

The Country Club

AN especially attractive suit for country wear is the Norfolk suit whether it be of pique, linen, or cloth. Illustrated at the right is a very smart model in tan colored gabardine with a coat box-pleated but beltless and a circular skirt that is perfectly plain buttoned down the front and finished with a corded hem.

THE frock at the left buttoned from neck to hem with blue buttons is of white tussore with a blue and white silk girdle. The latter, however, only appears on the sides as there is a panel back as well as front. The sleeves button nearly to the elbow and neck and sleeves are frilled with white organdie. Pleats on the sides give ample fullness to the skirt.

THE blue and white striped frock is of linen with collar and cuffs of white handkerchief linen finished with pleated frills. The skirt is pleated and has an overskirt cut so that the stripes run crosswise. It is longer on the sides and in the back than in the front and is pleated over the hips. The girdle is of plain blue silk.

UNDER THE HAMMER MAY GO WAYCROSS Y. M. C. A. FOR DEBTS

Waycross, Ga., May 29.—(Special.)—This assistance other than what can be rendered in Waycross is forthcoming before July 1 the handsome local home of the Young Men's Christian Association will be sold to the highest bidder to pay off the debts of the Y. M. C. A. J. L. Searl, representing the Waycross Savings and Trust Company, trustee for the association's property here, after conference with directors, has found that the association has no liabilities to make any suggestions on the pressing bills, nor even any interest on the mortgage under which the property will be sold. The association owes approximately $15,000. Most of this is due local banks and is fully protected by a first mortgage. Of the debt due to the city, which is the largest amount, is also regarded as safe. Next week the property will be publicly estimated at from $15,000 to $18,000, will be advertised for sale at the public sale the first Tuesday in July. During the month steps are being taken to save the home. There may be some way whereby aid will come from the national association, but this is yet unknown.

BRICK PAVEMENTS FOR STREETS OF WAYCROSS

Waycross, Ga., May 29.—(Special.)—Taking advantage of present conditions, the city administration is going to arrange, without further delay, for the paving of Tebeau and Gilmore streets, main thoroughfares of Waycross, with brick. Mayor Scott Beaton and Alderman W. V. Sharpe, Jr., have investigated the paving question recently, and find that the city, during the next month or two, will be able to make much more favorable contracts than ever before, at a price lower than brick paving has been done here in the past. The total cost of the improvements contemplated in the new paving program will be in the neighborhood of $10,000. This expenditure can be cared for out of two annual budgets without the issuance of bonds. Permanent street paving has never been attempted in Waycross before without a bond issue.

HIGH COURTS TO TEST FOOD LAW OF WAYCROSS

Waycross, Ga., May 29.—(Special.)—High courts are going to be asked to pass upon the conviction of Dan F. Cowart, in recorder's court on the charge of violating the city pure food ordinance. He was fined $10, but refused to pay the fine. It is understood now that the case will be appealed to superior court, and if adverse action is the result, may go higher to test the city ordinance. Cowart's troubles with the city pure food ordinance have occupied much time in recent sessions of recorder's court and have attracted much interest.

Leo M. Frank Is Innocent And Jim Conley Is Guilty, Asserts Hooper Alexander

DORSEY TELLS WHY HE OPPOSES PLEA FOR COMMUTATION

His Letter to State Prison Commission and That of Mary Phagan's Mother Are Made Public.

PROMINENT ATLANTANS MAKE PLEA FOR FRANK

Protest Mass Meeting Called at Marietta—Gwinnett Delegation Opposed—Columbus Urges Clemency.

FRANK DEVELOPMENTS.

Solicitor's letter to prison commission opposing commutation, made public.
Mrs. J. W. Coleman, mother of Mary Phagan, sends letter to board protesting clemency.
Leading members of Atlanta bar and other prominent Georgians urge commutation.
Columbus to send delegation to Atlanta to make plea for prisoner.
Gwinnett delegation visits solicitor's office to protest change in sentence.
Mass meeting called in Marietta to protest against clemency.
Delegations from Georgia cities and from outside state coming to help Frank.

A delegation of citizens from Gwinnett county, who visited Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey Saturday afternoon to deliver a petition from residents of their community protesting against the plea for commutation for Leo M. Frank, accompanied the following statement from Mr. Dorsey:

"Thousands of names have been sent me in protest. The country would be surprised at the number of Georgia people who oppose commutation."

Mr. Dorsey Saturday made public the reply he sent to H. E. Davison, chairman of the state prison commission, in which he allowed to take its course. Saturday afternoon he was in conference with Detectives John Starnes and Patrick O'Connell regarding the Frank case, and the officials named in the indictment as "prosecutors of Leo Frank."

DORSEY NONCOMMittal.

Asked if he was planning some new move in the case, he replied: "I have nothing to say—at present. The delegation from Gwinnett county, headed by H. M. Lively, a merchant of Norcross, and T. Walker, a manufacturer of that place. The petition presented to the solicitor general had been circulated in and around Norcross and contained 165 names of residents, some of them women."
The name of O. O. Simpson, mayor of Norcross, and one of Gwinnett's influential residents, was signed to the petition. Mr. Lively informed the solicitor that a petition pleading for commutation, circulated in Norcross, had only six names.

A short address of acknowledgment was made by Dorsey to the delegation, in which he said that he appreciated the attitude of the Gwinnett citizens "in upholding the law's course," and "protest against a move to obstruct the course of the law."

Mr. Dorsey, when questioned by reporters, refused to reveal any particulars that have come to him from various parts of the state. It happened that a reporter was in the anteroom of his office at the time the delegation from Gwinnett appeared.

The others will be made public at the opportune moment," was his only statement.

DORSEY'S LETTER.

Mr. Dorsey's letter to the prison commission is as follows:
"Atlanta, Ga., May 25, 1915.—Mr. R. H. Davison, chairman of the prison commission of Georgia—Dear Sir: In re Application of Leo M. Frank for commutation of death sentence.
In acknowledging receipt of notice of the pending application for executive clemency in behalf of the above named party, convicted of murder at the July, 1913, term of Fulton superior court, and its reply to my communication on the same subject dated May 1915, I beg to say that I have no objection to the date assigned by you to the hearing of the application.
As rule 8 of the joint rules established by the governor and the prison commission governing applications for executive clemency, it is the duty of persons submitted to your board to include expression of the opinion of the judge or solicitor general who tried

United States District Attorney Analyzes Testimony of Negro on Stand and His Three Affidavits.

HIS STORY WAS INSPIRED BY GRILLING, HE SAYS

Murder Notes Prepared by Conley in Basement, and Without Dictation by Anyone, Declares Attorney.

The innocence of Leo M. Frank and the guilt of Jim Conley of the murder of Mary Phagan are asserted in a lengthy analysis of the case, which has just been prepared by Hooper Alexander, United States district attorney, and submitted to the prison commission.

"Conley's testimony is the one central overmastering fact from which it is impossible for the prosecution to escape," he says. "Conley's story is the most terrific piece of circumstantial evidence in this case, and it is a piece of circumstantial evidence that cannot be put aside or ignored."

ALEXANDER'S LETTER.

Mr. Alexander's letter to the prison commission is in part as follows: "If it cannot be shown that Conley's testimony was the most important fabrication that ever misled a community, shall we be holding the most terrible piece of circumstantial evidence in this case, and it is a piece of circumstantial evidence that cannot be put aside or ignored."
The case against Conley is impossible. This case presents some of the most remarkable features in judicial annals. Conley, confessedly to have killed the murderer, unless he can offer some reasonable, credible explanation of the circumstances, is impossible. "The notes were written by a short, thick-set negro, who by his own admission, had been in prison seven or eight times, known to be of doubtful character, and who was at the time of the murder employed as a janitor in the building where the murder occurred. The notes were the most probable and unassailable story."

If I Only Knew Where?

How many times a day do you ask that question? You want something. Perhaps you are not sure just what you want. Perhaps you are sure, but do not know where to get it. The advertising columns of the Constitution have daily answers to such queries. They tell people what to get and where to buy to the best advantage. Not to read Constitution advertising is to be poorly informed.

NOW FOR THE KIDDIES!

PEACE FOR MEXICO IF UNITED STATES HAS TO INTERVENE

President Wilson to Warn Warring Factions, and if They Do Not Heed He Proposes to Act.

Washington, May 29.—Announcement that President Wilson would demand a settlement of the Mexican problem by the warring factions themselves within a short time and failing that, adopt some means, not defined as yet, to bring about peace, has developed acute interest in official and diplomatic quarters as to the prospective action of the United States.

The president's appeal for funds and supplies to relieve the starving population of Mexico, the preparation at the white house of a statement to be communicated to all military leaders in Mexico next Tuesday and arrangements of the American Red Cross for a huge relief scheme are the first steps in a policy which, it is believed, will detail the course of events in Mexico since the assassination of Madero and Suarez and the usurpation of the presidency by Huerta.

Forecast of Peace. The pronouncement it is said will call attention to the fact that the United States government, by refusing to recognize Huerta, assisted in driving him out of power and expected assistance. Nearly a year has passed since Huerta was ousted, the president was compelled to remain meantime to restore order, conditions growing worse daily and with no forecast of improvement.

Regrets Expressed for "The Unintentional Attacks" on the Cushing and the Gulflight, But the Reply as to the Sinking of the Lusitania is Entirely Evasive—Germany Contends That It is Impossible to Discuss the Lusitania Tragedy Until Certain Facts are Agreed Upon—Germany Claims Lusitania Was Auxiliary Cruiser and Carried Guns—American Demands for Disavowal of Intent to Sink Lusitania and Discontinuance of Submarine Warfare on Merchant Ships Not Mentioned.

Berlin, May 29.—(Via London.)—The German reply to the American note on the sinking of the Lusitania was signed by Herr von Jagow, the foreign minister, at 11 o'clock last night and delivered to Ambassador Gerard this morning for transmission to Washington.
The note expresses Germany's regret for injuries sustained by Americans as a result of submarine and aeroplane attacks, and offers compensation in cases in which Germany is found to be in the wrong.
As indicated previously in these dispatches, the note defers a direct answer to the questions raised by President Wilson, pending a further exchange of views. Germany desires to establish whether the Lusitania was a defenseless merchant ship or was being used for the transportation of war munitions and soldiers, on which unsuspecting passengers were permitted to take passage to safeguard the war materials.

The American representations regarding the torpedoing of the British steamer Falcon, in which an American citizen lost his life are answered with the statement that it was intended to offer ample time for the passengers and crew to leave the ship. The action of the captain in attempting to escape, however, necessitated more summary action. Even then the commander of the submarine granted ten minutes for those on board to leave the vessel, and subsequently extended the time to twenty-three minutes before sinking the ship.

REGRETS EXPRESSED
Germany expresses regret for "the unintentional attacks" on the American steamer Cushing and the Gulflight. The Cushing was attacked by German airmen in the North sea and the Gulflight was torpedoed off Sicily islands. Germany disavows any intention to attack harmless neutral craft. She offers to pay compensation wherever she is found to be in the wrong, and to refer doubtful cases to The Hague for a decision.

The passages in the American note concerning a possible disavowal by Germany of intent to sink the Lusitania and the discontinuance of her practices of submarine warfare are not mentioned specifically in the reply. The note states that pending the reply of the American government to the German assumptions of fact regarding the real character of the Lusitania and her cargo, no attempt will be made to answer the demands contained in the American communication.

REPLY OF GERMANY NOT SATISFACTORY TO UNITED STATES

Washington Is Prepared to Controvert Every One of the Points Mentioned in Summary of German Position.

Washington, May 29.—Until the official text of the German reply to the American note concerning violations of neutral rights in the war zone was received, probably tomorrow, President Wilson will reserve comment. The note came from the white house tonight after press dispatches outlining the German note were received.
It is known, however, that the United States government is prepared to controvert every one of the points mentioned in the summary of the German position as published here. The press outline conforms with Ambassador Gerard's dispatches of the last few days forecasting the nature of the German reply.

NO GUNS CARRIED BY LUSITANIA.
Evidence of an indisputable character was gathered from the Washington government prior to sending the note on May 13 to prove that the Lusitania carried no guns, either mounted or unmounted, that she carried no explosives within the meaning of American statutes and that no British vessels have cleared from American ports for several months carrying guns of any character.

The British ambassador here is preparing to carry out his arms and ammunition and other contraband or a few unarmored individuals who might be prospective soldiers do not destroy the right under international law and humanity of the belligerent merchant man to be visited and searched before being destroyed and the neutral or non-contraband passengers transferred to a place of safety.

PESIMISTIC FEELING
While the exact phraseology of the German reply is awaited with much interest, there was a feeling of pessimism in many quarters over the reported evasion of President Wilson's demands for reparation for the loss of

FACTS ASSUMED BY GERMANY.

These assumptions of fact are as follows:
The Lusitania was built as an auxiliary cruiser.

Russians Are Battling To Keep Teuton Armies From Przemysl Fortress

Struggle for the Post Recently Captured by Czar's Forces Remains the Outstanding Feature of War.

London, May 29.—The battle for the fortress of Przemysl, in middle Galicia, remains the war's outstanding feature. There has been no fighting north of Aras, where the French continue to progress, the Germans admitting to their execution of Aras. But this is a small affair compared with what is going on around Przemysl.

THE TEUTON PROGRESS NOT SO RAPID.
Southwest of Przemysl the Teutons are meeting with more success but their progress is not so rapid as it was recently, and communications to Lemberg, which were reported to have been severed, remain intact.
At the other end of the line in the Baltic provinces, heavy fighting continues, with the fortunes ebbing and flowing, neither side being able to make any important advance. These operations, originally classed as a large Russian military exercise, are being more seriously considered, and larger forces are going to meet the German invaders.

Except for their admission of the evacuation of Aras, which they say was carried out without the knowledge of the French, the German claim to have repulsed attacks along the western line. As the same city made by the French, who also state

GAL. BANKERS TABOO WINE AT BANQUETS

F. S. Etheridge Is Elected President—Macon Gets the Next Convention—Three Interesting Addresses.

Savannah, Ga., May 29.—(Special).—With the election of officers and the selection of Macon as the next meeting place, the twenty-fourth annual convention of the Georgia Bankers' association adjourned today.

At no previous convention has so much business been transacted, nor so many forward movements started for the advancement of the banking interests of the state. Prominent banks who attended declared the meeting was one of the most profitable the association has ever held.

No changes were made in the slate of officers as submitted by the committee on nominations. The new officers follow:

President, F. S. Etheridge, Jackson; first vice president, Charles B. Lewis, Macon; second vice president, James H. Brown, Augusta; third vice president, Joseph W. Heffernan, Savannah; fourth vice president, T. R. Turner, Haddock; fifth vice president, H. Warner Martin, Atlanta; secretary, Hayes McFadden, Atlanta; treasurer, F. C. Smith, Griffin; general counsel, Orville A. Park, Macon.

New Executive Council.
The new executive council is composed of F. S. Etheridge, Jackson; C. B. Lewis, of Macon; C. H. Sheldon, of Brunswick; L. S. Nason, of Hinesville; J. T. Dwan, of Douglasville; R. L. Saville, of Dawson; J. H. Arnall, of Milledgeville; E. C. Smith, of Griffin; and Hayes McFadden, of Atlanta. The executive council met this morning and adjourned and elected Mr. Sheldon chairman.

Hereafter the banners of the Georgia Bankers' association will be dry affairs.

At the closing session of the convention today a resolution was unanimously adopted making it a rule of the association that no wines or intoxicating liquors of any kind are to be served at any functions that may be held.

Wine and cocktails were served at the annual banquet last night and it is understood that some of the visiting bankers strongly disapproved. Some did not, however.

Unanimity of opinion.
At any rate, there appeared to be considerable unanimity of opinion on the subject when Z. H. Clark, of Milledgeville, brought it up in the convention. In order to effect a resolution he stated that while some doubters did not object, there were those to whom the serving of liquors at the banquet was objectionable. Mr. Clark contended that inasmuch as Georgia is a prohibition state it is the duty of the bankers' association to have the law violated.

In seconding the resolution, Charles B. Lewis, of Macon, referred to the fact that he had seen L. P. Hillier, an agent prominent in the city, who was enjoying himself at the banquet. Hillier joined in the resolution that followed. But when John D. Walker, of Macon, in connection with the resolution, the Macon banker turned and exclaimed, "I want it understood that the convention is to drink." This set the convention into a roar.

Mr. Walker noted two Savannah bankers as saying that they would support the resolution if it would go on record as opposing the serving of intoxicating liquors at the dinner.

Loan Fund for Students.
To spread the doctrine of scientific farming the bankers' association set aside a loan fund of $100 to be used in aiding worthy students in taking courses at the state college of agriculture.

This fund is in addition to an appropriation which the executive council probably will make for the purpose of donating short term scholarships in the agricultural college. Last year the association gave thirty-two scholarships to the institution.

Two cities invited the association next year, Macon and Americus. Mr. Lewis extended the invitation to meet in Macon. A number of telegrams from Americus were received. The decision to accept Macon's invitation was unanimous, although the thanks of the association were extended to the cities for the invitation to meet in that city.

Three Interesting Speeches.
Three interesting addresses were listened to. Thomas M. McAdams, of Richmond, entertained the convention with a talk that was out of the ordinary. His subject was "The Farmer." Why he selected it was as much of a puzzle to his hearers as to himself. His talk was optimistic and cheerful and ended with a message of encouragement to the bankers and it was well received.

W. B. Harrison, secretary of the Oklahoma Bankers' association, delivered an address on "Building Bank Deposits by Reducing the Cotton Acreage." He told of what had been done in Oklahoma toward reducing cotton acreage and the effect it had on the production of other crops. Grain and other food crops are now being grown in the heart of the cotton belt and Mr. Harrison touched on the "back to the farm movement," pointing out that the best incentive to take the farmers back to the farms is for farming to be made more profitable and more desirable as an occupation. Scientific cultivation will accomplish that result, he said.

Some valuable suggestions for improving the methods of check collections in Georgia were contained in the address of Thomas C. Dunlap, of Athens, whose subject was "Checks in Check Collection."

SYNOPSIS

Stanford Quest, master criminologist of the world, finds that in bringing the assassin Macdonald, the murderer of Lord Ashleigh's daughter, he has but just begun a life-and-death struggle with a mysterious master criminal. In a hidden bid in Professor Ashleigh's garden he has seen an anthropoid ape skeleton and a living inhuman creature, half monkey, half man, destroyed by fire. In his rooms have appeared from nowhere black boxes containing menacing, threatening notes, signed by a pair of armless hands, Laura and Lenora, his assistants, suspect Craig, the professor's servant, of a double murder. The black boxes continue to appear in uneasy fashion. Craig is trapped by Quest, but escapes to England, where Quest, Lenora, and the professor follow him. Lord Ashleigh is murdered by the Hands. Lenora is abducted in London and rescued. Craig is captured and escapes to Port Said, where Quest and his party also go, and beyond into the desert.

IN THE DESERT

CHAPTER XXIII

Quest was the first the next morning to open his eyes, to grope his way through the tent opening and stand for a moment alone, watching the alabaster skies. He turned lazily around, meaning to summon the Arabs to take a morning walk to take Hassan's place. His arms—he had been in the act of stretching—fell to his sides. He stared at the spot where the camels had been tethered, incredulously. There were no camels. No drivers, no Arabs, there was a spot not an object in sight except the stark body of Hassan, which they had dragged half out of sight behind a slight knoll. High up in the sky above were two little black specks, wheeling lower and lower. Quest alighted as he suddenly realized that for the first time in his life he was looking upon the winged ghouls of the desert. Lower and lower they came. He turned away with a shiver. The professor still asleep when they reentered the tent. He woke him up and beckoned him to come outside.

Quest pointed to the little sandy knoll with its sparse covering of grass, deserted—yet scarcely a sign, even, that it had been the resting place of the little caravan. The professor gave vent to a little exclamation.

"Over guided!" he demanded. "And the camels? What has become of them?"

The professor hurried off towards the spot where the encampment had been made. Suddenly he stood still and peered with his fingers, in the clearer, almost crystalline light of the coming day, they saw the track of the camels in one long, unbroken line stretching away northwards.

He glanced around a little helplessly. Quest took a cigar from his case and lit it.

"No good worrying," Quest sighed. "The question is how best to get out of the mess. What's the next move, anyway?"

The professor glanced towards the sun and took a small compass from his pocket. He pointed across the desert.

"That's exactly our route," he said. "But I reckon we still must be two days from the Mongars, and how we are going to get there ourselves, much more get the women there, without camels, I don't know. There are no wells, and I don't believe those fellows have left us a single tin of water."

Laura put her hand out of the tent in which the two women had slept.

"Say, where's breakfast?" she exclaimed. "I can't smell the coffee."

They turned and approached her silently. The two girls, fully dressed, came out of the tent as they approached.

"Young ladies," the professor announced, "I regret to say that a misfortune has befallen us, a misfortune which we shall be able, without any doubt, to surmount, but which will mean a day of hardship and much inconvenience."

"Where are the camels?" Lenora asked breathlessly.

"Gone!" Quest replied.

"And the Arabs?"

"Gone with them—we are left high and dry," Quest explained.

"And what is worse," the professor added, with a groan, "they have taken with them all our stores, our rifles and our water."

"How far are we from the Mongar camp?" Lenora asked.

"About a day's tramp," Quest replied, quickly.

"We may reach there by nightfall."

"Then let's start walking at once, before it gets any hotter!"

Quest paced her on the back. They made a close search of the tents, but found that the Arabs had taken everything in the way of food and drink, leaving a single half-filled tin of drinking water.

They started bravely enough, but by midday their little stock of water was gone, and their feet were sorely blistered. No one complained, however, and the professor especially did his best to revive their spirits.

"We have come farther than I had dared to hope, in the time," he announced. "Fortunately, I know the exact direction we must take. Keep up your spirits, young ladies. At any time we may see signs of our destination."

They struggled on once more. Night came and brought with it a half-suffocating, half-torturing coolness. That vain straining of the eyes upon the horizon at any rate was spared to them. They slept in a fashion but soon after dawn they were on their feet again. Suddenly Quest, who had gone a little out of his way to mount a low range of sand-hills, waved his arm furiously. He was holding his field-glasses to his eyes. It was wonderful how that ray of hope transformed them. They hurried to where he was. He passed the glasses to the professor.

"A caravan!" he exclaimed. "I can see the camels, and horses!"

The professor almost snatched the glasses.

"It is quite true," he agreed. "It is a caravan crossing at right angles to our direction. Come! Let us see us before long."

Presently three or four horsemen detached themselves from the main body and came galloping towards them. The eyes of the little party glistered as they saw that the foremost had a water-bottle slung around his neck. He came dashing up, waving his arms.

"You lost, people?" he asked. "Want water?"

"They almost snatched the bottle from him. It was like pouring life into their veins. They all, at the professor's instigation, drank sparingly. Quest, with a great sigh of relief, lit a cigar.

"Some adventure, this he declared.

The professor, who had been talking to the men in their own language, turned back towards the two girls.

"It is in a caravan," he explained, "of peaceful merchants on their way to Jaffa. They are halting for us, and we shall be able, without a doubt, to arrange for water and food and a camel or two horses. The man here asks if the ladies will take the horses and ride."

They started off early to where the caravan had come to a standstill. They had scarcely traversed a hundred yards, however, before the Arab who was leading Lenora's horse came to a sudden standstill. He pointed with his arm and commenced to talk in an excited fashion to his two companions. From across the desert, facing them, came a little company of horsemen, galloping fast and with the sunlight flashing upon their rifles.

"The Mongars!" the Arab cried, pointing wildly. "They attack the caravan!"

The three Arabs talked together for a moment in an excited fashion. Then, without excuse or warning, they among the two women to the ground, leaped on their horses, and, turning northwards, galloped away.

"I am not at all sure," said the professor in an undertone to Quest, "about our position with the Mongars. Craig has a peculiar hold upon them, but as a rule they hate white men, and their blood will be up."

"See! the fight is all over. Those fellows were no match for the Mongars. Most of them have fled and left the caravan."

The light was indeed over. Four of the Mongars had galloped away in pursuit of the Arabs who had been the temporary escort of Quest and his companions. They passed about a hundred yards away, waving their arms and shouting furiously. One of them even fired a shot, which missed Quest by only a few inches.

"I am not at all sure," said the professor in an undertone to Quest, "about our position with the Mongars. Craig has a peculiar hold upon them, but as a rule they hate white men, and their blood will be up."

"See! the fight is all over. Those fellows were no match for the Mongars. Most of them have fled and left the caravan."

The light was indeed over. Four of the Mongars had galloped away in pursuit of the Arabs who had been the temporary escort of Quest and his companions. They passed about a hundred yards away, waving their arms and shouting furiously. One of them even fired a shot, which missed Quest by only a few inches.

"I wish that beautiful girl would come and let us see her again," she murmured.

"She?" the professor explained, "is the chief's daughter, Feerda, whose life Craig saved."

"And from the way she looks at him," Laura observed, "I should say she hadn't forgotten it, either."

The professor held up a warning finger. The girl herself had gilded to their side out of the shadows. She faced the professor. The rest of the party she seemed to ignore. She spoke slowly and in halting English.

"My father wishes to know that you are satisfied," she said. "You have no further wants?"

"None," the professor assured her. "We are very grateful for his hospitality, Feerda."

"Won't you talk to us for a little time?" Lenora begged, leaning forward.

The girl turned suddenly to the professor and spoke to him in her own language. She pointed to the signs upon the tent, drew her finger along one of the sentences, flashed a fierce glance at them all and disappeared.

"Seems to me we are not exactly popular with the queer change in his face. What was she saying, professor?"

"She suspects us," the professor said slowly, "of wishing to bring evil to Craig. She alluded to a sentence upon the tent. Roughly it means 'Gratitude to the debt of hospitality.' I am very much afraid that the young lady must have been listening to our conversation."

The professor suddenly leaned forward. There was a gleam in his eyes. From somewhere on the other side of that soft bank of violet darkness what seemed to be the clear, low cry of some animal.

"It is the Mongar cry of warning," he said hoarsely. "Something is going to happen."

Quest glanced cautiously around. They were surrounded by thick vegetation, but they were only a very short distance from the camp.

"Seems to me," he continued, "we shall have to try it some day or other and I'm all for trying it soon. Even if they caught us, I don't believe they'd dare to kill us, with the English soldiers so close behind. I am going to get hold of two or three rifles and some ammunition. That's easy, because they leave them about all the time. And what you girls want to do is to hide some food and get a bottle of water."

"What about Craig?" the professor asked.

"We are going to take him along," Quest declared, grimly. "He's had the devil's own luck so far, but it can't last forever. I'll see to that part of the business, if you others get ready and wait for me to give the signal. . . . What's that?"

They all looked around. There had been a little rustling amongst the canopy of bushes. Quest peered through and returned, frowning.

"Feerda again," he muttered. "She hangs around all the time, trying to listen to what we are saying. She couldn't hear his time, though. Now, girls, remember. When the food is about this evening, see how much you can get hold of. I can't just here to find the guns and the horses."

They dispersed in various directions. The Mongars had withdrawn a little to indulge in their customary orgy of crooning songs, that they were absolutely silent.

Quest looked out of the tent in which they had been sitting and came back again.

"Well!"

Laura lifted her shirt and showed an unusual profusion of underarms.

"Quest's face was suddenly stern. He announced: 'We've got plenty of food and a bottle of water.'"

Quest threw open the white Arab cloak which he had been wearing. He had three rifles strapped around his waist.

"The professor got the ammunition," he said, "and we've five horses tethered a hundred paces along the track we came by, just behind the second and third tents. I want you all to go there now at once and take the rifles. There isn't a soul in the camp and you can carry them wrapped in this cloak. I'll join you in ten minutes."

"What about Craig?" the professor inquired.

"He's obeyed. He had the staped air of a man who has lost for the time his willow."

"It is to the trees," Quest ordered. "Leave room enough."

"Craig did as he was told. Then he turned and held the loose end of the rope which he had used for a moment as he pushed Feerda towards it. Craig, with a wonderful spring, reached his side and kicked the revolver away. Before Quest could even stoop to recover it he saw the glimmer of the other's knife pressed against his chest.

"Listen," Craig declared. "I've made up my mind. I won't go back to America. I've had enough of this sort of life. I've had my work with me. I think I'll die myself of one of you, at any rate."

"Will you?"

The interruption was so unexpected that Craig lost his nerve. Through a speckling in the trees, only a few feet away, Lenora had suddenly appeared. She, too, held a revolver, her hand was as steady as a rock.

"Drop your knife," she ordered Craig.

He obeyed without hesitation.

"Now, tie the sash around the girl."

She obeyed mechanically. Quest took Craig by the collar and led him to the spot where the others were waiting. They looked him up to a horse. Already behind them they could see the flare of the torches from the returning Mongars.

"You know the way to Port Said," Quest whispered. "See that you lead us there. There will be trouble, mind, if you don't."

Craig made no reply. He rode off in front of the little troop, covered all the time by Quest's revolver.

"So far as my distinct tell me," the professor agreed, "I believe that we are heading in the right direction."

They galloped quickly on. The moon was higher and higher until it became as light as day. Then the professor raised himself in his saddle and peered forward.

"This column of soldiers would march at night," he remarked. "I am hoping all the time that we may meet them."

Quest left a little behind his side, although he never left off watching Craig.

"Look behind you, professor," he whispered. "In the far distance were a number of little black specks, growing every moment larger. Even at that moment they, heard the low, long call of the Mongars.

"They are gaining on us," Quest muttered. "The two girls, it will though they were, bent over their horses."

"Well, stick to it till the last moment," Quest continued. "Then we'll turn and let them have it."

They raced on for another mile or more. A bullet whistled over their heads. Quest tightened his reins.

"No good," he sighed. "We'd better stay and fight it out, professor. Stick close to me, Lenora."

They drew up and hastily dismounted. The Mongars closed in around them. A cloud had drifted in front of the moon, and in the darkness it was almost impossible to see their whereabouts. They heard the chief's voice.

"Shoot first that dog of a Craig!"

Feerda, who had been standing at the corner of the tent and drew a revolver from his pocket.

"This time," he exclaimed, "we are going to make an end of the Hands! Out you go now, girls. You can leave me to finish things up."

One by one they stole along the path. Quest came out and watched them disappear. Then he gripped his revolver firmly in his hand and turned towards Craig's tent. Then, from the thick growth by the side of the clearing, he saw a dark shape leap out and vanish in the direction of Craig's tent. He came to a standstill, puzzled. There had been rumors of lions all day, but the professor had been incredulous. Then the still, heavy air was suddenly rent by a wild scream of horror. Across the narrow opening the creature had reappeared, carrying something in its mouth, something which gave vent all the time to the most awful yells. Quest fired his revolver on chance and broke into a run. Already the Mongars, disturbed in their evening amusement, were breaking into the undergrowth in chase. Quest came to a standstill. It was from Craig's tent that the beast had issued!

He retraced his steps. As he reached the clearing, he found the professor standing at the corner with the rest. His face showed signs of the most lively curiosity.

"From the commotion," he announced, "I believe that, after all, a lion has visited the camp. The cries which we have heard were distinctly the cries of a native."

Quest shook his head.

COUNCILMEN OF MACON MAY BANISH DISTRICT

Court Ruling Takes Authority to Enforce Laws From Commission.

Macon, Ga., May 29.—(Special.)—In the superior court this afternoon Judge H. A. Matthews handed the civil service commission, in charge of the city streets and fire departments, a jolt from which they will probably be some time in recovering, when the court held that the commission has absolutely no authority to enforce laws, its duties being confined to hiring and firing members of the two departments under its control.

The commission some time ago issued orders to enforce the state laws relative to Sunday, the object being to give Macon a taste of the "semi-blue laws."

J. Lamar, whose ice cream parlor was closed by order of the commission, brought suit to the superior court to enjoin the commission from interfering with his business. Judge Matthews granted the injunction in an opinion in which he held that the commission had exceeded its authority.

The decision of the court also takes under control of the commission the "red light" district of the city, and it is now predicted by many that the city council, whose decision to abolish the district some time ago on the ground that the matter was under the jurisdiction of the commission, will take action looking to the doing away with the district.

ROME ROUTERS TO HOLD RALLY AT SUMMERVILLE

To Form Association for Cooperation Among Counties. Roads in Good Shape.

Summerville, Ga., May 29.—(Special.)—One thousand people rallied at the Commercial Hotel here this morning for permanent organization of the Routers of the South, to improve the Dixie highway to be held here.

An association will be formed for the purpose of cooperation between the counties. Commissioners of Walker, Wilkes, Wilcox and Johnston will be present as well as representatives of the "Chattahoochee Automobile Club" and the "Highway Executive Board."

Work is already in progress on the Barrow route. With a magnificent government pipe running through Chickamauga park from Chattanooga and extending as far as La Fayette, Walker county has at seven miles to haul to the Chattahoochee line. Chattahoochee is completing on June 1 a short road, way from Summerville to the foot of Taylor's ridge, and will give the work across the ridge and to the Chattahoochee line. About thirty-sixty men are refasting the road from the Chattahoochee line to Rome, miles being completed, and the remainder will be within three months.

The roads to the Hartwood line from Rome are in perfect condition and a link of only three miles remains on the Barrow side, which will be done by September.

It has been unnecessary to call ball elections for any of the work, and money is being appropriated from the county treasury for the permanent construction and maintenance of the route, which is now in good shape. It allows a speed of from twenty to thirty miles per hour, and automobiles at all points and will be hard surfaced throughout before the next weather of winter.

MEIGS DEMANDS MORE LIGHT ON "WEE SMA"

Thomasville, Ga., May 29.—(Special.)—Over in Meigs they have been waging a little internal warfare of late, the question at issue being whether or not the electric light current shall be cut off at midnight. In a meeting early in the month it was decided by council that, beginning May 16, there should be no current after 12 o'clock and belated citizens caught out after that hour had to depend upon pocket flashlights and matches to light them to their places of abode.

The citizens, however, decided that they wanted more light, as they had to pay for it and, accordingly, about the cent of them, headed by W. J. Wilkes, who did not agree with his council and presented it to council, which has some business and allowed as much light as is wanted on the subject of the streets.

J. W. DAVIS ACQUITTED OF ASSAULT CHARGE

Valdosta, Ga., May 29.—(Special.)—J. W. Davis, charged with attempting to criminally assault a 12-year-old girl, was declared not guilty in the superior court here today. The jury was out about sixteen hours and a mistrial seemed probable.

Much interest was manifested in the case, and the courtroom was crowded throughout the trial. The little girl, in short dress, was the principal witness against Davis. Her testimony was not supported affectively by other witnesses for the state, and was contradicted by witnesses for the defense.

W. F. Cowart, leader in the Civic League activities in Waycross, was the attorney for the state. His testimony before Recorder Andrew A. Amazon Explorer Swears By Grape-Nuts. Algot Lange—famous tropic explorer—recently made a perilous exploration of the lower Amazon. The question of food supplies was a big one. Economy of space—food value—keeping qualities—palatability—all had to be considered. Lange chose for his standby— Grape-Nuts. Here is the way he refers to this food here and there through his book, "The Lower Amazon." "I have included in my supplies Grape-Nuts." "At lunch I eat some Grape-Nuts (an American breakfast cereal with condensed milk." "After this egg (turtle) meal comes for me Grape-Nuts from sealed tins." "I go back to the moloca at noon to eat my lunch of roast turtle, Grape-Nuts and hard-tack." Everywhere—at home or abroad—wherever big things are accomplished—this famous wheat and barley food is relied upon to build and sustain vigor and energy of body, brain and nerve. Ready to eat—delicious—economical—nourishing. "There's a Reason" for Grape-Nuts - sold by Grocers everywhere.

Carbonic Acid Gas As a Plant Nutrient

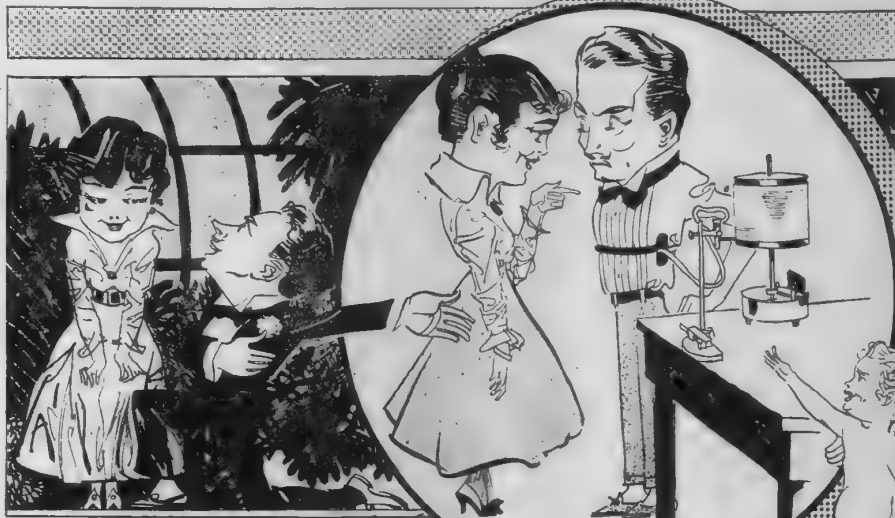

THE value of carbonic acid gas as a plant nutrient has been the subject of considerable recent literature, including an interesting paper by H. Fischer, describing experiments in Germany. The author found that the development of both foliage and flowers was stimulated by an excess of carbonic acid in the air, while the yield of tomatoes was doubled and that of cucumbers increased 125 per cent by carbonic acid treatment.

It has generally been held that 0.3 per cent of carbon dioxide in the air is sufficient for plant growth but Mr. Fischer thinks that more than this can be utilized, provided there is ample light, and that experiments in this direction might have valuable results.

On the other hand, I. F. Kidd, an English investigator, finds that an excess of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere retards or inhibits the germination of seeds, but without injuring them. He suggests that the production of carbon dioxide in nature by the decay of vegetable matter may play a part analogous to that noted in his experiments.

Ardent Lover, Beware of the Pneumograph!

Some New Facts

Don't Make Reckless Statements to the Lady of Your Choice Unless You Are Certain There Is No Pneumograph at Hand.

THEY are sitting in the front parlor of the modern Rome. Father and mother and peevish little Willie, the latter a brother of Mary, have gone to bed. The gas is turned low—very low.

"I love you," whispers the young man. Mary nestles a bit closer to him. It sounds too good to be true. She wonders if John is telling the truth or merely trying to ingratiate himself.

"I have never loved anyone else," says the modern Romeo.

Mary cannot stand the suspense longer. She leaves the room for a few moments and returns with a curious-looking instrument.

"Do you love me?" asks Mary.

"Why—er—certainly," replies John.

"And you have never loved anyone else?"

"Never—why—er—what's the meaning of all this?"

Mary does not reply—yet. She turns up the gas and peers anxiously at a revolving cylinder attached to the instrument. Then she bursts into tears.

"Go!" she cries. "Leave this house immediately! You have deceived me!"

And John, unable to dispute the word of science, makes a hasty exit.

What is the instrument that Mary used in this imaginary love scene to ascertain the true feelings of her sweet-heart? Nothing more or less than the pneumograph, an invention of a Frenchman named Marney.

Primarily, it is an invention for detecting whether a person is telling the truth when called to the witness stand in court procedure. It is also used for use in testing criminals, as in the Bertillon method of measurement. And if it proves successful, why not employ it in the game of love? It might be the means of preventing many tears and broken hearts.

Victor Bonnaud, professor of experimental psychology of the Imperial and Royal University of Graz, has made some tests with the pneumograph. The instrument, which records the action of the chest in respiration, was adjusted to a subject and connected with a tube leading to a revolving cylinder on which a pointer traced the record of each inspiration and expiration.

According to Professor Bonnaud, when the person answered a question truthfully his pneumograph record was like that of normal breathing, in that the time of inspiration was slightly shorter than that of expiration. But when he answered falsely his respiration was modified in such a manner that the expiration was shortened

Meaning of the Barber Pole

IN former times the barber served his customers in the capacity of surgeon, and when the operation of bleeding was extensively practiced he was in the habit of performing in that line. The spiral red stripe so frequently seen on the barber's pole is said to symbolize the winding of a ribbon or bandage round the arm when the blood-letting operation was resorted to.

War as Aid to Aeroplane Invention

THE suddenly increased importance of the aeroplane as a means of warfare has resulted in numerous devices to make their use practicable and safe.

In carrying out scouting observations with military aeroplanes it is necessary to have two men in the machine. The one is a pilot and his duty is to operate and to steer the craft. The other gives his undivided attention to scanning the ground below him and to making sketches of fortified works, observing the disposition of the enemy's guns, the movement of the troops, etc.

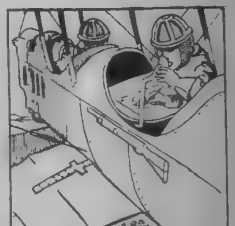

Unfortunately, the great noise made by the motor renders it impossible for the two men to carry on any conversation. Often this proves a drawback for a fight under standing between pilot and observer. To eradicate this difficulty a loud speaking telephone system is now in use in most of the cars. Each man is provided with a special helmet fitted with receiver over the ears and a transmitter located in convenient range of the mouth. This is a practical and easy way of carrying on a conversation in spite of tremendous noises made by the motor.

Another argument in favor of the telephone helmet is that it protects the wearer from gun deafness.

Leading French and English scientists have made a thorough investigation on how the soldiers' hearing is being affected by the war. They are of the opinion that the commencing is making many a man partially or completely deaf.

The injuries to the drum and the nerve endings are due to sudden condensation or rarefaction of the air in the external auditory meatus. Strangely, one ear is affected more than the other. Gun deafness is in a measure preventable. This is most easily accomplished by keeping the mouth open, for in this way the atmospheric pressure is equalized. Naval officers intuitively chew toothpicks. This seems to accomplish the same and while the big guns are being fired. Some plug their ears with cotton, but this is not considered sufficient. Jeweler's wax is considered better for plugging the ears.

Where Woman's Voice Is Never Heard

For hundreds of years soldiers have guarded the gates that no woman might steal through and profane the cloistered holiness in which the good monks live. Unhappy twenty monasteries, a dozen villages and many scores of lonely dwellings, this monks' republic governs itself after the rules of the Greek church as a true theocracy.

Karyas, reached by boat from Salonic, is the capital. It is a picturesque village on the eastern slope of the holy mountain (Thrace) rocks are studded with hermitages and honeycombed with lonely cells. The council chamber is at one end of the single street.

To the synod the monks send twenty-four delegates, who elect a president every four years. He, with a privy council of four, rules the tiny republic and administers its foreign affairs.

Located in the heart of the territory so recently wrested by Greece from Turkey, the foreign relations of Athos have been completely interwoven with the Balkan troubles, and Bulgaria and Serbia have contended with each other for nominal possession.

Yet through all the strife of war the lonely hermits and the silent monks have not broken their daily routine of prayers and services, and this strange womanism theory still persists, a picturesque and romantic relic of the middle ages.

Human Skull as Drinking Cup

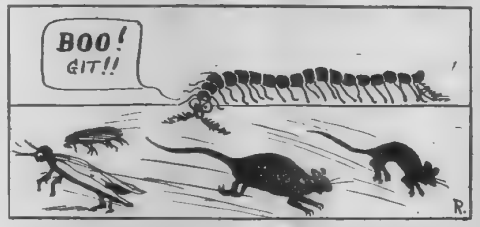

YOU may have heard reference made to the human skull as a soldier's drinking cup. But do you know the origin of this expression?

Thomas Middleton was a dramatic critic who flourished in the early part of the seventeenth century. In "The Witch," one of his most celebrated plays, when the Duke takes a bowl and is told that it is a skull, he exclaims: "Call it a soldier's cup; Our duces, I know, will pledge us, tho' the cup."

We'll keep till death." The barbarous custom of converting the skulls of enemies into drinking cups was a common one in ancient times among the fierce tribes of ancient Europe, and was not unknown to the more civilized regions of the south. The Italian poet, Marino, makes a conqueror of friends in Pandemonium quaff wine from the skull of Minerva. In his "Wonder of a Kingdom" Torquemada makes Dalkar say:

"Would I had ten thousand soldiers' heads, Their skulls set in silver, to drink healths To his confusion who first invented war!" The old Scandinavian sagas represent as among the delights of the immortals the felicity of feasting and drinking to drunkenness from the skulls of the foes they had vanquished on earth. Mandeville goes further, and represents the Guebres as exposing the dead bodies of their parents to the fowls of the air until nothing but the skeletons remained, and preserving the skulls to be used as drinking cups.

Have a Centipede Watch Dog?

EVER thought of making a household pet of a centipede?

Probably not, but you might find it not only a valuable but a harmless one. Its value as a miniature watch dog is so great that any possible danger of poisonous bites are more than outweighed.

The common house centipede is not a creature to be dreaded, although its bite is more or less poisonous, but there are so few cases on record of its biting human beings that the danger from this source may be said to be negligible. On the other hand, the centipede is a valuable destroyer of other and far more disagreeable vermin.

According to a bulletin of the United States Department of Agriculture, it feeds on house flies, cockroaches, moths, bedbugs and other such pests. It does not eat holes in blankets, carpets, carpets or furniture.

The centipede thrives in damp places, such as bathrooms, closets, cellars and conservatories. It loves hot water pipes and steam radiators. It is not an insect, but one of the order of myriapods.

If by chance a person be bitten by a centipede, bathing the spot with ammonia will speedily cure it.

The Skeleton in the Closet

THERE is a skeleton in the closet. How often we hear this expression. But do you know how it is supposed to have originated?

There is an old story that a soldier once wrote to his mother, who complained of her unhappiness, asking her to get some sewing done for some one who had no care or trouble. Coming in her search to one who she thought must be content and happy, this woman took her to a closet containing a human skeleton.

"Madam," said she, "I try to keep my sorrows to myself, but know that every night I am compelled by my husband to kiss this skeleton of him who was once his rival. Thank you, then, I can be happy."

The answer is just an obvious today. The skeleton is still a depressing object.

What the "Death Tick" Really Is

SUPERSTITIOUS people, even in this enlightened age, regard the ticking sound of a certain kind of beetle with terror, believing that it "tells the hour of death." The name "deathwatch" has been applied from time immemorial to the sound made by this small insect as it burrows in wood.

The beetle in question is an insect of the genus anobium, there being several varieties, all of which the name deathwatch is popularly given, as well as to their peculiar sound. The body of this insect is firm, not more than one-fourth of an inch long, its head is rounded, the thorax arched. It is said to make its sounds evenly in the night, but probably this idea has arisen from the fact that it is only in the silence of the night that the slight sound becomes audible.

Anyone who has watched through the night hours by the bed of one who is dangerously ill can readily understand how the faint tick, tick within the woodwork of the wall came to be regarded as a sound of evil omen. In order to make this peculiar noise the insect draws in the anterior and intermediate legs, and resting principally upon the median legs, strikes its head against its support by a sort of rocking motion. It is by this noise that the male calls the female.

The deathwatch beetle has the invariable habit of retiring dead when seized or disturbed. The simulation is so persistent that when immersed in water, or even in alcohol, the insect remains perfectly im-

About the Early Day Newspapers

AT a very early period daily news letters were circulated concerning public and official acts in Rome, Venice and China. The first printed newspaper was the Gazette, published in Nuremberg in 1477. Other countries followed Germany in issuing printed newspapers in the following order: England, in 1622; France, 1631; Sweden, 1644; Holland, 1656; Russia, 1703; Turkey, 1827.

The progress of journalism has been most rapid in America. The first American newspaper, consisting of three pages of two columns each and a blank page, was published in Boston on Sept. 25, 1703, under the caption of "Public Occurrences, Both Foreign and Domestic," but it was immediately suppressed. In 1704 the Boston News Letter appeared, printed on one sheet of foolscap paper. It furnished for seventy-two years.

The following data will show the advancement in the United States: First printing office in 1639; first newspaper in 1680; first political paper in 1783; first daily paper in 1794.

AN UNUSUAL SCHOOL

Bethany school, Madison county, Georgia, which has become famous for its unusual attractiveness as compared with other county schools.

By Prof. R. J. H. DeLoach. It is not out of place here to say something about a school in Georgia. The school about which I am writing is an unusual school in many respects. It is located in Morgan county about six miles west of Madison, the county seat, and is named Bethany school. For further particulars about the history of the school and of the one who is responsible for making it what it is you will have to inquire of the people in the county. They enjoy telling the story of Bethany.

The school is known all over the county and to other parts of the state, and it is unusual that I think it will be interesting to let the people of the entire south know about it. What makes it unusual? The teacher, of course, but the teacher cannot do all along this line. The people in the community in which the school is located have done a great deal to make it what it is. They have given it a beautiful location, a beautiful building, and a beautiful site. They have given it a beautiful location, a beautiful building, and a beautiful site.

WOMEN OF RUSSIA

Petrograd, May 29.—As the war continues the women on the border suffer the horrors of war and the mothers are left with the children who are the ones who suffer most. In America are many mothers and daughters who will give a travel or a month of their time to help the women and children who are the ones who suffer most.

No New Evidence. It is not out of place here to say something about a school in Georgia. The school about which I am writing is an unusual school in many respects. It is located in Morgan county about six miles west of Madison, the county seat, and is named Bethany school.

WHY NOT A BLENDING MEMORIAL DAY?

JOSEPH RUCKER LAMAR, OF GEORGIA, ASSOCIATE
JUSTICE SUPREME COURT.

Over the sun, the stars, and
The moon, our fathers stand
And the heroic old men
Slip out of sight
In the cleavage of a mountain's hand.

For the old blood that is stain
That the sun has washed away,
And the one that has faded,
That have faded away
Are marching together today.

Oh, the roses be plucked for the blue
And the laurel wreaths for the gray
We have fought a common foe
And in common have
Shoulder to shoulder
STANLEY DUNN

By Richard G. Conover.

In the World Book there is a legend. Woodrow Wilson is commemorated for his part in the League of Nations. It was a Texas woman, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, who suggested the League of Nations. She was a woman of vision, a woman who saw the future of the world.

EDWARD DOUGLAS WHITE OF LOUISIANA, CHIEF JUSTICE OF SUPREME COURT, UNITED STATES.

There now are observed no fewer than five Memorial Days in the United States. Each has its own distinctive character. Some are the result of state legislation, some are the result of national legislation.

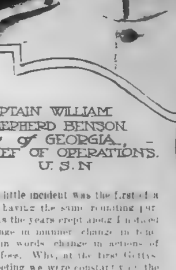

These Memorial Days are designated with the same patriotic purpose in view, spread over a period of thirty-nine days. Many of them are held on the same day, but some are held on different days.

It is true that the present time for observing Memorial Day is a fitting time for observing the day of the fallen. It is a day when we can best appreciate the sacrifice of those who gave their lives for their country.

I have watched the spirit of war weary divide and dwindle for fifty years past. I began to visit battlefields long before the war. I can well remember the important revival of the spirit of the nation during the four years of the war. It was a time when the people were united in a common purpose, when they were all working for the same goal.

WOODROW WILSON
PRESIDENT OF
UNITED STATES.

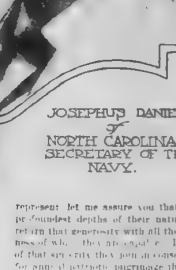

CAPTAIN WILLIAM SHEPHERD BENSON
OF GEORGIA,
CHIEF OF OPERATIONS,
U. S. N.

That little incident was the first in a number of incidents of the same nature. It was a time when the people were united in a common purpose, when they were all working for the same goal.

THOMAS VAIT GREGORY OF MISSISSIPPI, UNITED STATES ATTORNEY,
GENERAL.

It is true that the present time for observing Memorial Day is a fitting time for observing the day of the fallen. It is a day when we can best appreciate the sacrifice of those who gave their lives for their country.

JOSEPHUS DANIELS OF NORTH CAROLINA,
SECRETARY OF THE NAVY.

It is true that the present time for observing Memorial Day is a fitting time for observing the day of the fallen. It is a day when we can best appreciate the sacrifice of those who gave their lives for their country.

JAMES CLARK MCPHERSON OF KENTUCKY, ASSOCIATE
JUSTICE OF SUPREME COURT.

With the hope that it will be kept from year to year, while a portion of the war remains to honor the memory of the departed.

It will be noticed that the order was rather pro North in its wording. But the spirit between actual conflict and the first Memorial Day was a very short one, and language of intensity was more or less natural. Almost immediately after Memorial Day was inaugurated a better feeling toward the South as a whole began.

The various States took up the Memorial Day idea in quick succession. Legislatures made it the law of the land. In the North the first Army suggestion of May 30 made a strong appeal, so that most of the commonwealths uniformly agreed upon that particular month and date.

The South was as enthusiastic, but was no less anxious for such uniformity. Less recognition and the birthday of the commonwealths suggested the advisability of setting apart such days as would best express the combined idea.

In Memorial Day, edited by Robert Haven Schenck, a quotation carried from the Illustrated American conveyed in eloquent concrete the idea of the universal Memorial Day. It says:

ALBERT SIDNEY BULLOCK OF TEXAS, POSTMASTER-
GENERAL.

The North had merely planned to gather with bayonets the two divided sections of the country their soldiers had fought and had fallen in vain. Northern hatred for the South, Southern hatred for the North, is disloyalty, is treason, unless the Union which has been reestablished.

We remember with pride the achievements of our soldiers as proud to see evidence that had fallen worthy of their steel, and that a common country gave birth to them. The attainment of the sword has settled forever the questions over which no other tribunal had jurisdiction, and the nation went through the throes of a civil war for the benefit of North and South alike.

Memorial Days have been set apart by the various nations for many centuries. The Romans had their Parentalia, extending from February 13 to February 21. Tombs were decorated with wreaths and flowers. The Latin poets tell of roses and violets being strewn about the tombs of departed loved ones. These observances were not confined to honoring the Roman soldier, so that in this respect the custom has no exact similarity to the Memorial Day of the present time.

The Greeks performed floral rites at graves, and the ancient Druids selected the first of November as their Memorial Day. In China and Japan there is the "Feast of the Lanterns," held in honor of the departed. But again, these rites and feasts have no likeness to our Memorial Day in part, because they are for the living, even dead.

There may be some in England who are charged with indifference to the dead during the Wars of the Roses. From the battle of St. Albans in 1455 to the battle of Bosworth Field in 1485 the white rose of the Yorkists and the red rose of the Lancastrians were borne on the breasts of bitter enemies. Thirty years they hurled themselves at each other before there came an end through the marriage of a Lancastrian king to a Yorkist princess, it would be the height of absurdity to suppose a modern Englishman to wear a white wreath upon the tomb of Richard III and choosing a time when he would not bump into a modern Lancastrian carrying a chaplet for the tomb of Henry VII. It is half a century since the city was ended. That is long enough to accomplish a unity of memorial and tribute as firm and strong as the political unity resulting from the great conflict.

The game was a brilliant pitching duel between Allen and Cunningham, in which both infielders joined. From the home side, Cunningham struck edge, being somewhat scuder than the Chattanooga, but neither should have scored on during the mat-

JUST THINK, WE NEARLY LET HIM GO!

Ladies and Gentlemen, meet Mr. William Lee, late of St. Louis and other points, but at present coveting in the left field meadow for Bill Smith's Cracker clan and performing with considerable eclat. And to think that we came near letting this fellow slip through our fingers! Why? Because he couldn't hit. All of which proved to be a mere fabrication. As soon as Mr. Lee dusted his batting orbs, he started to show 'em all something, and for some dozen games he smacked safely twenty-one re-bounding whacks in forty-two tries, which is considerable hitting as hitting goes these days. We venture to remark that, if there was a popularity contest staged for the most popular man on the Cracker team at the present moment, little Willie would win hands down. With a little more experience, it is going to make one of the greatest ball players ever. He's fast, can throw, can field and can hit; and Roy Moran, Hack Eibel and other players adept in the book slide are teaching him this splendid asset. When he learns it, watch out base-running records. And his specialty is straightening out curve balls for ringing bingles.

Several Surprises Sprung In American League Race

By T. T. Cobb.

World's Champion All-around Ball Player.

The season is well along, but not too long to get a glimpse of the things that have developed a number of surprises. Not the least of these to me now—was the dismissal of Joe Mauer from the Cleveland club. I do not pretend to know any of the inside workings of the Cleveland club, but I am sure that the dismissal of Mauer was a surprise to many. Mauer was a star player, and his dismissal was a surprise to many. Mauer was a star player, and his dismissal was a surprise to many.

STEAMSHIP LINES FOR THE AMERICAS

Necessary to Establish Closer Relations—Pan-American Conference Presents Transportation Plan and Adjourns.

Washington, May 29.—The Pan-American financial conference closed here tonight after six days' discussion of problems which confronted the two Americas because of the European war.

Concrete results of the meeting were not apparent for many months. One of the resolutions of the Pan-American conference was that the United States should take the initiative in the matter of closer relations with the Americas.

What the results of the meeting may be so far as the United States is concerned probably will not be known until the conference receives the report and suggests of Secretary McAdoo.

Delegates from several group conferences met here today, but it was adjourned short of the White House and take leave of their respective countries.

President Wilson had received the report of the conference and saw that it was a very important one. He had seen that the conference had done a great deal of good.

While his first story appeared at the time to impress the police, the public received with some incredulity. The whole story, as told by Conley, was not believed by the police.

Germs Can't Stay With This Treatment

No Impurities Can Retain A Foothold—They're Driven Out.

The action of R. S. B. the famous blood purifier, is direct from the moment it enters the stomach. Unlike food that must be acted upon by the digestive juices, R. S. B. goes at once into the blood, and in less than five minutes has traversed the entire circulation. It not only purifies the blood, but it also kills the germs that are in it. It is a natural medicine for the blood, just as essential to health as food. It is a natural medicine for the blood, just as essential to health as food. Alleged Thief Caught

By Officer in Presence Of a Crowd on Viaduct

The Atlanta police may be rated 'slow runners' when it comes to catching thieves and getting on the job, but a record was established Saturday afternoon by 'Traffic Officer' Jack Clarke, on the Whitehall street viaduct, in front of the Germania Savings Bank, in the presence of a large crowd, who gave the traffic officer a lesson in his pick work.

Instead of seeing the escaping pickpocket, Lloyd saw officer Clarke holding both his pocketbook and the alleged pickpocket before him. Clarke was walking shortly behind Lloyd when he saw the negro, who gave his name as Robert Blyby.

Laura Robinson, negro, living at 414 Diller street, told Officer Clarke that she had seen the alleged pickpocket on the viaduct.

To Lighten the Housewife's Burdens

The Housekeeper's Council Table

Conducted by Dorothy Dolan

This illustration shows the connection made by two columns. In the opening a three or four paneled screen may be set when preparations for a meal are in progress or company is being entertained in the living-room part. No curtains are hung and the screen may be removed, as the dining-room furniture is not objectionable. The walls in both rooms are plain, with a dropped border in cream to match the ceiling.

A Word of Advice to the Bride

By DOROTHY DOLAN.

LINE is the bride's month. It is the month of marriage. It is the time when love realizes itself in new ties, in the founding of the home and in the making of new social relations. Much as this great step means to the man, it means more to a woman, because it is the manner of her wedding which makes her life and her happiness. She has prepared in the thought that her husband and the life made by him, but she has not prepared in the thought that her husband and the life made by her. She has not prepared in the thought that her husband and the life made by her. She has not prepared in the thought that her husband and the life made by her.

The Bride's Dream. There is a dream and that of many a bride is to see her step across the threshold of her new home for the first time. She has dreamed of it ever since she was a child. She has dreamed of it ever since she was a child. She has dreamed of it ever since she was a child.

After a month's time of stumbling and falling, you will adapt yourself to the kitchen and dish washing problem, but you still have failed because you were not prepared for it. You were not prepared for it. You were not prepared for it. You were not prepared for it.

Cooking Is Easy. After a month's time of stumbling and falling, you will adapt yourself to the kitchen and dish washing problem, but you still have failed because you were not prepared for it. You were not prepared for it. You were not prepared for it.

TALKS With the WOMAN WHO WORKS

THEY were three girl friends—they were true friends—they were true friends. They were true friends. They were true friends. They were true friends. They were true friends.

"It is all settled in my mind what we shall do. I have an ideal outfit," exclaimed the youngest of the three. "Let's go to a summer resort where they have tea every afternoon and dance every evening. It is just the thing we get so little time for when we are working. Every girl wants to be a high-flyer sometimes."

Home Decoration and Furnishing

By MME. MAISON.

THESE are the days when the housewife is being asked to do more than ever before. She is being asked to do more than ever before. She is being asked to do more than ever before. She is being asked to do more than ever before.

VIVIAN'S Heart to Heart Chat

SHE was a plain-looking woman with an average education and ordinary personality. She came from a middle-class family. So you see she had no special beauty, charm, or fortune to recommend. She would not have been surprised had fate marked her for a spinster.

Novelties In Home Entertainment

By DAME CURTESY.

MEMBERS of a senior class who were graduated gave their fellows a most charming evening as a "farewell" to the class. The entertainment was a "farewell" to the class. The entertainment was a "farewell" to the class. The entertainment was a "farewell" to the class.

"The Bread" will be an especially interesting picture, with Jackies, chess and fudo, with participants in grotesque costumes. After this should come "The Off" with the culprit in dejection before a stern "head man." If there has been a notable social dinner, it will be a "farewell" to the class. The entertainment was a "farewell" to the class. The entertainment was a "farewell" to the class.

House Warming Shower. A charming girl who was married soon after her home was honored when she was introduced to the girls in the name of herself and husband. If you will send me a self-addressed envelope in care of the paper I will be glad to tell you more about writing these notes of thanks. After you are married use your initials as you put your name with the last letter of your name, thus making a monogram of two, three or four letters, as the case may be, or you can use just the last initial for your married name. It is polite to rise when being introduced, the man's name is mentioned first and a 30-second toast is presented to an older one.

The first year of the marriage was marked by the fact that in spite of their wealth they were both happy and even more in love than when they married. They celebrated their tenth, twentieth and even twenty-fifth anniversary. He showed himself prouder of his wife and their affection than he was of his fortune and his successes. This seemed paradoxical, for he appeared to be a materialistic type of man. His friends thought he was too greatly absorbed in stocks and money matters to value affection even in his wife. The entire mystery of their love and happiness was cleared in this toast he drank to his wife at their anniversary celebration. "I am a happy man because I love my home and you. You were the first and only woman who taught me what love meant and retained the love you loved into being. This you have done by your untold devotion. Your unshiny disposition and abundance of common sense. These are qualities which every man looks for in the woman he wed, but she nearly always lacks one, and sometimes all of them. Though I am one of those unfortunate men who had none of these qualities until you gave me the superabundance of your virtues. By all means tell a woman friend. If there is anything that will destroy love it is deception practiced by either husband or wife. If you want your husband to play fair with you in all things you must do the same by him. He will think well of you for confessing. Though this confession involves a partial failure on your part. He will show you how to become a better manager."

RUSSIA OFFERS FIELD FOR AMERICAN TRADE

Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. Official Returns With Story of Interest to Dealers.

"The field for American business development in Russia is unlimited," says W. V. Logan, of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company, who has just returned from the czar's domain. "All evidence is that Russia is having a boom in its foreign trade, and it is to the possibilities there for American business institutions—whose representatives study Russian conditions and prepare for business relations that are not the United States, and that American business methods must be modified and adapted when applied there."

"To matter what Russia's commerce will be long or short before the war is over, it is certain that the people in this country appreciate Russia's values, its lack of development in industries of its own and its possibilities for American business."

"Take the automobile industry, which has started there were only 12,000 motor vehicles in Russia—trucks, pleasure cars, large and small. The Government purchased between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000 worth while it was there. After the war American automobile products will be very well known. The introduction is now being made. It is up to American manufacturers to follow the introduction if they are to get the enormous business that can be done."

Mr. Logan called from New York in June last, when he was in London, by the 150-ton steamer to Bergen, Norway; thence to Christiania and Stockholm from there, American automobile agents around the north of the Baltic in Sweden, through the trip from London requiring seven days. He remained in Petrograd ten weeks, and two short trips to Moscow.

"In Russia it seems that people either have plenty of money or none at all, but they have few goods. Food supplies are apparently plentiful, but city prices—breads, fruit—run away up. I saw strawberries at 15 cents a pound, apples at 10 cents. Hotel fare is affected now by the fact that most of the better cooks and chefs are with the army."

"But if you see out for fun, you can have a good time. The sale tax here on goods is 10 percent."

"The following poem aptly expresses the future of the show has been printed on the announcement cards."

"If you have any more to say, watch the lights on the main stage away."

"But if you see out for fun, you can have a good time. The sale tax here on goods is 10 percent."

The Little Convent Girl who lost Two (2) Husbands in a Day.

"O, Gee! I'm Glad I'm Free," Sang Genevieve Baisden as She Danced Out of Her Lawyer's Office—She Had Two Husbands When She Didn't Care for Even One, so No Wonder She Is Going to Fight Clear of Marital Waters for Some Time to Come.

By BERT LENNON.

A JUDICIAL wand was waved over the head of pretty Genevieve Baisden and, lo and behold, two husbands danced out of her life. It was all so simple, so easy, so quick, that she had time to say "O, Gee! I'm Glad I'm Free," before she was whisked away to her room. She had been married for two years, and she had two husbands. She had been married for two years, and she had two husbands. She had been married for two years, and she had two husbands.

Genevieve Baisden Accepted One Husband Through Error. Had Another One Thrust Upon Her as a Dinner Favor and Disposed of Both in One Divorce Decree.

had deceived Genevieve about being divorced from Baisden. Genevieve was shocked. But imagine her feelings a few moments later when there came a knock at the door and the voice of young Mr. Harris exclaimed: "Hello, wife dear!" The occurrences of the night before filtered through the girl's mind. "Surely, she was a blissful!" "I came back at noon, Mr. —?" She could not even recall the last name of her newly acquired husband, let alone his given name. "Call me Arthur," came the reply from the other side of the door. "I shall see you at noon, Genevieve." Young Harris had no sooner stepped down the hall than the girl jumped from bed and hastily threw her belongings into a trunk. She said her bill, and caring not for such a thing as a theatrical contract with the postulatory starting her in the face (3), boarded a train for the East.

She went directly to the office of a lawyer on arriving in Chicago and told him her troubles. "I see," said the lawyer. "You want to divorce Baisden so that you can become the legal wife of Harris." "All wrong," replied Genevieve. "I am through with the game of marriage for life." And so, in the course of a short time, she received a decree of divorce from Baisden and an annulment of her marriage to Harris—all in one judicial decree. Genevieve sent a nice little note to the latter, telling him not to be sorry. "The acreage of the Garden of Love is vast," wrote Genevieve. "Keep on romancing until you find the right little girl." (Of course, you are just dying to know if the other two girls stuck by their nuptial bargain. "They were still married and happy the last I heard from them," said "The Beautiful Genevieve.") girl's plight, wrote her a letter. Would she not come West to recuperate? The mountain air would bring back health and strength. Genevieve went to Colorado. Though the color returned to her cheeks, she remained broken in spirit. "I was deceived, lied to and abused," she told her grandfather. "I do not want to be known as Albert Baisden's wife anymore." And so to appease her the dining grandfather got hold of some court papers, filled in the blank spaces with names and legal verbiage, and showed them to the girl.

Ten Years in a Convent.

"Here is your divorce, Genevieve," he said. Knowing little or nothing of the law, she accepted the papers in good faith. A kiss was the old man's reward. Footlights Beckon Her. While on the way to complete recovery Genevieve gave much thought to the future. Though her grandfather was quite willing, she should live with him, the girl did not wish to be a burden. In the days of her convent life she had won honors in singing and folk dancing. Also she had a good speaking voice. Why not go on the stage?

First Marriage at Sixteen.

At first Genevieve rebelled at the thought. From convent to footlights was a far step—but she needs do something; so casting aside her puritanical ideas, and assuming the name of "Billie Lee," she sought an engagement in a Denver theater.

Gets Her Bogus Divorce.

Goes on the Stage.

She made good, as the critics say, right from the start. Her particular part on the program was Impersonations. Not long afterwards her grandfather died without revealing his deception about the divorce. The mother of Genevieve knew that such a decree had not been granted, but put off telling the girl. Baisden had disappeared and Genevieve, in the five years that passed, gave no hint that she again contemplated matrimony. One night in February, 1914, Genevieve Baisden, or "Billie Lee," as she was known to stage friends, was about to retire in a hotel at Los Angeles when the telephone bell rang. An actress friend was on the other end of the line. "Oh, Billie, you must not go to bed," said the voice over the wire. "I have discussed these requirements in Los Angeles. They want you to arrange a little party. You must join us at supper. Beulah says she will come." Genevieve consented to join the party. One of the guests was Arthur N. Harris of Dallas, Texas. He had no little sister, and Genevieve, during the meal, and some of the guests, the wine being too strong for her. "Here I must turn my glass down, and retire." The other expostulated. "Have one more slip," said the youth from Texas. "It will revive you." Genevieve remembers he had big, brown eyes and a wealth of brown hair. He was not altogether bad to look at. She took another slip.

Married While You Wait. What happened after that is hazy in the mind of Genevieve. She recalls that the girl friend who got her to join the party said she was going to marry one of the young men—and right away! "Let's all three couples get married, suggested Beulah. A capital idea," said the others (4). But Genevieve in chorus. "The youth with the big, brown eyes and the wealth of brown hair took Genevieve's hand in his. And he asked her to become his wife. She did not consent. She did not refuse. She could not have said a word just then if her life depended on it. Genevieve remembers of being assisted into an automobile, and of visiting an officious person who gave them some papers the marriage license, no doubt; of a wild ride along a country road to the home of a person who married them. After returning to town Genevieve recalls entreating her husband to bring her back to the hotel. He did not remain there with her, but said it would come back the following day. On awakening the next morning Genevieve found a letter that had been slipped under her door. It was from her mother telling, after six years, how the grandfather

How Uncle Sam Protects His Soldiers

By DELIA AUSTRIAN.

THREE are few places where science has penetrated with such efficient effect as in the American army. During the last fifty years scientists have made the nations of the world realize the fact that it is as necessary to protect soldiers against disease and plague as it is to give them efficient military training and to equip them with the right kind of ammunition.

Among all the diseases of camp and hospital life is so feared as typhoid fever. Here the science of investigation has again gained the victory by means of anti typhoid inoculation. The luminescence advance in camp sanitation and the great value of typhoid inoculation may be illustrated by comparing the experience of the maneuver division of regulars in Texas during its concentration from March until August, 1911, with that of the second division Seventh Army Corps, which was organized at Jacksonville, Fla., about June 1, 1908, and remained there in camps until October.

The two divisions were encamped in nearly the same latitude and for about the same length of time. Each had a good camp site and an aresian water supply of unimpeachable purity. The mean strength of the second division of the Seventh Army Corps, assembled at Jacksonville, Fla., was 10,750. There were 2,003 certain and probable cases of typhoid, with 246 deaths from typhoid fever and 281 deaths from all diseases.

Some of the foremost sanitary results have been accomplished in Porto Rico and the Philippines. This is most noticeable in the regeneration of the old Spanish prison called Bilibid in Manila. The mortality reached the abnormal proportion of 28 per thousand. Through relief from overcrowding, improved diet and proper sanitation it was reduced to 70 per thousand. By trying to combat other diseases caused by improper sanitation the death rate finally fell to 15 per thousand.

The United States took another important step in this direction when Colonel W. C. Gorgas made Cuba and the Panama Canal Zone healthy and habitable places. Less than fifteen years ago Colonel Gorgas was an inconspicuous unit in the sum total of a necessary but unheralded department of the American army. He was a post surgeon on the plains of the West and the Southwest, attending soldiers in times of peace, together with the wives and children of officers. He recognized the mosquito as the direct cause of malaria and yellow fever. He and his assistants determined to put an end to yellow fever and malaria by destroying the mosquito. After a series of experiments, remarkable alike in their inception and successful culmination, the yellow fever was run to cover.

When Colonel Gorgas went to the Canal Zone he started his important work by fighting the mosquitoes. He found a strip of country ten miles wide and forty-six miles long with a considerable settlement of houses between. He followed the method which had rid Havana of yellow fever, of a scourge that had been epidemic for 150 years. He stopped the fever, in sixteen months in the City of Panama alone. Each house was fumigated three times. They burned 104 tons of pyrethrum, 200 tons of sulphur and a large quantity of other disinfectants.

All apparatus connected with the sanitary system is of the simplest kind, so that it can be installed quickly by the troops. Storage of garbage and kitchen refuse is

While they fought the yellow fever mosquito with chemicals and screens, they destroyed the breeding place of the malaria mosquito and drove his back several hundred yards from the camps and barracks. They put wire netting into the houses and advised every one to take three grains of quinine a day. Through the efforts of Colonel Gorgas and his assistants the Canal Zone has practically been rid of yellow fever and malaria.

Finds First Love in Southland.

During a summer vacation the girl, then known as Genevieve Baisden, went to visit friends and to arrive in Patton, Ga. There she met Albert V. Baisden. A fine looking fellow, he had personality and magnetism—a combination that worked havoc with the heart neutrality of this mere child. Besides, he told her of the brilliant future that lay before him. Baisden was a mining man, so the girl understood, and in the mountains of Cuba lay hidden his fortune. THE SUBMARINE

How Yale Freshman in Colonial Days Gave to World the First of Deadly "Water Bugs" That Have Revolutionized Naval Warfare

1771—Submarines Essentially the Same—1915

COMMENTING on the first practical "water bug" ever built, that of David Bushnell, a Yale freshman in 1771, Commander Barber of the United States navy said: "It seems to have been the most perfect thing of its kind that has ever been constructed before or since the time of Bushnell."

Sir William White, the noted constructor of the British Navy, said: "It cannot be claimed that any new principle of design has been discovered or applied since Bushnell. He showed the way to all his successors in the particulars of buoyancy, stability and control of the depth reached by submarines. Although alternative methods have been introduced and practically tested, in the end Bushnell's plans have in substance been found the best."

WHEN the Lusitania, pride of two continents, plunged to her doom off the rugged coast of Ireland a cry of horror and indignation was heard around the world. It roared itself in the press and from the pulpit—it found echo in the shop and in the home. Truly, the god Mars had come stark mad.

In Washington something besides the appalling loss of life and grave issues involved concerned the naval experts of our government. Beneath gold band and military pose they are much like other men—emotional, sympathetic. But in times like these they must forget their feelings in the cold, analytical survey of science.

The sinking of the Lusitania, though an act to be deplored, was, nevertheless, another triumph for the submarine. And in this day of revolutionized warfare the submarine is of primary importance. Hence the burial of sentiment on the part of our naval experts as they weighed the facts and added them to the "Gray Jones lecher" of information.

History of the Submarine.

The submarine: What is it? Who invented it? What has been the history of its evolution? There are few in the civilized world today who cannot answer the first question. The majority could do so before the present great conflict. Those who could not learned the answer when the Albatross, the Hogue and the Crescy, cruisers of Great Britain, were plunged to their doom in the North Sea. They learned that from the steel bowels of an invisible craft were hurled the fishlike weapons that buried themselves in the armor of the enemy.

But in whose fertile mind originated the first practical submarine? How speedily did the anxious progress in improving on this first "water bug"? These questions, perhaps, cannot be answered so readily. It is a general impression in America that the submarine boat and its deadly companion, the torpedo, were born of twentieth century genius. But nothing could be further from the truth.

Submarine navigation, so far as recorded in history, was conceived during the famous siege of vention that gunpowder could be exploded under water. They even ridiculed him for advancing such a theory. But the student scientist took his professors and other learned gentlemen of "Doubting Thomas" tendencies out into New Haven harbor, where he produced such an explosion.

Soon after the opening of the revolution war, Admiral Lord Howe began a blockade of New York harbor. The colonists were perturbed and with cause. They realized that England controlled the situation for the time being, at least, and that if the hostile fleet could be destroyed the war would be ended—then and there. But how to destroy the fleet was a question. The colonists had no ships that would bring victory in battle with those of Lord Howe the workings of his craft, the Eagle, flag ship of the British fleet, was picked as the first victim of Bushnell's genius.

Bushnell was never a strong youth. While other boys of his home colony played games and improved their physique, he spent his time indoors, mapping out the many ingenious ideas that raced through his imaginative mind. So when the opportunity arose for him to demonstrate the practicability of his aerial scheme he confessed his inability to exercise the Turtle himself, because of insufficient strength.

Volunteers were called for to perform the feat of sinking the Eagle. The first to respond was Ezra Lee. He knew little, if anything, about this new sort of navigation, and had only two days in which to Silhouette Cross-Section of the Turtle, the First Practical Submarine, Showing How Its Navigator Was Expected to Use the Torpedo Screw to Fasten the Deadly Explosive to a Ship's Hull. The Turtle Was Constructed in 1771.

Cross-Section of the Turtle, Said by Naval Experts to Be the Most Perfect Thing of Its Kind Ever Invented.

The thoughts of some patriots turned to David Bushnell and his submarine invention. How, they asked, could it be placed under a ship? Bushnell readily gave them an answer: By means of a submarine boat. He had invented just such a craft for just such a purpose.

As Speedy as a Turtle.

Were one to see Bushnell's Turtle, the man bestowed on his queer-looking boat, alongside a modern "water bug" belonging to the powers, scarcely any resemblance would be noted. Instead of the whale-like lines that characterize these latter-day sea fighters, Bushnell's submarine was shaped something like a "round clam," its longest distance being placed vertically. This so as to accommodate a single operator in sitting posture.

The Turtle was submerged by letting water into a tank, and raised by allowing the water to drain from this same reservoir. The motive power was furnished by a wooden propeller placed in front, which the operator turned by means of a crank. It gave the boat a maximum speed of two miles an hour.

Four rods, which emitted a phosphorescent light and at the same time did not exhaust any of the oxygen so precious to the operator, was the means of illumination. An ordinary rudder steered the vessel. Bushnell provided an air chamber in which the operator could remain for half an hour, and practical methods for gauging the depth and retaining the stability of his craft.

Bushnell completed his studies at Yale in 1775, but previous to that year the Turtle had made several successful voyages. One of the patriots, Isagel Putnam, learned of this, sent for Bushnell and his submarine boat. After a brief conference, during which the young inventor explained became acquainted with the mechanism of the Turtle.

The failure to sink the British man-of-war may be partly explained by the fact that, technically, says submarine experts, there was no reason why the Turtle should not have sent the Eagle to its doom.

Ezra Lee proposed the submarine to where the British flagship lay off Norton Island. Submerging the Turtle, he came up under the stern of the enemy. The submarine carried a single torpedo fixed in place by a cable with a screw. Bushnell had made it possible for whatever man guided his boat to detach this screw and fasten it in the hull of the ship to be destroyed. Having done this, the Turtle was to leave. Within the torpedo was a time clock set for thirty minutes. After that time the explosion was due to occur.

The Greatest Problem.

But a problem confronted Ezra Lee. At the point under the hull of the Eagle where the torpedo was to be placed, the weight of copper prevented him from screwing on his weapon of destruction. Though Lee did his best to overcome this difficulty, he worked in vain. As the light of morning began to filter through murky clouds he backed away, leaving his torpedo about thirty minutes later this exploded, sending huge columns of water high in the air, not far from the Eagle.

It was a great disappointment to Bushnell's friends, who had forecast a complete success for the experiment. The failure of the Turtle became a cause to be laughed at and ridiculed. Bushnell, discouraged and sick at heart, the result of years of hard work vanished in a day, disappeared from his old haunts.

A quarter of a century elapsed before we again hear of the submarine being taken at all seriously. Napoleon Bonaparte, with practically all the powers league against him, had one great ambition—an invasion of England. The first step in this direction was to do away with the English fleet, which just then was blockading the British coast.

Robert Fulton Appears.

One day in the midst of his deliberations as to how he could land an army on the shores of England, Napoleon received a letter from Robert Fulton, who then was in Paris. "The sea which separates you from your enemy," it read, "affords him an immense advantage over you. I have it in my power to cause this obstacle which protects him to disappear."

Napoleon thought there might be something in the opinions of Fulton, so accordingly he appointed a commission to investigate. Several demonstrations of Fulton's boat were given in the harbor of Brest. His craft, though a considerable improvement over that of the latter, it resembled an ordinary sloop, its motive power being furnished by a jib and a sail. These were removed and laid lengthwise on the deck just before the boat descended.

The experiments of Fulton were successful. With three companions he sailed his craft 600 feet while twenty-five feet beneath the surface of the water. On one occasion the four men remained below four hours. A shallow placed at their disposal by the French admiralty was a mass of debris after the submarine had attacked her. Napoleon, impressed with the action of Fulton's boat, ordered him to set sail against the British fleet, just off Brest.

But the English in some way had been forewarned. They realized then, as naval experts realize now, that one defense against the submarine—and perhaps the best defense—is to run away. And run away they did. The ships of Britain abandoned themselves from the coast of France, and though Fulton watched and waited, he received no opportunity to prove the value of his invention.

Napoleon, angry, looked coats of fire on the head of Fulton and dismissed him from his service. That he committed a grievous error that he threw away his only chance of crushing England and saving his empire—has always been the assertion of French naval historians.

English Appreciated Its Worth.

But if France did not appreciate the worth of Fulton's invention England did. Even while the American was carrying on his experiments in the harbor of Brest they had invited him to London. In fact, several attempts were made to entice him, to the rejection of his plans by Napoleon. Fulton forthwith made the trip across the channel, where William Pitt received him with open arms.

"If your boat is introduced into practice," said the prime minister, after examining Fulton's plans, "it will annihilate all military navies."

When Fulton entered Deal Harbor in his submarine and blew up a Danish brig of 200 tons Pitt was more confident than ever. He sent Fulton to Lord St. Vincent, the first lord of the admiralty, which assured that confidence.

"What a fool Pitt is!" he thundered. "Who does he encourage a kind of warfare which is useless to those who are masters of the sea, and which, if it succeeds, will deprive them of this supremacy?"

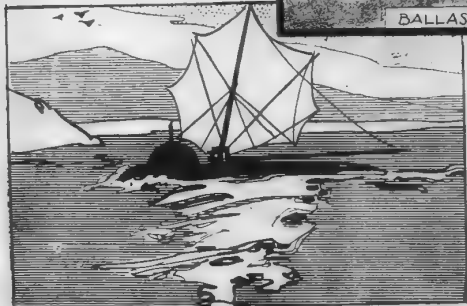

Pitt knew this without being reminded of it by Lord St. Vincent. So did other officials of the government. Their intention was not to develop the submarine but to suppress it. They did not want it to fall into the hands of the enemy. Accordingly, they offered Fulton a fortune to forget about his invention and return to America. In a letter to Lord Granville, Fulton waxed indignant. "Not for 100,000 a year," he wrote, "would I do what you suggest."

Return of Submarine.

It was at Kiel, in 1860, that the submarine again came into prominence. A man named Bauer built a craft which he called the "Florenzer-Marin," but on a trial trip it was crushed by water pressure. In 1863 McClintock and Howgate constructed a semi-submarine, hand-propelled boat for the purpose of an attack on the federal fleet, but it sank four times, each time drowning the entire crew of eight men.

The "Whale" now on exhibition in the Brooklyn navy yard, was built in 1844, and, by strange coincidence, one of her constructors bore the same name as the first inventor of a submarine—Bushnell. His full name was C. S. Bushnell. In conjunction with Augustus Ellet he built the boat at Halescott, N. E. She is about twenty-nine feet long and has a depth of nine feet. Her sides are made of twelve-inch boiler plate.

THIS is the first of two pages describing the submarine from the earliest days of its experimental stages to its present state of efficiency in naval warfare. Next week's story will treat of the modern submarine.

How Submarine Built by Robert Fulton Looked When Ordered by Napoleon Bonaparte to Proceed Against the English Warships in the Harbor of Brest.

Syracuse in 215 B. C. Trained divers were employed, but they were unable to remain under water more than a few minutes. Centuries elapsed before we hear of anyone attempting to build a boat that would be invisible to an enemy. M. Deleuche states that some English ships were destroyed in 1572 by fire carried under water. In 1620 Cornelius van Drebbel, a Dutch natural philosopher, worked along this idea, constructing several boats which he made water tight by greased leather he stretched over the hull. By 1771 no less than fourteen types of submarines had been patented in England alone.

It was left to a young American, David Bushnell, to invent the first practical submarine, which he did in 1771, when a freshman at Yale. In principle it was essentially the same as the "water bugs" that prove the seas today in search of prey. This may sound far-fetched, but it is a fact vouched for several years ago by Commander Barber of the United States navy, who carefully examined Bushnell's plans. "It seems to have been the most perfect

Sports Clothes

A NOVEL hat for either sport or motor wear is this white felt with satin facing. For motor wear a billowy chiffon veil is snapped on and draped to suit the wearer.

THE "Piping Rock" riding habit to the right is one of the season's notable models. A combination of materials is used, the coat of diagonal serge combines well with the saddle skirt of broadcloth. A black and white banded sailor, smart stock and riding boots complete this smart outfit.

SPORTS suit of heavy, natural-color linen built on lines strongly suggesting the military, are modish. The jacket of the suit on the left shows four patch pockets, and is gathered in at the waistline to a narrow belt below which it flares into a peplum. The ball buttons of white enamel are an effective finish.

PROHIBITION LEADERS MEET HERE ON JUNE 22

Anti-Saloon League Drawing Temperance Bill to Be Submitted to Legislature.

Arrangements are nearly completed for the state convention of prohibitionists in Atlanta, June 22—the day before the legislative convenes. The Anti-Saloon league has been doing a vast amount of work during the several months. From three to five typewriters and stenographers are working early and late. The superintendent, G. W. Eichenberger, in addition to the regular work has been studying the legislative problem. A bill is being prepared which the legislature will be asked to pass. He did not discuss the features of the bill, except to say that it will be satisfactory to the true temperance people of the state. He says he is indebted to some good laymen for assistance in the strenuous weeks of work. So far as the speakership is concerned, he says no candidate has had enough votes pledged to elect him. Dr. Eichenberger says the Anti-Saloon league, W. C. T. U. and other temperance forces are working together for the success of the state convention. Lunch and supper will be served at the Baptist Tabernacle. Address will be delivered by Rev. J. H. Hardeman, W. S. Witham, Mrs. T. E.

Patterson and the chairman of the resolution committee, and a number of others, besides a large number of reports from every section of the state. Congressman S. V. Webb, of North Carolina, will speak at night, and ex-Chief Justice Sam W. Wesley, of Alabama, will speak in the afternoon. The sessions will be held at 10 a. m., 7:30 p. m. and 7:45 p. m. Mrs. A. E. Cuyler and a male quartet will sing.

Judge Tindall to Talk At Ad Men's Luncheon About Juvenile Court

Judge W. W. Tindall, of the Atlanta juvenile court, will be the honor guest and speaker at the noonday luncheon of the Ad Men's club, of Atlanta, next Thursday, June 3, at the Wincoff hotel, at 1 o'clock. The invitation extended to Judge Tindall to tell the Ad Men about the work of the juvenile court is directly in line with the efforts of the club to align itself with and assist, wherever possible, all of the agencies of municipal uplift. It will be recalled that the Atlanta Ad Men recently took up the city school problem, and expressed themselves in no uncertain terms with reference to the necessity for immediate improvement. In addition to hearing from Judge Tindall, the Ad Men will discuss plans for the coming year, and will propose to send the best possible delegation to represent Atlanta at the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World. The Atlanta delegation will leave for Chicago on Thursday, June 13, at 4:35 p. m., via the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railroad, and expect now to occupy two special sleepers.

CHARTER AMENDED, STOCK INCREASED BY STONE COMPANY

The charter of the Atlantic Stone company, which owns extensive stone quarries and river rights on Broad river, in Elbert county, has been amended, changing the name to Atlantic Power and Properties company, and increasing the capital from $50,000 to $400,000, all paid in. Further increase of capital, to an amount not exceeding in the aggregate, $1,000,000, is permitted under the amended charter. The scope of the company is considerably widened so as to include not only the operation of granite quarries, but the development of hydro-electric projects and similar enterprises. The same officers remain in charge, namely: W. G. Watson, president; William Hurd Hillier, treasurer.

ROME STREET RAILWAY BUCKS AT BRIDGE COST

Rome, Ga., May 29.—(Special.)—The Rome Railway and Light company has filed a petition in United States district court here asking that the Floyd county commissioners be enjoined from attempting to make the street railway company pay one-third the cost of the new bridge to be built in Rome. The petition sets forth that to force the company to pay such an amount would be depriving it of its property without due process of law, and therefore would be a violation of the constitution of the United States. No date for hearing the petition has been set, nor has a temporary injunction been granted.

PECAN GROWERS MEET IN THOMASVILLE NEXT

Successful Meeting at Quincy, Fla.—This Year's Crop Will Be Biggest Ever Grown.

Thomasville, Ga., May 29.—(Special.)—Thomasville will be the meeting place next year for the Georgia-Florida Pecan Growers' association, this having been decided upon by vote before the adjournment of the meeting of the association held in Quincy, Fla., this week. This city had been originally chosen as the permanent meeting place of the association, but owing to the fact that the Quincy people were so anxious to have it come there, Thomasville resigned in its favor at the meeting here last year. Owing to its convenient location as the center of the pecan belt, however, the members decided it was best to make this city again the meeting place. Those attending the meeting in Quincy report it as being a very fine one and with many features of enjoyment and instruction to those interested in the pecan industry. The citizens of Quincy did all in their power for the entertainment of the visitors and they were afforded an opportunity to see the big tobacco fields of Gadsden county, the crop of which last year sold for $3,000,000. The officers of the association elected to serve the coming year were: President, C. A. Simpson, Monticello, Fla.; vice president, William Bullard, Albany, secretary and treasurer, W. W. Bassett, Monticello, Fla. An interesting feature of the meeting was that from reports made by members from all sections of the peach belt it was shown that the peach crop of 1915 will be the greatest ever known in the history of this industry, which has now become an established one for this and other sections. Arrangements being made for the marketing of the crop will render it also the most valuable from a monetary standpoint.

Commencement Sermons. Thomasville, Ga., May 29.—(Special.)—Thomasville people will be given the opportunity to listen to two commencement sermons tomorrow, one in the morning and the other in the evening. In the morning the baccalaureate sermon of the Thomasville high school will be preached in St. Thomas' Episcopal church by the rector, the Rev. W. H. Higgins, this preaching the one which will be held next year. In the evening the Rev. Isaac P. Cook will preach the baccalaureate sermon for the Vashli home in the Methodist church, it being the closing feature of the commencement exercises of that institution.

Vashti Commencement Shows Great Benefit Done for Needy Girls

Thomasville, Ga., May 29.—(Special.)—The commencement exercises of the Vashli industrial home held here Thursday and Friday were very interesting and showed what has been done for the girls who are the inmates of it, and their advancement along educational lines. This home is supported by the Southern Methodist church, and it takes in and cares for all girls of whatever denomination who are without means of support. The industrial exhibit made by the pupils this year was exceptionally fine, especially along lines of domestic science. In their classes they are carried through the eighth grade and taught besides special lines of work that enable them to obtain situations on leaving the school at 18 years of age. There were more than a hundred girls sheltered by the home this year, and those that graduated will be provided with positions.

LARGE SOUTHERN PLANTS TO GO UNDER HAMMER

Montgomery, Ala., May 29.—Property of the Tallahassee Falls Manufacturing company, at Tallahassee, Ala., is ordered sold, together with two other southern plants, at Columbia, S. C., and Baltimore, to satisfy first and second mortgages held by the Continental Trust company of New York for $1,000,000. The decree was made by Judge W. I. Grubb, of Birmingham, and filed in the federal court here. The decree is an ancillary order following one made by the United States court of Maryland against the property of the International Cotton mill, owners of the Tallahassee Falls Manufacturing company.

A Title Guarantee Policy Of Atlanta Title Guarantee Company with a deed to a piece of Atlanta real estate is safe and sure.

The first thing is to select a property in Atlanta, the fastest growing city in the South, and banking and business center of the Southeast.

The next thing is "KEEPING OUT OF COURT."

"A second thing to remember in the case of real estate is to be certain that the title one receives is good and clear of all incumbrances. With ordinary town or city real estate the USAL and SAFEST method is to have the title GUARANTEED by some guaranty or trust company that makes a business of guaranteeing titles."—Saturday Evening Post.
