WILSON WILL LET POWERS SEND TROOPS INTO MEXICO

Great Britain, Germany and France to Make Formal Showing, After Which U. S. Will Recognize Huerta Government.

Senator Fall Criticises Secretary Bryan for Deserting State Post for Chautauqua When Government Faces Grave Problems.

Special Cable to The American.

MEXICO CITY, July 19.—Another complication was added to the international situation to-day when it became known through an authoritative source at the British Legation that England had recalled Minister Stronge, following complaints of his actions during the bombardment of the city. He will leave shortly to make way for Minister Cardena, appointed in his place.

Still another unexplainable situation arose when it was learned to-day that Italy had recalled her minister.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Adding to the statement printed in this morning's papers that in return for Great Britain's intercession with Japan President Wilson had agreed to permit Great Britain, Germany and France to go into Mexico and protect their citizens and collect claims and indemnities, the Government official—a powerful member of the Senate and a close friend of the President—who gave the information, said to-day that the understanding provides that the United States shall eventually recognize the Huerta Government.

According to this information, the plan of procedure agreed upon is that the three nations named shall enter Mexico and undertake to protect their citizens, by force of arms, if necessary, and that after they have made a showing, which is to amount only to a matter of form, they will officially advise this Government that they can not succeed unless the United States recognizes Huerta.

To Divide Bond Issues.

The Sunday American informant goes on to say that, this being accomplished, the United States will proceed to carry out the further provisions of its understanding with the three great powers and assist American bankers to participate in the rehabilitation of the Mexican republic. Mexico will desire to build railroads, construct public works and develop its natural resources to restore prosperity to its people. Millions of dollars will be needed. Great bond issues will be floated to raise the money to do all these things.

The great finance houses of four nations will divide these bonds and the vast profits they represent, according to the information given to The Sunday American. These will be the United States, Germany, France and Great Britain.

Fall Traps Democrats.

Senator Fall caught the Democrats napping to-day when he offered a resolution defining the constitutional rights of Americans in Mexico, using the exact language of the Baltimore convention, and drew from Leader Kern an objection to its consideration.

The resolution, which was intended to be expressive of the opinion of the Senate, declared "that the constitutional rights of American citizens should protect them beyond the borders of this country and go with them throughout the world," and "that American citizens having property in foreign countries and living in foreign countries must be given full protection both for themselves and for their property."

"I object to the consideration of the resolution," said Mr. Kern as Senator Fall requested that it be agreed to.

Rebuke for Bryan.

"I admit," replied Mr. Fall, "that it is somewhat suspicious in being presented at a time when the Secretary of State is delivering lectures instead of attempting to protect the interests of American citizens."

Mr. Fall insisted upon reading the Democratic platform on this subject. Several Democrats objected, but it was ordered read.

"What's the matter with our platform?" asked Senator Tillman as the

Lipton's Challenge To Race for America Cup Finally Taken

Event To Be Held Off Sandy Hook in September, 1914—Irish Club Agrees to Conditions.

NEW YORK, July 19.—After many months and almost endless correspondence, the New York Yacht Club has accepted the Royal Ulster Yacht Club's challenge, on behalf of Sir Thomas Lipton, for another race for the America cup. The race will be sailed off Sandy Hook in September of 1914.

Formal announcement to this effect was made by Secretary George A. Cormack, of the New York club, to-night.

Mr. Cormack stated that the challenge had been accepted formally by the New York Yacht Club, but that the New York club had been waiting for the Royal Ulster club to accept its conditions before making an announcement.

The first race is to be sailed Thursday, September 10, 1914; the second, Saturday, September 12, 1914, and the third, Tuesday, September 15, 1914.

Suffragette Locked In to Prevent Row

Measures of Liverpool Police Taken During King's Visit Are Revealed in Court.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Measures taken by the police to frustrate a suffragette demonstration on the occasion of the King's visit to Liverpool were revealed in the Liverpool Police Court yesterday during the case in which Helen Jollie, secretary of the local branch of the Women's Social and Political Union, was charged with doing damage to property.

It is stated that the head of the city detective force, having failed to obtain a promise from Miss Jollie that there should be no demonstration when the King drove through Liverpool, the night before the King's visit policemen mounted a ladder and screwed down the windows of the offices. It is alleged that Miss Jollie was so annoyed by these tactics that she secured a poker and attacked the windows of the premises opposite.

Bill Plans Cinder Shields on All Cars

Representative Prouty Has Measure Providing for Deflectors on Day Coaches of Railroads.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Travelers on railroad trains who have had their trips marred by flying cinders will be interested in the fate of a bill which has been introduced in Congress requiring all interstate railroads to equip their day coaches with cinder deflectors, such as are in use on the Pullman cars.

The author of the bill, Representative Prouty, of Iowa, expects to be able to obtain a favorable report on the bill from the Committee on Interstate Commerce, and is confident of receiving strong support for the measure should it be brought up for consideration in the House.

30 Divorces in Three Hours Breaks Record

One Decree Granted at Rome Because Wife Was Poor Gardener.

ROME, July 19.—All divorce court records for Floyd County were smashed to-day when 30 decrees were granted within three hours. Forty cases were set for trial. In nearly every instance cruel treatment was charged.

Because he planted tomato seed and they would not sprout, Mrs. Ollie Bannister alleged, her husband, John Bannister, Jr., became enraged and beat her. Mrs. Bannister claimed that this and other cruel treatment constituted a good excuse for divorce. A jury thought the same thing.

Thinks Son Drowned In Piedmont Lake

W. C. Baker, Jr., Disappears and Father Thinks Him Dead, but Clothes Are Not Found.

That his son has been drowned was the fear expressed to the police Saturday night by W. C. Baker, No. 7 Effie avenue. W. C. Baker, Jr., has been missing from the home since early Saturday, when he said he was going to swim at Piedmont Park. The drowning theory is weakened by the fact that the boy's clothes could not be found at the park after he disappeared.

In the event the boy does not return home within a day or two, the lake will be dragged.

PISTOL DRAWN IN CLUB FIGHT SAYS MEMBER

Warrant for Waiter Is Sworn Out by Auto Man After M. & M. Affair.

THREATS ARE CHARGED

Member Declares Servant Covered Him With Revolver After Dinner Party in Rooms.

H. M. Rice, a prominent automobile man of Atlanta, on Saturday night caused the arrest of Joe Wright, a negro waiter at the Merchants and Manufacturers' Club in the Candler Building, on charges declaring that the waiter threatened his life with a drawn revolver in the reception room of the club last Sunday night.

The charges were made in two warrants which were sworn out before Justice of the Peace Girardeau. The negro was taken into custody and later released on bonds of $300 in each case.

Drew Pistol Is Charge.

According to the allegation, Rice and the waiter had some words in the dining room at a dinner party. Following the quarrel Rice and the waiter went into the reception room, where it is alleged, the latter drew a pistol.

Members of the club refused to make statements Saturday night following the swearing out of the warrants. The negro has been in the service for some time. His bonds were signed by W. A. Niall, of the Niall-Herring Company. Rice charges Wright with carrying a concealed weapon and with threatening to kill.

Rice Keeps Silent.

Rice, questioned Saturday night, said no one but himself was concerned in the affair, but would vouchsafe no other information.

"It was an unfortunate affair," he said, "and for some time we thought to do nothing of this sort in connection with it, but found it necessary."

Mayor Springs New Dance—'Peace Jig'

Cuts Pigeon Wing Just to Show Aldermen He Has Sworn Off on Quarreling.

With the mercury standing at 98, Mayor Woodward displayed the fact that he was satisfied with the world Saturday afternoon by dancing a jig while Alderman J. H. Harwell patted his hands in true backwoods style.

"Do you ever expect to quit quarreling?" asked the Alderman of the Mayor.

"Why, I have already quit," replied the Mayor, with a smile.

The Alderman started patting his hands. "If you mean it, let's see you dance."

And the Mayor danced until he was dripping with perspiration.

Torpedo Boats Asked For Atlantic Flight

Aviator, Who Wishes to Make Trial, Says Without Them Attempt Would Be Suicidal.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 19.—Jack McGee, a Pawtucket aviator, has received a copy of the rules governing the cross-Atlantic aeroplane flight to be conducted under the management of the Royal Aero Club of the United Kingdom.

A wealthy New York banker is backing McGee. It is understood that efforts are being made by Rhode Island Representatives to have torpedo boat destroyers stationed at different points along the route, but no definite decision has yet been made by the Government. Without these, McGee says, the flight would be deliberate suicide.

Motor Cars to Cut High Cost of Dying

Storage Battery Busses To Be Put in Service in Chicago as Funeral Equipage.

CHICAGO, July 19.—The high cost of dying is to be reduced. Storage battery motor busses are to be put in service as funeral cars. The change from carriages to busses, it is estimated, will result in a saving of $30 in the cost of each funeral. As there are 31,000 funerals in Chicago each year, the general reduction in the cost of dying, if busses were used in all funerals, would be $930,000.

Threatens to Kill Girl By Wireless In Blackmail Plot

Inventor Telephones Rich Salt Lake Woman He Will Slay Her Unless $1,000 Is Paid.

SALT LAKE CITY, July 19.—W. L. Cummings, 23 years old, an electrician, and inventor of a wireless machine which, it is claimed can ring a bell, turn on a light in an electric bulb and explode dynamite at a considerable distance, is being held by the authorities here to-night on charges made by private detectives that he sent a black hand letter to Miss Dorothy Bamberger, a rich Salt Lake girl, and threatened her life. Cummings' machine was seized.

Cummings was arrested while telephoning to Miss Bamberger to give new instructions about leaving the $1,000 which he demanded. He was turned over to the Government authorities.

Cummings, according to the authorities, threatened to blow Miss Bamberger up with nitroglycerin and dynamite, using his invention to set off the explosives. He recently came here from Georgia.

New Newport Dance Called 'Un Tartare'

Inventor of Terpsichorean Novelty Says It Is Not so Spicy as It Sounds.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Uriel Davis, who sails to-morrow for New York, has a new dance to teach Newport society. It is called "un tartare," but Davis says it is not so spicy as it sounds.

It is not a jumpy dance, but consists mainly of pointing the toes and bending of the knees, he declares, and could not scandalize anybody.

Mrs. John Drexel, Mrs. Preston Gibson, Mrs. MacLean and the Vanderbilts will learn the "tartare," which was evolved by Davis and Miss Bianca Waldo, the American whistler.

Downtown Block in Indianapolis Burning

Flames in Heart of Wholesale District Not Controlled at Midnight—Loss $500,000.

INDIANAPOLIS, July 19.—Fire in the heart of the downtown wholesale district, the total loss of which probably will reach $500,000, threatened last night to sweep the entire block bounded by Maryland, Georgia, Pennsylvania and Meridian streets.

The four-story brick building occupied by the Layman Carey Company, wholesale hardware dealers, was destroyed, with a loss estimated at between $200,000 and $250,000. The fire spread to the buildings adjoining, the Hamilton Harris Company, tobacco wholesalers, and the Atlas Paper Company, and at midnight the flames were raging fiercely in both of these buildings.

Hat Pin Thrust Is Gallantry's Reward

Traveling Salesman Rescues Weapon of Womanly Warfare and Gets Pinked as Result.

ST. LOUIS, July 19.—Joseph Butler, a traveling salesman, has doubts about the use of a hat pin to express gratitude. He was on a train running between Chapin, Ill., and Alton, when a woman in front of him made a frantic appeal to him to stop the train and get her hat which had blown out of the window. Mr. Butler gave the necessary signal, the train was stopped, backed, and he rescued the hat.

He was thanked and decided to sit in the seat in front of the woman. The conductor suggested that she pin her hat to the seat in front of her so as to let the train follow its schedule the remainder of the trip.

This she did with such energy that the hat pin went through the back of the seat and two inches into Mr. Butler's back.

Chinese Province Proclaims Secession

Governor General of Kwang Tung Announces Beginning of Campaign Against President Yuan Shi Kai.

HONGKONG, July 19.—The secession of the Province of Kwang Tung from the republic was proclaimed by the Governor General of Kwang Tung today. The capital of the province is Canton, the home city of Yuan Shi Kai, against whose government the revolt is directed.

The Governor General declares that the Provincial Council has appointed him commander-in-chief to lead the Southern troops against those of Provisional President Yuan Shi Kai.

This step has been taken, he says, because of Yuan's despotism, which he says would ruin the republic. Traffic between Hongkong and Canton has come to a standstill.

SEATTLE MAYOR MUZZLES PAPER AS RIOT GOES ON

"Times" Gets Injunction to Halt City's Action, and Police Are Threatened With Arrest.

DANIELS NOW EXPLAINS

Secretary of Navy Declares He Had No Thought of Industrial Workers in Speech.

SEATTLE, July 19.—Rioting, which began last night as the result of an encounter between sailors from United States warships in the harbor and members of the Industrial Workers of the World, continued throughout the day and night.

Mayor George S. Cotterill this afternoon declared the city under martial law and ordered saloons closed, and notified the management of The Seattle Times that all its editions would be suspended unless proofs first were submitted to him.

Colonel Alden C. Blethen, publisher of The Times, upon receipt of the Mayor's orders, appeared before Judge Humphreys, of the Superior Court, and obtained an injunction restraining the Mayor and Chief of Police from interfering with the publication of the paper. The Mayor refused to recognize the authority of the court until he had been called before Judge Humphries and warned that he would be sent to jail unless he obeyed the court's mandate.

Warrants for Policemen.

The court also issued a score or more of John Doe warrants for the arrest of policemen who were barricading The Times press room. Seeing no other alternative than to lift the ban or go to jail, the cordon of police surrounding The Times building was withdrawn and the first issue of the paper appeared on the streets late in the afternoon.

Mayor Cottrill charges that The Times incited the riot by publishing a garbled account of the speech of Secretary of the Navy Daniels, in which it was made to appear that the Secretary expressed himself as being in favor of expelling members of the I. W. W. from the country.

Late this afternoon Judge Humphries issued a second order notifying saloon men that they might open their places of business without danger of interference from the police.

Shore Permits Refused.

Commanders of the warships in the harbor withdrew all shore leaves and refused to issue shore permits to the sailors.

From National Park Inn, Secretary Daniels sent this telegram regarding his speech:

"The reference I made to the flag and my statement that the red flag meant danger was the same as originally made by me at a banquet of Railroad Men's Y. M. C. A. at Dashington City a few days ago. It had no reference whatever to local conditions in Seattle.

"I believe in free speech and a free press, as the bulwarks of our liberty. Every evil that exists or that threatens our country can be righted by appeal to the judgment of the American people. The weapon is the ballot. The man who resorts to violence to redress evil is bringing more evil into existence than he can hope to cure by violence.

"Obedience to lawful authority and respect for the flag must precede any reforms. The man who takes the law into his own hands imperils American institutions and jeopardizes the hopes of securing real relief from conditions against which he complains."

GEORGIAN DIES IN KENTUCKY.

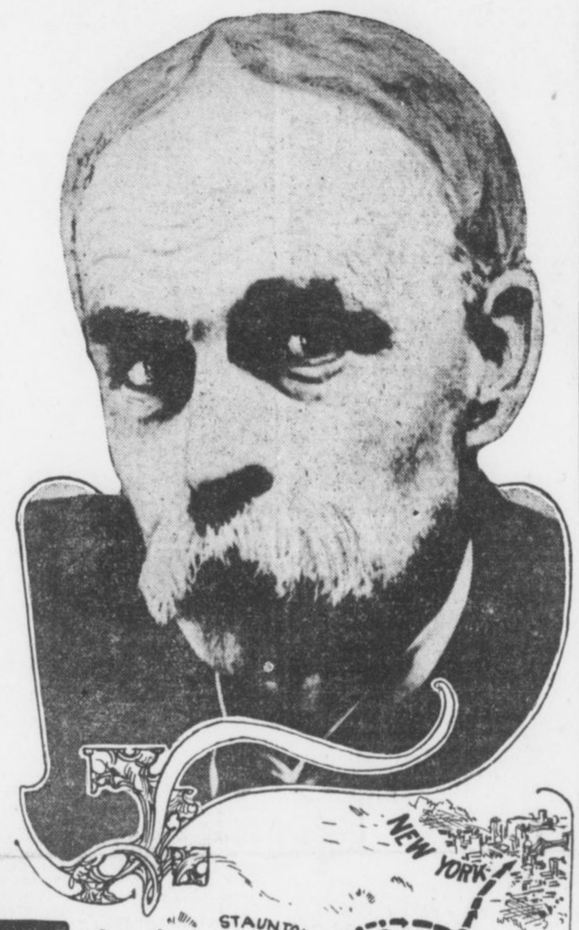
LEXINGTON, KY., July 19.—Typhoid fever to-day killed Rufus H. Anderson, aged 27 years, a ministerial student. Anderson's home was at Jersey, Ga. His body will be sent to Georgia for burial Sunday night.

Hawthorne to Walk 1,000 Miles

Solitary Jaunt to Follow Parole

Novelist to Use Prison in Writings

Julian Hawthorne, famous writer, now prisoner in Atlanta penitentiary, and route he will take on walk to New York when he is paroled in fall.



Experience in Atlanta Penitentiary Will Be Worked Into Future Literary Works of Author.

Julian Hawthorne, the novelist, is planning a 1,000-mile cross-country walk from Atlanta to New York, to begin late in July, when he will be released from the United States penitentiary. His application for a parole will be granted, it is announced from Washington.

Julian Hawthorne is a hefty, dynamic gentleman for all his 67 years. Out at the Atlanta Federal Prison, where he is Register 4435, he turns out volumes of copy for the prison paper, good copy, too, that would frighten any young and vigorous reporter. And daily he performs a feat that few cub reporters can equal, and cub reporters are wonderful because of the power that lies in their legs. Hawthorne walks ten or fifteen miles around the walls each day.

He Is Eager for the Jaunt.

It is a natural outgrowth of his energy that this white-haired old man should plan to walk from Atlanta to New York when he is released from prison and becomes Julian Hawthorne again instead of Registry 4435. He has talked of this ambition to his mates in the penitentiary, to the officers and the guards, and they say that he is as eager for the jaunt as any boy.

It is generally regarded as certain that Hawthorne will be released the latter part of July, probably July 26 or 27. His term rightly extends until November, but his application for a parole, it is understood, has been indorsed by the prison parole board, and awaits only the sanction of Attorney General McReynolds before it will be effective. According to the regulation governing Federal Prisons, which grants to every prisoner a parole after he has served creditably two-thirds of his sentence, Hawthorne will be eligible for release within a week or two.

Dr. Morton Will Ride.

At the same time it is likely that Dr. W. P. Morton, of New York, who was convicted jointly with Hawthorne on the charge of fraudulent use of

U.S. Grant, Jr., Weds; Only One Child to Greet Stepmother

Ceremony Performed Secretly and Announced at Dinner Which Former Friends Refuse to Attend.

SAN DIEGO, CAL., July 19.—Ulysses Simpson Grant, Jr., and Mrs. America Workman-Will were married by Judge George Putterbaugh Saturday evening, July 12. The ceremony took place at the home of the Police Court Judge entirely without premeditation on the part of either Mr. or Mrs. Grant.

The startling announcement of the wedding was made at a dinner to-night at the U. S. Grant Hotel. Many old friends of Mr. Grant refused to attend, and the only child of the aged bridegroom who was present was U. S. Grant IV, a Junior at Harvard.

Friends and relatives of Mr. Grant have been bitter in their opposition to this, his second, marriage and pleaded in vain for him not to wed again. His grown son, Caffee Grant, and his three daughters absolutely refused to recognize their "new mother."

It is said that Mr. Grant, in retaliation, has threatened to cut them off entirely in his will unless they change their attitude before he sails on the steamerd Yale to-morrow morning. The children say they stand firm in their attitude and assert that their father has been taken advantage of by Mrs. Will, now Mrs. Grant.

Billie Burke Wires She Is Recovering

Actress Was Threatened With Appendicitis, but Did Not Have to Undergo Operation.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Billie Burke, telegraphing the London bureau of The American to-day from Carlsbad in reply to an inquiry concerning her health, says:

"Thanks awfully. Was threatened with appendicitis, but have not had to undergo operation. Recovering nicely.

"BILLIE BURKE."

COUNSEL OF FRANK SAYS DORSEY HAS SOUGHT TO HIDE FACTS

Attorneys Rosser and Arnold, In a Statement to the Press, Make Bitter Attack on Solicitor for His Conduct of Phagan Case.

Call Attention to Secrecy Maintained by Prosecution, and Declare Action of State's Attorney Has Inflamed Public Opinion.

Luther Z. Rosser and Reuben R. Arnold, attorneys for Leo M. Frank, who will be tried July 28 on the charge of killing Mary Phagan, joined Saturday in a bitter attack upon the policy of Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey, whose procedure in the case, they said, had inflamed public opinion and had placed the Solicitor far below the dignity of his office.

In a formal statement, they charged that Dorsey had ignored his constitutional and legal functions and had sought to usurp those of the Grand Jury by his attempt to block the indictment of Jim Conley by that body.

They described his action as unprecedented and dangerous in the extreme, and represented Dorsey and Conley as partners in "a harmonious concert."

The document, which is one of the few public statements issued by the defense, is bristling with criticism of the Solicitor's conduct throughout the investigation of the murder mystery, and charges that Dorsey has maintained his belief in Frank's guilt apparently for no other purpose than to convict Frank.

Call Attention to Secrecy.

Attention is called to the secrecy with which evidence is being gathered by the prosecution "in manufacturing its case against Frank," as though an innocent man—as the law contemplates Frank until he is proved guilty—should not be given the advantage of a knowledge of every shred of evidence which may be found for or against him, so that it may be presented, if favorable, and that it may be met and disproved if false.

Disclaiming any intention of criticising the previous Grand Jury, Attorneys Rosser and Arnold cite the circumstance of Conley's first confession, into which he was forced by the discovery that he could write after he steadfastly had denied he could, and asserted that the Solicitor had been asked to bring this incident to the attention of the Grand Jury, but that he, if report were true, actually directed that it be not done.

Another indication of the Solicitor's alleged domination over the Grand Jury was contained, said the attorneys for the defense, in his reported action in insisting that the jurors pledge themselves not to act in any way on the suggested Conley indictment during his absence on a vacation.

Statement of Defense.

The statement, in full, follows:

Counsel for Leo M. Frank have refrained from making a statement for the papers except under strong provocation. Clearly counsel on both sides should refrain from any comment of or criticism on any action of the Grand Jury to be taken at its meeting next Monday, which might tend to hamper or limit the Grand Jury in their action upon the Conley case.

The Grand Jury is an independent body; it is under the control of no one.

A Solicitor General is the adviser of that body as to legal principles merely, but he has no right to exercise any sort of control in determining who shall or shall not be indicted.

To permit a Solicitor General to use the position intrusted to him by the people to decide for himself who shall and who shall not be indicted is a danger too great to be contemplated.

Reply to Solicitor.

With this preliminary statement we reluctantly make a reply to Solicitor Dorsey's interview in this morning's paper.

It is rather remarkable that the Solicitor General and a person admitting complicity in a grave crime should get together in such harmonious concert of action as these two interviews show. Mr. Dorsey admits that the indictment of Conley will have only a "mild but undesirable effect on the State's case against Leo M. Frank."

FRANK DEFENSE SCORES DORSEY AS 'DANGEROUS'

Ought the Solicitor General for one moment to be influenced in his advice to the Grand Jury by any consideration of the effect upon anybody's case?

It is not our understanding that the Grand Jury is organized to aid the Solicitor General in his management of cases in court; their function is a higher one. They investigate every case of probable guilt and return an indictment. It could as well be argued that the indictment of Frank might have had a mild but undesirable effect on Conley's case, in case Conley had been first indicted.

The position of the Solicitor General in this case has, from the beginning, been most remarkable. It has heretofore been understood that the Solicitor was to try cases sent to him by the Grand Jury, but in this case, detective-like, the Solicitor is seeking to determine who shall be indicted.

Dorsey Sharply Criticised.

Forgetting his legal and constitutional functions, he is undertaking to control the action of the Grand Jury.

The citizens of this county elected Mr. Dorsey as Solicitor General, but Mr. Dorsey has mistaken the purpose of his election. Evidently he believes that he was elected to be also the Grand Jury.

The Solicitor General does his duty when he tries to the best of his ability cases sent him by the Grand Jury. The Solicitor falls far below the dignity of his office when he inflames public opinion, probably inducing a conviction, innocent or guilty.

The Solicitor has closed his eyes to those plain truths and has rushed into print, day by day, proclaiming the guilt of Frank and the innocence of this negro, apparently for no purpose but to convict Frank, innocent or guilty, for the gratification of his professional pride.

So far has the State's counsel forgotten the function of a prosecutor, which is only to ascertain the truth and convict the guilty, that Mr. Dorsey's detective assistant, Chief Lanford, in an interview in this morning's paper, uses the following language as to the Pinkerton Detective Scott and Lanford's refusal to allow him to see Conley:

Score State's Secrecy.

"We did not want to embarrass Scott by requesting him to keep silent and did not want to risk the probability of letting new developments reach Frank's attorneys, therefore we were forced to prevent him from seeing the negro."

It seems, therefore, a matter for great endeavor on the part of the State, as the Solicitor and his associate detective sees it, to keep whatever facts they rely upon to convict Frank from the defendant and his attorneys and the public.

If the facts in the Solicitor's possession were the truth, why so much fear as to letting them out? Is it possible that the effort is to ambush the defendant by the proof of circumstances on the trial which he has no opportunity to meet or explain? Is it possible that the State's object is to keep the defendant in the dark as to the State's evidence and to so conduct its case that he will have no opportunity to know the facts relied upon to convict him, and no opportunity clearly to meet them and disprove them, if they be false?

Solicitor's Action Attacked.

The Solicitor has undertaken in this case to hold certain witnesses in custody. He undertakes to do this in the case of the negro Conley; but so fearful was he that the negro might dare tell all he knew, that he went through the farce of requesting the Superior Court to no longer incarcerate Conley and to discharge him, and immediately upon obtaining this order of discharge, he went through the greater farce of having him loosed upon the streets and then immediately and illegally returning him to the city station house, where he now is, carefully watched, counseled and interviewed by the Solicitor, his assistant, Mr. Hooper and his detective assistants.

We have no criticism of the former Grand Jury, but some things happened before it, as reported, that tend at least to provoke serious inquiry:

When Leo M. Frank's case was before the Grand Jury and in the midst of it Conley made his first confession, forced thereto by the discovery that he could write, it was suggested to the Solicitor that this confession be brought to the Grand Jury's attention. That would have been a fair thing to do. It was not done, and rumor has it that Mr. Dorsey directed that it be not done.

One other thing is almost incredible. According to the public prints, when the Solicitor wanted a vacation, he was so afraid that the Grand Jury might act in his absence that he sought to extract a promise from these sworn servants of the State not to indict in his absence.

Question Precedent.

When before was it ever suggested to a Grand Jury that they must await the termination of a pleasure trip before they should indict in any case where indictment was necessary?

Little need be said in reply to Lawyer W. M. Smith's interview given in support of the Solicitor's position.

It is remarkable that the Solicitor has to rely for support upon an argument made by Conley's counsel. It is, however, appropriate that he should bolster up the Solicitor, as he depends mightily upon the Solicitor to protect his negro, Conley. Conley's counsel realizes what is Conley's friend and rushes in print to his rescue.

We are publishing this interview neither in an effort to have Conley indicted nor in an effort to have him not indicted. That is a matter solely for the Grand Jury. We are not making any appeal to them or to anybody else as to the effect Conley's indictment would have on the Frank case.

So far as we are concerned, we feel that the failure of the Solicitor General to secure an indictment against a confessed accessory to the crime of murder would make far more capital in favor of Frank upon his trial than if he were indicted. We think any jury, and we think any community, would resent the rank favoritism shown this confessed criminal.

LUTHER Z. ROSSER,
R. R. ARNOLD.

THIS DRESS WAS TOO MUCH FOR PRIM RICHMOND.

THIS Picture shows Miss Flossie Brown in the split skirt which caused so much excitement in Richmond, Va., that the young lady was arrested, fined $25 and given twenty-four hours in which to leave town. The idea of the slit skirt did not appeal at all to the Virginians, but it has not been received with so much disfavor elsewhere, for Miss Brown, or Blossom Browning, as she prefers to be called, has been invited to wear it in Pittsburg and Baltimore.

MINCEY READY TO TELL STORY TO GRAND JURY

Man Who Says He Heard Negro Confess Now Is at Rising Fawn, Ga.

W. H. Mincey, the school teacher who made an affidavit declaring Jim Conley confessed to him on the afternoon of the murder of Mary Phagan that he killed a girl, will appear before the Grand Jury to repeat his startling story when that tribunal convenes Monday to consider the Phagan matter, it was reported Saturday night.

Mincey, who is now at Rising Fawn, Ga., has expressed his willingness to come to Atlanta for this purpose. His evidence, which has proved the most important of all that has come to light since Conley's affidavit directing guilt at Frank, is considered of the greatest weight in bringing the Grand Jury to its consideration of indicting Conley.

Hugh Dorsey, Solicitor General, insisted Saturday that his every effort would be directed against the indictment of Conley.

The Solicitor will not fight in Conley's defense except as a last resort. His chief desire is that the Grand Jury postpone action in regard to the negro until after the Frank trial.

"Conley can be indicted after the Frank trial is disposed of much more properly than at present," said the Solicitor Saturday. "And by the delay, there will be no danger of a miscarriage of justice."

The chief contention of the Solicitor is that with Conley indicted for the murder, and with uncertainty thus engendered, much of the force of the State's case against Leo M. Frank will be lost. It is the insistent declaration by police city detectives and the Solicitor's force that a chain of direct and apparently conclusive evidence has been forged against Frank.

It is mostly for this reason that Dorsey will request the Grand Jury to keep its hands off the Conley case. The Solicitor also hinted that he holds evidence, revelation of which would prevent the Grand Jury from indicting the negro. He feels also, as he announced, that a consideration of the Phagan case at this time will bring about an indiscreet exploitation of the State's evidence, thus revealing essential features of the prosecution's case to the defense.

All this he will present to the Grand Jury, it is expected.

Other phases of the case discussed Saturday included the intimation that the Frank defense will ask for a trial jury drawn from the Grand Jury box, and not from the petit jury box. The legality of this procedure, according to the Solicitor, is a matter of conjecture.

The Grand Jury will meet Monday at 10 o'clock, at the call of the foreman. The body has only twenty members, and by statute a quorum of eighteen is necessary to consider the indictment or exoneration of a person. The fact that a small margin thus is left for probable absence seems to strengthen the Solicitor's forecast that no indictment will be returned against Conley at this time.

ATTORNEY FOR CONLEY MAKES A STATEMENT

"Not Necessary to Indict Negro to Close His Mouth," Declares William Smith.

William M. Smith, attorney for Jim Conley, the negro now being held as a material witness in the Phagan murder case and whose indictment for complicity in the crime will be considered by the Grand Jury Monday, brought to the office of The Sunday American Saturday night a statement in behalf of his client.

In a letter accompanying the statement, Mr. Smith conveyed a doubt as to whether this newspaper would print what he had to say.

The attorney's statement in full follows:

The Grand Jury list published showed the names of some men whom I know, and know they are on the square, and, if they once understand the real situation, there will be a bear fight before Jim Conley is indicted at this time.

Of course it would be great work, if the State could be forced to so indict Conley as to make his testimony legally inadmissible against Frank. What a beautiful technical advantage for the Grand Jury to work to close Conley's mouth against Frank.

Code of Georgia, section 1035: "Confessions of conspirators. The confession of one joint offender or conspirator, made after the enterprise is ended, is admissible only against himself."

How long would the good people of this county stand for such legal jugglery to save a brutal murderer from the gallows? It is right that both men shall talk. The Grand Jury can name Conley as a joint offender or conspirator, they can give him a "legal status," which we have heard so much howl about for the last few days, and save Frank from the embarrassment of having to face Conley, even when he is tried. The Grand Jury may know more about what is legally proper to do in this matter than the men who have been playing this game for a living for years, but they had better move slow. We have been studying the principles underlying this fight for months, and they are fresh hands, just on the job for a few days.

It is not necessary to indict Conley to close his mouth. I can close it and help Frank to go free, and then Mr. Mincey and others of his type can be run off by the friends of Mr. Frank, and be inaccessible as witnesses when Conley is tried, and then Conley can go free. This could be done, but it won't be. Unless they get me fired from my representation of Conley, and unless the Grand Jury fixes his "legal status" so he can't swear, Conley will answer the roll call as a witness and tell the whole truth as he knows it. It is evident that a trade whereby Conley would close his mouth would be advantageous to both. With Mr. Mincey and others non est inventus, as I imagine they will be if they are not held after swearing, by some process, Conley could not possibly be convicted of murdering the girl himself, and with Frank free Conley could not even be indicted and punished as an accessory after the fact. Such a trade might even be made interesting to Conley's lawyer, from a financial viewpoint. In fact, everybody but society and the administration of justice would be helped.

We are not looking for trades. Let everybody tell the whole truth, as they see it, and then let justice take its full course, unhampered by ringers or other influences, permeating either the grand or petit juries of this county. When this is done, the fiendish murder of Mary Phagan will be avenged and the civic conscience of our good people satisfied.

WILLIAM M. SMITH.

Wife Wounds Man Drowning Husband

Son of Publisher Saved From Death by Spouse's Ready Use of Revolver.

STAUNTON, VA., July 19.—Quick action by his pretty young wife shortly before noon to-day saved the life of J. H. C. Grasty, Democratic nominee for the Legislature from this district and son of Charles H. Grasty, publisher of The Baltimore Sun.

J. E. Smith, a stableman on a neighboring estate, quarreled with Grasty over a warrant which Grasty, who is also a magistrate, had issued for Smith's arrest.

Angered because of Grasty's action, Smith attacked him and submerged him in a pool of water. Grasty doubtless would have been drowned if his wife, rushing up with revolver in had, had not opened fire upon Smith. Six shots were fired. It is believed one of them took effect. Smith fled.

Young Man Stabbed Fatally While He Is Protecting a Woman

Assailant of Simsville Farmer Is Captured by Motorcycle Policeman After Battle.

Ned Anderson, a young farmer of Simsville, was fatally stabbed Saturday night by G. C. Gidney, itinerant laborer from Kansas, as the result of a quarrel between the two over a woman.

According to the county police, Anderson was called to protect the woman from insult at the hands of Gidney. Anderson approached Gidney, who had been working on a farm in the vicinity, and ordered him to leave.

Gidney started to go, but Anderson followed him to the gate. There Gidney turned upon Anderson. He cut Anderson's throat and sank the knife repeatedly into his victim's body.

Motorcycle Policeman J. T. Carter reached the scene fifteen minutes later and started in pursuit of Gidney. He overtook the man, who was running hatless in the middle of the road, at the junction of the Mason and Turner pike and Simsville road.

After a fight, Carter succeeded in subduing Gidney and took him in custody.

Dr. J. V. Ryan attended Anderson, and it was stated at a late hour last night that the victim had no chance of recovery.

The name of the woman Anderson sought to protect could not be learned.

Deaths of a Day.

Mrs. Sallie Johnson, 47 years old, died a ther home, No. 208 Bellwood avenue, Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Johnson is survived by her husband, G. S. Johnson, and by one child, Helen Johnson. The funeral will take place Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Interment in Hollywood.

Mrs. Mary Granger, 75 years old, died Saturday afternoon at a private sanitarium, after a short illness. Funeral arrangements have not been completed. Mrs. Granger is survived by her husband, L. S. Granger; a son, J. R. Granger; a daughter, Mrs. Ellen Starnes, and two brothers, Bennett Smith and Alfred Smith.

William A. Latimer, the 10-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Latimer, No. 112 McAfee street, died Saturday afternoon at the family home. The body will be sent to Gainesville, Ga., for interment.

Nancy Reel Harper, the 10-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Harper, of Dawson, Ga., died Friday night at the home of N. A. Windsor, No. 635 North Boulevard. The body was sent to Dawson Saturday night.

The body of D. Q. Bramlett, aged fifty-four years, who was shot in San Francisco on June 16, will arrive in Atlanta Sunday morning. The funeral services will be held at the chapel of Barclay & Brandon. Bramlett moved from Atlanta to San Francisco 25 years ago. At the time of his death he was engaged in the restaurant business. He is survived by a brother, Ralph, of New York City; three sisters, Miss Victoria, Miss Mary and Mrs. Watt Goosby; a nephew, James Bramlett, all of Atlanta, and one young son, who lived with his father in San Francisco.

Herbert Pittman, aged twenty-two, died Saturday afternoon at No. 1250 Marietta road. The body was sent Saturday night to Cedartown, Ga., for interment Sunday. He is survived by his mother, five sisters and three brothers, all of Cedartown.

Mrs. Julia A. Adams died at her home, No. 22 Dixie avenue, Saturday evening at 8:45 o'clock, after an illness of several months. Mrs. Adams is survived by her son, T. C. Adams; her daughter, Mrs. S. J. Warner, with whom she lived, and a number of more distant relatives. Arrangements for the funeral have not been completed.

John S. Roberts, aged seventy-five, died at the Soldiers' Home at 7 o'clock Saturday evening. Funeral arrangements will be announced later. Mr. Roberts had been an inmate of the home for many years.

TRAINMEN WIN FIRST SKIRMISH IN WAGE FIGHT

Senate Confirms Appointment of Commissioners—What to Arbitrate Principal Issue.

NEW YORK, July 19.—The 82,000 conductors and trainmen on the Eastern railroads won the first skirmish in their fight for a 20 per cent increase in wages to-day when the Senate confirmed the appointment of W. L. Chambers and G. W. W. Hanger as commissioners of mediation under the Newlands law.

Early in the day the union leaders learned that the conference committee representing the railway managers was exerting every influence to oppose the confirmation of Mr. Chambers. This caused intense feeling, and for several hours it was believed an order would be issued before night directing the men to walk out.

Out of this situation developed a temporary truce, brought about by a telegram telling of the confirmation of the commissioners appointed by President Wilson. It was arranged immediately that a meeting of the mediators be held to-morrow at the Manhattan Hotel, at which the first negotiations looking to arbitration will be taken up.

Strike Not Yet Averted.

This does not mean that the threatened strike has been averted. A peaceful settlement of the controversy depends entirely upon whether the Government's mediators can bring the railroad managers and the employees together in an agreement as to what questions shall be arbitrated at this time. The union leaders, Messrs. Garrettson and Lee, maintain that they will agree only to arbitrate the wage question at this time. In this stand they have the full support of the men.

On the other hand, the railroad officials have specified eight separate grievances against the unions which they insist be taken up at this time. Seth Low, president of the National Civic Federation, after a conference with the managers' committee, failed in an effort to change their attitude.

Unions Stand Firm.

Leaders Garretson and Lee assert that a strike will surely follow if the Government mediators are not successful in inducing the railroad managers to live up to the understanding by which the original agreement to arbitrate only on a wage increase was reached.

It could not be learned to-night whether the commissioners of mediation will confer first with the representatives of the railroads or the employees. It is likely that the meeting will last several days.

Meanwhile the Erie Railroad officials who withdrew their representative from the conference committee several days ago are planning to treat with their representatives separately. J. C. Stewart, vice president of the Erie, returned from Chicago during the day.

FIGHT STARTED TO BRING LUMB BACK FOR TRIAL

Counsel for Crawford Heirs-at-Law to Ask Governor's Aid in Extradition Move.

Attorney J. S. James, representing the Crawford heirs-at-law, will confer with Governor Slaton Monday preparatory to making a strenuous fight to have Fred Lumb, the New York barber, who is named as an accomplice of Mrs. Crawford in the alleged plot to poison her husband, that she might secure his $250,000 estate, brought back to Georgia for trial.

Mr. James' efforts will be fought at every point by the attorneys representing Mrs. Crawford who already have filed a letter with Governor Slaton objecting to the issuance of extradition papers. The move also is being fought in New York State, it is said.

Attorney James intimated Saturday that he would make an effort to have Lumb indicted as an accomplice in the alleged crime in case the Governor refuses to issue extradition papers before the indictment. He declared further that despite Mrs. Crawford's assertions that that she desires the return of Lumb her attorneys are fighting the move on every point.

According to Colonel James, the New York detectives have not located Lumb yet.

The civil hearing of the will case will be resumed Wednesday before J. N. Anderson as auditor.

Capital Now Calls Water 'Bryan Milk'

"Adam's Ale" Disappears From Vocabularies of Thirsty Statesmen Who Are Teetotalers.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Bryan milk is what they call water in the National Capital nowadays. The new name is fast ousting the familiar Adam's ale by which water has been known for some centuries.

When you go in a cafe here and the waiter asks you what you will drink, if you are a teetotaler you say airly: "Oh, a glass of Bryan milk."

Mincey Story Declared Vital To Both Sides in Frank Case

By AN OLD POLICE REPORTER.

The most important and interesting development of the week in the Phagan case was the Mincey affidavit, directing suspicion more surely in the direction of James Conley than ever before, if the affidavit is that of a credible witness.

If what Mincey says is true—if his evidence can be made to "stand up" in court—then he is far and away not only the most important witness yet discovered, but his testimony will serve to clear up the mysterious Phagan case in its most obscure phases.

Solicitor General Hugh Dorsey has attacked Mincey's credibility. Naturally, he would do that.

If Mincey is worthy of belief and is speaking the truth, he has dealt the State's case against Frank a deadly blow, from which it can not hope to recover.

If he does not speak the truth, and that can be established, it will redound to the hurt of the defense, for it will have a bracing-up effect upon Conley's other story.

But Who Is Mincey?

Who is Mincey? Nobody knows much about him.

Dorsey says he is not to be credited, but he fails to say in detail why.

Mincey's card in The Georgian certainly had the ring of straightforwardness.

So, however, had Dr. Cook's story of his discovery (?) of the North Pole.

Cook's story was by all odds the best story ever told of the Far Frozen North—but it exploded when it was put to the test. Nine men in ten preferred to believe Cook rather than Peary—but nowadays everybody believes Peary, despite his "bad manners," and so forth, when he was speaking the truth.

If James Conley did say to Mincey, Conley being apparently half-drunk at the time, "I have killed one girl to-day, and I don't want to kill anybody else!" and if that fact can be established categorically, it will clear Leo Frank beyond the shadow of a doubt!

If that fact can not be established, however, after the Mincey affidavit has been exploited, it will tend to strengthen the State, and to that extent must damage Frank most seriously.

Detective Lanford says Mincey stated at police headquarters that Conley was not the man he had met—"that it clearly was some other negro."

Visit to Factory Recalled.

Mincey denies that he said that, but he admits he did not immediately identify Conley, because he was not sure of his company at the minute, and kept his own counsel.

The factory people say Mincey did come to the factory, as he says, and make inquiry as to the negroes there, and that he was, perhaps, as he says, rather brusquely treated.

At that time James Conley had not been remotely connected with the Phagan case, and the factory people did not know what Mincey was driving at exactly. Mincey at that time did not even know Conley's name.

If, however, it be shown that Conley DID say to Mincey what Mincey says he said, it still will be contended, though I think with small hope of success, that it is not conclusive evidence that Conley killed Mary Phagan.

Undoubtedly it would not be that as an isolated proposition, but taken in connection with other things attaching to Conley as a suspect, it would be a smashing piece of evidence against the negro.

To be sure, negroes, half drunk especially, are apt, as a rule, to brag about things that they HAVEN'T done rather than things they HAVE—and to that extent the contention that Mincey's affidavit, at best, is weak would hold good.

But Conley's own admission of his presence in the factory on the day of the homicide, his series of lies after suspicion began falling in his direction, his amazing affidavits and counter-affidavits, and the discrepancies in his last affidavit—these, in connection with the Mincey affidavit, make a strong case against him.

Interest Centers in Mincey.

The more spectacular interest in the Phagan case now undoubtedly centers in Mincey.

The Grand Jury will meet tomorrow to consider the indictment of Conley.

It would be unusual for the Grand Jury to indict Conley, with an indictment already standing against Frank for the same offense. It would not be an unheard-of thing, however.

Grand Juries are laws unto themselves. They may indict whom they please and when they please.

Indeed, the law and their oaths make it imperative that a Grand Jury indict ALL persons they believe deserving of indictment, regardless of whether that indictment effects pending cases advantageously or disadvantageously.

If the present Grand Jury, upon a one-sided hearing, believes Mincey is speaking the truth in his remarkable affidavit, it will indict Conley, I think.

If it does not believe the Mincey affidavit—if it can be made NOT to believe it, to put it the other way—it will not, of course, indict Conley.

Which will it do?

That is the pretty puzzle in the Phagan case to-day!

Of Far-Reaching Import.

Nothing that has happened, in many aspects of the matter, since the beginning of the Phagan investigation, is so important or possible of such far-reaching results as the Mincey statement.

And that statement, primarily, looks dangerous to the State in the Frank case, and very helpful to it in the case against Conley, when it gets there, if it ever does.

Upon the State in the trial of Frank will fall the burden of breaking it down. Can the State do it?

That is what the State unquestionably is asking itself to-day. That is the thing that plainly is making the State most uneasy, in so far as the case against Frank is concerned.

About it will center the question of Conley's future status—whether he will continue as an admitted accessory after the fact or become a principal to the murder of Mary Phagan.

That is the thing the Grand Jury will thrash out with itself this week.

It may be said positively that not since the Phagan case first came into public notice has any development been watched with that degree of interest the public generally feels now in the outcome of the Grand Jury's anticipated meeting to-morrow.

Curiously enough, too, if the State goes TOO FAR in breaking down Mincey in the Frank case, it will hurt itself immeasurably in the trial of Conley later on, in the event of Frank's acquittal and Conley's subsequent indictment.

PRISON PAPER FLASHES EXTRA ON BALL GAME

Editor of "Good Words" Has Complete Account of Pennant Battle Out in Record Time.

PIRATES WIN SPRING TITLE

Publication Contains All Details of Diamond Struggle and Is Set by Hand of Editor.

Eight hundred convicts stood or squatted about the sun-baked baseball field at the United States penitentiary Saturday, apparently unconscious of the heat that would have cooked an egg, and saw the Pirates beat the Tigers in the deciding game for the spring season championship of the prison baseball league.

It was a great occasion. Register 4179 was pitching in superb form. Fielding was faultless. The fans were wild.

But the greatest event of the great day was to come after the game. Hardly had the jubilant fans trooped into the cool prison and quieted to some extent than through the cell-room rushed a squad of prisoners, with lusty voices and with bundles of papers under their arm.

"Extra-a-a," they yelled "All about the big game."

"Good Words" Out on Time.

It was the baseball extra of "Good Words," the prison paper. There was the game in detail, complete summary, detailed score in heavy black type—all the appurtenances of the conventional sporting edition that Atlantans buy on the streets each evening. Journalism at the penitentiary is all that is modern, and at one bound "Good Words" has leaped from the ranks of the staid monthly magazines into the bustling daily class.

The task of getting out the extra was considerable. Editor 4282 and his workers had to toil over the cases from one compartment to the other, with a speed that you might think impossible, now that the old tramp printer has gone the way of Nineveh and Tyre.

But even without the Mergenthalers, the prison journalists made their baseball extra a great, up-to-the-minute success.

The game of which it told was a good one, in spite of the 13 to 3 score by which the Pirates won. The Tiger pitcher, 4409, had two bad innings, and the tragic tale thus is told. In the most approved baseball language, the extra told the story, as witness:

Here's the Detail.

Third Inning—Pirates up. 3834 balloons a high fly to the infield and gets a safe hit on the society stunt of the shortstop and third baseman, and goes to second on wild throw. "Angel" smashes one to left garden, and "Frankie" scores. Pitcher asleep, and "Angel" steals third. 3833 perambulates to first on a donation. 4022 lifts one to center and out. 4362 hammers a safety to right, and "Angel" and 3833 score. "Chief" strikes out. 3651 places a Texas leaguer in right, and "Smittie" helps to win his game by a sizzling two-bagger to left, and two runs register. He scores on error of third baseman. 2817 strikes out. FIVE HITS, SIX RUNS.

There was another bad inning, the seventh, when the same story was told. And with them both, the Pirates won.

The prison fans followed the game enthusiastically. Every man was cheering, whether he was a bootlegger or a millionaire banker. The baseball extra noted the fact. In its column of "Flashes from the Diamond," it announced:

"1:15—Many notables are arriving and are ignored as they take their places in the reserved seat section. All fans are brothers to-day.

Banker Section Thrilled.

"1:17—Great excitement in the bankers' section as one sack of tobasco is bet against two packages of chewing gum.

"1:19—Odds veering to the Tigers. One rooter offers to wager his doughnut, with no takers."

The spectators sat on the ground, unsheltered. Above them the sun was hot. Below them the hard-packed ground was hotter. But nobody complained or even asked his neighbor if it were hot enough for him.

The spring season thus closed, the fall season of the league has begun. The winning team of the fall season will play the Tigers, the winning team of the spring season, for the championship and the pennant.

The Pirates were drawn from the corps of cleaners, and the Tigers from the construction workers. Guard Waddell is manager of the Pirates and is the proudest man in Uncle Sam's employ to-day, unless maybe it is Editor 4282, who conceived and carried out a feat that is without parallel in the prison world. At least, any other baseball extra in prison has never been recorded.

Atlanta Society Now Prizes Coat of Tan

Swimming Sunburn Has Become Popular

Hot Weather Makes Lakes Around City Most-Sought-for Spots. Many Expert Bathers.

To swim is to be modish, indeed, in Atlanta nowadays. Society collectively is proud of its coat of tan, acquired at East Lake under the blazing sun that has become Atlanta's chief subject of conversation and inspiration for profanity.

The lake front at the country club to the east of town resembles nothing, these hot afternoons so much as the swimming beach of a big resort, so crowded it is, and so much alive with the gayest of shrieks, the splash of picturesquely clad bathers, and the steamboatlike churning of those who are beginners in the art of swimming. And it is a very weary lake that composes itself for sleep every night, after a day of being beaten into a regular surf.

The most of the early afternoon swimmers are girls and young women, and the fair sex equals the men in number even later, when the hour comes for stores and offices to close, and for the breadwinners of Atlanta to hie themselves out to the club grounds.

Most bold in breasting the infant breakers at East Lake are the younger feminine contingent. Swimming with them has become the fad, and with the East Lake pool, the Capital City Club lake, Forrest Adair's home pond and the summer resorts, 'twill be a girl of the hothouse variety, indeed, in Atlanta society next fall who will not be able to boast all the strokes.

Among the swimmers at East Lake counted in one afternoon's survey are Miss Ellen O'Keefe, Miss Elizabeth Evans, Miss Lyda Nash, Miss Helen Thorne, Miss Regina Rambo, Mrs. Charles Hogue Booth, Mrs. J. Walter Ware, Mrs. T. E. Weatherholt, Mrs. H. Gottheimer and Mrs. W. C. Jackson.

SHORTAGE IN BANK MAY PASS $30,000

First Estimate of Lafayette Institution's Loss Believed Short. Early Arrests Are Likely.

CHATTANOOGA, July 19.—The failure to find notes approximating $30,000, which were in the bank 60 days ago, but are not now accounted for by the officials of the bank, caused National Bank Examiner Thomas C. Dunlap to close the doors of the First National Bank at LaFayette, Ga. Mr. Dunlap, who was at once appointed receiver, is now checking up the affairs of the institution.

From what he learned of the affairs of the bank, all depositors will be paid off in full, but there is a strong probability that the stockholders will get little, if anything, in the final wind-up. The bank is capitalized at $50,000, with liabilities of $240,000 and assets above $200,000.

So far as can be learned, no charges have been made against any officials of the bank and these familiar with the situation are inclined to the belief that the trouble came about as the result of carelessness in the management of some portions of the work in connection with the institution.

The loss of the nearly $30,000 in notes, however, continues to be an unsolved mystery, as no one seems to know where they are or how they came to disappear. There is a possibility that they may be found deposited as collateral with some other bank and no record made in the LaFayette institution.

Sentence Suspension Bill Up in the Senate

Senator Tarver, Author of the Measure, to Speak in Its Favor Monday.

One of the important general measures scheduled to come up for final action in the Senate Monday is the bill legalizing suspension of sentences and providing for the appointment of probation officers in such counties as may need them.

Senator Tarver, author of the bill, will speak in favor of the measure, and Senators Elkins and DuBose also will support it on the floor. It already has been recommended favorably by the judiciary committee, and so far as is known no opposition has developed.

THREE OF PICNIC PARTY DIE TRYING TO SAVE MAN

DREW, MISS., July 19.—Three members of a family picnic party were drowned late this afternoon and two others narrowly escaped drowning in the Sunflower River, the result of an effort on the part of three of the party to rescue George R. Stokely, who, with his sister-in-law, Miss Cora Steigley, got beyond their depth while Stokely was trying to teach the young woman how to swim. The dead are Mrs. George R. Stokely, Miss Cora Steigley and Walter Williams, Drew, Miss.

HOW FAIR ATLANTANS KEEP COOL IN THESE TORRID DAYS

Lawmakers Back After Augusta Trip; Feasted and Feted

Inspection of Medical College and Orphan Asylum Accompanied by an Elaborate Barbecue.

Members of Georgia's General Assembly, including Governor John M. Slaton and party, arrived in Atlanta early Sunday morning from Augusta, where they were the guests Saturday of the Mayor and Council and other leading citizens.

Reports from Augusta indicate that never before have the Georgia lawmakers had such a time. Arriving in Augusta at 1 o'clock, the Legislators detrained for the official inspection of the Medical College, following a brief reception at the depot, in which the "hand of welcome" was offered by Mayor Hayne, members of the City Council, Judge E. H. Callaway, president of the board of trustees, Dr. W. H. Doughty, dean of the college, and members of the faculty.

Immediately after the reception, the party was escorted to Carmichael's Club, where a big barbecue dinner, the best ever served in Augusta, it is said, was served to the visitors.

At 7 o'clock the Legislators were off for Atlanta, where they will rest up Sunday and get down to business again Monday morning. The members of the party expressed satisfaction at what they saw at the Medical College and at the Orphan Asylum.

Allens' Shaft Calls Virginia Murderer

Tablet of Tomb of Famous Outlaw Clan Members Bears Protest Against Their Execution.

HILLSVILLE, VA., July 19.—A tablet bearing the following inscription has just been placed over the graves of Floyd Allen and his son, Claude Allen, who were buried near Fancy Gap following their electrocution in Richmond for shooting up the court at this place:

"Sacred to the memory of Claude S. Allen and his father, who were judicially murdered in the Virginia penitentiary March 14, 1913, by order of the Governor of the State of Virginia over the protest of 100,000 citizens of the State of Virginia. Placed here by a friend and a citizen of Virginia."

TON OF SILKWORMS BUMPED.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 19.—Eight sacks containing nearly a ton of silkworms were thrown out on the track a few days ago at Vintinille by thieves who broke into a car of a freight train. The silkworms were recovered.

TAP FACTORY PIPES TO STEAL MEDICINE

Negro Band, in Year, Sells $1,500 Worth of Product Mixed With Alcohol.

An ingenious system of robbery, which consisted of tapping pipes in the plant of the Swift Specific Company, Butler and Hunter streets, and bottling for subsequent sale the medicine drawn off, was discovered Saturday by a squad of Pinkerton and city detectives.

Eight negroes were arrested and taken to police headquarters. The evidence was strong enough to hold only three of them. They were James Brown, alias "Buster Brown," No. 161 Thurmond street; Emory Wyatt, Forrest Park road, and James Gasden, No. 60 Hilliard street. Other arrests will follow.

The robbery is said to have been carried on systematically for more than a year, in which time the company claims approximately $1,500 worth of medicine has been stolen. The negroes, it is said, tapped the pipes in the boiler room, installed spigots in a business-like fashion and proceeded to draw off medicine day after day.

Alcohol was added to the product, and this decoction was sold in the negro districts for about one-third of the regular retail price of the medicine.

Popular Airs at Free Organ Recital To-day

Dr. Starnes' Program at the Auditorium Also Will Include Light Classical Numbers.

The following program was announced Saturday by Dr. Percy J. Starnes for the free organ concert this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Auditorium:

Overture to "Le Nozze di Figaro," Mozart.

"Scarf Dance," Chaminade.

Improvisation on "My Old Kentucky Home," Starnes.

Barcarolle from "Les Contes d'Hoffman," Offenbach.

Fantasy on Swiss melodies and "Tempest in the Alps," Breitenbach.

BRASS BAND OFFERED AS ATTRACTION AT TABERNACLE

The Baptist Tabernacle will inaugurate a new idea in attracting people to church this morning, when a professional band will give a concert in front of the church from 9 until 10 o'clock. Following this the primary day exercises will be held, with Professor E. M. Poteat, of Furman University, reviewing.

PROSTRATIONS BY SCORES AS GEORGIA BROILS

Two Convicts Die When Mercury Reaches Fever Heat Mark in All Sections of State.

All Georgia, after a scorching day Saturday, when scores of heat prostrations and several deaths from heat were reported, welcomed the coming of night with its slight relief from extreme temperatures.

Only then, following two days of torture and a night as oppressive, was the weather at all tolerable. Friday, Friday night and Saturday, particularly Saturday, were days when all the State sweltered.

Macon's temperature of 105 degrees Saturday was the highest in a nation of high temperatures. Thermometers elsewhere registered figures hardly less normal. In Athens and in Columbus 103 degrees was reached. In Waycross the temperature was 102 degrees. None of the considerable towns of the State was blessed with temperatures lower than 95 degrees.

Suffering Is Intense.

The suffering was intense. Labor was made impossible. Men succumbed to heat everywhere, but, more than the men, horses and mules were especial victims. Negro laborers suffered, two dying.

The temperature of Savannah was 100 degrees Saturday afternoon, but a breeze from the ocean tempered the heat and saved the city from suffering. Atlanta, with two degrees less heat, did not fare so well, a number ofprostrations being reported and one death.

A death from the heat in Atlanta and one in Macon; both were negro convicts. Charley Stevens, an Atlanta negro, was stricken in the Bellwood camp, and died a few minutes after reaching the hospital. After the fatality, work among the prisoners practically was suspended.

C. L. Walton Overcome.

A number of the men overcome by the heat will fare badly, it is expected. One was C. L. Walton, of No. 16 Ashby street, who was overcome as he drove his automobile downtown.

With nightfall rain came in most parts of the State, tempering the heat and bringing in its wake a breeze of more or less vigor, but in every case pleasing. Atlanta profited by a breeze early in the evening.

So great was the heat that bathers, seeking relief in public lakes, were forced from the water by the warmth which it had attained. This plight was reported from Lakeside Park, in Macon, and from Piedmont Park, in Atlanta. However, the crowds that flocked to the bathing resorts were large.

Cooler in One Place.

Columbus Cooled by Rain.

COLUMBUS, July 19.—The thermometer ranged around 103 between 12 and 2 o'clock to-day. No prostrations were reported. It was the hottest day of the season. Rain came at 4 o'clock and cooled the atmosphere.

Wave Breaks at Waycross.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—The unprecedented heat wave was broken here this afternoon after the temperature reached 102.

Rome Registers 108.

ROME, July 19.—This was the hottest day in all the history of Rome. At 2 o'clock this afternoon the official maximum temperature was 108 degrees.

Breaks Dublin Record.

DUBLIN, July 19.—All heat records were broken in this city to-day when the Government weather station recorded a temperature of 104 degrees shortly after noon.

20 Prostrations in Macon.

MACON, July 19.—With a temperature of 105 degrees here this afternoon, all heat records since the establishment of the Weather Bureau office here, were broken. Twenty prostrations were reported during the day.

Near Record in Albany.

ALBANY, July 19.—Though to-day's temperature lacked 1 degree of being as high as it was yesterday, it was enough to be a record-breaker with one exception. Yesterday the Government thermometer here showed a maximum of 104 dgrees, the highest ever recorded. To-day the highest was 103.

DRINK A ?

Insist On It at the Founts

FIVE CENTS

Our new plant will be located at 95 Marietta St., and ere long we will be turning out to the world the most healthful drink.

Listen! It is not an imitation, but a drink of distinctiveness, one that quenches the thirst, one that the doctor will prescribe for convalescents, a drink that is made of Pure California Concentrated Fruit Juices that act on the system as a mild laxative; and last, but not least, you can drink it and feel satisfied of restful sleep.

For full particulars hear a lecture on it Sunday, 3 P. M., at 95 Marietta St. Also get a sample glass.

We are introducing this new drink ? through The G. & B. Soda Co., and the correct name will not be known until Sept. 1st, and when it is disclosed everybody will be made happy. The new name will consist of four letters only and we are confident that you will utter it often; that is, if you are not a pessimist.

Mr. J. C. Glore in his address will utter the name 100 times, so bring your note book and take down the dope and put in the correct guess.

All our Ice Creams are the best. How could they be anything but right when Benjamin-Ozburn Co. furnish them? Ask for a G. & B. Fruit Pudding. All you can eat and feel comfortable for 25c.

King Hardware Company are hard to beat when you want anything for general use around the place. Just ask for Mr. Winn, Peachtree Store.

Loftis & Boatenreiter, 23 E. Hunter Street, furnishes quarters, making 100 per cent on their deal. They also installed our plumbing, but not at such a profit as the lease.

Reed Oil Company, North Avenue, have a fine lubricating oil in E. E. Medium. Insist on it, we sell it.

50c single gallon.

45c, 5-gallon lots.

You can get it cheaper, but the engine is the most vital part of your auto.

Davis & Belser, 132 Marietta St., furnished us with a 25c slot Electric Player, but we had it changed to 5c. Play it once. Belser needs the money.

Buehler Bros., Just Whitehall Street, furnish us our boiled ham and other choice meats. The Meat Market.

McClellan Baking Co., 46 E. Hunter Street, furnishes us with our sandwich bread, pies and pound cake. Try it, if you want to be satisfied.

Hunter - Hogue Electric Company, Room 25 Moore Building, Phone Ivy 4071, did our Electrical Work. Call for them.

Mr. J. C. Glore conceived the idea that Atlanta's good people wanted a place to rest, enjoy themselves and eat, drink and smoke the best---not in the busy center of the great city, but on some prominent street just two minutes from Five Points; hence you have "U want what U want when U want it."

Our object is for pecuniary gain, which results from your patronage. Now, all we ask of you, dear readers, is to just pay us a visit---and we have made a customer, and you have made no mistake, but profited thereby.

We deliver drinks, sandwiches and box lunches of superfine quality, and our service is second to none. Just try us; if we please you, tell others; if not, tell us.

POSTMASTER AT MACON DEFIES ADMINISTRATION

Edwards Reiterates Refusal to Resign in Letters to Wilson, Burleson and Bacon.

DEMANDS SENATE HEARING

Author Declares He Will Make His Case Celebrated and Conspicuous Throughout Country.

MACON, July 19.—Postmaster Harry Stillwell Edwards to-night made public three letters which he has written to Postmaster General Burleson, President Wilson and Senator Bacon, regarding the demand for his resignation and the Macon postoffice situation in general. He reiterates his refusal to resign, in compliance with the request of the Postoffice Department. He not only defies the department to remove him, but demands that he be allowed a hearing by the Senate.

Mr. Edwards' letters are written in the literary style for which he is noted, and heavily tinged with sarcasm. He does not mince words in denouncing the methods of the Wilson Administration. He charges that the Administration is playing the rankest sort of politics, though pretending otherwise.

He declares that if given the same opportunity as the "spies and inspectors who reported that he was not giving sufficient personal attention to his office," he could unearth evidence sufficient to justify the removal of Postmaster General Burleson.

Mr. Edwards again lays down the proposition that his appointment having come from the President and being approved by the Senate, only the President and Senate can remove him before his term of office expires. He insists that he be allowed to go before the Senate or a Senate committee. Mr. Edwards does not hesitate to say that before he goes out of office, either forcibly or willingly, he is going to make his case celebrated and conspicuous throughout the country.

WEEKLY EDITORS TO MEET AT LAGRANGE THIS WEEK

LAGRANGE, July 19.—The Georgia Weekly Press Association convention here next week will be the most largely attended of any meeting of the kind ever held in the State. A banquet will be given in honor of the visiting editors and friends.

Human Chain Saves Man on Niagara Brink

Four Men Take Desperate Chance in Rescue Work at Edge of Falls.

NIAGARA FALLS, July 19.—Truman Chapman, aged 22, of Hamilton, Ont., is alive to-day after falling into the Niagara River and being rescued at the very brink of the American Falls. Four men formed a human chain, and, by taking a desperate chance, saved Chapman when his body providentially lodged between propections of rocks.

Chapman, who is subject to fits, was leaning against a railing at Prospect Point, directly over the water's edge, when he fell in. The current from this point to the brink of the falls is irresistible, but the unconscious body struck the rocks just right to be held temporarily. John Hughes, T. S. Winders, T. D. Thomas and an unidentified man were the heroes.

Aerial Ferry to Join Cities in California

Air Pilot Gets Permission to Install Aeroplane Service Between San Francisco and Oakland.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—The first aerial ferry of the world will be in operation between San Francisco and Oakland in September. Permission was granted officially to-day by the Harbor Commission to John L. Lekas to construct a dock for his hydroaeroplane.

Lekas recently applied for a permit, declaring that he wished to establish a regular passenger service between the trans-bay cities. Lekas was before the commission to-day and satisfied them he was a safe and sane air pilot.

Bees Swarm in Pole Near Heart of City

Honey Gatherers at Pine and Courtland Streets Adapt Their Habits to Urban Ways.

You don't have to go to the country from Atlanta to find a bee tree. There is one at Pine and Courtland streets as wild and unclaimed as any in the forest, except that two boys in the neighborhood have discovered it and are anticipating robbing the honey as soon as the cold weather store is laid by.

The bees have hived in a telephone pole about 25 feet from the ground, although they have but a small entrance, there are enough of them to insure there being a large cavity within the pole. In the afternoons they are out, hanging to the pole in a large cluster.

ADAIRSVILLE VETERAN FALLS DEAD IN STORE

LOVES WOMAN WHO HAD HIM HELD FOR ARSON

Boarder, Arrested at Instance of Landlady, Says He Cares for Her Despite Charge.

Though she has caused his arrest and has charged him with setting fire to her home and attempting to poison her, G. A. Vaughn, a collector for the Boston Trading Company, declared Saturday night that he cared deeply for Mrs. A. C. Klapper, whose home, at No. 256 East Hunter street, was badly damaged by fire Saturday morning, and that he did not understand her sudden antipathy for him.

"I have cared for Mrs. Klapper for a long time," Vaughn said, "and in spite of the injustice she has done me, I have the same regard for her, locked in a cell as I am. The report that I caused her to leave her husband, from whom she is divorced, is untrue. She has seemed to care for me, and after she got her divorce I thought we would be married.

Antipathy Is Mystery.

"It is a mystery to me why she has suddenly turned against me, and I can not understand why she is trying to get me in bad. I am not jealous of Mrs. Klapper. I have always tried to show her a good time. I have taken her to dances and to theaters. Even though I do not dance, I have enjoyed seeing her dance with other men and enjoy herself.

"I took her to a dance at Lakewood July 4, and she seemed to have an awfully good time. She has been cold toward me, though, for about two weeks, since a young woman came there to board.

"Last Saturday night this young woman and Mrs. Klapper were getting ready to go to the Bijou, and I said maybe I would go, too. This young woman said, 'If he goes, I won't.' I don't think she likes me."

Vaughn said he is 27 years old, and Mrs. Klapper is 42. She has a son in Kansas City and a married daughter in Chattanooga, besides several other children.

Denies Knowledge of Fire.

Detectives investigating the burning of Mrs. Klapper's home have been able to unearth no evidence that would involve Vaughn, with the exception of Mrs. Klapper's assertions that Vaughn did it. Vaughn denies any knowledge of the fire, and he also denies that he tried to poison the woman last week, when he gave her a glass of water when she was sick.

Mrs. Klapper reiterated her charges against Vaughn Saturday night.

"I just know he set my house on fire," she declared. "I saw him come out of my room smoking, and shortly after that we smelled the smoke and found the clothing in my closet was on fire Vaughn was nervous and excited, and when I caught him coming out of my room, he hurried out of the house and went downtown."

Vaughn is being held on suspicion.

Atlanta Day To Be Society Event at Knoxville Exposition Plans Feature

Mrs. Van Deventer, Daughter of Mr. Justice Lurton, to Visit City for Conservation Fair.

Atlanta Day at the National Conservation Exposition in Knoxville this fall will be one of the largest of the many special days arranged for the national fair in the East Tennessee city.

Atlanta Day, according to plans now on foot, will be largely a society function, for the members of the Woman's Department of the exposition headed by Mrs. Horace VanDeventer, a daughter of Justice Lurton of the Supreme Court of the United States, as well as Knoxville's acknowledged society leader, expect to formulate their plans so that many of Atlanta society folk will make the trip to Knoxville for that day.

In addition it is planned to make Atlanta Day at the exposition one of peculiar and intimate interest to all residents of the city.

Mrs. VanDeventer to Come Here.

The plans for this special day are now in the making. They will be matured probably while the delegation of Knoxville business men is in Atlanta next week, and later when Mrs. VanDeventer and some of her coworkers in the woman's department come to the Georgia metropolis to take up the matter with Atlanta society folk.

In the preparations for what undoubtedly will be the South's greatest exposition, the woman's department is playing no small part. In Knoxville the exposition management considers itself fortunate that Mrs. VanDeventer consented to take the direction of the woman's work. She has a very large circle of friends and acquaintancse throughout the country, in cities of the North as well as in cities of the South, and what is more, she has succeeded in interesting large numbers of society women in the work she has under way.

Miss Mabel Boardman, president of the American Red Cross Society and a woman who finds time in the multitude of her various philanthropic work to devote herself to society, will be the guest of the woman's department of the exposition on September 19. Miss Boardman to accept this invitation will be obliged to cut short her vacation, but she has gladly consented to do this rather than miss going to Knoxville. She will be made the recipient of many social favors and attentions while in Knoxville. She will be the house guest of Mrs VanDeventer.

Mrs. Hammond Interested.

Mrs. John Hays Hammond, of Washington, wife of the multi-millionaire mining engineer, who was the special Ambassador from the United States to England at the time of the coronation of King George, is another society woman who has become interested in the Knoxville show and who will come to that city for one of the special days. Mrs. Hammond is president of the National Civic Federation, which will have an extensive exhibit at the Exposition.

Mrs. John Goelet, of Washington; Miss Mabel Wetmore and other women whose names are known the country over will also be guests of the woman's department while the Exposition gates are open. Recently Mrs. Van Deventer made a trip to Nashville to interest the women of that city. On very short notice a meeting was called. Two hundred or more Nashville women went to that meeting. A number of men went also. There was much enthusiasm shown. The result was that plans were completed then and there for a Nashville Day.

More than that—the Nashville Park Commissioners, under whose auspices a splendid exhibit of paintings is being shown in the Parthenon of that city, voluntarily and as a compliment to Mrs. VanDeventer decided to continue the exhibition almost to the time set for the opening of the Conservation Exposition. Then the exhibits will be moved to Knoxville. One of them will be shown in the Art Building; the other, which is the celebrated collection owned by Charles L. Freer, a millionaire art collector, of Detroit, will be placed in the Woman's Building.

Mrs. Denney Also Active.

Mrs. VanDeventer and some of her coworkers, among them Mrs. George W. Denney, fourth vice president, who is also the president of the Tennessee State Federation of Women's Clubs and very active in the club life of Knoxville and Tennessee, are planning now to come to Atlanta within a short time to talk matters over with Atlanta women. Just when Mrs. VanDeventer and Mrs. Denney will come or where the meeting will be held has not been decided.

The fact that Atlanta business men are showing a keener interest in the exposition—which is one designed to benefit the entire South—than they have heretofore, and the chances that Atlanta will be well represented at the exposition, is counted upon to assist the women.

The woman's department has planned its work along broad lines. The stereotyped exhibits that always have been a part of women's departments in other expositions will have no place in the Woman's Building at Knoxville. The idea behind the National Conservation Exposition is one of conservation, and these women have figured it out that there is probably nothing that needs conserving more than the energies and the health of women all over this broad land.

So that is what the exhibits in the woman's department will typify to a very large extent. Of course, the things that have a peculiar interest and attraction to women will not be overlooked.

DIXIE SENATOR THINKS TARIFF WILL RUIN U. S.

Broussard, of Louisiana, Declares the Underwood Bill Will Tie Hands of Government.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Representative Robert Broussard, of Louisiana, senator-elect, is opposed to the Democratic tariff revision as proposed in the Senate bill, because he thinks it will destroy legitimate business in the United States and will tie the hands of the Government in its authorized instructions under the bill to obtain more favorable tariff terms from foreign countries.

"Governor Foss of Massachusetts is situated more fortunately in his business activities than many others affected by the proposed tariff legislation," commented Mr. Broussard. "He can pick up his manufacturing plant in Massachusetts and transfer it to Canada, where, under more favorable laws, he can continue to do business at a profit. It is unreasonable in any one to assert that he shall not conduct his business at a profit.

Can Not Move Plantations.

"The sugar planters of Louisiana who can not grow sugarcane at a profit under free sugar can not pick up their plantations and remove them to a country where the law encourages instead of destroys husbandry and the development of the productivity of the soil.

"The present conditions in Mexico and the diplomatic stand taken by their country does not encourage the Louisiana planter to try any experiments there. The sugar trust has its grip on Cuba. The sugar planter sees ruin and can hope only that in a few years the Democrats may see their mistake and repeal the law.

"It would be interesting, were it not for the tragedy that lies in the ruin of the Louisiana planter, to watch the efforts of the Department of Agriculture to find some other plant or farm product that the Louisiana sugar planters may grow with profit after their sugarcane crop has been rendered profitless.

Experts to Study Soil.

"Secretary Redfield, of the Department of Commerce, is to send experts into Louisiana to study for three years just what it costs to raise and make sugarcane in that State. It is the policy of those in administration who are forcing free sugar to doubt the correctness of such data which has been furnished by the sugar planters."

ATLANTA INVITES COMPETITION

¶ In no uncertain terms we want to correct any impression that may have arisen out of a recent publication about the City Council requiring a license tax upon visiting salesmen selling to the consumer.

¶ This matter has never come up in any meeting of our association. In fact, our members are believers in an open market; all of them sell their goods in the open markets of the world, and visiting merchants can rest assured that we desire them to have every opportunity to compare prices and values with any and all competition.

¶ The Meeting of the Southern Merchants Association has for its purpose the upbuilding and betterment of the merchants of the South and we are more concerned in its success than in any mere matter of selling merchandise.

Kimball House Doctor and Wife Exchange Compliments After She Attacks His Companion.

Strained marital relations of Dr. J. R. Smith, physician at the Kimball House, and his wife resulted in spicy statements from both husband and wife Saturday night, following the sensational fistic and acid-throwing encounter Saturday afternoon between Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Ina McNeil, a saleswoman at High Dry Goods Company.

"The unfortunate lady (meaning Mrs. Smith) is so jealous as to make it almost a disease," was the characteristic way in which Dr. Smith summed up the affair in a statement issued through his attorney, Burton Smith.

"He (meaning Dr. Smith) promised to be reconciled and seemed to love me when he came home last week—and then, to-day on the street, there he was, scraping and bowing so nice to that woman, his old bald head shining all the time in the sun," was the rather significant statement of Mrs. Smith Saturday night.

Hints at Legal Action.

And right at this point, for the time being, at least, the whole affair has stopped short, with hints and intimations, and even threats from Mrs. Smith, of legal developments.

"I am going home to Douglasville," said Mrs. Smith, "and think it all over. I don't know just what I will do yet—but," and here she waxed enthusiastic, "I will kill that woman if she continues to interfere with me and my husband."

Saturday's encounter between the two women, which occurred in front of Parks-Chambers-Hardwick store on Peachtree street, created a sensation downtown. Eyewitnesses of the affair say the fight was on almost before any one knew that trouble was brewing.

Mrs. Smith, according to her own statement, trailed the doctor and Mrs. McNeil from Edgewood avenue, where they met. Then she says she saw them in front of Parks-Chambers-Hardwick store.

Acid Bottle Is Thrown.

After watching the pair for a moment Mrs. Smith declares she went after Mrs. McNeil and hit her on the eye. During the melee some one threw a bottle, which is said to have contained carbolic acid. Mrs. Smith admits that such a bottle was thrown, but declines either to acknowledge or deny throwing it.

Dr. and Mrs. Smith reside in Douglasville, where they have a beautiful farm, which, it is said, belongs to Mrs. Smith. Dr. Smith has been connected with the Kimball House for a number of years. They have one son, Horace Smith, a clerk also at the Kimball House.

"I did not meet Dr. Smith by any previous arrangement Saturday," said Mrs. McNeil. "I had just returned from an Edgewood avenue jewelry shop and was standing on the corner waiting for a Piedmont Park car when Dr. Smith came along and I spoke to him. At that instant I was attacked. Mrs. Smith flew at me like a mad woman and threw a liquid on me. I did not run, for I had nothing to be ashamed of. Mrs. Smith did not black my eye and my arm is not cut." Mrs. McNeil lives with her aunt, Mrs. Keen, No. 299 Forrest avenue.

Votes Rolling in for Slogan Beauty Candidates

Keen Rivalry Attracts Attention of Whole City

A NOTED JUDGE OF BEAUTY SAYS:

ATLANTA'S beautiful girls and women are world famous. They are the first things to impress observing visitors. It is quite natural that the "prettiest" girl should be the emblem of the "500,000 Booster Club." It is good to tell the world of the greatest thing in Atlanta—her beautiful women—and nothing could do more to advertise the "500,000 Club" than to identify the beautiful women with it.—ROBERT F. MADDOX.

Miss Sophia Haas, of the Georgian Terrace Hotel, the newest entrant in the booster emblem beauty contest. She is of the tall, graceful brunette type, and her friends are confident she will be among the leaders in the race for the honor of being chosen Atlanta's prettiest girl.

Georgian Terrace Girl Promises to Become One of the Leaders in Contest.

Just as the voting in the "beauty button" contest had become very brisk a new candidate was nominated. She gian Terrace Hotel. Several Georgian Terrace Hotel. Several nominations of Miss Haas came in on the same day, and she promises to be a worthy rival of the other beauties who have been nominated.

Miss Haas is a tall, slender brunette, as delicately featured as a lily.

The Sunday American announces for the first time the standing of the various candidates. The coupon voting has attracted city-wide attention, and the rivalry between the supporters of the candidates has become intense.

The strong feeling of personal preference is at work, in addition to the honor of having the girl's face on the buttons of the "500,000 club."

Miss Mert Hancock, Ponce DeLeon avenue, 1,780 votes.

Miss Mary Carl Hurst, West Twelfth street, 1,490 votes.

Miss Lucile Goodrich, Inman Park, 420 votes.

Each day voting coupons are run in The Georgian. These are to give you an opportunity of naming your favorite beauty.

Clip them and send them in.

The "beauty button" contest is to lead up to the climax of the movement to form a "500,000 Booster Button Club." Atlanta's prettiest girl is to be the sponsor of this organization. The girl receiving the largest number of votes will be selected.

Then the buttons will be made and the "500,000 club" will begin boosting toward 500,000 population in 1920.

SALVATION ARMY HEAD TO ADDRESS POST HERE

Colonel Richard E. Holz, of Philadelphia, who has charge of the Atlantic Coast province of the Salvation Army, will address the local Army at the hall, 29½ Marietta street, Thursday, July 24.

None of Your Operas For Park Concerts

'Snookey Ookums,' 'In My Harem' and 'Society Tango' Prominent Among Band Numbers To-day.

Concerts designed to make life well worth living even on a hot afternoon will be given at Piedmont and Grant Parks to-day at 3:30 o'clock by the Fifth Regiment Band. The musicians will be divided into two sections, one to be assigned to each park.

None of your heavy operatics do the programs disclose. Here and there a light classic or two will be played, but flanking the more pretentious music in the list of selections are "Snookey Ookums," "In My Harem," "The Society Tango," and others of the tantalizing rag variety.

C. E. Barber, bandmaster of the Fifth Regiment Band, compiled the concert programs. Ten selections will be played at each park.

WANT AD MAN WANTS TO SEE YOU ON MONDAY

Don't Delay Entering Contest. Automobile, Piano and Other Prizes Await Your Efforts.

The Want-Ad Man wants to see you Monday. Drop in at 7 Edgewood avenue, and he'll tell you all about the Want-Ad Contest and how to win that automobile.

Better be there Monday, too, and not put it off any longer. The first start may mean victory, and the fifty or more contestants already entered will not lose any time.

Clip out the nomination blank on another page in this issue, have a friend fill it out for you and bring it to the Want-Ad Man, making up your mind to go in and win. You won't be sorry.

Full announcement of details of the contest will be made by the Want-Ad Man soon, so don't fail to be on hand Monday. He will tell you how to get the want ads, how to write them, how to turn them in, how to get credit in the competition for the dozens of prizes offered by The American and Georgian.

Great Chance Here!

Just think! A few weeks' work, perhaps only a short time a day, may make you the proud possessor of a handsome touring car of the latest make. It may give you a piano which would grace any drawing room in Atlanta. It may mean a trip to California and return for you. It may bring you a motorcycle or a bicycle, a watch or a diamond. There are prizes galore, and all well worth the effort.

The Want-Ad man isn't giving something for nothing. He merely proposes to reward energetic effort. Every cent received from you for want ads will be credited you for ten votes in the contest. At the end of a few weeks, when the contest closes, the contestant having the most votes will receive the first grand prize, with the others coming in their order for the other trophies.

Bring in Blank Now.

The nomination blank in the full page ad in this issue will give you a start of 1,000 votes. Don't fail to clip it out and make a start Monday.

You won't be merely turned loose on your own resources. A staff of skilled workers will go with you, show you how to get business, instruct you in the fine points of work. You will be given direct personal assistance. The Want Ad Man has several plans for helping you to roll up big business.

Did you read what that Atlanta business man said to the Want Ad Man a day or so ago, when he entered his son in the contest? He said:

Experience Worth Thousands.

"I want Charley to enter and win, but even if he doesn't win a prize, he will be gainer just the same. I know a few weeks of actual experience in such work will be worth a thousand dollars to him in practical business training.

"The men in America—and the women, too—who command the highest salaries are those who sell the goods. Practical salesmanship is the best paid profession on earth to-day. That's why Charley is going into the contest."

Think that over a moment! You have the opportunity not only to gain a practical education in business methods, but a chance to be handsomely rewarded for your work.

Be sure to come Monday morning. No. 7 Edgewood avenue. Ask for the Want Ad Man.

COUNCILMAN ABERNATHY REMOVED TO HIS HOME

Councilmah Roy Abernathy, of the Seventh Ward, was removed from the Piedmont Sanitarium, where he has been ill for several weeks, to his home Saturday. His condition has so improved as to warrant the change and it is declared that he will soon be up again.

WHITE MAN SHOOTS NEGRO IN SCUFFLE OVER PISTOL

HELENA, July 19.—Arthur Cane, a negro, and Matt and Tompian Long, white, who live near Milan, got into a dispute to-day. Cane threatened to kill the Longs. Tompian Long drew his pistol and the negro grabbed it. In the scuffle, Long shot Cane through the body. Cane's recovery is doubtful. Long claims self-defense.

WIVES CREDITED WITH KEEPING HUSBANDS ALIVE

Medical Association Finds That Benedict's Regular Existence Is Better Than Bachelor's.

Supervision by wives as a possible reason for the greater longevity of married men than of bachelors is discussed by The Journal of the American Medical Association in its editorial section of the recently published statistics on this point. There is no remark on the statistics of more suicides among married men than bachelors.

The Journal has further information indicating that careful as the married men may be, with restraint once removed through the death or divorce of the wife, widowers and grass widowers leap into indiscretions and are lopped off more rapidly than either those still in the state or those who escaped matrimony.

Live Regular Lives.

"Undoubtedly the low death rate among married men is partly due to the fact that, as a rule, those who are in good health, are readier to marry, while those with more delicate health, especially if suffering from any definite ailment, are not willing to assume the burden and responsibility of a family," says The Journal. "Another factor is that married men live much more regular lives as a rule, and consequently avoid many of the dangers of irregular living.

"This view would seem to be corroborated by the statistics as to the mortality among married men who have lost their wives either by death or divorce. The death rate among these "unmarried men" is considerably higher than that of husbands of the same age, and even as a rule it is higher than that of the bachelors of the same age.

Widowers Die Fast.

"The death rate, for instance, of widowers and divorced men between 20 and 30 is nearly double that of single men. From 30 to 40 it is only 14.1 to 12.9, while from 40 to 50 the mortality of divorced and widowers is slightly less than that of single men of the same age. From 50 to 60, however, it is slightly higher once more.

"At all these ages the mortality rate among widowers and the divorced is at least nearly and sometimes double that of married men of the same age."

HARD THICK CRUST COVERED BOY'S HEAD

Cracked with Least Pressure, Causing Discharge. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In One Week Entirely Cured.

Bolton, Ga. — "My little boy's head was covered with a hard thick crust which cracked with the least pressure causing a discharge of bloody corruption which was so offensive that I could hardly hold him. He was very cross. Some called it milk crust, another running tetter and another eczema.

"After trying several patent medicines I decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using the sample I purchased some Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. After using Cuticura Soap and Ointment three days I was able to remove all the crust and in one week he was entirely cured. Cuticura Soap and Ointment also cured my baby of an ulcerated sore behind her ear and now we think we cannot keep house without them." (Signed) Mrs. Charles Poss, Nov. 5, 1912.

The regular use of Cuticura Soap for toilet and bath not only tends to preserve, purify and beautify the skin, scalp, hair and hands, but assists in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, yellow, oily, mothy and other unwholesome conditions of the skin. Cuticura Soap (25c.) and Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

☞Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

FARMERS UNION POINTED TO AS HOPE OF SOUTH

Charles S. Barrett and L. M. Rhodes, of Tennessee, Organizing Planters of State.

BRING MESSAGE OF CHEER

Speakers Declare Organization Is Only Way to Cut Present High Cost of Living.

L. M. Rhodes, president of the Tennessee division and chairman of the national board of directors of the Farmers' Union, has just finished a flying trip through Georgia in company of Charles S. Barrett, national president of the Farmers' Union, and J. J. Brown, former Commissioner of Agriculture of Georgia. The following message to the farmers as delivered by Mr. Rhodes abounds in such truth and fact not generally known:

"Agriculture is basic. Upon it rests cities, commerce and civilization. The people of the earth consume 60,000,000 tons of food annually. Five hundred and eighty-two million tons of it come from the farm. Human beings are clothed in the products of the farm from the time they are born until they embark for eternity. Yet ever since Grandfather Adam made the mistake that caused him to lose the family estate the farmer has been a failure in business.

Farmer Behind in Business.

"In business development of the United States in the last century the farmer has fallen behind. In the procession of modern business methods he has followed where he should have led.

"Twelve men control one-third of our wealth, and one man controls nearly one-tenth of the wealth of this the richest country in the world. At the rate we are going capital will own practically all our wealth in another generation.

"Sixty-three land companies and rich individuals own an area equal to Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama and North and South Carolina.

"Liberty can not long exist in a country where the tendency is to confine the wealth to a few hands, for he who controls a nation's money controls its people.

Union Is Educational.

"Knowing that our liberty was bought with holy blood and sacred tears, and seeing that we must organize and change our present methods or surrender, we organized the Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America. Believing that a lack of practical knowledge is man's greatest enemy, we placed 'education' as the first word in our name. And knowing that a people are never strong when they are wrong, we selected as our motto: 'Equity, Justice and the Golden Rule.' Our organization has steadily grown, until now it reaches from coast to coast, and north, south, east and west are terms of direction to indicate its magnitude. In one decade it has grown until it is winged by Canada and Mexico, backgrounded by the Atlantic and footlighted by the Pacific.

"The real reason of the high cost of living is not because the farmer produces an inadequate amount of products or gets too much for what he grows, but it is that there are too many toll gates between the field of production and the table of consumption.

"As long as we continue our present methods we will build up the towns and cities at the expense of the rural districts. The consuming public pays $13,000,000,000 for what the farmer parts with for $6,000,000,000. The farmer gets 44 cents and the distributor gets 56 cents of each dollar. If there is a practical workable way to stop this plundering of the producing and consuming masses, and do away with this stupendous waste, it should be done. Surely no one would oppose the change, except those who think the jeweled hand of greed should be licensed to pick the threadbare pockets of those who toil.

"Within the next decade the farmers of this country will produce enough to load 250,000,000 freight cars, and its value will approximate $100,000,000,000. If property handled, this should double the farmer's wealth. But producing is not all of farming. We cannot prosper unless we can control prices; we cannot control prices unless we co-operate; we cannot co-operate unless we organize. The farmer must keep his pace with the organized industries of the age, or verily he will have his reward."

Mr. Rhodes then spoke in detail of the work the Farmers' Union had done, its aims, its objects, its hopes, and the effect was so marked that there were responses on every hand by farmers who heard him, and the beginning of the 75,000 membership in Georgia was inaugurated, and the culmination will be a certainty if President Barrett and Mr. Rhodes put in a few weeks of organization.

Y. M. C. A. SWIMMING POOL DENIED FOR BAPTISMS

ASHEVILLE, July 19.—If the annual baptism of the Russellites takes place Monday as planned, the services will have to be held in some nearby creek, for there is no local church baptismal nor is the Y. M. C. A. open to them.

The Russellites, who are in annual session here, made application to officials of the Y. M. C. A. for the use of the swimming pool. The request was refused on the grounds that the Y. M. C. A. is a non-sectarian organization.

Original 'Bell House Boys' Enjoy Annual Barbecue

Atlanta Men Who Ate at Famed Table Do 'Tango'

COLONEL W. L. PEEL and Judge W. M. Beck doing the tango. Below, Henry B. Kennedy in a characteristic pose.

No speeches marred this happy occasion, and formality—there was none.

Colonel Peel and Judge Beck in Fancy Steps at Reunion of Boarders.

The second annual barbecue of the original Bell House boys was held Saturday at the Cold Springs Club grounds. More than 150 of the boys were present, including some of Atlanta's leading citizens, who at one time as mere clerks resided at the famous boarding house of Mrs. Emma Bell on Peachtree street.

The fun started at 2 o'clock. First on the program was a resounding cheer—"It's always fair weather when good fellows get together." And there was cool beer on tap, enough to go around, but not too much.

A band played all the latest "squirms," and as the boys dived into the choice, juicy barbecue bliss reigned. There were no speeches to mar the occasion and all formality was thrown aside.

After the "feed" the boys lined up on the pavilion and the turkey trot and tango with many original steps were introduced. Judge W. M. Beck and Colonel W. L. Peel made a hit when, with arms entwined, they ventured forth upon the polished floor and capered in a manner which backed all others off the boards.

Among those present were:

Dr. J. Calvin Weaver, Dr. Willis R. Harvey, H. L. Harvey, R. O. Howard, Marion Seabrook, A. F. Giles, E. L. Bishop, J. A. Curtis, H. P. Miles, R. S. Quin, G. B. Pendleton, J. Democrats Given Chance for Jobs

First Opportunities in Years for Positions in Revenue Service in Georgia.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—For the first tim ein many years Georgia Democrats will have an opportunity to get positions in the revenue service in the State, according to letters sent to-day by Commissioner o flnternal Revenue Osborn to all members of the Georgia delegation in the House.

The letter announces that examinations will be held in Atlanta, Augusta, Columbus, Macon and Savannah on August 16 to prepare a new eligible list. It has happened that heretofore Republicans only have been at the top of the eligible list.

"As numerous inquiries have been made relative to appointments in the Internal Revenue Service," says the letter, "and as commissions of deputy collectors of internal revenue automatically expire with that of the collector by whom they were commissioned and appointed, and it is possible that many new collectors may not elect to recommission the old deputies, it is suggested that you give this information wide publicity."

Minister's Daughter Is Arrested in Raid

Pretty Young Woman Taken in Piedmont Avenue Rooming House Accuses Proprietor.

Mrs. Lola Shaw, 25 years old, was arrested in the rooming house of R. T. Venable, at No. 171-2 Piedmont avenue, Saturday night on a charge of being drunk and disorderly.

At the station Mrs. Shaw, a pretty young woman, said she is the daughter of a Baptist minister, the Rev. L. T. Shaw, of Ivy, S. C. She said, too, that she never tasted liquor until last night.

As a result of the arrest, Venable's house was searched by police. Mrs. Shaw said that he was selling whisky. Three pint bottles and three half pints of whisky were found.

Human System Poisons Itself

OtherwiseMost of UsWould Live to Be Methuselahs.

Scientists say that almost every moment we are poisoning ourselves. Autotoxemia, they term it, or Self-Poisoning. Eliminate Autotoxemia, and we could live to be hundreds of years old.

All food eaten leaves in the stomach some waste, unused particles. This waste ferments and generates uric acid, and when uric acid gets in the blood it poisons the system—self-poisoning. Constipation, indigestion, biliousness, dyspepsia, sick headache, languidness and a weakened physical condition all result from self-poisoning.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT flushes stomach and intestines, dissolves the uric acid which has accumulated and expels it with the fermenting waste.

Take JACOBS' LIVER SALT in the morning before breakfast. You will do a better day's work, and live longer.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is better than calomel for constipation and biliousness. Acts quickly and more thoroughly, requiring no cleansing after-dose of oil; causes no after-danger of salivation; never gripes or nauseates. It effervesces agreeably. No other liver tonic has the same mild, natural flushing action, though many imitations (in name) are offered. Insist that your druggist supply the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. If he can not, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, 25c, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

ARTIFICIAL RAIN INSTALLED ON ATLANTA FARM

Will Zimmer, C. S. Witham and Loring Brown Protect Crops With Pipe System.

"These dry nights, when my crops are burning up, I can smell that artificial rain a mile off," said a farmer in the suburbs of Atlanta.

The "artificial rain" of which he spoke is produced on three "fancy" farms within a short distance of Five Points, and, according to the unanimous verdict of Will Zimmer, C. S. Witham and Loring Brown, who own "overhead irrigation" plants, it means salvation in dry years.

Pipes Supply Rain.

On posts eight feet high rest pipes about two inches in diameter. These pipes run the whole length of the fields, and the lines of pipe are twenty feet apart. About two feet apart in the pipes are tiny holes. A gasoline engine, a pump which it operates, an abundant supply of water, and the thing is done.

Six hours each evening, when there is no rain, the pump is run and fine streams of water spurt from the holes in the pipes. At high pressure, these streams are thrown almost from one line of pipe to the next. Handles at convenient intervals make it possible to turn the pipes so that the streams are deflected in any direction and the ground thoroughly soaked with the spray.

This system excels ditch irrigation for Georgia soil for the reason that Georgia clay does not soak up water from a ditch in sufficient quantities. Besides, the soil cakes when water is applied in this way. "Artificial rain," however, coming down like a mist, permeates the whole soil and brings results.

Of course, an overhead pipe system is expensive. The cost is estimated at $250 per acre. This might be reduced somewhat if the farmer performed all the labor himself, or it might easily cost more if conditions were not entirely favorable. The increased yield, however, more than overbalances this initial outlay.

Loring Brown tells of getting an $1,100 crop of Irish potatoes from an acre, under his pipe system. In reality, there were two crops, a spring planting and a fall planting, and the potatoes brought a high price because they were sold for seed.

Fail to Realize Work.

"I have only one objection to seeing Belmont farm described in the newspapers," said Mr. Brown, as he sat in a swing on his front gallery and sorted a thick packet of letters. intervention in Federal Court, ask-"My objection is that people read of big yields and good profits, then are anxious to try the same methods. They want to spend a lot of money to emulate Belmont, and fail to take account of the hard work that must go with it."

OBSOLETE LAW LIKELY TO HALT WORK OF PRICE

Commissioner Will Not Conduct Fertilizer Inspection Unless Appropriation Is Raised.

Unless the Legislature can see its way clear to furnish Commissioner James D. Price with sufficient funds to carry forward the work of supplying material for making fertilizer inspections and records of inspections, tags, postage and other incidentals of that work, the Commissioner will be unable to handle those matters this year as they have been handled in the past, and those important branches of his department may be closed.

Under an old law passed twenty-odd years ago the entire expense of this work is limited to $500 annually, although no Commissioner for years past has been able to comply with that law.

Commissioner Connor's report for last year shows that $11,648.39 was spent in this work, which is far in excess of the amount the law authorizes.

Mr. Price is not criticising that particularly, as Mr. Connor merely did what other Commissioners before him had done.

Already there has been authorized by Commissioner Connor upon showings made before he retired from office an expenditure of $3,968.69 for this year.

Price Won't Pay Accounts.

Commissioner Price will not pay these accounts, however, unless the Legislature specifically authorizes him to do so.

"I have made up my mind not to violate the law even if it is an old and antiquated one," said Mr. Price, discussing the matter Saturday.

"If the Legislature directs me to provide these inspections, tags, records, materials, bulletins and so forth, it must give me the money to pay for them. If the Legislature gives me the money, the work will be carried on; if it does not, the work will be discontinued.

"The responsibility is with the Legislature. I will do exactly what it directs me to do, but I will not incur an expense which it will not give me the money to pay.

Farmers to Protest.

"The farmers of this State will be up in arms, of course, if the tags, bulletins and inspections are interfered with, but the fault will be with the Legislature, not with us.

"I can not make $500 do work that is costing from $10,000 to $12,000 to do.

"I have asked the Legislature to give me the money needed for the work, as shown by past reports, and not by my own estimates. It ought to do that, or abolish the work.

"I have instructed my clerks not to bring me warrants to sign for expenses, when I have no money to meet those expenses. I am not going to violate the law—that's all!

"I have written the Governor a letter setting forth the situation in the agricultural office, and have asked him to help me with suggestions or otherwise. I want to keep up the fine work the department is doing, but I can not make one dollar pay twenty dollars' expense!

"The matter is up to the General Assembly, and the farmers are watching events with anxious eyes! I hope the Legislature will come to my aid—it must, if I am able to move a peg in the future!"

"GETS-IT" for Corns, and Away They Go!

"GETS-IT," the New-Plan Corn Cure, Gets Any Corn Surely, Quickly.

You'll say, "It does beat all how quick 'GETS-IT' got rid of that corn. It's almost magic!" "GETS-IT" gets every corn, every time, as sure as the sun rises. It takes about two seconds to apply it. Corn pains stop, you forget the corn, the corn shrivels up, and it's gone! Ever try anything like that? You never did. There's no more fussing with plasters that press on the corn, no more salves that take off the surrounding flesh, no more bandages. No more knives, files or razors that make corns grow, and cause danger of blood poison. "GETS-IT" is equally harmless to healthy or irritated flesh. It "gets" every corn, wart, callous and bunion you've got.

"Never Could Do This Before. 'GETS-IT' Made Every Corn Vanish Like Magic."

GUARD YOUR HEALTH! NUXCARA!

Warm weather is dangerous. It will play havoc with your digestion. Your appetite will wane. You will not feel inclined to eat the proper, nourishing food. Irregular meals, imperfectly masticated, will ruin your digestion. Without good digestion life is worthless.

Take NUXCARA

3 Times a Day—

One-half hour before each meal. Then you can eat three nourishing meals each day without discomfort. Your appetite will respond to the improved condition of your digestive system. Your health will be assured.

Nuxcara is a guaranteed remedy for the treatment of the membranes of the stomach and intestines. It is not a digestive agent, but a certain and positive cure for indigestion and dyspepsia.

Nuxcara promotes the secretion of natural digestive fluids, restores and reduces the inflamed membranes. Proper assimilation is re-established. Nutrition is improved. Hence, Nuxcara increases vitality.

Hundreds of Atlantans testify as to its merits. The best physicians recommend it. An Atlanta druggist discovered it after years of scientific study.

Read this testimonial. Nuxcara will do the same for you, if you take it three times a day.

Prominent Citizen Indorses NUXCARA

Mr. J. W. Brooks, traveling representative of The Atlanta Georgian and Sunday American, says: "For two years I have carried in my grip a bottle of Nuxcara, and would not think of going out on the road without it. I consider it the most wonderful discovery in medicine. The number of people who suffer with indigestion and dyspepsia, the terrible distress they suffer, no one knows but those who have had experience with it. When one remedy after another fails, when digestive agents seem to aggravate it. In the face of all this, Nuxcara cures in every case—truly it is a wonderful remedy."

D. A. R. DEBATE ON SUFFRAGE TO BRING SURPRISE

Joseph Habersham Chapter Promises to Reveal Attitude of Atlantans on Subject.

MRS. PEEL KEEPS SECRET

Will Outline Views at Meeting, but Will Not Now Tell What They Are.

If in your own infallible mind you cherish private opinions concerning woman suffrage, opinions that are kept from posterity mainly because of lack of opportunity for their unfolding, then you should welcome the little affair that the members of Joseph Habersham Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, will sponsor at Taft Hall Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

Woman suffrage will be discussed both ways from the middle. Joseph Habersham Chapter is neither for nor against votes for women. It is merely to provide an opportunity for free and frank discussion, in which anyone present may take part and may talk for five minutes.

Mrs. Peel to Preside.

This free-for-all debate will be governed by Mrs. William Lawson Peel, who consented to preside over the meeting at the solicitation of her chapter mates. Her own remarks on the topic of debate will be momentous, it is announced, although all Atlanta society is wondering just what she will say about it.

Intense interest has been aroused among Atlanta women at the announcement of the public meeting. The interest further was heightened when Mrs. Peel said she had obtained the promises of a number of well-known men and women of Atlanta to enter the discussion.

A delightful air of secrecy is attached to the affair. Most of the plans are in the hands of Mrs. Peel, who has revealed to no one—not even the members of the chapter—their exact nature. She is determined that Atlanta shall enjoy a surprise, and holds her well-laid plans under cover, biding the time for the meeting.

Women of the city who avowedly are suffragists will speak from the floor, it is expected, but who will take up the gauntlet to champion the other side is not known. Mrs. Peel says there will be several serious-minded "antis" to speak.

No Intimation of Position.

"The meeting is not for the purpose of swerving opinion one way or the other," explained Mrs. Peel yesterday. "An opportunity merely is given for an expression of views by anyone attending. I have some well-defined ideas on the subject, framed after careful study, and will take the opportunity ot express them."

Mrs. Peel was very firm, although she smiled with her firmness, in her refusal to give even a hint of the trend which her talk will take, or to reveal any other details of the meeting.

"I will not take more than the five minutes that will be allotted everyone," was all she would vouchsafe.

The purpose of the meeting is in keeping with the function of the Daughters of the Revolution, she said.

"It will be patriotic, first of all," she announced. "Let women tell why they want the vote or why they do not want it. Let the men tell of their opinions on the subject. Let every person be fearless in the expression of his views. Let it not be said that men and women of Georgia are afraid to get together in debate of the question. The audience, which will be representative, we think, will be judges of the debate."

Among the members of the Joseph Habersham Chapter who have helped Mrs. Peel in the conception and planning of the meeting are Mrs. John A. Perdue, regent; Mrs. W. H. Neal, Mrs. Preston Arkwright, Mrs. George Howard, Mrs. George Dexter, Mrs. A. R. Colcord, Mrs. A. P. Coles, Mrs. Will Rives, Mrs. A. H. Benning, Mrs. Spencer Atkinson, Mrs. Belle Stallings, Mrs. W. S. Yeates, Mrs. John T. Moody, Miss Helen Moody, Mrs. Clement Ashford, Mrs. T. J. Ripley, Mrs. W. W. Martin, Mrs. W. L. Percy, Mrs. W. R. Hammond and Miss Prescott.

Jacksonville May Have Municipal Gas

Election Postponed to September, When Northern Property Owners Will Return to Florida.

JACKSONVILLE, July 19.—Some time in September the people of St. Petersburg, Fla., will vote upon the proposition of acquiring a municipal gas plant. For months this proposition has been debated and the commissioners have agreed to call an election.

Most of the property in the city is owned by people from Indiana, Illinois, Pennsylvania and Ohio. These tourists or winter visitors will not return before September.

Private capital is seeking to furnish the gas for the city, but the people have fought the proposition so hard that the commissioners do not want to grant the franchise without popular expression on the subject.

ATHENS MAYOR CLOSES CLUB OF ORDER OF OWLS

ATHENS, July 19.—The Athens club of the Order of Owls was ordered closed by the Mayor this week after being indicted and fined for keeping on hand and selling without license near-beer and other beverages. The club was raided last Sunday and a number of casks of beer taken in charge, and it was following this raid that the place was ordered closed.

2 ROME CLUBS INDICTED UNDER PROHIBITION LAW

ROME, July 19.—The Cosmopolitan and Central Clubs have been indicted by the Grand Jury and next week will be tried for violating the State prohibition law. The managers of the clubs are confident that they are obeying the law and say that they will be acquitted. Some of the best known citizens of Rome are members of the clubs.

Pony Contestants in Home Stretch

Fine Progress Made in Last Days

Winners of Race Will Be Announced in Few Days After Battle Closes July 31.

Great progress has been made by the contestants who are striving for The Georgian and American ponies, as the standings published to-day demonstrate. Nearly all the contestants who are crowding toward the front have more than 100,000 votes, but in the ten days remaining these figures, in all probability, will be doubled and trebled.

This is in spite of the fact that the coupons have been discontinued. Gains from now on will represent simply subscriptions obtained. The contestants agree unanimously that this is perfectly fair. A coupon-clipping contest is no contest at all, except as it represents the ability to build up a system of collecting the slips from friends in the neighborhood. A subscription-getting contest, on the other hand, tests the mettle of every contestant to the full, and the best will win.

Will Announce Winners Soon.

Besides, by discontinuing the coupons, it will be possible to announce the winners in the contest probably August 3, three days after the contest closes, on the night of July 31.

If coupons still were being voted, it would take two weeks or more for all of them to come in, and knowledge of the result would be delayed that long.

The bonus offer, awarding 20,000, 12,500 and 6,000 votes for clubs of $35, $25 and $15, respectively, closed Saturday night, and with a large number of clubs turned in. It was a laggard contestant, indeed, who did not appear yesterday with at least a $35 club, and some of the most active had two and three clubs.

Even Chance in Country.

Contestants in the country, it is supposed, did as well, but subscriptions arriving in Monday's mails will be credited on the club offer for these out-of-town boys and girls. This is to give them an even chance with their city cousins.

Probably another small bonus will be offered for the closing weeks of the contest. It will be nothing like those which have been given so far—not nearly so attractive, but still worth winning.

Within a few days the thirteen additional ponies needed to make up the complete lot of twenty-two will be on hand. They are being collected now from the leading breeders of this sort of fancy stock and will be brought to Atlanta before the contest closes.

Patrolmen Indicted For Poisoning a Dog

Detective Declares Rome Officers Responsible for Death of Fine Canine.

ROME, July 19.—Two Rome patrolmen, George Climer and Kit Carlson, have been indicted by the Grand Jury on a charge of poisoning a dog belonging to John Wood. Crampton Watters, who also lost a dog by poisoning, is assisting in the prosecution of the charges against the officers.

Several fine dogs in Rome were poisoned with strychnine, and when Watters' canine succumbed, he engaged a Pinkerton detective. He thinks he has the evidence that will result in the conviction of the two policemen for at least killing Wood's pet.

The indictment of the two officers has caused a stir in Rome. It follows closely on the heels of charges brought against Policeman Henry Selman for assaulting Jake Collins, whom Selman and two other officers arrested for drunkenness.

Aged Sisters Make White House Carpets

Old Women, Expert Dyers and Weavers, Are Preparing to Decorate Mrs. Wilson's Room.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., July 19.—Miss Caroline McHargue and Mrs. Martha Walker, of Elkin, aged 74 and 76, respectively, are engaged in preparing carpets, druggets and portieres to furnish the room of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson in the White House at Washington. They are experts in the blending of colors.

The two aged women are sisters. They live together and are expert dyers and weavers, using the old-time barks and herbs in the dyeing process, and the old-fashioned hand loom cards and spinning wheel.

3 Hurt in $15,000 Fire at Waycross

Guest of Burned Boarding House Loses $400 Ring and $130 in Cash.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Three persons were injured, one seriously, and property worth $15,000 was destroyed in an early morning fire on Elizabeth street to-day which destroyed the boarding house operated by W. A. Jones. The boarders escaped in their night clothes.

L. B. Boggs, City Building Inspector, injured a foot; A. C. Monroe, a fireman, was hit on the head by a falling timber, and F. D. Rexler was badly burned about the face and arms.

J. W. Cox, a boarder, lost a $400 diamond ring and $130 in cash. L. B Harriell, owner of the house, estimates his loss at $5,000, with partial insurance.

Police of Waycross For 'Slashed Skirt'

Men, Not Women, To Be Arrested if Latest Style Causes Too Much Excitement.

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Wearers of the new style "slashed skirt" have nothing to fear in Waycross. The police will not arrest wearers of the new skirt, but will see that men do not let their curiosity make them obnoxious.

The first time a slashed skirt was seen here the wearer paraded up and down one of the city's main business streets and as long as she was on the street there was an unusual number of men found "strolling"—none of the strollers getting very far from the skirt. It is said that a number of women here have purchased the slashed skirts and after trying them on at home, have sewn up most of the slash or worn the skirt with a petticoat.

LIARS' CONTEST ENDS IN TIE, ANOTHER IS TO BE HELD

WAYCROSS, July 19.—Because three well-known citizens tied for first place in the liars' convention just held in Waycross, it has been decided to hold a second convention to break the tie. The Moose Club is responsible for the inauguration of the novel convention and has decided to present an additional prize to the winner in the next.

COLUMBUS MILL SCHOOL HELD AS MODEL BY U. S.

How Georgia City Is Caring for Cotton Factory Children Told in Government Pamphlet.

How Columbus is caring for the education of the boys and girls of its cotton mills is the story embodied in a pamphlet published by the United States Department of Education, copies of which were circulated in Atlanta yesterday.

How the boys and girls of the mills themselves work against going to school, rendering doubly hard the problem before the public, is a pitiful note of the story.

They call their school in Columbus the "dinner toters' school," because even during their school days they must work, taking hot lunches to their parents, brothers, sisters, and others who work in the mills.

Must Take Parents' Lunch.

The pamphlet tells of this custom, revealing something of the life of the cotton mill child. It says:

"The long intermission in the middle of the day is necessary that the children may take the lunches to the mills. Many of the mills are some distance from the school—some more than a mile away. Most of the children, therefore, walk more than two miles during the noon hour. Besides, they are compelled to wait 20 or 30 minutes for the operatives to eat their dinners before taking the baskets back.

"Some children earn several dollars each week by carrying such baskets to mill operatives. The price usually paid for taking lunch to one person for a week is 25 cents, and children often take lunches to several persons."

Deals With Whole System

The booklet was prepared by Roland B. Daniel, and was published by the Department of Education as the description of an admirable system. It deals not only with the mill children, but with the boys and girls who are more fortunate, showing how the Columbus scheme of education is variable, being adapted to meet the demands that come with a mixed population so as to care alike for the two classes. P. P. Claxton, Federal Commissioner of Education, says in the foreword to the book:

"Columbus was one of the first of this country's cities to work out certain phases of this problem of adaptation."

The Columbus schools effect industrial training for all children, but a training varied according to the class from which the children come.

Toward the end, the school has been made a sort of social center. The school is in session the entire year around, and pupils are promoted quarterly, that the children will not drift away, as it is feared they would surely do in the case of a three months' vacation. Teachers do social work, visiting the sick, distributing certain charity, obtaining means of operation for the physically defective, arranging for social evenings, fostering organizations among the older people, and dealing in like activities.

Summing up the work of the school, the writer says:

"While this school has done good work and its benefits have been felt, we are sure the weakest point in it is not being able to hold the children long enough to receive its full benefits An enforced attendance law would aid very materially in this respect."

Miss Elliott Returns To Stage To Be Happy

Will Play Potiphar's Wife in Sir Herbert Tree's "Joseph and His Brethren."

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Maxine Elliott, yielding to Sir Herbert Tree's persuasion, will return to the stage September 2 in a great production of Louis N. Parker's play, "Joseph and His Brethren." She will play Potiphar's wife.

Miss Elliott gives as the chief reason for her reappearance that every one is happier when occupied. She is now living in her beautiful house at Bushey, just outside London.

County of Warner

Should Be Created

Manchester, the Logical County Seat—County Will Have 10,000 Population; $1,750,000 Taxable Values; Area Over 222 Square Miles.

The people situated in the southeastern portion of Meriwether, northern portion of Talbot and northeastern portion of Harris Counties will petition the 1913 session of the Legislature to create a new county to be named Warner, in honor of the late Chief Justice Hiram Warner, the area of which will be 222 square miles, while the area of the old counties after the proposed county of Warner is created will not be materially reduced, but will leave them among the larger counties of Middle Georgia, and Meriwether will then contain 421 square miles; Harris, 465 square miles, and Talbot, 329 square miles. The territory to compose Warner County is inaccessible to either of the present county sites by railroads and in transacting legal business the citizens are required to go this distance by private conveyance over mountainous roads, which in rainy seasons are almost impassable; while a very large portion of the population has no means of conveyance and are forced to a great expense in reaching the present county sites.

Taxable Values of New County.

The proposed county of Warner will have taxable values of one and three-quarter million dollars. This will leave Meriwether taxable values of about twice the amount of Warner County; while Harris and Talbot, from which counties small values will be taken, will not be materially reduced, but have considerably more wealth than Warner and no incorporated town is to be taken from either Talbot or Harris and but a few miles of railroad.

The population of Warner County will be upward of 10,500, of which more than 2,000 live in Manchester, the proposed county seat. At least 5,000 of those living within the country territory closely adjoining Manchester have to travel 14 to 20 miles to their present respective county sites. Warner County would exceed in population 32 counties in the State.

Roads and Bridges.

Warner County as proposed will take from the three affected counties its proportion of roads and bridges as compared to its area and wealth, while the roads and bridges in this territory have received but little attention, as the taxes collected by the old counties have been spent on other roads and bridges nearer the present county sites, and other sections of the counties, since this territory occupies the "remote corners," consequently has had little influence in securing road improvements.

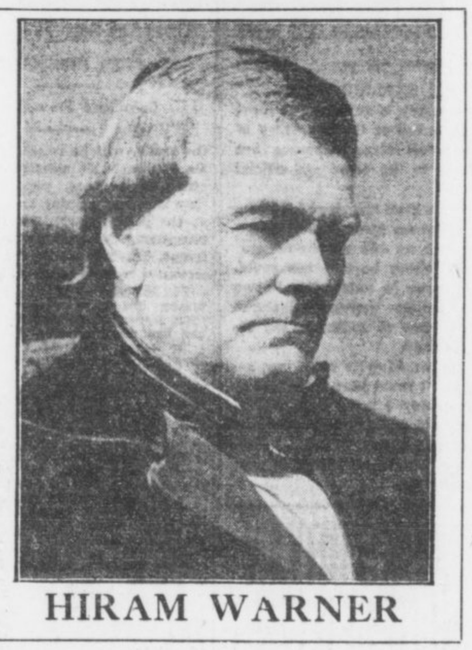
Warner County, as proposed will include Gill, Chalybeate, First, Raleigh, Bullochville and parts of the Third, Harris and lower Ninth Districts of Meriwether County; portions of Valley Plains District of Harris County and Flint Hill and parts of Pleasant Hill and Valley districts of Talbot County.

The distance from Manchester, the proposed county site of Warner County, to Greenville, the county site of Meriwether, over public roads is 18 miles; to Hamilton, the county site of Harris, 20 miles, and to Talbotton, the county site of Talbot, 20 miles. No citizen living in the proposed county would be required to travel farther than 12 miles to reach Manchester, the proposed county site.

Schedule of Trains.

No portion of Warner County at present is directly connected by rail with its respective county site. Those wishing to attend court by rail from Manchester and its vicinity must leave Manchester at 4 o'clock a. m., change at Durand and arrive in Greenville at 8 o'clock a. m., requiring a layover at Durand of about three hours. Returning, leave Greenville at 6 o'clock p. m., arriving at Manchester at 11:40 p. m., necessitating a layover at Durand of five hours, or about 20 hours to go a distance of 20 miles and return. This is the most convenient schedule.

The present counties are well provided with modern jails and courthouses.



HIRAM WARNER

Brief Sketch of Late Chief Justice

HIRAM WARNER

Hiram Warner, for whom Warner County is to be named, was born at Williamsburg, Hampshire County, Mass., on October 29th, 1802. He sailed for Savannah when 19 years of age, but was shipwrecked off Cape Hatteras, and reached the Georgia port weeks later. He settled first at Sparta as a teacher. He studied law and was admitted to the bar at Knoxville, Crawford County, in 1824. He married there and had one child, a daughter, the mother of Associate Justice Hiram Warner Hill of the Supreme Court of Georgia.

He was a member of the Legislature 1828-31. He was elected judge of the Coweta Circuit of the Superior Court of Georgia in 1833. At that time there was no Supreme Court, and the Superior Court judges gathered in annual convention to discuss their decisions and establish uniformity of practice.

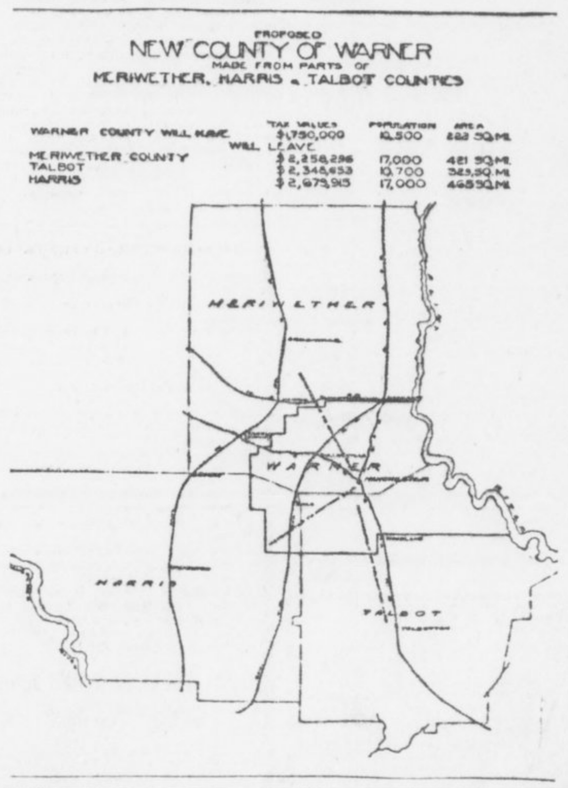
In 1845 the Supreme Court of Georgia was organized and with Joseph Henry Lumpkin and Eugenius A. Nesbit was elected to that high branch of the judiciary. He defeated Benjamin H. Hill for Congress in 1855; was renominated, but declined re-election. Nearly 60 years old when the war came, he was at home caring for his family, his only son-in-law being at the front. He was held by Wilson's raiders and actually hanged and left for dead because he did not tell where suspected gold was hidden.

Later he was appointed to the judgeship of Coweta Circuit by Governor Jenkins. He was named Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Georgia in 1867 to succeed Chief Justice Lumpkin, deceased.

His decisions from the bench and his printed decisions upon the Supreme Court bench are classics in Georgia's judicial history and his decisions are leading ones in ruling on similar cases today.

Judge Warner was reared a Presbyterian. He never joined a religious denomination. He lived and died, however, a believer in the Bible, the truths of Christianity and the creed of that denomination to which his family belonged. It was his habit to keep upon the table in his bedroom to the last day of his life two books; one was Blackstone, and the other was the Bible. This Bible his mother gave him when he left home for his long journey. To this same Bible he turned for comfort and support when, 58 years afterward, an old and broken man, he entered the valley of the shadow.

It is this man whose memory is sought to be revered in the creation of the county which is to bear his name—Warner.



Little Territory From Three of the State's Largest Counties Will Give County—New County Has Railroads—Sentiment Favors It.

No county has ever been created in which the sentiment was stronger for a new county than Warner. The movement has been spontaneous in all sections and our petitions contain more than 95 per cent of the white electors in Warner County. The people realize the great inconvenience with which they are now burdened and have joined unanimously in the movement.

Situation of Warner.

The proposed county of Warner will include portions of Pine and Oak mountains. In recent years most of this section was considered of little value on account of its inaccessibility and the rough character of the country. Little money has been spent by the counties in developing this territory, and the roads, most of them crossing the mountains and ridges, are bad, and have received but little attention.

In 1906 the A., B. & A. railroad was built, traversing this section with its Birmingham and Atlanta lines merging at Manchester; since which time Manchester has grown to be a town of about 2,000 people, as a result of which the territory adjoining Manchester has developed very rapidly; approximately $2,000,000 having been spent in improvements and business naturally drifted in this direction. The people residing in this territory buy all their supplies and sell their produce at Manchester, Bullochville, Raleigh, Chalybeate and Shiloh. Nothing calls them out of the proposed county except court duty, and they are deprived of the privilege accorded the majority of our people in the state of transacting their business and attending court in the same day.

Demand of Modern Times.

In this day of modern methods, when man's greatest asset is his time, when all business has become greatly intensified and concentration and conservation are occupying the attention of all progressive, thinking people, all men must realize that to make a success out of any public institution its interest must be well guarded. In this connection, large counties can not receive their just consideration. It is out of the question for the county commissioners in the three counties affected to give the counties' business the attention which it deserves. The area is too large, the business too vast, the demands too great and the distance too far for the county authorities to attend to the business properly.

General Statements of Interest

Manchester, the proposed county site, contains one large cotton mill, railroad shops and division offices of the A., B. & A. R. R., one bank, 33 brick store buildings and 16 wooden store buildings, all of which are occupied by various lines of general merchandise; two moving picture theaters, one newspaper and printing office, three hotels, five churches, modern school system, municipal light plant, two livery and sale stables, two large builders' supply houses, fireproof warehouse and gin.

Bullochville has several large supply houses, one bank, guano factory, also the Tuscawilla, a magnificent three-story brick hotel with modern equipment throughout, the best equipped hotel in the State in a town many times its size. Near Bullochville is located the famous Warm Springs resort, which is too well known to be described.

Just above Bullochville is the thriving town of Raleigh, which controls all business within its territory.

South of Bullochville on the Southern Railroad is Shiloh, now located in Harris County, one of the best farming supply towns in the State.

East of Manchester on the A., B. & A. is located Chalybeate Springs, a resort famous since ante-bellum days. The water from these springs has been known throughout the State since Georgia's early history.

Just east of Chalybeate is the Tatum Iron Company's mines, which are now being successfully developed.

All facts stated herein are not exaggerated, but can be substantiated with unlimited amount of evidence.

BRYAN OUGHT TO LIVE ON HIS PAY OR QUIT, SAY SENATORS

Explanation of Secretary of State More Amazing Than His Acts, Declares Bristow, Who Introduced Resolution to Investigate

Wilson's Premier Capitalizing His Position, Asserts Representative Willis—Much Work To Be Done in His Department.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The consensus of opinion among public and private persons in the National Capital is that if Secretary Bryan can not live on his salary of $12,000 a year he ought to resign and continue his lecture tours as a private individual.

Publicly, Mr. Bryan announced to the country that he could not live on a salary about which his fellow Cabinet members have not complained, and in a second statement, given out authoritatively, complained that criticism was groundless.

Evades Paper's Questions.

The American to-day endeavored to obtain from Mr. Bryan more in detail the reasons that actuated him to arrange to leave his post of duty at a time when very grave matters pertaining to our relations with foreign powers were pending. He declined to answer certain questions and refused to discuss the subject of his official pronunciamento.

Mr. Bryan was asked these questions by The American:

"If you feel your duty is to your private pocketbook rather than to the 'great common people' to whom you have preached simplicity for the last seventeen years, why do you not resign and devote your entire time to the lecture platform and literary pursuits?

"If you believe the people have called you to the great office you can fill so ably, do you not believe that it is your duty as an American and a patriot to sacrifice your personal interests for the interests of your country? The more so from the fact that you admit you have saved about $200,000, which is considerably more than a competence when invested shrewdly?

"You say that you entered one campaign from the Chautauqua platform. Is it not a fact that you look upon the present and future engagements as the best opportunity to get in direct touch with the people, who, you contend, will elect the next President by direct vote?"

Bryan Leaves to Lecture.

No answer was returned to the questions. Later in the day he left Washington to keep an engagement to lecture.

Senator Bristow, author of the resolution calling upon the President for information as to what salary ought to be paid to enable Mr. Bryan to stay in Washington and attend to his public duties, to-day came back with a rejoinder to Mr. Bryan's explanation of last night.

"Secretary Bryan's second statement has astounded me even more than his first one," said Mr. Bristow. "That the present Secretary of State should have such a sordid view of the Government service is amazing.

Needed at His Post.

"Besides, since he has been Secretary of State he has been in Washington only about one-half the time so far. If ever there was a time when the Secretary of State was needed on the job it is now, when so many important questions are up for consideration. To cause the people to pay money to hear the Secretary of State, the highest officer in the Cabinet, deliver addresses is all

Many Senators, while not permitting themselves to be quoted, agreed that Mr. Bryan had made a grave mistake. Mr. Townsend, of Michigan, holds that the Secretary is doing that which is denied to every subordinate employe of the Government and denounced it as reprehensible.

Wife To Be Tried as Slaying Accomplice

Mrs. Silvey Hawkins Accused of Complicity in Death Charged to Bartow Cantrell.

GAINESVILLE, July 19.—One of the most sensational murder trials in the history of this section will come up during the term of Hall Superior Court, which convenes Monday. Bartow Cantrell will be tried for the murder of Arthur Hawkins, near Belton, several weeks ago. James Cantrell and Mrs. Silvey Hawkins, wife of the dead man, will be tried as accomplices.

H. H. Dean will be attorney for Bartow Cantrell, R. E. A. Hamby will represent James Cantrell, while Mrs. Hawkins will be represented by B. P. L. Gaillard. Large crowds will attend.

Auto Accident Victim Seeks $50,000 Balm

Republic Iron and Steel Official Sues George C. Oliver, of Birmingham, for Damages.

BIRMINGHAM, July 19.—Charles T. Fairburn, manager of the Southern division of the Republic Iron and Steel Company, to-day filed suit in Circuit Court against George C. Oliver, asking $50,000 damages for personal injuries received May 1 when an automobile belonging to Oliver struck him on Highland avenue, near Twenty-second street.

Fairburn has been confined to his bed since the accident.

INCOME WHICH BRYAN FINDS IS NOT BIG ENOUGH

HIS INCOME.

As Secretary of State he receives per year	$12,000
On his acknowledged savings of $170,000 he receives at 6 per cent per year	10,200
From The Commoner he receives per year about	10,000
From lectures he receives, at $250 each, about	8,000
Total Income per year	$40,200

HIS EXPLANATION.

The salary is sufficient to meet the expenses of the Secretary of State when these expenses are confined to his home and official life.

When a man abandons his home and takes an office he leaves behind him at his old home expenses which he can not avoid. Every man in public life knows that I am not delivering lectures with a view of adding to my accumulations.

I am working to meet my expenses. I must keep intact whatever money I have accumulated for my old age and for my family. I can not expect to be a breadwinner when infirmities of age overtake me.

ATTACKS BRYAN FOR DESERTING POST IN CRISIS

Fall Denounces Secretary's Chautauqua Lectures While Mexican Situation Demands Attention.

vote was taken. "Is any Democrat ashamed of it?"

"Since when," asked Mr. Overman, "has the Senator from New Mexico become an exponent of the platform?"

"Since the American people were induced by a distinguishd present member of the cabinet to let him lead them out of the wilderness and since he has seen fit to leave his post of duty while these grave questions are pending and go out on the lecture platform to entertain chautauqua audiences," was Mr. Fall's retort.

As soon as Mr. Fall started to refer to Bryan in answering the question, Mr. Overman endeavored to object, but Mr. Fall replied in his own way.

No action was taken on the resolution.

Poll of Committee.

A careful poll of the members of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate shows that the body is overwhelmingly in favor of the maintenance of the Monroe Doctrine.

On that proposition they stand as follows:

For its maintenance:

Democrats—Bacon, of Georgia; Stone, of Missouri; Shively, of Indiana; Clark, of Arkansas; Hitchcock, of Nebraska; O'Gorman, of New York; Swanson, of Virginia; Pomerene, of Ohio; Smith, of Arizona. Republicans—Lodge, of Massachusetts; Smith, of Michigan; Root, of New York; McCumber, of North Dakota; Sutherland, of Utah; Burton, of Ohio.

Willing to see its abandonment, as no longer suitable to conditions: Williams, of Mississippi, Democrat, and Borah, of Idaho, Republican.

Bryan Takes Fresh Lecture Tour Start.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Just before leaving this evening for his lecture at Winona, Ind., Secretary Bryan denied that the United States had entered into a compact with Great Britain regarding Japan and Mexico.

The Secretary also denied the reported theft of the State Department secret code in Mexico City.

A. P. A. HOLDS SECRET MEETING AT CORDELE

CORDELE, July 19.—A meeting of the members of the American Protective Association of Cordele was held last night, at which time it is thought that permanent organization was effected. However, as the political body held the meeting behind closed doors, none of the details acted upon by the gathering became definitely known outside of the members.

EXPRESS AGENT AND CASH MISSING FROM WARWICK

CORDELE, July 19.—S. J. Smith, an employee of the Southern Express Company, acting as temporary agent at Warwick, between Cordele and Albany, on the Georgia Southwestern and Gulf Railway, during a vacation of the regular agent, disappeared last night, and, it is said, took all the funds on hand. It is reported that he came to Cordele, but officers here failed to locate him.

HAWTHORNE TO USE PRISON LIFE IN FUTURE WORK

Novelist Plans to Resume Literary Career as Soon as He Is Free From Penitentiary.

the mails, will be released on parole. Dr. Morton is an elderly man of dignified appearance, popular, just as Hawthorne is popular, among the men at the penitentiary. He is not contemplating the walking trip with his friend, but will choose the more conservative method of travel by railroad.

But Hawthorne is eager. Months of prison life have rather heightened than lessened his activity. Walking has become a passion with him.

"It keeps me fresh and rational," Hawthorne has said, according to one or two of his mates at the penitentiary, "and opens my mind to the most effective thought of my life."

Will Seek Inspiration.

By the same authority it is announced that the novelist will seek inspiration as well as health in the walk to New York. He will make of the trip, his prisoner-friends say, a sort of psychological training season, in which he will try to adapt himself to the free world, and to work out the scheme of existence that will be his after his most momentous adventure in the United States penitentiary at Atlanta.

Hawthorne, since his prison term began, has sunk his identity in the atmosphere of the prison. His reflections have been based on his life within the walls. His mental efforts have been directed toward helping to cheer and to instruct the men about him, out of his own great store of optimism and knowledge. His whole life has been pitched in a new world. Now he must soon go back to the old.

Hawthorne himself is aware of all this, and has talked of the situation with the men whom he has come to know and to understand so well. He has reasoned out that the best means of returning to the old life will be a solitary journey, in the course of which he can work out his relations to that life and can plan the work that he is to do.

The World Can Expect Much.

Already he has planned a great deal, and confided to some of the men about him. And from what they hint, the world can expect much from Hawthorne's pen, in spite of the fact that he is nearing his threescore years and ten. For Hawthorne, it might be said again, is an energetic, two-fisted person, even with his white hair and his years.

"To walk out alone under the stars and through the mountains, to be able to spend leisurely days in this wonderful Southern country, to be able to renew my acquaintances with men in their natural environments, to feel that I have health and strength still—that is why I want to walk the thousand miles back to the scenes of my former life," Hawthorne is quoted by his friends as saying.

He looks upon the long walk, also, through boyish eyes, seeing in it the opportunity for a great outing such as has been denied him in the years past, when he was a very busy man of affairs.

Has Lived in the Open.

The novelist is equal to the task. In the course of his career as a writer and newspaper man he has been outdoors a great deal. He followed the troops in the Cuban campaign of 1898 when, as war correspondent, he achieved his greatest prominence as a writer of actual events.

It will be necessary for Hawthorne to obtain permission from the Attorney General to make the walk. By Federal regulation, the released prisoner must return to his home, or to his nearest friend or relative, within a certain time, two or three days in the case of the trip from Atlanta to New York. His transportation is paid by the authorities. The walk, naturally, will consume more time than the allotted three days, and a departure from rule will be entailed. Hence the necessity of permission.

Friends of the writer think that he will make formal application for permission within a week or two.

Perfect roads, established by automobile tourists, will relieve the walker from hardships.

An even road stretches from Atlanta to New York, as smooth in most places as a city parkway. Perhaps Hawthorne will not follow the public route, but it is there for his selection, the easiest and most pleasant way. At any rate, he must follow it approximately, for the mountains which he must traverse are almost impassable elsewhere.

It's a Thousand-Mile Trip.

The trip to New York over the national highway covers 1,080.4 miles. Hawthorne most likely will leave Atlanta by a road leading northeastward out of Stone Mountain, and to Lawrenceville. Thence he will continue in a gently curving path to Anderson, S. C., through Greenville and Spartanburg. Striking the North Carolina line, his road runs directly eastward to Charlotte, then approximately northward to Salisbury, and through either Winston-Salem or Greensboro. Continuing northward, he probably will go to Roanoke, Va., to Staunton, Winchester and to Hagerstown, in Maryland.

Crossing into Pennsylvania, the New York route touches at Waynesboro and Gettysburg, thence eastward to Lancaster and to Philadelphia. A little farther, the road crosses the Delaware almost at the spot where a historic crossing was made in 1778, into Trenton. From Trenton to Perth Amboy, across Staten Island and into New York the road lies on its final lap.

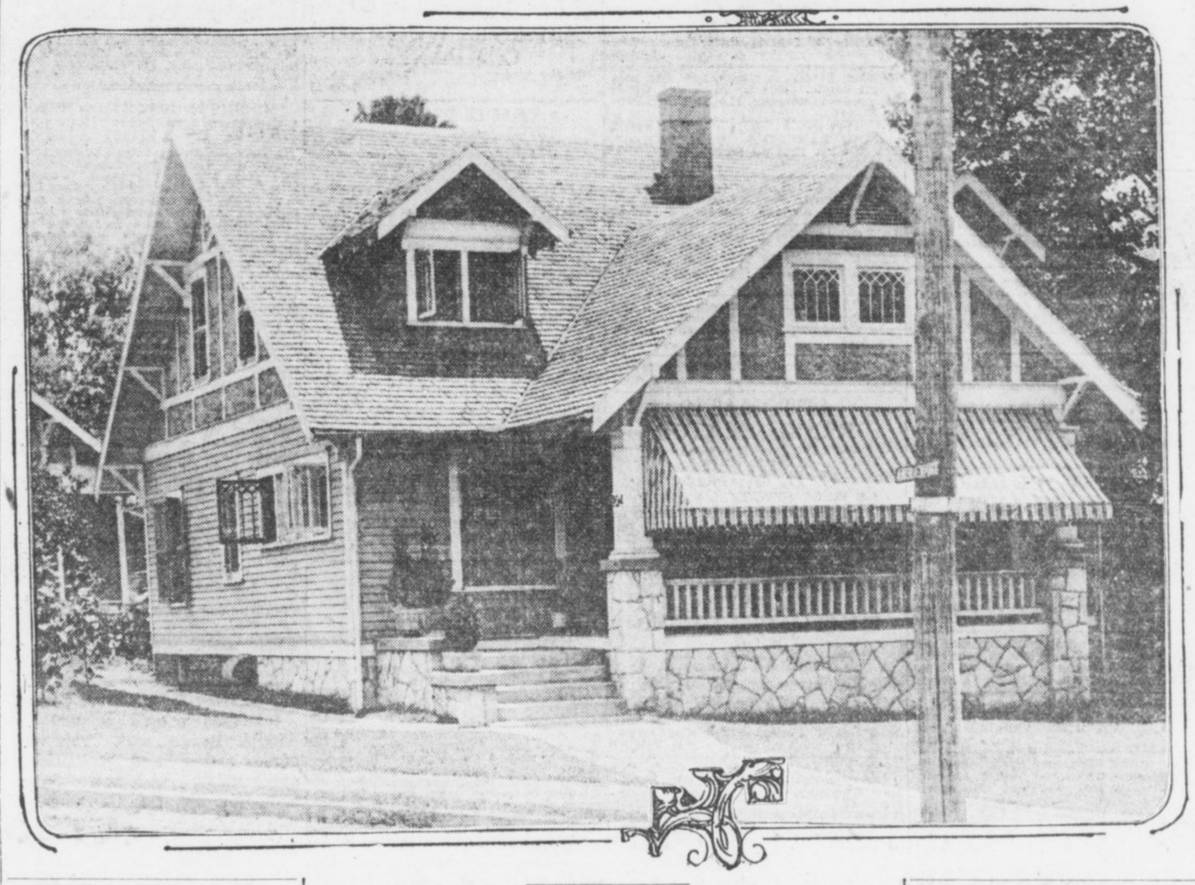
Seek Building to Display Atlanta-Made Goods

Counter Propositions Puzzle Committee on Site

HERE IS BUILDING INSPECTOR HAYS' IDEAL BUNGALOW

"In building your bungalow," advises Building Inspector Ed R. Hays to the man of moderate means, "don't put more than $4,000 in it. For that amount you can erect a one-and-a-half-story affair that will meet every ordinary need." Mr. Hays has picked the bungalow shown below as his ideal. Features of it are a stone foundation and exterior sides of half plaster.



GREAT INTEREST IN REALTY MEET

Atlanta May Get 1916 Convention With 1,500 Delegates—Committee Will Work for It.

Intense local interest attaches to the sixth annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges because of the possibility of securing the 1916 convention, with its 1,500 delegates, for Atlanta.

Local land dealers are confident they can bring the convention to Atlanta and are now perfecting a plan for pushing this project. Pittsburg is expected to land the 1914 convention, Los Angeles the 1915, and Atlanta the 1916.

Says Atlanta Will Win.

"These things are usually cooked up ahead of time," declared Charles P. Glover, ex-president of the Atlanta Real Estate Board. "No action will be taken on the 1916 convention until the year before, but we expect to start work on it early, and when we go after it in earnest we are going to get it."

The convention this year will be held July 28, 29 and 30, and the Winnipeg hosts have prepared an elaborate program. Since the journey is long, the Atlanta delegation will start Thursday and Friday prior to the opening on Monday.

Officers of the Association.

Edward S. Judd, of Chicago, is president of the national association. Vice presidents are C. L. Simpson, Kansas City; R. Bruce Douglas, Milwaukee; N. J. Upham, Duluth; H. P. Haas, Pittsburg; R. D. Waugh, Winnipeg; E. B. LeMaster, Memphis; Telfair Stockton, Jacksonville; William T. Atwater, Buffalo; W. E. G. Saunders, Fresno, and J. S. Ray, Louisville.

Phillip Moessinger, of Cincinnati, is secretary; Edward S. Loveley, of Detroit, is treasurer, and Thomas S. Ingersoll, of Minneapolis, is executive secretary.

The convention is to be held in the Industrial Bureau at Winnipeg. It will also be the headquarters for delegates. The Industrial Bureau Building is credited with being one of the finest convention halls in the continent.

Winnipeg has shown a wonderful growth during the past few years, and is now regarded as the Chicago of Canada.

Fight Over an Alley Ties Up Valuable Lot

NEW YORK, July 19.—Property worth at the market value from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000, and which is bringing in but a pittance of what it might produce, is effectually tied up by a dispute over a 10-foot alley. Executors of the late Richard T. Wilson are protesting the use of the alley by the owners of No. 507 Fifth avenue, and the latter claim that they have a right to use it under an old agreement.

The case has been fought out in several courts and has been decided first in favor of one side and then in favor of the other.

J. R. Smith Would Erect $100,000 Structure at Bartow and Walton Streets—Other Interesting Suggestions Made.

Efforts of the local Merchants and Manufacturers' Association to procure a suitable location for a building to exhibit Atlanta-made wares have found a ready response among Atlanta real estate men.

Probably a dozen attractive propositions have been made the committee, of which Brooks Morgan is chairman, to such an extent that the committee is having a hard time to decide which proposition to accept.

There is a demand that something be done as soon as possible, however, and a decision is expected at any time. Then the local contractors will put in their bids and the building will soon be suited to the needs of the exhibitors.

Different Arguments Prevail.

Shall the building be entirely new, or shall it be a remodeled structure?

This question has been put to the committee and it is a hard one to answer. The merchants and manufacturers want an adequate building and they won't spare pains or expense to get it. Real estate men are urging them on both sides. J. R. Smith and associates, for instance, have put forward the suggestion that a new building is an addition to the Atlanta sky-line and that it should be erected if possible. In fact, they have had rough plans drawn for a handsome six-story structure at the northwest corner of Walton and Bartow streets, to cost $100,000.

On the other hand, the Inman Building, it has been stated on good authority, is at the disposal of the committee at $200,000. This is on the east side of South Broad street and south of and adjoining the Hillyer Building, which is occupied by the American National Bank. The Inman Building, it is pointed out, is a substantial structure of sufficient floor space to meet the demands of the merchants and manufacturers. All it needs is renovation, declare those interested in the proposition to offer the Inman Building.

The former home of the Franklin Printing and Publishing Company on the east side of Ivy street, between Edgewood avenue and Houston street, has also been offered the committee. This is owned by Hugh Richardson.

Details of Smith Plan.

J. R. Smith presented his plan to the committee Friday and he declares there was much enthusiasm over it. J. R. McEachron and A. F. N. Everett, associate architects, have prepared a water-color sketch showing how this building will look. The structure will be of reinforced concrete on a foundation laid for six additional stories.

There will be two passenger elevators and complete freight elevator service, the freight elevators being capable of carrying auto trucks to the top stories from the Bartow street side. The main entrance will be on Walton street, where the frontage will be 100 feet.

Other features are steel bars and a prismatic glass effect that will carry abundant light to all parts of the building. Each floor will contain spacious stalls for the display of Atlanta-made goods.

REAL ESTATE GOSSIP

Real estate men are watching with a good deal of interest the outcome of the Crawford will case, inasmuch as the possession of a considerable tract of land on the north side of West Fourteenth street, west of West Peachtree street, is involved. This property has been tied up to such an extent that substantial improvements on it have been impossible. Only a few small houses now help to pay interest and taxes.

On all sides there is activity. The Richards property has been opened up to the southwest, and Hugh Richardson and others are busy on tracts more directly westward. The Peters and Wylie tracts to the south have already been subdivided.

One benefit to be derived from a settlement of the question of ownership is a further development of West Peachtree at the Fourteenth street "dip." Attractive residences have been built on all sides of the Crawford tract and developers are waiting for the latter to be opened up to further extend their operations.

* * *

An interesting story has been going the rounds in real estate circles of a reported deal that for "frenzied financing" is probably without an equal. It would be even more interesting if it were true, but the principals deny it absolutely. Here is the story, anyway:

Mr. A. owns a valuable semi-central corner in the postoffice district and apartment house property a block from Peachtree, on which there is a $50,000 loan. Mr. B. has a central Peachtree corner which he has leased to Mr. A. for 99 years, and which is worth $200,000.

Enter Mr. C., as agent, who gets Mr. B. to agree to cancel the 99-year lease and give Mr. A. a warranty deed in exchange for the two parcels mentioned above. Mr. C. in the meantime has signed up Mr. A. on a proposition to deliver to Mr. B. at $100,000.

Mr. C. has accordingly made $100,000 by the use of his fertile imagination. Mr. B. says he's satisfied and Mr. A. declares that Mr. C.'s cleverness is such that he is entitled to anything he can get.

* * *

That people all over the country, and in many foreign countries, are dealing in Atlanta land frequently is emphasized in the operations of the real estate men. A woman who lives most of the time in Italy has property listed regularly with an Atlanta agency, and it is not an uncommon occurrence for papers to be sent abroad for people to sign before trades can be effected.

The other day a man in China wrote to his local agent, "Sell my Capitol avenue home for $3,500 cash. It has eleven rooms, arranged for two families."

NEW SUBWAY WORK.

Subway contracts to the amount of $81,000,000, covering about 100 miles of single track, or 27 miles of subway, are now under construction in New York.

PRYOR REGRADE PROFILES READY

Special Committee Will Consider Them at Meeting Thursday Night--Confidence in Project.

Profiles of South Pryor street between Georgia and Ridge avenues have been made by Chief of Construction R. M. Clayton and will be presented for the consideration of property owners Thursday night. These property owners are a committee of the South Side Improvement Club, which has had the matter in charge.

The meeting will be held at McCord Brothers', corner of Pryor street and Georgia avenue. The width of the street will be definitely decided, as well as the extent of the grading, and later a meeting of the entire membership of the club will be called at the Pryor Street School.

Project Before Council.

The matter will then be taken before the City Council and the County Commissioners in an effort to have the city furnish the smooth paving material and the county do the work, the property owners agreeing to give the necessary land and to waive damages. Acceptance of the proposition is expected and work can start early next year.

The plan is to trim off a few feet of ground at Bass street and to fill a few feet at Dodd avenue, and to widen the street four feet. Nearly all the property owners have been signed up to give two feet each.

Successful Meeting Held.

An enthusiastic meeting of the special committee was held Thursday night. Among those present were the following:

C. E. Register, Press Huddleston, J. L. McCord, W. T. Nelson, E. W. Camp, T. F. Brinkley, H. E. DeLaney, J. T. Topham, J. M. Davis, Lee Dreyfus, F. H. Butler, G. D. Kitchens, R. B. Deavors, W. W. Dudley, L. B. Sullivan, W. A. Gresham, H. Cronheim, J. L. Merrill, J. J. L. Poole and Councilman C. D. Knight.

Ten Lots Cost $325; Now Worth $200,000

NEW YORK, July 19.—Real estate dealers have had their attention called recently to one of the most unique pieces of property for miles around. Just back of Andrew Carnegie's magnificent palace on Fifth avenue there is a little strip of ground 11 feet wide, running 100 feet along Madison avenue. The owner has put ten stores on this strip of ground, so that each store is 10 feet wide and 11 feet deep.

From this little strip of land 11 feet wide and 100 feet long, less than half of a city lot, the owner expects to make $5,000 rental. This little strip is all that is left of some land bought by the grandfather of the young woman who owns the strip.

He bought ten lots in the neighborhood for a small farm. He paid $325 for the ten lots. And half of one of the lots is now worth $100,000.

ON account of my health will sell for the bargain price of $4,250 my flour and lumber mills located at Dallas, Ga. This plant cost over $12,000 to build and is one of the best located and most complete and self-supporting plants in the South; equipped with four-stand Richmond City flouring system, two sets corn burrs, all in first-class condition, with plenty of warehouse room and as a custom mill it is almost without opposition. The planing mill is operated from same boilers, with separate engine. The planer house is 39x80 feet, two stories high, good room for cabinet work shop. On account of rapid decline in health I will sell this plant for $4,500, on easy terms; it is nicely located on Southern Railway sidetrack. Trestle for dumping coal at boiler. Shavings carried to boiler by exhaust fan. Address A. M. McMichem, Jr., Owner, Dallas, Ga. 7-17-5

REMOVAL IS ASKED FOR ENCROACHMENT

NEW YORK, July 19.—More encroachments are to be removed on One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street. The Board of Estimate passed a resolution authorizing the removal of encroachments in One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street from Eighth avenue to Manhattan street, and on Manhattan street from West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street to the Hudson River. These streets form a continuous thoroughfare 100 feet in width, connecting with the Fort Lee Ferry and accommodating a large pedestrian traffic.

LOTS OF LOTS—ACREAGE—FACTORY SITES.

REMEMBER, if you want lots, either for building purposes or investment, we have them where sewer, sidewalks and water have been laid, and the property is reached by street car. These lots average in price from $450 up and are sold on easy terms.

And don't overlook the fact that if you want ACREAGE, this office is in position to furnish it. We have as choice as there is to offer, either for subdivision or factory site purposes.

SPLENDID INVESTMENTS.

WEST MITCHELL ST., close in, where improvements are now being made, lot 55x117 at $120 per front foot. Adjoining property can not be bought for less than $200 per front foot. There is going to be a handsome profit in this for someone when the Mitchell street grading is completed.

MARIETTA ST., within 800 feet of the junction of Walton and Marietta, lot 58x135, at the remarkably low price of $310 per front foot. Here is a good thing for some wise investor.

EDGEWOOD AVE., close in, 60-foot frontage, at $350 per front foot. This is a valuable piece to own. There is money in it.

HOMES.

HOME, SWEET HOME! Don't rent—don't move about like an Arab but BUY YOURSELF A HOME, and then beautify it with shrubbery and flowers—make it the dearest spot on earth to yourself and family. It will increase your self-respect and your friends and neighbors will have a better opinion of you. We quote a few of the homes we have:

One-story, 6-room bungalow, with gas, water, electric lights, on border of Druid Hills, $3,750, on payments of $500 cash, balance $25 per month.

One-story, 6-room bungalow, all conveniences, St. Charles avenue, near Druid Hills, $5,750; easy terms.

Two-story, 7-room home, with all conveniences, near Druid Hills, all improvements. Price, $7,250. Terms.

West Fifth street, 2-story, 9-room, furnace heated residence, with all conveniences and garage; 75x190. Choice location and splendid bargain. Price, $7,800. Terms.

Two-story, 8-room brick veneered house, furnace heated, all conveniences, on North Side. Price, $8,750. This is an ideal home place and in a splendid locality.

Two-story, 9-room home, Fourteenth street, near Peachtree, $12,000.

Two-story, 9 rooms and two baths; hardwood finish throughout; on the North Side. Price, $14,000. Easy terms. This is a magnificent home place.

Hotel at $40,000 In Flagler Group

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., July 19.—A large building permit has been issued from the offices of Deputy Building Commissioner W. P. Darwin to H. R. Flinn for the erection of a four-story brick building at the northeast corner of Monroe and Davis streets.

The valuation of the structure was placed at $40,000. This new building will be used as the second section or "unit" in the Flagler group of hotels which eventually will accommodate more than 1,000 guests.

LAND DEAL AT SENOIA INVOLVES 1,550 ACRES

SENOIA, GA., July 19.—One of the largest land deals made here in a long time was consummated when Carl C. McKnight bought 1,550 acres of fertile farm land from W. H. Johnson. The land is located about eight miles out. The price paid was about $20 per acre.

It is understood Mr. McKnight will subdivide this land and sell to small farmers.

HOW WE HAVE GROWN.

In 1790 the population of the country was 3,925,625; in 1910, 94,972,266, the growth being in the last ten years about 16,000,000. The area in 1790, in square miles, was 417,170; in 1910, over 3,000,000. Number of miles of railroads in 1790, none; in 1910, 250,000. Number of postoffices in 1790, 75; in 1910, about 60,000. The population of New York City in the year 1790 was 49,401; in 1910 it was 4,766,833. Thus it will be seen that New York City alone in 1910 had a much larger population than the entire country had in the year 1790.

$2,000,000 BUILDING CONTRACT.

NEW YORK, July 19.—A contract representing about $2,000,000 has been awarded to the George A. Fuller Company to erect the new sixteen-story printing and manufacturing building at Nos. 87 and 93 White street, Nos. 42 and 46 Franklin street, and Nos. 76 and 80 Lafayette street, for the Wynkoop-Hallenbeck-Crawford Company, of No. 497 Pearl street. COMMISSION BUSY ON SUBWAY WORK

August 1 Set as Date for Hearing on Form of Contract—Times Square to Battery.

NEW YORK, July 19.—August 1 is the date of the hearing of the Public Service Commission on the form of contract for the construction of the Seventh avenue subway from Times Square to the Battery.

This is the West Side line of New York's vast underground rapid transit project. It is to be hitched up to the dual system in the form of the letter H by a connection across Forty-second street with the lines running north and south on the East and West Sides.

The route is from Times Square down Seventh avenue past the Pennsylvania Railroad station, which will thus be connected with the principal local traffic arteries to about Eleventh street, thence under the proposed Seventh avenue extension under Varick street to Hudson street, West Broadway and the Battery. The Interborough will operate the Seventh avenue branch.

Another public hearing is to be held on the form of contract for the Utrecht avenue elevated line in Brooklyn to be operated by the B. R. T.

After the public hearings on these forms of contract are held the next step will be to place the contracts in permanent form, have them adopted by the commission and approved by the corporation counsel, and then as soon as the plans are ready to advertise for bids for construction.

The commission has awarded the contract for the construction of section 4 of the Broadway, Manhattan subway to the Dock Contractor Company of Hoboken. The company's bid was $2,578,078. The next lowest bidder was the Oscar Daniels Company, with $2,651,054.

The Broadway subway is now under construction as far north as Houston street. Section 4 extends from that point northerly under Broadway and Union Square to about 390 feet north of the southerly line of Fourteenth street.

How Big Buildings Come and Go in Monster Trading Operations. $600,000 Involved.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Additional details of the large midtown loft deal in Twenty-seventh Street were announced by the brokers in the transaction, the Charles F. Noyes Company. An element of trade was involved, bringing the aggregate values of the properties up to about $600,000.

The buying company, the Colonial Real Estate Association, gave in part payment for the big eight-story loft at 337 to 347 West Twenty-seventh Street, acquired from the St. John's Park Realty Company, the five-story building at 83 and 85 White Street, covering a lot 50 by 100, between Broadway and Lafayette Street.

The building is near the Civic Center and county courthouse zone and adjoins the 20,000 square foot plot about to be improved by H. C. Hallenbeck and the Hungerford Brass and Copper Company with a sixteen-story building at a cost of $2,000,000.

The St. John's Park Realty Company also took in part payment 378-380 West Broadway, a five-story building, on a lot 50 by 70, leased to Wellang & Co. for a long term of years.

THE EGGS of different varieties of fowls will be found classified under their respective breeds in the future, instead of under the classification of "Eggs."

Crossing Corn Strains Increases Yield From 30 to 150 Per Cent, Declare Experts

Remarkable Results Have Been Attained by Farmers Who Have Worked Long and Patiently on Hybridizing Grain. No More Acreage or Expense Entailed in New Scientific Method.

By CHARLES A. WHITTLE.

Georgia State College of Agriculture.

Think of from 30 to 150 per cent increase in yield as a result of crossing strains of corn! Is it not very much worth while for farmers to take notice? If even less than 30 per cent gain were made as a result, what an enormous gain to the farmer, and that, too, without more work, more fertilizer or greater acreage planted!

Since the year 1876 Professor W. J. Beal, of the Michigan Agricultural College, has been demonstrating the fact that the first generation of hybrids has increased yields of corn. More recently other demonstrators have shown, beyond peradventure, that from 30 to 150 per cent can be obtained from planting hybrids, or one-year crosses, over planting pure strains alone.

So high has been piled the testimony of facts that no one has a right to doubt. It remains only for the farmer to apply. This he can do with very little trouble. When the farmer does make use of this little trick which the scientist has taught him, his wealth in corn, his cost of fattening hogs or beef, will stand at a much more favorable figure than at present.

Vigor Only Temporary.

While working long and painstakingly on hybridizing or crossing corn, the scientists discovered important limitations and facts which it is well for the farmer to know if he is to make a success of his seed plats. The first of these is that while crossing adds vigor it is only temporary. The greatest increase in vigor is in the first generation crosses. While a greater yield can be obtained by planting the seed of the crosses or hybrids for two or three years than can be obtained from planting a single pure strain, yet the wiser policy would be to return to original strains after planting one crop of hybrid seeds. This means that for the first year the two strains can be planted together in the same row. This will increase the yield the first year, but when the seed from the cross or hybrid crop is planted, the subsequent crop will be still larger in yield and production of fodder.

Returning to the original strain after the hybrid seed has been used one year, of course can be easily done, if the farmer will maintain seed plats where the pure strains are kept separate from other strains.

Same Variety Should Be Used.

The second important fact about making crosses is that only unrelated strains of the same variety should be used and not two distinct varieties. Unrelated strains of the same kind of corn can be obtained from different parts of the State or from different States for crossing purposes. What one needs to be certain of, however, is that the seed he is obtaining from elsewhere has been kept pure. Reliable seed producers who know how to maintain a pure strain, of course, are to be looked to rather than to the indiscriminate grower for the strains in making a cross.

These two important facts are as essential to success as the main discovery of the effect of crossing. To keep planting the seed of a hybrid corn because it produced a large yield at one time, in the light of investigation, would prove foolish. This is too often a common practice of farmers.

Keep the pure strains strong and vigorous by seed selection and the hybrid fields will take care of themselves as to yields and stover. Any farmer can perfect his seed corn and add greatly to its yielding power by well-known methods of seed selection. The germination test is foremost as a means for determining the vigor and potential yielding power of the grains taken from a given ear of corn. Plant ten grains of corn from an ear in a sand box where moisture and proper temperature are maintained. In a few days the green sprouts will have appeared. Examine and see how many of the ten grains germinated.

If eight or nine did, the ear can be said to have strong germinating power, and that it can produce a thrifty, good yielding plant. The remainder of the ear can then be planted in the seed bed. If the seed plat is kept away from other plats that are growing different strains or varieties, then a strong, pure strain of corn is assured. To add to the strength of the pure strain, it is the custom of the seed breeder to detassle every other plant. This leaves the stalk that has been detasseled to be fertilized by another plant, rather than by itself.

Aids Production Power.

This has been shown to add to the producing power of the plant. The corn from the detassled stalks, of course, is the grain for planting in the seed plats next year. The seed from the stalks not detasseled and all grain from the tasseled stalks which is not required for maintaining the seed plat, can be planted in the general field after being mixed with similar corn taken from another plat. Thus mixed a hybrid plant is produced of the greatest possible yielding power.

Thus is seen that it is no difficult matter to breed up strains of corn and to make hybrid crosses for largest field yields. Any farmer can do it. In fact, no other one can do it so well for a given farm as the farmer himself. When he grows his own seed he knows whether or not proper care has been taken to keep the strains pure and strong. He has also made use of strains of corn that have become adjusted to the climate, soil and conditions in general of the farm. In other words, he is taking fewest chances when he does all this work himself. And it is not a large amount of work. It requires very little time. The interest it will arouse as well as the yields it will increase will make of it a fascinating work for any intelligent farmer.

MORGAN LOAN TO HUERTA SLAP AT PUBLIC ALREADY ANGRY, FORBES REMARKS

Mellen's Downfall Should Serve as a Warning to Bankers of the High-Handed Sort That Such Disregard of Nation's Temper Is Dangerous.

By B. C. FORBES.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Nothing has happened to discourage the optimistic attitude assumed toward securities a few weeks ago in these articles. The probabilities weigh strongly in favor of better prices for both stocks and bonds without the preliminary upheaval that would have been inevitable had the inflation of bank credits gone on unchecked. Only some sensational development not now in sight can plunge the country into financial demoralization. Of course, elements of danger never are wanting. Without a measure of uncertainty there would be little trading in stocks.

The Mexican scandal grows. Despite the grave consequences that would ensue, the United States government may be compelled, however reluctantly, to intervene.

The patience of European nations having large interests at stake is showing signs of exhaustion. Murder, destruction and disorder will not be permitted.

The Monroe Doctrine is about to be put to the test. Will the Wilson administration let it go by the board. Will it accept Bryan's airy, impossible attitude of indifference and inaction? Will Chautauqua lectures be allowed to relegate matters of national and international independence, not to the rear, but to the hands of European governments?

Europe May Intervene.

The problem threatens to become, not "Shall we intervene?" but "Who shall intervene, the United States or the European powers?"

The financial and commercial conditions in Mexico are chaotic. The whole impossible situation might have been brought to a head before now had not certain bankers supplied the Huerta cabal with funds.

J. P. Morgan & Co. headed a syndicate which sent $8,000,000 to Huerta only two or three weeks ago, an act frowned upon, Washington dispatches announce, by our Government. To finance warfare in a neighboring country not recognized by the United States is interpreted as a most questionable piece of banking business.

Should the United States be obliged to act, will the Morgan interests continue to finance Huerta?

American bankers of a certain class have been notoriously deaf to expressed public opinion in the past. But can they continue to flout the public; can they persist in policies condemned unreservedly by the voters of the land?

Can they with impunity override the spirit, if not the letter, of the law?

No, they can not. And the sooner they fall into line with the public's ideas the better.

Mellen's Fate Significant.

The downfall of President Mellen, for ten years the Morgan servant at the head of the New Haven Railroad, is rich in significance. It marks the doom of high-handed capitalistic plutocracy. Are the Morgan people too blind to recognize this? Can't they catch a glimmer of light? Don't they begin to realize where they and minor members of the "money power" stand?

The New Haven sought to ride roughshod over law and public sentiment in its mad, bankrupting race toward monopoly. Money—hundreds of millions—was taken from the public's pockets, chiefly because of Morgan's connection with the road, and poured lavishly and recklessly into—and out of—the company's treasury. But even unlimited millions could not permanently defy the people.

Mellen's sacrifice is important only in that it signifies the death knell of arrogant lawless action by high finance, bent upon tactics and schemes repugnant to the people.

Not even the Morgan or the Rockefeller cliques, the most aggressive of all, are too high to be brought low, once the electorate becomes aroused.

Let us hope the New Haven catastrophe will be the last lesson needed to open the eyes of headstrong capitalists to "what is what" in this enlightened democratic age.

Rule Applied to Employees.

The old adage says: "It is a poor rule that doesn't work both ways."

The conductors and trainmen on our Eastern railroads have been sharply reminded of this.

They threatened to strike unless a board of arbitration was appointed to adjudge their wages. Congress rushed through a bill establishing a United States board of mediation and conciliation which has to settle disputes, if necessary, by arranging for a board of three or six arbitrators. Both the men and the railroad presidents accepted this method.

But now the men refuse to let the board arbitrate the whole question of their wages, hours, conditions of service, etc. They insist upon confining the arbitrators to the demand for a $17,000,000 increase in pay. They want the arbitration rule to work only one way.

They may get their own way this time, as the managers did not emphasize their intention of opening up collateral issues.

But arbitration that works both ways is coming as sure as sunrise. Let not the men blink at this fact. They can not arrogate all the butter to their own side of the dish all the time. The people WHO PAY will not stand for it.

Trading at Low Ebb.

Stock exchange transactions have fallen to the lowest ebb in nearly twenty years, and stock exchange seats are worth less than at any time this century—the latest price was nearly $60,000 below the 1906 maximum.

The quietness in trading is not to be construed as infinitely bearish on securities. Rather does it indicate that the market has been completely sold out. A new impetus is awaited. What direction will the next movement take?

Given normal crop conditions and a continuance of the healthy tendency in the money markets, the prospects are that, barring unlooked for disaster, the best securities will improve in market value.

Safe, seasoned investments are cheap, irrespective of what flurries may be encountered.

Stocks Are Easier On Profit-Taking

Prices Half Point to Full Point Under Friday's Close—Steel Common Most Active.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Desultory profit-taking brought prices down one-half to one point under yesterday's level in the stock market. The declines were mostly in the internationally listed issues.

Canadian Pacific, Amalgamated Copper and Union Pacific were conspicuously heavy. United States Steel common was the most active stock on the list and sold off a large fraction.

A feature of the session was the lowering of the quotations for all United States Government issues. This naturally reflected the uncertainty surrounding the disposition of the Government two's under the banking and currency bill. The Consolidated two's were quoted 95⅝ bid, 98½ asked, and one sale was recorded at 98. The Panama Canal bonds were reported 97½ bid, without offerings.

Holiday conditions prevailed abroad, but sentiment was more cheerfully inclined on the reported progress in the peace negotiations for the settlement of the Balkan disturbances. In part, this was offset by the rather more disquieting advices from China and a labor difficulty in South Africa affecting mining properties.

The most interesting feature of local news dealt with an arrangement entered into between the Republic of China and an important local banking firm for financing the immediate needs of the Republic through short term 6 per cent discount notes. Upward of $2,500,000 of these have already been taken and a total issue of from $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 is contemplated. Announcement was made that the $1,760,000 Southern Railway equipment notes brought out yesterday were all sold.

Week-end statistics were of a generally encouraging nature, the commercial agencies reporting a fair volum of business moving for the season.

CANADA REFUGE OF U. S. STEEL IF GUILTY AS TRUST

Infinite Possibilities Found in Perpetual Charter Just Given Corporation.

By BOERSIANER.

There are infinite possibilities in the letters patent just granted the United States Steel Corporation by the Canadian Government.

The grant is apropos of a $20,000,000 plant that the corporation means to build up there. But the charter, not the mill, is the thing. The license to do almost any kind of business is perpetual.

Under it, also, Mr. Gary and his associates may control all sorts of properties—including, of course, the Tennessee Company. Equally, of course, the Steel Corporation may recontract for the Great Northern Ore Company—an amount of raw material which it was difficult to believe Gary would relinquish.

The charter may be rendered significantly adaptable in other ways. Should the Government win the pending suit against the corporation—should the United States Supreme Court order a dissolution—the company might extinguish itself in the United States and operate under the foreign rights just accorded.

It is an idea that should comfort the corporation's security holders, especially the owners of the common and preferred stocks, who might be simply asked to exchange the certificates of the old corporation for stocks in the Canadian concern—if the worst befall in the court, or, indeed, in Congress; for the Canadian tariff differs from the schedule of imposts proposed by the bill under the Senate's considerat.on.

Manifestly Mr. Gary and his coadjutors have indulged in thought for over a year. Their cogitation has ultimated in the Canadian proposition—which may be made protective alike to the management and to the security holders.

Obviously, too, Gary is setting an example to his brother corporation managers who may say in defence that the lawmakers of the United States are driving industrial companies out of the country.

Whatever is done with the Canadian charter, it is certain that the Steel Corporation has in reservation a legal stratagem evasive, ingenious and no doubt perfectly effective.

Few Sales of Iron at Present Prices

Southern Pig Held for $11 Per Ton. Stocks Will be Reduced in the Fall.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., July 19.—Southern pig iron now is being held for $11 per ton, and there are few sales being made. The market is far from being satisfactory, however, and the make is in excess of the demand. The manufacturers are not inclined to sell at the low prices that have been prevailing, and though reports are to be heard of $10.50 per ton iron, there are no orders

The accumulated stocks of iron, estimated heretofore at 200,000 tons, should be cut down considerably during the third quarter of the year. At $11 per ton there is little profit on pig iron, and the furnace companies are said to be considering it better business to hold the iron rather than let it go out at the lower price.

Lack of Rainfall Is Not Liked by Bears

Further Batch of Damage Reports May Come From Belt, Low-Price Party Fears.

NEW YORK, July 19.—The cotton market opened steady with prices 1 to 4 points higher. Trading during the first hour was inactive and without particular feature. There was a little short covering in the new crop deliveries, based on the early weather news. The fact that no rainfall has occurred in the belt within the last twenty-four hours is not liked by the bears because of the likelihood of a further batch of damage reports. There was some selling by the traders to even up accounts over Sunday and the market held close to the level of the previous close.

The cotton market during the week showed a tone of underlying strength as a result of reports from both sections of the belt that very high temperatures and lack of soil moisture had damaged the growing crop to some extent. Many of these stories lacked confirmation.

In Texas the plant is said to have suffered some deterioration, though competent crop authorities predict that the State will produce an excellent yield. Old crop deliveries have been strengthened by the decreasing certificated stock in local warehouses. Opinions vary as to the extent of the remaining short interest in the July position, but it is the general belief that some difficulty may be experienced in meeting contracts.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., July 19.—After advancing about five points over Friday's closing level, the cotton market weakened, because of heavy hedge selling against actual cotton and profit-taking on the part of long interests, finally closing steady at a net loss of two points on new crop deliveries, while the July position gained one point.

Liverpool cables were rather disappointing. The market opened steady and unchanged in sympathy with New York, where heavy short selling was apparent on the opening. Shortly after the opening the market eased to 11.58 for October contracts. At that level, longs took profits, and this, combined with heavy hedge selling, quickly wiped out the morning's advance, prices receding to 11.60 for October. At the recession, all contracts offered were absorbed, and prices showed a tendency to harden before the close.

SCALPERS BUSY, COTTON MARKET TO THEIR LIKING

October Fluctuates Between 11.40 and 11.60—Big Fellow and Public Not Interested.

NEW ORLEANS, July 19.—A more hopeful feeling in regard to the defeat of the Clarke amendment having been engendered recently by the advices from Washington, the cotton market has become more active, with bulls inclined to bid prices up to higher levels.

The weekly weather report Tuesday was rather discouraging to the bear element, droughty conditions being reported as prevailing in Texas and Oklahoma, while rain also was said to be needed in some portions of the Atlantics, which was rather surprising to the trade here, as it was thought that there had recently been sufficient rains in the Eastern belt. Some private crop reports received from that section of the belt within the last few days also state that the cotton crop is being damaged by blight, especially in Alabama.

The market lately has ranged between 11.40 and 11.60 for October delivery. Covering by shorts has checked any decline in the neighborhood of 11.40, while profit-taking by longs, together with some fresh short selling, has served to prevent the market advancing much above the level of 11.60 for October.

The result has been a good scalping market, which professional traders have taken advantage of, but the larger operators and the outside public, apprehensive as to the Clarke amendment passing, have, as a rule, refrained from taking any interest.

Now that a more optimistic feeling prevails in cotton circles here, interest in the market appears to be reviving, and, with a little more encouragement, leading bulls in this market would not hesitate to put some ginger into the speculative position. There is still a fairly large short interest in the market, and it would not require a great deal of buying to put the bears on the run. Prices on the new crop deliveries are now 1 cent under those prevailing a year ago, when, in some respects, the crop outlook was better than it is to-day.

More reports of damage by boll weevil are coming in, especially from Texas and Louisiana, where the pest appears to have gained great headway. The rains which are needed now in Texas would lead to greater damage still from the boll weevil. Consequently, crop prospects in the Western belt are not encouraging, no matter from what angle the situation is viewed.

Wheat Exports Big, Says Late Dispatch

Canadian Situation Overlooked by Average Speculator, Says Veteran of Chicago Pit.

By JOSEPH F. PRITCHARD.

CHICAGO, July 19.—A message was received on the Board of Trade just before the close of business to-day which said that the export takings at the seaboard were on a large scale. In fact, the transactions at the Atlantic ports and the Gulf gateways were the largest of any day during the week. This piece of news came too late to be of any service to the bulls, although they possibly took advantage of this knowledge by taking on some "privileges" for Monday.

The head of one of the largest commission houses advanced the opinion that while other commodities have advanced, wheat has declined. He says that the situation in Canada has been overlooked by the average speculator, and that conditions north of the line are decidedly bullish, even at this time. It is a fact that the Canadian wheat crop is later than usual this year, being at least two weeks behind that of 1912 when the losses by frost were sensational in character.

Cash sales at Chicago amounted to only 50,000 bushels.

Fractional gains were shown in the corn market again to-day and the best prices were well held. Cash sales were 135,000 bushels.

Oats showed considerable irregularity, but closed at fractional advances, following a rather weak opening. The amount of cash trade was small at only 60,000 bushels.

The only commodity in the provision market to hold its own to-day was July pork and that is held by one of the large packers, and in addition to the line of futures, the cash article is also controlled by the same concern.

MORE CHEERFUL SPIRIT SHOWN IN SOUTHEAST

Improvement in Cotton Prospects Caused by Fine Growing Weather Brings Optimism.

By M. A. ROSE.

Two weeks of hot weather, varied by good showers, have done marvels for the cotton crop of the Southeast, according to the views of competent observers, who have made trips through the farming sections.

Cotton in South Georgia is waist high, they say, and a little more of this ideal weather—ideal from the cotton planters' standpoint—will do much to overcome the late start the crop suffered. If August, now, will be as kindly as July, and if the frost is not too early, an excellent crop will be assured. To make conditions perfect, a little rain in Central-Southeast Georgia might be added, for the abundant showers elsewhere skipped that section, according to the Weather Bureau's report last week.

The feeling all around is more cheerful. Country bankers and merchants report to their Atlanta correspondents that the crops look better—particularly the corn, which promises a more abundant yield than Georgia ever has known.

"Balance Basis" Rules.

By keeping loans strictly to a "balance basis"—that is, by demanding that a customer's balance be kept at 25 per cent of the total amount he is allowed to borrow—the supply of money is kept equal to the needs of commerce and industry.

Atlanta institutions, with one or two exceptions, have not yet begun to borrow from New York City. Within a few weeks this will begin, probably not as early as usual, for the cotton crop is a little late.

The outlook, according to good authorities, is for good prices for the cotton crop. Domestic consumption, many think, will reach 6,000,000 bales this year, a record figure. For nine months domestic mill takings were something less than 500,000 bales per month, but for April and May takings were well above 500,000 bales. They were close to 500,000 in June.

Cotton Prices Better.

July and August, terminating the cotton year, are expected to bring the total up to 6,000,000. Prices have stiffened perceptibly for spinnable grades in consequence. The total number of spindles in operation during the year has been close to the record, and stocks have been decreasing steadily since January.

Stocks and bonds continue to be quoted at bargain prices, both local investments and those listed on the New York Exchange. There was a small revival in trading following July dividend disbursements, but it has died down again. Fall, it is believed, will see much more active investment and speculation, and several Atlanta financiers, according to rumor, plan to father some new issues.

Cotton Trade Inclined To Enlarge Estimates

MEMPHIS, July 19.—Another week of progress for the cotton crop is history, and the tendency is to enlarge yield expectations. There is still, however, plenty of time for something to happen and fear that it might is contributing largely to the disposition to make haste slowly in yielding to the temptation to try to discount a big crop.

The trade seems to realize that ever since the first of the year there has been a feeling in the cotton world that the crop of the season 1913-14 was going to be a large one, and so far nothing has happened to seriously interfere with this promise, yet in the face of many adverse conditions and circumstances, the price has held steady, and only for a brief spell have futures been below 11 cents.

This fact tends to increase confidence in the stability of the affair and discourages willingness on the part of bearishly inclined people to commit themselves too heavily on that side until there is assurance that the crop will be sufficient for the world's needs for the ensuing year and allow for some enlargement of the reserves in the hands of spinners.

As yet notes of complaint from the fields have been in a minor key and danger is largely prospective. There have been some temperatures that were too high for the best progress of the crop, for the moisture supply was limited, but while this was the case the weevils in the same districts have been kept in check.

Oklahoma has sent the most serious complaints as to the heat, although the condition is that State has been high and there is room for some deterioration and still leave promise of a good crop. Texas as usual is sending a variety of reports, though the average opinion is that a record crop will be marketed there. There is basis for expecting a large early movement from that Commonwealth also, and three new bales already have been marketed.

In this territory, which comprises the area that produces the bulk of the long staple varieties, the prospect is the best in years, though in the lower edge, including some of Mississippi and Arkansas, the weevil bids fair to be a factor. Conditions are so favorable at the moment that the tendency here is to take an optimistic view of the entire belt. Information reaching here is that while there has been much improvement in the Eastern belt during the past few weeks, chances are against yield equaling the record of two years ago.

Bears, however, think they see possibility of the belt setting a new record in the number of bales, while outlook is for good quality.

There is small activity in the spot department, although sales in this market have been fairly large for midsummer. The unsold stock here is small and only a few buyers are here, but scattering orders are coming from spinners. Receipts are small, but stocks in the aggregate at counted towns are larger than they were a year ago. Quotations are holding steady and middling ranges from 12 cents to 12 7-16.

WHAT ATLANTA MANUFACTURERS AND JOBBERS ARE DOING

30,000 INVITED TO TAKE PART IN CONVENTION

More Than 100 Speakers Asked to Discuss Problems of the Southern Merchant.

Of all the conventions which come to Atlanta, there is probably none which is of more importance to the city in a business way than the Southern Merchants' Convention, which will be held during the first two weeks in August, and which is promoted by the Atlanta Merchants and Manufacturers' Association.

Taking advantage of the fact that Dixie merchants come to Atlanta in large numbers at that time, in order to buy their fall stocks from the big wholesale and manufacturing houses of the city, the association has developed this gathering into an organized convention, which serves the twofold purpose of entertaining these business guests of the city, and also of helping them to overcome the difficulties which they meet in the pursuit of commercial success.

It is of inestimable benefit to business men when a number of them can get together and talk over their problems. The association has arranged for more than 100 speakers, drawn from the ranks of the merchants themselves, who will present these everyday problems as they have come up in their own businesses. Every merchant will be invited to take part in the discussion, and in this way the good results which have been gotten by one man will be given to all for their combined benefit.

The time of the convention has been well provided for. In the daytime there will be enough discussion to give every merchant the fullest possible benefit. But there will be enough time left for the visiting amongst the wholesale houses which every merchant will want to do.

Then there are barbecues, receptions, dinners, theater parties and baseball parties all arranged for, at all of which the merchants will be the guests of the association. Every merchant in Dixie is cordially invited to come to this convention, and ample preparations are being made to care for them all.

Secretary Moore has sent out over 30,000 invitations, and the man who doesn't come and take advantage of this splendid opportunity will have only himself to blame.

A FREE TRIP

To Atlanta is available to the merchant who buys an adequate bill from the members of the Merchants' Association.

Mahogany Worth Fortune Used Here for Furniture

Colonial Pieces Reproduced and New England Is Scoured for Good Models.

When you think of furniture you think of Grand Rapids, Mich., don't you?

Of course you do, just as when you think of cotton goods, you think of Fall River, Mass.

But isn't there a chance—just a bare chance—that you are being fooled? That massive, highly polished, solid mahogany sideboard—can you find the maker's name anywhere on it? Probably you can not, and if not, how do you know it came from the Michigan city? Just as likely as not the piece was built right here in Atlanta.

Atlanta has several really large furniture concerns. One of them, the Southern Furniture Company, out Marietta street, devotes its efforts almost exclusively to high-grade dining room and bedroom sets. About 250 men are employed the year around, turning out dining room tables, writing desks, china closets, sideboards, beds, dressers, chiffoniers, dressers and washstands.

Follow Colonial Models.

For the most part these are faithful copies of old colonial pieces, and solid mahogany and solid oak are the woods most in favor.

The day of veneers and of fancy carvings is gone, it seems. Dignity of line, sober finish, with the richness all in the material—this is the policy today.

Stacked in the factory yards are mahogany and oak in the rough, worth, in the aggregate, several hundred thousand dollars. Otto Schwab, the vice president, points out a very ordinary looking stack, about the color of a cigar box. "There's $30,000 worth of Mexican mahogany," he remarks. "It is worth from $250 to $400 per 1,000 feet. Roughly, I should say that mahogany is worth three times as much as oak."

When the lumber arrives in Atlanta it must remain in the stacks a year, to insure perfect seasoning. Even after that, it goes to the dry kilns.

From the dry kilns it goes to a man who saws it into proper lengths.

Waste Manufacturers' Bane.

"Here is the man who can break any furniture factory," said Mr. Schwab. "He has in his mind all the different lengths useful in the plant, and it is his business to cut every plank to the best advantage. If he does not, there is terrible waste, and waste is the bane of every manufacturer's existence."

Sized and sorted as it comes from the kiln, the lumber is "ripped" into proper widths. Then it is loaded on trucks and starts its path through the wood-working machines. Everything is in order. The sawdust and shavings are sucked up by great fans and carried straight back to the furnace fires. Loose blocks are not allowed to mess up the floors. The lumber moves from machine to machine on trucks. It never has to be rehandled. Pieces are stacked in compartments as carefully as a good business house files its letters, so that a workman need not waste time in searching for any particular thing he wants.

Sandpaper on Belts.

Every appliance is up to the minute. There are, for instance, "sanding machines," where sandpaper belting whizzes incessantly. In one machine this sandpaper belt is so arranged as to sandpaper the entire top of a dresser or sideboard or table at one operation, a skillful workman increasing or decreasing the pressure at the exact points desired.

Another sandpaper belt hisses over a flexible pillow and by resting odd-shaped bits on this pillow, curved table legs and the like are made smooth and ready for the varnishing processes.

Four and five coats of varnish are necessary before the final coat is applied. Each coat must be allowed to dry, then be sandpapered before the next is applied. This takes several weeks. When all this is done, each piece stands from three to four weeks for the varnish to take on the rock-like consistency necessary before it can be pumiced, and given its final polish.

Formerly all rubbing with pumice and water was done by hand. Lately a machine was invented which imitates closely the motion of the human workman, and this, to some extent, has supplanted hand rubbing, but it never will do so entirely.

Red Gum Furniture.

As often is the case, the South is producing something which can not be duplicated elsewhere, a product of great beauty, and other sections are taking to it quicker than the people right at home.

In the furniture business, red gum gives an example of this. In the Southern Furniture Company display rooms stand red gum pieces, finished in imitation of mahogany. It is not exaggeration to say that red gum, properly finished, can not be detected from mahogany except by an expert, and he can not, at a distance of two feet. The only difference is that mahogany has a minute, dotted grain, fine almost as a pin point, which red gum lacks. This can be seen with the eye eight or ten inches from the wood. At a greater distance, it becomes indistinguishable.

"Europe is buying great quantities of this," says Mr. Schwab. "America takes to it slowly. The American likes to say that his furniture is solid mahogany. Another piece, as beautiful, which no one could tell from the real, and which is solid, home-grown wood, durable and beautiful, does not appeal to him."

Designer an Autocrat.

The designer is the autocrat of the furniture factory. His office is in the room where the display models are made—but he is not always in his office.

"He takes it easy," explains Mr. Schwab.

Interesting stories are told of the work of designing furniture. Sometimes it entails a search through old New England towns, and the purchase of a broken-down old bed—valuable only for its design.

Then many factors must be considered. For instance, the development of the city flat has made it necessary to design sideboards and dining tables of small size.

Glassware Makers Readjusting Prices

Have Been Selling Product Under Cost and Now Are Marking Up Their Lists.

Prices on many lines of glassware are to be advanced immediately, but only in keeping with the increased cost of production. Manufacturers have been asking too much on some lines and not enough on others, according to The Crockery and Glass Journal.

Under the present plan it is proposed to remedy the condition, lowering the items which have been listed too high and bringing up the prices of those that have been sold below the cost of production. The two largest manufacturers in the United States have put new lists into effect, and some of the smaller plants will follow suit at once.

'SHORTENING' OF ALL KINDS HIGH AND ADVANCING

Lard Sales Heaviest Ever Known for Summer, Reports Whitcomb-Burke Brokerage Firm.

"Our sales of lard this summer are above the high water mark of any previous summer," says W. M. Burke, manager of the firm of H. H. Whitcomb and Burke, No. 149 Madison avenue, Atlanta's foremost brokers of groceries, who represent in his territory the largest Chicago packers, acting as agents between them and the big wholesalers.

"Pure leaf lard is high, and advancing, yet we are kept busy filling orders for this grade. The advance is shared, too, by compound lard, of which we are handling an ever-increasing quantity.

"The leading wholesalers, with whom we deal, report an excellent volume of sales, and collections improving right along. Business looks good, with the outlook for fall very bright.

"We can not speak for our competitors, but I suppose they, too, are noticing the heavy lard sales, and the general improvement in business."

General activity both of cotton seed oil and lard has caused an advance in price all around, and has led to a peculiar situation wherein it has become possible to reimport cotton seed oil from abroad.

Chicago packers, according to advices to Mr. Burke, imported 50,000 barrels of cotton seed oil from Europe, finding it cheaper to do this than to buy the oil in the United States, where, of course, it originates.

At the same time, compound lard has increased in cost from 7 7-8c to 10 5-8c, this representing the price the wholesaler pays. Pure leaf lard has advanced from 11c to 12 3-4c. Sales of lard have jumped to a figure unprecedented in any previous summer, despite the high prices, which are attributed, in part, to the increased demand, in part to the shortage of cotton seed oil, and last, to the rising quotations on hogs.

"We are having an unusually good trade in canned goods, too," says Mr Burke. "Summer is the canned goods season. Out of mercy to the cook these hot days, the stay-at-homes are eating tinned meats. Picnics, camping parties and the militia also help to move our lines of these products.

"The militia encampments at St. Simons, for instance, sent in heavy orders for pork and beans, roast beef and corned beef. These military outings really are an important factor in our summer canned goods trade.

"Canned fruits are opening higher this season. Libby, McNeil & Libby, whose account we handle, advise us in a circular-letter that the quality of this year's crop in California is high, but that the yield is somewhat short."

Yellow Pine Scarce, Supply Almost Gone

North Carolina Variety Almost Supplants White Pine for Building Packing Cases.

The consumption of yellow pine lumber has increased to such an extent that while the public is familiar with its value for construction, building operations, and packing cases, very little is known as to the amount of timber left standing. In a few years the supply will be exhausted.

Short-leaf yellow pine, known in the trade as "North Carolina pine," has taken the place of white pine to such an extent that the latter has almost disappeared from the market. In 1900, 90 per cent of the packing cases manufactured were made of white pine. This wood became so hard to procure and increased in price so rapidly that North Carolina pine came into use.

At the present date 90 per cent of the packing cases are made from this wood.

When general business is good throughout the country the demand exceeds the supply. When crops are abundant and the Middle West is prosperous, so much of this wood goes to that part of the country that the mills on the Atlantic seaboard find it difficult to manufacture enough lumber to supply the wants of dealers in Eastern States.

MANUFACTURERS COMMITTEE CONSIDERS MANY OFFERS

Manufacturers on the subcommittee of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, which is pushing plans for the permanent exhibit of Atlanta-made goods, met Wednesday at noon to discuss the several proposals which have been made offering buildings to house the exhibit. The subcommittee is progressing well in its work of estimating costs, floor space, available location, and the like, but has reached no definite conclusion.

WILL ATTEMPT TO HURRY BILLS THROUGH HOUSE

Two Thousand Retailers Gathering for Purpose of Backing Bad Check and Garnishment Laws.

Two thousand retail grocers, dry goods men and hardware merchants will parade Monday morning from the Ansley Hotel to the State Capitol.

They have important business at the Capitol.

Not to put too fine an edge on the matter, they are going to do some lobbying, but this is a lobby which is open and aboveboard, and at which no one can take offense.

The bills which the retailers favor are the fraudulent check bill and the new garnishment bill, both of which measures, they declare, are necessary for their proper protection.

A fight on the bills is due in the House Tuesday. For this reason the annual convention of the Georgia Retailers' Association has been called for this date. It will remain in session Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Little business besides endeavoring to get favorable action on the two bills mentioned and the election of officers for the coming year, will be accomplished.

J. W. S. Harding, president, will call the meeting to order Monday morning at 9 o'clock at the Hotel Ansley. Wilmer L. Moore, president of the Chamber of Commerce, will deliver the address of welcome. An executive session of an hour's duration will follow. Then comes the parade to the Capitol.

Two thousand retailers are expected to be in line. Dublin, Waycross, Thomasville, Augusta, Bainbridge, Athens, Columbus and Macon are expected to send big delegations. Other towns which find it impossible to send delegates prepared petitions.

Write for our latest Catalogue. The leading merchants are adding the 5c and 10c departments. Why not one for your town?

SPEAKIN' OF ECONOMY

Did you notice where one of our Peachtree customers got a report of seven months' service from a pair of Five-Dollar Red Seal Shoes?

They were worn by Mr. W. A. Quarles, City Salesman for the Fain & Stamps Grocery Company, who walks more than three miles a day.

Figured out, his shoes cost him one cent a mile, or three cents a day. Can you match that? As a merchant, don't you believe records like this are worth while?

Don't you believe if folks talked about your shoes that way, it would double your shoe trade?

Then why experiment? Put Red Seal Shoes at the top of your ballot for next season, and cut out shoe troubles. That's what Home-Made Shoes means for the people of the South.

It will give us great pleasure to have you visit the Red Seal Shoe Factory if you come to the Merchants' Convention, August 4th to 15th. Then you can see for yourself what goes into Red Seal Shoes, and why they give such long service.

ATLANTA'S LATEST SKYSCRAPER, THE MAGNIFICENT HURT BUILDING, WILL USE CENTRAL STATION CURRENT FOR POWER AND LIGHT

THE HURT BUILDING.

The purchase of CENTRAL STATION ELECTRIC CURRENT for lights and power for the magnificent new Hurt Building, at the intersection of Pryor Street and Edgewood Avenue, is probably the highest indorsement yet given this method of obtaining electricity.

The rates and service which Mr. Joel Hurt has secured for his building are the standard rates and identical service offered any individual or enterprise desiring electricity for power and lights under similar conditions. The contract is made to cover the requirements of the building now under erection. It contemplates that should the building be extended to double its present size the contract may be so adjusted as to meet the additional requirements at virtually the same cost at which the service could be furnished from an isolated plant. In short, a contract is made now with the hope that it will prove to the interests of the Atlanta Realty Corporation in its future building to continue to obtain its supply from the Georgia Railway & Power Company. If, after the expiration of two years, it should appear that the Atlanta Realty Corporation can produce its power from its own station at a saving worth considering, it would be at liberty to do so, and cancel the present contract.

Mr. Hurt, who built this latest monument to Atlanta's enterprise and progress, is well known as one of the greatest developers in the country. The Equitable Building and the superb Druid Hills residence section are his products; and it was he who conceived and built the first electric trolley lines in Atlanta, forerunners of the present street railway system.

Mr. Hurt is a trained engineer and is thoroughly familiar with the intricate details of the electrical business. Therefore, when he decided to buy Central Current for his masterpiece, the Hurt Building, after carefully investigating every other method of obtaining electricity, it was distinctly an expert indorsement of Central Station Current.

YANKEE TENNIS TEAM DEFEATS CANADIAN PAIR

McLoughlin and Hackett Down Powell and Schwenger in Straight Sets.

6—3, 6—3, 12—10 WERE SCORES OF HOT MATCHES

Americans Face Britons Friday on Wimbledon Courts in the Final Round.

By Anthony F. Wilding.
(World's Champion Tennis Player.)

WIMBLEDON, ENGLAND, July 19.—In accordance with my forecast as to the semi-final, America has surpassed all her competitors and now stands in the position of challenger against England, the present holder of the international championship, and the Dwight F. Davis Cup, emblematic of the title.

America's brilliant players double clinched the honor to-day by beating Canada's best pair in three straight sets, 6-3, 6-3, 12-10.

Heavy rains greatly softened the ground to-day in spite of a huge tarpaulin which had been placed over the entire court.

I consider that this heavy condition of the turf gave the Canadians an improved chance, yet they were clearly outplayed through the clever tactics of the brilliant pair from the United States. McLoughlin's hurricane service and smashing volleying were both very conspicuous features of the victors play.

Wilding Favors Americans.

By winning out in three straight sets to-day McLoughlin and Hackett proved themselves equal to the occasion regardless of all weather conditions. Though I have said it was a great problem as to whether America could wrest the championship from England in the challenge round next week ,I am inclined after watching to-day's match to believe that the prospects of the United States are more bright than ever before. I always conceded America a very excellent chance; I think now that team should win unless it experiences a decided reversal of form.

Notwithstanding the unpropitious weather and the prospect of more rain, a splendid attendance was gathered around the center court this afternoon. On the whole, this court was in first-class condition for the important match. Lowell and Schwengers, who represented Canada, both played pluckily despite the fact that it was an uphill struggle most of the way.

On the historic Wimbledon courts next Friday will begin the struggle between the Lion and the Eagle for the possession of the most greatly prized trophy of the lawn tennis world—the Davis cup.

To begin with, McLoughlin's service was quite unplayable, which gave the American team a very great advantage. The California boy opened with his service, and as a result of his smashing overhead play his side soon had a lead of four games to two. Powell, who played well throughout, won his service, but the first set went to the Americans in short order soon after.

Canadians Rally Gamely.

The next set ended in very much the same fashion as the first. Powell and Schwenger did not seem able to stand up against the forceful tactics of their opponents. In the last set, however, the two Canadians made a very game effort to save themselves, and some fine rallies resulted.

Powell's returns were especially resourceful and clever, but not quite able enough to offset the all-conquering Americans.

I never have seen so successfully accomplished, such smashing and volleying as resulted from the combined efforts of America's pair. Schwenger, through a double fault, lost his service principally because Powell's overhead lobs were not sufficiently crushing. After the United States passed into the lead at 5 to 4, McLoughlin's play became simply superb. His smashing and service both drew round upon round of applause from the stand. Powell also electrified the crowd on more than one occasion and saved the situation by quick volleying.

Schwenger's Plays Faulty.

Time and time again in this final set Canada's chances for the moment would appear bright, only to be dashed the next instant by some faulty play on the part of Schwenger. It was the errors of Powell's partner that lost the nineteenth game when Hackett was serving. Powell won his last service in fine style, but McLoughlin was simply irresistible in the last game when his turn came. His driving simply swept the court.

America will be represented by Maurice E. McLoughlin, Norris Williams, Harold H. Hackett and Wallace F. Johnson. The English defenders are C. P. Dixon, J. C. Parke, A W. Core and H. Roper Barrett.

WASHBURN AND LEROY QUALIFY FOR GOLF FINALS

NEW YORK, July [illegible].—Watson M. Washburn and Robert Leroy and Theo. R. Pell and Raymond D. Little will meet this afternoon in the final match of the Round Robin tennis doubles of the Westchester Country Club.

The Washburn-Leroy combination finished at the top of the first division yesterday by defeating Adee and Rawlins by the score of 6-3, 6-2. This victory gave the winners the right to play Pell and Little, leaders of the second division, for the trophies to-day.

JOHN DOBBS GOING UP TO BIG LEAGUE

It's Almost Certainty That Browns Get Him—May Have Interviewed Hedges Here.

DOBBS HAS BEEN IN BASEBALL 16 SEASONS

First Game "Boy Manager" Ever Played With Real Team Was in Atlanta, Nearly 20 Years Ago.

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE Southern League will lose a good manager next year. His name is John Dobbs. The "Boy Manager" is slated to go to the St. Louis Americans. It isn't fixed at all. But it will go through.

Dobbs is innocent as a pup when you ask him about the prospects of going to St. Louis.

"I really don't know," he told me just before he left Atlanta. "Of course, I have some good friends in St. Louis and they tell me that they are working on the thing. A lot of the St. Louis newspapers are plugging for me. I believe there is a good chance that something may be done. But I haven't seen anybody connected with the Browns in six months."

That's what John says.

The facts are, however, as follows: Robert E. Hedges, owner of the Browns, disappeared from St. Louis about the time the rumor got afloat that the St. Louis Americans wanted Dobbs as manager. Nobody in his office would say where he had gone.

The St. Louis papers got a hot tip, however, that Hedges had gone South for something or other.

Now, Northerners make no regular practice of traveling South in midsummer for pleasure. The Florida resorts aren't open then, you know—and it IS hot traveling.

Hedges didn't come South to look over players. He hires scouts to do that.

More than this, Dobbs was seen in earnest conversation while here with a slight, rather smallish, dapper man, carrying a cane and wearing St. Lousy-looking clothes.

He may have been a traveling man. He may have been Hedges. Anyhow, Dobbs is going up. If he does not land the job with the Browns he will go to an American Association club.

Dobbs scouts the idea that he would go to New Orleans.

"Not me," says Johnny. "I'll stay in Montgomery first. The man who goes to New Orleans goes to a hot job. He'll have to run all the gamblers out before he will get the decent people going again. And that will be some job. No, thanks; they haven't offered it to me, but I don't care if they don't."

My own private belief is that Dobbs will go to the St. Louis Americans. And if he does he will make them a useful manager.

* * *

DO you realize that as a "Boy Manager" Dobbs is a rank faker. "Boy Manager," indeed! Why, the old lobster has been in baseball sixteen years already—six years of that time in the big leagues.

But just because he has a young face and young ways he has been getting away with it.

Now, he stands exposed before all the world. He is 36 years old, according to his own confession, and maybe he's older. Why, the old lobster was playing in the Southern League back before the days of the present organization—back when Evansville, Ind., was in the Dixie circuit. A fine "Boy Manager," truly!

Understand, though, that we take exception only to the "Boy" part of it. John is strictly there as a manager. Anybody who can get the Montgomery team up in the race and keep it there with 10 cents' worth of backing is the real stuff.

* * *

DOBBS began his baseball career, oddly enough, in Atlanta. That was nearly twenty years ago. He was a bit of a kid then. His brother played on the Chattanooga Athletic Club team. One day a player was hurt, just before an important game, and Johnny was given a chance. He played part of one game and then was taken to Atlanta as utility man to play a series here. Dobbs does not even remember now what team he played against, but he does recall that something happened to the center fielder, and he was stuck in and played a game.

* * *

DOBBS won a good bit of prominence in Chattanooga for his work with the Athletic Club. About that time Chattanooga was making one of its periodic stabs at Southern League baseball. Mind you, it wasn't the present league. It was the old one. Lew Whistler, later a manager in the present Southern League, was then the leader of the Chattanooga club.

One day a couple of players jumped. Whistler was itght up against it, for he didn't have any money to invest in ball players. Somebody suggested Dobbs. Whistler sent for him.

"Kid, do you want to play with us to-day to fill out?"

"Sure!" said Dobbs.

So he was stuck in.

That night Whistler sent for him again. The Chattanooga team had just been transferred to Mobile.

"Do you want to go with us to Mobile?" Whistler asked Dobbs.

"Sure!" said John.

"How much will you work for?" asked Lew.

Dobbs pondered a long time. He would have been quite satisfied then with $40 a month. But he believed in striking out boldly.

"I'll work with you just this one

Sporting Food

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

THE NEWSPAPER MAN.

Vacation days had come at last and to the woods he hied.
"I will not read a paper till I have returned!" he cried.
And in the woods he softly said: "Some class to this, I guess!
No city ed to bawl me out, no rumbling of the press.
I hate to read of politics, of scandal and of war;
A murder story gets my goat and baseball I abhor."
And as he sat upon a log and watched the summer sky
And heaved a sigh of deep content a paper fluttered by.
He pounced upon the muddy sheet and spread it on his knee,
And read of sports and politics and dames of high degree.
He read of war and graft and crime until the light was low.
Although it was a country sheet and printed days ago.

Aside from gathering to himself 3,000 rubles, Artie Hofman expects to be the guy that knocked the con out of contract.

It is true that Jake Stahl resigned—much after the fashion of a pugilist who retires from the conflict after he has been counted out.

Listening to Ban Johnson, one is led to suspect that the firing of Mr. Stahl was a case of premature discharge.

Looking at it from this angle, it appears that J. McAleer is one of those gents who didn't know it was loaded.

The Worst Play We Ever Saw was engineered by F. Leroy Chance, who traded an able-bodied first baseman for two cripples.

Price and Clark to Pitch Double Bill

Joe Agler Predicts That New Hurler Will Make Good With Crackers.

By JOE AGLER.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., July 19.—Price and Clark will twirl to-day's double bill, with Chapman and Dunn alternating behind the bat.

Well, we came through with another win, with Thompson twirling the brand of ball that will win any game with the Crackers hitting behind him. Thompson was never in danger and kept the hits scattered, while Brenton was hit hard and timely.

Price should win his game and then Clark should show his wares, and I predict he will make good for us.

The Crackers leave for Memphis early to-morrow, and we will probably have to go the limit, as the Turtles are winning nearly every game.

CRACKERS WALLOP PELICANS, 6 TO 2; THOMPSON CAPTURES FOURTH SUCCESSIVE VICTORY

Alperman and Bisland Are Big Aid to Former Georgia University Hurler in Third Game of Series in New Orleans---Bagby Breaks His Wrist.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., July 19.—Scattering base hits for the Pelicans, together with brilliant support, both in the field and at the bat, from Alperman and Bisland, won Carl Thompson, University of Georgia twirler his fourth game as a Cracker. Score, Atlanta, 6; New Orleans, 2.

Thompson pitched splendid ball, notwithstanding the terrible heat. Only once druing the nice frames he showed weakness, but Alperman rescued him with a sensational one-handed stab of Angemeier's liner, which would have counted two runs had it gone away.

Like the slaughter of Friday, the Smith men got busy at the jump and started pounding Brenton to various corners of the yard. Brenton gave up seven hits in three innings, which registered four men. Thereafter the Crackers went on the defensive, until the Pels threatened to score in the sixth, when they began belting the sphere again, adding two scores to make the victory certain.

Bagby Breaks Wrist.

In addition to losing the ball game, the Pelicans also lost the services of Bagby, who suffered a fractured wrist as a result of a collision with Hendryx in short center going after Thompson's spiral, which fell between them.

The wretched umpiring of Kerin and Fifield demoralized the players on both sides. The umpires were hissed and jeered from the moment play started until the game ended.

The Crackers lost no time going after Brenton. Agler punched a single to center and took third on Bisland's rap to right. Welchonce's infield out to Hendryx scored Agler, Bisland taking second. He moved up to third on Long's roller to Williams. Alperman slammed to center for a sack, scoring Bisland, taking second as Bagby juggled the ball. Smith ended the round with a grounder to Brenton.

Atlanta kept scoring in their half of the second. Daley dropped Bailey's fly and the runner took second. Dunn and Thompson were of no assistance, Agler scoring Bailey with a single down the third base line.

Bagby Raps Out Double.

New Orleans made a bid in their half, Bagby, first man up, doubling past Agler and scoring on Kraft's Texas leaguer to center. Thompson tightened up here and after striking out Williams, Dunn caught Bagby stealing, Clancy falling via the three-strike route.

The fourth Atlanta score came in the third inning. Bisland led off with a single and Welchonce repeated the trick. Long, trying to sacrifice, hit into a double play, Williams getting his bunt and heaving to Clancy before Bisland could get back to the base.

The Pels worked in the second and final score in the fifth. Brenton tripled and Daley singled. Thereafter the home guard got a few scattered hits, but they were never dangerous.

Smith's single, a pass to Bailey and two fielders' choices by Dunn and Thompson scored Smith with the fifth run, while the last score was attributed to Bailey's single, Thompson's single and a line drive from Agler.

Pel Fans Will Give Smith Loving Cup

Popular Manager of Atlanta Team in for Big Surprise To-day.

NEW ORLEANS, July 19.—Whether Billy Smith ever wins a pennant during the remainder of his baseball careerfi the popular Atlanta manager will always remember his friends in New Orleans, for arrangements have been completed by fifty fans to present the Cracker pilot with a handsome silver loving cup, standing 8 inches high, during the ten minutes' intermission of Sunday's double-header.

The presentation speech will be delivered by Gabe Hausemann, a local jeweler. As yet Smith does not know he may be called upon to spiel off a few words of appreciation. Members of the Atlanta club, however, have been let in on the secret, all of whom are waiting with interest to see how Smith goes "to the bat."

O'TOOLE BETTER, BUT CAN HARDLY WORK THIS YEAR

PITTSBURG, July [illegible].—Marty O'Toole, the Pirate $22,500 pitcher who was recently operated upon for appendicitis, has left St. Margaret's Hospital and is now at his home in Homewood.

Indications are that it will be many weeks before he takes his regular turn on the rubber again. Baseball men fear he will be of no further use to the team this season.

SEVERAL BIG LEAGUE TEAMS PLAN TO TRAIN IN FLORIDA

JACKSONVILLE, July [illegible].—Next spring several of the big league teams will do their spring training in Florida. The Chicago Cubs are to go to Tampa, the Philadelphia Americans are comiing to this city, and Miami is raising a fund of $5,000 to secure the Cincinnati Reds.

The plan being employed at the Magic City to raise the necessary funds is that of having ten men to deposit notes for $500 in one of the banks. The gate receipts for the exhibition games will be used to reemburse these men at the end of the training season.

The Cincinnati team has been mentioned, but the Miami fans are willing to take care of any big league aggregation which will wend its way southward. All they want is a look at a real, live ball player of the highest type.

SOX BUY A. A. CATCHER.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 1 —Nick Allen, catcher, who last season was a member of the Minneapolis American Association team, has been sold to the Chicago American League club.

Famous First Sacker of White Sox Loses Long Fight With Death.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 19.—Jiggs Donohue, old-time baseball player and formerly with the Chicago White Sox, died here late this afternoon.

LANGFORD GETS MATCH.

SAN FRANCISCO, July [illegible].—Sam Langford arrived here from Australia Friday and before he went to bed last night Manager Woodman had matched him for a four-round go with big Charley Miller for next Friday night.

'Watch Crackers if Clark Makes Good'

So Sayeth Billy Smith, Who Now Has Hopes of Winning Pennant.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., July 19.—"If Clark comes through with the pitching he has been touted to possess, our club will give somebody a lot of trouble before the Southern League pennant is decided in September," were the remarks of Manager Smith, after his Crackers walloped the Pelicans to-day.

Smith and his players think they have a real good chance of returning home in first place, as not only are the pitchers going at top speed, but the heavy artillery is punching out base hits when they count.

NEXT season Dobbs will undoubtedly be leading the St. Louis Browns. "Bob" Hedges, owner of the American League club in the Mound City is hot after the hustling manager of the Billikeas and everything has been arranged but "the signing of the papers."

Dobbs will surely make good in the big league. He knows baseball from "soup to nuts." He has taken the Montgomery team this season right up to the top, although the material he possesses looks far from being able to finish in the first division.

It is Dobbs, not the players, that has put Monegomery on the baseball map this year.

STANDARD GOLF BALL NEEDED, SAYS TICHENOR

Local Expert Believes That It Is Time We Had National "Pill" for Game.

By Tick Tichenor.

IT is a long way between the old leather-covered ball with its stuffing of feathers to the lively rubber-cored golf ball of the present day and time. Yet such has been the evolution of the golf ball from a round pebble, which the shepherd, tending his flock, knocked into a rabbit hole with his crook, to the leather-covered ball with its feather stuffing. The feather ball was the forerunner of the old solid gutta-percha ball. And the old guttapercha ball, in turn, had to give way to the more lively successor, the rubber-cored ball.

It was the invention of the rubber-cored ball which, in my opinion, did more to increase the popularity of the game in this country than anything else. Here was a ball which, when even half-missed from a tee or iron shot, would give the average player almost as much distance as he could get when his shot with the old gutta ball was well hit. It was a much easier ball to get out of a cuppy lie with either a wooden or an iron club. It was a ball which gave the average player the chance to feel the thrill of joy which comes from watching his drive traveling down the course toward the two-twenty mark—a thrill formerly only enjoyed by the hardest hitters.

For, say what you will and argue as you may, the drive is the most enjoyable shot in golf—if you are driving well. If, on the other hand, a player is hooking one tee shot and then slicing the next, or is hitting on in the heel and the next on the toe of his club, there is nothing more disgusting to him or more trying on his vocabulary of profanity.

* * *

IT was only when near or on the green that the old gutta ball had the advantage. Being far less lively, it could be pitched up to the hole with more confidence. And once on the green, it was a far and away the better putting ball, as it did not have the tendency of our present ball to jump out of the cup. If some one could manufacture a ball which would combine the qualities of the ball of to-day through the green with those of the old gutta on the green, he couldn't fill the orders for them.

As it is, each year we see a new ball brought out which has greater distance to it than any of the balls in use the previous year. Now, a man is a short driver who is not around the 200-yard mark on all of his tee shots, while the distance obtained by some of the really hard hitters at times is almost beyond belief. It is said that in the open championship at Chicago last year that Tom Anderson was on the green on a 500-yard hole with a drive and a mashie.

I sometimes wonder how much liveller the ball will get. If they get much liveller the courses which had to be reconstructed after the coming of the rubber-cored ball will again have to be rebuilt, and those built within the last few years will also have to be changed to make the holes conform to the shots pulled off with the extra-lively ball. Of course, such a condition can not go on forever. There must be a halt somewhere.

A year or two ago we heard and read a great deal about the proposition of having a standard ball, but within the past few months there has been no agitation on this subject. But, sooner or later, I am certain that it will again be revived and that some time in the future the rules of the golf committee will formulate a rule specifying the requirements of a standard ball. Of course, such a measure will meet with the strongest kind of opposition from the manufacturers and even many of the players themselves. But in the end I believe it will be for the best interest of the game.

IF the rules of the golf committee should say that only standard balls could be used in tournaments and that no ball should be considered standard which did not float in water, then I think they would have taken a long step forward in putting the numerous golf clubs, which are being built each year, in a position to lay out their courses so that the value of a hole could be maintained instead of being nullified, or a really fine hole made an indifferent one by the introduction of a new make of ball.

The requirement that a ball should float in order to be a standard ball would, of course, do away with all of the small, heavy balls now so generally used and which have given the increase in the distance secured in all of the shots. These balls, being smaller, are retarded less by the resistance of the air than the ordinary size ball and, being heavier, have a much longer run to them after striking the ground.

* * *

IN baseball, we have a standard or official ball in which the weight, size and material are defined, and in other games, even if the definition as to the ball is not so specific, there is some mention of its particular character. In the rules of golf there is no mention of the size, weight or material of which the golf ball must be made.

Realizing that the yearly increase in the distance gained by the introduction of new makes of balls must be overcome in some manner if the value of a hole is to be preserved, H. S. Colt, who is probably the most famous golf course architect in the world, advocates the doing away, in a great many instances, with the present style of straight-away holes and, instead, having holes with a decided angle to them. By this method he hopes to force the placing of the tee shot in this angle and thus limit the amount of distance secured by the tee shot, and in this way maintain the value of a hole as to the second shot. He also advocates the placing of traps much closer to the green than has heretofore been customary, and also the use of smaller greens on all one-shot holes and those which are laid out for a drive and a mashie so as to demand that the shot to the green must be very accurate as to distance and played with a sufficient amount of cut upon it to hold in a small space.

JOHN DOBBS GOING UP TO BIG LEAGUE

year for $65 a month," said John, trying not to look as though he didn't expect it.

Whistler burst out laughing.

"Let's make it $75," he said. And they did.

And in all history J. Dobbs is perhaps the only player who ever got his salary boosted 15 per cent above his own highest figures on the strength of his first afternoon's play.

* * *

SINCE being inoculated with the professional baseball bug, Dobbs has never recovered. He did knock off one year (1908) to run his dairy in Chattanooga, but associating with pie-faced mooley cows wasn't exciting enough for Dobbs, who rather enjoys tackling umpires and refractory ball players, and he got back the next year and has been at it since.

There isn't time and space for Dobbs' full history. He played his way to the big leagues, performed well with Reds, Cubs and Dodgers, and then returned to the Southern League as a manager. He has been managing since. It was only last season that he retired as an active player and he could go in now if needed.

* * *

DOBBS is a great manager because he gets the most out of his players. And he gets it because he makes them like him.

Dobbs knows as much baseball as anybody. He imparts the knowledge well. He is a whirlwind on the coaching line. But he owes most of his success to his ability to make men work their heads off for him. He has made a marvelous race in the Southern this year largely on his personality.

In the big leagues, with a fair show, John Dobbs should make a success.

ST. LOUIS BOXERS PLAN TRIP FOR COAST FIGHTS

ST. LOUIS, MO., July 19.—Two local ring artists, Leo Kelly and Francis Hennessey, will leave for the Coast the early part of next week, where they expect to create some excitement in ring circles. Several matches have been offered the two biffers, but nothing will be completed until they reach the West.

Probably the more promising of the two boxers is Hennessey. Kelly as a lightweight and as a welterweight has not been able to get near the championship class. The best he could get with Trendall in three attempts was one draw.

Then when Kelly took a whirl at the welterweight division he was knocked out in the second round by Ray Bronson.

Hennessey is a rugged little fellow who can stand a world of punishment, and it would not be surprising to see him get a match with Champion Coulon if he can trim a few of the lesser lights.

WOLGAST WANTS TO FIGHT AGAIN; MAY MEET WATSON

LOS ANGELES, July 19.—Ad Wolgast, former lightweight champion, is anxious to fight again and probably will be sent into the ring on Labor Day. Jimmy Coffroth, the fight promoter, is trying to arrange a bout between Wolgast and "Red" Watson, a promising California lightweight.

WELCH STARTS LIGHT WORK FOR SCRAP WITH DUNDEE

NEW YORK, July 19.—Freddie Welch, the clever Englishman, has started light work for his battle with Johnny Dundee, the local boy who recently entered the lightweight ranks. The boys will box twenty rounds at 133 pounds ringside at Vernon, Cal., on August 15.

Harry Wolverton Is Now Manager of a Nine of All Nations

Baseball's cosmopolitan character is ably exemplified by the Sacramento Coast League club, managed by Harry Wolverton, the former Yankee leader. Wolverton has lined up no less than six different nationalities. If they were paid for talking they would land the Coast League gonfalon, hands down. Sacramento boasts of the only Hawaiian and Spanish ball players in the Pacific Coast League, and perhaps the only Hawaiian in organized baseball in America. Frank Arellanes, pitcher, is of pure Castilian descent, while Johnny Williams, another twirler, hails from Honolulu. He has some English blood in his veins. Kenworthy represents the English on the Senatorial roster, although Wolverton and Moran also come of English stock away back. Of Irish and Germans there are plenty. Jimmy Lewis, Tom Tennant and Kinsella all have the map of Erin plastered across their physiognomies. Klawitter, Rettmayer and Van Buren are German. Wolverton and several of the remaining Senators claim America as their foster mother.

Private Car for a Minor League Team

And Own Special Chef Is None Too Good for Kansas City Players.

ST. PAUL, July 19.—Prof. Charlie Carr, president of the University of Baseball, San Antonio, Texas, is fertile in ideas. Having worked out the details for his proposed institution of higher learning in diamond lore and practice, he is now revolving in his capacious dome a plan for the Kansas City team to travel around next year in a private car.

The Blues have not been going as well as they should this season, and the athletes are not satisfied with the service provided at the best hotels in the various American Association cities. Athletes are easily satisfied when they are purchasing their own provender, but when the club is treating, the best is rarely good enough. So the idea is to have a private car on which the players may live while on the road.

HOW SPEAKER AND WOOD COOK THEIR OWN MEALS AND KEEP HOUSE ALONE ON BROAD SOUND.

BOSTON, July 19.—Joe Wood and "Spoke" Speaker have formed tentative plans for next October—after the Red Sox win the world's championship—to go on a long hunting trip through the Southwest, where the culinary skill they are developing at their Winthrop summer home will be tested to the full.

Cottage Park is considered the prettiest section of Winthrop, and there, in a modern home, No. 196 Circuit road, Joe and "Spoke" are having the time of their lives, keeping bachelor quarters, cooking their own meals and looking after the house in general.

It was there early one day last week, but an hour or two after the sun had risen, that a reporter and photographer for the Sunday American motored to Red Sox villa.

THEY'RE EARLY RISERS, THESE TWO.

Early as it was, there were signs of life in the house. And a ring brought "Spoke" to the door. Behind him sauntered one who had all the appearance of a chef. He had the wide white apron, the white cap, and his sleeves were rolled up in professional style. He looked a bit like an importation from Paree. But it was none other than "Smoky Joe."

A cordial invitation to enter was accepted, and the galt of the visitors was accelerated when the odors from the kitchen reached them.

For "Smoky Joe" was getting breakfast, aided by "Spoke," who, however, had been assigned the duties of setting the table and preparing things for his pal to cook.

In a few minutes the coffee was steaming hot; the ham and eggs were done to a turn; the toast, done to a rich brown, rested on the table.

IT WAS SOME BREAKFAST, TOO.

"Joe" and "Spoke" first brought on some delicious cantaloupe that had been iced throughout the night. This was followed by a cereal flavored with powdered sugar and cooled by cream. Then came the above-mentioned and principal part of the breakfast.

Some breakfast! And all prepared and served by the two stars of the Red Sox!

Breakfast over, the two players, declining aid, soon cleared the table, then washed and set the dishes away. A few minutes were then spent on the veranda, facing the bay, and then all hands adjourned to the music room, where "Spoke" played the piano, and Joe did his best to sing in big league style. In truth, it must be said that neither of the stars has devoted as much time to music as they have to baseball.

THEY ALWAYS DINE IN TOWN.

Luncheon is always taken in town while the team is in Boston. Dinner, however, is enjoyed at home, both helping in its preparation, and, needless to state, aiding materially in finishing the job.

Adjournment by this time had been taken to the veranda. Here the two stars, the admired of all the "kids" in the neighborhood, were soon surrounded by a crowd of little boys and girls. Just then an organ grinder came along, and soon "da monk" was nestling in "Spoke's" arms, while clustered around him and "Joe" were the youngsters of the neighborhood."

DRIVE "SPOKE'S" CAR TO BOSTON.

A group picture was taken. Just then a big touring car was driven up to the house. The chauffeur leaped to the ground, and walked away.

"Spoke" and "Joe" put on their coats.

"Got to get to the grounds, fellows," said "Spoke." He was soon at the wheel of the car he won for his work as the best all-round player in the American League last year, and then the daily ride to Boston began.

"Spoke" and "Joe" are "there" as ball players, and they are there about as well in the home, from the kitchen to the living room.

Average Power Boat Is 53 1-2 Feet Long

In the July issue of Motor Boating there is a very interesting compilation showing the typical American motor yacht of the present day. The time neded to work out such a problem as this is almost unbelievable, and the present compilation is, therefore, unusually interesting.

We find that the average motor yacht is constructed of wood, is 53 feet 5 3-4 inches long, with a beam of 11 feet 3 5-8 inches and a draught of 3 feet 9 inches.

The motor is of the four-cylinder, four-cycle type, with a bore of 6 1-32 inches and a stroke of 7 1-4 inches.

It is said that something near the half million mark was paid out to players in the National League as salaries last season.

Pacific Coast Leads In Motor Percentage

Although automobile dealers are busy pouring cars into the Southern States and people are busy buying this section is still below other sections in the "cars per capita" race. The Pacific Coast leads with 20 for every 1,000 of population, and New York has 11. The latter circumstance is accounted for by the density of population rather than a non-inclination to invest in motors.

The South is last with 4 per 1,000, but, strange to say, this record equals England's and surpasses by one that of France, commonly known as the "mother of motors." Germany has two.

The above facts are gleaned from the July issue of Motor.

Speedometer Repairs Done by Local Agency

The Stewart-Warner Speedometer Corporation have discontinued all branches excepting those located at the large automobile manufacturing centers, and have made arrangements with the Atlanta Speedometer Company, No. 328 Peachtree street, whereby the latter concern will do all repair work, etc., in connection with Stewart-Warner speedometers, having competent factory experts to do all such necessary work.

KETCHEL LANDS WINNIPEG GO.

CHICAGO, July 19.—Steve Ketchel is to battle Sammy Trott, of Toledo, in a main event bout at Winnipeg, Man., on the night of August 11. Larney Lichtenstein, who has taken Ketchel back under his wing, clinched the match yesterday.

BROTHERS OF CHRISTY AND TY STARRING

Younger brothers of Christy Mathewson and Tyrus Cobb are coming to the front as star ball players, according to reports from the cities where they are performing at present. Hank Mathewson is playing first base for the Kingston team of the New York and New Jersey League, and is fielding and hitting in fine style. Paul Cobb is hitting around the .300 mark as a member of the Lincoln, Nebr. club of the Western League, his slugging being credited with keeping the club in the first division. It is said that he will be snapped up by one of the major league clubs at the end of the Western season.

Canadian Regatta To Be Held in August

Arrangements Have Been Completed to Hold Big Affair at Burlington Beach.

HAMILTON, CANADA, July 19.—Arrangements have been completed by the officers of the newly organized Interprovincial Amateur Rowing Association for the first annual regatta, which will be held at Burlington Beach, near this city, in connection with the celebration to be held here in August, when Hamilton will observe her one hundredth anniversary.

The Interprovincial Association was organized at meetings held in Toronto on May 29 and June 12 for the purpose of furthering interest in rowing and increasing the number of regattas in the Dominion. The various clubs interested are of the opinion that too few regattas have been staged in the past and propose to make up for this by following the Canadian Henley with another big meeting each year.

The officers of the new association are as follows: President, R. T. Steele, Hamilton Rowing Club; vice president, W. D. Burchall, Lachine Boating and Canoe Club; second vice president, T. A. Murphy, Don Rowing Club, Toronto; secretary-treasurer, J. W. McAllister, Hamilton Rowing Club.

TEN RIDERS IN BIG MARATHON TUESDAY NIGHT

Tex Richards Out to Smash One-Mile Record—Says He Can Do It, Too.

WITH ten riders driving their motorcycles at an 85-mile-an-hour gait over the Marathon route—26 miles, 385 yards—there should be more excitement at the Motordrome next Tuesday night than there was when we were first flashed that "Ole Doc Cook" had planted his Number 11's on the North Pole.

Local followers of the motorcycle game have been clamoring for longer races. Tuesday night they will witness the longest event ever held in the South. The Marathon will test the ability of not only the machines, but the riders themselves.

It will be a test whereby the best trained man will win. Already the ten riders are training. All of them did a ten-mile jog yesterday. They realize that their wind and strength must be just right to stand the terrific strain.

Tex Richards is going to try to smash the world's record for one mile. His machine is going immense these days, and the Texan believes he can smash the mark made by Hasha.

There are several other events on the card that should prove marvels. Following is the complete program scheduled:

Tex Richards against time. One mile. Present record held by Eddie Hasha and Morty Graves. Time, :38 4-5.

Motordrome Sweepstakes.

One mile to qualify for two-mile final. Two to qualify in each heat and three in fastest heat.

First Heat—No. 1, Morty Graves; No. 2, Harry Schwartz; No. 3, Billy Shields; No. 4, George Lockner; No. 5, Tex Richards.

Second Heat—No. 6, Freddie Luther; No. 7, George Renel; No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 9, Henry Lewis; No. 10, Harry Glenn.

Harry Glenn vs. Harry Schwartz (special match race). Two miles, best two out of three heats.

Final heat of Motordrome Sweepstakes—two miles.

Second heat of special match race—Glenn vs. Schwartz.

Third heat of special match race if necessary.

Big Marathon Race—26 miles 385 yards—10 riders to compete. Each rider will have to ride 105 times around the track. Winner to receive cash prize of $500.

Contestants—No. 1, Morty Graves; No. 2, Harry Schwartz; No. 3, Billy Shields; No. 4, George Lockner; No. 5, Tex Richards; No. 6, Freddie Luther; No. 7, George Renel; No. 8, Jock McNeil; No. 9, Henry Lewis; No. 10, Harry Glenn.

This is the first time a race of this kind has ever been attempted on a four-lap track. All riders will be traveling over 70 miles an hour practically at all times.

Pop Geers Bosses Employer Jones

Famous Driver Shows Memphis Horseman How to Build a Fortune.

How would you like the job of teaching a millionaire how to earn more money? That's the position Pop Geers, dean of grand circuit riders, has.

Pop has managed the big racing stable of Frank G. Jones, Memphis horseman, for over ten years. In the last few years Jones himself has been behind the big money winners when Geers' tutoring sent them under the wire ahead of the field, but Pop Geers really is the man behind the gun. He has taught Jones how to drive many of the big winners, and is teaching him how to drive the "comers."

The two work together in the training season. The grooms lead out two horses at a time. Pop says, "Which do you want, Frank?" Jones takes his choice. They climb in and work a while around the judges' stand.

And then Pop generally finishes in front in the two or three fast heats they sent the "boys."

The other day, when Don Densmore and Joe Patchen II, the stars of the string, were led out, Jones picked the Patchen horse. Pop climbed in behind Don Densmore. It was a lively brush for the lead, but Pop's horse nosed the champion out each time.

Pop could be heard giving Jones pointers on the way round. His own expert driving of his mount helps to steady the other in case of a break.

The partnership gives them both a chance to let the horses out in friendly competition and see "what is in them" without showing their hands to rival stables. The Guide and The Pilot form one pair working out for the "Tavern Steak." Reusens and Zomblack form another pair in the same event. San Felipe and Eva Cord work out together for the Fasig.

SULLIVAN GETS MATCH.

PHILADELPHIA, July 19.—Jack Twin Sullivan, of Boston, has been matched to box Soldier Kearns, the Brooklyn heavyweight, in a ten-round bout at the Queensberry A. C. here on the night of August 22.

NO ACTION TAKEN.

NEW HAVEN, July 19.—No action will be taken this summer relative to choosing coaches and establishing a crew coaching policy at Yale for next year.

Zim Says: 'Good Batter Slams Anything Pitched'

POSITION AT PLATE BIG FACTOR IN HITTING

Getting "All Set" Not Only Narrows "Swing" but Increases Risk of Being "Beaned."

HERE'S the second of the articles by Henry (Heinie) Zimmerman on "How to Hit the Ball." You can't wait for the pitcher to put one over to your liking, says the great Cub batter, for if you do it will be an accident if you get it.

By HENRY ZIMMERMAN.

One of the questions which is being constantly hurled at me is, "Heine, what would you rather hit?"

Of course every batter has his favorite ball and almost every batter has his weakness.

I would rather hit a curve ball than anything else. I prefer it to a fast one, and it certainly gives me more pleasure to hit at a hook than it does to swipe at a slow one. If the old days when you could call for what you wanted were in vogue I would address the pitcher in this way:

"Mr. Pitcher, please curve it; let it come over the plate along about my waist on the inside corner of the plate. Then instruct your left fielder to play deep."

That's my favorite, but it is also my impression that the batter who is wise won't wait for his favorite. Because the moment the pitcher discovers what you like he feeds you the opposite. It's only by accident that you get what you like, and since all the pitchers know what I prefer I have no hesitancy in telling the public.

Doesn't Pay to Wait for Favorite Ball

I never could figure why a man who likes to hit and who wants to hit is so particular about the kind of a ball he swings at. It's my honest and candid opinion that more base hits are made off balls which would be called "balls" by the umpire than off those which cross the plate between the knees and the shoulders.

Wagner gets lots of base hits on wild pitches. They tell me that Lajoie in the American League makes a practice of getting doubles and triples on balls that are as high as his head.

It certainly has been my experience that I could hit safely almost anything I could touch. There's a reason for this, too. The position at the plate and the weight of the bat used has a lot to do with this.

They say that Wagner is awkward at the plate. His position may not be graceful, but it is one of the best in the league. If you will notice he simply lounges all over that plate. He is never set. The result is that he is prepared to hit anything.

Get "All Set," but Can't Hit the Ball

Contrast his position with that of some of the other fellows. They go up there, dig a hole for their right foot if they be right-hand hitters and get set. They are planted to take an awful wallop at the ball. But they are in no position to hit a fast curve, for instance.

They also are always taking the chance of being "beaned." That's true, for the reason that they are set, they are rigid, they can't get out of the way of a ball that breaks at the last moment and starts for their head.

Many a man has been hit by a pitched ball for the reason that he set himself to swing. The best way is to be up there lounging like Wagner. Then you are in position to step forward and meet the ball. You also are in position to swing at the fast breaking ones. You are running mighty little chance of being "beaned."

Speaking of the weaknesses of batters it's my opinion that Wagner has the most peculiar of any man in the game. It's no use to try to fool him on a curve. You can't. It's just as useless to try a fast one. He'll pound that, regardless of where it is pitched. He cares nothing for a spitter and a change of pace means nothing but a fattening of his batting average.

Ball That Fools Wagner.

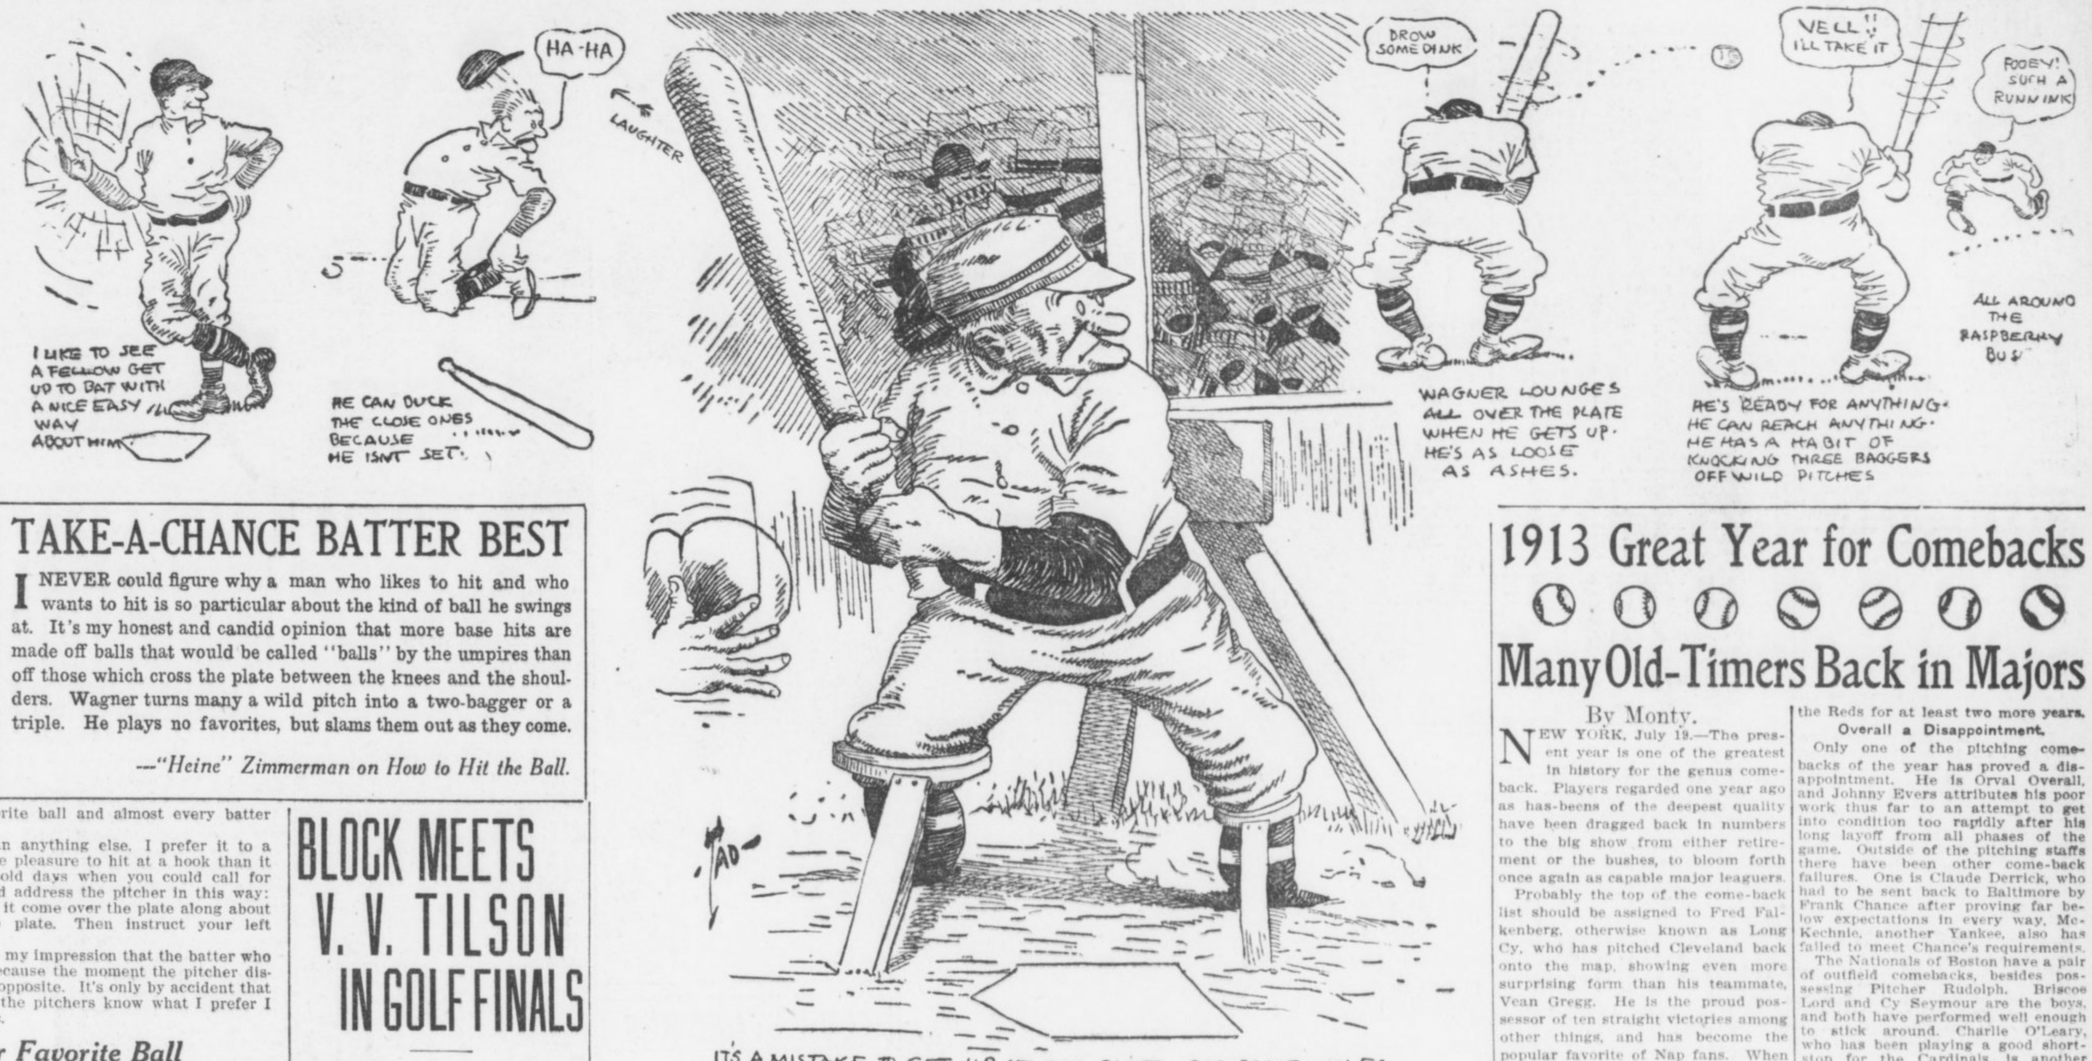
Jimmy Archer tells me that when the pitcher must pitch to Wagner, when it is in the pinch, he signals for one square over the heart of the plate, with nothing but speed on it. Archer says that Wagner will do less with this than he will if you try to fool him, and Mordecai Brown used to do the same thing.

Since Wagner and Lajoie have been compared for years and years perhaps it would not be wrong for me to say here that Archer says that the two men are alike in their weaknesses and that Lajoie can do less with the ball which most batters like than he can with the hooks, the slow ones, the fast one with the hop. Archer knows, for the reason that he caught in the American League.

The size of the bat has a lot to do with it. I want one of medium size, say 40 ounces. I'm strong enough to swing the kind that Chief Meyers does. But I couldn't get as many hits. The way the pitchers curve them on you nowadays a man must have something in his hand that he can swing at the last instant and swing hard and true.

I wouldn't like to say that the average batter swings a club that is too heavy. But in my opinion any time that a bat feels the least bit heavy it is too heavy and should be discarded for a lighter one.

TAD MAKES IT CLEAR THAT HEINE HAS RIGHT DOPE ON ART OF SLUGGING 'EM OUT



TAKE-A-CHANCE BATTER BEST

I NEVER could figure why a man who likes to hit and who wants to hit is so particular about the kind of ball he swings at. It's my honest and candid opinion that more base hits are made off balls that would be called "balls" by the umpires than off those which cross the plate between the knees and the shoulders. Wagner turns many a wild pitch into a two-bagger or a triple. He plays no favorites, but slams them out as they come.

BLOCK MEETS V. V. TILSON IN GOLF FINALS

President's Cup Match Will Be Finished at East Lake To-morrow.

HAMILTON BLOCK and V. V. Tilson will battle to-morrow for the President's Cup over the course of the Atlanta Athletic Club at East Lake. In the semi-final round, played Saturday, Block triumphed over W. R. Tichenor in a hard match, which was not decided until the nineteenth green was reached. Tilson had a stiff match also in the semi-finals, downing James T. Smith, 2-1.

Owing to the fact that Tilson has a handicap of 21 strokes, he will give Block a hard match.

The second flight has also narrowed down to Cowee and Cooper. That match will also be played Monday.

The third flight finels were played Saturday and the winner turned up in J. P. Webster. In the finals he defeated William Markham. 1 up in a tight match.

The results of the matches played to date in the President's Cup tournament follow:

First Flight.

First Round—R. P. Jones defeated James T. Smith, 5-4; Frank Meador defeated D. B. Osborne, 1 up; J. D. Eby defeated H. W. Davis, 2-1; V. V. Tilson defeated H. P. D. Cowee, 3-2; J. O. Smith defeated J. S. Raine, 1 up; Lowry Arnold defeated J. K. McDonald, 1 up (19 holes); W. L. Hazlewood defeated C. Donaldson, 2-1; R. G. Blanton defeated J. L. Dickey, 5-4; R. T. Jones, Jr., defeated W. A. Jackson, 4-3; H. Block defeated M. Saul, 3-2; C. E. Rose defeated T. L. Cooper, 4-3; J. G. Darling defeated T. B. Fay, 3-2; J. C. Harris defeated W. H. Glenn by default; C. V. Rainwater defeated G. N. Spring, 8-6; W. R. Tichenor defeated R. E. Trippe, 5-4; J. L. Ellen defeated H. M. Ashe.

Second Round—R. Jones, Sr., defeated Meador, 6-5; V. Tilson defeated Eby, 5-4; Smith defeated Arnold, 3-2; Blanton defeated Hazlewood, 2-1; Block defeated R. Jones, Jr., 1 up (19 holes); Rose defeated Darling, 1 up; Rainwater defeated Harris, 6-5; Tichenor defeated Ellen, 1 up.

Third Round—V. Tilson defeated R. Jones, Sr., 1 up; Smith defeated Planton, 1 up; Block defeated Rose, 4-3; Tichenor defeated Rainwater, 1 up (21 holes).

Semi-finals—V. Tilson defeated Smith, 2-1; Block defeated Tichenor, 1 up (19 holes)

Second Flight.

First Round—D. B. Osborne defeated Joseph T. Smith, 4 up; H. P. D. Cowee defeated H. W. Davis, 5-4; J. K. McDonald defeated J. S. Raine, 4-2; J. L. Dickey defeated C. Donaldson, 5-4; W. A. Jackson defeated M. Saul, 6-5; T. L. Cooper defeated T. B. Fay, 4-3; G. N. Spring defeated W. H. Glenn, default; R. E. Trippe defeated H. M. Ashe, 2-1.

Second Round—Cowee defeated Osborne, default; Dickey defeated McDonald, 1 up; Cooper defeated Jackson, 4-2; Spring defeated Trippe, 3-2.

Semi-finals—Cowee defeated Dickey, 1 up; Cooper defeated Spring, default.

Third Flight.

First Round—G. A. Nicholson defeated George W. Walker, 1 up; J. D. Leitner defeated J. V. Dunlap, 1 up.

Second Round—B. M. Blount defeated Nicholson, 1 up; J. P. Webster defeated T. L. Ingram, 2-1; William Markham defeated C. G. Lippold, 5-4; R. I. Gresham defeated Leitner, 7-6.

Semi-finals — Webster defeated Blount, 5-3; Markham defeated Gresham, 2 up.

Finals—Webster defeated Markham, 1 up.

Pitcher Ables Has Tremendous Hands

Oakland Southpaw Can Easily Palm an Ordinary Baseball.

LOS ANGELES, July 19.—Harry Ables, star southpaw of the Oaklands and the man whose work last year stamped him as the best left-hander in the league and was instrumental in the Oaks winning the championship, has a wonderful pair of hands.

Ables is a big man physically and undoubtedly possesses the largest hands of any pitcher in the business. An ordinary baseball can easily be hidden in the hand of the big southpaw, and it is to the size and strength of his hands that Ables attributes much of his pitching ability.

Along with his big hands Ables' wrists are heavy and strong, so that a delivery that would ordinarily weaken the arm of a less strong man has no terrors for him, and if the condition of his hands and wrists have anything to do with his period of service as an active pitcher, then he is due for many more years in baseball.

Many clever twirlers have gone bad and been compelled to lessen their work because they had not the strength to get the ball away with the necessary snap of the wrist without tiring, but Ables has no cause for worry and his work is easy for him.

As the Coast League can boast a pitcher possessing the biggest hands, at the same time the player with the smallest hands is in the organization. Billy Kenworthy, of the Sacramento club, being barely able to grip a baseball. As Ables' hands are an aid to him, Kenworthy's short fingers are a detriment to him. Many a hard-hit drive that would be handled with ease by an ordinary fielder has to be handled with extraordinary care by the Sacramento star, as a baseball is to him as big as an indoor baseball would be in the hands of the big Oakland southpaw.

BALDWIN DOWN TO HARD WORK FOR CROSS FIGHT

LOS ANGELES, July 19.—Matty Baldwin, of Boston, the veteran trial horse of the lightweight division, is hard at work here training for his coming bout with Leach Cross, the classy New York scrapper. The scrap will be staged at the Vernon Arena on July 29.

Baldwin has a newspaper decision over Cross and is confident of his ability to take the Fighting Dentist's measure over the long route. Should Matty score a victory over Cross he will be in a position to challenge Champion Willie Ritchie. Baldwin, by the way, holds a twenty-round decision over Ritchie, whom he defeated in August 1911.

LYNCH WILL MANAGE SPOKANE.

SEATTLE, July 19.—Mike Lynch left for Vancouver, B. C., last night to take the management of the Spokane Northwestern League club, which has been disorganized and playing badly. Lynch was released by Victoria for the purpose of strengthening Spokane, it being considered that the condition of Spokane was injuring the whole league. The Victoria team will still present a strong line-up.

FINED, HE JOINS FEDERALS.

TERRE HAUTE, IND., July 19.—Outfielder Roy Keener was fined $50 by Manager Burke, of Fort Wayne, because he would not go into the box to finish a game. He jumped and joined the Indianapolis Federals.

ASHMORE IS MILLIKIN COACH.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL., July 19.—James N. Ashmore has been appointed professor of the athletic course at the James R. Millikin University for the coming year. Ashmore has been with the Millikin institution for several years and his reappointment gives general satisfaction to the student body.

UNUSUAL RULES AND PLAYS IN BASEBALL

By J. W. Heisman.

IT is not generally understood by laymen that a player on either coaching line has no right, by the rules, to coach, or to say anything whatsoever, as long as there is no runner on base. All that he says is supposed to be in the nature of advice or instruction to base runners, and as long as there are none on the rule distinctly prohibits him from advising his batter, addressing the umpire, or quarreling with any member of the opposition. It's a pity that umpires do not enforce this rule better for its violation leads, in my opinion, to over half of the squabbles and fines that occur in the game.

Pitching Rules—The Position.

When he delivers the ball to the plate the pitcher must have one foot (the rear one) in contact with the pitcher's plate.

He must, at the instant of delivery, be squarely facing the batter.

He must not take more than one forward step, and both feet must be in front of his plate, or on a line with its front edge. He must not raise either foot until after he has started his delivery.

The Balk.

Not only spectators but a great many baseball experts are often puzzled as to whether a given case does or does not constitute a balk. This is not strange, for there are seven ways, by the rule, that a pitcher can employ to manufacture one of these little oddities—so rarely ever observed by Southern League umpires, even with good telescopes. The trouble is that while one is deciding in their own mind that in a certain delivery that the pitcher illustrated he did not violate this, that and the other canon of good form, we forget that very one remaining rule of the seven which he probably did break. Then, too, you can not positively describe the actions one may go through in throwing either to the plate or to a base, so specifically and definitely but that most any two men will see the pitcher's movements in different ways in case of an argument, and will differ radically as to whether those movements conformed to the rules or did not. Here they are, in brief—mull over them for yourself:

A pitcher makes a balk whenever he starts a wind-up (if he is in the box, has one foot in contact with the plate) and doesn't throw somewhere at the conclusion of that wind-up. If he is not in the box he can whirl his arms and bluff to throw all he pleases.

If he throws to any base to catch a runner he must simultaneously step out directly toward that base with one foot. And if he starts to throw to the plate or to first base he must go through with it and turn the ball loose toward the one place or the other. But he can bluff all he pleases to second and third and will not be penalized if he fails to let the ball go.

If the pitcher delivers the ball to the batter while not conforming to all of the rules regarding the position he should take in the box, he has, of course, committed a balk.

And if he holds the ball so long without delivering it somewhere, as, in the opinion of the umpire, to be unnecessarily delaying the game, he is in hot water again. And if he makes any motion whatever that is habitual with him in his manner of delivery without following that motion up with the ball he is clearly in contempt of court.

* * *

NOW section 7 of the balk rule says that he has also committed a FAUX PAS (French for foxy pass that didn't pan out right) whenever he makes any motion to pitch while standing in his position without having the ball in his possession. While this is true, "all right, all right," it has always puzzled me immensely why they don't go on and include here another way of violating good pitching manners that umpires will everywhere be shocked over, but which is not stated in the rule book anywhere. It is this: If you get in the pitcher's box without the ball in your possession you are committing a balk by that mere fact alone, and whether you mawe "any motion to pitch" or not.

* * *

I ONCE asked the lamented Harry Pulliam, then president of the National League, how he could construe this a balk when there was nothing specific in the rule book about it, and he replied that he simply construed such an act as PRIMA FACIE evidence of an intention to commit a balk. I regret to have to say that in my opinion this is no answer at all, for the simple reason that no pitcher ever has an INTENTION of committing a balk.

Just to hear what he would say, I once asked the same question of the great Mordecai Brown. He averred that the point was covered in the rule book. I handed him the book and asked him to kindly show me where it was. He looked and looked, but never found it, and had to give up the case except to remark that he knew well enough it was a balk all right, and so it is everywhere construed.

By the way, it is worth noting that a balk does not entitle the batter ever to his base, but only such runners as are already on base. With no runner on a pitcher may make all the balks he likes and nothing will happen.

It is perfectly possible, though, for a pitcher to have a very puzzling way of throwing either to home or to a base without one being able to tell for certain just where he is going to throw, and that without committing a balk. This is easier for left-handed men than for right-handers; but I have seen the latter kind who could so twist and distort their bodies at the waist, after starting a seeming delivery to the plate, that they were able to completely fool the first-base runner into starting for second, and who then succeeded in wrenching their left foot around so as to thrust it straight out toward first base after all and to squarely face that sack before compelled to turn the ball loose. In a case like this the pitcher has gone through, seemingly, with the motion so far toward a plate delivery that the runner has not thought it possible for him to change and get it to first base instead. Yet the pitcher has succeeded in doing that very thing, and has conformed to the requirements of a throw to first base as well. To do this he has had to so retard the final movements of his arm swing as to give himself time to step out toward first and to face it, and still have force and accuracy enough in the throw to get it there speedily; it is a very difficult thing to do. But it can be done, and that quite legitimately.

To Be Continued Next Sunday.

Soccer Star Dodges Being a Millionaire

"Why Should I Worry About Being Heir to $1,200,000?"—O'Brien. "I Have a Good Job."

VAN BUREN, ARK., July 19.—Utter weariness of being merely a millionaire is the reason John O'Brien, of New York, who has been missing for three years, has advanced in explanation of his long absence from the ken of his old friends.

O'Brien is a former soccer football star of Columbia University. He vanished at the close of his college year, in 1910. He was found yesterday in this town, where he is working as an assistant engineer for the Missouri Pacific Railroad.

"Why should I worry about being heir to $1,200,000," said O'Brien to-day. "I have a good job. When I convince myself that I have made good in the world I will return home. I became plumb tired of being a rich man with nothing to do except play the society game and study new ways to kill time. Just now I wouldn't trade my $1,500 a year position for the biggest fortune in the world."

O'Brien added that his mother has known of his whereabouts, though a nation-wide search has been made for him.

SAYLOR TO BOX ON COAST; PLANS BOUTS WITH STARS

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., July 19.—In an effort to land his new protege, Milburn ("Young") Saylor, at the top of the lightweight heap, Ray Bronson is planning an early invasion of the Pacific coast.

Western promoters are dickering with Bronson for a bout on Labor Day between Saylor and Leach Cross, "Harlem Tommy" Murphy, Bud Anderson or Joe Rivers. Bronson says he is anxious to match with any one of the four.

In his last bouts Saylor knocked out "Battling" Kelly, a welterweight, in four rounds, then stopped "Battling" Terry, a Pittsburg welter, in three rounds.

1913 Great Year for Comebacks

Many Old-Timers Back in Majors

By Monty.

NEW YORK, July 19.—The present year is one of the greatest in history for the genus comeback. Players regarded one year ago as has-beens of the deepest quality have been dragged back in numbers to the big show from either retirement or the bushes, to bloom forth once again as capable major leaguers.

Probably the top of the come-back list should be assigned to Fred Falkenberg, otherwise known as Long Cy, who has pitched Cleveland back onto the map, showing even more surprising form than his teammate, Vean Gregg. He is the proud possessor of ten straight victories among other things, and has become the popular favorite of Nap fans. When Falky was sent away to Toledo a little over a year ago, he was figured a dismal failure.

Knight Returns to Majors.

Jack Knight, who has been with the Yankees now a little over a week, going back to his former love in trade with Jersey City for Baker Borton, has proved a tremendous improvement over the latter at first base. George McQuillen, who made his redebut at the same time with the Pirates, won his first game and appears like the same old George he was when starring with the Phillies three years ago. His time spent with the Columbus American Association team seems to have made him a better behaved McQuillen, which accounts for the principal difference in his effectiveness.

Another pitcher who has proved a winner after time spent in the minors is Dick Rudolph of the Boston Braves. Stallings made a wise move when he took the one-time Giant from the Buffalo Club of the International League. Mordecai Brown, that great old grizzled veteran, has begun to show some of the prowess of his Cub days after his sojurn in Louisville. His knee bothers him somewhat, but the strong right arm with its three fingers is the same. Joe Tinker says that Brownie will be a success with the Reds for at least two more years.

Overall a Disappointment.

Only one of the pitching comebacks of the year has proved a disappointment. He is Orval Overall, and Johnny Evers attributes his poor work thus far to an attempt to get into condition too rapidly after his long layoff from all phases of the game. Outside of the pitching staffs there have been other come-back failures. One is Claude Derrick, who had to be sent back to Baltimore by Frank Chance after proving far below expectations in every way. McKechnie, another Yankee, also has failed to meet Chance's requirements.

The Nationals of Boston have a pair of outfield comebacks, besides possessing Pitcher Rudolph. Briscoe Lord and Cy Seymour are the boys, and both have performed well enough to stick around. Charlie O'Leary, who has been playing a good shortstop for the Cardinals, is another former big leaguer whose delivering of the goods in the minors compelled the majors to give him another chance. His work with Providence was so conspicuous last year that when Huggins found himself up against it with Arnold Hauser injured, O'Leary was the first man he thought of. The old-timer has been doing practicaly as well in fielding as he did when a member of the champion Tigers of five years ago. Harold Janvrin is one more infielder who has done well, playing in utility roles for the Red Sox.

Kling on Job.

Catcher Johnny Kling, who is with the Reds now, has shown far better than most persons had expected. Including Jonathan, there are enough comebacks in the two major circuits to form a fair-looking team. For pitchers there could be Rudolph, Overall, Brown, Falkenberg and McQuillen. Jack Knight could play first base; McKechnie, second; O'Leary, shortstop, and Janvrin, third. Kling could be catcher. And in the outfield there could be Lord, Seymour and one of the pitchers who did not happen to be performing at the time. Of course, such a team could not beat the Athletics, but it would be a complete team nevertheless, which is the main point to be shown.

'MAGGIE' STALLINGS BENDING ONE OVER

Stallings pitches for the Whittier team, which is making a great fight for the gonfalon in the Saturday Afternoon League.

This young man is the son of George Stallings, the Georgian who is managing the Boston Braves in the National League this season. Like his father, "Maggie" is almost sure to become a big leaguer some day. Possibly not as a manager of a ball team, but as a pitcher. At any rate it looks right now as though he possessed big league ability. He not only has a ton of "stuff," but also has a lot of good baseball brains. Besides being a corking amateur hurler he is also a corking good hitter. His timely long clouts have won many a game for Whittier this season.

"Maggie" is one of the best amateur pitchers in Atlanta. He has everything. His fast ball has a nasty hop on it. His curve ball has a wicked break; and the young hurler is not the least bit afraid to use the bender when the count is three and two. He has perfect control of it. He also has a beautiful change of pace, his slow ball often catching opposing batters off their guard when they are expecting either a curve or a fast

'Red' Dooin Denies Friction Among Men

Slump of Regulars Causes Manager to Make Many Changes in Team.

PHILADELPHIA, July 19.—Despite the fact that Manager Dooin has benched a quarter of his famous old guard and that it has been obvious that some of the regulars have not been playing their heads off of late, Dooin said today that there is no friction among the Phillies. He made the changes saying that the second-string fellows could not do much worse than the regulars and he hoped they would do better.

Magee, Knabe, Doolan and Paskert have all been taken out of recent games and in their places were Walsh, Dolan, Miller and Becker. Magee and Paskert were called upon to do some pinch hitting, but they were not very successful.

For some time the Phillies have been falling off in the play that kept them at the top and it has been common report that there are factions in the club one headed by Knabe. But this Dooin denies, while he admits that one or two of the men have not been playing in their best forts.

O'DAY INSPECTS SHORTSTOP.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL., July 19.—Hank O'Day, veteran umpire and major league scout, was here to look over Shortstop Bruce Hartford of the local team.

Nap Leader Will Not Change His Tactics

Birmingham Says He Will Continue to Send in Protests Against American League Umpires.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, July 19.—The two Joes of the Cleveland outfit have different ideas on the umpire question. Manager Joe Birmingham says he isn't going to allow the grilling given him by President Ban Johnson to make one bit of difference in the way he handles the game and his men, and that he will continue to enter protests to the umpires wherever there are sufficient reasons. Slugger Joe Jackson says he doesn't intend to so much as speak to an umpire the rest of the season.

Birmy says that when he decides he is ready to give up the management of the Cleveland club he'll quit kicking. "I'm out there fighting for the club and its rights," said Birmingham, "and there's no umpire in the league who can truthfully say that there has ever been anything personal in my kicks. I'm not gaited though to have it thrown into the Cleveland club and take it without even making a protest to the umpire. When I quit fighting it will be a sure sign I've lost interest in my job and then I ought to be fired."

That Birmingham allows no profanity to enter into any of his kicks is shown by the fact that while he has been chased off the field three times this season and to the bench upon two other occasions, he has never drawn a fine or suspension from President Johnson.

Cutshaw Promises to Become Diamond Star

BROOKLYN, July 19.—While the popeyed baseball fans, who are breathlessly following the fortunes of the two major leagues, are balancing one man's playing against another's, it would be well for them to pause and consider the case of Mr. Cutshaw, the gentlemanly second baseman on the Brooklyn National team.

While it is not going to be set forth for Cutshaw that he makes Johnny Evers in his palmiest days look like an Indian cigar sign, nor yet that he has wrested the laurels from Eddie Collins' marble brow, this is what can be said for him with an air of defiance to all baseball critics, namely, to-wit: that said Cutshaw is a youngster who has within two months play shown more class than all his rivals in either league.

$20,000 FOR RITCHIE FOR THREE N. D. BOUTS

NEW YORK, July 19.—A $20,000 guarantee for three no-decision fights of ten rounds each awaits Willie Ritchie. Jimmy Johnston, matchmaker of the St. Nicholas A. C., today is awaiting word from the champion as to whether he will accept or not. Joe Shugrue, Jack Britton and Packey McFarland are the men picked by Johnston. As there are no decisions rendered in this city, Ritchie can not lose his title unless he is knocked out.

Johnston is also willing to guarantee Ritchie $7,500 if he will box Freddie Welsh, the English lightweight champion.

WEST POINT FORFEITS.

In the game scheduled between the Texas Oil Company and the West Point Route the latter boys failed to put in an appearance and the game was forfeited to the Texas Company.

RED SEAL FORFEITS.

The Red Seal team in the Manufacturers' League forfeited to the P. P. G. Co., 9 to 0. The former team failed to show up.

DANIELS NOT ON ENOUGH.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Bert Daniels, of the Yankees, is as quick as "that" on the bases. The only trouble with Bert is that he is not able to hit often enough to get on.

SOUTHERN LEAGUE

TURTLES, 2; LOOKOUTS, 1.

MEMPHIS, July 19.—Memphis continued its winning spurt to-day by wrenching off another victory at the expense of Chattanooga, 2 to 1. Graff's homer in the second inning gave the visitors the lead, which was maintained until the fifth inning, when hits by Snell and Love, coupled with Flick's error at second, settled the contest. Newton pitched steadily and was given sensational support. Schweitzer's catch of Graff's drive in the fourth was one of the most remarkable ever seen on the local diamond. Two runners were on at the time. The box score:

GULLS-BARONS SPLIT.

MOBILE, ALA., July 19.—Moblie and Birmingham split a double-header here this afternoon, the visitors winning the first game by a score of 5 to 3 by hitting Campbell hard in the first inning. Robertson in this game hit for a home run over right field fence, scoring a man ahead.

Foxen and Molesworth were put out of the grounds and Carroll benched for jawing back at Umpire Pfenninger.

Errors in the first inning of the second game and a home run drive with three on the cushions in the sixth by Catcher Schmidt gave Mobile the second game by a score of 7 to 2.

A purse of $25 was given to Schmidt by the spectators.

The second game went only seven innings on account of darkness. The box scores:

AMERICAN LEAGUE

WHITE SOX, 4-1; ATHLETICS, 3-3.

CHICAGO, July 19.—The Athletics and White Sox divided a double engagement here to-day, the locals taking the first game 4 to 3 and the visitors grabbing the second encounter, a 12-inning affair, 3 to 1. Cicotte outpitched Brown and Houck in the opener, but the same Brown came back in the second contest, went all the way and humbled the Callahans, allowing only five hits.

Walsh, who started the second for the locals, lasted five innings. Benz, who relieved him, remained long enough to issue one pass and start another. Scott then went in and remained until the finish. A pass to Collins and doubles by Baker and McInnis, scoring two runs in the twelfth, won the game for the Mackmen.

S. ATLANTIC LEAGUE

SAV'NAH, 2; CHAR'TON, 1.

CHARLESTON, S. C., July 19.—Savannah beat Charleston, 2 to 1, today, with Robertson and Foster in the box. Savannah's runs were from bunched hits. In the ninth Robertson weakened, filled the bases with two down, hitting two more and gave a pass. Handiboe saved the game for the Indians by stabbing Bitting's fly for a great catch. The box score:

RAIN AT COLUMBUS.

COLUMBUS, GA., July 19.—The game scheduled between Columbus and Jacksonville here this afternoon was rained out.

Chicago May Have Underground Garage

This is the latest word from Chicago on the parking problem:

Plans for a mammoth municipal underground garage beneath Grant Park, which fronts on the lake off the city's downtown district, were made public by Mayor Harrison. They provide for the concrete housing of automobiles, each section to be constructed between east and west streets to cost $125,000 and accommodate 225 machines.

"We are planning to spend some $60,000 to widen Michigan Avenue," said the Mayor. "The present system of parking automobiles on the boulevard practically ruins it, from the artistic standpoint. It is ridiculous to spend an enormous sum in improving the thoroughfare and then use it as a public garage."

$20.85 BALTIMORE AND RETURN VIA SEABOARD.

Sold August 1-2-3. Correspondingly low rates from other points. New Steel Dining Cars, through trains.

'DON'T LET FAT GET GRIP ON YOU,' SAYS J. BEAN, 'KEEP IT OFF---HERE'S SCHEME'

You Won't Have as Much Fun Taking It Off as You Had Putting It On, But It's Worth Doing---It's Hard Work, but It Is Worth Trying.

By Joe Bean.

KEEP the surplus weight away from the waist lines. Don't let it get a start on you. Just as soon as you do, your troubles begin.

There are many men who have looked upon themselves with pride when they beheld their waist measurement increasing. Before many years have passed these men have learned to look upon this increase with a great amount of seriousness.

There are some men that will take on fat all over and others only at the stomach. One form of obesity is just as bad as the other. It makes whatever you do most irksome and laborious.

There is an old saying: "If I have as much fun taking this off as I had putting it on, I won't kick." Well, I want to say that you won't have as much fun, for no matter how you secured this enlargement, you are going to have a nice time taking it off.

There are many ways to reduce this aldermanic growth. The rubber jacket, the flannel bandage and massage are possible ways, but what I want to impress upon my readers and pupils is that regular exercise and self-sacrifice will do the thing in the proper way.

Regular exercise will keep the muscles of the stomach and waist in such first-class condition that an abnormal growth is almost an impossibility.

Why should we have to resort to the rubber jacket, the steam room and the Turkish bath, when 15 minutes a day will prevent all this and at the same time keep us in a fine, healthy condition?

You Ought To Be Ashamed.

Gentlemen, don't swell up with pride when you see this enlargement of the waist lines coming on. It's your own fault, and something that should not be allowed to deevlop. Get busy.

I have placed before you to-day some exercises that will strengthen the muscles of the stomach and, with the others to follow, will, with daily practice, keep the waist and stomach at a normal size. The exercises shown in the cuts to-day are all done lying on the floor or on the bed. They can be done in the morning before dressing, or they can be done at night before retiring, but they must be done regularly.

Here Are the Exercises.

Cut No. 1 shows the demonstrator touching the toes with finger tips. This exercise is started from an outstretched position on the floor. The arms are brought over the head and the body is raised, heels on floor and fingers reach to the tip of the toes. Bring the hands up high over the head and back to the first position on the floor. Repeat this until you feel that you have had enough. Remember the number of times and increase it gradually.

Cut No. 2. In the first position you lie on your back on the floor, fingers interlaced under the back of your head, elbows pressed back. Rise to a right angle position. In coming up, bring the body up first; have the eyes fixed on some object when you start and keep them on the object until you are straight. Repeat this until you have had enough and increase gradually.

In coming up, keep the heels on the floor. If you can not do this, stick your feet between the rungs of the bed, under the bureau or some place to hold them down. Don't try it, though, until you have spent a good deal of time with No. 1.

Cut No. 3. This is the leg-rotary motion. Lying flat on the back in the same position as in No. 2 lift both legs up and bring them over to the right and make them describe a circle. After doing this to your own satisfaction, start the legs to the opposite side. This is fine. I know you will like it.

Cut No. 4. From an outstretched position, with hands over the head, bring the legs and arms up to meet each other, keeping the knees stiff and the legs straight. Then lower the legs and arms to the first position and repeat until you feel satisfied. Increase gradually.

Remember, you are not going to have as much fun taking it off as you had putting it on. So start now.

Get rid of the fat. Keep at it regularly, and you are bound to get results.

OLDRING AND BENDER ARE BIG HELP TO ATHLETICS

PHILADELPHIA, PA., July 19—What a remarkable difference it makes to a ball player when he displays interest in his work and takes the proper care of himself is plainly demonstrated in the improvement Rube Oldring and "Chief" Bender of the Philadelphia Athletics are showing this season over last. It is not a secret that neither of these players buckled down to real work last season.

Manager Mack found it necessary to suspend them both, and when they came into the fold this year it was under a contract which controls their conduct by means of having the amount they are to draw in salary fluctuate. The result is that both are delivering the goods in real shape this season.

DONAHUE TO MEET HIRSCH IN TEN-ROUND BATTLE

CHICAGO, ILL., July 19.—Harry Donahue, the fast lightweight of Pekin, Ill., who recently completed a most successful invasion of the East, will leave here to-morrow for Ottawa, Canada, where he is scheduled to box Special Delivery Hirsch, of this city, next Thursday night. Hirsch has been going at top speed of late and should compel Donahue to extend himself to the limit in order to win.

ALARD MEETS BENZ.

BUTTE, MONT., July 19.—Art Alard, of New York, and Leo Benz, of Butte, were matched for a 12-round contest here September 1.

JOE JACKSON STILL LEADS IN AMERICAN

THE batting race in the American League continues moderately torrid. Joe Jackson holds his lead, but by no broad margin. "Slats" Caldwell bursts into the records with a .400 average, but of course he has been in but 20 games. Speaker is still batting hard, but shows no signs of passing Cobb.

CAMPI TO GET ANOTHER CHANCE AT KID WILLIAMS

LOS ANGELES, July 19.—Kid Williams, of Baltimore, and Eddie Campi, of San Francisco, were matched yesterday for a return engagement to be held at Vernon on August 12. Williams was given the decision over Campi at the end of twenty rounds in their recent mill.

Joe Bean Shows Exercises Which, if Followed Regularly, Will Enable You to Keep Your Waist Line Under Control

No. 1. Start from the floor with arms outstretched, keep heels on floor and bring hands to tip of toes.

No. 2. Lie on back with hands behind head and elbows spread. Come up to sitting position. Keep body straight and let head follow body up. These are fine exercises for stomach muscles. The back muscles, and especially those around kidneys, are benefited.

No. 3. Rotate legs while lying squarely on floor. This is not particularly amusing, but is great for what ails you.

No. 4. Bring legs and hands up at the same time.

Try these exercises. Keep at them regularly. They are great for you, especially if your waist measurement is running away with you. They will keep you in trim.

JOE BOEHLING STILL LEADS ALL HURLERS

JOE BOEHLING, of the Washington team, continues to lead the American League hurlers, with a clean score through Wednesday's games. Johnson, of the same club, is second now, with 21 won and 5 lost. After the two Washington marvels comes the well-known Athletic quartet—Plank, Bender, Brown and Houck. Joe Wood is forging to the front again, with Walsh, Gregg and Falkenberg close behind.

Here are the pitching averages through Wednesday's games:

"COMMY" TO AID CRICKETERS.

CHICAGO, July 19. — President Charles A. Comiskey, of the White Sox, will co-operate with the new Chicago Field Association in bringing the Australian cricket team to Chicago. The visitors have been touring this country and Canada for several weeks and will play a Chicago eleven at the Sox park August 28, 29 and part of the 30th.

SEATON STILL TOPS SLABMEN IN NATIONAL

IN spite of the recent reverses of the Phillies Tom Seaton maintains his position at the head of the list of hurlers in the older big league. The "Walter Johnson of the National" has appeared in 25 games, with fourteen landing in the "W" column and only three on the other side. Demaree and Humphries, the youngsters of the Giants and the Cubs, are crowding him close in the matter of percentage, but they have only nine games each in their percentage records.

These are the pitching averages, including the games of last Wednesday:

PELKY AFTER SMITH BOUT.

CALGARY, ALBERTA, July 19.—Strenuous efforts are being made by Tommy Burns, ex-heavyweight champion and manager of Arthur Pelky, to arrange a match between his man and Gunboat Smith, to be fought in one of the California clubs. Burns is confident that Pelky will defeat Smith if they meet.

COLELESKIE IS LEADING DIXIE LEAGUE HURLERS

HARRY COVELESKIE, the big Chattanooga hurler, continues to lead the pitchers in the Dixie League. He has won eighteen games and has suffered but five defeats.

Prough, E. Brown and Price are giving the "Big Pole" a merry chase. All have been consistent winners this season.

BIG POLO MATCH WILL BE STAGED AT ORLANDO

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., July 19. Next winter the polo teams of Dixie will find a mecca at Orlando. The tournament for the Southern teams will be played off in that city and the Florida boys are making plans to properly entertain their visitors. As many as six teams are expected in the city at one time, not counting the military teams, of which there are a number.

Orlando has a number of players from which a team will be picked. The citizens of the little Florida city believe that their team will be able to win the cup or at least to make a good showing. No time will be lost from practice and the visitors will find that they will be up against a tough proposition when they take on the Florida Crackers.

O'TOOLE LEAVES HOSPITAL MAY BE OUT FOR SEASON

PITTSBURG, July 19.—Marty O'Toole, the Pirates' $22,500 pitcher, who was recently operated upon for appendicitis, has left St. Margaret's Hospital and is now at his home in Homewood.

SILENT HEINIE BATTING UPWARD IN NATIONAL

"SILENT HEINIE" ZIMMERMAN, of the Cubs, is plodding his weary way topward in the National League batting race, the way being the more weary in that Mr. Jake Daubert, of Brooklyn, pelting along at a .364 clip, and Mr. Gavvy Cravath, of the Phillies, with .339, are setting a pretty fast little pace for the temperamental showgirl of Mr. Evers' troupe.

Heinie, however, is tapping along at .327, and the great Honus Wagner, four points ahead, is problematical as a further rival for batting honors. The hunch is that the Flying Dutchman is about done as a punisher of slabmen. Still, we've heard that before.

Following are the National League batting averages for players who have extracted themselves from the .200 and under mark. The games of last Wednesday are included.

Quick, Easy and Positive Cure for All Foot Torture.

The following is said to be the surest and quickest cure known to science for all foot ailments: "Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of Calocide compound in a basin of warm water. Soak the feet in this for fully fifteen minutes, gently rubbing the sore parts." The effect is really wonderful. All soreness goes instantly; the feet feel delightful. Corns and callouses can be peeled right off. It gives immediate relief for sore bunions, sweaty, smelly and aching feet. A twenty-five-cent box of Calocide is said to be sufficient to cure the worst feet. It works through the pores and removes the cause of the trouble. Don't waste time on uncertain remedies. Any druggist has Calocide compound in stock or he can get it in a few hours from his wholesale house.

BEAUTIFUL AUTO TOUR THROUGH BIG MOUNTAINS

Traveler of Automobile Club Describes Impression of Roads. Some Good and Some Bad.

The touring department of the Automobile Club of America had a road car and crew in the White Mountains region for the past few weeks investigating road conditions on old routes and charting new routes.

A delightful route to the White Mountains from Boston is via Lowell, Nashua, Concord, Franklin, The Weirs, Plymouth and up through the Franconia Notch. This is a very interesting route over macadam roads to Plymouth, passing Lake Winnipesaukee.

From Plymouth the road is over fair gravel to Woodstock. The road is under construction for two miles, but passable. Good gravel is then followed through the Pemigwosset Valley to Flume. This is a picturesque run. The road runs along a ridge. The Presidential Range on the right, high hills on the left and the river flowing down the center presents a charming picture.

Many interesting points may be visited from Flume by leaving the car and walking short distances. Of special interest is the Flume itself, a peculiar formation which attracts a large number of White Mountain visitors each year.

Through Franconia Notch.

Leaving Flume, the route leads up a long grade over good gravel through the far-famed Franconia Notch to Profile. Running through the Notch a thickly wooded section is passed.

At Profile the "Old Man of the Mountains" is plainly visible. Leaving Profile good gravel is followed around picturesque Echo Lake, then fair gravel winds through a dead forest with many sharp curves to Twin Mountain. Fair gravel continues past Ammonusuc Falls and along the beautiful Ammonusuc River, with splendid views of the mountains, to Bretton Woods.

Leaving Bretton Woods, the run is over fair gravel for about three miles in the Ammonusuc Valley. We then pass a small lake, the source of the Saco River, and drive over fair gravel through Crawford Notch and down Tug-of-War Hill to Bemis.

On the latter part of the route the trees form a perfect canopy over the roadway.

Town With Three People.

At Bemis the former residence of one of the pioneer White Mountains settlers may be found. The town of Bemis is unique in that it has a population of only three persons. It has a Representative in the State Legislature of New Hampshire. Strange as it may seem the little town is not free from its political struggles. Fortunately, however, the odd number of voters always assures a decisive result at the polls.

A fair gravel road is followed from Bemis along the Saco River, which goes tumbling down over great boulders, passing Sawyers Rock to Bartlett. Good gravel is followed across the famous Conway Intervales to North Conway.

From North Conway the route leads through Conway and past the beautiful Chocurua Lake, nestling at the foot of Mount Chocurua. The water in the lake is as pure as crystal and if the tourist is lucky enough to pass when the sun is in the right position he may see the mountains reflected in the water of the lake.

Leaving Chocurua, a delightful run is made down through the Ossipees over fairly good gravel to Milton. Here a considerably worn stretch is encountered and followed to Dover, whence good macadam is followed to Portsmouth.

From Revere Beach to Boston the run is over excellent macadam.

Frank Long Better; Joy in Auto Ranks

Frank J. Long, one of the veteran automobile men of Atlanta, who has been critically ill for some months, is much improved and on the road to recovery, it is stated.

Mr. Long has been engaged in the motor car industry almost since its inception. He is of the South and spent the early part of his life in the buggy business. When the automobile came into its own and showed signs of a future he was one of the first to see the possibilities.

When the Buick branch was opened in Atlanta Long was chosen as manager and after some time he organized a company known as the Olds-Oakland, selling Oldsmobiles and Oaklands in the South.

About three years ago Mr. Long became connected with the Cole organization and up to the present time has been in charge of the Cole interests in the Southern States. He is one of the most lovable men on "Automobile Row" and his hosts of friends who have been concerned over his condition rejoice in the news of his recovery. Mr. Long is now recuperating in the Carolinas and within a few weeks will be back home.

Overland Concern Changes Its Name

An important addition to Atlanta's colony of automobile tradesmen is C. W. Becker, the new manager of the Overland interests in the South.

Mr. Becker comes from Fenton, Mich., and though he has been in Atlanta only a few days, has already demonstrated the fact that live ones also come from that town. He is affable, aggressive, energetic and possesses a thorough knowledge of the motor car.

The name of the Atlanta Overland house has been changed to "The Overland Southern Automobile Company," with headquarters at the same place, Nos. 230-32 Peachtree street.

It is predicted that Mr. Becker will eclipse even the records of Lindsey Hopkins with the Overland, and as it is common talk about the street of another Overland sensation next year, the surmise will no doubt prove true.

Geo. W. Hanson Sells His First Oakland Car

Talmadge Carmichael Is Now McDonough Agent

Dealer Knocks Down Machine in Fifteen Minutes—Buyer's Quick Race to Get It.

Two weeks ago a story appeared in The American announcing that G. W. Hanson had completed arrangements to handle the Oakland line of cars. The following Monday morning, at 8 o'clock, Talmadge Carmichael, an automobile dealer at McDonough, appeared at Mr. Hanson's office to secure the agency for the Oakland in his city before someone beat him to it. He contracted for the agency and purchased an Oakland car on the spot.

That is the story of Mr. Hanson's first Oakland sale. The whole transaction did not consume more than fifteen minutes. Carmichael says:

"I was an old dealer for Mr. Hanson with the E.-M.-F. line, but a few years ago I decided to retire from the automobile business. Then, a year ago, I made up my mind to get back in the game and found to my dismay that Mr. Hanson already had a dealer in McDonough, so I took on another line.

When I read in The American that 'G. W.' had taken on the Oakland, I knew I had to hustle to get the agency and I didn't intend to let anyone beat me to the car, so I was right on the spot waiting for him to close the deal.

"Then it occurred to me that being the first purchaser of an Oakland from Mr. Hanson would be something that I would always be proud of, and as the car itself looked so good to me, I just bought it outright for my wife to drive.

"The Oakland is going to have a great future in the South, and under Mr. Hanson's management will gain friends by the hundreds as time goes by."

FAMOUS DRIVERS AT BRIGHTON

Interesting Talk of a Match Race Between Mulford and DePalma.

NEW YORK, July 19.—With an aggregation that will include the greatest present day racing drivers, the automobile race meet scheduled for Saturday afternoon, August 9, to be run on the Brighton Beach, Long Island, race track, promises to be the greatest matinee event ever held in this vicinity. Application for an A. A. A. sanction has been made by the Motor Dealers' Contest Association, an organization composed of prominent men in the local automobile trade who are promoting the meet.

Expect Both Drivers.

George Robertson, ex-race driver, who is chairman of the racing committee of the association, has been assured of the entries of Ralph DePalma and Ralph Mulford, both winners of the Vanderbilt Cup, who are anxious to give Eastern racing fans an exhibition of the speed of their new monster machines. It is likely that a match between DePalma and Mulford will be arranged.

In addition to these two pilots, who stand foremost in the automobile racing Hall of Fame, tentative entries have been made by Caleb Bragg, winner of last year's grand prize race; Spencer Wishard, Teddy Tetzlaff, Joe Horan, Mortimer Roberts, Dave Lewis, Harry Endicott and others. Armour Ferguson intends to enter his new Peugeot, which he purchased upon his return from Europe a few weeks ago. This car was driven recently by the late Zucarelli in the 500-mile race at Indianapolis.

Busy Improving Track.

M. L. Downs, who is taking the active management of the meet, has a gang of men at work on the Brighton Beach track, widening and cementing the turns. The track will be put into the best possible condition for speed and safety.

It is the intention of the Motor Dealers' Association to give several meets at Brighton this season and upon the success of the first will depend the holding of future events.

Practically every dealer on the Row has interested himself in some way or other in the meet and this co-operation augurs well for its success.

BOSTON-SALEM ROUTE.

On the main route from Boston to Salem the touring department of the Automobile Club of America reports the road closed between Revere Beach and Lynn. A detour of about a mile is necessary. The detour is easy to follow, as it is well posted. The roadway will be closed for about two weeks.

WELCOME "BULLET" TO MACON.

When "Bullet" Studebaker "30" reached its new home at Macon, the motoring devotees of the Southern town turned out en masse to welcome the 170,000-mile car that has been dubbed the "Grand Daddy of the Studebaker Tribe."

Two Live Motor Men Go With L. S. Crane

Of considerable local interest was the announcement Saturday that R. J. Slear, formerly with the Alexander-Seewald Company, the Vesta Electric and Supply Company, the Warner Instrument Company and the Stewart-Warner Speedometer Corporation, and Harold M. Gilbert, formerly with the Elyea-Austell Company, the Vesta Electric and Supply Company and the Southern Motorcycle Company, will be connected with L. S. Crane in his Pope-Hartford Agency.

Mr. Slear came to Atlanta from Pittsburg six years ago and will be office manager at No. 328 Peachtree. He knows the line thoroughly, and Mr. Crane is receiving congratulations on the acquisition.

Mr. Gilbert is a native of Duluth and came to Atlanta in 1896. Starting as a messenger for the Western Union Telegraph Company and the City Messenger Service, he quickly learned all about bicycles and motorcycles. In 1903 he was connected with the Lane Cycle Company, but soon came back to Atlanta for better opportunities. His specialty is motorcycles, and in this capacity he is expected to give as much satisfaction to users of Pope motorcycles as users receive from Pope automobiles.

A NATIONAL ROAD WOULD MAKE US BETTER NATION

President Enos, of the A. A. A., Gives Some Strong Arguments in Its Favor.

"The national road is one thing needed to make this country a bigger and better and greater nation," is the assertion of Laurens Enos, president of the American Automobile Association and head of the largest organized body of road users in the world.

"A vast amount of misinformation seems to exist regarding the usefulness of a national highway system. Primarily, it must be understood that every road entering into a system of national roads would be the main thoroughfare between centers of population and interest, and on that basis alone would be subject to a heavy traffic.

"Further, it is a well-known fact that the principal road between important centers runs through the most populous and progressive smaller cities and villages and the most thoroughly cultivated farming sections.

Route Fixed by Nature.

"Nature has fixed the locations of most large cities; and almost invariably, in this country at least, it will be found that the richest and most prosperous communities lie along the path of most direct communication between them. The construction of a national road system, therefore, would, in its through traffic features, accommodate a public from a wide belt of country through which the roads would run.

"In its local traffic features the national road would serve all the purposes of a local road. Passing, as it would, through the most populous sections, it would carry a larger amount of local traffic than roads located where there existed less prosperity and less advantages. The interurban travel would reach its highest development both between the smaller cities and the terminus and among the smaller cities themselves.

"With such a system crossing every State in the Union and reaching all important cities, it is not extravagant to assume that at least half the people of the country would be directly served, with benefits to the other half, while indirect, none the less pronounced.

"There are still some people who assume to believe that national roads are sought for the sole benefit of a few automobile tourists. Such have not kept track of the commercial development of the age. It is true that long-distance traffic on through routes is motor driven. With horse traffic limited to 40 or 50 miles a day, travelers for business or pleasure naturally utilize the conveyance which will take them 300 or 400 miles. The motor car is often used instead of the railroad train for two reasons—it is not confined to time schedules and it takes one where one wants to go.

"Traffic originates off as well as on the main road, many getting to the through road by the nearest route. Furthermore, the commercial aspect of the traffic of through routes is rapidly assuming greater proportions."

Accepts Place With Oakland

Nat Love, former Studebaker official who has joined George W. Hanson.

Nat E. Love has been made assistant manager to G. W. Hanson in the newly-organized company for distribution of Oakland cars in the South.

Mr. Love is one of the most capable "inside" automobile men in this section. His knowledge of the proper handling of details connected with the business of dealers, buyers and owners is profound, and he combines this knowledge with a personality that is so pleasing that the settlement of the most intricate problems is made easy.

Mr. Love has been identified with the automobile and accessory industry for over twelve years. He began his career with the Elyea-Austell Company, and for eight years was associated with this firm in different capacities.

Realizing his ability and training, Mr. Hanson secured his services in December, 1909, just a short time after he started the Georgia Motor Car Company. Mr. Love soon became Mr. Hanson's righthand man and now takes the same position with him in the interest of Oaklands in the South.

SOME HARDY MOTORING.

Field representatives of the Department of Agriculture often do hardy motoring in the wild regions of the West. L. W. Winsor, who covers a strip of the Rockies, travels hundreds of miles each week in Colorado and Utah, and takes his Studebaker roadster into some places that would be a severe test of pack mule ability.

Modern Motor Car Almost Fool Proof, Says an Old-Timer

Joe Bell, one of the real old-timers in the business, who has charge of the Carl H. Page Company's demonstrating cars, has had many opportunities of observing the almost colossal ignorance of carelessness of the average motorist.

"If the up-to-date automobile were not constructed of such high grade materials and so as to be almost foolproof a large number of them would be beyond even our power of repairing, owing to the neglect and carelessness of the owners," said he.

As a result of these observations, Bell has jotted down a few hints for the care of the car:

"Persistent running of an engine with too rich a mixture will result in grinding valves and carbon scraping every thousand miles. When a motor first starts cold, it requires a rich mixture, because when cold the gasoline vaporizes slowly.

"Many drivers will adjust their carburetor immediately after starting, which invariably results in too much gasoline. Let your engine run awhile in the morning, even if it is not at its best, and it will gradually come up to full power. Remember the old saying: 'The hardest thing to learn about a carburetor is to learn to leave it alone.'

"Don't start on a trip without a roll of adhesive tape. It is one of the handiest things to have in a kit. It will insulate a wire, stop rattles, repair a broken pipe or gas tube—and it will cover a bad cut in a tire.

"Wherever possible, use the same grade of lubrication oil. It is bothersome to carry an extra can on a trip, but the motor will appreciate it. Never mix motor oils. Two otherwise good oils when mixed have been known to cause grief."

Make Ford Car And Start Motor In 2 1-2 Minutes

The rapidity with which cars are made in the plant of the Ford Motor Company was shown recently when a gang assembled a car complete and ran it off under its own power in just two and one-half minutes.

The operation was performed for the benefit of a picture concern, and the picture will be shown throughout the country.

Under the manufacturing schedule now current at the Ford plant a car is produced every forty seconds, but of course, a number of cars are being assembled at the same time.

For the motion picture machine, however, the entire operation was gone through singly. A place was cleared on the assembling floor and the camera focused. Then eight men went to work. The frame was set up, the axles placed, the motor installed, the wheels attached, the transmission connected up, the body bolted in place, all accessories, including lamps, horn, etc., fastened on properly, tank filled and the crank given a turn which started the motor as a driver took his seat. The car moved out to the loading platform in just two and one-half minutes.

A number of pictures were taken around the Ford plant, and the operator was fortunate enough to catch Mr. Ford personally testing the big 5,000-horsepower gas engine which will soon be supplying power to the Ford factory.

PYKE TAKES FIRST PRIZE.

Harry Pyke, head salesman for Carl H. Page Company, distributors for Chalmers cars, was awarded a valuable gold watch by Hugh Chalmers. Mr. Pyke made the greatest number of sales of Chalmers cars in the States. The presentation of prizes was made this week. There were several other prizes. Mr. Pyke got first prize.

REPUBLIC STAGGARD TREAD TIRES

Ride in safety over slippery pavements

You men who are often compelled to "let her out" can indulge in bursts of speed with less fear of skidding and slewing.

The long, sturdy studs (six rows of them) in the Staggard Tread Tire give your car a good "purchase" on slippery pavements and make skidding an almost negligible factor.

There's extra mileage in the Original, Effective Non-skid Tire, too. The studs form an extra tread over the ordinary, plain tread so that you really have two wearing surfaces.

Let us equip your car. See us at once.

Exclusive "More Mileage" advantages in Diamond Tires that cost no more

The greatest mileage at the least expense is what you most desire in a tire.

This is what we have demanded from our Chemists, our Engineers, our Tire Builders and factory experts—and here is their answer—

Diamond (No Clinch) Tires

Chemists: Vitalized Rubber—pure, lusty, young rubber put through a process that toughens and makes it road-resisting, with no loss of life or elasticity.

Engineers: Perfect 3-Point Rim Contact, that prevents all forms of rim troubles, such as cutting against the rim and breaking above the bead.

Tire Builders: A No-Clinch more air-room tire, giving added resiliency and perfect balanced construction.

Then we protected the inner tube with a No-Pinch Safety Flap.

And, best of all, these exclusive Diamond advantages cost you no more. They insure liberal mileage and freedom from tire troubles.

So this time buy Diamond Vitalized Rubber Tires—you can get them to fit your rims from

Diamond Dealers Everywhere

FISK Tubes

Are Not Simply Tubes

They Are Dollars in Your Pocket Because They Greatly Reduce Your Tube Expense

FISK TUBES ARE PERFECT. There is no guess work, no chance about them. We have doubled the service and halved the expense for thousands of tube buyers. We can do it for you. Our confidence is based on a long record of actual accomplishment.

Fisk Tubes are pure gum tubes, made of the finest Pure Para Rubber vulcanized by the aid of sulphur to exactly the right degree to produce long life. You cannot take one of them in your hand without appreciating its quality from the texture.

Fisk Tubes have an original splicing which makes thin spots impossible. They are never porous. The construction is such that no imperfection can be present to develop a slow, but constant leak of air.

THE FISK RUBBER COMPANY OF N. Y.

How Did Life Begin? What IS Life?

It Never "Began" on This Planet Surely. And Probably It Never Had a Beginning. This Is Michael Angelo's Conception of Life's Creation Shown in His Great Decoration in the Sistine Chapel, in St. Peter's, at Rome.

Copyright, 1913, by the Star Company. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

YOU are a living being, possessing CONSCIOUSNESS.

All that we know about ourselves is that we live, that we observe, that we are CONSCIOUS—that is to say, we know, or think we know, what is going on around us.

We are CONSCIOUS to a limited extent only. We see certain kinds of color, and others we cannot see.

We see certain rays of light, and at the top and bottom of our little gamut there are others that our eyes cannot perceive.

We hear certain sounds, and other sounds that are heard by the insects are too fine for our ears, just as certain big sounds that we hear—the thunder, etc.—are probably not heard by the ants at our feet.

All that we know about ourselves is THAT WE ARE ALIVE. But we really do not know what life is.

♠ ♠ ♠

Some human beings will say: "I don't care what life is." They can comfort themselves with the thought that they are on a par, intellectually, with the naked gentleman living in the middle of Africa.

Real proof of human intelligence is interest in abstract questions, a desire to solve great problems, and a refusal to give in and admit that we can never know.

A REAL human being would like to know what life is, where it began, when it began, and especially TO WHAT IT LEADS. All the questions of the day—finance, industry, and all the rest of it—are as nothing, fit only for the minds of children and savages, as compared with the great eternal questions of life and eternity with which the real intellect of man has struggled for centuries.

As you sit, looking at this paper, your eyes are made up of endless millions upon millions and billions upon billions of atoms, gathered into molecules, they in turn forming the tissue of your eye upon which the type of this newspaper is reflected.

You hold the paper up. The black type is reflected from the sheet of paper upon your eyes. And the reflection upon your eye, by the way, IS UPSIDE DOWN. That is why babies at first see everything upside down.

Your optic nerve has learned to turn things around so that you see this printing right side up.

The nerve carries the message to the brain and the brain tells you what is printed here.

You are a being made up of atoms. The atom in its turn is divided into electrons, inconceivably small units of electric energy. The entire body is made up of electricity, grouped in atoms and molecules in various ways, getting its varying character often, probably, from vibration.

The mind cannot imagine the atom, much less the electron which makes up the atom. In an intensely interesting article in the current number of Hearst's Magazine, Sir William Ramsay says:

> It is difficult to give an idea of such minuteness, but it may perhaps be realized as follows: A gas like air consists of small particles termed molecules, of oxygen and nitrogen, chiefly. Air can be made liquid by cooling it; in liquefying it contracts, so that these particles in liquid air are about ten times as near each other as they are in ordinary gaseous air, and a thousand volumes of the gaseous air give one volume of liquid. The smallest object that we can see with the naked eye—the smallest speck of dust—is composed of at least a million million of such particles, a thousand times as many as there are inhabitants on this earth; and the minutest object which the microscope reveals still contains a million molecules.

A grain of dust floating in sunlight, so small that you could not possibly see it if the light of the sun did not make it brilliant, is a million million times as big as the fundamental particles of which your body is composed. And those fundamental particles in their turn, the atoms, are divided into electrons. And the electron, undoubtedly, in its turn is divided and subdivided as minutely again.

Try to conceive of the extraordinary fact that the child you see before you that you yourself represent simply the infinite diversity that can be transmitted in such a minute particle of matter.

♠ ♠ ♠

The germ of life by which we are created can bring with it the peculiarity of ancestors that go back not only for generations, but for hundreds of years. A child may inherit musical ability from its grandparents, or physical peculiarities from its great-grandparents, qualities that the parents have not possessed. And these qualities are transmitted from one generation to the other in a form that seems to us infinitesimally small. But the marvel is explained when we realize that a particle of matter the size of a grain of dust hardly visible is divided into a million million other separate particles, and they in turn into electric units of energy.

The old religious gentlemen used to discuss the number of angels that could dance upon the point of a needle. The discussion seemed silly.

But if you could imagine each angel no bigger than an electron, or even as big as an atom, you could take as many angels as there are human beings on this entire earth—and they could all dance on the point of a needle and find it a comfortable, airy ballroom.

♠ ♠ ♠

In discussing the question, "How did life begin?" the first and most important question is: Is it necessary that life should always be derived from life?

That is to say, must every living thing have a living creature back of it to explain its existence, or can life be produced scientifically, applying chemicals or other influences to lifeless, inorganic matter?

Professor Loeb believes that he can supply one-half of the life quality—that certain lower forms of life can be produced by chemical action and the living being developed without any "father."

The great student in this field is Dr. Bastian, who has been dealing with the problem of artificial life for fifty years, and who believes that he has actually created life. His statement is that he can take certain particles of inorganic matter, subject them to a degree of heat in boiling water that would make life impossible, if the particles were living, and then by exposing them "to diffused light for three months," find them changed into living organisms.

These artificially created beings, according to Dr. Bastian, can be kept living and can reproduce their kind.

In the opinion of many who have a right to speak, the Bastian theory was satisfactorily refuted by Professor Tyndall.

He showed that the alleged creation of a living being probably was to be found in the fact that the experimenter had not really excluded life from the experiment. He declared that if those alleged living beings were kept away from spores, by filtering air through cotton wool, or by letting the air stand in a box coated with sticky materials, the life would not be forthcoming artificially. All experiments made under Tyndall's directions did fail to produce the results.

♠ ♠ ♠

But the ordinary human being is not interested so much in the deep researches of the scientists, in their complicated microscopic studies and chemical tests, as in the one great question: "What is life, how did it begin, when, if ever, will it end, what will it lead to?"

Michael Angelo, in his great decoration of the Sistine Chapel, in St. Peter's—the Chapel named in honor of Pope Sixtus—shows the human creation of life as religion teaches it.

Adam, naked, is reclining on his side, and God, the Creator, represented as an old man with a gray beard, and a cloak, with arms and hands and eyes, and legs and feet, stretches out the tip of his right finger, touches the tip of Adam's finger and gives life to Adam.

At the same time, hidden under his cloak, scarcely visible, and not yet produced upon the earth, God holds Eve and some children in reserve.

That was the old idea of the creation of life. Religion taught that the universe had been absolutely empty forever and forever. Only God was in it, there was nothing else.

After a certain time, which must have been very long, the ruler of all this empty space decided to create this planet. And at the same time he created the stars, which we now know to be suns millions of times the size of this planet, and millions of times older than this planet.

Having made the earth and the stars, the all-powerful God created man "out of the red earth," and then put life into him.

Until the days of Leonardo Da Vinci those who dug up old fossils—animals of different kinds—believed that those were experiments which God once made, trying to make up his mind what kind of animals he wanted. When he found that he didn't like them, he left them as they were, and didn't put life into them.

Leonardo, the great painter, was the first man who suggested what every child to-day knows that they had actually at one time been living creatures that had turned into stone.

♠ ♠ ♠

The question, "How did life get on this planet?" is easy enough to answer, without the need of miraculous creation.

No intelligent man, clergyman or otherwise, now accepts or preaches the sudden creation in one week of the earth and man and the animals upon it.

Every human being KNOWS, if he knows anything, that this earth is millions of years old; that the animals lived here millions upon millions of years before man appeared, and that man himself has been on this planet for at least a quarter of a million years and probably longer.

We see fossil animals that have died out—the monstrous dinosaurs, ninety feet long; the great lizards that flew through the air, the mammoths.

Everything shows us that the form of life on this earth has changed, through the ages, through the millions of years, until at last man came.

And everything in man and in the other animals has been handed down to us from animals that came here ahead of us.

The five fingers on man's hand correspond to the five toes of the salamander that lived in the Carboniferous era, millions of years ago.

All the wonders of life, the marvels of the body, have been handed down from one age of animal life to another, changing with conditions, changing as the atmosphere changed, until we have produced the animals of our day, and man who rules them.

♠ ♠ ♠

HOW COULD LIFE COME TO THIS EARTH IF IT WERE NOT CREATED HERE MIRACULOUSLY, ACCIDENTALLY OR SCIENTIFICALLY?

Very simply.

As you read this, our earth is being bombarded by meteors that come from the outside, flying through space. These masses of solid matter come, we know not whence—perhaps they are pieces of worlds that have exploded and gone to pieces, perhaps the results of collisions in space.

Anyhow, WE KNOW that our atmosphere is constantly struck by flying particles. A majority of these are small and melt or burn up as they strike our comparatively heavy atmosphere.

What we call a shooting star is simply a red-hot, molten meteor, coming from the outside world, striking our heavy air, and falling to the earth.

From some such flying messenger of the outer world life could have been brought to our planet. We know now that life is not destroyed BY COLD. Although we believe that all life is destroyed by a certain degree of heat.

Meteors flying through the inconceivably cold spaces that separate the planets could bring life with them in some microscopic form, and, plunging safely through our atmosphere, deposit the beginning of life in the ocean.

We know that all life DID begin in the water, and thence travelled to the land.

And we know that the lowest forms of life, beginning with the single cell on this planet, developed every other form.

We do not need to guess about this, for the embryologist, studying the life of the human being, from the day it starts until its birth, SEES THE DOUBLE CELL OF LIFE GO THROUGH ALL THE FORMS OF ANIMAL LIFE, UNTIL AT LAST, AT THE PROPER HOUR, A DEVELOPED HUMAN CHILD APPEARS.

The great marvels of life are to be studied in that period before birth, when at one time only the microscope, and that with difficulty, can tell the difference between the unborn human child and the lower animals.

♠ ♠ ♠

In his article in the current issue of Hearst's Magazine, already referred to, Sir William Ramsay, a very great and earnest scientist, discusses interestingly the origin of life in the course of a study of microbes and germ life.

His conclusion is:

> If it may be permitted to an outsider to risk an opinion, it is that the question is not one which can ever be settled. For on first grounds it would appear not unlikely that Nature is always producing life; but it is also almost certain that no one could recognize primordial organisms, on account of their extreme minuteness and simplicity of form. If such organisms are being formed, and if they exist, no doubt they would in the course of ages develop into one of a recognizable form; but proof would appear to be almost impossible.

Thus far there is absolutely no proof that life has been created artificially, and all assertions to the contrary are foolish.

The egg of a sea-urchin may be treated with chemicals, and life produced, but that means nothing.

You can take the egg of a hen, put it in an incubator and, under proper conditions, develop life. But you must have the egg first and back of the egg there must be the hen. Back of the sea-urchin's egg, artificially fertilized, there must be the mother of that egg.

The fact is that human beings must probably reconcile themselves to the thought that life NEVER DID BEGIN.

Our little lives form our little opinion. We BEGIN in the cradle, and we END in the grave. As we begin and end we think that everything else must begin and end.

But simple common sense teaches us that TIME could never begin. You couldn't imagine any particular moment when time started. There must have been time back of that.

And a child of ten can realize that there cannot be any possible limit to SPACE—this universe MUST be without limit. If you say that the end of the universe is a billion trillion miles away in a straight line, how will you answer the question, "What is beyond that?"

It doesn't need science, only plain common sense, to teach us that time never had a beginning, that it never will have an end, that space, or what children would call BIGNESS, is absolutely without limit.

And difficult as it is for us to conceive it, we shall probably settle down to the belief that life itself never began.

Fortunately science and religion agree in saying that life will never end.

On this and other planets and suns, for millions and millions of years, life will continue in different forms. And always the quality of life will be expressed in the old philosopher's formula, "I think, therefore I am."

Life is thought, consciousness is thought. And that which is thought in us, that power in our consciousness which plans and executes, the power that unites the Atlantic and the Pacific Oceans, that builds great buildings and digs tunnels, is the same power, although feebler, in the jellyfish, which floats at the will of the waves, which shows "thought" only in a feeble capacity for withdrawing itself from danger.

Man is a wonderful, thinking, living being compared with the mass of jelly that we call a jellyfish. He probably has in the great suns that the telescope shows us bigger and older brothers, that are as far above him as he is above the jellyfish.

♠ ♠ ♠

Time never began and never can end. Space has no limit and can have none.

Matter itself is probably infinite, without end. We have no reason to think that our little corner of infinite space is occupied and the rest "empty."

Contemplation of this universe, any effort to get our thoughts away from our own little front yards, and our own little plans of life tires the mind, but it is worth while.

Man rises above the animal only AS HE RISES ABOVE THIS EARTH, in his thoughts and in his interests.

To our readers we again recommend the article upon which this editorial is based—written by Sir William Ramsay—in the current number of Hearst's Magazine.

It is an article that intelligent men and women should read.

Hearst's Magazine sets a good example and does useful work, making the best scientific thought plain, insisting, rightly, that the people of this country are interested in great questions and that the bigger the question and the more important the truth, the greater will be the interest of the average American citizen.

♠ ♠ ♠

What is life? We don't know. We only know it is the power that enables us to think and progress, and by the use of force control matter.

When did life begin—how did it begin—when will it end?

We don't know. We only know that we possess it, and that our duty is to use it as well as we can, showing gratitude for the work done by the living beings back of us, by doing that which will make happier the living beings that are to follow.

LIFE, FORCE, MATTER are the three things which we see, or believe we see.

We know that matter and force are indestructible. Faith, science and common sense teach us that consciousness or life, the power that controls matter and force, must also be indestructible.

Matter and force undergo changes. Life or consciousness may undergo similar changes.

Matter and force may be the same, for all matter may be reduced down to electrons, units of electricity. And all force may be a demonstration of electric power in different form.

Everything except the little work that we are doing, the cleaning of the kitchen, the preaching of the sermon, the digging of the ditch—all outside of that is mystery to us.

But we know THAT WE HAVE LIFE.

And we know by the experience of a few thousand years that history records, and by the experience of millions of years that geology reveals to us, THAT THIS EARTH IS GOVERNED WISELY, JUSTLY AND SAFELY.

We see rolling through space suns with their planets that are hundreds of millions of years older than our little solar system. We live on an earth warmed by a sun a million times as big as our earth. And we see with the telescope another sun a million times as big as our own sun.

We know that everything in this vast universe, from the greatest sun to the smallest living germ of life, is under just government.

We no longer imagine God the ruler of this great universe as Michael Angelo imagined him. We do not think of him as a man with beard and a cloak. But we do know that the ruling power is JUSTICE, unchanging law, and that life is worth while, since the humblest possessor of life and consciousness is a sharer in all the activities of the universe and may hope for progress and change unending and leading to the highest.

The Sacrifice of the "Woman Thou Gavest Me"

Hall Caine's Powerful Serial in HEARST'S MAGAZINE Relates How Mary O'Neill Is Compelled to Give Up Her Baby and Seek Work to Support It.

Synopsis.

Daniel O'Neill, a powerful, self-made man, forces his only daughter, Mary, into a loveless marriage with the impecunious and profligate Lord Raa, so that his ambition to have his descendants the rightful heirs of the one earldom in Ellan may be realized. Mary, a convent-raised young woman, shocked to find her husband a man of sordid, sensual passions, refuses utterly to have anything to do with him until such time as he can prove himself worthy of her love. During the honeymoon abroad Alma Lier, a divorcee who had been expelled from the convent Mary attended in Rome, attaches herself to the party, and makes the "honeymoon trip" a long series of slights and insults for Lady Raa.

At last Lady Raa becomes certain of the infidelity of her husband and his misconduct with Alma Lier. On her return to London Mary encounters her old play-fellow, Martin Conrad, who has returned from his triumphant expedition to the Antarctic. Drawn into ever-closer relations with the only man for whose friendship she had ever cared, Mary finally awakes to the fact that she is hopelessly in love with Martin. Terrified by this knowledge, and finding herself more and more in love with Martin, she determines to run away from the cause of her distress, and go home.

Mary's home-coming to Castle Raa is a sad affair. Her husband fills the tumble-down old mansion with his fast friends from London, including Alma Lier, who assumes control of the household. Ultimately the illness of her father offers Mary excuse for escape from the intolerable environment. But before visiting her old home Mary appeals in turn to her Bishop and to her father's lawyer, only to be told that neither Church nor State can offer any relief from her false position. She returns next day to Castle Raa to find that Martin is arriving for a farewell visit, and that by Alma Lier's deceitful scheming the whole house-party has gone off for a few days' cruise.

During her three days alone with her lover Mary fights a grim battle with temptation, only to find on the last night that her faith in renunciation and the laws of the Church is a fragile thing compared with her overwhelming love for this pure-hearted man. With Martin's passionate words, "You are my real wife. I am your real husband!" ringing in her brain she forgets everything else, and with strong stens walks across the corridor to Martin's bedroom. This is the action which Martin has advised as being the only course open to them which is sure to bring the one result they are determined to attain—Mary's divorce from Lord Raa.

Mary determines, after the departure of Martin Conrad, to hide herself in London. She is driven by fear of Lord Raa's discovery of her unfaithfulness to him; she is equally afraid of the venomous tongue of Alma Lier. She is no sooner settled in a cheap little boarding house in London than a great hue and cry is raised by her father. Of all persons, it is Mildred, that one truest friend of her convent days, who ferrets her out; but for Mary's sake she breaks a vow and refuses to give her up. Then comes the report of the loss of Martin's ship in the Antarctic. Desperate with grief and fearful for the unborn child which she hopes shall reconcile her to her empty life and typify her great love for Martin, she flees from Mildred to a still more obscure corner of London, and there her child is born.

(Published by Permission of, and Copyrighted, 1913, by HEARST'S Magazine.)

I THINK it must have been the morning of the next day following when the nurse who had attended me in my confinement came to see how I was going along.

I told her of the dimness of my sight and the aching of my eyeballs, whereupon she held up her hands and cried: "There now! What did I tell you? Didn't I say it is after a lady feels it?"

The moral of her prediction was that being in a delicate state of health, and having "let myself low" before the baby was born, it was my duty to wean her immediately.

I could not do it.

Although my nurse's advice was supported by my Welsh landlady (with various prognostications of consumption and rickets), I could not at first deny myself the fierce, wild heavenly joy of nursing my baby.

But a severer monitor soon came to say that I must. I found that my money was now reduced to little more than two pounds, and that I was confronted by the necessity (which I had so long put off) of looking for employment.

I could not look for employment until I had found a nurse for my child, and I could not find a nurse until my baby could do without me, so when Isabel was three weeks old I began to wean her.

At first I contented myself with the hours of night, keeping a feeding-bottle in bed, with the cow's milk warmed to the heat of my own body. But when baby cried for the breast during the day I could not find it in my heart to deny her.

That made the time of weaning somewhat longer than it should have been, but I compromised with my conscience by reducing still further my meagre expenses.

Must I tell how I did so? Thinking of what [illegible] dear I must.

Although it was the month of July there was a snap of cold weather such as sometimes comes in the middle of our English Summer. In spite of this I gave up having a fire in my room, and for the cooking of my food I bought a small alcohol stove which cost me a shilling.

This tempted me to conduct which has since had consequences, and I am half ashamed and half afraid to speak of it. My baby linen being little I had to wash it frequently, and having no fire I....dried it on my own body.

Oh, I see now it was reckless foolishness, almost wilful madness, but I thought nothing of it then. I was poor, and perhaps I was proud, and I could not afford a fire. And then a mother's love is as deep as the sea, and there was nothing in the wide world which I would not have done to keep my darling a little longer beside me.

When baby was weaned at last I had next to think of a nurse, and that was a still more painful ordeal. To give my child to another woman, who was to be the same as another mother to her, was almost more than I could bear to think about.

I had to think of it. But I could only do so by telling myself that when I put baby out to nurse I might arrange to see her every morning and evening and as often as my employment permitted.

Hall Caine, Author of "The Woman Thou Gavest Me."

I seemed to fly back to that hour when he said, "The first thing we've got to do is to get you a divorce."

This idea partly reconciled me to my sacrifice, and I was in the act of drawing up a newspaper advertisment in these terms when my landlady came to say that my nurse knew of somebody who would suit me exactly.

Nurse called the same evening and told me a long story about her friend.

She was a Mrs. Oliver, and she lived at Ilford, which was at the other end of London and quite on the edge of the country. The poor woman, who was not very happily married, had lost a child of her own lately, and was now very lonely, being devoted to children.

This pleased me extremely, especially (God forgive me!) the fact that Mrs. Oliver was a bereaved mother and lived on the edge of the country.

Already in my mind's eye I saw her sitting on sunny days under a tree (perhaps in an orchard) with Isabel in her arms, rocking her gently and singing to her softly, and almost forgetting that she was not her own baby whom she had lost....though that was a two-edged sword which cut me both ways, being a sort of wild joy with tears lurking behind it.

So I took a note of Mrs. Oliver's address (10 Lennard's Row, Lennard's Green, Ilford) and wrote to her the same night, asking her terms and stating my own conditions.

A reply came the following day. It was a badly-written and misspelt letter, which showed me that Mrs. Oliver must be a working woman (perhaps the wife of a gardener or farm-laborer, I thought), though that did not trouble me in the least, knowing by this time how poor people loved their children.

"The terms is fore shillins a weke," she wrote, "but i am that lonelie sins my own littel one lef me i wood tike your swete darlin for nothin if I cud afford it, and you can cum to see her as often as you pleas."

In my ignorance and simplicity this captured me completely, so I replied at once saying I would take baby to Ilford the next day.

I did all this in a rush, but when it came to the last moment I could hardly part with my letter, and I remember that I passed three pillar-boxes in the front street before I posted it.

I suppose my eyes must have been red when I got home, for my landlady (whom I had taken into my confidence about my means) took me to task for crying, telling me I ought to thank God for what had happened, which was like a message from heaven, look you, and a dispensation of Providence.

I tried to see things in that light, though it was difficult to do so, for the darker my prospects grew the more radiant shone the light of the little angel by whose life I lived, and the harder it seemed to live without her.

"But it isn't like losing my child altogether, is it?" I said.

"'Deed no, and 'twill be better for both of you," said my landlady.

"Although Ilford is a long way off I can go there every day, can't I?"

"'Deed thee can, if thee'st not minding a journey of nine miles or more."

"And if I can get a good situation and earn a little money I may be able to have baby back and hire somebody to nurse her, and so keep her all to myself."

"And why shouldn't thee?" said my Welsh landlady. "Thee reading print like the young minister and writing letters like a copy-book!"

So in the fierce bravery of motherly love I dried my eyes and forced back my sobs, and began to pack up my baby's clothes, and to persuade myself that I was still quite happy.

My purse was very low by this time. After paying my rent and some other expenses I had only one pound and a few shillings left.

At half-past seven next morning I was ready to start on my journey.

I took a hasty glance at myself in the glass before going out, and I thought my eyes were too much like the sky at daybreak—all joyful beams with a veil of mist in front of them.

But I made myself believe that never since baby was born had I been so happy. I was sure I was doing the best for her. I was also sure I was doing the best for myself, for what could be so sweet to a mother as providing for her child?

My Welsh landlady had told me it was nine miles to Ilford, and I had gathered that I could ride all the way in successive omnibuses for less than a shilling. But shillings were scarce with me now, so I determined to walk all the way.

Emmerjane, by her own urgent entreaty, carried baby as far as the corner of the Bayswater road. There the premature little woman left me, after nearly smothering baby with kisses.

"Keep straight as a' arrow, and you can't lose your wye," she said.

It was one of those beautiful mornings in early August when the air is fresh and the sun is soft, and the Summer, even in London, has not yet had time to grow tired and dusty.

I felt as light as the air itself. I had put baby's feeding-bottle in my pocket and hung her surplus linen in a parcel about my wrist, so I had nothing to carry in my arms except baby herself, and at first I did not feel her weight.

"Do you like children?" I asked her. Looking down over her shoulder at baby she replied, "Can't say I'm particularly gone on them. Mother's had nine."

There were not many people in the West End streets at that early hour, though a few were riding in the Park, and when I came to the large houses in Lancaster Gate I saw that though the sun was shining on the windows most of the blinds were down.

I must have been walking slowly, for it was half-past eight when I reached the Marble Arch. There I encountered the first cross-tide of traffic, but somebody, seeing baby, took me by the arm and led me safely over.

The great "Mediterranean of Oxford Street" was by this time running at full tide. People were pouring out of the tube and underground stations and clambering on to the motorbuses. But in the rush nobody hustled or jostled me. A woman with a child in her arms was like a queen—everybody made way for her.

Once or twice I stopped to look at the shops. Some of the dressmakers' windows were full of beautiful costumes. I did not covet any of them. I remembered the costly ones I had bought in Cairo, and how little happiness they had brought me. And then I felt as if the wealth of the world were in my arms.

Nevertheless the whole feminine soul in me awoke when I came upon a shop for the sale of babies' clothes. Already I foresaw a time when baby, dressed in pretty things like these, would be running about Lennard's Green and plucking up the flowers in Mrs. Oliver's garden.

The great street was very long, and I thought it would never end. But I think I must have been still fresh and happy while we passed through the foreign quarter of Soho, for I remember that when two young Italian waiters, standing at the door of their cafe, asked each other in their own language which of us (baby or I) was "the bambino," I turned to them and smiled.

Before I came to Chancery Lane, however, baby began to cry for her food, and I was glad to slip down a narrow alley into Lincoln's Inn Fields and sit on a seat in the garden while I gave her the bottle. It was then ten o'clock, the sun was high and the day was becoming hot.

When I resumed my journey I thought the rest must have done me good, but before I reached the Holborn Viaduct fatigue was beginning to gain on me.

I saw that I must be approaching some great hospital, for hospital nurses were now passing me constantly, and one of them, who was going my way, stepped up and asked me to allow her to carry baby. She looked so sweet and motherly that I let her do so, and as we walked along we talked.

She asked me if I was going far, and I said no, only to the other end of London, the edge of the country, to Ilford.

"Ilford!" she cried. "Why, that's miles and miles away. You'll have to ride as far as Aldgate, then change for Bow, and then change again to Stratford Market."

I told her I preferred to walk, being such a good walker, and she gave me a searching look, but said no more on that subject.

Then she asked me how old baby was and whether I was nursing her myself, and I answered that baby was six weeks, and I had been forced to wean her, being supposed to be delicate, and besides——

"Ah, perhaps you are putting her out to nurse," she said, and I answered yes, and that was the reason I was going to Ilford.

"I see," she said, with another searching look, and then it flashed upon me that she had formed her own conclusions about what had befallen me.

When we came to a great building in a side street on the left, with ambulance vans passing in and out of a wide gateway, she said she was sorry she could not carry baby any farther, because she was due in the hospital, where the house-doctor would be waiting for her.

"But I hope baby's nurse will be a good one. They're not always that, you know," she said.

I was not quite so happy when the hospital nurse left me. The parcel on my wrist was feeling heavier than before, and my feet were beginning to drag. But I tried to keep a good heart, as I faced the crowded thoroughfares—Newgate with its cruel old prison, the edge of St. Paul's, and the corner of St. Martin's-le-Grand, and so on into Cheapside.

Cheapside itself was almost impassable. Merchants, brokers, clerks and city men generally in tall silk hats were hurrying and sometimes running along the pavement, making me think of the river by my father's house, whose myriad little waves seemed to my fancy as a child to be always struggling to find out which could get to Murphy's Mouth the first, and so drown itself in the sea.

People were still very kind to me, though, and if anybody brushed me in passing he raised his hat; and if any one pushed me accidentally he stopped to say he was sorry.

Of course baby was the talisman that protected me from harm, and what I should have done without her when I got to the Mansion House I do not know, for that seemed to be the central heart of all the London traffic, with its motor-buses and taxicabs going in different directions and its tremendous tides of human life flowing every way.

It was then twelve o'clock, and baby was once more crying for her food, so I looked for a place in which I might rest while I gave her the bottle again.

Suddenly I came upon what I wanted. It seemed to be a garden, but it was a graveyard—one of the graveyards of the old London churches, enclosed by high buildings now, and overlooked by office windows.

Such a restful place, so green, so calm, so beautiful! Lying there in the midst of the tumultuous London traffic, it reminded me of one of the little islands in the middle of our Ellan Glens, on which the fuchsia and wild rose grow while the river rolls and boils about it.

I had just sat down on a seat that had been built about a gnarled and blackened old oak tree, and was giving baby her food, when I saw that a young girl was sitting beside me.

Presently she looked at baby with her little eyes, which were like a pair of shiny boot buttons, and said, "That your child?"

I answered her, and then she asked, "Do you like children?"

I answered her again, and asked her if she did not like them also.

"Can't say I'm particularly gone on them," she said, whereupon I replied that was probably because she had not yet had much experience.

"Oh, haven't I? Perhaps I haven't," she said, and then with a hard little laugh, "Mother's had nine, though.

I asked if she was a shop assistant, and with a toss of her head she told me she was a typist.

"Better job and your evenings off," she said and then she returned to the subject of children.

One of her chums in the office who used to go out with her every night to the music halls got into trouble a year or two ago. As a consequence she had to marry. And what was the result? Never had her nose out of the wash tub now!

The story was crude enough, yet it touched me closely.

Very Odd Reminiscences About the Late King Edward--By His Chauffeur

JUDICIOUS friends of the British monarchy continue to be grieved at the literary efforts of various blunder-headed admirers of the late King Edward to defend his character.

British society has already been shocked by "King Edward in His True Colors," the book of Edward Legge, who depicted the King as a large-hearted monarch who enjoyed himself heartily and became furious whenever anybody interfered with his pleasures.

That work, however, was a masterpiece of tact compared with the latest book, "What I Know—Reminiscences of Five Years' Personal Attendance Upon His Late Majesty, King Edward VII," by C. W. Stamper, published by Boon & Mills, London. Mr. Stamper was an expert automobile machinist who looked after all the King's motor cars and sat beside the chauffeur whenever His Majesty went riding.

It has been stated that King George offered Mr. Stamper $750 not to publish his book, but the offer was declined. Any intelligent person who reads the book will at once understand why King George was so reckless with his money.

Mr. Stamper asserts with much emphasis that King Edward was "a great man," and that "his were great ways." The anecdotes illustrating the King's greatness usually describe how he lost his temper and swore violently whenever anything went wrong. His great keenness of perception is illustrated by the fact that he could tell when anybody within six feet of him had been eating onions.

"One afternoon just as I was about to bring the car around to take His Majesty for a run," says Mr. Stamper, "I received a private message from the sergeant footman advising me on no account to come too near to His Majesty's person. Greatly surprised, I asked what he meant, when he reminded me that my lunch that day consisted largely of steak and onions. I was not the only one who had partaken of that succulent dish, and guessing that the aliaceous properties of the onions had already caused trouble that afternoon, I was careful to take the advice, and while I was out with the car to keep as far from His Majesty as I possibly could. Afterward I heard what had happened. It appeared that after lunch His Majesty asked to see the Postmaster and the courier. Calling the sergeant-footman, the King was proceeding to tell him to summon them before him, when he stopped short and looked at the man.

"'Hawkins, you've been eating onions.'

"'No, Your Majesty.'

"'Yes, you have. I am sure you have. Send Mr. Hiley here at once. And Mr. Fehr.'

"'Yes, Your Majesty.'

"The sergeant-footman withdrew, and presently the Postmaster was announced. The King called him to his side, and was beginning to read him a telegram he wanted him to dispatch, when:

"'Hiley, you've been eating onions,' His Majesty cried.

"'No, Your Majesty,' said the Postmaster, instinctively recoiling.

"'Yes, you have. It's disgraceful.'

"For the rest of the interview the unfortunate Postmaster kept his distance, and when His Majesty had given his orders withdrew from the royal presence with a haste that was almost precipitate. The courier entered the room. He approached very warily, but His Majesty's sense of smell was keen, and all Mr. Fehr's efforts to suppress the facts of the case were unavailing. The King looked up sharply and sat back in his chair.

"'I'm dashed if you haven't been eating onions, too.'

"'I'm afraid, perhaps, the chef must have put some into the soup.'

"'Tell the chef he's not to put onions in the soup.'

"'Yes, Your Majesty.'

"'I won't have my servants eating onions. It's disgusting.'"

King Edward was always in a great hurry whether in automobiling or anything else. He insisted on passing any car that was ahead of him in the road, but was exceedingly annoyed whenever the chauffeur got him into any danger.

"One afternoon during his stay at Rufford Abbey we took His Majesty for a drive to Newark," writes Stamper. "In the course of the run we came to a long incline where the road was straight and the surface good. Down this we were traveling at a good pace, when all of a sudden we came upon a culvert. There was no time to slow down, and as we went over it the car jumped off the ground, and then kicked rather badly. Directly I had seen the culvert I had been afraid that this might happen, and I was not surprised when I heard His Majesty cry:

"'Stop, stop! Do you want to kill me? Just look at my hat.'

"With this the King leaned forward and held out his brown bowler for me to see.

"'I have been thrown up against the roof of the car,' he added, but the hat really spoke for itself. The outward curve of its crown was gone and the whole side of the latter had been knocked in by the force of the blow. I was aghast at its appearance, and told His Majesty that I was more sorry than I could say."

The strange behavior of persons who were unexpectedly honored by a few words from the King gives Mr. Stamper an opening for some peculiar reminiscences.

"Any one whom His Majesty honored with a few words was naturally beyond measure delighted. Over some their feelings would gain such a mastery that they would be unable to answer at all, while others could only just stammer a word or two in reply.

"Most of them received the honor very properly, and made a respectful answer to the King, but I have seen local dignitaries, hotel managers, exhibition authorities and country house servants alike interpret the fact that His Majesty had addressed them as an invitation to converse. Not content with replying to his remark or assenting to the casual remark he might make, I have heard them innocently enough follow their first response with a little discourse and even introduce a new subject.

"It was presumption on their part, though they never meant any harm, and I knew His Majesty so well that I could tell from his manner that he so regarded it, but to the offender himself he never showed the slightest sign of disapproval. If it was a servant the King would answer him very quietly in as few words as possible, such as, 'How interesting!' or something to that effect, and would take the first opportunity of gently terminating the conversation.

"To others he would be extremely polite and talk quietly, until a pause gave him a chance of hurrying away to one of the equerries. Always considerate for the feelings of others, I think it was because he realized that they intended no wrong that he refrained from administering the terrible punishment which a rebuff from him would have meant. Once as he returned to the car, after one of these unfortunate encounters, I heard him say to an equerry:

"'Poor man, poor man. He did not know any better.'"

Mr. Stamper describes how volubly the King swore, when a butcher's boy who drove badly got in the way of his car.

"Take the blanked fool's number and complain to the police, Stamper," said His Majesty. "No, no," he added on second thought. "Better say nothing about it."

Thus His Majesty showed once more the tact that made him world-famous.

Atlanta Merman in Training at Lakewood to Swim the English Channel

An easy side stroke which the life-saver uses at times.

The start of Schlomberg's crawl stroke, which is his favorite for conquering distance.

Schlomberg snapped in action as he trains at Lakewood. Below he is ready for a plunge.

B. H. Schlomberg Plows Through the Water for Miles Every Day, Hoping to Win Fame and Fortune in Desperate Feat Which Has Baffled All but Two of World's Greatest Swimmers.

B. H. SCHLOMBERG, a crack Atlanta swimmer, wants to write his name alongside those of Leander, he of Hellespont fame; Captain Webb, who swam the English Channel, and the other great swimmers of world history. Late this summer he will tackle the very biggest job, and will try to cross the English Channel. He thinks he will succeed.

Thousands of swimmers have attempted the Channel crossing. Lord Byron, it is recorded, was one who had dreams of the venture. Professionals and amateurs almost without number have set out bravely to swim the stretch between England and the Continent, but have succumbed after struggles more or less game—all but two. The English blacksmith, Burgess, and Captain Webb, one of the world's greatest swimmers, were the only aspirants whose success is recorded.

Schlomberg thinks he will be the third. He will make the attempt before fall. He is a professional life saver, holding long-distance swimming records at many beaches between Newport and Palm Beach. Always a swimmer, and always with a head full of dreams of a great career as swimmer, Schlomberg has had his eye set definitely on the English Channel test for seven years. All that time he has worked patiently, developing a stroke that will send him plowing through the water with the least possible exertion. All the time he has kept his vision on the great goal.

As he talks of his hopes, very modestly and with hesitation, it is plain that for him the venture has assumed the proportions of an idealized life work. To swim the English Channel, to succeed where thousands before him have failed, to gain a title of greatness as a swimmer—in this task are embodied all his ambitions for a career.

Schlomberg said yesterday he believed his stroke perfected. It is a long easy stroke which sends him through the still water of Lakewood Lake, where he has been training, without a splash, with no more noise than the soft ripple of the water that is pushed aside by his advancing head and chest. Schlomberg moves in the water almost as one of the wild creatures to whom water is its natural element—easily, softly, surely.

The favorite stroke of the Atlanta swimmer, the stroke which he thinks he has perfected now after many years, bears him along the water as he lies on one side, his head half buried. The arm that is out of the water goes up and out, curving to dip into the water in front of his head, and then sweeping backward. The arm under the water has a long, downward sweeping motion. The feet move in the powerful "scissors" kick.

Every morning before breakfast Schlomberg drops from the boat platform at Lakewood and swims around the lake, skirting the edges, a distance of three and one-half miles. This is by way of an eye-opener, a mere warming up for the day of strenuous practice. In the afternoon he practices diving from the high platform in the center of the lake, delighting the bathers with a series of perfect plunges, backward, forward, sideways, a-somersault. Occasionally in the late afternoons he swims two or three times around the lake. Sometimes he has gone around four times, and even more, netting nearly 20 miles on all the laps. The distance of the Channel swim is 21 miles.

Lakewood was chosen as a training place because there Schlomberg can get distance swims in fresh water. He said yesterday there is all the difference in the world between salt and fresh water swimming, with the burden of difficulty attached to the fresh water.

Living outdoors under the sun at Lakewood, swimming miles and miles every day, Schlomberg is in fine physical trim. He seldom wears anything more than a bathing suit, and in consequence is browned to a dark copper. His bronzed shoulders and arms bulge with knotty "swimming" muscles that play beautifully with every stroke. His thighs are developed as well, with the perpetual criss-crossing of the professional "scissors" kick. Schlomberg is stocky, rather below medium height, his body bulky with muscles wherever muscles should be, but lean and spare of flesh elsewhere—altogether an admirable figure of a man.

In preparation for his great swim Schlomberg is in strict training. He lives in a tent 100 yards from the lake, is always outdoors, swimming or rowing until he has developed wonderful powers of endurance. No prize fighter contending for the world's belt was ever more careful of diet than is Schlomberg. The swimmer does not touch tobacco, and he spurns alcoholics as though they were poison.

This is the young man who will go from Atlanta to try for the world's highest prize in swimming.

"I think I can make the swim," he said yesterday. "It will be the greatest effort of my life, for the task is worthy of the greatest effort. If I make the swim, I shall count my career a success. And if I don't, well——"

The husky young man laughed and quoted Browning:

"'Ah, but a man's reach should exceed his grasp, or what's a heaven for.' It may be too cold on the day I make the attempt, or there may be other circumstances that can not be foreseen. Many of those who have made the attempt were thwarted largely by the fearfully unfavorable circumstances. The cold, especially, is fearful at times, and you must remember that the man who swims the Channel must be in the water for many hours."

Captain Webb, he related, was 21 hours in crossing the water. The English blacksmith, Burgess, who swam the Channel two years ago, made five unsuccessful attempts. In the last trial he was 22 hours and 40 seconds in the water, landing near Calif, the nearest point to the English shore. He started at Dover. Captain Webb, in the water 21 hours, came near dying after the ordeal.

Several American swimmers have covered more than the 21 miles, but the difficulty in the Channel swim is the fearful rush of the tides. Webb swam 63 miles, covering the 21 miles across. Once he was swept nearly back to the British shore, and, discouraged, would have given up but for encouragement by his pacemakers.

Schlomberg will make a tour of the coast resorts before he starts on the trip to the scene of contest. At most of the beaches on the Atlantic coast he is popular, having achieved considerable reputation as a life-saver. Especially in the East is he well known, and many persons about New York are backing him with their good wishes.

One purpose of the trip to the Atlantic beaches will be a search for salt water swimming. Schlomberg will set out, immediately upon his arrival at the coast, upon practice in long-distance swimming on the ocean.

The young American will gain more than an enviable reputation if he succeeds in the Channel swim. He will become a relatively wealthy man from his share of the proceeds of moving picture films that will be taken. The films of course will be exhibited only if he is successful—there have been so many unsuccessful attempts. It is likely that public organizations will offer a bonus to the successful swimmer of the Channel, so altogether there is a financial end that is to be considered closely. Talking of his plans yesterday, Schlomberg said:

"I shall sail for England in August, and expect to make the trial before September 1. Already I have sold the motion picture rights to Pathe's Weekly on the condition that I am successful. Otherwise I get nothing.

"But I have a good stroke. It doesn't tire me a bit. If I don't get across, I'll most."

Schlomberg has been swimming since he was a boy in a Georgia village. For several years past he has been at most of the Atlantic beach resorts. Last summer he was at Piedmont Park. He spent last winter at Palm Beach.

"Swimming can't be beat," he said. "It will develop you quicker and more completely than any other exercise. I was never ill in my life."

The Wanderings to the Sea of the Atlanta Raindrop

LIFE and the ultimate existence is altogether a gamble for every little drop of water that the clouds consign to Atlanta. A mere inch or two will decide whether that drop, falling on Atlanta's streets, will find its way to the Gulf of Mexico, or whether it will turn up at last in the Atlantic Ocean, the inch or two being the position to one side or the other of the Chattahoochee watershed which runs through the heart of the city.

Standing on Peachtree street, at almost any spot between Ellis and Pine streets, you watch a shower as it patters on the asphalt. It may interest you to know that the water falling on the west side of the street, even a fraction to the westward of the center line, will roll through sewers out to Peachtree Creek. Muddy Peachtree Creek runs into the Chattahoochee River, and so the water from the west side of Peachtree street will become a part of that stream, pouring with it at last into the Gulf of Mexico.

Altogether a different fate awaits the water that falls to the east of the center line—even an inch to the east. It rolls down the convex surface of the street to a sewer at the side which empties into Intrenchment Creek, to the southeast of the city. Intrenchment Creek is a tributary of South River, and South River itself leads into the more imposing Ocmulgee, which, over a tortuous course, runs into the Altamaha Sound and into the Atlantic Ocean.

The same situation applies not only to the one portion of Peachtree street, but to a number of spots about the city. Water falling on the pavement just in front of the Candler Building may some day shatter itself in the surf at Palm Beach. But across the street, on the corner of Peachtree and James streets, the water is surely going to the Gulf of Mexico, and maybe at last into the Panama Canal. It is not a fantastic supposition, but merely the result of the law of grades and slopes.

Again, at Forsyth and Mitchell streets, at Broad and Mitchell, at Broad and Alabama, on Walton street, at several places on Marietta street, the same phenomenon occurs.

It is all because Atlanta is situated on the diminishing ridge line of the mountains that come down the Atlantic coast, and because the line of highest elevation in the city, roughly established, runs along Peachtree, Broad, Forsyth and Mitchell streets. On both sides of this line the land slopes away, on one side to the valley of the Chattahoochee, on the other side more gently and easily to the Atlantic coast. The city's sewers follow the slope of the land.

The contour map of the United States Geological Survey shows that a ridge of 1,100 feet above sea level, the highest elevation of this immediate part of the State, runs through the heart of the city, following closely the lines of the Georgia Railroad and the Atlanta and West Point Railroad. The ridge, which is the Chattahoochee watershed, is very narrow and the land's slope on each side is easily determined.

The line of highest elevation in the city does not follow identically the natural ridge, because the grading of streets sometimes is effected without regard to natural contours. But approximately the line is that of the two railroads, to the right and left of which all streams run into different oceans.

The line of highest elevation in the city, beginning, say, at the Aragon Hotel, runs one way out Peachtree street, the other way down Peachtree to the junction of Broad through to Forsyth street, and continuing through the center of the block of Walton between Forsyth and Fairlie streets to Cone and Marietta streets, thence out across country.

From Walton street a line of highest elevation runs eastward to Pryor street between Decatur and the railroad, continuing then along the railroad line.

From almost the same spot runs another ridge out Broad street to Hunter, thence to Whitehall, through to Mitchell and Broad.

This chain of elevations is a watershed. Down its slope on each side run sewers, and the flood is destined to pour into widely different oceans, according as it runs down the east or the west slope.

The extreme sharpness of the ridge brings about the unique situation wherein the center of a city street is the line of division.

An Overnight Town Springs Up On the Georgia Frontier

ALL the traditional property of a Western frontier town of a generation ago has gone into the setting for Robertstown, in White County, near the Union County line, which was made a city overnight by a big lumber company.

For some years there had been a small settlement at Robertstown, claiming one or two families. Then, several months ago came the lumber men, and the real life of Robertstown began.

A great hotel of unfinished planks, store buildings of the same crude material, tents for living quarters, streets from which the grass has not been removed—that is Robertstown.

Unique, but no more than its inhabitants. The lumber company which built the city brought to Georgia an army of employes of a high social order. Women walk the grass paved streets and live in the tents who are all that is au fait in the matter of women's dress. The latest styles are Robertstown's French heel shoes, clinging "slit" skirts with dainty laces at the slit, as the mode demands, silk waists, hats with the desirable paradise feathers, and all else that might be viewed in a summer afternoon's parade on Peachtree street.

Here and there are diamonds and jewels in the dresses of the girls and women of the little mountain town. Robertstown, which numbers its age in weeks, has an attractive citizenship. The men are no less presentable than the women, decking themselves in modish urban finery there in the heart of the Georgia mountains where civilization otherwise is the most primitive.

Traveling men and motorists from Atlanta have come upon the little town in the course of their journeys. At first surprised that it should be there, with no map indicating its existence, they were astounded, they have said, at the appearances of the citizenry, and many's the story that has gone the rounds about the new town.

Most of the inhabitants are westerners, who came to Georgia when the Byrd & Mathews Lumber Company bought 120,000 acres of timber land for the exploitation of its valuable resources in hickory, oak, poplar, and the other hardwoods of the mountains. After the way of corporations, the concern decided that Robertstown will be a city. A hotel was thrown together, and store buildings, before anything else. It was necessary to fell a bit of the virgin forest to make room for the structures, and to provide timber for their construction.

That was only a few weeks ago. The hotel, with a hundred rooms or more, is up, but not completely furnished. It is a great, bare structure, unpainted and unfinished, with the fresh, pungent odor of the forest clinging in its rooms and halls. The drug store, however, is completely stocked, and has an attractive refreshment stand, with tables for the girls and women, tables about which courtships already are well under way. The dry goods store is stocked with wares that are far beyond, in quality and excellence, the offerings of the typical small town store.

Houses will be built soon, but now the people of Robertstown live in tents. It is Georgia, and in the mountains, and summer time, and tent dwelling is rather desirable.

Robertstown has about 200 inhabitants. It was built far up Nacoochee Valley, at the foot of Yonah Mountain, one of the most spectacular peaks of the Blue Ridge. Everywhere around the town are mountain peaks except in front, where stretches Nacoochee Valley toward the south and toward civilization—of which the Robertstownsmen seem to have a plenty, however. The town was set down in the heart of a woods where a tree had never been felled before the lumber men came.

A number of mountain springs, almost enough to provide one for every household, supply water for the camp city and trickle through the town, crossing and recrossing the main street, heightening the primitive appearance of the place.

Until the lumber men came with their purchase of an enormous tract there were no railroads in White County. A road was installed for the dual purpose of hauling lumber and of opening the Robertstown section to travelers. The road runs from Gainesville 35 miles north, with Robertstown as its terminus. It is a tiny logging road, but persons who have made the trip declare that for scenic effects few railroads are its equal. Its train runs without schedule, ambling along among the foothills, with the only definite purpose that of meeting the trunk line train at Gainesville, and of getting at some time to Robertstown at the other end.

ADAM'S CLAY

THE STORY OF A SOULLESS COQUETTE AND THE HEARTS SHE BROKE

BY COSMO HAMILTON

CHAPTER I.

The Skeleton in the Album.

UPON the slanting slate roof of the old farmhouse the cold rain beat incessantly. It ran along the gutters, down the pipes, and into the drain with a noise like the gurgling of thirsty horses drinking.

Inside the farmhouse warm fires blazed, oak shutters were fastened over the windows to keep out the wind, and an aroma of coffee and tobacco smoke came pleasantly to the nostrils.

For all that, peace and contentment did not face one another in front of the wide-mouthed fire.

On one side of the open grate in the parlor sat a long-limbed, square-shouldered young man, with vague discontent and envy in his eyes, turning over the leaves of an album of photographs. On the other side, with his legs stretched out in front of him, chin low, the corners of his mouth turned down, and with a look of sneering pain in his screwed-up eyes, sat his father watching him closely.

The faces of both men were thin and weather worn. Both were strong, well-cut, well-bred faces, moulded on the same lines, and bearing a close resemblance. The expression upon that of the son was habitually calm, dignified and a little melancholy. The father's expression was invariably bitter and sarcastic, and a little cruel.

Hard knuckles rapped on the door.

"Come," said John Ashley, without taking his eyes from his son's face.

As an old man entered and came slowly across the room, the big dog half opened one eye, closed it immediately, and fell again into a well-earned sleep. John Ashley, the younger, bent his head lower over the album.

The photograph that engrossed his attention was of a beautiful woman dressed for a ball.

"What is it, Sloke?"

Old Jesse Sloke put a gnarled hand upon the table.

"Beg yur pardon, master, but Oi jest coom to tell 'ee as 'ow Oi've locked oop fur night."

"Very well. Good night, Sloke."

John Ashley's nostril curled as he watched the expression of surprised admiration, curiosity and wonder that spread over the face of his son.

The boy suddenly held the album nearer the light. His interest was almost breathless.

The old man removed his hand from the table quickly, and shuffled a few paces toward the door.

"Good night, master. Good night, Master John."

No answer came from the boy.

The old man made his way across the room with creaking boots, and shut the door quietly.

Ashley suddenly put up his foot and kicked the album. It fell upon the floor with a thud.

"What were you looking at, Jack?"

The boy caught his breath.

"The—the most wonderful thing I—I've ever seen, father," he replied.

The wind shrieked derisively down the chimney as it swept over the house.

The father shot out a kind of laugh.

"That's what I thought before I married her," he said, "curse her soul!"

Both men rose to their feet. Ashley, the father, in a sudden state of blasphemous rage that he found himself unable to control; young Ashley from a feeling of indignant horror.

"You're speaking of my mother!" he cried.

Ashley came and stood in front of his son.

"Yes," he said, "I'm speaking of your mother. You've never heard me say these things before. You've never quite been sure that you ever had a mother. For twenty-five years the word 'mother' has never been spoken in the house, in your hearing. But the things you've heard me say to-night I have cried aloud every night of the twenty-five cursed years that I have spent in this self-made Siberia. Solely because you might never be tricked and lied to and flung over as I have been, I have kept you away from refined women and honorable men, and have brought you up in the company of trees, the only Christians God has ever made, except dogs. It's your own fault that you have heard me recite aloud the words I have repeated to myself until I know them by heart. When I saw you looking at the woman who was my wife, as I looked at her when I saw her first, you unlocked the blue room of my life and came inside. Where did you find that album?"

Young Ashley pointed to a mildewed leather box. "I found it in that. It was in one of the barns."

"Give it to me. Now that you have found my photographic series of ghosts, I may as well personally conduct you round the gallery."

Ashley put the album on the table under the lamp. For a moment he kept his hand upon it as though afraid to open it. His mouth twitched, and he gave a shudder.

"Jack," he said, "have you ever wondered why I have never spoken to you about your mother?"

"Yes," replied young Ashley.

"When?"

"At night, after reading some book in which there has been a mother."

A look of bitter disappointment came into Ashley's eyes.

"I've been persuading myself," he said, 'that you found me sufficient."

"I have," replied the boy quickly.

"I want to know something else," said his father. "Have you ever wondered why a man of my type should have buried himself in this farm for twenty-five years?"

"No," said young Ashley.

"I haven't ever struck you as being a kind of whipped dog, who has been flung whimpering out of the world and spent the rest of his life hiding?"

"No," said young Ashley.

"Come here and look over my shoulder. I'm going to show you why I brought you here and came here myself."

Young Ashley sat down by his father's side. After some hesitation he put his strong hand upon his father's shoulder. A smile trembled upon John Ashley's lips.

He opened the album at the first page. Upon it there were two photographs.

"Here," said John Ashley, "we have me at the age of thirteen. Nice looking boy, eh?"

"Yes," said young Ashley.

"Chubby and optimistic and happy, you'd think, wouldn't you?"

"Yes," said young Ashley.

"So I was. The world went very well then. Now look at the photograph by its side. Handsome lad that, eh?"

"Yes," said young Ashley.

"The face of a fine, frank, honorable boy, you'd think, wouldn't you?"

"Yes," said young Ashley.

"My best friend; the boy who was at the same dame's school with me, who went on to Eton with me, who shared all my secrets, all my petty triumphs and disappointments, whom I loved and looked up to. Curse his soul, too!" He turned over the page and thumped it with his fist. "Here we have the same two faces five years later. They are still chubby and optimistic and happy, aren't they?"

"Yes," said young Ashley.

"A trifle smarter as to the set of collar and tie, you will notice. My best friend and I, at that age, had shared many more petty triumphs and disappointments. At that age, I still believed my best friend to be the most honorable, the most fearless, the most frank boy—man—I beg pardon!—the world had ever contained."

Then Ashley kept his hand upon an open page.

"Real men, now," he said. "Undergraduates of Cambridge University. Very fine collars and ties now, eh?"

"Yes," said young Ashley.

"And waistcoats—mark the waistcoats, and don't fail to notice a suspicion of whisker! Ah, ha! Men indeed! No two men could have been more together, more in sympathy than we two. Look; here we are in hunting kit, and here in evening clothes as members of a swagger club; here in running shorts, here in gym kit, here in the clothes we wore in a dramatic entertainment—my best friend as the hero. He always played the hero. Then we come to him in his first wig and gown as a member of the Inner Temple. I was no book man, and the Temple was closed to me, but here I am, opposite as usual, as a man about town. As it was impossible for me to share rooms with him in his inn, he shared my room in Maddox street. And here"—John Ashley's voice took a deeper note—"we come to the photograph of a girl."

Young Ashley bent over the page. "How lovely!" he said.

"How lovely," echoed his father. "Do you wonder that my best friend and I began to see a little less of one another about this time?"

"No," said young Ashley.

"Look; here she is again on her horse, and here in the dress in which she was presented, and here in the dress she wore the night I proposed to and was accepted by her. 'Good luck, old man,' my best friend said that night. 'She is the lucky one.' Let's go on. There are not many more now. This was taken on our honeymoon in Paris, and this at a little chalet on the Alps; this in Vienna, and this in Bond street. We had settled in London, a little house in Park street, to which my best friend had a latch-key. Look at this. The proud father, the beaming mother, the bald-headed son and heir."

"Me!" cried young Ashley.

"Yes, you. And this is the last photograph but one. Can you guess what the last one is? No, you can't. You have seen the faces of my best friend, and of the beautiful woman who was my wife. You would refuse to believe that in the next photograph my best friend stands by her side, wouldn't you? You would absolutely refuse to believe it, eh?"

"Yes," said young Ashley.

John Ashley turned to the last photograph, and his face became suddenly inflamed, and his voice thick.

"By God, then, you would be wrong! Not a year after that woman with the face of an angel stood at the altar swearing to love, honor and obey one man, she has her photograph taken with his best friend, the most honorable man the world had ever contained, on a second honeymoon in Paris."

"No," cried young Ashley, "no."

"Yes, yes, yes! Ah, ha! that's a facer for you, eh? That throws you back on your haunches, eh? My friend and my wife, the man of honor—the woman of integrity, gentleman and gentlewoman. Read this note, pasted below the photograph. I found it on my writing table when I returned after three hours' absence spent at polo. How well she formed her letters. 'It was all a mistake. Frank and I fought against the inevitable as long as we could. It has been too much for us. We have gone away. I have no grudge against you. You were very good, but love conquers all. Be good to baby.' Now do you understand why I came here? Now can you understand why I say that God's only Christians are the trees? Now can you sympathize with me when I shout out at the top of my voice and ask someone or other to curse their souls?" He sprang to his feet and clutched young Ashley by the shoulders. "Jack, Jack, don't you leave me; Jack, don't you leave me, too!"

The wind rattled the window and whistled down the chimney. Young Ashley put his arm round his father's shaking shoulder.

"Father, I'll never leave you," he said.

CHAPTER II.

Death Seals the Lesson.

The days lengthened. The hedges, now well awake, burst into tender leaf. Birds had got beyond the lover stage and were now busy with the business of life. All the earth was up and doing.

The sawdust figure of Cheerfulness, so long a member of the Ashley household, had gone. Its place had been taken by Cheerfulness himself, rotund and beaming.

With very human adaptability young Ashley and the rest quickly settled down to the new manner and soon forgot that there had ever been an old one. No one noticed the almost pathetic air of expectancy that sat always upon the elder Ashley. His attitude was that of a man listening. His ears were tuned to catch some calling voice. He spent his days in killing time, metaphorically packed and ready for a journey, spoiling for the word that should send him upon his way. He covered up his eagerness as well as he could with a restless energy. But many times each day he fingered the key of the drawer in which lay his loaded revolver. The postman seldom called at the farm, and when he did call the letters were seized upon by old Ashley with an anxiety that made his fingers tremble and the blood rush to his face.

One bright, fresh evening young Ashley got back to the farm with a keen appetite for dinner in advance of his father and found a letter lying upon the table in the sitting room. The envelope was bordered with black and bore an Australian postmark.

Young Ashley glanced at it carelessly and took off his riding boots. A second time the letter caught his eye lying primly upon the table. He picked it up and examined it. It was addressed in a practised handwriting to "John Everard Campbell Ashley, Esq., care Messrs. Coutts & Co., Strand, London, England. Please forward immediately."

Replacing the letter upon the table, young Ashley ran up to his room. But while he got out of his farm clothes, tubbed vigorously and dressed again, he could see nothing but the letter whichever way he looked. He tried to whistle away the odd feeling of impending trouble, but the sound died on his lips.

Returning to the sitting room quickly, he caught up the letter and took it to the fire and held it toward the flame. But no, it was addressed to his father, and he drew back his hand. Finally, he placed it face downward on the high mantel board, saying to himself that he would tell his father of the thing in the morning. All the same, he spent a miserable, restless evening.

He was standing at the window when Ashley returned. He noticed that a queer, eager look came into his father's face the moment he entered the room. He halted on the threshold and stood with distended nostrils and with eyes that searched the room like a dog's pointing.

"Jack," he asked in a low voice, "did anything come for me to-night?"

Young Ashley pointed to the mantel board. "It's . . . there," he said.

With unerring precision Ashley's hand seized upon the letter. Trembling and eager, he carried it to the lamp and held it in the circle of light.

"At last, at last!" he cried; "at last!" Then he held it aloft, with his arms stretched out. "Almighty God," he said, "I give you thanks . . ."

He fell suddenly on his knees, and with his hands over his face burst into a torrent of tears.

"Oh, my darling, my baby, my sweetheart . . . to be packed into a thing like that and given to the worms. . . . Oh, it's damnnable; it's unthinkable. I can't bear it. . . . Come back, even if you don't come back to me. . . . So exquisite a thing in such a place! Oh . . . oh . . ."

It was the first time in his life that young Ashley had come face to face with death. He was not horrified or terrified; he was silenced, numbed.

Young Ashley started to find an arm round his shoulder—a strong arm, pressed tightly. When it relaxed, young Ashley rose to his feet, and his father, smiling curiously, passed him and went upstairs. Young Ashley went into the sitting room to turn out the lamp. While he made the windows secure for the night he listened anxiously for any unaccustomed sound in the room above. His hands trembled as he shut the door, and his heart beat quickly, he knew not why. Suddenly a loud report echoed through the quiet house and a dull thud shook the ceiling.

"Father! Father!" shouted young Ashley, as he groped blindly up the stairs.

He heard a faint laugh as he flung open the door of his father's room—a laugh in which there was a note of triumph and happiness.

Two candles were burning on the dressing table. Their light fell upon the figure of Ashley, the elder, who lay upon the floor in a pool of blood. The black-bordered letter sat coldly upon the dressing table.

"Oh, father," cried young Ashley, "father!" He tottered to his knees.

Ashley the elder, struggled into his son's arms. There was a smile upon his drawn face.

"It is over," he whispered eagerly. "I am out of hell."

"You shan't go. You shan't," burst out young Ashley in agony. "I won't let you go. Father!"

A feeble arm fumbled its way round young Ashley's neck.

"No one can stop me, Jack. I am released, thank God! Read the letter. No. Hold me tight. I know it. I will tell you what it says."

He slipped a little and seemed to shrink like a pricked ball. Young Ashley clung to him desperately, unable to speak.

"It says: 'Effie is dead. She asked me to write to you, and send her love to you both.' Dear lad, don't shake so. I am so glad to go."

"Don't leave me—don't leave me!"

"I promise," sobbed young Ashley.

"You are safe . . . among the trees. And I shall know that my story won't be repeated. Kiss me, Jack."

Young Ashley kissed the damp forehead. "Father, father!" he cried.

The feeble arm slipped away from his neck.

CHAPTER III.

Enter Betty Blundell.

Little Mrs. Blundell—the beautiful Betty Blundell—addressed her envelope to Captain Evelyn Blundell, R. N., before she commenced her letter, which, in itself, proves that Mrs. Blundell is no different from ninety-nine women out of a hundred.

In this way, also:

"My very ownest Hubby-man," she wrote, in her ridiculously pretty backward hand, with her fair, small head on one side, her lips pursed up, her blue eyes slightly closed—"my very ownest Hubby-man, so you have got leave to come back to your lonely little wife at last, after three of the longest, dullest, most unhappy, most perfectly beastly years she has ever spent. Hurrah once, hurrah twice, hurrah three times, and one more hurrah for luck. I can't tell you how delighted and how excited I am.

"Darling, I have done as you asked me to do. It was rather a wrench to leave town and the few friends who helped to keep me bright and cheerful. But I love my man, oh, so dearly, dearie (you know that, don't you?), and I have let the flat for the rest of the Summer to my old chum, Milly Cator, who knows you, she says. She's nothing much to look at, but she's a genuine good sort, and I like her. She's the only woman in the world whom I would trust a yard.

"Also, like the best little wife in the world (and I am, aren't I, darling?), I have got exactly the rooms you described in which we are to spend our honeymoon, Number Two. (I'm sitting in one of them now, having arrived this afternoon in time for tea. You wanted to be five miles from any station—well, this is ten. You pined to be in the midst of wild, solitary country, where the abominable swish of the sea is never heard. Very well, this is idiotically and insanely wild—almost dangerously so—as solitary as Bond street in August, and nearly as green as a certain Evelyn used to be if ever I danced twice running with any other man. (Do you remember those dear, dear days?)

"By the way, did I tell you our nearest neighbor is a farmer a mile away? How I am going to kill time till you come I can't conceive. You know how I hate the country. I think I shall sit under a tree all day and imagine that your head is on my knee. At any rate, I shall attend every service at the village church to pray that nothing may happen to my dearest husband.

"And so, good-bye, Darling. I will write to you at the various places you say you will call at on your homeward voyage, and with all my love, every little bit of it, now and forever.—Your own. "BETTY.

"P. S.—Hurry, hurry, hurry, 'cos I wants yer mighty badly—yes, I does, I does, I do."

And again in this way:

"MY DARLING MILLY—Before I do anything else I feel I must write and thank you for being such a brick. If you hadn't taken my flat just when you did, old girl, I should have been regularly in the proverbial cart. But of course having been away, you don't know the circumstances which led to my being obliged to evacuate the untenable position, do you? Well, I'll tell you, if you will swear by all you hold sacred—if there is anything in the world you do hold sacred—to tear this letter up directly you have read it.

"You remember that before you went away at the beginning of the season Reggie Rawnsley brought a man named Worthing, Valentine Worthing, to the flat to tea? Do you? The man with the face of a Greek god, and the body of a Satyr, whom we had both noticed got up to represent Cupid at the Carnival at Prince's? That tea was the first of many teas, many dinners, many suppers.

"I dropped Reggie Rawnsley—(it was more difficult than I thought. The silly boy said his heart would break, and that I had made him loathe women! How absurd that every young man should say the same thing under the same circumstances!) and concentrated my attention on Valentine Worthing. I retired from the world, gave up all engagements, and spent my days at the flat, and my evenings at places where society doesn't congregate. We were inseparable. He would be with me about midday, half an hour after his advance-guard, a florist's shopload of flowers. Till 6 o'clock he would sit at the piano, playing the most exquisite airs to me, and singing little strange, pathetic songs that crept into my veins and filled me with electricity and made me cry like a baby.

At 8 'clock the bell would ring and I would go down and find him waiting for me in his brougham, scented and curled, no longer the Greek god, but an old blase man, with leering eyes and keen, witty, blasphemous, epigrammatic tongue. And we would dine together and go to some out-of-the-way music hall and then have supper. The whole time he would never cease talking—tearing every good old-fashioned thing to shreds, heaping ridicule on chastity, faith, love, honesty; pouring scorn on the idea of a future life and gradually filling me with dread, loathing and contempt.

"Then he would drive me home, stand for a moment gripping my hand in both his own, looking at me with eyes in which there was a kind of lurking sneer, and then leave me—trembling, limp, disgusted, with all my flesh cockled as though a bat had touched my mouth with its wing.

"But at last it had to end. One night coming home in his carriage. . . . Pouf! I can't write it; it makes me ill. When I got home I packed up all my things, left the keys with Jane and caught the workmen's train—they must have taken me for a mad woman, although I must own I looked awfully sweet with a most becoming pallor on my cheeks and my eyes wide open and very blue—to Didcot. I waited at a hotel till a respectable time of day and then drove over to my father-in-law's place, some miles out. He is a dean, you know, and most ridiculously rural.

"And then I got Evelyn's letter in which he said he was coming home and of course that was a blow. I did think he was pretty sure to give me another free year. However, I mustn't grumble. The three years he has been away have been the happiest years of my life. Do you remember my saying to you two minutes after he had left the house—his eyes were full of tears—as soon as I was able to stop sobbing that I would live every moment of my life till he came back? My goodness, Milly, I have lived them, too! I have!

"You really were a dear to take the flat directly I wired to you. Evelyn wanted me to get rooms in some very quiet country place and wait for him for the honeymoon number two. (Goodness! how I laughed.) And here I am in about the most benighted, God-forgotten place upon the map, I verily believe.

"Of course, I shouldn't have left town at all, but for Valentine Worthing.

"What I am going to do to kill time here I can't conceive. There is not even a resident parson in the place! There is, I am glad to hear, a farmer living a mile away. Perhaps, only perhaps, he may be worth studying. Well, good-bye till to-morrow. I'll let you know how I get on. In six weeks' time all fun will be at an end and I shall no longer be a—is free agent a good word?—Yours "BETTY."

"But at last it had to end. One night coming home in his carriage—Pouf! I can't write it. It makes me ill."

CHAPTER IV.

The Victim Appears.

Little Mrs. Blundell threw her pen down, rose and stretched herself, yawning in a bored way, yawning as a martyr yawns.

In the garden behind the cottage a baby started crying. Before the baby had been hushed and soothed into silence, Mrs. Blundell's eyes were hard and discontented again.

Suddenly Betty Blundell's expression of settled boredom changed to one of wide-awake surprise and curiosity.

The bow-window in the front room into which she had returned, peered through thickly-climbing roses into the road. Along this road, which begun at the farm and ended at the village Whiteley's, swung one of the hugest, broadest-shouldered, biggest-footed, best-looking men little Mrs. Blundell had ever seen.

As he came level with the window, his profile, slightly shaded by a dark tweed cap, stood out in clean-cut strength against the unclouded sky. As he moved, always with the same long, well-oiled stride, a pair of keen eyes scanned every other blade of rapidly-yellowing corn with pride, affection, and paternal anxiety.

Betty ran to the door quickly. "Mrs. Weeks, Mrs. Weeks!"

From the distance came the sound of a flat iron dropped, with evident fluster, upon its metal stand, followed by a shuffling of heavy feet.

"Mrs. Weeks!"

"Yes'm."

Mrs. Blundell had thrown the window higher, had moved the bamboo table away, and was leaning out, framed in roses.

With panting breath, and with her apron twisted round her plump bare arms, Mrs. Weeks hurried in.

"Mrs. Weeks," said little Mrs. Blundell, her voice vibrating with excitement, "come to the window quickly, look out to the right, and tell me who that gentleman is in brown boots and gaiters."

"That be no gentleman, 'm. That be just furrmurr."

"Do you mean a man who grows potatoes and cabbages, and all that?"

"An' corrn, an' burley, an' oerrts," said Mrs. Weeks, with her Sunday smile, "an' that lolke, that's it, 'm."

Mrs. Blundell had said "Really; dear me!" in a vacant, polite way, and had gone back to the window.

"He certainly doesn't look a bit like one's idea of a farmer," she said. "If you hadn't told me so—and, of course, you know—I should have said that he was a soldier. Sit down and tell me about the farmer. I like to take an interest in everyone who happens to live where I may be staying."

"Oh, thank you, 'm," murmured the gratified woman, gladly subsiding into a chair.

"Let us begin with his name," said Betty smiling with immense condescension.

"Hashley, 'm," said Mrs. Weeks.

"Hashley? Quite an uncommon name, at any rate."

"Nō, 'm, beggin' your pardon. Not Hashley—but Hashley."

"Oh, Ashley. I see!"

Mrs. Weeks smiled at her lodger indulgently.

"Yes, that's it, 'm, Hashley. 'E were called young Mr. Hashley until 'is father were took—leastways, 'e weren't took, as you may say. Properly speakin', 'e went."

Betty Blundell looked politely puzzled. "I don't think I quite"——

"'E shot 'isself, 'm, on the day as 'ow 'e got a letter with a mournin' band from far-off parts."

"Why?"

"Ah, no one knows, 'm, nor dared arst Mr. John, who spoke not a word of any sort or kind to a living creature for two months an' four days."

"Oh, there is a mystery about that, is there?"

"Not wot you may call a mystery, 'm, but a nat'ral anxiety. The departed did arrive at the furrm twenty-five years ago with Mr. John as a baby. That's not denied, and lots o' talk there were at the time, that's true, seein' as 'ow hold Mr. Hashley bought out Mr. Jenkins, whose fam'ly 'ad bin there gettin' on fer two 'undred year, an' all, an' 'e did call the infant 'my son'; that I know for a first-and fact, because Mrs. Sloke, 'as done for 'em up at the furrm from the first, is my haunt on my Alf's side, 'as a-told me so many time, not a soul ever crossin' the threshold these five-an'-twenty year, an' only a letter once in a way, so as to make it the talk o' the villaga."

"But surely," asked Mrs. Blundell, busily polishing, "some female relations of the father paid a visit at one time or another?"

"Never a suspicion of a lady were known to enter that there 'ouse, 'm. I can vouch," said Mrs. Weeks firmly.

"And so," said Mrs. Blundell, "young Mr. Ashley has never met a—a person like myself in all his life, I take it?"

"Like you, 'm," cried Mrs. Weeks, her voice filled with genuine admiration, "never! Poor feller, I don't reely believe as o' whe dreams as such creatures are—meanin' creatures in its best sense, 'm' that I do assure you—ahving reely have said ladies in their own right. If you ask me, 'm, I do think that the sight of you would fairly rumple young Mr. Hashley—yes, even 'im, as looks so determined and closed in, as I call it, an' always in bearin' reins, so to speak."

Mrs. Blundell laughed a ripple of effortless laughter in which there was a note of excitement, and half turning her back to her landlady, commenced touching things on the bamboo table, in the way civilized women have of letting one know that they have had enough of one. With that peculiar instinct which is born and not bred in women, Mrs. Weeks murmured that her iron would be getting cold, and made her way to the door.

Little Mrs. Blundell put her letters into the pocket of an expensively-simple muslin frock, and crossed the sloping floor of her oak-beamed sitting-room into her bedroom. She emerged from it, after quite a little while, with a smile on her lips, and a very clever, poppy-covered hat set upon a head of hair which rivaled the ripest corn.

"No," she said aloud, standing on a chair to get a full-length glimpse of herself in the square of cheap looking glass over the narrow mantel board—"no, I don't fancy it will be so difficult to kill time here after all."

The Fourth Attack

Paint and Furniture

"THOUGHT I couldn't build a bungalow, didn't you?" said Horace Billings, proudly, to his wife as she arrived at their lot in the suburbs, where, for nearly a month, he had been struggling to put up a little summer home.

"Have you?" asked his wife, sweetly.

It was her fourth visit. On the preceding three visits something had happened to the bungalow. First the foundation slipped into the bog, next he nailed the windows in solid and forgot the front door. The previous trip out she arrived in time to see the roof collapse and blow away.

"Now, don't be sarcastic, Grace," said Billings, "of course I've built it."

"The roof does look better," said Mrs. Billings, whereupon he flushed.

"Now, don't rub it in. That was only a trifling accident. Let me tell you that next week, when you come out, it will be finished. And don't forget you insisted that I couldn't build a bungalow."

"What are those green vines running up the wall? How did yo uget them to grow so quickly—Oh"—— and Mrs. Billings, upon making a closer inspection, sat down and laughed heartily.

What she first thought were green vines proved to be great streaks where the green paint from the roof had run down the white sides of the bungalow.

"Oh, that's nothing, another coat will cover that up," said Billings.

"Sure, and another rain will put it on again," said his wife. "You see," she added, "you used cheap mineral paint."

"Seems to me you've got a lot of knowledge about such things," he answered, grumpily.

"I wish I could say as much for you, Horace," she replied, sweetly.

"Oh, come on inside and see how I've fixed it up," and he proceeded to unlock the front door.

The key stuck and he rattled and yanked the door a bit. Suddenly the door flew open and he took a backward flip-flap off the little veranda. When he picked himself up his wife was grinning happily and pointing to the door.

He had pulled the whole side of the door casing off and it still dangled on the lock.

"It seems to me, Horace, that you should have used twine string. I don't think it pays to use mucilage on door jambs."

"That's right, great kickers, get sarcastic if you wish. Anyone's likely to forget things. I forgot to nail that door jamb on after I set it up. Ten minutes work will fix that. Look," and as they stepped inside he pointed to the living room.

"See, built-in bookshelves," he said, proudly, "on each side of the fireplace."

"That's going to be rather bad in rainy weather, Horace," said his wife.

"And why, I should like to know? Seems to me they are just the things for rainy weather. We can sit here by the fireplace and read."

"H'mm," she replied.

"Darn it, there goes that 'h'mm' of yours again, now what?"

"Why, my dear, I wasn't referring to the delights of a library on a rainy day, but to the fact that I would get wet going to the kitchen to cook dinner, and the food would get all wet and cold bringing it back around here in the living room to put on the table and"——

"What on earth are you talking about, Grace?" snapped Billings. "Are you crazy?"

"I think I must be, Horace, just crazy enough to want a door between the kitchen and living and dining room. You were so crazy over those built-in shelves that you boarded up the doorway and"——

"Oh, I—I'll have that door right in, just a little oversight on my part," said poor Billings, as red as a lobster.

"Folding desk here," he continued, taking down a desk. When he let go of it, it promptly fell on the floor and split.

"To make a really successful folding desk, Horace, you should have hinged the back. These safety pins or whatever you used are not practical," and she laughed so heartily she had to sink into a home-made morris chair.

The chair promptly collapsed.

"Is this a trick on me, Horace Billings?" she asked, jumping up, angrily.

"Of course, not, my dear," he said, laughing, and he leaned up against the mantle-piece, which promptly slid off the brackets and fell through a window.

"For goodness sakes, what is this? A Coney Island Foolish House? Or did you bring me here to have me mortally injure myself?

"Why—er—dash it all, Grace"——

"Well, I will kill myself laughing, if nothing more," she snapped. How are the bedrooms?" and she opened the end door and looked in.

"Nice, little, square rooms, well lighted," commented Billings, eager to change the subject.

"H'mm," commented Mrs. Billings.

"What—say?" he asked, nervously.

"H'mm," his wife further elucidated.

"Now, don't begin"—— but his wife stopped him.

"Give me your rule?" she commanded.

He handed her a rule from his pocket. She started to measure, looked at the rule and then slammed it down.

"These rooms are five feet four inches square; our beds—all beds, are from six and a half to seven feet long. Unless you want to sleep cornerwise or get hunchbacked you better enlarge these sleeping rooms"——

"Impossible. I measured them"——

"Yes, with the aid of a metric system rule. Try United States linear measurements next time and"——

"Now, now, Grace, I'll have that all fixed up next week and we'll move in for a little vacation. Don't you worry, the bungalow will be finished then."

"Very well, Horace," sighed Mrs. Billings, "I'll come out next week and see its finish."

CHARACTERS IN THE SKETCH.

MONTE SKINNER—A High Stepping Colored Man.

ABRAHAM DOOLITTLE—His Valet.

COUNTESS DE FRESE—Lady of Nobility.

ANTOINE—A Mere Butler.

SCENE I.

(A Street in Paris.)

DOLITTLE—Hold on! Hold on! How much further? Where are you goin'?

SKINNER—Where are we going? Why, we're going to make our fortune.

DOLITTLE—Dat's jess what you done said when we left Baltimo' six months ago. Why, we haven't even made an acquaintance. Where are we at now?

SKINNER—Why, this is Paris—grand, gay, buzzing old Paris, where good fellowship reigns supreme—a city of beautiful women—sparkling wine—sweet music—where we fly on and on and on and on—as free as a bird!

DOLITTLE—Ah've got de fleas, but Ah haven't seen de bird, and what's mo', Ah haven't eaten anything but beans fo' the las' six months.

SKINNER—Listen. I have a scheme. It's a great big undertaking. This town is a great place for the nobility and society. There is a great deal of jealousy among the leaders of Paris society and nobility. Now there is a beautiful, left-over member of the nobility in this town named Countess Nancette de Frese, who will fall heir to a greater fortune some day than she has now. She dotes on kings, and has made a standing offer of 5,000 francs to the person who will introduce her to and make her the honored hostess of a real, live king. Now we're going to get this money, understand, and you're going to be a king.

DOLITTLE—Not me! You bettuh g'wan and get another boy.

SKINNER—Why, you don't mean to tell me that you are going to weaken at this stage of the game? Just wait until I introduce you as the King of Blackwellis. Why, you'll have everything you want to eat and drink and all the swell clothes you can wear.

DOLITTLE—Am we gwine to git suffin' to eat?

SKINNER—Eat? Well, I should say so!

DOLITTLE—Whata we gwine to git?

SKINNER—Well, to begin with, we are going to have a fine roast turkey as large as an elephant, some cranberry sauce, some fried chicken, grilled frogs' legs, charlotte russe, lady fingers and angel food.

DOLITTLE—Ah hope we don't hab any beans. Ah've had nothin' but beans, BEANS, BEANS since we left Baltimo'.

SKINNER—Oh, never mind about the beans—forget all about them.

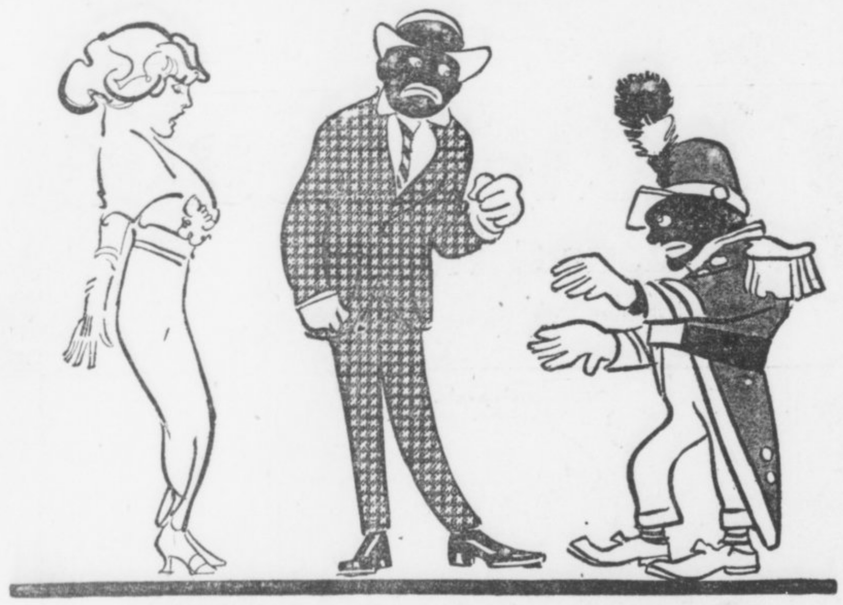
DOLITTLE—Ah wish Ah could.

SKINNER—Have a little dignity about you. Remember that you are a king of kings for a night. We'll get this money, and when we do I'm going back to the dear old U. S. A.

DOLITTLE—Ah don't want to go back to no dear old U. S. A. Ah wants to go back to dear old Baltimo'.

SCENE II.

(Private dining room in large hotel in Paris. Enter butler and hands Countess Nancette de Frese a card.)



DOLITTLE—Oh, yes. Ah got two harems—a he and a she.

COUNTESS—Ah, zee Meester Monte Skinner, of zee U. S. A.! The very gentleman with whom I have been corresponding. Wonderful! He is to bring with him a very great King to visit me. Bid him enter.

(Enter Skinner.)

SKINNER—Ah, my dear Countess! This is indeed a great pleasure.

COUNTESS—Not at all. Zee pleasure is all mine. My one ambition in life is about to be realized. I am to be the hostess to a king.

SKINNER—Then, behold, His Royal Highness!

DOLITTLE (shouts from without)—Will Ah come in now?

SKINNER—Yes, right in here. This is the way. Countess, it affords me great pleasure to present His Royal Highness the King of Blackwellis.

COUNTESS—Charmed, Your Majesty.

DOLITTLE—Howdee.

COUNTESS—Won't Your Majesty be seated? No doubt you are very tired after your long journey.

DOLITTLE—Yas. Ah walked darned near fo' hundred miles.

SKINNER—Ah, Countess, understand him now. His Majesty says he FEELS as if he had walked four hundred miles. Don't you?

DOLITTLE—Yas.

COUNTESS—No doubt you find Paris vastly different from your home in Blackwellis?

DOLITTLE—Mah home am in Baltimo'!

COUNTESS—BALTIMORE!!

SKINNER—Ah, pardon, Countess. Baltimore is the capital of Blackwellis.

COUNTESS—You'll forgive my stupidity, I'm sure, but I am a little confused as to zee exact location of Blackwellis.

SKINNER—It is commonly called Blackwell's Island.

COUNTESS—Ah, but zee location?

SKINNER—Ah, the location? Well, it is situated in the East River, about sixty yards from the Brooklyn coast. It is surrounded on one side by the Battery and on the other three sides by the Stars and Stripes.

DOLITTLE—Yas, and it's six months from Broadway.

COUNTESS—Ah, that must be beautiful.

DOLITTLE—Oh, it's ridiculous.

COUNTESS—Tell me, dear King, more about your home.

SKINNER—Ah, Countess! That would be impossible. The King has so many estates, castles, villas and harems that it would be beyond him to even commence to tell you about them.

COUNTESS—You mean to say he has a harem?

SKINNER—Oh, my, yes. The King lords over a harem.

DOLITTLE—Oh, yas. Ah got two harems—a he and a she.

SKINNER—Yes, and, Countess, His Majesty has five hundred beautiful wives.

DOLITTLE—Ah've got five hundred wives?

SKINNER—Yes, five hundred voluptuous queens.

DOLITTLE—Les' go home!

COUNTESS—Won't Your Majesty partake of a slight repast?

DOLITTLE—Gwine to hab eats?

COUNTESS—Certainly.

SKINNER—Why, my dear Countess, we simply couldn't think of eating a single bite.

COUNTESS (calls butler)—Antoine, serve us immediately. (All are seated.) During your travels, Your Highness, did you visit zee place where Napoleon was born?

SKINNER—Yes, certainly.

DOLITTLE—Yas, sure. Boni and me wuz playmates. We used to go swimming together.

COUNTESS—Have you read the works of zee great French authors, Voltaire, Moliere and Sardou?

DOLITTLE—Sardines?

SKINNER—Oh, yes, Countess, His Majesty has read all the great books.

DOLITTLE—Yas, Diamond Dick, Nick Carter and Jesse James.

(Enter butler and hands menu to Dolittle, who, in turn, hands it to Skinner.)

SKINNER—Ah—er—why, Countess, His Majesty prefers that your ladyship would order first.

DOLITTLE—Yas, order eats.

(Countess takes menu and orders a long list in French, ending with a "cafe demi tasse.")

COUNTESS—Will Your Majesty have something?

DOLITTLE—Certainly, suffin to eat. Ah'll take de same as you ordered. Countess, and a cup of coffee.

COUNTESS—Ah, Your Majesty, it must be wonderful to be zee ruler of a powerful country, to have every one bowing at your command, to lead zee victorious army into zee thickest of zee fray, to hear zee steel of battle clashing!

SKINNER—I should say so. His Majesty heads the list of the world's greatest military experts. He has a shooting record of a hundred straight shots.

DOLITTLE—Yas, an' Ah'd a made a hundred mo' if dey hadn't grabbed dem dice.

COUNTESS—Antoine, you may duplicate my order.

SKINNER—You can duplicate my order.

DOLITTLE—Come here, Quinine. Ah'll tackle some of dat duplicake.

COUNTESS—Ah, King, I suppose we society women can appreciate you far better than you yourself.

SKINNER—It isn't every king who possesses the rank His Majesty does.

DOLITTLE—Yas, Ah'm de rankest of de rank.

(Enter butler with a pot of beans. Dolittle chases him with knife. Skinner holds him when he catches him.)

SKINNER—Why, Your Majesty, there must have been some mistake.

DOLITTLE—Ah ordered duplicake and he brought me beans. If dat fool comes back Ah'll carve him.

SKINNER—Why, that's nothing, King. I've seen you travel some days for forty miles on beans and hay.

DOLITTLE—Yas, an' some days Ah didn't git de hay.

COUNTESS—Pardon me, gentlemen, a moment. (Exits.)

SKINNER—Now, see here, Dolittle, enough of this nonsense. See this?

DOLITTLE—What is it?

SKINNER—It's a bottle of dope. A few drops of this will send the lady off into a long dream, and then we can rob the house and escape.

(Enter the Countess.)

SKINNER—Ah, Countess, you're just in time. Won't you join us?

COUNTESS—Why, certainly.

SKINNER—Long live the King!

DOLITTLE—Long livered King. (King exits.)

COUNTESS (screams)—I feel dizzy. Send for my maid. (Falls in swoon.)

(Skinner carries her to sofa and lays her on it. Takes bag and starts to fill it with jewels and silverware. Enter Dolittle, eating leg of a chicken.)

DOLITTLE—Well, a King can get served in the kitchen if he can't get served here.

SKINNER—Keep still, you fool, and get busy! This place is a regular gold mine. Crack that safe by the door there.

DOLITTLE—Not this evenin'.

SKINNER—WHAT!

DOLITTLE—You done heered me. Ah'm not too good to lie or steal, but when it comes to robbin' a poor, defenseless Countess, why, Ah draws de line.

SKINNER—You mean to say you won't do as I tell you? (Starts to hit Dolittle, who pulls a gun.)

DOLITTLE—Gimme dat roll of bills.

SKINNER—Don't shoot, I didn't mean anything. Here's the money.

Never Worry About Business Affairs.

Our Weekly Health Hints

By John D. Rockefeller's Family Physician.

DO not get out of bed before 10 A. M.

Breakfast lightly on hothouse grapes.

Golf for three hours.

For luncheon, a glass of vintage champagne, a slice of home-raised chicken and a salad especially grown under glass.

The afternoon should be spent yachting.

Never worry about business affairs.

Rest for an hour before dinner.

Do not swim anywhere but in your own private swimming pool.

After dinner, have some operatic stars come and sing you into a restful mood.

Science Jottings.

Salt has a distinctly saline flavor, while sugar has a saccharine taste.

Snakes are not injurious to those they don't bite.

Oddities in the News.

A WOMAN in Reno is not suing for divorce.

Boy at Tybee stepped on a fish hook and floundered all over the place. "Keep clam," exclaimed Pete, "or you'll crab the game." "Oy, oyster," exclaimed the boy, who felt he was being baited. Net result: One wounded sole.

Cat in Cartersville swallowed a canary and now whistles instead of mewing.

Man in Griffin stepped on a banana peel. The peel was uninjured.

Mail carrier in Marietta left registered letter with woman in next house to address. She didn't ask him what he thought was in it.

P. S.—She can't speak.

Stranger in Chicago bought statue of General Logan for $400. Thought of inviting him to Atlanta where we will sell him a dozen statues for a tenth of that price on condition he takes them home with him.

RAGGING OMAR.

OH, mah honey, can't you see
That you ought to be with me,
Readin' syncopated verses 'neath the bough?
Rustle out a loaf of bread,
An' some wine that's good an' red,
An' we'll have a little cabaret, for thou
Can sing coon songs, more or less,
Till the howling wilderness
Is a red-hot, rag-time Paradise enow!
It's a Par——
It's an a——
It's a Par-a-dise,
It's a bunny huggin', turkey trottin',
Eatin', juggin', far from rotten
Par-a-dise enow!

AND YET THEY WANT TO VOTE.

"JOHN," said Mrs. Fan, "what does it mean in this description of the ball game, where it says that the pitcher walked the batter?"

"It means that he gave him a pass," replied Mr. Fan.

"Well," questioned Mrs. Fan, "if he had a pass, why didn't he ride to first instead of walking?"

(EDITOR'S NOTE—What did John say?)

IN KENTUCKY.

"YES, Bill chased him two days with a shot gun, finally got a good bead on him and shot him through the lung."

"Kill him?"

"Yep."

"Didn't they lynch Bill for cold-blooded murder?"

"Nope; the feller Bill shot didn't have a friend on earth, so the game warden jest fined Bill two dollars fer huntin' without a license."

KNOT IN A NAUTICAL SENSE.

WHY do they say knots on the ocean instead of miles?

Why you couldn't have an ocean "tide" without knots, could you?

LET'S ALL GO UP TO MAUD'S.

HE—She asked me what color hair I liked best.

She—That's just like Maud; she's always anxious to please.

IN AT THE FINISH.

ASKITT—What a long neck Miss Lanky has. Did you ever see her in a low-cut costume?

Tellitt—Yes. Once.

Askitt—What did she look like?

Tellitt—She looked as though her dressmaker had her skinned a mile.

AND EAT MOST OF IT.

IKEY—Fadder, vat is a Bohemian?

Ikey's Father—A Bohemian, Ikey, is von who will take you out to dinner if you vill lend him five dollars.

DIDN'T EVEN HAVE TO LAY DOWN HIS HAND.

PARKER——I was sitting up with a sick friend last night.

Mrs. Parker—Well, from the money in your pocket it appears he was able to sit up, too.

COMING! A New Baseball Story by HUGH S. FULLERTON In The Sunday American "THE PLOT FOR THE PENNANT"

Tales Scattered In Atlanta By Cecil Lean

CECIL LEAN, at the Forsyth last week, tried to give Atlanta something new in vaudeville acts, and got away with it pretty well. And along with that, for the private delectation of his friends, he had a batch of new stories to tell that solidified his local popularity for all time to come.

Cecil Lean has been for years a musical comedy star, figuring most recently in "The Man With Three Wives," by Franz Lehar, the Austrian, of "Merry Widow" fame.

The Lean stories are laid both on and off the stage. Here are some of them:

* * *

There is a club in New York, where attractive dinners and lunches are often given, to which theatrical people are invited. But it is tacitly understood that the guests from the stage are expected to do something toward the entertainment of the assemblage, by means of a song, a speech, or something in their line. Theatrical performers who are thus invited, realizing that they must "pay for the meal," so to speak, rather resent the situation at times, but once at the table, can not evade the demands.

Ethel Barrymore was a guest of the club not so long ago. At the proper juncture, the toastmaster arose.

"We have with us to-night," he announced, "Miss Ethel Barrymore. Miss Barrymore has kindly consented to entertain us by selections from her varied repertoire. Remember, ladies and gentlemen, this entertainment will cost you not one cent. Miss Barrymore plays regularly to packed houses where considerable admission is charged, but here she will entertain us for nothing. You will hear something that would cost you one dollar and a half otherwise."

Miss Barrymore arose. The company drew their chairs closer. Everybody leaned forward, expecting a delightful entertainment.

"You are wrong," said Miss Barrymore, "it's two dollars."

And sat down.

* * *

You have heard, haven't you, of the Irishman who commanded a stage army? The members of his army, likewise, were Irish, and he desired to know something of their fighting qualities.

"Tell me, men," requested, "when the enemy comes, will you fight or will you run?"

"We will," answered the loyal men together.

"You will what?" demanded the leader.

"We will not," shouted back his fighting men.

"I though you would," he acknowledged.

* * *

An old woman, so old that her ears had about failed her, went to church one day, bearing her ear trumpet. She was a stranger in the church, and the usher watched her and her ear trumpet first with curiosity and then with suspicion. She sat very still and impassive through the first of the service, but when the preacher read his text and prepared to deliver his burning message to the world, she lifted her hearing machine. The usher felt his suspicions realized. He tiptoed to her side.

"One sound out of that horn and out you go," he warned her.

* * *

Once there was a vaudeville actor whose act was very near the limit of impossibility. It was poor beyond redemption. Never was he allowed to remain in a house the week through, but generally was fired unceremoniously after the first performance. Usually, following the Monday afternoon show, the manager would come to him with the cruel message.

But one day the actor with his bum act struck a new town, and to his own great amazement, he made good. The first show of the week was his triumph. Even the manager was impressed, and decided to move the poor fellow to a better place on the bill. Accordingly, while the actor was taking off his make-up, the manager went to the dressing room to hear his congratulations. He knocked at the door.

A weary voice from within greeted him.

"All right," it said, "I'm packing up now."

* * *

Four obvious strangers to Chicago found their way into the lobby of the LaSalle Theater one day, and inspected the photographs of the players who were performing at the time. The box-office man watched them without interest, until he heard some puzzling remark emanate from the group. He saw them retire to a corner and hold a whispered conversation. At length, one who appeared to be the boss of the party approached the window.

"How much?" he inquired.

"Fifty cents up to two dollars," replied the ticket seller. "How many do you want?"

"Wall, I want the best," said the stranger. "I reckon a dozen for two dollars'll be O. K. Kin you get the hull four of us on a post-card?"

The box-office man grasped the situation.

"My dear man," said he. "This isn't a photograph gallery. It is a theater. Go right up the line about a block, and they'll snapshot you to a fare-you-well. Then come back to-night and see the play, but don't let the picture man take your whiskers."

* * *

The other day I went to see a friend in whose house a baby had been born a few days before. I was met at the door by my friend's 6-year-old son.

"Hello, young man," said I. "What do you think of your little brother? What is his name?"

"I dunno," said the boy. "He hasn't been crucified yet."

* * *

The story of the Irishman and his army that I told just now reminds me of another something like it. A drill sergeant was drilling the recruit squad in the use of the rifle. Everything went smoothly until blank cartridges were distributed. The recruits were instructed to load their pieces and stand at "ready," and then the sergeant gave the command:

"Fire at will!"

The rawest raw recruit was puzzled. He lowered his gun.

"Begobs," he said, "and which one is Will?"

* * *

Theatrical folks, with all their traveling, occasionally butt into wrecks and accidents of all kinds. Here is a story that struck me, in which the "Little Women" company figured. The train on which the company rode plunged down the slope. Everybody was rescued, with difficulty, however, because it was necessary to smash the windows of the sleepers to let the people out. After the wreck, the survivors were requested to board the train that followed the ill-fated one. The conductor in charge of the rescue train invited all of the saved to go to the dining car for breakfast.

Now, it seems that the majority of those rescued had no clothing except their sleeping garments, the rest of their apparel being in the berths they occupied. One gentleman, whose only garments consisted of pajama pants and a Pullman blanket, was asked what he desired for breakfast. After scanning his make-up, he said, rather disconsolately:

"Well, in view of the fact that I have lost all my clothes and all the money I had, if it's convenient, I'd like a pair of trousers."

* * *

Stage people live in an atmosphere of hurry. It used to worry me, but whenever the rush gets on my nerves, I think of a sign of which a friend told me, a sign betokening the greatest haste.

A group of us were discussing, the other night, the speed and competition of modern life—the grinding subways, the standing lunches, the stands where you get your hat cleaned while your shoes are being shined.

"For all that," said one of the group, "I was surprised to find a downtown barber shop with this sign in big letters over the door:

"'Quick shave—while you wait.'"

Polite Clerk—No; but we have some fine tooth combs.

The Best Bet.

"I'VE a kitchenette in my flat. What's the feature of yours, Jones?"

"A cellerette. And of yours, Smith?"

"I've got a suffragette in mine."

She Was Consistent.

A WOMAN was in a law court when she was asked her age, and answered: "Thirty-five."

"But," objected the judge, "you were before me two years ago, and you said then that you were thirty-five."

"Your Honor," she loftily replied, "I am not one who would say one thing at one time and another thing at another time."

BACHELOR and Benedict were returning home from their club rather early—early in the morning.

Bachelor began to sigh over the woes of his unmarried state. "Ah, you're a lucky man, Benedict sighed he; "a real home waiting for you, a loving wife, and a smiling welcome. See, she has put a light in the window for you."

"Good heavens! you're right. Well, there's only one thing for it—we'll go back to the club."

A Silenced Explained.

"WHY didn't you call for a policeman when the holdup man attacked you?"

"It wasn't my business to do so," replied the cynical resident of a great metropolis. "Besides, the holdup man didn't need any help."

A Legal Point.

"I SEE," said Wiggles, "that Bobby Fancier and his wife have got a divorce.

"Really!" said Jiggles. "What a sad case! Who gets the custody of the poodle?"

TWO Scotchmen staying at a hotel discovered that the bathroom was minus soap, and rang for the bell boy.

"Sen' up sape, lad—a wee bit sape, quick!" exclaimed one of the Caledonians.

The boy gazed open-mouthed at the two men, muttering:

"They ain't French, nor German, nor yet Spanish. What can they want?"

The Scot became angry.

"M'n," he thundered, "can ye no' understan' plain Scotch?"

The boy promptly withdrew, and returned with a bottle and two glasses.

Conscientious Florence.

MRS. KEENE had read so much about the danger of swallowing grape-seeds that she endeavored to make her little daughter, Florence, chew her grapes and always eject the seeds. The little girl found this method little to her taste, and her mother had frequent occasion to reprove her for not obeying instructions.

One day the little girl was not feeling particularly well, and the mother deemed it necessary to give her a dose of medicine, in the form of two small pills. Knowing the child would not like the medicine, she concealed it in a dish of orange marmalade, which she offered to the child with a cracker.

A few moments later Florence came running to her mother, crying:

"Here, mother," and she extended her hand, "are the seeds. Wasn't it lucky I found them? I came awful near swallowing them."

Each One for Himself.

YOUNG RAYMOND had been busy all of the afternoon with his little pail and shovel down on the beach. Bedtime came, and wearily he stood while his mother undressed him. Then prayers were next in order, and by that time he was almost in the land of nod.

"Now, be a good boy, dear, and say your prayers. Thank God for all His goodness to you." His head had fallen on her shoulder. "Raymond," she said, sternly, as she shook him, "you can not go to bed until you have thanked God for His blessings; for giving you a nice, comfortable home, and a lovely beach to play on, and a mother to love you. Think of the number of little boys to-night who are hungry, and without a home, and no nice clothes to wear, and——"

Here Raymond's interest became roused sufficiently to protest sleepily:

"Mother, I think them's th' fellers that ort to do th' prayin'."

"NOW," said the physician to the distinguished poet who had summoned him, "you are not in good shape and I must absolutely forbid all brain work."

"But, doctor," protested the poet, "may I not write some verses?"

The doctor laughed. "Sure," he said, "write all the verses you want to."

The Canny Scot.

IT was the Scottish minister's second Sunday in his newly appointed parish, and he had reason to complain at the meager collection.

"Mon," replied one of the elders, "they are close—verra close. But"—and he came closer and became more confidential—"the auld meenister he put three or four saxpence into the plate bissel', just to gie them a start. Of course he took the saxpence awa' with him afterwards."

The new minister tried the same plan, but the following Sunday was a repetition of the others, a dismal failure. The entire collection was not only small, but to his great consternation, his own coins were missing. "Ye may be a better preacher than the auld meenister," exclaimed the elder, "but if ye had half the knowledge of the world, an' o' yer ain flock in particular, ye'd ha' done what he did an' glued the saxpence to the plate!"

Did as He Was Told.

"YOU have such strange speaking terms over here," said an Englishman traveling in America. "The other night I was in a sleeping car, in an upper berth, and a man in the lower berth said to me: 'Look out there.'

"Of course I did look out, and oh, how I regretted it!"

Don't Recognize Him.

"WELL, James," enviously said the suffragist to her groom, as he came back from the village on election day, "I suppose you have been exercising the franchise?"

With a touch of his forehead James answered: "Please, ma'am, which horse is that?"

No Security.

"HEY, waiter, I want to order a steak; there's none on the bill of fare."

"We are not serving steak today, sir. You see, we have a new cook, and he has not as yet arranged for his bond."

Middle Age.

UNCLE RASTUS, Mr. Thompson explained, was employed on a farm in Virginia, where there was a prize bull that the owner was compelled to send for a veterinary surgeon and have his horns cut off.

Uncle Rastus viewed the proceeding with evident satisfaction from a safe place in the stable, and when the sharp horns had been rendered harmless he rushed up and seized the veterinarian's hand.

"I'se cert'ly glad, doctah," he gratefully exclaimed, "dat yo' hab done gone an' cut offen dat bull's ho'ns!"

"You are, are you!" jestingly responded the veterinarian. "Why are you so glad about it?"

"It am jes' dis way, doctah," explained Rastus, with considerable feeling. "I'se too old to climb trees an' I'se too young to die."

His Business.

"YOU insist that the officer arrested you while you were quietly attending to your own business"

"es, your honor. He caught me suddenly by the collar, and threatened to strike me with his club unless I accompanied him to the station house."

"You say you were quietly attending to your own business, making no noise or commotion of any kind?"

"Yes, your honor."

"What is your business?"

"I'm a burglar."

Minister or Chicken?

A CONVOCATION of ministers had just taken place when I went one day to buy some frying chickens from old Aunt Sally, who generally had plenty for sale.

"Why, Lor' me! All my chickens have done entered the ministry!" was her reply to my demand.

The Advantage of the Window Seat.

NOT long ago a patron of a cafe in Chicago summoned his waiter and delivered himself as follows:

"I want to know the meaning of this. Look at this piece of beef. See its size. Last evening I was served with a portion more than twice the size of this."

"Where did you sit?" asked the waiter.

"What has that to do with it? I believe I sat by the window."

"In that case," smiled the waiter, "the explanation is simple. We always serve customers by the window large portions. It's a good advertisement for the place."

Stumped.

THERE used to be an official of the Government at Washington, who, with others, was charged with the duty of examining applicants for appointment to places in the consular service; and with this official it was an obsession that no man should be accredited to a country the language of which he did not speak.

On one occasion there appeared before him a young Westerner who was desirous of getting a consular place in Siam.

"You are aware, of course," said the official referred to, "that I never recommend the appointment of anyone unless he speaks the language of the country to which he desires to go. Now, I suppose, you do not speak Siamese?"

"If," answered the westerner, with a smile, "you will kindly ask me a question in Siamese, I shall be happy to answer it."

Just the Place.

CO-ED—Are you going to the picture show again to-night? This is the third time this week! And you've gone with the same man every time!

Fussee—Oh, the moving pictures don't disturb us!

Doing a Man's Part.

"WHAT are you doing for our cause?" asked a suffragette worker.

"Doing?" replied the man. "I'm supporting one of your most enthusiastic members."

Justice.

"ALL right," fumed Jiblets, handing over ten dollars. "I'll pay, but let me say to your honor that it is rank injustice. Why, look at the damage to my car from your rotten roads—the mud's an inch thick on every bit of that machine."

"Thet's where the justice comes in," smiled the local Solomon. "At four dollars a load, it'll cost us about ten dollars restorin' the mud your old machine has been a-gatherin' up outen our highways."

True to Habit.

"WHAT did that young lawyer chap say, Matilda, when you told him it was time to go?"

"He immediately began argument for a stay.

CREAM CHEESE AND BAR LE DUC—One cream cheese and one jar red Bar le Duc jelly. Toast six double saltine crackers and spread the cheese around the edges and put spoon of jelly in center. Serve on paper napkin.

New Swimming Act To Be Headliner at Forsyth

In the upper picture John F. Conroy is seen with his two beautiful diving models, the headliners at the Forsyth, while below is a striking scene from the photo-dramatization of "Les Miserables," which will be seen at the Grand.

John F. Conroy and His Models to Present Novel Vaudeville Physical Culture Feature.

Swimming, so popular this summer with Atlantans, will be the motif of the bill at the Forsyth this week, while at the Grand another moving picture production of a literary classic will be the attraction all week.

There have been several diving and swimming acts here this summer, but in John F. Conroy and his diving models the Forsyth management promises something entirely new. Conroy is assisted by two beautiful women, who, in addition to their personal attractions, have marked swimming ability.

The success of the "Quo Vadis" picture production several weeks ago will be followed by "Les Miserables." This is said to be a wonderful production of Victor Hugo's famous novel, and it is believed that it will draw record crowds.

Conroy's Diving Models Headliners at Forsyth.

Quality will be the foundation for the bill at the Forsyth this week, and the management of the theater declares that the program will be superior to any offering that has been recorded in the theater since the return of the vaudeville policy twelve weeks ago.

The headline attraction is John F. Conroy and his diving models, one of the most pretentious acts in vaudeville. Nearly $4,000 was expended by Conroy in the production. It represents a beautiful pool, supplied by a perfect waterfall in a wooded dell. This scene is made more realistic by a copper light electrical arrangement and the picture itself adds value to the drawing card.

Among the other features that promise to make this bill of an unusual value will be The Great Lester, famous the world over as the peer of all ventriloquists. Lester was positively the first ventriloquist to introduce smoking, eating and drinking while operating his figure. He was also the first ventriloquist to enjoin his audience to view his work at close range, in that he freely mingled in the audience while operating his favorite figure. A great many of his feats have been counterfeited by other ventriloquists, but because of this man's wonderful ability, he has always been able to keep his act new and original.

Still another feature will be the appearance of Delro, the master of the piano-accordion. This is not the accordeonist who was seen at the Forsyth and the Grand during this year, but the positive master of this peculiar instrument.

Comedy will be introduced by Smith, Cook and Miss Brandon, a trio of thoroughly capable people. There has never been a better combination of grotesque character actors than Smith and Cook, and Miss Brandon is of that vaudeville soubrette type that has always been so successful.

George Auger and company will supply the novelty feature of the bill. Auger is a magnificent type of physical manhood, a perfect giant in stature and not a bad looking man at that. He is a comedian of unusual talent and will be supported by a company of clever people, who are below the average height.

Shriner and Richards in "Just Nonsense," and the BeAnos grotesque acrobats complete the program.

"Les Miserables" Picture At Grand This Week.

Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables" has been read by millions of people all over the earth. It has been produced after a fashion on stages in every clime. It has been the foundation of many wonderful paintings, of stories, of arguments and accepted as a text by some clans. "Les Miserables" is going to be seen at the Grand all of this week at daily matinee at 2:30 and at night at 8:30. The greatest actors of France will be seen in the principal character painted in the famous novel.

"Les Miserables" has been photo-dramatized. A great company of French people, at a cost of $100,000, have made the 12,000 feet of film that makes up the exhibition of nine reels that will give an entertainment running for two hours, including intermissions.

The French people saw the "Quo Vadis" picture and in giving credit to Italy for the grand accomplishment determined to outdo if possible. And it is said that all their photo-plays that

BOOK REVIEWS

By EDWIN MARKHAM.

Much in Little.

Among the interesting publications of E. P. Dutton & Co. is THE EVERYMAN ENCYCLOPEDIA, edited by Andrew Boyle. Issued in twelve volumes, it appeals through its compactness in size and the ease with which it lends itself to consultation.

Each of the dozen volumes has about 640 pages, with about 900 words to a page. Special pains has been taken, therefore, to select type which, though small, is clear and legible. The complete work will contain six million words more than any other encyclopedia published.

The work will be judiciously illustrated. No one can find anything but praise for a volume of an encyclopedia which slips into the pocket and costs only 35 cents.

The Canal at First Hand.

In ZONE POLICEMAN 88, by Harry A. Franck (The Century Company, $1.50), the reader who wants to see the life of the little strip that is making us famous will find all that he has hoped for—vainly in the past.

Mr. Franck writes with the pen of the man who moves in the inner circle of endeavor and sees with the eyes of intelligence and humor.

Whether he discourses of the taking of a census or the whims and caste rules that govern the various classes of toilers, he is always enliveningly.

The lady who boasts of two servants and will see the canal finished with a sigh, since it means a return to the States, where she will be forced to do her own washing, stands out in the author's pages as an incident in a volume teeming with incidents.

A narrative which throws real light on the wonder workers of the century and worth reading for the information it contains. It makes the zone seem nearer home.

A Romance of Polynesia.

Polynesia is a pleasant place in which to set a story. The name is freighted with mystery, and few of us can confute any statements an author may bring forth as to scenic or other attributes. So Mr. James Francis Dwyer takes our believing hearts with him in THE WHITE WATERFALL (Doubleday, Page & Co. $1.20), takes us "past the Dale of Tears," and the Vermillion Pit and the Sacrificial Altar, with many a catch of the breath and many a look back over the shoulder.

A California scientist with two lovely daughters, a picturesque villain, a rascally captain and a gallant youth are the leading characters. The story is told with vim and charm, and the novel illustrations add to the vividness.

The Catfish.

In his latest book, THE CATFISH, Charles Marriott has produced a novel that is full of fine feeling and rich with subtle and lovely thoughts. (The Bobbs-Merrill Co., $1.35.)

The name may strike the reader as odd—it certainly is odd, considering the nature of the theme. For the Catfish in George's life was Mary. To save further guesswork, let us define a Catfish in the author's words:

"At one time the North Sea fishermen brought their cod to market in tanks in the holds of their vessels. In the tanks the cod lived with ease, with the result that they came to market slack, flabby and limp. Some genius among the fishermen introduced one catfish into each of his tanks and found that his cod came to market firm, brisk and wholesome."

Hence it is to be assumed that the world's catfish is anything or anybody that introduces into life the "queer, unpleasant, disturbing touch of the Kingdom of Heaven."

To George, a complex individual, Mary was the one woman who could appreciate his inmost nature; but George did not marry Mary, as we might imagine he would; he married Lesbia, and so went through life with an advantage that most men do not possess—that of having two women interested in him. It strikes one that George was a little selfish, but at any rate the story and the incidents therein give to Mr. Marriott plenty of chance for excellent character work.

The Catfish is unfortunate in its name. It is really a novel that shows high gifts.

For Little Children.

A STORY GARDEN FOR LITTLE CHILDREN, by Maud Lindsay (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard, $1), is a charming book of twenty stories for small boys and girls. Each tale is illustrated and told with a simplicity that must appeal to the most immature mind.

Mothers will welcome this new book with its similes taken from everyday life that children know and love.

Alaska in the Making.

What we know about Alaska is a good deal like what we know of the Gallic War—"Omnia Gallia est in tres partes divisa"—the rest we have gathered in from stories colored to make the romantic more romantic and the real often too real.

In ALASKA, AN EMPIRE IN THE MAKING, by J. J. Underwood (Dodd, Mead & Co., $2.00), there is a wealth of material so attractive that it serves as the best possible introduction to our big national asset in the North.

Mr. Underwood has been a newspaper man, writer and miner. He once owned the world's farthest north newspaper, which sold at 25 cents a copy.

Every American ought to be interested in a country thirteen times the size of New York State, with arable and agricultural land of 64,000,000 acres. We paid for it nearly seven and a half millions, and one of its mines, the Treadwell, has produced four times that amount.

Alaska is believed by competent engineers to be a gold mine in more senses than one. Mr. Underwood's book has the quality that grips the reader. It is not a mere recital of statistics; it tells its story as a story and as a result we get a splendid narrative, crowded with facts—every one of them interesting.

The author has settled ideas as to the development of the country.

"The day must come," he says, "when the Government must either build a trunk railroad itself, or throw the country open and offer inducements for private capital to do so. Then the homeseeker will settle ahead of the construction lines and there will be a full fruition of the country's natural products."

By the way, Governor Sulzer, who has made fourteen trips to the Territory, where the town of Sulzer is named for him, is an admirer of Mr. Underwood.

Hereafter let those who want to know about the Klondike, about gold, or coal, or game, or travel in this land of Arctic spell read this book.

The chances are it will make them anxious to see at first hand what Mr. Underwood so cleverly and accurately describes.

Polyanna.

In whatever way anyone—and why not an author—can add to the happines of the world, the effort is to be praised.

Now POLYANNA, by Eleanor H. Parker (L. C. Page & Co., $1.25), is called the glad book, and its authorship puts Mis Parker in the class of those who distribute happiness.

"Pollyanna" can hardly be called a literary gem. It is more or less of a "goody-goody" book such as we used to carry away from Sunday school before the days of Carnegie libraries.

The heroine "plays the game," the game being making the best of things, and by her efforts some of the characters she works on are almost made human.

The idea is all right, and the idea makes the book.

Publishers' Notes.

L. C. Page & Co., announce that "Pollyanna," the glad book by Eleanor H. Porter, will appear in an English edition at once; also "Pussy Black Face," by Miss Marshall Saunders.

Dodd, Mead & Co., announce a new book this spring by Cyrus Townsend Brady.

The John C. Winston Co., has sent to press for a fourth large edition "Sylvia," by Upton Sinclair.

Book For Men, Free
8,000 Words, 30 Illustrations

TO MY READERS:
Of the little illustrated advice book described below, which I gladly send free to all men who fill in the coupon, I beg to say that it represents the very BEST information of a private nature which I am able to offer you as a result of over 30 years' observation and study of my subject, during which time I have personally interviewed many thousands of men, young and elderly, single and married, rich and poor alike, who came to me in confidence with their confessions of debility, lost nerve force and failing strength.

It is, reader, this vast and unusual opportunity which has enabled me to compile this very popular and valuable little free book (over a million of which have been sent everywhere to men who wrote me for them), and in a manner to reflect the exact living, breathing experiences and needs of real men who sought information as to the newer ways of self treatment without the use of drugs.

Remember, this book of over 8,000 words and 30 illustrations will come to you by return mail in reply to your request, and in a perfectly plain, sealed envelope, for it is no one's business but your own what the envelope contains. There is absolutely no obligation on your part to buy anything or pay anything, and merely the receipt of this book does not mean in any way that you are to use one of my VITALIZERS (see description below), and, in fact, only a portion of the book has any reference to the VITALIZER at all. Primarily it is a compendium of useful information for private reference, which you and all other men may easily profit by through life.

Therefore, please use the coupon, or, if nearly, I should be very glad to have you call.

SANDEN, AUTHOR.

It is a fact, reader, which you and I must recognize and admit, that the whole world admires and is fascinated by strong, vigorous, husky, manhood, and we must also admit that it is this same manhood and this alone which is back of the real leaders and producers in every walk of life. No matter where we go, we find it to be the manly, vigorous, vital fellow who forges to the front, who fascinates men and women of his community, who does the really great things. An unmanly man merely means nature's laws gone wrong, for it is he who halts and hesitates, who takes the back seat, who does not fit into the picture in a way that a manly, vital nature should. And yet, reader, it is my firm belief that any man, no matter what his past, no matter what dissipations or follies may have left their mark upon his physical and mental being, I say to you that such a man, unless there be some unusual reason, may hope for a complete return of his strength, vigor and self confidence, if he but go about his self-restoration in a natural, commonsense way.

I make a little appliance which we will call a VITALIZER, because I think that is the best word to describe its strange power. I don't want you to think of getting one of these VITALIZERS just now, but I would like you to investigate my claims as to what I believe can be accomplished by almost any weakened man who uses this VITALIZER faithfully for a few weeks. I speak, of course, of him who is willing to give up dissipation and lead a decent, conservative life, not only while using the VITALIZER, but for the future. The other kind of man, the dissipated, can hope for nothing from any treatment, no matter what it may be, hence such a man is eliminated from my consideration.

This little VITALIZER is made to wear upon the body all night. It weighs only several ounces and is no more unhandy than an ordinary belt, yet it generates a great FORCE that I call VIGOR, which flows into your blood, organs and nerves while you sleep. Men say it often takes any pain or weakness out of the back in one application, and that 60 to 90 days' use has been sufficient to restore manly strength and to put men in the "never felt better in my life" class. Special attachments carry the FORCE of the VITALIZER to any part of the body, for the use of women as well as men in cases of rheumatism, kidney, liver, stomach, bladder disorders, etc.

Over two hundred thousand of these VITALIZERS have been used or are now being used by men all over the world.

You had better learn more of this VITALIZER. It is fully described in my free book. If you live near me, why not call and test the VITALIZER yourself?

WHAT THE FREE BOOK TELLS

The free illustrated advice booklet mentioned above is meant to be a simple declaration of certain important truths that every man in the world should know. The day has gone by when men are kept in ignorance of the real problems pertaining to these private subjects, and this illustrated advice booklet, which I send to men sealed, by mail, gives certain important facts relating to sex, just as these facts are. The booklet also fully describes my VITALIZER and you are told how you may get one for your own use if you decide that you want one. Please use coupon below, or call. Hours 9 to 6; Sundays, 10 to 1.

CHATTER OF SOCIETY

By Polly Peachtree

Dear Miss Peachtree:

I ENJOY reading your "Chatter of Society" in The Sunday American, and think it is just as lively as it can be, and you are doing great good with your chatter paragraphs.

Give us a touch up on being unsociable to strangers. I have been in your city nearly a year; have visited your churches, and find them seemingly glad to see you, but they never inquire who you are or what you are. Being of a reserved disposition, I have never tried to make any acquaintances, but being of social standing in my home city and always ready to extend the right hand to those who were deserving, I feel keenly my solitary condition.

These lines come to me:

The night's descending shadows come,
As with a melancholy hum,
And twilight gathers up her wings,
And there is music on the strings
Of every lute, whose cadence blends
The loving hearts of trusting friends
Together in tranquillity—
But there are none to care for me!

* * *

THE above letter came to me last week, and it certainly set me to thinking, and I confess that I am at a loss to discuss the subject. Ever since I was old enough to think, I have known the word hospitality as a synonym for Atlanta, and never before has the city been accused of the coldness my correspondent suggests, so far as I know.

Often I have heard people say that Atlanta was too ready to take the stranger within her social arms, and many times have I been called upon to defend Atlanta's lack of strict conservativeness that marks the social ranks of Savannah, Macon, Augusta and most of the other cities in the South. My defense has been that Atlanta is up to date, growing, eager to welcome new blood, provided it is good blood, and ready to assume that it is good until proved otherwise.

Especially are men welcomed in Atlanta's social and club life, the only requisite for a stranger being a good friend who introduces him, after which it is up to him.

And the task of making friends is easy. That has been the experience of a dozen men I know personally—men who came here without any money except what they made in their professions.

The churches, too, I am sure, stress the social side and give cordial welcome to the stranger. Because of these assurances of ready hospitality to those who come to Atlanta, I can not say anything of the lack of it, except that in Atlanta, as in any city I have ever heard of, one has to seek friends to get them, and show friendliness to find cordiality. And usually one must have one or two sponsors to enter society—personal acquaintances who are themselves members of the club or social circles aspired to. This, however, is a requirement not peculiar to Atlanta or any one city, but common to all, I believe.

Perhaps my correspondent is too reserved and masks so thoroughly his wish to be friendly that possible friends pass by without knowing it. I can assure him that there are lots of sweet and pretty girls here who never have so many young men friends as to exhaust their supply of charming cordiality to a "nice man."

I heard a young girl say the other day, anent a clever, good-looking newspaper man who did not go to parties or indulge in social life, that in these days it looked like the business girls had a better chance to meet the men worth while than girls in society, and she quite envied them their broad acquaintance and their opportunity of constantly enlarging this acquaintance among the men who are doing the work of the world.

No, I am afraid that I can't take up the cudgels for you on this score, dear reader. It is my opinion that you do Atlanta and Atlantans an injustice.

* * *

THAT you may realize, my friends, how Atlanta gets ahead of other cities, in a social sense as in other ways, I will tell you that Newport, the Great and Only, is to have its season opened with a "Mother Goose" ball. This function is novel in Newport, but it comes some two months after Atlanta society witnessed the "Mother Goose" pageant, arranged by Mrs. Peel and others.

And I read, too, that in far-away Denver "the social season will reach a climax with the presentation of the Oscar Wilde comedy, 'The Importance of Being Earnest,' by talented amateurs, next week." (Might be quoting back numbers of The Sunday American, you see.) Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, who aspires to the social leadership of Newport, gives this "Mother Goose" ball, and she herself will impersonate that famous character.

By the way, it might be a good idea for Atlanta to follow once in awhile, especially as we have such a good lead, anyway, and repeat, on a larger scale, our former "Mother Goose" affair. Instead of the regulation mask ball, for instance, that the Nine o'Clocks give every year, why couldn't we have a "Mother Goose" ball? Atlanta society has material a-plenty.

I would not care to suggest a possible "Mother Goose," though there may be several in Atlanta society who could assume the role easily. But I will say that, in my opinion, Sarah Rawson would be a most fascinating "Bo-peep," who never in the world would lose her sheep. Mignon McCarty would be a charming "Little Miss Muffett," and I should love to see Marsh Adair as "Tom, Tom, the Piper's Son." Helen Dargan could be "Mary, Mary, Quite Contrary," because she has the sweetest disposition in the world. I should be afraid to suggest this to some of the girls—"cat" that I am!

If Gene Haynes should attend the party "Little Boy Blue" would be quite in his line, and as "Little Jack Horner who sat in the corner" and talked about "what a big boy am I," there's no one but Lamar Hill who could fill the part.

"The Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe and had so many chil—" I'll leave that to anybody who wants it. But "Humpty Dumpty" should by all means be Joe Brown Connally, and Eugene Kelly might be the fierce and foolish "Fee, Fi, Fo, Fum," if he could borrow a false mustache and a sword. By the law of contraries Mrs. Robert Maddox, the soul of hospitality, should come as "Mother Hubbard," for her cupboard, you may be sure, will never be bare. And how about Mr. and Mrs. Tom Paine as "Jack Spratt" and his wife, or Annie Lee McKenzie and Milton Dargan as "Jack and Jill." "Jim" Dickey might impersonate "Ole King Cole, the Merry Old Soul," and I can just see Clarence Knowles as "Little Tommy Tucker, who sang for his supper." (I wonder if he would ever get any, if songs only would purchase his food?) As "Queen of Hearts" I quite fancy Harriet Calhoun, or Mrs. Mitchell King, or Mrs. Charles T. Hopkins, or—well, we should have to have several "Queens of Hearts"—that's sure!

A PRETTY compliment to Miss Jessie Wilson, the daughter of the President, whose engagement has just been announced, has just been paid by Miss Blanche Nevin, the sculptress. Miss Nevin's nephew, Franklin B. Sayre, is the fortunate fellow who is to make Miss Jessie the thirteenth White House bride.

Miss Nevin's tribute to Miss Wilson is in the form of a song. Here are two verses of it:

Fling the door open and swing the gate wide,
Welcome the entering feet of the bride;
Eager the groom on the threshold stands
Holding his arms and his outstretched hands;
Blessed are you who true love win—
Jessie; come in; come in.

In heat of summer, in winter's cold,
This roof shall shelter young or old;
Come weal, come woe, whate'er betide,
Palm to palm and side by side,
Into the house of your true love's kin,
Jessie, come in; come in.

Miss Nevin has our sincere compliments on her poem. It is a gracious tribute to a gracious young lady.

* * *

THE amusing choice of Jessie Wilson in choosing a second edition of her father, regarding personal appearance, for her husband has served to remind Atlanta that one of our popular bachelors is so much like the President he might easily win one of the Wilson girls should the two remaining ones have the same preference as had Jessie for that kind of a face. (I hope this is not lese majeste.) I herewith extend "the tip" for what it is worth to the Atlanta edition of the President. Of course, you all know, to whom I refer. Anyway, he is one of the Capital City Club men, popular socially and professionally, has lived the single life long enough, and through the years has flirted as man was meant to flirt. Now, I will say no more, lest this paragraph degenerate into one of those guessing contests for which the reward is a bottle of patent medicine to the bright young person giving the name of a famous French Emperor, who would "stay put," and whose name was "N-p-l-o-n."

* * *

IT is just possible that Atlanta may have a royal visitor in the future. Dispatches from abroad tell us that the Prince of Monaco is about to pay another visit to the United States, in his yacht L'Hirondelle, in search of investments for his enor-

Miss Ellen Meek

A beautiful young woman of Nashville, Tenn., who will join the ranks of Atlanta's young matrons, when she becomes the bride of Inman Gray in the fall. Miss Meek is a gifted musician and sings well. She is already known here, through frequent visits to her sister, Mrs. Robert Lee Cooney. Below, is Miss Julia Dunning, an Atlanta girl who is identified with musical circles. Miss Dunning has recently returned from an Eastern visit, a feature of which was a stay with friends in Annapolis during the Naval Academy commencement. (Both Photographs by Lenney.)

Thomas-Chambers

MR. AND MRS. DAVID LAFAYETTE THOMAS announce the engagement of their daughter, Eva Matilda, to Mr. William Evans Chambers, the marriage to take place at St. John's Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Saturday afternoon, August 16, at 4 o'clock.

MISS LAURETTE LEWIS, of Atlanta, and Charles Edgar Jones, of Galveston, Tex., were married Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Church of the Epiphany, Inman Park, the Rev. Russell K. Smith officiating.

The church was decorated with quantities of palms and many growing plants, draped with large bows of white tulle. The altar vases were filled with pink gladioli.

Maritz Gross, of Galveston, was best man. Master William Nicholas Bennett was ring bearer. Henry Bonney, Jr., and Harold Levert were ushers.

The bride wore a traveling suit of wistaria crepe meteor, with white panama hat, and a corsage of bride roses. Mrs. W. N. Bennett, the bride's mother, was gowned in white volle with shadow lace, with a white panama hat trimmed in pink roses. She carried Killarney roses.

Mrs. John Paul Jones, of Galveston, wore Nell rose charmeuse satin with shadow lace. Her hat of white lace was adorned with pink roses. She carried Killarney roses.

Mr and Mrs. Jones left immediately after the ceremony for their future home in Galveston, going via New Orleans for a short visit.

* * *

MR. AND MRS. LOUIS C. ROUGLIN left Saturday evening for Ocean View, Va., where they will spend several weeks, later going to New York and Atlantic City, and returning to Atlanta the latter part of August.

* * *

Mrs. Lottie Gray Browne leaves shortly for a few weeks' rest. On her return she will be connected with the Atlanta Institute of Music and Oratory.

* * *

MR. AND MRS. FRAMPTON ERROLL ELLIS, who have been at the Marlborough-Blenheim, Atlantic City, since their marriage, are expected home to-day. Mr. and Mrs. Ellis have had a most delightful stay at the famous resort, where another bride and bridegroom from Atlanta—Mr. and Mrs. Claude Douthit—were also stopping.

On their way home Mr. and Mrs. Ellis spent a few days in Washington. They are at home for the summer with Mrs. Ellis' mother, Mrs. John Oliver, on Peachtree street.

* * *

Mrs. Lloyd Parks and two young daughters, Misses Alice and Pearl Parks, are spending the summer in the mountains of North Carolina.

* * *

MR. AND MRS. HUGH FOREMAN, of New York, are among the popular members of society enjoying the season at Toxaway. During their residence in New York Mr. and Mrs. Foreman have been greatly missed, and they have taken part in the various informal pleasures enjoyed by the Atlanta colony at Toxaway, since their arrival. They will spend the remainder of the summer at Toxaway, returning to New York in the fall. Mrs. Foreman was Miss Josie Stockdell, of Atlanta, before her marriage.

* * *

MRS. HARVEY ANDERSON and Miss Rosalie Davis have been entertained by friends in London the past month. It was the height of the London season, with the annual horse show, grand opera, boat races and every kind of social entertainment.

The horse show is the largest in the world. In the class of coaches alone there were 36 contestants. Mr. Alfred Vanderbilt took the blue ribbon. As usual, he drove with his wife, formerly Mrs. McKim, of New York, sitting beside him on the box seat in grand opera, Caruso was ordered to sing in "La Boheme" for the King, Queen and French President, M. Poincare, at which performance the Atlantans were present.

Mrs. Anderson and Miss Davis were invited one afternoon out to tea at the wonderful O'Hagan estate, with its celebrated rose gardens and trout streams. Mr. O'Hagan is the Rockefeller of England.

Another day was spent as guests of Sir and Lady Crisp at their castle on the Thames. Here they witnessed the annual Henley boat races.

Mrs. Anderson and Miss Davis will travel for two months longer, returning in the fall. Miss Davis is to be one of next season's debutantes. She will be formally introduced by her father and mother in November, followed with entertainments by Mrs. Hudson Moore, Mrs. Larvey Anderson and Mrs. Hugh Willet.

* * *

MR. AND MRS. INMAN SANDERS and their young daughter, Miss Catherine Gay Sanders, of Memphis, who have been the guests of Mrs. Sanders' parents, Captain and Mrs. Edward S. Gay, for a short visit, have gone to Highlands, N. C., to spend the remainder of the summer.

* * *

Mrs. Hamilton Douglas has as her guest Miss Martha Shippen, of Ellijay, in whose honor a number of informal affairs are being given. Miss Shippen was the honor guest at an informal dance Wednesday evening at the Capital City Club, when Mr. and Mrs. Douglas entertained a few young people.

* * *

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM B. Burwell, who have taken the home of Clark Howell for the summer, have with them Mrs. William Leland Southwell, of Macon, and Mrs. Hunter Reed, of Eatonton. Mr. Southwell was here several days the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Adair tendered them a dinner at the Piedmont Driving Club during their stay, and Mr. and Mrs. Burwell gave a beautiful dinner one evening at the Georgian Terrace for their guests. Tuesday evening Mr. and Mrs. M. O. Jackson entertained at the Capital City Country Club for Mr. and Mrs. Southwell and Mrs. Reed. Dinner was served on the veranda, and the table had as its centerpiece a mound of wildwood ferns and "heart leaves," with here and there some wild flower which gave a touch of color to the decoration. Mrs. Burwell wore a costume of white crepe embroidered in black, with girdle of Nell Rose satin drawn through a buckle of cut steel. Her hat was of rose crepe. Mrs. Southwell was handsome in pink French crepe and lace, touches of black giving tone to her gown, and she wore a black hat swathed in tulle.

Mrs. Reed was becomingly gowned in pink embroidered voile adorned with cream lace, her little poke bonnet of pink crepe trimmed with a wreath of French roses.

Wednesday Mr. and Mrs. Burwell gave an informal luncheon for eight guests at their home. Pink carnations filled a basket on the center of the table. The handle was wreathed with smilax and was tied with bows of pink tulle, and the minor details of the luncheon carried out in the pink motif.

* * *

Miss Nellie R. Lee and mother, Mrs. C. D. Comstock, are spending July visiting in Cincinnati, Chicago and Indianapolis.

* * *

Mrs. Frederic L. Beers gave a theater party for Miss Fannie Treadwell of St. Augustine. Invited to meet the honor guest were Mrs. C. P. Stough, Mrs. W. A. Perkins, Mrs. Ed Lee Wight, Jr., Mrs. Garrett Shipp and Miss Frankie McCrory.

* * *

MR. AND MRS. W. I. MADDOX entertained at dinner Thursday evening at their home on Howard street in compliment to Miss Dorothy Robbins, of Birmingham, the guest of Mrs. J. P. B. Allan, and for Miss Helen Jones' guests, Miss Nellie Kiser Stewart, and Miss Margaret Buckner, of Roanoke.

The living room where Mrs. Maddox received her guests was decorated with yellow flowers gracefully arranged in baskets and jardinieres. The table had a centerpiece of pink and white carnations, and the placecards were handpainted in pink flowers.

Mrs. Maddox wore white crepe, heavily embroidered and draped over net.

The guests included Misses Dorothy Robbins, Helen Jones, Margaret Buckner, Nellie Kiser Stewart, Mrs. Maude Johnston Maddox, Mr. and Mrs. Adam Jones, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. B. Allan. After dinner a number of young men joined the party for dancing.

* * *

MRS. HINTON BAKER will entertain at a matinee party at the Forsyth Monday afternoon in compliment to Mrs. B. S. Dunbar, Jr., of Augusta, who is visiting Mrs. George Boynton, Mrs. King, Mrs. from Augusta, but is now spending several months with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Robinson, on Piedmont avenue.

The party will include a number of Augusta friends who are in the city. They are Mrs. B. S. Dunbar, Jr., Mrs. George Boynton, rMs. King, Mrs. Samuel Garlington, Mrs. Charles Boynton and Mrs. J. B. Robinson.

* * *

Mrs. William Robinson is in Monroe with friends for a short visit.

* * *

Miss Josephine Mobley will go to Monroe this week to visit her cousin, Miss Mary Mobley, who will entertain at a house party. Miss Rachel Nunnally, of Monroe, will also have a house party at the same time, and many parties are being planned in their honor.

* * *

Mrs. E. A. Jones and her young son, Ragan Jones, are being pleasantly entertained as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Burkette Barrett in Monroe.

* * *

GENERAL ROBERT K. EVANS will be executive officer of a national and international shoot to be held in August at Camp Perry, Ohio, in command of the encampment. Among the contestants will be Lieutenant John D. Burnett, of Fort McPherson, who left Saturday, accompanied by Mrs. Burnett, to spend a month at Niagara before going on to Ohio. Lieutenant Burnett is a distinguished army "pistol shot," and his friends predict that he will add to his fame at the big tournament.

Lieutenant and Mrs. Burnett are among the most popular members of the post contingent. They are to be at the Queen's Royal Hotel while in Niagara, and Lieutenant Burnett will also take part in a competitive shoot there.

* * *

ONE of the small parties of this week will be a bridge to be given Tuesday afternoon by Mrs. Harry Stotesbury-Cutter in honor of Miss Dorothy Robbins, of Birmingham, the guest of Mrs. J. P. B. Allan, and for Miss Fannie Neal Anderson, of Athens, the guest of Miss Margaret Ashford.

Invited to meet them are Mrs. J. P. B. Allan, Mrs. Victor R. Smith, Mrs. Edward Malone, Mrs. Berrien Moore, Miss Colquitt Carter Cole, Mrs. Wilson Runette, Mrs. Robert Hopkins, Mrs. Clarence Angier, Mrs. Howard Parker, Misses Elizabeth Parker, Willie Loyless, Grace Thorn and Ethel Tutwiler.

* * *

Miss Esther Ginsberg entertained last Wednesday night, at her home on Capitol avenue, in honor of her visitors, Mrs. S. I. Ginsberg and Miss Sallie Allen, of Birmingham.

A whist party was played during the early part of the evening and the prizes were won by Mrs. S. I. Ginsberg and Harry Abelman.

A light buffet supper was served to 50 invited guests. Punch was served during the evening by little Misses Mary and Annie Ginsberg.

Some of the other out-of-town guests were Miss Pauline Ellison, of Charleston, S. C.; Miss Cecil Mendel, of Monroe, Ga., and Miss Annie Hollander, of New York City.

* * *

Miss Emily Lowndes has returned home, after an extended stay in Columbus.

Summering at Long Branch

Miss Josephine Lowenstein, who is noted as the most beautifully gowned woman in Atlanta, her toilets being always of the latest and most artistic Parisian style. Miss Lowenstein drives her own car, and is athletic as well as one of the handsomest girls of the city. She is now at Long Branch, for the summer. (Photo by Wesley Hirshburg.)

In the World of Society

MRS. CHARLES E. RICE and Miss Annie Sykes Rice returned home last week from Clayton, where they were delightfully entertained as the guests of Mrs. C. V. LeCraw and the Misses LeCraw. "Hill Crest," the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. LeCraw, is an ideal summer residence, built in the style of a California bungalow.

The living room is a fine place for dancing, and an informal dance was tendered Miss Rice by her hostess. The entire bungalow is built of trees grown on the plantation which surrounds Hill crest.

* * *

Miss Georgia Rice is being pleasantly entertained as the guest of Miss Helen Smith in Jackson.

* * *

MRS. WILLIAM LELAND SOUTHWELL, of Macon, has returned home after a visit to Mrs. William B. Burwell. A number of informal affairs were tendered Mrs. Southwell during her visit, who was the guest of Mrs. William Haskell Rhett before going to Mrs. Burwell.

Mr. and Mrs. Burwell are occupying the town house of Mr. and Mrs. Clark Howell, on Peachtree street, during the sessions of the Legislature, and they have already made many friends during their stay in the city.

* * *

MISS FRANCES L. REISMAN entertained yesterday at a matinee box party at the Forsyth in honor of her cousin, Miss Annie Hollander, of New York, who is visiting her brother, Dr. G. Louis Hollander, in West End.

The other guests were Mrs. S. I. Ginsberg and Miss Sallie Allen, of Birmingham; Miss Bertha Ellison, Miss Esther Ginsberg, Miss Anna Reisman and Mrs. G. Louis Hollander.

* * *

MISS MARGUERITE MORENA, of Pensacola, is a pretty young visitor who has been pleasantly entertained during the past week as the guest of Miss Luie Sergeant.

Miss Morena is on her way home from New York, where she visited friends, following her departure from Washington, having spent the winter at school there. A number of informal bridge parties, swimming parties, etc., have been given for Miss Morena.

* * *

ONE of the happiest events of last week was a moonlight picnic given Friday evening by Miss Helen Jones. Her cousin, Miss Margaret Buckner, of Roanoke, Va., who is spending the summer with Miss Jones, was the honor guest, and 24 young people went to the picnic in automobiles, the party going out to Silver Lake, where a picnic supper was enjoyed. Mr. and Mrs. Adam Jones chaperoned the party.

* * *

Mrs. Prioleau Ellis, of Springfield, Mass., whose visit to Mrs. William D Ellis has been the occasion for a round of parties, was tendered an informal bridge party Wednesday morning by Mrs. De Los Hill.

Mrs. Ellis' sister, Miss Belle Stewart, of Montgomery, the guest of Mrs. William A. Wimbish, shared the honors, and the game of bridge was played on the piazza, which was cool and inviting with potted plants and ferns. Yellow flowers added a bright note of color, and luncheon was served on the card tables at the close of the game.

* * *

THE continued illness of Mrs. Porter King is a source of regret to her many friends. Mrs. King has been confined to her home on Peachtree street for several weeks, and she is still unable to be out. Upon her recovery, Mrs. King and her daughter, Miss Carolyn King, will probably go East for the remainder of the summer.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel M. Inman, who are at Poland Springs, Me., will remain there the remainder of the summer. Mrs. Alfred E. Buck is another Atlantan who is spending the summer on the coast of Maine.

Mrs. Frances Fort Brown, of Chattanoogn, a former Atlantan, is with her, and it is probable that they will be joined later by Miss Sally Eugenia Brown.

* * *

MISS MARGUERITE GAUSE, who, with her mother, has recently returned home from an extended stay in the mountains of North Carolina, will be tendered a dinner party Thursday evening at the Capital City Country Club by Mr. and Mrs. John J. Woodside, Jr.

Miss Gause is a pretty member of the younger set, who will figure in the gayeties of the debutante set next winter, though her formal entrance into society will be deferred a year or so.

* * *

MR. AND MRS. JOHN KING OTTLEY, Miss Passie May Ottley, Ernest Ottley and John Ottley, Jr., have taken possession of their summer home, "Joyeuse," on Peachtree road, and will spend the remainder of the summer there.

Mrs. E. G. McCabe is with them, and will also spend the summer at "Joyeuse." Mrs. McCabe, who was ill with a severe attack of pneumonia, is much better, but is still unable to participate in the social life of the city. She has been greatly missed during her long illness, as she is one of the most beloved women of Atlanta, who takes an active part in the social and club life of the city.

* * *

MISS REBECCA CANDLER entertained at a 5 o'clock tea Thursday afternoon at her home in Decatur in compliment to Mrs. John Scott, of Decatur, who was Miss Marie McIntyre.

Pink roses decorated the house, and potted ferns were placed at intervals about the reception rooms.

Miss Candler was assisted in receiving her guests by her mother, Mrs. C. M. Candler, and Mrs. Scott's mother, Mrs. Dan MacIntyre.

Serving punch on the porch were Miss Julia MacIntyre, Miss Constance Berry, Mrs. Jack Reeves, of Charleston, and Miss Nell Candler.

About one hundred guests called during the afternoon.

* * *

MISS KATHRYN GORDON will give a matinee party Monday at the Forsyth, followed by tea at the new Ansley Hotel. The honor guests will be Mrs. Rogers Keese, a recent bride, and Miss Gordon's cousin, Miss Elizabeth Stubbs, of Shreveport, La., who is now visiting Miss Gordon, following a visit to Miss Dodo White.

The other guests will include Mrs. Forrest Adair, Jr., Misses Augusta Pearce, of New York, Lula Dean Jones, Laura Ansley, Annie Lee McKenzie, Caroline Muse, Ruth Stallings, Jennie D. Harris, Marion Goldsmith, Marjorie Brown, Emily Winship, Helen Dargan, Carolyn King and Katherine Ellis.

* * *

Misses Erma and Wilmer Eiseman, with their father, Louis Eiseman, are on their way to Europe, having sailed from New York Thursday. The party spent several weeks in Washington before going on to New York. Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Nordflinger, of Washington, accompanied them.

CHATTER of SOCIETY

By Polly Peachtree

PLANS for summer visits, departures and good-byes are matters of every-day occurrence. Scattered to the four points of the compass are the members of Atalnta's younger set, for it is these who seem to prefer the summer trip or visit more than the married people, who are content to stay at home or go in great colonies to favored resorts—Toxaway, Wrightsville Beach, the Greenbrier White.

Emily Winship, I hear, is having a delightful summer as the guest of her friend, Miss Elizabeth Brown, whose family has a residence on the shore of Lake Erie. The girl from an inland city like Atlanta is easy to amuse and entertain when she visits friends on the seashore or lakeside, for the moonlight sails, the yachting parties and so forth are novel and delightful.

Two very fortunate girls are Margaret McCarty and Louise Broyles, who went with Mrs. Henry Inman to her summer place in Bar Harbor one day last week. They are sure to have a most enjoyable summer there, Mrs. Inman being an annual visitor and well known at that famous resort.

Of the visit of Miss Burton-Smith to her aunt, Mrs. Orton Bishop Brown, I have heard pleasant accounts. You remember that Mrs. Brown, who is very fond of her charming niece, came down to Atlanta last winter just to give a grand ball for the debutante. She has planned many pleasures for Miss Burton-Smith, one of which will be a house party to be entertained at a camp in the White Mountains during August, when several Atlantans will be guests. Among them will be Misses Marjorie Brown, Passie May Ottley, Marion Goldsmith, Nancy Prince and Lula Dean Jones and a group of men from this city.

Miss Goldsmith is spending the summer on a series of charming visits. She has come home from Atlantic Beach and goes to Toxaway for the latter part of July. Frances Connally left last week for Norfolk, where she is the guest of Mrs. Edward Dodson, formerly Harriotte Winchester. Miss Connally often visits Norfolk and is well known there, and is, of course, popular with all the young folks.

Virginia Lipscomb, one of the season's buds, has had a gay visit in Augusta. She has been the guest of a college friend, Miss Gladys Teague, and had a glimpse of its social pleasures to come by attending the Country Club dinner-dances, when all the "grown-ups" were present. Miss Sarah Rawson has recently returned from Magnolia, Mass., where she was the guest of the Hoke Smiths, who are summering there.

Later in the summer—some time in August—Miss Lucy Hoke Smith plans to make a series of visits in the White Mountains and her younger sister will go to Atlantic City with some friends of the family.

* * *

MISS HARRIET CALHOUN has just returned from a visit to her cousin, Marion Phinizy, at Flat Rock. The Phinizys have a picturesque home on the side of the mountain. Misses Nina Gentry and Alice Vandiver are at Atlantic City now, after attending a house party in Staunton, Va., given by Mrs. Wayte Gibbs. Miss Gentry expects to be away a long time yet, going to Narragansett Pier as the guest of Miss Amy Wendelschafer for August, and later visiting Newport with her father, Mr. W. T. Gentry. Margaret Hawkins, one of Atlanta's prettiest girls, had planned to visit Philadelphia, but has called off that visit in favor of a quiet stay in the mountains of North Carolina.

* * *

MARION STEARNS the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stearns, accompanied Mrs. Roby Robinson and her daughters, Misses Isabel and Eloise Robinson, to their summer home in Canada last week. The Robinsons spend the greater part of each summer in Canada, where they have a home at Sharbot, on Lake Ontario, which they call "Camp Sagate Gisiss." The elder Miss Robinson goes abroad in September to spend a year before making her debut.

Many of the young women of the city are making a series of short stays at various resorts. Miss Annie Lee McKenzie goes with her family to Clifton Springs in August, Miss Margaret Grant goes with her family to White Sulphur Springs—has left, in fact, this past week. Miss Gertrude Richardson goes to Highland Lake, N. C., this week, to be the guest of friends. Miss Helen Dargan left today with her parents for Toxaway. Miss Marjorie Brown goes to Toxaway, chaperoned by Mrs. Richard Johnston, in August. Wrightsville Beach claims a few of the younger set. Misses Laura and Mamie Ansley go to Canada with their parents, where they will occupy a cottage at North Hadley, through August. Misses Jennie D. Harris, Sarah Rawson and Mary Helen Moody are planning to go to Toxaway in August.

SOUTHERN girls are making a mark on the stage, whenever they attempt this kind of work. A notable fact is that most of the girls who go on the stage from this part of the country have proved their talent, and enter upon their careers after a thorough training in the art.

Of course in the large cities of the East, and especially in New York, scores of girls go on the stage, simply as a matter of business and as a choice taken from the several opportunities offered for making a living, such as typewriting, clerking, acting at waitresses and the like.

It is from this large contingent that the chorus beauties are drawn. Now and then, some girl rises above the average by reason of a talent or beauty. So far, the Southern girls begin at the top, because the few who become actresses do so, as I have said, because they are really talented. The latest recruit to the stage, in which Atlanta society is interested, is Rosa Coates, of Mobile, who will dance in the Otis Skinner production of "Kismet" next season.

Miss Coates is a society girl and one of the most popular in Mobile. She has visited in Atlanta often and has been much enteretained as the guest of Mrs. H. Clay Moore. Her dancing is really wonderful, and has been accorded homage from the social world ever since Miss Coates entered society.

Last winter, when a Kirmess was given in Mobile, Miss Coates, in the role of the Merry Widow—the same dance which was done so beautifully in Atlanta's Kirmess, you remember, by Nina Gentry—carried her audience by storm and with her individual work made the Kirmess one of the best ever given.

I hear that Miss Coates went to New York without any intention of going on the stage, but her dancing was seen by Harrison Grey Fiske, who hastened to make her an offer. After some hesitation, Miss Coates accepted and will be seen in the noted play managed by Fiske. An ovation certainly awaits the young dancer when she comes to Atlanta, as they tell me, she will do, in the autumn.

* * *

I RECALL that last autumn, when so many "buds" were bursting forth upon society, and all the talk of this debutante's clothes and that debutante's parties and the other debutante's charms, a small little Atlanta "kiddie" one day asked his mother, most seriously:

"Mother, what are all these 'baby pops' I hear so much about now?"

And his mother replied, smilingly, that "baby pops" was good, for most of the girls really were babies, as far as age went.

Atlanta girls do come out at an early age, and often they are not unknown to the social world for several years before they are "introduced." However, I am not sure that this isn't wiser and better than keeping a girl closely confined to home and mother until suddenly she is launched into society, with the handicap of timidity and undeveloped social graces, as are most of the English debutantes of high degree.

From what I read of little Muriel Astor—I believe she is called Alice Astor now—the heiress daughter of Mrs. John Astor, that small girl will be blase before she enters her 'teens. For instance, I gleaned from cable dispatches of recent date that "she was" a lovely little figure in white muslin, with a pale blue sash and Leghorn hat trimmed in forget-me-nots," at a tea party given by her mother for Princess Patricia, and that the Princess was delighted with the child and had her sit on the sofa by her side.

The story naively added, "The little girl is said to be unspoiled so far." However, if Alice has many birthday parties like her last one—an event of last week it was—I am afraid she will be "spoiled." The papers said that the big drawing room was done entirely in lilies and roses—all white—and that the birthday gift of "mother" was a string of pearls with a locket in which was a picture of the child's father, with her initials in pearl and one large diamond set in the back of the locket. Square dances and country jigs were the conservative dances indulged in at this wonderful birthday party, and one of Alice's partners was Lord Ivor Churchill, son of the Duke of Marlborough.

* * *

SPEAKING of debutantes, I notice a tendency to entertain the next season's bud with summer parties. This is rather novel for Atlanta, but occasions some special affairs at a season usually devoid of interesting events.

A number of complimentary parties have been given for Margaret Grant, and several also for Adgate Ellis. Many of these young girls are to have gay summers, and by the time winter comes they will have memories of gay times at seashore or mountain to give them poise at the debut dance.

Miss Grant is sure to be a belle at the Greenbrier White, where she goes with her parents next week. Adgate Ellis is to entertain a series of house parties at Tallulah. Katherine Ellis is to have a gay summer at Narragansett, where he aunt, Mrs. Kenneth Murcheson, is a popular "cottager."

In the lists of summer parties at home I see many names of the former "college set"—Margaret McCarty, Virginia Lipscomb, Louise Riley, Lucile Kuhrt, Jeannette Lowndes are some of these.

* * *

ISOLENE CAMPBELL is a beautiful Atlanta girl in whom many people are interested. She will probably be a debutante next year, and although Mrs. Orme Campbell, her mother, has made her home in the East for a year or so, it is expected by all of her friends that she will spend a part of next winter here, where her lovely young daughter will add to the brilliancy of the debutante parties.

Mrs. Campbell and Miss Campbell are now at Culver, Ind., where the son of the household is attending the famous summer school for boys. They have been at Sharbut Lake since summer began until a few days ago. At Sharbut Lake a pretty yacht, the Madame Butterfly, owned by the Campbells, is one of their many summer pleasures.

"Argyle," the summer home of Mrs. Orme Campbell near Atlanta, will not be occupied by them this season, and they have also disposed of their summer home in Canada for August to Mr. and Mrs. Edwin P. Ansley, of Atlanta, who, with the Misses Ansley, leave the latter part of this month for the North.

THE Wilson-Sayre engagement has occasioned much comment. The young woman has not occupied the White House long enough for us to know very much about her, so it is interesting to read that she writes for the magazines, does settlement work, rides cross-saddle, plays tennis and dances the one-step well. She is certainly a girl of diversified gifts. Oh, I forgot to say she talks French and German, "like a native," and I guess "she can sew, she can knit, she can spin, a little bit"—like Snow White, you know.

Young Mr. Sayre is to be congratulated most heartily. He will sympathize with his wife in her settlement work—for he is interested in that sort of thing, too, and presumably his family is, for he has a brother who is a missionary to China. (There is a connection between settlement work and being a missionary, somewhere—isn't there?) Mr. Sayre is a Harvard man, so at this wedding the crimson and yellow (horrors!) will be blended in the decorations, I suppose.

They say the wedding will be quiet, though, so I will recall the aforesaid supposition.

Another engagement of recent date which attracted international attention, and on which I commented last week, was that of Katherine Force, sister of Mrs. John Jacob Astor. Katherine only shines in reflected glory, being an ordinary, pretty girl, as was her sister, before she became the owner of a famous name. The two young women are at Bar Harbor, and I read that Katherine is dressing entirely in white, as is her widowed sister, and the two of them have recently acquired lap dogs. (Why should the mother of a world-famous baby need a lap dog?) Young Mrs. Astor's dog is a shaggy Skye terrier, and Miss Force pets a black specimen, which contrasts well with her white toilets.

* * *

COINCIDENCES are "funny," anyway, and no example of the queer freaks of chance is stranger than that of similarity of names. Why a person named Jones should select so often the front appellation of Sadie is unexplainable, except by the subconscious working of the law of the association of ideas.

I say subconscious because I do not believe that half the people of the famous Jones family who name their little daughters "Sadie" ever heard, to their certain knowledge of the erstwhile Georgia girl who became a famous Newport belle, or would be guilty of the snobbery of naming their babies after her, if they had.

I was sent off on this tangent of thought by reading over a number of society pages, from publications dated in many cities of the United States, and noting the many names similar, not only in the family name, but in the combination of family and "given name," to those of Atlanta people.

Why this combination of names, depending partly on choice of individuals, should be so common an occurrence is an inexplicable coincidence. For instance, I saw in one week's issue of papers from the Atlantic to the Pacific a mention of one of Denver's smartest young matrons, Mrs. Harry English (sic—we might say of her Atlanta namesake). And in Jacksonville, Fla. (to take a long jump), "Mrs. Robert Maddox gave one of the prettiest parties of the week."

Portions of New York society were much interested last week in the marriage of "Miss Mabel Drake, daughter of Mrs. Frederick Drake, of Garrison, N. Y., to Edward Livingston, of No. 117 East Seventy-fourth street, New York City."

Of course, we are all familiar with the famous Anita Stewart, who married into the Portuguese nobility, and is the namesake of a popular Atlantan, Mrs. Frank Ellis, long identified with Washington and New York society.

* * *

SOME of our short, plump girls may be interested in knowing that the new athletic dances are the greatest things in the world to add to one's stature. The medical theory is that these strenuous dances loosen the cartilages and allow the perpendicular growth.

This discussion in scientific circles was brought about by the statement of Evelyn Thaw that since she had become a dancer of the athletic type, she has gained an inch and a half in height.

On the other hand, scientists say dances such as the turkey trot, in which a squatting position is necessary, have the other effect.

Now, I have no recommendation to make; you can take your choice.

* * *

BEING on the other side of the United States from where the trouble started, we of the South have not been personally stirred by the Japanese problem, and few are the Japs in Georgia of the class of Hashimura Togo or of high degree.

And yet I hardly see why the arrival of the Blanton Fortsons at the Battery Park the other day, accompanied by their children and by a Japanese maid and a Japanese cook, should have caused the sensation attributed to that cause. There are a few families in Atlanta who have foreign servants, and I don't remember the time when the Misses Tomkins, since their marriages to brothers, Edward and Blanton Fortson, have not had Japanese servants.

At the residence of the late Henry B. Tomkins was always a Japanese cook and Japanese maids, and the daughters of the house have followed the example of their parents in the nationality of their servants.

Mr. and Mrs. Blanton Fortson are occupying a cottage at Linville, S. C., this summer, and, of course, they carried their "little brown men." It was in Asheville—of all the sophisticated places—that the Fortsons were almost mobbed by the curious as they went in to lunch at one of the prominent hotels, with their Jap attendants.

mous fortune, and that he intends to look over the South as a possible field. Of course, if he does that, he must come to Atlanta.

Now, Monaco is known as the smallest kingdom in the world, but just the same there is the glamour of royalty over its ruler.

The only reason that Monaco is ever heard of, of course, is because its principal asset is Monte Carlo, that greatest gambling casino in the world. It is from Monte Carlo that the Prince derives his great income.

Should the Prince come to Atlanta there will be a great flutter among our eligible girls, for the Prince is a courtly gentleman, and he has the added advantage of being free to marry wherever he chooses. In fact, the wife whom he divorced several years ago was a Miss Heine, a St. Louis girl.

I venture to say that if the Prince has any idea of espousing another American girl he can find no better spot in these United States than right here in Atlanta to make his choice. I know dozens of sweet Atlanta girls who would grace any throne, be the kingdom large or small.

* * *

THE bridge-playing matrons of Atlanta are becoming heavy-eyed and almost lazy. Here's the reason:

A couple of weeks ago one of them gave an all-day bridge. Instead of serving the usual informal luncheon of salad and sandwiches and cold tea, she had a regular sit-down party. Everybody ate a lot and had a good time.

But all of us know that parties are progressive. Because one woman had a big luncheon, the next hostess had a bigger one. The progression has been uninterrupted. If I told you that at a party last week there were eight vegetables, with all the trimmings before and after, and that the guests didn't skip a thing, you would probably think I'm stretching the truth, which I never do. I'll tell it to you so you can't blame the bridge players from having heavy eyes and that lazy feeling.

She had captured the ballot at last,
Had the militant damosel fair,
But when votes were about to be cast
Was the feminine suffragist there?
Nay; she stayed in her flat,
Softly weeping, "This hat
Is a thing that's too ancient to wear!"

* * *

AREN'T we women the inconsistent things! Here our sisters in Illinois fought and planned and schemed, pleaded with hard-hearted legislators using every feminine wile, to gain the ballot, and then—what happens?

In Geneva, Ill., there was an election the other day; it was the first time that our sex had a chance to vote and—heaven pity us—the majority of the women stayed away from the polls because they were afraid that they would not be as well dressed as some of the other women who would vote. Consistency, thou art a jewel but thy name is certainly not woman.

While on the subject of dress and suffrage. I certainly am glad that the suffrage movement is not carried here to the extent that it is in England. The latest threat of the English militants is that they will emulate Lady Godiva to attract attention to the cause.

Lady Godiva is the fair damsel who rode on a white charger through Coventry attired only in her beautiful hair. With her it was a case of sacrifice, and perhaps was highly commendable, but in this day and time the adoption of any such practice is not a thing to be thought of. In Atlanta right now it would be comfortable, of course, and climatically appropriate, but—well, there's no use saying any more about it.

* * *

When a man's single his money he'll jingle;
He carelessly squanders his rocks.
He buys lovely collars and spends many dollars
On white vests and delicate socks.

When a man's married he's worried and harried;
He wants things that will not show dirt.
His wife takes his money and buys for her honey
A 40-cent mud-colored shirt.

* * *

THE above poem is to be taken by contrast in Atlanta, for it is certainly true that the best-dressed men of the city—those who take the palm for correct and handsome garb—are married men.

The sartorial sensation of last week was the appearance of two of these well-dressed married men—James L. Dickey and Morris Brandon—in the new style white tuxedos. They certainly looked fine, too, and while they had to stand a lot of "guying" and meet many laughing remarks they are pretty apt to be followed by many others in the near future.

The white evening suits made their appearance at the Thursday evening dinner dance of the Capital City Country Club and were the cynosure of all eyes, the men for once taking precedence over the women in the matter of clothes that drew attention. The suits are of white serge, with white satin lapels, and when worn with white silk shirts, silk hose and white shoes, they are positively adorable.

* * *

OH, there was no doubt that she was a real fan. She proved it. She admired the pretty white uniforms of the players, thought that the tilt of Joe Agler's cap was just too sweet for anything, and wailed in despair when Bisland emerged from a cloud of dust with his nice white suit badly soiled from its contact with the earth.

But she reached the climax in referring to Catcher Dunn, when she chirped to her escort, "Oh, isn't he just too splendid—that man—what did you call him—the thing that stands in front of the umpire?"

* * *

"THE Boll Weevil Wiggle" is the latest of the freak dances to spring up, and the worst of it is that it originated here in the South. A select party of the society girls of a certain Mississippi town gathered at a private hall the other night and the new dance found great favor.

From what I hear it is a combination of the "Grizzly Bear," "Chicken Slide" and the waltz. The man takes the girl in his arms, holds her tightly, and glides along with a motion similar to that of skating. At the end of a long stride she bends in front of him, he lifts her to his lips, and when the orchestra draws out a lingering chord their lips meet in a kiss which lasts until the chord subsides.

According to the story, this dance made a great hit with the young people, but the next day their mothers found out about it, and if the dance has been practiced since, it has been done in such seclusion that no one knew of it.

I think that the mothers of each one of these young girls would have done well to have spanked them and put them to bed.

* * *

HAVE you noticed Lamar Atlas Hill turkey trotting? Really, it's one of the most strenuous sights of the season, and on a hot night it bewilders one. I'd give a lot if young Atlas would let someone else carry a bit of the world. It doesn't make so much difference during the day, but when a young fellow is turkey trotting at night he should make someone else hold the burden.

* * *

DESPITE the torrid heat of the past week or so and the exodus from the city, which constantly increases as the days go by, those pretty gardens which Atlanta women are cultivating still flaunt gay blossoms in the sun, and never a weed pokes its head up without peril. I am apprehensive for some of these gardens when their fond owners leave for the mountains or seashore, but so far they still are flourishing.

In the ranks of Atlanta's amateur gardeners are some of the daintiest, prettiest young women of the city, with whom one can hardly associate the use of that homely implement which furnished the motif for Millet's famous picture, "The Man With the Hoe." I am assured that even Mrs. Charles T. Hopkins, Jr., as petite and dainty a bride as this season—or any season—could produce, has purchased a set of garden tools (or whatever they are called).

To be sure, she had to get a toy set, such as the children use to dig up shells on the seashore, this concession being made to her size; but, they say, she is in earnest about her gardening, and trusting friends predict that flowers will eventually appear, raised by the aid of the miniature hoe.

The gardening fad is healthy, I suppose, if one has an awning over the garden on these hot days. Certainly the women who have adopted it have socially distinguished confreres both here and abroad, where women of high degree are often well-trained gardeners and take a personal interest in their magnificent parks and flower gardens.

* * *

THE "Nunnally matinees," they call them, and every afternoon from a little before 5 o'clock until the sun goes down many young men attend the Nunnally matinee. Refreshments, of course, are anything you'll take in the soft category, and the show—why, the show is afforded by the Peachtree promenade, the young women performers being displayed to advantage ("displayed" is the word, I hear) against nature's spotlight, which is arranged to the best advantage just at the place where the "upper Nunnally" store happens to be located.

I am telling this, girls, because it came to me, and I think you ought to know it. I am not advising you to discontinue your promenades, but just telling you that you are making a show of yourselves. That may be all right; in fact, I understand that the show you put on is a fine one! (Plenty of pretty girls here, believe me, despite the Nashville Beauty's assertion.)

* * *

"LEISURE LODGE" is the name bestowed by Mr. and Mrs. James H. Nunnally on their charming new cottage at Toxaway, and from what I hear of the place, the leisure time at that lodge of summer pleasures will mostly be spent in dancing. The place, as described to me, is a picturesque and commodious cottage, one of the largest in the group of summer homes, and a special feature of the architecture is a long, open porch, extending across the front of the house, with floor polished and primed for dancing parties.

Mr. Nunnally, as we all know, is one of the most ardent dancers of the new steps and one of the most graceful among the prominent citizens of Atlanta. And he has provided for dancing at "Leisure Lodge" because of his fondness for the pastime, as well as for the pleasure of the house parties which will be entertained there.

Mr. and Mrs. John Charles Wheatley will spend the summer at "Leisure Lodge" with Mrs. Wheatley's parents, and the cottage is sure to be a pleasant rendezvous for the Toxaway colony.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Richardson chose an Indian name for their cottage at Toxaway—"Walla Hoosa," they call it, meaning happiness. The Indian names are favorites for the names of summer lodges in the mountains, and, I think, are particularly appropriate.

* * *

WOMEN since time immemorial have sought ways in which to reduce their surplus avoirdupois—that is, outside of Turkey, where the larger they come the more popular they are.

I think that of all the methods adopted the one least likely to become popular in Atlanta is the one adopted by the women of Pittsburg. Dispatches tell us that every morning in the wee small hours scores of large ladies, attired in running bloomers, are seen leaping and bounding along the boulevards, holding on to straps adjusted to the rear of automobiles. These seekers for sylphlike forms are heavily veiled, but several of them forgot to take the license tags from their automobiles, and their identity was pretty clearly traced to some of the best families in Pittsburg.

Now, I have a deadly fear of becoming fat, but I think that before I would become an automobile marathoner I would welcome almost any degree of obesity; wouldn't you?

Pretty girls who attend the informal parties of the season, in lace and lingerie frocks and picture hats. The group includes (from left to right below) Misses Elizabeth Morgan and Caroline King; above, Annie Sykes Rice, Clifford West, Margaret Northen. Pictures of these girls were made at a beautiful al fresco tea and dance of recent date, which was one of the many affairs of the kind which make a summer in Atlanta socially pleasant.

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT COTTON ALSTON will leave early this week for Toxaway, where they will spend some time. They will be accompanied by the children of Mrs. Alston's sister, Mrs. W. R. C. Henry, of Columbus, Ohio, who will remain with Mr. and Mrs. Alston during the absence of their mother in California.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Paine and their young daughter, Miss Douglas Paine, will leave Thursday for Greenbrier White Sulphur Springs, where they have a cottage for the remainder of the summer.

* * *

MR. AND MRS. J. R. M'CORD, whose marriage was a recent event, taking place at the home of the bride in Utica, N. Y., are expected in Atlanta this week from their wedding journey.

As Miss Marion Roberts, of Utica, Mrs. McCord frequently visited Atlanta as the guest of Miss Eloise Stewart, and she will be cordially welcomed as a young matron.

* * *

LIEUTENANT AND MRS. JOHN D. BURNETT, popular members of the army set, left Saturday for Fort Niagara, where Lieutenant Burnett will take part in the competitive shoot, which will be held during the month. Later they will spend some time at Camp Perry, Ohio, going there to be present at the national rifle match. They return to Fort McPherson on October 1.

* * *

MISS ROBYN YOUNG of Washington, D.C., a frequent vistors to Atlanta as the guest of her kinswoman, Mrs. W. C. Humphries, is spending the summer with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Young, at their summer home, Cecil Manor, near Fort Deposit, Maryland.

Miss Young spent some time with Mrs. Humphries last spring, and she is identified with the younger society set of this city, as well as that of Washington.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Sciple will leave this week for Toxaway for a stay of several weeks.

* * *

Mrs. F. M. Orme, with Mrs. Francis Block and Miss Margaret Block, are spending some time at Atlantic City.

* * *

AT "Point Peachtree," the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Caverley on Peachtree road, a dinner party was given on Tuesday evening for Mrs. Prioleau Ellis, of Springfield, Mass. The guests were seated at small tables decorated in summer flowers. Wednesday afternoon Mrs. George M. Brown entertained informally at tea at the Capital City Country Club in honor of Mrs. Ellis and her sister, Miss Belle Stewart, of Montgomery, who is the guest of Mrs. William A. Wimbish.

Mrs. DeLos Hill gave a small morning bridge party Thursday for Mrs. Ellis, and Mrs. David Woodward entertained a few friends at bridge in her honor on Friday morning.

IN the WORLD of SOCIETY

SUMMER social life centers in the clubs, and no affairs are of more interest than the Thursday evening dinner dances at the Capital City Country Club and the Saturday evening dinner dances at the Piedmont Driving Club.

Everybody attends these affairs, and many dinner parties of from four to a dozen covers are a feature of each occasion. Dancing, of course, follows the dinner parties, both the married and unmarried set being in attendance.

Among those entertaining parties at the dinner dance at the Piedmont Driving Club Saturday evening were Mr. and Mrs. John D. Little and their guest, Samuel Dunlap, of Macon; Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Hawkins, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Dargan, Mr. and Mrs. John W. White, Captain and Mrs. Carter, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Lewis, James M. Nunnally, Clarence Knowles, James O. Harris and Milton Dargan, Jr.

Dinner was served on the terrace, where festoons of Japanese lanterns, in addition to pink fairy lamps and vases of garden flowers, made a charming decoration.

The dinner dance at the Capital City Country Club Thursday evening was one of the largest dances of the season, 150 guests being entertained. A delicious dinner was served on the broad, cool plazza overlooking the lake, and later there was dancing in the ballroom.

Vases of gay summer flowers, gathered from the gardens of "Woodhaven," the home of the president of the club, Robert F. Maddox, adorned each table. The beautiful decorations which have been a feature of each dinner dance at the new country club are the gift of Mrs. Maddox, who thus adds to the success of each dinner dance by the work of her own hands.

Festoons of Japanese lanterns adorned the clubhouse, and, with the beautiful toilets of the ladies, a gala scene was presented.

One of the largest parties was that given by Mr. and Mrs. Clark Howell, who entertained twenty guests, including their neighbors among the Pace's Ferry colony.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Spalding had as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cotton Alston, Mr. Alex King and Mr. Morrison.

Mr. and Mrs. Kemp Slaughter, who have recently come from Baltimore to make Atlanta their home, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hughes Spalding.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter P. Andrews were hosts at a party which included Mr. and Mrs. George M. McKenzie, Mr. and Mrs. A. Ten Eyck Brown, and Mrs. George Harrington.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Goodhart entertained Captain and Mrs. Jack Hayes. Mr. and Mrs. J. Epps Brown entertained Mr. and Mrs. Hunt Chipley and Mr. and Mrs. Macon Martin.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Small entertained a small party, and other hosts of the evening were Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Cobb, Hamilton Douglas, Jr., Willard McBurney, Stuart Witham, Edward Alfriend, A. S. Watson and H. P. Miles.

Among others attending the dinner dance were Mr. and Mrs. John Grant, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Paine, Dr. and Mrs. Floyd McRae, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Foster Maddox, Misses Elizabeth Morgan, Nancy Prince, Nell Prince, Mamie Ansley, Alice May Freeman, Margaret Grant, Mary Hines, Eula Jackson, Laura Cowles, Arthur Clarke, Ernest Ottley, Edward Alsop, of New York; Lee Harvey, Myers, Floyd McRae, Jr., Kenneth McRae, Clark Howell III, Howell Foreman and Edward McBurney.

DESPITE the extreme heat of the past week, several social affairs of real importance were given, notable in the series being the afternoon tea at which Mrs. Samuel Dick, one of the most interesting of the season's brides, was introduced to a group of young married friends as guests of Miss Jennie D. Harris.

Young Mrs. Dick was Miss Ruth Tribble, of Athens, a belle and beauty, and she was very charming at Miss Harris' tea, an event of Friday, at the home of the hostess. Miss Harris is a cousin of Mr. Dick, the bridegroom, and she had 30 friends to meet her new kinswoman, being assisted in the entertainment of guests by her mother, Mrs. Clem Harris.

The decorations in the apartments open to guests were of the summer-blooming variety of flowers—zinnias, roses and Shasta daisies in the drawing room, with gladioli in the dining room, a particularly pretty blossom of vivid red hue filling the basket in the center of the tea table.

Mrs. Dick wore a French gown of white repe and cobweb lace, the upper corsage of lace with draperies over the crepe skirt, caught to one side with a big pink satin and chiffon rose. Pink tulle introduced cleverly in the corsage and skirt draperies and a corsage bouquet of pink roses added a harmonizing touch to the pink tulle "picture hat" worn with the chic toilet.

The young hostess also wore white and pink, a gown of lingerie and lace with a deep border of pink embroidered crepe on the skirt, a sash of pink, and knots of tiny pink roses, of clever French manufacture, catching up the draperies of corsage and skirt, here and there. Atlanta's smartest contingent of young married women attended the party in their prettiest frocks.

MRS. GLASCOCK MAYS has recently returned from New York and has leased an apartment on West Eleventh Street, where she will spend the summer.

* * *

Mrs. Luther Z. Rosser, Jr., is spending some time in the mountains of North Carolina.

* * *

Mrs. Livingston Thompson, of Louisville, Ky., will arrive this week to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Nicolson. Mrs. Thompson's little daughters are already here with their grandparents. Mr. and Mrs. John N. Goddard and little Mary Goddard left the past week for Toxaway.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. V. J. Adams left Thursday for Knoxville, Tenn., where they will make their home in the future. Miss Sadye Andrews accompanied her sister for a short visit.

* * *

"WOODBINE," the handsome home of Mr. and Mrs. William Lawson Peel on Peachtree road, was the scene of one of the happiest parties of the week on Wednesday afternoon, when Mrs. Peel entertained 50 children in honor of her little granddaughter, Sarah Peel Tilt, of New York.

The occasion celebrated the fifth birthday of the little girl, and games were played on the lawn. Appropriate favors were distributed by the little girl's French governess, wearing the typical Mother Goose costume, her entrance with pretty souvenirs being a feature of the afternoon's pleasure.

The little girl wore a hand-made frock of lace and lingerie with blue ribbons.

MISS CATHERINE WYLY entertained at a spend-the-day party Wednesday at her home on West Fourteenth street. The guests were Misses Jeannette Lowndes, Louise Riley, Helen Dargan, Carrie Peabody and Jan Robinson.

* * *

MISS MARGARET ASHFORD gives a box party at the Forsyth Monday afternoon for Miss Dorothy Robbins, of Birmingham, who is visiting Mrs. J. P. B. Allan, and for Miss Fannie Neal Anderson, of Athens, her guest. The party will include Misses Dorothy Robbins, Fannie Neal Anderson, Helen Morris, Mrs. Harry Stotesbury Cutter and Mrs. J. P. B. Allan.

* * *

SEVERAL visitors whose presence will add to social gayety are to be in Atlanta soon.

Miss Mildred Hazen, of East Orange, N. J., is expected next Friday to visit Miss Mignon McCarty. Miss Mattie Wilson DuBose, of Athens, and Mrs. Edgeworth Lamkin, of Athens, the former Miss Sarah Gerdine, will be with Mrs. Hughes Spalding next week.

Miss Augusta Pearce, of New York, a feted visitor, remains some time with Mrs. Forrest Adair.

* * *

MISS DOROTHY SMITH gave an informal party Friday evening at her home in Inman Park for Miss Pauline Brittain, of St. Louis, who is visiting Miss Frances Dudley. The guests included Misses Frances Dudley, Pauline Brittain, Elizabeth Clanton, Adelaide Clayton, Winnie Davis Farnsworth; Alex Maddox, John Brooks, Lamar Trotter, Henry Bonney, Arthur Branch and Candler Andrew.

OF interest throughout the country is the announcement that Judge William M. Dunbar, of Augusta, postmaster of the United States House of Representatives, will be married early in August to Mrs. Bennett, of Virginia. Judge Dunbar and bride will spend two weeks at Atlantic City and then come to Augusta, where the bridegroom has large family connections.

* * *

Miss Mae Wallace, of Atlanta, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. H. I. Kimbrell at their home in Walton way, Augusta, where she is being entertained. She will visit Charleston and Savannah, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Kimbrell, before returning home.

* * *

Miss Marjorie Brown is spending several days with Mrs. Richard Johnstone at her home in Peachtree street during the absence of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Brown, in New York.

Miss Brown returned home the early part of the week from Tallulah Falls, where she was one of a house party entertained by Miss Adgate Ellis at "Cherokee cottage."

* * *

ONE of the largest parties of the week was the morning bridge given by Mrs. Homer Davis and her sister, Mrs. Ernest Blair Durham, in honor of Mrs. Henry Wyatt, Jr., of Marietta, at the Peachtree street residence of Dr. and Mrs. M. A. Davis.

The game was played in the living room and library, where vases of summer roses, zinnias and nasturtiums adorned the apartments. Luncheon was served on the card tables at the close of the game. Ivory stick fans were given for top score, for consolation, and for the honor guest there was a deck of cards.

The hostesses and honor guest wore dainty summer toilets, Mrs. Davis wearing lavender embroidered lingerie, belted in blue satin, with lace on the corsage; Mrs. Durham, in pink crepe, and Mrs. Wyatt wearing cream embroidered crepe. Mrs. M. A. Davis assisted her daughters.

The guests included Mrs. Henry McCurry, of Fairburn; Mrs. Dan MacIntyre, Mrs. Francis Gilchrist Jones, Mrs. Gordon Richards, Mrs. Frank Jacoway, Mrs. John Ray Pattillo, Mrs. Lucius McConnell, Mrs. VanWinkle Wilkerson, Mrs. Frank Winecoff, Mrs. George Croft, Mrs. Frank Freeman, of Greenville, Ga.; Mrs. Trammell Scott, Mrs. Julian Prade, Mrs. Charles Dowman, Jr., of Birmingham; Mrs. John Means Daniel, Mrs. Paul Norcross, Misses Lamar Jeter, Margaret Armstrong, Marguerite Beck, Martha Ryder, Ruth McMillan, Lebie Ewing, Julia Meador, Nettie Lea Sullivan, Mary Hines, Elizabeth Hines, May McMillan, Winnie Davis and Corrie Hoyt Brown.

* * *

Mrs. Frank Holland and Miss Harriet Holland left Monday for Waynesville, N. C., where they will spend several weeks, later going to White Sulphur Springs.

* * *

ARDEN, the home of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Dickey, on the Pace's Ferry road, was the scene of one of the happiest parties of the week Tuesday morning, when a bridge luncheon was given by the young daughter of the household, Miss Katherine Dickey.

Twelve girls were entertained, and the game of bridge was played on the porch, overlooking the extensive grounds which surround the house. The maker of top score was awarded silk hose, and there was a dainty fan for the consolation.

A wealth of summer flowers formed the decorations—Shasta daisies, sunflowers and roses from the gardens of Arden. Luncheon was served on the card tables, at the close of the game, and a delightful hospitality was dispensed by the young hostess, who wore a girlish toilet of white lingerie.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Gude and Miss Mary Gude sailed last week for Europe, where they will spend the remainder of the summer, which is their annual custom. They will visit relatives in Norway and Sweden.

* * *

THE marriage of Miss Gail Hetherington, of Atchison, Kans., and Burt Allen, of San Francisco, which will take place in September, will interest Atlanta friends of the bride.

Miss Hetherington, who is a young woman of unusual beauty and charm, has frequently visited her cousin, Miss Gladys LeVin, and has many friends in this city. Miss LeVin will leave in August for Atchison, and will remain until after the wedding, which will be a brilliant affair, with a large wedding party.

Miss LeVin will be her cousin's maid of honor at the wedding. Mrs. LeVin left last week to spend the remainder of the summer in Atchison.

* * *

MANY informal affairs were given last week for Miss Viola Wade, of Palmetto, Fla., who is spending the summer as the guest of Miss Alma Nance.

Wednesday morning Miss Mainer Hardin gave a bridge party in her honor, inviting eight guests to meet her. The house was artistically decorated with garden flowers. Miss Nance won the prize, a lace collar and cuff set.

Mrs. Albert Barnes gave an informal porch party Wednesday afternoon, inviting her sewing club to spend the afternoon with Miss Wade, sewing and gossiping. Eight guests were present. Delicious salads and sandwiches were served on the porch, where the ferns and flower boxes made an attractive setting for an affair like this.

On Thursday morning Mrs. Fred Houser entertained at bridge luncheon for her sister's guest. Roses and ferns decorated the house. The prizes were a late novel and a pair of silk hos. After the game a course luncheon was served in the dining room, where the table held a centerpiece of pink roses.

Mrs. Houser received her guests wearing pink ratine trimmed with macrame lace.

The guests included Miss Wade, Miss Nance, Miss Marguerite Nunnally, Mrs. Hatton Rogers, Mrs. Grover McGahee, Mrs. T. J. Nance and Mrs. J. C. Beall.

* * *

Mrs. George Boynton has as her guests Mrs. B. S. Dunbar and her two little daughters, Anna Bernard and Marian Dunbar, of Augusta. Mrs. Dunbar pays an annual visit to Mrs. Boynton and has made many friends here on her previous visits.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Guy King will take possession next week of their new home, which has just been completed in Park Lane, Ansley Park.

* * *

MR. AND MRS. WILL RUSHTON gave an informal bridge party Wednesday evening at their apartment on Third street. Miss Dorothy Robbins, of Birmingham, who is visiting Mrs. J. P. B. Allan, was the honor guest, and sixteen friends were invited to meet her.

Bright zinnias and helioanthus in yellow adorned the living room, while pink roses and phlox formed the centerpiece on the dining table.

Miss Margaret Traylor won the girls' prize, embroidered handkerchiefs. Mr. J. P. B. Allan won the gentleman's, a bridge set, and Miss Robbins was presented a sweetgrass basket containing two embroidered handkerchiefs.

Mrs. Rushton received her guests wearing a blue embroidered crepe trimmed with lace and finished with narrow frills of pleated silk.

Miss Robbins was becomingly gowned in pink chiffon, with touches of pale blue and crystal trimming.

The guests included Misses Clifford West, Mary Robinson, Lillian Logan, Margaret Traylor, Susie Hallman, Margaret Rushton, Dorothy Robbins, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. B. Allan, J. T. Scott, Hughes Roberts, R. Thiessen of Florida, H. L. Harvey, Ben Daniel, Paul Reese, Charles Montgomery and Dr. Pierson.

* * *

MRS. A. F. HALLMAN and family will leave August 1 for Flat Rock, N. C., where they will be until October. Miss Susie Hallman is planning to visit in Ohio some college friends made when she attended the Castle, on the Hudson. Then she will join her mother at Flat Rock about September 1 for a month.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Butler, rJ., of Buffalo, sailed on the Imperator Saturday for a six weeks' stay on the continent. Mrs. Butler, who was Miss Kate Robinson, will probably come to Atlanta immediately after her return to visit her mother, Mrs. A. M. Robinson.

* * *

MRS. JOHN J. WOODSIDE, JR., entertained at an informal tea Monday afternoon at the Piedmont Club in compliment to Miss Augusta Pearce, of New York, who is the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Forrest Adair.

Tea was served on the terrace and the table had a lovely centerpiece of pink and white phlox.

The guests included, besides Miss Pearce, Misses Annie Lee McKenzie, Helen Dargan, Laura Ansley, Mamie Ansley, Emma Kate Amorous, Mrs. Forrest Adair, Jr., Mrs. Robert Gregg and Mrs. Rogers Keese.

MRS. GUY KING gave a pretty card party Wednesday morning at her apartment on Eighth street in compliment to Miss Dorothy Robbins, of Birmingham, who is the guest of Mrs. J. P. B. Allan, and Mrs. Charles Dowman, of Birmingham, the guest of her parents, Judge and Mrs. George Westmoreland.

Carnations and zinnias decorated the house, and on the porch yellow helloanthus were used.

Miss Mary Blalock won the first prize, a set of embroidered handkerchiefs, and Miss Robbins was presented with a chiffon collar and cuff set.

The guests were Misses Mary Blalock, Margaret Hallman, Annie Laura Robinson, Nellie Kiser Stewart, Elizabeth Dunson, Frances Connally, Mary Robinson, Martha Boynton, Sallie and Callie Hull, Mrs. Hinton Baker, of Augusta, who is spending some time with her mother; Mrs. Blair Armstrong, Mrs. George K. Seldon, Mrs. Sherwood Higgs, Mrs. Luther Rosser, Jr., Mrs. Klatte Armstrong, Mrs. C. S. King, Mrs. George Boynton and Mrs. R. B. King.

* * *

IN honor of Miss Dorothy Robbins, of Birmingham, guest of Mrs. J. P. B. Allan, Mrs. Victor Smith gave a matinee party, her guests including Misses Robbins, Clifford West, Margaret Ashford, Annie Carleton, Mrs. Howard Parker, Mrs. Edward Malone, Mrs. Robert Hughes, Mrs. Aible Malone, Mrs. Clarence Angier and Mrs. J. P. B. Allan.

MRS. CHARLES R. CRISP has accompanied her husband, Congressman Crisp, to their home at Americus, after a season full of social interest at the Capital. Mrs. Crisp is one of the younger women of the Congressional set who has made good the tradition of the beauty and graces of Southern girls. Congressman and Mrs. Crisp made their home at the New Berne last winter, where they had a large apartment.

* * *

Misses Elizabeth and Lila Ward Hamilton, of Rome, who visited Mrs. Eugene Crichton for two weeks, have returned home.

* * *

Miss Bessie Brady is spending several weeks at Wrightsville Beach. She will visit in Boston before returning home.

* * *

Mrs. Kenneth Goode and her young son, of New York, will remain until September with Mrs. Goode's parents, Dr. and Mrs. Miller Hutchens, at East Lake. Mr. Goode, who spent several weeks here, has returned to New York.

* * *

MISS SUSIE PARK entertained at an auction bridge party Monday afternoon at her home on Forrest avenue, for Mrs. Edward Pierce's guest, Mrs. C. H. Pepper, of Columbia, S. C.

Sunflowers and helloanthus were decorations. Miss Parks wore a lavender chiffon gown with touches of pink chiffon and lace, and Mrs. Pepper wore white embroidered crepe.

The party included Misses Lucile Oslin, Sally Walker, Mrs. W. H. Asher, Mrs. J. H. Johnson, Mrs. Sidney Johnson, Mrs. J. G. Prim, Mrs. Frank Winecoff, Mrs. C. B. Walker, Mrs. James, Mrs. C. K. Johnson, Mrs. J. G. Elliott and Mrs. T. J. Butler.

THE number of Atlantans at Wrightsville Beach increases every week, and a delightful social life is being enjoyed by the guests at the Oceanic and Seashore Hotels.

Among recent arrivals at the beach are Mr. and Mrs. Roy Collier and their two young sons. Mr. and Mrs. Toulman Williams, Edwin P. Ansley and Miss Mamie Ansley went to Wrightsville last week. Mr. and Mrs. Marshall McKenzie and baby, Miss May O'Brien, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Wilson Tye and baby, Miss Mary Adelaide Caverly, Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Allen, Mrs. H. G. Kuhrt, Misses Isabel and Lucile Kuhrt, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Otis, Charlie Black, Van Astor Bachelor, and Lauren Foreman are recent acquisitions to the Atlanta colony at the beach.

Mr. and Mrs. John Kiser have prolonged their stay several weeks, having had such fine luck with their fishing that they have given up a proposed visit to Asheville for a longer time at the beach.

Mr. and Mrs. James D. Palmer and Mrs. Clarence May, Mrs. Louise Spalding Foster and Miss Elizabeth Loving are also at the beach, having gone up last week.

Sailing and fishing parties are still being enjoyed by the Atlanta colony, a recent successful catch of 330 fish being made by a party of eight, within three hours. Edwin P. Ansley is a famous fisherman, and often brings home a long string of fish.

Claude Buchanan is also a fine angler, having had great luck during his stay at the beach. He left for New York last week, on the return of Mrs. Buchanan and children to Atlanta.

MISS LAURA COWLES entertained informally at luncheon at the Capital City Country Club Tuesday, the party including a number of girls who go swimming together one afternoon in every week at this club, after a luncheon on the club porch.

The party included Misses Mary Hines, Alice May Freeman, Elizabeth Morgan, Emma Kate Amorous and Mrs. Gerald Smith, of Baltimore, who is visiting her father, Howard Pattillo.

Doctor's Boyish Face Reveals Skin Renewer

I heard the other day the story of the physician with so admirable a skin that all his women patients asked the secret. He told one, who generously told others, that, knowing the remarkable absorbent property of ordinary mercolized wax, he concluded this substance would make an excellent complexion renewer and preserver. Knowing the wax could not harm the skin, he began using it after shaving. He soon observed that the old, withered, colorless cuticle was being gradually absorbed and replaced by younger, healthier skin. This was the simple secret of the silver-haired doctor with the boyish face.

The secret became public property. Now women everywhere use mercolized wax, applying it nights like cold cream, washing it off mornings—continuing until the complexion is entirely renovated. An ounce of this wax, procurable at any druggist's, will banish the worst complexion.

Another valuable rejuvenator used by this doctor was a wrinkle-remover and preventive in the form of a face bath, made by dissolving an ounce of saxolite in a half-pint witch hazel. This also has become famous.—Aurelia in Fashion Review.

SOCIETY in the CHURCHES

ATLANTA BAPTIST ASSOCIATION.

The Atlanta Baptist Association has organized a fund for pension of Baptist preachers. George M. Brown, of the Second Baptist Church, started the fund with a contribution of $5,000, and the following men have been elected officers of the fund: W. W. Gaines, president; the Rev. A. H. Gordon, vice president; the Rev. A. C. Ward, secretary and treasurer. The trustees are Dr. C. W. Daniel, Dr. M. G. Campbell, Walker Dunson and George M. Brown. The rules of the fund provide that any minister or missionary who has reached the age of 60 years and has been in the service of the church for 25 years, five of which have been spent within the bounds of the Atlanta Association, shall be eligible to receive a pension. A provision is made for the widow of such deceased ministers and after the death of the widow for the unmarried daughters until they reach the age of 25 years.

NORTH AVENUE PRESBYTERIAN.

The intermediate department of the Sunday school of the North Avenue Presbyterian Church had a straw ride, followed by a watermelon cutting at the church house Friday evening. Mr. J. R. Whitman has charge of this department.

During the absence from the city of Miss Mary Fraser, superintendent of the junior department of the Sunday school, Miss Mary Kate Holt is ably substituting. Saturday afternoon she gave a watermelon cutting to her class on the lawn of the church house.

The school is fortunate in obtaining the services of Mrs. S. H. Askew, of the Westminster Church, as superintendent of the elementary department.

CENTRAL CONGREGATIONAL.

This year the churches have instituted many novel pleasures for the young people of the congregation. For instance, the young men's Pilgrim Class of the Central Congregational Sunday school have planned a camp at Lakewood, the camp to be repeated every summer.

Six tents have been pitched on the top of a hill at Lakewood near the ball ground. All the equipment was donated by Mr. Macduff and is now the property of the class. There is room in the camp for twelve men. One tent is kept for visitors and is used at other times as an assembly tent.

The camp is intended primarily for the opportunity for these young men to enjoy an outing during the hot summer months, and already several of them have given up their apartments in the city and are now at the camp.

There was a formal opening of the camp Tuesday evening, the campers inviting the young ladies of the Averill Bible Class to be their guests.

The celebration began with a big bonfire, in which corn and potatoes were roasted. Watermelons and a regular picnic supper were served.

During the supper speeches were made by G. Starr Peck, former president of the class, who expressed thanks to Mr. Macduff for his generosity to the camp. The class voted Mr. Macduff honorary member of the class.

Mr. Macduff spoke briefly accepting the honor and his talk was followed by one from Mrs. Hanscom, and one from Dr. Hanscom. Class songs and yells made the evening lively and the entertainment closed with devotional services, led by Dr. Hanscom.

WESLEY MEMORIAL CHURCH.

A meeting of the Atlanta Association of Methodists was held Wednesday at the Wesley Memorial Church, with Dr. W. P. Lovejoy presiding. The purpose of the meeting was to appoint a committee to attend the hearing of the Senate committee on the proposed measure to require the Bible to be read in all public schools supported by the State.

The Baptist ministers also voted for the measure, believing, however, that due provision should be made to excuse any children from the hearing thereof whose parents so request.

The following committee was appointed by the Methodist ministers to attend the hearing of the Senate: Dr. W. P. Lovejoy, presiding elder of the Atlanta district; Dr. H. M. DuBose, pastor of the First Methodist Church, and Dr. Charles O. Jones, pastor of Grace Methodist Church.

* * *

ST. PAUL METHODIST.

In 1905 the membership of the St. Paul's Methodist Church had grown so large that another church than the old one on East Hunter street was necessary. The site at the junction of Grant street, Sidney street and St. Paul avenue was purchased and a church was erected costing $51,000.

The debt has just been paid off and a suitable service was held at the church in celebration last week, when Miss Esther Emily Smith, 82 years old, set fire to the four corners of the final bond of St. Paul's church and more than 1,500 members and friends of the church saw the last vestige of their debt curl upward in smoke.

Miss Smith was one of the original teachers of the Sunday school when it was formed in 1869 as a mission to Trinity Church. This church was organized in the open air and later a simple edifice was erected in 1870 on Hunter street, near Hill street.

The Rev. B. F. Fraser is now pastor of the church and the stewards have been members of the church for 30 years or more. They the C. W. Mangum, J. T. McDonald, J. K. Kelley, G. W. Dyer, W. E. Adamson, J. K. Thrower, J. K. Polk, J. T. Stewart and A. J. Joy.

This church has a membership larger than almost any other in the city and does a great deal of philanthropic work.

* * *

TRINITY METHODIST.

The women of Trinity Methodist Church have decided not to discontinue their meetings during the summer, feeling that better results can be accomplished by going forward without a break in the round of splendid activities carried on by the members of this church.

Despite the warm weather, their members were well represented at the last meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society, and after a devotional service reports were given and plans made for further work.

The society will meet again Monday afternoon at 4:30 at the church. Owing to the fact that Mrs. William R. Hammond, president of this society, is still too ill to preside over its meetings, the vice president, Mrs. E. A. Hartsock, will be in charge. Mrs. Hammond has been the recipient of much attention from the church members during her long illness. When the cool weather arrives she will resume her active duties in the church.

UNIVERSALIST.

The new pastor of the Universalist Church will not arrive until September and in the interim the church service each Sunday will be combined with the Sunday school program. R. J. MacDonald, superintendent of the Sunday school, will direct the meetings. Last Sunday Dr. E. M. Nighbert, of the United States Bureau of Animal Industry, addressed the congregation on "God in Nature."

Their first open air church and Sunday school in a combined service was held under the trees at Silver Lake.

The regular church services were transplanted from the congregation's home on East Ellis street to the heart of nature.

Basket lunches were carried out and the midday feast was spread on the banks of the lake. The service was held in the thick shade just below the dam. The members were carried by trolley to the end of the car line on Peachtree and were met there by an automobile bus which took them to the lake.

More than half the entire enrollment of the Sunday school and church were present.

At least twice more during the summer months the congregation will hold its "children's church," as they have named it, in the open air.

COLLEGE PARK BAPTIST.

The Baraca boys of the College Park Baptist Church had a recital Friday evening, July 18, at the church. The entertainment was a combination of musical and reading numbers.

Albert Gerard Thiers, vocalist, and Kurt Mueller, pianist, furnished music. Miss Caroline Crenshaw, who is home on her vacation from New York, where she is taking a special course in voice and choir work, rendered several selections. David Silverman also added much to the enjoyment of the program by his violin solos.

The reading numbers were furnished by Miss Agnes Coleman, who is becoming famous as an impersonator.

The affair was quite a success and a neat sum was raised to add to the funds used by the Baracas in carrying out their philanthropic work.

WESLEY MEMORIAL.

The Woman's Auxiliary of Wesley Memorial Hospital held an interesting meeting Thursday morning with the president, Mrs. Robert K. Rambo.

Official reports of the result of the linen shower held at the Wesley Memorial Hospital in commemoration of the birthday of John Wesley will soon be given out. It is estimated that 2,500 gifts of linen, etc., were received, with donations in money amounting to $200. Miss Susie Wells is secretary of this organization.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY UNION.

The Atlanta Woman's Missionary Union, which was organized two years ago, following the meeting in Atlanta of the Golden Jubilee of Foreign Missions, held its quarterly meeting Tuesday afternoon at St. Luke's Church. Mrs. Nym Hurt is president of the union. Ten denominations are represented. A general discussion of the work being done by each denomination was a feature of the Tuesday meeting.

Besides Mrs. Hurt, who is president-at-large, the officers include vice presidents from the following denominations: Mrs. George M. Brown, Baptist; Mrs. Jasper Bell, Christian; Mrs. J. P. Averill, Congregational; Mrs. Lulu Snook, Episcopal; Miss Lalla McGraw, English Lutheran; Mrs. W. A. Albright, Methodist; Mrs. Carl Kuebler, German Lutheran; Mrs. R. D. Crusoe, Presbyterian; Mrs. E. G. Miller, Associate Reformed Presbyterian, and Miss May Hudson, U. S. A. Presbyterian.

* * *

The recording secretary of the union is Mrs. J. W. Mason. Mrs. A. P. Coles is treasurer, and Miss Nora Mallard is corresponding secretary.

Dr. C. B. Wilmer, rector of St. Luke's, gave a most interesting talk on the unity and use of our talents. Mrs. Charles J. Haden spoke on the work being done by the Young Women's Christian Association, and Mrs. Archibald Davis told of the work being accomplished by the woman's department of the General Presbyterian Assembly.

The union has had only one other president besides Mrs. Hurt. Mrs. Sam D. Jones was the organizer and first president, and both she and Mrs. Hurt have done a splendid work toward the unifying of the missionary work done by Atlanta women.

Miss Rosa Woodberry is chairman of the mission study class, and following an interesting talk by her, it was decided that the union employ a capable, competent and earnest Bible teacher to take charge of a class for Bible study in the fall. All members of the union will have the privilege of attending those classes, and a great deal of knowledge in regard to missionary work can thus be distributed.

The next meeting of the union will be held in the fall.

ST. LUKE'S.

A garden party was given Tuesday afternoon and evening by Committee No. 9 of St. Luke's Church at the residence of Captain and Mrs. Edward S. Gay. A fish pond, a grabbag, etc., provided amusement for the children, and gayly decorated booths, containing useful and ornamental articles, brought a nice sum, which will go toward the work being done by this committee.

Miss Harriet Trammell

One of the few July brides, her marriage to Lester Leon Harvey, of Danville, Va., to take place on July 30. Miss Trammell is a popular member of the College Park contingent, and her wedding will be an important event in that beautiful suburb. A series of parties are being given for the bride-elect. Asheville

ASHEVILLE, N. C., July 19.—At the Asheville Country Club, where hundreds of visitors from Atlanta, Augusta, Savannah, Nashville, Chattanooga, Birmingham and other cities are registered, several golf features have been arranged for the next few weeks in which a majority of the tourists are expected to participate.

Commencing this afternoon, a handicap mixed twosome match play started, and will continue for a week. The unusual feature of this tournament lies in the fact that the women and men players will be opposed to each other in the twosome play, handicapped to make the matches as even as possible. The prize is a beautiful silver loving cup, which is offered by the president of the Country Club.

Mr. and Mrs. M. K. Jenkins, of Atlanta, are spending several weeks in Asheville.

YOU SAVE WHEN YOU BUY AT KIMBALL'S

Kimball

A Piano of Proven Worth

The piano you select by all means should combine rare qualities of tone with great durability such as the Kimball.

Kimball Pianos are indorsed by practically all musicians of note in this country as well as abroad. Read what a few of them have to say about the fine qualities of the Kimball:

LILLIAN NORDICA: "The more I use my Kimball Piano the better I like it."

E. DE RESZKE: "I am absolutely satisfied with my Kimball Piano."

EMMA EAMES: "I am charmed with the beautiful tone of the Kimball Piano."

MARCELLA SEMBRICH: "The Kimball Piano ranks with the best instruments before the world.

WALTER DAMROSCH: "The Kimball Piano has a pure, refined and beautiful tone."

PRICES: Uprights and Grands $195.00 to $1,250.00.

To those having no advanced musician in their family, our new model 88-note player should prove of special interest. Without previous musical training the Kimball Player-Piano enables the performer to enjoy any music in which he chooses to delight, such as the classics, church or popular music. All one needs is love for music.

With one stroke of the lever this flexible instrument can be transformed from an automatic into a piano for hand or manual training.

Prices: Player-Pianos, $450.00 to $800.00.

A few special bargains in Player-Pianos used for demonstrating purposes at practically manufacturer's cost.

An "A-1" College of the Highest Rank

BRENAU, without endowment, has taken a leading place among the colleges of the South. It has grown from a small seminary, with an enrollment of 30 students, to a large college for women with an attendance of 500 students.

ITS progress has been due to merit alone—to an unswerving devotion to educational ideals.

BRENAU combines an "A-1" college, a noted conservatory of music and a school of oratory second to none in the South.

GAINESVILLE'S climate is healthful and invigorating. Religious influences in the school and little city are represented by churches of all denominations and by the college Y. W. C. A.

MRS. TALCOTT TO GIVE SOUTHERN EVENINGS.

MRS. JANET R. TALCOTT has moved to Cleveland, Ohio, where she will reside in future. Mrs. Talcott is preparing for her drawing room work the coming season, a Southern program which will include the writings of the best Southern authors. Several Atlanta poets and story writers will be represented on the program. The date for this Southern evening has been made, and will be among the early autumn entertainments given in Ohio, where Mrs. Talcott will continue her platform work.

MISS BRADLEY TELLS OF HER WORK HERE.

MISS MARGARET BRADLEY has returned from Boston, where she has been studying for two years, and has assumed the responsible position recently filled with the Associated Charities by Miss Minnie Van Epps, whose marriage to Robert Hanson, Jr., changed her place of residence.

Miss Bradley brings to her work a splendid technical training and an enthusiasm that is necessary for success. She is young, cultured, and loves the work which she has taken up as a profession.

In Boston, Miss Bradley served a year as voluntary worker in the Social Service Department of the Massachusetts General Hospital, and last year she gave her entire time to a course of training in the School for Social Workers.

"The field in Atlanta is new to me," said Miss Bradley, who is an Atlanta girl, although she has spent many years studying in the East, "but I am getting into the atmosphere of the work nicely. The social service work in the East is entirely different from that in the South. There, our work is done mostly among the foreign element. Here it is different."

When a case is reported to the Associated Charities, it is the duty of the association to look into it and render such assistance as is needed if the applicant is worthy. There is visiting to do, medical attention to be given, and other provision to be made for the sick and destitute. All of this work comes under the direction of the head of the association, and Miss Bradley plays a most important part in straightening out the tangles and making the machinery of the Association work smoothly.

Miss Bradley is the daughter of the late Horace Bradley, the South's most famous artist, who is prominently connected with club work in Atlanta, especially the welfare and civic betterment work.

INDUSTRIAL ARTS CLUB.

The Industrial Arts Club, of Inman Park, met with Mrs. W. A. Sims at her home in North Moreland avenue, Tuesday afternoon. After the usual hour of business details and sewing, a beautiful musical program was rendered. Mrs. J. O. Kinard sang several solos, and Miss Malla Moncrief performed on the piano. Mrs. Cox read a delightful selection, and Miss Ella Hays recited.

The house was decorated with lovely pink and white roses, and the table from which the refreshments were served was decorated with the same colors, white and pink.

The Industrial Arts Club is one of the most interesting of the smaller organizations, and devotes much time to the development of art in the home. The club meets every Tuesday afternoon.

CLUBWOMEN INTERESTED IN KINDERGARTEN BILL.

CLUBWOMEN of Georgia are deeply interested in the kindergarten bill that has recently been brought before the Legislature. If the bill should pass, it would make it possible for any public school in the State to provide a kindergarten training for the children along with the regular system of education.

Mrs. Nellie Peters Black, who is the mother of the free kindergarten schools in Atlanta, said in behalf of the bill: "Many a child's life has been ruined by injudicious management by a wrong beginning of a misguided teacher, and in behalf of the child we plead for a chance to get something better.

"It is a wonderful thing to see the threefold education of the little child as the teacher brings forth the games and stories, the constructive work illustrating these stories until the child's brain begins to grasp the thought, his little hands give shape to the thought, and his inner consciousness responds with a joy which makes each day in the schoolroom a delight."

There are a number of kindergartens in Atlanta which have wrought magic in the lives of the little children who have attended, and has reached beyond that in bringing color and a greater comprehension into the minds of the mothers who have the blessed privilege of rearing and training children.

Thursday afternoon a large number of women and men interested in this form of education as a beginning of the child's education met at the State Capitol and discussed the advantages of kindergartens as part of the regular school work.

HOT WEATHER DORMITORY FOR BABIES IS PLANNED.

WOMEN, headed by Miss Stella Beckman, and Miss Margaret Bennett, her assistant, have made a new departure in the child welfare work in Cincinnati, in that they have under operation a hot weather dormitory, where little babies who have forgotten how to sleep through the insufferably heated term can learn over in a cool and well-tempered atmosphere.

These sleeping quarters are on the top of the new Guilford School and are constantly fanned by refreshing breezes.

The hot weather sleeping quarters were opened with great ceremony, and the mothers with sleepless babies invited to inspect the place and leave their children to recover from the heat. The first baby to sleep in the new roof dormitory was Marie Kuennen, a 3-month-old baby.

A physician in charge, with the nurses and the fresh air, the sleeping quarters promises some good results in babyland.

It is likely that the clubwomen of Atlanta will take up the idea and follow with a place for sleepless babies along the same lines next summer.

PATRIOTIC SOCIETIES TO GIVES BAZAARS.

BAZARS are to be the special form of money making schemes for patriotic organizations in the State this fall, several entertainments of this sort being under way at present.

Atlanta Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, are making preparations for the most elaborate bazar ever held in the city. This bazar will be held in December, and will include every phase of attraction known to fairs and bazars. During the summer the members have been busy making fancy articles, and many plans are in progress for the various booths that will add to the attractiveness of the bazar.

The Joseph Habersham Chapter, Daughters of American Revolution, will give a big bazar in the fall that will have some novel attractions in its development.

In other towns there will be elaborate entertainments of this kind, for many of the chapters of the U. D. C. and D. A. R. are planning to build their own chapter houses. The local chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy at Milledgeville is planning one of the most elaborate bazars ever held in that town this fall. The movement has been under way for some time and the members have all gone to work with enthusiasm to make the event a success.

SENT FREE TO MEN

A Most Pleasing Remedy given to Quickly Restore Lost Vitality.

A Free Trial Treatment Sent by Mail To All Who Write.

Free trial treatments of Enervita, a most pleasing remedy, are being mailed to all men who write to Dr. John S. Howell. So many who had battled for years against the mental and physical suffering of man weakness have written thanking him for the great benefit received, therefore, Dr. Howell has decided to send free trial treatments to all men who write. It is a home treatment and all who suffer with any form of weakness, resulting from youthful folly, premature loss of strength and memory, weak back, lack of vitality and confidence can now receive this strength-giving treatment at home.

The treatment has a peculiar grateful effect of warmth and seems to act direct to the desired location, promoting strength and development just where it is needed. It is given to relieve the ills and troubles that come from years of misuse of the natural functions, and has met with remarkable success, even in cases approaching advanced age. A request to John S. Howell, M. D., Suite 1221, Auditorium Building, Cincinnati, Ohio, stating that you desire one of his free trial packages, will be complied with promptly.

He is desirous of reaching that great class of men who are unable to leave home to be treated, and the free sample will enable them to see how easy it is to successfully treat man weakness when the proper remedies are employed. Dr. Howell makes no restrictions. Any man who writes will be sent a free sample and literature, carefully sealed in a plain package, so that you need have no fear of embarrassment or publicity. Readers are requested to write without delay.

"DIXIE" RAISES RIOT

When Played by Instinct

(Experiences with the New Instinctive Playing. No. 8 of series.)

"I RAISED merry riot in my house last night. I had the whole place going: but I didn't care. I was having the time of my life!

"I was near Mary's new Virtuolo Player Piano, and I thought I'd try it out. So I put in a roll marked 'Dixie,' while I was peeking around at the door, and that old song must have gone to my head. Before I knew it I was crashing it out for all I was worth—

"'Way down south in the land of cotton.'

"I closed my eyes, touched the 'soft and strong' Acsolo buttons,' and I put regular smash and ginger into that music.

"Why I seemed to be right back in those thrilling days of '61 again—when multitudes went wild over that great old song—when hearts beat like trip-hammers and throats sang themselves hoarse with its stirring rhythm.

"Well, Mary peeked in—and stayed. Then Mary's young man; and then some of the neighbors came along, too, and all joined in—yelling and singing and capering like mad!

SUNDAY AMERICAN'S SPECIAL CABLE LETTERS RECEIVED FROM ALL THE GREAT CAPITALS OF EUROPE

U. S.-JAPAN WAR PREDICTED BY ITALIAN EXPERT

Points Out Perilous Questions Are Open Besides Immigration; Hawaiian Case Especially.

By CAMILLO CIANFARRA.
By Wireless to The American.

ROME, July 19.—Professor F. Di Palma, editor of The Nautical Review, a Deputy in the Italian Parliament, and Italy's foremost naval expert, in a talk with The Sunday American correspondent, gave it as his opinion that the American-Japanese conflict is bound to come as soon as Japan thinks she is ready to assume a political protectorate over the yellow race and gain control of the Pacific in the interest of her fast growing population, which is continually seeking rich land and remunerative markets.

He pointed out that the hopes of the American "pacifists" are certain to be shattered and that the present naval program of the United States is a fatal mistake, especially in view of the new obligations which the opening of the Panama Canal imposes on North America.

"Japan Building Ships."

"Japan is building more ships," Professor Di Palma said. "What makes this ominous is that Japan builds quietly and steadily.

"We can not refrain from asking curselves why Japan wants a navy so disproportionate to her present resources, and to what use she is aiming to put it.

"We used to say that sometimes a nation prepares for war only for the purpose of securing peace, but this always presupposes a foe. And who is Japan's foe, now that Russian revenge is out of the question?

"A sincere wish to keep the peace is not alone sufficient to insure it. This desire, if carried to the absurd length of refraining from providing the country with its only means of defense, an army and navy can only lead to national disaster and humiliation.

Japs' Attitude Cited.

"In America's case pacifists must never forget that besides the immigration question there are others which Japan will one day proceed to settle. When the United States annexed Hawaii, there was a protest quietly lodged with your State Department, according to which Japan objected to the annexation, and what is more pointed, declared she would never recognize it.

"No other nation sided with Liliuokalani, the little dethroned queen, but Japan did it in the only way it was then possible for her to do it—by protesting. She was then preparing for the struggle with Russia.

"To my knowledge, that protest has never been withdrawn, and your department will be reminded of it, as well as of others of more recent date.

"Do not ask me when. Some time ago the impression prevailed that the day would come before the opening of the Panama Canal, but to-day, after the adoption by your Congress of the present naval program calling for building only two ships per year, Japan knows she can wait.

"Losing Precious Time."

"Four years hence your now splendid up-to-date fleet will be inferior, even in the matter of fighting units, to that which Japan will possess, and then even the advantage of moving your Atlantic squadron to the Pacific in a short time will be of but little help to you.

"You are losing precious time.

"Besides, no nation ever prepared for war in a year or two. Military efficiency is the result of long work extending over many years. Every European nation has learned that."

Several well-informed Italian papers, in discussing the recent controversy between Japan and the United States, have expressed the fear that Japan may one day also solve the canal question for Europe by forcing the United States to internationalize the waterway.

Eve-like Styles Are Denounced in London

British Writer Declares That if Women Continue Course They Will Presently Wear Fig Leaf.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—England now has a dress controversy similar to that in the United States. The extravagant Eve-like styles are being condemned by the clergy on every side and numerous letters of protest published in the newspapers to-day attest the disapproval of the public at large.

A writer in The Evening Standard said that a woman ten years ago wearing styles seen on the streets to-day would have been disgraced for life and stamped with the "scarlet" badge.

"There must be a change soon, for the leaving off process can not go much further unless women decide to appear in the style of Eve with her fig leaf wn," said another writer.

SOUTHERNERS PRESENT AT CARLSBAD INVASION

Special Cable to The American.

CARLSBAD, July 19.—The American invasion has reached a record figure this year. Arrivals at the Imperial Hotel include: Henry Dutton, Charles Freebern, Mrs. Fletcher Dyer, Miss Florence Dyer, James D. Phelan, Mr. and Mrs. E. Herman, of San Francisco; Senator Guggenheim and family, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hillman and family, of Chicago; Mrs. Jessie Norfleet and Miss Ada Norfleet, of Memphis.

Prince Arthur Soon to Get an Important Post

Betrothal of Connaught's Son to Duchess of Fife Likely to Bring Him to America.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—It is an open secret here that Prince Arthur of Connaught, whose betrothal to the young Duchess of Fife has just been announced, has never recovered from an infatuation for the pretty daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Rutland, whom he would have married had not the late King Edward disapproved so strongly.

It was imperative that Prince Arthur should marry within the next year, as there is a big post waiting for him which requires a bride. He will either succeed his father in Canada or be made Viceroy of India.

A great deal of coaching will have to be done to make the Duchess of Fife fit for her responsible position. She has a charming disposition, but is almost as shy as her mother, the Princess Royal.

She has met so few young people that she still has the mind of a child and dreads functions of all sorts.

Balfour's Book in Big Demand in Britain

Applicants for Works of Former Premier at Library Invariably Told They Are "Out."

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—The books of Arthur Balfour, former Prime Minister, are among the most widely read in London. At the annual general meeting of the London Library, over which Mr. Balfour presided, the Hon. Evan Charteris said that he had inquired at the library on numerous occasions for books written by Mr. Balfour, and was constantly told that they were "out." After waiting for some time and still being unable to secure the books at the library, he purchased a set for himself and recommended that another set be purchased for use in the library, as many others had had his experience in being told that the books were out.

London Women Are Now Smoking Cigars

Some of Fashionable Devotees of Nicotine Are Even Developing Fondness for Pipe.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—When woman soothes her nerves now with tobacco it is not a cigarette she chooses, but a cigar, if she wants to appear quite up to date. The majority of women nowadays smoke cigarettes, but the ultra modern members of the fair sex are taking to cigars—even pipes.

The pipe chosen especially for women is a little light wooden pipe called the "Belique," which costs $1.

Pipes, however, are not so much "the vogue" at present as the cigar, and the favorite cigar which women smoke, it seems, is the La Florde Cuba. This is a long, thin cigar, which costs 50 cents in London.

38,200 Persons Own The Whole of London

Lord Northbrook Leads All of Landlords, Possessing 1,280 Acres of City Property.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Figures submitted yesterday to the County Council show London is owned by 38,200 persons. Its area is 116 square miles and its population (in 1911) 4,522,000.

Among the largest holders of real estate are the following: Lord Northbrook and Dulwich College, more than 1,280 acres each; Lord St. Germans, H. W. Forster, H. T. B. Barron and Sir Spencer Maryon Wilson, more than 960 acres each; Duke of Westminster, more than 480 acres; Lord Dartmouth, Prudential Assurance Company, Mercers Company and Magdalen College, Oxford, more than 320 acres each.

AMERICANS REACH FLORENCE.

FLORENCE, July 19.—Late arrivals at the Hotel De LaVille include John Jacob Fisher and Miss Florence Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Sims, of St. Louis; Dr. and Mrs. Asa W. Collins, of San Francisco.

Former "Belle of New York" Says Report of Separation From Oscar Lewisohn Is Silly.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Edna May Lewisohn and Oscar Lewisohn, her wealthy husband, both admit having new loves, and for that reason will break up housekeeping, but they will not separate, as has been reported, declares the former belle of New York.

The reason that there will be no divorce court proceedings is that they both have the same love and it interferes no whit with their connubial felicity. According to Mrs. Lewisohn both have become madly infatuated with horse racing, and to keep in close touch with their stable they will give up their home, Cranbourne Manor.

"Both my husband and myself have become very keen on racing," said Mrs. Lewisohn, after denying the reported separation, "and we are trying to find a place near Newmarket, where he has two horses in training. He is at present in Germany with his brother, but on his return we probably will rent our London house.

"Mr. Lewisohn has just taken up racing this year and has been remarkably successful for a novice campaigner. If his horses come up to expectations, he plans to increase his stable until he has one of the largest strings of thoroughbreds in England or the Continent. As for any separation, that is simply silly. We were never happier."

Scores of Americans At Mozart Festival

Many Doctors From United States, Who Will Attend London Conference, Are in Vienna.

Special Cable to The American.

VIENNA, July 19.—Many of the doctors who will attend the London conference in August are visiting Vienna. Scores of other Americans are flocking to Munich to hear the Mozart festival plays from July 30 to August 6.

Other arrivals include Mrs. W. P. Corbitt and Miss Lucile M. Rancks, of Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Reutlinger, of Columbus, Ohio; Dr. W. L. McDermott, of Kansas City; Miss Ethelwyn Walker, of Los Angeles, and Francis McMillan, of Chicago.

Mrs. May Wright Sewell is spending July at Castle Apponyi, the guest of the Count and Countess Apponyi.

AMERICAN TOURISTS DRIVE NATIVES FROM CAPITALS

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, July 19.—Probably never before have there been so many American visitors at the Italian and other Continental resorts. Every place is full of them. Meanwhile the natives and other residents of the various capitals have fled to the watering places.

Ambassador and Mrs. O'Brien are now at Fiuggi, where they are taking the water cure. The Ambassador soon leaves for the Atlanta Lakes, where he will spend a short vacation.

Lady Rocksavage to Shine in Bohemia

The Earl's Fiancee Is a Pretty Brunette, and Extremely Clever as Well as Rich.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Americans are bound to show great interest in the engagement of the Earl of Rocksavage, heir to the Marquis of Cholmondeley, and Sybil Sassoon, the Great East Indian heiress. Rocksavage has often visited in Newport. In London he goes in the smart American set, and here he has gained renown as the enigma of match-making mothers.

The bride-to-be is a pretty brunette of extreme cleverness, and as Lady Rocksavage she will shine in London's upper Bohemia. Her brother is Sir Philip Sassoon, whose house in Park Lane is the scene of frequent private theatricals, where rare Oriental plays are given for the delectation of a few.

AMERICANS ARE CROWDING AIX-LES-BAINS HOTELS

Special Cable to The American.

AIX-LES-BAINS, July 19.—Many Americans are discovering the beauties of this charming resort. Among the arrivals are Pierre Lorillard, Prince Colonna Di Stilliano, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sabine, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Taft, of New York, and Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Stone, of San Francisco.

LONDON'S DULL SEASON PROVES TO BE ITS BEST

Should Be Over Now, But Flood of Americans Keep It Up; Much Entertaining.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Society has given up the present season as a mystery. Everyone declares it flat and dull, yet London probably is fuller of well-to-do visitors than ever before, and the amount of entertaining going on is absolutely unprecedented.

By every rule of the social code the season should have finished this week, with everyone of any importance making a real or supposed exit to Scotland or the continent. Yet, all linger, while continental visitors continue to arrive and every liner adds to the enormous number of Americans already here.

"We have no set season now," said a manager of the large hotels to the American correspondent to-day. "Our season continues all the year round.

Accommodation Lacking.

"We are absolutely full up for August, which is supposed to be a dead month, and we expect to be equally busy in September.

"Crowds of well-known Americans who arrived later than usual have gone straight to the continent, on account of the lack of accommodation here, but all are going to London for a stay before returning home."

There is no doubt from the monetary point of view, apart from the lamentations of society folk who bewail the absence of excitement, London has had the best season on record. The hotels, without exception, have been rolling in prosperity, while the West End tradesmen, who professionally declare trade always bad, confess in moments of candor that the volume of business this summer has exceeded all previous figures.

Cyrus E. Woods, United States Minister to Portugal, has been spending a few days in London entertaining and being entertained on his way to Lisbon.

United States Countess Entertains.

A dinner party given by the Countess of Granard (nee Mills), at which the Prime Minister, Lord and Lady Cadogan, the Duke of Marlborough, Lady Paget, Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mrs. John Astor and many other celebrities were present, is the last big function that she will give this season.

The Duchess of Marlborough gave a wonderful dinner party at Sunderland house on Friday night. About 40 guests were present, including the best-known people in the smart set.

The Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, who is a suitor for the hand of Princess Patricia of Connaught, tells his friends that the dance recently given by the Duchess of Manchester (nee Zimmerman) was "the boldest affair I have ever been at."

The Duchess never gives more than two parties during the season, but she and her husband manage to make them very lively. Mrs. Harry Lehr, of New York, who rarely condescends to visit London, pronounced the party "all right."

Bingham Dance Planned.

Mrs. John Magee, who is the great American hostess of Paris and the Riveria, is spending a couple of weeks in London and entertaining at the restaurants. Mrs. Cecil Bingham, formerly Mrs. Chauncey, intends to give one more informal dance just before the state ball, which winds up the season.

Frank Page, the Ambassador's brother, gave a large dinner for young people before George Gordon Moore's informal dance Wednesday night.

Mrs. F. M. Walcott, Senator Walcott's widow, is staying at the Curzon Hotel en route to America after eight months' travel in the Orient.

Lady Cunard and M. Chaliapin, the Russian basso, gave a musical party on Wednesday night. It was an ultra-smart affair. The great basso sang and the Russian quartet supplemented the program. Among the guests were the Duchess of Marlborough, the Duchess of Rutland, Lady Diana Manners, the Duchess of Westminster, the Marchioness of Ripon, the Viscountess Curzon, Mrs. John Astor, Mrs. Hwfa Williams and Lady Paget.

Royalty Will Entertain.

These affairs show how much Americans are contributing to the gayety of this "dull" season. The King and Queen have stepped into the breech by announcing a ball at Buckingham Palace on July 23, which will serve to keep the people in London another week.

Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt finally tore themselves away from London on Wednesday and took train to Newcastle-on-Tyne, where their yacht met them. They are going on a cruise in Scottish and Norwegian waters.

Claridge's has been practically denuded of American visitors during the week, Colonel George Harvey being about the only prominent American "in residence."

The Savoy Hotel has been crowded during the week and is still turning away many. The event of the week was Wilson Mizner's dinner to Irving Berlin, prior to the latter's departure on Wednesday.

Arrivals include Mrs. Knowle, Harrison C. Cregier, Thomas C. Shannon and B. W. Lehman, all of Chicago; Jeremiah Lynch, Mr. and Mrs. Willis Polk and A. M. Samuels, all of San Francisco, and A. P. Moore and his wife, who was Lillian Russell.

MANY HORSE LOVERS AT THE CONCOURSE HIPPIQUE

Special Cable to The American.

LUCERNE, July 19.—Large numbers of American horse lovers attended the Concourse Hippique. Among those at the subsequent dance were the American minister, Legation Secretary Walker Smith, Dr. and Mrs. Allen Starr, Mr. and Mrs. Russell, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wiggins and the Misses Forster. The first weekly dance at the Palace Hotel was a great success. The American minister brought a large party of American visitors.

WIESBADEN VISITORS.

WIESBADEN, July 19.—Arrivals here include: Demus Upson, of Cleveland, and Arthur Brown and Miss L. A. Brown, of Chicago.

RICH AMERICANS QUIT PARIS FOR COOLER RESORTS

Race Courses Attract Many; Auto Tours Are Popular and Watering Places Thronged.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 19.—The inclemency of the weather which marred the end of the big national fete has driven many Americans from Paris. A few brave spirits still are entertaining, but all who can have gone away. The Paris which amuses itself, makes casual visits to the Bois, lingers for an hour or two and disappears.

The Ritz, however, has not closed its doors. Only a few nights ago Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont gave a dinner there in honor of the Grand Duchess Anastasia of Mecklenburg-Schwerin. The guests included Prince and Princess Charles Isenburg-Birstein, Comte and Comtesse Jean De Segonzac, Mrs. Winslow, Comte De Gabriac, M. Iswolsky, Russian Ambassador and Comte Skrzynski.

The race courses near Paris are still attracting many Americans. Among those at St. Cloud this week were Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Duryea, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gardner, Frank J. Gould and Charles Carroll of Carrollton.

Houghs Are Settled.

Captain Hough of the American Embassy and Mrs. Hough have settled for the summer at Etretat. Myer Segal, of Louisville, is exploring the Latin Quarter.

Dr. William Carl, American organist, is visiting in Paris as the guest of M. Felix Guilmant, and is working on the biography of the late Alexander Guilmant. Mrs. Potter Palmer is on a motoring tour and was last heard of at Edreux.

Bishop Thomas F. Kennedy, rector of the American College in Rome, has been stopping at the Hotel Continental. Among other visitors at the Continental is C. L. Wilson, of Chicago.

A. D. Wilkowski, vice president of the First National Bank of Chicago, and wife are at the Hotel St. James. So are Mr. and Mrs. G. Miller, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Mrs. Hooker, of San Francisco, and her daughters. Mrs. L. S. Hayes, of Pittsburg, is stopping at the Hotel Lupetia.

Frederick Frieseke, the American painter, is hard at work in his cottage at Givery. Richard Miller, his friendly rival, is with his summer school in Brittany.

The funeral of Gaston La Touche, the artist, took place Wednesday at St. Cloud.

American Sculptor Returns.

Walter MacMonnies, the American sculptor, and Mrs. MacMonnies have returned to Giverny.

Robert De Forrest, vice president of the American Red Cross, is in Paris studying sociology.

Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt has left for Carlsbad, accompanied by a small party. James K. Phelan, of San Francisco, left Paris in his American touring car this week for Bad Neuplaces.

James Stevens, the gifted author of "The Crock of Gold," is paying his first visit to Paris studying French and mapping out another book.

At the Hotel Orillon are Mr. and Mrs. Barton, of Chicago, and Mrs. S. Abler, of Birmingham, Ala.

Mrs. Charles H. Truax with her daughters halted in Paris for some days en route for Bad Nauheim.

Kaiser Ends Feud With Lippe Family

Emperor of Germany in Bending Mood Patches Up Old Quarrel With Prince Frederick IV.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, July 19.—The Kaiser is a strong man, noted for his friendships as for his enmities, and always a better man to deal with than to fight with, but he is just now in a bending mood.

Having patched up the old-time feud with the Cumberland family and made "a happy union" for his beloved daughter, he has magnanimously ended his feud of fifteen years with the ruling family of Lippe, one of the little principalities with which the German Empire is studded. He has recognized Prince Frederick IV of Lippe.

CLOCK AT STATION HAS NEW NUMBERS, 13 TO 24

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 19.—The clock in the facade of St. Lazare Station is to be the first in Paris to have the newly adopted official numerals of 13 to 24 for the hours after noon.

From 1 a. m. to 12 the figures 1 to 12 will appear on the dial. As noon strikes they will disappear and by an automatic arrangement the figures 13 to 24 will take their places.

New Trouble Over 'Roosevelt Professor'

Germans Resent Appointment of Professor Paul Shorey, of Chicago, to Exchange Choir.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, July 19.—Another acrid controversy has been precipitated in German university circles as a result of the appointment of one of the "new exchange professors."

The subject of dissension is Paul Shorey, of the University of Chicago, the newly selected "Roosevelt professor." The ground for the complaint in this case is an article recently published in New York in which he severely criticised the work of some German philologists.

When it became known that the author had been honored with the position of exchange professor of the leading university of the Empire, much indignation was expressed.

Only the prompt and tactful action of the Prussian educational authorities prevented a protest which would have put the matter into the arms of public controversy. The professors have now agreed to swallow their wrath and Mr. Shorey will be received with the utmost courtesies as though the offending article had never appeared.

City of Paris Makes Money on Art Show

"Municipal Operation" of Exhibition Is Tried in New Field With Great Success.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 19.—The city fathers have just concluded an interesting and very successful experiment in "municipal operation." The city fathers took it into their heads to give the people an artistic treat and organized an exhibition of the works of David, the celebrated artist.

The exhibition lasted 53 days and was a great success, not only artistically, but also from a financial viewpoint.

The city of Paris made money out of it, although 25,000 persons were admitted free every Sunday. On all other days an admission fee of 20 cents was charged. So numerous were the visitors that a handsome sum remains in the hands of the Municipal Council after paying all expenses.

King Almost Bars Classic as Ragtime

British Monarch Hears Rehearsal of Band and Questions Propriety of Tchaikowsky Overture.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—There is a distinct lull in the popularity of ragtime, largely due to royal influence. King George is quite unmusical, but Queen Mary affects a mid-Victorian interest in Bach and Beethoven sonatas, and has frowned heavily on ragtime.

Yet ragtime kept creeping in at court and military functions. King George was so worked up about it that at a recent function he had the bands play in advance every single item on the program in the gardens of Buckingham Palace, including "Abide With Me" and Tschaikowsky's famous "Overture of 1812."

The latter nearly came under the royal ban, His Majesty being with some difficulty persuaded that the Russian "folk air" which crops up in it was not ragtime.

Divine Sarah Now Domino Enthusiast

Madame Bernhardt Takes It to Heart When Beaten, so Opponents Generally Gracefully Lose.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 19.—Madame Bernhardt, who spends her summer holidays at her home at Belle Isle, on the coast of the Bay of Biscay, has become very fond of the game of dominoes and usually plays after luncheon and after dinner. Although she is a poor player, she enjoys the game and is keenly disappointed when she loses.

Guests at Belle Isle have formed the habit of gracefully losing to the Divine Sarah, thus pleasing her vanity.

Her afternoons are spent in her studio, where she is modeling her tomb, which is to be placed on Belle Isle as a landmark for sailors.

FRECKLE-FACE

Sun and Wind Bring Out Ugly Spots. How to Remove Easily.

Here's a chance, Miss Freckle-Face, to try a remedy for freckles with the guarantee of a reliable dealer that it will not cost you a penny unless it removes the freckles; while if it does give you a clear complexion the expense is trifling.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from Jacobs' Pharmacy and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the worst case.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine, as this is the prescription sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

MUSIC'S FUTURE IS IN AMERICA, ASSERTS BONCI

Great Tenor Tells Europeans That Real Appreciation of Art Exists Only in United States.

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, July 19.—Bonci, the tenor, who has just returned from a concert tour in the United States, is the most interviewed man in Italy. He has been telling the newspapers all about his experiences.

"America," he said, "is practically the only country where the love for music doesn't assume the form of a passing fad. Music clubs formed to insure, if not a season of grand opera at least, one or two concerts by great artists are now springing up in all corners of the country.

Meet Patriotic Donors.

"During my last concert tour I sang in many localities where no impresario would have dared to take a company for the reason that even if the whole population attended at New York prices there would still have been a deficit.

"The secret of my visit to many of these small towns came out when after the concerts I was introduced to this and that gentleman who by their liberal donations have made it possible for the people to hear me and my associates.

"American women do not go to the opera merely to display their jewels and gowns. They may do so to some extent in New York, Boston and other large cities, but in the South and West they go only to enjoy the music.

Music Dead in Europe.

"My impression is that while in every corner of America there is now a genuine demand for good music, this demand in Europe is either dying out or is already extinct."

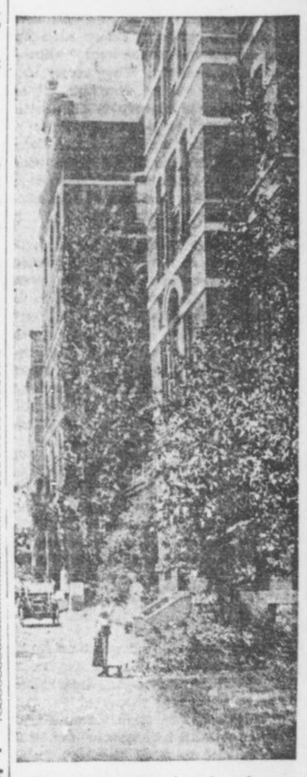
Bonci said his most pleasing experience in the United States was a visit he paid to Thomas Edison. "Edison gave me a bad scare," he added. "He took me into a padded room where artists sing for graphophone records and there I discovered that I had lost my voice. On leaving I had to sing a few notes to ascertain if my vocal organs were still the same."

SIR RUFUS ISAACS TO BE NAMED CHIEF JUSTICE

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—The coming appointment of Sir Rufus Isaacs, the Attorney General, to succeed Lord Alverstone as Lord Chief Justice, which has been widely rumored, is now definitely stated in reliable authority by The Daily News. The official announcement is expected in October. Owing to Sir Rufus' connection with the recent Marconi scandal, the appointment is being severely criticised.

A Picturesque View of Cox College, College Park, Ga.



The above scene is taken from a beautiful book of illustrations called "Environs of Cox College." This view from the north walk shows the magnificent proportions of the building with its ivy-garlanded dome. The groups of happy girls are suggestive of the varied forms of amusement and recreation enjoyed at Cox College. Tennis, outdoor basket ball and motoring are all popular and healthgiving forms of exercise.

Rev. C. W. Bryan, D.D., of China, who visited Cox College last fall and lectured to the young ladies, said: "Of the 17 colleges I have visited, I consider Cox College, with its ideal location, beautiful campus, splendid buildings and equipment, to be the best."

Cox College maintains a thorough course in the Academy as well as College. Fifteen units are required for College entrance.

The book of views from which the above scene was taken and the annual catalogue are now ready for distribution and can be had on application by those interested in the higher education of women.

FOR MILADY'S WARDROBE

By MME. HAUTE MONDE.

THE newest shirts to wear with the eponge skirts are those in pique. The new pique is only a distant relative to the stiff pique of other years, as it is delightfully soft and supple. The shirt is masculine in cut, with the exception of the neck, which is invariably finished by one of the becoming rolling collars which owe their origin to the days of Marie Stuart. The correct finishing touches are added when a sash of plaid ribbon and a cravat to match are adjusted. No matter how severe the skirt and shirtwaist may be, the sash is sure to give the feminine touch.

* * *

The all-black hat is the smart headgear of the hour, regardless of the shape, and it is a practical choice for the beach. A black hat does not look quite as summery or light as an all-white hat, but the sun can not damage it as it can one of colored straw, or even one of the natural tone straw, which may become actually sunburnt. There is a fad for trimming some of the black hats with blue ribbon bows, and a few of the bolder spirits among the fashion leaders are appearing in brown straw hats. When the latter are worn with brown shoes and stockings and a sash of brown moire or tulle, the effect is really artistic.

* * *

Separate skirts of cotton eponge have had a tremendous sale, and many of the well-dressed girls at Newport and Tuxedo are wearing them to the exclusion of linen or the durable cotton corduroy, which is becoming very common these days. The two-piece model preserves the straight, narrow silhouette, but does not launder as well as the gored skirt, which, when properly cut, should not sag after washing. These skirts button over the left hip and are slightly gathered into a belt in the back, which fastens with a buckle.

* * *

White serge, while not so serviceable for rough usage as tub stuffs or mixed tweeds, is altogether charming for outing wear provided one can keep it clean, and there are pretty ready-made suits, one-piece frocks and separate skirts of white serge offered at prices so reasonable that it does not seem extravagant to have two or three things of the kind, and so be able to spare one easily during its trip to the cleaners.

* * *

All petticoats are as thin and soft as possible, without being actually transparent—unless the wearer stands in a strong sunlight. Then sometimes the effect is rather startling. The petticoat now is exquisitely fitted, and is as narrow as possible, having a flounce of fine machine embroidery at the foot. Unless intended for wear with a sheer frock, the petticoat does not reach below the top of the button boot.

* * *

Flesh-tinted linings in yokes have become such a frenzy with feminine folk that the craze has spread even to lingerie. The latest nightgown is of thin batiste, with a lace yoke lined with flesh-tinted net. This yoke reaches to below the arms, and, instead of being attached to the gown under a ribbon beading, a garland of tiny, pale pink roses covers the seam. The short lace sleeves are also looped up with pink silk roses.

* * *

Sweaters show more variety than they once did. One may have them any length from hip length to full length and in many shapes. The Bulgarian lines are also in evidence among the new sweaters this season, the wide belt being usually of some contrasting color with cuffs and collar to match.

* * *

Jet ornaments are popular on light summer frocks. The lighter the frock the heavier the ornament. One, made of seven octagonal pieces of cut jet, the center one two inches across and the end ones an inch across—set in a row—is used to mark the high front waistline of a sheer batiste embroidered afternoon gown. The ornament extends well round a quarter of even the fashionable waist.

* * *

So far this season one has not seen any of the light-colored silks and satins used for suits or one-piece frocks for general wear. When a woman wears a light or bright pink gown it is of muslin or eponge or French voile. Both silk and satin are found in navy blue, chocolate brown, and, especially, in beige; the latter, like tan, is being widely used with black trimming and is immensely attractive. Its neutrality of tone allows various dashes of color to be used against it.

* * *

The peplum is still here. In a dainty white lingerie blouse showing a straight, gatherless peplum eight or ten inches long, there is an interesting belt arrangement. Two sections of the belt are made of mull, like the blouse, and these two sections band the waist at the sides. The belt in front and back is made of dark blue satin ribbon, folded narrow like the mull belt. On each end of each of the ribbon bands is a big white pearl button, and the mull sections of the belt button over the ribbon on these buttons.

* * *

Bead trimming, apparently, is not going out of fashion. A recently shown serge coat has a short, loose coat, the raw edge of which is banded with bright blue beads—the serge is navy—embroidered in a straggling design a couple of inches wide. The neck edge of the coat and the sleeves, too, showed the same banding.

* * *

The smart thing just now is the dying flower droop, the collapse of the whole figure which seems the result of mental fatigue, but which is in reality the result of a carefully thought out mannerism introduced for the purpose of advertisement by a famous Parisian actress. This charming woman is possessed of what the novelists call a willowy form. She is tall, exceedingly slender, extraordinarily graceful on the artistic lines laid down by disciples of Puvis DeChavannes. She started the fad for drooping figures of an exaggeratedly natural order and the fashion has spread with the rapidity of a prairie fire.

* * *

Violent color contrasts are tolerated and therefore one sees a purple ruff and cape over a gown of black satin which has a black tulle top; over while lace gowns there will be a ruff and cape of raspberry red tulle.

* * *

Where are the plain shoes of to-day going? There are not many of them, to be sure, but the new shoes which are coming in from day to day put the few plain ones that are left to shame. For the new ones show much slashing and cutting and gilding and painting. One pair of slippers is made of green, silver and white, and the kid from toe to heel is slashed away leaving openings shaped like crescents separated by the merest slivers of kid. Another slipper, with a French heel, is made to be worn without stockings. It, too, is made of painted and gilded kid, and has a strap to go between the great toe and the one next to it which buckles to a strap crossing the instep.

Zinnias have come into great popularity this summer. Their popularity began, in fact, last winter, when Futurist designs and colors first came in. There is a stiffness and rigidity of form about zinnias that harmonizes with designs formed of cubes and triangles. And the bright, clear colors of this flower suggest those in the giddiest futurist silk. Hence the popularity of the zinnia for corsage bouquets, hat and frock trimmings in its artificial form, and for household and garden decoration in its real form.

Fashion journals and reviews are trying to persuade the public that all well-dressed women are wearing gloves of some description. Yet they know as well as the public does that such is not the case. The fashion for wearing no gloves arrived nearly two years ago, when fashionables threw away gloves for evening wear. Once the habit is formed, women do not wish to take to gloves again, especially in summer time. They have discovered a pretty way of exhibiting delicate hands and splendid jewels, another good reason for keeping gloves away. It is needless to say that within the past year manicure establishments are flourishing.

LATEST PARIS COSTUMES STARTLE GIDDIEST MODES HAVE EVERYTHING BUT SIMPLICITY

Fashions Shown at Longchamps and Other French Race Courses Last Word in Sensations.

An old, old song remarked, "They do such things and they say such things—on the Bowery." But the modern place for doing and saying "such" things in Paris—and from the indications of these pictures snapped at the races at Longchamps, just outside of "Gay Paree," they are wearing such things as our giddiest Atlantan would scarcely venture on home soil.

In the one case a modestly flowered silk skirt with wee buds borrowed from the old chintz patterns is topped by a "cubist" coat of very spherical lines! Pale gray brocade flowered in great purple irises is seamed down the back that there may be fullness enough to shor from two cords at the top, and to finish with four cord shirrings at the bottom, and still to fasten kimono fashion over the shoulders. A hat of duchess lace banded in white moire and decked with a great bush of black aigrettes finishes the costume.

The other fair Parisienne carries a parasol of white broderie Anglaise inset with rare venise lace and with a three-inch edge of black velvet. The black and white color scheme continues in the shoes, which have patent leather vamps and instep strappings of white suede. And the gown itself is a creation of shadow and venise and duchess laces with net and point d'esprit and black beads for further garniture! The gown has the new cross front drapery that is suggestive of a surplice when found on a waist, but brings to mind nothing so much as harem trousers when found on the skirt. The only things of simplicity in this costume are the old-fashioned mitts that cover the arms and the big full-blown rosette thrust into the girdle.

A Black and White Mode.

Club Clothes

Reception days at the country club and the yacht club bring out very distinguished costumes of the lingerie order, accompanied by picture hats loaded with roses, and parasols selected to match sashes. Such frocks this year are almost entirely of fine lace and machine embroidery, with knowing touches in the way of sashes and little tulle bows at the neck and girdle. Airy black tulle bows with sheer white frocks are extremely smart, and with this white and black combination is carried a parasol of decided hue, like mustard yellow, Nell rose or saze blue.

New "Picture Hat"

The picture hat is taking its revenge. All last winter and far into the spring of this year it was pushed into the background by pert little jam pots and caricatures of Indian turbans. The picture hat was out of favor. Those who continued to wear it were smiled at as out of date; dress experts asserted that we should not see a revival of the wide-brimmed hat for several seasons to come.

Once again there are seen genuine picture hats, large and small; such hats as might have graced the beauties depicted by the old masters.

A STROLL Through SHOPLAND

by EVELYN WREN

It is a season of "pretties" in the shops. The midsummer garments, accessories and necessities are still reigning in loveliness while the first showing of fall goods is clamoring for attention.

Rich's have guaranteed hose. This guarantee is the most satisfactory kind I ever knew. It is a real guarantee. You do not have to sign a dozen coupons to testify that you wore hose No. 1 of box No. 7011 five times and that at the end of the fifth wearing a hole appeared in the vicinity of the large toe. You do not have to tell your age or weight or have your shoes examined. In brief, if for any reason Rich's guaranteed hose do not give satisfaction, take them back and get new ones. The fact that you are prone to walk in your stocking feet or that you have a penchant for shoes with nails does not disturb the liberal policy. You can get this hose for 35 cents, black, white and tan, in lisle. In silk lisle the price is 50 cents. This hose is full fashioned, finely finished and of a quality which makes M. Rich & Bros. Company proud to sell them.

Davison-Paxon-Stokes have expressed a message to feminine Atlanta this week. It is: "Be cool, sweet and dainty." In other words, keep your underwear supply so complete that you can have a fresh corset, brassiere, gown or slip nearly as often as you like. There is a little summer corset for 49 cents and the indispensable brassiere at 25 cents. There are gowns, drawers and corset covers in neat designs and at a small price.

Embroideries and laces are to be sold for 39 cents and 5 cents at Davison's. The embroideries are 45 inches deep, sheer Swiss, in the daintiest of patterns. The laces at only 5 cents are Valenciennes, torchon and shadow designs. It would pay to get several pieces to have ready for use later, if your summer wardrobe is complete.

This is essentially a lace year. Wide lace flounces are getting more and more fashionable. They will be in high favor for casino wear. These lace dresses, arranged in three or four tiers, are exceedingly becoming; more than that, they are full of artistic charm. Painters through all the ages have raved about supple draperies of lace or fragile gauze.

Marvelous Star of Ice Ballet Gives Berlin Thrills

By ALAN DALE.

Special Correspondence of The Sunday American.

BERLIN, July 19.—If you can imagine Pavlova with all her wiles, witcheries and Baccahanalian abandon, leaping, bounding, pirouetting and rotating on ice skates, you may have some faint idea of the amazing and beautiful Charlotte Oelschlager—known in Berlin as "Little Charlotte"—whom I saw last night in the finest entertainment I've viewed on this side of the pond—the ice ballet by Leo Barteuschek, at the Admiral's Palast.

Everything that an agile and almost supernaturally graceful Terpsichorean artist can do with daintily slippered feet little Charlotte does with tiny, glittering ice skates on her diminutive tootsies. The effect of it is positively bewildering. The smooth, gliding and velvety sensation of the ice sheet is absolutely unlike anything that the ordinary dancer has to offer, and the astounding versatility of the skaterine—who can do more on the knives of skates than Pavlova can do without them (and I make that statement unhesitatingly)—compels a rapt attention.

Little Charlotte is an awfully pretty girl.

She has long, blonde, un-wiggy hair, that in the dazzling light shed upon the huge ice arena of the Admiral's Palast, looks like spun silk; she owns a fascinating smile quite unlike the smirk that won't come off, so popular with the average dancing lady, and she has youth, effervescence and a sort of untrammeled gayety of manner that are positively irresistible. She is thin, supple, lissome and—perfectly astonishing. I take off my hat to her.

She is the finest artist of her kind that I have seen, and Berlin loves her. After viewing the work last night, I had the cozy, comfortable, well-satisfied sensation that an astonishing feat always induces. I felt glad that I had come to Berlin, for neither in Paris nor in London is there anything faintly to compare with the fascination of little Charlotte. If her nationality were otherwise, I should glory in calling her little Charlotte russe!

She appeared in the big ice ballet called "Flirtation in St. Moritz." It takes place on the large, glassy sheet of ice at the Admiral's Palast, with scenic effects at one end. It is in three acts with a story.

The entire cast of nine principals and a huge "chorus" of servants, geishas, Japanese dancers and supernumeraries are all on skates! Their evolutions at first amaze you, then, as you grow accustomed to them, they delight you and arouse a sort of titillating enthusiasm.

There are three acts of this ice-pageant, one called "Winter Sport at St. Moritz," the second "A Soiree in a Hotel de Luxe" and the third a "Japanese Festival." In the second, all the skaters and skating principals wear gorgeous evening gowns, as handsome as anything even America could desire, and in the Japanese scene they are all kimonoed and Japanesed in the most bewildering riot of colors. Dazzling calcium is shed over the proceedings, and—well, it is a sensation.

The best of it all is that you are dining at the Admiral's Palast. All around the magnificent and imposing ice field are tables where all the Berlinese dine and drink their beloved beer. It is not elaborately expensive, as such a thing would be in America. You pay your 50 or 60 cents for a seat, and your dinner is less costly than it would be at an ordinary restaurant.

And, believe me, it is in this moderation, this ungrasping catering to the multitude, that the success of such a giant scheme as the Admiral's Palast lies.

But the ice ballet of itself is a marvel. In addition to little Charlotte, who danced with a sort of Mordkin, called Max Feist—on skates—there was the gorgeous Dallerup, whose pyrotechnical skating made one dizzy. And there was Harry Paulsen. There were episodes on skis that was delightful; there were humorous incidents; there were Marcelines and big bears, and food not only for adults but for children. Not once did "Flirtation in St. Moritz" drag. The unexpected was always happening. One felt like the song that chirps "What Is Coming, Who Shall Say?" The whole thing was a joy.

One dines slowly and epicureanly in the German style. There is no gulping of food or rushing of drink. One takes one's time, sitting round that gorgeous ice field, which is cool and delicious, and quite unlike the feverish atmosphere one finds in most crowded resorts. All along the balcony were hundreds of diners in small reserved private boxes, but all the dining and wining (or beer-ing) never once interfered with this exultant ice ballet.

That gripped one, and dinner was really nothing more than a gastronomic accompaniment. Imagine the Madison Square Garden filled with people dining around its arena, and you may get some faint idea of the imposing Admiral's Palast.

But "Little Charlotte" was the benign star of it all, and throughout there wasn't one solitary note of ragtime! Not one!!

MISS WILSON IS PLAIN 'JESSIE' IN KENSINGTON

Pennsylvania Folk, Whom Daughter of President Aided, Like White House Bride-to-Be.

PHILADELPHIA, July 19.—Kensington is living over again the three years that Miss Jessie Wilson, the President's second daughter, whose engagement to Francis Bowen Sayre, of Bethlehem, has just been announced, spent as a social worker in the mill district.

To Kensington she is just "Jessie," and "Jessie" she always will be, the girl who traveled up and down narrow streets on visits of mercy, who attended the sick beds of mothers and was a sister to the working girls and a pal of the short-trousered boys who gathered at the Lighthouse gymnasium.

Miss Wilson's work of social service at the Lighthouse, 152 West Lehigh avenue, brought her in close contact with the men, women and children of the mill sections, and to all of them she endeared herself by her modesty, her unassuming manner, her cordiality and sincerity. The life of the settlement she followed closely, spending five days a week in routine work and returning to her home in Princeton for the week-end.

Many a meal Jessie Wilson has eaten at the uncovered tables of the Lighthouse Restaurant with motormen and millworkers for her companions, never thinking herself a whit better than the people who surrounded her.

Roast beef, fried potatoes, tomato sauce, lemon pie, bread and butter, and coffee—why should a President's daughter want more? And she didn't want more. So when it was more convenient to at eat the restaurant than with Mr. and Mrs. R. Porter Bradford, the manager of the Lighthouse, with whom she resided, she ordered the menu chalked on the wall of the restaurant, "full roast dinner for 15 cents."

Miss Wilson has lately been associated with the National Board of the Young Women's Christian Association, and has been active in work for the betterment of factory girls.

And Now the Duke Must Go to Work!

Richelieu's Proud Mother Tightens Her Purse Strings and Leaves Him and His Beautiful American Bride to Face the Problem of Earning a Living

The Duchess of Richelieu, Whose Honeymoon Is Clouded by Her Husband's Financial Worries.

SENTENCED to hard labor for the rest of his life unless his mother, the Princess of Monaco, changes her mind, is the fate that stares the Duke de Richelieu, descendant of a hundred nobles, in the face. This handsome gentleman of France will soon be studying the "Help Wanted" columns unless his princess mother relents.

And why should the noble duke have to go to work? He has always had all the money he needed. In fact, his income has always been greater than he could spend. Why, therefore, has life so suddenly changed for him?

In February he married a poor girl, Eleanor Wise, of Baltimore, because he loved her and much against the wishes of his noble and wealthy mother, and as the Duke's mamma holds the purse strings, a financial stringency now menaces the near royal pair.

And as it would be impossible for the Duke to earn his living in his own country, he has decided to live in New York, but of course he will not take out naturalization papers, for he belongs to one of the old families of France. His name and titles prove the importance of his lineage. In the Almanac de Gotha he is Marie Odet Jean Armande de Chapelle de Jumilhac, Duc de Richelieu, Duke de Froncas and Marquis de Jumilhac. He frequently uses the name Jean de Chapelle when travelling, but that is no longer a disguise in this country. After he takes a job perhaps he will find it more convenient to drop some of his many names and titles, but at present he is the Duke de Richelieu, and his charming bride is the Duchess.

The romance began a year ago in Paris. At that time the fashionable world was saying that the Duke would surely marry Mrs. Seth Barton French, the wealthy widow of the late New York banker. In France the Duke has long been considered one of the most eligible of partis. In a country where the old nobility is still worshipped and where the new is tolerated, the family of de Richelieu holds naturally a high place. Added to the fact that the present bearer of the title is practically a descendant of the famous Cardinal and the equally famous Marshal is the fact that he is the natural heir to his mother, who was an enormously wealthy American girl herself, Alice Heine, daughter of Michael Heine, a banker of New Orleans. Her fortune when she married the Duke de Richelieu was one of the great ones of this country.

Some years after the Duke died she married the wealthy Prince Albert of Monaco. She separated from him a few years ago, but draws a large income from Monaco. With all this wealth was it not natural that she should look for a daughter-in-law from one of the great families of Europe? She has sought a wife for her son even among the lesser royalties of Europe.

The Duke is thirty-seven years old. For twenty years he has been sought in marriage by every parent of every marriageable girl in the highest social ranks of France, England and even Germany.

But a year ago the martrimonial markets of the continent received a shock. The Duke began to frequent the American colony assiduously, and Paris began to seek the attraction. It was not far to seek. "It is the wealthy widow, Mrs. Seth Barton French," said Paris. But close searching made clear the interesting fact that while Mrs. French was not the reason, she was responsible for the Duke's defection from the environs of the Faubourg.

Just a year ago Mrs. French gave a dinner at her hotel in Paris. The Duke was invited, and so were many other notables. And also a very pretty American girl who was studying music in Paris. After dinner this girl, Eleanor Douglas Wise, a daughter of Admiral Wise, of the United States navy, sang delightfully, and so the story goes in Paris, sang the Duke's heart right out of his possession into her own.

With the Duke it was a case of love at first hearing as well as first sight. It was not so, however, with Miss Wise, for she was even then grieving over the loss of her lover, David Graham Phillips, who was murdered three years ago in New York. His death was a terrible shock to her, and it was to take her mind off her sorrow that she had been sent to Paris to have her voice cultivated.

Now, this young girl was blessed with charm, beauty and an aristocratic lineage, but she was poor, and it was rather a struggle to keep her in Paris. Mrs. French, however, took an immediate interest in her and as immediately planned to marry her to the nicest man she knew, the Duke de Richelieu. The dinner party and the following singing was all carefully planned by this clever stage manager. But neither Miss Wise nor the Duke knew that they were being stage managed.

From the moment that Miss Wise sang the "Jewel Song" it was all up with the Duke, and he rested not until he had won her heart and hand. It was a modern case of King Cophetua and the beggar maid.

Love did not run smoothly for the lovers. It was all very charming in the beginning, when they were encouraged by Mrs. French, but, oh, what a different matter it was when the Princess of Monaco heard that her son was headed for the marriage altar in company with an American girl of no fortune at all!

The Princess forgot all about having been an American girl herself, and if she did occasionally recall it she excused herself by saying that she had been very rich, a very worth-while catch even for a duke.

"I married my daughter to the Comte Gabriel la Rochefaucauld, and my son must certainly marry a duchess if not a princess," said the Princess, who at this time was in Belgium, but straightway she returned to Paris and declared war. And it was this war that fanned Miss Wise's liking for the Duke into the fiercest flame of love. She had been wavering, feeling that she still owed allegiance to the story writer whose death had been so tragic, but the haughty Princess's opposition made her realize that a live duke was more to her than a dead novelist and she said "yes" to the Duke's fiftieth proposal.

This was last December, and at once Miss Wise returned to Baltimore to prepare for her wedding. The Duke followed her in January, and in February they were married with great pomp in the Cathedral in Baltimore. The princess mother did not come over, and neither did the Duke's sister. In fact, his whole family ignored the marriage, and the Princess sent word that from the moment of his marriage his princely allowance from her would stop short.

The Duke and Duchess Sadly Contemplating Their Probably Penniless Future.

And the Princess has kept her word. The Duke is now reduced to living on the very small income left him by his father, a living too small to pay for the upkeep of any of his family chateaux. Therefore he will live in New York and get a job. His mother is furious, and there seems to be no chance for a reconciliation; therefore the Duke must work if he would eat the kind of food he ate in Paris and wear the kind of clothes he has always worn. Perhaps the dainty Duchess will have to wash the dishes and fry the potatoes until the Duke becomes established. Perhaps she will even have to darn the ducal hose, and he may have to shine his own ducal boots.

And what kind of a job does the Duke want? What are his accomplishments? Imagine him writing his advertisement for a situation:

"Position wanted by a perfectly good Duke. Can read, write, drive a motor or a coach and four. Perfectly able to order exquisite luncheons and dinners, and well trained in all the usages of good society. Best of reasons for going to work. References exchanged. Apply to the Duke de Richelieu."

What Became Of the Race's MISSING LINK?

How the Extinction of MAN'S ANCESTORS Brought About the COLOR LINE

By WILLIAM LEE HOWARD, M.D.

BY the missing link I mean literally that form of human being which must have existed at some time. First came the man-ape, and later the upright man and one who had learned to use his hands and live in family groups. This missing link was the man who spans the period between ape and savage man during the evolutionary eras of life upon this earth.

We know something about the big apes and more about man, but nothing about what scientists agree must have been a link between these two extremes of living beings. To-day the gorilla's brain measures about 550 cubic centimetres; that of the lowest form of man about 1,150 centimetres. Where has gone the intermediate man whose brain measured midway of these figures?

He existed at one time; there can be no doubt about this fact, unless all scientists are at fault and evolution is a chimera. The probable fact is that at one time more momentous, tremendous changes took place upon this earth than we can comprehend. Life in trees and a diet of fruit gave way to one on the seashore and banks of rivers and to the eating of fish and flesh—perhaps human flesh.

All land animals originally came out of the ocean and swamps. Some of these mammals went back to the sea—real animals like the whale, the sea cow, the seal. These had existed on land and were migratory animals. What caused them to take to the deep waters of the ocean? This missing man was the middle link in our process of evolution; for at this period he was chasing and killing off the big animals for food, sport and as a measure of personal safety, just as the wild beasts are now being exterminated by man.

During the period the brute-man existed he overcame the big animals. He probably multiplied rapidly for a time, learned the use of fire and to cook his food. He killed off the mammoth, the cave bear, the sabre-toothed tiger, the Irish elk, but left their skeletons for us to see and study. All trace of his own existence has disappeared, for those skulls and bones lately found do not belong to his period, but to a much later one.

Was the missing link a man of gigantic stature, as Professor Dawson believes? Was he capable of deeds of daring and feats of overcoming Nature's barriers, such as man individually to-day is not? Undoubtedly he was a powerful mid-man in the way of killing and exterminating. Anything that would not obey him or could not be tamed and made to work for him was put out of existence. All animals capable of being domesticated by the women were saved; and it is due to this fact that we have the horse, cow and the other domestic animals.

This missing link became a wanderer and one ever athirst for the blood of those whom he could not enslave. There is one prominent trait in our own nature we can trace from this mid-man—the hatred of races differing in mere color and the desire to war with even our own kind. For war breeds war; blood-hunger begets blood-hunger. Not until these traits are absent from man's make-up can we claim to have left behind the missing link.

We are still killing. Present man exterminated the North sea cow, the great auk, the buffalo. The Indians are disappearing, and many of the races of Polynesia have been completely exterminated. Man to-day is ruthlessly killing all bird and animal life through sheer love of slaughter and vanity. Why? It is an inheritance from our missing link ancestor.

Only by studying the history of man in his treatment of those differing in color from his tribe or family can we arrive at any insight as to the cause of the extermination of the missing link. Nor is this color or race hatred confined to man. It exists to-day among animals. The gray squirrel, for instance, will not allow the presence of red squirrels in the same grove or trees they inhabit. They will kill or drive away every red squirrel coming into their territory.

Man has always made ruthless war on every living thing lower in scale—his fellow man or animals. Only those animals and men which could be enslaved were saved from extinction. Man in the dim past not only wiped out his own pedigree, but we have well-known incidences of this in modern times.

The Beothuk tribe, of Newfoundland, was so venomously hated by the white men that the thousands comprising the tribe were reduced in the year 1819 to one survivor—Mary Nash. When she died, in 1824, the race ceased to exist. The native Newfoundlander is one of the lost tribes. No living being exists to-day in whose blood flows one drop from an original native. The same is true at the other extremity of the globe. The Tasmanian has ceased to exist because this primitive race was considered by the white man unfit to live.

As man rose in his mental powers there probably was a distinct race of white-skinned people who determined to rule. They made war on all those whose skins were outside the white color line. In return, they were overcome by the horde of black and yellow men. The extinction of the race we call the missing link was due, in all probability, to this passion for killing each other.

A Remarkable Drawing of a "Missing Link" Mother and Her Child.

It is also probable that the numbers of white people were greatly reduced until but few remnants were left. These fled to regions where geological changes swallowed up all traces of their existence. It seems rational to believe that something of the sort happened to that semi-human link all scientists have been hunting. In some of the fastenesses of the Thibetan plateaus a family or two found safety, and from these sprung again our white race. Buried under geological upheavals may be found the bones of our primitive ancestors.

But why our present and persistent hatred between the white and dark colored peoples? The explanation is to be found in our knowledge of psychology. It is in our subconscious memories. Memory stuff passed on through thousands and thousands of years. For the year of a race is as the day of man. It is a fixed, uncontrollable ancestral memory, and as much a part of ourselves as is the color of our skin—also an ancestral trait.

The bloody killings, tortures and horrible deeds of our old-time enemies, mutilating sex orgies, covering the lives of hundreds of generations, fastened in our brain memory cells which are brought into activity upon the sight of those whose skins are colored black, red, copper or bronze. This memory trait is as fixed as the one which causes us to shun and fear snakes. We are born with it; it is ineradicable, and may be for the best.

Just as the white man has the traits of straight hair, high instep, the negro woolly hair and flat feet as physical marks of inheritance, so do we possess in our brains memories of fear, disgust and hatred for those who exterminated our forebears—the missing link. To a certain extent depending upon the mental development, so do the dark-skinned people have ancestral memories of killings and torture.

This deep, subconscious hatred or dislike of white people for black people is the result of past ancestral sensation and experience. Its universality is shown by the law of affinities, in which, when the affinities come together, they both increase in strength and vitality. The white men in the Antipodes, the white men in Alaska, the Englishman in India, the German in Africa, all and each are of one feeling about the color line, due to the inheritance of the same ancestral memories.

Simple Ways of KEEPING WELL Even in the HOTTEST WEATHER

TWO men about the same age and surroundings, equal opportunities in life and both successful in their respective vocations, were walking together one hot Summer day. One fell from sunstroke and was taken to the hospital. Apparently the heat had no effect upon the other man.

This incident demonstrates what the public should know about the danger of excessive heat upon certain conditions of the body. It is not the sun's rays nor the great heat that directly causes sunstroke. The man who was stricken while walking with his friend had been heedless of all doctors' advice. His nervous system was below par through careless living. He wore a black hat and black clothes and would not adjust the weight or texture of his underwear to the weather. He dressed by the almanac not by the thermometer. He ate beef and drank heavy ale for his mid-day meal. He heated his blood by excessive eating; just as he did his skin by his stupid dressing. He died in the hospital—"a victim of sunstroke." Nothing of the kind, he died from his own stupidity.

His companion ate and dressed to fit the weather and, of course, escaped the effects of the most sultry and hottest days.

In these few words are summed up the whole secret of escaping sunstroke in our climate. The condition of the inside and outside of the body determines the amount of resistance to atmospheric heat and humidity.

If one is inclined to fatness, Spring is the time to get rid of superfluous fat. This can be done by changing the Winter habits of living and eating. Alcoholic drinks should be let alone, green vegetables and light soups should replace red meats and spiced foods. Fish and stale bread take the place of ham, pork and hot rolls. The body should be covered by light, porous clothing to allow of free perspiration, for evaporation through the skin is the way to keep down the body heat.

Cold water—not iced water—should be freely used inside and outside, and the intestinal tract must be kept free and active. Mental excitement, anger, passions of all sorts, will soon put your nervous system and brain in a good condition to succumb to the effects of heat.

The majority of cases of sunstroke brought to the hospitals show an overloaded stomach or else a physical exhaustion from careless living as the real cause. Of course this excludes those cases of heat strokes due to working in fire rooms, refineries and other places where the temperature is always abnormally high.

No girl should go bareheaded in the streets of a city where the radiation from pavements and buildings sends up an enormous amount of unnatural heat. In the country and at the sea shore, where the breezes blow, it is not so dangerous. But under all conditions, when the sun is high the head should be protected by some light colored and light weight material. Blondes especially should keep out of the glaring sun if they do not want their skins mottled and their hair to become brittle.

When a person falls from sunstroke immediate action is necessary. Don't wait for the doctor or the ambulance. Five minutes' delay may make a difference between life and death; or worse still, a living but useless brain. Remember that the blood is overheated; every minute it is allowed to pass through the brain in this state injures the brain cells. Loosen all the clothing; strip the body if necessary and apply cold water to the whole surface. Not just to the head and temples. Modesty and life saving are not compatible attitudes. Put ice to the temples and the ankles.

If it is a child wrap its body in a sheet soaked in cold or iced water. Keep up this method of cooling the blood until the doctor arrives.

Why BIRDS Are NOT KILLED by the THIRD RAIL

WHILE waiting at a railroad crossing after the gates were down, but before the train had whirled by, you may have been horrified to see a fat robin or a portly starling flutter to earth and calmly step upon the third rail. Of course, you expected to witness a piteous wiggling of the dainty body, a fluttering of the wings and then—death. Instead, wholly unconcerned, the bird hopped along the rail, meandered to earth and hopped back again, and all the while you watched him in fascinated amazement, wondering what magic saved the bird from electrocution.

The problem is very simple. It is not due to any biological difference between birds and other animals or human beings, but to the nature of electricity.

At every power house 12,000 to 30,000 volts are generated, the number varying according to the distance to be traversed. In short services, such as the ordinary suburban service, about 12,000 volts are generated, which are reduced to 675 volts before being sent through the third rail to the substation, from whence the electric current is returned to power house, so that a continuous circuit is ensured. The brush of the motor car picks up the current, and in passing through motor the electric current drives it, then returns to the third rail.

Now the tendency of all electric currents is to return to the earth, and when any conductor, that is, any body through which electricity will pass, is placed on third rail at one end and allowed to rest on the earth with the other, the entire electric current contained in third rail will rush through this body into the earth. This is what electricians term a short circuit. Now when a human being or a dog places one foot on the third rail, remaining in contact with earth at the same time, as anything on legs is bound to do, a short circuit is formed, the 675 volts of electricity rush through the animal's, or through the human body, and, in the case of a small animal such as a rabbit or a dog, it is bound to be fatal. A human being requires from 1,500 to 1,700 volts to be killed, but 675 volts will burn a man badly—perhaps so badly that he may die from the effects.

It is necessary to clearly understand the foregoing before we can understand why a bird is not killed by the third rail. A robin or a starling, to return to our example, will not reach down to the earth with one foot and upwards to the third rail with the other. He solidly plants both his little feet on the dangerous third rail, which immediately is rendered non-dangerous, because the bird rests entirely upon it and in no way has established a connection with the earth. The dangerous 675 volts pursue the dangerous tenor of their way, leaving the fat robin unmolested.

But, were a waddling goose to come along, and to lift one foot to the rail while the other remained on the earth, its fate would be the same as the rabbit's or the dog's.

A New Way of MAKING THE DEAF HEAR

IT is not generally known, even among doctors, that there are many victims of deafness who cannot hear the loudest cornet playing, the shrillest counter tenor, the heaviest Wagnerian overture, or the noisest of speeches and sound, yet whose ears are most sensitive to the noises that just fit their brain mechanism.

Comes now Professor Dr. Marage, an eminent otologist of Paris, France, with a simple but practical method of treating such deaf persons. After he describes in detail his explanation of defective hearing, and thus shows that the auditory canal has less to do with loss of the sense of autition than the paths in the brain, Dr. Marage explains his method which has brought relief to many who are "hard of hearing."

His plan is to stimulate the ear with an ingenious but small siren. This tiny instrument is a replica of the sirens used on motor cars, tug boats and on small engines. It has the capacity of transmitting to the drum-head in the ear, sonorous waves of a measured intensity of air-pressure.

The special quality of each vowel note is produced by sending the waves of sound through little boxes or "resonators," which are moulded in the form of a mouth andthroat as it expresses each vowel.

Therefore, if some one will use the siren methodically upon a deaf person, the ear will be stimulated by tones that as regards both quality and strength are natural to it, instead of tones which are spoken, or sung, or produced by musical instruments or tuning forks.

In this way the ear and the brain channels of hearing can slowly but surely be re-educated by a kind of drilling which is the result of this new "siren method." Deafness, partial or complete, deaf-mutism, and all kinds and grades of auditory troubles have of late been thus encouragingly treated by Professor Marage and his students.

A regular series of vowel sounds and vowel forms produced by such a siren, can be made to fit each individual case. There is no doubt that this original and highly practical plan of treating deafness will result throughout the world in the relief of many of these unfortunates.

How Ice Keeps out Cold

REFRIGERATOR cars are kept cool in Summer with ice. In Winter there is just as much danger that vegetables will be spoiled by freezing as there is danger in Summer that they will spoil with the heat, and for a while it was held to be more difficult to keep out the frost in Winter than the heat in Summer.

But now the same thing that keeps out the heat in Summer is used to keep out the frost in Winter, and that is ice. In Summer salt is frequently mixed with the ice to help lower the temperature, and cars filled with all sorts of fruits and vegetables can travel across the continent with the assurance that their contents will be fresh and wholesome at the end of the journey.

Now, for Winter travelling, especially for cars containing fruits and potatoes and such things that have to be sent through Canada or through the northern part of the United States, the cars contain the ice without the mixture of salt. There are large galvanized iron cylinders in these cars. It is in these that the mixture of salt and ice is used in Summer. In Winter the plain ice is used.

The reason why this keeps out frost is simple enough, when understood. Ice has a temperature of 32 degrees Fahrenheit and ice, being a poor conductor of either heat or cold, maintains this temperature and prevents the escape of heat that is furnished in the cars.

Still another device whereby ice is employed for protection against cold consists in throwing upon the car, when the weather is near the zero-point, a plentiful stream of water, which, freezing at once, forms a complete coat over the car. The action of the ice is said to be the same as in the other case.

A similar plan is sometimes adopted in the transportation of bananas, a fruit that is particularly susceptible to cold. The bananas are put in paper bags inside of heavy canvas sacks and covered with salt when the temperature is dangerously low.

The STABLE FLY a Serious MENACE to HEALTH

A PLAGUE of stable flies in Texas last Summer gave rise to a special study of this insect by the Government Bureau of Entomology; and an outcome of the investigation is the discovery that the stable fly is responsible for vastly more mischief than was hitherto supposed.

Not only does it cause great loss to owners of livestock, but it is the carrier of several diseases of cattle, horses and other domestic animals. In the Old World it transmits and distributes the dreaded "surra," which destroys immense numbers of camels, horses and cattle. As yet this particular malady has been kept out of the United States, but it may arrive at any time.

The stable fly is a carrier of both glanders and "swamp fever" among horses. It distributes anthrax among domestic animals, and probably to some extent among human beings. That it is the carrier of infantile paralysis has only recently been ascertained.

This fly is one of the most widely distributed of insects, being found in all inhabited parts of the world. The presumption is that it was introduced into the United States from Europe with livestock brought by the earliest colonists. It attacks all warm-blooded animals, causing severe injury to horses, mules and cattle, which often die. Sheep and goats, hogs (especially in pastures), and even chickens suffer.

During the outbreak of 1912, in northern Texas, many dairymen found their output of milk reduced from forty to sixty per cent. In some cases the cows dried up. All cattle, horses and other domestic animals were greatly reduced in flesh, losing ten to fifteen per cent of their weight. Dairy herds were not fit to exhibit. Farm ploughing had to be suspended because the horses and mules suffered so much.

Even the men engaged in the fields were frightfully bitten, the flies getting at them through their garments. Observation showed that after a while the cattle and horses gave up the fight, allowing the flies to swarm over them. The blood taken by a stable fly at one feeding is soon digested, and the insect is ready for another meal. The loss of blood is very serious. At lowing several drops per fly for each meal, thousands of the pests will take a large amount of blood from an ox or a horse in the course of a day.

An interesting discovery made was that, in the afflicted region, a great majority of the flies were bred in straw which, after the grain harvest had been scattered more or less over the fields and wet by rain. Even the straw in stacks, when it happened to be damp, was infested, 300 pupae being found in a single cubic foot of it. The moral of which is that straw should either be formed carefully into well-made stacks with vertical sides, rounded up on the top to shed rain, or else burned—unless (which is best of all) it be ploughed under the soil.

All of us are sufficiently well acquainted with stable flies. They look so much like the ordinary housefly that the average person would not notice any difference between the two. But the stable fly, unlike its domestic cousin, has a biting beak and knows how to use it. In the Summer time persons who wear low shoes are liable to suffer from attack by the stable fly.

Stable flies breed, like the housefly, in manure. But damp straw in warm weather seems to suit their requirements admirably. The female lays nearly 300 eggs. In stables they cause an immense deal of suffering to horses everywhere. During the Texas plague it was found expedient to protect the horses by putting trousers on their legs, which were suppdemented with burlap suits to cover the back, sides and neck.

It is the stable fly and not the housefly that causes such distress to horses everywhere in the Summer time. The poor animals endure agonies from the attacks of this insect.

With all the muckraking of the housefly, there has been up to the present time nothing said that is worth mentioning in regard to the dangerous character of the stable fly. Now that the latter has suddenly come to be recognized as a carrier of diseases, among human beings as well as animals, stringent measures of one kind or another looking to its extirpation, or at all events to the restriction of its breeding, will presum-

Fish with No Mouths

IF you have ever visited a side-show, circus or museum, you cannot have failed to see armless "wonders" who write with their toes; elastic skin men who stretch their hide for six to twelve inches; tattoed women who have the whole Doomsday Book inked into their flesh; fat men, bewhiskered women, and even living skeletons. Even men who swallow reptiles, frogs, fish and whole aquaria are known.

But none of these marvels are in any way as strange as the species of fish of the carp family just brought to the knowledge of zoologists by Professor J. W. Fehlmann, Master of Arts and naturalist, of London, England.

Professor Fehlmann himself was astonished at finding these carp, experienced collector that he is. These strange fish can live and thrive without any mouth whatsoever. They are in this respect like a Pullman car without an entrance at either end. For four years these carp lived, digested and grew in a normal fashion. There was neither an entrance or an exit for food. The fish was exactly the same as a closed pipe as far as was evident from without.

When, however, Dr. Fehlmann dissected the carp described, the stomach and digestive canal was found to be literaly swarming with the usual victuals of the piscian tribe. There were numerous mayflies, larvai grubs, plants, little crustaceans and simalar aliment of fish in the food canal.

This explained how the mouthless creature flourished. Not only were they able to breathe through their gill-clefts, but they were also able to both drink and eat by means of these respiratory openings. Although the carp lived in good health four years, there was not the slightest signs of adipose tissue to be found in the body.

Professor Fehlmann is not convinced that there is a true species of mouthless fish, but he is determined to find out, if possible, whether these freak fish can be developed.

HOW HE MADE MAY VAN ALEN LOVE HIM

Profiting by Mistakes of Her Previous Suitors, "Grizzy" Thompson Wins the Most-Courted of All Bachelor Maids, and Proves That Love and Courtship Can Be Made "100 Per Cent. Efficient"

May Van Alen Who Lost the Heart Newport Thought She Never Had.

"Grizzy" Thompson—"100 per cent efficient" at love-making.

"MAY VAN ALEN will never marry."

For years this has been society's favorite comment whenever the name of Miss Van Alen, daughter of James J. Van Alen and granddaughter of the late Mrs. Astor, was mentioned. The smart set long ago crowned her "Queen of the Bachelor Maids," and there seemed to be good reason for society's belief that she would continue to hold that title as long as she lived.

It was no lack of suitors which doomed Miss Van Alen to bachelor maidenhood. Ever since she made her debut, seventeen years ago, her heart has been the object of persistent attacks from a never-ending succession of men—young and old, rich and poor, including all the most desirable prospective husbands in America and Europe. There has never been a time when there was not at least one man keeping society on the qui vive to know if he was really going to win Miss Van Alen, and nearly always there were two or three spirited contests for her hand in progress at one and the same time.

Fortunes were spent in the effort to win the favor of this capricious queen—every artful method known to love-making was tried; one lover even made good his threat to commit suicide unless he could have her—but through all this siege Miss Van Alen remained as unmoved as Gibraltar. One after another her suitors retired from the lists in despair, leaving behind them a record of blasted hopes long and varied enough to furnish the heart interest for a dozen novels.

"May Van Alen will never marry," they all declared. "She has no heart."

But now, like a thunderbolt out of a clear sky, comes the news that the "Queen of the Bachelor Maids" is to be dethroned—that May Van Alen will really marry! Her engagement to a baker's dozen of eligible men has been rumored at frequent intervals during the past fifteen years, only to be promptly denied by her watchful father. In this case, however, Mr. Van Alen's formal announcement leaves no room for doubt that his daughter and Griswold Thompson, once of Philadelphia, now of Newport and New York, are to be married in September, if not sooner.

All of which proves that society has been wrong all these years in declaring Miss Van Alen heartless. The trouble has not been with her heart, which is quite evidently a perfectly normal, warm-blooded seat of emotions, but in the fact that never until now was it assailed in the right way. When the right man appeared in the person of Griswold Thompson and applied the right methods to his courtship, Miss Van Alen capitulated quite as readily as if he had been the first man to court her.

How did "Grizzy" Thompson do it? How was he able to make May Van Alen love him when so many other more experienced men had failed?

Here is the explanation—the explanation that is just beginning to dawn on the "wise ones."

"Grizzy" Thompson succeeded because he had the intelligence to see that the science of efficiency can be applied to problems of the heart as well as to the more sordid affairs of life. Let us see just how he applied the principles of scientific management to the problem of winning America's most famous bachelor maid.

It was in the Summer of 1911 that Newport noticed the great friendship between Miss Van Alen and the good-looking stranger from Philadelphia, who was being sponsored by Mrs. Adolf Ladenburg. Mrs. Ladenburg arranged many introductions for him and Mr. Thompson, or "Grizzy," as he came to be known, speedily made good wherever he went, but almost from the first it was plain that Miss Van Alen held for him more interest than any of the other society belles.

"Frankie Otis failed to win her with French novels, but 'Grizzy' helped his case immensely by reading the Sunday papers to her."

"'Grizzy's' trolley trips scored the hit which the Duke of Manchester's $20,000 motor car tours missed."

Of course, there was nothing surprising in this. It was generally considered impossible for any man who wished to make a satisfactory impression on Newport to escape taking at least a passing interest in her.

When Mr. Thompson began courting this most invincible of all bachelor maids, the old-timers merely their favorite comment about Miss Van Alen's heartlessness and added with an air of the greatest assurance: "'Grizzy' is bound to lose out just as all the others have done."

But when they said this they were not taking into consideration "Grizzy's" remarkable efficiency. They did not realize how ingeniously he was going to apply the principles of this practical science to his courtship, or how shrewdly he would profit by the mistakes of all the suitors who had preceded him.

Just what is efficiency? Let Mr. Thompson answer: "It is getting what you want when you want it in the quickest possible time and with the least possible exertion."

What "Grizzy" Thompson wanted was nothing less than the heart and hand of May Van Alen—that part of the problem was quite simple. And the fact that Miss Van Alen's personal fortune runs high up into the millions probably did not dampen the ambitious young Philadelphians' ardor one bit.

But how to make this woman love him? How to win most quickly and easily the bachelor maid who had been rejecting millionaires, wine merchants and popular club men long before "Grizzy's" high school days were over? These were the problems which wrinkled Mr. Thompson's mahly forehead for hours at a time.

"How did all these other fellows go about it? What did they do that made their courtship end in failure?"

Like a flash "Grizzy" realized that his chances of success depended upon his ability to answer these questions. He forthwith determined to familiarize himself with all the previous courtships of Miss Van Alen and to turn the mistakes of his predecessors to his own advantage.

Of course he already had quite a smattering of knowledge of this subject, for no one can be long in Newport without hearing a great deal about Miss Van Alen's numerous love affairs. Mr. Thompson, however, was determined to go about his task in a thoroughly scientific way and to gather the required information as far as possible from first-hand sources. To do this he had to become something of an antiquarian, for Miss Van Alen's first suitor, as near as Newport's oldest inhabitant can remember, entered the lists back in 1896, two years before the Spanish-American war.

Harry Lehr was this first suitor. He was backed by Mrs. Astor, and was a great favorite in Newport—what could have been the reason why he failed to win Miss Van Alen?

"Lehr was too feminine." That was "Grizzy's" decision after gleaning all the information he could from Newporters old enough to travel back in memory to the gay Summers of 1896-1897-1898.

Score one for efficiency! "Grizzy" Thompson promptly began to make his masculinity as pronounced as possible. He wore only clothes that were rampantly mannish, he danced little and studiously avoided pleasing the ladies by retailing club scandals as Lehr used to do. Soon he was pleased to note that the more he emphasized the efficient side of his nature, the more his favor grew in Miss Van Alen's eyes.

"Bunny" Hawkes was the next suitor to claim "Grizzy's" attention. He had followed on the heels of Harry Lehr and had squandered great sums of money in lavish entertainments for her. Some of the most costly luncheons and dinners ever given at Sherry's and Delmonico's were arranged by him in her honor—and yet, May Van Alen's rejection of "Bunny" Hawkes was as emphatic as it had been in the case of Harry Lehr.

"Ah," said "Grizzy" Thompson, a great light beginning to dawn on him. "She doesn't like extravagance. I will be frugal and saving. I'll buy sandwiches for her at the delicatessen shops and take her to luncheon at Childs's."

On second thought, however, this seemed a bit too crude, even for Mr. Thompson's efficient soul, and he compromised by taking her to Bronx Park on picnics. When they were at Newport he gave little parties for her on Easton's Beach, where they ate their frugal food out of a basket without the assistance of any plush-clad flunkies or solemn-faced butlers. After lunch they paddled barefooted in the water—such fun!

Efficiency scored again just as it had in the first instance. Miss Van Alen showed quite plainly that she liked these simple affairs far more than "Bunny" Hawkes's" elaborate restaurant spreads. And as "Grizzy" noted her satisfaction he became bolder and carried his suddenly acquired frugality to an even more close-fisted extent. Several times he even pretended he had forgotten his money and made her produce her own purse and pay the carfare.

With all the care of the efficiency expert he was fast becoming, "Grizzy" carefully noted the effect of his unusual methods upon Miss Van Alen. If it was not helping his cause, it was at least making her stop and think about him. Having been courted all her life by men who showered her with money, her interest could not help being aroused by the novelty of a suitor whose pockets often lacked carfare.

Ralph Ranlett was the third in the long list of Miss Van Alen's suitors whose mistakes taught her latest lover how to make his courtship efficient. Champagne and the finest hothouse flowers were the high cards he had relied on to win his game, and he had lavished these on her as only a millionaire can.

"Grizzy" was quick to take his cue from the fact that all Ranlett's extravagance had availed him nothing. "No orchids, no cold bottles of extra dry for me," said "Grizzy," and, true to his word, he and Miss Van Alen became regular patrons of the soda fountains, where "Grizzy" frugally regaled her with nut sundaes and ice cream. The expensive florist shops knew him as a customer no more, and the only flowers he gave her were the wild ones which he gathered with his own hands.

The wealthy Commodore Waters, of Baltimore, was another suitor whose final rejection showed the inefficiency of extravagance in courting a millionairess. When "Grizzy" found out that the commodore had surfeited her with wonderful cruises on his palatial steam yacht, this apostle of efficient love-making began taking her to Coney Island and up the Hudson on ordinary excursion steamers. To his great delight, this capricious Newport millionairess declared one day that she enjoyed these little trips far better than she ever had any of the cruises on Commodore Waters's yacht.

"At last," cried "Grizzy," "I am on the right track. All I need do is to play the part of an ordinary $10-a-week clerk, and May will wind up by loving me."

But "Grizzy" was too efficient a love-maker to risk ruining his chances by any display of overconfidence. Although he began to see that he was certainly making headway, he did not give up for a minute his exhaustive investigation into the experiences of Miss Van Alen's previous suitors.

Francis Otis and Cushing Stetson, he found, had courted her at the same time and had both tried to travel the literary route to her affections. Stetson used to read her reams of his "Blue Jacket" stories, while Frankie Otis tried to win her with French novels.

But Miss Van Alen had quickly tired of this form of devotion, as the record of the past performances of Messrs. Otis and Stetson shows. Therefore "Grizzy" declared that literature bored him to death. Instead of novels and poetry, he brought her armfuls of Sunday papers with their comic supplements and colored magazine sections.

Long tours in his $20,000 motor car had been a feature of the Duke of Manchester's unsuccessful courtship. "Me for the trolley cars," said 'Grizzy,' "and under his guidance Miss Van Alen soon became an enthusiastic trolley tripper.

The sad tragedy of 1902 made a tremendous impression on "Grizzy" when he learned its details. Robert Remington's engagement to Miss Van Alen had been considered a sure thing—one day came the rumor that it had been broken and then Remington shot himself. "One man has died for her," said "Grizzy" grimly, "but I will show her that whether she loves me or not I will live and live with a smile on my face."

Other men had given her expensive bonbons; "Grizzy" taught her to like lolly-pops. Others gave up their business hours to court her; "Grizzy" worked in his brokerage office from 9:30 to 5:00 o'clock every business day. Other men talked of herself; "Grizzy" talked about himself.

And "Grizzy" Thompson's efficient methods have at last made May Van Alen love him. He has won the ten-million-dollar heiress, the mansion in Newport and the proud distinction of being a "100 per cent efficient lover."

"She refused 'Bunny' Hawkes in spite of his expensive dinners, but she loved 'Grizzy' all the more when they went wading after a basket picnic at the beach."

"Other men had lavished expensive bon bons on her--the efficient 'Grizzy' introduced her to the delicious lolly pops at a cent apiece."

"Ralph Ranlett's champagne brought him nothing—'Grizzy' tried the effect of nut sundaes and ice cream soda."

Bank Burglars Who Disguised Themselves as Policemen, and Other Ingenious Schemes Used by Thieves in Bold Attempts to Get Their Plunder

NO honest man can accumulate a million dollars without constant industry, self-denial, perseverance and ability.

The same is true of the professional criminal. In addition, he must possess ingenuity, tact and resourcefulness of a high order.

In the course of these articles I have mentioned a number of professional criminals who, in the course of their careers, obtained over a million dollars apiece. I shall have occasion in future articles to refer to many more of them. Although these men accumulated vast fortunes, there was not a single one of them who really derived any lasting benefit out of his ill-gotten gains. Many of them spent a large portion of their lives in jail. Behind prison walls, their buried loot availed them nothing. Others dissipated their fortunes almost as rapidly as they made them and their last years were spent in poverty. Some of them died violent deaths.

Yet every one of these men, as I have intimated, possessed valuable qualities which, had they been put to a legitimate use, would undoubtedly have brought them wealth without any of the penalties incident to a life of crime. Living honestly they might not have accumulated millions, but their skill, ingenuity and perseverance would undoubtedly have netted them large incomes, and they might have enjoyed the peace of mind which none but the law-abiding can know.

Without the ability which these men possessed, it would be useless for anyone to hope to achieve the "success" which attended their criminal operations. But anyone possessing their ability would be most ill-advised to attempt to follow in their footsteps when their careers have so clearly demonstrated that CRIME CANNOT PAY. Whereas, if properly applied, such ability must inevitably bring success.

To-day I intend to give you some idea of the skill and resourcefulness these men possessed by referring in detail to some of their more remarkable exploits.

In the course of a criminal career covering some forty years, Harry Raymond, all-round burglar, committed several hundred important burglaries. It was he who stole the famous Gainsborough painting, as I have previously related. The magnitude of his crimes will be indicated by the fact that his booty aggregated between two and three million dollars. Yet despite the number and importance of this man's offenses, he was caught only once in the whole forty years, and then through the carelessness of an accomplice. No better proof of the judgment and resourcefulness of a professional criminal could be presented than such a record as that.

His robbery of the Cape Town Post Office will illustrate this point more concretely.

His first step was to cultivate the friendship of the Postmaster of the Cape Town Post Office. He went at it very systematically and patiently, but at the end of two or three months he had made such progress that he readily found an opportunity to get temporary possession of the Post Office keys. That was all that was necessary. He made a wax impression of them and put the keys back without arousing any suspicion.

His next step was to prepare three parcels addressed to himself and mailed them by registered mail from out of town. He came in on the same train with the packages. He waited until the registered mail sacks had been delivered to the Postmaster and locked up for the night, and then just as his friend, the Postmaster, was leaving for the day, he stepped hurriedly into the post office and explained that it was of great importance for him to get that night certain packages he understood were arriving by that day's registered mail. The Postmaster readily consented and went back into the office with the burglar. He opened the safe and ascertained that the packages Raymond had described were there and while he was making certain entries in his book, Raymond succeeded in making wax impressions of the keys to the safe.

Raymond now had wax impressions of the keys to the post office itself and of the keys in which the registered mail and other valuables were kept. Making the keys from the impressions was not a very difficult task, although it required many subsequent visits to the post office and the exercise of a considerable amount of patience before the keys were properly fitted.

Then Raymond waited for the diamonds to come from the mines, his plan to get them into the post office safe having been very carefully thought out.

At one stage of the trip the diamond coach had to make it was necessary for it to cross a river. This was accomplished by means of a ferry which was operated by a wire-rope cable. Raymond decided to spoil this plan. Before the coach arrived at the ferry, he succeeded in severing the wire cable. There was a strong current running and the ferryboat naturally drifted down the stream.

When the coach arrived at the river, there was no ferryboat to take it across and there was no other means of fording the stream. As I have mentioned, the schedule of the coach had been arranged so that it would reach the docks just in time to catch the steamer for England The delay at the river resulted, as Raymond had known it would, in the coach missing the steamer, and the next steamer wouldn't sail for a week. In the meanwhile, the diamonds were deposited in the post office safe.

It was an easy matter for Raymond to get into the post office the following night and the keys he had made gave him access to the safe. The diamonds and other valuables he had planned so cleverly to get were worth $500,000. He abstracted them all and buried them.

Instead of fleeing the country with his booty, his prudence dictated that he was safest right there, and he remained there for months. Subsequently, he disposed of the stolen diamonds in London, but he was blackmailed out of a large portion of the proceeds by the accomplice with whom he had made his first attempt to rob the diamond coach, and who at once concluded when he heard of the successful robbery that it was Raymond who had committed it.

Although it netted the burglars only $100,000, the robbery of the Kensington Savings Bank of Philadelphia was one of the most cleverly arranged crimes of modern times.

The theft was committed by a band of the most notorious bank burglars of the time, including Tom McCormack, Big John Casey, Joe Howard, Jimmy Hope, Worcester Sam, George Bliss and Johnny Dobbs. No more competent crew of safe cracksmen could possibly have been gotten together.

On the day these burglars planned to rob the bank, the president received information that the crime was contemplated and would probably be committed that night or the night following.

This information came apparently from the Philadelphia Chief of Police, the messinger stating that the Chief would send down half a dozen uniformed men that afternoon, who were to be locked in the bank that night. The president was told to keep the information to himself as it was desired to catch the burlars red-handed and it was feared that word might reach them of the plan to trap them and they would be scared off.

That afternoon half a dozen uniformed policemen called at the bank shortly before the closing hour. They were called into the office of the president and introduced to the bank's two watchmen. After the bank was closed the six men were secreted in different parts of the building and the watchmen were told to obey whatever orders the policemen might give.

Nothing happened until about midnight when some of the policemen came out of their hiding places and suggested to one of the watchmen that it might be a good idea to send out for some beer. One of the policemen volunteered to take off his uniform, but changed his mind, saying that it would perhaps be safer for one of the watchmen to go.

"If the burglars see one of you fellows going out of the building," he said to the watchmen, "they will suspect nothing, but if they see a strange face leaving the bank at this hour they will know there is something unusual going on." The watchmen agreed.

No sooner had the watchman left the building than one of the policemen raised his night stick and brought it down with all his might on the head of the other watchman. The man dropped to the floor like a log. He was quickly bound and gagged and taken inside the cashier's cage.

A few minutes later the other watchman returned with the beer and as he set foot in the room where the policemen were congregated he was accorded the same treatment.

The watchmen out of the way, the six policemen made their way to the bank safe and there a remarkable scene was enacted. Attired in the regulation uniform of the city police, with helmets, shields and night sticks of official style, the six "policemen" proceeded to break into the bank safe. As their work progressed, some of the men removed their hats and loosened their heavy coats, but there was nothing to indicate to anyone who might have witnessed this remarkable piece of work that the men engaged in the cracking of the safe were not genuine policemen. As a matter of fact, of course, they were six of the cleverest bank burglars in the business.

When the safe was blown and the bank's funds, amounting to some $100,000, removed, the "policemen" buttoned up their uniforms, put on their hats, and opening the front doors of the bank with the keys they took from the unconscious watchmen, they boldly marched in single file into the public street.

In planning out a bank robbery, or, indeed, any kind of robbery, a great deal of time must be given over to study of the situation so that when the day of the robbery comes the burglars will know just what to do and be able to do it promptly. Oftentimes it is necessary to wear a disguise so as to more surely carry out the prearranged plans.

I remember once disguising myself as a Quaker farmer's wife when we did a job in the section of Pennsylvania where the Quakers abound. We had been over the territory very carefully and picked out a bank where a considerable amount of money was on display, scattered around on the different counters of the bank, and we decided that we could go into that bank in broad daylight and get most of the cash.

"But a better scheme than this suggested itself—I deliberately spilled that can of milk over the dapper cashier."

For several weeks we had studied the methods in vogue in the bank and knew pretty accurately where the cashier and other employees would be at certain hours, and which hour would be the most favorable for our work.

There were four of us working on this particular robbery, and it was decided that that I should disguise myself as a Quaker woman, and pass the bank at a certain hour. I went around the town for several days studying the costumes of the women and finally rigged myself out in the typical Quaker housewife style.

I purchased a small milk can and, as its newness might attract attention, I rubbed the can with dirt until it took on a time-worn appearance. Then I secured one of the common baskets carried very often by the women who go to market to dispose of small lots of vegetables. For several days my pals and myself rehearsed the work we had to do so that when the time of action came we were perfect in our parts.

We had found out from our daily observations of the bank that the cashier, who was a good deal of a dandy, went out every day at half past twelve and returned about one o'clock. Several of the other clerks in the bank went out for their lunch at the same time. At fifteen minutes to one there were fewer clerks in the bank than at any other period of the day, and if we were to do our work at all it must be accomplished at that time.

There was only one drawback to this arrangement—the cashier occasionally came back five or ten minutes to one, and we could not be certain that he would stay out the full half hour on the day we operated. If he came back before one o'clock our scheme would be frustrated and we would probably be arrested. So it was decided that I should lay outside the bank and intercept the cashier if he should happen along before my pals made their get-away from the bank.

On the day of the robbery we were near the bank at half-past twelve, and waited till a quarter of one, when we saw several other clerks go out. Then the rest of my band hastened into the bank, and I kept my eyes fixed on the direction in which the cashier usually came. The robbers who went into the bank had a number of little formalities to get over before it was possible to grab the money, and this took time.

They had been inside nearly ten minutes when I spied the cashier walking up the street toward the bank. As luck would have it, he was getting back five minutes ahead of his usual time. I strolled leisurely to meet him, dressed up, of course, as the Quaker housewife, with my basket full of vegetables and can of milk on my arm.

The cashier and I came together in the middle of the block, about a hundred feet from the bank. I accosted him and asked for some fictitious address, in a broken English kind of lingo, which he could not at first understand. He was a very polite young man, and, of course, stopped to help me out of my little difficulty.

While I was engaging the cashier in this fashion, I kept my eyes rambling to the bank to see if my pals were getting away, for if the cashier had gone down at that moment he would see them in the act of robbing, and all would be lost.

After holding the cashier for a minute or two, he became impatient at my unintelligible talk and said he was sorry he could not help me and would have to be going. Now, under no circumstances could I permit that cashier to leave then. If necessary I would have grabbed him about the neck and held him by force until my companions escaped. But a better scheme than this suggested itself; I deliberately spilled the can of milk over the cashier's clothes, doing it, of course, in an apparently innocent way.

The nice white milk settled all over the young man's vest and coat and he looked a sorry sight indeed. He was exasperated at my awkwardness, as he called it, and took out his handkerchief to wipe off the milk, and I, full of sympathy for his deplorable plight, also took out my handkerchief and gave my assistance. While we were trying to get rid of the milk I saw the robbers hurry out of the bank and walk rapidly up the street. Then I knew they had gotten the cash, and it was no longer necessary for me to detain the cashier. I mumbled my apologies to the poor, milk-bespattered cashier, and then hurried off down the street.

I went into a doorway—which I had picked out in advance, of course—and took off my Quaker disguise. Under the disguise I had on my regular clothes. I left the Quaker outfit, milk can and all, in this strange doorway and then hustled off to meet my pals at the rendezvous previously agreed upon. We divided the money—we had obtained $90,000—and stayed in the town a few days.

In the papers the next morning there was a big account of the robbery, and the additional statement that the robbers had overlooked another package of money containing $150,000. We were shocked by this piece of information, and the poor robber whose duty it was to collect the money in the bank was roundly upbraided for getting a miserable ninety thousand when he could also have taken the $150,000 if he had not been such a bungler. He swore by every deity that the papers were wrong, for he had searched very carefully, and there was no other money in sight when he left the place. However, we could never forgive this chap for his oversight, because we believed the papers had the thing right, and we disputed about the matter so much that the gang, or "party," as we of the criminal fraternity call it, had to be disbanded and we went our separate ways, good friends, of course, but no longer coworkers.

It is the custom among bank robbers to demand that each member of a party do his work properly. If any one of them makes a failure or does not come up to expectations, he is discharged from the party. The method of discharging a member is peculiar. The leader will say to him: "When are you going home, Jack?" and he will hand him some money. "When are you going home" means we don't want you with us any more. I might say, in concluding this experience, that one of the men who took part in this robbery is now living in Philadelphia and highly respected. He long since gave up his criminal associations and went into business for himself and has made a great deal of money by his own honest efforts,

The other man died in prison. His was the fate of many another professional criminal. He had gambled away most of the money he secured from his illegal trade and in addition he served twenty years of his life behind prison walls.

Not even the cleverest men in the business have profited by their skill. They may prosper for a brief hour but in the end they are forced to the conclusion that CRIME DOES NOT PAY!

How I Kept the Same "Missus" Twenty Years

By Helen Schwartz,

the Model Servant.

MY advice to girls who want to keep the same "missus" for twenty years, as I have done, is to get one that isn't fussy. That's the main thing! If Mrs. Jacobson had been as cranky as some women who have servants, I shouldn't have been in her house two months.

I just can't stand the sort of woman who is always nosing around after her servants, as if she didn't trust them. The minute I see any of that sort of business out I go, bag and baggage.

Believe me, it isn't all on my account that I have been working for Mrs. Jacobson twenty years, and may stay there twenty years longer. A good deal of the credit must be given to her. She's a woman any honest servant could respect and get along with, for she does a heap more thinking than talking. "Have no words" is one of her favorite expressions.

She isn't one of the kind that will follow you around when you have been dusting and put her finger on the woodwork and say: "How did you happen to miss that?" She has sense enough to know that the best housewife who ever lived will sometimes skip a bit of dust.

You see, it is partly my "missus" and partly me that has made us get on so well together all these years. I had a good bringing up. When I started out to take my first place my mother said: "Lena, mind two things and you won't go wrong: Don't wait to be told what to do—do it without being told. And if you hear anybody talking about your 'missus' don't run and tell her of it. Just keep your own counsel and try to forget all about it."

Every servant ought to give her employer a fair chance. Don't think you can size her up at a glance and decide you don't like her because her hair is red, or for some other reason like that. Give her a chance, and you will find in nine cases out of ten that you will like her as you go along and get better acquainted. I have always found that you can teach most any "missus" a lot about minding her own business if you only make up your mind to. You would think to look at the lady I have been working for these twenty years that she was cranky and hard to please, but it isn't so. You see, you can't judge an employer by her looks.

Lots of servants complain because their families have so much company, but I am not one of that kind. I take an interest in my family, and feel proud to have them have their friends come to visit. For years and years we had eighteen at dinner every Friday night, but I never complained. I'd say to myself, "You've got to treat them right," and then I'd pitch in and do all the extra work just as though I enjoyed it.

Another reason why I have stayed in this place twenty years is that I always get as good things to eat and as good a place to sleep as if I were one of the family. I think every servant deserves such treatment and that there would be a lot less trouble with what they call the "servant problem" if there were more women with brains enough to see the wisdom of being decent to their help.

There are mighty few girls who won't try to treat their employers right when they see that they are treating them right. The moment I see my "missus" putting herself out to make things easier for me, it makes me want to do her a good turn. I never make a fuss if my Sunday out is changed or if I am asked once in a while to stay in Thursday evening and go out Friday evening instead. I have sense enough to know that such things can't be always avoided.

I remember I once saw a sign over a store that read: "We Strive to Please." I guess that's just what Mrs. Jacobson and I do, and that this is why we have been together all these years. It's mostly the Golden Rule, I guess. At any rate, Mrs. Jacobson and I seem to be always trying to help each other, and I can't remember when either of us has spoken a cross word to the other.

What is the Limit of Decency in Woman's Dress?

The Startling Summer Outburst of Slit Skirts, X-Ray Gowns, Diaphanous Waists and "Chemises Exposees" Judged by Philosophers and Preachers

By Rev. George W. Grinton

Pastor of the Fordham Methodist Episcopal Church, New York City.

THE immodest dress and unbecoming poses of young women often goad young men to fury. If a girl escapes the flames, the man does not, for nine times out of ten he makes his way to the Red Light or the White Light district. Who is to blame? No reasonable person can have any doubt about the answer.

By Prof. David Edgar Rice

Ph. D., Columbia University, The Distinguished Psychologist.

RECENT startling innovations in women's dress have inevitably attracted the attention of preachers and guardians of public morality. These moral leaders have felt compelled to denounce the fashions they have seen as luring young men into bad habits and even to ruin.

Eccentric fashions and daring exposures have followed one another with such rapidity that in this Summer season we must ask ourselves, How far is this to go? Women of the most refined society wear skirts moderately slashed at the ankles. Young girls of less social position, thinking to make themselves popular, have their skirts slashed still higher. We have heard it said that if New York girls wear skirts slashed to the knee, Chicago girls will wear them with two slashes higher than the knee.

A remarkable fashion called the "chemise exposee" has found many followers. It is designed to reveal a garment that we always thought was meant to be concealed. Still more outrageous is the so-called "X-ray gown," which was worn quite conspicuously at that breeding place of fashions, the Chantilly races in France.

This costume is certainly more startling than any slashed skirt can be. It has elements of violent surprise. Seen in one light it appears perfectly staid, while in another it offers a revelation that fairly takes the breath away.

Such things as these merit the attention of philosophic sociologists and should be discussed rationally and not in a spirit which would seek to suppress the color, decoration and innocent gayety of life. Certainly the young man of to-day living in a great city is exposed to extraordinary temptations. The cost of living makes home life, with its simple pleasures, unattractive or impossible to attain. The youth is drawn towards external amusements, which soon come to spell dissipation. It is a wicked shame, we are told, that the dress of ostensibly respectable women should give him an extra impulse in the wrong direction.

Let us ask ourselves in the light of philosophy how far a woman is justified in following new fashions that expose the person and how far the present fashions are a cause of demoralization. After examining all the facts and arguments I have come to these conclusions:

1. That modesty is an outgrowth of conventions.

2. That prevailing fashions, in as far as they work havoc with the conventions in which we have been reared, are immodest.

3. That fashions found immodest under the second head are a cause of demoralization.

To be more precise on one important point, a woman should never wear anything which startles her friends or the public. Exposure which excites no surprise is harmless. We will now apply philosophic methods of inquiry.

As to the first point involved—that of modesty—it must be said, from the philosophical point of view, that it is an extremely complex and contradictory quality. So many elements enter into it that the same situation or the same act may prove to be either the very essence of propriety or the gravest offense against decency. It all depends. Maude Adams, for example, as Peter Pan, may display her "nether limbs" on the stage to thousands every night without for a moment even raising a suggestion of impropriety. But let her appear on the street in the same costume, thinly veiled with a skirt of flimsy silk, and her reputation for modesty would be gone within an hour.

The fact is that although we associate modesty with clothing, modesty is not primarily nor essentially a matter of clothing at all. Conversely the mere quantity or style of clothing is not in itself a safe index to the modesty of the wearer. When custom prescribes or occasion demands, the amount of concealment afforded by clothing may vary within extremely wide limits without offending decency. The woman who escapes from a burning building clad only in her night dress, or perhaps with the very last thread of clothing burned from her body, is every whit as modest as the woman who is gowned from head to foot.

It is asserted by students of ethnology that among savage tribes, where practically no clothing whatever is worn, the women in their own peculiar way exhibit as keen a sense of modesty as is to be found in any civilized country. A traveller in Central Australia states that when he desired to take a photograph of a group of young women they were very coy at the proposal to remove their scanty garments, and retired behind a wall to do so; but once in a state of nudity they made no objection to exposure to the camera.

The distinction made by these women may seem an exceedingly fine one from our point of view. But what shall we say of the woman who exhibits genuine embarrassment when a gust of wind exposes the stocking under her walking skirt, but who an hour later may be seen extended her full length on the beach clad in a bathing suit?

This comparison affords a convincing illustration of the fundamental fact of ethics, that in the last analysis morals are nothing more nor less than customs. Whatever sanction morals may later derive from what we are pleased to call absolute right, the fact remains that in ethics "whatever is is right."

In its origin modesty was an instinct based on fear, prompting the individual to protect her body from the approach of a stranger. In the course of time the only protection needed by the woman was that against the sight of the stranger, and inasmuch as clothing came to symbolize this protection, modesty is the characteristic of the person who avails herself of this protection and conforms to conventional ideas of dress so far as they concern the exposure of her body to disrespectful glances. Modesty as we know it today is only an outgrowth of conventions.

If we accept this definition of modesty, we are, however, forced to say that many of the recent innovations in woman's dress as well as the movements of the turkey trots and tango dances are distinctly immodest.

Woman herself has decreed that only a very limited portion of her figure shall be exposed to public gaze. Eve adopted the fig-leaf apron of her own volition, and her daughters in various climes have made whatever additions they pleased to the original outfit. In our own country the limits of exposure are well defined, although varying considerably with the occasion. Esthetic considerations reduce the upper limits in the ballroom. Convenience and freedom of movement curtail the lower limits in the interest of the woman athletically inclined. A rainy day we complacently allow to play havoc with all our traditions. But with these and other minor exceptions, the requirements of modesty in dress are pretty definitely fixed, and may not be transgressed with impunity.

So far we have been concerned only with establishing the fact that immodesty in dress and social amusements actually exists. The important consideration then is to find out the exact nature of the harm that arises from it. It is conceivable, if modesty means only conformity to the conventions of dress, that any style might become modest by being adopted by a sufficiently large number of women, and this is what has actually happened in many instances. But it happens that the practises we are discussing here touch the very heart of social life.

The human form, both male and female, is admittedly beautiful from the artistic point of view, and if esthetic enjoyment alone resulted from its display, the matter would not be a serious one. But through the mechanism of instinct, which is a part of our original nature and beyond the conscious control of any human being, however good his intentions may be, the beauty of the human figure is inseparably associated with the sexual impulse, and it is the uncontrollable strength of this impulse that is the cause of much of our social woe.

If the effect produced by a woman who appears improperly clothed in public places were confined to her own circle of acquaintances little harm would be done. In fact, familiarity with her real virtues might completely counteract any harmful influence. But, unfortunately, the effect is more far-reaching. Every indication of immodesty on the part of a woman tends to break down in every man who sees her that instinctive respect for the sex as a whole which constitutes its strongest safeguard against insult.

There is little wonder, as has been pointed out so frequently by writers on this subject, that so many women are treated with scant courtesy in public places. The growing disrespect for women is an evil for which they themselves are in large part responsible.

Nor is it an extenuation of the harm that may result to say, as many well meaning women do say, that even though they may adopt the styles that are under criticism, they do not carry them to extremes. By a peculiar psychological process the power of suggestion grows stronger in proportion as the actual reality is kept in the background. When little is left for the imagination to work upon, interest largely fails. When limits are exceeded, the feeling of disgust enters as a saving factor. And so it well may be that the woman who carries her audacity to extremes is doing less real harm than her more conservative sister.

In art, if it is permissible at all to raise the question of morals in art, it is generally recognized that the nude is more moral than the thinly draped figure. And in the real life of human emotions a few inches of well shaped ankle showing out from under a fluffy skirt proves more attractive to the spectator than the entire form of the ballet dancer.

It is a rather odd coincidence that this charge should be brought against the sex at the very time when women are showing an aroused interest in social welfare. It is an interesting question whether, because of our quickened social conscience, we have just become more sensitive about an evil already existing, or whether we are face to face with a new situation, the tendency of which is to further confirm our traditional belief in the delightful inconsistency of woman.

"Send Me Your Moving Picture," He Wrote, and She Obliged with a Whole Reel.

"You're a Queen," He Cabled; "Marry Me."

"Yes," — But She Was NOT the Movie Girl, and Had to Go Back Home Unwed.

Berlin, July 8.

FRAULEIN BERTHA STAHL is sailing home from German South Africa still unwed. The upright judge who tried her breach of promise suit against Engineer Herr Justh, while sympathizing with Bertha on account of love's labors lost—including her long voyage from Hamburg, Germany, to Windhook, German South Africa—decided that Herr Justh was justified in not keeping his epistolary promise to marry her.

It is a moving tale—in fact, a moving picture tale, as you will presently admit.

Wife material was scarce down in South Africa, where Herr Justh was engineering prosperously the while he washed his own shirts and baked his own indigestible saleratus biscuits. He really wanted a wife, and he was in urgent need of a good, plain cook and laundress. So, when he saw Fraulein Bertha's matrimonial advertisement in a Berlin newspaper, he responded with alacrity and his photograph, also with his financial situation, according to specifications.

In due course Herr Justh received from Fraulein Bertha a charming letter enclosing the photograph of as neat and pretty a German girl as any German South African engineer could desire for a bride—and cook, et cetera.

"Your photograph," wrote Fraulein Bertha, "pleases me so much, and the account of your prosperous condition is so straightforward and frank, that I can hardly wait to hear what you think of my picture."

His own hand-made saleratus biscuits having at that time caused gastric disturbances particularly hard to bear, Herr Justh could hardly restrain his impulse to send Fraulein Bertha a fat check and implore her to come on at once and be married. Prudence prevailed, however. He must be assured that Fraulein Bertha was as good a hausfrau as she was pretty. It seemed brutal to ask her about it in so many words. A visit to a moving picture show in Windhook furnished inspiration. He went home and wrote a long letter to Bertha.

"Lieber fraulein," he wrote, "your photograph presents such a sweet and pretty countenance that I beg of you to send me others, of the full length, so that I may anticipate to the full the joy of having you in my home. In Berlin it should not be difficult to have a moving picture of yourself taken as you go about your household duties. I should dearly love to see your round, white arms buried in a pan of raised biscuit dough.

The Film Picture Which Fraulein Bertha Stahl Sent to Herr Justh as Her Own.

"Also, to my mind, a pretty woman is never prettier than when she sits beside the evening lamp darning the socks of her loved one. Seated at the sewing machine making her own clothes is an exceedingly graceful pose. I seem to see you now, dear fraulein, beside the ironing board making crisp and fresh those dainty bits of linen and lace which adorn your fair young bosom. Then your household duties faithfully performed, I would love to see you in a pretty gown seated at the piano playing the good old German folksongs. I should be ever grateful for just one other view on the moving film—some act bringing the light of true affection to your lovely features.

"Believing, dear fraulein, that you cannot find it in your heart to deny my request for these moving pictures of your loveliness and industry, I am sendng a check for one thousand German marks to defray the necessary expense."

The celerity with which Fraulein Bertha responded with an affectionate letter and a reel of moving picture film set Herr Engineer Justh's heart a-beating with joyous anticipation. That was the sort of pretty woman he needed for a wife. No hemming and hawing about Fraulein Bertha. All amorous eagerness, he went to the Windhook moving picture theatre manager and chartered the whole establishment for a matinee performance of his precious film.

Alone he sat in the auditorium. Snap! Out went the lights. Buzz! sputtered the projecting lantern. Oh, joy! On the screen he saw the original of his prized photograph in crisply, starched gingham and white apron moving about her immaculate kitchen.

She is rolling up her sleeves. (Oh, those round white arms!) She lifts a pan of snowy dough upon the kitchen table. She plunges her dimpled knuckles into it. She kneads it—and Herr Justh realizes how desperately he needs her. She shapes pats of dough on a floury board and puts them into a baking pan. Herr Justh's mouth waters. Oh, for one of those raised biscuits "like mother used to make!"

The scene changes. The same pretty fraulein seated at her sewing machine covered with fluffy materials. She is making herself—actually it is a nightie! All white linen and lace. As she sews industriously she smiles. Such a smile. Her pretty lips open. She is singing as she sews. A pretty woman who can keep house and make her own clothes, and who sings at her work—O blessed fraulein!

Again the scene changes. Oh, joy! Oh, rapture! Who wouldn't want a wife like that? She is sitting by the evening lamp, with her pretty head bent over something in her left hand while with her right—yes, she is darning socks! Better yet, she loves to darn socks, for she is smiling the while she darns. Herr Justh wants to rush out and send a cable: "I am yours; come immediately!"

But just now there is another change of scene. It is a homelike sitting room with an open upright piano in it. Enters a vision of loveliness in a dredm of a costume, and sits down at the piano. It is the same pretty face — but what a lady! One could not believe she could make biscuits, or darn socks. She plays dreamily. Herr Justh can tell by the movement of her hands that she is playing that most sentimental of German compositions, Leybach's Nocturne No. 5. He can almost hear its voluptuous phrases. Is she thinking of him? Herr Justh's heart is beating like a pneumatic riveter on one of his own bridge trusses.

Now the soft white hands change their movement to that of a familiar accompanimnet. The sweet lips open. "Ich liebe dich (I love you)" she is singing. Not the slightest doubt of it! Well, that settles it!

But wait—just one more change of scene. She is in her dainty boudoir in the daintiest possible negligee, seated at a dainty desk, looking lovingly at a photograph. Herr Justh recognizes the photograph. It is his. The charming creature is taking a last look at his loved face before journeying to dreamland. Ach, Himmel! She raises the photograph to her lips. She kisses it fondly—and the film runs out.

Well, that does settle it! Herr Justh rushes forth to send his cable, adding the words: "Letter follows."

That letter contained another check—two thousand German marks this time, for Fraulein Bertha's outfit and passage. Herr Justh was in a mood to spend his money like any inebriated sea-faring man.

Even sooner than Herr Justh had a right to expect, Fraulein Bertha cabled the date of her sailing for German South Africa. In a month her ship was due! Then and there Herr Justh foreswore hand-made saleratus biscuit. He took a month off, journeyed to the port city and proceeded to diet himself on civilized victuals and practise genteel manners, lest at first sight of him Bertha should declare it all off.

He was at the steamer's dock to meet her, watching the gangplank with eagle eye. Alas! The beloved face of the movies was missing. Nearly crazy with disappointment, he was rushing about interrogating the ship's officers when a very stout, exceedingly plain, middle-aged woman wearing a most impossible bonnet touched him on the arm, saying:

"You are Herr Justh?"

"Yes, my good woman, but I am very busy"——

Her arms about his neck in a strangle hold cut the sentence short, while the happy creature kept saying:

"Yes, I am your little Bertha—your little Bertha who comes to marry you."

Engineer Herr Justh, Who Was Cruelly Deceived by the "Movies."

Half dazed, Herr Justh took from his breast pocket the photograph Fraulein Bertha had sent him. Then she broke down and confessed everything. She was so plain she did not dare send her own photograph. So she sent the picture of a pretty moving picture actress. And when he asked for the moving picture film, and sent the money, she had to hire the same actress to act the part. What else could she do? All along she hoped Herr Engineer would be satisfied with a good and faithful housewife——

And then Herr Justh simply turned and fled back to his engineering job and his hand-made saleratus biscuits—a sadder but a wiser man. When Fraulein Bertha, plucking up her courage, followed him to Windhook and sued him for breach of promise of marriage, all his pity for her vanished. He told the judge the whole moving picture story, fortified by Exhibits A and B—and there was nothing left for Fraulein Bertha to do but take the next ship home to Hamburg.

"She kneads the pan of snowy biscuit dough, and Herr Justh realizes how desperately he needs her."

"The same pretty fraulein is seated at her sewing machine making her own clothes. O blessed fraulein!"

"She is sitting by the evening lamp darning socks—and smiling the while she darns!"

"In a dream of a costume she is seated at the piano. He can almost hear her singing 'Ich Liebe Dich.'"

"The charming creature is taking a last look at his photograph before sleeping. —That settles it!"

How I Really Cured My GREY HAIR

I Will Tell You Free How to Cure Yours by a Simple, Sure, Harmless Home Treatment. Age No Obstacle.

Don't Use Harmful Dyes That Make Your Hair Look Like a Painted Mop.

LET ME HELP YOU FREE.

I AM A WOMAN who belongs to a prematurely grey-haired family. My father was grey before he was 30, and two of my brothers as well as my sister became grey early in life. Before the age of 25 I developed grey hairs, which became quite embarrassing to me socially and also in business. I LOST THREE GOOD POSITIONS for no other reason than my fading hair. The greyness increased with alarming rapidity, and at 28 I LOOKED LIKE A WOMAN OF 45. One day I was seriously thinking of buying one of the many Grey Hair Restorers that are extensively advertised, when I casually mentioned the subject to a scientific man, and a great student of the Chemistry of the Hair. He strongly advised me to have nothing whatever to do with these concoctions. He pointed out that SUCH PREPARATIONS EVENTUALLY RUINED THE HAIR, and in the meantime rarely deceived even the casual observer. He suggested that I try a method he had perfected which by certain chemical action on the pigmentary coloring cells restored the hair to its natural color. In reply to my inquiries he assured me that the method was not only absolutely harmless, but would develop A STRONG AND BEAUTIFUL GROWTH OF HAIR. My friend wrote out his prescription, which I had made up, and after following the instructions for a few days I was surprised and delighted to find my hair becoming richer and darker in tone. The recoloring process continued until after some few weeks my hair actually once again possessed the natural shade of my girlish days. Since then I HAVE BEEN INUNDATED WITH INQUIRIES from friends and also persons unknown to me, who came to hear of this wonderful preparation. Having become convinced that I have found A REMEDY OF EXTRAORDINARY MERIT, which is quite harmless, I will send full details free to any man or woman who finds Grey Hair to be the same serious handicap it was to me. It is a Guaranteed Genuine Preparation and I OFFER A REWARD OF $500 if it will not Recolor Grey Hair to Original, Natural Shade.

Simply write your name and address plainly, state whether lady or gentleman, and enclose 2-cent stamp for postage, etc., and I will send you full details in a plain sealed cover. Address Mrs. MARY K. CHAPMAN, Suite 207A, Grosvenor Building, Providence, R. I.

How to Win Success as a Hostess---By Mrs. Frank Learned

Author of "The Etiquette of New York To-day."

THE art of being a good hostess is a subtle one. Grace and composure of manner, and certain necessary practical qualities help to make the ideal hostess. Not only does a good hostess possess the gift of making each individual guest feel at ease, but she remembers the tastes and habits of each; and, while planning for their amusement, she understands the secret of making them thoroughly comfortable.

To be a perfect hostess is an accomplishment which may be learned by experience. Those who are careless, thoughtless, selfish, vague or procrastinating cannot hope to win the reputation of being good hostesses. Although readiness of speech, graciousness of manner and charm of bearing do much toward the success of a hostess, those who may be lacking in these qualifications make up for them by having great consideration for their guests. By the exertions of a tactful hostess guests find themselves doing exactly what they prefer. Everything seems planned for their convenience and pleasure. Guests never find themselves bored, dull or worried while in the house of a considerate friend.

The English, in their great country houses, understand the receiving of their friends to perfection. They are the best hosts in the world. They are said to be "masters of the letting-alone system." While everything is offered for a guest's pleasure, there is no evidence that one is being over-entertained. Everything goes on with the utmost smoothness and with a delightful ease. The complete mastery of the situation is the result of long experience, where hospitality has been handed down through the centuries as part of the practice of life.

In our own country a hostess of experience—one who has a large country house with every appointment for comfort—finds it easier to invite a number of guests than a few, because they entertain each other.

If one is a novice in entertaining, it is wise to begin with one or two guests. The fact that one has moderate means and a very simply managed household should not prevent the inviting of friends for a visit. A cordial welcome to a country house in Summer means much in strengthening bonds of friendship. Leisure for true companionship is then more possible than at any other season, or in town, where conditions are artificial.

The custom is to invite a guest for a definite period. The exact dates should be named in the note of invitation. In this way misunderstandings are prevented. The hour for the train is mentioned and a timetable may be enclosed with the note. It is a mistake for a hostess to imagine it is not polite to name a definite time for a visit. She should state from Saturday to Monday, or the week-end, as the term is, or for a week, or ten days, as the case may be; but she must be explicit. A hostess who is vague, and asks a friend for "a few days," causes uncertainty as to what is meant. It is understood that a guest is expected to leave before luncheon at the close of the visit.

If other friends are expected, a hostess may mention their names in the note of invitation. If certain amusements are planned, it is sensible to give a hint about them. This enables a guest to decide what dresses to take for the visit.

Arrangements for meeting guests at the station and bringing them to the house should be made. Their luggage should be taken charge of and placed in their rooms. These attentions are occasionally overlooked by an indifferent hostess, and an unfavorable impression is made on an arriving guest.

A hostess is, of course, cordial in her greeting. Friends arriving from a distance are offered tea or some refreshment unless the hour for a meal is near. Women guests are shown to their rooms by the hostess with as little delay as possible. Men are shown to their rooms by a servant.

Before the arrival of a guest a good hostess sees that everything for convenience and comfort is in a guest's room. There should be plenty of towels, fresh water and new soap. Most persons have the habit of a daily bath, and a guest should have the use of a "tub" either in her room or the family bath room, if there is no separate bath room for the guest room. At the bedside should be a light stand with candle and matches. Even where there is the convenient electric light, everyone likes to have matches close at hand. On this stand a guest should find at night a pitcher of iced water and a glass. The dressing table may have a brush and comb, in case these are needed before luggage arrives, but as most people carry a small travelling bag containing toilet accessories, these things are not essential and should not be conspicuous on a toilet table. A clothes brush may be there and a pincushion is indispensable. A small work basket or a little silk bag, supplied with sewing materials, is a useful addition, in case a guest has forgotten needles, thread, scissors, thimble and bodkin. Fresh flowers in a vase on the dressing table offer a pleasant welcome.

A lounge for resting, with a dainty coverlet or fancy blanket, should be in a guest room. The writing table cannot be too well supplied. This will do more to make a guest feel at ease than many other preparations a hostess may make. There should be plenty of good note paper, fresh blotting paper, an inkstand of generous size, well filled, a penwiper, pens, postage stamps and a calendar. A waste paper basket is an important adjunct in a guest room, frequently forgotten by a hostess. A clock is a convenience, but its striking attachment should not be wound up. A few readable books and one or two new magazines add to a guest's pleasure.

Easy rules about breakfast are customary. If possible, a guest is offered the option of having a tray sent to her room or coming down to breakfast. When the men of the family take an early train it is often better for a hostess to send a tray upstairs than to oblige a guest to hurry down for the morning meal. Coffee or tea, rolls and butter, a cereal, an egg and fruit are sent up on a tray.

With the best intentions, some hostesses worry a guest by overentertaining. It destroys all pleasure to seem to have a guest on one's mind. When suggesting amusements it is sensible not to insist too much on carrying out one's own schemes. If a hostess is wise she will offer an alternative and give a guest the option of a choice of pleasures or occupations. A good hostess remembers that a guest likes to have some time in the day to be alone, to go to her room, to rest, read or write letters.

The daily diversions depend very much on the local advantages. Whatever is worth doing or seeing in the neighborhood is offered. Invitations to entertainments of a general nature may be secured by a hostess for her guests. Friends who may be congenial are asked to call, or are invited to a simple luncheon or an informal tea ,or to come in the evening for games or dancing.

Tennis, golf, motoring, driving bathing or boating may be daytime amusements. In the evening there may be cards, music, charades, story-telling or conversation. A good hostess is careful that persons who do not care to play cards should not be expected to do so. Everyone is not enthusiastic about "bridge," and it is unpleasant to be asked to play on a warm Summer evening. It goes without saying that card playing for money should not be allowed.

The hostess suggests the hour for retiring. Early hours are kept in quiet households.

It is not the custom to urge a guest to lengthen a visit. Regret is expressed that the time for departure has come and the hope that the visit may be repeated in the future.

A hostess should not be casual about the arrangements for conveying guests and luggage to the station, remembering that to miss a train may cause serious inconvenience.

FINDING The SECRET Of LIVING FOREVER

How Scientific Management of Your Body POSTPONES OLD AGE

By Dr. L. K. HIRSHBERG.

PROFESSOR Max Rubner, of Berlin, a famous physiologist of the Royal Prussian Institute of Germany, in a new explanation of decay and death, points out that the secret of eternal life is to to balance the outgo of work by the storage of energy and the intake of work-making material as to maintain their equilibrium.

Tnere is the ancient story of the boy's pocket knife. Although he had had three new handles for it, and seven new blades, he still maintained it was the same old knife. Professor Rubner's theory is something like this Or, take a sewing machine for instance. As soon as the belt or the treadle or the foot, or any part of it begins to wear out, repair it. Keep the sewing machine repaired; keep the broken parts replaced with new, and the machinee will never wear out.

Just so with Professor Rubner's theory. If we can but so balance our lives as to make up all the energy we lose, we will continue to be a perfect human machine.

Every living animal, declares the Professor, including man, has been given by nature an excellent capacity to manufacture the needed energy for work. The amount of energy that comes from a machine is fixed and measurable; so it is with the amount of energy and work that may come from any animal.

If the loss to the living body caused by exertion can always be met and equalled, or neutralized by the correct amount of mental and physical fuel, there will be no decay—and with no decay there can be no death.

If you allow for a difference in weight, the power to do work is about the same in an amoeba, a microbe, a toad, or an elephant. The horse produces a definite amount of work and heat for each pound in weight, and the length of a horse's natural life depends upon the speed with which it produces and consumes this energy. The slower a horse, a preacher, or an ant makes and uses up their energy, the longer they live.

Preachers, consulting physicians and school teachers live longer than newspaper writers, bartenders and busy practicing physicians, because the former are slow to exert themselves, quiet and lazy in their accumulation of energy, in contrast to the latter group, who are live wires, making and using up energy as rapidly as they can.

The life of a normal ox is composed of the generating of less heat and work energy than either that of the horse or the dog. The latter two, strange to say, yield about equal energies to the pound weight, while a cat is nearly twice as great a central station for making energy as either of them.

Man is the most favored of creation in this respect, according to the Berlin physiologists. He yields and consumes five times as much work as the horse, and this marvellous power explains the fact that the human race lives longer proportionately than any of the mammale.

If the laboratory physiologist and chemist has been able to restore and renew to the lower animals an amount of new energy far in excess of what they are accustomed to have, some one of these scientists can discover a method of constantly replenishing the decaying energy in the human race, and then there will be no such thing as old age and death.

Professor Rubner has just discovered a new fundamental, natural law which he hopes may ultimately point to just that triumph. This law is that living tissue can perform a definite, measurable quantity of work in direct proportion to the amount of nourishment it is able to consume.

The reason human life is not longer than it is at present, says Professor Rubner, is because all forms of excess or intemperance cause a rapid, abnormal squandering of the sum of your balanced energy. Even excessive eating, intemperance in water drinking or such necessary edibles as bread may bring you to a premature decay. Intemperance in dancing or in sleeping; in vegetable or meat eating, all are equally dangerous.

The wisest course for you to pursue to extend your span of life is to economize your energy, exert yourself efficiently, with a saving of every action, every idea, every muscular or nervous movement.

The reason that illness, accidents and over-exertion age the human tribe earlier than might otherwise be expected is due to the extra drain upon the stored-up reservoirs of energy. Similarly all dirty, unhealthful conditions of living call upon a premature use of living energy that would otherwise be saved for the rainy days of later years.

The plan, then, for everybody to follow, if you desire to increase the span of three-score years and ten, is to start in with the new scheme of scientific management of the bodily organs. The human machine is much the same in analogy to artificial machines. The real causes of old age, decay, degeneration and death are either a poor machine to begin with—defective parts from your ancestral inheritance—or gritty, thick, clogging oils and fallacious, destructive fuels, which gradually wear out by friction; waste products and plugging, all of the delicate joints, hinges and vital parts.

Perpetual motion is sought in the machine shop, as well as the living mechanism. In both places the secret seems to be to discover some scheme by which friction and clogging shall be eliminated. Similarly, it may be, the much ridiculed experiments upon perpetual motion may point finally to the discovery of a method so to reduce friction in the human machine that life on this globe will be doubled or greatly increased.

WAYS OF WASTING YOUR ENERGY.

A—Intemperance in eating and drinking. B—Dancing to excess. C—Too much sleep.

Where WOMEN Dress As MEN

IT would be difficult to tell when the women of Champery, a primitive mountain district of the Canton of Valais, in Switzerland, wore any other garb than man's attire. They have, in fact, worn trousers from time immemorial, and if wearing the trousers is a privilege, they have certainly earned it.

The women in this district do all the work. It may be that during a few months in the Summer some of the men will act as guides for the tourists who come to see and to climb the mountains, but other than that the men live in indolence.

These men are, in fact, noted for their laziness, nor are they to be so greatly blamed, it seems, since custom among them has been for generations and generations to sit idly by while their women do all the work.

The women go into the fields, and do all the hard work that is naturally required to eke out an existence in a mountainous farming district. These women pasture the cattle on the steep and dangerous Alpine slopes, they have all care of these cattle and sheep, shear the sheep, cut all the timber for firewood and for building purposes, till the soil, plant, cut the hay, harvest, and take all financial as well as manual charge of the farming.

And then, to top off this picture of female leadership and energy, should be told that it is not an unusual sight during the season of snow to see the wife coming home from the village or from lumbering, dragging her husband on a sled!

In view of the above, it is not surprising that the women of Champery should have adopted the masculine attire. Their dress is of the simplest kind—a jerkin of rough, dark blue material, with trousers to match, and a red handkerchief to protect the head.

Inasmuch as the wives and mothers of Champery perform the greater part of the toil usually deemed the duty of the stronger sex, it is not astonishing to learn that they affect certain masculine habits, the chief of which is the pipe. The Champery woman puffs away with considerable enjoyment at a short briar as she proceeds with her labors.

Some MISTAKES INVENTORS Should AVOID

SOME extremely good advice to inventors of all sorts is handed out by the Block Signal and Train Control Board of the Interstate Commerce Commission. While it was aimed particularly at such inventors as work for improvements connected with railroading, it fits almost any inventor.

According to this Board too many inventors connect invention with financiering. The Board explains that to invent does not always mean to get rich, and that it is not the inventor who is seeking solely to make his millions that succeed, but the inventor who really seeks to benefit mankind.

A successful invention is not a pastime, but an evolution from long and painstaking experience and observation, careful analysis and a strict disregard of the nonessentials and of repeated failures, also an unfailing persistence born of optimism, the courage of conviction, and, above all, hard common sense.

The successful inventor is never satisfied with his first, or even his last device; he is always looking for defects, not for merits, because the merits are always easy to see while the defects are generally hidden

The inventor should remember there are two sides to every question of mechanics, just as to every other question. No device is so bad but it has its good points and should be studied to learn these good points, and none are so good but what they might be improved, and so should be constantly worked over in an effort to create these improvements.

Do not expect to receive something for nothing. The fallacy prevails among many inventors that this is a royal road to wealth where one little idea will land the inventor in a mansion on the sunny side of Easy Street for a life residence, but this is all wrong—the successful inventor probably works harder than the day laborer. The inventor who expects this will find that he gets just what he put into it—nothing if he does not work hard; plenty if he studies and seeks constantly to improve his work.

No mechanical system, declares this Board, can be operated under 100 per cent efficiency. Even under the most favorable circumstances this will never happen, and constant and practical use of most inventions are never under the most favorable circumstances. One great mistake of inventors is accepting "posibility" for "practicability." So many things are really possible, but so few have been made actually practical. Possibilities never succeed and practicability does not always succeed.

Sometimes inventors wonder why their methods are not adopted when they do not realize that perhaps millions of dollars are invested in some enterprise that would be a loss if the system was overthrown entirely in order to adopt the new invention.

Inventors see perfection in some of their devices sometimes solely because they are capable themselves and cannot see how any man could fail to operate their invention, but they fail to take into consideration the fact that man is not infallible; that so long as it is possible to mishandle or wrongfully manipulate any device just so long is there a chance, and a big one, that man will slip up occasionally and do this.

Unless a man is unusually well qualified for such work, and can take all these things into consideration, warns this Board, he should hesitate a long while before giving up his calling and seeking to make a fortune as an inventor.

LOVE'S LABORS LOST IN THE MOVIES

"Send Me Your Moving Picture," He Wrote, and She Obliged with a Whole Reel.

"You're a Queen," He Cabled; "Marry Me."

"Yes," — But She Was NOT the Movie Girl, and Had to Go Back Home Unwed.

Berlin, July 8.

FRAULEIN BERTHA STAHL is sailing home from German South Africa still unwed. The upright judge who tried her breach of promise suit against Engineer Herr Justh, while sympathizing with Bertha on account of love's labors lost—including her long voyage from Hamburg, Germany, to Windhook, German South Africa—decided that Herr Justh was justified in not keeping his epistolary promise to marry her.

It is a moving tale—in fact, a moving picture tale, as you will presently admit.

Wife material was scarce down in South Africa, where Herr Justh was engineering prosperously the while he washed his own shirts and baked his own indigestible saleratus biscuits. He really wanted a wife, and he was in urgent need of a good, plain cook and laundress. So, when he saw Fraulein Bertha's matrimonial advertisement in a Berlin newspaper, he responded with alacrity and his photograph, also with his financial situation, according to specifications.

In due course Herr Justh received from Fraulein Bertha a charming letter enclosing the photograph of as neat and pretty a German girl as any German South African engineer could desire for a bride—and cook, et cetera.

"Your photograph," wrote Fraulein Bertha, "pleases me so much, and the account of your prosperous condition is so straightforward and frank, that I can hardly wait to hear what you think of my picture."

His own hand-made saleratus biscuits having at that time caused gastric disturbances particularly hard to bear, Herr Justh could hardly restrain his impulse to send Fraulein Bertha a fat check and implore her to come on at once and be married. Prudence prevailed, however. He must be assured that Fraulein Bertha was as good a hausfrau as she was pretty. It seemed brutal to ask her about it in so many words. A visit to a moving picture show in Windhook furnished inspiration. He went home and wrote a long letter to Bertha.

"Lieber fraulein," he wrote, "your photograph presents such a sweet and pretty countenance that I beg of you to send me others, of the full length, so that I may anticipate to the full the joy of having you in my home. In Berlin it should not be difficult to have a moving picture of yourself taken as you go about your household duties. I should dearly love to see your round, white arms buried in a pan of raised biscuit dough.

"Also, to my mind, a pretty woman is never prettier than when she sits beside the evening lamp darning the socks of her loved one. Seated at the sewing machine making her own clothes is an exceedingly graceful pose. I seem to see you now, dear fraulein, beside the ironing board making crisp and fresh those dainty bits of linen and lace which adorn your fair young bosom. Then your household duties faithfully performed, I would love to see you in a pretty gown seated at the piano playing the good old German folksongs. I should be ever grateful for just one other view on the moving film—some act bringing the light of true affection to your lovely features.

"Believing, dear fraulein, that you cannot find it in your heart to deny my request for these moving pictures of your loveliness and industry, I am sendng a check for one thousand German marks to defray the necessary expense."

The celerity with which Fraulein Bertha responded with an affectionate letter and a reel of moving picture film set Herr Engineer Justh's heart a-beating with joyous anticipation. That was the sort of pretty woman he needed for a wife. No hemming and hawing about Fraulein Bertha. All amorous eagerness, he went to the Windhook moving picture theatre manager and chartered the whole establishment for a matinee performance of his precious film.

The Film Picture Which Fraulein Bertha Stahl Sent to Herr Justh as Her Own.

Alone he sat in the auditorium. Snap! Out went the lights. Buzz! sputtered the projecting lantern. Oh, joy! On the screen he saw the original of his prized photograph in crisply, starched gingham and white apron moving about her immaculate kitchen.

She is rolling up her sleeves. (Oh, those round white arms!) She lifts a pan of snowy dough upon the kitchen table. She plunges her dimpled knuckles into it. She kneads it—and Herr Justh realizes how desperately he needs her. She shapes pats of dough on a floury board and puts them into a baking pan. Herr Justh's mouth waters. Oh, for one of those raised biscuits "like mother used to make!"

The scene changes. The same pretty fraulein seated at her sewing machine covered with fluffy materials. She is making herself—actually it is a nightie! All white linen and lace. As she sews industriously she smiles. Such a smile. Her pretty lips open. She is singing as she sews. A pretty woman who can keep house and make her own clothes, and who sings at her work—O blessed fraulein!

Again the scene changes. Oh, joy! Oh, rapture! Who wouldn't want a wife like that? She is sitting by the evening lamp, with her pretty head bent over something in her left hand while with her right—yes, she is darning socks! Better yet, she loves to darn socks, for she is smiling the while she darns. Herr Justh wants to rush out and send a cable: "I am yours; come immediately!"

But just now there is another change of scene. It is a homelike sitting room with an open upright piano in it. Enters a vision of loveliness in a dredm of a costume, and sits down at the piano. It is the same pretty face — but what a lady! One could not believe she could make biscuits, or darn socks. She plays dreamily. Herr Justh can tell by the movement of her hands that she is playing that most sentimental of German compositions, Leybach's Nocturne No. 5. He can almost hear its voluptuous phrases. Is she thinking of him? Herr Justh's heart is beating like a pneumatic riveter on one of his own bridge trusses.

Now the soft white hands change their movement to that of a familiar accompanimnet. The sweet lips open. "Ich liebe dich (I love you)" she is singing. Not the slightest doubt of it! Well, that settles it!

But wait—just one more change of scene. She is in her dainty boudoir in the daintiest possible negligee, seated at a dainty desk, looking lovingly at a photograph. Herr Justh recognizes the photograph. It is his. The charming creature is taking a last look at his loved face before journeying to dreamland. Ach, Himmel! She raises the photograph to her lips. She kisses it fondly—and the film runs out.

Well, that does settle it! Herr Justh rushes forth to send his cable, adding the words: "Letter follows."

That letter contained another check—two thousand German marks this time, for Fraulein Bertha's outfit and passage. Herr Justh was in a mood to spend his money like any inebriated sea-faring man.

Even sooner than Herr Justh had a right to expect, Fraulein Bertha cabled the date of her sailing for German South Africa. In a month her ship was due! Then and there Herr Justh foreswore hand-made saleratus biscuit. He took a month off, journeyed to the port city and proceeded to diet himself on civilized victuals and practise genteel manners, lest at first sight of him Bertha should declare it all off.

He was at the steamer's dock to meet her, watching the gangplank with eagle eye. Alas! The beloved face of the movies was missing. Nearly crazy with disappointment, he was rushing about interrogating the ship's officers when a very stout, exceedingly plain, middle-aged woman wearing a most impossible bonnet touched him on the arm, saying:

"You are Herr Justh?"

"Yes, my good woman, but I am very busy"——

Her arms about his neck in a strangle hold cut the sentence short, while the happy creature kept saying:

"Yes, I am your little Bertha—your little Bertha who comes to marry you."

Engineer Herr Justh, Who Was Cruelly Deceived by the "Movies."

Half dazed, Herr Justh took from his breast pocket the photograph Fraulein Bertha had sent him. Then she broke down and confessed everything. She was so plain she did not dare send her own photograph. So she sent the picture of a pretty moving picture actress. And when he asked for the moving picture film, and sent the money, she had to hire the same actress to act the part. What else could she do? All along she hoped Herr Engineer would be satisfied with a good and faithful housewife——

And then Herr Justh simply turned and fled back to his engineering job and his hand-made saleratus biscuits—a sadder but a wiser man. When Fraulein Bertha, plucking up her courage, followed him to Windhook and sued him for breach of promise of marriage, all his pity for her vanished. He told the judge the whole moving picture story, fortified by Exhibits A and B—and there was nothing left for Fraulein Bertha to do but take the next ship home to Hamburg.

"She kneads the pan of snowy biscuit dough, and Herr Justh realizes how desperately he needs her."

"The same pretty fraulein is seated at her sewing machine making her own clothes. O blessed fraulein!"

"She is sitting by the evening lamp darning socks—and smiling the while she darns!"

"In a dream of a costume she is seated at the piano. He can almost hear her singing 'Ich Liebe Dich.'"

"The charming creature is taking a last look at his photograph before sleeping. —That settles it!"

How I Really Cured My GREY HAIR

I Will Tell You Free How to Cure Yours by a Simple, Sure, Harmless Home Treatment. Age No Obstacle.

Don't Use Harmful Dyes That Make Your Hair Look Like a Painted Mop.

LET ME HELP YOU FREE.

I AM A WOMAN who belongs to a prematurely grey-haired family. My father was grey before he was 30, and two of my brothers as well as my sister became grey early in life. Before the age of 25 I developed the same, which became quite embarrassing to me—socially and also in business. I LOST THREE GOOD POSITIONS for no other reason than my fading hair. The greyness increased with alarming rapidity, and at 28 I LOOKED LIKE A WOMAN OF 45. One day I was seriously thinking of buying one of the many Grey Hair Restorers that are extensively advertised, when I casually mentioned the subject to a scientific man, and a great student of the Chemistry of the Hair. He strongly advised me to have nothing whatever to do with these concoctions. He pointed out that SUCH PREPARATIONS EVENTUALLY RUINED THE HAIR, and in the meantime rarely deceived even the casual observer. He suggested that I try a method he had perfected which by certain chemical action on the pigmentary coloring cells restored the hair to its natural color. In reply to my inquiries he assured me that the method was not only absolutely harmless, but would develop A STRONG AND BEAUTIFUL GROWTH OF HAIR. My friend wrote out his prescription, which I had made up and, after following the instructions for a few days I was surprised and delighted to find my hair becoming richer and darker in tone. The recoloring process continued until after some few weeks my hair actually once again possessed the natural shade of my girlish days. Since then I HAVE BEEN INUNDATED WITH INQUIRIES from friends and also people unknown to me, who came to hear of this wonderful preparation. Having become convinced that I have found A REMEDY OF EXTRAORDINARY MERIT, which is quite harmless, I will send full details free to any man or woman who finds Grey Hair to be the same serious handicap it was to me. It is a Guaranteed Genuine Preparation and I OFFER A REWARD OF $500 if it will not Recolor Grey Hair to Original, Natural Shade.

Simply write your name and address plainly, state whether lady or gentleman, and endose 2-cent stamp for postage, etc., and I will send you full details in a plain sealed cover. Address Mrs. MARY K. CHAPMAN, Suite 207A, Grosvenor Building, Providence, R. I.

How to Win Success as a Hostess---By Mrs. Frank Learned

Author of "The Etiquette of New York To-day."

THE art of being a good hostess is a subtle one. Grace and composure of manner, and certain necessary practical qualities help to make the ideal hostess. Not only does a good hostess possess the gift of making each individual guest feel at ease, but she remembers the tastes and habits of each; and, while planning for their amusement, she understands the secret of making them thoroughly comfortable.

To be a perfect hostess is an accomplishment which may be learned by experience. Those who are careless, thoughtless, selfish, vague or procrastinating cannot hope to win the reputation of being good hostesses. Although readiness of speech, graciousness of manner and charm of bearing do much toward the success of a hostess, those who may be lacking in these qualifications make up for them by having great consideration for their guests. By the exertions of a tactful hostess guests find themselves doing exactly what they prefer. Everything seems planned for their convenience and pleasure. Guests never find themselves bored, dull or worried while in the house of a considerate friend.

The English, in their great country houses, understand the receiving of their friends to perfection. They are the best hosts in the world. They are said to be "masters of the letting-alone system." While everything is offered for a guest's pleasure, there is no evidence that one is being over-entertained. Everything goes on with the utmost smoothness and with a delightful ease. The complete mastery of the situation is the result of long experience, where hospitality has been handed down through the centuries as part of the practice of life.

In our own country a hostess of experience—one who has a large country house with every appointment for comfort—finds it easier to invite a number of guests than a few, because they entertain each other.

If one is a novice in entertaining, it is wise to begin with one or two guests. The fact that one has moderate means and a very simply managed household should not prevent the inviting of friends for a visit. A cordial welcome to a country house in Summer means much in strengthening bonds of friendship. Leisure for true companionship is then more possible than at any other season, or in town, where conditions are artificial.

The custom is to invite a guest for a definite period. The exact dates should be named in the note of invitation. In this way misunderstandings are prevented. The hour for the train is mentioned and a timetable may be enclosed with the note. It is a mistake for a hostess to imagine it is not polite to name a definite time for a visit. She should state from Saturday to Monday, or the week-end, as the term is, or for a week, or ten days, as the case may be; but she must be explicit. A hostess who is vague, and asks a friend for "a few days," causes uncertainty as to what is meant. It is understood that a guest is expected to leave before luncheon at the close of the visit.

If other friends are expected, a hostess may mention their names in the note of invitation. If certain amusements are planned, it is sensible to give a hint about them. This enables a guest to decide what dresses to take for the visit.

Arrangements for meeting guests at the station and bringing them to the house should be made. Their luggage should be taken charge of and placed in their rooms. These attentions are occasionally overlooked by an indifferent hostess, and an unfavorable impression is made on an arriving guest.

A hostess is, of course, cordial in her greeting. Friends arriving from a distance are offered tea or some refreshment unless the hour for a meal is near. Women guests are shown to their rooms by the hostess with as little delay as possible. Men are shown to their rooms by a servant.

Before the arrival of a guest a good hostess sees that everything for convenience and comfort is in a guest's room. There should be plenty of towels, fresh water and new soap. Most persons have the habit of a daily bath, and a guest should have the use of a "tub" either in her room or the family bath room, if there is no separate bath room for the guest room. At the bedside should be a light stand with candle and matches. Even where there is the convenient electric light, everyone likes to have matches close at hand. On this stand a guest should find at night a pitcher of iced water and a glass. The dressing table may have a brush and comb, in case these are needed before luggage arrives, but as most people carry a small travelling bag containing toilet accessories, these things are not essential and should not be conspicuous on a toilet table. A clothes brush may be there and a pincushion is indispensable. A small work basket or a little silk bag, supplied with sewing materials, is a useful addition, in case a guest has forgotten needles, thread, scissors, thimble and bodkin. Fresh flowers in a vase on the dressing table offer a pleasant welcome.

A lounge for resting, with a dainty coverlet or fancy blanket, should be in a guest room. The writing table cannot be too well supplied. This will do more to make a guest feel at ease than many other preparations a hostess may make. There should be plenty of good note paper, fresh blotting paper, an inkstand of generous size, well filled, a penwiper, pens, postage stamps and a calendar. A waste paper basket is an important adjunct in a guest room, frequently forgotten by a hostess. A clock is a convenience, but its striking attachment should not be wound up. A few readable books and one or two new magazines add to a guest's pleasure.

Easy rules about breakfast are customary. If possible, a guest is offered the option of having a tray sent to her room or coming down to breakfast. When the men of the family take an early train it is often better for a hostess to send a tray upstairs than to oblige a guest to hurry down for the morning meal. Coffee or tea, rolls and butter, a cereal, an egg and fruit are sent up on a tray.

With the best intentions, some hostesses worry a guest by overentertaining. It destroys all pleasure to seem to have a guest on one's mind. When suggesting amusements it is sensible not to insist too much on carrying out one's own schemes. If a hostess is wise she will offer an alternative and give a guest the option of a choice of pleasures or occupations. A good hostess remembers that a guest likes to have some time in the day to be alone, to go to her room, to rest, read or write letters.

The daily diversions depend very much on the local advantages. Whatever is worth doing or seeing in the neighborhood is offered. Invitations to entertainments of a general nature may be secured by a hostess for her guests. Friends who may be congenial are asked to call, or are invited to a simple luncheon or an informal tea or to come in the evening for games or dancing.

Tennis, golf, motoring, driving bathing or boating may be daytime amusements. In the evening there may be cards, music, charades, story-telling or conversation. A good hostess is careful that persons who do not care to play cards should not be expected to do so. Everyone is not enthusiastic about "bridge," and it is unpleasant to be asked to play on a warm Summer evening. It goes without saying that card playing for money should not be allowed.

The hostess suggests the hour for retiring. Early hours are kept in quiet households.

It is not the custom to urge a guest to lengthen a visit. Regret is expressed that the time for departure has come and the hope that the visit may be repeated in the future.

A hostess should not be casual about the arrangements for conveying guests and luggage to the station, remembering that to miss a train may cause serious inconvenience.

FINDING The SECRET Of LIVING FOREVER

How Scientific Management of Your Body POSTPONES OLD AGE

By Dr. L. K. HIRSHBERG.

PROFESSOR Max Rubner, of Berlin, a famous physiologist of the Royal Prussian Institute of Germany, in a new explanation of decay and death, points out that the secret of eternal life is to to balance the outgo of work by the storage of energy and the intake of work-making material as to maintain their equilibrium.

Tnere is the ancient story of the boy's pocket knife. Although he had had three new handles for it, and seven new blades, he still maintained it was the same old knife. Professor Rubner's theory is something like this Or, take a sewing machine for instance. As soon as the belt or the treadle or the foot, or any part of it begins to wear out, repair it. Keep the sewing machine repaired; keep the broken parts replaced with new, and the machinee will never wear out.

Just so with Professor Rubner's theory. If we can but so balance our lives as to make up all the energy we lose, we will continue to be a perfect human machine.

Every living animal, declares the Professor, including man, has been given by nature an excellent capacity to manufacture the needed energy for work. The amount of energy that comes from a machine is fixed and measurable; so it is with the amount of energy and work that may come from any animal.

If the loss to the living body caused by exertion can always be met and equalled, or neutralized by the correct amount of mental and physical fuel, there will be no decay—and with no decay there can be no death.

If you allow for a difference in weight, the power to do work is about the same in an amoeba, a microbe, a toad, or an elephant. The horse produces a definite amount of work and heat for each pound in weight, and the length of a horse's natural life depends upon the speed with which it produces and consumes this energy. The slower a horse, a preacher, or an ant makes and uses up their energy, the longer they live.

Preachers, consulting physicians and school teachers live longer than newspaper writers, bartenders and busy practicing physicians, because the former are slow to exert themselves, quiet and lazy in their accumulation of energy, in contrast to the latter group, who are live wires, making and using up energy as rapidly as they can.

The life of a normal ox is composed of the generating of less heat and work energy than either that of the horse or the dog. The latter two, strange to say, yield about equal energies to the pound weight, while a cat is nearly twice as great a central station for making energy as either of them.

Man is the most favored of creation in this respect, according to the Berlin physiologists. He yields and consumes five times as much work as the horse, and this marvellous power explains the fact that the human race lives longer proportionately than any of the mammale.

If the laboratory physiologist and chemist has been able to restore and renew to the lower animals an amount of new energy far in excess of what they are accustomed to have, some one of these scientists can discover a method of constantly replenishing the decaying energy in the human race, and then there will be no such thing as old age and death.

Professor Rubner has just discovered a new fundamental, natural law which he hopes may ultimately point to just that triumph. This law is that living tissue can perform a definite, measurable quantity of work in direct proportion to the amount of nourishment it is able to consume.

The reason human life is not longer than it is at present, says Professor Rubner, is because all forms of excess or intemperance cause a rapid, abnormal squandering of the sum of your balanced energy. Even excessive eating, intemperance in water drinking or such necessary edibles as bread may bring you to a premature decay. Intemperance in dancing or in sleeping; in vegetable or meat eating, all are equally dangerous.

The wisest course for you to pursue to extend your span of life is to economize your energy, exert yourself efficiently, with a saving of every action, every idea, every muscular or nervous movement.

The reason that illness, accidents and over-exertion age the human tribe earlier than might otherwise be expected is due to the extra drain upon the stored-up reservoirs of energy. Similarly all dirty, unhealthful conditions of living call upon a premature use of living energy that would otherwise be saved for the rainy days of later years.

The plan, then, for everybody to follow, if you desire to increase the span of three-score years and ten, is to start in with the new scheme of scientific management of the bodily organs. The human machine is much the same in analogy to artificial machines. The real causes of old age, decay, degeneration and death are either a poor machine to begin with—defective parts from your ancestral inheritance—or gritty, thick, clogging oils and fallacious, destructive fuels, which gradually wear out by friction; waste products and plugging, all of the delicate joints, hinges and vital parts.

Perpetual motion is sought in the machine shop, as well as the living mechanism. In both places the secret seems to be to discover some scheme by which friction and clogging shall be eliminated. Similarly, it may be, the much ridiculed experiments upon perpetual motion may point finally to the discovery of a method so to reduce friction in the human machine that life on this globe will be doubled or greatly increased.

WAYS OF WASTING YOUR ENERGY.

A—Intemperance in eating and drinking. B—Dancing to excess. C—Too much sleep.

Where WOMEN Dress As MEN

IT would be difficult to tell when the women of Champery, a primitive mountain district of the Canton of Valais, in Switzerland, wore any other garb than man's attire. They have, in fact, worn trousers from time immemorial, and if wearing the trousers is a privilege, they have certainly earned it.

The women in this district do all the work. It may be that during a few months in the Summer some of the men will act as guides for the tourists who come to see and to climb the mountains, but other than that the men live in indolence.

These men are, in fact, noted for their laziness, nor are they to be so greatly blamed, it seems, since custom among them has been for generations and generations to sit idly by while their women do all the work.

The women go into the fields, and do all the hard work that is naturally required to eke out an existence in a mountainous farming district. These women pasture the cattle on the steep and dangerous Alpine slopes, they have all care of these cattle and sheep, shear the sheep, cut all the timber for firewood and for building purposes, till the soil, plant, cut the hay, harvest, and take all financial as well as manual charge of the farming.

And then, to top off this picture of female leadership and energy, should be told that it is not an unusual sight during the season of snow to see the wife coming home from the village or from lumbering, dragging her husband on a sled!

In view of the above, it is not surprising that the women of Champery should have adopted the masculine attire. Their dress is of the simplest kind—a jerkin of rough, dark blue material, with trousers to match, and a red handkerchief to protect the head.

Inasmuch as the wives and mothers of Champery perform the greater part of the toil usually deemed the duty of the stronger sex, it is not astonishing to learn that they affect certain masculine habits, the chief of which is the pipe. The Champery woman puffs away with considerable enjoyment at a short briar as she proceeds with her labors.

Some MISTAKES INVENTORS Should AVOID

SOME extremely good advice to inventors of all sorts is handed out by the Block Signal and Train Control Board of the Interstate Commerce Commission. While it was aimed particularly at such inventors as work for improvements connected with railroading, it fits almost any inventor.

According to this Board too many inventors connect invention with financiering. The Board explains that to invent does not always mean to get rich, and that it is not the inventor who is seeking solely to make his millions that succeed, but the inventor who really seeks to benefit mankind.

A successful invention is not a pastime, but an evolution from long and painstaking experience and observation, careful analysis and a strict disregard of the nonessentials and of repeated failures, also an unfailing persistence born of optimism, the courage of conviction, and, above all, hard common sense.

The successful inventor is never satisfied with his first, or even his last device; he is always looking for defects, not for merits, because the merits are always easy to see while the defects are generally hidden

The inventor should remember there are two sides to every question of mechanics, just as to every other question. No device is so bad but it has its good points and should be studied to learn these good points, and none are so good but what they might be improved, and so should be constantly worked over in an effort to create these improvements.

Do not expect to receive something for nothing. The fallacy prevails among many inventors that this is a royal road to wealth where one little idea will land the inventor in a mansion on the sunny side of Easy Street for a life residence, but this is all wrong—the successful inventor probably works harder than the day laborer. The inventor who expects this will find that he gets just what he put into it—nothing if he does not work hard; plenty if he studies and seeks constantly to improve his work.

No mechanical system, declares this Board, can be operated under 100 per cent efficiency. Even under the most favorable circumstances this will never happen, and constant and practical use of most inventions are never under the most favorable circumstances. One great mistake of inventors is accepting "posibility" for "practicability." So many things are really possible, but so few have been made actually practical. Possibilities never succeed and practicability does not always succeed.

Sometimes inventors wonder why their methods are not adopted when they do not realize that perhaps millions of dollars are invested in some enterprise that would be a loss if the system was overthrown entirely in order to adopt the new invention.

Inventors see perfection in some of their devices sometimes solely because they are capable themselves and cannot see how any man could fail to operate their invention, but they fail to take into consideration the fact that man is not infallible; that so long as it is possible to mishandle or wrongfully manipulate any device just so long is there a chance, and a big one, that man will slip up occasionally and do this.

Unless a man is unusually well qualified for such work, and can take all these things into consideration, warns this Board, he should hesitate a long while before giving up his calling and seeking to make a fortune as an inventor.

A PRETTY GROUP OF UP-TO-DATE MODELS, CHARMING IN THEIR SIMLICITY.—10 CENTS EACH.

NO. 9666.—A CHARMING LITTLE FROCK FOR MOTHER'S GIRL.

DOTTED challie, with lace insertion, is here shown. The model is also suitable for lawn, dimity, chambray, gingham, mull, batiste, crepe or voile.

The pattern is cut in four sizes—4, 6, 8 and 10 years. It requires 3½ yards of 36-inch material for the 8-year size.

NO. 9668.—COSTUME FOR MISSES AND SMALL WOMEN.

Draped effects are immensely popular at present, and for slim, girlish figures are ideal. The design shown here has a waist cut with crossed fronts (the right draping over the left), and the skirt is caught up in a group of plaits at knee height in front.

The drooping cap forming shoulder seams meet the sleeve in deep curves, forming a point at the shoulder seam. The back of skirt, which is cut with high waist line, is finished with a side tuck. The model will develop well in any of this season's dress materials.

The pattern is cut in four sizes—14, 16, 17 and 18 years. It requires 5⅞ yards of 44-inch material for an 18-year size.

NO. 9663.—A NEW FROCK FOR MOTHER'S GIRL.

Figured challie in blue and white, with white silk for trimming, was used to develop this pretty dress. The waist is cut to blouse over the belt. The skirt is gored, with tuck plaits at the seams.

The design may also be used for development in gingham, chambray, lawn or percale, linen or linene.

The pattern is cut in four sizes—6, 8, 10 and 12 years. It requires 4¾ yards of 36-inch material for a 10-year size.

NO. 9660.—LADY'S HOUSE DRESS

Chambray, gingham, lawn, percale or galatea are most serviceable for this style, but it will develop equally well in voile, linen, silk or linene, and may then serve as an afternoon or home dress.

The pattern is cut in six sizes—32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. It requires 5 yards of 44-inch material for a 36-inch size.

To obtain any of these desirable models, fill in the accompanying coupon and mail, with 10 cents for each pattern in silver or stamps, to SUNDAY PATTERNS, Post Office Box 260, New York City.

X Ray Hats

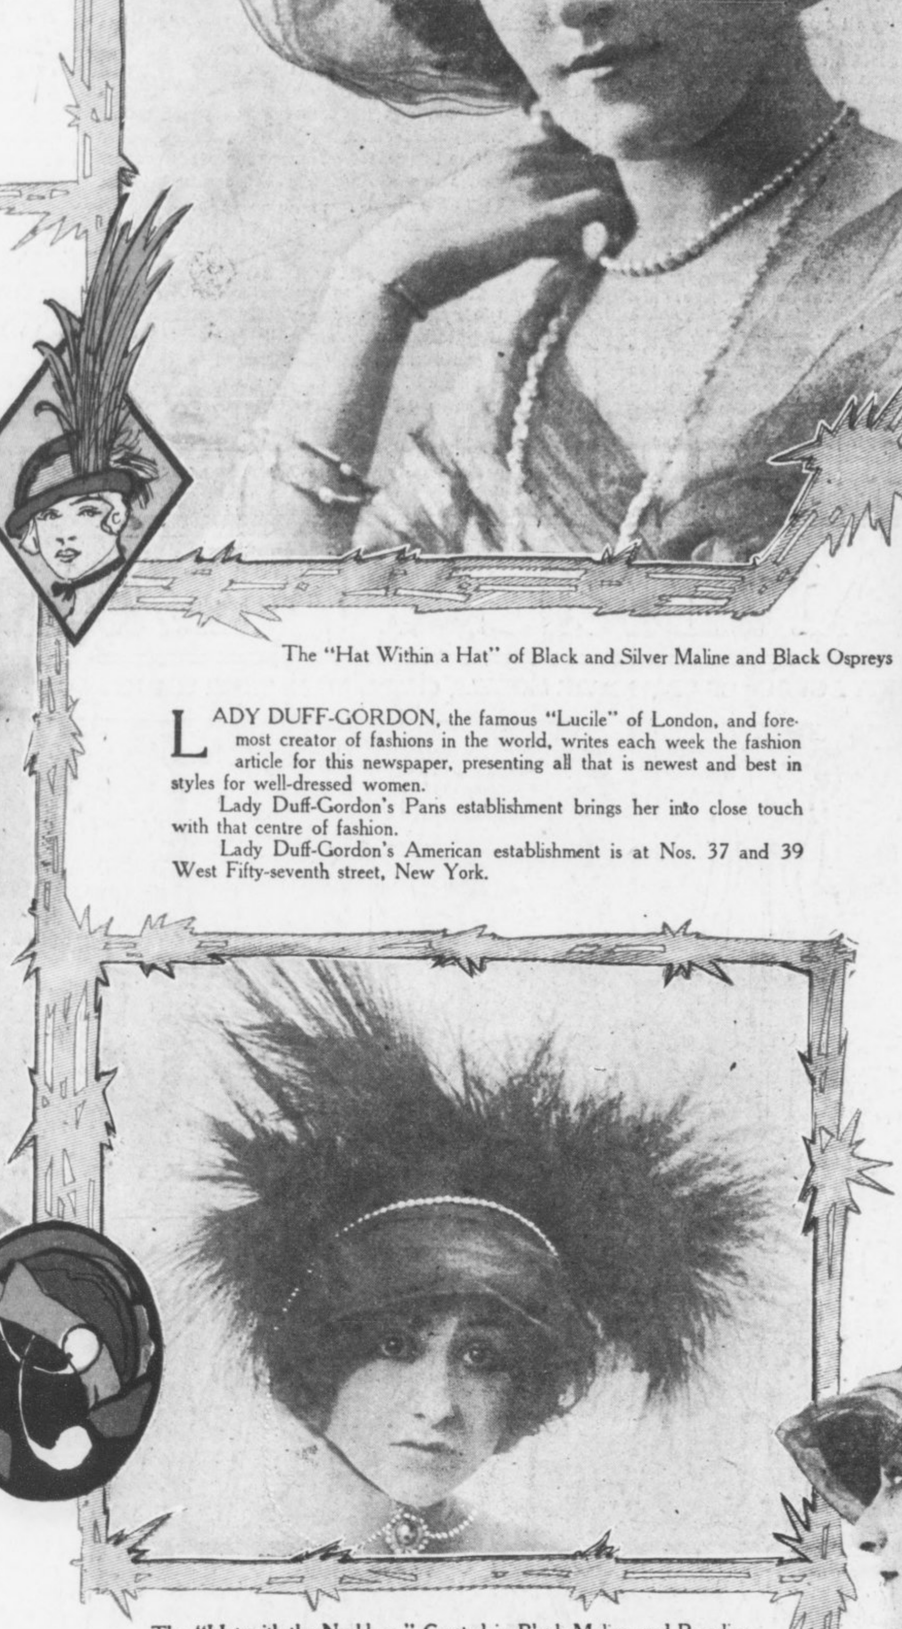
Hats You Can See Through—Hats So Frail That a Harsh Word Would Crush Them—the Latest Paris Craze.

Evening Hat with the "Look-Through" Brim That Has Captivated Paris.

The "Hat Within a Hat" of Black and Silver Maline and Black Ospreys

Stunning Afternoon Hat of Black Satin and Rose Maline, with Black Ospreys at the Back

The "Crownless" Hat of Cerise Maline and Black Paradise.



The "Hat-with-the-Necklace," Created in Black Maline and Paradise.

By Lady Duff-Gordon.

AND what are the latest hats? What is Paris favoring just at this moment? A wisp of tulle and all the paradise feathers you can carry! The Look-Through, or X Ray, hats are the very latest thing, and I am sending you several of those that I consider the best. In one of these you will immediately notice, I am sure, not only the wonderful display of paradise, but the very odd and original manner in which the pretty wearer has arranged her pearls.

Of course you have not forgotten my warning of a few weeks ago that pearls are the only jewels a woman can wear in the daytime, and that so long as a woman wears a pearl necklace she is well dressed, but she must not wear them in the conventional manner. No matter how she wears them, she must never put them around her neck in the way they are supposed to be. This is emphatic.

This little beauty has heeded my words, and has her pearls wound round her hat and caught up under her chin in a most piquant fashion.

The hat itself is merely a turban of tulle built on a wire frame, and of course is perfectly transparent. The tulle and the paradise are black.

Some of the Look-Through hats have no crowns. The top of the head takes the place of a tulle crown, and when this is well dressed the effect is very good indeed.

One of the most curious hats that I have seen for a long time is the second model. It is a hat within a hat. But it is all of tulle. The inner hat is of silvery tulle or maline, and the outer hat is a series of scant frills of black maline. The ospreys at the back are black. In this case the debutante wearer has her pearl necklace arranged in the conventional manner, because she is a debutante.

One of the hats shown is of the crownless kind. The wide or rather deep brim is merely fold on fold of the tulle, edged at top and bottom with a frill of the same. This hat is created in a brilliant cerise. The broad paradise is black. Really it is absolutely necessary this year that these tulle hats have some black in their composition. This is a very girlish model, and the fichu worn adds to the girlish effect.

I particularly like the model with the transparent brim, that is nothing more nor less than a wide frill or ruffle of black maline. The crown in this case is light blue satin, for this is in reality a dress hat. There is nothing lovelier nor more becoming for the face than these frills of the maline that finish nine out of ten hats this season.

A distinctly different but a very smart hat is the model with the foundation for the brim of fine straw. The crown is rose satin, the brim is black and the frills of the maline are rose colored. Of course the ospreys are black. While this hat is one of my favorites, I still find it difficult to say which of these five I like the best.

But enough of hats. There are always so many other things to write about. Really I never have space enough to tell you all I want.

Just lately I have become filled with the thought that fashion is really completely inconsequent, not to say unreasonable, in some of her schemes. But then, of course, she would not be feminine or fascinating either if her moods and her modes were always well regulated and reasonable.

And so I, for one, am not in the least inclined to grumble at her on this account; only I can't help being somewhat amused—can you?—at the trouble she is taking just now to provide dainty and decorative coverings for necks, which it has been her chief object in life to free from covering and bondage of any and all kinds! Of course, however, the new neck ruffle of tulle or feathers or both combined cannot, as being immediately detachable and adjustable, come under the same heading and disadvantage as the tight-fitting neckband. But, all the same, it has something of the same unbecoming effect, if its wearer be at all inclined to fulness of face—or neck—and so I would warn you to exercise a certain amount of discretion in its adoption.

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London, and foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes each week the fashion article for this newspaper, presenting all that is newest and best in styles for well-dressed women.

Lady Duff-Gordon's Paris establishment brings her into close touch with that centre of fashion.

BRYAN OUGHT TO LIVE ON HIS PAY OR QUIT, SAY SENATORS

Explanation of Secretary of State More Amazing Than His Acts, Declares Bristow, Who Introduced Resolution to Investigate

Wilson's Premier Capitalizing His Position, Asserts Representative Willis—Much Work To Be Done in His Department.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The consensus of opinion among public and private persons in the National Capital is that if Secretary Bryan can not live on his salary of $12,000 a year he ought to resign and continue his lecture tours as a private individual.

Mr. Bryan to-day gave evidence of the fact that the country-wide criticism had got under his skin. That he was irritated and impatient and realized the "bad break" he has made was apparent to his subordinates throughout the day. Somewhat petulantly he declared that the press of the country might have assumed that "my lecture engagements are subject to cancellation."

Publicly, Mr. Bryan announced to the country that he could not live on a salary about which his fellow Cabinet members have not complained, and in a second statement, given out authoritatively, complained that criticism was groundless.

Evades Paper's Questions.

The American to-day endeavored to obtain from Mr. Bryan more in detail the reasons that actuated him to arrange to leave his post of duty at a time when very grave matters pertaining to our relations with foreign powers were pending. He declined to answer certain questions and refused to discuss the subject of his official pronunciamento.

Mr. Bryan was asked these questions by The American:

"If you feel your duty is to your private pocketbook rather than to the 'great common people' to whom you have preached simplicity for the last seventeen years, why do you not resign and devote your entire time to the lecture platform and literary pursuits?

"If you believe the people have called you to the great office you can fill so ably, do you not believe that it is your duty as an American and a patriot to sacrifice your personal interests for the interests of your country? The more so from the fact that you admit you have saved about $200,000, which is considerably more than a competence when invested shrewdly?

"You say that you entered one campaign from the Chautauqua platform. Is it not a fact that you look upon the present and future engagements as the best opportunity to get in direct touch with the people, who, you contend, will elect the next President by direct vote?"

Bryan Leaves to Lecture.

No answer was returned to the questions. Later in the day he left Washington to keep an engagement to lecture.

Senator Bristow, author of the resolution calling upon the President for information as to what salary ought to be paid to enable Mr. Bryan to stay in Washington and attend to his public duties, to-day came back with a rejoinder to Mr. Bryan's explanation of last night.

"Secrttary Bryan's second statement has astounded me even more than his first one," said Mr. Bristow. "That the present Secretary of State should have such a sordid view of the Governmtnt service is amazing.

"Secretary Bryan says he has a right to use his vacation for lecturing if he sees fit. But he is to be away on one tour of six weeks, and there is no telling where his vacation will end.

Needed at His Post.

"Besides, since he has been Secretary of State he has been in Washington only about one-half the time so far. If ever there was a time when the Secretary of State was needed on the job it is now, when so many important questions are up for consideration. To cause the people to pay money to hear the Secretary of State, the highest officer in the Cabinet, deliver addresses is all

Girl Traps a Thief In Telephone Booth

Sets Shoulder Against Door and Holds Man Until Cries Bring Her Aid.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Holding a thief trapped in a telephone booth, Miss Florence Rosenthal, cashier in Edward Feuhrer's drug store at No. 53 Second avenue, finally succeeded in delivering him to the police yesterday.

The captive, who said he was Alexander Moskowitz, 17 years old, was so long "telephoning" that Miss Rosenthal went to the booth to see if he was dead or alive. She saw him opening the money box with a screwdriver, she says. Screaming for her employer, she set her shoulder against the door, and the youth could not force it open. Moskowitz was held for trial.

Burleson Eats but Two Meals Each Day

Postmaster General Believes in and Practices "Early to Bed, Early to Rise" Theory.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Postmaster General Burleson believes thoroughly in the old adage, "Early to bed and early to rise makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise." He practices this theory himself and in addition supplements it by a two-meal-a-day program.

His daily routine is as follows:

"I arise at 5 in the morning.

"Read the papers until 6.

"Breakfast.

"Go over papers and reports until 9.

"Work at the Postoffice Department until 5 in the afternoon without any lunch or lunch hour.

"Dinner at 6 to 7 o'clock.

"Eight o'clock—go to bed."

"Cooling Period" to Halt Divorce Evil

Pastor Suggests That Three Months Elapse Between Final Hearing and Decision of Court.

ATLANTIC CITY, July 19.—Speaking on "The Modern Problem of Marriage and Divorce," before the Central Conference of American Rabbis here to-day, the Rev. L. Leonard Levy, of Pittsburg, advocated a "cooling" period of three months from the time of the final hearing until the decision is announced as the solution of the problem of minimizing the divorce evil. "This cooling period," said the speaker, "would cover a time during which neither of the parties at interest could marry."

Even Take Fizz Out Of City's Soda Water

Members of Cincinnati Board of Health to Censor All Soft Drinks Sold.

CINCINNATI, July 19.—The "fizz and bubble" in soda water and ginger ale manufactured in this city is to be no more, if the Board of Health has its way about the matter, and it seems likely at this time that its contention will hold good. The board has asked the Council to pass an ordinance limiting the amount of alcohol to one-half of 1 per cent in any one drink of this kind. If the resolution is passed and made a law no dealer will be allowed to make soft drinks without first getting a permit.

Girl Fan Loses Teeth But Stays Out Game

Foul Tip Injures Fair Baseball Enthusiast, but Her Ardor Is Not Diminished.

ZANESVILLE, OHIO, July 19.—Miss Cora Bauer, of this city, was struck in the face by a foul tip while watching a ball game between the Akron and Zanesville teams here. Her nose was split open, three teeth knocked out and she may be disfigured for life. Nevertheless, after being treated by a physician, she decided to stay out the game.

Marries His Aunt, 12 Years His Senior

Young Actor Takes as Bride the Recently Divorced Wife of His Uncle.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Earl Oscar Schenck, 24 years old, an actor, of No. 600 West 138th street, was married in the City Hall yesterday to his aunt, Marion Carr Schenck, twelve years his senior.

The bride of yesterday was married in April, 1899, to Oscar A. Schenck, the uncle of her present husband, who on January 17 of this year divorced her in Columbus, Ohio, "for gross neglect of duty."

ONLY AMERICAN KING YEARNS TO QUIT HIS THRONE

All of Former Broker's Thirty Wives Want English Gowns. Jealousy Spreads.

JOB IS NOT A HAPPY ONE

NewYorker Who Won South Sea Kingdom With a Phonograph Faces Petticoat Revolt.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Archibald C. Everett, the only American King, practically has made up his mind to renounce his throne. He is King of the Island of Arorae, one of the Gilbert group of South Sea Islands. Until 1909 he was a New York curb broker. The insistence of his many wives for English gowns and his loneliness have led to the determination to give up his kingly honors. He tells of his intentions in a letter just received by a friend in this city.

The career of Everett has been unusual. In 1909, when he was in business in this city, he was thought to be well to do. He met reverses, however, in Wall Street, and in the latter part of 1909 disappeared, without leaving a word of farewell. Nothing was heard from him until in 1911, in a remarkable letter, he told of being made the King of Arorae, in the South Sea Islands. He had landed, he said, on one of the small islands, and had gone from there to other islands of the Gilbert group. Finally he reached Arorae. It was a phonograph which he had in his possession that eventually won for him his throne. The King at that time of the island took a great fancy to the phonograph.

Phonograph Wins Kingdom.

By the hour Everett, according to his own account, entertained the monarch, constantly growing in his graces. Finally the old King adopted Everett, and when he died Everett succeeded to the throne. According to the custom of the island, Everett took a good many wives.

Everett took a very lively interest in the affairs of the island. He increased its business with traders. The principal product of the island is copra, or dried cocoanut meat. The letter, in part, reads:

"At the present time the King's job is about the last thing to be desired, and do not be surprised if I walk in on you some day in the near future. I am about tired of the job.

"For some time past conditions here have steadily become worse. It started when my wives, of whom there are about 30, insisted on wearing English dresses. A trader who stopped here presented one of the natives with three English gowns in exchange for some copra. The native presented them to the King, and I in turn gave them to three of my wives. The natives have never worn any clothes to speak of. Imagine my surprise, then, when the three dresses became the center of a regular war among my wives.

"The three victorious wives managed to get them on somehow, and that settled it. Every one of them set up a kick for a dress, and they worried the life out of me. I was forced to get the gowns. The first trader that stopped at the island from Australia was commissioned to bring them back on the next trip, and in due course of time they arrived.

Jealousy Over English Gowns.

"The dresses were of all colors and sizes. Most of the people here are about the same stature, few being over four feet six or seven. Some of the dresses were too small, others too large, but they created a sensation. Dressed in those creations, with bare brown feet stepping proudly, my wives paraded up and down the island, causing every woman in the kingdom, young and old, to grow jealous.

"So far, half of the female population have been given the gowns and the other half are waiting eagerly. The worst part of it all is that the men are as enthusiastic over this new style of dress as the women, and my objections have not added to my popularity whatever. I am daily expecting the men to demand suits of flannel and silk shirts.

Affairs on a Business Basis.

"I have not done so badly here financially. I put the business of the island on a business basis soon after becoming King, and things have flourished.

"I don't know how the people here will take my departure. They may even try to prevent it, and I have been considering the best method to leave. I could probably get aboard one of the trading ships and get to Australia, after which it would be easy, of course, to get back to the United States."

Congregation Built Up by Band Concerts

Ohio Pastor With Novel Methods Now Claims Biggest Sunday School in World.

CANTON, OHIO, July 19.—With the attraction of a band concert in the church roof garden and a double orchestra concert in the church auditorium, the Rev. P. H. Welshimer, of Canton's First Christian Church, has built up what he claims is the biggest Sunday school in the world within five years.

The average attendance in this hot month of July is 3,251. The record attendance is 4,714. Several Sundays back 38 babies were checked in the "babies' check room" of the $90,000 church. The men's class of 250 had to hold their session in the street while the teacher explained the lesson from the tonneau of an automobile.

Congress to Lose Costly Stationery

Government Printer Is Ordered to Stop Use of Costly Material for Lawmakers.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Members of Congress will draw no more costly embossed stationery at the expense of the Government. Hereafter they will get along with plain, every-day printed letterheads and envelopes..

The Joint Committee on Printing discovered that the Government Printing Office last year turned out 11,000,000 embossed pieces of stationery at an extra cost of $30,000. An order has been issued to the Government Printer to stop this extravagance.

On the Senate side of Congress this economy reform is resented, but it goes just the same. If Senators want stationery de luxe they must foot the bills out of their private purse.

3 Drowned Trying To Avoid Wet Feet

Women Stand Up In Leaky Boat, Capsizing Craft In View of Hundreds.

NORRISTOWN, PA., July 19.—Caught in a storm while boating on the Schuylkill River, three women, all church workers, were drowned. They are:

Miss Anna Mary Livergood, Miss Emma J. Rex and Miss Helen Green, all of Norristown.

Miss Margaret Green, a sister of Miss Helen Green, clung to the overturned boat and was saved.

The women were within a quarter of a mile of the boat landing when the wind struck them.

The boat began to leak badly. To keep their feet and clothing dry the four girls stood on the seats. The next instant the boat turned over.

Two hundred persons on a boat returning from a park saw the accident.

Blue Cauliflower Is Raised in California

Latest Horticultural Product Is Hybrid of Ordinary Cauliflower and Purple Pickling Cabbage.

OAKLAND, July 19.—Blue cauliflower, the latest novelty in things horticultural, was introduced to the public to-day by Hugo Lilienthal, instructor in the University of California. The new plant is a hybridization of the ordinary cauliflower and the purple "pickling cabbage," declared by the experts to be a "first cousin to the cauliflower." The new vegetable is bright blue in color and stronger than the ordinary cauliflower in flavor.

Only a Bathing Suit Left Friend by Thief

Youth Is Marooned in Atlantic City When Companion Disappears With Money and Clothes.

ATLANTIC CITY, July 19.—Arthur Leonard, a New York youth, spent the entire day on the beach in his bathing suit to-day, following the disappearence of his chum, whose name he refuses to reveal, with four suits of his clothing and all his money.

Leonard wired his relatives in New York State telling them of his predicament. They came here to-night with clothing and rescued him.

Billie Burke Wires She Is Recovering

Actress Was Threatened With Appendicitis, but Did Not Have to Undergo Operation.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Billie Burke, telegraphing the London bureau of The American to-day from Carlsbad in reply to an inquiry concerning her health, says:

"Thanks awfully. Was threatened with appendicitis, but have not had to undergo operation. Recovering nicely.

"BILLIE BURKE."

LOBBY INQUIRY STIRS NATION

Mulhall Story Leaves U. S. Aghast

Power of Interests Vividly Revealed

MARTIN W. MULHALL, former lobbyist of National Association of Manufacturers, whose revelations of corruption startled nation.

Names of Wilson, Taft, Senators and Congressmen Are Dragged Into the Testimony, Showing Corporations Have Set No Limit in Corruption.

STARTLING FACTS REVEALED IN U.S. SENATE INVESTIGATION OF CONGRESSIONAL LOBBY

National Association of Manufacturers raised a slush fund of $500,000 to $700,000 a year to oppose objectionable legislation.

Place in Taft Cabinet pledged to manufacturers by Vorys, Taft manager.

Charges that the big manufacturers had the ears of Taft, Sherman and Cannon.

List of Congressmen in pay of the National Manufacturers' Association disclosed. Also, a list of the "unpurchasable," whom the association hated, and tried to defeat.

Fights made by National Manufacturers' Association on progressive Congressmen and Senators, often successful.

More than 400 letter tell of plans of association to become sinister factor in controlling the wheels of government.

Attempts made to foment strife among labor organizations, and to corrupt labor leaders, even Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison.

Agreement by Woodrow Wilson with Gompers and Morrison that he support Hughes for Senate.

Powers of big business fought Hughes because he was friendly to labor.

Tom Johnson, Senator McComas of Maryland, and others were political victims of the association's vengeance.

Gigantic corruption in Wall Street laid bare in testimony of David Lamar.

Forgery on Union Pacific's books covering item of $82,000,000 charged.

Senate resolutions hawked about Wall street for sale to highest bidder.

The nation to-day stands aghast at the sensational revelations which have come as the result of investigations by the Overman Committee of the United States Senate into the work of lobbies at the National Capital.

It has heard how big business combines and Wall Street operators have made and unmade men in public life, influenced legislation, dominated public opinion, all the time secret and vigilant.

It has learned how big business has become one of the most powerful factors in the American civilization, striking in the dark against men who opposed it.

It has heard the names of the men highest in public life, President Wilson, former President Taft, Senators, Congressmen, Cabinet members, dragged into the testimony, and has learned that certain predatory interests have set no limits in their attempt to corrupt public servants.

The bulk of the startling testimony came from Martin M. Mulhall, for years the servant of the National Association of Manufacturers, and the chief lobbyist of that organization at Washington, and from David Lamar, an operator in stocks, who is known as "The Wolf of Wall Street."

Wilson Starts Inquiry.

The investigation began more than a month ago when President Wilson declared that a lobby, "insidious and industrious" in nature, had long dominated tariff legislation. The announcement did not come unexpectedly, however, and there were many Senators and Congressmen to endorse the Chief Executive. The Senate began immediately its investigation of the charges, empowering a committee, headed by Senator Overman, to conduct the inquiry.

Relatively pointless testimony from men interested in the sugar industry came first, revealing the fact that sugar lobbies were the most industrious. Lobbyists from Hawaii, the Philippines and Louisiana defended their actions by a protest against free sugar. Former Governor Carter of Hawaii declared that the elimination of the duty on sugar would make the Hawaiian Islands merely military posts, destroying their commercial prestige. Frank C. Lowry, of the "free sugar lobby," admitted in the testimony that $25,000 had been spent in four years by the Federal Sugar Refining Company in lobbying operations.

Then came the Mulhall testimony.

Old Age Attributed To Her False Teeth

Woman, Age 99, Declares She Has Used Set 59 Years—Always Chews Well.

WILKESBARRE, PA., July 19.—At the age of 99, Mrs. Levina Derr, of Hudson, declares that her long life is due solely to the fact that she bought a set of good store teeth fifty years ago.

Mrs. Derr is still active. Five generations of her family are living, and she declares she is as young as any of them.

"I was blessed with good teeth," she said, "and I always made it a point to chew my food well. A good stomach is the foundation of good health, and the stomach can not be good unless the teeth are good."

300 "HELLO GIRLS" ASK BOSS TO BE BEST MAN

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, July 19.—The Postmaster General is bewildered over the result of the recent permission which he granted to telephone girls to get married. Three hundred of these girls promptly availed themselves of the chance and every couple asked the Postmaster General to act as best man.

Umbrellas for Farm Hands Is Inducement

Planter Advertises That He Will Supply Them With Sulkies, Sunshades and Ice Cream.

FINDLAY, OHIO, July 19.—There are other communities in this country that are suffering for a lack of farm hands besides Kansas. It is up to H. B. Clark, a farmer in the western part of Hancock County, to make good, else be prosecuted for false advertising, as provided by the new newspaper laws.

In a morning paper Mr. Clark is advertising for farm hands to plow corn. He says he will provide them with riding cultivator, a large sun umbrella for each, ice water to drink and all the ice cream each applicant can eat every other day, with $2.50 a day wages.

GREAT BRITAIN IS AFTER LATEST GERMAN AIR CRAFT

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, July 19.—Great Britain, it is stated, is negotiating for an Unger airship, which is larger, faster and more rigid than any others yet designed, including the Zeppelins.

'Oh Fudge' Strongest Language Permitted

Kansas City Starts Crusade Against Public Swearing—Police Rebuke Violators.

KANSAS CITY, July 19.—Anything stronger than "Oh, fudge!" must not be heard on the streets of Kansas City hereafter. All the ministers of the city and all the members of their churches have started an anti-swearing crusade, and part of the work is to ask persons who are overheard to swear to consider the vulgarity of it and cease the practice.

The Police Department and the street railway company have agreed to join in the crusade, so that hereafter it is part of the policeman's duty to stop swearing as well as breaches of the peace.

Miss Elliott Returns To Stage To Be Happy

Will Play Potiphar's Wife in Sir Herbert Tree's "Joseph and His Brethren."

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Maxine Elliott, yielding to Sir Herbert Tree's persuasion, will return to the stage September 2 in a great production of Louis N. Parker's play, "Joseph and His Brethren." She will play Potiphar's wife.

Miss Elliott gives as the chief reason for her reappearance that every one is happier when occupied. She is now living in her beautiful house at Bushey, just outside London.

STORY OF MULHALL WILL EXTEND U. S. LOBBY INQUIRY

Mulhall represented the National Association of Manufacturers in Washington. The association has a membership of 225 organizations, among them the most influential of the country, and 4,000 individuals, who control billions of capital.

The burden of his statements were that the association had for years promoted tariff, labor, and general business legislation favorable to itself, had maintained a lobby staff of seventeen, including himself, and former Presidents VanCleave and Kirby, of the association, at the capital to defeat hostile legislation, and it was always seeking and often obtaining control of the House and Senate Committee on Labor and Judiciary.

Created Tariff Commission.

He said that the association's efforts were responsible for the creation of the Tariff Commission under President Taft, and said that nine former Congressmen and J. H. McMichael, chief of pages in the House, had obtained money for services rendered.

More sensational still were the declarations that former President Taft, former Vice President Sherman, and former Speaker Cannon, besides many Congressmen and Senators were among those whom the association could affect by appeals to sentiment or other interests. He told of an unsuccessful attempt to bribe Samuel Gompers, the labor leader, and of successful work among petty labor leaders.

Mulhall told of his own great ingratitude, how he obtained a Federal position through the influence of Senator McComas of Maryland, and at the same time entered the employ of the National Association of Manufacturers, helping to defeat his patron because McComas had been doomed for his opposition to the association.

McComas, it seems, was not the only victim. Tom L. Johnson had been defeated for Mayor of Cleveland, said Mulhall, for his opposition to the association, and William E. Hughes was opposed by the business combine for Senator from New Jersey because he was the advocate of many labor bills. It was in this connection that Wilson, when Governor of New Jersey, had agreed with Gompers and Morrison, the labor leaders, to support Hughes, and had stumped the State in his favor.

Spies Kept in Field.

The work of the association against the eight-hour law, its enmity to most legislation that was favorable to labor, how he kept in occasional communication with former Vice President Sherman, how spies were kept in the field to corrupt minor labor leaders, and to knife opponents, were other sensational bits of the Mulhall testimony.

George Pope, president of the association, and other officials of the organization, have made statements declaring that Mulhall is not to be believed, and that most of the statements were inspired by the fact that Mulhall was discharged by the association. From many persons and places have come statements denouncing Mulhall as a man of reprehensible character, lessening thus the substantiability of many of the charges. But in many instances the declarations he made seemed to be assured of reliability by documents that are substantial.

Interesting is his list of Congressmen whom he said had received pay from the association. He named in this connection J. E. Watson, Republican, of Indiana, the House "whip" of the last administration; J. T. McDermott, Democrat, of Illinois; J. J. Jenkins, Republican, Wisconsin; Kittredge Haskins, Republican, Vermont; C. E. Littlefield, Republican, Maine; H. M. Bannon, Republican, Ohio; H. M. Coudry, Republican, Missouri; J. J. Gardner, Republican, New Jersey; R. B. Cole, Republican, Ohio, and J. H. McMichael, chief of pages.

On the other hand, he named a number of Congressmen who had consistently fought the association's interests, and whom he frankly called "unpurchasable." They are: Speaker Clark, Burnett of Alabama, Maynard, Virginia; Cooper, Wisconsin; Nichols, Pennsylvania; Parson, New York; Green, Massachusetts; Haugen, Iowa; Wilson, Pennsylvania; McComas, Maryland; Pearre, Maryland; Hughes, New Jersey; Kelliher, Massachusetts; Connolly, Massachusetts, and the labor leaders, Gompers, John Mitchell and Secretary Morrison, of the Federation of Labor. William Barnes, the New York boss, he said, was his friend, and could always be depended on to "take care of bills."

Revelations of Lamar.

On the heels of the Mulhall revelations came those from David Lamar, the smiling, cynical "Wolf of Wall Street." Lamar it was who told of having sent Edward Lauterbach, his attorney, to peddle around Wall Street a resolution calling for an investigation of the Steel Trust by the Senate.

J. P. Morgan was one of the men whom Lauterbach visited on this errand. He told how he had impersonated Congressmen Palmer and Riordan in telephone conversations with Lewis Cass Ledyard and Paul D. Cravath, corporation attorneys, and Robert S. Lovett, the railroad president, feigning knowledge of the intentions of the dominant party. Further, he declared that he had represented himself as fresh from the councils of Speaker Clark and other leaders when he visited Wall Street operators for concessions.

Lamar's most remarkable disclosure was his statement that the Union Pacific Railroad's books had been forged in 1901 to cover an item of $82,000,000, whereby the fortunes of E. H. Harriman, Kuhn, Loeb and Company, and others were built.

Testimonials Discredited.

Discredit has been cast upon Lamar's testimony as on Mulhall's, as coming from a man lacking in scruples. Paul D. Cravath, attorney for the Union Pacific, gave out a statement that the testimony regarding the gigantic forgery was part of a bear campaign against the company.

The Senate investigation will be conducted in detail, and it is likely, to judge from the announced intentions of the committee members, that every member of the Senate and of the House, every public official whose name has been dragged into the affair, and every one in anyway connected with the situation will be called in as witnesses. Appearances seem to indicate that the hearing will last far into the summer.

Mulhall was on the stand the greater part of last week explaining a batch of correspondence which had passed between him and political and labor leaders throughout the United States. The correspondence, according to evidence which has been revealed, he has sought to sell to magazines and newspapers several times, but in vain. Nonchalantly, the ex-lobbyist has pointed out letter after letter from prominent men, talking of alleged significant deals almost carelessly.

"This is a letter from Senator Foraker," he said, indicating one. "It was asking me to see a labor man about his chances for re-election to the Senate. I think he was considering the Presidency at the time."

Secrets of big politics are being bared daily during the investigation. Details of how spies worked among the labor men, and of the secret methods of big business have been explained by Mulhall at more than one point in his testimony.

In defense of his own lobbying, Mulhall made statements that a labor lobby existed, naming Samuel Gompers. As a result, Gompers and J. P. Bird, general manager of the National Association of Manufacturers, will be brought before the committee to explain their activities in the cause of labor and capital, respectively.

Inez Milholland's Wedding Blow to Suffragists

Her Romance May Annul Marriage to the Cause

Beautiful Leader of Votes for Women Won After Courtship on Two Continents.

Mrs. Eugen Boissevain, who was Miss Inez Milholland, famous suffragist beauty and orator, before her marriage to wealthy Dutchman last week.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Suffrage leaders of the United States are today bowed in spirit. They can think of their recent victory in Illinois without smiling. They read of success of women jurors and policemen with no show of ecstasy. Their minds are troubled. They seek to know whether Mrs. Eugen Boissevain will be as potent a personality for the cause as was Inez Milholland before she suddenly decided to take unto herself a husband in the form of the wealthy Dutchman she wedded Tuesday in London.

For Inez Milholland has been no small force in the suffrage movement in the United States. She graduated from Vassar just about the time when the votes for women idea traveled across the seas from England, and she has been right on the firing line in the battle for the ballot ever since.

Beauty of Suffrage Ranks.

Miss Milholland, beg pardon, Mrs. Boissevain, has ever been in the specially mentioned class in every important suffrage movement. She has been the American Christobal Pankhurst, only more so, though it has not been recorded that she has smashed anything, or has had to dodge extradition treaties to keep from the painful necessity of going on a hunger strike.

Even before she graduated from Vassar, Miss Milholland was known to fame. Her remarkable beauty, her mentality and personal magnetism made her a leader in this great girls' college. She was the champion all around athlete and held a world's record for putting the shot.

After leaving Vassar, she went in for the law and the pursuit of the ballot. Her beauty and powers of oratory made her a leader quickly. Her pictures soon became almost as familiar a feature of newspaper front pages as the physiognomy of Colonel Roosevelt.

During the strike of the garment workers in New York, several years ago, Miss Milholland volunteered for picket duty and it was her oratory that kept the girls stubbornly on the strike until they partially won their demands.

In the first big suffrage parade in New York she was a battalion leader and was a striking figure as she rode astride on a big bay charger.

Challenges Orator Heflin.

She again achieved prominence by challenging Representative Tom Heflin of Alabama to joint debate when that doughty Congressman spoke disparagingly of the cause, and though it is known that Mr. Heflin loves to speak and delights in debate, he carefully avoided meeting Miss Milholland on the forum.

In the great suffrage parade in Washington the day before President Wilson's inauguration Miss Milholland led the procession as the herald of the cause. She was mounted on a pure white horse and was clad in robes of white, while a coronet surmounted her magnificent hair which fell loosely down her back.

So striking was her appearance that she was quickly an object of the attacks of the thugs and boors who tried to break up the parade, and it is recorded that one of these men received a blow on the jaw from the fist of the young woman who once held the world shot-put record.

Lately Miss Milholland has been doing magazine work, and though socially a favorite, has always declared that matrimony was not for her.

"I am wedded to the cause," she told her admirers, among whom were Sidney Smith, the New York clubman; John Fox, Jr., author and former husband of Fritzi Scheff, and Lord Curzon, formerly viceroy of India.

Whether this marriage will annul her former marriage to the cause is the question that perplexes the suffrage leaders, but they, as a rule, protest that it will not.

John E. Milholland, her father, was evidently not greatly shocked by the marriage. Here is what he cabled his daughter:

"Have not been so mad in two hundred years. You should be boiled in oil. Do you expect forgiveness until the next century. Indefensible chip of the old block, you have given us a pretty rough deal, but nevertheless I humbly and fervently pray God's blessing upon you and yours forever. "PATER."

Boissevain's Brother Elated.

Robert W. Boissevain, brother of the bridegroom, was in a decidedly agreeable frame of mind yesterday in his office at No. 17 Battery place. Besides calling his brother a "lucky dog" and describing him as being "smiled upon by the gods," he said that the new Mrs. Boissevain has now seven sisters-in-law who possess collectively 25 children and that all these seven Boissevain sisters are suffragists of the non-militant type.

"We are of an old family, originally French, but Dutch by adoption," said Mr. Boissevain. "My brother is a banker, and in his own Amsterdam circle considered rich. Of course, his guilders would not compare with the dollars of the American millionaires, but he is now sufficiently blest.

"Wireless" in Courtship.

"Eugen, who is 33 years old, and my brother Jan came over to New York on the Olympic to pay me a visit," he said. "They arrived June 10 and stopped at the Holland House with me. William Marconi, the wireless discoverer, and Mrs. Marconi were here at the same time. My brother and I have known Mr. Marconi for years, and I now understand that the Marconis have known the Milholland family for a long time.

"Anyway, two days after the arrival of my brothers, that is, June 12, I was dining with them in the Holland House and Mr. and Mrs. Marconi entered the dining room with one of the most beautiful women we had ever seen. Miss Milholland was presented to us, and my brother Eugen lost interest in all other things then and there.

"Eugen and Jan had planned to tour the States for six weeks at least, but during the dinner Miss Milholland said something about leaving for Europe early in July. The plans of Eugen, I could see, went flying.

"But when Miss Milholland decided to sail to Europe with the Marconis on the Mauretania on July 2 Eugen engaged passage on the same liner.

MAZDAZNANS EAT FLOWERS AND SING TO THE SUN

All This in Classic Boston, Where the Cult Has a Membership Small but Exclusive.

BOSTON, July 19.—It is ancient history that Nebuchadnezzer went out and ate grass like an ox. Out in the Back Bay and up in Lowell there can be found small yet select circles of folk who eat grass and say they enjoy it.

Not only this, but they worship the sun, pray to the sun, sing to the sun, take sun baths, dew baths, eat rose petals and pansies, drive out disease by fasting spells (or say they do so), fast for days and then fatten up on a diet of water to drink and violets to eat, kiss and rekiss, and try to be as happy and contented as can be.

These people are the Mazdaznans or Sun Worshipers. Into their innermost shrines have penetrated none but ardent devotees, so that none of their rites have been made public. As revealed for the first time at the big Gahanbar, or national peace congress of the Mazdaznans, these rites are weird enough—strange to the outside world, but taken as a matter of course by the Mazdaznans.

And the strange part of the rites and worship is that the devout worshipers believe their practice will lengthen their years into three or four centuries.

Secret Rites of Cult.

Another thing about the sun folk is that they don't worry. So in the hot weather they manage to keep cool figuratively and physically. They usually look happy and contented when met on the street.

None outside the cult itself knew—up to the holding of the recent Gahanbar or Congress—of the secret rites of the Mazdaznans. These are practiced in the inner circles, so called.

For years the famous "Green Book" of the Mazdaznans was a mystery sealed to the eyes of ordinary mortals. The book was guarded sacredly by the Sun Worshipers. In it are printed the precepts of the cult.

Here are some of them:

You can get cured of anything if you have faith enough long enough.

Sickness, sin and poverty will be eradicated by Mazdaznanism.

The fly you swat may be the incarnated soul of a great-great-great-grandmother.

Be careful, then, how you swat the flies.

Obstinacy Cause for Pain.

Pain is nothing but the result of obstinacy in you. If you are suffering from a toothache, it is because you are "declining to yield to the peaceful operations of intelligence."

Never go under the surgeon's knife or take "herbal medicine."

Deny the "bonds of ancestral relation through sickness, sin or sorrow."

And practice these things: Deep or "conscious" breathing and vegetarianism.

If you can do these things, you may become a Mazdaznan, so the "Green Book" says.

The High Priestess is Mrs. Marie Elizabeth Roth Hilton, wife of Dr. George Hilton, of Lowell.

In the inner worship Hanish, the leader, is His Humbleness, Mrs. Hilton is Spenta Marie—the equivalent of "holy mother."

Their chief New England shrine is the Mazdaznan Temple, in Lowell. This was formerly a barn belonging to Dr. Hilton, but later converted into a "house of worship."

The central figure in the worship is Mrs. Hilton, the High Priestess. She is the mother of two pretty daughters, one of whom, the elder, Miss Ruthken Mariana Hilton, is being educated to follow in her mother's steps as High Priestess. Some day pretty Miss Ruthken—her name before the court changed it was Ruth Mildred Brubaker, daughter of Mrs. Hilton by her first marriage—will be the leader of the Mazdaznans. The other daughter is Miss Constance Cleopatra Hilton.

The majority of the followers of the "Little Master," Otoman Zar Adusht Hanish, are the persons of middle life and evidently of generous means. While a few of the cult are young women of surpassing beauty, yet the advanced philosophic principles of Mazdaznan are so complex and abstract that only those of mature mind are intellectually and spiritually capable of comprehending them. Therefore, there is a dearth of young people in the cult.

Automobile Driver Kills Deer With Car

Horn Frightens Animal But He Afterwards Turns to Fight and Pierces Tire With Horns.

UKIAH, CAL., July 19.—W. C. Jones, of Los Angeles, ran down a big deer with his auto near Largo yesterday when it jumped over the fence in front of the machine. Jones opened his throttle and turned loose the horn. The noise frightened the animal, and, after a half mile chase, it turned to give battle. The deer made one vicious lunge forward, its horn piercing the front tire, the impact breaking its neck. Jones loaded his prize into the machine.

Divinity Student Admits Taking Money Trusted to Him Because He Loved Woman.

DENVER, July 19.—William Schulz, student of divinity at Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, arrested here on a charge of embezzling $38 from the student body, whose cashier he was, says he married Miss Thelma Gillion and became a defaulter, not only because he loved the girl, but because he desired to assist her in giving up her former way of living.

That Schulz had partly succeeded in his work of reclamation is the belief of all Denver people who have come in contact with the young woman since she and Schulz arrived in this city. They unite in saying that there is no better behaved young woman in Denver than Mrs. Schulz.

Newark Merchant's Offer to Outfit Children Eagerly Accepted by Woman—Babies Doing Well.

NEWARK, July 19.—Three years ago the head of a large department store here announced that he stood ready to outfit any set of three children of one birth in this city. His offer was never accepted until last night, when a claim was put in by Joseph Roinon, of No. 61 Boyde street, whose wife, Julia, found herself with two little girls and a boy to share the offer. All three children and their mother, who is only 21 years old, are doing well. Complete outfits for the three were provided to-day.

HORSE FALLS IN FISSURE IN SINKING KANSAS FARM

HOISINGTON, KANS., July 19.—Fissures varying from a few inches to a foot and a half in width and extending several feet into the ground have opened up in L. E. Baker's alfalfa field near this city and are causing a great deal of speculation.

There have been no indications of an earthquake of any sort, but the ground seems to be sinking away. The fissures were discovered when Baker missed one of his horses and found it imprisoned in a fissure.

CRAWFORD HEIRS EXPECT SEARCH FOR BARBER TO BARE PRE-NUPTIAL PLOT

Relatives Think That Lump Will Tell Woman Held on Poison Charge Planned to Wed Him on Her Husband's Death.

If the tireless search which is being directed by Atlanta lawyers discovers in New York a man named Fred Lump, the prosecution in the case against Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, who is charged with poisoning her husband, Joshua B. Crawford, thinks a pre-nuptial plot against Crawford can be proved.

The alleged plot was between Mrs. Crawford, then Mrs. Savage, and Lump. She would marry the wealthy Crawford, obtain his money, and then marry Lump, say her accusers.

Lump is a barber by trade and a Bohemian by nativity. He is supposed to be in New York, and in that city detectives in the employ of the prosecution have been at work for several days. Every message that comes from them, however, is one of failure.

Colonel James Makes Charge.

The charge of a plot first was made by Col. J. S. James, who is attorney for the contesting Crawford heirs, who ordered the arrest of Lump. Colonel James said that Lump admitted his being in Atlanta at the time of Crawford's death, and that other testimony valuable to the prosecution was given by him in deposition several weeks ago. But present search for the Bohemian barber has proved fruitless.

Colonel James points to Mrs. E. C. Bursener as one of the witnesses of the prosecution to substantiate the murder plot charge. Mrs. Bursener, it is claimed, will testify that she frequently heard Mrs. Crawford say that she would marry Crawford, get his money, and later run away with Lump. The prosecution will seek to prove also by Mrs. Gertrude A. Painter, it is said, that there was a definite agreement to this plan existent between Mrs. Crawford and Lump.

The forces that are trying to saddle Mrs. Crawford with the murder charge are scoring heavily in the closely-allied civil suit. Heirs of Joshua B. Crawford, trying to break the will by which the widow received the bulk of the estate, charging undue influence, have produced a number of witnesses to swear to an antagonism between Crawford and Mrs. Mary B. Crawford.

One of the witnesses was Mrs. L. C. Dillingsley, who testified that Joshua B. Crawford said, time and again, that he would not marry the woman. This statement was elicited in the attempt to prove that Crawford was not rational, and probably was intoxicated, when he married Mrs. Crawford.

Drunkenness Is Charged.

Mrs. Dillingsley, who said she lived in the Crawford home on West Peachtree street before Joshua Crawford's death, told of instances of alleged cruelty on Mrs Crawford's part, directed particularly toward a Miss Scott. Mrs. Sallie Alexander, an old woman of Henry County, was another witness by whom it was sought to prove habitual drunkenness on Crawford's part.

Mrs. Crawford, released from the Tower on bail of $6,250, has remained in the seclusion of her home on West Peachtree street all week, steadfastly quiet and refusing all statements in the face of the accusations against her. She has said nothing regarding the case, except a simple denial of the charges.

Reporters seeing her were treated courteously and quietly, and Mrs. Crawford seemed not averse to talk to them freely. But in most of the talk the subject of the murder charge and the plot charge in which Lump's name appears was carefully skirted.

Mrs. Crawford is a large woman, of dignified appearance. Not one moment since her arrest Saturday night has her composure broken, even slightly. In the Tower she received the few persons who called on her, and during the visit did not exhibit a sign of perturbation.

Calls Charge "Awful Thing."

To reporters and to all her visitors, when she mentioned at all the subject of the murder charge, she referred to it as "this awful thing."

Mrs. Crawford finds staunch friends in her children and grandchildren, who visited her at the Tower, and were with her almost all the few hours she spent in jail, bringing her flowers, a savory meal, and other tokens of their love.

Mrs. Crawford's children are bitter in their speech against the nephews and neices of Joshua B. Crawford, who, they say, are persecuting their mother with extreme cruelty. Mrs. Crawford herself accused her enemies of cruelty and lack of feeling.

Mrs. Crawford met Joshua B. Crawford when she was in charge of a winter hotel in St. Augustine, wither Crawford went in search of health. It was there she met him, and there that she married him. At his death, there was a settlement of his estate, Mrs. Crawford taking hold of the affairs with a capable hand.

An agreement was signed, and the affairs of Joshua B. Crawford, deceased, seemed amicably settled. Then the litigation was sprung. In the first bill of complaint the heirs who contested the will charged Mrs. Crawford with poisoning her husband, and of exerting undue influence to procure a will in her favor. But it was not until three years later, two weeks ago, that an examination of the remains of Joshua B. Crawford to ascertain traces of poison was ordered. Upon the examination came the verdict of the physician that traces of poison were vident, and Mrs. Crawford was arrested.

With preliminary hearing waived, Mrs. Crawford's case is flatly up to the grand jury, which, without definite date of meeting, awaits the call of the Solicitor General. The body probably will be assembled next week.

MRS. MARY BELLE CRAWFORD, held on poison charge in famous will case mystery, with her grandchild, Viola Belle Bennett.

Fortune in Gold Nuggets Awaits Heir

Wealth Will Revert to State of Kansas Unless Kin of Old Woman Appear.

HUTCHINSON, July 19.—There is a bag of gold nuggets and gold dust awaiting heirs that may go to the State of Kansas. These nuggets and the gold dust, along with some money and other personal property to the value of $10,000, are in the hands of former Sheriff G. M. Duckworth, administrator of the estate of Mrs. Ann M. Bernhert, who died a few days ago in Davenport, Iowa.

Some years ago when Mrs. Bernhert, who lived alone, was found to be of unsound mind, Dr. Duckworth was named as her guardian and she was taken to an asylum for treatment. In searching the house he found scattering personal property. It was found that much of it was gold nuggets and dust, saved, evidently, from some former mining experience, and hoarded away.

Baby Sips Hat Bleach; Dies from Poisoning

Mother, Bedridden from Appendicitis, Is Unable to Stop Child from Drinking Acid.

NEW YORK, July 19.—As a result of drinking a mixture of lye and oxalic acid, used by her father to clean an old straw hat, Dorothy E. Smith, 20 months old, died yesterday afternoon in St. Mary's Hospital, Jamaica. Her father is Leo Smith, of No. 47 Brooklyn avenue, Jamaica, an employee of the Long Island Railroad.

The child's mother is recovering from an operation for appendicitis. She and the baby were alone in the house yesterday when the child drank the mixture. She heard the baby's screams, but could not leave her bed, so she screamed, too, and neighbors who responded called a doctor.

RENO SINGS ITS SWAN SONG AS DIVORCE MECCA

Grand Rush of Colonists to Take Advantage of the Old Law Comes to an End.

RENO, July 19.—With such songs as "Meet a Friend From Your Home Town" and "At the Devil's Ball," sung by feminine entertainers from Metropolitan music halls, accompanied by high-class orchestras, the divorce colony celebrated the past week the beginning of the end of the Nevada quick divorce.

On the stroke of the midnight hour on Monday the curtain dropped upon one scene in Reno's notable divorce colony performance which has commanded the attention of the world for so long—that of the almost daily appearance of new faces upon the streets, as men and women, from plain country folk to elaborately gowned and bejeweled society beauties, arrived to begin their required six months' residence in the State and county, preparatory to the prospective divorce action.

Law Halts Colonists.

No more will incoming trains deposit these colonists and carloads of trunks, for the familiar song, "I'm on My Way to Reno," has been shelved by the action of the last Legislature, when it dealt the knock-out blow in its ultimatum that no divorce proceeding shall be instituted in the State of Nevada under the existing six-month residence law after December 21 next, thereby limiting the time in which newcomers could begin such residence period to Monday last.

Previous to July, 1909, the presence here for divorce of but an occasional person of prominence merely commanded attention to that individual, but it led to a method of publicity by an attorney which started the ball rolling, and it has never stopped rolling. Its greatest momentum is being witnessed now.

All Houses Are Thronged.

During the past month, and especially the week ending on Monday, the throng of newcomers has experienced great difficulty in securing such apartments as they might desire. All the hotels are crowded, as are the desirable rooming houses. Available cottages are almost as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth. In many cottages from four to six divorcees are living.

Some private boarding houses are housing as many as ten of the fair sex, and men. There are now scores of so-called "divorcees' nests" here. Every train the past fortnight has unloaded new arrivals, the preponderance of men and very young women, seemingly well to do and fashionable being noticeable. The proportion of men to women increased largely. Baby carriages and dogs played conspicuous parts.

Willing To Marry But Not to Apologize

Man Sued for Breach of Promise Says Hill Wed But Refuses to Beg Forgiveness.

ATCHISON, KANS., July 19.—Mary Falk and William Burke were engaged to be married. The date had been set, the guests had assembled, and everything was in readiness, but Burke did not appear. Chagrined and heartbroken, Miss Falk engaged an attorney and sued Burke for $25,000 as balm for her wounded feelings.

"It was all a mistake," said Burke. "I wanted and still want to marry Miss Falk. I was under the impression that under the rules of the Catholic Church the ceremony had to be performed by the pastor of the bride's church. I couldn't find him in time to perform the ceremony and naturally supposed the wedding was off for the time being."

Miss Falk accepted the explanation, but she insisted that Burke must apologize for not appearing for the wedding. Burke, however, insisted that she must apologize for suing him.

Boy Finds $35,500; Hides it from Police

Advertises That He Picked up Money and Declares He Will Return it to Owner.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS., July 19.—Brayton Gardner, 18 years old, who announced he had found $35,500 in a leather bag on the tracks of the Boston and Maine Railroad, to-night refused to tell the police where he put the money.

"I have hidden it in a safe place," said he, "and if someone claims it I will produce it immediately."

Gardner walked into the office of a local newspaper and inserted an advertisement, reading:

"Found, $35,500. Owner can have money by identifying it and satisfying Brayton Gardner."

Stolen Jewels Are Found Buried in Park

Last of $100,000 Loot Stolen by Employee of Firm Recovered After Confession.

NEW YORK, July 19.—The final confession of young William Beck, who stole $100,000 worth of jewelry from his employers, Udall & Ballou, was obtained yesterday. The last $2,800 of the loot was found by detectives. It was buried in Central Park.

Beck had insisted until yesterday that he had told all. But Inspector Faurot finally got him to reveal the hiding place. The police were told to enter the park at 110th street and Eighth avenue and count eighteen stone blocks in the wall to a spot where a small bush grew. Buried 6 inches they found nine diamond rings and a pair of cuff buttons.

Attending Funerals Hobby of Old Squaw

"Glass Eye," Noted for Lamentations at Obsequies, at Last Principal at Mortuary Ceremony.

KLAMATH FALLS, OREG., July 19.—"Glass Eye" is dead. She was an aged Indian woman, well known here since the settitment of this section. It was one of her hobbies to attend every funeral that she could, and on these occasions she posed as chief mourner by her excessive lamentations.

Her name has been forgotten by the whites, who only know her by the nickname, which is said to have been given her when young, because of the brightness of her eyes and not because of any abnormality in them.

She was about 75 years old, and is reported to have been the sister of "White Cindy," another noted aborigine.

Indian Girl Seeks Office in Oklahoma

Educated Cherokee Business Woman Would Be State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections.

VINITA, OKLA., July 19.—Announcement by Miss Kate Barnard, State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections, that she will not be a candidate for re-election, brings into the race for the Democratic nomination a young Cherokee woman, Miss Pearl Holderman, of Northern Craig County, whose ability as an educated business woman has given her a wide acquaintance in Eastern Oklahoma.

Miss Holderman has large business responsibilities, and her experience and ability have made her more than a match for most men. Because of her father's impaired health she manages his cattle ranch, directing every detail, including the care of a herd of blooded cattle. This young Cherokee woman owns a thousand acres of land in her own name, all of which is in a high state of cultivation.

MOTHER OF TEN SUES; WEDDED TWENTY-ONE YEARS

DAYTON, WYO., July 19.—After living with David Krouse Towns for 21 years and bearing ten children of which he is the father, Mrs. Martha Ellen Towns has brought suit for divorce, asserting that her husband unjustly accused her of infidelity and that he had attempted to secure her incarceration in the State Insane Asylum, although realizing that she was sane.

Aged Oil Queen, Wife Of Youth, Ruled Sane

Young Spendthrift Husband Is Welcome to Fortune, She Says, on Leaving Asylum.

CHARLESTON, W. VA., July 19.—The courts and her children can not separate Mrs. Cynthia C. Sparks, known as West Virginia's "oil queen," and her young husband, Fred Sparks, and she is again free, after having been incarcerated in the West Virginia Hospital for Insane for ten days.

Further, the superintendent and the members of the State Board of Control have placed beyond question her sanity after a close observation, while she was under their supervision.

Mrs. Sparks is going to join her 26-year-old husband, who, it is alleged by the woman's children by her first husband, was rapidly dissipating her fortune of $2,000,000 by his extravagance and riotious living.

The old woman declared to-day that her young husband was welcome to the half of her fortune which she retained after having signed over the half to him.

Women Wear Bath Dresses Down Town

Startle Natives by Appearing in Ice Cream Parlor in Their Beach Attire.

WHEELING, W. VA., July 19.—Two buxon matrons and a miss about 19 years old created a sensation about dusk by walking through the streets of Warwood, north of this city, in bathing costumes. Unabashed by the attention they attracted, they entered an ice cream parlor, where they ordered ices, and after eating them walked to their homes.

The matter was brought to the attention of Town Marshal E. L. Pool, who immediately issued a warning that women appearing hereafter in such scant attire would subject themselves to arrest.

INDIANS, 102 AND 97, WILL VISIT FAIR DIRECTORS

MONTROSE, COLO., July 19.—The board of directors of the Western Slope Fair Association decided to bring 50 Ute Indians from the reservation in Utah to Montrose during the fair in September. The Indians will include Chief McCook, 97, and his sister, Chippeta, 102, who is the widow of Chief Ouray.

Naturalist Editor Has Forest Sanctum

Sets His Type in Shade of Hemlock and Lives in Wigwam all Winter.

WESTFIELD, MASS., July 19.—A unique editorial and printing plant is that known as "Seneca Wigwam, The Press in the Forest," located in the heart of the woods about three miles west of this place.

The sanctum is a typical Indian tepee, where the editor, Joseph C. Duport, an out-of-door enthusiast, prints, illustrates and publishes an original magazine called the Woronoco Valley Calumet.

In summer the editor sets his type in the shade of a hemlock, and in the winter or during inclement weather his work is done in the wigwam, which contains an up-to-date twentieth century printing press and equipment.

Policeman's Watch Stops Death Bullet

Hospital Steward Thinks Patrolman Burglar and Fires Six Shots at His Heart.

OAKLAND, CAL., July 19.—A watch in his vest pocket stopped a bullet which otherwise probably would have pierced the heart of Patrolman O'Hara last night. The shot was one of six fired by Roscoe Gray, steward of the Oakland College of Medicine, under the impression that O'Hara was a burglar. The other shots did not hit O'Hara. Gray nearly collapsed when he learned his mistake.

O'Hara was on his rounds when he noticed a door in the college building open. Trying to close it, he set off a burglar alarm and Gray opened fire in the dark.

Silver Wire Travels Through Two Arms

CHICO, CAL., July 19.—James Dupen, a Chico merchant, to-day submitted to an operation, in which a piece of silver wire, used in closing a wound on the left wrist in 1897, was extracted from the index finger of the right hand. The wire, which is one-half inch long, passed up one arm, across the chest and worked down the opposite arm, emerging at the finger.

Bee Sting on Neck Fatal to Farmer

Dies from Paralysis of Heart Fifteen Minutes After Insect Poison Enters System.

BRISTOL, PA., July 19.—John Pickering, a farmer of Woodbine, while engaged in his customary duties about the farm Saturday, was stung on the neck by a large bee and within fifteen minutes he was dead.

Dr. Heritage, of Langhorne, was summoned, but did not arrive in time to render aid. The doctor says death was the result of paralysis of the heart, caused by the bee sting.

FARMERS' UNION HOPE OF SOUTH, SAY ORGANIZERS IN GREAT GEORGIA CAMPAIGN

Charles S. Barrett and L. M. Rhodes, of Tennessee, Sweep Through the State With a Message to Planters to Check Enormous Crop Waste.

L. M. Rhodes, president of the Tennessee division and chairman of the national board of directors of the Farmers' Union, has just finished a flying trip through Georgia in company of Charles S. Barrett, national president of the Farmers' Union, and J. J. Brown, former Commissioner of Agriculture of Georgia. The following message to the farmers as delivered by Mr. Rhodes abounds in such truth and fact not generally known:

"The marvelous grandeur of the world's progress astounds and amazes us, yet the wonderful story would never have been written had it not been for the ever-faithful farmer.

"Agriculture is basic. Upon it rests cities, commerce and civilization. The people of the earth consume 60,000,000 tons of food annually. Five hundred and eighty-two million tons of it come from the farm. Human beings are clothed in the products of the farm from the time they are born until they embark for eternity. Yet ever since Grandfather Adam made the mistake that caused him to lose the family estate the farmer has been a failure in business.

Farmer Behind in Business.

"In business development of the United States in the last century the farmer has fallen behind. In the procession of modern business methods he has followed where he should have led.

"When we became a nation the farmer owned 90 per cent of the wealth. In 1850 our national wealth was $7,000,000,000 and the farmer owned $4,000,000,000, or four-sevenths.

"In 1913 our national wealth is estimated at $131,000,000,000, and the farmer owns $26,000,000,000. Our farm property is valued at nearly $40,000,000,000, but $14,000,000,000 is owned by other classes than farmers.

"The above figures show that farmers are not holding their own, for if they had kept pace with other vocations since 1850 they would now own $75,000,000,000 worth of wealth instead of $26,000,000,000. Their lack of business methods and failure to match conditions have cost them $49,000,000,000. This would buy all the farm property in the United States and have enough left to buy a half interest in all the railroads.

"In a score of years the farmers of this country have produced $135,000,000,000 worth of farm products, or enough to buy all the property in the United States. Yet this wonderful amount of wealth has not gone to the farmers. We have 10,000 men in this country who own an average of $10,000,000 each. And their combined wealth is $100,000,000,000. The other 99,990,000 people own $31,000,000,000. Of our 100,000,000, 60,000,000 are homeless.

"Twelve men control one-third of our wealth, and one man controls nearly one-tenth of the wealth of this the richest country in the world. At the rate we are going capital will own practically all our wealth in another generation.

"Sixty-three land companies and rich individuals own an area equal to Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama and North and South Carolina.

"Liberty can not long exist in a country where the tendency is to confine the wealth to a few hands, for he who controls a nation's money controls its people.

Union Is Educational.

"Knowing that our liberty was bought with holy blood and sacred tears, and seeing that we must organize and change our present methods or surrender, we organized the Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America. Believing that a lack of practical knowledge is man's greatest enemy, we placed 'education' as the first word in our name. And knowing that a people are never strong when they are wrong, we selected as our motto: 'Equity, Justice and the Golden Rule.' Our organization has steadily grown, until now it reaches from coast to coast, and north, south, east and west are terms of direction to indicate its magnitude. In one decade it has grown until it is winged by Canada and Mexico, backgrounded by the Atlantic and footlighted by the Pacific.

"The 13,000,000 farmers of this country are laboring under an indebtedness of $6,000,000,000. On this amount, counting commissions and renewal charges, they are paying an annual interest of 8 1-2 per cent, or $510,000,000, while the business men and manufacturers pay an average of 5 per cent interest, or $300,000,000, on $6,000,000,000. This $210,000,000 excess interest paid by the farmers would pay off our farm indebtedness in 28 years. Co-operative efforts and rural credits would right these wrongs. So, let us continue to discourage this present system until it has passed into history and is only remembered in the misty back yonder.

"Distribution being one of our greatest problems, our second declaration of purposes is to assist our members in buying and selling. The Federal Government has spent $100,000,000 in the last ten years, teaching us how to produce, and not a cent to teach us how to market.

"The real reason of the high cost of living is not because the farmer produces an inadequate amount of products or gets too much for what he grows, but it is that there are too many toll gates between the field of production and the table of consumption.

"As long as we continue our present methods we will build up the towns and cities at the expense of the rural districts. The consuming public pays $13,000,000,000 for what the farmer parts with for $6,000,000,000. The farmer gets 44 cents and the distributor gets 56 cents of each dollar. If there is a practical workable way to stop this plundering of the producing and consuming masses, and do away with this stupendous waste, it should be done. Surely no one would oppose the change, except those who think the jeweled hand of greed should be licensed to pick the threadbare pockets of those who toil.

Expense Is Unavoidable.

"We all agree that there is an unavoidable expense in the distribution of farm products. But let us make what seems to us a reasonable division of the $13,000,000,000 consumers other than farmers pay for farm products each year.

Give the wholesaler and jobber $1,000,000,000, the transportation companies $1,000,000,000, the retailer $1,500,000,000; then throw in $500,000,000 for all possible misallowance, and we have $9,000,000,000, which is $3,000,000,000 more than the farmer gets. This amount falls into the waste basket of speculation.

"If it were divided between the producer and consumer it would clothe the naked, feed the hungry and educate the illiterate, instead of breeding millionaires, paupers, anarchists and suicides. If the Farmers' Union fills its mission, it will not be long until a less portion of the laborers' toll will be turned in at the toll gate of the palace and a great portion will find its way through the door of the cottage, and help to lift the humble tenement to the comfort, dignity and luxury of a home.

"Within the next decade the farmers of this country will produce enough to load 250,000,000 freight cars, and its value will approximate $100,000,000,000. If properly handled, this should double the farmer's wealth. But producing is not all of farming. We cannot prosper unless we can control prices; we cannot control prices unless we co-operate; we cannot co-operate unless we organize. The farmer must keep his pace with the organized industries of the age, or verily he will have his reward."

Mr. Rhodes then spoke in detail of the work the Farmers' Union had done, its aims, its objects, its hopes, and the effect was so marked that there were responses on every hand by farmers who heard him, and the beginning of the 75,000 membership in Georgia was inaugurated, and the culmination will be a certainty if President Barrett and Mr. Rhodes put in a few weeks of organization.

Edna May Finds a New Love

Will Not Quit Husband, Though

Both Enamored of Race Horses

Mrs. Oscar Lewisohn, formerly Edna May, who denies she will be separated from wealthy husband.

Former "Belle of New York" Says Report of Separation From Oscar Lewisohn Is Silly.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Edna May Lewisohn and Oscar Lewisohn, her wealthy husband, both admit having new loves, and for that reason will break up housekeeping, but they will not separate, as has been reported, declares the former belle of New York.

The reason that there will be no divorce court proceedings is that they both have the same love and it interferes no whit with their connubial felicity. According to Mrs. Lewisohn, both have become madly infatuated with horse racing, and to keep in close touch with their stable they will give up their home, Cranbourne Manor.

"Both my husband and myself have become very keen on racing," said Mrs. Lewisohn, after denying the reported separation, "and we are trying to find a place near Newmarket, where he has ten horses in training. He is at present in Germany with his brother, but on his return we probably will rent our London house.

"Mr. Lewisohn has just taken up racing this year and has been remarkably successful for a novice campaigner. If his horses come up to expectations, he plans to increase his stable until he has one of the largest strings of thoroughbreds in England or the Continent. As for any separation, that is simply silly. We were never happier."

SOT IS SENTENCED TO BATHE AND GO TO CHURCH

FORT SMITH, ARK., July 19.—To attend church each Sunday for three months and to bathe his children once a week was the novel sentence imposed on John Norris in the Police Court by Mayor Reed.

Norris pleaded guilty to intoxication. It was his second appearance in court within two months.

The terms of his sentence, if not complied with, will result in him serving 109 days in the workhouse.

FORMER LIFE CONVICT WILL BE FACTORY OWNER

PANA, ILL., July 19.—Noah Foster returned to Pana after serving eighteen years in the Chester penitentiary.

Foster was sentenced for life for the murder of Arthur Binion, but was pardoned on good behavior.

An inventor, he obtained money and departed for Philadelphia to look over machinery, preparatory to starting a factory at Pana. He is 40 years old.

WRITERS MAKE BEST DIPLOMATS DECLARES PAGE

New Ambassador to Italy, Author of Many Stories, Leaves Himself Out of Discussion.

YORK HARBOR, ME., July 19.—Are authors better qualified to fill diplomatic posts than others? The appointment of Thomas Nelson Page as Ambassador to Italy brings this subject to the fore, coupled with the appointments made by President Wilson.

The greatest diplomats America boasts were men of letters. Benjamin Franklin, John Hay, Nathaniel Hawthorne, James Russell Lowell, William Dean Howell furnish a distinguished list.

Mr. Page, who is 60, is modesty personified. He has been reporter, lawyer, writer, and has succeeded in all.

Mr. Page asked if he could explain as an author what special qualifications a man of letters possesses to perform the duties of Ambassador, consented to speak, leaving his own case out of the discussion. Said he:

"A man of letters is better fitted to do anything better than anyone else. His work has broadened his horizon; if it hadn't we might as well do away with letters.

Must Know Problems.

"The author must necessarily be conversant with the economic and governmental problems of the day.

"I think the greatest good authors in general have alone is to interpret the spirit of the section about which they write. There can be no doubt there is a better feeling now between the North and the South than there was before the Spanish-American war. This, I believe, is because of writers.

"Every part of the world is being more properly set before another part by the authors.

"The President has had a thorough training. Besides the college education, he has had associations with the North and the South, and he is conversant with the economic and governmental problems. He is a man of strong character and has been deservedly selected by the people to hold their most important office.

"I met Walter Page prior to his departure for his London post and gave him a dinner. His whole heart was set upon the desire to 'make good.'"

Qualifications of Diplomat.

"What is your idea of the qualifications a good diplomat possesses?" he was asked.

"Devotion to his duty is perhaps the first and most important," he replied. "Then comes devotion to your country, application to your duty and a desire to bring your country and the country to which you have been sent closer together.

"Of course, since the cable came into use foreign posts are brought closer to the State Department at Washington, and it must be a great comfort to an Ambassador to feel that at any time he may seek aid from Washington.

"I believe Charles Francis Adams was the last foreign ambassador to be thrown upon his own resources, and that was because the cable was cut.

"Rome is indeed a charming post. I believe it is the most romantic city in the world. I am sure I shall like it."

Siwash Has First And Only Car Ride

Chief Seattle's Cousin Says He Is Now Ready to Go to Happy Hunting Ground.

SEATTLE, July 19.—Chief Seattle's first co usin, "Port Angeles Bob," age unknown, and who has lived in the outskirts of Port Angeles since the earliest settlers can remember, set foot in Seattle the other day, took his first ride on a street car, saw some moving pictures, paid homage to the statue of Chief Seattle, and declared his resolve to return home and remain contented there until he goes to the happy hunting grounds.

CHANGS, ON WAY HOME, CLING TO YANKEE FRILLS

Wife and Children of Chinese Minister Sail Derssed in Latest American Fashions.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—After more than three years in Washington with her husband, Minister Chang, Mme. Chang is returning to the Orient. She is accompanied by two daughters, a son, Henry K. Chang; a little daughter-in-law and a tiny grandchild. During her residence in America Mme. Chang has changed her ideas about many things, and about others she maintains the old Chinese beliefs.

The two young daughters, Miss Alice and Miss Lillie Chang, have been attending school in Washington for two years, and with the progress of their education have abandoned their picturesque nature clothes for American garb.

Whether they will adopt the clothes of their native country on their return remains to be seen. Miss Alice Chang, who spoke for the party at the St. Francis before they sailed on the Manchuria, said:

"It all depends on what is in fashion in China.

Favor American Fashions.

"If we find American clothes fashionable out there, we shall wear them. We adopted them when we entered Gunnison Hall, our Washington school These are more convenient when traveling," she added, pointing to a pale blue silk crepe costume with the latest frills and furbelows. "When we wear our other clothes, people stare so, and sometimes they laugh. They aren't used to them in Washington."

The question of recent changes in China is of especial interest to Mme. Chang and her daughters.

The idea that women may vote in China and that the door of opportunity is opening for them daily there has caused the Chinese women to be thoughtful.

"I don't know about this voting," said Mme. Chang, through her daughter. "I don't believe very much in it."

"Only for some women," broke in one daughter.

Education Qualification.

"I would make an educational qualification," said Miss Lillie. "Not every woman ought to vote."

"Home is the place for women," said Mme. Chang, true to her country's traditions and centuries of training. "A woman ought to do housekeeping, to stay at home and to have children."

Mme. Chang and the daughters are opposed to the Western idea of a woman earning her own living. They believe she should want to stay at home to be cared for, even if she has to do without some of the extras which her own money can secure.

"Women in China probably never will reach that stage," said Mme. Chang. "There will be fewer opportunities for them to enter professional and business fields."

College is a goal which is being aspired to by the two daughters, although they are not sure yet what particular lines they want to pursue. "We can go if we want to, you know," said Miss Alice. "Our people believe in college for girls if they want it."

Sweetheart False; Indian Girl Ends Life

Ute Maid Leaps From Rock of Legendary Fame When She Finds Love Faithless.

MEEKER, COLO., July 19.—Zanaida, niece of Chief Whispering Pine, of the Ute reservation, and a girl of unusual charm committed suicide by leaping from Suicide Rock, a stone monument of legendary fame which rears its head at the foot of the reservation and has been the means of many grim tragedies by heartbroken maidens of the Ute nation.

Zanaida was courted by many of the young braves. She fell in love with the handsomest man and the day was set for the ceremony. Elk Tooth suddenly deserted her for another girl of the tribe, and, heartbroken, Zanaida sought surcease in death.

HARD THICK CRUST COVERED BOY'S HEAD

Cracked with Least Pressure, Causing Discharge. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In One Week Entirely Cured.

Bolton, Ga. — "My little boy's head was covered with a hard thick crust which cracked with the least pressure causing a discharge of bloody corruption which was so offensive that I could hardly hold him. He was very cross. Some called it milk crust, another running tetter and another eczema.

"After trying several patent medicines I decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using the sample I purchased some Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. After using Cuticura Soap and Ointment three days I was able to remove all the crust and in one week he was entirely cured. Cuticura Soap and Ointment also cured my baby of an ulcerated sore behind her ear and now we think we cannot keep house without them." (Signed) Mrs. Charles Poss, Nov. 5, 1912.

The regular use of Cuticura Soap for toilet and bath not only tends to preserve, purify and beautify the skin, scalp, hair and hands, but assists in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, yellow, oily, mothy and other unwholesome conditions of the skin. Cuticura Soap (25c.) and Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

An "A-1" College of the Highest Rank

BRENAU, without endowment, has taken a leading place among the colleges of the South. It has grown from a small seminary, with an enrollment of 30 students, to a large college for women with an attendance of 500 students.

ITS progress has been due to merit alone—to an unswerving devotion to educational ideals.

BRENAU combines an "A-1" college, a noted conservatory of music and a school of oratory second to none in the South.

GAINESVILLE'S climate is healthful and invigorating. Religious influences in the school and little city are represented by churches of all denominations and by the college Y. W. C. A.

Applications for the next term, which opens September 11, should be made at once. Address

COLUMBUS MILL SCHOOL HELD AS MODEL BY U. S.

How Georgia City Is Caring for Cotton Factory Children Told in Government Pamphlet.

SPECIAL COURSES GIVEN

Authorities Arranged Vocational Instruction to Meet Demand of Different Classes.

How Columbus is caring for the education of the boys and girls of its cotton mills is the story embodied in a pamphlet published by the United States Department of Education, copies of which were circulated in Atlanta yesterday.

How the boys and girls of the mills themselves work against going to school, rendering doubly hard the problem before the public, is a pitiful note of the story.

They call their school in Columbus the "dinner toters' school," because even during their school days they must work, taking hot lunches to their parents, brothers, sisters, and others who work in the mills.

Must Take Parents' Lunch.

The pamphlet tells of this custom, revealing something of the life of the cotton mill child. It says:

"The long intermission in the middle of the day is necessary that the children may take the lunches to the mills. Many of the mills are some distance from the school—some more than a mile away. Most of the children, therefore, walk more than two miles during the noon hour. Besides, they are compelled to wait 20 or 30 minutes for the operatives to eat their dinners before taking the baskets back.

"Some children earn several dollars each week by carrying such baskets to mill operatives. The price usually paid for taking lunch to one person for a week is 25 cents, and children often take lunches to several persons."

The booklet was prepared by Roland B. Daniel, and was published by the Department of Education as the description of an admirable system. It deals not only with the mill children, but with the boys and girls who are more fortunate, showing how the Columbus scheme of education is variable, being adapted to meet the demands that come with a mixed population so as to care alike for the two classes. P. P. Claxton, Federal Commissioner of Education, says in the foreword to the book:

"Columbus was one of the first of this country's cities to work out certain phases of this problem of adaptation."

The Columbus schools effect industrial training for all children, but a training varied according to the class from which the children come.

Call of Mills Strong.

The writer, Mr. Hill, laments the fact that "the call of the mills is strong."

"While the prescribed course for the mill children contemplates seven years, few continue after the fifth or sixth year," he wrote. "Not more than 1 per cent finish this school and pursue their studies further."

In all lines of work, academic and industrial, the aim of the school for mill operatives is to better living conditions a little among the people for whom it was organized. That is the only hope. In the beginning the advocates of this type of school thought that many of the mill children might be induced to continue in school and do more advanced work, especially along vocational lines. In this respect the school has been a disappointment to some.

"We are seldom able to induce pupils to finish even the limited course offered in this school," writes Mr. Daniel. "Our best hope is that we may better living conditions a little."

Toward the end, the school has been made a sort of social center. The school is in session the entire year around, and pupils are promoted quarterly, that the children will not drift away, as it is feared they would surely do in the case of a three months' vacation. Teachers do social work, visiting the sick, distributing certain charity, obtaining means of operation for the physically defective, arranging for social evenings, fostering organizations among the older people, and dealing in like activities.

Summing up the work of the school, the writer says:

"While this school has done good work and its benefits have been felt, we are sure the weakest point in it is not being able to hold the children long enough to receive its full benefits. An enforced attendance law would aid very materially in this respect."

Industrial Work Taught.

Along with "the three R's," the mill children are trained in industrial branches, being taught woodworking and gardening. The girls are given work in basket-making, sewing, cooking, poultry-raising and gardening.

In its scheme of adaptation, the city has an altogether different school for other children. The regular grade work is done, and in the traditional high school a year and a half of industrial work, manual training for the boys and domestic science for the girls, is given.

Another variation comes when the curriculum of the negro schools are worked out. There is industrial education for negroes in the public school, but different from that supplied the white children. The Columbus method is altogether one of adaptation.

The difference lies in the fact that the negroes receive more of the training, going into more branches of manual labor, and taking it throughout the school course. Almost every branch of work with the hands is offered them. Of this work the booklet says:

"Pupils who remain in the schools long enough to complete the course receive in compensation for their labor upon leaving school about twice what they would receive for unskilled labor such as they would be able to render without such training. It is often the case that one of these boys is able to earn $2 a day at the age of 17 when his father, without such preparation, receives $1.25 for unskilled labor.

High School in Scheme.

The book, being altogether a treatise on industrial education in Columbus, is given over largely to a description of the courses in the Columbus Industrial High School, the pride of the city's scheme of education. The school, besides its academic work, has vocational courses, including home economics, dressmaking and millinery, mechanic arts, textile arts, and a business course.

This industrial high school is separate and distinct from the conventional academic high school. It is merely another phase of the Columbus scheme of adaptation of education to varied needs and to varied classes.

Feeds Her Pet Pig With a Silver Spoon

Denver Society Woman Provides Bed of Down and Linen for Her Porcine Possession.

DENVER, July 19.—Mrs. Whitney Newton, a Denver society matron, has a new pet.

Young Robert Newton came home a few evenings ago and brought a baby pig with him.

Mrs. Newton took the squirming animal into her arms and tried to make it comfortable, but without success. Finally, in desperation, she went to the linen closet, took out a fine piece of hemstitched linen, embroidered with blue flowers, wrapped it gently about the slick little pig, then laid him cautiously upon the downy pillows beside her own.

Piggy gave a satisfied little squeak, doubled up his feet and went off to sleep happily.

This cunning act won Mrs. Newton's heart, and from exasperation she developed a positive liking for her pet. His white skin is washed, combed and perfumed and he sleeps in a downy bed every night beside his mistress. He also eats from a silver spoon.

Women Convict Her For Slapping Child

First Feminine Jury in Sonoma County, California, Returns Verdict of Guilty of Assault.

PETALUMA, COLO., July 19.—A jury of twelve women convicted a woman, Mrs. W. S. Waldorf, upon a charge of battery here to-day. This is the first jury of women that ever tried a case in Sonoma County. Mrs. Waldorf was accused of having slapped a neighbor's children. The jury was out less than an hour.

Many Dianas in Diaphanous Draperies

In Shady Dells of Sharon, Mass., Prominent Members of the Exclusive Sets Learn To Be Graceful.

SHARON, MASS., July 19.—Beautiful bare-footed society women clad in diaphanous draperies whirling through the groves like Dianas and dryads of mythological days caused this little town much disturbance until it was learned that these nymph-like dancers were only groups of fashionable women from Boston, New York, Washington and other large cities learning the art of rhythmic expression at Mrs. Florence Fleming Noyes' Sharon Summer School.

Just now Sharon has recovered a little from the shock of having its dells and glades peopled with gyrating girls going through mysterious evolutions, but the interesting new kind of training which Mrs. Noyes has started in Massachusetts promises to atract large numbers of rhythmic women students from everywhere.

The rhythmic dance is especially delightful since it necessitates the wearing of special apparel, thin, loose and silken, to give full and perfect play to the motions of the limbs and the free gyrations of the body.

"Close to Nature" Dance.

Litheness, suppleness and harmony are the main objects in the learning of rhythmic expression and lessons are best inculcated, Mrs. Noyes believes, where overhanging tree boughs, falling leaves and the aroma of opening blossoms lend to the enchantment of the atmosphere.

It is partly for such a reason that Mrs. Noyes chose Sharon as the spot for her summer school. Behind the clean, fresh, white-painted bungalow-cottage on Pleasant street, that does duty as a living room and classroom building, is a beautiful grove of tall trees with low swinging branches and dark green grass underneath.

It is in this grove that the pupils are inducted into the first mysteries of rhythmic expression.

As they get experience and feel the restrictions of the grove they naturally seek the wider range of the wooded expanses that surround the town. Hence the surprise that was at first caused when these startling Delsartian women of society were seen amid the trees or deep in the recesses of some particularly remote glen gliding through the fantastic evolutions that are supposed to lend the body perfect ease and repose.

Great Modesty Is Shown.

Groups ranging from ten to a score or more in number mysteriously appeared and disappeared. Great modesty was shown in regard to keeping aloof from the townspeople, and only the chance passer who happened upon one of these rhythm classes of beautiful girls knew of the great grace and extreme litheness of body that was being taught and learned.

Among the girls studying with Miss Noyes are Beulah Hepburn, daughter of A. Barton Hepburn, of New York; Margaret Tuttle, daughter of Mrs. Howard Mansfield, a prominent suffrage leader; Mildred Anderson and Mable Coffin, of New York; Elena Farons, a Kansas City society woman; Winifred Lawrence, a Cleveland society girl; Lenora DeGrange, Effie Baker, Kathryn Dunkhorst and Elise Ryan, of Washington, and Bertha Remick, a composer, of Sharon.

Moving Picture Gives Mother Clew to Girl

Missing Daughter Is Recognized on Screen and Police Are Following Up Trace.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—The "movies" may be instrumental in restoring Olga Ellis, 5, to the mother from whom she was taken in Revere, Mass., and brought to California.

For six months the police have sought John Ellis, of Revere, Mass., who is said to have left that city with his daughter.

A school-teacher of Berkeley, Cal., became interested in the case and gave a picture of the child and the mother's address to a moving picture agency.

Mrs. Myrtle Palmer, housekeeper in a hotel here, saw the mother's appeal at a moving picture theater recently and recognized the little girl as one who had stayed at the hotel with her father for several weeks. He had registered, she said, as D. Delisle, and had gone to Eureka, Cal.

Mrs. Palmer notified the police and search for the man and child has been instituted in Eureka.

Squaws Lay Ties As Bucks Play Poker

Desert Section Hand Boss Returns to Find Piute Women Doing Construction Work.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Piute Indians as substitutes for Mexican section hands were tried out in the Nevada desert last week. The Mexicans were deemed unsatisfactory because they would drop their tools and rest the instant the "boss" got far enough away so that he could not hit them with a shovel handle.

With the Indians on the job, however, the work went along just the same, boss or no boss.

Nevertheless the Mexicans are again on the pay roll and the Indians are taking their traditional ease.

After glowingly watching five days of splendid work by his Piute bucks the section boss left them the other day. Returning 24 hours later he found the suffragette members of the Piute tribe doing the work on the railroad, while the bucks were gathered in a poker game at one side of the track.

WILSON AND BRYAN TO CAN SPEECHES FOR FARMERS

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Secretary Bryan and Secretary Houston have agreed to "can" some speeches urging the farmers to stay in the country and raise cattle and oats and healthy children. President Wilson will be asked to talk into the phonograph also—he set the precedent when he made a record for the Indians. This is the scheme of A. P. Sandles, secretary of the Ohio State Board of Agriculture, who wants the records for delivery at various farmers' institutes

BORUP PARTY TO HUNT NEW LAND IN ARCTIC SEAS

Daring Explorers Headed by Donald McMillan to Remain Two Years in Cracker Land.

Special Cable to The American.

SYDNEY, N. S., July 19.—When the little whaler Diana left this port for Flagler Bay, with the Borup Memorial Expedition to Crocker Land on board, the exploration party bade farewell to the haunts of the white man for two years.

The next stop of the hardy vessel will be Etah, the Eskimo colony, where a party of natives will be taken on board, and the ship will then proceed into the Kane Basin and headquarters will be established in the westerly end of the basin at what is known as Flagler Bay. Here the supplies will be unloaded and winter quarters established. Should no mishap occur this work should be accomplished some time in August or September, when the Diana will return to this port, leaving the small band of intrepid explorers and their Eskimo friends and companions on their own resources.

Will Explore Unknown Land.

The chief object of the expedition is to explore an unknown land or chain of islands first sighted by Peary in 1906. Again in 1908 Peary had another view of this land, but was unable to set foot upon it. So far as is known, no man, at least no white man, has ever visited this mysterious place.

Haul out your latest map of the Arctic regions. In about longitude 75, latitude 79, you will find the Kane Basin and Flagler Bay, the winter quarters of the party. Trace your way along the 79th degree of latitude through the water passage which separates Ellsmere Land from Grinnell Land until you reach 86th longitude meridian.

Here turn north in the channel which separates Axel-Heigerg Land on the west, from King Oscar Land and Grant Land on the east, gradually pushing to the northwest until you reach the northernmost tip of Axel-Heigerg Land, known as Cape Thomas Hubbard, slightly above the 81st parallel and in longitude 93. This is really the jumping off place of North America. This is the point from which Peary saw Crocker Land in the distant northwest.

It is from this point that the present expedition will set out for the unexplored region.

May Be Huge Continent.

Crocker Land may be just a few islands or it may be a huge Arctic continent. That is what Dr. Donald MacMillan and his party are going to find out. The work of establishing supply stations between Flagler Bay and Cape Hubbard is expected to be finished by February of next year. With a large base of supplies at the cape, the little party will set out across the frozen ice to Crocker Land, 100 miles away.

Once there geological and botanical specimens will be obtained, the coast line of the land will be surveyed and every scientific fact about the land will be obtained so that when the party returns we shall know for a certainty what Crocker Land really is.

With the summer of 1914 will come the breaking up of the ice in the sea between Crocker Land and Cape Hubbard. This means that in all probability the party will be compelled to remain in this barren region and wait for the winter to freeze the ice and afford them a passageway to their base of supplies. This is where the dangerous part of the expedition comes in.

Starvation Big Danger.

Will these men be able to subsist in this region for several months on the meager supplies they can carry with them and the game they may find there? The tragedies of the Arctics may be summed up in the one word "starvation." Everything depends upon supplies, without them the party is doomed to one of the most horrible deaths ever suffered by mankind. The pains of hunger, the freezing of the body when the blood is no longer able to supply the necessary warmth, the knowledge that there is absolutely no hope, the thoughts of the loved ones waiting for the return, these and many more sufferings which we are unable to realize or imagine fall to the lot of the members of an Arctic party without provisions.

The possibility of such a catastrophe befalling his party was mentioned to Dr. Donald MacMillan before he sailed from this port. He turned his clear eyes to his questioner and in the firm tones of a man who has implicit faith in his own ability said: "But we won't fail. The equipment we have, the experience of the Eskimos which we will take with us, many of whom were with Peary on his successful Polar expedition, the trained dogs and the determination to succeed will bring us back safely."

And anyone who knows this young man, imbued with the spirit of adventure and a love for the frozen north, can not doubt that he will succeed. Such men as Anthony Fiala, Sir Ernest Shackleton and Robert E. Peary have the utmost faith in MacMillan to accomplish any task to which he turns.

Would you have a slim, youthful figure? Though no longer young, it may be yours.

ATLANTA

FOR MILADY'S WARDROBE

By MME. HAUTE MONDE.

THE newest shirts to wear with the eponge skirts are those in pique. The new pique is only a distant relative to the stiff pique of other years, as it is delightfully soft and supple. The shirt is masculine in cut, with the exception of the neck, which is invariably finished by one of the becoming rolling collars which owe their origin to the days of Marie Stuart. The correct finishing touches are added when a sash of plaid ribbon and a cravat to match are adjusted. No matter how severe the skirt and shirtwaist may be, the sash is sure to give the feminine touch.

* * *

The all-black hat is the smart headgear of the hour, regardless of the shape, and it is a practical choice for the beach. A black hat does not look quite as summery or light as an all-white hat, but the sun can not damage it as it can one of colored straw, or even one of the natural tone straw, which may become actually sunburnt. There is a fad for trimming some of the black hats with blue ribbon bows, and a few of the bolder spirits among the fashion leaders are appearing in brown straw hats. When the latter are worn with brown shoes and stockings and a sash of brown moire or tulle, the effect is really artistic.

* * *

Separate skirts of cotton eponge have had a tremendous sale, and many of the well-dressed girls at Newport and Tuxedo are wearing them to the exclusion of linen or the durable cotton corduroy, which is becoming very common these days. The two-piece model preserves the straight, narrow silhouette, but does not launder as well as the gored skirt, which, when properly cut, should not sag after washing. These skirts button over the left hip and are slightly gathered into a belt in the back, which fastens with a buckle.

* * *

White serge, while not so serviceable for rough usage as tub stuffs or mixed tweeds, is altogether charming for outing wear provided one can keep it clean, and there are pretty ready-made suits, one-piece frocks and separate skirts of white serge offered at prices so reasonable that it does not seem extravagant to have two or three things of the kind, and so be able to spare one easily during its trip to the cleaners.

* * *

All petticoats are as thin and soft as possible, without being actually transparent—unless the wearer stands in a strong sunlight. Then sometimes the effect is rather startling. The petticoat now is exquisitely fitted, and is as narrow as possible, having a flounce of fine machine embroidery at the foot. Unless intended for wear with a sheer frock, the petticoat does not reach below the top of the buttoned boot.

* * *

Flesh-tinted linings in yokes have become such a frenzy with feminine folk that the craze has spread even to lingerie. The latest nightgown is of thin batiste, with a lace yoke lined with flesh-tinted net. This yoke reaches to below the arms, and, instead of being attached to the gown under a ribbon beading, a garland of tiny, pale pink roses covers the seam. The short lace sleeves are also looped up with pink silk roses.

* * *

Sweaters show more variety than they once did. One may have them any length from hip length to full length and in many shapes. The Bulgarian lines are also in evidence among the new sweaters this season, the wide belt being usually of some contrasting color with cuffs and collar to match.

* * *

Jet ornaments are popular on light summer frocks. The lighter the frock the heavier the ornament. One, made of seven octagonal pieces of cut jet, the center one two inches across and the end ones an inch across—set in a row—is used to mark the high front waistline of a sheer batiste embroidered afternoon gown. The ornament extends well round a quarter of even the fashionable waist.

* * *

So far this season one has not seen any of the light-colored silks and satins used for suits or one-piece frocks for general wear. When a woman wears a light or bright pink gown it is of muslin or eponge or French voile. Both silk and satin are found in navy blue, chocolate brown, and, especially, in beige; the latter, like tan, is being widely used with black trimming and is immensely attractive. Its neutrality of tone allows various dashes of color to be used against it.

* * *

The peplum is still here. In a dainty white lingerie blouse showing a straight, gatherless peplum eight or ten inches long, there is an interesting belt arrangement. Two sections of the belt are made of mull, like the blouse, and these two sections band the waist at the sides. The belt in front and back is made of dark blue satin ribbon, folded narrow like the mull belt. On each end of each of the ribbon bands is a big white pearl button, and the mull sections of the belt button over the ribbon on these buttons.

* * *

Bead trimming, apparently, is not going out of fashion. A recently shown serge coat has a short, loose coat, the raw edge of which is banded with bright blue beads—the serge is navy—embroidered in a straggling design a couple of inches wide. The neck edge of the coat and the sleeves, too, showed the same banding.

* * *

The smart thing just now is the dying flower droop, the collapse of the whole figure which seems the result of mental fatigue, but which is in reality the result of a carefully thought out mannerism introduced for the purpose of advertisement by a famous Parisian actress. This charming woman is possessed of what the novelists call a willowy form. She is tall, exceedingly slender, extraordinarily graceful

Fashions Shown at Longchamps and Other French Race Courses Last Word in Sensations.

An old, old song remarked, "They do such things and they say such things—on the Bowery." But the modern place for doing and saying "such" things in Paris—and from the indications of these pictures snapped at the races at Longchamps, just outside of "Gay Paree," they are wearing such things as our giddiest Atlantan would scarcely venture on home soil.

In the one case a modestly flowered silk skirt with wee buds borrowed from the old chintz patterns is topped by a "cubist" coat of very spherical lines! Pale gray brocade flowered in great purple irises is seamed down the back that there may be fullness enough to shor from two cords at the top, and to finish with four cord shirrings at the bottom, and still to fasten kimono fashion over the shoulders. A hat of duchess lace banded in white moire and decked with a great bush of black aigrettes finishes the costume.

The other fair Parisienne carries a parasol of white broderie Anglaise inset with rare venise lace and with a three-inch edge of black velvet. The black and white color scheme continues in the shoes, which have patent leather vamps and instep strappings of white suede. And the gown itself is a creation of shadow and venise and duchess laces with net and point d'esprit and black beads for further garniture! The gown has the new cross front drapery that is suggestive of a surplice when found on a waist, but brings to mind nothing so much as harem trousers when found on the skirt. The only things of simplicity in this costume are the old-fashioned mitts that cover the arms and the big full-blown rosette thrust into the girdle.

Violent color contrasts are tolerated and therefore one sees a purple ruff and cape over a gown of black satin which has a black tulle top; over while lace gowns there will be a ruff and cape of raspberry red tulle.

Where are the plain shoes of to-day going? There are not many of them, to be sure, but the new shoes which are coming in from day to day put the few plain ones that are left to shame. For the new ones show much slashing and cutting and gilding and painting. One pair of slippers is made of green, silver and white, and the kid from toe to heel is slashed away leaving openings shaped like crescents separated by the merest slivers of kid. Another slipper, with a French heel, is made to be worn without stockings. It, too, is made of painted and gilded kid, and has a strap to go between the great toe and the one next to it which buckles to a strap crossing the instep.

Zinnias have come into great popularity this summer. Their popularity began, in fact, last winter, when Futurist designs and colors first came in. There is a stiffness and rigidity of form about zinnias that harmonizes with designs formed of cubes and triangles. And the bright, clear colors of this flower suggest those in the giddiest futurist silk. Hence the popularity of the zinnia for corsage bouquets, hat and frock trimmings in its artificial form, and for household and garden decoration in its real form.

The New "Picture Hat"

The picture hat is taking its revenge. All last winter and far into the spring of this year it was pushed into the background by pert little jam pots and caricatures of Indian turbans. The picture hat was out of favor. Those who continued to wear it were smiled at as out of date; dress experts asserted that we should not see a revival of the wide-brimmed hat for several seasons to come.

But those who really understand the fashions of Paris—more than that, who understand something of the ways of the Parisiennes—never doubted the early return of the big hat, weighed down with rich feathers or lovely flowers. Its coming might be delayed a little, but it was certain to arrive nevertheless. And it has arrived.

Once again there are seen genuine picture hats, large and small; such hats as might have graced the beauties depicted by the old masters.

This is essentially a lace year. Wide lace flounces are getting more and more fashionable. They will be in high favor for casino wear. These lace dresses, arranged in three or four tiers, are exceedingly becoming; more than that, they are full of artistic charm. Painters through all the ages have raved about supple draperies of lace or fragile gauze.

FRECKLE-FACE

Sun and Wind Bring Out Ugly Spots. How to Remove Easily.

Here's a chance, Miss Freckle-Face, to try a remedy for freckles with the guarantee of a reliable dealer that it will not cost you a penny unless it removes the freckles; while if it does give you a clear complexion the expense is trifling.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from Jacobs' Pharmacy and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the worst case.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine, as this is the prescription sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

MISS WILSON IS PLAIN 'JESSIE' IN KENSINGTON

Pennsylvania Folk, Whom Daughter of President Aided, Like White House Bride-to-Be.

PHILADELPHIA, July 19.—Kensington is living over again the three years that Miss Jessie Wilson, the President's second daughter, whose engagement to Francis Bowen Sayre, of Bethlehem, has just been announced, spent as a social worker in the mill district.

To Kensington she is just "Jessie," and "Jessie" she always will be, the girl who traveled up and down narrow streets on visits of mercy, who attended the sick beds of mothers and was a sister to the working girls and a pal of the short-trousered boys who gathered at the Lighthouse gymnasium.

Miss Wilson's work of social service at the Lighthouse, 152 West Lehigh avenue, brought her in close contact with the men, women and children of the mill sections, and to all of them she endeared herself by her modesty, her unassuming manner, her cordiality and sincerity. The life of the settlement she followed closely, spending five days a week in routine work and returning to her home in Princeton for the week-end.

Many a meal Jessie Wilson has eaten at the uncovered tables of the Lighthouse Restaurant with motormen and millworkers for her companions, never thinking herself a whit better than the people who surrounded her.

Roast beef, fried potatoes, tomato sauce, lemon pie, bread and butter, and coffee—why should a President's daughter want more? And she didn't want more. So when it was more convenient to at eat the restaurant than with Mr. and Mrs. R. Porter Bradford, the manager of the Lighthouse, with whom she resided, she ordered the menu chalked on the wall of the restaurant, "full roast dinner for 15 cents."

Miss Wilson has lately been associated with the National Board of the Young Women's Christian Association, and has been active in work for the betterment of factory girls.

San Francisco To Be Best Dressed City

"Greatest Decoration Scheme Ever Outlined" Is Promised for the Annual Portola Festival.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—The greatest decorative scheme ever outlined for any city, American or European, has been prepared for San Francisco during the Portola festival of October 22 to 25 next.

San Francisco will be the most beautifully dressed city and the best illuminated the world round.

Here is a list of the chief features of the decorations, for which estimates are to-day being received by the Portola festival committee:

Ten miles of greens, 100,000 flowers, 24 acres of flags, 50 tons of plaster for statues, colonnades, etc.; 40,000 electric bulbs, with 1,000,000 candlepower; 10,000 gallons of water for the big fountain in Union Square.

Scant Dress Barred From Communion

Pastor Assails Women Who Appear in Church Clad in "Yard of Nothing."

MERIDEN, CONN., July 19.—"To dress for attendance at the house of God in clothes suggesting a ballroom or a recreation pier is disgraceful, and hereafter women with slashed skirts, transparent waists, low-necked or short-sleeved gowns will be refused holy communion at St. Rose's Catholic Church," the Rev. James Conlin said to-night. "I have no objection," he continued, "to women appearing in church in the coolest manner consistent with decency, but when they appear in things that are only a wisp of cloth and a yard of nothing, I believe it is time for me to protest."

The Tango Arrives in Time To Stir Jaded Paris Nerves

By La Raconteuse.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 19.—Personally I am quite unable to understand why the tango's merits and demerits should continue to interest Parisians. But it is an undeniable fact that the Argentine nationale dance, which, by the way, is repudiated by the Argentine legation, still remains the subject of most heated discussions in the salons and everywhere.

The exotic dance was fortunate in arriving here at a time when we were practically at our wits' end for a new subject of conversation. Society found what it wanted the very moment the chief of police forbade the tango to be danced in public, and now tango has reached the heights of its popularity. It may even survive this dreadfully hot summer. It is discussed in society at the "fives" in the Bois, and "tout Paris" is at present divided into two hostile camps—for and against tango.

Tango at Senate Ball.

Since the tango, as I said, has been repudiated by the Argentine Embassy, we really do not know where the dance comes from, but we have adopted it, and the other evening I saw it danced most beautifully at a ball given by the President of the Senate in Luxembourg.

Our theatrical ladies find it far more interesting and plastic than either the Boston or the "grizzly hug," with no reminiscences of the "cake walk," of which they heartily tired.

Gabriel d'Annunzio, who was asked his opinion of the tango, replied with a smile: "Why, everybody tells me I dance it admirably, so, of course, I am delighted with it."

Madame Cassimir Perier sees absolutely nothing interesting the the tango, which has made no impression whatever on her, but Maurice Rostand, son of our great and immortal poet, finds tango incomparable, symbolizing "soft and gentle, perhaps a little sad, dreams." He emphatically declares that it must be danced only by young and beautiful partners who are in perfect harmony body and soul.

La Belle Otero Enthusiastic.

"LaBelle Otero" is enthusiastic about tango and tells me that in a revue soon to be performed she will dance it as Paris has never seen anything danced before. I am afraid it will be most shocking.

Princess Lucien Murat has startled us all by declaring: "I love tango above anything else in this world, and find it absolutely chaste when it is danced by a Spaniard or a South American. Frenchmen will never learn to dance it properly."

Mlle Cecile Sorel, of the "Comedie Francaise," says she does not know nor want to know the tango, "for there is only one kind of dance, that which is taught by Isadora Duncan, which arouses in my soul images of the highest beauty."

Andre deFouquieres says tango is a sad, melancholy dance which will never lastingly appeal to the lively, animated French people.

He thinks it should be limited to the stage. It can be danced very correctly; on the other hand it is liable not to be.

Its unsuitability for the drawing room comes also from the fact that it is not a gay and convivial dance and pretty like the Russian polka or the Polish polka. "I am a partisan of the old dances," says M. de Fouquieres, and at certain evening parties I have danced the Empire dances. One must have tradition, especially a nation like France, famous for her chivalry and politeness.

Country Club Clothes

Reception days at the country club and the yacht club bring out very distinguished costumes of the lingerie order, accompanied by picture hats loaded with roses, and parasols selected to match sashes. Such frocks this year are almost entirely of fine lace and machine embroidery, with knowing touches in the way of sashes and little tulle bows at the neck and girdle. Airy black tulle bows with sheer white frocks are extremely smart, and with this white and black combination is carried a parasol of decided hue, like mustard yellow, Nell rose or saxe blue. Buttoned white oxfords are much fancied with white frocks of an airy character, though buttoned boots of buckskin are liked best with yachting costumes of a tailored nature.

WOMAN JURORS SCORN STYLE OF SMART LAWYER

Beau Brummel Clothes and Bachelor Button of Barrister Fail to Win His Cause.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Personal pulchritude and unusually smart habiliments, heightened by a bachelor's button and an ingratiating manner, failed to win for Assistant District Attorney Maxwell McNutt, in his appeal to the jury of women which tried Mrs. Bertha J. Williams on an extortion charge to-day. After deliberating one hour and 55 minutes, the jury, the first in the history of the world composed of women to hear a felony case, brought in a verdict of acquittal.

"Of course she said she did what she did, but we didn't think when she said she did it, she meant she had meant to do it," said one of the jurywomen.

Hence, Mrs. Williams, attired in a fetching Milan hat and a neat white serge tailored suit, much scrutinized by the jurywomen, made discreet osculatory advances to her benefactors, and the incident was closed.

Mrs. Annette Robinson, also armored in attractive feminine fixings, was the complaining witness in the case. She accused Mrs. Williams of having written her a letter April 8, attempting to extort $150 in return for the delivery of a trunk said to have contained certain evidence which, according to the letter, would have embarrassed Mrs. Robinson, had it fallen into the hands of the police.

(Experiences with the New Instinctive Playing. No. 8 of series.)

"I RAISED merry riot in my house last night. I had the whole place going: but I didn't care. I was having the time of my life!

"I was near Mary's new Virtuolo Player Piano, and I thought I'd try it out. So I put in a roll marked 'Dixie,' while I was peeking around at the door, and that old song must have gone to my head. Before I knew it I was crashing it out for all I was worth—

"'Way down south in the land of cotton.'

"I closed my eyes, touched the 'soft and strong' Acsolo buttons,' and I put regular smash and ginger into that music.

"Why I seemed to be right back in those thrilling days of '61 again—when multitudes went wild over that great old song—when hearts beat like trip-hammers and throats sang themselves hoarse with its stirring rhythm.

"Well, Mary peeked in—and stayed. Then Mary's young man; and then some of the neighbors came along, too, and all joined in—yelling and singing and capering like mad!

"Say—my 'music instinct' is great, when I can play 'Dixie' like that!"

SUNDAY AMERICAN'S SPECIAL CABLE LETTERS RECEIVED FROM ALL THE GREAT CAPITALS OF EUROPE

ASQUITH WILL STAY PREMIER DESPITE TORIES

Reports of Prime Minister Withdrawing To Go on Bench All Emenate From Opposition.

By PHILIP EVERETT.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Seldom, if ever, has the air here been as full of political rumors as during the last few weeks—a fact which seems to show that the heat of the summer has played havoc with the brains of our conservative editors and politicians, for all the rumors invariably may be traced back to the camp of the Opposition.

The fall and collapse of the present Government was confidently predicted as destined to take place long ago, and when the prophecy was not fulfilled, the political gossips began to talk of all the important changes that were to take place in the Cabinet.

Asquith to Appoint Isaacs.

The most sensational of these predictions was that Mr. Asquith, tired with the burdens and responsibilities of his office, would resign after appointing himself Lord Chief Justice to succeed Lord Alverstone, who, as everybody knows, will never resume his seat on the bench.

A successor will have to be found, but as the long court vacation is at hand, no new Lord Chief Justice will have to be nominated until October, and then, no matter how often the Tory press has predicted that Mr. Asquith would never dare do, he will nominate Sir Rufus Isaacs for the vacant position.

And no one of any importance will say a word against the appointment, for in all England there is no man more fit to hold this high office than the present Attorney General. In a month or two all the artificial indignation stirred up by the Marconi affair will have completely disappeared.

Premier to Keep Post.

I can assure my readers, on the very best authority, that Mr. Asquith has not the slightest intention of leaving the political arena now, and everybody who knows him knows that this is so.

The statesman who, in face of unexampled difficulties, passed the Parliament act is not going to leave his post until the fruits of that great measure are garnered.

A distinguished colleague of Mr. Asquith's in the present Cabinet said a few weeks ago: "Loyalty is one of the brightest jewels in the crown of the Prime Minister's character." That loyalty will not be wanting to the Liberal party at this juncture in its fortunes. There is also a loyalty that a man owes to himself, and Mr. Asquith must feel that it is incumbent on him to see that the machine which he fashioned in the Parliament act is capable of doing its work.

London Women Take 'Railwaymen' Jobs

Great Western Road Is Making Experiment of Employing Them as Car Cleaners.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—The Great Western Railway Company is making the novel experiment of employing women as "railwaymen," a number of women being engaged as carriage cleaners in the London district.

The innovation is strongly resented by the members of the National Union of Railwaymen, who fear that this is merely the first move in a general attempt to substitute female for male labor.

Protest meetings are being organized and the head office of the National Union of Railwaymen has been asked to take the matter up.

Women are largely employed as railway coach cleaners on the Continent.

"GETS-IT" for Corns, and Away They Go!

You'll say, "It does beat all how quick 'GETS-IT' got rid of that corn. It's almost magic!" "GETS-IT" gets

"Never Could Do This Before. 'GETS-IT' Made Every Corn Vanish Like Magic."

every corn, every time, as sure as the sun rises. It takes about two seconds to apply it. Corn pains stop, you forget the corn, the corn shrivels up, and it's gone! Ever try anything like that? You never did. There's no more fussing with plasters that press on the corn, no more salves that take off the surrounding flesh, no more bandages. No more knives, files or razors that make corns grow, and cause danger of blood poison. "GETS-IT" is equally harmless to healthy or irritated flesh. It "gets" every corn, wart, callous and bunion you've got.

"GETS-IT" is sold at all druggists at 25 cents a bottle, or sent on receipt of price by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago. Sold in Atlanta by Jacobs' Pharmacy Company, Elkin Drug Co., Coursey & Munn, Gunter-Watkins Drug Company, E. H. Cone, Inc., Tipton & Co.

Earl's Money to Buy Mother Home

Markham Girl to Spend Heart Balm

THE most recent photograph of Daisy Markham, the English actress, and a remarkable photograph of a clerk at work in the Bank of England, weighing out the $250,000 which the Marquis of Northampton paid to Miss Markham to settle her breach of promise suit.

Intends To Provide Her Parent With Handsome Income From Breach of Promise Suit.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Lovely Miss Daisy Markham declares she will expend much of the $250,000 the young Marquis of Northampton, former Earl of Compton, paid to her to settle the breach of promise suit in buying a residence for her mother, and in providing an income for her.

A quarter of a million is the largest sum ever paid in England in such a suit, but the Marquis of Northampton inherited a great fortune at his father's death, and one of the largest pieces of property in London owned by any one proprietor.

Well Known in America.

Miss Markham is well known in New York, where she was last seen with the Wyndham Company, as Elaine Shrimpton in "The Case of Rebellious Susan." She averred in bringing the suit that on April 21, 1912, the then Lord Compton verbally promised to marry her, and on October 12, 1912, refused to keep his promise.

Miss Markham wrote to Lord Compton after he broke off their engagement. She addressed him as "Dearest Darling Bim," and after pleading against his decision, said:

I would rather have you, Bim, dear, and live in a little cottage than have all your wealth and estates and live without you.

He replied, telling his love and despair. Miss Markham's lawyers regarded this letter as their most effective weapon in the suit. Here are some expressions in it:

I might just write you a line, as I am feeling so miserable.

I am going to ask you to believe I have always and do at the present moment love and respect you more than anyone in the world, and that you are absolutely my ideal of perfect womanhood.

Ways of World Hard.

But, Daisy, the ways of the world are hard, and I want you to believe that what I am now doing I am doing from a sense of duty, genuinely believing it to be the best for both of us.

Daisy, you don't know how those so-called ladies (of his own rank) would treat you, and I really could not bear to see you suffering it. And with your sweet, sensitive nature it would be torture to you. Oh, if only I could escape from my position! BIM.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 19.—Madame Bernhardt, who spends her summer holidays at her home at Belle Isle, on the coast of the Bay of Biscay, has become very fond of the game of dominoes and usually plays after luncheon and after dinner. Although she is a poor player, she enjoys the game and is keenly disappointed when she loses.

Guests at Belle Isle have formed the habit of gracefully losing to the Divine Sarah, thus pleasing her vanity.

Her afternoons are spent in her studio, where she is modeling her tomb, which is to be placed on Belle Isle as a landmark for sailors.

GERMANY MAD TO BEAT U.S. IN 1916 OLYMPIC

Thousands of Young Men Are Striving For Places on Team to Represent Empire.

By STEVEN BURNETT.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, July 19.—Americans, who after their triumph in Stockholm last year may think that they will only have to come over here to repeat the same thing at the Berlin Olympic games in 1916 had better look to their laurels in time, for all Germany is possessed by a craze for sport.

All over the country thousands and thousands of young men are patiently drilling almost every day in all the branches of sport and from among all these the most promising athletes will be chosen a year from January next and during the following fifteen months up to the very time of the great international contest all the young men selected will be absolutely in the hands of autocratic trainers who will bring them as close as possible to absolute perfection. The expenses of this long training will willingly be borne by enthusiastic lovers of sports all over the country.

Craze for Sport Increases.

To a certain extent Germany has always been a sport-loving country. Its "turnvereins," which are so well known in every city in America, where a German colony exists, are older than any similar associations in Europe, but of late the craze for sports has reached proportions unknown in any other country in the world.

This renaissance of athletics is in the first place due to the Kaiser personally who has encouraged sport from the day of his accession and his pride was certainly justified when he said in his speech at a regatta the other day that there are more than 50,000 oarsmen in Germany belonging to more rowing clubs than in all the rest of Europe together.

It is indeed true that there is a colossal development of sport in Germany.

Polo Gains Popularity.

Games which never before had a foothold are springing into widespread popularity. Polo is a case in point. This sport is officially prohibited in the army by order of the Emperor, who still thinks that the physical dangers involved for officers are wholly out of proportion to any benefits to be derived.

Yet a group of gentlemen riders and other enthusiasts have just laid out at the new "garden city" of Frohnau, to the northeast of Berlin, a polo field and clubhouse, with a series of tennis courts, golf links, rifle and archery ranges, croquet grounds and everything else conducive to the cultivation of outdoor life.

Few 'Gillies' Left On the Scotch Moors

Rich Americans Who Rent Highland "Shooting Boxes" Can't Find Guides to Trace Game.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Because of the recent boom in trade, rich manufacturers in the Midlands and in the North are tumbling over each other to obtain the best fishings and shootings in Scotland for the fall. As a rule, the best are snapped up by wealthy Americans, but the latter are much troubled by a great dearth of "gillies," as the keepers are called.

Hundreds of young "gillies" have emigrated to Canada; soon there will be none, and the millionaires will have to find their way alone about the deer forests and grouse moors.

For the season to date the number of Scotchmen who have gone to Canada is 24,500, but by the end of the season it will be well over 30,000.

LIGHT ON COCAS TREASURE SHED BY TAR'S WIDOW

Irishwoman Declares usband Was Mate of Ship Which Carried Gold to Hiding Place.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Mrs. Bridget McGowan, a widow living in the West of Ireland, has written to a London newspaper that her husband was third officer of the Peruvian bark Mary Pio (Holy Mary), which conveyed the "Cocos Island treasure" from Lima to Cocos Island in 1855, in order to prevent it from falling into the hands of Chilean invaders.

This is the first time in the voluminous literature of the Cocos treasure question that some person has appeared who claims to have been acquainted personally with any member of the crew of the treasure ship. It also indicates an entirely new history of the treasure.

The accepted story of all the treasure hunters hitherto has been that the incident took place in 1825, when the Spanish colonies revolted from the mother country, and the Spanish loyalists of Lima, in order to save their valuables from the invading Peruvian patriots, chartered a British ship called the Mary Deer to remove the treasure to Cocos Island.

Mrs. McGowan declares that the Mary Pio, with a crew of 36, conveyed the treasure to Cocos Island and buried it in four caches.

The ship was wrecked in a hurricane off Cocos, and only three of the crew reached the shore.

One was the writer's husband; the other two, an Englishman and a Welshman, died afterward on the island from eating poisonous berries.

The third mate survived and retained a map of the location of the four caches, in which five tons of gold were hidden.

His widow says that 30 years ago he gave the map to a man who is still living. She adds that an exact copy of that map is still extant and is well preserved.

City of Paris Makes Money on Art Show

"Municipal Operation" of Exhibition Is Tried in New Field With Great Success.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 19.—The city fathers have just concluded an interesting and very successful experiment in "municipal operation." The city fathers took it into their heads to give the people an artistic treat and organized an exhibition of the works of David, the celebrated artist.

The exhibition lasted 53 days and was a great success, not only artistically, but also from a financial viewpoint.

The city of Paris made money out of it, although 25,000 persons were admitted free every Sunday. On all other days an admission fee of 20 cents was charged. So numerous were the visitors that a handsome sum remains in the hands of the Municipal Council after paying all expenses.

PARIS, July 19.—Henri Robert has been elected leader of the Paris Bar. He has freed more criminals than any lawyer living, and made his fame in the Dreyfus case. He is a Parisian of Parisians, having been born here 50 years ago.

Of all the case he has won, he says, his defense of Lady Macbeth has given him most pleasure. At a literary entertainment he undertook that defense and, to the minds of the listeners, proved that historical murderess to be innocent.

Balfour's Book in Big Demand in Britain

Applicants for Works of Former Premier at Library Invariably Told They Are "Out."

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—The books of Arthur Balfour, former Prime Minister, are among the most widely read in London. At the annual general meeting of the London Library, over which Mr. Balfour presided, the Hon. Evan Charteris said that he had inquired at the library on numerous occasions for books written by Mr. Balfour, and was constantly told that they were "out." After waiting for some time and still being unable to secure the books at the library, he purchased a set for himself and recommended that another set be purchased for use in the library, as many others had had his experience in being told that the books were out.

Marvelous Star of Ice Ballet Gives Berlin Thrills

By ALAN DALE.

Special Correspondence of The Sunday American.

BERLIN, July 19.—If you can imagine Pavlova with all her wiles, witcheries and Baccahanalian abandon, leaping, bounding, pirouetting and rotating on ice skates, you may have some faint idea of the amazing and beautiful Charlotte Oelschlager—known in Berlin as "Little Charlotte"—whom I saw last night in the finest entertainment I've viewed on this side of the pond—the ice ballet by Leo Barteuschek, at the Admiral's Palast.

Everything that an agile and almost supernaturally graceful Terpsichorean artist can do with daintily slippered feet little Charlotte does with tiny, glittering ice skates on her diminutive tootsies. The effect of it is positively bewildering. The smooth, gliding and velvety sensation of the ice sheet is absolutely unlike anything that the ordinary dancer has to offer, and the astounding versatility of the skaterine—who can do more on the knives of skates than Pavlova can do without them (and I make that statement unhesitatingly)—compels a rapt attention.

Little Charlotte is an awfully pretty girl.

She has long, blonde, un-wiggy hair, that in the dazzling light shed upon the huge ice arena of the Admiral's Palast, looks like spun silk; she owns a fascinating smile quite unlike the smirk that won't come off, so popular with the average dancing lady, and she has youth, effervescence and a sort of untrammeled gayety of manner that are positively irresistible. She is thin, supple, lissome and—perfectly astonishing. I take off my hat to her.

She is the finest artist of her kind that I have seen, and Berlin loves her. After viewing the work last night, I had the cozy, comfortable, well-satisfied sensation that an astonishing feat always induces. I felt glad that I had come to Berlin, for neither in Paris nor in London is there anything faintly to compare with the fascination of little Charlotte. If her nationality were otherwise, I should glory in calling her little Charlotte russe!

She appeared in the big ice ballet called "Flirtation in St. Moritz." It takes place on the large, glassy sheet of ice at the Admiral's Palast, with scenic effects at one end. It is in three acts with a story.

The entire cast of nine principals and a huge "chorus" of servants, geishas, Japanese dancers and supernumeraries are all on skates! Their evolutions at first amaze you, then, as you grow accustomed to them, they delight you and arouse a sort of titillating enthusiasm.

There are three acts of this ice-pageant, one called "Winter Sport at St. Moritz," the second "A Soiree in a Hotel de Luxe" and the third a "Japanese Festival." In the second, all the skaters and skating principals wear gorgeous evening gowns, as handsome as anything even America could desire, and in the Japanese scene they are all kimonoed and Japanesed in the most bewildering riot of colors. Dazzling calcium is shed over the proceedings, and—well, it is a sensation.

The best of it all is that you are dining at the Admiral's Palast. All around the magnificent and imposing ice field are tables where all the Berlinese dine and drink their beloved beer. It is not elaborately expensive, as such a thing would be in America. You pay your 50 or 60 cents for a seat, and your dinner is less costly than it would be at an ordinary restaurant.

And, believe me, it is in this moderation, this ungrasping catering to the multitude, that the success of such a giant scheme as the Admiral's Palast lies.

But the ice ballet of itself is a marvel. In addition to little Charlotte, who danced with a sort of Mordkin, called Max Feist—on skates—there was the gorgeous Dallerup, whose pyrotechnical skating made one dizzy. And there was Harry Paulsen. There were episodes on skis that was delightful; there were humorous incidents; there were Marcelines and big bears, and food not only for adults but for children. Not once did "Flirtation in St. Moritz" drag. The unexpected was always happening. One felt like the song that chirps "What Is Coming, Who Shall Say?" The whole thing was a joy.

One dines slowly and epicureanly in the German style. There is no gulping of food or rushing of drink. One takes one's time, sitting round that gorgeous ice field, which is cool and delicious, and quite unlike the feverish atmosphere one finds in most crowded resorts. All along the balcony were hundreds of diners in small reserved private boxes, but all the dining and wining (or beer-ing) never once interfered with this exultant ice ballet.

That gripped one, and dinner was really nothing more than a gastronomic accompaniment. Imagine the Madison Square Garden filled with people dining around its arena, and you may get some faint idea of the imposing Admiral's Palast.

But "Little Charlotte" was the benign star of it all, and throughout there wasn't one solitary note of ragtime! Not one!!

English Crowded Out Of 'Dear Old London'

Everything In British Capital Now Is American, Even Language Spoken at Big Hotels.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—London has been so full of Americans this season that there was no longer room for Britishers, and many moved with their baggage to the contiguous islands, Guernsey, Jeddo and Herne. The shopkeepers still stayed on, however.

Parisian methods in the hotels are being ousted to give place to American dishes. Colored and alluring ads are tempting "our dear American friends" to buy and announcements are put up that "American is spoken here."

The English, in fact, are commencing to speak "American" quite intelligibly. This is being helped by the incursion of American dishes into the cuisine of the great hotels, which are now seeking to follow New York models.

London Women Are Now Smoking Cigars

Some of Fashionable Devotees of Nicotine Are Even Developing Fondness for Pipe.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—When woman soothes her nerves now with tobacco it is not a cigarette she chooses, but a cigar, if she wants to appear quite up to date. The majority of women nowadays smoke cigarettes, but the ultra modern members of the fair sex are taking to cigars—even pipes.

The pipe chosen especially for women is a little light wooden pipe called the "Helique," which costs $1.

Pipes, however, are not so much "the vogue" at present as the cigar, and the favorite cigar which women smoke, it seems, is the La Fiorda Cuba. This is a long, thin cigar, which costs 50 cents in London.

CLOCK AT STATION HAS NEW NUMBERS, 13 TO 24

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 19.—The clock in the facade of St. Lazare Station is to be the first in Paris to have the newly adopted official numerals of 13 to 24 for the hours after noon.

From 1 a. m. to 12 the figures 1 to 12 will appear on the dial. As noon strikes they will disappear and by an automatic arrangement the figures 12 to 24 will take their places.

Gamblers Hide in Convent During Raid

Men and Women In Evening Clothes Seen in Yard of Cloister by French Officers.

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, July 19.—When the police raided a suspected gambling den patronized by society folk, they found no one in the house after the doors had been broken down, but about 40 men and women in evening clothes were seen in hasty flight in the garden.

The gamblers scaled the garden wall and escaped into the grounds of the Sacred Heart Convent. Most of the fugitives made their way to the street, but a dozen of the ladies, it is said, remained in hiding in the garden of the convent throughout the night, departing quietly the next morning.

Kaiser Ends Feud With Lippe Family

Emperor of Germany In Bending Mood Patches Up Old Quarrel With Prince Frederick IV.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, July 19.—The Kaiser is a strong man, noted for his friendships as for his enmities, and always a better man to deal with than to fight with, but he is just now in a bending mood.

Having patched up the old-time feud with the Cumberland family and made "a happy union" for his beloved daughter, he has magnanimously ended his feud of fifteen years with the ruling family of Lippe, one of the little principalities with which the German Empire is studded. He has recognized Prince Frederick IV of Lippe.

STRANGE JEWEL FROM EGYPT IS IN ENGLISH HOME

Excavation Party in Tomb Unearths Pharaoh Toy and Its Wonderful History.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—A jewel with a wonderful history was the feature of the Royal Society's conversazione at Burlington House recently.

It is of carnelian, lapis lazuli and turquoise and was made by order of the Pharaoh of Upper Egypt 3,400 years before the birth of Christ.

The Pharoah gave it to one of his court favorites, and when the latter died it was buried with him in his magnificent tomb at Gerzeh, some forty miles away from modern Cairo. A body-snatcher of ancient Egypt broke open the tomb of the dead favorite of Pharaoh.

For once, poetic justice—an institution which flourished even in Egypt—came into operation. The heavy slabs that formed the roof of the tomb fell on the thief and crushed him flat.

Then the wind came, and with it the sand; and year by year the ruined tomb was buried deeper, so that it lay for centuries hidden in the desert.

Last March, Professor Flinders Petrie and his excavating party found it. The fallen roof and the crushed body of the thief told their own tale, and the excavators were encouraged to look for what they knew the thief had not been able to take away with him. And so at last they found the beautiful jewel at which a court artificer had wrought, perhaps for years, 50 centuries ago. It was inspected here with deep curiosity.

Deadly Gas Gun Is Refused by England

Inventor Makes Weapon Which Shoots Chemicals That Start Fire, Unextinguishable by Water.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Ernest Walsh, a young chemist of Hull, has invented a remarkable gas gun, which he has offered to the War Department.

His offer was refused without test or examination, and to-day he left for France to submit his invention on the invitation of the French authorities.

The gun, which represents his life's work, throws projectiles containing chemicals which set fire to anything they strike, the flames not being extinguishable by water.

PETRIFIED BODY OF GIANT OF PATAGONIA AUCTIONED

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 19.—A petrified man was sold by auction in Paris recently.

The man lived some thousands of years ago in Patagonia. He was about 8 feet 6 inches in height. Though he is now a stone statue, the body bears traces of deep wounds. It is supposed that the man was killed and that his body was slowly changed to stone by the action of water charged with lime salts.

Doctor's Boyish Face Reveals Skin Renewer

I heard the other day the story of the physician with so admirable a skin that all his women patients asked the secret. He told one, who generously told others, that knowing the remarkable absorbent property of ordinary mercolized wax, he concluded this substance would make an excellent complexion renewer and preserver. Knowing the wax could not harm the skin, he began using it after shaving. He soon observed that the old, withered, colorless cuticle was being gradually absorbed and replaced by younger, healthier skin. This was the simple secret of the silver-haired doctor with the boyish face.

The secret became public property. Now women everywhere use mercolized wax, applying it nights like cold cream, washing it off mornings—continuing until the complexion is entirely renovated. An ounce of this wax, procurable at any druggist's, will banish the worst complexion.

Another valuable rejuvenator used by this doctor was a wrinkle-remover and preventive in the form of a face bath, made by dissolving an ounce of saxolite in a half-pint witch hazel. This also has become famous. —Aurelia in Fashion Review.

Human System Poisons Itself

Otherwise Most of Us Would Live to Be Methuselahs.

Scientists say that almost every moment we are poisoning ourselves. Autotoxemia, they term it, or Self-Poisoning. Eliminate Autotoxemia, and we could live to be hundreds of years old. All food eaten leaves in the stomach some waste, unused particles. This waste ferments and generates uric acid, and when uric acid gets in the blood it poisons the system—self-poisoning. Constipation, indigestion, biliousness, dyspepsia, sick headache, languidness and a weakened physical condition all result from self-poisoning.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT flushes stomach and intestines, dissolves the uric acid which has accumulated and expels it with the fermenting waste.

Take JACOBS' LIVER SALT in the morning before breakfast. You will do a better day's work, and live longer.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is better than calomel for constipation and biliousness. Acts quickly and more thoroughly, requiring no cleansing after-dose of oil; causes no after-danger of salivation; never gripes or nauseates. It effervesces agreeably. No other liver tonic has the same mild, natural flushing action, though many imitations (in name) are offered. Insist that your druggist supply the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. If he can not, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, 25c, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

Zim Says: 'Good Batter Slams Anything Pitched'

POSITION AT PLATE BIG FACTOR IN HITTING

Getting "All Set" Not Only Narrows "Swing" but Increases Risk of Being "Beaned."

HERE'S the second of the articles by Henry (Heinie) Zimmerman on "How to Hit the Ball." You can't wait for the pitcher to put one over to your liking, says the great Cub batter, for if you do it will be an accident if you get it.

By HENRY ZIMMERMAN.

One of the questions which is being constantly hurled at me is, "Heine, what would you rather hit?"

Of course every batter has his favorite ball and almost every batter has his weakness.

I would rather hit a curve ball than anything else. I prefer it to a fast one, and it certainly gives me more pleasure to hit at a hook than it does to swipe at a slow one. If the old days when you could call for what you wanted were in vogue I would address the pitcher in this way:

"Mr. Pitcher, please curve it; let it come over the plate along about my waist on the inside corner of the plate. Then instruct your left fielder to play deep."

That's my favorite, but it is also my impression that the batter who is wise won't wait for his favorite. Because the moment the pitcher discovers what you like he feeds you the opposite. It's only by accident that you get what you like, and since all the pitchers know what I prefer I have no hesitancy in telling the public.

Doesn't Pay to Wait for Favorite Ball

I never could figure why a man who likes to hit and who wants to hit is so particular about the kind of a ball he swings at. It's my honest and candid opinion that more base hits are made off balls which would be called "balls" by the umpire than off those which cross the plate between the knees and the shoulders.

Wagner gets lots of base hits on wild pitches. They tell me that Lajoie in the American League makes a practice of getting doubles and triples on balls that are as high as his head.

It certainly has been my experience that I could hit safely almost anything I could touch. There's a reason for this, too. The position at the plate and the weight of the bat used has a lot to do with this.

They say that Wagner is awkward at the plate. His position may not be graceful, but it is one of the best in the league. If you will notice he simply lounges all over that plate. He is never set. The result is that he is prepared to hit anything.

Get "All Set," but Can't Hit the Ball

Contrast his position with that of some of the other fellows. They go up there, dig a hole for their right foot if they be right-hand hitters and get set. They are planted to take an awful wallop at the ball. But they are in no position to hit a fast curve, for instance.

They also are always taking the chance of being "beaned." That's true, for the reason that they are set, they are rigid, they can't get out of the way of a ball that breaks at the last moment and starts for their head.

Many a man has been hit by a pitched ball for the reason that he set himself to swing. The best way is to be up there lounging like Wagner. Then you are in position to step forward and meet the ball. You also are in position to swing at the fast breaking ones. You are running mighty little chance of being "beaned."

Speaking of the weaknesses of batters it's my opinion that Wagner has the most peculiar of any man in the game. It's no use to try to fool him on a curve. You can't. It's just as useless to try a fast one. He'll pound that, regardless of where it is pitched. He cares nothing for a spitter and a change of pace means nothing but a fattening of his batting average.

Ball That Fools Wagner.

Jimmy Archer tells me that when the pitcher must pitch to Wagner, when it is in the pinch, he signals for one square over the heart of the plate, with nothing but speed on it. Archer says that Wagner will do less with this than he will if you try to fool him, and Mordecai Brown used to do the same thing.

Since Wagner and Lajoie have been compared for years and years perhaps it would not be wrong for me to say here that Archer says that the two men are alike in their weaknesses and that Lajoie can do less with the ball which most batters like than he can with the hooks, the slow ones, the fast one with the hop. Archer knows, for the reason that he caught in the American League.

The size of the bat has a lot to do with it. I want one of medium size, say 40 ounces. I'm strong enough to swing the kind that Chief Meyers does. But I couldn't get as many hits. The way the pitchers curve them on you nowadays a man must have something in his hand that he can swing at the last instant and swing hard and true.

I wouldn't like to say that the average batter swings a club that is too heavy. But in my opinion any time that a bat feels the least bit heavy it is too heavy and should be discarded for a lighter one.

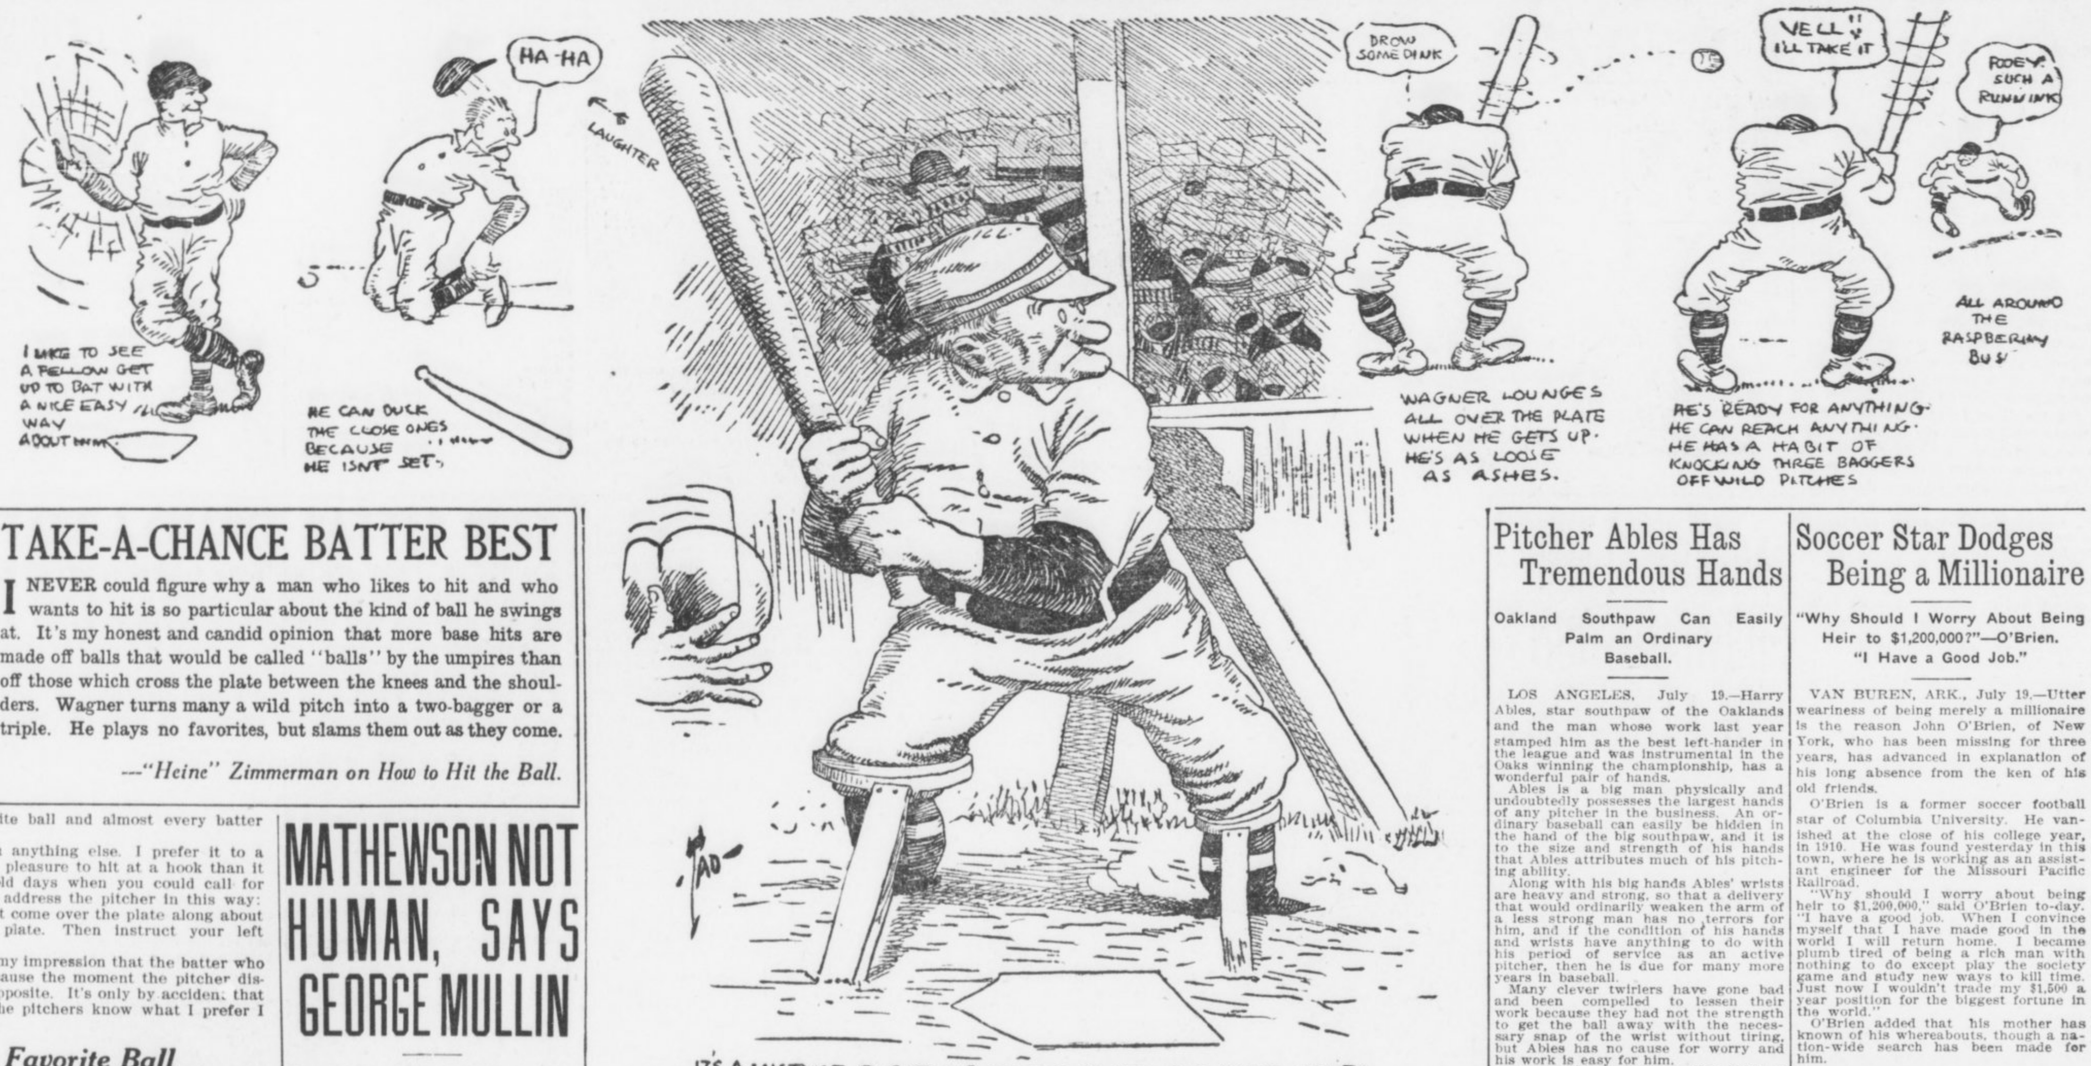
FINED, HE JOINS FEDERALS.

TERRE HAUTE, IND., July 19.—Outfielder Roy Keener was fined $50 by Manager Burke, of Fort Wayne, because he would not go into the box to finish a game. He jumped and joined the Indianapolis Federals.

ASHMORE IS MILLIKIN COACH.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL., July 19.—James N. Ashmore has been appointed professor of the athletic course at the James R. Millikin University for the coming year. Ashmore has been with the Millikin institution for several years and his reappointment gives general satisfaction to the student body.

TAD MAKES IT CLEAR THAT HEINE HAS RIGHT DOPE ON ART OF SLUGGING 'EM OUT



TAKE-A-CHANCE BATTER BEST

I NEVER could figure why a man who likes to hit and who wants to hit is so particular about the kind of ball he swings at. It's my honest and candid opinion that more base hits are made off balls that would be called "balls" by the umpires than off those which cross the plate between the knees and the shoulders. Wagner turns many a wild pitch into a two-bagger or a triple. He plays no favorites, but slams them out as they come.

MATHEWSON NOT HUMAN, SAYS GEORGE MULLIN

Says "Big Six" Will Never "Go Back" and Is the Wonder of Baseball.

NEW YORK, July 19.—The other afternoon I met George Mullin walking along Broadway, alone. It was a day or so before the announcement came that he had been released to Montreal in the International League. Mullin was deep in thought when I spied him ahead of me. He was lost so far that he jumped when I touched him on the shoulder.

"How goes it, George?" I asked.

"Sliding back by degrees," he said, with a half smile. "But I am working hard to make the slide as slow as possible. But," he went on, "I suppose it comes to all of us in time, excepting that fellow Mathewson—and he isn't human."

"Don't you think it will ever come to him?" was asked.

"Doesn't look like it. Why, that fellow is now the oldest pitcher in either league—that is, he has been at it longer. Still, here he is in his thirteenth year and leading all pitchers! What is his record?"

"He has won seventeen and lost five, I believe."

* * *

"THERE you are. Now, how does he do it? Four years ago some of the Cub players told me he was losing his stuff, but, somehow, he manages to keep winning.

"I'll tell you," said Mullin, "I believe he runs himself just like he does his automobile. He uses just enough gasoline to get in the lead, and when he strikes the down grade he shuts it off and coasts. I guess my trouble is that I used up too much gasoline before I thought of it."

* * *

THIS theory of Mullin's is borne out by the members of the Giant infield, who begin to tremble the minute Matty gets a good lead. Once in front, Bix Six puts the first ball over and lets the batters hit it where they may. Line drives shoot all around the diamond until men get on bases, and then the Old Master tightens up—turns on more gasoline.

"If you don't stop that, Matty," Grover Hartley said to the star pitcher the other day after a close game, "you are going to get some of those infielders killed." Matty didn't take very kindly to that suggestion, but the very next day Larry Doyle was knocked down by a line drive just after the Giants had a five-run lead on the Phillies, and Fletcher narrowly escaped having his leg shot off.

A. A. U. Bars Mixed Swimming Meets

Protests Entered Against Girls Being Allowed to Compete Against Men In Races.

NEW YORK, July 19.—James E. Sullivan, secretary-treasurer of the Amateur Athletic Union, and the chairman of the National Registration Committee, has sent a hot letter to E. C. Brennan, of the American Life Saving Society.

It was reported to the A. A. U. that Brennan was giving mixed swimming events, and that is something the A. A. U. officials will never countenance. They do not want to see the girls made "public characters," and they want to protect the young women and not to degrade them by competition against men in the same tank.

In this stand Sullivan is backed by the entire A. A. U. as well as the New York Board of Education, of which he is a member. If the girls and women are to have more extended competition than they have now, the A. A. U. men say they should have associations of their own for protection, that they should compete only among themselves, and not against boys or men.

SAYLOR TO BOX ON COAST; PLANS BOUTS WITH STARS

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., July 19.—In an effort to land his new protege, Millburn ("Young") Saylor, at the top of the lightweight heap, Ray Bronson is planning an early invasion of the Pacific coast.

Western promoters are dickering with Bronson for a bout on Labor Day between Saylor and Leach Cross, "Harlem Tommy" Murphy, Bud Anderson or Joe Rivers. Bronson says he is anxious to match with any one of the four.

In his last bouts Saylor knocked out "Battling" Kelly, a welterweight, in four rounds, then stopped "Battling" Terry, a Pittsburg welter, in three rounds.

OLDRING AND BENDER ARE BIG HELP TO ATHLETICS

PHILADELPHIA, PA., July 19—What a remarkable difference it makes in a ball player when he displays interest in his work and takes the proper care of himself is plainly demonstrated in the improvement Rube Oldring and "Chief" Bender of the Philadelphia Athletics, are showing this season over last. It is not a secret that neither of these players buckled down to real work last season.

Manager Mack found it necessary to suspend them both, and when they came into the fold this year it was under a contract which controls their conduct by means of having the amount they are to draw in salary fluctuate. The result is that both are delivering the goods in real shape this season.

CLABBY AND HICKS WILL MEET IN RETURN MATCH

DETROIT, MICH., July 19.—Freddie Hicks, the local middleweight, has been matched to meet Jimmy Clabby at Butte, August 3. Hicks has met the Hammond boxer, tackling him at his home town in a ten-round bout, and getting a sound lacing. This match will be over the same route.

LYNCH WILL MANAGE SPOKANE.

SEATTLE, July 19.—Mike Lynch left for Vancouver, B. C., last night to take the management of the Spokane Northwestern League club, which has been disorganized and playing badly. Lynch was released by Victoria for the purpose of strengthening Spokane, it being considered that the condition of Spokane was injuring the whole league. The Victoria team will still present a strong line-up.

'SMOKY JOE' IS ADJUDGED THE SLOWEST TWIRLER

THE Philadelphia Evening Telegraph has discovered the slowest pitchers in the world. Here is how it described a recent game in which they performed:

"Smoky Joe" Wood and "Waco Bill" Taff, little brothers of the box, can outpoint any tortoise that ever crawled for studied deliberation, for deliberate languor and for general sleepiness when in the performance of their duties.

This is not a slam at the usefulness and the worth of either twirler. Both "get there" just as did the turtle in the fable. But aeons and aeons pass between their departure and their arrival, and meanwhile suppers grow cold at home and wifey remembers that he never thought of ball games while he was courting her and that it's very funny, anyhow, that he should come home in the dusk every time he goes to the grounds.

Wood, however, has even Taff outclassed. During the ninth inning recently he averaged more than 40 seconds to every pitch. Any self-respecting moving picture machine would burn out its bearings before it could be run slow enough to catch him at work. There is a popular tradition in a Boston newspaper office that one camera man got an action picture of Wood, but this seems unlikely.

Wood combines his loitering with speed only excelled by Walter Johnson. He winds up like an old-fashioned watch, swinging his arms slowly. Watching him makes every one want to yawn. Then he untangles himself suddenly while the batter, who by this time has also the hookworm complaint, is nodding drowsily. Whish—goes a streak over the plate, whereupon Umpire Ferguson calls it a ball. If the whish thing goes a foot inside, outside, into the rubber plate or ten feet in the air, Ferguson impartially calls it a strike. The main thing is that the batter rarely meets the ball.

Assuming that the ball has gone somewhere near the catcher, this procedure is then enacted. The backstop snaps the ball to Wood, who has run up to within a few feet of the plate, and who is usually inquiring kindly whether Ferguson's astigmatism is congenial if acquired. J. Wood grabs the ball with his gloved hand in a rather petulant way and carries it tenderly back to the hill. Instead of stopping at the box, he ignores it entirely and wanders five or six yards behind it.

From this vantage point he looks at the catcher, critically, draining his head hither and yon. Perhaps something in the grandstand attracts his attention. Joe promptly develops great interest in it. Roused to a sense of duty by the acrid tones of the infielders, Wood finally begins the march back to the box. Hastily counting the fans in the left bleachers, he adds up those in the right. Having exhausted everything else of interest, he puts his spiked shoes fairly in the box and begins to swing his arms. After a few seconds he warms up to the work and lets the ball drive.

Joe takes an unfair advantage of the batters by this method. Strong men in the grandstand and bleachers snored raucously after watching him for an inning. Rube Oldring pinched himself urgently once or twice while at the plate to make certain that he was still awake. All Wood needs to be the best pitcher in the world is a crooning kind of lullaby to match his actions. Then the ball park would be an excellent sanitarium for sufferers from insomnia. Even without the lullaby Joe is still some shakes of a twirler.

Pitcher Ables Has Tremendous Hands

Oakland Southpaw Can Easily Palm an Ordinary Baseball.

LOS ANGELES, July 19.—Harry Ables, star southpaw of the Oaklands and the man whose work last year stamped him as the best left-hander in the league and was instrumental in the Oaks winning the championship, has a wonderful pair of hands.

Ables is a big man physically and undoubtedly possesses the largest hands of any pitcher in the business. An ordinary baseball can easily be hidden in the hand of the big southpaw, and it is to the size and strength of his hands that Ables attributes much of his pitching ability.

Along with his big hands Ables' wrists are heavy and strong, so that a delivery that would ordinarily weaken the arm of a less strong man has no terrors for him, and if the condition of his hands and wrists have anything to do with his period of service as an active pitcher, then he is due for many more years in baseball.

Many clever twirlers have gone bad and been compelled to lessen their work because they had not the strength to get the ball away with the necessary snap of the wrist without tiring, but Ables has no cause for worry and his work is easy for him.

As the Coast League can boast a pitcher possessing the biggest hands, at the same time the player with the smallest hands is in the organization, Billy Kenworthy, of the Sacramento club, being barely able to grip a baseball. As Ables' hands are an aid to him, Kenworthy's short fingers are a detriment to him. Many a hard-hit drive that would be handled with ease by an ordinary fielder has to be handled with extraordinary care by the Sacramento star, as a baseball is to him as big as an indoor baseball would be in the hands of the big Oakland southpaw.

Soccer Star Dodges Being a Millionaire

"Why Should I Worry About Being Heir to $1,200,000?"—O'Brien. "I Have a Good Job."

VAN BUREN, ARK., July 19.—Utter weariness of being merely a millionaire is the reason John O'Brien, of New York, who has been missing for three years, has advanced in explanation of his long absence from the ken of his old friends.

O'Brien is a former soccer football star of Columbia University. He vanished at the close of his college year, in 1910. He was found yesterday in this town, where he is working as an assistant engineer for the Missouri Pacific Railroad.

"Why should I worry about being heir to $1,200,000," said O'Brien to-day. "I have a good job. When I convince myself that I have made good in the world I will return home. I became plumb tired of being a rich man with nothing to do except play the society game and study new ways to kill time. Just now I wouldn't trade my $1,500 a year position for the biggest fortune in the world."

O'Brien added that his mother has known of his whereabouts, though a nation-wide search has been made for him.

Exclusive "More Mileage" advantages in Diamond Tires cost no more
The greatest mileage at the least expense is what you most desire in a tire.
This is what we have demanded from our Chemists, our Engineers, our Tire Builders and factory experts—and here is their answer—
Diamond (No Clinch) Tires
Chemists: Vitalized Rubber—pure, lusty, young rubber put through a process that toughens and makes it road-resisting, with no loss of life or elasticity.
Engineers: Perfect 3-Point Rim Contact, that prevents all forms of rim troubles, such as cutting against the rim and breaking above the bead.
Tire Builders: A No-Clinch more air-room tire, giving added resiliency and perfect balanced construction.
Then we protected the inner tube with a No-Pinch Safety Flap.
And, best of all, these exclusive Diamond advantages cost you no more. They insure liberal mileage and freedom from tire troubles.
So this time buy Diamond Vitalized Rubber Tires—you can get them to fit your rims from

WENT WITHOUT MEALS TO LEARN NATIONAL GAME

Hughie High, Tigers' Young Recruit, Has Fought Hard to Make a Success.

THIS is a story of a young man who literally would rather play baseball than eat.

You often have heard people use the expression that they preferred something else to taking their meals, but when it comes to a showdown they probably were not slow in lining up for the march to the dining room. There is one member of the Detroit Tigers, however, who repeatedly has missed his supper in order that he might have more time to devote to the national pastime.

Hughie High is the name of this athlete who found more pleasure in playing baseball on an empty stomach than in doing anything else after a feast. Not only did he endure the pangs of hunger in order to engage in the sport, but assimilated many a parental licking for cutting his meals besides.

Mr. High is what might be termed a persevering person. When he makes up his mind to do anything he just naturally goes and does it. Until this particular object is accomplished he is deaf, dumb and blind except where hearing, speaking or seeing will help him to attain that which he desires. It so happens that he was bitten by a baseball germ early in life and from that time on his world has revolved around the game.

* * *

THE little fellow was not fortunate enough to be able to devote his entire attention to baseball, however. His parents decided that he had to be useful and ornamental at the same time, so he went to work learning the plumber's trade. Just why he selected this occupation when there were so many openings for good burglars and porch climbers is not apparent. Possibly he didn't like the idea of working nights and figured he could get just as much money and more regular sleep by holding people up the daytime by means of the pipe wrench and the molten lead.

St. Louis is High's home and also the scene of his plumbing endeavors. The pounders and faucet fixers of the Mound City work eight hours a day, as do most plumbers elsewhere. This gives them one hour for actual labor and seven for going back to the shop after their tools. Naturally, with eight hours sliced right out of the daylight, Mr. High did not have very much time left for ball playing, but he found that by passing up his supper he could get in about an hour's work on the lots in the baseball months.

Also he managed to quit half an hour earlier in the evening by taking only 30 minutes for dinner at noon instead of 60. Then, of course, Sundays and holidays he did not have to work, unless there was some special job, which meant overtime pay and more money to be spent for balls, bats and gloves.

* * *

THE young plumber played hard in the short time allowed him to enjoy the game and his proficiency attracted the attention of some of the Trolley Leaguers. Finally he attained the proud position of a member of one of the Trolley League clubs, and thereafter he lived just for the Sunday battles in that flourishing semi-professional circuit.

By this time his people had given up the idea of weaning him away from baseball, and instead of bestowing a licking on him whenever he missed supper they began to read the papers Monday morning to find out what Hugh had done in the Sabbath battles. They still predicted that he would come to no good end, but were glad, since he insisted on being a ball player, that he was a good one.

After a couple of seasons in the Trolley League he was signed by the Hartford club, in the Connecticut League, where he played in 1911 and 1912, joining the Tigers from that outfit last fall.

He still works at the plumbing business in the fall and winter months and holds a union journeyman's card.

When not learning to wipe joints or swipe the ball, Hughie managed to find time to give himself a fair education. He attended night grade school and night high school after it grew too dark to see the horsehide, and in the cold months when there was no outdoor pastiming, and was so conscientious with his lessons that he makes a very creditable appearance in conversation. In fact, he has often been taken for a college man. The little outfielder declines to be worried about the prospect of his being beaten to the Tigers' utility job by Ray Powell.

* * *

"IF Powell can beat me I'll be the first one to congratulate him," said Hugh. "He is a fine ball player and a fine fellow, and there will be no hard feeling on my part whichever way our fight for a regular job with the Detroit club may turn out. I know that I still have a lot to learn about baseball, and if I am sent to the International League to learn I will not be a bit sore. I'll try my best to make good wherever they shift me, and by doing that may be able to get another chance in the big league next year.

"I am young and have plenty of time, and should I fail to make good I will not be discouraged. It is a big jump from the Connecticut to the American League, or even to the International, and whichever way things come out I am sure of a better job at a better salary than I had last season."

TROTT AND KETCHELL MATCH.

CHICAGO, July 19.—Sammy Trott, of Columbus, Ohio, was matched yesterday to fight Steve Ketchell in Winnipeg, Manitoba, August 16. The fight is to be twelve rounds, the men to weight 133 pounds at 3 o'clock. An effort will be made to arrange a match between the winner and Ad Wolgast.

CROSS AND BALDWIN MATCHED.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., July 19.—Leach Cross, the New York dentist-pugilist, and Matty Baldwin, of Boston, have been matched to box twenty rounds at the Vernon arena July 29. Baldwin, who is now in Boston, is expected to leave immediately for the coast.

HARVARD TEAMS SHOWED STRONG IN ATHLETICS

Wearers of Crimson Captured Four College Championships for 1912-1913.

BOSTON, MASS., July 19.—The wearers of the Harvard crimson excelled on the intercollegiate athletic field for the academic year of 1912-13. Out of sixteen possible athletic championships the men from Cambridge won four outright and divided honors for the fifth. Harvard triumphed in football, cross-country running, hockey and association football, in addition to dividing the lacrosse title with Johns Hopkins.

Since Johns Hopkins declined the Harvard challenge to play off the tie for the lacrosse title this might reasonably be awarded to Harvard, but when the Harvard challenge reached Baltimore the Southern team had disbanded and was under no obligation to play off the tie.

The University of Pennsylvania scored first in three championships and therefore ranks second to Harvard, with Yale, Cornell and Princeton tied with two championships each. For purposes of computation each championship is regarded as a single point, which would make the score of the eight universities figure as follows: Harvard, 4 1-2; Pennsylvania, 3; Yale, 2; Princeton, 2; Cornell, 2; Syracuse, 1; Columbia, 1; Johns Hopkins, 1-2.

Poor Year for Yale.

Not only did Harvard win outright more championships than any of its rivals, but the Crimson athletes finished second in one of the major sport championships they did not win, besides making a uniformly high record in the many minor sports. In rowing Harvard certainly deserves to rank third, while in track atletics its team did finish second. In baseball the Crimson beat Yale in two out of three games, and while the championship of the diamond is given to the Blue on the season's record, the Crimson deserves to rank second or third. As a further distinction for Harvard, the Crimson beat Yale in three out of four major sports.

of four major sports.

The Crimson won in football, baseball and rowing, leaving Yale supreme only on the track, but Harvard made some amends for this by beating out Yale in the I. C. A. A. A. A. track championships. It was a fat year for Harvard and a mighty lean one for Yale.

There isn't any room for dispute over the majority of the championship titles here awarded. In practically all of the minor sports there were associations which arranged schedules that left no doubt as to the competitor winning first place.

In the four major sports—football, baseball, rowing and track athletics—this was possible only in track athletics, but in the three others the supremacy of the teams to which the honor is awarded was sufficient to leave no room for dispute.

Harvard was entitled to the supremacy in football by virtue of going through the season undefeated and beating both Princeton and Yale in decisive fashion. This was a record such as no other team in the country made.

Brickley Football Hero.

There were two or three other teams which finished the season undefeated, but their opponents were not in Harvard's class. Harvard's 1912 eleven was one of the best combinations ever produced at Cambridge. It was an all-round team, excelling its opponents in every department of the game, whether punting, drop and place kicking, end running or line plunging.

At the same time there was one individual on the eleven who deserves to be immortalized in Harvard's football history. This was Charles Brickley, who, although only a sophomore, shone with the brilliancy of a Coy or a Poe.

UNUSUAL RULES AND PLAYS IN BASEBALL

NO. 2.

By J. W. Heisman.

IT is not generally understood by laymen that a player on either coaching line has no right, by the rules, to coach, or to say anything whatsoever, as long as there is no runner on base. All that he says is supposed to be in the nature of advice or instruction to base runners, and as long as there are none on the rule distinctly prohibits him from advising his batter, addressing the umpire, or quarreling with any member of the opposition. It's a pity that umpires do not enforce this rule better for its violation leads, in my opinion, to over half of the squabbles and fines that occur in the game.

Pitching Rules—The Position.

When he delivers the ball to the plate the pitcher must have one foot (the rear one) in contact with the pitcher's plate.

He must, at the instant of delivery, be squarely facing the batter.

He must not take more than one forward step, and both feet must be in front of his plate, or on a line with its front edge. He must not raise either foot until after he has started his delivery.

The Balk.

Not only spectators but a great many baseball experts are often puzzled as to whether a given case does or does not constitute a balk. This is not strange, for there are seven ways, by the rule, that a pitcher can employ to manufacture one of these little oddities—so rarely ever observed by Southern League umpires, even with good telescopes. The trouble is that while one is deciding in their own mind that in a certain delivery that the pitcher illustrated he did not violate this, that and the other canon of good form, we forget that very one remaining rule of the seven which he probably did break. Then, too, you can not positively describe the actions one may go through in throwing either to the plate or to a base, so specifically and definitely but that most any two men will see the pitcher's movements in different ways in case of an argument, and will differ radically as to whether those movements conformed to the rules or did not. Here they are, in brief—mull over them for yourself:

A pitcher makes a balk whenever he starts a wind-up (if he is in the box, has one foot in contact with the plate) and doesn't throw somewhere at the conclusion of that wind-up. If he is not in the box he can whirl his arms and bluff to throw all he pleases.

If he throws to any base to catch a runner he must simultaneously step out directly toward that base with one foot. And if he starts to throw to the plate or to first base he must go through with it and turn the ball loose toward the one place or the other. But he can bluff all he pleases to second and third and will not be penalized if he fails to let the ball go.

If the pitcher delivers the ball to the batter while not conforming to all of the rules regarding the position he should take in the box, he has, of course, committed a balk.

And if he holds the ball so long without delivering it somewhere, as, in the opinion of the umpire, to be unnecessarily delaying the game, he is in hot water again. And if he makes any motion whatever that is habitual with him in his manner of delivery without following that motion up with the ball he is clearly in contempt of court.

* * *

NOW section 7 of the balk rule says that he has also committed a FAUX PAS (French for foxy pass that didn't pan out right) whenever he makes any motion to pitch while standing in his position without having the ball in his possession. While this is true, "all right, all right," it has always puzzled me immensely why they don't go on and include here another way of violating good pitching manners that umpires will everywhere be shocked over, but which is not stated in the rule book anywhere. It is this: If you get in the pitcher's box without the ball in your possession you are committing a balk by that mere fact alone, and whether you mawe "any motion to pitch" or not.

* * *

I ONCE asked the lamented Harry Pulliam, then president of the National League, how he could construe this a balk when there was nothing specific in the rule book about it, and he replied that he simply construed such an act as PRIMA FACIE evidence of an intention to commit a balk. I regret to have to say that in my opinion this is no answer at all, for the simple reason that no pitcher ever has an INTENTION of committing a balk.

Just to hear what he would say, I once asked the same question of the great Mordecai Brown. He averred that the point was covered in the rule book. I handed him the book and asked him to kindly show me where it was. He looked and looked, but never found it, and had to give up the case except to remark that he knew well enough it was a balk all right, and so it is everywhere construed.

By the way, it is worth noting that a balk does not entitle the batter ever to his base, but only such runners as are already on base. With no runner on a pitcher may make all the balks he likes and nothing will happen.

It is perfectly possible, though, for a pitcher to have a very puzzling way of throwing either to home or to a base without one being able to tell for certain just where he is going to throw, and that without committing a balk. This is easier for left-handed men than for right-handers; but I have seen the latter kind who could so twist and distort their bodies at the waist, after starting a seeming delivery to the plate, that they were able to completely fool the first-base runner into starting for second, and who then succeeded in wrenching their left foot around so as to thrust it straight out toward first base after all and to squarely face that sack before compelled to turn the ball loose. In a case like this the pitcher has gone through, seemingly, with the motion so far toward a plate delivery that the runner has not thought it possible for him to change and get it to first base instead. Yet the pitcher has succeeded in doing that very thing, and has conformed to the requirements of a throw to first base as well. To do this he has had to so retard the final movements of his arm swing as to give himself time to step out toward first and to face it, and still have force and accuracy enough in the throw to get it there speedily; it is a very difficult thing to do. But it can be done, and that quite legitimately.

To Be Continued Next Sunday.

Mack and McGraw Will Set New Record if They Land This Year

Connie Mack and John McGraw are heading straight for two big league records. Should these rival managers succeed in piloting their teams to the pennant, all modern records will have been shattered, for nobody in these days of baseball has succeeded in annexing five championships for one club. McGraw has already won four for the Giants and Mack has corraled the same number for the Athletics.

Fred Clarke has landed four and Frank Chance, while managing the Cubs, came across with four, but no other big league leader can point to a record any way near that mark.

McGraw won his first pennant for New York in 1904, repeated in 1905 and then came back in 1911 and 1912. Mack's work has been every bit as clean-cut. He first landed a flag in 1902. Three years late, in 1905, he grabbed another, and then in 1910 and 1911 repeated.

FISK Tubes

Are Not Simply Tubes

They Are Dollars in Your Pocket Because They Greatly Reduce Your Tube Expense

FISK TUBES ARE PERFECT. There is no guess work, no chance about them. We have doubled the service and halved the expense for thousands of tube buyers. We can do it for you. Our confidence is based on a long record of actual accomplishment.

Fisk Tubes are pure gum tubes, made of the finest Pure Para Rubber vulcanized by the aid of sulphur to exactly the right degree to produce long life. You cannot take one of them in your hand without appreciating its quality from the texture.

Fisk Tubes have an original splicing which makes thin spots impossible. They are never porous. The construction is such that no imperfection can be present to develop a slow, but constant leak of air.

Using Fisk Tubes Three Years Old

Thousands of Fisk Pure Para Tubes purchased three years ago are in service today. On the shelf or in the casing Fisk Tubes do not deteriorate. They do not harden, nor do they stretch out of shape. They stand double the number of puncture repairs that the ordinary tube will stand.

Quick, Easy and Positive Cure for All Foot Torture.

The following is said to be the surest and quickest cure known to science for all foot ailments: "Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of Calocide compound in a basin of warm water. Soak the feet in this for fully fifteen minutes, gently rubbing the sore parts." The effect is really wonderful. All soreness goes instantly; the feet feel delightful. Corns and callouses can be peeled right off. It gives immediate relief for sore bunions, sweaty, smelly and aching feet. A twenty-five-cent box of Calocide is said to be sufficient to cure the worst feet. It works through the pores and removes the cause of the trouble. Don't waste time on uncertain remedies. Any druggist has Calocide compound in stock or he can get it in a few hours from his wholesale house.

WHAT ATLANTA MANUFACTURERS AND JOBBERS ARE DOING

30,000 INVITED TO TAKE PART IN CONVENTION

More Than 100 Speakers Asked to Discuss Problems of the Southern Merchant.

Of all the conventions which come to Atlanta, there is probably none which is of more importance to the city in a business way than the Southern Merchants' Convention, which will be held during the first two weeks in August, and which is promoted by the Atlanta Merchants and Manufacturers' Association.

Taking advantage of the fact that Dixie merchants come to Atlanta in large numbers at that time, in order to buy their fall stocks from the big wholesale and manufacturing houses of the city, the association has developed this gathering into an organized convention, which serves the twofold purpose of entertaining these business guests of the city, and also of helping them to overcome the difficulties which they meet in the pursuit of commercial success.

It is of inestimable benefit to business men when a number of them can get together and talk over their problems. The association has arranged for more than 100 speakers, drawn from the ranks of the merchants themselves, who will present these everyday problems as they have come up in their own businesses. Every merchant will be invited to take part in the discussion, and in this way the good results which have been gotten by one man will be given to all for their combined benefit.

The time of the convention has been well provided for. In the daytime there will be enough discussion to give every merchant the fullest possible benefit. But there will be enough time left for the visiting amongst the wholesale houses which every merchant will want to do.

Then there are barbecues, receptions, dinners, theater parties and baseball parties all arranged for, at all of which the merchants will be the guests of the association. Every merchant in Dixie is cordially invited to come to this convention, and ample preparations are being made to care for them all.

Secretary Moore has sent out over 30,000 invitations, and the man who doesn't come and take advantage of this splendid opportunity will have only himself to blame.

Notes on Selling

Hatpin point protectors that can be worn for ornamentation as well as for protection are now shown. They are said to hold firmly, and can be released at the slightest touch.

Red and the brighter shades of green and yellow are the preferred colors of sweaters for use at the shore or mountains this season.

Evening wraps of corded silks, chiffon, or heavily-beaded net are popular now. Better models are draped about the knees and fastened at the side with a single ornament or button. Short coats, similar to the Eton, are shown among the late models. The vests are quite small, extending several inches along the sides, showing the modish, broad girdle.

A small watch handbag, made of gray and all black striped silk, with a new-shaped frame, is featured locally now. It is fitted with cardcase, mirror and watch, and is suitable for wear with light summer frocks as well as heavier fall costumes.

Selling agents say that the new spring lines of silk and cotton mixtures are very satisfactory, and that they look for keen competition.

Plain nets are in great demand abroad, and prices are persistently advancing. Shadow flouncings will probably be in especially good demand here, in widths ranging from 12 to 27 inches.

Carpet wool dealers in the primary market are advancing prices.

JUTE PRODUCTION.

It is reported that the Indian government's preliminary forecast on the jute crop is 3,191,000 acres, an increase of about 6 per cent over last year. Important changes are being made at Washington in the wording of the jute schedule. The child labor clause has been modified in its application to goods made entirely by children under 14 years of age.

Mahogany Worth Fortune Used Here for Furniture

Colonial Pieces Reproduced and New England Is Scoured for Good Models.

When you think of furniture you think of Grand Rapids, Mich., don't you?

Of course you do, just as when you think of cotton goods, you think of Fall River, Mass.

But isn't there a chance—just a bare chance—that you are being fooled? That massive, highly polished, solid mahogany sideboard—can you find the maker's name anywhere on it? Probably you can not, and if not, how do you know it came from the Michigan city? Just as likely as not the piece was built right here in Atlanta.

Atlanta has several really large furniture concerns. One of them, the Southern Furniture Company, out Marietta street, devotes its efforts almost exclusively to high-grade dining room and bedroom sets. About 250 men are employed the year around, turning out dining room tables, writing desks, china closets, sideboards, beds, dressers, chiffoniers, dressers and washstands.

Follow Colonial Models.

For the most part these are faithful copies of old colonial pieces, and solid mahogany and solid oak are the woods most in favor.

The day of veneers and of fancy carvings is gone, it seems. Dignity of line, sober finish, with the richness all in the material—this is the policy today.

Stacked in the factory yards are mahogany and oak in the rough, worth, in the aggregate, several hundred thousand dollars. Otto Schwab, the vice president, points out a very ordinary looking stack, about the color of a cigar box. "There's $30,000 worth of Mexican mahogany," he remarks. "It is worth from $250 to $400 per 1,000 feet. Roughly, I should say that mahogany is worth three times as much as oak."

When the lumber arrives in Atlanta it must remain in the stacks a year, to insure perfect seasoning. Even after that, it goes to the dry kilns.

From the dry kilns it goes to a man who saws it into proper lengths.

Waste Manufacturers' Bane.

"Here is the man who can break any furniture factory," said Mr. Schwab. "He has in his mind all the different lengths useful in the plant, and it is his business to cut every plank to the best advantage. If he does not, there is terrible waste, and waste is the bane of every manufacturer's existence."

Sized and sorted as it comes from the kiln, the lumber is "ripped" into proper widths. Then it is loaded on trucks and starts its path through the wood-working machines. Everything is in order. The sawdust and shavings are sucked up by great fans and carried straight back to the furnace fires. Loose blocks are not allowed to mess up the floors. The lumber moves from machine to machine on trucks. It never has to be rehandled. Pieces are stacked in compartments as carefully as a good business house files its letters, so that a workman need not waste time in searching for any particular thing he wants.

Sandpaper on Belts.

Every appliance is up to the minute. There are, for instance, "sanding machines," where sandpaper belting whizzes incessantly. In one machine this sandpaper belt is so arranged as to sandpaper the entire top of a dresser or sideboard or table at one operation, a skilful workman increasing or decreasing the pressure at the exact points desired.

Another sandpaper belt hisses over a flexible pillow and by resting odd-shaped bits on this pillow, curved table legs and the like are made smooth and ready for the varnishing processes.

Four and five coats of varnish are necessary before the final coat is applied. Each coat must be allowed to dry, then be sandpapered before the next is applied. This takes several weeks. When all this is done, each piece stands from three to four weeks for the varnish to take on the rock-like consistency necessary before it can be pumiced, and given its final polish.

Formerly all rubbing with pumice and water was done by hand. Lately a machine was invented which imitates closely the motion of the human workman, and this, to some extent, has supplanted hand rubbing, but it never will do so entirely.

Red Gum Furniture.

As often is the case, the South is producing something which can not be duplicated elsewhere, a product of great beauty, and other sections are taking to it quicker than the people right at home.

In the furniture business, red gum gives an example of this. In the Southern Furniture Company display rooms stand red gum pieces, finished in imitation of mahogany. It is not exaggeration to say that red gum, properly finished, can not be detected from mahogany except by an expert, and he can not, at a distance of two feet. The only difference is that mahogany has a minute, dotted grain, fine almost as a pin point, which red gum lacks. This can be seen with the eye eight or ten inches from the wood. At a greater distance, it becomes indistinguishable.

"Europe is buying great quantities of this," says Mr. Schwab. "America takes to it slowly. The American likes to say that his furniture is solid mahogany. Another piece, as beautiful, which no one could tell from the real, and which is solid, home-grown wood, durable and beautiful, does not appeal to him."

Designer an Autocrat.

The designer is the autocrat of the furniture factory. His office is in the room where the display models are made—but he is not always in his office.

"He takes it easy," explains Mr. Schwab.

Interesting stories are told of the work of designing furniture. Sometimes it entails a search through old New England towns, and the purchase of a broken-down old bed—valuable only for its design.

Then many factors must be considered. For instance, the development of the city flat has made it necessary to design sideboards and dining tables of small size.

Yokohama's Market For Silks Is Active

Prices Are Stiffer on Sales of 2,800 Bales for First Week—Italy's Crop Short.

The Yokohama silk market is more active and prices stiff. Sales for the first week of the season amounted to 2,800 bales, of which 1,100 bales were shipped to Europe and America. Stocks in that market were reported as 4,000 bales of filatures.

Milan advices confirmed that the Italian crop would barely exceed 70 per cent of last year's. While American buyers were holding back, European manufacturers slowly followed the advance asked on new silk. The Canton market advanced, and there was good demand from both European and American buyers.

Stocks of short reels in this market were almost nil, and little silk was obtainable for shipment earlier than six weeks hence. At Shanghai the market was quiet, but firm. Steam filatures were reported slowly advancing in this market, and there was good demand for coarse sizes. It was estimated that the season's production of these filatures would be about 23,000 bales.

WAR RAISES PRICES.

The Balkan war has brought about a rise in certain lumber prices in Europe because of the big demand for wood for ammunition boxes.

INSURANCE FOR HONEST BUYERS DRAWS TRADE

Western Firm Refunds Five Per Cent of Money Paid for oGods When Misfortune Comes.

"I wonder how many of the merchandising and manufacturing firms of Atlanta have insurance for customers," said a buyer for a Western house. "Furthermore, I wonder how many of them ever heard of such a thing. I think I am fairly well informed along business lines, and I never heard of it until recently.

"I was talking to a Western man about a month ago, a member of a wholesale firm doing a business of a million or more a year and increasing rapidly. I knew that he formerly had been a successful traveling salesman and had left the road and organized the firm some seven or eight years ago, and I was interested in learning how the business had made such progress. He said it was the insurance idea that attracted trade if prices and quality of goods were equal to those of competitors.

Ideal Part of Capital.

"Naturally, I wanted to know what the insurance idea was, and he said it had come to him, as he had been going about among customers, that any firm which could give them a line of insurance in the right direction would get their trade. He talked to friends who had money and business experience, and they organized the firm with his insurance idea as part of their working capital.

"This idea was to allow a customer 5 per cent return on the amount of all goods bought and paid for, in case he became unable to continue in business by reason of death, ill-health, or ill-luck. Simple enough proposition, isn't it? He cited an instance of one man who had bought $50,000 worth of goods while he had been dealing with the firm and was compelled to retire on account of poor health. He had saved very little, as he had a large family, and the prospect before him was not bright. The firm took his case under advisement and when they were fully convinced that he was eligible, he drew $2,500 in cash.

"That much unexpected money is a great help, and it proved a saving grace to this man, for with it he bought a snug little farm on which he has made a modest living and got back much of his health.

Gets Fresh Start.

"Another customer, through no fault of his own, was forced into bankruptcy. As it happened, he owed the firm nothing at the time, but he had bought some thirty-odd thousand dollars' worth of goods, and they gave him his choice of $1,500 in cash or the same amount in stock for a new start. He took the goods, made a new start, and is now in a position to claim more than $3,000 if he can't help himself in any other way.

"Another customer died insolvent, owing the firm $300. He had been a pretty good customer and his insurance would have entitled him to about $1,200. The firm deducted what he owed and gave the widow about $900 in cash.

OVERDUE BILLS WORST MENACE JOBBER MEETS

Credit Man Shows That Prompt Collections Are Necessary for Permanent Success.

"Each day that an unpaid bill runs over the date when due it becomes harder to collect," said recently a credit man connected with a local wholesale grocery concern.

"Shortly after I became connected with this house a solicitor for a large collection agency interviewed me, and I decided to give him some of our business. There were a number of back accounts on file that needed clearing up, so I handed them to him.

"He looked at them and handed them back, saying that he judged them rather old and did not care to test his firm's ability on such prospects. They had resisted various attempts at collection. This I foolishly explained to him, and it seemed to strengthen his opinion that they were hardly worth troubling with.

"Had those accounts been properly handled at the beginning they would either have been collected or the customers would have had no more goods. As matters stood, a bill of good was shipped them the month previous. It is difficult to keep the customers of a large house prompt in the matter of payments, but it can be done. It is worth while doing, too, because it is the only way to success. I have had no accounts outlawed since I have been connected with my firm. Losses are bound to occur in business failures, but I speak only of houses carelessly allowing accounts to run for indefinite periods uncollected.

"The house that does not collect promptly does business at its own expense, while the house that collects efficiently does business at its customers' expense.

"There need be no concern about the 'worthy dealer in trouble' whose luck is temporarily against him. Their numbers are small and the house's judgment can govern those cases. Sympathy is all right in deserving cases, and we are not hard on deserving retailers. Only, we have our running expenses to meet every week. Is there any reason why the people we serve should not meet theirs? We are careful to investigate the facts in cases where allowances are made. That is the only way to permanent success."

SOUTHERN RAILROADS BUY MUCH NEW EQUIPMENT

The Seaboard line has ordered five dining cars from the Pullman Company.

The American Locomotive Company has received orders for five super-heater Mikado locomotives from the El Paso and Southwestern Railway and for five 6-wheel switching engines from the Chicago Junction Railway.

Yellow Pine Scarce, Supply Almost Gone

North Carolina Variety Almost Supplants White Pine for Building Packing Cases.

The consumption of yellow pine lumber has increased to such an extent that while the public is familiar with its value for construction, building operations, and packing cases, very little is known as to the amount of timber left standing. In a few years the supply will be exhausted.

Short-leaf yellow pine, known in the trade as "North Carolina pine," has taken the place of white pine to such an extent that the latter has almost disappeared from the market. In 1900, 90 per cent of the packing cases manufactured were made of white pine. This wood became so hard to procure and increased in price so rapidly that North Carolina pine came into use.

At the present date 90 per cent of the packing cases are made from this wood.

When general business is good throughout the country the demand exceeds the supply. When crops are abundant and the Middle West is prosperous, so much of this wood goes to that part of the country that the mills on the Atlantic seaboard find it difficult to manufacture enough lumber to supply the wants of dealers in Eastern States.

Glassware Makers Readjusting Prices

Have Been Selling Product Under Cost and Now Are Marking Up Their Lists.

Prices on many lines of glassware are to be advanced immediately, but only in keeping with the increased cost of production. Manufacturers have been asking too much on some lines and not enough on others, according to The Crockery and Glass Journal.

Under the present plan it is proposed to remedy the condition, lowering the items which have been listed too high and bringing up the prices of those that have been sold below the cost of production. The two largest manufacturers in the United States have put new lists into effect, and some of the smaller plants will follow suit at once.

MANUFACTURERS COMMITTEE CONSIDERS MANY OFFERS

Manufacturers on the subcommittee of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, which is pushing plans for the permanent exhibit of Atlanta-made goods, met Wednesday at noon to discuss the several proposals which have been made offering buildings to house the exhibit. The subcommittee is progressing well in its work of estimating costs, floor space, available location, and the like, but has reached no definite conclusion.

HIGHER PRICES FOR FOOD NOT AID TO FARMER

City Distribution Represents Most of the Cost the Consumer Is Paying Nowadays.

The high prices which the housewife is paying for foodstuffs in these days of record top figures does not mean as much prosperity for the farmer as would appear.

Dr. Clyde L. King, of the Wharton School of Finance, finds after an exhaustive study that on many articles of produce a full third of the price paid by the consumer goes to cartage and delivery costs, and for retailers' profits.

"If our urban dwellers are to have released a larger share of their incomes for other than subsistence purposes, these food costs must be reduced," says Dr. King.

"Probably half of them now spend annually nearly half of their income for food. In the future that city will have the best civic and industrial prosperity which first perfects plans whereby subsistence costs may be reduced to each and every citizen. In the past city growth depended on the exploitation of virgin resources and in the development of new industries. From now on city growth must hinge more and more largely upon community efficiency as expressed in lower living costs. The food problem is vitally wrapped up with the solution of the city's industrial supremacy and the extension of its industrial boundaries."

What Wages Average.

The manufacturer and employer of labor is particularly interested in a reduction of the food supply costs and in perfecting a closer industrial unity between the city and all the surrounding agricultural communities. Statistics show that 60 per cent of the males at least 16 years old are employed in manufacturing, mining, trade, transportation, and other occupations associated with industrial life in cities were earning less than $626 per annum in 1904, or about $2 a day, while 30 per cent were receiving between $626 and $1,000, and only 10 per cent were receiving $1,000 a year.

WILL ATTEMPT TO HURRY BILLS THROUGH HOUSE

Two Thousand Retailers Gathering for Purpose of Backing Bad Check and Garnishment Laws.

Two thousand retail grocers, dry goods men and hardware merchants will parade Monday morning from the Ansley Hotel to the State Capitol.

They have important business at the Capitol.

Not to put too fine an edge on the matter, they are going to do some lobbying, but this is a lobby which is open and aboveboard, and at which no one can take offense.

The bills which the retailers favor are the fraudulent check bill and the new garnishment bill, both of which measures, they declare, are necessary for their proper protection.

A fight on the bills is due in the House Tuesday. For this reason the annual convention of the Georgia Retailers' Association has been called for this date. It will remain in session Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Little business, besides endeavoring to get favorable action on the two bills mentioned and the election of officers for the coming year, will be accomplished.

J. W. S. Harding, president, will call the meeting to order Monday morning at 9 o'clock at the Hotel Ansley. Wilmer L. Moore, president of the Chamber of Commerce, will deliver the address of welcome. An executive session of an hour's duration will follow. Then comes the parade to the Capitol.

Two thousand retailers are expected to be in line. Dublin, Waycross, Thomasville, Augusta, Bainbridge, Athens, Columbus and Macon are expected to send big delegations. Other towns which find it impossible to send big delegations are sending petitions. Some merchants already are on the ground.

Every Representative who shows an inclination to oppose these two bills is likely to meet strong pressure from the merchants of his district, endeavoring to change his view of the matter.

It is expected there will be no trouble getting the bills through the Senate. The measures have moved along as if on greased ways in that body.

Everything is shaping up in great order for the August meeting of the Southern Merchants.

There's outside enthusiasm as well as inside. The merchants are pleased with the program and the plans that have so far been announced. Word is beginning to come from many quarters that the folks are coming.

And Folks are the best part of a Convention. Carnegie says that he always surrounds himself with people who are smarter than he is. He wants to learn from them. Open-minded Andy! He makes it pay, anyhow.

There's going to be a program of mighty good things. There will be lots for us all to learn. Methods, Money and Merchandising will be the Main Mention. Does that interest YOU?

CANADA REFUGE OF U. S. STEEL IF GUILTY AS TRUST

Infinite Possibilities Found in Perpetual Charter Just Given Corporation.

LOOPHOLE FOR DISSOLUTION

Gary Sets Example for His Brother Officers in Stratagem.

By BOERSIANER.

There are infinite possibilities in the letters patent just granted the United States Steel Corporation by the Canadian Government.

The grant is apropos of a $20,000,000 plant that the corporation means to build up there. But the charter, not the mill, is the thing. The license to do almost any kind of business is perpetual.

Under it, also, Mr. Gary and his associates may control all sorts of properties—including, of course, the Tennessee Company. Equally, of course, the Steel Corporation may recontract for the Great Northern Ore Company—an amount of raw material which it was difficult to believe Gary would relinquish.

The charter may be rendered significantly adaptable in other ways. Should the Government win the pending suit against the corporation—should the United States Supreme Court order a dissolution—the company might extinguish itself in the United States and operate under the foreign rights just accorded.

It is an idea that should comfort the corporation's security holders, especially the owners of the common and preferred stocks, who might be simply asked to exchange the certificates of the old corporation for stocks in the Canadian concern—if the worst befall in the court, or, indeed, in Congress; for the Canadian tariff differs from the schedule of imposts proposed by the bill under the Senate's consideration.

Manifestly Mr. Gary and his coadjutors have indulged in thought for over a year. Their cogitation has ultimated in the Canadian proposition—which may be made protective alike to the management and to the security holders.

Obviously, too, Gary is setting an example to his brother corporation managers who may say in defense that the lawmakers of the United States are driving industrial companies out of the country.

Whatever is done with the Canadian charter, it is certain that the Steel Corporation has in reservation a legal stratagem evasive, ingenious and no doubt perfectly effective.

Crossing Corn Strains Increases Yield From 30 to 150 Per Cent, Declare Experts

Remarkable Results Have Been Attained by Farmers Who Have Worked Long and Patiently on Hybridizing Grain. No More Acreage or Expense Entailed in New Scientific Method.

By CHARLES A. WHITTLE.

Georgia State College of Agriculture.

Think of from 30 to 150 per cent increase in yield as a result of crossing strains of corn! Is it not very much worth while for farmers to take notice? If even less than 30 per cent gain were made as a result, what an enormous gain to the farmer, and that, too, without more work, more fertilizer or greater acreage planted!

Since the year 1876 Professor W. J. Beal, of the Michigan Agricultural College, has been demonstrating the fact that the first generation of hybrids has increased yields of corn. More recently other demonstrators have shown, beyond peradventure, that from 30 to 150 per cent can be obtained from planting hybrids, or one-year crosses, over planting pure strains alone.

So high has been piled the testimony of facts that no one has a right to doubt. It remains only for the farmer to apply. This he can do with very little trouble. When the farmer does make use of this little trick which the scientist has taught him, his wealth in corn, his cost of fattening hogs or beef, will stand at a much more favorable figure than at present.

Vigor Only Temporary.

While working long and painstakingly on hybridizing or crossing corn, the scientists discovered important limitations and facts which it is well for the farmer to know if he is to make a success of his seed plats. The first of these is that while crossing adds vigor it is only temporary. The greatest increase in vigor is in the first generation crosses. While a greater yield can be obtained by planting the seed of the crosses or hybrids for two or three years than can be obtained from planting a single pure strain, yet the wiser policy would be to return to original strains after planting one crop of hybrid seeds. This means that for the first year the two strains can be planted together in the same row. This will increase the yield the first year, but when the seed from the cross or hybrid crop is planted, the subsequent crop will be still larger in yield and production of fodder.

Returning to the original strain after the hybrid seed has been used one year, of course can be easily done, if the farmer will maintain seed plats where the pure strains are kept separate from other strains.

Same Variety Should Be Used.

The second important fact about making crosses is that only unrelated strains of the same variety should be used and not two distinct varieties. Unrelated strains of the same kind of corn can be obtained from different parts of the State or from different States for crossing purposes. What one needs to be certain of, however, is that the seed he is obtaining from elsewhere has been kept pure. Reliable seed producers who know how to maintain a pure strain, of course, are to be looked to rather than to the indiscriminate grower for the strains in making a cross.

These two important facts are as essential to success as the main discovery of the effect of crossing. To keep planting the seed of a hybrid corn because it produced a large yield at one time, in the light of investigation, would prove foolish. This is too often a common practice of farmers.

Keep the pure strains strong and vigorous by seed selection and the hybrid fields will take care of themselves as to yields and stover. Any farmer can perfect his seed corn and add greatly to its yielding power by well-known methods of seed selection. The germination test is foremost as a means for determining the vigor and potential yielding power of the grains taken from a given ear of corn. Plant ten grains of corn from an ear in a sand box where moisture and proper temperature are maintained. In a few days the green sprouts will have appeared. Examine and see how many of the ten grains germinated.

If eight or nine did, the ear can be said to have strong germinating power, and that it can produce a thrifty, good yielding plant. The remainder of the ear can then be planted in the seed bed. If the seed plat is kept away from other plats that are growing different strains or varieties, then a strong, pure strain of corn is assured. To add to the strength of the pure strain, it is the custom of the seed breeder to detassle every other plant. This leaves the stalk that has been detasseled to be fertilized by another plant, rather than by itself.

Aids Production Power.

This has been shown to add to the producing power of the plant. The corn from the detassled stalks, of course, is the grain for planting in the seed plats next year. The seed from the stalks not detassled and all grain from the tasseled stalks which is not required for maintaining the seed plat, can be planted in the general field after being mixed with similar corn taken from another plat. Thus mixed a hybrid plant is produced of the greatest possible yielding power.

Thus is seen that it is no difficult matter to breed up strains of corn and to make hybrid crosses for largest field yields. Any farmer can do it. In fact, no other one can do it so well for a given farm as the farmer himself. When he grows his own seed he knows whether or not proper care has been taken to keep the strains pure and strong. He has also made use of strains of corn that have become adjusted to the climate, soil and conditions in general of the farm. In other words, he is taking fewest chances when he does all this work himself. And it is not a large amount of work. It requires very little time. The interest it will arouse as well as the yields it will increase will make of it a fascinating work for any intelligent farmer.

SCALPERS BUSY, COTTON MARKET TO THEIR LIKING

October Fluctuates Between 11.40 and 11.60—Big Fellow and Public Not Interested.

NEW ORLEANS, July 19.—A more hopeful feeling in regard to the defeat of the Clarke amendment having been engendered recently by the advices from Washington, the cotton market has become more active, with bulls inclined to bid prices up to higher levels.

The weekly weather report Tuesday was rather discouraging to the bear element, droughty conditions being reported as prevailing in Texas and Oklahoma, while rain also was said to be needed in some portions of the Atlantics, which was rather surprising to the trade here, as it was thought that there had recently been sufficient rains in the Eastern belt. Some private crop reports received from that section of the belt within the last few days also state that the cotton crop is being damaged by blight, especially in Alabama.

The market lately has ranged between 11.40 and 11.60 for October delivery. Covering by shorts has checked any decline in the neighborhood of 11.40, while profit-taking by longs, together with some fresh short selling, has served to prevent the market advancing much above the level of 11.60 for October.

Good Scalpers' Market.

The result has been a good scalping market, which professional traders have taken advantage of, but the larger operators and the outside public, apprehensive as to the Clarke amendment passing, have, as a rule, refrained from taking any interest.

Now that a more optimistic feeling prevails in cotton circles here, interest in the market appears to be reviving, and, with a little more encouragement, leading bulls in this market would not hesitate to put some ginger into the speculative position. There is still a fairly large short interest in the market, and it would not require a great deal of buying to put the bears on the run. Prices on the new crop deliveries are now 1 cent under those prevailing a year ago, when, in some respects, the crop outlook was better than it is to-day.

Boll Weevil Active.

More reports of damage by boll weevil are coming in, especially from Texas and Louisiana, where the pest appears to have gained great headway. The rains which are needed now in Texas would lead to greater damage still from the boll weevil. Consequently, crop prospects in the Western belt are not encouraging, no matter from what angle the situation is viewed.

The Census Bureau report on consumption for the month of June proved to be a very bullish document. It proved conclusively that consumption in this country is running on the basis of 5,750,000 bales, which would indicate a total consumption, America and Europe combined, of at least 14,750,000 bales. For this reason, the trade is beginning to realize that a new crop of at least 15,000,000 bales will be required to keep the spindles of the world running and maintain reserves above the danger point next season.

In other words, the situation, as regards sufficiency of supplies or deficiency, hangs in the balance. Everything depends upon the new crop, and should it begin to deteriorate there might be an outburst of bullish speculation which would put prices back to a parity with those that prevailed a year ago at this time.

MORE CHEERFUL SPIRIT SHOWN IN SOUTHEAST

Improvement in Cotton Prospects Caused by Fine Growing Weather Brings Optimism.

By M. A. ROSE.

Two weeks of hot weather, varied by good showers, have done marvels for the cotton crop of the Southeast, according to the views of competent observers, who have made trips through the farming sections.

Cotton in South Georgia is waist high, they say, and a little more of this ideal weather—ideal from the cotton planters' standpoint—will do much to overcome the late start the crop suffered. If August, now, will be as kindly as July, and if the frost is not too early, an excellent crop will be assured. To make conditions perfect, a little rain in Central-Southeast Georgia might be added, for the abundant showers elsewhere skipped that section, according to the Weather Bureau's report last week.

The feeling all around is more cheerful. Country bankers and merchants report to their Atlanta correspondents that the crops look better—particularly the corn, which promises a more abundant yield than Georgia ever has known.

"Balance Basis" Rules.

By keeping loans strictly to a "balance basis"—that is, by demanding that a customer's balance be kept at 25 per cent of the total amount he is allowed to borrow—the supply of money is kept equal to the needs of commerce and industry.

Atlanta institutions, with one or two exceptions, have not yet begun to borrow from New York City. Within a few weeks this will begin, probably not as early as usual, for the cotton crop is a little late.

The outlook, according to good authorities, is for good prices for the cotton crop. Domestic consumption, many think, will reach 6,000,000 bales this year, a record figure. For nine months domestic mill takings were something less than 500,000 bales per month, but for April and May takings were well above 500,000 bales. They were close to 500,000 in June.

Cotton Prices Better.

July and August, terminating the cotton year, are expected to bring the total up to 6,000,000. Prices have stiffened perceptibly for spinnable grades in consequence. The total number of spindles in operation during the year has been close to the record, and stocks have been decreasing steadily since January.

Stocks and bonds continue to be quoted at bargain prices, both local investments and those listed on the New York Exchange. There was a small revival in trading following July dividend disbursements, but it has died down again. Fall, it is believed, will see much more active investment and speculation, and several Atlanta financiers, according to rumor, plan to father some new issues.

Hand-to-mouth buying of goods continues the rule, though some fair fall orders are reported by jobbers.

Cotton Trade Inclined To Enlarge Estimates

Bears Timorous Despite Promise of Big Yields. Spot Prices Steady.

MEMPHIS, July 19.—Another week of progress for the cotton crop is history, and the tendency is to enlarge yield expectations. There is still, however, plenty of time for something to happen and fear that it might is contributing largely to the disposition to make haste slowly in yielding to the temptation to try to discount a big crop.

The trade seems to realize that ever since the first of the year there has been a feeling in the cotton world that the crop of the season 1913-14 was going to be a large one, and so far nothing has happened to seriously interfere with this promise, yet in the face of many adverse conditions and circumstances, the price has held steady, and only for a brief spell have futures been below 11 cents.

This fact tends to increase confidence in the stability of the affair and discourages willingness on the part of bearishly inclined people to commit themselves too heavily on that side until there is assurance that the crop will be sufficient for the world's needs for the ensuing year and allow for some enlargement of the reserves in the hands of spinners.

As yet notes of complaint from the fields have been in a minor key and danger is largely prospective. There have been some temperatures that were too high for the best progress of the crop, for the moisture supply was limited, but while this was the case the weevils in the same districts have been kept in check.

Oklahoma has sent the most serious complaints as to the heat, although the condition is that State has been high and there is room for some deterioration and still leave promise of a good crop. Texas as usual is sending a variety of reports, though the average opinion is that a record crop will be marketed there. There is basis for expecting a large early movement from that Commonwealth also, and three new bales already have been marketed.

In this territory, which comprises the area that produces the bulk of the long staple varieties, the prospect is the best in years, though in the lower edge, including some of Mississippi and Arkansas, the weevil bids fair to be a factor. Conditions are so favorable at the moment that the tendency here is to take an optimistic view of the entire belt. Information reaching here is that while there has been much improvement in the Eastern belt during the past few weeks, chances are against yield equaling the record of two years ago.

Bears, however, think they see possibility of the belt setting a new record in the number of bales, while outlook is for good quality.

There is small activity in the spot department, although sales in this market have been fairly large for midsummer. The unsold stock here is small and only a few buyers are here, but scattering orders are coming from spinners. Receipts are small, but stocks in the aggregate at counted towns are larger than they were a year ago. Quotations are holding steady and middling ranges from 12 cents to 12 7-16.

SENT FREE TO MEN

A Most Pleasing Remedy given to Quickly Restore Lost Vitality.

A Free Trial Treatment Sent by Mail To All Who Write.

Free trial treatments of Enervita, a most pleasing remedy, are being mailed to all men who write to Dr. John S. Howell. So many who had battled for years against the mental and physical suffering of man weakness have written thanking him for the great benefit received, therefore, Dr. Howell has decided to send free trial treatments to all men who write. It is a home treatment and all who suffer with any form of weakness, resulting from youthful folly, premature loss of strength and memory, weak back, lack of vitality and confidence can now receive this strength-giving treatment at home.

The treatment has a peculiar grateful effect of warmth and seems to act direct to the desired location, promoting strength and development just where it is needed. It is given to relieve the ills and troubles that come from years of misuse of the natural functions, and has met with remarkable success, even in cases approaching advanced age. A request to John S. Howell, M. D., Suite 1221, Auditorium Building, Cincinnati, Ohio, stating that you desire one of his free trial packages, will be complied with promptly.

He is desirous of reaching that great class of men who are unable to leave home to be treated, and the free sample will enable them to see how easy it is to successfully treat man weakness when the proper remedies are employed. Dr. Howell makes no restrictions. Any man who writes will be sent a free sample and literature, carefully sealed in a plain package, so that you need have no fear of embarrassment or publicity. Readers are requested to write without delay.

OCCASIONAL OBSERVATIONS

The late J. P Morgan's heart more than his head entered into his investments. So the detailed list shows. He did not leave one important block of either bonds or stocks. The veteran banker was not the Croesus that was popularly supposed. He was loyal to Hartford—its financial institutions, its insurance companies and even its carpet industries.

* * *

It will do no harm now to publish the fact that latterly Mr. Morgan's mania for buying all sorts of art and quasi-art treasures became so abnormal that his partners and his family had occasion for alarm. He spent more millions than he was making during the closing years of his life. He had regal contempt for money when it was weighed in the balance with art or his special brands of philanthropy. Of course, he would brook no interference in his purchases, most of which toward the close were paid for by notes, which were discharged when he collected his profits from his firm.

* * *

If bankers are correct in their diagnosis, there will be no currency legislation this session. Legislators object to doing a double shift. They want to go home the moment the tariff bill is signed. Then, too, every lawmaker has a currency plan of his own up his sleeve, which he will try to force down the throats of his colleagues.

* * *

Neither James Speyer nor President Vanderlip of the National City Bank will go to Europe this summer, they have their hands full at home with railroad problems.

* * *

Many Wall street people are hoping that the Eastern trainmen will go on strike. There are at least 10,000 men in Wall street who would be glad to take the jobs thrown up by the conductors and trainmen.

* * *

Some brokers are paying 3 per cent for call money, notwithstanding that lower rates are obtainable. One such broker explained his apparent extravagance thus: "I do not care to pay off my 3 per cent loans and take on others at the lower rates. You see, my bank never charges me more than 6 per cent for call money, no matter how high it goes, so that it would be small business for me to pay the loan now that the bank is making a little money out of my loan. Another thing, if I paid it off under present conditions I would probably have to pay the current rate whenever call funds might be above 6 per cent in the future."

* * *

There are five institutions in Wall street which do not charge more than 6 per cent on call money, even though it might be quoted at 10 or 25 or 125 per cent. They are the National City Bank, United States Trust Company, Central Trust Company, Fifth Avenue Bank and the Park National. The last institution does not charge more than 6 per cent on its own money, but it does charge more than on that lent for the account of out-of-town correspondents.

* * *

The First National Bank, of which George F. Baker is president, is considered the biggest "Shylock" in the financial district. It always gets as much for its money as it can and in times when money is very high its reserve sinks below the 25 per cent mark. Little wonder the bank has paid 12,550 per cent in dividends since Mr. Baker became president in 1873.

STUDENTS HELP LUMBERMEN.

The leading forest schools of the country not only have their own forest tracts for continuous experiments, but give their students actual experience in the woods by having them take part in big lumbering operations.

New Canadian Charter Rouses Much Talk.

DETROIT, July 19.—The charter of the Canadian branch of the United States Steel Corporation, copies of which have been received here, grants that company an absolute monopoly of the Canadian steel business if the new concern desires to establish itself in control.

One section expressly grants the right to absorb any and all other companies engaging wholly or in part in the steel business. It may buy timber lands and engage in the manufacture of wooden products.

It may construct roads, build bridges and water transportation lines, with depots, docks and all other facilities for operation. It may own and operate electric and gas plants and telephone systems. It may build and own cars and, in fact, do everything except build railroads.

Few Sales of Iron at Present Prices

Southern Pig Held for $11 Per Ton. Stocks Will be Reduced in the Fall.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., July 19.—Southern pig iron now is being held for $11 per ton, and there are few sales being made. The market is far from being satisfactory, however, and the make is in excess of the demand. The manufacturers are not inclined to sell at the low prices that have been prevailing, and though reports are to be heard of $10.50 per ton iron, there are no orders.

The accumulated stocks of iron, estimated heretofore at 200,000 tons, should be cut down considerably during the third quarter of the year. At $11 per ton there is little profit on pig iron, and the furnace companies are said to be considering it better business to hold the iron rather than let it go out at the lower price.

Some of the companies selling special brand iron are not making concessions on the premium prices; for instance, the Alabama Company is not selling Clifton iron under $12 per ton. Special analysis iron is also commanding a special price. Charcoal iron commands more than $22.50 per ton and very little business is now being transacted for the reason that consumers are looking forward to a reduction in the quotations.

Curtailment of the production of pig iron in the Southern territory will be increased as the conditions of the market warrant it. The make in July will be considerably under what it was in June, during which month Alabama produced more than 163,000 tons of iron.

The steel plants are losing no time. There is a steady delivery of products, though reports have it that there is further reduction in unfilled orders. Following the announcement of the placing of an order for 18,000 tons of rail by the Southern and other railroads, it is learned that something like 20,000 tons of other shapes in steel are needed and will be ordered shortly in the Southern territory. Steel prices have shown but little changes lately, save as to wire.

Cast iron pipe is beginning to take on some activity.

Paper Market Is Puzzle to Handlers

Difficult to Estimate Demand for Mercantile Notes, and Buyers Are "Whining."

NEW YORK, July 19.—Commercial paper is moving in strange channels. The market is "whimmy." Handlers of mercantile paper can form no estimate from day to day of the demand for their commodity. One day the buying is large, then for a protracted spell the purchasing is nil.

Further to entangle the situation extraordinary and inexplicable discrimination is being shown by institutions to certain best names to the detriment of others equally as good. As the representative of a prominent house put it, there is no telling what the upshot will be.

With standard houses unable to get money to finance their current shipments, prolongation of debts follows, or, failing that, liquidation is precipitated.

Shows 'London' Beef 34 Per Ct. American

Corporation Votes to Allow Armour's Shop in Smithfield, After Considerable Debate.

LONDON, July 19.—The fact that 34 per cent of the beef supplied to Smithfield, London's biggest meat market comes from American producers was revealed at the City Corporation meeting, when the question of renting certain shops in the market to the Armours was being discussed.

Councillor Kimber, opposing the recommendation, alleged that American firms importing meats to Smithfield artificially inflated prices. Other Councillors defended American meat trade methods which enabled the poor to buy cheaply. One market tenant said: "We want Americans to continue to do a large business in Smithfield."

The recommendation was carried by an overwhelming majority.

New Tariff Will Spur Trade, Says McLean

New York Magnate Confident Business Troubles Are Near End. Much Money Idle.

LONDON, July 19.—James McLean of Phelps, Dodge & Co., New York, and a director in some thirty corporations, who sailed on the Imperator, said:

"Our troubles, due merely to overtrading, were caused by an extraordinary expansion of commerce throughout the world during the past few years. At present securities are being liquidated almost to a standstill, but there is no real depreciation in their value. I believe there is a vast quantity of money lying idle in New York awaiting investment.

"I don't believe this moderate tariff will injure anyone in the slightest, but will rather tend to induce a genuine rush of trade throughout the country."

EARNINGS OF U. S. STEEL ABOVE DIVIDEND NEEDS

NEW YORK, July 19.—The United States Steel Corporation, according to a semi-annual statement just issued, during the first half of 1913 earned sufficient money to meet the half yearly requirements of 3½ per cent on preferred and 2½ per cent on common stock by more than $17,800,000.

There was a surplus at the end of the first quarter after dividend payments of $7,370,000 and there will be a surplus of $10,431,000 based upon the estimated earnings of $37,500,000 for the second quarter.

ODDS AND ENDS OF FINANCE NEWS

There were 1648 vessels, aggregating 382,304 gross tons, built in the United States in fiscal year ended June 30, largest construction since 1908.

Buenos Aires Great Southern Railway proposes to increase capital by £5,000,000, of which £2,650,000 will be issued as soon as possible on the London market.

Merger is planned of Central National Bank and Security Trust Company of Lynn, two of the largest institutions in the city, with combined resources of $8,000,000.

Deutsch Amerikanische Petroleum Gesellschaft, the German subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company, for the year 1912 shows net profits of $747,712, an increase for the year of $132,049.

James J. Hill, now in Canada, expresses opinion that Canada has been borrowing too freely, that both individuals and municipalities have been going ahead too rapidly and that the Dominion now has all the railroad mileage 8,000,000 peopel can support.

So far as the trade's information goes the world is now consuming wheat on a scale about 25 per cent larger than that of 15 or 20 years ago. Last year's world's shipments were the largest ever known by about 12,000,000 bushels and figure out 665,522,000, or a rate of nearly 12,800,000 bushels weekly.

Last year freight shipments into and out of Pittsburg aggregated 171,071,238 tons, of which 164,594,915 tons went to railroads, while 12,476,323 tons was water-borne, a new high record, eclipsing the best previous record, that of 1910, by 9,337,970 tons, or 5.5 per cent. The figures for 1912 reflect an increase of 96.6 per cent over those of 1903, and as compared with those of 1898 they show a gain of 284 per cent.

WILL SPEND MILLION TO IMPROVE BRINSON RAILWAY

SAVANNAH, July 19.—An agreement to place the common stock of the Brinson Railway Company in a voting trust for four years has been approved by the stockholders.

The stock is owned largely by George M. Brinton, of Springfield, Ga., who is president; Mills B. Lane, of the Citizens and Southern Bank, and Jacob Cohen, of the Real Estate Bank and Trust Company, both at Savannah, were named as trustees, and were authorized to name a third trustee to serve with them. Mr. Collins and John E. Foy were elected members of the board of directors, in addition to the other members who were re-elected.

Thus John H. Hunter and Robert M. Hitch will remain on the board. The financing is to be provided through New York financiers, who are represented by James Imbrie, of that city, chairman of the directors of the railroad.

This action means that about $1,000,000 additional is to be invested in the Brinson Railway Company.

B. & O. Year Earnings Exceed $100,000,000

Gross Sets New Record; Net Reduced by Flood Damage—7.12 Per Cent for Common.

The year ended June 30 was a banner one for the Baltimore and Ohio, earnings exceeding $100,000,000 for the first time. But flood damage decreased the net by $498,687. Surplus after all charges and dividends amounted approximately to $1,600,000, a decrease of about $600,000.

Although the estimate to overcome the physicial damage done by the flood was $3,000,000, some permanent work will incur further charges of over $1,000,000.

Gross operating income amounted to $101,541,905, an increase of $8,947,582. Earnings available for dividends on the common stock were equal to 7.12 per cent, compared with 7.58 per cent in the previous year.

AMMONIA BOMBS USED.

Ammonia bombs are being tried out on some of the national forests for the purpose of extinguishing forest fires. They are said to have worked well in the case of brush fires where the firefighters find difficulty in getting near enough to the burning area to beat out the flames. Each bomb exploded will extinguish fire in a circle of about five yards in diameter.

Rumely Plants Shut, Year's Orders Filled

The Important Question to the Stockholder Is, "When Will Manufacturing be Resumed"

NEW YORK, July 19.—A dispatch from Chicago to the effect that the Rumely Company is planning practically to close down its plants for making thrashing machines and tractor engines appeared at a casual reading to supply a bearish argument on the Rumely stocks.

Inquiry at the company's bankers brought the confirmation of the statement, but also developed some additional information which removed much of its possibilities as a market factor. The company will stop construction of thrashers and tractors, as well as several other lines of farm machinery, around August 1, because the year's orders have been filled. The remaining months of 1913 will be devoted to deliveries and collections.

The contraction of manufacturing in midsummer is a seasonal matter, followed to a greater or less extent by all concerns making farming implements. Of far more significance than the reason for closing the Rumely plants is the problem as to when they will again start up.

If usually new contracts have been received by the late autumn to warrant the resumption of business on a substantial scale, but such may not be the case this year. A director said yesterday that he would not be surprised if there should not be much activity before January 1.

TREE PLANTER TRIED.

Experiments with a tree planting machine at the Utah Agricultural Experiment Station indicate that it may be used to advantage in reforesting old burned areas on the national forests.

GIRL PLAYS MAN AND WINS LOVE OF HATED RIVAL

Unique Vengeance Is Planned by Young Woman Whose Sweetheart Proved Faithless.

WHEELING, W. VA., July 19.—Jilted by her lover, Bessie McIntyre, of North Wheeling, a pretty 18-year-old girl, secured an odd but effective revenge on her rival, who "stole" her sweetheart and on the faithless lover at the same time.

June 25 Harry Pendleton, a well-known young business man of this city, informed Miss McIntyre that he could not see her again as he had become engaged to another girl. By a dint of inquiry the jilted girl ascertained that the girl who had stolen her lover's affections was Miss Henrietta Aiken, of Bridgeport, Ohio, just across the river from this city. Securing permission from her parents, Miss McIntyre had her hair cut off, and donning one of her brother's suits, she visited Bridgeport and met Miss Allen.

It was a case of love at first sight—on the part of the Bridgeport girl. Miss McIntyre masquerading as "Lawrence Dessing," was a devoted lover, and every night found "Lawrence Dessing" at the home of Miss Aiken.

Last Sunday night while "Dessing" and Miss Aiken were sitting on the front porch of the latter's home, Pendleton appeared and demanded to know why another had usurped his place. Miss Aiken angrily dismissed Pendleton and ordered him never to call on her again. She then confessed her love to her companion, the pseudo "Dessing." Miss McIntyre, dressed in a gown of the latest mode last night met Miss Aiken in this city. Before Miss Aiken could speak the North Wheeling girl told her how she had revenged herself.

In a moment the girls were fighting and were separated by the police.

Must Stay Maids to Get Mother's Estate

Daughters of Ohio Woman Are Beneficiaries Under Will Which Prohibits Their Marriage.

BELLEFONTAINE, OHIO, July 19. One of the most remarkable wills ever admitted to probate in this county was made by Jane Lake, late of Richwood, who left considerable property to her three daughters, Linie, Nora and Ida.

The provisions are that the estate shall be equally divided among the three daughters, on the condition that none of them will marry. If one of them marries, her share of the estate goes to the two remaining single. If all three should marry, the entire estate is to go to the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Concussion of Brain Kills a Gigantic Frog

Oscar Siler went to Mich.
Thought he'd rest and catch some fish,
Pitched his tent on Fountain Lake—
Listen to this nature fake:

FOUNTAIN, MICH., July 19.—Oscar Siler, of Chicago, who has been fishing on the lake near here, claims to have killed the record frog. Said frog is said to weigh 6 pounds and to be 15 inches long. It will be sent to Chicago. The frog died of concussion of the brain. Thus—

"Kerplunk," croaked the prehistoric bullfrog.
"You're drunk," piped the monarch of the bog.
Whereupon Siler (who was sober) bounced a rock off the bullfrog's bean.

Miner Returns Rich To Find Wife Dead

Comes Back Home to Make Restitution for Having Deserted Her 20 Years Ago.

MEEKER, COLO., July 19.—Wealthy and anxious to take back his wife, whom he deserted twenty years ago, Josiah Bronson, a modern Enoch Arden, found the old home in ruins and the wife dead. From the old-timers who had known him in the early days he learned that his wife, believing him dead, had married his twin brother.

Two children, he learned, were born of the marriage, and upon the death of the mother were sent to relatives in West Virginia.

Bronson declared he would care for the children. "I shall give them the best education money can buy," he said. "I deserted their mother when she was just a young woman, and now I want to atone for the cowardly act."

Tight Shoes Land Thief Behind Bars

Burglar in Jewelry Store Kicks Heels to Relieve Pressure and Alarms Police.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Frank Davies, who at times also gives his name as John Simpson and Joe Allen, became irritated last night while scooping unset diamonds in his hat in a dark room because the toes of his new shoes were too narrow.

Intending to relieve the squeeze, he kicked toward the floor with his heel, but miscalculated and drove his foot through a glass show case. A policeman in a saloon on the floor below heard the noise and arrested Davies, who says he is an ex-convict and that he arrived here from Los Angeles at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. The diamonds were claimed to-day by the jewelers from whom they were taken.

PERSEVERANCE WINS FOR SHOW AT KNOXVILLE

Conservation Exposition Will Open September 1 Free of Debt and Complete.

KNOXVILLE, July 19.—In an authorized interview T. A. Wright, president of the National Conservation Exposition to be held in this city from September 1 to November 1, makes the statement that the exposition will open its gates on September 1 complete to the last detail, and that the exposition will be opened absolutely free of debt of any kind.

So far as is known, this will set a record for expositions anywhere. The financing of the project in the face of a number of disappointments is something in which the officers and directors of the exposition take pride.

"At the time the exposition project was first broached," says President Wright's statement, "it was expected that the Congress of the United States would appropriate $250,000 for a large exposition building. Through the action of one Knoxville man and of two or three Congressmen this appropriation was defeated in the last days of the last Congress. But the United States Government will be represented at the exposition by suitable exhibits from its various departments. The defeating of the appropriation bill will make no difference in the size or the quality of the Government displays.

"I have waited so that I might be sure of my ground in making the statement that the exposition will be complete on the opening day, and that it will be absolutely free of debt on that day.

"The exhibit space under cover has been increased more than four times what it was at former expositions and the Midway and outdoor space have been increased more than five times that heretofore used. The success of the exposition is assured. It will be the greatest exposition ever held in the South."

Five large exposition buildings have been added to the plant of the old Appalachian Exposition, and four of these are finished to the last nail; the fifth is under roof. A new Midway street, with over a mile of frontage, has been constructed. Only last week it was found necessary to add 30,000 square feet of space to the grounds in order that all applicants for outdoor space might be taken care of.

FISHERMAN FINDS $1,400 WORTH OF PEARLS IN HAUL

PEORIA, ILL., July 19.—Joe Johnson, a clam fisherman on the Illinois River, found two gems among the pile of clams brought in from a day's haul. Johnson, thinking the pearls of unusual value, took them to a jeweler, who to-day gave him $1,400 for the two stones.

BRYAN DODGES PAPER'S QUESTIONS

wrong. It is using the office for making money."

Senator Bristow said action would be had on his resolution. He said, too, that there would be quite a little discussion on the subject. It probably will be referred to a committee. Senator Bacon, chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, says it probably would be "handled in a routine way."

Mr. Bacon says he thought the resolution was introduced to bring about a discussion of the course of Mr. Bryan, and that remedial legislation was not demanded.

Many Senators, while not permitting themselves to be quoted, agreed that Mr. Bryan had made a grave mistake. Mr. Townsend, of Michigan, holds that the Secretary is doing that which is denied to every subordinate employe of the Government and denounced it as reprehensible.

Among those who talked were the following:

Senator Weeks, of Massachusetts—A Cabinet member can live on $12,000 a year if he does not have large family expenses, and he can live comfortably and respectably.

Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania—Samuel J. Randall, one of the greatest of Democrats, served this country for a whole generation, living on a salary of $5,000 a year. I have always disapproved of the custom that has grown up resulting in the very considerable neglect of official duties on the part of public men in order that they may go on lecture circuits.

Senator Tillman, of South Carolina—While Mr. Bryan's speaking tours will serve a good purpos in that he always preached true Democracy and patriotism and Christian living, he can never again appear as a knight errant of Democracy.

Representative Willis, of Ohio—I am opposed to a Government official capitalizing his job. The Secretaryship of State is a man's job. Mr. Bryan should stay here and attend to the work of his office. He has enough on his hands with the present critical situation in Mexico, the unsettled questions with Japan and the matter of the Panama Canal tolls. We members of Congress have to stick to our tasks.

Representative Miller, of Minnesota—Mr. Bryan is giving this country a remarkable exhibition in the difference between his preachings during the past seventeen years and his present practices.

Representative Kahn, of California—There are many able men in the employ of the Government who are prevented by law and the hours of service from increasing their incomes through additional employment.

Representative Payne, of New York—I have been able to live on my salary as a member of the House. I can not see why the Secretary of State is unable to live on his salary.

Towne, Bryan's Friend, Calls Step Unfortunate.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Secretary Bryan's determination to supplement his official salary of $12,000 by going on a six weeks' lecture tour has awakened severe criticism from the men who supported him when he first loomed on the political horizon.

Charles A. Towne, who was one of the speakers at the famous "Dollar Dinner" in April, 1899, organized to emphasize Bryan's Jeffersonian simplicity of tastes, discussed Mr. Bryan's new move reluctantly, as they are still close friends.

"I consider the Secretary's plan to continue his lecture tours while occupying the chief place in the President's Cabinet most unfortunate," said Mr. Towne. "These are days when great national issues must be decided, and when the Secretary of State is required to give every bit of time and energy in behalf of the nation. It is a time when men intrusted with the affairs of the Government must have their minds occupied with nothing else except the questions of state.

Explanation Only Makes It Worse, Says World.

(From The N. Y. World, July 16.)

It is with the most profound regret that we have to note the position into which the Secretary of State has drawn himself and the explanation now given which only makes it worse.

Whether Mr. Bryan can afford to take a prolonged vacation at just this critical time for the Administration and his own high office may be a question, but a minor one. Whether, under the frankly admitted circumstances of personal fortune, he can only afford a money-making vacation, must be something less than a question with the great masses of the people whose life he has lived in sympathy.

The real question is whether the Government for such a position as his may not justly claim an undivided service, and whether any other view is compatible with a worthy ambition. We have had men in high office who have sacrificed personal fortune to render such undivided service and could afford it. We have had many more men there who have done this and could not afford it.

We can not think of the President of the United States doing otherwise. We should not be able to think of any of his Cabinet doing otherwise.

Action Most Bizarre, Says Pall Mall Gazette.

LONDON, July 19.—Regarding Secretary Bryan's lecture tour, The Pall Mall Gazette to-night says:

"It is a singular paradox in a country where there is so much money in politics as in the United States that the chief member of the President's cabinet should find his official salary inadequate to support his existence.

"We can quite understand why $12,000 a year is not enough for the Secretary of State, considering the American scale of life, but one would have expected a man of Bryan's moral courage to call upon his country for a living wage, to which he is entitled, rather than to propose going on the stump as a lecturer, in the roles of a minister and a professional entertainer.

"They make a most bizarre combination to all British ways of thinking, and we shall be surprised if even American opinion reconciles itself to their incongruity."

BRYAN OUGHT TO LIVE ON HIS PAY OR QUIT, SAY SENATORS

Explanation of Secretary of State More Amazing Than His Acts, Declares Bristow, Who Introduced Resolution to Investigate

Wilson's Premier Capitalizing His Position, Asserts Representative Willis—Much Work To Be Done in His Department.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The consensus of opinion among public and private persons in the National Capital is that if Secretary Bryan can not live on his salary of $12,000 a year he ought to resign and continue his lecture tours as a private individual.

Mr. Bryan to-day gave evidence of the fact that the country-wide criticism had got under his skin. That he was irritated and impatient and realized the "bad break" he has made was apparent to his subordinates throughout the day. Somewhat petulantly he declared that the press of the country might have assumed that "my lecture engagements are subject to cancellation."

Publicly, Mr. Bryan announced to the country that he could not live on a salary about which his fellow Cabinet members have not complained, and in a second statement, given out authoritatively, complained that criticism was groundless.

Evades Paper's Questions.

The American to-day endeavored to obtain from Mr. Bryan more in detail the reasons that actuated him to arrange to leave his post of duty at a time when very grave matters pertaining to our relations with foreign powers were pending. He declined to answer certain questions and refused to discuss the subject of his official pronunciamento.

Mr. Bryan was asked these questions by The American:

"If you feel your duty is to your private pocketbook rather than to the 'great common people' to whom you have preached simplicity for the last seventeen years, why do you not resign and devote your entire time to the lecture platform and literary pursuits?

"If you believe the people have called you to the great office you can fill so ably, do you not believe that it is your duty as an American and a patriot to sacrifice your personal interests for the interests of your country? The more so from the fact that you admit you have saved about $200,000, which is considerably more than a competence when invested shrewdly?

"You say that you entered one campaign from the Chautauqua platform. Is it not a fact that you look upon the present and future engagements as the best opportunity to get in direct touch with the people, who, you contend, will elect the next President by direct vote?"

Bryan Leaves to Lecture.

No answer was returned to the questions. Later in the day he left Washington to keep an engagement to lecture.

Senator Bristow, author of the resolution calling upon the President for information as to what salary ought to be paid to enable Mr. Bryan to stay in Washington and attend to his public duties, to-day came back with a rejoinder to Mr. Bryan's explanation of last night.

"Secrttary Bryan's second statement has astounded me even more than his first one," said Mr. Bristow. "That the present Secretary of State should have such a sordid view of the Governmtnt service is amazing.

"Secretary Bryan says he has a right to use his vacation for lecturing if he sees fit. But he is to be away on one tour of six weeks, and there is no telling where his vacation will end.

Needed at His Post.

"Besides, since he has been Secretary of State he has been in Washington only about one-half the time so far. If ever there was a time when the Secretary of State was needed on the job it is now, when so many important questions are up for consideration. To cause the people to pay money to hear the Secretary of State, the highest officer in the Cabinet, deliver addresses is all

Girl Traps a Thief In Telephone Booth

Sets Shoulder Against Door and Holds Man Until Cries Bring Her Aid.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Holding a thief trapped in a telephone booth, Miss Florence Rosenthal, cashier in Edward Feuhrer's drug store at No. 53 Second avenue, finally succeeded in delivering him to the police yesterday.

The captive, who said he was Alexander Moskowitz, 17 years old, was so long "telephoning" that Miss Rosenthal went to the booth to see if he was dead or alive. She saw him opening the money box with a screwdriver, she says. Screaming for her employer, she set her shoulder against the door, and the youth could not force it open. Moskowitz was held for trial.

Burleson Eats but Two Meals Each Day

Postmaster General Believes in and Practices "Early to Bed, Early to Rise" Theory.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Postmaster General Burleson believes thoroughly in the old adage, "Early to bed and early to rise makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise." He practices this theory himself and in addition supplements it by a two-meal-a-day program.

His daily routine is as follows:

"I arise at 5 in the morning.

"Read the papers until 6.

"Breakfast.

"Go over papers and reports until 9.

"Work at the Postoffice Department until 5 in the afternoon without any lunch or lunch hour.

"Dinner at 6 to 7 o'clock.

"Eight o'clock—go to bed."

"Cooling Period" to Halt Divorce Evil

Pastor Suggests That Three Months Elapse Between Final Hearing and Decision of Court.

ATLANTIC CITY, July 19.—Speaking on "The Modern Problem of Marriage and Divorce," before the Central Conference of American Rabbis here to-day, the Rev. L. Leonard Levy, of Pittsburg, advocated a "cooling" period of three months from the time of the final hearing until the decision is announced as the solution of the problem of minimizing the divorce evil. "This cooling period," said the speaker, "would cover a time during which neither of the parties at interest could marry."

Even Take Fizz Out Of City's Soda Water

Members of Cincinnati Board of Health to Censor All Soft Drinks Sold.

CINCINNATI, July 19.—The "fizz and bubble" in soda water and ginger ale manufactured in this city is to be no more, if the Board of Health has its way about the matter, and it seems likely at this time that its contention will hold good. The board has asked the Council to pass an ordinance limiting the amount of alcohol to one-half of 1 per cent in any one drink of this kind. If the resolution is passed and made a law no dealer will be allowed to make soft drinks without first getting a permit.

Girl Fan Loses Teeth But Stays Out Game

Foul Tip Injures Fair Baseball Enthusiast, but Her Ardor Is Not Diminished.

ZANESVILLE, OHIO, July 19.—Miss Cora Bauer, of this city, was struck in the face by a foul tip while watching a ball game between the Akron and Zanesville teams here. Her nose was split open, three teeth knocked out and she may be disfigured for life. Nevertheless, after being treated by a physician, she decided to stay out the game.

Marries His Aunt, 12 Years His Senior

Young Actor Takes as Bride the Recently Divorced Wife of His Uncle.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Earl Oscar Schenck, 24 years old, an actor, of No. 600 West 138th street, was married in the City Hall yesterday to his aunt, Marion Carr Schenck, twelve years his senior.

The bride of yesterday was married in April, 1899, to Oscar A. Schenck, the uncle of her present husband, who on January 17 of this year divorced her in Columbus, Ohio, "for gross neglect of duty."

ONLY AMERICAN KING YEARNS TO QUIT HIS THRONE

All of Former Broker's Thirty Wives Want English Gowns. Jealousy Spreads.

JOB IS NOT A HAPPY ONE

NewYorker Who Won South Sea Kingdom With a Phonograph Faces Petticoat Revolt.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Archibald C. Everett, the only American King, practically has made up his mind to renounce his throne. He is King of the Island of Arorae, one of the Gilbert group of South Sea Islands. Until 1909 he was a New York curb broker. The insistence of his many wives for English gowns and his loneliness have led to the determination to give-up his kingly honors. He tells of his intentions in a letter just received by a friend in this city.

The career of Everett has been unusual. In 1909, when he was in business in this city, he was thought to be well to do. He met reverses, however, in Wall Street, and in the latter part of 1909 disappeared, without leaving a word of farewell. Nothing was heard from him until in 1911, in a remarkable letter, he told of being made the King of Arorae, in the South Sea Islands. He had landed, he said, on one of the small islands, and had gone from there to other islands of the Gilbert group. Finally he reached Arorae. It was a phonograph which he had in his possession that eventually won for him his throne. The King at that time of the island took a great fancy to the phonograph.

Phonograph Wins Kingdom.

By the hour Everett, according to his own account, entertained the monarch, constantly growing in his graces. Finally the old King adopted Everett, and when he died Everett succeeded to the throne. According to the custom of the island, Everett took a good many wives.

Everett took a very lively interest in the affairs of the island. He increased its business with traders. The principal product of the island is copra, or dried cocoanut meat. The letter, in part, reads:

"At the present time the King's job is about the last thing to be desired, and do not be surprised if I walk in on you some day in the near future. I am about tired of the job.

"For some time past conditions here have steadily become worse. It started when my wives, of whom there are about 30, insisted on wearing English dresses. A trader who stopped here presented one of the natives with three English gowns in exchange for some copra. The native presented them to the King, and I in turn gave them to three of my wives. The natives have never worn any clothes to speak of. Imagine my surprise, then, when the three dresses became the center of a regular war among my wives.

"The three victorious wives managed to get them on somehow, and that settled it. Every one of them set up a kick for a dress, and they worried the life out of me. I was forced to get the gowns. The first trader that stopped at the island from Australia was commissioned to bring them back on the next trip, and in due course of time they arrived.

Jealousy Over English Gowns.

"The dresses were of all colors and sizes. Most of the people here are about the same stature, few being over four feet six or seven. Some of the dresses were too small, others too large, but they created a sensation. Dressed in those creations, with bare brown feet stepping proudly, my wives paraded up and down the island, causing every woman in the kingdom, young and old, to grow jealous.

"So far, half of the female population have been given the gowns and the other half are waiting eagerly. The worst part of it all is that the men are as enthusiastic over this new style of dress as the women, and my objections have not added to my popularity whatever. I am daily expecting the men to demand suits of flannel and silk shirts.

Affairs on a Business Basis.

"I have not done so badly here financially. I put the business of the island on a business basis soon after becoming King, and things have flourished.

"I don't know how the people here will take my departure. They may even try to prevent it, and I have been considering the best method to leave. I could probably get aboard one of the trading ships and get to Australia, after which it would be easy, of course, to get back to the United States."

Congregation Built Up by Band Concerts

Ohio Pastor With Novel Methods Now Claims Biggest Sunday School in World.

CANTON, OHIO, July 19.—With the attraction of a band concert in the church roof garden and a double orchestra concert in the church auditorium, the Rev. P. H. Welshimer, of Canton's First Christian Church, has built up what he claims is the biggest Sunday school in the world within five years.

The average attendance in this hot month of July is 3,251. The record attendance is 4,714. Several Sundays back 38 babies were checked in the "babies' check room" of the $90,000 church. The men's class of 250 had to hold their session in the street while the teacher explained the lesson from the tonneau of an automobile.

Congress to Lose Costly Stationery

Government Printer Is Ordered to Stop Use of Costly Material for Lawmakers.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Members of Congress will draw no more costly embossed stationery at the expense of the Government. Hereafter they will get along with plain, every-day printed letterheads and envelopes.

The Joint Committee on Printing discovered that the Government Printing Office last year turned out 11,000,000 embossed pieces of stationery at an extra cost of $30,000. An order has been issued to the Government Printer to stop this extravagance.

On the Senate side of Congress this economy reform is resented, but it goes just the same. If Senators want stationery de luxe they must foot the bills out of their private purse.

3 Drowned Trying To Avoid Wet Feet

Women Stand Up In Leaky Boat, Capsizing Craft in View of Hundreds.

NORRISTOWN, PA., July 19.—Caught in a storm while boating on the Schuylkill River, three women, all church workers, were drowned. They are:

Miss Anna Mary Livergood, Miss Emma J. Rex and Miss Helen Green, all of Norristown.

Miss Margaret Green, a sister of Miss Helen Green, clung to the overturned boat and was saved.

The women were within a quarter of a mile of the boat landing when the wind struck them.

The boat began to leak badly. To keep their feet and clothing dry the four girls stood on the seats. The next instant the boat turned over.

Two hundred persons on a boat returning from a park saw the accident.

Blue Cauliflower Is Raised in California

Latest Horticultural Product Is Hybrid of Ordinary Cauliflower and Purple Pickling Cabbage.

OAKLAND, July 19.—Blue cauliflower, the latest novelty in things horticultural, was introduced to the public to-day by Hugo Lilienthal, instructor in the University of California. The new plant is a hybridization of the ordinary cauliflower and the purple "pickling cabbage," declared by the experts to be a "first cousin to the cauliflower." The new vegetable is bright blue in color and stronger than the ordinary cauliflower in flavor.

Only a Bathing Suit Left Friend by Thief

Youth Is Marooned in Atlantic City When Companion Disappears With Money and Clothes.

ATLANTIC CITY, July 19.—Arthur Leonard, a New York youth, spent the entire day on the beach in his bathing suit to-day, following the disappearence of his chum, whose name he refuses to reveal, with four suits of his clothing and all his money.

Leonard wired his relatives in New York State telling them of his predicament. They came here to-night with clothing and rescued him.

Billie Burke Wires She Is Recovering

Actress Was Threatened With Appendicitis, but Did Not Have to Undergo Operation.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Billie Burke, telegraphing the London bureau of The American to-day from Carlsbad in reply to an inquiry concerning her health, says:

"Thanks awfully. Was threatened with appendicitis, but have not had to undergo operation. Recovering nicely.

"BILLIE BURKE."

LOBBY INQUIRY STIRS NATION

Mulhall Story Leaves U. S. Aghast

Power of Interests Vividly Revealed

MARTIN W. MULHALL, former lobbyist of National Association of Manufacturers, whose revelations of corruption startled nation.

Names of Wilson, Taft, Senators and Congressmen Are Dragged Into the Testimony, Showing Corporations Have Set No Limit in Corruption.

STARTLING FACTS REVEALED IN U. S. SENATE INVESTIGATION OF CONGRESSIONAL LOBBY

National Association of Manufacturers raised a slush fund of $500,000 to $700,000 a year to oppose objectionable legislation.

Place in Taft Cabinet pledged to manufacturers by Vorys, Taft manager.

Charges that the big manufacturers had the ears of Taft, Sherman and Cannon.

List of Congressmen in pay of the National Manufacturers' Association disclosed. Also, a list of the "unpurchasable," whom the association hated, and tried to defeat.

Fights made by National Manufacturers' Association on progressive Congressmen and Senators, often successful.

More than 400 letter tell of plans of association to become sinister factor in controlling the wheels of government.

Attempts made to foment strife among labor organizations, and to corrupt labor leaders, even Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison.

Agreement by Woodrow Wilson with Gompers and Morrison that he support Hughes for Senate.

Powers of big business fought Hughes because he was friendly to labor.

Tom Johnson, Senator McComas of Maryland, and others were political victims of the association's vengeance.

Gigantic corruption in Wall Street laid bare in testimony of David Lamar.

Forgery on Union Pacific's books covering item of $82,000,000 charged.

Senate resolutions hawked about Wall street for sale to highest bidder.

The nation to-day stands aghast at the sensational revelations which have come as the result of investigations by the Overman Committee of the United States Senate into the work of lobbies at the National Capital.

It has heard how big business combines and Wall Street operators have made and unmade men in public life, influenced legislation, dominated public opinion, all the time secret and vigilant.

It has learned how big business has become one of the most powerful factors in the American civilization, striking in the dark against men who opposed it.

It has heard the names of the men highest in public life, President Wilson, former President Taft, Senators, Congressmen, Cabinet members, dragged into the testimony, and has learned that certain predatory interests have set no limits in their attempt to corrupt public servants.

The bulk of the startling testimony came from Martin M. Mulhall, for years the servant of the National Association of Manufacturers, and the chief lobbyist of that organization at Washington, and from David Lamar, an operator in stocks, who is known as "The Wolf of Wall Street."

Wilson Starts Inquiry.

The investigation began more than a month ago when President Wilson declared that a lobby, "insidious and industrious" in nature, had long dominated tariff legislation. The announcement did not come unexpectedly, however, and there were many Senators and Congressmen to endorse the Chief Executive. The Senate began immediately its investigation of the charges, empowering a committee, headed by Senator Overman, to conduct the inquiry.

Relatively pointless testimony from men interested in the sugar industry came first, revealing the fact that sugar lobbies were the most industrious. Lobbyists from Hawaii, the Philippines and Louisiana defended their actions by a protest against free sugar. Former Governor Carter of Hawaii declared that the elimination of the duty on sugar would make the Hawaiian Islands merely military posts, destroying their commercial prestige. Frank C. Lowry, of the "free sugar lobby," admitted in the testimony that $25,000 had been spent in four years by the Federal Sugar Refining Company in lobbying operations.

Then came the Mulhall testimony.

Old Age Attributed To Her False Teeth

Woman, Age 99, Declares She Has Used Set 59 Years—Always Chews Well.

WILKESBARRE, PA., July 19.—At the age of 99, Mrs. Levina Derr, of Hudson, declares that her long life is due solely to the fact that she bought a set of good store teeth fifty years ago.

Mrs. Derr is still active. Five generations of her family are living, and she declares she is as young as any of them.

"I was blessed with good teeth," she said, "and I always made it a point to chew my food well. A good stomach is the foundation of good health, and the stomach can not be good unless the teeth are good."

300 "HELLO GIRLS" ASK BOSS TO BE BEST MAN

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, July 19.—The Postmaster General is bewildered over the result of the recent permission which he granted to telephone girls to get married. Three hundred of these girls promptly availed themselves of the chance and every couple asked the Postmaster General to act as best man.

Umbrellas for Farm Hands Is Inducement

Planter Advertises That He Will Supply Them With Sulkies, Sunshades and Ice Cream.

FINDLAY, OHIO, July 19.—There are other communities in this country that are suffering for a lack of farm hands besides Kansas. It is up to H. B. Clark, a farmer in the western part of Hancock County, to make good, else be prosecuted for false advertising, as provided by the new newspaper laws.

In a morning paper Mr. Clark is advertising for farm hands to plow corn. He says he will provide them with riding cultivator, a large sun umbrella for each, ice water to drink and all the ice cream each applicant can eat every other day, with $2.50 a day wages.

GREAT BRITAIN IS AFTER LATEST GERMAN AIR CRAFT

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, July 19.—Great Britain, it is stated, is negotiating for an Unger airship, which is larger, faster and more rigid than any others yet designed, including the Zeppelins.

'Oh Fudge' Strongest Language Permitted

Kansas City Starts Crusade Against Public Swearing—Police Rebuke Violators.

KANSAS CITY, July 19.—Anything stronger than "Oh, fudge!" must not be heard on the streets of Kansas City hereafter. All the ministers of the city and all the members of their churches have started an anti-swearing crusade, and part of the work is to ask persons who are overheard to swear to consider the vulgarity of it and cease the practice.

The Police Department and the street railway company have agreed to join in the crusade, so that hereafter it is part of the policeman's duty to stop swearing as well as breaches of the peace.

Miss Elliott Returns To Stage To Be Happy

Will Play Potiphar's Wife in Sir Herbert Tree's "Joseph and His Brethren."

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Maxine Elliott, yielding to Sir Herbert Tree's persuasion, will return to the stage September 2 in a great production of Louis N. Parker's play, "Joseph and His Brethren." She will play Potiphar's wife.

Miss Elliott gives as the chief reason for her reappearance that every one is happier when occupied. She is now living in her beautiful house at Bushey, just outside London.

STORY OF MULHALL WILL EXTEND U. S. LOBBY INQUIRY

Mulhall represented the National Association of Manufacturers, in Washington. The association has a membership of 225 organizations, among them the most influential of the country, and 4,000 individuals, who control billions of capital.

The burden of his statements were that the association had for years promoted tariff, labor, and general business legislation favorable to itself, had maintained a lobby staff of seventeen, including himself, and former Presidents VanCleave and Kirby, of the association, at the capital to defeat hostile legislation, and it was always seeking and often obtaining control of the House and Senate Committee on Labor and Judiciary.

Created Tariff Commission.

He said that the association's efforts were responsible for the creation of the Tariff Commission under President Taft, and said that nine former Congressmen and J. H. McMichael, chief of pages in the House, had obtained money for services rendered.

More sensational still were the declarations that former President Taft, former Vice President Sherman, and former Speaker Cannon, besides many Congressmen and Senators were among those whom the association could affect by appeals to sentiment or other interests. He told of an unsuccessful attempt to bribe Samuel Gompers, the labor leader, and of successful work among petty labor leaders.

Mulhall told of his own great ingratitude, how he obtained a Federal position through the influence of Senator McComas of Maryland, and at the same time entered the employ of the National Association of Manufacturers, helping to defeat his patron because McComas had been doomed for his opposition to the association.

McComas, it seems, was not the only victim. Tom L. Johnson had been defeated for Mayor of Cleveland, said Mulhall, for his opposition to the association, and William E. Hughes was opposed by the business combine for Senator from New Jersey because he was the advocate of many labor bills. It was in this connection that Wilson, when Governor of New Jersey, had agreed with Gompers and Morrison, the labor leaders, to support Hughes, and had stumped the State in his favor.

Spies Kept in Field.

The work of the association against the eight-hour law, its enmity to most legislation that was favorable to labor, how he kept in occasional communication with former Vice President Sherman, how spies were kept in the field to corrupt minor labor leaders, and to knife opponents, were other sensational bits of the Mulhall testimony.

George Pope, president of the association, and other officials of the organization, have made statements declaring that Mulhall is not to be believed, and that most of the statements were inspired by the fact that Mulhall was discharged by the association. From many persons and places have come statements denouncing Mulhall as a man of reprehensible character, lessening thus the substantiability of many of the charges. But in many instances the declarations he made seemed to be assured of reliability by documents that are substantial.

Interesting is his list of Congressmen whom he said had received pay from the association. He named in this connection J. E. Watson, Republican, of Indiana, the House "whip" of the last administration; J. T. McDermott, Democrat, of Illinois; J. J. Jenkins, Republican, Wisconsin; Kittredge Haskins, Republican, Vermont; C. E. Littlefield, Republican, Maine; H. M. Bannon, Republican, Ohio; H. M. Coudry, Republican, Missouri; J. J. Gardner, Republican, New Jersey; R. B. Cole, Republican, Ohio, and J. H. McMichael, chief of pages.

On the other hand, he named a number of Congressmen who had consistently fought the association's interests, and whom he frankly called "unpurchasable." They are: Speaker Clark, Burnett of Alabama; Mayo-Nichols, Pennsylvania; Parson, Newnard, Virginia; Cooper, Wisconsin; York; Green, Massachusetts; Haugen, Iowa; Wilson, Pennsylvania; McComas, Maryland; Pearre, Maryland; Hughes, New Jersey; Kelliher, Massachusetts; Connolly, Massachusetts, and the labor leaders, Gompers, John Mitchell and Secretary Morrison, of the Federation of Labor. William Barnes, the New York boss, he said, was his friend, and could always be depended on to "take care of bills."

Revelations of Lamar.

On the heels of the Mulhall revelations came those from David Lamar, the smiling, cynical "Wolf of Wall Street." Lamar it was who told of having sent Edward Lauterbach, his attorney, to peddle around Wall Street a resolution calling for an investigation of the Steel Trust by the Senate.

J. P. Morgan was one of the men whom Lauterbach visited on this errand. He told how he had impersonated Congressmen Palmer and Riordan in telephone conversations with Lewis Cass Ledyard and Paul D. Cravath, corporation attorneys, and Robert S. Lovett, the railroad president, feigning knowledge of the intentions of the dominant party. Further, he declared that he had represented himself as fresh from the councils of Speaker Clark and other leaders when he visited Wall Street operators for concessions.

Lamar's most remarkable disclosure was his statement that the Union Pacific Railroad's books had been forged in 1901 to cover an item of $82,000,000, whereby the fortunes of E. H. Harriman, Kuhn, Loeb and Company, and others were built.

Testimonials Discredited.

Discredit has been cast upon Lamar's testimony as on Mulhall's, as coming from a man lacking in scruples. Paul D. Cravath, attorney for the Union Pacific, gave out a statement that the testimony regarding the gigantic forgery was part of a bear campaign against the company.

The Senate investigation will be conducted in detail, and it is likely, to judge from the announced intentions of the committee members, that every member of the Senate and of the House, every public official whose name has been dragged into the affair, and every one in anyway connected with the situation will be called in as witnesses. Appearances seem to indicate that the hearing will last far into the summer.

Mulhall was on the stand the greater part of last week explaining a batch of correspondence which had passed between him and political and labor leaders throughout the United States. The correspondence, according to evidence which has been revealed, he has sought to sell to magazines and newspapers several times, but in vain. Nonchalantly, the ex-lobbyist has pointed out letter after letter from prominent men, talking of alleged significant deals almost carelessly.

"This is a letter from Senator Foraker," he said, indicating one. "It was asking me to see a labor man about his chances for re-election to the Senate. I think he was considering the Presidency at the time."

Secrets of big politics are being bared daily during the investigation. Details of how spies worked among the labor men, and of the secret methods of big business have been explained by Mulhall at more than one point in his testimony.

In defense of his own lobbying, Mulhall made statements that a labor lobby existed, naming Samuel Gompers. As a result, Gompers and J. P. Bird, general manager of the National Association of Manufacturers, will be brought before the committee to explain their activities in the cause of labor and capital, respectively.

Inez Milholland's Wedding Blow to Suffragists

Her Romance May Annul Marriage to the Cause

Beautiful Leader of Votes for Women Won After Courtship on Two Continents.

Mrs. Eugen Boissevain, who was Miss Inez Milholland, famous suffragist beauty and orator, before her marriage to wealthy Dutchman last week.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Suffrage leaders of the United States are today bowed in spirit. They can think of their recent victory in Illinois without smiling. They read of success of women jurors and policemen with no show of ecstasy. Their minds are troubled. They seek to know whether Mrs. Eugen Boissevain will be as potent a personality for the cause as was Inez Milholland before she suddenly decided to take unto herself a husband in the form of the wealthy Dutchman she wedded Tuesday in London.

For Inez Milholland has been no small force in the suffrage movement in the United States. She graduated from Vassar just about the time when the votes for women idea traveled across the seas from England, and she has been right on the firing line in the battle for the ballot ever since.

Beauty of Suffrage Ranks.

Miss Milholland, beg pardon, Mrs. Boissevain, has ever been in the specially mentioned class in every important suffrage movement. She has been the American Christobal Pankhurst, only more so, though it has not been recorded that she has smashed anything, or has had to dodge extradition treaties to keep from the painful necessity of going on a hunger strike.

Even before she graduated from Vassar, Miss Milholland was known to fame. Her remarkable beauty, her mentality and personal magnetism made her a leader in this great girls' college. She was the champion all around athlete and held a world's record for putting the shot.

After leaving Vassar, she went in for the law and the pursuit of the ballot. Her beauty and powers of oratory made her a leader quickly. Her pictures soon became almost as familiar a feature of newspaper front pages as the physiognomy of Colonel Roosevelt.

During the strike of the garment workers in New York, several years ago, Miss Milholland volunteered for picket duty and it was her oratory that kept the girls stubbornly on the strike until they partially won their demands.

In the first big suffrage parade in New York she was a battalion leader and was a striking figure as she rode astride on a big bay charger.

Challenges Orator Heflin.

She again achieved prominence by challenging Representative Tom Heflin of Alabama to joint debate when that doughty Congressman spoke disparagingly of the cause, and though it is known that Mr. Heflin loves to speak and delights in debate, he carefully avoided meeting Miss Milholland on the forum.

In the great suffrage parade in Washington the day before President Wilson's inauguration Miss Milholland led the procession as the herald of the cause. She was mounted on a pure white horse and was clad in robes of white, while a coronet surmounted her magnificent hair which fell loosely down her back.

So striking was her appearance that she was quickly an object of the attacks of the thugs and boors who tried to break up the parade, and it is recorded that one of these men received a blow on the jaw from the fist of the young woman who once held the world shot-put record.

Lately Miss Milholland has been doing magazine work, and though socially a favorite, has always declared that matrimony was not for her.

"I am wedded to the cause," she told her admirers, among whom were Sidney Smith, the New York clubman; John Fox, Jr., author and former husband of Fritzi Scheff, and Lord Curzon, formerly viceroy of India.

Whether this marriage will annul her former marriage to the cause is the question that perplexes the suffrage leaders, but they, as a rule, protest that it will not.

John E. Milholland, her father, was evidently not greatly shocked by the marriage. Here is what he cabled his daughter:

"Have not been so mad in two hundred years. You should be boiled in oil. Do you expect forgiveness until the next century. Indefensible chip of the old block, you have given us a pretty rough deal, but nevertheless I humbly and fervently pray God's blessing upon you and yours forever. "PATER."

Boissevain's Brother Elated.

Robert W. Boissevain, brother of the bridegroom, was in a decidedly agreeable frame of mind yesterday in his office at No. 17 Battery place. Besides calling his brother a "lucky dog" and describing him as being "smiled upon by the gods," he said that the new Mrs. Boissevain has now seven sisters-in-law who possess collectively 25 children and that all these seven Boissevain sisters are suffragists of the "non-militant type."

"We are of an old family, originally French, but Dutch by adoption," said Mr. Boissevain. "My brother is a banker, and in his own Amsterdam circle considered rich. Of course, his guilders would not compare with the dollars of the American millionaires, but he is now sufficiently blest.

"Wireless" in Courtship.

"Eugen, who is 33 years old, and my brother Jan came over to New York on the Olympic to pay me a visit," he said. "They arrived June 10 and stopped at the Holland House with me. William Marconi, the wireless discoverer, and Mrs. Marconi were here at the same time. My brother and I have known Mr. Marconi for years, and I now understand that the Marconis have known the Milholland family for a long time.

"Anyway, two days after the arrival of my brothers, that is, June 12, I was dining with them in the Holland House and Mr. and Mrs. Marconi entered the dining room with one of the most beautiful women we had ever seen. Miss Milholland was presented to us, and my brother Eugen lost interest in all other things then and there.

"Eugen and Jan had planned to tour the States for six weeks at least, but during the dinner Miss Milholland said something about leaving for Europe early in July. The plans of Eugen, I could see, went flying.

"But when Miss Milholland decided to sail to Europe with the Marconis on the Mauretania on July 2 Eugen engaged passage on the same liner.

MAZDAZNANS EAT FLOWERS AND SING TO THE SUN

All This in Classic Boston, Where the Cult Has a Membership Small but Exclusive.

BOSTON, July 19.—It is ancient history that Nebuchadnezzer went out and ate grass like an ox. Out in the Back Bay and up in Lowell there can be found small yet select circles of folk who eat grass and say they enjoy it.

Not only this, but they worship the sun, pray to the sun, sing to the sun, take sun baths, dew baths, eat rose petals and parsles, drive out disease by fasting spells (or say they do so), fast for days and then fatten up on a diet of water to drink and violets to eat, kiss and rekiss, and try to be as happy and contented as can be.

These people are the Mazdaznans or Sun Worshipers. Into their innermost shrines have penetrated none but ardent devotees, so that none of their rites have been made public. As revealed for the first time at the big Gahanbar, or national peace congress of the Mazdaznans, these rites are weird enough—strange to the outside world, but taken as a matter of course by the Mazdaznans.

And the strange part of the rites and worship is that the devout worshipers believe their practice will lengthen their years into three or four centuries.

Secret Rites of Cult.

Another thing about the sun folk is that they don't worry. So in the hot weather they manage to keep cool figuratively and physically. They usually look happy and contented when met on the street.

None outside the cult itself knew—up to the holding of the recent Gahanbar or Congress—of the secret rites of the Mazdaznans. These are practiced in the inner circles, so called.

For years the famous "Green Book" of the Mazdaznans was a mystery sealed to the eyes of ordinary mortals. The book was guarded sacredly by the Sun Worshipers. In it are printed the precepts of the cult.

Here are some of them:

You can get cured of anything if you have faith enough long enough.

Sickness, sin and poverty will be eradicated by Mazdaznanism.

The fly you swat may be the incarnated soul of a great-great-great-grandmother.

Be careful, then, how you swat the flies.

Obstinacy Cause for Pain.

Pain is nothing but the result of obstinacy in you. If you are suffering from a toothache, it is because you are "declining to yield to the peaceful operations of intelligence."

Never go under the surgeon's knife or take "herbal medicine."

Deny the "bonds of ancestral relation through sickness, sin or sorrow."

And practice these things: Deep or "conscious" breathing and vegetarianism.

If you can do these things, you may become a Mazdaznan, so the "Green Book" says.

The High Priestess is Mrs. Marie Elizabeth Roth Hilton, wife of Dr. George Hilton, of Lowell.

In the inner worship Hanish, the leader, is His Humbleness, Mrs. Hilton is Spenta Marie—the equivalent of "holy mother."

Their chief New England shrine is the Mazdaznan Temple, in Lowell. This was formerly a barn belonging to Dr. Hilton, but later converted into a "house of worship."

The central figure in the worship is Mrs. Hilton, the High Priestess. She is the mother of two pretty daughters, one of whom, the elder, Miss Ruthken Mariana Hilton, is being educated to follow in her mother's steps as High Priestess. Some day pretty Miss Ruthken—her name before the court changed it was Ruth Mildred Brubaker, daughter of Mrs. Hilton by her first marriage—will be the leader of the Mazdaznans. The other daughter is Miss Constance Cleopatra Hilton.

The majority of the followers of the "Little Master," Otoman Zar Adusht Hanish, are the persons of middle life and evidently of generous means. While a few of the cult are young women of surpassing beauty, yet the advanced philosophic principles of Mazdaznan are so complex and abstract that only those of mature mind are intellectually and spiritually capable of comprehending them. Therefore, there is a dearth of young people in the cult.

Automobile Driver Kills Deer With Car

Horn Frightens Animal But He Afterwards Turns to Fight and Pierces Tire With Horns.

UKIAH, CAL., July 19.—W. C. Jones, of Los Angeles, ran down a big deer with his auto near Largo yesterday when it jumped over the fence in front of the machine. Jones opened his throttle and turned loose the horn. The noise frightened the animal, and, after a half mile chase, it turned to give battle. The deer made one vicious lunge forward, its horn piercing the front tire, the impact breaking its neck. Jones loaded his prize into the machine.

TON OF SILKWORMS BUMPED.

Marries and Steals To Reform a Girl

Divinity Student Admits Taking Money Trusted to Him Because He Loved Woman.

DENVER, July 19.—William Schulz, student of divinity at Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, arrested here on a charge of embezzling $38 from the student body, whose cashier he was, says he married Miss Thelma Gillion and became a defaulter, not only because he loved the girl, but because he desired to assist her in giving up her former way of living.

That Schulz had partly succeeded in his work of reclamation is the belief of all Denver people who have come in contact with the young woman since she and Schulz arrived in this city. They unite in saying that there is no better behaved young woman in Denver than Mrs. Schulz.

Newark Merchant's Offer to Outfit Children Eagerly Accepted by Woman—Babies Doing Well.

NEWARK, July 19.—Three years ago the head of a large department store here announced that he stood ready to outfit any set of three children of one birth in this city. His offer was never accepted until last night, when a claim was put in by Joseph Reinon, of No. 61 Boyde street, whose wife, Julia, found herself with two little girls and a boy to share the offer. All three children and their mother, who is only 21 years old, are doing well. Complete outfits for the three were provided to-day.

HORSE FALLS IN FISSURE IN SINKING KANSAS FARM

HOISINGTON, KANS., July 19.—Fissures varying from a few inches to a foot and a half in width and extending several feet into the ground have opened up in L. E. Baker's alfalfa field near this city and are causing a great deal of speculation.

There have been no indications of an earthquake of any sort, but the ground seems to be sinking away. The fissures were discovered when Baker missed one of his horses and found it imprisoned in a fissure.

CRAWFORD HEIRS EXPECT SEARCH FOR BARBER TO BARE PRE-NUPTIAL PLOT

Relatives Think That Lump Will Tell Woman Held on Poison Charge Planned to Wed Him on Her Husband's Death.

If the tireless search which is being directed by Atlanta lawyers discovers in New York a man named Fred Lump, the prosecution in the case against Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, who is charged with poisoning her husband, Joshua B. Crawford, thinks a pre-nuptial plot against Crawford can be proved.

The alleged plot was between Mrs. Crawford, then Mrs. Savage, and Lump. She would marry the wealthy Crawford, obtain his money, and then marry Lump, say her accusers.

Lump is a barber by trade and a Bohemian by nativity. He is supposed to be in New York, and in that city detectives in the employ of the prosecution have been at work for several days. Every message that comes from them, however, is one of failure.

Colonel James Makes Charge.

The charge of a plot first was made by Col. J. S. James, who is attorney for the contesting Crawford heirs, who ordered the arrest of Lump. Colonel James said that Lump admitted his being in Atlanta at the time of Crawford's death, and that other testimony valuable to the prosecution was given by him in deposition several weeks ago. But present search for the Bohemian barber has proved fruitless.

Colonel James points to Mrs. E. C. Bursener as one of the witnesses of the prosecution to substantiate the murder plot charge. Mrs. Bursener, it is claimed, will testify that she frequently heard Mrs. Crawford say that she would marry Crawford, get his money, and later run away with Lump. The prosecution will seek to prove also by Mrs. Gertrude A. Painter, it is said, that there was a definite agreement to this plan existent between Mrs. Crawford and Lump.

The forces that are trying to saddle Mrs. Crawford with the murder charge are scoring heavily in the closely-allied civil suit. Heirs of Joshua B. Crawford, trying to break the will by which the widow received the bulk of the estate, charging undue influence, have produced a number of witnesses to swear to an antagonism between Crawford and Mrs. Mary B. Crawford.

One of the witnesses was Mrs. L. C. Dillingsley, who testified that Joshua B. Crawford said, time and again, that he would not marry the woman. This statement was elicited in the attempt to prove that Crawford was not rational, and probably was intoxicated, when he married Mrs. Crawford.

Drunkenness Is Charged.

Mrs. Dillingsley, who said she lived in the Crawford home on West Peachtree street before Joshua Crawford's death, told of instances of alleged cruelty on Mrs Crawford's part, directed particularly toward a Miss Scott. Mrs. Sallie Alexander, an old woman of Henry County, was another witness by whom it was sought to prove habitual drunkenness on Crawford's part.

Mrs. Crawford, released from the Tower on bail of $6,250, has remained in the seclusion of her home on West Peachtree street all week, steadfastly quiet and refusing all statements in the face of the accusations against her. She has said nothing regarding the case, except a simple denial of the charges.

Reporters seeing her were treated courteously and quietly, and Mrs. Crawford seemed not averse to talk to them freely. But in most of the talk the subject of the murder charge and the plot charge in which Lump's name appears was carefully skirted.

Mrs. Crawford is a large woman, of dignified appearance. Not one moment since her arrest Saturday night has her composure broken, even slightly. In the Tower she received the few persons who called on her, and during the visit did not exhibit a sign of perturbation.

Calls Charge "Awful Thing."

To reporters and to all her visitors, when she mentioned at all the subject of the murder charge, she referred to it as "this awful thing."

Mrs. Crawford finds staunch friends in her children and grandchildren, who visited her at the Tower, and were with her almost all the few hours she spent in jail, bringing her flowers, a savory meal, and other tokens of their love.

Mrs. Crawford's children are bitter in their speech against the nephews and neices of Joshua B. Crawford, who, they say, are persecuting their mother with extreme cruelty. Mrs. Crawford herself accused her enemies of cruelty and lack of feeling.

Mrs. Crawford met Joshua B. Crawford when she was in charge of a winter hotel in St. Augustine, wither Crawford went in search of health. It was there she met him, and there that she married him. At his death, there was a settlement of his estate, Mrs. Crawford taking hold of the affairs with a capable hand.

An agreement was signed, and the affairs of Joshua B. Crawford, deceased, seemed amicably settled. Then the litigation was sprung. In the first bill of complaint the heirs who contested the will charged Mrs. Crawford with poisoning her husband, and of exerting undue influence to procure a will in her favor. But it was not until three years later, two weeks ago, that an examination of the remains of Joshua B. Crawford to ascertain traces of poison was ordered. Upon the examination came the verdict of the physician that traces of poison were vident, and Mrs. Crawford was arrested.

With preliminary hearing waived, Mrs. Crawford's case is flatly up to the grand jury, which, without definite date of meeting, awaits the call of the Solicitor General. The body probably will be assembled next week.

MRS. MARY BELLE CRAWFORD, held on poison charge in famous will case mystery, with her grandchild, Viola Belle Bennett.

Fortune in Gold Nuggets Awaits Heir

Wealth Will Revert to State of Kansas Unless Kin of Old Woman Appear.

HUTCHINSON, July 19.—There is a bag of gold nuggets and gold dust awaiting heirs that may go to the State of Kansas. These nuggets and the gold dust, along with some money and other personal property to the value of $10,000, are in the hands of former Sheriff G. M. Duckworth, administrator of the estate of Mrs. Ann M. Bernhert, who died a few days ago in Davenport, Iowa.

Some years ago when Mrs. Bernhert, who lived alone, was found to be of unsound mind, Dr. Duckworth was named as her guardian and she was taken to an asylum for treatment. In searching the house he found scattering personal property. It was found that much of it was gold nuggets and dust, saved, evidently, from some former mining experience, and hoarded away.

Baby Sips Hat Bleach; Dies from Poisoning

Mother, Bedridden from Appendicitis, Is Unable to Stop Child from Drinking Acid.

NEW YORK, July 19.—As a result of drinking a mixture of lye and oxalic acid, used by her father to clean an old straw hat, Dorothy E. Smith, 20 months old, died yesterday afternoon in St. Mary's Hospital, Jamaica. Her father is Leo Smith, of No. 47 Brooklyn avenue, Jamaica, an employee of the Long Island Railroad.

The child's mother is recovering from an operation for appendicitis. She and the baby were alone in the house yesterday when the child drank the mixture. She heard the baby's screams, but could not leave her bed, so she screamed, too, and neighbors who responded called a doctor.

RENO SINGS ITS SWAN SONG AS DIVORCE MECCA

Grand Rush of Colonists to Take Advantage of the Old Law Comes to an End.

RENO, July 19.—With such songs as "Meet a Friend From Your Home Town" and "At the Devil's Ball," sung by feminine entertainers from Metropolitan music halls, accompanied by high-class orchestras, the divorce colony celebrated the past week the beginning of the end of the Nevada quick divorce.

On the stroke of the midnight hour on Monday the curtain dropped upon one scene in Reno's notable divorce colony performance which has commanded the attention of the world for so long—that of the almost daily appearance of new faces upon the streets, as men and women, from plain country folk to elaborately gowned and bejeweled society beauties, arrived to begin their required six months' residence in the State and county, preparatory to the prospective divorce action.

Law Halts Colonists.

No more will incoming trains deposit these colonists and carloads of trunks, for the familiar song, "I'm on My Way to Reno," has been shelved by the action of the last Legislature, when it dealt the knock-out blow in its ultimatum that no divorce proceeding shall be instituted in the State of Nevada under the existing six-month residence law after December 21 next, thereby limiting the time in which newcomers could begin such residence period to Monday last.

Previous to July, 1909, the presence here for divorce of but an occasional person of prominence merely commanded attention to that individual, but it led to a method of publicity by an attorney which started the ball rolling, and it has never stopped rolling. Its greatest momentum is being witnessed now.

All Houses Are Thronged.

During the past month, and especially the week ending on Monday, the throng of newcomers has experienced great difficulty in securing such apartments as they might desire. All the hotels are crowded, as are the desirable rooming houses. Available cottages are almost as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth. In many cottages from four to six divorcees are living.

Some private boarding houses are housing as many as ten of the fair sex, and men. There are now scores of so-called "divorcees' nests" here. Every train the past fortnight has unloaded new arrivals, the preponderance of men and very young women, seemingly well to do and fashionable being noticeable. The proportion of men to women increased largely. Baby carriages and dogs played conspicuous parts.

Willing To Marry But Not to Apologize

Man Sued for Breach of Promise Says Hill Wed But Refuses to Beg Forgiveness.

ATCHISON, KANS., July 19.—Mary Falk and William Burke were engaged to be married. The date had been set, the guests had assembled, and everything was in readiness, but Burke did not appear. Chagrined and heartbroken, Miss Falk engaged an attorney and sued Burke for $25,000 as balm for her wounded feelings.

"It was all a mistake," said Burke. "I wanted and still want to marry Miss Falk. I was under the impression that under the rules of the Catholic Church the ceremony had to be performed by the pastor of the bride's church. I couldn't find him in time to perform the ceremony and naturally supposed the wedding was off for the time being."

Miss Falk accepted the explanation, but she insisted that Burke must apologize for not appearing for the wedding. Burke, however, insisted that she must apologize for suing him.

Indian Girl Seeks Office in Oklahoma

Educated Cherokee Business Woman Would Be State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections.

VINITA, OKLA., July 19.—Announcement by Miss Kate Barnard, State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections, that she will not be a candidate for re-election, brings into the race for the Democratic nomination a young Cherokee woman, Miss Pearl Holderman, of Northern Craig County, whose ability as an educated business woman has given her a wide acquaintance in Eastern Oklahoma.

Miss Holderman has large business responsibilities, and her experience and ability have made her more than a match for most men. Because of her father's impaired health she manages his cattle ranch, directing every detail, including the care of a herd of blooded cattle. This young Cherokee woman owns a thousand acres of land in her own name, all of which is in a high state of cultivation.

Attending Funerals Hobby of Old Squaw

"Glass Eye," Noted for Lamentations at Obsequies, at Last Principal at Mortuary Ceremony.

KLAMATH FALLS, OREG., July 19.—"Glass Eye" is dead. She was an aged Indian woman, well known here since the settlement of this section. It was one of her hobbies to attend every funeral that she could, and on these occasions she posed as chief mourner by her excessive lamentations.

Her name has been forgotten by the whites, who only know her by the nickname, which is said to have been given her when young, because of the brightness of her eyes and not because of any abnormality in them.

She was about 75 years old, and is reported to have been the sister of "White Cindy," another noted aborigine.

Aged Oil Queen, Wife Of Youth, Ruled Sane

Young Spendthrift Husband Is Welcome to Fortune, She Says, on Leaving Asylum.

CHARLESTON, W. VA., July 19.—The courts and her children can not separate Mrs. Cynthia C. Sparks, known as West Virginia's "oil queen," and her young husband, Fred Sparks, and she is again free, after having been incarcerated in the West Virginia Hospital for Insane for ten days.

Further, the superintendent and the members of the State Board of Control have placed beyond question her sanity after a close observation, while she was under their supervision.

Mrs. Sparks is going to join her 26-year-old husband, who, it is alleged by the woman's children by her first husband, was rapidly dissipating her fortune of $2,000,000 by his extravagance and riotious living.

The old woman declared to-day that her young husband was welcome to the half of her fortune which she retained after having signed over the half to him.

Naturalist Editor Has Forest Sanctum

Sets His Type in Shade of Hemlock and Lives in Wigwam all Winter.

WESTFIELD, MASS., July 19.—A unique editorial and printing plant is that known as "Seneca Wigwam, The Press in the Forest," located in the heart of the woods about three miles west of this place.

The sanctum is a typical Indian tepee, where the editor, Joseph C. Duport, an out-of-door enthusiast, prints, illustrates and publishes an original magazine called the Woronoco Valley Calumet.

In summer the editor sets his type in the shade of a hemlock, and in the winter or during inclement weather his work is done in the wigwam, which contains an up-to-date twentieth century printing press and equipment.

Women Wear Bath Dresses Down Town

Startle Natives by Appearing in Ice Cream Parlor in Their Beach Attire.

WHEELING, W. VA., July 19.—Two buxon matrons and a miss about 19 years old created a sensation about dusk by walking through the streets of Warwood, north of this city, in bathing costumes. Unabashed by the attention they attracted, they entered an ice cream parlor, where they ordered ices, and after eating them walked to their homes.

The matter was brought to the attention of Town Marshal E. L. Pool, who immediately issued a warning that women appearing hereafter in such scant attire would subject themselves to arrest.

Policeman's Watch Stops Death Bullet

Hospital Steward Thinks Patrolman Burglar and Fires Six Shots at His Heart.

OAKLAND, CAL., July 19.—A watch in his vest pocket stopped a bullet which otherwise probably would have pierced the heart of Patrolman O'Hara last night. The shot was one of six fired by Roscoe Gray, steward of the Oakland College of Medicine, under the impression that O'Hara was a burglar. The other shots did not hit O'Hara. Gray nearly collapsed when he learned his mistake.

O'Hara was on his rounds when he noticed a door in the college building open. Trying to close it, he set off a burglar alarm and Gray opened fire in the dark.

Silver Wire Travels Through Two Arms

CHICO, CAL., July 19.—James Dupen, a Chico merchant, to-day submitted to an operation, in which a piece of silver wire, used in closing a wound on the left wrist in 1897, was extracted from the index finger of the right hand. The wire, which is one-half inch long, passed up one arm, across the chest and worked down the opposite arm, emerging at the finger.

Bee Sting on Neck Fatal to Farmer

Dies from Paralysis of Heart Fifteen Minutes After Insect Poison Enters System.

BRISTOL, PA., July 19.—John Pickering, a farmer of Woodbine, while engaged in his customary duties about the farm Saturday, was stung on the neck by a large bee and within fifteen minutes he was dead.

Dr. Heritage, of Langhorne, was summoned, but did not arrive in time to render aid. The doctor says death was the result of paralysis of the heart, caused by the bee sting.

Boy Finds $35,500; Hides it from Police

Advertises That He Picked up Money and Declares He Will Return it to Owner.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS., July 19.—Brayton Gardner, 18 years old, who announced he had found $35,500 in a leather bag on the tracks of the Boston and Maine Railroad, to-night refused to tell the police where he put the money.

"I have hidden it in a safe place," said he, "and if someone claims it I will produce it immediately."

Gardner walked into the office of a local newspaper and inserted an advertisement reading:

"Found, $35,500. Owner can have money by identifying it and satisfying Brayton Gardner."

Stolen Jewels Are Found Buried in Park

Last of $100,000 Loot Stolen by Employee of Firm Recovered After Confession.

NEW YORK, July 19.—The final confession of young William Beck, who stole $100,000 worth of jewelry from his employers, Udall & Ballou, was obtained yesterday. The last $2,800 of the loot was found by detectives. It was buried in Central Park.

Beck had insisted until yesterday that he had told all. But Inspector Faurot finally got him to reveal the hiding place. The police were told to enter the park at 110th street and Eighth avenue and count eighteen stone blocks in the wall to a spot where a small bush grew. Buried 6 inches they found nine diamond rings and a pair of cuff buttons.

INDIANS, 102 AND 97, WILL VISIT FAIR DIRECTORS

MONTROSE, COLO., July 19.—The board of directors of the Western Slope Fair Association decided to bring 50 Ute Indians from the reservation in Utah to Montrose during the fair in September. The Indians will include Chief McCook, 97, and his sister, Chippeta, 102, who is the widow of Chief Ouray.

MOTHER OF TEN SUES; WEDDED TWENTY-ONE YEARS

DAYTON, WYO., July 19.—After living with David Krouse Towns for 21 years and bearing ten children of which he is the father, Mrs. Martha Ellen Towns has brought suit for divorce, asserting that her husband unjustly accused her of infidelity and that he had attempted to secure her incarceration in the State Insane Asylum, although realizing that she was sane.

FARMERS' UNION HOPE OF SOUTH, SAY ORGANIZERS IN GREAT GEORGIA CAMPAIGN

Charles S. Barrett and L. M. Rhodes, of Tennessee, Sweep Through the State With a Message to Planters to Check Enormous Crop Waste.

L. M. Rhodes, president of the Tennessee division and chairman of the national board of directors of the Farmers' Union, has just finished a flying trip through Georgia in company of Charles S. Barrett, national president of the Farmers' Union, and J. J. Brown, former Commissioner of Agriculture of Georgia. The following message to the farmers as delivered by Mr. Rhodes abounds in such truth and fact not generally known:

"The marvelous grandeur of the world's progress astounds and amazes us, yet the wonderful story would never have been written had it not been for the ever-faithful farmer.

"Agriculture is basic. Upon it rests cities, commerce and civilization. The people of the earth consume 60,000,000 tons of food annually. Five hundred and eighty-two million tons of it come from the farm. Human beings are clothed in the products of the farm from the time they are born until they embark for eternity. Yet ever since Grandfather Adam made the mistake that caused him to lose the family estate the farmer has been a failure in business.

Farmer Behind in Business.

"In business development of the United States in the last century the farmer has fallen behind. In the procession of modern business methods he has followed where he should have led.

"When we became a nation the farmer owned 90 per cent of the wealth. In 1850 our national wealth was $7,000,000,000 and the farmer owned $4,000,000,000, or four-sevenths.

"In 1913 our national wealth is estimated at $131,000,000,000, and the farmer owns $26,000,000,000. Our farm property is valued at nearly $40,000,000,000, but $14,000,000,000 is owned by other classes than farmers.

"The above figures show that farmers are not holding their own, for if they had kept pace with other vocations since 1850 they would now own $75,000,000,000 worth of wealth instead of $26,000,000,000. Their lack of business methods and failure to match conditions have cost them $49,000,000,000. This would buy all the farm property in the United States and have enough left to buy a half interest in all the railroads.

"In a score of years the farmers of this country have produced $135,000,000,000 worth of farm products, or enough to buy all the property in the United States. Yet this wonderful amount of wealth has not gone to the farmers. We have 10,000 men in this country who own an average of $10,000,000 each. And their combined wealth is $100,000,000,000. The other 99,990,000 people own $31,000,000,000. Of our 100,000,000, 60,000,000 are homeless.

"Twelve men control one-third of our wealth, and one man controls nearly one-tenth of the wealth of this the richest country in the world. At the rate we are going capital will own practically all our wealth in another generation.

"Sixty-three land companies and rich individuals own an area equal to Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama and North and South Carolina.

"Liberty can not long exist in a country where the tendency is to confine the wealth to a few hands, for he who controls a nation's money controls its people.

Union Is Educational.

"Knowing that our liberty was bought with holy blood and sacred tears, and seeing that we must organize and change our present methods or surrender, we organized the Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America. Believing that a lack of practical knowledge is man's greatest enemy, we placed 'education' as the first word in our name. And knowing that a people are never strong when they are wrong, we selected as our motto: 'Equity, Justice and the Golden Rule.' Our organization has steadily grown, until now it reaches from coast to coast, and north, south, east and west are terms of direction to indicate its magnitude. In one decade it has grown until it is winged by Canada and Mexico, backgrounded by the Atlantic and footlighted by the Pacific.

"The 12,000,000 farmers of this country are laboring under an indebtedness of $6,000,000,000. On this amount, counting commissions and renewal charges, they are paying an annual interest of 8 1-2 per cent, or $510,000,000, while the business men and manufacturers pay an average of 5 per cent interest, or $300,000,000, on $6,000,000,000. This $210,000,000 excess interest paid by the farmers would pay off our farm indebtedness in 28 years. Co-operative efforts and rural credits would right these wrongs. So, let us continue to discourage this present system until it has passed into history and is only remembered in the misty back yonder.

"Distribution being one of our greatest problems, our second declaration of purposes is to assist our members in buying and selling. The Federal Government has spent $100,000,000 in the last ten years, teaching us how to produce, and not a cent to teach us how to market.

"The real reason of the high cost of living is not because the farmer produces an inadequate amount of products or gets too much for what he grows, but it is that there are too many toll gates between the field of production and the table of consumption.

"As long as we continue our present methods we will build up the towns and cities at the expense of the rural districts. The consuming public pays $13,000,000,000 for what the farmer parts with for $6,000,000,000. The farmer gets 44 cents and the distributor gets 56 cents of each dollar. If there is a practical workable way to stop this plundering of the producing and consuming masses, and do away with this stupendous waste, it should be done. Surely no one would oppose the change, except those who think the jeweled hand of greed should be licensed to pick the threadbare pockets of those who toil.

Expense Is Unavoidable.

"We all agree that there is an unavoidable expense in the distribution of farm products. But let us make what seems to us a reasonable division of the $13,000,000,000 consumers other than farmers pay for farm products each year.

Give the wholesaler and jobber $1,000,000,000, the transportation companies $1,000,000,000, the retailer $1,500,000,000; then throw in $500,000,000 for all possible misallowance, and we have $9,000,000,000, which is $3,000,000,000 more than the farmer gets. This amount falls into the waste basket of speculation.

"If it were divided between the producer and consumer it would clothe the naked, feed the hungry and educate the illiterate, instead of breeding millionaires, paupers, anarchists and suicides. If the Farmers' Union fills its mission, it will not be long until a less portion of the laborers' toil will be turned in at the toll gate of the palace and a great portion will find its way through the door of the cottage, and help to lift the humble tenement to the comfort, dignity and luxury of a home.

"Within the next decade the farmers of this country will produce enough to load 250,000,000 freight cars, and its value will approximate $100,000,000,000. If properly handled, this should double the farmer's wealth. But producing is not all of farming. We cannot prosper unless we can control prices; we cannot control prices unless we co-operate; we cannot co-operate unless we organize. The farmer must keep his pace with the organized industries of the age, or verily he will have his reward."

Mr. Rhodes then spoke in detail of the work the Farmers' Union had done, its aims, its objects, its hopes, and the effect was so marked that there were responses on every hand by farmers who heard him, and the beginning of the 75,000 membership in Georgia was inaugurated, and the culmination will be a certainty if President Barrett and Mr. Rhodes put in a few weeks of organization.

Edna May Finds a New Love

Will Not Quit Husband, Though

Both Enamored of Race Horses

Mrs. Oscar Lewisohn, formerly Edna May, who denies she will be separated from wealthy husband.

Former "Belle of New York" Says Report of Separation From Oscar Lewisohn Is Silly.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Edna May Lewisohn and Oscar Lewisohn, her wealthy husband, both admit having new loves, and for that reason will break up housekeeping, but they will not separate, as has been reported, declares the former belle of New York.

The reason that there will be no divorce court proceedings is that they both have the same love and it interferes no whit with their connubial felicity. According to Mrs. Lewisohn, both have become madly infatuated with horse racing, and to keep in close touch with their stable they will give up their home, Cranbourne Manor.

"Both my husband and myself have become very keen on racing," said Mrs. Lewisohn, after denying the reported separation, "and we are trying to find a place near Newmarket, where he has ten horses in training. He is at present in Germany with his brother, but on his return we probably will rent our London house.

"Mr. Lewisohn has just taken up racing this year and has been remarkably successful for a novice campaigner. If his horses come up to expectations, he plans to increase his stable until he has one of the largest strings of thoroughbreds in England or the Continent. As for any separation, that is simply silly. We were never happier."

WRITERS MAKE BEST DIPLOMATS DECLARES PAGE

New Ambassador to Italy, Author of Many Stories, Leaves Himself Out of Discussion.

YORK HARBOR, ME., July 19.—Are authors better qualified to fill diplomatic posts than others? The appointment of Thomas Nelson Page as Ambassador to Italy brings this subject to the fore, coupled with the appointments made by President Wilson.

The greatest diplomats America boasts were men of letters. Benjamin Franklin, John Hay, Nathaniel Hawthorne, James Russell Lowell, William Dean Howell furnish a distinguished list.

Mr. Page, who is 60, is modesty personified. He has been reporter, lawyer, writer, and has succeeded in all.

Mr. Page asked if he could explain as an author what special qualifications a man of letters possesses to perform the duties of Ambassador, consented to speak, leaving his own case out of the discussion. Said he:

"A man of letters is better fitted to do anything better than anyone else. His work has broadened his horizon; if it hadn't we might as well do away with letters.

Must Know Problems.

"The author must necessarily be conversant with the economic and governmental problems of the day.

"I think the greatest good authors in general have alone is to interpret the spirit of the section about which they write. There can be no doubt there is a better feeling now between the North and the South than there was before the Spanish-American war. This, I believe, is because of writers.

"Every part of the world is being more properly set before another part by the authors.

"The President has had a thorough training. Besides the college education, he has had associations with the North and the South, and he is conversant with the economic and governmental problems. He is a man of strong character and has been deservedly selected by the people to hold their most important office.

"I met Walter Page prior to his departure for his London post and gave him a dinner. His whole heart was set upon the desire to 'make good.'"

Qualifications of Diplomat.

"What is your idea of the qualifications a good diplomat possesses?" he was asked.

"Devotion to his duty is perhaps the first and most important," he replied. "Then comes devotion to your country, application to your duty and a desire to bring your country and the country to which you have been sent closer together.

"Of course, since the cable came into use foreign posts are brought closer to the State Department at Washington, and it must be a great comfort to an Ambassador to feel that at any time he may seek aid from Washington.

"I believe Charles Francis Adams was the last foreign ambassador to be thrown upon his own resources, and that was because the cable was cut.

"Rome is indeed a charming post. I believe it is the most romantic city in the world. I am sure I shall like it."

Chief Seattle's Cousin Says He Is Now Ready to Go to Happy Hunting Ground.

SEATTLE, July 19.—Chief Seattle's first co usin, "Port Angeles Bob," age unknown, and who has lived in the outskirts of Port Angeles since the earliest settlers can remember, set foot in Seattle the other day, took his first ride on a street car, saw some moving pictures, paid homage to the statue of Chief Seattle, and declared his resolve to return home and remain contented there until he goes to the happy hunting grounds.

CHANGS, ON WAY HOME, CLING TO YANKEE FRILLS

Wife and Children of Chinese Minister Sail Derssed in Latest American Fashions.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—After more than three years in Washington with her husband, Minister Chang, Mme. Chang is returning to the Orient. She is accompanied by two daughters, a son, Henry K. Chang; a little daughter-in-law and a tiny grandchild. During her residence in America Mme. Chang has changed her ideas about many things, and about others she maintains the old Chinese beliefs.

The two young daughters, Miss Alice and Miss Lillie Chang, have been attending school in Washington for two years, and with the progress of their education have abandoned their picturesque nature clothes for American garb.

Whether they will adopt the clothes of their native country on their return remains to be seen. Miss Alice Chang, who spoke for the party at the St. Francis before they sailed on the Manchuria, said:

"It all depends on what is in fashion in China.

Favor American Fashions.

"If we find American clothes fashionable out there, we shall wear them. We adopted them when we entered Gunnison Hall, our Washington school These are more convenient when traveling," she added, pointing to a pale blue silk crepe costume with the latest frills and furbelows. "When we wear our other clothes, people stare so, and sometimes they laugh. They aren't used to them in Washington."

The question of recent changes in China is of especial interest to Mme. Chang and her daughters.

The idea that women may vote in China and that the door of opportunity is opening for them daily there has caused the Chinese women to be thoughtful.

"I don't know about this voting," said Mme. Chang, through her daughter. "I don't believe very much in it."

"Only for some women," broke in one daughter.

Education Qualification.

"I would make an educational qualification," said Miss Lillie. "Not every woman ought to vote."

"Home is the place for women," said Mme. Chang, true to her country's traditions and centuries of training. "A woman ought to do housekeeping, to stay at home and to have children."

Mme. Chang and the daughters are opposed to the Western idea of a woman earning her own living. They believe she should want to stay at home to be cared for, even if she has to do without some of the extras which her own money can secure.

"Women in China probably never will reach that stage," said Mme Chang. "There will be fewer opportunities for them to enter professional and business fields."

College is a goal which is being aspired to by the two daughters, although they are not sure yet what particular lines they want to pursue. "We can go if we want to, you know," said Miss Alice. "Our people believe in college for girls if they want it."

Sweetheart False; Indian Girl Ends Life

Ute Maid Leaps From Rock of Legendary Fame When She Finds Love Faithless.

MEEKER, COLO., July 19.—Zanaida, niece of Chief Whispering Pine, of the Ute reservation, and a girl of unusual charm committed suicide by leaping from Suicide Rock, a stone monument of legendary fame which rears its head at the foot of the reservation and has been the means of many grim tragedies by heartbroken maidens of the Ute nation.

Zanaida was courted by many of the young braves. She fell in love with the handsomest man and the day was set for the ceremony. Elk Tooth suddenly deserted her for another girl of the tribe, and, heartbroken, Zanaida sought surcease in death.

HARD THICK CRUST COVERED BOY'S HEAD

Cracked with Least Pressure, Causing Discharge. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In One Week Entirely Cured.

Bolton, Ga. — "My little boy's head was covered with a hard thick crust which cracked with the least pressure causing a discharge of bloody corruption which was so offensive that I could hardly hold him. He was very cross. Some called it milk crust, another running tetter and another eczema.

"After trying several patent medicines I decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using the sample I purchased some Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. After using Cuticura Soap and Ointment three days I was able to remove all the crust and in one week he was entirely cured. Cuticura Soap and Ointment also cured my baby of an ulcerated sore behind her ear and now we think we cannot keep house without them." (Signed) Mrs. Charles Foss, Nov. 5, 1912.

The regular use of Cuticura Soap for toilet and bath not only tends to preserve, purify and beautify the skin, scalp, hair and hands, but assists in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, yellow, oily, mothy and other unwholesome conditions of the skin. Cuticura Soap (25c.) and Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

SOT IS SENTENCED TO BATHE AND GO TO CHURCH

FORT SMITH, ARK., July 19.—To attend church each Sunday for three months and to bathe his children once a week was the novel sentence imposed on John Norris in the Police Court by Mayor Reed.

Norris pleaded guilty to intoxication. It was his second appearance in court within two months.

The terms of his sentence, if not complied with, will result in him serving 109 days in the workhouse.

SAVANNAH WILL ASK FOR CIVIL SERVICE LAW

Police and Fire Departments To Be Put Under Regulations. Efficiency Tests Are Planned.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Alderman George B. Elton's civil service bill will be introduced in the Legislature during the present session.

The special committee appointed by the Mayor to investigate the civil service regulations in other cities has completed its work and recommended the introduction of the bill at the present session. The measure will be immediately advertised for the specified period.

If the bill passes, the Mayor will be authorized to appoint a special committee of three, to be known as the Civil Service Commisson, this commission to have entire charge of the administration of the civil service law in the city. The bill provides that the police and fire departments be placed under civil service, the idea being to divorce these departments from politics.

The bill provides for efficiency tests for the members of the police and fire departments. The selection of appointees will be governed by their moral, mental and physical fitness, and their tenure of office will not depend on the vagaries of politics. They would not be subject to removal unless it were proved that they had been guilty of misconduct or that they were otherwise unfit for their positions.

Whether the bill will pass the Legislature is a question. Its passage will be determined largely by the attitude of the Chatham County Representatives toward it. If a majority of the legislators from this county agree it is a good measure, it probably will go through, but if there is a difference of opinion among the legislators, its defeat is pretty well assured.

Playground Question Rests With Militia

Savannah Volunteer Guards and Georgia Hussars Must Vote to Give Land for Purpose.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Whether the Park Extension will be converted into a model playground and athletic park has not been finally determined. The Savannah Volunteer Guards and the Georgia Hussars, the two military organizations which have not yet given their consent and approval to the plan, have not taken action in regard to the matter.

No special meeting of the Hussars has been held, owing to the absence from the city of Captain Frank P. McIntyre. The Guards have discussed the matter, but owing to the fact that no definite proposition has been put up to them, they have neither approved nor disapproved the plan.

The extension is under the control of the military and the city jointly, and has been set aside as a drill ground.

Destructor Company Already Has Force of Men at Work Laying Foundation of Plant.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—No time is to be lost in building the refuse incinerating plant. Work of laying the foundation has already commenced. The details of the contract between the Destructor Company and the city have been agreed upon and the contract signed.

A force of men engaged by the Destructor Company has started right in on the foundation work. The man who is to direct the work for the company will arrive in a few days. Chief Engineer E. R. Conant will have general supervision of the work. The plant is to cover an area 100 by 60 feet.

CITY OFFICIALS TO TAKE TURN IN MAYOR'S OFFICE

Savannah Executive Now Plans Regular Daily Period for Conferring With City Employees.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Hereafter city officials will be shown no favoritism when they call on Mayor Richard J. Davant on city business. They will have to take their chances along with everybody else. If one of the humblest citizens happens to get into the Mayor's reception room first the city official will have to wait his turn.

Mayor Davant has given his secretary instructions to this effect, and they will have to stand until a system of office hours which the Mayor has in mind can be put into effect.

It is the Mayor's plan to set aside a certain hour each day for interviews with city officials on city business. This hour will be made known to the people, and callers other than city officials will not be allowed to see the Mayor during that period. Another hour—or two, if necessary—will be set aside for the public.

At present there is no system of this sort at the City Hall, and the callers see the Mayor whenever their time comes. Heretofore city officials have been given precedence over all others irrespective of the time they arrived or how many people are ahead of them.

It has been the case that a city official was admitted to the Mayor the moment he arrived at the office, no matter if a dozen or so people had been waiting for some time for an interview.

Court Calls Both of Boy's Parents Unfit

Serious Charges Are Made Against Proprietor of Inlet Hotel at Tybee and His Wife.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—So serious are the charges and counter-charges in the alimony case of Mrs. Annia Jones against W. A. Jones, proprietor of the Inlet Hotel at Tybee, that Judge Walter G. Charlton has stated from the bench in the Superior Court that he doesn't consider either the father or the mother fit to have the custody of their four-year-old son.

Witness testified to alleged misconduct of Mrs. Jones during the absences of her husband, who is an engineer on the Tybee Branch of the Central of Georgia Railroad and obliged to spend a portion of his time in the city. Other witness testified to gross neglect and mistreatment of Mrs. Jones on the part of her husband.

Speer Investigator Again in Savannah

Lewis Arrival Surprise, as It Was Thought That His Work Had Been Completed.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Inspector Lewis, of the Department of Justice, who has for several weeks been assigned to the task of investigating the record of Judge Emory Speer, of the Southern District of Georgia, appeared again in Savannah this week.

The reappearance of the inspector was something of a surprise, as it was generally understood that he had completed his work here and had gone to his summer quarters on the Great Lakes.

EARLY REPORT WANTED ON SAVANNAH AFFAIRS

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Mayor Richard J. Davant has written to the general office in New Orleans, of the auditing company which recently checked up the books and affairs of the city government in Savannah requesting that a full and complete report on the result of these investigations be rendered at the earliest possible moment. The Mayor thinks that the matter of installing a new system to keep track of the affairs of the municipal government has been hanging fire long enough.

FIRST DISTRICT DOCTORS TO MEET IN SAVANNAH

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Physicians from all over the First Congressional District will assemble in Savannah Monday for the midsummer meeting of the District Medical Society.

An interesting program has been arranged. Mayor Richard J. Davant will welcome the physicians to Savannah.

In the afternoon the doctors will go to Tybee for a dip in the surf, and at night they will enjoy a banquet.

HAYNES DITCH COMPLETE; FINE CORN CROP IS RESULT

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Just returned from North Georgia, where he has spent several weeks in the survey of a large tract, Engineer J. V. Phillips states that the big Haynes ditch is now completed, and for the first time in many years corn is growing on either side of it. The crop is now in excellent condition, he said, and the people in that section are highly pleased.

Count in Savannah Works as Cobbler

Russian Banished in Political Activity Speaks Five Languages and Claims Noble Title.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Banished from the land of his nativity because he took active part in a political agitation for a constitutional form of government, Marius DeSopodzko, of Lithuania, Russia, who exhibits papers and credentials, which he says are his claims to the title of count and the estates of a rich and noble family, has been working in Savannah for the last two weeks, endeavoring to learn the trade of a cobbler. The man came to Savannah from Cuba. He speaks five languages.

CRACKER CLUB TO STAY OUT OF SHERIFF'S RACE

SAVANNAH, July 19.—There will be no indorsement of a candidate for Sheriff of Chatham County by the Cracker Club. It had been stated that an effort would be made to have the club indorse Robert Sausey. The supporters of Colonel Merrett W. Dixon expressed gratification when the announcement was made that the club would not make an indorsement.

Girl Bride Sees Husband Convicted

R. L. English Is Found Guilty of Stealing Wire from Savannah Electric Company.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—With his pretty wife, not yet out of her teens, sitting in the courtroom, R. L. English has been tried and convicted in the City Court of the larceny of copper wire from the Savannah Electric Company. Mrs. English, hardly more than a girl, clad in a pink summer dress and wearing a big leghorn hat with a wreath of red roses, sat calmly through the trying ordeal. Mrs. English maintains that her husband is innocent of any intentional wrongdoing.

COMMITTEE IS SILENT ON BARROW MISSION

SAVANNAH, July 19.—With the exception of John Rourke, Jr., the committee that went to Washington to protest against the appointment of D. C. Barrow as Collector of the Port at Savannah have returned. The members will not discuss the result of their mission, except to say that they saw President Wilson and chatted with him for several minutes. They called on Senators Bacon and Smith and had lunch with the latter.

In Savannah Social Circles

SAVANNAH, July 19.—The annual midsummer exodus is fast depleting Savannah of its pretty girls and charming matrons. For those who are summering at Tybee Island, this does not make so much difference, as they are still to be seen on the streets occasionally, having run in for a half day's shopping or to see their friends.

But there are hundreds or others who are gone to the Northern resorts and to the mountains, and the presence of these is missed in the social activities of the heated season.

There are still quite a number of charming girls in town, however, and these, together with the pretty visitors who are being entertained, are making the afternoons and evenings pleasant with picnics and boating parties, automobile tours, and trips to Tybee, with the added pleasure of a dip in the surf. Several of the visitors will remain in Savannah for a fortnight longer, then they too will take their flight to cooler climes.

Mrs. Raymond Harris entertained some of the younger girls Thursday morning with a porch party for her sister, Miss Tom Middlebrooks, of Athens, who is visiting her.

ATLANTA

For Milady's Wardrobe

By MME. HAUTE MONDE.

THE newest shirts to wear with the sponge skirts are those in pique. The new pique is only a distant relative to the stiff pique of other years, as it is delightfully soft and supple. The shirt is masculine in cut, with the exception of the neck, which is invariably finished by one of the becoming rolling collars which owe their origin to the days of Marie Stuart. The correct finishing touches are added when a sash of plaid ribbon and a cravat to match are adjusted. No matter how severe the skirt and shirtwaist may be, the sash is sure to give the feminine touch.

The all-black hat is the smart headgear of the hour, regardless of the shape, and it is a practical choice for the beach. A black hat does not look quite as summery or light as an all-white hat, but the sun can not damage it as it can one of colored straw, or even one of the natural tone straw, which may become actually sunburnt. There is a fad for trimming some of the black hats with blue ribbon bows, and a few of the bolder spirits among the fashion leaders are appearing in brown straw hats. When the latter are worn with brown shoes and stockings and a sash of brown moire or tulle, the effect is really artistic.

* * *

Separate skirts of cotton sponge have had a tremendous sale, and many of the well-dressed girls at Newport and Tuxedo are wearing them to the exclusion of linen or the durable cotton corduroy, which is becoming very common these days. The two-piece model preserves the straight, narrow silhouette, but does not launder as well as the gored skirt, which, when properly cut, should not sag after washing. These skirts button over the left hip and are slightly gathered into a belt in the back, which fastens with a buckle.

* * *

White serge, while not so serviceable for rough usage as tub stuffs or mixed tweeds, is altogether charming for outing wear provided one can keep it clean, and there are pretty ready-made suits, one-piece frocks and separate skirts of white serge offered at prices so reasonable that it does not seem extravagant to have two or three things of the kind, and so be able to spare one easily during its trip to the cleaners.

* * *

All petticoats are as thin and soft as possible, without being actually transparent—unless the wearer stands in a strong sunlight. Then sometimes the effect is rather startling. The petticoat now is exquisitely fitted, and is as narrow as possible, having a flounce of fine machine embroidery at the foot. Unless intended for wear with a sheer frock, the petticoat does not reach below the top of the buttoned boot.

* * *

Flesh-tinted linings in yokes have become such a frenzy with feminine folk that the craze has spread even to lingerie. The latest nightgown is of thin batiste, with a lace yoke lined with flesh-tinted net. This yoke reaches to below the arms, and, instead of being attached to the gown under a ribbon beading, a garland of tiny, pale pink roses covers the seam. The short lace sleeves are also looped up with pink silk roses.

* * *

Sweaters show more variety than they once did. One may have them any length from hip length to full length and in many shapes. The Bulgarian lines are also in evidence among the new sweaters this season, the wide belt being usually of some contrasting color with cuffs and collar to match.

* * *

Jet ornaments are popular on light summer frocks. The lighter the frock the heavier the ornament. One, made of seven octagonal pieces of cut jet, the center one two inches across and the end ones an inch across—set in a row—is used to mark the high front waistline of a sheer batiste embroidered afternoon gown. The ornament extends well round a quarter of even the fashionable waist.

* * *

So far this season one has not seen any of the light-colored silks and satins used for suits or one-piece frocks for general wear. When a woman wears a light or bright pink gown it is of muslin or sponge or French voile. Both silk and satin are found in navy blue, chocolate brown, and, especially, in beige; the latter, like tan, is being widely used with black trimming and is immensely attractive. Its neutrality of tone allows various dashes of color to be used against it.

* * *

The peplum is still here. In a dainty white lingerie blouse showing a straight, gatherless peplum eight or ten inches long, there is an interesting belt arrangement. Two sections of the belt are made of mull like the blouse, and these two sections band the waist at the sides. The belt in front and back is made of dark blue satin ribbon, folded narrow like the mull belt. On each end of each of the ribbon bands is a big white pearl button, and the mull sections of the belt button over the ribbon on these buttons.

* * *

Bead trimming, apparently, is not going out of fashion. A recently shown serge coat has a short, loose coat, the raw edge of which is banded with bright blue beads—the serge is navy—embroidered in a straggling design a couple of inches wide. The neck edge of the coat and the sleeves, too, showed the same banding.

The smart thing just now is the dying flower droop, the collapse of the whole figure which seems the result of mental fatigue, but which is in reality the result of a carefully thought out mannerism introduced for the purpose of advertisement by a famous Parisian actress. This charming woman is possessed of what the novelists call a willowy form. She is tall, exceedingly slender, extraordinarily graceful

LATEST PARIS COSTUMES STARTLE GIDDIEST MODES HAVE EVERYTHING BUT SIMPLICITY

Fashions Shown at Longchamps and Other French Race Courses Last Word in Sensations.

An old, old song remarked, "They do such things and they say such things—on the Bowery." But the modern place for doing and saying "such" things in Paris—and from the indications of these pictures snapped at the races at Longchamps, just outside of "Gay Paree," they are wearing such things as our giddiest Atlantan would scarcely venture on home soil.

In the one case a modestly flowered silk skirt with wee buds borrowed from the old chintz patterns is topped by a "cubist" coat of very spherical lines! Pale gray brocade flowered in great purple irises is seamed down the back that there may be fullness enough to shor from two cords at the top, and to finish with four cord shirrings at the bottom, and still to fasten kimono fashion over the shoulders. A hat of duchess lace banded in white moire and decked with a great bush of black aigrettes finishes the costume.

The other fair Parisienne carries a parasol of white broderie Anglaise inset with rare venise lace and with a three-inch edge of black velvet. The black and white color scheme continues in the shoes, which have patent leather vamps and instep strappings of white suede. And the gown itself is a creation of shadow and venise and duchess laces with net and point d'esprit and black beads for further garniture! The gown has the new cross front drapery that is suggestive of a surplice when found on a waist, but brings to mind nothing so much as harem trousers when found on the skirt. The only things of simplicity in this costume are the old-fashioned mitts that cover the arms and the big full-blown rosette thrust into the girdle.

on the artistic lines laid down by disciples of Puvis DeChavannes. She started the fad for drooping figures of an exaggeratedly natural order and the fashion has spread with the rapidity of a prairie fire.

Violent color contrasts are tolerated and therefore one sees a purple ruff and cape over a gown of black satin which has a black tulle top; over while lace gowns there will be a ruff and cape of raspberry red tulle.

Where are the plain shoes of to-day going? There are not many of them, to be sure, but the new shoes which are coming in from day to day put the few plain ones that are left to shame. For the new ones show much slashing and cutting and gliding and painting. One pair of slippers is made of green, silver and white, and the kid from toe to heel is slashed away leaving openings shaped like crescents separated by the merest slivers of kid. Another slipper, with a French heel, is made to be worn without stockings. It, too, is made of painted and gilded kid, and has a strap to go between the great toe and the one next to it which buckles to a strap crossing the instep.

Zinnias have come into great popularity this summer. Their popularity began, in fact, last winter, when Futurist designs and colors first came in. There is a stiffness and rigidity of form about zinnias that harmonizes with designs formed of cubes and triangles. And the bright, clear colors of this flower suggest those in the giddiest futurist silk. Hence the popularity of the zinnia for corsage bouquets, hat and frock trimmings in its artificial form, and for household and garden decoration in its real form.

The New "Picture Hat"

The picture hat is taking its revenge. All last winter and far into the spring of this year it was pushed into the background by pert little jam pots and caricatures of Indian turbans. The picture hat was out of favor. Those who continued to wear it were smiled at as out of date; dress experts asserted that we should not see a revival of the wide-brimmed hat for several seasons to come.

But those who really understand the fashions of Paris—more than that, who understand something of the ways of the Parisiennes—never doubted the early return of the big hat, weighed down with rich feathers or lovely flowers. Its coming might be delayed a little, but it was certain to arrive nevertheless. And it has arrived.

Once again there are seen genuine picture hats, large and small; such hats as might have graced the beauties depicted by the old masters.

* * *

This is essentially a lace year. Wide lace flounces are getting more and more fashionable. They will be in high favor for casino wear. These lace dresses, arranged in three or four tiers, are exceedingly becoming; more than that, they are full of artistic charm. Painters through all the ages have raved about supple draperies of lace or fragile gauze.

FRECKLE-FACE

Sun and Wind Bring Out Ugly Spots. How to Remove Easily.

Here's a chance, Miss Freckle-Face, to try a remedy for freckles with the guarantee of a reliable dealer that it will not cost you a penny unless it removes the freckles; while if it does give you a clear complexion the expense is trifling.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from Jacobs' Pharmacy and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the worst case.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine, as this is the prescription sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

FIVE-DOLLAR-A-WEEK CLERK IS LEFT $6,640,000 FORTUNE

Special Cable to The American.

MILAN, July 19.—Vittorio Mariana, a ticket office clerk at the Tivoli Railway station, in the suburbs of Rome, at a salary of $5 a week, has just come in for a windfall of $6,640,000 under the will of an uncle.

MISS WILSON IS PLAIN 'JESSIE' IN KENSINGTON

Pennsylvania Folk, Whom Daughter of President Aided, Like White House Bride-to-Be.

PHILADELPHIA, July 19.—Kensington is living over again the three years that Miss Jessie Wilson, the President's second daughter, whose engagement to Francis Bowen Sayre, of Bethlehem, has just been announced, spent as a social worker in the mill district.

To Kensington she is just "Jessie," and "Jessie" she always will be, the girl who traveled up and down narrow streets on visits of mercy, who attended the sick beds of mothers and was a sister to the working girls and a pal of the short-trousered boys who gathered at the Lighthouse gymnasium.

Miss Wilson's work of social service at the Lighthouse, 152 West Lehigh avenue, brought her in close contact with the men, women and children of the mill sections, and to all of them she endeared herself by her modesty, her unassuming manner, her cordiality and sincerity. The life of the settlement she followed closely, spending five days a week in routine work and returning to her home in Princeton for the week-end.

Many a meal Jessie Wilson has eaten at the uncovered tables of the Lighthouse Restaurant with motormen and millworkers for her companions, never thinking herself a whit better than the people who surrounded her.

Roast beef, fried potatoes, tomato sauce, lemon pie, bread and butter, and coffee—why should a President's daughter want more? And she didn't want more. So when it was more convenient to at eat the restaurant than with Mr. and Mrs. R. Porter Bradford, the manager of the Lighthouse, with whom she resided, she ordered the menu chalked on the wall of the restaurant, "full roast dinner for 15 cents."

Miss Wilson has lately been associated with the National Board of the Young Women's Christian Association, and has been active in work for the betterment of factory girls.

San Francisco To Be Best Dressed City

"Greatest Decoration Scheme Ever Outlined" Is Promised for the Annual Portola Festival.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—The greatest decorative scheme ever outlined for any city, American or European, has been prepared for San Francisco during the Portola festival of October 22 to 25 next.

San Francisco will be the most beautifully dressed city and the best illuminated the world round.

Here is a list of the chief features of the decorations, for which estimates are to-day being received by the Portola festival committee:

Ten miles of greens, 100,000 flowers, 24 acres of flags, 50 tons of plaster for statues, colonnades, etc.; 40,000 electric bulbs, with 1,000,000 candlepower; 10,000 gallons of water for the big fountain in Union Square.

Scant Dress Barred From Communion

Pastor Assails Women Who Appear in Church Clad in "Yard of Nothing."

MERIDEN, CONN., July 19.—"T dress for attendance at the house of God in clothes suggesting a ballroom or a recreation pier is disgraceful, and hereafter women with slashed skirts, transparent waists, low-necked or short-sleeved gowns will be refused holy communion at St. Rose's Catholic Church," the Rev. James Conlin said to-night. "I have no objection," he continued, "to women appearing in church in the coolest manner consistent with decency, but when they appear in things that are only a wisp of cloth and a yard of nothing, I believe it is time for me to protest."

The Tango Arrives in Time To Stir Jaded Paris Nerves

By La Raconteuse.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 19.—Personally I am quite unable to understand why the tango's merits and demerits should continue to interest Parisians. But it is an undeniable fact that the Argentine nationale dance, which, by the way, is repudiated by the Argentine legation, still remains the subject of most heated discussions in the salons and everywhere.

The exotic dance was fortunate in arriving here at a time when we were practically at our wits' end for a new subject of conversation. Society found what it wanted the very moment the chief of police forbade the tango to be danced in public, and now tango has reached the heights of its popularity. It may even survive this dreadfully hot summer. It is discussed in society at the "fives" in the Bois, and "tout Paris" is at present divided into two hostile camps—for and against tango.

Tango at Senate Ball.

Since the tango, as I said, has been repudiated by the Argentine Embassy, we really do not know where the dance comes from, but we have adopted it, and the other evening I saw it danced most beautifully at a ball given by the President of the Senate in Luxembourg.

Our theatrical ladies find it far more interesting and plastic than either the Boston or the "grizzly hug," with no reminiscences of the "cake walk," of which they heartily tired.

Gabriel d'Annunzio, who was asked his opinion of the tango, replied with a smile: "Why, everybody tells me I dance it admirably, so, of course, I am delighted with it."

Madame Cassimir Perier sees absolutely nothing interesting the the tango, which has made no impression whatever on her, but Maurice Rostand, son of our great and immortal poet, finds tango incomparable, symbolizing "soft and gentle, perhaps a little sad, dreams." He emphatically declares that it must be danced only by young and beautiful partners who are in perfect harmony body and soul.

La Belle Otero Enthusiastic.

"LaBelle Otero" is enthusiastic about tango and tells me that in a revue soon to be performed she will dance it as Paris has never seen anything danced before. I am afraid it will be most shocking.

Princess Lucien Murat has startled us all by declaring: "I love tango above anything else in this world, and find it absolutely chaste when it is danced by a Spaniard or a South American. Frenchmen will never learn to dance it properly."

Mlle Cecile Sorel, of the "Comedie Francaise," says she does not know nor want to know the tango, "for there is only one kind of dance, that which is taught by Isadora Duncan, which arouses in my soul images of the highest beauty."

Andre deFouquieres says tango is a sad, melancholy dance which will never lastingly appeal to the lively, animated French people.

He thinks it should be limited to the stage. It can be danced very correctly; on the other hand it is liable not to be.

Its unsuitability for the drawing room comes also from the fact that it is not a gay and convivial dance and pretty like the Russian polka or the Polish polka. "I am a partisan of the old dances," says M. de Fouquieres, and at certain evening parties I have danced the Empire dances. One must have tradition, especially a nation like France, famous for her chivalry and politeness.

Country Club Clothes

Reception days at the country club and the yacht club bring out very distinguished costumes of the lingerie order, accompanied by picture hats loaded with roses, and parasols selected to match sashes. Such frocks this year are almost entirely of fine lace and machine embroidery, with knowing touches in the way of sashes and little tulle bows at the neck and girdle. Airy black tulle bows with sheer white frocks are extremely smart, and with this white and black combination is carried a parasol of decided hue, like mustard yellow, Nell rose or saxe blue. Buttoned white oxfords are much fancied with white frocks of an airy character, though buttoned boots of buckskin are liked best with yachting costumes of a tailored nature.

WOMAN JURORS SCORN STYLE OF SMART LAWYER

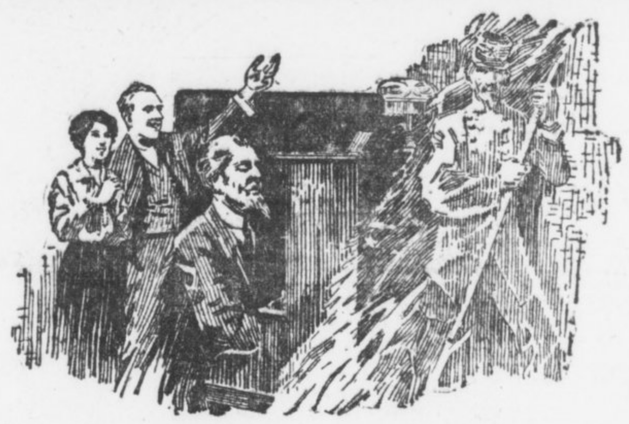
Beau Brummel Clothes and Bachelor Button of Barrister Fail to Win His Cause.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Personal pulchritude and unusually smart habiliments, heightened by a bachelor's button and an ingratiating manner, failed to win for Assistant District Attorney Maxwell McNutt, in his appeal to the jury of women which tried Mrs. Bertha J. Williams on an extortion charge to-day. After deliberating one hour and 55 minutes, the jury, the first in the history of the world composed of women to hear a felony case, brought in a verdict of acquittal.

"Of course she said she did what she did, but we didn't think when she said she did it, she meant she had meant to do it," said one of the jurywomen.

Hence, Mrs. Williams, attired in a fetching Milan hat and a neat white serge tailored suit, much scrutinized by the jurywomen, made discreet osculatory advances to her benefactors, and the incident was closed.

Mrs. Annette Robinson, also armored in attractive feminine fixings, was the complaining witness in the case. She accused Mrs. Williams of having written her a letter April 8, attempting to extort $150 in return for the delivery of a trunk said to have contained certain evidence which, according to the letter, would have embarrassed Mrs. Robinson, had it fallen into the hands of the police.



"DIXIE" RAISES RIOT

When Played by Instinct

(Experiences with the New Instinctive Playing. No. 8 of series.)

I RAISED merry riot in my house last night. I had the whole place going: but I didn't care. I was having the time of my life!

"I was near Mary's new Virtuolo Player Piano, and I thought I'd try it out. So I put in a roll marked 'Dixie,' while I was peeking around at the door, and that old song must have gone to my head. Before I knew it I was crashing it out for all I was worth—

"'Way down south in the land of cotton.'

"I closed my eyes, touched the 'soft and strong' Acsolo buttons,' and I put regular smash and ginger into that music.

"Why I seemed to be right back in those thrilling days of '61 again—when multitudes went wild over that great old song—when hearts beat like trip-hammers and throats sang themselves hoarse with its stirring rhythm.

"Well, Mary peeked in—and stayed. Then Mary's young man; and then some of the neighbors came along, too, and all joined in—yelling and singing and capering like mad!

"Say—my 'music instinct' is great, when I can play 'Dixie' like that!"

SUNDAY AMERICAN'S SPECIAL CABLE LETTERS RECEIVED FROM ALL THE GREAT CAPITALS OF EUROPE

ASQUITH WILL STAY PREMIER DESPITE TORIES

Reports of Prime Minister Withdrawing To Go on Bench All Emenate From Opposition.

By PHILIP EVERETT.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Seldom, if ever, has the air here been as full of political rumors as during the last few weeks—a fact which seems to show that the heat of the summer has played havoc with the brains of our conservative editors and politicians, for all the rumors invariably may be traced back to the camp of the Opposition.

The fall and collapse of the present Government was confidently predicted as destined to take place long ago, and when the prophecy was not fulfilled, the political gossips began to talk of all the important changes that were to take place in the Cabinet.

Asquith to Appoint Isaacs.

The most sensational of these predictions was that Mr. Asquith, tired with the burdens and responsibilities of his office, would resign after appointing himself Lord Chief Justice to succeed Lord Alverstone, who, as everybody knows, will never resume his seat on the bench.

A successor will have to be found, but as the long court vacation is at hand, no new Lord Chief Justice will have to be nominated until October, and then, no matter how often the Tory press has predicted that Mr. Asquith would never dare do, he will nominate Sir Rufus Isaacs for the vacant position.

And no one of any importance will say a word against the appointment, for in all England there is no man more fit to hold this high office than the present Attorney General. In a month or two all the artificial indignation stirred up by the Marconi affair will have completely disappeared.

Premier to Keep Post.

I can assure my readers, on the very best authority, that Mr. Asquith has not the slightest intention of leaving the political arena now, and everybody who knows him knows that this is so.

The statesman who, in face of unexampled difficulties, passed the Parliament act is not going to leave his post until the fruits of that great measure are garnered.

A distinguished colleague of Mr. Asquith's in the present Cabinet said a few weeks ago: "Loyalty is one of the brightest jewels in the crown of the Prime Minister's character." That loyalty will not be wanting to the Liberal party at this juncture in its fortunes. There is also a loyalty that a man owes to himself, and Mr. Asquith must feel that it is incumbent on him to see that the machine which he fashioned in the Parliament act is capable of doing its work.

Earl's Money to Buy Mother Home

Markham Girl to Spend Heart Balm

THE most recent photograph of Daisy Markham, the English actress, and a remarkable photograph of a clerk at work in the Bank of England, weighing out the $250,000 which the Marquis of Northampton paid to Miss Markham to settle her breach of promise suit.

Intends To Provide Her Parent With Handsome Income From Breach of Promise Suit.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Lovely Miss Daisy Markham declares she will expend much of the $250,000 the young Marquis of Northampton, former Earl of Compton, paid to her to settle the breach of promise suit in buying a residence for her mother, and in providing an income for her.

A quarter of a million is the largest sum ever paid in England in such a suit, but the Marquis of Northampton inherited a great fortune at his father's death, and one of the largest pieces of property in London owned by any one proprietor.

Well Known in America.

Miss Markham is well known in New York, where she was last seen with the Wyndham Company, as Elaine Shrimpton in "The Case of Rebellious Susan." She averred in bringing the suit that on April 21, 1912, the then Lord Compton verbally promised to marry her, and on October 12, 1912, refused to keep his promise.

Miss Markham wrote to Lord Compton after he broke off their engagement. She addressed him as "Dearest Darling Bim," and after pleading against his decision, said:

I would rather have you, Bim, dear, and live in a little cottage than have all your wealth and estates and live without you.

He replied, telling his love and despair. Miss Markham's lawyers regarded this letter as their most effective weapon in the suit. Here are some expressions in it:

I might just write you a line, as I am feeling so miserable.

I am going to ask you to believe I have always and do at the present moment love and respect you more than anyone in the world, and that you are absolutely my ideal of perfect womanhood.

Ways of World Hard.

But, Daisy, the ways of the world are hard, and I want you to believe that what I am now doing I am doing from a sense of duty, genuinely believing it to be the best for both of us.

Daisy, you don't know how those so-called ladies (of his own rank) would treat you, and I really could not bear to see you suffering it. And with your sweet, sensitive nature it would be torture to you. Oh, if only I could escape from my position! BIM.

GERMANY MAD TO BEAT U.S. IN 1916 OLYMPIC

Thousands of Young Men Are Striving For Places on Team to Represent Empire.

By STEVEN BURNETT.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, July 19.—Americans, who after their triumph in Stockholm last year may think that they will only have to come over here to repeat the same thing at the Berlin Olympic games in 1916 had better look to their laurels in time, for all Germany is possessed by a craze for sport.

All over the country thousands and thousands of young men are patiently drilling almost every day in all the branches of sport and from among all these the most promising athletes will be chosen a year from January next and during the following fifteen months up to the very time of the great international contest all the young men selected will be absolutely in the hands of autocratic trainers who will bring them as close as possible to absolute perfection. The expenses of this long training will willingly be borne by enthusiastic lovers of sports all over the country.

Craze for Sport Increases.

To a certain extent Germany has always been a sport-loving country. Its "turnvereins," which are so well known in every city in America, where a German colony exists, are older than any similar associations in Europe, but of late the craze for sports has reached proportions unknown in any other country in the world.

This renaissance of athletics is in the first place due to the Kaiser personally who has encouraged sport from the day of his accession and his pride was certainly justified when he said in his speech at a regatta the other day that there are more than 50,000 oarsmen in Germany belonging to more rowing clubs than in all the rest of Europe together.

It is indeed true that there is a colossal development of sport in Germany.

Polo Gains Popularity.

Games which never before had a foothold are springing into widespread popularity. Polo is a case in point. This sport is officially prohibited in the army by order of the Emperor, who still thinks that the physical dangers involved for officers are wholly out of proportion to any benefits to be derived.

Yet a group of gentlemen riders and other enthusiasts have just laid out at the new "garden city" of Frohnau, to the northeast of Berlin, a polo field and clubhouse, with a series of tennis courts, golf links, rifle and archery ranges, croquet grounds and everything else conducive to the cultivation of outdoor life.

LIGHT ON COCAS TREASURE SHED BY TAR'S WIDOW

Irishwoman Declares usband Was Mate of Ship Which Carried Gold to Hiding Place.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Mrs. Bridget McGowan, a widow living in the West of Ireland, has written to a London newspaper that her husband was third officer of the Peruvian bark Mary Pio (Holy Mary), which conveyed the "Cocos Island treasure" from Lima to Cocos Island in 1855, in order to prevent it from falling into the hands of Chilean invaders.

This is the first time in the voluminous literature of the Cocos treasure question that some person has appeared who claims to have been acquainted personally with any member of the crew of the treasure ship. It also indicates an entirely new history of the treasure.

The accepted story of all the treasure hunters hitherto has been that the incident took place in 1825, when the Spanish colonies revolted from the mother country, and the Spanish loyalists of Lima, in order to save their valuables from the invading Peruvian patriots, chartered a British ship called the Mary Deer to remove the treasure to Cocos Island.

Mrs. McGowan declares that the Mary Pio, with a crew of 36, conveyed the treasure to Cocos Island and buried it in four caches.

The ship was wrecked in a hurricane off Cocos, and only three of the crew reached the shore.

One was the writer's husband; the other two, an Englishman and a Welshman, died afterward on the island from eating poisonous berries.

The third mate survived and retained a map of the location of the four caches, in which five tons of gold were hidden.

His widow says that 30 years ago he gave the map to a man who is still living. She adds that an exact copy of that map is still extant and is well preserved.

City of Paris Makes Money on Art Show

"Municipal Operation" of Exhibition Is Tried In New Field With Great Success.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 19.—The city fathers have just concluded an interesting and very successful experiment in "municipal operation." The city fathers took it into their heads to give the people an artistic treat and organized an exhibition of the works of David, the celebrated artist.

The exhibition lasted 53 days and was a great success, not only artistically, but also from a financial viewpoint.

The city of Paris made money out of it, although 25,000 persons were admitted free every Sunday. On all other days an admission fee of 20 cents was charged. So numerous were the visitors that a handsome sum remains in the hands of the Municipal Council after paying all expenses.

PARIS, July 19.—Henri Robert has been elected leader of the Paris Bar. He has freed more criminals than any lawyer living, and made his fame in the Dreyfus case. He is a Parisian of Parisians, having been born here 50 years ago.

Of all the case he has won, he says, his defense of Lady Macbeth has given him most pleasure. At a literary entertainment he undertook that defense and, to the minds of the listeners, proved that historical murderess to be innocent.

Balfour's Book in Big Demand in Britain

Applicants for Works of Former Premier at Library Invariably Told They Are "Out."

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—The books of Arthur Balfour, former Prime Minister, are among the most widely read in London. At the annual general meeting of the London Library, over which Mr. Balfour presided, the Hon. Evan Charteris said that he had inquired at the library on numerous occasions for books written by Mr. Balfour, and was constantly told that they were "out." After waiting for some time and still being unable to secure the books at the library, he purchased a set for himself and recommended that another set be purchased for use in the library, as many others had had his experience in being told that the books were out.

Few 'Gillies' Left On the Scotch Moors

Rich Americans Who Rent Highland "Shooting Boxes" Can't Find Guides to Trace Game.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Because of the recent boom in trade, rich manufacturers in the Midlands and in the North are tumbling over each other to obtain the best fishings and shootings in Scotland for the fall. As a rule, the best are snapped up by wealthy Americans, but the latter are much troubled by a great dearth of "gillies," as the keepers are called.

Hundreds of young "gillies" have emigrated to Canada; soon there will be none, and the millionaires will have to find their way alone about the deer forests and grouse moors.

For the season to date the number of Scotchmen who have gone to Canada is 24,500, but by the end of the season it will be well over 30,000.

PHONOGRAPHIC RECORDS MAILED ON CLOTH SQUARES

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 19.—A new device for carrying on correspondence by phonograph has been introduced in Paris.

The record is made on a square of prepared cloth, which can be sent through the post in an envelope and is said to reproduce the voice with great accuracy. The cost of a complete outfit, including the machine for both transmitting and receiving messages and a supply of cloth squares, is from $50 to $60.

Marvelous Star of Ice Ballet Gives Berlin Thrills

By ALAN DALE.

Special Correspondence of The Sunday American.

BERLIN, July 19.—If you can imagine Pavlova with all her wiles, witcheries and Baccahanalian abandon, leaping, bounding, pirouetting and rotating on ice skates, you may have some faint idea of the amazing and beautiful Charlotte Oelschlager—known in Berlin as "Little Charlotte"—whom I saw last night in the finest entertainment I've viewed on this side of the pond—the ice ballet by Leo Barteuschek, at the Admiral's Palast.

Everything that an agile and almost supernaturally graceful Terpsichorean artist can do with daintily slippered feet little Charlotte does with tiny, glittering ice skates on her diminutive tootsies. The effect of it is positively bewildering. The smooth, gliding and velvety sensation of the ice sheet is absolutely unlike anything that the ordinary dancer has to offer, and the astounding versatility of the skaterine—who can do more on the knives of skates than Pavlova can do without them (and I make that statement unhesitatingly)—compels a rapt attention.

Little Charlotte is an awfully pretty girl.

She has long, blonde, un-wiggy hair, that in the dazzling light shed upon the huge ice arena of the Admiral's Palast, looks like spun silk; she owns a fascinating smile quite unlike the smirk that won't come off, so popular with the average dancing lady, and she has youth, effervescence and a sort of untrammeled gayety of manner that are positively irresistible. She is thin, supple, lissome and—perfectly astonishing. I take off my hat to her.

She is the finest artist of her kind that I have seen, and Berlin loves her. After viewing the work last night, I had the cozy, comfortable, well-satisfied sensation that an astonishing feat always induces. I felt glad that I had come to Berlin, for neither in Paris nor in London is there anything faintly to compare with the fascination of little Charlotte. If her nationality were otherwise, I should glory in calling her little Charlotte russe!

She appeared in the big ice ballet called "Flirtation in St. Moritz." It takes place on the large, glassy sheet of ice at the Admiral's Palast, with scenic effects at one end. It is in three acts with a story.

The entire cast of nine principals and a huge "chorus" of servants, geishas, Japanese dancers and supernumeraries are all on skates! Their evolutions at first amaze you, then, as you grow accustomed to them, they delight you and arouse a sort of titillating enthusiasm.

There are three acts of this icepageant, one called "Winter Sport at St. Moritz," the second "A Soiree In a Hotel de Luxe" and the third a "Japanese Festival." In the second, all the skaters and skating principals wear gorgeous evening gowns, as handsome as anything even America could desire, and in the Japanese scene they are all kimonoed and Japanesed in the most bewildering riot of colors. Dazzling calcium is shed over the proceedings, and—well, it is a sensation.

The best of it all is that you are dining at the Admiral's Palast. All around the magnificent and imposing ice field are tables where all the Berlinese dine and drink their beloved beer. It is not elaborately expensive, as such a thing would be in America. You pay your 50 or 60 cents for a seat, and your dinner is less costly than it would be at an ordinary restaurant.

And, believe me, it is in this moderation, this ungrasping catering to the multitude, that the success of such a giant scheme as the Admiral's Palast lies.

But the ice ballet of itself is a marvel. In addition to little Charlotte, who danced with a sort of Mordkin, called Max Feist—on skates—there was the gorgeous Dallerup, whose pyrotechnical skating made one dizzy. And there was Harry Paulsen. There were episodes on skis that was delightful; there were humorous incidents; there were Marcelines and big bears, and food not only for adults but for children. Not once did "Flirtation in St. Moritz" drag. The unexpected was always happening. One felt like the song that chirps "What Is Coming, Who Shall Say?" The whole thing was a joy.

One dines slowly and epicureanly in the German style. There is no gulping of food or rushing of drink. One takes one's time, sitting round that gorgeous ice field, which is cool and delicious, and quite unlike the feverish atmosphere one finds in most crowded resorts. All along the balcony were hundreds of diners in small reserved private boxes, but all the dining and wining (or beer-ing) never once interfered with this exultant ice ballet.

That gripped one, and dinner was really nothing more than a gastronomic accompaniment. Imagine the Madison Square Garden filled with people dining around its arena, and you may get some faint idea of the imposing Admiral's Palast.

But "Little Charlotte" was the benign star of it all, and throughout there wasn't one solitary note of ragtime! Not one!!

English Crowded Out Of 'Dear Old London'

Everything In British Capital Now Is American, Even Language Spoken at Big Hotels.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—London has been so full of Americans this season that there was no longer room for Britishers, and many moved with their baggage to the contiguous islands, Guernsey, Jeddo and Herne. The shopkeepers still stayed on, however.

Parisian methods in the hotels are being ousted to give place to American dishes. Colored and alluring ads are tempting "our dear American friends" to buy and announcements are put up that "American is spoken here."

The English, in fact, are commencing to speak "American" quite intelligibly. This is being helped by the incursion of American dishes into the cuisine of the great hotels, which are now seeking to follow New York models.

London Women Are Now Smoking Cigars

Some of Fashionable Devotees of Nicotine Are Even Developing Fondness for Pipe.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—When woman soothes her nerves now with tobacco it is not a cigarette she chooses, but a cigar, if she wants to appear quite up to date. The majority of women nowadays smoke cigarettes, but the ultra modern members of the fair sex are taking to cigars—even pipes.

The pipe chosen especially for women is a little light wooden pipe called the "Belique," which costs $1.

Pipes, however, are not so much "the vogue" at present as the cigar, and the favorite cigar which women smoke, it seems, is the La Fiorde Cuba. This is a long, thin cigar, which costs 50 cents in London.

CLOCK AT STATION HAS NEW NUMBERS, 13 TO 24

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 19.—The clock in the facade of St. Lazare Station is to be the first in Paris to have the newly adopted official numerals of 13 to 24 for the hours after noon.

From 1 a. m. to 12 the figures 1 to 12 will appear on the dial. As noon strikes they will disappear and by an automatic arrangement the figures 13 to 24 will take their places.

Gamblers Hide in Convent During Raid

Men and Women In Evening Clothes Seen In Yard of Cloister by French Officers.

ROME, July 19.—When the police raided a suspected gambling den patronized by society folk, they found no one in the house after the doors had been broken down, but about 40 men and women in evening clothes were seen in hasty flight in the garden.

The gamblers scaled the garden wall and escaped into the grounds of the Sacred Heart Convent. Most of the fugitives made their way to the street, but a dozen of the ladies, it is said, remained in hiding in the garden of the convent throughout the night, departing quietly the next morning.

Kaiser Ends Feud With Lippe Family

Emperor of Germany In Bending Mood Patches Up Old Quarrel With Prince Frederick IV.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, July 19.—The Kaiser is a strong man, noted for his friendships as for his enmities, and always a better man to deal with than to fight with, but he is just now in a bending mood.

Having patched up the old-time feud with the Cumberland family and made "a happy union" for his beloved daughter, he has magnanimously ended his feud of fifteen years with the ruling family of Lippe, one of the little principalities with which the German Empire is studded. He has recognized Prince Frederick IV of Lippe.

STRANGE JEWEL FROM EGYPT IS IN ENGLISH HOME

Excavation Party in Tomb Unearths Pharaoh Toy and Its Wonderful History.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—A jewel with a wonderful history was the feature of the Royal Society's conversazione at Burlington House recently.

It is of carnelian, lapis lasuli and turquoise and was made by order of the Pharaoh of Upper Egypt 3,400 years before the birth of Christ.

The Pharoah gave it to one of his court favorites, and when the latter died it was buried with him in his magnificent tomb at Gerzeh, some forty miles away from modern Cairo. A body-snatcher of ancient Egypt broke open the tomb of the dead favorite of Pharaoh.

For once, poetic justice—an institution which flourished even in Egypt—came into operation. The heavy slabs that formed the roof of the tomb fell on the thief and crushed him flat.

Then the wind came, and with it the sand; and year by year the ruined tomb was buried deeper, so that it lay for centuries hidden in the desert.

Last March, Professor Flinders Petrie and his excavating party found it. The fallen roof and the crushed body of the thief told their own tale, and the excavators were encouraged to look for what they knew the thief had not been able to take away with him. And so at last they found the beautiful jewel at which a court artificer had wrought, perhaps for years, 50 centuries ago. It was inspected here with deep curiosity.

Deadly Gas Gun Is Refused by England

Inventor Makes Weapon Which Shoots Chemicals That Start Fire, Unextinguishable by Water.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Ernest Walsh, a young chemist of Hull, has invented a remarkable gas gun, which he has offered to the War Department.

His offer was refused without test or examination, and to-day he left for France to submit his invention on the invitation of the French authorities.

The gun, which represents his life's work, throws projectiles containing chemicals which set fire to anything they strike, the flames not being extinguishable by water.

PETRIFIED BODY OF GIANT OF PATAGONIA AUCTIONED

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 19.—A petrified man was sold by auction in Paris recently.

The man lived some thousands of years ago in Patagonia. He was about 5 feet 6 inches in height. Though he is now a stone statue, the body bears traces of deep wounds. It is supposed that the man was killed and that his body was slowly changed to stone by the action of water charged with lime salts.

Doctor's Boyish Face Reveals Skin Renewer

I heard the other day the story of the physician with so admirable a skin that all his women patients asked the secret. He told one, who generously told others, that, knowing the remarkable absorbent property of ordinary mercolized wax, he concluded this substance would make an excellent complexion renewer and preserver. Knowing the wax could not harm the skin, he began using it after shaving. He soon observed that the old, withered, colorless cuticle was being gradually absorbed and replaced by younger, healthier skin. This was the simple secret of the silver-haired doctor with the boyish face.

The secret became public property. Now women everywhere use mercolized wax, applying it nights like cold cream, washing it off mornings—continuing until the complexion is entirely renovated. An ounce of this wax, procurable at any druggist's, will banish the worst complexion.

Another valuable rejuvenator used by this doctor was a wrinkle-remover and preventive in the form of a face bath, made by dissolving an ounce of saxolite in a half-pint witch hazel. This also has become famous.—Aurella in Fashion Review.

"GETS-IT" for Corns, and Away They Go!

You'll say, "It does beat all how quick 'GETS-IT' got rid of that corn. It's almost magic!" "GETS-IT" gets

"Never Could Do This Before. 'GETS-IT' Made Every Corn Vanish Like Magic."

every corn, every time, as sure as the sun rises. It takes about two seconds to apply it. Corn pains stop, you forget the corn, the corn shrivels up, and it's gone! Ever try anything like that? You never did. There's no more fussing with plasters that press on the corn, no more salves that take off the surrounding flesh, no more bandages. No more knives, files or razors that make corns grow, and cause danger of blood poison. "GETS-IT" is equally harmless to healthy or irritated flesh. It "gets" every corn, wart, callous and bunion you've got.

"GETS-IT" is sold at all druggists at 25 cents a bottle, or sent on receipt of price by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago. Sold in Atlanta by Jacobs' Pharmacy Company, Elkin Drug Co., Coursey & Munn, Gunter-Watkins Drug Company, E. H. Cone, Inc., Tipton & Co.

Amorous Suitor Has to Pay $250 Damages for Failing to Carry Out Osculatory Promise.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—"I send you a kiss for the tips of each of your little soft ears," and "if we are not married in a year I will resign myself to bachelorhood, I vow," were phrases in letters written by Philip Still, a clerk employed by the London County Council, to Miss Edith Emily Protheroe, a dressmaker, of Cornwall. At Swansea Court Miss Protheroe recovered $250 damages and costs for breach of promise.

Divine Sarah Now Domino Enthusiast

Madame Bernhardt Takes It to Heart When Beaten, so Opponents Generally Gracefully Lose.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 19.—Madame Bernhardt, who spends her summer holidays at her home at Belle Isle, on the coast of the Bay of Biscay, has become very fond of the game of dominoes and usually plays after luncheon and after dinner. Although she is a poor player, she enjoys the game and is keenly disappointed when she loses.

Guests at Belle Isle have formed the habit of gracefully losing to the Divine Sarah, thus pleasing her vanity.

Her afternoons are spent in her studio, where she is modeling her tomb, which is to be placed on Belle Isle as a landmark for sailors.

Human System Poisons Itself

Otherwise Most of Us Would Live to Be Methuselahs.

Scientists say that almost every moment we are poisoning ourselves. Autotoxemia, they term it, or Self-Poisoning. Eliminate Autotoxemia, and we could live to be hundreds of years old.

All food eaten leaves in the stomach some waste, unused particles. This waste ferments and generates uric acid, and when uric acid gets in the blood it poisons the system—self-poisoning. Constipation, indigestion, biliousness, dyspepsia, sick headache, languidness and a weakened physical condition all result from self-poisoning.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT flushes stomach and intestines, dissolves the uric acid which has accumulated and expels it with the fermenting waste.

Take JACOBS' LIVER SALT in the morning before breakfast. You will do a better day's work, and live longer.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is better than calomel for constipation and biliousness. Acts quickly and more thoroughly, requiring no cleansing after-dose of oil; causes no after-danger of salivation; never gripes or nauseates. It effervesces agreeably. No other liver tonic has the same mild, natural flushing action, though many imitations (in name) are offered. Insist that your druggist supply the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. If he can not, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, 25c, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

Zim Says: 'Good Batter Slams Anything Pitched'

POSITION AT PLATE BIG FACTOR IN HITTING

Getting "All Set" Not Only Narrows "Swing" but Increases Risk of Being "Beaned."

HERE'S the second of the articles by Henry (Heinie) Zimmerman on "How to Hit the Ball." You can't wait for the pitcher to put one over to your liking, says the great Cub batter, for if you do it will be an accident if you get it.

By HENRY ZIMMERMAN.

One of the questions which is being constantly hurled at me is, "Heine, what would you rather hit?"

Of course every batter has his favorite ball and almost every batter has his weakness.

I would rather hit a curve ball than anything else. I prefer it to a fast one, and it certainly gives me more pleasure to hit at a hook than it does to swipe at a slow one. If the old days when you could call for what you wanted were in vogue I would address the pitcher in this way:

"Mr. Pitcher, please curve it; let it come over the plate along about my waist on the inside corner of the plate. Then instruct your left fielder to play deep."

That's my favorite, but it is also my impression that the batter who is wise won't wait for his favorite. Because the moment the pitcher discovers what you like he feeds you the opposite. It's only by accident that you get what you like, and since all the pitchers know what I prefer I have no hesitancy in telling the public.

Doesn't Pay to Wait for Favorite Ball

I never could figure why a man who likes to hit and who wants to hit is so particular about the kind of a ball he swings at. It's my honest and candid opinion that more base hits are made off balls which would be called "balls" by the umpire than off those which cross the plate between the knees and the shoulders.

Wagner gets lots of base hits on wild pitches. They tell me that Lajoie in the American League makes a practice of getting doubles and triples on balls that are as high as his head.

It certainly has been my experience that I could hit safely almost anything I could touch. There's a reason for this, too. The position at the plate and the weight of the bat used has a lot to do with this.

They say that Wagner is awkward at the plate. His position may not be graceful, but it is one of the best in the league. If you will notice he simply lounges all over that plate. He is never set. The result is that he is prepared to hit anything.

Get "All Set," but Can't Hit the Ball

Contrast his position with that of some of the other fellows. They go up there, dig a hole for their right foot if they be right-hand hitters and get set. They are planted to take an awful wallop at the ball. But they are in no position to hit a fast curve, for instance.

They also are always taking the chance of being "beaned." That's true, for the reason that they are set, they are rigid, they can't get out of the way of a ball that breaks at the last moment and starts for their head.

Many a man has been hit by a pitched ball for the reason that he set himself to swing. The best way is to be up there lounging like Wagner. Then you are in position to step forward and meet the ball. You also are in position to swing at the fast breaking ones. You are running mighty little chance of being "beaned."

Speaking of the weaknesses of batters it's my opinion that Wagner has the most peculiar of any man in the game. It's no use to try to fool him on a curve. You can't. It's just as useless to try a fast one. He'll pound that, regardless of where it is pitched. He cares nothing for a spitter and a change of pace means nothing but a fattening of his batting average.

Ball That Fools Wagner.

Jimmy Archer tells me that when the pitcher must pitch to Wagner, when it is in the pinch, he signals for one square over the heart of the plate, with nothing but speed on it. Archer says that Wagner will do less with this than he will if you try to fool him, and Mordecai Brown used to do the same thing.

Since Wagner and Lajoie have been compared for years and years perhaps it would not be wrong for me to say here that Archer says that the two men are alike in their weaknesses and that Lajoie can do less with the ball which most batters like than he can with the hooks, the slow ones, the fast one with the hop. Archer knows, for the reason that he caught in the American League.

The size of the bat has a lot to do with it. I want one of medium size, say 40 ounces. I'm strong enough to swing the kind that Chief Meyers does. But I couldn't get as many hits. The way the pitchers curve them on you nowadays a man must have something in his hand that he can swing at the last instant and swing hard and true.

I wouldn't like to say that the average batter swings a club that is too heavy. But in my opinion any time that a bat feels the least bit heavy it is too heavy and should be discarded for a lighter one.

TAD MAKES IT CLEAR THAT HEINE HAS RIGHT DOPE ON ART OF SLUGGING 'EM OUT

TAKE-A-CHANCE BATTER BEST

I NEVER could figure why a man who likes to hit and who wants to hit is so particular about the kind of ball he swings at. It's my honest and candid opinion that more base hits are made off balls that would be called "balls" by the umpires than off those which cross the plate between the knees and the shoulders. Wagner turns many a wild pitch into a two-bagger or a triple. He plays no favorites, but slams them out as they come.

MATHEWSON NOT HUMAN, SAYS GEORGE MULLIN

Says "Big Six" Will Never "Go Back" and Is the Wonder of Baseball.

NEW YORK, July 19.—The other afternoon I met George Mullin walking along Broadway, alone. It was a day or so before the announcement came that he had been released to Montreal in the International League. Mullin was deep in thought when I spied him ahead of me. He was lost so far that he jumped when I touched him on the shoulder.

"How goes it, George?" I asked.

"Sliding back by degrees," he said, with a half smile. "But I am working hard to make the slide as slow as possible. But," he went on, "I suppose it comes to all of us in time, excepting that fellow Mathewson—and he isn't human."

"Don't you think it will ever come to him?" was asked.

"Doesn't look like it. Why, that fellow is now the oldest pitcher in either league—that is, he has been at it longer. Still, here he is in his thirteenth year and leading all pitchers! What is his record?"

"He has won seventeen and lost five, I believe."

• • •

"THERE you are. Now, how does he do it? Four years ago some of the Cub players told me he was losing his stuff, but, somehow, he manages to keep winning.

"I'll tell you," said Mullin, "I believe he runs himself just like he does his automobile. He uses just enough gasoline to get in the lead, and when he strikes the down grade he shuts it off and coasts. I guess my trouble is that I used up too much gasoline before I thought of it."

• • •

THIS theory of Mullin's is borne out by the members of the Giant infield, who begin to tremble the minute Matty gets a good lead. Once in front, Six puts the first ball over and lets the batters hit it where they may. Line drives shoot all around the diamond until men get on bases, and then the Old Master tightens up—turns on more gasoline.

"If you don't stop that, Matty," Grover Hartley said to the star pitcher the other day after a close game, "you are going to get some of those infielders killed." Matty didn't take very kindly to that suggestion, but the very next day Larry Doyle was knocked down by a line drive just after the Giants had a five-run lead on the Phillies, and Fletcher narrowly escaped having his leg shot off.

A. A. U. Bars Mixed Swimming Meets

Protests Entered Against Girls Being Allowed to Compete Against Men In Races.

NEW YORK, July 19.—James E. Sullivan, secretary-treasurer of the Amateur Athletic Union, and the chairman of the National Registration Committee, has sent a hot letter to E. C. Brennan, of the American Life Saving Society.

It was reported to the A. A. U. that Brennan was giving mixed swimming events, and that is something the A. A. U. officials will never countenance. They do not want to see the girls made "public characters," and they want to protect the young women and not to degrade them by competition against men in the same tank.

In this stand Sullivan is backed by the entire A. A. U. as well as the New York Board of Education, of which he is a member. If the girls and women are to have more extended competition than they have now, the A. A. U. men say they should have associations of their own for protection, that they should compete only among themselves, and not against boys or men.

SAYLOR TO BOX ON COAST; PLANS BOUTS WITH STARS

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., July 19.—In an effort to land his new protege, Milburn ("Young") Saylor, at the top of the lightweight heap, Ray Bronson is planning an early invasion of the Pacific coast.

Western promoters are dickering with Bronson for a bout on Labor Day between Saylor and Leach Cross, "Harlem Tommy" Murphy, Bud Anderson or Joe Rivers. Bronson says he is anxious to match with any one of the four.

In his last bouts Saylor knocked out "Battling" Kelly, a welterweight, in four rounds, then stopped "Battling" Terry, a Pittsburg welter, in three rounds.

OLDRING AND BENDER ARE BIG HELP TO ATHLETICS

PHILADELPHIA, PA., July 19—What a remarkable difference it makes in a ball player when he displays interest in his work and takes the proper care of himself is plainly demonstrated in the improvement Rube Oldring and "Chief" Bender of the Philadelphia Athletics are showing this season over last. It is not a secret that neither of these players buckled down to real work last season.

Manager Mack found it necessary to suspend them both, and when they came into the fold this year it was under a contract which controls their conduct by means of having the amount they are to draw in salary fluctuate. The result is that both are delivering the goods in real shape this season.

CLABBY AND HICKS WILL MEET IN RETURN MATCH

DETROIT, MICH., July 19.—Freddie Hicks, the local middleweight, has been matched to meet Jimmy Clabby at Butte, August 3. Hicks has met the Hammond boxer, tackling him at his home town in a ten-round bout, and getting a sound lacing. This match will be over the same route.

LYNCH WILL MANAGE SPOKANE.

SEATTLE, July 19.—Mike Lynch left for Vancouver, B. C., last night to take the management of the Spokane Northwestern League club, which has been disorganized and playing badly. Lynch was released by Victoria for the purpose of strengthening Spokane, it being considered that the condition of Spokane was injuring the whole league. The Victoria team will still present a strong line-up.

'SMOKY JOE' IS ADJUDGED THE SLOWEST TWIRLER

THE Philadelphia Evening Telegraph has discovered the slowest pitchers in the world. Here is how it described a recent game in which they performed:

"Smoky Joe" Wood and "Waco Bill" Taff, little brothers of the box, can outpoint any tortoise that ever crawled for studied deliberation, for deliberate languor and for general sleepiness when in the performance of their duties.

This is not a slam at the usefulness and the worth of either twirler. Both "get there" just as did the turtle in the fable. But aeons and aeons pass between their departure and their arrival, and meanwhile suppers grow cold at home and wifey remembers that he never thought of ball games while he was courting her and that it's very funny, anyhow, that he should come home in the dusk every time he goes to the grounds.

Wood, however, has even Taff outclassed. During the ninth inning recently he averaged more than 40 seconds to every pitch. Any self-respecting moving picture machine would burn out its bearings before it could be run slow enough to catch him at work. There is a popular tradition in a Boston newspaper office that one camera man got an action picture of Wood, but this seems unlikely.

Wood combines his loitering with speed only excelled by Walter Johnson. He winds up like an old-fashioned watch, swinging his arms slowly. Watching him makes every one want to yawn. Then he untangles himself suddenly while the batter, who by this time has also the hookworm complaint, is nodding drowsily. Whish—goes a streak over the plate, whereupon Umpire Ferguson calls it a ball. If the whish thing goes a foot inside, outside, into the rubber plate or ten feet in the air, Ferguson impartially calls it a strike. The main thing is that the batter rarely meets the ball.

Assuming that the ball has gone somewhere near the catcher, this procedure is then enacted. The backstop snaps the ball to Wood, who has run up to within a few feet of the plate, and who is usually inquiring kindly whether Ferguson's astigmatism is congenial if acquired. J. Wood grabs the ball with his gloved hand in a rather petulant way and carries it tenderly back to the hill. Instead of stopping at the box, he ignores it entirely and wanders five or six yards behind it.

From this vantage point he looks at the catcher, critically, craining his head hither and yon. Perhaps something in the grandstand attracts his attention. Joe promptly develops great interest in it. Roused to a sense of duty by the acrid tones of the infielders, Wood finally begins the march back to the box. Hastily counting the fans in the left bleachers, he adds up those in the right. Having exhausted everything else of interest, he puts his spiked shoes fairly in the box and begins to swing his arms. After a few seconds he warms up to the work and lets the ball drive.

Joe takes an unfair advantage of the batters by this method. Strong men in the grandstand and bleachers snored raucously after watching him for an inning. Rube Oldring pinched himself urgently once or twice while at the plate to make certain that he was still awake. All Wood needs to be the best pitcher in the world is a crooning kind of lullaby to match his actions. Then the ball park would be an excellent sanitarium for sufferers from insomnia. Even without the lullaby Joe is still some shakes of a twirler.

Pitcher Ables Has Tremendous Hands

Oakland Southpaw Can Easily Palm an Ordinary Baseball.

LOS ANGELES, July 19.—Harry Ables, star southpaw of the Oaklands and the man whose work last year stamped him as the best left-hander in the league and was instrumental in the Oaks winning the championship, has a wonderful pair of hands.

Ables is a big man physically and undoubtedly possesses the largest hands of any pitcher in the business. An ordinary baseball can easily be hidden in the hand of the big southpaw, and it is to the size and strength of his hands that Ables attributes much of his pitching ability.

Along with his big hands Ables' wrists are heavy and strong, so that a delivery that would ordinarily weaken the arm of a less strong man has no terrors for him, and if the condition of his hands and wrists have anything to do with his period of service as an active pitcher, then he is due for many more years in baseball.

Many clever twirlers have gone bad and been compelled to lessen their work because they had not the strength to get the ball away with the necessary snap of the wrist without tiring, but Ables has no cause for worry and his work is easy for him.

As the Coast League can boast a pitcher possessing the biggest hands, at the same time the player with the smallest hands is in the organization. Billy Kenworthy, of the Sacramento club, being barely able to grip a baseball. As Ables' hands are an aid to him, Kenworthy's short fingers are a detriment to him. Many a hard-hit drive that would be handled with ease by an ordinary fielder has to be handled with extraordinary care by the Sacramento star, as a baseball is to him as big as an indoor baseball would be in the hands of the big Oakland southpaw.

Soccer Star Dodges Being a Millionaire

"Why Should I Worry About Being Heir to $1,200,000?"—O'Brien. "I Have a Good Job."

VAN BUREN, ARK., July 19.—Utter weariness of being merely a millionaire is the reason John O'Brien, of New York, who has been missing for three years, has advanced in explanation of his long absence from the ken of his old friends.

O'Brien is a former soccer football star of Columbia University. He vanished at the close of his college year, in 1910. He was found yesterday in this town, where he is working as an assistant engineer for the Missouri Pacific Railroad.

"Why should I worry about being heir to $1,200,000," said O'Brien to-day. "I have a good job. When I convince myself that I have made good in the world I will return home. I became plumb tired of being a rich man with nothing to do except play the society game and study new ways to kill time. Just now I wouldn't trade my $1,500 a year position for the biggest fortune in the world."

O'Brien added that his mother has known of his whereabouts, though a nation-wide search has been made for him.

Exclusive "More Mileage" advantages in Diamond Tires that cost no more

The greatest mileage at the least expense is what you most desire in a tire.

This is what we have demanded from our Chemists, our Engineers, our Tire Builders and factory experts—and here is their answer—

Diamond (No Clinch) Tires

Chemists: Vitalized Rubber—pure, lusty, young rubber put through a process that toughens and makes it road-resisting, with no loss of life or elasticity.

Engineers: Perfect 3-Point Rim Contact, that prevents all forms of rim troubles, such as cutting against the rim and breaking above the bead.

Tire Builders: A No-Clinch more air-room tire, giving added resiliency and perfect balanced construction.

Then we protected the inner tube with a No-Pinch Safety Flap.

And, best of all, these exclusive Diamond advantages cost you no more. They insure liberal mileage and freedom from tire troubles.

So this time buy Diamond Vitalized Rubber Tires—you can get them to fit your rims from

WENT WITHOUT MEALS TO LEARN NATIONAL GAME

Hughie High, Tigers' Young Recruit, Has Fought Hard to Make a Success.

THIS is a story of a young man who literally would rather play baseball than eat.

You often have heard people use the expression that they preferred something else to taking their meals, but when it comes to a showdown they probably were not slow in lining up for the march to the dining room. There is one member of the Detroit Tigers, however, who repeatedly has missed his supper in order that he might have more time to devote to the national pastime.

Hughie High is the name of this athlete who found more pleasure in playing baseball on an empty stomach than in doing anything else after a feast. Not only did he endure the pangs of hunger in order to engage in the sport, but assimilated many a parental licking for cutting his meals besides.

Mr. High is what might be termed a persevering person. When he makes up his mind to do anything he just naturally goes and does it. Until this particular object is accomplished he is deaf, dumb and blind except where hearing, speaking or seeing will help him to attain that which he desires. It so happens that he was bitten by a baseball germ early in life and from that time on his world has revolved around the game.

* * *

THE little fellow was not fortunate enough to be able to devote his entire attention to baseball, however. His parents decided that he had to be useful and ornamental at the same time, so he went to work learning the plumber's trade. Just why he selected this occupation when there were so many openings for good burglars and porch climbers is not apparent. Possibly he didn't like the idea of working nights and figured he could get just as much money and more regular sleep by holding people up the daytime by means of the pipe wrench and the molten lead.

St. Louis is High's home and also the scene of his plumbing endeavors. The pounders and faucet fixers of the Mound City work eight hours a day, as do most plumbers elsewhere. This gives them one hour for actual labor and seven for going back to the shop after their tools. Naturally, with eight hours sliced right out of the daylight, Mr. High did not have very much time left for ball playing, but he found that by passing up his supper he could get in about an hour's work on the lots in the baseball months.

Also he managed to quit half an hour earlier in the evening by taking only 30 minutes for dinner at noon instead of 60. Then, of course, Sundays and holidays he did not have to work, unless there was some special job, which meant overtime pay and more money to be spent for balls, bats and gloves.

* * *

THE young plumber played hard in the short time allowed him to enjoy the game and his proficiency attracted the attention of some of the Trolley Leaguers. Finally he attained the proud position of a member of one of the Trolley League clubs, and thereafter he lived just for the Sunday battles in that flourishing semi-professional circuit.

By this time his people had given up the idea of weaning him away from baseball, and instead of bestowing a licking on him whenever he missed supper they began to read the papers Monday morning to find out what Hugh had done in the Sabbath battles. They still predicted that he would come to no good end, but were glad, since he insisted on being a ball player, that he was a good one.

After a couple of seasons in the Trolley League he was signed by the Hartford club, in the Connecticut League, where he played in 1911 and 1912, joining the Tigers from that outfit last fall.

He still works at the plumbing business in the fall and winter months and holds a union journeyman's card.

When not learning to wipe joints or swipe the ball, Hughie managed to find time to give himself a fair education. He attended night grade school and night high school after it grew too dark to see the horsehide, and in the cold months when there was no outdoor pastiming, and was so conscientious with his lessons that he makes a very creditable appearance in conversation. In fact, he has often been taken for a college man. The little outfielder declines to be worried about the prospect of his being beaten to the Tigers' utility job by Ray Powell.

* * *

"IF Powell can beat me I'll be the first one to congratulate him," said Hugh. "He is a fine ball player and a fine fellow, and there will be no hard feeling on my part whichever way our fight for a regular job with the Detroit club may turn out. I know that I still have a lot to learn about baseball, and if I am sent to the International League to learn I will not be a bit sore. I'll try my best to make good wherever they shift me, and by doing that may be able to get another chance in the big league next year.

"I am young and have plenty of time, and should I fail to make good I will not be discouraged. It is a big jump from the Connecticut to the American League, or even to the International, and whichever way things come out I am sure of a better job at a better salary than I had last season."

TROTT AND KETCHELL MATCH.

CHICAGO, July 19.—Sammy Trott, of Columbus, Ohio, was matched yesterday to fight Steve Ketchell in Winnipeg, Manitoba, August 16. The fight is to be twelve rounds, the men to weight 133 pounds at 3 o'clock. An effort will be made to arrange a match between the winner and Ad Wolgast.

CROSS AND BALDWIN MATCHED.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., July 19.—Leach Cross, the New York dentist-pugilist, and Matty Baldwin, of Boston, have been matched to box twenty rounds at the Vernon arena July 29. Baldwin, who is now in Boston, is expected to leave immediately for the coast.

HARVARD TEAMS SHOWED STRONG IN ATHLETICS

Wearers of Crimson Captured Four College Championships for 1912-1913.

BOSTON, MASS., July 19.—The wearers of the Harvard crimson excelled on the intercollegiate athletic field for the academic year of 1912-13. Out of sixteen possible athletic championships the men from Cambridge won four outright and divided honors for the fifth. Harvard triumphed in football, cross-country running, hockey and association football, in addition to dividing the lacrosse title with Johns Hopkins.

Since Johns Hopkins declined the Harvard challenge to play off the tie for the lacrosse title this might reasonably be awarded to Harvard, but when the Harvard challenge reached Baltimore the Southern team had disbanded and was under no obligation to play off the tie.

The University of Pennsylvania scored first in three championships and therefore ranks second to Harvard, with Yale, Cornell and Princeton tied with two championships each. For purposes of computation each championship is regarded as a single point, which would make the score of the eight universities figure as follows: Harvard, 4 1-2; Pennsylvania, 3; Yale, 2; Princeton, 2; Cornell, 2; Syracuse, 1; Columbia, 1; Johns Hopkins, 1-2.

Poor Year for Yale.

Not only did Harvard win outright more championships than any of its rivals, but the Crimson athletes finished second in one of the major sport championships they did not win, besides making a uniformly high record in the many minor sports. In rowing Harvard certainly deserves to rank third, while in track atletics its team did finish second. In baseball the Crimson beat Yale in two out of three games, and while the championship of the diamond is given to the Blue on the season's record, the Crimson deserves to rank second or third. As a further distinction for Harvard, the Crimson beat Yale in three out of four major sports.

of four major sports.

The Crimson won in football, baseball and rowing, leaving Yale supreme only on the track, but Harvard made some amends for this by beating out Yale in the I. C. A. A. A. A. track championships. It was a fat year for Harvard and a mighty lean one for Yale.

There isn't any room for dispute over the majority of the championship titles here awarded. In practically all of the minor sports there were associations which arranged schedules that left no doubt as to the competitor winning first place.

In the four major sports—football, baseball, rowing and track athletics—this was possible only in track athletics, but in the three others the supremacy of the teams to which the honor is awarded was sufficient to leave no room for dispute.

Harvard was entitled to the supremacy in football by virtue of going through the season undefeated and beating both Princeton and Yale in decisive fashion. This was a record such as no other team in the country made.

Brickley Football Hero.

There were two or three other teams which finished the season undefeated, but their opponents were not in Harvard's class. Harvard's 1912 eleven was one of the best combinations ever produced at Cambridge. It was an all-round team, excelling its opponents in every department of the game, whether punting, drop and place kicking, end running or line plunging.

At the same time there was one individual on the eleven who deserves to be immortalized in Harvard's football history. This was Charles Brickley, who, although only a sophomore, shone with the brilliancy of a Coy or a Poe.

UNUSUAL RULES AND PLAYS IN BASEBALL

NO. 2.

By J. W. Heisman.

IT is not generally understood by laymen that a player on either coaching line has no right, by the rules, to coach, or to say anything whatsoever, as long as there is no runner on base. All that he says is supposed to be in the nature of advice or instruction to base runners, and as long as there are none on the rule distinctly prohibits him from advising his batter, addressing the umpire, or quarreling with any member of the opposition. It's a pity that umpires do not enforce this rule better for its violation leads, in my opinion, to over half of the squabbles and fines that occur in the game.

Pitching Rules—The Position.

When he delivers the ball to the plate the pitcher must have one foot (the rear one) in contact with the pitcher's plate.

He must, at the instant of delivery, be squarely facing the batter.

He must not take more than one forward step, and both feet must be in front of his plate, or on a line with its front edge. He must not raise either foot until after he has started his delivery.

The Balk.

Not only spectators but a great many baseball experts are often puzzled as to whether a given case does or does not constitute a balk. This is not strange, for there are seven ways, by the rule, that a pitcher can employ to manufacture one of these little oddities—so rarely ever observed by Southern League umpires, even with good telescopes. The trouble is that while one is deciding in their own mind that in a certain delivery that the pitcher illustrated he did not violate this, that and the other canon of good form, we forget that very one remaining rule of the seven which he probably did break. Then, too, you can not positively describe the actions one may go through in throwing either to the plate or to a base, so specifically and definitely but that most any two men will see the pitcher's movements in different ways in case of an argument, and will differ radically as to whether those movements conformed to the rules or did not. Here they are, in brief—mull over them for yourself:

A pitcher makes a balk whenever he starts a wind-up (if he is in the box, has one foot in contact with the plate) and doesn't throw somewhere at the conclusion of that wind-up. If he is not in the box he can whirl his arms and bluff to throw all he pleases.

If he throws to any base to catch a runner he must simultaneously step out directly toward that base with one foot. And if he starts to throw to the plate or to first base he must go through with it and turn the ball loose toward the one place or the other. But he can bluff all he pleases to second and third and will not be penalized if he fails to let the ball go.

If the pitcher delivers the ball to the batter while not conforming to all of the rules regarding the position he should take in the box, he has, of course, committed a balk.

And if he holds the ball so long without delivering it somewhere, as, in the opinion of the umpire, to be unnecessarily delaying the game, he is in hot water again. And if he makes any motion whatever that is habitual with him in his manner of delivery without following that motion up with the ball he is clearly in contempt of court.

* * *

NOW section 7 of the balk rule says that he has also committed a FAUX PAS (French for foxy pass that didn't pan out right) whenever he makes any motion to pitch while standing in his position without having the ball in his possession. While this is true, "all right, all right," it has always puzzled me immensely why they don't go on and include here another way of violating good pitching manners that umpires will everywhere be shocked over, but which is not stated in the rule book anywhere. It is this: If you get in the pitcher's box without the ball in your possession you are committing a balk by that mere fact alone, and whether you mawe "any motion to pitch" or not.

* * *

I ONCE asked the lamented Harry Pulliam, then president of the National League, how he could construe this a balk when there was nothing specific in the rule book about it, and he replied that he simply construed such an act as PRIMA FACIE evidence of an intention to commit a balk. I regret to have to say that in my opinion this is no answer at all, for the simple reason that no pitcher ever has an INTENTION of committing a balk.

Just to hear what he would say, I once asked the same question of the great Mordecai Brown. He averred that the point was covered in the rule book. I handed him the book and asked him to kindly show me where it was. He looked and looked, but never found it, and had to give up the case except to remark that he knew well enough it was a balk all right, and so it is everywhere construed.

By the way, it is worth noting that a balk does not entitle the batter ever to his base, but only such runners as are already on base. With no runner on a pitcher may make all the balks he likes and nothing will happen.

It is perfectly possible, though, for a pitcher to have a very puzzling way of throwing either to home or to a base without one being able to tell for certain just where he is going to throw, and that without committing a balk. This is easier for left-handed men than for right-handers; but I have seen the latter kind who could so twist and distort their bodies at the waist, after starting a seeming delivery to the plate, that they were able to completely fool the first-base runner into starting for second, and who then succeeded in wrenching their left foot around so as to thrust it straight out toward first base after all and to squarely face that sack before compelled to turn the ball loose. In a case like this the pitcher has gone through, seemingly, with the motion so far toward a plate delivery that the runner has not thought it possible for him to change and get it to first base instead. Yet the pitcher has succeeded in doing that very thing, and has conformed to the requirements of a throw to first base as well. To do this he has had to so retard the final movements of his arm swing as to give himself time to step out toward first and to face it, and still have force and accuracy enough in the throw to get it there speedily; it is a very difficult thing to do. But it can be done, and that quite legitimately.

To Be Continued Next Sunday.

Mack and McGraw Will Set New Record if They Land This Year

Connie Mack and John McGraw are heading straight for two big league records. Should these rival managers succeed in piloting their teams to the pennant, all modern records will have been shattered, for nobody in these days of baseball has succeeded in annexing five championships for one club. McGraw has already won four for the Giants and Mack has corraled the same number for the Athletics.

Fred Clarke has landed four and Frank Chance, while managing the Cubs, came across with four, but no other big league leader can point to a record any way near that mark.

McGraw won his first pennant for New York in 1904, repeated in 1905 and then came back in 1911 and 1912. Mack's work has been every bit as clean-cut. He first landed a flag in 1902. Three years late, in 1905, he grabbed another, and then in 1910 and 1911 repeated.

Quick, Easy and Positive Cure for All Foot Torture.

The following is said to be the surest and quickest cure known to science for all foot ailments: "Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of Calocide compound in a basin of warm water. Soak the feet in this for fully fifteen minutes, gently rubbing the sore parts." The effect is really wonderful. All soreness goes instantly; the feet feel delightful. Corns and callouses can be peeled right off. It gives immediate relief for sore bunions, sweaty, smelly and aching feet. A twenty-five-cent box of Calocide is said to be sufficient to cure the worst feet. It works through the pores and removes the cause of the trouble. Don't waste time on uncertain remedies. Any druggist has Calocide compound in stock or he can get it in a few hours from his wholesale house.

WHAT ATLANTA MANUFACTURERS AND JOBBERS ARE DOING

30,000 INVITED TO TAKE PART IN CONVENTION

More Than 100 Speakers Asked to Discuss Problems of the Southern Merchant.

Of all the conventions which come to Atlanta, there is probably none which is of more importance to the city in a business way than the Southern Merchants' Convention, which will be held during the first two weeks in August, and which is promoted by the Atlanta Merchants and Manufacturers' Association.

Taking advantage of the fact that Dixie merchants come to Atlanta in large numbers at that time, in order to buy their fall stocks from the big wholesale and manufacturing houses of the city, the association has developed this gathering into an organized convention, which serves the twofold purpose of entertaining these business guests of the city, and also of helping them to overcome the difficulties which they meet in the pursuit of commercial success.

It is of inestimable benefit to business men when a number of them can get together and talk over their problems. The association has arranged for more than 100 speakers, drawn from the ranks of the merchants themselves, who will present these everyday problems as they have come up in their own businesses. Every merchant will be invited to take part in the discussion, and in this way the good results which have been gotten by one man will be given to all for their combined benefit.

The time of the convention has been well provided for. In the daytime there will be enough discussion to give every merchant the fullest possible benefit. But there will be enough time left for the visiting amongst the wholesale houses which every merchant will want to do.

Then there are barbecues, receptions, dinners, theater parties and baseball parties all arranged for, at all of which the merchants will be the guests of the association. Every merchant in Dixie is cordially invited to come to this convention, and ample preparations are being made to care for them all.

Secretary Moore has sent out over 30,000 invitations, and the man who doesn't come and take advantage of this splendid opportunity will have only himself to blame.

Notes on Selling

Hatpin point protectors that can be worn for ornamentation as well as for protection are now shown. They are said to hold firmly, and can be released at the slightest touch.

Red and the brighter shades of green and yellow are the preferred colors of sweaters for use at the shore or mountains this season.

Evening wraps of corded silks, chiffon, or heavily-beaded net are popular now. Better models are draped about the knees and fastened at the side with a single ornament or button. Short coats, similar to the Eton, are shown among the late models. The vests are quite small, extending several inches along the sides, showing the modish, broad girdle.

A small watch handbag, made of gray and all black striped silk, with a new-shaped frame, is featured locally now. It is fitted with cardcase, mirror and watch, and is suitable for wear with light summer frocks as well as heavier fall costumes.

Selling agents say that the new spring lines of silk and cotton mixtures are very satisfactory, and that they look for keen competition.

Plain nets are in great demand abroad, and prices are persistently advancing. Shadow flouncings will probably be in especially good demand here, in widths ranging from 12 to 27 inches.

Carpet wool dealers in the primary market are advancing prices.

JUTE PRODUCTION.

It is reported that the Indian government's preliminary forecast on the jute crop is 3,191,000 acres, an increase of about 6 per cent over last year. Important changes are being made at Washington in the wording of the jute schedule. The child labor clause has been modified in its application to goods made entirely by children under 14 years of age.

Mahogany Worth Fortune Used Here for Furniture

Colonial Pieces Reproduced and New England Is Scoured for Good Models.

When you think of furniture you think of Grand Rapids, Mich., don't you?

Of course you do, just as when you think of cotton goods, you think of Fall River, Mass.

But isn't there a chance—just a bare chance—that you are being fooled? That massive, highly polished, solid mahogany sideboard—can you find the maker's name anywhere on it? Probably you can not, and if not, how do you know it came from the Michigan city? Just as likely as not the piece was built right here in Atlanta.

Atlanta has several really large furniture concerns. One of them, the Southern Furniture Company, out Marietta street, devotes its efforts almost exclusively to high-grade dining room and bedroom sets. About 250 men are employed the year around, turning out dining room tables, writing desks, china closets, sideboards, beds, dressers, chiffoniers, dressers and washstands.

Follow Colonial Models.

For the most part these are faithful copies of old colonial pieces, and solid mahogany and solid oak are the woods most in favor.

The day of veneers and of fancy carvings is gone, it seems. Dignity of line, sober finish, with the richness all in the material—this is the policy today.

Stacked in the factory yards are mahogany and oak in the rough, worth, in the aggregate, several hundred thousand dollars. Otto Schwab, the vice president, points out a very ordinary looking stack, about the color of a cigar box. "There's $30,000 worth of Mexican mahogany," he remarks. "It is worth from $250 to $400 per 1,000 feet. Roughly, I should say that mahogany is worth three times as much as oak."

When the lumber arrives in Atlanta it must remain in the stacks a year, to insure perfect seasoning. Even after that, it goes to the dry kilns.

From the dry kilns it goes to a man who saws it into proper lengths.

Waste Manufacturers' Bane.

"Here is the man who can break any furniture factory," said Mr. Schwab. "He has in his mind all the different lengths useful in the plant, and it is his business to cut every plank to the best advantage. If he does not, there is terrible waste, and waste is the bane of every manufacturer's existence."

Sized and sorted as it comes from the kiln, the lumber is "ripped" into proper widths. Then it is loaded on trucks and starts its path through the wood-working machines. Everything is in order. The sawdust and shavings are sucked up by great fans and carried straight back to the furnace fires. Loose blocks are not allowed to mess up the floors. The lumber moves from machine to machine on trucks. It never has to be rehandled. Pieces are stacked in compartments as carefully as a good business house files its letters, so that a workman need not waste time in searching for any particular thing he wants.

Sandpaper on Belts.

Every appliance is up to the minute. There are, for instance, "sanding machines," where sandpaper belting whizzes incessantly. In one machine this sandpaper belt is so arranged as to sandpaper the entire top of a dresser or sideboard or table at one operation, a skillful workman increasing or decreasing the pressure at the exact points desired.

Another sandpaper belt hisses over a flexible pillow and by resting odd-shaped bits on this pillow, curved table legs and the like are made smooth and ready for the varnishing processes.

Four and five coats of varnish are necessary before the final coat is applied. Each coat must be allowed to dry, then be sandpapered before the next is applied. This takes several weeks. When all this is done, each piece stands from three to four weeks for the varnish to take on the rock-like consistency necessary before it can be pumiced, and given its final polish.

Formerly all rubbing with pumice and water was done by hand. Lately a machine was invented which imitates closely the motion of the human workman, and this, to some extent, has supplanted hand rubbing, but it never will do so entirely.

Red Gum Furniture.

As often is the case, the South is producing something which can not be duplicated elsewhere, a product of great beauty, and other sections are taking to it quicker than the people right at home.

In the furniture business, red gum gives an example of this. In the Southern Furniture Company display rooms stand red gum pieces, finished in imitation of mahogany. It is not exaggeration to say that red gum, properly finished, can not be detected from mahogany except by an expert, and he can not, at a distance of two feet. The only difference is that mahogany has a minute, dotted grain, fine almost as a pin point, which red gum lacks. This can be seen with the eye eight or ten inches from the wood. At a greater distance, it becomes indistinguishable.

"Europe is buying great quantities of this," says Mr. Schwab. "America takes to it slowly. The American likes to say that his furniture is solid mahogany. Another piece, as beautiful, which no one could tell from the real, and which is solid, home-grown wood, durable and beautiful, does not appeal to him."

Designer an Autocrat.

The designer is the autocrat of the furniture factory. His office is in the room where the display models are made—but he is not always in his office.

"He takes it easy," explains Mr. Schwab.

Interesting stories are told of the work of designing furniture. Sometimes it entails a search through old New England towns, and the purchase of a broken-down old bed—valuable only for its design.

Then many factors must be considered. For instance, the development of the city flat has made it necessary to design sideboards and dining tables of small size.

Yokohama's Market For Silks Is Active

Prices Are Stiffer on Sales of 2,800 Bales for First Week—Italy's Crop Short.

The Yokohama silk market is more active and prices stiff. Sales for the first week of the season amounted to 2,800 bales, of which 1,100 bales were shipped to Europe and America. Stocks in that market were reported as 4,000 bales of filatures.

Milan advices confirmed that the Italian crop would barely exceed 70 per cent of last year's. While American buyers were holding back, European manufacturers slowly followed the advance asked on new silk. The Canton market advanced, and there was good demand from both European and American buyers.

Stocks of short reels in this market were almost nil, and little silk was obtainable for shipment earlier than six weeks hence. At Shanghai the market was quiet, but firm. Steam filatures were reported slowly advancing in this market, and there was good demand for coarse sizes. It was estimated that the season's production of these filatures would be about 23,000 bales.

WAR RAISES PRICES.

The Balkan war has brought about a rise in certain lumber prices in Europe because of the big demand for wood for ammunition boxes.

INSURANCE FOR HONEST BUYERS DRAWS TRADE

Western Firm Refunds Five Per Cent of Money Paid for oGods When Misfortune Comes.

"I wonder how many of the merchandising and manufacturing firms of Atlanta have insurance for customers," said a buyer for a Western house. "Furthermore, I wonder how many of them ever heard of such a thing. I think I am fairly well informed along business lines, and I never heard of it until recently.

"I was talking to a Western man about a month ago, a member of a wholesale firm doing a business of a million or more a year and increasing rapidly. I knew that he formerly had been a successful traveling salesman and had left the road and organized the firm some seven or eight years ago, and I was interested in learning how the business had made such progress. He said it was the insurance idea that attracted trade if prices and quality of goods were equal to those of competitors.

Ideal Part of Capital.

"Naturally, I wanted to know what the insurance idea was, and he said it had come to him, as he had been going about among customers, that any firm which could give them a line of insurance in the right direction would get their trade. He talked to friends who had money and business experience, and they organized the firm with his insurance idea as part of their working capital.

"This idea was to allow a customer 5 per cent return on the amount of all goods bought and paid for, in case he became unable to continue in business by reason of death, ill-health, or ill-luck. Simple enough proposition, isn't it? He cited an instance of one man who had bought $50,000 worth of goods while he had been dealing with the firm and was compelled to retire on account of poor health. He had saved very little, as he had a large family, and the prospect before him was not bright. The firm took his case under advisement and when they were fully convinced that he was eligible, he drew $2,500 in cash.

"That much unexpected money is a great help, and it proved a saving grace to this man, for with it he bought a snug little farm on which he has made a modest living and got back much of his health.

Gets Fresh Start.

"Another customer, through no fault of his own, was forced into bankruptcy. As it happened, he owed the firm nothing at the time, but he had bought some thirty-odd thousand dollars' worth of goods, and they gave him his choice of $1,500 in cash or the same amount in stock for a new start. He took the goods, made a new start, and is now in a position to claim more than $3,000 if he can't help himself in any other way.

"Another customer died insolvent, owing the firm $300. He had been a pretty good customer and his insurance would have entitled him to about $1,200. The firm deducted what he owed and gave the widow about $900 in cash.

OVERDUE BILLS WORST MENACE JOBBER MEETS

Credit Man Shows That Prompt Collections Are Necessary for Permanent Success.

"Each day that an unpaid bill runs over the date when due it becomes harder to collect," said recently a credit man connected with a local wholesale grocery concern.

"Shortly after I became connected with this house a solicitor for a large collection agency interviewed me, and I decided to give him some of our business. There were a number of back accounts on file that needed clearing up, so I handed them to him.

"He looked at them and handed them back, saying that he judged them rather old and did not care to test his firm's ability on such prospects. They had resisted various attempts at collection. This I foolishly explained to him, and it seemed to strengthen his opinion that they were hardly worth troubling with.

"Had those accounts been properly handled at the beginning they would either have been collected or the customers would have had no more goods. As matters stood, a bill of good was shipped them the month previous. It is difficult to keep the customers of a large house prompt in the matter of payments, but it can be done. It is worth while doing, too, because it is the only way to success. I have had no accounts outlawed since I have been connected with my firm. Losses are bound to occur in business failures, but I speak only of houses carelessly allowing accounts to run for indefinite periods uncollected.

"The house that does not collect promptly does business at its own expense, while the house that collects efficiently does business at its customers' expense.

"There need be no concern about the 'worthy dealer in trouble' whose luck is temporarily against him. Their numbers are small and the house's judgment can govern those cases. Sympathy is all right in deserving cases, and we are not hard on deserving retailers. Only, we have our running expenses to meet every week. Is there any reason why the people we serve should not meet theirs? We are careful to investigate the facts in cases where allowances are made. That is the only way to permanent success."

SOUTHERN RAILROADS BUY MUCH NEW EQUIPMENT

The Baldwin Locomotive Works has received orders from Amsinck & Co., of New York, for four locomotives; from the Virginia and Southwestern for three locomotives and from the Tremont and Gulf for one switching engine.

The Seaboard line has ordered five dining cars from the Pullman Company.

The American Locomotive Company has received orders for five super-heater Mikado locomotives from the El Paso and Southwestern Railway and for five 6-wheel switching engines from the Chicago Junction Railway.

Yellow Pine Scarce, Supply Almost Gone

North Carolina Variety Almost Supplants White Pine for Building Packing Cases.

The consumption of yellow pine lumber has increased to such an extent that while the public is familiar with its value for construction, building operations, and packing cases, very little is known as to the amount of timber left standing. In a few years the supply will be exhausted.

Short-leaf yellow pine, known in the trade as "North Carolina pine," has taken the place of white pine to such an extent that the latter has almost disappeared from the market. In 1900, 90 per cent of the packing cases manufactured were made of white pine. This wood became so hard to procure and increased in price so rapidly that North Carolina pine came into use.

At the present date 90 per cent of the packing cases are made from this wood.

When general business is good throughout the country the demand exceeds the supply. When crops are abundant and the Middle West is prosperous, so much of this wood goes to that part of the country that the mills on the Atlantic seaboard find it difficult to manufacture enough lumber to supply the wants of dealers in Eastern States.

Glassware Makers Readjusting Prices

Have Been Selling Product Under Cost and Now Are Marking Up Their Lists.

Prices on many lines of glassware are to be advanced immediately, but only in keeping with the increased cost of production. Manufacturers have been asking too much on some lines and not enough on others, according to The Crockery and Glass Journal.

Under the present plan it is proposed to remedy the condition, lowering the items which have been listed too high and bringing up the prices of those that have been sold below the cost of production. The two largest manufacturers in the United States have put new lists into effect, and some of the smaller plants will follow suit at once.

MANUFACTURERS COMMITTEE CONSIDERS MANY OFFERS

Manufacturers on the subcommittee of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, which is pushing plans for the permanent exhibit of Atlanta-made goods, met Wednesday at noon to discuss the several proposals which have been made offering buildings to house the exhibit. The subcommittee is progressing well in its work of estimating costs, floor space, available location, and the like, but has reached no definite conclusion.

HIGHER PRICES FOR FOOD NOT AID TO FARMER

City Distribution Represents Most of the Cost the Consumer Is Paying Nowadays.

The high prices which the housewife is paying for foodstuffs in these days of record top figures does not mean as much prosperity for the farmer as would appear.

Dr. Clyde L. King, of the Wharton School of Finance, finds after an exhaustive study that on many articles of produce a full third of the price paid by the consumer goes to cartage and delivery costs, and for retailers' profits.

"If our urban dwellers are to have released a larger share of their incomes for other than subsistence purposes, these food costs must be reduced," says Dr. King.

"Probably half of them now spend annually nearly half of their income for food. In the future that city will have the best civic and industrial prosperity which first perfects plans whereby subsistence costs may be reduced to each and every citizen. In the past city growth depended on the exploitation of virgin resources and in the development of new industries. From now on city growth must hinge more and more largely upon community efficiency as expressed in lower living costs. The food problem is vitally wrapped up with the solution of the city's industrial supremacy and the extension of its industrial boundaries."

What Wages Average.

The manufacturer and employer of labor is particularly interested in a reduction of the food supply costs and in perfecting a closer industrial unity between the city and all the surrounding agricultural communities. Statistics show that 60 per cent of the males at least 16 years old are employed in manufacturing, mining, trade, transportation, and other occupations associated with industrial life in cities were earning less than $626 per annum in 1904, or about $2 a day, while 30 per cent were receiving between $626 and $1,000, and only 10 per cent were receiving $1,000 a year.

WILL ATTEMPT TO HURRY BILLS THROUGH HOUSE

Two Thousand Retailers Gathering for Purpose of Backing Bad Check and Garnishment Laws.

Two thousand retail grocers, dry goods men and hardware merchants will parade Monday morning from the Ansley Hotel to the State Capitol.

They have important business at the Capitol.

Not to put too fine an edge on the matter, they are going to do some lobbying, but this is a lobby which is open and aboveboard, and at which no one can take offense.

The bills which the retailers favor are the fraudulent check bill and the new garnishment bill, both of which measures, they declare, are necessary for their proper protection.

A fight on the bills is due in the House Tuesday. For this reason the annual convention of the Georgia Retailers' Association has been called for this date. It will remain in session Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Little business, besides endeavoring to get favorable action on the two bills mentioned and the election of officers for the coming year, will be accomplished.

J. W. S. Harding, president, will call the meeting to order Monday morning at 9 o'clock at the Hotel Ansley. Wilmer L. Moore, president of the Chamber of Commerce, will deliver the address of welcome. An executive session of an hour's duration will follow. Then comes the parade to the Capitol.

Two thousand retailers are expected to be in line. Dublin, Waycross, Thomasville, Augusta, Bainbridge, Athens, Columbus and Macon are expected to send big delegations. Other towns which find it impossible to send big delegations are sending petitions. Some merchants already are on the ground.

Every Representative who shows an inclination to oppose these two bills is likely to meet strong pressure from the merchants of his district, endeavoring to change his view of the matter.

It is expected there will be no trouble getting the bills through the Senate. The measures have moved along as if on greased ways in that body.

Everything is shaping up in great order for the August meeting of the Southern Merchants.

There's outside enthusiasm as well as inside. The merchants are pleased with the program and the plans that have so far been announced. Word is beginning to come from many quarters that the folks are coming.

And Folks are the best part of a Convention. Carnegie says that he always surrounds himself with people who are smarter than he is. He wants to learn from them. Open-minded Andy! He makes it pay, anyhow.

There's going to be a program of mighty good things. There will be lots for us all to learn. Methods, Money and Merchandising will be the Main Mention. Does that interest YOU?

CANADA REFUGE OF U. S. STEEL IF GUILTY AS TRUST

Infinite Possibilities Found in Perpetual Charter Just Given Corporation.

LOOPHOLE FOR DISSOLUTION

Gary Sets Example for His Brother Officers in Stratagem.

By BOERSIANER.

There are infinite possibilities in the letters patent just granted the United States Steel Corporation by the Canadian Government.

The grant is apropos of a $20,000,000 plant that the corporation means to build up there. But the charter, not the mill, is the thing. The license to do almost any kind of business is perpetual.

Under it, also, Mr. Gary and his associates may control all sorts of properties—including, of course, the Tennessee Company. Equally, of course, the Steel Corporation may recontract for the Great Northern Ore Company—an amount of raw material which it was difficult to believe Gary would relinquish.

The charter may be rendered significantly adaptable in other ways. Should the Government win the pending suit against the corporation—should the United States Supreme Court order a dissolution—the company might extinguish itself in the United States and operate under the foreign rights just accorded.

It is an idea that should comfort the corporation's security holders, especially the owners of the common and preferred stocks, who might be simply asked to exchange the certificates of the old corporation for stocks in the Canadian concern—if the worst befall in the court, or, indeed, in Congress; for the Canadian tariff differs from the schedule of imposts proposed by the bill under the Senate's consideration.

Manifestly Mr. Gary and his coadjutors have indulged in thought for over a year. Their cogitation has ultimated in the Canadian proposition—which may be made protective alike to the management and to the security holders.

Obviously, too, Gary is setting an example to his brother corporation managers who may say in defense that the lawmakers of the United States are driving industrial companies out of the country.

Whatever is done with the Canadian charter, it is certain that the Steel Corporation has in reservation a legal stratagem evasive, ingenious and no doubt perfectly effective.

New Canadian Charter Rouses Much Talk.

DETROIT, July 19.—The charter of the Canadian branch of the United States Steel Corporation, copies of which have been received here, grants that company an absolute monopoly of the Canadian steel business if the new concern desires to establish itself in control.

One section expressly grants the right to absorb any and all other companies engaging wholly or in part in the steel business. It may buy timber lands and engage in the manufacture of wooden products.

It may construct roads, build bridges and water transportation lines, with depots, docks and all other facilities for operation. It may own and operate electric and gas plants and telephone systems. It may build and own cars and, in fact, do everything except build railroads.

Few Sales of Iron at Present Prices

Southern Pig Held for $11 Per Ton. Stocks Will be Reduced in the Fall.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., July 19.—Southern pig iron now is being held for $11 per ton, and there are few sales being made. The market is far from being satisfactory, however, and the make is in excess of the demand. The manufacturers are not inclined to sell at the low prices that have been prevailing, and though reports are to be heard of $10.50 per ton iron, there are no orders.

The accumulated stocks of iron, estimated heretofore at 200,000 tons, should be cut down considerably during the third quarter of the year. At $11 per ton there is little profit on pig iron, and the furnace companies are said to be considering it better business to hold the iron rather than let it go out at the lower price.

Some of the companies selling special brand iron are not making concessions on the premium prices; for instance, the Alabama Company is not selling Clifton iron under $12 per ton. Special analysis iron is also commanding a special price. Charcoal iron commands more than $22.50 per ton and very little business is now being transacted for the reason that consumers are looking forward to a reduction in the quotations.

Curtailment of the production of pig iron in the Southern territory will be increased as the conditions of the market warrant it. The make in July will be considerably under what it was in June, during which month Alabama produced more than 163,000 tons of iron.

The steel plants are losing no time. There is a steady delivery of products, though reports have it that there is further reduction in unfilled orders. Following the announcement of the placing of an order for 18,000 tons of rail by the Southern and other railroads, it is learned that something like 20,000 tons of other shapes in steel are needed and will be ordered shortly in the Southern territory. Steel prices have shown but little changes lately, save as to wire.

Crossing Corn Strains Increases Yield From 30 to 150 Per Cent, Declare Experts

Remarkable Results Have Been Attained by Farmers Who Have Worked Long and Patiently on Hybridizing Grain. No More Acreage or Expense Entailed in New Scientific Method.

By CHARLES A. WHITTLE.

Georgia State College of Agriculture.

Think of from 30 to 150 per cent increase in yield as a result of crossing strains of corn! Is it not very much worth while for farmers to take notice? If even less than 30 per cent gain were made as a result, what an enormous gain to the farmer, and that, too, without more work, more fertilizer or greater acreage planted!

Since the year 1876 Professor W. J. Beal, of the Michigan Agricultural College, has been demonstrating the fact that the first generation of hybrids has increased yields of corn. More recently other demonstrators have shown, beyond peradventure, that from 30 to 150 per cent can be obtained from planting hybrids, or one-year crosses, over planting pure strains alone.

So high has been piled the testimony of facts that no one has a right to doubt. It remains only for the farmer to apply. This he can do with very little trouble. When the farmer does make use of this little trick which the scientist has taught him, his wealth in corn, his cost of fattening hogs or beef, will stand at a much more favorable figure than at present.

Vigor Only Temporary.

While working long and painstakingly on hybridizing or crossing corn, the scientists discovered important limitations and facts which it is well for the farmer to know if he is to make a success of his seed plats. The first of these is that while crossing adds vigor it is only temporary. The greatest increase in vigor is in the first generation crosses. While a greater yield can be obtained by planting the seed of the crosses or hybrids for two or three years than can be obtained from planting a single pure strain, yet the wiser policy would be to return to original strains after planting one crop of hybrid seeds. This means that for the first year the two strains can be planted together in the same row. This will increase the yield the first year, but when the seed from the cross or hybrid crop is planted, the subsequent crop will be still larger in yield and production of fodder.

Returning to the original strain after the hybrid seed has been used one year, of course can be easily done, if the farmer will maintain seed plats where the pure strains are kept separate from other strains.

Same Variety Should Be Used.

The second important fact about making crosses is that only unrelated strains of the same variety should be used and not two distinct varieties. Unrelated strains of the same kind of corn can be obtained from different parts of the State or from different States for crossing purposes. What one needs to be certain of, however, is that the seed he is obtaining from elsewhere has been kept pure. Reliable seed producers who know how to maintain a pure strain, of course, are to be looked to rather than to the indiscriminate grower for the strains in making a cross.

These two important facts are as essential to success as the main discovery of the effect of crossing. To keep planting the seed of a hybrid corn because it produced a large yield at one time, in the light of investigation, would prove foolish. This is too often a common practice of farmers.

Keep the pure strains strong and vigorous by seed selection and the hybrid fields will take care of themselves as to yields and stover. Any farmer can perfect his seed corn and add greatly to its yielding power by well-known methods of seed selection. The germination test is foremost as a means for determining the vigor and potential yielding power of the grains taken from a given ear of corn. Plant ten grains of corn from an ear in a sand box where moisture and proper temperature are maintained. In a few days the green sprouts will have appeared. Examine and see how many of the ten grains germinated.

If eight or nine did, the ear can be said to have strong germinating power, and that it can produce a thrifty, good yielding plant. The remainder of the ear can then be planted in the seed bed. If the seed plat is kept away from other plats that are growing different strains or varieties, then a strong, pure strain of corn is assured. To add to the strength of the pure strain, it is the custom of the seed breeder to detassle every other plant. This leaves the stalk that has been detasseled to be fertilized by another plant, rather than by itself.

Aids Production Power.

This has been shown to add to the producing power of the plant. The corn from the detassled stalks, of course, is the grain for planting in the seed plats next year. The seed from the stalks not detassled and all grain from the tasseled stalks which is not required for maintaining the seed plat, can be planted in the general field after being mixed with similar corn taken from another plat. Thus mixed a hybrid plant is produced of the greatest possible yielding power.

Thus is seen that it is no difficult matter to breed up strains of corn and to make hybrid crosses for largest field yields. Any farmer can do it. In fact, no other one can do it so well for a given farm as the farmer himself. When he grows his own seed he knows whether or not proper care has been taken to keep the strains pure and strong. He has also made use of strains of corn that have become adjusted to the climate, soil and conditions in general of the farm. In other words, he is taking fewest chances when he does all this work himself. And it is not a large amount of work. It requires very little time. The interest it will arouse as well as the yields it will increase will make of it a fascinating work for any intelligent farmer.

OCCASIONAL OBSERVATIONS

The late J. P Morgan's heart more than his head entered into his investments. So the detailed list shows. He did not leave one important block of either bonds or stocks. The veteran banker was not the Croesus that was popularly supposed. He was loyal to Hartford—its financial institutions, its insurance companies and even its carpet industries.

* * *

It will do no harm now to publish the fact that latterly Mr. Morgan's mania for buying all sorts of art and quasi-art treasures became so abnormal that his partners and his family had occasion for alarm. He spent more millions than he was making during the closing years of his life. He had regal contempt for money when it was weighed in the balance with art or his special brands of philanthropy. Of course, he would brook no interference in his purchases, most of which toward the close were paid for by notes, which were discharged when he collected his profits from his firm.

* * *

If bankers are correct in their diagnosis, there will be no currency legislation this session. Legislators object to doing a double shift. They want to go home the moment the tariff bill is signed. Then, too, every lawmaker has a currency plan of his own up his sleeve, which he will try to force down the throats of his colleagues.

* * *

Neither James Speyer nor President Vanderlip of the National City Bank will go to Europe this summer, they have their hands full at home with railroad problems.

* * *

Many Wall street people are hoping that the Eastern trainmen will go on strike. There are at least 10,000 men in Wall street who would be glad to take the jobs thrown up by the conductors and trainmen.

* * *

Some brokers are paying 3 per cent for call money, notwithstanding that lower rates are obtainable. One such broker explained his apparent extravagance thus: "I do not care to pay off my 3 per cent loans and take on others at the lower rates. You see, my bank never charges me more than 6 per cent for call money, no matter how high it goes, so that it would be small business for me to pay the loan now that the bank is making a little money out of my loan. Another thing, if I paid it off under present conditions I would probably have to pay the current rate whenever call funds might be above 6 per cent in the future."

* * *

There are five institutions in Wall street which do not charge more than 6 per cent on call money, even though it might be quoted at 10 or 25 or 125 per cent. They are the National City Bank, United States Trust Company, Central Trust Company, Fifth Avenue Bank and the Park National. The last institution does not charge more than 6 per cent on its own money, but it does charge more than on that lent for the account of out-of-town correspondents.

* * *

The First National Bank, of which George F. Baker is president, is considered the biggest "Shylock" in the financial district. It always gets as much for its money as it can and in times when money is very high its reserve sinks below the 25 per cent mark. Little wonder the bank has paid 12,550 per cent in dividends since Mr. Baker became president in 1873.

Paper Market Is Puzzle to Handlers

Difficult to Estimate Demand for Mercantile Notes, and Buyers Are "Whining."

NEW YORK, July 19.—Commercial paper is moving in strange channels. The market is "whimmy." Handlers of mercantile paper can form no estimate from day to day of the demand for their commodity. One day the buying is large, then for a protracted spell the purchasing is nil.

Further to entangle the situation extraordinary and inexplicable discrimination is being shown by institutions to certain best names to the detriment of others equally as good. As the representative of a prominent house put it, there is no telling what the upshot will be.

With standard houses unable to get money to finance their current shipments, prolongation of debts follows, or, failing that, liquidation is precipitated.

Shows 'London' Beef 34 Per Ct. American

Corporation Votes to Allow Armour's Shop in Smithfield, After Considerable Debate.

LONDON, July 19.—The fact that 34 per cent of the beef supplied to Smithfield, London's biggest meat market comes from American producers was revealed at the City Corporation meeting, when the question of renting certain shops in the market to the Armours was being discussed.

Councillor Kimber, opposing the recommendation, alleged that American firms importing meats to Smithfield artificially inflated prices. Other Councillors defended American meat trade methods which enabled the poor to buy cheaply. One market tenant said: "We want Americans to continue to do a large business in Smithfield."

The recommendation was carried by an overwhelming majority.

New Tariff Will Spur Trade, Says McLean

New York Magnate Confident Business Troubles Are Near End. Much Money Idle.

LONDON, July 19.—James McLean, of Phelps, Dodge & Co., New York, and a director in some thirty corporations, who sailed on the Imperator, said:

"Our troubles, due merely to overtrading, were caused by an extraordinary expansion of commerce throughout the world during the past few years. At present securities are being liquidated almost to a standstill, but there is no real depreciation in their value. I believe there is a vast quantity of money lying idle in New York awaiting investment.

"I don't believe this moderate tariff will injure anyone in the slightest, but will rather tend to induce a genuine rush of trade throughout the country."

EARNINGS OF U. S. STEEL ABOVE DIVIDEND NEEDS

NEW YORK, July 19.—The United States Steel Corporation, according to a semi-annual statement just issued, during the first half of 1913 earned sufficient money to meet the half yearly requirements of 3½ per cent on preferred and 2½ per cent on common stock by more than $17,800,000.

There was a surplus at the end of the first quarter after dividend payments of $7,370,000 and there will be a surplus of $10,431,000 based upon the estimated earnings of $37,500,000 for the second quarter.

ODDS AND ENDS OF FINANCE NEWS

There were 1648 vessels, aggregating 382,304 gross tons, built in the United States in fiscal year ended June 30, largest construction since 1908.

Buenos Aires Great Southern Railway proposes to increase capital by £5,000,000, of which £2,650,000 will be issued as soon as possible on the London market.

Merger is planned of Central National Bank and Security Trust Company of Lynn, two of the largest institutions in the city, with combined resources of $8,000,000.

Deutsch Amerikanische Petroleum Gesellschaft, the German subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company, for the year 1912 shows net profits of $747,712, an increase for the year of $132,049.

James J. Hill, now in Canada, expresses opinion that Canada has been borrowing too freely, that both individuals and municipalities have been going ahead too rapidly and that the Dominion now has all the railroad mileage 8,000,000 peopel can support.

So far as the trade's information goes the world is now consuming wheat on a scale about 25 per cent larger than that of 15 or 20 years ago. Last year's world's shipments were the largest ever known by about 12,000,000 bushels and figure out 665,522,000, or a rate of nearly 12,800,000 bushels weekly.

Last year freight shipments into and out of Pittsburg aggregated 171,071,238 tons, of which 164,594,915 tons went to railroads, while 12,476,323 tons was water-borne, a new high record, eclipsing the best previous record, that of 1910, by 9,337,970 tons, or 5.5 per cent. The figures for 1912 reflect an increase of 96.6 per cent over those of 1903, and as compared with those of 1898 they show a gain of 284 per cent.

WILL SPEND MILLION TO IMPROVE BRINSON RAILWAY

SAVANNAH, July 19.—An agreement to place the common stock of the Brinson Railway Company in a voting trust for four years has been approved by the stockholders.

The stock is owned largely by George M. Brinton, of Springfield, Ga., who is president. Mills B. Lane, of the Citizens and Southern Bank, and Jacob S. Collins, of the Real Estate Bank and Trust Company, both at Savannah, were named as trustees, and were authorized to name a third trustee to serve with them. Mr. Collins and John E. Foy were elected members of the board of directors, in addition to the other members who were re-elected.

Thus John H. Hunter and Robert M. Hitch will remain on the board. The financing is to be provided through New York financiers, who are represented by James Imbrie, of that city, chairman of the directors of the railroad.

This action means that about $1,000,000 additional is to be invested in the Brinson Railway Company.

B. & O. Year Earnings Exceed $100,000,000

Gross Sets New Record; Net Reduced by Flood Damage—7.12 Per Cent for Common.

The year ended June 30 was a banner one for the Baltimore and Ohio, earnings exceeding $100,000,000 for the first time. But flood damage decreased the net by $498,687. Surplus after all charges and dividends amounted approximately to $1,600,000, a decrease of about $600,000.

Although the estimate to overcome the physicial damage done by the flood was $3,000,000, some permanent work will incur further charges of over $1,000,000.

Gross operating income amounted to $101,541,905, an increase of $8,947,582. Earnings available for dividends on the common stock were equal to 7.12 per cent, compared with 7.58 per cent in the previous year.

AMMONIA BOMBS USED.

Ammonia bombs are being tried out on some of the national forests for the purpose of extinguishing forest fires. They are said to have worked well in the case of brush fires where the firefighters find difficulty in getting near enough to the burning area to beat out the flames. Each bomb exploded will extinguish fire in a circle of about five yards in diameter.

SCALPERS BUSY, COTTON MARKET TO THEIR LIKING

October Fluctuates Between 11.40 and 11.60—Big Fellow and Public Not Interested.

NEW ORLEANS, July 19.—A more hopeful feeling in regard to the defeat of the Clarke amendment having been engendered recently by the advices from Washington, the cotton market has become more active, with bulls inclined to bid prices up to higher levels.

The weekly weather report Tuesday was rather discouraging to the bear element, droughty conditions being reported as prevailing in Texas and Oklahoma, while rain also was said to be needed in some portions of the Atlantics, which was rather surprising to the trade here, as it was thought that there had recently been sufficient rains in the Eastern belt. Some private crop reports received from that section of the belt within the last few days also state that the cotton crop is being damaged by blight, especially in Alabama.

The market lately has ranged between 11.40 and 11.60 for October delivery. Covering by shorts has checked any decline in the neighborhood of 11.40, while profit-taking by longs, together with some fresh short selling, has served to prevent the market advancing much above the level of 11.60 for October.

Good Scalpers' Market.

The result has been a good scalping market, which professional traders have taken advantage of, but the larger operators and the outside public, apprehensive as to the Clarke amendment passing, have, as a rule, refrained from taking any interest.

Now that a more optimistic feeling prevails in cotton circles here, interest in the market appears to be reviving, and, with a little more encouragement, leading bulls in this market would not hesitate to put some ginger into the speculative position. There is still a fairly large short interest in the market, and it would not require a great deal of buying to put the bears on the run. Prices on the new crop deliveries are now 1 cent under those prevailing a year ago, when, in some respects, the crop outlook was better than it is to-day.

Boll Weevil Active.

More reports of damage by boll weevil are coming in, especially from Texas and Louisiana, where the pest appears to have gained great headway. The rains which are needed now in Texas would lead to greater damage still from the boll weevil. Consequently, crop prospects in the Western belt are not encouraging, no matter from what angle the situation is viewed.

The Census Bureau report on consumption for the month of June proved to be a very bullish document. It proved conclusively that consumption in this country is running on the basis of 5,750,000 bales, which would indicate a total consumption, America and Europe combined, of at least 14,750,000 bales. For this reason, the trade is beginning to realize that a new crop of at least 15,000,000 bales will be required to keep the spindles of the world running and maintain reserves above the danger point next season.

In other words, the situation as regards sufficiency of supplies or deficiency, hangs in the balance. Everything depends upon the new crop, and should it begin to deteriorate there might be an outburst of bullish speculation which would put prices back to a parity with those that prevailed a year ago at this time.

MORE CHEERFUL SPIRIT SHOWN IN SOUTHEAST

Improvement in Cotton Prospects Caused by Fine Growing Weather Brings Optimism.

By M. A. ROSE.

Two weeks of hot weather, varied by good showers, have done marvels for the cotton crop of the Southeast, according to the views of competent observers, who have made trips through the farming sections.

Cotton in South Georgia is waist high, they say, and a little more of this ideal weather—ideal from the cotton planters' standpoint—will do much to overcome the late start the crop suffered. If August, now, will be as kindly as July, and if the frost is not too early, an excellent crop will be assured. To make conditions perfect, a little rain in Central-Southeast Georgia might be added, for the abundant showers elsewhere skipped that section, according to the Weather Bureau's report last week.

The feeling all around is more cheerful. Country bankers and merchants report to their Atlanta correspondents that the crops look better—particularly the corn, which promises a more abundant yield than Georgia ever has known.

"Balance Basis" Rules.

By keeping loans strictly to a "balance basis"—that is, by demanding that a customer's balance be kept at 25 per cent of the total amount he is allowed to borrow—the supply of money is kept equal to the needs of commerce and industry.

Atlanta institutions, with one or two exceptions, have not yet begun to borrow from New York City. Within a few weeks this will begin, probably not as early as usual, for the cotton crop is a little late.

The outlook, according to good authorities, is for good prices for the cotton crop. Domestic consumption, many think, will reach 6,000,000 bales this year, a record figure. For nine months domestic mill takings were something less than 500,000 bales per month, but for April and May takings were well above 500,000 bales. They were close to 500,000 in June.

Cotton Prices Better.

July and August, terminating the cotton year, are expected to bring the total up to 6,000,000. Prices have stiffened perceptibly for spinnable grades in consequence. The total number of spindles in operation during the year has been close to the record, and stocks have been decreasing steadily since January.

Stocks and bonds continue to be quoted at bargain prices, both local investments and those listed on the New York Exchange. There was a small revival in trading following July dividend disbursements, but it has died down again. Fall, it is believed, will see much more active investment and speculation, and several Atlanta financiers, according to rumor, plan to father some new issues.

Hand-to-mouth buying of goods continues the rule, though some fair fall orders are reported by jobbers.

Rumely Plants Shut, Year's Orders Filled

The Important Question to the Stockholder Is, "When Will Manufacturing be Resumed"

NEW YORK, July 19.—A dispatch from Chicago to the effect that the Rumely Company is planning practically to close down its plants for making thrashing machines and tractor engines appeared at a casual reading to supply a bearish argument on the Rumely stocks.

Inquiry at the company's bankers brought the confirmation of the statement, but also developed some additional information which removed much of its possibilities as a market factor. The company will stop construction of thrashers and tractors, as well as several other lines of farm machinery, around August 1, because the year's orders have been filled. The remaining months of 1913 will be devoted to deliveries and collections.

The contraction of manufacturing in midsummer is a seasonal matter, followed to a greater or less extent by all concerns making farming implements. Of far more significance than the reason for closing the Rumely plants is the problem as to when they will again start up.

Usually new contracts have been received by the late autumn to warrant the resumption of business on a substantial scale, but such may not be the case this year. A director said yesterday that he would not be surprised if there should not be much activity before January 1.

TREE PLANTER TRIED.

Experiments with a tree planting machine at the Utah Agricultural Experiment Station indicate that it may be used to advantage in reforesting old burned areas on the national forests.

Cotton Trade Inclined To Enlarge Estimates

Bears Timorous Despite Promise of Big Yields. Spot Prices Steady.

MEMPHIS, July 19.—Another week of progress for the cotton crop is history, and the tendency is to enlarge yield expectations. There is still, however, plenty of time for something to happen and fear that it might is contributing largely to the disposition to make haste slowly in yielding to the temptation to try to discount a big crop.

The trade seems to realize that ever since the first of the year there has been a feeling in the cotton world that the crop of the season 1913-14 was going to be a large one, and so far nothing has happened to seriously interfere with this promise, yet in the face of many adverse conditions and circumstances, the price has held steady, and only for a brief spell have futures been below 11 cents.

This fact tends to increase confidence in the stability of the affair and discourages willingness on the part of bearishly inclined people to commit themselves too heavily on that side until there is assurance that the crop will be sufficient for the world's needs for the ensuing year and allow for some enlargement of the reserves in the hands of spinners.

As yet notes of complaint from the fields have been in a minor key and danger is largely prospective. There have been some temperatures that were too high for the best progress of the crop, for the moisture supply was limited, but while this was the case the weevils in the same districts have been kept in check.

Oklahoma has sent the most serious complaints as to the heat, although the condition is that State has been high and there is room for some deterioration and still leave promise of a good crop. Texas as usual is sending a variety of reports, though the average opinion is that a record crop will be marketed there. There is basis for expecting a large early movement from that Commonwealth also, and three new bales already have been marketed.

In this territory, which comprises the area that produces the bulk of the long staple varieties, the prospect is the best in years, though in the lower edge, including some of Mississippi and Arkansas, the weevil bids fair to be a factor. Conditions are so favorable at the moment that the tendency here is to take an optimistic view of the entire belt. Information reaching here is that while there has been much improvement in the Eastern belt during the past few weeks, chances are against yield equaling the record of two years ago.

Bears, however, think they see possibility of the belt setting a new record in the number of bales, while outlook is for good quality.

There is small activity in the spot department, although sales in this market have been fairly large for midsummer. The unsold stock here is small and only a few buyers are here, but scattering orders are coming from spinners. Receipts are small, but stocks in the aggregate at counted towns are larger than they were a year ago. Quotations are holding steady and middling ranges from 12 cents to 12 7-16.

SENT FREE TO MEN

A Most Pleasing Remedy given to Quickly Restore Lost Vitality.

A Free Trial Treatment Sent by Mail To All Who Write.

Free trial treatments of Enervita, a most pleasing remedy, are being mailed to all men who write to Dr. John S. Howell. So many who had battled for years against the mental and physical suffering of man weakness have written thanking him for the great benefit received, therefore, Dr. Howell has decided to send free trial treatments to all men who write. It is a home treatment and all who suffer with any form of weakness, resulting from youthful folly, premature loss of strength and memory, weak back, lack of vitality and confidence can now receive this strength giving treatment at home.

The treatment has a peculiar grateful effect of warmth and seems to act direct to the desired location, promoting strength and development just where it is needed. It is given to relieve the ills and troubles that come from years of misuse of the natural functions, and has met with remarkable success, even in cases approaching advanced age. A request to John S. GIRL PLAYS MAN AND WINS LOVE OF HATED RIVAL

Unique Vengeance Is Planned by Young Woman Whose Sweetheart Proved Faithless.

WHEELING, W. VA., July 19.—Jilted by her lover, Bessie McIntyre, of North Wheeling, a pretty 18-year-old girl, secured an odd but effective revenge on her rival, who "stole" her sweetheart and on the faithless lover at the same time.

June 25 Harry Pendleton, a well-known young business man of this city, informed Miss McIntyre that he could not see her again as he had become engaged to another girl. By a dint of inquiry the jilted girl ascertained that the girl who had stolen her lover's affections was Miss Henrietta Aiken, of Bridgeport, Ohio, just across the river from this city. Securing permission from her parents, Miss McIntyre had her hair cut off, and donning one of her brother's suits, she visited Bridgeport and met Miss Allen.

It was a case of love at first sight—on the part of the Bridgeport girl. Miss McIntyre masquerading as "Lawrence Dessing," was a devoted lover, and every night found "Lawrence Dessing" at the home of Miss Aiken.

Last Sunday night while "Dessing" and Miss Aiken were sitting on the front porch of the latter's home, Pendleton appeared and demanded to know why another had usurped his place. Miss Aiken angrily dismissed Pendleton and ordered him never to call on her again. She then confessed her love to her companion, the pseudo "Dessing." Miss McIntyre, dressed in a gown of the latest mode last night met Miss Aiken in this city. Before Miss Aiken could speak the North Wheeling girl told her how she had revenged herself.

In a moment the girls were fighting and were separated by the police.

Must Stay Maids to Get Mother's Estate

Daughters of Ohio Woman Are Beneficiaries Under Will Which Prohibits Their Marriage.

BELLEFONTAINE, OHIO, July 19. One of the most remarkable wills ever admitted to probate in this county was made by Jane Lake, late of Richwood, who left considerable property to her three daughters, Linie, Nora and Ida.

The provisions are that the estate shall be equally divided among the three daughters, on the condition that none of them will marry. If one of them marries, her share of the estate goes to the two remaining single. If all three should marry, the entire estate is to go to the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Concussion of Brain Kills a Gigantic Frog

Oscar Siler went to Mich.
Thought he'd rest and catch some fish,
Pitched his tent on Fountain Lake—
Listen to this nature fake:

FOUNTAIN, MICH., July 19.—Oscar Siler, of Chicago, who has been fishing on the lake near here, claims to have killed the record frog. Said frog is said to weigh 6 pounds and to be 15 inches long. It will be sent to Chicago. The frog died of concussion of the brain. Thus—

"Kerplunk," croaked the prehistoric bullfrog.
"You're drunk," piped the monarch of the bog.
Whereupon Siler (who was sober) bounced a rock off the bullfrog's bean.

Miner Returns Rich To Find Wife Dead

Comes Back Home to Make Restitution for Having Deserted Her 20 Years Ago.

MEEKER, COLO., July 19.—Wealthy and anxious to take back his wife, whom he deserted twenty years ago, Josiah Bronson, a modern Enoch Arden, found the old home in ruins and the wife dead. From the old-timers who had known him in the early days he learned that his wife, believing him dead, had married his twin brother.

Two children, he learned, were born of the marriage, and upon the death of the mother were sent to relatives in West Virginia.

Bronson declared he would care for the children. "I shall give them the best education money can buy," he said. "I deserted their mother when she was just a young woman, and now I want to atone for the cowardly act."

Tight Shoes Land Thief Behind Bars

Burglar in Jewelry Store Kicks Heels to Relieve Pressure and Alarms Police.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Frank Davies, who at times also gives his name as John Simpson and Joe Allen, became irritated last night while scooping unset diamonds in his hat in a dark room because the toes of his new shoes were too narrow.

Intending to relieve the squeeze, he kicked toward the floor with his heel, but miscalculated and drove his foot through a glass show case. A policeman in a saloon on the floor below heard the noise and arrested Davies, who says he is an ex-convict and that he arrived here from Los Angeles at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. The diamonds were claimed to-day by the jewelers from whom they were taken.

PERSEVERANCE WINS FOR SHOW AT KNOXVILLE

Conservation Exposition Will Open September 1 Free of Debt and Complete.

KNOXVILLE, July 19.—In an authorized interview T. A. Wright, president of the National Conservation Exposition to be held in this city from September 1 to November 1, makes the statement that the exposition will open its gates on September 1 complete to the last detail, and that the exposition will be opened absolutely free of debt of any kind.

So far as is known, this will set a record for expositions anywhere. The financing of the project in the face of a number of disappointments is something in which the officers and directors of the exposition take pride.

"At the time the exposition project was first broached," says President Wright's statement, "it was expected that the Congress of the United States would appropriate $250,000 for a large exposition building. Through the action of one Knoxville man and of two or three Congressmen this appropriation was defeated in the last days of the last Congress. But the United States Government will be represented at the exposition by suitable exhibits from its various departments. The defeating of the appropriation bill will make no difference in the size or the quality of the Government displays.

"I have waited so that I might be sure of my ground in making the statement that the exposition will be complete on the opening day, and that it will be absolutely free of debt on that day.

"The exhibit space under cover has been increased more than four times what it was at former expositions and the Midway and outdoor space have been increased more than five times that heretofore used. The success of the exposition is assured. It will be the greatest exposition ever held in the South."

Five large exposition buildings have been added to the plant of the old Appalachian Exposition, and four of these are finished to the last nail; the fifth is under roof. A new Midway street, with over a mile of frontage, has been constructed. Only last week it was found necessary to add 30,000 square feet of space to the grounds in order that all applicants for outdoor space might be taken care of.

FISHERMAN FINDS $1,400 WORTH OF PEARLS IN HAUL

PEORIA, ILL., July 19.—Joe Johnson, a clam fisherman on the Illinois River, found two gems among the pile of clams brought in from a day's haul. Johnson, thinking the pearls of unusual value, took them to a jeweler, who to-day gave him $1,400 for the two stones.

BRYAN DODGES PAPER'S QUESTIONS

wrong. It is using the office for making money."

Senator Bristow said action would be had on his resolution. He said, too, that there would be quite a little discussion on the subject. It probably will be referred to a committee. Senator Bacon, chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, says it probably would be "handled in a routine way."

Mr. Bacon says he thought the resolution was introduced to bring about a discussion of the course of Mr. Bryan, and that remedial legislation was not demanded.

Many Senators, while not permitting themselves to be quoted, agreed that Mr. Bryan had made a grave mistake. Mr. Townsend, of Michigan, holds that the Secretary is doing that which is denied to every subordinate employe of the Government and denounced it as reprehensible.

Among those who talked were the following:

Senator Weeks, of Massachusetts—A Cabinet member can live on $12,000 a year if he does not have large family expenses, and he can live comfortably and respectably.

Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania—Samuel J. Randall, one of the greatest of Democrats, served this country for a whole generation, living on a salary of $5,000 a year. I have always disapproved of the custom that has grown up resulting in the very considerable neglect of official duties on the part of public men in order that they may go on lecture circuits.

Senator Tillman, of South Carolina—While Mr. Bryan's speaking tours will serve a good purpos in that he always preached true Democracy and patriotism and Christian living, he can never again appear as a knight errant of Democracy.

Representative Willis, of Ohio—I am opposed to a Government official capitalizing his job. The Secretaryship of State is a man's job. Mr. Bryan should stay here and attend to the work of his office. He has enough on his hands with the present critical situation in Mexico, the unsettled questions with Japan and the matter of the Panama Canal tolls. We members of Congress have to stick to our tasks.

Representative Miller, of Minnesota—Mr. Bryan is giving this country a remarkable exhibition in the difference between his preachings during the past seventeen years and his present practices.

Representative Kahn, of California—There are many able men in the employ of the Government who are prevented by law and the hours of service from increasing their incomes through additional employment.

Representative Payne, of New York—I have been able to live on my salary as a member of the House. I can not see why the Secretary of State is unable to live on his salary.

Towne, Bryan's Friend, Calls Step Unfortunate.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Secretary Bryan's determination to supplement his official salary of $12,000 by going on a six weeks' lecture tour has awakened severe criticism from the men who supported him when he first loomed on the political horizon.

Charles A. Towne, who was one of the speakers at the famous "Dollar Dinner" in April, 1899, organized to emphasize Bryan's Jeffersonian simplicity of tastes, discussed Mr. Bryan's new move reluctantly, as they are still close friends.

"I consider the Secretary's plan to continue his lecture tours while occupying the chief place in the President's Cabinet most unfortunate," said Mr. Towne. "These are days when great national issues must be decided, and when the Secretary of State is required to give every bit of time and energy in behalf of the nation. It is a time when men intrusted with the affairs of the Government must have their minds occupied with nothing else except the questions of state.

Explanation Only Makes It Worse, Says World.

(From The N. Y. World, July 16.)

It is with the most profound regret that we have to note the position into which the Secretary of State has drawn himself and the explanation now given which only makes it worse.

Whether Mr. Bryan can afford to take a prolonged vacation at just this critical time for the Administration and his own high office may be a question, but a minor one. Whether, under the frankly admitted circumstances of personal fortune, he can only afford a money-making vacation, must be something less than a question with the great masses of the people whose life he has lived in sympathy.

The real question is whether the Government for such a position as his may not justly claim an undivided service, and whether any other view is compatible with a worthy ambition. We have had men in high office who have sacrificed personal fortune to render such undivided service and could afford it. We have had many more men there who have done this and could not afford it.

We can not think of the President of the United States doing otherwise. We should not be able to think of any of his Cabinet doing otherwise.

Action Most Bizarre, Says Pall Mall Gazette.

LONDON, July 19.—Regarding Secretary Bryan's lecture tour, The Pall Mall Gazette to-night says:

"It is a singular paradox in a country where there is so much money in politics as in the United States that the chief member of the President's cabinet should find his official salary inadequate to support his existence.

"We can quite understand why $12,000 a year is not enough for the Secretary of State, considering the American scale of life, but one would have expected a man of Bryan's moral courage to call upon his country for a living wage, to which he is entitled, rather than to propose going on the stump as a lecturer, in the roles of a minister and a professional entertainer.

"They make a most bizarre combination to all British ways of thinking, and we shall be surprised if even American opinion reconciles itself to their incongruity."

BRYAN OUGHT TO LIVE ON HIS PAY OR QUIT, SAY SENATORS

Explanation of Secretary of State More Amazing Than His Acts, Declares Bristow, Who Introduced Resolution to Investigate

Wilson's Premier Capitalizing His Position, Asserts Representative Willis—Much Work To Be Done in His Department.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The consensus of opinion among public and private persons in the National Capital is that if Secretary Bryan can not live on his salary of $12,000 a year he ought to resign and continue his lecture tours as a private individual.

Mr. Bryan to-day gave evidence of the fact that the country-wide criticism had got under his skin. That he was irritated and impatient and realized the "bad break" he has made was apparent to his subordinates throughout the day. Somewhat petulantly he declared that the press of the country might have assumed that "my lecture engagements are subject to cancellation."

Publicly, Mr. Bryan announced to the country that he could not live on a salary about which his fellow Cabinet members have not complained, and in a second statement, given out authoritatively, complained that criticism was groundless.

Evades Paper's Questions.

The American to-day endeavored to obtain from Mr. Bryan more in detail the reasons that actuated him to arrange to leave his post of duty at a time when very grave matters pertaining to our relations with foreign powers were pending. He declined to answer certain questions and refused to discuss the subject of his official pronunciamento.

Mr. Bryan was asked these questions by The American:

"If you feel your duty is to your private pocketbook rather than to the 'great common people' to whom you have preached simplicity for the last seventeen years, why do you not resign and devote your entire time to the lecture platform and literary pursuits?

"If you believe the people have called you to the great office you can fill so ably, do you not believe that it is your duty as an American and a patriot to sacrifice your personal interests for the interests of your country? The more so from the fact that you admit you have saved about $200,000, which is considerably more than a competence when invested shrewdly?

"You say that you entered one campaign from the Chautauqua platform. Is it not a fact that you look upon the present and future engagements as the best opportunity to get in direct touch with the people, who, you contend, will elect the next President by direct vote?"

Bryan Leaves to Lecture.

No answer was returned to the questions. Later in the day he left Washington to keep an engagement to lecture.

Senator Bristow, author of the resolution calling upon the President for information as to what salary ought to be paid to enable Mr. Bryan to stay in Washington and attend to his public duties, to-day came back with a rejoinder to Mr. Bryan's explanation of last night.

"Secrttary Bryan's second statement has astounded me even more than his first one," said Mr. Bristow. "That the present Secretary of State should have such a sordid view of the Governmtnt service is amazing.

"Secretary Bryan says he has a right to use his vacation for lecturing if he sees fit. But he is to be away on one tour of six weeks, and there is no telling where his vacation will end.

Needed at His Post.

"Besides, since he has been Secretary of State he has been in Washington only about one-half the time so far. If ever there was a time when the Secretary of State was needed on the job it is now, when so many important questions are up for consideration. To cause the people to pay money to hear the Secretary of State, the highest officer in the Cabinet, deliver addresses is all

Girl Traps a Thief In Telephone Booth

Sets Shoulder Against Door and Holds Man Until Cries Bring Her Aid.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Holding a thief trapped in a telephone booth, Miss Florence Rosenthal, cashier in Edward Feuhrer's drug store at No. 53 Second avenue, finally succeeded in delivering him to the police yesterday.

The captive, who said he was Alexander Moskowitz, 17 years old, was so long "telephoning" that Miss Rosenthal went to the booth to see if he was dead or alive. She saw him opening the money box with a screwdriver, she says. Screaming for her employer, she set her shoulder against the door, and the youth could not force it open. Moskowitz was held for trial.

Burleson Eats but Two Meals Each Day

Postmaster General Believes in and Practices "Early to Bed, Early to Rise" Theory.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Postmaster General Burleson believes thoroughly in the old adage, "Early to bed and early to rise makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise." He practices this theory himself and in addition supplements it by a two-meal-a-day program.

His daily routine is as follows:

"I arise at 5 in the morning.

"Read the papers until 6.

"Breakfast.

"Go over papers and reports until 9.

"Work at the Postoffice Department until 5 in the afternoon without any lunch or lunch hour.

"Dinner at 6 to 7 o'clock.

"Eight o'clock—go to bed."

"Cooling Period" to Halt Divorce Evil

Pastor Suggests That Three Months Elapse Between Final Hearing and Decision of Court.

ATLANTIC CITY, July 19.—Speaking on "The Modern Problem of Marriage and Divorce," before the Central Conference of American Rabbis here to-day, the Rev. L. Leonard Levy, of Pittsburg, advocated a "cooling" period of three months from the time of the final hearing until the decision is announced as the solution of the problem of minimizing the divorce evil. "This cooling period," said the speaker, "would cover a time during which neither of the parties at interest could marry."

Even Take Fizz Out Of City's Soda Water

Members of Cincinnati Board of Health to Censor All Soft Drinks Sold.

CINCINNATI, July 19.—The "fizz and bubble" in soda water and ginger ale manufactured in this city is to be no more, if the Board of Health has its way about the matter, and it seems likely at this time that its contention will hold good. The board has asked the Council to pass an ordinance limiting the amount of alcohol to one-half of 1 per cent in any one drink of this kind. If the resolution is passed and made a law no dealer will be allowed to make soft drinks without first getting a permit.

Girl Fan Loses Teeth But Stays Out Game

Foul Tip Injures Fair Baseball Enthusiast, but Her Ardor Is Not Diminished.

ZANESVILLE, OHIO, July 19.—Miss Cora Bauer, of this city, was struck in the face by a foul tip while watching a ball game between the Akron and Zanesville teams here. Her nose was split open, three teeth knocked out and she may be disfigured for life. Nevertheless, after being treated by a physician, she decided to stay out the game.

Marries His Aunt, 12 Years His Senior

Young Actor Takes as Bride the Recently Divorced Wife of His Uncle.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Earl Oscar Schenck, 24 years old, an actor, of No. 600 West 138th street, was married in the City Hall yesterday to his aunt, Marion Carr Schenck, twelve years his senior.

The bride of yesterday was married in April, 1899, to Oscar A. Schenck, the uncle of her present husband, who on January 17 of this year divorced her in Columbus, Ohio, "for gross neglect of duty."

ONLY AMERICAN KING YEARNS TO QUIT HIS THRONE

All of Former Broker's Thirty Wives Want English Gowns. Jealousy Spreads.

JOB IS NOT A HAPPY ONE

NewYorker Who Won South Sea Kingdom With a Phonograph Faces Petticoat Revolt.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Archibald C. Everett, the only American King, practically has made up his mind to renounce his throne. He is King of the Island of Arorae, one of the Gilbert group of South Sea Islands. Until 1909 he was a New York curb broker. The insistence of his many wives for English gowns and his loneliness have led to the determination to give up his kingly honors. He tells of his intentions in a letter just received by a friend in this city.

The career of Everett has been unusual. In 1909, when he was in business in this city, he was thought to be well to do. He met reverses, however, in Wall Street, and in the latter part of 1909 disappeared, without leaving a word of farewell. Nothing was heard from him until in 1911, in a remarkable letter, he told of being made the King of Arorae, in the South Sea Islands. He had landed, he said, on one of the small islands, and had gone from there to other islands of the Gilbert group. Finally he reached Arorae. It was a phonograph which he had in his possession that eventually won for him his throne. The King at that time of the island took a great fancy to the phonograph.

Phonograph Wins Kingdom.

By the hour Everett, according to his own account, entertained the monarch, constantly growing in his graces. Finally the old King adopted Everett, and when he died Everett succeeded to the throne. According to the custom of the island, Everett took a good many wives.

Everett took a very lively interest in the affairs of the island. He increased its business with traders. The principal product of the island is copra, or dried cocoanut meat. The letter, in part, reads:

"At the present time the King's job is about the last thing to be desired, and do not be surprised if I walk in on you some day in the near future. I am about tired of the job.

"For some time past conditions here have steadily become worse. It started when my wives, of whom there are about 30, insisted on wearing English dresses. A trader who stopped here presented one of the natives with three English gowns in exchange for some copra. The native presented them to the King, and I in turn gave them to three of my wives. The natives have never worn any clothes to speak of. Imagine my surprise, then, when the three dresses became the center of a regular war among my wives.

"The three victorious wives managed to get them on somehow, and that settled it. Every one of them set up a kick for a dress, and they worried the life out of me. I was forced to get the gowns. The first trader that stopped at the island from Australia was commissioned to bring them back on the next trip, and in due course of time they arrived.

Jealousy Over English Gowns.

"The dresses were of all colors and sizes. Most of the people here are about the same stature, few being over four feet six or seven. Some of the dresses were too small, others too large, but they created a sensation. Dressed in those creations, with bare brown feet stepping proudly, my wives paraded up and down the island, causing every woman in the kingdom, young and old, to grow jealous.

"So far, half of the female population have been given the gowns and the other half are waiting eagerly. The worst part of it all is that the men are as enthusiastic over this new style of dress as the women, and my objections have not added to my popularity whatever. I am daily expecting the men to demand suits of flannel and silk shirts.

Affairs on a Business Basis.

"I have not done so badly here financially. I put the business of the island on a business basis soon after becoming King, and things have flourished.

"I don't know how the people here will take my departure. They may even try to prevent it, and I have been considering the best method to leave. I could probably get aboard one of the trading ships and get to Australia, after which it would be easy, of course, to get back to the United States."

Congregation Built Up by Band Concerts

Ohio Pastor With Novel Methods Now Claims Biggest Sunday School in World.

CANTON, OHIO, July 19.—With the attraction of a band concert in the church roof garden and a double orchestra concert in the church auditorium, the Rev. P. H. Welshimer, of Canton's First Christian Church, has built up what he claims is the biggest Sunday school in the world within five years.

The average attendance in this hot month of July is 3,251. The record attendance is 4,714. Several Sundays back 38 babies were checked in the "babies' check room" of the $90,000 church. The men's class of 250 had to hold their session in the street while the teacher explained the lesson from the tonneau of an automobile.

Congress to Lose Costly Stationery

Government Printer Is Ordered to Stop Use of Costly Material for Lawmakers.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Members of Congress will draw no more costly embossed stationery at the expense of the Government. Hereafter they will get along with plain, every-day printed letterheads and envelopes.

The Joint Committee on Printing discovered that the Government Printing Office last year turned out 11,000,000 embossed pieces of stationery at an extra cost of $30,000. An order has been issued to the Government Printer to stop this extravagance.

On the Senate side of Congress this economy reform is resented, but it goes just the same. If Senators want stationery de luxe they must foot the bills out of their private purse.

3 Drowned Trying To Avoid Wet Feet

Women Stand Up In Leaky Boat, Capsizing Craft in View of Hundreds.

NORRISTOWN, PA., July 19.—Caught in a storm while boating on the Schuylkill River, three women, all church workers, were drowned. They are:

Miss Anna Mary Livergood, Miss Emma J. Rex and Miss Helen Green, all of Norristown.

Miss Margaret Green, a sister of Miss Helen Green, clung to the overturned boat and was saved.

The women were within a quarter of a mile of the boat landing when the wind struck them.

The boat began to leak badly. To keep their feet and clothing dry the four girls stood on the seats. The next instant the boat turned over.

Two hundred persons on a boat returning from a park saw the accident.

Blue Cauliflower Is Raised in California

Latest Horticultural Product Is Hybrid of Ordinary Cauliflower and Purple Pickling Cabbage.

OAKLAND, July 19.—Blue cauliflower, the latest novelty in things horticultural, was introduced to the public to-day by Hugo Lillenthal, instructor in the University of California. The new plant is a hybridization of the ordinary cauliflower and the purple "pickling cabbage," declared by the experts to be a "first cousin to the cauliflower." The new vegetable is bright blue in color and stronger than the ordinary cauliflower in flavor.

Only a Bathing Suit Left Friend by Thief

Youth Is Marooned in Atlantic City When Companion Disappears With Money and Clothes.

ATLANTIC CITY, July 19.—Arthur Leonard, a New York youth, spent the entire day on the beach in his bathing suit to-day, following the disappearence of his chum, whose name he refuses to reveal, with four suits of his clothing and all his money.

Leonard wired his relatives in New York State telling them of his predicament. They came here to-night with clothing and rescued him.

Billie Burke Wires She Is Recovering

Actress Was Threatened With Appendicitis, but Did Not Have to Undergo Operation.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Billie Burke, telegraphing the London bureau of The American to-day from Carlsbad in reply to an inquiry concerning her health, says:

"Thanks awfully. Was threatened with appendicitis, but have not had to undergo operation. Recovering nicely.

"BILLIE BURKE."

LOBBY INQUIRY STIRS NATION

Mulhall Story Leaves U. S. Aghast

Power of Interests Vividly Revealed

MARTIN W. MULHALL, former lobbyist of National Association of Manufacturers, whose revelations of corruption startled nation.

Names of Wilson, Taft, Senators and Congressmen Are Dragged Into the Testimony, Showing Corporations Have Set No Limit in Corruption.

STARTLING FACTS REVEALED IN U. S. SENATE INVESTIGATION OF CONGRESSIONAL LOBBY

National Association of Manufacturers raised a slush fund of $500,000 to $700,000 a year to oppose objectionable legislation.

Place in Taft Cabinet pledged to manufacturers by Vorys, Taft manager.

Charges that the big manufacturers had the ears of Taft, Sherman and Cannon.

List of Congressmen in pay of the National Manufacturers' Association disclosed. Also, a list of the "unpurchasable," whom the association hated, and tried to defeat.

Fights made by National Manufacturers' Association on progressive Congressmen and Senators, often successful.

More than 400 letter tell of plans of association to become sinister factor in controlling the wheels of government.

Attempts made to foment strife among labor organizations, and to corrupt labor leaders, even Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison.

Agreement by Woodrow Wilson with Gompers and Morrison that he support Hughes for Senate.

Powers of big business fought Hughes because he was friendly to labor.

Tom Johnson, Senator McComas of Maryland, and others were political victims of the association's vengeance.

Gigantic corruption in Wall Street laid bare in testimony of David Lamar.

Forgery on Union Pacific's books covering item of $82,000,000 charged.

Senate resolutions hawked about Wall street for sale to highest bidder.

The nation to-day stands aghast at the sensational revelations which have come as the result of investigations by the Overman Committee of the United States Senate into the work of lobbies at the National Capital.

It has heard how big business combines and Wall Street operators have made and unmade men in public life, influenced legislation, dominated public opinion, all the time secret and vigilant.

It has learned how big business has become one of the most powerful factors in the American civilization, striking in the dark against men who opposed it.

It has heard the names of the men highest in public life, President Wilson, former President Taft, Senators, Congressmen, Cabinet members, dragged into the testimony, and has learned that certain predatory interests have set no limits in their attempt to corrupt public servants.

The bulk of the startling testimony came from Martin M. Mulhall, for years the servant of the National Association of Manufacturers, and the chief lobbyist of that organization at Washington, and from David Lamar, an operator in stocks, who is known as "The Wolf of Wall Street."

Wilson Starts Inquiry.

The investigation began more than a month ago when President Wilson declared that a lobby, "insidious and industrious" in nature, had long dominated tariff legislation. The announcement did not come unexpectedly, however, and there were many Senators and Congressmen to endorse the Chief Executive. The Senate began immediately its investigation of the charges, empowering a committee, headed by Senator Overman, to conduct the inquiry.

Relatively pointless testimony from men interested in the sugar industry came first, revealing the fact that sugar lobbies were the most industrious. Lobbyists from Hawaii, the Philippines and Louisiana defended their actions by a protest against free sugar. Former Governor Carter of Hawaii declared that the elimination of the duty on sugar would make the Hawaiian Islands merely military posts, destroying their commercial prestige. Frank C. Lowry, of the "free sugar lobby," admitted in the testimony that $25,000 had been spent in four years by the Federal Sugar Refining Company in lobbying operations.

Then came the Mulhall testimony.

Old Age Attributed To Her False Teeth

Woman, Age 99, Declares She Has Used Set 59 Years—Always Chews Well.

WILKESBARRE, PA., July 19.—At the age of 99, Mrs. Levina Derr, of Hudson, declares that her long life is due solely to the fact that she bought a set of good store teeth fifty years ago.

Mrs. Derr is still active. Five generations of her family are living, and she declares she is as young as any of them.

"I was blessed with good teeth," she said, "and I always made it a point to chew my food well. A good stomach is the foundation of good health, and the stomach can not be good unless the teeth are good."

300 "HELLO GIRLS" ASK BOSS TO BE BEST MAN

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, July 19.—The Postmaster General is bewildered over the result of the recent permission which he granted to telephone girls to get married. Three hundred of these girls promptly availed themselves of the chance and every couple asked the Postmaster General to act as best man.

Umbrellas for Farm Hands Is Inducement

Planter Advertises That He Will Supply Them With Sulkies, Sunshades and Ice Cream.

FINDLAY, OHIO, July 19.—There are other communities in this country that are suffering for a lack of farm hands besides Kansas. It is up to H. B. Clark, a farmer in the western part of Hancock County, to make good, else be prosecuted for false advertising, as provided by the new newspaper laws.

In a morning paper Mr. Clark is advertising for farm hands to plow corn. He says he will provide them with riding cultivator, a large sun umbrella for each, ice water to drink and all the ice cream each applicant can eat every other day, with $2.50 a day wages.

GREAT BRITAIN IS AFTER LATEST GERMAN AIR CRAFT

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, July 19.—Great Britain, it is stated, is negotiating for an Unger airship, which is larger, faster and more rigid than any others yet designed, including the Zeppelins.

'Oh Fudge' Strongest Language Permitted

Kansas City Starts Crusade Against Public Swearing—Police Rebuke Violators.

KANSAS CITY, July 19.—Anything stronger than "Oh, fudge!" must not be heard on the streets of Kansas City hereafter. All the ministers of the city and all the members of their churches have started an anti-swearing crusade, and part of the work is to ask persons who are overheard to swear to consider the vulgarity of it and cease the practice.

The Police Department and the street railway company have agreed to join in the crusade, so that hereafter it is part of the policeman's duty to stop swearing as well as breaches of the peace.

Miss Elliott Returns To Stage To Be Happy

Will Play Potiphar's Wife in Sir Herbert Tree's "Joseph and His Brethren."

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Maxine Elliott, yielding to Sir Herbert Tree's persuasion, will return to the stage September 2 in a great production of Louis N. Parker's play, "Joseph and His Brethren." She will play Potiphar's wife.

Miss Elliott gives as the chief reason for her reappearance that every one is happier when occupied. She is now living in her beautiful house at Bushey, just outside London.

STORY OF MULHALL WILL EXTEND U. S. LOBBY INQUIRY

Mulhall represented the National Association of Manufacturers, in Washington. The association has a membership of 225 organizations, among them the most influential of the country, and 4,000 individuals, who control billions of capital.

The burden of his statements were that the association had for years promoted tariff, labor, and general business legislation favorable to itself, had maintained a lobby staff of seventeen, including himself, and former Presidents VanCleave and Kirby, of the association, at the capital to defeat hostile legislation, and it was always seeking and often obtaining control of the House and Senate Committee on Labor and Judiciary.

Created Tariff Commission.

He said that the association's efforts were responsible for the creation of the Tariff Commission under President Taft, and said that nine former Congressmen and J. H. McMichael, chief of pages in the House, had obtained money for services rendered.

More sensational still were the declarations that former President Taft, former Vice President Sherman, and former Speaker Cannon, besides many Congressmen and Senators were among those whom the association could affect by appeals to sentiment or other interests. He told of an unsuccessful attempt to bribe Samuel Gompers, the labor leader, and of successful work among petty labor leaders.

Mulhall told of his own great ingratitude, how he obtained a Federal position through the influence of Senator McComas of Maryland, and at the same time entered the employ of the National Association of Manufacturers, helping to defeat his patron because McComas had been doomed for his opposition to the association.

McComas, it seems, was not the only victim. Tom L. Johnson had been defeated for Mayor of Cleveland, said Mulhall, for his opposition to the association, and William E. Hughes was opposed by the business combine for Senator from New Jersey because he was the advocate of many labor bills. It was in this connection that Wilson, when Governor of New Jersey, had agreed with Gompers and Morrison, the labor leaders, to support Hughes, and had stumped the State in his favor.

Spies Kept in Field.

The work of the association against the eight-hour law, its enmity to most legislation that was favorable to labor, how he kept in occasional communication with former Vice President Sherman, how spies were kept in the field to corrupt minor labor leaders, and to knife opponents, were other sensational bits of the Mulhall testimony.

George Pope, president of the association, and other officials of the organization, have made statements declaring that Mulhall is not to be believed, and that most of the statements were inspired by the fact that Mulhall was discharged by the association. From many persons and places have come statements denouncing Mulhall as a man of reprehensible character, lessening thus the substantiability of many of the charges. But in many instances the declarations he made seemed to be assured of reliability by documents that are substantial.

Interesting is his list of Congressmen whom he said had received pay from the association. He named in this connection J. E. Watson, Republican, of Indiana, the House "whip" of the last administration; J. T. McDermott, Democrat, of Illinois; J. J. Jenkins, Republican, Wisconsin; Kittredge Haskins, Republican, Vermont; C. E. Littlefield, Republican, Maine; H. M. Bannon, Republican, Ohio; H. M. Coudry, Republican, Missouri; J. J. Gardner, Republican, New Jersey; R. B. Cole, Republican, Ohio, and J. H. McMichael, chief of pages.

On the other hand, he named a number of Congressmen who had consistently fought the association's interests, and whom he frankly called "unpurchasable." They are: Speaker Clark, Burnett of Alabama, Mayer Nichols, Pennsylvania; Parson, New Hampshire; Cooper, Wisconsin; York, Green, Massachusetts; Haugen, Iowa; Wilson, Pennsylvania; McComas, Maryland; Pearre, Maryland; Hughes, New Jersey; Kelliher, Massachusetts; Connolly, Massachusetts, and the labor leaders, Gompers, John Mitchell and Secretary Morrison, of the Federation of Labor. William Barnes, the New York boss, he said, was his friend, and could always be depended on to "take care of bills."

Revelations of Lamar.

On the heels of the Mulhall revelations came those from David Lamar, the smiling, cynical "Wolf of Wall Street." Lamar it was who told of having sent Edward Lauterbach, his attorney, to peddle around Wall Street a resolution calling for an investigation of the Steel Trust by the Senate.

J. P. Morgan was one of the men whom Lauterbach visited on this errand. He told how he had impersonated Congressmen Palmer and Riordan in telephone conversations with Lewis Cass Ledyard and Paul D. Cravath, corporation attorneys, and Robert S. Lovett, the railroad president, feigning knowledge of the intentions of the dominant party. Further, he declared that he had represented himself as fresh from the councils of Speaker Clark and other leaders when he visited Wall Street operators for concessions.

Lamar's most remarkable disclosure was his statement that the Union Pacific Railroad's books had been forged in 1901 to cover an item of $82,000,000, whereby the fortunes of E. H. Harriman, Kuhn, Loeb and Company, and others were built.

Testimonials Discredited.

Discredit has been cast upon Lamar's testimony as on Mulhall's, as coming from a man lacking in scruples. Paul D. Cravath, attorney for the Union Pacific, gave out a statement that the testimony regarding the gigantic forgery was part of a bear campaign against the company.

The Senate investigation will be conducted in detail, and it is likely, to judge from the announced intentions of the committee members, that every member of the Senate and of the House, every public official whose name has been dragged into the affair, and every one in anyway connected with the situation will be called in as witnesses. Appearances seem to indicate that the hearing will last far into the summer.

Mulhall was on the stand the greater part of last week explaining a batch of correspondence which had passed between him and political and labor leaders throughout the United States. The correspondence, according to evidence which has been revealed, he has sought to sell to magazines and newspapers several times, but in vain. Nonchalantly, the ex-lobbyist has pointed out letter after letter from prominent men, talking of alleged significant deals almost carelessly.

"This is a letter from Senator Foraker," he said, indicating one. "It was asking me to see a labor man about his chances for re-election to the Senate. I think he was considering the Presidency at the time."

Secrets of big politics are being bared daily during the investigation. Details of how spies worked among the labor men, and of the secret methods of big business have been explained by Mulhall at more than one point in his testimony.

In defense of his own lobbying, Mulhall made statements that a labor lobby existed, naming Samuel Gompers. As a result, Gompers and J. P. Bird, general manager of the National Association of Manufacturers, will be brought before the committee to explain their activities in the cause of labor and capital, respectively.

Inez Milholland's Wedding Blow to Suffragists

Her Romance May Annul Marriage to the Cause

Mrs. Eugen Boissevain, who was Miss Inez Milholland, famous suffragist beauty and orator, before her marriage to wealthy Dutchman last week.

Beautiful Leader of Votes for Women Won After Courtship on Two Continents.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Suffrage leaders of the United States are today bowed in spirit. They can think of their recent victory in Illinois without smiling. They read of success of women jurors and policemen with no show of ecstasy. Their minds are troubled. They seek to know whether Mrs. Eugen Boissevain will be as potent a personality for the cause as was Inez Milholland before she suddenly decided to take unto herself a husband in the form of the wealthy Dutchman she wedded Tuesday in London.

For Inez Milholland has been no small force in the suffrage movement in the United States. She graduated from Vassar just about the time when the votes for women idea traveled across the seas from England, and she has been right on the firing line in the battle for the ballot ever since.

Beauty of Suffrage Ranks.

Miss Milholland, beg pardon, Mrs. Boissevain, has ever been in the specially mentioned class in every important suffrage movement. She has been the American Christobal Pankhurst, only more so, though it has not been recorded that she has smashed anything, or has had to dodge extradition treaties to keep from the painful necessity of going on a hunger strike.

Even before she graduated from Vassar, Miss Milholland was known to fame. Her remarkable beauty, her mentality and personal magnetism made her a leader in this great girls' college. She was the champion all around athlete and held a world's record for putting the shot.

After leaving Vassar, she went 'n for the law and the pursuit of the ballot. Her beauty and powers of oratory made her a leader quickly. Her pictures soon became almost as familiar a feature of newspaper front pages as the physiognomy of Colonel Roosevelt.

During the strike of the garment workers in New York, several years ago, Miss Milholland volunteered for picket duty and it was her oratory that kept the girls stubbornly on the strike until they partially won their demands.

In the first big suffrage parade in New York she was a battalion leader and was a striking figure as she rode astride on a big bay charger.

Challenges Orator Heflin.

She again achieved prominence by challenging Representative Tom Heflin of Alabama to joint debate when that doughty Congressman spoke disparagingly of the cause, and though it is known that Mr. Heflin loves to speak and delights in debate, he carefully avoided meeting Miss Milholland on the forum.

In the great suffrage parade in Washington the day before President Wilson's inauguration Miss Milholland led the procession as the herald of the cause. She was mounted on a pure white horse and was clad in robes of white, while a coronet surmounted her magnificent hair which fell loosely down her back.

So striking was her appearance that she was quickly an object of the attacks of the thugs and boors who tried to break up the parade, and it is recorded that one of these men received a blow on the jaw from the fist of the young woman who once held the world shot-put record.

Lately Miss Milholland has been doing magazine work, and though socially a favorite, has always declared that matrimony was not for her.

"I am wedded to the cause," she told her admirers, among whom were Sidney Smith, the New York clubman; John Fox, Jr., author and former husband of Fritzi Scheff, and Lord Curzon, formerly viceroy of India.

Whether this marriage will annul her former marriage to the cause is the question that perplexes the suffrage leaders, but they, as a rule, protest that it will not.

John E. Milholland, her father, was evidently not greatly shocked by the marriage. Here is what he cabled his daughter:

"Have not been so mad in two hundred years. You should be boiled in oil. Do you expect forgiveness until the next century. Indefensible chip of the old block, you have given us a pretty rough deal, but nevertheless I humbly and fervently pray God's blessing upon you and yours forever. "PATER."

Boissevain's Brother Elated.

Robert W. Boissevain, brother of the bridegroom, was in a decidedly agreeable frame of mind yesterday in his office at No. 17 Battery place. Besides calling his brother a "lucky dog" and describing him as being "smiled upon by the gods," he said that the new Mrs. Boissevain has now seven sisters-in-law who possess collectively 25 children and that all these seven Boissevain sisters are suffragists of the non-militant type.

"We are of an old family, originally French, but Dutch by adoption," said Mr. Boissevain. "My brother is a banker, and in his own Amsterdam circle considered rich. Of course, his guilders would not compare with the dollars of the American millionaires, but he is now sufficiently blest.

"Wireless" in Courtship.

"Eugen, who is 33 years old, and my brother Jan came over to New York on the Olympic to pay me a visit," he said. "They arrived June 10 and stopped at the Holland House with me. William Marconi, the wireless discoverer, and Mrs. Marconi were here at the same time. My brother and I have known Mr. Marconi for years, and I now understand that the Marconis have known the Milholland family for a long time.

"Anyway, two days after the arrival of my brothers, that is, June 12, I was dining with them in the Holland House and Mr. and Mrs. Marconi entered the dining room with one of the most beautiful women we had ever seen. Miss Milholland was presented to us, and my brother Eugen lost interest in all other things then and there.

"Eugen and Jan had planned to tour the States for six weeks at least, but during the dinner Miss Milholland said something about leaving for Europe early in July. The plans of Eugen, I could see, went flying.

"But when Miss Milholland decided to sail to Europe with the Marconis on the Mauretania on July 2 Eugen engaged passage on the same liner.

MAZDAZNANS EAT FLOWERS AND SING TO THE SUN

All This in Classic Boston, Where the Cult Has a Membership Small but Exclusive.

BOSTON, July 19.—It is ancient history that Nebuchadnezzer went out and ate grass like an ox. Out in the Back Bay and up in Lowell there can be found small yet select circles of folk who eat grass and say they enjoy it.

Not only this, but they worship the sun, pray to the sun, sing to the sun, take sun baths, dew baths, eat rose petals and pansies, drive out disease by fasting spells (or say they do so), fast for days and then fatten up on a diet of water to drink and violets to eat, kiss and rekiss, and try to be as happy and contented as can be.

These people are the Mazdaznans or Sun Worshipers. Into their innermost shrines have penetrated none but ardent devotees, so that none of their rites have been made public. As revealed for the first time at the big Gahanbar, or national peace congress of the Mazdaznans, these rites are weird enough—strange to the outside world, but taken as a matter of course by the Mazdaznans.

And the strange part of the rites and worship is that the devout worshipers believe their practice will lengthen their years into three or four centuries.

Secret Rites of Cult.

Another thing about the sun folk is that they don't worry. So in the hot weather they manage to keep cool figuratively and physically. They usually look happy and contented when met on the street.

None outside the cult itself knew—up to the holding of the recent Gahanbar or Congress—of the secret rites of the Mazdaznans. These are practiced in the inner circles, so called.

For years the famous "Green Book" of the Mazdaznans was a mystery sealed to the eyes of ordinary mortals. The book was guarded sacredly by the Sun Worshipers. In it are printed the precepts of the cult.

Here are some of them:

You can get cured of anything if you have faith enough long enough.

Sickness, sin and poverty will be eradicated by Mazdaznanism.

The fly you swat may be the incarnated soul of a great-great-great-grandmother.

Be careful, then, how you swat the flies.

Obstinacy Cause for Pain.

Pain is nothing but the result of obstinacy in you. If you are suffering from a toothache, it is because you are "declining to yield to the peaceful operations of intelligence."

Never go under the surgeon's knife or take "herbal medicine."

Deny the "bonds of ancestral relation through sickness, sin or sorrow."

And practice these things: Deep or "conscious" breathing and vegetarianism.

If you can do these things, you may become a Mazdaznan, so the "Green Book" says.

The High Priestess is Mrs. Marie Elizabeth Roth Hilton, wife of Dr. George Hilton, of Lowell.

In the inner worship Hanish, the leader, is His Humbleness, Mrs. Hilton is Spenta Marie—the equivalent of "holy mother."

Their chief New England shrine is the Mazdaznan Temple, in Lowell. This was formerly a barn belonging to Dr. Hilton, but later converted into a "house of worship."

The central figure in the worship is Mrs. Hilton, the High Priestess. She is the mother of two pretty daughters, one of whom, the elder, Miss Ruthken Mariana Hilton, is being educated to follow in her mother's steps as High Priestess. Some day pretty Miss Ruthken—her name before the court changed it was Ruth Mildred Brubaker, daughter of Mrs. Hilton by her first marriage—will be the leader of the Mazdaznans. The other daughter is Miss Constance Cleopatra Hilton.

The majority of the followers of the "Little Master," Otoman Zar Adusht Hanish, are the persons of middle life and evidently of generous means. While a few of the cult are young women of surpassing beauty, yet the advanced philosophic principles of Mazdaznan are so complex and abstract that only those of mature mind are intellectually and spiritually capable of comprehending them. Therefore, there is a dearth of young people in the cult.

Automobile Driver Kills Deer With Car

Horn Frightens Animal But He Afterwards Turns to Fight and Pierces Tire With Horns.

UKIAH, CAL., July 19.—W. C. Jones, of Los Angeles, ran down a big deer with his auto near Largo yesterday when it jumped over the fence in front of the machine. Jones opened his throttle and turned loose the horn. The noise frightened the animal, and, after a half mile chase, it turned to give battle. The deer made one vicious lunge forward, its horn piercing the front tire, the impact breaking its neck. Jones loaded his prize into the machine.

TON OF SILKWORMS BUMPED.

Marries and Steals To Reform a Girl

Divinity Student Admits Taking Money Trusted to Him Because He Loved Woman.

DENVER, July 19.—William Schulz, student of divinity at Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, arrested here on a charge of embezzling $38 from the student body, whose cashier he was, says he married Miss Thelma Gillion and became a defaulter, not only because he loved the girl, but because he desired to assist her in giving up her former way of living.

That Schulz had partly succeeded in his work of reclamation is the belief of all Denver people who have come in contact with the young woman since she and Schulz arrived in this city. They unite in saying that there is no better behaved young woman in Denver than Mrs. Schulz.

Mother Wins Prize As Triplets Arrive

Newark Merchant's Offer to Outfit Children Eagerly Accepted by Woman—Babies Doing Well.

NEWARK, July 19.—Three years ago the head of a large department store here announced that he stood ready to outfit any set of three children of one birth in this city. His offer was never accepted until last night, when a claim was put in by Joseph Roinon, of No. 61 Boyde street, whose wife, Julia, found herself with two little girls and a boy to share the offer. All three children and their mother, who is only 21 years old, are doing well. Complete outfits for the three were provided to-day.

HORSE FALLS IN FISSURE IN SINKING KANSAS FARM

HOISINGTON, KANS., July 19.—Fissures varying from a few inches to a foot and a half in width and extending several feet into the ground have opened up in L. E. Baker's alfalfa field near this city and are causing a great deal of speculation.

There have been no indications of an earthquake of any sort, but the ground seems to be sinking away. The fissures were discovered when Baker missed one of his horses and found it imprisoned in a fissure.

CRAWFORD HEIRS EXPECT SEARCH FOR BARBER TO BARE PRE-NUPTIAL PLOT

Relatives Think That Lump Will Tell Woman Held on Poison Charge Planned to Wed Him on Her Husband's Death.

If the tireless search which is being directed by Atlanta lawyers discovers in New York a man named Fred Lump, the prosecution in the case against Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, who is charged with poisoning her husband, Joshua B. Crawford, thinks a pre-nuptial plot against Crawford can be proved.

The alleged plot was between Mrs. Crawford, then Mrs. Savage, and Lump. She would marry the wealthy Crawford, obtain his money, and then marry Lump, say her accusers.

Lump is a barber by trade and a Bohemian by nativity. He is supposed to be in New York, and in that city detectives in the employ of the prosecution have been at work for several days. Every message that comes from them, however, is one of failure.

Colonel James Makes Charge.

The charge of a plot first was made by Col. J. S. James, who is attorney for the contesting Crawford heirs, who ordered the arrest of Lump. Colonel James said that Lump admitted his being in Atlanta at the time of Crawford's death, and that other testimony valuable to the prosecution was given by him in deposition several weeks ago. But present search for the Bohemian barber has proved fruitless.

Colonel James points to Mrs. E. C. Bursener as one of the witnesses of the prosecution to substantiate the murder plot charge. Mrs. Bursener, it is claimed, will testify that she frequently heard Mrs. Crawford say that she would marry Crawford, get his money, and later run away with Lump. The prosecution will seek to prove also by Mrs. Gertrude A. Painter, it is said, that there was a definite agreement to this plan existent between Mrs. Crawford and Lump.

The forces that are trying to saddle Mrs. Crawford with the murder charge are scoring heavily in the closely-allied civil suit. Heirs of Joshua B. Crawford, trying to break the will by which the widow received the bulk of the estate, charging undue influence, have produced a number of witnesses to swear to an antagonism between Crawford and Mrs. Mary B. Crawford.

One of the witnesses was Mrs. L. C. Dillingsley, who testified that Joshua B. Crawford said, time and again, that he would not marry the woman. This statement was elicited in the attempt to prove that Crawford was not rational, and probably was intoxicated, when he married Mrs. Crawford.

Drunkenness Is Charged.

Mrs. Dillingsley, who said she lived in the Crawford home on West Peachtree street before Joshua Crawford's death, told of instances of alleged cruelty on Mrs Crawford's part, directed particularly toward a Miss Scott. Mrs. Sallie Alexander, an old woman of Henry County, was another witness by whom it was sought to prove habitual drunkenness on Crawford's part.

Mrs. Crawford, released from the Tower on bail of $6,250, has remained in the seclusion of her home on West Peachtree street all week, steadfastly quiet and refusing all statements in the face of the accusations against her. She has said nothing regarding the case, except a simple denial of the charges.

Reporters seeing her were treated courteously and quietly, and Mrs. Crawford seemed not averse to talk to them freely. But in most of the talk the subject of the murder charge and the plot charge in which Lump's name appears was carefully skirted.

Mrs. Crawford is a large woman, of dignified appearance. Not one moment since her arrest Saturday night has her composure broken, even slightly. In the Tower she received the few persons who called on her, and during the visit did not exhibit a sign of perturbation.

Calls Charge "Awful Thing."

To reporters and to all her visitors, when she mentioned at all the subject of the murder charge, she referred to it as "this awful thing."

Mrs. Crawford finds staunch friends in her children and grandchildren, who visited her at the Tower, and were with her almost all the few hours she spent in jail, bringing her flowers, a savory meal, and other tokens of their love.

Mrs. Crawford's children are bitter in their speech against the nephews and neices of Joshua B. Crawford, who, they say, are persecuting their mother with extreme cruelty. Mrs. Crawford herself accused her enemies of cruelty and lack of feeling.

Mrs. Crawford met Joshua B. Crawford when she was in charge of a winter hotel in St. Augustine, wither Crawford went in search of health. It was there she met him, and there that she married him. At his death, there was a settlement of his estate, Mrs. Crawford taking hold of the affairs with a capable hand.

An agreement was signed, and the affairs of Joshua B. Crawford, deceased, seemed amicably settled. Then the litigation was sprung. In the first bill of complaint the heirs who contested the will charged Mrs. Crawford with poisoning her husband, and of exerting undue influence to procure a will in her favor. But it was not until three years later, two weeks ago, that an examination of the remains of Joshua B. Crawford to ascertain traces of poison was ordered. Upon the examination came the verdict of the physician that traces of poison were vident, and Mrs. Crawford was arrested.

With preliminary hearing waived, Mrs. Crawford's case is flatly up to the grand jury, which, without definite date of meeting, awaits the call of the Solicitor General. The body probably will be assembled next week.

Fortune in Gold Nuggets Awaits Heir

Wealth Will Revert to State of Kansas Unless Kin of Old Woman Appear.

HUTCHINSON, July 19.—There is a bag of gold nuggets and gold dust awaiting heirs that may go to the State of Kansas. These nuggets and the gold dust, along with some money and other personal property to the value of $10,000, are in the hands of former Sheriff G. M. Duckworth, administrator of the estate of Mrs. Ann M. Bernhert, who died a few days ago in Davenport, Iowa.

Some years ago when Mrs. Bernhert, who lived alone, was found to be of unsound mind, Dr. Duckworth was named as her guardian and she was taken to an asylum for treatment. In searching the house he found scattering personal property. It was found that much of it was gold nuggets and dust, saved, evidently, from some former mining experience, and hoarded away.

Baby Sips Hat Bleach; Dies from Poisoning

Mother, Bedridden from Appendicitis, Is Unable to Stop Child from Drinking Acid.

NEW YORK, July 19.—As a result of drinking a mixture of lye and oxalic acid, used by her father to clean an old straw hat, Dorothy E. Smith, 20 months old, died yesterday afternoon in St. Mary's Hospital, Jamaica. Her father is Leo Smith, of No. 47 Brooklyn avenue, Jamaica, an employee of the Long Island Railroad.

The child's mother is recovering from an operation for appendicitis. She and the baby were alone in the house yesterday when the child drank the mixture. She heard the baby's screams, but could not leave her bed, so she screamed, too, and neighbors who responded called a doctor.

RENO SINGS ITS SWAN SONG AS DIVORCE MECCA

Grand Rush of Colonists to Take Advantage of the Old Law Comes to an End.

RENO, July 19.—With such songs as "Meet a Friend From Your Home Town" and "At the Devil's Ball," sung by feminine entertainers from Metropolitan music halls, accompanied by high-class orchestras, the divorce colony celebrated the past week the beginning of the end of the Nevada quick divorce.

On the stroke of the midnight hour on Monday the curtain dropped upon one scene in Reno's notable divorce colony performance which has commanded the attention of the world for so long—that of the almost daily appearance of new faces upon the streets, as men and women, from plain country folk to elaborately gowned and bejeweled society beauties, arrived to begin their required six months' residence in the State and county, preparatory to the prospective divorce action.

Law Halts Colonists.

No more will incoming trains deposit these colonists and carloads of trunks, for the familiar song, "I'm on My Way to Reno," has been shelved by the action of the last Legislature, when it dealt the knock-out blow in its ultimatum that no divorce proceeding shall be instituted in the State of Nevada under the existing six-month residence law after December 21 next, thereby limiting the time in which newcomers could begin such residence period to Monday last.

Previous to July, 1909, the presence here for divorce of but an occasional person of prominence merely commanded attention to that individual, but it led to a method of publicity by an attorney which started the ball rolling, and it has never stopped rolling. Its greatest momentum is being witnessed now.

All Houses Are Thronged.

During the past month, and especially the week ending on Monday, the throng of newcomers has experienced great difficulty in securing such apartments as they might desire. All the hotels are crowded, as are the desirable rooming houses. Available cottages are almost as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth. In many cottages from four to six divorcees are living.

Some private boarding houses are housing as many as ten of the fair sex, and men. There are now scores of so-called "divorcees' nests" here. Every train the past fortnight has unloaded new arrivals, the preponderance of men and very young women, seemingly well to do and fashionable being noticeable. The proportion of men to women increased largely. Baby carriages and dogs played conspicuous parts.

Willing To Marry But Not to Apologize

Man Sued for Breach of Promise Says Hill Wed But Refuses to Beg Forgiveness.

ATCHISON, KANS., July 19.—Mary Falk and William Burke were engaged to be married. The date had been set, the guests had assembled, and everything was in readiness, but Burke did not appear. Chagrined and heartbroken, Miss Falk engaged an attorney and sued Burke for $25,000 as balm for her wounded feelings.

"It was all a mistake," said Burke. "I wanted and still want to marry Miss Falk. I was under the impression that under the rules of the Catholic Church the ceremony had to be performed by the pastor of the bride's church. I couldn't find him in time to perform the ceremony and naturally supposed the wedding was off for the time being."

Miss Falk accepted the explanation, but she insisted that Burke must apologize for not appearing for the wedding. Burke, however, insisted that she must apologize for suing him.

Boy Finds $35,500; Hides it from Police

Advertises That He Picked up Money and Declares He Will Return it to Owner.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS., July 19.—Brayton Gardner, 18 years old, who announced he had found $35,500 in a leather bag on the tracks of the Boston and Maine Railroad, to-night refused to tell the police where he put the money.

"I have hidden it in a safe place," said he, "and if someone claims it I will produce it immediately."

Gardner walked into the office of a local newspaper and inserted an advertisement, reading:

"Found, $35,500. Owner can have money by identifying it and satisfying Brayton Gardner."

Stolen Jewels Are Found Buried in Park

Last of $100,000 Loot Stolen by Employee of Firm Recovered After Confession.

NEW YORK, July 19.—The final confession of young William Beck, who stole $100,000 worth of jewelry from his employers, Udall & Ballou, was obtained yesterday. The last $2,800 of the loot was found by detectives. It was buried in Central Park.

Beck had insisted until yesterday that he had told all. But Inspector Faurot finally got him to reveal the hiding place. The police were told to enter the park at 110th street and Eighth avenue and count eighteen stone blocks in the wall to a spot where a small bush grew. Buried 6 inches they found nine diamond rings and a pair of cuff buttons.

Attending Funerals Hobby of Old Squaw

"Glass Eye," Noted for Lamentations at Obsequies, at Last Principal at Mortuary Ceremony.

KLAMATH FALLS, OREG., July 19.—"Glass Eye" is dead. She was an aged Indian woman, well known here since the settlement of this section. It was one of her hobbies to attend every funeral that she could, and on these occasions she posed as chief mourner by her excessive lamentations.

Her name has been forgotten by the whites, who only know her by the nickname, which is said to have been given her when young, because of the brightness of her eyes and not because of any abnormality in them.

She was about 75 years old, and is reported to have been the sister of "White Cindy," another noted aborigine.

Indian Girl Seeks Office in Oklahoma

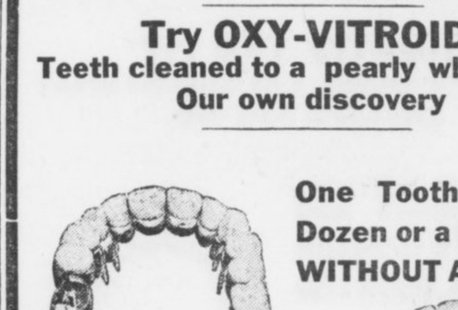
Educated Cherokee Business Woman Would Be State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections.

VINITA, OKLA., July 19.—Announcement by Miss Kate Barnard, State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections, that she will not be a candidate for re-election, brings into the race for the Democratic nomination a young Cherokee woman, Miss Pearl Holderman, of Northern Craig County, whose ability as an educated business woman has given her a wide acquaintance in Eastern Oklahoma.

Miss Holderman has large business responsibilities, and her experience and ability have made her more than a match for most men. Because of her father's impaired health she manages his cattle ranch, directing every detail, including the care of a herd of blooded cattle. This young Cherokee woman owns a thousand acres of land in her own name, all of which is in a high state of cultivation.

MOTHER OF TEN SUES; WEDDED TWENTY-ONE YEARS

DAYTON, WYO., July 19.—After living with David Krouse Towns for 21 years and bearing ten children of which he is the father, Mrs. Martha Ellen Towns has brought suit for divorce, asserting that her husband unjustly accused her of infidelity and that he had attempted to secure her incarceration in the State Insane Asylum, although realizing that she was sane.



Aged Oil Queen, Wife Of Youth, Ruled Sane

Young Spendthrift Husband Is Welcome to Fortune, She Says, on Leaving Asylum.

CHARLESTON, W. VA., July 19.—The courts and her children can not separate Mrs. Cynthia C. Sparks, known as West Virginia's "oil queen," and her young husband, Fred Sparks, and she is again free, after having been incarcerated in the West Virginia Hospital for Insane for ten days.

Further, the superintendent and the members of the State Board of Control have placed beyond question her sanity after a close observation, while she was under their supervision.

Mrs. Sparks is going to join her 26-year-old husband, who, it is alleged by the woman's children by her first husband, was rapidly dissipating her fortune of $2,000,000 by his extravagance and riotious living.

The old woman declared to-day that her young husband was welcome to the half of her fortune which she retained after having signed over the half to him.

Women Wear Bath Dresses Down Town

Startle Natives by Appearing in Ice Cream Parlor in Their Beach Attire.

WHEELING, W. VA., July 19.—Two buxon matrons and a miss about 19 years old created a sensation about dusk by walking through the streets of Warwood, north of this city, in bathing costumes. Unabashed by the attention they attracted, they entered an ice cream parlor, where they ordered ices, and after eating them walked to their homes.

The matter was brought to the attention of Town Marshal E. L. Pool, who immediately issued a warning that women appearing hereafter in such scant attire would subject themselves to arrest.

INDIANS, 102 AND 97, WILL VISIT FAIR DIRECTORS

MONTROSE, COLO., July 19.—The board of directors of the Western Slope Fair Association decided to bring 50 Ute Indians from the reservation in Utah to Montrose during the fair in September. The Indians will include Chief McCook, 97, and his sister, Chippeta, 102, who is the widow of Chief Ouray.

Naturalist Editor Has Forest Sanctum

Sets His Type in Shade of Hemlock and Lives in Wigwam all Winter.

WESTFIELD, MASS., July 19.—A unique editorial and printing plant is that known as "Seneca Wigwam, The Press in the Forest," located in the heart of the woods about three miles west of this place.

The sanctum is a typical Indian tepee, where the editor, Joseph C. Duport, an out-of-door enthusiast, prints, illustrates and publishes an original magazine called the Woronoco Valley Calumet.

In summer the editor sets his type in the shade of a hemlock, and in the winter or during inclement weather his work is done in the wigwam, which contains an up-to-date twentieth century printing press and equipment.

Policeman's Watch Stops Death Bullet

Hospital Steward Thinks Patrolman Burglar and Fires Six Shots at His Heart.

OAKLAND, CAL., July 19.—A watch in his vest pocket stopped a bullet which otherwise probably would have pierced the heart of Patrolman O'Hara last night. The shot was one of six fired by Roscoe Gray, steward of the Oakland College of Medicine, under the impression that O'Hara was a burglar. The other shots did not hit O'Hara. Gray nearly collapsed when he learned his mistake.

O'Hara was on his rounds when he noticed a door in the college building open. Trying to close it, he set off a burglar alarm and Gray opened fire in the dark.

Silver Wire Travels Through Two Arms

CHICO, CAL., July 19.—James Dupen, a Chico merchant, to-day submitted to an operation, in which a piece of silver wire, used in closing a wound on the left wrist in 1897, was extracted from the index finger of the right hand. The wire, which is one-half inch long, passed up one arm, across the chest and worked down the opposite arm, emerging at the finger.

Bee Sting on Neck Fatal to Farmer

Dies from Paralysis of Heart Fifteen Minutes After Insect Poison Enters System.

BRISTOL, PA., July 19.—John Pickering, a farmer of Woodbine, while engaged in his customary duties about the farm Saturday, was stung on the neck by a large bee and within fifteen minutes he was dead.

Dr. Heritage, of Langhorne, was summoned, but did not arrive in time to render aid. The doctor says death was the result of paralysis of the heart, caused by the bee sting.

FARMERS' UNION HOPE OF SOUTH, SAY ORGANIZERS IN GREAT GEORGIA CAMPAIGN

Charles S. Barrett and L. M. Rhodes, of Tennessee, Sweep Through the State With a Message to Planters to Check Enormous Crop Waste.

L. M. Rhodes, president of the Tennessee division and chairman of the national board of directors of the Farmers' Union, has just finished a flying trip through Georgia in company of Charles S. Barrett, national president of the Farmers' Union, and J. J. Brown, former Commissioner of Agriculture of Georgia. The following message to the farmers as delivered by Mr. Rhodes abounds in such truth and fact not generally known:

"The marvelous grandeur of the world's progress astounds and amazes us, yet the wonderful story would never have been written had it not been for the ever-faithful farmer.

"Agriculture is basic. Upon it rests cities, commerce and civilization. The people of the earth consume 60,000,000 tons of food annually. Five hundred and eighty-two million tons of it come from the farm. Human beings are clothed in the products of the farm from the time they are born until they embark for eternity. Yet ever since Grandfather Adam made the mistake that caused him to lose the family estate the farmer has been a failure in business.

Farmer Behind in Business.

"In business development of the United States in the last century the farmer has fallen behind. In the procession of modern business methods he has followed where he should have led.

"When we became a nation the farmer owned 90 per cent of the wealth. In 1850 our national wealth was $7,000,000,000 and the farmer owned $4,000,000,000, or four-sevenths.

"In 1913 our national wealth is estimated at $131,000,000,000, and the farmer owns $26,000,000,000. Our farm property is valued at nearly $40,000,000,000, but $14,000,000,000 is owned by other classes than farmers.

"The above figures show that farmers are not holding their own, for if they had kept pace with other vocations since 1850 they would now own $75,000,000,000 worth of wealth instead of $26,000,000,000. Their lack of business methods and failure to match conditions have cost them $49,000,000,000. This would buy all the farm property in the United States and have enough left to buy a half interest in all the railroads.

"In a score of years the farmers of this country have produced $135,000,000,000 worth of farm products, or enough to buy all the property in the United States. Yet this wonderful amount of wealth has not gone to the farmers. We have 10,000 men in this country who own an average of $10,000,000 each. And their combined wealth is $100,000,000,000. The other 99,990,000 people own $31,000,000,000. Of our 100,000,000, 60,000,000 are homeless.

"Twelve men control one-third of our wealth, and one man controls nearly one-tenth of the wealth of this the richest country in the world. At the rate we are going capital will own practically all our wealth in another generation.

"Sixty-three land companies and rich individuals own an area equal to Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama and North and South Carolina.

"Liberty can not long exist in a country where the tendency is to confine the wealth to a few hands, for he who controls a nation's money controls its people.

Union Is Educational.

"Knowing that our liberty was bought with holy blood and sacred tears, and seeing that we must organize and change our present methods or surrender, we organized the Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America. Believing that a lack of practical knowledge is man's greatest enemy, we placed 'education' as the first word in our name. And knowing that a people are never strong when they are wrong, we selected as our motto: 'Equity, Justice and the Golden Rule.' Our organization has steadily grown, until now it reaches from coast to coast, and north, south, east and west are terms of direction to indicate its magnitude. In one decade it has grown until it is winged by Canada and Mexico, backgrounded by the Atlantic and footlighted by the Pacific.

"The 12,000,000 farmers of this country are laboring under an indebtedness of $6,000,000,000. On this amount, counting commissions and renewal charges, they are paying an annual interest of 8 1-2 per cent, or $510,000,000, while the business men and manufacturers pay an average of 5 per cent interest, or $300,000,000, on $6,000,000,000. This $210,000,000 excess interest paid by the farmers would pay off our farm indebtedness in 28 years. Co-operative efforts and rural credits would right these wrongs. So, let us continue to discourage this present system until it has passed into history and is only remembered in the misty back yonder.

"Distribution being one of our greatest problems, our second declaration of purposes is to assist our members in buying and selling. The Federal Government has spent $100,000,000 in the last ten years, teaching us how to produce, and not a cent to teach us how to market.

"The real reason of the high cost of living is not because the farmer produces an inadequate amount of products or gets too much for what he grows, but it is that there are too many toll gates between the field of production and the table of consumption.

"As long as we continue our present methods we will build up the towns and cities at the expense of the rural districts. The consuming public pays $13,000,000,000 for what the farmer parts with for $6,000,000,000. The farmer gets 44 cents and the distributor gets 56 cents of each dollar. If there is a practical workable way to stop this plundering of the producing and consuming masses, and do away with this stupendous waste, it should be done. Surely no one would oppose the change, except those who think the jeweled hand of greed should be licensed to pick the threadbare pockets of those who toil.

Expense Is Unavoidable.

"We all agree that there is an unavoidable expense in the distribution of farm products. But let us make what seems to us a reasonable division of the $13,000,000,000 consumers other than farmers pay for farm products each year.

Give the wholesaler and jobber $1,000,000,000, the transportation companies $1,000,000,000, the retailer $1,500,000,000; then throw in $500,000,000 for all possible misallowance, and we have $9,000,000,000, which is $3,000,000,000 more than the farmer gets. This amount falls into the waste basket of speculation.

"If it were divided between the producer and consumer it would clothe the naked, feed the hungry and educate the illiterate, instead of breeding millionaires, paupers, anarchists and suicides. If the Farmers' Union fills its mission, it will not be long until a less portion of the laborers' toll will be turned in at the toll gate of the palace and a great portion will find its way through the door of the cottage, and help to lift the humble tenement to the comfort, dignity and luxury of a home.

"Within the next decade the farmers of this country will produce enough to load 260,000,000 freight cars, and its value will approximate $100,000,000,000. If property handled this should double the farmer's wealth. But producing is not all of farming. We cannot prosper unless we can control prices; we cannot control prices unless we co-operate; we cannot co-operate unless we organize. The farmer must keep his pace with the organized industries of the age, or verily he will have his reward."

Mr. Rhodes then spoke in detail of the work the Farmers' Union had done, its aims, its objects, its hopes, and the effect was so marked that there were responses on every hand by farmers who heard him, and the beginning of the 75,000 membership in Georgia was inaugurated, and the culmination will be a certainty if President Barrett and Mr. Rhodes put in a few weeks of organization.

Edna May Finds a New Love Will Not Quit Husband, Though Both Enamored of Race Horses

Mrs. Oscar Lewisohn, formerly Edna May, who denies she will be separated from wealthy husband.

Former "Belle of New York" Says Report of Separation From Oscar Lewisohn Is Silly.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Edna May Lewisohn and Oscar Lewisohn, her wealthy husband, both admit having new loves, and for that reason will break up housekeeping, but they will not separate, as has been reported, declares the former belle of New York.

The reason that there will be no divorce court proceedings is that they both have the same love and it interferes no whit with their connubial felicity. According to Mrs. Lewisohn both have become madly infatuated with horse racing, and to keep in close touch with their stable they will give up their home, Cranbourne Manor.

"Both my husband and myself have become very keen on racing," said Mrs. Lewisohn, after denying the reported separation, "and we are trying to find a place near Newmarket, where he has ten horses in training. He is at present in Germany with his brother, but on his return we probably will rent our London house.

"Mr. Lewisohn has just taken up racing this year and has been remarkably successful for a novice campaigner. If his horses come up to expectations, he plans to increase his stable until he has one of the largest strings of thoroughbreds in England or the Continent. As for any separation, that is simply silly. We were never happier."

WRITERS MAKE BEST DIPLOMATS DECLARES PAGE

New Ambassador to Italy, Author of Many Stories, Leaves Himself Out of Discussion.

YORK HARBOR, ME., July 19.—Are authors better qualified to fill diplomatic posts than others? The appointment of Thomas Nelson Page as Ambassador to Italy brings this subject to the fore, coupled with the appointments made by President Wilson.

The greatest diplomats America boasts were men of letters. Benjamin Franklin, John Hay, Nathaniel Hawthorne, James Russell Lowell, William Dean Howell furnish a distinguished list.

Mr. Page, who is 60, is modesty personified. He has been reporter, lawyer, writer, and has succeeded in all.

Mr. Page asked if he could explain as an author what special qualifications a man of letters possesses to perform the duties of Ambassador, consented to speak, leaving his own case out of the discussion. Said he:

"A man of letters is better fitted to do anything better than anyone else. His work has broadened his horizon; if it hadn't we might as well do away with letters.

Must Know Problems.

"The author must necessarily be conversant with the economic and governmental problems of the day.

"I think the greatest good authors in general have alone is to interpret the spirit of the section about which they write. There can be no doubt there is a better feeling now between the North and the South than there was before the Spanish-American war. This, I believe, is because of writers.

"Every part of the world is being more properly set before another part by the authors.

"The President has had a thorough training. Besides the college education, he has had associations with the North and the South, and he is conversant with the economic and governmental problems. He is a man of strong character and has been deservedly selected by the people to hold their most important office.

"I met Walter Page prior to his departure for his London post and gave him a dinner. His whole heart was set upon the desire to 'make good.'"

Qualifications of Diplomat.

"What is your idea of the qualifications a good diplomat possesses?" he was asked.

"Devotion to his duty is perhaps the first and most important," he replied. "Then comes devotion to your country, application to your duty and a desire to bring your country and the country to which you have been sent closer together.

"Of course, since the cable came into use foreign posts are brought closer to the State Department at Washington, and it must be a great comfort to an Ambassador to feel that at any time he may seek aid from Washington.

"I believe Charles Francis Adams was the last foreign ambassador to be thrown upon his own resources, and that was because the cable was cut.

"Rome is indeed a charming post. I believe it is the most romantic city in the world. I am sure I shall like it."

CHANGS, ON WAY HOME, CLING TO YANKEE FRILLS

Wife and Children of Chinese Minister Sail Dressed in Latest American Fashions.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—After more than three years in Washington with her husband, Minister Chang, Mme. Chang is returning to the Orient. She is accompanied by two daughters, a son, Henry K. Chang; a little daughter-in-law and a tiny grandchild. During her residence in America Mme. Chang has changed her ideas about many things, and about others she maintains the old Chinese beliefs.

The two young daughters, Miss Alice and Miss Lillie Chang, have been attending school in Washington for two years, and with the progress of their education have abandoned their picturesque nature clothes for American garb.

Whether they will adopt the clothes of their native country on their return remains to be seen. Miss Alice Chang, who spoke for the party at the St. Francis before they sailed on the Manchuria, said:

"It all depends on what is in fashion in China.

Favor American Fashions.

"If we find American clothes fashionable out there, we shall wear them. We adopted them when we entered Gunnison Hall, our Washington school These are more convenient when traveling," she added, pointing to a pale blue silk crepe costume with the latest frills and furbelows. "When we wear our other clothes, people stare so, and sometimes they laugh. They aren't used to them in Washington."

The question of recent changes in China is of especial interest to Mme. Chang and her daughters.

The idea that women may vote in China and that the door of opportunity is opening for them daily there has caused the Chinese women to be thoughtful.

"I don't know about this voting," said Mme. Chang, through her daughter. "I don't believe very much in it."

"Only for some women," broke in one daughter.

Education Qualification.

"I would make an educational qualification," said Miss Lillie. "Not every woman ought to vote."

"Home is the place for women," said Mme. Chang, true to her country's traditions and centuries of training. "A woman ought to do housekeeping, to stay at home and to have children."

Mme. Chang and the daughters are opposed to the Western idea of a woman earning her own living. They believe she should want to stay at home to be cared for, even if she has to do without some of the extras which her own money can secure.

"Women in China probably never will reach that stage," said Mme. Chang. "There will be fewer opportunities for them to enter professional and business fields."

College is a goal which is being aspired to by the two daughters, although they are not sure yet what particular lines they want to pursue. "We can go if we want to, you know," said Miss Alice. "Our people believe in college for girls if they want it."

Siwash Has First And Only Car Ride

Chief Seattle's Cousin Says He Is Now Ready to Go to Happy Hunting Ground.

SEATTLE, July 19.—Chief Seattle's first cousin, "Port Angeles Bob," age unknown, and who has lived in the outskirts of Port Angeles since the earliest settlers can remember, set foot in Seattle the other day, took his first ride on a street car, saw some moving pictures, paid homage to the statue of Chief Seattle, and declared his resolve to return home and remain contented there until he goes to the happy hunting grounds.

Sweetheart False; Indian Girl Ends Life

Ute Maid Leaps From Rock of Legendary Fame When She Finds Love Faithless.

MEEKER, COLO., July 19.—Zanaida, niece of Chief Whispering Pine, of the Ute reservation, and a girl of unusual charm committed suicide by leaping from Suicide Rock, a stone monument of legendary fame which rears its head at the foot of the reservation and has been the means of many grim tragedies by heartbroken maidens of the Ute nation.

Zanaida was courted by many of the young braves. She fell in love with the handsomest man and the day was set for the ceremony. Elk Tooth suddenly deserted her for another girl of the tribe, and, heartbroken, Zanaida sought surcease in death.

HARD THICK CRUST COVERED BOY'S HEAD

Cracked with Least Pressure, Causing Discharge. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In One Week Entirely Cured.

Bolton, Ga. — "My little boy's head was covered with a hard thick crust which cracked with the least pressure causing a discharge of bloody corruption which was so offensive that I could hardly hold him. He was very cross. Some called it milk crust, another running tetter and another eczema.

"After trying several patent medicines I decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using the sample I purchased some Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. After using Cuticura Soap and Ointment three days I was able to remove all the crust and in one week he was entirely cured. Cuticura Soap and Ointment also cured my baby of an ulcerated sore behind her ear and now we think we cannot keep house without them." (Signed) Mrs. Charles Poss, Nov. 5, 1912.

The regular use of Cuticura Soap for toilet and bath not only tends to preserve, purify and beautify the skin, scalp, hair and hands, but assists in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, yellow, oily, mothy and other unwholesome conditions of the skin. Cuticura Soap (25c.) and Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

LATEST, LIVELIEST NEWS OF FLORIDA

SEEKING CUTS IN EVERGLADES ASSESSMENTS

Dade County Commissioners to Hear Complaints of Land Companies on Monday.

JACKSONVILLE, July 19.—When the Dade County Commissioners meet Monday to begin the work of equalizing the taxes of the county, the representatives of the Everglade Land Companies in Dade County will be present to enter a protest against the present assessment of the lands held by them.

A similar case was decided by Judge Call in the Federal Court here last week, but J. M. Cobb, vice president of the Everglade Sugar and Land Company, declared that this decision would not affect the Dade County companies. Judge Call ruled against the Palm Beach companies who were fighting for a reduction in the valuation of $3 per acre. However, the Dade County companies do not believe they will be bound by this ruling, as their property is assessed at $6 per acre and is similar to that owned by the Palm Beach companies.

The County Commissioners are expecting to equalize the 1913 taxes Monday, and hundreds of taxpayers will be present to protest against present assessments. The Everglade Sugar and Land Company will be the largest landowner represented. The company has employed several of the best lawyers in Miami and expects to make a hard fight for tax reduction.

Trammell Apologizes For Ignoring Militia

But Officers Maintain Governor. Neglected Visiting Camp to Curry Political Favor.

JACKSONVILLE, July 19.—Governor Parw Trammell has sent a telegram to a newspaer here saying he had not intentionally meant to snub the National Guard of Florida by failure to visit the camp at Black Point last week. He says he was in Jacksonville on important matters of State and regrets that he could not visit the encampment.

Militia officers here, however, insist the Governor's failure to visit the camp can not be construed as anything but an intentional slight, as he is the first Governor who has failed to show his interest in the military organization of the State. They contend the Governor's failure to visit camp was due to a desire to currp political favor with a certain element that has no use for citizen soldiers. Incidentally, they say, the Governor would like to go to the United States Senate.

MANY LAWYERS APPEAR BEFORE PARDONS BOARD

TALLAHASSEE, July 19.—The Pardon Board was in session several days this yweek considering an unusuall large docket of applications for pardons.

Among the attorneys appearing to represent various apliCants were R. V. Long and A. Z. Adkins, of Starke; W. W. Clark of Milton, Clinton Price, Amos Lewis and Ellis Davis of Marianna, I. L. Wells of Panama City.

NEGRO WHO SLEW FLORIDA DEPUTY HELD IN GEORGIA

TALLAHASSEE, July 18.—It is reported that an officer at Arlington, Ga., caught the negro, George Washington, who killed Deputy Sheriff Parish at Blountstown, two or three weeks ago, and for whose arrest a reward of $1,000 was offered. The negro was not taken to Blountstown, but was kept in the Bainbridge, Ga., jail.

Mr. Parish was a respected young man in his town and county, the citizens of which are wrought up over the killing. One negro who was in the house at the time of the killing, or who assisted the murderer to get away, has been lynched.

FINE OUTING PLANNED FOR TALLAHASSEE BOY SCOUTS

TALLAHASSEE, July 19—Scout Commissioner F. M. Hudson and Scoutmaster Ned Chesley are planning a week's outing at St. George's Island for the local Boy Scouts.

Steinhusen's Death Mystery Is Unsolved

Woman in Case of Tallahassee Man. Sheriff Takes Up Trail.

TALLAHASSEE, July 19.—The death or murder of Willie Steinhusen, better known as Willie McDougald, is still a mystery.

A little ray of light was thrown on the case to-day when the statement came to the Sheriffs office that Steinhusen, in company with a woman named Kansay Stephens or May Coleman, was seen to get off the train at the G., F. and A. crossing Sunday night after spending the day at Lanark. Steinhusen is known to have left Helen Saturday night, walking to Tallahassee.

Sheriff Houston has arrived from Atlanta, and assisted by deputies is following up every thread of information. There is much interest manifested in the case.

Arcadia Host Entertains Girls Who Are Spending Summer at Gainesville, Ga.

GAINESVILLE, GA., July 19.—Mrs. E. A. Thomas, of Arcadia, Fla., was hostess at a dinner party at White Sulphur Springs Tuesday. With her daughters, Misses Nelle and Gladys Thomas, she is summering in Gainesville at Brenau.

The guests went out from Brenau in autos to the White Sulphur Springs Hotel. The table was decorated with pink roses and ferns. There were hand-painted cards.

In the party were Misses Helen Atkisson, Atlanta; Winnie Thomas, R. B. Atkisson and Lucile Atkisson, Lake City, Fla.; Evelyn and Katherine Cowdery, Lakeland, Fla.; Inez Carson, Kissimmee, Fla., and Ida Belle Boring, of Gainesville, and Messrs. Charley Estes, Henry Estes, George Barnwell, Norman McNeal, Price Charters, Howard Davie, John Woodcock, Roy Ramseur, Frank McCoy and Ed Dunlap, of Gainesville, and Major Nickles, of Riverside.

Playground Question Rests With Militia

Savannah Volunteer Guards and Georgia Hussars Must Vote to Give Land for Purpose.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Whether the Park Extension will be converted into a model playground and athletic park has not been finally determined. The Savannah Volunteer Guards and the Georgia Hussars, the two military organizations which have not yet given their consent and approval to the plan, have not taken action in regard to the matter.

No special meeting of the Hussars has been held, owing to the absence from the city of Captain Frank P. McIntyre. The Guards have discussed the matter, but owing to the fact that no definite proposition has been put up to them, they have neither approved nor disapproved the plan.

The extension is under the control of the military and the city jointly, and has been set aside as a drill ground.

Court Calls Both of Boy's Parents Unfit

Serious Charges Are Made Against Proprietor of Inlet Hotel at Tybee and His Wife.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—So serious are the charges and counter-charges in the alimony case of Mrs. Annia Jones against W. A. Jones, proprietor of the Inlet Hotel at Tybee, that Judge Walter G. Charlton has stated from the bench in the Superior Court that he doesn't consider either the father or the mother fit to have the custody of their four-year-old son.

Witneses testified to alleged misconduct of Mrs. Jones during the absence of her husband, who is an engineer on the Tybee Branch of the Central of Georgia Railroad and obliged to spend a portion of his time in the city. Other witneses testified to gross neglect and mistreatment of Mrs. Jones on the part of her husband.

Speer Investigator Again in Savannah

Lewis Arrival Surprise, as It Was Thought That His Work Had Been Completed.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Inspector Lewis, of the Department of Justice, who has for several weeks been assigned to the task of investigating the record of Judge Emory Speer, of the Southern District of Georgia, appeared again in Savannah this week.

The reappearance of the inspector was something of a surprise, as it was generally understood that he had completed his work here and had gone to his summer quarters on the Great Lakes.

FIRST DISTRICT DOCTORS TO MEET IN SAVANNAH

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Physicians from all over the First Congressional District will assemble in Savannah Monday for the midsummer meeting of the District Medical Society.

An interesting program has been arranged. Mayor Richard J. Davant will welcome the physicians to Savannah.

In the afternoon the doctors will go to Tybee for a dip in the surf, and at night they will enjoy a banquet.

SCOFIELD IN RACE FOR STATE'S ATTORNEY OFFICE

TALLAHASSEE, July 19.—George W. Scofield, of Inverness, who was a visitor here this week, stated that he was a candidate for State Attorney in his circuit, and was here in the interest of his candidacy.

It is understood that the present State Attorney will resign in a few days, and his successor will have to be named by the Governor.

FLORIDA CITIES BEGIN FIGHT FOR WATERWAY AID

Daytona and New Smyrna to Send Delegation to Washington to Urge Federal Appropriation.

JACKSONVILLE, July 19.—Perhaps no State in the Union is making a harder fight for waterway appropriations than Florida. Jacksonville has taken the lead for years in asking for money for this purpose, with Tampa and Pensacola close seconds. However, the smaller cities of the State also have been active, and many good results have been obtained.

For years efforts have been made to induce the Government to open pj and improve Mosquito Inlet for commerce. This body of water has been passed over by one board after another until the citizens of Daytona and New Smyrna have decided that a committee be sent to Washington to make a personal appeal. At the last meeting of the Board of Trade of Daytona a letter was read from the New Smyrna board asking that the two organizations unite in securing money from the two cities to pay the expenses of a committee to be sent to Washington to appear before the Board of Army Engineers.

The city Councilmen of these two cities have been asked to contribute to the expenses of this committee, which is to be named by the Central Florida Waterways Association. The city fathers are reminded of the fact that the county officials contributed $200 to the cause and that they should be as liberal. Figures are also given to show the need of improvements which can only be made by the United States Government.

Savannah to Rush Work on Incinerator

Destructor Company Already Has Force of Men at Work Laying Foundation of Plant.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—No time is to be lost in building the refuse incinerating plant. Work of laying the foundation has already commenced. The details of the contract between the Destructor Company and the city have been agreed upon and the contract signed.

A force of men engaged by the Destructor Company has started right in on the foundation work. The man who is to direct the work for the company will arrive in a few days. Chief Engineer E. R. Conant will have general supervision of the work. The plant is to cover an area 100 by 60 feet.

Temptations of Men Drive Girl to Poison

Statesboro Girl Takes Iodine in Front of Casino at Thunderbolt—Act Long Contemplated.

SAVANNAH, GA., July 19.—Driven to desperation by temptations put in her path by men is the reason given by Miss Tynie Boylston, 18 years old, for her attempted suicide by drinking iodine on the grounds in front of the Casino, Thunderbolt, several nights ago. The girl is now entirely recovered and repentant. Letters left by the girl, who came here recently from Statesboro, indicate that she contemplated the deed for days before the actual attempt was made.

Girl Bride Sees Husband Convicted

R. L. English Is Found Guilty of Stealing Wire from Savannah Electric Company.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—With his pretty wife, not yet out of her teens, sitting in the courtroom, R. L. English has been tried and convicted in the City Court of the larceny of copper wire from the Savannah Electric Company. Mrs. English, hardly more than a girl, clad in a pink summer dress and wearin a big leghorn hat with a wreath of red roses, sat calmly through the trying ordeal. Mrs. English maintains that her husband is innocent of any intentional wrongdoing.

Count in Savannah Works as Cobbler

Russian Banished In Political Activity Speaks Five Languages and Claims Noble Title.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Banished from the land of his nativity because he took active part in a political agitation for a constitutional form of government, Marius DeSopodzko, of Lithuania, Russia, who exhibits papers and credentials, which he says are his claims to the title of count and the estates of a rich and noble family, has been working in Savannah for the last two weeks, endeavoring to learn the trade of a cobbler. The man came to Savannah from Cuba. He speaks five languages.

EARLY REPORT WANTED ON SAVANNAH AFFAIRS

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Mayor Richard J. Davant has written to the general office in New Orleans, of the auditing company which recently checked up the books and affairs of the city government in Savannah requesting that a full and complete report on the result of these investigations be rendered at the earliest possible moment. The Mayor thinks that the matter of installing a new system to keep track of the affairs of the municipal government has been hanging fire long enough.

SECRETARY OF TRADE BODY TO GO TO LONDON

H. H. Richardson Resigns Jacksonville Position to Represent Development Association.

JACKSONVILLE, July 18.—H. H. Richardson, secretary of the Jacksonville Board of Trade, resigned to become London representative for the Southern Settlement and Development Association.

Mr. Richardson is a native of England, but has lived in Florida for 26 years. He has been prominently connected with public affairs for the past twenty years. For five years he has been secretary of the local trade body and has traveled all over the United States in the interests of the board in securing national conventions for this city.

Furniture Replevin May Disrupt Club

Dealer Sues for 4,000, Takes Steps To Despoil Quarters, and Members Are Distressed.

JACKSONVILLE, July 19.—Members of the Commercial Club, which is composed of some of the leading business and professional men of the city, face the prospect of eating their meals from the mantelpiece and playing billiards on the polished parlor floor of their handsome club house since John A. Cunningham, a furniture dealer, has brought suit for $4,000 damages against the club and replevined every stick of furniture in the building to the value of $1,000.

News that suit had been entered in the Circuit Court came as a shock to the club men of Jacksonville and the officers are sending out "S. O. S." signals for help.

Wasp Sting Enables Cripple to Walk

Regains Use of Legs After 38 Years on Crutches When Insect Invades Bed.

ST. LOUIS, July 19.—Charles Wightman, deputy county clerk at Clayton, told a reporter how he had just been able to walk without crutches for the first time in 38 of the 42 years of his life. He fell when he was 4 and injured both legs permanently.

He said that a neighbor had told him a snake story just before he went to bed.

He thought how comfortable it was to live in a country where one could sleep in peace instead of in one of those countries where he had heard snakes sometimes creep in and share one's bed.

He thrust his right leg deeper under the covers. Then something that stung like a hot needle pierced his ankle. "I sprang out of bed and ran and stumbled twelve feet across the room," he said. "It was the first time I had taken so many steps unassisted since I was a baby."

"And was it really a snake?" he was asked. "No; it was a wasp." And he showed the ankle where the sting had swollen it.

Indian Papoose Is Raised by Soldiers

Full-Blooded Modoc, Back at Old Home, Tells Romantic Story of Early Life.

KLAMATH FALLS, July 19.—Kit Carson, a full-blood Modoc, visited his native land a few days ago for the first time since his babyhood.

The story of the life of Carson is unique. In 1852 a detachment of Government troops was sent to the Klamath country to quiet reported uprisings among the Indians. A large band of Indians had established a village on the shore of the lake. When the Indians caught sight of the soldiers they made a hasty departure.

Kit Carson, who was then about a year old, was left behind by his frightened mother. It was difficult for the soldiers to determine what to do with the child. Finally a soldier named Woods asked that he be permitted to adopt the boy. He gave the little fellow the name of Kit Carson and found him a temporary home with a Spanish family at Yreka.

Wagons Must Have Lights at Both Ends

Washington State Will Enforce Strict Vehicle Law—All Classes Affected.

SEATTLE, July 19.—On and after August 1 every vehicle in this State must be provided with both rear and front lights in case night travel is necessary. Automobiles, wagons, buggies and cycles must carry lights so that travelers in front or behind may see.

Farmers as well as city residents are affected, and the old familiar farm wagon will be altered by a lantern hung from the rear axle and a spotlight fastened to the spring seat. The law was necessary because of the increasing traffic at night through sections where roads are narrow and grades dangerous.

Mayor's Business Manager Is Fined

Head of Tampa Times Tried for Violating Sanitary Regulations of City.

TAMPA, July 19.—Charles C. Woodward, business manager of The Times, which is owned by Mayor McKay, was held guilty in Police Court of a technical violation of the sanitary laws and fined $1.

Woodward was charged with being responsible for watermelon rinds thrown on a lot next to The Times office and controlled by it. He denied that he or the Mayor threw out the rinds, saying that they must have come from a fruit stand next door.

Jacksonville Greeks Send $500 to Queen

Fund Is Being Raised for Orphans of Soldiers Slain in War With Bulgars.

JACKSONVILLE, July 19.—Greeks of this city raised $500 in 36 hours to add to a fund being collected by the Queen of Greece to aid the orphaned children of soldiers killed in Macedonia during the war with Bulgaria. Part of the money will be expended in caring for the wounded and providing for the needs of any patriots who may be suffering as the result of the war.

The money was collected here by James S. Catches and James Boulas. It will be forwarded through a Greek newspaper in New York.

Woman Sues to Save Parrot From Cursing

Tells Court That Bird Is Under Baneful Influences Now as Property of Saloon Man.

ALTON, ILL., July 19.—Mrs. Geneva Littlehage has applied to Justice Daniel Gorman for a replevin writ to obtain possession of a parrot to save him from the baneful influences of a saloon.

"The bird never swore once in his life, and I can't bear the thought of his learning to curse," she told the Justice. "You ought to help along the cause by not charging me anything for the papers."

Mrs. Littlehage said while coming from Kansas City to Alton she employed a porter to carry the cage. She said he ran off with the parrot and when she next heard of it the bird had been sold to a saloon man for $10. The proprietor of the saloon refused, it is said, to give it to the owner.

Noble Ex-Convict Becomes Minister

Leonard Mordaunt Runs Gamut of Life From British Society to California Prison.

LOS ANGELES, July 19.—Leonard Mordaunt, ex-convict, scion of a noble English family, and better known in the role of a prison-reform worker, was ordained to the ministry of the Free Methodist Church by Bishops Jones and Seliew at the close of the annual conference which has been going on in the secluded aisles of Mineral Park.

During twenty years he has ranged from the welcome member of exclusive circles of European society to the lowest grade of convict. He became a convert and decided to dedicate the remaining years of his existence to the service of God and humanity.

Minnesota Seeks Elk for Big Preserve

Section Is Natural Home of Animal, and State Asks Herd From Yellowstone.

ST. PAUL, July 19.—Fifty elk from the Yellowstone National Park, if they can be obtained, will be turned loose in Minnesota in the Superior forest and game reserve, which lies along the Canadian boundary line north of Lake Superior.

The territory is the natural home of the elk, and together with the adjoining national reserve covers more than 1,000,000 acres. There are no elk in either reserve now. It is estimated that the annual increase in the herd will be 50 per cent. This is the increase noted in the Yellowstone Park.

Bold Amazon Shoves Auto Out of Her Way

Worcester, Mass., Woman Merely Bruises Her Finger When She Pushes Car from Path.

WORCESTER, MASS., July 19.—Agnes Olsen, 30, known far and wide as "the Amazon," is none the worse today, save for a sore finger, as a result of her stopping a touring car on Main street, and pushing it back out of her way. The machine was unharmed.

Walter Shea, chauffeur of the touring car, was startled to see a woman walk in front of the machine as he was passing City Hall. His horror turned to amazement when she turned as he ground on his brakes, calmly grasped the car by the hood, and not only stopped its menacing approach, but pushed it back a foot.

500 FARMERS AT COLLEGE TO HEAR SOIL LECTURE

CHAMPAIGN, ILL., July 19.—Kankakee farmers, 500 strong, visited the college of agriculture of the University of Illinois. Professor J. C. Coller, "soil director" for the county, was in charge of the excursion, which came on a special train.

Dr. C. G. Hopkins lectured on soil and fertility, and afterward the university farm was inspected. Eighty women in the party inspected the domestic science department. Luncheon was served by "co-eds."

EXPRESS CLAIM OFFICES TO BE CONSOLIDATED

Savannah To Be Headquarters of Florida, Georgia and Southeastern Divisions of Company.

SAVANNAH, July 19.—Consolidated claim offices of three divisions of the Southern Express Company will be located in Savannah after August 1, in pursuance of an order promulgated from the general headquarters of the concern several days ago, official notice of which has just been received here. Simultaneously general claim offices will be opened in Richmond and Chattanooga.

Claim departments, distinct and separate from the other branches of the company's business, will be an entirely new thing with this big corporation. W. K. Weaver, of Savannah, chief clerk in the office of Division Superintendent C. C. Wolfe, will be in charge of the consolidated claims office here.

Heretofore it has been the practice of the company to have small claims departments in the offices of each division superintendent, and with him as the chief claim agent.

The offices in Savannah will bring about the consolidation of the claims department of the Florida, the Georgia and the Southeastern divisions of the company. The headquarters of the Florida division have been in Jacksonville, while those of the Southeastern division have been in Atlanta. The Georgia division headquarters have always been in Savannah.

The consolidation will bring 42 new employees of the company to this city. About 25 of these will come from Atlanta, while the others will be transferred from Jacksonville.

The establishment of the claim office at Richmond will embrace the offices now at Wilmington, N. C.; Charlotte and Norfolk. The Chattanooga office will embrace all of the Western division of the company.

Pawns Gold Teeth He Didn't Chew With

Kansan Says He Could Masticate on Other Side and Oakes Crowns to Loan Agent.

KANSAS CITY, July 19.—"I don't need these teeth to chew with and they're loose, anyway," an old man said at the municipal pawnshop, pulling seven gold crowns out of his mouth and laying them on the counter.

"These teeth are just a losing investment as long as I do all my chewing on the other side, anyway. I might as well be getting something on them. Can you make me a loan?"

Ralph Perry, manager of the pawnshop, gave the man $1.75 on his gold bicuspids and molars.

"When the ones on the other side get loose, I'll be back after these," the man promised. "My dentist said there was gold enough in the bunch so he could trade me a set of false teeth for 'em as soon as the crowns all wore out and got loose."

Race Restrictions In Hotels Illegal

New York Attorney General Writes Opinion That They Violate New Civil Rights Bill.

ALBANY, N. Y., July 19.—There must be no discrimination because of race, creed or color at any public resort, place of amusement or of public accommodation, under the amended civil rights law which takes effect September 1, 1913.

The attention of Attorney General Carmody has been called to the fact that circulars are being issued by some health resorts in the State, in which is the announcement that the places are not open to certain races.

In a statement to-day Mr. Carmody reviews the statute and declares that such notices will be prohibited.

CHILDREN'S BUREAU WANTS CITIES TO CARE FOR BABIES

ROCKFORD, ILL., July 19.—Miss Julia C. Lathrop, head of the National Children's Bureau, has returned to the home of her birth and childhood to espouse the cause of the nation's babies and to appeal to the executives of Illinois cities to join in the movement of a broadening municipal protection for child growth.

Miss Lathrop renewed her demand for a rigid birth registration law and referred to the progress being made in that direction.

For Milady's Wardrobe

By MME. HAUTE MONDE.

THE newest shirts to wear with the eponge skirts are those in pique. The new pique is only a distant relative to the stiff pique of other years, as it is delightfully soft and supple. The shirt is masculine in cut, with the exception of the neck, which is invariably finished by one of the becoming rolling collars which owe their origin to the days of Marie Stuart. The correct finishing touches are added when a sash of plaid ribbon and a cravat to match are adjusted. No matter how severe the skirt and shirtwaist may be, the sash is sure to give the feminine touch.

* * *

The all-black hat is the smart headgear of the hour, regardless of the shape, and it is a practical choice for the beach. A black hat does not look quite as summery or light as an all-white hat, but the sun can not damage it as it can one of colored straw, or even one of the natural tone straw, which may become actually sunburnt. There is a fad for trimming some of the black hats with blue ribbon bows, and a few of the bolder spirits among the fashion leaders are appearing in brown straw hats. When the latter are worn with brown shoes and stockings and a sash of brown moire or tulle, the effect is really artistic.

* * *

Separate skirts of cotton eponge have had a tremendous sale, and many of the well-dressed girls at Newport and Tuxedo are wearing them to the exclusion of linen or the durable cotton corduroy, which is becoming very common these days. The two-piece model preserves the straight, narrow silhouette, but does not launder as well as the gored skirt, which, when properly cut, should not sag after washing. These skirts button over the left hip and are slightly gathered into a belt in the back, which fastens with a buckle.

* * *

White serge, while not so serviceable for rough usage as tub stuffs or mixed tweeds, is altogether charming for outing wear provided one can keep it clean, and there are pretty ready-made suits, one-piece frocks and separate skirts of white serge offered at prices so reasonable that it does not seem extravagant to have two or three things of the kind, and so be able to spare one easily during its trip to the cleaners.

* * *

All petticoats are as thin and soft as possible, without being actually transparent—unless the wearer stands in a strong sunlight. Then sometimes the effect is rather startling. The petticoat now is exquisitely fitted, and is as narrow as possible, having a flounce of fine machine embroidery at the foot. Unless intended for wear with a sheer frock, the petticoat does not reach below the top of the buttoned boot.

* * *

Flesh-tinted linings in yokes have become such a frenzy with feminine folk that the craze has spread even to lingerie. The latest nightgown is of thin batiste, with a lace yoke lined with flesh-tinted net. This yoke reaches to below the arms, and, instead of being attached to the gown under a ribbon beading, a garland of tiny, pale pink roses covers the seam. The short lace sleeves are also looped up with pink silk roses.

* * *

Sweaters show more variety than they once did. One may have them any length from hip length to full length and in many shapes. The Bulgarian lines are also in evidence among the new sweaters this season, the wide belt being usually of some contrasting color with cuffs and collar to match.

* * *

Jet ornaments are popular on light summer frocks. The lighter the frock the heavier the ornament. One, made of seven octagonal pieces of cut jet, the center one two inches across and the end ones an inch across—set in a row—is used to mark the high front waistline of a sheer batiste embroidered afternoon gown. The ornament extends well round a quarter of even the fashionable waist.

* * *

So far this season one has not seen any of the light-colored silks and satins used for suits or one-piece frocks for general wear. When a woman wears a light or bright pink gown it is of muslin or eponge or French voile. Both silk and satin are found in navy blue, chocolate brown, and, especially, in beige; the latter, like tan, is being widely used with black trimming and is immensely attractive. Its neutrality of tone allows various dashes of color to be used against it.

* * *

The peplum is still here. In a dainty white lingerie blouse showing a straight, gatherless peplum eight or ten inches long, there is an interesting belt arrangement. Two sections of the belt are made of mull, like the blouse, and these two sections band the waist at the sides. The belt in front and back is made of dark blue satin ribbon, folded narrow like the mull belt. On each end of each of the ribbon bands is a big white pearl button, and the mull sections of the belt button over the ribbon on these buttons.

* * *

Bead trimming, apparently, is not going out of fashion. A recently shown serge coat has a short, loose coat, the raw edge of which is banded with bright blue beads—the serge is navy—embroidered in a straggling design a couple of inches wide. The neck edge of the coat and the sleeves, too, showed the same banding.

The smart thing just now is the dying flower droop, the collapse of the whole figure which seems the result of mental fatigue, but which is in reality the result of a carefully thought out mannerism introduced for the purpose of advertisement by a famous Parisian actress. This charming woman is possessed of what the novelists call a willowy form. She is tall, exceedingly slender, extraordinarily graceful

LATEST PARIS COSTUMES STARTLE GIDDIEST MODES HAVE EVERYTHING BUT SIMPLICITY

Fashions Shown at Longchamps and Other French Race Courses Last Word in Sensations.

An old, old song remarked, "They do such things and they say such things—on the Bowery." But the modern place for doing and saying "such" things in Paris—and from the indications of these pictures snapped at the races at Longchamps, just outside of "Gay Paree," they are wearing such things as our giddiest Atlantan would scarcely venture on home soil.

In the one case a modestly flowered silk skirt with wee buds borrowed from the old chintz patterns is topped by a "cubist" coat of very spherical lines! Pale gray brocade flowered in great purple irises is seamed down the back that there may be fullness enough to shor from two cords at the top, and to finish with four cord shirrings at the bottom, and still to fasten kimono fashion over the shoulders. A hat of duchess lace banded in white moire and decked with a great bush of black aigrettes finishes the costume.

The other fair Parisienne carries a parasol of white broderie Anglaise inset with rare venise lace and with a three-inch edge of black velvet. The black and white color scheme continues in the shoes, which have patent leather vamps and instep strappings of white suede. And the gown itself is a creation of shadow and venise and duchess laces with net and point d'esprit and black beads for further garniture! The gown has the new cross front drapery that is suggestive of a surplice when found on a waist, but brings to mind nothing so much as harem trousers when found on the skirt. The only things of simplicity in this costume are the old-fashioned mitts that cover the arms and the big full-blown rosette thrust into the girdle.

A Black and White Mode.

on the artistic lines laid down by disciples of Puvis DeChavannes. She started the fad for drooping figures of an exaggeratedly natural order and the fashion has spread with the rapidity of a prairie fire.

* * *

Violent color contrasts are tolerated and therefore one sees a purple ruff and cape over a gown of black satin which has a black tulle top; over while lace gowns there will be a ruff and cape of raspberry red tulle.

* * *

Where are the plain shoes of to-day going? There are not many of them, to be sure, but the new shoes which are coming in from day to day put the few plain ones that are left to shame. For the new ones show much slashing and cutting and gilding and painting. One pair of slippers is made of green, silver and white, and the kid from toe to heel is slashed away leaving openings shaped like crescents separated by the merest slivers of kid. Another slipper, with a French heel, is made to be worn without stockings. It, too, is made of painted and gilded kid, and has a strap to go between the great toe and the one next to it which buckles to a strap crossing the instep.

Zinnias have come into great popularity this summer. Their popularity began, in fact, last winter, when Futurist designs and colors first came in. There is a stiffness and rigidity of form about zinnias that harmonizes with designs formed of cubes and triangles. And the bright, clear colors of this flower suggest those in the giddiest futurist silk. Hence the popularity of the zinnia for corsage bouquets, hat and frock trimmings in its artificial form, and for household and garden decoration in its real form.

The New "Picture Hat"

The picture hat is taking its revenge. All last winter and far into the spring of this year it was pushed into the background by pert little jam pots and caricatures of Indian turbans. The picture hat was out of favor. Those who continued to wear it were smiled at as out of date; dress experts asserted that we should not see a revival of the wide-brimmed hat for several seasons to come.

But those who really understand the fashions of Paris—more than that, who understand something of the ways of the Parisiennes—never doubted the early return of the big hat, weighed down with rich feathers or lovely flowers. Its coming might be delayed a little, but it was certain to arrive nevertheless. And it has arrived.

Once again there are seen genuine picture hats, large and small; such hats as might have graced the beauties depicted by the old masters.

* * *

This is essentially a lace year. Wide lace flounces are getting more and more fashionable. They will be in high favor for casino wear. These lace dresses, arranged in three or four tiers, are exceedingly becoming; more than that, they are full of artistic charm. Painters through all the ages have raved about supple draperies of lace or fragile gauze.

FRECKLE-FACE

Sun and Wind Bring Out Ugly Spots. How to Remove Easily.

Here's a chance, Miss Freckle-Face, to try a remedy for freckles with the guarantee of a reliable dealer that it will not cost you a penny unless it removes the freckles, while if it does give you a clear complexion the expense is trifling.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from Jacobs' Pharmacy and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the worst case.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine, as this is the prescription sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

FIVE-DOLLAR-A-WEEK CLERK IS LEFT $6,640,000 FORTUNE

Special Cable to The American.

MILAN, July 19.—Vittorio Mariana, a ticket office clerk at the Tivoli Railway station, in the suburbs of Rome, at a salary of $5 a week, has just come in for a windfall of $6,640,000 under the will of an uncle.

MISS WILSON IS PLAIN 'JESSIE' IN KENSINGTON

Pennsylvania Folk, Whom Daughter of President Aided, Like White House Bride-to-Be.

PHILADELPHIA, July 19.—Kensington is living over again the three years that Miss Jessie Wilson, the President's second daughter, whose engagement to Francis Bowen Sayre, of Bethlehem, has just been announced, spent as a social worker in the mill district.

To Kensington she is just "Jessie," and "Jessie" she always will be, the girl who traveled up and down narrow streets on visits of mercy, who attended the sick beds of mothers and was a sister to the working girls and a pal of the short-trousered boys who gathered at the Lighthouse gymnasium.

Miss Wilson's work of social service at the Lighthouse, 152 West Lehigh avenue, brought her in close contact with the men, women and children of the mill sections, and to all of them she endeared herself by her modesty, her unassuming manner, her cordiality and sincerity. The life of the settlement she followed closely, spending five days a week in routine work and returning to her home in Princeton for the week-end.

Many a meal Jessie Wilson has eaten at the uncovered tables of the Lighthouse Restaurant with motormen and millworkers for her companions, never thinking herself a whit better than the people who surrounded her.

Roast beef, fried potatoes, tomato sauce, lemon pie, bread and butter, and coffee—why should a President's daughter want more? And she didn't want more. So when it was more convenient to at eat the restaurant than with Mr. and Mrs. R. Porter Bradford, the manager of the Lighthouse, with whom she resided, she ordered the menu chalked on the wall of the restaurant, "full roast dinner for 15 cents."

Miss Wilson has lately been associated with the National Board of the Young Women's Christian Association, and has been active in work for the betterment of factory girls.

San Francisco To Be Best Dressed City

"Greatest Decoration Scheme Ever Outlined" Is Promised for the Annual Portola Festival.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—The greatest decorative scheme ever outlined for any city, American or European, has been prepared for San Francisco during the Portola festival of October 22 to 25 next.

San Francisco will be the most beautifully dressed city and the best illuminated the world round.

Here is a list of the chief features of the decorations, for which estimates are to-day being received by the Portola festival committee:

Ten miles of greens, 100,000 flowers, 24 acres of flags, 50 tons of plaster for statues, colonnades, etc.; 40,000 electric bulbs, with 1,000,000 candle-power; 10,000 gallons of water for the big fountain in Union Square.

Scant Dress Barred From Communion

Pastor Assails Women Who Appear in Church Clad in "Yard of Nothing."

MERIDEN, CONN., July 19.—"To dress for attendance at the house of God in clothes suggesting a ballroom or a recreation pier is disgraceful, and hereafter women with slashed skirts, transparent waists, low-necked or short-sleeved gowns will be refused holy communion at St. Rose's Catholic Church," the Rev. James Conlin said to-night. "I have no objection," he continued, "to women appearing in church in the coolest manner consistent with decency, but when they appear in things that are only a wisp of cloth and a yard of nothing, I believe it is time for me to protest."

The Tango Arrives in Time To Stir Jaded Paris Nerves

By La Raconteuse.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 19.—Personally I am quite unable to understand why the tango's merits and demerits should continue to interest Parisians. But it is an undeniable fact that the Argentine nationale dance, which, by the way, is repudiated by the Argentine legation, still remains the subject of most heated discussions in the salons and everywhere.

The exotic dance was fortunate in arriving here at a time when we were practically at our wits' end for a new subject of conversation. Society found what it wanted the very moment the chief of police forbade the tango to be danced in public, and now tango has reached the heights of its popularity. It may even survive this dreadfully hot summer. It is discussed in society at the "fives" in the Bois, and "tout Paris" is at present divided into two hostile camps—for and against tango.

Tango at Senate Ball.

Since the tango, as I said, has been repudiated by the Argentine Embassy, we really do not know where the dance comes from, but we have adopted it, and the other evening I saw it danced most beautifully at a ball given by the President of the Senate in Luxembourg.

Our theatrical ladies find it far more interesting and plastic than either the Boston or the "grizzly hug," with no reminiscences of the "cake walk," of which they heartily tired.

Gabriel d'Annunzio, who was asked his opinion of the tango, replied with a smile: "Why, everybody tells me I dance it admirably, so, of course, I am delighted with it."

Madame Cassimir Perier sees absolutely nothing interesting the the tango, which has made no impression whatever on her, but Maurice Rostand, son of our great and immortal poet, finds tango incomparable, symbolizing "soft and gentle, perhaps a little sad, dreams." He emphatically declares that it must be danced only by young and beautiful partners who are in perfect harmony body and soul.

La Belle Otero Enthusiastic.

"LaBelle Otero" is enthusiastic about tango and tells me that in a revue soon to be performed she will dance it as Paris has never seen anything danced before. I am afraid it will be most shocking.

Princess Lucien Murat has startled us all by declaring: "I love tango above anything else in this world, and find it absolutely chaste when it is danced by a Spaniard or a South American. Frenchmen will never learn to dance it properly."

Mlle Cecile Sorel, of the "Comedie Francaise," says she does not know nor want to know the tango, "for there is only one kind of dance, that which is taught by Isadora Duncan, which arouses in my soul images of the highest beauty."

Andre deFouquieres says tango is a sad, melancholy dance which will never lastingly appeal to the lively, animated French people.

He thinks it should be limited to the stage. It can be danced very correctly; on the other hand it is liable not to be.

Its unsuitability for the drawing room comes also from the fact that it is not a gay and convivial dance and pretty like the Russian polka or the Polish polka. "I am a partisan of the old dances," says M. de Fouquieres, and at certain evening parties I have danced the Empire dances. One must have tradition, especially a nation like France, famous for her chivalry and politeness.

Country Club Clothes

Reception days at the country club and the yacht club bring out very distinguished costumes of the lingerie order, accompanied by picture hats loaded with roses, and parasols selected to match sashes. Such frocks this year are almost entirely of fine lace and machine embroidery, with knowing touches in the way of sashes and little tulle bows at the neck and girdle. Airy black tulle bows with sheer white frocks are extremely smart, and with this white and black combination is carried a parasol of decided hue, like mustard yellow, Nell rose or saxe blue. Buttoned white oxfords are much fancied with white frocks of an airy character, though buttoned boots of buckskin are liked best with yachting costumes of a tailored nature.

WOMAN JURORS SCORN STYLE OF SMART LAWYER

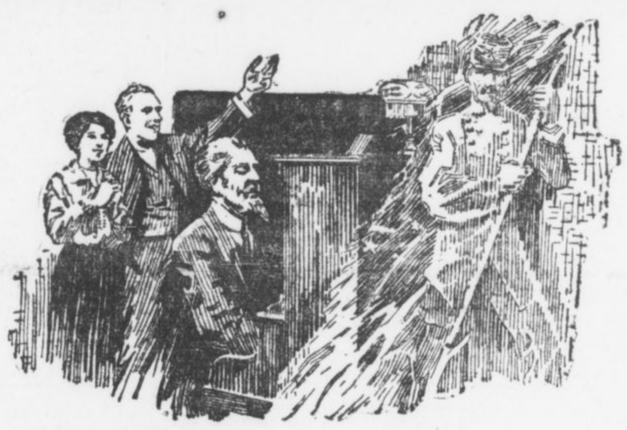
Beau Brummel Clothes and Bachelor Button of Barrister Fail to Win His Cause.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—Personal pulchritude and unusually smart habiliments, heightened by a bachelor's button and an ingratiating manner, failed to win for Assistant District Attorney Maxwell McNutt, in his appeal to the jury of women which tried Mrs. Bertha J. Williams on an extortion charge to-day. After deliberating one hour and 55 minutes, the jury, the first in the history of the world composed of women to hear a felony case, brought in a verdict of acquittal.

"Of course she said she did what she did, but we didn't think when she said she did it, she meant she had meant to do it," said one of the jurywomen.

Hence, Mrs. Williams, attired in a fetching Milan hat and a neat white serge tailored suit, much scrutinized by the jurywomen, made discreet osculatory advances to her benefactors, and the incident was closed.

Mrs. Annette Robinson, also armored in attractive feminine fixings, was the complaining witness in the case. She accused Mrs. Williams of having written her a letter April 8, attempting to extort $150 in return for the delivery of a trunk said to have contained certain evidence which, according to the letter, would have embarrassed Mrs. Robinson, had it fallen into the hands of the police.



"DIXIE" RAISES RIOT

When Played by Instinct

(Experiences with the New Instinctive Playing. No. 8 of series.)

I RAISED merry riot in my house last night. I had the whole place going: but I didn't care. I was having the time of my life!

"I was near Mary's new Virtuolo Player Piano, and I thought I'd try it out. So I put in a roll marked 'Dixie,' while I was peeking around at the door, and that old song must have gone to my head. Before I knew it I was crashing it out for all I was worth—

"'Way down south in the land of cotton.'

"I closed my eyes, touched the 'soft and strong' Acsolo buttons,' and I put regular smash and ginger into that music.

"Why I seemed to be right back in those thrilling days of '61 again—when multitudes went wild over that great old song—when hearts beat like trip-hammers and throats sang themselves hoarse with its stirring rhythm.

"Well, Mary peeked in—and stayed. Then Mary's young man; and then some of the neighbors came along, too, and all joined in—yelling and singing and capering like mad!

"Say—my 'music instinct' is great, when I can play 'Dixie' like that!"

SUNDAY AMERICAN'S SPECIAL CABLE LETTERS RECEIVED FROM ALL THE GREAT CAPITALS OF EUROPE

ASQUITH WILL STAY PREMIER DESPITE TORIES

Reports of Prime Minister Withdrawing To Go on Bench All Emenate From Opposition.

By PHILIP EVERETT.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Seldom, if ever, has the air here been as full of political rumors as during the last few weeks—a fact which seems to show that the heat of the summer has played havoc with the brains of our conservative editors and politicians, for all the rumors invariably may be traced back to the camp of the Opposition.

The fall and collapse of the present Government was confidently predicted as destined to take place long ago, and when the prophecy was not fulfilled, the political gossips began to talk of all the important changes that were to take place in the Cabinet.

Asquith to Appoint Isaacs.

The most sensational of these predictions was that Mr. Asquith, tired with the burdens and responsibilities of his office, would resign after appointing himself Lord Chief Justice to succeed Lord Alverstone, who, as everybody knows, will never resume his seat on the bench.

A successor will have to be found, but as the long court vacation is at hand, no new Lord Chief Justice will have to be nominated until October, and then, no matter how often the Tory press has predicted that Mr. Asquith would never dare do, he will nominate Sir Rufus Isaacs for the vacant position.

And no one of any importance will say a word against the appointment, for in all England there is no man more fit to hold this high office than the present Attorney General. In a month or two all the artificial indignation stirred up by the Marconi affair will have completely disappeared.

Premier to Keep Post.

I can assure my readers, on the very best authority, that Mr. Asquith has not the slightest intention of leaving the political arena now, and everybody who knows him knows that this is so.

The statesman who, in face of unexampled difficulties, passed the Parliament act is not going to leave his post until the fruits of that great measure are garnered.

A distinguished colleague of Mr. Asquith's in the present Cabinet said a few weeks ago: "Loyalty is one of the brightest jewels in the crown of the Prime Minister's character." That loyalty will not be wanting to the Liberal party at this juncture in its fortunes. There is also a loyalty that a man owes to himself, and Mr. Asquith must feel that it is incumbent on him to see that the machine which he fashioned in the Parliament act is capable of doing its work.

London Women Take 'Railwaymen' Jobs

Great Western Road Is Making Experiment of Employing Them as Car Cleaners.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—The Great Western Railway Company is making the novel experiment of employing women as "railwaymen," a number of women being engaged as carriage cleaners in the London district.

The innovation is strongly resented by the members of the National Union of Railwaymen, who fear that this is merely the first move in a general attempt to substitute female for male labor.

Protest meetings are being organized and the head office of the National Union of Railwaymen has been asked to take the matter up.

Women are largely employed as railway coach cleaners on the Continent.

"GETS-IT" for Corns, and Away They Go!

"GETS-IT," the New-Plan Corn Cure, Gets Any Corn Surely, Quickly.

You'll say, "It does beat all how quick 'GETS-IT' got rid of that corn. It's almost magic!" "GETS-IT" gets

"Never Could Do This Before. 'GETS-IT' Made Every Corn Vanish Like Magic."

every corn, every time, as sure as the sun rises. It takes about two seconds to apply it. Corn pains stop, you forget the corn, the corn shrivels up, and it's gone! Ever try anything like that? You never did. There's no more fussing with plasters that press on the corn, no more salves that take off the surrounding flesh, no more bandages. No more knives, files or razors that make corns grow, and cause danger of blood poison. "GETS-IT" is equally harmless to healthy or irritated flesh. It "gets" every corn, wart, callous and bunion you've got.

"GETS-IT" is sold at all druggists at 25 cents a bottle, or sent on receipt of price by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago. Sold in Atlanta by Jacobs' Pharmacy Company, Elkin Drug Co., Coursey & Munn, Gunter-Watkins Drug Company, E. H. Cone, Inc., Tipton & Co.

Earl's Money to Buy Mother Home

Markham Girl to Spend Heart Balm

THE most recent photograph of Daisy Markham, the English actress, and a remarkable photograph of a clerk at work in the Bank of England, weighing out the $250,000 which the Marquis of Northampton paid to Miss Markham to settle her breach of promise suit.

Intends To Provide Her Parent With Handsome Income From Breach of Promise Suit.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Lovely Miss Daisy Markham declares she will expend much of the $250,000 the young Marquis of Northampton, former Earl of Compton, paid to her to settle the breach of promise suit in buying a residence for her mother, and in providing an income for her.

A quarter of a million is the largest sum ever paid in England in such a suit, but the Marquis of Northampton inherited a great fortune at his father's death, and one of the largest pieces of property in London owned by any one proprietor.

Well Known in America.

Miss Markham is well known in New York, where she was last seen with the Wyndham Company, as Elaine Shrimpton in "The Case of Rebellious Susan." She averred in bringing the suit that on April 21, 1912, the then Lord Compton verbally promised to marry her, and on October 12, 1913, refused to keep his promise.

Miss Markham wrote to Lord Compton after he broke off their engagement. She addressed him as "Dearest Darling Bim," and after pleading against his decision, said:

I would rather have you, Bim, dear, and live in a little cottage than have all your wealth and estates and live without you.

He replied, telling his love and despair. Miss Markham's lawyers regarded this letter as their most effective weapon in the suit. Here are some expressions in it:

I might just write you a line, as I am feeling so miserable.

I am going to ask you to believe I have always and do at the present moment love and respect you more than anyone in the world, and that you are absolutely my ideal of perfect womanhood.

Ways of World Hard.

But, Daisy, the ways of the world are hard, and I want you to believe that what I am now doing I am doing from a sense of duty, genuinely believing it to be the best for both of us.

Daisy, you don't know how those so-called ladies (of his own rank) would treat you, and I really could not bear to see you suffering it. And with your sweet, sensitive nature it would be torture to you. Oh, if only I could escape from my position! BIM.

Sends Kiss for Tips Of His Love's Ears

Amorous Suitor Has to Pay $250 Damages for Failing to Carry Out Osculatory Promise.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—"I send you a kiss for the tips of each of your little soft ears," and "If we are not married in a year I will resign myself to bachelorhood, I vow," were phrases in letters written by Philip Still, a clerk employed by the London County Council, to Miss Edith Emily Protheroe, a dressmaker, of Cornwall. At Swansea Court Miss Protheroe recovered $250 damages and costs for breach of promise.

Divine Sarah Now Domino Enthusiast

Madame Bernhardt Takes It to Heart When Beaten, so Opponents Generally Gracefully Lose.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 19.—Madame Bernhardt, who spends her summer holidays at her home at Belle Isle, on the coast of the Bay of Biscay, has become very fond of the game of dominoes and usually plays after luncheon and after dinner. Although she is a poor player, she enjoys the game and is keenly disappointed when she loses.

Guests at Belle Isle have formed the habit of gracefully losing to the Divine Sarah, thus pleasing her vanity.

Her afternoons are spent in her studio, where she is modeling her tomb, which is to be placed on Belle Isle as a landmark for sailors.

GERMANY MAD TO BEAT U.S. IN 1916 OLYMPIC

Thousands of Young Men Are Striving For Places on Team to Represent Empire.

By STEVEN BURNETT.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, July 19.—Americans, who after their triumph in Stockholm last year may think that they will only have to come over here to repeat the same thing at the Berlin Olympic games in 1916 had better look to their laurels in time, for all Germany is possessed by a craze for sport.

All over the country thousands and thousands of young men are patiently drilling almost every day in all the branches of sport and from among all these the most promising athletes will be chosen a year from January next and during the following fifteen months up to the very time of the great international contest all the young men selected will be absolutely in the hands of autocratic trainers who will bring them as close as possible to absolute perfection. The expenses of this long training will willingly be borne by enthusiastic lovers of sports all over the country.

Craze for Sport Increases.

To a certain extent Germany has always been a sport-loving country. Its "turnvereins," which are so well known in every city in America, where a German colony exists, are older than any similar associations in Europe, but of late the craze for sports has reached proportions unknown in any other country in the world.

This renaissance of athletics is in the first place due to the Kaiser personally who has encouraged sport from the day of his accession and his pride was certainly justified when he said in his speech at a regatta the other day that there are more than 50,000 oarsmen in Germany belonging to more rowing clubs than in all the rest of Europe together.

It is indeed true that there is a colossal development of sport in Germany.

Polo Gains Popularity.

Games which never before had a foothold are springing into widespread popularity. Polo is a case in point. This sport is officially prohibited in the army by order of the Emperor, who still thinks that the physical dangers involved for officers are wholly out of proportion to any benefits to be derived.

Yet a group of gentlemen riders and other enthusiasts have just laid out at the new "garden city" of Frohnau, to the northeast of Berlin, a polo field and clubhouse, with a series of tennis courts, golf links, rifle and archery ranges, croquet grounds and everything else conducive to the cultivation of outdoor life.

Few 'Gillies' Left On the Scotch Moors

Rich Americans Who Rent Highland "Shooting Boxes" Can't Find Guides to Trace Game.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Because of the recent boom in trade, rich manufacturers in the Midlands and in the North are tumbling over each other to obtain the best fishings and shootings in Scotland for the fall. As a rule, the best are snapped up by wealthy Americans, but the latter are much troubled by a great dearth of "gillies," as the keepers are called.

Hundreds of young "gillies" have emigrated to Canada; soon there will be none, and the millionaires will have to find their way alone about the deer forests and grouse moors.

For the season to date the number of Scotchmen who have gone to Canada is 24,500, but by the end of the season it will be well over 30,000.

PHONOGRAPHIC RECORDS MAILED ON CLOTH SQUARES

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 19.—A new device for carrying on correspondence by phonograph has been introduced in Paris.

The record is made on a square of prepared cloth, which can be sent through the post in an envelope and is said to reproduce the voice with great accuracy. The cost of a complete outfit, including the machine for both transmitting and receiving messages and a supply of cloth squares, is from $50 to $60.

LIGHT ON COCAS TREASURE SHED BY TAR'S WIDOW

Irishwoman Declares usband Was Mate of Ship Which Carried Gold to Hiding Place.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Mrs. Bridget McGowan, a widow living in the West of Ireland, has written to a London newspaper that her husband was third officer of the Peruvian bark Mary Pio (Holy Mary), which conveyed the "Cocos Island treasure" from Lima to Cocos Island in 1855, in order to prevent it from falling into the hands of Chilean invaders.

This is the first time in the voluminous literature of the Cocos treasure question that some person has appeared who claims to have been acquainted personally with any member of the crew of the treasure ship. It also indicates an entirely new history of the treasure.

The accepted story of all the treasure hunters hitherto has been that the incident took place in 1825, when the Spanish colonies revolted from the mother country, and the Spanish loyalists of Lima, in order to save their valuables from the invading Peruvian patriots, chartered a British ship called the Mary Deer to remove the treasure to Cocos Island.

Mrs. McGowan declares that the Mary Pio, with a crew of 36, conveyed the treasure to Cocos Island and buried it in four caches.

The ship was wrecked in a hurricane off Cocos, and only three of the crew reached the shore.

One was the writer's husband; the other two, an Englishman and a Welshman, died afterward on the Island from eating poisonous berries.

The third mate survived and retained a map of the location of the four caches, in which five tons of gold were hidden.

His widow says that 30 years ago he gave the map to a man who is still living. She adds that an exact copy of that map is still extant and is well preserved.

City of Paris Makes Money on Art Show

"Municipal Operation" of Exhibition Is Tried in New Field With Great Success.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 19.—The city fathers have just concluded an interesting and very successful experiment in "municipal operation." The city fathers took it into their heads to give the people an artistic treat and organized an exhibition of the works of David, the celebrated artist.

The exhibition lasted 53 days and was a great success, not only artistically, but also from a financial viewpoint.

The city of Paris made money out of it, although 25,000 persons were admitted free every Sunday. On all other days an admission fee of 20 cents was charged. So numerous were the visitors that a handsome sum remains in the hands of the Municipal Council after paying all expenses.

Paris Bar Leader Frees Lady Macbeth

Henri Robert Proud of Fact He Acquitted Alleged Slayer of Duncan at Literary Trial.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 19.—Henri Robert has been elected leader of the Paris Bar. He has freed more criminals than any lawyer living, and made his fame in the Dreyfus case. He is a Parisian of Parisians, having been born here 50 years ago.

Of all the case he has won, he says, his defense of Lady Macbeth has given him most pleasure. At a literary entertainment he undertook that defense and, to the minds of the listeners, proved that historical murderess to be innocent.

Balfour's Book in Big Demand in Britain

Applicants for Works of Former Premier at Library Invariably Told They Are "Out."

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—The books of Arthur Balfour, former Prime Minister, are among the most widely read in London. At the annual general meeting of the London Library, over which Mr. Balfour presided, the Hon. Evan Charteris said that he had inquired at the library on numerous occasions for books written by Mr. Balfour, and was constantly told that they were "out." After waiting for some time and still being unable to secure the books at the library, he purchased a set for himself and recommended that another set be purchased for use in the library, as many others had had his experience in being told that the books were out.

Marvelous Star of Ice Ballet Gives Berlin Thrills

By ALAN DALE.

Special Correspondence of The Sunday American.

BERLIN, July 19.—If you can imagine Pavlova with all her wiles, witcheries and Baccahanalian abandon, leaping, bounding, pirouetting and rotating on ice skates, you may have some faint idea of the amazing and beautiful Charlotte Oelschiager—known in Berlin as "Little Charlotte"—whom I saw last night in the finest entertainment I've viewed on this side of the pond—the ice ballet by Leo Barteuschek, at the Admiral's Palast.

Everything that an agile and almost supernaturally graceful Terpsichorean artist can do with daintily slippered feet little Charlotte does with tiny, glittering ice skates on her diminutive tootsies. The effect of it is positively bewildering. The smooth, gliding and velvety sensation of the ice sheet is absolutely unlike anything that the ordinary dancer has to offer, and the astounding versatility of the skaterine—who can do more on the knives of skates than Pavlova can do without them (and I make that statement unhesitatingly)—compels a rapt attention.

Little Charlotte is an awfully pretty girl.

She has long, blonde, un-wiggy hair, that in the dazzling light shed upon the huge ice arena of the Admiral's Palast, looks like spun silk; she owns a fascinating smile quite unlike the smirk that won't come off, so popular with the average dancing lady, and she has youth, effervescence and a sort of untrammeled gayety of manner that are positively irresistible. She is thin, supple, lissome and—perfectly astonishing. I take off my hat to her.

She is the finest artist of her kind that I have seen, and Berlin loves her. After viewing the work last night, I had the cozy, comfortable, well-satisfied sensation that an astonishing feat always induces. I felt glad that I had come to Berlin, for neither in Paris nor in London is there anything faintly to compare with the fascination of little Charlotte. If her nationality were otherwise, I should glory in calling her little Charlotte russe!

She appeared in the big ice ballet called "Flirtation in St. Moritz." It takes place on the large, glassy sheet of ice at the Admiral's Palast, with scenic effects at one end. It is in three acts with a story.

The entire cast of nine principals and a huge "chorus" of servants, geishas, Japanese dancers and supernumeraries are all on skates! Their evolutions at first amaze you, then, as you grow accustomed to them, they delight you and arouse a sort of titillating enthusiasm.

There are three acts of this ice-pageant, one called "Winter Sport at St. Moritz," the second "A Soiree in a Hotel de Luxe" and the third a "Japanese Festival." In the second, all the skaters and skating principals wear gorgeous evening gowns, as handsome as anything even America could desire, and in the Japanese scene they are all kimonoed and Japanesed in the most bewildering riot of colors. Dazzling calcium is shed over the proceedings, and—well, it is a sensation.

The best of it all is that you are dining at the Admiral's Palast. All around the magnificent and imposing ice field are tables where all the Berlinese dine and drink their beloved beer. It is not elaborately expensive, as such a thing would be in America. You pay your 50 or 60 cents for a seat, and your dinner is less costly than it would be at an ordinary restaurant.

And, believe me, it is in this moderation, this ungrasping catering to the multitude, that the success of such a giant scheme as the Admiral's Palast lies.

But the ice ballet of itself is a marvel. In addition to little Charlotte, who danced with a sort of Mordkin, called Max Feist—on skates—there was the gorgeous Dallerup, whose pyrotechnical skating made one dizzy. And there was Harry Paulsen. There were episodes on skis that was delightful; there were humorous incidents; there were Marcelines and big bears, and food not only for adults but for children. Not once did "Flirtation in St. Moritz" drag. The unexpected was always happening. One felt like the song that chirps "What Is Coming, Who Shall Say?" The whole thing was a joy.

One dines slowly and epicureanly in the German style. There is no gulping of food or rushing of drink. One takes one's time, sitting round that gorgeous ice field, which is cool and delicious, and quite unlike the feverish atmosphere one finds in most crowded resorts. All along the balcony were hundreds of diners in small reserved private boxes, but all the dining and wining (or beer-ing) never once interfered with this exultant ice ballet.

That gripped one, and dinner was really nothing more than a gastronomic accompaniment. Imagine the Madison Square Garden filled with people dining around its arena, and you may get some faint idea of the imposing Admiral's Palast.

But "Little Charlotte" was the benign star of it all, and throughout there wasn't one solitary note of ragtime! Not one!!

English Crowded Out Of 'Dear Old London'

Everything In British Capital Now Is American, Even Language Spoken at Big Hotels.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—London has been so full of Americans this season that there was no longer room for Britishers, and many moved with their baggage to the contiguous islands, Guernsey, Jeddo and Herne. The shopkeepers still stayed on, however.

Parisian methods in the hotels are being ousted to give place to American dishes. Colored and alluring ads are tempting "our dear American friends" to buy and announcements are put up that "American is spoken here."

The English, in fact, are commencing to speak "American" quite intelligibly. This is being helped by the incursion of American dishes into the cuisine of the great hotels, which are now seeking to follow New York models.

London Women Are Now Smoking Cigars

Some of Fashionable Devotees of Nicotine Are Even Developing Fondness for Pipe.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—When woman soothes her nerves now with tobacco it is not a cigarette she chooses, but a cigar, if she wants to appear quite up to date. The majority of women nowadays smoke cigarettes, but the ultra modern members of the fair sex are taking to cigars—even pipes.

The pipe chosen especially for women is a little light wooden pipe called the "Belique," which costs $1.

Pipes, however, are not so much "the vogue" at present as the cigar, and the favorite cigar which women smoke, it seems, is the La Florda Cuba. This is a long, thin cigar, which costs 50 cents in London.

CLOCK AT STATION HAS NEW NUMBERS, 13 TO 24

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 19.—The clock in the facade of St. Lazare Station is to be the first in Paris to have the newly adopted official numerals of 13 to 24 for the hours after noon.

From 1 a. m. to 12 the figures 1 to 12 will appear on the dial. As noon strikes they will disappear and by an automatic arrangement the figures 13 to 24 will take their places.

Gamblers Hide in Convent During Raid

Men and Women In Evening Clothes Seen in Yard of Cloister by French Officers.

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, July 19.—When the police raided a suspected gambling den patronized by society folk, they found no one in the house after the doors had been broken down, but about 40 men and women in evening clothes were seen in hasty flight in the garden.

The gamblers scaled the garden wall and escaped into the grounds of the Sacred Heart Convent. Most of the fugitives made their way to the street, but a dozen of the ladies, it is said, remained in hiding in the garden of the convent throughout the night, departing quietly the next morning.

Kaiser Ends Feud With Lippe Family

Emperor of Germany In Bending Mood Patches Up Old Quarrel With Prince Frederick IV.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, July 19.—The Kaiser is a strong man, noted for his friendships as for his enmities, and always a better man to deal with than to fight with, but he is just now in a bending mood.

Having patched up the old-time feud with the Cumberland family and made "a happy union" for his beloved daughter, he has magnanimously ended his feud of fifteen years with the ruling family of Lippe, one of the little principalities with which the German Empire is studded. He has recognized Prince Frederick IV of Lippe.

STRANGE JEWEL FROM EGYPT IS IN ENGLISH HOME

Excavation Party In Tomb Unearths Pharaoh Toy and Its Wonderful History.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—A jewel with a wonderful history was the feature of the Royal Society's conversazione at Burlington House recently.

It is of carnelian, lapis lazuli and turquoise and was made by order of the Pharaoh of Upper Egypt 3,400 years before the birth of Christ.

The Pharoah gave it to one of his court favorites, and when the latter died it was buried with him in his magnificent tomb at Gerzeh, some forty miles away from modern Cairo. A body-snatcher of ancient Egypt broke open the tomb of the dead favorite of Pharaoh.

For once, poetic justice—an institution which flourished even in Egypt—came into operation. The heavy slabs that formed the roof of the tomb fell on the thief and crushed him flat.

Then the wind came, and with it the sand; and year by year the ruined tomb was buried deeper, so that it lay for centuries hidden in the desert.

Last March, Professor Flinders Petrie and his excavating party found it. The fallen roof and the crushed body of the thief told their own tale, and the excavators were encouraged to look for what they knew the thief had not been able to take away with him. And so at last they found the beautiful jewel at which a court artificer had wrought, perhaps for years, 50 centuries ago. It was inspected here with deep curiosity.

Deadly Gas Gun Is Refused by England

Inventor Makes Weapon Which Shoots Chemicals That Start Fire, Unextinguishable by Water.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, July 19.—Ernest Walsh, a young chemist of Hull, has invented a remarkable gas gun, which he has offered to the War Department.

His offer was refused without test or examination, and to-day he left for France to submit his invention on the invitation of the French authorities.

The gun, which represents his life's work, throws projectiles containing chemicals which set fire to anything they strike, the flames not being extinguishable by water.

PETRIFIED BODY OF GIANT OF PATAGONIA AUCTIONED

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, July 19.—A petrified man was sold by auction in Paris recently.

The man lived some thousands of years ago in Patagonia. He was about 8 feet 6 inches in height. Though he is now a stone statue, the body bears traces of deep wounds. It is supposed that the man was killed and that his body was slowly changed to stone by the action of water charged with lime salts.

Doctor's Boyish Face Reveals Skin Renewer

I heard the other day the story of the physician with so admirable a skin that all his women patients asked the secret. He told one, who generously told others, that, knowing the remarkable absorbent property of ordinary mercolized wax, he concluded this substance would make an excellent complexion renewer and preserver. Knowing the wax could not harm the skin, he began using it after shaving. He soon observed that the old, withered, colorless cuticle was being gradually absorbed and replaced by younger, healthier skin. This was the simple secret of the silver-haired doctor with the boyish face.

The secret became public property. Now women everywhere use mercolized wax, applying it nights like cold cream, washing it off mornings—continuing until the complexion is entirely renovated. An ounce of this wax, procurable at any druggist's, will banish the worst complexion.

Another valuable rejuvenator used by this doctor was a wrinkle-remover and preventive in the form of a face bath, made by dissolving an ounce of saxolite in a half-pint witch hazel. This also has become famous. —Aurelia in Fashion Review.

Human System Poisons Itself

Otherwise Most of Us Would Live to Be Methuselahs.

Scientists say that almost every moment we are poisoning ourselves. Autotoxemia, they term it, or Self-Poisoning. Eliminate Autotoxemia, and we could live to be hundreds of years old.

All food eaten leaves in the stomach some waste, unused particles. This waste ferments and generates uric acid, and when uric acid gets in the blood it poisons, they term it, or Self-Poisoning. Constipation, indigestion, biliousness, dyspepsia, sick headache, languidness and a weakened physical condition all result from self-poisoning.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT flushes stomach and intestines, dissolves the uric acid which has accumulated and expels it with the fermenting waste.

Take JACOBS' LIVER SALT in the morning before breakfast. You will do a better day's work, and live longer.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is better than calomel for constipation and biliousness. Acts quickly and more thoroughly, requiring no cleansing after-dose of oil; causes no after-danger of salivation; never gripes or nauseates. It effervesces agreeably. No other liver tonic has the same mild, natural flushing action, though many imitations (in name) are offered. Insist that your druggist supply the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. If he can not, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, 25c, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

Zim Says: 'Good Batter Slams Anything Pitched'

POSITION AT PLATE BIG FACTOR IN HITTING

Getting "All Set" Not Only Narrows "Swing" but Increases Risk of Being "Beaned."

HERE'S the second of the articles by Henry (Heinie) Zimmerman on "How to Hit the Ball." You can't wait for the pitcher to put one over to your liking, says the great Cub batter, for if you do it will be an accident if you get it.

By HENRY ZIMMERMAN.

One of the questions which is being constantly hurled at me is, "Heine, what would you rather hit?"

Of course every batter has his favorite ball and almost every batter has his weakness.

I would rather hit a curve ball than anything else. I prefer it to a fast one, and it certainly gives me more pleasure to hit at a hook than it does to swipe at a slow one. If the old days when you could call for what you wanted were in vogue I would address the pitcher in this way:

"Mr. Pitcher, please curve it; let it come over the plate along about my waist on the inside corner of the plate. Then instruct your left fielder to play deep."

That's my favorite, but it is also my impression that the batter who is wise won't wait for his favorite. Because the moment the pitcher discovers what you like he feeds you the opposite. It's only by accident that you get what you like, and since all the pitchers know what I prefer I have no hesitancy in telling the public.

Doesn't Pay to Wait for Favorite Ball

I never could figure why a man who likes to hit and who wants to hit is so particular about the kind of a ball he swings at. It's my honest and candid opinion that more base hits are made off balls which would be called "balls" by the umpire than off those which cross the plate between the knees and the shoulders.

Wagner gets lots of base hits on wild pitches. They tell me that Lajoie in the American League makes a practice of getting doubles and tripies on balls that are as high as his head.

It certainly has been my experience that I could hit safely almost anything I could touch. There's a reason for this, too. The position at the plate and the weight of the bat used has a lot to do with this.

They say that Wagner is awkward at the plate. His position may not be graceful, but it is one of the best in the league. If you will notice he simply lounges all over that plate. He is never set. The result is that he is prepared to hit anything.

Get "All Set," but Can't Hit the Ball

Contrast his position with that of some of the other fellows. They go up there, dig a hole for their right foot if they be right-hand hitters and get set. They are planted to take an awful wallop at the ball. But they are in no position to hit a fast curve, for instance.

They also are always taking the chance of being "beaned." That's true, for the reason that they are set, they are rigid, they can't get out of the way of a ball that breaks at the last moment and starts for their head.

Many a man has been hit by a pitched ball for the reason that he set himself to swing. The best way is to be up there lounging like Wagner. Then you are in position to step forward and meet the ball. You also are in position to swing at the fast breaking ones. You are running mighty little chance of being "beaned."

Speaking of the weaknesses of batters it's my opinion that Wagner has the most peculiar of any man in the game. It's no use to try to fool him on a curve. You can't. It's just as useless to try a fast one. He'll pound that, regardless of where it is pitched. He cares nothing for a spitter and a change of pace means nothing but a fattening of his batting average.

Ball That Fools Wagner.

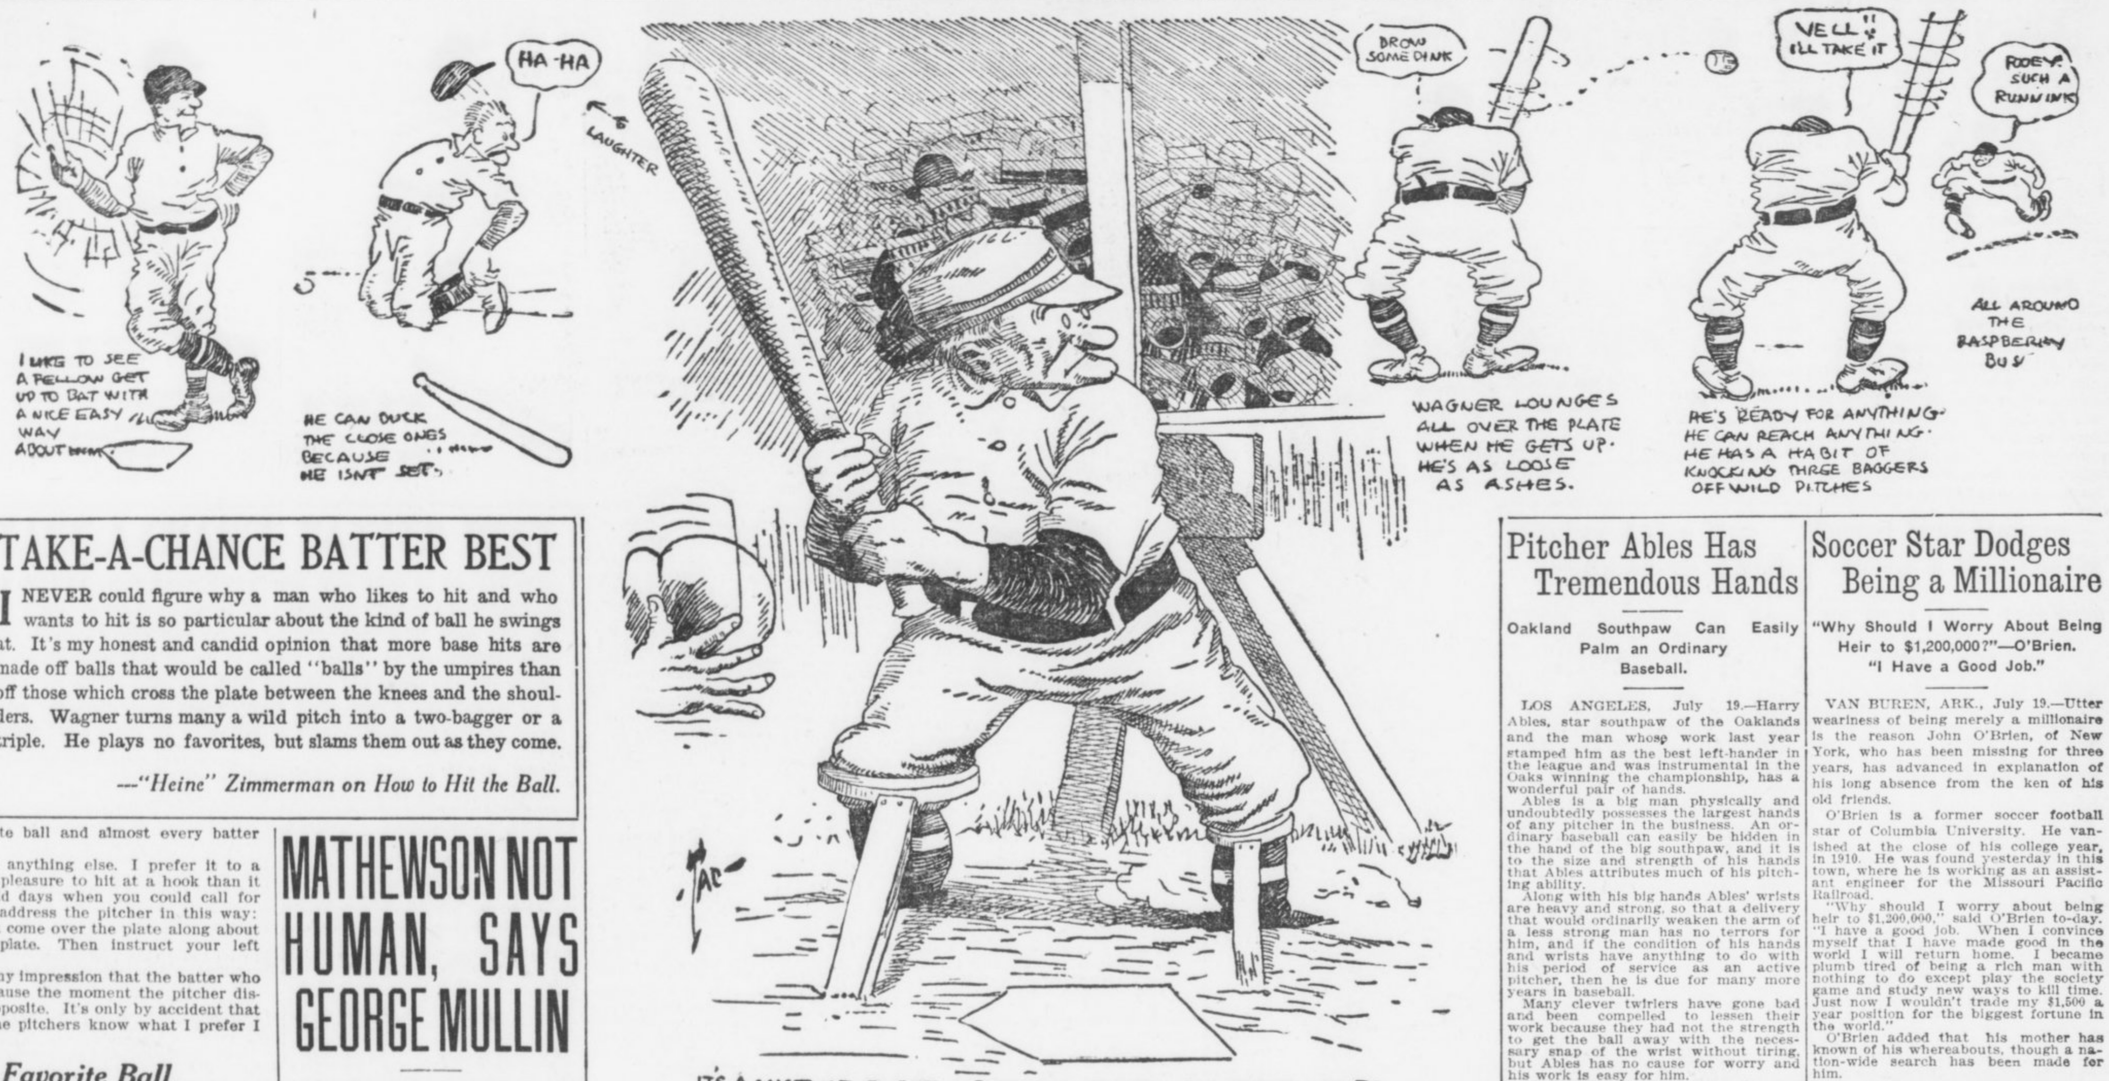
Jimmy Archer tells me that when the pitcher must pitch to Wagner, when it is in the pinch, he signals for one square over the heart of the plate, with nothing but speed on it. Archer says that Wagner will do less with this than he will if you try to fool him, and Mordecai Brown used to do the same thing.

Since Wagner and Lajoie have been compared for years and years perhaps it would not be wrong for me to say here that Archer says that the two men are alike in their weaknesses and that Lajoie can do less with the ball which most batters like than he can with the hooks, the slow ones, the fast one with the hop. Archer knows, for the reason that he caught in the American League.

The size of the bat has a lot to do with it. I want one of medium size, say 40 ounces. I'm strong enough to swing the kind that Chief Meyers does. But I couldn't get as many hits. The way the pitchers curve them on you nowadays a man must have something in his hand that he can swing at the last instant and swing hard and true.

I wouldn't like to say that the average batter swings a club that is too heavy. But in my opinion any time that a bat feels the least bit heavy it is too heavy and should be discarded for a lighter one.

TAD MAKES IT CLEAR THAT HEINE HAS RIGHT DOPE ON ART OF SLUGGING 'EM OUT



TAKE-A-CHANCE BATTER BEST

I NEVER could figure why a man who likes to hit and who wants to hit is so particular about the kind of ball he swings at. It's my honest and candid opinion that more base hits are made off balls that would be called "balls" by the umpires than off those which cross the plate between the knees and the shoulders. Wagner turns many a wild pitch into a two-bagger or a triple. He plays no favorites, but slams them out as they come.

MATHEWSON NOT HUMAN, SAYS GEORGE MULLIN

Says "Big Six" Will Never "Go Back" and Is the Wonder of Baseball.

NEW YORK, July 19.—The other afternoon I met George Mullin walking along Broadway, alone. It was a day or so before the announcement came that he had been released to Montreal in the International League. Mullin was deep in thought when I spied him ahead of me. He was lost so far that he jumped when I touched him on the shoulder.

"How goes it, George?" I asked.

"Sliding back by degrees," he said, with a half smile. "But I am working hard to make the slide as slow as possible. But," he went on, "I suppose it comes to all of us in time, excepting that fellow Mathewson—and he isn't human."

"Don't you think it will ever come to him?" was asked.

"Doesn't look like it. Why, that fellow is now the oldest pitcher in either league—that is, he has been at it longer. Still, here he is in his thirteenth year and leading all pitchers! What is his record?"

"He has won seventeen and lost five, I believe."

• • •

"THERE you are. Now, how does he do it? Four years ago some of the Cub players told me he was losing his stuff, but, somehow, he manages to keep winning.

"I'll tell you," said Mullin, "I believe he runs himself just like he does his automobile. He uses just enough gasoline to get in the lead, and when he strikes the down grade he shuts it off and coasts. I guess my trouble is that I used up too much gasoline before I thought of it."

• • •

THIS theory of Mullin's is borne out by the members of the Giant infield, who begin to tremble the minute Matty gets a good lead. Once in front, Six puts the first ball over and lets the batters hit it where they may. Line drives shoot all around the diamond until men get on bases, and then the Old Master tightens up—turns on more gasoline.

"If you don't stop that, Matty," Grover Hartley said to the star pitcher the other day after a close game, "you are going to get some of those infielders killed." Matty didn't take very kindly to that suggestion, but the very next day Larry Doyle was knocked down by a line drive just after the Giants had a five-run lead on the Phillies, and Fletcher narrowly escaped having his leg shot off.

A. A. U. Bars Mixed Swimming Meets

Protests Entered Against Girls Being Allowed to Compete Against Men In Races.

NEW YORK, July 19.—James E. Sullivan, secretary-treasurer of the Amateur Athletic Union, and the chairman of the National Registration Committee, has sent a hot letter to E. C. Brennan, of the American Life Saving Society.

It was reported to the A. A. U. that Brennan was giving mixed swimming events, and that is something the A. A. U. officials will never countenance. They do not want to see the girls made "public characters," and they want to protect the young women and not to degrade them by competition against men in the same tank.

In this stand Sullivan is backed by the entire A. A. U. as well as the New York Board of Education, of which he is a member. If the girls and women are to have more extended competition than they have now, the A. A. U. men say they should have associations of their own for protection, that they should compete only among themselves, and not against boys or men.

SAYLOR TO BOX ON COAST; PLANS BOUTS WITH STARS

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., July 19.—In an effort to land his new protege, Milburn ("Young") Saylor, at the top of the lightweight heap, Ray Bronson is planning an early invasion of the Pacific coast.

Western promoters are dickering with Bronson for a bout on Labor Day between Saylor and Leach Cross, "Harlem Tommy" Murphy, Bud Anderson or Joe Rivers. Bronson says he is anxious to match with any one of the four.

In his last bouts Saylor knocked out "Battling" Kelly, a welterweight, in four rounds, then stopped "Battling" Terry, a Pittsburg welter, in three rounds.

OLDRING AND BENDER ARE BIG HELP TO ATHLETICS

PHILADELPHIA, PA., July 19—What a remarkable difference it makes in a ball player when he displays interest in his work and takes the proper care of himself is plainly demonstrated in the improvement Rube Oldring and "Chief" Bender of the Philadelphia Athletics, are showing this season over last. It is not a secret that neither of these players buckled down to real work last season.

Manager Mack found it necessary to suspend them both, and when they came into the fold this year it was under a contract which controls their conduct by means of having the amount they are to draw in salary fluctuate. The result is that both are delivering the goods in real shape this season.

CLABBY AND HICKS WILL MEET IN RETURN MATCH

DETROIT, MICH., July 19.—Freddie Hicks, the local middleweight, has been matched to meet Jimmy Clabby at Butte, August 3. Hicks has met the Hammond boxer, tackling him at his home town in a ten-round bout, and getting a sound lacing. This match will be over the same route.

LYNCH WILL MANAGE SPOKANE.

SEATTLE, July 19.—Mike Lynch left for Vancouver, B. C., last night to take the management of the Spokane Northwestern League club, which has been disorganized and playing badly. Lynch was released by Victoria for the purpose of strengthening Spokane, it being considered that the condition of Spokane was injuring the whole league. The Victoria team will still present a strong line-up.

'SMOKY JOE' IS ADJUDGED THE SLOWEST TWIRLER

THE Philadelphia Evening Telegraph has discovered the slowest pitchers in the world. Here is how it described a recent game in which they performed:

"Smoky Joe" Wood and "Waco Bill" Taff, little brothers of the box, can outpoint any tortoise that ever crawled for studied deliberation, for deliberate languor and for general sleepiness when in the performance of their duties.

This is not a slam at the usefulness and the worth of either twirler. Both "get there" just as did the turtle in the fable. But aeons and aeons pass between their departure and their arrival, and meanwhile suppers grow cold at home and wifey remembers that he never thought of ball games while he was courting her and that it's very funny, anyhow, that he should come home in the dusk every time he goes to the grounds.

Wood, however, has even Taff outclassed. During the ninth inning recently he averaged more than 40 seconds to every pitch. Any self-respecting moving picture machine would burn out its bearings before it could be run slow enough to catch him at work. There is a popular tradition in a Boston newspaper office that one camera man got an action picture of Wood, but this seems unlikely.

Wood combines his loitering with speed only excelled by Walter Johnson. He winds up like an old-fashioned watch, swinging his arms slowly. Watching him makes every one want to yawn. Then he untangles himself suddenly while the batter, who by this time has also the hookworm complaint, is nodding drowsily. Whish—goes a streak over the plate, whereupon Umpire Ferguson calls it a ball. If the whish thing goes a foot inside, outside, into the rubber plate or ten feet in the air, Ferguson impartially calls it a strike. The main thing is that the batter rarely meets the ball.

Assuming that the ball has gone somewhere near the catcher, this procedure is then enacted. The backstop snaps the ball to Wood, who has run up to within a few feet of the plate, and who is usually inquiring kindly whether Ferguson's astigmatism is congenial if acquired. J. Wood grabs the ball with his gloved hand in a rather petulant way and carries it tenderly back to the hill. Instead of stopping at the box, he ignores it entirely and wanders five or six yards behind it.

From this vantage point he looks at the catcher, critically, craining his head hither and yon. Perhaps something in the grandstand attracts his attention. Joe promptly develops great interest in it. Roused to a sense of duty by the acrid tones of the infielders, Wood finally begins the march back to the box. Hastily counting the fans in the left bleachers, he adds up those in the right. Having exhausted everything else of interest, he puts his spiked shoes fairly in the box and begins to swing his arms. After a few seconds he warms up to the work and lets the ball drive.

Joe takes an unfair advantage of the batters by this method. Strong men in the grandstand and bleachers snored raucously after watching him for an inning. Rube Oldring pinched himself urgently once or twice while at the plate to make certain that he was still awake. All Wood needs to be the best pitcher in the world is a crooning kind of lullaby to match his actions. Then the ball park would be an excellent sanitarium for sufferers from insomnia. Even without the lullaby Joe is still some shakes of a twirler.

Pitcher Ables Has Tremendous Hands

Oakland Southpaw Can Easily Palm an Ordinary Baseball.

LOS ANGELES, July 19.—Harry Ables, star southpaw of the Oaklands and the man whose work last year stamped him as the best left-hander in the league and was instrumental in the Oaks winning the championship, has a wonderful pair of hands.

Ables is a big man physically and undoubtedly possesses the largest hands of any pitcher in the business. An ordinary baseball can easily be hidden in the hand of the big southpaw, and it is to the size and strength of his hands that Ables attributes much of his pitching ability.

Along with his big hands Ables' wrists are heavy and strong, so that a delivery that would ordinarily weaken the arm of a less strong man has no terrors for him, and if the condition of his hands and wrists have anything to do with his period of service as an active pitcher, then he is due for many more years in baseball.

Many clever twirlers have gone bad and been compelled to lessen their work because they had not the strength to get the ball away with the necessary snap of the wrist without tiring, but Ables has no cause for worry and his work is easy for him.

As the Coast League can boast a pitcher possessing the biggest hands, at the same time the player with the smallest hands is in the organization, Billy Kenworthy, of the Sacramento club, being barely able to grip a baseball. As Ables' hands are an aid to him, Kenworthy's short fingers are a detriment to him. Many a hard-hit drive that would be handled with ease by an ordinary fielder has to be handled with extraordinary care by the Sacramento star, as a baseball is to him as big as an indoor baseball would be in the hands of the big Oakland southpaw.

Soccer Star Dodges Being a Millionaire

"Why Should I Worry About Being Heir to $1,200,000?"—O'Brien. "I Have a Good Job."

VAN BUREN, ARK., July 19.—Utter weariness of being merely a millionaire is the reason John O'Brien, of New York, who has been missing for three years, has advanced in explanation of his long absence from the ken of his old friends.

O'Brien is a former soccer football star of Columbia University. He vanished at the close of his college year, in 1910. He was found yesterday in this town, where he is working as an assistant engineer for the Missouri Pacific Railroad.

"Why should I worry about being heir to $1,200,000," said O'Brien to-day. "I have a good job. When I convince myself that I have made good in the world I will return home. I became plumb tired of being a rich man with nothing to do except play the society game and study new ways to kill time. Just now I wouldn't trade my $1,500 a year position for the biggest fortune in the world."

O'Brien added that his mother has known of his whereabouts, though a nation-wide search has been made for him.

Exclusive "More Mileage" advantages in Diamond Tires that cost no more
The greatest mileage at the least expense is what you most desire in a tire.
This is what we have demanded from our Chemists, our Engineers, our Tire Builders and factory experts—and here is their answer—
Diamond (No Clinch) Tires
Chemists: Vitalized Rubber—pure, lusty, young rubber put through a process that toughens and makes it road-resisting, with no loss of life or elasticity.
Engineers: Perfect 3-Point Rim Contact, that prevents all forms of rim troubles, such as cutting against the rim and breaking above the bead.
Tire Builders: A No-Clinch more air-room tire, giving added resiliency and perfect balanced construction.
Then we protected the inner tube with a No-Pinch Safety Flap.
And, best of all, these exclusive Diamond advantages cost you no more. They insure liberal mileage and freedom from tire troubles.
So this time buy Diamond Vitalized Rubber Tires—you can get them to fit your rims from

ASHMORE IS MILLIKIN COACH.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL., July 19.—James N. Ashmore has been appointed professor of the athletic course at the James R. Millikin University for the coming year. Ashmore has been with the Millikin institution for several years and his reappointment gives general satisfaction to the student body.

WENT WITHOUT MEALS TO LEARN NATIONAL GAME

Hughie High, Tigers' Young Recruit, Has Fought Hard to Make a Success.

THIS is a story of a young man who literally would rather play baseball than eat.

You often have heard people use the expression that they preferred something else to taking their meals, but when it comes to a showdown they probably were not slow in lining up for the march to the dining room. There is one member of the Detroit Tigers, however, who repeatedly has missed his supper in order that he might have more time to devote to the national pastime.

Hughie High is the name of this athlete who found more pleasure in playing baseball on an empty stomach than in doing anything else after a feast. Not only did he endure the pangs of hunger in order to engage in the sport, but assimilated many a parental licking for cutting his meals besides.

Mr. High is what might be termed a persevering person. When he makes up his mind to do anything he just naturally goes and does it. Until this particular object is accomplished he is deaf, dumb and blind except where hearing, speaking or seeing will help him to attain that which he desires. It so happens that he was bitten by a baseball germ early in life and from that time on his world has revolved around the game.

* * *

THE little fellow was not fortunate enough to be able to devote his entire attention to baseball, however. His parents decided that he had to be useful and ornamental at the same time, so he went to work learning the plumber's trade. Just why he selected this occupation when there were so many openings for good burglars and porch climbers is not apparent. Possibly he didn't like the idea of working nights and figured he could get just as much money and more regular sleep by holding people up the daytime by means of the pipe wrench and the molten lead.

St. Louis is High's home and also the scene of his plumbing endeavors. The pounders and faucet fixers of the Mound City work eight hours a day, as do most plumbers elsewhere. This gives them one hour for actual labor and seven for going back to the shop after their tools. Naturally, with eight hours sliced right out of the daylight, Mr. High did not have very much time left for ball playing, but he found that by passing up his supper he could get in about an hour's work on the lots in the baseball months.

Also he managed to quit half an hour earlier in the evening by taking only 30 minutes for dinner at noon instead of 60. Then, of course, Sundays and holidays he did not have to work, unless there was some special job, which meant overtime pay and more money to be spent for balls, bats and gloves.

* * *

THE young plumber played hard in the short time allowed him to enjoy the game and his proficiency attracted the attention of some of the Trolley Leaguers. Finally he attained the proud position of a member of one of the Trolley League clubs, and thereafter he lived just for the Sunday battles in that flourishing semi-professional circuit.

By this time his people had given up the idea of weaning him away from baseball, and instead of bestowing a licking on him whenever he missed supper they began to read the papers Monday morning to find out what Hugh had done in the Sabbath battles. They still predicted that he would come to no good end, but were glad, since he insisted on being a ball player, that he was a good one.

After a couple of seasons in the Trolley League he was signed by the Hartford club, in the Connecticut League, where he played in 1911 and 1912, joining the Tigers from that outfit last fall.

He still works at the plumbing business in the fall and winter months and holds a union journeyman's card.

When not learning to wipe joints or swipe the ball, Hughie managed to find time to give himself a fair education. He attended night grade school and night high school after it grew too dark to see the horsehide, and in the cold months when there was no outdoor pastiming, and was so conscientious with his lessons that he makes a very creditable appearance in conversation. In fact, he has often been taken for a college man. The little outfielder declines to be worried about the prospect of his being beaten to the Tigers' utility job by Ray Powell.

* * *

"IF Powell can beat me I'll be the first one to congratulate him," said Hugh. "He is a fine ball player and a fine fellow, and there will be no hard feeling on my part whichever way our fight for a regular job with the Detroit club may turn out. I know that I still have a lot to learn about baseball, and if I am sent to the International League to learn I will not be a bit sore. I'll try my best to make good wherever they shift me, and by doing that may be able to get another chance in the big league next year.

"I am young and have plenty of time, and should I fail to make good I will not be discouraged. It is a big jump from the Connecticut to the American League, or even to the International, and whichever way things come out I am sure of a better job at a better salary than I had last season."

TROTT AND KETCHELL MATCH.

CHICAGO, July 19.—Sammy Trott, of Columbus, Ohio, was matched yesterday to fight Steve Ketchell in Winnipeg, Manitoba, August 16. The fight is to be twelve rounds, the men to weight 133 pounds at 3 o'clock. An effort will be made to arrange a match between the winner and Ad Wolgast.

HARVARD TEAMS SHOWED STRONG IN ATHLETICS

Wearers of Crimson Captured Four College Championships for 1912-1913.

BOSTON, MASS., July 19.—The wearers of the Harvard crimson excelled on the intercollegiate athletic field for the academic year of 1912-13. Out of sixteen possible athletic championships the men from Cambridge won four outright and divided honors for the fifth. Harvard triumphed in football, cross-country running, hockey and association football, in addition to dividing the lacrosse title with Johns Hopkins.

Since Johns Hopkins declined the Harvard challenge to play off the tie for the lacrosse title this might reasonably be awarded to Harvard, but when the Harvard challenge reached Baltimore the Southern team had disbanded and was under no obligation to play off the tie.

The University of Pennsylvania scored first in three championships and therefore ranks second to Harvard, with Yale, Cornell and Princeton tied with two championships each. For purposes of computation each championship is regarded as a single point, which would make the score of the eight universities figure as follows: Harvard, 4 1-2; Pennsylvania, 3; Yale, 2; Princeton, 2; Cornell, 2; Syracuse, 1; Columbia, 1; Johns Hopkins, 1-2.

Poor Year for Yale.

Not only did Harvard win outright more championships than any of its rivals, but the Crimson athletes finished second in one of the major sport championships they did not win, besides making a uniformly high record in the many minor sports. In rowing Harvard certainly deserves to rank third, while in track atletics its team did finish second. In baseball the Crimson beat Yale in two out of three games, and while the championship of the diamond is given to the Blue on the season's record, the Crimson deserves to rank second or third. As a further distinction for Harvard, the Crimson beat Yale in three out of four major sports.

The Crimson won in football, baseball and rowing, leaving Yale supreme only on the track, but Harvard made some amends for this by beating out Yale in the I. C. A. A. A. A. track championships. It was a fat year for Harvard and a mighty lean one for Yale.

There isn't any room for dispute over the majority of the championship titles here awarded. In practically all of the minor sports there were associations which arranged schedules that left no doubt as to the competitor winning first place.

In the four major sports—football, baseball, rowing and track athletics—this was possible only in track athletics, but in the three others the supremacy of the teams to which the honor is awarded was sufficient to leave no room for dispute.

Harvard was entitled to the supremacy in football by virtue of going through the season undefeated and beating both Princeton and Yale in decisive fashion. This was a record such as no other team in the country made.

Brickley Football Hero.

There were two or three other teams which finished the season undefeated, but their opponents were not in Harvard's class. Harvard's 1912 eleven was one of the best combinations ever produced at Cambridge. It was an all-round team, excelling its opponents in every department of the game, whether punting, drop and place kicking, end running or line plunging.

At the same time there was one individual on the eleven who deserves to be immortalized in Harvard's football history. This was Charles Brickley, who, although only a sophomore, shone with the brilliancy of a Coy or a Poe.

UNUSUAL RULES AND PLAYS IN BASEBALL

NO. 2.

By J. W. Heisman.

IT is not generally understood by laymen that a player on either coaching line has no right, by the rules, to coach, or to say anything whatsoever, as long as there is no runner on base. All that he says is supposed to be in the nature of advice or instruction to base runners, and as long as there are none on the rule distinctly prohibits him from advising his batter, addressing the umpire, or quarreling with any member of the opposition. It's a pity that umpires do not enforce this rule better for its violation leads, in my opinion, to over half of the squabbles and fines that occur in the game.

Pitching Rules—The Position.

When he delivers the ball to the plate the pitcher must have one foot (the rear one) in contact with the pitcher's plate.

He must, at the instant of delivery, be squarely facing the batter.

He must not take more than one forward step, and both feet must be in front of his plate, or on a line with its front edge. He must not raise either foot until after he has started his delivery.

The Balk.

Not only spectators but a great many baseball experts are often puzzled as to whether a given case does or does not constitute a balk. This is not strange, for there are seven ways, by the rule, that a pitcher can employ to manufacture one of these little oddities—so rarely ever observed by Southern League umpires, even with good telescopes. The trouble is that while one is deciding in their own mind that in a certain delivery that the pitcher illustrated he did not violate this, that and the other canon of good form, we forget that very one remaining rule of the seven which he probably did break. Then, too, you can not positively describe the actions one may go through in throwing either to the plate or to a base, so specifically and definitely but that most any two men will see the pitcher's movements in different ways in case of an argument, and will differ radically as to whether those movements conformed to the rules or did not. Here they are, in brief—mull over them for yourself:

A pitcher makes a balk whenever he starts a wind-up (if he is in the box, has one foot in contact with the plate) and doesn't throw somewhere at the conclusion of that wind-up. If he is not in the box he can whirl his arms and bluff to throw all he pleases.

If he throws to any base to catch a runner he must simultaneously step out directly toward that base with one foot. And if he starts to throw to the plate or to first base he must go through with it and turn the ball loose toward the one place or the other. But he can bluff all he pleases to second and third and will not be penalized if he fails to let the ball go.

If the pitcher delivers the ball to the batter while not conforming to all of the rules regarding the position he should take in the box, he has, of course, committed a balk.

And if he holds the ball so long without delivering it somewhere, as, in the opinion of the umpire, to be unnecessarily delaying the game, he is in hot water again. And if he makes any motion whatever that is habitual with him in his manner of delivery without following that motion up with the ball he is clearly in contempt of court.

* * *

NOW section 7 of the balk rule says that he has also committed a FAUX PAS (French for foxy pass that didn't pan out right) whenever he makes any motion to pitch while standing in his position without having the ball in his possession. While this is true, "all right, all right," it has always puzzled me immensely why they don't go on and include here another way of violating good pitching manners that umpires will everywhere be shocked over, but which is not stated in the rule book anywhere. It is this: If you get in the pitcher's box without the ball in your possession you are committing a balk by that mere fact alone, and whether you mawe "any motion to pitch" or not.

* * *
