

WAX! The FUTURIST LUNCH!

It's Different From Soup to Nuts, From
Flowers to Ferns,
From Costumes to Behavior!

ally they are cut into geometric patterns—into triangles, cubes, squares and parallelograms.

The vases that used to contain them have gone into the discard. Cats, pigs, dogs, alligators, crocodiles and other strange animals along with still stranger idols are used instead. They are not regular cats, dogs, pigs and idols in their natural form and shapes but cats, dogs, pigs and idols that have been either futurized or cubized. They come in all sorts of impossible shapes and never-was colors.

Most of them carry appropriate inscriptions. The green and yellow cat says: "Bring your smile with you for good luck awaits you when you see me." The pig's message is: "I will stick to you if you will stick to me." The Chinese idol prophesies: "I will fight your troubles in all that is right." The green and black cat carries the promise: "I will charm all your ills away," and the black cat makes the appeal: "Possess me and be happy."

In the costumes as in the china and floral decorations there is an endless range through the land of futurist ideas. For the benefit of any who may have a desire to give a futurist party it may be suggested that the costume of an "early Victorian vampire" is quite effective. It lends itself to a variety of interpretations. A "full intensity brain storm" may also be translated into a costume with startling results. "Irish tomatoes" is another title which permits one to roam where one will in the land of crazy dress designs. "Feathered frog" and "athletic half-wit" carry their own suggestions along with themselves. They can result in as many costumes as there are ingenious people capable of setting upon an idea.

Now comes the menu. The startling table china, floral decorations and costumes are but gradual steps up to the most startling thing of the party. It was France, the home of good cooking, which invented the futurist menus and developed them to their highest point of wilfulness.

Some doubting Thomases say that these modern futurist menus have been formulated by France's enemies to prejudice the human race against her and prove that she is the greatest barbarian of them all.

On the other hand more lenient people have professed to see in these menus attempts of desperate journalists in Paris to find some combination or permutation of words to elude the censor successfully and to telegraph to America some real news concerning the actual state of events in that war-ridden land.

Still others feel that they are messages communicating in code, unseen though in plain sight, the details of some diabolical plot from whose consequences the world will presently tremble to its core.

These menus are the literary side of futurist cooking, although intelligent readers find it hard to believe. Despite the horrors that have been done in the name of war, no one who has looked upon a futurist painting will believe that any man would purposely introduce anything of that sort into another human being's interior economy. It would be beyond the pale of barbarism.

Everybody knew that futurist cooking had to come. Futurist art, futurist music and futurist literature had been given to the eager world. Futurist clothing has had a very successful tryout. And now comes the futurist cooking to complete the scale.

Despite all the mystery and strangeness which enshrouded this new art there is at least one thing that one truthfully and definitely is said about it. And that is that the average man will have to cultivate a taste for it before he will be likely to enjoy it or even attempt to enjoy it.

One dish is composed of tomatoes and brandy, which might prove rather tolerable to many men provided the ingredients were fairly well divided so as to leave a preponderance of the brandy. A popular soup has been compounded, or invented, or concocted, the distinguishing feature of which is that it is flavored liberally with cod liver oil.

Another choice futurist combination for the table is bearings mashed in raspberry jam and served with whipped cream. Beef cooked in cranberry and served with bananas stuffed with cheese is something entirely futurist and worth trying at least once.

The "new art" cooks are extremely fond of cooking the vegetables "au naturel" without scraping them. Potatoes, carrots, turnips and even peas and various sorts of beans are thrown into the pot in just the garb in which they came from the garden. After they are cooked they are served still with their original coverings on in petroleum jelly.

A choice dish is the one composed of canned fish eaten with a sauce consisting of oil and vinegar, Yorkshire relish, salt and pepper. What remains of this sauce after the fish are eaten may be poured over an English plum pudding.

Other appetizing dishes, after one gets used to them, are beefsteak with strawberry jam, fried salmon with marmalade, roast mutton with currant jelly. These in themselves are not particularly startling. They begin to be futuristic when the preserves and jams is added a fair amount of ether for a sauce. Fresh strawberries are also served with ether and any one who does not like them this way can have them served with vinegar poured over them.

However improbable it may seem at present the world will unquestionably adopt these innovations in the serving of food within a reasonable length of time. The world, it must be remembered, is not one-tenth so conservative in anything as it is in its diet. This is proved by the fact that in the past hundred years there has not been a change in eating which could be called at all revolutionary.

The world adopts new art, new music, new styles in clothes, new religions and new social ideas. But what it ate a hundred or more years ago it still eats.

Those who do not consider themselves very old can remember when tomatoes were called "love apples." They were used in homes—in the parlors on mantel pieces—as ornaments but never in the kitchen or dining-room as food. They were pronounced rank poison.

Then came along a particularly hardy and daring fellow who discovered that not only were tomatoes not rank poison but that they were a particularly fine sort of food and possessed the ability of lending themselves to a great variety of culinary uses. It took him many years to impress upon the world the fact that tomatoes are a delicious vegetable. Even today there are some of the old line conservatives who, once having used tomatoes as ornaments, cannot bring themselves to use them as food.

There is the classic example of olives and the way they first taste. It is safe to say that no olive eater in the world ever enjoyed his first olive—the second for that matter. A taste for olives has to be cultivated. Grapefruit is very similar in the same class. The man who says he enjoyed his first grapefruit lays open his record for voracity to suspicion. People who have nothing else to do are always doing something that appears outlandish and silly. But they sometimes get away with it. If it were not for the imaginative fools the world would be a sad place indeed.

At the present time the futurist chefs are receiving the taunts and jeers and quips which not so long ago were visited upon their brethren, the futurist painters, musicians and writers. But who is there to say that bananas stuffed with cheese, tomatoes and brandy, and soup with cod liver oil will not in a few years come to the table as regularly as French fried potatoes, oyster stew and ice cream now do?

They may taste unpleasant, disagreeable, impossible to digest. But so did olives and grapefruit, not to mention a dozen other popular dishes.

FUTURISM has struck the dining-room table and the house parties that revolve around it.

Like a Kansas cyclone the new art has wrecked the old style cut glass and delicate china tableware with delicate flower designs. It has picked up the old fashioned table bouquet of gentle maidenhair fern and pale pink and lavender flowers and whirled it through the window into the back yard where stands the garbage can.

The futurist party is different from soup to nuts, from flowers to ferns, from costumes to behavior. It doesn't necessarily have to be anything in particular. There is just one thing that makes a futurist party and that is that it should be entirely different from every other party which has gone before it. That is the simple secret of the thing.

It takes the chef, the florist and the costume designer to bring a futurist party together, for the real futurist party is a combination of all of these things.

The delicate, pale table china of yester-year is replaced with a tableware that can be just as delicate in texture and weight but which is boldly futuristic in design and color.

Broad rings of color go swirling around the rims of the plates and saucers, and around the cups. Sometimes a bold check design is used. No matter what the design it is always and forever bold. Black is a favorite color in the futurist ware. In fact black is used not only in the ware but in embroidering designs on table cloths and on napkins. Salt cellars, cream pitchers, finger bowls and other special ware of the sort are now to be had in odd, cubistic shapes. In fact anything different goes.

The futurist flower decorations are a joy all by themselves. They are a joy likewise to the florists, who are glad of the opportunity to get away from the humdrum decorations of the conventional party. And it may be added that the futurist flowers are a veritable joy to the guests.

The strongest contrasts possible in colors are required. Reds are freely used with greens, blacks with whites, blues with yellows, violets with oranges. Likewise nature is freely handled and, as the futurist florists claim, freely improved upon. Flowers are cut into whatever shape is necessary to carry out the scheme the futurist florist has in mind. ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

Vol. XLVII—No. 363.

ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, JUNE 13, 1915.

POLICE AFFAIRS WHEN SHOTS

"A BAD RUN"

John Barker scouted many months, and kept the police waiting until at last they spotted him. When he was out skating.

"We were hunting John for several months," stated an officer, when John Barker was under judicial scrutiny at Saturday's police matinee. "He stole an overcoat and pawned it, and has been on the scout ever since."

"How came the cops to slip up on you this time?" the recorder asked the prisoner.

"Hit wun me what slipped up," replied John. "They cotched me when I had on er pair of skates an' when I tried ter run I took er tumble."

"It seems to me," said the recorder, "that you ought to have outskated the cops and not away."

"I did skate at fusa," was the reply, "an' wun gittin' in de lead tell I struck er rough road an' den I went down."

"That was on your own motion, I might remark," the recorder went on to say. "You have been going all sorts of gait, any way, and I am going to send you to jail for stealing that overcoat. You will find plenty of cheap skates over there."

"I haint nebber wun ter wear no more skates er long er I libs," muttered the prisoner as he was led away.

"They sure caused your downfall," the recorder called out to him. "You change your pace when you get out of the chairman, if you will tumble to that you will be all right."

WHAR'S DAT COP?"

Had the Cops Greenies?
The Artful Dodger of Darktown
Was one slick evildoer,
Who mistified de noisedest cops
By crawling through a sewer.

"So you are the noted Artful Dodger of Darktown," the recorder said to Sam Coloney, who was caught out breaking a billiard cue over another negro's head.

"This is the fellow, your honor," stated the arresting officer, "who caused such a mystery in Darktown and who had the police guessing by crawling through a sewer pipe."

"I was chased into a vacant lot when he suddenly disappeared as if the earth had swallowed him up," he explained that time, but this time we caught him in a blind alley, where he couldn't run or dodge either."

"You have been playing hide and seek and peek-a-boo with the cops, have you, Sam?" asked the recorder.

"Hit wun my blunder, fustest er de wun, an' den I wun de wunest. I catch me, wun't hit?" was the counter question.

"You are exactly right," the recorder told him, "and don't blame any fellow for dodging from the cops as long as he can. All dodgers are all right, even corn dodgers. Sam, but this time you are dodging the stockade for thirty days, and if you try any sewer run all the boys on the lot will get next to your hide."

"You has to put me up fer hidin' in dat sewer pipe," the prisoner asked.

"I will see to it," the recorder said. "I will protect your cues, Sam, just like the Chinese do."

Department of Home Gardens

AMATEUR GARDENERS

The plan of an ardent gardener that we print below has been lying unprinted a long while.

It was a little premature in its sanguine expression, but even though it may still be, we give it space, adding to it our own articles and concerted efforts for the Atlanta Home Gardening League.

It is a fine thing for each man to have his own garden, fine for his wife and fine for his friends. It is fine for his city, and especially fine for the league, work began in Atlanta eighteen months ago. But something more is needed, something inclusive.

Dawn of a New Era.

We are facing a new era. It is an era of co-operative work. We dare approach the subject of home gardens fearlessly, because the cultivation of waste spaces about our homes and city is only common sense.

Even the hardest heads are now agreeing that the best of natural things works a good soil that it can be measured. So the gardeners must and will come.

It is necessary for the extension of the garden idea.

The beginning was when we organized with a constitution that permits the grow-up to join our ranks and help us make it the success that it is in Los Angeles and other western cities, where it has been the center of the Atlanta Home Garden League.

Present the unit that has started the powerful body of amateur gardeners in our city. This league work, under the Atlanta Home Garden League, is in our midst, through school and home gardens, and the cultivation of vacant lots in each ward.

Amateur Home Gardeners.

For the amateur home gardener, we have a plan.

I am not unduly fond of the many articles and text-books written for his benefit, when I say that these are inadequate for the situation.

Reading who do a thing and getting out and doing it is quite another thing. It reminds one of advice so often given by those who simply make a habit of talking idly, but who never attempt.

Ayles and books are two of our cheapest commodities in America.

We are facing an era of cheap printing, and there are many literary folk who were raised in flats and on canned goods, who can write words but know not how to plant a garden that the average person, interested in such matter, has time or patience to read.

"I'd rather hear an old negro uncle, who has worked in peach orchards all his life, discuss brown rot than to read all the books on the subject."

Sour Sell.

Uncle Haskins, the soil is sour, and that last year the crop was so heavy that peaches were allowed to rot on the ground in bulk, rather than be packed and shipped at a financial loss.

He has a way of getting at the root of the matter and he will scratch his head when the expert appears, and grant him the conviction by flower and experience on Uncle Sam's statistics; that orchard ought to be clean. Ben Peach was in the wrong place when he stepped to ground, he went left to rot round de roots of dem Silber. Dem trees was de wrong when de roots is eatin' our food out de ground. Course our peaches is spoiled, Course de rot out in.

"I made it a point last year whenever possible to talk with any home gardener I chanced to meet. I was often surprised to find that the general opinion evinced in freely discussing personal matters of the garden. I never heard I found among utter strangers, in the garden, the right here in Atlanta among garden lovers.

"I am not sure, but I think that this has been found to be true in every undertaking that has been a success.

"Why not help make it a success?"

"Other larger cities have found it a financial success, and I think you will find it so."

What will you do with the opportunity given you?

HEARING ADJOURNED AT MID-DAY SATURDAY UNTIL MONDAY MORNING AT REQUEST OF SOLICITOR DORSEY.

FRANK APPEAL

BROWN TAKES STAND AGAINST COMMUTATION

Former Governor Declares Mercy Should Not Be Permitted to Interfere With the Ends of Justice.

Governor Slaton announced Saturday at the first session of the Leo M. Frank hearing on the commutation appeal that he would confine most of Sunday to study of the Frank case in an effort to conserve time and expedite the hearing now in progress.

An immense mass of documentary evidence, published in the Atlanta Journal, has been sent to Governor Slaton's country home, where he can spend today in study, preparing himself for the rigorous arguments that are to confront him Monday morning and afternoon.

The main feature of the first morning session of the Leo M. Frank appeal was an address delivered by former Governor Joseph M. Brown, in which he declared that the commutation mercy should not enter into the Frank case, and that it should be considered entirely from a judicial standpoint.

The former governor appeared as a member of the delegation from Cobb county, which was organized last Monday night at the mass meeting held in the Cobb county courthouse, when an audience of Cobb citizens met to protest against the move to commute Frank.

The delegation was headed by M. M. Sessions, a business man of Marietta, who in his short address declared that Frank should be made to take his medicine, and that if he doomed man had been Sessions, he neck would have been in Marietta long ago.

Another address protesting against commutation was made by Herbert Clay, solicitor of the state, who in his Marietta court, whose home is in Marietta. Sessions and the solicitor were followed by Mr. Brown.

Herbert Frisvold, attorney, who until Saturday night preparing a brief of argument, which he presented to the governor Monday morning as a part of his fight against the commutation appeal. He was in conference throughout the day with Governor Brown and with Detectives John Staros and Pat Campbell, prosecutors of Leo Frank and inventor of the "Marjorie" murder.

A visit will be made Monday, perhaps to the pencil factory by Governor Slaton, who is expected to arrive Monday morning that he desired to inspect the pencil plant building and familiarize himself with surroundings so that he could visualize the various phases of evidence in the case.

The argument for Frank's defense is being made by Attorney William H. Thomas, who is the former congressman who led the fight before the commission. He spent most of Saturday morning outlining the plan of defense he had adopted, which was devoted largely to the evidence in the case. He stated that the former commission testimony and evidence of the prosecution and reveal the negro conspiracy to frame Frank.

13 Instances Submitted. In this regard he submitted to the governor nineteen instances of the conspiracy testimony, which he said, formed the basis of the prosecution. He submitted the following instances: 1. Frank was the last person to see Mary Phagan.

2. Frank excused Ned Lee from 4 o'clock in the afternoon. 3. Frank's assistance to receive Grant at the factory. 4. He telephoned Ned Lee at 7:28 o'clock. 5. The testimony of Albert McKeith, a Frank's surveillance on the morning of the murder.

6. Frank's disinclination to look at the body of the murdered girl. 7. The change in the time slip. 8. His early employment of counsel. 9. He was allowed to visit his home. 10. He was allowed to visit his home. 11. He was allowed to visit his home. 12. He was allowed to visit his home. 13. He was allowed to visit his home.

The Road to Tomorrow

EISEMAN BUILDING LEASED BY M'CLURE

Ten-Cent Company to Pay $250,000 for 10-Year Rental—Will Remove About September 1.

The McClure Ten-Cent company has leased and will occupy in the early fall the Eiseman Brothers store at 11 Whitehall street, to which it will transfer both its retail and wholesale business.

Announcement of the lease was made Saturday by President C. W. McClure of the company, and while no details were given, it is stated the aggregate rental for the ten-year period upon which the lease is based, will be a quarter of a million dollars, or about $25,000 a year.

The Eiseman building is one of the largest, best-known and most advantageously located retail buildings in Atlanta. It has a frontage of 70 feet on Whitehall street, with a depth of about 100 feet, has six stories above its basement and a floor space of more than 45,000 square feet.

It is the McClure Ten-Cent company's purpose to use the ground floor, second and third floors, for its retail business, and the four upper stories for its wholesale department, which has recently grown to very large proportions.

President McClure has had his eye on this building for some time, and the company will have two valuable centrally located stores for space. The lease is for ten years, beginning at Whitehall and Hunter and at Broad and Hunter streets, the former now occupied by the retail department and the latter by the wholesale.

Mr. McClure came to Atlanta thirteen years ago, and has achieved a marked success in the ten-cent store business. He started in business at 72 North Peach street, and in 1908, he conducted the business was almost entirely in his hands, as he had to attend to the business and it was there that within a few years, however, it grew to such proportions that larger quarters were needed, and it was removed to the building at Whitehall and Hunter streets.

When the wholesale end of the business began to develop rapidly as the result of the opening of similar stores in the city, Mr. McClure secured the building at Broad and Hunter streets, and it is there that he has recently made his office.

New fixtures are to be put in, and marked improvements made on the building before it is occupied by the company. The fixtures to be put in, the company expects to get into his new quarters in the latter part of the year.

MACHINE SMASHED AND DRIVER INJURED DURING RAINSTORM

Judson Willingham and Robert Caldwell narrowly escaped death yesterday afternoon, when Willingham's roadster skidded into the rear end of a Whitehall street electric car that had stopped in front of them.

The accident occurred in front of the Guthman laundry and during the severest part of the blinding rainstorm. Caldwell, who was driving, was badly bruised, being thrown over the steering wheel and landing on the hood.

Willingham was not injured, although shaken up badly. Caldwell and Willingham went to their homes twenty minutes ago, and the partly wrecked car was removed to a nearby garage on an auto truck.

CLONDBURST HAILS IRON STEEL CARS

Heavy Damage Done in Several Sections of Atlanta by Rain of Late Saturday Afternoon.

As a result of the sudden clondburst which struck Atlanta shortly after 8 o'clock last night, rats of the Georgia Railway and Power company on eleven different lines of Atlanta and suburbs were either derailed or held up for some time by the large volume of water and deposits of sand washed by the water onto the tracks.

In some instances where the flow of water was greatest the ceiling and basement of houses were flooded and damage done household goods and other things stored in those places.

The lines which were blocked the worst were the Whitehall and West End, near Gordon and Langston streets, which was blocked for several hours; the College Park line, near its junction with the Innesville route, which was held up thirty minutes, on account of derangement; the Buckhead line, between Seventeenth and Eighteenth streets, derailed forty minutes; the Pittsburg line, held up at the end of the line twenty minutes; the Georgia avenue line, near Grant park, held up twenty minutes on account of the Innes Park car line; on the Decatur main line, near the corner of Josephine and Dekalb streets, on Highland avenue, at the corner of Blue Ridge avenue, held up over an hour; Capitol avenue line, at the corner of Ormond street.

W. T. Waters, of the Georgia Railway and Power company, stated that the amount of damage done by the clondburst could not be estimated. He said that at several blockades, where the water refused to recede when the rain stopped, it was necessary to run gangs of men to clear the tracks and in some cases gangs of men were sent out to clear the water, which was held after the rain had gone down.

GARRANZA BIDDING FOR THE SUPPORT OF UNITED STATES

In a Proclamation "First Chief" Says That His Government Is Entitled to Recognition by Other Powers.

Washington, June 12.—President Wilson had before him tonight the first copy of a lengthy proclamation to the people issued yesterday by General Carranza, asserting the right of the constitutional government to recognition by the United States and other foreign powers.

At this time we believe ourselves to be in a position to overcome this last difficulty because the constitutional government is now actually in definite possession of sovereignty, and the legitimate exercise of sovereignty is the essential condition which should be taken into account when deciding upon recognition of a government.

General Villa's answer also reached Washington today, but was not delivered at the state department. Until it is presented the Villa agency declined to make public the text.

The Villa agency also received at the state department a copy of the original issued by Carranza, which was written shortly after the civil war.

A list also was taken today out of the old Bible on which Washington was a member.

General Carranza's proclamation was promptly laid before President Wilson, and state department officials would not discuss it. The document recites the history of the revolution, beginning with the Madero uprising and what is termed the economic and social inequality of the colonial epoch.

The statement explains that the president of Carranza, General Carranza announced representation of the people in accordance with the constitution which by its own terms "will not lose its force and vigor even though some rebellion to its observance is interrupted."

The Carranza Territory. Although it was thought the constitution was in force, the Carranza Territory. Although it was thought the constitution was in force, the Carranza Territory. Although it was thought the constitution was in force, the Carranza Territory.

DISCUSSING THE PROSPECTS OF PEACE

Another Big Battle Being Fought by Czar's Forces and Austro-Germans on the Dniester in Galicia.

TEUTONS STILL STRIVING TO CAPTURE LEMBERG

Heavy Fighting Also Continues in Baltic Provinces and on East Prussian Frontier—Fighting Is Continuous on Western Front.

London, June 12.—Another big battle is being fought along the line of the Dniester river in Galicia in which Russian forces are pushing against the Austro-Germans. These German troops which had crossed the Dniester at Zaruska having been driven back, and the Russian officers, Galka and Bukovina also having been forced to withdraw to the river, the two nations are now fighting a desperate battle in an effort to gain the initiative for an offensive.

The Austrians in their official report claim to have succeeded in crossing the river east of Hrododka, a movement which, if true, would mean a decisive victory near Zaruska, might prove dangerous.

TEUTONS AIM AT LEMBERG. The Austro-Germans, however, will have Lemberg as their objective and they are not likely to allow any reverses they have suffered near Zaruska to influence their plans.

Heavy fighting also continues in the Baltic provinces and on the East Prussian frontier, in which both sides claim advantage. The view of the possibility of preventing the Russians from sending reinforcements to either of their northern fronts is being discussed along the Rawa river between Bellow and Sochaczew, the scene of important fighting last week.

FIGHTING CONSTANT ON WESTERN FRONT. At points between Rheims and north of Arras the French continue their attack in an official statement. Both sides claim success, but the Germans, however, insist that they have been successful, but the Germans, however, insist that they have been successful.

Although so big forward movement has been made, fighting is almost continuous along the line from the sea to Champagne and in the Vosges. The British and Belgians are playing an important role in these operations, for to them falls the task of holding large German forces on their front by threatening the Germans' rear.

MORE SUCCESSES FOR THE RUSSIANS. Petrograd, June 12.—(Vis London.) Additional Russian successes are chronicled in the official statement. Several villages also have been liberated on the left bank of the Dniester.

Washington Believes Conciliatory Tone of the Message From the United States Seems to Have Evoked Responsive Attitude on Part of Germans.

GERMANS SHOWING "HIGHWAY TO PEACE"

And Washington Believes Route Will Be Followed. Optimistic Feeling in regard to German Answer.

Washington, June 12.—Official announcement of the delivery of the American note to Germany reiterating insistence that submarine warfare conform to rules of humanity and international law was received today from Ambassador Gerard at Berlin. The message came at the close of a day marked by a more optimistic feeling in official quarters that the German answer would forestall any possibility of war between the two nations and also avoid a breach of diplomatic relations.

The German answer was a general relaxation of tension in the international situation. President Wilson spent part of the day at golf and he is known that later in the month he planned to take a short vacation at Cornish. No answer to the American rejoinder is expected for ten days, at least.

Note Changed, Says Bryan. Foreign Secretary Bryan, who resigned rather than sign the second note to Germany, issued another statement today declaring that note was materially revised following the presentation of his resignation. The revision, Mr. Bryan asserted, softened and made it more difficult to justify him in withdrawing his resignation.

"It is true," said Mr. Bryan, "that I had no knowledge of this change at the time my resignation was accepted and accepted."

"What was the change in the note?" "I cannot discuss that," he replied.

It is suggested that the clause added to the note was that saying the United States would not be bound by any German promise that American officials had not thoroughly prepared before her departure to see that the German government would act. Mr. Bryan only smiled at the suggestion.

Washington, June 12.—(Via London, June 12, 12:54 a. m.)—The text of the American note was published today in the Berlin afternoon newspapers. Definite statements as to the attitude of the German government with respect to the note are not yet available, but in circles which themselves are not officially responsible, are often good barometers of the sentiment in responsible quarters, the note seems to have made distinctly favorable impressions and is believed to offer the possibility of negotiations on which satisfactory settlements may be reached.

Conciliatory Tone of the Note. The conciliatory tone of the note apparently has evoked a responsive attitude on the part of individuals who in earlier stages of the negotiations displayed stiff-necked attitude to their own views, which made discussion almost impossible, are now willing to talk of compromise in which the compromise would not be all on one side.

Both the Lokal Anzeiger and the Vossische Zeitung had the second issue of the German policy probably will not be definitely decided upon before the end of the month. The official view-point probably can be correctly appraised only after conferences of the imperial chancery, Dr. von Batthmann-Hollweg, the foreign secretary, Herr von Jagow, and representatives of the army and admiralty, the naval and general staff. The emperor, it is believed, will speak the final word.

Open Way for Negotiations. It is understood that these conferences will begin immediately. SOLICITOR GAMBLE GAINS HIGH PRAISE BY EFFICIENT WORK

Athens, Ga., June 12.—(Special.)—John B. Gamble, solicitor general of the western circuit, has just demonstrated his ability to turn out more work than most lawyers would be capable of in a double time.

He spent one day in Lawrenceville this week and tried sixteen defendants, six of them pleading guilty and the other ten being convicted. He returned to Athens and worked till daylight on the case of J. W. Griffin, bank president, just sentenced for bank-robbing.

The conduct of the bank cases, especially that of Cashier R. W. Woods of the Citizens' bank, who was convicted of embezzlement, and has just been sentenced, Mr. Gamble drew the warmest words of praise from judges and bar—even the defendant's counsel commending his energy and ability. The defendant is connected with marriage relations with the solicitor, but the case was fought as a statutory one. If there had been no such relation, Judge Brand said the solicitor general conducted the case "with great skill and ability, and was fitted in his performance of duty." Judge Brand said he conducted the case with fairness and justice, valiantly fighting, but leaving no wounds.

By an entirely new system of cooperation direct with the department of commerce the most industrial organization can place its members in communication with prospective customers in foreign lands. A number of Atlanta manufacturers have taken advantage of this opportunity.

THIRTEENTH INSTALLMENT

SYNOPSIS

Sanford Quest, master criminal of the world, had been in hiding in the mountains of the Sierras, the murderer of Lord Ashleigh's daughter, he has but just begun a life-and-death struggle with a mysterious master criminal in a hidden hut in French territory. He has seen an ape skeleton and a living creature, half monkey half man, destroyed by fire. In his room he has appeared black boxes containing paper, signed by a pair of arms. Laura, the professor's servant, a double murderer, the black boxes continue to appear in mysterious fashion. Craig is trapped, but escapes to England where Quest, Lenora and the professor are waiting. Quest is murdered by the hands of Craig, captured, escapes to Fort Seward and then to the desert beyond into the desert. They are captured by Mongars, escape with Craig, Quest's captive and turn him over to Inspector French in San Francisco. He escapes from French in a train wreck and is chased by the party across the Mexican border.

TONGUES OF FLAME

CHAPTER XXVIII

From the shadows of the trees on the farther side of the river, Craig with strained eyes watched Quest's struggle. He saw him reach Lenora, watched him struggle to the bank with her, waited until he had lifted her on to his horse. Then he turned slowly around and faced the one country in the world where freedom was still possible for him. He looked into the wall of darkness, penetrated only at one spot by a little blaze of light. Slowly, with his arm through the bridle of his horse, he limped towards it. As he drew nearer and discovered its source he hesitated. The light came through the uncurtained windows of a saloon, three long, yellow shafts illuminating the stunted shrubs and sandy paths. Craig kept in the shadow between them and drew a little nearer. From inside he could hear the thumping of a worn piano, the twanging of a guitar, the rattle of glasses, the uproarious shouting of men, the shrill laughter of women. The dressed men and the same horse stole reluctantly a little nearer. Craig listened once more wearily. It was home he longed for so much—and rest. The very thought of the place sickened him. Even when he reached the door, he hesitated and instead of entering stood back amongst the shadows. If only he could find any other sort of shelter!

Inside, the scene was ordinary enough. There was a long bar, against which were lounging half a dozen typical Mexican saloon habitués. In a small space cleared for dancing, at the farther end of which two performers were making wild and vehement music. Three girls were dancing with cowboys, set mechanically in the state of the floor and the frequent discords in the music. One of them—the prettiest—stopped abruptly and pushed her partner away from her. "You have drunk too much, Jose!" she exclaimed. "You cannot dance. You tread on my feet and you lean against me. I do not like it. I will dance with you another night when you are sober. Go away, please."

The cavalier stayed for a moment on his feet. Then he looked down upon her with an evil glimmer in his eyes. He was tall and thin, with a black mustache and yellow, unpleasant-looking teeth. "So you will not let me dance with Jose?" he muttered. "Very well, you shall drink with him, then. We will sit together at one of those little tables. Listen, you shall drink wine. I do not want to drink with you. All that I wish is to be left alone, Craig. Go and play cards, if you want to. There is Pietro over there, and Diego. Perhaps you may win some money. They say that drunkards have all the luck."

Jose leered at her. "Presently I will play cards," he said. "Presently I will win all their money and I will buy jewelry for you. Marto—those that look like diamonds and will sparkle in your neck and in your hair."

She turned disdainfully away. "I do not want your jewelry, Jose," she declared. He caught her suddenly by the wrist. "Perhaps this is what you want," he cried, as he stepped down to kiss her. She swung her right hand round and struck him in the face. He staggered back for a moment. There was a red flash which moved through the tan of his cheek. Then he drew a little nearer to her, and before she could escape had passed his long arm around her body. He drew her to the chair placed by the wall, and his left hand played with the knife at his belt.

"Marta, little sweetheart," he said, mockingly, "you must pay for that blow." "Do not be afraid," he went on, "I will not hurt you. I will only strip your breeches. A little scratch across your cheek, not it is but the brand of your master, a love token from Jose. Steady, now, little Mavrick!"

The girl struggled violently, but Jose was strong; such braves were common and those of the company who noticed at all, merely laughed at the girl's futile struggles. Jose's arm was already raised with the knife in his hand, when a sudden blow brought a roll of pain to his lips. The knife fell clattering to the floor. He sprang up, his eyes red with fury. A man had entered the door from behind and was standing within a few feet of him, a man with long, pale hair, dark eyes, tanned and with the air of a fugitive. A flood of incoherent abuse streamed from Jose's lips. He stooped for the knife, Marta threw herself upon him. The two combatants had been dancing suddenly interrupted. The girl screamed. "It was Jose's fault!" she cried. "Jose was mad. He would have killed me!"

Craig faced them all with sudden courage. "As I came in," he said, "that man had his knife raised to stab the girl. You don't allow that sort of thing, do you, here?" The two cowboys linked their arms through Jose's and Lenora's. "That man had his knife raised to stab the girl. You don't allow that sort of thing, do you, here?" The stranger's right, Jose, one of them insisted. You can't carve a girl up in company. The girl clutched at Craig's arm. "Get down here, please," she begged. "Wait." The disappearer for a moment and came back with a glass full of wine, which she set down on the table. "Drink this," she invited. "And thank you for my life."

Craig emptied the glass eagerly. "I just happened to be the first to see him," he said. "They aren't quite wild enough to allow that here, are they, please?" "The girls do not like me! The men do not care," she declared. "Jose took me by surprise, though, or I would have killed him. But who are you, and where did you come from?"

"I have just crossed the border," he replied. She nodded understandingly. "Where they after you?"

"Yes! with a warrant for my arrest!" She patted his hand. "You are safe now," she whispered. "We care that much for a United States warrant," and she snapped her slim fingers. "You shall stay with us for a time. We will take care of you." He sighed wearily.

Back in the camp, a spirit of devilry had entered into Long Jim and his mates. A tactless remark on the part of one of the deputies had set alight the smoldering fire of resentment which the cowboys had all the time felt against them. At a word from Long Jim they were taken by surprise and tied to the wagon. The deputies splattered with rage and fear. Shot rained about them and the canvas of the wagon was riddled.

They abandoned the sport a little reluctantly. Suddenly they all paused to listen. The sound of a horse's slow footfall was heard close at hand. Presently Quest appeared out of the shadows, carrying Lenora in his arms. Laura rushed forward. "Lenora!" she cried. "Is she hurt?" Quest laid her tenderly upon the ground. "We had a spill at the bridge," he explained, quickly. "I don't know whether Craig loosened the supports. He got over all right, but it went down under Lenora, who was following, and I had to get her out of the river. Where's the professor?"

The professor came ambling down from the tent him into the saloon. They passed Jose in the doorway. He scoffed at them. "Say, the boss will fire you, Marta, if you waste all your time with that Yankee," he muttered.

Marta drew the red rose from the bosom of her dress and placed it in Craig's buttonhole. Then she led him without a word to a seat.

"If these men try any tricks in here," she said, "there'll be trouble!" Almost at that moment they all three entered. Long Jim nodded to Craig in friendly fashion. "It's all right, cookie," he told them. "Don't you look so scared. This is just a bit of parleyvous business, that's all."

The professor held out a piece of paper. He handed it over to Craig. "Craig," he announced, "this is a dispatch which I found in Alguies with my letters. It is ad-are cruel, these men. They are hunting you—I can see it in their faces."

Craig shook his head sadly. "Little girl," he said, "I should like to go with you along that valley and over the hills and forget that I had ever lived in any other world. But I can't do it. There's a child there now, on the ocean, nearer to New York every day, my sister's own child and no one to meet her. And—there are the other things. I have aimed and I must pay. My God!"

The room suddenly rang with Marta's shriek. Through the open window by which they were sitting, an arm wrapped in a serape had suddenly hovered over them. Craig, in starting back, had just escaped the downward blow of the knife, which had buried itself in Marta's arm. She fell back, screaming.

the door there and it gave me a start. For a moment I thought it was Craig back again."

"He's gone to New York, or going tomorrow morning," Jim replied. "I don't think he's so powerful a fount of your company that he'd come round here looking for it."

Quest stroled off again and glanced at his watch as he rejoined the little group. "Well," he said, "I think we'll turn in. Seven o'clock tomorrow morning, Inspector. Jim's seating one of the boys with us and we shall reach the Eastern Limited at the junction."

CHAPTER XXIX

Quest awoke the next morning, stretched out on his back and glanced at the clock by the side of the bed. It was barely six o'clock. He turned over and dozed again, looked again at half-past six, and finally, at a few minutes to seven, rose and made a hasty toilet. Then, in the act of placing his watch in his waistcoat pocket, he gave a sudden start. By its side, half covered by the handkerchief which he had thrown upon the little table, stood a small black box. For a moment he was motionless. Then he stretched out his hand, removed the lid and drew out the usual neatly folded piece of paper.

Even time fights you. It loses that you may lose. —The Hands.

Quest for a moment was puzzled. Then he hurried into the next tent, where the professor was sleeping peacefully. "Say, professor, what's the time by your watch?" Quest asked, shaking him gently.

The professor sat up and drew his chronometer from under his pillow. "Seven o'clock," he replied; "five minutes past, maybe."

Quest nodded. "That seems all right," he declared. "I'll explain later, professor."

He hurried out into French's tent and found the inspector just drawing on his shoes. "French, what's the time?" he demanded. "Three minutes past seven, or thereabouts," French replied, yawning. "I'm coming right along. We've got lots of time. Three-quarters of an hour ought to do it, the boys say."

They walked outside to the camp, where the cowboys were finishing their breakfasts. "Say, boss, one of them called out, 'you're not making that 8:30 train to New York?'"

"Why not?" Quest asked, quickly. "It's only three-quarters of an hour's ride, is it?"

"Maybe," the other replied, "but as it's eight now, your chances ain't looking lively. Kind of overcast, haven't you?"

Both men glanced once more at their watches. Then Quest thrust his back with a little cab. "Our watches have been set back!" he exclaimed. "The Hands again!"

For a moment they looked at one another, dumfounded. Then Quest moved towards the corral. "Say, is there any quicker way to the depot?" he inquired of the cowboys.

They heard his question indifferently. "Fifty dollars," Quest continued, "to anyone who can take me by a quicker route."

One of them stepped slowly to his feet. "Want," he observed, "fifty dollars would come in kind of handy. Yes, I reckon I can cut off a mile or two for you."

"Fifty dollars for you, then," Quest replied, as they hurried towards the horses, "and an extra ten if we make the train."

They galloped off into the distance. The cowboys finished their breakfast and went off to their work. Laura stole out from her tent and started off in rather a staid manner for a walk. Presently Lenora opened her eyes. She, too, stretched out her hand for her watch. Suddenly she sat up in bed with a little exclamation. On the table by her side was a small black box. She took out the lid with trembling fingers, drew out scrap of paper and read:

Foels! Tongues of flame will cross Quest's path. He will never reach the depot alive. Lenora glanced at her watch. Then she staggered to the opening of the tent. "Laura!" she cried.

There was no one there. The shadows had all gone, and the sun was shining brightly. Lenora staggered to the cook wagon, where the Chinese cook was sitting cleaning plates.

"Listen!" she cried. "They are in danger, the three men who have gone off to the depot. If you'll ride after them, I will give you a hundred dollars. Give them this," she added, holding out the scrap of paper.

The Chinaman shook his head. He glanced at the slip of paper indifferently and went on with his work. "No can ride, missie," he said. Lenora looked around helplessly. The camp was empty. She staggered across towards her own horse.

"Come and help me," she ordered. They found her saddle, but she only gazed at it in a stolid sort of fashion. "No can sit," he said. "Missie no can ride. Better go back bed."

Lenora pushed him on one side. With a great effort she managed to reach her place in the saddle. Then she turned and, with her face to the depot, galloped away. The pain was excruciating. She could only keep herself in the saddle with the aid of all the time that one sentence was ringing in her head—"Tongues of flame!" She kept looking around anxiously. Suddenly the drop dropped from a little decline. She was conscious of a way of heat. In the distance she could see the smoke rolling across the spot. She touched her horse with the quirt. The spot which she must pass to keep on the track to the depot was scarcely a hundred yards ahead, but already the fire seemed to be reaching the mistletoe across the ground kicking up the dry grasswood with indeed a flaming tongue. She glanced once behind, warned by the heat. The fire was closing in upon her. A puff of smoke suddenly enveloped her. She coughed. Her head began to swim and a fit of giddiness assailed her. She rocked in her saddle and the pony came to a sudden standstill, faced by the fire of rolling smoke and flame.

"Samford!" Lenora cried. "Save me!" The pony reared. She slipped from the saddle and fell across the track.

where he had been lying. He stooped at once over Lenora's still unconscious form.

"Dear me!" he exclaimed. "Dear me! Come, come!" He passed his hand over her side and made a brief examination. "Is pronounced. 'It will be a week at any rate, before we are able to move her. Nothing more serious, so far as I can see. Mr. Quest, but she'll need rest and all the comfort we can give her."

"Can that's too bad!" Long Jim declared. "If you've got to stay around for a time, though, you can have the tents. We boys can double up anywhere, or bunk on the ground. That's right, ain't it?" he added, turning around to the cowboys. There was a little grunt of acquiescence. They carried Lenora to the largest of the tents and made her as comfortable as possible.

CHAPTER XXIX

The girl drew a low stool over to Craig's side. He was sitting in a rough chair tilted back against the adobe wall of the saloon.

"As that's too bad," she asked, laying her hand upon his for a moment. He turned his head and looked at her. "Always tired," he answered, listlessly. She made a little grimace.

"That you are so strange," she protested. "Over the hills there are the steam cars. They would take you to some of our beautiful cities where all is light and gaiety. You are safe here, whatever your troubles may have been. You say that you have money, and if you are lonely," she added, dropping her voice, "you need not go alone."

He patted her hand affectionately, but there was something a little forced about the action. "Child," he said, "it is so hard to make you understand. I might lose myself for a few minutes. It is true over yonder. Perhaps, even," he added, "you might help me to forget. And then there would be the awakening. That is always the same. Sometimes at night I sleep, and when I sleep I find you brood over those memories. Why, she added, the weight comes back and sits upon my heart, and the strength seems to pass from my limbs and the will from my brain."

Her eyes were soft and her voice shook a little as she leaned towards him. Something in his helplessness had kindled the protective spirit in her.

"Has life been so terrible for you?" she whispered. "Have you left behind—had not you never could have been really wicked. You are not very old, are you? Why do you not stand up and be a man? If you have done wrong, then very likely people have done wrong things to you. Why should you brood over those memories? Why, she added, What are you looking at? Who are these people?"

The professor, with Quest and Long Jim, suddenly appeared round the corner of the building. They walked towards Craig. He shrunk back in his place.

"If these are your enemies," the girl cried, fiercely, "remember that they cannot touch you here. I'll have the boys out in a minute, if they dare to try it!"

Craig struggled to lift his feet. He made no answer. His eyes were fixed upon the professor's. The girl passed her arm through his and dragged dressed to you, but under the circumstances you will scarcely wonder that I opened it. You had better read it."

Craig accepted the cable form and read it through slowly to himself:

To John Craig, Care Prof. Lord Ashleigh, Yonkers, New York. "Are they trying to take you on a warrant?" she whispered. "Remember, you don't need to go unless you want to."

Craig shook his head. "This is something quite different," he explained. "Leave me for a moment, Marta. I must talk to these people."

She slipped repeatedly away from his side and out into the darkness. He sat with his eyes fixed upon the cablegram. Then he turned towards Quest.

"Fate seems to be too strong for me," he admitted. "Leave me alone and I promise you that I'll go at once to New York, settle Maria's future and then make a full disclosure."

The professor coughed. "I am sure, Craig," he declared, "that you have decided wisely."

Craig looked gloomily away. "There is nothing else for me to do," he said. "The child must be met and looked after. Besides, I am sick of it all. You may as well know the truth."

"Why not now?" Quest suggested, softly. "In New York," Craig replied, "and not before."

Quest and the professor exchanged meaning glances. "Very well," the former decided, turning away. "In a week from today, Craig, I shall expect you to report at the professor's house."

They left the room together. Long Jim lingered by Craig's side. "Those guys have been wearing you some, I guess," he remarked. "Forget 'em, cookie. They can't touch you here. Of course, if you go to New York, it's your own show."

"I know that," Craig replied, gloomily. One of the girls passed her arm through Long Jim's.

"Just one dance," she whispered. He hesitated, looking out of the window. Then she shrugged his shoulders.

"I'm tired of those guys," he remarked to Craig, with a grin. "Guess I'll stay here for a bit."

Craig was left alone for a few minutes. Suddenly Marta glided in and sat by his side. Her eyes were flashing with anger.

"It's Jose!" she cried. "The brute! The beast!" Craig swung to his feet, furious. Long Jim, cursing fiercely, drew his gun. At that moment the door of the saloon was thrown open. Jose came reeling in, his serape over his shoulder, a drunken grin on his face. He staggered towards them.

"Jose, you beast!" the girl called out, and fell back, fainting. There was the sound of a revolver shot and Jose reeled backwards and fell with a cry across the sandal floor. Jim thrust his smoking gun into his belt and caught Craig by the arm.

"Jose, we'd better get out of this, cookie!" he muttered. They were hustled out. Apparently Jose was unpopular, for everyone seemed only anxious to have them clear away.

"I'll get you into the camp quietly," Long Jim muttered. "I'll be safer there for the night. Then you can make that 8:30 in the morning."

Lenora, with her bed dragged to the opening of the tent, greeted the little party, on their return, eagerly. Quest at once came and sat by her side.

"Where's Laura," he asked, "and the inspector?" She smiled and pointed to the rising ground behind them. "Is the faint moonlight two forms were very visible."

"French has got it bad," he declared, "almost as badly as I have, Lenora."

He held her hand for a moment. "I think you know," he said. "As they talked they heard the coyotes barking in the distance. Presently Laura and the inspector returned."

"We were watching you, dear," Lenora said, quietly. "Somehow, it didn't seem to us that you were particularly anxious to get away."

The inspector chuckled. "That's one for Miss Laura," he declared, "with an air of satisfaction. 'Little bit hard on me generally.'"

"Oh! I'm all right if I'm left alone," Laura retorted, bustling around. "Come along, you folks, if we are going to have any supper tonight."

"Nice sort of nurse I am," the former grumbled. "It's all the fault of this man. He would keep me out here talking rubbish."

They sat round the opening before Lenora's tent till the moon was high in the heavens. Quest, who had been on the outside of the circle for some little time, suddenly rose to his feet and crossed over to the cook wagon. Long Jim, who was sitting on the steps, glanced up a little curiously.

"Who's inside there?" Quest asked. Long Jim removed his pipe from his teeth. "That don't seem none too civil a question for a gentleman," he remarked, "but if you want to know, our new Chinese cook is there."

Quest nodded. "Sorry if I seemed abrupt," he apologized. "You've been very good to us and I'm sure we shall unaccountably obliged to you, Jim. The only reason I asked the question was that I saw a face to

THE TRUTH ABOUT IT.

As an apostle of the policy of taking the public into official confidence, David Lloyd-George, the foremost British statesman, took a fair stride the other day when he unhesitatingly told the people in his address to the Manchester workmen that among reasons why England was making no more rapid progress in the war were her weakness in organization and the inferiority of her shot and shell and other munitions of war.

The statements of Lloyd-George must have been a terrific blow to English pride and self-esteem; but they are calculated, perhaps more than anything else, to stir the British public to the point of eliminating the inferiority from which they are suffering.

The incident is a striking illustration of the importance of putting the people in possession of the facts about their own public affairs. It is not only their right to have the truth, but it is their duty to face it. Remedy is both quicker and better when the people know, regardless of how unpleasant the knowledge may be.

It is a far cry, it is true, from the European war to the public school situation in Atlanta; but the same principle of putting the public in possession of the truth, as exists in the foregoing incident, is involved. If The Constitution had not openly and unhesitatingly portrayed the deplorable conditions of Atlanta's public school plant, it is more than probable no steps would have yet been taken to remedy them, as unfortunate as was the necessity for it, and as much as it hurt to have reports of this sort go out about Atlanta, the eyes of the public had to be opened to the truth in order to get adequate results in the direction of improvement.

The same thing was true several years ago when Atlanta's death rate had grown excessive because of an inefficient sanitary system. The people were told and retold the unpleasant truth until they voted the bonds that gave Atlanta one of the best and most effective sewage disposal systems in the country.

These are but local concrete examples taken to illustrate what the world is coming to recognize as an important and valuable policy for any government or community, whether it be national in scope or of the smallest unit. When things go wrong the public will know it sooner or later, and there will be condemnation in increasing measure for the public official who is responsible for concealment.

The Constitution has never believed in the policy of official suppression or of the closed door, and it has been responsible, perhaps, for throwing more light on matters about which the people ought to know, and have every right to know, than any other single agency in the state.

We believe in the doctrine: Tell the people the truth. If it is unpalatable and unpleasant, the speedier will be the application of the needed remedy. It is far better to worry with the unpleasant situation for a time than to permit an institution to suffer disaster as the result of suppression.

David Lloyd-George has given the statesmen and officials of other countries and other political divisions, small though they may be, something not only well worth thinking about, but a policy they might apply with profit to the conduct of the people's business.

HIGH SCHOOL PLANS.

Mayor Woodward's business acumen is again demonstrated in his proposal to consolidate the boys' commercial high school and the girls' English commercial high school in a central reated building, until plans can be made for a single central high school, owned by the city, which will combine under one roof all the departments of this institution.

The mayor's suggestion is directly in line with his proposal regarding the consolidation of all the high school branches into one central plant, and seems to present both the least expensive and most effective method of bridging over the period until the desired consolidation can be brought about.

Additions to present high school buildings while they would relieve the crowded conditions, would add nothing to the value of the properties when the city comes to dispose of them, and the expense would be far greater than that involved in renting a building for a couple of years to accomplish this same purpose. In this manner the city can save fully one-half of the $15,000 appropriation made for high school additions, and, possibly, considerably more. At the same time this plan will provide for the care and instruction of some 400 students in the rented building, making that much more room in the present high school buildings for scholars in the regular or literary courses. In addition to that, this plan makes the English commercial high school building available for grammar school purposes, which is equivalent to the addition of a new grammar school to the system.

This plan for high school relief has everything to recommend it. It will accomplish even more than could have been done by the building of annexes, at a less original cost, and with an ultimate saving when the present buildings are sold.

It is true, of course, that the plan is only a temporary one, making provision for the present emergency. That is all the city can do for the moment, but that much it must do. Atlanta cannot afford to make the renting of school properties a permanent affair, but as a means of purely temporary relief it fits the case better than anything that has yet been suggested.

Whatever course is pursued, however, and council can do no better than follow the mayor's suggestion—we must realize that it is simply a case of bridging over a chasm. The city can afford to lose no time in the matter of providing for the permanent improvement of the high school as well as the grammar school system. As for permanent high school improvement, there can be no better plan than that suggested by the mayor, and approved and urged by Chairman Ashley and the entire committee appointed by council to investigate the schools. That, as is well known, is the central single plant combining all the high school activities under the same roof.

Whatever method be adopted looking to providing the funds for permanent school improvement, council's duty is clearly to get busy with it at the earliest possible moment and see that the necessary arrangements are made. We feel confident that council fully appreciates the importance of early action and will lose no time in setting in motion the necessary machinery for the permanent rehabilitation of the entire public school system.

THE TEST OF PEACE.

When Sir Gilbert Parker delivered his recent address relating to the United States and their attitude toward the European war, before the British society in London, and on the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of the death of Abraham Lincoln, the Lusitania had not been sunk and nothing had then occurred to bring about any misunderstanding between Germany and this country. In the light of these developments statements he then made as to the great tests of peace will have an added significance.

In that address he pointed out that with the great nations of Europe at war the United States, in holding the neutrality balance level, "have a task that tests the statesmanship and the character of their people as they are never tested in ordinary peace times, or in ordinary war times." And continuing: "In this extraordinary war the American government and American people have been supremely tested, and they have stood the test so far."

But it is in the present crisis that the supreme test has come—one that the speaker could scarcely have foreseen or imagined. How have we met it—are we meeting it—the world knows; know, too, that we are to the right both in insistence upon the preservation of the principles of international law, and in the determination to keep out of the conflagration that is consuming Europe.

Whatever attitude we may be compelled to take—and there is still every reason to believe diplomacy will succeed in preserving our long-time friendship with Germany—our actions will be those of peace. There will be no hostilities; not even a rupture of our own making. We shall meet the test, severely though it be.

The United States have long since realized the world obligation that rests upon them in connection with this war. The performance of it requires not only an adherence to strict neutrality, but the peaceful pursuit of its business of producing that it may be ready both to feed and clothe the millions who must be fed and clothed and to give them every moral and material support they may need in their work of rehabilitation. Referring to this obligation, Sir Gilbert Parker said:

I do deeply trust that the United States will increase the production of munitions for the production of a world of workshops while this war is on and when it is over. The production of this time would be an advantage and not a disadvantage. It is essential that the United States should have a large stock of munitions. The war, developing industry, at least one great power shall not be hampered by a shortage of munitions. Debt and living on credit shall be free from the support of munitions. The war, caused by the pauperism and formidable necessities of war.

It is just the course this country has determined upon; in fact, we have been working and moving to and fro practically since August, 1914. We have been making and supplying food and clothing to the warring nations until our annual trade—our excess of export values over that of imports—will reach on July 1 next the grand total of a billion dollars, for the first time in our history.

The fact that we are making money; that American wealth is climbing rapidly as the result of the misfortunes of friendly nations, so far as our attitude is concerned, is purely incidental. There is not a true citizen of the United States but would gladly have sacrificed any profit he might have made, and even more, to have averted this war. But that is really aside from the question. The condition of the warring nations of Europe would be even more deplorable than it is should we fail in our obligation to them as well as to ourselves and, by permitting ourselves to be drawn into conflict with our own country in position, which it would be unable to help them in any respect.

Our greatest opportunity to help them will come, after the war has ended, in the healing of scars and the work of rebuilding; and to enable us best to extend that assistance our shirts must be clear of the conflict. It is in this direction and to that end that we are now shaping our course. We are meeting, perhaps, the supreme test of peace any nation was ever called upon to cope with; and, meeting it successfully, we shall win a victory greater and more lasting than that which must fall to one of the contending factions when the European war is ended.

PRaise FOR THE TURK.

Probably the Turk—branded as "the un-speakable" by Christian civilization—never hoped for a war-certificate of good character from a representative of that civilization. What, then, will be his amazement when his attention is directed to the following tribute from the correspondent of an English newspaper, The Manchester Guardian:

I hear that the military authorities are much impressed by the evidence which comes from the Dardanelles that the Turk is at least an objective soldier. Both in the treatment of the wounded and in their behavior toward the British soldiers in the Constantinople Turke he has far been beyond reproach. He has shown a respect for the person of a prisoner of war that is not only commendable but also a credit to his consideration for the person of a prisoner of war.

The correspondent sums up by saying that in this war the Turk has "proved himself a gentleman," and gives him due credit of praise.

GETTING USED TO WAR.

War is such a familiar figure in Europe now that the peasant of the farm which may soon be the scene of the fighting pursues his occupation on the brink of battle-lines. For with him it is a battle for bread—the bitterest he has ever known.

"We don't mind it as at first," said one; "we're getting used to it now. But the bursting shells frightens the horses—when they don't kill them outright; and then, too, war wants so much space!"

That is it. The fruitful, life-sustaining farm today may be the battle-ground tomorrow.

"War wants so much space!" The temple, called holy, are in its way; the humble homes of the poor must be swept from its path. The world is its battlefield.

They are "getting used to it." So many of the plain people are coming to think that it is right to make all sacrifices for it. A peasant woman, going about her daily tasks, told a correspondent that she "didn't mind it" any more. She had lost three sons in battle; there was now nothing left to lose.

The little children of the war zones are "getting used to it." Some of them have not yet been starved and made homeless by the war. They have shattered shells for playthings and make merry in sight of the trenches. War will want their playgrounds. It needs them for its landmarks—which are ruins. So they will move on, or be trampled in the dust of war.

If there is any truth in the rumor of a peace movement secretly favored by the fighting nations, perhaps some ground may be left unwatered by the war. We shall see under the blessings of Peace, the grateful people may kneel and thank God.

The Holland Letter

Our bankers had almost every day some strange, often pathetic, incident, financial in its character, which throws evidence upon some of the features of the European war, and which are unique, and will be, and by referred to the historians of the war. This morning the cashier of one of the large banks of New York received a communication from a woman, the wife of a wealthy American family and who is well known in the city. She is generally is much occupied with some benefactions which the war makes necessary, and in her communication she said that she had been the sight of men ladies hobbling around on crutches, some of them with both legs gone, supported or moved by crutches, but by a sort of still-life piece of wood very crudely made.

She trying to secure funds with which to provide these cripples with artificial legs. She refers incidentally in the letter to one extraordinary fact which has come under her observation, knowing that it has also been observed by many others. There are French soldiers who go to the banks in Holland and French bank notes, sometimes in great quantities, and these are deposited in the Dutch banks solely for safe keeping. All of them are either stained with blood or are pierced with bullets, sometimes with what appears to be the marks of bullets. These notes are taken from the bodies of French soldiers who have been killed in battle. The men soldiers who have passed on beyond the lines where these French soldiers fell. The German soldiers, however, do not take these notes, but they are taken from the bodies of these men. These notes are not available in Germany they are taken to the banks in Holland, and the French banks will not at present redeem these notes and they may never be paid.

Another Strange Feature.

Another strange feature of a financial character associated with the war is occasionally learned by our bankers. It appears that where the money is, there are large amounts of money due to various American manufacturing industries in Austria and in German banks to the credit of the American manufacturers. Deposits in large amounts were, in fact, made the week before the war began. But after a war was declared, the American manufacturers, Austrian bankers, principally the latter, notified the American manufacturers that they had on deposit funds to the credit of these manufacturers, but the question was now raised as to how the money was to be paid. The rate of exchange in Kronen was a serious matter and the banks would not pay in Kronen. The American manufacturers, however, notified these banks in the United States to whom the funds had been deposited, that they would accept deposits and will continue to do so until the funds are withdrawn. If the war should be ended, if we should not contract with these deposits with Austria and Germany these deposits will draw considerable sums in the form of interest.

These illustrate some of the trifling incidents of a financial kind associated with the war. It is not, however, to be evidenced for far more important financing, important in the fact that it has been accomplished, facilitate the payment for purchases of American commodities and also of consignment of American goods to the war. The heavy imports of gold into the United States, the war, the year 1914, Canada—reflect exclusively certain kinds of financing by means of which American money has been held to Great Britain and to the allies.

With Our Securities.

It has been for some time suspected that ultimately and perhaps speedily no small part of the American securities in France will be utilized so as to aid in the payments of the war. The subject has been earnestly and constantly discussed in the offices of interest in the securities of the United States. It appears to be almost insurmountable difficulties in the way of obtaining these American securities in France. The subject has been discussed in the offices of interest in the securities of the United States. Much of the securities of the United States, which are held in England is presumed to be in private hands. Last winter it was sometimes said that the United States government would take the position of a tax. To take a concrete case, the subject has been discussed in the offices of interest in the securities of the United States. After the Battle

BY FRANK L. STANTON.

(Some were more boys—lying dead there, on the battlefield, as if they were dreaming. Home—From a foreign newspaper.)

I. HE LAY so still on the field of strife Where the wild war-phantoms roam, And I gazed on all that was love and life And thought of the hearts at Home. I seemed to feel in the silence there The holy breath of a Mother's prayer.

II. OF PRAYER that followed his spirit's flight To the heaven of her hope and trust, And I said: "She is praying for him tonight— Dead in the battle's dust!"

Prayer—but not with the strength to avenge To bring him back from his battle-grave.

III. ALMOST a child of the strife he seemed, The boyish face and brow, With a smile, as if of Home he dreamed, And the dream were with him now. Dead in the dark, where the war-voles roam, With only the light of a dream of home.

IV. THE MEN march on and they leave him there, As many more will lie, Till kings of conquest shall despair, And war itself shall die.

And the slain of battle strew the sod And tell the stars to question God.

V. FOR HIM in vain the home-hearts wait, The prayer ceased in the home; Life listens at a far, dim gate, To hear his step again, "Died for the king"—the word of War. Are battle-lines worth dying for?

VI. AND so they strive, and so they die, To War's wild madness given, What ghosts of souls must throng the sky To plead for Peace with Heaven!

For Peace, until her banner wave O'er a world that knows no battle-graves.

WOMAN'S WORK IN ORGANIZATION TESTED IN CAMPAIGN FOR SCHOOLS

In the recent campaign conducted by Atlanta's representative men and women for a betterment of school conditions the power of woman's influence in organized effort was demonstrated in a most striking manner. Though everybody now agrees that the school system must be improved, and the June budget provides for the largest appropriation ever made for the schools at any one time in Atlanta's history, the spirit driving this about did not prevail in early January, when a small group of Atlanta women organized for the purpose of working for school betterment, and found many obstructions to their efforts.

The story of their achievement and their methods of work not only proclaim the value of woman co-operating in civic movement, but also the value of the city movement, whatever the purpose may be, being removed from politics and treated as a public matter.

The case of Children.—The hardship which was imposed upon many Atlanta children this year through crowded conditions; through uncomfortable and insanitary buildings; through bad lighting and ventilation; through the absence of nearly thirty millions of bonds in Paris. President Miller, of the New Haven railroad, has been successful in securing special plates by one of the bank-note engraving companies. France would not make the plates for the railroad, but she would make them for the bank-note engraving companies. The subject has been discussed in the offices of interest in the securities of the United States.

The women invited a number of city fathers to meet with them. The president of the board of education addressed them and explained the situation, that he had to consult, and the necessity for a money appropriation to relieve the situation. "City Fathers" brought face to face the falling plating, the bad lighting facilities and the crowded conditions against which the women protested.

The women visited the schools at that moment when they commended their effort, but explained there were "no funds." The women, however, to start a wholesale movement, and the necessity for a money appropriation to relieve the situation. "City Fathers" brought face to face the falling plating, the bad lighting facilities and the crowded conditions against which the women protested.

In the Social Whirl

By Isma Dooly.
The question of the summer trip is being postponed with now, and the question which for all time has agitated the family at summer time is "a trip."
It is easy enough to decide when it is just Mr. and Mrs. who constitute the family with no further question than to decide whether they will go to the seaside or the mountains; whether they will just stay at home and enjoy the garden, and the "luxuries of home," or whether they need the change so much they will go to the resort.
But when added to the family of Mr. and Mrs. are one or more little folks, for whom milk may have to be sterilized; dog-carts and carriages and swaying cradles taken; and black mammy and her "blings" taken too, the problem of the summer trip in one that "takes" the brew of "daddy" and "mummy" puts "mover dear" in a bad humor with everybody and everything.

THE SUMMER TRIP.
But the summer trip, especially in this lovely climate of ours, where the thermometer chooses to go up, has to be considered. The whole family, including sometimes a pet dog, needs a change. They may go 80 miles in their own minds that it is healthy to take it, though, of course, each and every member of the family in many cases would be better off to stay at home.
The automobile will solve the problem of going, and the week-end trip is so popular, but the automobile is a patriotic duty to perform, and that to get the people of Georgia to appreciate the stories of scenery, air, and natural resources they have around them. When the good roads are opened up will further this new appreciation is coming, and then there will be not only beautiful homes overlooking the hills and overlooking valleys in Georgia's northern part, but there will be more summer hotels which people will be willing to patronize. There will be well equipped little "hotels" and automobiles can find shelter for the week-end nights, and where Mr. and Mrs. and the whole family can go and be assured of comforts. But all these good things are not coming until people explore and find for themselves how beautiful their own state is, in which many parts of north Georgia abound.

THIS is particularly the month for automobile trips, and patriotic Georgians should go on little tours, see the kind of hotels Georgia supports today, and what kind of hotels Georgia needs to support to begin a home patronage of home resorts.
SWIMMING PARTY.
Besides the general invitations which have been extended to many of their friends, Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Adair will give a party Tuesday evening to which a small party of their friends "will" be invited. The party has been invited early enough to get the pool before dinner, and for that reason they will go to the Druid Hills club swimming pool.
SWIMMING PARTIES have become a popular mode of entertainment at the clubs with pools all over the country, and many private country residences are making the swimming pool feature of out-of-door sports. Mr. and Mrs. Morris Brandon were the first of the Atlanta suburban residents to have a pool. East Lake and Brookhaven lakes were enthusiastically patronized yesterday afternoon, and it has been rumored that both the Piedmont Driving club and the Druid Hills club might have an added feature to their program of pleasure in a swimming pool.

MISS THORNTON'S WEDDING.
The wedding of Miss Jane Thornton and Mr. Albert Edward Thornton will take place the evening of the 30th, with assemblage relatives and intimate friends at the home of her mother, Mrs. Albert Edward Thornton, Miss Ellen Thornton will be maid of honor, she having made her debut the year Miss Thornton made hers.
In Miss Thornton's marriage is centered a state-wide social interest. Her father, the late Albert Edward Thornton, was a native of LaGrange, and his family in one of the largest and most influential of the state. Her mother has been a leader in Atlanta's social life since her girlhood days, when, as Lela Austell, she was one of the belles of the state. Miss Thornton bears the name of her aunt, the late Mrs. James Swaine, much beloved woman, who after her marriage was one of the leading members of the southern set in New York.

EVENTS OF THE WEEK.
Brilliant among the social events of the week was the dinner which Governor and Mrs. Slaton gave to the members of the governor's staff. These Colonel Paxon, chief of staff, presented the Governor and Mrs. Slaton with a floral piece in silver, of substantial and beautiful design. The staff presented Colonel Paxon with a silver fruit dish. Governor-elect Harris and Mrs. Harris were present; also ex-Governor and Mrs. Brown, who brought with them their lovely daughter, Miss Cora Maclean.
The open air play, at which the Habersham players sang their cantata "As You Like It," has been praised enthusiastically, for no amateur entertainment yet essayed in Atlanta has had better production. Hart study was demonstrated in the fact that the participants neither hesitated nor lagged in their parts. Action was sustained with professional precision, and the details were in no way neglected.
The setting was beautiful in the trees which shade that particular site on Peachtree street. The audience assembled there Thursday afternoon will return to the "Forest of Arden" whenever the Habersham players summon them. Miss Carolyn directed and rehearsed the players. Mrs. William Layton Peck assisted, and the proceeds of the play go toward the building fund for the Joseph Habersham chapter house, D. A. R.

EAST LAKE TOURNAMENT.
The golf tournament this week at the East Lake Country club will center a large contingent of society there each evening. There will be dinner served each evening at the club and dancing afterward. The club management request that parties desiring to entertain will make their reservations as soon as possible.

PRETTY COSTUMES.
A wedding gown which will be worn by a June bride, and one which is styled by a youthful simplicity, is of white tulle and charming satin. The brunette who wears it will add neither lace nor flowers or adornment of any kind to the long white satin skirt. Double skirts of tulle fall over the skirt and the courage of tulle is concealed by a lacy of satin. The long sleeves are of tulle, and a square train is added in the skirt. The veil will be caught to the hair with pearl pins, and the white linen carry the small French bouquet of lilies and pink roses.

An Atlanta bride has chosen for her afternoon calling gown a voile gown in a shade of royal blue, which will be most becoming to her complexion. The gown falls gracefully over the shoulders and is fastened at the waist to show a front of white lace and net. Another blue gown, in just shade of the same one of green, is with thin silk dots on it. It has a skirt finished with a lacy of tulle, each edged with tulle, and the waist is similarly finished.

At one of the weddings of the week smart costumes will be that of net draped and floured gracefully over the shoulders and fastened at the waist. A reception gown of beautiful fashion of white printed crepe, the skirt entrain, and the trimming a lace also edged. The white is given French finish in black tulle.

The white linen, the walking skirt short cut, was hemstitched, the outlining pearl buttons.

SCIENCE AND NEAR-SCIENCE UP-TO-DATE

How to Tell EDIBLE Mushrooms From the POISONOUS

THE one obstacle in the way of making general use of the mushroom as a food—and it is a nutritious food that may be obtained at low cost—is the fear of mistaking the poisonous varieties through their similarity in appearance.

What are the distinguishing features by which one may decide between the edible and injurious varieties?

In the first place, if you are planning to grow mushrooms, the simplest and easiest way of deciding which varieties to select is to send your samples to the Department of Agriculture at Washington, where they will be passed upon by experts and all the information you may require sent to you without cost.

But this means of deciding between varieties obviously involves too great a delay for those who intend picking mushrooms for their next meal. For these there are numerous tests that may be made immediately.

An important item to remember is that the common edible mushroom has pink gills when young and purplish-brown or black gills when mature. All species with yellow or white gills should be avoided by the novice. Some of these varieties are edible, but they should be passed upon by an expert before they are used as food.

The common mushroom of commerce usually is found in the open and grassy glades, never in the forests. Therefore, one should be exceedingly chary about picking mushrooms in shady spots or in the woods unless they have an expert knowledge of the varieties they are seeking. When conditions are favorable the edible mushroom may be picked in midsummer in old pastures and on lawns. They are more often found, however, in the autumn.

The variety about which there is no question as to food value grows about three inches tall, has a fleshy cap about three inches broad. This cap generally is white, but sometimes reddish or brownish above and pink beneath.

Remember that its stem does NOT rise from a cuplike base. Also, it is best gathered in the "button" stages—that is, before the cap has expanded.

Most of the poisonous species have a fleshy cap that is whitish, moist and clammy to the touch. Their stems are usually ringless or nearly so. When they have gills they are a pale pink white. An offensive odor even more than their clammy feeling mark them as being harmful.

The surest test is to nibble at them without swallowing any. The poisonous varieties have a peculiar and disagreeable taste that is immediately evident. It is easily recognized after tasting it once.

There are a few species that are sometimes edible and sometimes not, but these should be left alone for safety. This is true of the variety known as "amanitas." They have tall stems surmounted by a cap whose surface ranges from a glossy white to a gray, orange and brown. The gills are white.

At any rate, it must be remembered that for a novice to experiment freely with mushrooms is about as safe an occupation as the handling of gunpowder. Mushrooms furnish a highly nutritious food at little cost, but they must be selected only with the greatest care. It has been said that they are as rich in food value as meat. This, however, is not proved by an analysis, which shows they contain no considerable amount of fat

The three pictures to the left show the edible variety of mushroom in three stages. The small drawing is a section of the infant mushroom, the next a mature example and the third a section of the fully developed mushroom. Externally it is pale brown, dry, often silky, never viscid. The cuticle peels readily away, as shown, and the gills underneath grow from white to pink or rose-colored and then brown-black. They are usually more or less free from the stem, which is slightly puffy up to the middle, but never hollow, and has a flaccid ring near the middle. The poisonous mushroom shown in the two views at the right has pale, clay-colored gills, an offensive odor, and a clammy or viscid top.

How Explosives Are Selected for War

THE history of the modern explosives used in the great war dates back to 1888, when smokeless powders for service became a possibility. Up to that time gunpowder had been the explosive used both as a charge for the gun and as a bursting charge for shells, and although, as a result of thirty years' work, the form of "smoke" became an insuperable objection.

In 1898 the largest gun we had weighed 110 tons, fired a charge of 900 pounds of prim powder, threw a shell weighing 1,700 pounds, and was 16.25 inches in diameter, being, therefore, larger than the 16-inch gun the Germans are supposed to possess, while our own largest guns are now the 15-inch on the new superdreadnoughts throwing a 2,000-pound shell with 60 per cent greater muzzle velocity than the old 16.25-inch gun using powder. The secret of this increase in efficiency is that the charge of the old 110-ton gun had not only to drive out the projectile but also some 500 pounds of smoke, while less than 50 per cent of the charge was effective.

The introduction of rapid-fire machine guns made the smoke trouble still more serious and rendered a smokeless powder a necessity.

In any successful explosive certain conditions have to be fulfilled. One must be able to concentrate in a small space bodies which will act upon each other independently of the air with enormous rapidity, forming the largest possible volume of gas, which, having to find way for itself, gives the explosive effect. If this change takes an appreciable time the body can be used as a "propellant" in a gun, and gunpowder is of this character. When, however, the change takes place practically instantaneously it cannot be used in a gun and is used in high-explosive shells, bombs, torpedoes and mines, and such bodies we call "high explosives," gun cotton and nitroglycerin being examples of this class.

When, during the formation of the gas from the solid in explosion, other solid compounds are formed as well, the solids are blown out in fine particles and form a cloud, smoke. But if only gases are produced the explosion is smokeless. Gunpowder on being fired gives more than half its weight as solids, and therefore forms clouds of smoke. Gun cotton is resolved entirely into gases and gives no smoke.

New Electric Lamp to Save Miners' Lives

MINERS at last have been equipped with a practical electric lamp—a lamp that probably will do more to prevent mine disasters than any life-saving device brought forth by modern progress.

Mine fires in the past have been the cause of untold and inestimable loss of natural resources, yet despite the efforts of inventors and engineers nothing more satisfactory in the nature of a portable lamp for miners was brought forth than a developed and improved "Davy" lamp, in which the flame above the underground worker's forehead is protected by wire gauze, which conducts away the heat before it can penetrate to the more or less inflammable gases which may be present in the atmosphere of the mine. It is a simple apparatus and dependable within limits, but in this day of mechanical perfection it is crude, an archaic relic.

The new Edison mine lamp battery is contained in a small nickel-steel can of convenient size and weight, it is strapped at the back of the belt. It is tightly covered, and from a flexible tube carrying the insulated wire is brought up over the back of the head to the lucidescence lamp fastened to the front of the miner's cap. It is a

How the Battery and Lamp Work.

"fool-proof" apparatus, which requires no attention whatever from the miner, and which he cannot damage without actually breaking it open, for the outfit, properly charged, and with the current turned on, is handed to him at the mouth of the mine, with the cover locked. It will continue to produce light until the battery is surrendered when he emerges from the workings, or until the battery is exhausted. Those in charge of the batteries have nothing to do but unlock the covers, hook them up to the power source and recharge for the next day's work. The materials in the battery are permanent, the roughest jarring produces no ill effects, and the battery does not have to be fully exhausted before it is recharged. Even such mistakes as the reversal of the charge does not permanently injure the battery, and it may be left for indefinite periods charged, uncharged or recharged without appreciable loss. Specific gravity readings of the electrolyte are unnecessary, and the only care required, other than that of recharging, is the replenishing of the electrolyte about once every six months and the occasional addition of distilled water to replace the lost by evaporation. Other parts of the battery are unchanged by its operation. The plates never have to be renewed.

New Use for Fireless Cooker

IF A peddler calls at your door in the near future and offers to sell you soups, meats or vegetables, piping hot and ready to serve, do not be surprised.

For the business of bringing your dinner to you is a new and rapidly growing industry. If it continues as it is expected to do you soon will not be compelled to consider your dinner at all—you may select it from the traveling cafe that will call at your house daily, or as often as you desire.

A recent improvement in the fireless cooker has made this work possible. They now are being used in conjunction with a co-operative kitchen plan in a New Jersey city. The new cooker is composed of numerous compartments in which several articles of food may be cooked at the same time.

When the meal is ready it is carried—still in the original compartment in which it was cooked—to the home of the purchaser. In some cases the contents of one cooker are divided between two or more families, thus cutting down the cost of the home meals materially.

Many plans are being worked out through which the plan may be used to fight the high cost of living. The most practical of these is the one suggested by a woman who has had her main meal delivered to her daily by means of the cooker. She suggests purchasing a number of the cookers, taking orders each day from a number of families, preparing the food ordered and delivering it at a stated time. "By this means I can deliver just the kind and variety of food required at a cost far below the cost of preparing it in each home," said the woman, who hopes to make a business of "home cooking."

Why You Use a Tooth Brush

A GOOD tooth brush if used conscientiously should not be in use more than two weeks at a time, and it is better to keep two in use so that each may have a period of drying out and airing. It never pays to buy too cheap a brush if the price is at the expense of the health. The best place a poor set of bristles will not do their work well and in the second place loosely fastened bristles are very dangerous if they slip down the throat where they may catch and decay or penetrate the walls of the digestive tract. Always wash out the brush thoroughly after each application, and, by the way, a new brush should be soaked in a weak solution of bicarbonate of soda for two hours both to disinfect it from shop handling and to set the bristles so that they will not fall out so readily.

The teeth should be brushed at night, after each meal, and upon rising. It is particularly important to clean them the last thing before retiring so that food particles will not remain over night when the mouth saliva is not active enough to prevent it.

During a long illness the teeth should be carefully cleaned when they cannot receive attention from a dentist. If this were done fewer teeth troubles would be laid to the account, which is not much more to blame than neglect of the mouth. See that the mouth is constantly washed out with a little bicarbonate of soda, which can be prepared by dissolving a teaspoonful of the bicarbonate (ordinary baking soda) in a pint of water and bottling it for use. Most authorities consider this better than too frequent use of the hydrogen peroxide solution, which are not always good for the teeth.

Frightful Inventions to Take Life

THE war of the future will be the work of the inventor, even more than it is today. Science, mechanics and electricity have, as we all know, revolutionized modern warfare to a terrible degree. Talk to men who remember the Crimean war and they will tell you that the present conflict is not war; it is wholesale murder, fearful, horrible and inhuman. The wars of the future, however, if the scientific is to be believed, will be even more destructive.

At present he is experimenting with heat rays. If, he contends, light rays can be thrown upon a hostile position with the searchlight, why cannot heat rays be similarly reflected, and if heat rays can be sent to a distance, why not the hottest rays possible—namely, those of the oxy-acetylene torch? Before such a fiery glare fortresses of steel and stone would melt, the biggest gun would crumble down into pools of steel, and whole regiments of men might, with one blast, be shriveled into ash.

Neither do scientists consider it outside the bounds of possibility in the future to devise means of detonating explosives at a distance by wireless waves. The latter at present scatter in every direction, but the day may come when it will be possible to restrict them to only one direction, so that they may be aimed; and it is not too far-fetched to predict that some future general, touching a button, will send speeding to their target, which will be, perhaps, an entire army division, wireless impulses so powerful that they will electrify every man within their range.

In regard to big guns, experts say that the limit is by no means reached with the manufacture of seventeen-inch firing monsters. They prophesy sixty-inch and even eighty-inch guns, which will be able to shoot sixty or eighty miles, the range being given by aviators signaling by wireless. Again, plans are already under way for the construction of monster submarines, with a cruising radius from London to New York. They will be able to carry batteries of torpedoes and ample fuel and provisions for the long cruise. They will thus gain some of the independence of land possessed by dreadnaughts, for even they must visit coaling stations or be attended by colliers. The next half-century, indeed, may see battleships swept from the seas, and some nation holding the mastery of the ocean by virtue of a fleet of submarines.

Do You Dine With Your Plants?

DO YOU ever think of inviting your plants to dinner?

An expert in plant life who took a large number of various plants and supplied them with nutritious food in the form of roast beef arrived at the following result:

Of the plants that he fed, 60 per cent were survived (that is, the same number that were not fed in this way); their stems weighed 11 per cent more; they excelled the starved plants in the number of their seeds by 141 per cent, and in the aggregate weight of their seeds by 275 per cent.

Other scientists who have fed these plants with aphides of similar small insects have secured like results.

The Man Who Really Sent Italy to War

Eleanora Duse, the Tragedienne, With Whom All Italy Sympathized When d'Annunzio Revealed in a Book the Secrets of Their Love.

Gabriele d'Annunzio, Beloved and Then Despised, Became Once More the Idol of His People Through His Fiery Denunciations of Austria and Eloquent Appeals for Battle—Scorned Because of His Heartless Treatment of the Great Duse, He Is Again a Hero.

EVERY country has its hero—its idol—in time of war. In England today Lord Kitchener is affectionately called "K. of K." and is looked upon as the man whose genius will save British arms from defeat. In Germany they speak of Kaiser Wilhelm in words akin to reverence, and the name of King Albert is ever on the lips of the Belgians. France has her General Joffre, Austria her Franz Josef, and Turkey her Enver Bey Pasha. The eyes of Russia are turned toward Grand Duke Nicholas.

Italy's Own Idol. Italy, throwing her fortunes into the greatest of all wars, chose an idol different from any of the other countries. He is not the king, though Victor Emmanuel is beloved by his people; he is not Premier Salandra, the leader of the war cabinet; he has not the epaulets of a general or the insignia of an admiral. The man of the hour is Signor Gabriele d'Annunzio, poet and dramatist.

Julius Caesar, returning from his triumphant conquest of Gaul, received no more fervid greeting from Rome than did d'Annunzio on his arrival there recently after several years of self-imposed exile.

He came to Rome an avowed agent of Mara. He preached war to his countrymen—and they were in a receptive mood. He stirred them to frenzy by his fiery denunciations of Austria, and when war finally was declared it was said that no one person had hastened the decree so swiftly as this famous writer.

Changes of Time. That time changes everything is true in the case of Italy's love for the poet. Fifteen years ago, when Eleanora Duse, the great actress, declared that she would kill d'Annunzio, her Italian countrymen applauded her and condemned the poet's book, "Il Fuoco" ("Fire"), for whose heroine Duse herself admitted she was the unconscious model.

Both were artists. Both loved and understood the things that are of art—which alone served to draw them outside the commonplace currents of affairs and place them in a world by themselves. To the man, indeed, art was the only thing. It was the substance and the end of life. Everything might be, must be, sacrificed to it. But to the woman there was one thing greater than art—and that was love. To her strenuously vibrating nature a play, a book, a song were as nothing compared with the one mighty reality which womanlike she worshipped.

But the balance was too uneven; the scales had to turn. D'Annunzio grew tired. And one day he told her so.

"For a long time Duse struggled to recover from this soul-destroying, heart-deadening experience. D'Annunzio, said his critics, spent the interval in writing it all down in the novel which he well knew would be read the world over, and which he intended should add an additional cut to his stature as an artist.

It is unlikely that any readers of the story failed to comprehend the cry of the humiliated, deserted woman: "He has stolen my love and sold it! I will kill him!"

D'Annunzio apologized—two columns of apology, dripping with self-advertisement. He said he didn't mean Duse. Again she gave him the lie.

Judge which was right by the following summary:

The two main characters in "Fire" are Stelio Efremma, a poet, and Foscarina, a tragic actress. Their love is not led up to, but assumed at the start. Foscarina finds herself attracted to the youth by "a limitless love and terror." Efremma at the same time experiences an "intellectual pleasure."

In response to her admiration of his work he tells her that she is the artistic stimulus.

"It seems to me at times," he says to her, "that you have the power to impart some nameless but divine quality to the things that are born in my brain and to make them appear even to my own eyes remote and adorable. You reproduce in me at times the reverent amazement of the sculptor, who, having in the evening borne into the temple the images of the gods which he has wrought with heated labor and patient hand, returns the next morning to find them exalted on their pedestals and enveloped in a cloud of fragrant divinity that transforms the common material from which his hands have fashioned them."

Enter the Other Women. Then there appears another woman—Donatella Arrale, young, beautiful, gifted with a marvelous voice, and a friend of Foscarina. She interrupts Efremma. The three spend an evening together. And at the end of it "Donatella Arrale and Stelio Efremma looked at each other with confused glances. And their faces, each reflecting the other's feeling, burned as though they had been leaning over a furnace or a crater.

After this the apprehension that la Foscarina has felt when with Efremma deepens into terror. She knows no further happiness. She lives through a period of deep abasement and humiliation, longing for death, yet consumed by her love for the poet.

At last she tells him that she longs to die. Indolently he asks her why.

"First, because you hate me," she replies.

"Do not torment yourself," he says.

But she no longer has the power to move him deeply.

Doubts His Love. A distrust of his faithfulness to her enters her mind.

"A horrible fear possessed her each time that she saw him go, each time that she saw him come. Departing, he might be on the way to some unknown love. Arriving, he might perhaps intend to take a last farewell of her."

"Do you think often of Donatella Arrale, Stelio?" she asked him suddenly one day.

"Yes, sometimes," he replied, after a minute's hesitation, feeling a repugnance for all lies and the necessity of resolving that love must transcend all little tricks and pretensions and become for him a source of strength and not of weakness, a free agreement, not a heavy chain.

"The woman walked toward without swerving, but she had lost the sense of feeling throughout her body except for that terrible beating of her heart which shook her from neck to heel."

"Thus little by little la Foscarina realizes the extent to which she has sacrificed herself to the poet. A younger woman seems to him more beautiful. Her own great love kindles in him no adequate response. Even the sacred moments when she has confided to him the bitterest passages of her own life story have for him, she suspects, only a literary value.

"Do you remember that evening of the tempest?" asked Stelio one day. "How sweet you were, Fosca! A little earlier, on the Blatio bridge, I had found a motive; I had translated the speech of the elements

Gabriele d'Annunzio, the Poet, Who Has Reclaimed the Friendship of His Countrymen.

D'Annunzio as a War Poet

THE prohibition by the Italian government in 1912 of the collected edition of Gabriele d'Annunzio's war poems, contributed to Italian newspapers, was due chiefly to the unflattering allusions to certain European powers contained in one of the poems, entitled "A Ballad of the Dardanelles."

D'Annunzio's reference to Austria and Emperor Francis Joseph was most bitter. The poem dealt with episodes in the history of Austro-Italian relations—the trouble at Mantua, when Austria endeavored to hold down her Italian subjects after the unsuccessful revolution of 1848.

Wrote d'Annunzio:

But one is more outraged than all the others. It is the saintly hanging angel of the eternal gallows. O gloomy Mantua, O stevens of Bolzano, O ditches of Lombardy, O curving Bay of Trieste, was ever greater marvel seen?

The modesty of the two-headed eagle, which vomits forth like the vulture the undigested flesh of the corpse!

Yet make'st partisans! The hangman's rope, with its alphanet, which is new transformed into a garble of virtues to surround the fool old executioner, while every night in his sleep he is cuffed by that covered hand loaded with rings which made a gory field of Croatia.

The "seized hand loaded with rings" was taken presumably by the Italian censor to mean the hand of some Italian nobleman, cut off as he hung upon the gallows by a Croatian soldier.

Does that know what a motive is? A little stream from which there may grow a crowd of rivers, a little seed from which may come a glory of forests, a little spark from which may come an endless chain of fire, a nucleus productive of infinite things.

"There is not in the world of force anything more potent, more effectual. And to an active mind there is no higher joy than a development of this form of energy. A joy? Yes, dear friends, but also sometimes a horror."

All this and more is what Duse read and cried against. This stripping aside of all reserve, this portrayal of a heroine with great sad eyes, "no longer young," with a fatal capacity for loving; this pitiless recital of the painful, sordid childhood of the great actress; the melancholy romance of her absolute abandonment of herself to the man who accepted her great love and found in it—a "motive."

The unutterable cruelty of it all, supplemented by the novelist's airy denial that he had definite models for the characters in his book, excited Signora Duse into a frenzy. Time after time she sent for d'Annunzio to come to her. Repeatedly he failed her. To a man the writers of Italy and France espoused her cause. M. de Preval bitterly attacked d'Annunzio in the Paris prints.

But this is another day. The people of Italy, facing a crisis, forgot all else save the destiny of their country. Benjamino Disraeli, the Earl of Beaconsfield, once said that "time is the great physician." In the case of d'Annunzio "war" might be substituted for "time."

HALF HOLIDAY BEGINS WEDNESDAY

Retail Grocers and Butchers Decide at Big Mass Meeting to Have Mid-Week Rest—Hundreds to Close.

Editor Firing Line: Please accept thanks of the Atlanta Retail Grocers and Butchers' association for your kind notice of our mass meeting Sunday, June 8, in the Firing Line. Your notices have always been a help to us in getting out a crowd. It certainly demonstrates the fact that the Firing Line is popular with the merchants—

Again thanking you we beg to remain, yours truly, K. G. & B. ASSOCIATION, J. J. EYE, Secretary.

A half holiday on Wednesday during the summer months. That's what the employes of practically every grocery and butcher store in the city is going to enjoy during the coming summer. The convention at the chamber of commerce last night was the largest attended ever held. Not only was a large representation of both grocers and butchers present, but also a number of wholesale grocers and butchers. In the past few years the growing tendency has been to have a great number of mid-week rest days, but this year the merchants still it was not an universal thing. Tuesday night was to settle the matter for the coming summer, and after some discussion a vote was taken, and it was decided, only three votes being against it. These dealers, of course, expect themselves as going to comply with the decision of the majority.

Since the meeting Secretary Eye of the association has been making out closing agreements to dealers, and every man is bringing in a list of names. Wednesday closing will begin next Wednesday, June 16, and continue until September 1. East Point, College Park and Hapeville stores had already agreed to close, and Mr. Eye says that he has never seen such unanimity in this season. The merchants from Colonial Hills to Buckhead and from Oakhurst to Howell Hills road signifying their intention to close on Wednesday.

It is felt that any dealer who has not yet had an opportunity to sign one of the closing agreements, and who desires to co-operate, then is requested in the good name, then is requested to call by 5:30 p. m. on Wednesday, June 16, to give their names and office.

There will be no picnic for the summer, the Wednesday closing taking its place in their announcement to the retail and wholesale trade.

Make your best friends, your customers to get their minutes announce the closing of their plants. The ladies to co-operate with the grocers and butchers in giving their employees a half holiday, one each week, will help the Wednesday evening prayer meetings to close.

PERMITS ARE SOUGHT BY 17 LOCKER CLUBS

City Authorities Believe Other Three Clubs Will Apply for Permits.

Seventeen of the twenty locker clubs of Atlanta have filed with the public committee of general business applications for renewals of their permits when the general council grants permits at the first meeting in July. The other three clubs are expected to file their applications before the committee meets Wednesday afternoon to consider applications for permits for locker clubs, near beer saloons and pool rooms.

Under an ordinance recently passed by general council applicants for locker club privileges are required to sign under oath a score of questions relative to the officers, directors, members and rules under which the club proposes to operate.

The clubs that have already made application for permits are the following: Transportation club, Metropolitan club, Capital City club, Beavers club, Atlanta Turn Verein, Atlanta club, Atlanta Athletic club, Moose club, A. M. club, Standard club, Grand club, New Richmond Driving club, Elmer club, the H. F. S. Dandies Society, Great American club, Eastern club and Olympic club.

The police committee has received 17 applications for renewals of near beer licenses. There are about 200 near beer saloons in Atlanta and it is said that practically all of them will ask to have their licenses renewed.

During the past week members of the police committee, headed by Chairman Edwin Johnson, visited each of the locker clubs and near beer saloons and before the application for permits will make a tour of inspection of the remaining clubs of the city.

SUPERIOR TO CAPSULES RELIEVES IN 24 HOURS

Want 8-Hour Working Day For All City Employees

The Atlanta Federation of Trades and the Georgia Federation of Labor through its president, L. P. Marquardt, have instituted a movement to obtain an 8-hour working day for municipal employees of Atlanta and for all men employed by contractors and subcontractors doing work for the city.

In inaugurating this action the labor leaders say that in some departments of the city some of the employees work a day of ten hours, some nine hours and others eight hours. Those working in the city hall, they point out, enjoy a day of eight hours by reason of a special ordinance, and they wish to obtain the same regulation for other municipal workmen.

An attendant result the labor men also wish to gain is that the common laborers, whether working directly for the city or for contractors or subcontractors engaged in public work, shall receive the highest prevailing wage received by laborers working for private enterprises.

In line with this movement Councilman Claude Ashley, Monday afternoon, introduced in general council a resolution providing for a charter amendment empowering the city to inaugurate a general 8-hour law for all employees on municipal works. The measure was introduced at the request of the legislative committee of the Federation of Trades. It was referred to the charter revision committee of council and will probably be reported favorably.

Leaders in the servant council refuse to take this step, say they will report to the referendum vote. This tentative measure advocated by the labor leaders of Atlanta and endorsed last week by the Atlanta Federation of Trades, contains the following points:

Ashley's Ordinance.—An ordinance prescribing that the hours of all work of all city employees shall be limited to 8 hours of each 24 hours, and that no employee shall be permitted to work more than 8 hours outside the limits of such emergency, involving fire, flood or health of the city, or other emergency, and that in the event of such emergency, and during its continuance, the proper department head may suspend said 8-hour provision.

That council shall provide for the proper adjustment of service lines of all employees, making such labor provision uniform among all of said city employees, and that no work in any part of said city shall be exempt from this regulation of work. And all duties and changes engaged in work for said city shall receive for their said work the highest prevailing wage paid to skilled mechanics for the same character of work for said city. That no contract for public work for said city shall be entered into in which the specifications on which bids are submitted, it shall be stipulated that such contract shall be awarded said work or any subcontractor, shall pay to all common laborers the highest prevailing wage paid in their particular grade of work, to all persons doing the work of a skilled mechanic and engaged on such public work shall receive the highest prevailing wage in his particular grade of work, and that all employees employed by said contractor or subcontractor, shall not be required to work in excess of 8 hours in any 24 hours.

That any contractor given any city work or any subcontractor, who shall violate any of the provisions of this ordinance, shall forfeit to said city the sum of $100 for each and every violation thereof. All employees of the fire department of said city shall be exempt from the provisions of this ordinance, if being recruited that their work is an emergency character as herein stated.

The Complete and Unabridged Works of EDGAR ALLAN POE

POE'S genius in its own field is unrivaled and unapproached. He created a school of fiction that has had many imitators, but none that even the most fulsome courtesy can compare with him in depth of feeling, in effective style, and in his weird and mystic trend of thought. His poetry possesses a charm of melody more closely akin to music than verse. His tales of mystery, imagination and humor are

The Greatest Short Stories Ever Written

The universal popularity of his books is not confined to this country. In European countries he is highly esteemed and in France he is read more widely perhaps than any of the leaders of American literature. No collection of books owned by an American is complete without a set of Poe's works.

Poe the Inventor of the Detective Story

Sir A. Conan Doyle, whose Sherlock Holmes stories are known the world over, says: "Poe is the inventor of the detective story and is pre-eminently the master of the short story. The imaginative quality, intellectual skill, keen adaptation of means to end, subtlety of thought, management of dramatic effects, are qualities upon which I delight to dwell, and I would emphasize my own indebtedness to Poe and my appreciation of his great abilities."

His essays of this kind and give them a more durable form. They would be a very valuable contribution to our literature, and would fully justify all we have said in his praise. We could refer to many others of his poems than those we have quoted, to prove that he is the possessor of a pure and original vein. His tales and essays have equally shown him a master in prose. Mr. Poe is the indefatigable something which men have agreed to call genius."

Poe is the most remarkable poet the United States has produced.—Alfred Tennyson. A man richly endowed with genius. His prose is remarkably vigorous, direct and yet graceful and his verse has a particular charm of melody, an atmosphere of true poetry about it which is very winning.—Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

South Atlantic States Tennis Tourney Starts

Augusta, Ga., June 11.—(Special)—Monday will mark the start of the eighteenth annual south Atlantic states tennis tournament on the course of the local country club. It is expected that a large number of players from all over the South will show indications that one of the largest lists ever to start will compete for the challenge cup. The tourney will last throughout the week.

A total of twelve cups will be given as prizes. These year trophy challenge cups are offered in the men's singles, men's doubles, women's singles, which are very handsome affairs, because the property of the players winning them three times, not necessarily in succession. The winner of the men's singles, the winner and runner-up of the men's doubles, the winner and runner-up of the women's doubles, the winner of the mixed doubles and the winner of the men's consolation singles will receive cups.

Ed Carter, of Atlanta, has two legs on the challenge cup, defending his title last season against Brodman Bain, of Savannah, who won from J. K. Orr, Jr., also of Atlanta, in the final round. Carter will not have to play the singles, but provided he does not the challenger, wins permanent possession of the challenge cup.

Quite a number of tennis cranks from the Oglethorpe are expected to attend the tourney, and besides, a large delegation is expected from Eastman on Thursday night the tennis committee will give its annual dance in honor of the tournament.

CHICAGO DEDICATES NEW TRACK SATURDAY

Chicago, June 12.—Chicago will dedicate its new motor speedway next Saturday with a 500-mile race, in which some of the fastest cars and most skillful drivers in the world are entered. Trial heats Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week are expected to reduce the number of competitors to the limit of 25.

The track is an oval course, 2 miles in length. The cars will run on what is technically known as a laminated wooden flooring, the surface material being "two-by-fours." Thirty-foot embankments have been placed at the corners.

Provision has been made for about 25,000 spectators. Five hospitals have been built for emergencies, one at the pits and the others at the turns.

Fast time has been made on the track, which was completed this week and followed by the sport, speed recorders. A speed of 109.99 miles an hour is credited to Earl Cooper in a practice spin on the course.

ANY REAL BALL CLUB COULD ROMP AHEAD

Says McGraw, in Speaking of the National League Penna. Race.

By John J. Hendon.

Many said last baseball has been played in the National League this season than I have ever seen since breaking into the big show. If there had been a real ball club on the ball, it would be so far ahead by this time that the Giants have a pennant clinched. It is a criminal, criminal, that's all, that the Giants have a pennant clinched now. A lot of college teams could have won this year's pennant if they had been in it.

The players are dragging more money and playing less baseball than ever before in the history of the game. It used to be that a man could keep on playing until he lost a leg. I recall once, when with a club, some fellows that one of our men had something the matter with one of his legs. They were inclined to be lazy, too. He was around complaining to "Joe" and me all the time.

"If you lose that eye, you've still got another one," answered "Joe." "Don't quit for a little thing like that."

"My eye is bad, I don't think I'll be able to work today," he said.

"If you lose that eye, you've still got another one," answered "Joe." "Don't quit for a little thing like that."

And the player didn't. He went out and played good ball even though he had a weak leg. But now, if a big leaguer has a bad tooth, he must be laid off to see a chiropodist about it. There have been more men drawing bank president salaries this season for sitting on a bench and keeping one finger in the game, than there have been active players in the game, almost the National League has looked like a German field hospital as near as I can come to recognizing the difference.

And the more money a man gets the easier he is to hurt him. They are expensive bric-a-brac.

Much of this stuff now pulled by big leaguer players is nonsense, and I am going to stop it on my next column if I leaves me in last place. One reason there have been so many men in the league laid off is because these men have not been taking care of themselves. Most of them figure they are signed to contracts which cannot be broken, and so disregard the fact that they are liable to be kept out of the training rules, usually an not strict about this, and I have tried never to do a thing for a manager of the club.

But I don't like to see players putting it over on managers. I am not strict about this, and I have tried never to do a thing for a manager of the club. But I don't like to see players putting it over on managers. I am not strict about this, and I have tried never to do a thing for a manager of the club.

One of my catchers met some old friends since the Giants have been on the road. We were short of catchers anyway, and Meyer wearing a bad finger and nothing left but this fellow and recruits. He didn't stop to think of this, but he spent quite a night with the friends. The next day he showed up, for he told me he was sick and could not work. He said that I would not risk suspending him because he knew I would say he was sick. He fooled him. I suspended him indefinitely and then him besides. Now he is talking of jumping to the Federal League. I hope he does. He will help to wreck that league. A man can't be a ball player and a social gangster, too.

In the old days, when a player knew that he had to show you something or be fired, he had to be a hard worker. Now "bad acting" in baseball this season than there has been since the days of the old Orioles and some of those tough clubs. A player meets some friends one night, and the next day he tells you he is sick and can't work. The chances are that he can't even see the ball. These cost iron contracts don't keep a manager from having something suspended without pay, and a few of these birds should have something dumped on them to wake them up.

Langford's Colyum.

I saw Elberfeld go through a game, without causing anyone any pain. I saw Mack Elberfeld in a pinch—in the ninth with two men out, I saw B. Smith without him strike out. And Moran roared a try. I saw the Crackers hit Ragby out—Winning a twelve-inning tie.

I saw Elberfeld make an error. That didn't count a run. I saw Sid Smith beat out a bunt, and Lee lose a fly in the sun. And last of these things, I saw The Travelers win the Cup—in triumph of the southland. And they well I woke up.

The coming series with the Gulls promises to be a veritable struggle of titans, such as these same teams have put up before with one exception, and that is this—in the hectic struggles of other and better days they were fighting it out for first honor, while now it is no more than the twelfth round to which each side survives.

At this time a Gull conquest will be almost fatal to our hopefuls and should they lubricate the "Crack" highway, just on the jump of a home stay in should be victorious, why we hate to think of what it might lead to.

BUT on the other hit, if they pounce on the Gulls and once more get a taste of victory, and a feeling of confidence, we can still look for brighter days at old Pony—with a dim hope, but still a hope, of overtaking a few fellows higher up the ladder.

We have never given this Korhagen the double D, but are willing to lay a little that he is not a red-headed Irishman.

Billy and Hagg.

Oh, tell me, Mister William Smith—What tuns you like to bear?—The stink of Crackers' top-beans hits. Is pleasing to my ear.

And Then.

Oh, tell me Major Callaway—What tuns you like best?—It sets my soul at rest.

Korhagen seems to be carrying a little extra baggage in the way of a Monitor. Why not chop out the Tautone syllable, and leave the simple Hager. We know the scores at least will not object to this. But in a pinch we could even stand for the "Kor". If he can field balls down the third base line, and in other ways fill the gap twist about and the line, with now and then a single, when a single counts something more than a mark on the score card.

In the above paragraph I forgot to mention that we also saw Umm Will-Hams call four balls correctly, and—well, we will not mention Strady, for he, the poor fellow, is now following other parents, but if he wanted to hand him one, we would add that he should have never left said parents to be an umpire in the first place.

The fans are wondering if Galtcher Bryan was put out of the game for disputing with the umpire, or if he was voluntarily. In either case it was not a glorious retirement, especially as it was in the eighth with runs needed and runners on the sacks. Gull some argue that his throwing arm was about gone away, and one of the fans have been stealing on him at will. Kid Villa, the pitcher, on one thing in landing a berth again in Organized Ball, but much missing go on with Galt.

Recalling Sergeant—Want to join the cavalry do you? Know anything about horses? Applicant—Wot me? Three winners and a second yesterday. Lunge, gawd! Wot do you think!

1916 MODELS NOW READY

THE first quality you notice in the 1916 Cole Eight, when you get it on the road, is its unusual poise—no side-swerve, no tendency for the rear wheels to leave the road or bounce about. This is, due to three things—the steadiness of the motor, the car's low center of gravity, and the Cole direct spring drive suspension, which amounts to a built-in shock absorber.

The driver of a Cole Eight car enjoys the ride along with the others—he doesn't have to hold himself always ready to shift into second or to put on the brakes for the bumps. The peculiar poise of Cole Eight emancipates him from strain—mental and physical—and the other passengers from jara, jolts and jerks.

Cole Eight has full seven-passenger capacity, a wheelbase of 126 inches, weighs less than 3,500 pounds, road ready, and in it—all of the modern luxuries of motor car design are included.

Such as aisleway front seats, out-of-the-way auxiliary seats, tire pump operated from the driver's seat, and electric starter worked by a simple small foot button. Everything about Cole Eight is simple and get-at-able.

Cole Eight either in traffic or on tour astounds you with its new delights.

These latest triumphs of Cole engineering are now being exhibited and demonstrated by all Cole dealers.

Ready—the 1916 Hudson

Yacht-Line Body—Ever-Lustre Finish—$200 Less

This new-type Hudson has won a remarkable following. It has brought to all men new ideals of a class car, changing the entire vogue. It has trebled our output, forced immense factory additions, compelled 31 makers to follow our footsteps. Within 20 months, this lightweight Hudson has been adopted by 15,000 motorists.

Now comes another $200 reduction. Now comes the Yacht-Line Body, with new grace, new luxury, new roominess and comfort. Now comes the fulfillment of your dreams—a finish of lasting lustre. Today this favorite class car starts a brilliant new career.

Remember Its History

Two seasons ago this new-type Hudson came out at $1750. Its announcement started Motor-dom. Its price was pronounced impossible in a high-grade Six. Its lightness—under 3000 pounds—was scoffed at as incompatible with strength.

But the car was a Hudson, and Hudson standards are high. Howard E. Coffin was its designer, and he stands foremost in his field. He and his whole corps had spent two years in testing and perfecting it. And men were waiting for a class car which would cut down operative cost.

So our first month's output was sold before any one saw the car. When the car appeared men flocked by thousands to it. And for one whole year thereafter Hudson buyers waited weeks for cars.

Then a $200 Reduction

The next season the price—which seemed so impossible—was reduced to $1550, because of multiplied output. Thirty-one improvements were made in the car, including still lighter weight. Another year's work by our engineering corps showed in its refinement.

This model was soon 4000 cars oversold. We shipped 1000 cars by express. It became at once the largest-selling car in the world with a price above $1200.

That changed the whole trend in motor car designing. It became evident to all that the day of overtax was ended. Men would not stand for excess in weight, price, size or operative cost. All cars were built lighter, most prices were reduced. And in 31 factories this new-type Hudson became the pattern car.

Now Comes Graceful Yacht Lines

Now our designers have spent another year on this car. There was no way to improve the chassis. Fifteen thousand cars, covering millions of miles, had failed to develop one fault. Every part and detail had been refined to the limit.

So in this third model they gave their time to the body. They worked out this stately body, with its graceful, sweeping yacht lines.

Every broken line is eliminated. The top-line of the body and the doors is leather-bound.

And they created this luxurious tonneau. The sides are higher than before, the rear seat is much wider, so it doesn't crowd three adults. The car seats seven, with all the room that anybody wants. And the extra tonneau seats disappear when not wanted, doubling the tonneau room.

You have never seen a body so impressive and graceful as this Yacht-Line Hudson body.

Now Comes the Ever-Lustre Finish

And now comes for the first time what you have dreamed of—a lustrous finish which stays new. It is the greatest innovation of the year.

In our new factory addition we have built mammoth ovens, with capacity for hundreds of bodies. Now our body finish is baked on in many separate coats. Each coat of finish is now applied under pressure which fixes it as never before. After each coat the body goes to an oven where it is baked for hours, then rubbed. This is done with every coat—an exclusive Hudson process.

The result is a body that stays new. The finish is smooth and brilliant. It resists gun and rain, washing, rubbing, mud. Experienced motorists who have seen bodies grow old and dull will consider this Ever-Lustre finish the most welcome improvement in years.

"We combine it with enameled leather upholstery—better than has ever appeared in a car at this price. And with deep, hair-filled cushions, which means enduring luxury as well. This year's new body features mean much added cost. But it means a revolution in finish, in comfort and appearance."

Now Comes the $1350 Price

And now comes another big reduction. We have built additions which will double our capacity. We have worked out countless new ideas in efficiency.

We are building here now, under ideal conditions, more high-grade cars than were ever built in one shop. As a result, we are giving you now the greatest value ever known in a class car.

Last year we reduced this car $200. This year we reduce it $200 more. We are selling this model 23% below its startling initial price—$400 below it. Yet a hundred makers, when they saw the car, pronounced our first price impossible.

Why this New-Day Type

This Hudson was the pioneer of an entirely new type of car. The type was conceived four years ago by Howard E. Coffin, our famous chief designer. It took him two years, aided by our whole force, to work out his conception.

The idea was refinement—the elimination of crudity—to result in a light, staunch car. The first step was a new-type motor, small bore, high speed. By reducing piston shocks that made it possible to lighten a hundred engine parts.

The next step was aluminum in place of cast iron. The next was special steels. In the next, a thousand parts were re-designed to combine lightness with strength.

The final result was a 7-passenger Six weighing under 3000 pounds. Old-time Sixes averaged 4500 pounds. That difference—the weight of 11 adults—cut tire and fuel cost in two.

This 1916 model, with this new-style body, is on show here now. Be among the first to see the new lines and new comfort.

The Vogue of Simplicity

Howard E. Coffin saw years ago that the trend was toward simplicity. Now everybody knows it. Excess and waste are unpopular. Good taste now calls for satisfaction without show.

This Hudson has become the class car. Its owners, in large part, are men who have paid two and three times its price. Hudson typifies the ideals of the times. This fact is conspicuous, wherever you look about.

All questions regarding this new-type car have been answered on the road. There are 15,000 Hudsons of this type in use. In two years men have driven them many million miles. And every owner vouches that the car is staunch, enduring, faultless, as well as economical.

Hudson now embodies all that any man can want. It is the fine car of the modern type. Only those men who still take pride in some form of excess will find any car more appealing.

Like No Other Car

Bear in mind that Hudson is like no other car. There are many models of this type, but there are scores of ways—important ways—in which Hudson is unlike them. Let us point them out. This is a Howard E. Coffin creation, a finished product, unique and unapproached.

Dear Sir: Both Mrs. Rich and I have driven your Hudson Little Six for fourteen months. I was so delighted with the car that we are re-ordering the same thing in a 1916 model. This speaks exceptionally well for the car, for I have no mechanical turn of mind and have not raised the hood of my car once during the afore-mentioned period, and have had no chauffeur to look after the engine. In other words, the car has given practically perfect satisfaction. I heartily indorse it.

Dear Sir: I have had my Hudson Six-40 fifteen months and have driven it 12,576 miles. I am a hard driver on a car, but the Hudson has stood the test in a manner which makes for my saying it is the greatest light car I ever drove. I have averaged from 13 to 15 miles per gallon of gasoline, and have had practically no mechanical trouble. I consider the Hudson a marvel and am a most enthusiastic booster of it because of the service it has given me.

While racing cars I became closely acquainted with Howard E. Coffin, the designer, and have always felt that his word was the final authority on automobiles. Since I have been driving one of his cars I realize it more than ever. Very truly yours,

THREE Most Important Things To TEACH A BABY—

NATURE, MUSIC AND KINDNESS

"He has been and is a great force in the development and natural education of the child and the race. The child recognizes in the dog qualities superior to his own and regards him as a member of a common family. For a playfellow to an only child the dog fills an almost indispensable place, if the child is to repeat the race history, and his absence from a family of children is an irreparable loss."

The favorite pet animals among children, according to an inquiry among 3,000 boys and girls, are the dog, rat, canary, rabbit, horse and pigeon, in the order named. In an inquiry in which the sexes were separated it was found that boys prefer the dog, horse and rabbit, while girls prefer the cat, canary and parrot.

Children's love for flowers and their close sympathy and kinship with them is recorded by those who are concerned in the study of child training as powerful aids in cultivating the imagination, the moral nature and the sense of beauty of the child. The value of flowers to the child, according to Alice Thayer, who has written extensively on the subject in the Pedagogical Seminary, is based on the "kindness and sympathy which flowers arouse in the child and the preponderantly good and noble qualities with which they are endowed in terms of fancy."

By Mary Watts.

HUMBOLDT said, "Whatever we wish to see introduced into the life of a nation must first be introduced into its schools."

The modern child training expert begins even earlier to inculcate the lessons which he wishes to enter most deeply into the consciousness of the coming generation. He begins with the child in arms and says, "Whatever we wish to see introduced into the life of a nation must first be introduced into the nursery."

With this idea in mind the very earliest playthings of children are now regarded as of foremost importance in child training, and those who wish to see the coming generation more humane and more keenly alive to the true beauty and joy of life than are the people of to-day begin while the babies are still in their cradles to introduce them to the great world of natural beauty, to the joy of song and art, and to the humanity and consideration for others which may be best developed in the young child through kind relationships with animals.

Many persons who have associated much with young children have noticed that they are always primarily interested to know what animals eat.

Mr. Michael Guyer, writing in the Pedagogical Seminary, points out the fact that this universal curiosity in regard to an animal's food is the natural first step to a broad and enthusiastic knowledge of animals.

"It is true," says Mr. Guyer, "that a crawfish, in terms of structure, is an astacoid mariscan decapod, but never mind that. What the child is interested in is what and how it eats."

Mr. Guyer suggests that persons who wish to interest their children in animals should begin by answering their questions as to what the animals eat. The next step is how the animals get their food, how they are equipped for their work, whether they lay up food or eat what they need each day, &c. After the food habits of the animal are known, then the child will be interested in its methods of self-protection, its weapons, which may consist in flight, in armor, in color protection, in methods of signalling to its kind, &c. Next comes the animal's home, and the child wants to know whether it lives alone or in a colony, and if in a colony what part of the work each member of the group performs. The animal's means of protecting itself from bad weather will next interest the children.

After the children have become familiar with all the phases of caring for itself which are to be considered in relation to an animal, they may be still further interested by its manner of caring for its young. From the laying of the bird's egg through all the steps of parental instruction to the development of the creature to the mating stage the child will continue to delight in studying the animal if his questions on the actual life of some animal which may be watched are answered by his parents.

Dr. Hodge in "Nature Study and Life" points out the possibility of developing children's natural interest in plant and animal life into an enthusiasm constituting a "safe philosophy of life." And G. Stanley Hall says that in the love and study of nature are rooted the "great human interests of science, art, religion and human history and society."

As to the value of pet animals in child training, all observant persons, as well as those who have made a scientific study of the subject, are agreed. W. Fowler Bucke, writing in an educational publication, says that a genuine interest in a pet dog develops a humane spirit and creates a safeguard against many criminal offences.

Of the dog as a pet Mr. Bucke says:—

At a meeting of the directors Wednesday Secretary Cooper was directed to prepare and furnish a printed advertising matter of all kinds for distribution in the far west.

The chamber is also working in conjunction with the horse guard in an effort to have "Atlanta Day" designated at the Panama-Pacific exposition and that day the guard will play a conspicuous part along with other Atlantaites who accompany them on their special train which leaves Atlanta on July 2 for the month's trip.

Frederic House, of the Atlanta Convention bureau, has opened an office in San Francisco and he will advise in advance the coming of the horse guard and the program for "Atlanta Day" since the horse guard has extended its stay in the city.

Do You Want To Be Well Or Sick

Of course I want to be well. Do you think I am trying to get some stock benefit insurance company? You will look a long while before you will find anybody who will admit that he does not want to be well.

All right, let me put the question in another way. Do you want to be well and enough to take the means of getting well?

Yes, if I knew what the means were. But there is no use of your springing any old shop talk on me about some remedy you know of that will cure this and cure that. I have heard that sort of talk a good many times. It doesn't go with me.

Never mind, I am not going to recommend any remedy. I will just let the other fellow do it who took the remedy. Will you do this the trouble to read it? Here it is:

Rev. E. Cottrill, D.D., a Methodist Episcopal Bishop, says: "I have used Ferris in every case of influenza, colds and coughs, and find it to be one of the most valuable remedies on the market." His address is Holly Springs, Miss.

If you won't believe what the preacher tells you, I guess I shall have to conclude that you want to be sick; that you do not want to be well.

TRICKS IN ALL TRADES

RIVALING the Ancient Greeks and the Legendary Wooden Horse of Troy. The French Red Cross Are Shown Removing the Body of a German Sniper Who, Concealed in a Dummy Horse, Picked Off a Number of the Enemy Before Meeting the Same Fate.

The War Game Has Its Share of Them, as the Pictures on This Page Bear Witness—The Germans Have Been the More Adept at Their Use, Even to a Replica of the Trojan Horse.

ABOUT the opening of the eighteenth century, when the practice of warfare had settled down into an established routine, the word "strategy" in its proper sense was introduced into European military history. It meant, in the words of Moltke, "the practical adaptation of the means placed at a general's disposal to the attainment of the object in view."

new devices, they are interesting as examples of human ingenuity. Take, for instance, the trick played recently by the Germans at Setzles-sur-Ape—a trick similar to that which gave the crafty Greeks entrance into the City of Troy.

Hoping to reduce the number of French infantrymen that barred their advance, the Germans built a dummy horse and in it concealed a sniper. Armed with a powerful rifle, this son of the fatherland picked off quite a few of the enemy before the latter came to realize that there was something mysterious about the animal. A machine gun was trained on the horse, which, although hit many times, neither moved nor fell.

When no more shots came from the direction of the animal, an investigation was begun. The Frenchman was not surprised to find it made of wood. The dead body of the German sniper was discovered when a door in the side of the horse was opened by the French Red Cross.

The English employed like tactics in getting their first troops ashore for the land operations against the Dardanelles. On the day preceding the landing the attention of Turkish patrols was called to a big collier drifting in apparent helplessness toward the shoals which lined the shores near the plains of Troy. While they watched the boat struck bottom, and in the gathering twilight the crew was seen to take to their boats and row hastily toward the sea.

Feeling sure that the stranded vessel would be safe for the night, the Turkish patrols made no attempt to board her; but when they approached again in the morning they were met by a sharp fire from 2,500 British troops, strongly entrenched and supported by a battery of field artillery. These troops had landed during the night from the apparent derelict.

However conspicuous the zebra may be at a circus, one can scarcely distinguish it from the tall grasses and trees in its natural habitat.

This has not been lost sight of by military experts. Along the German East African border the ponies of the soldiers have been dyed with permanganate of potash in order to make them less noticeable in the field.

The British surprised the world along this line when it became known recently that they had provided for a boat zero base, and had painted the vessel in such a peculiar manner as to make its outlines invisible to the enemy.

The capture of a German prisoner at Setzles, after the Teutons had occupied the Champagne district for a number of weeks, revealed the wonderful thoroughness and ingenuity of the Kaiser's fighting forces. When searched a photograph taken from the prisoner confirmed the statement made by a French official in describing the battle at Malancourt Wood.

The photograph showed a helmeted Prussian, in a uniform made of asbestos, spraying liquid pitch to add fuel to the flames already blazing around an opposing trench.

The use of poisonous gases to dislodge a foe is also an innovation of this greatest of all wars.

The gases in question are, of course, peculiarly effective in confined places such as trenches, bombproofs and dugouts. To thwart the Germans British inventive genius has come to the front, helping out to no little extent. As a protection against the gas bombs a special respirator has been adopted. A small valve on top opens as the wearer exhales and shuts automatically as he inhales.

Many other tricks and devices are being used by the contending armies, among them that of placing dummy cannon where they will be seen by the enemy. The object of this is to draw the fire of the enemy so that his exact position may be determined.

REO

ANNOUNCEMENT!

As it seems to be the fashion to make June, or mid-season, announcements, here is Reo's. We will continue to maintain Reo Standards in every regard and in every detail of the product and we will redouble our efforts to make more good Reos in hopes some day to catch up with the demand.

IT WAS THIS POLICY of adhering to the high standards set by Reo in the beginning that placed Reo in the splendid position it occupies today—so that policy will not now, or at any time, be departed from.

REO IS ONE OF THE TWO OR THREE makes of automobiles that enjoy practical immunity from competition—one that can shape its course without regard to anything any other maker may choose, or be forced, to do.

EXPEDIENCY NEVER HAS been a controlling factor in the Reo policy because the product has always been so good that, never since the first Reo left the factory has it been possible to make enough cars to supply all who wanted Reos.

REO POLICY FROM THE FIRST was based on the one idea of permanent satisfaction to the user. And only by building cars of quality regardless of all other considerations could that Reo objective have been attained.

TODAY, PRICES of many materials that go into motor cars are higher than ever before. Leather, steel and all products into which copper enters are higher than when the present prices of the two Reo Models were established.

LOOK UP THE QUOTATIONS and you will learn that that is so.

NOW IT HAS BEEN OUR PLAN to increase the price of Reo cars whenever we felt that, by so doing we could make them better. Reo preference never was based on price but on the quality of the Reo product.

DISCRIMINATING BUYERS have always been glad to pay Reo prices for Reo standards of excellence and the backing of the Reo guarantee—financially second strongest in the world and in integrity—good intent—second to none.

SO AT THIS JUNCTURE the logical thing to do would be to increase the price of both Reo models to make up for the additional cost of manufacture—for materials average higher and cost of labor—as we make Reo cars—is not less than when the present prices were established.

THAT WOULD BE THE LOGICAL MOVE at this time did we believe that the high prices of good materials would obtain for long. But we don't. We believe it is the result of an extraordinary condition and so is only transitory.

OF COURSE THERE WOULD BE another way; namely, to cut the size of the car—wheel base, width and length and depth of seats—and to skimp the quality in countless ways that it could be skimmed. Ways, too, that the average buyer could not see and would not discover for a few months.

BUT THAT IS UNTHINKABLE—such an expedient never has and never could occur to the men who make Reos—the men who set the Reo standard.

NOR WOULD REO BUYERS—that select clientele: that has always shown such a preference for Reo cars—accept such a product at any price.

THEY ARE ACCUSTOMED to wearing real leather shoes—and they will not consent to wearing paper or cloth shoes now just because the price of leather has advanced.

NOR WOULD THESE ACCEPT a car so skimmed in size you could get five full grown adults in only by using a shoe horn! Nor one with a "safety factor" just sufficient to "get by."

THEY HAVE BOUGHT REOS BECAUSE they knew the Reo standard of "50 per cent oversize in all vital parts" could always be depended upon even though the maker had to pay more for steel and other metals.

REO POLICY HAS PAID—it has justified itself in every way that gratifies the hearts of men who like to make honest goods. And it has paid handsomely those who were so wise as to select Reos, for they have found that in all the world there is no other automobile of so low upkeep cost—such wonderful consistency of performance and so few repairs.

TODAY THERE ARE 60,000 Reo the Fifts in use. Think of that number of delighted owners singing the praises of Reo every day. For you never yet met a Reo owner who wasn't a Reo booster. Never one that wasn't more than satisfied—never one that was quite willing to admit that any other make of car could be as good as his Reo.

OF COURSE IF YOU ACCEPT mere "specifications" as value there are several claimants.

BUT IF YOU MEASURE values as they are and compare every detail of design and of construction—the work, as well as the material: if you appraise experience as an asset and the Reo guarantee a bigger one:

AND IF YOU ADD the good intent that you know goes into Reo cars—then Reo The Fifth has no rival, no competitor—no peer. And today there are few who even try to dispute the ground. That field has, by common consent, been yielded to Reo—and Reo quality was the reason.

AND THE NEW REO SIX, "the Six of Sixty Superiorities" is today the most popular Six in America if demand is any criterion.

SO WE'LL CONTINUE to maintain Reo standards in every detail. We'll continue to make Reos just as big and just as good and at the present prices even though prices of some commodities that are vital to the permanent stability of the car have advanced.

THAT IS OUR "ANNOUNCEMENT" and that is our attitude toward the tens of thousands of friends who have bought Reos on the basis of Reo quality and Reo standards of making cars—and of doing business.

WE HAVE TO APOLOGIZE for only one thing in the Reo policy—our inability to make enough to supply you all. And that is because our policy has been never to run after the fleeting phantom of quantities—never to seek the kind of prestige that mere numbers gives—but to make only as many Reos as we could make and make every Reo good.

FOR WE FEEL that every Reo car carries with it the Reo reputation—and so in each car must be incorporated all there is of Reo engineering skill, Reo experience and Reo integrity.

SO IF YOU ARE LUCKY ENOUGH—which means if you hurry and get your order in at once—to get a Reo this season, you'll get that kind of an automobile and at a price that cannot be equalled for the quality—because there is only one concern that makes cars of Reo quality and at Reo prices.

Variety Required in Daily Menu

By DOROTHY DOLAN.

HERE is no place where a woman shows her common sense or her lack of it so much as in planning the weekly menu.

Nearly all vegetables have more or less starch. This is especially true of potatoes. Potatoes are very nourishing because of their starch and, to a certain extent, they make a good substitute for meat.

Green vegetables are also healthy by reason of their water and the mineral matter they contain. This is necessary when you cut down on the daily meat supply.

It is well to serve a large amount of raw vegetables, such as radishes, celery, onions, lettuce, parsley and peas.

After you have considered all the fresh vegetables in the market and the many ways that can be prepared you will find that you can make them into a salad.

It is only by handling the large variety of fruits, vegetables and dairy products that you will begin to realize the importance of giving plenty of variety to your cooking and the endless opportunities that are at hand.

Nature is doing her part by offering you such an abundance of good things to eat. It is up to your judgment and intelligence to make the right use of this splendid bounty.

Because of the limited supply of fresh vegetables and fruits you could have during the winter you have probably depended on meats and desserts until you may perhaps neglect the value of fresh vegetables and fruits in making your daily and Sunday menus.

If you are a judicious housekeeper you will have two vegetables on your table each meal, and when you cut meat from a meal you will feel that you are not doing it.

It is not too late in the season to reduce the amount of meat which you use. It means reducing the expense account, increasing your health and getting a large variety of food.

Novelties In Home Entertainment

DO NOT carry silver toilet articles, but use celluloid, as it is light, and weight is a great factor when packing either bag or trunk.

There should be a case for soap, tooth brush and nail brush, also, of course, a comb and brush, also clothes brush, button hook and manicure things may be selected all of the same pattern and color.

The guests were welcomed on the porch to hear that this corner table, which was set with tables and chairs, with rugs spread down. Several hushbabies made resting places for those who wished them and there was a bowl of delicious fruit punch with a little water of the hostess presiding.

Afterwards the gifts were all packed in the clothes basket and the happy little honoree was escorted home, amid much merriment.

If your parents do not object to your going to see your boy friends I do not see how you can have a birthday party on Friday or Saturday nights, but I do not object to your going to see your boy friends if you wish to.

There is no reason for you to "get mad" if you are not engaged to the young man. It is his place to make the introductions, as the ladies are his guests.

Home Decoration and Furnishing

By MME. MAISON.

OUTDOOR living is now the accepted thing for both town and country, as all modern apartments have sun porches and sleeping porches in many instances, and what a splendid innovation it is.

That of the rustless copper wire is almost invisible, and it wears season after season if given the proper care. And the awnings—how decorative some of them are, when we think of the old blue and white striped ones of our childhood days.

A porch that pleased us immensely had a fireplace on one side, with black andirons and screens. The brick was dull red. It took two 3 by 11 fiber rugs to cover the floor space, leaving a two-foot border of the dull red tile picked out with black showings.

The furniture was gray with a flower stencil in yellow, blue and red, and the table would seat eight and was set with gray crash doilies worked in cross-stitch combining red, black, yellow and blue, and the china carried out the same colors in a conventional design.

Select a little pink and cream striped paper for the northwest bedroom or one of the colonial flower patterns, and use pink and white rag rugs on the floor. On the dresser and washboard have covers of cream canvas or crash worked in a cross-stitch design.

In the west room with the brass bed and white dresser carry out a blue, white and gray color scheme. Say blue and white paper with gray rugs and a bit of blue in the border. White curtains, a blue sundour for overdrapery, will be pleasing.

TALKS WITH THE WOMAN WHO WORKS

THE other day I came upon a winsome young girl, with violet eyes and a perfect bow-shaped mouth, who, as though her heart would break, it was with real difficulty that she explained between tears that she was to have her first two weeks' vacation since she had gone to work.

"It would not be so bad," she explained, "if I did not have one of the nicest invitations in the world. You see, they have a beautiful home in the country, with everything to give a girl a good time. This means a large lake in which to swim and to fish and which to row. There is a golf course and a tennis court, the girls have a small car—in short, everything is ideal but my clothes."

"Foolish child, do not let that stand in your way. If you ever stand in the way of any well-bred girl or woman, by a little tact and management you can get all the pretty toys you need, and even have more than you have room for," I said.

"Don't see how you can talk that way," the young girl answered, no less disheartened than she was at first. "Though my friends want me, they will expect me to do them justice. If I only had a handsome man wearing a wrap to match, and a large fish remarks that she was imbued with—those tyrannical ideas of dress and what good dressing means."

"I agree with Ida Tarbell when she says, 'The dress of dress depends upon line and color. The dress of dress depends upon quality and the relation of cost to one's means.'"

Let us start right in with this first principle. The dress of dress depends upon the occasion. You are not going to a fashionable resort, but to friends in the country. Your setting is perfect to play the part of a summer girl. This means you want outing clothes, and two pretty dinner dresses. A girl with your lovely golden hair, fair complexion and splendid violet eyes will do well to adhere to white and blue.

"There is just one more point for you to remember. That the style of dress depends on the quality and the relation of cost to one's means." You certainly don't want to use up your six months' savings for a fortnight's holiday. Since you have shown enough energy to go to work, you want or should want to be dependent on your own ingenuity and resources. I think that I can help you out if you will only let me.

The violet eyes we had with tears brightened and the serious little mouth broke into a happy smile as she said: "How splendid to really know what I can accept this lovely invitation without using up my hard-earned savings or without begging from mother. I am so glad to get your suggestion, and it is splendid if you want to show me how it can be done."

In one evening we had all our ideas in practical working order and in two weeks' time everything was ready and placed in the suitcase. We began by getting a wrap at two linen outlets and a white and white serge skirt. They were old-fashioned, which meant they were too full and too long. We gave them a modern touch by shortening them, taking out some of the fullness and stitching on belts ornamented with inspensive pearl buckles. We washed the last year's sweater. It was a lovely shade of blue, so it only needed plenty of soap and water to give it new life. She felt she wanted a nobby Eaton jacket to take the place of her sweater for afternoon wear. By watching a sale she paid $8 for her linen. She trimmed the jacket with some lovely embroidery that had been on a waist which had outlived its usefulness.

By adding pearl buttons, new cuffs and collars, and smart bits of ribbon, we made old-fashioned blues up to date and new, and all for $2.

Cream of Tomato Soup, Kidneys and Bacon, French Fried Potatoes, Peas, Lettuce and Tomato Salad, Toasted Crackers, Chocolate Pudding.

Liberate Patties, Cherry Salad, Creamed Potatoes, Cream Cheese, Toasted Crackers, Tea.

Kidneys and bacon—Cut the kidneys in halves, lengthwise. Remove all the fat and skin them. Lay them in cold water for half an hour. Take out and dry them. Cut them crosswise in thin slices. Slice the bacon thin and cut each slice in two pieces. Place a piece of bacon on a skewer, then a piece of kidney, and thus alternate them until you have five pieces of kidney of each on a skewer. Dip the pieces of kidney into melted butter before they are put on the skewer.

Place the skewer on a broiler and hold it over a bright fire, turning frequently until all sides are cooked. When the kidneys are broiled place each skewer on a finger of toast and sprinkle lightly with pepper. Put a tiny bit of butter on each piece of kidney and serve immediately.

Baked pears—Peel and cut the pears in halves and pack as tightly as you can in an earthen jar or casserole. Put in enough sugar to sweeten according to taste. Add half a teaspoonful of water for each pound of pears, a few cloves and two or three bits of lemon rind. Cover the jar carefully and bake in a cool oven for five or six hours. Serve with whipped cream.

Cherry Salad—Wash two cupfuls large cherries. Take out the stones and fill the holes with chopped nut meats. Lay the cherries on white lettuce leaves. Put over it a dressing made of cherry juice, a little lemon juice and plenty of sugar.

Chocolate Fudging—Use one-fourth pound of unwetted chocolate with four cupfuls milk. Stir in the yolks of three eggs and also one-half package gelatin. When cool add the whites beaten well and stir through the pudding. Put in a form. Freeze ice cold with a custard sauce flavored with vanilla.

Apple Custard Pie—Make a quart of strained tart apple sauce. Melt and stir in one-half cupful butter, one cupful sugar and cinnamon. Line a deep plate with a good crust and fill it with a pie mixture. Bake in a moderate oven.

The theme being the story of a woman who loved her husband—how she repented—and of how it was her own fault by contributory circumstances in the form of a clergyman who had a disillusionsed husband and an age young girl, bubbling over with the effervescence of youth, has her impulsive, dwarfed, and her passions blighted by a clergyman father who believes that the business of mortals on earth is to repent. The fact that the repentance must follow sin, down in the least effort the benign clarity of his vision. But the late Fox's modestly amply, and by stealth his daughter marries the man of her choice, a husband rich and devoted. But now her early life of restriction has fastened into an insatiable desire for Folly in a mad and ever madder whirl. He gets dinner parties—dances more dances—and all the rest of the fitting phantoms of life of society. And then through a curious circumstance, she becomes imbued with a desire for motherhood. But here the God of Compensation steps deliberately between her and her obsession—her wife is crushed with the realization. The bigoted father—the life scorning wife—the disillusioned husband—"who pays?"

GOVERNMENT URGED FOR THE AMERICAS

To Supplement Monroe Doctrine and Preserve Integrity of Hemisphere—No More Conquest From Within or Without.

Boston, June 12.—A covenant among all American nations to supplement the Monroe doctrine and preserve the integrity of the western hemisphere was proposed by Senator Santiago Perez...

"In order to secure the whole-hearted support of the Monroe doctrine throughout the length and breadth of the continent," said Sen. Perez, "that doctrine must be extended to the extreme length of its logical development. The Monroe doctrine has closed effectively the continent to European conquest, but it has not prevented the growth of European influence on the continent. I am formulating an indictment, my contention is purely political."

Not Subject for Conquest. "It should be enacted and covenanted among all the nations of the continent that the territory of the American nations is no longer a subject for conquest, either from within or from without."

Such a declaration, as far as the United States is concerned, has already been made by the president; it is not to be supposed that any other republic should be less explicit. Internal inviolability is the essential foundation of inviolability from the outside. The proposition that violence and pillage—that to say, conquest—are inequities in the stranger and virtues in the purchaser, is unworthy to be maintained or accepted by any self-respecting people."

Sen. Perez's speech marked the conclusion of the trip which the delegates have been taking about the country for two weeks. The Colombian delegate was in Boston. The Colombian delegate was in Boston. The Colombian delegate was in Boston.

Justification of Question of Quantity. "This continent," he said, "pledged to the proposition that justice is not a question of quantity, but of essence; that crime cannot become virtue by its increased collectivity; and that there is no human power that can go to the length of the continent."

Looking backward to the history of this land, and to the written precepts of collective life, Sen. Perez said, "The achievements realized, we of the southern half believe in our hearts that such things as you must believe in ours, and we believe in your sincerity of purpose as you must believe in ours, and so we may go hand-in-hand toward the future. We are going to the length of the continent as you are, my lips would be dumb to utter and my heart to break to admiration. We depart now, taking a message of salute to our people."

Sen. Perez referred to the trip just concluded where the delegates of the "hallowed ground" where the declaration of independence was signed, "where Lincoln's spirit hovers" and where the "spirit of the land" and the "spirit of the slave" that they had been told, he said that the territory traversed was...

MANY WAR PAINTINGS IN THE ROYAL ACADEMY

Great Conflict Furnishes Inspiration to the Artists and Sculptors.

London.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—This year's Royal Academy exhibition of paintings and sculptures shows in marked fashion the influence of the war upon the art world. A considerable proportion of the exhibits deal with war subjects, although the critics find little that they regard as of lasting merit.

Another sign of war, somewhat removed from the battlefield, is seen in the art world. The Royal Academy exhibition of paintings and sculptures shows in marked fashion the influence of the war upon the art world. But is Arabella Rich?
Dear Mr. Editor: I notice you have been a person by the name of Fanny Pantall to carry on the destructive criticism of the picture 'The Grand' drama of the day. Don't you think that the moving picture business is worth more than you think it is, with our own Charles Chaplin and his fellows who write every Sunday, without having to tolerate a female leech like Fanny Pantall. Her name is not mine. She evidently intends to pan it all. She must have married young and lost her optimism early. The world would be a whole lot better if there were fewer Fanny Pantalls. The moving picture business was getting along all right without her interference. The Fanny Pantall had better 'water' out—otherwise she'll ruin the noblest and most uplifting industry since the day soap was invented.
I know whereof I speak.

Chaplinism.
Charley Chaplin waddles three steps, turns and grins, and millions of people laugh. He tips his hat in a burlesque way and they all laugh and laugh. The mere sight of his foot in a pair of kicking trousers sends a shiver of mirth.
The billions of laughs that have been showered upon Charley Chaplin come with the billions of nickels they have harvested—to erect a universal monument to the simplicity of wit.
The very essence of Charley Chaplin is simplicity.
There is something about the man which he waddles off of a distance, then turns to grin naively at the camera, that calls to mind the picture of an infant, impossibly toddling away from its mother, looking back to see if she is still watching.
The world of art needs a severe attack of Chaplinism. It makes a million people laugh by the simple process of walking awkwardly, yet when he goes through the most carefully planned, skillfully executed series of contortions, somehow the same laughter flows.
Somebody is insured in him, yet it is a childish sort of comedy that often stand the interference of technique, dramatic rules or stage traditions. Charley Chaplin must be his quaint little self, otherwise he diverts.
He has often been asked to explain

Two Well-Known Picture Stars

ALAMO NO. 2 Fox Film Managers Called to Chicago To Discuss Plans

Monday, the Alamo No. 2 will present Myrtle Tannehill, the international star, in the three-act feature production "When the Mind Sleeps." Other interesting releases will be a splendid five-reel Mutual Masterpiece, "On the Night Stage" for Wednesday, starring the well-known favorite William S. Hart.

Tuesday, Anita Stewart and Earle Williams will continue to delight audiences in the fifth episode of "The Goddess."

Thursday, "His Father's Rifle," a sensational wild animal picture, will be shown at the Colosseum theater.

In this Alamo Broadway favorite offering, "When the Mind Sleeps," a peculiar kind of scientific horror is depicted. The story concerns the half-witted young woman, who is left as a ward of a hostily-minded clubman. The girl escapes from her evil surroundings and wanders about until she comes to the sanitarium of a doctor, who has found that by using a drug, he can stimulate clouded wits to clearness.

The story-play brings to the moving picture world an entirely new theme, handled in a very sparkling manner by Miss Tannehill and her splendid supporting cast.

Maria Cahill, who is starring in "Daisy Power" for the Universal program, is wildly enthusiastic about her new work. This is her first film appearance, and she is as happy as a little girl with her doll. Lawrence Marston, her director, has had some elaborate stage settings built for this play, one of which is a theater set, which, according to Best Adler, manager of the Copleyville studio, is the best ever seen.

Field Notes.
That Bud Duggan, the "Bill" of Kalem's "Ham" comedies is a prime favorite with the juvenile photography patron is apparent by the letters he receives from the youngsters. The latter demand to know whether he is a real grow-up, or a boy merely playing a man's role; whether his parents raised any objections when he decided upon a motion picture career, and a thousand and one similar questions. As a matter of fact, Bud has been on the stage for more years than he cares to count. Part of "Ranley's Road Show" in "The White Terror" comedy, which was produced upon the first anniversary of his photography career.

Sydney Goldin is producing a one-reel drama by David Cleveland, featuring Frances Nelson, the beautiful Imp star.

Snapshots.
Mary Fuller as "Jeane of the Woods" is a charming child of nature, the only picture of a girl in this beautiful play which was written by William Addison Lathrop. Charles Ogle is also in the cast.

"Sons in Pawn" is the thrilling title of Anthony Sforzo's new play which has been featured. It is in two reels.

Clarence Badger has completed another—number six of the series—"Lads, Rufus and Detective Duck" comedy for the Grand. "Lads, Rufus and Detective Duck" and between shows these fun-makers have been extremely busy applying the principles of jurisprudence to bring the trials to justice.

The Universal-Animated Weekly has again proven its supremacy by securing the only picture of the "Lions" hand-picked in Louisville, Ky., at which the Grand is showing. The picture is the Kentucky Handicap contested by the nation's best horses.

The weekly also filmed pictures of the famous jockey, "Point in Time," which general admirals playing future generals an exciting game before a notable assembly.

Rosemary Theby and Harry Myers have just finished two great pictures, "The Bathing Suit Salesman" and "The Bathing Suit Salesman." Both comedies are of the "Lads, Rufus and Detective Duck" type, but the usual good interesting features which characterize all of the Victor pictures.

Barbara Tennant, in "Marked Woman," Portrays Role of Russian Nihilist.

Three famed World Film releases will be shown at the Victoria this week. With a program of such attractiveness, it is difficult to select the best feature. The other two being "Lola," in which Clara Kimball Young is starring, and "A Russian Woman," in which Barbara Tennant plays the title role.

Emma Dunn will be seen Wednesday in the title role of the play, "Mother," by Jules Eckert Goodman. Miss Dunn portrays the main role in the film version as she did on the regular stage. The picture has been praised highly by experts as one of the finest feature plays in which a star has been seen. Barbara Tennant's play, "The Wishing Ring," will be wonderful character will never be forgotten by those who once came under its spell of utter naturalness and fine simplicity.

The other Owen Davis play, "The Marked Woman," will be the attraction Monday, with beautiful Barbara Tennant in the role of a young Russian nihilist, Olga Petroff.

Unusual Record as Student Made by This Georgia Boy

Graduating last Tuesday with first honor in a class of ninety from the Johns Hopkins medical school, Baltimore, Thomas M. Rivers, of Jonesboro, Ga., a son of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Rivers and a nephew of E. Rivers, of Atlanta, made the phenomenal record of taking three first honors in the three institutions of higher education which he has attended.

Dr. Rivers, as he becomes following the recent receipt of his Johns Hopkins degree, stood at the head of a class of ninety students, every one of whom went there from class A colleges and universities in all parts of the United States.

The Future Student.
This record gives him the choice of all appointments offered by the institution to its graduates. He has elected to pursue higher medical studies at Johns Hopkins for a period of two years. The first year will be devoted to general medicine and the second specializing in diseases and complaints of children, which he proposes to make his life work.

Not only did Mr. Rivers take a high stand in his class, but he is personally popular with his fellow students and associates, as is indicated by his recent election as president of the fraternal class, a distinguished honor coming from the student body. He began his education in the schools of Jonesboro, Ga., and his graduation from the Jonesboro academy he stood at the head of his class. From there he went to Emory college, Oxford, and graduated with first honor in 1912. In the fall of 1912 he went to Johns Hopkins university with a determination to continue his class-leading record. After remaining there for two years he served for a like period as assistant pathologist in the St. Thomas hospital in Baltimore, Md., and returned to Johns Hopkins in 1914. He has now completed his four-year period.

Offered Positions.
When the class standing was posted for the first time, Christmas, 1914, for the four-year period, he stood at the top of his class, and has remained there. He has been offered most attractive positions in leading Baltimore hospitals, but declines them in order to finish his medical education along the lines upon which he has determined.

Friends and relatives are exceedingly proud of the splendid record this young Georgian has made. His first honor at Johns Hopkins has resulted in his election to membership in the Phi Kappa Beta, national honor society, composed of honor graduates of higher institutions and also in the Alpha Omega Alpha society, which is the national honor society in veterinary surgery and additional instructors and equipment.

The growth of the college in public health and in the department of the cordial support of the institution is earnestly solicited.

Smith-Lever Funds Needed For College of Agriculture

Legislature Should Take Prompt Action in Matter, Says President Soule.

In his report to the board of trustees of the State College of Agriculture and Forestry, Dr. Andrew Soule, president of the institution, stresses the necessity of impressing on the legislature the need for prompt action to secure the Smith-Lever bill appropriations for extension work in Georgia to reach thousands more of the farmers of the state who are now bereft for the advantages the state college offers.

Attendance a Record.
Dr. Soule reports 712 students enrolled during the past year, 171 in the college of engineering and science and 541 in the college of agriculture. There are 22 more new men than last year and 21 graduated this year, five times as many as in 1910. The higher standards of entrance requirements has not diminished the registration.

The broadening scope of extension work under the Smith-Lever plan will give places to many graduates who are in demand. Some of the sixteen graduates of the college are now county agents for the government. In the forestry service several have taken government work, and there is demand for more men for the service.

In classes to arrange a course looking to a degree in veterinary surgery, and also a degree in agriculture, in addition to the degrees now conferred.

Just 159 boys and 70 girls have taken the short courses at the college, scholarships given as prizes by the bankers' association, the railroads, and others. It is cited that the corn clubs of the state, existing ten thousand boys last year, have been largely instrumental in increasing the corn yield per acre in the state from ten bushels to eighteen bushels—twenty million bushels annually. There are in the corn, canning, and pig clubs in 143 of the 148 counties of the state, 18,000 boys and girls enlisted. Demonstration work is being done in 18 schools with 117 men and women employed in the year and 124 persons taking the meetings held over the state during the year.

Appreciating the work of the county agent, business men, farmers, educators and chambers of commerce, subscribed $10,000 to the work of maintaining the agents. Another ten of printing the enormous work of the college in the fact that 2,322,000 pieces of printed matter were sent out to parties asking various bulletins and special expert articles.

Track-Sum Co-Operative.
The college is co-operating with the federal department in many counties of the state in soil survey, counties, in plant industry, soil work in dairy, pig and poultry club work, hog cholera control, co-operative work with the state agricultural department, also being prosecuted along several lines and the chambers of commerce of Atlanta, Macon and Columbus.

This extension work will be added to for the first year of the Smith-Lever system, if the legislature makes that fund from the federal government available in Georgia, by the sum of $128,000.

The receipts from the college farm for the year were $19,726.60, a slight decrease from the year 1914. The receipts from the dairy were $100 more than for 1914. The profit on the dairy farm was $2,867, and on the dairy $2,256.

The property owned by the college by inventory is reported at $422,822. Full reports are made on the college farm, live stock, the poultry plant, the new greenhouses, the campus, the department activities, the departments of agronomy, animal husbandry, forestry, horticulture, agricultural chemistry, veterinary science, farm machinery, poultry husbandry, extension and demonstration work, the extent of office and student activities.

Attention is called to several pressing needs of the college: More class

NAVY HAS NO LURE FOR ATLANTA YOUTHS

Although the local office of the navy recruiting service has been in position to take recruits for the United States naval reserve since April 1, there have been no enlistments to date, despite several applications.

An enlistment in the naval reserve is for four years, and at the end of that time if a member of the reserve desires to re-enlist he must have spent two months time aboard a United States ship of war in one of those years.

AUTOMOBILE TAX LAWS DEFERRED BY GRICE

Attorney General Fights Injunction Sought by Motorists of Savannah.

Savannah, Ga., June 12.—(Special.)—The validity of the state automobile tax was defended by Warren Grice, attorney general of the state, today when the petition for injunction of automobile owners and motorists to prevent the enforcement of the registration and fee ordinance was on for a hearing before Judge Charlton in the superior court.

Mr. Grice defended the law with numerous decisions and authorities touching on certain points. He claimed, first, that the injunction proceeding is not the proper remedy in a criminal case.

Each of these points was elaborated upon. With reference to the claim that the body of the act covers matters not referred to in the caption, he said the act received the careful attention of the governor. It was referred to Thomas S. Felner, who passed upon it, and the commission which had jurisdiction as to its constitutionality.

In elaborating upon his contention, Mr. Grice declared that courts of equity will not strain the scope of an act of a criminal statute, and that the case does not fall within the scope of any of the exceptions. The complainants cannot seek relief by injunction because they are about to be arrested.

Each of these points was elaborated upon. With reference to the claim that the body of the act covers matters not referred to in the caption, he said the act received the careful attention of the governor. It was referred to Thomas S. Felner, who passed upon it, and the commission which had jurisdiction as to its constitutionality.

NO ACTION TAKEN AGAINST LANFORD BY POLICE CHIEF

Although officially criticized by Mayor James G. Woodard and others at the last board meeting of the police commission, Chief Lanford has taken no action on the written charges of Station Sergeant Roberts against Detective Chief Stewart Lanford that Lanford had cursed him (Roberts), Chief of Police James H. Beavers last night announced that he would not suspend Chief Lanford pending his trial by the board on next Tuesday night.

"I am trying to do the right thing," the chief said, in explanation of his refusal to suspend Chief Lanford. "Although Roberts' charges were handed to the board at its last meeting, the detective chief did not suspend because Roberts' charges were not returned to the board as required by the law. He has now returned them, and the board will take up the matter at its next meeting."
