

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, APRIL 4, 1915.

EN the fair Lady Spring doth rise
With earth's new morning in her eyes.—
To the love-lyrics of glad rills
And silver trumpets of the hills;
And, bending o'er the violets sweet,
Listene—and hears the world's heart beat,
Ah, well-a-day where Love hath away—
Love bringeth hearts high holiday!

SWEETHEART of all the world she seems
As, stepping forth from rainbow-dreams,
Her showy tresses bright-unrolled,
She grants Love's lips their rippled gold!
The birds, breast-deep in bloom above her,
In sweetest song tell how they love her.
Ah, well-a-day! For Love hath away!—
Love bringeth hearts high holiday!

—FRANK L. STANTON.

Social Side of the Opera To Surpass in Brilliance That of Any Other Season

The Atlanta Music Festival association's entertainment committee, of which Mrs. H. H. Atkinson is chairman, completed yesterday a schedule of elaborate social affairs for opera week which will rival in brilliancy the grand opera itself.

On Tuesday evening, April 26, after the opera, the Capital City club will host an elaborate banquet given in honor of the directors of the Metropolitan Opera association and the Atlanta Opera company. These special guests will sit as, usual, at a magnificently decorated central table. It is hoped that Otto Kahn and other distinguished members of the opera company will be among these guests. Numerous other beautiful parties are being arranged.

On Tuesday night, April 27, when there will be no opera, the Piedmont Drive-in will give a grand ball in honor of the Atlanta Music Festival association and the officials and stars of the Metropolitan company.

On Wednesday evening, April 28, there will be an elaborate garden party and barbecue in honor of the opera stars, the officials and Atlanta directors of the Drury Hill club. The arrangements are being made to make this event the most attractive and beautiful social affair held in the city this year.

The offer of the club to furnish each a table and chairs has been accepted by practically all the Parent-Teacher associations in the city. The Grand Opera club has invited the entire club to be present at the barbecue. The club has also sent a pleasant letter assuring the club of hearty co-operation, and the W. F. Johnson school has invited the mothers of children who have entered the competition for gardens. Miss Beulah Matthews will be in charge of the barbecue.

Every woman present was asked to make their own reservations and entertain their own guests.

SYNOPSIS.

In her apartment at the Leland Ella, daughter of Lord Ashleigh, is murdered and the Ashleigh diamond is stolen. The police are baffled. The diamond is in the hands of Sanford Quest, known and feared as the mad scientist of the underworld. He is the man in the mask, to his own servants and through hypnotism and the use of electro-septatic appliances discovered the secret of the diamond and the method of its theft. He is the man who kidnaps Lenora, the maid, to his own apartment and through hypnotism and arrests the murderer. Macdougal, Lenora's husband, though nearly captured to death in the struggle, while saving the work of the police, becomes one of Quest's assistants. The detective is called in to solve the mystery. The diamond is recovered and presented to the museum by Professor Ashleigh, brother of Lord Ashleigh. Macdougal escapes while on his way to the museum. Lord Ashleigh is mortally struck from Miss Rheinholdt during a reception.

THE POCKET WIRELESS

CHAPTER VIII.

Mr. Sanford Quest sat in his favorite easy chair, his cigar inclined toward the left-hand corner of his mouth, his attention riveted upon a small instrument which he was supporting upon his knee. He glanced across the room to where Lenora was bending over her desk.

"We've done it this time, young woman," he declared triumphantly. "It's all O. K., working like a little charm."

A more rose and came toward him.

"Is that the pocket wireless?" he nodded.

"I've had Morrison out at Harlem all the morning to test it," he told her. "I've sent him at least half a dozen messages from this easy chair, and got the replies. How are you getting on with the code?"

"Not so badly for a stupid person," Lenora replied.

Lenora, who had been busy with some papers at the farther end of the room, came over and joined them.

"Say, it's a dandy little affair, that, Mr. Quest," she exclaimed. "I had a try with it, a day or so ago. Jim spoke to me from Fifth avenue."

"What's it tuned to a shade now?" Quest declared. "Equipped with this simple little device, you can speak to me from anywhere up to ten or a dozen miles."

Quest rose to his feet and moved restlessly about the room.

"Say, girl," he confessed, "this is the first time in my life I have been a fix like this. Two cases on hand and nothing doing with either of them. Crooked business, that's what it is."

Quest had paused suddenly in front of an oak sideboard which stood against the wall. Occupying a position upon it of some prominence was a small black box, whose presence there seemed to him unfamiliar. Laura came over from his side and looked at it also in puzzled fashion.

"Never saw it before in my life," she answered. Quest grunted.

"H'm! No one else has been in the room, and it hasn't been empty for more than ten minutes," he remarked. "Well, let's see what's inside, anyway."

He lifted off the lid. There was nothing in the interior but a sheet of paper folded up. Quest smoothed it out with his hand. Then all leaned over and read the following words, written in an obviously disguised hand:

You have succeeded in your new study—anthropology. What a terrible surprise you must, for myself, in connection with it? Cunning? The necklace might be worth a fortune. What's it?"

The note was unanswered, but in the room where a signature might have been there was a rough pen drawing of two hands, with fingers extended, in a fashion, menacingly, as though poised to strike at some unseen enemy. Quest, after their first moment of stupefaction, whistled softly.

"The hands?" he muttered.

"What hands?" the girl asked.

"The hands that gripped Mrs. Rheinholdt by the throat," he reminded them. "Don't you remember? Hands without arms?"

There was another brief, almost stupefied silence. Then Laura broke into speech.

"What I want to know is," she demanded, "who brought the thing here?"

"A most daring effort, anyway," Quest declared. "I'm sure you are right. We are up against something, and no mistake."

"The hand which placed that box here," Quest continued slowly, "is capable of even more wonderful things. We must be cautious. Hello!"

The door had opened. The professor stood upon the threshold.

"I trust that I have done right in coming up?" he inquired.

"Quite right, professor," Quest assured him. "They know well enough downstairs that I am always at liberty to you. Come in."

"I am so anxious to learn," the professor continued, eagerly, "whether there is any news—or my son?"

"Not yet, professor. I am sorry to say," Quest replied. "Come in and shut the door."

"There is a young lady here," he said, "who caught me up on the landing. She, too, I believe, wishes to see you."

He threw open the door and stood on one side. A young woman came a little hesitatingly into the room. She was plainly dressed back, and she wore the severe dress of the Salvation Army.

"Want to see me, young lady?" Quest asked. She held out a book.

"My name is Miss Quig," she said. "I want to ask you for a subscription to our funds."

Quest frowned a little.

"Very well, Miss Quig, you shall have a donation. I am busy today, but call at the same hour tomorrow. The secretary here shall have a check ready for you."

The girl smiled her gratitude.

The professor laid his hand upon her arm as she passed.

"Young lady," he observed, "you seem very much in earnest about your work."

"Well, I want you to see whether you agree with me," French went on. "I leave my master's side. We have had a couple of hours up there, though, and one of the brought in a curious-looking object he picked up just outside the back of the professor's grounds."

"Go right ahead and tell me about it," Quest invited.

"You know we've been shadowing Craig," the inspector continued. "Not much luck up till now. French seems to have left my master's side. We have had a couple of hours up there, though, and one of the brought in a curious-looking object he picked up just outside the back of the professor's grounds."

"What is the thing?" Quest asked.

REAL ESTATE—For sale

REAL ESTATE—For sale

"RESOLVED, THAT THE LOTS BEING OFFERED FOR SALE BY JAMES L. LOGAN IN THE M'LEOD-M'DOWELL PROPERTY ARE THE GREATEST BARGAINS IN ATLANTA."

AT A MEETING of real estate agents Friday night the above resolution was unanimously agreed upon and all present promised to co-operate in handling the property. This is the sacrifice sale to pay pressing obligations.

FRED C. WOODALL, OF FOSTER & ROBSON, SAYS:

"We will co-operate with Mr. Logan because he has the goods to sell. As the lots must be sacrificed our customers will get the advantage of the big cut in prices to raise money. I predict a prompt sale of every lot on the plat at the extremely low prices and easy terms made."

J. W. ROUNTREE, OF WARE & HARPER, SAYS:

"I am selling lots in the McLeod-McDowell property and my customers are buying them because the prices are so much lower than they are worth. No trouble to double your money on them."

VAN B. SMITH, OF WHITE-EVANS-CAUBLE CO., SAYS:

"The prices are so ridiculously low a blind man can see two dollars for one invested in these lots. Surely we should sell all of them quick."

W. STANLEY DODD, WITH ED L. HARLING, SAYS:

"It's a pity these lots must be sacrificed at such figures as offered. My customers will reap the benefit, however, and I am going to sell them."

S. T. TIBBS SAYS

"I don't know any property in Atlanta as choice as this offered at such ruinously low prices. Every foot of it ought to be sold promptly."

The agents are co-operating with me in the sale of this property and they have all agreed to make

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 7,
THE OPENING DAY

At 3 o'clock p.m. that day we meet on the property and each to bring a customer if possible to inspect the property and sell all the lots we can on the ground. The plan is to have a meeting where we can all join together at one time in our efforts.

The property is located on South Boulevard, McLeod, Confederate, Atlanta, Rosedale, Marion and Home avenues, directly opposite Grant Park.

This tells the story of the big sacrifice made to raise money:

$550 Lots	$600 Lots	$750 Lots	$850 Lots
For	For	For	For
$350	$400	$500	$550

$950 Lots	$1,000 Lots	$1,500 Lots
For	For	For
$600	$650	$1,000

Come to my office and get plat. Confer with your agent. You must not delay if you want some of these lots. They are going to be sold. Obliged to be sold to pay debts. Act now.

ATLANTA'S STRIDES FROM DAY TO DAY

R. R. Ogle of Ogle & Holliday, president of the Atlanta Real Estate Board, said in an interview with a Constitution reporter yesterday that practically all the lots offered for sale had re-entered the money market. "That money has been raised," said Mr. Ogle, "and is being raised again, indicating a prosperous time. In addition to the market, another wholesome indication is the fact that the real estate men are making applications for loans on first-class real estate. For every supply of money there is a demand, and the rates are only about one-half of one per cent higher than the outside rates."

He also observed that a dearth of loan applications, instead of a few months ago, the leaders say, is a fact.

Comments on the money market by leading real estate agents and private money lenders are as follows:

"The market is strong," says W. P. Waltham, of Waltham & W. C. Smith.

"The rates are about one-half of one per cent higher than the outside rates," says W. C. Smith.
