

BERNARDIS JAILED BY UNITED STATES PRES CHARGES Former Dictator and Five Other Men Arrested at El Paso After the Flight of Gen. Pascual Orozco. DEEP ANGER SHOWN BY GENERAL HUERTA

El Paso, July 3.—Victoriano Huerta, one time dictator of Mexico, was in jail here tonight in company with five other men arrested with him today, on fresh charges of conspiracy to overthrow the neutrality of the United States. His other men, arrested earlier in the week on similar charges, were at liberty on bond, but the whereabouts of General Pascual Orozco, was a source of anxiety to federal officials.

Orozco eluded six guards at his local residence and disappeared early in the day. He is supposed to have climbed through a back window, dodged the shrubbery, then made his way to an automobile. Reports early tonight had him at various points on both sides of the border, ready to lead armed followers against the Villa garrison at Juarez. Federal officials pointed out that they really had no information that Orozco would not appear in court here July 12, when his case is called for arraignment. Their chagrin at his disappearance, nevertheless, was patent.

General Huerta's incarceration was caused by inability to furnish a $10,000 bail in addition to the bonds of like amount under which he was released after his arrest at El Paso. The general assistant federal attorney, failed in an attempt to arrange for Huerta's bond set at $100,000.

Lack of bail of $100,000 tonight kept behind the bars also General Ignacio Bravo and Jose Delgado—taken with Huerta—and General Eduardo Arce, J. B. Rafter, Huerta's interpreter, and Enrique Gonzalez, his secretary, arrested earlier in the day. The other alleged conspirators who were released on bond earlier in the week were General Aldegre, Frank Alderete, Jose Koszyna and Michael Hernandez.

THE RUSSIANS

One German Cruiser Driven Ashore and Four Others Put to Flight—Slight Damage to Russ Ships.

Petrograd, July 3.—(Via London.)—When the Russian navy squadron in the Baltic gave battle to five German cruisers and a flotilla of torpedo boats off the coast of Gotland July 1, 1915, the Russian fleet was victorious. One German cruiser was driven ashore and four others were put to flight. The damage to the Russian cruisers, the statement says, was insignificant.

The morning of July 2 along the Baltic coast, a German light cruiser and two enemy light cruisers and some torpedo boats engaged them in battle. At 9 o'clock in the morning a German cruiser, badly damaged, lowered her flag and ran ashore. The other cruiser and the torpedo boats fled. The Russian fleet was victorious.

'Who Did It,' 'Cried Holt,' 'He Did It'

HOLT IS SON-IN-LAW OF M. E. PREACHER

His Wife Is Daughter of Rev. O. F. Sensabaugh, of Dallas—Holt of German Descent and Sympathizes With Germany.

Dallas, Texas, July 4.—Frank Holt, of Dallas, who today shot and wounded J. P. Morgan, was described tonight by his father-in-law, Rev. O. F. Sensabaugh, as a man who "thought deeply on the European war," and who was "opposed to all war and all strife."

The Rev. Mr. Sensabaugh is presiding elder of the Dallas district Methodist Episcopal church, and is well known here. He never advocated violence, however, said Mr. Sensabaugh. "Frank was born in Wisconsin. I cannot remember the name of the town. He was of German descent, and was closely associated with the German element at Cornell, and naturally his sympathies were with Germany, but above all, he desired peace."

Mr. Sensabaugh declared that "temporary insanity must have caused the explosion of the bomb which he fired." "Frank has overworked himself fearfully this summer, preparing for his duties this fall," he added.

To Take Chair in University. Holt was to become head of the finance department of French at the Southern Methodist university here, which opened its doors for the first time this fall.

Told that Holt had confessed to setting the bomb which exploded in the national capitol last night, Mr. Sensabaugh exclaimed: "That can't be true."

"Oh, I begged him not to go to New York this summer," he added. "He has just overworked himself."

Mr. Sensabaugh today received the telegram from Glen Cove, which press dispatches said Holt had sent her. "None of Holt's family in Dallas would accept newspaper men, except Mr. Sensabaugh, Mrs. Holt and her two children, one 2 years old, and the other only 1 month, spent the afternoon secluded by Mr. Sensabaugh's home, where they have been residing pending the arrival here of Holt."

Mr. Sensabaugh tonight still expressed the hope that it might not be his son-in-law who shot Mr. Morgan. "Frank has not answered any of my telegrams," he said, adding that the telegram to Mrs. Holt "might be the work of some one else."

MAN WHO SHOT MORGAN ALSO PLACED BOMB

Following one of the sticks which Holt had in his pocket, he took out with his pen knife a bottle of sulphuric acid in the neck of which there was inserted a cork carefully measured and of a kind previously tested—such as the bomb which Holt placed in the senate wing of the capitol at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Holt was observed by Glen Cove, Texas, who testified that the acid would set its way through the cork in about eight hours. Therefore, he estimated that the bomb would explode about midnight. He wanted to make certain, he said, that it would explode, so he took a stroll yesterday afternoon. Holt was observed by several blocks away from the capitol, and waited there until he heard the explosion.

Then he boarded a train to New York, arriving there he left little time in taking another train for Glen Cove. Several sticks of the dynamite left over from the making of the Washington bomb, were in his suit case, and these he took with him.

At first the police thought the dynamite played a minor role in his plot to assassinate Mr. Morgan. When they listened in undisturbed amazement, to the story he told of the Washington bomb's construction, they concluded that he possessed a knowledge of explosives far beyond that of the ordinary bombmaker.

THIRD DEGREE MADE HIM TALK. Under the third degree Holt talked freely of his bomb making. Without much persuasion he had openly admitted earlier in the day that he had planted the Morgan bomb with the intention of remaining there until Mr. Morgan made his munitions.

The man who unfolded this unusual story of bomb-making and assassination talked coolly and with dramatic frankness. He is an American citizen, native born, about 27 years old and educated far above the average. He had been a student at Cornell, he said, and later an instructor there in French. Records show he taught German instead. Next autumn he had expected to be the head of the department of French at the Southern Methodist university at Dallas, Texas.

His wife, a daughter of O. F. Sensabaugh, presiding elder of the Dallas district of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, is with her father-in-law in Dallas. She was married in Amarillo in 1910, where Mr. Sensabaugh was then stationed. Holt speaks French, Spanish, Italian, German and Russian and has studied in Berlin, Paris and Mexico City, Mr. Sensabaugh said.

TAUGHT AT VANDERBILT. Nashville, Tenn., July 1.—Frank Holt was engaged at Vanderbilt university one year as instructor in romance languages. He taught French for the season of 1914-15, and was president of the club at the conclusion of his engagement. "Vanderbilt who were associated with him were engaged

Shot While at Breakfast

J. PIERPONT MORGAN, JR.

Attempt made to assassinate the New York financier by a man calling himself Frank Holt, who says he is a college professor. Holt claims that Morgan is responsible for continuance of the war because he is aiding in the export of munitions to the allies.

A terrific blow on the head—a blow that knocked him unconscious as he grappled with Mr. Morgan—was dealt in the Morgan home—was great, and the strain told on him.

When night came, and with it his confession of the Washington outrage, Holt was a wreck. He huddled back in a corner of his cell, breathing hard and apparently comatose. However, detectives refused to let him rest. They dragged him out to the corridor, and walked him up and down until his stumbling feet dragged helplessly.

THIRD DEGREE MADE HIM TALK. Under the third degree Holt talked freely of his bomb making. Without much persuasion he had openly admitted earlier in the day that he had planted the Morgan bomb with the intention of remaining there until Mr. Morgan made his munitions.

described it. As a missile of terror it was said to be unique in the annals of the New York police department.

"I was walking around the streets in New York trying to make my mind to come out here today and do my duty," that was all I was thinking it over."

When Holt was told that the Mills hotel clerks had recalled seeing him there yesterday, he still stuck to his story.

When the newspaper reporters left, Justice Luyster and Captain Tunney began to question him. They soon obtained his confession, they asserted.

war and blood money. This explosion is the exclamation point to my appeal for the source of the explosion. I offer a proposal for a referendum. I will accept it, I believe, if it is carried out. The letter was typewritten and was not written by a man. The handwriting apparently was not that of any one of the great conspirators.

Perpetrated by Crank. A fragment of a chloride of silver tray was found in the capitol grounds about one hundred feet from the source of the explosion. Professor Moore said it might have been used to explode an infernal machine.

WILLING TO DIE TO WIN THE WAR

Declares Morgan's Assault—Holt Says He is of German Descent and Holds Morgan Responsible for War.

Glen Cove, N. Y., July 3.—Mr. Morgan's assault is declared by officials at the courthouse here, where he was taken, to have said he was of German descent and that he was willing to give up his life at any time to end the war and win the triumph of arms abroad and that he could stop the war.

Justice of the Peace Luyster questioned the prisoner. Holt also was asked to say where he came from. He said he was from Glen Cove, N. Y., and that he was of German descent.

and, Son, Just One More Word

Like all red-blooded men you have a natural desire for stimulants. At times, you will actually feel the need of them.

I am fifty-five years young and all my life I have drunk beer—temperately. That fact is largely responsible for my present rugged constitution.

I want you to pattern after me. Whenever you feel the need of a glass of beer, drink it. It's the drink of real temperance. Those people you meet up with in life who tell you total abstinence is temperance are deceiving themselves.

You, like all good men, have a perfect right to drink beer moderately. In the ranks of the men who confine their drinking to mild, healthful beer, you will find the best definition of real temperance.

Eastman Prepares Big Time For Press Meet Next Week

Largest Gathering in History of Association Is Expected on Monday, July 12.

Eastman, Ga., July 3.—(Special)—The probabilities are that the meeting of the Georgia Weekly Press association, to be held in this city on July 12, 13 and 14, will be the most largely attended in all the history of the association and that Eastman will have a royal welcome for all who come, goes without saying.

At a meeting held at the home of Mrs. J. H. Miller, the executive committee of the Georgia Weekly Press association met to discuss the details of the coming convention.

Eastman is anxious to have in the best condition possible every section of the city. To this end the city council has passed a resolution to have a Clean-Up day by a proclamation of the mayor and council.

LIBERTY BELL GOES ACROSS CONTINENT

Precious Relic of Revolution Will Start Tomorrow From Philadelphia for the Panama-Pacific Exposition

Philadelphia, July 2.—The Liberty Bell, precious relic of the American revolution, will start Monday on its eighth and longest journey from Philadelphia since it was first rung in the old state house of the Province of Pennsylvania in 1776.

The journey to San Francisco the Liberty Bell special train will traverse Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, Arizona, New Mexico, Oregon and California.

At sunrise on Monday workmen will take the bell to the special train and put it on the special hanger that supports it. The bell will be wheeled on a truck into Independence Square, where it will be on display to the public.

The train will consist of a baggage car, dining, three Pullman passenger cars for the reception of guests en route and a car for the Liberty Bell. The bell will be in a specially constructed car at the sides and ends. American flags and there will be other decorations in the car.

The special committee in charge of the journey announced that in Lansing the bell will be cracked in two. The crack will be in the top of the bell. The crack will be in the top of the bell.

LESSON FROM GERMANY

Developed Water Power and Gets Nitrates From Air.

From Wesley's Weekly.

If Germany had not developed her water power, with a view to obtaining nitrates from the air, the European war would be over today and Germany would be a second-rate nation.

The very large factories, operated by Germany, are producing nitrates for the manufacture of all the explosives used by Germany to carry on the war.

More and more the war of modern times is being fought on the supply of ammunition. The more ammunition a nation has, the more powerful it is.

A Prosperous Year

The Third National Bank has had a prosperous year. It is evidenced in the raising of its annual dividend from 6 to 8 per cent, and the increase of its surplus and undivided profits to more than $950,000.

Its prosperity is based not only upon its security, but upon its extensive facilities for, and careful and satisfactory methods of, transacting business.

Little girls rarely bobbing and the little boys only moving to applaud Lord Fauntleroy vociferously when he appeared on his pony, and when he made friends with the big dog and the boot-

AMERICA'S SHARE IN FEEDING WORLD

United States Has Exported Foodstuffs Valued at $724,000,000 in 11 Months Ending June 1.

Washington, July 3.—The share of the United States in feeding the world, a task vastly increased by the European war, was disclosed in the annual report of the department of commerce. Foodstuffs valued at $724,000,000 were exported during the eleven months ending June 1. This was the principal factor in the nation's billion dollar foreign trade balance.

The effect of the war is seen in the enormous increase in the value of foodstuff exports compared with the figures for the same period of the year ago, when the total was $448,000,000. Wheat forms the largest item in foodstuffs sent abroad. In all, 239,000,000 bushels of wheat were exported during the eleven months ending June 1. This was the principal factor in the nation's billion dollar foreign trade balance.

Flour exports were valued at $241,000,000, an increase of $28,000,000 over the same period of the year ago. Wheat exports were valued at $122,000,000, an increase of $12,000,000 over the same period of the year ago. Corn exports were valued at $100,000,000, an increase of $10,000,000 over the same period of the year ago.

Meat and Dairy Products. A statement of the meat and dairy products exports issued by the department of commerce shows that the value of meat exports for the eleven months ending June 1 was $180,000,000, an increase of $18,000,000 over the same period of the year ago.

Meat and Dairy Products. A statement of the meat and dairy products exports issued by the department of commerce shows that the value of dairy exports for the eleven months ending June 1 was $100,000,000, an increase of $10,000,000 over the same period of the year ago.

Meat and Dairy Products. A statement of the meat and dairy products exports issued by the department of commerce shows that the value of other foodstuffs exports for the eleven months ending June 1 was $100,000,000, an increase of $10,000,000 over the same period of the year ago.

COTTON CONSUMPTION BY FOREIGN FACTORIES

American Consuls Are to Furnish Telegraphic Reports Each Month.

Washington, July 3.—Monthly telegraphic reports from American consuls on foreign cotton consuming districts, giving the mill consumption of cotton, cotton spinnings in operation and cotton and cotton goods on hand, have been ordered sent to Washington for the use of the American cotton interests.

In announcing this today, the department of commerce stated that with these reports and the elaborate domestic reports issued by the census bureau, the authority will be afforded a most scientific basis, commensurate with the large interests involved, on the subject of the export and its most valuable crop, exporting cotton.

Reports on cotton production also have been ordered from American consuls at Alexandria, Egypt; Bombay, India; Calcutta, Persia; Moscow, Russia; Cebu, Manila, and Shanghai, China, the principal centers of production of cotton outside of the United States.

Foreign consuls have provided production and consumption of cotton. The foreign data used heretofore have been from miscellaneous sources and obtained by correspondence. Consular reports have collected a portion of the information. In the future the interest that has existed in some respects in the past will be minimized.

The governments of India, Egypt and Russia compile and publish information of acreage and production from time to time, and it is desired that the Indian government propose to establish a system for concentrating the basic information. There has been a growing demand for the collection in other important cotton producing and cotton consuming countries of information regarding the state similar to that compiled for the United States. Its value is emphasized by the fact that a very large proportion of the crop in this country is consumed by foreign countries.

"Red Light" Law Valid. Washington, July 3.—The Kentucky "red light" law, by which the segregated district here was abolished, was pronounced constitutional today by the district supreme court.

Washington, N. C., July 3.—More than 10,000 people attended the unveiling today of an equestrian statue of General Nathaniel Greene on the Guilford Courthouse battlefield near this place. The statue was erected by the United States government at a cost of $20,000 and is located in the southeast corner of the famous spot where General Greene commanded the Continental troops.

Just preceding the unveiling, addresses were made by representatives from several of the original thirteen states, including the following: Maryland at Guilford Courthouse, George S. Gathier, of Baltimore; "The Delaware Troops," the Blue Hen's Chickens in the Southern Campaign, Judge Henry C. Conrad, of the supreme court of Delaware; Nathaniel Green as a Citizen of Georgia, G. O. Greer, president of the senate of Georgia; South Carolina and North Carolina in the Campaign of 1781, Lieutenant Governor Hodges, of South Carolina; Washington, Virginia, Cavalry in the Revolution, Arthur B. Sweeney, of Virginia; General Nathaniel well B. Burdick, of Rhode Island.

At the conclusion of the address the procession, with Lieutenant Henry Mills, of the Vermont Continental military organization of East Greenwich, moved across the battlefield to the monument draped in American flags. The monument was unveiled by two local descendants of General Greene, Mr. Alvin Starke Moore, of Providence, R. I., and G. W. Greene, of Providence, R. I.

Some historians have declared General Greene the ablest soldier of the revolution, next to Washington. During the latter part of the American civil war, the struggle for independence General Greene, who many victories over the British forces in the Carolinas with the aid of General Marion, Sumter and Pickens. It was after these reverses that Cornwallis decided to transfer his activities to Virginia. The result was his surrender at Yorktown on October 19, 1781, which virtually ended the war.

Stomach Trouble Solved

Most stomach troubles are not diseases. The stomach is simply weak. Tired out. The right kind of a tonic is what is needed. A few meals, well digested, will furnish natural strength. That is what a tonic will do for you. It will start the stomach going right. Then the stomach will take care of itself.

THE ONLY NEUTRAL WAR BOOK

PRESENTATION BY THE CONSTITUTION

Realizing the great popular need and desire for an absolutely unbiased story of the great European conflict, the leading newspapers of America have combined in a gigantic undertaking to put into the homes of all thinking people a volume, written without fear or favor of any nationality engaged in the greatest war the world has ever seen.

This newspaper has been selected to distribute to the people of this city and vicinity its share of the first stupendous edition of "THE NATIONS AT WAR," a timely illustrated volume, completely covering the first six months of this epoch-making struggle. No expense has been spared to make this the most elaborate and profusely illustrated history ever published.

WILLIS J. ABBOT, the well-known author of books on international subjects, was chosen as editor-in-chief, assisted by an experienced staff of able writers, artists and photographers, who have graphically and accurately portrayed every important event exactly as it occurred.

The public generally will welcome this authentic and unbiased volume, free from the many contradictions and distortions of the wired news as it has been thus far published in the press of the country.

Every person, regardless of nationality or descent, must have this NEUTRAL history of the great conflict—a reference volume always at hand, free from prejudice or bias.

First Day of Distribution WEDNESDAY

This beautiful big volume will be handed out to our readers beginning Wednesday morning, and the distribution will continue daily until the allotment acquired by this paper has been entirely taken.

One Coupon

Simply bring to the office of this paper one coupon, printed on another page of this issue, with the small amount of 8 cents, partially to cover the expenses of clerk hire, express from factory, checking and other items necessary for the handling of this edition, and secure, without further cost, this big, illustrated $3 volume.

Colored Illustrations

Nothing like it has ever before been attempted. This first six months' story of the war contains the largest number of beautiful pictures ever gotten together, many of which cost hundreds of dollars. The many full-page color plates are reproduced from original photographs by the four-color process, the most approved form of color reproduction. Mere words cannot adequately describe the surpassing beauty of this wonderful book, which contains almost 500 pages of text and about 500 maps and photographic reproductions in color and monotone.

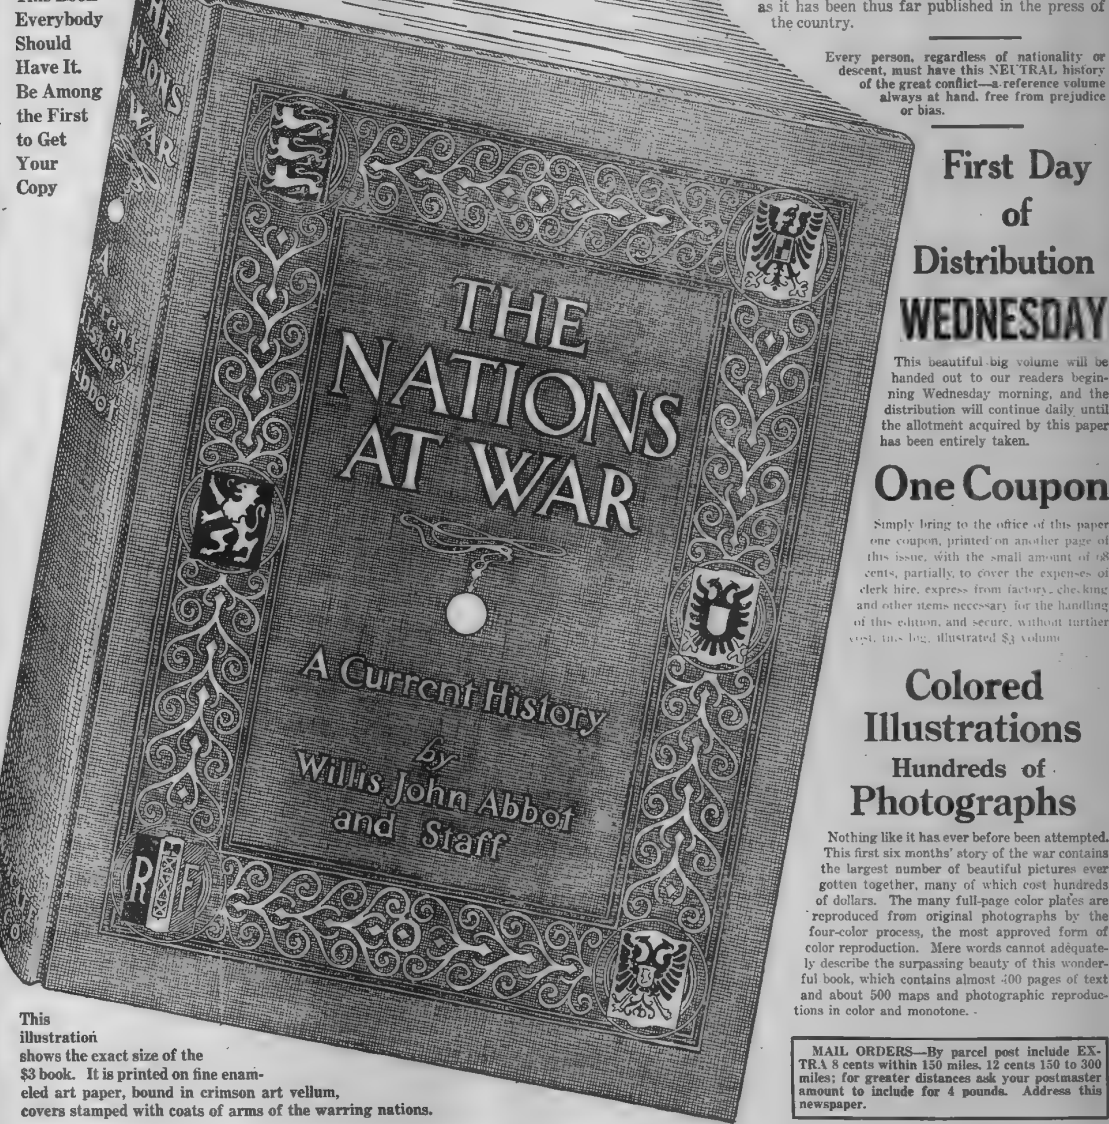

MAIL ORDERS—By parcel post include EXTRA 8 cents within 150 miles, 12 cents 150 to 300 miles; for greater distances ask your postmaster amount to include for 4 pounds. Address this newspaper.

Dodge Brothers Motor Car advertisement. Includes text: 'There is no shortage in the general motor car market. But there is a shortage of Dodge Brothers motor cars. It is not due to a small production, because the production has been large. Twenty thousand of these cars have been distributed since January 1st. This means a production in six months as large as is usually attained in as many years. And yet there is a waiting list of those who want to be owners in your city. And there is a similar waiting list in almost every city and almost every town. You will bear witness that we have made no extravagant claims for the car. We have merely insisted on its goodness. And still the car continues to be singled out as one worth waiting for. DODGE BROTHERS, DETROIT. J. W. Goldsmith, Jr., 46 East North Avenue, Atlanta. The price of the car complete is $785 f.o.b. Detroit. Come Now for Your Demonstration. JOHN M. SMITH CO., Distributors. F. W. NORTHCUTT, Sales Manager. JOHN E. SMITH, President. CHANDLER MOTOR CAR COMPANY, Manufacturers, CLEVELAND, OHIO.

Chandler Light Six, $1295 advertisement. Includes text: 'No "Skipping" Anywhere in the Chandler Light Six, $1295. CHANDLER reputation doesn't rest on the fact that this was the first light-weight six selling for less than $2000. It doesn't rest on the fact that the Chandler pioneered the light-six field when all the rest of the industry was insisting that sixes had to be high-priced and heavy. Chandler reputation rests primarily on the marvelous Chandler motor, Chandler comfort and economy and the fact that the Chandler has never been "skipped" either in quality of materials or character of equipment. Each part of the Chandler is as good as every other part, and the character of the whole car is reflected in its equipment. Now study this equipment. Note it carefully, item by item. Realize that each feature is first choice of its kind. Any two or three of the following equipment features found on the Chandler would make a "talking point" for the average car. All of them are on the Chandler: Bosch Magneto, admittedly the best ignition. Goide Patent One-Man Top, covered with genuine Nevekerk. Jilly Curtains. Genuine Hand-buffed Leather Upholstery. Warner Magneto Speedometer. Instantly Adjustable Tire-carrier at rear of tonneau, without straps. Auxiliary seats in tonneau that, with one movement of the hand, are folded away from the back of the front seats entirely out of sight. The greatest improvement in seven-passenger construction. All miscellaneous items of general equipment. And above all the Marvelous Chandler Motor powerful, quiet, economical and beautifully finished—a motor to be proud of. Then Think of the Price, $1295 Seven-Passenger Towing Car and Roadster.

Southern League Fielding Marks Are About Average

We have received so many requests from the fans of Atlanta to do up the fielding records of the individual players in the league this season, that we have taken a stab at this arduous task.

Table with 5 columns: Player Name, G, PO, A, E, PC. Lists fielding statistics for various players.

The average fielding in the Southern League this season is on a par with the fielding in years gone by. There are marked cases of decline, but the general average is about the same.

There are several outfielders who have not played in all the games. The average fielding in the Southern League this season is on a par with the fielding in years gone by.

OUR BREAKING POINT (From the Scenario by GRACE CUNARD)

AUTHOR of "THE LADY and the PIRATE," "JOHN RAWN," ETC.

COPYRIGHT, 1915 BY WRIGHT A. PATTERSON

FIRST INSTALLMENT

CHAPTER I

The Cryptic Coin.

Kitty Gray, crack reporter on the Evening Star, pulled out of her typewriter the last sheet of paper and piled it on the little heap of finished copy which lay at her feet. Then she closed her desk, stepped to the wardrobe, and took out her coat and hat.

Taking her little collection of copy paper from the desk with the privilege of one editor in office she walked to the desk of the city editor, who, although himself a married man, had all this time without success tried to look at the work before him and not. The title page of Kitty Gray making ready for her luncheon journey.

"When will you design to return?" asked he, with a certain lapse in journalistic dignity.

"When I have a better story than this guff—in the vernacular."

Kitty's favorite luncheon place was in one of the great department stores, where women were made welcome and comfortable, and she bent thither her steps; but midway in the afternoon she paused, as often she did, to gaze into the window of the little antique shop which occupied space in one of the unimportant side streets.

Kitty Gray's eyes were arrested by something that she saw—an object which she did not recall ever before to have noted in the window. It lay close to the glass, just tilted back so that it might be the better seen. It appeared to be an old coin or part of one, carefully done in some dark metal, probably silver badly oxidized.

As Kitty bent down to examine it more closely, she saw that the coin bore an inscription, or what appeared to be such—a inscription broken across by the fracture which had divided the coin itself.

Her curiosity excited, Kitty Gray stepped into the little shop, whose proprietor she knew very well.

It back to you—I don't know. She wouldn't sell it back to me, I know. Got you're going?"

CHAPTER II

The Big Assignment.

Kitty Gray did not go to her usual place for luncheon that day. Instead she hurried into a nearby delicatessen shop and bought a sandwich, which she put in her handbag. After this she hurried on back to the office. Arrived there, without ceremony she went again to the desk of the city editor, and silently laid down before him her empty purse, her antique fan, her sandwich and her broken coin.

Cutter looked up with professional calm.

"Yes, Miss Gray? Why all this orderly array of fresh and interesting objects?"

"That is my story," said she.

"What makes you think so? Are you seeing things, Miss Gray?"

"Look here."

Kitty picked up the coin and showed it to him.

"See, it is broken quite across—more than a third of it gone. The inscription is Latin. It is not so much what is on the coin—it is what is off of it. Perhaps it commemorates something.

"Commemorates what, Miss Gray?"

"Precisely—what? That's the story!"

"By Jove!" Cutter was studying at the inscription. "Sub means 'under'—what does it say—'under the bamboo tree'?"

"No, 'under the sidewalk' or the 'flagstone,' or 'So.'" "Underneath the flagstone" or "pavement" or "floor"—in the angle or "corner"—whatever that may be—chamber of torture—room of torment—whatever it is—there will be found treasures—"of the king"—of."

"—Of Gretshoffen!" concluded Kitty Gray. "You have not forgotten all your Latin, have you, Mr. Cutter? There is a story for you! It we can only dig it out. There is an assignment wouldn't there? I'd rather do that than society in the summer-time."

Kitty Cutter, thin-wristed news man, grown thin and gray in the business, sat for just one moment in thought. "Wait a minute, please," said he at length, and rose to leave the room.

Kitty did not wait anxiously enough for what reason she could not tell. She sat at her own desk, the mysterious broken coin tight clutched in her hand. It seemed an hour before she saw the slender form of the city editor returning from the door which led to the office of the manager and publisher of the Evening Star. He looked at her thoughtfully as she approached.

Cutter held out a check.

"Three thousand dollars!" Kitty Gray's eyes grew large.

"Expense money. Three months' vacation. Full powers as missionary plenipotentiary of the Evening Star to Gretshoffen, ambassador to any old place you happen to think of, Miss Gray. I never knew the old man to go off his head before, but he has this time."

Tugging at her heart the swift feeling that she was leaving her usual modest and safe line of life to adventure upon something perhaps fatal—perhaps indeed fatal—Kitty Gray, sober-faced, turned from the door of the Evening Star and walked slowly toward the corner where customarily she took her car for home.

When she entered her apartment she cast one glance about the first little room, and then paused. The rug in the hall was turned over at one corner—was it by accident? The pictures all hung on the walls, yet several were askew, and the little wall-side back of one of the pictures—which had held some small objects of little value, an old dagger-point or two, some silver spoons, a few gold pieces which she had cherished—had been broken open. Its contents now lay upon the floor.

Amazed, Kitty stooped and picked them up, one by one. Nothing was missing—even the gold coins were there. Nothing had been harmed. But who had done this, and why?

1—"It's Odd, isn't it?" She said.

2—"I Chooct Sold It to Det Young Lady Who Went Out."

he asked suddenly. "You said you had written about it. I suppose—"

"Well, you see," replied Kitty, "when the big news story about the proposed Gretshoffen loan—its hawking about the street and its rejection—when that came out I was put on the assignment of looking into Gretshoffen in general. I remember that the old king's name was Michael, wasn't it?"

"The one that died? Yes, Michael the First. He was a good sort. His death was the unluckiest thing that ever happened for this poor little people. He was a good man, King Michael, and a strong one, and a just. So such cannot be said, I am thinking, of the new incumbent of the throne, Michael the Second."

"You see, this Michael the Second is only a king in name, when it comes to facts. He is only a little lieutenant. He has been put on the job by a bigger and stronger man—Count Frederic—the real power behind the throne in Gretshoffen—a strong and handsome man—be sure you don't fall in love with him. What Count Frederic plans no one knows. Perhaps he has his own eye on the throne—we can't tell what may happen. I say it is a tense sort of a place, Gretshoffen. But Gretshoffen is broke. Michael, the king, is broke. Count Frederic, the Warwick of Gretshoffen, also is broke. That is why they tried to make a loan in our own country."

When Michael the First died, his treasury disappeared. He was rich, the old king was rich in the name of Gretshoffen. But the crown jewels, the imperial securities, the crown treasures of all sorts, the imperial mintage of every description—they disappeared.

"There was rumor that the old king hid his treasures somewhere, but that he left some sort of a mysterious record by which they might be traced. No one knew just what was left for the record. It is known, however, or supposed, at sturdy build, of broad shoulders and deep chest—a man half a giant, one would have said—but his eyes dropped as they met the stern gaze of him he addressed, as though he might have been his master.

"You found it—you succeeded, then—tell me!"

"Excellent—yes—yes."

The newcomer extended a hand which was trembling slightly. "I swear it was in this bag"—he was offering a little chamol bag tied with a ribbon at the top—a bag which apparently had been once suspended by this broken silver cord.

"To my it was in this bag—then why not you?"

The tall man caught the little receptacle from the other's hands—ripped it wide—shook out the contents. There fell into his hand upon the table near which he stood, only a few trinkets of a woman's toilet—little delicate pieces of powdered chamol—a coin—yes, a coin.

The tall man held this up in his hand, his face distorted with rage.

"What is wrong with your cursed money! Curse you!" He half shrieked, and as he did so flung the piece full in the other's face, with such violence that the skin broke under its impact.

"The coin!" went on the enraged speaker—"what do you mean? Do you mean, Frederic, your real monarch? You shall die for this. You have killed—you have not found it—you have lost it!"

His own eyes staring from his head in his anger, he strode forward and caught the throat of Roelan in his two mighty hands, shaking him as he would have shaken a child. At length he flung him from him, silent, bleeding, his face a mass of blood.

"Go!" he said, and fung him toward the door.

It was as Kitty Gray, after leaving the American consulate, was speeding toward her hotel in her hired vehicle that she caught sight of a man staggering from the side entrance of a great mansion house of white marble front. He seemed to have escaped from some calamity—from an attempted robbery, or murder, or something of the kind, for he pondered upon propriety, she halted her vehicle and sprang out, hastening over to the sufferer, who stood at the edge of the curb.

"What is wrong with you? You are in trouble—you are hurt! Shall I take you home—to some hospital—to the hotel? Come in, you are welcome."

The man looked at her mutely, hesitating.

"Come, I will carry you where you like." She had him by the arm, she was moving unthinkingly as she seemed, hurried him into the door of her own vehicle and followed him.

"The taxi driver," she directed, "and so, in the role of Samaritan, she drove him to the hotel, arriving that day at the stately hotel which she had selected as her own abode.

All through the ride the man at her side remained silent, suffering acutely. He turned his face away. As they came to Kitty Gray the strange feeling that she felt something which she ought to recognize, she could not tell what. In truth, sympathy had the better of curiosity for the time. She did not examine the strange companion closely, only speaking to him an occasional word of sympathy and assurance. Suddenly remembering that she did not know who he was, and remembering also that her own conduct might be held as singular, she turned her companion over to the head porter of the hotel, and hurried away to her own room.

Apparently the disgraced stranger remained at the hotel that night, for when at eleven o'clock the following morning, Kitty Gray emerged, properly arrayed for a morning ride, she saw the stranger in the hotel lobby, his face swollen in bandages. He seemed to be waiting for her, and spoke to her some words in a tongue which she did not understand—then changed to French—and then to English.

"If madame could permit me," he said, "I might be of use, even to you. I know the city. Might I set as courier for the time? I would show my gratitude, if madame deigns to accept it as proper for me thus to do."

Kitty Gray, actuated by no definite purpose, but governed by the impulse which she trusted to be true, turned suddenly toward the curb where stood her hired motor car, and motioned to the man to come.

She pressed on down the wide avenue of the capital, a strange couple enough. Kitty looked curiously about her, studiously examining everything she saw. Yes, the old city was beautiful, with its row upon row of great, stately edifices built by hands long stilled in death. Soon she began to find the need of a guide, and unobtrusively the muffled figure at her side quietly suggested the information that she might be of service. He pointed out some of the other large hotels—mansion houses of this or that court official, the hall of justice, the city hall, the great cathedrals, the royal palace, the palace of the Count Frederic.

"Yes," exclaimed Kitty Gray, "it was here that I found you yesterday. The hotel of the Count Frederic. I know, yes, but why—how did you—"

Her companion suddenly raised a hand, touched her arm gently, requesting alighted.

A great car, splendidly equipped and driven at a rushing speed, came out of the side street at which Kitty Gray had found her companion on the previous day. In the car, his gloved hands resting on his sick, sat a tall man, erect, strikingly handsome in his own way, imperious of air and bold of gaze.

Kitty Gray did not notice that her companion had shrunk back low into the seat. Her own eyes met those of the occupant of the advancing car.

Kitty Gray was young and more than a little handsome. She had taken pains to turn herself out well as she might in view of the possible surroundings she might meet on her strange quest. To the bold eyes of the tall stranger, she must have seemed far enough to look upon, for suddenly, as he passed, he stared at her directly, bowed, raised his hat—yes, even smiled.

"Who was that man?" demanded Kitty Gray. "Who was that man?"

"Who was that man?" demanded Kitty Gray. "Who was that man?"

There was a man—an international spy, they said in our country—some strange foreigner—at the time of the Gretshoffen loan. Yes, the two faces are strangely alike. Who is he?"

"Of the other I know nothing," rejoined her companion; "but this is the Count Frederic."

"Count Frederic—the pretender?"

"Flush, madame, for God's sake! he! he! he! do not dare—do not dare."

"Follow!" said Kitty Gray, sharply. "Now, tell me more."

other treasure house of women—her stocking.

Again feeling the drowsiness invoked by the French salt, she lay down once more upon the little couch and resigned herself more comfortably to slumber.

But again she woke—this time it was with a scream of terror! She had felt the touch of a hand. Something had touched at her neck.

She raised her hand. The chamol bag was gone—it was the jerk of the broken silk cord that had awakened her! And there was the hand that had done it, a strong, dark hand, full-blooded, hairy. It still clutched the bag—it still was visible at the porthole. A ribbon end had entangled itself for just an instant in the porthole fastening—an instant long enough for Kitty to see that had been the hand that had committed this robbery.

But who was the robber himself? Quick as thought Kitty sprang to the door, ran down the deck, out the next deck door.

She turned to the captain now and made report of what had happened not once but twice; but even as she went she smiled grimly to herself. The chamol bag was worthless—it had held only a kerchief, a bit of powder puff, perhaps a little silver—nothing more. Her real treasures—she knew where they were now.

The captain was outraged at what he learned who at length she gained admittance to his cabin. With marine precision, he acted at once. From that time on all through the voyage, a boat detached stood at each end of the passageway, which led to Kitty's stateroom.

No trace of any other robbery could be found, but any such by which the intruder could be identified.

least, that it was put into the possession of an old servant—one of the few men the old king trusted. But this man finally gave up some part of what he knew—part of the proof, whatever it was—to the new king, when he himself was about to die.

"Between them, Count Frederic and Michael the Second bankrupted this kingdom, or at least Michael did. It was their oyster, and they opened it and scraped the shell."

"Now, in case the Count Frederic, the big plutocrat, or his man Graham, or the little King Michael the Second, should ever get hold of the remaining clue to the whereabouts of old King Michael's treasury—pouf!—you know what would happen then. There would, Miss Kitty, to quote a certain American ballad, 'be hot time in the old town' in that case."

"It's a story!" said Kitty Gray, drawing a long breath. But a troubled light came to her eyes at the same time. "How will a fellow dig it out?" she asked wistfully.

"Come to me at any time," said Count Thompson. "I'll see that you have good protection in this city. If within my proper official relations I may do so, I'll help you in your own work as I may. But, I need not say, mine's the word."

"The same to you, Mr. Consul," said Kitty Gray. She held out her hand, with a straight gaze of her wide, gray eyes which both gave and invited confidence.

Count Thompson stood, his hands in his pockets, looking out of the window as Kitty crossed the pavement to her waiting taxicab. She made a comely figure in her trim traveling dress and jaunty French cap—a figure such as one may see on the avenue of a sunny Sunday afternoon, or in some time of festivity.

"Kings and queens!" murmured Count Thompson, hands in pockets. "Now, about queens!"

CHAPTER III

En Voyage.

The great liner Anne of Austria lay in her slip at the dock, her giant pines just throbbing now and then. Everywhere men and women were hurrying to and fro in the customary orderly confusion of the last few moments before the departure of the vessel.

Calmly Kitty Gray passed on her way to the boat's office and asked for her mail and her keys. As she turned, she almost stumbled against a man who had just hurried aboard—a dark man, thickset, foreign in appearance. She had the strange conviction that she had seen him before. Then she turned to settle herself down in her quarters. So far as she knew, she had not an acquaintance on the boat.

Now, oddly enough, she recalled the face of the stranger, the dark-visaged foreigner who she had met at the ship's office. Surely it must have been

CHAPTER IV

The Consul's Story.

The business of any true American consul is to have known the father, or at least some relation, of any caller who comes from his own nation. Consul John Thompson of Ohio, cast away in the melancholy enterprise of representing the dignity of this republic in this small and remote town known principally of Gretshoffen, was glad—really glad—to see Miss Kitty Gray. And he knew—really knew—her father, or had done so at the time when he was still living.

"It's a grand little place, isn't it—Gretshoffen?" said Kitty smiling. "I've read about it—and written about it—before now. But this isn't a vacation, really, I am on a big assignment. Mr. Consul, I may want your help—the only trouble is, I don't know what I want to do—I am after a story, but I don't know where it is or what it is!"

"What do you know of Gretshoffen, anyhow?"

CHAPTER V

The Encounter.

Meanwhile, during the interval Kitty Gray had with the American consul, a scene of other import was enacting elsewhere in the Gretshoffen capital. In the interior of a white marble fronted palace, perhaps a mile or so distant from the humble quarters of the American consulate, a tall, dark, imperious man was pacing up and down restlessly, his eyes now and again turned upon the door of the great apartment, as though he expected some one to enter. At length the door did open. A soft-footed servant appeared.

"Monsieur Roelan, excellency," he announced.

"What, Roelan!" exclaimed the tall man impatiently as the visitor entered. "What has kept you? The ship docked hours ago. And have you got it? Come, come, man!"

The individual addressed as Roelan bowed deeply. "Excellency," he said, "I came as soon as I could be sure I would not be watched."

Uncle Sam's Newest Gun Throws Lead Like Water From Garden Hose

UNCLE SAM today possesses one of the deadliest rapid-fire guns in the world. No advancing army could face the terrific hail of death that it pours forth at the rate of 400 shots a minute.

The new weapon was invented by Benny Mercier, a Frenchman, and purchased outright by the United States. It is being manufactured for general army use and is looked upon as one of the most effective weapons for field use ever designed.

The new rapid-fire weapon is small enough to be handled by one man, can be moved rapidly from place to place, and, as a consequence, is available for almost any use.

The method of using the gun is not unlike that of the common garden hose. Firing 400 shots a minute means that an almost continuous stream of lead pours from its barrel. As it is moved about at the will of the gunner, an advancing column of soldiers would be mowed down like grain before a sickle.

New and Queer Bits of News

Panama Canal Now Illuminated by Lamps That Light Themselves

THE Panama Canal from end to end is illuminated by a string of brilliant lamps, which light themselves at sunset and put themselves out when the sun rises again. This marvelous fairy tale of modern science is due to the efforts of Swedish engineers to find some economical means of lighting their long, sparsely populated coast. The reefs and narrow inlets are a menace to skippers and fishermen, but the expense of engaging lighthouse-keepers and providing them with the means of livelihood was so great that many dangerous points must necessarily be left unmarked, according to the American-Scandinavian Review.

The discovery that acetone dissolves great quantities of acetylene formed the basis of the invention by which Gustaf Dalen created his boon to mariners, the self-tending lamp. It afforded a practical and economical means of transporting large amounts of this highly illuminant gas to the Agua gas accumulator, which was finally evolved, contains 100 times its own volume of gas and is at the same time safe and nonexplosive. Instead of needing constant attention, it can be fired to burn for a year or even a longer time without being touched. The Aga flashlight apparatus makes it possible to give the marine lights a distinctive character by producing flashes of any desired duration or combination. As the flash character now generally adopted requires the flame to burn for only one-tenth of the time, this means great economy. Most marvelous of all to the layman is the sun valve, which extinguishes the light during the day, thus further diminishing gas consumption.

The lighthouse of Gasfeten on a little reef at the entrance to Ronneby in Sweden was the first in which the Aga light was installed. This was in 1904, and the experiment proved so satisfactory that it has since been adopted practically all over the world.

Ideas That May Be Converted Into Cash

ALL about you are inventions or simple household devices that tend to make life easier, happier or healthier. Perhaps you have discovered or invented something of the sort. If not you see articles of this kind that have been originated by others. Perhaps you have seen a new safeguard to cope with umbrella thieves, a means of keeping baby from falling from the high chair, or a holder for hot implements on the cook stove. This newspaper desires to help in distributing these time and labor saving ideas broadcast. It will make your help profitable by buying your two best ideas on these subjects each week. Five dollars will be paid for the best description of such a device and $3 for the second idea selected. If possible a photograph, a drawing or a rough pencil sketch should accompany your contribution. The subjects may involve anything that could be classified as science or near-science. Address Science Editor, care of this newspaper.

Are the Birds More Scientific Than Men?

HAVE birds mastered secrets of aviation that still puzzle their human competitors?

The question whether large birds transport smaller ones through the air is one that has led to much observation on the part of students of nature, and some important facts on the subject have recently been brought to light.

Birds do not merely convey their young to the ground. Large birds frequently transport smaller ones in their yearly migrations. The woodcock, when it wishes to convey a young one from a place of danger, presses the tiny bird between her own feet and against her breast and flies with it through the air.

It is a common opinion among the Eskimos that a small bird of the sparrow family is aided in its migratory flights by the wild geese.

The opinion has long been held that cranes are utilized for the same purpose by small birds crossing the Mediterranean. Several ornithologists have confirmed this popular opinion by their own observation. In the autumn flocks of cranes are seen coming from the north. As they circle over the cultivated plains of Palestine little birds fly up to them, and the twittering of those already settled upon their backs can be plainly heard.

Another observer saw smaller birds rise from the backs of cranes at which a gun had been fired. A Swedish traveler, while staying at Rhodes, saw flocks of storks fly over the sea with numerous small birds perched on their backs.

In England recently a short eared owl was seen to come "topping" across the sea. As it alighted on the shore a little bird dropped off its back and flew along the sand. On the broad back of the owl this tiny creature had ridden in safety across the wild North Sea.

Origin of Cat and Bag Joke

THOUGH many people frequently use the expression, "Let the cat out of the bag," its origin is not generally known.

It is said to have once been a favorite trick among country folk in England to substitute a cat for one of the young pigs when the latter were taken in bags to market. These bags, in old phraseology, were known as pokes.

If any greenhorn was foolish enough to buy "a pig in a poke"—that is, to purchase the animal without looking at it—the trick was successful, but if he opened the sack to satisfy himself concerning the value of his desired purchase pussy would be sure to jump out.

The "cat was let out of the bag" and the trick was disclosed.

Villages That Grow About Trades

A PECULIAR form of Russian life is the occurrence of villages devoted to a particular branch of trade. Each village, each district, each province has some special occupation. Thus one province is noted for the manufacture of axes. In another the inhabitants are all engaged in cutting wood for fuel, in another they are all market gardeners and fruit growers.

In some parts of the empire the people all live in villages or towns, there being no solitary dwellings. Among the people of wealth and the nobility there is, of course, much leisure time and much of it is spent in card playing, attending balls and banquets. Card playing seems to be the most fashionable amusement.

As in many of the countries of Europe, much of the trading is done at fairs, where the people for miles around assemble.

TO PROMOTE the industrial and technical utilization of alcohol the Russian ministry of finance has offered prizes totaling about $138,000 for the best inventions in this respect.

Third Seat Easily Constructed

HERE is a simple solution of the "third seat" dilemma in an ordinary two-seated buggy or automobile. Two small boards, constructed to form an "L" shaped device, as shown in the picture, is all that is necessary. The end of this extra seat may be slipped upon the buggy or auto seat between the two passengers. A cushion is placed upon this board and the extra passenger is as comfortable as if provided with a regular, all-to-himself seat.

Why Cost of Living Is Higher

PEOPLE who imagine that food is getting dearer might well ponder a recent editorial in the British Medical Journal, in which it is pointed out that what most people are paying higher prices for is absolutely unnecessary.

This being true of England, "what would he say if he were familiar with conditions in the United States?" asks the Literary Digest.

"The very cheapest foods, wisely chosen, have all the physiological value of the dearest," says the editorial. "The cheapest American cheese is as nutritious as Stilton or Roquefort, the herring is as nourishing as salmon, the flank or shin of beef as sirloin, margarine as butter, starch as arrowroot, cabbage as asparagus. Moreover, by good cooking cheap food can be made as tasty and appetizing as the dearest, and no less good a stimulant of the digestive juices."

Needles Old as Civilization

NEEDLES were no doubt contemporaneous with the very beginning of civilization, as they were necessary for the fashioning of even the rudest skin garments. In their earliest form they were probably only strong thorns or splinters of wood, bone or stone, for puncturing holes through which to draw the thread. The next step was to make an eye in the splinter, that it might carry the thread at the same time that it pierced the skin, and some very finely flaked and polished needles have been found in prehistoric remains.

Bronze needles have been found in Egyptian tombs that must have been made several thousand years before the Christian era, and similar implements are known to have been in use by the Chinese, Hindus, Chaldeans, Assyrians and other ancient nations at very early periods in their history. The steel needle is believed to have been first made in Spain. It is known that these needles were manufactured at several places in Europe as early as the fourteenth century.

Pins are also of very ancient manufacture. They were made at first of ivory, bone or wood splinters, but bronze pins are found in Egyptian tombs, and also those of silver and gold. The ancient Romans had metal pins, also, and so had other nations. They were made with ornamented heads.

and from one to eight inches long. The small pins as we know it was a more modern invention.

Here's the Greatest Cake Ever Built

HOUSEWIVES, how would you like to bake a cake of the following dimensions and ingredients:

Eighteen yards long, eight yards broad and more than one-half yard thick, containing thirty-six bushels of flour, 200 gallons of milk, one ton of butter, a huge quantity of yeast and 5,000 eggs?

Such a cake, probably the largest ever made, was served in June, 1730, by Frederick William I., King of Prussia, to his army following a huge repast. The 30,000 soldiers, already glutted, could not eat the entire cake, and remnants of it were distributed among the inhabitants of neighboring towns and villages.

Putting New Arms On Wounded German Soldiers

The Soldier Shown in the Right Hand Picture Was Wounded in Both Legs During the Fighting in the Champagne District. Convalescent, He Still Suffers From Ankylosis, or Partial Stiffness of the Limbs. The Hospital Attendant Is Seen Giving Him a "Mechanical Massage," Which, SCIENCE has again linked arms with the German spirit of thoroughness—this time in the interest of the wounded soldier.

Quack-looking mechanical appliances have been installed in the hospitals of Berlin to prevent ankylosis. This is a surgical term for a condition wherein tissues and ligaments become partly, immovable because of inflammation, infection, or like causes.

For instance, when a German soldier is wounded in a limb, first attention is given to the wound itself. After it begins to heal the limb is placed in the newly invented apparatus and moved back and forth to prevent stiffness; and, in some cases, permanent lameness. Similar treatment is given to limbs that have become dislocated.

In other words, the same treatment might be termed "mechanical massage," for it embodies the same principles contained in the Swedish movement and other massage methods. One can readily see its advantage over the latter, which would require a great many nurses on account of the big list of wounded soldiers.

Here's a Perfect Electric Bell

AN ORIGINAL electric bell combination is in use in Paris which is designed to get rid of all trouble caused by the question of batteries, for these are now lodged within the apparatus itself. The usual box bell shape is retained, but the arrangement of the parts is different in this case. All the magnet parts are now lodged under the gong itself.

FISHING for SUBMARINES with BOMB BAIT

DIAGRAM SHOWING THREE PHASES OF ATTACK AND DESTRUCTION OF A SUBMARINE.

THOMAS E. LAKE
 With New Device, Says He Can Destroy Instantly the Deep Sea Terror of Modern Warfare

THE LAKE "AEROMOBILE."

AIRCRAFT VERSUS SUBMARINE

By Thomas E. Lake.

NO man in an aeroplane can destroy a submarine in less time than it takes to hook and gaff a weakfish or a bluefish, and the method is much the same.

Instead of trawling from the deck of a sloop or schooner with a silk line and live bait, you use an aeroplane, a controlling device, the secret of which I am not prepared to divulge as yet, and instead of live bait a contact bomb of terrific explosive force.

As is shown in the diagram, the aeroplane skims over the sea with the bomb suspended from the controlling device, some distance above the water. Now, contrary to the belief of many persons, a submarine does not travel beneath the surface all the time. Consideration of the life of her storage batteries, air for breathing and speed make it desirable to travel at the surface whenever practicable without risk of discovery by the enemy.

A submarine generally travels at the surface, or in the "awash" condition, until in the vicinity of her intended attack. When within a reasonable distance of her victim she submerges so that only a few feet of water is above the periscope. In this condition she would lay in wait for or proceed toward her enemy, from time to time raising her periscope above the surface to direct her course and to aim her torpedo.

When thus submerged she would be invisible to a surface ship, but could be detected from above. The air scouts claim that even when a submarine dives very deep they can see a dark patch in the water and at least give warning to a surface ship that the undersea terror is near.

Assuming that a submarine had been located by the operator of an aeroplane, even though the craft were considerable distance below the surface of the water, he would lower the bomb to the position shown in Figure 1, allowing it to trail about fifteen or twenty feet above the water.

Then he would direct his course so that the aeroplane would cut across just ahead of the submarine, meanwhile reducing its speed as much as possible, for speed at this juncture would be a distinct disadvantage.

When about to cross the submarine's path the aviator would release the controlling mechanism, allowing the bomb to fall into the water and sink, as in Figure 2. This brings the wire in contact with the periscope or any other projection of the submarine, and the bomb would thus be drawn against the side of the craft and explode on contact, as in Figure 3, the wire being automatically released from the control mechanism.

It takes more time to explain this attack than it does to execute it. In practice it would occur so quickly as to give absolutely no warning to the submarine, destroying her and her crew. They would not have the slightest chance to escape or to know what had happened to them.

The hopelessness of trying to drop unattached bombs on a submarine, either submerged or at the surface, considering the velocity at which an aeroplane travels, will be apparent, but with the trawling device the thing is simpler. In dropping a free bomb it is necessary to strike the target with the missile itself. In trawling, once the wire fouls the submarine the bomb is certain to find its mark, and it will explode when it strikes it and not before.

I have recently patented a new type of flying machine, which is shown in the diagram and in a photograph on this page. It is particularly adaptable to the trawling attack on submarines because of the great speed of which it is capable and also the extremely low speed at which it can be driven and still maintain its buoyancy and stability.

Although this machine seems to be the best for attacks against submarines, it was not with this particular object in view that I experimented with it. The main idea was to develop a safe machine—an "even keel" aeroplane.

As an aero expression the term "even-keel" designates a type of flying machine which maintains a horizontal position at all times, both fore and aft as well as lateral trim considered. In addition to the even-keel feature, the wings of this machine are flexible and may be adjusted to various curvatures to suit the thrust of the propellers and the weight to be carried at variable speeds.

Probably the most important and novel feature of this machine is the method of adjusting the wings so that the machine can make a vertical landing when so desired. No type of flying machine will ever be safe unless some means are provided to insure a safe landing when headway is lost. The engine of to-day is not so perfect as to be proof against sudden stopping through ignition or other trouble.

The submarine and the aeroplane seem to be the two weapons in this war against which there is so far no adequate defence. Aeroplanes have been used to detect the presence of submarines, but they have not attacked them effectively. With the trawling device perfected the aeroplane would become the conqueror of land and sea. In spite of their infancy they have been proved indispensable for both army and navy. They are of the greatest possible value as scouts, and although they have not as yet done as well as was expected from the offensive standpoint they will surely be developed along that line, so that an attack from the air will be more horrible than any artist has ever drawn it.

Musk Is Getting Scarce.

TACHUENLU, China, is one of the principal musk markets of the world. During the last few years a large firm with headquarters in Paris stationed a representative at Tachuenlu for the sole purpose of buying musk. It is very difficult to obtain pure musk, and every pod has to be carefully examined. While musk is exported at several points along the Tibetan border, the best quality is obtained at Tachuenlu. Three thousand pounds of musk on an average are shipped every year from Chungking, and it is estimated that fully half of this amount passes through Tachuenlu.

Most of this musk is sent to France, where it is employed in the manufacture of perfume. The musk is not only used for the perfume that bears this name but is a most essential ingredient in all of the better classes of perfume. Musk has certain radioactive properties that cause the odor of the perfume to be carried through the air in a way that would otherwise be impossible. The radioactive property of the musk affects most peculiarly the natives who carry it. If it is held close to the body for any length of time it produces sores that are probably similar in character to those caused by pure radium. The musk is obtained from a sort of gland in the body of the male deer, and the musk itself is secreted during certain seasons of the year. It is said that this highly odorous secretion is produced by nature to enable the musk deer to be followed by its mate. This species of animal is much smaller than is generally supposed.

HOME, SWEET HOME.

Words by John Howard Payne.

Music by Sir Henry Bishop.

"Home, Sweet Home," Universally Accepted as a Folk Song, Is Classified as Harmful in Its Effect on the Spirits. "Old Black Joe" Has a Similar Result.

OLD BLACK JOE.

Words and Music by Stephen C. Foster.

THE late Rev. H. R. Howells, in his Musical Memories, predicted some years ago that music would become a powerful and acknowledged therapeutic. There were many who scoffed a little at the idea that music was, or ever would be, anything but a pleasant way of whiling away a little time and creating a pleasurable diversion. But the clergyman-artist stood by his convictions.

Science has later proved that the Rev. Mr. Howells predicted rightly. Music stimulates the physical functions and heightens the mental activities. Interesting reference to this discovery is made in The Physiology of Faith and Fear, a book on health and disease from the pen of Dr. William S. Sadler. The physician tells what songs are strengthening and stimulating and what songs are weakening and depressing.

In view of the interest now shown in the prediction of the Rev. Mr. Howells it might be well to reprint it here.

"There are certain moods of exhausted feeling in which certain kinds of music would set like poison," wrote the clergyman. "There are other kinds of music which soothe and—if I may use the word—lubricate the worn ways of the nervous centers.

"You will ask, What music is good for that? We reply, judgment and common sense; and, above all, sympathy, affectional and musical sympathy, will partly be your guide, but experience must decide. Let some friend well versed in the divine art sit at the piano, and let the tired one lie on a couch and prescribe for herself or for himself.

"This will happen:

"Do not play that 'Tanhauser' overture just now, it wears me out; I cannot bear it, or 'Yes, slug that 'Du Bist Die Ruh,' and after that I must hear Mendelssohn's 'Nocturne' out of 'The Midsummer Night's Dream,' and then—and then—what comes next must be left to the tact and quick sympathy of the musician.

"I have known cases where an hour of this treatment did more good than bottles of bark and pills of globules; but I do not wish to overstate the case. I merely plead for an unrecognized truth, and I point to a new vocation—the vocation of the musical healer."

Poets and essayists have long believed in the psychological and physiological effects of music. For instance:

To Music, to Balm His Fever.
Charm me asleep, and melt me so,
With thy delicious numbers,
That being ravish'd, hence I go
Away in easy slumbers.
Ease my sick head,
And make my bed,
Thou power that canst sever
From me this ill,
And quickly still,
Though thou not kill,
My fever.

Emerson, who wrote: "I think sometimes could I only have music on my own terms, could I live in a great city, and know where I could go whenever I wished the ablation and inundation of musical waves, that were a bath and a medicine."

The following quotation from St. Cecilia's Day, by Pope, coincides with the views expressed above:

Music the fiercest grief can charm,
And fate's severest rage disarm.
Music can soften pain to ease,
And make despair and madness please;
Our joys below it can improve,
And antedate the bliss above.

Writing on Music's Refining Tone, J. Beveridge declared: "That which I have found the best recreation to my mind and body, whenever either of them stands in need of it, is music, which exercises at once both mind and body, especially when I play myself; for then, methinks, the same motion that my hands make upon the instrument makes upon my heart."

And now, after an analytical survey by science, it has been decreed that the poets and essayists were right in their conclusions.

Dr. William S. Sadler, who has made a study of the subject, has this to say:

"The author has carried forward many experiments for the purpose of ascertaining the psychological and physiological effects of music. These are largely dependent on its associations, the general environment, the individual's appreciation of music, and also upon his personal associations with the particular piece of music under consideration."

English Sparrow Has Been Revealed to Be Possessor of Real Virtues

THE English sparrow, or the Anglo-American sparrow, has found a friend. A man has risen in his place to say that, although the sparrow may not be blessed, yet, in his opinion, denunciation of the bird has been carried too far.

The sparrow seems never to have much concerned himself or herself with the charges made against them. They have gone their way, fighting, quarreling, chirping and eating, as though perfectly conscious of the rectitude of their course. They seem never to have troubled themselves very much about conciliating public opinion. They may have heard that it gives offense to certain persons to build their nests in the roof gutters and the rain spouts, to hold mass meetings on the porch railings and to engage in riotous and tumultuous controversies at 4 h. m. just under or over the windows of late sleepers, but if they ever heard of such things they have treated the information with a good deal of indifference.

There was a time when much was expected of the sparrow. He was imported to clean up the insects in the parks and to make himself generally useful. He was acclaimed by press agents as a bird who would attack caterpillars without thought of the consequences to himself. He was fearless in the face of bugs. While he would prove himself a terror to the forces of the insects, he would be a brotherly and sisterly bird to his American cousin birds—if such a relationship could be. But, in the opinion of many Americans, he has not lived up to his advertisement.

Not many weeks ago a distinguished ornithologist, James Buckland, wrote an article on birds which was included in the annual reports of the Smithsonian Institution. In this report he said: "The remarkable instances of the service of birds to man include the introduction of the English sparrow into New Zealand with the resultant elimination of the thistle and caterpillar, which were ruining the land and crops."

Enthusiasts of the English sparrow may insist that the bird has conducted himself with more propriety in New Zealand than in the United States, and that the Anglo-American sparrow should be sent to the antipodes for a course of training in the duties of birds toward men. However, up in Michigan a state game warden says that his deputies have examined the stomachs of sixty-two English sparrows and found in every stomach injurious seeds and insects. Some persons who claim to know the habits of the English sparrow may say that the reason that injurious seeds and insects were found in the stomachs of sixty-two English sparrows in Michigan was that in Michigan there were sixty-two English sparrows that could not find anything else to eat.

Mythical Tales of White Races Lead to Fruitless Expeditions Into Africa

THERE exists in the minds of many civilized peoples a curious fascination with respect to the idea that in remote parts of the tropics, amid the dark-skinned races, there flourish mysteriously isolated white tribes bearing a strong resemblance to the civilized branches of the Caucasian race.

Who they are and whence they came no one knows; native fables afford no explanation. Once it was thought that forgotten white explorers might have built up unknown kingdoms in the wild places of the earth, but upon examination these theories vanish as rapidly as do the white tribes themselves, and the ultimate explanation is almost prosaic.

Yet so strong a hold has the idea gained that even in the beginning of the twentieth century the possibility of the existence of genuine white races is not altogether scoffed at. Less than twelve years ago an American officer engaged in the operations against the Moros in the Philippines collected apparently substantial evidence relating to a mysterious white tribe in the island of Mindanao. The mountainous district in the center of this island has never been explored and even the coast is not well known.

But along the seaboard many stories are told of the fierce white people who have their home in the forest-dotted mountains of the interior. Eyewitnesses depose to having seen a strange fair-complexioned girl, who fled toward the hills as soon as she was addressed. Other men and women of a light-complexioned race are said to have been seen by more venturesome natives who were bold enough to approach the wild mountain district. The American officer was so impressed that he determined to conduct an exploring party across the center of the island. But apparently the mysterious white folk had vanished for the world has as yet heard nothing of his search being crowned with success.

Arabia, however, can claim more reason of a white tribe. For years stories of such a race have been told in the Persian Gulf, and an American missionary stationed at Muscat asserted some years ago to "coffee-house babble in eastern Oman concerning a mysterious race of light-complexioned people who live somewhere in the mountains, shun strangers and speak a language all their own."

Various theories have been propounded to explain the fable, but probably the explanation is to be found in the narrative of a journey made by Oman in 1876 by Colonel S. B. Miles, a British officer. Colonel Miles, in the course of his travels nearly forty years ago, came across a town named Shuwait in the heart of the Green Mountains. This strange place was perched like an eagle's nest on the top of a great cliff, and was inhabited by people of lighter skin than the rest of the tribes in the interior. They rarely descended to the plains and refused to mix with or intermarry with the Arabs.

Joking with Death For a Cause

How the Nerves of French Recruits Are Steeled to the Horrors of the Battlefield Before They Approach the Firing Line by Pseudo Guillotines

Most Remarkable Photograph That Has Come From the European War

Are Soldiers Normally Bloodthirsty?

No! Yes!

FOOTBALL games in the field between German and English soldiers are prohibited. Last Christmas men from both sides fraternized and played hotly contested games of football. Officers and men laid aside their arms and watched the players and cheered them on. News of this reached the military authorities and it was decided that football was interfering too much with the business of warfare, aside from the complications arising from too friendly contact between the advance guards. The order was issued forthwith. The men must meet only as enemies.

RECRUIES of a battalion detailed for duty in the trenches of Picardy, France, were made to witness sham executions by a guillotine in order to steel their nerves against the sight of blood and death. As a veteran soldier said to them: "Psychologically speaking the effect of the sham executions was as shocking as though they had been real, for the reason that at the time you really believed them to be real. You'll go into the trenches now hardened to sights of death. And you'll be better soldiers for it. To take the lives of others will be all in a day's work."

ONE would think that soldiers encamped only 250 meters from the trenches of a European battlefield would care to dismiss death from their minds so far as possible. But do they? Not the French veterans—at least those who not so long ago were in the village of Picardy, in northern France.

In this picturesque community, nestling on the edge of an area scythe-swept by the Grim Reaper, daily arrived recruits to the battalions to which the veterans belonged. They were young fellows, these recruits, and it was not to their discredit that a haunting fear gripped their hearts. Battle-strengthened veterans will tell you that the newcomers only experienced what most every warrior experiences when he comes within earshot of rumbling cannon and the spiteful crack of small arms.

Where the Structure Stood.

On the side of a hill near Picardy, its outline half-hidden by the shadow of an old building, stood a queer looking structure, its two upright posts surmounted by a cross beam. Several hats, civilian hats, hung from wooden pegs driven into knotholes. To one who saw the structure would have proved interesting as soon as you saw that it consisted in part of an oblique-edged knife; interesting, that's all. But to young recruits the upright posts, the hats, the knife blood-stained spelled something sinister and terrible.

It was a guillotine! Why was it there? What the reason for punishment by decapitation? These and other questions fitted through the minds of the fresh troopers as they gazed terror-stricken at the deadly machine. Spies? Yes, it must be for spies, they reasoned fully.

One morning after they had gone through the routine of camp life and were prepared to take to the trenches the recruits were assembled about 150 feet from the guillotine. The veterans cautioned them not to approach nearer. Soon several of the veterans were seen to carry a struggling something, presumably a human being, toward the death-dealing machine. The head of the huddled figure was thrust in front of the oblique-edged knife, someone released the cord which held it aloft, and the sharp edge fell swiftly and with force.

A Dozen Victims Fall.

Body after body, for such they seemed, were thrust beneath the blade—until a dozen or so felt its keen edge and ceased to struggle. The executioners gravely carried the stiff forms away, leaving only those things which looked like heads in the bucket.

Almost every person is made ill and faint on witnessing a first execution. The recruits at Picardy were no exception. Some of them broke down and cried hysterically. Others beat a hasty retreat. One actually swooned. And all the while the veteran soldiers seemed to perform their horrible duties as if they were nothing to act squeamish about.

A few hours after the ordeal to which the recruits had been subjected—a sufficient time for shaky nerves to steady themselves to a degree near normal—they were told the reason for the gruesome use of the guillotine.

And this was the explanation, as given by one who acted as spokesman for the veterans:

"A medical officer who has been making a study of the 'psychology of courage' at the front says that most recruits confess to a feeling of fear. This feeling only wears off after several days of fighting. We do not want you boys to quail before death even for one day. We want to fight alongside of men steeled from the start against the sickening sight of blood and mangled bodies—and we know of no better way to steel you than to show you blood and death before you go into the trenches.

Only an Experiment After All.

"So we constructed a guillotine. The supposed bodies that you saw placed under the sharp blade of the knife were nothing more than suits of clothes stuffed with straw. The blood, or rather what looked to you like blood, was another bit of deception. Psychologically speaking, the effect of the sham executions today was as shocking as though they had been real, for the reason that at the time you really believed them to be real. You'll go into the trenches now hardened to sights of death. And you'll be better soldiers for it. To take the lives of others will be all in a day's work."

Whether the veteran's words proved true is not known. But, in any event, it was an interesting, though gruesome, experiment.

One may not believe, however, that the soldiers in this greatest of all wars are a bloodthirsty lot. They kill when they have no other choice.

Time and again it has been reported that the men in the trenches on both sides had to be withdrawn and others put in their places because they were becoming too friendly with each other by the exchange of notes. The short distance that lay between the trenches in most instances accounted for their being able to toss each other written messages.

On Jan. 7 last a general order written by the German army authorities prohibited football games in the field between German and English soldiers. A dispatch from Berlin, via London, said:

A DUMMY (old clothes stuffed with straw) has just been "put to death" by the guillotine shown above. Recruits who witness these sham executions are thought to make better soldiers on the principle that they become acquainted with the sight of death before going into battle. Note that the head has been cut from the dummy just above the collar. Soldiers in the background are veterans who assist in carrying out the experiment.

"At Christmas time men from both sides in the western theater of war fraternized and played hotly contested games of football. Officers and men laid aside their arms and, watched the players and cheered them on.

"The rivalry became so intense that war was forgotten and the men who kicked the most goals received more applause than is usually given heroes on the fighting line. At one place where the Germans and British played the game was a draw and the players agreed to suspend fighting for two days more in order to decide the issue on two games out of three.

"News of this reached the military authorities and it was decided that football was interfering too much with the business of warfare, aside from the complications arising from too friendly contact between the advance guards. The order was issued forthwith and there will be no more athletic contests between the soldiers, who also are forbidden to fraternize or meet on any terms except those of bitter enmity."

So you see that soldiers are not such murderous individuals after all.

Take Heed—Fear Is No Longer Fashionable

By DELIA AUSTRIAN.

WHATEVER else may be fashionable the man or woman who shows signs of fear or exhibits a lack of emotional control is certainly out of date.

Psychologists and physicians have been giving much time and study to the diseases created by fear and lack of self-control, with the result that many of the supposedly organic diseases have been traced to fear or outbursts of anger.

These important psychological principles have been given greater publicity by the European war. Inspired by patriotism, men and women alike not only have been willing to sacrifice themselves for their countries but at times have even courted danger and have forgotten that there is such a thing as fear or lack of self-control in the world.

Fritz Kreisler explains in his "Four Weeks in the Trenches" that once on the march or in the charging lines exhausted and fearing men became strong and courageous. Most of them became so impervious to any thought of fear that they wrote and slept in the trenches, and even laughed and chatted with no thought of fear. They were no less unafraid when they heard the whizzing and crashing of guns about them on all sides.

These and other incidents that could easily be drawn from the present war show that fear and anger are more psychological in origin than physical. That is, it only needs the minds to control the nerves and the nerve impulses when all thoughts of fear and anger are cast aside. The emotional feelings and nerve control are so intimately associated that it is extremely difficult to say how they affect each other.

Dr. W. B. Cannon, who has studied a thorough and searching investigation of this subject, says: "The moment you really set out to consider the effect upon the human body of various feelings and emotions you are surprised by the extent to which they have been embodied in our language.

"It was so frightened my hair stood on end. I was speechless with terror." He turned pale with anger. "He trembled with emotion." He broke into a cold sweat—these and a score of similar expressions show that the external signs of violent mental states are well recognized, but all these manifestations are mainly superficial and therefore observable.

How Does the Body Respond?

There are, however, organs hidden deep in the body which do not reveal so obviously as the structure near or in the skin the disturbances which attend states of intense feeling. How, then, does the internal mechanism of the body respond to the feelings and emotions?

"Let me begin by tracing the physiological connections of the common expression, 'It makes my mouth water.' We have a clear instance of the relation of cause and effect between the pleasurable anticipation of eating and the stimulation of these glands which secrete the fluid necessary for the digestion of food. Experiment has shown that not only the mouth 'waters' but the stomach, also, and that this 'watering' assists the secretion of the digestive fluids through the whole process.

Now, let us examine the effects of a disagreeable emotion—fear—upon the digestion. That fear or extreme anxiety checks the activity of the salivary glands will be testified to by many speakers who have suffered from stage fright. After opening their mouths to speak or their mouths were perfectly dry and their tongues were paralyzed with fear.

A curious but practical application of this strange phenomenon is found in the 'ordeal of rice' as it is practiced in India. When several persons are suspected of a certain crime they are each given a mouthful of rice to chew. After chewing it a few minutes they are expected to spit it out. If anyone ejects it dry he is under suspicion. It is taken for granted that the fear of detection had stopped the natural flow of saliva and he is judged guilty.

On the same principle fear can give you a cold sweat or make beads of perspiration appear on your forehead. It excites the nerves and in turn stimulates and opens the glands which bring perspiration to the surface of the skin.

Under violent emotions, such as fear and anger, weak men have performed prodigies of strength; cowardly men prodigies of valor, slow men prodigies of speed.

Dr. Cannon holds this as one of the explanations of war.

Feelings Require Expression.

The physiological provisions for fierce struggle are found not only in the bodies of the lower animals but also in human beings," he says. "It is only natural to assume that these belligerent feelings require occasional expression. In many respects strenuous athletic rivalries present better than does modern military service the better conditions for which the militarists argue.

"In competitive sports the elemental factors are retained. Man is pitted against man, and all the resources of the body are summoned in the eager struggle for victory. And because under such circumstances the same physiological alterations occur which occur in anticipation of mortal combat, the belligerent emotions and instincts so far as their bodily manifestations are concerned are thereby given complete satisfaction.

"I can even go a step further and assert confidently that athletic competitions, and particularly those of an international character, are more efficient in calling into activity the healthful energizing mechanisms of which I have spoken than is the stupid routine of military drill or the machine-cumbered rivalry of warfare."

A Daisy Luncheon—Not Slang but a Timely Entertainment That Is Particularly Welcome at Present

By DAME CURTSEY.

Now is the season for a daisy luncheon. These most satisfactory of flowers are blooming in quantities in the country and outskirts of town, and may be had for the picking. Their lasting quality makes them especially desirable for decorative purposes. Bank the mantels, dressers and corners of the room with them; brown earthenware crocks and jars are fine receptacles for this purpose. Facsimile daisies may be made from cardboard and water colors for place cards, or two or three natural ones may be thrust through a plain white card; the lettering done in gold is effective.

For each guest, and in this day of the popular "all white" gown, it is most likely that the guests will complete the color scheme by appearing in white costumes.

A charming centerpiece is made by filling a low glass dish or yellow jar with sand and then planting the daisies and make garlands of them to drop to the corners of the table from the chandelier. The candlesticks should be white, candles of yellow, with shades of yellow trimmed with artificial marigolds. This makes the prettiest table imaginable.

The menu can be kept nearly all white and yellow; if grapefruit is not procurable, oranges may be served in the same way, or white cherries dipped in powdered sugar; cream of celery soup with the yolk of hard-boiled egg grated over the top; sweet-breads with new potatoes, green peas in yellow ramekins or pastry shells with tiny carrot slices, hot blackout, a fruit salad in banana slice boats, and orange ice with individual sunshine cake. In which to pile plenty of country flowers.

By DOROTHY DOLAN.

THE other day I visited a woman who has a charming home in one of the suburbs. She was elbow-deep in the kitchen baking loaves of bread and cake. She was hot and tired and cross, in this spite of the fact that she was doing her level best to make her children and husband happy. The children came in one by one, and the husband formed the last of the family procession.

In spite of the fact that mother was telling and awaiting to please them the children were decidedly unhappy because they found no lemonade and cookies awaiting them in the pantry, and the husband saw new-baked bread and cake instead of some refreshing food.

Though there were plenty of verandas and porches on the house, there was not a serving table or a tea cart in sight. There was plenty of sun streaming into the open windows, but very little being done to make the home summery and happy.

In less than an hour's time I made my friend understand it was more important that she keep her family cool and happy during the hot weather than bake a great many loaves of bread and three or four good sized cakes. If this could not be managed in any other way, she should buy her bread or some of it, during the hot weather and make crackers and cookies a good substitute for cake.

Next she showed her fruit juices and fruit cups, no less than cold bouillions, make excellent substitutes for hot soups and are easily prepared. Occasionally hot tea or chocolate may be used in the place of steaming soups. Even ice tea and cold lemonade can take the place of hot soups and drinks if used in moderation.

I next pointed out to her how she could save time from her cooking to be used in making the home cool and comfortable by using a great many fruits and vegetables alone or combined as salads in the place of roasted and puddings. I suggested that with very little expense one of the large summer verandas could be converted into the family dining-room. After we had moved the dining-room table and chairs into the new dining-room, we set the table. I finally got her to agree that a tablecloth was to be reserved for dinner. There was nothing to save the lovely polish of her dining-room table except a lace centerpiece and some doilies for the water tumblers. It took plenty of time and strong argument to show her that if she taught the children from the beginning to take care no great harm should come to the dining-room table. Suppose it was scratched a little? It would be remedied more readily than worn out nerves saved by heavy family washings. The dining-room was not complete until we had placed a large bouquet of flowers in the center of the table.

I got the promise of the children that they would take over the responsibility of seeing that the centerpiece and the side bowls on the tables and stands were watered and replaced by fresh flowers whenever needed.

The tea cart that had found lodging in the garret, because it had outworn its usefulness, with a small amount of cleaning and polishing was the right thing for the new dining-room. It was a good substitute for the one household at breakfast and luncheon. She could go on with the heavy work indoors.

My friend served breakfast and luncheon here every day with no aid except her pretty mahogany tea-cart. At 5 o'clock it was replenished with a pitcher of lemonade and ice-tea and the dishes were piled high with bread and butter sandwiches and cookies. The children and my friend's husband enjoyed their afternoon tea so much that they never stopped to ask how many loaves of bread there were in the kitchen.

The outdoor dining-room was soon the popular room in the house. Because of this fact my friend used the money she was saving for new dining-room chairs for Japanese screens, a swinging lounge and hanging baskets.

At the end of the week she said that this new outdoor dining-room kept them all in such good spirits that they not only ate three meals a day and had an afternoon tea out there, but she intended to do all of her summer porch or on the lawn. How foolish she did not see that a sturdy dining-room was more than useless in summer time!

This summer dining-room naturally brought many changes in the daily menu she had been serving until this time. The hot weather breakfasts were limited to plenty of fruit, a cereal or a delicate piece of fish, all most except small slices of bacon were tabooed for breakfast.

At noon there was plenty of bread and butter, with delicious jam, a simple salad and buttermilk or plain milk. The supper was no less refreshing because it had plenty of olives and celery. Occasionally there was a cold bouillon and more often a fruit cup or food tea. The family got all the meat they needed, but more often it was cold meat, a meat salad or a splendid fish that tasted equally good and was no less nourishing. Instead of the rich puddings and cakes of value in winter time, fruit salads and ice cream sherbets were found on the summer dining-room table.

How foolish she did not see that a sturdy dining-room was more than useless in summer time!

This summer dining-room naturally brought many changes in the daily menu she had been serving until this time. The hot weather breakfasts were limited to plenty of fruit, a cereal or a delicate piece of fish, all most except small slices of bacon were tabooed for breakfast.

At noon there was plenty of bread and butter, with delicious jam, a simple salad and buttermilk or plain milk. The supper was no less refreshing because it had plenty of olives and celery. Occasionally there was a cold bouillon and more often a fruit cup or food tea. The family got all the meat they needed, but more often it was cold meat, a meat salad or a splendid fish that tasted equally good and was no less nourishing. Instead of the rich puddings and cakes of value in winter time, fruit salads and ice cream sherbets were found on the summer dining-room table.

Make the Room for a Young Girl Light, Airy and Daintily Inviting

By MME. MAISON.

WHAT a delight it is to be able to assist in planning a room to be occupied by a young girl and how I wish every girl who reads this could have just such a room as I am about to describe in outline. Spaces forbids giving minute details.

In the first place the woodwork is to be a rich ivory-white, very different from a staring blue-white which one often sees, and the last coat of enamel will be rubbed to a soft finish so it will not be shiny. With this any furniture or coloring will be harmonious. Let us hope that the walls are of hardwood, stained rather dark and so they will make a background for whatever rugs are chosen. Of course the ceiling will be creamy-white no matter whether the walls are plain or with figured paper.

Somehow one always thinks of pink or rose color as being the fitting scheme to be worked out in a girl's room, so let's have the walls in a weel wood rose pattern running right up to the white picture molding. The curtains to be of cream gauze or sheer dotted dimity muslin with overdrapes and valance of rosy pink sundour.

The furniture may be of mahogany, birch, walnut or any of the cream or pale gray enamelled sets with or without cane seats. Have one or two single beds; with the latter a guest may be entertained, very few double beds are sold these days in comparison to those of the "twain" variety, for one may share the room, but who likes to share a bed even with one's best friend?

I hope there may be a small fireplace with a white enamelled mantelpiece and a chaise longue in wider convenient placed in the alcove window with a wee table near by. What is costlier than this cheerful cup served in one's room from the daintiest of china and all you need have is good bits of this bread spread with good butter.

If there is no bookcase just have the village carpenter or the handy man in the household make a set of plain wooden shelves and paint them two coats of flat white and then two of enamel. Sand paper between the first and second coats and let each one dry thoroughly.

Half the joy of doing things, and there is many a young girl who may arrange a charming room for herself on a very small expenditure of actual fact.

Reply to "Anxious."

You can make no mistake if you use a warm rose color in the north room that has French gray walls. Use a shade of the same rose in the electric light shades on the side walls and on the reading lamps. You will be delighted, if I am sure. You will need all the light possible, so, as you are so far back from the street, I would not put up net curtains but just the side drapery of the rose sundour.

To the Girl Who Works

IF YOU have ever gone over a road that is used constantly by automobiles you have noticed that the many wheels passing over have ground deep ruts in the road. Other vehicles can travel in these ruts, but they find considerable difficulty when they try to slip in and out.

This picture is pertinent for the quality of a certain amount of work that is turned out every day. Most work is of such a nature as to call for the repetition of the same processes by the same person every day. If you are a stenographer, a telephone or a telegraph operator, after you once get accustomed to and acquire skill in your work you go on at the same even pace day after day.

Doing the same things day after day has its advantages for you no less than your employer. It saves labor for him and gives you skill and efficiency. Still, after you have been doing a certain work for a year or two much of it becomes almost reflex, or in common language, mechanical. With an occasional variation you take down a certain number of letters in shorthand and copy them later in longhand, or you make and break a certain number of connections at the switchboard, enabling certain persons to talk.

Though you do not realize what is taking place, going over the same ground day after day, you are making deep ruts like the wheels of a certain number of vehicles. The only time you are conscious of what is happening is when you try to change the bed of the ruts by complete change of occupation or by an exchange of places.

Few workers scarcely become conscious of this important fact until it is too late. Though going over the same ground day after day is bound to leave its marks, there are a number of simple hints for staying out of a rut. One of these is an avocation or hobby. This should be something you like to do as a means of recreation, not for the earning of a livelihood. Let it be language, art, dancing, singing or some special line of study. Whether it be language or art, do not select it at random. Before you undertake your avocational or hobby should be a number of important points: Is it worth pursuing? Can you give time and money to pursue it thoroughly and intelligently?

You may be surprised to know that many young business women have taken up avocations for recreation. In a few years they found out that their talents were in the avocation instead of the work in which they were actually engaged. Dozens of these women have exchanged their lines of work for avocations and are now making princely incomes and splendid reputations.

Should you not change your work your avocation will certainly throw light and intelligence on your own work. If you are a stenographer you will find the study of one or more foreign languages worth while. It makes little difference which you select first, providing you pursue it thoroughly and intelligently. A knowledge of several languages besides giving you pleasure will open many new channels of thought.

It was impossible to reply to your letter before this date, and now it is too late for your sixteenth birthday party. I am always so sorry to disappoint our readers and must beg them once again to send me a self-addressed, stamped envelope in care of the HERALD, when a speedy answer is desired.

CHARLEY CHAPLIN'S COMIC CAPERS

THE PRAIRIE CHICKEN IS VERY NICE SIR

THIS WAS CHICKEN WHEN BOSTON WAS A BEAN

I GUESS I'LL HAVE TO PUT SOLE INTO MY WORK

LOOK OUT! IT'S SKIDDING

IT'S COMING TO ME.

IT'S LUCKY I'M ON TO THIS SHOE SHINERS BEND.

HO! HUM!

NOW THEY'RE GETTING WATER ON THE BRAIN

THAT WAITER WOULD'T CARRY A STRETCHER INSTEAD OF A TRAY.

TROT ALONG, BOOBS

THE WAR IS OVER

I LOVE A QUIET PLACE LIKE THIS.

HOW ARE THE POACHED HORSESHOES?
