MORE DOCTRINE FORCED BY TAFT

Landing of Invading Troops in Canada Would Not Violate Doctrine, Declares the Former President.

Montclair, N. J., November 27.—William Howard Taft, in an address here, declared that the Monroe doctrine, as it is known, is not a doctrine of exclusion, but a doctrine of exclusion.

There are some of the salient features of the doctrine. The landing of troops in Canada by the United States would not constitute a violation of the doctrine, but an effort to establish a permanent government in case of victory would be a violation. There is no question of being pressed in Argentina, Brazil and Chile. These countries can protect themselves and they are not interested in the United States that violation of the doctrine in respect to them would be harmful to this country's interests and safety.

The doctrine has not been applied in Mexico because there is nothing in it which requires the United States to bring about peace in that country.

"Successful waiting," said Taft, was the term applied to the United States in Mexico. It was not a waiting, but a waiting for the United States to bring about peace in that country.

Germany and Canada. Mr. Taft said that the Monroe doctrine might not be applicable to Germany. "It has been said," he said, "that the Monroe doctrine is a doctrine of exclusion, but it is not a doctrine of exclusion."

Of the possibility of Great Britain's sending troops to Canada, Taft said that the United States would not object. "It is not a doctrine of exclusion," he said, "but a doctrine of exclusion."

Mr. Taft said that the Monroe doctrine is a doctrine of exclusion, but it is not a doctrine of exclusion. "It is not a doctrine of exclusion," he said, "but a doctrine of exclusion."

which other still is approximating a victory which would justify a final verdict. The resources of all of them have been by no means exhausted. American travelers returned from Germany report that empire is able still to place many hundred thousand fresh men in the field, and that, the spirit of the country is still so fresh and buoyant that its enormous armaments. Less is known of Austria, though the current belief is that she can command fewer reserves of men and money than Germany.

The allies are situated similarly. In England an army of 1,500,000 men is in training, and the other day parliament authorized the raising of another army of equal size. This is not to reckon with the troops and supplies pouring into the field from Great Britain's dependencies. France has not yet sent her final reserves to the front, by any manner of means. And, in anticipation of a long war, she is said to be rigorously training young boys in their teens not out of school.

Of course, some smothering and unexpected turning of the tide on either side might bring the war to a cyclonic conclusion. But we must not give us indication of such developments.

NO SNAP JUDGMENT.

One of the greatest calamities that could happen to this country would be for it to pitch a military or naval program of any sort upon a premature reading of the lessons of the war in Europe. There is danger that we may be tempted to do this.

Already the country, and in a way, congress, are lined up into two different camps, one clamoring for an overwhelming army and navy and the other for something resembling the conscription law. Either one of these attitudes is based upon the assumption that we have already been able to draw the final premise from Europe's affliction. We have not, emphatically. The deductions that seem conclusive today may be ridiculous tomorrow.

That is why The Constitution wants to see this country's military and naval policy made haste slowly in any fundamental changes, until it is possible to interpret a little more intelligently through the smoke of the battlefields of Europe. If we mold a policy prematurely we may either waste hundreds of millions, and commit ourselves ruthlessly for decades, or we may fall far short of the mark in the hour.

This does not mean that preparation should mark time until the completion of the war, which may be one or three years removed. It does mean that whatever is done should be built upon accurate and judicial investigation of the war, military or pacificist security.

Evidences are already plentiful that congress will be bombarded by advocates of the two schools. For the sake of the present country, and for the sake of posterity, let us hope that congress will refuse to be stampeded off its feet to any extreme. If ever the call was for sanity and calm judgment, it is now.

THE "SAME OLD BILL."

The spectacular William Sulzer, who was among those pulverized in the recent new election, has been elected to congress. He is a man of the old school, and he is a man of the old school. He is a man of the old school, and he is a man of the old school.

Not so, Bill. It is perfectly true that you may have been a contributing factor to the downfall of the contributing editor, but just how large a factor will ever be a matter for dispute. One thing is certain: that Roosevelt was beaten in New York, not by Sulzer or his friends, but by Roosevelt himself.

If the Colonel had gone down to defeat in the Empire State but emerged triumphant elsewhere, there might be some ground for the belief that the Colonel was a man of the old school. But the Colonel was routed all along the line. The only creditable showing the bull moose made was in California, and that was to be attributed, we think, rather more to the personal popularity of the Colonel than to the magic of the bull moose cry.

The year 1914 was and still is a bad year for ragaries and nostrums, political and otherwise. The immensity of the European war has stamped out into a new and true perspective. They do not want quick panaceas. They want the real thing. They are seeing, too, that the democratic party is perfectly able to put into effect whatever of its policies it chooses to carry out.

The rest go into the political scrap heap, or must wait a new period of readjustment. The boating, therefore, of the idiosyncratic Sulzer is somewhat ill-timed. As an experiment in personal popularity and public influence, we should like to see Bill and the Colonel strip politically, and run for the same office before the people. Our intuition is far wrong if they could not light at Oyster Bay.

It's time to say that battleships Dreadnaught and the submarine. Not to mention money, there's the war tax of your time and patience.

The Boston Journal speaks of Senator Lodge's "ringing speech." (See "sounding brass and thinking symbol.") The war is the allies as well as the Germans. It is the realization that the war is the allies as well as the Germans. It is the realization that the war is the allies as well as the Germans.

Now, will Mexico know what to do with a redeemed, rejuvenated Veracruz? To rest up, Carranza should alternate with a real live talking machine.

And now the Prosperity "P" has the signals for the Christmas season.

well by using Resinol Soap

The regular use of Resinol Soap is usually enough to prevent those distressing rashes and chafings to which most babies are subject.

This is so, first, because Resinol Soap is absolutely pure and free from harsh alkali, and second, because it contains the Resinol medication, on which so many physicians rely for the treatment of skin troubles.

PAYMENTS SUSPENDED ON BONDS BY TURKEY

Amsterdam, November 21.—(Via London.)—A dispatch from Constantinople says that it has been officially announced there by the minister of finance that the interest on the loan of 1899 will be paid only to such bondholders as present themselves at the central office of the ministry of finance there.

The Constantinople announcement refers to a loan of 189,000,000 francs ($31,800,000) issued at 4 per cent in 1898. Interest is payable semi-annually, the next payment being due on December 15. The action of the Turkish finance minister means that interest payments probably will be suspended on the bulk of these bonds, which are held abroad, and that others would find it impracticable or, in view of the war, almost impossible to go to Constantinople to make collections.

MRS. GAYLE FORBUSH FORSAKES ATLANTA

proceedings against the dancing artist, and had her three trunks attached in the hotel. Two of them were empty. The third contained the storehouse of Mrs. Forbush's wardrobe. The small army of them had been overlooked by the landlady.

Behind the ostentatious, she mailed President Curtis from the train at Louisville, either on the train or at the hotel, she was determined to leave. Although the dance of the Turkish revolution club was not enhanced by the captivating performance of the versatile Mrs. Forbush and her handsome partner, the entertainment was a brilliant one. (See society column.)

Hereafter the Turkish revolution club, it was announced last night, will make its headquarters at the Hotel de Ville, 100 Broadway, where it will furnish with all the comforts and conveniences that typify her other dance deals in Atlanta.

Society says that the trouble with Mrs. Forbush was that she tried to put on too much speed. Coming to the city, she found that it was dance mad, but not much enough to plunge headlong into fate and affairs—as well as other arrangements—that would stain the back of a milliner.

First, she launched the supper at the Hotel de Ville, and then the dance at the Hotel de Ville. The place was tastefully constructed in the form of a huge trellis garden, and was called the "trellis room." With the supper and the dance, Mrs. Forbush had done herself proudly in building the trellis room, and society says that she had done it well.

But, with the dancing supper at the Hotel de Ville, she applied the right dose of haste to her business and the shoulders of the little and limited dance room, and society says that she had done it well.

At this point she abandoned the glory and beauty of the trellis room to establish the "trellis room" in a more modest and less expensive way.

Society satirized her liberality, but not liberally enough to balance up the weekly expenses of her life. She was a woman of means, and she was a woman of means. She was a woman of means, and she was a woman of means.

ENGLAND'S WAR LOAN IS OVERSUBSCRIBED

Lloyd-George Tells of Britain's Ability to Collect $5,000,000 Debt From U. S.

London, November 21.—Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd-George announced in the house of commons today that the war loan of £100,000,000 ($1,500,000,000) had been completely oversubscribed.

He said, however, that a feature of the loan was the enormous number of small subscriptions, totaling nearly 100,000, who had made application for small sums. These, the chancellor declared, would receive the first allotment.

In the course of a statement concerning financial conditions in the country the chancellor stated that the financial outlook, which followed the outbreak of war was one of inability to meet the obligations of the government.

As an instance, Mr. Lloyd-George referred to the United States, where a financial outlook, which followed the outbreak of war was one of inability to meet the obligations of the government.

Dealing with the steps taken by the government to assist countries during the war Mr. Lloyd-George said that the government had been very successful in making such a wonderful amount of the war loan, and that the government had been very successful in making such a wonderful amount of the war loan.

Referring to the cotton trade, Mr. Lloyd-George said that the cotton trade had been very successful in making such a wonderful amount of the war loan, and that the government had been very successful in making such a wonderful amount of the war loan.

He had not merely on one occasion, but on many occasions, the cotton trade had been very successful in making such a wonderful amount of the war loan, and that the government had been very successful in making such a wonderful amount of the war loan.
