

FRANK TRIED TO SECURE COMPLETE BRIEF FOR SUPREME COURT

State's Right to Enforce Own Criminal Laws Upheld by Hugh M. Dorsey and Warren Grice.

SAY DISORDER CHARGES ARE GREATLY ENLARGED

Frank's Brief, Filed Saturday in Washington, Pronounces Trial a Travesty of Justice.

Ascertaining the right of every state of the union to make and enforce its own criminal laws, free from interference or supervision by the federal courts, and giving the defendant the right to be tried by the United States itself to support this contention, the brief of the state of Georgia in the Leo M. Frank case, filed Saturday night after several weeks of persistent work by Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey and Attorney General Warren Grice.

Within a few hours after the completion of the brief Mr. Dorsey left for Washington. The rules of the supreme court requiring that a printed brief be filed, Mr. Dorsey took with him the first copy of the brief of the press of the official state printer—Charles B. Byrd.

Attorney General Grice will leave Sunday for Washington, and he and Mr. Dorsey will file the brief in the supreme court on Monday. The brief of counsel for Leo M. Frank was filed on Saturday. The hearing before the supreme court is set for next Tuesday.

Upholds Rights of State. The brief is a voluminous document, containing eighty-five pages and citing over 200 judicial decisions, not only from Georgia and the United States supreme court, but also from many other states, to uphold the contention that the Frank verdict is legal, and should stand.

The principal argument of the state is that the absence of Frank at the trial, from whatever cause, does not constitute a denial to him of any inherent right, and in no way injured him, but that at most it was a mere technical irregularity, and that the state of Georgia has the sole right to decide what the effect of such an irregularity shall be.

Kaiser's Forces Are Badly Beaten at Fortress of Osovetz in Russian Poland and Are Retreating to East Prussia.

Victory of Russians UPSETS GERMAN PLANS

Whole of the German Line Along East Prussian Frontier Reported in Danger. Anglo-French Forces Continue to Force the Fighting on the Western Front.

London, February 20.—The Germans have been defeated by the Russians at the fortress of Osovetz, in Russian Poland, according to advice received here from Petrograd, are now retreating to the East Prussian frontier. Should this prove to be correct the German plan would be entirely upset, as defeat at this point would endanger the whole of their line northward along the East Prussian frontier.

In the remainder of Poland and in the Carpathians, where severe fighting continues, there has been no change in the relative positions of the opposing armies, while in Bukovina the fighting has been confined to the Carpathian front. WARSHIPS RAN SHELLS ON DARDANELLES FORTS AND DO GREAT DAMAGE

British Admiralty Reports
Forts on European Side
Silenced—Greek Accounts Report Asiatic Ports Also Silenced.

ALLIES ARE RESOLVED TO FORCE DARDANELLES

This Will Bring Turkey to Knees and Also Release
the Great Russian Wheat Crop—Many British and French Warships Took Part in Bombardment.

London, February 20.—The first serious attack by the British and French Mediterranean fleets, assisted by aeroplanes and submarines, on the Dardanelles forts, which commenced yesterday and continued today, has met with considerable success, according to the British official accounts and unofficial accounts received at Athens from the island of Tenedos, at the entrance to the straits.

The Turkish official report, however, stated that no damage had been done to the forts, and that the casualties of the defenders consisted of one killed and one wounded, but that three of the warships were damaged by shells from the forts.

British reports said that the forts on the European side of the straits were silenced yesterday and that only one of the forts on the Asiatic side was still firing yesterday morning, while none of the warships had been damaged.

The Greek accounts said the Asiatic forts were silenced today, but no official report of this bombardment has been issued by the admiralty as yet.

Many Ships Engaged Fought.

The bombardment must have been one of the most serious ever undertaken, in the opinion of naval experts, for no less than eight battleships and armored cruisers took part, these warships having a total of thirty 12-inch and six 18-inch guns which outranged the guns of the forts.

Early Friday morning this fleet, including the British battle cruiser Inflexible, which had just returned from the Falkland Islands where, with other ships, she took part in the battle in which Admiral Count von Spee's German squadron was destroyed, opened a long-range bombardment on the forts at Cape Helles and at Kum Kaleh, at the entrance to the straits. When these forts had been silenced the British fleet closed in and engaged the forts with its 4 and 5-inch guns which, it is believed, must have poured an enormous rain of shells on the Turkish positions.

Besides desiring to bring Turkey to her knees, the allies in their attempt to force the Dardanelles, aim at an early release of the Russian wheat which is locked up in Russian warehouses and which the allies wish to get out, both to relieve the markets and to provide money for the Turkish government to pay for war material bought abroad.

Official Story of Bombardment.

The text of the admiralty's announcement following at 8 o'clock a British fleet of battleships and battle cruisers, accompanied by a strong French squadron, the whole under the command of Admiral Carden, began an attack upon the forts at the entrance of the Dardanelles.

The forts at Cape Helles and Kum Kaleh were bombarded with shells.

Victory Thursday Will Mean Much to Whitney or Abel

The leader of fame and fortune in southern pugilism is a pretty steep hill to climb, and when a couple of men like Frank Whitney and Abel arrive at the same point at the same time and begin trying to step over each other, somebody is due to take a tumble.

That is what the Atlanta fight fans are looking for next Thursday night at the Big theater, when Whitney and the Chattanooga boxer make it in the main event to see who is the better man on the climb to meet Beecher, Mandot, Dundee and the rest of the big names, and which shall have to start over again in the campaign for the big money.

The bout, aside from being a "punch" affair, is personally, is tremendously important to both the boys. They met here about two years ago and their encounter resulted in a first little draw—the kind that didn't wait either of them.

Since then, both Whitney and Abel have been after Mike Saul to be matched against one of the three or four top-class men in the game for an Atlanta fight.

Now, Mike has fixed up the present bout as a sort of elimination contest. The winner will get a whack at one of the Beecher, Mandot, Dundee company, and the loser will have to stage a mighty night come-back stunt to continue at quick speed on his way to fame and fortune.

Neither boy is taking any chances. Up in Chattanooga, Jack White and Terry Nelson, who have fought Whitney, are working with Abel and coaching him in Frank's tactics, and at the metropolitan club here Whitney is continuing himself with the utmost care and pains.

There can be no doubt about the weight this time, as the bout is at catch weights. As to the verdict, that will be handed down by the three Atlanta sporting editors, with Mike Saul simply acting as the fourth man in the ring to keep things moving in the free and slugging style—which things are certain to do anyway.

Abel, who is on sale at the Rex, Chess place and the Dixie hotel, is at Five Points, and the advance does not indicate a fine house for Thursday night.

HARLEY-DAVIDSON MOTORS SOLD TO CITY OF ATLANTA

This is quite a compliment to the Harley-Davidson motor, which is a fact that they are going used by quite a number of city departments throughout the country, and in Atlanta the commercial value of the Harley-Davidson is recognized the city engineer.

The team is to move to New York City, and it is said that no objection would be made to a transfer of the Jersey City team there, as the move would bring any possible damage to the city. DR. GEO. J. FISHER HERE TUESDAY

Famous Physical Director Will Make Many Talks During His Three Days' Visit to Atlanta.

Dr. George J. Fisher, of the international committee of the Young Men's Christian association of New York, will arrive in Atlanta Tuesday morning, February 22, and will bring to this city a health message which will reach the business men, the young men, high school and grammar school boys as well as the women of the city.

Dr. Fisher comes at the invitation of the local Young Men's Christian association and every minute of his stay in Atlanta will be taken up with talks to various groups of men and boys.

An invitation was sent by the local committee to each physical director in the states, inviting them to visit Atlanta at this time and take part in the conference planned by Dr. Fisher. Although this is not a state conference, the majority of the physical directors of the state will be taken up with talks to various groups of men and boys.

These men will probably arrive in Atlanta early Tuesday morning and their first conference will be held at noon when the board of directors of the local association, the employed staff and the visiting physical directors will meet with Dr. Fisher. At this time Marion M. Jordan, president of the association, will deliver an address of welcome to Dr. Fisher and the visiting physical directors.

Following which Dr. Fisher will address the group on "The Duties of the Young Men's Christian Association to the Community." Some of the volunteer workers and committees will also be present at this luncheon. Dr. Fisher is, without a doubt, one of our leading men in physical education and has taken an active part in the promotion of health and sanitation in our country for many years.

The following is the program for the three-day conference with Dr. Fisher: Tuesday, February 22.

LOCAL PREP LEAGUE TO END THE SEASON

Championship Will Be Decided by the Outcome of Games Tuesday.

Club Standing.

TEAM—Won. Lost. P. C. Mariet 2 0 1.000 Tech High 1 1 .500 Tech High 1 1 .500 Donald Fraser 1 1 .500

The game Tuesday afternoon will be one of the most strenuous struggles two prep teams have ever staged, and as they are about as evenly matched as it is possible for two prep teams to be, there is no possible foretelling the winner.

The league has known a very successful season this year, and some of the hardest fought games ever staged between two rival prep teams have been staged.

Tuesday afternoon Peacock and O. M. A. also tie up in their final game. Peacock is hopelessly lost, but O. M. A. has a chance to tie with Tech High for third place, and this game also promises to be a bumper from the start.

Donald Fraser and Mariet have a postponed game to play after the season ends. Provided Mariet wins Tuesday's struggle, this game will not be necessary, as they would still lead the league in the event of losing to O. M. A., but if they should lose and defeat Donald Fraser, they will then be tied with Tech High for the lead, necessitating a post-season game to decide the championship.

Art Association to Show Pictures by Americans

A splendid exhibition of paintings is to be given in Atlanta the first two weeks of March under the auspices of the Atlanta Art Association. The association is a new organization, and its first exhibition is a promise to be one of the most interesting events of the Lenten season, as each of the artists represented is among the foremost in the United States and is sending one or more of his best works to Atlanta. The names alone to lovers of the arts of painting and etching will suggest endless delight. That such of these artists as have been invited to exhibit and have work now on exhibition at the Panama exposition will prove to those who do not know them by name what their standing is in America. J. H. Mackin will show six canvases of the hills and valleys about the picturesque Maine woods. His rain effects are described as vividly giving the impression of "mist, foggy, somber days across the distant hills and yet the sky has a luminous quality."

Frank D. Smith, who is a Kentuckian, is "one of the most remarkable figures in American art." It was he who struck the first note of this great modern American awakening in an exhibit he held in Boston in 1875. H. M. Vaseel will show a number of paintings among them his "Oriental Study," which caused such favorable comment at the recent exhibit in Cincinnati. Other artists who will be represented will be J. H. Sharp, Edward Volkert, James H. Hopkins, J. E. Kunz, and a charming group of etchings and dry points by Dwight C. Sturges.

Mrs. Southwick's Reading For Martha Berry School

Mrs. Southwick of the Emersonian school of Oratory, Boston, will read from Browning in the ballroom of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Grant, the afternoon of Saturday, February 20, for the benefit of the Martha Berry school. The reading will be under the auspices of Atlanta Martha Berry circle, which Mrs. Frank Inman is president. The tickets of admission are $1, and may be obtained from Mrs. Hugh Richardson, or at the home of Mrs. Grant, Saturday afternoon.

It is the earnest desire of the circle to secure sufficient funds through the lecture to insure their aid to the school this year, going through scholarships for young Georgia girls who, at the Martha Berry school, acquire most practical training under expert direction. The scholarships are $50, and each year, through the Atlanta circle, Atlanta has been able to show her appreciation of a worthy institution of national fame, and founded and continually promoted in its success by the love and life work of a Georgia woman, Miss Martha Berry.

Rook Party.

Mrs. Clara Short was the charming hostess at a rook party, given at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Grant, on Cherry street, in East Polk, Tuesday evening. In the decorations and score cards the Valentine idea was carried out in detail. The prizes were won by Mr. M. F. Hunter, and Miss Clark. Miss Short received her guests wearing a handsome gown of rose-colored crepe de Chine. She was assisted in receiving by her niece, Miss Rebecca Kohler, who wore a dainty frock of blue chiffon. A salad course was served to twenty guests after the game was finished.

At the first peep of the brave little crocus every woman pricks up her ears for the spring note—and the newness thereof being its charm, she reaches out eagerly for it. Now this is true of all women, high, low, rich and poor, and there's no denying it. The strong desire is to put her "best foot forward" and keep apace with the season.

The Fit and the Fullness of the New Suit

To begin with materials, everything with a fine rib in it—grograin cloth, covert, whipcord and some gabardine weaves have the lead; colors are somber in the main, with a touch that tells of bright blue, green, dahlia or black and white, or sand shades to contrast with dark blue. Spring shades run the gamut of sand and putty, beige, grays and blues, and black is always good. Coats are close fitting, that is, about the shoulders and sleeves; otherwise they are loosely belted or swing from yoke in box or side pleats reaching barely the hip line, many are short, clinging Etons, or even stingy cut-away bolero jackets of Turkish intent are seen. Whatever they are, the best is shown at Allen's—the result of the work of the best fashion makers, who say what we shall wear—$19.75, $25.00, $29.75, $35.00, $40.00 and up to $125.00.

Popular Price and Quality Discussed by Wylie West

"Popular prices on tires are as desirable as so everything else the public buys," said Wylie West, and it is a striking illustration of what scientific manufacturing methods on a stupendous scale and economical distribution can do, that such a tire as the Firestone can be sold at the price of the ordinary.

"But popular price alone will never satisfy the experienced buyer of tires. When you think of it you will realize that it is no other line of goods in the sale of what you paid for so quickly put to the test as in tires. They go right from the hands of the dealer to all the grueling tests of the road."

"It is poor consolation to the motorist laboring under all the conceivable afflictions of tire trouble to reflect that he bought tires cheaper than any of his friends."

"There is an old saying by a famous maker of quality goods, copyrighted, I believe, that the recollection of quality remains long after the price is forgotten. These words were never spoken—especially of tires."

"The car owner has a keen recollection both of good and bad tires. That is why dealers who are in the tire business to stay insist on quality with price. Popular price alone does not hold the customer. The Kickback

WOMAN IN SAXON CAR MAKES A LONG TRIP

Mrs. Emma E. Walsh Drives From Lauderdale, Fla., to Mobile, Ill.

A continuous trip in a Saxon car from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., to Mobile, Ill., is the record established by Mrs. Emma E. Walsh, of the Illinois city. This is the longest trip ever made in a Saxon car by a woman. Much of the route was through sand and mud.

"Between New Smyrna and St. Augustine," relates Mrs. Walsh, in telling of her trip, "we drove through some 15 miles of sand, which reached up to the hubs of the wheels. It was necessary to drive this on low gear."

"Between Jacksonville and Lake City, up in the northern part of Florida, we were obliged to drive 45 miles through the worst sand I ever saw."

"I'm sure the best roads we found were in the state of Georgia. While in most cases, we encountered some very big hills and quite a little mud. In going through Tennessee we crossed the Cumberland mountains, and it surely was some climbing. On top of one of the mountains we found a large car stuck in a mud hole and had the pleasure of helping it out."

"We covered the whole distance from Fort Lauderdale on three of the four original tires we started with."

"During the entire trip we used $9.99 worth of gasoline and, while we did not keep track of the figures on oil consumption, we are sure that it was small. Of course, one must take into consideration the roads we drove over—the deep sand, mud, hills, mountains and cobblestone roads in Kentucky, and fresh broken hard roads through Tennessee and Indiana."

The route taken was: Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; Jacksonville, Fla.; Nashville, Tenn.; Louisville, Ky.; Indianapolis, Ind.; Chicago, Ill.; Bloomington, Ill.; Peoria, Ill.; Oglethorpe, Ill.; then on to Rock Island and into Mobile.

"Much is said about the care necessary to obtain good service from pneumatic tires. But there isn't much said about the care of solid tires," declares the head of the service department of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company, "and as the truck industry develops this becomes a more and more important subject."

In fact, one hears rather how truck tires don't need any watching. That probably accounts for a good deal of the tire trouble truck owners experience. It is true that compared to pneumatic tires, solids need little care, but what care they do need is absolutely essential to full mileage.

By far the most important precaution is to see that your tires are not overloaded. And here is the reason: Everybody realizes that rubber, if stretched too far, will break. Very few people realize that rubber if compressed too tightly will break also. That is just what happens when too great a load is imposed on a truck tire. The tire is compressed between two unyielding surfaces, the road and the steel base of the tire. If the load is too great, the compression becomes too much and the molecular structure of the rubber is broken down.

Another point in connection with this matter of overloading that isn't generally understood is that one overloading will ruin a tire for good. Take a toy rubber ball, blow it up. It stretches and stretches. But at a certain point it breaks. And after that the ball is no good. It can't be blown up again. The same is true with a truck tire only in a different way. Put a solid tire on a truck and load the truck. The tire compresses and compresses up to a certain point and then breaks. Once it is broken it can't be used again with satisfactory results.

The best tire advice that we can give a truck owner, then, is: "Load your truck with tires adequate to carry the load you want to put on them—then give your driver hard and fast instructions that to that point he shall load the truck and no farther."

JOHNSON MUST TRAIN HARD TO BEAT WILLARD

New York, February 20.—Jack Johnson must do some strenuous training if he wishes to retain his championship title at Juarez next month, in the opinion of officers of the freight steamship Highland Harris, on which the champion was a passenger from Montevideo, Uruguay, to Baltimore, where he left the vessel on February 7 and chartered a 280-ton schooner to take him and the vessel to Mexico. The Highland Harris reached her dock here yesterday.

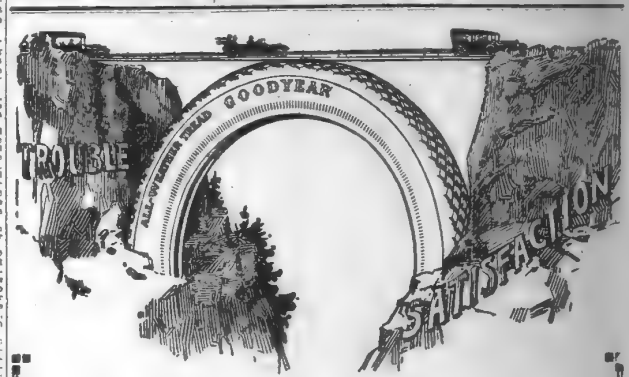

Johnson was accompanied by Frank Hagney, of Sydney, boxer and swimmer, who is acting as his trainer for the contest with Willard.

Johnson did not real training while on shipboard, but was careful of his diet. He expected to begin real work for the fight as soon as he landed in Mexico. Johnson explained that he had in his arm boxing, southpaw while en route from Montevideo to Buenos Aires, and did not wish to take another risk.

Critics of the Highland Harris said that as Johnson had not trained between the time he left Montevideo on January 20 and his arrival at Tampico, Mexico, on Thursday, unusual measures would have to be adopted by the champion if he hoped to get in good condition to meet Jesse Willard on March 6, the date set for the fight at Juarez.

The Fortified Tire Spans the Way from Trouble. Trust It Once

Let It Tell Its Story

Let the Goodyear tire tell you what it means to travel on Fortified Tires.

Fortified is more than a name. It means a tire with five protections offered by no one else. They have cost us years of effort and millions of dollars.

They have won for this tire the top place in Tiredom—the highest prestige and the largest sales.

In the best way known they combat
Rim-Cuts Loose Treads Punctures
Blowouts Insecurity Skidding
Let them prove this to you.

Not Trouble-Proof

We don't claim the impossible—a trouble-proof tire. But Goodyears average best.

They could never hold the lead—and hold it for years—unless that were true, as you know.

These are super-quality tires. Not in materials alone, but in features. We protect you in five exclusive ways. And one of them alone adds to our cost $450,000 per year.

Tests which can't be disputed prove that these features save tire users millions yearly.

Yet Prices Come Down

Despite these improvements Goodyear prices have constantly come down. We have made three big reductions in two years. Our last—made February 1st—makes the two-year total 45 per cent.

Our mammoth production—the largest in the world—lets us give you in Goodyears the most for your money. And we always shall.

One for Every Car

Last year we sold 1,479,883—about one for every car in use. Think what a tire this must be to dominate like that.

Fortified Tires mean less tax and less trouble. They mean more safety, more enjoyment. Those things are waiting you at any Goodyear Service Station.

Any dealer can supply you Goodyear tires. If the wanted size is not in stock, he will telephone our local branch.

Simplified Driving

On the Overland (Model 80) steering column is a set of electric buttons. By just gently pressing these buttons, the car is electrically started, stopped and lighted.

No other method is as simple, as accessible, as positive or as reliable.

"But"—say you—"other cars have this advantage."

Certainly—but only those cars that sell at a much higher price.

Why pay more?

BOYS' HIGH STATS BASEBALL WORK

By Calling Meeting of All Prospective Candidates. New Alphonian Officers Take Charge.

The seventh grade B is very much obliged to Vivian Vaughn for bringing them a beautiful pot of pansies. The little boys of the third grade are drinking "The Kool-Aid" of the Silver Shield. These little folks had a spelling match last week and many of them stood up.

Taking in consideration the bad weather we think our school averages for the week was very good. It being a per cent. Four grades averages were above 80 per cent. They were seventh B 82.5; fifth A 84.5; second 94.4.

The sixth B boys have been very busy working on the yard steadily for the past week.

The eighth grade A and B enjoyed a "Lemonade Social" given by Miss Schuler, she talked about all the birds that we see more often around us and then, too, about the different kinds of woodpeckers. We enjoyed it very much and hope we can see soon as the weather warms up and we can then live and learn about the trees.

Farmers Seeking Employees From Labor Federation Bureau

The only expense he seems to be incurring, Mr. Marks says, is that of postage, as the bureau is conducted without charge to those availing themselves of its services. A prospective employer is required to state definitely what he is willing to offer, and Mr. Marks will be referred to those seeking such a job.

Many kinds of situations have been met by Mr. Marks, and a gratifying number of adjustments satisfactorily made. One Eisenhahn and his wife recently emigrated to the United States because they could not make a living in their old country. He had previously have sought aid from the exchange. Both he and his wife were experienced under the demands of intensive farming abroad. Mr. Marks has been able to find them suitable communication with farmers who were looking for the help they could offer.

Can't Stop Export

(FROM THE Cleveland Leader.)

It is a waste of time and energy to petition congress and the president to stop the exporting of wheat, flour and other food staples, or any of them. The reasons are perfectly plain.

The constitution expressly forbids the federal government to regulate the foreign commerce of the United States. This clause was written into the fundamental law of the nation to prevent possible abuse of power by congress or the president to alter or repeal the provisions

Behind the Screens

With Britt Craig

The walnut tree and the hickory, Productive though they be,
Could never bear a nut so rare
As any Family tree.

Wherein Our Best Bow Is Made.
Aided and abetted by our best friend and admirer, Mr. B. Craig, we have been elected to fill this space each week with flimsy monologues, trespassing two columns, sometimes more, sometimes less, upon the moving picture business.

It is going to be a permanent proposition, otherwise our raise in salary won't hold good. If, at any time, you don't like the column we warn you in advance that a threat to cancel your subscription is now considered small town stuff, and is no longer used in the best of circles.

You will note a piece of poetry at the top. It was put there at great risk of scaring our customers away. Its object is solely to keep in style. All other columns like this are poetry, only the others are not like this. Our purpose in putting it first was to hurry and get it over with.

If by any means a joke appears in this column wherein you fail to see the laugh, we have facilitated matters by inaugurating an information bureau. If you will kindly communicate with the editor of this bureau you will be promptly supplied with the point of said joke.

We'll Have Original Stuff

If We Must Steal It.

In announcing the weekly perpetuation of this column, we seek to impress upon the public the fact that nothing will be put in it that isn't original. Original! That's the word.
We assure you that no matter how much stuff is clipped, it will, without fail, always be made to look as if it were original.

(Thanks for the applause.)

There is positively no ulterior motive in mind, no sinister design. We have no grudge against the movie fans who read "The Constitution." Our intentions are the kind that makes glorious paving material in a famous winter resort.

If you don't care to laugh, turn over to the market page, where you can keep at the decline of comparative poor receipts.

Having bowed, scraped and salaamed as much as we feel like doing this morning, we will now proceed to bomb the vicinity with screen shrapnel.

WAS MARY

BENEVOLENT?

This from The (N. Y.) Morning

Telegraph:

"Mary, who, in Universal star was born to the screen, has been labeled as a 'good girl' by the low risk, triumph with two husbands and two marriages, while each picture being held in New York by the Save-a-Home fund."

The question now arises, what was it Mary gave?

Please Be Merciful With This One.

A. C. Bromberg says: "I'm no longer neutral!"

But what's the difference? He's Mutual, anyhow.

Myers is Out of His Sphere.

Tradewinds publishes this article:

In The M-Sage, Harry Myers, the famous actor and director, had to leave town a victim of the second stage, and so on in both hands, he could not get out of the window seat real fast, while each picture shot away from him at a rate of 10 feet. He burst out a first-class comedian.

Myers qualifies for a first-class
comedian.

Questions and Answers

WE FURNISH BOTH

(This department will be devoted to the exclusive interest of a "movie-loving public desiring education, cultivation, enlightenment. All questions that we can answer we will take great pleasure in answering. Guide your queries accordingly.)

Q.—Is John Bunny married?—Lovelorn.

A.—From last accounts. But not to Flora Finch.

(Somebody does love a fat man.)

Q.—Why did Mary Pickford marry so young? Didn't she love single benedictines?—Anahla.

A.—Yes, but she loved Owen
Moore. (Authentic.)

Q.—What shall I do with rejected scenarios?—Ima Nauter.

A.—Let them be a lesson to your friends.

Flashed upon the screen at Alamo
No. 2 last week:

"Don't fail to see 'Her Supreme Sacrifice'."

"Should Ora have sacrificed her own happiness when she saw she stood in the way of her husband's future?"

We could answer that question better, perhaps, if we knew how much happiness Ora had.

Why Not Use Eggs?

Another from The (N. Y.) Telegraph:

"While taking a scene in which Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran, the Nestor comedians, were in the kitchen of a cave, a cabbage, thrown by Lyons, which was intended for Lee, missed and hit—Victoria Ford. The latter said it was she who was on the way home, adorned in one of her prettiest frocks.

Throwing cabbages?

Were they anticipating?

We Can't Resist This One.

Extract from "Trent's Gospel":

"What a gripping love scene Gorch could have put over."

Jettings About Town

Mr. B. Oldknow returned some few days back from Manhattan, where he looked after various interests, and, according to reports, various interests took particular pleasure in looking after him.

The universal magnet used to sign himself "Yours Universally." Now he has a new one: "Yours for Universal Peace."

Mr. C. Kenschik, responsible in this territory for "Zadora," came back last week from a trip in and about the Carolinas, where he spent considerable time informing the natives that "Zadora" was now "The $20,000,000 Mystery." "Zadora" always has been considerable mystery to me.

Willie Sharp, rechristened Bill at his own solicitation, who has been endemic in Memphis, here lately in interest of "Neptune's Daughter" and "The Submarine," enjoyed a real Sunday last week, spent in Atlanta.

BLANCHE SWEET.

Blanche Sweet is one of the most popular favorites of the screen. Local lovers of her work observed Monday and Tuesday for the first time her efforts under new direction, when "The Warrens of Virginia," a Fred Lasky feature, was offered at the Montgomery. Since her advent into moving picture business, but a few years ago, Miss Sweet had always been under the personal direction of the great David W. Griffith, her Christopher Columbus.

Under the master guidance of Griffith, she was an appealing actress.
Her individuality radiated from the lifeless screen. But it was plain to be seen that in "The Warrens" picture she lacked the subtle Griffith touches and stimulus. Luckily, however, Miss Sweet is endowed with a wondrous element of personal charm and magnetism that are of sufficient force to counteract the loss of the Griffith touch.

During his early days as a director in the Biograph studios, in which Miss Sweet made her debut, Griffith elevated her from the obscurity of stardom to the constellation of stardom. He carried her, with other stars, when he deserted the Biograph for the chief directorship of the Reliance and Majestic studios. Until her departure for the Lasky organization Miss Sweet was considered the pride of the Griffith pick.

Borrowed Biographies

Mae Marsh, the Majestic star, and one of the freshest, most buoyant in the business, even if she isn't the prettiest, denies having temperament, but admits freckles. She's proud of them; they got her her first job.

Two years ago, when she stole into the Biograph studio to investigate the source of many pistol shots, Director Griffith happened to catch sight of her freckles as gliding in the sunlight.
He walked over, put a hand on her head and studied her closely.

"You have a shapely head," he commented.

"Aw, them freckles," she replied.

He brushed the straw-colored hair back over her forehead, gazed intently upon the transformation, then exclaimed:

"You're beautiful. Any girl who can roll her hair back from her forehead and stand the test, is gifted by nature."

"But I'm not," protested the spindlylegged girl. "I'm the ugliest heathen in our neighborhood—and that's somebody."

Truly, her reputation for homelessness, awkwardness and general lack of charm had exceeded even the boundaries of her own neighborhood.

"I'll give you a job acting," Griffith offered.

"Give it here," she urged.

Whereupon, Mae Marsh, the now

You Will See Them All in Atlanta Theaters Soon

Illustrous, went to work. One of her greatest roles was "Jennie Joyce," in Griffith's notable feature, "The Escape." She is one of the valued stars in the Griffith firmament.

THE HYPOCRITES.

Now that "The Hypocrites" is booked for the Lyric all of the week of March 1, we will have a chance, perhaps, to get a line on the views of our own board of censorship. "The Hypocrites" has startled the east. It is a moral play and a sermon, and is reputed to be one of Bosworth's most elaborate offerings. Portraying the role of Truth, Miss Myrtle Edwards occupies in the neighborhood of 1,000 feet of film clad only in her personality. And it is this phase of "The Hypocrites" that is likely to be productive of the scrutiny on the part of the Atlanta censoring board that will either amuse or gratify us.

There is one thing, at least, to be said in this connection: The Atlanta board permitted Kellerman in simply her hair, and gave a clear track to "The House of Bondage," an underworld picture that made no pretenses whatever. Surely allegorical audacious isn't going to astute our morals?

Why should a stolen kiss on the left hand cause "great mental shock and suffering?" Genevieve Leboe, a stamper, fair and pretty, will be forced to answer this question when she prosecutes her own suit, superior court for $50,000 damages against J. D. Patterson, superintendent of the Atlanta Joint Terminals, and against his employers, the Louisville and Nashville, Atlantic Coast Line and Atlanta and West Point railways.

Miss Leboe, who lives at 180-A East Fair street, was recently employed in Mr. Patterson's office. She charges that he "unlawfully, negligently, maliciously, wantonly, wilfully, without cause and against her will, did grab and kiss her left hand, after which she did jerk it away with great force."

She further alleges that the stolen kiss on the left hand caused her "great mental shock, anguish and suffering."

Atlanta Britons Are Asked To Help Purchase a Warship

The Patriotic League of Britons Overseas is raising a fund among the British-born subjects resident outside the empire to build and equip a warship, which will be named after the mother country.

Every one of British birth is anxious to do something for the empire at the present moment. Britons have hurried to the front in the thousands; they have subscribed generously to funds for the Red Cross and relief of distress; Britons abroad are anxious to give more definite and tangible proof of the loyalty with which they are animated.

Careful inquiries have been made as to the form of offering which would be of the greatest practical use, and which at the same time would express

Diamonds carefully bought are an investment. They are particularly safe, marketable and appreciate in intrinsic value. They are not subject to manipulation or depreciation.

Our Diamonds are marked in plain figures: nothing is hidden. If a stone is not perfect, the shape or cutting not correct, or if it is "off color," it is so marked.

Every diamond is absolutely guaranteed to be just what we sell it for, and you are therefore fully protected, as it is graded and classed to its real intrinsic value.

We are never too busy to give you courteous attention, whether you are ready to buy or merely seek information.

Some New Facts

FOR gathering dust from walls a woman has patented a bag to be placed over a broom and be held in place by suspender, like straps.

A LIME manufacturing plant in Wisconsin is the first in the United States in which the kilns are fired with gas instead of wood.

AFTER testing steel underframes on its cars for several years an English railroad has returned to iron as less liable to corrosion.

FOR metal workers there has been invented a combination shears and hammer, a spring forcing the jaws open after they have made a cut.

A TRIMMING table for drawings and blue prints that is equipped with a motor-driven revolving knife has been patented by a Chicago man.

ALTHOUGH more wool is used by manufacturers in the United Kingdom than in any other country, the United States is the greatest wool-consuming country in the world.

New Process for Auto Bodies

A FRENCH firm of motor car manufacturers makes its car bodies by a novel process of plastering. Builders are familiar with the process of making partition walls by erecting a screen of wire netting and coating it with a layer of plaster. Practically the same thing is done in the new process of making car bodies, except that a very different plaster is used. The framework of the car is made of wood, and on this wire netting is tacked. Then the mold begins operations with palette and trowel, doubling the wire netting with the plastic material, which he spreads out smoothly. When the coating has set it may be dressed down with a plane and sand-paper, just like wood. After that it is painted and rubbed down with oil and varnish until it assumes a "very high polish." It is claimed for the new process that the car bodies can be manufactured with a great saving of time, and also that a very light and durable body is obtained.

Electric Bulb a Healing Power

THE ordinary sixteen candle power electric bulb, attached to an ordinary receptacle, has been used by the French physician, Chaput, in a series of interesting experiments. It is said he has succeeded in healing refractory sores and ulcers, such as those caused by burns or severe abrasions.

The account of his method is given as follows:

The reflector, with bulb attached, is placed on either end of the affected area on folded towels, the bulb being kept as near as possible to the lesion without causing the unpleasant sensation of heat. The treatment is applied daily or on alternate days for an hour. It is observed to cause a copious outpouring of serum at the affected area.

This Carrot Has Bad Habits

HAVE you ever seen a stewed carrot? Of course you have. And ate one, too.

But that is not the kind of a stewed carrot we really had in mind. Perhaps it should be termed the "inebriate carrot," for really in truth, cross our heart, this particular friend of the family table can become fearfully intoxicated, according to Professor Jagadis Chunder Bose, instructor of natural sciences at the University of Calcutta, India.

The professor was lecturing to a select group of professors at the University of Chicago. In the course of his discussion he mentioned that a chemist once left a dish of alcohol near a fine, upstanding, healthy young carrot one day. Sniffing the aroma, the carrot began acting disgracefully.

"Why, this vegetable was actually maddened," said Professor Bose, "and did not re-vert until it had been taken out in the fresh air."

With the aid of the "emotionalgraph," which he recently invented, the professor said he is able to prove that plants have emotions which the instruments record in a startling way.

How Healthy Thoughts Will Bring You Health

Select Your Reading Matter With the Idea of Feeding Your Brain on Health-Producing Ingredients, Just as You Do Your Stomach.

YOU are what you think, or if you are not, it is not for lack of hearing the affirmation that you are.

A Washington physician, is the latest authority to put his patients on a diet compounded chiefly of the aphorism, "Think well and you will be well."

Instead of sending his wealthy society women patients to sanitariums or sunnier climes to rest their overtaxed nerves, he is ordering them into classes in psychology to learn how to adjust their thinking in such wise that they will not overtax their nerves or anything else in their effort to live twenty-four hours out of a day.

One of these classes meets weekly in the library of one of Washington's feminine leaders of better thinking, and its teacher is the head of a famous girls' school.

Early in the social swing of the winter debaters, in the midst of the whirl of a first season, and amidst with the weight of the smartest functions of the season on their shoulders came on medical advice, or without it, to bear the laws of the intellect and the interrelations of the will with instinctive reflexes expounded.

What they expected to get out of it from a health point of view was a helpful understanding of the intimate connection between peace of nerves and peace of body, and the physical reflexes which accompany every grade of emotion.

"If a person has chronic kidney trouble"—in the words of the teacher of another of these morning society classes in psychology that are interesting Washington this winter—"you may expect to find that that person is harboring a sense of wrong, or is the possessor of a chronic grudge."

"Irritation or worry has its reflex action upon the digestive organs, while happiness enables one to digest easily, if such a thing were necessary."

The elements of psychology are taught by means of James' famous book on this subject. When the novices have mastered that book and have themselves well enough in hand to be able to stand and deliver their reasons for keeping peace through intellectual grip on their nerves, they are taken further along, deeper into the mysteries of human consciousness and psychic control, and are introduced to the master philosophers of past and present, one after another.

If it does no more than keep the society woman's mind off herself and the symptoms of her particular sort of nervous unrest, the astute physician who started the fed of studying psychology of mornings proclaims that it is doing as much as be expected, and more.

Here's a Foolproof Poison

THE latest thing on the drug market is "foolproof" bichloride of mercury. During the last year or so there have been so many cases of accidental poisoning from this dangerous but highly effective antiseptic that manufacturers racked their brains to produce a tablet that could not be mistaken for anything else—even in the dark.

"Foolproof" bichloride of mercury was

Flaw in U. S. Patent Laws

IN GERMANY a person who is granted a patent of any kind must work that patent in Germany within three years of the time the patent is granted or forfeit the patent right. In the United States you can take out a patent and never work it, if you don't wish to, and still retain the rights and privileges which the patent grants.

Aniline or coal dyes are patented in Germany and in the United States at the same time, but as the German manufacturer is not obliged under our patent laws to manufacture the dye in the United States he manufactures them in Germany and at the same time controls the United States market for his goods through the patent granted him here.

Towers for Testing Aeroplanes

TWO steel towers, each sixty feet high, are now being used in England for the purpose of testing the effects of different air currents on aeroplanes. At the top of each there is a rotating platform, on which large models of aeroplanes can be exposed to winds from different directions.

The spot has been carefully chosen so that no stress or obstructions can deflect the winds or cause eddies of air which might affect the tests. The models can be placed in any position, and the platforms can be turned so that the wind can strike them in any direction, while delicate instruments register the velocity of the air currents.

By means of these towers different types of flying machines can be tested without danger to human life, and when the best models have been decided on there is another apparatus which tests the different kinds of propellers.

This is the "whirling table," which is sixty feet in diameter and is mounted on a vertical shaft, turned by an electric motor, so that the table itself can be made to revolve at various speeds up to 100 feet a second.

As the wind outside cannot provide all the different conditions that are required in an elaborate system has been installed which, by means of fans and screens and obstructions, can produce artificially nearly all the atmospheric changes that an airman is called upon to face. Then, by means of models carefully constructed to scale, experimenters can ascertain more or less what will happen in certain circumstances.

Some New Uses For Old Rope

OLD rope, like old tin cans and other things generally considered as waste, has its special market and uses, and in every support the collecting and classifying of old rope is an important business. Rope that is covered with heavy graphite or tar is even more valuable today for making ovens than lightly tarred material, while hemp rope with the original heavy coating of tar worn off by weathering is often used for bag paper. A small percentage of untarred hemp rope, used in its prime for hoisting and other such purposes, is being converted into cigarette paper in Europe. Scraps and waste from old tarred rope, and also old oakum removed from seams of ships, are now used for making boards.

Copper Colored Beauties Who Are Exact Duplicates of One Another

NO ONE accompanying picture is not a likeness of copper-colored triplets. It is a group of Samoan girls who, like all of the girls of their race, are exact duplicates of one another. How their parents are able to distinguish between them is a puzzle they alone can solve.

The portrait fails to show the wonderful luster of the skin of these dark damsels. It looks like nothing so much as dark, polished copper.

Dark as is their skin it is fair compared with their eyes and hair. Their hair is black, soft and wavy, and it is usually worn hanging until they are married. The dark luster is embellished by the brilliant flowers which they twine in their hair—flowers which invite and entice by their rich coloring and rare perfume.

Their eyes are almost as black as their hair, warm and pleasing. Their figures are no less attractive, for the Samoan girls are generally slight, especially when they are young. Their forms are symmetrical, and they are easy and graceful in their movements. This is especially true of the village girls, who are as happy and free from care as they are attractive.

These girls are naturally clever, but after they have learned to read and write and have mastered the first steps in arithmetic they do not worry their heads about more knowledge.

The climate is so warm in these islands that the girls wear scant clothing, not much more than some bright colored scarf wound about their hips. Their chief decoration are flowers and several chains of bright beads.

They are skilled at weaving cotton and in working in the fields, but a good deal of their time is spent singing, and dancing, pastimes of which they are very fond.

A FRENCH invention is a revolving fan which may be carried in the pocket and operated by pushing buttons with the thumb and fingers.

BY TOUCHING a pedal an automobile driver can drop a new bumper so as to form a fender that will prevent anything going under the wheel.

A NEW Italian aeroplane with numerous wing surfaces is designed to act as its own parachute and come to earth safely in event of a mishap.

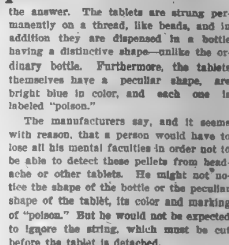

THE top of a new gas range is equipped with pipes through which water circulates and is heated while the burners are being used for cooking.

TO ENABLE a motorist to smoke while driving a New York inventor has patented a perforated metal shell to inclose a cigar and retard the draft.

How to Drill Holes in Glass

THE following is a satisfactory method of drilling holes in glass: Take a piece of straight copper the size of the hole that it is required to drill. The tubing should have a wall of one-thirty-second of an inch or more in thickness, depending upon the diameter. The tube is set up in a drill chuck and driven at a speed corresponding to that of a twist drill of the same size. The tube is fed down into the glass with an intermittent movement, and a mixture of emery and oil is dropped onto the glass at the point where the hole is to be drilled. After a ring has been cut in the glass on one side the work is turned over and the drilling completed from the opposite side. This will prevent chipping the glass when the drill nears the opposite side. The copper tubing is soft, so that it holds the emery, and as copper is an excellent conductor of heat it draws the heat away from the glass, preventing it from being cracked. An idea of the rapidity with which holes can be drilled in this way may be gathered from the fact that a five-sixteenths inch hole can be drilled through an ordinary sheet of window glass in seven minutes.

New Plan for Summoning Waiter

the answer. The tablets are strung permanently on a thread, like beads, and in addition they are dispensed in a bottle having a distinctive shape—unlike the ordinary bottle. Furthermore, the tablets themselves have a peculiar shape, are bright blue in color, and each one is labeled "poison."

The manufacturers say, and it seems with reason, that a person would have to lose all his mental faculties in order not to be able to detect these pellets from headache or other tablets. He might not notice the shape of the bottle or the peculiar shape of the tablet, its color and marking of "poison." But he would not be expected to ignore the string, which must be cut before the tablet is detached.

But said waiter seems not to have heard.

"Oh, waiter?"

Again no response.

You grow annoyed. The head waiter passes by. You endeavor frantically to signal—with as little success. If you are a woman you perhaps stamp your French heel. If you are a man you probably exclaim naughty words under your breath.

Such experience is familiar to most of us. Appreciating this fact, those looking toward efficient table service in hotel dining-rooms and cafes have struck upon a novel idea for attracting the attention of different waiters and indicating the desires of a patron. It consists of a standard carrying three electric lights, each of a different color.

The lights are operated by push buttons—a different button for a waiter, head waiter, or wine server. A light remains burning until a diner has received attention.

The scheme is still in its infancy. But we may see these signal standards in our hotel dining-rooms and cafes in near future.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY

HOUDON'S BEST OF GEORGE WASHINGTON

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S diary for the year 1798 contains the following entry:—
"Feb. 11—Went up to Alexandria to the celebration of my birthday. Many manoeuvres were performed by the uniformed corps, and an elegant ball and supper at night."

This was the year of his death. He died on the 14th of the following December, but his diary ten years earlier, in 1798, contains a similar entry, the date, February 11, being "old style" and corresponding to February 22 of the modern calendar.

Thus it appears that Washington's birthday was celebrated by a grateful people while he was still alive. It was also made every year the occasion of quiet merrymaking at Mount Vernon, where all the slaves on the estate, who numbered about one hundred and fifty, enjoyed a special holiday, with much feasting and drinking of "mitchell," a harmless brew of fermented honey, water and spices.

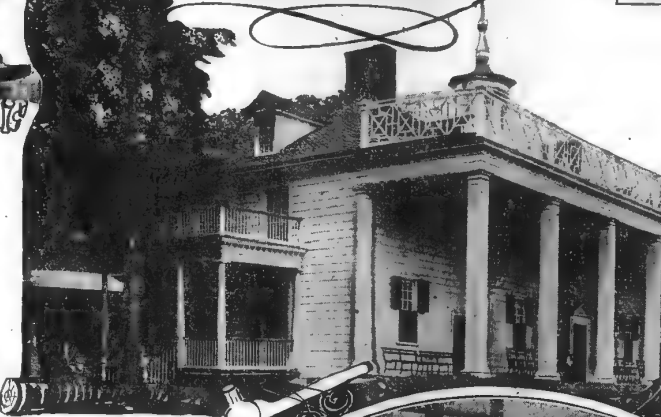

Neighbors and old friends were invited to dinner as a matter of course, and twenty-five or thirty people sat down to that bounteous meal in the "banquet hall" at the north end of the mansion. The feast, which began at half-past three o'clock in the afternoon, lasted for some hours, and everybody was expected to have a hearty appetite; for it was not the custom at Mount Vernon to serve lunch, and no supper was in prospect.

The estate was twelve square miles in area, much of it being forested. It was in a region exceedingly rich in game, and the venison, wild turkey, canvas-back duck and partridge served at Mount Vernon were obtained at the expense of powder and shot—not to mention the delicious fish which the river supplied. The master of this beautiful property raised his own beef and mutton, and his vegetables were grown in a kitchen garden which to the present day produces regular crops of such "track" for market.

With all these dishes, put on the table at one time, after the manner of the day, each gentleman present, who might chance to find himself opposite something that needed carving was expected to perform that duty. Fuddings and pies accompanied the rest of the pretender, leaving nothing for what we should call desert except fruit and nuts, which were brought on after the cloth was withdrawn from the polished mahogany.

With the dessert came the wine, and plenty of it. There was "back" (which nowadays we call sherry), port and madeira (imported by way of England), and "Brazil wine," which came from South America. At that period it was not the fashion for unmarried women to touch wine, and the matrons contented themselves with a sip or two; but the men drank heavily. Washington himself rarely went beyond a single glass. While his guests were drinking wine he would accompany them with older, of which he was extremely fond, and which was made in great quantity from Mount Vernon apples.

The father of his country called himself a farmer, and his "plantation" was so far self-sustaining that, if deprived altogether of supplies from outside sources Mount Vernon and its people would have been able to get along very comfortably. All the farm labor was furnished by the slaves on the estate, and their clothing as well as most of that worn by the master and mistress of the establishment was spun and woven by a dozen or more negro women who were constantly employed at this work.

On occasions of ceremony such as this, however, Mrs. Washington was attired in a silk gown and her husband wore a suit of costly black velvet, with knee-breeches, black silk stockings, silver buckles on his shoes and fine lace ruffles at his wrists. He is an impressive figure as he rises at the table, a glass of Madeira in his hand, to offer the first toast, to "My Guests." Five minutes later, at a signal from his wife, the ladies take their departure, and then follows the important business of passing the bottle, which, in obedience to custom, moves slowly "with the sun"—that is to say, from right to left.

Washington as he appears at this celebration of his last birthday is an elderly man. The powder on his hair, which is drawn back and done up in a queue behind, conceals his grays. He is rather deaf, and a set of false teeth, made of hippopotamus ivory, hides imperfectly the absence of a natural dental equipment long departed. Observed in a standing posture, it is seen that his legs are slightly bowed. In "Trumbull's famous portrait of him in uniform this defect does not appear for the good reason that he sat only for the head, the legs and body, being painted from a prize fighter, suitably costumed, who served as a model.

Perhaps there had been a fox hunt in the morning. Washington was very fond of sport, and for many years kept a pack of hounds. One of these dogs, which was a special pet of his, was called Sweetlips. Washington was very fond of animals. Not far from the house, near the river's edge, was a small deer park enclosed by a fence. On one occasion a favorite deer was misused and its carcass being found hanging in a butcher's shop in Alexandria, Washington attacked the butcher with a whip and beat him frightfully.

In the evening after the men had left their wine to reject the ladies there were games such as "blind man's buff" and "hunt the slipper," with much romping among the young men and maidens, and perhaps some kissing. It was all in the fashion of old-time Virginia entertainment, with cards for the older people (played for small stakes), and it is likely a dance to follow—winding up, of course, with the Virginia reel. The music was furnished by a small band of old negro slaves, who kept time by clumping the floor with his big feet.

To collect the money was an enormous task. Appeals for contributions were made to women all over the country. Fifty-eight thousand dollars was raised by Edward Everett, who to save the amount delivered a lecture 122 times.

At half-past ten o'clock at the latest it was time for bed. Also, for the contrast: Fifty years later the house stood empty and deserted, undergoing a slow decay and exhibiting every sign of neglect. Window shutters hung from a single hinge; the grounds about the mansion, which had been so carefully kept, were overgrown with tall weeds. The servants' quarters and other detached buildings were literally falling to pieces. To such a point had ruin progressed that the melancholy condition of Mount Vernon was plainly visible to passengers on the Potomac steamboats going up and down the river.

How had such a state of affairs come about? The matter is easily explained. Washington when he died left the property to his nephew, Bushrod Washington, who was a Justice of the United States Supreme Court, making provision, however, that his wife, Martha, should retain ownership of it during her lifetime. She survived him two and a half years. Bushrod took little interest in the place and visited it scarce half a dozen times. The slaves were scattered, having been freed by a clause in the master's will.

Bushrod, and after him his heirs, sold off the land piece by piece, until only the house and 204 acres were left. Such was the state of affairs in 1853, when a woman, Ann Pamela Cunningham, of South Carolina, started the movement which was destined to preserve for the nation the most valued of its historic memorials. At that time Mount Vernon belonged to John Augustine Washington (Bushrod's son), and to him Miss Cunningham wrote, asking what price he would accept for the property. His answer was a refusal to sell. Nevertheless, five years later he agreed to accept $200,000.

To collect the money was an enormous task. Appeals for contributions were made to women all over the country. Fifty-eight thousand dollars was raised by Edward Everett, who to save the amount delivered a lecture 122 times.

The Mansion, to which fraternity Washington belonged, helped substantially. The first payment on the purchase, $150,000, was made in April, 1858, and not long afterward the entire sum required was procured and paid over, the property being thereupon transferred to the ownership of the Mount Vernon Association.

The association is an organization of women. Mount Vernon as it stands today owes its existence to women. Men have nothing to do with its control or ownership, which is vested in a Board of Regents, each State of the Union being represented in this body by one representative. In May of every year the ladies who in this capacity represent the association spend a week at Mount Vernon and take counsel in regard to its affairs. There is not room for all of them in the ancient mansion, and so some of them sleep up the old servants' quarters and others on cots installed above the spinning room of long ago.

The present regent is Miss Harriet C. Conner, of Delaware. Mount Vernon to-day is self-supporting. It has an income of about $20,000 a year, derived mainly from admission fees paid by 70,000 annual visitors. Vegetables, fruit and hay raised on the estate contribute something. There is also a dairy and the milk is sold.

Few people took the trouble to visit Mount Vernon when it was empty and undergoing a progressive decay. Nowadays it is different. The place to-day looks almost exactly as it did when Washington lived there. If his ghost were to revisit the mansion it would find things but slightly altered. The house is in all important respects as he left it. Most of the old furniture remains, having been returned by various heirs and other persons who came into possession of it. Even the crockery and silverware are the very pieces that Martha Washington bought so well and used so often. Various States of the Union have taken pride in furnishing one or another of the rooms. Thus, for instance, the bedroom formerly occupied by Nellie Custis is now known as the "Maryland Room" because it owes its "antebellum" chiefly to patriotic Maryland women who have contributed authentic Mount Vernon relics for its adornment. The "New Jersey Room" is the chamber in which the Marquis de Lafayette is understood to have slept when he was General Washington's guest. Perhaps the only thing with which the former master would find fault is the arrangement of the lower floor of the mansion, which has been transformed into a sort of museum of Washington memorabilia.

What deserves most emphasis, however, is the admirable preservation of everything about the house and its surroundings. All possible effort has been made to restore the mansion, its furniture and its immediate environment to the state and aspect they presented when Washington was alive. This is a problem which, obviously, has been beset with many difficulties. Besides, there has been a fight to be conducted against the tendencies of decay.

Just for example. Before Washington died he expressed a desire and an intention to remove the old family mausoleum, a very primitive affair, in which relatives and forebears of his were buried. Mostly it was under ground and water had seeped into it. The same water has made a whole lot of trouble since. It came from an underground stream and only a few years ago was threatening actually to undermine the foundations of the mansion itself.

The danger became so serious and alarming that in 1904 the Mount Vernon Association employed an expert engineer to find out what was the matter and make recommendations. He discovered the underground stream and recommended that a tunnel be dug to carry off the water. This was accomplished at an expense of $7,000 and cured the trouble entirely—the really serious nature of the menace being indicated by the circumstance that the tunnel now delivers 50,000 gallons into the Potomac every twenty-four hours. On one occasion, many years ago, a life and doing. Persons who go to Mount Vernon feel that they have done the next best thing to meeting Washington face to face. They see just how he lived, where his servants were quartered, the kitchen in which his meals were cooked, the garden in which the vegetables for his table were grown, and so on.

Entering the mansion, they are admitted to its domestic intimacies. They even behold the room in which Washington died, and its old fashioned bed, with four tall and slender posts, hung with the original white dimity curtains, and covered with the same spread that was used for his coffin. The furniture of the room is the same—even to a liquor case in the corner holding three bottles of two quarts each. This, however, must have been for emergency use, inasmuch as Washington was certainly not addicted to stimulants.

Washington's bedroom, by the way, is said to be haunted. It is not that any recognizable apparition has ever been seen there, but the few persons who have occupied the chamber for sleeping purposes have been almost unanimous in their belief that they were haunted by a consciousness of the nearness of some strange and brooding specter—presumed, of course, to be that of the former proprietor of the mansion. Also it is said that his footfalls are heard coming to and fro on the floor of the chamber which connects the house with the old kitchen—the latter being detached from the main dwelling.

Although Mount Vernon in Washington's day was equipped with all the latest luxuries then known, it knew no carpets or rugs. On one occasion Washington did import a carpet which was intended for his library, but the cost of it was so great that his political opponents advertised the matter as a scandal. No President of the United States has ever been more abused and vilified than Washington, and he, in order to put a stop to the talk in this instance, refused to receive the carpet or to pay duty on it. It was bought in at auction by a Philadelphia woman, and a descendant of hers gave it not long ago to the Mount Vernon Association, so that today it finds itself by a curious chain of circumstances in the place for which it was originally intended.

When the ladies of the association are "camping out" for their annual week at Mount Vernon they take their meals in the old library and the cooking is done by a colored woman, an aged woman named Sarah, who is a great-grandchild of one of Washington's slaves. To-day she has a farm of her own, but it delights her to come and minister unto those who have made themselves caretakers in these days of the ancient mansion. Another old colored woman, of similar ancestry, occupies the spinning house and gives lessons in spinning with the wheel and in weaving after the old fashioned method.

One year for the future of Mount Vernon lies in the possibility of fire. Against this danger every imaginable precaution is taken. No lights, save candles, are allowed on the premises. In a vault near the house are kept four chemical engines, and there are four tanks of bicarbonate of soda and water, over each of which is suspended a receptacle containing a gallon of sulphuric acid. In case of emergency the sulphuric acid would be used into the soda solution, generating quantities of carbonic acid gas, in the presence of which fire cannot live. In addition there are scattered through the mansion a number of portable fire extinguishers.

Sacred Flag of the Prophet

IN the famous precincts of the old Mosque at Stambul (Constantinople) the Flag of the Prophet is kept in safety. Only on proclamation of a holy war is it unfurled to the eyes of a reverent multitude of believers, though without being removed. Its staff is closely set with golden nails and covered with green velvet. The flag of green silk is richly embroidered in gold with mystic scrolls and texts from Al Koran. According to tradition the silk material originally served as curtains to the tent of Aisha, Mohammed's favorite wife. Thence it was transferred by the Omeyyads in Baghdad, and brought to Cairo by the Abbasids.

In the year 1517, when Sultan Selim I. conquered Egypt, he transferred it to Damascus, where the throngs of pilgrims on their way to the sacred shrine could do it homage. Murad III, invading Hungary, carried it in the midst of his army to inspire courage. The Mosque of the Seraglio because its destruction in 1905, in charge of the British of Islam, the religious head of Mohammedanism.

It was last unfurled in 1870, when Sultan Mahomed placed it in the hands of the Janissaries. Neither the Russian nor the Balkan wars of recent years gave cause sufficient to the Moslem Church elders to assume the responsibility of proclaiming a "holy war."

Its unfurling arouses the fanaticism of all believers to frenzy. Every Moslem feels that he must take part in the act of "holy war," and all relations are set at naught, all obligations ignored; you must follow where you are led; you are not to consider what you are ordered. No other consideration holds. It is a life and death struggle engaged in by nearly 200,000,000 men throughout Asia, Africa, even in Europe.

PRISONERS of WAR

GERMAN PRISONERS
DURING THEIR MARCH

By Richard G. Conover.

BATTLES behind him, prisoners paying the penalty of patriotism, are the sorriest sights of war. The dead and the wounded of the fight have achieved a noble and visible glory. But the soldier pent up like a convict while he pants for the chance to strike a blow in his country's cause is a sad and chafing shadow on the war.

There is a special aggravation about prisoners in war times. The captured fighter feels a self-condemnation. He can't look upon his loss of freedom bread and water the selling of firewood was prohibited.

Official records show that on September 30, 1778, there were 12,000 Spanish, French and American prisoners in England. There was no exchange with France by cartel up to January, 1781, when the number was 44,000. In September, 1788, the English prisoners in France were 6,000 and the French prisoners in England were 27,000. In 1811 the English prisoners in France were 10,500 and the French in England 47,000. The Confederate prisoners were located at Belle Isle, Castle Thunder, Danville, and the famous "Libby" in Virginia; Salisbury, in North Carolina; Charleston, South Carolina; Andersonville and Miller, in Georgia. Colonel D. T. Chandler, of the Confederate service, made a report on Andersonville during the war and denounced the way it was being conducted. After the war Henry Wey, who had been the superintendent at Andersonville, was tried for establishing the prisoners' dog line, using bloodhounds with any acknowledgment of merited punishment such as the convict who has broken a penal code may now and then realize. The war prisoner defiantly insists he has committed no offense. Force without law holds him. A fair turn of fortune in battle would have made him the jailer instead of the jailed. He is ripe for escape from the instant he is captured. There will be no rewards offered for his apprehension and he forfeits nothing if he is caught and returned.

The wounded who recover find themselves surrounded with kind and systematic ministrations and with many comforts that fall to their lot in camp and on the firing line. It is the prisoner who is liable to suffer in body and mind for months and years, finally dying from diseases contracted during captivity. His death is as certainly attributable to his patriotism and devotion as that of his comrade shot through the heart in a charge. And with this addition—he is deprived of his liberty and endures no end of suffering before he yields up his life.

In the present great European war it is reported that both the Germans and the Allies are taking fairly good care of their prisoners. Judged by the numbers captured on both sides, a new chapter of military procedure will have to be written upon systematic safekeeping of the great masses compelled to lay down their arms. The way of sequestering and caring for prisoners during all previous wars on earth must reveal. It is a very pigmy way in view of the terrible casualties that have been reported at various stages of the campaign. Bigger and broader methods will have to be employed.

Up to the thirteenth century there was no regular arrangement between nations for an exchange of prisoners of war, and the captured soldier faced execution or most inhuman treatment. In the ancient Assyrian, Babylonian, Persian and Jewish wars, as well as in the great Greek conflicts, it was no uncommon thing to put the whole adult male population of a conquered State to the sword, leaving the women and children to be taken into slavery. This, in fact, was done quite frequently up to six hundred years ago. And history records Napoleon putting all his Turkish prisoners to death at Jaffa as late as 1799.

Since exchange of prisoners began and since humanity was first proposed to be exercised in the case and treatment of the captured soldier there have been two great prisoner-of-war epochs on rank with cruelty that they stand out from all others. One of these was the abominable conduct of the British captors of the Continental in the infamous prison ships anchored in New York waters during the Revolutionary War, and the other the awful experiences of captives, both in England and France, during the Napoleonic wars. Other wars have had their tales of prisoner and prison horror, but they have been mild compared to the two epochs named. During the civil war there was also an outcry that prisoners were not treated as they should be, but as their condition might have been it could not compare with the prison ship or the Napoleonic quartet.

According to The Hague terms, prisoners of war are to be treated the same as government troops with respect to food, quarters and lodging. Prisoners who escape and are again taken prisoners are not to be held liable in any way for their previous flight. A prisoner is not to be forced to accept parole on the promise not to take up arms again during the war if he refuses to make that pledge. Governments are prohibited from forcing soldiers to enter the ranks again, but shall scrupulously respect word of honor so given. An officer captured with his men cannot give parole for them in a body, as such an act would be considered tantamount to desertion. Each man must bargain for his own parole individually. A recaptured prisoner who has violated a previous parole forfeits his rights as prisoner of war.

Article 485 of the Regulations for the Government of the Navy of the United States shows that Uncle Sam feels bound to live up to the terms of The Hague war regulations in every respect. This article provides for the treatment of prisoners of war by a commanding officer as follows:—
"He shall take care that all prisoners of war are treated with humanity; that their personal property is preserved and protected; that they are allowed the use of such of their effects as may be necessary for their health, and that they are supplied with rationed property cooked. He shall, however, have them properly guarded and deprived of all means of escape or revolt."

The United States Army Regulations also provide adequately for the care of prisoners of war. Article 1263 sets forth that the captured soldiers are to have a ration a day the same as the militiamen men. Article 1473 provides for the same medical attendance upon prisoners of war as is extended to "our own soldiers." With all of this latter day promised humanity, contrast the treatment of prisoners of war in the time of the American Revolution. The most notorious of the British prisons was the old 60-gun man-of-war Old Jersey, otherwise known as the "Hell." She was moored at several places in New York waters during the Revolution, remaining longest in the vicinity of Wallabout Bay, on the Brooklyn shore. During the day the 1,000 prisoners crowded in the hold of the vessel were allowed air and sunlight as a great favor, the hatch or improvised coverings on the deck being slid back. At nightfall, however, the officer in charge of the guard cried out:—

"Down, rebels, down!" this meaning that all prisoners who may have climbed up a few feet to the various subdecks of the old war ship must get back to the bottom before the coverings were clamped.

So awful were the conditions on board that the same officer of the guard, in his regular routine of the morning after opening the hatches, cried out, "Rebels, turn out your dead!" And the prisoners in the hold were forced to lift up their dead comrades to the deck. It is estimated that between 12,000 and 12,000 Continental prisoners perished while on prison ships in New York Harbor. Most of them were buried on the Brooklyn shore, and so carelessly that during the first big storm after a burial a great number of bodies were seen to be washed out into the river. With hardly any food, clad in rags, fever-stricken, and some with contorted wounds, the inmates of the prison ships were driven to mutiny many times. In October, 1777, two prison ships were set on fire by prisoners and hundreds burned to death. They resented deliverance in this way to further captivity. The Whiskey, a transport, was also used as a prison, many citizens who should have been classed as non-combatants being confined in her. During

The British confined 800 prisoners in the North Dutch Church, 3,000 in the Middle Dutch Church at Nassau and Liberty street, a large number in the Van Courlandt sugar house and another group in the sugar house in Liberty street. The churches were stripped of their pews and flooring laid from one gallery to another. This gave Manhattan Island a prisoner population equaling fifty per cent of its adult citizenry.

In 1808 the celebrated prison at Dartmouth was begun. Sometimes 10,000 there and in 1811 the number was 6,829. Later on, during the American War of 1812, this number was greatly increased. There was an island prison at Norman Cross, holding 6,000; one at Stapleton, near Bristol, holding 5,000; one at Valley Field, near Edinburgh, holding 21,900, while the hulks at Portsmouth held 12,000 in 1810. Plymouth hulks and prison held 8,000 and Chatham 5,000 the same year.

The Tour d'Angoulême, called the Place of Tears, was a French prison located on a high rock thirty miles north of Strasbourg. This was known as the "French Hell" and all that happened to Frenchmen in England happened to Englishmen there. Thomas O'Neill, a British officer, published an account of his captivity at Quimper. There were 1,500 prisoners. Seven men had to subsist on three small loaves a day, or a small quantity of rind or beans hardly sufficient for one person. Often when the prisoners started to eat, "false" orders were given for a muster of the captives. While they were assembling the French soldiers, it is reported, stole the rations for future sale.

When a disaster broke out in the jail or twelve died daily. There was a rumor that faintly heard cannonading meant that the English were about to land. The commandant of the jail warned his prisoners that if this proved true they would all be put to death. This sounds absurdly awful at a distance of one hundred years, but it was plain fact then.

Officer O'Neill records that two delicious men making for water in this prison were deliberately shot. Cats, rats, dogs and mice were eaten, he avers, to satisfy the pangs of hunger. When some of the prisoners were put on an allowance of to trail prisoners and general inhumanity. He was convicted and hanged. From Libby Prison there was a sensational escape through tunnel digging, fully equal to the Confederate escape from the Ohio State Penitentiary. The chief mover in it was Colonel Thomas E. Rose, who was taken to Libby October 1, 1863. The first tunnel dug had to be abandoned, but early in February, 1864, the one that was to prove the way, freedom was completed. General Morgan, who had escaped from the Federal Prison at Columbus, was in Richmond at the time. Out of the Libby, tunnel 100 prisoners escaped. Fifty-five reached the Federal lines. Forty-eight were recaptured and two were drowned. Rose was one of the prisoners recaptured, but was exchanged for a Confederate colonel two months later.

After the lapse of half a century there is still one in a while complaint heard of the privations and bad treatment at Libby and other Southern prisons. The fact is, however, that the Confederates toward the close of their great fight did not have half enough food for their own troops and it is not unusual or inhuman for a nation to look first after the welfare of its soldiers in the field. Despite all the hardships, veterans still tell of many humorous happenings connected with the life in Libby Prison. For many years after the war Chaplain afterward Bishop, of McCabe, of the Methodist Church, lectured on "The Bright Side of Life in Libby Prison," in which he excused many of the hardships by telling how the prisoners were squadded by their own arrangement, under a "captain" and at certain intervals, when lying on one side on the hard floor had become unbearable for the thin men, the command, "Spoon Over!" would be the signal for a general turning of the 1,200 prisoners. Bulletins of the present great European war show that the Germans have established a big prison at Camp Liberty, near Berlin. How many of the fighters of the Allies are held there is problematical. The Kaiser pays all prisoners employed clearing streets or in the construction of roads at the rate of one mark a day, and there is a constant cry from the prisoners that this is insufficient for their labor and what they must do with their money.

England has prisons for the Germans at the Isle of Wight and the Isle of Man and at the time wrote, Queen Ferry, in Wales. Some of the prisoners have been employed at the Newbury man

Skunk, Long Barred From Society, Makes Debut as Household Pet

CHARLES B. CORY, curator of zoology at the Field Columbian Museum of Chicago, and one of the most widely known naturalists in the country, says: "Science has found a way to remove the scent glands of the skunk without in any way affecting the health or happiness of the animal. If this can be done with the young animal he can be made to become a household pet. Naturally of an affectionate nature, he will rival the cat and dog for your favors. Children can play with him at will. And, besides, he will rid the neighborhood of rats and mice." The flesh of young skunk is very good eating, as I can testify from personal experience. It is not unlike chicken and far better than possum or coon."

SAYS Dr. Clinton Hart Merriam, also a well-known naturalist: "These animals, particularly when young, make very pretty pets, being attractive in appearance, gentle in disposition, interesting in manners, cleanly in habits—rare qualities, indeed. They are playful, sometimes mischievous, and manifest considerable affection for those who have the care of them. I have had, at different times, ten skunks in confinement. From some of them I removed the scent bags, but the greater number were left in a state of nature. One of these was particularly clever. While driving about the country he would sleep in my pocket. He was very frolicsome and playful."

NOW that the skunk has been introduced into polite society by the name of sachet kitten, and guaranteed by science to behave, will you make room for him among your household pets? Perhaps you have a little sachet kitten in your home already.

this animal, spoken of so disparagingly, yet so little known about by most of our people. "Skunks may be numbered among our best animals, and, although they have the reputation of being undesirable neighbors, largely on account of their malodorous qualities, they are in reality one of our prettiest mammals. They are naturally inoffensive and are of great practical value to the farmer, as they destroy enormous quantities of grasshoppers, beetles and the like, and they also prey upon and kill large numbers of mice, ground squirrels and other small mammals. It is true that they occasionally kill chickens and suck eggs when they find a nest, but the harm which they do is as nothing when compared with their value to the agriculturist in ridding his gardens and fields of the various pests which destroy his crops."

Joins Club in Winter.

"Skunks usually make their homes in burrows in the ground, although they are not averse to living under an outbuilding and occasionally in an old hollow stump or log. In very cold weather there is no doubt that they hibernate to a more or less extent, but their sleep cannot be very deep or protracted, for on mild winter days I have often seen their fresh tracks in the snow. Sometimes several skunks live in a den in winter, and it is claimed that four or five are often found together—and sometimes as many as ten. It would seem probable that in most cases they are members of one family of the preceding season, although one authority states that as many as fifteen have been found in winter living in one nest. "The young are born in April or early in May and usually number from four to six.

rarely more, although as many as ten in a litter have been recorded. They are very pretty little animals, and, as already mentioned, when taken young and the scent glands removed, they make interesting and often affectionate pets."

Victim of Writers.

"Much has been written about 'mad skunks' and the danger of hydrophobia if bitten by them. While there is no doubt that skunks can contract hydrophobia, in my opinion they rarely do so. I have myself been twice bitten by skunks and know several people who have been bitten by them, but in no instance were there any after ill effects other than would be produced by any simple wound. A naturalist friend of mine who has been bitten several times by skunks does not consider their bites more dangerous than any other of our common mammals. Cases of hydrophobia from the bite of a skunk have been reported, however, where persons have been bitten with fatal result. "The flesh of young skunk is very good eating, as I can testify from personal experience. It is not unlike chicken and far better than possum or coon. Its taste is particularly agreeable. Annually numbers of skunks are trapped and their skins sold for fur which in many cases are offered for sale as 'Alaska sable.' I don't suppose that many of our women know this. Perhaps I am doing an injustice to the fur trade by saying this, but it is a fact."

Dr. Merriam to Rescuer.

Dr. Clinton Hart Merriam, also a well-known naturalist, pays tribute to the skunk as a household pet.

"These animals, particularly when young, make very pretty pets," he says, "being attractive in appearance, gentle in disposition, interesting in manners, cleanly in habits—rare qualities, indeed. They are playful, sometimes mischievous, and manifest considerable affection for those who have the care of them."

"I have had, at different times, ten live skunks in confinement. From some of them I removed the scent bags, but the greater number were left in a state of nature. "I was the master of the cleverest young skunk that I have thus far chanced to meet."

For a name he received the title of his genus, and we called him

"Meph" for short. While driving about the country in the performance of my professional duties he usually took a walk and he always followed close at my heels. If I chanced to walk too fast for him he would scold and stamp with his forefeet, and if I persisted in keeping too far ahead would turn about, disgusted, and make off in an opposite direction; but if I stopped and called him he would hurry along at a short ambling pace and soon overtake me."

He Loved the Ladies.

"He was particularly fond of ladies. I think it was their dress that attracted him, but be this as it may, he would invariably leave me to follow any lady that chanced to come near."

"We used to walk through the woods to a large meadow, which abounded in grasshoppers. Here 'Meph' would fairly revel in his favorite food. His nest was in a box near the foot of the stairs, and before he grew strong enough to crawl out by himself he would, whenever he heard me coming, stand on his hind legs, with his paws resting on the edge of the box, and beg to be carried upstairs."

"If I passed by without appearing to notice him he invariably became much annoyed and chirped and scolded away at a great rate, stamping meanwhile most vehemently. He always liked to be carried up to my office, and as soon as strong enough would climb up of his own accord. He was very sprightly and frolicsome, and used to hop about the floor and run from room to room in search of something to play with, and frequently amused himself by trying to demolish my slippers."

A Playful Pet.

"During the evening he occasionally assumed a running mood, and would steal softly up to my chair and, standing erect, would claw at my pants once or twice, and then scamper off as fast as his little legs would carry him, evidently anxious to have me give chase. If I refused to follow he was soon back to try a new scheme to attract my attention."

Now that the skunk has been introduced to polite society by the name of sachet kitten, and guaranteed by science to behave, will you make room for him among your household pets? Perhaps you have a little sachet kitten in your home already."

MARY has been sitting up quite late reading about the latest perils of her favorite movie actress. Mother, from her bedroom off the parlor, hears Mary lay down the paper, yawn sleepily, and prepare to retire.

"Mary," calls mother, "be sure to lock the back door. And, Mary, is Mephitis in yet? See that he's not left out all night."

"Yes, mother."

Mary goes to the back door. She hears a soft, scratching from without and knows it is Mephitis—poor fellow, left out in the cold all this while!

Mary opens the door and in walks a handsome little black animal with a long and bushy tail thickly clothed with very fine hair. White markings streak its forehead, neck and back.

A new Angora kitten?

The Polite Name.

Well, hardly. Mary's pet is nothing more or less than—boy don't gasp—SKUNK! But you must not call it that now. It has a new name—the SACHET KITTEN.

Now to tell you why. Science has dispensed with some former qualities that barred him from polite society, and now he is becoming a real household favorite.

But let Charles B. Cory, curator of zoology at the Field Columbian Museum, in Chicago, and one of the most widely known naturalists in the country, tell you what a fine pet the sachet cat makes—also a few other interesting facts about what he terms "a much maligned animal." If Mary should ever become real peevish with Mephitis, following out what Mr. Cory says, and wish to be real mean—why, she could kill the little animal and find it "the finest eating in the land."

Meek in Disposition.

"The skunk isn't such a bad animal as some persons would make you believe," declared Mr. Cory. "On the contrary, it is of a meek disposition. Of course, if you care to persist in teasing it, why, it is more than likely to protect itself. And, oh, what protection! 'Child of the Devil'—that is what our French neighbors called the skunk away back in 1805."

But when not bothered the skunk is the nicest pet one could imagine. I have often been camping where several of them would come right up to the cabin door and play around. Of course, I did not annoy them, and in return they did not annoy me.

"Science has found a way to remove the scent glands of the skunk without in any way affecting the health or happiness of the animal. If this is done with the young animal he can be made to become a household pet. Naturally of an affectionate nature, he will rival the cat and the dog for your favors. Children can play with him at will. And, besides, he will aid greatly in ridding the neighborhood of rats and mice. "Let me tell you a few more things about

Old Styles Return in Wear for Wee Ones

Dear Dorothy:—

I had to laugh at your witty paragraph about the absurdity of letting a white muslin drop skirt show beneath your summer silk gown. "like a petticoat lost from its moorings."

What would you do, ma chere?

It's either petticoat or pantalettes—take your choice.

When you dug into that old trunk of grand-mamma's after reading what the styles were going to be this summer, and routed out her silk gown of 1830, you forgot to hunt up something else that she would never have forgotten, to go with it and make a complete costume—the pantalettes.

Now maybe you would be good, and not poke fun at white cotton drop skirts, the 1915 version of pantalettes.

But "I'm here to tell you," as a friend of the family invariably remarks when about to launch something emphatic, which way the wind is blowing in styles for kiddies this coming spring.

As far as I can read signs, the verdict seems to be, back to the dress of 1830 and 1870 for the wee ones, as well as for grownups.

Little Miss Nettycat isn't going to wear pantalettes, to be sure, though no one doubts she would look just as cunning in them as grandma did at her age, but she, too, will show a few inches of fluffy, fluffy white beneath her full skirted gown of the spring, to prove that she, too, knows how to carry out period ideas in dress.

Her little waist will be sweetly surprised, or cunningly rounded and dropped off at the shoulders, as it used to be in the good old days.

Little brother Tommy Tickletoes is going to follow the new mode, too, with straight-legged breeches coming to the middle of his fat little calves and a short roundabout that makes him look like the daguerrotype of grandpapa on mother's writing table.

Cousin Kate's little girl, the last word in daintiness, wears the dearest dresses, all practically on the same model. Kate is carrying out the same note in the dresses she is making her for spring.

It's what I call the long-waisted jumper and abbreviated skirt style. And the new skirt Kate is making now out of red and blue plaid seemed less of a skirt and more of a ruching than ever.

It was hardly a handspan deep, side plaited and set into a band and called a skirt. With it will be worn a jumper of soft red cashmere.

For Sunday-go-to-meeting Kate has just made Rene a taffeta gown in two-piece style, which couldn't be more charming if it tried.

In the upper part she has utilized the long lines of the old-fashioned waistcoat, using plaid taffeta; buttoned straight down the front, to give the waistcoat look, and plain taffeta for sides and sleeves. The little plaited plaid taffeta skirt over which this falls is fastened to an underbody of cotton.

Quite the newest thing for little Tommy Tickletoes's clothes is straight little trousers and quaint little coat, almost waist length. The coat doesn't meet in front, but shows a bit of the cotton or silk waist, to which said little trousers are flatly buttoned. The model may be developed in serge or flannel, linen or galatea, and looks as quaint in one as in the others.

Straight trousers are the last word for boys, though knickers are worn.

The eminently sensible romper for strenuous play is always good style for wee ones.

For party wear for little maidens, straight slips of daintiest wash cotton, beautifully embroidered and much sashed, are as good as they ever were, if not better.

Devotedly.

DOROTHY DULIN

Plaid saphyr gingham and white embroidery enter into the building of this quaint little dress for a wee girl, with its round waist and full, ruffled skirt redolent of fashions in vogue many a year ago.

In fact, this little dress is very, very much like that which her great-grandmamma wore, many years ago. The little dress has two pockets. If great-grandmamma had worn hoop skirts as a child, no doubt the little girls, who wish to be in style today would wear cute little hoop skirts.

THAT ALL SKIRTS MUST FLARE IS EVIDENT

THE martial influence is clearly evident in the models for early spring and shows itself in the extensive braiding used both on suits and gowns.

IN the second figure the suit of green cheviot has the coat completely outlined with braid and fastened with buttons set close together. Wide braid borders the circular skirt and forms the deep cuffs. The collar is faced with white silk and bound with braid.

The suit on the left is of putty colored gabardine with collar and revers of black and white striped silk. The jacket is belted in the back giving the effect of the higher waist line. Below the belt the coat ripples and flares. The skirt adds several plaits front and back to its already generous width.

An attractive handling of black braid on gray and white check is illustrated on the right. Buttons and collar are also of braid but revers are of white silk. The sleeves show double cuffs, one of silk and one of braid. Shoes are of white buckskin trimmed with black patent leather.

In the background a glimpse is caught of a suit of tan covert cloth with a charming little bolero effectively trimmed with dark brown silk.

ON TO MOSCOW.

As the Russians resumed their retreat and the grand army its advance, the famished invaders were spared forward for their long march, the fat larders and the fabled riches of them and "a Moscow! a Moscow!" was the last remaining cry to stir their hearts.

Necessity often is the mother of invention. The Russian soldiers, and stints of his famished soldiers in venturing beyond "Smolensk and Moscow," while he promised himself "a Moscow," but Prince Eugene came away from his stepfather sighing at the "army of famine."
