace tunic," a "black Chantilly lace over white tulle," a "black mousseline and white tulle," a "black charmeuse with black and cream lace," a "black charmeuse draped with creamy lace and an overdress of black net;" these are a few of the costumes reported.

Fashionable blouses are of mousseline of tulle (net) with the indispensable frill of the wired ruffle forming a careless Medici collar. A genuine novelty is the tailored net blouse. It sounds impossible, but it was really extremely attractive. It is made of two thicknesses of the net and all the seams are of the openwork stitching. It has a notched revers or collar forming a pointed opening at the neck, and the sleeves are long, with regular shirtwaist cuffs, turned back at the wrist and fastening with link buttons.

Quite a novelty are the new satin-finished beaver hats of a modified sailor shape, with a rather narrow straight brim and somewhat high rounded crown. The most attractive ones are in white; but they are shown in black also. They are generally trimmed with a grosgrain band to match, having a picot edge and tied in a flat bow, with several loops, directly in the back.

The persistent vogue of the soft satin crown has been one of the surprises of the season. It was a pronounced feature of the early millinery, and achieved such immediate popularity that it was very soon avoided by careful buyers. But after suffering a temporary eclipse it has reappeared in white, with a white straw brim or else a white satin brim faced with colored straw. The trimming is usually an upstanding "palm tree" feather in white or a chic bow of white grosgrain or moire ribbon.

Not only the women who are largely developed go in for brassieres, but those also who wish to achieve the new figure in the easiest way. The modern corsets stop about two inches above the natural waist line in front, and about three inches and a half in the back. A very slim figure can depend on these supports alone, but the majority of women use a brassiere instead of a corset cover. The truth is that the latter garment is going away as the muslin petticoat did; and as knickers are taking the place of the petticoat, so are brassieres taking the place of the ribboned and ruffled corset cover of fine handiwork.

A new skirt for outing wear, especially suitable for tennis, is made of cotton corduroy, pique or linen. It appears to be made of the prevailing narrow lines, which would make the running and jumping necessary in tennis impossible. But when its wearer reaches the tennis court, she unbuttons the side seams from the hem up for several inches, and behold! many pleats thus liberated give her ample room for all the activity she desires.

Crepe de chine and China silk blouses are worn by the tennis player. They are made with flat Byron collars, some of them with deep, comfortable V-necks. Some of them are made with a yoke and are shirred into the yoke over a cord. White is the color usually worn.

Sweet simplicity should rule dress for country wear. Clever little frocks may be easily fashioned. Two to four-gore skirts are attached to more or less kimono blouses. Front fastenings may be from the chin down.

For afternoon however, there are more ornate affairs. Plain voile skirts, with little flowered tunics, for instance, or white linen, silk or cloth dresses, with coats of gold, cerise, rose, emerald, black or blue taffeta, satin or wool, are very smart for fine country wear.

For golf, tennis and ordinary country house wear, however, white is first choice. There are simple white dresses and endless skirts of white linen and cotton Bedford cord, with which are worn sheer white waists. And this, indeed, has been almost the uniform of womankind during the last few summers. To some it is not becoming, but if both the skirt and the waist be perfectly fitted and good-looking they certainly look well on the majority of women and girls. This year the shirtwaist girl must divide honors with the one-piece-dress girl.

The color goes a long way toward giving a cool and refreshing air to a frock. There are certain colors that absorb the heat rays. For this reason many women viewed with alarm the vogue for brilliant colors this spring. Their fears, fortunately, have proved groundless, for as the hot days approach white and the soft pastel shades are prevailing over the bright reds, greens and yellows. The bolder, brighter colors are reflected merely from the sash or girdle of a white frock.

Net is everywhere. Petticoats, breakfast and bedroom caps, negli- of all sorts, blouses, frocks, hats and parasols—all are made adorned with net. One of the newest ways to use net is to combine it in the form of insets with heavy white corded silk as a coat. The net is gored and colored and the silk is cut away beneath it. The broad band of soutache braid which edges the coat is broken with these little insets, each of them outlined with scrolls of braid.

* * *

Petticoats and pegnoirs to match are made of allover lace, unlined, of course. The pegnoir is untrimmed, excepting for a band of tiny embroidered pink and blue roses about the sleeve and neck and an upstanding frill of narrow lace outlining the V-neck. The petticoat is finished with a hem of pink chiffon, and the pegnoir and petticoat both can be worn over a handkerchief chiffon slip or under bodice and petticoat.

* * *

It is only natural that with the enlarged waist line should come the careless girdle; a belt which is loosely wrapped around the figure without any pretense of trying to make the waist look small or restrain the figure. These girdles dominate the fashions of the day. They may be of the material of the gown, of another material in a contrasting color, or of ribbon, checked, plain or striped.

* * *

The sashes of July are extra wide and unboned, but they are far more apt to go high on the figure than low, which is the striking difference between them and the oriental girdle. The largeness of the waist line and that whole part of the figure from bust to waist is now covered by these loose folds of soft material which are finished in the back with a crushed butterfly bow or shirred buckle or flattened streamers which are pleated at the top and hang to the knees.

Some of the newest evening shoes are made of pearl gray satin outlined with very small rose diamonds. These pale gray shoes are exceedingly becoming and they are worn with cobweb silk stockings in the palest shade of gray which have traceries in silver threads running up the fronts.

Very large sums of money are now spent on shoes and stockings for afternoon and evening wear. The gowns of the present day are cut in such a way that they display the feet and ankles freely, with the result that the cost of shoes and stockings has increased enormously. For wear with ball dresses some ultra smart Parisiennes vote in favor of lace stockings traced over with diamond sparks and of very low shoes in black satin, which in conjunction with the white silk stockings give a Goya impression.

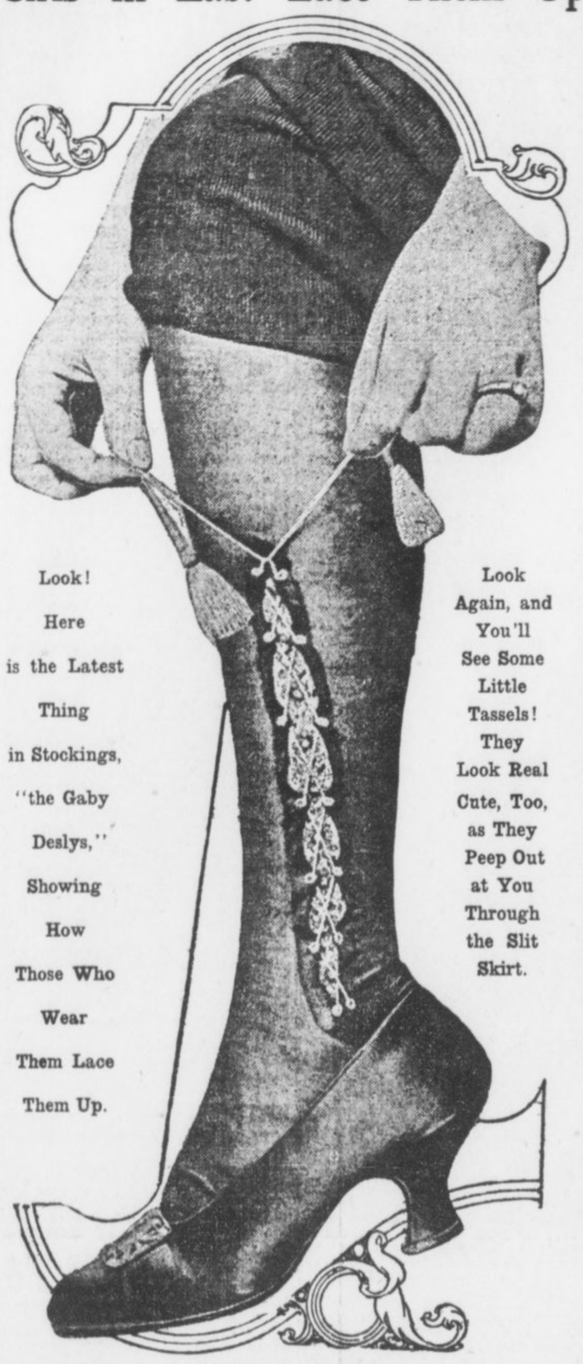
Many of the midsummer hats are being trimmed with ribbons of velvet which hang in streamers down the back as far as the waist. All colors are used, but black is the most popular. It requires about three yards for each hat, and the width chosen varies with individual inclination. Some women are using five streamers of the 2-inch and 11-2-inch width in preference to two streamers of the wide.

* * *

When the new silhouette with its extra large waist and slight curve in front was brought out in Paris, it received its due meed of gossip; some dismissed it as a whim, others took it seriously for several reasons, one of which was novelty and another of which was comfort. It is because of the latter that a large majority of women are adopting it, and these are extremities to which women have gone to be in fashion. Wherever the the great dressmakers in America congregate one hears more talk about this large waist line than any other feature of fashion. We are not confronted with a theory, but a condition, and the dressmakers all seem to be delighted over it. To give an idea of how rapidly this fashion has been taken hold of by those who make any attempt to dress according to the standards of the day, one dressmaker said that the normal waist line was 32 inches among her customers. But 34 was getting to be nearer the average. She said that women with a 32 bust measurement have a 32 waist measurement; that exceedingly thin women made no attempt to draw in their corsets, but merely wore them as a support as one would put whalebones in a gown, not to repress or straighten the figure. I took up the question with many dressmakers and found the situation alike wherever fashionable clothes are made. At two of the ultra-smart houses the small pad or cushion is used across the front of the waist line on figures that are unusually small.

Slit Stocking Is Latest Shocker

Girls in East Lace Them Up



Look! Here is the Latest Thing in Stockings, "the Gaby Deslys," Showing How Those Who Wear Them Lace Them Up.

Look Again, and You'll See Some Little Tassels! They Look Real Cute, Too, as They Peep Out at You Through the Slit Skirt.

Fair Atlantans Are Expected to Adopt "the Gaby Deslys" in Contrasting Shades.

Have you seen those stockings with the tantalizing, teasing slit on each side that lace with the cutest tassels and string that fashion ever devised?

They are all the rage in the East and every Atlanta girl who is really up to snuff will soon have one or more pairs in her wardrobe.

Just imagine having to LACE up your stockings TWICE, that is four times for the two stockings. It means a peck of trouble for every fair debutante who means to keep up to date in hosiery, BUT—

Remember that these stockings are none of your common clockwork kind, but each has the most fascinating slit on either side of the leg, a slit carefully hemmed with silk thread with lace holes, a half a dozen or more, up and down each side, through which the lacing runs.

And here's the real feature of the slit stocking. If it's a white stocking the lacing with the flossy tassels at the ends are RED or GREEN or any color that suits, save WHITE. Then again if the stocking is black the lacings are white or a contrasting shade.

And THAT'S what makes the "Gaby Deslys hose"—for that's the name that the slit stocking has been given—the most bewitching and attractive bit of feminine finery ever conceived.

Rest Gowns Now Necessary Part Of Wardrobes

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—No smart woman can now afford to go to a country house without a few very beautiful "rest gowns." These were formerly known as tea gowns, but they are now so elaborate that they are worn in the interval before dinner after a day's motoring or sport and are not meant for the bedroom or boudoir.

Many of the kimono rest gowns come direct from Japan, and the designs and coloring are gorgeous. Lady Arlington, who is a mature beauty of the Oriental type, has ordered some of these rest gowns, which are likely to be the envy of her sex when she goes visiting.

One gown, made of Japanese crepe de chine, is pale mist-gray lined with the softest wistaria mauve silk. Over the gown are worked great dropping sprays of wistaria in mauve silk shaded as delicately as a Japanese painting, the leaves and long, curling tendrils being embroidered in pale almond green silks as a contrast.

The arrangement of these sprays is wonderful and could only have been carried out by an artist. The gown is, of course, in kimono form, the great bag sleeves being edged with strand silk and silk tassels. Another gown is of pale water blue silk, with ragged chrysanthemums worked over it in faint creamery pink wistaria and leaves of tender green and white.

The palest shell pink doubleurs give the finishing touches. Still another gown has the same pattern on a pink ground with a touch of black and white deftly introduced into the color scheme by means of a couple of tall storks, which form part of the picture and provide a strong contrast.

Debutantes' Gowns Elaborate This Year

Most Attractive Creations to Fascinate Man Seen at Height of London Season.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—The evening gowns the debutantes are wearing are particularly attractive to the fascinated man. For example, Miss Iovial Hay, daughter of Lady Hay, equally charming in any frock, is having two very beautiful gowns made. One of periwinkle blue charmeuse, the skirt-ring is split up on one side and draped over a petticoat of flesh-pink chiffon covered with a light veiling in periwinkle blue.

The little corsage is of fine cobweb gold lace over the palest flesh-pink foundation, veiled with chiffon, and this chiffon passes over the shoulders and forms tiny sleeves. Over it again is drawn veiling of periwinkle blue knotted on the shoulder and cut with very big armholes, while the belt is made of buttercup yellow broche, headed with a fold of Oriental brocade in deep cobalt blue embossed with gold, a huge bunch of shaded "eveque" purple and wine-colored anemones being tucked into it.

Another lovely evening gown is of pink chiffon, like the inner lining of a shell, the skirt is incrusted with bands of cream lace and bouillonees chiffon and is threaded at the hem with pale blue ribbon, while it is veiled with an overdress of powder-blue chiffon edged with a sparkling border of crystals.

Motto Stockings A New Fad in Paris

Fashion Also Decrees Snakes and Birds and Butterflies as Ornaments.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 12.—Makers of fashion decrees are now concentrating their attention upon women's stockings. This is probably accounted for by the fact that the new style gowns make the stockings about the most conspicuous part of women's attire.

Hosiery bearing embroidered snakes, birds, butterflies and even mottoes have come into vogue.

Most of the stocks are pink, although some are white, and even a few purple, and green ones are seen. Those bearing the reptilian decorations are so marked that it would appear that the snakes are twined about the leg head downward. Bands of diamonds and other precious jewels are also used for decorative purposes. Some women wear slippers with the heels so high that it seems they are walking on stilts.

Not a few of the shoes are decorated with jewels. One woman had the heels of her shoes completely covered with pearls, rubies and diamonds.

Biggest Tree Found In Washington Woods

Finest Monarch Is 66 Feet In Circumference and Is 300 Feet High.

SEATTLE, WASH., July 12.—All previous records of big trees discovered in Washington and Oregon forests have been eclipsed by the latest find in Snohomish County, Washington, near the city of Everett. The giant tree is a yellow fir. This tree must be aged, for there are many tree stumps nearby that have from 100 to 500 rings, each said to represent a year's growth.

The new-found monarch of the Northwestern forests is 66 feet in circumference at the butt, and it is 128 feet to the first limb, which measures 100 inches in circumference.

The estimated height of this big fir is 300 feet. Snohomish people plan to float the tree to San Francisco next Summer in a log raft.

Couple Weds Again Without Any Rites

Recent Law Permits Divorced Pair to Renew Marital State Without Legal Ceremony.

MARINETTE, WIS., July 12.—Divorced in November, 1912, but now man and wife again without a marriage ceremony is the record of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph La Fave, of Armstrong Creek. Besides, the marriage is legal. The Legislature of 1911 enacted a law making it possible for a divorced couple within a year after the divorce judgment is entered to go before a court and obtain a vacation of the judgment, thus allowing the parties to the decree to resume the marriage relation without a ceremony being performed.

Veils Are Denounced as Dangerous by Doctor

By NORMAN BARNESBY, M. D.
Author of "Medical Chaos and Crime," "Eugenics" and "Mother and Child."

If the women of the twentieth century do not soon curtail their absurd, ugly, dangerous practice of swathing their faces in veils—veils dotted and spotted, veils besplotched and bedizened—the better part of the race in the twenty-first century will be a lot of near-sighted, watery eyed, purblind, squinting men, women and children!

This is not speaking in superlatives. It is a matter of cold, calm, physiological fact. The truth is not hard to demonstrate; the physical explanation is very simple indeed.

The veils of to-day if persisted in will eventually ruin the eyes of the women who wear them. And these weakened, semi-useless eyes are bound to be transmitted to succeeding generations, both men and women. The time has come now to call a halt. Plain veils are bad enough; veils with huge polka dots, veils with stars and crescents, for all the world like the firmament in miniature; veils with bars and grill work, veils bristling with rhomboids and polygons, circles and cones, have got to go.

Or else our eyes will.

The medical profession of America is slow to jump at conclusions. But our physicians are fast realizing what this silly fad of to-day may mean to the race of to-morrow. Oculists abroad have taken it up in earnest, too.

Does Not Protect Skin.

From the standpoint of health not one favorable point can be made in favor of the veil. It is worn, we are told with great unction, to protect the skin; to keep the dust out of the eyes.

Protect the skin? Keep dust out of the eyes? Nonsense! The veil does neither. But we don't hear a word about its detrimental effect upon the eyesight. That is apparently a secondary consideration. And more; these silly fashions—they are really sillier follies—are not only ruining the eyes of our women, but impairing their bodily health in the bargain. There is always a lowered tone to the system when the eyes are seriously affected; and modern veils do affect them. One step further—thus we get in this lowered tone much of woman's latter-day nervousness.

To-day the veil stands as nothing more than an added vanity to vanity's already ample wardrobe!

It isn't worn to protect the lady's face at all. It is frankly donned as one more mark of attraction; that is all. Possibly it is worn to hide a bad complexion, not to protect it.

Causes Eye Strain.

No wonder we have so many neurasthenics among our well-to-do women!

Because of the heavy lines, and more particularly because of the heavier dots in most of the veils they wear, the light is not uniformly distributed to all parts of the retina.

Does milady know that? No!

The result, of course, is that while some parts of the retina are normally impinged by the light rays, those parts directly back of the dots and dashes in the veil receive no light at all, or only a little at the most. So we promptly get an overstraining of some parts of the delicate, most sensitive retina and a weakening of other parts.

"It protects the skin of the face from dust and germs!"

Oh, fallacy of fallacies! Actually a soda water and stronger things veil does exactly the opposite. The mesh catches and hold tight to all dust and bacteria. And every time the veil shifts this dirt is rubbed into the skin or into the veil, ready for the next wearing. And is any comment necessary when we know that women cough, sneeze and kiss through them without uncovering their mouths?

A veil is a dirty thing!

Al-Fresco Theater Latest Rage of Fashionable Paris

By LA RACONTEUSE

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 12.—Open-air theaters are all the rage in Europe now, and this season Paris has its own fashionable al-fresco stage almost in the heart of the city, just outside of the old fortifications at Pre Catlan, in the Bois de Boulogne, only ten minutes by auto from Place de L'Opera, or you may take one of the swift little steamers on the Seine to Longchamps, and then you have about fifteen minutes' walk to the theater. The practical management has arranged it so that you may spend all day and all night there and lack nothing.

If you want to be smart, however, you ride or drive out there in the early morning hours and take your "petit dejeuner" at one of the charming restaurants, and if you are real early you are almost sure to find parties of gay night birds who have come to cool their hot brains after their exertions at Abbaye, Pigalle or Maxim and get rid of the taste of the nightly champagne in a glass of the delicious milk from the little model dairy in the park.

All Paris Finally Arrives.

The night birds have rarely left the park when society begins to arrive for their "dejeuner a la fourchette," which is in turn followed by "le 5 o'clock" when "tout Paris" is there. Endless rows of motor cars are lined up outside the park emptying their contents. From some of them come shoals of fashionably dressed children with their respective "bonnes," for here the little ones are safe and the milk is nourishing and the air fragrant.

When the last arrivals have finished sipping their afternoon tea preparations are made for the play on the open-air stage in the background of the park.

Once more the silence is disturbed by the honking of auto horns, the clacking of whips, silvery laughter and gay ejaculations. The play, nearly always some short opera or operette, begins at 8 o'clock, in the presence of an elegant audience, which as soon as it is over hurries to the brilliantly illuminated pavilion, where waiters in magnificent liveries serve every delicacy that the most refined gourmet may imagine.

A band of red-coated musicians plays sentimental or gay tunes, and many are the ladies who are secretly sighing for a smile or a glance from the handsome leader of the orchestra, who has the reputation of being one of Paris' most dangerous Don Juans, whose charms no women can resist.

Festival Ends With Dance.

Later on scores of gay parties from Paris arrive; you meet more and more acquaintances and friends; you order more and more champagne; the conversation grows more and more animated; the whole crowd becomes one big party, and the festival ends with a wild, bacchantic dance as the sun rises and the electric lights fade. You drink a cup of chocolate, telephone for your car and drive back to Paris. A cold bath and you are ready to begin another day just like the one before, though you have not slept a wink. So light and stimulating is the wonderful air of Paris.

Wild Pigeons Found; Bird Thought Extinct

Surveyor Locates Roost of 300 "Passengers" in Wooded Tract Near Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, July 12.—A flock of 300 wild pigeons has been located by M. M. Garland, surveyor of the port of Pittsburg, near his home at Edgewood. The birds have gone to nest in a heavily wooded tract, and efforts will be made to secure several of the birds alive. According to Mr. Garland, he has been very close to them on three different occasions during the last two days, and he is positive they are perfect specimens of the supposedly extinct passenger pigeon.

Mr. Garland discovered the birds while hunting through the woods. Hearing their "cooings" at a distance, he investigated and discovered the roost. The birds had just begun building their nests.

'Better Babies,' Is Clubwoman Slogan

Montana Federation Hears Address in Which West Is Urged to Follow East's Example.

LIVINGSTON, MONT., July 12.—With a slogan of "Better Babies in Montana," the Montana Federation of Women's Clubs opened its annual convention in this city.

Mrs. David Jackson's annual address was featured by her appeal to forward the work of "better babies" as it is being done in Eastern cities.

One of the principal speakers was Mrs. Una B. Herrick, dean of women at the State Agricultural College at Bozeman, who spoke upon "The Girl's Problem," declaring that "when women have attained political power the underworld will flaunt itself no more, and, although clandestine vice may not vanish from the earth and the whole social evil be eliminated, yet to the solution of the social evil problem will be brought strength which all the paths of the underworld will be unable to circumvent."

THIRTEEN-YEAR-OLD BOY SAVES MAN FROM DROWNING

COTTONWOOD FALLS, KANS., July 12.—Ted Knapp, aged thirteen, saved the life of Eden Powlan, a mail clerk, in the Cottonwood River. Powlan, a poor swimmer, became exhausted. He called for help when unable to keep afloat longer, and the Knapp boy swam to his rescue. After a hard struggle he got Powlan into shallow water and both waded out.

Court Like Powwow At Indian Will Trial

Veteran Chiefs, Grizzled Pioneers and Cattlemen Witnesses in Suit of Squaw.

SPOKANE, July 12.—Veteran Indian chiefs of the San Poil tribe, grizzled pioneers who have seen the Inland Empire grow from a wilderness, weather-beaten old stockmen and old Susan Enos, the squaw who claims half of the John Enos (Portuguese Joe) $250,000 estate, made Judge J. Stanley Webster's courtroom look like a real powwow instead of a court of justice, when the legal battle began for possession of the dead pioneer's estate.

Old Mrs. Enos claims to have married Joe in September, 1870, when she sat in an Indian tepee and was given to him by her mother and father.

COLLEGE PROFESSORS HUNT DISAPPEARING ANIMALS

SAN FRANCISCO, July 12.—Valuable additions to the museum of vertebrate zoology of the University of California will be the outgrowth of an expedition now being conducted by university professors in Marin County.

More than usual success has been enjoyed by the exploring party this year. Several important discoveries have been made. Many rare mammals which are rapidly disappearing from the Marin County hills have been caught and will be used as specimens.

FRECKLES

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With the Othine Prescription.

This prescription for the removal of freckles was written by a prominent physician and is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by Jacobs' Pharmacy under an absolute guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

COUNTESS TAKES UP LACE MAKING ART IN FRANCE

Society Leader Reviving Industry on Large Scale—Benefiting Hundreds of Women.

By MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE.
Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 12.—Thanks to the initiative of one of our leading young society matrons, the Countess de Marmier, the hand lace industry is about to assume its old ascendancy in France.

Madame de Marmier, who is a member of one of our old ducal families, has collected the very best specimens of old French lace, and has given an exhibition. Some of our most distinguished women have undertaken to help her in this national revival of lace.

The idea was suggested to Mme. de Marmier by Queen Margherita of Italy, who has a collection of old laces said to be the finest in the world.

Seeks Specimens in Tombs.

Her Majesty has made a thorough study of the history of lace. She even went so far as to visit the tombs of the ancient convents of Italy in search of specimens.

Her object was not merely artistic attraction, but also to find work in their own homes for Italian women. Inspired by this noble example, the Countess de Marmier is doing the same for France, but on a much larger scale.

Toward the end of the eighteenth century lacemaking reached its zenith in France. Valenciennes alone employed many hundreds of thousands of women. When Napoleon III had himself declared Emperor only two old lace-makers could be found in that town.

Machine Product Not Liked.

Bergue, Lille Bailleul and other northern towns took it up, but machine-made lace has never been popular in France.

Now Mme. de Marmier is establishing lacemaking centers wherein the best old French lace is made. It is a gigantic work which will give pleasant and profitable employment to all women desiring it.

This young woman, brought up among those who labor not, neither do they spin, issuing from the most frivolous Paris society, will become the savior of many of her poorer countrywomen.

$626,350,000 in Life Insurance Paid

Report for 1912 Shows New York in Lead With Chicago and Philadelphia Next.

CHICAGO, July 12.—Life insurance payments in the United States and Canada amounted to $626,350,000 during 1912, according to the annual tabulation made by The Insurance Press.

Of this $413,350,000 was for claims paid in the United States and Canada and $213,000,000 was for refunds and surrender values and payments to foreign policyholders.

All these years show a large increase over previous years.

Greater New York led with payments of $31,839,425 in 1912, followed by Chicago with $11,922,950, Philadelphia $11,053,000 and Boston $7,750,380.

ANCIENT ROMAN SARCOPHAGUS FETCHES $8,400

Lustral Bowl in White Marble, Finely Carved, Brings $1,260 at Sale in London.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—A sale of antique sculpture and old English furniture at Christie's realized about $20,000. It included some tapestries which were owned by the late Duchess of Newcastle. A set of four Brunels panels, showing hunting and sporting scenes of the early seventeenth century, sold for $4,620.

A Chippendale mahogany commode with serpentine front, 49 inches wide, fetched $1,680.

The head of a large statue of Dionysos, with some restorations, sold for $1,102. A well preserved sarcophagus found in a funeral chamber at Astia, in 1825, a beautiful specimen in the Roman style, about 6 feet long, was sold for $8,400.

A large lustral bowl in white marble, about four feet in diameter, supported on three feet, the whole finely carved, brought $1,260. This is under the experts' estimates of its value. The sides of the bowl are decorated with acanthus leaves and scrolls and figures of griffins; the supports are ornamented with leopards' heads in full relief and terminated by claw feet.

The bowl is regarded as an unusually fine example; its approximate diameter is 1.28 and its height 1.42 meters.

A sale of engravings at Sotheby's realized $14,006. Reynolds' "Lady Elizabeth Foster," by F. Bartolozzi, finely printed in colors, brought $800. J. R. Smith's "Narcissa" and "Flirtilla," both printed in color, were sold for $750.

ClassIs Instructed In Sleeping Car Lore

Milwaukte Girls Are Taught How to Pack, Read Time Tables and Sleep in Pullmans.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., July 12.—"Class in sleeping cars stand up!"

Superintendent A. A. Johnson, of Milwaukee County Agricultural School, and Miss Pearl McDonald, household economy department, said this the other afternoon, and ten girls arose.

The two teachers led the way to the street car terminal, more than a mile away, where the party boarded a car to Union Depot, Milwaukee, a road sleeper, where the "recitation" was held.

Superintendent Johnson thinks pupils should learn to do by doing. The trip to the sleeper was preceded by instruction in packing suit cases. What to take, and what not, was considered, and the girls were shown what constiutes a good outfit. Timetables were distributed and each girl picked out a trip.

CHURCH IN MEXICO HOLDS BUT TEN WORSHIPERS

EL PASO, July 12.—Mexico, for a country that is so poor, boasts some wonderfully big and fine churches and it also has what is claimed to be the smallest church in the world.

It is situated at Penon, near the City of Mexico, and is a rude affair, yet it serves all purposes, as the local population is small. It has a "seating capacity" of about ten, though there are, in fact, no seats.

Where it starts

School children are quick and easy prey to the "stoop habit." With the "young shoot," however, it is not so much a habit as it is a natural inclination. They are too young to realize just exactly what pride or poise is, and go on from day to day for a period of seven to twelve years poring over their books, unconscious of the "stoop" that is stealthily settling its clutches on the youthful frame. The bent shoulders become more bent as age increases.

The "KOMFORT BRACE"

Should be worn by all children to constantly prevent the inclination to "stoop," and, by keeping the chest extended, encourage and necessitate "deep breathing," the foremost law of perfect health. With the inclination to stoop stopped, DEEP BREATHING rapidly becomes a perfectly natural function. "Train up a child in the way it should go, and when he GROWS up he will not depart from it" can be paraphrased to read "grow" instead of "go," and aptly, too, as the axiom applies to hygiene, as well as "morals."

Instruct us to mail you our letter of full particulars and illustrated descriptive folder about the "KOMFORT BRACE."

The "Komfort Brace" is for sale by all leading stores or will be sent postpaid on receipt of price, $1.50. Money refunded if not satisfactory. Address

BABIES NEEDED, NOT SOLDIERS, SAYS BERTILLON

Noted Criminologist Asserts That France's Greatest Peril Is Decrease in Birth Rate.

By GEORGES DUFRESNE.
Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 12.—"What France really wants in order not to become a second-class power," says Dr. Jacques Bertillon, of finger-print fame, "is not a military law of three years, which will really only be a palliative, to be followed by demands for four and five years' service, but more children, just as other countries have them."

The doctor shows that the years of 1911 and 1912 have been the worst ever registered in France. Before 1907 this country never had less than 800,000 births; before 1887 she had never less than 900,000, and before 1867 the figure was approximately 1,000,000. This, or nearly so, was the number of births in Germany at that period. But to-day the number of births in Germany is about 2,000,000, while France has to regard 750,000 as the normal figure.

Other Countries Show Increase.

Holland, with a population of one-eighth of that of France, has a greater number in men to record each year. It is often pretended that the increase in the population is checked in other countries as well as in France. The contrary is the case. During the period of 1901-1905 Italy's population increased 351,000 inhabitants, that of Austra-Hungary by 831,000 and that of Germany by 845,000. These figures, crushing as they are for France, are lower than the present figures.

Dr. Bertillon then points out that the number of marriages in France rose to 311,929 in 1912. Few countries have so high a figure in comparison with their population. Frenchmen marry readily enough, but they lack children in their homes. They have at present two or three, but they should have three or four. Dr. Bertillon says it would be necessary to protect honor, and especially to help efficaciously those who render to the country the valuable service of rearing families.

Mun Points Out Duty.

The present condition of France is a fruitful topic for writers. When Germany announced her decision to greatly strengthen her army, there was no doubt in the minds of many thinkers that she was making preparations for what they describe as "the decisive hour." It became necessary for Frenchmen who think and write to take stock of the position of the country and to point out the dangers which threatened it. They rose to the occasion, and none more readily than M. de Mun, who was writing a book which is being much discussed just now.

The duty which lies before France is clearly indicated by M. de Mun. Reviewing the book in The Gaulois, M. Emile Faguet, the academician, dwells on one of the questions which the author discusses at length, and which was the real reason for writing the book—the necessity of France returning to the three-year military system.

M. Jaures, the Socialist leader, as an antagonist of militarism, has done his best to oppose the Government. One of his arguments was that the great Marshal Bugeaud attacked the three-year system. It is true that the great soldier attacked it, but his onslaught was made not because, as the Socialist leader wanted to make out, three years was too long a period for a man to serve in the army, but because it was too short. He wanted the period to be seven years.

Two Await Death; Garrote Is Missing

Cuban Official Finds That Instrument of Execution Has Been Given to Museum.

Special Cable to The American.

HAVANA, July 12.—The Secretary of Government during a visit of inspection to Havana jail made the grimly humorous discovery that although two persons were there awaiting the garrote, the instrument of execution, was missing.

Ex-President Gomez during his administration commuted all the death sentences or pardoned those condemned to undergo capital punishment and shortly before he retired he presented the garrote to a newly established museum as a historic curiosity.

The Secretary of Government sent orders to the museum to return the garrote at once.

Geraldine Farrar Forgets Music After Air Cruise

Will Be Engaged to Any Man Who Owns Dirigible

Geraldine Farrar, who, after one ride in airship, declares that music is now a secondary consideration. She would like to buy a Zeppelin dirigible.

The Fair Operatic Star Makes a Trip in Zeppelin Craft and Proclaims Herself a Fiend for Sky Riding.

By ALAN DALE,
Special Correspondent of the Hearst's Sunday American.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, July 12.—Geraldine Farrar forgot all about music, all about her "art," all about the Metropolitan, all about trivial mundane happenings when I met her to-day at the Adlon Hotel. She had just made a trip in an airship—one of the Zeppelins that fly from Hamburg to Leipsig, and she was "all emotioned," as they say in French. Excitement, and not No. 18, flushed her pretty features, and she certainly did look awfully charming in a rather severe navy blue walking dress and a black "flappy" hat—not one of the basin shapes that make a gell look as though she were clamoring to be extinguished. Miss Farrar is too wise for that sort of folly. Besides, she isn't clamoring to be extinguished. Perish the thought!

"I've had the experience of my life," she said emotionally, "and nothing now matters but airships—to my mind. Henceforth I'm an airship fiend, and I'll be engaged for six whole months to any man who can supply me with an airship, and—of course—remain in the background."

Felt She Owned World.

She laughed in the quiet and untinkling way that gells over here acquire—a laugh that gets there, but makes no noise about it.

"I felt," she went on, "that I owned the world. A splendid feeling of superiority possessed me—a delightful sensation of being above all the petty things of life. No, I'm not romancing or drawing a long bow. I made the flight with mother, father and two friends, and I assure you that it was a revelation. I want to own an airship. I must do so. It is the most glorious method of transit imaginable."

She paused for a moment to get breath, for she was genuinely excited, and looked with disdain at the music on the open piano—a reminder of the daily struggle.

"Let me tell you all about it," she said. "Mommer, you know, is very nervous and inclined to be light-headed. She can't look down from a height or out of a moving train, so she was really a good test of the airship's comfort. And she never once had a qualm. We started from Potsdam, where there is a field and a cafe—you can take coffee and sausage there as everywhere in Germany. They let down a little aluminum ladder—the cutest thing you have ever seen—and before you knew it we were off—off—way up in the air. Oh, joy!"

Every Comfort Aboard.

Her eyes danced as she proceeded, and she grew so animated that if the Metropolitan Opera House people had seen her, they would have been aghast at such vivacity.

"Every imaginable comfort—the last word in luxury—greeted us in the car. It was a lovely room, with comfortable basket armchairs along the sides—a big wide room, that you couldn't imagine to be a space in an airship. We sat there, and we drank champagne, and we ate dainty sandwiches, and we wrote hundreds of postal cards to friends."

Even in the air, I thought, the terrible habit of postal card writing appears to thrive. It is an ineradicable habit.

"The German Government has provided special airship stamps, and I can tell you we used them plentifully. Oh, how delicious it all was. You touched an electric bell, and instantly a steward appeared to do your bidding. The luxury of the most luxurious hotel and the elegance of the most modern steamship were at our beck and call. There was room for 35 people. Nobody was scared; nobody felt the slightest discomfort; we all sat in our delightfully cozy chairs and revelled. We were masters of the air—I believe we went up 2,500 feet—I THINK so, at least—and I—I—well, I never wanted to come down."

She looked so amusingly regretful that I laughed. She really meant what she said.

Wants to Buy Craft.

"A steward thought I was crazy. I said I wanted to buy an airship, and he told me it cost half a million marks. 'A mere trifle,' I said, and he thought I was demented. What a splendid advertisement for any American millionaire! Just think of it. Oh, I've forgotten to say that I promised to drop a bouquet for Mr. Adlon, of this hotel, who is an old friend of mine. I did it. I reckoned it all out. We dipped sometimes, you know, and swerved, and during one of these dips, when we were over this roof, I dropped the bouquet, and it was recovered. Wasn't that charming—and sweet—and dear?"

I thought it was, all that and more. To get a bouquet from the clouds—who could desire anything more touching?

"As to singing—oh, I forgot all about it—all about such trivialities and details. I forgot my work and my ambition. All I felt was a strong wish never to come down, but I'm afraid to go up again for fear I might spoil those glorious first sensations. You know—you do or you don't—that Zeppelin is planning to send an airship across the Atlantic and believes he can do it in two days. He is asking the Government to grant him three warships for the purpose. Wouldn't it be great?

Describes Ship's Machinery.

"I understand all about the machinery and the make-up and the possibilities of these airships. You see, 'tis like this * * * and then * * * and so * * * and thus * * *."

She went into an elaborate description of machinery and technical details that made my head whizz. I'm an awful failure at anything of the kind, but Geraldine Farrar had no compunction. She told me all—all about it, and if I don't understand a Zeppelin airship it is MY fault. And I don't. But she loved telling me all about it, and when I left her I felt I must fly as she did. It's fearfully cheap. Only $25 a fly!

PRIVATE COMPANIES PILFER FRENCH ISLES IN PACIFIC

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 12.—French islands in the Pacific are being pilfered, the French Colonial Office finds out, by private companies and individuals.

In one case, it is stated that a native named Taaroa of Tahiti, who acts as a kind of local surveyor for the French Government, sold three islands to an English company.

SPARROW NEST 100 YEARS OLD FOUND IN TREE TRUNK

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—While cutting up an ash tree at a sawmill at Embleton, Cumberland, the sawyers found in the center of the trunk a sparrow's nest, containing the feathers and skeleton of a bird and four eggs intact. It is assumed that the bird built its nest 100 years ago in a hollow of the trunk, which was sealed up as the tree grew.

LONDON, July 12.—Alleging negligent shunting, Miss Cordelia Moir Lloyd, of Manchester, has been awarded $8.65 damages against the Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway for injury to her clothing by the upsetting of a cup of tea she was drinking in a carriage.

SUFFRAGETTES INVADE PALACE DESPITE QUEEN

Fear That They Will Kidnap English Royal Children Causes Increased Detective Force.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—Queen Mary, who, ever since her visit to Germany, has been living in constant terror of the suffragettes, who are said to be planning to capture one of the royal children, was greatly shocked some time ago by the discovery that not one but several believers in the militant idea had got inside the palace walls and had been in touch with the royal family every day for several months.

The Queen immediately before she went abroad discovered a parlor maid in the royal apartments wearing the dreaded badge of the Women's Social and Political Union.

Gives Queen Her Promise.

On the advice of the secret service department nothing was said about the discovery at the time and the girl was even permitted to keep her position after a long talk with Queen Mary, whom she willingly promised not to take advantage of her position to spirit away any of the royal children.

During the last few weeks a quiet investigation of the political creed of all women high and low occupied inside the palace walls brought out the astonishing fact that practically every maid employed by the royal family was steeped in militant literature, and that a great number of aristocratic ladies holding high court positions were ardent followers of Mrs. Pankhurst.

Chief Dresser Resigns.

When Queen Mary, who, until the suffragettes began to commit illegal and criminal acts of violence, had been a believer in political rights for women, found herself surrounded by militant suffragettes she at first intended to get rid of all the suspected ones, and it was because of this that Lady Shaftesbury suddenly resigned. The Queen accepted her resignation with perfect equanimity, but was greatly perturbed when it was followed by the resignation of her chief dresser who was in charge of that part of her wardrobe intended to be used during her visit to Berlin.

For several days consternation reigned at Buckingham, as several of the Queen's dresses were not yet ready. The chief dresser steadfastly refused to budge, but in the eleventh hour the diplomacy of Queen Alexandra resulted in a compromise, whereby Queen Mary gave up her first severe course and had to be satisfied with a promise by the suffragettes inside the palace walls that they would not openly wear the W. S. P. R. badge while on duty in the royal residences and that they would not distribute seditious literature among the other employees.

The Queen, however, since the last mad exploits of the suffragettes does not trust these promises and special detectives are watching the royal children night and day.

Deputies' Thirst May Stop Free Drinks

Vast Quantity of Coffee, Mineral Water, Wine and Beer Consumed by Italian Statesmen.

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, July 12.—The recent stormy sittings of the Italian Chamber of Deputies have led to increased consumption of liquids, and some economists are endeavoring to abolish free drinks.

When a Deputy arises to deliver a set oration coffee and iced water are brought him by a messenger. One of the speaker's neighbors pours him out a cup and keeps it replenished. There is a buffet in the outer lobby, where deputies are supplied gratuitously with beer, wine, spirits, coffee, ices and mineral water, and in hot weather this is well patronized.

As, however, the value of the drinks consumed last year by the 508 deputeis was barely $4,000 (of which $2,000 went for mineral waters) they can not be accused of excessive thirst. Parliamentary Representatives in Italy receive no pay. Free drinks and free railway travel are the only privileges they enjoy.

GIRL IS RESCUED AFTER LEAP INTO RHINE FALLS

Special Cable to The American.

VIENNA, July 12.—A 17-year-old girl who tried to commit suicide by springing from the bridge over the famous Rhine Falls at Schaffhausen was miraculously rescued.

She leaped right into the middle of the great waterfall, where a mass of water thunders over an irregular rocky ledge 60 feet high. Her body was whirled down in a mass of foam and reappeared on the south side of the falls. A fisherman saw her and putting out in his boat, dragged the unconscious girl from the water.

Leaving his craft to the mercy of the stream, he immediately set about resuscitating the girl. The girl, who did not receive a single scratch, is said to be the only person who has ever emerged from the Rhine Falls alive.

SISTER BAKES 'SURPRISE PIE' BURNS UP $1,550 SAVINGS

BERLIN, July 12.—Frau Clara Schiedlmayer, of Harburg, Germany, after concealing her savings, amounting to $1,550, in bank notes in a disused oven, found on her return home that her hoard had been inadvertently burned by her sister, who had baked a pie in the oven to give her a pleasant surprise.

INCREASE IN FRENCH WINE.

PARIS, July 12.—According to the annual report of the consular district of Bordeaux, the wine vintage for the whole of France in 1912, computed at 1,305,458,770 gallons, showed an increase of 317,976,670 gallons over that of 1911.

ISLE'S DEFENSE IS BIG PROBLEM BEFORE BRITAIN

Three Different Factions in England Dispute as to Best Plan of Insuring Against Invasion.

By PHILIP EVERETT.
Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—There was a time when England, trusting her proud, invincible navy, felt as safe as if the whole country were protected by a bombproof shelter, but nowadays the public mind is forever taken up with deliberations of the question if England really is capable of resisting any enemy and how the country may best defend herself if the occasion should arise.

England's political situation in the world, of course, is not so very bad. With justifiable pride we point to the fact that the country's traditional world policy is still triumphant time and again, and at present England hardly has a rival able to move his arms so freely as England herself.

Britain Political Center.

We make the most of the fact that the now ended war in the Balkans at its finish moved the political center of gravity toward Great Britain. It is also a fact that as far as diplomatic success among the powers is concerned England emerged at least temporarily an easy winner, whose statesmen are still studying and observing the remaining Balkan problems so as to get the greatest possible benefit from them. That Sir Edward Grey has proved himself a diplomat of rank even the most bitter opponents of the present government willingly admit.

But, in spite of all our diplomatic successes and our growing political prestige, we look with fear and apprehension at the rapid growth, not only among the great powers, but also in the smaller countries, of navies, dirigibles, aeroplanes and armies. We realize, perhaps, even to exaggeration, that this military and naval evolution in other countries has created a new state of affairs, which makes it ridiculous or even criminal to indulge in the old-time dreams of England's safety and impregnability.

Nation Is Divided.

When the question arises how England is to be defended against a hostile attack, the people divide themselves into three camps. The first of these consists of a dwindly party of people who insist that England should place her whole trust in her navy. This does not mean to say that the English people have less confidence in their navy than before, for this is very far from being the case, but it is realized that with the evolution of the various arms of attack the field of activity and usefulness of the navy has diminished.

The most numerous party in the country consists of those who place their trust in intelligent co-operation between the navy and the territorial army. This view is held by the admiral-in-chief of the navy, Prince Louis of Battenberg, who recently openly declared that, unassisted, the navy would not be able to protect the country, but that a well-drilled army was an absolute necessity.

Convict Burned in Store He Robbed

Eats and Drinks Heartily and Falls Asleep To Be Wakened by Flames and Officers.

Special Cable to The American.

STOCKHOLM, July 12.—An escaped Swedish convict named Anderson reached the Island of Mar, near Norrkoping, a few nights ago, where he broke into a government store and helped himself liberally to food and drink.

He went to sleep and in some way upset a lamp, setting the store on fire. The outbreak spread to a wood, 38 acres in extent, which was destroyed.

Police at Norrkoping, whose attention was attracted by the glare, went to the island and captured the convict, who was severely burned.

London Costers Lose "King of Pearlies"

Activity of Chief of Donkey Tradesmen in Charity Won Admiration of Duchess of Argyle.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—London costers have lost their chief, T. J. Foyle, "King of the Pearlies," whose funeral took place recently.

Foyle died in the Royal Free Hospital, after a brief illness, which had been brought on by undertaking a deed of kindness when in weak health. When in full dress Foyle wore a suit studded with 33,000 pearl buttons.

It was not so much his dazzling suit of pearlies—the envy of hundreds of his class—as his "great human heart" which won for Foyle the admiration of all with whom he came in contact. He was always one of the first to respond to the call of charity, and his sympathy with his fellow workers won for him the admiration of Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll. When Foyle lay in the Royal Free Hospital her royal highness sent her secretary to inquire as to his condition.

Head Waiters' Tips Average $60 a Week

New York and London People Most Generous Givers, Says One in Memoirs.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 12.—A Paris head waiter has just published his memoirs, based on long years of observation behind the chairs of diners. Among the most essential qualities of the waiter are, he says, agility and physical self-control. He has known waiters to be discharged at a moment's notice from restaurants because they sneezed while on duty.

The best maitres d'hotel would dismiss a waiter who handed the wine list when the menu was called for.

Best tips are received in London and New York. Head waiters average $60 a week in tips.

The writer relates an instance of a waiter who, by speculation, made $100,000.

Motorists' Way Eased By New Rule in Italy

Customs Annoyances Suffered by Thousands of Americans Abolished by Customs Officers.

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, July 12.—It will interest the thousands of American motorists who every year enter Italy to learn that henceforth the Italian customs authorities will not annoy them with their petty formalities.

During the tourists' congress this week at Amsterdam, an agreement was reached between Milton Mansfield, of the American Automobile Association, and Signor L. Mercanti, of the Italian Touring Club, under which all fiscal nuisances connected with the landing in Italy of foreign automobiles will be stopped.

According to Mansfield, more than 3,000 American tourists land every year at Naples and, after touring Italy and Switzerland, return home by a northern route.

U. S. CARDINAL WORKS TO GIVE POPE FREEDOM

O'Connell Devises Plan of Extending Vatican Grounds to Permit Pontiff to Enjoy Sea.

By CAMILLO CIANFARRA.
Special Cable to The American.

ROME, July 12.—Announcement that negotiations were in progress between the Vatican and the heirs of Prince Torlonia for the purchase by the former of the famous "pine wood," with a view to annexing it to the Vatican gardens has revealed a moving episode of His Holiness' illness in April and has afforded new proof of Cardinal O'Connell's devotion to the Holy Father.

Pontiff Loves the Sea.

Pius X has always been a fervent lover of the sea, even before he became Patriarch of Venice, but his long stay in that city greatly intensified his love for the sunlit, ever-moving expanse.

For years he has struggled with his homesickness, which he mentioned only to his most intimate friends and relatives, but during his recent illness this longing for the sea overmastered him. In his delirium he invoked the sea; he heard the waves beating on the shore and smelled the salt air.

Finally this long-repressed desire became an obsession which seriously alarmed the physicians. It was then planned to join the Vatican to the sea by piecing together several properties. This, however, would never have been carried out had not Cardinal O'Connell paid a visit to Rome and heard of it.

America to Help.

He went over the ground with several Vatican officials and advised them to buy first the "Pineta Sacchetti," which is comparatively close and extends over 600 acres separated from the Vatican only by a narrow lane.

From this place it will not be difficult to form a pathway over the few remaining miles which separate the Vatican from the sea. The American Cardinal has promised all financial help needed.

Contributions will come pouring in from every corner of the earth and the Pope will be a prisoner no more, for he will once more behold his beloved sea and occasionally sail on the blue Mediterranean.

Weeps at Graveside; Sight Is Restored

Girl, Blind for Eleven Months, Sees as She Grieves at Bier of Grandmother.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—Blind for eleven months, a Manchester girl recovered her sight suddenly while weeping bitterly at the graveside of her grandmother. The facts of her previous blindness and present ability to see were confirmed by doctors.

She is Katherine Welsh, a domestic servant, of Manchester. Since her grandmother became ill a short time ago, Katherine had prayed that she might be able to see her once again. She was able to take a last glimpse of the coffin.

ENGRAVED WEDDING INVITATIONS

A wedding is the most important event in a girl's life.

Naturally she wants, and should have, engraved invitations or announcements which are ultra-fashionable and correct in every detail.

Requirments and fashions change frequently. What was perfectly correct last year may be considered bad form this season.

Our engraving is noted for its smoothness and beauty. All engraving orders are looked after by a member of the Company. He is considered an authority on society engraving. It is his business to personally see that every little detail is correct. GOOD EYE FIRST ESSENTIAL TO GOOD BATTING, SAYS ZIMMERMAN

Batter Can't Outguess Pitcher

'HEINE' ZIMMERMAN begins today a series of articles on how to hit the ball. As Zimmerman is one of the best batters the national game ever produced he writes with authority. One of the first things a batter must know is that he can't outguess the pitcher. Here is the way 'Heine' puts it:

Many a batter goes up there and hits on a hunch, tries to outguess the pitcher and that sort of thing. That is, he convinces himself that the pitcher is going to throw a curve ball, and if it starts across the plate he falls away because he is certain that when it breaks it will come too close for comfort. He is made to look foolish. Maybe he gets the idea that it is to be a fast one. He swings and the ball breaks and he is made to look bad, for frequently it hits him.

To be really a great batter three things are absolutely essential, Zimmerman says. A batter MUST have:

A Good Eye
Confidence
Strength

Athletics Purchase Dartmouth Captain

Connie Mack Signs Dave Morey to Hurl for Prospective American League Champions.

HANOVER, N. H., July 12.—Connie Mack, of the Philadelphia Athletics, has been watching the Dartmouth players again this season, for Captain "Dave" Morey has announced that he has signed with the Athletics for the remainder of the season. Last year found "Howie" Fahey, of Medford, Mass., Dartmouth's stellar shortstop, selected by the same manager.

"Dave" Morey, who comes from Malden and formerly starred for Malden High, has played a leading position in athletics at Hanover during his four years in college. Besides captaining his freshman football team, he won his reputation in baseball, and since his sophomore year has had a permanent berth on both the varsity eleven and nine.

As a twirler he is one of Dartmouth's best productions. Speed, accuracy and ability to emerge from tight situations have saved many a game for him when the team was slumping. He suffered an injured arm early in the season and was unable to be with the team, but lately he has shown better form than ever before.

Penn's Crack Hurler Signs With Phillies

Harry Imlay, Captain of College Nine, Has Joined Charley Dixon's Team.

PHILADELPHIA, July 12.—Harry Imlay, captain of the University of Pennsylvania baseball nine, has signed a contract with the Philadelphia National League Club, with the understanding that he will report to the Phillies as soon as the college season closes.

Imlay promised Manager Dooin, of the Phillies, some time ago that he would sign, and, according to local advices, he has kept his promise in such a manner that it will not affect his amateur standing until after he leaves Penn.

Imlay is a spitball pitcher with plenty of speed and good control. He also can hit well and has "ball sense." He won the majority of his games this year through pure ability, having a weak team behind him.

'HEINE' TELLS HOW TRAINING AS CADDY MADE HIM A BATTER

By HENRY (HEINE) ZIMMERMAN.

A GOOD eye, confidence and strength are the three essentials which must be possessed by the youth whose ambition it is to be hailed as a "slugger" in baseball.

And the asset which the average fan figures as the most valuable is of the least worth of the three. That is strength.

Of course there are half a dozen other qualities which enter into a man's hitting. But they are of the minor brand.

If a man possesses a bad eye he'll never be a great hitter.

If a man is without confidence he will never be a great hitter.

If a man lacks strength he'll never be a great slugger.

Those are three assets which every slugger must possess. In my opinion the greatest of all is the eye.

It is the eye which drives the ball over the fence. Of course the arms swing the bat which meets the ball. But if the eye doesn't inform the arms when to swing the ball will never sail over the fence and there will be the "Ohs" of disappointment from the fans as they watch a pop fly instead of the shrieks as they arise in their seats to watch the sphere clear the barrier.

How the Eye Knocks the Home Run.

Here is what happens when a home run hit is made. The eye of the batter follows the ball from the moment it leaves the pitcher's hand. The eye never for the fraction of a second leaves that ball. The eye informs the mind when to start that swing. If the eye be perfect then the bat meets the ball at exactly the proper moment and at the proper place.

The strength would have counted for nothing if the ball hadn't been met fair. Instead of sailing over the fence the ball would have popped into the air.

Any success which I have had as a batter is due to the fact that I have developed my eye. And I did that before I ever played baseball.

When I was a youngster of ten or eleven I went to the Westchester Golf Club in the Bronx, New York. I secured a position as caddy and there the value of a true eye first impressed me. The instructor impressed his students with that idea. And I certainly had an excellent opportunity of watching it tested.

We caddies would go out with a foursome. Then we would stand back and watch the fellows drive either from the tee or in the field. Some fellow would slice and his swearing could be heard for yards. Oh, it was funny, all right. But we caught his mistake. At just about the moment when his club was going to meet that ball he would take his eye from the little pellet.

Good Golfer, Good Batter.

A bad drive, much profanity would follow, and if we caddies happened to be betting a bit on the fellows we were following you can gamble that we didn't bless the fellow who made the bad drive.

Of course I did what every other caddy does. I practiced with the club. And this thing of watching the ball, never losing it for an instant, made such an impression upon me that I quickly learned how to drive. And if I do say it myself I became a pretty decent driver.

When I drifted into baseball I quickly learned that the eye developed on the golf links was about the best asset I had. And keeping my eye on the ball has been my theory ever since.

Gussing a Poor Method.

Many a batter goes up there and hits on a hunch, tries to outguess the pitcher and that sort of thing. That is, he convinces himself that the pitcher is going to throw him a curve ball and, if it starts across the plate, he falls away because he is certain that when it breaks it will come too close for comfort. He is made to look foolish. Maybe he gets the idea that it is to be a fast one. He swings and the ball breaks and he is made to look bad, for frequently it hits him.

In the series between the Cubs and the Athletics for the world's series we thought we had the signs of Bender, who was pitching for Philadelphia.

Eye Better Than Sign Reading.

For several innings we thought that when Ira Thomas, the catcher, called the pitcher "Albert," his first name, that he was calling for a fast one, and when he called him "Chief" it was a curve. Frank Schulte went up, heard Thomas call the pitcher "Albert," and prepared to swing on a fast ball. It happened to be a curve and Schulte ducked in time to keep from being beaned.

Then we went back to the other system—following the ball with the eye instead of trusting to signs.

Cleveland Fans Sour on Johnson

'Big Chief' Is Getting in Wrong

By W. J. McBeth.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Ban Johnson used to be a real Moses to his American League children. He led them out of the wilderness of the war days into an era of financial milk and honey. But, like the celebrated Duke of York, with his storied ten thousand men, having marched his forces up the hill, the big czar gives evidences of intention to march them down again. The green pastures of the promised have failed to satisfy. Ban hungers once more for the wilderness. Mighty in war, the American League president chafes under the monotony of peace. His restless soul, thwarted in its belligerency toward certain foemen of the National League, has been forced, on occasion, to seek a vent in interference with the henchmen of his own domain.

Ban Attacks Birmingham.

The latest outburst of the American League autocrat was directed against Joe Birmingham, manager of the Cleveland club. Mr. Johnson intimated that in his opinion, Birmingham was no fit person to be in charge of an American League club. Whatever prompted the attack, it appeared very ill-timed. In the few short months he had been in charge of the Naps, Birmingham had fashioned a pennant contender from an habitual second division aggregation. His club was very much in evidence as a potent factor of the struggle. And as the public, after all, pays its good money in the expectation of patronizing and propitiating results, Mr. Johnson aroused no loud hurrahs of indorsement to his attack on Birmingham. Mr. Johnson simply raised against the popularity in his own bailiwick the resentment of one more city.

Cleveland fandom is not likely quietly to brook the official interference of even the mighty Johnson with a man who is making good in its opinion.

Birmingham, unfortunately, had troubles of his own at the time; eternal dissensions that could best be straightened out in the clubhouse. The great Napoleon Lajoie objected to club discipline when his manager thought it to the best interests of all to give the mighty Frenchman a rest. Lajoie went over Birmingham's head with a direct appeal to President Charles Somers. Perhaps, it was with the idea of throwing out a hint to the boss as to his personal views of the matter that Johnson expressed himself in such emphatic disapproval of Birmingham. However, it is quite certain now that Ban Johnson and not Joe Birmingham will be held responsible for the shortcomings of Cleveland, if the inside bickerings develop into open club warfare in the Forest City.

Johnson Knocks "Live Ones."

For some reason, Mr. Johnson appears to have a penchant for picking onto "live wires" and indorsing "dead ones." His meddlesome disposition has "Dutched" him in half of the American League cities. He is about as popular in St. Louis as scarlet fever in a nursery. For years and years he was openly accused, in the Mound City, of trying to drive Bob Hedges out of the league. Once Hedges actually negotiated a sale. But the prospective buyers failed to make good the first payment, and the Browns reverted to the original ownership. Ban, at the time, took no pains to conceal his disappointment. There are those in New York bold enough to accuse Johnson of entertaining kindred designs upon Frank Farrell's property. Charlie Comiskey, mouthpiece of Johnson—or the other way, if one is pinned down to sheer truth, declared a few months ago that within five years every American League club would be owned by old-time baseball players. Straws, indeed, that indicate a wind from a dangerous quarter for those millionaires of the Yawkey-Somers-Farrell type whose financial influence forced recognition of equality from the National League in Johnson's scheme of expansion.

Other Cities War on Johnson.

New York has as little reason as Boston, St. Louis, Cleveland or Detroit to worship at the shrine of Big Ban. Enough sterling players have been lost to the Highlanders through the alleged advice of the league executive to form two or three world's championship aggregations. By forcing Jake Stahl onto Clark Griffith in 1908, Johnson not only made the "Old Fox" a laughing stock of both big leagues, but further effected his retirement in disgrace at midseason. Jake, as an outfielder, was very much to the bush even though his three-year contract called for $6,000 a season. The explosion of the Born Manager carried down in its ruin a club that in the first few weeks threatened to have the pennant cinched by July 4.

After the darkest days of the Griffith and Elberfeld regime, Ban Johnson allowed his personal animosity to land a second knock-out to New York's hope of salvation. He chased George Stallings, who had built a tailender into a pennant possibility in two short years. Stallings, however, came back like a boomerang as manager of the Boston Nationals this year. He has robbed the American League of its time-honored Boston patronage by showing results with what every one considered the joke of the two big leagues at the opening of the season. It is true that the world's champion Red Sox are somewhat to blame because of their disappointing start. But public prejudice was instilled during the world's series last fall when, on the last day, no provision of accommodation was made for some thousands of loyal Red Sox rooters who had accompanied the team to and from New York and the Hub for each game. Robert McRoy, for many years Johnson's private secretary and who is now alleged to represent some Johnson interests in Boston, was responsible for the "bone." Of course Ban Johnson has to share the blame.

Detroit Fans Against Ban.

Detroit soured on Johnson because of Ban's animosity toward Hughie Jennings. Johnson rebuked Jennings for his friendliness toward McGraw during the world's series between the Giants and Athletics in 1911. Ban was quoted, at the time, as intimating that Jennings would be driven out of the American League because of alleged treason in tipping off McGraw to Philadelphia weaknesses. Frank Navin beat Johnson to it by renewing Hughie's contract.

The sentiment of the American League clubs, however, seems to have undergone somewhat of a change within the past few years. On a number of occasions they have actually silenced Ban when he has prepared to rip organized baseball, as typified by his foeman of the National League, right up the back. Twice he claimed he had C. W. Murphy at the brink of the chute for the "Down and Out Club," but his own supporters silenced his guns because apprehensive that a scandal might affect the whole organization. He was also going to make John T. Brush jump through a knothole for the New York club's alleged manipulation of sales of the world's series tickets in 1911. Mr. Brush made Mr. Johnson indorse a public exoneration from the charges. His long-promised airing of the umpire-bribery charges at the Polo Grounds in 1908 fell flat after he had talked himself into a position that made him appear absolutely ridiculous.

Cures Charlie Murphy.

There is no doubt that Mr. Johnson has been a great factor toward putting organized baseball on a sound and unimpeachable footing. For that he deserves due credit. He has also succeeded, at last, in impressing upon Charlie Murphy the objection to loose talk. Ban could do no better than to adopt the same sort of policy that was crammed down Murphy's throat.

TORONTO GETS BRADLEY.

TORONTO, July 12.—The Toronto International League club has just completed a trade whereby Al Shaw, the Maple Leaf outfielder, goes to the Jersey City club for First Baseman Hugh Bradley. Bradley was with the Boston Red Sox in 1912, and was turned over to the Skeeters at the beginning of the present season.

SOUTHERN IS REAL LEAGUE THIS SEASON

More Class by Far Now Than Last Year—It Will Take Great Club to Cop.

SLUMP OF BARON TEAM VERY SUGGESTIVE FACT

Catchers Are Vastly Better Than Usual, Pitchers Fully as Good, Hitting Superior.

By Percy H. Whiting.

"THE Southern League is a faster league this season than last." So says Whitey Alperman, field captain of the Atlanta club and wisest head in the league.

So say I.

So say we all of us.

Granted. It doesn't have to be so dad-blamed good, either, to land that title.

It was an insect league last year.

Also, the team that won it was the worst team that ever won a pennant in the Southern League.

* * *

THE humble position of the Baron team this year tells part of the story. It was good enough to win the rag last season. This year it is lucky to be in the first division. And it's very much the same team, too. It is weaker in spots, but better in others. And look where it is.

It was lucky to "get by" last year at all. This year they have found it out.

A YEAR ago this time just seven men were batting .300 or over. This year a dozen men are doing it.

The base running doesn't show any advantage this season, though there's no great falling off.

The pitching is surely quite as good this year as last, and possibly a lot better.

Last year at this time Swann, now canned, was leading the league. Sommers was second, Aitchison, a good pitcher, was third, and Merritt, an antique, fourth. Going down the list were found Boyd, Wagner, Demaree, Smith, Hardgrove and Foxen. Now, that was no bad collection of pitchers. Barring Swann, they were highly useful.

This year the pitching crop is quite as promising. Lots of good men are being held down by poor teams—Brenton, for example. Others, like Beck, Williams, Walker, Conzelman and others, are too young to have found themselves, but are corking pitchers in the making.

The league has some nice hurlers this season. Coveleskie is going better than ever. Conzelman is promising. Sommers is having another good season. E. Brown is a marvel—Scout Larry Sutton says he's the best pitcher in the league. Price has found himself. Hardgrove is going strong again. Bagby looks useful. W. Robertson has proved a star. Cavet is pitching up to his limit. Hogg, after a grand start, is slumping; but he looks like a wonder for all that.

Probably the pitching strength of the league is greater now than last year. Undoubtedly the present crop will look 25 per cent better in two or three years than the 1912 harvest.

THE catching caliber of the league this year has it all over that of last year. Street, Schmidt and Mayer are wonders. Adams, of the Pels, is a good man, though he is playing now with an injured hand. It's been a long time since the Southern League has had such catchers as this year.

THE league has better batters this year than it had last. Robertson, Elberfeld, Long, Smith, Kniseley, Welchonce, Gribbens, Sloan, King and Baerwald are terrific hitters in their 1913 form.

A year ago this time the leaders were Almeida, Harbison, Hemphill, McGilvray, Johnson of Montgomery, Doc Johnston, Welchonce, Wares, Alperman, Sommers, Sentell, Bagby, Moran and James. In a two-sided batting bee the 1913 stars would win by about a million hits.

THE teams this year are, in the main, playing better baseball. Their fielding seems a shade better, there seems more pepper and the inside stuff is coming through better.

For another thing, the race is better.

A year ago to-day the Barons were out in front, with a lead of .125 over Chattanooga. The first team was separated from the fourth by .138. The first and last teams were .211 apart. And the Crackers hadn't hit the bottom, though they were but one point away.

Now the race is tight, the Crackers are in the running, the team is going pretty strong, and every prospect pleases.

Surely the good year 1913 has it over its immediate predecessor by 50 miles, as well as by 365 1-4 days.

JACK WHITE IS TRAINING HARD FOR DUNDEE BOUT

LOS ANGELES, CAL., July 12.—Jack White is doing light training at Venice, holding himself in readiness for his proposed bout with Johnny Kilbane July 29.

White had less than a week to work previous to his former battle with the New York Italian and put up a great bout. He is confident that with a proper course of training he can decisively defeat the Eastern boy.

HANS WAGNER'S DAYS OVER AS PIRATE REGULAR

PITTSBURG, PA., July 12.—Hans Wagner may play baseball for a day or two at a time on occasions, but his days as a regular are over. Pinch hitting will be about all he will be allowed to do the rest of the season. This was practically admitted to-day by Manager Fred Clarke.

Naughton Lauds Peter Jackson

Australia's Most Perfect Boxer

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., July 12.—A correspondent wants to know who, in the writer's opinion, was the "most perfect boxer" of all the Australian ring men who came to America in the 80's and 90's. And, while I think of it, I might remark "Correspondent" is asking me to fill a pretty large question.

In the communication embodying the query, the gentleman says:

"I am a close reader of all that is printed in regard to ring happenings and I have noticed that quite often, when discussions about comparative cleverness of latter-day boxers and former pugilists are in order, some critic will make reference to "the marvelous Griffo," as if he were the standard by which all that is clever in the glove game is reckoned. I have a friend who says that Griffo was simply a trick boxer and that for useful cleverness he could not compare with George Dawson, Peter Jackson or Jim Hall, who were also Australians. What is your opinion on this? Who do you think was the most perfect boxer of all the Australians who came here in the 80's and 90's?"

IN regard to Griffo I can only say that I did not have an opportunity of judging the young man's merits when he was at his best. I did not see him in action until he had passed his heyday, and then only once or twice in events for which he had had no training and seemed little concerned as to which way the decision went.

He had degenerated into a Queensberry clown at the time of which I speak and was more fired with the ambition to make the spectators laugh than anything else. He retained sufficient of his handiness with the gloves to make things interesting for his opponents but his blows were of the mushy order and his defense not nearly so complete as it had been in former years.

Whatever he might have been earlier in his career, Griffo was certainly more of a trick performer or juggler when I saw him.

So far as Griffo may figure in a discussion of this kind I would prefer to pass the question on to other critics who had opportunities of making comparisons between Griffo and other Australians when Griffo was at his best.

AUSTRALIA sent us some exceedingly clever ring men and now, with my experiences and recollections mellowed by years, I have no hesitation in saying that Peter Jackson was the "most perfect boxer," of all the Antipodeans I have seen in real action.

George Dawson had ideas of his own and did not hew to the lines of the Mace ideals of boxing. Judged by what he accomplished in the ring he earned the right to be described as clever, but he was far from being as well balanced a piece of fighting machinery as Jackson.

Many of the Australians were extremely clever, having the fine points of the game at their command to a degree which made them appear graceful in action. Among these Jim Hall was prominent and Steve O'Donnell was another; George McKenzie, a lightweight, was a very talented glove wielder and that scamp, George Mulholland, could make almost any man who opposed him look foolish. Fitzsimmons boxed cleverly when he first came across, but when he began to study anatomy and devise knockout punches, he sacrificed art to utility.

PETER JACKSON was the most talented exponent of the Mace school of boxing the writer ever came across. He knew how to lead and counter, and time and measure, and his footwork always rhymed with his first play. He would duck, snap back and sidestep in a bewilderine way and he appeared to be always within range when his adversary tried retaliation.

I remember Jackson's first match at the old California Athletic Club in San Francisco back in 1888. His opponent was George Godfrey, the Boston colored heavyweight who, on account of his endurance, was known as "Old Ironsides." I will never forget the pained look which came over Godfrey's face when he first ran foul of the Jackson straight left. Peter, who seemed to have an arm as long as an oar, picked Godfrey off his feet with a lunging blow and placed him on his honkers in the floor. Godfrey had proved himself a game fellow in many hard fights but as he sat there that night the expression on his countenance was one of mingled surprise and discouragement.

A little later in the evening, George received a heart punch from Jackson's right and with glazing eyes and quivering ribs he feebly held a hand aloft and acknowledged defeat.

JACKSON'S accurate knowledge of timing was shown in his battle with Big Joe McAuliffe, the Mission Giant. For a number of rounds Jackson prodded the giant with straight lefts and kept his own head bobbing to escape McAuliffe's lumbering back fire. Then Jackson feinted McAuliffe into leading with the left. Joe straightened his arm and Jackson threw his head aside and allowed the blow to pass over his shoulder. While doing so he brought his right across and a sharp spat followed by a trickle of blood from big Joe's ear, showed that the giant had been effectively and heavily countered.

After that, poor Joe was cut down slowly and scientifically. He was too big to take liberties—or rather chances—with and Jackson whipped him artistically and came out of the melee without a scratch.

I am wandering away from the point, however, and illustrating how dangerous it is for old-time critics to reminisce.

In answer to my correspondent I will simply repeat that Peter Jackson was the "most perfect boxer" of all the Australians I had opportunity of studying.

Griffith Blames Heat For Club's Poor Work

Manager of Senators Claims That Players Are Affected by Climatic Conditions.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 12.—Manager Griffith, manager of the local American League Club, contends that his ball players are handicapped by local climatic conditions. He asserts that the heat during the summer months here is such that it takes all the stamina out of his players, and that this accounts for the fact that the team always plays better ball away from home than it does here.

He believes that the players can not keep themselves in prime condition because they do not get the necessary rest as a result of the heat.

Griffith has a scheme whereby he proposes to secure quarters in the outskirts of Washington, where he will house his players. It will be a sort of a summer hotel, far from the city, where the club will also supervise the players' food.

It is the intention to have the players brought to the ball park in time for the game and then send them back to their quarters immediately after the game. It is figured that by this mode of living the players will get better rest and diet, and consequently retain their condition through the season.

FORT SMITH, ARK., July 12.—The ten-round bout between Ollie Kirk of St. Louis and Tommy Dixon of Kansas City, was to-day postponed from July 18 to July 25, because of an injury Kirk sustained to his hand.

'Hans' Wagner's Leg Has Again Gone Bad

Injured Knee Is Giving Great Shortstop Much Trouble; Continues to Play.

Reports from Philadelphia are that "Hans" Wagner again is having trouble with the leg that kept him out of the game last spring.

The knee which he injured while making the spring training trip is again bothering him. On Thursday he felt pains in the leg and on Friday the leg was worse, but he said nothing about it, realizing that his services were needed.

The pains have continued to grow worse, although the captain of the Pirates has been subjecting the damaged knee to heroic treatment at the hands of the team's trainer. Wagner said his left leg is so stiff he only navigates with great difficulty.

PRINCETON AND FORDHAM TO CLASH ON GRIDIRON

NEW YORK, July 12.—The Fordham University football team will play eight games next fall. The principal new game added to the list is that with Vermont. The Princeton and Holy Cross contests have been resumed after a lapse of three years. The schedule follows:

September 27, St. Peters College at Fordham; October 4, Princeton at Princeton; 11, Rensselaer at Fordham; 18, St. Joseph's College at Fordham; 25, Vermont at Fordham; November 4, Villa Nova at Fordham; 8, Boston College at Fordham; 15, Holy Cross at Worcester.

THREE LEADERS MAY LOSE JOBS NEXT SEASON

Detroit Rumor Says That Birmingham, Stahl and Stovall Will Be Shipped in 1914.

DETROIT, MICH., July 12.—That managerial heads in the American League will fall is not unlikely. Rumor has fastened on three in the persons of George Stovall, Joe Birmingham and Jake Stahl. The Ferguson incident, when Stovall was suspended, brought the ax very near to Brother George, but back of that were reasons that were not made public at the time and have not been.

The three games taken from Detroit helped Stovall more than a little, for it was the position of the team and the way that it was going that weighed more than anything else with the owner. Robert Hedges saw his Browns win here and that may have been one of the reasons why he has since denied that Stovall was to be shipped.

BAN JOHNSON has never been friendly to Stovall nor has George held the most cordial feelings of good will toward the president of the league. Stovall did not better his position by openly siding with the striking Tigers a year ago, and it was freely predicted at the time that he had forfeited his chance of managing the Browns. This did not prove to be the case, but he certainly did not endear himself to Big Ban.

BIRMINGHAM'S trouble is, that he has made the Naps too aggressive. In his efforts to put fight in the team he has overdone the thing, but now promises to work with his foot on the soft pedal so that all may still be well.

* * *

STAHL'S case is still another one. He would like to quit, but McAleer won't let him. Factions have grown up on the Red Sox team, the old players under the leadership of Bill Carrigan being a trifle at odds with the youngsters who follow Tris Speaker and Wood. Stahl keeps them living in peace as another manager might not. Therefore, he has to stick whether he wants to or not.

LEDOUX IN GREAT SHAPE FOR BOUT WITH WILLIAMS

LOS ANGELES, July 9.—Charles Ledoux, the French bantamweight, is in great shape for his bout with Kid Williams, the Baltimore scrapper, at the Vernon arena on July 15. Williams is also hard at work in his training quarters at Venice. Odds today favored the Baltimore boy.

FRASER, PIRATE SCOUT, LOOKING FOR PITCHERS

DUBUQUE, IA., July 12.—"Chick" Fraser, formerly with the Chicago Cubs, now scouting for the Pittsburg Nationals, ish ere to look for pitchers. He is particularly anxious to sign Jasper, the local star, whom the White Sox are after.

CARDINALS AFTER MORGAN.

ST. LOUIS, July 12.—From Kansas City comes an announcement that Manager Miller Huggins, of the Cardinals, is about to consummate a trade with Manager Carr, of the Blues, for Cy Morgan, the pitcher who once played with the Browns and Athletics in the American League. Morgan is the leading hurler in the Association.

A Blessing to Victims Of "Sore Foot" Agony

The following is said to be the surest and quickest cure known to science for all foot ailments: "Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of Calocide compound in a basin of warm water. Soak the feet in this fully fifteen minutes, gently rubbing the sore parts." The effect is really wonderful. All soreness goes instantly; the feet feel delightful. Corns and callouses can be peeled right off. It gives immediate relief for sore bunions, sweaty, smelly and aching feet. A twenty-five cent box of Calocide is said to be sufficient to cure the worst feet. It works through the pores and removes the cause of the trouble. Don't waste time on uncertain remedies. Any druggist has Calocide compound in stock or he can get it in a few hours from his wholesale house.

Ritchie a Coal Yard Product

Quit Father to Enter Ring

By Left Hook.

WILLIE RITCHIE, lightweight champion, who defeated Rivers, July 4, at San Francisco, says that Geary Steffen is his proper monaker when in any society but that of the prize ring.

When Steffen decided to shake the dust of his father's coal yard from his shoes and take up fighting as a business he grabbed the Ritchie name to satisfy Papa Steffen, the latter not caring to have any notoriety of the fighting brand added to the family name.

Papa Steffen was very much opposed to the youngster's entering the ring under any circumstances, but he soon found that there was no use kicking. Now that Ritchie has won the lightweight title and made a small fortune in a little more than four years the elder Steffen is said to be almost willing to have "Willie Ritchie" cast into the discard and let the boy sail under his proper name. Pa Steffen has never seen the boy fight, and never will, he says.

Ritchie is a Native Son, having been born in San Francisco February 13, 1891. At the proper age he was chased to school and received a good common school education. Then he went to work in the Steffen coal yard, taking his full share of the hard work, and to this Ritchie says he owes his strength.

Four Years in Ring.

Some four years ago Geary did his first fighting. And it was in the Dreamland Pavilion, San Francisco, where the four-round stars scintiliate. A boxer named Willie Richardson was billed to fight in one of the minor preliminaries, but at the last minute Richardson failed to put in an appearance, and the call for a substitute brought forth a tall, likely looking chap.

The announcer and Geary had a short argument, and it was over the name that would carry the pugilist through his fistic career. After much debating Willie Richardson's name was cut to Ritchie, and to this day Geary Steffen has been known as Willie Ritchie.

That night he fought a fellow by the name of Monk Enok, and Monk lasted less than two rounds.

Since the night he fought Monk Enok, Willie has had forty-two battles and has won all of them but four. These he lost through decisions. His first defeat came at the hands of Frankie Burns, when he lost a six-round verdict in Oakland. Charlie Reilly outpointed him in six rounds. Matty Baldwin won the decision in Willie's first twenty-round fight, and Freddie Welsh won in Los Angeles over the same distance just a year ago.

His fight with Welsh in Los Angeles Thanksgiving Day, in which he substituted for Wolgast, who was stricken with appendicitis, brought him into prominence with a bang. True, he lost the decision to the Pride of Pontry Pridd, but it gave Willie his start and announced his coming to the sporting world.

Willie was taken East after the Welsh bout under the management of Emil Thiery and worked as stable mate with Packey. He had eight fights in eight weeks, and won them all, though they were only newspaper decision bouts.

Draws With Wolgast.

On May 11 of this year Willie was given the chance that gave him the confidence and the persistency to call for a bout with Ad Wolgast. He got credit for boxing Ad a draw in the four-round bout.

Ritchie took his second trip East after the Wolgast fight and, though he remained in New York for a couple of weeks, no one appeared anxious to meet him, so he drifted South to New Orleans and there boxed Joe Mandot. In the last round of their bout Willie had the Frenchman helpless.

The bout was a great boost for Willie and he immediately became recognized as one of the uppermost contenders for the lightweight crown.

JOHNNY EVERS IS MAKING GOOD AS MANAGER OF CUBS

CHICAGO, ILL., July 12.—Apparently fans were a little premature in weeping over little Johnny Evers, manager of the Chicago Cubs, who, according to the war correspondents in the spring, was so worried that he couldn't handle a rain check, let alone a ball team.

So different from the calm, businesslike methods of Chance and Tinker. Evers has grown so distraught that he has worried himself into the thought that he has a great ball team. While Tinker and Chance—well, you see?

Ford Quits Spitter; Goes Back to Curve

Yankee Hurler Claims That Moist Delivery Hurts His Wrist and Shoulder.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Russell Ford has practically given up his spitball. It is but occasionally that he uses it now. He has returned to his curve.

At the beginning of the season, and in fact, until just recently, Ford could not work the kinks out of his arm. He noticed it more particularly just after throwing a spitball. He came to the conclusion that this style of delivery was too much of a pull on his wrist and shoulder, and he has virtually decided to give it up altogether.

Before Ford adopted the spitball he had a very fine curve. He practiced continually for more than a year before the "spitter" was added to his repertoire. After mastering the moist fling, Russell seldom employed his curve. He mixed the amphibious toss with a good change of pace, and as long as the "spitter" worked well he had little or no use for the curve.

Ford has gone back to the curve.

PECKINPAUGH LOOKS GOOD.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Shortstop Peckinpaugh is a big favorite with the Yankee rooters. He is in the game all the time and has a habit of getting on the bags with pleasing regularity.

GILMORE NOW HEADS THE NEW CHICAGO FEDERALS

CHICAGO, July 12.—Stockholders of the Chicago club of the Federal League have elected a new set of officers. James A. Gilmore is to be the new president and E. C. Racey, secretary and vice president. Bert Keely was retained as manager of the team.

CANADIAN HENLEY IN AUGUST.

TORONTO, July 12.—The Canadian Association of Amateur Oarsmen has selected dates for the Canadian Henley Regatta. The races will be held at St. Catherines on August 1 and 2. Entries have been made from the rowing clubs of Detroit, Milwaukee, Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Buffalo.

WHAT ATLANTA MANUFACTURERS AND JOBBERS ARE DOING

RETAILERS ASK FOR IMPORTANT LEGAL CHANGES

Want Garnishment Law Broadened and Also Seek Fraudulent Check Bill at This Session.

MEETING CALLED JULY 21-23

Georgia Merchants to Convene at Hotel Ansley and Make Strong Effort to Further Cause.

Two thousand retailers from all parts of the State are expected to assemble in Atlanta July 21, 22, 23, in the annual convention of the Retail Merchants' Association of Georgia.

Headquarters will be the Ansley Hotel, and the business sessions probably will be held in the assembly room there.

There are two bills now before the Georgia Legislature which the retailers are deeply interested in furthering. They are bills amending the garnishment law, making it broader of application, and a bill making it a misdemeanor to draw a fraudulent check, unless, within thirty days, the check is met.

This will be the principal matter before the convention, but there also will be discussions of topics of timely interest, and the annual election of officers. Present officers are J. W. S. Hardy of Waycross, Ga., president; D. E. Hogsed, Toccoa, vice president; John Bratton, Atlanta, secretary-treasurer; Louis W. Roberts, Atlanta, special representative.

Year's Campaign Waged.

Mr. Roberts, ex-president of the association, has spent the past year going from town to town in Georgia enlisting the interest of the merchants in the two bills which have been introduced before the Legislature.

The garnishment bill proposes to make all wages subject to garnishment. As the law now stands, men who do work which is entirely or in part manual can not be garnished. Thus the engineer on a locomotive can not be garnished, while the conductor can be. The new bill makes laborers' exemption $1 per day, and 50 per cent of the amount above that figure. In other words, a laborer making $3 per day would have $1 subject to garnishment—50 per cent of the amount above $1.

In the call for the convention, President Hardy says:

Solid Carloads Coming.

"You have every reason to feel proud of your association—it is composed of the leading progressive and aggressive merchants of the State. Several of the larger and a few of the smaller towns have already pledged themselves to send a solid carload of delegates. If all of the towns send even a fair per cent of the numbers they have designated, we will have the largest convention ever held by this organization. There is every reason to believe that our expectations will be surpassed.

"Atlanta is known far and wide for her hospitality, and while our conventions are business meetings, for busy men, no doubt you will be accorded such entertainment as is appropriate."

The meeting was held last year in Warm Springs, with an attendance of something over 1,000 members.

DENMARK SEES GOODS.

There is being held in Copenhagen an exhibition of modern office furniture and mechanical appliances for expediting the matters necessary to run economically an up-to-date active business concern's counting room. About 60 per cent of the exhibitors are displaying American goods.

The impression made on the public by the American exhibits is very favorable, and it may safely be stated that the exhibition of safes, typewriters, adding machines, indexing devices, steel furniture, office chairs, cash registers and stationery is superior to the similar displays made by German, English, Swedish and Danish firms.

Used Atlanta Underwear, But Surprised When Told So

Professional Man Had Acquaintance With Manufacturer—Didn't Know What He Made.

"Where are you going?" asked the Senior Partner as the Junior Partner arose from his desk in the Candler Building and put on his hat.

"Over to the Peter Hill factory."

"Peter Hill underwear?"

"Of course."

"I'll swear! I've been wearing that stuff for four years, and never knew it was made here."

This is a conversation which actually occurred. Further, the man who didn't know Peter Hill underwear is made in Atlanta had been a speaking acquaintance of P. N. Hill for several years. He never connected the well-known goods with the maker.

This is another text the promoters of the permanent exhibit of Atlanta-made goods might use. For Peter Hill underwear, in the making, gives employment to 100 girls and a score or so of salesmen and office employees.

Six Years Old.

The firm is six years old. In that time it has grown to occupy an entire floor of the big Commerce Hall building. From one garment it has expanded until it manufactures almost 100 different styles of garments, in a wide variety of materials. The original garment was athletic underwear for men. Neckties, bath robes, pajamas, union suits in many kinds of cotton goods, silk and flannel now keep it busy.

"Prejudice? Yes, we have met with it, time and again," says Mr. Hill. "Our goods sell on Broadway, but there are Georgia merchants who won't listen when our salesman calls. They are fewer and fewer every year, however. We are getting the cream of the trade right now, but it was a hard battle."

Making it stand on quality and fit, but never neglecting price, the business has grown steadily, and now the trade-mark has wide fame, particularly in the Southern States.

The uninitiated never can realize how many different kinds of things a man can choose to wear beneath his outer clothing until a visit is paid to the Peter Hill factory. Blue, green, lavender, pink and tan and just plain white are among the colors; checks and stripes the patterns; silk, cotton and flannel the materials.

Winter Athletic Underwear.

The newest wrinkle is a line of very light flannel underwear of athletic cut, designed for the chap who wants loose-fitting, short sleeve and short leg underwear in the winter as well as in summer, but who hesitates to go through December with the flimsy garments of June.

No other factory has adopted this idea, but the success of fall sales already made by the Atlanta concern indicate that competitors soon will fall in line.

Making underwear is just plain sewing, and no more interesting than any operation with the familiar high-speed, electrically driven sewing machines, which seem the limit of mechanical ingenuity.

The trick is all in the designing—how to give comfort and fit, plus style.

Always New Ideas.

There's always something new, as, for instance, a Peter Hill idea of sizing union suits according to the length of a man's body, as well as according to its circumference.

Neckwear demands more hand work. First, the silks have to be cut by hand with sharp knives instead of with machines. The sewing is done by machine, but the neckties have to be turned right side out, lined, pressed, and boxed by hand. This is what costs in a necktie, for although silk is expensive enough it does not take any great quantity to make an ordinary bow or four-in-hand tie.

Silk Is in High Favor; Charmeuse Leading

Goods So Pretty Women Do Not Know When to Stop Buying Says Importer.

Silks will be more fashionable than ever this fall, according to a prominent importer recently returned from an extended trip abroad.

"There were more silks worn in Paris this season than ever before," he said. "The demand will not only be for more silks, but for more kinds of silk. Much charmeuse is used.

"The silks used by the fine trade are so beautiful that women do not know when to stop buying. As a result practically the entire summer wardrobe is made of silk. It will be the same thing this winter.

"Our Paris house has been selling not only to American buyers, but to buyers from Russia, Italy, and almost every other country in the world. Never has Lyons been sold up so far ahead.

"Shall we sell American silks abroad! It is possible. I believe that our mills are so organized that we will be able to turn out the goods more quickly than the foreigners. This should enable us to meet their lower cost of production."

SELLING NOTES.

Manufacturers of women's neckwear are looking forward to active business for fall. The demand for laces continues to show improvement.

Satin-faced silks continue to lead the demand. American buyers at Lyons are placing sizable orders for charmeuse. Heavy satins, similar to duchesse, are also in demand.

Pick Sub-Committee To Get Exhibit Site

Manufacturers Who Demand Exact Details Before Lining Up Are To Be Satisfied.

No one behind the permanent exhibit project is sleeping. There was a meeting of the full committee of the Chamber of Commerce Wednesday noon in the Empire Building.

At its close a sub-committee, composed of Brooks Morgan, J. K. Orr, Bolling H. Jones and V. H. Krieghaber was named to take up all of the five or six proposals made by owners of available buildings, and report as soon as practicable.

The movement in favor of a permanent exhbiit has simmered down to a question of expense, it seems. Twenty-three of the manufacturers publicly announced their intention of taking space in the exhibit hall, without demanding any further explanation as to details. Others privately assured the committee of their cooperation.

But the majority of the manufacturers want to know just how much rentals will be, where the building is to stand—in fact, all about it.

Realizing that the only way to get these people in line is to answer their questions, the committee appointed Wednesday will go as far as possible toward selecting the best site, and ascertaining the cost.

SALES TERMS ADOPTED BY LUMBERMEN

National Dealers' Association Makes Rules to Keep All Transactions Uniform.

Following considerable agitation in the last year regarding terms of sale, the National Wholesale Lumber Dealers' Association has sent to its members a set of rules covering this point that it hopes to make uniform all over the country. This was done by the association in recognition of the difficulties of doing business under the variation of sales terms that exists at the present time.

Particular insistence is made on impressing on buyers the necessity of remembering that the terms of sale under which an order is accepted are as much a part of the contract as the prices at which the lumber is sold.

CANNOT STRETCH TIME.

The purchaser has no more right, according to the association committee on terms of sale and trade ethics, to stretch the time allowed for payment or to violate other terms of sale than the seller has to raise prices after they have once been fixed.

These are the sales terms adopted by the association:

The terms hereon are those agreed on by both buyer and seller and are a part of the sale agreement.

Settlement to be made promptly on receipt of each car. Freight, net cash, balance by note at 60 days from date of invoice or less 1 1-2 per cent discount for cash if paid within fifteen days from date of invoice; or 1 per cent for cash if paid within 30 days from date of invoice.

No discount allowed after 30 days.

WHEN CAR IS DELAYED.

If car is not received within the above discount times, and discount is desired, prepayment on account will not be held as acceptance of the shipment and the right to make corrections and complaint will not be forfeited thereby. In making delivered prices, cost of goods delivered at destination is guaranteed, but not against delay in transit.

Claims for count or quality must be reported as soon as car is unloaded and tally proved. No claims allowed if not prepaid within ten days after unloading.

General Conditions—All contracts and agreements are made contingent upon strikes, fires, floods, inability to secure cars, delays of carriers and other delays unavoidable and beyond our control.

In making delivered prices we simply guarantee the cost of goods at your place, but are in no way responsible for their safe delivery.

Under these rules all orders signed by buyers are subject to the approval of the home offices.

Clearer Skies Before Autumn

By SPENCER TRASK & CO.

We believe that by autumn a number of the problems now vexing our financial and business men will have been settled; the revised tariff bill should have been passed by September or October. By then the Interstate Commerce Commission may have allowed the 5 per cent increase in freight rates demanded by the Eastern railroads, and there is also the possibility of some bill having been passed amending our wretched currency laws.

By then, too, the investing public will have the chance to get its proper bearings.

In short, by the fall we should know much better what our true economic situation promises to be for the next few years.

Customs Decision Interests Firm Here

New York Judge of Appraisers' Court Rules on Baskets of Mixed Material.

Judge McClelland, of the Board of United States General Appraisers, handed down a decision in New York last week which is of particular interest to a thriving Atlanta concern.

A basket-importing firm in the East brought goods from abroad which were made of braided rush in natural color and stained willow. The customs appraisers assessed duty of 40 per cent, as stained willow, while the importers claimed they should pay only 35 per cent, as natural rush. The importer lost before Judge McClelland.

The Bombayreed Importing and Manufacturing Company of Atlanta imports considerable of the same class of goods, and watched the decision with interest. In the past, it is said, it has been the custom to decide whether the duty shall be 35 or 40 per cent, according to whether the natural rush or the stained yellow predominates in the design.

E. K. Ward, of the Bombayreed company, is in Grand Rapids, Mich., where his firm is making an exhibit at the furniture show. A similar exhibit is being made at the furniture show in High Point, N. C.

Publication in Hearst's American of a statement by Mr. Ward that American farmers could make good profits by cultivating the native willow on their waste lands brought a flood of letters from farmers submitting samples of willows and requests for valuations on them. Mr. Ward sticks to his statement that there is money in it for the farmer, and with very little work, but he says the willow must be cultivated, as otherwise the shoots are too short and are crooked and knotty. A Government bulletin tells just how this should be done.

U. S. STEEL STATEMENT.

NEW YORK, July 10.—The United States Steel Corporation reports unfilled orders on its books as of June 30 of 5,807,317 tons. This compares with 6,324,322 tons on May 31, 6,978,762 tons on April 30, 7,468,956 on March 31 and 5,807,346 on June 30, 1912.

THOUSANDS GET INVITATIONS TO BIG CONVENTION

Snappy Talks on Pertinent Topics Expected—Attendance May Go Above 2,000 Mark.

Invitatiops are being sent out as rapidly as possible to almost every merchant in six States who does a business of any consequence—thousands in all—summoning the dealers to the Southern Merchants' Convention to be held in Atlanta during the first two weeks of August.

Letters to various Atlanta firms which are taking an interest in the forthcoming event demonstrate the enthusiasm which is being aroused.

"I have received letters from dealers scattered all the way from Virginia to Texas," says Bolling H. Jones, one of the most active workers for the success of the convention. "I feel sure the attendance this year will go far above the 2,000 mark set last season."

Indications are that the first day's session will be one of the most interesting. During this session, the diversification of crops will be discussed. There is plenty of meat in the topics assigned for other sessions, however, and none of them is likely to be dull.

Arrangements were made with the Forsyth Theater last week whereby the whole house is reserved for the delegates to the convention on the nights of August 5 and August 11. Arrangements have been made for a reception at the Piedmont Driving Club, and for several thousand seats for the ball game at Ponce DeLeon Park between Atlanta and Chattanooga August 15.

W. H. White, of the White Provision Company, will speak to the convention on the opportunity offered Georgia farmers in stock growing. This promises to be one of the best addresses of the convention.

"It will be a real convention," says H. T. Moore, secretary. "For instance, we are told that merchants in the smaller towns have been among the defenders of the one-crop system. When crop diversification comes up for discussion they are likely to air their views in no uncertain language. They are close to the farmer, and what they have to say carries weight.

"The idea is to avoid loading the program with heavy addresses. We want debates—informal talks of five-minute length—short speeches with a punch in them. It looks as if we will get them."

European Business Comes to Atlanta Firm Unsolicited

Orders From Berlin and Paris Arrive Without Explanation of How Fame Crossed Ocean.

Fame is a peculiar affair.

There have been firms which have striven hard and long for recognition abroad, and with indifferent success. Again, some article of American manufacture becomes known favorably in Europe, without the slightest effort on the manufacturer's part, and unsolicited orders follow.

As for instance—

In Marietta Street is a concern but two years old, the A. E. Hill Manufacturing Company. The Hill company makes a machine which sharpens safety razor blades for all makes of safety razors. The other day Mr. Hill was surprised by a cabled order for a large shipment of his devices, to be consigned to a firm in Berlin.

And this week he is packing a shipment for the Societe Generale de Couterllerie & Orfevrerie, 31 Rue Pastourelle, Paris.

All this without any advertising abroad, or any effort to interest foreign buyers.

"How they came to learn of my device in Europe is more than I know," says Mr. Hill. "Of course, I knew in a general way that the safety razor was catching on in Europe; it is the kind of thing which would take well there. But who first heard of my sharpening machine in Germany or France is more than I can say. Needless to remark, though, all orders are thankfully received. The French order is a trial. Already I have had a repeat order from Berlin, which shows the device is giving satisfaction there."

The Hill machine is manufactured in Atlanta. It was invented four years ago, and has been on the market for two years. A new model was put out during the past week, the only change being a better arrangement of the circular hone which supplements the work of the ingenious strops which literally put a "hair-splitting" edge on safety razor blades. The machines are automatic, requiring almost no attention after the blades are put in place.

L. & N. SHOWS BIG INCREASE.

LOUISVILLE, KY., July 12.—Gross earnings of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad for the fiscal year ended June 30 increased more than three and a quarter million dollars, Charles Haydon, the company's controller, reports.

Gross receipts from operation from July 1, 1912, to June 30, 1913, were $59,467,771, as compared with $53,211,788 for the preceding period.

BOND SALESMEN JUST NOW BUSY PUSHING WARES

Business of Selling Securities at Retail Has Much of Human Interest in It.

This is the most interesting period of the year in the bond market. Almost every train leaving New York, Chicago and Boston has carried representatives of the principal bond houses into the country districts, where buyers of one, two or three bonds, in receipt of their semi-annual dividends, have been in position to reinvest a portion of their savings. Whether the salesmen can induce them to exchange their savings bank balances for $500 or $1,000 bonds remains to be seen. Every kind of persuasive argument will be used, for with many bond men it means a life and death struggle to secure enough orders in July to make up for the lean business of the last six months.

The art of selling bonds at retail has been reduced to a science. It is full of human interest. The most successful house in the business years ago hit upon the plan of sending young men on long visits to New England towns to get acquainted with the people. One salesman who gained his experience in this way is now the head of a great bond house.

He long ago gave up selling bonds on the road, but almost every week the mail brings him a letter, with the address written in a cramped, old-fashioned little hand, upon an envelope bearing the postmark of a New England town. The writer was one of those who attended the strawberry festivals in the little white church.

She has bought bonds of him for years, and the habit has now become so well fixed that the trust companies and banks which send their men to her with attractive investment propositions do not get a hearing. That banker has made a small fortune in commissions on sales of bonds to people in those little towns.

Thrifty, well-to-do, and with good connections, those people turn over to him each year a volume of orders which would make even the $10,000,000 banks sit up and take notice. It is investment business of the best sort, most of the bonds taken are seldom resold, being held till maturity, unless death occurs to force a distribution of the owner's estate.

SUMMER WAILS FROM COTTON GROWERS DUE

wails" will perhaps soon be stylish in advices concerning the cotton crop. If they fail to develop there will be a large yield, exceeding that of the season just closing by a million or more bales. Moreover, there will be no little surprise for the trade if during the next few weeks there are not advices from various sections of the belt telling of the crop losing some of its promise.

At the present time there is no serious trouble menacing yield anywhere in the belt, though there is no telling how soon some will develop and change the almost unanimously favorable tenor of advices into a mixture of good and bad. Cultivation is nearly finished, and the laying-by time finds the belt perhaps cleaner from weeds and grass than ever before. Conditions have been well nigh ideal for such and the recent rains have added to the basis of excellent promise. There is still the matter of late start in some sections, but the plant is generally healthy and, given proper conditions, this can be overcome.

The fruiting season finds the crop clean, well worked and with a good taproot. There will be no trouble keeping the plant in good shape by top-soil cultivation during the trying weeks of July, in case there is not enough moisture. In some sections of this part of the belt one fear now is that there will be more rain than needed, thus making the plant too rank.

So far temperatures have been normal and no injury has been done thereby. The past few days have brought some talk of them being a little too high in Texas and Oklahoma, but serious attention has not been paid that complaint here, as it will take a number of days of high temperatures to mar the excellent prospect for yield. There have also come some reports to the effect that the boll weevil was more numerous than ever before and over a wider area in Texas, but that is another menace which may not prove serious. If the crop suffers from high temperatures there will be a check to the weevil, for hot weather is one thing that will stop their work.

The recent Government report on condition showed fairly large improvement during the month of June, and it is current belief that since June 25 there has been further betterment. The time is at hand, however, for the usual deterioration to start, and on that account there is very close scrutiny of all reports from the fields. The speculative market continues to reflect a belief that the world will, during the next twelvemonth, require a large supply of the raw material—some people say not less than 15,000,000 bales—around current prices, so anything that holds promise of cutting into the prospect of such will find ready response. The smallness of the stock in New York for protecting short commitments of July and August contracts and the slim chance of it being increased also have a tendency to discourage short selling. The steadiness of spots in the belt reflects willingness to pay ruling prices, although business continues of small volume.

The threatened destruction of future trading by the Clarke amendment to the revenue tariff bill has helped to restrict activity in speculation during the week and has created much concern among the spot dealers who fear they will be left without hedging facilities this side of Liverpool.

Texas Bankers Are To Aid the Farmers

Arrangements Made to Advance Money on the Cotton Crops Without Mortgage.

FORT WORTH, TEX., July 12.—Peter Radford, president of Texas Farmers' Union, in a public statement says:

"In Texas cotton is the money crop, and the problem of marketing it intelligently has absorbed the attention of the leaders of economic thought for a half century. The crop is oftimes mortgaged, and debt is such a hard taskmaster that the farmer, in order to escape it, rushes to the market with his products and down goes the price.

"To relieve the pressure the bankers are advancing the farmers $35 a bale at 6 per cent, payable when the cotton is sold. The title to the cotton rests with the farmer and he can sell when he pleases, and there is no longer occasion for disposing of his crop in a weak or glutted market.

"In my estimation the slow marketing of cotton will increase the farm price at least from 2½ to 5 per cent net over the price obtained under present methods, making a minimum net saving to the farmer of $50,000,000. It is now up to the farmer to take advantage of the facilities offered."

Big Crop, High Prices For Georgia Melons

Buyers Pay as High as $900 Per Car for Cantaloupes and $175 for Watermelons.

CAMILLA, GA., July 12.—The cantaloupe and watermelon season is at its flush in this section. The hot dry weather for the past two weeks has caused the crops to ripen unusually fast. The prices for both crops have been very satisfactory. The first car of contaloupes sold for $900, track. Two other cars shipped the same day brought upwards of $2 per crate. Prices later ranged between $600 and $750 per car.

Watermelons sold at a fancy price, the first carloads at $160 to $170 per car.

Tomato shipments are moving freely and truckers who were lucky enough to put in a fine acreage are receiving from $2 to $2.50 per crate. Several commission houses have complimented the growers on the extra fine grade of tomatoes in this section. This is a departure for Camilla truckers and a large acreage will be planted next year.

Bulls Held in Check by Fear of Tax on Futures

Weevil and Hot Weather in Texas Only Bad Crop News To Be Heard.

NEW ORLEANS, July 12.—With the sword of Damocles hanging over the cotton market, it is hard to arouse speculation in the staple, even though a somewhat bullish environment has developed recently. Since the Government reports were issued July 3 Liverpool has shown distinctly a bullish attitude, neither the condition figures nor the acreage being considered of a bearish character by European cotton trade.

Taking advantage of the pessimistic feeling created by the proposition to tax futures out of existence, bearish interests, here and in New York, sold the market rather aggressively in the early part of the week, depressing contract prices to the level of 11.40 for October delivery. The strength manifested by Liverpool, where a good spot demand has been in evidence, sales totalling 10,000 bales almost every day, checked the declining tendency, and started shorts to covering.

Anticipation of possible damage to the crop from the high temperatures now prevailing in Texas, together with numerous reports of the boll weevil ravaging the crop in the western and central belt, induced some fresh buying. With bulls bidding for cotton and shorts inclined to cover, the market has had a substantial reaction upward from the low level established earlier in the week. There has been no general activity, however in the market, which has been more or less under the control of the professional element.

The July position, strange to say, has shown relative weakness. Exporters have had practically no orders, and even if they had them would find it a difficult matter to secure the grades sought after by the trade on the other side.

Except for reports as to damage by boll weevil in Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi, crop accounts continue of a satisfactory character. In fact, the reports as to the progress now being made by the crop could hardly be more encouraging.

It is believed by some that crop prospects are now in the zenith, and for this reason there is an inclination to buy the market on declines, the argument being made that the critical crop period is now at hand, and that any change in the condition is certain to be for the worse. The alarmist element in the market is trying to make capital out of the high temperatures reported in Texas within the last few days. These temperatures have not been abnormally high for Texas yet, however, and conservative people in the market think that hot dry weather is just what is needed to hold the boll weevil in check in that section of the belt.

Futures Sales Made Of Southern Iron

Considerable Pig Engaged at Low Prices for Delivery During Third Quarter of Year.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., July 12.—Considerable pig iron has been sold in Southern territory for delivery during the third quarter of the year, some of the larger consumers in the East and elsewhere taking advantage of the low prices.

Manufacturers in this section of the country have concluded they have sold enough iron at the low levels and have advanced prices from 50 cents to $1 per ton. The production has been cut down at least 10 to 15 per cent, six furnaces in Tennessee and Alabama being blown out. Repair work is being done on one or two of these furnaces. While $11 per ton, No. 2 foundry, is given as the average price for the product, there still are reports that concessions are being made.

Inquiries are in hand that promise to result in business, export deals under negotiation amounting to 12,500 tons, while domestic business under consideration amounts to not less than 25,000 tons. The intentions are to reduce the accumulated stacks of iron.

The home consumption is looking up. Castiron pipe plants in Anniston, North Birmingham, Greater Birmingham, Bessemer, Holt, Gadsden and other places are beginning to melt a little more iron. The big plant of the American Radiator Company at North Birmingham has been started up. It is proposed to melt 200 tons of iron daily at this place. The company spent something like $500,000 on the big plant at North Birmingham.

The new pipe plant at Gadsden started up this week and when in full operation there will be a healthly melt. This plant replaces the one destroyed by fire.

There is considerable activity in the steel market and all predictions now are there will be steady operation of plants through the balance of the year. Southern railroads are beginning once more to announce estimates of needs. Rail is in demand, as are bolts and spikes.

There is a strong demand for coke in this section of the country and all manufacturers are finding it necessary to keep coke ovens, both the beehive and the by-product types, in full operation. Better prices prevail for coke now than for some time.

U. S. LEADS IN THE VALUE OF EXPORTS TO GERMANY

The United States heads the list of countries as to the value of the exports to Germany in 1912. Russia ranks second, Great Britain third, and Austria-Hungary fourth. The United Kingdom still is the best customer for German products, Austria-Hungary coming next, the United States third, France fourth, and Russia fifth.

If the value of the total trade between the countries during 1912 is considered, the United States is first with $543,800,000; Russia second, with $525,400,000; the United Kingdom third, with $477,000,000; Austria-Hungary fourth, with $443,900,000; and France fifth, with $295,500,000.

The decrease in the value of the receipts from Russia was due principally to smaller grain shipments from that country; and the greater imports from the United States, to increased shipments of wheat, copper and raw cotton.

Increase of 10 1-2 Per Cent Is Expected in Rail Earnings

While most of the railroads ended their fiscal year June 30, it will be a month or more before the actual gross and net for the twelve months are available; nevertheless, with the figures now at hand for the eleven months, it is possible to estimate the results for 1913.

According to those figures, it now looks as if the railroads will earn something like $3,175,000 000 gross, or $300,000,000 more than was earned for 1912. That would be an increase of 10 1-2 per cent. Net after taxes will amount to $845,000,000 in round figures, or a gain of $73,000,000, or 9 per cent over the preceding twelve months.

Economist Explains Shortage of Money

World Produces $2,400,000,000 of Capital Yearly—Sometimes Burns Up or Demands More.

Lately it has been said frequently that "demand for capital is in excess of supply." Just what this means was explained by M. Leroy-Beaulieu, the eminent French economist, who wrote:

"The growing industrial States, particularly the new countries, are at this moment demanding more capital than the whole world has accumulated recently or is accumulating to-day. From this fact follow two consequences: First, that the users of this capital have to pay more for it in the shape of a higher interest rate; second, that they will be compelled to postpone, or extend for several years, many of the enterprises on which they had decided and for which they had already made preparations.

"The civilized world, so far as it can be reckoned up, provides $2,400,000,000 in available capital annually for investment in securities; it is asked in 1906 to provide $3,250,000,000. There was a demand, in America at any rate, for even more than its part of the above estimate to be provided during 1907. But the world has not got it; therefore it can not provide it.

"Add to this the effect of catastrophes, such as the San Francisco and Valparaiso earthquakes, which cost something like $200,000,000, and you will have a perfectly clear explanation of the existing crisis, the rise in the interest rate and the fall of investment securities. The truth is, nations, quite as well as individuals, have reached the point where they must limit their undertakings to the possibilities of the case; that will be done, if not willingly, then by force of events."

In 1906 the borrowing nations and individuals did not thus limit voluntarily their undertakings, and their bankers did not compel them to do so. In 1907, the "force of events" operated. This season, the restrictive process has been applied early and decidedly.

TRADE AWAITS DEFINITE NEWS FROM FARMERS

Realization of Crop Promises and Increase in Freight Rates Will Stimulate Trade.

NEW YORK, July 12.—It is the belief of the Fourth National Bank, formed after hearing from correspondents in all parts of the country, that the two things needed to stimulate general business this year are a realization of the best crop promises and the granting of the 5 per cent freight increases asked by the Eastern railroads.

"The outlook for the crops is still reassuring," the bank says in its bulletin, "but in some quarters the promise is for a somewhat reduced yield of wheat and corn. It is still too early to attempt definite estimates, but on the basis of both public and private advices the chances are that the people of the United States will this season as usual derive a vast amount of new wealth from the soil.

Farmers Hopeful.

"The farming communities are hopeful. This optimism is cautious, however, since it is obvious that in some lines of trade there has been a decided slackening, with a disposition to proceed slowly with respect to new business until a new tariff law has been enacted.

"Business men everywhere continue to conduct their affairs on a hand-to-mouth basis, and it is probable that there will be little broad buying by the small merchants until the crop prospects are absolutely sure. This is natural enough in view of the fact that the 'crop scare period' is near at hand, when the markets ordinarily pass through an interval of uncertainty respecting the possible effects of high temperatures and drouth in the wheat and corn area.

"The decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission to hear the petition of the Eastern railroads with reference to increasing freight rates 5 per cent shows that the commission is alive to the needs of a situation which is becoming each day more embarrassing to the railroads.

Railroads to Win.

"There seems to be a consensus of opinion that the railroads will win their case and that the advance in freight rates asked for will be granted next autumn.

"There are indications that the public is favorable to the increase, although it will be necessary for the railroads to prove their claims and to show beyond doubt that the increased revenue is needed in order to pay them for rendering the service called for by the people of the territory served.

"The people of the United States apparently view this step very differently from what they did three years ago when the increase asked for was turned down by the commission and strongly objected to by the shippers' organizations everywhere.

"This disposition on the part of the public to view the matter without prejudice and to act justly is of great importance, coming as it does at the moment when the United States Supreme Court has handed down a series of remarkable decisions in the so-called Minnesota and other rate cases where the right of State Railroad Commissions to fix rates within the limits of their own States was upheld except in cases where a railroad is able to show that the imposition of a specific rate would be confiscatory or insufficient to pay for the service rendered.

Interests Are Common.

"The fact is that the public is coming to see that the welfare of whole communities is tied up with the welfare of the railroads, and that there can be no thoroughgoing prosperity for the country as a whole if the common carriers are not prosperous, or are denied a proper return on the capital invested.

"This question has come to be of the greatest importance because of the steady advance in wages, the increased cost of financing, and the larger relative outlay for every variety of railroad equipment."

At Jacobs' Soda Fountains THE PLEASURE IS PERFECT

Because of the Knowledge that What is Served Can Not Be Excelled, and that Extreme Cleanliness and Individual Sterilizations Protect Your Health.

CLEANLINESS prevails in our kitchens, and where our ice cream is made everything is as pure and sanitary as though in the particular care of a trained nurse. And this extreme cleanliness is maintained in every detail of our service; at the Fountain itself each article used is not merely WASHED, but STERILIZED before it is again used.

Choice fruits and other foods are most carefully selected; our fruit syrups are pure; and our ice cream is made with pure, thick, sweet cream, which gives it an incomparable smoothness and rich flavor. Notice and you will find those who patronize us a few times continue to come to Jacobs' Fountains in preference to all others.

CRAWFORD WILL CASE BECOMES POISON PUZZLE

Report of Chemist After Body Is Exhumed Indicates Presence of Quantities of Morphine.

ACTIVITY AMONG MAN'S HEIRS

Parties to Litigation Now Promise Searching Inquiry, and Fulton Grand Jury May Act.

The Crawford will case, which for four years has been fought back and forth in the courts of Fulton County, and which is still apparently far from a final settlement, has developed into a "poison mystery."

This new and sensational turn to the litigation over the more than $100,000 estates of the late J. B. Crawford and his first wife, Mrs. Nancy B. Crawford, came when Dr. F. C. Harris, secretary of the State Board of Health, declared that chemical analysis of Crawford's stomach showed opium and morphine in large quantities, and that his lungs showed no indications of death from pneumonia.

When he died in March, 1909, his physician, Dr. J. W. Hurt, who is also the physician for the Coroner of Fulton County, gave pneumonia as the cause of death.

Body Exhumed Year Ago.

Just one year ago, on June 12, 1912, and more than three years after Crawford's death, Dr. Harris, with the Coroner of Carroll County, where the body was interred in the family cemetery at Carrollton, exhumed the body and then began the chemical analysis to which he has just testified.

Counsel for the contesting heirs now intimate that a more exhaustive investigation of the poison mystery will probably be made and that indictments may be sought before the Grand Jury.

Joshua B. Crawford was a well known character in Atlanta for many years. He was recognized as shrewd in business deals and close to the last penny in all financial transactions in his own and his first wife's name. He owned $75,000 to $100,000 in real estate and $20,000 to $25,000 in cash, notes and other negotiable paper. He loaned much money and added to his fortune by demanding every penny of interest called for in the notes and mortgages, as well as the full principal when due. If payment was not forthcoming he realized on the security he invariably required.

Crawford was born in October, 1833. His first wife, Mrs. Nancy E. Crawford, was eight years his junior. She died early in 1908, at the age of 66. Twelve months later he married again, his second wife being probably 20 years younger than the first. Within a month or six weeks after this marriage he died, at the age of 75.

Made Wills in 1907.

Crawford and his first wife made their wills at the same time in 1907, about a year before she died and two years before his death. By her will he inherited her estate. His will provided that in the event he survived his wife the estate should go to the four minor children of George Crawford, an adopted son, and to C. S. Crawford, a nephew, and Lula Miller, a niece. Following his second marriage, a new will was not made and the old will was automatically set aside, she inheriting the property.

A contest was set up by George Crawford, for his minor children, and C. S. Crawford and Lula Miller, beneficiaries named in Crawford's will. In 1910 a compromise was reached whereby property estimated at between $25,000 and $30,000 was carved out of the estate for these contestants, this being estimated as the value of the Nancy E. Crawford estate that had descended to Joshua B. Crawford upon his first wife's death. But none of that property has yet come into actual possession of these heirs, as one legal question after another has been raised to keep the estate tied up in litigation.

Undue Influence Claimed.

In 1912 thirtten other heirs at law —brothers, sisters, nephews and nieces of Joshua and Nancy Crawford—jointly brought suit to set aside this settlement, C. S. Crawford being one of the number, contending that his second wife exerted an undue influence over Crawford while he was

Potomac Water for Perspiring Senators

Lawmakers Thought They Were Drinking Mineral Spring Product Until Page Told Secret.

WASHINGTON, July 12—The poor, perspiring Senators have been deceived by the pages.

Some time ago the economy campaign eliminated mineral waters from the summer comforts of the Senators. Despite this, the mineral waters seemed still to be in the water bottles and the Senators drank deep and long.

A well-known Senator stepped up and drink three glasses to-day.

"There never was a water as good as this," he boasted, "and I have tried them all."

A page sitting by fell over in shrieks of mirth.

"It is Potomac water in the old bottles," he laughed. He knew, for he had seen it drawn from the faucet.

PrincessRoyal Fights Daughter in Courts

Rare Suit Is Being Waged in Secret by Relatives of King George.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—A legal dispute between two members of the royal family, a very rare occurrence, is now being secretly argued in the London courts. The litigants are the Princess Royal, widow of the Duke of Fife and sister of King George, and her daughter, the present Duchess.

The Duke left no male heir, the title descending to the elder daughter, the Princess Louise Duff. The dispute relates to property left by the Duke.

The action came before Justice Neville after the ordinary court hours, the procedure being equivalent to hearing in camera, press and public being excluded. The questions involved are so intricate that prolonged argument is necessary.

'Miss Freedom' Given Her Biennial Bath

New Jewelry Will Adorn Graceful Figure on Dome of United States Capitol.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Freedom, the gorgeous lady whose graceful form surmounts the dome of the Capitol, made her biennial toilet to-day. A score of husky workmen clambered to the top of the dome and gave Freedom a bath, using a heavy lather of castile soap and scrubbing brushes to remove the dust and grime that has accumulated on the face and figure of the lady of the Capitol since her last ablutions were performed in the summer of 1910.

The lady's jewelry will be replaced, as the seven platinum tips which surmount her headdress have been badly damaged by lightning bolts. Seven hundred dollars in the precious metal will adorn her brows and protect her from the elements.

St. Louis Man to Wed German Baroness

New Railroad Magnate Will Take Bride to South America to Make Home.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Baroness Ursula Barbara VonKalinsowski, of Wiesbaden, Germany, who, with her brother, Baron Kalinsowski, is staying at the Waldorf-Astoria, will be married to James Hurley, a prominent St. Louis man, this month. The exact date of the wedding has not yet been set. The Baroness and her brother will leave within a few days for St. Louis.

Mr. Hurley has recently bought extensive railroad interests in South America and he and his bride will go there on their wedding trip. The Baroness has with her two dogs which were the gifts of the Emperor and Empress of Germany.

$34.64 Each Man's Share of U. S. Money

Government Report on Currency of Nation Says This Amount Is Per Capita Average.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—The total amount of money in the United States at the beginning of the new fiscal year amounted to $3,718,379,000, an increase of $12,456,000 over a month ago. Of this, $3,371,326,000 was in circulation and $347,053,000 was held in the treasury as assets of the Government. Estimating the population of the country as 97,537,000, the treasury announced that the per capita circulation was $34.64, or an increase of 10 cents within a month.

ANOTHER CURE IS CLAIMED FOR CANCER GROWTH

Hungarian Chemists in Passaic, N. J., Declare Also They Have Conquered Tuberculosis.

REMEDY MADE FROM HERBS

Postmaster Mahony and Congressman Bremner, Patients, Express Confidence in Treatment.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Daniel O. Dancz and Alexander Horovitz, Hungarian chemists who have been treating with their new cancer remedy Congressman Robert Bremner and Postmaster D. W. Mahony, of Passaic, announced yesterday that they had discovered a positive cure for both tuberculosis and cancer.

These two men, whose efforts to save Mr. Mahony and Congressman Bremner have aroused much interest in the medical profession, came to America two months ago, going at once to the residence of Charles A. Biczak, at 220 Third Street, Passaic.

Thinks He Is Recovering.

"I heard of these men through my friend Biczak and decided to try their treatment," said Postmaster Mahony yesterday in St. Mary's Hospital. "I had received no benefit by the treatment from my physicians. I gained their consent to allow these men to treat me and now I feel I am well on the road to recovery."

Mr. Mahony's optimistic view was shared by Dr. R. N. MacGuffie, house surgeon at St. Marys Hospital.

"Mr. Mahony's condition was critical until two weeks ago, when this treatment was applied," said Dr. MacGuffie.

Congressman Bremner, who for only one week has been undergoing this treatment, feels much better, too, it was said at his residence.

One of the patients whose physician has allowed the appliation of the cure for tuberculosis, is Seward Wright, of 114 Second Avenue, Paterson. Last week he received his first treatment and now he is confident that in four weks he will be well.

Herb Medicine Used.

The treatment for both cancer and tuberculosis is the administration, both internally and externally, of medicines derived from herbs.

The cures are distinct, even the method of administration being totally different.

The two young men worked side by side for ten years, both at the Gymnasium and at the Royal University in Budapest. Mr. Horovitz is the expert on cancer and Mr. Dancz has made a specialty of tuberculosis.

"Our treatment for cancer," said Mr. Horovitz, "consists of the administration of brown pills from several herbs. There is a liquid wash, also made of herbs. Besides these, there is a compound made from some twenty different herbs, applied to the cancer by poultices."

Experimented on Animals.

"For five years we studied and experimented on animals before we learned of the compounds," said Mr. Dancz. "Then we applied our discoveries, first to animals and then to patients in Hungary. We began our experiments because of a deep interest in botany. In fact, many of our herbs were discovered by the simple process of watching animals.

"For instance, I would take two swine to the woods. One would be well and one sick. I would watch closely, seeing what herbs they would eat. Instinct seemed to direct them and by experiments later I learned exactly what herbs were necessary to cure certain ailments."

Suffragist Leader Would Carry Pistol

Following Permit Granted Colonel Roosevelt and Attorney Whitman, She Asks Court Same Privilege.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Following the granting of permission to Colonel Theodore Roosevelt and District Attorney Whitman to carry revolvers, Mrs. Robert H. Elder, the suffragist leader of Brooklyn and wife of a former assistant district attorney of Kings county, appeared before Chief Magistrate Kemper and requested to be allowed the same privilege. The judge gave her application blanks and said he would see that she received the permit.

Prince Raises $50 on Queen Mary's Letters

King George's Son Sells Mother's Missives to Schoolmate When She Refuses Him Money.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—Prince Henry, the third son of King George, who is at preparatory school at Broadstairs, is allowed $2.50 per week pocket money. Recently he asked his parents to double the allowance, which was peremptorily refused by his mother.

A few days ago it came to Queen Mary's knowledge that the young prince had raised $50 by selling letters from her and other members of the royal family to a schoolmate named Behrens who is related to Lord Rothschild. The Queen immediately wrote to Headmaster Saunders to obtain all the letters from Behrens, send them to her and refund the $50, which was done to-day.

Prince Henry was warned if he raised money this way again he will be tutored at home instead of being sent to Eton.

LadySackvilleInvites Jurors to Tea Party

Winner of Suit for Fortune of Sir John Murray Scott Wishes to Show Gratitude.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—Lady Sackville, as proof of her gratitude to the jurors who established her right to the great fortune left her by Sir John Murray Scott, has invited them to tea at Knole Park, Sevenoaks, Kent, on Saturday.

This droll entertainment will permit the jurors to inspect the famous country club and its art treasures which were preserved to Lord Sackville by Sir John's generous gift of money before his death.

Lady Sackville has asked many friends to assist in entertaining her guests, to whom none is of her "station in society," as she said of a lady during the now famous trial.

Scott bequeathed Lady Sackville art treasures in his Paris house worth about $1,750,000.

Taft's Tub Too Large, Wilson Asks a Shower

Bath for New President Will Be Built in Cellar of White House.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—There is to be a shower bath in the cellar of the White House. It has been requested by no less a person than the President, and it is evidently intended to keep him cool while he is spending his summers in Washington.

When President Taft first arrived at the White House he demanded, not a shower bath, but a tub big enough for his huge proportions. He got it. There is wonder here if that tub is still in the White House, for, if it is, it must be too large by far for the new President.

Red Spots in Aura Sure Sign of Love

Lecturer Tells Swains to Watch for Their Appearance and Then Propose Immediately.

CHICAGO, July 12.—Watch for the five reddish pink spots in the human aura, then propose. It is a ten to one wager that the girl will say yes, for just at that particular time the girl will be experiencing a rush of affection.

This advice to the lovelorn was gleaned from a lecture by Dr. Edwin B. Beckwith at Besant Hall.

Of course, the lovelorn would have to carry a sensitive screen of dicyanin, possibly a vest-pocket edition, through which he could gaze at the "only girl."

Mabel Taliaferro Is Wed in Daisy Field

Former Wife of Frederic Thompson Takes Every Precaution to Keep Her Marriage Secret.

ST. LOUIS, July 12.—After keeping her marriage to Thomas J. Carrigan, of LaPeer, Mich., a secret for more than a month, Mabel Taliaferro, of Chicago, the actress, formerly wife of Frederic Thompson, New York theatrical promoter, admitted here to-day she had been married June 1 in the Michigan city.

The marriage took place before a Justice of the Peace in a field of daisies that edged down to a river bank just outside of LaPeer, in order that all possible secrecy might be maintained.

LAUTERBACH BLAMES 'WOLF'

Life Wrecked by Lamar's Friendship

Lawyer Quails at Lobby Inquiry

MRS. PHILIP VAN VOLKENBURGH and Mrs. Edward Lauterbach are shown at the top. Below is Edward Lauterbach. He was once leader in politics, the law and finance, but his fall from wealth and influence has been almost as rapid as his ascension. His wife, to whom he attributed much of his early training for a career that was filled with success, divorced him—the first real downward step in his fall. Mrs. Van Volkenburgh, the "$10,000,000 widow," once his client, was reported in various circles as having played a part in the divorce won by Mrs. Lauterbach.

One-Time Leader of New York Republicans Presents a Pitiful Spectacle as He Tells of Relations With Wall St. Adventurer

Tells Senate Investigators That All of His Misdeeds Were Committed to Restore Other Man to Favor Among the Financiers

The story of a remarkable friendship existing between David Lamar, known as "the wolf of Wall Street" because of his subtly unscrupulous operations, and Edward Lauterbach, broken and discredited lawyer, is the net result of the week's investigation by the Senate Lobby Committee at Washington.

How Lamar posed as the emissary and spokesman of Senators and Congressmen, how he impersonated high Government officials in his conversations over the telephone to Wall Street operators, how he sought to frighten them into one concession and another by threat of proposed Congressional action—and all this not so much for his own gain as to demand recognition for his unfortunate lawyer friend, Lauterbach, he said—is the story.

Lamar long has been a figure of disrepute on Wall Street, and none knew this better than Lamar. Cynical, sarcastic, bitter, he told the Senate committee that he had been fighting to force Wall Street into recognition of himself and of his friend Lauterbach. He charged his Wall Street enemies with having circulated false reports about him. The substance of his confession was that he would drive them into the open by his impersonation of the powers at Washington.

Hatred for Ledyard.

The bitterest hatred of Lamar and Lauterbach was for Lewis Cass Ledyard, attorney for J. P. Morgan & Co. This was revealed on the witness stand when the two admitted having told Ledyard that they had held conferences with the Democratic leaders at Washington, including Senator Stone, Speaker Clark, Congressmen Riordan and Palmer.

"I determined to fix a game to force Ledyard into the open," declared Lamar, his voice shaking with emotion, "when I telephoned in the name of Congressman Palmer. For years men in Wall Street have been circulating stories of blackmail against us. Ledyard and his associates had ruined many men. I was determined that he should not ruin me."

On the stand Lauterbach saddled Lamar with the responsibility of most of the impersonations. Once Lauterbach went to see J. P. Morgan, bearing a resolution calling for an investigation of the Steel Trust by the House of Representatives. He declared that he did it to heal the breach between Morgan and Lamar.

"I thought if Mr. Morgan would ask Lamar to stop it, it would create good feeling between the two men," he said.

The figure of Edward Lauterbach, shrinking, timid, before the investigators, is the most remarkable thing of the week's revelations. Once Lauterbach held a position of power in politics. Of him had been written at one time:

"There is one man in New York at the present time who is, perhaps, entitled to more favors at the hands of his party than any other citizen of this State."

Once Republican Leader.

The paragraph was written of Edward Lauterbach in 1898 when he was a leader among the Republicans, a man of high place in the law, of weight in finance, a connoisseur of art, the owner of a home in the richest millionaire block in the world.

And then—

Consider Edward Lauterbach, cowering before the Lobby Investigating Committee at Washington, almost tearfully making the admission that he had lied to Lewis Cass Ledyard in an effort to get employment, and had lied by saying that he could hold out influence with Democrats, in a Democratic administration, that the corporations might profit by the weakness of the popular Representatives.

Such, in a fast, impressionistic outline, is the story of the fall of Edward Lauterbach, the eclipse of a

Singing Fish Keep Town From Sleep

Poetess Thinks Lonely Pout Are Calling Their Mates, but Others Call It Nuisance.

BELLEVUE, OHIO, July 12.—This town is all excited over certain singing fish which keep the villagers awake o' nights. These fish, a variety of bull pout, live in the subterranean streams which flow under the place, and, possibly becoming lonesome, come to the surface and sing.

Anyway, they gather at the surface of cisterns and quiet pools in the gathering dusk and chant in chorus what a prominent poetess of Bellevue calls a sweet, sad, haunting melody, which she likens to the moaning of night winds through lonely, brooding pines. But the citizens who are kept awake are beginning to cuss the gosh blamed noise

Farmers of Ozark Say That Express Companies Have Been Getting Half Their Revenue.

SPRINGDALE, ARK., July 12.—Moving the strawberry crop by parcel post may be undertaken by the growers of this and other berry growing districts next season. Efforts to obtain a special rate from the Government may be undertaken by the berry associations within a very short time.

It is asserted by association managers of the Southern Ozarks, whence formerly 1,000 to 1,500 cars of berries were marketed annually, the express companies and the commission houses have taken more than 50 per cent of the revenue from the berry crop.

'Death Merely Habit,' Says 'New Thinker'

PORTLAND, OREG., July 12—"There is no reason in the world why a person should ever die," declared Harry Gaze, editor of "Life Culture" and author of "How to Live Forever," at the annual convention of the National New Thought Alliance, in session here.

"'At 100 years,' he continued, 'a person should be better to look at, more fit to live, than he was at 40 years. Death is merely a habit.'"

LAUTERBACH IS PITIFUL FIGURE BEFORE INQUIRY

Former Republican Leader Quails as He Tells Investigators of Relations With Wall St. Wolf.

man of talent who rose from poverty to high place, only to lose his place and his fortune in the bog mire of finance and politics.

Associate of Lamar.

Lauterbach to-day presents the miserable spectacle of being arraigned as the working partner of David Lamar, a party to his schemes and the benefactor of the evil genius of the subtle "Wolf" whose snapping was directed at all men—except Lauterbach. And verily the friendship of the "Wolf" was more blighting than his enmity.

Out of the haze of obscurity came Lauterbach. His father was Solon Lauterbach; his mother Mina. He was born August 12, 1844, in New York. He went to the public schools, then to the College of the City of New York, whence he was graduated in 1864. He was admitted to the bar in 1866 and was first employed with the firm of Townsend, Dyett & Morrison. He progressed until in 1877 he became a member of the firm of Hoadley, Lauterbach & Johnson. Many important law cases [illegible] way. He grew rich.

He was a director in many corporations. At one time he was president of the Alabama Great Southern Railway, one of the chief links in the Southern System. In the Emigrant Aid Society, the Society for Ethical Culture, the Home for Aged and Infirm, the Hebrew Benevolent and Orphan Asylum, the Hebrew Technical Institute and many other organizations he was a worker and officer.

Was McKinley Partisan.

Lauterbach was one of the State's Big Four at the national convention that named McKinley at St. Louis. He was chairman of the Republican County Committee, and in 1898 was a candidate for the United States Senate to succeed Senator Murphy.

He became the right-hand man of Boss Platt, only to be sidetracked when he fought his chief, and Lemuel Ely Quigg was given the Lauterbach scepter. In all of the political events of his party and his time he had a part and a voice. He championed the cause of the Jews at all times, sought to relieve their oppression at home and abroad, and in many ways earned the gratitude of many people who will never forget his goodly acts in the mass condemnation he has brought upon self.

His Son's Death.

The decline set in during the year 1908 when Lauterbach's son, Alfred, was killed in an automobile accident while crossing a bridge in Westchester. Lauterbach had married, in his days of poverty, Amanda Friedman, who had saved a dot from the administration of her father's household expenses. She was a woman of grace in the days when she came to his home. To them were born four children: Mrs. Edith McDavitt, Mrs. Florence Hirschfield, Miss Alice Lauterbach and Alfred Lauterbach.

Shortly after the death of the son friends of the family heard that Lauterbach and his wife had separated and that the home at 761 Fifth Avenue no longer contained the pair.

It soon developed that the family split upon the question of suing the New Haven Road for killing the son. Upon the details of the suit the husband and wife quarreled and she finally filed suit for divorce, charging him with intimacy with women of questionable character, with cruelty and with failure to provide. That suit brought the beginning of the end to the Lauterbach career. Likewise it injected into the story the name of a woman who occupied high position and who was esteemed to possess millions.

What Wife Told.

The divorce was granted in 1911 and the court ordered the papers sealed. But the wife made public enough charges to make talk and to throw a new and strange light upon the career of the man she sued. She charged that she took him as an uncouth young man to whom her family objected; that she loaned him the money she had saved from her father's household; that she taught him the ways of polite society.

A year after the divorce Lauterbach indignantly denied that he had sustained friendly relations with Mrs. Philip Van Volkenburgh, widely known as the "$10,000,000 widow." Mrs. Van-Volkenburgh, who lived at the St. Regis, was being sued for a picture that Samuel J. Wolf, an artist, had painted. Lauterbach was a witness, and Alexander Strouse, counsel for the artist, asked Lauterbach to explain his relations with Mrs. Philip Van Volkenburgh.

Society papers toasted the lawyer for his defense, in heated fashion, of the woman of fashion and means. Later it was stated that Philip Van Volkenburgh had named Lauterbach in some way in a divorce suit he had filed in a double-barreled proceeding in which each of the Van Volkenburghs sued the other.

The truth concerning these matters was never made public.

Loses Ground Fast.

Lauterbach, in the meantime, was losing groung fast. He was no longer known as a factor in Republican politics. It was discovered that he had been one of the favored lawyers of the Wall Street element that held the Morgans and others. H. H. Rogers had employed him in a large matter, and he was esteemed to have an inside line of pull in the financial district. This hold, too, faded, and his friends did not understand the reason.

Now it has all come to the front, when Lauterbach, dragged by the collar into the light in connection with the Lamar exposure, was found to have been dropped by the financial forces because of his communion with familiar spirits of the Lamar brand, and with Lamar in particular.

With flushed face and bowed head, Lauterbach faced his tormentors as he sat before the Senate committee and had the chairman tear from him the last shred of his once great reputation.

The fall of Lauterbach is one of the distressing stories of real life that make men of real mental strength feel the emotions of pity and regret. Lifting himself from obscurity and poverty, he came to wealth and power. By his own hand he was pushed back from the eminence to which he climbed.

Weds Sixth Husband; Now Leads Daughter

Seventy-five-Year-Old Woman Starts New Marital Venture—Distances Goodwin and Hopper.

GRAND JUNCTION, COLO., July 12.—One more lap in the matrimonial race between Mrs. Dora Johnson-Davis - Howard-Steele-Jensen - Hill-Moore and her stepdaughter, Mrs. Grace Steele-Camron-Pruitt-Howard-Staley-Marquam, which has extended over the last twenty years, was completed recently in Long Beach, Cal., by the former, when she married G. A. Moore, her sixth husband.

Mrs. Moore, now 75 years old, so far as weddings are concerned, is one in the lead of Nat C. Goodwin and DeWolf Hopper.

Mrs. Marquam, the stepdaughter, is temporarily out of the running, for the courts have not yet freed her from Chester Ray Marquam, her fifth husband.

Insect Eggs Hatch After 17 Years' Wait

Kansas City Trees Filled With Pest of Locust Family—Noise Grows Daily.

KANSAS CITY, July 12.—That shrill, high-pitched, rasping chorus that has come from almost every tree in and around Kansas City the past few weeks and is growing each day in intensity is the noise of the cicada septendecim, wrongly known as the seventeen-year locust.

A brood of this fellow is hatching out this year in Western Missouri and Eastern Kansas, and hardly a tree in all that territory is without his song.

But the insects that are singing in the trees this summer are not locusts at all, and they do not eat the foliage of trees or any green thing, although they do considerable damage to trees.

The eggs which bore the countless billions of the brood that is appearing now were laid in the summer of 1896 in twigs.

Rats Catch Leeches, Fishing With Tails

Barber's Supply of Blood Suckers Is Mysteriously Drained—Rodents Show Skill as Anglers.

SHARON, PA., July 12.—When John Ephraim & Son stocked their jar with a fresh lot of Viennese leeches, they did not intend to give the rats a meal, but to treat such patrons of their barber shop as might have black eyes or the gout.

The rats saw the leeches and laid their plans. Seventy-two leeches disappeared in three nights. This is the way they went, according to an eyewitness. At night a rat with a long tail fished in the leech jar, having first cleared away the paper covering.

Seeing the tail dangling in the water, the leeches attached themselves to it. When the rat was ready, he pulled out his tail and the rats feasted.

in his dotage of more than threescore and ten years and practically forced him to marry her, and hinting at something mysterious in his death so soon after that marriage. Testimony in that suit is now being heard before J. A. Anderson, acting as auditor of the estate for the court.

The thirteen contesting heirs are M. T. Byrd, Mrs. C. B. Cash, V. A. Prater, C. Z. Crawford, C. W. Walton, Mrs. R. Adeline Crawford, J. F. Cornett, Mrs. G. A. Thurmond, Mrs. Fannie Cornett, Mrs. Nannie Moore, J. H. Harris, John F. Harris and M. C. Crawford. George Crawford, for his minor children, and Lula Miller are fighting this suit with the second Mrs. Crawford, seeking to sustain the settlement previously agreed upon.

Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, the second wife, is a native of Pennsylvania. She was formerly Mrs. Mary Belle Savage. She lived at Uniontown and later at Pittsburg. A few years ago she came South, going to St. Augustine, where she opened a boarding house for winter tourists and health seekers visiting the Florida city.

Early in 1909 Crawford, accompanied by his niece, Lula Miller, went to Augustine for his health. They stopped at Mrs. Savage's boarding house. After a few weeks in St. Augustine, they returned to Atlanta. Then Crawford confided to J. J. Barge, his attorney and named in his will as executor of his estate, that he was going to marry Mrs. Savage just as soon as she could close out her business in St. Augustine.

Death Followed in Month.

The wedding took place a few days later. Crawford's death followed about a month later. His body was taken to his old home in Carroll County and was buried beside his first wife's grave. He had erected a stone to mark both graves, marking it with the names of himself and wife, the dates of birth and the date of his wife's death, leaving only the date of his own death to be added.

The contests over the estate soon followed and have never ended.

County Without Bible Will Obtain One Free

Commonwealth Finds It Possesses No Copy of Scriptures When Book Is Needed in Court.

WILKESBARRE, PA., July 12.—While boasting of a $2,000,000 courthouse and of being one of the wealthiest counties in the State, Luzerne County has no Bible which it can call its own.

This fact came to light recently when the court wanted a Bible for use in a trial. The courthouse was searched from cellar to garret, but no Bible could be found.

No order for a Bible has been placed since that time, and now the county has been put to shame by the Bible class of the Sixth Ward of Edwardsville, which has raised sufficient money by public subscription to buy a suitable Bible for the county.

Perfect Policeman Joins Boston Force

New Patrolman Makes 100 Mark on All Tests—Doesn't Smoke, Drink, or Swear.

BOSTON, July 12.—A policeman who neither drinks, smokes nor swears, and incidentally boasts of a thousand other unusual virtues, has been added to the police force of this city. It is the first time Boston has had a perfect policeman, an officer who scores 100 points in every department of policed estrability, according to the examination tests.

He is William McLaught, for two years a hoseman attached to Engine No. 26 in Charlestown. McLaught surprised the examining officials when he scored 100 per cent in the strength, balance and health trials of the civil service test.

SWIFT CLEARED BY JURY OF BAD MEAT CHARGE

Americus Investigators Return 'No Bill' Against Chicago Packers After Clean-Up Campaign.

AMERICUS, July 12.—Because there was insufficient evidence on which to base an indictment, the Sumter County Grand Jury, in special session, has returned a "no bill" against the local agent of Swift & Co., the big Chicago meat packers.

Charges were recently preferred against the agent of Swift & Co. by City Physician Chambliss and State Food Inspector Methvin, following a rigid inspection of meat markets, slaughter pens and grocery stores of Americus.

They condemned a quantity of meat and some live stock as being unfit. Some of the meat markets and slaughter pens were ordered closed and others were ordered cleaned and otherwise improved for the more sanitary handling of their wares.

Because of the large volume of business done by Swift & Co. in Americus and vicinity through the local distributing plant the impression prevailed that some of the tainted meat had been supplied by this concern. However, when the Grand Jury heard the evidence it was found that Swift & Co. had not either intentionally or unintentionally furnished such meat and the charges against the local agent were dismissed with a "no bill" indorsement by the Grand Jurors.

City Physician Chambliss is still active in his campaign against impure foods, having this week condemned a carload of watermelons, after several persons who had partaken of the fruit became ill. These were termed "bitter melons," the sale of which is prohibited by the State pure food laws. They came from a South Georgia truck farm.

3 Chicken Freaks Are Born in 10 Days

Naked Leghorn, Horned Rhode Island Red, and Whistling "Biddy" All on One Farm.

EVERETT, WASH., July 12.—Jay Sigworth, a poultry fancier, is the possessor of three barnyard freaks, hatched within ten days, and is wondering what new creation his chickens will spring on him. He defies even Winsted, Conn., to beat the following combination:

A White Leghorn hen hatched one chick which runs about as naked as a lizard. A Rhode Island chick has a well defined horn protruding from near the tip of its beak.

Another chick refuses to "peep" as a proper chick should and takes great delight in its talent for whistling. It will stand apart from its mates and whistle a distinct note, lasting about twelve seconds.

Boy Takes Rattler For His Playmate

Brings Serpent in House and Is Not Hurt by Experience With Snake.

BELLEVUE, FLA., July 12.—J. H. Maxwell, Jr., two-year-old son of J. H. Maxwell, of this place, is alive and playing just as usual to-day despite the fact that he had as a playmate for a few minutes yesterday a rattlesnake which he picked up in the yard of his father's home.

The little fellow came running into the house with the snake in his hand, laughing at his find. The snake was wriggling and attempting to strike him when his father seized and killed it.

Poor Roads Called Cause of Illiteracy

President of Association Says Good Schools Will Come With Improved Highways.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 12.—Illiteracy is caused chiefly by poor roads, according to Charles H. Davis, president of the National Highway Association, in an address before the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education at its twenty-first annual convention.

"We can not have good schools, unless we have good roads," he said.

Albert Ross Hill, president of the University of Missouri, arraigned the State Legislature, alleging that their false economy crippled the State universities.

Wife Elopes to Fill Role of Life Saver

Writes Husband She Left With Admirer to Keep Him From Slaying Himself.

NEW YORK, July 12.—James Stevens, of Ashburton Avenue, Yonkers, received a note yesterday from his wife Sarah, explaining that she had eloped with James Barber to save the man's life.

Barber, so she said, became so infatuated with her that he threatened to kill himself unless she fled with him. He even showed her a revolver, so she agreed to go to order to prevent a tragedy. Stevens has asked the police to find her.

TOWN GETS ITS MAIL BY STAGE ALWAYS WEEK LATE

SALEM, July 12.—"Mail is always a week behind where I live," said Charles E. Oliver, County School Superintendent of Lake County, who is here in connection with the examination of public school teachers. "There is a school at Butte, near Wagontire Mountain, that probably has the poorest mail service in the United States.

"The mail, no matter if sent from Lakeview, the county seat, goes first to Salt Lake City or Reno, Nev., and then through a roundabout way, filters into the Oregon town. It is transported a considerable distance by stage.

President and Mrs. Wilson have followed the fashion set by Prince Ernest August of Cumberland and Princess Victoria Louise, who appeared frequently in the streets of Berlin before their marriage walking hand in hand. The President and Mrs. Wilson are here shown taking a hand-in-hand stroll at the summer capital at Cornish, N. H. In the lower picture the President, Miss Eleanor Wilson and Mrs. Wilson are enjoying an auto ride through the New Hampshire hills.

Girl Runs Foundry as Father Breaks Down

Daughter for Six Years After Parent's Health Failed Assumed Executive Duties of Business.

GREAT FALLS, MONT., July 12.—The directing force of the Great Falls Iron Works is a woman—Miss N. Cerula Woodbury. On the company's official roster she is designated as secretary-treasurer, but as the daughter of L. S. Woodbury, president of the company, she has for six years assumed the duties and responsibilities of her father, who has been in failing health and has passed most of his time in travel.

Miss Woodbury is at the office each day and keeps in close touch with all departments of the business.

Greek Theater To Seat 10,000 Planned

California Man Wants to Have Massive Structure Ready for Christmas Day Performance.

LOS ANGELES, July 12.—A Greek theater of concrete, with stage of classic lines, with concentric rings of concrete for tiers of seats rising higher and higher, that will accommodate 10,000 persons, will be built by Colonel Griffith J. Griffith, in Vermont Canyon, Griffith Park, Hollywood, and will be presented to the city.

"I hope to have the stage and enough of the theater completed by Christmas to seat 10,000 or 15,000 people," said Colonel Griffith, "so that a celebration may be held there Christmas day."

RECOVERS $380 FOR HIS WORK AS FATHER-IN-LAW

BOZEMAN, MONT., July 12.—J. E. McCallum was awarded $380 by the jury in the District Court as wages alleged to be due him for his services as father-in-law in the household of Geo. Taylor, his son-in-law, recently separated from his wife.

McCallum asked for this sum alleging that the work he had done in the house of his son-in-law, helping with the washing, dishes, etc., was worthy of payment.

The jury decided, after hearing the testimony, that the old man's efforts demanded more than mere board and room, and gave the plaintiff all he asked for.

Wins Suit for $100 He Bet on Marriage

Bridegroom Wagered He Would Wed in Year When Taker Backed, He Resorted to Court.

WELCH, W. VA., July 12.—One of the most unusual civil suits in the history of the State was decided here when Dr. J. L. Sameth was awarded $100, with interest for a year, against George D. Kendrick. During the latter part of the year 1911, during a conversation about matrimony, Kendrick told Dr. Sameth he would give him $100 if he married before January 1. From time to time Dr. Sameth asked Kendrick for the money, but the latter always declared it a joke. Dr. Sameth entered suit and won.

Ministers Snub Evangelist Sunday

New Bedford Preachers Decide Not to Invite the Former Baseball Player.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS., July 12.—Protestant ministers of New Bedford, after discussing Billy Sunday, the evangelist, in frank fashion, at their annual Cuttyhunk outing, voted unanimously not to invite Sunday to conduct revivals here, as had been planned.

The chief objections advanced were that Sunday requires Protestant churches to abandon all but their Sunday School services during his stay, and that the expense would be very heavy.

But there was also discussion as to Sunday's preachings and as to his motives. Appropriately enough—since Sunday played big league ball once upon a time, the ministers took a recess and played a game themselves before coming to their final decision. A letter from Sunday was read at the meeting.

FRANK JAMES SPENDING LAST YEARS AT HOME

Former Famous Bandit Traced Back to Missouri Farm Where Brother Jesse Is Buried.

DENVER, July 12.—Within the last few months there have come many stories regarding Frank James, the one-time bandit. Frank James has died in Oregon, California and a few other States, he has "gotten religion" in the East, and he has been active generally. And the queer part about it is that he is alive and in good health, and is spending his last days on the old James farm a few miles from Kearney, Mo., where Jesse James is buried.

Brings Citizens' Statement.

This is the information that is brought to Denver by L. Wright, a motion picture proprietor, who recently made a visit to the farm in Missouri. When he returned he brought a statement with him, signed by various citizens of Kearney, and which reads as follows:

To Whom It May Concern:

This is to certify that we, the following citizens of Kearney, Clay County, Missouri, hereby affirm that we are personally acquainted with the original Frank James, brother of Jesse James, and that he is now enjoying good health and is living on the old James homestead about three miles northeast of this city, and we furthermore state that he is an honored and respected citizen of this community.

"I went back to get Mr. James' opinion regarding law and order," Mr. Wright said. "I am the proprietor of a set of Jesse James pictures and I had received the criticism that they were not moral. I contended exactly the opposite—that they showed the bad effects of a life of crime. So I went back to get some expression from Frank James on it. He told me this.

James Maintains Innocence.

"If anyone thinks he can violate the law and make a success of it, I consider him insane, and his finish will be the gallows or the penitentiary.'"

Frank James contends that he was innocent of all the charges of outlawry placed against him. He points to his acquittal as evidence.

RELIGIOUS WAR SAVES NARCOTIC FOR REDSKINS

United States Senate Permits Indians to Use Peyote When Told It Makes Them Peaceful.

By SIDNEY ESPEY.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—The United States Senate recently was caught between two warring religious factions and diplomatically settled the dispdute by doing nothing. Therefore does the Indian continue the use of peyote, a narcotic of most peculiar properties.

It was urged by several missionaries and others bent on reforming the Indians that the use of peyote, a furry, dried button gathered from a Mexican plant, bred a habit similar to that which users of cocaine and morphine acquire. None of the missionaries gave the Senate Indian Committee first-hand information regarding this, and as it was vigorously disputed by Indians the Senate struck from the Indian appropriation bill a provision that a part of the appropriation for the suppression of the liquor traffic should also be devoted to stamping out the peyote habit.

Indians Defend Peyote.

Indians who wrote to the committee declared that the peyote is not a habit-maker and that, instead, it has induced a frame of mind among Indians which accords well with the governmental policy to make the Indians self-supporting and able to care for the vast properties which the Government now holds for them in trust.

Washington, excepting Indian reservations themselves, is perhaps the greatest Indian center in the United States. There are three or four hotels along the lower part of Pennsylvania Avenue, which in days past were aristocratic hostelries, where the barbaric brilliance of Indian costume may be seen almost any day.

Some wear blankets of varied colors, some adopt the habiliments of the white man, except that their garb is a riot of color that would make Senator James Hamilton Lewis look like a monotone in water color.

But whatever their garb, Poor Lo gets out among the Congressmen. And there he seems to have done a nifty job of lobbying in favor of peyote.

Narcotic Effect Slow.

Last winter a group of Indians visited a Congressman and brought with them a pocket full of peyote. They described its effects. The peyote is either chewed or is steeped and the liquor is then drunk. The narcotic effect is slow. One must take at least a whole night to get the benefit of a peyote spree.

But instead of inflaming the imagination and prompting the Indian to deeds of violence, it has an effect quite opposite. Instead the peyote user becomes introspective, considers his relations to his fellow men, weighs the wrongs he has inflicted on others and acquires, for the time being, at least, an altruistic philosophy quite at variance with the general tendency of Indians.

Nor, according to what this group of Indians told the Congressman, does the effect pass away with the recovery from the narcotic effects of the peyote. The dreamer awakes, but he retains for a time his humility of spirit and his wish to be of some value to his fellow men instead of an incumbrance. So eloquent, in fact, was the description that the particular Congressman decided that a treatment of peyote might not be bad for him. So the Indians left a few buttons and departed.

CHURCH WINS PROPERTY AFTER 48 YEARS LITIGATION

SALEM, OREG., July 12.—After court proceedings for 48 years, the Society of Sisters of the Holy Name of Jesus and Mary have undisputed possession of the property on which is located the Catholic school. Circuit Judge Galloway has granted an order quieting the title to the property.

The property was donated to the society in 1865, and has been used by it since.

About fifty persons, with Edward Davignon as principal, were interested in the suit.

PAGE BRANDED FOE OF SOUTH BY MAGAZINE

Ambassador in Novel Declares Himself Ashamed of Native Section.

SCOFFS OLD CONFEDERATES

Diplomat Finds No Objection to Marriage of Mulattoes and Whites, Article Asserts.

Aroused over statements Walter H. Page, Ambassador to the Court of St. James, made in his book, "The Southerners," in which it is declared he abused and derided Southerners through a false portrayal of them, the editors of Neale's Magazine in their July issue question Mr. Page's ability to represent the American people. The sharp criticism of the Ambassador, who is a native of the South, is the first offering in the publication and is entitled "Ambassador Page No Southerner."

The novel "The Southerners" first appeared as a serial in the Atlantic Monthly, and was written by Mr. Page under the pseudonym of "Nicholas Worth. Besides the review of the book there is editorial comment in Neale's Magazine questioning Mr. Page's Americanism, one paragraph of which reads:

"But Ambassador Page seems to hold the American section in which he was born and reared—a section that comprises about one-fourth the area and nearly one-fourth of the population of the United States—to be un-American because sectional. We are all Americans—unless Mr. Page be an exception—and worthier Americans because of our affection for the ward, borough, city, county and State in which we live."

Looked Down on By All.

Some of the criticisms of Mr. Page in the review of his book follow:

"We found that Nicholas Worth, the professed author of the book, was a man whose environment in the South had evidently been among persons who were not recognized in that section as typical—in fact, who had no social recognition whatever, but who lived to themselves and were looked down upon by whites and blacks alike.

"There are scenes in this book that are so coarse that we will not bring them into this review. It is sufficient to say that they were used to vilify the white race.

"Nicholas Worth and his kind never stood socially high in the South; he was no gentleman; his associates were not gentlemen; his antecedents had a defective sense of the difference that exists between right and wrong.

"Nicholas Worth holds Confederate veterans in utter contempt, and throughout his book Confederates are roundly abused, and he also abuses their organization and other Southern patriotic bodies, such as the Daughters of the Confederacy. Nicholas Worth denies that there was any intellectuality among the women of the South. He frequently speaks of the lack of culture of all the people among whom he was reared.

Ashamed of Section.

"Nicholas Worth, the Southerner, is ashamed of being a Southerner. He holds that there is no negro social problem. He does not find objectionable the marriage of a mulatto girl to a white man. He meets the negro woman on the terms of equality.

"He says that he found his 'intellectual emancipation' at Harvard. He does not seem ever to have been in any sort of home in the South—unless in the home of some negro; or, should we say that he seemed quite 'at home' when among negroes?

"Throughout the book Nicholas Worth continually dwells on his intellectual superiority to the people of the section where he was born. He praises his own scholarship as if amazed that a skull so small as his had the capacity for storing away so much erudition. As an evidence of his extraordinary knowledge, he says: 'Yet not a man or women who alluded to 'scholarly diversion' knew even the Greek alphabet, nor (sic) had any desire to learn it.

"The book now becomes important because of Mr. Page's position as the Ambassador of all the American people to Great Britain. In London the book is being hailed as a true expression of the South, for Mr. Page was born in the South, and they naturally suppose that a Southern President appointing a man of Southern birth has appointed a representative Southerner."

FARM HAND WINS $5 BY CARRYING CALF 2 MILES

MARTINETTE, WIS., July 12.—To win the value of the animal, $5, John Gross, a farm hand for Henry Dworak, Casco, Wis., carried a calf, weighing 122 pounds, two miles without putting the calf down.

Dworak told Gross to harness a team to take the calf to town. The farm hand said he would not harness a team for such a little load and that he could carry the calf to town.

Dworak then told him he could have the price the calf brought for veal if he performed the feat.

Adele Ritchie's Husband Scored First Wife Calls Him a Bigamist Pledges Life to Punishing Him

Adele Ritchie, the celebrated musical comedy actress, is seen in the upper picture, while below is Mrs. C. N. Bell No. 1, who charges that Miss Ritchie's new husband is a bigamist.

Mrs. C. N. Bell Declares She Was Left Friendless and Penniless to Starve in England.

Special Cable to The American.

LIVERPOOL, July 12.—Ill, practically penniless, dependent on the charity of an humble Liverpool shopkeeper, Mrs. Charles Nelson Bell, wife of the wealthy wine agent of New York who married Adele Ritchie, the musical comedy star, a few weeks ago, to-day told a pitiful story of how she had been left friendless in England to starve by her husband. She further declared that he had never obtained a divorce and asserted that she would not rest until she had raised enough money to return to the United States and prosecute him for the bigamy she declares he is guilty of.

Bell, the son of a banker of Asbury Park, and Adele Ritchie were married quietly a few weeks ago. At the time of the nuptials Miss Ritchie announced that she was marrying for money and her husband knew it.

Mrs. Bell says she was served with notice of divorce proceedings, but they were withdrawn after she had refused an offer of $750 to let the suit go uncontested.

"Such a proposal was a degrading insult," said Mrs. Bell, who wept as she told of her plight. "Starvation is agony, but I would rather starve to death a hundred times than to sell my good name, my reputation.

"Next I heard of my husband's marriage to Adele Ritchie—to her, of all women. I might have forgiven his cruelty, but now I shall punish him as he deserves, if there be justice left in America—if a law against bigamy exists there still.

Mrs. Bell was found at No. 38 St. Paul's Road, Seacombe, Cheshire, a suburb of Liverpool. She was once a model for Charles Dana Gibson. She is only twenty-eight years old.

She said falteringly as her feelings mastered her:

"I married Charles Nelson Bell September 21, 1906, at the Episcopal Church at Fort Hamilton, New York City. My maiden name was Louise McNaughton and my mother now lives at No. 101 Bay Thirty-fourth Street, Bensonhurst.

"Ours was a runaway marriage. My mother strongly objected to Mr. Bell. I loved him, but was soon disillusioned.

Sent Her to Europe.

"It is true that he gave me what is called 'a good time.' We lived at a good hotel, but I quickly realized that so far from being the sole object of my husband's affections I was only one among many.

"My husband sent me to England in May, 1911; he came to the pier, bid me bon voyage, loaded me with flowers and fruit, and sent me off happier than I had been for months, believing he loved me. I was sorry for the separation.

"Time drifted on and he was always making pretexts for me to stay here. One was that he had entered a new business and was head over heels in work. But weekly remittances arrived regularly. His letters were most affectionate, so I was not worried. Eventually I got homesick and wrote telling him so. He replied on May 31, 1912, that he was cabling me passage money.

"That is the last I heard from him. No letter arrived for the next few weeks, so I cabled. Still there was no reply. My money gave out; the hotel manager, who had been very forbearing, told me I must give up my room and my baggage because my bill was not paid.

"I stepped into the street with just a few shillings in my pocket and with nothing but the clothes I wore. I asked Mrs. Heaton, a shopkeeper, if she would lodge me for a short time until my remittance arrived. She did so, but I was penniless by then and, unwilling to acquaint her with my predicament, I went out at meal times and walked the streets starving.

"Mrs. Heaton finally discovered this and insisted on feeding me. She also got me a situation as a lady's help.

"Then suddenly last August someone served me with divorce papers. The shock made me ill. It seems that my husband had gone to Chicago and filed suit on the grounds of desertion, while I had been suffering awful privations here, unable to get money or even a letter from him or to return to America.

"Plainly, Mr. Bell thought the suit would be defended. I swore it would be.

"I went to the American Consul at Liverpool, but was merely shown the door. They told me if they had to assist every American in distress they would have a fine time.

"I then found a kind lawyer in Liverpool who came to my aid. He instructed Ferguson & Goodnow, lawyers, of State Street, Chicago, to defend my case.

"Immediately the defense was filed. I am informed that Bell dropped the case. Then, through my lawyers, knowing me to be penniless, he offered me $750 to allow the case to go through undefended. I refused and asked Ferguson & Goodnow to sue Mr. Bell for maintenance. They replied that Mr. Bell had left Chicago and they were unable to proceed."

GIRL MASKED AS DOCTOR CAUSES THRILL AT BALL

Kisses Pretty Married Woman, Who Cries for Husband, but He Is Disguised as Woman.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 12.—A comedy of errors was staged aboard the Pacific Mail steamer Nile. Miss Gene Yarborough, clothed in the uniform of the ship's surgeon, played the principal role and, for a time, had the passengers guessing and almost caused a domestic tragedy.

One day out of Honolulu the passengers held a masquerade ball to relieve the tedium of the voyage, and the outcome far exceeded the most optimistic expectations. That this was so was due in a great measure to Miss Yarborough.

While everybody on board was having a glorious time and the fun was waxing fast and furious, two maskers, one attired in Miss Yarborough's Japanese kimono and the other in the uniform of the Nile's doctor, entered the saloon and were the liveliest in the fun.

"Doctor" Dances Divinely.

The doctor danced divinely, and lacked not for partners. Little actions on the part of the physician, however, caused frowns on the brows of many of his fair partners. Squeezes of the hands and unnecessary pressure about the waists caused many to wonder at the liberties. Several were openly kissed. Some of the married women objected, but there were several who did not.

Then the doctor asked to dance with Mrs. R. E. Purinton, wife of a Government teacher of Osaka. While the two glided over the floor of the saloon Mrs. Purinton was gathered in the doctor's arms and a resounding kiss was planted on her lips. She screamed and immediately demanded that her husband be sent for.

Husband Is Missing.

A search was instituted, but no trace of Purinton could be found. Then the indignant passengers proceeded to snatch the mask from the face of the surgeon.

As the disguise came off a peal of laughter rang out, and Miss Yarborough was revealed.

The question arose concerning the identity of the passenger in the kimono, and Purinton was discovered. A plot had been hatched between the two, and Miss Yarborough had entered heartily into the spirit of the thing. Their farce met with far more success than either had dreamed of. The entire difficulty was quickly adjusted, however, and the ball was resumed with greater merriment than before.

Miss Yarborough has her home with her mother at 2158 Sutter Street, and has ben touring the Orient with the Anglo-American players, presenting American comedies.

Jap Baby Baptized With American Flag

Stars and Stripes and Bible Used to Consecrate Boy to Patriotism and Piety.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 12.—A year ago Roy T. Masuda, a native of Japan, and Miss Mena Gilbertson, a Minnesota girl, were married by Rev. G. L. Morrill. Their two-month-old boy, George Washington Masuda, was consecrated, Rev. Mr. Morrill officiating.

The service is said to have been unique. Mr. Morrill formerly was a Baptist minister and does not approve of sprinkling as a form of baptism, and the baby was too young for immersion. The parents were anxious not only that the child receive some form of baptism and they also were firm in their desire that Rev. Mr. Morrill perform the ceremony. Hence, a compromise was agreed upon.

The boy was consecrated, the minister using the Bible and an American flag in the ceremony, pledging the father and mother to teach the youngster patriotism and piety.

Town Seeks in Vain For Man for Mayor

Political Parties Offer Place to Several, but Each of Them Refuses the Nomination.

BOONVILLE, IND., July 12.—Political parties of Boonville are experiencing much trouble to find availables to make the race for city offices in the coming elections.

The office of Mayor, to be vacated by Dr. T. D. Scales, is one particularly begging. On the expiration of his term Dr. Scales, it is understood, will be appointed on the State Board of Tax Commissioners by Governor Ralston.

Louis Kinderman, a hardware dealer; Henry Maurer, a department store owner, and Philip Lutz, Jr., an attorney, are suggested for the Democratic nomination, but each refuses to become a candidate. Jasper H. Thornburg, Councilman, is suggested for the Republican nomination.

Children Will Be Taught How to Lose

Town Employs Playmaster Who Will Attempt to Engender Better Spirit of Sportmanship.

CHICAGO, July 12.—Henry F. Kallenberg has just been appointed official playmaster to the children of River Forest, a suburb. Besides teaching them how to play, one of the important duties of the position will be to show young Americans how to be good losers, which they are not, he says.

"The American baseball fan is a bad loser, because his education in sportsmanship has been sadly neglected," the playmaster told members of the village board of River Forest.

"His interest in baseball can be traced back to the corner lot game, where he spent 40 minutes of every hour in arguing and 20 minutes playing ball."

MINNESOTA BARS SALE OF CIGARETTES ON TRAINS

ST. PAUL, July 12.—Cigarettes can not be sold on trains in Minnesota, according to an opinion given by the State Attorney General's office.

A law adopted at the last session of the Legislature provided for the sale of cigarettes by licensed dealers. The Attorney General's office says the law provides for the sale of cigarettes only at one place and in a definite municipality, which conditions are violated by trains.

GIRL DESERTS CHAUFFEUR SHE WEDS ON LARK

Banker's Daughter, in Tears, Tells of Escapade When Confronted With Marriage License.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Helen Anna Dowsey, 16 years old, a daughter of Dr. George H. Dowsey, former president of the First National Bank of Great Neck, L. I., was married secretly Wednesday afternoon to George Lephardt, 22 years old, a chauffeur, of 22 Ash Street, Flushing. Dr. Dowsey learned of the elopement yesterday afternoon in an unusual manner.

When a reporter called at the Dowsey home Dr. Dowsey refused to believe that his daughter was married. He insisted there must be a confusion of names, as his daughter was at home the night before as usual.

Denies She Is Bride.

When he called the young woman she laughingly agreed her father was correct, and denied she was a bride. When a copy of the marriage license, returned to the City Clerk by the officiating clergyman, was displayed, she broke down, wept and confessed she had been married to Lephardt.

Because of the bride's age Dr. Dowsey at first declared he would call upon the District Attorney to proceed against the bridegroom. Later his brother, James Dowsey, a lawyer, stated that only action to annul the marriage would be taken by the young woman's family.

Through her tears, Mrs. Lephardt explained she had viewed the wedding more as a lark than otherwise, as she had been assured by members of the wedding party that inasmuch as she was not of age, she could have it annulled later if she so desired. She returned home on Wednesday afternoon, within an hour after the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Raymond L. Forman in the parsonage of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Flushing.

Chauffeur Awaits Her.

The couple, accompanied by a brother of the bridegroom and a young woman whom the bride said she had never met before and whose name she could not remember, went directly to the clergyman from the City Clerk's office in Long Island City. They had met earlier in the day in Port Washington, where Miss Dowsey had told her family she was going to visit friends, but where Lephardt and the others were waiting for her with an automobile.

When applying for the license, she gave her age as 18 years and her residence at 22 Ash Street, Flushing, the home of the bridegroom. After the ceremony the bride was driven to her home.

To her father Mrs. Lephardt said she first met Lephardt when he was employed as a chauffeur by a resident of Great Neck. Dr. Dowsey and Miss Ethel Dowsey, the sister of the young bride, did not recall ever having seen him.

TWO HAIRCUTS FOR NICKEL SAVE MONEY FOR STATE

LINCOLN, NEBR., July 12.—Superintendent R. V. Clark, of the State Industrial School, has evolved plans for saving the State money. A voucher received from that institution shows that for forty-six hair cuts given to inmates of his school, Superintendent Clark paid the sum of $1.15—at the rate of two for a nickel.

BANK ROBBER LOCAL FAVORITE; HIS DUAL ROLE

Young Man Who Held Up Cashier of Oregon Institution Read Cheap Novels on the Sly.

FOUND IN A LONELY CABIN

Hunt on for Desperado Who Had Won Golden Opinions From All His Acquaintances.

ROSEBURG, OREG., July 12.—Ray Diamond, the youthful desperado who held up Cashier Smith, of the Glendale State Bank, and secured $2,800 in money, lived a dual life, according to detectives who have been trying to capture him.

Diamond lived in Glendale five years, and conducted himself in a manner which won for him the esteem of his acquaintances. He was industrious and worked steadily.

He was welcomed in the best social circles in this district. Only a few weeks ago he played the leading part in a home talent play, for which he received high commendation. He was an Odd Fellow, while the cashier he held up was the Noble Grand of his lodge.

Young Diamond did not drink, he was quiet and unassuming and talked little. He loved literature and was familiar with the works of the best authors. He was well versed on current events, and was a conversationalist of more than ordinary intelligence.

Has Refined Features.

In all, Diamond's outward life suggested nothing that would indicate that he was desperate and that he would ransack a bank. On the contrary, his features indicated refinement.

There was another side to Diamond's life, however, which was only known to himself. While a reader of heavy literature, Diamond also read much of notorious character, including John Tornow, the Washington desperado, and Harry Tracy, the Oregon outlaw. It is believed he learned to admire these men, and was fascinated by the possibility of himself gaining notoriety for daring.

In the sleeping room of a lonely cabin on the outskirts of Glendale were found hundreds of papers and books, the pages of which were filled with thrilling scenes.

Indications are that when finally the time came for his adventure he laid his plans carefully. He probably recalled the expression of Tracy that "any fool could rob a bank, but there were few who could get away."

Purchasing supplies, Diamond carried them to a point somewhere in the dense timber within a few miles of Glendale, and waited the chance to enter the bank in true desperado style.

A Society Bandit.

That Diamond was planning the hold-up and robbery at the very time he participated in home talent plays and mingled with Glendale's best society the officers say there can be no doubt.

Even the bank officials speak in high terms of Diamond's past life, and are unable to give a satisfactory explanation of his crime. He had $400 of his own money and consequently was not driven to desperation through lack of funds.

Cashier Smith, the victim of the hold-up, says he knew Diamond well, and would have been no more surprised had any of Glendale's merchants committed the act.

Diamond may emerge from the mountain districts in the vicinity of Grants Pass or may continue on his way down the coast to Crescent City, where he could leave the country by boat.

Woman Own Lawyer In Divorce Hearing

Takes Advantage of Statute Permitting One Party in Action to Plead Case Personally.

LITTLE ROCK, July 12.—Mrs. Mary B. Corney, plaintiff in one of the best-known divorce cases ever in the Arkansas courts, appeared as her own attorney in the hearing in the Supreme Court.

Though she had not studied law, Mrs. Corney was permitted to make her arguments under the section of the Constitution which permits one of the parties in an action at law to be heard.

The Corney case is one of the most noted of West Arkansas. Dr. Corney, now a resident of Little Rock, was married to Mrs. Corney in New York and later moved to VanBuren. The divorce proceedings which started there, have volumes of court reports.

Party in Alaska Is Being Shown Country's Resources by Chief of U. S. Experiment Station.

SITKA, ALASKA, July 12.—The 112 tourists being conducted on an 8,000-mile trip through Alaska by the Seattle Chamber of Commerce arrived here today, and were shown over the Government experiment station by Professor Georgeson. Seth Mann, of San Francisco, representing President Wilson, is taking active interest, and acquiring intimate knowledge of the country's resources and possibilities for his report to Washington.

Mourned as Dead, Reads Own Obituary

Man Reported Killed in Mexico by Rebels Suddenly Reappears in His California Home.

CHICO, CAL., July 12.—Tim Aubrey, who married a prominent Chico girl a year ago, and left for Mexico soon afterward, returned last night and read his own obituary in the local papers.

A word was received here several weeks ago that he had been killed by rebels and he was mourned as dead.

His unexpected appearance created a sensation here last night.

Law Perils Loveliest Limb Display Council Would Drape Its Glories And World's Shapeliest Are Billed

At the top is shown Mlle. Spinelli, who Paris says owns the most beautiful nether limbs, while below are Rena Wandell and Marjorie Beverelly, her foremost American rivals.

Mlle. Spinelli Is on Her Way to America, and Follies Are Traveling.

Atlanta, it seems, will lose the opportunity it might have had to view the most delectable attractions that the American stage of next season will offer.

For one thing, Mlle. Spinelli is coming to America in vaudeville, and probably to Atlanta. And Mlle. Spinelli, be it known, is the reigning sensation of Paris, dear, discriminating Paris, because, besides her winsomeness and charm, she is said to possess the most artistic and perfectly shaped legs in all Europe.

Everyone Knows Ziegfeld's Specialty.

And then Ziegfeld's Follies already has started its 1913 tour, with Atlanta booked along the route. All the world and his brother knows that Florenz Ziegfeld is a connoisseur of feminine beauty, particularly that variety of beauty that is displayed to best advantage by a costume of tights and abbreviated skirts. In the Follies of 1913 especially are two young women, Rena Wandell and Marjorie Beverelly, who are said to possess the most artistic and perfectly shaped nether limbs in all America.

In the theatrical world the legs of Spinelli and those of Ziegfeld's Follies' cast have come to be regarded as contestants for the crown of beauty. At some time a decision must be made now that both parties to the contest are in Atlanta. Atlanta might have had an opportunity to judge, but—

But There's Boynton.

George M. Boynton, of the City Council of Atlanta, has presented to that body a resolution asking for an ordinance prohibiting the appearance of girls wearing tights or too short or scant dresses in theaters. The reporters who record the news and views of the Council are ready to prophesy the passage of the ordinance. If they are correct, then it means that Atlanta's most promising stage features of the 1913 season might as well be canceled.

For a Ziegfeld show decorously clad is no Ziegfeld show at all, and Spinelli with her artistic legs sheathed is a glory veiled.

Husband Enjoined From Killing Wife

Woman Enters Suit for Divorce and Then Obtains Restraining Order to Prevent Slaying.

HUNTINGTON, W. VA., July 12.—Mrs. Bertha A. Nigh, after filing a suit for divorce in the Circuit Court, applied to Judge Graham for an injunction that would restrain her husband from "murdering her."

After listening to the woman's story of abuse from her husband, Judge Graham granted the injunction and sent an officer to serve it on Nigh with instructions to bring him into court unless he agreed to stay out of the section of the city where his wife was living.

When Mrs. Nigh left her husband a few days ago and went to live with a woman friend, she told him that she was going to seek a divorce. Nigh tried to kill her, but was stopped by neighbors. He then threatened that he would kill her the first time he had the opportunity.

BATHS DECLARED CURE FOR DELINQUENT CHILDREN

CHICAGO, July 12.—Given a delinquent child, this, according to Miss Delphia M. Culver, head of the Juvenile Detention Home in Chicago, is the way to make a good and normal child—if there is a way:

Shampoo him.
Scrub him.
Put him in an antiseptic bath.
Put him under a shower bath.
Call a doctor.

Miss Culver addressed the current events class of the Evanston Congregational Church yesterday on "Our Ministry to Delinquent Boys and Girls."

"Most of them are a product of destitute conditions," she said, "and it is necessary to apply sanitary measures first of all."

LOVE OF HUSBAND FOR SOLITAIRE CAUSES SUIT

DETROIT, July 12.—Judge VanZile granted Mrs. Elvina Kidde a divorce from her husband, Regnar Kidde, manager of the Detroit Lubricator Company, after she testified he had been in the habit of remaining aloof from her and living his life in the seclusion of his den.

His companions, she said, always were cards and books, and seldom, if ever, herself. On returning from his work, she told the court, he would retire to his den on the third floor of their home and there play solitaire and read. His salary, she said, was $5,000 a year.

PASTOR IN PERIL WHEN FOLDING BED CLOSES UP

Minister Seeks Non-Collapsible Couch With Sprained Back and Numerous Bruises

GREELEY, COL., July 12.—A folding bed in which the Rev. J. L. Thompson, of this city, was sleeping folded during the night and the minister had a narrow escape from death.

The whole town is laughing at the incident and wondering what the preacher said when he battled fiercely to free himself from the malicious and violent mechanical bed, but his friends declare that Dr. Thompson came very near to death.

As it is he is confined to another bed (non-folding) with a badly sprained back and is suffering from numerous bruises and strains received during his go with the silent and merciless foe bent upon his destruction.

Dr. Thompson was secretary of the State Sunday School Association now in session here and his absence was felt at the meeting. A number of the visiting ministers called to offer condolences.

When the bed folded, Dr. Thompson was sound asleep, it is declared. The cover was thrown over his head in such a manner that his cries for help could not be heard. By the most violent efforts he was able to extricate himself sufficiently to cry out and help came.

When the bed was pulled down the minister was completely exhausted from his struggles.

Jury Finds for Both; Legal Tangle Result

Verdict Is Returned for Plaintiff and Defendant as Result of Auto Collision.

KANSAS CITY, July 12.—An accommodating jury in Judge Robinson's court brought in a verdict both for the plaintiff and the defendant in a suit for damages, thereby bringing up all sorts of legal complications.

Charles H. Apple was suing J. M. Smith for $800 damages to his motor car as a result of a collision with Smith's car two years ago. Smith filed a bill asking the same amount as Apple for damages to his car. Both asserted the other was careless and driving at a high rate of speed.

The jury believed Apple's car was damaged the worse, and ordered Smith to pay him $350, while they ordered Apple to pay Smith $85.

RICH MEN MADE POLICEMEN TO STOP SPEED NUISANCE

AURORA, ILL., July 12.—Twenty-five Aurora bankers, manufacturers and merchants were sworn in as special automobile policemen by City Clerk Flannigan.

The wealth of the twenty-five will total more than $5,000,000. There is one millionaire and two are worth $500,000. All have been furnished with stars by Chief of Police Frank Micheis and will patrol the streets of Aurora nightly. Numerous complaints of speeding caused Mayor Thomas Sanders to issue an appeal asking for volunteer police among the motorists.

KNOXVILLE FAIR TO MAKE LAND SHOW FEATURE

Value of Soil Will Be One of the Principal Lessons of Conservation Exposition.

KNOXVILLE, July 12.—Realizing that land is primarily the basis of all wealth and that from the land must come food and clothing for the present and future generations, the management of the National Conservation Exposition has prepared for the greatest land show ever held in the South and one of the greatest land shows ever held anywhere.

Scientists say that the land of the United States must be conserved, must be nurtured and cared for, must be nursed and doctored and in no wise maltreated if the nation is to maintain its present proud position at the head of all the nations of the earth.

Tremendous Land Building.

It is to teach the lesson of the necessity of conserving lands, as well as of teaching the lessons of conservation of other resources, that the National Conservation Exposition comes into being. In the big new land building on the exposition grounds the land show will be held.

The land building, completed to the last nail, is one of six big exposition buildings erected for the Conservation Exposition. Attached to it is an annex, with an auditorium that will seat 3,000 persons. The United States Government display in the land building as well as State displays will be particularly fine and comprehensive. The exposition will open on September 1 and will continue until November 1.

Merchants to Visit Fair.

Incidentally, Knoxville is planning a great boosting campaign to be conducted in connection with the exposition.

Fifteen thousand merchants and jobbers in the territory continguous to Knoxville have been invited to visit the city while the exposition is on. The invitations have been sent out by the Commercial Club of Knoxville.

The entertainment of these out-of-town buyers is part of a general boosting movement that is astir in Knoxville and has been inspired by the exposition. The merchants and jobbers of Knoxville are making every effort to extend their trade and figure that while the exposition is in progress there will be a large influx of visitors into the city. Hence the plan of inviting the outside merchants to Knoxville. Acceptances to the invitations are being received rapidly.

Kansas To Be Netted With Trolley Lines

Several New Roads Are Being Projected From Topeka and More Are Contemplated.

TOPEKA, KANS., July 12.—Even as Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Eastern States are covered with interurban railway systems, so Kansas promises to be covered before many years have passed.

Several new roads are projected, the largest and more extensive being the electric line from Independence through Neodesha, Yates Center, Burlington, Lyndon and Scranton to Topeka. Maps have been completed for this line and work is being done at the southern end.

Sheep Shame Camels On Drink Question

U. S. Government Report Shows That Woolly Animals Go Four Months Without Water.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—The old saying which always ended with an interrogatory about a camel's ability to go eight days without water, but who wanted to be a camel, must be discarded.

The Utah sheep has the camel beaten by whole weeks and months if a hot weather story issued by the new press agent of Secretary Houston's Department of Agriculture is to be believed, and a term more expressive by comparison than "piker" will have to be coined to describe the patient ship of the desert.

"Sheep on the Nebo national forest, Utah, go four and a half months without water except for such moisture as they get from the dew and the juice of forage plants," says the Department bulletin.

Flagman Sticks to Train Despite Riches

Wife Gets Fortune, but Says She'll Just Fix Up Home a Little Bit.

SPOKANE, July 12.—Latest reports received from Springfield, Ill., by Mrs. Minnie Beadle, of 401 Chelan Street, who recently was made one of the heirs to a $175,000 estate left by a sister in that city, places her share at more than $45,000, or double what was at first thought to be her share. Beadle is a flagman for the Spokane and Island Empire Railroad.

"We like our place here," said Mrs. Beadle. "We have made it our home and it would be hard for us to give it up. Mr. Beadle likes his work and I think that we will stay here and go on as before. We will fix our home up nicer now."

Mrs. Beadle is the daughter of Rev. N. G. Collins, formerly pastor of the Baptist Church at Bellingham, Wash.

Heir to Earldom One Of Harvard Faculty

Future Lord Russell Will Teach Mathematical Philosophy—Wife Is American Girl.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS., July 13.—When Harvard reopens in the fall the university will have among its faculty a member of the English nobility, the heir presumptive to the earldom of Russell, the Hon. Bertrand Arthur William Russell, of Cambridge, England.

The new professor comes from Trinity College, Cambridge University, to teach philosophy, with special reference to the mathematical and moral sides of the subject. Mrs. Russell was Miss Alys Smith, daughter of R. Pearall Smith, of Philadelphia.

Gold Nugget Worth $1,500 Is Discovered

Placer Miners Get What Is Thought To Be Biggest Single Lump in Northwest.

BAKER, OREG., July 12.—Probably the largest nugget ever found in the Northwest was panned by George Armstrong and Richard Staurton, on their Dutch Gulch placer claim, three miles from Susanville and 60 miles from Baker. The nugget was of gold, worth $1,500. It weighs 6¾ pounds and is worth $17.50 an ounce.

The largest nugget previously taken out in Eastern Oregon was worth $728 in the same district a few years ago. The Humboldt placers in the Mormon Basin two years ago unearthed a $720 nugget.

FREE RIDES FOR PASSENGERS ON ALASKAN ROAD

Failure of Rate Cards to Arrive Causes Officials to Give Every One a Pass.

SEWARD, ALASKA, July 12.—A train of the Alaska Northern Railroad left for the front recently with the first load of freight this year. Since the arrival of Colonel Swanitz some few weeks ago the work of getting the roadbed clear of snow and in shape to stand traffic has been going steadily ahead.

A startling reduction is a cut of 8 cents per mile in the pasenger traffic, the former price of 20 cents per mile having been reduced to 12 cents per mile. This will prove a boon to prospectors.

Owing to the fact that the new passenger tariff sheet is not yet in the hands of the railroad officials, and in view of the fact that to carry passengers and charge them for the service is in direct opposition to one of the most stringent rules as set forth by the Interstate Commerce Commission, passengers are now riding free and will be doing the same until the new tariff sheets are printed and posted.

The fact that there is no charge for riding on the Alaska Northern Railway is being taken advantage of by many prospectors, and many outfits are getting away for the hills at least two weeks earlier than would otherwise be the case. A big gasoline automobile will be placed in commission during the coming week, and a regular passenger schedule maintained during the season.

EVERY ARTIST CALLED INSANE BY ALIENISTS

Chicago Colony Excited by the Charge Made at Convention of Nerve Specialists.

CHICAGO, July 12.—A wave of excited indignation rolled up from Chicago's art colony and beat upon the Hotel Sherman, where prominent alienists and nerve specialists are holding convention.

The direct charge by the lunacy specialists that all artists, sculptors and poets are essentially unbalanced and the intimation that had Rubens, Michelangelo, Hugo, Browning, Byron, Keats and Shelley been examined by competent alienists they would have been put in insane asylums, provoked all the warmth.

"Such statements," said Director French, of the Chicago Art Institute, "lead artists to believe that all doctors, or at least all alienists, are insane and should be incarcerated in a big madhouse."

Having consigned the persons of temperament to the asylum, the alienists took a fresh tack. Dr. Chesley King, of Atlanta, Ga., who volunteered that exaggerated ideas of love and beauty had caused the mental downfall of the artists and poets, worked the discussion around to a pronouncement that "love itself is only a form of insanity."

RICH GIRL AND CLERK ELOPE; NOW MARRIED

Jacksonville Society Is Stirred by Escapade of Ex-Sheriff Bowden's Daughter.

JACKSONVILLE, July 12.—Society folks here are on the qui vive to-day in anticipation of the arrival of Mrs. Lewis A. Myers, who, as Miss May Bowden, daughter of Former Sheriff R. Fleming Bowden, a near-millionaire, eloped with Myers, they were married last Monday.

The marriage is known to have been opposed by Mr. Bowden and current gossip has it that the opposition may go to such lengths that Mrs. Lewis may not receive the paternal olive branch upon her return home.

Mr. Bowden refuses to commit himself. Apparently he is accepting the situation in the best grace possible.

Met a Year Ago.

The elopement and wedding was the culmination of a series of incidents extending over more than a year, of which only Miss Bowden's closest friends were aware.

About a year ago Miss Bowden, then barely 17 years of age, through a girl friend chanced to meet Young Myers at his place of employment, at Leake's drug store. Cupid was on hand, too, that day. It was the old, old story. Myers was immediately attracted to Miss Bowden, and, in turn, the fair young woman saw her ideal in the drug clerk.

After numerous meetings at the drug store, which Miss Bowden visited often for ice cream and soda water, the two became sufficiently acquainted for Myers to summon up courage to ask if he might call at the Bowden home. Of course, the request was granted and Myers was received cordially by Miss Bowden's parents.

Father Interferes.

The growing affection, however, could not be concealed, and at length Miss Bowden's father, who was quite well acquainted with Myers, forbade him to call, explaining to his daughter that she was too young to have a "steady" beau.

Cupid was still on hand, however, for in the weeks that followed Miss Bowden and Mr. Myers contrived to meet downtown, where they mapped out, all to themselves, their plans for the future. With the exception of a girl friend of Miss Bowden, and Paul Coulson, roommate of Myers, and a soda water clerk at Leake's, no one knew of the engagement or intended elopement.

That was several weeks ago. About noon Monday Myers quietly requested Dr. H. S. Leake, proprietor of the store, to allow him to leave on the 1:15 train for Valdosta, where, he explained he was going on a little vacation. The permission was readily granted.

Miss Bowden managed to get together her clothing during the absence of her father and mother and the two got away without being detected. They were married at Folkston about 5 o'clock that afternoon.

FLORIDA GAME TO BE GUARDED UNDER NEW LAW

State Commissioner Will Have Charge of Work of Conserving State's Bird and Animal Life.

TALLAHASSEE, July 12.—An act of the recent Legislature provides for the biennial appointment, by the Governor, of a State Game and Fish Commissioner, to receive a salary of $2,500, with an allowance of $500 a year for expenses.

It is the duty of the Game and Fish Commissioner to enforce all game and fish laws, and to appoint game and fish wardens in the various counties.

When a fine is collected the warden is to receive three-fourths of it if he has furnished evidence responsible for the conviction. If he does not furnish this evidence he receives one-fourth, and the person furnishing the evidence receives one-half of the fine.

Warden's Fees Fixed.

The warden receives 25 cents for each resident county license and $1 for each resident State license, and $3 for each non-resident State license, and the remainder, less county judge's fee, goes into the game and fish protection fund.

Any resident of the State may hunt in his election precinct without paying a license; for $1 he may hunt anywhere in his county, and for $3 may hunt anywhere in the State. A non-resident must pay a license of $15 in each county in which he hunts.

The open season is from November 20 to February 20, and it is unlawful to kill more than two buck deer, or two turkey gobblers, or twenty quail, or twenty-five other game birds in any one day, and the limit for an open season is three buck deer, five turkey gobblers and 500 other game birds.

There is no open season on doe, spotted fawn, turkey hens and robins. Hawks, owls, crowds, larks, butcher birds and English sparrows are not protected. It is unlawful to shoot on or near a baited field, or to hunt game birds or game animals at night.

Salary Comes From Fund.

The salary and expenses of the Game and Fish Commissioner are payable only from the game and fish protection fund, and it is provided that should there accumulate in that fund a sum in excess of $5,000, such excess shall be paid into the school fund.

The Governor has not yet appointed a commissioner.

Peres McDougall, who has been employed in the office of Commissioner of Agriculture, has been made secretary in the office of Game and Fish Commissioner, Will White, of Jackson County, succeeding to the position held by McDougall.

SPENDS FRIEND'S MONEY FOR JOY RIDE; ARRESTED

PENSACOLA, July 12.—Five dollars' worth of joy riding led to the arrest of Mattie Lewis, who is now in the county jail on a charge of embezzlement. Beatrice Yelverton, another woman, claims she gave the Lewis woman the $5 to make a purchase for her, but that the woman spent the money for a taxicab.

DELINQUENT TAX PAYERS IN CHATHAM OWE $10,000

SAVANNAH, July 12.—Chatham County is preparing to go after delinquent tax payers. The report of County Auditor Charles Neville shows that 600 persons have failed to pay their taxes for 1912. These delinquencies total approximately $10,099. The Commissioners will also make inquiries regarding other years.

Politician Admits Wife Shot at Him

Jacksonville Wonders What Will Be Outcome of Sensational Episode of Thursday.

JACKSONVILLE, July 12.—All sorts of guesses are being made as to the probable outcome of the affair of Thursday when County Commissioner Frank Williams, in company with a woman, was made the target for five shots by his wife. None of the shots, fired through a window, took effect.

Williams made every effort to maintain secrecy. He admits he was fired at.

Williams is prominently connected here. As a member of the County Board of Commissioners he has established a reputation for honesty in public affairs. He was formerly in the saloon business.

AMENDMENT TO PREVENT KILLING OF STRAY DOGS LOST

SAVANNAH, July 12.—Although Alderman H. H. Livingston delivered an appeal for its passage, his amendment to the present dog ordinance has been defeated, not an Alderman voting with him.

This means the death clause will remain in the ordinance, and that dogs captured will be killed in a humane manner, provided they are not claimed within three days after they are impounded.

WORK ON NEW WHARVES IS PROGRESSING RAPIDLY

SAVANNAH, July 12.—Work on the new Merchants and Miners' Transportation Company's wharves, which were recently destroyed by fire, is progressing satisfactorily. The Stewart Contracting Company and the Gadsden Contracting Company both have large forces of men employed and the pile driving and other preliminary work is being pushed rapidly.

TO REBUILD BURNED PLANT.

POLLARD, ALA., July 12.—The plant of the Lindsay Lumber Company, which was destroyed by fire Wednesday night, will be rebuilt at once. The mill and dry kilns were destroyed. Insurance on the plant amounted to about $27,000.

Pensacola Election Fraud Probe Still On

Commissioner Pou Refuses to Give Testimony in Absence of His Attorney.

PENSACOLA, July 12.—Investigation into charges of fraud in the recent city election, which began before the Count Solicitor July 3, continued again to-day, with still a number of witnesses to be examined. Among witnesses testifying were two defeated candidates for City Commissioners, the Chief of Police, the City Recorder and G. H. Hervey, manager of the San Carlos Hotel.

Commissioner Pou; against whom a number of charges were made, was excused because his attorney is out of the city and the commissioner declined to testify in his absence.

Newsboy Is Named As West Point Cadet

Congressman Selects Youth for Army Who Had Supported Family by Selling Dailies on Streets

SAN DIEGO, CAL., July 12.—Harold Cooney, former President and now Treasurer of the Newsboys' Club, has been recommended to West Point Military Academy by Congressman William Kent at Washington, according to advices received here to-day. Cooney, who is 18 years old, has supported his father and mother for several years selling newspapers. He went to high school for three years. He has planned to leave soon to attend a preparatory school in New York to fit himself for the examination. The recommendation is considered equivalent to an appointment.

DR. E. R. CARSON SAILS FOR LONDON CONVENTION

SAVANNAH, July 12.—Dr. E. R. Corson left Savannah Thursday afternoon on the steamer City of Savannah for Boston, from which port he will sail on July 15 on the steamer Cymric for London, to attend the International Congress of Physicians and Surgeons, which will convene there in August.

Dr. Corson was accompanied by his family. The party will remain in Europe several months.

FLORIDA MILITIA ENJOYS OUTING AT BLACK POINT

Dress Parades, Dances and Other Attractions Draw Visitors From Jacksonville.

JACKSONVILLE, July 12.—Dress parades by the members of the First and Second Regiments of the Florida National Guard at the Black Point encampment near here have been the most elaborate functions of the soldiers since they went into camp on Monday.

With a large number of society men and women from Jacksonville to witness the pageant, the soldiers made an excellent showing.

Thursday night at the camp a dance was given by the officers of the First Infantry to the officers of the Second Infantry, and this also proved a brilliant affair. Many leading people were present from this city and were entertained by the officers in true military fashion.

Governor Expected.

Although no definite word has been received from Governor Park Trammell as to the date upon which he may be expected, Major General J. Clifford R. Foster is planning to give him a rousing reception when he reaches camp

For the first two days of camp torrents of rain fell, but the latter part of the week the skies have been clear. The soldier boys have made the most of their time in camp and have gone through their various routine duties with spirit. General field work has consisted, in addition to dress parades, of patrols, advance guard, field fortifications and small arms practice. The soldiers are being kept so busy with camp routine that there has been comparatively little time for leaves of absence. This has caused a certain amount of dissatisfaction, some of the men taking French leave in order to spend a little time in Jacksonville seeing the sights. Court-martial awaits some of the offenders who were caught.

Recruits Hazed.

Considerable fun is being indulged in about the campground and many a recruit has been hazed. Every company holds a session of "kangaroo court" each night, and the victims are made to run the gauntlet, ride the blanket, crawl on hands and knees and go through other stunts for the enjoyment of their comrades.

The pay rolls have been signed by the regimental officers.

First Woman Named For Illinois Position

Governor Appoints Her Head of Tuberculosis Institution on Recommendation of County Board.

CHICAGO, July 12.—The first woman to hold the position and also the first woman to be appointed to a county position since the suffrage bill was signed by the Governor is Miss Ada Belle McCleery, who was appointed head of the tuberculosis institution at Dunning. She was chosen by President McCormick, of the county board, to succeed Cox, who resigned recently.

In her new capacity she will have complete charge of the administration.

Miss McCleery has been director at Camp Goodwill, Evanston, for three years.

Matrimonial Wave Is Sweeping Country

Philadelphia Reports That It Is Keeping Pace With Other Cities in Marriages.

PHILADELPHIA, July 12.—The matrimonial wave which started in Chicago recently has spread over the entire country until the number of marriages in various large cities have eclipsed all records. Marriage License Clerk Ferguson said the month of June had established the highest record in the history of the local bureau.

Mr. Ferguson's attention was called to reports from Chicago, New York, Boston and other cities concerning the unusually large number of marriage permits that are being issued. With true civic pride, the Clerk said Philadelphia was holding its own in the record increase race.

Too Many Colleges, Government's Plaint

Education Commissioner in His Report Declares That Many of Them Should Be Consolidated.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—That there are too many colleges in the United States with inadequate equipment and support attempting to give full courses for the bachelor's degree; that much duplication is going on, and that there could be a profitable merging of existing institutions, is intimated in the report of Dr. Babcock in the year book of the Commissioner of Education.

Many of the States have their work of higher education centralized in the State university or agricultural colleges, but in nine States there are three or more State-supported and State-controlled institutions.

CHATHAM COUNTY ELECTS NEW SHERIFF ON AUGUST 6

SAVANNAH, July 12.—A special election for a Sheriff of Chatham County will be held Wednesday, August 6. The County Executive Committee will be called by Chairman A. A. Lawrence within a few days to make arrangements for a primary to nominate a candidate. There are several prospective candidates.

Florida Federal Pie Interests Democrats

Politicians Want Republican Officeholders Ousted From Fat Government Jobs.

JACKSONVILLE, July 12.—If the politicians here can succeed in prying loose D. T. Gerow, the Republican postmaster, whose term does not expire until next February, P. A. Dignan, a grocer and at present Commissioner of Public Works, is said to be slated for the job.

Another rumor is that E. O. Locke, who has been Clerk of the United States Court for more than 40 years, will be asked to resign. If he goes, F. A. Hathaway, principal of the Duval High School, is said to be slated for the place.

There is also talk that Captain John F. Horr, United States Marshal for the Southern District of Florida, and Marshal McGourin, of the Northern District, will be ousted and Democrats put in their places. Frank L. Mayes, of Pensacola, has declined the proffered marshalship for the Northern District, when the position is made vacant, and appearances favor George Perkins, a cousin of Attorney General McReynolds. Major Hawley Cawthon, of DeFuniak Springs, and Flio McAllister, of Pensacola, oppose Perkins.

Two Hold Offices For Long Terms.

TAMPA, July 12.—E. O. Locke, of Jacksonville, probably the oldest Federal Court Clerk in the country, who, it is said, will soon be succeeded by F. A. Hathaawy, of Jacksonville, was appointed by his brother, John W. Locke, who was named judge in February, 1872, and at his retirement was the oldest Federal judge in point of service in the country. E. O. Locke was made clerk soon after his brother was made judge.

Court Commissioner H. L. Crane, of this city, disputes with John A. Shields, of New York, the honor of being the oldest court commissioner in the country. He has served 30 years.

Says Snell Insolvent And Owes Her $31,000

Mrs. Louise G. Hodlow Files Bankruptcy Petition Against Prominent Jacksonville Man.

JACKSONVILLE, July 12.—Mrs. Louise G. Hadlow, widow of George H. Hadlow, has filed a petition in the United States Court asking that George B. Snell be declared a bankrupt. The petitioner alleges that Snell owes her $31,000 and interest from January 4, 1913, and that he is insolvent, although he was generally supposed to be worth nearly $1,000,000.

Snell, who is a large property owner, when asked about the matter, said:

"The allegations of the petitioner are untrue, and everybody who knows me or anything about the case realizes the absurdity of the charge regarding my insolvency. I wish that the public would suspend judgment in this case until it is passed on by the court.

Girls Immune From Spankings in School

City Superintendent of Sacramento Exempts Them From Sting of Disciplinarian's Ruler.

SACRAMENTO, July 12.—Beginning with the new school term in Sacramento it will be mighty fine to be a girl. The City Superintendent of Schools has formulated a new rule which exempts girls from spanking and subjects boys to the "ruler sting" up to the time they are ready for entrance into high school. The same rule provides that boys when they go to the high school shall have graduated from the "spanking class" as well as the elementary schools.

Spanking girls has been found to be unsuccessful in the local schools, while the same operation administered on their brothers has been found to be highly beneficial.

Are Rheumatic Sufferers Negligent?

Many Suffer Excruciating Agony for Years Without Investigating the Cause of Their Pain or Its Cure.

Rheumatism frequently comes from uric acid poisoning. Uric acid accumulates from undigested food remaining in stomach and intestines, which ferments and putrefies and generates this poisonous acid. If not expelled promptly it gets into the blood, and finally forms crystalline deposits which settle in joints and muscles and stiffen them.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT has been remarkably successful in the treatment of rheumatism resulting from uric acid poisoning. It is a true uric acid solvent which will break up the deposits already formed, dissolve the uric acid out of the tissues and hold it in solution until expelled in the urine. It will not cure your rheumatism overnight; neither did your rheumatism come overnight. But JACOBS' LIVER SALT will relieve you more promptly and surely than anything else because it thoroughly purges the system of fermenting waste, eliminates the poisonous uric acid and purifies the blood.

Almost without exception the sufferer from rheumatism is subject to constipation, biliousness or dyspepsia, and a sluggish liver is at the bottom of the whole trouble. JACOBS' LIVER SALT stimulates both liver and kidneys and makes them keep your system clean. No other liver medicine has the same solvent action upon uric acid, therefore insist that your druggist give you the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. If he hasn't it, full size jar sent upon receipt of price, 25c, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

Quits Job With U. S. To Wed Florida Girl

Clerk in Office of State Railroad Commissioner Marries Former Government Soil Surveyor.

TALLAHASSEE, July 12.—At her home in Ocala, Miss Beatrice Sinclair was married to Robert Webber Rowe. Mis Sinclair has been employed in the office of the Railroad Commission. The railroad commissioners and other members of the office force presented her a chest of table silver.

Mr. Rowe has been employed for several years by the Government in soil survey work. He has just returned from a three years' stay in the Philippines, China and Japan. It not being possible for his bride-to-be to return to the Philippines with him, he has resigned his position with the Government, and is now employed by a large tobacco concern at Quincy, where they will live after a short visit to Mr. Rowe's home in Massachusetts.

Tampa Youth Elopes With Girl of Macon

Punctured Auto Tire Aids Young Lovers to Escape From Irate Parents.

MACON, July 12.—A punctured automobile tire aided Ted Guilford, of Tampa, and Miss Ruth Hand, of Macon, to elude her parents and elope to Tampa. Young Guilford wished to marry Miss Hand. She was willing, but her father, T. O. Hand, a wealthy manufacturer, could see no sense in the proposition. He said nay several times. Finally, he ordered Guilford out of the house.

Going to a neighbor, Guilford called Miss Hand on the telephone and asked her to marry him at once. She agreed and hastily prepared her belongings, slipped out of the house and joined Guilford. They were married by Rev. R. E. Douglass and came to Tampa that night. Mr. and Mrs. Hand, while the elopement was in progress were ignorant of it all, went out autoing. They punctured a tire and did not get home until long after the young couple had left for Tampa.

Guilford and his bride met here last winter while Miss Hand was visiting Mrs. Lizzie Carew. They will live at Miami.

DOESN'T WANT WARSHIPS TO CARRY "COUNTY FAIR"

TAMPA, July 12.—The Tampa Merchants' Association has refused to indorse Congressman Goodwin's proposition to have the battleships carry exhibits of manufacturing and agricultural products.

"It would make 'em too much like a county fair," said President Davis.

POLICE CHIEF QUITS TO BECOME FIRE CAPTAIN

SAVANNAH, July 12.—After having served as Chief of the County police force since its organization a year ago, Porter McFarland has tendered his resignation, effective July 15.

Chief McFarland said he has been offered a position in the fire department. He probably will be made Captain of Company No. 3.

STREET RAILWAY COMPANY WINS SUIT FOR DAMAGES

SAVANNAH, July 12.—A verdict for the defendant has been returned in the City Court in the case of Fannie Barnett, aged 3 years, against the Savannah Electric Company. The child's right foot was so badly crushed by a West End car last November that it had to be amputated. The child sued through her father, L. Barnett, for $10,000.

SEEKS MARSHAL'S PLACE.

WESTVILLE, FLA., July 12.—James T. Pittman, of Holmes County, is an applicant for appointment as Marshal for the Northern District of Florida. He has already filed his application. He has the indorsement of the county Democratic organizations and other influential men in various parts of West Florida.

BOND TRUSTEES PLAN TO BLOCK CHARTER MOVE

Injunction Scheme to Prevent Election on City Council's Revision Measure.

JACKSONVILLE, July 12.—Enemies of the plan to change the charter of this city have found a loophole in the law which may serve to defeat the efforts of the friends of good government. At the last session of the Legislature a bill was passed authorizing the City Council to draft a new charter and submit it to the vote of the people between three and six months after the bill was signed. The time limit will expire in November.

The plan to defeat the bill is quite simple. It is claimed that the law is contrary to the State Constitution in that it attempts to delegate the power vested in the Legislature to the City Council of Jacksonville. That part of the Constitution referred to is section eight of article eight, which provides that the Legislature may establish or abolish municipal organizations and may limit or change their jurisdiction and powers. No mention is made of charter changes anywhere in the Constitution.

Friends of the proposed charter, which the Council is now preparing, declare that the Supreme Court would no doubt find for them; but fear that they will lose because of the fact that the bond trustees are planning to prevent the election by injunction. Before the case can be decided the time limit will have expired. This will have the effect of preventing a change.

The main object of the City Council in framing the new charter is to do away with the board of bond trustees, which now practically runs the city. These same trustees will fight to retain their powers and one of the number has given out the injunction plan to be followed in defeating the measures.

PENSACOLA-NEW ORLEANS BARGE LINE TO OPERATE

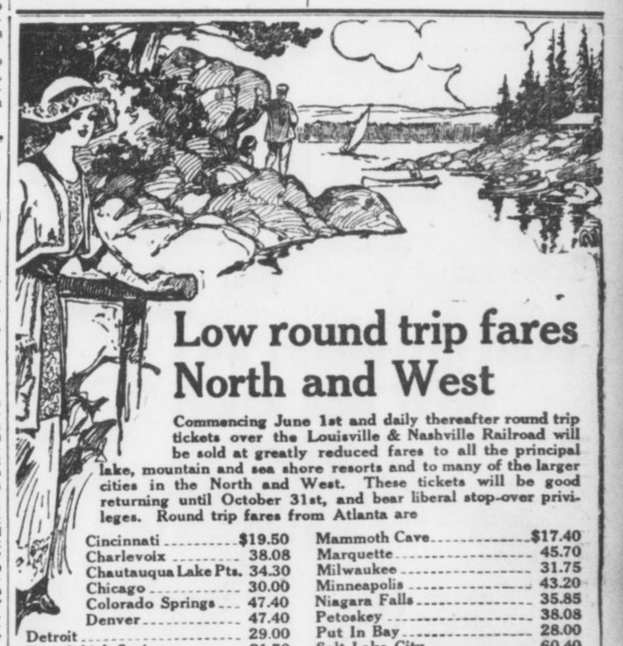
PENSACOLA, July 11.—Beginning next Wednesday, weekly freight service between Pensacola and New Orleans will be inaugurated by the New Orleans and Alabama Transportation Company. The Bernhardt, one of the largest barges of the company, will leave New Orleans next Wednesday for this port and regularly thereafter. It will be of great benefit to the city in lowering freight rates, especially after municipal docks are completed and free wharfage privileges extended to the line.

To Look and Feel Bright in Hot Weather

(From The Woman Beautiful.)

This is the season when she who would have a rose-leaf complexion, lily-white neck and hands, should turn her thoughts to mercolized wax, the firm friend of the summer girl. Nothing so effectually overcomes the soiling effects of sun, wind, dust and dirt. The wax literally absorbs the scorched, discolored, withered or coarsened cuticle, bringing forth a brand new skin, clear, soft and girlishly beautiful. It also unclogs the pores, removing blackheads and increasing the skin's breathing capacity. An ounce of mercolized wax, obtainable at any drugstore, applied nightly like cold cream, and washed off mornings, will gradually improve the worst complexion.

When depressed by the heat and you want to freshen up for the evening, bathe the face in a lotion made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half-pint witchhazel. You'll find this more refreshing than an hour's rest. It is fine for smoothing out wrinkles, even the deeper ones.



Low round trip fares North and West

Commencing June 1st and daily thereafter round trip tickets over the Louisville & Nashville Railroad will be sold at greatly reduced fares to all the principal lake, mountain and sea shore resorts and to many of the larger cities in the North and West. FOR MILADY'S WARDROBE

By MME. HAUTE MONDE.

AMONG the novelties promised for autumn is brocaded moire. This is described as moire cloth with brocaded satin floral figures in old French designs. Brocaded crepe de chine, which was a conspicuous offering this spring, promises to be a favorite material for evening gowns. In the heavier materials all "pile fabrics," including velvets, chinchillas, plushes and velours de laine, are going to be worn.

Black charmeuse is enjoying continued popularity this summer. The detailed accounts of the gowns worn by the most fashionable women at the French and the English races have fairly bristled with the word "black." A "black charmeuse with embroidered coatee," a "black satin with lace tunic," a "black Chantilly lace over white tulle," a "black mousseline and white tulle," a "black charmeuse with black and cream lace," a "black charmeuse draped with creamy lace and an overdress of black net;" these are a few of the costumes reported.

Fashionable blouses are of mousseline of tulle (net) with the indispensable frill of the wired ruffle forming a careless Medici collar. A genuine novelty is the tailored net blouse. It sounds impossible, but it was really extremely attractive. It is made of two thicknesses of the net and all the seams are of the openwork stitching. It has a notched revers or collar forming a pointed opening at the neck, and the sleeves are long, with regular shirtwaist cuffs, turned back at the wrist and fastening with link buttons.

Quite a novelty are the new satin-finished beaver hats of a modified sailor shape, with a rather narrow straight brim and somewhat high rounded crown. The most attractive ones are in white, but they are shown in black also. They are generally trimmed with a grosgrain band to match, having a picot edge and tied in a flat bow, with several loops, directly in the back.

The persistent vogue of the soft satin crown has been one of the surprises of the season. It was a pronounced feature of the early millinery, and achieved such immediate popularity that it was very soon avoided by careful buyers. But after suffering a temporary eclipse it has reappeared in white, with a white straw brim or else a white satin brim faced with colored straw. The trimming is usually an upstanding "palm tree" feather in white or a chic bow of white grosgrain or moire ribbon.

Not only the women who are largely developed go in for brassieres, but those also who wish to achieve the new figure in the easiest way. The modern corsets stop about two inches above the natural waist line in front, and about three inches and a half in the back. A very slim figure can depend on these supports alone, but the majority of women use a brassiere instead of a corset cover. The truth is that the latter garment is going away as the muslin petticoat did; and as knickers are taking the place of the petticoat, so are brassieres taking the place of the ribboned and ruffled corset cover of fine handiwork.

A new skirt for outing wear, especially suitable for tennis, is made of cotton corduroy, pique or linen. It appears to be made of the prevailing narrow lines, which would make the running and jumping necessary in tennis impossible. But when its wearer reaches the tennis court, she unbuttons the side seams from the hem up for several inches, and behold! many pleats thus liberated give her ample room for all the activity she desires.

Crepe de chine and China silk blouses are worn by the tennis player. They are made with flat Byron collars, some of them with deep, comfortable V-necks. Some of them are made with a yoke and are shirred into the yoke over a cord. White is the color usually worn.

Sweet simplicity should rule dress for country wear. Clever little frocks may be easily fashioned. Two to four-gore skirts are attached to more or less kimono blouses. Front fastenings may be from the chin down.

For afternoon, however, there are more ornate affairs. Plain voile skirts, with little flowered tunics, for instance, or white linen, silk or cloth dresses, with coats of gold, cerise, rose, emerald, black or blue taffeta, satin or wool, are very smart for fine country wear.

For golf, tennis and ordinary country house wear, however, white is first choice. There are simple white dresses and endless skirts of white linen and cotton Bedford cord, with which are worn sheer white waists. And this, indeed, has been almost the uniform of womankind during the last few summers. To some it is not becoming, but if both the skirt and the waist be perfectly fitted and good-looking they certainly look well on the majority of women and girls. This year the shirtwaist girl must divide honors with the one-piece-dress girl.

The color goes a long way toward giving a cool and refreshing air to a frock. There are certain colors that absorb the heat rays. For this reason many women viewed with alarm the vogue for brilliant colors this spring. Their fears, fortunately, have proved groundless, for as the hot days approach white and the soft pastel shades are prevailing over the bright reds, greens and yellows. The bolder, brighter colors are reflected merely from the sash or girdle of a white frock.

Net is everywhere. Petticoats, breakfast and bedroom caps, negligees of all sorts, blouses, frocks, coats, hats and parasols—all are made of and adorned with net. One of the newest ways to use net is to combine it in the form of insets with heavy white corded silk as a coat. The net is gored and colored and the silk is cut away beneath it. The broad band of soutache braid which edges the coat is broken with these little insets, each of them outlined with scrolls of braid.

* * *

Petticoats and pegnoirs to match are made of allover lace, unlined, of course. The pegnoir is untrimmed, excepting for a band of tiny embroidered pink and blue roses about the sleeve and neck and an upstanding frill of narrow lace outlining the V-neck. The petticoat is finished with a hem of pink chiffon, and the pegnoir and petticoat both can be worn over a handkerchief chiffon slip or under bodice and petticoat.

* * *

It is only natural that with the enlarged waist line should come the careless girdle; a belt which is loosely wrapped around the figure without any pretense of trying to make the waist look small or restrain the figure. These girdles dominate the fashions of the day. They may be of the material of the gown, of another material in a contrasting color, or of ribbon, checked, plain or striped.

* * *

The sashes of July are extra wide and unboned, but they are far more apt to go high on the figure than low, which is the striking difference between them and the oriental girdle. The largeness of the waist line and that whole part of the figure from bust to waist is now covered by these loose folds of soft material which are finished in the back with a crushed butterfly bow or shirred buckle or flattened streamers which are pleated at the top and hang to the knees.

* * *

Some of the newest evening shoes are made of pearl gray satin outlined with very small rose diamonds. These pale gray shoes are exceedingly becoming and they are worn with cobweb silk stockings in the palest shade of gray which have traceries in silver threads running up the fronts.

Very large sums of money are now spent on shoes and stockings for afternoon and evening wear. The gowns of the present day are cut in such a way that they display the feet and ankles freely, with the result that the cost of shoes and stockings has increased enormously. For wear with ball dresses some ultra smart Parisiennes vote in favor of lace stockings traced over with diamond sparks and of very low shoes in black satin, which in conjunction with the white silk stockings give a Goya impression.

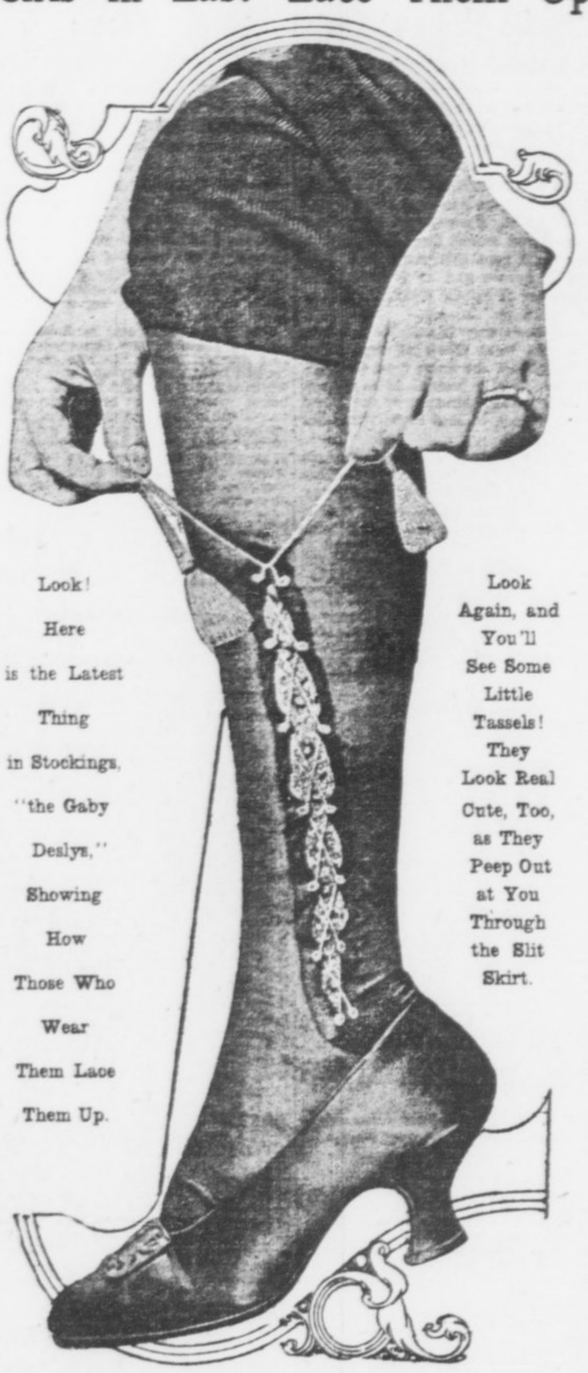
Many of the midsummer hats are being trimmed with ribbons of velvet which hang in streamers down the back as far as the waist. All colors are used, but black is the most popular. It requires about three yards for each hat, and the width chosen varies with individual inclination. Some women are using five streamers of the 2-inch and 1 1-2-inch width in preference to two streamers of the wide.

* * *

When the new silhouette with its extra large waist and slight curve in front was brought out in Paris, it received its due meed of gossip; some dismissed it as a whim, others took it seriously for several reasons, one of which was novelty and another of which was comfort. It is because of the latter that a large majority of women are adopting it, and these are extremities to which women have gone to be in fashion. Wherever the the great dressmakers in America congregate one hears more talk about this large waist line than any other feature of fashion. We are not confronted with a theory, but a condition, and the dressmakers all seem to be delighted over it. To give an idea of how rapidly this fashion has been taken hold of by those who make any attempt to dress according to the standards of the day, one dressmaker said that the normal waist line was 32 inches among her customers. But 34 was getting to be nearer the average. She said that women with a 32 bust measurement have a 32 waist measurement; that exceedingly thin women made no attempt to draw in their corsets, but merely wore them as a support as one would put whalebones in a gown, not to repress or straighten the figure. I took up the question with many dressmakers and found the situation alike wherever fashionable clothes are made. At two of the ultra-smart houses the small pad or cushion is used across the front of the waist line on figures that are unusually small.

Slit Stocking Is Latest Shocker

Girls in East Lace Them Up



Look! Here is the Latest Thing in Stockings, "the Gaby Deslys," Showing How Those Who Wear Them Lace Them Up.

Look Again, and You'll See Some Little Tassels! They Look Real Cute, Too, as They Peep Out at You Through the Slit Skirt.

Fair Atlantans Are Expected to Adopt "the Gaby Deslys" in Contrasting Shades.

Have you seen those stockings with the tantalizing, teasing slit on each side that lace with the cutest tassels and string that fashion ever devised?

They are all the rage in the East and every Atlanta girl who is really up to snuff will soon have one or more pairs in her wardrobe.

Just imagine having to LACE up your stockings TWICE, that is four times for the two stockings. It means a peck of trouble for every fair debutante who means to keep up to date in hosiery, BUT—

Remember that these stockings are none of your common clockwork kind, but each has the most fascinating slit on either side of the leg, a slit carefully hemmed with silk thread with lace holes, a half a dozen or more, up and down each side, through which the lacing runs.

And here's the real feature of the slit stocking. If it's a white stocking the lacing with the flossy tassels at the ends are RED or GREEN or any color that suits, save WHITE. Then again if the stocking is black the lacings are white or a contrasting shade.

And THAT'S what makes the "Gaby Deslys hose"—for that's the name that the slit stocking has been given—the most bewitching and attractive bit of feminine finery ever conceived.

Rest Gowns Now Necessary Part Of Wardrobes

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—No smart woman can now afford to go to a country house without a few very beautiful "rest gowns." These were formerly known as tea gowns, but they are now so elaborate that they are worn in the interval before dinner after a day's motoring or sport and are not meant for the bedroom or boudoir.

Many of the kimono rest gowns come direct from Japan, and the designs and coloring are gorgeous. Lady Arlington, who is a mature beauty of the Oriental type, has ordered some of these rest gowns, which are likely to be the envy of her sex when she goes visiting.

One gown, made of Japanese crepe de chine, is pale mist-gray lined with the softest wistaria mauve silk. Over the gown are worked great dropping sprays of wistaria in mauve silk shaded as delicately as a Japanese painting, the leaves and long, curling tendrils being embroidered in pale almond green silks as a contrast.

The arrangement of these sprays is wonderful and could only have been carried out by an artist. The gown is, of course, in kimono form, the great bag sleeves being edged with strand silk and silk tassels. Another gown is of pale water blue silk, with ragged chrysanthemums worked over it in faint creamery pink wistaria and leaves of tender green and white.

The palest shell pink doubleurs give the finishing touches. Still another gown has the same pattern on a pink ground with a touch of black and white deftly introduced into the color scheme by means of a couple of tall storks, which form part of the picture and provide a strong contrast.

Debutantes' Gowns Elaborate This Year

Most Attractive Creations to Fascinate Man Seen at Height of London Season.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—The evening gowns the debutantes are wearing are particularly attractive to the fascinated man. For example, Miss Iovial Hay, daughter of Lady Hay, equally charming in any frock, is having two very beautiful gowns made. One of periwinkle blue charmeuse, the skirt-ring is split up on one side and draped over a petticoat of flesh-pink chiffon covered with a light veiling in periwinkle blue.

The little corsage is of fine cobweb gold lace over the palest flesh-pink foundation, veiled with chiffon, and this chiffon passes over the shoulders and forms tiny sleeves. Over it again is drawn veiling of periwinkle blue knotted on the shoulder and cut with very big armholes, while the belt is made of buttercup yellow broche, headed with a fold of Oriental brocade in deep cobalt blue embossed with gold, a huge bunch of shaded "eveque" purple and wine-colored anemones being tucked into it.

Another lovely evening gown is of pink chiffon, like the inner lining of a shell, the skirt is incrusted with bands of cream lace and bouillonees chiffon and is threaded at the hem with pale blue ribbon, while it is veiled with an overdress of powder-blue chiffon edged with a sparkling border of crystals.

Motto Stockings A New Fad in Paris

Fashion Also Decrees Snakes and Birds and Butterflies as Ornaments.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 12.—Makers of fashion decrees are now concentrating their attention upon women's stockings. This is probably accounted for by the fact that the new style gowns make the stockings about the most conspicuous part of women's attire.

Hosiery bearing embroidered snakes, birds, butterflies and even mottoes have come into vogue.

Most of the stocks are pink, although some are white, and even a few purple, and green ones are seen. Those bearing the reptilian decorations are so marked that it would appear that the snakes are twined about the leg head downward. Bands of diamonds and other precious jewels are also used for decorative purposes. Some women wear slippers with the heels so high that it seems they are walking on stilts.

Not a few of the shoes are decorated with jewels. One woman had the heels of her shoes completely covered with pearls, rubies and diamonds.

Biggest Tree Found In Washington Woods

Finest Monarch Is 66 Feet In Circumference and Is 300 Feet High.

SEATTLE, WASH., July 12.—All previous records of big trees discovered in Washington and Oregon forests have been eclipsed by the latest find in Snohomish County, Washington, near the city of Everett. The giant tree is a yellow fir. This tree must be aged, for there are many tree stumps nearby that have from 100 to 500 rings, each said to represent a year's growth.

The new-found monarch of the Northwestern forests is 66 feet in circumference at the butt, and it is 128 feet to the first limb, which measures 100 inches in circumference.

The estimated height of this big fir is 300 feet. Snohomish people plan to float the tree to San Francisco next Summer in a log raft.

Couple Weds Again Without Any Rites

Recent Law Permits Divorced Pair to Renew Marital State Without Legal Ceremony.

MARINETTE, WIS., July 12.—Divorced in November, 1912, but now man and wife again without a marriage ceremony is the record of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph La Fave, of Armstrong Creek. Besides, the marriage is legal. The Legislature of 1911 enacted a law making it possible for a divorced couple within a year after the divorce judgment is entered to go before a court and obtain a vacation of the judgment, thus allowing the parties to the decree to resume the marriage relation without a ceremony being performed.

Veils Are Denounced as Dangerous by Doctor

By NORMAN BARNESBY, M. D.
Author of "Medical Chaos and Crime," "Eugenics" and "Mother and Child."

If the women of the twentieth century do not soon curtail their absurd, ugly, dangerous practice of swathing their faces in veils—veils dotted and spotted, veils bespiotched and bedizened—the better part of the race in the twenty-first century will be a lot of near-sighted, watery eyed, purblind, squinting men, women and children!

This is not speaking in superlatives. It is a matter of cold, calm, physiological fact. The truth is not hard to demonstrate; the physical explanation is very simple indeed.

The veils of to-day if persisted in will eventually ruin the eyes of the women who wear them. And these weakened, semi-useless eyes are bound to be transmitted to succeeding generations, both men and women. The time has come now to call a halt. Plain veils are bad enough; veils with huge polka dots, veils with stars and crescents, for all the world like the firmament in miniature; veils with bars and grill work, veils bristling with rhomboids and polygons, circles and cones, have got to go.

Or else our eyes will.

The medical profession of America is slow to jump at conclusions. But our physicians are fast realizing what this silly fad of to-day may mean to the race of to-morrow. Oculists abroad have taken it up in earnest, too.

Does Not Protect Skin.

From the standpoint of health not one favorable point can be made in favor of the veil. It is worn, we are told with great unction, to protect the skin; to keep the dust out of the eyes.

Protect the skin? Keep dust out of the eyes? Nonsense! The veil does neither. But we don't hear a word about its detrimental effect upon the eyesight. That is apparently a secondary consideration. And more; these silly fashions—they are really sillier follies—are not only ruining the eyes of our women, but impairing their bodily health in the bargain. There is always a lowered tone to the system when the eyes are seriously affected; and modern veils do affect them. One step further—thus we get in this lowered tone much of woman's latter-day nervousness.

To-day the veil stands as nothing more than an added vanity to vanity's already ample wardrobe!

It isn't worn to protect the lady's face at all. It is frankly donned as one more mark of attraction; that is all. Possibly it is worn to hide a bad complexion, not to protect it.

Causes Eye Strain.

No wonder we have so many neurasthenics among our well-to-do women!

Because of the heavy lines, and more particularly because of the heavier dots in most of the veils they wear, the light is not uniformly distributed to all parts of the retina.

Does milady know that? No!

The result, of course, is that while some parts of the retina are normally impinged by the light rays, those parts directly back of the dots and dashes in the veil receive no light at all, or only a little at the most. So we promptly get an overstraining of some parts of the delicate, most sensitive retina and a weakening of other parts.

"It protects the skin of the face from dust and germs!"

Oh, fallacy of fallacies! Actually a soda water and stronger things veil does exactly the opposite. The mesh catches and hold tight to all dust and bacteria. And every time the veil shifts this dirt is rubbed into the skin or into the veil, ready for the next wearing. And is any comment necessary when we know that women cough, sneeze and kiss through them without uncovering their mouths?

A veil is a dirty thing!

Al-Fresco Theater Latest Rage of Fashionable Paris

By LA RACONTEUSE

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 12.—Open-air theaters are all the rage in Europe now, and this season Paris has its own fashionable al-fresco stage almost in the heart of the city, just outside of the old fortifications at Pre Catlan, in the Bois de Boulegne, only ten minutes by auto from Place de L'Opera, or you may take one of the swift little steamers on the Seine to Longchamps, and then you have about fifteen minutes' walk to the theater. The practical management has arranged it so that you may spend all day and all night there and lack nothing.

If you want to be smart, however, you ride or drive out there in the early morning hours and take your "petit dejeuner" at one of the charming restaurants, and if you are real early you are almost sure to find parties of gay night birds who have come to cool their hot brains after their exertions at Abbaye, Pigalle or Maxim and get rid of the taste of the nightly champagne in a glass of the delicious milk from the little model dairy in the park.

All Paris Finally Arrives.

The night birds have rarely left the park when society begins to arrive for their "dejeuner a la fourchette," which is in turn followed by "le 5 o'clock" when "tout Paris" is there. Endless rows of motor cars are lined up outside the park emptying their contents. From some of them come shoals of fashionably dressed children with their respective "bonnes," for here the little ones are safe and the milk is nourishing and the air fragrant.

When the last arrivals have finished sipping their afternoon tea preparations are made for the play on the open-air stage in the background of the park.

Once more the silence is disturbed by the honking of auto horns, the clacking of whips, silvery laughter and gay ejaculations. The play, nearly always some short opera or operette, begins at 8 o'clock, in the presence of an elegant audience, which as soon as it is over hurries to the brilliantly illuminated pavilion, where waiters in magnificent liveries serve every delicacy that the most refined gourmet may imagine.

A band of red-coated musicians plays sentimental or gay tunes, and many are the ladies who are secretly sighing for a smile or a glance from the handsome leader of the orchestra, who has the reputation of being one of Paris' most dangerous Don Juans, whose charms no women can resist.

Festival Ends With Dance.

Later on scores of gay parties from Paris arrive; you meet more and more acquaintances and friends; you order more and more champagne; the conversation grows more and more animated; the whole crowd becomes one big party, and the festival ends with a wild, bacchantic dance as the sun rises and the electric lights fade. You drink a cup of chocolate, telephone for your car and drive back to Paris. A cold bath and you are ready to begin another day just like the one before, though you have not slept a wink. So light and stimulating is the wonderful air of Paris.

Wild Pigeons Found; Bird Thought Extinct

Surveyor Locates Roost of 300 "Passengers" in Wooded Tract Near Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, July 12.—A flock of 300 wild pigeons has been located by M. M. Garland, surveyor of the port of Pittsburg, near his home at Edgewood. The birds have gone to nest in a heavily wooded tract, and efforts will be made to secure several of the birds alive. According to Mr. Garland, he has been very close to them on three different occasions during the last two days, and he is positive they are perfect specimens of the supposedly extinct passenger pigeon.

Mr. Garland discovered the birds while hunting through the woods. Hearing their "cooings" at a distance, he investigated and discovered the roost. The birds had just begun building their nests.

'Better Babies,' Is Clubwoman Slogan

Montana Federation Hears Address in Which West Is Urged to Follow East's Example.

LIVINGSTON, MONT., July 12.—With a slogan of "Better Babies in Montana," the Montana Federation of Women's Clubs opened its annual convention in this city.

Mrs. David Jackson's annual address was featured by her appeal to forward the work of "better babies" as it is being done in Eastern cities.

One of the principal speakers was Mrs. Una B. Herrick, dean of women at the State Agricultural College at Bozeman, who spoke upon "The Girl's Problem," declaring that "when women have attained political power the underworld will flaunt itself no more, and, although clandestine vice may not vanish from the earth and the whole social evil be eliminated, yet to the solution of the social evil problem will be brought strength which all the paths of the underworld will be unable to circumvent."

THIRTEEN-YEAR-OLD BOY SAVES MAN FROM DROWNING

COTTONWOOD FALLS, KANS., July 12.—Ted Knapp, aged thirteen, saved the life of Eden Powlan, a mail clerk, in the Cottonwood River. Powlan, a poor swimmer, became exhausted. He called for help when unable to keep afloat longer, and the Knapp boy swam to his rescue. After a hard struggle he got Powlan into shallow water and both waded out.

Court Like Powwow At Indian Will Trial

Veteran Chiefs, Grizzled Pioneers and Cattlemen Witnesses in Suit of Squaw.

SPOKANE, July 12.—Veteran Indian chiefs of the San Poil tribe, grizzled pioneers who have seen the Inland Empire grow from a wilderness, weather-beaten old stockmen and old Susan Enos, the squaw who claims half of the John Enos (Portuguese Joe) $250,000 estate, made Judge J. Stanley Webster's courtroom look like a real powwow instead of a court of justice, when the legal battle began for possession of the dead pioneer's estate.

Old Mrs. Enos claims to have married Joe in September, 1870, when she sat in an Indian tepee and was given to him by her mother and father.

COLLEGE PROFESSORS HUNT DISAPPEARING ANIMALS

SAN FRANCISCO, July 12.—Valuable additions to the museum of vertebrate zoology of the University of California will be the outgrowth of an expedition now being conducted by university professors in Marin County.

More than usual success has been enjoyed by the exploring party this year. Several important discoveries have been made. Many rare mammals which are rapidly disappearing from the Marin County hills have been caught and will be used as specimens.

COUNTESS TAKES UP LACE MAKING ART IN FRANCE

Society Leader Reviving Industry on Large Scale—Benefiting Hundreds of Women.

By MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE.
Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 12.—Thanks to the initiative of one of our leading young society matrons, the Countess de Marmier, the hand lace industry is about to assume its old ascendancy in France.

Madame de Marmier, who is a member of one of our old ducal families, has collected the very best specimens of old French lace, and has given an exhibition. Some of our most distinguished women have undertaken to help her in this national revival of lace.

The idea was suggested to Mme. de Marmier by Queen Margherita of Italy, who has a collection of old laces said to be the finest in the world.

Seeks Specimens in Tombs.

Her Majesty has made a thorough study of the history of lace. She even went so far as to visit the tombs of the ancient convents of Italy in search of specimens.

Her object was not merely artistic attraction, but also to find work in their own homes for Italian women. Inspired by this noble example, the Countess de Marmier is doing the same for France, but on a much larger scale.

Toward the end of the eighteenth century lacemaking reached its zenith in France. Valenciennes alone employed many hundreds of thousands of women. When Napoleon III had himself declared Emperor only two old lace-makers could be found in that town.

Machine Product Not Liked.

Bergue, Lille Bailleul and other northern towns took it up, but machine-made lace has never been popular in France.

Now Mme. de Marmier is establishing lacemaking centers wherein the best old French lace is made. It is a gigantic work which will give pleasant and profitable employment to all women desiring it.

This young woman, brought up among those who labor not, neither do they spin, issuing from the most frivolous Paris society, will become the savior of many of her poorer countrywomen.

$626,350,000 in Life Insurance Paid

Report for 1912 Shows New York in Lead With Chicago and Philadelphia Next.

CHICAGO, July 12.—Life insurance payments in the United States and Canada amounted to $626,350,000 during 1912, according to the annual tabulation made by The Insurance Press.

Of this $613,350,000 was for claims paid in the United States and Canada and $213,000,000 was for refunds and surrender values and payments to foreign policyholders.

All these years show a large increase over previous years.

Greater New York led with payments of $81,859,425 in 1912, followed by Chicago with $11,952,956, Philadelphia $11,053,000 and Boston $7,750,886.

ANCIENT ROMAN SARCOPHAGUS FETCHES $8,400

Lustral Bowl in White Marble, Finely Carved, Brings $1,260 at Sale in London.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—A sale of antique sculpture and old English furniture at Christie's realized about $26,000. It included some tapestries which were owned by the late Duchess of Newcastle. A set of four Brunels panels, showing hunting and sporting scenes of the early seventeenth century, sold for $4,620.

A Chippendale mahogany commode with serpentine front, 49 inches wide, fetched $1,680.

The head of a large statue of Dionysos, with some restorations, sold for $1,102. A well preserved sarcophagus found in a funeral chamber at Astia, in 1825, a beautiful specimen in the Roman style, about 6 feet long, was sold for $8,400.

A large lustral bowl in white marble, about four feet in diameter, supported on three feet, the whole finely carved, brought $1,260. This is under the experts' estimates of its value. The sides of the bowl are decorated with acanthus leaves and scrolls and figures of griffins; the supports are ornamented with leopards' heads in full relief and terminated by claw feet.

The bowl is regarded as an unusually fine example; its approximate diameter is 1.28 and its height 1.43 meters.

A sale of engravings at Sotheby's realized $14,006. Reynolds' "Lady Elizabeth Foster," by F. Bartolozzi, finely printed in colors, brought $800. J. R. Smith's "Narcissa" and "Flirtilla," both printed in color, were sold for $750.

ClassIs Instructed In Sleeping Car Lore

Milwaukte Girls Are Taught How to Pack, Read Time Tables and Sleep in Pullmans.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., July 12.—"Class in sleeping cars stand up!"

Superintendent A. A. Johnson, of Milwaukee County Agricultural School, and Miss Pearl McDonald, household economy department, said this the other afternoon, and ten girls arose.

The two teachers led the way to the street car terminal, more than a mile away, where the party boarded a car to Union Depot, Milwaukee, a road sleeper, where the "recitation" was held.

Superintendent Johnson thinks pupils should learn to do by doing. The trip to the sleeper was preceded by instruction in packing suit cases. What to take, and what not, was considered, and the girls were shown what constiutes a good outfit. Timetables were distributed and each girl picked out a trip.

CHURCH IN MEXICO HOLDS BUT TEN WORSHIPERS

EL PASO, July 12.—Mexico, for a country that is so poor, boasts some wonderfully big and fine churches and it also has what is claimed to be the smallest church in the world.

It is situated at Penon, near the City of Mexico, and is a rude affair, yet it serves all purposes, as the local population is small. It has a "seating capacity" of about ten, though there are, in fact, no seats.

School children are quick and easy prey to the "stoop habit." With the "young shoot," however, it is not so much a habit as it is a natural inclination. They are too young to realize just exactly what pride or poise is, and go on from day to day for a period of seven to twelve years poring over their books, unconscious of the "stoop" that is stealthily settling its clutches on the youthful frame. The bent shoulders become more bent as age increases.

The "KOMFORT BRACE"

Should be worn by all children to constantly prevent the inclination to "stoop," and, by keeping the chest extended, encourage and necessitate "deep breathing," the foremost law of perfect health. With the inclination to stoop stopped, DEEP BREATHING rapidly becomes a perfectly natural funotion. "Train up a child in the way it should go, and when he GROWS up he will not depart from it" can be paraphrased to read "grow" instead of "go," and aptly, too, as the axiom applies to hygiene, as well as "morals."

Instruct us to mail you our letter of full particulars and illustrated descriptive folder about the "KOMFORT BRACE."

BABIES NEEDED, NOT SOLDIERS, SAYS BERTILLON

Noted Criminologist Asserts That France's Greatest Peril Is Decrease in Birth Rate.

By GEORGES DUFRESNE.
Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 12.—"What France really wants in order not to become a second-class power," says Dr. Jacques Bertillon, of finger-print fame, "is not a military law of three years, which will really only be a palliative, to be followed by demands for four and five years' service, but more children, just as other countries have them."

The doctor shows that the years of 1911 and 1912 have been the worst ever registered in France. Before 1907 this country never had less than 800,000 births; before 1887 she had never less than 900,000, and before 1867 the figure was approximately 1,000,000. This, or nearly so, was the number of births in Germany at that period. But to-day the number of births in Germany is about 2,000,000, while France has to regard 750,000 as the normal figure.

Other Countries Show Increase.

Holland, with a population of one-eighth of that of France, has a greater number in men to record each year. It is often pretended that the increase in the population is checked in other countries as well as in France. The contrary is the case. During the period of 1901-1905 Italy's population increased 351,000 inhabitants, that of Austra.-Hungary by 521,000 and that of Germany by 845,000. These figures, crushing as they are for France, are lower than the present figures.

Dr. Bertillon then points out that the number of marriages in Fran e rose to 311,929 in 1912. Few countries have so high a figure in comparison with their population. Frenchmen marry readily enough, but they lack children in their homes. They have at present two or three, but they should have three or four. Dr. Bertillon says it would be necessary to protect honor, and especially to help efficaciously those who render to the country the valuable service of rearing families.

Mun Points Out Duty.

The present condition of France is a fruitful topic for writers. When Germany announced her decision to greatly strengthen her army, there was no doubt in the minds of many thinkers that she was making preparations for what they describe as "the decisive hour." It became necessary for Frenchmen who think and write to take stock of the position of the country and to point out the dangers which threatened it. They rose to the occasion, and none more readily than M. de Mun, who was writing a book which is being much discussed just now.

The duty which lies before France is clearly indicated by M. de Mun. Reviewing the book in The Gaulois, M. Emile Faguet, the academician, dwells on one of the questions which the author discusses at length, and which was the real reason for writing the book—the necessity of France returning to the three-year military system.

M. Jaures, the Socialist leader, as an antagonist of militarism, has done his best to oppose the Government. One of his arguments was that the great Marshal Bugeaud attacked the three-year system. It is true that the great soldier attacked it, but his onslaught was made not because, as the Socialist leader wanted to make out, three years was too long a period for a man to serve in the army, but because it was too short. He wanted the period to be seven years.

Two Await Death; Garrote Is Missing

HAVANA, July 12.—The Secretary of Government during a visit of inspection to Havana jail made the grimly humorous discovery that although two persons, were there awaiting the garrote, the instrument of execution, was missing.

Ex-President Gomez during his administration commuted all the death sentences or pardoned those condemned to undergo capital punishment and shortly before he retired he presented the garrote to a newly established museum as a historic curiosity.

The Secretary of Government sent orders to the museum to return the garrote at once.

Geraldine Farrar Forgets Music After Air Cruise

Will Be Engaged to Any Man Who Owns Dirigible

Geraldine Farrar, who, after one ride in airship, declares that music is now a secondary consideration. She would like to buy a Zeppelin dirigible.

The Fair Operatic Star Makes a Trip in Zeppelin Craft and Proclaims Herself a Fiend for Sky Riding.

By ALAN DALE,
Special Correspondent of the Hearst's Sunday American.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, July 12.—Geraldine Farrar forgot all about music, all about her "art," all about the Metropolitan, all about trivial mundane happenings when I met her to-day at the Adlon Hotel. She had just made a trip in an airship—one of the Zeppelins that fly from Hamburg to Leipsig, and she was "all emotioned," as they say in French. Excitement, and not No. 18, flushed her pretty features, and she certainly did look awfully charming in a rather severe navy blue walking dress and a black "flappy" hat—not one of the basin shapes that make a gell look as though she were clamoring to be extinguished. Miss Farrar is too wise for that sort of folly. Besides, she isn't clamoring to be extinguished. Perish the thought!

"I've had the experience of my life," she said emotionally, "and nothing now matters but airships—to my mind. Henceforth I'm an airship fiend, and I'll be engaged for six whole months to any man who can supply me with an airship, and—of course—remain in the background."

Felt She Owned World.

She laughed in the quiet and untinkling way that gells over here acquire—a laugh that gets there, but makes no noise about it.

"I felt," she went on, "that I owned the world. A splendid feeling of superiority possessed me—a delightful sensation of being above all the petty things of life. No, I'm not romancing or drawing a long bow. I made the flight with mother, father and two friends, and I assure you that it was a revelation. I want to own an airship. I must do so. It is the most glorious method of transit imaginable."

She paused for a moment to get breath, for she was genuinely excited, and looked with disdain at the music on the open piano—a reminder of the daily struggle.

"Let me tell you all about it," she said. "Mommer, you know, is very nervous and inclined to be light-headed. She can't look down from a height or out of a moving train, so she was really a good test of the airship's comfort. And she never once had a qualm. We started from Potsdam, where there is a field and a cafe—you can take coffee and sausage there as everywhere in Germany. They let down a little aluminum ladder—the cutest thing you have ever seen—and before you knew it we were off—off—way up in the air. Oh, joy!"

Every Comfort Aboard.

Her eyes danced as she proceeded, and she grew so animated that if the Metropolitan Opera House peo-' had seen her, they would have been aghast at such vivacity.

"Every imaginable comfort—the last word in luxury—greeted us in the car. It was a lovely room, with comfortable basket armchairs along the sides—a big wide room, that you couldn't imagine to be a space in an airship. We sat there, and we drank champagne, and we ate dainty sandwiches, and we wrote hundreds of postal cards to friends."

Even in the air, I thought, the terrible habit of postal card writing appears to thrive. It is an ineradicable habit.

"The German Government has provided special airship stamps, and I can tell you we used them plentifully. Oh, how delicious it all was. You touched an electric bell, and instantly a steward appeared to do your bidding. The luxury of the most luxurious hotel and the elegance of the most modern steamship were at our beck and call. There was room for 35 people. Nobody was scared; nobody felt the slightest discomfort; we all sat in our delightfully cozy chairs and revelled. We were masters of the air—I believe we went up 2,500 feet—I THINK so, at least—and I—I—well, I never wanted to come down."

She looked so amusingly regretful that I laughed. She really meant what she said.

Wants to Buy Craft.

"A steward thought I was crazy. I said I wanted to buy an airship, and he told me it cost half a million marks. 'A mere trifle,' I said, and he thought I was demented. What a splendid advertisement for any American millionaire! Just think of it. Oh, I've forgotten to say that I promised to drop a bouquet for Mr. Adlon, of this hotel, who is an old friend of mine. I did it. I reckoned it all out. We dipped sometimes, you know, and swerved, and during one of these dips, when we were over this roof, I dropped the bouquet, and it was recovered. Wasn't that charming—and sweet—and dear?"

I thought it was, all that and more. To get a bouquet from the clouds—who could desire anything more touching?

"As to singing—oh, I forgot all about it—all about such trivialities and details. I forgot my work and my ambition. All I felt was a strong wish never to come down, but I'm afraid to go up again for fear I might spoil those glorious first sensations. You know—you do or you don't—that Zeppelin is planning to send an airship across the Atlantic and believes he can do it in two days. He is asking the Government to grant him three warships for the purpose. Wouldn't it be great?

Describes Ship's Machinery.

"I understand all about the machinery and the make-up and the possibilities of these airships. You see, 'tis like this * * * and then * * * and so * * * and thus * * *."

She went into an elaborate description of machinery and technical details that made my head whizz. I'm an awful failure at anything of the kind, but Geraldine Farrar had no compunction. She told me all—all about it, and if I don't understand a Zeppelin airship it is MY fault. And I don't. But she loved telling me all about it, and when I left her I felt I must fly as she did. It's fearfully cheap. Only $25 a fly!

PRIVATE COMPANIES PILFER FRENCH ISLES IN PACIFIC

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 12.—French islands in the Pacific are being pilfered, the French Colonial Office finds out, by private companies and individuals.

In one case, it is stated that a native named Taaroa of Tahiti, who acts as a kind of local surveyor for the French Government, sold three islands to an English company.

SUFFRAGETTES INVADE PALACE DESPITE QUEEN

Fear That They Will Kidnap English Royal Children Causes Increased Detective Force.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—Queen Mary, who, ever since her visit to Germany, has been living in constant terror of the suffragettes, who are said to be planning to capture one of the royal children, was greatly shocked some time ago by the discovery that not one but several believers in the militant idea had got inside the palace walls and had been in touch with the royal family every day for several months.

The Queen immediately before she went abroad discovered a parlor maid in the royal apartments wearing the dreaded badge of the Women's Social and Political Union.

Gives Queen Her Promise.

On the advice of the secret service department nothing was said about the discovery at the time and the girl was even permitted to keep her position after a long talk with Queen Mary, whom she willingly promised not to take advantage of her position to spirit away any of the royal children.

During the last few weeks a quiet investigation of the political creed of all women high and low occupied inside the palace walls brought out the astonishing fact that practically every maid employed by the royal family was steeped in militant literature, and that a great number of aristocratic ladies holding high court positions were ardent followers of Mrs. Pankhurst.

Chief Dresser Resigns.

When Queen Mary, who, until the suffragettes began to commit illegal and criminal acts of violence, had been a believer in political rights for women, found herself surrounded by militant suffragettes she at first intended to get rid of all the suspected ones, and it was because of this that Lady Shaftesbury suddenly resigned. The Queen accepted her resignation with perfect equanimity, but was greatly perturbed when it was followed by the resignation of her chief dresser who was in charge of that part of her wardrobe intended to be used during her visit to Berlin.

For several days consternation reigned at Buckingham, as several of the Queen's dresses were not yet ready. The chief dresser steadfastly refused to budge, but in the eleventh hour the diplomacy of Queen Alexandra resulted in a compromise, whereby Queen Mary gave up her first severe course and had to be satisfied with a promise by the suffragettes inside the palace walls that they would not openly wear the W. S. P. R. badge while on duty in the royal residences and that they would not distribute seditious literature among the other employees.

The Queen, however, since the last mad exploits of the suffragettes does not trust these promises and special detectives are watching the royal children night and day.

Deputies' Thirst May Stop Free Drinks

Vast Quantity of Coffee, Mineral Water, Wine and Beer Consumed by Italian Statesmen.

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, July 12.—The recent stormy sittings of the Italian Chamber of Deputies have led to increased consumption of liquids, and some economists are endeavoring to abolish free drinks.

When a Deputy arises to deliver a set oration coffee and iced water are brought him by a messenger. One of the speaker's neighbors pours him out a cup and keeps it replenished. There is a buffet in the outer lobby, where deputies are supplied gratuitously with beer, wine, spirits, coffee, ices and mineral water, and in hot weather this is well patronized.

As, however, the value of the drinks consumed last year by the 508 deputels was barely $4,000 (of which $2,000 went for mineral waters) they can not be accused of excessive thirst. Parliamentary Representatives in Italy receive no pay. Free drinks and free railway travel are the only privileges they enjoy.

GIRL IS RESCUED AFTER LEAP INTO RHINE FALLS

Special Cable to The American.

VIENNA, July 12.—A 17-year-old girl who tried to commit suicide by springing from the bridge over the famous Rhine Falls at Schaffhausen was miraculously rescued.

She leaped right into the middle of the great waterfall, where a mass of water thunders over an irregular rocky ledge 60 feet high. Her body was whirled down in a mass of foam and reappeared on the south side of the falls. A fisherman saw her and putting out in his boat, dragged the unconscious girl from the water.

Leaving his craft to the mercy of the stream, he immediately set about resuscitating the girl. The girl, who did not receive a single scratch, is said to be the only person who has ever emerged from the Rhine Falls alive.

PARIS, July 12.—According to the annual report of the consular district of Bordeaux, the wine vintage for the whole of France in 1912, computed at 1,305,458,770 gallons, showed an increase of 317,976,670 gallons over that of 1911.

ISLE'S DEFENSE IS BIG PROBLEM BEFORE BRITAIN

Three Different Factions in England Dispute as to Best Plan of Insuring Against Invasion.

By PHILIP EVERETT.
Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—There was a time when England, trusting her proud, invincible navy, felt as safe as if the whole country were protected by a bombproof shelter, but nowadays the public mind is forever taken up with deliberations of the question if England really is capable of resisting any enemy and how the country may best defend herself if the occasion should arise.

England's political situation in the world, of course, is not so very bad. With justifiable pride we point to the fact that the country's traditional world policy is still triumphant time and again, and at present England hardly has a rival able to move his arms so freely as England herself.

Britain Political Center.

We make the most of the fact that the now ended war in the Balkans at its finish moved the political center of gravity toward Great Britain. It is also a fact that as far as diplomatic success among the powers is concerned England emerged at least temporarily an easy winner, whose statesmen are still studying and observing the remaining Balkan problems so as to get the greatest possible benefit from them. That Sir Edward Grey has proved himself a diplomat of rank even the most bitter opponents of the present government willingly admit.

But, in spite of all our diplomatic successes and our growing political prestige, we look with fear and apprehension at the rapid growth, not only among the great powers, but also in the smaller countries, of navies, dirigibles, aeroplanes and armies. We realize, perhaps, even to exaggeration, that this military and naval evolution in other countries has created a new state of affairs, which makes it ridiculous or even criminal to indulge in the old-time dreams of England's safety and impregnability.

Nation Is Divided.

When the question arises how England is to be defended against a hostile attack, the people divide themselves into three camps. The first of these consists of a dwindly party of people who insist that England should place her whole trust in her navy. This does not mean to say that the English people have less confidence in their navy than before, for this is very far from being the case, but it is realized that with the evolution of the various arms of attack the field of activity and usefulness of the navy has diminished.

The most numerous party in the country consists of those who place their trust in intelligent co-operation between the navy and the territorial army. This view is held by the admiral-in-chief of the navy, Prince Louis of Battenberg, who recently openly declared that, unassisted, the navy would not be able to protect the country, but that a well-drilled army was an absolute necessity.

Convict Burned in Store He Robbed

Special Cable to The American.

STOCKHOLM, July 12.—An escaped Swedish convict named Anderson reached the Island of Mar, near Norrkoping, a few nights ago, where he broke into a government store and helped himself liberally to food and drink.

He went to sleep and in some way upset a lamp, setting the store on fire. The outbreak spread to a wood, 38 acres in extent, which was destroyed.

Police at Norrkoping, whose attention was attracted by the glare, went to the island and captured the convict, who was severely burned.

ENGRAVED WEDDING INVITATIONS

A wedding is the most important event in a girl's life.

Naturally she wants, and should have, engraved invitations or announcements which are ultra-fashionable and correct in every detail.

Requirments and fashions change frequently. What was perfectly correct last year may be considered bad form this season.

Our engraving is noted for its smoothness and beauty. All engraving orders are looked after by a member of the Company. He is considered an authority on society engraving. It is his business to personally see that every little detail is correct. Our reputation depends upon his ability to do this, and you can rest assured your order will have our conscientious and prompt attention.

London Costers Lose "King of Pearlies"

Activity of Chief of Donkey Tradesmen in Charity Won Admiration of Duchess of Argyle.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—London costers have lost their chief, T. J. Foyle, "King of the Pearlies," whose funeral took place recently.

Foyle died in the Royal Free Hospital, after a brief illness, which had been brought on by undertaking a deed of kindness when in weak health. When in full dress Foyle wore a suit studded with 33,000 pearl buttons.

It was not so much his dazzling suit of pearlies—the envy of hundreds of his class—as his "great human heart" which won for Foyle the admiration of all with whom he came in contact. He was always one of the first to respond to the call of charity, and his sympathy with his fellow workers won for him the admiration of Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll. When Foyle lay in the Royal Free Hospital her royal highness sent her secretary to inquire as to his condition.

Head Waiters' Tips Average $60 a Week

New York and London People Most Generous Givers, Says One in Memoirs.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 12.—A Paris head waiter has just published his memoirs, based on long years of observation behind the chairs of diners. Among the most essential qualities of the waiter are, he says, agility and physical self-control. He has known waiters to be discharged at a moment's notice from restaurants because they sneezed while on duty.

The best maitres d'hotel would dismiss a waiter who handed the wine list when the menu was called for.

Best tips are received in London and New York. Head waiters average $60 a week in tips.

The writer relates an instance of a waiter who, by speculation, made $100,000.

Motorists' Way Eased By New Rule in Italy

Customs Annoyances Suffered by Thousands of Americans Abolished by Customs Officers.

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, July 12.—It will interest the thousands of American motorists who every year enter Italy to learn that henceforth the Italian customs authorities will not annoy them with their petty formalities.

During the tourists' congress this week at Amsterdam, an agreement was reached between Milton Mansfield, of the American Automobile Association, and Signor L. Mercanti, of the Italian Touring Club, under which all fiscal nuisances connected with the landing in Italy of foreign automobiles will be stopped.

According to Mansfield, more than 3,000 American tourists land every year at Naples and, after touring Italy and Switzerland, return home by a northern route.

U. S. CARDINAL WORKS TO GIVE POPE FREEDOM

O'Connell Devises Plan of Extending Vatican Grounds to Permit Pontiff to Enjoy Sea.

By CAMILLO CIANFARRA.
Special Cable to The American.

ROME, July 12.—Announcement that negotiations were in progress between the Vatican and the heirs of Prince Torlonia for the purchase by the former of the famous "pine wood," with a view to annexing it to the Vatican gardens has revealed a moving episode of His Holiness' illness in April and has afforded new proof of Cardinal O'Connell's devotion to the Holy Father.

Pontiff Loves the Sea.

Pius X has always been a farvent lover of the sea, even before he became Patriarch of Venice, but his long stay in that city greatly intensified his love for the sunlit, ever-moving expanse.

For years he has struggled with his homesickness, which he mentioned only to his most intimate friends and relatives, but during his recent illness this longing for the sea overmastered him. In his delirium he invoked the sea; he heard the waves beating on the shore and smelled the salt air.

Finally this long-repressed desire became an obsession which seriously alarmed the physicians. It was then planned to join the Vatican to the sea by piecing together several properties. This, however, would never have been carried out had not Cardinal O'Connell paid a visit to Rome and heard of it.

America to Help.

He went over the ground with several Vatican officials and advised them to buy first the "Pineta Sacchetti," which is comparatively close and extends over 600 acres separated from the Vatican only by a narrow lane.

From this place it will not be difficult to form a pathway over the few remaining miles which separate the Vatican from the sea. The American Cardinal has promised all financial help needed.

Contributions will come pouring in from every corner of the earth and the Pope will be a prisoner no more, for he will once more behold his beloved sea and occasionally sail on the blue Mediterranean.

GOOD EYE FIRST ESSENTIAL TO GOOD BATTING, SAYS ZIMMERMAN

Batter Can't Outguess Pitcher

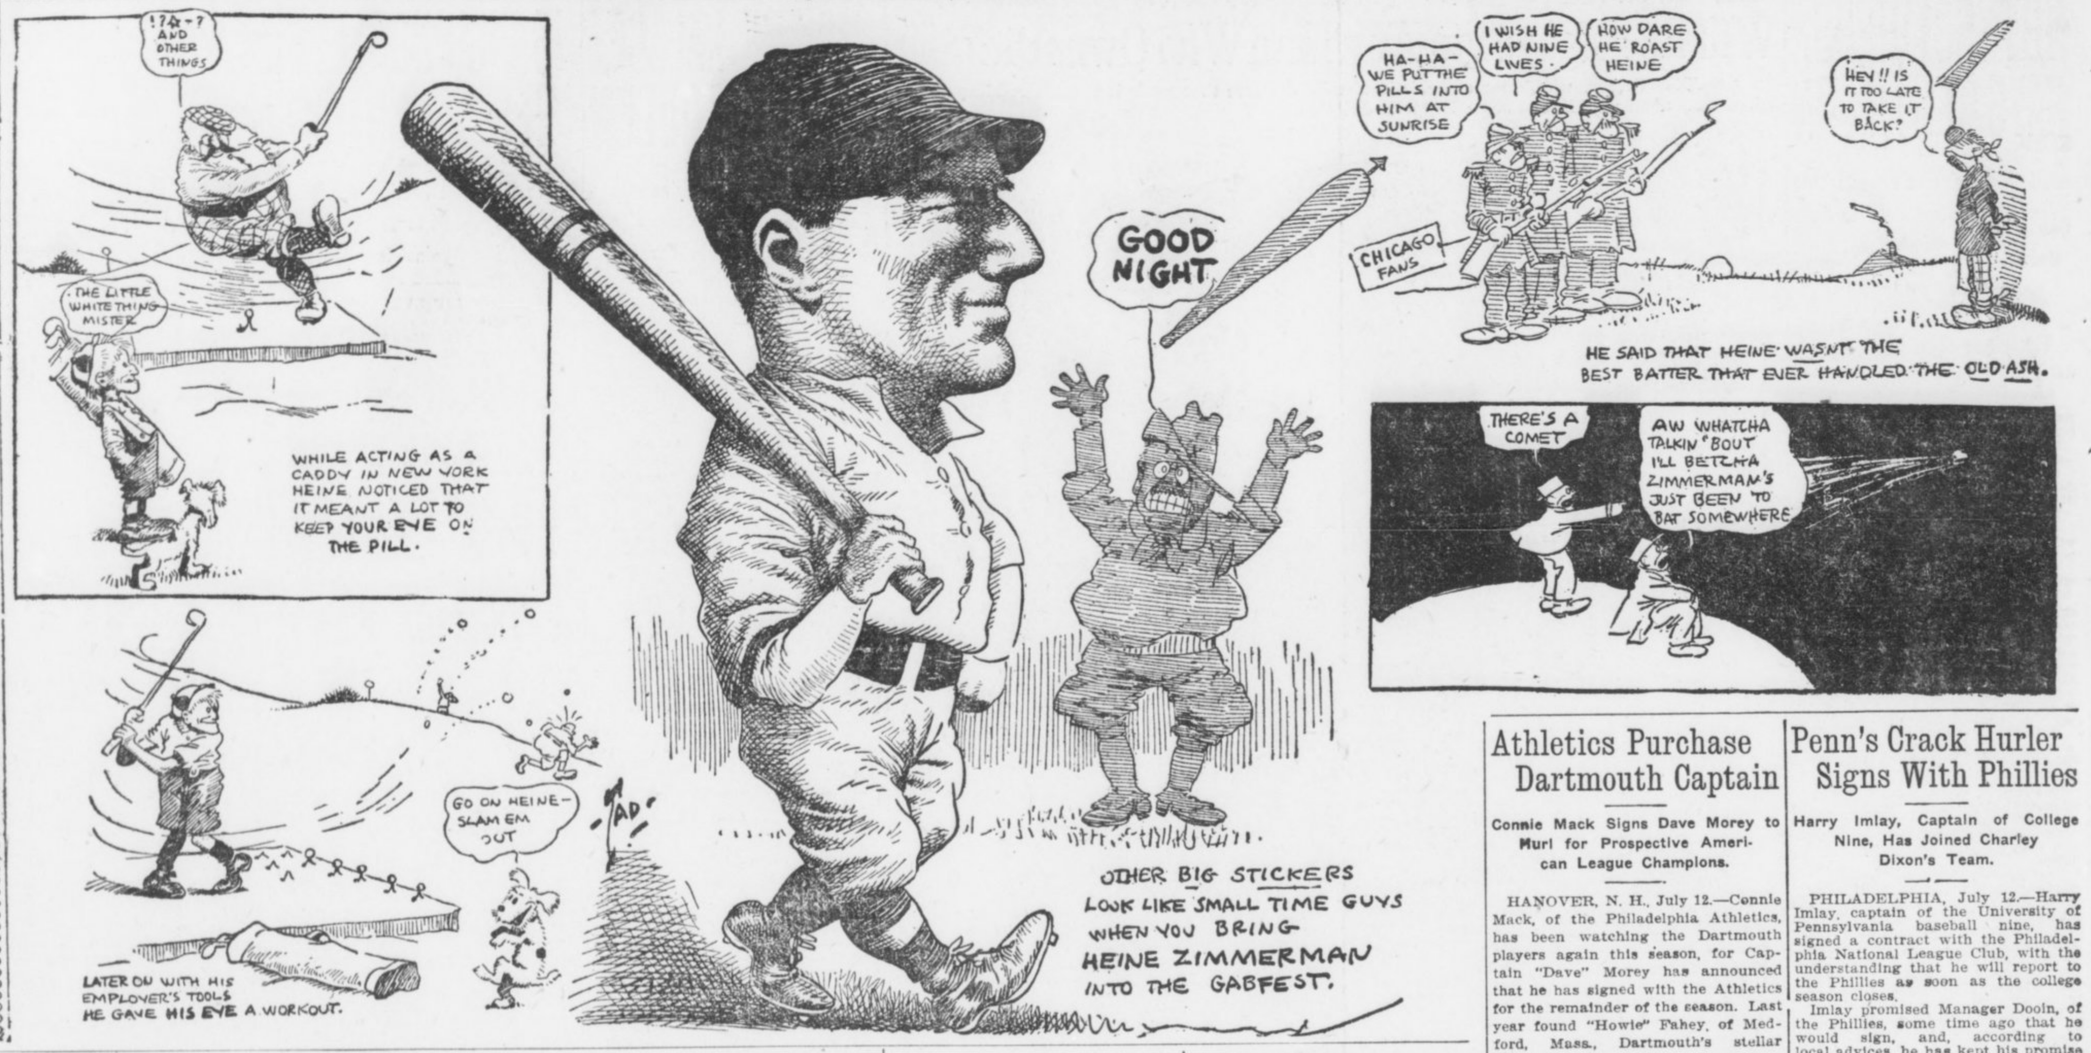
'HEINE' ZIMMERMAN begins today a series of articles on how to hit the ball. As Zimmerman is one of the best batters the national game ever produced he writes with authority. One of the first things a batter must know is that he can't outguess the pitcher. Here is the way 'Heine' puts it:

Many a batter goes up there and hits on a hunch, tries to outguess the pitcher and that sort of thing. That is, he convinces himself that the pitcher is going to throw a curve ball, and if it starts across the plate he falls away because he is certain that when it breaks it will come too close for comfort. He is made to look foolish. Maybe he gets the idea that it is to be a fast one. He swings and the ball breaks and he is made to look bad, for frequently it hits him.

To be really a great batter three things are absolutely essential, Zimmerman says. A batter MUST have:

A Good Eye
Confidence
Strength

"HEINE" DEVELOPING HIS BIG STICK, AS SEEN BY TAD, THE CELEBRATED CARTOONIST



'HEINE' TELLS HOW TRAINING AS CADDY MADE HIM A BATTER

By HENRY (HEINE) ZIMMERMAN.

A GOOD eye, confidence and strength are the three essentials which must be possessed by the youth whose ambition it is to be hailed as a "slugger" in baseball.

And the asset which the average fan figures as the most valuable is of the least worth of the three. That is strength.

Of course there are half a dozen other qualities which enter into a man's hitting. But they are of the minor brand.

If a man possesses a bad eye he'll never be a great hitter.

If a man is without confidence he will never be a great hitter.

If a man lacks strength he'll never be a great slugger.

Those are three assets which every slugger must possess. In my opinion the greatest of all is the eye.

It is the eye which drives the ball over the fence. Of course the arms swing the bat which meets the ball. But if the eye doesn't inform the arms when to swing the ball will never sail over the fence and there will be the "Ohs" of disappointment from the fans as they watch a pop fly instead of the shrieks as they arise in their seats to watch the sphere clear the barrier.

How the Eye Knocks the Home Run.

Here is what happens when a home run hit is made. The eye of the batter follows the ball from the moment it leaves the pitcher's hand. The eye never for the fraction of a second leaves that ball. The eye informs the mind when to start that swing. If the eye be perfect then the bat meets the ball at exactly the proper moment and at the proper place.

The strength would have counted for nothing if the ball hadn't been met fair. Instead of sailing over the fence the ball would have popped into the air.

Any success which I have had as a batter is due to the fact that I have developed my eye. And I did that before I ever played baseball.

When I was a youngster of ten or eleven I went to the Westchester Golf Club in the Bronx, New York. I secured a position as caddy and there the value of a true eye first impressed me. The instructor impressed his students with that idea. And I certainly had an excellent opportunity of watching it tested.

We caddies would go out with a foursome. Then we would stand back and watch the fellows drive either from the tee or in the field. Some fellow would slice and his swearing could be heard for yards. Oh, it was funny, all right. But we caught his mistake. At just about the moment when his club was going to meet that ball he would take his eye from the little pellet.

Good Golfer, Good Batter.

A bad drive, much profanity would follow, and if we caddies happened to be betting a bit on the fellows we were following you can gamble that we didn't bless the fellow who made the bad drive.

Of course I did what every other caddy does. I practiced with the club. And this thing of watching the ball, never losing it for an instant, made such an impression upon me that I quickly learned how to drive. And if I do say it myself I became a pretty decent driver.

When I drifted into baseball I quickly learned that the eye developed on the golf links was about the best asset I had. And keeping my eye on the ball has been my theory ever since.

Gussing a Poor Method.

Many a batter goes up there and hits on a hunch, tries to outguess the pitcher and that sort of thing. That is, he convinces himself that the pitcher is going to throw him a curve ball and, if it starts across the plate, he falls away because he is certain that when it breaks it will come too close for comfort. He is made to look foolish. Maybe he gets the idea that it is to be a fast one. He swings and the ball breaks and he is made to look bad, for frequently it hits him.

In the series between the Cubs and the Athletics for the world's series we thought we had the signs of Bender, who was pitching for Philadelphia.

Eye Better Than Sign Reading.

For several innings we thought that when Ira Thomas, the catcher, called the pitcher "Albert," his first name, that he was calling for a fast one, and when he called him "Chief" it was a curve. Frank Schulte went up, heard Thomas call the pitcher "Albert," and prepared to swing on a fast ball. It happened to be a curve and Schulte ducked in time to keep from being beaned.

Then we went back to the other system—following the ball with the eye instead of trusting to signs.

Cleveland Fans Sour on Johnson

'Big Chief' Is Getting in Wrong

By W. J. McBeth.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Ban Johnson used to be a real Moses to his American League children. He led them out of the wilderness of the war days into an era of financial milk and honey. But, like the celebrated Duke of York, with his storied ten thousand men, having marched his forces up the hill, the big czar gives evidences of intention to march them down again. The green pastures of the promised have failed to satisfy. Ban hungers once more for the wilderness. Mighty in war, the American League president chafes under the monotony of peace. His restless soul, thwarted in its belligerency toward certain foemen of the National League, has been forced, on occasion, to seek a vent in interference with the henchmen of his own domain.

Ban Attacks Birmingham.

The latest outburst of the American League autocrat was directed against Joe Birmingham, manager of the Cleveland club. Mr. Johnson intimated that in his opinion, Birmingham was no fit person to be in charge of an American League club. Whatever prompted the attack, it appeared very ill-timed. In the few short months he had been in charge of the Naps, Birmingham had fashioned a pennant contender from an habitual second division aggregation. His club was very much in evidence as a potent factor of the struggle. And as the public, after all, pays its good money in the expectation of patronizing and propitiating results, Mr. Johnson aroused no loud hurrahs of indorsement to his attack on Birmingham. Mr. Johnson simply raised against the popularity in his own balliwick the resentment of one more city.

Cleveland fandom is not likely quietly to brook the official interference of even the mighty Johnson with a man who is making good in its opinion.

Birmingham, unfortunately, had troubles of his own at the time; eternal dissensions that could best be straightened out in the clubhouse. The great Napoleon Lajoie objected to club discipline when his manager thought it to the best interests of all to give the mighty Frenchman a rest. Lajoie went over Birmingham's head with a direct appeal to President Charles Somers. Perhaps, it was with the idea of throwing out a hint to the boss as to his personal views of the matter that Johnson expressed himself in such emphatic disapproval of Birmingham. However, it is quite certain now that Ban Johnson and not Joe Birmingham will be held responsible for the shortcomings of Cleveland, if the inside bickerings develop into open club warfare in the Forest City.

Johnson Knocks "Live Ones."

For some reason, Mr. Johnson appears to have a penchant for picking onto "live wires" and indorsing "dead ones." His meddlesome disposition has "Dutched" him in half of the American League cities. He is about as popular in St. Louis as scarlet fever in a nursery. For years and years he was openly accused, in the Mound City, of trying to drive Bob Hedges out of the league. Once Hedges actually negotiated a sale. But the prospective buyers failed to make good the first payment, and the Browns reverted to the original ownership. Ban, at the time, took no pains to conceal his disappointment. There are those in New York bold enough to accuse Johnson of entertaining kindred designs upon Frank Farrell's property. Charlie Comiskey, mouthpiece of Johnson—or the other way, if one is pinned down to sheer truth, declared a few months ago that within five years every American League club would be owned by old-time baseball players. Straws, indeed, that indicate a wind from a dangerous quarter for those millionaires of the Yawkey-Somers-Farrell type whose financial influence forced recognition of equality from the National League in Johnson's scheme of expansion.

Other Cities War on Johnson.

New York has as little reason as Boston, St. Louis, Cleveland or Detroit to worship at the shrine of Big Ban. Enough sterling players have been lost to the Highlanders through the alleged advice of the league executive to form two or three world's championship aggregations. By forcing Jake Stahl onto Clark Griffith in 1908, Johnson not only made the "Old Fox" a laughing stock of both big leagues, but further effected his retirement in disgrace at midseason. Jake, as an outfielder, was very much to the bush even though his three-year contract called for $6,000 a season. The explosion of the Born Manager carried down in its ruin a club that in the first few weeks threatened to have the pennant cinched by July 4.

After the darkest days of the Griffith and Elberfeld regime, Ban Johnson allowed his personal animosity to land a second knock-out to New York's hope of salvation. He chased George Stallings, who had built a tailender into a pennant possibility in two short years. Stallings, however, came back like a boomerang as manager of the Boston Nationals this year. He has robbed the American League of its time-honored Boston patronage by showing results with what every one considered the joke of the two big leagues at the opening of the season. It is true that the world's champion Red Sox are somewhat to blame because of their disappointing start. But public prejudice was instilled during the world's series last fall when, on the last day, no provision of accommodation was made for some thousands of loyal Red Sox rooters who had accompanied the team to and from New York and the Hub for each game. Robert McRoy, for many years Johnson's private secretary and who is now alleged to represent some Johnson interests in Boston, was responsible for the "bone." Of course Ban Johnson has to share the blame.

Detroit Fans Against Ban.

Detroit soured on Johnson because of Ban's animosity toward Hughie Jennings. Johnson rebuked Jennings for his friendliness toward McGraw during the world's series between the Giants and Athletics in 1911. Ban was quoted, at the time, as intimating that Jennings would be driven out of the American League because of alleged treason in tipping off McGraw to Philadelphia weaknesses. Frank Navin beat Johnson to it by renewing Hughie's contract.

The sentiment of the American League clubs, however, seems to have undergone somewhat of a change within the past few years. On a number of occasions they have actually silenced Ban when he has prepared to rip organized baseball, as typified by his foeman of the National League, right up the back. Twice he claimed he had C. W. Murphy at the brink of the chute for the "Down and Out Club," but his own supporters silenced his guns because apprehensive that a scandal might affect the whole organization. He was also going to make John T. Brush jump through a knothole for the New York club's alleged manipulation of sales of the world's series tickets in 1911. Mr. Brush made Mr. Johnson indorse a public exoneration from the charges. His long-promised airing of the umpire bribery charges at the Polo Grounds in 1908 fell flat after he had talked himself into a position that made him appear absolutery ridiculous.

Cures Charlie Murphy.

There is no doubt that Mr. Johnson has been a great factor toward putting organized baseball on a sound and unimpeachable footing. For that he deserves due credit. He has also succeeded, at last, in impressing upon Charlie Murphy the objection to loose talk. Ban could do no better than to adopt the same sort of policy that was crammed down Murphy's throat.

TORONTO GETS BRADLEY.

TORONTO, July 12.—The Toronto International League club has just completed a trade whereby Al Shaw, the Maple Leaf outfielder, goes to the Jersey City club for First Baseman Hugh Bradley. Bradley was with the Boston Red Sox in 1912, and was turned over to the Skeeters at the beginning of the present season.

Athletics Purchase Dartmouth Captain

Connie Mack Signs Dave Morey to Murl for Prospective American League Champions.

HANOVER, N. H., July 12.—Connie Mack, of the Philadelphia Athletics, has been watching the Dartmouth players again this season, for Captain "Dave" Morey has announced that he has signed with the Athletics for the remainder of the season. Last year found "Howie" Fahey, of Medford, Mass., Dartmouth's stellar shortstop, selected by the same manager.

"Dave" Morey, who comes from Malden and formerly starred for Malden High, has played a leading position in athletics at Hanover during his four years in college. Besides captaining his freshman football team, he won his reputation in baseball, and since his sophomore year has had a permanent berth on both the varsity eleven and nine.

As a twirler he is one of Dartmouth's best productions. Speed, accuracy and ability to emerge from tight situations have saved many a game for him when the team was slumping. He suffered an injured arm early in the season and was unable to be with the team, but lately he has shown better form than ever before.

Penn's Crack Hurler Signs With Phillies

Harry Imlay, Captain of College Nine, Has Joined Charley Dixon's Team.

PHILADELPHIA, July 12.—Harry Imlay, captain of the University of Pennsylvania baseball nine, has signed a contract with the Philadelphia National League Club, with the understanding that he will report to the Phillies as soon as the college season closes.

Imlay promised Manager Dooin, of the Phillies, some time ago that he would sign, and, according to local advices, he has kept his promise in such a manner that it will not affect his amateur standing until after he leaves Penn.

Imlay is a spitball pitcher with plenty of speed and good control. He also can hit well and has "ball sense." He won the majority of his games this year through pure ability, having a weak team behind him.

SOUTHERN IS REAL LEAGUE THIS SEASON

More Class by Far Now Than Last Year—It Will Take Great Club to Cop.

SLUMP OF BARON TEAM VERY SUGGESTIVE FACT

Catchers Are Vastly Better Than Usual, Pitchers Fully as Good, Hitting Superior.

By Percy H. Whiting.

"THE Southern League is a faster league this season than last." So says Whitey Alperman, field captain of the Atlanta club and wisest head in the league.

So say I.

So say we all of us.

Granted. It doesn't have to be so dad-blamed good, either, to land that title.

It was an insect league last year.

Also, the team that won it was the worst team that ever won a pennant in the Southern League.

* * *

THE humble position of the Baron team this year tells part of the story. It was good enough to win the rag last season. This year it is lucky to be in the first division. And it's very much the same team, too. It is weaker in spots, but better in others. And look where it is.

It was lucky to "get by" last year at all. This year they have found it out.

A YEAR ago this time just seven men were batting .300 or over. This year a dozen men are doing it.

The base running doesn't show any advantage this season, though there's no great falling off.

The pitching is surely quite as good this year as last, and possibly a lot better.

Last year at this time Swann, now canned, was leading the league. Sommers was second, Aitchison, a good pitcher, was third, and Merritt, an antique, fourth. Going down the list were found Boyd, Wagner, Demaree, Smith, Hardgrove and Foxen. Now, that was no bad collection of pitchers. Barring Swann, they were highly useful.

This year the pitching crop is quite as promising. Lots of good men are being held down by poor teams—Brenton, for example. Others, like Beck, Williams, Walker, Conzelman and others, are too young to have found themselves, but are corking pitchers in the making.

The league has some nice hurlers this season. Coveleskie is going better than ever. Conzelman is promising. Sommers is having another good season. E. Brown is a marvel—Scout Larry Sutton says he's the best pitcher in the league. Price has found himself. Hardgrove is going strong again. Bagby looks useful. W. Robertson has proved a star. Cavet is pitching up to his limit. Hogg, after a grand start, is slumping; but he looks like a wonder for all that.

Probably the pitching strength of the league is greater now than last year. Undoubtedly the present crop will look 25 per cent better in two or three years than the 1912 harvest.

THE catching caliber of the league this year has it all over that of last year. Street, Schmidt and Mayer are wonders. Adams, of the Pels, is a good man, though he is playing now with an injured hand. It's been a long time since the Southern League has had such catchers as this year.

THE league has better batters this year than it had last. Robertson, Elberfeld, Long, Smith, Kniseley, Welchonce, Gribbens, Sloan, King and Baerwald are terrific hitters in their 1913 form.

A year ago this time the leaders were Almeida, Harbison, Hemphill, McGilvray, Johnson of Montgomery, Doc Johnston, Welchonce, Wares, Alperman, Sommers, Sentell, Bagby, Moran and James. In a two-sided batting bee the 1913 stars would win by about a million hits.

* * *

THE teams this year are, in the main, playing better baseball. Their fielding seems a shade better, there seems more pepper and the inside stuff is coming through better.

For another thing, the race is better.

A year ago to-day the Barons were out in front, with a lead of .125 over Chattanooga. The first team was separated from the fourth by .138. The first and last teams were .211 apart. And the Crackers hadn't hit the bottom, though they were but one point away.

Now the race is tight, the Crackers are in the running, the team is going pretty strong, and every prospect pleases.

Surely the good year 1913 has it over its immediate predecessor by 50 miles, as well as by 365 1-4 days.

JACK WHITE IS TRAINING HARD FOR DUNDEE BOUT

LOS ANGELES, CAL., July 12.—Jack White is doing light training at Venice, holding himself in readiness for his proposed bout with Johnny Kilbane July 29.

White had less than a week to work previous to his former battle with the New York Italian and put up a great bout. He is confident that with a proper course of training he can decisively defeat the Eastern boy.

HANS WAGNER'S DAYS OVER AS PIRATE REGULAR

PITTSBURG, PA., July 12.—Hans Wagner may play baseball for a day or two at a time on occasions, but his days as a regular are over. Pinch hitting will be about all he will be allowed to do the rest of the season. This was practically admitted to-day by Manager Fred Clarke.

Naughton Lauds Peter Jackson

Australia's Most Perfect Boxer

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., July 12.—A correspondent wants to know who, in the writer's opinion, was the "most perfect boxer" of all the Australian ring men who came to America in the 80's and 90's. And, while I think of it, I might remark "Correspondent" is asking me to fill a pretty large question.

In the communication embodying the query, the gentleman says:

"I am a close reader of all that is printed in regard to ring happenings and I have noticed that quite often, when discussions about comparative cleverness of latter-day boxers and former pugilists are in order, some critic will make reference to "the marvelous Griffo," as if he were the standard by which all that is clever in the glove game is reckoned. I have a friend who says that Griffo was simply a trick boxer and that for useful cleverness he could not compare with George Dawson, Peter Jackson or Jim Hall, who were also Australians. What is your opinion on this? Who do you think was the most perfect boxer of all the Australians who came here in the 80's and 90's?"

IN regard to Griffo I can only say that I did not have an opportunity of judging the young man's merits when he was at his best. I did not see him in action until he had passed his heyday, and then only once or twice in events for which he had had no training and seemed little concerned as to which way the decision went.

He had degenerated into a Queensberry clown at the time of which I speak and was more fired with the ambition to make the spectators laugh than anything else. He retained sufficient of his handiness with the gloves to make things interesting for his opponents but his blows were of the mushy order and his defense not nearly so complete as it had been in former years.

Whatever he might have been earlier in his career, Griffo was certainly more of a trick performer or juggler when I saw him.

So far as Griffo may figure in a discussion of this kind I would prefer to pass the question on to other critics who had opportunities of making comparisons between Griffo and other Australians when Griffo was at his best.

AUSTRALIA sent us some exceedingly clever ring men and now, with my experiences and recollections mellowed by years, I have no hesitation in saying that Peter Jackson was the "most perfect boxer," of all the Antipodeans I have seen in real action.

George Dawson had ideas of his own and did not hew to the lines of the Mace ideals of boxing. Judged by what he accomplished in the ring he earned the right to be described as clever, but he was far from being as well balanced a piece of fighting machinery as Jackson.

Many of the Australians were extremely clever, having the fine points of the game at their command to a degree which made them appear graceful in action. Among these Jim Hall was prominent and Steve O'Donnell was another; George McKenzie, a lightweight, was a very talented glove wielder and that scamp, George Mulholland, could make almost any man who opposed him look foolish. Fitzsimmons boxed cleverly when he first came across, but when he began to study anatomy and devise knockout punches, he sacrificed art to utility.

PETER JACKSON was the most talented exponent of the Mace school of boxing the writer ever came across. He knew how to lead and counter, and time and measure, and his footwork always rhymed with his first play. He would duck, snap back and sidestep in a bewilderine way and he appeared to be always within range when his adversary tried retaliation.

I remember Jackson's first match at the old California Athletic Club in San Francisco back in 1888. His opponent was George Godfrey, the Boston colored heavyweight who, on account of his endurance, was known as "Old Ironsides." I will never forget the pained look which came over Godfrey's face when he first ran foul of the Jackson straight left. Peter, who seemed to have an arm as long as an oar, picked Godfrey off his feet with a lunging blow and placed him on his honkers in the floor. Godfrey had proved himself a game fellow in many hard fights but as he sat there that night the expression on his countenance was one of mingled surprise and discouragement.

A little later in the evening, George received a heart punch from Jackson's right and with glazing eyes and quivering ribs he feebly held a hand aloft and acknowledged defeat.

JACKSON'S accurate knowledge of timing was shown in his battle with Big Joe McAuliffe, the Mission Giant. For a number of rounds Jackson prodded the giant with straight lefts and kept his own head bobbing to escape McAuliffe's lumbering back fire. Then Jackson feinted McAuliffe into leading with the left. Joe straightened his arm and Jackson threw his head aside and allowed the blow to pass over his shoulder. While doing so he brought his right across and a sharp spat followed by a trickle of blood from big Joe's ear, showed that the giant had been effectively and heavily countered.

After that, poor Joe was cut down slowly and scientifically. He was too big to take liberties—or rather chances—with and Jackson whipped him artistically and came out of the melee without a scratch.

I am wandering away from the point, however, and illustrating how dangerous it is for old-time critics to reminisce.

In answer to my correspondent I will simply repeat that Peter Jackson was the "most perfect boxer" of all the Australians I had opportunity of studying.

Griffith Blames Heat For Club's Poor Work

Manager of Senators Claims That Players Are Affected by Climatic Conditions.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 12.—Manager Griffith, manager of the local American League Club, contends that his ball players are handicapped by local climatic conditions. He asserts that the heat during the summer months here is such that it takes all the stamina out of his players, and that this accounts for the fact that the team always plays better ball away from home than it does here.

He believes that the players can not keep themselves in prime condition because they do not get the necessary rest as a result of the heat.

Griffith has a scheme whereby he proposes to secure quarters in the outskirts of Washington, where he will house his players. It will be a sort of a summer hotel, far from the city, where the club will also supervise the players' food.

It is the intention to have the players brought to the ball park in time for the game and then send them back to their quarters immediately after the game. It is figured that by this mode of living the players will get better rest and diet, and consequently retain their condition through the season.

FORT SMITH, ARK., July 12.—The ten-round bout between Ollie Kirk of St. Louis and Tommy Dixon of Kansas City, was to-day postponed from July 18 to July 25, because of an injury Kirk sustained to his hand.

'Hans' Wagner's Leg Has Again Gone Bad

Injured Knee Is Giving Great Shortstop Much Trouble; Continues to Play.

Reports from Philadelphia are that "Hans" Wagner again is having trouble with the leg that kept him out of the game last spring.

The knee which he injured while making the spring training trip is again bothering him. On Thursday he felt pains in the leg and on Friday the leg was worse, but he said nothing about it, realizing that his services were needed.

The pains have continued to grow worse, although the captain of the Pirates has been subjecting the damaged knee to heroic treatment at the hands of the team's trainer. Wagner said his left leg is so stiff he only navigates with great difficulty.

PRINCETON AND FORDHAM TO CLASH ON GRIDIRON

NEW YORK, July 12.—The Fordham University football team will play eight games next fall. The principal new game added to the list is that with Vermont. The Princeton and Holy Cross contests have been resumed after a lapse of three years. The schedule follows:

September 27, St. Peters College at Fordham; October 4, Princeton at Princeton; 11, Rensselaer at Fordham; 18, St. Joseph's College at Fordham; 25, Vermont at Fordham; November 4, Villa Nova at Fordham; 8, Boston College at Fordham; 15, Holy Cross at Worcester.

THREE LEADERS MAY LOSE JOBS NEXT SEASON

Detroit Rumor Says That Birmingham, Stahl and Stovall Will Be Shipped in 1914.

DETROIT, MICH., July 12.—That managerial heads in the American League will fall is not unlikely. Rumor has fastened on three in the persons of George Stovall, Joe Birmingham and Jake Stahl. The Ferguson incident, when Stovall was suspended, brought the ax very near to Brother George, but back of that were reasons that were not made public at the time and have not been.

The three games taken from Detroit helped Stovall more than a little, for it was the position of the team and the way that it was going that weighed more than anything else with the owner. Robert Hedges saw his Browns win here and that may have been one of the reasons why he has since denied that Stovall was to be shipped.

BAN JOHNSON has never been friendly to Stovall nor has George held the most cordial feelings of good will toward the president of the league. Stovall did not better his position by openly siding with the striking Tigers a year ago, and it was freely predicted at the time that he had forfeited his chance of managing the Browns. This did not prove to be the case, but he certainly did not endear himself to Big Ban.

* * *

BIRMINGHAM'S trouble is that he has made the Naps too aggressive. In his efforts to put fight in the team he has overdone the thing, but now promises to work with his foot on the soft pedal so that all may still be well.

* * *

STAHL'S case is still another one. He would like to quit, but McAleer won't let him. Factions have grown up on the Red Sox team, the old players under the leadership of Bill Carrigan being a trifle at odds with the youngsters who follow Tris Speaker and Wood. Stahl keeps them living in peace as another manager might not. Therefore, he has to stick whether he wants to or not.

LEDOUX IN GREAT SHAPE FOR BOUT WITH WILLIAMS

LOS ANGELES, July 9.—Charles Ledoux, the French bantamweight, is in great shape for his bout with Kid Williams, the Baltimore scrapper, at the Vernon arena on July 15. Williams is also hard at work in his training quarters at Venice. Odds today favored the Baltimore boy.

FRASER, PIRATE SCOUT, LOOKING FOR PITCHERS

DUBUQUE, IA., July 12.—"Chick" Fraser, formerly with the Chicago Cubs, now scouting for the Pittsburg Nationals, ish ere to look for pitchers. He is particularly anxious to sign Jasper, the local star, whom the White Sox are after.

CARDINALS AFTER MORGAN.

ST. LOUIS, July 12.—From Kansas City comes an announcement that Manager Miller Huggins, of the Cardinals, is about to consummate a trade with Manager Carr, of the Blues, for Cy Morgan, the pitcher who once played with the Browns and Athletics in the American League. Morgan is the leading hurler in the Association.

A Blessing to Victims Of "Sore Foot" Agony

The following is said to be the surest and quickest cure known to science for all foot ailments: "Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of Calocide compound in a basin of warm water. Soak the feet in this fully fifteen minutes, gently rubbing the sore parts." The effect is really wonderful. All soreness goes instantly; the feet feel delightful. Corns and callouses can be peeled right off. It gives immediate relief for sore bunions, sweaty, smelly and aching feet. A twenty-five cent box of Calocide is said to be sufficient to cure the worst feet. It works through the pores and removes the cause of the trouble. Don't waste time on uncertain remedies. Any druggist has Calocide compound in stock or he can get it in a few hours from his wholesale house.

Ritchie a Coal Yard Product

Quit Father to Enter Ring

By Left Hook.

WILLIE RITCHIE, lightweight champion, who defeated Rivers, July 4, at San Francisco, says that Geary Steffen is his proper monaker when in any society but that of the prize ring.

When Steffen decided to shake the dust of his father's coal yard from his shoes and take up fighting as a business he grabbed the Ritchie name to satisfy Papa Steffen, the latter not caring to have any notoriety of the fighting brand added to the family name.

Papa Steffen was very much opposed to the youngster's entering the ring under any circumstances, but he soon found that there was no use kicking. Now that Ritchie has won the lightweight title and made a small fortune in a little more than four years the elder Steffen is said to be almost willing to have "Willie Ritchie" cast into the discard and let the boy sail under his proper name. Pa Steffen has never seen the boy fight, and never will, he says.

Ritchie is a Native Son, having been born in San Francisco February 13, 1891. At the proper age he was chased to school and received a good common school education. Then he went to work in the Steffen coal yard, taking his full share of the hard work, and to this Ritchie says he owes his strength.

Four Years in Ring.

Some four years ago Geary did his first fighting. And it was in the Dreamland Pavilion, San Francisco, where the four-round stars scintillate. A boxer named Willie Richardson was billed to fight in one of the minor preliminaries, but at the last minute Richardson failed to put in an appearance, and the call for a substitute brought forth a tall, likely looking chap.

The announcer and Geary had a short argument, and it was over the name that would carry the pugilist through his fistic career. After much debating Willie Richardson's name was cut to Ritchie, and to this day Geary Steffen has been known as Willie Ritchie.

That night he fought a fellow by the name of Monk Enok, and Monk lasted less than two rounds.

Since the night he fought Monk Enok, Willie has had forty-two battles and has won all of them but four. These he lost through decisions. His first defeat came at the hands of Frankie Burns, when he lost a six-round verdict in Oakland. Charlie Reilly outpointed him in six rounds. Matty Baldwin won the decision in Willie's first twenty-round fight, and Freddie Welsh won in Los Angeles over the same distance just a year ago.

His fight with Welsh in Los Angeles Thanksgiving Day, in which he substituted for Wolgast, who was stricken with appendicitis, brought him into prominence with a bang. True, he lost the decision to the Pride of Pontry Pridd, but it gave Willie his start and announced his coming to the sporting world.

Willie was taken East after the Welsh bout under the management of Emil Thiery and worked as stable mate with Packey. He had eight fights in eight weeks, and won them all, though they were only newspaper decision bouts.

Draws With Wolgast.

On May 11 of this year Willie was given the chance that gave him the confidence and the persistency to call for a bout with Ad Wolgast. He got credit for boxing Ad a draw in the four-round bout.

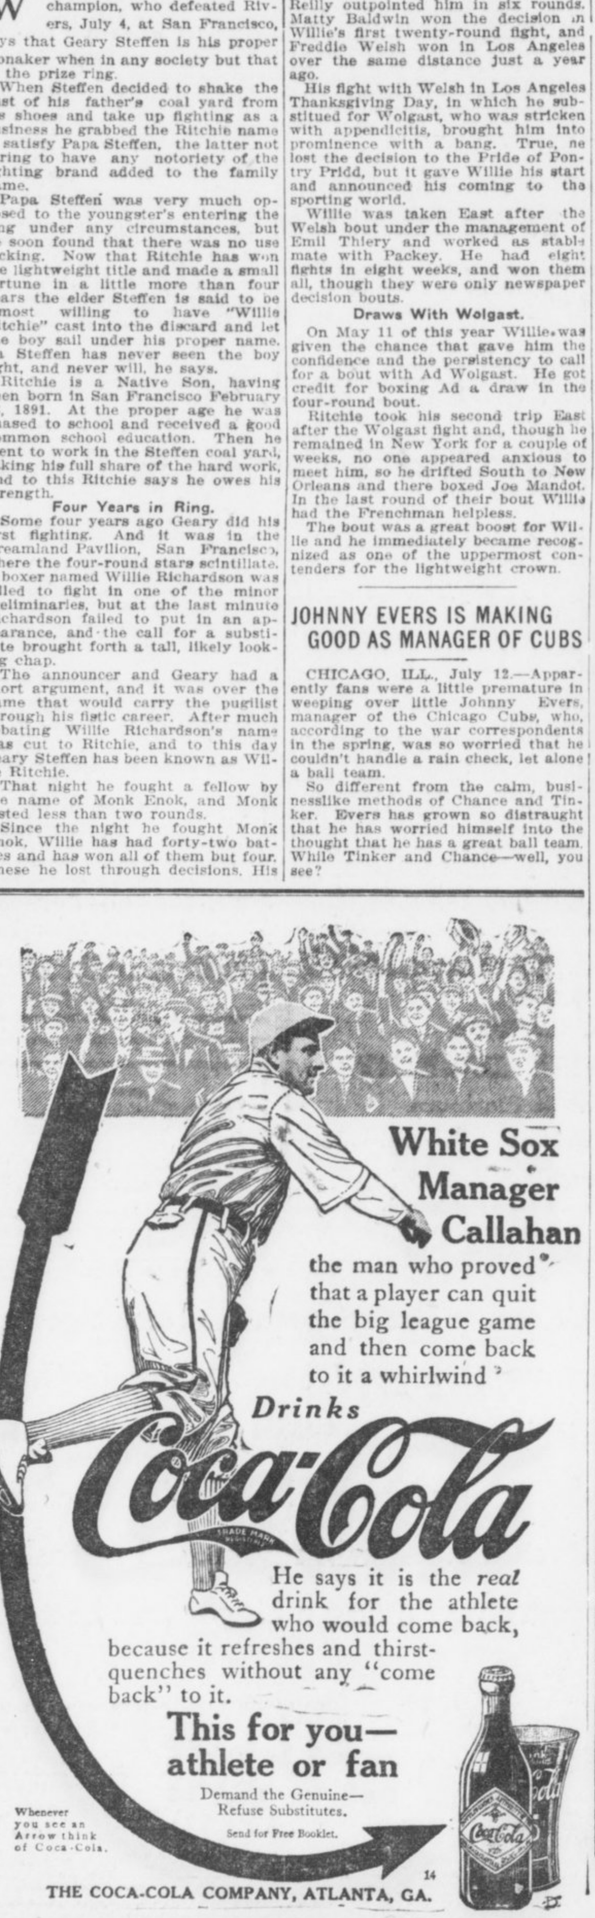
Ritchie took his second trip East after the Wolgast fight and, though he remained in New York for a couple of weeks, no one appeared anxious to meet him, so he drifted South to New Orleans and there boxed Joe Mandot. In the last round of their bout Willie had the Frenchman helpless.

The bout was a great boost for Willie and he immediately became recognized as one of the uppermost contenders for the lightweight crown.

JOHNNY EVERS IS MAKING GOOD AS MANAGER OF CUBS

CHICAGO, ILL., July 12.—Apparently fans were a little premature in weeping over little Johnny Evers, manager of the Chicago Cubs, who, according to the war correspondents in the spring, was so worried that he couldn't handle a rain check, let alone a ball team.

So different from the calm, businesslike methods of Chance and Tinker. Evers has grown so distraught that he has worried himself into the thought that he has a great ball team. While Tinker and Chance—well, you see?



Ford Quits Spitter; Goes Back to Curve

Yankee Hurler Claims That Moist Delivery Hurts His Wrist and Shoulder.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Russell Ford has practically given up his spitball. It is but occasionally that he uses it now. He has returned to his curve.

At the beginning of the season, and in fact, until just recently, Ford could not work the kinks out of his arm. He noticed it more particularly just after throwing a spitball. He came to the conclusion that this style of delivery was too much of a pull on his wrist and shoulder, and he has virtually decided to give it up altogether.

Before Ford adopted the spitball he had a very fine curve. He practiced continually for more than a year before the "spitter" was added to his repertoire. After mastering the moist fling, Russell seldom employed his curve. He mixed the amphibious toss with a good change of pace, and as long as the "spitter" worked well he had little or no use for the curve.

Ford has gone back to the curve.

PECKINPAUGH LOOKS GOOD.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Shortstop Peckinpaugh is a big favorite with the Yankee rooters. He is in the game all the time and has a habit of getting on the bags with pleasing regularity.

GILMORE NOW HEADS THE NEW CHICAGO FEDERALS

CHICAGO, July 12.—Stockholders of the Chicago club of the Federal League have elected a new set of officers. James A. Gilmore is to be the new president and E. C. Racey, secretary and vice president. Bert Keely was retained as manager of the team.

CANADIAN HENLEY IN AUGUST.

TORONTO, July 12.—The Canadian Association of Amateur Oarsmen has selected dates for the Canadian Henley Regatta. The races will be held at St. Catherines on August 1 and 2. Entries have been made from the rowing clubs of Detroit, Milwaukee, Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Buffalo.

WHAT ATLANTA MANUFACTURERS AND JOBBERS ARE DOING

RETAILERS ASK FOR IMPORTANT LEGAL CHANGES

Want Garnishment Law Broadened and Also Seek Fraudulent Check Bill at This Session.

MEETING CALLED JULY 21-23

Georgia Merchants to Convene at Hotel Ansley and Make Strong Effort to Further Cause.

Two thousand retailers from all parts of the State are expected to assemble in Atlanta July 21, 22, 23, in the annual convention of the Retail Merchants' Association of Georgia.

Headquarters will be the Ansley Hotel, and the business sessions probably will be held in the assembly room there.

There are two bills now before the Georgia Legislature which the retailers are deeply interested in furthering. They are bills amending the garnishment law, making it broader of application, and a bill making it a misdemeanor to draw a fraudulent check, unless, within thirty days, the check is met.

This will be the principal matter before the convention, but there also will be discussions of topics of timely interest, and the annual election of officers. Present officers are J. W. S. Hardy of Waycross, Ga., president; D. E. Hogsed, Toccoa, vice president; John Bratton, Atlanta, secretary-treasurer; Louis W. Roberts, Atlanta, special representative.

Year's Campaign Waged.

Mr. Roberts, ex-president of the association, has spent the past year going from town to town in Georgia enlisting the interest of the merchants in the two bills which have been introduced before the Legislature.

The garnishment bill proposes to make all wages subject to garnishment. As the law now stands, men who do work which is entirely or in part manual can not be garnished. Thus the engineer on a locomotive can not be garnished, while the conductor can be. The new bill makes laborers' exemption $1 per day, and 50 per cent of the amount above that figure. In other words, a laborer making $3 per day would have $1 subject to garnishment—50 per cent of the amount above $1.

In the call for the convention, President Hardy says:

Solid Carloads Coming.

"You have every reason to feel proud of your association—it is composed of the leading progressive and aggressive merchants of the State. Several of the larger and a few of the smaller towns have already pledged themselves to send a solid carload of delegates. If all of the towns send even a fair per cent of the numbers they have designated, we will have the largest convention ever held by this organization. There is every reason to believe that our expectations will be surpassed.

"Atlanta is known far and wide for her hospitality, and while our conventions are business meetings, for busy men, no doubt you will be accorded such entertainment as is appropriate."

The meeting was held last year in Warm Springs, with an attendance of something over 1,000 members.

DENMARK SEES GOODS.

There is being held in Copenhagen an exhibition of modern office furniture and mechanical appliances for expediting the matters necessary to run economically an up-to-date active business concern's counting room. About 60 per cent of the exhibitors are displaying American goods.

The impression made on the public by the American exhibits is very favorable, and it may safely be stated that the exhibition of safes, typewriters, adding machines, indexing devices, steel furniture, office chairs, cash registers and stationery is superior to the similar displays made by German, English, Swedish and Danish firms.

Used Atlanta Underwear, But Surprised When Told So

Professional Man Had Acquaintance With Manufacturer—Didn't Know What He Made.

"Where are you going?" asked the Senior Partner as the Junior Partner arose from his desk in the Candler Building and put on his hat.

"Over to the Peter Hill factory."

"Peter Hill underwear?"

"Of course."

"I'll swear! I've been wearing that stuff for four years, and never knew it was made here."

This is a conversation which actually occurred. Further, the man who didn't know Peter Hill underwear is made in Atlanta had been a speaking acquaintance of P. N. Hill for several years. He never connected the well-known goods with the maker.

This is another text the promoters of the permanent exhibit of Atlanta-made goods might use. For Peter Hill underwear, in the making, gives employment to 100 girls and a score or so of salesmen and office employees.

Six Years Old.

The firm is six years old. In that time it has grown to occupy an entire floor of the big Commerce Hall building. From one garment it has expanded until it manufactures almost 100 different styles of garments, in a wide variety of materials. The original garment was athletic underwear for men. Neckties, bath robes, pajamas, union suits in many kinds of cotton goods, silk and flannel now keep it busy.

"Prejudice? Yes, we have met with it, time and again," says Mr. Hill. "Our goods sell on Broadway, but there are Georgia merchants who won't listen when our salesman calls. They are fewer and fewer every year, however. We are getting the cream of the trade right now, but it was a hard battle."

Making it stand on quality and fit, but never neglecting price, the business has grown steadily, and now the trade-mark has wide fame, particularly in the Southern States.

The uninitiated never can realize how many different kinds of things a man can choose to wear beneath his outer clothing until a visit is paid to the Peter Hill factory. Blue, green, lavender, pink and tan and just plain white are among the colors; checks and stripes the patterns; silk, cotton and flannel the materials.

Winter Athletic Underwear.

The newest wrinkle is a line of very light flannel underwear of athletic cut, designed for the chap who wants loose-fitting, short sleeve and short leg underwear in the winter as well as in summer, but who hesitates to go through December with the filmy garments of June.

No other factory has adopted this idea, but the success of fall sales already made by the Atlanta concern indicate that competitors soon will fall in line.

Making underwear is just plain sewing, and no more interesting than any operation with the familiar high-speed, electrically driven sewing machines, which seem the limit of mechanical ingenuity.

The trick is all in the designing—how to give comfort and fit, plus style.

Always New Ideas.

There's always something new, as, for instance, a Peter Hill idea of sizing union suits according to the length of a man's body, as well as according to its circumference.

Neckwear demands more hand work. First, the silks have to be cut by hand with sharp knives instead of with machines. The sewing is done by machine, but the necktie have to be turned right side out, lined, pressed, and boxed by hand. This is what costs in a necktie, for although silk is expensive enough it does not take any great quantity to make an ordinary bow or four-in-hand tie.

Silk Is in High Favor; Charmeuse Leading

Goods So Pretty Women Do Not Know When to Stop Buying Says Importer.

Silks will be more fashionable than ever this fall, according to a prominent importer recently returned from an extended trip abroad.

"There were more silks worn in Paris this season than ever before," he said. "The demand will not only be for more silks, but for more kinds of silk. Much charmeuse is used.

"The silks used by the fine trade are so beautiful that women do not know when to stop buying. As a result practically the entire summer wardrobe is made of silk. It will be the same thing this winter.

"Our Paris house has been selling not only to American buyers, but to buyers from Russia, Italy, and almost every other country in the world. Never has Lyons been sold up so far ahead.

"Shall we sell American silks abroad! It is possible. I believe that our mills are so organized that we will be able to turn out the goods more quickly than the foreigners. This should enable us to meet their lower cost of production."

SELLING NOTES.

Manufacturers of women's neckwear are looking forward to active business for fall. The demand for laces continues to show improvement.

Satin-faced silks continue to lead the demand. American buyers at Lyons are placing sizable orders for charmeuse. Heavy satins, similar to duchesse, are also in demand.

Pick Sub-Committee To Get Exhibit Site

Manufacturers Who Demand Exact Details Before Lining Up Are To Be Satisfied.

No one behind the permanent exhibit project is sleeping. There was a meeting of the full committee of the Chamber of Commerce Wednesday noon in the Empire Building.

At its close a sub-committee, composed of Brooks Morgan, J. K. Orr, Bolling H. Jones and V. H. Kriegshaber was named to take up all of the five or six proposals made by owners of available buildings, and report as soon as practicable.

The movement in favor of a permanent exhibit has simmered down to a question of expense, it seems. Twenty-three of the manufacturers publicly announced their intention of taking space in the exhibit hall, without demanding any further explanation as to details. Others privately assured the committee of their co-operation.

But the majority of the manufacturers want to know just how much rentals will be, where the building is to stand—in fact, all about it.

Realizing that the only way to get these people in line is to answer their questions, the committee appointed Wednesday will go as far as possible toward selecting the best site, and ascertaining the cost.

SALES TERMS ADOPTED BY LUMBERMEN

National Dealers' Association Makes Rules to Keep All Transactions Uniform.

Following considerable agitation in the last year regarding terms of sale, the National Wholesale Lumber Dealers' Association has sent to its members a set of rules covering this point that it hopes to make uniform all over the country. This was done by the association in recognition of the difficulties of doing business under the variation of sales terms that exists at the present time.

Particular insistence is made on impressing on buyers the necessity of remembering that the terms of sale under which an order is accepted are as much a part of the contract as the prices at which the lumber is sold.

CANNOT STRETCH TIME.

The purchaser has no more right, according to the association committee on terms of sale and trade ethics, to stretch the time allowed for payment or to violate other terms of sale than the seller has to raise prices after they have once been fixed.

These are the sales terms adopted by the association:

The terms hereon are those agreed on by both buyer and seller and are a part of the sale agreement.

Settlement to be made promptly on receipt of each car. Freight, net cash, balance by note at 60 days from date of invoice or less 1 1-2 per cent discount for cash if paid within fifteen days from date of invoice; or 1 per cent for cash if paid within 30 days from date of invoice.

No discount allowed after 30 days.

WHEN CAR IS DELAYED.

If car is not received within the above discount times, and discount is desired, prepayment on account will not be held as acceptance of the shipment and the right to make corrections and complaint will not be forfeited thereby. In making delivered prices, cost of goods delivered at destination is guaranteed, but not against delay in transit.

Claims for count or quality must be reported as soon as car is unloaded and tally proved. No claims allowed if not prepaid within ten days after unloading.

General Conditions—All contracts and agreements are made contingent upon strikes, fires, floods, inability to secure cars, delays of carriers and other delays unavoidable and beyond our control.

In making delivered prices we simply guarantee the cost of goods at your place, but are in no way responsible for their safe delivery.

Under these rules all orders signed by buyers are subject to the approval of the home offices.

Clearer Skies Before Autumn

By SPENCER TRASK & CO.

We believe that by autumn a number of the problems now vexing our financial and business men will have been settled; the revised tariff bill should have been passed by September or October. By then the Interstate Commerce Commission may have allowed the 5 per cent increase in freight rates demanded by the Eastern railroads, and there is also the possibility of some bill having been passed amending our wretched currency laws.

By then, too, the investing public will have the chance to get its proper bearings.

In short, by the fall we should know much better what our true economic situation promises to be for the next few years.

Customs Decision Interests Firm Here

New York Judge of Appraisers' Court Rules on Baskets of Mixed Material.

Judge McClelland, of the Board of United States General Appraisers, handed down a decision in New York last week which is of particular interest to a thriving Atlanta concern.

A basket-importing firm in the East brought goods from abroad which were made of braided rush in natural color and stained willow. The customs appraisers assessed duty of 40 per cent, as stained willow, while the importers claimed they should pay only 35 per cent, as natural rush. The importer lost before Judge McClelland.

The Bombayreed Importing and Manufacturing Company of Atlanta imports considerable of the same class of goods, and watched the decision with interest. In the past, it is said, it has been the custom to decide whether the duty shall be 35 or 40 per cent, according to whether the natural rush or the stained yellow predominates in the design.

E. K. Ward, of the Bombayreed company, is in Grand Rapids, Mich., where his firm is making an exhibit at the furniture show. A similar exhibit is being made at the furniture show in High Point, N. C.

Publication in Hearst's American of a statement by Mr. Ward that American farmers could make good profits by cultivating the native willow on their waste lands brought a flood of letters from farmers submitting samples of willows and requests for valuations on them. Mr. Ward sticks to his statement that there is money in it for the farmer, and with very little work, but he says the willow must be cultivated, as otherwise the shoots are too short and are crooked and knotty. A Government bulletin tells just how this should be done.

U. S. STEEL STATEMENT.

NEW YORK, July 10.—The United States Steel Corporation reports unfilled orders on its books as of June 30 of 5,807,317 tons. This compares with 6,324,322 tons on May 31, 6,978,762 tons on April 30, 7,468,956 on March 31 and 5,807,346 on June 30, 1912.

THOUSANDS GET INVITATIONS TO BIG CONVENTION

Snappy Talks on Pertinent Topics Expected—Attendance May Go Above 2,000 Mark.

Invitations are being sent out as rapidly as possible to almost every merchant in six States who does a business of any consequence—thousands in all—summoning the dealers to the Southern Merchants' Convention to be held in Atlanta during the first two weeks of August.

Letters to various Atlanta firms which are taking an interest in the forthcoming event demonstrate the enthusiasm which is being aroused.

"I have received letters from dealers scattered all the way from Virginia to Texas," says Bolling H. Jones, one of the most active workers for the success of the convention. "I feel sure the attendance this year will go far above the 2,000 mark set last season."

Indications are that the first day's session will be one of the most interesting. During this session, the diversification of crops will be discussed. There is plenty of meat in the topics assigned for other sessions, however, and none of them is likely to be dull.

Arrangements were made with the Forsyth Theater last week whereby the whole house is reserved for the delegates to the convention on the nights of August 5 and August 11. Arrangements have been made for a reception at the Piedmont Driving Club, and for several thousand seats for the ball game at Ponce DeLeon Park between Atlanta and Chattanooga August 15.

W. H. White, of the White Provision Company, will speak to the convention on the opportunity offered Georgia farmers in stock growing. This promises to be one of the best addresses of the convention.

"It will be a real convention," says H. T. Moore, secretary. "For instance, we are told that merchants in the smaller towns have been among the defenders of the one-crop system. When crop diversification comes up for discussion they are likely to air their views in no uncertain language. They are close to the farmer, and what they have to say carries weight.

"The idea is to avoid loading the program with heavy addresses. We want debates—informal talks of five-minute length—short speeches with a punch in them. It looks as if we will get them."

European Business Comes to Atlanta Firm Unsolicited

Orders From Berlin and Paris Arrive Without Explanation of How Fame Crossed Ocean.

Fame is a peculiar affair.

There have been firms which have striven hard and long for recognition abroad, and with indifferent success. Again, some article of American manufacture becomes known favorably in Europe, without the slightest effort on the manufacturer's part, and unsolicited orders follow.

As for instance—

In Marietta Street is a concern but two years old, the A. E. Hill Manufacturing Company. The Hill company makes a machine which sharpens safety razor blades for all makes of safety razors. The other day Mr. Hill was surprised by a cabled order for a large shipment of his devices, to be consigned to a firm in Berlin.

And this week he is packing a shipment for the Societe Generale de Couterllerie & Orfevrerie, 31 Rue Pastourelle, Paris.

All this without any advertising abroad, or any effort to interest foreign buyers.

"How they came to learn of my device in Europe is more than I know," says Mr. Hill. "Of course, I knew in a general way that the safety razor was catching on in Europe; it is the kind of thing which would take well there. But who first heard of my sharpening machine in Germany or France is more than I can say. Needless to remark, though, all orders are thankfully received. The French order is a trial. Already I have had a repeat order from Berlin, which shows the device is giving satisfaction there."

The Hill machine is manufactured in Atlanta. It was invented four years ago, and has been on the market for two years. A new model was put out during the past week, the only change being a better arrangement of the circular hone which supplements the work of the ingenious strops which literally put a "hair-splitting" edge on safety razor blades. The machines are automatic, requiring almost no attention after the blades are put in place.

L. & N. SHOWS BIG INCREASE.

LOUISVILLE, KY., July 12.—Gross earnings of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad for the fiscal year ended June 30 increased more than three and a quarter million dollars, Charles Haydon, the company's controller, reports.

Gross receipts from operation from July 1, 1912, to June 30, 1913, were $59,467,771, as compared with $53,211,788 for the preceding period.

BOND SALESMEN JUST NOW BUSY PUSHING WARES

Business of Selling Securities at Retail Has Much of Human Interest in It.

This is the most interesting period of the year in the bond market. Almost every train leaving New York, Chicago and Boston has carried representatives of the principal bond houses into the country districts, where buyers of one, two or three bonds, in receipt of their semi-annual dividends, have been in position to reinvest a portion of their savings. Whether the salesmen can induce them to exchange their savings bank balances for $500 or $1,000 bonds remains to be seen. Every kind of persuasive argument will be used, for with many bond men it means a life and death struggle to secure enough orders in July to make up for the lean business of the last six months.

The art of selling bonds at retail has been reduced to a science. It is full of human interest. The most successful house in the business years ago hit upon the plan of sending young men on long visits to New England towns to get acquainted with the people. One salesman who gained his experience in this way is now the head of a great bond house.

He long ago gave up selling bonds on the road, but almost every week the mail brings him a letter, with the address written in a cramped, old-fashioned little hand, upon an envelope bearing the postmark of a New England town. The writer was one of those who attended the strawberry festivals in the little white church.

She has bought bonds of him for years, and the habit has now become so well fixed that the trust companies and banks which send their men to her with attractive investment propositions do not get a hearing. That banker has made a small fortune in commissions on sales of bonds to people in those little towns.

Thrifty, well-to-do, and with good connections, those people turn over to him each year a volume of orders which would make even the $10,000,000 banks sit up and take notice. It is investment business of the best sort, most of the bonds taken are seldom resold, being held till maturity, unless death occurs to force a distribution of the owner's estate.

SUMMER WAILS FROM COTTON GROWERS DUE

wails" will perhaps soon be stylish in advices concerning the cotton crop. If they fail to develop there will be a large yield, exceeding that of the season just closing by a million or more bales. Moreover, there will be no little surprise for the trade if during the next few weeks there are not advices from various sections of the belt telling of the crop losing some of its promise.

At the present time there is no serious trouble menacing yield anywhere in the belt, though there is no telling how soon some will develop and change the almost unanimously favorable tenor of advices into a mixture of good and bad. Cultivation is nearly finished, and the laying-by time finds the belt perhaps cleaner from weeds and grass than ever before. Conditions have been well nigh ideal for such and the recent rains have added to the basis of excellent promise. There is still the matter of late start in some sections, but the plant is generally healthy and, given proper conditions, this can be overcome.

The fruiting season finds the crop clean, well worked and with a good taproot. There will be no trouble keeping the plant in good shape by top-soil cultivation during the trying weeks of July, in case there is not enough moisture. In some sections of this part of the belt one fear now is that there will be more rain than needed, thus making the plant too rank.

So far temperatures have been normal and no injury has been done thereby. The past few days have brought some talk of them being a little too high in Texas and Oklahoma, but serious attention has not been paid that complaint here, as it will take a number of days of high temperatures to mar the excellent prospect for yield. There have also come some reports to the effect that the boll weevil was more numerous than ever before and over a wider area in Texas, but that is another menace which may not prove serious. If the crop suffers from high temperatures there will be a check to the weevil, for hot weather is one thing that will stop their work.

The recent Government report on condition showed fairly large improvement during the month of June, and it is current belief that since June 25 there has been further betterment. The time is at hand, however, for the usual deterioration to start, and on that account there is very close scrutiny of all reports from the fields. The speculative market continues to reflect a belief that the world will, during the next twelve-month, require a large supply of the raw material—some people say not less than 15,000,000 bales—around current prices, so anything that holds promise of cutting into the prospect of such will find ready response. The smallness of the stock in New York for protecting short commitments of July and August contracts and the slim chance of it being increased also have a tendency to discourage short selling. The steadiness of spots in the belt reflects willingness to pay ruling prices, although business continues of small volume.

The threatened destruction of future trading by the Clarke amendment to the revenue tariff bill has helped to restrict activity in speculation during the week and has created much concern among the spot dealers who fear they will be left without hedging facilities this side of Liverpool.

Texas Bankers Are To Aid the Farmers

Arrangements Made to Advance Money on the Cotton Crops Without Mortgage.

FORT WORTH, TEX., July 12.—Peter Radford, president of Texas Farmers' Union, in a public statement says:

"In Texas cotton is the money crop, and the problem of marketing it intelligently has absorbed the attention of the leaders of economic thought for a half century. The crop is oftimes mortgaged, and debt is such a hard taskmaster that the farmer, in order to escape it, rushes to the market with his products and down goes the price.

"To relieve the pressure the bankers are advancing the farmers $35 a bale at 6 per cent, payable when the cotton is sold. The title to the cotton rests with the farmer and he can sell when he pleases, and there is no longer occasion for disposing of his crop in a weak or glutted market.

"In my estimation the slow marketing of cotton will increase the farm price at least from 2½ to 5 per cent net over the price obtained under present methods, making a minimum net saving to the farmer of $50,000,000. It is now up to the farmer to take advantage of the facilities offered."

Big Crop, High Prices For Georgia Melons

Buyers Pay as High as $900 Per Car for Cantaloupes and $175 for Watermelons.

CAMILLA, GA., July 12.—The cantaloupe and watermelon season is at its flush in this section. The hot dry weather for the past two weeks has caused the crops to ripen unusually fast. The prices for both crops have been very satisfactory. The first car of cantaloupes sold for $900, track. Two other cars shipped the same day brought upwards of $2 per crate. Prices later ranged between $600 and $750 per car.

Watermelons sold at a fancy price, the first carloads at $160 to $170 per car.

Tomato shipments are moving freely and truckers who were lucky enough to put in a fine acreage are receiving from $2 to $2.50 per crate. Several commission houses have complimented the growers on the extra fine grade of tomatoes in this section. This is a departure for Camilla truckers and a large acreage will be planted next year.

Bulls Held in Check by Fear of Tax on Futures

Weevil and Hot Weather in Texas Only Bad Crop News To Be Heard.

NEW ORLEANS, July 12.—With the sword of Damocles hanging over the cotton market, it is hard to arouse speculation in the staple, even though a somewhat bullish environment has developed recently. Since the Government reports were issued July 3 Liverpool has shown distinctly a bullish attitude, neither the condition figures nor the acreage being considered of a bearish character by European cotton trade.

Taking advantage of the pessimistic feeling created by the proposition to tax futures out of existence, bearish interests, here and in New York, sold the market rather aggressively in the early part of the week, depressing contract prices to the level of 11.40 for October delivery. The strength manifested by Liverpool, where a good spot demand has been in evidence, sales totalling 10,000 bales almost every day, checked the declining tendency, and started shorts to covering.

Anticipation of possible damage to the crop from the high temperatures now prevailing in Texas, together with numerous reports of the boll weevil ravaging the crop in the western and central belt, induced some fresh buying. With bulls bidding for cotton and shorts inclined to cover, the market has had a substantial reaction upward from the low level established earlier in the week. There has been no general activity, however in the market, which has been more or less under the control of the professional element.

The July position, strange to say, has shown relative weakness. Exporters have had practically no orders, and even if they had them would find it a difficult matter to secure the grades sought after by the trade on the other side.

Except for reports as to damage by boll weevil in Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi, crop accounts continue of a satisfactory character. In fact, the reports as to the progress now being made by the crop could hardly be more encouraging.

It is believed by some that crop prospects are now in the zenith, and for this reason there is an inclination to buy the market on declines, the argument being made that the critical crop period is now at hand, and that any change in the condition is certain to be for the worse. The alarmist element in the market is trying to make capital out of the high temperatures reported in Texas within the last few days. These temperatures have not been abnormally high for Texas yet, however, and conservative people in the market think that hot dry weather is just what is needed to hold the boll weevil in check in that section of the belt.

Futures Sales Made Of Southern Iron

Considerable Pig Engaged at Low Prices for Delivery During Third Quarter of Year.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., July 12.—Considerable pig iron has been sold in Southern territory for delivery during the third quarter of the year, some of the larger consumers in the East and elsewhere taking advantage of the low prices.

Manufacturers in this section of the country have concluded they have sold enough iron at the low levels and have advanced prices from 50 cents to $1 per ton. The production has been cut down at least 10 to 15 per cent, six furnaces in Tennessee and Alabama being blown out. Repair work is being done on one or two of these furnaces. While $11 per ton, No. 2 foundry, is given as the average price for the product, there still are reports that concessions are being made.

Inquiries are in hand that promise to result in business, export deals under negotiation amounting to 12,500 tons, while domestic business under consideration amounts to not less than 25,000 tons. The intentions are to reduce the accumulated stacks of iron.

The home consumption is looking up. Castiron pipe plants in Anniston, North Birmingham, Greater Birmingham, Bessemer, Holt, Gadsden and other places are beginning to melt a little more iron. The big plant of the American Radiator Company at North Birmingham has been started up. It is proposed to melt 200 tons of iron daily at this place. The company spent something like $500,000 on the big plant at North Birmingham.

The new pipe plant at Gadsden started up this week and when in full operation there will be a healthly melt. This plant replaces the one destroyed by fire.

There is considerable activity in the steel market and all predictions now are there will be steady operation of plants through the balance of the year. Southern railroads are beginning once more to announce estimates of needs. Rail is in demand, as are bolts and spikes.

There is a strong demand for coke in this section of the country and all manufacturers are finding it necessary to keep coke ovens, both the beehive and the by-product types, in full operation. Better prices prevail for coke now than for some time.

U. S. LEADS IN THE VALUE OF EXPORTS TO GERMANY

The United States heads the list of countries as to the value of the exports to Germany in 1912. Russia ranks second, Great Britain third, and Austria-Hungary fourth. The United Kingdom still is the best customer for German products, Austria-Hungary coming next, the United States third, France fourth, and Russia fifth.

If the value of the total trade between the countries during 1912 is considered, the United States is first with $543,800,000; Russia second, with $525,400,000; the United Kingdom third, with $477,000,000; Austria-Hungary fourth, with $443,900,000; and France fifth, with $295,500,000.

The decrease in the value of the receipts from Russia was due principally to smaller grain shipments from that country; and the greater imports from the United States, to increased shipments of wheat, copper and raw cotton.

Increase of 10 1-2 Per Cent Is Expected in Rail Earnings

While most of the railroads ended their fiscal year June 30, it will be a month or more before the actual gross and net for the twelve months are available; nevertheless, with the figures now at hand for the eleven months, it is possible to estimate the results for 1913.

According to those figures, it now looks as if the railroads will earn something like $3,175,000 000 gross, or $300,000,000 more than was earned for 1912. That would be an increase of 10 1-2 per cent. Net after taxes will amount to $845,000,000 in round figures, or a gain of $73,000,000, or 9 per cent over the preceding twelve months.

Economist Explains Shortage of Money

World Produces $2,400,000,000 of Capital Yearly—Sometimes Burns Up or Demands More.

Lately it has been said frequently that "demand for capital is in excess of supply." Just what this means was explained by M. Leroy-Beaulieu, the eminent French economist, who wrote:

"The growing industrial States, particularly the new countries, are at this moment demanding more capital than the whole world has accumulated recently or is accumulating to-day. From this fact follow two consequences: First, that the users of this capital have to pay more for it in the shape of a higher interest rate; second, that they will be compelled to postpone, or extend for several years, many of the enterprises on which they had decided and for which they had already made preparations.

"The civilized world, so far as it can be reckoned up, provides $2,400,000,000 in available capital annually for investment in securities; it is asked in 1906 to provide $3,250,000,000. There was a demand, in America at any rate, for even more than its part of the above estimate to be provided during 1907. But the world has not got it; therefore it can not provide it.

"Add to this the effect of catastrophes, such as the San Francisco and Valparaiso earthquakes, which cost something like $200,000,000, and you will have a perfectly clear explanation of the existing crisis, the rise in the interest rate and the fall of investment securities. The truth is, nations, quite as well as individuals, have reached the point where they must limit their undertakings to the possibilities of the case; that will be done, if not willingly, then by force of events."

In 1906 the borrowing nations and individuals did not thus limit voluntarily their undertakings, and their bankers did not compel them to do so. In 1907, the "force of events" operated. This season, the restrictive process has been applied early and decidedly.

TRADE AWAITS DEFINITE NEWS FROM FARMERS

Realization of Crop Promises and Increase in Freight Rates Will Stimulate Trade.

NEW YORK, July 12.—It is the belief of the Fourth National Bank, formed after hearing from correspondents in all parts of the country, that the two things needed to stimulate general business this year are a realization of the best crop promises and the granting of the 5 per cent freight increases asked by the Eastern railroads.

"The outlook for the crops is still reassuring," the bank says in its bulletin, "but in some quarters the promise is for a somewhat reduced yield of wheat and corn. It is still too early to attempt definite estimates, but on the basis of both public and private advices the chances are that the people of the United States will this season as usual derive a vast amount of new wealth from the soil.

Farmers Hopeful.

"The farming communities are hopeful. This optimism is cautious, however, since it is obvious that in some lines of trade there has been a decided slackening, with a disposition to proceed slowly with respect to new business until a new tariff law has been enacted.

"Business men everywhere continue to conduct their affairs on a hand-to-mouth basis, and it is probable that there will be little broad buying by the small merchants until the crop prospects are absolutely sure. This is natural enough in view of the fact that the 'crop scare period' is near at hand, when the markets ordinarily pass through an interval of uncertainty respecting the possible effects of high temperatures and drouth in the wheat and corn area.

"The decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission to hear the petition of the Eastern railroads with reference to increasing freight rates 5 per cent shows that the commission is alive to the needs of a situation which is becoming each day more embarrassing to the railroads.

Railroads to Win.

"There seems to be a consensus of opinion that the railroads will win their case and that the advance in freight rates asked for will be granted next autumn.

"There are indications that the public is favorable to the increase, although it will be necessary for the railroads to prove their claims and to show beyond doubt that the increased revenue is needed in order to pay them for rendering the service called for by the people of the territory served.

"The people of the United States apparently view this step very differently from what they did three years ago when the increase asked for was turned down by the commission and strongly objected to by the shippers' organizations everywhere.

"This disposition on the part of the public to view the matter without prejudice and to act justly is of great importance, coming as it does at the moment when the United States Supreme Court has handed down a series of remarkable decisions in the so-called Minnesota and other rate cases where the right of State Railroad Commissions to fix rates within the limits of their own States was upheld except in cases where a railroad is able to show that the imposition of a specific rate would be confiscatory or insufficient to pay for the service rendered.

Interests Are Common.

"The fact is that the public is coming to see that the welfare of whole communities is tied up with the welfare of the railroads, and that there can be no thoroughgoing prosperity for the country as a whole if the common carriers are not prosperous, or are denied a proper return on the capital invested.

"This question has come to be of the greatest importance because of the steady advance in wages, the increased cost of financing, and the larger relative outlay for every variety of railroad equipment."

CRAWFORD WILL CASE BECOMES POISON PUZZLE

Report of Chemist After Body Is Exhumed Indicates Presence of Quantities of Morphine.

ACTIVITY AMONG MAN'S HEIRS

Parties to Litigation Now Promise Searching Inquiry, and Fulton Grand Jury May Act.

The Crawford will case, which for four years has been fought back and forth in the courts of Fulton County, and which is still apparently far from a final settlement, has developed into a "poison mystery."

This new and sensational turn to the litigation over the more than $100,000 estates of the late J. B. Crawford and his first wife, Mrs. Nancy E. Crawford, came when Dr. F. C. Harris, secretary of the State Board of Health, declared that chemical analysis of Crawford's stomach showed opium and morphine in large quantities, and that his lungs showed no indications of death from pneumonia.

When he died in March, 1909, his physician, Dr. J. W. Hurt, who is also the physician for the Coroner of Fulton County, gave pneumonia as the cause of death.

Body Exhumed Year Ago.

Just one year ago, on June 12, 1912, and more than three years after Crawford's death, Dr. Harris, with the Coroner of Carroll County, where the body was interred in the family cemetery at Carrollton, exhumed the body and then began the chemical analysis to which he has just testified.

Counsel for the contesting heirs now intimate that a more exhaustive investigation of the poison mystery will probably be made and that indictments may be sought before the Grand Jury.

Joshua B. Crawford was a well known character in Atlanta for many years. He was recognized as shrewd in business deals and close to the last penny in all financial transactions in his own and his first wife's name. He owned $75,000 to $100,000 in real estate and $20,000 to $25,000 in cash, notes and other negotiable paper. He loaned much money and added to his fortune by demanding every penny of interest called for in the notes and mortgages, as well as the full principal when due. If payment was not forthcoming he realized on the security he invariably required.

Crawford was born in October, 1833. His first wife, Mrs. Nancy E. Crawford, was eight years his junior. She died early in 1908, at the age of 66. Twelve months later he married again, his second wife being probably 20 years younger than the first. Within a month or six weeks after this marriage he died, at the age of 75.

Made Wills in 1907.

Crawford and his first wife made their wills at the same time in 1907, about a year before she died and two years before his death. By her will he inherited her estate. His will provided that in the event he survived his wife the estate should go to the four minor children of George Crawford, an adopted son, and to C. S. Crawford, a nephew, and Lula Miller, a niece. Following his second marriage, a new will was not made and the old will was automatically set aside, she inheriting the property.

A contest was set up by George Crawford, for his minor children, and C. S. Crawford and Lula Miller, beneficiaries named in Crawford's will. In 1910 a compromise was reached whereby property estimated at between $25,000 and $30,000 was carved out of the estate for these contestants, this being estimated as the value of the Nancy E. Crawford estate that had descended to Joshua B. Crawford upon his first wife's death. But none of that property has yet come into actual possession of these heirs, as one legal question after another has been raised to keep the estate tied up in litigation.

Undue Influence Claimed.

In 1912 thirtten other heirs at law —brothers, sisters, nephews and nieces of Joshua and Nancy Crawford—jointly brought suit to set aside this settlement, C. S. Crawford being one of the number, contending that his second wife exerted an undue influence over Crawford while he was

Potomac Water for Perspiring Senators

Lawmakers Thought They Were Drinking Mineral Spring Product Until Page Told Secret.

WASHINGTON, July 12—The poor, perspiring Senators have been deceived by the pages.

Some time ago the economy campaign eliminated mineral waters from the summer comforts of the Senators. Despite this, the mineral waters seemed still to be in the water bottles and the Senators drank deep and long.

A well-known Senator stepped up and drink three glasses to-day.

"There never was a water as good as this," he boasted, "and I have tried them all."

A page sitting by fell over in shrieks of mirth.

"It is Potomac water in the old bottles," he laughed. He knew, for he had seen it drawn from the faucet.

PrincessRoyal Fights Daughter in Courts

Rare Suit Is Being Waged in Secret by Relatives of King George.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—A legal dispute between two members of the royal family, a very rare occurrence, is now being secretly argued in the London courts. The litigants are the Princess Royal, widow of the Duke of Fife and sister of King George, and her daughter, the present Duchess.

The Duke left no male heir, the title descending to the elder daughter, the Princess Louise Duff. The dispute relates to property left by the Duke.

The action came before Justice Neville after the ordinary court hours, the procedure being equivalent to hearing in camera, press and public being excluded. The questions involved are so intricate that prolonged argument is necessary.

'Miss Freedom' Given Her Biennial Bath

New Jewelry Will Adorn Graceful Figure on Dome of United States Capitol.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Freedom, the gorgeous lady whose graceful form surmounts the dome of the Capitol, made her biennial toilet to-day. A score of husky workmen clambered to the top of the dome and gave Freedom a bath, using a heavy lather of castile soap and scrubbing brushes to remove the dust and grime that has accumulated on the face and figure of the lady of the Capitol since her last ablutions were performed in the summer of 1910.

The lady's jewelry will be replaced, as the seven platinum tips which surmount her headdress have been badly damaged by lightning bolts. Seven hundred dollars in the precious metal will adorn her brows and protect her from the elements.

St. Louis Man to Wed German Baroness

New Railroad Magnate Will Take Bride to South America to Make Home.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Baroness Ursula Barbara VonKalinsowski, of Wiesbaden, Germany, who, with her brother, Baron Kalinsowski, is staying at the Waldorf-Astoria, will be married to James Hurley, a prominent St. Louis man, this month. The exact date of the wedding has not yet been set. The Baroness and her brother will leave within a few days for St. Louis.

Mr. Hurley has recently bought extensive railroad interests in South America and he and his bride will go there on their wedding trip. The Baroness has with her two dogs which were the gifts of the Emperor and Empress of Germany.

$34.64 Each Man's Share of U. S. Money

Government Report on Currency of Nation Says This Amount Is Per Capita Average.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—The total amount of money in the United States at the beginning of the new fiscal year amounted to $3,718,379,000, an increase of $12,456,000 over a month ago. Of this, $3,371,326,000 was in circulation and $347,053,000 was held in the treasury as assets of the Government. Estimating the population of the country as 97,537,000, the treasury announced that the per capita circulation was $34.64, or an increase of 10 cents within a month.

ANOTHER CURE IS CLAIMED FOR CANCER GROWTH

Hungarian Chemists in Passaic, N. J., Declare Also They Have Conquered Tuberculosis.

REMEDY MADE FROM HERBS

Postmaster Mahony and Congressman Bremner, Patients, Express Confidence in Treatment.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Daniel O. Dancz and Alexander Horovitz, Hungarian chemists who have been treating with their new cancer remedy Congressman Robert Bremner and Postmaster D. W. Mahony, of Passaic, announced yesterday that they had discovered a positive cure for both tuberculosis and cancer.

These two men, whose efforts to save Mr. Mahony and Congressman Bremner have aroused much interest in the medical profession, came to America two months ago, going at once to the residence of Charles A. Biczak, at 220 Third Street, Passaic.

Thinks He Is Recovering.

"I heard of these men through my friend Biczak and decided to try their treatment," said Postmaster Mahony yesterday in St. Mary's Hospital. "I had received no benefit by the treatment from my physicians. I gained their consent to allow these men to treat me and now I feel I am well on the road to recovery."

Mr. Mahony's optimistic view was shared by Dr. R. N. MacGuffie, house surgeon at St. Marys Hospital.

"Mr. Mahony's condition was critical until two weeks ago, when this treatment was applied," said Dr. MacGuffie.

Congressman Bremner, who for only one week has been undergoing this treatment, feels much better, too, it was said at his residence.

One of the patients whose physician has allowed the appliciation of the cure for tuberculosis, is Seward Wright, of 114 Second Avenue, Paterson. Last week he received his first treatment and now he is confident that in four weks he will be well.

Herb Medicine Used.

The treatment for both cancer and tuberculosis is the administration, both internally and externally, of medicines derived from herbs.

The cures are distinct, even the method of administration being totally different.

The two young men worked side by side for ten years, both at the Gymnasium and at the Royal University in Budapest. Mr. Horovitz is the expert on cancer and Mr. Dancz has made a specialty of tuberculosis.

"Our treatment for cancer," said Mr. Horovitz, "consists of the administration of brown pills from several herbs. There is a liquid wash, also made of herbs. Besides these, there is a compound made from some twenty different herbs, applied to the cancer by poultices."

Experimented on Animals.

"For five years we studied and experimented on animals before we learned of the compounds," said Mr. Dancz. "Then we applied our discoveries, first to animals and then to patients in Hungary. We began our experiments because of a deep interest in botany. In fact, many of our herbs were discovered by the simple process of watching animals.

"For instance, I would take two swine to the woods. One would be well and one sick. I would watch closely, seeing what herbs they would eat. Instinct seemed to direct them and by experiments later I learned exactly what herbs were necessary to cure certain ailments."

Suffragist Leader Would Carry Pistol

Following Permit Granted Colonel Roosevelt and Attorney Whitman, She Asks Court Same Privilege.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Following the granting of permission to Colonel Theodore Roosevelt and District Attorney Whitman to carry revolvers, Mrs. Robert H. Elder, the suffragist leader of Brooklyn and wife of a former assistant district attorney of Kings county, appeared before Chief Magistrate Kemper and requested to be allowed the same privilege. The judge gave her application blanks and said he would see that she received the permit.

Prince Raises $50 on Queen Mary's Letters

King George's Son Sells Mother's Missives to Schoolmate When She Refuses Him Money.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—Prince Henry, the third son of King George, who is at preparatory school at Broadstairs, is allowed $2.50 per week pocket money. Recently he asked his parents to double the allowance, which was peremptorily refused by his mother.

A few days ago it came to Queen Mary's knowledge that the young prince had raised $50 by selling letters from her and other members of the royal family to a schoolmate named Behrens who is related to Lord Rothschild. The Queen immediately wrote to Headmaster Saunders to obtain all the letters from Behrens, send them to her and refund the $50, which was done to-day.

Prince Henry was warned if he raised money this way again he will be tutored at home instead of being sent to Eton.

LadySackvilleInvites Jurors to Tea Party

Winner of Suit for Fortune of Sir John Murray Scott Wishes to Show Gratitude.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—Lady Sackville, as proof of her gratitude to the jurors who established her right to the great fortune left her by Sir John Murray Scott, has invited them to tea at Knole Park, Sevenoaks, Kent, on Saturday.

This droll entertainment will permit the jurors to inspect the famous country club and its art treasures which were preserved to Lord Sackville by Sir John's generous gift of money before his death.

Lady Sackville has asked many friends to assist in entertaining her guests, to whom none is of her "station in society," as she said of a lady during the now famous trial.

Scott bequeathed Lady Sackville art treasures in his Paris house worth about $1,750,000.

Taft's Tub Too Large, Wilson Asks a Shower

Bath for New President Will Be Built in Cellar of White House.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—There is to be a shower bath in the cellar of the White House. It has been requested by no less a person than the President, and it is evidently intended to keep him cool while he is spending his summers in Washington.

When President Taft first arrived at the White House he demanded, not a shower bath, but a tub big enough for his huge proportions. He got it. There is wonder here if that tub is still in the White House, for, if it is, it must be too large by far for the new President.

Red Spots in Aura Sure Sign of Love

Lecturer Tells Swains to Watch for Their Appearance and Then Propose Immediately.

CHICAGO, July 12.—Watch for the five reddish pink spots in the human aura, then propose. It is a ten to one wager that the girl will say yes, for just at that particular time the girl will be experiencing a rush of affection.

This advice to the lovelorn was gleaned from a lecture by Dr. Edwin B. Beckwith at Besant Hall.

Of course, the lovelorn would have to carry a sensitive screen of dicyanin, possibly a vest-pocket edition, through which he could gaze at the "only girl."

Mabel Taliaferro Is Wed in Daisy Field

Former Wife of Frederic Thompson Takes Every Precaution to Keep Her Marriage Secret.

ST. LOUIS, July 12.—After keeping her marriage to Thomas J. Carrigan, of LaPeer, Mich., a secret for more than a month, Mabel Taliaferro, of Chicago, the actress, formerly wife of Frederic Thompson, New York theatrical promoter, admitted here to-day she had been married June 1 in the Michigan city.

The marriage took place before a Justice of the Peace in a field of daisies that edged down to a river bank just outside of LaPeer, in order that all possible secrecy might be maintained.

LAUTERBACH BLAMES 'WOLF'

Life Wrecked by Lamar's Friendship

Lawyer Quails at Lobby Inquiry

MRS. PHILIP VAN VOLKENBURGH and Mrs. Edward Lauterbach are shown at the top. Below is Edward Lauterbach. He was once leader in politics, the law and finance, but his fall from wealth and influence has been almost as rapid as his ascension. His wife, to whom he attributed much of his early training for a career that was filled with success, divorced him—the first real downward step in his fall. Mrs. Van Volkenburgh, the "$10,000,000 widow," once his client, was reported in various circles as having played a part in the divorce won by Mrs. Lauterbach.

One-Time Leader of New York Republicans Presents a Pitiful Spectacle as He Tells of Relations With Wall St. Adventurer

Tells Senate Investigators That All of His Misdeeds Were Committed to Restore Other Man to Favor Among the Financiers

The story of a remarkable friendship existing between David Lamar, known as "the wolf of Wall Street" because of his subtly unscrupulous operations, and Edward Lauterbach, broken and discredited lawyer, is the net result of the week's investigation by the Senate Lobby Committee at Washington.

How Lamar posed as the emissary and spokesman of Senators and Congressmen, how he impersonated high Government officials in his conversations over the telephone to Wall Street operators, how he sought to frighten them into one concession and another by threat of proposed Congressional action—and all this not so much for his own gain as to demand recognition for his unfortunate lawyer friend, Lauterbach, he said—is the story.

Lamar long has been a figure of disrepute on Wall Street, and none knew this better than Lamar. Cynical, sarcastic, bitter, he told the Senate committee that he had been fighting to force Wall Street into recognition of himself and of his friend Lauterbach. He charged his Wall Street enemies with having circulated false reports about him. The substance of his confession was that he would drive them into the open by his impersonation of the powers at Washington.

Hatred for Ledyard.

The bitterest hatred of Lamar and Lauterbach was for Lewis Cass Ledyard, attorney for J. P. Morgan & Co. This was revealed on the witness stand when the two admitted having told Ledyard that they had held conferences with the Democratic leaders at Washington, including Senator Stone, Speaker Clark, Congressmen Riordan and Palmer.

"I determined to fix a game to force Ledyard into the open," declared Lamar, his voice shaking with emotion, "when I telephoned in the name of Congressman Palmer. For years men in Wall Street have been circulating stories of blackmail against us. Ledyard and his associates had ruined many men. I was determined that he should not ruin me."

On the stand Lauterbach saddled Lamar with the responsibility of most of the impersonations. Once Lauterbach went to see J. P. Morgan, bearing a resolution calling for an investigation of the Steel Trust by the House of Representatives. He declared that he did it to heal the breach between Morgan and Lamar.

"I thought if Mr. Morgan would ask Lamar to stop it, it would create good feeling between the two men," he said.

The figure of Edward Lauterbach, shrinking, timid, before the investigators, is the most remarkable thing of the week's revelations. Once Lauterbach held a position of power in politics. Of him had been written at one time:

"There is one man in New York at the present time who is, perhaps, entitled to more favors at the hands of his party than any other citizen of this State."

Once Republican Leader.

The paragraph was written of Edward Lauterbach in 1898 when he was a leader among the Republicans, a man of high place in the law, of weight in finance, a connoisseur of art, the owner of a home in the richest millionaire block in the world.

And then—

Consider Edward Lauterbach, cowering before the Lobby Investigating Committee at Washington, almost tearfully making the admission that he had lied to Lewis Cass Ledyard in an effort to get employment, and had lied by saying that he could hold out influence with Democrats, in a Democratic administration, that the corporations might profit by the weakness of the popular Representatives.

Such, in a fast, impressionistic outline, is the story of the fall of Edward Lauterbach, the eclipse of a

Singing Fish Keep Town From Sleep

Poetess Thinks Lonely Pout Are Calling Their Mates, but Others Call It Nuisance.

BELLEVUE, OHIO, July 12.—This town is all excited over certain singing fish which keep the villagers awake o' nights. These fish, a variety of bull pout, live in the subterranean streams which flow under the place, and, possibly becoming lonesome, come to the surface and sing.

Anyway, they gather at the surface of cisterns and quiet pools in the gathering dusk and chant in chorus what a prominent poetess of Bellevue calls a sweet, sad, haunting melody, which she likens to the moaning of night winds through lonely, brooding pines. But the citizens who are kept awake are beginning to cuss the gosh blamed noise.

Berry Growers Seek To Ship Crop by Post

Farmers of Ozark Say That Express Companies Have Been Getting Half Their Revenue.

SPRINGDALE, ARK., July 12.—Moving the strawberry crop by parcel post may be undertaken by the growers of this and other berry growing districts next season. Efforts to obtain a special rate from the Government may be undertaken by the berry associations within a very short time.

It is asserted by association managers of the Southern Ozarks, whence formerly 1,000 to 1,500 cars of berries were marketed annually, the express companies and the commission houses have taken more than 50 per cent of the revenue from the berry crop.

'Death Merely Habit,' Says 'New Thinker'

PORTLAND, OREG., July 12—"There is no reason in the world why a person should ever die," declared Harry Gaze, editor of "Life Culture" and author of "How to Live Forever," at the annual convention of the National New Thought Alliance, in session here.

"At 100 years," he continued, "a person should be better to look at, more fit to live, than he was at 40 years. Death is merely a habit."

LAUTERBACH IS PITIFUL FIGURE BEFORE INQUIRY

Former Republican Leader Quails as He Tells Investigators of Relations With Wall St. Wolf.

man of talent who rose from poverty to high place, only to lose his place and his fortune in the bog mire of finance and politics.

Associate of Lamar.

Lauterbach to-day presents the miserable spectacle of being arraigned as the working partner of David Lamar, a party to his schemes and the benefactor of the evil genius of the subtle "Wolf" whose snapping was directed at all men—except Lauterbach. And verily the friendship of the "Wolf" was more blighting than his enmity.

Out of the haze of obscurity came Lauterbach. His father was Solon Lauterbach; his mother Mina. He was born August 12, 1844, in New York. He went to the public schools, then to the College of the City of New York, whence he was graduated in 1864. He was admitted to the bar in 1866 and was first employed with the firm of Townsend, Dyett & Morrison. He progressed until in 1877 he became a member of the firm of Hoadley, Lauterbach & Johnson. Many important law cases came his way. He grew rich.

He was a director in many corporations. At one time he was president of the Alabama Great Southern Railway, one of the chief links in the Southern System. In the Emigrant Aid Society, the Society for Ethical Culture, the Home for Aged and Infirm, the Hebrew Benevolent and Orphan Asylum, the Hebrew Technical Institute and many other organizations he was a worker and officer.

Was McKinley Partisan.

Lauterbach was one of the State's Big Four at the national convention that named McKinley at St. Louis. He was chairman of the Republican County Committee, and in 1898 was a candidate for the United States Senate to succeed Senator Murphy.

He became the right-hand man of Boss Platt, only to be sidetracked when he fought his chief, and Lemuel Ely Quigg was given the Lauterbach scepter. In all of the political events of his party and his time he had a part and a voice. He championed the cause of the Jews at all times, sought to relieve their oppression at home and abroad, and in many ways earned the gratitude of many people who will never forget his goodly acts in the mass of condemnation he has brought upon himself.

His Son's Death.

The decline set in during the year 1908 when Lauterbach's son, Alfred, was killed in an automobile accident while crossing a bridge in Westchester. Lauterbach had married, in his days of poverty, Amanda Friedman, who had saved a dot from the administration of her father's household expenses. She was a woman of grace in the days when she came to his home. To them were born four children: Mrs. Edith McDavitt, Mrs. Florence Hirschfield, Miss Alice Lauterbach and Alfred Lauterbach.

Shortly after the death of the son friends of the family heard that Lauterbach and his wife had separated and that the home at 761 Fifth Avenue no longer contained the pair.

It soon developed that the family split upon the question of suing the New Haven Road for killing the son. Upon the details of the suit the husband and wife quarreled and she finally filed suit for divorce, charging him with intimacy with women of questionable character, with cruelty and with failure to provide. That suit brought the beginning of the end to the Lauterbach career. Likewise it injected into the story the name of a woman who occupied high position and who was esteemed to possess millions.

What Wife Told.

The divorce was granted in 1911 and the court ordered the papers sealed. But the wife made public enough charges to make talk and to throw a new and strange light upon the career of the man she sued. She charged that she took him as an uncouth young man to whom her family objected; that she loaned him the money she had saved from her father's household; that she taught him the ways of polite society.

A year after the divorce Lauterbach indignantly denied that he had sustained friendly relations with Mrs. Philip Van Volkenburgh, widely known as the "$10,000,000 widow." Mrs. Van-Volkenburgh, who lived at the St. Regis, was being sued for a picture that Samuel J. Wolf, an artist, had painted. Lauterbach was a witness, and Alexander Strouse, counsel for the artist, asked Lauterbach to explain his relations with Mrs. Philip Van Volkenburgh.

Society papers toasted the lawyer for his defense in heated fashion, of the woman of fashion and means. Later it was stated that Philip Van Volkenburgh had named Lauterbach in some way in a divorce suit he had filed in a double-barreled proceeding in which each of the Van Volkenburghs sued the other.

The truth concerning these matters was never made public.

Loses Ground Fast.

Lauterbach, in the meantime, was losing groung fast. He was no longer known as a factor in Republican politics. It was discovered that he had been one of the favored lawyers of the Wall Street element that held the Morgans and others. H. H. Rogers had employed him in a large matter, and he was esteemed to have an inside line of pull in the financial district. This hold, too, faded, and his friends did not understand the reason.

Now it has all come to the front, when Lauterbach, dragged by the collar into the light in connection with the Lamar exposure, was found to have been dropped by the financial forces because of his communion with familiar spirits of the Lamar brand, and with Lamar in particular.

With flushed face and bowed head, Lauterbach faced his tormentors as he sat before the Senate committee and had the chairman tear from him the last shred of his once great reputation.

The fall of Lauterbach is one of the distressing stories of real life that make men of real mental strength feel the emotions of pity and regret. Lifting himself from obscurity and poverty, he came to wealth and power. By his own hand he was pushed back from the eminence to which he climbed.

Weds Sixth Husband; Now Leads Daughter

Seventy-five-Year-Old Woman Starts New Marital Venture—Distances Goodwin and Hopper.

GRAND JUNCTION, COLO., July 12.—One more lap in the matrimonial race between Mrs. Dora Johnson-Davis-Howard-Steele-Jensen-Hill-Moore and her stepdaughter, Mrs. Grace Steele-Camron-Pruitt-Howard-Staley-Marquam, which has extended over the last twenty years, was completed recently in Long Beach, Cal., by the former, when she married G. A. Moore, her sixth husband.

Mrs. Moore, now 75 years old, so far as weddings are concerned, is one in the lead of Nat C. Goodwin and DeWolf Hopper.

Mrs. Marquam, the stepdaughter, is temporarily out of the running, for the courts have not yet freed her from Chester Ray Marquam, her fifth husband.

Insect Eggs Hatch After 17 Years' Wait

Kansas City Trees Filled With Pest of Locust Family—Noise Grows Daily.

KANSAS CITY, July 12.—That shrill, high-pitched, rasping chorus that has come from almost every tree in and around Kansas City the past few weeks and is growing each day in intensity is the noise of the cicada septendecim, wrongly known as the seventeen-year locust.

A brood of this fellow is hatching out this year in Western Missouri and Eastern Kansas, and hardly a tree in all that territory is without his song.

But the insects that are singing in the trees this summer are not locusts at all, and they do not eat the foliage of trees or any green thing, although they do considerable damage to trees.

The eggs which bore the countless billions of the brood that is appearing now were laid in the summer of 1896 in twigs.

Rats Catch Leeches, Fishing With Tails

Barber's Supply of Blood Suckers Is Mysteriously Drained—Rodents Show Skill as Anglers.

SHARON, PA., July 12.—When John Ephraim & Son stocked their jar with a fresh lot of Viennese leeches, they did not intend to give the rats a meal, but to treat such patrons of their barber shop as might have black eyes or the gout.

The rats saw the leeches and laid their plans. Seventy-two leeches disappeared in three nights. This is the way they went, according to an eyewitness. At night a rat with a long tail fished in the leech jar, having first cleared away the paper covering.

Seeing the tail dangling in the water, the leeches attached themselves to it. When the rat was ready, he pulled out his tail and the rats feasted.

in his dotage of more than threescore and ten years and practically forced him to marry her, and hinting at something mysterious in his death so soon after that marriage. Testimony in that suit is now being heard before J. A. Anderson, acting as auditor of the estate for the court.

The thirteen contesting heirs are M. T. Byrd, Mrs. C. B. Cash, V. A. Prater, C. Z. Crawford, C. W. Walton, Mrs. R. Adeline Crawford, J. F. Cornett, Mrs. G. A. Thurmond, Mrs. Fannie Cornett, Mrs. Nannie Moore, J. H. Harris, John F. Harris and M. C. Crawford. George Crawford, for his minor children, and Lula Miller are fighting this suit with the second Mrs. Crawford, seeking to sustain the settlement previously agreed upon.

Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, the second wife, is a native of Pennsylvania. She was formerly Mrs. Mary Belle Savage. She lived at Uniontown and later at Pittsburg. A few years ago she came South, going to St. Augustine, where she opened a boarding house for winter tourists and health seekers visiting the Florida city.

Early in 1909 Crawford, accompanied by his niece, Lula Miller, went to Augustine for his health. They stopped at Mrs. Savage's boarding house. After a few weeks in St. Augustine, they returned to Atlanta. Then Crawford confided to J. J. Barge, his attorney and named in his will as executor of his estate, that he was going to mrary Mrs. Savage just as soon as she could close out her business in St. Augustine.

Death Followed in Month.

The wedding took place a few days later. Crawford's death followed about a month later. His body was taken to his old home in Carroll County and was buried beside his first wife's grave. He had erected a stone to mark both graves, marking it with the names of himself and wife, the dates of birth and the date of his wife's death, leaving only the date of his own death to be added.

The contests over the estate soon followed and have never ended.

County Without Bible Will Obtain One Free

Commonwealth Finds It Possesses No Copy of Scriptures When Book Is Needed in Court.

WILKESBARRE, PA., July 12.—While boasting of a $2,000,000 courthouse and of being one of the wealthiest counties in the State, Luzerne County has no Bible which it can call its own.

This fact came to light recently when the court wanted a Bible for use in a trial. The courthouse was searched from cellar to garret, but no Bible could be found.

No order for a Bible has been placed since that time, and now the county has been put to shame by the Bible class of the Sixth Ward of Edwardsville, which has raised sufficient money by public subscription to buy a suitable Bible for the county.

Perfect Policeman Joins Boston Force

New Patrolman Makes 100 Mark on All Tests—Doesn't Smoke, Drink, or Swear.

BOSTON, July 12.—A policeman who neither drinks, smokes nor swears, and incidentally boasts of a thousand other unusual virtues, has been added to the police force of this city. It is the first time Boston has had a perfect policeman, an officer who scores 100 points in every department of policed estrability, according to the examination tests.

He is William McLaught, for two years a hoseman attached to Engine No. 26 in Charlestown. McLaught surprised the examining officials when he scored 100 per cent in the strength, balance and health trials of the civil service test.

SWIFT CLEARED BY JURY OF BAD MEAT CHARGE

Americus Investigators Return 'No Bill' Against Chicago Packers After Clean-Up Campaign.

AMERICUS, July 12.—Because there was insufficient evidence on which to base an indictment, the Sumter County Grand Jury, in special session, has returned a "no bill" against the local agent of Swift & Co., the big Chicago meat packers.

Charges were recently preferred against the agent of Swift & Co. by City Physician Chambliss and State Food Inspector Methvin, following a rigid inspection of meat markets, slaughter pens and grocery stores of Americus.

They condemned a quantity of meat and some live stock as being unfit. Some of the meat markets and slaughter pens were ordered closed and others were ordered cleaned and otherwise improved for the more sanitary handling of their wares.

Because of the large volume of business done by Swift & Co. in Americus and vicinity through the local distributing plant the impression prevailed that some of the tainted meat had been supplied by this concern. However, when the Grand Jury heard the evidence it was found that Swift & Co. had not either intentionally or unintentionally furnished such meat and the charges against the local agent were dismissed with a "no bill" indorsement by the Grand Jurors.

City Physician Chambliss is still active in his campaign against impure foods, having this week condemned a carload of watermelons, after several persons who had partaken of the fruit became ill. These were termed "bitter melons," the sale of which is prohibited by the State pure food laws. They came from a South Georgia truck farm.

3 Chicken Freaks Are Born in 10 Days

Naked Leghorn, Horned Rhode Island Red, and Whistling "Biddy" All on One Farm.

EVERETT, WASH., July 12.—Jay Sigworth, a poultry fancier, is the possessor of three barnyard freaks, hatched within ten days, and is wondering what new creation his chickens will spring on him. He defies even Winsted, Conn., to beat the following combination:

A White Leghorn hen hatched one chick which runs about as naked as a lizard. A Rhode Island chick has a well defined horn protruding from near the tip of its beak.

Another chick refuses to "peep" as a proper chick should and takes great delight in its talent for whistling. It will stand apart from its mates and whistle a distinct note, lasting about twelve seconds.

Boy Takes Rattler For His Playmate

Brings Serpent in House and Is Not Hurt by Experience With Snake.

BELLEVUE, FLA., July 12.—J. H. Maxwell, Jr., two-year-old son of J. H. Maxwell, of this place, is alive and playing just as usual to-day despite the fact that he had as a playmate for a few minutes yesterday a rattlesnake which he picked up in the yard of his father's home.

The little fellow came running into the house with the snake in his hand, laughing at his find. The snake was wriggling and attempting to strike him when his father seized and killed it.

Poor Roads Called Cause of Illiteracy

President of Association Says Good Schools Will Come With Improved Highways.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 12.—Illiteracy is caused chiefly by poor roads, according to Charles H. Davis, president of the National Highway Association, in an address before the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education at its twenty-first annual convention.

"We can not have good schools, unless we have good roads," he said.

Albert Ross Hill, president of the University of Missouri, arraigned the State Legislature, alleging that their false economy crippled the State universities.

Wife Elopes to Fill Role of Life Saver

Writes Husband She Left With Admirer to Keep Him From Slaying Himself.

NEW YORK, July 12.—James Stevens, of Ashburton Avenue, Yonkers, received a note yesterday from his wife Sarah, explaining that she had eloped with James Barber to save the man's life.

Barber, so she said, became so infatuated with her that he threatened to kill himself unless she fled with him. He even showed her a revolver, so she agreed to go in order to prevent a tragedy. Stevens has asked the police to find her.

TOWN GETS ITS MAIL BY STAGE ALWAYS WEEK LATE

SALEM, July 12.—"Mail is always a week behind where I live," said Charles E. Oliver, County School Superintendent of Lake County, who is here in connection with the examination of public school teachers. "There is a school at Butte, near Wagontire Mountain, that probably has the poorest mail service in the United States.

The mail, no matter if sent from Lakeview, the county seat, goes first to Salt Lake City or Reno, Nev., and then through a roundabout way filters into the Oregon town. It is transported a considerable distance by stage.

President and Mrs. Wilson have followed the fashion set by Prince Ernest August of Cumberland and Princess Victoria Louise, who appeared frequently in the streets of Berlin before their marriage walking hand in hand. The President and Mrs. Wilson are here shown taking a hand-in-hand stroll at the summer capital at Cornish, N. H. In the lower picture the President, Miss Eleanor Wilson and Mrs. Wilson are enjoying an auto ride through the New Hampshire hills.

Girl Runs Foundry as Father Breaks Down

Daughter for Six Years After Parent's Health Failed Assumed Executive Duties of Business.

GREAT FALLS, MONT., July 12.—The directing force of the Great Falls Iron Works is a woman—Miss N. Cerula Woodbury. On the company's official roster she is designated as secretary-treasurer, but as the daughter of L. S. Woodbury, president of the company, she has for six years assumed the duties and responsibilities of her father, who has been in failing health and has passed most of his time in travel.

Miss Woodbury is at the office each day and keeps in close touch with all departments of the business.

Greek Theater To Seat 10,000 Planned

California Man Wants to Have Massive Structure Ready for Christmas Day Performance.

LOS ANGELES, July 12.—A Greek theater of concrete, with stage of classic lines, with concentric rings of concrete for tiers of seats rising higher and higher, that will accommodate 10,000 persons, will be built by Colonel Griffith J. Griffith, in Vermont Canyon, Griffith Park, Hollywood, and will be presented to the city.

"I hope to have the stage and enough of the theater completed by Christmas to seat 10,000 or 15,000 people," said Colonel Griffith, "so that a celebration may be held there Christmas day."

RECOVERS $380 FOR HIS WORK AS FATHER-IN-LAW

BOZEMAN, MONT., July 12.—J. E. McCallum was awarded $380 by the jury in the District Court as wages alleged to be due him for his services as father-in-law in the household of Geo. Taylor, his son-in-law, recently separated from his wife.

McCallum asked for this sum alleging that the work he had done in the house of his son-in-law, helping with the washing, dishes, etc., was worthy of payment.

The jury decided, after hearing the testimony, that the old man's efforts demanded more than mere board and room, and gave the plaintiff all he asked for.

Wins Suit for $100 He Bet on Marriage

Bridegroom Wagered He Would Wed in Year When Taker Backed, He Resorted to Court.

WELCH, W. VA., July 12.—One of the most unusual civil suits in the history of the State was decided here when Dr. J. L. Sameth was awarded $100, with interest for a year, against George D. Kendrick. During the latter part of the year 1911, during a conversation about matrimony, Kendrick told Dr. Sameth he would give him $100 if he married before January.

The men had been friends for fifteen years. Dr. Sameth had previously made arrangements to be married in January, and after this proposition was made he prevailed on his fiancee to be married before January 1. From time to time Dr. Sameth asked Kendrick for the money, but the latter always declared it a joke. Dr. Sameth entered suit and won.

Ministers Snub Evangelist Sunday

New Bedford Preachers Decide Not to Invite the Former Baseball Player.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS., July 12.—Protestant ministers of New Bedford, after discussing Billy Sunday, the evangelist, in frank fashion, at their annual Cuttyhunk outing, voted unanimously not to invite Sunday to conduct revivals here, as had been planned.

The chief objections advanced were that Sunday requires Protestant churches to abandon all but their Sunday School services during his stay, and that the expense would be very heavy.

But there was also discussion as to Sunday's preachings and as to his motives. Appropriately enough—since Sunday played big league ball once upon a time, the ministers took a recess and played a game themselves before coming to their final decision. A letter from Sunday was read at the meeting.

SAN BERNARDINO, CAL., July 12. Two pots of gold and a skeleton were unearthed here by G. W. Tyler while conducting street grading operations. The gold, in dust and nuggets, was worth about $500.

FRANK JAMES SPENDING LAST YEARS AT HOME

Former Famous Bandit Traced Back to Missouri Farm Where Brother Jesse Is Buried.

DENVER, July 12.—Within the last few months there have come many stories regarding Frank James, the one-time bandit. Frank James has died in Oregon, California and a few other States, he has "gotten religion" in the East, and he has been active generally. And the queer part about it is that he is alive and in good health, and is spending his last days on the old James farm a few miles from Kearney, Mo., where Jesse James is buried.

Brings Citizens' Statement.

This is the information that is brought to Denver by L. Wright, a motion picture proprietor, who recently made a visit to the farm in Missouri. When he returned he brought a statement with him, signed by various citizens of Kearney, and which reads as follows:

To Whom It May Concern:

This is to certify that we, the following citizens of Kearney, Clay County, Missouri, hereby affirm that we are personally acquainted with the original Frank James, brother of Jesse James, and that he is now enjoying good health and is living on the old James homestead about three miles northeast of this city, and we furthermore state that he is an honored and respected citizen of this community.

"I went back to get Mr. James' opinion regarding law and order," Mr. Wright said. "I am the proprietor of a set of Jesse James pictures and I had received the criticism that they were not moral. I contended exactly the opposite—that they showed the bad effects of a life of crime. So I went back to get some expression from Frank James on it. He told me this.

James Maintains Innocence.

"If anyone thinks he can violate the law and make a success of it, I consider him insane, and his finish will be the gallows or the penitentiary.'"

Frank James contends that he was innocent of all the charges of outlawry placed against him. He points to his acquittal as evidence.

RELIGIOUS WAR SAVES NARCOTIC FOR REDSKINS

United States Senate Permits Indians to Use Peyote When Told It Makes Them Peaceful.

By SIDNEY ESPEY.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—The United States Senate recently was caught between two warring religious factions and diplomatically settled the dispdute by doing nothing. Therefore does the Indian continue the use of peyote, a narcotic of most peculiar properties.

It was urged by several missionaries and others bent on reforming the Indians that the use of peyote, a furry, dried button gathered from a Mexican plant, bred a habit similar to that which users of cocaine and morphine acquire. None of the missionaries gave the Senate Indian Committee first-hand information regarding this, and as it was vigorously disputed by Indians the Senate struck from the Indian appropriation bill a provision that a part of the appropriation for the suppression of the liquor traffic should also be devoted to stamping out the peyote habit.

Indians Defend Peyote.

Indians who wrote to the committee declared that the peyote is not a habit-maker and that, instead, it has induced a frame of mind among Indians which accords well with the governmental policy to make the Indians self-supporting and able to care for the vast properties which the Government now holds for them in trust.

Washington, excepting Indian reservations themselves, is perhaps the greatest Indian center in the United States. There are three or four hotels along the lower part of Pennsylvania Avenue, which in days past were aristocratic hostelries, where the barbaric brilliance of Indian costume may be seen almost any day.

Some wear blankets of varied colors, some adopt the habiliments of the white man, except that their garb is a riot of color that would make Senator James Hamilton Lewis look like a monotone in water color.

But whatever their garb, Poor Lo gets out among the Congressmen. And there he seems to have done a nifty job of lobbying in favor of peyote.

Narcotic Effect Slow.

Last winter a group of Indians visited a Congressman and brought with them a pocket full of peyote. They described its effects. The peyote is either chewed or is steeped and the liquor is then drunk. The narcotic effect is slow. One must take at least a whole night to get the benefit of a peyote spree.

But instead of inflaming the imagination and prompting the Indian to deeds of violence, it has an effect quite opposite. Instead the peyote user becomes introspective, considers his relations to his fellow men, weighs the wrongs he has inflicted on others and acquires, for the time being, at least, an altruistic philosophy quite at variance with the general tendency of Indians.

Nor, according to what this group of Indians told the Congressman, does the effect pass away with the recovery from the narcotic effects of the peyote. The dreamer awakes, but he retains for a time his humility of spirit and his wish to be of some value to his fellow men instead of an incumbrance. So eloquent, in fact, was the description that the particular Congressman decided that a treatment of peyote might not be bad for him. So the Indians left a few buttons and departed.

CHURCH WINS PROPERTY AFTER 48 YEARS LITIGATION

SALEM, OREG., July 12.—After court proceedings for 48 years, the Society of Sisters of the Holy Name of Jesus and Mary have undisputed possession of the property on which is located the Catholic school. Circuit Judge Galloway has granted an order quieting the title to the property.

The property was donated to the society in 1865, and has been used by it since.

About fifty persons, with Edward Davignon as principal, were interested in the suit.

PAGE BRANDED FOE OF SOUTH BY MAGAZINE

Ambassador in Novel Declares Himself Ashamed of Native Section.

SCOFFS OLD CONFEDERATES

Diplomat Finds No Objection to Marriage of Mulattoes and Whites, Article Asserts.

Aroused over statements Walter H. Page, Ambassador to the Court of St. James, made in his book, "The Southerners," in which it is declared he abused and derided Southerners through a false portrayal of them, the editors of Neale's Magazine in their July issue question Mr. Page's ability to represent the American people. The sharp criticism of the Ambassador, who is a native of the South, is the first offering in the publication and is entitled "Ambassador Page No Southerner."

The novel "The Southerners" first appeared as a serial in the Atlantic Monthly, and was written by Mr. Page under the pseudonym of "Nicholas Worth. Besides the review of the book there is editorial comment in Neale's Magazine questioning Mr. Page's Americanism, one paragraph of which reads:

"But Ambassador Page seems to hold the American section in which he was born and reared—a section that comprises about one-fourth the area and nearly one-fourth of the population of the United States—to be un-American because sectional. We are all Americans—unless Mr. Page be an exception—and worthier Americans because of our affection for the ward, borough, city, county and State in which we live."

Looked Down on By All.

Some of the criticisms of Mr. Page in the review of his book follow:

"We found that Nicholas Worth, the professed author of the book, was a man whose environment in the South had evidently been among persons who were not recognized in that section as typical—in fact, who had no social recognition whatever, but who lived to themselves and were looked down upon by whites and blacks alike.

"There are scenes in this book that are so coarse that we will not bring them into this review. It is sufficient to say that they were used to vilify the white race.

"Nicholas Worth and his kind never stood socially high in the South; he was no gentleman; his associates were not gentlemen; his antecedents had a defective sense of the difference that exists between right and wrong.

"Nicholas Worth holds Confederate veterans in utter contempt, and throughout his book Confederates are roundly abused, and he also abuses their organization and other Southern patriotic bodies, such as the Daughters of the Confederacy. Nicholas Worth denies that there was any intellectuality among the women of the South. He frequently speaks of the lack of culture of all the people among whom he was reared.

Ashamed of Section.

"Nicholas Worth, the Southerner, is ashamed of being a Southerner. He holds that there is no negro social problem. He does not find objectionable the marriage of a mulatto girl to a white man. He meets the negro woman on the terms of equality.

"He says that he found his 'intellectual emancipation' at Harvard. He does not seem ever to have been in any sort of home in the South—unless in the home of some negro; or, should we say that he seemed quite 'at home' when among negroes?

"Throughout the book Nicholas Worth continually dwells on his intellectual superiority to the people of the section where he was born. He praises his own scholarship as if amazed that a skull so small as his had the capacity for storing away so much erudition. As an evidence of his extraordinary knowledge, he says: 'Yet not a man or women who alluded to 'scholarly diversion' knew even the Greek alphabet, nor (sic) had any desire to learn it.

"The book now becomes important because of Mr. Page's position as the Ambassador of all the American people to Great Britain. In London the book is being hailed as a true expression of the South, for Mr. Page was born in the South, and they naturally suppose that a Southern President appointing a man of Southern birth has appointed a representative Southerner."

FARM HAND WINS $5 BY CARRYING CALF 2 MILES

MARTINETTE, WIS., July 12.—To win the value of the animal, $5, John Gross, a farm hand for Henry Dworak, Casco, Wis., carried a calf, weighing 122 pounds, two miles without putting the calf down.

Dworak told Gross to harness a team to take the calf to town. The farm hand said he would not harness a team for such a little load and that he could carry the calf to town.

Dworak then told him he could have the price the calf brought for veal if he performed the feat.

Adele Ritchie's Husband Scored First Wife Calls Him a Bigamist Pledges Life to Punishing Him

Adele Ritchie, the celebrated musical comedy actress, is seen in the upper picture, while below is Mrs. C. N. Bell No. 1, who charges that Miss Ritchie's new husband is a bigamist.

Mrs. C. N. Bell Declares She Was Left Friendless and Penniless to Starve in England.

Special Cable to The American.

LIVERPOOL, July 12.—Ill, practically penniless, dependent on the charity of an humble Liverpool shopkeeper, Mrs. Charles Nelson Bell, wife of the wealthy wine agent of New York who married Adele Ritchie, the musical comedy star, a few weeks ago, to-day told a pitiful story of how she had been left friendless in England to starve by her husband. She further declared that he had never obtained a divorce and asserted that she would not rest until she had raised enough money to return to the United States and prosecute him for the bigamy she declares he is guilty of.

Bell, the son of a banker of Asbury Park, and Adele Ritchie were married quietly a few weeks ago. At the time of the nuptials Miss Ritchie announced that she was marrying for money and her husband knew it.

Mrs. Bell says she was served with notice of divorce proceedings, but they were withdrawn after she had refused an offer of $750 to let the suit go uncontested.

"Such a proposal was a degrading insult," said Mrs. Bell, who wept as she told of her plight. "Starvation is agony, but I would rather starve to death a hundred times than to sell my good name, my reputation.

"Next I heard of my husband's marriage to Adele Ritchie—to her, of all women. I might have forgiven his cruelty, but now I shall punish him as he deserves, if there be justice left in America—if a law against bigamy exists there still.

Mrs. Bell was found at No. 28 St. Paul's Road, Seacombe, Cheshire, a suburb of Liverpool. She was once a model for Charles Dana Gibson. She is only twenty-eight years old.

She said falteringly as her feelings mastered her:

"I married Charles Nelson Bell September 21, 1906, at the Episcopal Church at Fort Hamilton, New York City. My maiden name was Louise McNaughton and my mother now lives at No. 161 Bay Thirty-fourth Street, Bensonhurst.

"Ours was a runaway marriage. My mother strongly objected to Mr. Bell. I loved him, but was soon disillusioned.

Sent Her to Europe.

"It is true that he gave me what is called 'a good time.' We lived at a good hotel, but I quickly realized that so far from being the sole object of my husband's affections I was only one among many.

"My husband sent me to England in May, 1911; he came to the pier, bid me bon voyage, loaded me with flowers and fruit, and sent me off happier than I had been for months, believing he loved me. I was sorry for the separation.

"Time drifted on and he was always making pretexts for me to stay here. One was that he had entered a new business and was head over heels in work. But weekly remittances arrived regularly. His letters were most affectionate, so I was not worried. Eventually I got homesick and wrote telling him so. He replied on May 31, 1912, that he was cabling me passage money.

"That is the last I heard from him. No letter arrived for the next few weeks, so I cabled. Still there was no reply. My money gave out; the hotel manager, who had been very forbearing, told me I must give up my room and my baggage because my bill was not paid.

"I stepped into the street with just a few shillings in my pocket and with nothing but the clothes I wore. I asked Mrs. Heaton, a shopkeeper, if she would lodge me for a short time until my remittance arrived. She did so, but I was penniless by then and, unwilling to acquaint her with my predicament, I went out at meal times and walked the streets starving.

"Mrs. Heaton finally discovered this and insisted on feeding me. She also got me a situation as a lady's help.

"Then suddenly last August someone served me with divorce papers. The shock made me ill. It seems that my husband had gone to Chicago and filed suit on the grounds of desertion, while I had been suffering awful privations here, unable to get money or even a letter from him or to return to America.

"Plainly, Mr. Bell thought the suit would be defended. I swore it would be.

"I went to the American Consul at Liverpool, but was merely shown the door. They told me if they had to assist every American in distress they would have a fine time.

"I then found a kind lawyer in Liverpool who came to my aid. He instructed Ferguson & Goodnow, lawyers, of State Street, Chicago, to defend my case.

"Immediately the defense was filed. I am informed that Bell dropped the case. Then, through my lawyers, knowing me to be penniless, he offered me $750 to allow the case to go through undefended. I refused and asked Ferguson & Goodnow to sue Mr. Bell for maintenance. They replied that Mr. Bell had left Chicago and they were unable to proceed."

GIRL MASKED AS DOCTOR CAUSES THRILL AT BALL

Kisses Pretty Married Woman, Who Cries for Husband, but He Is Disguised as Woman.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 12.—A comedy of errors was staged aboard the Pacific Mail steamer Nile. Miss Gene Yarborough, clothed in the uniform of the ship's surgeon, played the principal role and, for a time, had the passengers guessing and almost caused a domestic tragedy.

One day out of Honolulu the passengers held a masquerade ball to relieve the tedium of the voyage, and the outcome far exceeded the most optimistic expectations. That this was so was due in a great measure to Miss Yarborough.

While everybody on board was having a glorious time and the fun was waxing fast and furious, two maskers, one attired in Miss Yarborough's Japanese kimono and the other in the uniform of the Nile's doctor, entered the saloon and were the liveliest in the fun.

"Doctor" Dances Divinely.

The doctor danced divinely, and lacked not for partners. Little actions on the part of the physician, however, caused frowns on the brows of many of his fair partners. Squeezes of the hands and unnecessary pressure about the waists caused many to wonder at the liberties. Several were openly kissed. Some of the married women objected, but there were several who did not.

Then the doctor asked to dance with Mrs. R. E. Purinton, wife of a Government teacher of Osaka. While the two glided over the floor of the saloon Mrs. Purinton was gathered in the doctor's arms and a resounding kiss was planted on her lips. She screamed and immediately demanded that her husband be sent for.

Husband Is Missing.

A search was instituted, but no trace of Purinton could be found. Then the indignant passengers proceeded to snatch the mask from the face of the surgeon.

As the disguise came off a peal of laughter rang out, and Miss Yarborough was revealed.

The question arose concerning the identity of the passenger in the kimono, and Purinton was discovered. A plot had been hatched between the two, and Miss Yarborough had entered heartily into the spirit of the thing. Their farce met with far more success than either had dreamed of. The entire difficulty was quickly adjusted, however, and the ball was resumed with greater merriment than before.

Miss Yarborough has her home with her mother at 2158 Sutter Street, and has been touring the Orient with the Anglo-American players, presenting American comedies.

Jap Baby Baptized With American Flag

Stars and Stripes and Bible Used to Consecrate Boy to Patriotism and Piety.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 12.—A year ago Roy T. Masuda, a native of Japan, and Miss Mena Gilbertson, a Minnesota girl, were married by Rev. G. L. Morrill. Their two-month-old boy, George Washington Masuda, was consecrated, Rev. Mr. Morrill officiating.

The service is said to have been unique. Mr. Morrill formerly was a Baptist minister and does not approve of sprinkling as a form of baptism, and the baby was too young for immersion. The parents were anxious not only that the child receive some form of baptism and they also were firm in their desire that Rev. Mr. Morrill perform the ceremony. Hence, a compromise was agreed upon.

The boy was consecrated, the minister using the Bible and an American flag in the ceremony, pledging the father and mother to teach the youngster patriotism and piety.

Town Seeks in Vain For Man for Mayor

Political Parties Offer Place to Several, but Each of Them Refuses the Nomination.

BOONVILLE, IND., July 12.—Political parties of Boonville are experiencing much trouble to find availables to make the race for city offices in the coming elections.

The office of Mayor, to be vacated by Dr. T. D. Scales, is one particularly begging. On the expiration of his term Dr. Scales, it is understood, will be appointed on the State Board of Tax Commissioners by Governor Ralston.

Louis Kinderman, a hardware dealer; Henry Maurer, a department store owner, and Philip Lutz, Jr., an attorney, are suggested for the Democratic nomination, but each refuses to become a candidate. Jasper H. Thornburg, Councilman, is suggested for the Republican nomination.

Children Will Be Taught How to Lose

Town Employs Playmaster Who Will Attempt to Engender Better Spirit of Sportmanship.

CHICAGO, July 12.—Henry F. Kallenberg has just been appointed official playmaster to the children of River Forest, a suburb. Besides teaching them how to play, one of the important duties of the position will be to show young Americans how to be good losers, which they are not, he says.

"The American baseball fan is a bad loser, because his education in sportsmanship has been sadly neglected," the playmaster told members of the village board of River Forest.

"His interest in baseball can be traced back to the corner lot game, where he spent 40 minutes of every hour in arguing and 20 minutes playing ball."

MINNESOTA BARS SALE OF CIGARETTES ON TRAINS

ST. PAUL, July 12.—Cigarettes can not be sold on trains in Minnesota, according to an opinion given by the State Attorney General's office.

A law adopted at the last session of the Legislature provided for the sale of cigarettes by licensed dealers. The Attorney General's office says the law provides for the sale of cigarettes only at one place and in a definite municipality, which conditions are violated by trains.

GIRL DESERTS CHAUFFEUR SHE WEDS ON LARK

Banker's Daughter, in Tears, Tells of Escapade When Confronted With Marriage License.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Helen Anna Dowsey, 16 years old, a daughter of Dr. George H. Dowsey, former president of the First National Bank of Great Neck, L. I., was married secretly Wednesday afternoon to George Lephardt, 22 years old, a chauffeur, of 22 Ash Street, Flushing. Dr. Dowsey learned of the elopement yesterday afternoon in an unusual manner.

When a reporter called at the Dowsey home Dr. Dowsey refused to believe that his daughter was married. He insisted there must be a confusion of names, as his daughter was at home the night before as usual.

Denies She Is Bride.

When he called the young woman, she laughingly agreed her father was correct, and denied she was a bride. When a copy of the marriage license, returned to the City Clerk by the officiating clergyman, was displayed, she broke down, wept and confessed she had been married to Lephardt.

Because of the bride's age Dr. Dowsey at first declared he would call upon the District Attorney to proceed against the bridegroom. Later his brother, James Dowsey, a lawyer, stated that only action to annul the marriage would be taken by the young woman's family.

Through her tears, Mrs. Lephardt explained she had viewed the wedding more as a lark than otherwise, as she had been assured by members of the wedding party that inasmuch as she was not of age, she could have it annulled later if she so desired. She returned home on Wednesday afternoon, within an hour after the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Raymond L. Forman in the parsonage of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Flushing.

Chauffeur Awaits Her.

The couple, accompanied by a brother of the bridegroom and a young woman whom the bride said she had never met before and whose name she could not remember, went directly to the clergyman from the City Clerk's office in Long Island City. They had met earlier in the day in Port Washington, where Miss Dowsey had told her family she was going to visit friends, but where Lephardt and the others were waiting for her with an automobile.

When applying for the license, she gave her age as 18 years and her residence at 22 Ash Street, Flushing, the home of the bridegroom. After the ceremony the bride was driven to her home.

To her father Mrs. Lephardt said she first met Lephardt when he was employed as a chauffeur by a resident of Great Neck. Dr. Dowsey and Miss Ethel Dowsey, the sister of the young bride, did not recall ever having seen him.

TWO HAIRCUTS FOR NICKEL SAVE MONEY FOR STATE

LINCOLN, NEBR., July 12.—Superintendent R. V. Clark, of the State Industrial School, has evolved plans for saving the State money. A voucher received from that institution shows that for forty-six hair cuts given to inmates of his school, Superintendent Clark paid the sum of $1.15—at the rate of two for a nickel.

BANK ROBBER LOCAL FAVORITE; HIS DUAL ROLE

Young Man Who Held Up Cashier of Oregon Institution Read Cheap Novels on the Sly.

FOUND IN A LONELY CABIN

Hunt on for Desperado Who Had Won Golden Opinions From All His Acquaintances.

ROSEBURG, OREG., July 12.—Ray Diamond, the youthful desperado who held up Cashier Smith, of the Glendale State Bank, and secured $2,800 in money, lived a dual life, according to detectives who have been trying to capture him.

Diamond lived in Glendale five years, and conducted himself in a manner which won for him the esteem of his acquaintances. He was industrious and worked steadily.

He was welcomed in the best social circles in this district. Only a few weeks ago he played the leading part in a home talent play, for which he received high commendation. He was an Odd Fellow, while the cashier he held up was the Noble Grand of his lodge.

Young Diamond did not drink, he was quiet and unassuming and talked little. He loved literature and was familiar with the works of the best authors. He was well versed on current events, and was a conversationalist of more than ordinary intelligence.

Has Refined Features.

In all, Diamond's outward life suggested nothing that would indicate that he was desperate and that he would ransack a bank. On the contrary, his features indicated refinement.

There was another side to Diamond's life, however, which was only known to himself. While a reader of heavy literature, Diamond also read much of notorious character, including John Tornow, the Washington desperado, and Harry Tracy, the Oregon outlaw. It is believed he learned to admire these men, and was fascinated by the possibility of himself gaining notoriety for daring.

In the sleeping room of a lonely cabin on the outskirts of Glendale were found hundreds of papers and books, the pages of which were filled with thrilling scenes.

Indications are that when finally the time came for his adventure he laid his plans carefully. He probably recalled the expression of Tracy that "any fool could rob a bank, but there were few who could get away."

Purchasing supplies, Diamond carried them to a point somewhere in the dense timber within a few miles of Glendale, and waited the chance to enter the bank in true desperado style.

A Society Bandit.

That Diamond was planning the hold-up and robbery at the very time he participated in home talent plays and mingled with Glendale's best society the officers say there can be no doubt.

Even the bank officials speak in high terms of Diamond's past life, and are unable to give a satisfactory explanation of his crime. He had $400 of his own money and consequently was not driven to desperation through lack of funds.

Cashier Smith, the victim of the hold-up, says he knew Diamond well, and would have been no more surprised had any of Glendale's merchants committed the act.

Diamond may emerge from the mountain districts in the vicinity of Grants Pass or may continue on his way down the coast to Crescent City, where he could leave the country by boat.

Woman Own Lawyer In Divorce Hearing

Takes Advantage of Statute Permitting One Party in Action to Plead Case Personally.

LITTLE ROCK, July 12.—Mrs. Mary B. Corney, plaintiff in one of the best-known divorce cases ever in the Arkansas courts, appeared as her own attorney in the hearing in the Supreme Court.

Though she had not studied law, Mrs. Corney was permitted to make her arguments under the section of the Constitution which permits one of the parties in an action at law to be heard.

The Corney case is one of the most noted of West Arkansas. Dr. Corney, now a resident of Little Rock, was married to Mrs. Corney in New York and later moved to VanBuren. The divorce proceedings which started there, have volumes of court reports.

Seth Mann, of San Francisco, representing President Wilson, is taking active interest, and acquiring intimate knowledge of the country's resources and possibilities for his report to Washington.

Mourned as Dead, Reads Own Obituary

Man Reported Killed in Mexico by Rebels Suddenly Reappears in His California Home.

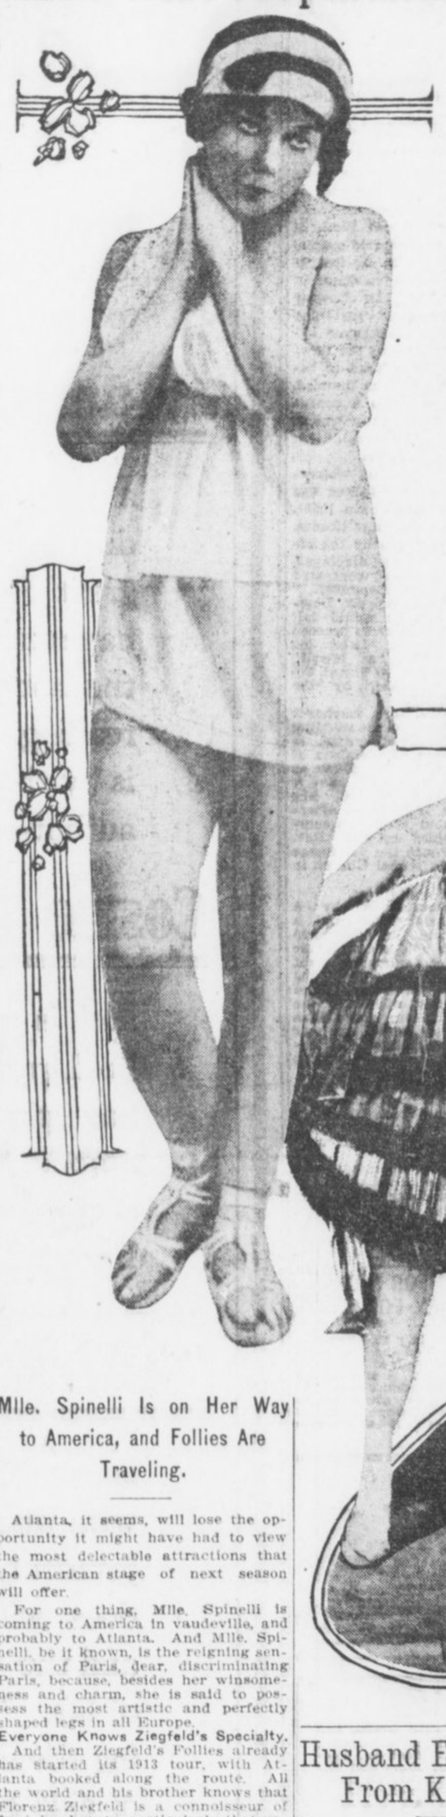
CHICO, CAL., July 12.—Tim Aubrey, who married a prominent Chico girl a year ago, and left for Mexico soon afterward, returned last night and read his own obituary in the local papers.

Word was received here several weeks ago that he had been killed by rebels and he was mourned as dead.

His unexpected appearance created a sensation here last night.

Law Perils Loveliest Limb Display

Council Would Drape Its Glories And World's Shapeliest Are Billed



At the top is shown Mlle. Spinelli, who Paris says owns the most beautifnl nether limbs, while below are Rena Wandell and Marjorie Beverelly, her foremost American rivals.

Mlle. Spinelli Is on Her Way to America, and Follies Are Traveling.

Atlanta, it seems, will lose the opportunity it might have had to view the most delectable attractions that the American stage of next season will offer.

For one thing, Mlle. Spinelli is coming to America in vaudeville, and probably to Atlanta. And Mlle. Spinelli, be it known, is the reigning sensation of Paris, dear, discriminating Paris, because, besides her winsomeness and charm, she is said to possess the most artistic and perfectly shaped legs in all Europe.

Everyone Knows Ziegfeld's Specialty.

And then Ziegfeld's Follies already has started its 1913 tour, with Atlanta booked along the route. All the world and his brother knows that Florenz Ziegfeld is a connoisseur of feminine beauty, particularly that variety of beauty that is displayed to best advantage by a costume of tights and abbreviated skirts. In the Follies of 1913 especially are two young women, Rena Wandell and Marjorie Beverelly, who are said to possess the most artistic and perfectly shaped nether limbs in all America.

In the theatrical world the legs of Spinelli and those of Ziegfeld's Follies' cast have come to be regarded as contestants for the crown of beauty. At some time a decision must be made, now that both parties to the contest are in Atlanta. Atlanta might have had an opportunity to judge, but——

But There's Boynton.

George M. Boynton, of the City Council of Atlanta, has presented to that body a resolution asking for an ordinance prohibiting the appearance of girls wearing tights or too short or scant dresses in theaters. The reporters who record the news and views of the Council are ready to prophesy the passage of the ordinance. If they are correct, then it means that Atlanta's most promising stage features of the 1913 season might as well be canceled.

For a Ziegfeld show decorously clad is no Ziegfeld show at all, and Spinelli with her artistic legs sheathed is a glory veiled.

Husband Enjoined From Killing Wife

Woman Enters Suit for Divorce and Then Obtains Restraining Order to Prevent Slaying.

HUNTINGTON, W. VA., July 12.—Mrs. Bertha A. Nigh, after filing a suit for divorce in the Circuit Court, applied to Judge Graham for an injunction that would restrain her husband from "murdering her."

After listening to the woman's story of abuse from her husband, Judge Graham granted the injunction and sent an officer to serve it on Nigh with instructions to bring him into court unless he agreed to stay out of the section of the city where his wife was living.

When Mrs. Nigh left her husband a few days ago and went to live with a woman friend, she told him that she was going to seek a divorce. Nigh tried to kill her, but was stopped by neighbors. He then threatened that he would kill her the first time he had the opportunity.

LOVE OF HUSBAND FOR SOLITAIRE CAUSES SUIT

DETROIT, July 12.—Judge VanZile granted Mrs. Elvina Kidde a divorce from her husband, Regnar Kidde, manager of the Detroit Lubricator Company, after she testified he had been in the habit of remaining aloof from her and living his life in the seclusion of his den.

His companions, she said, always were cards and books, and seldom, if ever, herself. On returning from his work, she told the court, he would retire to his den on the third floor of their home and there play solitaire and read. His salary, she said, was $5,000 a year.

KNOXVILLE FAIR TO MAKE LAND SHOW FEATURE

Value of Soil Will Be One of the Principal Lessons of Conservation Exposition.

KNOXVILLE, July 12.—Realizing that land is primarily the basis of all wealth and that from the land must come food and clothing for the present and future generations, the management of the National Conservation Exposition has prepared for the greatest land show ever held in the South and one of the greatest land shows ever held anywhere.

Scientists say that the land of the United States must be conserved, must be nurtured and cared for, must be nursed and doctored and in no wise maltreated if the nation is to maintain its present proud position at the head of all the nations of the earth.

Tremendous Land Building.

It is to teach the lesson of the necessity of conserving lands, as well as of teaching the lessons of conservation of other resources, that the National Conservation Exposition comes into being. In the big new land building on the exposition grounds the land show will be held.

The land building, completed to the last nail, is one of six big exposition buildings erected for the Conservation Exposition. Attached to it is an annex with an auditorium that will seat 3,000 persons. The United States Government display in the land building as well as State displays will be particularly fine and comprehensive. The exposition will open on September 1 and will continue until November 1.

Merchants to Visit Fair.

Incidentally, Knoxville is planning a great boosting campaign to be conducted in connection with the exposition.

Fifteen thousand merchants and jobbers in the territory contiguous to Knoxville have been invited to visit the city while the exposition is on. The invitations have been sent out by the Commercial Club of Knoxville.

The entertainment of these out-of-town buyers is part of a general boosting movement that is astir in Knoxville and has been inspired by the exposition. The merchants and jobbers of Knoxville are making every effort to extend their trade and figure that while the exposition is in progress there will be a large influx of visitors into the city. Hence the plan of inviting the outside merchants to Knoxville. Acceptances to the invitations are being received rapidly.

BATHS DECLARED CURE FOR DELINQUENT CHILDREN

CHICAGO, July 12.—Given a delinquent child, this, according to Miss Delphia M. Culver, head of the Juvenile Detention Home in Chicago, is the way to make a good and normal child—if there is a way:

Shampoo him.
Scrub him.
Put him in an antiseptic bath.
Put him under a shower bath.
Call a doctor.

Miss Culver addressed the current events class of the Evanston Congregational Church yesterday on "Our Ministry to Delinquent Boys and Girls."

"Most of them are a product of destitute conditions," she said, "and it is necessary to apply sanitary measures first of all."

Jury Finds for Both; Legal Tangle Result

Verdict Is Returned for Plaintiff and Defendant as Result of Auto Collision.

KANSAS CITY, July 12.—An accommodating jury in Judge Robinson's court brought in a verdict both for the plaintiff and the defendant in a suit for damages, thereby bringing up all sorts of legal complications.

Charles H. Apple was suing J. M. Smith for $800 damages to his motor car as a result of a collision with Smith's car two years ago. Smith filed a bill asking the same amount as Apple for damages to his car. Both asserted the other was careless and driving at a high rate of speed.

The jury believed Apple's car was damaged the worse, and ordered Smith to pay him $350, while they ordered Apple to pay Smith $85.

Savannah to Save On Street Sweeping

City Engineer Declares Atlanta Gets Brooms $10 Each Cheaper Than He Has Been Paying.

SAVANNAH, July 12.—As a result of the recent inspection by City Engineer E. R. Conant of street paving in other cities, a saving of about $600 annually will be effected in Savannah in the matter of street-sweeping brooms.

Atlanta, Conant found, is paying a little more than $4 apiece for its brooms, while Savannah has for years been buying them at $14. In Atlanta a laborer is employed by the city to make the brooms, the city purchasing the necessary materials. The laborer gets $1.50 a day.

Arrangements will at once be made to have these brooms made in Savannah as they are in Atlanta.

Monkeys Wanted in Pellagra Research

Advertisement Posted by Marine Hospital in Savannah—Sailors May Supply Simians.

SAVANNAH, July 12.—An advertisement for twelve monkeys posted at the customs house has aroused interest among sailors. The simians are wanted for use in the Marine Hospital Service. Sealed proposals will be received until noon July 16.

It is presumed that the monkeys are wanted for experimental purposes to learn whether moldy and spoiled corn will cause pellagra. Dr. C. H. Laindar, in charge of the hospital, will not discuss the matter, but it is known that experiments with monkeys are being made in this connection.

SAVANNAH TO ENFORCE RESTAURANT ORDINANCE

SAVANNAH, July 12.—Without further notice Savannah's restaurant ordinance is going to be strictly enforced. This announcement has been authorized by Alderman John W. Daniel, chairman of the Health Committee of Council.

That a majority of the restaurants have complied with the ordinance to the extent of having screen doors placed on their premises is true, but the doors are not kept closed, as required, and are, therefore, useless.

AUTOMATIC TELEPHONE SYSTEM IS PROPOSED

SAVANNAH, July 12.—K. S. Bernard, of New York, is in Savannah to look over the field with a view to establishing an automatic telephone system. Bernard represents Northern financial interests which recently incorporated an automatic telephone company in Nashville. He is also president of the Southern Automatic Telephone and Telegraph Company. Jackson and Nashville are two Southern cities that already have the system.

SAVANNAH MASONIC LODGE GIVES JEWEL TO STOVALL

SAVANNAH, July 12.—In the nature of a farewell was the presentation by Zerubbabel Masonic Lodge of a past-master's jewel to Pleasant A. Stovall, who is soon to leave for Switzerland to assume his duties as American Minister in that country. W. B. Stubbs made the presentation address and Colonel Stovall made a fitting reply. The presentation was a special feature of a regular meeting this week.

CORONER SAYS MERCURY BICHLORIDE KILLED WOMAN

SAVANNAH, July 12.—Bichloride of mercury was the cause of the death of Mrs. Frank G. Hughes, according to Coroner Harry Y. Righton.

It was discovered that Mrs. Hughes purchased a dram of powdered bichloride of mercury from a druggist, telling him she wanted the poison to kill insects.

MAYOR WILL PAY COSTS OF DOG LAW LITIGATION

Judge Rules That Citizen Had Right to Appeal to Court When Act Wasn't Enforced.

SAVANNAH, July 12.—In his opinion in the Richter mandamus proceedings, brought against Mayor Richard J. Davant by Major George H. Richter, to require the enforcement of the old dog ordinance, which has since been repealed and a new one substituted, Judge Walter G. Charlton, in the Chatham Superior Court, has decided that the respondent, Mayor Davant, must pay the costs of the proceeding.

"The repeal of the ordinance answers the question," said Judge Charlton in his opinion. "If there was no valid ordinance, no repeal was necessary; if there was a valid ordinance, it should have been enforced; and if it should have been enforced, and the avowed purpose was not to enforce it, the plaintiff was within his rights as a citizen in invoking the aid of the court."

Mayor Loses Contention.

So Major Richter wins his contention that the old ordinance should have been enforced. Mayor Davant declined positively to enforce it, and had it repealed and the ordinance now in force substituted in its place.

Judge Charlton in his opinion says: "This case started out upon its interesting career charged with questions of grave importance. It has resolved itself into a bare question of a few dollars costs. When the rule nisi issued the ordinance existed the alleged non-performance of which is the cause of litigation. By the time the rule was returnable the ordinance was repealed. I am concerned only with the case as made by the record.

"Inasmuch as the repeal of the ordinance disposes of the main case, which litigant should pay the costs? The repeal of the ordinance answers the question. If there was no valid ordinance, no repeal was necessary; and if there was a valid ordinance, it should have been enforced; and if it should have been enforced, and the avowed purpose was not to enforce it, the plaintiff was within his rights as a citizen in invoking the aid of the court.

Mayor Must Pay Costs.

"If he was properly in court, and the voluntary action participated in by the Mayor did away with the cause of action, the costs should not fall upon the plaintiff. A judgment will be entered discharging the rule, the costs to fall upon the respondent."

The original dog ordinance, which required that all animals should be muzzled or held in leash, was never enforced. It was adopted by the previous administration, and a dog catcher was provided, but he was never allowed to perform his duties. The present administration also refused to enforce the ordinance.

SAVANNAH CHAUFFEURS ACCUSED OF EXTORTION

SAVANNAH, July 12.—Alderman W. H. Wright has called the attention of City Council to complaints that the automobiles that stand in front of the Union Station are using questionable methods and extorting money from patrons.

It is said that drivers agree to take persons to their destinations for a certain price, and when en route demand more, and if the fares refuse to pay they are put down at points where they can not readily get other conveyances.

Savannah Will Give Stovall Silver Set

Business and Professional Men Will Entertain New Minister to Switzerland at Reception.

SAVANNAH, July 12.—A reception in honor of Colonel Pleasant A. Stovall, the new Minister to Switzerland, will be given by the business and professional men of Savannah at noon Thursday. Colonel Stovall sails July 29 for his post.

It has also been determined that the testimonial to be given the new Minister shall take the form of a handsome silver punch bowl, with silver cups to match. A committee has already selected and reserved this gift.

The testimonial will be presented by R. M. Oliver, and refreshments will be served.

Banker Investigates Automobile Tragedy

Birmingham Financier Starts Inquiry Into Death of Girl Stenographer in Savannah Crash.

SAVANNAH, July 12.—Determined to make a further investigation of the automobile accident on York and Drayton Streets on June 19, in which Miss Mary Moore, a stenographer, was so badly injured that she later died, a Birmingham banker, giving his name as Williams, was in Savannah this week securing the names of witnesses, a diagram of the scene of the accident, and other data relative to it.

Williams, who left for New York after conducting the investigation here, explained that a sister of Miss Moore was in his employ in Birmingham, and that it was through her that he became interested in the tragedy.

He will return to Savannah in a short time and complete his investigation.

MAYOR AUTHORIZED TO GET TEMPORARY LOAN

SAVANNAH, July 12.—In order to overcome all legal obstacles, and acting on the advice of the City Attorney, the City Council has passed a resolution authorizing Mayor Richard J. Davant to obtain a temporary loan of $80,000 to supply a casual inefficiency in the city treasury incident to the purchase of a refuse incinerating plant.

GIRL SCOUTS ON CAMP TRIP TO WOODS AND SEA

Savannah Patrols Wear Blue Uniforms on Jaunt to Warsaw Island for Woodcraft Lessons.

SAVANNAH, July 12.—Clad in uniforms of blue, wearing noheeled scout shoes, and with baggage enough to more than fill a big moving van, 32 girl scouts, with eight leaders, all in charge of Mrs. Lloyd B. Taylor, secretary of the organization, are enjoying a ten days' camping trip to Warsaw Island.

The trip to the island was made on the launch Isabella. Ten canoes were among the baggage carried by the party, and canoeing in the surf is one of the aquatic features of camp life. All of the girls took bathing suits, and dips in the surf are an important part of their daily program.

The girls are occupying the Young Men's Christian Association tents, and the real duties of the girl scout are being taught them. The tents are required to be kept neat and clean, the hours of reveille, taps and will fare forth into the wilds of the assembly have to be punctually observed, and frequent scouting parties Warsaw woods.

In the woods the lore of the scouts will be practiced; camp fires will be built; flowers picked, examined and classified botanically; Indian games will be played, and folk dances of the wild men will be indulged in. The lore of the water will be taught on board the Girl Scout, a high-powered launch, a gift to the organization by the founder of the Savannah branch, Mrs. William Lowe, of England. The launch is in charge of Dr. Lloyd B. Taylor.

There are eight patrols represented on the camp, in charge of separate leaders.

ATLANTAN LOST IN MARSH TELLS TALE OF HORROR

O. W. Kimble Spends Night in Savannah Swamp Surrounded by Snakes and Animals.

SAVANNAH, July 12.—Ill from the physical torture of a night in the Savannah River swamps, and the lack of medical attention for three days after being rescued, Ovid W. Kimble, a printer, is confined to his room at a boarding house.

Kimble, according to his own story, after falling from a Coast Line train, spent all of one night and a part of the following morning in the swamp, most of the time in water and mire up to his neck, with snakes uncomfortably close to him, and mosquitoes all but devouring him. Wildcats and bears were also in evidence, and the horror of the darkness in such surroundings caused him to lose his mind for hours.

Wanders Deeper Into Swamp.

Fear-stricken, he endeavored to extricate himself from the swamp, but his efforts succeeded only in taking him deeper into the tangle. Repeated calls for help were unanswered, and he finally became so exhausted that he sank into the mire, where he remained for hours in a semi-conscious state.

Kimble fell from the train while it was crossing the trestle across the swamp and the Savannah River. He was rescued the following morning by three negroes, who formed a human chain and pulled him onto the trestle. They carried him to a rough cabin where they lived on the edge of the swamp, where they endeavored to make him as comfortable as they could.

They had no food other than cornbread, and on this the man subsisted for three days, when, after repeated appeals, the negroes succeeded in stopping a train bound for Savannah and placed him aboard.

Kimble was on his way to Charleston. He lost his balance and fell from the step of the coach on the trestle, landing in water twenty feet below. No one saw the mishap. Kimble found that the lower supports of the trestle were beyond his reach. Not being aware of the danger that awaited him, he waded to what he thought was firm ground, but found himself imbedded in the swamp. Believing that he would soon find a road he started in the opposite direction, where he thought he saw higher ground, his hopes leading him on deeper and deeper into the mire and water.

Climbs Into Tree.

Stumbling along slowly and painfully, every movement stirring up strange creatures that swished about in the mire, he finally gained the desired elevation, only to find it a bunch of bushes and small trees. With snakes and other horrible things all about him, and the darkness creeping on, he climbed into the tallest tree he could find. Aware that he had but little chance of finding his way out he began to call for help. He shouted until his throat became so dry that he could utter nothing more than whispers.

Becoming exhausted, and fearing that he would fall from the tree in his efforts to keep away the mosquitoes, which he says were bigger than any he ever saw, he descended, and started again in his search for firm ground.

Daylight found him almost unable to move. With an effort he managed to work his way back to the highest tree he could find. He climbed to its top. From its branches he could see the trestle, but there was no sign of life there.

Kimble had almost given up hope of rescue when the three negroes appeared on the trestle and saw him. Kimble is a native of Atlanta and has relatives there.

Sick Monkey Invades Y. W. C. A.; Girls Flee

Simian Infected With Pellagra Escapes From Hospital and Scares Women.

SAVANNAH, July 12.—A monkey used for esearch work at the Marine Hospital, took French leave, raised a rumpus among the girls at the Young Women's Christian Association afterward, and created excitement throughout the neighborhood when it became known the animal was afflicted with pellagra.

The young women thought the animal looked too much like a miniature man to be nosing about in their quarters. They accordingly retreated to the street in whatever kind of apparel they chanced to be, which was mostly negligee.

MATRON CHANGES WATCH TO LEARN POLICE METHODS

SAVANNAH, July 12.—In order to become acquainted with night work at the police station Mrs. Annie Fisher, police matron, has changed her shift, and now goes on duty at 9 o'clock at night and remains until 7 in the morning.

Mrs. Fisher has become thoroughly familiar with the procedure during the day at the police station.

BRUNSWICK GAY WITH FLAGS FOR STATE REUNION

Confederate Veterans of Georgia to Hold Annual Meeting Next Wednesday and Thursday.

BRUNSWICK, July 12.—Already the streets of Brunswick have taken on a martial appearance in the form of decorations for the approaching State reunion of Georgia Confederate Veterans, which takes place in this city next week. All the committees are now actively at work preparing for the reception of the visitors. When the division chaplain delivers his prayer at the Glynn County courthouse on Wednesday morning it is expected upward of 2,000 visitors will be present.

Governor to Speak.

Governor John M. Slaton, who arrived here to-day, will address the veterans Wednesday afternoon, to be followed by the presentation of the sponsors, matrons of honor and maids of honor, one of the important social events of a reunion. The address of J. O. Preston, of Macon, promises to be one of the most interesting of the reunion, as it is expected it will deal entirely with future reunions, a subject of much interest to the veteran.

The fight for next year's reunion is expected to be very keen this year. Already three cities have been mentioned, and it is probable several others will be entered before the balloting starts on Thursday morning.

To Visit State Guard.

For the first time in years the veterans and the State troops will meet together on camp field when the boys of '61 will be guests of the Fifth Regiment on St. Simons Thursday. This event is being looked forward to with much pleasure by local people, and it is expected on that day at least 3,500 people will visit the island.

The reunion will end Thursday night and the visitors will leave for their homes Friday morning.

Dog Catcher Stoned As He Nabs a Cur

Negroes Resent His Activity in Yamacraw Section, Where He Works at Night.

SAVANNAH, July 12.—Doc Catcher E. H. Henry has discovered that the paths of his operations are not strewn with roses. Having worked the streets of Savannah during the day in search of stray dogs, he decided to make a night trip.

He was just turning into West Broad Street from the Yamacraw section with a catch when a shower of stones came flying over his head.

Yamacraw is infested with a horde of wandering curs, but the negroes who live there resent the appearance of the dog catcher as much as they resent the necessity for paying taxes on their dogs.

SAVANNAH URGED TO AID IN EXPOSITION DISPLAY

SAVANNAH, July 12.—In furtherance of the plan to have representation at the San Francisco Exposition in 1915, celebrating the opening of the Panama Canal, in which all the vast resources of Georgia will be shown to advantage, Frank Weldon, of Atlanta, has written to the Chamber of Commerce, asking that action be taken immediately.

VETERAN CAMPS SEEK TO UNITE AS RANKS THIN

Majority of Old Soldiers in Savannah Would Merge Organizations of Wearers of Gray.

SAVANNAH, July 12.—That it is the wish of a large majority of the Confederate veterans in Savannah to have the two existing organizations—the Confederate Veterans' Association and McLaws Camp, United Confederate Veterans—merged into one was shown when several members of the association attended a recent meeting of McLaws Camp.

"The time has come for us to get together," said a member of one camp to a comrade in the other .

"Our ranks are thinning out," joined in a third veteran, "and it won't be long before there will not be enough survivors of either camp to make a quorum. Then the remnants of the two camps will have to join hands. It seems to me it would be much better to get together now."

"Even the Blues and the Grays have buried the hatchet at Gettysburg," added another. "It is strange that we must remain divided this way."

The joint meeting of the veterans was for the purpose of deciding Savannah should invite the Georgia Brigade of the United Confederate Veterans to hold its 1914 reunion here. The proposition was discussed, but no conclusion was reached. It will rest largely with the attitude of the sons whether the invitation shall be extended.

The camps have discontinued their monthly meetings until October.

Plan to Halt Weevil Pest Gets Approval

Cotton Factors of Savannah Think Senator Smith's Suggestion Most Reasonable.

SAVANNAH, July 12.—The majority of Savannah cotton factors are not practical farmers, but they believe United States Senator Smith of South Carolina has advanced a feasible plan for checking the eastward advance of the boll weevil.

Most of them give the plan suggested by Senator Smith hearty approval. The plan is for the Federal Government, with State co-operation, to prohibit the growing of cotton in a belt which would separate the Atlantic Coast States which the weevil has not yet invaded from the Southwestern States, where the pest annually destroys millions of dollars worth of cotton.

New York Fat Man Enjoys Georgia Heat

356-Pounder Goes About Smiling Sympathetically at Discomforts of Others.

SAVANNAH, July 12.—It is not unusual for thin and middleweight persons to withstand the heat sturdily, but when a man who tips the scales at nearly 400 pounds goes through a Georgia July day smilingly, it is time for the others to freeze up.

Frank Giles, of New York, who is in Savannah with a crew of salesmen, representing a Northern match company, is just now Savannah's biggest man. He balances the scales at 356 pounds. He is 5 feet 10 inches tall, and has a waist measurement of 58 inches. No matter how hot it is he just smiles.

Gray Issues Call for Commercial Meeting

Savannah Chamber of Commerce Is Interested in Southern Settlement and Developmnt Organization.

SAVANNAH, July 12.—Executive Officer Joseph F. Gray, of the Chamber of Commerce, will mail in a few days letters to trades organizations all over the State, with a view to holding a conference looking to the formation of the Georgia branch of the Southern Settlement and Development Organization.

This movement is the result of the visit here recently of Vice President Manss, of that organization. As chairman of the finance committee, Gray has undertaken the task of getting the commercial organizations together for the advancement of the cause.

Postoffice Clerk Is Held as Money Thief

Young Baxley Man Is Accused of Opening Letter to Bank Containing $250.

SAVANNAH, July 12.—William Lester Boone, a young man who has been employed in the postoffice at Baxley, is in jail here charged with the theft of a special delivery letter containing $250. Boone has admitted before a United States commissioner that he took the letter, but says he has returned the money. The letter was sent by a bank in Brunswick to a bank in Baxley.

SAVANNAH TO PUBLISH ALL PURE FOOD ARRESTS

SAVANNAH, July 12.—That publicity is the cure for many public ills is the sincere conviction of Alderman John W. Daniel, chairman of the Health Committee of City Council. Where unsound foodstuffs are condemned in the future Alderman Daniel proposes to make public the fact, giving the names of the offending firms and the circumstances under which the city has made seizures. It has been the custom heretofore to condemn and say nothing about the matter.

In Savannah Social Circles

SAVANNAH, July 12.—For the first time this season Savannah for the past week has worn its real summer look. Many people have left for their summer homes and for vacations at mountain resort and seashore, and houses with shuttered windows and closed vestibules are mute testimonials of the annual exodus.

Those who have summer homes near by in the Georgia and Carolina hills are hurrying to occupy them. The summer clubs that have sprung up within the last few years at Flat Rock, Hendersonville and other mountain resorts are very attractive now that real sultry weather is at hand.

Mrs. J. J. Wilder and Mrs. J. Randolph Anderson and their children have been at their home, "The Oaks," near Marietta, since the opening of the legislative session.

* * *

Mrs. A. A. Lawrence and her children left during the week for Marietta, where they will spend most of the summer, as usual, except for a visit to Asheville in August.

Mrs. Frank B. Screven and children have been at their summer home, "Malbone," since early in the season.

Mrs. James H. Johnston and the Misses Johnston left for Blythewood last week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Minis have been at their country place for some time, and Mrs. J. G. Thomas and the Misses Thomas will go up to Guinas at an early date.

Mrs. Palmer Axson and children left during the week for Clarkesville.

Mr. and Mrs. George J. Baldwin, Miss Joseph Hull and Miss Baldwin have been at "Mountain Lodge," their country place, since early in June.

Miss Patience Barrow and Miss Janet Menzies will visit Miss Baldwin the last week in July and for a part of August. In September Mrs. A. L. Alexander and her children and Mrs. Walter I. McCoy, of Washington, will visit them.

Mrs. A. R. Lawton has been at her bungalow at the Highland Lake Club, Flat Rock, since the first part of June.

The Kanuga Club, at Hendersonville, has many Savannah members, but few have gone up for the season as yet. Mrs. Noble Jones and her children left last week for this club, where they have a cottage. Mrs. Craig Barrow will leave later in the month for the Kanuga Club. Mrs. John Sullivan Schley and Miss Marianne Schley left this week for Hendersonville.

Mrs. W. D. Simkins will leave later in the month for Waynesville, where she will spend the summer. Mrs. Mills B. Lane and children will go to Lake Toxaway in August, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cunningham, Miss Sarah Cunningham and Miss Mildred Cunningham went to Toxaway this week.

Dr. and Mrs. E. R. Corson and children have gone to New York and will sail for Boston next Tuesday on the Cymric of the White Star Line for Liverpool.

Mrs. Fleming duBignon, of Atlanta, will sail on the same ship.

Miss America Woodberry, Miss Phoebe Elliott, Miss Walton Parker, Miss Leila Gaillard and Miss Ida Floyd, of Savannah; Miss Sturgis and Miss Jeter, of Atlanta, and Miss Sarah White, of Tallulah, form a party who will sail next Wednesday for Naples.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wilson Hodge of New York, and Mrs. George J Mills, of Savannah, will sail from New York next Thuraday for Europe.

Among other Savannahians already abroad are Miss Annie Maclean, Miss Fanny Phillips, Miss Pleasant Stovall Miss Kate Osborne, Miss Josephine Stewart, Murray M. Stewart, Jr., Mrs. Montague Boyd, Walter Boyd, Francis Shackelford, Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Trosdal and children, Mrs. Karow and Mrs. Dorothea Karow and Miss Lucy Chisholm.

* * *

The officers of the Tacoma, which sailed Thursday morning for New York after ten days at Savannah, entertained some of the younger set Tuesday evening with a run down the river on one of their cutters.

A theater party was given Tuesday evening in honor of two visiting girls, Miss Dorothy Aiken, who is Miss Edith Bryson's guest, and Miss Helen Smith, who is with Miss Katherine Ives.

The party, which occupied three boxes, included Miss Aiken, Miss Smith, Miss Bryson, Miss Ives, Miss Lenore Hunter, Miss Rachel Beymer, Miss Delia Lindsay, Miss Inez Tiedeman, Miss Catherine Charlton, Spencer Connerat, Ormande Hunter, Percival Moses, Charles Maclean, Fitzhugh White, T. A. Bryson, Jr., Dudley Hull, Ambrose Gordon, John Morel, James Sheldon and George Haile.

Sam Haile gave a very pleasant little supper party Tuesday evening at Bannon Lodge, Thunderbolt, in honor of Miss Susie Cole Winburn and her visitors, Miss Agnes Chilton and the Misses Helen and Sara Swisher, of Charleston, W. Va.

In the party were the Misses Swisher, Miss Chilton, Miss Winburn, Porter Mackall, E. B. McCuen and W. A. Winburn, Jr.

The marriage of Miss Carrie Maria Gnann and John Edgar Ouzts took place Wednesday at the bride's home on East Anderson Street, the Rev. M. J. Epting, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Ouzts will spend their honeymoon in Virginia.

Mr. and Mrs. Cooper Myers, who have been spending the past two months abroad, have returned and are at their cottage at Tybee for the balance of the summer.

Mrs. Robert B. Habersham, who is visiting her brother, John Schley, in Augusta, will go to Judds Peak, N. C., early in August with the Misses Bleckley.

Mrs. Thomas Myers and little Miss Louise Dearing Myers, of Pensacola, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Dearing for two weeks.

Mrs. Samuel Stern is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Sylvan E. Myers, of Norfolk.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Egbert Barrow Freyer and their two children motored down from Marietta and are the guests of Mrs. Freyer's parents, Bishop and Mrs. F. F. Reese, for two weeks.

Miss Lori Sasser, of Fayetteville, N. C., is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Sasser, for two weeks.

Miss Rosalind Sasser and Miss Ada Crea Moore have returned to their home in Knoxville after a visit at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Sasser.

Mrs. J. L. Warrick and Master Karl Warrick left to-day for Fletcher, N. C., where they will remain until September.

Mrs. Neva Starr Wayne and little daughter are visiting Mrs. John F. Holmes in Augusta.

Miss Richard Donovan, of Macon, is the guest of Miss Madge Hicks.

Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Vickery, Jr., have returned home after a stay of two weeks in the mountains of North Carolina.

Miss Gertrude W. Wickham, of New York, is the guest of Miss Annie Keley.

Miss Mozelle Neely, who has been the guest of Miss Inez Tiedeman, has returned to her home in Waynesboro.

Mr. and Mrs. Pierre N. Holst and little Miss Betty Holst have returned to their home in Palatka, Fla., after a short visit to Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Weed at Montgomery.

Mrs. J. R. Marshall, Miss Anna Cabell Marshall and Master Eugene Marshall are spending the summer at Walnut Lodge, in Henrico County, Virginia.

Miss Florence LeNoble Lucas is visiting her cousins, the Misses Ravenel.

Miss Harriet Gignilliat, of Milledgeville, is the guest of Miss Mary Wallace Ravenel.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hunter will leave later in the month for a visit to St. Catherines, and after a stay there Mrs. Hunter will visit Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Holst at Asheville, N. C.

Mrs. Stewart A. Kraft and Mrs. Henry V. Parker have gone to New York.

Miss Louise Kelly is visiting relatives in King and Queen County, Virginia.

Miss Emily Ravenel has returned from a visit to Miss Emma Manigault Jenkins on the coast near Charleston, S. C. Miss Ravenel also stopped in Charleston to visit Miss Madeleine Stoney.

Mrs. Arthur L. Weil and Miss Elise Weil are at Atlantic City.

Mrs. C. K. Lawrence and children are spending some time in New York before going up the Hudson to spend the summer in their cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. H. J. McGinnis and Miss Almeda McGinnis have gone to Canada.

The Misses Miriam and Bertha Kauffman, of Syracuse, N. Y., and Mrs. Fred Baldwin, of New York, are visiting their sister, Mrs. Philip N. Coleman.

Mrs. J. Lawton Hiers, who has been spending several weeks in New York, has returned home.

Mrs. Mary McCredmond, Miss Kate, Miss Mary and Miss Margaret McCredmond are spending some time in Mexico.

Mrs. J. M. V. Rooney is spending the summer at her old home at Boston.

Mrs. Godin Guerard has returned from a visit to her mother at Louisville and is with Mr. and Mrs. I. G. Guerard at Isle of Hope.

Miss Laura Hoppe, of Marietta, who has been visiting Miss Agnes Reese, has been the guest of Mrs. A. A. Lawrence this week. She left to-day with Mrs. Lawrence and her children for Marietta.

To Look and Feel Bright in Hot Weather

(From The Woman Beautiful.)

This is the season when she who would have a rose-leaf complexion, lily-white neck and hands, should turn her thoughts to mercolized wax, the firm friend of the summer girl. Nothing so effectually overcomes the soiling effects of sun, wind, dust and dirt. The wax literally absorbs the scorched, discolored, withered or coarsened cuticle, bringing forth a brand new skin, clear, soft and girlishly beautiful. It also unclogs the pores, removing blackheads and increasing the skin's breathing capacity. An ounce of mercolized wax, obtainable at any drugstore, applied nightly like cold cream, and washed off mornings, will gradually improve the worst complexion.

When depressed by the heat and you want to freshen up for the evening, bathe the face in a lotion made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half-pint witchhazel. You'll find this more refreshing than an hour's rest. It is fine for smoothing out wrinkles, even the deeper ones.

BILL SEEKS TO CUT CITY PARK BOARD POWER

Savannah Officers Would Relieve Commission of Authority Over Shade Tree System.

SAVANNAH, July 12.—Formal notice has been given of the fact that a bill will be introduced in the Legislature this summer to relieve the Park and Tree Commission of jurisdiction over the trees in the streets of Savannah.

While the proposed act is designed to amend the act which created the Park and Tree Commission, it will only apply to the trees which are situated in the streets. The Park and Tree Commission, of which P. D. Daffin is chairman, now has exclusive authority in those matters. No trees can be removed without the consent of the commission.

Recently there has been considerable agitation over the subject. It is particularly desired to remove the trees which abut into Drayton Street, an important thoroughfare. It is claimed by automobilists and others that these trees seriously obstruct travel.

It was at one time suggested as a possible way out of the difficulty that Drayton Street be widened by taking in a part of the territory now known as the Forsyth Park extension, but neither the city nor the military, which jointly control the extension, would agree to this.

The commission was and is as fully determined that the trees shall not be removed.

The outcome was the pending legislation, which has the sanction of the administration.

SAVANNAH COMMISSION TO FIX DRAINAGE BOND SALE

SAVANNAH, July 12.—A special meeting of the drainage commission is to be held in a few days to determine if it is advisable to have the drainage bonds placed on the market at this time. Chairman R. S. Cope is authorized to call the special meeting whenever he sees fit.

Are Rheumatic Sufferers Negligent?

Many Suffer Excruciating Agony for Years Without Investigating the Cause of Their Pain or Its Cure.

Rheumatism frequently comes from uric acid poisoning. Uric acid accumulates from undigested food remaining in stomach and intestines, which ferments and putrefies and generates this poisonous acid. If not expelled promptly it gets into the blood, and finally forms crystalline deposits which settle in joints and muscles and stiffen them.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT has been remarkably successful in the treatment of rheumatism resulting from uric acid poisoning. It is a true uric acid solvent which will break up the deposits already formed, dissolve the uric acid out of the tissues and hold it in solution until expelled in the urine. It will not cure your rheumatism overnight; neither did your rheumatism come overnight. But JACOBS' LIVER SALT will relieve you more promptly and surely than anything else because it thoroughly purges the system of fermenting waste, eliminates the poisonous uric acid and purifies the blood.

Almost without exception the sufferer from rheumatism is subject to constipation, biliousness or dyspepsia, and a sluggish liver is at the bottom of the whole trouble. JACOBS' LIVER SALT stimulates both liver and kidneys and makes them keep your system clean. No other liver medicine has the same solvent action upon uric acid, therefore insist that your druggist give you the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. If he hasn't it, full size jar sent upon receipt of price, 25c, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

FOR MILADY'S WARDROBE

By MME. HAUTE MONDE.

AMONG the novelties promised for autumn is brocaded moire. This is described as moire cloth with brocaded satin floral figures in old French designs. Brocaded crepe de chine, which was a conspicuous offering this spring, promises to be a favorite material for evening gowns. In the heavier materials all "pile fabrics," including velvets, chinchillas, plushes and velours de laine, are going to be worn.

Black charmeuse is enjoying continued popularity this summer. The detailed accounts of the gowns worn by the most fashionable women at the French and the English races have fairly bristled with the word "black." A "black charmeuse with embroidered coatee," a "black satin with lace tunic," a "black Chantilly lace over white tulle," a "black mousseline and white tulle," a "black charmeuse with black and cream lace," a "black charmeuse draped with creamy lace and an overdress of black net;" these are a few of the costumes reported.

Fashionable blouses are of mousseline of tulle (net) with the indispensable frill of the wired ruffle forming a careless Medici collar. A genuine novelty is the tailored net blouse. It sounds impossible, but it was really extremely attractive. It is made of two thicknesses of the net and all the seams are of the openwork stitching. It has a notched revers or collar forming a pointed opening at the neck, and the sleeves are long, with regular shirtwaist cuffs, turned back at the wrist and fastening with link buttons.

* * *

Quite a novelty are the new satin-finished beaver hats of a modified sailor shape, with a rather narrow straight brim and somewhat high rounded crown. The most attractive ones are in white; but they are shown in black also. They are generally trimmed with a grosgrain band to match, having a picot edge and tied in a flat bow, with several loops, directly in the back.

* * *

The persistent vogue of the soft satin crown has been one of the surprises of the season. It was a pronounced feature of the early millinery, and achieved such immediate popularity that it was very soon avoided by careful buyers. But after suffering a temporary eclipse it has reappeared in white, with a white straw brim or else a white satin brim faced with colored straw. The trimming is usually an upstanding "palm tree" feather in white or a chic bow of white grosgrain or moire ribbon.

* * *

Not only the women who are largely developed go in for brassieres, but those also who wish to achieve the new figure in the easiest way. The modern corsets stop about two inches above the natural waist line in front, and about three inches and a half in the back. A very slim figure can depend on these supports alone, but the majority of women use a brassiere instead of a corset cover. The truth is that the latter garment is going away as the muslin petticoat did; and as knickers are taking the place of the petticoat, so are brassieres taking the place of the ribboned and ruffled corset cover of fine handiwork.

* * *

A new skirt for outing wear, especially suitable for tennis, is made of cotton corduroy, pique or linen. It appears to be made of the prevailing narrow lines, which would make the running and jumping necessary in tennis impossible. But when its wearer reaches the tennis court, she unbuttons the side seams from the hem up for several inches, and behold! many pleats thus liberated give her ample room for all the activity she desires.

* * *

Crepe de chine and China silk blouses are worn by the tennis player. They are made with flat Byron collars, some of them with deep, comfortable V-necks. Some of them are made with a yoke and are shirred into the yoke over a cord. White is the color usually worn.

Sweet simplicity should rule dress for country wear. Clever little frocks may be easily fashioned. Two to four-gore skirts are attached to more or less kimono blouses. Front fastenings may be from the chin down.

For afternoon, however, there are more ornate affairs. Plain voile skirts, with little flowered tunics, for instance, or white linen, silk or cloth dresses, with coats of gold, cerise, rose, emerald, black or blue taffeta, satin or wool, are very smart for fine country wear.

For golf, tennis and ordinary country house wear, however, white is first choice. There are simple white dresses and endless skirts of white linen and cotton Bedford cord, with which are worn sheer white waists. And this, indeed, has been almost the uniform of womankind during the last few summers. To some it is not becoming, but if both the skirt and the waist be perfectly fitted and good-looking they certainly look well on the majority of women and girls. This year the shirtwaist girl must divide honors with the one-piece-dress girl.

* * *

The color goes a long way toward giving a cool and refreshing air to a frock. There are certain colors that absorb the heat rays. For this reason many women viewed with alarm the vogue for brilliant colors this spring. Their fears, fortunately, have proved groundless, for as the hot days approach white and the soft pastel shades are prevailing over the bright reds, greens and yellows. The bolder, brighter colors are reflected merely from the sash or girdle of a white frock.

* * *

Net is everywhere. Petticoats, breakfast and bedroom caps, negligees of all sorts, blouses, frocks, coats, hats and parasols—all are made of and adorned with net. One of the newest ways to use net is to combine it in the form of insets with heavy white corded silk as a coat. The net is gored and colored and the silk is cut away beneath it. The broad band of soutache braid which edges the coat is broken with these little insets, each of them outlined with scrolls of braid.

* * *

Petticoats and pegnoirs to match are made of allover lace, unlined, of course. The pegnoir is untrimmed, excepting for a band of tiny embroidered pink and blue roses about the sleeve and neck and an upstanding frill of narrow lace outlining the V-neck. The petticoat is finished with a hem of pink chiffon, and the pegnoir and petticoat both can be worn over a handkerchief chiffon slip or under bodice and petticoat.

* * *

It is only natural that with the enlarged waist line should come the careless girdle; a belt which is loosely wrapped around the figure without any pretense of trying to make the waist look small or restrain the figure. These girdles dominate the fashions of the day. They may be of the material of the gown, of another material in a contrasting color, or of ribbon, checked, plain or striped.

* * *

The sashes of July are extra wide and unboned, but they are far more apt to go high on the figure than low, which is the striking difference between them and the oriental girdle. The largeness of the waist line and that whole part of the figure from bust to waist is now covered by these loose folds of soft material which are finished in the back with a crushed butterfly bow or shirred buckle or flattened streamers which are pleated at the top and hang to the knees.

* * *

Some of the newest evening shoes are made of pearl gray satin outlined with very small rose diamonds. These pale gray shoes are exceedingly becoming and they are worn with cobweb silk stockings in the palest shade of gray which have traceries in silver threads running up the fronts.

* * *

Very large sums of money are now spent on shoes and stockings for afternoon and evening wear. The gowns of the present day are cut in such a way that they display the feet and ankles freely, with the result that the cost of shoes and stockings has increased enormously. For wear with ball dresses some ultra smart Parisiennes vote in favor of lace stockings traced over with diamond sparks and of very low shoes in black satin, which in conjunction with the white silk stockings give a Goya impression.

* * *

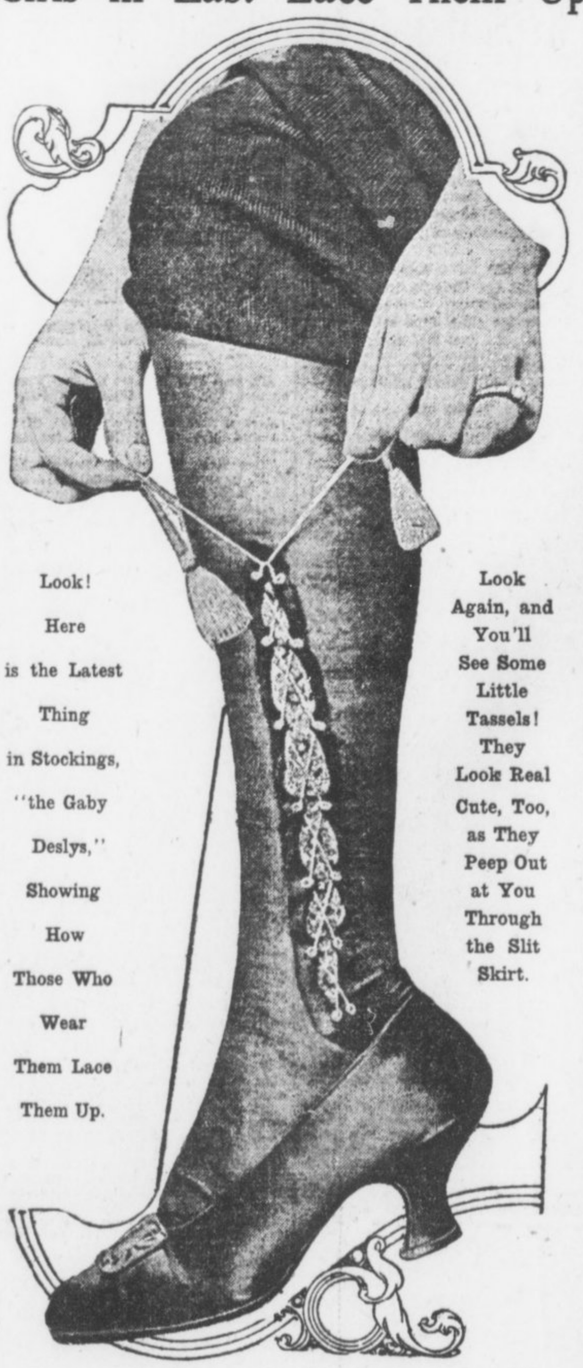
Many of the midsummer hats are being trimmed with ribbons of velvet which hang in streamers down the back as far as the waist. All colors are used, but black is the most popular. It requires about three yards for each hat, and the width chosen varies with individual inclination. Some women are using five streamers of the 2-inch and 1 1-2-inch width in preference to two streamers of the wide.

* * *

When the new silhouette with its extra large waist and slight curve in front was brought out in Paris, it received its due meed of gossip; some dismissed it as a whim, others took it seriously for several reasons, one of which was novelty and another of which was comfort. It is because of the latter that a large majority of women are adopting it, and these are extremities to which women have gone to be in fashion. Wherever the the great dressmakers in America congregate one hears more talk about this large waist line than any other feature of fashion. We are not confronted with a theory, but a condition, and the dressmakers all seem to be delighted over it. To give an idea of how rapidly this fashion has been taken hold of by those who make any attempt to dress according to the standards of the day, one dressmaker said that the normal waist line was 32 inches among her customers. But 34 was getting to be nearer the average. She said that women with a 32 bust measurement have a 32 waist measurement; that exceedingly thin women made no attempt to draw in their corsets, but merely wore them as a support as one would put whalebones in a gown, not to repress or straighten the figure. I took up the question with many dressmakers and found the situation alike wherever fashionable clothes are made. At two of the ultra-smart houses the small pad or cushion is used across the front of the waist line on figures that are unusually small.

Slit Stocking Is Latest Shocker

Girls in East Lace Them Up



Fair Atlantans Are Expected to Adopt "the Gaby Deslys" in Contrasting Shades.

Have you seen those stockings with the tantalizing, teasing slit on each side that lace with the cutest tassels and string that fashion ever devised?

They are all the rage in the East and every Atlanta girl who is really up to snuff will soon have one or more pairs in her wardrobe.

Just imagine having to LACE up your stockings TWICE, that is four times for the two stockings. It means a peck of trouble for every fair debutante who means to keep up to date in hosiery, BUT—

Remember that these stockings are none of your common clockwork kind, but each has the most fascinating slit on either side of the leg, a slit carefully hemmed with silk thread with lace holes, a half a dozen or more, up and down each side, through which the lacing runs.

And here's the real feature of the slit stocking. If it's a white stocking the lacing with the flossy tassels at the ends are RED or GREEN or any color that suits, save WHITE. Then again if the stocking is black the lacings are white or a contrasting shade.

And THAT'S what makes the "Gaby Deslys hose"—for that's the name that the slit stocking has been given—the most bewitching and attractive bit of feminine finery ever conceived.

Rest Gowns Now Necessary Part Of Wardrobes

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—No smart woman can now afford to go to a country house without a few very beautiful "rest gowns." These were formerly known as tea gowns, but they are now so elaborate that they are worn in the interval before dinner after a day's motoring or sport and are not meant for the bedroom or boudoir.

Many of the kimono rest gowns come direct from Japan, and the designs and coloring are gorgeous. Lady Arlington, who is a mature beauty of the Oriental type, has ordered some of these rest gowns, which are likely to be the envy of her sex when she goes visiting.

One gown, made of Japanese crepe de chine, is pale mist-gray lined with the softest wistaria mauve silk. Over the gown are worked great dropping sprays of wistaria in mauve silk shaded as delicately as a Japanese painting, the leaves and long, curling tendrils being embroidered in pale almond green silks as a contrast.

The arrangement of these sprays is wonderful and could only have been carried out by an artist. The gown is, of course, in kimono form, the great bag sleeves being edged with strand silk and silk tassels. Another gown is of pale water blue silk, with ragged chrysanthemums worked over it in faint creamery pink wistaria and leaves of tender green and white.

The palest shell pink doublеurs give the finishing touches. Still another gown has the same pattern on a pink ground with a touch of black and white deftly introduced into the color scheme by means of a couple of tall storks, which form part of the picture and provide a strong contrast.

Debutantes' Gowns Elaborate This Year

Most Attractive Creations to Fascinate Man Seen at Height of London Season.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—The evening gowns the debutantes are wearing are particularly attractive to the fascinated man. For example, Miss Iovial Hay, daughter of Lady Hay, equally charming in any frock, is having two very beautiful gowns made. One of periwinkle blue charmeuse, the skirt-ring is split up on one side and draped over a petticoat of flesh-pink chiffon covered with a light veiling in periwinkle blue.

The little corsage is of fine cobweb gold lace over the palest flesh-pink foundation, veiled with chiffon, and this chiffon passes over the shoulders and forms tiny sleeves. Over it again is drawn veiling of periwinkle blue knotted on the shoulder and cut with very big armholes, while the belt is made of buttercup yellow broche, headed with a fold of Oriental brocade in deep cobalt blue embossed with gold, a huge bunch of shaded "eveque" purple and wine-colored anemones being tucked into it.

Another lovely evening gown is of pink chiffon, like the inner lining of a shell, the skirt is incrusted with bands of cream lace and bouillonees chiffon and is threaded at the hem with pale blue ribbon, while it is veiled with an overdress of powder-blue chiffon edged with a sparkling border of crystals.

Motto Stockings A New Fad in Paris

Fashion Also Decrees Snakes and Birds and Butterflies as Ornaments.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 12.—Makers of fashion decrees are now concentrating their attention upon women's stockings. This is probably accounted for by the fact that the new style gowns make the stockings about the most conspicuous part of women's attire.

Hosiery bearing embroidered snakes, birds, butterflies and even mottoes have come into vogue.

Most of the stocks are pink, although some are white, and even a few purple, and green ones are seen. Those bearing the reptilian decorations are so marked that it would appear that the snakes are twined about the leg head downward. Bands of diamonds and other precious jewels are also used for decorative purposes. Some women wear slippers with the heels so high that it seems they are walking on stilts.

Not a few of the shoes are decorated with jewels. One woman had the heels of her shoes completely covered with pearls, rubies and diamonds.

Biggest Tree Found In Washington Woods

Finest Monarch Is 66 Feet In Circumference and Is 300 Feet High.

SEATTLE, WASH., July 12.—All previous records of big trees discovered in Washington and Oregon forests have been eclipsed by the latest find in Snohomish County, Washington, near the city of Everett. The giant tree is a yellow fir. This tree must be aged, for there are many tree stumps nearby that have from 100 to 500 rings, each said to represent a year's growth.

The new-found monarch of the Northwestern forests is 66 feet in circumference at the butt, and it is 128 feet to the first limb, which measures 100 inches in circumference.

The estimated height of this big fir is 300 feet. Snohomish people plan to float the tree to San Francisco next Summer in a log raft.

Couple Weds Again Without Any Rites

Recent Law Permits Divorced Pair to Renew Marital State Without Legal Ceremony.

MARINETTE, WIS., July 12.—Divorced in November, 1912, but now man and wife again without a marriage ceremony is the record of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph La Fave, of Armstrong Creek. Besides, the marriage is legal. The Legislature of 1911 enacted a law making it possible for a divorced couple within a year after the divorce judgment is entered to go before a court and obtain a vacation of the judgment, thus allowing the parties to the decree to resume the marriage relation without a ceremony being performed.

Veils Are Denounced as Dangerous by Doctor

By NORMAN BARNESBY, M. D.
Author of "Medical Chaos and Crime," "Eugenics" and "Mother and Child."

If the women of the twentieth century do not soon curtail their absurd, ugly, dangerous practice of swathing their faces in veils—veils dotted and spotted; veils besplotched and bedizened—the better part of the race in the twenty-first century will be a lot of near-sighted, watery eyed, purblind, squinting men, women and children!

This is not speaking in superlatives. It is a matter of cold, calm, physiological fact. The truth is not hard to demonstrate; the physical explanation is very simple indeed.

The veils of to-day if persisted in will eventually ruin the eyes of the women who wear them. And these weakened, semi-useless eyes are bound to be transmitted to succeeding generations, both men and women. The time has come now to call a halt. Plain veils are bad enough; veils with huge polka dots, veils with stars and crescents, for all the world like the firmament in miniature; veils with bars and grill work, veils bristling with rhomboids and polygons, circles and cones, have got to go.

Or else our eyes will.

The medical profession of America is slow to jump at conclusions. But our physicians are fast realizing what this silly fad of to-day may mean to the race of to-morrow. Oculists abroad have taken it up in earnest, too.

Does Not Protect Skin.

From the standpoint of health not one favorable point can be made in favor of the veil. It is worn, we are told with great unction, to protect the skin; to keep the dust out of the eyes.

Protect the skin? Keep dust out of the eyes? Nonsense! The veil does neither. But we don't hear a word about its detrimental effect upon the eyesight. That is apparently a secondary consideration. And more; these silly fashions—they are really sillier follies—are not only ruining the eyes of our women, but impairing their bodily health in the bargain. There is always a lowered tone to the system when the eyes are seriously affected; and modern veils do affect them. One step further—thus we get in this lowered tone much of woman's latter-day nervousness.

To-day the veil stands as nothing more than an added vanity to vanity's already ample wardrobe!

It isn't worn to protect the lady's face at all. It is frankly donned as one more mark of attraction; that is all. Possibly it is worn to hide a bad complexion, not to protect it.

Causes Eye Strain.

No wonder we have so many neurasthenics among our well-to-do women!

Because of the heavy lines, and more particularly because of the heavier dots in most of the veils they wear, the light is not uniformly distributed to all parts of the retina.

Does milady know that? No!

The result, of course, is that while some parts of the retina are normally impinged by the light rays, those parts directly back of the dots and dashes in the veil receive no light at all, or only a little at the most. So we promptly get an overstraining of some parts of the delicate, most sensitive retina and a weakening of other parts.

"It protects the skin of the face from dust and germs!"

Oh, fallacy of fallacies! Actually a soda water and stronger things veil does exactly the opposite. The mesh catches and hold tight to all dust and bacteria. And every time the veil shifts this dirt is rubbed into the skin or into the veil, ready for the next wearing. And is any comment necessary when we know that women cough, sneeze and kiss through them without uncovering their mouths?

A veil is a dirty thing!

Al-Fresco Theater Latest Rage of Fashionable Paris

By LA RACONTEUSE

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 12.—Open-air theaters are all the rage in Europe now, and this season Paris has its own fashionable al-fresco stage almost in the heart of the city, just outside of the old fortifications at Pre Catlan, in the Bois de Boulogne, only ten minutes by auto from Place de L'Opera, or you may take one of the swift little steamers on the Seine to Longchamps, and then you have about fifteen minutes' walk to the theater. The practical management has arranged it so that you may spend all day and all night there and lack nothing.

If you want to be smart, however, you ride or drive out there in the early morning hours and take your "petit dejeuner" at one of the charming restaurants, and if you are real early you are almost sure to find parties of gay night birds who have come to cool their hot brains after their exertions at Abbaye, Pigalle or Maxim and get rid of the taste of the nightly champagne in a glass of the delicious milk from the little model dairy in the park.

All Paris Finally Arrives.

The night birds have rarely left the park when society begins to arrive for their "dejeuner a la fourchette," which is in turn followed by "le 5 o'clock" when "tout Paris" is there. Endless rows of motor cars are lined up outside the park emptying their contents. From some of them come shoals of fashionably dressed children with their respective "bonnes," for here the little ones are safe and the milk is nourishing and the air fragrant.

When the last arrivals have finished sipping their afternoon tea preparations are made for the play on the open-air stage in the background of the park.

Once more the silence is disturbed by the honking of auto horns, the clacking of whips, silvery laughter and gay ejaculations. The play, nearly always some short opera or operette, begins at 8 o'clock, in the presence of an elegant audience, which as soon as it is over hurries to the brilliantly illuminated pavilion, where waiters in magnificent liveries serve every delicacy that the most refined gourmet may imagine.

A band of red-coated musicians plays sentimental or gay tunes, and many are the ladies who are secretly sighing for a smile or a glance from the handsome leader of the orchestra, who has the reputation of being one of Paris' most dangerous Don Juans, whose charms no women can resist.

Festival Ends With Dance.

Later on scores of gay parties from Paris arrive; you meet more and more acquaintances and friends; you order more and more champagne; the conversation grows more and more animated; the whole crowd becomes one big party, and the festival ends with a wild, bacchantic dance as the sun rises and the electric lights fade. You drink a cup of chocolate, telephone for your car and drive back to Paris. A cold bath and you are ready to begin another day just like the one before, though you have not slept a wink. So light and stimulating is the wonderful air of Paris.

Wild Pigeons Found; Bird Thought Extinct

Surveyor Locates Roost of 300 "Passengers" in Wooded Tract Near Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, July 12.—A flock of 300 wild pigeons has been located by M. M. Garland, surveyor of the port of Pittsburg, near his home at Edgewood. The birds have gone to nest in a heavily wooded tract, and efforts will be made to secure several of the birds alive. According to Mr. Garland, he has been very close to them on three different occasions during the last two days, and he is positive they are perfect specimens of the supposedly extinct passenger pigeon.

Mr. Garland discovered the birds while hunting through the woods. Hearing their "cooings" at a distance, he investigated and discovered the roost. The birds had just begun building their nests.

'Better Babies,' Is Clubwoman Slogan

Montana Federation Hears Address in Which West Is Urged to Follow East's Example.

LIVINGSTON, MONT., July 12.—With a slogan of "Better Babies in Montana," the Montana Federation of Women's Clubs opened its annual convention in this city.

Mrs. David Jackson's annual address was featured by her appeal to forward the work of "better babies" as it is being done in Eastern cities.

One of the principal speakers was Mrs. Una B. Herrick, dean of women at the State Agricultural College at Bozeman, who spoke upon "The Girl's Problem," declaring that "when women have attained political power the underworld will flaunt itself no more, and, although clandestine vice may not vanish from the earth and the whole social evil be eliminated, yet to the solution of the social evil problem will be brought strength which all the paths of the underworld will be unable to circumvent."

THIRTEEN-YEAR-OLD BOY SAVES MAN FROM DROWNING

COTTONWOOD FALLS, KANS., July 12.—Ted Knapp, aged thirteen, saved the life of Eden Powlan, a mail clerk, in the Cottonwood River. Powlan, a poor swimmer, became exhausted. He called for help when unable to keep afloat longer, and the Knapp boy swam to his rescue. After a hard struggle he got Powlan into shallow water and both waded out.

Court Like Powwow At Indian Will Trial

Veteran Chiefs, Grizzled Pioneers and Cattlemen Witnesses in Suit of Squaw.

SPOKANE, July 12.—Veteran Indian chiefs of the San Poil tribe, grizzled pioneers who have seen the Inland Empire grow from a wilderness, weather-beaten old stockmen and old Susan Enos, the squaw who claims half of the John Enos (Portuguese Joe) $250,000 estate, made Judge J. Stanley Webster's courtroom look like a real powwow instead of a court of justice, when the legal battle began for possession of the dead pioneer's estate.

Old Mrs. Enos claims to have married Joe in September, 1870, when she sat in an Indian tepee and was given to him by her mother and father.

COLLEGE PROFESSORS HUNT DISAPPEARING ANIMALS

SAN FRANCISCO, July 12.—Valuable additions to the museum of vertebrate zoology of the University of California will be the outgrowth of an expedition now being conducted by university professors in Marin County.

More than usual success has been enjoyed by the exploring party this year. Several important discoveries have been made. Many rare mammals which are rapidly disappearing from the Marin County hills have been caught and will be used as specimens.

FRECKLES

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With the Othine Prescription.

This prescription for the removal of freckles was written by a prominent physician and is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by Jacobs' Pharmacy under an absolute guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

COUNTESS TAKES UP LACE MAKING ART IN FRANCE

Society Leader Reviving Industry on Large Scale—Benefiting Hundreds of Women.

By MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE.
Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 12.—Thanks to the initiative of one of our leading young society matrons, the Countess de Marmier, the hand lace industry is about to assume its old ascendancy in France.

Madame de Marmier, who is a member of one of our old ducal families, has collected the very best specimens of old French lace, and has given an exhibition. Some of our most distinguished women have undertaken to help her in this national revival of lace.

The idea was suggested to Mme. de Marmier by Queen Margherita of Italy, who has a collection of old laces said to be the finest in the world.

Seeks Specimens in Tombs.

Her Majesty has made a thorough study of the history of lace. She even went so far as to visit the tombs of the ancient convents of Italy in search of specimens.

Her object was not merely artistic attraction, but also to find work in their own homes for Italian women. Inspired by this noble example, the Countess de Marmier is doing the same for France, but on a much larger scale.

Toward the end of the eighteenth century lacemaking reached its zenith in France. Valenciennes alone employed many hundreds of thousands of women. When Napoleon III had himself declared Emperor only two old lace-makers could be found in that town.

Machine Product Not Liked.

Bergue, Lille Bailleul and other northern towns took it up, but machine-made lace has never been popular in France.

Now Mme. de Marmier is establishing lacemaking centers wherein the best old French lace is made. It is a gigantic work which will give pleasant and profitable employment to all women desiring it.

This young woman, brought up among those who labor not, neither do they spin, issuing from the most frivolous Paris society, will become the savior of many of her poorer countrywomen.

$626,350,000 in Life Insurance Paid

Report for 1912 Shows New York in Lead With Chicago and Philadelphia Next.

CHICAGO, July 12.—Life insurance payments in the United States and Canada amounted to $626,350,000 during 1912, according to the annual tabulation made by The Insurance Press.

Of this $413,350,000 was for claims paid in the United States and Canada and $213,000,000 was for refunds and surrender values and payments to foreign policyholders.

All these years show a large increase over previous years.

Greater New York led with payments of $31,839,425 in 1912, followed by Chicago with $11,922,950, Philadelphia $11,053,000 and Boston $7,750,380.

ANCIENT ROMAN SARCOPHAGUS FETCHES $8,400

Lustral Bowl in White Marble, Finely Carved, Brings $1,260 at Sale in London.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—A sale of antique sculpture and old English furniture at Christie's realized about $20,000. It included some tapestries which were owned by the late Duchess of Newcastle. A set of four Brunels panels, showing hunting and sporting scenes of the early seventeenth century, sold for $4,620.

A Chippendale mahogany commode with serpentine front, 49 inches wide, fetched $1,680.

The head of a large statue of Dionysos, with some restorations, sold for $1,102. A well preserved sarcophagus found in a funeral chamber at Astia, in 1825, a beautiful specimen in the Roman style, about 6 feet long, was sold for $8,400.

A large lustral bowl in white marble, about four feet in diameter, supported on three feet, the whole finely carved, brought $1,260. This is under the experts' estimates of its value. The sides of the bowl are decorated with acanthus leaves and scrolls and figures of griffins; the supports are ornamented with leopards' heads in full relief and terminated by claw feet.

The bowl is regarded as an unusually fine example; its approximate diameter is 1.28 and its height 1.42 meters.

A sale of engravings at Sotheby's realized $14,006. Reynolds' "Lady Elizabeth Foster," by F. Bartolozzi, finely printed in colors, brought $800. J. R. Smith's "Narcissa" and "Flirtilla," both printed in color, were sold for $750.

ClassIs Instructed In Sleeping Car Lore

Milwaukte Girls Are Taught How to Pack, Read Time Tables and Sleep in Pullmans.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., July 12.—"Class in sleeping cars stand up!"

Superintendent A. A. Johnson, of Milwaukee County Agricultural School, and Miss Pearl McDonald, household economy department, said this the other afternoon, and ten girls arose.

The two teachers led the way to the street car terminal, more than a mile away, where the party boarded a car to Union Depot, Milwaukee, a road sleeper, where the "recitation" was held.

Superintendent Johnson thinks pupils should learn to do by doing. The trip to the sleeper was preceded by instruction in packing suit cases. What to take, and what not, was considered, and the girls were shown what constiutes a good outfit. Timetables were distributed and each girl picked out a trip.

CHURCH IN MEXICO HOLDS BUT TEN WORSHIPERS

EL PASO, July 12.—Mexico, for a country that is so poor, boasts some wonderfully big and fine churches and it also has what is claimed to be the smallest church in the world.

It is situated at Penon, near the City of Mexico, and is a rude affair, yet it serves all purposes, as the local population is small. It has a "seating capacity" of about ten, though there are, in fact, no seats.

Where it starts

School children are quick and easy prey to the "stoop habit." With the "young shoot," however, it is not so much a habit as it is a natural inclination. They are too young to realize just exactly what pride or poise is, and go on from day to day for a period of seven to twelve years poring over their books, unconscious of the "stoop" that is stealthily settling its clutches on the youthful frame. The bent shoulders become more bent as age increases.

The "KOMFORT BRACE"

Should be worn by all children to constantly prevent the inclination to "stoop," and, by keeping the chest extended, encourage and necessitate "deep breathing," the foremost law of perfect health. With the inclination to stoop stopped, DEEP BREATHING rapidly becomes a perfectly natural function. "Train up a child in the way it should go, and when he GROWS up he will not depart from it" can be paraphrased to read "grow" instead of "go," and aptly, too, as the axiom applies to hygiene, as well as "morals."

BABIES NEEDED, NOT SOLDIERS, SAYS BERTILLON

Noted Criminologist Asserts That France's Greatest Peril Is Decrease in Birth Rate.

By GEORGES DUFRESNE.
Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 12.—"What France really wants in order not to become a second-class power," says Dr. Jacques Bertillon, of finger-print fame, "is not a military law of three years, which will really only be a palliative, to be followed by demands for four and five years' service, but more children, just as other countries have them."

The doctor shows that the years of 1911 and 1912 have been the worst ever registered in France. Before 1907 this country never had less than 800,000 births; before 1887 she had never less than 900,000, and before 1867 the figure was approximately 1,000,000. This, or nearly so, was the number of births in Germany at that period. But to-day the number of births in Germany is about 2,000,000, while France has to regard 750,000 as the normal figure.

Other Countries Show Increase.

Holland, with a population of one-eighth of that of France, has a greater number in men to record each year. It is often pretended that the increase in the population is checked in other countries as well as in France. The contrary is the case. During the period of 1901-1905 Italy's population increased 351,000 inhabitants, that of Austra-Hungary by 521,000 and that of Germany by 845,000. These figures, crushing as they are for France, are lower than the present figures.

Dr. Bertillon then points out that the number of marriages in France rose to 311,929 in 1912. Few countries have so high a figure in comparison with their population. Frenchmen marry readily enough, but they lack children in their homes. They have at present two or three, but they should have three or four. Dr. Bertillon says it would be necessary to protect honor, and especially to help efficaciously those who render to the country the valuable service of rearing families.

Mun Points Out Duty.

The present condition of France is a fruitful topic for writers. When Germany announced her decision to greatly strengthen her army, there was no doubt in the minds of many thinkers that she was making preparations for what they describe as "the decisive hour." It became necessary for Frenchmen who think and write to take stock of the position of the country and to point out the dangers which threatened it. They rose to the occasion, and none more readily than M. de Mun, who was writing a book which is being much discussed just now.

The duty which lies before France is clearly indicated by M. de Mun. Reviewing the book in The Gaulois, M. Emile Faguet, the academician, dwells on one of the questions which the author discusses at length, and which was the real reason for writing the book—the necessity of France returning to the three-year military system.

M. Jaures, the Socialist leader, as an antagonist of militarism, has done his best to oppose the Government. One of his arguments was that the great Marshal Bugeaud attacked the three-year system. It is true that the great soldier attacked it, but his onslaught was made not because, as the Socialist leader wanted to make out, three years was too long a period for a man to serve in the army, but because it was too short. He wanted the period to be seven years.

Two Await Death; Garrote Is Missing

Cuban Official Finds That Instrument of Execution Has Been Given to Museum.

Special Cable to The American.

HAVANA, July 12.—The Secretary of Government during a visit of inspection to Havana jail made the grimly humorous discovery that although two persons, were there awaiting the garrote, the instrument of execution, was missing.

Ex-President Gomez during his administration commuted all the death sentences or pardoned those condemned to undergo capital punishment and shortly before he retired he presented the garrote to a newly established museum as a historic curiosity.

The Secretary of Government sent orders to the museum to return the garrote at once.

PARIS TO SEE BLACK MEN IN FRENCH ARMY REVIEW

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 12.—The black troops which are to take part in the military review at Longchamps on the national fete day, July 14, will consist of detachments from Senegal, Tonkin, Annam and Madagascar.

Judging by the preparations that are being made for their reception, the "darkies" are in for a good time. This will be the first occasion on which black troops will have appeared under arms in Paris.

Geraldine Farrar Forgets Music After Air Cruise

Will Be Engaged to Any Man Who Owns Dirigible

Geraldine Farrar, who, after one ride in airship, declares that music is now a secondary consideration. She would like to buy a Zeppelin dirigible.

The Fair Operatic Star Makes a Trip in Zeppelin Craft and Proclaims Herself a Fiend for Sky Riding.

By ALAN DALE,
Special Correspondent of the Hearst's Sunday American.
Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, July 12.—Geraldine Farrar forgot all about music, all about her "art," all about the Metropolitan, all about trivial mundane happenings when I met her to-day at the Adlon Hotel. She had just made a trip in an airship—one of the Zeppelins that fly from Hamburg to Leipsig, and she was "all emotioned," as they say in French. Excitement, and not No. 18, flushed her pretty features, and she certainly did look awfully charming in a rather severe navy blue walking dress and a black "flappy" hat—not one of the basin shapes that make a girl look as though she were clamoring to be extinguished. Miss Farrar is too wise for that sort of folly. Besides, she isn't clamoring to be extinguished. Perish the thought!

"I've had the experience of my life," she said emotionally, "and nothing now matters but airships—to my mind. Henceforth I'm an airship fiend, and I'll be engaged for six whole months to any man who can supply me with an airship, and—of course—remain in the background."

Felt She Owned World.

She laughed in the quiet and untinkling way that gells over here acquire—a laugh that gets there, but makes no noise about it.

"I felt," she went on, "that I owned the world. A splendid feeling of superiority possessed me—a delightful sensation of being above all the petty things of life. No, I'm not romancing or drawing a long bow. I made the flight with mother, father and two friends, and I assure you that it was a revelation. I want to own an airship. I must do so. It is the most glorious method of transit imaginable."

She paused for a moment to get breath, for she was genuinely excited, and looked with disdain at the music on the open piano—a reminder of the daily struggle.

"Let me tell you all about it," she said. "Mommer, you know, is very nervous and inclined to be light-headed. She can't look down from a height or out of a moving train, so she was really a good test of the airship's comfort. And she never once had a qualm. We started from Potsdam, where there is a field and a cafe—you can take coffee and sausage there as everywhere in Germany. They let down a little aluminum ladder—the cutest thing you have ever seen—and before you knew it we were off—off—way up in the air. Oh, joy!"

Every Comfort Aboard.

Her eyes danced as she proceeded, and she grew so animated that if the Metropolitan Opera House people had seen her, they would have been aghast at such vivacity.

"Every imaginable comfort—the last word in luxury—greeted us in the car. It was a lovely room, with comfortable basket armchairs along the sides—a big wide room, that you couldn't imagine to be a space in an airship. We sat there, and we drank champagne, and we ate dainty sandwiches, and we wrote hundreds of postal cards to friends."

Even in the air, I thought, the terrible habit of postal card writing appears to thrive. It is an ineradicable habit.

"The German Government has provided special airship stamps, and I can tell you we used them plentifully. Oh, how delicious it all was. You touched an electric bell, and instantly a steward appeared to do your bidding. The luxury of the most luxurious hotel and the elegance of the most modern steamship were at our beck and call. There was room for 35 people. Nobody was scared; nobody felt the slightest discomfort; we all sat in our delightfully cozy chairs and revelled. We were masters of the air—I believe we went up 2,500 feet—I THINK so, at least—and I—I—well, I never wanted to come down."

She looked so amusingly regretful that I laughed. She really meant what she said.

Wants to Buy Craft.

"A steward thought I was crazy. I said I wanted to buy an airship, and he told me it cost half a million marks. 'A mere trifle,' I said, and he thought I was demented. What a splendid advertisement for any American millionaire! Just think of it. Oh, I've forgotten to say that I promised to drop a bouquet for Mr. Adlon, of this hotel, who is an old friend of mine. I did it. I reckoned it all out. We dipped sometimes, you know, and swerved, and during one of these dips, when we were over this roof, I dropped the bouquet, and it was recovered. Wasn't that charming—and sweet—and dear?"

I thought it was, all that and more. To get a bouquet from the clouds—who could desire anything more touching?

"As to singing—oh, I forgot all about it—all about such trivialities and details. I forgot my work and my ambition. All I felt was a strong wish never to come down, but I'm afraid to go up again for fear I might spoil those glorious first sensations. You know—you do or you don't—that Zeppelin is planning to send an airship across the Atlantic and believes he can do it in two days. He is asking the Government to grant him three warships for the purpose. Wouldn't it be great?

Describes Ship's Machinery.

"I understand all about the machinery and the make-up and the possibilities of these airships. You see, 'tis like this * * * and then * * * and so * * * and thus * * *."

She went into an elaborate description of machinery and technical details that made my head whizz. I'm an awful failure at anything of the kind, but Geraldine Farrar had no compunction. She told me all—all about it, and if I don't understand a Zeppelin airship it is MY fault. And I don't. But she loved telling me all about it, and when I left her I felt I must fly as she did. It's fearfully cheap. Only $25 a fly!

PRIVATE COMPANIES PILFER FRENCH ISLES IN PACIFIC

SUFFRAGETTES INVADE PALACE DESPITE QUEEN

Fear That They Will Kidnap English Royal Children Causes Increased Detective Force.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—Queen Mary, who, ever since her visit to Germany, has been living in constant terror of the suffragettes, who are said to be planning to capture one of the royal children, was greatly shocked some time ago by the discovery that not one but several believers in the militant idea had got inside the palace walls and had been in touch with the royal family every day for several months.

The Queen immediately before she went abroad discovered a parlor maid in the royal apartments wearing the dreaded badge of the Women's Social and Political Union.

Gives Queen Her Promise.

On the advice of the secret service department nothing was said about the discovery at the time and the girl was even permitted to keep her position after a long talk with Queen Mary, whom she willingly promised not to take advantage of her position to spirit away any of the royal children.

During the last few weeks a quiet investigation of the political creed of all women high and low occupied inside the palace walls brought out the astonishing fact that practically every maid employed by the royal family was steeped in militant literature, and that a great number of aristocratic ladies holding high court positions were ardent followers of Mrs. Pankhurst.

Chief Dresser Resigns.

When Queen Mary, who, until the suffragettes began to commit illegal and criminal acts of violence, had been a believer in political rights for women, found herself surrounded by militant suffragettes she at first intended to get rid of all the suspected ones, and it was because of this that Lady Shaftesbury suddenly resigned. The Queen accepted her resignation with perfect equanimity, but was greatly perturbed when it was followed by the resignation of her chief dresser who was in charge of that part of her wardrobe intended to be used during her visit to Berlin.

For several days consternation reigned at Buckingham, as several of the Queen's dresses were not yet ready. The chief dresser steadfastly refused to budge, but in the eleventh hour the diplomacy of Queen Alexandra resulted in a compromise, whereby Queen Mary gave up her first severe course and had to be satisfied with a promise by the suffragettes inside the palace walls that they would not openly wear the W. S. P. R. badge while on duty in the royal residences and that they would not distribute seditious literature among the other employees.

The Queen, however, since the last mad exploits of the suffragettes does not trust these promises and special detectives are watching the royal children night and day.

Deputies' Thirst May Stop Free Drinks

Vast Quantity of Coffee, Mineral Water, Wine and Beer Consumed by Italian Statesmen.

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, July 12.—The recent stormy sittings of the Italian Chamber of Deputies have led to increased consumption of liquids, and some economists are endeavoring to abolish free drinks.

When a Deputy arises to deliver a set oration coffee and iced water are brought him by a messenger. One of the speaker's neighbors pours him out a cup and keeps it replenished. There is a buffet in the outer lobby, where deputies are supplied gratuitously with beer, wine, spirits, coffee, ices and mineral water, and in hot weather this is well patronized.

As, however, the value of the drinks consumed last year by the 508 deputeis was barely $4,000 (of which $2,000 went for mineral waters) they can not be accused of excessive thirst. Parliamentary Representatives in Italy receive no pay. Free drinks and free railway travel are the only privileges they enjoy.

GIRL IS RESCUED AFTER LEAP INTO RHINE FALLS

Special Cable to The American.

VIENNA, July 12.—A 17-year-old girl who tried to commit suicide by springing from the bridge over the famous Rhine Falls at Schaffhausen was miraculously rescued.

She leaped right into the middle of the great waterfall, where a mass of water thunders over an irregular rocky ledge 60 feet high. Her body was whirled down in a mass of foam and reappeared on the south side of the falls. A fisherman saw her and putting out in his boat, dragged the unconscious girl from the water.

Leaving his craft to the mercy of the stream, he immediately set about resuscitating the girl. The girl, who did not receive a single scratch, is said to be the only person who has ever emerged from the Rhine Falls alive.

PARIS, July 12.—According to the annual report of the consular district of Bordeaux, the wine vintage for the whole of France in 1912, computed at 1,806,458,779 gallons, showed an increase of 317,976,879 gallons over that of 1911.

ISLE'S DEFENSE IS BIG PROBLEM BEFORE BRITAIN

Three Different Factions in England Dispute as to Best Plan of Insuring Against Invasion.

By PHILIP EVERETT.
Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—There was a time when England, trusting her proud, invincible navy, felt as safe as if the whole country were protected by a bombproof shelter, but nowadays the public mind is forever taken up with deliberations of the question if England really is capable of resisting any enemy and how the country may best defend herself if the occasion should arise.

England's political situation in the world, of course, is not so very bad. With justifiable pride we point to the fact that the country's traditional world policy is still triumphant time and again, and at present England hardly has a rival able to move his arms so freely as England herself.

Britain Political Center.

We make the most of the fact that the now ended war in the Balkans at its finish moved the political center of gravity toward Great Britain. It is also a fact that as far as diplomatic success among the powers is concerned England emerged at least temporarily an easy winner, whose statesmen are still studying and observing the remaining Balkan problems so as to get the greatest possible benefit from them. That Sir Edward Grey has proved himself a diplomat of rank even the most bitter opponents of the present government willingly admit.

But, in spite of all our diplomatic successes and our growing political prestige, we look with fear and apprehension at the rapid growth, not only among the great powers, but also in the smaller countries, of navies, dirigibles, aeroplanes and armies. We realize, perhaps, even to exaggeration, that this military and naval evolution in other countries has created a new state of affairs, which makes it ridiculous or even criminal to indulge in the old-time dreams of England's safety and impregnability.

Nation Is Divided.

When the question arises how England is to be defended against a hostile attack, the people divide themselves into three camps. The first of these consists of a dwindly party of people who insist that England should place her whole trust in her navy. This does not mean to say that the English people have less confidence in their navy than before, for this is very far from being the case, but it is realized that with the evolution of the various arms of attack the field of activity and usefulness of the navy has diminished.

The most numerous party in the country consists of those who place their trust in intelligent co-operation between the navy and the territorial army. This view is held by the admiral-in-chief of the navy, Prince Louis of Battenberg, who recently openly declared that, unassisted, the navy would not be able to protect the country, but that a well-drilled army was an absolute necessity.

Special Cable to The American.

STOCKHOLM, July 12.—An escaped Swedish convict named Anderson reached the Island of Mar, near Norrkoping, a few nights ago, where he broke into a government store and helped himself liberally to food and drink.

He went to sleep and in some way upset a lamp, setting the store on fire. The outbreak spread to a wood, 38 acres in extent, which was destroyed.

Police at Norrkoping, whose attention was attracted by the glare, went to the island and captured the convict, who was severely burned.

ENGRAVED WEDDING INVITATIONS

A wedding is the most important event in a girl's life.

Naturally she wants, and should have, engraved invitations or announcements which are ultra-fashionable and correct in every detail.

Requirments and fashions change frequently. What was perfectly correct last year may be considered bad form this season.

Our engraving is noted for its smoothness and beauty. All engraving orders are looked after by a member of the Company. He is considered an authority on society engraving. It is his business to personally see that every little detail is correct. Our reputation depends upon his ability to do this, and you can rest assured your order will have our conscientious and prompt attention.

London Costers Lose "King of Pearlies"

Activity of Chief of Donkey Tradesmen in Charity Won Admiration of Duchess of Argyle.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—London costers have lost their chief, T. J. Foyle, "King of the Pearlies," whose funeral took place recently.

Foyle died in the Royal Free Hospital, after a brief illness, which had been brought on by undertaking a deed of kindness when in weak health. When in full dress Foyle wore a suit studded with 33,000 pearl buttons.

It was not so much his dazzling suit of pearlies—the envy of hundreds of his class—as his "great human heart" which won for Foyle the admiration of all with whom he came in contact. He was always one of the first to respond to the call of charity, and his sympathy with his fellow workers won for him the admiration of Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll. When Foyle lay in the Royal Free Hospital her royal highness sent her secretary to inquire as to his condition.

Head Waiters' Tips Average $60 a Week

New York and London People Most Generous Givers, Says One in Memoirs.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 12.—A Paris head waiter has just published his memoirs, based on long years of observation behind the chairs of diners. Among the most essential qualities of the waiter are, he says, agility and physical self-control. He has known waiters to be discharged at a moment's notice from restaurants because they sneezed while on duty.

The best maitres d'hotel would dismiss a waiter who handed the wine list when the menu was called for.

Best tips are received in London and New York. Head waiters average $60 a week in tips.

The writer relates an instance of a waiter who, by speculation, made $100,000.

Motorists' Way Eased By New Rule in Italy

Customs Annoyances Suffered by Thousands of Americans Abolished by Customs Officers.

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, July 12.—It will interest the thousands of American motorists who every year enter Italy to learn that henceforth the Italian customs authorities will not annoy them with their petty formalities.

During the tourists' congress this week at Amsterdam, an agreement was reached between Milton Mansfield, of the American Automobile Association, and Signor L. Mercanti, of the Italian Touring Club, under which all fiscal nuisances connected with the landing in Italy of foreign automobiles will be stopped.

According to Mansfield, more than 3,000 American tourists land every year at Naples and, after touring Italy and Switzerland, return home by a northern route.

U. S. CARDINAL WORKS TO GIVE POPE FREEDOM

O'Connell Devises Plan of Extending Vatican Grounds to Permit Pontiff to Enjoy Sea.

By CAMILLO CIANFARRA.
Special Cable to The American.

ROME, July 12.—Announcement that negotiations were in progress between the Vatican and the heirs of Prince Torlonia for the purchase by the former of the famous "pine wood," with a view to annexing it to the Vatican gardens has revealed a moving episode of His Holiness' illness in April and has afforded new proof of Cardinal O'Connell's devotion to the Holy Father.

Pontiff Loves the Sea.

Pius X has always been a fervent lover of the sea, even before he became Patriarch of Venice, but his long stay in that city greatly intensified his love for the sunlit, ever-moving expanse.

For years he has struggled with his homesickness, which he mentioned only to his most intimate friends and relatives, but during his recent illness this longing for the sea overmastered him. In his delirium he invoked the sea; he heard the waves beating on the shore and smelled the salt air.

Finally this long-repressed desire became an obsession which seriously alarmed the physicians. It was then planned to join the Vatican to the sea by piecing together several properties. This, however, would never have been carried out had not Cardinal O'Connell paid a visit to Rome and heard of it.

America to Help.

He went over the ground with several Vatican officials and advised them to buy first the "Pineta Sacchetti," which is comparatively close and extends over 600 acres separated from the Vatican only by a narrow lane.

From this place it will not be difficult to form a pathway over the few remaining miles which separate the Vatican from the sea. The American Cardinal has promised all financial help needed.

Contributions will come pouring in from every corner of the earth and the Pope will be a prisoner no more, for he will once more behold his beloved sea and occasionally sail on the blue Mediterranean.

GOOD EYE FIRST ESSENTIAL TO GOOD BATTING, SAYS ZIMMERMAN

Batter Can't Outguess Pitcher

'HEINE' ZIMMERMAN' begins today a series of articles on how to hit the ball. As Zimmerman is one of the best batters the national game ever produced he writes with authority. One of the first things a batter must know is that he can't outguess the pitcher. Here is the way 'Heine' puts it:

Many a batter goes up there and hits on a hunch, tries to outguess the pitcher and that sort of thing. That is, he convinces himself that the pitcher is going to throw a curve ball, and if it starts across the plate he falls away because he is certain that when it breaks it will come too close for comfort. He is made to look foolish. Maybe he gets the idea that it is to be a fast one. He swings and the ball breaks and he is made to look bad, for frequently it hits him.

To be really a great batter three things are absolutely essential, Zimmerman says. A batter MUST have:

A Good Eye
Confidence
Strength

Athletics Purchase Dartmouth Captain

Connie Mack Signs Dave Morey to Hurl for Prospective American League Champions.

HANOVER, N. H., July 12.—Connie Mack, of the Philadelphia Athletics, has been watching the Dartmouth players again this season, for Captain "Dave" Morey has announced that he has signed with the Athletics for the remainder of the season. Last year found "Howie" Fahey, of Medford, Mass., Dartmouth's stellar shortstop, selected by the same manager.

"Dave" Morey, who comes from Malden and formerly starred for Malden High, has played a leading position in athletics at Hanover during his four years in college. Besides captaining his freshman football team, he won his reputation in baseball, and since his sophomore year has had a permanent berth on both the varsity eleven and nine.

As a twirler he is one of Dartmouth's best productions. Speed, accuracy and ability to emerge from tight situations have saved many a game for him when the team was slumping. He suffered an injured arm early in the season and was unable to be with the team, but lately he has shown better form than ever before.

Penn's Crack Hurler Signs With Phillies

Harry Imlay, Captain of College Nine, Has Joined Charley Dixon's Team.

PHILADELPHIA, July 12.—Harry Imlay, captain of the University of Pennsylvania baseball nine, has signed a contract with the Philadelphia National League Club, with the understanding that he will report to the Phillies as soon as the college season closes.

Imlay promised Manager Dooin, of the Phillies, some time ago that he would sign, and, according to local advices, he has kept his promise in such a manner that it will not affect his amateur standing until after he leaves Penn.

Imlay is a spitball pitcher with plenty of speed and good control. He also can hit well and has "ball sense." He won the majority of his games this year through pure ability, having a weak team behind him.

'HEINE' TELLS HOW TRAINING AS CADDY MADE HIM A BATTER

By HENRY (HEINE) ZIMMERMAN.

A GOOD eye, confidence and strength are the three essentials which must be possessed by the youth whose ambition it is to be hailed as a "slugger" in baseball.

And the asset which the average fan figures as the most valuable is of the least worth of the three. That is strength.

Of course there are half a dozen other qualities which enter into a man's hitting. But they are of the minor brand.

If a man possesses a bad eye he'll never be a great hitter.

If a man is without confidence he will never be a great hitter.

If a man lacks strength he'll never be a great slugger.

Those are three assets which every slugger must possess. In my opinion the greatest of all is the eye.

It is the eye which drives the ball over the fence. Of course the arms swing the bat which meets the ball. But if the eye doesn't inform the arms when to swing the ball will never sail over the fence and there will be the "Ohs" of disappointment from the fans as they watch a pop fly instead of the shrieks as they arise in their seats to watch the sphere clear the barrier.

How the Eye Knocks the Home Run.

Here is what happens when a home run hit is made. The eye of the batter follows the ball from the moment it leaves the pitcher's hand. The eye never for the fraction of a second leaves that ball. The eye informs the mind when to start that swing. If the eye be perfect then the bat meets the ball at exactly the proper moment and at the proper place.

The strength would have counted for nothing if the ball hadn't been met fair. Instead of sailing over the fence the ball would have popped into the air.

Any success which I have had as a batter is due to the fact that I have developed my eye. And I did that before I ever played baseball.

When I was a youngster of ten or eleven I went to the Westchester Golf Club in the Bronx, New York. I secured a position as caddy and there the value of a true eye first impressed me. The instructor impressed his students with that idea. And I certainly had an excellent opportunity of watching it tested.

We caddies would go out with a foursome. Then we would stand back and watch the fellows drive either from the tee or in the field. Some fellow would slice and his swearing could be heard for yards. Oh, it was funny, all right. But we caught his mistake. At just about the moment when his club was going to meet that ball he would take his eye from the little pellet.

Good Golfer, Good Batter.

A bad drive, much profanity would follow, and if we caddies happened to be betting a bit on the fellows we were following you can gamble that we didn't bless the fellow who made the bad drive.

Of course I did what every other caddy does. I practiced with the club. And this thing of watching the ball, never losing it for an instant, made such an impression upon me that I quickly learned how to drive. And if I do say it myself I became a pretty decent driver.

When I drifted into baseball I quickly learned that the eye developed on the golf links was about the best asset I had. And keeping my eye on the ball has been my theory ever since.

Gussing a Poor Method.

Many a batter goes up there and hits on a hunch, tries to outguess the pitcher and that sort of thing. That is, he convinces himself that the pitcher is going to throw him a curve ball and, if it starts across the plate, he falls away because he is certain that when it breaks it will come too close for comfort. He is made to look foolish. Maybe he gets the idea that it is to be a fast one. He swings and the ball breaks and he is made to look bad, for frequently it hits him.

In the series between the Cubs and the Athletics for the world's series we thought we had the signs of Bender, who was pitching for Philadelphia.

Eye Better Than Sign Reading.

For several innings we thought that when Ira Thomas, the catcher, called the pitcher "Albert," his first name, that he was calling for a fast one, and when he called him "Chief" it was a curve. Frank Schulte went up, heard Thomas call the pitcher "Albert," and prepared to swing on a fast ball. It happened to be a curve and Schulte ducked in time to keep from being beaned.

Then we went back to the other system—following the ball with the eye instead of trusting to signs.

Cleveland Fans Sour on Johnson

'Big Chief' Is Getting in Wrong

By W. J. McBeth.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Ban Johnson used to be a real Moses to his American League children. He led them out of the wilderness of the war days into an era of financial milk and honey. But, like the celebrated Duke of York, with his storied ten thousand men, having marched his forces up the hill, the big czar gives evidences of intention to march them down again. The green pastures of the promised have failed to satisfy. Ban hungers once more for the wilderness. Mighty in war, the American League president chafes under the monotony of peace. His restless soul, thwarted in its belligerency toward certain foemen of the National League, has been forced, on occasion, to seek a vent in interference with the henchmen of his own domain.

Ban Attacks Birmingham.

The latest outburst of the American League autocrat was directed against Joe Birmingham, manager of the Cleveland club. Mr. Johnson intimated that in his opinion, Birmingham was no fit person to be in charge of an American League club. Whatever prompted the attack, it appeared very ill-timed. In the few short months he had been in charge of the Naps, Birmingham had fashioned a pennant contender from an habitual second division aggregation. His club was very much in evidence as a potent factor of the struggle. And as the public, after all, pays its good money in the expectation of patronizing and propitiating results, Mr. Johnson aroused no loud hurrahs of indorsement to his attack on Birmingham. Mr. Johnson simply raised against the popularity in his own bailiwick the resentment of one more city.

Cleveland fandom is not likely quietly to brook the official interference of even the mighty Johnson with a man who is making good in its opinion.

Birmingham, unfortunately, had troubles of his own at the time; eternal dissensions that could best be straightened out in the clubhouse. The great Napoleon Lajoie objected to club discipline when his manager thought it to the best interests of all to give the mighty Frenchman a rest. Lajoie went over Birmingham's head with a direct appeal to President Charles Somers, Perhaps, it was with the idea of throwing out a hint to the boss as to his personal views of the matter that Johnson expressed himself in such emphatic disapproval of Birmingham. However, it is quite certain now that Ban Johnson and not Joe Birmingham will be held responsible for the shortcomings of Cleveland, if the inside bickerings develop into open club warfare in the Forest City.

Johnson Knocks "Live Ones."

For some reason, Mr. Johnson appears to have a penchant for picking onto "live wires" and indorsing "dead ones." His meddlesome disposition has "Dutched" him in half of the American League cities. He is about as popular in St. Louis as scarlet fever in a nursery. For years and years he was openly accused, in the Mound City, of trying to drive Bob Hedges out of the league. Once Hedges actually negotiated a sale. But the prospective buyers failed to make good the first payment, and the Browns reverted to the original ownership. Ban, at the time, took no pains to conceal his disappointment. There are those in New York bold enough to accuse Johnson of entertaining kindred designs upon Frank Farrell's property. Charlie Comiskey, mouthpieec of Johnson—or the other way, if one is pinned down to sheer truth, declared a few months ago that within five years every American League club would be owned by old-time baseball players. Straws, indeed, that indicate a wind from a dangerous quarter for those millionaires of the Yawkey-Somers-Farrell type whose financial influence forced recognition of equality from the National League in Johnson's scheme of expansion.

Other Cities War on Johnson.

New York has as little reason as Boston, St. Louis, Cleveland or Detroit to worship at the shrine of Big Ban. Enough sterling players have been lost to the Highlanders through the alleged advice of the league executive to form two or three world's championship aggregations. By forcing Jake Stahl onto Clark Griffith in 1908, Johnson not only made the "Old Fox" a laughing stock of both big leagues, but further effected his retirement in disgrace at midseason. Jake, as an outfielder, was very much to the bush even though his three-year contract called for $6,000 a season. The explosion of the Born Manager carried down in its ruin a club that in the first few weeks threatened to have the pennant cinched by July 4.

After the darkest days of the Griffith and Elberfeld regime, Ban Johnson allowed his personal animosity to land a second knock-out to New York's hope of salvation. He chased George Stallings, who had built a tailender into a pennant possibility in two short years. Stallings, however, came back like a boomerang as manager of the Boston Nationals this year. He has robbed the American League of its time-honored Boston patronage by showing results with what every one considered the joke of the two big leagues at the opening of the season. It is true that the world's champion Red Sox are somewhat to blame because of their disappointing start. But public prejudice was instilled during the world's series last fall when, on the last day, no provision of accommodation was made for some thousands of loyal Red Sox rooters who had accompanied the team to and from New York and the Hub for each game. Robert McRoy, for many years Johnson's private secretary and who is now alleged to represent some Johnson interests in Boston, was responsible for the "bone." Of course Ban Johnson has to share the blame.

Detroit Fans Against Ban.

Detroit soured on Johnson because of Ban's animosity toward Hughie Jennings. Johnson rebuked Jennings for his friendliness toward McGraw during the world's series between the Giants and Athletics in 1911. Ban was quoted, at the time, as intimating that Jennings would be driven out of the American League because of alleged treason in tipping off McGraw to Philadelphia weaknesses. Frank Navin beat Johnson to it by renewing Hughie's contract.

The sentiment of the American League clubs, however, seems to have undergone somewhat of a change within the past few years. On a number of occasions they have actually silenced Ban when he has prepared to rip organized baseball, as typified by his foeman of the National League, right up the back. Twice he claimed he had C. W. Murphy at the brink of the chute for the "Down and Out Club," but his own supporters silenced his guns because apprehensive that a scandal might affect the whole organization. He was also going to make John T. Brush jump through a knothole for the New York club's alleged manipulation of sales of the world's series tickets in 1911. Mr. Brush made Mr. Johnson indorse a public exoneration from the charges. His long-promised airing of the umpire bribery charges at the Polo Grounds in 1908 fell flat after he had talked himself into a position that made him appear absolutely ridiculous.

Cures Charlie Murphy.

There is no doubt that Mr. Johnson has been a great factor toward putting organized baseball on a sound and unimpeachable footing. For that he deserves due credit. He has also succeeded, at last, in impressing upon Charlie Murphy the objection to loose talk. Ban could do no better than to adopt the same sort of policy that was crammed down Murphy's throat.

TORONTO GETS BRADLEY.

TORONTO, July 12.—The Toronto International League club has just completed a trade whereby Al Shaw, the Maple Leaf outfielder, goes to the Jersey City club for First Baseman Hugh Bradley. Bradley was with the Boston Red Sox in 1912, and was turned over to the Skeeters at the beginning of the present season.

SOUTHERN IS REAL LEAGUE THIS SEASON

More Class by Far Now Than Last Year—It Will Take Great Club to Cop.

SLUMP OF BARON TEAM VERY SUGGESTIVE FACT

Catchers Are Vastly Better Than Usual, Pitchers Fully as Good, Hitting Superior.

By Percy H. Whiting.

"THE Southern League is a faster league this season than last." So says Whitey Alperman, field captain of the Atlanta club and wisest head in the league.

So say I.

So say we all of us.

Granted. It doesn't have to be so dad-blamed good, either, to land that title.

It was an insect league last year.

Also, the team that won it was the worst team that ever won a pennant in the Southern League.

* * *

THE humble position of the Baron team this year tells part of the story. It was good enough to win the rag last season. This year it is lucky to be in the first division. And it's very much the same team, too. It is weaker in spots, but better in others. And look where it is.

It was lucky to "get by" last year at all. This year they have found it out.

* * *

A YEAR ago this time just seven men were batting .300 or over. This year a dozen men are doing it.

The base running doesn't show any advantage this season, though there's no great falling off.

The pitching is surely quite as good this year as last, and possibly a lot better.

Last year at this time Swann, now canned, was leading the league. Sommers was second, Aitchison, a good pitcher, was third, and Merritt, an antique, fourth. Going down the list were found Boyd, Wagner, Demaree, Smith, Hardgrove and Foxen. Now, that was no bad collection of pitchers. Barring Swann, they were highly useful.

This year the pitching crop is quite as promising. Lots of good men are being held down by poor teams—Brenton, for example. Others, like Beck, Williams, Walker, Conzelman and others, are too young to have found themselves, but are corking pitchers in the making.

The league has some nice hurlers this season. Coveleskie is going better than ever. Conzelman is promising. Sommers is having another good season. E. Brown is a marvel—Scout Larry Sutton says he's the best pitcher in the league. Price has found himself. Hardgrove is going strong again. Bagby looks useful. W. Robertson has proved a star. Cavet is pitching up to his limit. Hogg, after a grand start, is slumping; but he looks like a wonder for all that.

Probably the pitching strength of the league is greater now than last year. Undoubtedly the present crop will look 25 per cent better in two or three years than the 1912 harvest.

THE catching caliber of the league this year has it all over that of last year. Street, Schmidt and Mayer are wonders. Adams, of the Pels, is a good man, though he is playing now with an injured hand. It's been a long time since the Southern League has had such catchers as this year.

* * *

THE league has better batters this year than it had last. Robertson, Elberfeld, Long, Smith, Kniseley, Welchonce, Gribbens, Sloan, King and Baerwald are terrific hitters in their 1913 form.

A year ago this time the leaders were Almeida, Harbison, Hemphill, McGilvray, Johnson of Montgomery, Doc Johnston, Welchonce, Wares, Alperman, Sommers, Sentell, Bagby, Moran and James. In a two-sided batting bee the 1913 stars would win by about a million hits.

* * *

THE teams this year are, in the main, playing better baseball. Their fielding seems a shade better, there seems more pepper and the inside stuff is coming through better.

For another thing, the race is better.

A year ago to-day the Barons were out in front, with a lead of .125 over Chattanooga. The first team was separated from the fourth by .138. The first and last teams were .211 apart. And the Crackers hadn't hit the bottom, though they were but one point away.

Now the race is tight, the Crackers are in the running, the team is going pretty strong, and every prospect pleases.

Surely the good year 1913 has it over its immediate predecessor by 50 miles, as well as by 365 1-4 days.

JACK WHITE IS TRAINING HARD FOR DUNDEE BOUT

LOS ANGELES, CAL., July 12.—Jack White is doing light training at Venice, holding himself in readiness for his proposed bout with Johnny Kilbane July 29.

White had less than a week to work previous to his former battle with the New York Italian and put up a great bout. He is confident that with a proper course of training he can decisively defeat the Eastern boy.

HANS WAGNER'S DAYS OVER AS PIRATE REGULAR

PITTSBURG, PA., July 12.—Hans Wagner may play baseball for a day or two at a time on occasions, but his days as a regular are over. Pinch hitting will be about all he will be allowed to do the rest of the season. This was practically admitted to-day by Manager Fred Clarke.

Naughton Lauds Peter Jackson

Australia's Most Perfect Boxer

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., July 12.—A correspondent wants to know who, in the writer's opinion, was the "most perfect boxer" of all the Australian ring men who came to America in the 80's and 90's. And, while I think of it, I might remark "Correspondent" is asking me to fill a pretty large question.

In the communication embodying the query, the gentleman says:

"I am a close reader of all that is printed in regard to ring happenings and I have noticed that quite often, when discussions about comparative cleverness of latter-day boxers and former pugilists are in order, some critic will make reference to "the marvelous Griffo," as if he were the standard by which all that is clever in the glove game is reckoned. I have a friend who says that Griffo was simply a trick boxer and that for useful cleverness he could not compare with George Dawson, Peter Jackson or Jim Hall, who were also Australians. What is your opinion on this? Who do you think was the most perfect boxer of all the Australians who came here in the 80's and 90's?"

* * *

IN regard to Griffo I can only say that I did not have an opportunity of judging the young man's merits when he was at his best. I did not see him in action until he had passed his heyday, and then only once or twice in events for which he had had no training and seemed little concerned as to which way the decision went.

He had degenerated into a Queensberry clown at the time of which I speak and was more fired with the ambition to make the spectators laugh than anything else. He retained sufficient of his handiness with the gloves to make things interesting for his opponents but his blows were of the mushy order and his defense not nearly so complete as it had been in former years.

Whatever he might have been earlier in his career, Griffo was certainly more of a trick performer or juggler when I saw him.

So far as Griffo may figure in a discussion of this kind I would prefer to pass the question on to other critics who had opportunities of making comparisons between Griffo and other Australians when Griffo was at his best.

AUSTRALIA sent us some exceedingly clever ring men and now, with my experiences and recollections mellowed by years, I have no hesitation in saying that Peter Jackson was the "most perfect boxer," of all the Antipodeans I have seen in real action.

George Dawson had ideas of his own and did not hew to the lines of the Mace ideals of boxing. Judged by what he accomplished in the ring he earned the right to be described as clever, but he was far from being as well balanced a piece of fighting machinery as Jackson.

Many of the Australians were extremely clever, having the fine points of the game at their command to a degree which made them appear graceful in action. Among these Jim Hall was prominent and Steve O'Donnell was another; George McKenzie, a lightweight, was a very talented glove wielder and that scamp, George Mulholland, could make almost any man who opposed him look foolish. Fitzsimmons boxed cleverly when he first came across, but when he began to study anatomy and devise knockout punches, he sacrificed art to utility.

PETER JACKSON was the most talented exponent of the Mace school of boxing the writer ever came across. He knew how to lead and counter, and time and measure, and his footwork always rhymed with his first play. He would duck, snap back and sidestep in a bewilderine way and he appeared to be always within range when his adversary tried retaliation.

I remember Jackson's first match at the old California Athletic Club in San Francisco back in 1888. His opponent was George Godfrey, the Boston colored heavyweight who, on account of his endurance, was known as "Old Ironsides." I will never forget the pained look which came over Godfrey's face when he first ran foul of the Jackson straight left. Peter, who seemed to have an arm as long as an oar, picked Godfrey off his feet with a lunging blow and placed him on his honkers in the floor. Godfrey had proved himself a game fellow in many hard fights but as he sat there that night the expression on his countenance was one of mingled surprise and discouragement.

A little later in the evening, George received a heart punch from Jackson's right and with glazing eyes and quivering ribs he feebly held a hand aloft and acknowledged defeat.

JACKSON'S accurate knowledge of timing was shown in his battle with Big Joe McAuliffe, the Mission Giant. For a number of rounds Jackson prodded the giant with straight lefts and kept his own head bobbing to escape McAuliffe's lumbering back fire. Then Jackson feinted McAuliffe into leading with the left. Joe straightened his arm and Jackson threw his head aside and allowed the blow to pass over his shoulder. While doing so he brought his right across and a sharp spat followed by a trickle of blood from big Joe's ear, showed that the giant had been effectively and heavily countered.

After that, poor Joe was cut down slowly and scientifically. He was too big to take liberties—or rather chances—with and Jackson whipped him artistically and came out of the melee without a scratch.

I am wandering away from the point, however, and illustrating how dangerous it is for old-time critics to reminisce.

In answer to my correspondent I will simply repeat that Peter Jackson was the "most perfect boxer" of all the Australians I had opportunity of studying.

THREE LEADERS MAY LOSE JOBS NEXT SEASON

Detroit Rumor Says That Birmingham, Stahl and Stovall Will Be Shipped in 1914.

DETROIT, MICH., July 12.—That managerial heads in the American League will fall is not unlikely. Rumor has fastened on three in the persons of George Stovall, Joe Birmingham and Jake Stahl. The Ferguson incident, when Stovall was suspended, brought the ax very near to Brother George, but back of that were reasons that were not made public at the time and have not been.

The three games taken from Detroit helped Stovall more than a little, for it was the position of the team and the way that it was going that weighed more than anything else with the owner. Robert Hedges saw his Browns win here and that may have been one of the reasons why he has since denied that Stovall was to be shipped.

* * *

BAN JOHNSON has never been friendly to Stovall nor has George held the most cordial feelings of good will toward the president of the league. Stovall did not better his position by openly siding with the striking Tigers a year ago, and it was freely predicted at the time that he had forfeited his chance of managing the Browns. This did not prove to be the case, but he certainly did not endear himself to Big Ban.

* * *

BIRMINGHAM'S trouble is that he has made the Naps too aggressive. In his efforts to put fight in the team he has overdone the thing, but now promises to work with his foot on the soft pedal so that all may still be well.

* * *

STAHL'S case is still another one. He would like to quit, but McAleer won't let him. Factions have grown up on the Red Sox team, the old players under the leadership of Bill Carrigan being a trifle at odds with the youngsters who follow Tris Speaker and Wood. Stahl keeps them living in peace as another manager might not. Therefore, he has to stick whether he wants to or not.

LEDOUX IN GREAT SHAPE FOR BOUT WITH WILLIAMS

LOS ANGELES, July 9.—Charles Ledoux, the French bantamweight, is in great shape for his bout with Kid Williams, the Baltimore scrapper, at the Vernon arena on July 15. Williams is also hard at work in his training quarters at Venice. Odds today favored the Baltimore boy.

FRASER, PIRATE SCOUT, LOOKING FOR PITCHERS

DUBUQUE, IA., July 12.—"Chick" Fraser, formerly with the Chicago Cubs, now scouting for the Pittsburg Nationals, ish ere to look for pitchers. He is particularly anxious to sign Jasper, the local star, whom the White Sox are after.

CARDINALS AFTER MORGAN.

ST. LOUIS, July 12.—From Kansas City comes an announcement that Manager Miller Huggins, of the Cardinals, is about to consummate a trade with Manager Carr, of the Blues, for Cy Morgan, the pitcher who once played with the Browns and Athletics in the American League. Morgan is the leading hurler in the Association.

Griffith Blames Heat For Club's Poor Work

Manager of Senators Claims That Players Are Affected by Climatic Conditions.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 12.—Manager Griffith, manager of the local American League Club, contends that his ball players are handicapped by local climatic conditions. He asserts that the heat during the summer months here is such that it takes all the stamina out of his players, and that this accounts for the fact that the team always plays better ball away from home than it does here.

He believes that the players can not keep themselves in prime condition because they do not get the necessary rest as a result of the heat.

Griffith has a scheme whereby he proposes to secure quarters in the outskirts of Washington, where he will house his players. It will be a sort of a summer hotel, far from the city, where the club will also supervise the players' food.

It is the intention to have the players brought to the ball park in time for the game and then send them back to their quarters immediately after the game. It is figured that by this mode of living the players will get better rest and diet, and consequently retain their condition through the season.

FORT SMITH, ARK., July 12.—The ten-round bout between Ollie Kirk of St. Louis and Tommy Dixon of Kansas City, was to-day postponed from July 18 to July 25, because of an injury Kirk sustained to his hand.

'Hans' Wagner's Leg Has Again Gone Bad

Injured Knee Is Giving Great Shortstop Much Trouble; Continues to Play.

Reports from Philadelphia are that "Hans" Wagner again is having trouble with the leg that kept him out of the game last spring.

The knee which he injured while making the spring training trip is again bothering him. On Thursday he felt pains in the leg and on Friday the leg was worse, but he said nothing about it, realizing that his services were needed.

The pains have continued to grow worse, although the captain of the Pirates has been subjecting the damaged knee to heroic treatment at the hands of the team's trainer. Wagner said his left leg is so stiff he only navigates with great difficulty.

PRINCETON AND FORDHAM TO CLASH ON GRIDIRON

NEW YORK, July 12.—The Fordham University football team will play eight games next fall. The principal new game added to the list is that with Vermont. The Princeton and Holy Cross contests have been resumed after a lapse of three years. The schedule follows:

September 27, St. Peters College at Fordham; October 4, Princeton at Princeton; 11, Rensselaer at Fordham; 18, St. Joseph's College at Fordham; 25, Vermont at Fordham; November 4, Villa Nova at Fordham; 8, Boston College at Fordham; 15, Holy Cross at Worcester.

A Blessing to Victims Of "Sore Foot" Agony

The following is said to be the surest and quickest cure known to science for all foot ailments: "Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of Calocide compound in a basin of warm water. Soak the feet in this fully fifteen minutes, gently rubbing the sore parts." The effect is really wonderful. All soreness goes instantly; the feet feel delightful. Corns and callouses can be peeled right off. It gives immediate relief for sore bunions, sweaty, smelly and aching feet. A twenty-five cent box of Calocide is said to be sufficient to cure the worst feet. It works through the pores and removes the cause of the trouble. Don't waste time on uncertain remedies. Any druggist has Calocide compound in stock or he can get it in a few hours from his wholesale house.

Ritchie a Coal Yard Product

Quit Father to Enter Ring

By Left Hook.

WILLIE RITCHIE, lightweight champion, who defeated Rivers, July 4, at San Francisco, says that Geary Steffen is his proper monaker when in any society but that of the prize ring.

When Steffen decided to shake the dust of his father's coal yard from his shoes and take up fighting as a business he grabbed the Ritchie name to satisfy Papa Steffen, the latter not caring to have any notoriety of the fighting brand added to the family name.

Papa Steffen was very much opposed to the youngster's entering the ring under any circumstances, but he soon found that there was no use kicking. Now that Ritchie has won the lightweight title and made a small fortune in a little more than four years the elder Steffen is said to be almost willing to have "Willie Ritchie" cast into the discard and let the boy sail under his proper name. Pa Steffen has never seen the boy fight, and never will, he says.

Ritchie is a Native Son, having been born in San Francisco February 13, 1891. At the proper age he was chased to school and received a good common school education. Then he went to work in the Steffen coal yard, taking his full share of the hard work, and to this Ritchie says he owes his strength.

Four Years in Ring.

Some four years ago Geary did his first fighting. And it was in the Dreamland Pavilion, San Francisco, where the four-round stars scintillate. A boxer named Willie Richardson was billed to fight in one of the minor preliminaries, but at the last minute Richardson failed to put in an appearance, and the call for a substitute brought forth a tall, likely looking chap.

The announcer and Geary had a short argument, and it was over the name that would carry the pugilist through his fistic career. After much debating Willie Richardson's name was cut to Ritchie, and to this day Geary Steffen has been known as Willie Ritchie.

That night he fought a fellow by the name of Monk Enok, and Monk lasted less than two rounds.

Since the night he fought Monk Enok, Willie has had forty-two battles and has won all of them but four. These he lost through decisions. His first defeat came at the hands of Frankie Burns, when he lost a six-round verdict in Oakland. Charlie Reilly outpointed him in six rounds. Matty Baldwin won the decision in Willie's first twenty-round fight, and Freddie Welsh won in Los Angeles over the same distance just a year ago.

His fight with Welsh in Los Angeles Thanksgiving Day, in which he substituted for Wolgast, who was stricken with appendicitis, brought him into prominence with a bang. True, he lost the decision to the Pride of Pontry Pridd, but it gave Willie his start and announced his coming to the sporting world.

Willie was taken East after the Welsh bout under the management of Emil Thiery and worked as stablemate with Packey. He had eight fights in eight weeks, and won them all, though they were only newspaper decision bouts.

Draws With Wolgast.

On May 11 of this year Willie was given the chance that gave him the confidence and the persistency to call for a bout with Ad Wolgast. He got credit for boxing Ad a draw in the four-round bout.

Ritchie took his second trip East after the Wolgast fight and, though he remained in New York for a couple of weeks, no one appeared anxious to meet him, so he drifted South to New Orleans and there boxed Joe Mandot. In the last round of their bout Willie had the Frenchman helpless.

The bout was a great boost for Willie and he immediately became recognized as one of the uppermost contenders for the lightweight crown.

JOHNNY EVERS IS MAKING GOOD AS MANAGER OF CUBS

CHICAGO, ILL., July 12.—Apparently fans were a little premature in weeping over little Johnny Evers, manager of the Chicago Cubs, who, according to the war correspondents in the spring, was so worried that he couldn't handle a rain check, let alone a ball team.

So different from the calm, businesslike methods of Chance and Tinker. Evers has grown so distraught that he has worried himself into the thought that he has a great ball team. While Tinker and Chance—well, you see?

Ford Quits Spitter; Goes Back to Curve

Yankee Hurler Claims That Moist Delivery Hurts His Wrist and Shoulder.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Russell Ford has practically given up his spitball. It is but occasionally that he uses it now. He has returned to his curve.

At the beginning of the season, and in fact, until just recently, Ford could not work the kinks out of his arm. He noticed it more particularly just after throwing a spitball. He came to the conclusion that this style of delivery was too much of a pull on his wrist and shoulder, and he has virtually decided to give it up altogether.

Before Ford adopted the spitball he had a very fine curve. He practiced continually for more than a year before the "spitter" was added to his repertoire. After mastering the moist fling, Russell seldom employed his curve. He mixed the amphibious toss with a good change of pace, and as long as the "spitter" worked well he had little or no use for the curve. Ford has gone back to the curve.

PECKINPAUGH LOOKS GOOD.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Shortstop Peckinpaugh is a big favorite with the Yankee rooters. He is in the game all the time and has a habit of getting on the bags with pleasing regularity.

GILMORE NOW HEADS THE NEW CHICAGO FEDERALS

CHICAGO, July 12.—Stockholders of the Chicago club of the Federal League have elected a new set of officers. James A. Gilmore is to be the new president and E. C. Racey, secretary and vice president. Bert Keely was retained as manager of the team.

CANADIAN HENLEY IN AUGUST.

TORONTO, July 12.—The Canadian Association of Amateur Oarsmen has selected dates for the Canadian Henley Regatta. The races will be held at St. Catherines on August 1 and 2. Entries have been made from the rowing clubs of Detroit, Milwaukee, Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Buffalo.

WHAT ATLANTA MANUFACTURERS AND JOBBERS ARE DOING

RETAILERS ASK FOR IMPORTANT LEGAL CHANGES

Want Garnishment Law Broadened and Also Seek Fraudulent Check Bill at This Session.

MEETING CALLED JULY 21-23

Georgia Merchants to Convene at Hotel Ansley and Make Strong Effort to Further Cause.

Two thousand retailers from all parts of the State are expected to assemble in Atlanta July 21, 22, 23, in the annual convention of the Retail Merchants' Association of Georgia.

Headquarters will be the Ansley Hotel, and the business sessions probably will be held in the assembly room there.

There are two bills now before the Georgia Legislature which the retailers are deeply interested in furthering. They are bills amending the garnishment law, making it broader of application, and a bill making it a misdemeanor to draw a fraudulent check, unless, within thirty days, the check is met.

This will be the principal matter before the convention, but there also will be discussions of topics of timely interest, and the annual election of officers. Present officers are J. W. S. Hardy of Waycross, Ga., president; D. E. Hogsed, Toccoa, vice president; John Bratton, Atlanta, secretary-treasurer; Louis W. Roberts, Atlanta, special representative.

Year's Campaign Waged.

Mr. Roberts, ex-president of the association, has spent the past year going from town to town in Georgia enlisting the interest of the merchants in the two bills which have been introduced before the Legislature.

The garnishment bill proposes to make all wages subject to garnishment. As the law now stands, men who do work which is entirely or in part manual can not be garnished. Thus the engineer on a locomotive can not be garnished, while the conductor can be. The new bill makes laborers' exemption $1 per day, and 50 per cent of the amount above that figure. In other words, a laborer making $3 per day would have $1 subject to garnishment—50 per cent of the amount above $1.

In the call for the convention, President Hardy says:

Solid Carloads Coming.

"You have every reason to feel proud of your association—it is composed of the leading progressive and aggressive merchants of the State. Several of the larger and a few of the smaller towns have already pledged themselves to send a solid carload of delegates. If all of the towns send even a fair per cent of the numbers they have designated, we will have the largest convention ever held by this organization. There is every reason to believe that our expectations will be surpassed.

"Atlanta is known far and wide for her hospitality, and while our conventions are business meetings, for busy men, no doubt you will be accorded such entertainment as is appropriate."

The meeting was held last year in Warm Springs, with an attendance of something over 1,000 members.

DENMARK SEES GOODS.

There is being held in Copenhagen an exhibition of modern office furniture and mechanical appliances for expediting the matters necessary to run economically an up-to-date active business concern's counting room. About 60 per cent of the exhibitors are displaying American goods.

The impression made on the public by the American exhibits is very favorable, and it may safely be stated that the exhibition of safes, typewriters, adding machines, indexing devices, steel furniture, office chairs, cash registers and stationery is superior to the similar displays made by German, English, Swedish and Danish firms.

Used Atlanta Underwear, But Surprised When Told So

Professional Man Had Acquaintance With Manufacturer—Didn't Know What He Made.

"Where are you going?" asked the Senior Partner as the Junior Partner arose from his desk in the Candler Building and put on his hat.

"Over to the Peter Hill factory."

"Peter Hill underwear?"

"Of course."

"I'll swear! I've been wearing that stuff for four years, and never knew it was made here."

This is a conversation which actually occurred. Further, the man who didn't know Peter Hill underwear is made in Atlanta had been a speaking acquaintance of P. N. Hill for several years. He never connected the well-known goods with the maker.

This is another text the promoters of the permanent exhibit of Atlanta-made goods might use. For Peter Hill underwear, in the making, gives employment to 100 girls and a score or so of salesmen and office employees.

Six Years Old.

The firm is six years old. In that time it has grown to occupy an entire floor of the big Commerce Hall building. From one garment it has expanded until it manufactures almost 100 different styles of garments, in a wide variety of materials. The original garment was athletic underwear for men. Neckties, bath robes, pajamas, union suits in many kinds of cotton goods, silk and flannel now keep it busy.

"Prejudice? Yes, we have met with it, time and again," says Mr. Hill. "Our goods sell on Broadway, but there are Georgia merchants who won't listen when our salesman calls. They are fewer and fewer every year, however. We are getting the cream of the trade right now, but it was a hard battle."

Making it stand on quality and fit, but never neglecting price, the business has grown steadily, and now the trade-mark has wide fame, particularly in the Southern States.

The uninitiated never can realize how many different kinds of things a man can choose to wear beneath his outer clothing until a visit is paid to the Peter Hill factory. Blue, green, lavender, pink and tan and just plain white are among the colors; checks and stripes the patterns; silk, cotton and flannel the materials.

Winter Athletic Underwear.

The newest wrinkle is a line of very light flannel underwear of athletic cut, designed for the chap who wants loose-fitting, short sleeve and short leg underwear in the winter as well as in summer, but who hesitates to go through December with the filmy garments of June.

No other factory has adopted this idea, but the success of fall sales already made by the Atlanta concern indicate that competitors soon will fall in line.

Making underwear is just plain sewing, and no more interesting than any operation with the familiar high-speed, electrically driven sewing machines, which seem the limit of mechanical ingenuity.

The trick is all in the designing—how to give comfort and fit, plus style.

Always New Ideas.

There's always something new, as, for instance, a Peter Hill idea of sizing union suits according to the length of a man's body, as well as according to its circumference.

Neckwear demands more hand work. First, the silks have to be cut by hand with sharp knives instead of with machines. The sewing is done by machine, but the neckties have to be turned right side out, lined, pressed, and boxed by hand. This is what costs in a necktie, for although silk is expensive enough it does not take any great quantity to make an ordinary bow or four-in-hand tie.

Silk Is in High Favor; Charmeuse Leading

Goods So Pretty Women Do Not Know When to Stop Buying Says Importer.

Silks will be more fashionable than ever this fall, according to a prominent importer recently returned from an extended trip abroad.

"There were more silks worn in Paris this season than ever before," he said. "The demand will not only be for more silks, but for more kinds of silk. Much charmeuse is used.

"The silks used by the fine trade are so beautiful that women do not know when to stop buying. As a result practically the entire summer wardrobe is made of silk. It will be the same thing this winter.

"Our Paris house has been selling not only to American buyers, but to buyers from Russia, Italy, and almost every other country in the world. Never has Lyons been sold up so far ahead.

"Shall we sell American silks abroad! It is possible. I believe that our mills are so organized that we will be able to turn out the goods more quickly than the foreigners. This should enable us to meet their lower cost of production."

SELLING NOTES.

Manufacturers of women's neckwear are looking forward to active business for fall. The demand for laces continues to show improvement.

Satin-faced silks continue to lead the demand. American buyers at Lyons are placing sizable orders for charmeuse. Heavy satins, similar to duchesse, are also in demand.

Pick Sub-Committee To Get Exhibit Site

Manufacturers Who Demand Exact Details Before Lining Up Are To Be Satisfied.

No one behind the permanent exhibit project is sleeping. There was a meeting of the full committee of the Chamber of Commerce Wednesday noon in the Empire Building.

At its close a sub-committee, composed of Brooks Morgan, J. K. Orr, Bolling H. Jones and V. H. Krieghaber was named to take up all of the five or six proposals made by owners of available buildings, and report as soon as practicable.

The movement in favor of a permanent exhbiit has simmered down to a question of expense, it seems. Twenty-three of the manufacturers publicly announced their intention of taking space in the exhibit hall, without demanding any further explanation as to details. Others privately assured the committee of their co-operation.

But the majority of the manufacturers want to know just how much rentals will be, where the building is to stand—in fact, all about it.

Realizing that the only way to get these people in line is to answer their questions, the committee appointed Wednesday will go as far as possible toward selecting the best site, and ascertaining the cost.

SALES TERMS ADOPTED BY LUMBERMEN

National Dealers' Association Makes Rules to Keep All Transactions Uniform.

Following considerable agitation in the last year regarding terms of sale, the National Wholesale Lumber Dealers' Association has sent to its members a set of rules covering this point that it hopes to make uniform all over the country. This was done by the association in recognition of the difficulties of doing business under the variation of sales terms that exists at the present time.

Particular insistence is made on impressing on buyers the necessity of remembering that the terms of sale under which an order is accepted are as much a part of the contract as the prices at which the lumber is sold.

CANNOT STRETCH TIME.

The purchaser has no more right, according to the association committee on terms of sale and trade ethics, to stretch the time allowed for payment or to violate other terms of sale than the seller has to raise prices after they have once been fixed.

These are the sales terms adopted by the association:

The terms hereon are those agreed on by both buyer and seller and are a part of the sale agreement.

Settlement to be made promptly on receipt of each car. Freight, net cash, balance by note at 60 days from date of invoice or less 1 1-2 per cent discount for cash if paid within fifteen days from date of invoice; or 1 per cent for cash if paid within 30 days from date of invoice.

No discount allowed after 30 days.

WHEN CAR IS DELAYED.

If car is not received within the above discount times, and discount is desired, prepayment on account will not be held as acceptance of the shipment and the right to make corrections and complaint will not be forfeited thereby. In making delivered prices, cost of goods delivered at destination is guaranteed, but not against delay in transit.

Claims for count or quality must be reported as soon as car is unloaded and tally proved. No claims allowed if not prepaid within ten days after unloading.

General Conditions—All contracts and agreements are made contingent upon strikes, fires, floods, inability to secure cars, delays of carriers and other delays unavoidable and beyond our control.

In making delivered prices we simply guarantee the cost of goods at your place, but are in no way responsible for their safe delivery.

Under these rules all orders signed by buyers are subject to the approval of the home offices.

Clearer Skies Before Autumn

By SPENCER TRASK & CO.

We believe that by autumn a number of the problems now vexing our financial and business men will have been settled; the revised tariff bill should have been passed by September or October. By then the Interstate Commerce Commission may have allowed the 5 per cent increase in freight rates demanded by the Eastern railroads, and there is also the possibility of some bill having been passed amending our wretched currency laws.

By then, too, the investing public will have the chance to get its proper bearings.

In short, by the fall we should know much better what our true economic situation promises to be for the next few years.

Customs Decision Interests Firm Here

New York Judge of Appraisers' Court Rules on Baskets of Mixed Material.

Judge McClelland, of the Board of United States General Appraisers, handed down a decision in New York last week which is of particular interest to a thriving Atlanta concern.

A basket-importing firm in the East brought goods from abroad which were made of braided rush in natural color and stained willow. The customs appraisers assessed duty of 40 per cent, as stained willow, while the importers claimed they should pay only 35 per cent, as natural rush. The importer lost before Judge McClelland.

The Bombayreed Importing and Manufacturing Company of Atlanta imports considerable of the same class of goods, and watched the decision with interest. In the past, it is said, it has been the custom to decide whether the duty shall be 35 or 40 per cent, according to whether the natural rush or the stained yellow predominates in the design.

E. K. Ward, of the Bombayreed company, is in Grand Rapids, Mich., where his firm is making an exhibit at the furniture show. A similar exhibit is being made at the furniture show in High Point, N. C.

Publication in Hearst's American of a statement by Mr. Ward that American farmers could make good profits by cultivating the native willow on their waste lands brought a flood of letters from farmers submitting samples of willows and requests for valuations on them. Mr. Ward sticks to his statement that there is money in it for the farmer, and with very little work, but he says the willow must be cultivated, as otherwise the shoots are too short and are crooked and knotty. A Government bulletin tells just how this should be done.

U. S. STEEL STATEMENT.

NEW YORK, July 10.—The United States Steel Corporation reports unfilled orders on its books as of June 30 of 5,807,317 tons. This compares with 6,324,322 tons on May 31, 6,978,762 tons on April 30, 7,468,956 on March 31 and 5,807,346 on June 30, 1912.

THOUSANDS GET INVITATIONS TO BIG CONVENTION

Snappy Talks on Pertinent Topics Expected—Attendance May Go Above 2,000 Mark.

Invitations are being sent out as rapidly as possible to almost every merchant in six States who does a business of any consequence—thousands in all—summoning the dealers to the Southern Merchants' Convention to be held in Atlanta during the first two weeks of August.

Letters to various Atlanta firms which are taking an interest in the forthcoming event demonstrate the enthusiasm which is being aroused.

"I have received letters from dealers scattered all the way from Virginia to Texas," says Bolling H. Jones, one of the most active workers for the success of the convention. "I feel sure the attendance this year will go far above the 2,000 mark set last season."

Indications are that the first day's session will be one of the most interesting. During this session, the diversification of crops will be discussed. There is plenty of meat in the topics assigned for other sessions, however, and none of them is likely to be dull.

Arrangements were made with the Forsyth Theater last week whereby the whole house is reserved for the delegates to the convention on the nights of August 5 and August 11. Arrangements have been made for a reception at the Piedmont Driving Club, and for several thousand seats for the ball game at Ponce DeLeon Park between Atlanta and Chattanooga August 15.

W. H. White, of the White Provision Company, will speak to the convention on the opportunity offered Georgia farmers in stock growing. This promises to be one of the best addresses of the convention.

"It will be a real convention," says H. T. Moore, secretary. "For instance, we are told that merchants in the smaller towns have been among the defenders of the one-crop system. When crop diversification comes up for discussion they are likely to air their views in no uncertain language. They are close to the farmer, and what they have to say carries weight.

"The idea is to avoid loading the program with heavy addresses. We want debates—informal talks of five-minute length—short speeches with a punch in them. It looks as if we will get them."

European Business Comes to Atlanta Firm Unsolicited

Orders From Berlin and Paris Arrive Without Explanation of How Fame Crossed Ocean.

Fame is a peculiar affair.

There have been firms which have striven hard and long for recognition abroad, and with indifferent success. Again, some article of American manufacture becomes known favorably in Europe, without the slightest effort on the manufacturer's part, and unsolicited orders follow.

As for instance—

In Marietta Street is a concern but two years old, the A. E. Hill Manufacturing Company. The Hill company makes a machine which sharpens safety razor blades for all makes of safety razors. The other day Mr. Hill was surprised by a cabled order for a large shipment of his devices, to be consigned to a firm in Berlin.

And this week he is packing a shipment for the Societe Generale de Couterilerie & Orfevrerie, 31 Rue Pastourelle, Paris.

All this without any advertising abroad, or any effort to interest foreign buyers.

"How they came to learn of my device in Europe is more than I know," says Mr. Hill. "Of course, I knew in a general way that the safety razor was catching on in Europe; it is the kind of thing which would take well there. But who first heard of my sharpening machine in Germany or France is more than I can say. Needless to remark, though, all orders are thankfully received. The French order is a trial. Already I have had a repeat order from Berlin, which shows the device is giving satisfaction there."

The Hill machine is manufactured in Atlanta. It was invented four years ago, and has been on the market for two years. A new model was put out during the past week, the only change being a better arrangement of the circular hone which supplements the work of the ingenious strops which literally put a "hair-splitting" edge on safety razor blades. The machines are automatic, requiring almost no attention after the blades are put in place.

L. & N. SHOWS BIG INCREASE.

LOUISVILLE, KY., July 12.—Gross earnings of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad for the fiscal year ended June 30 increased more than three and a quarter million dollars, Charles Haydon, the company's controller, reports.

Gross receipts from operation from July 1, 1912, to June 30, 1913, were $59,467,771, as compared with $53,211,788 for the preceding period.

BOND SALESMEN JUST NOW BUSY PUSHING WARES

Business of Selling Securities at Retail Has Much of Human Interest in It.

This is the most interesting period of the year in the bond market. Almost every train leaving New York, Chicago and Boston has carried representatives of the principal bond houses into the country districts, where buyers of one, two or three bonds, in receipt of their semi-annual dividends, have been in position to reinvest a portion of their savings. Whether the salesmen can induce them to exchange their savings bank balances for $500 or $1,000 bonds remains to be seen. Every kind of persuasive argument will be used, for with many bond men it means a life and death struggle to secure enough orders in July to make up for the lean business of the last six months.

The art of selling bonds at retail has been reduced to a science. It is full of human interest. The most successful house in the business years ago hit upon the plan of sending young men on long visits to New England towns to get acquainted with the people. One salesman who gained his experience in this way is now the head of a great bond house.

He long ago gave up selling bonds on the road, but almost every week the mail brings him a letter, with the address written in a cramped, old-fashioned little hand, upon an envelope bearing the postmark of a New England town. The writer was one of those who attended the strawberry festivals in the little white church.

She has bought bonds of him for years, and the habit has now become so well fixed that the trust companies and banks which send their men to her with attractive investment propositions do not get a hearing. That banker has made a small fortune in commissions on sales of bonds to people in those little towns.

Thrifty, well-to-do, and with good connections, those people turn over to him each year a volume of orders which would make even the $10,000,000 banks sit up and take notice. It is investment business of the best sort, most of the bonds taken are seldom resold, being held till maturity, unless death occurs to force a distribution of the owner's estate.

SUMMER WAILS FROM COTTON GROWERS DUE

wails" will perhaps soon be stylish in advices concerning the cotton crop. If they fail to develop there will be a large yield, exceeding that of the season just closing by a million or more bales. Moreover, there will be no little surprise for the trade if during the next few weeks there are not advices from various sections of the belt telling of the crop losing some of its promise.

At the present time there is no serious trouble menacing yield anywhere in the belt, though there is no telling how soon some will develop and change the almost unanimously favorable tenor of advices into a mixture of good and bad. Cultivation is nearly finished, and the laying-by time finds the belt perhaps cleaner from weeds and grass than ever before. Conditions have been well nigh ideal for such and the recent rains have added to the basis of excellent promise. There is still the matter of late start in some sections, but the plant is generally healthy and, given proper conditions, this can be overcome.

The fruiting season finds the crop clean, well worked and with a good taproot. There will be no trouble keeping the plant in good shape by topsoil cultivation during the trying weeks of July, in case there is not enough moisture. In some sections of this part of the belt one fear now is that there will be more rain than needed, thus making the plant too rank.

So far temperatures have been normal and no injury has been done thereby. The past few days have brought some talk of them being a little too high in Texas and Oklahoma, but serious attention has not been paid that complaint here, as it will take a number of days of high temperatures to mar the excellent prospect for yield. There have also come some reports to the effect that the boll weevil was more numerous than ever before and over a wider area in Texas, but that is another menace which may not prove serious. If the crop suffers from high temperatures there will be a check to the weevil, for hot weather is one thing that will stop their work.

The recent Government report on condition showed fairly large improvement during the month of June, and it is current belief that since June 25 there has been further betterment. The time is at hand, however, for the usual deterioration to start, and on that account there is very close scrutiny of all reports from the fields. The speculative market continues to reflect a belief that the world will, during the next twelvemonth, require a large supply of the raw material—some people say not less than 15,000,000 bales—around current prices, so anything that holds promise of cutting into the prospect of such will find ready response. The smallness of the stock in New York for protecting short commitments of July and August contracts and the slim chance of it being increased also have a tendency to discourage short selling. The steadiness of spots in the belt reflects willingness to pay ruling prices, although business continues of small volume.

The threatened destruction of future trading by the Clarke amendment to the revenue tariff bill has helped to restrict activity in speculation during the week and has created much concern among the spot dealers who fear they will be left without hedging facilities this side of Liverpool.

Texas Bankers Are To Aid the Farmers

Arrangements Made to Advance Money on the Cotton Crops Without Mortgage.

FORT WORTH, TEX., July 12.—Peter Radford, president of Texas Farmers' Union, in a public statement says:

"In Texas cotton is the money crop, and the problem of marketing it intelligently has absorbed the attention of the leaders of economic thought for a half century. The crop is oftentimes mortgaged, and debt is such a hard taskmaster that the farmer, in order to escape it, rushes to the market with his products and down goes the price.

"To relieve the pressure the bankers are advancing the farmers $35 a bale at 6 per cent, payable when the cotton is sold. The title to the cotton rests with the farmer and he can sell when he pleases, and there is no longer occasion for disposing of his crop in a weak or glutted market.

"In my estimation the slow marketing of cotton will increase the farm price at least from 2½ to 5 per cent net over the price obtained under present methods, making a minimum net saving to the farmer of $50,000,000. It is now up to the farmer to take advantage of the facilities offered."

Big Crop, High Prices For Georgia Melons

Buyers Pay as High as $900 Per Car for Cantaloupes and $175 for Watermelons.

CAMILLA, GA., July 12.—The cantaloupe and watermelon season is at its flush in this section. The hot dry weather for the past two weeks has caused the crops to ripen unusually fast. The prices for both crops have been very satisfactory. The first car of contaloupes sold for $900, track. Two other cars shipped the same day brought upwards of $2 per crate. Prices later ranged between $600 and $750 per car.

Watermelons sold at a fancy price, the first carloads at $160 to $170 per car.

Tomato shipments are moving freely and truckers who were lucky enough to put in a fine acreage are receiving from $2 to $2.50 per crate. Several commission houses have complimented the growers on the extra fine grade of tomatoes in this section. This is a departure for Camilla truckers and a large acreage will be planted next year.

Bulls Held in Check by Fear of Tax on Futures

Weevil and Hot Weather in Texas Only Bad Crop News To Be Heard.

NEW ORLEANS, July 12.—With the sword of Damocles hanging over the cotton market, it is hard to arouse speculation in the staple, even though a somewhat bullish environment has developed recently. Since the Government reports were issued July 3 Liverpool has shown distinctly a bullish attitude, neither the condition figures nor the acreage being considered of a bearish character by European cotton trade.

Taking advantage of the pessimistic feeling created by the proposition to tax futures out of existence, bearish interests, here and in New York, sold the market rather aggressively in the early part of the week, depressing contract prices to the level of 11.40 for October delivery. The strength manifested by Liverpool, where a good spot demand has been in evidence, sales totalling 10,000 bales almost every day, checked the declining tendency, and started shorts to covering.

Anticipation of possible damage to the crop from the high temperatures now prevailing in Texas, together with numerous reports of the boll weevil ravaging the crop in the western and central belt, induced some fresh buying. With bulls bidding for cotton and shorts inclined to cover, the market has had a substantial reaction upward from the low level established earlier in the week. There has been no general activity, however in the market, which has been more or less under the control of the professional element.

The July position, strange to say, has shown relative weakness. Exporters have had practically no orders, and even if they had them would find it a difficult matter to secure the grades sought after by the trade on the other side.

Except for reports as to damage by boll weevil in Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi, crop accounts continue of a satisfactory character. In fact, the reports as to the progress now being made by the crop could hardly be more encouraging.

It is believed by some that crop prospects are now in the zenith, and for this reason there is an inclination to buy the market on declines, the argument being made that the critical crop period is now at hand, and that any change in the condition is certain to be for the worse. The alarmist element in the market is trying to make capital out of the high temperatures reported in Texas within the last few days. These temperatures have not been abnormally high for Texas yet, however, and conservative people in the market think that hot dry weather is just what is needed to hold the boll weevil in check in that section of the belt.

Futures Sales Made Of Southern Iron

Considerable Pig Engaged at Low Prices for Delivery During Third Quarter of Year.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., July 12.—Considerable pig iron has been sold in Southern territory for delivery during the third quarter of the year, some of the larger consumers in the East and elsewhere taking advantage of the low prices.

Manufacturers in this section of the country have concluded they have sold enough iron at the low levels and have advanced prices from 50 cents to $1 per ton. The production has been cut down at least 10 to 15 per cent, six furnaces in Tennessee and Alabama being blown out. Repair work is being done on one or two of these furnaces. While $11 per ton, No. 2 foundry, is given as the average price for the product, there still are reports that concessions are being made.

Inquiries are in hand that promise to result in business, export deals under negotiation amounting to 12,500 tons, while domestic business under consideration amounts to not less than 25,000 tons. The intentions are to reduce the accumulated stacks of iron.

The home consumption is looking up. Castiron pipe plants in Anniston, North Birmingham, Greater Birmingham, Bessemer, Holt, Gadsden and other places are beginning to melt a little more iron. The big plant of the American Radiator Company at North Birmingham has been started up. It is proposed to melt 200 tons of iron daily at this place. The company spent something like $500,000 on the big plant at North Birmingham.

The new pipe plant at Gadsden started up this week and when in full operation there will be a healthly melt. This plant replaces the one destroyed by fire.

There is considerable activity in the steel market and all predictions now are there will be steady operation of plants through the balance of the year. Southern railroads are beginning once more to announce estimates of needs. Rail is in demand, as are bolts and spikes.

There is a strong demand for coke in this section of the country and all manufacturers are finding it necessary to keep coke ovens, both the beehive and the by-product types, in full operation. Better prices prevail for coke now than for some time.

U. S. LEADS IN THE VALUE OF EXPORTS TO GERMANY

The United States heads the list of countries as to the value of the exports to Germany in 1912. Russia ranks second, Great Britain third, and Austria-Hungary fourth. The United Kingdom still is the best customer for German products, Austria-Hungary coming next, the United States third, France fourth, and Russia fifth.

If the value of the total trade between the countries during 1912 is considered, the United States is first with $543,800,000; Russia second, with $525,400,000; the United Kingdom third, with $477,000,000; Austria-Hungary fourth, with $443,900,000; and France fifth, with $295,500,000.

The decrease in the value of the receipts from Russia was due principally to smaller grain shipments from that country; and the greater imports from the United States, to increased shipments of wheat, copper and raw cotton.

Increase of 10 1-2 Per Cent Is Expected in Rail Earnings

While most of the railroads ended their fiscal year June 30, it will be a month or more before the actual gross and net for the twelve months are available; nevertheless, with the figures now at hand for the eleven months, it is possible to estimate the results for 1913.

According to those figures, it now looks as if the railroads will earn something like $3,175,000 000 gross, or $300,000,000 more than was earned for 1912. That would be an increase of 10 1-2 per cent. Net after taxes will amount to $845,000,000 in round figures, or a gain of $73,000,000, or 9 per cent over the preceding twelve months.

Economist Explains Shortage of Money

World Produces $2,400,000,000 of Capital Yearly—Sometimes Burns Up or Demands More.

Lately it has been said frequently that "demand for capital is in excess of supply." Just what this means was explained by M. Leroy-Beaulieu, the eminent French economist, who wrote:

"The growing industrial States, particularly the new countries, are at this moment demanding more capital than the whole world has accumulated recently or is accumulating to-day. From this fact follow two consequences: First, that the users of this capital have to pay more for it in the shape of a higher interest rate; second, that they will be compelled to postpone, or extend for several years, many of the enterprises on which they had decided and for which they had already made preparations.

"The civilized world, so far as it can be reckoned up, provides $2,400,000,000 in available capital annually for investment in securities; it is asked in 1906 to provide $3,250,000,000. There was a demand, in America at any rate, for even more than its part of the above estimate to be provided during 1907. But the world has not got it; therefore it can not provide it.

"Add to this the effect of catastrophes, such as the San Francisco and Valparaiso earthquakes, which cost something like $200,000,000, and you will have a perfectly clear explanation of the existing crisis, the rise in the interest rate and the fall of investment securities. The truth is, nations, quite as well as individuals, have reached the point where they must limit their undertakings to the possibilities of the case; that will be done, if not willingly, then by force of events."

In 1906 the borrowing nations and individuals did not thus limit voluntarily their undertakings, and their bankers did not compel them to do so. In 1907, the "force of events" operated. This season, the restrictive process has been applied early and decidedly.

TRADE AWAITS DEFINITE NEWS FROM FARMERS

Realization of Crop Promises and Increase in Freight Rates Will Stimulate Trade.

NEW YORK, July 12.—It is the belief of the Fourth National Bank, formed after hearing from correspondents in all parts of the country, that the two things needed to stimulate general business this year are a realization of the best crop promises and the granting of the 5 per cent freight increases asked by the Eastern railroads.

"The outlook for the crops is still reassuring," the bank says in its bulletin, "but in some quarters the promise is for a somewhat reduced yield of wheat and corn. It is still too early to attempt definite estimates, but on the basis of both public and private advices the chances are that the people of the United States will this season as usual derive a vast amount of new wealth from the soil.

Farmers Hopeful.

"The farming communities are hopeful. This optimism is cautious, however, since it is obvious that in some lines of trade there has been a decided slackening, with a disposition to proceed slowly with respect to new business until a new tariff law has been enacted.

"Business men everywhere continue to conduct their affairs on a hand-to-mouth basis, and it is probable that there will be little broad buying by the small merchants until the crop prospects are absolutely sure. This is natural enough in view of the fact that the 'crop scare period' is near at hand, when the markets ordinarily pass through an interval of uncertainty respecting the possible effects of high temperatures and drouth in the wheat and corn area.

"The decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission to hear the petition of the Eastern railroads with reference to increasing freight rates 5 per cent shows that the commission is alive to the needs of a situation which is becoming each day more embarrassing to the railroads.

Railroads to Win.

"There seems to be a consensus of opinion that the railroads will win their case and that the advance in freight rates asked for will be granted next autumn.

"There are indications that the public is favorable to the increase, although it will be necessary for the railroads to prove their claims and to show beyond doubt that the increased revenue is needed in order to pay them for rendering the service called for by the people of the territory served.

"The people of the United States apparently view this step very differently from what they did three years ago when the increase asked for was turned down by the commission and strongly objected to by the shippers' organizations everywhere.

"This disposition on the part of the public to view the matter without prejudice and to act justly is of great importance, coming as it does at the moment when the United States Supreme Court has handed down a series of remarkable decisions in the so-called Minnesota and other rate cases where the right of State Railroad Commissions to fix rates within the limits of their own States was upheld except in cases where a railroad is able to show that the imposition of a specific rate would be confiscatory or insufficient to pay for the service rendered.

Interests Are Common.

"The fact is that the public is coming to see that the welfare of whole communities is tied up with the welfare of the railroads, and that there can be no thoroughgoing prosperity for the country as a whole if the common carriers are not prosperous, or are denied a proper return on the capital invested.

"This question has come to be of the greatest importance because of the steady advance in wages, the increased cost of financing, and the larger relative outlay for every variety of railroad equipment."

PRESIDENT IS LINKED WITH GOMPERS IN LABOR LOBBY

Mulhall Writes to the National Association of Manufacturers of Agreement to Send Hughes to the Senate to Combat Capital.

Lobbyist Boasts in Correspondence of Success in Having Men Elected to Congress Favorable to His Organization's Interests.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Samuel Gompers, John Mitchell and J. P. Bird, general manager of the National Association of Manufacturers, will be called before the Senate lobby committee Monday to explain their activities in the interests of labor and capital.

Mr. Gompers' testimony will be heard with great interest in view of new and amazing revelations made by Colonel Mulhall, for ten years publicity and field agent for the manufacturers. These revelations The American herewith presents for whatever they may be worth.

Here is Mulhall's letter to Bird:

Atlantic City, N. J.

Mr. Philip Bird, General Manager National Association of Manufacturers, No. 30 Church Street, New York.

Dear Sir: I received your letter some time ago, but did not answer on account of being pressed with work for the past eight or ten days. I know you will be pleased to learn that Mr. John J. Gardner has won a complete victory over two very strong opponents in the Cecond Congressional District of this city, and has won the nomination again with a majority of about 2,000 votes, which the official count will give him.

Since you wrote me I have also visited Mr. George W. Fairchild's district, and at his request will continue to do some work for him until the close of the campaign. This is the third victory that I have participated in since last April.

Mr. James McDermott was renominated in the Fourth Illinois District and, he claims, largely by my help.

Wilson's Pledge Recalled.

The principal reason for my writing this letter to you is to call your attention to the fact that I feel that every manufacturer in this country should unite and help to defeat William Hughes, late of the Sixth New Jersey District. I know it is not necessary for me to say a word to you concerning Hughes' record, for I feel that every manufacturer throughout the country who is interested in honest legislation and against class legislation knows what his record is.

I have got positive information that when Mr. Samuel Gompers and Mr. Frank Morrison and other members of the executive board of the American Federation of Labor called on Governor Wilson at his home in Seagirt around the first day of last July that they exacted a promise from Governor Wilson to support Hughes for the United States Senatorship in this State, and that Governor Wilson has carried out his agreement to the letter, and that is why Hughes is the nominee of the Democratic party at the present time.

I feel positive and sure that if the manufacturers that belong to your organization and other organizations in favor of a square deal will do their duty in this coming election, Gardner will be returned to Congress by a greater majority than he ever got before, and that Hughes will be overwhelmingly defeated.

I feel that it is the duty of all the leaders of your organization to see that this treacherous demagogue is not promoted, for if he is sent to the Senate for the next six years he will simply be as he has been for the past eight years—a paid attorney of the American Federation of Labor, and will continue to be their tool in passing class legislation against the indus-

Anna Held to Wear Diamond Stockings

Makes Announcement That She Will Appear in Gowns Without Corsets and Bejeweled Hosiery.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—Anna Held made an announcement to-day which is expected to startle the stage door "johnnies" more than anything which has occurred this season.

"I shall wear gowns without corsets and stockings with diamonds—lots of them, diamonds I mean—when I appear in the Revue, 'Come Over Here' next Monday," said Miss Held to-day.

Miss Held has been living quietly in Paris for several months and will celebrate her coming out of retirement with the most gorgeous display of gowns she has yet made. The stockings which she will wear are made of heavy silk network and in each square is set a tiny diamond giving an appearance of the hosiery being made entirely of diamonds.

Prince Raises $50 on Queen Mary's Letters

King George's Son Sells Mother's Missives to Schoolmate When She Refuses Him Money.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—Prince Henry, the third son of King George, who is at preparatory school at Broadstairs, is allowed $2.50 per week pocket money. Recently he asked his parents to double the allowance, which was peremptorily refused by his mother.

A few days ago it came to Queen Mary's knowledge that the young prince had raised $50 by selling letters from her and other members of the royal family to a schoolmate named Behrens who is related to Lord Rothschild. The Queen immediately wrote to Headmaster Saunders to obtain all the letters from Behrens, send them to her and refund the $50, which was done to-day.

Taft's Tub Too Large, Wilson Asks a Shower

Bath for New President Will Be Built in Cellar of White House.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—There is to be a shower bath in the cellar of the White House. It has been requested by no less a person than the President, and it is evidently intended to keep him cool while he is spending his summers in Washington.

When President Taft first arrived at the White House he demanded, not a shower bath, but a tub big enough for his huge proportions. He got it. There is wonder here if that tub is still in the White House, for, if it is, it must be too large by far for the new President.

Red Spots in Aura Sure Sign of Love

Lecturer Tells Swains to Watch for Their Appearance and Then Propose Immediately.

CHICAGO, July 12.—Watch for the five reddish pink spots in the human aura, then propose. It is a ten to one wager that the girl will say yes, for just at that particular time the girl will be experiencing a rush of affection.

This advice to the lovelorn was gleaned from a lecture by Dr. Edwin B. Beckwith at Besant Hall.

Of course, the lovelorn would have to carry a sensitive screen of dicyanin, possibly a vest-pocket edition, through which he could gaze at the "only girl."

'Miss Freedom' Given Her Biennial Bath

New Jewelry Will Adorn Graceful Figure on Dome of United States Capitol.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Freedom, the gorgeous lady whose graceful form surmounts the dome of the Capitol, made her biennial toilet to-day. A score of husky workmen clambered to the top of the dome and gave Freedom a bath, using a heavy lather of castile soap and scrubbing brushes to remove the dust and grime that has accumulated on the face and figure of the lady of the Capitol since her last ablutions were performed in the summer of 1910.

The lady's jewelry will be replaced, as the seven platinum tips which surmount her headdress have been badly damaged by lightning bolts. Seven hundred dollars in the precious metal will adorn her brows and protect her from the elements.

KING TO WREAK VENGEANCE ON CRUEL BULGARS

Greek Monarch Calls World to Witness That Balkan Horrors Justify Drastic Punishment.

DESCRIBES ATROCITIES

Women and Children Slain by Routed Army Which Burns Towns as It Flees.

Special Cable to The American.

ATHENS, July 12.—"The Bulgarians have surpassed all the horrors of barbaric times and have proved that they no longer have a right to be reckoned among civilized people."

Telegraphing thus to the Greek Minister of Foreign Affairs from the field, where he is in command of the Greek forces, King Constantine utters a vigorous protest to the world against the acts of the Bulgarians in the latest Balkan war and states that he is compelled to wreak vengeance. In his message the King says:

"The commander of the sixth division reports that Bulgarian soldiers, carrying out the orders of their captain, gathered together in the court yard of the school at Demirhissar two priests and more than 100 notables, whom they massacred. The bodies have been disinterred in order to prove the crime. Bulgarian soldiers violated girls, one of whom, resisting, was cut to pieces.

"Protest in my name to the representatives of the civilized powers against the acts of these monsters in human form. Protest also to the entire world and say that, to my regret, I see myself compelled to wreak vengeance in order to inspire these monsters with terror and make them reflect before committing more outrages of this sort."

The commander of the seventh division reports that the town of Seres was burned yesterday, with the exception of the Jewish and Mussulman quarters. Many men, women and children were found murdered or burned beyond recognition in their homes. Twenty thousand persons are without shelter.

It was semi-officially announced today that the Greek Government has replied to the Russian proposal for the cessation of hostilities in order that peace be concluded on the battlefield. The proposal has the support of Great Britain and France.

Scores Shot in Streets of Sofia.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—The report that Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria had been assassinated early in the day during an uprising at Sofia was denied in an official dispatch received here tonight. Score of persons were shot down in the streets of Sofia during the disturbance when a mob gathered in front of the Royal Palace and called on the Czar to abdicate.

The people in Sofia are enraged over the overwhelming defeats the Bulgarian army has suffered in Macedonia and at the manner in which the Bulgarian Government has accepted the declaration of war by Roumania.

A semiofficial dispatch from Constantinople states the Turkish army at Tchatalja has begun a march toward Thrace in an effort to drive the Bulgarians out of that district. The Porte to-day sent a note to the Government at Sofia demanding the immediate evacuation of Enos and Midia by the Bulgars.

Table Salt Checks Million Dollar Fire

Five Cities Send Fire Departments, but Train Load of Salt Solves Problem.

MICHIGAN CITY, IND., July 12.—Fire to-night partially destroyed the Harkell & Barker Car Company's mill yard here, resulting in a $1,000,000 loss.

Flames were fanned by a stiff west wind and although aid was sent from Hammond, Gary, Laporte and South Bend, it was impossible to control the fire with the use of water. After dynamite had failed to check the flames, a train load of table salt was rushed to the scene and 500 men poured the salt on top of the lumber in the flames' path, and this checked the blaze.

The yards contained millions of feet of Southern pine. A spark from a locomotive was responsible for the blaze.

Senators Will Vie In Swimming Match

Pomerene, Champion of Kill Buck Creek, Ohio, to Contest With Owen of Oklahoma.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—While there is no open display of wagering on the result, Senators are placing bets on their favorite in a coming swimming match between Senator Pomerene, champion of Kill Buck Creek, Holmes County, Ohio, and Senator Owen of Oklahoma. The date for the Homeric contest has not been set, but it will be held at the bathing beach of the District of Columbia probably within the next few days.

The match was made when Senator Owen challenged Senator Pomerene to a round of golf at the Columbia Country Club. The weather was exceedingly hot and the Ohioan did not relish the idea of chasing a small ball under the hot sun.

"I'll take you on in a swimming match," he said, visions of cool waters before his eyes.

"Done," said Senator Owen promptly.

Potomac Water for Perspiring Senators

Lawmakers Thought They Were Drinking Mineral Spring Product Until Page Told Secret.

WASHINGTON, July 12—The poor, perspiring Senators have been deceived by the pages.

Some time ago the economy campaign eliminated mineral waters from the summer comforts of the Senators. Despite this, the mineral waters seemed still to be in the water bottles and the Senators drank deep and long.

A well-known Senator stepped up and drink three glasses to-day.

"There never was a water as good as this," he boasted, "and I have tried them all."

A page sitting by fell over in shrieks of mirth.

"It is Potomac water in the old bottles," he laughed. He knew, for he had seen it drawn from the faucet.

Mabel Taliaferro Is Wed in Daisy Field

Former Wife of Frederic Thompson Takes Every Precaution to Keep Her Marriage Secret.

ST. LOUIS, July 12.—After keeping her marriage to Thomas J. Carrigan, of LaPeer, Mich., a secret for more than a month, Mabel Taliaferro, of Chicago, the actress, formerly wife of Frederic Thompson, New York theatrical promoter, admitted here to-day she had been married June 1 in the Michigan city.

The marriage took place before a Justice of the Peace in a field of daisies that edged down to a river bank just outside of LaPeer, in order that all possible secrecy might be maintained.

Girl Loses Place, Then Takes Poison

Cigar Stand Clerk Swallows Carbolic Acid at Her Room in Tabernacle Dormitory.

Miss Rosa Lloyd, a pretty 17-year-old girl employed the last week at the New Kimball cigar stand, swallowed carbolic acid last night in her room at the Tabernacle Dormitory, No. 69 Luckie street.

Her moans brought aid from other persons in the building and she was rushed to the Grady Hospital. She returned to consciousness after an hour's treatment.

The girl refused to make an explanation of her action.

At the Kimball House it was said that she had been discharged Saturday night.

The young woman came to Atlanta from Opelika, Ala., several months ago.

Latouche, Famous As Painter, Dead

Artist Succumbs to Operation for Appendicitis in Paris—Member Legion of Honor.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 12.—Gaston Latouche, the famous painter, died to-night after having been operated upon yesterday for appendicitis. The artist had been ill for several days, but an operation was not deemed necessary until late yesterday afternoon.

M. Latouche did not rally from the effects of the anesthetic and members of his family remained with him throughout the night. He was an officer of the Legion of Honor.

"JAKE" ORR IS HAILED TENNIS' HOBBLED HERO

Bestows Humiliating Defeat on Roscius McMichael on Courts, Though Weighted With Brick.

WINS IN STRAIGHT SETS

Despite Incumbrance Gallant Athlete Dashes About Serving Volleys and Perplexing Lobs.

The Hobbled Tennis Champion!

That is one of the titles that is being bestowed upon J. K. Orr, Jr., familiarly known as "Jake," since he went out to the East Lake grounds of the Atlanta Athletic Club last Friday afternoon and put a shocking and abrupt end to the athletic aspirations of his friend, Roscius McMichael.

With a three-pound brickbat tied to his foot, Orr defeated McMichael two straight sets at tennis—and both of them were love sets.

Another title that Orr has amassed since his display of prowess at tennis is that of "goat-getter." For the match between he and McMichael was a "goat-getting" affair, pure and simple. It was arranged after the latter had made a jesting remark anent a certain game of tennis wherein Orr came off second best in a joust with Harry Hallman.

McMichael Accepts Defi.

Orr retorted with the statement that he could beat McMichael with a brickbat tied to his foot, and McMichael, confessedly a rank amateur with a tennis racket, felt constrained to accept the challenge.

And if varying accounts of the games and the scores as given out are to be believed, Orr not only got McMichael's "goat," but he left the field with the "nannies" of all of McMichael's friends, who had assembled to cheer the perspiring victim of a chance remark.

Orr, though handicapped by the brickbat, hopped merrily about the courts, volleying the ball or lobbying it with equal success. "'Tis said" he laughed harshly every time McMichael fell down, and his friends insist that at times he dispensed with the tennis racket and batted the ball over the net with his brickbat, thus getting a mean twist on the ball that McMichael, with the perspiration running down his face and his knees threatening to cave in under him, could not solve.

Brickbat Gives Trouble.

Though Orr had a walkaway in the matter of winning the match, he had his troubles with his brickbat. Several times the two-foot string got tangled and the brickbat smote him sharply on the shin, thus enabling McMichael to get one or two laughs out of the affair, anyway.

And at times the brickbat developed a nasty habit of entwining itself about Orr's legs, and biting savagely at his knees, to the utter disgust of "Jake" and the everlasting pleasure and joy of McMichael. On other occasions Orr plunged to the earth in a jumble of tennis racket, tennis ball, brickbat and Orr.

Haldane's Visit to U. S. Sets Precedent

British Lord Chancellor to Break Custom Since Days of Cardinal Wolsey.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—Referring to Lord Haldane's forthcoming visit to the United States, The Official Law Journal says:

"During the absence of the Lord Chancellor from England, when he will speak before the American Bar Association and at Montreal, the Great Seal, it is announced, will be placed in the hands of a commission. Lord Haldane will be the first Lord Chancellor to leave England on an official visit since Cardinal Wolsey went on his famous mission to France."

Samuel Untermyer was in London during the early part of the week and had several talks with Lord Haldane concerning his visit, and it is probable that Mr. Untermyer will accompany the Lord Chancellor on the trip. Mr. Untermyer was present at the meeting of the London Privy Council as the guest of Lord Haldane, over which the Lord Chancellor presides.

PAULINE FREDERICK, beautiful actress, who has returned to stage after failing to find happiness in riches of architect husband.

Miss Frederick Tired Of a Loveless Home

Actress Declares She Prefers Hardships of Stage to Unhappy Wedded Life.

NEW YORK, July 12.—The hardships of a stage career are preferable to a home life, however luxurious, without love, in the opinion of Pauline Frederick, the actress-wife of Frank M. Andrews, the well-known architect.

And that is why Miss Frederick is back at work in the effort to regain her position on the stage, which she left four years ago to become Mrs. Andrews.

"When I married Mr. Andrews," she said to a Sunday American reporter to-day, "I decided to choose a career of love instead of fame. But I soon saw that the pursuit of love and happiness was not a silvery path through a garden of roses. Mr. Andrews soon let me know that he objected to being looked upon merely as 'Pauline Frederick's husband.'

"I decided to go back on the stage partly because my husband seemed indifferent as to what I did and partly because I feared he was in love with another woman, the daughter of an American diplomat and the wife of an officer of the Royal Dragoon Guards of England."

Girls at Chevy Chase In 'Dew Bath' Frolics

Barefooted and in Bathing Suits Young Society Women Gambol on Lawn.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Chevy Chase has become a dew-bath resort.

Fashionable summer residents seeking health or conserving beauty take their morning "dip" in their own yards or nearby woods. They wear real bathing suits and go barefooted. They dance new Greek dances and roll and gambol on the green like children.

Among the bathers are Mrs. George Howard and her daughter, Miss Margaret Perin, Miss Katherine Britton, Miss Janet Allen and a number of their friends.

Atlantan Again Wins Tennessee Net Cup

State Trophy Captured by Carleton Y. Smith in Fast Match Held at Knoxville.

KNOXVILLE, TENN., July 12.—Carleton Y. Smith, of Atlanta, again won the State tennis championship to-day, defeating R. Y. Smith, of Nashville, 6-1 and 6-2. It had been agreed two in three sets should determine the winner. Smith, of Nashville, had defeated Allen, of Knoxville, in the finals of the State tourney. The Atlantan was the cup holder, and if he wins next year will retain permanent possession of the trophy.

SEEK NEGRO WHO SAYS HE WAS EYE-WITNESS TO PHAGAN MURDER

Fugitive, Reported to Have Been Traced to Birmingham, Declares That He Witnessed the Attack on the Girl Slain in the Pencil Plant.

LAYS CRIME TO BLACK WITH WHOM HE HAD GAMBLED

Loser at Dice, He Declares, Planned to Rob Victim as She Came From Getting Pay---Tried to Prevent the Crime and, Failing, Fled.

Report that a negro who has declared that he witnessed the attack by another negro upon Mary Phagan, which resulted in her death in the National Pencil Factory on the afternoon of April 26, has been apprehended in Birmingham, became known Saturday night.

If this information is substantiated, its substance is of such startling character as to revolutionize the present status of the Phagan case, casting down practically every bulwark which has been erected in the prosecution of Leo M. Frank for the murder.

In its present form, however, The Sunday American does not vouch for the correctness of the report. Only the fact that it comes from a source which is so near the defense of the pencil factory head as to make it authoritative and the admission by those connected with the actual legal defense of Frank, prompts this newspaper to present the sensational story, asking that it be taken for what, on its face, it is shown to be worth.

Negro Hunted Since May.

It is known that a search has been made for the mysterious negro ever since a message came from St. Louis early in May, telling of his boast first made in that city.

The negro's name is said to be Will Green, and he is described as light yellow, about 39 years of age and about 5 feet 9 inches tall.

The essential part of his story, in effect, is said to be like this:

"I was in Atlanta for a few days. I was shooting craps on the first floor with this negro that Saturday. This fellow was half drunk and was losing money to me. He got mad and cursed his luck.

"Before long a little girl went upstairs. This negro said he was going to take her money away from her when she came down. I thought he was fooling at first, but when she came down he started for her. I yelled at him not to do it, but he kept right on. Then I skipped out, for I didn't want to get mixed up in any trouble. I stayed around town until the next Monday, and then I read all about how a little girl had been killed in the National Pencil Factory, and I knew that she was the one I had seen come downstairs at the factory.

"I got out of town right away and went back to St. Louis. They were surprised to see me back there, and I told a few of them how I happened to come back. That's how they found out that I had seen what I did."

Wired Clew to Atlanta Police.

Frank Morrow, of St. Louis, formerly connected with the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company, is reported to have been the first one to take notice of the negro Green. Morrow was seriously injured a few years ago, and Green is understood to have assisted in caring for him for several months. In this way Morrow came to know the negro well.

Morrow, on hearing the negro's astounding tale, wired immediately to Atlanta. Little attention was paid his message at first, as it came along with many others which palpably were from persons seeking the rewards or who were offering evidence of no value. He repeated his wire and this led to an investigation of Morrow himself. His former connections were ascertained and it was found that he had a reputation for reliability.

He was authorized to locate the negro. The delay, however, was unfortunate. Sometime in the few days, Green vanished from St. Louis. Morrow telegraphed that he belived there was yet a chance to trail Green, and the chase began.

Dispatches to The Georgian and The American from time to time told that the trail was growing warm and that Morrow, with his detectives, was just on the point of capturing the negro. Green, however, seemed to be able to slip out of their grasp as they were about to put their hands on him.

The trail led southward from St. Louis. The American's

WAR ON VICE IN ATLANTA JUST BEGUN, SAYS CHIEF

Beavers Asserts Convictions Saturday Are but Start in Crusade in Which Prominent Business Men Are Said To Be Involved.

Wilson Girl, on Stand, Tells Dramatic Story of Wild Career for Few Days Prior to Her Arrest. Morbid Throng Hears Narrative.

With eight convictions obtained Saturday and five persons facing trial Monday morning, Chief of Police James L. Beavers declared Saturday night that his campaign against the vice ring in Atlanta has just begun.

What the Chief regards as conclusive evidence has been obtained against five men, one of them a prominent druggist and another the son of a prominent business man. In addition to these, Chief Beavers has the names of ten other men and of half a dozen young girls who, it is alleged, are involved. The girls will be arrested and efforts made to induce them to furnish the names of others who are connected with the vice ring.

Before Corinne Wilson and Dora Rothstein are taken to the Cincinnati Reform School, where they were sentenced Saturday afternoon by Recorder Pro Tem. Preston, they will be questioned again in the hope that they will furnish other names than the ones they have already given the police.

Men Held for Grand Jury.

In addition to the action taken in the cases against the Wilson girl and the Rothstein girl Saturday afternoon, A. C. Dollar and W. W. Suttles, named by the Wilson girl in her statement, were held on $200 bonds to await the action of the Grand Jury and the higher courts. They were tried before Recorder Pro Tem. Preston and were represented by Attorney William M. Smith.

The other four persons who were convicted Saturday of complicity in the operations of the vice ring were Hattie Smith, Paul Estes, Hoyt Monroe and Mrs. Lola White. All were bound over by Judge Broyles following Hattie Smith's story of a joy ride to DeKalb County.

A sensational feature of the trial of the Wilson girl and the Rothstein girl and Dollar and Suttles Saturday afternoon was an arraignment of the parents of the Rothstein girl by Recorder Pro Tem Preston.

"If you had a dog in your home," said Recorder Preston to them, "you would not treat it as you have treated this girl. Just such action as this is resulting to-day in the ruin of hundreds of young girls of this city."

The stories told by the Wilson girl and the Rothstein girl were sordid recitals of experiences they have had with men, many of them old enough to be their fathers.

Wilson Girl's Story Dramatic.

The startling confessions of Corinne Wilson formed one of the most dramatic incidents ever known in Atlanta's Police Court.

The great crowd, attracted to the courtroom by the promise of sensational and salacious details, was not disappointed.

The girl, apparently oblivious of the throng that surged close about the judge's stand, remained calm and unperturbed throughout the ordeal and never once faltered.

"I realize that I have been caught and that my shame is known to the world, and I want to tell my story in the hope that some other girl may be stayed," began the girl. "I have sinned simply because I would not heed advice and listen to the words that would have kept me in the straight way. I fell into bad company and didn't have the courage to resist the tempter. I became an easy victim.

Father Objected to Match.

"Several months ago I fell in love —at least, I thought I was in love. Andrew Wilson, a youth of about 20 years, began paying me attention, and I soon found that his was the influence that directed me. He seemed a good boy, and when he asked me to marry him, I consented. My father objected to the match and several times chased Andrew away from our home in Highland avenue. Then Andrew and I eloped and were married. This was shortly after Christmas. I was too young to marry. I ought to be in school right now—but I didn't realize all this at that time. My husband is now in Marietta. I came back here four weeks ago to stay a while with my mother.

"And then came my downfall. It all seems like a terrible nightmare to me. But I'm going to tell it all—then I believe I'll feel better about it. I want to confess all.

"It was on the Fourth of July that I went out to White City, and there I met this other girl, Dora Rothstein. I had been skating in the rink and fell. Several people rushed to my assistance, and among them was this girl. She seemed so nice and I felt friendly toward her. She later suggested that we go in the rear of the park and pick blackberries, and I consented. Then she introduced me to some boys.

Remains With Party.

"Dora talked to me about having a good time. Everything looked so rosy that I decided I wouldn't return home. Dora suggested that we remain with the boys, and I thought this would be fine.

"Something was said about spending the night in a cheap hotel. I was told that we could get a room there and that we would be safe. But I wouldn't consent to this. I was afraid I would be arrested. So Friday night we stayed out in the woods. It was the same thing Saturday night and Sunday night. We would come into town in the day time, but would go back to the woods at night. We met several fellows, and they all wanted to show us a good time.

"On Monday night we went out to the baseball park with some boys. I have already given their names to the police. We slept that night in the baseball grandstand. We made friends with the night watchman, and he didn't bother us. The next morning he got very friendly with Dora. The boys didn't stay all night—they came back to town and left us there.

Went to Old Mill.

"Tuesday we met W. W. Suttles and C. A. Dollar and they took us out to an old mill out in the country—I think it is on the Adamsville road. We went out in a surrey. The boys bought some bottled beer and also some whisky. They drank pretty freely and got drunk. They gave us some, too, but I couldn't drink much. When they go drunk, Dora and I tried to get them to bring us back to town, but they wouldn't come.

"The next morning we went several miles in another direction with these same fellows to Mount Gilead campground. There they drank some more, and we stayed there for sometime. When we came back to town Dora and I left these fellows, and that night got with two others. One of these was a druggist, and the other fellow was his friend.

"They said they would show us a good time, and, hiring an automobile, drove us out to Ponce DeLeon. We didn't go in the ball park this time, but spent the night in the park. The chauffeur of the car was not involved in any way. He simply drove us out. We didn't have anything to drink on this trip. It was warm and nice, and we slept on the ground. We did this every night we were out, except the night we stayed in the ball park and the time we stayed in the old mill.

"Thursday we came to town and roamed about the streets for a long time, and late in the afternoon went to a moving picture theater. We were just coming out of the theater when we were arrested.

"That's the whole story. I know it's awful to tell it all, but I don't intend to try and conceal my guilt. And I don't intend to shield those who have aided in my shame. If I've got to suffer and be humiliated, I feel that these men who have gloated over me and who have reveled in my shame should suffer, too."

Seek Pictures of 100 Prettiest Children

Atlanta Asked to Send Exhibit to "Temple of Childhood" at the Panama Fair.

Mayor Woodward and other public officials, as yet unnamed, have a job on their hands in the selection of the portraits of the 100 most beautiful children of Atlanta, which will be exhibited in the Temple of Childhood at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco.

I. Wasserkrug, an official representative of the exposition, will arrive in Atlanta within the next day or two to get the portraits, which he will ask the Mayor and other officials to select.

The portraits will form a part of an exhibit containing hundreds of thousands of portraits of children from all parts of the world.

2,000 CANS OF FRUIT PUT UP IN BIBB COUNTY

MACON, July 12.—More than 2,000 cans of fruit and vegetables were canned during the present week by the boys and girls of the Bibb County canning clubs, under the direction of Mrs. C. L. Rolston. Canning "bees" will be held during the ensuing week at the following points in the county: Lizella, Monday; Warrior School, Tuesday; Midway School, Wednesday; Bethel, Thursday; Price School, Friday.

SOOT BURNING IN STACK CALLS OUT FIRE SQUAD

Burning soot in a smokestack at No. 11 North Forsyth street occasioned a fire alarm and a few minutes' work for a squad from the central station Saturday night. The alarm was turned in by a passerby, who noticed an unwonted volume of smoke pouring from the stack. No damage was done to the building.

Relief Fund Given To Yancey Family

Two Substantial Checks Sent to Sheriff Mangum, Money Collected by Hearst Papers.

Two checks for substantial sums have been sent to Sheriff C. W. Mangum to swell the Yancey relief fund. The checks covered contributions sent to The Atlanta Georgian and Hearst's Sunday American in response to appeals to assist the indigent family of Dave Yancey, the brave deputy who was killed by a negro prisoner.

Sheriff Mangum, in his letter of acknowledgment, said:

"Your two checks in re the Yancey relief fund received, and I beg to thank you and all who so generously contributed to this worthy cause. The tragic death which he met is ample evidence that Mr. Yancey was a good and faithful officer, one who was ever ready to do his duty under any and all circumstances, and I feel sure that the good people of Atlanta and vicinity were never called upon to contribute to a more worthy cause."

Bryan Sees Florida Girl Killed by Train

Miss Annie E. Williams Run Down on Trestle Near Asheville, While on Vacation.

ASHEVILLE, July 12.—Looking out of the window of the drawing room of his sleeping car to catch a bit of mountain scenery, Secretary of State William Jennings Bryan today witnessed the decapitation by his train of Miss Annie E. Williams, of Gainesville, Fla., who had just arrived for a brief summer vacation. Mrs. Bryan and United States Senator Luke Lea, of Tennessee, were also on the train, the entire party being en route to Asheville.

Miss Williams started across a trestle just before hearing an approaching train. A small nephew who was with her ran back and was saved, but she became panic stricken and tried to rush across ahead of the train. The curved track prevented the engineer seeing Miss Williams in time to stop the train before reaching her.

Bar Launches Move For a Fourth Judge

Asks Legislators for Another Fulton Superior Court Jurist—Committee Named to Press Request.

A resolution urging Fulton County Representatives in the Legislature to introduce and work for the passage of a bill creating a fourth judge of the Superior Court in Fulton County was passed unanimously by the members of the Atlanta Bar Association. A committee of fifteen members was appointed by the president to co-operate with the Representatives in the Legislature.

The committee consists of A. G. Powell, Edgar Watkins, Burton Smith, John L. Tye, Daniel W. Rountree, E. C. Hill, VanAstor Batchelor, J. H. Porter, John W. Moore, Frank L. Neufville, Luther Z. Rosser, Sr., Jack Hastings, George Westmoreland, Arminius Wright and Philip Alston.

PARIS, July 12.—The opening of the seashore resorts on the French coasts offers the modistes almost as much scope as does the opening of the racing season. The latest bathing style for women consists of nothing more than a silk sash wound several times round the hips and knotted in front. That's all—except a broad-brimmed hat.

TO RETURN TO GEORGIA WITHOUT REQUISITION

STAUNTON, VA., July 12.—At the request of the authorities of Valdosta, Ga., where he is said to be wanted for forgery, Leonard Ruis, a young man of good appearance, was arrested here to-day. Ruis says he is willing to go back to Georgia without requisition papers.

MEXICO FAVORS JAP ALLIANCE TO HARASS U. S.

Anti-American and Pro-Oriental Sentiments Increase in Capital at Same Ratio.

Special Cable to The American.

MEXICO CITY, July 12.—The anti-American feeling in Mexico reached high tension to-day, and for a time it was believed that Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson and Consul W. G. Shanklin would be forced to leave the city.

At a late hour to-night the Government had succeeded in preserving order, the streets of the capital were quiet and the editorials in the evening papers, which of late have been strongly antagonistic, were extremely mild.

Early to-day Ambassador Wilson received an anonymous letter telling him of a plot to blow up the American Embassy.

The Ambassador immediately communicated with the Minister of Foreign Affairs and the Police Department.

Many Ready to Flee.

The general feeling against Americans has been increasing steadily during the past few days, and to-night many prominent Americans are preparing to leave.

While the anti-American feeling has been increased, the friendly feeling toward Japan has been increasing in the same ratio. Several of the newspapers have announced boldly that Japan is the ally of Mexico in spirit and would stand behind Mexico in a fight for independence. In this connection, El Pais says editorially:

"We see in Japan a future ally and defender of our independence, because such an alliance would be dangerous to the United States."

Second Protest Made.

Ambassador Wilson made a second protest to-day to the Mexican Foreign Office against the anti-American editorials which have appeared in the newspapers of Mexico City. This note was couched in such vigorous and plain language as to leave no doubt that the Mexican Government would be held strictly accountable for any injuries done Americans, and in such event a reckoning would have to be made with the United States.

In commenting on the editorials, Minister of War Blanquet said:

"It is true the situation is most delicate, but the Government feels it can cope with it. Lamentable consequences may be occasioned by the anti-American feeling, but we are trying in every way to kill it."

A monster demonstration will be held Sunday, when several thousand students and school children will march through the city. The school children have been provided with tiny Japanese flags for the occasion.

Wilson Returns to Washington To-day

Ends Holiday by Touring Connecticut Valley in Auto and With Usual Golf Game.

CORNISH, N. Y., July 12.—President Wilson's last day at Cornish was spent almost entirely in his motor car. The President reached the Hanover (N. H.) golf links a half hour before his usual time for playing with Dr. Grayson, and returned to Harlakenden House for luncheon.

In the afternoon the President, accompanied by Mrs. Wilson, the Misses Eleanor and Jessie Wilson, Miss Jones, Dr. Grayson and Secret Service Operative Sloan, toured the Connecticut Valley northward from Cornish, touching at Windsor, Woodstock and Hartland, Vt., returning home in time for 7 o'clock dinner.

The President will attend church with his family to-morrow and starts back to Washington at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

American Net Star Wins From German

World's Champion Believes U. S. Team Is Sure to Bring Davis Cup Across Seas.

By ANTHONY F. WILLING.
(World's Lawn Tennis Champion.)

NOTTINGHAM, July 12.—Although the American tennis team yesterday won the semi-final round of play for the Dwight F. Davis challenge trophy against the German team, play was continued to-day in the two remaining singles matches. B. Norris Williams, of Philadelphia, defeated Otto Froitzheim, the German singles champion, by 5-7, 6-1, 6-3, 6-1. Wallace F. Johnson, of Philadelphia, substituted for Maurice E. McLoughlin, of San Francisco, and defeated Oscar Kreutzer, of Germany, 7-5, 6-4, 5-7, 6-4.

The result of the American-Canadian final is hardly worth consideration, as the American team is so superior to that from the Dominion as to almost make comparison impossible.

Against England, however, the United States has another proposition, although I am convinced that the ultimate result will be in favor of America.

Greater Police Force In New York Blocked

Borough President Halts Effort to Increase Strength—Criticises Methods of Commissioner Waldo.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Borough President McAneny yesterday held up action by the Board of Estimates and Apportionment on a resolution authorizing an increase of 454 men in the police department. McAneny took the ground a study of the use of the men already in the department should be made before any increase was allowed. Mayor Gaynor and Comptroller Prendergast urged immediate action.

McAneny declared that Commissioner Waldo had too many men in clerical positions, and in his opinion the fixed post system as maintained by Waldo required more men than necessary.

MISS HOPKINS IS DETERMINED TO SUE SULZER

Sister Says Alleged Fiancee of New York Governor Will Press $30,000 Claim.

PHILADELPHIA, July 12.—Miss Mignon Hopkins does not intend to abandon her suit for $30,000 damages against Governor Sulzer, according to a statement this afternoon by her sister, Miss Gladys Hopkins.

Miss Gladys Hopkins, a good-looking blonde, slim of build, is the youngest of the three Hopkins sisters. The other sister, Miss Bessie Hopkins, is a designer in a department store.

Gladys declares there is no doubt Mr. Sulzer paid ardent suit for the hand of her sister, Mignon, and it was understood by all of the latter's relatives and friends, she says, that an engagement of marriage had been agreed upon.

Heard Parts of Letters.

"My sister used to read to me some of the letters Mr. Sulzer wrote her," declared Gladys. "They were in the most endearing language and made reference to their engagement to marry. I did not see the letters personally, and my sister did not read all of them to me. The Governor now has them.

"They were returned to him, together with his presents, in fulfillment of the agreement between my sister and him that each was to send back letters and presents to the other. He also agreed to pay her $15,000, but she has received only $2,000 of it. If she had received it all, I suppose she would not now be working as a saleswoman in a department store."

"Do you recall the visits of Mr. Sulzer at your home when he called to see your sister?"

Fox Terrier Knew Him.

"Do I?" she queried. "Well, I guess I do, for I used to let him in. I was a little girl then and we lived at No. 119 Hancock street, Brooklyn, N. Y. It was about ten years ago. Our little fox terrier seemed to know the night Mr. Sulzer called and would run ot the door and jump all over him. I recall that he did not like the attentions of the dog very much.

"Not only did he call at our home in Brooklyn to see my sister, but he used to take her out to theaters and other places of amusement in Brooklyn and New York. He was her ardent suitor in every sense of the word and he engaged himself to marry her. She will prove her case at the trial. She has no intention of abandoning her suit, and she will prosecute the Governor to the finish."

American Aviator in England Builds Hydroaeroplane in Which He Will Attempt Ocean Crossing.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—Colonel Cody, the well-known American aviator, is putting the finishing touches on a hydroaeroplane in which he expects to cross the Atlantic within the next two months. Colonel Cody will start from this side, and estimates that his machine will travel better than 90 miles an hour, and believes he will make the trip inside of twenty hours.

Since the offer of $50,000 by The Daily Mail to the aviator who first crosses the Atlantic inside of 72 hours, a number of aviators have undertaken the construction of machines for the flight.

Frank A. Mears Establishes New Motor Record Between Atlanta and Asheville.

ASHEVILLE, July 12.—Breaking all previous automobile records, Frank A. Mears has just made the trip from Atlanta to Asheville in ten hours, with 45 minutes out for supper and for gasoline, bringing the actual running time down to 9 hours 15 minutes.

Mr. Mears bought a new automobile in Atlanta recently and decided to run it back to his home in Asheville and save freight bills. The car had never been operated before. The distance from Atlanta to Asheville via the automobile route is 246 miles. The fastest time heretofore made was 11 hours 20 minutes.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Mrs. Joseph Leiter, who is often held up as an example of the perfect American mother of wealth, has designed shoes for her children which she claims gives them comfort in the summer playtime.

These shoes are something like the old-fashioned sandals, but are made of cloth instead of leather, and have side pieces to support the ankles.

Mr. and Mrs. Leiter and their two little sons are spending the summer days in their country home in the Virginia woods on the shore of the Potomac. This house is called the "Glass House in the Woods."

Atlanta After 1914 Apple Convention

Active Efforts To Be Made to Land Meeting of International Shippers' Association.

Active efforts to secure for Atlanta the 1914 convention of the International Apple Shippers' Association are being made by the Atlanta Convention Bureau, aided by Louis B. Magid, who, in a letter to the organization, advances a number of reasons why the convention should be held in Atlanta.

The great consumption of apples in the South, Mr. Magid declares, should result in a closer acquaintanceship between the shippers and the consumers of the fruit. He declares that great strides have been made in apple growing in the mountain regions of North Georgia, and the bringing of the convention to the Gate City would be of inestimable value to the owners of Georgia apple orchards.

ANOTHER DELAY NOW PROMISED ON TARIFF BILL

Senator Simmons Fears He Will Not Be Ready for Debate on Measure Wednesday.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Delay in getting tariff legislation seems to be the fate of the Democratic party leaders in the Senate. Chairman Simmons, of the Finance Committee, may not be able to have his report on the bill and his statement of estimated receipts ready by Wednesday, as announced by him yesterday.

"To study properly this bill and assure oneself that he is absolutely accurate in his statements I find a very difficult thing to do within the time I set when I suggested next Wednesday for the commencement of the debate on this measure," said Senator Simmons this afternoon.

"I have worked 18 out of 24 hours of the day since the bill was acted upon by the caucus, but I am apprehensive that when the Senate adjourns Monday I must ask it to adjourn until Thursday instead of Wednesday, as we had planned."

Senator Simmons said to-day he had absolutely no fear of the success of the passage of the bill through the Senate. Some Democratic Senators expressed the belief that were it not for the agricultural schedule and free wool a number of the Republican Progressives would support the measure as a fair representation of their demands for tariff revision.

Senator Poindexter, of Washington, the Progressive leader, declares positively that he will support the bill. It also was asserted that only one Democratic vote in the end would be cast against the bill—that of Senator Thornton, of Louisiana, whose term expires in 1915. His colleague, Mr. Ransdell, is expected to support the bill after he loses his fight for free sugar.

Republican-Progressives to-day were not inclined to agree with their Republican associates that September 1 would see the finish of the tariff bill. This wing of the party is preparing for an elaborate attack, particularly on the agricultural and wool schedules.

Senator LaFollette will devote himself to the cotton, wool and agricultural schedules and will be constantly in attendance during the debate. He has framed an entirely new bill which he will offer as a substitute.

Senator Cummins has specialized in steel and will discuss that schedule exhaustively. Senator Bristow will handle the fight for the Republicans against free sugar, aided by William Alden Smith, of Michigan. Gronna and Crawford, of the Dakotas, will discuss farm products, and Borah of Idaho will analyze the income tax section from the Republican point of view. He favors this tax, but believes there are some inconsistencies

TECHNICAL MEN PLAN SOCIETY FOR ENGINEERS

Meeting of Representatives of Various Vocations Held and Preliminaries Perfected.

Atlanta men of the technical professions will organize a society for the mutual interest and benefit of engineers in every line. A meeting of representatives of the various engineering vocations was held Saturday at the city waterworks pumping station, and preliminary organization was effected.

J. N. Hazlehurst, L. J. Hill, Jr., Hall Hentz, W. T. Heath, Park A. Dallis and A. M. Schoen were named as members of a committee on organization to report at a later meeting.

Among those who spoke before the meeting Saturday were A. M. Schoen, electrical engineer; J. N. Hazlehurst, civil engineer; L. J. Hill, Jr., electrical engineer; Hall Hentz, architect; J. S. Brogden, chemical engineer; Park A. Dallis, mechanical engineer; Captain R. M. Clayton, Chief of Construction City of Atlanta; A. C. Bruce, a prominent architect; V. H. Kriegshaber, of the Chamber of Commerce; F. H. Granger, member of the Franklin Institute and also member of the American Mining Engineers; Prof. G. N. Mitcham, of Auburn Polytechnic and Alabama State Highway Commission. Brief addresses were also made by Prof. H. P. Wood, of Georgia School of Technology; Paul Norcross and others.

BILL PLANS TO LET U. S. FLOAT LOANS FOR FARMERS

Measure Provides That Clubs of 25 Can Make Quick Long-Time Notes With the Government at Reasonable Rate of Interest.

Tremendous Benefit to Southern Cotton Growers Seen in Law of Progressive Republican — Will Insure Financing of the Crop.

By HUGH S. MILLER.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—A measure which, if passed, will remove one of the most serious obstacles with which the Southern cotton growers have to contend, the lack of money at the proper time with which to properly care for and market their crops, has been introduced in the House by Representative Willis J. Huling, of Pennsylvania, a Progressive Republican.

In the last yearbook of the Department of Agriculture, considerable space was given to pointing out the advantage of organization of the cotton growers in communities, both to raise money at crop time and to establish co-operatively improved facilities for handling their product.

The bill introduced by Mr. Hulings devises a plan whereby an association of not less than 25 farmers may borrow money from the Government at low rates of interest on mortgages on their farms, repaying the loan in payments arranged to give the farmer ample time.

Will Encourage Organization.

The effect of this plan, it is claimed, would be to encourage the farmers in a community to organize in just such a way as was advised by the Department of Agriculture in its articles on improved methods of handling and marketing cotton.

"Under the present system, farmers are charged ruinous rates for money," said Mr. Hulings. "Often the farmer finds it impossible to obtain loans, because banks are not permitted to lend on real estate security, and no bank likes to lend on more than four months' time.

"Of course, if the farmer's credit is good and he can furnish commercial paper, he can borrow from a bank at customary rates; but this measure is designed for the benefit of the men whose only security is the land they are working, and who need money to cover the time between planting and selling their crops.

"Under the plan I suggest subscribers will organize an association somewhat as national banks are organized, paying 10 per cent cash, and in addition giving their notes payable to trustees for the use of the United States for the amount of their subscription, and these notes are secured by mortgages on improved farm lands of an assessed valuation of double the amount of the mortgage.

Twenty Years Covered.

"The association will then make its note to the Secretary of the Treasury for the amount of the capital stock, and payable in installments of 3 per cent annually for three years; 7 per cent for three years; 8 for the next three; 9 for the next three, and 10 per cent annually for the last five years, covering twenty years in all.

"These installments when paid will cancel the association note with accrued 3 per cent interest, and of course will cancel the mortgage also.

"As a collateral security for the payment of any or all of these installments, the subscribers' personal notes and mortgages are deposited with the Secretary of the Treasury, together with the official bonds of the trustees for the faithful discharge of their duties, and approved assurances that the mortgages are a valid security.

"When these matters are in proper shape, the Secretary places the personal notes and mortgages in the possession of the trustees for the purposes of collection as the same fall due, and from these collections to pay maturing installments of the association note and to see that taxes are paid, and the liens of the mortgages are not impaired.

"The association is then entitled to receive money of the United States to the amount of its capital stock, which is then distributed among the subscribers of the shares in the proportion in which they have given their notes secured by the mortgages.

"To provide funds the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to sell 3 per cent twenty-year bonds when necessary.

"The rate of interest the association charges the subscriber is immaterial so long as it charges enough to repay the government loan at 3 per cent and the administration expenses of making the loan, because if the subscriber is charged more than the cost it all comes back to him in the windup."

PENTECOSTAL ASSEMBLY MEETS AT OLD TABERNACLE

The Pentecostal Assembly will hold a meeting at 9:30 o'clock to-day in Dr. Broughton's old Tabernacle, Luckie Street and Tabernacle Place. Last week a series of meetings was conducted by Elder Paul T. Barth.

Mrs. Crawford Can Not Be Found

New Slaying Warrant Unserved

Mrs. J. B. Crawford is shown in the upper picture. She is reported to be in Carroll County as officers seek her in Fulton to serve warrant.

In the lower picture is the late J. B. Crawford, wealthy Atlantan, whose sudden death is now attributed to poison plot by heirs contesting his will.

Widow Accused of Poisoning Husband Now Is in Tucker, Her Attorney Asserts.

Armed with a warrant charging her with the murder of her husband, constables sought in vain all Saturday afternoon for Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, to arrest her, the outgrowth of the sensational hearing before Colonel James N. Anderson, auditor in the $250,000 Crawford will case.

The warrant was the second which has been taken out for the wife of the late Joshua Crawford, charging her with having poisoned her husband, and was signed by C. Z. Crawford, one of the heirs to the fortune. It was issued by C. H. Girardeau, Justice of the Peace.

The first warrant, issued by the Coroner of Carroll County, following an inquest held over the exhumed body of Crawford, was adjudged invalid by Judge Pendleton Saturday morning.

Attempts of officers to arrest Mrs. Crawford began when R. F. Mauldin and W. W. Rogers, of Justice Girardeau's court, went to her home at West Peachtree and Fourteenth streets to serve the warrant and found her gone. For five hours they sought her.

Attorney Explains Departure.

Then light was thrown on the situation, which had begun to take the hue of a mystery, by Reuben R. Arnold, Mrs. Crawford's attorney. He informed Justice Girardeau that she had gone to Tucker, in DeKalb County.

Upon statements in Mrs. Crawford's favor by the lawyer and by Dr. J. W. Hurt, who attended her husband during his last illness, the Justice fixed her bail, in event of her arrest before the time for her preliminary hearing Wednesday, at $20,000. If arrested, it is likely that she will not be forced to go to the Tower, as bail, it is expected, will be furnished.

Mrs. Crawford's disappearance had not been expected by the officers. After it became known that her arrest was ordered, considerable time was consumed in the argument whether the warrant, signed by the Coroner of Carroll County, was to be enforced in Fulton County. Judge Pendleton, of the Superior Court, held that it was not, and several hours after it was announced publicly that Mrs. Crawford was to be arrested, a second warrant was sworn out in the court of the Justice of the Peace by C. Z. Crawford. Armed with this warrant the two constables went to arrest her, only to discover that she had gone.

Friends Stand by Her.

Meanwhile friends of Mrs. Crawford, basing their arguments on statements by Attorney Arnold and Dr. John W. Hurt, contend for her innocence. Dr. Hurt accompanied Mr. Arnold on the visit to the office of Justice Girardeau Saturday afternoon, and told the justice that Crawford had succumbed to a typical siege of pneumonia, and that no poison was in his body except what he (Dr. Hurt) had given him. The physician said he had given him morphine, also a medicine containing opium, to stop his cough. After hearing this statement, Justice Girardeau fixed the commitment hearing of Mrs. Crawford for 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, authorizing her release on $20,000 bond should she be arrested before that time.

Attorney Arnold said he would make every effort to effect her return to Atlanta Saturday night, but would guarantee she would be back by Monday.

"She went to Tucker immediately after Judge Pendleton held she could not be arrested in Fulton County on a warrant signed by the Coroner of Carroll County," said Mr. Arnold. "She wanted to see a witness there in connection with the civil case. This murder warrant is merely one phase of fighting for a settlement of the civil case. Had Mrs. Crawford known this second warrant was going to be taken out she would not have left Atlanta."

NEW YORK MAN JOINS BANK HERE

W. P. Venable Becomes Active Vice President of Travelers. Long Experience in South.

W. P. Venable, since its organization manager of the Southern department of the Mechanics and Metals Bank of New York City, has resigned to accept the active vice presidency of the Travelers Bank and Trust Company of Atlanta.

Mr. Venable took up his new duties Saturday. The other officers of the institution—president, John F. Cone; vice presidents, W. S. Lounsbury, active, and A. M. Schoen, and cashier; G. McGahee—remain the same.

Mr. Venable is a Virginian. His father and grandfather were bankers, founding, before the war, the Planters Bank of Farmville, Va., of which, in later years, Mr. Venable became cashier. Five years ago he went with the National Copper Bank of New York City, and upon its consolidation with the Mechanics became Southern manager for the $90,000,000 institution. His present move is due to his becoming tired of traveling and to a disinclination of his family to live in New York City.

Mr. Venable is likely to become an active factor in the work of the Georgia Bankers' Association, as he was in the Virginia association.

COL. LOWRY GIVES PICTURE OF HIS FATHER TO CHAMBER

President Wilmer L. Moore, of the Chamber of Commerce, sent a letter Saturday to Colonel Robert J. Lowry, in which he expressed his thanks for the portrait of the latter's father, W. M. Lowry, president of the Atlanta Board of Trade in 1866.

Mr. Moore added that the officials of the Chamber of Commerce will not be satisfied until the portrait of Colonel Lowry is placed on the wall along with the other ex-presidents of the civic chamber.

TRAINMEN ARE READY TO WALK OUT ON STRIKE

100,000 Employees of Eastern Roads Are Expected to Respond to Call.

NEW YORK, July 12.—"Unless something akin to a miracle happens, a strike will be ordered to-morrow, or at least on Monday, on the 42 Eastern railroads which have refused the demands of the conductors and trainmen for an increase in wages."

This statement was made to the Hearst papers by A. B. Garrettson, president of the Order of Railway Conductors, at the close of to-day's meetings in Webster Hall, and seemed to express the sentiment of the 900 executive members in whose hands th fight now rests.

The union leaders expect to settle the question of how soon the strike will be called at a meeting to-mrorow morning.

Seth Low, president of the National Civic Federation, with Marcus M. Manks and Ralph M. Easley, of the same organization, appeared unexpectedly at Webster Hall during the afternoon, and were at first refused admittance.

Low Urges Delay.

Mr. Low sent word that he desired only to address the meeting, and would not expect to take any part in their deliberations. He then was admitted and urged the men to mark time, at least until after the Washington conference in which President Wilson will participate on Monday.

The address of the great labor advocate was received with a friendly spirit, but within an hour after he had left the hall it was learned from a dozen sources within the union ranks that the men were unalterably opposed to a delay of any sort.

If an order to strike, such as now contemplated, is issued, approximately 100,000 conductors, switchmen, baggage men and brakemen will be thrown out of employment and the railroads will be paralyzed. The railroad managers admit they are now confronted with the most serious situation which has arisen in a decade.

Keep Proceedings Secret.

The union men are taking every precaution to keep their proceedings secret. The convention was first called to order at the Broadway Hotel this morning. This was only a strategic move, however, to avoid possible dictograph planters.

The great railroads of the East have already begun preparations to guard their property and prevent, if possible, complete interruption of traffic.

A. B. Garrettson said to-night the union men probably would not send personal representatives to take part in conference at the White House, but would authorize delegates from the federation to represent them. The object of this conference is to smooth out the differences between the committee of managers and the union men concerning pending amendments to the EErdman arbitration act.

The amendment offered to the Erdman act by Senator Newlands is said to be satisfactory to both sides. The union men claim, however, that the railroads have already refused to arbitrate and that new legislation will not aid the present situation.

Secretary Wilson Is Blamed for Strike.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—If the strike voted for by the 90,000 railway trainmen east of Chicago and north of the Ohio is permitted to take place and the great transportation lines of that region of the country are tied up, the responsibility may be placed on the shoulders of Secretary of Labor William B. Wilson.

This official, at one time a labor leader brought before a Maryland court for violation of the law and let out on bail, now insists that whatever method of mediation shall be agreed upon must be subject to the supervision of his department. This means that William B. Wilson must be the personal supervisor.

Refuse to Accept Wilson.

Representatives both of capital and labor refused to accept this situation. With this strike impending, representatives of both sides went before the Senate committee and urged that the Newlands bill, increasing the number of mediators under the Erdman act from three to six, be adopted. This would increase from one to two the number of neutral mediators. Both sides agreed that it would result in assurance of justice.

Under the present law one side or the other must win over only one man. To win over two, as would be necessary in the pending bill, representatives of capital and labor both admit would prove the justice of the claim of the winning side.

The Newlands amendment to the House bill is now in conference, and the railway trainmen are withholding action to see if the House agrees to it.

Wilson Wants Power.

The Erdman act as it now stands puts the board under the jurisdiction of the Department of Labor. Secretary Wilson insists that it remain there regardless of the attitude of the men and their employers and the positive statements of both sides that this means a great strike and a refusal to mediate.

The matter has been brought to the attention of President Wilson in the hope that he will give his subordinate such instructions as will result in a speedy adoption of the revised Erdman act in form as agreed upon by the representaives of capital and labor, and upon which they are committed to submit their case.

Bejeweled Monkey Still Roams Woods

Efforts of Small Boys to Capture Simian Fruitless—Case Puzzles Police.

With the exception of an army of small boys who descended upon him late Saturday afternoon, no one has tried to capture the mysterious monkey with a jeweled collar which was discovered in the wilds of Peachtree Creek, on the Howell Mill road, by Mrs. H. Winsta Saturday morning. He is still "monkeying" around out there, leaping joyfully from limb to limb and easily eluding the youngsters.

The police are puzzled over his monkeyship. They were telephoned by Mrs. Winsta Saturday, and asked to come out and arrest the monkey. Nowhere in their police manual or in the statutes are they given power to arrest a respectable, law-abiding monkey, especially a monkey who is so high up in the world that he can afford a jeweled collar and a length of chain.

The police have finally adopted a neutral attitude, and have issued this ultimatum: If anyone has lost a monkey, let him go and get him.

Red Men Parade to Advertise Excursion

Two Trains Engaged, Third May Be Necessary, to Carry Crowd to Tallulah Falls.

Atlanta Red Men are planning the greatest excursion they ever have given for Wednesday, when they will have their annual outing at Tallulah Falls. Two special trains have been engaged and it is probable a third will be necessary.

The trains will leave the Terminal station at 8 and 8:15 o'clock, and will make stops all along the route.

A band will be taken along and there will be an all-day dance in the ballroom of the Cliff House.

Unusual plans for advertising the excursion were used Saturday night when a parade was made through the principal streets of the city by the members of the organization.

Prisoner's Pockets Filled With Cocaine

Handful of Revolver Cartridges and Probation Blanks Also Found on Young Man.

His pockets heavy with six boxes of cocaine and a handful of .44-caliber revolver cartridges, Ezra Brown, 23 years old, of No. 79 Poplar street, was arrested by Policemen Daly and Greer Saturday afternoon, on the charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct.

Further search of the young man revealed an envelope containing several official blanks of Probation Officer S. J. Coogler, showing that Brown already was on probation and that he had been given his last opportunity to be good.

Brown will be arraigned before the Recorder Monday afternoon.

Noted Soprano at Free Organ Concert

Miss Lena Conkling, of New York, Will Be Soloist at the Auditorium To-day.

Miss Lena Conkling, a brilliant concert soprano of New York City, who is visiting her sister, Mrs. J. Wade Conkling, in Atlanta, will be the soloist at the free organ concert this afternoon at the Auditorium-Armory. The concert will begin promptly at 4 o'clock.

Miss Conkling has won notable success in her art, and is popular with a wide circle of Atlanta people.

It is expected that one of the largest audiences of the season will be at the Auditorium this afternoon.

Victims Blame Car For Crash With Auto

Dr. W. T. Pace and Fred Reed, Hurt in Collision, Able to Leave Hospital.

Dr. W. T. Pace, of Smyrna, and his chauffeur, Fred Reed, who were painfully cut and bruised when a trolley car crashed into their machine near Carmichael curve Saturday morning, were able Saturday evening to leave the Atlanta Hospital.

Dr. Pace said the street car came upon them suddenly from around a curve. Street car officials assert that the chauffeur lost control of his machine and it stopped on the track in front of the street car.

SWIFT CLEARED BY JURY OF BAD MEAT CHARGE

Americus Investigators Return 'No Bill' Against Chicago Packers After Clean-Up Campaign.

AMERICUS, July 12.—Because there was insufficient evidence on which to base an indictment, the Sumter County Grand Jury, in special session, has returned a "no bill" against the local agent of Swift & Co., the big Chicago meat packers.

Charges were recently preferred against the agent of Swift & Co. by City Physician Chambliss and State Food Inspector Methvin, following a rigid inspection of meat markets, slaughter pens and grocery stores of Americus.

They condemned a quantity of meat and some live stock as being unfit. Some of the meat markets and slaughter pens were ordered closed and others were ordered cleaned and otherwise improved for the more sanitary handling of their wares.

Because of the large volume of business done by Swift & Co. in Americus and vicinity through the local distributing plant the impression prevailed that some of the tainted meat had been supplied by this concern. However, when the Grand Jury heard the evidence it was found that Swift & Co. had not either intentionally or unintentionally furnished such meat and the charges against the local agent were dismissed with a "no bill" indorsement by the Grand Jurors.

City Physician Chambliss is still active in his campaign against impure foods, having this week condemned a carload of watermelons, after several persons who had partaken of the fruit became ill. These were termed "bitter melons," the sale of which is prohibited by the State pure food laws. They came from a South Georgia truck farm.

LEMONS SIXTY CENTS A DOZEN; 10-YEAR MARK

Atlanta Housewives Astounded by Record Jump in Price—Likely to Go Higher.

Lemons are 60 cents a dozen.

Atlanta housewives who bought the fruit Saturday from local grocery stores were astonished.

The worst of it is that they may go still higher.

The present price of lemons is the highest in ten years. There are no lemons from California, and those from Sicily retail at 5 cents apiece. Atlanta produce men say that it is almost impossible to buy lemons at $9 per box, and that in the last week $10 has been the predominating wholesale price.

In May lemons sold for $5.75 per box and could be purchased at retail for 30 and 35 cents per dozen. On an average there are about 360 lemons in a box.

The high prices have made some of the importers rich this season.

INDICTMENT OF CONLEY PUZZLE FOR GRAND JURY

Old Police Reporter Declares True Bill Against Negro Might Alter Entire Frank Prosecution.

RULES OF EVIDENCE CITED

Mincey Affidavit May Have Important Bearing on Defense of Pencil Factory Manager.

By An Old Police Reporter.

Persistent rumors have been abroad of late that the present Grand Jury may indict James Conley for the murder of Mary Phagan.

This is interesting, for if the Grand Jury should indict Conley it would set up a situation immediately possible of most decided results.

Frank already has been indicted, for reasons presumably sufficient to the Grand Jury then acting upon his case.

Would the present Grand Jury be justified in proceeding to the indictment of Conley, notwithstanding the former Frank indictment?

Unquestionably it would, if the circumstances of the case warranted it—indeed, there are many who will think it should proceed to that, if in that way justice seemed more likely to be established.

In getting a point of view in this matter, I have found it necessary to go back to the beginning, and to ask myself this:

Would the Grand Jury, in possession of all the present facts and circumstances pointing toward either Conley or Frank as the guilty man, have indicted Frank or Conley, as a primary proposition?

Much Room for Speculation.

Readers who look upon this strange Phagan case largely as an abstract proposition will find much to speculate upon if they will shape their theorizing in that direction—retrospectively, as I have done.

Last Sunday I set forth eighteen circumstances tending, in my mind, to set forth the defense's likely attitude in suspicion of Conley.

He is admittedly an accessory after the fact of the murder. Shall he be held to be a principal to it?

That's a pretty puzzle—and it is not surprising that the Grand Jury is asking itself seriously which way it shall be answered.

Undoubtedly suspicion points toward Conley from many directions.

Suspicion, however, also points toward Frank.

Last Sunday I listed the suspicious circumstances in the case of Conley, and commented upon them, from the viewpoint of the defense.

What, then, are the suspicious circumstances against Frank?

They are three in number.

(1) Frank was in the factory at a time when the crime might have been committed.

(2) Frank let Newt Lee off for the afternoon of Saturday, April 26, which was contrary to his usual custom.

(3) Frank telephoned to the factory late Saturday afternoon, to inquire of Lee whether things were all right there, which also was contrary to his usual custom.

Are there any other really suspicious circumstances against Frank?

If so, a diligent search of the newspaper files fails to reveal them.

I do not know what, if anything, by way of circumstantial evidence against Frank may be held in reserve. Of Conley's statement I write further along.

The first suspicious circumstance against Frank seems to be admitted.

Day Was Legal Holiday.

The second is explained—though this explanation is not necessarily conclusive—that Saturday, April 26, was a legal holiday, and that all employees had been excused. That Lee should have been excused then was not, therefore, extraordinary.

The third suspicious circumstance the defense accounts for by the fact that just before Frank left for home Saturday afternoon a former employee of the factory, discharged in unpleasant circumstances, was in the factory, ostensibly to look up a pair of shoes, and that the Frank telephone message was sent to ascertain if he had departed, and things remained all right.

Street rumor had it for a time that Frank, immediately upon hearing of the killing of Mary Phagan, employed a lawyer and began to frame a defense; also that he employed a Pinkerton man to direct suspicion away from himself.

The undisputed facts, as revealed in a study of the newspaper files, however, show that Frank had no lawyer until Monday afternoon, after he had been "detained" at police headquarters, and that then his lawyer was sent to him rather than that he sent for his lawyer.

Frank was apprised of the killing of Mary Phagan early Sunday morning. He accompanied the police to the pencil factory at once, answering all questions propounded readily and unhesitatingly.

From there he went to the undertakers', where he promptly identified Mary Phagan as "a girl he had paid off about noon the day before."

After this, he remained with the police some time, then went home and spent a portion, at least, of Sunday afternoon with his people.

Monday morning he returned, as usual, to work in the pencil factory, whence he was summoned later to come to police headquarters.

When a newspaper extra was put upon the streets Monday saying that Leo Frank was "detained" at police headquarters, then, AND NOT UNTIL THEN, did Frank have a lawyer to look after him, and even then his lawyer was SENT to him by a business associate, without Frank's previous knowledge or consent.

Detective Sought Slayer.

It is not a fact, moreover, so far as the newspapers show, that Frank ever hired a Pinkerton, or any other sort of detective, but it seems that the directors of the pencil factory DID hire a detective—not at all in suspicion of Frank, however, but to help find the murderer of Mary Phagan, whoever it might be!"

Beyond the suspicion, therefore, that Frank "MIGHT" have killed Mary Phagan because he was in the factory at a time when the murder MIGHT have been consummated, and the fact of the Conley affidavits against him, what else remains?

It gets back where I left it last Sunday, to this:

Both the prosecution and the defence likely will have to rely upon Conley largely in trying the indictment against Frank.

If Conley's statement is made to "stand up" in court, it will be very damaging to Frank.

If it falls down, it will clear Frank, no doubt!

The present Grand Jury, however, in seeking to determine whether it ought to indict Conley NOW, will not consider, in all probability, the effect such an indictment might have upon the Frank case.

Of course, if the Mincey statement against Conley can be sustained by competent corroborative evidence—and it now is claimed that there are creditable witnesses ready to swear that Conley DID say the things to Mincey which the Mincey affidavit charges him with having said—the case against Conley immediately gets partly out of the circumstantial evidence catalogue, and Conley will stand face to face with the peril of DIRECT evidence.

If it can be shown to the Grand Jury that Conley did say to Mincey, in the manner Mincey says he said it, on the afternoon of the day Mary Phagan was killed, "I have killed one girl to-day, and do not wish to kill another," and that he was in a half-drunken stupor when he said it, that, in connection with the other evidence against Conley, unquestionably would seem to make it the present Grand Jury's positive DUTY to indict Conley, without further ado!

And particularly is this true if it can be shown that Mary Phagan's pay envelope was found near where Conley was sitting on the day the girl was killed.

Grand Jury Wants Justice.

The Grand Jury will be guided SOLELY, I think, however, by what seems the surer way to get at JUSTICE and the truth of Mary Phagan's death.

Since this case, whether it turns finally against Frank or Conley, will be controlled in large measure by the law of circumstantial evidence, and since there is much confusion in the public mind as to just what circumstantial evidence is, I looked up some law in the Georgia Supreme Court Reports Saturday, and I am sure it will help many of my readers in speculating upon the Phagan case to contemplate that law as I have done.

Section 984 of the Penal Code lays down this law:

"To warrant conviction on circumstantial evidence, the proved facts must not only be consistent with the hypothesis of guilt, but must exclude EVERY OTHER REASONABLE HYPOTHESIS save that of the GUILT of the accused."

In other words, the circumstantial evidence relied upon must prove the guilt of the accused to the EXCLUSION OF ANY OTHER CONCLUSION that might be reasonably reached from that evidence!

Verdicts of guilty under circumstantial evidence are arrived at, if arrived at legally, through a stern process of elimination.

The law is very jealous of its honor and complete integrity!

It will be observed, therefore, that there is a very great and grave difference between CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE and SUSPICIOUS CIRCUMSTANCES.

In this connection I find that no less eminent an authority than that wonderful jurist, Chief Justice Hiram Warner, grandfather of the present Mr. Justice Hiram Warner Hill, in the Fiftieth Georgia, Earp vs. the State, said:

"The law does not allow anyone to be convicted of ANY offense merely on a SUSPICION of his guilt!"

Simmons' Words Fit Case.

Further along I found, in the case of Williams vs. the State, 113 Georgia, some words from the pen of Chief Justice Simmons that fit strangely into the Phagan case in many ways.

Citing section 948 of the Criminal Code, heretofore laid down in this article, Chief Justice Simmons said:

"Under this rule, if the State relies upon circumstantial evidence, that evidence must be so strong as to exclude every other hypothesis SAVE that of guilt of the accused. IT MUST BE INCONSISTENT WITH HIS INNOCENCE.

"This court has ruled on several occasions that in cases involving life or liberty this rule MUST NOT BE RELAXED.

"When a heinous crime has been committed in a community, and the people are greatly shocked thereby, it is natural for them to catch at any little circumstance to throw suspicion upon SOME person and to conclude from this or that circumstance that he is the guilty party.

"The horror of the crime, and their desire as good citizens to see the guilty party punished and the law vindicated frequently lead them to premature judgment, which oftentimes follows them into the jury box, where, as jurymen, they not infrequently find persons guilty on BARE SUSPICION alone!"

Oh, rare Justice Simmons, whose clear-seeing eyes now have fallen on eternal sleep, did ever any man before or since his time make nobler or fairer plea for the majesty and the sanctity of impartial and just LAW than the plea contained in the foregoing prophetic words?

Excusing, ever extenuating, the proneness of the average citizen, shocked by horrible crime, to forget himself and form premature and ill-conceived opinions and judgments upon persons accused, he points them to the LAW, evolved by the Anglo-Saxon race of a thousand years of progress and civilization, as the sure arbiter of truth in the end.

Only Law Insures Decency.

How foolish it makes one feel to think of his prattlings and gabblings of the "law's delays and technicalities," when it so surely is a fact that through the orderly and dignified application of the law ALONE is decency and the right most certainly assured to the law-abiding and the just.

It has been eleven weeks since Mary Phagan was found dead in the basement of the National Pencil factory.

Much has been written and unwritten since then.

When Frank was indicted it was not even whispered that James Conley might have had a hand in the great murder mystery.

It was not known then that he even had been in the pencil factory on the day of the murder.

Suppose everything that is NOW known, both of Conley and Frank, had been laid before the Grand Jury that indicted Frank, would that Grand Jury still have indicted Frank in preference to Conley?

That is the puzzle the present Grand Jury has to consider—and it is the problem it is reported to be considering.

There stands the indictment of Leo Frank.

Is Frank guilty, as charged in that indictment?

I do not know. I can not possibly know.

As a rule, I have sought merely to set up possible situations, as the facts in the case against Frank seemed to develop large or small.

I have endeavored to avoid conclusions. The reader may form them or not, as he pleases.

Is James Conley, rather than Leo Frank, the real murderer of Mary Phagan? I do not know. I can not know.

Should Conley Be Indicted?

As between these two men, toward which does the finger of suspicion more surely SEEM to point?

If the Grand Jury has as much against Conley now as it had against Frank when Frank was indicted, should it indict Conley?

If it has more against Conley now than it did against Frank when it indicted Frank, should it now indict Conley?

If its first judgment against Frank seems now to have been premature, should it take counsel with itself and consider the wise words of Chief Justice Simmons set forth hereinbefore?

The case against Conley has developed slowly—from the first discovery of his untruthfulness as to whether he could write to the amazing Mincey disclosures of the past week.

Has it developed to the point where now the case against Conley is stronger than the case against Frank, or even as strong?

If so, what will the Grand Jury do with James Conley?

The Grand Jury alone is to answer that!

A CHIEF JUSTICE'S DECISION ON CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

The following is a decision by Chief Justice Simmons, in the 113 Georgia. He says:

"If the State relies upon circumstantial evidence, that evidence must be so strong as to exclude every other hypothesis save that of the guilt of the accused. IT MUST BE INCONSISTENT WITH HIS INNOCENCE. This rule must NOT be relaxed.

"When a heinous crime is committed in a community, and the people are greatly shocked thereby, it is natural for them to catch at any little circumstance to throw suspicion upon SOME person, and to conclude from this or that circumstance that he is the guilty party.

"The horror of the crime, and their desire as good citizens to see the guilty punished and the law vindicated, frequently leads them to PREMATURE JUDGMENT, which oftentimes follows them into the jury box, where as jurymen they not infrequently find persons guilty on BARE SUSPICION alone!"

BOY'S ARM BROKEN AS CYCLE RUNS INTO CAR

Attempting to cross South Broad street near Hunter Saturday on a bicycle, 12-year-old Samuel Griggs, 72 Roy street, became confused when he saw a street car bearing down upon him and ran squarely into the car. The boy's right arm was broken.

He fell almost beneath the wheels of the car. An ambulance was called and the boy was rushed at once to the hospital.

NEGRO ASSERTS HE SAW ATTACK ON PHAGAN GIRL

Fugitive, Reported Trapped in Birmingham, Lays Crime to Drunken Black Man.

correspondent in Cairo, Ill., wired that Green had been seen in that city by negroes, but that he had duplicated his former performance by disappearing before he could be apprehended.

Down in Kentucky the negro made his way, the detectives close on his heels. The trail grew warmer in Tennessee and finally led into Alabama. The detectives believe they reached Birmingham on the train behind Green, and that they have him trapped in the city.

One report to The American was that Green was actually in the custody of the detectives, who were awaiting instructions from Atlanta.

Attorneys for Leo Frank denied Saturday night that they had received word of the capture of Green, but admitted that they had been advised that the negro had been trailed to Birmingham. They declined to say what dependence they would place in the negro's story until they had interviewed him personally.

They said that the negro had been trailed on the representation that his testimony would be of the utmost value, but they refused to vouch for it before reviewing it thoroughly on their own account.

Says Women Heard Confession.

Saturday's other important development was the statement of Attorney J. H. Leavitt that several negro women heard Jim Conley make his alleged angry boast to William H. Mincey, the insurance agent, that "he had killed a girl to-day, and didn't want to kill nobody else."

Attorney Leavitt indicated that the defense will be able to call these women at the trial of Frank to support Mincey's affidavit and testimony as to the conversation of Conley on the afternoon of the crime.

By an agreement between Solicitor Dorsey and Graham & Chappell, attorneys for Newt Lee, who has been held in jail technically as a "suspect" but actually as a material witness in the Phagan mystery, the habeas corpus proceedings brought in behalf of the negro were dropped.

Solicitor Dorsey promised to take steps which would give Lee his rightful status as a material witness, and Sheriff Mangum advised the court that he would give Lee all the freedom to which a material witness in custody is entitled.

New York Fat Man Enjoys Georgia Heat

356-Pounder Goes About Smiling Sympathetically at Discomforts of Others.

SAVANNAH, July 12.—It is not unusual for thin and middleweight persons to withstand the heat sturdily, but when a man who tips the scales at nearly 400 pounds goes through a Georgia July day smilingly, it is time for the others to freeze up.

Frank Giles, of New York, who is in Savannah with a crew of salesmen, representing a Northern match company, is just now Savannah's biggest man. He balances the scales at 356 pounds. He is 5 feet 10 inches tall, and has a waist measurement of 58 inches. No matter how hot it is he just smiles.

SAVANNAH TO PUBLISH ALL PURE FOOD ARRESTS

SAVANNAH, July 12.—That publicity is the cure for many public ills is the sincere conviction of Alderman John W. Daniel, chairman of the Health Committee of City Council. Where unsound foodstuffs are condemned in the future Alderman Daniel proposes to make public the fact, giving the names of the offending firms and the circumstances under which the city has made seizures. It has been the custom heretofore to condemn and say nothing about the matter.

He is also president of the Southern Automatic Telephone and Telegraph Company. Jackson and Nashville are two Southern cities that already have the system.

SAVANNAH MASONIC LODGE GIVES JEWEL TO STOVALL

SAVANNAH, July 12.—In the nature of a farewell was the presentation by Zerubbabel Masonic Lodge of a past-master's jewel to Pleasant A. Stovall, who is soon to leave for Switzerland to assume his duties as American Minister in that country. W. B. Stubbs made the presentation address and Colonel Stovall made a fitting reply. The presentation was a special feature of a regular meeting this week.

JOE BROWN DENOUNCED BY UNIONS IN SCATHING REPLY TO LEGISLATIVE MESSAGE

Former Governor Is Declared To Be Trying to Array Country Against City for His Own Political End in Statement of Federation of Trades.

The Georgia Federation of Labor is out in a statement "To the Public," in which it bitterly condemns former Governor Joseph M. Brown for a speech he delivered last year and for his recent message to the General Assembly. Both utterances of the Governor had blamed striking employees of the Georgia Railroad Company and of the Augusta street car system for acts of disorder, and the first utterance, the Augusta speech of October 30, 1912, voiced the Governor's intention to deal summarily, through an exercise of military power, with offending strikers of the future.

To-day's statement of the labor unions, which was authorized at the recent convention of union men, charges Governor Brown with political insincerity in his declarations, in that he attempted, it is said, to array the country voters against the workingmen of the city; charges him with prejudices favorable to the railroads, and with partial responsibility for the death of several persons who were shot by troops in Augusta during the strike there. The charge of the labor men is that the action of the troops was without legal basis.

Question Legality of Act.

The statement was prepared by an empowered committee, consisting of Jerome Jones, editor of The Journal of Labor; W. C. Puckett, third vice president of the State Federation, and Louie P. Marquardt, labor organizer for Atlanta. The three called to their aid C. T. Ladson, attorney for the State Federation, for the discussion of the legality of the act of 1912, under which the troops were rushed to Augusta. The statement, in part, follows:

To the Public:

The speech delivered by the then Governor, Joseph M. Brown, on October 29, 1912, at a banquet given by his military staff, entitled, "The Supremacy of the Law," was full of venom and misstatements of facts concerning the recent Georgia Railroad strike and the previous street car strike at Augusta, and particularly directed against organized labor.

In his message to the General Assembly last week the Governor rehashed his diatribe against organized labor.

That he, in such a speech, attempted to array the country voter against the town and city voter is demonstrably true. A more cruel yet clumsy effort to arouse the prejudices of the rural voter against his brothers who toil upon the railroads, in factories and in workshops has never been exhibited.

While parts of his flamboyant address breathed noble platitudinal sentiments, other parts were filled with anarchistic, inflammatory utterances, with a decided tendency to subvert law and order.

Charge Political Purpose.

The Governor took as his text the then recent strike upon the Georgia Railroad. The strike had been virtually settled by arbitration, and it seems the Governor wanted to notify, all and singular, the union railway employees of Georgia that he, Joseph Mackey Brown, would not stand for any more strikes upon the railroads of the State; and, as we have calmly stated above, he seems to have used this subject as a pretext to array the country against the town, for selfish political ends.

A conductor and a flagman had been discharged. These men belonged to their respective railway brotherhoods. Both had served as members of the local brotherhood's grievance committees. As members of such grievance committees they were, at times, compelled to appear before Superintendent Brand in the discharge of their duties to the brotherhood, to protect the rights of their fellow members. And the sequel proved they incurred the enmity of Mr. Brand.

For a period of nearly four months the representatives of the men vainly sought to have this injustice redressed, without result. Often their efforts to obtain interviews with President Scott and Superintendent Brand were brusquely refused and repulsed.

"Why did not Governor Brown tell all the facts? Does he not know that the executive officers of these great railway brotherhoods are men of considerable intelligence, wide experience, much administrative skill, and, as was shown in this identical case, of a long-suffering patience?

"For four long months they tried their level best to get these Georgia Railroad officials to reinstate these wrongfully discharged men. And the sequel proved that the men were wrongfully discharged, for when the board of arbitration, under the Federal Erdman Act, came to pass judgment in the premises they ordered the restoration of these men, with payment of back wages.

"Does not Governor Brown know that the executive officers of railway and other labor organizations, as a general rule, only resort to strikes as a last resort? That they recognize strikes as costly things, not only to the railroads, but to their members? And that they recognize, also, that the general public, at times, is involved—made to suffer inconvenience and damage? And does he not know that before they order or concur in a strike, they must be sure that their cause of quarrel is just? That to succeed they must be entitled to and have the sympathy of the public?

The Governor further said: "The management hired other men and attempted to operate some of the trains. These men were beset by mobs who made themselves the fighting partners of the strikers at the terminal stations and at some local points, and were violently beaten or otherwise driven from service." And he goes on to say that 400,000 citizens of Georgia, wholly or partly dependent upon this road for travel or supplies, were curbed and hampered by this strike.

Strikers Not In Disorder.

Now, let us analyze this statement of the Governor. He admits (which was the truth) that the disorders were caused by the members of the general public, "the fighting partners" of the striking employees, and not by the employees themselves.

In point of fact, as the Governor was compelled thus to admit, the strikers themselves remained aloof, and did not participate in any of the disorders. Such disorders as occurred (and the Governor grossly exaggerates them) were committed by the general public, part of those 400,000 citizens affected, as the Governor says, by this strike.

Queer, you say? Not at all, once the facts are rightly understood. These railway employees live along the line of the Georgia Railroad and at its terminals. They are a pretty good lot of citizens, manly, husky fellows, who are engaged in a pitilessly dangerous vocation. The percentage of deaths and injuries which comes to the railroad employees is pathetically large. No army with banners loses a greater percentage of its men in battle than does this army of railroad employees annually place upon the altar of progress and civilization.

And so, when these neighbors and friends learned through the daily press of the contemptible tactics of the officers of the Georgia Railroad in tyrannously and unjustly discharging these faithful servants, their gorge rose, they got mad through and through, and they showed their anger at times in rather unmistakable manner to the Hessian strike-breakers imported from the "pig alleys" and other vile purlieus of the large cities of the East, to take the jobs of the striking employees.

Just Human Nature.

Something rough about this? Deplorable? Granted. But it is shot through and through with human nature, human nature as it is, the Pecksniffs and Chadbrands to the contrary, notwithstanding, and human nature as it is likely to remain for many generations yet to come!

When the strike was first ordered, the men in the Joint Terminals yards, it is true, went out, too, under a misapprehension, they believing that the Joint Terminals Company was one and the same with the Georgia Railroad Company; they believed but one contract covered the Georgia Railroad and the Joint Terminals, as both concerns were apparently run under the same management.

As the strike on the Georgia Railroad progressed, Murdock and Gregg discovered that the other big trunk lines were violating their contract of neutrality whereby they had "bound themselves in law and in honor," and, of course, they were properly notified that unless they complied with such solemn contract that their men, too, would be ordered out. It was at this juncture that the whole strike was brought to a close, the employees being amply vindicated by the findings of the United States Arbitration Board.

Sees Only Railroad's Side.

Why, we ask, did not the Governor state these facts? In the wrongful discharge of the conductor and flagman by the Georgia Railroad, which eventually caused the strike, the Governor sees only the railroad's side of the controversy, and he utterly ignores the just position and contentions of the striking employees.

We have, with deep sincerity, asked the question, Was the Governor actuated by political motives in this whole affair?

But just here it may be as well to refer to Governor Brown's antecedents and see if therefrom he has any undue bias in favor of railroad companies.

Barring his political jobs, the only work he has done in the last 25 years has been as a railroad official. Perhaps, ordinarily, that might account for his excessive zeal in standing by, and for, the railroad companies, right or wrong.

The Governor's main contention is that railroad employees have no legal right to "strike."

The United States Supreme Court, and nearly every other court of last resort in the several States (including Georgia, of course), has repeatedly held that railroad and other employees have a right to "strike," notwithstanding inconvenience and damage may sometimes result to the general public therefrom.

Everybody but Governor Brown knows that for these two wrongfully discharged men to have taken the Georgia Railroad into the courts for legal redress would have been the merest child's play.

And remember, the lawmaking bodies of the land, in such arbitration acts, recognizing, we say, the impracticability of resorting to the ordinary forms of litigation, have themselves provided a more effective method.

These striking Georgia Railroad employees promptly offered to submit the justice of their claims to the Federal Board of Arbitration, and for months the railroad refused to agree thereto. Therefore, by every token of law and logic, it was the Georgia Railroad which flouted the only effective tribunal set up by the lawmakers, and not the men.

Railroad Acted Anarchist.

According to Governor Brown's reasoning, it was the railroad which acted the anarchist by refusing to place itself under the impartial arbitration of Government officials; and it was the railroad which was responsible for the continuation of the strike.

Therefore, what becomes of all the Governor's hectoring and denunciation of the striking employees? Indeed, obsessed with his crazy desire to subvert the civil authorities with the military, he unblushingly declares that "if such an emergency comes again during this administration, the State will not await the slow process of arbitration, but will promptly meet the issue tendered her, and enforce her laws."

The Governor does not know that labor organizations have obtained better wages for their members, and as a corollary, for non-union laborers as well, for he bitterly but disingenuously rails at them therefore. In reprehensible fashion he tries to arouse the prejudices of the farmers against the urban working men and women.

Does not this would-be protagonist of the farmers know that the farmers themselves have formed splendid unions to help get just pay for their labor, in better and fairer prices for their farm products?

As we have said before, these railroad men risk their lives with every turn of the wheels. They are charged with heavy responsibilities of human life, and with the safekeeping and conduct of millions of dollars of the property of their employers, and they do not receive more than they are entitled to, and this contention of the Governor is utter claptrap, grossly unjust, wholly stupid, and made, we are forced to believe, to get the farmers' vote.

The Governor, being of archaic mental make-up, erroneously conceives that by reason of occasional strike disturbances (and strikes are mighty rare in Georgia) there is a lot of prejudice in the minds of some people against labor unions, and so having alienated the labor unionists and thinking that there were only 12,000 possible antagonistic votes as against 370,000 other votes in the State (though he may find his figures grossly in error so far as the number of union laborers is concerned, there being, in point of fact, more than five times as many labor union men than his guess would indicate), he conceives the occasion of the military banquet, and the subject of the Georgia railroad strike, a fitting time and place to make a grandstand assault upon organized labor, and tell 270,000 farmers that they were being grievously outraged because they did not earn as much money on their farms as these pesky conductors earned in their vocation, and that the poor farmer was in danger of becoming a serf to the aristocracy of union labor."

Here is a man clamoring for the "supremacy of the law," and yet he says that if another strike is brought about, and a railroad is tied up, then, ye gods! the people will rise in their anarchistic wrath and burn the homes of the strikers and their families will be scorched by the flames, and perchance these 7,000 wicked and desperate railroad employees would likely be hanged to 7,000 lampposts!

What is this but a crazy incitement to murder?

Governor Brown concludes his speech by extolling the action of the militia in killing three non-offending citizens of Augusta during the street car strike, a short time previously. But as surely as God lives, the militia, who ruthlessly and unlawfully shot these innocent victims down in cold blood, are guilty of manslaughter.

These people were not connected with the strike. They were simply going along the public streets, wholly ignorant that the military had established an imaginary, or unmarked, "dead line." There was nothing of a physical nature to show that any such "dead line" had been ordered or fixed, and no previous warning was given them, or known command given to halt.

Nothing in this whole wretched speech shows more convincingly Governor Brown's true bent of mind than this laudation of "half-cocked," irresponsible militia. Governor Brown is another Glasscock of West Virginia, types of men who would violate Federal and State Constitutions by exalting the military above the civil powers. He would substitute military rule for civil government, running ruthlessly counter to the very spirit and letter of republican institutions.

Legislation Is Dangerous.

The act of 1912 is the most insidiously dangerous piece of legislation ever enacted in Georgia. The first bloody fruits of such legislation were made terribly manifest at Augusta. What locality will suffer next?

The Augusta massacre should be investigated by a legislative committee.

The workingmen, particularly of the South, being "to the manner born," object to having their labor regulated by bullets and bayonets, as did their fathers powerfully revolt against Federal bayonets and bullets, regulating their ballots during Reconstruction days.

We of the South, laborers and capitalists alike, and other classes of citizens, are of good old American stock, a homogeneous people, songs of Revolutionary sires, people who won't submit to military ascendency over the civil authorities.

In conclusion, we beg to say that while organized labor has its faults (what institution or organization has not?) it is the only practical method yet devised by man which measurably protects and uplifts the working clases, and until some better plan be devised it will continue to be the greatest power for good to the toilers of the civilized world.

And it has no apologies to make to the Browns, and Posts, and Kirbys and Parrys, and others who let their spleen becloud their judgments and embitter their hearts.

LEAVES SOCIETY FOR STAGE.- Miss Rosa Coates, of Mobile, whose wonderful dancing attracted the attention of Harrison Grey Fiske. She leaves soon to start rehearsals in Otis Skinner's production of "Kismet."

Miss Coates is well known and popular in social circle of Atlanta.

DIXIE SOCIETY GIRL BECOMES FANCY DANCER

Miss Rosa Coates, of Mobile, Well Known in Atlanta, Accepts Offer of Fiske.

Miss Rosa Coates, a girl whose friends in Atlanta are numerous, awoke the other day to find her feet set well upon the path that leads to theatrical success, as if directed by a fairy godmother.

Startled, she looked at an alluring contract that Harrison Grey Fiske, the famous theatrical producer, waved before her. She rubbed her eyes and looked again, as she said in writing to friends in Atlanta. Here was an offer for her to appear next season with Otis Skinner in the leading dancing roles of "Kismet," the wonderful play of last season.

Nobody else was surprised. In Mobile, in Atlanta, where she often has visited Mrs. H. Clay Moore; in New York City, where she has studied her art for several years, her friends nodded in a way to show that they had been expecting it all the time.

Confers With Fiske.

And so Miss Coates signed the contract, although she had never contemplated a professional stage career. Today she and her mother are back in Mobile after a trip to New York for a conference with Mr. Fiske.

Atlanta knows Miss Coates well for her part in the Kirmess of several years ago, and for her dancing exhibitions upon the occasion of several society functions. She has appeared here as a pupil of the celebrated dancing master, Agostini.

Atlanta knows her also as the charming honor guest at a number of society functions.

Miss Coates, according to Mrs. H. C. Moore, has never cherished the ambition of a professional career as a dancer, although she possesses remarkable ability, and has been recognized as an artist since her childhood.

Harrison Grey Fiske, according to the romantic story of the girl's leap to success, had watched Miss Coates in her work with her teacher in New York. He was impressed with her grace and with the intellectual quality of her art. Dancing with this Southern girl is even more than a matter of rhythm and grace. Dancing with her, as with the true artist, is a function of the mind and of the emotions. Mr. Fiske saw that, even when Miss Coates was not aware that he saw her at all. Then came his offer.

Will Be Leading Dancer.

According to the contract, as letters to Atlanta outline the terms, Miss Coates will take the leading dancing part, and also will serve as understudy to the leading lady, Miss Maddern, who is a cousin of Mrs. Fiske. Upon the suggestion of Mr. Fiske, Miss Coates will go to New York some time earlier than is necessary for actual rehearsals to start, that she may receive instruction in the dramatic technique of the play.

The first performance of "Kismet" will be given in Brooklyn September 15, and the season's engagement will include all the principal cities, including Atlanta.

GIRLS WILL GIVE FUND TO PROVIDE MILK FOR BABIES

Club Offers to Aid Mothers' Congress in Campaign to Save Poor Infants.

A fresh impetus was given to the "milk for poor babies" movement, inaugurated by the Atlanta Mothers' Congress Saturday afternoon when a young girls' club joined the ranks of those who are fighting for the lives of the poor children of Atlanta. A committee from the club, which is composed of girls between the ages of 15 and 20, appeared before the milk committee of the congress, and asked that the club be allowed to care for one little child during the summer.

The plans of the young girls are to supply the baby with milk, clothing, medical attendance and everything necessary to preserve the life of the little one and make it happy and contented during the hot summer. The recruiting of the young girls into the ranks of the workers is one of the most potent things that has occurred during the campaign, and the Mothers' Congress expect that it will serve as an example to other organizations and that they will contribute a sum to the care of the poor babies.

A downtown men's club has donated $25 to the milk fund, and the amounts dropped in the milk bottles in the downtown stores are increasing every day. The milk bottle plan offers an opportunity to those who are unable to make a large contribution. Any amount, however small, is welcome, and will contribute largely to the saving of the lives of those who in time will become citizens of Atlanta. It is virtually up to the citizens of Atlanta whether they live, through this summer at least, or whether they die in their poverty-stricken homes. A dollar would not be missed by the vast majority of Atlanta citizens—and placed in the hands of the Mothers' Congress it may save a human life.

All contributions should be sent to Mrs. John Rowlett, president of the congress, at No. 186 East Pine street.

Bacon and Bartlett Likely to Duplicate Smith and Bell Row

Postoffice at Macon Bone of Contention Between Senator and Sixth District Congressman.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—A conflict of authority which may cause a break between Representative Bartlett, of the Sixth Georgia District, and Senator Bacon, similar to the break that has occurred between Representative Bell, of the Ninth District, and Senator Hoke Smith, over the Gainesville postoffice, is likely to occur in the near future over the office at Macon.

Senator Bacon has recommended to the Postoffice Department that Custis Nottingham be appointed to succeed Harry Stillwell Edwards, whose resignation as postmaster at Macon has been requested by the Postmaster General. Representative Barlett has recommended William T. Morgan, bank president and druggist of Macon, for the office.

When the request was sent to Edwards for his resignation the Postoffice Department wrote to Bartlett asking him to recommend someone for the place, forgetting that Macon is Senator Bacon's home city, where, according to the unwritten law of Federal patronage, he should dictate appointments. In answer to the letter Bartlett named Morgan. In some way the information came to Senator Bacon, and he hastened to submit the name of Nottingham, insisting on his right to choose the new postmaster.

Postmaster General Burleson is now trying to extricate himself from a delicate situation.

H. A. CAMP, OF GRANTVILLE, DIES AFTER BRIEF ILLNESS

H. Abner Camp, a resident of Grantville, Ga., died in Atlanta Saturday after a two weeks' illness from acute kirdney trouble. He was brought to Atlanta for treatment Friday afternoon, at a time when his condition was considered critical.

The body was taken to Grantville, where the funeral will take place Sunday, interment to be in Newnan. Mr. Camp was thirty-nine years old, and married.

RETAIL MERCHANTS EXPECT GREAT THRONG FOR MEETING

Representatives of the Georgia Retail Merchants' Association, which will hold its annual convention in Atlanta July 21, 22 and 23, are in the city making arrangements for the accommodation of the thousands of visitors who will be here for the gathering. Convention headquarters will be at the Hotel Ansley.

SENATOR SMITH DENIES 'SECRET POWER' CHARGE

No Conspiracy Against the Anti-Smith-Wilson Men, He Replies to Congressman Bell.

COULD NOT ASSIST HARDY

Policy Is to Repay as Far as Possible Political Obligations He Owes, Says Georgia Man.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Senator Hoke Smith, of Georgia, to-day replied to the charge made by Representative Thomas M. Bell, of the Ninth District, that there is an "invisible, secret influence" operating to exclude anti-Smith-Wilson men from appointments in Georgia. Bell issued a statement Thursday accusing Senator Smith of defeating the appointment of his nominee, A. S. Hardy, for postmaster at Gainesville, Ga., to succeed Mrs. Helen D. Longstreet. Mrs. H. W. J. Ham was appointed.

Senator Smith said:

"As I understand the publication by Congressman Bell, he complains because I did not aid him to secure the position of postmaster at Gainesville for a gentleman who had bitterly opposed me in every political contest I ever have had.

"Congressman Bell urged that I should help him, because this indorsement was opposed by an outside party who had interest in the Gainesville office and who I understood had always opposed me.

Too Much to Ask.

"I told Mr. Bell that I would vote for the confirmation as postmaster at Gainesville of anyone whose name was sent to the Senate. It was entirely too much for him to ask that I should aid Mr. Hardy in obtaining the appointment, especially since in the interest of harmony I had declined to interfere in the behalf of my own friends in this very matter.

"In this connection I wish to state that it has been my policy wherever I made a recommendation at all in reference to appointments in Georgia to secure efficient service for the Government and at the same time to repay as far as possible the political obligations I owe to my friends. Surely no Congressman can complain of this. It is a rule they all adopt and is one that properly suggests itself to every man with a spark of gratitude in him.

No Cabal Exists.

"I have endeavored at all times to recognize the rights and obligations of my colleagues in both Houses. There has been absolutely no disposition or purpose here, so far as I know, on the part of anyone to exclude from recognition those Georgia Democrats who saw fit to oppose the President in the recent primary in an honorable and proper manner, and any statement to the contrary is entirely unfounded.

"I have, however, insisted, and shall continue to insist, that nowhere in Georgia will men be discriminated against because they have been supporters of the President or of myself, and I think it but my simple duty to see that they have a fair and just proportion of the appointments."

State Meeting on W. & A. Road Planned

Secretary Cooper Sends Letter to Commercial Bodies of Georgia Proposing a Convention.

A letter requesting comment on the proposition to call a State convention to discuss the future of the Western and Atlantic Railroad, the States property, is being mailed to presidents of commercial organizations throughout the State by Secretary Cooper, of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

The action is based on the belief that there should be some general discussion participated in by the citizens of the State, with a view to getting the sentiment of the people of Georgia before any definite action regarding its disposal is taken by the Legislature.

BUYS CAPE FLORIDA AS HOME FOR MILLIONAIRES

MIAMI, July 12.—William Deering, of the International Harvester Company, to-day bought Cape Florida, consisting of 1,200 acres and including historic Cape Florida lighthouse, now abandoned. He proposes to spend $1,000,000 in improvements, making the cape an ideal summer resort and winter homesite for Northern millionaires.

FUNERAL NOTICE.

SPRINGER—The friends of Mr. and Mrs. A. Springer, Misses Bettie, Fannie and Sarah Springer, Drs. Max and Nathan Springer, Mr. Moss Springer, Mr. and Mrs. I. Springer, Mr. L. W. Springer and Mr. and Mrs. D. Zaban are invited to attend the funeral of Mr. A. Springer this afternoon at 3 o'clock from the residence, 295 South Pryor St. Interment at Oakland. The pallbearers are requested to meet at Greenberg & Bond Co. at 2:30 p. m.

A special communication of Fulton Lodge No. 216, Free and Accepted Masons, will be held in the Masonic Temple on this Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock sharp, for the purpose of paying our last sad tribute of respect to our deceased brother, A. Springer.

Funeral will be held from the residence, 295 South Pryor Street, at 2:30 p. m., and interment will be at Oakland Cemetery. Brethren of sister lodges as well as of Fulton Lodge, are requested to attend.

By order of
SAMUEL A. BOORSTIN,
Worshipful Master.

Secretary.

'Hello Girls' in Camp Forget Switchboard Worries

Novel Vacation Is Provided Atlanta Operators

Housewarming at Wyanone Marked by Music, Bathing, Dancing and Real Outdoor Eating.

A mosquito-proof, insecticided, music-fed camp, so snug and luxurious that the campers find "roughing it" an existence altogether to be desired, is Camp Wyanoke. It is pitched on a wooded hill at one side of the Jonesboro Road, about seven miles from Atlanta, and the campers are girls from the switchboards and offices of the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Telephone girls in camp. At the top is Miss Rosa Kessner. At the left is Miss Agnes Bell wading, while Miss Louie Shields is making her morning ablutions.

Wyanoke means "contentment and rest." Camp Wyanoke has a laundry, a seamstress, a cook, lights, water connections, a swimming pool and shower bath, not to speak of a piano-player and a dance pavilion. And if one overlooks such minor inconveniences as sunburn, scratches from the blackberry bushes, or stonebruises that come from too often wading in the creek near by, then there is nothing that will mar Camp Wyanoke's title as a perfect living place.

Camp Opens Last Week.

Last week Camp Wyanoke was opened. It was a week of starry nights, and of a sun that was tonic with all its heat. Consequently the girl who answered your call so lightly, and who was so patient when you grew excited over the wrong number or no answer, most likely was finding that life was more worth living after a day or a night outdoors, and that paddling in the creek or the swimming pool, or picking blackberries or fishing sent the headache scurrying much more effectively than picture shows or the soda fountain might.

Every night last week, even before the camp was well completed, the sleeping quarters were crowded, and the cots were filled by girls who made their way to the camp as soon as work was over, and who came to work early the next morning, fresher and brighter. Camp fires, meals served in the open, dancing after supper and before breakfast—for a piano-player never sleeps and never tires—had given them an experience that was novel.

Saturday afternoon came the camp's real house warming, although the place had been christened by a dance Wednesday night, and utilized by the sleepers and a few all-day visitors during the week. But Saturday afternoon the telephone girls began early to swarm out to Wyanoke, eager for the night outdoors, and for the long day of "contentment and rest" that Sunday promised. Quarters that are available for 25 girls were crowded beyond capacity, and none of those who petitioned "Miss Katie" to allow them to stay all night were turned away.

Miss Tatum Conceives Idea.

"Miss Katie" is Miss Katherine C. Tatum, chief of the stenographic bureau of the telephone company, who conceived the camp and started to work out her conception before the company came to her aid with money and encouragement. She is the beloved boss of the camp. Much of last week she spent at the camp site, superintending the construction of the quarters and laying plans toward the greatest summer that the telephone girls of Atlanta collectively ever have spent.

The camp represents an expense of more than $1,000, almost all of which was borne by the company. A natural swimming pool, into which a spring flows, has been made larger and reinforced by concrete sides. It is deep, always fresh, and larger than any other artificial pool about Atlanta.

Electric lights have been installed in the camp, arrangements made to pump the water from the spring into a number of shower baths, floored tents have been erected for sleeping, cooking, eating, living—which means loafing—and dancing, and every convenience installed.

Vacation Is Economical.

The purpose of the camp, as conceived, is to furnish the telephone girls a means of recreation during the hot months and to give to those who desire it a spot where an economical and altogether desirable vacation can be spent.

The camp is spread in a wooded plat of about twenty acres on the farm of D. B. Jackson, who is connected with the telephone company. Hearing of Miss Tatum's plans, he volunteered the loan of the camp site.

The camp is well protected. Fifty girls together—the camp will be made to accommodate that many in its sleeping quarters—are protection enough in themselves, but besides their own numbers will be county policemen, who have promised, for the sake of the nervous ones, to keep a vigilant eye over Camp Wyanoke.

Sunday will be a typical camp day. Here is Miss Tatum's plan for the day: Early rising and time for wading or swimming for those whose inclinations are cast in those directions; later, breakfast and Sunday school services, led by Dr. A. R. Holderby, of the Moore Memorial Church. After that the day will be given over to the girls, with probably a period named for vesper services late in the afternoon.

Frequent Dances Planned.

Frequent dances and camp-fire parties are being planned for the entertainment of the girls, and arrangements for a candlelight pageant are being revolved in Miss Tatum's mind.

An automobile 'bus will be established on Jonesboro Road, to run to the camp from the end of the Lakewood car line, which goes to a spot within two miles of Wyanoke.

The camp has a telephone—Main 4434—for the benefit of everybody concerned, including possibly a male person or two whom a girl or two might find it hard to leave alone, seven miles away, without some connection.

And the camp is altogether a desirable girls' camp, because boys are not barred from entrance. Every party that is planned will be for the girls and their boys together.

Slayer's Fate With Jury a Second Time

William J. Brown, of Mobile, Once Sentenced to Hang, Has Another Trial.

MOBILE, ALA., July 12.—The case of William J. Brown, who on July 16, 1912, shot and killed Alfred Percy in Oakdale, went to the jury to-night after a sensational trial lasting two days, in which the defense introduced testimony showing the relations of Percy with Mrs. Browna nd insanity on the part of the defendant.

Douglass Jarvis, a witness for the defense, was locked up in a jury room for talking about the case in the witness room. Ida Creel was brought into court to testify as to the character of Mrs. Brown. Evidence was introduced to-night showing that a witness for the defense was threatened with death for herself and her child if she testified for Brown.

Brown was once sentenced to hang for the crime, but got a new trial.

PARSON JAILED WITH WIFE OF PARISHIONER

Elopers Caught in Marked Tree, Ark., and Taken Back to Cartersville by Sheriff.

CARTERSVILLE, July 12.—Rev. John Wheeler and Mrs. Mattie Lee Porter, an eloping couple, now occupy cells in the Bartow County Jail, Sheriff Charlie Smith returning from Cotton Plant, Ark., with them Thursday afternoon.

At Christmastide last year Rev. Mr. Wheeler, leaving his wife and several children, and Mrs. Porter, leaving her husband and one child, eloped, and the officers have been in pursuit.

They both lived in the little community of Sugar Valley, just a few miles from Cartersville, and the intimacy between the two was not known until they ran away. The Grand Jury at the January term of Superior Court found true bills against each.

Rev. Mr. Wheeler is 51 years old, and for about 25 years has resided in this county. He worked as a machinist at Cotton Plant, which was his old trade. Prior to his elopement he filled engagements nearly every Sunday in many country communities.

Mrs. Porter is about 25 years old and her husband was a respected citizen of Sugar Valley. She is the mother of several small children and brought back with her a baby about four months old.

Big City Pump To Be Ready in Six Weeks

Bode Smith Says Machinery at River Will Be Supplying City Water in That Time.

Barring accidents, the repairs on the big Fice pump at the river waterworks station will be completed within six weeks, the time allowed for th work, accordir o an estimate made Saturday afternoon by Zode Smith, general manager of the waterworks.

Two small pumps, with a combined capacity of 18,000,000 gallons every 24 hours, are now doing the work formerly handled by the big pump, and while they are in good condition are not quite big enough to supply the normal demand of the city for water. Citizens, therefore, are asked to economize and use no more water than they need.

City's Milk Supply Subject of Meeting

Runaway Girl Sent Home by Policemen

Gainesville Lass Gets Off Train in Atlanta Only to Fall in Arms of Law.

When little Miss Ida Lou Reilly stepped from the 8:30 Gainesville train at the Terminal Station Saturday night she ran into the arms of Policemen Hughes and Fortsom.

She had run away from her aunt, Mrs. J. R. Harwell, in Gainesville, just to be met by two big, burly policemen and be sent straight back as soon as the next train departed.

Her parents live in Atlanta, but have separated, and her mother has married again. The little girl wanted to see her mother, but later yielded to superior numbers and consented to return to Gainesville.

PLANS MILITIA COMPANY OF JEWISH YOUNG MEN

JACKSONVILLE, July 12.—Lewis Landes, a young attorney, who recently removed to this city from Key West, is planning to organize a company of the National Guard to be composed entirely of Jewish young men. He expects next week to make application to the authorities in Tallahassee for permission to organize his company, of which he will probably become captain.

Herbert Myrick to Address Lawmakers

Editor of Orange Judd Farm Papers Invited to Speak Before Legislature July 15.

Herbert Myrick, of Springfield, Mass., president and editor-in-chief of the Orange Judd Company, publishers of seven agricultural papers, will address a joint session of the Georgia Senate and House Tuesday, July 15, at noon, his subject being, "Co-operative Finance and Rural Credits in the Cotton Belt."

Mr. Myrick will come by special invitation of the Georgia lawmakers. He has for several years made annual visits to Germany and other European countries to investigate the co-operative banking systems so successfully carried out abroad, and he is applying these methods, together with his own ideas, to financial matters on the farm in this country.

VALDOSTA MAN TOURS STATE ON MOTORCYCLE

MACON, July 12.—W. H. Spillers, a young business man of Valdosta, is making a tour of the State on a motorcycle, following the roads that were traversed in the round-the-State auto tours. While in Macon to-day he called upon his brother-in-law, A. B. Allen.

Dr. Frank Edmondson

of 11 North Broad St.

In the twenty-five years that I have been in the drug business I have never sold a remedy that gave such universal satisfaction as Nuxcara for indigestion and dyspepsia. We have had an immense sale of it, and have never had a dissatisfied customer. It cures in every case, and everyone who has used it speaks of it in the highest terms. I have taken it myself, with the most pleasing results, and can heartily recommend it to be all that is claimed for it.

MORE EVIDENCE IN THE CASE.

We claim that Nuxcara is the only remedy known to the world that is a positive, certain and speedy remedy that never fails in indigestion, dyspepsia and catarrh, and we prove this assertion by hundreds of high-class, successful business men, who speak from experience. We challenge the world to produce these endorsements. We challenge the world to approach one of these gentlemen and ask them to endorse a statement that was untrue.

Banker Wins Button Slogan Contest

THE "500,000 Atlanta club," with everyone wearing the buttons, will mean a finer Atlanta spirit. It is really wonderful how interested the people are in Atlanta, and as the years go by it seems that this feeling grows greater. Such boosting as The Georgian and The Sunday American are doing will be a great help.---John W. Grant.

Fair Girl's Picture Sought for Emblem

"Watch Atlanta—She'll Get You Yet" Judges' Choice of Thousands of Suggestions.

"Watch Atlanta—She'll get you yet, 500,000 by 1920."

Atlanta's "booster" button will bear this striking prophecy. Out of more than 3,000 slogans submitted in the contest inaugurated by the Hearst papers of Atlanta the judges selected it Saturday afternoon, awarding the prize of $25 to its author, James P. Windsor, assistant cashier of the American National Bank.

John W. Grant, Wilmer L. Moore and Walter C. Taylor, the judges, enthusiastically recommended the adoption of Mr. Windsor's supplementary proposition that a beauty contest be held to determine who is the prettiest girl in Atlanta, and that the picture of her to whom the crown of beauty thus is awarded adorn the buttons. Their recommendations will be carried out, and Hearst's Sunday American and The Atlanta Georgian will hold the contest.

Announce Details Monday.

The details of how this fairest girl is to be selected will be announced in The Georgian Monday.

When it came down to a final decision, the judges—John W. Grant, Wilmer L. Moore and Walter C. Taylor—faced a serious problem. The great stack of slogans had come from both women and men from five States and from many towns and cities. Of course, the great majority were sent in by Atlantans, but they were hardly more enthusiastic than those from out of town. It was quite evident that the Atlanta spirit is not confined to Atlanta.

The judges said the least that they could do would be to give honorable mention to several of the best.

The design of George J. Taylor, No. 152 Courtland street, of a map of Georgia with Atlanta indicated by a star, like the capitals are maked in the fifth grade geography, was considered particularly clever.

Cartoonist's Design Artistic.

Perhaps the most artistic design offered was one by Lewis C. Gregg, the well-known cartoonist. It showed Atlanta a city of skyscrapers with the steel frame of a building in the center towering above the others. His slogan, worked into the drawing, was: "Upward, Atlanta. Onward. 65,000, 1890; 154,000, 1910; 500,000, 1920."

Wilbur G. Kurtz, No. 90 Sinclair avenue, got honorable mention on two designs. His color schemes were particularly attractive. One, with the emblem a gate, had the slogan: "500,000 by 1920. Come on."

The emblem on the other was a phoenix, the official emblem of the city, with the words:

"Atlanta Boosters' Club. A. B. C. Watch us Grow."

Plain Drawing Appeals.

A plain little drawing by Charles H. Terry, No. 43 Zachary street, made a strong appeal. The border of the design was the letters, "Atlanta," with a center of "Half-Million."

The judges did not want to stop with that one in their honorable mentions. But they had to stop somewhere, else there would be nothing else in The American to-day but descriptions of slogans.

All during the week every mail brought in great batches of slogans. The contest editor himself was surprised at their number, their cleverness and the enthusiasm they expressed. It may be that there is another city somewhere in this broad land where an equal spirit of civic patriotism exists. But you'll have to show Atlantans.

The pretty girl contest that is to follow promises to arouse even greater interest. When that has reached a climax the actual formation of the "500,000 Club" will take place.

Everyone Boosts.

The buttons will be distributed then. And how many thousands will it take?

It seems that every man, woman and child in Atlanta is a genuine booster. But there'll be enough to go around to all who want them.

With such an organization in action the coming years will show that Atlanta is able to get her 500,000 population by 1920.

At top, the winning button design, submitted by James P. Windsor, assistant cashier of the American National Bank. Below are four designs given honorable mention. They were submitted by, left to right, Wilbur G. Kurtz, Inman Park; George J. Taylor, 152 Courtland street; Charles H. Terry, 43 Zachery street; Wilbur G. Kurtz, Inman Park.

CLEARS NAME FOR COMRADE AFTER 50 YRS.

Soldier Branded as Deserter Is Proved by Indiana Tomb to Have Died in Hospital.

ROME, July 12.—Placed on the roll as a deserter by his comrades in gray 50 years ago, the name of a Georgia soldier has been cleared. Through a mere accident one of the surviving members of his company, W. O. Connor, of Rome, found that the man, who for years had been held in disgrace, died in an Indiana hospital.

Connor has been in Indianapolis attending a conference of principals and superintendents for the deaf. While there he had occasion to visit the Green Lawn Cemetery, near Indianapolis, where are interred hundreds of Confederate and Federal soldiers. He read the names of many of them and was surprised to find that six members of his company were resting there.

There names were found that Connor's company had been unable to account for: J. L. Bass, B. F. Barnett, a brother of Dan Barnett of Rome; and Samuel C. Hamby. Bass, after the surrender of Vicksburg, was placed upon the roll of the company as a deserter, and his name until to-day has always borne that stigma. This week, however, it was found that he died honorably as a prisoner of war in Camp Morton, Ind. Connor says his company was in Vicksburg nine days after the surrender and thinks that Bass became ill and was carried to a hospital.

Senator Lewis Sets New Summer Style

Illinois Mold of Fashion Shows Colleagues What They Should Wear During Sizzling Days.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Members of the Senate who have been appearing daily in summer apparel, including linen pongee, silk, mohair and seersucker suits, learned to-day from Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, the arbiter elegantiarum of the Upper House of Congress, just what constitutes the absolutely correct negligee for a United States Senator.

It was the first time Senator Lewis had discarded his formal morning grays and browns. This is what he wore:

Blue coat, with white pin stripe, blue tie with white stripe; white figured waistcoat, white duck trousers; white silk socks, white shoes, and white silk gloves. Crowning it all was a yellow Panama hat, with a draped band of black silk.

CLARK'S OLD OPPONENT GETS PLACE FOR LOYALTY

MONTGOMERY, MO., July 12.—Attorney Claude Bell to-day telegraphed Speaker Champ Clark accepting the proffered appointment as Attorney General to the Territory of Hawaii.

Mr. Bell was Clark's opponent for Congress last year and after the Speaker failed to be nominated for the Presidency he withdrew from the race. He is now receiving his reward for his loyalty.

Irish Crowds Riot as Orangemen Parade

Celebration in Belfast of Battle of the Boyne Anniversary Ends in Bloodshed.

Special Cable to The American.

BELFAST, IRELAND, July 12.—Chafing under the tension brought about by the discussion of the home rule bill, a large force of Nationalists attempted to break up the parade of the Orangemen which was held to-day in celebration of the anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne. Scores were seriously injured; several hundred received minor bruises; shots were fired and considerable damage was done to property when the rival factions clashed in the streets.

The military authorities have taken extreme precautions to prevent further disorders, and to-night detachments of the local police and the Royal Irish Constabulary are encamped at strategic points.

The Battle of the Boyne occurred July 1 (old calendar), 1690, and resulted in the overthrow of the last Stuart King of England, James I.

May Call Off Strike On Healey Building

Early Agreement Between Contractors and Union Men Likely—Many Iron Workers Leave.

Neither contractors nor union officials would make any statement Saturday night regarding the probable settlement of the strike which went into effect on the Healey building Friday afternoon. It is regarded as likely, however, that agreement will be reached Monday or Tuesday, and the work on Atlanta's newest skyscraper continued.

All Saturday a large crowd congregated about the building, but good order prevailed. Few men were at work on the building. The iron workers were called out on sympathetic strike by the officials of the Building Trades Council because the concern having the electric contract had not signed an agreement with the union.

Many of the striking iron workers have gone to Memphis or to Cincinnati.

CORNWALLIS-WEST DIVORCE SUIT ATTRACTS LONDON

Special Cable to The Georgian.

LONDON, July 12.—The divorce petition filed by Mrs. Cornwallis-West will be brought up for a hearing before the higher Court here within a few days. The case is expected to arouse considerable interest among fashionable London. Mrs. West obtained a decree on March 3 for restitution of conjugal rights.

BRUNSWICK GAY WITH FLAGS FOR STATE REUNION

Confederate Veterans of Georgia to Hold Annual Meeting Next Wednesday and Thursday.

BRUNSWICK, July 12.—Already the streets of Brunswick have taken on a martial appearance in the form of decorations for the approaching State reunion of Georgia Confederate Veterans, which takes place in this city next week. All the committees are now actively at work preparing for the reception of the visitors. When the division chaplain delivers his prayer at the Glynn County courthouse on Wednesday morning it is expected upward of 2,000 visitors will be present.

Governor to Speak.

Governor John M. Slaton, who arrived here to-day, will address the veterans Wednesday afternoon, to be followed by the presentation of the sponsors, matrons of honor and maids of honor, one of the important social events of a reunion. The address of J. O. Preston, of Macon, promises to be one of the most interesting of the reunion, as it is expected it will deal entirely with future reunions, a subject of much interest to the veteran.

The fight for next year's reunion is expected to be very keen this year. Already three cities have been mentioned, and it is probable several others will be entered before the balloting starts on Thursday morning.

To Visit State Guard.

For the first time in years the veterans and the State troops will meet together on camp field when the boys of '61 will be guests of the Fifth Regiment on St. Simons Thursday. This event is being looked forward to with much pleasure by local people, and it is expected on that day at least 3,500 people will visit the island.

The reunion will end Thursday night and the visitors will leave for their homes Friday morning.

Major General H. T. Davenport, commander of the Georgia Division, United Confederate Veterans, and Captain John A. Cobb, adjutant general and chief of staff, both of Americus, will arrive in Brunswick Tuesday, accompanied by a large number of veterans from their home camp and an escort of Sons of Veterans.

7TH GEORGIA REGIMENT SURVIVORS TO GATHER

Survivors of the Seventh Georgia Regiment, with their wives, sons and daughters, will hold their annual reunion July 21 at Grant Park. The call was issued by N. S. Culpepper, captain of Company G.

Widows and children of dead members of the regiment have been extended a special invitation. An old-time basket dinner will be served.

BOY SCOUTS ON 40-MILE MARCH TO TENNESSEE

Chattanooga Is Destination of Atlanta and Dalton Troops Taking Long Hike.

DALTON, July 12.—Accompanied by Scout Master W. M. Sapp and the Dalton Troop of Boy Scouts, Troop 3, Boy Scouts, of Atlanta, under Scout Master E. G. Everritt, left early this morning for the 40-mile hike to Chattanooga. They will make the hike by easy stages, traveling about ten miles daily.

The Atlanta Scouts arrived in a special car over the Southern Railway yesterday morning, being met at the depot by the Dalton Troop. From the depot they formed in line and marched to Hamilton street, where the "orders of the day" were received, the troop then breaking ranks and accompanying the Dalton Scouts to their homes for lunch. During the afternoon they drove in automobiles over the city, and at night were the guests of the Daughters of the American Revolution at an entertainment in the auditorium of the City Park School.

The Atlanta Scouts came well equipped for the long hike, John McLemore, in the role of chef, accompanying them. They will return to Dalton on July 20 and will catch the 5:30 train for the return trip to Atlanta.

Scout Master Everritt is accompanied by the following members of his troop:

Tillou Forbes, assistant scout master; Lin Adams, Brainard Adams, Glenn Aenchbacker, Horton Askew, Archer Avera, Donald Cameron, Abner and Andrew Calhoun, Millard Camp, Emory Flinn, Minor Hoxsey, Benjamin Hill, Julian Harlan, Lamar Leahy, Donald Morris, Fleming Meek, Edward and Charles McGarity, Wayne Martin, Riley Reese, Rainey Williams, William Warren, Lewis Woodson and John Wurm.

Beats All How "GETS-IT" Gets Corns!

The New-Plan Corn Cure. No Pain, No Pain, Sure and Quick.

You never used anything like "GETS-IT" for corns, before! You're sure at last that every stubborn corn that you've tried so long to get rid of

"How I Did Suffer From Corns for Years! 'GETS-IT' Got Them All in a Few Days!"

is a "goner." You apply "GETS-IT" in 2 seconds, that's all. "GETS-IT" does the rest. There's no more fussing, no more bandages to fix, no more salves to turn the flesh red and raw. No more plasters to get misplaced and press on the corn. No more "pulling," no more pain, no more picking and gouging, no more razors. "GETS-IT" stops pain, shrivels up the corn, and the corn vanishes. "GETS-IT" never fails, is harmless to healthy flesh. Warts, callouses and bunions disappear.

"GETS-IT" is sold at drug stores at 25c a bottle, or sent on receipt of price by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago. Sold in Atlanta by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Elkin Drug Co., Coursey & Munn, Gunter-Watkins Drug Co., E. H. Cone, Inc., Lipton & Co.

LEGISLATURE TO HEAR OF GLORIES OF PANAMA FAIR

Colonel T. Sambola Jones, Commissioner of San Francisco Exposition, Is Here.

Colonel T. Sambola Jones, of Baton Rouge, La., is in Atlanta with the story that a bit of fairyland is being created on the Pacific Coast, as a setting for the Panama-Pacific International Exposition of 1915. And Colonel T. Sambola is a red-haired, vigorous man of affairs—not at all a dreamer. What he says must be so. The exposition will be the biggest thing of its kind and the most wonderful.

Colonel Jones is commissioner of the exposition, and is in Atlanta to convince the State Legislature that an appropriation of $100,000 for Georgia's Building and exhibit at the big show will be a better investment than Atlanta real estate or something as promising.

Before anything else, Colonel Jones declared yesterday, he is impressed with the business atmosphere in which the exposition work is placed. He was a commissioner of the St. Louis Exposition, and he knows. Expenditures on the essential details have been lavish, he said, so lavish that he feels obliged to assure you that certain items of description are really so. But organization is such that no leaks occur in the expense account, he said, no sinecures are created, no waste results. And the exposition, he assures, will represent an outlay of $100,000,000 or so.

Colonel Jones Enthusiastic.

The fact that Colonel Jones was for years a judge in Baton Rouge, that he was a leader in the Louisiana State Legislature and that a short time ago he was a worthy candidate for Congress, defeated by less than a hatful of votes—all this relieves his glowing accounts of the exposition that is to be from the charge of being press-agent stories. And as you listen to Colonel T. Sambola Jones you feel certain that the big show on the Coast will, indeed, be the biggest show. Hear this:

"The arrangements for the decorative features are stupendous and marvelous," said Colonel Jones. "Banks and walls of flowers and fruits, beautiful as flowers and fruits are nowhere else than in California, already have been established to surround the grounds. There are geraniums of every hue, vivid, glorious—not the geraniums of the window garden, but plants that are 25 feet high, stretching along miles and miles of roadway. Nowhere except in California could a setting like this be established.

"We are building thirteen palaces in which the exhibits will be placed. The State buildings will be centers of social communication rather than quarters in which the exhibits will be housed.

"The exhibits of agriculture, stock, dairy cattle, farm products will surpass anything of the kind ever before displayed. Five buildings will be given over to exhibits of this nature."

Other States in Line.

Glibly Colonel Jones outlined delectable features of the exposition. To establish the fact that the Georgia Legislature should grant the appropriation of $100,000 for building an exhibit, he showed what other States already have done, New York appropriating $700,000, Illinois and Pennsylvania $300,000 each, Massachusetts $250,000, New Jersey $200,000, the Philippines $175,000, Washington $175,000 and a dozen States $100,000 each.

He told how the work of each State will be made an advertisement for that State by means of moving pictures. The story of each State exhibit, from the moment of its assembling to the final burst of glory that will come with that State's "day" at the exposition, will be told in pictures to be shown everywhere.

"Why should this exposition not be the greatest?" asked Colonel Jones. He is enthusiastic. He is from Louisiana, and originally favored New Orleans against San Francisco in the fight for the exposition site, but now he says that New Orleans is glad the decision went as it did, with the boll weevil, the floods and the elimination of the sugar tariff all working together to keep Louisiana economical for some time to come.

"This exposition represents a new era. The others represented the close of eras—the Centennial in Philadelphia, in 1876; the Chicago Exposition, in 1892; the St. Louis Exposition, and all the others. They were based on sentiment; this one on achievement."

That is why, he said, it is fitting that the exposition should be on the business basis it is.

No Sinecure Positions.

"There are fewer salaried men on the preliminary work than was the case in previous shows of this kind," says Colonel Jones. "The exhibits will be assembled as much as possible through the State departments. And Californians are willing to work for the honor of the exposition."

Then Colonel Jones mentioned a fact that makes California out a veritable Paradise.

"You can't throw a brick in San Francisco," he declared, "without hitting a millionaire. One man of every nineteen is wealthy, and serves at his own expense in the positions which formerly were so expensive, of ambassadors and commissioners to foreign countries."

San Francisco, he said, is ready to care for the exposition crowds, with 1,300 hotels and apartment houses in the city and 700 restaurants, and with a chain of commodious towns within easy reach.

Altogether, Colonel Jones talked with much effect about the big show on the Coast. He will address the Legislature Monday at noon.

Contestants to Spend Day in Park

Ponies To Be There to Aid in Fun

Manager of Race Urges Parents To Be Present to Pick Up Pointers for Children.

Boys and girls in The Georgian and American pony contest will enjoy an informal gathering at Grant Park Sunday afternoon, at the invitation of the contest manager. The ponies will be on hand, and there will be rides and drives for all who care to enjoy this pleasure.

Parents of the contestants are particularly invited. The contest manager is anxious to meet them and to discuss with them ways and means of helping the contestants through the last few days of the race. Sixteen more week days only remain before the contest ends. Six days only remain during which the bonus offer is in effect.

Race Keeps Close.

There is no candidate who can claim yet to be a winner. There is not enough difference between the leaders and the tail-enders so that any one can say who will get a pony. This is as it should be. It makes the contest interesting up to the very last.

The bonus offer should inspire every contestant. There are 20,000 extra votes to be awarded for every club of $35 turned in for subscriptions; 12,500 extra votes will be given for every club of $25 and 6,000 for every club of $15.

Assuming that a contestant turned in six yearly subscriptions; he would turn in $37.50, and be credited with 21,000 votes. In addition he would be credited with a $35 club, and 20,000 extra votes in consequence. In other words, the voting power under such circumstances would almost be doubled—41,000 votes for $37.50 in subscriptions. But the beauty of this club offer is that the clubs need not be made up of yearly subscriptions.

They can be made up of short term subscriptions, even one month trial orders.

Should Use Every Effort.

The contestant who does not strain every nerve to take advantage of this chance is foolish, and is not doing his full duty to himself, or to the friends who are aiding him.

Sixteen more working days only remain. The strain of the contest soon will be over, and the contestants may take a well-earned rest. Naturally, it will be much more fun to rest and recreate with the aid of a pony and cart than to rest, thinking of defeat. That is why the next two weeks should be crammed with effort, and well directed effort.

"Keeping everlastingly at it brings success," says the contest manager, and he is right.

Couple Nearing End Of 3,612-Mile Walk

Trudging From New York to Chicago via New Orleans, Reach Paxton, Ill.

PAXTON, ILL., July 12.—In the attempt to win a prize of $1,300 by walking from New York to Chicago via New Orleans, a distance of 3,612 miles, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Paxton arrived here to-day. Three couples left New York July 12, 1912. Mr. and Mrs. Hubbell, of Boston, who were walking independently, dropped out at Lynchburg, Va. Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Edwards, walking for the Montreal Club, are about 300 miles behind the Paxtons.

The Paxtons are walking for the Metropolitan Club of New York. The prize will be the world's championship for ladies for so great a distance. They are delivering a letter from Behrman, Mayor of New Orleans, to Carter Harrison, Mayor of Chicago.

NEGRO Y. M. C. A. ENDS ITS CAMPAIGN FOR BIG FUND

The Atlanta association is contesting with those of three Northern cities for the Rosenwald $25,000 donation.

Among the speakers to-day will be Philip Weltner, the Rev. C. M. Manning, N. Woods White and the Rev. C. M. Tanner.

BRYAN OUTLINES WILSON'S PLANS OF WORLD PEACE

Third Proposition Was Written to Cover Cases of England, Japan and United States.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Secretary of State Bryan has given out for publication what he calls "President Wilson's peace proposals," together with a new third proposition which seems to have been written to cover expressly the cases of England, Japan and the United States.

The third proposition means this: That if England and the United States were on verge of war and they had actually agreed to preserve the status quo as to the military and naval armament, the United States would be released instantly from its agreement not to increase armament if Japan were to become threatening to the United States. It is singular that Great Britain has a treaty with Japan the main point of which is that England can not go to the assistance of Japan is she were at war, unless a "third party" intervened against Japan. It is also pointed out here with reference to the Wilson proposed plan of universal peace that, even if all the 39 nations having diplomatic relations with the United States agree severally to the Wilson universal peace provision, yet any one of the nations might by a simple ruse go ahead with its armament.

How Ruse Could Work.

For instance, Italy might agree to the plan, but, by conspiring with Russia, for instance, make a private arrangement by which she would be threatened by Austria. Italy's purpose might be to increase her armament against France and there would be nothing to prevent this simple diplomatic trick, notwithstanding the seemingly solemn agreement with the United States' panacea for the peace of the world.

The first two propositions of the Wilson peace plan have been printed. They refer to the appointment of an international commission of five as intermediary and a proposition to limit the "time for cooling off" to one year, more or less, according as the various nations are mercurial or phlegmatic. The peace proposals have been sent to all of the 39 nations, 20 of which have agreed to them in principle.

Startling Third Proposition.

The startling third proposition is as follows:

"This Government is prepared to consider the question of maintaining the status quo as to military and naval preparations during the period of investigation, if the contracting nation desires to include this, and this Government suggests tentatively that the parties agree that there shall be no change in the military and naval program during the period of investigation unless danger to one of the contracting parties from a third power compels the change in said program, in which case the party feeling itself menaced by a third power shall confidentially communicate the matter in writing to the other contracting parties, and it shall thereupon be released from the obligation not to change its military or naval program, and this release will at the same time operate as a release for the other contracting party."

This protects each party from the other in ordinary cases and yet provides freedom of action in emergencies. All these suggestions, however, are presented for consideration and not with the intention of imposing any fixed conditions. The principle of investigating being accepted, the details are matters for conference and consideration.

Becker Loses Fight For Another Trial

Justice Goff Declares 'New Evidence' Does Not Warrant Second Hearing of Slayer.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Supreme Court Justice Goff to-day denied the application of Charles Becker, the former police lieutenant, convicted of the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, for a new trial.

The application, filed by Becker's attorney, petitioned for a new trial on the ground of new evidence being discovered. In reviewing the statement concerning this evidence, Justice Goff said there was nothing to show that it had been discovered since the trial nor to show reason why the witness known as "Dog" Ryan, a waiter and gambler, had not been produced at the trial.

Becker's attorney will now take the case before the Court of Appeals, which is the last barrier remaining between the former police officer and the death chair in Sing Sing.

High School Class Of 1910 at Banquet

Several Hundred Graduates Enjoy the Dinner and Listen to Speeches of Orators.

Several hundred old graduates of the Boys' High School made merry Saturday night at the Piedmont Hotel in the annual banquet of the class of '10. After the feast, President Dean Paden called the banqueters to order to hear the speeches by some of the class orators.

By unanimous vote, it was decided to begin active plans for even a bigger banquet next year.

Southern Girl Killed; Auto Strikes Tree

Miss Gertrude Mordecai, of Charleston, Victim When Car Leaves Road at Fifty-Mile Speed.

LAKE GEORGE, N. Y., July 12.—Miss Gertrude Mordecai, daughter of Judge T. M. Mordecai, of Charleston, S. C., was almost instantly killed today when an auto in which she was riding left the road and plunged into a tree on the State road near here.

The other passengers were Miss Cornelia Mordecai, a sister of the dead girl; Miss Hannah K. Falk, of Savannah, Ga.; Henry A. Schermerhorn, of Schenectady, N. Y., and the chauffeur, Ole Starr.

The accident occurred while the Mordecai car was running more than 50 miles an hour.

Lobby Fight in Jersey Is Described by Mulhall

tries of this country for the next six years.

Very sincerely yours,
W. M. MULHALL.
Haddon Hall, Atlantic City.

Bird Acknowledges Letter.

Here is Bird's acknowledgment:
September 30, 1912.

Colonel M. M. Mulhall,
Haddon Hall, Atlantic City, N. J.
Dear Sir:

Your letter of September 27, detailing your experiences for some little time and the results, has been received and it is a pleasure for me to know of your successes.

I note what you say in reference to Congressman Hughes. All of this I have been advised of before, I remain, yours very truly,
J. P. BIRD, General Manager.

Hughes, as events proved, received the personal backing of Governor Wilson, who made a personal stumping campaign for him against James Smith, Jr. Hughes received the Democratic indorsement for Senator at the primaries, and was later elected.

Still bearing out the allegations of Mulhall, of which Bird "had been advised before," Wilson, after becoming President, signed the sundry civil appropriations bill, which carried a provision exempting labor unions and farmers' beneficial organizations from prosecution under the Sherman law.

This is the bill which Taft vetoed as encouraging class legislation.

Will Tell of Conversation.

In all likelihood Gompers will be asked to tell about his visit to Seagirt and to throw light on his conversations with Governor Wilson. At present Gompers and Morrison, with John Mitchell, are in contempt of court, and have been granted an appeal to the Supreme Court. All three were convicted of violating an injunction against boycotting.

The following letter from Mulhall to John Kirby deals with Secretary of Labor Wilson:

Washington, D. C., April 20, 1911.
Mr. John Kirby, Jr., President National Association of Manufacturers, Reibold Building, Dayton, Ohio.

My Dear Kirby: I wish to call your attention to a matter that has taken place here in Washington, which I feel the business interests of the country should be somewhat interested in.

One of the most important committees of the House, which should in a great sense be non-partisan, has been completely turned over to the radical wing of the American Federation of Labor. The Democratic leaders of the House of Representatives have made chairman for this committee Mr. Wilson, of the Fifteenth Pennsylvania District.

For eight years Mr. Wilson was secretary and treasurer of the Miners' International Union.

Mr. Wilson was always considered an active member amnog the radical members of the American Federation of Labor, and he was pushed and urged by Mr. Samuel Gompers and the other radicals of the executive board of the above named organization for the chairmanship of this committee.

Daughter Made Clerk.

Not being satisfied to have Mr. Wilson made chairman of the committee on labor, they had his daughter, Agnes Wilson, appointed as secretary and clerk of the Committee on Labor, and when this committee was called together last Thursday to organize at this session of Congress, Miss Agnes Wilson was elected to this office.

In addition to this, Mr. Wilson has also appointed his wife as the messenger of this committee, and if the public now wishes to call on this committee for information concerning bills that come before it, when you visit the committee room at the Capitol you have got to face the whole Wilson family to secure the information desired.

This has established a new precedent in the appointments around the Capitol.

the committees of the House of

As a general rule the members of Representatives have something to say about who the clerk of the committee shall be, but Mr. Wilson has entirely ignored the other members of this committee, and $3,000 worth of patronage that should go to his district and to those who have helped to send him to Congress has been entirely turned over to the Wilson family.

I have been informed that Mr. Wilson has taken this step of having his own relatives appointed to the official positions of this committee in order to have the business public shut out from securing any information concerning the bills that are sent before it, such as an eight-hour law and all labor legislation that comes before it.

I am sending you this letter thinking that there should be publicity given to this matter. So, hoping to hear that you have taken hold of it, in your old vigorous way, believe me to be, very sincerely yours. M. M. MULHALL.

Trial of Boss Barnes Found in Lobby Inquiry.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—The trail of William Barnes, Jr., was struck in the Senate lobby investigation today.

In 1905 State Senator Page introduced at Albany a bill, under the provisions of which the burden of proof was placed on the defendant in all actions of laboring men to recover damages in which contributory negligence was offered as a defense.

According to Mulhall, the confessing agent of the National Association of Manufacturers, Marshall Cushing, the secretary, decided that this was the sort of measure that should be killed, and he sent Mulhall to Albany to make the killing.

"What did you do?" asked Senator Cummins.

"Well, I did not have to see many persons up there at that time," Mulhall declared, "to take care of a bill. All I had to do was to see Boss Barnes. I knew him very well."

The measure never was reported out of the Judiciary Committee.

"Did you oppose the bill," asked Senator Cummins, "because you thought it a bad thing for the workingman?"

"No."

"Then for what reason?"

"Cushing did not want it passed," replied Mulhall.

Another interesting picture presented by Mulhall was that of former Senator Nelson W. Aldrich, of Rhode Island, one time boss of the United States Senate, appealing over the telephone to the head of the Bartenders' Union in Providence, R. I., for support in his campaign for re-election.

Mulhall ascribed a membership of 900 to this union in Providence, which prompted Senator Nelson, who is getting more fun than anybody else out of the investigation, to ask innocently:

"Enlighten me as to this: In so small a place, how could there possibly be a membership of 900 in a Bartenders' Union?"

Mulhall as a strikebreaker was also marched across the Senate stage.

Mulhall again was shown working hand-in-hand with that well-known patriot, former Senator Foraker, in the interests of William Howard Taft in Ohio.

Anon Mulhall was in Maine, then back once more in Maryland, then in Pennsylvania—always, according to his own story, working under the surface, bribing trusted labor leaders, selling out his friends, distributing the money of the manufacturers where it would do the most good—or the greatest harm.

During the morning session Mulhall regaled the Overman committee with an account of how he had lined tip workingmen against Senator McComas, who was fought because he advocated the eight-hour law. He also told of his efforts to defeat Congressman William E. Hughes, of New Jersey, now a member of the United States Senate from that State.

TOUCHING SONG HIT OF 'MOVIES' DISRUPTS HOME

Wife Accusingly Sings "You're Taking Me From Sunshine to Sorrow"—Downs Rebels.

"You've taken me from sunshine to sorrow.
Only darkness I see in the morrow."

Thus sang Mrs. C. C. Downs, 640 Chestnut street, to her husband, after she came home from a moving picture show, where she had heard the song.

Mr. Downs listened with vast and increasing indignation, and as she calmly enumerated the things she had "in sunshine," and compared them to the things she didn't have "in sorrow," and glanced meaningly at her spouse, Mr. Downs felt his indignation overmastering him, until finally he could no longer contain himself. He started a fight.

Mrs. Downs was willing for combat, and when Officers Moon and Adams rushed into the house Mrs. Downs was beating her husband with a rolling pin and screaming into his ear, "You've taken me from sunshine to sorrow. Take that! And that!"

In Police Court Downs said he didn't want to live with a woman who had no more respect for her husband's feelings than to sing songs like that.

"If I ever live with her again I'll serve six months in jail, Judge," he said.

"And if I ever live with him again I'll serve a life sentence," declared his wife.

Recorder Pro Tem Preston compromised the case. Mrs. Downs paid a fine of $25.75 and promised to leave Atlanta, and Downs paid $10.75.

RECRUITS TO BE TAUGHT TO DO OWN COOKING

Colonel VanOrsdale Will Have New Soldiers Take Lessons in Preparing Their Food.

Recruits at Fort McPherson must add to their soldierly accomplishments a knowledge of the art of cooking. Colonel VanOrsdale has posted the order, and consequently the "rookies" will be led, some fine evening of next week, to a secluded spot on the Chattahoochee River for an all-night camp, where every man must make shift for himself, and hunger take the hindmost.

The spot will be well secluded, Colonel VanOrsdale promises, and the culinary performance will be private. Fingers will be burned and much of the coffee, most likely, will taste like the product of a honeymoon kitchen. And the soldiers will reinforce their vocabularies, it is to be expected, together with their cooking powers. So the spot will be secluded.

The annual cooking school is one of the phases of the training through which the newly enlisted men are put each year. The old soldiers are expected to be something of kitchen performers already.

The cooking requirement of the regular army is based on the theory that in time of campaigning a soldier may be separated from the camp, and that he must be altogether independent of the service of others.

In charge of next week's cooking camp will be a veteran cook, who will impart knowledge of portions and combinations that are necessary.

TAX SYSTEM MUST BE REBUILT TO AID STATE'S CREDIT, SAYS ANDERSON

Archaic Method Is Responsible for Difficulties in Obtaining Loans on Georgia Property, Declares President of Senate---Remedy Suggested.

Hon. Randolph Anderson, President of the Senate of Georgia, in an interview furnished The Sunday American, discusses the great problem of tax reform, now the paramount issue before the General Assembly.

Mr. Anderson, experienced in legislation and far-seeing in business affairs, has no illusions as to what tax reform means, and as to how it must be accomplished.

He regards it as a most perplexing proposition, and he thinks that it will test the ingenuity and statesmanship of the Legislature heavily to effect tax reform equitably and in result-getting shape.

Mr. Anderson said:

The military nature of the original colony of Georgia gave to our people characteristics of order, discipline or conservatism and steadiness which persist to this day. In our own time when the people of some of the States of this country are running after new gods and ideals in politics, Georgia, one of the most progressive of them all, in all essentials to health and happiness, has not been swept off her feet by either agitation or fanaticism, but holds fast to her well-tried moorings and her ancient faiths.

In this spirit we come to-day to grapple with the problems that confront us. So far as this General Assembly is concerned the most urgent and most important question that faces us is the financial condition of Georgia. We all know that there is a serious deficit in our treasury. It is a situation with which I am quite familiar, and I believe I was the first to point out its existence and the need for taking steps to remedy it.

Toward the close of the session of 1910 I was asked by the then chairman of the Senate Appropriation Committee, now the distinguished Speaker of the House, to give him some information about the condition of the State treasury to use in a speech he wished to make in the Senate. After the close of that session I gave out an interview publishing the result of my investigation, in which I pointed out the existence of a deficit and calculated that by the year 1913 it would amount to $787,000.

Prediction Was Correct.

It may be remembered that my views and conclusions were biterly assailed in the public press, and that it finally resulted in an audit being had of the State's financial status. To-day we realize the painful truth that my prediction was approximately correct. This deficit, we know, is not due to any lack of material resources in the State, but simply to the miserably inadequate and insufficient methods we have under our laws for the ascertainment and collection of taxes.

The State, instead of being run as a business institution, is practically an object of charity so far as its tax revenues are concerned.

We boast of being the Empire State of the South, yet the figures we are compelled to exhibit to the world do not bear out our claim. The condition is injurious to the State and to our people in more ways than a failure to provide sufficient revenues to run the State and its institutions.

A friend of mine in a county adjacent to this one attempted to effect arrangements in the North and East for securing money to lend out on Georgia real estate. His glowing descriptions of the wealth and progress of Georgia were cut short by the simple reply: "Yuor State's figures show you to be among the poorest of States. You have tax values of only about 850 millions, while much smaller States have values in excess of one billion, and States of aproximately your size show values of two billions and upward." In this way the present system is a serious injury to the State's credit, and this is a grave matter for us to consider, especially at this time when we have to refund some three millions of the State's debt. This same system is also a direct injury to the individual citizen.

This friend I have mentioned had an application for a loan of $2,800 upon a piece of property which he considered to be worth at least $6,000. He recommended the loan, but was notified he had omitted to send on the tax valuation of the property. On looking this up he was horrified to find that it was returned at only $500. In the face of this sworn return the loan was declined.

Evils Are Recognized.

The evils, the injustice and the rank discriminations of the present system are now apparently recognized and admitted by every one. What is the remedy? To such new sources of taxes will be adding only a drop in the bucket. Some new taxes may be wise, but they will only be palliative. They will not cure the ills we suffer from, and on many of our people the tax burden is already felt to be a heavy one. In my judgment, what is needed most of all and first of all, is a thoroughgoing revision of our whole taxing and financial system, and the installation, under the advice of expert accountants, of a modern up-to-date system of keeping the accounts of the State and of its various departments and institutions, with adequate provisions for proper periodic auditing. This is the foundation which must first be laid, and after this is done, and not till then, can we wisely or safely say what our further needs may really require.

The cornerstone of the whole business is and must be a proper and conservative method of tax equalization. Kansas is a poorer State than Georgia, yet in Kansas the tax values are over two billions. We have in reality more than that. If we see to it that our real values, or even approximately our real values, are put upon the books, we could reduce our tax rate from five mills to two and a half mills and yet receive a half million more in revenues than we now get from our ad valorem taxes.

The problem is one which the present General Assembly has to solve. We see our school teachers remaining unpaid, though more than half the year is gone. We see our State institutions unable to keep pace with the needs which the growth of the State is imperatively demanding of them.

Boll Weevil Is Coming.

We know that the boll weevil is crossing our borders—the greatest menace that has threatened our prosperity in a generation—yet we have no money to take any adequate steps to protect our fields and our farmers from its ravages. The situation is one to make us hang our heads in shame that a great State—our State—should be brought so low; but I am not dismayed. I know the men and the temper of this General Assembly. They have come here to do business. They have learned that the root of our troubles is the lack of a proper system of tax equalization and with the firmness and steadiness of our people they will go straight to the mark, and will not rest until the work is done. I confidently expect that by another year Georgia can lift up her head again and say to her sister States, "I have put my house in order, who can boast of a fairer domain or can make a better showing now than I?"

Governor and Staff Join Fifth Slaton in Camp at St. Simons

In the lower picture, Private Cook is shown exemplifying life-saving methods in the St. Simons surf, with Private Hubert playing the part of victim.

General Evans of U. S. Army Accompanies Executive on Visit.

BRUNSWICK, July 12.—Governor John M. Slaton, former Governor Joseph M. Brown and the Governor's staff, Adjutant General J. VanHolt Nash, General R. K. Evans, U. S. A., and Colonel Barth, his adjutant, reached Brunswick at 9 o'clock this morning over the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad from Atlanta.

The party was met by Mayor Hopkins and the Board of Trade and, after a general handshaking with old friends, the Governor and party boarded automobiles provided by prominent citizens and were driven for a sightseeing tour of the city.

Shortly before noon the party embarked on a steamer for St. Simons Island, where the Fifth Regiment, Georgia National Guard, from Atlanta, is in camp. Governor Slaton, as commander-in-chief of the State Guard, will enjoy camp life over Sunday. This afternoon he witnessed an exhibition drill and inspected the regiment. The Governor leaves the camp Sunday afternoon.

Offers $3,000 Wager For Mile Foot Race

North Carolina School Teacher Issues Challenge to Any Runner in World.

RALEIGH, N. C., July 12.—Richard Little, whose mile run at Hickory, on June 11, set a new record for professionals and amateurs, will run no more as an amateur.

Little challenges the world's best runner to stand a mile with him. He confesses himself a professional. His manager, Claud Moser, is authority for the statement that four New York clubs put up $6,000 for his run on June 11. Moser offers $3,000 to any runner in the world who will keep up with Little a mile.

Little has been elected principal of Newton graded school, and will teach there this winter. He expresses the wish that the runner accepting his challenge meet him September 1 at Hickory, his home town. He goes to work immediately afterwards. Little was a Cornell student last year, and Harvard's athletic management made a desperate effort to take him there. Cornell drew the contract on Little and he declined to attend either school.

FOUR SENTENCED TO DIE IN CHAIR FOR SLAYING

CHESTER, S. C., July 12.—Meeks Griffin, Tom Griffin, John Crosby and Nelson Brice, who murdered John Q. Lewis, a Confederate veteran and well-to-do planter in the Cornwell section of Chester County on April 24, were convicted here to-night after the jury remained out about two hours. Acting Judge C. J. Ramage, of Saluda, sentenced the negroes to death by electricution on Friday, September 26.

Methodists Ask Home For Wayward Girls

Church Workers Send Petition to Legislature for Compulsory Education and Raising of Consent Age.

A petition asking that a home for wayward girls be established has been forwarded to the State Legislature by the Social Service Workers of the Atlanta Methodist churches. The petition also asks the Legislature to consider carefully the bills that provide for the raising of the age of consent and for compulsory education. With the petition is a letter addressed to the Fulton County delegation in the House asking their support for the measure advocated.

LOGGER KILLED AS HE TRIES TO LIGHT DYNAMITE FUSE

BAYFIELD, WIS., July 12.—George Andrews, logger, loaded six stumps with dynamite and lighted all the fuses. One of the fuses appeared to have failed, and, after waiting a minute, Andrews went to relight it. As he leaned over the stump the charge exploded and killed him instantly.

WOMAN BOASTS OF DROWNING STEP-CHILDREN

Revenge on Second Husband for Wronging Daughter by Former Marriage Her Motive.

UNION CITY, TENN., July 12.—Without a tremor of emotion, Mrs. Hennie Yates, confessed murderess of her two small stepchildren, Ligon and Ida Mai, by drowning in a pond near Troy, Tenn., last Wednesday, sat in her cell in the county jail here to-day and boasted of all the grewsome details of the shocking crime, which was made possible through the assistance of Floy Farris, her 15-year-old daughter by a former husband.

A deeper reason for revenge against her husband, James Yates, than the admitted dinner table quarrel was brought out in the recital of the story, when Mrs. Yates made the allegation that her daughter, Floy, had been ruined by her second husband, James Yates.

After inviting the children to bathe in the pond, Mrs. Yates stated that, despite the frantic struggles of Ligon and his piteous shrieks for mercy as he clung to a twig to save himself, with the assistance of Floy she had broken his grip and, holding his head under the water, had filled his mouth with the slimy ooze from the bottom, to hasten his death.

Ida Mai began screaming and toddled away, but, at her mother's command, Floy captured her and held her beneath the water "until she quit moving."

The woman will be tried in September. She had engaged no attorneys. Insanity probably will be her plea.

Her husband will be the chief prosecutor, and states that he will do everything in his power to send his wife, the mother of his youngest child, to the gallows.

Georgian's Bible Is Found at Gettysburg

Pennsylvania Soldier Wants to Restore Copy of Scriptures of Member of Fourth Georgia Infantry.

MANASSAS, VA., July 12.—James F. Gulick, of Manassas, has in his possession a Bible which was found on the Gettysburg battle field the day General Pickett made his famous charge July 3, 1863. On the inside cover of the sacred book apepars the following inscription: "G. O. Barnes, Fourth Georgia Infantry, Pickett's Division."

The book was found by George Fleming, of 1546 South Twelfth Street, Philadelphia. He turned it over to Gulick at the recent reunion in the hope that its owner might be located.

BRANSON PLANS SOCIETY TO AID SCHOOL HYGIENE

Work of International Congress Will Be Continued by State Organization in Georgia.

Dr. E. C. Branson, of Athens, chairman of the Georgia State Organizing Committee of the Fourth International Congress on School Hygiene, which is to be held at Buffalo the last week in August, has received a letter from Dr. Thomas A. Storey, of the College of the City of New York, and secretary-general of the congress, suggesting the continuance of the State committee for the purpose of establishing a permanent organization in the interest of better school hygiene.

In his letter Dr. Storey writes:

"The various State organizing committees are serving a useful and important purpose in their relation to the progress and success of this congress. But it would be a pity for these committees to go out of existence as soon as this congress becomes a thing of history. The service they render this international enterprise is small in comparison with the service they might render society in general if they were to effect a permanent organization in the interest of better hygienic conditions in all the schools of our country. Let me urge you then to use your committee as the nucleus of a State organization, whose object shall be the acquisition and conservation of the health of the school child."

In response to this letter the members of the State organizing committees are now in correspondence with the various boards of education, boards of health, school superintendents, school improvement associations, mothers' clubs, parents' association, teachers' association, charity societies, tuberculosis leagues, visiting nurses' associations, boards of trade, and women's clubs, within a view to seeing what can be done in the way of permanent co-operative organization.

All the foregoing organizations are also being urged to send delegates to the Buffalo congress. The congress is open to all persons interested in improving the health and efficiency of school children.

College Park Seeks Slogan for Board

Suburban Town Also Seeks Live and Attractive Name for Its Commercial Organization.

An ambitious spirit struck College Park, Atlanta's worthy suburb, Saturday.

First of all, the Board of Trade announced, a suitable slogan is desired, which will embody the spirit of the town and of the board. Also, a better name than the trite and colorless "Board of Trade" is wanted for the organization.

To this end a prize of $25 is offered.

The contest closes July 31, and the prize will be awarded at the next meeting of the board, August 1. The slogan contest is in the hands of the publicity committee, and all entries are to be sent to that committee at College Park, or to the Rev. Fritz Rauschenberg, secretary of the board.

Wind Wrecks Craft Of Lake Air Racers

For Second Time Since Start of Contest Flying Boats Are Storm-Bound.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH., July 12.—Ill luck is pursuing three aviators who are racing to Detroit. For the second time since the beginning of the Great Lakes boat endurance cruise the contestants were storm-bound to-day and compelled to remain at anchor.

Last night's wind played havoc with both Roy Francis' and Beckwith Havens' crafts.

Extra parts, however, which had followed by train were quickly at hand and repairs will be completed before morning.

No Bargain Counter for Realty, Say Dealers

Skyscrapers Due to Rise When Leases Expire

DECATUR BUSY BUILDING PRETTY HOMES

Many people who make their money in Atlanta have their homes in Decatur, six miles eastward. Above are shown two typical dwellings of the suburb mentioned. Decatur is a neighborhood of comparatively low property values. Good residence lots can be had for $10 to $30 a foot. Around Buckhead, the same distance from Atlanta, prices are $65 to $100. That is why many home-seekers seek Decatur.

Owners Able to Meet Notes, and No Foreclosures Occur—Valuable Property Holding Up Well, With Prospect of Enhancement.

Central property in Atlanta has not gone down a penny during the money stringency.

Semi-central prices have not moved a peg.

A few residence and vacant lot bargains at auction have been picked up, but probably no more than under ordinary conditions.

People who expect desirable so-called "high-price" property at a bargain had better buy now, rather than wait for a rise. There have been no foreclosures of consequence.

Crops will soon be in, money will be easier and property will take the usual autumn rise.

The above seems to be the crux of the situation in the local real estate market. Would-be investors have been looking 40 years for prices on choice property to drop. They have grown gray waiting, while people willing to take a chance have made fortunes. Losses have been inconsiderable, and at that have been due to indiscretion rather than to any shortcomings in the property. Old establishments in Atlanta have never lost a cent on real estate. Although they have found it desirable at times to hold, they have always turned loose at a profit.

"The scissors haven't been used on Atlanta prices," declared a well-posted real estate man. "Property to-day is exactly as high as it has been the past two months, and in most cases it has gone up as usual. You can hardly get a price on central Peachtree property. I don't see any of it advertised. Take an example of semi-central. Lots on Peachtree between Baker and Ivy are valued at $1,500 to $1,600 a front foot. The other day an owner had an offer of $1,400 and he turned it down. He wanted $1,500, and he will get it or he won't sell."

Real Estate Gossip

"There is no reason for any talk of depression in Atlanta realty values," declared Houston R. Harper, formerly of Atlanta, now of Chattanooga, the other day. "Take a look at the Healey and Hurt buildings; walk out Peachtree or Ivy Streets and see the great development. The future of Atlanta as one of the important and large cities of the country is assured.

"Real estate bought at the right valuation is as safe as Government bonds and will bring much larger returns. Persons investing in the past knew they were experimenting, but in the present enhancement is assured. Atlanta, like the snowball rolling down hill, has gathered remarkable strength.

"Northwest Georgia, East Tennessee and Northeast Alabama have the finest year-round climate in the world. The G. A. R. encampment in Chattanooga in September and the Shriners' and Bankers' conventions in Atlanta will bring thousands of visitors and many new citizens to our section of country. The South is on the eve of a great commercial and social awakening, such as she has never experienced before."

Another illustration of very reasonable terms and prices on Atlanta property has been cited. During the past week a real estate man sold a customer a lot on the West Side for $150, on terms of $5 down and $5 a month. Earnest money totaled $1.50, and the balance of the initial payment, $3.50, was paid in three days. The buyer explained that on account of the Balkan war, tariff changes and other governmental and industrial complications he did not feel warranted in putting his monthly payments higher than $5.

Names of well-known Atlantans are among those who have recently built or are building in Ansley Park. The park originally comprised a land lot, but additions have been made from time to time.

Among well-known people who are building homes or have recently built are: Mrs. Lena Swift Huntley, W. H. Glenn, Miss Barbara E. Lambdin, Mrs. Hattie High, S. W. Sullivan, Mrs. B. M. Swift, Paul Goldsmith, Miss Carrie Glenn, John F. Glenn, L. B. Morgan, Dr. L. C. Fisher, Mrs. Christine C. Hall, Mrs. E. R. Schueler, J. O. Wynn, A. Ten Eyck Brown, Mrs. F. M. Lyle, Dr. J. W. Four Corners at Five Points To Be Greatly Improved in Few Years. Tenants Must Move Out to Make Room for High Structures.

New and startling developments are looked for in the construction of skyscrapers and other substantial business buildings around Five Points as soon as leases now in effect run out.

There are four choice corners in a 100-foot radius that will undoubtedly be improved at the first opportunity. Owners are going to be slow renewing leases in order that they may figure on high buildings.

The original Healey Building at the northwest corner of Peachtree and Marietta Streets, occupied by the Elkin Drug Company, is one of these. A three-story building on the lot is paying a good rental, but it will be superseded by a much more imposing structure.

Probably 100 people have asked Mr. Healey why he didn't improve this corner instead of the block east of the postoffice. His reply is that the former was well tenanted, while the latter had only a coal and wood yard. The Elkin lease is due to expire before long, it is said, and much doubt is expressed that Mr. Healey will extend it.

The Collier corner on Peachtree between Edgewood Avenue and Decatur Street is an admirable site, but it is small. The suggestion has accordingly been made that an arrangement be perfected between the Collier heirs and the Silvey heirs for joining the two buildings in the triangle. The Silvey Building is being overhauled and its elevator service could serve the other structure.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES.

WARE & HARPER,
Real Estate and Business Brokers.
724-725 Atlanta National Bank Building.
Main 3311. Atlanta 1868.

$800 —SPLENDIDLY and completely equipped, reputable and high-class BAKERY; the only one in one of the best cities of about 5,000 population, in the same latitude as and about 140 miles from Atlanta. This is a real opportunity in this line.

ONE-HALF interest to an acceptable purchaser (who must be a first-class office man) in one of the best established, most reputable, growing and profitable strictly high-class RETAIL HARDWARE business; one of the very best locations in the city of Atlanta. Business amounts to about $6,000 per month. Can be greatly increased.

$6,750 —ONE of the very best located, most beautifully equipped, highly profitable and growing SODA WATER, CIGAR AND TOBACCO businesses; owner must make change on account of ill health. If you can make the investment, call to see us and investigate. You can not be disappointed.

$1,200 —BEAUTIFULLY equipped, and the only DRUG, SODA WATER, CIGAR AND TOBACCO business in a first-class railroad town about 25 miles from Atlanta; stock of merchandise and fixtures amount to at least $2,500; owner can not give personal attention, and finds it almost impossible to get the right kind of help.

$3,600 BEAUTIFULLY equipped and strictly high-class, reputable and growing SODA WATER, CIGAR, TOBACCO AND MERCHANTS' LUNCH business; located in one of the fine office buildings of the city, with plenty of room and a first-class location for a drug store; ill health of owner's wife forces removal to a different climate.

$2,500. —WELL established and splendidly located CASH AND INSTALLMENT FURNITURE business, with enormous possibilities; more than actual assets for the money invested; your opportunity in this line.

$900 —SPLENDIDLY equipped and highly profitable ELECTRIC THEATER; first-class brick building; 175 seats, with room for 40 more; located in one of the best towns of Georgia of about 4,000 people; the only theater in this good town. Clearing $50 per week Can be greatly increased.

$5,000 —$2,500 cash and balance reasonable, to an acceptable purchaser only, one-half interest in the largest exclusive MAIL ORDER business in the South; capitalized at $100,000; purchaser may act as president and take active management of the business. This business has been established for three years and has done more than $100,000 worth of business, and has more than 60,000 customers; more than $5,000 spent in advertising in newspapers last year. This is possibly the best proposition we have ever offered in this line of business, either as an investment or active management. More than actual assets for money to be invested.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES.

SPLENDID opportunity offered an acceptable party to place a drug department in a well-established soda water business in office building. For particulars address Rare Bargain, care Georgian. 7-13-360

ETOWAH COUNTY, ALA.

IS located in the northern part of the State, and is one of the most prosperous sections of the South. GADSDEN, its county seat, is growing and developing by leaps and bounds, due to legitimate conditions which warrant such improvements.

Gadsden is situated on that great waterway, the Coosa River, whose freestone waters are as pure as the morning dew. Here we have steel mills, cotton mills, factories and business enterprises of almost every description, giving employment to thousands of men, where the payroll amounts to more than $300,000 per month and where strikes are unknown.

Gadsden is an ideal place for home-building; her citizens enjoy every modern comfort and convenience. High elevation—abundant rainfall—short mild winters and long temperate summers with delightfully cool nights, all go to make this locality the place for men of every calling and occupation to cast their lot and fortune.

This county offers a fine field for both the large and small farmer, as the towns and villages are filled with people who have money to buy what they want to eat, and they always have the best the farmer can produce.

We handle bargains and are posted as to city property and farm lands. Read the samples:

200 acres, 5 miles out on good road; no improvements; about 100 acres in cultivation; will grow alfalfa or hay of any kind. This also is a fine tract for stock farming. Price, $12.50 an acre.

85-acre mountain farm, 50 acres in cultivation; 4,000 bearing peach trees, 200 apple trees and other fruit trees. This place lies within one mile of a fine mountain summer resort, where several hundred people spend the summer months. Elevation 2,000 feet above sea level; land rich and productive. Good neighborhood of white people only. This is a genuine bargain. Price, $2,000.

80 acres, two small houses, nice level land, 5 miles from railroad, on good road. If you have the money do not fail to see and buy this. Price, $700.

We have a fine large tract of land, well located, near two railroads. Price, $6 per acre.

Come to see us. We have the bargains. We want some good man with $15,000 in cash to come and let us show him the very best bargain to be had in inside property.

APPLE AND CHICKEN FARMS.

IN the heart of the apple section of Georgia. Two weeks ago we advertised five farms, sold every one. Bear in mind, more chickens, eggs, honey come from the Ellijay section than any other point in Georgia. Pure air, spring water; corn grows as in no other section; rich mountain loam. To-day we have at Blue Ridge a summer home and apple orchard, 31 1-4 acres, half a mile from depot; 20 acres cultivated, all under fence; 6 acres in timber; 4 acres in pasture; 1,000 apple trees, 500 6 to 8 years old in bearing, 200 3-year-olds, 300 2-year-olds, mostly selected fall and winter varieties; on hillside, north and northwest slope. 5-room frame, weatherboarded and ceiled dwelling (painted); running water in kitchen; can have electric lights if desired; good spring branch across one corner; 1 barn, 3 stalls, feedroom, corn crib; house sets in edge of timber, well shaded, faces east; good garden; churches and school—in fact, it is in town. Only $3,000; say $1,000 cash, balance 1, 2 and 3 years at 7 per cent. Might exchange for city property (income) at cash valuation, or in part payment.

NEXT—134 acres, 1 1-2 miles from the depot at Ellijay, on the main highway, auto route, Atlanta to Blue Ridge and Murphy; 134 acres, 35 acres cultivated, 30 acres fenced, 3 acres branch bottom, 80 acres mixed timber for pasture and stock range; 5 good springs; productive soil; old orchard, about 70 trees; new orchard, 180 7-year-old fall and winter apples, select stock; 50 Elberta peach trees; grapes, plums, etc.; 4-room log (weatherboarded and ceiled) dwelling, 2 barns and other outbuildings; house shaded; fine walnut trees and fruit trees; one apple tree at house bears 30 bushels apples; on telephone line; 3 churches within 1 1-4 miles; thickly settled community; only $2,000—say $500 or $600 cash, balance $200 per annum, at 8 per cent.

NEXT—Adjoining this place we have 45 acres on same auto road, only one acre cleared; 1-room frame house, log stables and barn; rolling land, but all can be cultivated; 2 acres bottom land; creek runs through place; 12 bearing apple trees; several springs; only 2 miles from Ellijay; $350 buys it. Somebody buy it—a snap. Put out an orchard and in few years be independent. Think of it—on the main auto road, Atlanta to Blue Ridge and Murphy, and only $8 per acre.

GRANT PARK COTTAGE

The scarcity of good homes for sale in the Grant Park section is a well-known fact. A great many subdivisions have been made beyond Grant Park to meet the demand for this very desirable section.

When a good home on a good street near Grant Park is offered for sale, it is usually sold right away. We have had listed with us for sale a 7-room cottage at 45 Park Avenue, on a lot 50 by 200 feet. The lot is elevated, has plenty of trees and faces east. The cottage is well built and has all conveniences. This place is located near several churches, public schools and is on one of the few double car-tracked streets in the Grant Park section. Price, $4,750. Very reasonable terms.

Broadway Property Advertised in 1744

NEW YORK, July 12.—A quaint advertisement offering Broadway property for sale near what is now the Battery appeared in the New York Weekly Post Boy in September, 1744. The Broadway lots had been owned by the wealthy merchant, Peter Bayard. The notice reads:

"To be Sold. Two Dwelling Houses and Lots of Ground near Fort George, on the West Side of the Broad Way in the City of New York, late belonging to Peter Bayard, Merchant, deceased. As also the Dwelling house and lot of Ground on the Dock, fronting the East River in the said City, near Burling's Slip, now in possession of Captain Michael Thody, with the Water Lot thereunto belonging. Whoever inclines to purchase the same, or either of them, may apply to Adonlah Schuyler, or Abraham Lodge in New York."

STOCK PRICES DUE TO START UPWARD TREND SOON, DECLARES FORBES

Courageous Investors Face One of the Periods When They Have Chance for Rich Harvest. Delay in Passage of Currency Bill Is Not Unwelcome to National Bankers.

By B. C. FORBES.

NEW YORK, July 11.—To-day there are two distinct divisions—finance, including securities, and business. The earlier improvement is probable in investments.

There, in a nutshell, you have the outlook.

The security markets have undergone drastic readjustments. Prices are the lowest since the 1907 panic, and in certain cases below even the minimum then recorded. Liqqidation has been thorough. Recently dealings have been almost at a standstill. Unless something wholly unforeseen happens to precipitate an upheaval the next movement should be upward, with probably periods of irregularity on untoward developments.

We are bound to have crop scares. We may have a serious railroad strike in the Eastern half of the continent, although arbitration probably will be acquiesced in at the last moment.

Europe may make heavy raids upon our supply of gold at the time our crops are being marketed, thus causing some monetary tension. A hitch in currency legislation is more than a possibility. The tariff still possesses disturbing elements. Our Washington Solons are apt to bring forward sensational proposals—such as the tax on trading in cotton for future delivery.

Chance for Rich Harvest.

Not an inspiring catalogue, you may remark. The reply is:

"Were the situation not fraught with uncertainties, had there not been injurious developments, securities would not be selling at their present low quotations. It is at such times that the courageous investor reaps a rich harvest."

Every lane has a turning. Investments, I believe, are about to turn a corner, about to move upward. They have suffered long and severely. Weak accounts have been weeded out. Present holders having withstood so much will not be easily stampeded at this late day. They will stick. Having weathered storms, they are little likely to give up when calmer seas are in sight.

Capital has been and still is scarce. Enormous quantities of wealth have been destroyed. But the worst is over. Europe should shortly be at peace. Hoarded money must soon reappear. Reckless borrowing has been stopped by international bankers, while at home only urgently needed funds are being raised. Quieter trade abroad and here is tending to ease the money market.

Conservative purchases of bonds, notes and stocks will, therefore, be in order. Bonds may be taken in hand first. But seasoned stocks will doubtless receive attention.

Currency Bill Delayed.

Latest reports from Washington indicate that no currency legislation may be enacted this session, but national bankers will not grieve over the prospect. They are hopeful that mature reflection will bring out the necessity for amendments tending to give experienced bankers a voice in the Federal Reserve Board and treating the banks as a whole with greater consideration.

The Government's crop report reflected a poor wheat condition, but a corn crop far beyond expectations. And, after all, corn is the most valuable of all crops raised in the United States; indeed, it is the most valuable single crop raised in any country of the world, for agricultural prospects as a whole are encouraging.

The Interstate Commerce Commission's severe condemnation of New Haven's financial operations has merely emphasized what every body already knew or suspected, to wit: that money was being wasted by the millions in an insensate effort to create an incongruous monopoly.

Bankers Face Probe.

Corruption, graft, inexcusable extravagance and utter lack of efficient financial management are among the offenses fastened upon the company, which J. P. Morgan & Co. have been financing. The bankers are hiding behind Mellen, but proceedings are expected which may place the blame where it belongs.

The collapse of the First-Second National Bank of Pittsburg and the scores of water and other ventures dominated by J. S. & W. S. Kuhn reveals that supervision of banking can not be too strict. The episode suggests criminality somewhere in Washington or in Pittsburg—perhaps both.

Using the public's money deposited in banks for dangerous speculation by insiders is an offense calling for punishment. The Kuhns are in danger of being classed with the Morse and Walsh type of financial buccaneers unless they furnish more satisfactory explanation than yet vouchsafed.

Future Sales Made Of Southern Iron

Considerable Pig Engaged at Low Prices for Delivery During Third Quarter of Year.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., July 12.—Considerable pig iron has been sold in Southern territory for delivery during the third quarter of the year, some of the larger consumers in the East and elsewhere taking advantage of the low prices.

Manufacturers in this section of the country have concluded they have sold enough iron at the low levels and have advanced prices from 50 cents to $1 per ton. The production has been cut down at least 10 to 15 per cent, six furnaces in Tennessee and Alabama being blown out. Repair work is being done on one or two of these furnaces. While $11 per ton, No. 2 foundry, is given as the average price for the product, there still are reports that concessions are being made.

Inquiries are in hand that promise to result in business, export deals under negotiation amounting to 12,500 tons, while domestic business under consideration amounts to not less than 25,000 tons. The intentions are to reduce the accumulated stacks of iron.

The home consumption is looking up. Castiron pipe plants in Anniston, North Birmingham, Greater Birmingham, Bessemer, Holt, Gadsden and other places are beginning to melt a little more iron. The big plant of the American Radiator Company at North Birmingham has been started up. It is proposed to melt 200 tons of iron daily at this place. The company spent something like $500,000 on the big plant at North Birmingham.

The new pipe plant at Gadsden started up this week and when in full operation there will be a healthly melt. This plant replaces the one destroyed by fire.

There is considerable activity in the steel market and all predictions now are there will be steady operation of plants through the balance of the year. Southern railroads are beginning once more to announce estimates of needs. Rail is in demand, as are bolts and spikes.

There is a strong demand for coke in this section of the country and all manufacturers are finding it necessary to keep coke ovens, both the beehive and the by-product types, in full operation. Better prices prevail for coke now than for some time.

COTTON SEED OIL.

NEW YORK, July 12.—The cotton seed oil market made further advances on old crop deliveries, owing to further active demand by shorts, while late months were a shade easier under heavy selling and scattered profit-taking. Sales, 18,300 barrels.

Standard Shares Up On Stock Exchange

Trade and Crop Reviews Display Surprising Optimism, but Bank Clearings Drop.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Despite the record dullness that prevailed during the short session of the Stock Exchange to-day, standard shares advanced fractionally on week-end covering by professionals. Some specialties showed sympathetic strength. Canadian Pacific advanced 2½, Mexican Petroleum 1½ and New Haven 1½.

Copper shares also shared in the slight advance in spite of the continued dullness of the capper metal business and lower prices.

Dealers continue to offer the new city 4½s, a sale being made to-day at 99¾. Panama 3s also changed hands at 101.

Prices were controlled entirely by the London market. Stocks abroad were higher and the sentiment exhibited was much more cheerful, owing to optimistic declarations regarding the political and financial situations by men competent to judge. The improvement here was even greater than in London.

The surprising cheerfulness among business interests, as indicated in the weekly trade reviews, may have more effect later. The week has undoubtedly seen a decided improvement in the prospects for corn, spring wheat and oats because of the rainfall in the different sections devoted to these crops. There also has been improvement in weather conditions in the cotton belt, where the lowest percentages of condition have been reported.

The decrease of 10½ per cent in the bank clearings this week for the entire country is mainly due to the 20 per cent loss in New York and shrinkage of 21 per cent in Boston. St. Louis fell off 6 per cent and New Orleans about 5 per cent, but Chicago increased 7 per cent, Baltimore 20 and Philadelphia 2½ per cent.

The transactions on the New York Stock Exchange were 750,000 shares, compared with 2,287,114 a year ago, and bonds dealt in were 50 per cent smaller, which explains part of the reduction in bank exchanges.

NEW YORK BANK STATEMENT.

NEW YORK, July 12.—The weekly statement of the New York Associated Banks shows the following changes:

STEAMSHIP MEN STANDING FIRM, TAX APPROVED

News of Week Dismays Cotton Trade, Which Is Assured on Two Sides.

By M. A. ROSE.

"Conditions are sound. Everything is all right. Be optimistic."

This admonition is repeated, with small variation, by every banker and business man who has occasion to talk to the newspaper men.

But just how to develop optimism in looking over the developments of the past week as affecting the cotton trade is hard to see.

All along it has been hoped that somewhere, somehow, some sort of compromise would be effected between the foreign steamship lines on the one hand, and the bankers, cotton exporters and railroads on the other.

The position of the steamship lines has been explained. They propose to inspect all shipments of cotton for export. If bales are not completely covered, if the cotton is wet, stained, or soiled in any degree, or if the marks are not plain, they propose to make notes of these facts on the through bills of lading. This puts claims for damage up to the railroads, since the railroads give a clean bill at point of origin, and presumbaly the cotton is in good condition when delivered to them. The railroads naturally will not stand this, and propose to make the same notations.

Bills Not Negotiable.

The banks announce that they can not afford to buy exchange with bills of lading attached when such bills of lading are plastered with exceptions. Such action would leave them liable for damage claims, they say. And without the banks' aid, the exporters can not finance the cotton crop.

Three meetings have been held, the first in Atlanta, the second in Birmingham and the third in Atlanta, on Thursday.

At each of these meetings efforts were made to get the steamship men to recede from their position, which attempts to revolutionize the entire cotton trade on a few weeks' notice.

It was to no avail. The steamship men stand pat. As a result, it will be "Every man for himself, and the de'il take the hindmost."

The day following the last conference of the cotton trade representatives came news that the Senate committee has declared in favor of th Clarke amendment, which imposes a tax of $50 on every futures contract made on the floor or under the rules of any cotton exchange, the money to be refunded in case of actual delivery.

This tax is prohibitive. Also it is so unwise that it will not take a year of its operation to demonstrate what a silly blunder has been made.

All Hurt, None Helped.

The spinner, the cotton buyer, the planter will be hampered in their operations, and their business will be made more hazardous by the operation of this law. But more than all, the farmer will suffer by being deprived of information as to current prices.

One point which many seem to have overlooked is the clause governing trading across the ocean. Many have remarked that the Clarke bill will transfer hedging operations and cotton trading generally to Liverpool.

Whoever framed the Clarke amendment to the tariff, with fiendish ingenuity so worded the law that firms cannot escape the tax simply by executing their trades in Liverpool. It is especially provided that such trans-Atlantic deals are considered subject to taxation.

If now, Congress only will extend this law to cover wheat, cotton seed oil, sugar, dry goods, newspapers, and all other things sold or bought on deferred contracts, the job will be complete.

LONDON STOCKS.

LONDON, July 12.—Prices showed a general improvement in the Stock Exchange to-day on a report from Sofia that Servia and Greece have consented to acceptance of Russian arbitration. Consols advanced ⅛. Rails and mining shares were higher. Discount rates were 1-16 per cent lower in Lombard Street. Rates were ⅛ per cent lower at Berlin. At Paris, exchange on London was ¼ centime higher at 25 for 5 per cent; at Berlin it was unchanged. Mines 6 7-32, debeers 20⅝.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Money on call nominal. Time loans strong; 60 days, 3@3½ per cent; 90 days, 4@4½; six months, 5 per cent. Prime mercantile paper 6 per cent. Sterling exchange, steady, with actual business in bankers' bills at 483.25 for 60-day bills, and at 486.90 for demand. Commercial bills, 482¾.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Trading on the market for outside securities to-day was aagin on an extremely small scale and in low priced mining shares. American Tobacco moved up a small fraction. The copper stocks were somewhat higher, but inactive.

BONDS.

NEW YORK, July 12.—A sale of Panama Canal 3s was made at 101 to-day. These bonds were quited at 101½ bid on Friday. Other Government bonds were unchanged. Railroad and other bonds were dull.

BAR SILVER.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Bar silver in London to-day was ¼ penny higher at 27 1-5d per ounce. To-day's New York price was ⅝c higher at 58⅜c. Mexican dollars were 47@51c.

BANK CLEARINGS.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Bank clearings to-day, $266,125,771, against $307,357,057 a year ago, a decrease of $41,231,285.

NEW ORLEANS RICE.

NEW ORLEANS, July 12.—The local rice market continues to rule strong on Honduras clean and steady on Japan. Quotations on the leading grades are as follows:

Honduras head, 4⅜@5¾; straights, 3¾@4½; screenings 2¾@3.

Japan head, 3½@3⅝; straights, 2¾@3⅛; screenings, 2¼@2½.

SUMMER WAILS FROM COTTON GROWERS DUE

Crop Advices Scanned Closely for First Evidences of Threats to Cut Yield.

MEMPHIS, July 12.—"Summer wails" will perhaps soon be stylish in advices concerning the cotton crop. If they fail to develop there will be a large yield, exceeding that of the season just closing by a million or more bales. Moreover, there will be no little surprise for the trade if during the next few weeks there are not advices from various sections of the belt telling of the crop losing some of its promise.

At the present time there is no serious trouble menacing yield anywhere in the belt, though there is no telling how soon some will develop and change the almost unanimously favorable tenor of advices into a mixture of good and bad. Cultivation is nearly finished, and the laying-by time finds the belt perhaps cleaner from weeds and grass than ever before. Conditions have been well nigh ideal for such and the recent rains have added to the basis of excellent promise. There is still the matter of late start in some sections, but the plant is generally healthy and, given proper conditions, this can be overcome.

The fruiting season finds the crop clean, well worked and with a good taproot. There will be no trouble keeping the plant in good shape by top-soil cultivation during the trying weeks of July, in case there is not enough moisture. In some sections of this part of the belt one fear now is that there will be more rain than needed, thus making the plant too rank.

So far temperatures have been normal and no injury has been done thereby. The past few days have brought some talk of them being a little too high in Texas and Oklahoma, but serious attention has not been paid that complaint here, as it will take a number of days of high temperatures to mar the excellent prospect for yield. There have also come some reports to the effect that the boll weevil was more numerous than ever before and over a wider area in Texas, but that is another menace which may not prove serious. If the crop suffers from high temperatures there will be a check to the weevil, for hot weather is one thing that will stop their work.

The recent Government report on condition showed fairly large improvement during the month of June, and it is current belief that since June 25 there has been further betterment. The time is at hand, however, for the usual deterioration to start, and on that account there is very close scrutiny of all reports from the fields. The speculative market continues to reflect a belief that the world will, during the next twelve-month, require a large supply of the raw material—some people say not less than 15,000,000 bales—around current prices, so anything that holds promise of cutting into the prospect of such will find ready response. The smallness of the stock in New York for protecting short commitments of July and August contracts and the slim chance of it being increased also have a tendency to discourage short selling. The steadiness of spots in the belt reflects willingness to pay ruling prices, although business consists of small volume.

The threatened destruction of future trading by the Clarke amendment to the revenue tariff bill has helped to restrict activity in speculation during the week and has created much concern among the spot dealers who fear they will be left without hedging facilities this side of Liverpool.

Farmers Warned to Keep Bales Uniform

Failure to Clean Gins Between Runs of Differing Grades of Cotton Is Wasteful.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Acting on a protest received from the Cotton Association of Manchester, England, the Department of Agriculture has issued an appeal to the cotton exchanges of the South to insist on the ginners guarding against the mixing of various staple cottons in the same bale.

The warning is issued that laxity in this direction will cost the cotton producers of Georgia and other Southern States large sums of money each season. The growers are particularly urged either to limit their cotton growing to one variety or to provide themselves with storage houses in each of which only cotton of a single staple is stored.

The department says:

"The fault, it seems, lies largely with the ginner, and results from the fact that he is unwilling to take the time, after ginning one kind of cotton, to clean out the ginning machines before he introduces another staple. As a result, the first layer or part packed will contain some of the cotton previously ginned. If the cotton being ginned is long stapled, the mixture of short cotton in this first plate or layer will lessen the value of the bale from $1.50 to $4, even though there be only about 20 pounds of cotton affected. The reason for this is that the cotton merchants sample from each side of the bale and rate it by the worst side, so that such a bale would be rated 'mixed,' whereas 480 pounds of it might be long staple and only the first plate or layer of about 10 or 20 pounds mixed staple.

"The department urges on the cotton producers that if they can not provide themselves with seed cotton storage houses and gin large quantities at a time, to insist that the ginners clean out the ginning machine and take the old roll of previous cotton out before ginning new cotton.

Bulls Held in Check by Fear of Tax on Futures

Weevil and Hot Weather in Texas Only Bad Crop News To Be Heard.

NEW ORLEANS, July 12.—With the sword of Damocles hanging over the cotton market, it is hard to arouse speculation in the staple, even though a somewhat bullish environment has developed recently. Since the Government reports were issued July 3 Liverpool has shown distinctly a bullish attitude, neither the condition figures nor the acreage being considered of a bearish character by European cotton trade.

Taking advantage of the pessimistic feeling created by the proposition to tax futures out of existence, bearish interests, here and in New York, sold the market rather aggressively in the early part of the week, depressing contract prices to the level of 11.40 for October delivery. The strength manifested by Liverpool, where a good spot demand has been in evidence, sales totalling 10,000 bales almost every day, checked the declining tendency, and started shorts to covering.

Anticipation of possible damage to the crop from the high temperatures now prevailing in Texas, together with numerous reports of the boll weevil ravaging the crop in the western and central belt, induced some fresh buying. With bulls bidding for cotton and shorts inclined to cover, the market has had a substantial reaction upward from the low level established earlier in the week. There has been no general activity, however in the market, which has been more or less under the control of the professional element.

The July position, strange to say, has shown relative weakness. Exporters have had practically no orders, and even if they had them would find it a difficult matter to secure the grades sought after by the trade on the other side.

Except for reports as to damage by boll weevil in Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi, crop accounts continue of a satisfactory character. In fact, the reports as to the progress now being made by the crop could hardly be more encouraging.

It is believed by some that crop prospects are now in the zenith, and for this reason there is an inclination to buy the market on declines, the argument being made that the critical crop period is now at hand, and that any change in the condition is certain to be for the worse. The alarmist element in the market is trying to make capital out of the high temperatures reported in Texas within the last few days. These temperatures have not been abnormally high for Texas yet, however, and conservative people in the market think that hot dry weather is just what is needed to hold the boll weevil in check in that section of the belt.

Quiet Day in Cotton With Brokers Away

Favorable Crop Reports Offset by Cheerful Trade Advices—First Bale at New Orleans.

By EDWARD LAW ROULETT.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Cotton was very quiet to-day, many brokers having left the city yesterday for the week under the impression that no developments of importance were to be expected, owing to the unsettled state of sentiment over pending legislation and the holidays in Liverpool. The opening was steady at an advance of 2 to 3 points on scattered covering. The demand was not active, and with very few sellers around the ring, prices ruled close to the opening figures.

Favorable crop reports were offset to some extent by optimistic trade advices from the Northwest and the absence of any pressure of actual cotton, which places the burden of selling either upon Southern hedges against prospective yields or speculation.

The drygoods trade suggested continued optimism in the West, owing to the prospect of large crops. Big Chicago distributors say that forward business closed during the past six months has been in excess of last year, and that collections are normal. So long as domestic mills are able to write forward business at prices based on present cotton values, and to hedge this business in futures they would seem to have little to fear from any immediate foreign competition, whatever may be the ultimate effect of prospective changes in the tariff.

Fall River sales for the week are estimated at 175,000 pieces against 165,000 last year.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, July 12.—With Liverpool enjoying a holiday, the cotton market had rather a quiet tone today. Shorts were inclined to cover over the week-end, the demand from this source steadying prices. At one time during the session, prices were about 4 points above Friday's closing, but at the close were unchanged from the previous day.

Spots were officially reported quiet and unchanged, on the basis of 12 7-16c for middling, with sales amounting to 165 bales and sold for 16c per pound. The first bale of the season came from San Benito, Tex., and classed middling. The cotton was off color, however, and gin cut, and was considered a rather poor bale. The cotton had evidently been picked while it was too green and indicated the lateness of the Texas crop.

Secretary Hester's week-end figures were considered bearish with regard to both the visible supply statement and the into-sight. The spinners' takings for the week were only 152,000 bales, as compared with 195,000 the corresponding week last year.

Grains Show Losses On Heavy Selling

Longs Throw Millions of Bushels Into Chicago Pits—Record Movement Expected Early.

By JOSEPH F. PRITCHARD.

CHICAGO, July 12.—Millions of bushels of long grain were thrown into the various pits on the Board of Trade to-day and in addition to this selling, there were heavy sales in the way of "hedging" against both wheat and oats. Price losses were shown of 1 1-2 to 2 cents for wheat, 1-2 to 3-4 cent for corn and 1-2 cent for oats.

There was a general disposition on the part of the medium-sized holders of wheat to sell out, even in the event of losses being shown. The heavy receipts at primary markets since the new crop commenced to move caused a good deal of uneasiness in the ranks of those who heretofore have been bulls. These receipts amounted to 6,429,000 bushels this week, while for the corresponding time last year they were only 2,000,000 bushels. From July 1 to date the receipts were 8,412,000 bushels, while a year ago for the same period they were 3,455,000 bushels.

When the fact is considered that the bankers of the Southwest are likely to show little favor to growers and grain elevator men because of scarcity of money, it seems likely the outward movement will be an almost unheard-of amount. Chicago received 698,000 bushels during last week, which was only about half the amount shipped out. There were heavy export sales at the seaboard again last night.

Rains throughout the corn belt, where most needed, and the weakness in wheat and oats caused heavy selling of the yellow cereal. Primary receipts were 4,000,000 bushels this week, compared with 3,000,000 bushels for a like period last year. Cash sales here were small at 180,000 bushels.

While there was some liquidation in oats again to-day, it was on a much smaller scale than on several previous days. There was some buying on profit-taking account, but this was more than offset by the oats to come forward in the way of "hedges" against the actual grain.

The feature, as well as the principal sustaining power in the provision market, was the advance in hogs, coupled with the covering by shorts in July pork and the buying of September and October lard, which was believed to have been for the larger packers.

TRADE AWAITS DEFINITE NEWS FROM FARMERS

Realization of Crop Promises and Increase in Freight Rates Will Stimulate Trade.

NEW YORK, July 12.—It is the belief of the Fourth National Bank, formed after hearing from correspondents in all parts of the country, that the two things needed to stimulate general business this year are a realization of the best crop promises and the granting of the 5 per cent freight increases asked by the Eastern railroads.

"The outlook for the crops is still reassuring," the bank says in its bulletin, "but in some quarters the promise

WHAT ATLANTA MANUFACTURERS AND JOBBERS ARE DOING

RETAILERS ASK FOR IMPORTANT LEGAL CHANGES

Want Garnishment Law Broadened and Also Seek Fraudulent Check Bill at This Session.

MEETING CALLED JULY 21-23

Georgia Merchants to Convene at Hotel Ansley and Make Strong Effort to Further Cause.

Two thousand retailers from all parts of the State are expected to assemble in Atlanta July 21, 22, 23, in the annual convention of the Retail Merchants' Association of Georgia.

Headquarters will be the Ansley Hotel, and the business sessions probably will be held in the assembly room there.

There are two bills now before the Georgia Legislature which the retailers are deeply interested in furthering. They are bills amending the garnishment law, making it broader of application, and a bill making it a misdemeanor to draw a fraudulent check, unless, within thirty days, the check is met.

This will be the principal matter before the convention, but there also will be discussions of topics of timely interest, and the annual election of officers. Present officers are J. W. S. Hardy of Waycross, Ga., president; D. E. Hogsed, Toccoa, vice president; John Bratton, Atlanta, secretary-treasurer; Louis W. Roberts, Atlanta, special representative.

Year's Campaign Waged.

Mr. Roberts, ex-president of the association, has spent the past year going from town to town in Georgia enlisting the interest of the merchants in the two bills which have been introduced before the Legislature.

The garnishment bill proposes to make all wages subject to garnishment. As the law now stands, men who do work which is entirely or in part manual can not be garnished. Thus the engineer on a locomotive can not be garnished, while the conductor can be. The new bill makes laborers' exemption $1 per day, and 50 per cent of the amount above that figure. In other words, a laborer making $2 per day would have $1 subject to garnishment—50 per cent of the amount above $1.

In the call for the convention, President Hardy says:

Solid Carloads Coming.

"You have every reason to feel proud of your association—it is composed of the leading progressive and aggressive merchants of the State. Several of the larger and a few of the smaller towns have already pledged themselves to send a solid carload of delegates. If all of the towns send even a fair per cent of the numbers they have designated, we will have the largest convention ever held by this organization. There is every reason to believe that our expectations will be surpassed.

"Atlanta is known far and wide for her hospitality, and while our conventions are business meetings, for busy men, no doubt you will be accorded such entertainment as is appropriate."

The meeting was held last year in Warm Springs, with an attendance of something over 1,000 members.

Used Atlanta Underwear, But Surprised When Told So

Professional Man Had Acquaintance With Manufacturer—Didn't Know What He Made.

"Where are you going?" asked the Senior Partner as the Junior Partner arose from his desk in the Candler Building and put on his hat.

"Over to the Peter Hill factory."

"Peter Hill underwear?"

"Of course."

"Ti swear! I've been wearing that stuff for four years, and never knew it was made here."

This is a conversation which actually occurred. Further, the man who didn't know Peter Hill underwear is made in Atlanta had been a speaking acquaintance of P. N. Hill for several years. He never connected the well-known goods with the maker.

This is another text the promoters of the permanent exhibit of Atlanta-made goods might use. For Peter Hill underwear, in the making, gives employment to 100 girls and a score or so of salesmen and office employees.

Six Years Old.

The firm is six years old. In that time it has grown to occupy an entire floor of the big Commerce Hall building. From one garment it has expanded until it manufactures almost 100 different styles of garments, in a wide variety of materials. The original garment was athletic underwear for men. Neckties, bath robes, pajamas, union suits in many kinds of cotton goods, silk and flannel now keep it busy.

"Prejudice? Yes, we have met with it, time and again," says Mr. Hill. "Our goods sell on Broadway, but there are Georgia merchants who won't listen when our salesman calls. They are fewer and fewer every year, however. We are getting the cream of the trade right now, but it was a hard battle."

Making it stand on quality and fit, but never neglecting price, the business has grown steadily, and now the trade-mark has wide fame, particularly in the Southern States.

The uninitiated never can realize how many different kinds of things a man can choose to wear beneath his outer clothing until a visit is paid to the Peter Hill factory. Blue, green, lavender, pink and tan and just plain white are among the colors; checks and stripes the patterns; silk, cotton and flannel the materials.

Winter Athletic Underwear.

The newest wrinkle is a line of very light flannel underwear of athletic cut, designed for the chap who wants loose-fitting, short sleeve and short leg underwear in the winter as well as in summer, but who hesitates to go through December with the filmy garments of June.

No other factory has adopted this idea, but the success of fall sales already made by the Atlanta concern indicate that competitors soon will fall in line.

Making underwear is just plain sewing, and no more interesting than any operation with the familiar high-speed, electrically driven sewing machines, which seem the limit of mechanical ingenuity.

The trick is all in the designing—how to give comfort and fit, plus style.

Always New Ideas.

There's always something new, as, for instance, a Peter Hill idea of sizing union suits according to the length of a man's body, as well as according to its circumference.

Neckwear demands more hand work. First, the silks have to be cut by hand with sharp knives instead of with machines. The sewing is done by machine, but the neckties have to be turned right side out, lined, pressed, and boxed by hand. This is what costs in a necktie, for although silk is expensive enough it does not take any great quantity to make an ordinary bow br four-in-hand tie.

Pick Sub-Committee To Get Exhibit Site

Manufacturers Who Demand Exact Details Before Lining Up Are To Be Satisfied.

No one behind the permanent exhibit project is sleeping. There was a meeting of the full committee of the Chamber of Commerce Wednesday noon in the Empire Building.

At its close a sub-committee, composed of Brooks Morgan, J. K. Orr, Bolling H. Jones and V. H. Krieghaber was named to take up all of the five or six proposals made by owners of available buildings, and report as soon as practicable.

The movement in favor of a permanent exhbiit has simmered down to a question of expense, it seems. Twenty-three of the manufacturers publicly announced their intention of taking space in the exhibit hall, without demanding any further explanation as to details. Others privately assured the committee of their co-operation.

But the majority of the manufacturers want to know just how much rentals will be, where the building is to stand—in fact, all about it.

Realizing that the only way to get these people in line is to answer their questions, the committee appointed Wednesday will go as far as possible toward selecting the best site, and ascertaining the cost.

Silk Is in High Favor; Charmeuse Leading

Goods So Pretty Women Do Not Know When to Stop Buying Says Importer.

Silks will be more fashionable than ever this fall, according to a prominent importer recently returned from an extended trip abroad.

"There were more silks worn in Paris this season than ever before," he said. "The demand will not only be for more silks, but for more kinds of silk. Much charmeuse is used.

"The silks used by the fine trade are so beautiful that women do not know when to stop buying. As a result practically the entire summer wardrobe is made of silk. It will be the same thing this winter.

"Our Paris house has been selling not only to American buyers, but to buyers from Russia, Italy, and almost every other country in the world. Never has Lyons been sold up so far ahead.

SALES TERMS ADOPTED BY LUMBERMEN

National Dealers' Association Makes Rules to Keep All Transactions Uniform.

Following considerable agitation in the last year regarding terms of sale, the National Wholesale Lumber Dealers' Association has sent to its members a set of rules covering this point that it hopes to make uniform all over the country. This was done by the association in recognition of the difficulties of doing business under the variation of sales terms that exists at the present time.

Particular insistence is made on impressing on buyers the necessity of remembering that the terms of sale under which an order is accepted are as much a part of the contract as the prices at which the lumber is sold.

CANNOT STRETCH TIME.

The purchaser has no more right, according to the association committee on terms of sale and trade ethics, to stretch the time allowed for payment or to violate other terms of sale than the seller has to raise prices after they have once been fixed.

These are the sales terms adopted by the association:

The terms hereon are those agreed on by both buyer and seller and are a part of the sale agreement.

Settlement to be made promptly on receipt of each car. Freight, net cash, balance by note at 60 days from date of invoice or less 1 1-2 per cent discount for cash if paid within fifteen days from date of invoice; or 1 per cent for cash if paid within 30 days from date of invoice.

No discount allowed after 30 days.

WHEN CAR IS DELAYED.

If car is not received within the above discount times, and discount is desired, prepayment on account will not be held as acceptance of the shipment and the right to make corrections and complaint will not be forfeited thereby. In making delivered prices, cost of goods delivered at destination is guaranteed, but not against delay in transit.

Claims for count or quality must be reported as soon as car is unloaded and tally proved. No claims allowed if not prepaid within ten days after unloading.

General Conditions—All contracts and agreements are made contingent upon strikes, fires, floods, inability to secure cars, delays of carriers and other delays unavoidable and beyond our control.

In making delivered prices we simply guarantee the cost of goods at your place, but are in no way responsible for their safe delivery.

Under these rules all orders signed by buyers are subject to the approval of the home offices.

Clearer Skies Before Autumn

By SPENCER TRASK & CO.

We believe that by autumn a number of the problems now vexing our financial and business men will have been settled; the revised tariff bill should have been passed by September or October. By then the Interstate Commerce Commission may have allowed the 5 per cent increase in freight rates demanded by the Eastern railroads, and there is also the possibility of some bill having been passed amending our wretched currency laws.

By then, too, the investing public will have the chance to get its proper bearings.

In short, by the fall we should know much better what our true economic situation promises to be for the next few years.

Customs Decision Interests Firm Here

New York Judge of Appraisers' Court Rules on Baskets of Mixed Material.

Judge McClelland, of the Board of United States General Appraisers, handed down a decision in New York last week which is of particular interest to a thriving Atlanta concern.

A basket-importing firm in the East brought goods from abroad which were made of braided rush in natural color and stained willow. The customs appraisers assessed duty of 40 per cent, as stained willow, while the importers claimed they should pay only 35 per cent, as natural rush. The importer lost before Judge McClelland.

The Bombayreed Importing and Manufacturing Company of Atlanta imports considerable of the same class of goods, and watched the decision with interest. In the past, it is said, it has been the custom to decide whether the duty shall be 35 or 40 per cent, according to whether the natural rush or the stained yellow predominates in the design.

E. K. Ward, of the Bombayreed company, is in Grand Rapids, Mich., where his firm is making an exhibit at the furniture show. A similar exhibit is being made at the furniture show in High Point, N. C.

Publication in Hearst's American of a statement by Mr. Ward that American farmers could make good profits by cultivating the native willow on their waste lands brought a flood of letters from farmers submitting samples of willows and requests for valuations on them. Mr. Ward sticks to his statement that there is money in it for the farmer, and with very little work, but he says the willow must be cultivated, as otherwise the shoots are too short and are crooked and knotty. A Government bulletin tells just how this should be done.

THOUSANDS GET INVITATIONS TO BIG CONVENTION

Snappy Talks on Pertinent Topics Expected—Attendance May Go Above 2,000 Mark.

Invitations are being sent out as rapidly as possible to almost every merchant in six States who does a business of any consequence—thousands in all—summoning the dealers to the Southern Merchants' Convention to be held in Atlanta during the first two weeks of August.

Letters to various Atlanta firms which are taking an interest in the forthcoming event demonstrate the enthusiasm which is being aroused.

"I have received letters from dealers scattered all the way from Virginia to Texas," says Bolling H. Jones, one of the most active workers for the success of the convention. "I feel sure the attendance this year will go far above the 2,000 mark set last season."

Indications are that the first day's session will be one of the most interesting. During this session, the diversification of crops will be discussed. There is plenty of meat in the topics assigned for other sessions, however, and none of them is likely to be dull.

Arrangements were made with the Forsyth Theater last week whereby the whole house is reserved for the delegates to the convention ,on the nights of August 5 and August 11. Arrangements have been made for a reception at the Piedmont Driving Club, and for several thousand seats for the ball game at Ponce DeLeon Park between Atlanta and Chattanooga August 15.

W. H. White, of the White Provision Company, will speak to the convention on the opportunity offered Georgia farmers in stock growing. This promises to be one of the best addresses of the convention.

"It will be a real convention," says H. T. Moore, secretary. "For instance, we are told that merchants in the smaller towns have been among the defenders of the one-crop system. When crop diversification comes up for discussion they are likely to air their views in no uncertain language. They are close to the farmer, and what they have to say carries weight.

"The idea is to avoid loading the program with heavy addresses. We want debates—informal talks of five-minute length—short speeches with a punch in them. It looks as if we will get them."

U. S. STEEL STATEMENT.

NEW YORK, July 10.—The United States Steel Corporation reports unfilled orders on its books as of June 30 of 5,807,317 tons. This compares with 6,324,322 tons on May 31, 6,978,762 tons on April 30, 7,468,956 on March 31 and 5,807,346 on June 30, 1912.

European Business Comes to Atlanta Firm Unsolicited

Orders From Berlin and Paris Arrive Without Explanation of How Fame Crossed Ocean.

Fame is a peculiar affair.

There have been firms which have striven hard and long for recognition abroad, and with indifferent success. Again, some article of American manufacture becomes known favorably in Europe, without the slightest effort on the manufacturer's part, and unsolicited orders follow.

As for instance—

In Marietta Street is a concern but two years old, the A. E. Hill Manufacturing Company. The Hill company makes a machine which sharpens safety razor blades for all makes of safety razors. The other day Mr. Hill was surprised by a cabled order for a large shipment of his devices, to be consigned to a firm in Berlin.

And this week he is packing a shipment for the Societe Generale de Couterllerie & Orfevrerie, 31 Rue Pastourelle, Paris.

All this without any advertising abroad, or any effort to interest foreign buyers.

"How they came to learn of my device in Europe is more than I know," says Mr. Hill. "Of course, I knew in a general way that the safety razor was catching on in Europe; it is the kind of thing which would take well there. But who first heard of my sharpening machine in Germany or France is more than I can say. Needless to remark, though, all orders are thankfully received. The French order is a trial. Already I have had a repeat order from Berlin, which shows the device is giving satisfaction there."

The Hill machine is manufactured in Atlanta. It was invented four years ago, and has been on the market for two years. A new model was put out during the past week, the only change being a better arrangement of the circular hone which supplements the work of the ingenious strops which literally put a "hair-splitting" edge on safety razor blades. The machines are automatic, requiring almost no attention after the blades are put in place.

L. & N. SHOWS BIG INCREASE.

LOUISVILLE, KY., July 12.—Gross earnings of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad for the fiscal year ended June 30 increased more than three and a quarter million dollars, Charles Haydon, the company's controller, reports.

Gross receipts from operation from July 1, 1912, to June 30, 1913, were $59,467,771, as compared with $53,211,788 for the preceding period.

DENMARK SEES GOODS.

There is being held in Copenhagen an exhibition of modern office furniture and mechanical appliances for expediting the matters necessary to run economically an up-to-date active business concern's counting room. About 60 per cent of the exhibitors are displaying American goods.

The impression made on the public by the American exhibits is very favorable, and it may safely be stated that the exhibition of safes, typewriters, adding machines, indexing devices, steel furniture, office chairs, cash registers and stationery is superior to the similar displays made by German, English, Swedish and Danish firms.

SELLING NOTES.

Manufacturers of women's neckwear are looking forward to active business for fall. The demand for laces continues to show improvement.

Satin-faced silks continue to lead the demand. American buyers at Lyons are placing sizable orders for charmeuse. Heavy satins, similar to duchesse, are also in demand.

Everything is shaping up in great order for the August meeting of the Southern Merchants.

There's outside enthusiasm as well as inside. The merchants are pleased with the program and the plans that have so far been announced. Word is beginning to come from many quarters that the folks are coming.

And Folks are the best part of a Convention. Carnegie says that he always surrounds himself with people who are smarter than he is. He wants to learn from them. Open-minded Andy! He makes it pay, anyhow.

There's going to be a program of mighty good things. There will be lots for us all to learn. Methods, Money and Merchandising will be the Main Mention. Does that interest YOU?

SOUTHERN IS REAL LEAGUE THIS SEASON

More Class by Far Now Than Last Year—It Will Take Great Club to Cop.

PLAYERS BAT BETTER, ON AVERAGE, THAN IN 1912

Catchers of This Season Have Pecks of Class—Race Vastly Better as Well.

By Percy H. Whiting.

"THE Southern League is a faster league this season than last." So says Whitey Alperman, field captain of the Atlanta club and wisest head in the league.

So say I.

So say we all of us.

Granted. It doesn't have to be so dad-blamed good, either, to land that title.

It was an insect league last year.

Also, the team that won it was the worst team that ever won a pennant in the Southern League.

* * *

THE humble position of the Baron team this year tells part of the story. It was good enough to win the rag last season. This year it is lucky to be in the first division. And it's very much the same team, too. It is weaker in spots, but better in others. And look where it is.

It was lucky to "get by" last year at all. This year they have found it out.

* * *

A YEAR ago this time just seven men were batting .300 or over. This year a dozen men are doing it.

The base running doesn't show any advantage this season, though there's no great falling off.

The pitching is surely quite as good this year as last, and possibly a lot better.

Last year at this time Swann, now canned, was leading the league. Sommers was second, Aitchison, a good pitcher, was third, and Merritt, an antique, fourth. Going down the list were found Boyd, Wagner, Demaree, Smith, Hardgrove and Foxen. Now, that was no bad collection of pitchers. Barring Swann, they were highly useful.

This year the pitching crop is quite as promising. Lots of good men are being held down by poor teams—Brenton, for example. Others, like Beck, Williams, Walker, Conzelman and others, are too young to have found themselves, but are corking pitchers in the making.

The league has some nice hurlers this season. Coveleskie is going better than ever. Conzelman is promising. Sommers is having another good season. E. Brown is a marvel—Scout Larry Sutton says he's the best pitcher in the league. Price has found himself. Hardgrove is going strong again. Bagby looks useful. W. Robertson has proved a star. Cavet is pitching up to his limit. Hogg, after a grand start, is slumping; but he looks like a wonder for all that.

Probably the pitching strength of the league is greater now than last year. Undoubtedly the present crop will look 25 per cent better in two or three years than the 1912 harvest.

* * *

THE catching caliber of the league this year has it all over that of last year. Street, Schmidt and Mayer are wonders. Adams, of the Pels, is a good man, though he is playing now with an injured hand. It's been a long time since the Southern League has had such catchers as this year.

* * *

THE league has better batters this year than it had last. Robertson, Elberfeld, Long, Smith, Kniseley, Welchonce, Gribbens, Sloan, King and Baerwald are terrific hitters in their 1913 form.

A year ago this time the leaders were Almeida, Harbison, Hemphill, McGilvray, Johnson of Montgomery, Doc Johnston, Welchonce, Wares, Alperman, Sommers, Sentell, Bagby, Moran and James. In a two-sided batting bee the 1913 stars would win by about a million hits.

* * *

THE teams this year are, in the main, playing better baseball. Their fielding seems a shade better, there seems more pepper and the inside stuff is coming through better.

For another thing, the race is better.

A year ago to-day the Barons were out in front, with a lead of .125 over Chattanooga. The first team was separated from the fourth by .138. The first and last teams were .211 apart. And the Crackers hadn't hit the bottom, though they were but one point away.

Now the race is tight, the Crackers are in the running, the team is going pretty strong, and every prospect pleases.

Surely the good year 1913 has it over its immediate predecessor by 50 miles, as well as by 365 1-4 days.

JOHNNY EVERS IS MAKING GOOD AS MANAGER OF CUBS

CHICAGO, ILL., July 12.—Apparently fans were a little premature in weeping over little Johnny Evers, manager of the Chicago Cubs, who, according to the war correspondents in the spring, was so worried that he couldn't handle a rain check, let alone a ball team.

So different from the calm, businesslike methods of Chance and Tinker. Evers has grown so distraught that he has worried himself into the thought that he has a great ball team. While Tinker and Chance—well, you see?

CARL THOMPSON, FORMER GEORGIA BOY, NOW HOPE OF THE CRACKERS

BILLY SMITH is highly elated over the showing this former collegian made in his two games here, and predicts that he will prove a corking twirler for the local club. Smith secured him from the Barons, where he pitched swell ball, but suffered by poor support from his teammates in Birmingham.

TRACY MATHEWSON, the Sunday American staff photographer, snapped this picture just as Thompson shot one of his fast balls over the plate in the game against the Gulls.

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

AND THEN—

"I am through," said Arthur Pelky
a disheartened man and sad
As he heard the final heaving of another husky lad.

"I am through," said Arthur Pelky
as he felt the open air,
And he turned and saw the cold gray walls that rose behind him there.

"I am through," said Arthur Pelky,
as he hit the vaudeville stage,
And he gets his little story now upon the sporting page.

Arthur Pelky and Tommy Burns are now doing stunts on the stage in Oregon. No doubt there are laws in Oregon, but what is needed in this case is a large, healthy man with a large, swift kick.

Mr. Pelky came before the public in one widely advertised incident. Subsequently he alleged that he had not been engaged in a prize fight. The consensus of opinion is that he wasn't.

In fact, if we were to call Mr. Pelky a pugilist we might be sued for slander.

If Bud Anderson contracted appendicitis when Leaches Cross hit him on the jaw, what would have happened if Leaches kicked him on the shin?

It was in the gloaming. J. McAleer gazed on the standings of the teams and spoke as follows: "United we stand, divided they beat our blocks off."

Ban Johnson arises to remark that he does not know a gol darn thing about a fight on the Boston team. We agree with Ban. He knows when not to know.

Nevertheless, some of us can glean some consolation out of the fact that Maurice McLoughlin beat Otto Frietzheim. We are quite sure that some of us can.

The National League has promulgated a law prohibiting athletes from stopping a game to catch a train. What a magnate would do to catch a crowd is curbed only by the ancient law against murder.

Altrock Is Carried To Develop Boehling

Best Recruit Twirler of the Season Is Being Tutored by the Veteran.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Most people think that Nick Altrock, the veteran pitcher, is carried by the Nationals for his comedy, and they have been unable to figure out where Nick is worth a salary on the funny stuff he pulls on the coaching lines. Nick is kept for no such reason. The record that Joe Boehling has hung up this season, making him the best recruit in the major leagues, is the reason why Nick is on Washington's pay roll. If it was not for Nick this young Boehling would probably be pitching for some minor club now.

Down in Charlottesville everybody on the Washington squad took turns advising Boehling how to pitch. One player would tell him not to pay any attention to the base runners, another to watch all the bases carefully, and a third never to pitch out for a baserunner when it looked as if he was going to steal.

With so much advice all at once, is it any wonder that when the kid was sent to the box in a game that he became confused, tried to remember everything told him, with the result that he could not do anything right, and only his natural ability and "stuff" saved him.

When the Nationals returned home from the Western trip Altrock went to Boehling one day and said: "Joe, if you will forget everything these other players told you and listen to me, I am ready to start all over again with your education. I have been pitching for seventeen years, and should know a little about the game. What do you say?"

Boehling thought over what Altrock had said and replied: "All right, Nick; go ahead. I'll do just what you tell me."

Penn's Crack Hurler Signs With Phillies

Harry Imlay, Captain of College Nine, Has Joined Charley Dixon's Team.

PHILADELPHIA, July 12.—Harry Imlay, captain of the University of Pennsylvania baseball nine, has signed a contract with the Philadelphia National League Club, with the understanding that he will report to the Phillies as soon as the college season closes.

Imlay promised Manager Dooin, of the Phillies, some time ago that he would sign, and, according to local advices, he has kept his promise in such a manner that it will not affect his amateur standing until after he leaves Penn.

Imlay is a spitball pitcher with plenty of speed and good control. He also can hit well and has "ball sense." He won the majority of his games this year through pure ability, having a weak team behind him.

FRASER, PIRATE SCOUT, LOOKING FOR PITCHERS

DUBUQUE, IA., July 12.—"Chick" Fraser, formerly with the Chicago Cubs, now scouting for the Pittsburg Nationals, ish ere to look for pitchers. He is particularly anxious to sign Jasper, the local star, whom the White Sox are after.

ENCK TO FIGHT JULY 17.

Jeff O'Connell and Freddie Enck last night were matched to box six rounds at Aurora, Ill., July 17.

UMPIRE GIVES A BALL TO GIRL FOR HER CATCH

NEW YORK, July 12.—Annunciata Malafronta, 13 years old, is the proud possessor to-day of a real big league baseball, presented to her by Umpire Quigley as a souvenir of the wonderful catch she made at the Brooklyn-Cincinnati game on Ebbets Field. In the eighth inning Otto Miller whizzed a sizzling foul into the upper tier of the grandstand in the midst of 6,000 parochial school children.

The girls screamed, but little Miss Malafronta put up her tiny pair of hands and coolly wrapped them around the ball as if it was only a bean bag. Not even the sensational running one-hand catch made by Marsans, the Cuban outfielder, in the second inning, caused a ripple of applause compared to the roar that shook the stadium after the little girl's catch.

She blushingly handed the ball to one of the ushers, but a minute later Umpire Quigley stepped from his place in the box and tossed a brand-new league ball up into the stand for Miss Malafronta.

CATCHER COOPER MAY BE OUT OF GAME ALL SEASON

CLEVELAND, OHIO, July 12.—Catcher Cooper, of the Cleveland Feds, may be out of the game for the remainder of the season. Cooper had his finger broken when a foul tip from Prout's bat grazed the member in the third inning of Thursday's combat. Cooper is a stand-by of Young's tribe and his loss means much to the team.

A physician treated the injury Thursday and the backstop star is carrying the finger in a plaster cast. His nail was torn off.

WHITE SOX BUY DALY; NOT BOSTON RED SOX

BOSTON, July 12.—Catcher Tommy Daly, of the Lowell club, in the New England League, was sold to the Chicago White Sox, and not the Red Sox, as was announced by Secretary Robert B. McRoy, of the Boston club.

It seems that several big league scouts were after the services of Daly, and Manager Jimmy Gray, of the Lowell team, set the purchase price of his star player at $3,500. McRoy telephoned Gray that he thought President McAleer, of the Red Sox, would buy Daly. McAleer was out of town and before McRoy could get in touch with him, President Charles Comiskey, of the Chicago club, through his agent, George Mills, accepted the proposition to purchase Daly. Roach immediately wired back his acceptance of the offer and the deal was closed then and there.

As the Red Sox only had a verbal agreement with the Lowell club, the White Sox win the player.

Daly will report to the Chicago club at the end of the New England League season.

Next Drome Races To Be Run Tuesday

In order to have it pretty well straightened out, the managers of the Atlanta Motordrome have decided definitely on two meets next week, one Tuesday and one Friday. In case the one Tuesday is postponed it will go over until Wednesday night.

The opening meet will be in reality the one postponed from Friday night.

The feature will be the Cracker sweepstakes, with a 7-mile final.

The Motordrome purse will be run as usual, and in addition there will be a four-cornered match race.

Dobbs Won't Be With Billikens Next Year

St. Louis Representative in Chattanooga to See Montgomery Manager.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., July 12. Johnny Dobbs, although put through a grueling examination here to-day, refused to commit himself as to the possibility of his managing the St. Louis Browns next season. The only information that has been gained is that the present pilot of the Dobbers has four jobs offered him next season.

Dobbs will not be at Montgomery next year.

Branch Rickey, of the Browns, is here in conference with President Andrews and Dobbs.

CARL THOMPSON HURLS WELL; CRACKERS PLAY GRAND BALL; GULLS PROVE EASY VICTIMS

Cracker Twirler in Only One Hole and Pulls Out Like Hero---Cavet Pitches Stiff Game, but His Goat Finally Escapes---Defeat Costs Gulls Lead.

By Percy H. Whiting.

RECALLING the spectacular days when Carl Thompson used to pitch winning ball for the University of Georgia, and bringing joy to the hearts of a walloping Saturday crowd, the Crackers copped from the ex-league leaders yesterday afternoon, 2 to 0.

It was a sensational contest.

Over in Birmingham the Barons ran Thompson away. They refused to support him, and without a little help he couldn't win ball games.

In Atlanta yesterday the Crackers awarded Thompson most amazing support. They made plays that couldn't be made. They pulled stops that aren't invented yet. They broke the heart of Pug Cavet, and they outgamed and outfought the Gulls.

If ever a team deserved victory that team was Atlanta.

Thompson pitched just the sort of ball that made him the greatest college pitcher of his day.

He had all the old confidence and just enough of the once-painful deliberation. His fast ball went up to the batter with the skip of a school girl. All the curves in his collection were breaking as he ordered. And with the skies overcast, the support perfect and the rooting deafening, there was never a chance for a flicker.

Thompson got in just one hole that was deep enough to show the stuff he was made of. The bottom threatened to fall out in the seventh. Up to that inning Thompson had allowed but two hits. McGill opened the seventh with a hard one to Agler. Joe got one hand on it and then dropped it. If Thompson had covered first, McGill would have been out. But Thompson failed to cover.

This was disconcerting.

Robertson developed a short single and McGill went to second.

This was horrible.

Odell, a cast-off and a dangerous batter, was up next, with "Bad" Schmidt in the hole.

Gee, it looked tough.

Then Thompson "put something on" the sphere. What it was Al Odell doesn't know yet. And he fanned.

Schmidt grounded foolishly to Agler.

Then came a miracle.

Thompson Makes a Stop.

Paulette, ordinarily a weak batter, laced into the ball. It traveled faster than eye could follow. Nobody knew what had happened. Then Thompson closed his hands, staggered a bit, tossed the ball in the air and the side was out. He had stopped as hot a liner as ever was hit by a lightweight, and he didn't even raise his hands to do it. The ball just drilled in, and when he convulsively closed his pins he had it. From that time on the Gulls didn't come near enough to scoring to make it interesting.

Smith shifted his line-up again for yesterday's game, putting the slumping Bailey on the bench and sending Manush to the field. It was figured that while Manush couldn't field he might hit. And then, bless goodness, he both hit AND FIELDED—chiefly and most notably the latter. Once off the clouds and once from his shoe-tops he plucked safe hits, the victims being Schmidt and Cavet. He seemed to go awkwardly for both of the flies, but he got them.

Cavet's Goat Wouldn't Stick.

The Crackers made all the runs they needed, which was one, in the first inning. Long grounded to Stock, who pegged poorly to first. Welchonce slipped one over the third sack that Wright declared a fair ball, much to Cavet's disgust. Alperman sacrificed and Smith was purposely walked (the only base on balls of the day). Bisland fanned. Just before Agler duplicated Cavet uncorked a wild heave and Long scored.

And thereupon Cavet's goat, a large, plump Angora, went skittering away across the hills, and goodness knows where. And it isn't back yet.

However, the Pug managed to get on well enough until the sixth, though the Crackers had him in trouble in the third and fourth.

Smith Scores One.

In the sixth Alperman opened with a double. Then came the third wretched attempt at a bunt. Previous to that Welchonce and Bisland had both bunted into force-outs at second. This time Smith bunted miserably to Cavet and Alperman was tagged out at third.

Bisland singled and Smith took second.

Agler singled to left, a little chop hit back of third, and Smith started for home. Stock fielded the ball and threw sharply for the plate. Smith came in, arms and legs flying, jumped in the air and landed, stomach down, on the plate—safe by inches.

And that was the last run of the game.

This game showed the Crackers in their stride again. Their attack, after it had failed twice, finally came through in style. And the defense, save in one inning, was tough as chilled steel.

If the Crackers will continue playing that sort of ball, they will yet win the pennant.

MEN OF ATLANTA WORK ON MEN-BUILDING EXERCISES; BEAN'S COURSE A SUCCESS

Folks Who Are Trying It Pronounce It a Wonder---In To-day's Article Bean Shows Two More Ways of Developing Chest and Shoulders.

By JOE BEAN.

THE men of Atlanta are working on The Sunday American's Men-Building Course. I have their word for it. And it's doing them good. I know that without their telling me.

I am gratified at the number of men who have come to me and said:

"Joe, I'm taking your course and it's doing me a lot of good."

That's just what I am aiming at. If they will work with it I know they will get results—will build themselves up into real men—or keep them built up if they are already there.

If there are as many more who are taking the course that I don't know about—and there must be, of course—this column is certainly getting results and doing grand work.

We are all ambitious to have a fine physique. Few of us care to be gymnasts. We like to see men performing gracefully on the bars and rings. But we don't care whether we can do it or not.

What we want is to build up into real men.

We want to walk like men with an object in life.

We want to have a good carriage of our head and shoulders. We want to show in our appearance that we can carry out the work we set out to do.

We want to build up our bodies to the highest state of efficiency.

Efficiency, that's the big thing these days!

The trouble with most men is that when they leave school behind them they leave exercise, too. They flop from young men to old men in a few months' time. They become "has beens" too young.

When boys are in school they naturally get a lot of exercise. They need it then. But I believe they need it more after school it over.

Most boys leave school with a fine physical foundation. They are ready to begin the battle of life with a vim.

Then comes the transformation. The incentive to work goes rapidly. They lose the glow of youth. The spring departs from their step.

They are caught in the whirl of society, the grind of business—or both—and that tired feeling grabs them.

Then either they fall off in weight, show drawn lines in their face, become thin and emaciated; or else they fleshen up grossly and become so big and flabby that it is a burden for themselves to move around.

* * *

LOTS of people think they get enough exercise out of walking. But they don't. They do exercise the lower part of their bodies some, but they usually walk alone with their arms carried at their sides and the upper part of their body is entirely without exercise. In walking the arms should be swung. This exercises the arms and helps to develop the shoulders and back.

* * *

TWO exercises are illustrated today. They are intended to develop the shoulders and the chest, and are the last along this line that I shall give. Here are the exercises:

Exercise 1—Rotary exercises. Illustrations 1 and 2 show the second and third positions of this exercise and explain how it is accomplished better than I could with a thousand words. This is a grand exercise and one I recommend to all.

Exercise 2—Pull-up. Cut No. 3 shows the first position of the pull-up. It is a great arm, shoulder and back developer. It also expands the chest. It will also tend to reduce the waist measurement. Cut No. 4 shows the pull-up with the chin over the bar. This can be practiced on the frame of the door in your own room.

The results gained by the regular practice of this exercise will be a revelation. Go at it moderately at first, stopping before you strain yourself. Try to increase the number of times you do it by one a day until you get up to a reasonable number, which depends on your weight and strength.

Ford Quits Spitter; Goes Back to Curve

Yankee Hurler Claims That Moist Delivery Hurts His Wrist and Shoulder.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Russell Ford has practically given up his spitball. It is but occasionally that he uses it now. He has returned to his curve.

At the beginning of the season, and in fact, until just recently, Ford could not work the kinks out of his arm. He noticed it more particularly just after throwing a spitball. He came to the conclusion that this style of delivery was too much of a pull on his wrist and shoulder, and he has virtually decided to give it up altogether.

Before Ford adopted the spitball he had a very fine curve. He practiced continually for more than a year before the "spitter" was added to his repertoire. After mastering the moist fling, Russell seldom employed his curve. He mixed the amphibious toss with a good change of pace and as long as the "spitter" worked well he had little or no use for the curve.

Ford has gone back to the curve.

J. FRED POWERS WILL COACH HARVARD BOYS

WORCESTER, July 12.—J. Fred Powers, former all-round amateur champion athlete of the United States, resigned as physical director of the East Park Municipal Playground to take up his new duties as coach of the field athletes of Harvard College.

Powers has had charge of the Worcester Academy athletes for several years, and has been considering for some time an offer he received from the Harvard athletic managers to go to Cambridge to coach the athletes in the field and weight events.

Two More of Joe Bean's Man-Building Exercises Are Shown Here; Try Them; They Will Help to Develop the Chest, Arms and Shoulders

Fig. 1—This is the second position of the rotary exercise.

Fig. 2 shows the third position of rotary exercise of "grind." This is a wonder for broadening the chest. It helps also to strengthen the muscles of the shoulders. It must be done vigorously. The motion is, of course, "backward" or "clockwise." Start gently on this one, for it is a terrific strain on the muscles at first. Increase the number of times you do it until you get good, brisk exercise out of it.

Fig. 3—This picture shows the start of the pull-up. You can practice this anywhere at home where there is something to grip. The top of a solid door will do.

Fig. 4 shows the top of the pull-up. Be sure you come up so that your chin is over the top of the bar.

THREE LEADERS MAY LOSE JOBS NEXT SEASON

Detroit Rumor Says That Birmingham, Stahl and Stovall Will Be Shipped in 1914.

DETROIT, MICH., July 12.—That managerial heads in the American League will fall is not unlikely. Rumor has fastened on three in the persons of George Stovall, Joe Birmingham and Jake Stahl. The Ferguson incident, when Stovall was suspended, brought the ax very near to Brother George, but back of that were reasons that were not made public at the time and have not been.

The three games taken from Detroit helped Stovall more than a little, for it was the position of the team and the way that it was going that weighed more than anything else with the owner. Robert Hedges saw his Browns win here and that may have been one of the reasons why he has since denied that Stovall was to be shipped.

* * *

BAN JOHNSON has never been friendly to Stovall nor has George held the most cordial feelings of good will toward the president of the league. Stovall did not better his position by openly siding with the striking Tigers a year ago, and it was freely predicted at the time that he had forfeited his chance of managing the Browns. This did not prove to be the case, but he certainly did not endear himself to Big Ban.

* * *

BIRMINGHAM'S trouble is that he has made the Naps too aggressive. In his efforts to put fight in the team he has overdone the thing, but now promises to work with his foot on the soft pedal so that all may still be well.

* * *

STAHL'S case is still another one. He would like to quit, but McAleer won't let him. Factions have grown up on the Red Sox team, the old players under the leadership of Bill Carrigan being a trifle at odds with the youngsters who follow Tris Speaker and Wood. Stahl keeps them living in peace as another manager might not. Therefore, he has to stick whether he wants to or not.

CARDINALS AFTER MORGAN.

ST. LOUIS, July 12.—From Kansas City comes an announcement that Manager Miller Huggins, of the Cardinals, is about to consummate a trade with Manager Carr, of the Blues, for Cy Morgan, the pitcher who once played with the Browns and Athletics in the American League. Morgan is the leading hurler in the Association.

PECKINPAUGH LOOKS GOOD.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Shortstop Peckinpaugh is a big favorite with the Yankee rooters. He is in the game all the time and has a habit of getting on the bags with pleasing regularity.

Athletics Purchase Dartmouth Captain

Connie Mack Signs Dave Morey to Hurl for Prospective American League Champions.

HANOVER, N. H., July 12.—Connie Mack, of the Philadelphia Athletics, has been watching the Dartmouth players again this season, for Captain "Dave" Morey has announced that he has signed with the Athletics for the remainder of the season. Last year found "Howie" Fahey, of Medford, Mass., Dartmouth's stellar shortstop, selected by the same manager.

"Dave" Morey, who comes from Malden and formerly starred for Malden High, has played a leading position in athletics at Hanover during his four years in college. Besides captaining his freshman football team, he won his reputation in baseball, and since his sophomore year has had a permanent berth on both the varsity eleven and nine.

As a twirler he is one of Dartmouth's best productions. Speed, accuracy and ability to emerge from tight situations have saved many a game for him when the team was slumping. He suffered an injured arm early in the season and was unable to be with the team, but lately he has shown better form than ever before.

LEDOUX IN GREAT SHAPE FOR BOUT WITH WILLIAMS

LOS ANGELES, July 9.—Charles Ledoux, the French bantamweight, is in great shape for his bout with Kid Williams, the Baltimore scrapper, at the Vernon arena on July 15. Williams is also hard at work in his training quarters at Venice. Odds today favored the Baltimore boy.

O'TOOLE IMPROVES FAST; CAN PITCH IN SIX WEEKS

PITTSBURG, July 12.—Marty O'Toole, the $22,500 Pirate pitcher, who was operated on a week ago for appendicitis, will be able to play ball in five weeks, according to a statement issued to-day.

It was at first feared that he would be out of the game for the remainder of the season, but his exceptional constitution is bringing him around.

CANADIAN HENLEY IN AUGUST.

TORONTO, July 12.—The Canadian Association of Amateur Oarsmen has selected dates for the Canadian Henley Regatta. The races will be held at St. Catherines on August 1 and 2. Entries have been made from the rowing clubs of Detroit, Milwaukee, Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Buffalo.

EXPENSIVE DOPE IS BEING USED ON GIBSON'S FOOT

Treatment Applied on Pittsburg Catcher's Ankle Costs Only $3,000,000 Per Pound.

PITTSBURG, July 12.—To George Gibson, the Pirates' crippled catcher, who is still limping and unable to do his best work as the result of a mishap at St. Louis on April 20, in which his right ankle was broken, goes the distinction of being the subject of the most expensive treatment that has ever been resorted to for the curing of an injured ball player. In fact, it is the most expensive treatment in the whole world, for the agency that has been turned to at last to restore the injured backstop to the Pirates is none other than radium.

ALL other methods having failed to remove the soreness from Gibson's injured ankle, the officials of the Pittsburg club finally decided to turn to the Oakland institution where radium treatment is given. Some remarkable cures have been reported, and the doctors held out every hope to the Pirate management that the treatment would work wonders in Gibson's case.

Gibson was treated for the first time last week, his injured ankle being covered with a preparation in which radium is one of the ingredients, though the amount used is very slight. The preparation was applied much after the fashion of antiphlogistin, and it may be removed and put back as often as desired, so that Gibson will be able to appear in uniform every day and jump into a game if needed, laying aside his costly bandage until after his field activities. Trainer Ed Laforce has been instructed by the doctors as to how to remove and replace the bandage. The preparation is one of the most wonderful known to science, and the doctors say that the costly application on Gibson's foot will retain its strength for 2,000 years.

RADIUM costs $3,000,000 per pound, so it will be seen that the treatment of Gibson's foot is going to cost the Pittsburg club a record-breaking sum. Just how high the figures will run Manager Clarke and President Dreyfuss can not estimate just yet.

"Much depends upon results," said Manager Clarke. "If it cures Gibby it will be cheap, and if it fails it will be mighty dear."

'Hans' Wagner's Leg Has Again Gone Bad

Injured Knee Is Giving Great Shortstop Much Trouble; Continues to Play.

Reports from Philadelphia are that "Hans" Wagner again is having trouble with the leg that kept him out of the game last spring.

The knee which he injured while making the spring training trip is again bothering him. On Thursday he felt pains in the leg and on Friday the leg was worse, but he said nothing about it, realizing that his services were needed.

The pains have continued to grow worse, although the captain of the Pirates has been subjecting the damaged knee to heroic treatment at the hands of the team's trainer. Wagner said his left leg is so stiff he only navigates with great difficulty.

GILMORE NOW HEADS THE NEW CHICAGO FEDERALS

CHICAGO, July 12.—Stockholders of the Chicago club of the Federal League have elected a new set of officers. James A. Gilmore is to be the new president and E. C. Racey, secretary and vice president. Bert Keely was retained as manager of the team.

PREP SCHOOLS GREAT HELP TO COLLEGE TEAMS

Vanderbilt and Sewanee Secure Corking Athletes From Tennessee Institutions.

By Frank Anderson.

(Coach at Riverside Military Academy, Who Has Developed Many Corking Diamond Stars.)

THE question is often asked, "Where do Vanderbilt and Sewanee get so many good athletes?" It is easily answered: From the prep schools of the State of Tennessee. That State is full of prep schools, prominent among which might be mentioned Castle Heights, Mooney, Branham and Hughes, T. M. I., Webb's School, Bowen, Morgan School, Winthrop, Sewanee Military Academy, Hawkins School, McCallie School, Baylor Branden Training School, Vanderbilt Training School, etc.

Of late years the prep schools of Georgia have done their share in building up the big college teams of the State. Though there are only a few good prep schools in Georgia, they are among the best to be found in the South. Some of the best athletes ever turned out in Dixie got their training at Stone Mountain, Gordon, G. M. C., Riverside, G. M. A., Marist, Peacock and Locust Grove.

The list of good ones coming from the prep schools is imposing. Let's see. At Georgia have been "Peg" Thurman, Omar Franklin, Bob and Hamilton McWhorter, Henderson and Clements, of Gordon; "Kid" Woodruff, "Baby" Wilder, "Punk" Malone, Carter Franklin and Kyle Smith, of Stone Mountain; "Shorty" Brooks, John Cox, Starke and Rucker Ginn, Joe Harrell, DeLaperriere, Tabor and Billy Powell, of Riverside; Timon Bowden and Bill Arnette, of Locust Grove; Frank Martin and Charlie Thompson, of Boys' High School, and George Harrison, of Marist.

At Tech, Ed Lafitte, of Marist; Jim Luck and Erskine Mayer, of G. M. A.; Armistead, Goree, "Goat" Holliday and Tommy McMillan, of Boys' High School; "Doc" Wilson, Carl Sloan, Wooten and Amason, of Stone Mountain.

At Mercer, Bradley Hogg, Bill Faulk and Clay Binion, of Gordon; Ernest Gray, of Locust Grove.

Preps Good Start for Boys.

It is only in the last few years that Georgia and Tech have been around the top of the S. I. A. A. It used to be Vanderbilt, Sewanee, Auburn or Tennessee. The prep school is coming in its own, and henceforth the colleges of the State must look to them to furnish their star athletes.

The reason is a good one. At the prep school the aspiring athlete is taught the very rudiments of the game, things that a college coach supposes already known. Every up-to-date prep school has a graduate coach in charge of athletics, a man who is on the job all the time. It is the business of the prep school coach to develop athletes, not simply to pick the best athletes from a big bunch of good ones.

This, to my mind, is the great beauty of prep school coaching. To see a raw athlete develop under your eyes, watch him catch the fine points of the game and to gradually gain that confidence in himself which is so essential to the college player. Then, too, at the prep school the aspiring athlete is taught the right principles of good sportsmanship. He knows how to lose with good grace. The college coach brings to the prep athlete that never-say-die spirit, that idea of fair play and courtesy to the visiting team which is the best feature of college athletics.

There is a ruling in the S. I. A. A. which requires a boy to have fourteen units before he can play football. Mighty few fourteen-unit men come out of the public schools.

Good Crop This Year.

This year's crop of prep athletes is a good one. Gordon Institute sends out McWhorter, Adams and Kingery. Riverside turns loose Haines, Preas, Burr and McNeill. Norton and Hautman finished at Stone Mountain, and Ellison, Lanier, Swann and Wilkerson received their "dips" at G. M. C. In this list are some names we will hear rather often in the S. I. A. A. next year, if I am any judge of athletes.

There have been other star athletes in the Georgia prep schools who jumped right over the colleges into professional ball. Paul Cobb and Ed Reagan, Stone Mountain products, are playing with Lincoln and Cordele, respectively. Frank Thrasher, of Riverside, has led the Appalachian League in batting; Abercrombie, of Lee Institute, won a pennant last year for Jacksonville, and Lee Crowe, of Riverside, is playing third for Brunswick.

Here is a team composed of graduates of the Georgia prep schools who are now playing professional ball. Each one of them learned the game at a prep school.

Bowden, Locust Grove, catcher.
Lafitte, Marist, pitcher.
Hogg, Gordon, pitcher.
E. Mayer, G. M. A., pitcher.
Holliday, B. H. S., first base.
Brooks, Riverside, second base.
Reagan, Stone Mountain, shortstop.
"Red" Smith, B. H. S., third base.
Thrasher, Riverside, right field.
Cobb, Stone Mountain, center field.

That wouldn't be a bad little team, would it?

PRINCETON AND FORDHAM TO CLASH ON GRIDIRON

NEW YORK, July 12.—The Fordham University football team will play eight games next fall. The principal new game added to the list is that with Vermont. The Princeton and Holy Cross contests have been resumed after a lapse of three years. The schedule follows:

September 27, St. Peters College at Fordham; October 4, Princeton at Princeton; 11, Rensselaer at Fordham; 18, St. Joseph's College at Fordham; 25, Vermont at Fordham; November 4, Villa Nova at Fordham; 8, Boston College at Fordham; 15, Holy Cross at Worcester.

HIRSCH VS. DONAHUE.

NEW YORK, July 12.—"Special Delivery" Hirsch, of Chicago, and Harry Donahue, of Pekin, Ill., both lightweights, have been matched to box an eight-round bout at Ottawa, Canada, on July 24.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

GIANTS, 3; REDS, 1.

NEW YORK, July 12.—The Giants trounced the Reds, 3 to 1, here today. Ames started for the visitors and allowed six hits which netted two runs in the seven innings he was in the box. Suggs relieved him and allowed two safeties in the eighth, which gave the locals another run. Demaree was in fine trim and allowed only four hits. Two hits, a double steal and an error gave the Reds their only tally. The box score:

HERE ARE SOME FUTURE BIG LEAGUE PLAYERS SNAPPED AT GRANT PARK

The photograph at the top shows the kiddies choosing up sides. The captain of one team claims he has the top grip. His rival declares he can't get his hand below the top of the bat. So a knife is brought into play by an "outsider." He will shave off any part of the hand that goes above the knob of the bat.

In the lower photograph a kiddie is shown stealing second. He has made a regular "hook slide," but he had plenty of time, as the catcher kiddie's throw was high and wide.

Ritchie May Battle Cross on Labor Day

NEW YORK, July 12.—The local fight fans are still talking over the easy manner in which their idol, Leach Cross, the Yiddisher dentist, disposed of Bud Anderson, the Pride of the Coast, on the Fourth of July.

As the Western youngster had been hailed as a real tough nut and the logical successor to the crown worn by Willie Ritchie, the New York fight public has placed its seal of approval on an unwritten demand that the champion give Cross an opportunity to bring the title back to New York.

That Ritchie and the boy who is now considered his most dangerous rival may be matched for a championship battle to be staged on Labor Day at McCarey's Vernon Arena is the substance of underground rumors that are traveling fast and thick between the California fight centers and New York.

Labor Day would be the ideal date for such a scrap. It would give the boys plenty of time to recuperate from the effects of their performances of last week.

Cross would be a very dangerous man for Ritchie to handle. That is obvious. The young dentist is one of the wiliest men in the ring to-day. He is full of tricks. One false step into any of his cleverly laid traps is fatal to an opponent. For when Cross is winning he seldom stops fighting until he has his man helpless.

WILLIAMS MEETS DAVIS IN BUFFALO GO TUESDAY

NEW YORK, July 12.—Dan Morgan, the manager who is endeavoring to monopolize the services of all the fighters in the country who show the slightest promise of sprouting championship wings, will start the latest addition to his stable, Barney Williams, of Philadelphia, against "One-Round" Davis, the Buffalo heavyweight, in a ten-round go on Tuesday night at the Queensbery Athletic Club of Buffalo.

DENNY AND FERNS SIGN FOR TWENTY-ROUND GO

NEW ORLEANS, July 12.—Young Denny, a local welterweight who has won several hard fights in the South during the last six months, has been matched with "Wildcat" Ferns, of Kansas City, to box a 20-round bout at the West Side Athletic Club here on the night of August 3. The winner probably will be matched to fight Jack Britton, of Chicago.

MARTY O'TOOLE IS IMPROVING.

PITTSBURG, July 12.—Marty O'Toole, the champion hard luck pitcher of the National League, who was operated on for appendicitis at St. Margaret's Hospital Wednesday, has passed the crisis, according to the statement issued from the hospital early yesterday. Tuesday and Wednesday were the critical days following the operation and so far there is no indication of anything serious developing in the case of the Pirate star.

ATHLETIC RECORDS BURN IN SULLIVAN'S OFFICE

NEW YORK, July 12.—Many athletic records, including some of those of the last Olympic games, were destroyed by fire in the offices of James E. Sullivan, secretary of the Amateur Athletic Union.

This is the second time that the Amateur Athletic Union records have suffered fire in the last ten years.

A Blessing to Victims Of "Sore Foot" Agony

The following is said to be the surest and quickest cure known to science for all foot ailments: "Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of Calocide compound in a basin of warm water. Soak the feet in this fully fifteen minutes, gently rubbing the sore parts." The effect is really wonderful. All soreness goes instantly; the feet feel delightful. Corns and callouses can be peeled right off. It gives immediate relief for sore bunions, sweaty, smelly and aching feet. A twenty-five cent box of Calocide is said to be sufficient to cure the worst feet. It works through the pores and removes the cause of the trouble. Don't waste time on uncertain remedies. Any druggist has Calocide compound in stock or he can get it in a few hours from his wholesale house.

UNUSUAL RULES AND PLAYS IN BASEBALL

By J. W. Heisman.

NEARLY all people who attend baseball games think firmly they thoroughly understand the game, its rules and the way it is played. But they are mistaken. No doubt they understand the plays that ordinarily come up in a game, and the rules on which most of the umpire's decisions are based; but certain it is that very few professional players, let alone mere spectators, are familiar with ALL the rules and all the queer cases that can and do come up and what the umpire's decision on them should be.

I am going to discuss a few of these more unusual situations and plays, and will point out the law or laws governing them—not in the hard, dry language of the rule book, but giving the substance, in simplified form. To be sure, anyone can go and buy a rule book and read it all through and study it for themselves; but, as a matter of fact, we all know that very few people ever do this, no matter that they ought. They want to get their sports, their sporting news and their knowledge of sports all in one dose and at one time each day, and that on the sporting page of their newspaper. Many of the points that will be touched upon are already known by a great many fans, but you would be surprised to know how many of them in this day and age still ask for the information I have decided to include.

Some of the Rules.

To proceed:

1. The bases are all 90 feet apart. The pitcher's slab is 60 1-2 feet from home plate. Home plate, first and third bases are entirely within the diamond, so that a batted ball going over any part of either of them necessarily goes fair. The second bag has its middle point over the intersection of the lines leading to first and to third.

2. The bat MUST be round; a player may not use a flattened bat, no matter how slight the flattening. It can not be over 42 inches long, nor more than 2 3-4 inches in diameter anywhere. It is not permitted to be made of anything but hardwood.

3. Only the catcher and first baseman of a team may use gloves or mitts that are over 14 inches in circumference.

4. In professional ball all the players of one team must be uniformed alike in match games—that is, league games. Thus one player could not even wear a last year's Atlanta uniform with an "A" merely on the sleeve, if all the other members of the team were wearing an "A" on the chest. Silly, maybe, but—THE RULE.

5. A substitute may be put in for a player at any stage of the game without getting anybody's permission, but the player taken out can not again get in that game. However, a pitcher could be put in the outfield to make way for an incoming new pitcher, and then the first pitcher could later on be put back in the box, so long as he remained in the line-up somewhere. The incoming new pitcher would bat in the position of the player who vacated the game.

6. A new man may be substituted for a batter even after the latter has already had balls or strikes called upon him. Of course, the balls and strikes of the batter who was yanked will be charged up to his successor.

An Unusual Rule.

7. Likewise a new pitcher can be shoved in in the middle of an opposing batsman's turn at bat, and the balls and strikes for him will remain the same as though the first pitcher had not been taken out. But in such a case as this the second pitcher can not be relieved by a third twirler until after the present batter has either been put out or has got on base.

8. The home team has the right to go to bat first or to take the field. It is merely a custom that it takes the field. Sometimes in college ball the home team chooses to go to bat first. Suppose, for instance, it is the first game of the season, when all hands are apt to be nervous. It is better, the idea is, to send opponents to the field to make errors first, in which case the home team is apt to score an encouraging run or two the first inning, which will still further react on the visiting team to put them up in the air. Professional players are not supposed to get nervous and go up. Do they ever?

9. If the ground is wet, the home team also has the right to say whether the field is fit to play upon or not. Neither the opposing captain nor the umpire has any say in this matter whatever. But after the game has once been started only the umpire can stop it on account of rain and wetness, and only the umpire—after a 30-minute maximum wait—can say whether the grounds are fit for a resumption of hostilities.

Rule About Batter's Box.

10. The batter's box is supposed to be 4 feet by 6 feet, and to be 6 inches from the plate at the middle point of its near side. As a matter of fact, the lines of this box are always obliterated by the feet of the batters in preliminary batting practice, so that after the game once starts no one can really tell whether a batter is standing within the lines of his supposed position or not. This is not as it should be; it really is important that the batter should be made to stand within this parallelogram, and, therefore, it is important that the lines of this rectangle should be plainly visible all through the game, as is the case in tennis. Something should be devised to render this possible.

You see, a batsman, by the rule, is supposed to be "out" if he ever steps outside the lines of this rectangle in trying to hit a ball. Well, to be frank about it, he very often does step outside the box to hit it, and should, therefore, be called out. But it's hard for an umpire to say so when there are no clear and clean-cut lines on the ground to fortify him in making such a decision. Pitchers would be much more effective if batters were rigorously restrained to the inside of their box as the rule orders.

(To Be Continued Next Sunday.)

MANY BALL PLAYERS ARE SENT TO MINORS TOO SOON

PHILADELPHIA, July 12.—The sudden desire for young blood which hit the major leagues about five years ago drove from the big circuits a lot of men who should be in the majors yet.

When Connie Mack produced a pennant-winner by raiding some colleges, all the others followed his example in so far as getting the youngsters was concerned. Mighty few succeeded in getting pennants with kids.

Old Tom Jones was relegated to the minors by Hughie Jennings. He hasn't had a good first baseman since. In forty games with Milwaukee, Jones has batted .368 this year. He stole eight bases. Pretty fair for an old man.

Cy Morgan, passed up by Connie Mack, is the leading pitcher of the association. He has won eleven and lost only two games thus far this season. His club has only an even break, but Cy pulled 'em over eleven times and lost only only two battles.

WALSH TO TEACH O'BRIEN MORE ABOUT SPITBALL

ST. LOUIS, July 12.—Pitcher "Buck" O'Brien, of the Boston Red Sox, who recently joined the White Sox, is expected to be a great help to Cal's men. Callahan counts on Ed Walsh to teach the young twirler something more about the spitball, O'Brien's chief stock in trade.

CLEVELAND, July 12.—Cleveland defeated Washington to-day in the first game of the series, 5 to 4. Gregg started for the Naps, but was knocked out in the third when a rain of hits resulted in four runs. Blanding, who relieved him, pitched fine ball the rest of the encounter. Hughes relieved Groom in the fifth, after the latter had been touched for ten hits. Turner's double and Lajoie's single in the ninth won the contest for the locals. The box score:

SOX TEAMS DIVIDE.

CHICAGO, July 12.—Boston and Chicago broke even in a bargain day game here to-day, the latter taking the first game 7 to 2, and the former the final game, 9 to 0. Cicotte had the best of the argument with Hall in the early game, but Joe Wood had things his own way in the final against both Miller and Lange. Wood allowed only four hits, two of which came after he had eased up. The box score:

ATHLETICS, 16; TIGERS, 9.

DETROIT, MICH., July 12.—The Athletics trimmed Detroit here to-day, 16 to 9. Jennings moved Ty Cobb into second base, where the star had five chances and foozled three of them, all of which were easy. Brown walked fifteen batters before he was yanked in the eighth. Sixteen Tigers were stranded on the bases owing to the Detroits inability to hit at opportune times. The box score:

DOYLE WHIFFED HARD, BUT THIS ONE GOT BY

NEW YORK, July 12.—What Jack Doyle, the White Sox scout, does not know he makes a stab at. But he doesn't always get by.

Doyle and a half dozen others were sitting about the lobby of the hotel.

Frank Fogarty, the actor man, joined the party and he grasped at a glance that there wasn't much jollity in the bunch. He's quite a friend of Cal's and he was there to do the cheering act.

"Say, you know," and he called the name of some mutual friend.

"Oh, very well, indeed," answered Cal. "But what happened to him?"

"Oh, he graduated."

"He did."

"He went through the entire curriculum."

Cal turned to Doyle. "You know what he is talking about, don't you?" queried the manager.

"Oh, very well," answered Doyle.

"You know what a curriculum is?"

"Even so," from Doyle.

"Then what is it?" demanded Cal.

"Oh, it's one of those things where a fellow," continued Doyle, and hesitated. "It's one of those—well, a fellow who does that is the kind of a fellow who makes up his mind to ride in an automobile and then walks."

WILLIE RITCHIE WILLING TO BATTLE JACK BRITTON

SAN FRANCISCO, July 12.—Ritchie says that he never received the offer of Promoter Tortorich, of New Orleans, to box Britton for a $20,000 purse, though such an offer had been made through the press.

Regarding such a bout in September, Ritchie says that Tortorich would be treated the same as the other promoters and if he hands in the highest bid he will gladly box in New Orleans. If he does so, Jack Britton, who is a heavy lightweight, will have to make 133 pounds ringside.

Willie is confident that he can make this weight and be at his best. When Ritchie and Britton boxed four rounds in this city they milled at catch weights.

MANY MANAGERS ON COAST IN INTEREST OF BOXERS

LOS ANGELES, CAL., July 12.—With six managers on the ground anxious to arrange matches for their boxers, there is no danger that Promoter McCarey will not be able to keep his fight program filled.

Among those who are here in the interest of high-class boys are Joe Levy, manager of Joe Rivers and Jack White; Sam Wallach, manager of Leach and Phil Cross; Frank Galvin, manager of Charley Ledoux; Sam Harris, manager of Kid Williams; Scotty Monteith, manager of Johnny Dundee, and Dick Donald, manager of Bud Anderson.

COAST ATHLETES MEET.

LOS ANGELES, July 12.—At Bovard Field this afternoon eight all-around athletes compete in a track and field meet for the Pacific Coast championships.

STALLINGS LIKES TALL ONES.

After regarding a group halftone of Stallings' bunch of Boston Braves one card hardly be blamed for presuming that Stallings buys his players by the foot. It would apear he is more interested in their stature than their sticking. At any rate, there are ten men in the squad all of whom loom up beyond the six-foot mark and some of them several inches.

MILLER REPORTS TO SOX.

CHICAGO, ILL., July 12.—Frank Miller, the Pacific Coast pitcher, who was purchased from the White Sox last year, but was put out of commission by sickness last spring, reported to Manager Callahan Thursday and worked out in spangles. He said he had recovered fr... effects of diphtheria and felt strong again.

REDS PURCHASE PITCHER.

VANCOUVER, B. C., July 12.—Bob Ingersoll, regarded as one of the best pitchers in the Northwestern League, has been sold by the Vancouver club to the Cincinnati Nationals for $3,000, delivery to be made next fall.

CAN'T GET JOB, SCHAUER SIGNS WITH BALL CLUB

Northern League Sensation Was Unwilling to Play Baseball; Sold to Giants.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 12.—Because he was out of a job and signed a baseball contract as a last resort, Rube Schauer went to work for the Superior (Wis.) club of the Northern League this spring.

Because he cast his fortunes with baseball Schauer determined to pitch his way into a steady berth. As a result he pitched so well and so often that almost single-handed he has landed his club at the top of the Northern League, and his work has resulted in his sale to the New York National League club for the largest amount of money ever paid for a Class C player. Only two other players in the history of baseball have ever brought larger sums on the auction block. They were O'Toole, of St. Paul, and Marquard, of Indianapolis.

SCHAUER was born and raised in a small Northern Minnesota town, and has played baseball about as long as the average American youth. He always has been on a country town team until this spring. Never had he received a regular salary until Superior picked him. He was not anxious to play baseball as a means of livelihood, but had ambitions to go to college and take a professional course. Early this spring he was out of a job and his funds were at a low ebb when Superior tendered him a contract. Unlike most youngsters, he didn't snap at the chance. He hesitated at first and then refused to give a definite answer for several days. In the meantime he tried to get work more tasteful to him, but this failing, he finally put his name to the document which called for a salary of $110 per month.

* * *

THEN he determined to earn his pay, and his record since last April shows how well he succeeded. His first appearance in professional baseball was made in Minneapolis the day the Northern League season opened on April 23d. He worked for two-thirds of an inning and retired in favor of a pinch hitter. The next day he was sent back and allowed only six hits, winning his game, 15 to 3, errors robbing him of a shutout. From then on it was easy sailing. He leads the league in strikeouts, averaging about ten a game. He has pitched three one-hit contests, and was robbed of a no-hit game by a scratch single in the ninth inning.

* * *

HE has appeared in more games than any other pitcher in the league and is a glutton for work. He is a big, strong young fellow and would work every day if given a chance. He stands almost six feet tall and weighs 180 pounds.

The day after his sale to the Giants he signalized his rise to fame by beating Rube Waddell, now with the Virginia (Minn.) club, Schauer struck out ten men in seven innings against Waddell.

JACK COOMBS TO BE BACK IN GAME BY SEPTEMBER 15

PHILADELPHIA, July 12.—Connie Mack of the Athletics, wrote a letter which was received by Captain J. J. O'Brien of this city, announcing that Jack Coombs, the star pitcher of the Athletics, will be back in the game by September.

"Coombs is fast rounding into shape," Mack writes, "and he will be back in harness by September 15 at the latest."

SOUTHERN LEAGUE

BILLS LEAD LEAGUE

CHATTANOOGA, July 12.—Montgomery grabbed both games of a double-header from Chattanooga this afternoon and went into first place, the Gulls losing their hold on the top rung of the championship ladder by losing to Atlanta.

The locals failed to score in either game, and Coveleskie lost the first fray to Charley Case, 1 to 0, although he pitched a seven-inning, no-hit game. Both melees were seven innings by agreement. The run came on a base on balls, Coveleskie's error and a sacrifice fly.

In the second game Flick's error on a double steal allowed two runs in the first inning and the visitors were never headed. Walker played the most sensational game in center field ever witnessed on the local lot, robbing the locals of four two-base hits with men on bases. Coyle was sick and Graham appeared on first. GOOD EYE FIRST ESSENTIAL TO GOOD BATTING, SAYS ZIMMERMAN

Batter Can't Outguess Pitcher

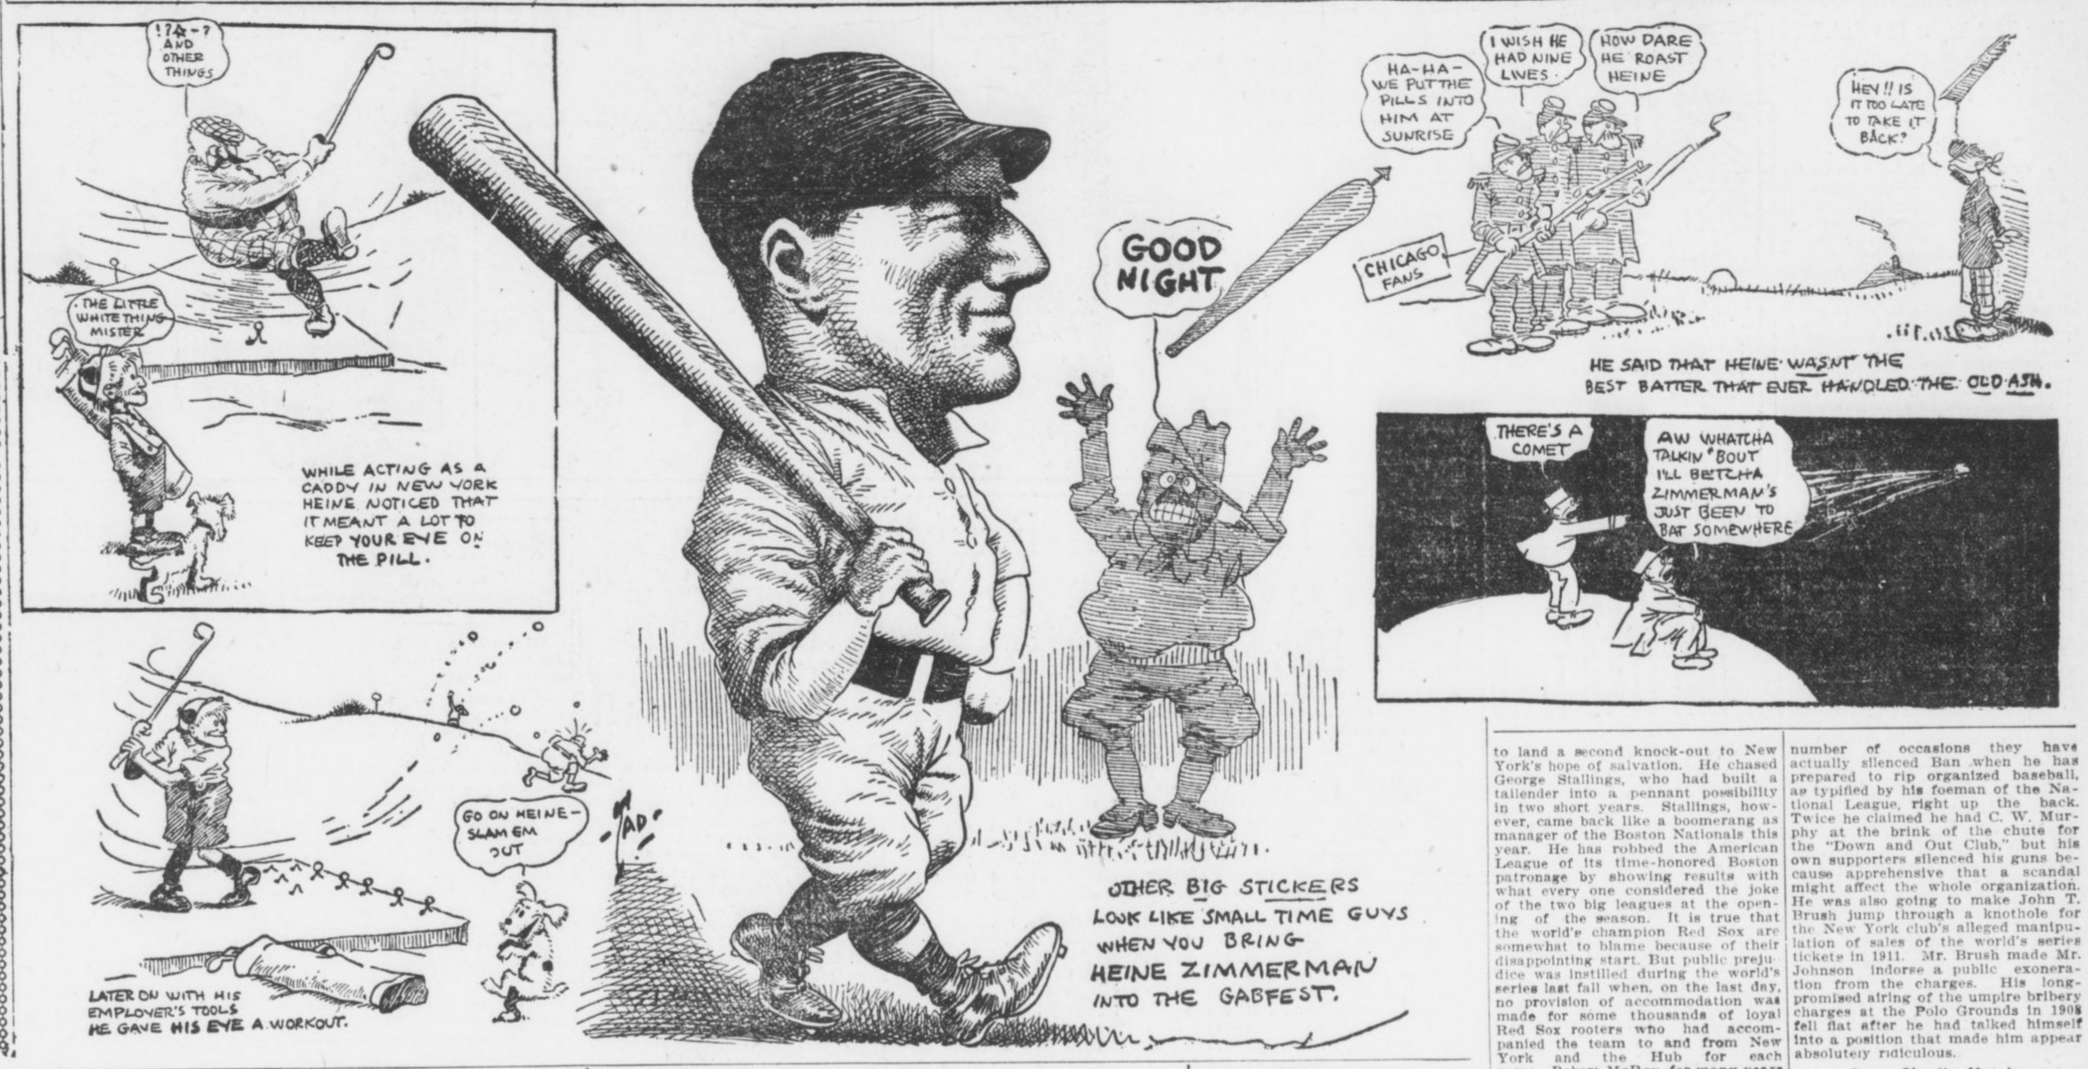
'HEINE' ZIMMERMAN' begins today a series of articles on how to hit the ball. As Zimmerman is one of the best batters the national game ever produced he writes with authority. One of the first things a batter must know is that he can't outguess the pitcher. Here is the way 'Heine' puts it:

Many a batter goes up there and hits on a hunch, tries to outguess the pitcher and that sort of thing. That is, he convinces himself that the pitcher is going to throw a curve ball, and if it starts across the plate he falls away because he is certain that when it breaks it will come too close for comfort. He is made to look foolish. Maybe he gets the idea that it is to be a fast one. He swings and the ball breaks and he is made to look bad, for frequently it hits him.

To be really a great batter three things are absolutely essential, Zimmerman says. A batter MUST have:

A Good Eye
Confidence
Strength

"HEINE" DEVELOPING HIS BIG STICK, AS SEEN BY TAD, THE CELEBRATED CARTOONIST



'HEINE' TELLS HOW TRAINING AS CADDY MADE HIM A BATTER

By HENRY (HEINE) ZIMMERMAN.

A GOOD eye, confidence and strength are the three essentials which must be possessed by the youth whose ambition it is to be hailed as a "slugger" in baseball.

And the asset which the average fan figures as the most valuable is of the least worth of the three. That is strength.

Of course there are half a dozen other qualities which enter into a man's hitting. But they are of the minor brand.

If a man possesses a bad eye he'll never be a great hitter.

If a man is without confidence he will never be a great hitter.

If a man lacks strength he'll never be a great slugger.

Those are three assets which every slugger must possess. In my opinion the greatest of all is the eye.

It is the eye which drives the ball over the fence. Of course the arms swing the bat which meets the ball. But if the eye doesn't inform the arms when to swing the ball will never sail over the fence and there will be the "Ohs" of disappointment from the fans as they watch a pop fly instead of the shrieks as they arise in their seats to watch the sphere clear the barrier.

How the Eye Knocks the Home Run.

Here is what happens when a home run hit is made. The eye of the batter follows the ball from the moment it leaves the pitcher's hand. The eye never for the fraction of a second leaves that ball. The eye informs the mind when to start that swing. If the eye be perfect then the bat meets the ball at exactly the proper moment and at the proper place.

The strength would have counted for nothing if the ball hadn't been met fair. Instead of sailing over the fence the ball would have popped into the air.

Any success which I have had as a batter is due to the fact that I have developed my eye. And I did that before I ever played baseball.

When I was a youngster of ten or eleven I went to the Westchester Golf Club in the Bronx, New York. I secured a position as caddy and there the value of a true eye first impressed me. The instructor impressed his students with that idea. And I certainly had an excellent opportunity of watching it tested.

We caddies would go out with a foursome. Then we would stand back and watch the fellows drive either from the tee or in the field. Some fellow would slice and his swearing could be heard for yards. Oh, it was funny, all right. But we caught his mistake. At just about the moment when his club was going to meet that ball he would take his eye from the little pellet.

Good Golfer, Good Batter.

A bad drive, much profanity would follow, and if we caddies happened to be betting a bit on the fellows we were following you can gamble that we didn't bless the fellow who made the bad drive.

Of course I did what every other caddy does. I practiced with the club. And this thing of watching the ball, never losing it for an instant, made such an impression upon me that I quickly learned how to drive. And if I do say it myself I became a pretty decent driver.

When I drifted into baseball I quickly learned that the eye developed on the golf links was about the best asset I had. And keeping my eye on the ball has been my theory ever since.

Gussing a Poor Method.

Many a batter goes up there and hits on a hunch, tries to outguess the pitcher and that sort of thing. That is, he convinces himself that the pitcher is going to throw him a curve ball and, if it starts across the plate, he falls away because he is certain that when it breaks it will come too close for comfort. He is made to look foolish. Maybe he gets the idea that it is to be a fast one. He swings and the ball breaks and he is made to look bad, for frequently it hits him.

In the series between the Cubs and the Athletics for the world's series we thought we had the signs of Bender, who was pitching for Philadelphia.

Eye Better Than Sign Reading.

For several innings we thought that when Ira Thomas, the catcher, called the pitcher "Albert," his first name, that he was calling for a fast one, and when he called him "Chief" it was a curve. Frank Schulte went up, heard Thomas call the pitcher "Albert," and prepared to swing on a fast ball. It happened to be a curve and Schulte ducked in time to keep from being beaned.

Then we went back to the other system—following the ball with the eye instead of trusting to signs.

GANDIL MUST BE GROUCHY IN ORDER TO HIT

First Sacker Declares He Does His Best Batting When Some One Has Riled Him.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Among the Senators there is one player who says that he does his best hitting when he has a grouch. He doesn't care how he gets his grouch, but he must have one to hit the pill. Indeed, he says that when he is feeling well and hasn't a care in the world, he can't find the elusive pill. Therefore, he seldom engages in any little jokes on the bench. He is always strictly attending to business, hoping that somebody will rile him or that he can find some grievance at which to complain. This lad, who does his best work when suffering from a grouch, is no other than Benedict Arnold Gandil, alias Chick Gandil, the clouting, mountainous first sacker of the Griffmen.

"IT'S a fact," says Gandil. "I can't hit unless things are breaking bad for me. Most ball players can't do their best work unless they are in good condition and everything is breaking for them instead of against them. But I want to have a grouch in order to hit that pill. I am always looking for something to give me a grouch, for then I know I'll get a couple of blows, no matter who is pitching against me.

* * *

"THE first thing I do in the morning is complain about the weather. If it is warm, I try to think it is too warm. If it is raining, I am in luck because anybody can kick about rainy weather. If my foot hurts, I have a grouch made to order. I like to have the arrangements break down and leave me at the hotel after the bunch has left for the park. I'm sure of a couple of blows that day.

* * *

"DO you know what Griff ought to do with me next season? He ought to hire some guy that makes me mad to look at him, make him my roomie on all trips. Then I'd be so all-fired grouchy over having to live with this gink that I'd give Cobb and Jackson the run of their lives with the bat. I'm going to put this up to Griff, too, next spring. To get my couple of blows a day, I've got to have a grouch."

AUTOMOBILE MAY RUIN JOHNSON'S PITCHING ARM

WASHINGTON, July 12. — The mighty Walter Johnson is threatened with a serious change in the form of his wonderful right hand. If Walter persists in spending his time at the wheel of an automobile, expert automobilists declare his pitching days will be over before many moons.

"Constant handling of an automobile steering wheel will completely change the shape of any baseball pitcher's hands," declared an expert motorist to-day.

The slump which Johnson now is experiencing has been brought about by the wheel cramp, which is slowly, but surely, getting his pitching hand. Johnson says he doesn't know what is the matter with his pitching.

Cleveland Fans Sour on Johnson

'Big Chief' Is Getting in Wrong

By W. J. McBeth.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Ban Johnson used to be a real Moses to his American League children. He led them out of the wilderness of the war days into an era of financial milk and honey. But, like the celebrated Duke of York, with his storied ten thousand men, having marched his forces up the hill, the big czar gives evidences of intention to march them down again. The green pastures of the promised have failed to satisfy. Ban hungers once more for the wilderness. Mighty in war, the American League president chafes under the monotony of peace. His restless soul, thwarted in its belligerency toward certain foemen of the National League, has been forced, on occasion, to seek a vent in interference with the henchmen of his own domain.

Ban Attacks Birmingham.

The latest outburst of the American League autocrat was directed against Joe Birmingham, manager of the Cleveland club. Mr. Johnson intimated that in his opinion, Birmingham was no fit person to be in charge of an American League club. Whatever prompted the attack, it appeared very ill-timed. In the few short months he had been in charge of the Naps, Birmingham had fashioned a pennant contender from an habitual second division aggregation. His club was very much in evidence as a potent factor of the struggle. And as the public, after all, pays its good money in the expectation of patronizing and propitiating results, Mr. Johnson aroused no loud hurrahs of indorsement to his attack on Birmingham. Mr. Johnson simply raised against the popularity in his own bailiwick the resentment of one more city.

Cleveland fandom is not likely quietly to brook the official interference of even the mighty Johnson with a man who is making good in its opinion.

Birmingham, unfortunately, had troubles of his own at the time; eternal dissensions that could best be straightened out in the clubhouse. The great Napoleon Lajoie objected to club discipline when his manager thought it to the best interests of all to give the mighty Frenchman a rest. Lajoie went over Birmingham's head with a direct appeal to President Charles Somers. Perhaps, it was with the idea of throwing out a hint to the boss as to his personal views of the matter that Johnson expressed himself in such emphatic disapproval of Birmingham. However, it is quite certain now that Ban Johnson and not Joe Birmingham will be held responsible for the shortcomings of Cleveland, if the inside bickerings develop into open club warfare in the Forest City.

Johnson Knocks "Live Ones."

For some reason, Mr. Johnson appears to have a penchant for picking onto "live wires" and indorsing "dead ones." His meddlesome disposition has "Dutched" him in half of the American League cities. He is about as popular in St. Louis as scarlet fever in a nursery. For years and years he was openly accused, in the Mound City, of trying to drive Bob Hedges out of the league. Once Hedges actually negotiated a sale. But the prospective buyers failed to make good the first payment, and the Browns reverted to the original ownership. Ban, at the time, took no pains to conceal his disappointment. There are those in New York bold enough to accuse Johnson of entertaining kindred designs upon Frank Farrell's property. Charlie Comiskey, mouthpieec of Johnson—or the other way, if one is pinned down to sheer truth, declared a few months ago that within five years every American League club would be owned by old-time baseball players. Straws, indeed, that indicate a wind from a dangerous quarter for those millionaires of the Yawkey-Somers-Farrell type whose financial influence forced recognition of equality from the National League in Johnson's scheme of expansion.

New York has as little reason as Boston, St. Louis, Cleveland or Detroit to worship at the shrine of Big Ban. Enough sterling players have been lost to the Highlanders through the alleged advice of the league executive to form two or three world's championship aggregations. By forcing Jake Stahl onto Clark Griffith in 1908, Johnson not only made the "Old Fox" a laughing stock of both big leagues, but further effected his retirement in disgrace at midseason. Jake, as an outfielder, was very much to the bush even though his three-year contract called for $6,000 a season. The explosion of the Born Manager carried down in its ruin a club that in the first few weeks threatened to have the pennant cinched by July 4.

After the darkest days of the Griffith and Elberfeld regime, Ban Johnson allowed his personal animosity to land a second knock-out to New York's hope of salvation. He chased George Stallings, who had built a tailender into a pennant possibility in two short years. Stallings, however, came back like a boomerang as manager of the Boston Nationals this year. He has robbed the American League of its time-honored Boston patronage by showing results with what every one considered the joke of the two big leagues at the opening of the season. It is true that the world's champion Red Sox are somewhat to blame because of their disappointing start. But public prejudice was instilled during the world's series last fall when, on the last day, no provision of accommodation was made for some thousands of loyal Red Sox rooters who had accompanied the team to and from New York and the Hub for each game. Robert McRoy, for many years Johnson's private secretary and who is now alleged to represent some Johnson interests in Boston, was responsible for the "bone." Of course Ban Johnson has to share the blame.

Detroit Fans Against Ban.

Detroit soured on Johnson because of Ban's animosity toward Hughie Jennings. Johnson rebuked Jennings for his friendliness toward McGraw during the world's series between the Giants and Athletics in 1911. Ban was quoted, at the time, as intimating that Jennings would be driven out of the American League because of alleged treason in tipping off McGraw to Philadelphia weaknesses. Frank Navin beat Johnson to it by renewing Hughie's contract.

The sentiment of the American League clubs, however, seems to have undergone somewhat of a change within the past few years. On a number of occasions they have actually silenced Ban when he has prepared to rip organized baseball, as typified by his foeman of the National League, right up the back. Twice he claimed he had C. W. Murphy at the brink of the chute for the "Down and Out Club," but his own supporters silenced his guns because apprehensive that a scandal might affect the whole organization. He was also going to make John T. Brush jump through a knothole for the New York club's alleged manipulation of sales of the world's series tickets in 1911. Mr. Brush made Mr. Johnson indorse a public exoneration from the charges. His long-promised airing of the umpire bribery charges at the Polo Grounds in 1908 fell flat after he had talked himself into a position that made him appear absolutely ridiculous.

Cures Charlie Murphy.

There is no doubt that Mr. Johnson has been a great factor toward putting organized baseball on a sound and unimpeachable footing. For that he deserves due credit. He has also succeeded, at last, in impressing upon Charlie Murphy the objection to loose talk. Ban could do no better than to adopt the same sort of policy that was crammed down Murphy's throat.

TORONTO GETS BRADLEY.

TORONTO, July 12.—The Toronto International League club has just completed a trade whereby Al Shaw, the Maple Leaf outfielder, goes to the Jersey City club for First Baseman Hugh Bradley. Bradley was with the Boston Red Sox in 1912, and was turned over to the Skeeters at the beginning of the present season.

VARDON WILL BE FAVORITE AT BROOKLINE

Now That Taylor Has Called Off Trip, ex-British Champion Looks Best.

By Tick Tichenor.

AFTER James H. Taylor won the British open championship the latter part of last month, it was hoped that he could be induced to join Ray and Vardon in their trip to the United States early in August. The latest news from across the water is that he has decided to remain at home, and will not seek further fame and money in trying to annex the title of champion of America to his already long list of winnings.

Had Taylor decided to make the trip, it would have made the British chances unusually good, as it would have given them a team of three whose wonderful skill is known wherever the game of golf is played.

For the last twenty years Braid, Taylor and Vardon have stood in the forefront of British golf, and each of them has won the British open tournament five times, while last year Ray won the title for the first time.

The team of Ray and Vardon looks awful dangerous. They were tied for second in the British open this year, and someone has got to do four mighty fine rounds at Brookline to keep one of this pair from being the leader in the open championship of the United States.

* * *

SOME ten years or more ago Harry Vardon crossed the Atlantic and played numerous matches in the United States. He won one victory after another. In only one match, if the dope which has been handed down is correct, was he beaten. This was a match which he played with Ben Nichols. Ben, by the way, is a brother of Gilbert Nichols, who is considered by many to have more shots in his bag than any other professional in America.

* * *

WHEN Vardon arrives this time, he will find that the game has made several long strides forward since his last visit. Practically none of the professionals who were at the top of our golf then are now in the running. A new generation has been developed by the professionals who have been brought to this country to teach the game. Vardon and Ray are bound to win a lot of matches, but they will not win as many as Vardon did ten years ago. They will meet with stouter resistance in every match than had to be overcome on Vardon's former tour of triumph.

IF what has been written of him is true, Vardon is a player whose form is perfect. His strokes are so easy and graceful that one is at a loss to see how he gets the ball to travel such a distance with each little effort. The rhythm of his swing is so perfect that there is no apparent effort to hit the ball and force it away. The ball seems to be swept away from the tee instead of driven by the impact of the club.

Ray, on the other hand, is a man of tremendous build, and he puts all of his great strength into his drives, which travel enormous distances. In fact, it is said that he does not carry a brassy in his bag, as the length of his tee shots make this club practically unnecessary. If the shot through the green necessitates a wooden club, he uses his driver. He is one of the few players who uses a niblick in making nearly all of his lofted approach shots to the green. It is said of him that in his swing he is unorthodox in that he sways his body, doesn't keep his head still and if we were to believe the many things that are written about him one would be forced to the conclusion that in his drives he slops all over the tee.

But George Duncan, who is one of the best pros in all England, in writing of Ray's style, says that while Ray admits he is unorthodox in his tee shots, such an admission is not correct; that in both his backward and downward swings Ray's club travels in practically the same path as Vardon's, the only difference between them being cause by the difference in the size of the two men.

Now, as Duncan has played with Ray on numerous occasions, I am more willing to believe what he has to say of Ray's style than a lot written by someone who is not so familiar with his game. At any rate, Ray is a great player and anyone who beats him has accomplished a man's work.

If the American pros can check the British advance at Brookline in September, they have got to play some real golf.

CUPID MAKES HOMER AND BUSTS BLOOMER GIRL TEAM

PITTSBURG, PA., July 12.—The manager of the American Bloomer Girls Baseball Club, the women champions of the United States, is in sore distress.

Cupid has wrecked his team. The little God of Love swooped down on pretty Meta Harland, the club's star twirler, and Harriet Logan, the crack shortstop of the team, and carried them off in their natty uniforms immediately after they finished playing a game at McKeesport.

And despite the efforts of James C. Murray, the manager of the team, his crack players can not be located. Murray said to-day that Miss Harland and Miss Logan had eloped with two young McKeesport swains and he might as well disband his team, as the two love-smitten girls were the "whole works," and without them his team was of little account. It was learned to-day that Miss Harland and Harry Welchonce and Miss Logan and James Hurley were married at Wellsburg.

The following telegram was received by a member of the team from the eloping players:

"We made a double steal and are waiting on third to come home. Hit 'em out and give us a chance."

WILLIE RITCHIE ROOTS FOR HIMSELF IN THE PICTURES

SAN FRANCISCO, July 12.—Willie Ritchie saw himself fight at a private exhibition of the moving pictures taken of his battle with Joe Rivers. The champion was so interested that he forgot where he was and "rooted" vigorously for his own shadow.

In the early rounds he murmured a little at his slow progress, but as the tide turned his way he grew more and more excited, and in the last round half rose from his chair and coached himself.

"Now's your chance, Willie," he shouted. "Go get him."

JAKE DAUBERT IS HEADED FOR BATTING LEAD

UNLESS they head off Jake Daubert he is going to hammer his way into the National League batting lead. The former Southern League player has been hitting like a wild man of late, and is now tied for second place among the batting regulars of the old league. The only man who heads him (who has played in twenty games or more) is McDonald. Cravath and Daubert are tied with .353. Jake has stolen eleven bases and has hit for 14 extra bases.

AMERICAN LEAGUE HURLERS ARE BEST, SAYS CHANCE

NEW YORK, July 12.—For years a National League player and manager, Chance, who is thoroughly qualified to talk on the subject, was asked point-blank if the brand of baseball in the American League was faster than the baseball played in the parent organization.

"I cannot see much difference," stated Chance. "I believe that the American League pitchers are better than those in the National League, but outside of that there is little to choose."

Asked why it was that this season the games played in the National League consumed less time than those in the American, Chance replied: "Up to this year it was just opposite—American League games were hustled through quicker than the games played in the National. I can not explain it. I reckon it's just one of those things."

Batting Leaders Still Bunched

Agler Has Been Hitting Well

THE race for batting honors in the Southern League, more exciting now than was ever known before in Dixie, shows no material changes. Dave Robertson, Kid Elberfeld, Gribbens, Wally Smith, Harry Welchonce, Tommy Long, Kniseley, Sloan and Messenger are so closely bunched that in a week they may shift from top to bottom of the .300 sluggers.

The most remarkable batting feature of the last few weeks has been the rise of the well-known newspaper correspondent and first baseman, Joseph Agler. From a point well below the .200 mark Joe has hammered his way up to .291 and is gaining steadily.

D. Robertson leads the base grabbers, with Stock and Messenger tied for second honors. Here are the batting marks through Tuesday's games:

HITTING IN AMERICAN IS EXTRA HEAVY

HEAVY hitting continues in the American League. Jackson was the leader through Wednesday's games, with a mark of .405. Cobb is, of course, a good second.

Six men in the league top .350 in hitting, 17 are batting better than .300, 25 have hit above .290 this season, 36 are besting .280 at present, 47 ton .270, 54 are slamming the pill at .260 or better, and 67 are above .250.

Here are the records of those hitting .200 or better through Wednesday's games:

JOE BOEHLING, SENATOR HURLER, CALLED "DIXIE"

WASHINGTON, July 12.—When Joe Boehling recently displayed skill against the world's champions at Boston he was surrounded by a number of friends from Worcester, and during the fanning bee following it was discovered that last year Boehling was known as "Dixie" Boehling while winning games for Jesse Burkett's New England League outfit. Joe smiles when the story is told, because he earned his title by standing up in a Worcester theater one night and frantically cheering when the orchestra started that famous war song of the Confederacy.

"Brown Best in League"–Sutton

"Elmer Brown is far and away the best pitcher I have seen in the league this season," said Scout Larry Sutton, of the Trolley Dodgers.

Coming from such a veteran judge of ball players, who has picked up many a star for Brooklyn, this is a nice compliment for the Billiken hurler.

"Brown seems to have a little of everything," said Sutton. "He has a good fast ball and a good head. Furthermore, he has plenty of nerve, which is one of the most essential things in a pitcher. I am told that the Browns own this slabman, so that we should be little use in trying to land him. However, any time he wants to don a Brooklyn uniform, I will furnish the duds."

JOE BOEHLING OF WASHINGTON LEADS HURLERS

THE consistent way that Boehling holds the pitching lead in the American League is amazing. Through Wednesday's games he was the leader, with eight straight wins, and since that time he has copped another contest. Bender and Plank are tied for second, with thirteen won and three lost apiece. Houck is only a trifle behind.

Here are the pitching averages:

	W.	L.	P.C.
Boehling, Washington	8	0	1.000
Bender, Philadelphia	13	3	.813
Plank, Philadelphia	13	3	.813
Houck, Philadelphia	8	2	.800
Johnson, Washington	19	5	.792
Falkenberg, Cleveland	12	5	.706
Gregg, Cleveland	16	7	.696
Brown, Philadelphia	9	4	.692

WORKING HARD ON GREAT SHOW OF A. A. AND A. A.

Either October or November To Be Chosen—All-Day Outing and Barbecue July 19.

The third annual show of the Atlanta Automobile and Accessory Association has been scheduled for some time in either October or November.

The committee in charge are making arrangements with the Auditorium Committee of Council for an open date, and the exact time will be announced within a few days.

Without a doubt, the 1913 show will eclipse all former exhibitions. Of course, the plans have not been fuly worked out yet, but enough is known to prove that this year the display of new automobiles, accessories and novelties will be on a much broader scale than ever before. While the decorative effects are not selected, the committee will listen to nothing but the most elaborately brilliant design possible.

Searching for Band.

A thorough search will be made for the most popular and best liked band in the country. If it is possible to get Sousa or Creatore, he will be here. No expense will be spared. it is merely a question of getting the contract. If it is impossible to secure either of these two, then the best band in the United States that is available will be here.

The committee has several exclusive features up its sleeve for this show which it considers unique—something never introduced before into an automobile and accessory show—and features that will certainly increase the interest and entertainment every day.

An all-day outing, with an old-fashioned barbecue, has been arranged by the association for Saturday next, July 19. All the automobile and accessory houses have agreed to close on that day and give their entire forces a real day of fun.

Features of Barbecue.

There will be a baseball game between teams composed of automobile dealers, captained by G. W. Hanson, and the tire and accesory men, with H. A. Price, of the Goodrich, in charge. It will be a good game and should put the members of the association in a most receptive mood for discussion of big show plans.

After the details of the plans for the coming show have been fully worked out and the proper committees appointed, everybody will gather around the banquet board, where will be pots of steaming brunswick stew and enormous and luscious portions of old-fashioned barbecued pig and lamb, together with a bountiful supply of the "amber fluid."

Cooling Troubles In Summer Season

The Summer touring season brings with it cooling troubles for the motorist. There are several reasons why water-cooled motors overheat. The cause may be a clog in the circulating system, preventing the free circulation of the water. The obstruction might be in the radiator itself, in the water pump, or in the hose connections. It is not unusual for a piece of solder to clog the main water outlet at the base of the radiator.

It is also possible that the propeller of the pump has become loosened on the shaft, and as a result does not throw the water. If the water hose connections have been, on for some time it is more than likely that the inner walls have become softened and are swelling shut. The external surface of the hose may seem to be in good condition, while the inner walls have decayed.

To locate the obstruction in the water lines the hose connection between the radiator and the top of the cylinder can be removed and by pouring water into the radiator one can very readily tell whether the trouble lies in the pump itself. Again, the trouble may be traced back in the lower connection at the base of the radiator.

If the automobile has been running a considerable length of time it is also possible that the cylinders are carbonized to such an extent as to cause overheating.

A thick coat of carbon in the cylinders will not only cause the motor to overheat, but also to knock, even though the spark is considerably retarded.

A combination of a retarded spark and a slightly rich mixture will cause much trouble, irrespective of proper water circulation.

Unique Plan Tried For Utilizing Space

DETROIT, MICH., July 12.—One of the questions continually asked Ford dealers is how they are able to secure Ford motor cars when there is a shortage of railroad freight cars.

Investigation reveals the fact that this is accomplished because the Ford Company, after considerable experimenting, figured out a plan for utilizing every inch of space in a box car.

Ford cars are shipped six to the car. The stripped chasses are stood on end in one end of the car and the bodies in the other. The wheels and other equipment, carefully crated to avoid breakage, is piled in between and when a freight car pulls away from the Ford loading sheds there is not a particle of vacant space in it.

If it were not for this method of loading the Ford Company could not deliver its enormous output, despite the fact that thousands of the cars manufactured at Detroit are shipped in knock-down form to the various assembling plants around the country.

DEALERS' COMMITTEE DECIDES ON AUGUST 9

At the request of several prominent racing drivers who are anxious to compete at the race meets to be held under the auspices of the Motor Dealers' Contest Association of New York, a special meeting of the Race Committee of that organization has decided to hold their first meet on Saturday afternoon, August 9.

While it was hoped to hold an earlier meet, it was found impossible to secure drivers up to that time. The dealers thought it best to wait until they could get the real stars to compete.

LOCAL AGENT OF ALCO REPORTS BIG TRIUMPH

M. Nabors, Alco manager, returned from Birmingham Saturday, and reports another Alco victory in the sale of two Alco trucks and the assignment of the State of Alabama to the Brown Motor Car Company as Alco agents.

Mr. Nabors said that Birmingham is a most promising field for motor trucks and that with the Brown Motor Car Company as agents the Alco will get its portion of the business.

AUTODOM LOSES CHARACTER IN RETIREMENT OF HOPKINS

Lindsey Hopkins, who is retiring from business at age when most people start.

Young Financier Leaves Automobile Game for Private Banking. Sketch of His Career.

The advice of one who has made a big success in life before reaching 35 is worth hearing. He is Lindsey Hopkins, and men will read what he says about getting on in business for the same reason that women will read what Dorothy Dix and Beatrice Fairfax say in their articles on "how to be beautiful." Lindsey and the others are alike in one respect—they have made good in their own lines.

Nearly every ambitious young man wants to get rich.

What follows will tell you how one young man has gathered a bunch of coin that runs to seven figures. Stop reading if you are looking for an "easy thing." What Mr. Hopkins has to say will be highly disconcerting to the man who believes there is some magic "secret of success."

Mr. Hopkins' Philosophy.

Lindsey Hopkins began working as a farm boy twenty years ago, without a cent of capital, and Saturday, at 34 years of age, he voluntarily retired from the presidency of one of the largest auto sales concerns in the South, with a fortune that makes him practically a millionaire.

Let him talk.

"When my old daddy put me to work on the farm up in the foothills of North Carolina," says Mr. Hopkins, "he told me to work hard and keep my eyes open. I have been trying to do both ever since. I got my philosophy of life at the plow handles. I have been plowing ever since. Does that mean I have been a plodder? You bet I have! But I have tried to plod with my head up.

"Be a plodder, but don't be a mole. You won't get ahead very fast, even by the hardest work, unless you look ahead. It may be praiseworthy, but it is also pathetic, to see a fellow so bent over a little $20-a-week job that he can't see anything else in the world. It is all right to concentrate your whole soul and energy on sweeping a floor or plowing a furrow—if you know why you are doing it. But take care not to let your furrow become a rut.

"Work hard, and look ahead. Those are the only rules of success I know."

And that's the end of Lindsey Hopkins' talk.

Results are the only test of a maxim. Here follows a brief sketch of the results Lindsey Hopkins has got from his own applications.

Got Taste of College.

Lindsey Hopkins was born April 22, 1879, on a farm in Rockingham County, North Carolina. He received an ordinary amount of schooling, later took a limited course in the University of North Carolina, and formed a lifelong habit of reading good books; but the most conspicuous evidence of his boyhood was the fact that he early develped a capacity for hard work. He was a schoolboy in the winter and plowboy in the summer, not because he had to, but because work came natural to him. The first wage-earning job he ever had was as printer's devil on The Greensboro Patriot. He held that job for three years, and was the best "devil" they ever had.

It was not until 18 that he actually got into business, becoming a traveling salesman for the Atlantic Refining Company, and became known throughout the South. He acquired knowledge of the business so rapidly that he was made the company's special representative in Europe, where he established a London office for his concern in 1904. He also established sales branches throughout the tropics.

He was one of the first men to demonstrate the possibilities of the auto in cross-country touring. In 1905, when such a thing as an interstate auto trip was unheard of, Lindsey Hopkins started from Atlanta in a "one lung Cadillac" and successfully reached Greensboro, N. C., after a sensational trip. The achievement made auto history, and has been celebrated through the Carolinas by Colonel Al Fairbrothers' "Ride of Paul Revere, Jr."

Now to Be a Banker.

In 1906, through a special concession from the Atlantic Refining Company, Mr. Hopkins became agent for the Reo motor cars as a "side line." His success in selling autos was so phenomenal that in 1908 he turned down a salary of $12,000 a year and made his first contract with the Overland manufacturers, which called for the sale of 50 cars during the season of 1908-09. That was considered a big contract in those days, but the book of sales records shows that this same hustler since that time sold 3,312 automobiles in the Southeastern territory, involving a net cash transaction of over $5,000,000.

Incidentally, he has probably sold his last car, for Mr. Hopkins is voluntarily stepping down from the presidency of the Overland Southern Motor Car Company to hang out his shingle as a private banker, and tranquilly superintend the growth of his private fortune.

'Bud' Fisher Is Fond Of His 'Lozier Six;' Rides Mutt and Jeff

"Bud" Fisher, whose brain-children Mutt and Jeff, have delighted thousands of newspaper readers in the past few years, has joined the ranks of motoring cartoonists. Mr. Fisher's choice is a Lozier Light Six, which he purchased from Harry S. Houpt, New York dealer for the Lozier Company.

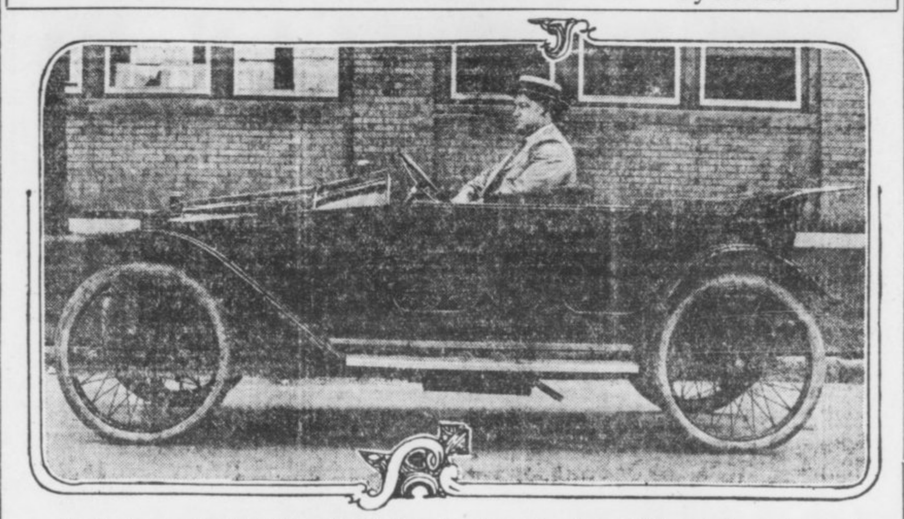
Fisher's originality found expression both in the way his car is decorated and the manner in which it was shipped from the factory at Detroit. So anxious was the cartoonist to receive his machine that he ordered it sent by express. Once it arrived in the Big Town, the newspaper artist tried his hand at decorating on the two rear doors of the car.

A small minlature of Mutt now adorns one tonneau door with a counter portrait of Jeff on the other door. Thus will the car announcer at the theaters recognize the Fisher family when they arrive to put on their act.

The car itself is a striking creation with white hood and running gear and blue body. While Mr. Fisher and his wife are filling a vaudeville engagement in the South the car is on exhibition in the Broadway salesrooms of the H. S. Houpt Company.

Fisher's choice of a Lozier car was influenced somewhat by the opinion of his friend, R. F. Outcault, famous as the creator of the Yellow Kid and Buster Brown. Mr. Outcault has driven a Lozier Big Six for the past four years and is at present engaged in making a 5,000-mile cross-country tour in his machine.

Here's Latest in Automobile World---Cyclecar



The Cyclecar called the "Poor Man's Hope," weighs less than 1,000 pounds, and costs from $250 to $500. It is designed to fill the niche between ownership of the motorcycle and the automobile. It seats one to two people, and is capable of making 35 miles an hour. The Cyclecar has appeared in Detroit and other cties, and is expected soon in Atlanta. Typical of it is the long, narrow, torpedo-like body.

His Suite $12 a Day, Count Makes Only $2

DETROIT, MICH., July 12.—Guests of the Hotel Pontchartrain, of Detroit, were very much surprised several weeks ago to see a dapper young man in a rough working suit make his way from the elevator to a waiting taxi while a person, evidently a valet., brought up the rear with a suit of overalls carried openly in his hand.

Inquiry brought out the fact that the young man was Count Paul Von Bonscham, of Vienna, member of one of the oldest houses in Austria. The count spent considerable time in this country studying American industrial methods and while in Detroit he worked at the plant of the Ford Motor Company, in the motor assembling department. He asked no favors and worked steadily for two weeks.

His employment brought him in $2 per day while in the suite at the hotel he occupied with his valet was costing $12 per day. When the young man was leaving, he asked for a letter stating that he had been a faithful workman, saying that he wanted it to show his neighbors that he had actually been working with his hands in this country. It was cheerfully given. The count has several other letters from various institutions where he had been employed in this country.

"Little Six" Wins.

The Franklin "Little Six" touring car making 28.9 miles on one gallon of gasoline won the first prize in the economy test held by the Springfield Automobile Club at the club's annual outing at Springfield, Mass. The car carried four passengers whose weight was 750 pounds, bringing the total weight of the car and its occupants up to 3,750 pounds. There were 45 cars that took part in the run.

Statistics Prove Motor Trucks Are Big Money Savers

A. B. Cumner, of the Federal Motor Truck Company, has been carefully compiling figures on the cost of operation of trucks in comparison with the use of horses, and finds that the truck is much cheaper, and, in addition, gives service which can not be secured from the horse-drawn vehicle.

No effort was made to find ideal conditions in the running of the trucks, but the figures were asked for from a number of users of Federal trucks, and the averages made from these reports.

In the same way the horse figures were secured from a number of users of teams and a general average taken.

Summed up, it is found that the average cost of a two-horse outfit is $1,005 and the yearly total cost, including interest on investment, depreciation, upkeep, driver and all fixed charges, is $1,591.63. Two single trucks cost more than a team truck, the total being $2,373.88. It is customary to count in each case on an emergency horse costing for yearly maintenance $326.50.

On the other hand, while the initial cost of a Federal truck, with standard style body, is $1,950 and the total cost of maintenance is $1,839.17, this is based on an average daily run of 30 miles. In figuring on horse-drawn trucks, 15 miles per day is the average of a two-horse truck and 20 to 25 for the single trucks.

Many motor trucks, however, average more than 30 miles per day, some of them going 50 miles. The upkeep is, of course, greater, but the efficiency and service are in greater ratio than the increased cost, and the total is still less than the cost of two single horse trucks with an emergency horse, to say nothing of the greater territory covered by the motor trucks.

Wet Weather Injures Tar Painted Roads

English Country Life, in discussing the after-effects of tar painting of roads, says:

"Months of almost continual wet weather have worked havoc with some of the tar-sprayed roads near London, and it is becoming more than ever obvious that relief from summer dust can be very dearly purchased. I fancy that much of the trouble is due to the fact that, owing to lack of any prolonged spell of drouth during the early part of the year, much of the tarring was done when the roads were not thoroughly dry.

"The result was that the tar did not penetrate to any considerable depth, and only a small waterproof crust was formed, which the traffic has now broken up and churned into a slimy, slippery coating, which is far worse in every way than ordinary mud. It is doubtful whether tar-painting can ever be satisfactory where a road carries a large volume of heavy traffic, such as motor-omnibuses and lorries and traction engines; but I believe that most of the leading surveyors are agreed that for secondary roads well laid with good macadam yearly surface tarring not only cures the dust nuisance but actually pays for itself in the reduced cost of surface maintenance.

"Many years must elapse before tar macadam can come into general use all over the country, and it would be a serious misfortune if tar-painting, which is a great boon in dry weather, were pronounced a failure on account of unsatisfactory results during the winter."

GOOD ROADS TO LOWELL.

According to the touring department of the Automobile Club of America, motorists making the trip to Lowell from Worcester will encounter good road conditions. The route via West Boylston, Clinton and Harvard is good for practically the entire distance.

MOVE MADE TO STRENGTHEN GREAT HIGHWAY

Famous Men of America Will Be Sponsors—Cost of Enterprise $10,000,000.

A plan is afoot to strengthen further the Lincoln transcontinental highway recently incorporated at Detroit to succeed the manufacturers' ocean-to-ocean highway of Indianapolis, by inviting the most prominent men of the nation to act as its sponsors. It is thought that with a number of nationally famous individuals lending their names to the enterprise subscriptions will come in much faster because of the greater confidence they will inspire. An enterprise which proposes to disburse $10,000,000 must rest upon the soundest foundations. For this reason only men in the forefront of affairs are to be considered.

Movement To Be Launched.

The inauguration of the movement will take place this month during the Indiana-to-Pacific tour of Indiana automobile manufacturers in behalf of the highway. Instructions have been given to Carl G. Fisher and Charles A. Bookwalter, Lincoln representatives on the tour, to invite a number of prominent people along the road to become permanently identified with the highway association. No money is to be involved, save that which may be voluntarily forthcoming, the service rendered being held more than an ample contribution.

A glance at a partial list of those who are to be approached shows them to be literally the nation's vanguard. Adolphus Busch, the noted St. Louis brewer; John W. Springer, the Denver financier; Simon R. Guggenheim, mining king and former United States Senator from Colorado; Utah's famous governor, William Spry; Senator Key Pitman, of Nevada; the Spreckles brothers, Rudolph and Claus, Hawaiian and Californian sugar kings; A. G. Spalding, the retired manufacturer of baseball supplies, now living at Point Loma, Cal., and many others of equal fame comprise this memorable list. Not a man who has not won sufficient distinction in some walk of life or other to make him a national figure.

To Choose Vice Presidents.

The work of Fisher and Bookwalter will not end with the mere selection of sponsors, however. Two vice presidents to the Lincoln proposition from the far West are to be chosen. This is a matter which will probably be left until the end of the tour, inasmuch as it is thought wise to inspect thoroughly the field before rendering a final decision.

Goes 452 Miles in a Day.

J. G. Brant, of Kalamazoo, Mich., made 452 miles in one day in his seven-passenger Franklin touring car recently. Mr. Brant drove from Chicago to Erie, Pa., making the 452 miles without trouble in the one day.

REPUBLIC STAGGARD TREAD TIRES

Ride in safety over slippery pavements

You men who are often compelled to "let her out" can indulge in bursts of speed with less fear of skidding and slewing.

The long, sturdy studs (six rows of them) in the Staggard Tread Tire give your car a good "purchase" on slippery pavements and make skidding an almost negligible factor.

There's extra mileage in the Original, Effective Non-skid Tire, too. The studs form an extra tread over the ordinary, plain tread so that you really have two wearing surfaces.

This Wouldn't Happen If You Knew the Law

It is more than an inconvenience when you are on a tour to be called to account for violating a law that you never knew existed. Motor car laws in the various states differ widely, yet local authorities will not let you off on the plea of ignorance. To enjoy your trip to the utmost, to escape those "little bothers" that are apt to mar it, know thoroughly the automobile laws of the States through which you are going to motor.

The quickest and most economical way to effect this is to buy the July number of MoToR. Here you have a complete, up-to-date and concise review of the laws governing motor cars and their drivers in every state of the Union. Tabular in form, the digest tells you at a glance just what the conditions are, no matter what part of the country you are going to tour. You can't go wrong if you have the July issue of the one indispensable magazine for the live motorist,

Diamond Tire users get maximum mileage at minimum expense

In our engineering department we have men who have made a life business of tire construction.

That's why, in Diamond Tires, you get a tough, elastic, wear-resisting tire, as well as a side wall that will not break above the bead—a No-Clinch construction that prevents rim cutting.

Diamond (No Clinch) Tires

In an effort to give you the greatest mileage at the least expense, our engineers discovered Perfect 3-Point Rim Contact—that holds the rim with a vise-like grip.

PLAY BALL!

BUT PLAY IT RIGHT!!

HERE, at last, you Fathers, is the book that will tell your red-blooded, ball-loving, lot-playing, growing-up boys---who long to excel in the game, and in whose team exploits you take such pride---HOW TO PLAY BASEBALL RIGHT.

And you Amateur Team Members, Semi-Pros, and Minor-Leaguers--- it will tell you, too, HOW TO PLAY BASEBALL RIGHT.

And you, Mr. Fan, it will tell HOW BASEBALL IS PLAYED RIGHT, and enable you to appreciate all the better the fine points of the game.

"HOW TO PLAY BASEBALL" has been written for all ball lovers and players, young and old, by the man critics say has developed more young ball players into Big League stars than any other baseball master of his time---JOHN J. McGRAW---Manager of the Giants---Winner of Four National League Pennants and One World's Championship---the "Little Napoleon of Baseball."

Manager McGraw's book is the result of his two decades in Big League Baseball---and in it he gives the same instructions that he employs to make Champion Giants out of raw material.

By special arrangement with Manager McGraw, and for a limited period only,

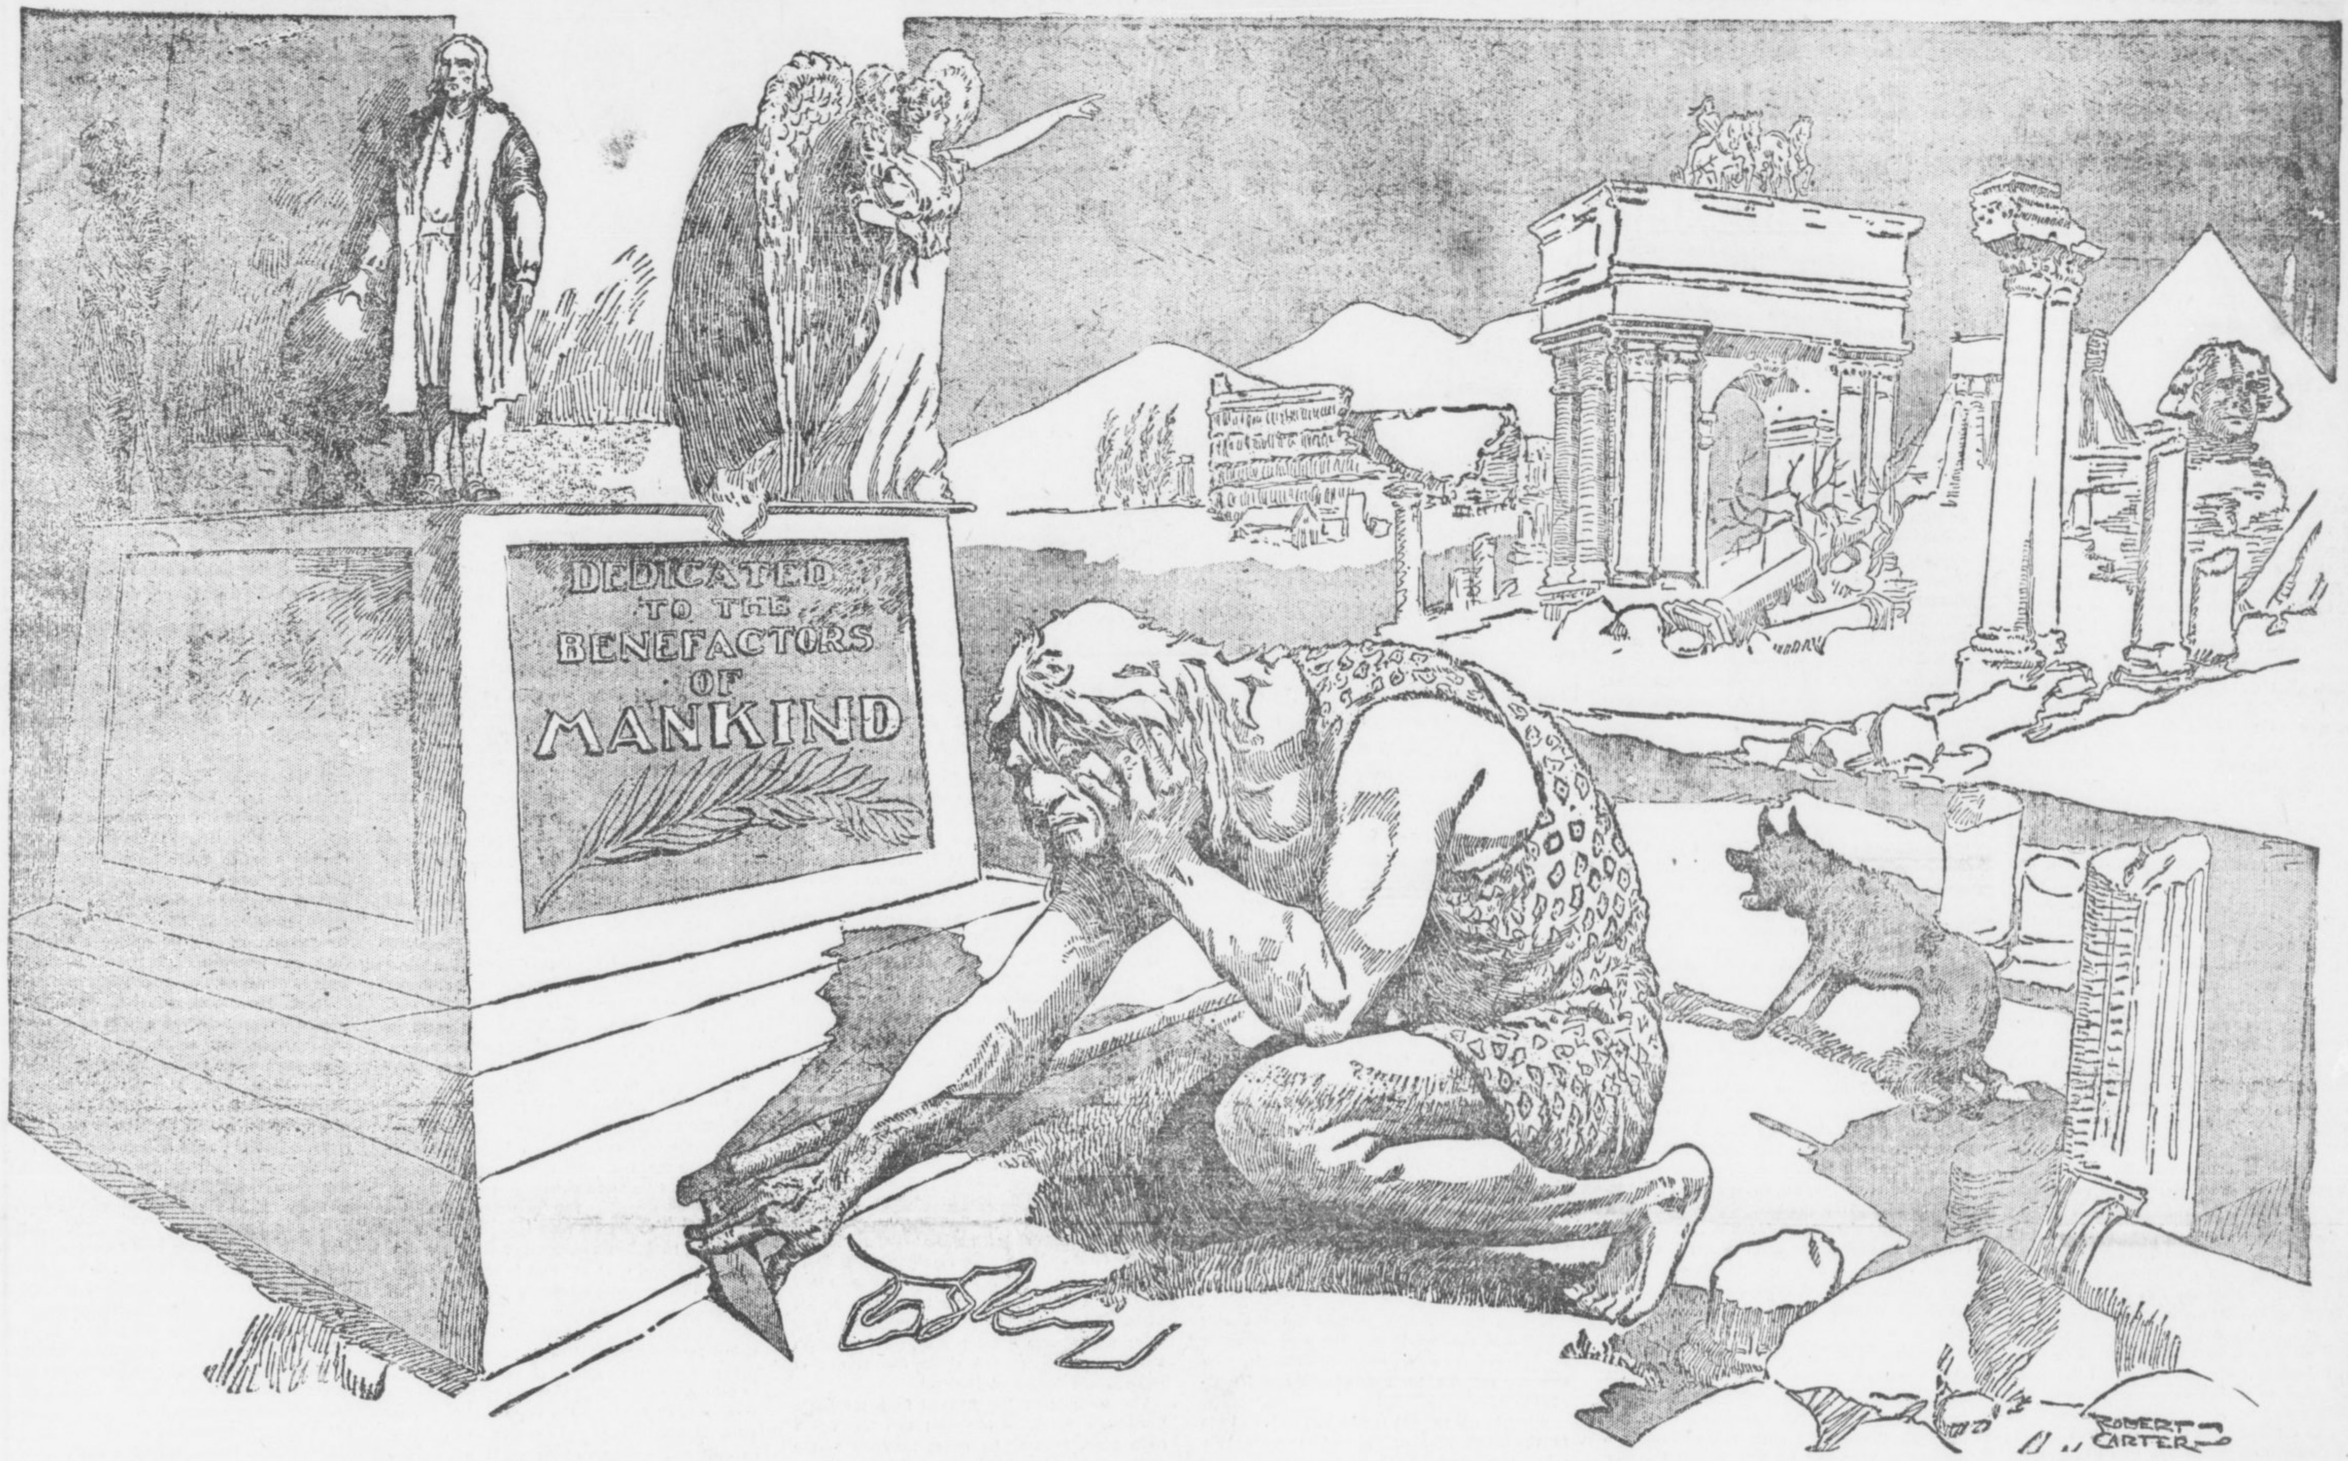
Humble, Earnest Thinkers



They Have Been Our Benefactors in the Past, as They Are at the Present. They Solve the Problems and Smooth the Way

WE ARE STRANGERS TO OURSELVES. WE PERCEIVERS—WE OURSELVES TO OURSELVES; FOR THIS THERE IS REASON ENOUGH. WE HAVE NEVER SOUGHT FOR OURSELVES.—From Nietche's "A Genealogy of Morals."

Thought is our one weapon, our one force, our one earthly salvation. No matter what may be the problem, thought must precede its solution.

Thea heaviest, hardest, noisest work is born of SILENT, INVISIBLE, SHAPELESS THOUGHT.

A great bridge must be built of iron and stone. There are hammering, chiseling, blasting—but back of all the NOISE there is the quiet thought in the engineer's brain. AND THAT THOUGHT IS THE REAL BRIDGE.

History tells about THE NOISE of a great battle. Cannon, cavalry charges, Gatling guns, groans of the dying, the shouts of the commanders. All that is picturesque, but that is not THE BATTLE. The battle, the victory were in the THOUGHT of the quiet, steady man who planned every movement from the start of the battle to the enemy's defeat.

Our external, UNREAL lives are lives of noise, sound, shape, force, physical effort. The real life. THE ONLY LIFE THAT EACH OF US REALLY LEADS, is the silent, strange mysterious THOUGHT — LIFE WITHIN OURSELVES.

We do not, any of us, think enough. We talk, chatter, gossip, listen. We think only for a second at a time. Not one man in a million is capable of sustaining concentrated thought for as much as five minutes without interruption. We laugh at the monkey in the cage who walks gravely along the floor for a second, springs in the air to seize a trapeze, then sits philosophically scratching his head, then dashes at another monkey, then with a wild leap grasps the bars and shakes them and chatters. That is an animal representing the transitional stage between the purely animal life and the beginning of thought-life. We laugh at his grimaces, the stamping of his feet. But we are not so VERY much unlike him. We haven't traveled so MANY miles beyond him. We have long millions of miles to go on the weary, dreary, slow, uphill road to civilization before we shall become really thinking beings WHOSE REGULAR LIVES WILL BE LIVES OF THOUGHT, WHO WILL BE ABLE TO CONTINUE THE PLEASURES OF INTENSE THINKING AS PERSISTENTLY AS WE NOW CONTINUE THE PLEASURES OF GOSSIP OR EATING OR DRINKING.

This admirable picture by Mr. Carter is intended to make you THINK ABOUT THE THINKERS. Mr. Carter shows you a monument erected to the benefactors of mankind, and at the foot, kneeling, savagely clad, and savagely primitive, but MENTALLY CONCENTRATED, he shows you the savage man, your ancestor, using his brain, puzzling out the problem, "How shall I fasten that flnt spearhead to that piece of wood?" HE SHOWS YOU THERE THE FOUNDATION OF ALL THE ACCOMPLISHMENTS OF THE HUMAN RACE THROUGH ALL AGES PAST, AND OF ALL THE ACCOMPLISHMENTS MANKIND, MASTER OF ITSELF, OF THE EARTH, AND OF ITS DESTINY; WILL ACCOMPLISH IN THE MILLIONS OF YEARS AHEAD OF IT.

It may seem foolish to write an editorial and print a big picture about THINKING. I might be asked, "WHY NOT DEVOTE A WHOLE PAGE TO BREATHING?" We all think, we all breathe, we can not help it. What is the use of talking about it?"

In our opinion, THERE IS MUCH USE. We all breathe, true, but nine-tenths of us breathe incorrectly. And consumption is the proof of our bad, defective, inadequate breathing. We all think, we are compelled to think. But ninety-nine one hundredths of us think insufficiently, imperfectly, disjointly. And civilization's slow growth, ignorance and lack of success are all proof of our inefficient thinking.

To breathe properly you must THINK about breathing. You must remember that the top of the lungs requires inflation to prevent consumption. You must remember that the chin mus be held up and the neck back in order to keep the ribs from pressing upon the lungs.

And so it is with thinking. You must THINK ABOUT THINKING. The measure of your thought is the measure of your success. When you drift into a rut, when your feet and your hands do the work mechanically, when your brain goes to sleep, YOU ARE A VEGETABLE, OR A SPONGE, NOT EVEN AN ORDINARY, LOW-CLASS VERTEBRATE.

Stimulate your mind, wake it up, put problems , before it, solve them; put others; THEN SOLVE THOSE.

To-day let us think about THE HUMBLE THINKERS, THE LITTLE THINKERS OF THE PAST, AND THE WONDERFUL WORK THEY HAVE DONE.

The little thinkers are really the big thinkers. For the man who solves LITTLE problems solves problems that the tens of millions of human beings must meet each day. And so he helps the tens of millions of human beings. Whereas, the man who shall solve the great problem, the cosmic problem of the government of this universe, for example, will satisfy the rare minds—the few. His work will be more glorious, but not as important to mankind generally as that of this poor savage in the picture, using his brain to manufacture a long spear that would give to man's feeble hand the power of the tiger's paw or the buffalo's horn. This squatting monkeyman is the individual who told weak human beings how to kill powerful animals, how to conquer the earth, get meat and safety for their children and develop the human race.

And he is one of thousands and millions of the human thinkers, the humble thinkers, that have done our big work. We praise Burbank, the agricultural wizard, who develops new fruit, new vegetables and flowers for us. What about the unknown women and men of the past THAT HAVE GIVEN TO US THE WHOLE WONDERFUL VEGETABLE WORLD AS WE SEE IT? You know that everything we get from the earth is the result of thought and study that go back tens of thousands of years.

We have our wheat and our rye and the other important grains. ALL OF THESE WERE DEVELOPED FROM MERE WEEDS, LONG BEFORE HISTORY BEGAN TO BE WRITTEN.

Women picking seeds from wild plants to grind them up for their children were the beginners of the great wheat fields of the West. A great miracle of human intelligence was the transforming of wild weeds, wild fruit like the crabapple, all of nature's ill prepared savage products, into the marvelous world-feeding plants of to-day. And this was done BY THE HUMBLE THINKERS, THE UNKNOWN.

W admire the man who builds our great steamship. But he was not as valuable a thinker as the first man who put his prognathous face in the palm of his hairy hand, asked himself why he couldn't make the wind push him across the water, AND THEN HELD UP THE DRIED SKIN OF SOME ANIMAL, AND LET THE WIND BLOW HIM FROM ONE SHORE TO THE OTHER. He was the forerunner of the steamship. He made possible the voyage of Columbus to America, for that voyage was only the simple "skin held up" on a bigger scale. He was the forerunner of man's conquest of the earth.

Some untaught, humble thinker, nearer to the monkey than to the man, probably, invented the art of sewing. It was rude work at first. A thorn was used to make holes in the skin of an animal, and threads of that skin, roughly cut, were pushed through the holes, and two skins were fastened together. There was the idea THAT HAS CLOTHED THE HUMAN RACE EVER SINCE THAT DAY, THE IDEA THAT UNDERLIES THE SEWING MACHINE AND THAT TALLEST BUILDING IN THE WORLD THAT STANDS ON BROADWAY, AND ALL OF THE GREAT LOOMS THAT TURN OUT CLOTHES FOR HUMANITY.

If you have half an hour after you put down thought has done, and how humbly it has this page, think for yourself of the work that worked. Each human being has thousands of thoughts, perhaps millions. And there are hundreds of millions of human beings now on earth, and there have been hundreds of thousands and millions of them in the past, and there will be endless hundreds of billions of them in the future. And these minds are like the drops of rain that fructify the earth. In each raindrop there are endless molecules and atoms, combinations of the two gases that make up water, and that produce life. And in each human brain, in each little drop of cosmic thought put on this earth, there are the molecules, the atoms the electrons of THOUGHT that develop the earth, and fructify it, and make civilization grow.

Each of us is a little drop, A THINKING DROP. And we differ from water, and the plant, and the animal, in this, THAT WE ARE CONSCIOUS, THINKING DROPS, WE CAN PLAN OUR THINKING, WE CAN MAKE OURSELVES THINK, WE CAN REALIZE WHAT THOUGHT IS.

Cultivate thought in your OWN mind. Think of yourself as A THINKING BEING AND AS NOTHING ELSE. For a thinking being is what you are, and it is only as a thinking being that you have any importance in this world.

Remember that thought, above all things, is DEMOCRATIC. It is the small man, the humble man, who gives the big thought to the world. The man who invented the sewing machine was an humble worker. The inventor of the marvelous spinning jenny was a very humble and poor man.

Edison was simple and poor, so was Franklin, so was the man who invented the steam engine. Thought knows no rank, no birth. It is a mysterious gift, the gift of the INDIVIDUAL. YOU may have it, ANY man may have it, great or humble. The greatest writers have been the simplest men, and the greatest thinkers and inventors have been the humblest.

THE MIND MUST BE ALIVE, alert, moving, working always. And any day the thought may come. The men that stand out in history are those that had millions of humble thoughts, AND THEN ONE GREAT ONE. Keep your mind busy, RESPECT IT, revere the power of thought that is within you; it is the only power that controls material conditions on this earth. You are the custodian of a wonderful faculty, and one ash within your brain may solve the problem that has held men down for thousands of years.

Respect the humble thinkers. Think on great lines if you can. BUT GREAT, OR SMALL, FORBID YOUR BRAIN TO BE A DRONE. KEEP IT WORKING.

Making the Microbe Work for Good of All Mankind--

Recent Laboratory Achievements Show That Microbes Instead of Killing Us and Making Us Sick Can Be Induced to Work for Us and Save Our Lives (From HEARST'S MAGAZINE, July)

THE question of the origin of life has for long been a fascinating subject for thinking men. Is it necessary that life should always be derived from life; that every living being should have had a parent; is it not possible that lifeless matter should under suitable conditions acquire life? It is not very easy to define life; it is not the power of motion; particles of sufficient minuteness, as already mentioned, exhibit "Brownian motion," and are certainly not living. It is not the power of growth; crystals increase in size, and they are not alive. It is not consciousness; plants have none; and it is difficult to believe that the lower organisms are conscious. With limitations, the best definition is—an organism is alive which can reproduce another organism like itself, also endowed with similar powers. But there are some inorganic materials which closely imitate reproduction.

In a work published some years ago, Mr. Butler Burke described experiments in which small quantities of a salt of radium were added to a solution of white-of-egg; small round objects like cells appeared; and these, like yeast-cells, began to grow small excrescences on one side; the excrescence developed into what was apparently another round cell; and the "child" separated from the "parent," and repeated the process. The writer suggested an explanation at the time which appeared to meet the case; it was that the radium coagulated the albumen, just as an egg hardens when it is boiled; this formed a small round object about the particle of radium-salt.

Niton, the gas from radium, is formed from the radium, together with hydrogen and oxygen gases from the water. The niton also possesses the property of coagulating albumen; and it forms a little bubble on one side of the original "cell," which increases in size until it has grown like its "parent"; when sufficiently large, it breaks off. No doubt some such explanation is correct; the supposed cells were not alive.

A much more serious campaign in favor of "biogenesis," as the artificial creation of living from non-living matter has been termed, has been carried on since the 60's by Dr. Bastian; the latest account of his experiments has been given in a book entitled "The Origin of Life," published in 1911. His contention is that certain inorganic materials, dissolved in water, and heated to such a temperature as to preclude the survival of any seeds or spores, if exposed to diffused light for some three months have transmuted themselves into living organisms, molds, or torulae. But these, when removed from the solution, are not yet exactly alive; they require to be fed with suitable nourishment.

They are transplanted with all precautions into nutrient solutions, and they multiply and can be recognized as alive by any competent microscopist. The difficulty which meets one at the outset is that the organisms which are thus produced are comparatively complicated; they are by no means simple cells. One would imagine that the primordial cell would be of exceedingly simple structure.

Professor Bastian's earlier papers were challenged by Professor Tyndall. Tyndall showed that it is easy to exclude spores from a solution from which organisms could derive nourishment, and in which they could grow, by filtering all air through cotton wool, or by passing it through a sufficiently long tube in which they could settle, or by leaving the air to stand in a box coated on its sides with sticky materials, so that when the spores touched the sides of the box they would adhere. Experiments in which one or other of these precautions were adopted to exclude spores, according to Tyndall, gave only negative results. Professor Bastian, however, is still unconverted; and although most investigators remain unconverted to his conclusions, he maintains his ground.

If it may be permitted to an outsider to risk an opinion, it is that the question is not one which can ever be settled. For on first grounds, it would appear not unlikely that Nature is always producing life; but it is also almost certain that no one could recognize primordial organisms, on account of their extreme minuteness and simplicity of form. If such organisms are being formed, and if they exist, no doubt they would in the course of ages, develop into one of a recognizable form; but proof would appear to be almost impossible.

The modern science of bacteriology began with the investigation of precisely the ferments which yield wine, beer and vinegar. Among the thousands of workers in this science two stand out as pioneers—Pasteur and Lister. The former showed the part played by microbes in producing disease, and indicated the lines of action to be adopted in overcoming their power; the latter applied this knowledge to surgery and taught the world that operations of the most serious kind can be carried out with absolute freedom from risk of inflammation, with all its attendant evils.

In 1854, processes of fermentation were not regarded as vital phenomena; it was taught by Liebig that the change of sugar into alcohol in presence of yeast was due to the decomposition of dead yeast granules; not to the activity of living cells. The first fermentation studied by Pasteur was that which takes place in milk when it turns sour; he observed the deposition of a greyish substance, which increased during the process. On examining it under a microscope it was seen to be wholly different in appearance from yeast; it consisted of very minute corpuscles, and these, added to a solution of sugar, produced the same acid which is formed when milk sours, namely lactic acid.

The first practical lesson which Pasteur gave was to the vinegar-makers of Orleans. He taught them that if a small quantity of the "mother of vinegar," the Mycoderma aceti, was sown on the surface of a vat containing a mixture of wine and vinegar, and if the temperatures were kept at 75 degrees Fahrenheit, vinegar could be made in ten days, instead of the customary couple of months. Yet Pasteur was not the first to discover the process, nor to see the living ferment, nor to connect the process with the life of the organism; it was in placing the manufacture on the firm basis of reasoned experiment that he made his mark.

The greatest discoveries are often, as it were, thrust on the discoverers; the beginning of Pasteur's researches on disease, his investigation of the cause of silk-worm disease, was undertaken by him, after much protest as to his total ignorance of the subject, and after repeated urging by Dumas, then the high priest of chemistry in France. For five years he investigated the disease of silk-worms, and devised means for their prevention. He then turned his attention to anthrax, or "wool-sorters' disease," a malady often fatal to cattle which sometimes attacks man. This he traced to small rodlets or "bacteria" (the words have the same significance), which are visible in the blood of diseased animals. A species of cholera which attacks chickens was the next subject of his researches; and this led him to his most momentous discovery—how to render chickens immune against attack.

Here again, his success was the result of an accident; but it requires a man of genius to perceive to what use an accident may be turned. He had been inoculating healthy chickens with cultures of the microbe separated from the blood of infected birds. These cultures were allowed to stand over his holidays; and when he returned, he tried again the effect of inoculating healthy fowls with old cultures; they suffered no bad effects whatever. On vaccinating these fowls with fresh cultures from diseased birds, he found, to his great surprise, that they were immune. It was next necessary to find the conditions which rendered the virus incapable of itself communicating the disease, and of protecting against infection; the secret lay in exposing the cultures to the prolonged action of air, at a suitable temperature.

It was Pasteur who pointed out the way which has resulted in the discovery of many remedies of the kind, among which are inoculation for anthrax, for hydrophobia and for typhoid.

What has been said in the last pages refers to the destruction of harmful microbes; another important branch of the subject deals with the harnessing of micro-organisms to do useful work. Allusion has already been made to brewing, to winemaking, and to the manufacture of vinegar. But these are not all. The curing of tobacco, the preparation of tea, the manufacture of butter and of cheese; all these are the work of microbes, and are being carefully studied. New bacteria are being discovered, or old bacteria are being given unaccustomed food, from which they evolve useful products. The conversion of starch, a cheap commodity in the form of maize or potatoes, into two chemical substances named acetone and butyl alcohol, is likely to have far-reaching results; for the latter can easily be transformed into india rubber, and the former is largely used in the manufacture of certain kinds of high explosives.

The effects of enlisting the services of microbes useful to mankind, and of exterminating those hurtful, has been enormously to reduce the death rate. But the campaign is by no means over; although malaria has been traced to microbes borne by mosquitoes; although yellow fever had been traced to a similar origin; although sleeping sickness has been proved to be due to the passage of a fatal microbe into man, when he is bitten by the tsetse-fly; and although plague is now known to be due to the bite of a flea which infects rats, and which is itself infected by a special microbe; yet constant work is being done to discover how to keep down these plagues, and if possible to kill them out, as well as to find a means of rendering the inhabitants of dangerous countries immune.

But much has been accomplished in the direction of destroying the hosts of these dangerous parasites; and the destruction of mosquitoes in Brazil and in Central America has made it possible for a large population to live, where death from malaria or from yellow fever was formerly almost a certainty.

Of all branches of human study, that of germs is one of the most fascinating; it deals with our origin, with our life, and with our well-being; and it opens up a knowledge of the history of a set of beings marvelous in their way, which have a most potent influence on our happiness. To this study one branch of science has dedicated itself.

The word "germ" is derived from the Latin Germea, a sprig, an offshoot; and that again from gero, I bear Its strict meaning is the ovary or seed-bud of a plant, and thus it has come to signify that from which anything springs—its origin. The expression "germs of disease" is a common one; and when Pasteur found that in many cases these were small organisms, the word germ was transferred to denote them.

That infectious fevers were caused by something in the air was suspected even in the middle ages. Care was taken to avoid contact with the stricken one; breathing his breath was imagined to be risky; and fires used to be kept burning in the streets, so as to consume the "germs of disease." Defoe tells of a sexton who fetched away the bodies; the only precaution which he took was to hold garlic and rue in his mouth, and to smoke tobacco; and his wife ,who survived him, washed her head and sprinkled her head-cloths with vinegar. Another precaution recommended was to burn rosin and pitch, brimstone and gunpowder, in the houses. These were ancient disinfectants.

The sisters Invention and Discovery always walk hand-in-hand; and although microscopes, more or less effective, had been used since 1590, Amici's invention of the "immersion lens," where the lens dips in water or oil, and can thus be brought much nearer the object viewed, made it possible to examine minute particles hitherto invisible. In the '30's, Robert Brown, the "prince of botanists," as Humboldt called him, discovered that with sufficient magnification small particles are seen to be in a continual state of agitation, skipping here and there, as if they were alive. But this jumping motion was observed not only with objects which might be of animal or vegetable nature; it took place equally with small particles of water-color paints, which no one could suppose to be alive. Of recent years the cause of this motion has been found out; but that is another story.

It was Brown who discovered, by help of his improved microscope, the existence of a nucleus in plant-cells, and after that the way was paved for the examination of germs.

A seed ,whether animal or vegetable, whether an egg or a grain of barley, consists for the most part of food for the germ which it contains. Both the yolk and the white of the egg, as well as the starch of the grain, are merely food supplies. When the grain is moistened, or when the egg is kept warm, the embryo commences to subdivide; each cell becomes two. This reduplication continues, and an organism is formed, which has structure according to what it eventually will become. It consumes its food, starch or albumen, as the case may be; and the plant or animal is formed.

But neither the starch nor the egg food-stuff is taken in by the germ as such; they have first to be changed. And the change is the function of a ferment—a substance which, although not alive, yet has the property of causing other substances to alter their nature; starch, for instance, by the action of the ferment diastase, contained in the grain, changes into sugar ,and it is in this state that it is used as food by the germ. There are similar ferments whch act on the white and the yellow of the egg, and bring them into such a condition that they serve as food for the germ of the egg.

Aseptic Surgery, the Safeguards of Which Are Based on Our Knowledge of Germ Cultures.

The subdivision of the cell, under normal circumstances, does not take place until after fertilization; in the case of plants, until after penetration of the embryo by the pollen, the dust which comes from the anthers; in the case of animals, by the spermatozoon But Professor Loeb has proved that fertilization is not always necessary; that sea urchins' eggs can be made to develop into living animals by placing them in water to which certain salts have been added, or even by irritating them with a needle. It has long been known that many organisms multiply by budding. A familiar instance of this is, cutting a slip from a twig and planting it; it grows into a shoot, which develops into a complete plant.

Yeast, small oval granules, which grow in sugary solutions and change them into alcohol and carbonic acid, multiplies in somewhat the same way; a bud begins to appear on the side of a cell; it grows, and when it has become nearly as large as the original cell it breaks off and starts an independent exisence. Strictly speaking, the plant grown from the slip, or the new yeast cell ,is the same organism as that from which it has been derived; it has, so to speak, only one parent, and is merely a part of that parent which has become independent. To form a really new organism, the concourse of two parents is necessary; the organism then partakes of the qualities of both. And not merely of both, but of the ancestors of both.

These remarks apply not only to low forms of life which have been referred to as illustrations; they apply equally well to human beings Every one knows that children resemble one or the other parent; and not only their parents, but their grandparents, or even their great-grandparents. Often, indeed, a child resembles some particular grandparent. The cell-structure to which this resemblance is due must have been derived from the grandparent; it must have persisted through the life of the parent without becoming manifest, and it appears in the third generation!

And yet the cells which form the embryo of the perfected organism are, so far as can be seen, very simple objects; a skin, surrounding a quantity of granular matter, in which there is a nucleus, itself containing a nucleolus, or still smaller nucleus Such simplicity must be merely apparent; the chemical atoms of which cells are built up are incomparably smaller. We now know, moreover, that even atoms themselves have complicated structure; many believe that they consist of electrons, or atoms of electricity.

How to Create an Efficient Business Organization---

By HARRINGTON EMERSON, The Efficiency Expert

WISE organization is one of the essentials of efficient management or operation. It is an instrument more or less complex wherewith to accomplish a definite result. Therefore, to achieve in the best way a definite result

(1) We must know how to design the organization; be able to make a chart or drawing of it.

(2) We must know that qualities are required of every part of it.

(3) Before selection we must be able to insure the possession of the required qualities and the absence of detrimental qualities.

(4) The organization must cost no more than necessary.

(5) We must define the functions of, we must assist with fullest opportunity and we must delegate full responsibility to the selected parts.

An organization consists of material equipment and life, or "personnel."

These three are combined into a unit which we can chart. A tree is an organization, a crystal or a cloud is not. There are always different grades of unit. Each unit is an organization in itself. The smallest units are aggregated into larger units; these larger units are aggregated into still larger but simpler units. An army is larger and simpler than the men, equipment and materials of which it is made; the man is larger and simpler than the living cell; the gun is simpler than the alloy steel; gunpowder is coarser and simpler than the atoms of carbon, nitrogen, oxygen, hydrogen, sulphur of which it is compounded.

The greater our knowledge of minute details the more skillfully can we create an organization and avoid unnecessary complexity.

Organization differs from a machine because organization includes as its most important part "personality," what the French call "personnel." The French inherited from the Latins a great ability to organize.

Napoleon was one of the greatest organizers for war even greater for peace, that the world has ever produced. He boasted that he could create an army because he knew personally how to compound gunpowder, design and cast cannon, that he knew personally the psychology of human beings.

Personality is a part of the organization in the same manner as material and equipment are; it is useful for the moment, but it also includes the hope, the expectation, the ideal of to-morrow, of the future, for which all organization is created. Personality, therefore, includes the spiritual as well as the tangible.

Management is the "personnel" putting the organization into action.

General laws of organization apply equally to materials, to equipment and to personnel, laws, for instance, of design, specification, tender, test, custody, operation, expectation and realization.

A battleship in all its materials, equipment and personnel is one of the most perfect, man-made organizations the world has ever produced. It is so perfect that it is standardized the world over. The Japanese seized on Russian battleships and in a few weeks transformed them into Japanese battleships; materials, design, equipment, armament were all standard. Japanese youths who served in various capacities on American battleships were able at once to assume commanding positions in the Japanese Navy. The position and the duties were standard.

When we turn from an unusually good form of organization as it exists in the navies of the world to other forms of organization, governmental, both national, state, county and municipal, as shown in executives, legislatures and courts; political as exemplified in party organization; religious, as shown in the churches; educational, as shown in the schools and colleges; penal, as shown in prisons; curative, as shown in hospitals; charitable, as shown in relief works; industrial, as shown in hotels, as shown generally in transportation and manufacturing plants, farming, mining, and lumbering activities, it is apparent that there is no international or even national interchangeability, that there are no recognized or accepted standards, even in the same business.

Everything seems to have grown haphazard and every man of ability, from manager down and from workman up, does, to a large extent, what is good in his own eyes. This anarchy of independence, unsupported by good design or by staff knowledge, or by well-defined power and responsibility, results in what we see all around us—National and State Government the most irresponsible and dangerous foes of industrial activities—industrial activity divided against itself by serious antagonisms between the imaginary classes of employer and employe, low efficiencies everywhere!

All modern human activity requires organization, and organization in the largest meaning of the word is a wise combination of materials, equipment and workers for a purpose.

Something has been done in the design, specification, test and inspection of materials and equipment. There is a splendid assortment of raw, semi-finished and finished materials available in the modern world, but to what extent are they selected?

It is said that Henry Ford had been building good automobiles for several years before he learned that there were alloy steels. Alloy steels specially treated are now the chief constructive features of his car. There is in civilized countries splendid assortment of equipment, but, to take a single example, the great majority of heat engines use 75,000 b. t. u. per horsepower hour, while the best heat engines use less than 10,000. It is evident that even as to so simple a matter as heat engine equipment there is room for improvement.

But as to personnel, in design, specification, test, custody and inspection, we exercise far less care than for material and equipment.

We do not think of using cast iron for anchor links, nor brass for submarine cable wire, but an English family will give the estates to the eldest son, put the second in the navy, the third in the army, the fourth in the church, the fifth into a profession and the sixth in trade, solely with reference to seniority, not in the least with reference to aptitudes.

But men vary in their aptitudes to as great a degree as to materials or equipment, and it is a crime against the position in the organization, as well as against the incumbent, for the wrong material or equipment or personnel, however skilfully designed, to be selected.

Cast iron, however admirably shaped and finished, can't make a good anchor chain link; glass, however excellent it is for windows, just can't transmit electric current; copper, in any usual form, can't be transparent. A man of vital temperament just can't be motive; a man of extreme mental temperament just can't be vital or motive; the man of extreme motivity just can't be judicial.

The essential of correct design is unity.

In man-created organizations, resolvable into units, we should be able to specify the qualities necessary for the material parts, the equipment parts, and the personal parts of each unit.

We have made sufficient progress to specify occasionally and to some extent materials and equipment. Rival manufacturers spend much money to bring to our notice proofs, certified to by great authorities, that their materials and equipment will meet our specifications. As to personnel we are far less advanced.

The worst plan and the oldest is to create the position for the man. The next plan, almost universal, is to bring man and position together with very little reference to fitness. The only plan admissible in good organization is to select the man solely with reference to his aptitude for the position.

'The Recording Angel' Rears a Dream Home in the Georgia Hills

Corra Harris, as She Plows and Plans Among the People Created Out of Her Own Heart, Sniffs at 'Temperament' and Lives Close to Nature.

By TARLETON COLLIER.

HOW a dream home is being realized in the North Georgia foothills is the discovery that came with a visit to the Bartow County farm of Mrs. Corra Harris, the novlist, who is beloved for the tenderly faithful touch with which she has recorded Southern life and the ideals and thoughts of simple Southern people.

On her farm Mrs. Harris lives, plows corn, helps in the wheat stacking, talks with her neighbors about drainage and surveying and potato-planting, gets sunburned to a healthy completeness, and always plans for her home.

The home site is four miles from Pinelog, the tiny village which is the nearest postoffice, and six miles from Rydal, the nearest railroad station. It is on a hill where a virgin forest grows, a hill whose soil is thickly covered by brown pine straw, the accumulation of a very long time. The road leading to the home she described as you very naturally might think she would.

"It winds between kneeling hills, you see, and through meadows," she said.

Already, before the home is built, the hills and the fields of the farm are peopled with men and women whom Mrs. Harris created out of her heart—men and women like the farmers and the farmers' wives of North Georgia, her friends whom she loves and in whose souls she reads something of divinity, she says. Already the place is inhabited.

You come to discover that as she is conducting you about the farm, and as she points to you a shady path, brown carpeted, that is lost in the woods.

"This is Joy's road," she says, "the road that Joy took in her dream."

"Joy" is the heroine of Mrs. Harris' new story, "In Search of a Husband," which is soon to appear.

And Mrs. Harris, standing there, looks down the path and talks about it, talks to herself, to you incidentally, giving all the while a glimpse into her own nature.

"It is a dream path," she says, "filled with emerald twilight, trees standing like great brothers at its side, the sun mottling the ground with the shadow of its leaves, the scent of a thousand flowers, the ferns—"

All of which, the home plans, the dream people, the locality, is not at all surprising from the writer of "The Recording Angel," or from Mrs. Corra Harris, who is a wonderful person apart from her identity as an author.

Mrs. Corra Harris "at home." She is at work on a new story in the picture at the left. The view at the right was taken as she paused in a ramble over her farm. Below, the author of "The Circuit Rider's Wife" is shown making hay, at which she is as proficient as her rural neighbors.

MRS. HARRIS' DESCRIPTION OF HER HOME ON THE FARM

THE hills are covered with a forest, filled in spring with the lavender mist, by red buds and laurels and dogwood. A road winds up from the valley into the woods, a green tunnel beneath the overlapping branches of the trees. There is green shale showing through the soil, as if the earth could make nothing, not even the stones, that were not the verdant color of life in that place. There is a spring between great boulders and ferns growing beside it in the brown leaves. And above the spring is a tiny house.

Sincerely Yours
Corra Harris.

She met her newspaper visitors at night, on the porch of the Anthony farm house, where she boards. A dog barked at their approach, and she came out, holding in her hand a lamp for the strangers' guidance. Shaded by her hand in front, its rays centered on her face and on her red-gold hair, beautiful hair. She was very serious and sorrowful, because her visitors had lost themselves on their way to her house.

But even in her moments of sympathy she would impress them with the fact that there were many beauties in North Georgia, and particularly in her neighborhood.

"Did you see my little orphan star?" she asked. "I have a star that I call my orphan star. It has a tear in its eye. I have never been able to see it anywhere else except from these hills."

Then she laughed, apologetically.

"But I forgot. You are tired, and there is much to see to-morrow. I am too full of the glories of this place, I suppose."

And when to-morrow came, it bore out what she had said. There was much to see, but first of all, the home-site on the hill.

"Here I shall build my house," she said. "It will not be a large mansion, nothing splendid, nothing cold and modern, not a residence. The name residence is cold. Home has a warm meaning. I shall build a home, a little house of logs.

"To think of a residence you are inspired to a conception of grandeur, of coldness. A home is something that has its roots in the familiar earth, and that blossoms into a thing of glory and beauty and warmth and love."

All unconsciously, Mrs. Harris had struck the dominant note of her philosophy.

"Love," she mused. "It is a term chewed up and abused and mistreated. It would be a great thing if it were resurrected and clothed with the splendor that really belongs to it. Splendor and warmth, and nothing tawdry."

Love, she says, is essentially warmly alive and feeling. She laughed at platonic love.

"The idea of a cold platonic love is foolish," she said. "Love is warmth and life. Every blade of grass is a love letter to the sun that kisses it. Religion is to love all, not only the good.

"Love is the only real standard. Not fame. Fame is a false standard, being that light in which you are regarded by people who don't know you and who care nothing about you. It is unreal. But the standard of love is to be known for yourself, to be regarded as yourself, and to be known for your real thoughts and actions.

"I don't care for the people among whom I live to read what I write, or to have any opinion about it. It is what I am and what I do that counts between us."

All this while Mrs. Harris sat with her visitors on the hill where her home is to be built. There under the cover of the old pines, where the "sun mottled the ground with the shadows of their leaves," just as she had said, the visitors led her to talk about her work and her ambitions and her career. She disclaimed a career, however.

"I want merely to become, in some slight way, the medium of the hearts of the men and women about me," she said.

Thus to record life through emotions and ideals is, in her opinion, the function of the writer of what is called fiction. The day of the mere "yarn" in literature has passed, she said.

"People as they appear, as they do, are not real," she said. "Reality is not appearance. The only reality and truth is here."

And her hand was laid over her heart.

That is why her characters seem to be idealized men and women of the farms and mountains. They are not idealizations, however, she said, but as she sees them, realities. They are drawn from her heart and from her insight into the hearts of others. Her power is something of a divination—not the trite "knowledge of human nature" of which people glibly talk. Not until Mrs. Harris was pressed, and then only with an apology, did she endeavor to analyze the power which is hers, of divination.

"In the new story," she said, "I have tried to draw my people as of some region between heaven and earth, touching neither, yet possessing something of both."

To her, as she explained them, they will be real persons.

Of her plights resulting from her delineation of characters she laughed.

"Many a man or woman of my acquaintance is ready to vow that this character or that in my books is drawn from my knowledge of him. Many are displeased, because they claim that I have put them in my books, and many times they are not flattered at what they consider their likeness.

"But they are wrong. Not one of my characters is altogether a real man or woman. They all have more of me in them than of anything or anyone else—they are what I am, or what I might be, or what I could be."

One of her listeners was a man who has read everything Mrs. Harris has written, and who admires her deeply—from a personal as well as a literary standpoint.

"Tell me, Mrs. Harris," he said, "who told you about the bad woman in 'In Search of a Husband?' You don't know anything about her, and can't. Somebody must have told you. Who was it?"

Mrs. Harris laughed.

"It's funny how much of evil we all know," she said. "Everybody knows more than he will confess. A woman knows more than she can tell. A woman can never speak freely, because the world is apt to think too many things.

"Do you remember, in 'The Circuit Rider's Wife' there was a woman who wanted always to read Second Samuel with the preacher, always trying to ensnare him subtly? There are many of these 'Second Samuel' women in the world. I have seen them, and you, too."

Mrs. Harris confessed that there were limitations to her power to draw characters.

"There is one person whom I have tried hard and long to put in my books," she said, "and always with failure. It is a certain woman in society who takes all, who gives nothing, and because of whom the lives of men are wrecked or blighted."

All the time talking of philosophy and of her work, very serious things, Mrs. Harris tried to swerve her visitors into a discussion of lighter matters. But they were the most enthralled persons alive. There was something in the shady grove where the party sat that seemed to demand only talk of life and love and ambitions.

But Mrs. Harris finally had her way, leading them into the sunny places of her farm, where there were many things to show them. There was a mineral spring, of whose magic powers she frankly boasted. There was an old log house, built by the Cherokee Indians, in which lived the original owners of the land, and which she will convert into quarters to accommodate her guests when they are too numerous for the main house. She has ambitious plans for entertainments of her friends in "The Valley."

She will call the home "The Valley." That is an interesting item almost overlooked in the discussion of Mrs. Harris' philosophy.

And so she led the visitors over the place, talking of her plans and uttering solemn warnings against the chiggers. She was light-hearted. But even as to her light-heartedness she had a philosophy.

"Sorrow is a thing that I like to consider as the top rail in this life," she said, "something to be taken without touching. And if you do, you'll always land on something better on the other side.

"Life on this earth is to be enjoyed. I enjoy the world and the flesh and such things—when the flesh doesn't carry the indigestion with it. I rejoice in my worldliness and earthiness. This is the real world out here. And who couldn't be happy?"

She was standing on the pine knoll of the Indian house as she spoke. Her hand, with its waving gesture, indicated a flat valley of wheat stubble and corn and a lazy creek that stretched in front and to one side. In the valley an old man was plowing behind a tiny mule—a "cat mule," Mrs. Harris calls the animal, with her knack of unique characterization. The only sound that came to echo her soft voice was the tinkle of a cow bell.

"It is as if all wrong and evil slips away from the world out here," she went. "This is reality, and representative of the world. Vice is not representative.

"This is where I shall make my home and come to live. I am going to live plainly and simply in this valley. I am not going to do any good works. I am not going to presume that far in coming to live among these people, who are far wiser than I, a stranger, in the life about them.

"Good works—what is called church work—is not religion necessarily."

Then Mrs. Harris laughed once more.

"There we go again into the serious. It seems that I can not help it."

Somebody murmured a word about "frame of mind" and "temperament."

"Temperament!" Mrs. Harris sniffed. "That's something we have in common with teething infants and idiots. The writer or person of other talent who ascribes his idiosyncracies to 'temperament' you may put down as suffering from ego-paranoia. If one complains of his temperamental adventure to you, mark his case as that of neurasthenia. An affectation."

Mrs. Harris herself seems the most untemperamental and natural person alive, and is afraid that you might think her affected.

"I have plowed much of that cornfield," she said. "But that is fiction to me. I don't deceive myself there, and I don't deceive the people here. I know it is fiction, because I don't have to do it to make my living."

There is no reality, she thinks, except the

What Fires Cost Everyone--In Bread and Butter--By Robert J. Lawrence

Everybody in America Has to Pay, in the Form of High Cost of Living, for Our Careless Habits with Matches and Cigarettes, and for Recklessly Constructed Buildings

Every Family of Five Is Taxed 5 per cent on $535 to Pay the Fire Fiend

Is the average direct annual fire loss in the United States of $225,000,000 inevitable and unpreventable, or can it be materially mitigated by means within our power? Let us endeavor to appreciate the importance of this enormous waste; gather lessons by comparisons and see whether or not it is worth while to set ourselves seriously to curb the disastrous and appalling loss. What is the cost of this fire waste? From the consideration of the subject, I exclude forest fires and similar destruction which does not pertain to things gathered by the labor of man.

It is true that the aggregate annual loss by forest fires is a huge item, but we leave it out of account. Apart from forest fires, the fire waste in the United States during 1911 by direct combustion was $226,680,622. The added cost of maintenance of fire departments, cost of waterworks systems chargeable to fire service, as distinct from domestic service, the equipment of private plants with private fire prevention and protection appliances, the payment of fire insurance premiums by the public in excess of the losses paid by the fire insurance companies, but including the expense of conducting the fire insurance business, amounted to $242,000,000 additional, making a total fire loss in 1911, direct and indirect, of $478,680,622.

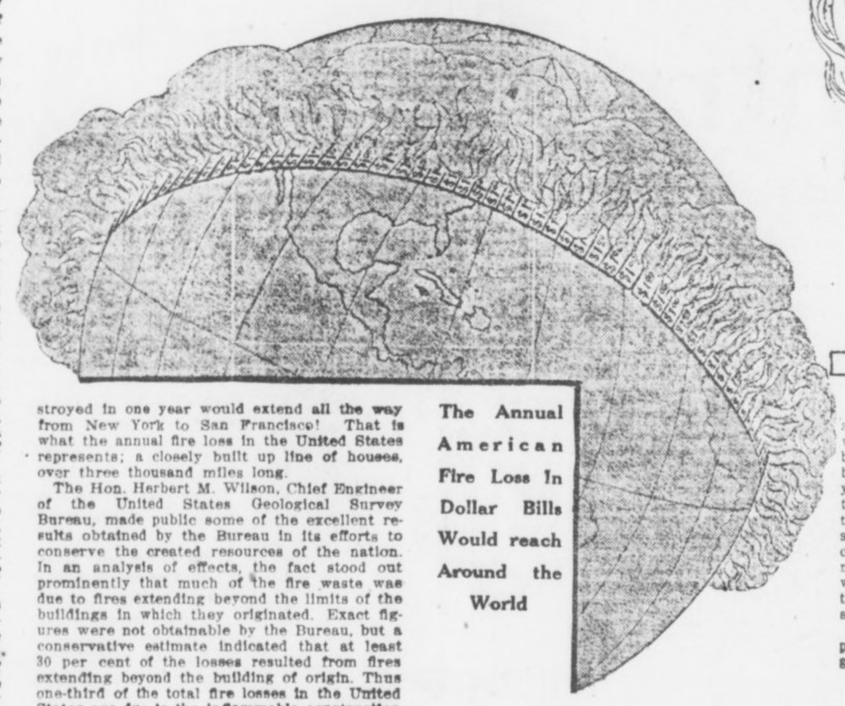
Is this important? Then, again, no account is taken of the loss sustained by property owners owing to partial or complete stoppage of business, loss of rents, loss of employment, or the loss to municipalities in the wiping out of taxable values. These losses cannot be estimated in dollars and cents with any degree of correctness.

It may be argued that a large portion of this $478,680,622 is not actually wiped out. For instance: firemen are employed, appliances are purchased, etc. True, but the point is that in addition to the fire waste a large amount of capital and energy is locked up in unproductive lines, in the same manner as is a vast army and navy. The producing community is taxed to provide for this gigantic amount of unproductive capital. Let us look at the matter in another light. According to the above statistics (which, by the way, are authoritative), a sum approximating $480,000,000 is diverted annually to direct and indirect fire waste. What does this represent if capitalized at 5 per cent—the legal rate being that or more? No less a sum than $9,600,000,000!

In a recent issue of a financial journal, the American Bankers' Association published statistics showing that the combined assets of all the savings banks, plus all the State banks, plus all the National banks, plus all the building and loan associations, plus accumulations of life insurance companies, in the United States, amounted to $9,500,000,000. Startling figures, truly! It needs, however, more than the equivalent of that immense amount of capital to provide annual funds, sufficient at 5 per cent interest to pay the fire cost of this country. Hence it results that every man, woman and child in the United States is indirectly assessed 5 per cent upon about $107, or take a family of five persons, $535, for no other purpose than indemnity for fire cost, direct and indirect. Is this important?

About one-half of the $236,680,622 of direct fire loss in 1911 was upon buildings which were totally destroyed, or more or less damaged. The other half was upon the furniture, merchandise, etc., contained in the buildings. Beside this vast property loss, there were close upon 2,000 persons who lost their lives and nearly 10,000 injured.

The fires that cost these lives, injuries and property loss occurred in 165,250 buildings, and the average damage to each building and its contents was $1,432. Now, what do these figures mean? Who really comprehends their significance? We speak glibly of a million, or of a hundred millions, but these figures convey no adequate impression to our minds; they create no vivid pictures. Suppose it were possible to bring these 165,250 buildings that were visited by fire last year all together, and to place them end to end, how far would they reach? Well, the buildings damaged or destroyed in one year would extend all the way from New York to San Francisco! That is what the annual fire loss in the United States represents; a closely built up line of houses, over three thousand miles long.



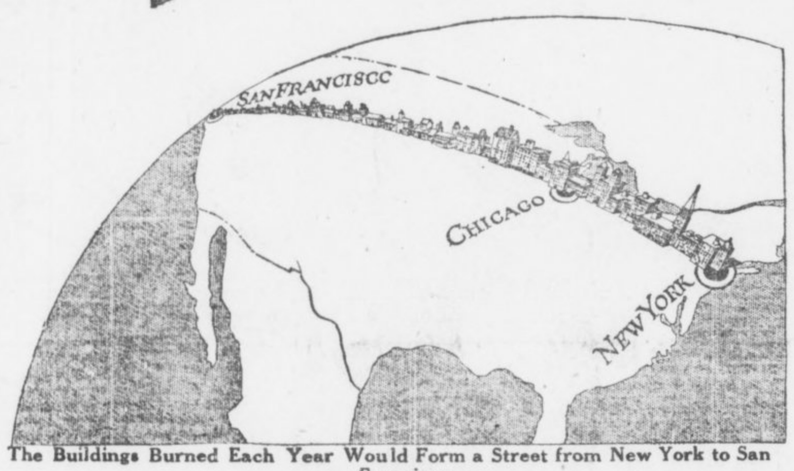
The Annual American Fire Loss In Dollar Bills Would reach Around the World

The Hon. Herbert M. Wilson, Chief Engineer of the United States Geological Survey Bureau, made public some of the excellent results obtained by the Bureau in its efforts to conserve the created resources of the nation. In an analysis of effects, the fact stood out prominently that much of the fire waste was due to fires extending beyond the limits of the buildings in which they originated. Exact figures were not obtainable by the Bureau, but a conservative estimate indicated that at least 30 per cent of the losses resulted from fires extending beyond the building of origin. Thus one-third of the total fire losses in the United States are due to the inflammable construction of American buildings.

Only $67,000,000 of the loss in 1911 were due to fires in brick, concrete and other slow-burning construction, while more than double that amount, or $169,680,622, was in frame buildings. The investigations of the Bureau included the assembling of information relative to the most fire-resisting and fire-proof forms of construction, the former for the prevention of conflagrations, and the latter for the prevention of the destruction of the building in which fire starts. The investigations were divided into three groups. The first included cement, concrete and reinforced concrete, tile, brick and other clay products, building stone and gravel. The second concerned the relative fire risk in the storage and transportation of such liquid fuels as gasolene, kerosene and alcohol, and the third related to the risks of storing and handling explosives.

By the development through tests of a better knowledge of the most economical methods of preparing, proportioning and using our practically inexhaustible resources of building stone, brick, tile and concrete making materials, we may hope to greatly reduce the use and waste of the more perishable and less abundant timber and iron resources now so generally supplied in building construction. This condition is, moreover, being hastened, as the difference in cost of the two classes of materials increase; for the price of timber and iron structures tends to increase as these materials become more scarce, while that of stone, concrete and brick diminishes, as better methods of preparing, fabricating and erecting them are devised.

A dominating feature of this question is the cheapness of the material which will most readily make a home or workshop. Wood had been that material, ready to hand from the days of the early colonists. While the destruction of our forest lands by fire is a calamity as affecting floods, droughts and the productiveness of the soil, yet whatever greatly increases the cost of wood is not an unmixed evil, since it drives to the substitution of other materials for building purposes.



The Buildings Burned Each Year Would Form a Street from New York to San Francisco

If, as experts, a number of fire protection experts were asked to devise the form of city which would most easily be destroyed by fire, they would find their labor saved by taking as models any one of hundreds of cities which are already built, apparently with destruction as the ultimate end in view.

Given a compact brick and stone business centre, to this we add buildings of a height beyond the reach of fire department apparatus, and the pressure of water systems, with large areas to give an unbroken sweep to the flames. We go a step farther and pierce the floors vertically with as many unprotected openings as possible for stairs, elevators, dumbwaiters and skylights. Not satisfied with this, we put on immense wooden cornices, covered with flimsy sheets of tin, admirably adapted to spread fire from one building to another. Then we put in as many windows as we can to exactly oppose windows in the next building. In the interior construction of these brick and stone buildings we place lumber yards of timber, and thus having completed them, we fill them up with combustible material. To many of the so-called best constructed buildings in the average American city, there are added wholly useless domes, mansard roofs and other evils constructed of wood, which features neutralize and destroy the value of the expensive semi-fireproof construction that may lay beneath.

Shingle roofs are a great evil, a crime in fact, productive of heavy fire loss. They are altogether bad and should not be tolerated in any city on buildings within reasonable reach of any other building. The Galveston fire, the Jacksonville, Fla., fire, the Chelsea, Mass., fire, not to go back to the vast proportion of area destroyed by the Chicago conflagration—all owe their spread to the shingle roof, which was directly responsible for the enormous losses. And the same is true of thousands of other losses, where the flames have spread from one building to another. Thirty per cent. of all fires are due to exposure fires—that is, they spread from one building to another—and the main cause of exposure fires, apart from unprotected openings, is shingle roofs. Bad building codes, or the absence of any building laws, permit of an immense amount of defective construction; the attitude in many communities being that every man is a law unto himself as to what he shall do in his building, with a reckless disregard of the rights and safety of his neighbors or the city at large.

Otherwise careful and intelligent citizens will thoughtlessly endanger the safety of a city and their neighbors' property by allowing large accumulations of inflammable material and fire-breeding rubbish on or adjoining their property. The declaration of experts that over 50 per cent of the present fire waste of this country is due to easily preventable causes, indicates that the entire nation might well be taught lessons in individual responsibility. Correction of careless habits is certainly possible in both adults and children. Many of our national sins, however, can only be corrected by collective action.

It is too much to expect that our people, in their impetuous haste and rush, will, in the near future, cease to erect the inflammable shells they now put up and fill with equally inflammable goods. We differ from Europeans in solidity of character, and our character is reflected in our buildings; but we can at least make reasonable laws to protect ourselves from the carelessness of one another without going to the extent covered by the French statutes, which hold property owners and tenants liable to damages when fires spread beyond the building of origin.

As one goes about through our streets and into the warehouses, the stores, institutions and the homes, he sees lighted matches cast aside with the utmost carelessness. Children bearing embers and torches from bonfires, scatter them about regardless of surroundings. Highly inflamable goods are carelessly handled in alarming proximity to blazing, movable gas jets. Explosive materials are used for all purposes in most reckless fashion, or gas jets are allowed to burn in obscure corners where an increase of pressure might send forth a pillar of fire.

We are most careful to obey the laws with respect to blocking our sidewalks with goods, and are willing to follow the direction of the officer who regulates the traffic in our streets. We make no objection to complying with the rules of the transportation companies, street railways, the many and varied public and private enterprises which we patronize. In fact, there is not an hour of our time we are not complying with rules of some sort to which we are subjected, yet we follow not the rules which concern our greatest peril, for in that case we appear to have formulated none.

If the serious attention of the people would be directed to this subject it would come about that a man could not be a law-abiding citizen who did not use the same effort to prevent fire that he now does to keep well within the existing laws of all sorts and kinds which he is expected to heed. Carelessness must have a starting point. In the careless home are bred careless children about all things; in shop, factory and in the various institutions where they work, and this carelessness exhibits itself especially in their attitude toward fire. Instil into the minds of our people, and especially the youth of the land, a wholesome fear of the fire fiend, and the sentiment that the man or woman or child who is careless with fire is a public enemy, and must, in some way, be made to feel the protest of right-minded citizens.

Unfortunately, no sense of the immorality of needless waste has yet moved us. Superinduced by the mental habit of considering our national supply of raw materials inexhaustible, is the thought that fires do not matter so long as there is insurance capital to pay for them. As we are beginning, however, to conserve our forest lands, we may come to consider that the things one's hands have created may also be worth saving. We may come to look with disfavor upon buildings of excessive height and floor area without adequate fire cut-offs, with huge floor openings and unprotected windows. We may come to demand that the so-called fireproof building shall be really fireproof, knowing that steel work, improperly insulated, will buckle in a hot fire, even if the whole structure does not collapse entirely.

In the rush into concrete building now evident, we may come to demand honest mixtures of cement, and the use of sand sharp enough to bind the concrete properly, instead of the smooth water-worn pebbles that will aid the crumbling and disintegrating process under the action of heat and water. We may cease our folly in making floors ten inches thick and enclosing stairs and elevators in a wall of equal thickness to prevent the spread of fire from floor to floor, and then leave our window protection to one-eighth inch window glass when strong and fire-resisting glass held in metal frames is available.

A fire in the congested district of New York City, covering one-tenth of the area burned in the San Francisco conflagration of 1906, would put every fire insurance company in the country out of business. It is well recognized among expert fire protection engineers that the San Francisco catastrophe, Baltimore and Chelsea fires may be duplicated any day in New York City, provided a fire starts in the right place on a windy night. The recent fire in the Equitable Building came within an ace of causing a conflagration, the results of which would have been terrible to contemplate. There is scarcely a city in the United States which does not offer conditions ripe for devastating fires.

If we compare the official figures showing the actual property loss by fire in the largest cities of the United States in 1910, with that of a like number of European cities possessing about equal populations, we arrive at startling contrasts. For instance, London, England, with a population of 7,252,963 had a property loss by fire amounting to $1,286,700; a per capita loss of 39 cents. New York City, with a population of 4,766,883, lost property valued at $10,582,830; a per capita loss of $2.22.

Paris, France, with a population of 2,846,946, had a property loss by fire aggregating $1,168,723; a per capita loss of 41 cents. Chicago, Ill., with a population of 2,185,283, suffered a property loss of $6,048,900; a per capita loss of $2.76. Berlin, Germany, with a population of 2,064,158, lost property valued at $303,840; a per capita loss of 14 cents. Philadelphia, Pa., with a population of 1,549,008, lost $2,680,960 of property values by fire; a per capita loss of $1.73. Dresden, Germany, with a population of 550,882, suffered a property loss of $68,324; a per capita loss of 12 cents. Boston, Mass., with a population of 670,585, lost property valued at $3,451,318; a per capita loss of $5.14.

Leeds, England, with a population of 430,860, lost property valued at $182,830; a per capita loss of 42 cents. Pittsburgh, Pa., with a population of 533,905, had a property loss of $979,253; a per capita loss of $1.83. These instances are by no means exceptional; they represent good general averages.

What a tremendous drain this annual fire waste is upon our resources, national, municipal and individual! It is sapping the strength of the nation. The question is, does it pay in the long run? If not, can the community be awakened to a realization of the situation, so that it may set to work in earnest to put its house in order by preventing what is preventable and eliminating dangerous fire hazards which should never be allowed to exist?

Ignorance of the law does not save a man in court. How long will ignorance and reckless disregard of the laws of fire prevention and protection continue to exonerate conflagration breeders before the bar of public opinion?

Reviews of the New Books

By EDWIN MARKHAM

The New Child Culture.

Prof. Henry W. Holmes, Harvard, calls THE MONTESSORI METHOD (Frederick A. Stokes Co., $1.75), "remarkable, novel, important" and points out that this constructive system, inspired by womanly intuition and sympathy, has a broad social outlook.

Signorina Maria Montessori is more radical than Froebel in her demand for the child's freedom to feel out in all directions, that he may learn his environment and reproduce it in whatever creative way he can; that he may learn of things, and act out imagination and social enterprises. Restraints, unless for the common good, are prohibited.

The montessori method organizes and summarizes the ways and means of directing the natural impulses and instincts so as to conserve definite ends.

A Mighty Peace Plea.

THE HUMAN SLAUGHTER HOUSE, by Wilhelm Lamszsus (Frederick A Stokes Co., 50 cents), is the title of a small book that will go round the world, leaving a deep impress on thinking men and women.

"The Human Slaughter House" is a simple story of war; the story of a clerk called from his desk by the call of war, who marches against the enemy, and relates what he sees and hears and suffers.

Full of dramatic imagination, rising to heights of description that thrill, but never going wide of the facts, the author brings home the terrible truth of the futility of war, of the murder of man by his fellow man. He comments on the advance of science, the endless effort to conserve human life, and then he contrasts the setting of thousands of men against the hidden muzzles of machine guns to be shattered into a tortured mass—for what?

Herr Lamszsus is a master at one of the German schools. This book, of which 100,000 copies sold in that country, was suppressed when it first appeared, but the public cry for it was too strong, and its voice is now ringing round the universe.

By all means read it; it will take only a short time, but the memory of it will linger longer—it is one of the efforts that serve as mileposts in the march of civilization.

No wonder the author received a vote of thanks from the Universal Peace Congress.

V. V.'s Eyes.

In the successor to Queed, called by the unique title V. V.'S EYES (Houghton, Mifflin & Co, $1.35), Henry Sydnor Harrison has produced a novel which ought to command universal commendation.

"V. V.'s Eyes" belong to Dr. V. Vivian, a lame practitioner, whose ideas of right and wrong are what the ideas of all of us would be if we might look at material things from his unselfish standpoint. V. V. meets the beautiful daughter of the Heths—Carlisle Heth—a character so lovely, so human, that no reader with the semblance of a heart can fail to fall to lose it to her.

V. V. was unsparing in his attacks on Callie's father, the owner of "the works," the cheroot factory from which the stream of family gold rolled into the laps of mamma and daughter Heth. V. V. called a spade a spade, and he kept appearing in the life of Callie like an unwelcome spirit.

How the girl, growing more and more therefore, begins to look into her soul of souls and finds herself wanting is told in a way natural and charming. How she throws off Hugo Canning, the prince of lovers, her glorified knight errant, in response to the voice of her inner self is part of the regeneration of the daughter of the house of Heth.

And you do not know how the story will end—it is not cut and dried. Full of real feeling, written with subtle appreciation of the sorrows of the poor and the trials of the rich, it makes its appeal because it is understandable, because you know that what happened in this story is happening every day in every American city. Through V. V.'s eyes a light illumines the struggles of the poverty stricken and the empty pleasures of the rich.

There can be no mistake—"V. V.'s Eyes" takes its place at once as a splendid exposition of our present day life. In it there is matter for reflection. One of the notable novels of the year.

The Bear's Claws.

There's a moving little love story of the thrilling kind in THE BEAR'S CLAWS, by Grace Sartwell Mason and John Northern Hilliard (A. C. McClurg & Co., $1.25).

Imagine a pretty young lady sitting behind a gilded cage in a big hotel taking dictation from sporadic customers, and dreaming of the places she would like to visit and the romances she would like to know, suddenly given the opportunity to do more than she ever dared hope, and you have the foundation of this story.

Judith marries in haste, but does not repent at leisure; her trip with her husband through the East into Persia, where he has been making plans for an American syndicate in an effort to block the scheme of Russia as a railway builder, leads to all sorts of complications and finally to the buried city of Persopolis, where the issue is fought out between the Czar's secret service emissaries and the plucky American.

Like a good many persons who imagine there is rest in traveling and adventure, these two begin to think that a home would be a pretty good place for a change.

An entertaining story, full of the atmosphere of the East, and with a fascination that ought to make it a good seller.

Wilsam.

Let us learn a little about WILSAM, by S. C. Nethersole (The Macmillan Company, $1.35), for that is the odd name of a novel by a gifted author.

"Goods driven ashore when no wreck or ship is visible; hence called goods of God's mercy." So the dictionary describes Wilsam, differentiating from the more familiar flotsam and Jetsam—and so Miss Nethersole quotes the dictionary.

Wilsam is a story of the development of a waif into a girl, and of the girl into a woman. Its scene is laid in the hop growing country of England and it deals with types perhaps little known to Americans, but still brothers and sisters to humanity.

Let us say now that Miss Nethersole has written a powerful novel—a novel that deserves to be classed with the best of the year. Perhaps a little long, yet its pages thrill with the blood of real life—she proves that wild adventure and exciting episode are not needed when the hand is skilled enough and the eye clear enough to paint the "short and simple annals of the poor" as sympathetically as they should be painted.

There is, therefore, no tremendous story to tell any more than in many famous novels. Miss Nethersole's style and manner of treatment bring the reader back to a different school. There are times when one thinks of George Eliot, and again of Jane Austen.

Mercy Pardilow, cast up by the sea, is taken into the home of a Kentish relative, where she receives a certain amount of care, but not a great deal of the milk of kindness. The tale of her growing up is the warp and woof of the novel. One meets here and there with inspired descriptions of flower and nature, and with delightful persons, like Professor Mee and his devoted "senior partner."

The Gatehouses, father and sons and the mother, move through the narrative, each playing a part and each leaving an impress. There are now and again some heart-stirring scenes, as when the little boy of Sibert Gatehouse and Mercy is killed in the hop press by a malicious and vengeful neighbor.

As a transcript of life "Wilsam" shows profound intuition, a keen appreciation of the lights and shades that go to make up character, and a style forceful through its very simplicity.

It would be interesting to see what Miss Nethersole would do with a setting such as she would find in a big city and with conditions which touch a more familiar chord in most of us.

A Book of Verses.

In translating Auguste Angellier's "A L'Amie Perdue," Mildred J. Knight and Charles R. Murphy have given us the sonnet sequence in the spirit in which it was conceived by the author (Sherman, French & Co., $1).

The sonnets are notable for their strength and their painting of human emotions. Angellier has won the regard of Henry VanDyke. Of course, much depended on the way his poems were rendered into English. The translators have acquitted themselves of this difficult task with distinction.

My Past.

After the frank and at times shocking disclosures of court life related by the ex-Crown Princess Louise of Tuscany in "My Own Story," even the most hardened reader might be prepared for almost any kind of a scandal among the royal houses of Europe.

Certainly the volume just issued by the Putnams and written by Countess Marie Larisch, the favorite niece of the late Empress Elizabeth of Austria, under the title, MY PAST, has been much heralded as throwing light on that tragedy of tragedies of the House of Hapsburg, the death of the Crown Prince Rudolph.

The author seems to have fulfilled her mission of lifting the veil from the mystery that hung over Meyerling—though the truth had been surmised.

Her book gives many a sidelight on the characters of the famous men, rulers and diplomats with whom she was thrown into contact during an eventful life.

The Countess Larisch knows whereof she writes. Her reminiscences are historical—very much alive and very readable.

For Housewives.

Housewives have come to admit in these days of high cost of living that it is not so much what they spend that makes the bills run up as what they do not know how to save.

Therefore, THE NEW HOUSEKEEPING, by Christine Frederick (Doubleday, Page & Co., $1), ought to receive a welcome equivalent to that bestowed on a gift of many dollars.

For Mrs. Frederick has the ability to put into plans and effective English what she knows about the arts of home management. If every woman knew as much and practiced what she knew there would be more happy husbands in this broad land of ours.

Says she in her preface: "A moderate income, two babies and constan demands on my time was the situation that faced me several years ago. * * * My husband came home only to find me all tired out. * * * I put out this book with the deeply earnest hope that the beginnings made in the application of efficiency science to the household may yet assist in cutting from women the most dreary shackles of which they have ever complained."

This is hoping for a lot from any book, but so thorough is the author's handling of her subject that it would seem to depend on the housewife whether or not she attains emancipation.

'The Recording Angel' Rears a Dream House

reality of striving with heart and soul and body.

Mrs. Harris led her visitors down to the creek which runs through her farm. This creek may be crossed by only a foot log, which Mrs. Harris, in her woman's way, walks with great trepidation. But once across she looks at it with imaginative eyes.

"There you see my only link with the world," she said. "You cross this and you lose sight of railroads, society and all that. Over here I shall build my log house and plant my poppy field and revel in my acres of duchess lace"—she indicated a graceful wild plant that grows in abundance on her farm, and that the natives know by the unesthetic name of wild carrot.

Mrs. Harris lives in a picturesque enough house now, boarding with the Anthony family, pioneers of the community. It was the Anthony family who originally owned the farm she purchased, and who lived in the old Indian house. Their home on the "Valley Farm" stands in a little valley of its own, with hills running down to the back door, and to Mrs. Harris' room on the side.

She loves the farm house room.

"You see," she indicated, "it is built on the ground and seems a part of the earth. It is not a healthy room, but I love it."

A great part of her book, "The Recording Angel," was written in that room. Her husband died in the Anthony home. And so altogether the valley is familiar and significant with her.

Mrs. Harris will direct the preliminary arrangements for the construction of her home. She tells of having already tramped over her hills and through the creek bottom and over plowed fields, following the surveyors. She has brought several architects from New York to look over the land, and to consider plans for the home and soon will commission one to begin work.

They were rather famous architects. Besides them, other famous persons have visited Mrs. Harris on the Anthony farm, and have gone with her on the tramp over her own land. She never tires in showing it, and has acquired a coat of tan that may prove invincible.

Among the notables whom she has entertained are editors of Eastern publications for which she writes. Others will come when she has built her own home, including the brilliant writers who are associated with her. Montague Glass and Maximillian Foster will be among the first of her literary guests.

"The Valley" will be one of Georgia's literary shrines, without doubt. Mrs. Harris is not investing it with that function as she plans it, however, and sees in it nothing but a home. She means it to be like the other homes in the foothills, although the care and dreams that she has lavished on the conception of it surely will make it wonderful.

It is wonderful, too, because it is in North Georgia and in the green foothills that are of surpassing beauty.

"I came here because I wanted to get in proper human relation to that part of nature which is composed of hills, valleys, streams and trees," Mrs. Harris said at the last to her departing visitors from the newspaper, "which are less subject than human nature to ill health, morally or otherwise, less variable in their allegiance to life and its relations. They represent fixed standards of beauty, health, endurance, cheerfulness and courage."

This last utterance of her Wordsworthian philosophy was a tribute.

"Do you know," she said, "I never saw a dissipated tree, nor an ugly daisy, nor a cowardly oak, nor a treacherous valley, nor a spiteful spring, nor a sad rose. They all live and die bravely according to the immutable laws of nature.

"That is why I chose this valley in which to build my home."

JACK—Hello, Mame! Say, what's all this dope I hear about your being so popular?

MARY—Well, I don't want to brag, kid, but I've got just sixteen fellows down at the beach teaching me how to swim.

JACK—Did you hear about the scandal on the ocean?

MARY—I'm all attention.

JACK—The catfish had kittens.

MARY—Uh-huh. Well, my cat had mice this morning.

JACK—Say, do you know I feel guilty?

MARY—Now you arrest my attention.

JACK—Because I swallowed some gold paint just now.

MARY—Tell me—do you trust your wife?

JACK—No. I find that women are just like fires. You have to sit up with 'em all night or they go out on you.

MARY—Can you tell me how I can save my gas bill?

JACK—Sure—paste it in a book.

MARY—When you first met me before you were married you went around telling people it was a case of love at first sight.

JACK—Yes, but I saw you several times after that.

MARY—Do you believe in dreams?

JACK—You bet. I flagged a swell one last evening, but her mother wouldn't let her come out.

MARY—Are you working now?

JACK—No. I lost my job in the grocery store because I did too much kidding.

MARY—What were you doing?

JACK—Teasin' coffee.

MARY—Well, you ought to find something to keep you busy.

JACK—Oh, I'm just as busy as ever. This is the reason:

I was brought up on a bottle.
Till I became a man;
Then father broke the bottle—
Now I have to rush the can.

MARY—Why do you call your wife a decided blonde?

JACK—Because she decided on the color last week.

MARY—Isn't that a pretty cigarette case you have there?

JACK—Yes; my wife gave it to me for a birthday present.

MARY—Anything in it?

JACK—Yep; the bill for the case.

MARY—There goes Lizzie Smith. She's the meanest girl in town.

JACK—Why?

MARY—Yesterday I told her I was getting so that I couldn't remember a thing, and she wanted to borrow a dollar right away.

JACK—Have you any suggestions as to the music you would like to have played at the dinner this evening?

MARY—No, except that we want them to play something loud with the soup course, you know.

JACK—Do you judge a man by his clothes?

MARY—Never. I judge him by his wife's clothes.

JACK—They say now that the human body contains sulphur.

MARY—How much?

JACK—In different quantities.

MARY—That's the reason some of us make better matches than others.

JACK—Yes. Very striking, isn't it?

MARY—Rather. You see, golden weddings result from safety matches, while friction matches cause divorce.

JACK—Ah! That throws a good deal of light on the matter.

MARY—Do you love your enemies?

JACK—I can't. It's impossible.

MARY—Oh, you mustn't feel that way. Be more charitable, more forgiving, more——

JACK—Impossible, I tell you. The last one I had died this morning.

MARY—Did you ever realize that many people talk much more agreeably than they write?

JACK—Yes; my tailor does that.

MARY—You appear a little downhearted to-day.

JACK—It's because my wife fired our maid to-day.

MARY—What for?

JACK—She heard me telling the maid what I thought of her.

MARY—What do you think of that picture, "September Morn?"

JACK—I don't like the title of it. You see the title doesn't cover the girl.

MARY—No, I believe the girl is uncovered. How would you change it?

JACK—To make it more complete I'd suggest "More'n September."

MARY—I had a row with our milkman the other day.

JACK—Water, water everywhere?

MARY—No, but last Sunday morning I found a tadpole in the milk.

JACK—What'd he say?

MARY—Well, he gave a knock-down argument. He said: "I'm awful sorry, lady, but if the cows will drink from the brook instead of the trough, why, I can't help it."

JACK—Of course. He was right about that, wasn't he?

MARY—Speaking about drinking reminds me that I'm a little thirsty. Can't we step in some place?

JACK—Why, Mame! I didn't know you drank.

MARY—Oh, yes, diplomatically.

JACK—How's that?

MARY—Oh, a little grape juice.

GOSHDUNQUIT.

CAP'N EZRY WINTERS has painted the bath house connected with the Goshdunquit House a bright red this year. Last season he had it painted what he thought was a cool green, but one of his cows went browsing around, thinking the green bath house was a bush ,and tipped it over. It wouldn't have been so bad but for the fact that Mrs. Stoutleigh was inside at the time, and when the little house tipped over it left her clothes outside. All she had with her was a cake of soap ,and it made it rather embarrassing.

HOPE BEACH.

The Elmhurst Farm is filled to its capacity, both rooms being taken.

Signor Gorgansolski, the famous opera singer, is stopping at the Seaside Hotel for awhile.

His wife is with him and won't let him out of her sight a minute.

He may get $1,500 a night for singing, but if we were a woman we wouldn't have such a freak within sight for twice that.

Chetney Masters, who is home from college, is very unpopular at the Seaside Hotel since he was overheard telling the guests that this place got the name of Hope Beach because they hoped it would be a beach, but it turned out to be a mud flat.

MAPLE RIDGE.

Park Jones, who runs the Maple Ridge Inn as well as a big farm, told your correspondent an amusing little anecdote which, while not exactly news, might go well to lighten these dull Summer society columns.

There is a Mrs. Van Courtney Montmorency stopping there this year, and one extremely hot day when Park and his three hired men came in from the hayfield for dinner, nearly dead with the heat, Mrs. Montmorency took them to task for endangering their lives.

"I should think," Park says she said, "that you farmers would have more sense; why don't you cut your hay in the Winter time, when it's cooler?"

Ephraim Westcott has given up taking boarders this year. His wife's sister and four children and his wife's mother and aunt and his wife's Uncle Horace and family have come to visit him for the Summer, and he's got no room for pay boarders.

Eph says at this rate he'll get his mortgage paid off about the time his roosters lay eggs.

EAST BOREALIS.

Colonel Watkins, who runs the swellest Summer hotel in this locality, the Borealis House, has given up colored help. He thought it would be more stylish, but last Saturday there was a whole watermelon left over, and in the mix-up in the kitchen the assistant cook got cut very badly, the head cook was pushed on the stove and burned considerable and the head waiter put one of the porter's eyes out by jabbing the watermelon into it.

Colonel Watkins says local help isn't so polite, but they don't muss up the premises so much.

OCEAN CREST.

This delightful seaside resort has become more popular than ever this season. The selectmen have cut all the trees from the east side of Crest Hill, so now the Summer boarders can get a good view of the ocean on a clear day.

Mrs. Phil Rankin has got the Stillingses back again this year. This is the third year the Stillingses have been at her house, and each year they come they bring along a new baby. Mrs. Rankin says if she can keep them coming to her house for ten or twelve years longer she won't need to take any other boarders, because she won't have room for them.

SOUTH SPEEDWELL.

This neighborhood is all upset over the scandal which has arisen as a result of the church lawn party which was held in the field adjoining the church last Thursday. They mowed the hay off the field and put up some tents and booths and decorated them with flags and red tablecloths and wild flowers. There was music, which was rendered by the Rev. Joshua Nexleigh's phonograph, and there was also a cake sale and a Rebecca at the Well. The Rev. Mrs. Nexleigh was "Rebecca," and she sold lemonade at two glasses for five cents.

We noticed that every one was acting rather queer, and Deacon Whitting and Elder Barber and Brother Cummings and a good many others of the church leaders were squandering money lavishly on the lemonade. We learned later that the Rev. Mrs. Nexleigh took in eight dollars and forty cents, which is a lot of lemonade at two drinks for a nickel, and when it came time to break up ,a lot of the men were fast asleep in the carriage shed, and some were missing altogether, and the rest were acting so queer that the rest of us got suspicious.

Chester Hampden, from the city, one of the Summer boarders at the Speedwell House, and a lot of the other boarders, were off by themselves laughing fit to kill. Later we learned that Mr. Hampden, in a spirit of fun, emptied two quarts of champagne in the lemonade. He had brought it up from the city. A friend of his dumped in a quart of brandy when no one was looking, and another chap added some other liquors.

None of the South Speedwell folks will speak to Mr. Hampden now.

Fortunately your correspondent didn't have the price of a lemonade with him that night.

A. Cohen, M. J. Rafferty, Karl Jenson, Guiseppe Nicoli, Gustavus Abrahamsen, Morris Katz, Adolf Grubbenheimer, I. Nokolaki and A. Feltenburg, together with their families, are among those registered at the American House this week.

PINE GROVE LAKE.

H. J. Bessinger, of New York, caught three big pickerel out of Pine Grove Lake last week. He is stopping at the Lake View House. B. B. Jenkins, the proprietor, owns this lake and has posted it, only guests of his hotel being allowed to fish there. Prop. Jenkins told us confidentially that Mr. Bessinger would have caught more pickerel, only the three was all he had had time to get and put in there. He is planning to put six more live fish in the lake next week.

B. B. Jenkins, the up-to-date proprietor of the Lake View House, has added a line of fishing tackle to his big stock of post cards, cigars and mosquito lotion.

The upper falls stage makes two trips a day now, and will keep it up during the Summer—one trip going and one trip coming back.

Tales Brought To Atlanta by Edward Abeles

EDWARD ABELES, who created the role of Travers Gladwin in "Officer 666," who first played Montgomery Brewster in "Brewster's Millions," who scored a big hit as Henry Straker in "Man and Superman," and whose theatrical achievements otherwise are numerous, came to the Forsyth in Atlanta last week with a clever vaudeville skit, "He Tried To Be Nice to His Wife," and with a hatful of good stories. Here are some of the jokes he told at the clubs and in the hotel lobbies—and at Will Zimmer's Kimballville Farm, where he was a guest:

* * *

I was playing a vaudeville sketch that Broadhurst had written for me called "Self Defense." It was all in pantomime, my part being that of a dumb boy accused of murder, who was trying to tell his accusers how the affair occurred.

It was a hard job, that part, and I flattered myself with the thought that I got away with it fairly well. My gestures were strenuous, as I had to interpret the movements of murderer and murdered man alike.

Finally I came to the part where the man who was about to be murdered entered his house. He was drunk, and I had to tell that he was trying to climb the stairs while in that condition. This I did by stamping my feet, raising each one high in the air, and at the same time swaying my body. The stamping was heavy, and I puffed with the exercise of it.

I finished the demonstration and, according to the lines, turned to the accusing district attorney. A voice came out of the gallery.

"Gee," it said, "ain't it plain? He's a horse."

* * *

Those gallery voices are demoralizing at times. Do you remember in this little act I have now, after I am nice to my wife and she so unresponsive, I finally become angry and turn against her.

"I'm through with you," I tell her, as you remember. "And now I'm going." And more to that effect.

When I first put the act on, in the East, I came to these lines one night. There was an Englishman in the gallery. I could see him leaning, very much interested, over the railing.

"Go it, old chap," he shouted, when I began my denunciation. "Show her who's ma-a-ahster."

The play, you know, is built around a misunderstanding. I send flowers and candy to my wife, and they come without a card, and, as I had ordered them, they come addressed to me and in a woman's handwriting. My wife's suspicions and jealousy are aroused, and this is the situation around which the act is pitched.

In Milwaukee, by a strange coincidence, the identical predicament involved a prominent business man. On his wife's birthday he sent her flowers. He told his stenographer to send them to his house, and she did, addressing them to him. There was no card within. The wife was suspicious, seeing the woman's handwriting, and called up his office. Miss Stenographer answered the telephone.

"Is my husband in?"

"No, ma'am."

"Well, I just wanted to ask who sent him some flowers just now."

"Oh, I did," answered the girl, unwittingly. And trouble began, to settle which the man had the time of his life.

The story came out in this way. The man and his wife later went to the theater at the time I was playing there in my sketch, which included the same situation. As the story unfolded, the man turned to his wife, who was still a little angry, but to whom a great light was dawning. In a voice that was heard everywhere in the house, he remarked:

"You see."

Everybody knew them, and they had to confess.

* * *

Some of my most treasured recollections are those that come with the thought of my acquaintance with the Barrymore family, particularly with Maurice Barrymore, who, if anything, was one of nature's noblemen, one of the most courteous gentlemen alive, and the possessor of the quickest wit I ever knew. But his jokes wounded nobody.

Once in my younger days I was traveling with the Anne Palmer Stock Company in the West. Maurice Barrymore was along, and in the company was a sweet young girl who was of the type that naturally is beloved. Everyone in the company was fond of her, always making a pet of her, always playfully pestering her. One day a group was around her on the train, making open love to her.

"Now, Mary," insisted one young fellow, "you like me better than any of them, don't you? You're going to take me, aren't you?"

Maurice Barrymore, sitting across the aisle, heard him.

"Going to take you, is she?" he repeated. "What as—an emetic?"

* * *

One of the best stories I ever heard was in connection with the Barrymore family. When Ethel Barrymore and her brothers, Jack and Lionel, were children, they lived with their kinswoman, Mrs. John Drew, mother of the famous actor of that name, in Philadelphia. Every night little Jack Barrymore would say his prayers, and this is what he said:

"Please God, bless my grandma and mamma and papa and our house and me and Ethel and Lionel and make Uncle John a good actor."

* * *

Did you ever come possessed of the hallucination that you had more money than was really the case? It happened to me, when I was playing in "Brewster's Millions." The story, you know, revolves around Monty's efforts to spend a million dollars in a year. I was so accustomed to spending fabulous sums on the stage that I became obsessed with the habit. I would speak in terms of thousands. Buying a drink, I would tell the barkeep, "Set out about $5,000 worth of cocktails," or some crazy demand like that. It ceased to be a joke.

One day in Chicago I took a party into a saloon, and we edged up to the bar.

"What'll it be?" I asked. They all wanted beer.

"Give me $1,000 worth of beer," I requested. It was just after the show, you see, and I was still Monty Brewster. I made the order very seriously, but forgot it, and turned to talk to the bunch.

As it happened the order was caught by a negro assistant of the bartender. We waited for some time and the order wasn't filled. Finally the negro came back, very respectful.

"Excuse me, boss," he said, "I'm mighty sorry. But de cap'n says we ain't got dat much beer."

That about broke me—of the habit.

In St. Paul once we were playing "Pink Dominoes," the most frivolous of farces. The stage manager was a personage as impressive and pompous as the farce was light. And we used to plan toward his undoing. Always he was scolding us for playing during rehearsal.

So one day we were in a mood ripe for the joke. He sat in the wings, gravely fingering a manuscript. At the lightest part in the play one of actors began the lines of the casket scene from "The Merchant of Venice." Without a smile or a moment's hesitation, we went through with Shakespeare's lines, and, at their conclusion we as solemnly completed our own play.

All the time we were quoting Shakespeare I could see the stage manager, red in the face, perturbed and angry, turning over the pages of the manuscript. He became frantic, turning back and forth all the time. Then he subsided a little when we fell back into the "Pink Domino" lines. But after the rehearsal I heard him tearing up the earth with his man.

"Who the dicken's been fooling with my papers?" he was shouting. "Here's half of the lines gone. Once more, and you're fired."

* * *

Going back to the Barrymores and their relationships on the stage makes me think of a story I heard the other day. Family connections among stage people are often lost track of in the public mind by the assumption of fictitious names for use on the stage. This confusion sometimes spreads even to intimate friends. So it was that E. M. Kimball, who plays the captain in "What Happened to Mary," found himself in an embarrassing though amusing situation the other day. He attempted to introduce his star, Olive Wyndham, to Janet Beecher, who plays the empress in "The Purple Road." The women accepted the introduction, bowed ceremoniously and shook hands. Then they turned to Kimball and broke into a hearty laugh.

"What's the idea?" he asked.

"Have you met before?"

"Yes," said Miss Wyndham. "Janet is my sister."

* * *

Miss Julia Marlowe came to New York one day after a spell in the country, and she dropped in to see a number of her friends. She was regaling them with stories of life on the farm, with erudite discussions of how to raise chickens, and all that.

"Say," said one manager, "can't you send me down a dozen broilers? My wife was trying to order some over the telephone this morning?"

"Now, look here," said the actress, "you know perfectly well that we don't raise the kind of broilers you want, and your wife wouldn't have them at her table."

New Ones From Everywhere Told by the Jokesmiths

The Difference.

Maudie—Jim, dear, what is the difference between two millionaires, two pianos and two gluepots?

Jim—Oh, yes; if I say I don't know, you'll say I'd be a fine chap to send out to buy a millionaire or a gluepot.

Maudie—No, Jim; that's quite wrong.

Jim—Well, I give it up.

Maudie—Two millionaires can play two pianos, and two pianos can play two million airs——

Jim—Well, and what about the gluepots?

Maudie—That's where you stick.

Most Noticeable.

Inspector, examining a class in grammar, wrote a sentence on the blackboard and asked if anyone noticed anything peculiar in it.

After a short silence a small boy exclaimed:

"Yes, sir; the bad writing!"

The Young Idea.

Teacher (to small boy)—What is a volcano?

Small Boy—A mountain overflowing with lager.

A Suggestion.

Mr. Porter (of Chicago)—When my books were made up I found I'd killed just one hog short of a million. I'd like to have made it a level million.

Dolly Trotter (awfully bored)—You are not thinking of committing suicide, are you?

Lucky.

Fortune Teller—You are going to have money left you.

Customer—Glad to hear it. I've only got two dollars to my name.

Fortune Teller—Well, after paying me you will have a dollar left you.

Significant.

"Albert, what did your sister say when you told her I was in the parlor waiting?" inquired the hopeful young man.

"Nothin.' But she took a ring off one finger an' put it on another."

Fair Exchange.

An old lady, seeing two boys fighting, walked up to them and said to the older one:

"You naughty boy, you mustn't quarrel; you should learn to give and take."

Small Boy—That's just what I did. missus. I gave 'im a punch in the eye and took his orange!

Wanted to See.

Woodrow Wilson has a very quick wit. A man, in the course of an animated conversation, noticing that Mr. Wilson's eyeglasses were perched perilously near the tip of his nose, remarked: "Your glasses, Governor, are almost on your mouth."

"That's all right," was the quick response. "I want to see what I'm talking about."

Easy.

May—I went to Surbiton to see my father and mother the other day, Percy.

Percy—By jove! And how did you find them?

May—Oh, I knew where they lived.

Art in a Hoosier Athens.

In a small college town in Indiana there appeared in a picture store, shortly before Christmas, a photographic copy of a modern Madonna. It was a beautiful picture, and it so excited the admiration of a woman who frequently passed the window that at length she entered the store to inquire the name of the artist.

As soon as she saw the salesman who approached she felt that her quest was hopeless, but, having no other errand, she was obliged to proceed with her request. "Can you tell me," she said, "whose Madon that is in the window?"

"Why," stammered the clerk, "it's —it's ours. It's for sale."

"Oh!" she answered blankly. "S you don't know who painted it?"

He gazed at her with mingled scorn and compassion as he replied: "'Taint a paintin'; it's a photograph!"

Something New for Men
Restore Your Own Strength---No Drugs

The free illustrated pocket compendium of private advice for all men, whether young or elderly, single or married, whether well or ailing (explained below), not only contains a great fund of necessary information upon certain avoided private subjects, telling you what to avoid, what to do and what not to do, but also fully describes a new small mechanical appliance called a VITALIZER which generates a natural force and which is now being worn by men all over the world who seek new manly vigor. You, yourself, no matter where you live, may easily have one of these little VITALIZERS to try out in your own case. Therefore, please use the coupon below and get this free pocket compendium by return mail. SANDEN, AUTHOR.

How would YOU, reader, like to be strong, vigorous, vital and manly once more, without an ache, pain or weakness? If you really seek and want this new vigor, this rugged manly strength, then please call at my office or write today and get my free book that you may know the whole wonderful story of this great, drugless, self-treatment, this marvelous little VITALIZER of my invention, which you wear comfortably on your body, and which sends its steady, gentle, effort supply of FORCE into your nerves, blood and organism while you sleep.

Real manhood with a perfect manly strength is not only nature's own gift, but, according to my belief, may easily be within the reach of practically any man. Of course, we all know that it is the husky, vigorous vital fellow who attracts both women and men to him, and it is he, also, who is ever sought out and who achieves the really big things of life. Sturdy, vital manhood is, without doubt, the one great, silent universal power which fascinates us all, no matter how we may argue to the contrary. Therefore, reader, I care not what may be your age, nationality or creed, whether you are married or single, whether you are a bank president or work on the farm or in the shop, nor do I care how unstrung or nervous you may feel, or what past acts may have left you debilitated and enervated, I say to you in all seriousness, if I can show you an easy, drugless way by which you may treat yourself with the object of bringing back full vigor to your organism, then I will show you the road to new hope and new manhood. A man may be small in stature, yet as strong and attractive as a giant, or he may be big in stature, yet unstrung, nervous and unmanly. It is all a question of your own vigorous strength. Therefore, let me suggest that you call or write at once, then, after reading my book, if you decide you want to try out my little vitalizer in your own case, and will write to me saying so, I will reply to your letter and guarantee to make an easy proposition which should enable you to have one of the vitalizers at once. At all events, you need the knowledge that my little book contains, whether you ever get a vitalizer or not, so please call or fill in and send the coupon.

NOTE.—With special attachments my VITALIZER is used by women as well as men for rheumatism, kidney, liver, stomach, bladder disorders, nervousness and general ill health.

Manly Men Fascinate the Whole World.

Free Self-Help Book for Men

I publish a little illustrated pocket compendium in booklet form, as mentioned above, which is meant to guide both single and married men along the road of Vigorous Health and Moral Rectitude, so they may be as vigorous and strong as the best, and may live to a ripe, healthy old age. There is a lot in this little compendium which every young or elderly man should know and can refer to from time to time with great profit to his own physical health. The booklet in one part fully describes my new VITALIZER, the great drugless self-treatment. If it is not convenient or if you are too far away to call, please write for this booklet to-day. It will come to you in plain, sealed envelope by return mail. Please use coupon. Office hours, 9 to 6; Sundays, 10 to 1.

There is much gossip going on up around Milhouse's because one of the male Summer boarders was found sitting on the back porch in the dark with his own wife. There is talk of tar and feathers and riding on a rail for the villain if he persists in violating the ethics of polite Summer boarder society.

The missionary society of the Baptist Church was fixing up a box to be sent to the heathen of the Fiji Islands. Every one in the community was invited to contribute something to brighten the life of the heathen. Montmorency Mortimer, who writes jokes for the papers, contributed a bunch of rejected jokes, but the missionary who was to go with the box declined with thanks. He said he had to live among the ferocious people and couldn't take any chances. We guess they were too dry for Baptist jokes, anyway.

Light Reading for the Hammock Swinging Vacationist.

"WHOOPS!" The duke looked around with an air of surprise.

This is the lively beginning of "The Duke and Daisy," by Caroline O'Kerrigan. We don't blame the duke for his air of surprise. He was trying to sleep, when vivacious Daisy, who was "doing" all the castles of England, burst into his bedroom to see a carved umbrella mentioned in the guide book.

How Daisy taught the Duke pinochle and how he won enough money to rebuild Castle Snookingham and to support Daisy in the style to which she hadn't been accustomed is briefly told by the author.

Of quite another type is "The Six-Gun Man," by Charley Carbonic. It is a tale of the West, "where they breed men." The six-gun man is Lame Bill Braddock, who has been made sheriff of Poisoned Pup on account of his being such a crook that nobody dare arrest him.

In the first chapter ten cowboys fell before his deadly aim.

Later he warms up to his work and shoots fifteen men and a Mexican in ten lines.

We shall not spoil the book for you by telling how Lame Bill married the lady from Reno and went to live in New York, where Mayor Gaynor appointed him municipal janitor and elevator boy exterminator.

"Whoops!" said the Duke.

Hot Weather Hints

When bathing in the ocean do not swallow so much water as you do in a lake, as the salt water has a nauseating effect.

When swimming under water be careful not to come up under a float. It's difficult to breathe freely with a float on top of you.

Mint juleps are great things to mix in hot weather. Provided they are thrown away after being mixed.

When you feel overheated, you probably are. It is much the same reasoning as that which tells us you are probably cold when you feel cold.

Keep the ice out of the oven. It will not cool the oven and doesn't make the ice last longer.

Red flannel underwear is out of fashion, but we can't help wondering how the old folks used to stand it.

Physician says blondes should wear orange underwear. Seems to us they are conspicuous enough now.

The Minister's Black Veil :: :: :: By Nathaniel Hawthorne

THE sexton stood in the porch of Milford meeting-house pulling lustily at the bell rope. The old people of the village came stooping along the street. Children with bright faces tripped merrily beside their parents or mimicked a graver gait in the conscious dignity of their Sunday clothes. Spruce bachelors looked sidelong at the pretty maidens, and fancied that the Sabbath sunshine made them prettier than on week days. When the throng had mostly streamed into the porch, the sexton began to toll the bell, keeping his eye on the Rev. Mr. Hooper's door. The first glimpse of the clergyman's figure was the signal for the bell to cease its summons.

"But what has good Parson Hooper got upon his face?" cried the sexton in astonishment.

All within hearing immediately turned about and beheld the semblance of Mr. Hooper pacing slowly his meditative way toward the meeting-house. With one accord they started, expressing more wonder than if some strange minister were coming to dust the cushions of Mr. Hooper's pulpit.

The cause of so much amazement may appear sufficiently slight. Mr. Hooper, a gentlemanly person of about thirty, though still a bachelor, was dressed with due clerical neatness, as if a careful wife had starched his band and brushed the weekly dust from his Sunday's garb. There was but one thing remarkable in his appearance. Swathed about his forehead and hanging down over his face, so low as to be shaken by his breath, Mr. Hooper had on a black veil. On a nearer view, it seemed to consist of two folds of crepe, which entirely concealed his features except his mouth and chin, but probably did not intercept his sight further than to give a darkened aspect to all living and inanimate things. With this gloomy shade before him good Mr. Hooper walked onward at a slow and quiet pace, stooping somewhat and looking on the ground, as is customary with abstracted men, though nodding kindly to those of his parishioners who still waited on the meeting-house steps. But so wonder-struck were they that his greeting hardly met with a return.

Such was the effect of this simple piece of crepe that more than one woman of delicate nerves was forced to leave the meeting-house. Yet, perhaps the pale-faced congregation was almost as fearful a sight to the minister as his black veil to them.

Mr. Hooper had the reputation of a good preacher, but not an energetic one; he strove to win his people heavenward by mild, persuasive influence rather than to drive them thither by the thunders of the word. The sermon which he now delivered was marked by the same characteristics of style and manner as the general series of his pulpit oratory, but there was something either in the sentiment of the discourse itself or in the imagination of the auditors which made it greatly the most powerful effort that they had ever heard from their pastor's lips. It was tinged rather more darkly than usual with the gentle gloom of Mr. Hooper's temperament. The subject had reference to secret sin and those sad mysteries which we hide from our nearest and dearest, and would fain conceal from our own consciousness, even forgetting that the omniscient can detect them. A subtle power was breathed into his words. Each member of the congregation, the most innocent girl and the man of the hardened breast, felt as if the preacher had crept upon them behind his awful veil and discovered their hoaded iniquity of deed or thought.

The afternoon service was attended with similar circumstance. At the conclusion the bell tolled for the funeral of a young lady. The relatives and friends were assembled in the house and the more distant acquaintances stood about the door, speaking of the good qualities of the deceased, when their talking was interrupted by the appearance of Mr. Hooper, still covered with his black veil. It was now an appropriate emblem. The clergyman stepped into the room where the corpse was laid, and bent over the coffin to take a last farewell of his deceased parishioner. As he stooped, the veil hung straight down from his forehead, so that, if her eyelids had not been closed forever, the dead maiden might have seen his face.

That night the handsomest couple in Milford village were to be joined in wedlock. Though reckoned a melancholy man, Mr. Hooper had a placid cheerfulness for such occasions which often excited a sympathetic smile where livelier merriment would have been thrown away. There was no quality of his disposition which made him more beloved than this. The company at the wedding awaited his arrival with impatience, trusting that the strange awe which had gathered over him throughout the day would now be dispelled. But such was not the result. When Mr. Hooper came, the first thing that their eyes rested on was the same horrible black veil which had added deeper gloom to the funeral and could portend nothing but evil to the wedding. Such was its immediate effect upon the guests that a cloud seemed to have rolled duskily from beneath the black crepe and dimmed the light of the candles. The bridal pair stood up before the minister, but the bride's cold fingers trembled in the tremulous hand of the bridegroom, and her death-like paleness caused a whisper that the maiden that had been buried a few hours before was come from her grave to be married. If ever another wedding were so dismal, it was that famous one where they tolled the wedding knell.

After performing the ceremony, Mr. Hooper raised a glass of wine to his lips, wishing happiness to the new-married couple in a strain of mild pleasantry that ought to have brightened the features of the guests like a cheerful gleam from the hearth. At that instant, catching a glimpse of his figure in the looking-glass, the black veil involved his own spirit in the horror with which it overwhelmed all others. His frame shuddered, his lips grew white, he spilled the untasted wine upon the carpet and rushed forth into the darkness, for the earth too had on her black veil.

The next day the whole village of Milford talked of little else than Parson Hooper's black veil. That, and the mystery concealed behind it, supplied a topic for discussion between acquaintances meeting in the street and good women gossiping at their own windows.

It was remarkable that, of all the busybodies and impertinent people in the parish, not one ventured to put the plain question before Mr. Hooper wherefore he did this thing. Hitherto, whenever there appeared the slightest call for such interference, he had never lacked advisers nor shown himself averse to be guided by their judgment. If he erred at all, it was by so painful a degree of self-distrust that even the mildest censure would lead him to consider an indifferent action as a crime. Yet, so well acquainted with his amiable weakness, no individual among the parishioners chose to make the black veil a subject of friendly remonstrance. There was a feeling of dread, neither plainly confessed nor carefully concealed, which caused each to shift the responsibility upon the other, till at length it was found expedient to send a deputation of the church in order to deal with Mr. Hooper about the mystery before it should grow into scandal. Never did an embassy so ill discharge its duties. The minister received them with friendly courtesy, but became silent after they were seated, leaving to his visitors the whole burden of introducing their important business. The topic, it might be supposed, was obvious enough. There was the black veil swathed around Mr. Hooper's forehead and concealing every feature above his placid mouth, on which, at times, they could perceive the glimmering of a melancholy smile. But that piece of crepe, to their imagination, seemed to hang down before his heart, the symbol of a fearful secret between him and them. Were the veil cast aside, they might speak freely of it, but not till then. Thus they sat for a considerable time, speechless, confused and shrinking uneasily from Mr. Hooper's eyes, which they felt to be fixed upon them with an invisible glance. Finally, the deputies returned abashed to their constituents, pronouncing the matter too weighty to be handled except by a council of the churches, if, indeed, it might not require a general synod.

But there was one person in the village unappalled by the awe with which the black veil had impressed all beside herself. When the deputies returned without an explanation or even venturing to demand one, she, with the calm energy of her character, determined to chase away the strange cloud which seemed to be settling round Mr. Hooper every moment more darkly than before. As his plighted wife, it should be her privilege to know what that black veil concealed.

At the minister's first visit, therefore, she entered upon the subject with a direct simplicity which made the task easier, both for him and her. After he had seated himself, she fixed her eyes steadfastly upon the veil, but could discern nothing of the dreadful gloom that had so overawed the multitude; it was but a double fold of crepe hanging down from his forehead to his mouth and slightly stirring with his breath.

"No," said she aloud, and smiling, "there is nothing terrible in that piece of crepe, except that it hides a face which I am always glad to look upon. Come, good sir, let the sun shine from behind the cloud. First, lay aside your black veil, then tell me why you put it on."

Mr. Hooper's smile glimmered faintly.

"There is an hour to come," said he, "when all of us shall cast aside our veils. Take it not amiss, beloved friend, if I wear this piece of crepe till then."

"Your words are a mystery, too," returned

"He rushed forth into the darkness, for the earth, too, had on her black veil."

the young lady. "Take away the veil from them, at least."

"Elizabeth, I will," said he, so far as my vow may suffer me. Know, then, this veil is a type and a symbol, and I am bound to wear it ever, both in light and darkness, in solitude and before the gaze of multitudes; and as with strangers, so with my familiar friends. No mortal eyes will see it withdrawn. This dismal shade must separate me from the world; even you, Elizabeth, never come behind it."

"What grievous affliction hath befallen you?" she earnestly inquired, "that you should thus darken your eyes forever?"

"If it be a sign of mourning," replied Mr. Hooper, "I perhaps, like most other mortals, have sorrows dark enough to be typified by a black veil."

"But what if the world will not believe that it is the type of an innocent sorrow?" urged Elizabeth. "Beloved and respected as you are, there may be whispers that you hide your face under the consciousness of secret sin. For the sake of your holy office do away this scandal."

The color rose in her cheeks as she intimated the nature of the rumors that were already abroad in the village. But Mr. Hooper's mildness did not forsake him. He even smiled again—that same, sad smile which always appeared like a faint glimmering of light proceeding from the obscurity beneath the veil.

"If I hide my face for sorrow, there is cause enough," he merely replied; "and if I cover it for secret sin, what mortal might not do the same?" And with this gentle but unconquerable obstinacy did he resist all her entreaties.

At length Elizabeth sat silent. For a few moments she appeared lost in thought, considering, probably, what new methods might be tried to withdraw her lover from so dark a fantasy, which, if it had no other meaning, was perhaps a symptom of mental disease. Though of firmer character than his own, the tears rolled down her cheeks. But in an instant, as it were, a new feeling took the place of sorrow; her eyes were fixed insensibly on the black veil, when, like a sudden twilight in the air, its terrors fell around her. She arose and stood trembling before him.

"And do you feel it, then, at last?" said he mournfully.

She made no reply, but covered her eyes with her hand and turned to leave the room. He rushed forward and caught her arm.

"Have patience with me, Elizabeth!" cried he, passionately. "Do not desert me, though this veil must be between us here on earth. Be mine, and hereafter there shall be no veil over my face, no darkness between our souls. It is but a mortal veil; it is not for eternity. Oh, you know not how lonely I am, and how frightened to be alone behind my black veil! Do not leave me in this miserable obscurity forever."

"Lift the veil but once and look me in the face," said she.

"Never! It cannot be," replied Mr. Hooper.

"Then farewell!" said Elizabeth.

She withdrew her arm from his grasp and slowly departed, pausing at the door to give one long shuddering gaze that seemed almost to penetrate the mystery of the black veil. But even amid his grief Mr. Hooper smiled to think that only a material emblem had separated him from happiness, though the horrors which is shadowed forth must be drawn darkly between the fondest lovers.

From that time no attempts were made to remove Mr. Hooper's black veil or by a direct appeal to discover the secret which it was supposed to hide. By persons who claimed a superior to popular prejudice it was reckoned merely an eccentric whim, such as often mingles with the sober actions of men otherwise rational and tinges them all with its own semblance of insanity. But with the multitudes good Mr. Hooper was irreparably a bugbear. He could not walk the streets with any peace of mind, so conscious was he that the gentle and timid would turn aside to avoid him and that others would make it a point of hardihood to throw themselves in his way. The impertinence of the latter class compelled him to give up his customary walk at sunset to the burial ground; for when he leaned pensively on the gait there would always be faces behind the gravestones peeping at his black veil. A fable went the rounds that the stare of the dead people drove him thence. It grieved him to the very depth of his kind heart to observe how the children fled from his approach, breaking up their merriest sports while his melancholy figure was yet afar off. Their instinctive dread caused him to feel more strongly than aught else that the preternatural horror was interwoven with the threads of the black crepe. In truth, his own antipathy to the veil was known to be so great that he never willingly passed before a mirror nor stooped to drink at a still fountain lest in its peaceful bosom he should be affrighted by himself. This was what gave plausibility to the whispers that Mr. Hooper's conscience tortured him for some great crime, too horrible to be entirely concealed or otherwise than so obscurely intimated. Thus, from beneath the black veil, there rolled a cloud into the sunshine, an ambiguity of sin or sorrow, which enveloped the poor minister, so that love or sympathy could never reach him. It was said that ghost and fiend consorted with him there. With self-shuddering and outward terrors he walked continually in its shadow, groping darkly within his own soul or gazing through a medium that saddened the whole world. Even the lawless wind, it was believed, respected his dreadful secret and never blew aside the veil. But still good Mr. Hooper sadly smiled at the pale visages of the wordly throng as he passed by.

Among all its bad influences the black veil had the one desirable effect of making its wearer a very efficient clergyman. By the aid of his mysterious emblem—for there was no other apparent cause—he became a man of awful power over souls that were in agony for sin. His converts always regarded him with a dread peculiar to themselves, affirming, though but figuratively, that before he brought them to celestial light, they had been with him behind the black veil. Its gloom, indeed, enabled him to sympathize with all dark affections. Dying sinners cried aloud for Mr. Hooper and would not yield their breath until he appeared, though ever, as he stopped to whisper consolation, they shuddered at the veiled face so near their own. Such were the terrors of the black veil, even when Death had bared his visage. Strangers came long distances to attend service at his church with the mere idle purpose of gazing at his figure because it was forbidden them to behold his face. But many were made to quake ere they departed. Once, during Governor Belcher's administration, Mr. Hooper was appointed to preach the election sermon. Covered with his black veil, he stood before the chief magistrate, the council and representatives, and wrought so deep an impression that the legislative measures that year were characterized by all the gloom and piety of our earliest ancestral sway.

In his manner Mr. Hooper spent a long life, irreproachable in outward act, yet shrouded in dismal suspicion; kind and loving, though unloved and dimly feared; a man apart from men, shunned in their health and joy, but ever summoned to their aid in mortal anguish.

As the years wore on, shedding their snows above his sable veil, he acquired a name throughout the New England churches and they called him Father Hooper. Nearly all his parishioners who were of mature age when he was settled had been borne away by many a funeral; he had one congregation in the church and a more crowded one in the graveyard; and having wrought so late into the evening and done his work so well, it was now good Father Hooper's turn to rest.

Several persons were visible by the shaded candle light in the death chamber of the old clergyman. Natural connections he had none. But there was the decorously grave though unmoved physician, seeking only to mitigate the last pangs of the patient whom he could not save. There were the deacons and other eminently pious members of his church. There, also, was the Rev. Mr. Clark, of Westbury, a young and zealous divine who had ridden in haste to pray by the bedside of the dying minister. There was the nurse—no hired handmaiden of Death, but whose calm affection had endured thus long in secrecy, in solitude, amid the chill of age, and would not perish even at the dying hour. Who but Elizabeth! And there lay the hoary head of good Father Hooper upon the death pillow with the black veil still swathed about his brow and reaching down over his face, so that each more difficult gasp of his faint breath caused it to stir. All through life that piece of crepe had hung between him and the world; it had separated him from cheerful brotherhood and woman's love and kept him in that saddest of all prisons, his own heart; and still it lay upon his face as if to deepen the gloom of his darksome chamber and shade him from the sunshine of eternity.

For sometime previous his mind had been confused, wavering doubtfully between the past and present, and hovering forward as it were at intervals, into the indistinctness of the world to come. There had been feverish turns which tossed him from side to side and wore away what little strength he had. But in his most convulsive struggles and wildest vagaries of his intellect, when no other thought retained its sober influence, he still showed an awful solicitude lest the black veil should slip aside. Even if his bewildered soul could have forgotten that there was a faithful woman at his pillow, who, with averted eyes, would have covered that aged face which she had last beheld in the comeliness of manhood.

At length the death-stricken old man lay quietly in the torpor of mental and bodily exhaustion, with an imperceptible pulse and breath that grew fainter and fainter except when a long, deep and irregular inspiration seemed to preclude the flight of his spirit.

The minister of Westbury approached the bedside.

"Venerable Father Hooper," said he, "the moment of your release is at hand. Are you ready for the lifting of the veil that shuts in time from eternity?"

Father Hooper at first replied merely by a feeble motion of his head; then, apprehensive, perhaps, that his meaning might be doubtful, he exerted himself to speak.

"Yea," said he in faint accents; "my soul hath a patient weariness until that veil is lifted."

"And is it fitting," resumed the Rev. Mr. Clark, "that a man so given to prayer, of such a blameless example, holy in deed and thought, so far as mortal judgment may pronounce, is it fitting that a father in the church should leave a shadow on his memory that may seem to blacken a life so pure? I pray you, my venerable brother, let not this thing be! Suffer us to be gladdened by your triumphant aspect as you go to your reward. Before the veil of eternity be lifted let me cast aside this black veil from your face," and thus speaking, the Reverend Mr. Clark bent forward to reveal the mystery of so many years.

But exerting a sudden energy that made all the beholders stand aghast, Father Hooper snatched both his hands from beneath the bed clothes and pressed them strongly on the black veil, resolute to struggle if the minister of Westbury would contend with the dying man.

"Never!" cried the veiled clergyman, "on earth, never!"

Father Hooper's breath heaved; it rattled in his throat; but, with a mighty effort, grasping forward with his hands, he caught hold of life and held it back until he should speak. He even raised himself in bed and there he sat shivering with the arms of Death around him, while the black veil hung down, awful at that last moment in the gathering terrors of a lifetime. And yet the faint, sad smile so often there now seemed to glimmer from its obscurity and linger on Father Hooper's lips.

"Why do you tremble at me alone?" cried he, turning his veiled face round the circle of pale spectators. Tremble also at each other. Have men avoided me and have shown no pity and children screamed and fled only for my black veil? What but the mystery which it obscurely typifies has made this piece of crepe so awful? When the friend shows his inmost heart to his friend, the lover to his beloved; when man does not vainly shrink from the eye of his Creator, loathsomely treasuring up the secret of his sin, then deem me a monster for the symbol beneath which I have lived and die, I look around me, and lo! on every visage a black veil."

While his auditors shrank from one another in mutual affright, Father Hooper fell back upon his pillow, a veiled corpse with a faint smile lingering on his lips. Still veiled, they laid him in his coffin, a veiled corpse, they bore him to his grave. The grass of many years has sprung up and withered on that grave, the burial stone is moss-grown and good Mr. Hooper's face is dust; but awful is still the thought that it molded beneath the black veil!

Menus for the Week----Arranged by E. L. Thornton

Steward of the Atlanta Athletic Club

CHATTER OF SOCIETY

By Polly Peachtree

ATLANTA bachelors scorn the idea that they, as bachelors, are more prone to the commission of crime than their married friends. The question came about from Polly Peachtree's wish to "stir up" things, in these days of dullness, and her chance reading of New York statistics from the District Attorney's Office that there were many more bachelors convicted of crime this year than married men. Now I know, of course, that we have no embryo criminals in the ranks of the Atlanta men who refuse to exchange their bachelor quarters for better halves—no more than among the married men—but I felt that an opinion on the subject from some of the well-known exponents of the single life would interest others as well as myself. I started to make out a "little list" of prominent bachelors whom I thought competent to give an opinion. Lo, the list grew and grew, until I found that we have lots of bachelors here, at any rate—and that's a small crime in itself, with so many pretty debutantes every year.

"THE world's too full of 'cutie pies' (meaning pretty girls) for me to worry about criminals, or bachelors, or anything else," most flippantly replied Arthur Clarke, when I asked him, in all seriousness, to express an opinion on this alarming subject. And Hugh Adams was just as bad: "Why should a man without a wife be crooked, so long as the golfing is good?" Can YOU see the point in that remark?—it's more than I can do.

"Bachelors crooked, eh?" queried Ed Austin; "Well, I should worry like a trump and get doubled!" My, what has the man been reading? And 'Gene Haynes sententiously remarks: "It's better to be single and a crook than to have a wife who beats you!" I know what he's been reading—King Solomon's Proverbs—or did someone else write those proverbs?

"It's not my fault," said Joe Brown Connally, "Nobody loves a fat man." Talke as if I had accused him directly of all the crimes the bachelors commit. As for saying "Nobody loves a fat man," he didn't mean it, but thought it sounded well.

"Give me time, give me time," exclaimed Jesse Draper. Another one taking it all to himself. He means, by those exclamatory remarks, girls, that he will get married in time, though it does sound like an ejaculation in favor of the punishment that the criminal bachelors get.

And Madison Bell said: "The only crooked bachelors I know are the ones that didn't vote for me last election. (He'll swear he didn't say this—and, MAYBE he didn't.)

* * *

NOW, how can I be serious and get real interviews from men who take this thing like a joke? I suppose all life is a joke—to a bachelor. I've given it up, but if any of you wish to pursue the subject personally, I can lend you my list. There are lots of good names on it—and one could use them for other purposes, when leap-year comes around, anyway. Here's some of 'em: Ernest Ottley, Charley Ryan, Joe Gatins, Westvelt Terhune, Travis Huff, Rudolph Geissler, Tom Lyon, Myron Freeman, "Cutie" Harper, C. E. Currier, "Mose" Harper— No, no, strike off that last name; he's just been married, after waiting 20 years and 15 minutes beyond the time-limit.

WAGERING is something that I rarely indulge in, principally because I can't afford it, but right now I am going to offer a little wager, say a box of cigars against a box of chocolates.

We have in this town some very fastidious dressers among the men folks. I am going to pick four of the most perfect sartorial specimens I know of, and to them I am going to direct my wager. To mention the name of either Bob Maddox, Gene Haynes, Joe Gatins or Jim Nunnally is to bring to mind the picture of faultlessly dressed man.

Now here is the point. All of our fashions are set by some person, or set of persons. That applies to men as well as to women. At the time when Edward VII was the dashing Prince of Wales his styles in neckwear, waistcoats and headgear were followed religiously, first by the men of his own country, and then in this country. To-day the King of England occupies that place. King George has decreed by usage that the light gray top hat is strictly the correct thing.

Now for the wager. I am willing to wager a box of cigars against a box of chocolates that not one of these men I have named has the nerve to appear in public in this latest fashion.

Do I hear any takers?

"ARE you taking lessons in the new dances?" asked a member of Atlanta's younger set of a popular visitor from Texas.

"No, I take aesthetic dancing," said the Texas girl.

And the Atlanta girl said, "Oh, my," and went off to giggle about the "funny" idea of taking lessons in aesthetic dancing, when a good turkey-trotter is assured of as much popularity as the heart of a debutante could desire.

I overhead the question and answer and later saw the Atlanta girl's amusement, and I wondered myself what the Texas visitor could have meant by her reply. For, I happen to know that the tango, for instance, is made up of several of the basic steps which the pupil in aesthetic dancing must learn first. And the tango, if danced gracefully and well, is "some" aesthetic itself.

I suppose she meant to imply that she had gone farther than the tango and the one-step, along the way toward the aesthetic dance—there being implied a difference in degree only between the Atlanta girl's idea of the "new dances" and the Texas girl's idea of the "aesthetic dance."

However some particular dancer may try to disprove this statement, the fact remains that the new dances are aesthetic, as well as athletic, in some instances. However, the girl from the Lone Star State might have been thinking of "Texas Tommy" when she spoke of the new dances.

By the way, I hear that the "Subway Dip," introduced to Atlanta's young set at Jack Macey's dance the other night at the Driving Club, is quite the most delightful variation of the fad yet seen in Atlanta. The host of that merry party is a fine dancer as well as his pretty sister, Eleanor, of whom I've told you already.

I HEAR that a number of ladies who wish to exploit the new Tanagra figure and can not because of their embonpoint are getting up classes in physical culture, and a prospective member tells me that they are going to take my advice and practice the "Guinea Squat" dance.

Keep it up—and down—ladies, and you will be sure to win grace and a youthful figure, in time. And I commend the idea of having a class or company or whatever you wish to call it—meaning somebody to "exercise" with you. In this way each can help the other on to regularity when the failing will puts up excuses, and then a "sparring partner" always adds zest.

MY rather strait-laced Presbyterian (?) training caused me to be shocked greatly the other afternoon on a Peachtree car when a young married man I know well began casting furtive looks at a more or less pretty girl sitting across from him. I was behind them, so he didn't see me, and if he had I don't believe it would have made much difference. Presently he took out a pencil and scribbled something on the margin of a newspaper. Then he carefully tore off the margin and as he left the car dropped it in the girl's lap.

Curiosity and Presbyterianism battled fiercely in my soul, but curiosity won when the girl opened the note.

Prominent Hostesses

Mrs. Hugh Richardson on the left, and Mrs. Albert Thornton, Jr., two of the charming matrons of the city. Mrs. Thornton is a bride of last spring, and was formerly Miss Edna McCandless, one of the most popular young women of the State. Mrs. Richardson is a leading hostess of Atlanta society, and a charming woman.

read it without changing expression, and then dropped it in her purse. I felt as if I could have strangled her to have one look at that note, but I restrained myself and spent the rest of the afternoon guessing. I was taking the mystery too much to heart and was on the point of suffocation when a friend rushed up to me the next day.

"A terrible thing has happened," she said. "That—(mentioning the name of the man I had seen on the car) tried to flirt with my baby's nurse on the car yesterday and gave her a note with his name and phone number on it, asking her to call him up. She gave me the note and I have been trying to get his wife on the phone to tell her about it."

The sudden solution of the mystery startled me so I had trouble collecting my senses sufficiently to persuade her not to break up the heretofore happy home. However, my friend says she intends letting the flirting person know that she holds his secret, and she will do it, too.

* * *

IF you feel good, that is a sign you are in good health. If you feel particularly good, that is a sign you are young. The devil appears in various guises, but it is only when he appears as "old age" that he really frightens anybody.

These lines recurred to me last Saturday night at the dinner dance at the Piedmont Driving Club, when I saw everybody, young and old, so enthusiastically doing the ragtime dances.

Of course, it is to be expected that the younger set should go in strongly for the one-step and the tango, and the rest of them, but I stood at the edge of the dancing floor and marveled at the enthusiasm of a number of men and women whom I knew to be older than I by a number of years.

I am not going to tell you how old I am, but I have reached that age where one thinks of youth only with a sigh of regret for the past. But even though I am younger than many of the turkey trotters, I still feel myself

Miss Dorothy Robbins

A beautiful visitor for whom a number of the week's parties were given. Miss Robbins is from Birmingham, and is the guest of Mrs. J. P. B. Allen. Her visit will continue about two weeks longer. Her exquisite beauty and charming personality has won much admiration in Atlanta. (Photograph made by McCrary.)

News of Society

MRS. J. A. M'LEAY and Miss Janet McLeay will leave the latter part of the month for Canada. Mrs. McLeay's elder daughter, Miss Sophie Haas, will go to Atlantic City for several weeks, after which she will visit other seashore resorts and will be a member of a yachting party. Later in the summer she will go to New York, where she will study vocal music this winter.

* * *

MISS MARGHERITA CARTER entertained at luncheon Thursday in compliment to Miss Sarah Holt, of Columbus, the guest of Miss Sarah Terrell.

Six guests were seated around the pretty table, where a centerpiece was formed of star jasmines and ferns. The place cards were hand painted in white and green, and every detail where possible carried out the color motif.

Miss Carter was hostess again on Friday afternoon when she gave an informal tea in compliment to J. P. Estes, Philip Willard Estes and C. R. Banks, of Columbus.

Twelve couples were invited to meet them.

* * *

MISS MILDRED HAZEN will arrive July 24 to visit Miss Mignon McCarty for a month. Miss Hazen has been in Atlanta several times as the guest of Miss Aurelia Speer and Miss McCarty and has made quite a number of friends here who will entertain for her at informal parties. Miss Hazen and Miss McCarty have only very recently returned from Europe, where they were in a party touring the Continent. Miss McCarty making her a little visit at her home in Orange, N. MR. AND MRS. CLAUDE DOUTHIT, whose marriage was a recent event, are spending some time at the Marlborough-Blenheim, Atlantic City. Montgomery Francis, the brother of Mrs. Douthit, who is now making his home in New York, was their guest for the week-end. Mr. and Mrs. Douthit will come to Atlanta for a short visit to Mrs. Douthit's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery Francis, before going to Memphis for permanent residence. Mrs. Francis will then leave for Flat Rock, N. C., to spend the remainder of the summer.

MISS LUCY STOCKARD gave a bridge tea Thursday afternoon at her home in Inman Park for Miss Louise Lorraine, of Richmond, guest of Miss Virginia Ribble; Miss Juanita Munday, of Augusta, who is with Mrs. J. C. McKenzie, and Miss Helen Nowell, of Augusta, the guest of Misses Mary and Lucile Goodrich. Sixteen girls were invited for the bridge game and later twelve young women joined them at tea. The house was decorated with ferns and old-fashioned flowers culled from the home garden. The prizes for the highest scores and consolation were silk hose, while hand-embroidered handkerchiefs were presented the guests of honor. Miss Stockard wore a three-tier dress of shadow lace flouncing, blue satin being effectively made into a sash which was brought under the top tier onto the corsage, ending in a large bow in the front of the girdle.

MISS HILDRETH BURTONSMITH is the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Orton Bishop Brown, in New England, where she is being delightfully entertained. During August Mrs. Brown will give a house party at her camp in the Rangeley lakes, in Maine, for Miss Smith.

Among the guests will be Misses Marjorie Brown, Passie May Ottley, Marion Goldsmith, Nancy Prince, Hal Hentz, Gabriel Solomon, Samuel Silicer, Dan McDougald, Hamilton Douglas and Westervelt Terhune, of Atlanta, with a number of other young people from Portland, Maine.

The house party guests will be tendered a series of parties, and the affair will be a compliment to Miss Smith, who was one of the popular debutantes of the past winter.

* * *

THE clubs continue to contribute largely to the social pleasures of the stay-at-homes this summer. The week-end dinner-dance at the Driving Club and the dance on Saturday evening at East Lake, which were features of last summer, are as delightful as ever, and are supplemented by the Thursday evening dinner-dances at the Capital City Country Club.

One of the largest dinner parties of the Thursday evening dinner-dance was complimentary to Mrs. William Tilt, of New York, the hosts of the party being Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Kiser.

In the party were also Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Maddox, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Dickey, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Brandon, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Grant, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Howell, Mr. and Mrs. James D. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Kiser and Mr. James H. Nunnally.

Another dinner party of the evening was given by Mr. Edward Alfriend, who had twelve guests, and W. B. McBurney entertained twelve guests.

At the Driving Club Saturday evening Colonel and Mrs. Peel entertained a dinner party in honor of Mrs. Tilt. Another party was entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Dan Harris. At the East Lake Country Club the usual dinner-dance was given. Many young people motored out to the club during the afternoon, and after golfing, swimming or tennis, remained for supper. Dinner was served on the broad piazza overlooking the lake, and later there was dancing in the ballroom.

Mr. and Mrs. Julian Prade left Saturday for Clayton, where they will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Parker for a week at their summer home.

* * *

Miss Agnes Tinsley Harrison has returned from Nashville and Memphis, where she has been for several weeks.

* * *

Mrs. Gerald Smith, of Baltimore, is the guest of Mrs. W. P. Pattillo and Howard Pattillo. Mrs. Smith was formerly Miss Jennie Pattillo and will be pleasantly entertained during her visit home.

* * *

Miss Marguerita Kimball entertained ten couples informally at New Canaan, the country home of her uncle, Walter Brown, Saturday afternoon and evening.

* * *

MISS MARION GOLDSMITH is at home from a several weeks' stay at Atlantic Beach. She was chaperoned by Mrs. L. T. Stallings and was much admired at the noted Florida resort. Miss Ruth Stallings was also a charming member of this party.

* * *

MISS MADGE POLLOCK gave a party Friday afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock at her home on North Avenue for Miss Dodo White's guests, Misses Helen Dunn, Elizabeth Stubbs, Alice Jones and Cleta Slagle.

Shasta daisies and yellow dahlias decorated the rooms where the guests were received. In the drawing room the punch table was banked with these flowers, mingled with smilax, and Misses Martha Lawshe, Amelia Smith and Jennie Lou Lindsey served punch.

Music was furnished during the afternoon by Mrs. James L. Baird and Miss Ruth Cocke.

Assisting Miss Pollock in entertaining were her mother, Mrs. George Pollock, Mrs. C. R. Harman, Mrs. S. J. Elder, Misses Marion and Nina Neal, Louise Dobbs, Ruth Reid, Marie Cobb, Harriet Haynes and little Margaret Elder, Mary White and Elizabeth Goldsmith.

Miss Pollock was gowned in yellow satin draped in white chiffon.

Mrs. Pollock wore a white lace gown with touches of blue satin.

One hundred and fifty guests were present.

* * *

MISS MELEN M'CARTY gave a little dinner Friday night at her home on Piedmont avenue, which was a "good-bye party" to several of her friends who will leave soon for different summer trips, to be away for several months.

A large mound of pink phlox graced the center of the dinner table and the candles were shaded by crystal shades over pink silk. At the guests' places were telegrams or letters addressed to various places. Miss McCarty was gowned in white embroidered crepe and lace.

Her guests included Misses Louise Broyles and Margaret McCarty, who leave next week for Bar Harbor, Me., to visit Mrs. Henry Inman; Miss Isabel Robinson, who is planning to go to Europe soon, where she will study next season; Robert Foreman, Clark Howell, Edwin Broyles and William Dickey.

* * *

Mrs. DuBose and Miss Mattie Wilson DuBose, of Athens, are at the Majestic with Mr. DuBose, who is a member of the Legislature. They will be here during the entire term. Miss DuBose has many friends in Atlanta and will be entertained while here.

* * *

Mrs. W. W. Snodgrass entertained at a spend-the-day party Friday at her home on Lawton street for Miss Lucile Goodrich's guest, Miss Helen Nowell, of Augusta.

* * *

Mrs. Charles Dowman gave an informal bridge party of two tables Friday morning at the home of her mother, Mrs. George Westmoreland, on West Peachtree street, for Miss Dorothy Robins, of Birmingham, the guest of Mrs. J. P. B. Allan.

The house was decorated with garden flowers and the prize was a set of hand-embroidered handkerchiefs.

A QUIET wedding of the week, in which the cordial interest of many friends was centered, was that of Miss Janie Cofer and Frank Childs Skinner. The wedding took place Wednesday evening at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. M. J. Cofer, in West End, and on account of a recent bereavement, there were present only the relatives and intimate friends. The Rev. J. D. Hammond, of Augusta, officiated.

Miss Ruth Cofer was maid of honor, Miss Jennie Sue Bell was bridesmaid and Frederick Stewart, Jr., was ring bearer. The wedding party were grouped before a bank of palms flanked on each side by silver candelabra in the shape of harps. A similar candelabrum, bearing tall white tapers, was in the center of the altar of greenery, and vases of white roses adorned the mantels, with quantities of pink crepe myrtle.

The bride wore white crepe de chine, the corsage adorned with princess lace. The tulle veil was adjusted with orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of white carnations. The maid of honor wore white chiffon and carried Killarney roses and maidenhair fern. Miss Virginia Bell Randall, as ring bearer, wore white lace and carried a basket of white roses.

An informal reception followed the ceremony. Punch was served by Miss Eva Matthews and a color scheme of pink and white was carried out in the refreshments served. Mrs. James Latham assisted in entertaining.

Mr. and Mrs. Skinner left for Clayton during the evening, where they will spend their honeymoon.

The World of Society

EVERYBODY is in the swim, at present, whether they are at the seashore or at home. The many private pools and lakes around Atlanta are the scenes of happy parties every afternoon and evening. The largest swimming parties of the week were given by Mrs. Morris Brandon and by Robin Adair. Mr. and Mrs. Brandon have a beautiful pool on their Paces Ferry Road estate and entertained one afternoon and evening in compliment to Miss Eula Jackson.

Among the Atlantans who are disporting in the surf at Wrightsville Beach are Mr. and Mrs. Roy Collier, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Buchanan, Mr. and Mrs. John Kiser, Mrs. Frank Meador, Miss Charlotte Meador, Mrs. Frank Pearson and Moore Pearson, Mrs. Josephine Earnest Purse and Miss Margaret Northen, Mrs. Edward VanWinkle, Mrs. George Forrester, Mrs. John Glenn.

Toxaway is filling up with Atlantans, among those who have gone or are going soon being Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Nunnally, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Wood, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Dargan, Miss Dargan, Mrs. Lowry Porter and her mother, Mrs. J. T. Crass; Mr. and Mrs. Ed Inman, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Conway, Mrs. Edward McCerrin. In August Mrs. A. W. Calhoun will chaperon Miss Harriet Calhoun and Miss Eula Jackson at Toxaway, and Mrs. and Mrs. J. B. Hockaway go in August.

Misses Margaret McCarty and Louise Broyles are to have a delightful summer visit to Bar Harbor this summer. They leave on the 17th to visit Mrs. Henry Inman, who has a summer home there.

Social news largely concerns the goings and comings of people at this time. It is hard to keep up with one's friends, whereabouts, even with the help of the "personals" on the society pages. Misses Marion Goldsmith and Ruth Stallings are at home again, after a delightful visit at Atlantic Beach. They were chaperoned by Mrs. L. T. Stallings and were much admired, both girls being tall, graceful brunettes and perfect beauties.

On the return of Mrs. Stallings to Atlanta the girls were chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Dunk. With Miss Elizabeth Parkhill, a lovely Jacksonville debutante, and her sister, Miss Parker, who are being chaperoned by their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Roderick George Ross, the Atlanta girls have been the central figures in a number of informal motor and sailing parties. Mr. and Mrs. George Mason, who have a cottage on the beach, have given several informal affairs for the girls, and among the many pleasures of their visit was a motor ride through the Jungle, tendered them by Mr. Harry Persche Phil Brooks gave a crabbing party for them, and on all these informal parties Miss Stallings' brother, George Stallings, of Jacksonville, was a member.

Miss Ruth Barry and party of friends left this week for St. Simons. Miss Frances Connally leaves Sunday for Norfolk, where she visits Mrs. E. G. Dodson, who will be better known here by her former name, Harriotte Winchester.

A number of prominent Atlantans left last week for the Far West. Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Philip Hinman and young son, Thomas Philip Hinman, Jr., accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Broyles, left Thursday morning for a delightful trip, to include several days through Yellowstone Park. Mr. and Mrs. Broyles will then return home, but Dr. and Mrs. Hinman and son will go to Seattle, with a stay of several days in Portland. They will also go to Tacoma to visit Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Martin, formerly of Atlanta. Dr. and Mrs. William C. Warren and Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Dunlap also left last week for Yellowstone Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Marshall McKenzie and baby, with Miss May O'Brien, left Thursday night for an extended stay at Wrightsville Beach. Others planning to visit Wrightsville in the near future are Miss Sallie Cobb Johnson, who will join Mrs. McKenzie; Misses Helen and Genevieve Morris and Margaret Haverty.

Mr. and Mrs. St. Elmo Massengale are now at Atlantic City, after a delightful stay at Atlantic Beach. Miss Jessie Muse and her niece, Miss Adeline Thomas, are in Nacooches Valley. Mrs. Hinton Hopkins and her two young sons, John and Milton, are also spending some time in Nacoochee Valley.

Others at Wrightsville are Mrs. Henry Williams, Mrs. Henry Kuhrt, Misses Lucile and Isabel Kuhrt, Miss Leila Neer, Mr. Homer Neer, Mrs. Ella Wright Wilcox, Mr. and Mrs. David Crockett, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Collier and sons and Miss Mamie Foote. Mrs. Louise Spalding Foster and Miss Elizabeth Loving will go to Wrightsville next week, as will Mr. and Mrs. Adams Jones, Miss Helen Jones, Miss Margaret Buckner and Miss Nellie Kiser Stewart.

ONE of the happiest affairs of the week was the dinner dance given Wednesday evening at Woodhaven by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Foster Maddox. The honor guest of the occasion was Miss Eula Jackson, Mr. Maddox's niece, who will be a debutante next winter, and who is being tendered a series of parties since her return from New York, where she spent the winter in school.

A group of young people were invited to meet Miss Jackson, and they were received in the drawing room, which was decorated with quantities of summer flowers from the gardens of Woodhaven. Dinner was served on the terrace, the guests being seated in groups of four or six. Each table had for a centerpiece a vase of vari-colored phlox, surrounded by silver candelabra bearing green shades under silver filigree.

A delicious dinner was served, and later, there was dancing in the large living room. An orchestra played throughout the evening.

Mrs. Maddox was a charming hostess, wearing a French gown of pink and blue chiffon, caught with knots of French roses. Miss Jackson wore white satin chiffon, with a girdle of cerise satin. Miss Ada Alexander, who assisted in entertaining, wore white chiffon, embroidered in yellow.

Mrs. B. L. Dobbs and Miss Fay Dobbs are among the Atlantans in Henderson, N. C. They are at the St. John Hotel.

* * *

Miss Annie Stewart Ellis, of Springfield, Mass., who, with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Prioleau Ellis, came down for the Oliver-Ellis wedding, is being pleasantly entertained. Mrs. W. E. Campbell gave an informal party for a number of little girls Wednesday afternoon in honor of little Miss Ellis, who, with her parents and little sister, Phoebe, is the guest of Judge and Mrs. William D. Ellis.

* * *

DR. AND MRS. VASSAR WOOLLEY are at Tallulah Falls. Their daughter, Mrs. Paul Seydel, of New York, has joined them, after a visit to her aunt, Mrs. Lamar Rutherford Lipscomb, in the North Georgia mountains. Mrs. Seydel will remain several days with her parents at Tallulah Falls before joining Mr. Seydel in New Jersey, where they will spend the remainder of the summer.

* * *

The handsome summer home of Governor and Mrs. Marshall Slaton will remain open during the summer, in order that Governor and Mrs. Slaton may go out for a day or so throughout the season. It is occupied now by Governor Slaton's father, Major W. F. Slaton, and his sister, Miss Mattie Slaton, who are there for a month.

* * *

At the "Cherokee Cottage," the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Ellis, Jr., at Tallulah Falls, Miss Adgate Ellis is entertaining a week-end house party. The young people left Saturday morning for Tallulah, where a delightful program, arranged by the hostess, awaited them.

In the house party are Misses Marjorie Brown, Bessie Jones, Margaret Grant; Eula Jackson, Harriet Calhoun and Laura Cobb Hutchins, of Athens; Messrs. Edward Alsop, of New York; Edward Alfriend, Marsh Adair, Arthur Clark, Edward Brown, Walter Colquitt, Dan McDougald, Bowie Martin and Floyd McRae. The guests will return home Monday night, Mr. and Mrs. Ellis and Miss Ellis to remain some time longer at Tallulah.

Society Chatter

By Polly Peachtree

WITH the passing of June, the weddings drop out of the social calendar, though interest in future ceremonies has been kept up with several important announcements recently.

I have been told by the society editors that to-day's paper carries the announcement of Ariadne Merritt's engagement to a Los Angeles man, which announcement will perhaps carry disappointment to some of Atlanta's young men. I am sure it will disappoint others beside the young men, too, for many of us hoped that some day Ariadne Merritt would come back to Atlanta to live.

She was a charming figure in social life here during the two winters she spent in Atlanta. Last year, Miss Merritt was at home in San Francisco, and her friends only got word of social pleasures, now and then, in letters. And now comes the engagement announcement.

Miss Merritt is a neice of Mrs. Emily C. McDougald, and a cousin of Mrs. Edward H. Inman, and with these two kinspeople she spent the time she was in Atlanta. Her fiance, Philo Leonard Lindley, I understand, is a member of one of Los Angeles's most prominent families and is personally popular there. Miss Merritt will be married in October, and several Atlanta guests will go out West for the event.

THE announcement recently made of the engagement of Miss Ellen Meeks, of Nashville, to Inman Gray, of Atlanta, was received with delight by many friends of the young couple. For several years, since Miss Meeks has been coming to Atlanta for extended stays with her sister, Mrs. R. L. Cooney, she has been regarded as one of Atlanta's own, and now that she is to join the young married contingent, much pleasure is occasioned among her friends here. The future Mrs. Gray is a charming young woman, and has a beautiful voice, her singing being familiar to Atlanta society. The date of the wedding is not announced, but it will be a very important social event, and I suppose, will take place some time in the fall.

A JUNE bride who is being most cordially welcomed in Atlanta is Mrs. Samuel Dick. This smart young matron, who was Ruth Tribble, of Athens, is one of several girls demonstrating the cane-carrying fad. En route from her wedding trip, Pretty Mrs. Dick electrified Savannah when she went out with her cane, soon after landing from a Savannah liner.

At first, 'tis said, the people thought the obliging bride was carrying her husband's cane for him, but later, Samuel also appeared with a cane, and a friend who was on the promenade with the young couple, also had a cane. So there was no longer any doubt but that the slender cane of melacca wood, with a torotise ferrule and a gold top, was the property of the pretty bride herself.

She swung her cane jauntily (they all swing the canes jauntily) and Savannah sat up and gasped. In Atlanta, we weren't so astonished to see Mrs. Dick and her cane, for Callie Hoke Smith had initiated us to the fad, several weeks ago.

However, the chic young matron—who was a debutante in Washington, D. C., last winter—has received due admiration since she arrived in the city with her cane and her charming Paris frocks.

NOT long ago I heard a prominent Atlanta man make all sorts of fun of golf. For many years he had refused to play. It was a simple, foolish, easy game, he said, and he knew it would not interest him. About two weeks ago a friend dragged him to the East Lake links, teed a ball for him and told him to drive. When he had struck four times at the ball without even touching it he became so exasperated that he bought a set of clubs that very day and started with determination to conquer the little white ball.

A few days ago this man was seen hurrying toward the golf club, although his left arm was in a sling.

"What are you going to do?" he was asked.

"Oh, I broke my arm," was the enthusiastic reply, "but I'm going out to play with one hand!"

AN innovation in the resort hotel is the ladies' smoking room, I hear from Miss Katherine Wootten, just back from an interesting series of short visits to several places near New York and in the Catskills. Miss Wootten tells me that the big new hotel at Brighton Beach, which is most up to date in all particulars, has a smoking room for ladies, with walls and hangings of a bright cerise.

Why the cerise, I don't know. Perhaps it is a symbol of the daring of the modern women, or mayhap, 'twas used, with its old symbolism, and as an unspoken protest on the part of the hotel management, while yielding to popular demand—a sort of reminder of "the devil and all his works," to the fair smokers who gather there for their modern luxury.

It is very strange, but a fact, that few men like for women to smoke cigarettes, even though they be men who look upon the drinking of cocktails as a woman's special privilege. Personally, I'll say right here, that I do not approve of women smoking or drinking—but the latter seems to be far more deplorable than the former.

However, I'm no temperance lecturer, so I will proceed with my story. At this same up-to-date hostelry, I hear from this observant Atlantan, the "turkey trot" and the "tango" reign supreme among the dancers, as a matter of course, but what is of interest is her account of a zealous official person on the ballroom floor who watches with care and at the least sign of "ragging" taps the shoulder of the offending man or woman, as the case may be, and there is one less couple on the floor.

I think this is the better way to manage the dancing crisis which confronts the summer hotel people this year. To forbid the dances is taking a reckless chance with success, but to regulate them and see that they are danced as they should be, is satisfactory to everybody concerned.

I HEAR that Julia Brock, a Montgomery girl, who often visits in Atlanta, created quite a sensation at a fancy-dress ball in Columbus last week when she went as a Turkish lady and dared to wear the costume of that country.

It is true, the society papers chronicled the fact that Miss Brock wore divided skirts, "though not perceptibly so." That's what the papers said—"not perceptibly so"—and still Columbus was stirred. My, how easy it must be to create a sensation in some towns! If that published description of Julia Brock's costume is accurate, I don't see where the "Turkish Lady" had anything on most of the girls, these days. We Americans could teach her freedom—of skirts as well as of other things. Miss Brock, I am sure, was lovely, anyway, whether or not she wore 'em.

Several Atlanta girls were at the ball, and, of course, were charming. There was Josephine Mobley, as "Summer," wearing an airy, fairy white frock with green trimmings. Miss Mobley is a charming blonde, and will probably be one of next season's debutantes. She is just home from Miss Mason's school in New York and has been attending a house party in Columbus. I believe Ruth Hull, another Atlanta girl at the mask ball, was a represetnation of "Summer" also. And Glenne Dickey, of Augusta, who is a visitor in Atlanta now and then, was a lovely Japanese girl. Don't you know Fleurine Hatcher was a stunning Carmen, and Margaret Gordon, as an Egyptian princess, must have been gorgeous! I think Miss Gordon took the prize. Fancy-dress balls are always interesting, though the season is rather far advanced for them. No wonder so many girls represented "Summer"—I almost wrote "Simmer."

SPEAKING of bachelors—I did somewhere in this paper, you know—I am reminded of a story that an Augusta visitor brings to me concerning one of the most popular bachelors of that city, Judge Henry Hammond. This visitor tells me that Judge Hammond has adopted a new fad, which bids fair to spread over the country soon—that of carrying a parasol—a very practical and manly parasol of tan pongee, lined with dark green.

You know green is warranted to deflect the sun's rays better than any other color. Doubtless Judge Hammond knew this, and chose the lining of his parasol because of that knowledge instead of for reasons of beauty. So far no one has had the temerity of following this gentleman's example, but everybody in Augusta is on the look-out for the second gentleman's parasol.

And in the meantime Judge Hammond walks serenely in the shade, while other men, fearful of new customs even when prompted by the plainest common sense, continue to get freckles and tan every time they go out.

Judge Hammond's example may be followed in Atlanta, now that it is known. I hope anyone seeing the same would phone Polly Peachtree. I'd like to know the name of so sensible and fearless a man.

I WENT into a Whitehall street store yesterday during the rush hours to get a pair of shoes, and was waited on by a very much disgruntled clerk. His disgust was so evident that I suppose I couldn't resist looking a question at him.

"Did you see that woman in white who just left the store?" he asked me.

I nodded, having recognized her as a fair visitor from the North.

"Well, in the matter of nerve, she is the ultimate limit," said the shoe clerk. "She came in here during all this rush, sat down and tried on at least a dozen different styles and sizes of shoes. I finally got her a perfect fit, then she asked:

"'What is the exact size of these shoes?'

"On being informed, she had the shoes removed, with the remark:

"'Well, I am sending to New York for a pair of shoes, and I wanted to be sure as to the exact size to order.'

"Can you beat that?" queried the shoe clerk.

And I had to admit I could not.

Oh, the laureateship is vacant,
Sing "Hands across the sea!"
I wonder why in the world they don't
For the job pick Kip—or me?

WHY not a woman poet laureate for England?

The death of Alfred Austin has left this position in the official life of the British Empire vacant, and from every part of the world have come suggestions to appoint a woman to the post.

Women have ruled as queens and have made a success of their stewardship, so why could not a woman be the official bard of England. If she can sit on a throne, she should certainly be able to sit on the Court of Parnassus.

Besides, the elevation of a woman to this position might help to stop the sex war which is now prevalent in England. I have always been a believer in women's rights, but I must confess that I believe that woman has a greater field with the pen and scroll as her weapon than in using the torch and the bomb to gain her way.

I ran across a verse in an exchange the other day that struck me as being rather apt. Here it is:

Woman's influnce is gentle
In most instances. And yet
There is nothing sentimental
To a London suffragette.
It would be a serious matter,
When male orators recite,
Should they punctuate their chatter
By exploding dynamite.

HOW do I find out all I know? Well, I'll let you into a secret.

I get my information through the three well-known and commonly used sources of news distribution, just as any other ordinary mortal does—by telegraph, telephone and tell-a-woman. It was through the first, and the wireless variety at that, I have found out news concerning the wanderers in foreign lands.

All of us who stay at home and imagine we are suffering from the heat—we really do not, in Atlanta, you know—love to hear of more fortunate ones, so that to our ordinary discontent may be added the exquisite finishing touches of envy. Reports from Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Witham bring jolly talk of Paris sights, where they now are, with cool suggestions from the Swiss journey they have just made.

I hear that Jessie McKee, the young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McKee, who has been at school in Berlin this year, will come home with the Withams, who now plan to reopen the gates of "Bide-a-Wee" some day before August 1. They are due in New York on July 22.

Letters from Mr. and Mrs. Asa G. Candler tell of enjoyable experiences in Lucerne and other Swiss resorts which they visited after a brief stay in Paris. From Switzerland they went to Cologne, and, according to their itinerary, were due in Amsterdam Saturday.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES SPRUNT, of Wilmington, have arrived at their Narragansett cottage and will soon have as their guest one of Atlanta's most charming buds-to-be, Miss Katherine Ellis.

The Sprunts have been popular members of the cottage colony at Narragansett for some time, and Miss Ellis' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ellis, have also summered there a number of years. This season, I have heard, Mr. and Mrs. Sprunt will be the only members of the family to spend the entire summer at Narragansett, and Miss Ellis will be their house guest in July.

The polo clans at Narragansett are looking forward to the annual tournament of the Point Judith Club, which opens on Saturday, the 19th. Under the auspices of the National Polo Association, three championship matches will be played at Narragansett.

The Pier is always gay during the polo season and attracts many visiting belles, Miss Ellis to be one of a number of charming girls from many cities.

By the way, I hear that Miss Madge Bannigan, of Providence, R. I., is quite a belle at Narragansett this season. Miss Bannigan has often visited Atlanta, and I have heard that—but, no, it is hard to resist quoting "Madame Rumor"—but I will NOT be as weak-minded as other women on that line!

Society Chatter

By Polly Peachtree

too old for this form of amusement.

Mind you, I don't say I disapprove, for even in my own mind disapproval on my part might be set down to envy. But I said to myself then that if turkey trotting would make a man or a woman of certain years feel as young as he or she acts, then turkey trotting is a practice to be encouraged in the land.

I HAVE no desire to abolish the popularity of Wrightsville Beach with Atlanta people, but "news is news" and I can not refrain from publishing the fact that the turkey trot is prohibited there.

Atlanta belles and young matrons who departed for the seashore in joyous anticipation of dancing at "Lumania" were met upon arrival at the hotels of Wrightsville with this startling announcement. And to add insult to injury, they tell me, the orchestra plays beautifully at "Lumania" every evening—and folks sit around and listen to the music! For the past two seasons Wrightsville Beach has been a favorite with Atlantans, though I doubt not the extreme measures against the most popular pastime of the seasons will modify this favoritism.

However, before the season is over Wrightsville Beach hotel proprietors—or whoever it is that is responsible for this silly prohibition of dancing—may wake up, especially as so many "live ones" are going to the beach unaware of the restrictions imposed.

I do not think they have yet prohibited silk bathing suits, but don't know what will come. I can vouch for the fact that there were nothing but silk suits and silk stockings on the beach last season. One charming girl wore a lovely black and white silk suit of extreme cut, I remember, and instead of black hose she wore the thinnest of white silk stockings, the appearance of which was pretty, but not so very conservative.

Mrs. John Kiser, I hear, is the prize fisherman now at Wrightsville. She can go out to sea in a small boat, anchor on the tossing waves for hours at a time, and still be able to sit up and catch fish. How she does it I can not imagine, but she does.

Mrs. Frank Meador is a fine guest for the sailing parties, which are a feature of life at Wrightsville. It's a desirable thing to be, too, for the guests of these fishing parties and sailing parties are mostly one-time-only guests. I don't blame them either, for I went out once on the "Nancy Jane."

I.

The Sun was shining brightly,
When my lady, young and sprightly,
Came in view.
Tall was she, divinely slender,
In the way that few clothes render,
And the merest breeze could send her
Out of sight, or break or bend her,
Well I knew.

II.

Alas, she dressed so leanly
For the day
That Old Sol behind her shining,
Pierced the solitary lining,
Of her gown, till we, there dining,
Turned away.

III.

Oh, Fashion amatory,
I pray you heed my story,
And give unto my lady just a little denser slip,
For she is far too daring,
In the garment she is wearing,
And she needs a screen to screen her,
From the ankle to the hip.

HAVE you ever thought, friends, that the slit skirt we see now without blushing and sometimes without even a thought, is the same "sheath gown" that was greeted with a furor of condemnation and quickly relegated to the stage some years ago? Oh, I tell you, the world moves, and soon the slit skirt will be too demure for the "best gowned woman" to wear. An Atlanta girl who has recently returned from New York tells me that the most striking thing she saw at the polo games was the lack of clothes worn by the women present.

"I wondered how it was possible for them to wear as little," she said, and now we should worry over the fact that Atlanta women have not yet reached the standard set by New York's smart set. As for Paris—I refuse to pursue the subject further. A member of our own younger set, who strolled up to the Country Club porch the other day, in the late afternoon, seemed to have reached the limit, and to make matters worse—that is, more stylish—she wore some sort of pink underthings (or underthing), giving to the fashionable silhouette (outlined usually in dusky shadows) a rosy radiance that made everybody on that porch sit up and gasp. Oh, yes, I had heard of those rose-pink crepe underthings that "can't be seen through like white ones." They can't, but believe me, they are just as startling—only more so!

I HEARD some of the girls laughing heartily over the narrow escape of one of their number—who probably didn't appreciate the escape as she might have done, and as her rescuer so fondly hoped. This particular girl was all fixed up in her lace and net gown and her net underskirt and—the rest of the net things, for the tango evening at the Hotel Ansley, the other night. She was awaiting her escort with pleased anticipations and reflections when the telephone rang out on the evening air, with a sort of protesting shrill-

Miss Louise Des Vergers

ness that warned the girl of something coming. When she went to the phone, the voice of her prospective escort was heard in earnest and unexpected advice for her to "be sure, for the love of Mike, to put on some dark skirts, 'or something,' to wear down town." To the girl's indignant questions as to the why and wherefore of his impertinent advice, he replied with tears in his voice—he loved the girl, you know!—that a lot of fool "guys" were standing on the opposite side of the street to the brilliantly lighted entrance of the Hotel Ansley and—and. But the girl knew why, then, and whether or not she followed his advice, I can't say. You know, girls will do lots of things to be in the fashion.

IF you like to make a bet now and then, there is a young married woman who lives less than a mile from Peachtree who will take a wager on the finest sporting proposition I have heard for many a day.

This young woman has been married some ten years and up to date her family is no larger than it was her wedding day. Naturally some of her intimates joke her about this state of affairs, and the other night several persons at the Driving Club remarked on it. Finally a man came over to her table and inquired:

"How are all the children?"

"None of your business," she remarked, "and, besides, I'm so tired of all this chatter about children that I'll bet anybody $10 there is a child in my family in less than a year."

"Taken," said the man.

That was the start of the betting. Yesterday it was moving briskly, odds as good as three to one being offered against her.

OVERHEARD at a dinner dance at the Piedmont Driving Club recently:

"I asked her to dance but she refused."

"Why?

"She said she did not do this week's dances."

* * *

GENERALLY, I think a beautiful woman's beauty is her all sufficient excuse for beauty—and generally, it's about all she has—but an opportunity to say several "nice things" about a beautiful young woman, which have the "plain, unvarnished truth" for a foundation, comes so seldom, I can not resist the temptation to drop into complimentary remarks anent lovely Mrs. Albert Thornton, whose picture adorns the front page of the society section of The American this Sunday.

Mrs. Thornton's type of loveliness is so perfect, as to feature, form and color, that she has often been called the most beautiful woman in Georgia. And what is more remarkable than her beauty is the fact that she is one of the most talented young women of the city, and one of the cleverest and wittiest members of the young married contingent.

Mrs. Thornton's voice is of rare charm and has been exquisitely cultivated. She never lets her social duties curtail her musical practice and finds time also for reading upon all the topics of the day. Her repartee and clever conversation are features of any affair she attends. And, I may as well add, Mrs. Thornton dances beautifully and is to be seen almost any afternoon or evening giving as graceful an exhibition of the new steps as is ever seen at one of Atlanta's country clubs.

As Edna McCandless, this charming young woman was noted, far and wide, as a Southern beauty before her recent marriage. Her social career began when she was presented at the Court of St. James a few years ago while abroad. Since her debut she has been accorded all sorts of flattering attentions. Now, "last but not least," I would like to say that the crowning charm of this very charming woman, in my opinion, is her gracious personality and her genuinely unaffected manners.

A FRIEND, who is now traveling in Europe, writes me of a pretty little story that is current on the Continent about the Queen of The Netherlands.

This charming woman never cared much for fine clothes, and as she grows older it worries her to have to give orders for a fresh wardrobe. Indeed, for Queen Wilhelmina to get a new gown is something of an event.

She had one lately of white cashmere, and the other day at a garden party to which she was accompanied by Princess Juliana, who never wears anything but white washing frocks, a strawberry dropped on the Queen's lap. Thereupon the little Princess, in great excitement, shouted at the top of her voice:

"Mamma! See what has happened to your new dress! Poor mamma, who has so few frocks! What will she do?"

IN reading the headlines in newspapers recently I have noted that our currency is causing some of the wise statesmen at Washington a lot of concern right now.

My only concern with currency has been in obtaining enough of it to buy new frocks and new hats when they were needed.

I don't know the meaning of all these terms that they use in connection with the currency, but there was one that struck me the other day in a headline. It was "country demands more elastic currency."

That may mean a lot to some people, but all I have to say in that connection is that if the currency is made elastic I know where many women will keep theirs.

PARIS seems to be drawing all the Atlantans for a stay of more or less length. The postcards coming from Mrs. Frank Adair and Miss Leone Ladson are bearing Paris dates at present. They have been having a motoring tour through England and Scotland, and are now awaiting the arrival of Mr. Adair, who will travel with them awhile before they return to the States. Miss Mary Allgood Jones, a next season's debutante, who has been traveling with her mother, Mrs. John Ashley Jones, for several months, has come home—that is, she has arrived in this part of the country, though not in Atlanta. The travelers went first to their summer home in Trion, Ga., for a rest, and expect to be in Atlanta about August 1, I believe.

She meant to play a sportsman's part
And show herself an angler firm;
But oh, so tender was her heart
That she could not impale the worm.

And when she caught the finny prize
So strange and gasping did it look
She vowed with sympathetic cries
She could not take it off the hook.

Though much assistance she required
To catch the fish, as we narrate,
No help she needed, nor desired.
To tell a lie about its weight.

I HAVE noticed a number of our young Atlanta belles fishing out at the East Lake Country Club recently. Some of them catch fish, some of them catch turtles, some of them catch nothing but colds; but they are enthusiastic just the same.

However, I wish some of them wouldn't squeal quite so loudly when they bring up a wriggling fish. The first time I heard one of these shrieks I thought sure that one of the gay bathers in the lake had come to grief.

Incidentally speaking of fish and bathers, one majestic brown-eyed beauty, who lives at the Imperial Hotel and who has been a regular bather at East Lake, solemnly informed me the other day that she had a bruise just above her ankle, for which she could account in no other way than that a large fish had bitten her. I tried hard not to smile, but I don't think she likes me as well as she did before.

WHITE Sulphur Springs is not behind the times. I hear delightful news of the new dances that have superseded the stately minuet, the quadrille, the Virginia reel, the "White Sulphur Riley," the waltz and the two-step at that historic resort. For seasons long past these dances, in the order named, gave pleasure to the aristocracy of the South and East at the Virginia resort. Now the one-step and the tango reign supreme—and there is no talk of prohibiting the new dances there. Dear old Professor Zebley, who comes to teach "our" children here every spring, is having the time of his life, I hear, giving lessons in the new dances to the people who have gone to the White Sulphur without this important knowledge. An Atlanta woman there writes me that Professor Zebley has introduced two new variations of the tango at the White Sulphur which have caught the popular fancy. They were first taught Helen Taft and her set in Washington by Professor Zebley, and were so much liked by them he has carried the dances to the White Sulphur, where they are equally well liked.

I READ a good story the other day of "Europe's Most Famous Dancer"—there are, by the way, several using that title just now I understand—

This artist was asked by one of London's nouveau riche hostesses to dance at a party. Madame consented and named $500 as her fee.

"Oh!" exclaimed the hostess, "isn't that rather too much? I was given to understand that $200 was your charge. Can't you do it for that?"

The dancer explained that $500 was her fee, and if the lady could not pay she could not appear.

"Very well," sighed the hostess, "I suppose I must pay $500 then. But I hope you understand that I do not expect you to mix with my guests—you will come to dance, and nothing else."

"Why didn't you say that before?" replied Madame. "Of course I will come for $200."

MRS. OSCAR W. UNDERWOOD, who numbers her Atlanta friends by the score, is spending the summer at Virginia Hot Springs.

So popular has this charming young Alabama matron become at this resort that she holds a veritable court, and she and her husband, who is the leader of the Democratic party in Congress, are voted to be the most popular couple that ever visited there.

The World of Society

By Polly Peachtree

Most of the larger entertainments given are in their honor.

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, who was formerly Alice Roosevelt, and her sister-in-law, the Countess de Chambrun, are at the Springs, and both have given large events in honor of the Underwoods.

I first met Mrs. Underwood several years ago and she captivated me immediately. Each time I have met her since then her charm has grown upon me. I can readily see where this clever Southern woman could outshine even the vivacious Alice Roosevelt at the National Capital.

EARLY last July a friend of mine told me that Katherine Force and Henry E. Harnickell were secretly engaged, and that they would be married before another year. This week her statement was almost borne out by the announcement of the engagement, the only difference being that the marriage will probably not take place until late August or early September.

Miss Force is the sister of the present Mrs. John Jacob Astor, who was so tragically widowed by the sinking of the Titanic. The two sisters have been almost inseparable since that terrible event.

At one time Miss Katherine, it was said, was engaged to young Vincent Astor, son of her sister's husband, but more than a year ago, my informant told me that such a thing was absolutely absurd.

Miss Katherine, I am told, is a lovely girl, and she has my best wishes.

MR. AND MRS. CALVIN M'CLUNG, of Knoxville, who, with Lee McClung, former United States Treasurer, left in February for a trip around the world, sailed Thursday for America on the Imperator. Besides the many excursions and pleasures arranged for the large party, Mr. and Mrs. McClung and Lee McClung have enjoyed many varied and unusual experiences.

During their stay in India they were entertained by a lady of high rank at her home, where the party of three enjoyed an intimate glimpse into the life of a wealthy Indian household.

Mr. and Mrs. McClung have written amusing letters telling of their jaunts on elephants, etc., and of their long ride on camels into the desert. Mr. and Mrs. McClung are expected in Atlanta the latter part of July, as guests of Mrs. McClung's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Adair.

MRS. ALBERT THORNTON, who has spent the past several months in Maine, spent a few days in Atlanta last week, and was cordially welcomed. Mrs. Thornton leaves Monday for Asheville, N. C., where she will spend ten days with her son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Austell Thornton, and will then return to Maine to spend the remainder of the summer.

Mrs. Thornton was one of a small group of friends having tea with Mrs. Frank Ellis at the Piedmont Club during the tea hour Wednesday afternoon, and was greatly admired in a gown of white crepe combined with pale blue, and worn with a big white picture hat adorned with a white paradise.

Mrs. William A. Tilt, of New York, who is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Lawson Peel, was a member of this party who was also being cordially welcomed. Mrs. Tilt will remain with Mr. and Mrs. Peel for several weeks.

MR. AND MRS. ROGERS KEESE whose marriage was a recent event, have returned from their wedding journey, and are at home at the residence of Mrs. H. D. Cole in Ansley Park. Mr. and Mrs. Keese spent their honeymoon in Asheville, N. C., at the Hotel Langren, where long rides and drives through the mountains were a feature of their visit.

Later they visited Hendersonville, spending a few days at this mountain resort. They will occupy Mrs. Cole's residence for a while, Mrs. Cole and children having gone to the mountains for the remainder of the summer.

PRETTY pieces of white and gold china formed the prizes at the informal bridge party given on Monday afternoon by Mrs. Walter Daniel at her home on North Avenue. The affair was arranged in honor of Mrs. Frank Bryan, of Mississippi, and Mrs. Henry Bartlett, of Florida, who are guests of Mrs. Baldwin Davis. Mrs. John Askew and Mrs. Baldwin won the prizes, and other guests present were Mrs. William McClendon, Mrs. Wade Harding, Mrs. Caspar Johnson, Mrs. L. S. Weymer, Mrs. H. A. Manning, Mrs. H. J. McDonald and Mrs. James Briggs Fitch.

To Look and Feel Bright in Hot Weather

(From The Woman Beautiful.)

This is the season when she who would have a rose-leaf complexion, lily-white neck and hands, should turn her thoughts to mercolized wax, the firm friend of the summer girl. Nothing so effectually overcomes the soiling effects of sun, wind, dust and dirt. The wax literally absorbs the scorched, discolored, withered or coarsened cuticle, bringing forth a brand new skin, clear, soft and girlishly beautiful. It also unclogs the pores, removing blackheads and increasing the skin's breathing capacity. An ounce of mercolized wax, obtainable at any drugstore, applied nightly like cold cream, and washed off mornings, will gradually improve the worst complexion.

When depressed by the heat and you want to freshen up for the evening, bathe the face in a lotion made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half-pint witchhazel. You'll find this more refreshing than an hour's rest. It is fine for smoothing out wrinkles, even the deeper ones.

NEWS of SOCIETY

MRS. RICHARD C. CONGDON, who left Wednesday with her husband for a short trip abroad, was tendered a bon voyage party Monday afternoon by Mrs. Dudley Cowles. The guests included Mrs. Edward C. Peters, Mrs. Leverett Walker, Mrs. Robert Adger Smythe, Mrs. George Dexter, Mrs. Henry Bernard Scott, Mrs. Charles Remsen, Mrs. Franklin Mikell, Mrs. W. L. Cosgrove, Mrs. Hudson Moore and Mrs. W. D. Manley.

The game of auction bridge was played on the porch, which was cool and inviting with swinging baskets filled with gay blooming flowers and with potted plants. The prizes, which were pieces of pottery, were won by Mrs. George Dexter and Mrs. Leverett Walker.

The hostess and her guests wore pretty morning toilets for the affair. Mrs. Cowles wore a becoming costume of pink crepe. Mrs. Congdon, the honor guest, was gowned in white embroidered crepe trimmed in lavender, a big lavender hat completing the toilet.

Mrs. Edward C. Peters wore a morning gown of white linen, with coat of white ratine.

Mrs. Leverett Walker was gowned in white crepe. Mrs. Hudson Moore's pretty toilet of blue crepe was worn with a hat of blue in a poke shape, adorned with blue ribbons.

Mrs. Robert Adger Symthe was gowned in white ratine with a pink coat, trimmed in heavy lace. A big picture hat of black completed the costume.

Mrs. George Dexter's morning toilet of black chiffon was draped over white and worn with a black hat adorned with aigrettes. Mrs. Charles Remsen was beautifully gowned in black and white crepe, made with the coat effect, and the becoming toilet was completed by a Panama hat banded in white. Mrs. Wellborn Hill wore a white costume with a small white hat.

SOME of the happiest informal entertaining of the week has been the series of parties given for the young girls who are members of Miss Dolo White's house party. Her guests include a group of her former classmates at the Sophie Newcomb College in New Orleans—Misses Elizabeth Stubbs, of Shreveport; Alice Jones, of Birmingham; Cleta Slagle, of Clarkesville, La., and Helen Dunn, of New Orleans.

* * *

A SWIMMING party was given Wednesday evening by Robin Adair, at the Druid Hills residence of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Adair. The young people were chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. Adair and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gregg.

Later in the evening a buffet supper was served indoors, from a table laden with summer flowers.

Miss Augusta Pearce, of New York, the guest of Mrs. Adair, was a special guest.

Miss Ariadne Merritt

A California girl who spends much of her time in Atlanta with her kinswomen, Mrs. Emily McDougald and Mrs. Edward H. Inman. The engagement of Miss Merritt to a prominent Los Angeles man is announced to-day.

In the WORLD of SOCIETY

THE West End residence of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stewart was the scene of a bridge party Wednesday evening. The affair was in the nature of a housewarming, being the first given by Mr. and Mrs. Stewart since moving into the handsome residence at Lee and Gordon Streets.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bruce Morrison, whose marriage was an event of the early spring, were the honor guests, and invited to meet them were thirty friends.

Pink crepe myrtle formed the decorations in all apartments, and the prizes, which included silk gloves and a book, were won by Miss Margaret Heicht and William Henry. Donald Morrison "cut" the consolation, a novel.

Supper was served after the game, Mrs. Emily Stewart and Alice Frederick Stewart, Jr., assisting in entertaining. Miss Sadie Morrison served punch.

* * *

MRS. WILLIAM A. TILT, of New York, who is spending the summer with her parents, Col. and Mrs. William Lawson Peel, at Woodbine, is being tendered a series of parties, one of the prettiest of the week being the informal tea given in her honor on Friday afternoon by Mrs. Charles Remsen.

Fifteen young matrons were invited to meet Mrs. Tilt, and they were received on the piazza of Piedmont Club. Tea was served at four small tables, each having a decoration of vari-colored summer flowers.

The hostess was lovely in a toilet of white embroidered crepe, worn with a Panama hat tied beneath the chin with broad purple streamers.

AN interesting event of this week will be the wedding of Miss Laurette Lewis to Charles Edgar Jones, which will take place Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Church of the Epiphany, in Inman Park.

The young brother of the bride, Nicholas Bennett, will be the ring bearer and only attendant, except Maritz Gross, of Galveston, who will be best man. Rev. Russell K. Smith, pastor of the church, will officiate.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. Jones and his bride will leave for New Orleans, a wedding reception having been omitted on account of the large tea given by Mrs. W. N. Bennett for her daughter two or three weeks ago.

After spending some time in New Orleans, Mr. Jones and his bride will leave for Galveston, Tex., to make their home.

A number of out-of-town guests will attend the wedding, among them the parents of the bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. John Paul Jones, and Master Hawley Jones, of Galveston.

A DANCING party was given by Robert Crichton last Tuesday evening for Misses Elizabeth and Lila Ward Hamilton, of Rome, the guests of his mother. Ninety boys and girls were entertained and the young host was assisted in entertaining by Mr. and Mrs. Frank D. Holland, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Troutman, Dr. and Mrs. R. C. Cassels.

A buffet supper was served on the lawn, where punch bowls, surrounded by fruits and flowers, were placed under the trees. The affair was one of a series being tendered the Misses Hamilton during their visit.

* * *

Mrs. Franklin P. Oliver and children will accompany Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Taylor on Monday evening in the latter's private car for an extended visit to Washington and other Eastern cities.

* * *

Miss Alma Stanley and Miss Bessie Fitzpatrick, of Boston, a frequent and popular visitor here, are enjoying a delightful stay in Europe. The two girls, with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fitzpatrick, of Boston, who are touring Europe in their motor car, recently made an extensive trip in Italy, with a week's stay at Lake Como. Miss Fitzpatrick's parents will join the party this week, and they will resume their tour.

* * *

MRS. ARNOLD BROYLES and Miss Francis Broyles have returned home from Culver, Ind., where Mrs. Broyles went to enter her son, Norris, in summer school. Elijah Brown, Jr., and Marcellus Butler also are at Culver this season.

Mr. and Mrs. Broyles, Miss Louise Broyles and Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Hinman left Thursday for a trip in the West, where they will visit Yellowstone Park, the Grand Canyon and other places of interest. They will be away for several weeks.

* * *

A LOVELY young visitor from New York who is being tendered a series of informal parties, is Miss Augusta Pearce. Miss Pearce is spending some time with her aunt, Mrs. Forrest Adair, in Druid Hill's, and has been the central figure in a number of the week's informal parties.

Having frequently visited Mrs. Adair, Miss Pearce is identified with the younger social set, and she is always cordially welcomed on her visits to Atlanta.

LITTLE MARY BROWN SPALDING entertained eight of her friends at a picnic party at her home on Ashby Street in celebration of her eleventh birthday on Friday at noon.

A regular picnic lunch basket was packed, with the conventional "bucket of lemonade," and they went as far as the scuppernong arbor, "not to return to the 'Homestead' for anything until the picnic time should be over." The guests included little Misses Ann Lane Newell, Elinor Gay, Marcelle Robinson, Ellen Newell, Louise Gay, Inez Fuller, Elizabeth Irwin, Annette Gay and Constance and Frances Connally Spalding.

* * *

MRS. FRANK NORTH entertained at a children's party Thursday afternoon at her home on Myrtle Street for her little daughter's, Beatrice, tenth birthday. The house was decorated in pink and white, a plateau of pink sweet peas adorning the table in the dining room, where the beautiful embossed birthday cake was cut. During the afternoon games were played and appropriate favors were given. Thirty-five little folks were guests.

* * *

MRS. PHILIP ALSTON was hostess at a bridge party Thursday afternoon at her home on the Prado, Ansley Park.

Quantities of goldenglow and crystal vases holding brown-eyed susans furnished a decoration. Attractive prizes were given; an English print and a late novel. Mrs. Alston received her guests wearing a gown of pale blue crepe draped over a petticoat of shadow lace. The guests of the occasion included 30 of the young married set.

LITTLE Miss Katharine Howell celebrated her third birthday with a patriotic party Monday afternoon at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Howell, on Gordon Street.

Fourth of July banners and red, white and blue emblems formed the gay decorations, and appropriate souvenirs were given the guests.

Forty children enjoyed the occasion.

* * *

MISS LOUISE DOBBS gave a box party Monday afternoon at the Forsyth in compliment to Miss Dodo White's house party. The guests included Misses Alice Jones, of Birmingham; Cleta Slagle, of Clarkes, La.; Elizabeth Stubbs, of Shreveport, and Helen Dunn, of Lake Providence, La.; Marion Neal, Marie Cobb, and Marion Wooley.

* * *

THE Inman Park residence of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Pierce was the scene of an informal party Thursday afternoon, when Mrs. Pierce entertained for her guests, Mrs. C. H. Pepper, of Columbia, S. C., and Mrs. W. C. Cook, of Chattanooga.

Cut flowers and ferns adorned the apartments, and bridge was played on the porch, where growing plants and ferns were the decorations. Silk hose and hand-painted china were given for top score and for consolation.

Mrs. Pierce wore pink charmeuse satin for the afternoon. Mrs. Pepper wore white crepe, and Mrs. Cook was gowned in black chiffon over white silk. The hostess was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. S. C. Prim, Mrs. Frank Winecoff and Miss Susie Mae Parks.

Mrs. Pierce's guests included Mrs. W. C. Alexander, Mrs. Harry Anderson, Mrs. T. J. Butler, Mrs. George R. Black, Mrs. H. M. Boutelle, Mrs. William M. Bearden, Mrs. John Cunningham, Mrs. Edwin Camp, Mrs. S. S. Dudley, Mrs. J. T. Daniel, Mrs. J. Z. Elliott, Mrs. Mercer Fain, Mrs. St. Julien Freeman, Mrs. W. J. Hodges, Mrs. Jack Hastings, Mrs. R. F. Weathers, Mrs. George Clayton, Mrs. Arthur Bramburg, Mrs. Whitely, Mrs. N. L. Post, Mrs. T. K. Johnson, Miss Post, of Troy, N. Y., Bessie Small and Miss Nora Ingram.

where it starts

School children are quick and easy prey to the "stoop habit." With the "young shoot," however, it is not so much a habit as it is a natural inclination. They are too young to realize just exactly what pride or poise is, and go on from day to day for a period of seven to twelve years poring over their books, unconscious of the "stoop" that is stealthily settling its clutches on the youthful frame. The bent shoulders become more bent as age increases.

The "KOMFORT BRACE"

Should be worn by all children to constantly prevent the inclination to "stoop," and, by keeping the chest extended, encourage and necessitate "deep breathing," the foremost law of perfect health. With the inclination to stoop stopped, DEEP BREATHING rapidly becomes a perfectly natural function. "Train up a child in the way it should go, and when he GROWS up he will not depart from it" can be paraphrased to read "grow" instead of "go," and aptly, too, as the axiom applies to hygiene, as well as "morals."

Instruct us to mail you our letter of full particulars and illustrated descriptive folder about the "KOMFORT BRACE."

The "Komfort Brace" is for sale by all leading stores or will be sent postpaid on receipt of price, $1.50. Money refunded if not satisfactory. Address

ENGRAVED WEDDING INVITATIONS

A wedding is the most important event in a girl's life.

Naturally she wants, and should have, engraved invitations or announcements which are ultra-fashionable and correct in every detail.

Requirments and fashions change frequently. What was perfectly correct last year may be considered bad form this season.

Our engraving is noted for its smoothness and beauty. All engraving orders are looked after by a member of the Company. He is considered an authority on society engraving. It is his business to personally see that every little detail is correct. Our reputation depends upon his ability to do this, and you can rest assured your order will have our conscientious and prompt attention.

Call and let us show you our work, or write for samples, price-list and illustrated catalog.

OLD-FASHIONED ROSE BEAD NECKLACE REVIVED.

A BEAUTIFUL and old-fashion idea was carried out after the wedding of one of the nieces of Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, several months ago, when the petals of white roses from the bride's bouquet were gathered and made into a string of rose beads.

Long ago, when the present generation's grandmothers weer girls, rose beads were in vogue. The petals of the flowers were gathered, put into a mortar, pounded until they became a pulp, then rolled into balls, carved while malable, strung and finished with a gold clasp. Indefinitely the rose beads retain the delicate odor of the roses, and they vary in color from light brown to black, according to the variety of roses used.

Mrs. George Sharp, of this city, one of the pioneer women, has a string of rose beads that she made more than 65 years ago, when she was a little girl, and the beads are still as fragrant as when first made.

Mrs. A. McD. Wilson wears a string of rose beads, and there are several other necklaces of rose beads in the city.

CLUB WOMEN'S INTEREST IN ART STIMULATED.

THERE has been a widespread interest in art among the women of the General Federation, and many new art clubs have been formed throughout the country. New art associations are forming constantly and with most of the new school buildings there are rooms set apart for the promotion of art.

At the head of the art department of the General Federation of Women's Clubs is Mrs. Melville F. Johnston, of Richmond, Ind. Mrs. Johnston believes in art for the masses, and that women's clubs can and do accomplish much good in popularizing the ideals of the art department—that is, in striving for simplicity and beauty in homes and cities; in urging the establishment of art associations, of art galleries in high schools and library buildings, and finally in educating the people to demand of the Government the recognition of the true place in our democratic civilization of art and the American artist.

One of the most important things about the art movements in the Federation is to teach an appreciation of art along with grammar, arithmetic and other studies in the public schools.

There has been a marked advance in art development in Atlanta in the past few years, and with Mrs. Sam Inman at the head and Mrs. Clarence Knowles, Mrs. John Marshall Slaton and Mrs. James Gilbert as her assistants, the general public taste has been improved.

The Atlanta Art Association has two hundred members. Last year the association gave a Lowell exhibit, Woodward lectures and a reproduction of the old masters at one of the local playhouses. Mrs. Osgood gave a series of lectures on art in the public schools, and a number of prizes were given to the children of the public schools for keeping the yards beautiful.

The object of the Atlanta Art Association is to eventually establish an art gallery in the city.

MISS WOOTEN TELLS OF LIBRARY MEETING.

MISS CATHERINE WOOTEN, head of the Carnegie Library, has returned from a delightful trip East. Miss Wooten attended the meeting of the American Library Association in New York, and has many interesting things to tell of the meeting, which was the largest ever held by the association.

"One of the stories told at the meeting by Albert Pratt, president of the National Burroughs Club, which I believe will greatly interest the Atlanta branch of that association, is that a celebrated sculptor made a plaster bust of John Burroughs and set it on the veranda of his studio to dry.

"When he went to look at his work next day, to his dismay he found the head of the statue drooped to one side. How it happened no one could imagine until the sculptor, while examining the top of the head, found that a little owl had rested there long enough to weigh the head down. The neck has never been straightened to the right angle of that statue, although the injury was not noticeable.

"Another interesting feature of the meeting was the talk by Mary Antin, author of that popular little book, 'The Promised Land.' Miss Antin is a young Jewess, of a decidedly appealing personality. She is small and charming as a speaker. She said that the emigrant does far more for the country to which he goes than the country does for him, and while you may not always agree with Miss Antin, you can not help but feel the charm of her.

"The hotel in which the association met seated 1,200 people, and the hotel is said to be one of the finest in the country, but any small mountain hotel in North Georgia is a palace compared to the accommodations there."

Miss Wooten was absent two weeks and spent some time in the Catskills while absent from Atlanta.

* * *

Miss Jennie R. Prentiss, Miss Mary Prentiss and Mrs. Prentiss, their mother, are spending the summer at Goshen, N. Y. Miss Jennie Prentiss is president of the Atlanta Branch of the Burroughs Nature Club, and is making some interesting and original plans for the fall programs, which begin when the club resumes its meetings.

* * *

Miss Laura Cobb Hutchins, well known in Atlanta as the frequent guest of her cousin, Mrs. Rutherford Lipscombe, has gone to Tallulah Falls for the summer. Miss Hutchins is prominent in the social club life of Athens, her home town.

* * *

Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, president of the Uncle Remus Memorial Association, is slightly indisposed at her apartments in the Marlborough.

* * *

Mrs. Charles Northen and family will spend the summer at her country home near Atlanta, and will entertain informally the younger contingent of society with several week-end parties. Miss Margaret Northen will be with her mother at the Northen country place.

* * *

MISS MAY SMITH, of Athens, will come to Atlanta early in the fall to spend the winter taking a special course in library work. Miss Smith is a member of the Drama League at Athens, and is on the membership committee. She recently took a leading part in "The Piper," which that organization presented under the auspices of the Drama League, with Miss Carolyn Cobb as director. Miss Smith is a member of several of the leading clubs at Athens and has been a greatly admired visitor to Atlanta.

MANY CLUBWOMEN TAKE SUMMER HOMES.

A NUMBER of well-known clubwomen have summer homes to which they have gone for the summer. Mrs. Oscar Pappenheimer has a lovely place at Roswell, one of the historic towns of Georgia, and there beside the Chattahoochee River she spends the heated term with her family.

Mrs. J. K. Ottley has a country place called Joyouse, where she goes for the summer months, and where she entertains hospitably in a quiet way.

Down on the Chattahoochee River, where there are lovely woodlands, Mrs. Albert Thornton has a summer house that has been the scene of many delightful house parties.

Mrs. Manson Wilson has a country place in the west end, several miles beyond Westview, where she is at present with her family.

Mrs. Manning Austin resides most of the year at her country place near Chamblee.

Mrs. John Marshall Slaton has a beautiful country home, where she will entertain when not in the Governor's Mansion.

Mrs. Tom Felder presides over a beautiful country home out the Peachtree Road, where she spends most of her time with her family.

Mrs. William Campbell goes to her country home near Clarkston every summer, where she remains with her family until fall.

Mrs. George King and Mrs. Joseph LeConte spend their summers at Clayton, in North Georgia, where they entertain hospitably at their country home.

Mrs. Henry Hunter Smith has a charming place called Wayside, near Macon, where she spends her summers.

LIBBY CIRCLE AIDS YOUNG FOREIGNER.

THE Libby Circle, King's Daughters, have been recently engaged in taking care of a foreigner, a young man who is incurably ill, and to add to the fund with which they are supplying him with the necessary attentions a rummage sale was held during the week, from which a nice sum was raised. Many contributions were given by the merchants of Atlanta, and the ladies of the Libby Circle wish to express their gratitude for the assistance they have received in this manner.

The young man in question is without friends or relatives in Atlanta.

Mrs. David Crockett has returned from Wrightsville, where she spent two weeks. Mrs. Crockett assisted her sister, Mrs. Eugene Mitchell, at the afternoon tea given her mother, Mrs. John Stephens, and the women of the Pioneer Society Wednesday afternoon.

* * *

Mrs. Julius DeGive and her sister, Miss Bessie Westmoreland, are in Nacoochee Valley for a few weeks.

* * *

Mrs. Arnold Broyles will tour California during July and August.

* * *

Mrs. Thomas Hinman has gone to California to spend several weeks. She will visit Yellowstone Park.

* * *

Mrs. Dick Smith is enjoying a camping life up in the mountains of North Carolina with her family.

* * *

Mrs. Lott Warren gave a pretty dinner party Wednesday evening in compliment to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sheffield, the guests of Mrs. Henry Collier.

* * *

Mrs. Ida B. McClellan is indisposed at her home in Westminster Park.

* * *

Mrs. Henry Porter is at St. Simons Island for a few weeks.

* * *

Mrs. Henry Collier will go to Atlantic City for the remainder of the summer.

* * *

Mrs. Eugene Black, a prominent member of the Order of Old Fashioned Women, will spend the heated season in the North.

* * *

Friends of Miss Josephine Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Valentine Davis, will regret to know she is quite sick with typhoid fever.

* * *

Mrs. John Sanders was the guest of her father, Captain J. R. Wylie, last week. Mrs. Sanders has gone to Philadelphia for a few weeks, and will return to her home in Houston next month.

* * *

Friends of Mrs. H. L. Tutweller will be glad to know that she is greatly improved from a recent illness.

* * *

Mrs. Charles Frederick Tyler has sold her home in Inman Park, and will go out to Los Angeles in August to spend several months with her sister, who is pleasantly remembered in Atlanta, where she has frequently visited.

* * *

Miss Nona Martin, with her niece, Miss Antoinette Blackburn, will leave Atlanta next week for Savannah, where they will take a boat for New York, spending some time in New York City and several weeks in the Adirondacks.

CLUB WOMEN WORK FOR DEMOCRATIC SUCCESS.

WHEN the Southern Woman's Wilson-Marshall League was promoted Mrs. Walter P. Andrews was made president. She was assisted by the most prominent women in the State in aiding in the campaign that put Mr. Wilson and Mr. Marshall at the head of affairs in the White House. The Woman's League was a pretty compliment to Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Marshall and had its influence.

Mrs. Lindsay Johnson, of Rome, was made chairman of the league at Rome, and Mrs. J. O'Keefe Nelson chairman-at-large from Georgia.

Mrs. Nelson has some interesting experiences to relate, as she is perhaps one of the few, if not the only woman in the city who was active at the polls that day, her poll work being done at Clayton, where she was spending the fall.

Mrs. Nelson said she was working all day, talking and trying to divert the Roosevelt and Taft men and make them cast their votes for Wilson. "It was an experience," said Mrs. Nelson, "that I will always remember. I was glad, though, that I was at Clayton instead of Atlanta, for I was scared.

"You see political work for women at the polls is new in this part of the country. Well, long before the day was advanced the mountaineers began to gather in the town and the grounds around the voting precinct were crowded with teams, men and horses. I talked all day for Wilson, and when the polls closed I felt as though I had been repaid, and that after all the polls are not such a bad place as women naturally suppose."

MRS. MITCHELL HOSTESS OF PIONEER WOMEN.

WEDNESDAY afternoon Mrs. Eugene Mitchell entertained the Pioneer Women of Atlanta, in honor of her mother, Mrs. John Stephens, who is one of the most interesting and valued members of that association.

The Mitchell home is new and in the most fashionable part of the Peachtree Road, and is an ideal place for entertainment. On the occasion of the tea the house was beautifully decorated with yellow cannas, zineas and marigolds, and quantities of palms and ferns.

Mrs. Mitchell received the guests wearing a white charmeuse draped with yellow chiffon and trimmed with pearls, and Mrs. Stephens, the honoree, wore a cloth of gold, over which was worn a gray and black lace drapery of dainty pattern.

A charming informality characterized the reception, and the resolutions of thanks offered by Mrs. Joseph Morgan in behalf of the Pioneer Women to Mrs. V. P. Sisson, for the lovely picnic given at the Sissons' country home, for the generous courtesy of The Georgian and Sunday American in exploiting the organization, and for the valuable assistance of Mr. Joseph Wusthoff rendered at the June picnic, were adopted.

Miss Catherine Wooten, honorary member of the association, was called upon to make a short talk, as was Mrs. William Lawson Peel and Mrs. Marie Louise Myrick, of Savannah, who is the guest of Mrs. Annie Mays Dow.

After the preliminary speeches the musical program was opened by Miss Hortense Moran, who rendered several piano solos. Mrs. Annie Mays Dow sang "Tender and True" and "Kathleen Mavourneen," the program concluding with an original recitation from Mrs. Robert Blackburn, another honorary member of the association. Delicious refreshments were served after the program was ended.

The guests included the members of the Woman's Pioneer Society and a number of friends of Mrs. Mitchell and Mrs. Stephens.

This is the third afternoon reception tendered the Pioneer Women this season, the first being given by Mrs. Lucy Ivey at her home out the Peachtree Road in the spring, and the second by Mrs. Frank P. Rice at her home in West Peachtree Street in June.

CLUB PERSONALS.

Mrs. Carlton Miller will go to Asheville, N. C., for the remainder of the summer, leaving Atlanta next week.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Strong, with their little daughter, Nell Baker, and Miss Em Baker will leave Saturday for the Highlands, where they will spend a month at the Hall House.

Miss Annie Sykes Rice is the guest of friends at Clayton for several weeks.

Miss Callie Williams, who has been ill at her home in Spring Street, is slowly improving.

MRS. MYRICK PROMINENT CLUB WOMAN VISITOR.

ONE of the distinguished clubwomen visiting in Atlanta at present is Mrs. Marie Louise Myrick, of Savannah, formerly of Americus. Mrs. Myrick is regarded as one of the most astute woman politicians in the South, and during the time she edited and owned The Americus Times-Recorder was a political power in her section of the State.

Mrs. Myrick was at one time president of the Woman's Press Club in Georgia when that organization was accounted the most influential and powerful body of women in the State, and was part of the General Federation and International League of Press Clubs, which was entertained as guests of the Woman's Press Club of Georgia on its first and only visit to the South.

Several years ago Mrs. Myrick sold her interest in The Times-Recorder and removed to Savannah, where her son, Shelby Myrick, is living. After a few weeks spent in Atlanta, Mrs. Myrick will go to Sewanee for the remainder of the summer.

SOCIAL TEN GIVEN FOR U. D. C. BUILDING FUND.

THE first of a series of Social Tens to be given by the Atlanta Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, for the building fund of a proposed chapter house, was held at the residence of Mrs. J. T. Derry recently.

The Social Ten was inaugurated by Mrs. Helen Plane, founder of the Atlanta Chapter, and a number of the members of the organization have agreed to give these delightful entertainments during the summer. Ten friends are invited to come for a cup of tea or some light refreshments, to bring her sewing or some interesting story or music to add to the pleasure of the guests, and ten cents to add to the building fund of the chapter. Later in the fall a big bazar will be given by the U. D. C. Other forms of entertainment will follow for the benefit of the chapter house. Mrs. Derry entertained twenty guests at her Social Ten.

D. A. R. CHAPTER ORGANIZED AT FORSYTH.

A NEW chapter of the D. A. R. was organized on the Fourth of July at Forsyth, by Mrs. R. P. Brooks, regent of the Atlanta Piedmont Chapter, with fourteen members. Mrs. John O. Ponder was made regent. In the early fall application for a charter will be made, and the new chapter will begin its work with enthusiasm.

On the occasion of the organization of the chapter an interesting program of patriotic songs and recitations was presented, with talks from Mrs. Brooks and Mrs. Ponder.

After the business session there was a social feature to the afternoon, when refreshments were served.

MRS. WUSTHOFF WRITES OF ATLANTA PIONEERS.

MRS. JOSEPH WUSTHOFF, recording secretary of the Woman's Pioneer Society, has moved into her new home, 810 Piedmont Avenue. Mrs. Wusthoff has been contributing some valuable and interesting reminiscent articles to the archives of the society. She is a sister of Mrs. Anthony Murphy and Mrs. Jerome Simmons, and has many personal stories of historical interest to relate concerning Atlanta in her earlier days.

MISS WOOTEN RIDES WITH ROOSEVELT ON BUS.

SPEAKING of her recent visit to New York and the Catskills, Miss Catherine Wooten said: "The most democratic thing I saw was Theodore Roosevelt riding on a bus with the ordinary traveler. He paid his fare like the rest of us, sat there almost unrecognized and entirely without ostentation, and when he came to his destination got off, walked up the street and disappeared.

"Several years ago had he appeared upon the streets he would have been the observed of all observers. He would have been attended perhaps by a private detective or two, and everybody would have been looking at him. As it was, he got on the bus, paid his fare and got off, and I think but a few people knew who he was. His companion looked like Mr. Strauss, at least like the pictures I have seen of him. The situation struck me as being thoroughly democratic."

COSMOS FLOWER NOW BEING GROWN IN ATLANTA.

MISS MAY HOLLAND has blooming in her garden in East Fair Street this summer a beautiful variety of cosmos, which is something new in Atlanta flower gardens. It is the yellow cosmos, and the color is a warm, golden shade. Sometime the flower is called the wind-spirit, although it is a hardy plant and returns with each spring.

MISS PETERS GROWS PROLIFIC BLACKBERRY VINE.

ONE of the largest and most prolific hymalean blackberry vines ever grown in Atlanta is in the garden of Miss Ellen Peters, on Forrest Avenue, who is known as one of the best woman gardeners in the city. Last year Miss Peters made her garden famous by its enormous tomatoes, which were irrigated by a method entirely her own.

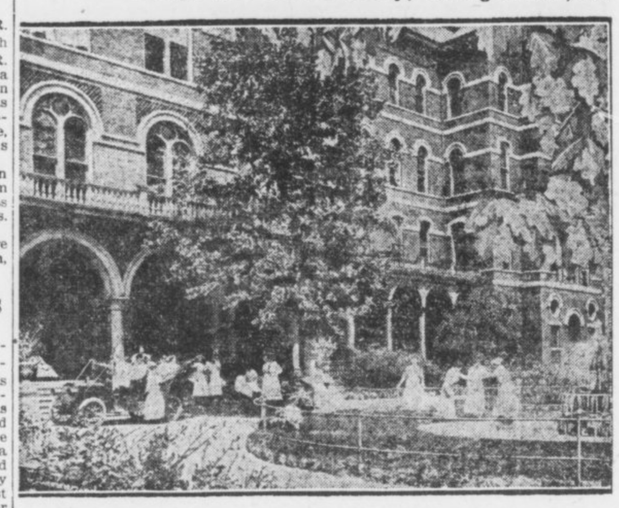
Three years ago she planted three blackberry vines, and this year some of the runners measure about 20 feet, having 50 and 60 clusters of berries to the runner, each cluster bearing about 30 berries.

This variety of berry has invariably tailed the gardeners in this city, and with but a few exceptions they have not grown at all.

Miss Peters is a clubwoman who believes in systematic and comprehensive gardening, and her poppy beds, tomatoes, and unusually tall and prolific corn have been some of the features of her garden.

It is her pleasure to work her garden herself, and after the ground is made ready in the spring no other hands dig, prune or gather the fruitage thereof.

Home Again From the Chert Road, COX College and Conservatory, College Park, Ga.



The hour before tea is one of the most pleasant memories the Cox College girl takes with her through life. Strenuous in work, strenuous in play, she relaxes at the witching hour and enjoys informal and careless chatter with her companions. The automobile has unloaded its last passengers, the tennis and basket-ball games are halted because of the growing dark, the walking parties are all in, and the play of the fountain forms a sweet accompaniment to the merry laughter and soft-voiced babble.

Salubrious climate, beautiful environment, strong and exacting courses of study, pleasant recreation make life at Cox College a joy and a never ending source of mental development and vigor.

Several car loads of material for the marble steps have been received and two flights have already been completed. The dormitory building is being renovated from bottom to top. New as well as former students will appreciate these improvements.

A certificate or diploma from this institution is valuable, since Cox College has stood for seventy years in the front rank of colleges for women. To-day its equipment is modern, its faculty strong, its courses of study with its high standards of work are well adapted to the modern requirements of the education of young women.

SOCIETY in the CHURCHES

FIRST BAPTIST.

The Missionary Circle of the First Baptist Church will continue its work during the summer. Mrs. Bun Wylie, the chairman, is away for several months, and Mrs. E. A. Jones has been appointed to take her place during her absence. The society had its last meeting Tuesday afternoon. The next will be August 12, the Second Tuesday in each month being the regular date for services.

CENTRAL BAPTIST.

Dr. Caleb A. Ridley, pastor of the Central Baptist Church, has been in Monticello the past week, where he has been holding a protracted meeting at the Baptist Church there.

CENTRAL CONGREGATIONAL.

The Atlanta Woman's Missionary Society, supporting the Travelers' Aid work, held a meeting Wednesday afternoon at the Central Congregational Church. Reports of the splendid work being done by matrons at the railroad stations were given, the meeting being full of interest to the ladies present.

* * *

GRACE METHODIST.

Dr. C. O. Jones will have charge of the services in the church to-day, both morning and evening, after an absence of several weeks.

Mrs. John S. Cook entertained the teachers and officers of the primary department of the Sunday school Friday evening at her home on Angier Avenue. Mrs. Cook has just been elected superintendent of this department, to succeed Mrs. S. E. Allbright.

A discussion on the plans for the ensuing year was of the uppermost importance that evening. The class is divided into three grades and it studies the International Graded Lessons. Most of the schools in the city have adopted this system and all seem to like this better than the older method.

Plans are being made to form a Sunday School Teachers' Union on the North Side of the city, all denominations to be represented.

CATHOLIC MISSION.

An entertainment is being planned for Wednesday evening, July 16, at the Catholic Mission on North Boulevard. There will be a program of music, readings, etc., and later refreshments will be served. The hours are from 8:30 to 10:30, and a general patronage is asked by the ladies interested.

Mrs. T. J. Sears is chairman of a committee having the entertainment in charge. The proceeds will go towards furnishing a dormitory for the Sisters of the Sacred Heart upon their arrival in the city.

GEORGIA LIBBY CIRCLE.

The Georgia Libby Circle of King's Daughters and Sons held a meeting Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. Goree, at 1080 DeKalb Ave. Mrs. D. A. Russell is secretary of this circle.

UNIVERSALIST.

The Dean Guild of the Universalist Church held its regular monthly meeting last Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. C. Sanford, 142 Peeples Street.

SECOND BAPTIST.

Miss Cora Brown entertained the members of the Alumnae Association of the Teachers' Training Class of the Sunday school of the Second Baptist Church on Monday afternoon at her home on Pryor Street at a 5 o'clock tea.

The house was beautifully decorated for the occasion with roses and other garden flowers.

Fifteen members were present and they discussed the next philanthropic the association should undertake. No decision was made, but they probably will devote their energies toward the education of some girl.

After dispensing with business the party was served with salads and ices on the cool, wide veranda.

ST. MARK METHODIST.

Last Thursday afternoon, July 10, the Sunday school room of St. Mark Methodist Church was used as the meeting place for the Piedmont Temperance Union at 4 o'clock, this being the regular monthly service.

One of the largest affairs in church circles last week was the ice cream festival given by the members of the Young People's Missionary Society, No. 2, of St. Mark Church.

The festival was given on the church lawn, tables being placed on the grass, about which were seated congenial groups who enjoyed the ices, cakes, candies and fruit punch prepared by the members.

A fancywork table was a feature, and the affair netted a nice sum for the members of this society, of which Miss Annie Winship Bates is president.

The young people were assisted in entertaining by a group of married friends, who included Mrs. Elizabeth Winship Bates, Mrs. George Muse, Mrs. W. O. Winn, Mrs. Arthur Montgomery, Mrs. C. C. McGehee, Mrs. James W. Austin, Mrs. A. N. Hughlett, Mrs. L. L. Shivers, Mrs. George Eubanks, Mrs. W. O. Foote, Mrs. J. W. Goldsmith, Mrs. W. C. Humphries, Mrs. Quinn Slaughter, Mrs. John S. Owens, Mrs. Hugh Lokey, Mrs. Lott Warren, Mrs. Joseph McCord, Mrs. Wharton Wilson, Mrs. Graham Williams and Mrs. S. F. Boykin.

DALTON, July 12.—Complimenting Miss Eugenia Bitting, whose wedding to Dr. H. L. Jarvis will take place July 23, Mrs. W. C. Fincher and Miss Louise Sutherland were joint hostesses at a "42" party at the residence of Mrs. W. C. Fincher Wednesday afternoon.

Miss Marion Craven, of Dallas, was the guest of honor at a matinee party at which Miss Margaret Showalter was hostess Tuesday afternoon. Friday afternoon Miss Melba Showalter was hostess at a matinee party in her honor.

Miss Nell Wright entertained at heart-dice Thursday evening, the affair being a compliment to her house guest, Miss Fannie Black, of Calhoun. Friday afternoon Miss Nannie Copeland entertained at heart-dice in honor of Miss Wright's guest.

Two affairs of the week-end were the bridge and "42" parties at which Mrs. S. N. McWilliams entertained.

The Selvidge Street aMtrons' Club met with Mrs. J. P. Godwin Thursday afternoon.

The entertainment given under the auspices of the Governor John Milledge Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution in the City Park School Auditorium Friday evening attracted a large crowd. The Atlanta troop of Boy Scouts, under Scoutmaster Everett, were guests of the chapter at the entertainment.

Complimenting her guest, Miss Harriett Reeves, Mrs. M. L. Gudger entertained at a matinee party Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. John C. Sweeton, of Bridgeton, N. J., are guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Hollingsworth.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Locke Brown left to-day for Cohutta Springs, where they will camp for several days. They will be joined there by Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Chipley, of Greenwood, S. C.

Misses Carolyn and Emery Kirby are spending a fortnight at Tybee.

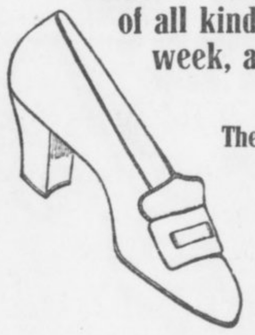
These are not simply $5.00 shoes; but they are Allen's special value $5.00 shoes. Exclusive designs, such as you can buy only at Allen's. They are all grouped together according to leather, and if we can not find your size in just what you first pick out, we can offer you a very good substitute that you will like just as well. These are comprised of all the fashionable materials, black suede, black satin, black velvet, blue and gray suede, patent leather, gun metal, tan Russia calf, vici kid, white buckskin and white Sea Island canvas. We can not buy them wholesale for what we offer them at to-day.

There are also about fifteen styles in various materials which we are going to offer Monday at $1.95 a pair. These are regular $3.50, $4.00 and some $5.00 values. They are black satin, patent leather, gun metal, tan and suedes of all kinds. The great sale of white shoes will be continued another week, and you can buy a pair of white shoes in any style at a great reduction.



The regular stock is reduced from 50 cents to $1.50 a pair, while the discontinued styles are grouped at either $1.95 or $2.45 a pair. The tan shoes are all offered at either $2.95, $3.95 or $4.95 a pair, except those listed above, which are either $1.95 or $2.95. It is needless to say that at the prices we are offering our white and tan low shoes and those additional styles in black materials, that Monday and all next week should be one of the busiest in our history.

Every pair of these shoes can be worn until October, and some of them later.

This style in White Buckskin or Tan Calf, $5 value, $2.95. White Canvas, $2.45.

This style in Black, Tan or White, $5 Value, $2.95.

FOR MILADY'S WARDROBE

By MME. HAUTE MONDE.

AMONG the novelties promised for autumn is brocaded moire. This is described as moire cloth with brocaded satin floral figures in old French designs. Brocaded crepe de chine, which was a conspicuous offering this spring, promises to be a favorite material for evening gowns. In the heavier materials all "pile fabrics," including velvets, chinchillas, plushes and velours de laine, are going to be worn.

* * *

Black charmeuse is enjoying continued popularity this summer. The detailed accounts of the gowns worn by the most fashionable women at the French and the English races have fairly bristled with the word "black." A "black charmeuse with embroidered coatee," a "black satin with lace tunic," a "black Chantilly lace over white tulle," a "black mousseline and white tulle," a "black charmeuse with black and cream lace," a "black charmeuse draped with creamy lace and an overdress of black net;" these are a few of the costumes reported.

* * *

Fashionable blouses are of mousseline of tulle (net) with the indispensable frill of the wired ruffle forming a careless Medici collar. A genuine novelty is the tallored net blouse. It sounds impossible, but it was really extremely attractive. It is made of two thicknesses of the net and all the seams are of the openwork stitching. It has a notched revers or collar forming a pointed opening at the neck, and the sleeves are long, with regular shirtwaist cuffs, turned back at the wrist and fastening with link buttons.

* * *

Quite a novelty are the new satin-finished beaver hats of a modified sailor shape, with a rather narrow straight brim and somewhat high rounded crown. The most attractive ones are in white; but they are shown in black also. They are generally trimmed with a grosgrain band to match, having a picot edge and tied in a flat bow, with several loops, directly in the back.

* * *

The persistent vogue of the soft satin crown has been one of the surprises of the season. It was a pronounced feature of the early millinery, and achieved such immediate popularity that it was very soon avoided by careful buyers. But after suffering a temporary eclipse it has reappeared in white, with a white straw brim or else a white satin brim faced with colored straw. The trimming is usually an upstanding "palm tree" feather in white or a chic bow of white grosgrain or moire ribbon.

* * *

Not only the women who are largely developed go in for brassieres, but those also who wish to achieve the new figure in the easiest way. The modern corsets stop about two inches above the natural waist line in front, and about three inches and a half in the back. A very slim figure can depend on these supports alone, but the majority of women use a brassiere instead of a corset cover. The truth is that the latter garment is going away as the muslin petticoat did; and as knickers are taking the place of the petticoat, so are brassieres taking the place of the ribboned and ruffled corset cover of fine handiwork.

* * *

A new skirt for outing wear, especially suitable for tennis, is made of cotton corduroy, pique or linen. It appears to be made of the prevailing narrow lines, which would make the running and jumping necessary in tennis impossible. But when its wearer reaches the tennis court, she unbuttons the side seams from the hem up for several inches, and behold! many pleats thus liberated give her ample room for all the activity she desires.

* * *

Crepe de chine and China silk blouses are worn by the tennis player. They are made with flat Byron collars, some of them with deep, comfortable V-necks. Some of them are made with a yoke and are shirred into the yoke over a cord. White is the color usually worn.

* * *

Sweet simplicity should rule dress for country wear. Clever little frocks may be easily fashioned. Two to four-gore skirts are attached to more or less kimono blouses. Front fastenings may be from the chin down.

For afternoon, however, there are more ornate affairs. Plain voile skirts, with little flowered tunics, for instance, or white linen, silk or cloth dresses, with coats of gold, cerise, rose, emerald, black or blue taffeta, satin or wool, are very smart for fine country wear.

For golf, tennis and ordinary country house wear, however, white is first choice. There are simple white dresses and endless skirts of white linen and cotton Bedford cord, with which are worn sheer white waists. And this, indeed, has been almost the uniform of womankind during the last few summers. To some it is not becoming, but if both the skirt and the waist be perfectly fitted and good-looking they certainly look well on the majority of women and girls. This year the shirtwaist girl must divide honors with the one-piece-dress girl.

* * *

The color goes a long way toward giving a cool and refreshing air to a frock. There are certain colors that absorb the heat rays. For this reason many women viewed with alarm the vogue for brilliant colors this spring. Their fears, fortunately, have proved groundless, for as the hot days approach white and the soft pastel shades are prevailing over the bright reds, greens and yellows. The bolder, brighter colors are reflected merely from the sash or girdle of a white frock.

* * *

Net is everywhere. Petticoats, breakfast and bedroom caps, negligees of all sorts, blouses, frocks, coats, hats and parasols—all are made of and adorned with net. One of the newest ways to use net is to combine it in the form of insets with heavy white corded silk as a coat. The net is gored and colored and the silk is cut away beneath it. The broad band of soutache braid which edges the coat is broken with these little insets, each of them outlined with scrolls of braid.

* * *

Petticoats and pegnoirs to match are made of allover lace, unlined, of course. The pegnoir is untrimmed, excepting for a band of tiny embroidered pink and blue roses about the sleeve and neck and an upstanding frill of narrow lace outlining the V-neck. The petticoat is finished with a hem of pink chiffon, and the pegnoir and petticoat both can be worn over a handkerchief chiffon slip or under bodice and petticoat.

* * *

It is only natural that with the enlarged waist line should come the careless girdle; a belt which is loosely wrapped around the figure without any pretense of trying to make the waist look small or restrain the figure. These girdles dominate the fashions of the day. They may be of the material of the gown, of another material in a contrasting color, or of ribbon, checked, plain or striped.

* * *

The sashes of July are extra wide and unboned, but they are far more apt to go high on the figure than low, which is the striking difference between them and the oriental girdle. The largeness of the waist line and that whole part of the figure from bust to waist is now covered by these loose folds of soft material which are finished in the back with a crushed butterfly bow or shirred buckle or flattened streamers which are pleated at the top and hang to the knees.

* * *

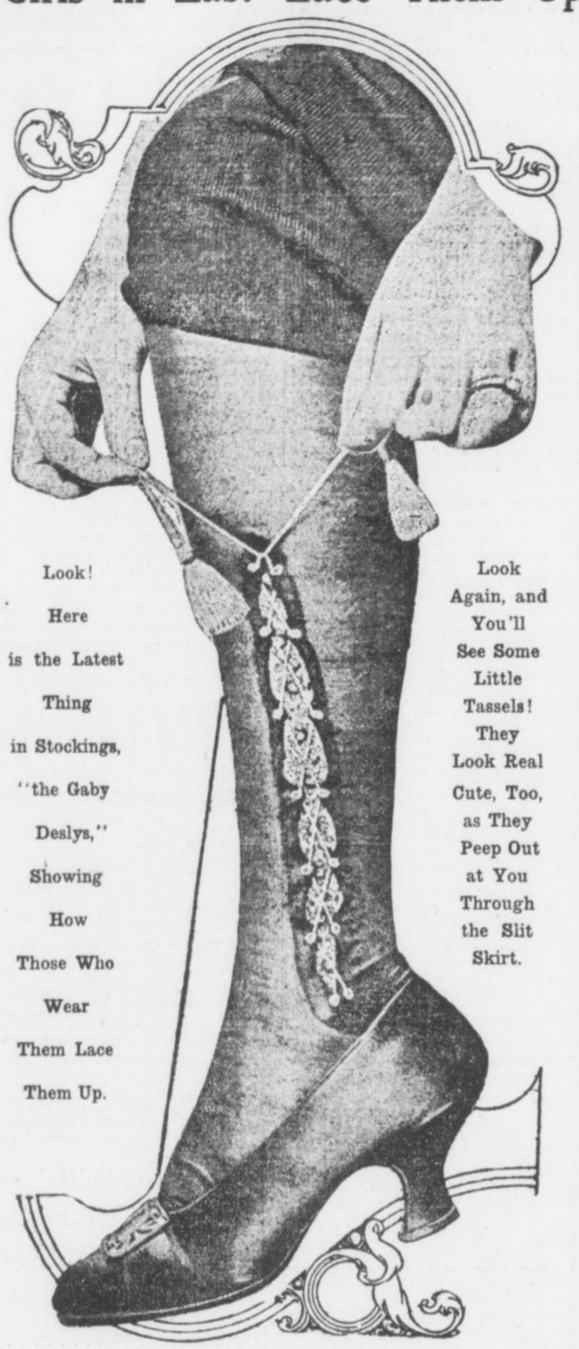
Some of the newest evening shoes are made of pearl gray satin outlined with very small rose diamonds. These pale gray shoes are exceedingly becoming and they are worn with cobweb silk stockings in the palest shade of gray which have traceries in silver threads running up the fronts.

* * *

Very large sums of money are now spent on shoes and stockings for afternoon and evening wear. The gowns of the present day are cut in such a way that they display the feet and ankles freely, with the result that the cost of shoes and stockings has increased enormously. For wear with ball dresses some ultra smart Parisiennes vote in favor of lace stockings traced over with diamond sparks

Slit Stocking Is Latest Shocker

Girls in East Lace Them Up



Fair Atlantans Are Expected to Adopt "the Gaby Deslys" in Contrasting Shades.

Have you seen those stockings with the tantalizing, teasing slit on each side that lace with the cutest tassels and string that fashion ever devised?

They are all the rage in the East and every Atlanta girl who is really up to snuff will soon have one or more pairs in her wardrobe.

Just imagine having to LACE up your stockings TWICE, that is four times for the two stockings. It means a peck of trouble for every fair debutante who means to keep up to date in hosiery, BUT—

Remember that these stockings are none of your common clockwork kind, but each has the most fascinating slit on either side of the leg, a slit carefully hemmed with silk thread with lace holes, a half a dozen or more, up and down each side, through which the lacing runs.

And here's the real feature of the slit stocking. If it's a white stocking the lacing with the flossy tassels at the ends are RED or GREEN or any color that suits, save WHITE. Then again if the stocking is black the lacings are white or a contrasting shade.

And THAT'S what makes the "Gaby Deslys hose"—for that's the name that the slit stocking has been given—the most bewitching and attractive bit of feminine finery ever conceived.

REST GOWN IS NOW ESSENTIAL FOR WARDROBE

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—No smart woman can now afford to go to a country house without a few very beautiful "rest gowns." These were formerly known as tea gowns, but they are now so elaborate that they are worn in the interval before dinner after a day's motoring or sport and are not meant for the bedroom or boudoir.

Many of the kimono rest gowns come direct from Japan, and the designs and coloring are gorgeous. Lady Arlington, who is a mature beauty of the Oriental type, has ordered some of these rest gowns, which are likely to be the envy of her sex when she goes visiting.

One gown, made of Japanese crepe de chine, is pale mist-gray lined with the softest wistaria mauve silk. Over the gown are worked great dropping sprays of wistaria in mauve silk shaded as delicately as a Japanese painting, the leaves and long, curling tendrils being embroidered in pale almond green silks as a contrast.

The arrangement of these sprays is wonderful and could only have been carried out by an artist. The gown is, of course, in kimono form, the great bag sleeves being edged with strand silk and silk tassels. Another gown is of pale water blue silk, with ragged chrysanthemums worked over it in faint creamery pink wistaria and leaves of tender green and white.

The palest shell pink doubleurs give the finishing touches. Still another gown has the same pattern on a pink ground with a touch of black and white deftly introduced into the color scheme by means of a couple of tall storks, which form part of the picture and provide a strong contrast.

Trousseau Blouse Is Fad of English Bride

Charming Garments Are Worn on Her Honeymoon by Lady Cromer.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—Included in every bride's trousseau nowadays are a number of simple but very becoming blouses. Lady Gwenneth Ponsonby, a bride of the week, who married Lord Cromer's second son, is married some charming blouses on her honeymoon trip.

One is of striped pink and white zephyr, fashioned in the short style which is most popular now. It shows a new feature, which is very interesting in itself, namely, a return to the hard linen collar. The example in question is turned down in the manner of an eton. It borders the open throat of the shirt and is strapped with the narrowest line of zephyr, of which the latter is made. A soft navy blue silk bow appears at the throat, while there is a little patch pocket on the left side, into which is tucked a little hemstitched handkerchief.

Another blouse is carried out in soft mauve cotton voile, with a white collar worked in mauve soutache and a kind of bib of the same Mauve soutache in front. A black velvet ribbon is slipped underneath and loosely tied underneath, while the cuffs are in white cotton voile, to match collar, worked in mauve soutache.

Charles L. Wagner announces from Paris that he has engaged Yvette Guilbert for an American concert tour for the fall of 1914. She will appear in 30 concerts in ten weeks and receive $1,500 for each appearance.

Mr. Wagner has also engaged the Irish tenor, John McCormack, for two years on a profit-sharing basis. Mr. McCormack will receive a minimum of $1,500 for each performance. Mr. Wagner has applied to Lloyds for insurance of $250,000 on McCormack's life.

STAGE NOTES

TYPICAL midsummer attractions are offered at the Atlanta theaters, which are defying the heat and the calls to seacoast and mountain resorts.

The usual summer brand of vaudeville will be on at the Forsyth, with Valerie Bergere featured as the headliner. Miss Bergere appeared at the Grand last winter in "His Japanese Wife," and one of the distinctive vaudeville hits of the season was scored. She comes in a new playlet called "Judgment" and again brings an excellent supporting cast, according to advance advices.

At the Bijou tabloid musical comedy will continue, "Hotel a la Carte" being the bill. Miss Mamie Elmore is the star, and she is reputed to possess not only personal charm, but extraordinary talent as a dancer and singer.

Valerie Bergere Heads Forsyth Bill.

Great care has been exercised in the selection of Forsyth acts, and unusual skill has been called upon in the arrangement of the program.

Valerie Bergere's "Judgment," the headline offering at the Forsyth, is pronounced by the most active and exacting critics to be the greatest playlet in vaudeville. A magnificent stage setting will add to the attractiveness of the sketch, and the intense dramatic interest in the playlet will assure a hit.

The acts that have been selected to play on the same bill with Miss Bergere are the sort that have always been acceptable in Atlanta.

Principal among these features will be Les Gougets, a European musical duo. This will be the first American tour of the Gougets, and the vaudeville managers are predicting that the novelty will be one of the sensations of the season. M. Gouget will introduce the largest horns that have been used on a stage. His giant trumpet weighs 154 pounds and is 26 feet in length; his Jacob's Ladder cornet is eight feet long and is a wonderful instrument.

The Metropolitan Minstrels will be one of the popular numbers on the bill. This is a combination of pretty girls and lively boys who will present a tabloid minstrel show.

Clark and Verdi, Italian character comedians, promise a comedy treat. There is everything that is new in this style of entertainment used by the two fun makers. They possess the right quality of singing voices for vaudeville and they use the best material.

Work and Play, eccentric gymnasts, will offer a tumbling and all-round acrobatic act. The Shelvey Brothers, in contortion feats, will have something interesting and help to round out a perfect bill of variety.

One of the features of the bill will be the appearance of Britt Wood. This young man scored a hit at the Forsyth last summer that is still being talked about. Regular patrons will recall the awkward, rube-looking chap who did not seem to know how to get on the stage, but who soon commanded attention with eccentric dance and chatter and who then registered the hit of the season with an exhibition of "mouth harp" playing that was a revelation.

"Hotel a la Carte" Offering at Bijou.

Rapid-fire musical comedy, interspersed with clever specialty, a number of clever songs of the latest origin, an unusually pretty bunch of chorus girls and a cast of capable principals are some of the features that patrons of the Bijou are promised for their entertainment during the engagement of Kusel & Hexter's spectacular musical comedy, "Hotel a la Carte," this week.

The title of the piece would indicate a series of laughable situations, and with a vehicle of this character the entertainment would fall flat if the parts were not intrusted to the most capable artists. Miss Mamie Elmore impersonates the part of Flossie Spearmint. Miss Elmore, aside from being extremely pretty, is considered one of the cleverest dancing soubrettes on the American stage. Joe Scott is another clever individual who has been assigned a comedy role, that of bellboy in the hotel. Other clever people are Gordon Newman, Mason and Murray, Florence May, Cristine Ratelle, Marie Varellie, Jack Raymond, Walter Walheiser and others.

The usual daily matinees at 3 o'clock, with night shows at 7:30 and 9. On Monday and Saturday two matinees are given, at 2:30 and 4.

* * *

William Collier has become one of Charles Frohman's stars and will play in Richard Harding Davis' new play, "Who's Who?" to be produced in September. This is a three-act farce with its scenes laid in the West and in a Massachusetts town.

Mr. Collier formerly was a Frohman star and made one of his greatest successes in "The Dictator."

* * *

A United States District judge has decided that William Locke did not steal the essential idea in his play, "The Case of Becky," from Miss Aurelia Bachman's manuscript "Etelle," as Miss Bachman claimed in her plagiarism suit against the playwright and David Belasco, who produced "The Case of Becky."

A STROLL THROUGH SHOPLAND

by EVELYN WREN

TO cultivate our appreciation of the beautiful in art means constant enjoyment. To develop this power in a child gives double delight. The copies of the best masters need not be expensive. The prints might even be on sale at a dollar or two—yet their worth would be incalculable in daily influence.

We can prepare for visits to the most famous galleries. We can learn to love the best in art through association with copies of the pictures which have won recognition. We can even feel that the long-deferred trip to celebrated galleries has its compensations when we grow to know their merits through reproductions of their most cherished possessions.

To procure such reproductions for 89c is an advantage hitherto unknown. The group of framed pictures in Davison-Paxon-Stokes downstairs section proves that we need not bring up children with impossible pictures on the nursery walls. Would not a copy of "The New Madonna" inspire in them reverence for the mother-love which hourly influences their lives? Let the nursery rhyme pictures, which they cut from favorite magazines, be interspersed with copies of the pictures which have lasted for generations and will live long after our children have gone.

Silk remnants at half price may be procured for your comfortable kimono, elaborate petticoat, dainty gown or blouse. They appeal to the woman's creative genius. See them at Davison-Paxon-Stokes and let your imagination quickly fashion them into pretty garments ere your fingers touch their texture.

A white pique or ratine skirt with white blouse and white shoes makes the summer girl adorable. Could anything be neater, sweeter or more comfortable than girlishness all in white? The white skirts are new, fresh and stylish at J. P. Allen's. The prices range from one silver disk to five. They are in sizes for matron and maid and so pretty that both will be satisfied.

White and tan shoes are selling at reduced prices at Allen's. There is a great demand for them now and the stock is large. In this beautiful climate of Atlanta we can wear white shoes until October. The white shoes are all to be sold before October first to make way for the heavier winter shoes and that's the reason they reduce prices.

The wealth of magnificence in High's ready-to-wear department fairly dazzles one. The white frocks suggesting parties, weddings, fetes and dances seemed appropriately priced at $17.50, $14.50 and $12.50. Now these same pretty costumes, trimmed in the daintiest, most captivating ways, can be purchased for $5.95. They have waists at High's for $1.69. They have ratine dresses in the prettiest midsummer styles for $5.95. They have dresses which will fascinate, infatuate, enthrall, the feminine heart and she, best of all, can attain her heart's desire without a qualm of conscience.

If you have a kodak, visit High's and learn about the expeditious way they have of developing, printing and enlarging your kodak pictures. Have all the fun of taking the pictures and then have them developed free at High's. Do not risk failures or waste time.

A sale of French linen at reduced prices would astonish any proficient housekeeper. She recognizes the superiority of French linen over the Irish, Scotch and German qualities. The French linen grows soft and more lustrous with use. A piece of French linen is a possession of value.

Rich's are in the midst of a pre-inventory sale. That is the reason they are willing to reduce the prices of even the French linens. The tablecloths of beautiful design, the embroidered bedspreads, the hand-embroidered pillow cases and the pretty crib sets of sheet and pillowcase are all on sale. Here is an opportunity to replenish the stock of best linen, to replace some of the precious pieces in the linen chest with which you began housekeeping.

Over 250,000 in use.

KIMBALL PIANOS

The Artist's Ideal

Beyond a doubt the best way to get a genuine bargain in a piano is to go to a responsible house and pay a fair price for an instrument with a reputation back of it.

You should not consider for one moment that cheap pianos which are advertised in such convincing terms are worth spending money for. If you buy one, you are speculating with most of the chances against you. Whether you buy here or elsewhere, secure a standard make or save your money.

The cost of making a piano such as the KIMBALL is greater than the selling price of most cheap pianos, which are as a rule not good even when new.

A piano with excellent staying qualities of tone and construction is the only one worth considering and you had better pay a little more and know that as long as you have it you will be pleased with it.

By this we do not mean that you will have to spend an exorbitant sum to obtain a satisfactory instrument, but we do wish to caution you against ones sold at a price for which it is impossible to give you a piano of real merit.

We wish to caution you against buying a piano from a concern that has a sliding scale of prices. The one-price plan on which we operate is the only sure way of your securing full value. We have found in many years of experience that to be fair to ourselves and the customer is the only correct selling method.

A few special bargains in used uprights and player-pianos.

PUCCINI TELLS OF 3 OPERAS HE IS NOW WRITING

Long Search for Libretto Yields Three One-Act Plays—To Be Given Together.

By CAMILLO CIANFARRA.
Special Cable to The American.

ROME, July 12.—After the three years of continual search for a libretto which would awaken his musical inspiration, Composer Puccini announces that out of a whole library of plays sent to him by famous playwrights, as well as by obscure authors, he has at last selected three librettos, each consisting of a one-act play, and will soon begin to set them to music.

Puccini adds that his quest for a three-act play failed completely. The plays chosen, however, will afford him a unique opportunity to present three different kinds of music, namely, dramatic, sentimental or idyllic and burlesque.

"The three operas," said Puccini, "will be given in the same evening, and the public will judge them all at the same time. As for me, after a long vacation, during which I have abstained from work of all kinds, I am glad to go back to work. My vein of music needs only to be tapped to let out a deluge of notes."

Three Authors Chosen.

The librettos are by three separate authors, two of whom are already famons—D'Annunzio and Tritan Bernard, the French playwright. The third is by Didier Gold, a young writer, whose powerful drama of the Parisian underworld caught the composer's fancy as soon as he read the first few scenes.

"I owe the discovery of this drama to a woman," said Puccini, "who, knowing I was seeking a libretto, invited me one afternoon to a fashionable Paris hotel. Before I left she thrust into my hands a small book, exacting first the promise that I would read it.

"Returning home, I threw the book on the table, and it was not until a month or two later that I picked it up again to scan it.

"It was a revelation. The drama, which is full of passion, takes place on a Seine River scow, whose captain and proprietor lives on board with his wife, Georgette. There are three other persons—Louis, a deck hand and Georgett's admirer; a second deck hand and his wife.

The Action Is Rapid.

"The action proceeds with lightning rapidity. It is Saturday night and on quitting work Georgette tells Louis she will signal when it is time to call, by placing a small lamp on deck. Michael suspects, and that evening he reminds his wife of bygone days, when their only child was alive and life was the happiest. He concludes by entreating her to love him still, but the woman retires, apparently unmoved, leaving Michael alone.

"The scow is moored opposite a long row of cheap pleasure resorts. Michael lights his pipe and Louis, mistaking the glare of the match for a match, emerges from his hiding place and is promptly caught by Michael, who chokes him to death. On hearing his wife's footsteps, Michael hides Louis' body under his long cape and when Georgette gently invites Louis to clasp her to his breast, her husband arises and Louis' body falls at the feet of the terrified woman."

Poetic Legend Promised.

The poet who furnished the libretto for Mascagni's "Parisina" has promised to send Puccini a poetic legend of the Middle Ages, which will give the composer an opportunity to write some light idyllic music of the class in which he is, perhaps, at his best.

Tristan Bernard's one-act burlesque has a decidedly new plot. The action takes place in an African jungle, where a party of European ladies and gentlemen fall into the hands of a native tribe. Three of the natives are thoroughly acquainted with European ideas and customs, as they once composed the "African Village" at the Paris Exhibition. They decide they will show the other natives a full "European Village" in working order, and the prisoners are made to act all kinds of scenes until finally they are rescued.

British Hospital to Give Way to Hotel

New York Man Is Believed Head of Syndicate Which Has Purchased Site.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 11.—One of the finest building sites in London, which is now occupied by St. George's Hospital, has been sold to a syndicate, of which Hardy F. Black, of New York, is believed to be at the head, and a magnificent hotel, to cost $6,250,000, will be erected thereon.

While the personnel of the purchasing syndicate has not been announced, it is known that Mr. Black has been endeavoring to secure the property for some time. Under the agreement as announced the hospital retains the right to occupy the property for two more years, during which time a new and larger hospital will be constructed in the suburbs.

Young Noblewoman Seeks Stage Honors

Yvonne Fitzroy Surrounds Self With Clever Intimates Who Plan to Produce Play.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—Yvonne Fitzroy is another patrician who yearns for stage honors. She is constantly arranging smaller amateur theatricals and her talents entitle her to serious consideration. She is one of a group who believe that woman should have a vocation and surrounds herself with a clever set, much to the harm of her fashionable relations.

Miss Fitzroy is an intimate friend of Lady Arlington, who loves play acting, and elaborate theatricals are in prospect for the country houses soon. She is also an adept at the new dancing in balls. Her independence takes the form of a modified tango and an unexpurgated turkey trot.

Geraldine Farrar Forgets Music After Air Cruise

Will Be Engaged to Any Man Who Owns Dirigible

Geraldine Farrar, who, after one ride in airship, declares that music is now a secondary consideration. She would like to buy a Zeppelin dirigible.

The Fair Operatic Star Makes a Trip in Zeppelin Craft and Proclaims Herself a Fiend for Sky Riding.

By ALAN DALE.
Special Correspondent of the Hearst's Sunday American.
Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, July 12.—Geraldine Farrar forgot all about music, all about her "art," all about the Metropolitan, all about trivial mundane happenings when I met her to-day at the Adion Hotel. She had just made a trip in an airship—one of the Zeppelins that fly from Hamburg to Leipsig, and she was "all emotioned," as they say in French. Excitement, and not No. 18, flushed her pretty features, and she certainly did look awfully charming in a rather severe navy blue walking dress and a black "flappy" hat—not one of the basin shapes that make a gell look as though she were clamoring to be extinguished. Miss Farrar is too wise for that sort of folly. Besides, she isn't clamoring to be extinguished. Perish the thought!

"I've had the experience of my life," she said emotionally, "and, nothing now matters but airships —to my mind. Henceforth I'm an airship fiend and I'll be engaged for six whole months to any man who can supply me with an airship, and—of course—remain in the background."

Feels She Owned World.

She laughed in the quiet and untinkling way that gells over here acquire—a laugh that gets there, but makes no noise about it.

"I felt," she went on, "that I owned the world. A splendid feelng of superiority possessed me—a delightful sensation of being above all the petty things of life. No, I'm not romancing or drawing a long bow. I made the flight with mother, father and two friends, and I assure you that it was a revelation. I want to own an airship. I must do so. It is the most glorious method of transit imaginable."

She paused for a moment to get breath, for she was genuinely excited, and looked with disdain at the music on the open piano—a reminder of the daily struggle.

"Let me tell you all about it," she said. "Mommer, you know, is very nervous and inclined to be light-headed. She can't look down from a height or out of a moving train, so she was really a good test of the airship's comfort. And she never once had a qualm. We started from Potsdam, where there is a field and a cafe—you can take coffee and sausage there as everywhere in Germany. They let down a little aluminum ladder—the cutest thing you have ever seen—and before you knew it we were off—off—way up in the air. Oh, joy!"

Every Comfort Aboard.

Her eyes danced as she proceeded, and she grew so animated that if the Metropolitan Opera House people had seen her, they would have been aghast at such vivacity.

"Every imaginable comfort—the last word in luxury—greeted us in the car. It was a lovely room, with comfortable basket armchairs along the sides—a big wide room, that you couldn't imagine to be a space in an airship. We sat there, and we drank champagne, and we ate dainty sandwiches, and we wrote hundreds of postal cards to friends."

Even in the air, I thought, the terrible habit of postal card writing appears to thrive. It is an ineradicable habit.

"The German Government has provided special airship stamps, and I can tell you we used them plentifully. Oh, how delicious it all was. You touched an electric bell, and instantly a steward appeared to do your bidding. The luxury of the most luxurious hotel and the elegance of the most modern steamship were at our beck and call. There was room for 35 people. Nobody was scared; nobody felt the slightest discomfort; we all sat in our delightfully cozy chairs and revelled. We were masters of the air—I believe we went up 2,500 feet—I THINK so, at least—and I—I—well, I never wanted to come down."

She looked so amusingly regretful that I laughed. She really meant what she said.

Wants to Buy Craft.

"A steward thought I was crazy. I said I wanted to buy an airship, and he told me it cost half a million marks. 'A mere trifle,' I said, and he thought I was demented. What a splendid advertisement for any American millionaire! Just think of it. Oh, I've forgotten to say that I promised to drop a bouquet for Mr. Adlon, of this hotel, who is an old friend of mine. I did it, I reckoned it all out. We dipped sometimes, you know, and swerved, and during one of these dips, when we were over this roof, I dropped the bouquet, and it was recovered. Wasn't that charming —and sweet—and dear?"

I thought it was, all that and more. To get a bouquet from the clouds—who could desire anything more touching?

"As to singing—oh, I forgot all about it—all about such trivialities and details. I forgot my work and my ambition. All I felt was a strong wish never to come down, but I'm afraid to go up again for fear I might spoil those glorious first sensations. You know—you do or you don't—that Zeppelin is planning to send an airship across the Atlantic and believes he can do it in two days. He is asking the Government to grant him three warships for the purpose. Wouldn't it be great?

Describes Ship's Machinery.

"I understand all about the machinery and the make-up and the possibilities of these airships. You see, 'tis like this * * * and then * * * and so * * * and thus * * *."

She went into an elaborate description of machinery and technical details that made my head whizz. I'm an awful failure at anything of the kind, but Geraldine Farrar had no compunction. She told me all—all about it, and if I don't understand a Zeppelin airship it is MY fault. And I don't. But she loved telling me all about it, and when I left her I felt I must fly as she did. It's fearfully cheap. Only $25 a fly!

PRIVATE COMPANIES PILFER FRENCH ISLES IN PACIFIC

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 12.—French islands in the Pacific are being pilfered, the French Colonial Office finds out, by private companies and individuals.

In one case, it is stated that a native named Taaroa of Tahiti, who acts as a kind of local surveyor for the French Government, sold three islands to an English company.

LONDON HOTELS ARE SWAMPED BY AMERICANS

Many Tourists Spend Night in Vain Search for Lodgings After Mauretania's Arrival.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—London has never been so crowded with visitors as during this week. The hotels were taken by surprise and have broken down lamentably. There has been an extraordinary invasion of French and Germans and South Americans; according to all traditions, during the first two weeks of July, London should begin emptying, but those present refuse to budge. On top of this condition, Americans have descended on the city in unprecedented numbers.

The better known hotels have been unable to accommodate the flood, much of which was diverted to the continent. When the Mauretania arrived the strange spectacle was seen of more than 200 Americans driving all over London and telephoning hotels, but unable to obtain beds even at 4 o'clock in the morning. Despite this, the week has been the dullest of a dull season. Those who expected excitement in London have been bitterly disappointed.

Calls on Dowager Queen.

One of the most interesting American visitors this week is Madam Waddington, formerly Miss Mary King, the widow of the late French Ambassador. Her grandfather was United States Minister to King George III. She was a girl friend of King Edward and is still intimate with Queen Alexandra, upon whom she called last week. She is staying at Abbey Lodge, Regent's Park.

Mrs. Lewis Harcourt is giving a series of large week-end parties at Nuneham, her beautiful place on the Thames, which has been so wonderfully improved by checks received from Mrs. Harcourt's uncle, the late J. Pierpont Morgan. On one occasion Mr. Morgan gave his favorite niece a check for $250,000 to be spent on Nuneham.

Mrs. Richard Lounsbery, of New York, has arrived at the Berkeley and is entertaining and being entertained by a host of friends. She is a daughter of James B. Haggin.

Mrs. James McDonald had a very successful "tango party" at her house in Cadogan Square and intends to give several large dinner parties and one large dance before the close of the season.

George W. Vanderbilt, who spent some time in Wales, is staying for a few days in London on his way to Paris.

George Gordon Moore, the Chicago millionaire, has taken a house at Lancaster Gate and is being introduced into society by Lord and Lady Elcho.

Many well known Americans were present at a tea at the Ritz Carlton which Prince De LaTour d'Auvergne gave on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Untermeyer departed for Baden Baden, where Mr. and Mrs. Alvis Untermeyer are taking the cure. Robert Winthrop has gone to Paris.

Mrs. Leslie Cotton is here. Tomorrow her exhibition of portraits opens at Agnew's Gallery.

Carlton Center of Gaiety.

The Carlton Hotel has been the center of gaiety during the week. Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt have been giving several smart parties since their arrival from a trip to Paris, where J. I. Waterbury has been entertaining many Anglo-Americans.

Newcomers include Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Weaver and Miss Weaver from Paris, Mr. and Mrs. A. Bernard, Mrs. Stanley McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. James Dodson.

Other arrivals include Mr. and Mrs. Ralph G. Cockburn, Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Worthy, Mrs. Graeme Stewart and her daughter, of Chicago, and J. A. Hoagand.

At the Ritz Hotel there was much quiet entertaining, Mrs. William Draper being the leading figure. Mr. and Mrs. Livingstone Beekman gave a farewell dinner to a few intimate friends before their departure.

Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Fish have been doing much to return the hospitality they have enjoyed, while Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clay Pierce have entertained hosts of friends. Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Depew arrive early in the week after a visit to Paris to see their French relatives, five of his family having married into the French nobility.

Mr. Depew says that as a result of his experience, he believes that the American idea of French husbands is erroneous. So far he has no reason to believe them otherwise than the kindest and most faithful of husbands.

Elbert H. Gary and his wife have settled down to a round of entertaining.

Newcomers at the Berkeley include Mrs. Catesby Jones, Mrs. John T. Anderson, Mrs. Stanley C. Flagg and Mr. and Mrs. August Belmont. Claridge's has been dull during the week. Colonel Harvey, who is spending most of his time playing golf, gave one or two small dinner parties at the Hyde Park Hotel.

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With the Othine Prescription.

This prescription for the removal of freckles was written by a prominent physician and is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by Jacobs' Pharmacy under an absolute guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

SPIRIDOVITCH IN PARIS CONSPIRES FOR THE BALKANS

Dreams of Great Slavic Empire. Some of His Visions Have Already Come True.

By MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE.
Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 12.—There is at this moment on the heights of Montmartre the most persistent conspirator of the age. Professedly he is not in concealment, but he is safer from those who are seeking him than if he were in a cave. The conspirator is General Count Arthur Techerep Spiridovitch.

On the eve of hostilities between Turkey and the four Balkan allies, General Spiridovitch took up his abode near the top of the artistic mount and has not come down since. Up to that date he lived in fashionable hotels and mingled with the butterfly throng. Since that time he has worked day and night telegraphing here, cabling there, directing 56 Slavic societies how to make their influence felt more effectively. Pole by descent, Russian by birth, he has the fire of the former and the naivete of the latter. He is as cadaverous looking as was Cataline, the conspirator of classic fame. Four times he has been elected president of the Slavic Society of Moscow and it is the 56 branches of this organization which gave him so much secret power.

President Balkan War.

The gigantic program he has mapped out would look ridiculous if we did not know of this famous conspirator's predictions in the past. For instance, he foresaw the triple entente as an offset to the triple alliance. Last August in the Paris Journal he declared most emphatically that the Turko-Balkan war was about to break.

Nor does the arch conspirator always confine himself to predictions. When France and the Vatican were at their most serious loggerheads Germany wished to replace the former as protector of the Christians in the Orient. Everything was arranged for the transfer. It would have enlarged Germany's sphere of influence. The Emperor wished it. The arch conspirator sent a telegram to the Vatican declaring that such a transfer would alienate millions of Slavs who were most devoted to the Holy See. The transfer was not made.

Proposals Are Startling.

And now what does Conspirator Spiridovitch propose? Three things. They almost take one's breath away.

The first is a southern Slavic empire, composed of all of the countries whose liberation from Turkey was obtained or encouraged by Russia, including Bulgaria, Servia, Montenegro, all the territories they have taken in the late war, Bosnia, Herzegovina, Albania, Poland, Crotia and the Czech country.

Secondly, he proposes to break up the patchwork empire of Austria. This would give Hungary her independence and let the Slavs of the Austrian empire join the new confederation.

The third proposition is the independence of Poland as an integral state of the confederacy. Russia, Austria and Germany would have to give their respective portions of Poland.

Dream of Slavic Empire.

The Slavic empire of the South would hold back the Mohammedian invasion of Europe. Asiatics are again looking to European conquest. They may attempt, says this magnificent dreamer, what Genghis Khan and Timour did in the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries. The great Slavic Empire of the North will fight them back.

Nor does the dream stop here. When all these things will be accomplished the dream of the Pan-Slavist, as interpreted by General Spiridovitch, is universal peace. He says:

"Pan-Slavism wishes neither to annex nor oppress. Its one desire is the reign of peace through liberty and fraternity. Its ideal is to see the tribunal of The Hague in full working action."

Are Rheumatic Sufferers Negligent?

Many Suffer Excruciating Agony for Years Without Investigating the Cause of Their Pain or Its Cure.

Rheumatism frequently comes from uric acid poisoning. Uric acid accumulates from undigested food remaining in stomach and intestines, which ferments and putrefies and generates this poisonous acid. If not expelled promptly it gets into the blood, and finally forms crystalline deposits which settle in joints and muscles and stiffen them.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT has been remarkably successful in the treatment of rheumatism resulting from uric acid poisoning. It is a true uric acid solvent which will break up the deposits already formed, dissolve the uric acid out of the tissues and hold it in solution until expelled in the urine. It will not cure your rheumatism overnight; neither did your rheumatism come overnight. But JACOBS' LIVER SALT will relieve you more promptly and surely than anything else because it thoroughly purges the system of fermenting waste, eliminates the poisonous uric acid and purifies the blood.

Almost without exception the sufferer from rheumatism is subject to constipation, biliousness or dyspepsia, and a sluggish liver is at the bottom of the whole trouble. JACOBS' LIVER SALT stimulates both liver and kidneys and makes them keep your system clean. No other liver medicine has the same solvent action upon uric acid, therefore insist that your druggist give you the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. If he hasn't it, full size jar sent upon receipt of price, 25c, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

Lloyd-George Wears Frock Coat to Party, Defying Conventions

Chancellor Is Declared to Have Swept Away Tradition Dear to British Parliament.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—Lady Henry's evening party last week was marked by the appearance of Chancellor Lloyd-George in a frock coat and not in evening dress. When he stood beside his pearl-bedecked hostess, London marveled at his courage at coming from the House of Commons in such a garb. The Liberals pronounced his act "simple and refreshing," but Conservatives were aghast, and declared that the last and most important of their traditions was being swept aside by the forceful Liberal.

Sir Rufus Isaacs was another interesting guest, but Lloyd-George's baggy gray trousers and cutaway coat have been the discussion all this week.

The conflict on the subject of the American dances has entered in the life of London. Girls prefer the new dances, but mothers ban anything except the stately waltz. At the Duchess of Romeset's ball there was an amusing scene between Lady Maxwell, formerly Miss Boynge, of California, and her daughter, Philae.

Miss Maxwell was forbidden to dance the bunny hug, but, on hearing the intoxicating music, she overlooked the ban. Her steps were arrested by her mother, who rushed into the floor exclaiming:

"Now we are going home!"

Queen Alexandra Honors American

George Adair Is Among Visitors From United States Stopping at Hotel Cecil.

LONDON, July 12.—Mrs. Tryphosa Bates Batcheller has been working hard finishing her book of travel in Spain. Queen Alexandra accorded her an honor rarely given to an American, receiving her this week in a special audience and presented her with an autographed photograph in her coronation robes.

At the Savoy registrations include Howard Gould, who spent a couple of nights there before going to Paris; Earle C. Anthony, of Los Angeles, and Garrett W. McEnerny, of San Francisco.

At the Cecil a party from the American Agricultural Commission has been Hamilton Paton, of Chicago, and G. W. Adair, of Atlanta.

Anthony Drexel has left for a yachting trip to Russia. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Henry Grasty, of Baltimore, have been spending the week motoring into the country. Colonel Sam Hill has taken his family on an auto tour through England.

Invites Own Friends; Ball Is Called Off

Daughter of Nelson Morris Fails in London Society When Mrs. Williams Withdraws Support.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—The ball which was to have been given this week by Mrs. Schwab, the daughter of Nelson Morris, of Chicago, which Mrs. Williams undertook to manage, has been abandoned. This is the sensation of the moment and has brought to light some revelations regarding ball-giving in London.

Mrs. Williams undertook the management of the ball on the condition that she should not be interfered with by the actual hostess.

The Countess of Erroll, Viscountess Massarene and Lady Paget had arranged dinners before. Afterward Mrs. Williams learned that Mrs. Schwab had asked guests unknown to her and promptly withdrew, giving as her excuse that "she would have spoiled it by inviting her own friends."

It was only at the last minute that the dinner guests were told that the ball was off and every one is now wondering what Mrs. Schwab's next step will be.

YARMOUTH IS JILTED BY HIS FIANCEE OF 70

Former Husband of Alice Thaw Boasts He Obtained $45,000 From His Betrothed.

By W. ORTON TEWSON.
Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 12.—The Marquis of Hertford, who as the Earl of Yarmouth married Alice Thaw, contrives in the most ingenious fashion to keep continually in the public eye. After setting all London talking over his engagement to the very rich, elderly widow, Mrs. Mosscockle, he reawakens interest, just as the excitement was waning, by announcing that the marriage will not take place.

No indication has been given in the public prints of any reason for the broken betrothal or which side snapped the knot. As a matter of fact, a third person intervened; he is a Mr. Sparrow, Mrs. Mosscockle's father. As she is about 70 it was supposed that her progenitor had long since joined the great majority, but the old gentleman is very spry and wide-awake and all along has been opposed to the match.

He caused very minute inquiries to be made both in England and in America in regard to the Marquis' life when he was the husband of Alice Thaw and came to the conclusion that Hertford would be an undesirable son-in-law. He spoke very plainly to his daughter on the matter. This, coupled with the fact that Lord Hertford was somewhat fractious over financial matters, standing out for a settlement of $350,000, finally induced Mrs. Mosscockle to call off the engagement.

The Marquis is taking it very well indeed and proudly avers that he obtained $45,000 from his late fiancee.

Two Await Death; Garrote Is Missing

Cuban Official Finds That Instrument of Execution Has Been Given to Museum.

HAVANA, July 12.—The Secretary of Government during a visit of inspection to Havana jail made the grimly humorous discovery that although two persons were there awaiting the garrote, the instrument of execution, was missing.

Ex-President Gomez during his administration commuted all the death sentences or pardoned those condemned to undergo capital punishment and shortly before he retired he presented the garrote to a newly established museum as a historic curiosity.

The Secretary of Government sent orders to the museum to return the garrote at once.

The Priceless Ryan Collection of Religious Art.

"The Entombment of the Saviour," a Beautiful Limoges Enamel Plaque by Jean Penicaud I., the Brilliant Colors of Which Have Lasted Without Tarnishing for Nearly Four Hundred Years, the Most Precious Work of Its Kind in the World.

A LEADING place among the great art collectors of New York has been quietly taken by Thomas Fortune Ryan. In his great house at Sixty-seventh street and Fifth avenue he has amassed a collection of treasures which are not surpassed in value and rarity by those of any other connoisseur.

The collection is especially rich in objects of religious art. In this respect it is surpassed by the J. Pierpont Morgan collection in size only, but not in the quality of the objects.

The gems of the Ryan collection are contained in a large gallery, the walls of which are lined with dark wood work in the Renaissance style.

At one end, on either side of a fireplace, stand two cabinets, which are filled with Limoges enamels, ancient reliquaries and other articles of early religious art. These have cost hundreds of thousands of dollars, and could not be replaced at any price. Among them are a remarkable number of works by the great Penicaud family—there were four of them—the princes of Limoges enamellers.

A splendid specimen of this work is shown in a large plaque representing "The Entombment of the Saviour," reproduced on this page. It is by Jean Penicaud the first. In making these enamels powdered glass was mixed with coloring matter. The design was painted with this material upon a background of silver or copper. It was then "fired" in an oven so that the glass melted and adhered to the plate. The operation was done with wonderful care and skill, and the exact manner of doing it is a lost art to-day.

So successful was this method that the brilliant colors of these enamels have lasted nearly four hundred years without a trace of cracking or fading or any injury except where they have been actually battered.

In these cabinets are twelve plaques by this same Penicaud, showing the Stations of the Cross, after prints by the early German, Martin Schongauer. By Nardon Penicaud, the first of the family, is a splendid triptych representing the Crucifixion and attendant scenes, and an "Entry of Christ Into Jerusalem. Other Limoges enamellers represented are the Limousins and Reymonds, making a collection of over thirty pieces of these priceless objects.

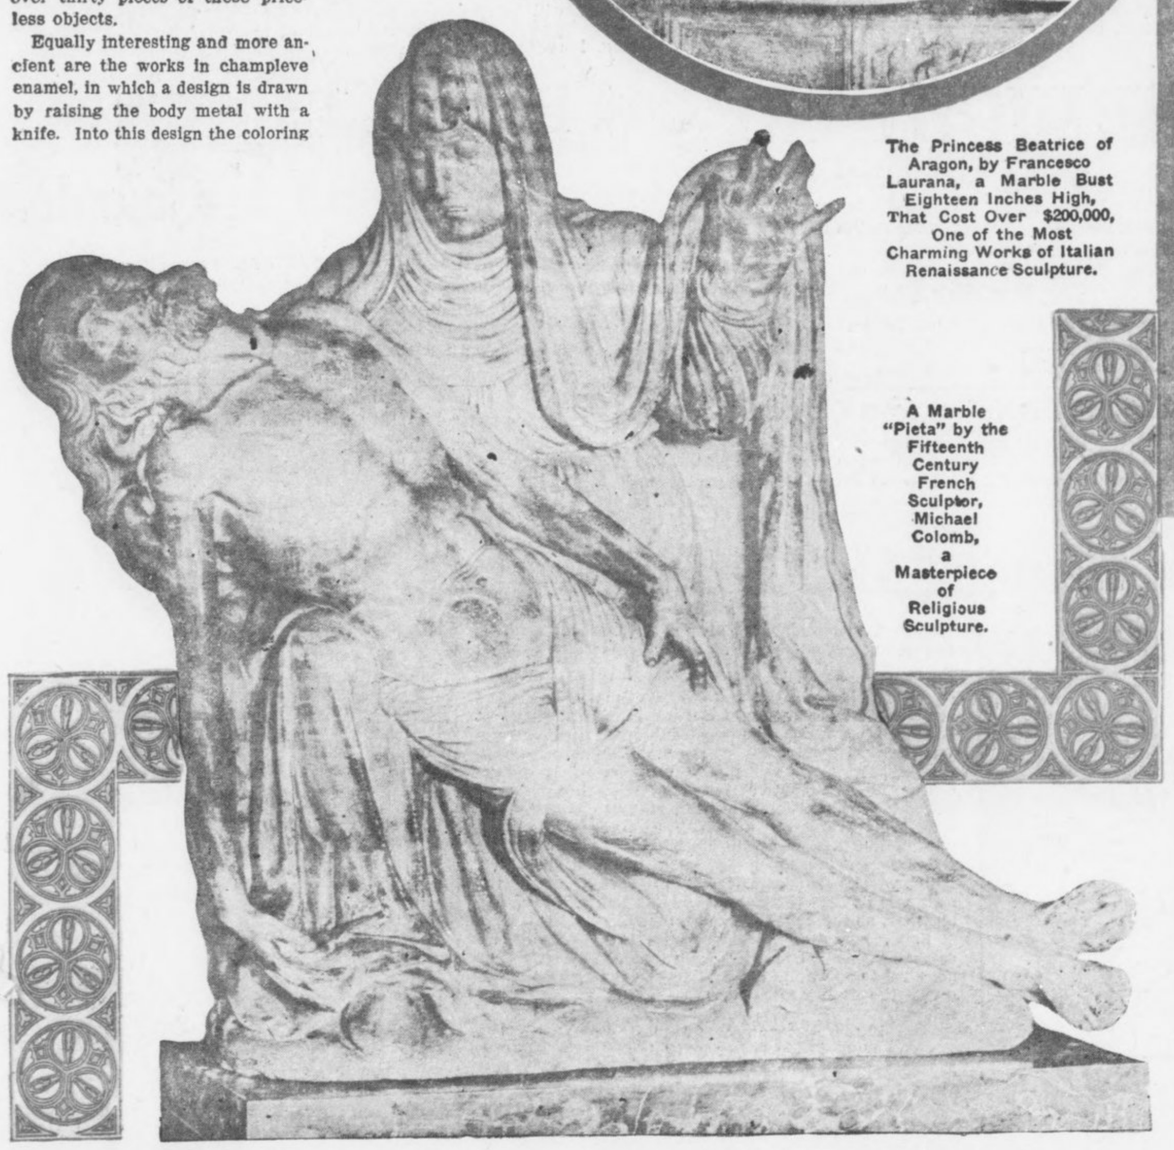
Equally interesting and more ancient are the works in champleve enamel, in which a design is drawn by raising the body metal with a knife. Into this design the coloring material was poured. In this style is a remarkable reliquary, shown on this page, adorned with a representation of the Crucifixion and figures of women and apostles in relief. It is ornamented with precious stones in cabochon form. This dates from the thirteenth century, is Byzantine in style and formerly held the relics of a saint in some French abbey.

Probably still more precious is an English reliquary of about the same date, bearing a representation of the murder of Saint Thomas a Becket. Another work of similar style is a eucharistic dove, made to contain the sacred host, and formerly suspended above an altar.

In an alcove in the gallery hangs a bronze Crucifixion, life size, a fine example of the school of Giovanni di Bologna, Italian sixteenth century. Accompanying it are two figures in bronze representing Saint Teresa of Avila and San Pedro of Alcantara by the seventeenth century Spaniard Alonzo Cano, and a "Pieta" in marble, attributed to the French sculptor Michel Colomb, about 1500. This alcove is a most impressive assemblage of religious art.

Not all the contents of the gallery are religious in character. Near the centre of the room stands a very charming marble bust, about eighteen inches high, representing the Princess Beatrice of Aragon and attributed to the great Italian Renaissance sculptor, Francesco Laurana, who worked between 1460 and 1475. Mr. Ryan is said to have paid over $200,000 for this work, and connoisseurs consider that it is unsurpassed among works of this type and period.

The Princess Beatrice of Aragon, by Francesco Laurana, a Marble Bust Eighteen Inches High, That Cost Over $200,000, One of the Most Charming Works of Italian Renaissance Sculpture.



A Marble "Pieta" by the Fifteenth Century French Sculptor, Michael Colomb, a Masterpiece of Religious Sculpture.

The celebrated Dr. Wilhelm Bode, of Berlin, remarks that this and a bust in his museum by the same artist are among the finest existing Italian Renaissance representations of womanhood. A companion to the Princess in the Ryan collection is a man's bust, probably a prince of Aragon, assigned by Dr. Bode to Pietro da Milano, who belonged to the same period as Laurana.

On the wall farthest removed from the enamel cabinets hangs the famous Yerkes Indian hunting rug, believed to be the most beautiful and valuable rug in the world. Chinese porcelains and ancient Etruscan relics lend variety to the collection.

Precious examples of religious art, which would require volumes to describe, are skilfully arranged here and there. A marble relief of the "Madonna and Child," by Mino da Fiesole, is among them. For this, it is said, over $200,000 was paid. There is an even more beautiful "Madonna and Child" in relief, by Rossellino, and a remarkable "Pieta" of terra cotta, in six colors, ascribed to Giovanni della Robbia, and representing the Virgin, with St. John and St. Francis of Assisi, lamenting over the dead Christ.

A splendid sixteenth century stained glass window from the Abbey of Flavigny in Lorraine admits soft, richly colored light from the stairway of the house to the gallery.

In the centre of the ceiling is a painting attributed to Giovanni Tiepolo, the great master of the late Venetian school of painting. It represents a marriage festival, and is indescribably rich and gorgeous. Tiepolo's work was the last glorious, dying effulgence of Italian Renaissance art.

With the exception of this ceiling there are no paintings in this gallery. The result is very pleasing and interesting, and sets off the wonderful collection of enamels and other precious objects most effectively. Mr. Ryan has at present few paintings. Among those he has are twelve fine works by Sorolla, the Spanish artist, hanging in various parts of the house. A new picture gallery is being built on Sixty-seventh street, in connection with the Ryan house, and it is reasonable to predict that this will be filled with pictures. On the Sixty-eighth street corner of the block Mr. Ryan has acquired the old Yerkes house and art gallery, which will be principally used as the site of an Italian garden.

NEW DISCOVERIES ALL OVER THE EARTH

Will TIGHT SHOES Turn OUR FEET Into HOOFS?

LASTING HARM Done by SHOES THAT PINCH or Are TOO HIGH-HEELED

THAT the constant wearing of extremely tight and high-heeled shoes by generation after generation of women may ultimately result in woman losing her toes and growing a heel on the front end of her foot, or, worse still, hoofs, seems a rather far-fetched possibility.

But Dr. Max Strunsky of New York has described some of the evils of tight shoes and high heels which are forming what he terms "The New Heel." Stripped of all technicalities, Dr. Strunsky says, in his diagnosis of modern foot trouble under the caption "The New Heel," in the Journal of the American Medical Association, that the heel is the strongest part of the foot and is constituted to carry the main weight of the body. But with the tight and high-heeled shoes the women are wearing it is impossible to make the heel perform this natural function of bearing the weight of the body. The line of weight is pitched forward by the high heels until it rests upon the ends of the balls of the feet, or the ends of the metatarsal bones.

Now with the added torture of tight and narrow and pointed toes, the high heels force the feet into this apex of leather, the body forces its whole weight upon the front end of the foot, and all sorts of disorders follow. Inflammation affects the soft parts of these joints and the bones themselves are involved.

High-heeled shoes force the anterior arches to assume the functions of weight carriers, with the result that there are broken down arches. Now what Dr. Strunsky means by the 'new heel" is just this:

High-heeled shoes, narrow and sharp-pointed, so crowd the foot forward that, as before stated, the body's weight does not rest upon the heel, where it belongs, but is pitched forward until it rests on the metatarsal heads. The metatarsal heads are ends of the bones where the foot actually ends and the toes begin. Between the actual ball of the foot and the toes is a sort of hollow. These modern shoes force all the weight right there.

This means several things. First, it cripples up the toes and makes them practically useless. Second, it hardens that part of the foot and makes it solid, like the heel. This brings on inflammation in the metatarsophalangeal joints. These joints, being, of course, those at the end of the metatarsal bones, form one end of the arch of the foot.

The constant use of these metatarsal bones, the constant walking on them, increases the size and strength of the anterior arches and changes their flexibility to walk normally, to a rigidity that is essential to a weight-carrying structure.

In other words, high-heeled and pointed shoes are making the toes useless and crippled, and are so solidifying the arches of the foot, especially on the end next the toes, that that portion of the foot is fast becoming solid and hard, just like a heel!

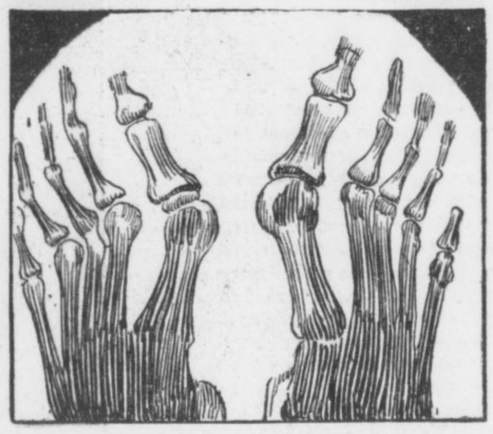
That is why Dr. Strunsky calls it the "new heel." Of course, all this is crippling the women. In regard to the number of people who suffer from this sort of foot trouble Dr. Strunsky says:

"Of the sufferers who come for relief for foot conditions the women patients especially—shall we say one hundred per cent of them—have strained or broken down anterior arches."

Only women wear the extremely high-heeled, narrow, pinching shoes, and, as Dr. Strunsky admits, that all sufferers from strained and broken down arches are women, it is proof of just what such modern instruments of tortur eand deformity, the high-heeled, narrow-toed shoes do.

"Ill-fitting shoes make the forward arches of the feet look like the heels whose work they have to do."

"If the foot is normal there will be no pain when the toes are grasped and bent suddenly back and forth."



"Broken arches, by lessening the vitality of the joints of the feet, make them susceptible to all sorts of infections, and often result in such deformities as these."

Therefore, it is by no means far-fetched for Dr. Strunsky to call this modern trouble a "new heel," any more than it was so far-fetched for a Chicago editor to comment on it and say, "We may expect to see lovely woman walking either forward or backward with her two heels, like a crab."

Of course, women will not walk backwards, and it is to be hoped that after a while she will give up the high heels that are deforming her feet. But if women continue to wear such shoes for generation after generation, nothing else can happen except that the feet of females will in time be without toes at all, and the anterior arches will by nature grow into rigid heels on the front of the foot.

One great trouble is just this—it isn't the amount of pain that determines how crippled a woman's foot may be getting. She may have terrific pain and yet be crippling her foot very little, or she may have no pain at all, and the first thing she willl know, her toes have become atrophied, that is, made absolutely useless, as useless as the vermiform appendix, and her anterior arch rigid, the metatarsal bones becoming one solid heel.

It is, of course, a far cry to say woman will grow hoofs. This is not meant in a satirical vein, nor a hint that she will grow hoofs because she is wicked enough to cripple her feet, but because of the natural law of evolution.

Man can walk upright to-day, although his muscles still have to perform wonders to enable him to keep his balance. There was no doubt a time when man could not stand upight and take twenty steps to save his life. We have the vermiform appendix. It is so useless and so dangerous we have it removed. There was a time when this was a very valuable part of our intestines and to remove itwould have been fatal, away back in those dark days before evolution brought us to manhood's estate from the kingdom of lesser wild animals.

Then there is he horse. To-day he has a hoof. That is why the possibility of woman squeezing her feet into hoofs is mentioned. There was a time when the horse had toes. Five toes, four toes, three toes, and to-day the great hoof, with a little bit of hard substance behind it. The horse is called a single-toed animal to-day.

If he could evolve from an animal with five toes to one with one toe, certainly woman can evolve from an animal with five toes into one with two heels, or that one being a hoof or very hard heel.

It might take millions upon millions of years of constant wearing of high-heeled shoes to do this, and it sounds utterly absurd, but the fact remains that in the short time woman has been wearing high-heeled shoes, and the time IS short as we count the time, the world has been revolving upon its axis, she has already so crippled her feet that eminent physicians and surgeons have found traces of the formation of another heel and have gone forth into medical print calling it "The New Heel."

This, of course, means lameness, and possibly it means being absolutely crippled for some, if the metatarsal bones are too suddenly jammed and squeezed together.

Odd Ways PLANTS LURE the INSECTS THEY EAT

AMONG the strangest of all Nature's products are the insect-eating, or carnivorous, plants. They actually catch, eat and digest various insects by a process practically as thorough as that of the animals.

The co-called Venus "fly-trap" or "vegetable butcher" is one of the most remarkable of these. It grows in a wild state in the forests of North Carolina, where it creeps along the ground, presenting thousands of gaping mouths, into which the unsuspecting fly or insect is lured and imprisoned.

The leaves of this plant consist of two valves, shaped like clam shells, which, when closed, form a trap. The ends of the leaves are baited with a sweet juice which attracts the insect. The leaves are covered with minute hairs, which correspond very closely to the arrangement of the nervous system in animals. On the edges of the leaves are rows of long, fine teeth.

When the unsuspecting insect has been lured to the leaf by the attractive juice he steps upon one of the microscopic hairs, and, presto! the two valves shut with a snap, keeping Mr. Fly secure.

Still more curious are certain plants in Borneo, which distil liquors for the purpose of luring their victims. Many of these are miniature grog-shops. In their leaves are little pitchers, which are filled with hard alcoholic liquors. Each of the pitchers has a tight-fitting cover which keeps the dew and rain from diluting the liquor. No scientists have yet succeeded in analyzing the liquors with any satisfactory results, but it is evident that they are of different kinds, since different species of the plants attract different insects.

The most wonderful of all these liquor-distilling plants are those which attract slugs and frogs. Those attracting slugs have ridges on the leaves that guide the guest to the tap-room, deep in the flower. The doors, however, swing inward, and there is no retracing of the steps. Rows of little teeth on the interior of the leaves remove all possibility of escape.

In the plants that catch frogs there is a sharp thorn near the pitcher, on which the frog is impaled and thus held fast.

The most unique of all the productions of Nature is the plant popularly known as the "goose plant." It is a native of Guatemala and receives its name from the bud, which has the shape of a goose floating along the water with its neck proudly arched. The flower is very beautiful, but repulsive. It has an odor resembling that of decayed meat. The plant is a carrier plant and attracts the carrion fly, which is the agent of fertilization.

Teaching People to TALK WITHOUT THROATS

By Dr. L. K. Hirshberg, A.B., M.A., M.D.

ASK yourself by what organs or tissues you are able to talk, and you soon discover a combination of factors, such as your mouth, tongue, teeth, lungs, and, most important, your throat and vocal chords If you needs must dispense with any of these speech devices, you are convinced that you can spare all them rather than your throat and vocal tubes. Indeed, you feel certain that with the larynx shut off, speech would be about as possible as walking without feet and legs.

Yet Professor Edward W. Scripture, of Columbia University, has just discovered a method which he has most beneficially applied to a number of patients whose air tubes and vocal chords were completely shut off. As an instance one patient's larynx had been previously cut away because of a cancer. The entire air canal from his lungs to his mouth was closed, and the poor fellow was compelled to breathe through a silver cornet mouthpiece pushed through his Adam's apple.

Then Dr. Scripture took him in hand. Although such victims of disease still retain all the muscles for producing speech, they have no breathing power behind their tongues and lips by which to cause it. Dr. Scripture set about finding some expulsive, propulsive and explosive force sufficient to make the simplest speech sounds.

For example he harked back to the lisping syllables and letters of childhood's happy hours. He found that the infant makes his "p," "t," "sh," "s" and other letters in certain ways, so he set about devising a scheme by which people without vocal chords, throats or lung capacity might do the same.

To obtain the explosive "p" the throatless man was instructed to close his lips, compress the air in his mouth by tension on the cheeks, and a tightening up of the back of the mouth. Then he suddenly opens the lips as they are ready to say "p," and the explosion of imprisoned air produced a loud and distinct "p."

Then the throatless patient is commanded to place the tip of his tongue against his palate and to again fill the cheeks very tightly with enough air in the mouth to give the letter "t." As this is suddenly released, a "t" much louder than necessary is the outcome, indeed so loud is it that it can be heard all over a large hospital or auditorium.

Then comes the exercise made in a similar way to give the letter "k." The method is about the same, except the root and back of the tongue is employed instead of its tip.

For "th" as in thin, "sh" as in shoe, as well as for "s" and "f," a narrow channel or almost closed passageway is formed between the palate and tongue, teeth and lips, while the necessary blast of air which is absolutely and always essential in all of this new kind of speech, is supplied by compression of the mouth and cheeks. Try it yourself. You do not need to be without throat or vocal chords to apply this simple plan.

If you or any one with or without a throat wish to make a "g" as in gone, or "sh" as in pleasure, "th" as in thyme, "b," "d," "v" and "z," the vibration that normally comes from the lardnx is duplicated by putting the tongue, lips and palate exactly as he did for "k," "t" and "f." At first, without long practise, these letters will all sound the same, and "pet" will be like "bed" and "bag" like "pack."

However, after practising a rushing, long-drawn-out expiration of the mouth-imprisoned air, the unlucky victim who has no throat wil be able to make the necessary distinction.

Dr. Scripture has been less able to teach such persons the vowel sounds, but by placing the tongue, lips and walls of the palate in the appropriate position and blowing with a little tube through the nose and thus down into the mouth, the rush of air through the larynx was rather successfully imitated.

By means of a speaking tube, which terminated in a rubber telephone-like membrane, Dr. Scripture has been able to record all of the various kinds of speech—normal, natural, throatless, and so on.

The important part of Dr. Scripture's discovery rests upon the certainty that such individuals as lose their voices with tuberculosis of the throat, paralysis of the vocal chords, hysteria, insanity, cancer, and accident will now by a course of self-training that costs nothing, be able to re-educate their tongue, lips, mouth, teeth and palate to do the breathing work of the lungs, the tone-work of the throat, and make the vocal sounds of the chords.

Furthermore, when it is necessary for high-priced opera stars to save their throats as much as possible by not using them to talk with, by a little practise with Dr. Scripture's mouth method they may so conserve the strength of their vocal chords as to appear fresh and unfatigued at every performance. Mr. Milton Aborn, of the Aborn English Grand Opera Company, to whom I explained this Scripture scheme, says it is the greatest invention that has ever come to his attention to preserve the voices of opera singers. He intends next year, he says, to bring it to their attention, and feels convinced it will save the singers' voices, the manager a lot of trouble and the public much disappointment.

BATS the Best MOSQUITO FIGHTERS

AN entirely new method of fighting mosquitoes in being adopted by the health authorities of San Antonio, Texas. Bats are being bred for the purpose, and successfully, too.

That is to say, "bat roosts," as they are called, are being erected in various places in the immediate outskirts of the city to give shelter to the little winged mammals. Two such roosts have now been in operation for a year, and each of them harbors a permanent population of about 10,000 bats.

You see, it is like this. Malaria is very bad in San Antonio and its neighborhood. It is carried by mosquitoes. The malaria-carrying mosquito is a night-flyer. So likewise are bats. And bats are exceedingly fond of mosquitoes.

There you have the whole idea in a nutshell. The authorities of San Antonio believe that enough bats can be bred in that vicinity to wipe out the mosquitoes. The erection of the bat roosts is regarded, therefore, as a sanitary measure. Dr. Charles R. Campbell, official bacteriologist of the city, is the inventor of the scheme and the designer of the roosts.

These roosts, as might be imagined, are totally unlike any structure that anybody has ever seen anywhere else in the world. The structure is uplifted to a height of ten feet by four supporting posts, and each of the latter is encircled by an inverted sheet-iron pan with saw edges to prevent cats from climbing up and getting at the bats.

There are no windows. Instead, there runs from top to bottom, on two of the sides, a sort of lattice, constructed very much like an elongated window shutter. The slats, however, are fixed and are turned down at such an angle as to exclude light almost entirely, while allowing just room enough for a bat to go in or come out.

Inasmuch as bats do their sleeping in the daytime, they must have a dark place for the purpose. Hence their liking for lofts of houses and habit of frequenting caves. But caves are scarce, and people usually object to having their lofts occupied by bats. Accordingly, the little creatures have hard times, nearly every man's hand being against them, and certainly every woman's.

The bat roost, however, while providing living quarters for the little animals, protects them against enemies. Thus, comfortably housed and safe, they multiply very rapidly. No artifice is needed to attract them to a shelter constructed in this way. It suits their purposes so obviously that, quite of their own accord, they take up quarters in it, and it is merely a question of how many bats the roost is able to contain.

The wings of a bat are merely modified hands; and when the animal goes to sleep he hangs head downward, suspending himself by two hooks which (speaking in a strictly anatomical sense) are his thumbnails. In the bat roost, the bats thus occupy a series of perches, which, arranged row on row and tier on tier, make it possible for the space inside to accommodate whole regiments—the roost being ten feet square at the bottom and five feet square at the top.

Access is had to the interior of the roost through a sort of scuttle-hole in its bottom—the object of gaining an entrance being to make such repairs as may occasionally be required, and at intervals to collect the droppings of the bats. These droppings are a very valuable guano, and are expected to sell for enough to pay for the cost of building the roosts in a few years.

How the EARTH'S WEIGHT Is Calculated

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTEEN years ago, after the ancients, mediaevals, and other modern astronomers and physicists had failed to agree about the weight of the earth, the celebrated scientist Henry Cavendish measured the attractive power that two lumps of globular lead, which weighed respectively about 400 pounds, had over two similar, but very much smaller, objects. The plainly evident attractive power was estimated by a dainty instrument which consisted of a thin wire, six and one-quarter feet long, which held a little trapeze from which two tiny balls hung. As the two great globules of lead aproach these balls from oposite sides there occurs a twist or "torsion" of the wire which is the index of the effect.

Francis Baily, another physicist, repeated this work more recently. In order to secure extreme accuracy, he made more than 2,000 separate repetitions of this experiment.

It is no difficult matter to compute the pull which the large balls must have given the small ones to produce the effect. If lead balls twelve inches in diameter exert such a force, what would be their force or their dead pull were they as large as the earth?

The attractive force of the earth is known. It is the weight of such balls—that is to say, their tendency to fall. The attractive power of the earth, therefore, may now be compared with the influence or "drawing power" of lead.

The mass and density of lead and similar metals is known, therefore it is merely a matter of multiplying a few figures to find the "drawing power" or attraction of the earth and its weight. The latter is, according to this plan, 5.6 times heavier than a globe of water.

The pendulum method consists in the comparison of two pendulums, one swinging on the surface of the earth and the other beneath the surface. The differences between these show that at a given distance below there is a difference in the time of the swing. Thus the pendulums differ in a definite fraction of a second for each number of feet below the sea level.

This calculation has shown that the earth is really over six times as heavy as water, and the actual weight of the whole globe is 132,000,000,000,000,000,000,000 pounds.

Baby's CRINKLES Have a Meaning ALL THEIR OWN

THE face crinkles of babies are for the first time attracting scientific attention. It seems that they mean something.

One should understand, to start with, that such crinkles are entirely different from wrinkles. When people get old, wrinkles arrive, but the facial furrows of infancy disappear as childhood advances, and in adults few if any traces of them remain.

The question naturally suggests itself, whence does the baby get its crinkles? And what do they signify? The answer is that they are derived from monkey-like ancestors of the human race; and their usefulness is to express violent emotions.

Why violent emotions? Well, you see, the habit of expressing such emotions by facial contortion is a direct inheritance from the monkey-like ancestors aforementioned. The civilized adult does not display fear, anger, jealousy, or other passions in that way; it has been educated out of him.

But the baby has no other means of expressing emotions. It cannot talk, and so, to make known its wants, its feelings, its discomforts, it is obliged to make faces. This sort of sign language is supplemented by cries.

The crinkles which make the pitiful grimace of the babe form a ridge across the nose and extend downward a considerable distance below the corners of the mouth. The skin of the forehead over the "root" of the nose bulges outward; and this bulge is prolonged on either side to right and left, by other well-marked crinkles. At the root of the nose is also a crosswise crinkle, from which the two crinkles extending downward toward the corners of the mouth appear to arise.

Note the bulge over the nose, which is the "emotional centre" of the child's face.

The bulge over the root of the nose seems to be the center of emotonal activity for the baby's face. Toward it, in the act of getting ready to cry, the surrounding features are dragged. The nose-tip is tilted upward and the upper lip is tightened; the eyebrows converge, and the inner corners of the eyes are drawn togther. The forehead is drawn down. Even the mouth is at first tight shut, and the lips are squeezed together, as the chin is forced upward.

Soon, however, the jaw drops, the breathing becomes spasmodic and cries are uttered. The baby does not shed tears during the first few weeks of its life, because the lachrymal apparatus is not yet fully developed.

The kitten, the puppy and most other mammals are born blind. That is to say their eyelids are sealed. Not so with the baby. It can see. But during the first nine days of its life it seldom raises its eyelids, because the light hurts its eyes. And for several weeks the amount of light admitted to its eyes is carefully regulated by the lids.

THE HEART THAT WENT WITH THE POLO CUP.

"Win the Cup and You Win Me," Said Pretty Nancy Steele--and That's Why Devereux Milburn Played the Game of His Life Against His British Rival

Charming Miss Nancy Steele Who Staked Her Heart on the Outcome of the International Polo Match, and (on the Right) Her Sister, the Countess de la Greze.

"Devvie" Milburn as He Looked on the Eventful Afternoon When He Won a Bride by Defeating the British Polo Team.

Miss Eleanora Sears. "Devvie" Milburn Taught Her to Play Polo, but She Sturdily Refused to Learn to Love Him.

WHEN Devereux Milburn, the greatest polo back in the world, defended the American goals in the recent polo tournament on Long Island with such fervor that he wore out half a dozen ponies, he was doing more than keeping the famous silver trophy in this country—he was playing to win a girl's heart. With that silver polo cup went the heart and hand of one of the prettiest girls in America, Miss Nancy Steele, daughter of Charles Steele, who is one of the members of the great Morgan firm. Every spectacular dash down the field that "Devvy" made scored one in his favor with Miss Steele, and counted one against the British player who had entered the lists against "Devvy" the player as well as "Devvy" the lover.

Every time "Devvy" passed the ball to Larry Waterbury, thus helping Larry to make one of his sensational goal plays, "Devvy" scored another point in Nancy's favor. The forty thousand men and women who thronged the great grand stands at Meadow Brook to watch the fight between the finest polo players in the world had no idea that before their eyes there was also being played a delightfully idyllic love game. Not one of them knew that a heart was to go with the cup. Miss Steele and her lovers (for there were two of them) kept the secret well.

And more than one secret was thus kept, for not until this moment has the name of the rival Englishman been mentioned. No. Miss Steele steadfastly refused to tell, but finally one of her closest friends whispered to one of her closest friends that the unlucky man was that wonderful backhand player, Captain Vivian Lockett, of the Indian Army.

It was a rare contest, a contest that would have put to shame the knights of old who fought for their ladies' hearts and favors. Never in the earliest days of romance did brave lover fight more bravely; never did a defeated rival take his defeat more gamely.

But how did this all happen?

Miss Steele's polo enthusiasm is not of mushroom growth. She began to follow the game long before she put on long skirts and turned up her chestnut pigtails. At ten years she was a rabid rooter for the Meadow Brook teams, and every year since she has kept her enthusiasm at concert pitch.

When she was eleven she told her older sister Eleanor, that she would never marry a man who did not play polo; and, more than that, he must be a great player, not just an amateur. While her younger sister and her girl friends were reading fairy tales, Nancy's favorite book was a treatise on the noble game of polo.

Two years ago, when the American team won the tournament from the Britons and the cup was kept in this country Nancy said to herself that only a man fitted to win that cup should win her heart.

But all this time she was going about having the usual jolly time that girls of her wealth and social standing have in this country. Her sister Eleanor fell in love and married a French nobleman, Count Jean de la Greze. Nancy was one of the bridesmaids. Her only criticism of the new brother-in-law was that he did not know a thing about polo.

Last Winter Nancy came out. Her debut was one of the important events of the New York season. She danced and dined and skated and flirted generally, but there was no one man with whom her name was seriously connected. But early in the Spring, 'way back in March, when the practice polo games began, it was seen that Nancy attended every one of them, no matter how cold the wind that blew over the Hempstead plains.

"Nancy has gone back to her first love," said her friends.

But, you see, Nancy had never deserted her first love. She was merely going on with it. But now she had a new object in view. Being a wise young person she knew that if she was to marry a polo player she would have to make her choice from among the men who would play in the international matches. And necessarily her choice was limited, for only two of the American players were unmarried, and the English team at the time was not formed.

With so charming and delightful a maiden as Miss Nancy following the games so interestedly, there could be but one outcome. The good-looking back on the team, "Devvy" Milburn, an, it pleases you, fell desperately, strenuously in love with Miss Nancy, and there were soon evidences that she was losing her heart to him. But she was a strong-minded young charmer, and intended to test her lover before promising to love, honor and obey him.

Of course there was no third or fourth person present to hear what Mr. Milburn said to Miss Steele or what Miss Steele said to Mr. Milburn on the day that he put his fate to the jump. But the events that have transpired since that time make it possible for us to reconstruct that conversation.

"I love you. Will you marry me?" were undoubtedly some of the words used by the lover.

"Yes, perhaps—that is, I will if you win the polo game," were undoubtedly some of the words used in Miss Steele's answer.

Very well, then. "Devvy" knew that his task was comparatively easy. All he had to do was to keep the Britons from winning the tournament! "And that will be a cinch," said "Devvy," the greatest polo back in the world.

But hist! Another factor enters this exciting game of hearts and polo. A year ago, when Nancy was visiting her sister, the Countess de la Greze, in France, she met the most charming English officer, home from India on leave. His name was Lockett, and he certainly could talk as well as play polo. He found the American beauty keenly interested in his game and himself. He became interested in her, not only because she was beautiful and fascinating, but because it was rumored that she had vowed to marry only a great polo player.

The fact that she was Charlie Steele's daughter, and sure to inherit several of his millions, did not count so very heavily with the Englishman. In fact, not once have these millions affected either Milburn or Lockett. Millions and romance never go together.

But alas! In the midst of a very interesting friendship that might have terminated happily, orders came which sent the Indian officer back to his company in India.

Miss Steele returned to America.

And now, you see, we are back again to the point where Mr. Milburn is put to the test—where he finds that he must win the cup if he would win the lady.

He puts such force into his practice game that he wears out his opponents and his ponies. And in the very heat of things word comes from the Duke of Westminster that Vivian Lockett, of the Indian army, will be one of the team sent here to fight for the cup! But, naturally, "Devvy" did not know that this announcement would materially affect his love affair. He did not know of the impending menace to his love romance. He did not know that what he thought was a twosome would become a three-cornered game the instant the Briton landed on Long Island.

But Miss Steele undoubtedly had her suspicions. Captain Lockett was a constant visitor at Sunnyridge, the handsome home of the Steeles. He plainly showed his interest in the tall, handsome Nancy, and whenever possible he rode and drove with her. But——

"Devvy" also rode and drove. And "Devvy" also played as good polo as ever. Rumor has it that there were times when Miss Steele resented his devotion to his game. She might want him to win the cup, but she also wanted his attendance on her to be more faithful. This attitude was not logical, but Miss Steele was a woman.

There was no third person present when Captain Lockett urged his claim on Miss Steele, but, as in the case of Mr. Milburn, it is possible to piece out the conversation.

"Will you marry me? I adore you," was undoubtedly the tenor of the Captain's conversation.

And there is no doubt that Miss Steele said: "I will marry the man who wins the polo cup. If the Britons win you will win me, but if the Americans win Mr. Milburn will win me."

And now we come down to the day the last game was played in the tournament.

The American team had won the first game, one of the most spectacular and thrilling games ever fought. The Britons were as determined to win the second game as the Americans.

But no one was more tense during the sixty minutes play than Nancy Steele seated in her father's box in the club enclosuer. When Captain Lockett made on of these astounding back-hand plays and sent "Devvy" Milburn hurling down the field after the ball, Nancy's hands clutched her parasol and her cheeks flushed red as roses. There were tense moments throughout that game that made her heart flutter loud enough to be heard way over on the field. At least she thought so.

Then came the last period when the score stood one half goal in favor of England. It looked very much as though Nancy would become a British subject by marriage. Then in the very last ball or the last period Lockett himself fouled Larry Waterbury and the Britons were penalized the half goal and the victory went to "Devvy" and his team. Lockett after all gave "Devvy" his bride!

The announcement that Miss Steele would marry "Devvy" was made the day after the cup was won. And everybody said that it was just what they expected. But you see only the closest friends knew the secret of the double love affair.

Mr. Milburn has had more than one promising love affair. A few seasons ago when Miss Eleanor Sears was playing polo with a men's team Mr. Milburn devoted himself to her so constantly that an engagement was fully expected. But although "Devvy" taught the athletic Bobby all she knows about polo and although she has always attended every big game when "Devvy" played, still she refused to reward him. And he has naturally turned to another for comfort. There is a rumor, however, that the strenuous Bobby does not like having "Devvy" find comfort so soon!

Milburn is one of the popular idols in the polo world. He is a son of John Milburn at whose home in Buffalo President M'Kinley died. He learned his game in England when he was a student at Oxford, but his love game he has learned in this country. And in both games Mr. Milburn has shown himself an adept, as results show.

WHY CRIME DOES NOT PAY—

No. 15 of a Series of Remarkable Revelations, by Sophie Lyons, QUEEN OF THE BURGLARS."

Famous Robberies Where Fortunes in Diamonds Were the Lure That Led Thieves to Lay the Shrewdest Plans and Run the Most Desperate Risks

SOPHIE LYONS.

"Disguised as a sister of charity, I easily obtained permission to go through the house and gather up a basket of flowers for the hospital. But besides the flowers, my nimble fingers found time to take possession of many costly wedding gifts, which I carefully concealed in my basket of posies and in the folds of my black robe. Suddenly, just as I was picking up a magnificent diamond necklace, a detective stepped from behind a portiere and sternly asked what I was doing."

NEXT to money, professional criminals regard diamonds as the most desirable loot of all.

Taken from their settings these stones are practically unidentifiable. Unless a stone is of unusual size or possesses some marked peculiarity, not even an expert would attempt to pick it out from half a dozen others of the same size with which it had been mingled.

For this reason, stolen diamonds may be disposed of with little or no risk. The burglar does not even have to sell them to a "fence" or professional receiver of stolen property, but may dispose of his booty in the wholesale jewelry district with impunity, unless, of course, for some reason or other it is necessary for him to keep under cover. Even then he can get one of his pals to dispose of the stones for him, or a "fence" will give him practically full value for them.

Then, too, diamonds appeal to the burglar because they are easily carried and secreted.

There was a criminal named Charles Woodward who made a specialty of robbing jewelry stores. He was what is known as a "pennyweight" thief. "Pennyweights" usually operate in couples. They enter a jewelry store, ask to see some loose diamonds, and while one of them engages the attention of the clerk, the other snatches a stone from the tray and makes off with it. In the excitement of the pursuit which follows, the first "pennyweight" makes his escape.

Woodward earned the name of "Charlie the Diamond Swallower," because when caught he made a practice of actually swallowing his loot. Such a ruse would hardly be feasible with any other loot than diamonds.

Because diamonds are so highly regarded in the underworld, many of the brainiest and most resourceful professional criminals have devoted their efforts exclusively to the looting of jewelry stores and private houses where jewels in large quantities might be expected to be found.

Very large hauls have been made by these diamond robbers. Next to the robbing of banks, diamond robberies, perhaps, have netted professional criminals more than any other species of crime. Hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of precious stones have been secured in a single robbery. I have made several big hauls of this character myself, and I know scores of burglars who made a specialty of diamond robberies who were equally successful.

But even the diamond robber does not make his profession pay. What he gains by stealth and by the exercise of his ingenuity, he loses over the gaming table or in other forms of dissipation.

There was Dave Cummings for instance. He was one of the most "successful" burglars in the business. In the underworld, he was regarded as a prince of his trade and was the envy of all lesser lights. He divided his attention between jewelry stores and banks.

Down in New Orleans, by a very clever scheme, he succeeded in robbing the safe of Schooler's jewelry store and got away with $100,000 worth of diamonds.

Dave's resourcefulness was well-illustrated in this case. The store was located in Canal street and the safe stood directly in front of a glass door, where it was in plain view of a watchman who made his rounds every hour.

The safe was of the burglar-proof variety, and Dave figured that it would require at least two hours' work to get the best of it. For a week he studied the layout endeavoring to work out a plan by which he could get two hours' of uninterrupted work on the safe. At length, he solved the difficulty. Having gained an entrance to the place he rigged up a dummy safe in the rear of the store, waited until the watchman had made his hourly inspection and then carefully substituted the dummy safe for the real one. One hour later the watchman appeared upon the scene again and looked through the glass door, but he didn't suspect for a moment that the safe he saw was anything but what it appeared to be, and all the time Dave was busily engaged in the rear of the store cracking the real safe.

Cummings's loot amounted to $100,000 in this case. Somewhat later he cracked the safe of the First National Bank of Quincy, Ill., and got away with $539,000 in currency, bonds and other securities, and within the year he stole $400,000 from the Falls City Bank of Louisville, Ky., not to mention anything of several minor diamond robberies he committed in addition.

Yet all this enormous fortune, aggregating nearly two million dollars and accumulated within a little over two years, went the way of all ill-gotten gains. Wine, women and faro took it. Within a few months after the last of these big hauls was made Dave was absolutely "broke!"

If anyone imagines then that there is comfort or contentment to be gotten out of the proceeds of a life of crime, this experience of Dave Cummings and similar experiences of the hundreds of other "successful" criminals whose stories I am revealing ought to banish the delusion. No one could possibly be more "successful" in his business than these criminals were in theirs, and yet their lives pointed ever to the conclusion that CRIME DOES NOT PAY.

Weddings offer fine opportunities for diamond robbers. Many clever schemes are used to get access to the room where the wedding presents are displayed. I have engineered a number of these robberies, and we always got away without being detected, although we had many narrow escapes.

I had been reading the papers pretty closely in the hope of learning of some fashionable wedding which would answer my purpose. I saw my opportunity in the announcement of the coming wedding of the daughter of a very wealthy man. The ceremony was to be performed in their town house and the wedding presents, said to represent a fortune, would undoubtedly be placed on view for the edification of the guests. I knew that the father was very much interested in charitable works, and that, as was usual in such cases, the flowers and rare plants used to decorate the house would afterward be sent to some hospital or similar organization for the benefit of the inmates.

I followed the papers and read all I could find about this particular wedding. It was said that a well-known detective concern had been engaged to keep watch on the presents, owing to the fact that many additional waiters and servants would be on hand and every precaution was necessary to guard against thieves.

After the festivities are over and the bride and groom have left the house, it is customary in such cases for most of the detectives to go, only one or two remaining to keep an eye on the wedding presents until they have been safely deposited in the vaults.

That was the time I chose to descend upon the house and make the haul I had in mind. I dressed myself up as a sister of charity and, taking an assistant with me, I called at the house in a cab. I asked for the father of the bride and stated that I had been sent by the hospital to ask for some of the flowers. Permission was at once given me to go through the house and select what I wanted.

It looked very simple. I went from floor to floor picking up flowers here and there and handing them to my assistant or to one of the servants to carry down to my waiting cab.

At length I came to the room where the gifts were displayed. I was astonished to find the room was apparently unguarded, although there were one or two servants of the house constantly passing through. I picked up a pot or two of flowers, occasionally managing to get a piece of jewelry at the same time. Suddenly my eyes were attracted by a magnificent diamond necklace. I determined to include it in my loot, but there were no flowers near it, and I was at a loss for a moment to know how to get to it without arousing the suspicion of any one who happened to pass through the room.

I waited until I thought the room was empty and then walked boldly over to the table on which the necklace lay. I picked it up and was about to conceal it on my person when from behind a portiere a man whom I at once knew to be a detective stepped out and asked me what I was doing.

"What's the matter?" Dave demanded angrily. "Are we going to rob this store or are you going to turn nurse and hold that watchman's broken head all night?"

I retained my self-possession.

"What a terrible waste of money!" I exclaimed, holding out the necklace at arm's length. "These vain baubles must be worth thousands of dollars, I suppose, and here they lie idly on this table. How many lives the wealth they represent might save! How much misery and suffering it might avert!"

The detective gave me a searching glance and then, as I lay the necklace down again, he crossed himself, put his hand in his pocket and gave me a quarter as if to atone for what he considered his unjust suspicions of me!

I continued my trip through the room, gathering flowers and jewels wherever I could lay my hands on them, for the detective, his suspicions completely disarmed, was no longer to be feared, and as I passed the table on which the necklace lay I succeeded in getting my hands on it again and concealing it among the armful of flowers I carried. Then I made my way to the cab and drove off.

Once in my room I quickly disposed of the flowers and set to work preparing the jewelry for sale to a "fence." The stuff was worth fully $50,000. After all the stones were out of their settings and the metal had been battered I succeeded in disposing of the whole lot for $35,000.

Some weeks ago I told of the bank robbery which I carried through at the request of the bank's president. He was over $150,000 short in his accounts, and he conceived the plan of having his bank robbed in order to save his own skin.

Other kinds of business besides banks sometimes find it convenient to resort to similar practices.

A good many years ago a diamond merchant with a place of business on Maiden Lane called to see me and suggested that I go to his place some night and rob his safe. I said I would be glad to accommodate him provided he would pay the price. He was surprised at my mention of a price, and asked me why I wouldn't be satisfied with the proceeds of the robbery instead of expecting an advance payment.

I told him I would not consider the job at all unless he paid me fifteen thousand dollars in advance. He said that was entirely too much for such an easy job.

"Why, all you have to do," he declared, "is to get into my office, open the safe and clean up an easy fifteen thousand dollars worth of stones!"

Then I got up to go, but he called me back and at length agreed to my terms, although he offered me a check for the amount at first. Of course, I made him give me cash, and it was agreed that there were to be fifteen thousand dollars worth of jewels in the safe in addition. I then made him sign a statement setting forth our agreement and binding him to use his best efforts to secure our release in the event that we were caught. I was to return the agreement when all its terms had been complied with.

Within two weeks after our talk I had got together my little bank of burglars and safe crackers and was in readiness for the job. We went into the building a little before closing hours in the afternoon and secreted ourselves until the doors had been locked.

About eleven o'clock I sent out one of my band to look around. A moment later I heard a terrible crash and a weak voice exclaiming: "Oh, don't kill me! Don't kill me!" There was the sound of another heavy blow and then all was quiet.

I went out to see what the trouble was. On the floor outside the private office where the safe was located lay the inert body of a watchman. Blood was streaming from his head, and Dave, the burglar I had sent out to look around, stood over him with a blackjack in his hand. I knelt beside him and felt his pulse, but it seemed to have stopped.

"What's the matter, Sophie?" demanded Dave angrily; "have you grown chicken-hearted? Are we going to crack this box, or are you going to turn nurse and hold that man's head all night?"

At length I detected signs of life in the prostrate watchman, but I wouldn't leave him, and made the others go on with the job without me.

They worked on the safe for two hours or so and finally got into it. They took out everything of value and we then skipped out. As I left the floor I threw a pail of water over the unconscious watchman, and was relieved to see him gather himself together as we made our way out of the building.

The next day of course there was a tremendous excitement over the robbery of this jewelry house, which was one of the largest in the city at the time. The poor watchman was taken to the hospital, but he was sick more from his terror than from any injury we had inflicted on him. He gave the police a fanciful description of the robbers, but it was so far off from our real description that the police never connected us with the affair.

A few weeks after the matter had died down we sold the jewelry to a well known jeweller, who used to keep a place on Fourteenth street, and got four thousand for the diamonds, although they were worth ten thousand dollars.

Kelso was the Chief of Police at that time, and he sent down a crowd of detectives to look for the robbers. The owner of the store told the police he had lost several hundred thousand dollars worth of jewelry, and of course he went into bankruptcy, his creditors never knowing that he was the main thief and got most of the loot. He got into trouble and lost his money in Wall Street. Hence his desire for bankruptcy.

I had another experience with a jeweller who wanted a robbery perpetrated, but not on himself. A competitor of his had been paying too much attention to his wife, and he became jealous of her. He was anxious to ruin the jeweller who was making inroads into his peace of mind. He came to me for the job, and I politely turned him down. I had good reason at first for doubting his sincerity in making me the proposition, because I had myself robbed this jealous jeweller a few days before. He had an intuition that I robbed him, but he could not produce any proof. This was in St. Louis. I had met two old friends from New York City. They had designs upon a jewelry house and wanted me to go along with them. We went into the jewelry store of this jealous husband just to size things up, and the men with me had no intention of taking anything that day. But while they were talking with the proprietor I saw an opportunity to gather in some good looking pieces and accordingly took up a tray of diamonds without being noticed. The next day the papers had an account of the robbery and nobody seemed to know who the thieves were.

The two men were surprised at this because it naturally put them off in their work, and they were inclined to suspect me. But I convinced them that I could not have taken the diamonds and they quickly left town in disgust. The jeweller had told about the visit of the woman to his store and I was hunted up and taken to the station.

The diamonds of course were not found on me or in my apartment, because I had already hidden them safely, and the police had to let me go.

A few days after this a rap came to my door in the evening and a nicely dressed young man asked permission to come into my room. I did not know who he was, and told him I could not permit such a thing; I had been put out of a hotel in another city because I allowed men to visit my room, and I did not want to have the same thing happen here. The young man went off, and a few days after I left St. Louis. A month later I met this young man in Chicago and he came up to me and bowed. He said he was the owner of the jewelry store that had been robbed, and after a little round about talk he asked me to go back with him to St. Louis. I asked him what he wanted that for, and he then suggested that I rob his competitor. He said he had suffered a considerable loss, and it was only fair that his competitor should be placed on even terms with him. I was quite young at that time, and did not dare take up such a proposition as this, for I had found that when things are made easy for you there is something bad going to happen to you later on. So I would not take a chance with the diamond merchant. A year later I was back in St. Louis and learned the true state of affairs; how the competitor was flirting with this man's wife and how finally the whole matter went into the divorce court for adjustment. While I was there I met the jeweller, and he told me he would soon be free from his wife and asked me to marry him. I had to decline.

Some years ago when I was summering at Nice, I had an experience which afforded me a lot of satisfaction. I found out afterward that I had stolen a march on Mrs. Helen Gardner, alias Lady Temple, the notorious English swindler and confidence woman.

One of the fine jewelry shops for which this resort is famous had a diamond bracelet which I coveted more than I ever did any other piece of jewelry. It was a magnificent thing—but the price was entirely beyond my means. At last I decided that if I could not get it by fair means I would by foul.

One morning I was standing in this store pretending to be looking at some rings, but really watching for an opportunity to get my hands on that bracelet, when the woman who later proved to be Mrs. Gardner, alias Lady Temple, entered. She was a tall, beautiful brunette—gowned in the most expensive fashion.

I was attracted not only by her striking appearance but also by the sly way she had of taking everything in from the corners of her eyes without seeming to be looking. This, and some other familiar mannerisms made me jump to the conclusion that she was either a high-class thief or a detective.

This woman took up a position just behind me, and, although I could not see her, something told me that she was watching my every movement with more than passing interest. I was just on the point of abandoning my plans for the bracelet when, to my great relief, she finished her errand and left the store.

As the door closed behind her my long awaited opportunity came. The salesman who was showing me the rings was called away for a minute, leaving me all alone in the front of the store.

He had carelessly left the showcase open. There in full view lay the bracelet—the bracelet for which my fingers fairly itched! Could I reach it?

There was not a second to lose. I raised myself on tiptoe, bent my body forward over the broad showcase and reached my right hand down into the opening at the back. By stretching my arm until the muscles ached my fingers barely touched the bracelet.

Another mighty stretch, and my hand closed over it. More quickly than it takes to tell I drew my arm back and hid the precious plunder in my sleeve. I was not an instant too soon, for the salesman returned before I fairly had time to resume the normal attitude of an honest customer.

I was so excited and jubilant that I felt like running all the way to the hotel. The bracelet was easily worth $5,000, and I knew that the minute its loss was discovered there would be a great hue and cry. So I hid the costly trinket in a jar of face cream and prepared to seclude myself in my room under pretense of sickness until the excitement had time to blow over.

To my delight no detectives came to disturb my solitude and the only news I got of the robbery was from the long accounts the newspapers printed. Soon I thought it safe to recover my health and go out again. On the first day I ventured downstairs whom should I meet in the hotel parlors but the same woman I had seen in the jewelry store.

My guilty knowledge of that bracelet in the cold cream jar upstairs made me inclined to avoid her. She, however, plainly showed her anxiety to make my acquaintance, and at the first opportunity fairly forced a conversation. I soon saw that she was no detective, but just who she was—where she got her money and what she was doing at Nice—long remained a mystery to me.

But although diamond robberies frequently net big returns, even the most expert professional criminals who have followed this line of work have invariably found that their success is short-lived—and that CRIME DOES NOT PAY.

The Devil, D'Annunzio and Ida Rubinstein

Ida Rubinstein, the Dancer, as She Was When She First Captivated D'Annunzio, and Before She Fled from Him.

The Decadent Dramatist and the Recently Repentant Russian Dancer Brought Together Again by His New Play, the Latest Sensual Prodigy of the Paris Stage

Paris, July 5.

THE life of asceticism and pious devotion could not hold Ida Rubinstein and Gabriele d'Annunzio.

She, the most temperamental, passionate of all Russian dancers, is now playing the leading role in D'Annunzio's new poetic drama, "The Pisanella, or the Perfumed Death."

He, the most erotic, decadent yet gifted of all verbal magicians, fell madly in love with the dancer when she was playing his "Saint Sebastian." She rejected his wooing, for the spirit of the drama had turned her soul to religion. D'Annunzio was not a man a moralist could approve, for he had a wife and he has most basely ill-treated the great Eleonora Duse, not to mention others.

Ida Rubinstein's example made him repentant also. He decided to return to Italy to make amends to those he had wronged and pay off the enormous debts from which he had fled. She went away to the wilds to repent and purify her soul. But the love of luxury, the yearnings of the flesh and the old deep-rooted habits of life were too strong for both of them. They are both back in Paris again and together.

"The devil has them for good now," say the cynical Parisians.

"The Pisanella" is the most hectic, morbidly sensual yet picturesque and original work that has yet been produced by D'Annunzio. Its effect is heightened enormously by the wonderful scenery and costumes designed by the great Russian artist, Leon Bakst. It is accompanied by mystical harmonies by Debussy. Its production at the Chatelet Theatre was the most memorable occurrence in recent dramatic art.

The scene is laid in Cyprus in the thirteenth century, when the beautiful Mediterranean island was a kingdom founded by the Crusaders and the haunt of the most desperate adventurers of Eastern Europe. Cyprus was the reputed birthplace of Venus, and some of the islanders still worship the sensual pagan goddess, while others put their hopes in a poor Christian virgin from the people who, according to legend, will deliver them from pestilence, drought and famine.

With these beliefs is mingled the legend of a lord of the island, who placed his wedding ring on a statue of Venus. The statue came to life, entered the nuptial chamber, and the young lord's bride, seeing that he was overcome with admiration, killed herself in despair.

The time has come when the very young and innocent king of the island, Huguet de Lusignan, should marry. His ambitious and heartless mother, and his unscrupulous brother-in-law, the Prince of Tyre, wish him to marry a princess of powerful family. He dreams of marrying a poor Christian maiden who will realize the legend of the people. All this is explained in the prologue. The play is written in very curious old French verse, with irregular unrhymed lines.

The first act shows the harbor front of Famagusta, the port of Cyprus, crowded with corsairs and pirates of all nations, who are selling the slaves and booty captured from Saracen ships. Conspicuous among the captives is a very beautiful young woman, enacted by Ida Rubinstein, who is offered at auction. Obert Embriac, a Genoese knight, desperately wounded in capturing her, is madly in love with her and demands her for himself. Here are striking passages from this scene:

THE AUCTIONEER.
In the name of God, this woman is offered at auction.

FERNAND VALAR.
Messire Frazes, desirest thou that we unbind her,
That you may be able
Better to know her and judge
Her whole body? She is perfectly formed
And you will win the gem of the booty.

* * * * * * *

OBERT EMBRIAC.
By the sacred emerald
Of Caesarea
Wretch, if any one attempts to put a hand on her
I will give him such a stroke in the mouth
That my sword's point will come out
Through the back of his neck.

FERNAND VALAR.
Hold your tongue.
You interfere with the liberty
Of the auction.

A fierce contest between bidders for the beautiful captive goes on, interrupted by outcries from the wounded Obert Embriac, who finally silences the others with his ravings, crying:

Stop, stop, you foolish bidders,
Where is all this gold you offer?
Is it in your dogs' jowls?
Is it in your pigs' bellies?
This blood stained bandage
Weighs more than all you possess,
And this four-foot sword
Still more. This woman.
Is mine, comrades.
She, the gem of the booty, is mine.
Yes, Sadoc, the Jew,
I have paid for her with an ounce
Of burning brain.
You have seen me, Valar, rush upon them.
The shafts of my oars
Burned in the oarlocks.
I boarded the Saracen barque amidship.
I struck them so close
That the blood splashed in my face.
As I fought my way to the poop
My face was all red with slaughter,
yet I
Was still without hurt. I had
All my life
In my Christian soul, with the lives
Of all these dead men,
And I know not what other strange lives,
When under the poop
Bending I have seen her,
And she gushed over my spirit
Like the great foam
Thrown up by the galley's oar.
Woman, do you remember?
Speak and testify in Christ!
She did not cry
When I placed my hand upon her shoulder,
Colder and smoother
Than a ship's ballast stone,
But she threw her head back like
The rower who throws himself
Backward and falls on his bench.
With what oar stroke have
You then driven my life,
Woman, towards what billow?
Suddenly the axe struck me.
See; my blood ceases
Not to flow.

Ida Rubinstein, Who Now Plays the Part of the Pisan Courtesan in D'Annunzio's Strange New Drama. Drawn by Leon Bakst, the Famous Russian Artist.

(He feels the bandage with his left hand and draws it back covered with blood.)
Is she not mine, comrades?
(The grimace of death again curls up his purple lips.)
But you are misers.
You are lovers of gold.
I will give you gold,
I will give it to you, little hucksters.
Take my share of the prize,
Take my cargo of wheat, which is coming
Into port. Take my aloes wood
And all my balm of Gilead.
Then do you wish a city?
(Madness takes ever greater hold upon him.)
I will give you one.
I am an Embriac,
With arms of three lions sable.
I have taken Arsouf and Caesarea and Acre.
I will give a quarter
At Joppa, another at Tripoli,
And all my houses and my churches,
And all my moneys,
And my fountains,
And my docks from Tyre to Gibraltar,
And from Laodicea to Antioch,
And from Tarsus and Caffa to Trebizond!
A whole troop of Tartar
Slaves, worth three hundred ducats a head,
Gentle and submissive as hounds,
For this woman.
The orchards of Taurus with walls of enamel
And doors of silver
For this woman!
Three isles which perfume
With mastic the archipelago
And bubble with must like wine vats
For this woman!
And is that not enough?
The emerald, the sacred
Hollowed emerald,
Which Embriac, the stormer of cities,
Withdrew from the flame
Without burning his hand, I give to you
For this woman!
And I press out the blood
In which I have soaked this cloth
(He makes a movement to tear away the bloody bandage. He staggers in the vertigo of delirium.)
That she may drink of it
(Without releasing his grip of his sword he falls heavily on his face.)
In Christ.
(He makes no further movement. He is dead.)

"Ida Rubinstein, the dancer and Gabriele D'Annunzio, the dramatist, are collaborating in his new drama of death. 'The devil has them for good now,' say the cynical Parisians."

The Prince of Tyre also claims the captive, but the King then arrives with wagonloads of provisions for the suffering people. They acclaim him with joy and think they see in the beautiful captive the legendary maiden who is to marry him and relieve them from their misery. By the King's orders they carry her in triumph to a convent.

In the second act the nuns are seen climbing a ladder to peer through the window of the Blessed Maiden, as they call the captive. To their surprise they find her adorning herself, painting her eyebrows and coquetting before a mirror. She is preparing herself for the King.

Then the Prince of Tyre arrives, followed by a band of courtesans who declare that the strange woman is one of their own kind formerly notorious at Pisa, in Italy, whence she is called the "Pisanella." As the Prince is about to seize her the King enters and strikes him down with his sword. The Prince cries:

You have killed me,
But you are doomed to the fires of hell,
For this is the enemy,
She is your statue of marble.

The young King loves the Pisanella madly, believing her to be the maiden of legend. The whole island is torn into warring factions fighting for or against her. She brings death and ruin to the great and rich, but the poor still regard her as their salvation. The court is distracted by the reports of her charms. Blancheflor, a lady of honor to the Queen Mother, thus describes her charms to the Court:

She has a proudly raised head
Like that of some sweet serpent I have heard of. Her eyes
I have described. Her eyebrows
Hold the loveliness
Of the world as a new leaf
Keeps the tears of its first rainfall.
Often she seems to breathe
Through her hair. Her mouth
Seems to ask her breath back again
From the soul which has closed it.
And there is nothing else.
That is the cause of all.

Sometimes she throws back
Her head; and it suffices
That she moistens her lips
With the tip of her tongue
That suddenly her whole cruel face
Seems to be steeped
In a marvellous liquid,
Which effaces her features.
At that instant her face
Is nothing but the miracle
Of a lovely pool in which swims
A spray of rose.
And there is nothing else.
That is the cause of all.

Gabriele D'Annunzio.

The desperate Queen Mother determines to free her son forever from the fascination of this terrible woman. She gives a great banquet in his honor, to which all the great lords and ladies of the island are invited. The Queen Mother asks the "Pisanella" to dance.

This dance is Ida Rubinstein's triumph of art and sensualism.

While she dances with wonderful fire and seductiveness, negro slaves, directed by the Queen Mother, surround her with arms full of roses. They throw them upon her as if in homage to her skill. Thicker and thicker they throw them, until she sinks under the weight of perfumed tributes and is crushed to death.

This is the perfumed death of the Pisan courtesan. Two fierce leopards in a gilded cage are held in readiness to finish the work that the roses have begun.

As the Pisanella lies silent under the mound of roses the young King enters and confronts the Queen Mother. These are the words that the audience thought they caught amid the sonorous splendor of the scenery:

THE KING.
Strange rumors send me hither,
Aghast, yet unbelieving.
If aught of ill has here befallen
The Christian Maid——
THE QUEEN MOTHER.
See you this
Mound of votive garlands,
These leopards still in leash?
What ill can roses do to Christian
Maid—
Or painted Venus?
'Tis true, with nimble feet
She danced, the while with carmined lips
She smiled—the very smile that once
In Cyprus——
THE KING.
She's not that same.
The Lord of Tyre found death
In self-same slander of the Maid
By Heaven sent
To save this land
From famine, pestilence and ruin.
THE QUEEN MOTHER.
(As though the King had remained silent.)
So graceful was her dance, so sweet
Her carmined smile,
I bade my slaves to deck her well
With garlands she had won.
Behold! So well was she rewarded
You see her not—but only
Votive roses
In the towering heap, of which, mayhap,
She is the swooning heart.
THE KING.
Murderess!
(He digs frantically among the garlands. Then, realizing that no life could survive in that suffocating heap, he rises and denounces the Queen in a frenzy of rage and despair.)

At the end of the King's denunciation, which includes a panegyric on the Pisanella, he falls upon the mound of roses in a swoon—and thus the play ends.

"Beauty Sleep" Means 9 Hours.

By ELIZABETH SLOAN CHESSER, M. D., Lecturer at the London Institute of Hygiene.

EVERY woman desires to be beautiful. Many who are not, would be if they did not let less important matters infringe on their due allowance of sleep. Beauty sleep means nine hours out of each twenty-four—no less.

Every human being who works during the day needs nine hours of sleep at night to restore expanded vitality. The claims of society upon fashionable women are equivalent as vitality absorbers to the daily tasks of working women. Nothing takes the place of adequate sleep in obliterating the unbeautiful signs of vitality over-expended, in work or pleasure.

There are other pointed reminders for women troubled by signs of fading beauty. If women paid at least as much attention to their teeth and their digestions as they do to their complexions they would be better looking in consequence.

There would be fewer invalids in the world to-day if more work, rather than rest cures, were prescribed for hypochondriacs.

It is work that makes life interesting, healthy and worth living.

Apart from recent unhappiness or bereavement, the natural human being ought to be happy. A certain number of people who worry require more work in their lives.

Many women are unhealthy because they have no definite plan of life, because they are self-centred, and because their time is not sufficiently filled up with domestic duties and family responsibilities to use up their energy. Every woman should determine to concentrate on optimism, healthy-mindedness, and not allow herself to sink into despondency, depressing thoughts and emotions.

How they Danced the Tango in Greece 3000 Years Ago!

The Ancient Greeks Had Cabarets, too, and Knew How to Do the Turkey Trot

A Movement from an Ancient Greek "Owl Dance," from a Painting at Pompeii. Note the Man and Woman Staring in Each Other's Eyes, as Modern Dancers Do.

Assyrian Hired Dancers, from an Old Greek Decoration.

The 3,000-Years-Ago "Tango," from a Pompeian Wall Painting, Danced by a Man and a Woman, as To-day.

NOT excepting the Tango, the Turkey Trot, the Grizzly Bear and the Bunny Hug, there is nothing new under the sun in the way of dancing. The Greeks exhausted the subject three thousand years ago. For proof of which statement see reproductions of rare old decorative drawings on this page.

The joke is on the Isadora Duncans and Lady Constance Richardsons. After all their studious efforts, their demonstrations in public and the Herculean feats of their press agents to "revive the dances of ancient Greece," they have left it to the unlettered masses to emulate the dancing Greeks in their really merry moments.

While an exceedingly small percentage of the population is following the ceremoniously classic examples set by the ladies referred to, everybody's doin' it—that is, the Tango, et cetera—very much as they were done by youthful Greeks thirty centuries ago in their blithesome moods.

Not only did these festive Grecians copy the movements of birds, fowls and beasts in their popular dances at merrymaking, but they danced together in couples, a man and a woman, with even less regard for the feelings of the prudish of their day—of which there were none, by the way—than is exhibited by the bunny-hugging couples at any Coney Island dance hall.

Yet the Tango, the Turkey Trot and so forth have achieved vast popularity without the slightest excuse or claim for them that they actually inherited part of the "glory that was Greece." Apparently their reason for being was inherent in them, due to an origin in nature's unconsciously rhythmical moving creatures—just as similar dances of the ancient Greeks originated.

While primarily the dance of Greece was a form of worship and a branch of education, it did not long remain stationary, and made its way from religion into every-day life, forming part of all merrymaking.

Dancing was reduced almost to a science by the Greeks, who classified their dances somewhat as follows: Kubistic, including leaping and acrobatic feats; Speristic, rhythmical movements accompanying ball-throwing; orchestic, or dancing proper, as we understand it.

A kind of warlike dance called gymnopaidia was performed by two groups of children or youths, quite nude, singing hymns, and marching, skipping and whirling. Sometimes there were three choruses, as among the Lacedaemonians when verses accompanied the dance. The old men sang:

"We once were young and gay like you,
Valiant, bold and active, too."

The young men responded:

"'Tis now our turn, and you shall see You've ne'er deserved it more than we."

Then the boys chimed in:

"The day shall come when we shall show
Feats that surpass all you can do."

The great war dance was the Pyrrhic, and by the laws of Sparta every child over five had to learn it. Heroic in its character, and of course danced by men alone, it afterward degenerated into a mixed dance, each warrior having a female partner. Daedalus is said to have invented this variation, teaching it to the seven youths and maidens saved from the Minotaur by Theseus.

The Hormos was one of the greatest of Greek war dances, the men taking all the heroic poses of warriors, the maidens portraying modesty and grace in every movement. In Sparta the girls danced with one knee bare, in honor of Diana. Everyone has observed how nearly that effect is produced by the new costumes slit on one side.

In the dramatic dances of ancient Greece are the germs of the Roman and Greek pantomime and our modern ballet. There were many dances too illustrative of joy and merriment, such as the Anthema, a flower dance chiefly sung by women in private assemblies, with the refrain:

"Where's my lovely parsley, say?
My violets, roses, where are they?
My parsley, roses, violets fair,
Where are my flowers? Tell me where."

They danced, too, in imitation of various animals, and copied the flapping of birds' wings. They had the bear dance, just as we have the Grizzly. It was in honor of Artemis danced by girls wearing saffron robes. They had an owl dance, a satirical dance, consisting in shading the eyes with the hands or in turning the head to and fro like an owl, danced in couples like the Turkey Trot.

But these classic dances took on a new abandon and extreme sensuousness under the influence of the Ionians, who introduced many voluptuous dances which they had brought from Syria. The Phrygians and Lydians adopted all the new dances quickly and Athens went mad over them. The musicians played the lute and cythara, and when they entered a banquet hall, followed by the band of young maidens, the entire company arose and began to dance.

Another Wall Painting, Showing a "Cabaret" Feature of Old Greek Festive Occasions.

It was considered the height of impoliteness for any guest to refuse to dance, and every one had to know how—another Turkey Trot analogy.

The Symposium of the Greeks was undoubtedly the original of our banquets enlivened by the introduction of entertainers, and the degeneration of the Symposia when the guests arose from the tables and joined the dancers is very much like the modern cabaret and "Trotteries," where the guests join the entertainers upon the floor and dance either among themselves or with the professionals.

That the Greeks had steps like the Tango and Turkey Trot is easy to see, for these are the primitive, easy dances that anyone can dance if he or she has the least sense of rhythm. The Greeks knew every possible step, but sought grace in the use of the arms and hands as much or more than by the movements of the legs and swaying of the body. It was in the later development, or rather degeneracy of manners and morals, that the dancing was made more voluptuous, and the ancient forms of the Tango and Turkey Trot were introduced from the Ionian Islands, they having learned these dances from the mainland to the East.

To the Greek the dance stood for an idea, and he tried to make plain any idea at all, whether elevating or degrading, by the movements of the dance. His war dances were more like marches, with posturing and all of the action of attacking, feinting and fleeing, and some of these were even adapted to the use of war horses, so we would hardly call them dances at all.

The nearest to the Turkey Trot that the ancient Greeks came was probably in the Geranos, or Crane Dance. This represents the intricacies of the Cretan Labyrinth from which Theseus was rescued by Ariadne. This dance is pictured on an ancient vase showing the hero holding the famous clue, or thread, following Ariadne, and the maidens danced in serpentine fashion after him.

This dance was introduced in the festival of Apollo at Delos, and those who distinguished themselves received valuable tripods which they dedicated to the gods, the names of the victors being proclaimed by two heralds. This great Delian festival was held every five years in the Spring. Artemis was first worshipped and then Apollo. The maidens of Delos, crowned with flowers and garbed in festal attire, danced to joyful choruses round the altars of the two deities, and set forth in sacred ballets the story of the birth of Apollo and Artemis.

Nobody in ancient Greece was too highly honored by the nation or personally too dignified to dance. Not even Socrates—though he had in Zantippe a jealous virago for a wife.

"Am I to be blamed for reducing

An Ancient Greek Vase in the British Museum, with a Decorative Design Showing That There Were Acrobatic Dancers Then as Now.

the corpulence of my body by a little dancing?" was the famous utterance of the greatest of Greek philosophers, who at the age of sixty had been taught the art of dancing by the famous scholar, courtesan and wit, Aspasia.

So we know that the Greeks were great dancers in their time, and even Homer describes certain dances in use during the Trojan War, 1,000 years B. C. The Phaiakian dance, which Homer praises highly, was performed by youths dancing in a circle around a singer. But this was more of the heroic than the sensuous, and it was in the sensuous dances that the Greeks revelled. They had a repugnance to self-denial, and were not afraid of losing personal dignity by the liveliness of their dancing.

The feelings for the rhythmical, the recurrence of regular, proportional and measured beats, was highly cultivated and enjoyed by the Greeks. The order and proportion observed in movement is rhythm; in relation to sound it is called harmony, and in Greece the connection of rhythm with harmony is expressed by the word "orchesis," for which we have no English equivalent, as it means both the dance and the music—the "married pair," as Lucian calls them.

This union was first made by the voice—for what could be more natural than to add rhythmical movements to a song or poem? Every accentuation of verse was accompanied by a step in the orchestic representations. Step and gesture were interwoven with poetry, and to dance in rhythm to the verse was the same thing as to read it out in true measure.

Gestures of arms and hands were at first considered more important than the movements of the feet. Dancers in Greece were called "Cheirosophi," skilled with the hands, and number and cadence throbbed in every one of their exercises.

The Athenians were especially fond of dancing, and they were not only eloquent in speech, but also in gestures, mostly of the hands and arms. The poets taught cheironomia, the art of gesture, as part of the study of the classic dance. It was said of Telestes, a dancer in the theatre of Aeschylus, that he was so skilled in the Cheironomia that he represented in the dance the "Seven Before Thebes." Sostratus is said to have refused to give the dance "Liberty" before the conquerors of his native town because it was no longer free.

Dancing was inextricably interwoven with the religion of the Greeks and no festival or entertainment was complete without the appropriate dancing. In the early ages it was kept up to a high standard, and Homer calls sleep, love, music and dancing the sweetest and the most perfect of all human enjoyments, but he dignifies the last only by the epithet "blameless."

In his time this was doubtless true, but as the times changed the dances became a reflection of the degenerate morals, and they, too, became degenerate. Athenaeus says that dancing was brought to such perfection in imitating the passions that the most eminent sculptors often took their models and designs from the attitudes of the public dancers, and thus produced that great beauty and grace of form and figure which have never been surpassed in the history of the world. These marvelous figures and postures have come to be the models and studies of the dancers of all succeeding ages.

Probably it is because the old Greek sculptors were so heroic in their ideals that the popular dances of that day—the Grecian Tango and Turkey Trot—figure in so few of their works.

MY SECRETS OF BEAUTY--By Mme. Lina Cavalieri, The Most Famous Living Beauty

No. 230—Your Beauty Depends Largely on What You Eat.

WHAT I am going to write today will sound very much like a talk from a doctor. But in my wide experience all over the civilized world I have learned many things, and no one knows better than I do that health and beauty cannot be purchased in jars of cold cream and bottles of lotions. The reasons for a bad skin and a sallow complexion often lie deeper than we think.

When a human being is out of order the trouble is in the intestines more often than anywhere else. This is especially true of women who are so generally affected in this way that many think of it as an unavoidable shortcoming, like being too short or too tall.

The remedy for this universal cause of sickness, headaches and bad health lies not in drugs, but in removing the cause, which is wrong food.

The business of the digestive organs was, and still is, to pick out and absorb the nutritive particles and pass on the waste. Food does not proceed on its course from our mouth by gravity, like a brick dropped down a well. Its course depends on the action of a complex system of muscles, which force it down the throat by the familiar process of swallowing.

In the stomach muscular force is necessary to drive the food through the pylorus or sentinel valve into the intestine. If it were not for a network of muscles which move rhythmically in the abdomen food would stay in the intestines until we die. These involuntary movements of the intestines are called "peristaltic action."

It is in the intestines that the value of fibrous matter, chaff, bran, etc., becomes apparent—the nutritive and the liquid parts of the food are rapidly absorbed into the blood, leaving only the non-digestible parts.

If the food is highly concentrated the remainder is so small that the peristaltic movements of the bowels have little or no grip on it. The food instead of moving along at its proper pace, halts and becomes dryer and harder.

Besides being too small in bulk to fit the calibre of the intestines, concentrated food lacks the stimulating power on the intestines which chaff and fibre have—bran, for instance, in the intestines tickles and excites the lining of the bowels, and the result is proper activity of their muscles.

Though nobody recommends tabloid meals any longer, food faddists still prescribe starvation diets on the mistaken idea that Nature is economical in her digestive processes.

Nature doesn't work that way. Our digestive tract demands a large supply of mixed food. No matter how much or how little we eat, it will not digest it all. To use a mining term, our processes can only handle "low grade ore." "Concentrates" clog the machinery.

When the muscular action of the intestines is not enough to move the residue along at its proper rate, the bowels have an emergency method. They move things by floating them along in an emergency fluid secreted by the walls of the intestines.

All the salts and other purgatives which fill the shelves of the drug stores act in this way—they are poisonous, and by their irritation of the mucus lining they cause this watery secretion.

Combat with might and main any irregularity in habit. If the internal organs are lazy and do not act regularly this irregularity may become fixed with dire effects upon beauty and character.

You will attain good results always by taking early each morning, while fasting, one or two teaspoonfuls of olive oil. This is one of the best cures for lethargy of the intestines. Cold infusions of wild pansy, hops, ash leaves or peppermint, and maceration of leaves of senna yield good results. The Swedish movements, massage and infusions of cold water generally aid in overcoming the trouble.

Here are some special exercises which I can heartily recommend:

1. Place yourself on your back, lift the legs slowly until they are perpendicular to the body, lower them slightly. Repeat ten times.

2. Standing erect, both hands on the hips, try to force the stomach forward as far as possible by breathing deeply, and using the abdominal muscles. Bring it back quickly.

Massage of the stomach is not easy to do yourself, but can be done as follows: Place yourself on your back, your knees bent upward, feet flat on the floor, so as to support the legs.

1. Moisten the right hand with vaseline, oil or cold cream, and with the points of the three longer fingers describe circles about the centre of the stomach. Do this very slowly.

2. Rub from left to right, passing over the stomach, in this way following the course of the colon. To do this well, place the fingers of the right hand on the left side, and the left hand on the knuckles of the right. Rub in this way, rubbing from left to right, mounting up to the centre at each circling. As the fingers pass downward increase the pressure, but decrease it as you come back to the centre.

3. Place the right hand flat on the stomach, the left on top of it. Rub vigorously upward. Go downward with little pressure, and then to the right.

4. Complete the massage by kneading the stomach with both hands, taking hold of the skin and flesh rather deeply.

Drink no red wines, but acid or sugared drinks or sparkling wines.

Use milk, sour milk, lemonade with carbonic water. Eat fatty meats and fish. Farinaceous foods and green vegetables, giving preference to carrots, green peas, asparagus and green beans. All fruits, especially figs, raisins and prunes, are excellent.

URIC ACID A Cause of FALLING HAIR and BALDNESS

DANDRUFF Is the DANGER SIGNAL That Shows Your System Is POISONED

By Dr. EMILY BAETZ

MUCH study of scalp conditions has convinced me that an excess of uric acid, which is the parent of rheumatism, which eats away the enamel of the teeth, and causes red blotches to appear in the face, and which inflames the eyeballs, is a chief cause of falling hair and of eventual baldness.

We have been inclined to be careless of dandruff. We have been comforted by the oft repeated remark of those supposed to know what they were talking about that every one has some dandruff and that it is merely dried skin—like the powdery substance left as sediment in our stockings and that may be seen on the backs of our hands with a miscroscope—a natural and harmless exudation. That made us careless, but the discovery that excess uric acid, whimsically seeking a vent from the body, and whimsically finding its way to the head, pours out upon the scalp, killing the hair as the poisoned fumes from some chemical manufactories kill the grass in the neighborhood, should prompt us to regard dandruff as what in many instances it is—a danger signal.

The light, powdery, easily brushed or massaged-away dandruff is the least dangerous, but the large, moist, greasy flake is a sign of serious ill health. This indicates the presence of uric acid, as deadly to the hair as large quantities of carbonic acid gas is to other parts of the body. The flakes in an advanced case of what I term uric acid baldening, are often as large as the end of the little finger, and, besides being greasy and scalelike, reminding one of the formation of fish scales, are of a yellowish cast.

To save the hair, begin at the foundation of human health and of healthy hair, the stomach. Cleanse that overworked and maltreated organ by eating less food if you are a heavy feeder, and let that food be of the simplest kind, the foods of the season, grains and vegetables and fruits, almost no meat, and absolutely no gravies nor puddings nor sweets. Wash the stomach by drinking a half gallon of water a day, a glassful at a time.

Local treatment will consist in rubbing the scales away. Massage the scalp vigorously with the ends of the fingers, rubbing them round and round, all over the scalp. Do this several times a day. Night and morning are the most convenient times, and there may be chances for surreptitious treatments during the day. Nothing will remove uric acid scales we have been so fatuously dismissing as "large dandruff" as quickly and effectively and cheaply as the fingers. Be careful that your nails are not long or that you do not use fingers so clumsily that the nails will scratch the scalp.

Your own nails or those of the child whose habit of scratching you think so "cute," are as poisonous as a cat's claws. While checking the deadly flood of uric acid to the scalp, neutralize the scourge by oil baths of the scalp. One of the old fallacies about the scalp is that vaseline is the greatest of scalp fertilizers and hair growers. Castor oil is much better. It is a vegetable oil, made from the castor bean, and when used in the proportion of two parts castor oil and one part alcohol, softens the deadly scales and makes their removal easy. It is most practicable to drop the mixture upon the scalp with an ordinary eye-dropper. An ingenious woman of my acquaintance uses a hatpin, dipping the point of the pin into the bottle and quickly passing the pin at a safe distance above the partings of the hair. The woman, who is one of very dainty habits, takes this precaution against using too much oil and so soiling her pillow. A particularly generous oil bath should be given the night before you take a shampoo. A small oil can, such as comes in bicycle repair kits, is an ideal thing for applying oil to the scalp.

Cocoanut oil may be used in the same way. Olive oil is a good scalp nutriment. All vegetable oils are good feeders for the hair soil.

"Massage the scalp vigorously several times a day with the ends of the fingers."

"A small oilcan, such as comes in bicycle repair kits, is an ideal thing for applying oil to the scalp."

My experience has forced me to topple over another idol of orthodox belief about the hair—the value of brushing. Five minutes' massage is better than half an hour's brushing. Brushing at its best but lightly touches the scalp, and it is the scalp with which we must be concerned if we would have healthy hair.

No matter how tired you are at night, don't fail to give the scalp at least a five-minute rub. Ten minutes are better. If you are very tired, the blood which feeds the hair, as it does every other part of the body, has grown tired, and only a small part of its nourishing stream is reaching the scalp. You must keep the scalp well supplied with blood or it will grow pale and anaemic and the hair will begin to fall. If you are nervous and overstimulated, if you have a headache, you will need the massage to scatter the blood and distribute the flow. This is a frequent cure for neuralgia, which is merely a congested condition in the scalp or face.

Gray hair, like baldness, has its deadline. When the scalp has become tight and shining, no human power can grow hair in that soil. If the color glands of the hair have died, gray hair can never be restored to its color. But if the glands are only ailing and tired, as we ourselves sometimes grow, stimulation will revive them and bring them into new life. For this reason it is always worth a persistent and vigorous trial, if you see the hair growing gray, to stimulate the color glands by vigorous daily rubbing of the scalp.

For this the fingers may be dipped into the cool or cold water if you find this agreeable. It is well to do so in case the scalp is hot, for abnorma lheat in the scalp kills hair roots and turns the hair gray. I have known cases of hair beginning to turn gray in spots, and when castor oil was poured upon the spot and the scalp energetically massaged the gray hair growing there fell out and the new hair grew in the normal color.

The great secret of making and keeping healthy the hair, which means the scalp, for hair can never be healthier than the ground where it grows, is to bring the blood to the surface, and the only way to do this is to massage it. Massage it yourself or have it done. It matters little which, but massage it.

Why BOYS Should Play "INDIAN" and "COWBOY"

EVERY small boy who is not a mollycoddle or a "sissy" is bound to play train robber, pirate, Indian, and during his play hours to pursue some sort of bloody make-believe avocation. There has lately appeared a tendency to suppress childish play of this sort, to curtail Indian and pirate literature, substituting for it "educational" books.

To deprive the small boy in this way is not merely unwise, but dangerous. What sensible folks term "allowing the child an outlet" is based on soundly scientific principles. Theologians to the contrary, we all come into the world without a conscience. The normal, healthy small child has no moral sense any more than he has the ability to say his alphabet. He has to be taught both.

Dr. Haeckel, one of the greatest European writers on subjects of this sort, claims that the individual on its way from conception, before birth, to manhood passes physiologically and mentally through every stage through which the human tree passed in transforming itself from an apelike animal to a human biped. This being so, the small boy during several years of his existence is filled brimful with destructive and murderous instincts of every sort. He loves to smash his toys, to fight with other boys, to torment the cat, etc. These instincts, of course, have to be trained, modified, rooted out, and if the boy allows them to be rooted out, turning to playing at piracy or Indian or cowboy as a substitute, there is no fear for his future.

All neurologists know the danger of brooding over an unexpressed thought, sorrow, grief or desire. Such repression is apt to work damage of the most serious sort upon the nervous system, perhaps upon the moral sense. "A repressed complex," to use the technical term, is just as bad a thing for our nervous system as putrid flesh is for our digestive apparatus, and the nervous system has to be purged of it.

The process of moral purging is called carthasis, and a very famous psychologist, Dr. I. H. Coriat, has pointed out that the pleasure which some individuals experience in witnessing a tragedy is one of the most efficacious forms of catharsis known for the nervous system of delicate women who are trying to suppress some deep grief. In witnessing a sorrow portrayed, or in reading about it, whether it be similar or dissimilar to our own, our pity is aroused, we feel ourselves carried away, give vent to our vicarious sorrow—and are purged.

In identically the same way the small boy wielding a tomahawk over his make-believe victim's head is getting a lot of moral poison, inherited from generations and generations of semi-barbarous forbears, out of his blood.

How Fireflies May Give Us a New Light

THE firefly has for years been a puzzle to scientists, and all efforts to discover the cause of the phosphorescent light which is emitted from its tiny winged body have been of no avail.

But a noted French scientist, Ralph Dubois, has recently completed a long series of interesting experiments which seem to clear up the mystery. Professor Dubois declares that he has discovered in the firefly's body two peculiar radio-active chemical substances, which ferment when brought together and produce a luminant which bursts into flame when brought into contact with the least moisture.

The professor proved this fact by extracting the substances from the firefly and bottling them. They remained dark as long as they were kept dry, but the instant a drop of moisture was introduced into the bottle they burst into flame, just as every one has seen fireflies do on Summer nights.

This discovery does more than satisfy the curiosity about one of nature's most picturesque phenomena. Professor Dubois believes it is a long step toward the discovery of a new means of illumination which will be far cheaper, simpler and more effective than either oil, gas or electricity.

So confident is the professor tha. he is on the verge of a discovery of the greatest importance to the world that he is going to South America to continue his investigations. The fieflies there attain a larger size than in any other part of the globe. Some of them exceed an inch and a half in length. Their brilliance is so powerful that three or four of them confined in a glass will supply enough light to read by, and even their eggs and small parts of their bodies emit light when pulverized.

The South American Indians often use the fireflies to guide them through the forests at night by tying the little insects to their feet and hands.

SUNDAY AMERICAN-EXAMINER PATTERNS

Four Cool and Comfor.-able Models for Summer Wear--Ten Cents Each

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Send 10 cents in silver or stamps for our Up-to-Date Spring and Summer Catalogue, containing over 400 designs of ladies', misses' and children's patterns and a concise and comprehensive article on dressmaking.

No woman can afford to be without one of these catalogues, as the illustrations shown therein are practical designs that are necessary for the home dressmaker.

NO. 9593.—LADY'S BLOUSE, WITH LONG OR SHORT SLEEVE.

WHITE ramie linen was used for this design. The front is finished with coat closing. Deep Gibson plaits give breadth to the shoulders, and a smart collar finishes the neck edge.

The sleeves have a pointed cuff, and may be made in wrist or shorter length.

The pattern is cut in six sizes—32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. It requires 3 yards of 36-inch material for a 38-inch size.

NO. 9673.—GIRL'S MIDDY SUIT.

Striped galatea in brown and white, with facings of brown gingham, and with brown gingham for the skirt, was here combined.

The model is suitable for lawn, percale, cambray, linene, voile or serge.

The pattern is cut in four sizes—8, 10, 12 and 14 years. It requires 5 yards of 27-inch material for a 10-year size.

NO. 9659.—DRESS FOR LADIES, MISSES AND SMALL WOMEN.

White linen, with cluny lace and insertion for trimming, is here shown. The closing is in front a little to one side.

The "V" neck opening outlines a deep collar. The sleeve is finished with a neat cuff.

The pattern is cut in seven sizes—14, 16 and 18 years, and 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. It requires 4¾ yards of 44-inch material for a 36-inch size and 4⅛ yards for a 16-year size.

NO. 9670.—A CHARMING LOUNGING SACQUE.

White silk crepe de chine, with feather stitching and plaitings of china silk, is here shown. The design may also be used for lawn, cashmere, dimity, nainsook, silk or crossbar muslin.

The fronts are finished with a narrow vest. The shaped collar is cut low at the neck edge.

The pattern is in three sizes—small, medium and large. It requires 3¼ yards of 36-inch material for a medium size.

To obtain any of these desirable models, fill in the accompanying coupon and mail, with 10 cents for each pattern in silver or stamps, to SUNDAY PATTERNS, Post Office Box 260, New York City.

Each number represents one pattern.

LET US MAKE YOU FAT

50-CENT BOX FREE!

We Want to Prove at Our Own Expense That It Is No Longer Necessary to Be Thin, Scrawny and Undeveloped

WE INVITE EVERY THIN MAN AND WOMAN HERE,
Every Reader of This Magazine Who Is Run Down, Nervous or Underweight, To Get Fat at Our Expense.

"Gee! Look at that pair of skinny scarecrows! Why don't they try Sargol?"

This is a generous offer to every thin man or woman reader of this paper. We positively guarantee to increase your weight to your own satisfaction or no pay. Think this over. Think what it means. At our own risk, we offer to put 10, 15, yes, 30 pounds of good, solid "stay there" flesh on your bones, to fill out hollows in checks, neck or bust, to get rid of that "peaked" look, to rejuvenate and revitalize your whole body until it tingles with vibrant energy; to do this without drastic "diet," "tonics," severe physical culture "stunts," detention from business or any irksome requirements—if we fail it costs you nothing.

We particularly wish to hear from the excessively thin, those who know the humiliation and embarrassment which only skinny people have to suffer in silence. We want to send a free 50-cent package of our new discovery to the people who are called "slats" and "bean poles," to bony women, whose clothes never look "anyhow," no matter how expensively dressed, to the skinny men who fail to gain social or business recognition on account of their starved appearance. We care not whether you have been thin from birth, whether you have lost flesh from sickness, how many flesh builders you have experimented with. We take the risk and assume it cheerfully. If we can not put pounds and pounds and pounds of healthy flesh on your frame we don't want your money.

How can we do this? We will tell you. We have discovered a remarkable concentrated treatment for increasing cell growth, the very substance of which our bodies are made—a treatment that users say makes indigestion and other stomach troubles disappear as if by magic, and makes an old dyspeptic or a sufferer from weak nerves or lack of vitality feel like a 2-year-old. This new treatment which has proven a boon to thin people is called Sargol. Don't forget the name—"S-A-R-G-O-L." Nothing like it has ever been produced before. It is a revelation to women who have never been able to appear stylish in anything they wear because of their thinness. It is a godsend to every man who is under weight or who is lacking in nerve force or energy. If you want a beautiful and well-rounded figure of symmetrical proportions, of which you can feel justly proud—if you want a body full of throbbing life and energy, write The Sargol Company, 371-G Herald Building, Binghamton, N. Y., to-day, and we will send you, absolutely free, a 50c. box of Sargol to prove what we claim. Take one with every meal, and in five minutes after you take the first concentrated tablet of this precious product see how it commences to unfold its virtues. It has by actual demonstration often increased the weight at the rate of one pound a day. But you say you want proof. Well, here you are. Here is the statement of F. Gagon, who has tried Sargol, and is convinced of its wonderful value:

F. GAGNON writes:

"Here is my report since taking the Sargol treatment. I am a man 67 years of age, and was all run down to the very bottom. I had to quit work, as I was so weak. Now, thanks to Sargol, I look like a new man. I gained 22 pounds with 26 days' treatment. I cannot tell you how happy I feel."

WHAT SARGOL HAS DONE FOR OTHERS

We have hundreds of letters like this which we want to send you. Here are gains in weight reported from just a few: C. E. Crouner, 15 lbs. in thirty days; Thomas Davis, 10 lbs. in 16 days; Lenore Patton, 16 lbs. in 30 days; Mrs. Seim, 13 lbs. in 20 days; F. A. Myrick, 20 lbs. in 30 days. Mrs. S. E. Murray, 30 lbs. in 40 days; Mary Bland, 18 lbs. in 40 days; W. W. Allis, 36 lbs. in 50 days; Wm. Carmichael, 5 lbs. in 10 days; Arthur Stewart, 5 lbs. in 12 days; Mrs. C. Craig, 13 lbs. in 20 days; Mrs. N. Gallagher, 18 lbs. in 35 days.

Send to-day for our Free 50-cent package, and let us prove that.

SARGOL SHOULD DO THE SAME FOR YOU

The new treatment is used to increase the red corpuscles in the blood, strengthen the nerves and put the digestive tract into such shape that your food is assimilated and turned into good, solid, healthy flesh, instead of passing through the system undigested and unassimilated. It is a thoroughly scientific principle, this Sargol, for building up the thin, weak and debilitated without any nauseous dosing.

Send for the 50-cent box to-day. Convince us by your prompt acceptance of this offer that you are writing in good faith and really desire to gain in weight.

We could not publish this offer if we were not prepared to live up to it. It is only the astounding results of our new method of treatment that make such an offer and such a guarantee possible on our part. So cut off the coupon to-day and mail it at once to The Sargol Company, 371-G, Herald Building, Binghamton, N. Y., and please inclose 10c. with your letter to help pay distribution expenses. Take our word, you'll never regret it.

FREE COUPON

COME EAT WITH US AT OUR EXPENSE

This coupon entitles any thin person to one 50c. package of Sargol, the concentrated Flesh Builder (provided you have never tried it, and that 10c. is enclosed to cover postage, packing, etc.) Read our advertisement printed above, and then put 10c. in stamps in letter to-day, with this coupon, and the full 50c package will be sent to you by return of post. The No Limit Bathing Costumes —What the French and Viennese Mondaines Wear During the Morning Hours on the Beach

The Mikado Bathing Costume of White Satin and Point Venise Lace

The Latest Bulgarian Costume Approved by Trouville.

Photo by Underwood & Underwood

One Hundred Dollar Costume of White Satin, Showing the New Laced Sandals.

Ostend Favors This "No-Limit" Costume of Black Jersey, with Robe of Cherry and White Ratine.

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London, and foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes each week the fashion article for this newspaper, presenting all that is newest and best in styles for well-dressed women.

Lady Duff-Gordon's Paris establishment brings her into close touch with that centre of fashion.

Lady Duff-Gordon's American establishment is at Nos. 37 and 39 West Fifty-seventh street, New York.

By Lady Duff-Gordon ("Lucile").

I HAVE just returned from a tour of the French and Viennese watering places, and therefore I am able to send you some word pictures and some photographs of the very newest bathing costumes and wraps I saw while touring.

You never see such costumes on the beaches of America, because you in the United States are more puritanical in your costuming, even this year, when the "No-Limit" costume has invaded every other country. Having accepted the split skirt and other extreme fashions, it is natural that the bathing costume should have the same extreme tendencies, and I think the best name for those I am sending you this week is the "No-Limit" costume." Do you not agree with me?

The odd thing about the present costumes, with their lack of skirts, is that the less material there is the more they cost. It is a new case of the high cost of low dressing. There is no limit to the scantiness of the costume nor to the cost of it.

On the foreign beaches a wrap of some kind is as much a part of the feminine costume as are the knickers. Some of these wraps are made of the same fabric as the costume, but others are made of contrasting fabrics. These wraps are really necessary when the bathing gown is such a one as is worn by the bewitching young woman in this group who is wearing a one-piece costume with grace and nonchalance. This costume is merely a black jersey, her wrap or robe is of cherry red and white striped ratine, and her cap is red rubber charmingly pleated and very becoming.

At Ostend more time is spent in reclining in the comfortable beach chairs than bathing. Tea is served in different little pavilions, too, and naturally the mondaines who frequent these beaches devote much time and thought to what they shall wear.

Satin is, of course, the greatest favorite. I saw one plain little satin costume that cost one hundred dollars, just for the suit, without the knickers! Everything was extra, and when the wrap, satin sandals, bonnet, silk tights and parasol were added the whole outfit cost two hundred dollars! And it was only a bathing suit! I send you a picture of this costume.

The white satin costume shown here with the point lace bodice represents one hundred dollars just as you see it here. The little Bulgarian costume, a marvelous color scheme in blues, greens and reds, represents one hundred and fifty dollars. Verily, there is no limit to the extravagances of the mode.
