

WASTAGE OF FUNDS WILL CAUSE PROBE

Council Committee Meets on Monday to Investigate Charge That Officials Are Drawing Sums in Excess of Salaries.

Charges that thousands of dollars are being wasted annually by the various city departments, and that some officials are drawing greater incomes than the finance board set aside for them, will be probed by the special committee of general affairs named last week.

Chairman Edwin Johnson has called a meeting of the committee Monday afternoon, when a program of work will be outlined and the various department heads may be called into the conference. Members of the committee are Councilman Edwin Johnson, chairman; Councilman Jesse W. Wood, Alderman Jesse W. Armstrong, J. R. Seaton, and Albert Thomson.

It has been charged that nearly all of the city's income from every source is required to pay salaries and our statements show this to be true," said Mr. Johnson. "One of the problems of the committee expects to solve is how the city payroll be materially reduced without hampering the activities of the departments," said Chairman Johnson Saturday.

Probe of Salaries.—The resolution creating the committee calls for a thorough probe of salaries, and stress is laid on the investigation of fees received by city officials and employees. It is charged that certain city employees are getting more money than is specified for their services in the finance sheet. This will be given careful attention.

Mr. Johnson stated that it was probable that a corps of auditors would be engaged to go over the city's records to determine the financial status of each department for use by the committee in making its investigations and recommendations to general council.

He declared that some of the departments are keeping scores of men on their pay rolls because of their political influence, and not because they were needed.

There are seasons of the year when the department could sustain several of its employees to another department whose business is unusually heavy and by an exchange of help could save the city thousands of dollars. It does not require a probe to determine the condition obtains, and that the

NEW HOPE FOR DRUG VICTIMS

The Cedarcroft Sanitarium, Nashville, Tenn., announces a satisfactory treatment, which is guaranteed to overcome the morphine and all drug, liquor and tobacco habits.

One man over 50 years old, an addict of long standing, was recently cured of the morphine habit without using any medicine or a night's sleep. No withdrawal pains. No torture or inhuman treatment.

Recently we cured six patients from one small town, one after another, which shows faith in our institution. Be sure you get that we can cure you of these habits that we accept no return unless the patient is cured to his entire satisfaction.

payrolls of several departments could be greatly reduced, and without injury to the city, said Mr. Johnson.

Chairman Johnson stated that a prominent Atlanta business man, formerly a city official, had made a personal investigation of some of the city departments and reported to him that if given free rein he could bring about a saving of $100,000 a year from the city treasury.

He is going to find out if such a statement is true," said Mr. Johnson. "If it is, we will see council to take such steps as will correct these conditions."

For several weeks the construction department has been made the brunt of an attack on charges of extravagance by the city government. When it was stated that the head of the department was forced to retain men on the payroll because of a law passed by general council providing for a special amendment to make him the chief manager, however, have not overlooked the naming of the committee to investigate the department. They also know that Mayor Woodward accepted Councilman Johnson to introduce the measure providing for the special committee.

Mayor Woodward Blamed.—It is charged by heads of city departments that Mayor Woodward himself is largely to blame for the fact that the various departments are ordered their departments to greater size to time.

The point out that one of the city laws makes it mandatory on the mayor to call a conference with all the department heads and former Mayor Woodward returned to the mayor's office to discuss the plan and conference.

The department heads say they had a conference with the mayor, but they claim they felt a difficulty in taking the initiative in the finance sheet. This will be given careful attention.

Mr. Johnson stated that it was probable that a corps of auditors would be engaged to go over the city's records to determine the financial status of each department for use by the committee in making its investigations and recommendations to general council.

POLICE PERSONALS

City Detective John R. Black is one of the best of Wash-Dawson citizens of Atlanta. He has recovered more stolen jewelry for Peachtree street residents than any other detective in the south. Only recently, in two trips to Cincinnati, St. Louis and other middle-west cities, Detective Black recovered jewelry valued at more than $10,000. This jewelry, including handsome diamonds and pearls, is now being held at police headquarters until the cases against the alleged gang of thieves who have been rounded up can be prosecuted. Then it will be returned to Atlanta women, whose homes were robbed in recent months.

City Detective C. C. Cochran returned last Wednesday from Pensacola, Fla., where he had been to testify for the federal government against two alleged postoffice money-order swindlers, who were arrested in Atlanta recently by Detective Cochran and his side partner, Detective C. E. Sloan. The defendants were sentenced to three years each by the federal district judge, Pensacola.

Detective Bass Rosser is now living on Forbes avenue, just east of the intersection of North Boulevard.

Chief of Police James L. Beavers is slated for election as the new president of the Georgia State Association of Police Chiefs and Sheriffs. Friends and admirers of Chief Beavers all over the state, who are members of the association, have written Chief Beavers of their intention to back him for president.

Leading the Beavers forces at the annual convention of the police chiefs and marshals, which convenes in St. August for a two-day session, is Leonard Sumner, chief of police of Cordell, Ga. Chief Riley, of Macon, is slated for vice president.

A recent visitor at police station was Sheriff Hudson, of Spalding county. Sheriff Hudson calls on members of the Atlanta police force to arrest criminals wanted in Griffin, Ga., on warrants.

Sergeant George C. Bullard and his band of plainclothes policemen have been the sheriff's most used and trusted in arresting these criminals who flee to Atlanta.

Call Officer Sam E. Long, who recently was arrested by Captain A. J. Peelle and stripped of his accoutrements by Chief Beavers on the charge of being in hotel rooms with a man and woman, was exonerated of charges by Recorder George E. Johnson in police court Friday.

Officer Lohr, who is one of the jolliest and most popular officers on the police force, is receiving the congratulations of his friends in all sides.

Police Captain W. M. Mayo, Officer Jack Wingate and Grover Palm spent several days last week on the Ocmulgee river, near Jackson, Ga., on a fling trip.

When the captain returned to Atlanta last night he entertained the call officers around police station with many "snoring tales."

PAGEANTRY, A COUNTRY-WIDE FAD OR A PHASE OF NATIONAL LIFE?

OBERVE the ancient festival of the pageant blooming within these spacious borders of the United States.

If you take a map of the United States and dot it with little yellow dots in the cities and towns where pageants have been held recently or are about to be held your map will look like a field of dandelions in early spring.

America with its characteristic impetuosity has rushed headlong into the communal pastime of pageantry and has made a dozen groves where European countries have made only one grow before. Whether the American pageant is a fad, whether it is something that will last merely over night in this land of quick changes, or whether it is something that is to become a part of the national life is not known. The fact is that it is here and every city which has any sort of an excuse to take advantage of it is using it.

Yet here the pageant is merely in the bread and butter stages of its development. It is not supposed to be a sensational exhibition, but is intended to be a visible manifestation of a community's

The reason for its rapid spread in this country is that it gives the members of a community, collectively and individually, room for self-expression. For the time being theirs is all the joy that is supposed to belong to a real actor.

Pageantry, in other words, is a training school for persons to convey thoughts and feelings. It aims to increase a community's store of happiness by interpreting the meaning of human life and by bringing art and beauty into the lives of the everyday citizen. By constant recreating the manners and customs of other days and bringing to life again the incidents that took place within them, pageantry aims to keep the conscience of the race alive.

On a different side it marks the awakening of the people of a community to self-assertion and self-expression in their recreations. It permits the people to participate in their own entertainment. They are not merely in the position of paying to see a performance by hired actors, but they themselves are participating and helping to create a performance. And for these reasons the century-old pageant is blossoming into new life in this new land.

In their long history pageants have varied greatly in their presentation. What has not changed in pageantry, however, is the use of costumes, the practices of older days and the representations, activities and aspirations of human beings. In short the reason for pageantry is to be found in the desire to express the facts of life by means of poetry, art and romance. Because people are accustomed to ideals and throw a glamour around the people and conditions of older times the material for pageants is naturally taken from the days on which a glamour of poetry and romance rests.

One of the most noted of early pageants was that planned by the Emperor Augustus, whose chief desire was to restore the ideals of the simple and severe life of the Roman republic both in the family and in public affairs.

This pageant was held in 17 B. C. It continued for three days. With great ceremony offerings were made to the gods of figs, wheat and beans. By night near the Tiber, Augustus Arrippa made sacrifices after the ancestral manner. The people assembled and stood before their altars. At each ceremonial in the darkness of the night an ancient invocation was used and was repeated at daylight.

As in early days games and sports were held to amuse the populace. The final and most inspiring ceremony came when twenty-seven calves were offered to Apollo at his temple on the Palatine. Twenty-seven boys and twenty-seven girls sang an ode to Apollo which was written by the famous poet Horace. After all these solemn religious ceremonies there followed three days of rejoicing. Ambitious proconsuls in various parts of the Roman empire imitated the example of their emperor and instituted games and pageants. Their use continued until the break up of the Roman power by the invading tribes of barbarians.

The work of popular entertainment was not taken up again until Europe had gone through the stress and tumult of her dark ages and her society had begun to take some sort of shape. It was the church and the court who began the revival of pageantry. Under the guidance of the church miracle and morality plays began to have great popularity.

There was probably no time in the history of the world when there was such a vast amount of material with which to impress the senses and to arouse the imagination. Even to this day those who make spectacular performances and pageants draw upon the Middle Ages whenever they can for their story and material.

The Crusades brought the people of the Middle Ages into contact with the east and as a result new and strange costumes, habits, music, art and many other things were brought into the life of the west.

One of the earliest of the European pageants was that at the Field of the Cloth of Gold at the meeting of Henry VIII of England and Francis I of France. It made a tremendous impression on the popular mind.

In Germany and Italy, particularly in the cities, the rulers made a great deal of civic pageants on fixed days and special occasions. Certain rules and principles they established remain to this day. Monarchs still continued to find their greatest chances for display in coronation days. Any one who read of the coronation exercises at the crowning of George V of England in 1911 could see how much of the archaic was preserved in that elaborate ceremonial and what a powerful hold the function still has on the popular mind.

Napoleon was one of those astute rulers, who well realized the value of pageants in impressing the populace. On many occasions he ordered processions and brilliant displays. All of these endeavored to dramatize and romanticize his power and by delighting the French people he sought to impress them with his greatness.

The street parades and the circus are crude imitations of the pageant. Although parades and circuses are often cheap and to the last degree their charm for the public never ceases and the smallest and cheapest sort of a parade is always sure to draw its big crowd. In England and America in the past twenty-five years pageantry has come into its own and wonderful progress has been made in giving these affairs. In England a series of celebrations of anniversaries of some of the oldest towns of that land gave the opportunity for new and amazingly interesting applications of the pageant idea.

Marietta, O., in 1888, celebrated the earliest formal pageant held in the United States. Its aim was purely educational and was to teach history by the objective method. Scenes from early American settlement life were the principal features. Philadelphia, Buffalo, Springfield, Quebec, Lake Champlain, Hadley and St. Louis have all celebrated events in their histories with great pageants. That which St. Louis gave recently was the most pretentious ever seen on the American continent. High schools and colleges have likewise resorted to the pageant in their celebrations.

Those who have been watching the course of pageants in this country predict a general rise of interest in them. Entertainment with splendid effects in color, form and music to please and improve the popular taste and to stimulate pride in town, state and nation will become a regular feature of American life, they say. And it is pointed out, too, that the immigration population of the United States with its variety of manners, customs and costumes will be a fruitful source of inspiration to the writers and organizers of these pageants.

50 SUSPECTS HELD TO CONFER WITH WILSON-LANSING

And Posses Are Still Scouring Country About Greenville, Ala.—The Amount of Booty Secured Not Known.

Montgomery, Ala., July 10.—Eighty men and fifteen boys tonight failed to identify either of the three men held by the police here charged with the robbery of the New York City New Orleans Limited near Greenville early this morning. The police are nevertheless holding the three for further investigation. All told, there are approximately fifty men under arrest in various sections of middle Alabama charged with suspicion.

A 20-mile circle is being scoured around Greenville for the bandits, who are believed to have taken the train and in what is known as "Big Swamp," a dense stretch of country several miles wide and fifteen miles long, almost impassable. Advices from Greenville say only 150 men are engaged in the search.

The amount of money the bandits as yet have obtained is known as the result of the search. The amount of money the bandits as yet have obtained is known as the result of the search. The amount of money the bandits as yet have obtained is known as the result of the search.

The bandits, after forcing the engine crew to abandon their engine, cut loose the mail baggage and express cars, ran a short distance down the track, the train derailed and the engine started to back up. Conductor Found Dead. Conductor Phil Melton, of Montgomery, Ala., was reported to have been killed by the bandits. Later it was stated he was found dead sitting on the steps of the observation car of his train and State Prison Inmate Gates, who was a passenger, in authority for the statement that no wound was found on Melton. It was said the bandits fired a shot at Melton and Gates.

Band and Gargled. Chief Mail Clerk Waters, who remained in his car, held up at the point of a pistol and bound and gagged. First news of the robbery came from the railroad officials here when it was reported that the train had been derailed and the engine started to back up. A special train was sent to the scene at once.

Booby Snatched to $100,000. The amount of the consignment was not disclosed. The robbery was carefully planned and that the robbers escaped in a white automobile is declared by the official news in charge of the investigation. STUDEBAKER COMPANY INSURES EMPLOYEES

Big Organization Leads the Way in the Automobile World.

Under an arrangement in effect with one of the largest life insurance companies the Studebaker corporation has placed life insurance for a substantial sum upon each one of its employees. This does not include the work-shops of the different plants. The amount of insurance placed for each individual is sufficient to provide for sickness and funeral expenses, and will leave a comfortable balance for other immediate needs of the beneficiaries.

The insuring company is the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, the policy being on the risk concern and increases in value for each additional year in effect. The Studebaker corporation is the first automobile manufacturing company to insure its employees this protection. As the insurance will extend to the age of eight to ten thousand workers, meaning an expenditure of $1,000,000 of dollars annually for the premium fee, the extent of the interest in the welfare of the employees can be readily appreciated.

The arrangement dispenses with the usual physical examination required for life insurance, through acceptance of the examination which every Studebaker workman must undergo before being given employment. This is in line with the policy of the institution to surround its men with clean, healthful and sanitary conditions.

For those length of employment matter, the only requirement is that the insured person shall have been on the rolls of the corporation when taken with the fatal illness. No expense whatever attaches to the insured, all being borne by the Studebaker corporation.

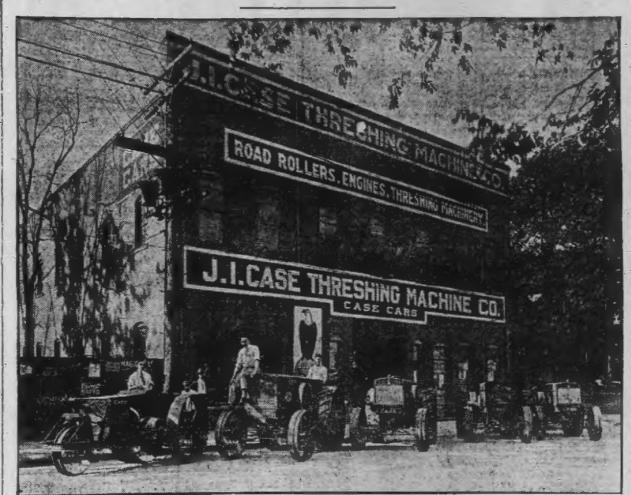

Of recent years there has been a general tendency on the part of manufacturers, and in particular the larger ones, to bring about a closer and more intimate relationship between employer and employee. It was a movement inspired by humanitarianism and given impetus by splendid results rapidly attained. Safety appliances were installed as swiftly as they could be devised, more sanitary conditions were inaugurated and factory environments made more pleasant. The effect was that the men worked in better spirit, and without being driven to it, accomplished a great deal more work in the same amount of time than under the old order of things.

In time the system was extended so as to include the homes of the workmen. In them was included a spirit for better living, with a view to getting the most out of the time that was to be found in life.

The Studebaker corporation has been greatly interested in this principle for years, due in all probability to the fact that the founders of the institution lived in terms of greatest intimacy with the men who toiled in their shops. Until the factories took the form of the modern ones, thousands were housed within the walls of the Studebaker plant, and the men could walk through the different workrooms and call a majority of the men by first name. They took a personal interest in the efforts of the men to secure homes of their own and were not loath to lend financial assistance in worthy cases.

The outgrowth of this has been the welfare department of the Studebaker factories, considered as important and essential as any branch of the service. In connection with this is maintained a force of investigators, whose duty it is to keep in close touch with the home life of employees. Frequently cases have been found where some very helpful assistance could be worthily given, and this was performed unostentatiously and in a manner that left an impression of gratitude with the recipient. In the men's work of the welfare department has been along educational lines, so carefully handled that the men promptly appreciated the gov-

Growing Demand Among Farmers For Modern Traction Engines

Portion of shipment of traction engines of assorted styles and horse-power recently received by the Atlanta branch of the Case company.

That the modern traction engine is increasing in popularity among the extensive planters of this section is indicated in the fact that the Atlanta branch of the J. I. Case Threshing Machine company has just received one of the largest shipments of tractors ever brought south.

J. E. Burke, local manager, states the demand for modern machinery in Georgia and neighboring states is the cause of the company's action in placing an unusually large supply of tractors here.

"Case does not experimenting at the cost of its customers," said Mr. Burke. "This statement which we have often made is again substantiated by the record of our 2-horse power gas tractor. In its first public appearance, which was at Wimpsey, it won the gold medal, producing 33 per cent more draw-bar pull than its closest competitor. Moreover, it cost this competitor 1 1/2 per cent more to plow an acre than Case. The result bears out our policy of testing our machines thoroughly under all conditions before they are offered to the public.

The owners of small farms have begun to realize that a tractor of this size, built as this one is built, is a necessity for efficient farm management. This Case 2 will do with less expense of time, labor and money, the work for which teams have been used. You who farm with horses, no matter how small your acreage, cannot afford to keep to the old way of doing things. The modern farmer is a power farmer and he produces results.

erning spirit and were drawn into the plans for social betterment by the force of their own enthusiasm. Where improvement was especially noticeable substantial encouragement was given. The general results have been eminently satisfactory to both the corporation and its employees, each side holding to the belief that all endeavors have been amply repaid.

Announcement of the Studebaker corporation taking out this form of insurance on the employees has created a great deal of talk, not only in insurance circles, but among manufacturers as well, for the policies involve several million dollars of insurance.

The corporation is sixty-three years old and the plants at South Bend and Detroit, covering nearly 150 acres, constitute the largest vehicle business in the world.

An ant can carry a grain of corn ten times the weight of its own body, while a horse and a man can carry a burden only about equal to their own weight.

REMARKABLE RECORD MADE IN BIG RACES BY BOSCH MAGNETOS

"Cars may come and cars may go but accessories go on forever," remarked E. H. Baughman, manager of the Auburn Automobile Supply Company, in reply to an inquiry about a business condition, and the appearance of the new establishment of these distributors bore out the implied meaning of his remark. During the past year their business has steadily grown until it has recently become necessary to secure larger quarters to meet their increased needs, this new home being at 297 Peachtree street.

The Auburn Automobile Supply Company are the exclusive distributors of Bosch Magnetos throughout the entire south, and Mr. Baughman, with pardonable pride, directed attention to the most remarkable record ever established by any accessory. During the past thirty days, which, by the way, have witnessed the smashing of nearly all existing automobile race records, the Bosch Magneto has been a prominent factor in every victory. When Dario Resta in his Peugeot raced 500 miles at the unprecedented speed of 77.8 miles per hour he was driving a Bosch equipped car, and when it is noted that every car to finish that was Bosch equipped the Chicago Auto Derby race following 100 per cent Bosch victories in the Vanderbilt Cup, Grand Prix, Indianapolis 500-mile Sweepstakes, and practically every other race of the year, constitutes a most interesting chapter in racing history.

The Auburn Automobile Supply Company, who in addition to being distributors of Bosch Magnetos, Carburetors and Hess-Bright Ball Bearings, have added two new lines, via, Leak Proof Piston Rings and Pyrene Fire Extinguishers.

KING

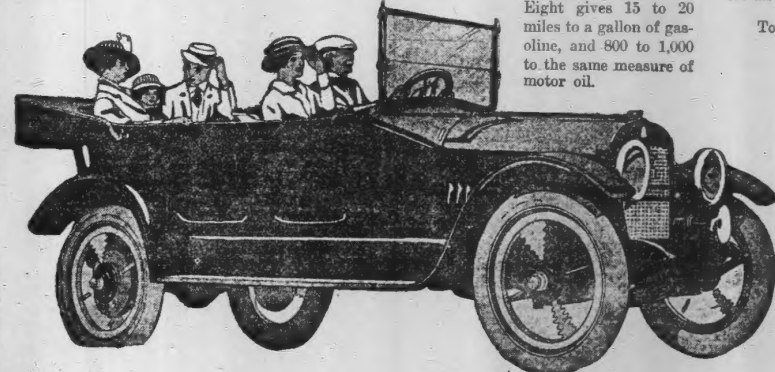

The World's First Popular-Priced Eight

The One Big Outstanding Feature of the 1916 Motor Season

The King Motor Car Company has placed the "EIGHT" in the popular-priced class, and in offering the new Model D to the public the King Company is living up to its reputation as a pioneer in motor car building.

In the King "EIGHT" the Six is exceeded in flexibility and freedom from vibration, equalled in power, yet there is the same economy of operation, easy turning length and light weight, as in the moderate priced four.

Notwithstanding the fact that the New Model King has so many cylinders and 40 to 45 horsepower, the King Eight gives 15 to 20 miles to a gallon of gasoline, and 800 to 1,000 to the same measure of motor oil.

This is the most accessible EIGHT; cam shaft and valve guides may be exposed in a moment. The Touring Model has a roomy five-passenger body, with deep, tilted seats, long foot room and wide doors. Its complete equipment includes the Ward-Leonard Electric Starting and Lighting System and an engine-driven tire pump.

The King Eight is not an experiment, but the same successful type of car made by celebrated European builders for the past six years. It is King designed and King manufactured, and has many hundreds of miles of gruelling road tests behind it. Enthusiastic owners all over America are boosting the sales of the King Eight.

To ride in the King Eight is to realize that what you should NOW expect from a motor car is contained in the New Model King. It is a great car—the one popular priced eight-cylinder car on the market—and as they have come to know it, to recognize its superior qualities, the automobilists of Atlanta have paid their tribute to the King Eight. The men in Atlanta who KNOW motor car value have fallen in love with the new powerful King.

We know a demonstration will convince you of the fact that the King Eight is the car for you to buy—at any rate, you'll be interested in knowing the new Eight-Cylinder King. Why not?

SECOND INSTALLMENT

Kitty Gray, newspaper woman, finds in a curio shop half of a broken coin, the mutilated inscription of which arouses her curiosity and leads her, at the order of her manager editor, to go to the principality of Gresthoffen to piece out the story suggested by the inscription. She is followed and arrested in Gresthoffen her adventures while chasing the secret of the broken coin begin.

CHAPTER VI.

Count Frederick.
Kitty Gray turned suddenly to the man seated beside her in the motor, bending upon him a steady gaze.

"Who are you?" asked she. "Why did you follow me?"
The swathed figure suddenly straightened. "Whatever I am—whatever you may think me, do not believe me incapable of gratitude to yourself."
"What is your name?"
"They call me Rolsen, Mademoiselle."
Kitty Gray turned yet more closely to him, gazed straight into his eyes.

"Then why do you call me? Surely we have a common cause. We have a common enemy. Would it be wrong did you and I league against him?"
"You ask me, then—"
"To be my friend?" he asked.
"Surely I owe him no allegiance further!" exclaimed Rolsen bitterly. "He struck me like a dog."
"Let you and I must see him again—and soon."
"What! Would you trust yourself once more in his presence? You are an American girl—you are innocent, you are ignorant. I warn you."
"None the less, if I am to go forward with the business which brought me here to Gresthoffen, surely I must once more meet the Count Frederick. Do you fear to do so? I ask you to divide the risk, Monsieur—with a woman."
The man at her side related no more than an instant. "Very well," said he calmly. "As for me, my life has been forfeit many a time before now. What matter? I will go with you as you wish. Indeed, I fancy I know why you ask me to go—they know me at the palace—they will admit us both."
It was as Rolsen had said. When finally the two drew up to the court driveway in front of the count's palace, they were admitted without question. Rolsen closed the door behind him and put a finger to his lips for silence.

"They will listen," he whispered. "Be careful. This is the room where the Count Frederick receives his friends."
Curiously, silently, Kitty sat or at times walked about the room, taking stock of the surroundings. Count Frederick entered.
"Mademoiselle! I am charmed! So you remember me?"
"You may say as much indeed," rejoined Kitty Gray calmly. "I saw you in the carriage this morning."
He turned now to Rolsen, with no change in his countenance to indicate any recollection of the nature of their last meeting. "You may retire to the next room," said he, dismissing him with a wave of the hand.

"Do not in the least misunderstand me, Monsieur le Comte," said she lightly. "My business is very simple. I have a proposition to make to you—a business proposition."
"But I am not a business man," mocked the smiling aristocrat who faced her. He came yet a half step closer.

"Are you so sure?" exclaimed she suddenly. "Is there no business in which you are definitely concerned—in which also I am definitely concerned? Then why did you send a messenger to follow me in my own country, to ransack my apartments there, to violate my privacy even on the staircase?"
"My man served me but ill—if I may admit part of what you say, Mademoiselle."
"That is why I am here—in my company? You sent your messenger as I know you. Come, let us reason together over this Monsieur le Comte. Shall it be business or war between us?"
The sheer audacity of this speech for one moment daunted Count Frederick. The next he broke into a roar of laughter and flung himself into a chair. "Admirable!" said he.

She started away from him, moving toward the door. "I came, Monsieur le Comte," said she boldly, "to ask you a price for the half coin which you seek to hold. Suppose, for instance, that Gresthoffen had been executed for you finally in New York—what do you think you are at? Come now, let us reason."
"I am beyond reason; I care little for the world's side. I value not so much money as what money brings. It could bring me no more than what fortune has brought me at no cost, this morning—this very hour."
"Rolsen!" cried Kitty suddenly. "A moil! An accursed! Vile!"
"You waste breath," laughed Count Frederick. "I cannot come."
Kitty made one swift dart toward the door. She was too late. The relentless face of her opponent smiled at her, his strong fingers turned the key in the lock, removed it, thrust it into his pocket.

"Mademoiselle," he said calmly, "you say you came on business. Very well, let us talk business. We know something of the history of a certain broken coin. Very good. You have half of it. We will say I have the other. Give me your half the coin, and I will let you go. Release and I'll never let you go."
"I will do nothing under compulsion from you or any other man," said Kitty Gray stoutly. "I offer you a fair price for your half the coin."
"No! No!"
A loud pounding on the door interrupted them at this moment. "It is Rolsen," smiled the count. "I will have him whipped."
The face of Kitty Gray had grown like marble. Suddenly, with one swift movement, she dashed her clenched hand with all her force into the face which bent toward her. A loud rattle arose under the swift impact. The tall man staggered back. The next instant Kitty felt her wrist caught in an iron grasp. Struggling, she was forced backward. She felt another hand grasp her wrist.

denly. "On guard! He is breaking in the door—quick, excellency!"
And even as Rolsen, by a mighty heave had burst in the door, Grahame and his master hurried Kitty to the rear door of the alcove. It made out upon a dimly-lighted hall.
Rolsen heard them pass, followed swiftly as he could. But it was empty. The purr of a motor setting under way reached his ears.
"So, then—we failed," said Rolsen bitterly.

CHAPTER VII.

In the Desert.
Convinced against her will, as she hurried along in the grasp of the two powerful men, that compulsion would serve her purpose better than resistance, Kitty Gray took her place on the seat of the motor car.
"More and more I admire you," said the man at her side, as the motor swung into its speed. "What a woman you are! If you would but give me time—"

1—Very Well, Let Us Talk Business.

"You shall have all the time you ask, Monsieur le Comte!"
"Still, I ponder as to your motive in all this. It cannot be money."
"Indeed it is money—in part."
"How much, Mademoiselle?"
"A year's salary—I have got much at stake, on my word. Twelve hundred dollars, Monsieur le Comte. It is a fortune for me."
Count Frederick flung himself back upon the cushions and laughed long and loud. "Twelve hundred dollars!" said he. "Twelve hundred dollars in a whole year, in an entire year? My dear, give me the half coin you have upon you, and I promise you shall have twelve hundred dollars to spend as you like each and every day of your life, as long as you live in my country, is it a trade? You said you came to talk business."
"For the first time now Kitty looked about her, scarce having realized how long their journey had been. So great had been their speed that by this time they had cleared the city walls of Gresthoffen and passed the tiled farmlands of the village. It was what was known locally as the desert—a neutral ground, not tiled and incapable of successful tillage, which lay between the two kingdoms of Gresthoffen on the east and Grahoben on the west. Suddenly, with the usual rifle report, there was an explosion of the tire. The car was practically helpless.

Kitty looked about her vaguely, fearfully, but as she bent from the open window she heard in the distance the chug of another motor, driven rapidly, thrown wide open and coming forward at great speed. "Quick! Grahame," she called to the faithful attendant who had been injured in her case.
"Rolsen, good morning," said she. "How goes it, then?"
"Excellent! I am quite well. I find my wound not to be serious. I can travel."
"Better rest for yet a time," said Kitty. "It will be the best medicine for you. As for myself, I purpose now to go out and spy out the land."
"Alone, Mademoiselle?"
"Surely, you cannot yet accompany me. If I should not return within say an hour or two, you might look out after me. But in no case exert yourself too much."

She left him, making some excuse to her peasant hosts, and passed out from the little cottage. She walked on steadily, not ill content after all, until just as she arrived at the edge of the forest she noticed advancing from its depths a little party of horsemen, who were riding swiftly toward her on the trail.
They came on at a gallop, foreign-looking men, richly clad, dark of visage, equipped as though for the hunt. The apparent leader of the party, a stouter, sturdier man, dark of hair and richly clad, rode slightly in advance of the others.
Catching sight of a young woman—and a very pretty one—standing thus alone on the forest road, this gentleman pulled up suddenly. "Bonjour, mademoiselle," said Kitty, with her usual recourse to the French language.
"Et mes, est-ce que vous parlez Français?" And at once he himself broke into voluble French, much to Kitty's delight.

"I am an American," she went on to say.
"I ask pardon, Mademoiselle," rejoined the dark man—whose bold eyes, after what seemed to Kitty to be the fashion of the country, now were carefully estimating her, line by line—"I beg your pardon, but Mademoiselle is always 'Why?'"
"My companion is ill yonder at the peasant's house. There was an accident yesterday with our motor—he is not yet able to travel."
"I am riding but now to my own hunting lodge, a few miles yonder at the edge of the forest; why not come with me so that we might speak over this matter? I am entertaining friends there—a little hunt party—there are other ladies. You will be welcome. If you can ride—"
"Oh, yes," said Kitty. "I can manage."
It was not long before they arrived at the hunting lodge.

Here a party greeted them, of gentlemen and ladies as well, welcoming Count Sacho and his friends.
Count Sacho introduced his guests with a few words in his own language. They stared politely, smiled discreetly, but made Kitty welcome.

"Ah, the Count Frederick! It was he who left us here."
"I will believe that also. Come, then, let us hasten—the may return. Your man lives yet, his may be saved."
He made a gesture now to his attendants, and as some of them lifted the limp form of Rolsen, he himself assisted Kitty to mount. A few moments later and the strange procession was again on its way.

"Mademoiselle," said the leader at length, as he drew up alongside, "I must continue on into my own country. We are near the edge of it here. At the little stream which lies just beyond there is a house of a peasant—it is but a hovel and no fit place for you, that is true. But even so, that is better either for you or for your man."
They advanced now a little distance farther, until within full sight of the peasant's little hut, Rolsen made signs that his charges should be assisted in dismounting.
The cow-like peasant woman proved not inapt in ministrations—perhaps she had seen such hurst as these before in her life here on the border. She made Rolsen comfortable.

Worn out body and soul, mind and nerves, Kitty Gray turned at length to the rude couch, glad enough to forget her trials in the blessedness of sleep.

terror—the appeal for help—a woman's first weapon of defense. For even as she did so, she heard the sound of hoofs on the trail beyond the edge of the forest.

"Rolsen!" She cried aloud, "A moil!"
Kitty guessed, rather than knew, that Rolsen's uneasiness on her account had led him to pursue her. Such, indeed, was the case.

"Who are you, man?" demanded Count Sacho, imperiously. "I am Sacho of Grahoben, man—one who need not declare himself to you. Your life shall pay for this!"
"Good! Why not now, my friend?" retorted Rolsen calmly. "I have seen men of many sorts before now, but none that I feared. This lady is in my car. She will ride with me, and we will ride better horses than that on which I came."
Even as he spoke he passed rapidly among the spirited mounts of the little party lately arrived. Two he selected for himself and Kitty.

"So, Monsieur Sacho of Grahoben," said he, "you will ride with short girths if you follow us. In truth he had cut a piece out of the girth of each one of the unused horses.
An instant later he and Kitty were mounted and speeding away.

CHAPTER VIII.

Count Sacho of Grahoben.
At sunrise of the following morning Kitty awoke as suddenly as she had fallen asleep the night before.
After her frugal breakfast with the old peasant folk—with whom she could hold no conversation whatever—she set out for the bedside of the faithful attendant who had been injured in her case.
"Rolsen, good morning," said she. "How goes it, then?"
"Excellent! I am quite well. I find my wound not to be serious. I can travel."
"Better rest for yet a time," said Kitty. "It will be the best medicine for you. As for myself, I purpose now to go out and spy out the land."
"Alone, Mademoiselle?"
"Surely, you cannot yet accompany me. If I should not return within say an hour or two, you might look out after me. But in no case exert yourself too much."

When Count Frederick and his accomplice Grahame left their two victims lying helpless in the sand plain, they themselves made all speed possible back to the capital. In spite of his regret at violence to a woman, exultation sat on the dark features of Count Frederick.
"Now, Grahame," he exclaimed, "at last we have it!"
"Excellent!" rejoined the other, "you have but half the coin. I told you where the two pieces were—where each was. One you have at last, and after some trouble. But the other is still in the possession of Michael the king. He may not yield it easily."
"With ease or difficulty, he shall give it up," growled Count Frederick. "We will take it from him if need be."
And straightway to the royal palace of Gresthoffen they fared on, fast as might be. There was no difficulty in securing admission, for the Count Frederick was well known at the palace, almost as the king himself.
King Michael II looked with a certain disapproval upon Count Frederick's dusty clothes.
"I ask your majesty's pardon, but I have had no time to arrange myself in proper courtesy. My errand is urgent. But I fancy you cannot guess it?"
"Not in the least."
"Your Majesty has promised me some little thing in reward for a certain service which I was able to render not long ago. It was rude of me to remind of that—but suddenly there came up a need for some little trinket—some jewel—some oddity. You are so ready, I wish it for a lady, and my jewel told me he could make me of this broken coin."
"There is a woman in it!" The puppy eyes of the king showed interest now.
"To be sure—there is always a woman."
"Why then a peer, a sapphire, a diamond perhaps? Take as you like." He waved an indifferent, pudgy hand toward a cabinet. "Michael the Second keeps all his promises."
"But why not the coin, your Majesty?"
"You persist! So do I suggest that for a lady

"Now, be off with you all!" exclaimed Count Sacho. "To the woodland paths, since the morning is so fresh."
"Mademoiselle, you will have refreshments!" he asked, as, laughing gaily, the others dispersed.
"Nothing more for me than a cup of tea," said Kitty gravely. "Let you think me rude—perhaps it may be well for me to excuse myself. Is there any way in which I may get back to the cottage where I left my man?"
"Not so fast, not so fast as all that, ma chérie! You have not tested out my humble place as well as I would ask. Come, what thing you of it? Is it not a pleasant place to tarry for a time? Why are unreasonable? It is my own plan to be reasonable only to a certain extent. Our place is secret—and no scoundrel ever got out from it."
Not his words so much as his manner set swift alarm into Kitty Gray's heart. Swiftly she arose and made back as he, warned somewhat by his wiles, now advanced toward her, smiling. Her gesture angered him and he stepped forward, but more swiftly. At once Kitty gave voice to a loud cry of —and you say there is a lady—you make some gift more fitting. The coin is not presently at hand. Help yourself to something that is better."

Count Frederick was a man of wit quick enough to see that there was no time to force an argument. Defeated once more, he even accepted his defeat. He stepped now to the little drawer which the king pulled open for him, and selected a very modest little ring, which carefully he dropped into his own pocket.
An instant later he excused himself, after expressing his best wishes for his Majesty and making some excuse which would make the purpose of his errand less obvious.

CHAPTER IX.
Gresthoffen.

Arrived at his own home, Count Frederick of Gresthoffen found a little pile of unopened letters waiting for him, and picked up one bearing the crest of Count Sacho of Grahoben.
"So, Sacho asks me to join him at a little hunting party at his lodge in the forest beyond the neutral ground. I believe I'll go. After all, it might not be a bad thing to find out a little more about the condition of those two we left roving in the desert. Yes, I'll ride back the very way I just have come."
Miles after miles slipped ribbonlike beneath their speeding wheels. Soon they had left behind them almost all sights of the green commons and the fenced fields which lay under the walls of Gresthoffen town. It was Grahame who first detected, far ahead, a little dust cloud of advancing travelers. He called the attention of his master.

"Glasses, Grahame—find what it is!"
Even the stolid Grahame gave a sharp exclamation. "Here come two riding, a man and a woman. I swear, I believe it is the two, both come to life again! Where have they been meantime, and why are they riding now so fast this way?"
"Rolsen!" exclaimed Count Frederick. "Alfred! I'll have to be more careful next time."
They advanced now more slowly and pulled up at the foot of a little ravine, where a cross trail came from the right, leading no one knew where, over the Man's Land between the two kingdoms of Gresthoffen and Grahoben. Here the depression concealed them and they awaited the arrival of the two travelers.

"That came in my course, but with it almost synchronously yet other events. A sound of shouting became audible. To the right, along a curving cross-road of the desert, there came into view, riding at top speed, whooping aloud as they sped forward a ragged band of drunken ruffians—none less than a party of the banditti which in those somewhat lawless days infested this open and little-traveled region, a sort of No Man's Land. "Come, your majesty!" exclaimed the leader of these ruffians. "You know me! I am Landosi, chief of the Brotherhood. My men like work none too well, and we must eat and drink. You more, please—or we will take it whether or not you please."
Contentedly, Count Frederick reached into his pockets and fung upon the ground before them such valuables as he had.

The bandits now turned to repeat this process with the other two strangers.
"What have we here—a woman, and a beautiful one!" exclaimed the bandit chief. "She wears no jewels—perhaps she has not much money for us. But still, there are other ways. What say you, my fellows, shall we hold her for a ransom?"
The man Rolsen here raised his hand and spoke with authority.

"My friends," he said, "what I have is little and it is yours, for you are my brothers and I know you must live as well as I. I know you are friends of the king's troops—shortly we will ride thither together, if you don't mind. As for this lady, lay no hand upon her. I tell you, she is a highness of a foreign land, none less than America, across the sea."
"And why not fit for ransom then?" demanded the bandit chief.

"Because," said she, "you are one of the ladies of the king's household—she is protected by King Michael II himself, no less. She is of his rank in life, I tell you, my brothers."
The bandits here turned toward his men, but a murmur of assent ratified what Rolsen had said.
"Good!" said he suddenly. "I know you well, Rolsen. The lady is safe with us. We will do more—we will accompany you to the walls of the city itself."
Under the walls of Gresthoffen itself they met a troop of the king's horse, riding out for practice. Their officer was not unknown to Count Frederick—and for that matter, the leader of the bandits, Landosi himself, seemed not unknown. Loitering along, they rode now up to the city's gates, Rolsen himself keeping his fair companion at his own side and close to the leader of the bandits, whom forsooth he trusted more than any of the others, and who seemed much impressed by Kitty's charms.

Yet another event transpired before the two parties separated near the city's gate. An additional party of horsemen, riding bare from the desert, appeared—none less than Count Sacho, a friend or two and a small group of retainers!
"Sachoi!" exclaimed Count Frederick. "My friend, you come but in time."
"I may well believe it," said Sacho, dryly, gazing at the assemblage about him. "Had I met this gentleman," he nodded toward Landosi, with whose identity he was well enough acquainted, "perhaps I might have needed greater argument."
"All is well that ends well, my good Sachoi!" exclaimed Count Frederick. "Listen. I was on the very point of riding to you—was on my way some miles out yonder in the desert in my car—when I was taken prisoner by these gentlemen, our friends here. And now without word from me you join me here. Well, then, let us exchange invitations. Be my guest instead of my host."
"You know this lady?" asked Sacho aside, nodding towards Kitty.

"But slightly," rejoined Count Frederick. "And you?"
"But slightly," smiled Sacho, and he told no more.
"How is she?" asked the captain of the troop, sotto voce, of Rolsen.
"I tell you all, my friends," answered that sturdy soul. "She is a highness from abroad, an excellency. Take care, my friends. She goes to the palace—she is to meet the king."

Germany's Foreign Relations

Opinion Almost Unanimous That Berlin Has Failed to Give Assurances That American Rights Will Be Respected.

TRUST IS EXPRESSED IN PRESIDENT WILSON

Editors Feel That He Will Handle Situation as Honor and Dignity of the Nation Demand—Some Editors Harsh in Comment on the German Note, Terming It Insulting.

Washington, July 11.—The German note to the United States, which was received here this morning, has been read and discussed in the highest circles of the government. The opinion is almost unanimous that Berlin has failed to give assurances that American rights will be respected. The note is regarded as an insult to the United States and its people. The German government is accused of having violated international law and of having acted in a manner that is unworthy of a great nation. The American people are expected to respond to this challenge with a firm and dignified stand.

Washington Star: It may well be recognized that the German answer to the American note is a complete denial of the American demands. The German government has been asked whether in its relation with this government it is in a manner befitting a great nation, subject to and respectful of international law. To this plain question a negative answer has been received.

Chicago Journal: The German note just received in Washington is one of the most insolent and evasive messages ever addressed by the government of one great nation to that of another. It fails to offer any explanation or apology for the killing of Americans and the Lusitania and other vessels. Clearly the flag, reputation and good name of the United States are being trampled upon.

Mobile (Ala.) Register: Germany's reply embodies a counter proposition that the American public has no right to demand. The German government is accused of having violated international law and of having acted in a manner that is unworthy of a great nation. The American people are expected to respond to this challenge with a firm and dignified stand.

St. Louis Times-Star: Not by any stretch of the imagination can the latest German note be deemed anything more than a complete denial of the American demands. The German government has been asked whether in its relation with this government it is in a manner befitting a great nation, subject to and respectful of international law. To this plain question a negative answer has been received.

St. Paul Dispatch: The German note just received in Washington is one of the most insolent and evasive messages ever addressed by the government of one great nation to that of another. It fails to offer any explanation or apology for the killing of Americans and the Lusitania and other vessels. Clearly the flag, reputation and good name of the United States are being trampled upon.

Below will be found the comment of the American press on the latest German note to the United States: New York Globe: Germany's reply to the second Lusitania note is as unsatisfactory as her reply to the first. There is evasion of the simple issue as to whether Germany intends to violate international law when the Lusitania was sunk. The American citizens are expected to respond to this challenge with a firm and dignified stand.

New York Evening Sun: The German reply would be a climax of impudence if it were not a marvel of audacity. The German government is accused of having violated international law and of having acted in a manner that is unworthy of a great nation. The American people are expected to respond to this challenge with a firm and dignified stand.

New York Herald: Stripped of its cant about "humanity" of its pretense about Germany's previous contentions in behalf of "abolishment of the right of capture" . . . of its tirade against Great Britain and its atrociously specious contentions with regard to the Lusitania, the German answer to the United States is one of defiance.

MRS. ROBERT LANSING.

Although Mrs. Robert Lansing, the wife of the new secretary of state, is not a "Society" woman in the usually accepted meaning of the term, she has had wide and intimate experience of life in the great capitals of Europe, and her long residence in Washington has familiarized her with the peculiar social problems of the place and with the far-reaching effects of the social side of diplomacy and statecraft.

THE TIRES THAT FELL

Looked Like Goodyears at the Start

Don't Trust Looks Snap Judgment

In a great tire, most of the virtues are hidden. In a poor tire, the skipping is there. The difference is enormous, but it doesn't show.

The Goodyear extras on our output this year will cost us $1,635,000. That's for five great features used by no one else, and for other features not commonly employed. Yet Goodyear Fortified tires with plain treads look about like others.

Better trust the seasoned judgment of motorists in general. Goodyear tires have sold all over the world. And this year their good repute is adding thousands to our users.

In Goodyears you get quantity values. Despite our extras, our mammoth output brings our prices down. In two years our price reductions have totaled 45 per cent. This year's reduction saves our users about five million dollars.

Makers with small outputs can't match Goodyear values. You must not expect it. You cannot get Goodyear features unless you get Goodyear tires.

Any dealer will supply you.

Quantity Values

Don't buy a tire on somebody's snap judgment. He may have had rare luck. One tire meets mishap or misuse and other tires escape them. But the best-built tire will serve best on the average.

Southern Tennis Champion and Man He Downed Saturday

At the bottom, on the left, is E. V. Carter, Jr., of Atlanta, who has added the Southern tennis championship in singles to his other tennis trophies. Carter recently won the South Atlantic title at Augusta, for the third consecutive time. At the top, on the right, is F. Phelps of New Orleans, the man that Carter defeated in the final. Phelps was elected president of the Southern Lawn Tennis Association at a meeting of the directors last night.

SOUTHERN LEAGUE

Gulls 8, Travelers 0.

Mobile, Ala., July 10.—Mobile made a clean sweep of the series with Little Rock, taking today's game, 8 to 0. Coachman, pitching for the second time in the series, will start throughout while Covington gave the visitors but four hits. Left Fielder Murray was in the face with a pitched ball in the ninth inning and fainted on the field. He is not seriously hurt. Calhoun's work on the bases featured the game. He scored from first base on a single in the fourth inning.

How High Divers Control Their Bodies by Sheer Force of Concentration

Absolute concentration while diving through the air, say men who have been experts in this seemingly hazardous occupation for years, keeps the body just where it should be. The diver who fails to keep his mind thus concentrated does not remain in the profession—most of them, in fact, lose their lives as well as their means of earning a livelihood.

Walter Emmingsen, a high diver who has become known as a carnival attraction throughout the middle West, declares that diving from a 100-foot tower into a tub of water is as easy and far less hazardous to the expert than driving a speedy automobile.

"First, you must have confidence," said Emmingsen. "Having the confidence, you must have the knowledge of bodily control. After that it comes to be a matter of practice. Just like walking, running a typewriter or rowing a boat."

"Was I never have been afraid since I learned the first principles of diving, because I knew that I had the ability to get away with my act. I realize, however, that it will cost me my life if I ever do get frightened. Some of the oldest actors confessed to an occasional fit of stage fright."

HAVE you ever marveled at the skill of the "high diver" who leaps from a dizzy height into a shallow tub of water?

To all appearances every law of nature is defied in these leaps. But, as far as statistics show, never has a death of serious accident occurred where a diver maintained control of his nerves.

The safety of the "high diver" lies in this scientific truth—that the body may be kept in complete control even when whirling through the air. This control is not only possible but absolutely essential, since a miscalculation of even a foot in the fall means certain death.

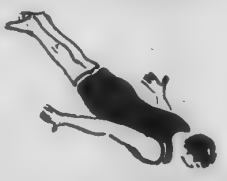

Some Facts You May Not Know

A FRENCHMAN is the inventor of a fireproof street car rail with notches in the sides into which paving blocks fit and make a smoother surface than ordinarily.

A N ALMOST noiseless gasoline engine features a new electric generating set for residences and places where noise might be objectionable.

S O THAT motion picture projectors can share the advantage of a direct current where only an alternating current is available is the purpose of a new motor-generator set.

P RACTICALLY inexhaustible deposits of asphalt discovered in the Philippines two years ago will be developed commercially.

I wonder what they would think if they knew that such an attack meant instant death in a horrible form? That is what it means to the high diver—and few of them have it in consequence.

"Of course, accidents occur. They are largely due to lack of confidence but to the reverse. Men who have made hundreds of high dives gradually get the idea that the task is so easy that it requires no attention. Then they learn their error when it is too late."

"A strange feature of high diving is that no diver ever has been able to explain just how he controls the movements of his body while in the air. It is much like the handling of a plunger to explain his curved fall. He just does it, and that's all there is to it."

"I am a firm believer in the theory that the mind has much to do with the fall. You probably have noticed that in making dives from varying heights the diver seems times make two and sometimes but one somersault. Since the height varies it is, of course, almost impossible for him to decide in advance just how long he must consume in each turn.

"But you also have noticed that in every instance he alights in a sitting position, with arms almost outstretched. That, I am sure, is more the result of concentration and the knowledge that he must alight so than because he has figured out the exact amount of time to be spent in the air. That is why I say that the man who fails to keep his mind concentrated on his work soon becomes the victim of an accident that too often costs the life of the careless diver."

Of course, much high diving, especially that of amateurs, is done with a lake or the open waters of the ocean as a basin. Such diving is not so dangerous nor so spectacular. While a diver who miscalculates in a leap into the ocean might be stunned and killed if he fell prone upon his back, there is not the danger of accident as when his basin is a tub of water.

Got a Million to Invest?

HAVE you a million dollars to spare? If so, buy a ton of ambergris, hunt up a few perfume manufacturers, sell them your product.

Ambergris, a waxy substance, is believed to be the product of some disease in the sperm whale, analogous to gallstones. Sometimes it is found scattered in the creature's fecal matter and sometimes on the surface of tropical seas, following expulsion. It gives off a pungent and penetrating odor, and is the best base in the manufacture of perfume.

Aeroplane, Not Submarine, to Decide War?

H. G. WELLS' suggestion that England build and equip 2,000 aeroplanes for an invasion of Germany is a recent example of the tremendous cloud of smoke of the exploding shell. Whether the Zeppelin changes its position, vertically, laterally, longitudinally, horizontally, long or short, right or left, it cannot escape destruction by this new English gun.

There are two types of these guns ready in London, and they are there in great numbers. One is mobile on top of buildings and in other fixed positions, while the other is mobile for field operations, automobiles, trains, battleships and other movable carriages.

The gun slides on a chassis, which is the kind that fits any three-inch cannon. It has a spring recoil mechanism and will fire a three-inch aerial torpedo in any direction at a velocity of 2,000 feet a second.

The chassis is pivoted near the breech of the gun and the elevation is secured by means of a large vertical, hand-operated screw. A large pin passes through the tail of the gun carriage into a fixed hole, which is driven into the ground. The two wheels of the carriage are attached pivotally.

How a Cat Can "Feel," Not See, in Absolute Darkness

THERE are two false ideas regarding the cat which are held by many people—one that the feline can see better at night than in the daytime, and that it is able to see in perfect darkness; the other that a cat, if given the opportunity, will draw the breath from sleeping children.

Convert Your Powers for Observation Into Cash

HERE is an opportunity to convert your ingenuity, your powers of observation, into cash. At the same time you will be aiding in making life easier, healthier and happier. This newspaper invites contributions from its readers describing little labor-saving devices, time savers for the home or office, or any scientific or near-scientific discovery that will interest and help men and women. Your letters may be short or long and may be accompanied by photographs, drawings, or rough pencil sketches that will aid in conveying the idea sought. It is suggested, however, that they be kept brief and to the point. Awards of $5 for the first and $3 for the second best contribution used each week will be paid. Have you some idea that might help your neighbor? Have you seen some device for saving time or labor that you might describe? Address all contributions to the Science Editor, care of this newspaper.

Firemen Will Become Animated Shower Baths to Fight Flames

A T A fierce fire in Cincinnati recently spectators could not get closer than twenty feet to the flames, so intense was the heat. But in the very center of the blaze stood a fireman. He remained there for five minutes, playing the hose, and was in no way injured.

How was this possible? The fireman was protected by a "shower bath" suit. These are uniforms fireproofed with tiny streams of water so effectively that when clothed in one of them a man can stand right in the midst of the fiercest flames without suffering ill effects.

The "shower bath" suit is made of fireproofed canvas. Between the two thicknesses of the fabric, sewed at the neck, is a perforated ring through which tiny streams of water are showered down between the layers of canvas.

Three Brunswick Pilots

Three members of the Brunswick Pilots, who were instrumental in winning the first half pennant for the Brunswick team in the F. L. A. G. league. Left to right, the players are Charles Weller, shortstop; Manager Wade Reynolds, right fielder, and George Jordan, catcher. Manager Reynolds has shown rare ability in getting together a good ball club and keeping it fighting all during the season, and he received splendid assistance from his first lieutenant, George Jordan. Reynolds in winning this pennant gave Brunswick the first pennant they have ever won, and deserves a word of credit for his splendid managerial ability.

The Standard of Value and Quality

You can now buy a PAIGE Fairfield "Six-46" for $1295

A GREATER CAR—a finer car—a more luxurious car—and a reduction of one hundred dollars in price.

Here—in a nutshell—is the most important automobile announcement of this season.

You know all this car. You know of its instantaneous success at the automobile shows last January.

You know that everywhere it has been welcomed and praised as the year's greatest single achievement in the motor car industry.

You know that in six short months it has set the standard by which all light Sixes must be judged.

You know that it has been conceded to be the most beautiful, the most distinctive and the most widely copied car produced by any manufacturer.

And, now, the price has not only been reduced to the amazing figure of $1295.

But—We offer you MORE distinction—MORE luxury—MORE beauty than you were able to purchase at the higher price.

Such is the latest and greatest achievement of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company.

Such is the announcement which thousands of motorists have been eagerly waiting to hear.

Now—indeed—comes your opportunity to satisfy that longstanding desire and own the finest of all light Sixes—a Paige "Fairfield Six-46."

New Features in the "Fairfield Six-46"

When we say that the new "Fairfield" is a greater and finer Six we mean precisely what the words imply.

The only changes which have been made in this car are distinct and obvious improvements.

You will find for instance, that the top is now made of genuine Pantasote instead of Mohair.

Inside the car, the upholstery has been changed to the finest French Glaz hand-buffed leather. No amount of money can buy a finer quality of leather, hair or springs for upholstery.

Scrupulous care has been given to the finish of the "Six-46," and you will now find a "paint job" which cannot be bettered in America. It requires twenty-four days to finish the long graceful body in its Paige Richelieu blue and the running gear has been effectively set off with a warm red.

At every point you will find better workmanship—finer material—handsome appointments.

We have deliberately set out to make the "Fairfield" the last word in six cylinder elegance and luxury. We have spared neither pains nor money to accomplish our purpose.

When you actually see the wonderful improvements which have been made, you will find it difficult to reconcile so much real value with the greatly decreased price.

And, now, let us say a word about "price."

This has been a strenuous season in the motor car field—especially strenuous in the light six division.

Prices have been slashed right and left. Bold, intemperate "claims" have been made and it has, perhaps, been difficult for the public to separate the wheat from the chaff.

But—no matter what the "claims," may be—the public is concerned first and last with Quality—basic quality—fundamental quality.

So, this is the year of all years when you must investigate and analyze before you finally decide to make your investment in an automobile.

Only too often a cut in price means a proportionate cut in quality. A car, you must remember, can be "refined" to the point where all of the goodness is taken out of it.

Therefore, make it a point first of all to critically investigate the car which you propose to buy. Pay attention to the little details quite as well as the big ones. Actually satisfy yourself that price reduction has not meant quality reduction.

It is on this basis that we want you to consider the Paige.

In plain terms, ask the Paige Dealer to prove to you that the "Six-46" is all that it ever was—and a great deal more.

Or better still, look up a friend who drives a "Fairfield." Take him to the Paige Agency and let him point out the new improvements quite as well as the old basic quality.

Let him tell you in his own words why this car is the greatest value for the money ever offered to the American public.

Proceed in the same way with any other light sixes that you have in mind. See if they will stand the test of such a critical investigation.

Then, form your own conclusions. That's all we ask.

The Paige Fairfield "Six-46" was first announced last January. Since that time there has never been a single week when the factory could begin to keep up with its orders. Despite our greatly increased manufacturing facilities and doubled production, there is every indication that the overwhelming demand for the "Six-46" will be repeated. We suggest, therefore, that you act quickly in placing your order.

CELESTOWN 1, INDIANS 0

Celestown, Ga., July 10.—(Special).—In a game that would have been called brilliant on an ideal day, the Celestown team gave the Nabrawks Indians a defeat this afternoon on a wet ground, and which was played in a drizzling rain, by the score of 1 to 0. The magnificent throw of Johnson, of Celestown, from right field to third base, putting the man by a good lead, was a feat. Robbin pitched a great game, getting fourteen strikeouts. The result was as follows: First game, a tie, 0 to 0; second, Indians won, 10 to 7, and the third was won by Celestown, 1 to 0.

TEIGERS NEED HELPERS

I wish that we could see a couple of pitchers as good as this Fajer. If we did, you could pay off on the pennant race right now. Our own staff isn't in the best of shape and all the men have had trouble with their arms this season for a club that is fighting for first place, we have to do a lot of derring-do. Finkner, but we are getting away with some by hammering the cover of the ball. If we had Boston's staff, or Chicago's, it would be nothing to it, but if one of these clubs had ours, it would be somewhere in the second division, so perhaps it is all over in the end.

DETROIT HAS PITCHERS WHO CAN DO A GOOD WORK AS ANYWHERE

When they are in shape, but they seem to be unhappy. The weather that we have had in Detroit all year doesn't lead me to think the mound is unpropitious. I never have seen a club's summer, and I don't wonder that the pitchers are having trouble getting anything on the ball. The only warm weather we have seen was on our first center trip. It was good, but not in Philadelphia and Washington for several days, but here at home you feel cold if you have your overcoat off to go out and play your position.

THE SEASON IS HALF OVER and we are still shivering. If the weather man ever decides to bring his best average up to par, we probably will roast, so it may be bad both ways. Fortunately, the Tigers have only a few post-mortem games, so if some real tough weather does come along, we won't have to stand out there and broil for four hours every afternoon like some of the other clubs that have been raised on frequently.

THE HALFWAY MARK PASSED

I have definitely made up my mind that there are only three clubs really in the race. Chicago, Boston and Detroit are the contenders and the rest run for Sweden. New York and Washington are fighting it out for fourth place probably, but if the St. Louis club can keep up its pepper, it may give them both a battle yet. On his good days, that Brown out in a mighty tough proposition. Lately it seems to have improved a lot, and I predict that any club which goes into a series with Licker's boys expecting to grab off a lot of easy victories will be mercifully disappointed. So far as the Tigers are concerned, they would rather meet the Boston or the Philadelphia team than stack up against the Mount City athletes.

SEVERAL OF THE UMPIRES ON KNIGHT

Several of the umpires on President Tejer's staff don't seem to know baseball. Byron pulled one on us when the Giants were in Chicago which he called a Giant runner safe on a close play at first base. He was ordered up to the field umpire and the field umpire said, "I don't want to be on second base, and when he right 'em up home," he kept right along it scored.

BYRON'S DECISION

Byron's decision was on the field. "That's a new one on me," told him. "It's the first time I ever heard of an umpire stopping a game to let the other pitcher get a rest." Byron insisted that Tejer stay on the field and play the ball game anyway. If it hadn't been for this, the game would have been a lot more interesting and his clear lack of knowledge of the rules was a baseball.

WHAT ARE YOU DOING THAT FOR?

"Because Brensham was on the field." "That's a new one on me," told him. "It's the first time I ever heard of an umpire stopping a game to let the other pitcher get a rest." Byron insisted that Tejer stay on the field and play the ball game anyway. If it hadn't been for this, the game would have been a lot more interesting and his clear lack of knowledge of the rules was a baseball.

THE KRAFT CASE

Some sports writers have contradicted or implied I was wrong in my statement that the writer was Federal Bureau investigating the New York club and that I had said I received the letter personally. In that article, I declared the New York club received this letter from Mr. Herrmann, and I still stick to it.

NOW I HAVE GOTTEN ALL THAT OUT OF MY MIND

and I feel better. I will have a race in the National League this year. I feel better. I will have a race in the National League this year. I feel better. I will have a race in the National League this year. I feel better.

COOLIDGE HAS REVIEWED

By that showing, Brooklyn has reviewed. This means that Coolidge will miss the Cubs. The championship will go to baseball for good, and the game will be a grand pitcher.

I DON'T BELIEVE THE PIRATES WILL HOLD UP and I still have a notion that the race will settle down into a nip and tuck affair between the Braves, Giants and Cubs. The championship will go to baseball for good, and the game will be a grand pitcher.

Ideals in the Education of Women

By HAYWOOD J. PEARCE, Ph.D., President of Brenau College.

In the increased demand for vocational training there is a possible danger of overlooking the ultimate use of education. Bread and butter are undoubtedly fundamental needs of humanity, and no general scheme of education can properly ignore this fact. To insure the happiness of the average woman and the average home, it is quite important that a knowledge of the practical things of life shall be acquired.

But having granted this much it remains true that the real problem of education has not been solved when a woman has been trained to be a good housekeeper, or a good mother. Some of those who possess vocational training in our colleges seem to think that the ultimate end of education is the attainment of knowledge. Many of our colleges are organized, apparently, upon the idea that facilities for acquiring knowledge through text books, libraries and laboratories constitute a college. Knowledge of Latin and Greek, of science and mathematics and philosophy have erroneously been supposed to be characteristic of the educated woman.

And yet there are few who will not agree that they are acquainted with as many uneducated bookworms as with educated cooks, and there are few men who would not choose the latter rather than the former as a companion for life.

The fundamental object of education is refinement in the fullest sense of the word. Refinement means genuine culture and not mere polish.

A Purifying Process. Education at its best is a purifying process, and only incidentally a polishing process. Culture that will not stand the acid test of deep and trying human experiences.

The process of attainment of this ideal is not easy to describe. Negativity is not an emotional process. The purification of culture is not a new birth. It comes by means of no sudden transformation. It is accompanied by no cataclysmic emotional paroxysm of the kind which the idealist usually provided. It does not degenerate into fanaticism which is sometimes mistaken for religion, and which is a worse enemy of culture than gross ignorance.

Religion mellows and softens human character. It furnishes new motives and vitalizes human interests and enlarges the spiritual horizon. But it does not refine.

The process of attainment of this refinement of culture is like the process of refining the precious metals. Mixed with materials of every kind, the ore is stored in deep recesses of the mountains and among the gravel beds of the valleys and streams. By chance, or design far beyond our ken, some is gathered here and there and is great, blanching, grinding, stamping mills the process of elimination and separation begins. The resultant, unshaped, crude masses are then sent to the refiner's crucible. Here the process is slow and more intimate. Heat, the most powerful force in nature, is gradually applied. The unstable, disparate and uneven elements melt together and become homogeneous, and in the process the gross and unassimilable elements are easily eliminated.

After a proper cooling season the refined and purified metals taken from the crucible and it is ready to be adapted to any form of service which its environment and the needs of humanity require.

As an ornament there is none more ornate wrought into useful articles for the home. This is the true purpose of

In the commercial world it fixes the standard of value in sciences it is reserved for the most delicate experiments.

Illuminative and Helpful. If it is pushed too far, the analogy is very illuminating and helpful.

The great masses of humanity hidden away in the recesses of the mountains and scattered through the valleys and along the streams furnish the raw material. Whether by divine selection or by a process of elimination for which no better phrase has been found than the "survival of the fittest," some of this material, here and there, is selected and placed in the great churning, grinding, stamping mills which we know as the public school system.

Here the elimination process really begins. When one considers the amount of material which goes in and the relatively small amount which comes out, having survived the numerous jars and jolts and chances one is inclined to wonder if all the noise and tumult, the great expenditure of time and money and energy are worth while. But really the schools render quite as great a service in eliminating the unfit as they do in preserving the fit—a view of the case which critics of education might well consider.

The material which the public school system furnishes the college is lacking in homogeneity and is accompanied by much dross in the form of prejudices, egotisms, etc.

As heat is at the same time the source of greatest power and another force of the physician who illumines the universe, so knowledge—real knowledge—is the source of power and refinement and is the light which illumines the soul of man.

But knowledge, like diamonds and is not to be regarded as an end. The end to be achieved in placing the gold in the crucible is not to heat it, but by heating it to make it possible to remove the dross.

If the ideal of Brenau has any claim to distinction, it lies in its recognition of the fact that the acquirement of knowledge is merely a means to an end—and this end the elimination from the character of prejudice, of egotism of unworthy thought and motive, and the adoption of character to the highest practical ends in the service of humanity, which is at the same time the service of God.

Incorporating Farm Communities.

(From The Progressive Farmer) Thomas Jefferson declared that as long as he had breath in his body he would fight for two things—first, education, secondly, for organizing rural communities—the subdivision of the counties into wards, as he put it. His idea was to organize all over America, rural communities about six miles square into forceful, capable, rural, democratic republics, corresponding in size somewhat to our present school districts, and each having genuine local self-government.

It has been nearly a hundred years since Jefferson proclaimed the imperative need of such a government. (1) The definite boundaries and (2) the definite governmental machinery, both of which are necessary for proper development, but the bill introduced into the recent North Carolina legislature for incorporating the bonded farm community in Sampson county represents perhaps the first serious attempt in this generation to give his ideas definite application and enforcement.

PROGRESS OF G. M. C.

IS CREDIT TO STATE

College at Milledgeville Ranks High in Every Department of Work.

Milledgeville, Ga., July 10.—The "Old State Capitol," situated in Milledgeville has been the inspiration of thousands of Georgia boys who have come from the Georgia Military college in quest of an education. This grand old structure, on account of its inspired events in the history when "Our Fathers" fought for "State's rights" is a possession that Georgians cling to with great feeling and appreciation.

Here it was that military training which is just now one of the most popular methods of discipline for a school boy, obtained a foundation, and today it is impossible for the trustees of the Georgia Military college to enlarge the plant fast enough to accommodate all those who wish to have their boys trained where they know the best is to be had.

What more could a boy want to stir him than to sit in the same hall where Bob Toombs, Alex Stephens and Ben Hill sat so eloquently in defense of the south and her rights back in the sixties? This means much to a boy in his struggling days with the school room problems. There are hundreds of things that lift the growing youth of what has been done at Milledgeville.

Representative Hall. There is the old representative hall which has been converted into an auditorium where the boys often meet in their debates. The campus is still full of pretty much like it was back in the sixties, when "our fathers" drilled for the battle. The young men who attend the Georgia Military college now see these grounds for their military content.

When a boy spends three or four years at the Georgia Military college he is well fitted for life's duties. He has been through the "grind" which furnishes him with the equipment that is so necessary for a young man to have these days.

Indeed, he is a well-rounded man and ready to combat with life's problems. In the school room he receives the mental training necessary for any ordinary business. No boy is permitted to remain shut up in his room, "pondering" the deep value of "love" for all are compelled to take a moderate amount of exercise.

The military discipline certainly puts the finishing touches to a youth who comes from either the city or the farm. For the former it gives him endurance and learns him the value of a well-trained physique, and for the boy from the plow-handles it gives him a finish and culture that is necessary for the club he is to meet when he enters the business arena.

The cadet life, though, is not the only means of exercise that is provided for the boy who enters the Georgia Military college. He is given all phases of athletics. This is done in order that he may have every advantage possible fit in given football, basketball, baseball and track. Track work furnishes a larger field than any of the other branches of athletics. More can enter this sport, and it is also a branch in which the weaker boy can compete. It is a sport in which he can take a very moderate amount of exercise. He does not have to train hard. It is a more interesting than some of the "hard and bound" stunts like those of the English Rugby school? That is the foundation work. In the fall of the year boys wishing to train for the track should begin by going on these classes, and with the close of the winter months he will be in excellent condition for the real work of the track.

Championship Teams. Georgia Military college has turned out championship teams in all of these sports. Particularly has she been the leader of the Georgia prep circle for several years in football, baseball and track work.

Georgia Military college ranks high in every department of preparatory work. It has one of the strongest faculties of any school in the south. Work is offered in commercial lines, domestic science, the profession of teaching and military training. Young men from the Georgia Military college secure high positions in the war departments of the United States. Four of the students will go to the Philippines this fall being appointed by the war department for consular service. This is a high recommendation for the Georgia Military college.

Special stress is given to young men and young women who expect to do work in colleges or universities. Graduates from the Georgia Military college enter, without examinations, approx-more classes in the universities. All of these studies necessary for college entrance are taught. No student is allowed to let his athletic or military engagements interfere with his school room duties. The Georgia Military college stands for a well-rounded man and one who is equipped for life's duties.

How a Woman's Love and a Woman's Hatred Have Fought the Real Death Duel over Becker

By ANDREW W. FORD.

New York, July 10.

THE loves of women hinge upon the hatreds of men. Today two women call, one for mercy, the other for vengeance, in the case of Charles Becker, the former Lieutenant of police of New York, twice convicted of the murder of Herman Rosenthal. He is now under reprieve until July 26 pending a final effort to save his life.

"Nothing can satisfy me except Becker's death in the electric chair," the widow of his victim has declared. "People may think me hard for saying that. They may ask: 'Has she no pity for Becker's wife?' But Becker showed me no pity when he murdered my husband and left me absolutely penniless. I feel sorry for Mrs. Becker, but she is a young, strong woman capable of making a living for herself. She will not have to go begging for food and a place to lay her head at night, as I have done."

From her hiding place in a small New Jersey town, where she is now dependent on the charity of a former hairdresser, Mrs. Rosenthal, a self-admitted "doll-woman," has emerged long enough to call upon the people of New York for eyes for an eye and a tooth for a tooth—the life of Charles Becker for the life of Herman Rosenthal.

Meantime a small, brown-haired woman burries through her work as a teacher in me a home. Today I live on the second floor of her bungalow, with no carpets and hardly any furniture. People call me a doll-woman because I was so dependent upon my husband and because I have found it impossible to earn a living. The gunmen's bullets directed by Charles Becker took my husband's life and everything that made life worth living for me. I say, let Becker die.

Until the Last Hour One Calls for Vengeance and One for Mercy. "Nothing Could Satisfy Me But Becker's Death," Says Widow of the Slain Rosenthal. "Nothing in This World Could Ever Turn Me Against Charlie," Says the Condemned Man's Wife.

Meantime, the competent, pretty Mrs. Becker, who never ceased to earn her living though married to one of the most powerful police officials in New York, goes every day to her schoolroom in the Bronx.

worst her own life or her baby's should be saved.

"I had been through so much that I was exhausted," Mrs. Becker said in telling of the terrible alternative thus put before her. "I was mentally and physically a wreck. I had reached the point where I could stand no more. But I thought of Charlie up there in Sing Sing in the deathhouse. And I knew that my life would be of more help to him than our baby's life. So I chose to live for my husband. Next morning the nurse brought me my baby—a lovely little girl who seemed quite well and strong. She was very pretty and I thought that she

Charles Becker and the Wife Who Says Nothing—Not Even His Guilt Will Change Her Love for Him.

Thus the Hatreds of Men Wreck the Loves of Women

IN SPITE of all my sorrows—in spite of everything—I would marry Charles Becker over again. I wonder why this great trouble could not have come to two people who did not love each other as much as Charlie and I do?—Mrs. Charles Becker.

THEY may ask, "Has she no pity for Becker's wife?" but Becker showed no pity for me when he murdered my husband and left me penniless with nothing to live for. I say, "Let Becker die."—Mrs. Herman Rosenthal.

"When my husband was living I had diamonds and two or three $500 coats at a time," she complains, "and from the first of last November until the end of February I could not leave the house because I had no warm coat and no money to buy one. Poor Herman had no idea he would have to leave me to face the world like this! How Becker whines! He has had two fair trials and today nobody can possibly think him innocent. Those four foolish boys—the gunmen—had to die, so why not he? They were only his tools. Becker was the real murderer, yet his wife will never have to go begging her bread and a place to put her head at night, as I must go!

"The wives of the gunmen, 'Lettie Louie' and 'Gyp the Blood,' have suffered, too, but they are young and are earning their own livings. They can marry again. But for me there is nothing but death!"

Two of the four gunmen were married and their widows, girls in their early 20s, have surrounded the wreck of their lives and are now self-supporting, as Mrs. Rosenthal says. One of these young women, known as "Lettie's Lilly," because she was the wife of Louis Rosenberg, is of remarkable beauty, blonde and blue-eyed. Rosenberg was the most intelligent and the most prosperous of all the gunmen. He was the son of a prosperous Jewish merchant on the produce exchange, but his father had cast him off because of his wild and vicious life.

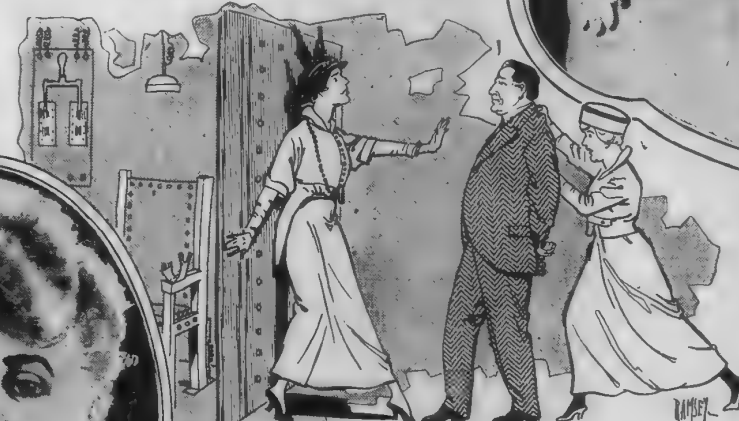

Mother Will Not Forget.

A greater sufferer than either of these two young wives and perhaps more to be pitied than Mrs. Rosenthal in her helpless poverty or Mrs. Becker in her valiant self-reliance and self-sacrifice is the aged mother of the gunman whose confession, if it had been admissible, might have saved Becker from the electric chair. Mrs. Mary Crofedi, mother of "Dago Frank," lives with her two daughters in a fairly prosperous home in the Bronx. Everything has been done by her two devoted daughters to make the old and broken woman forget the tragedy which engulfed the life of her wayward son. But to no purpose. She sits all day long brooding over the boy who once sang in an Episcopal choir and who perished miserably in the electric chair a year ago last April.

One of the Crofedi daughters is married and has a little daughter 5 years old who still writes letters to "dear Uncle Frank" because no one has had the heart to tell her that the swartly young fellow who never forgot to bring her a bag of candy on his few visits to his home is dead. The child believes that "Uncle Frank" is still in the country and often asks her heart-broken grandmother when he is coming home. Mrs. Crofedi, "Dago Frank's" younger sister, is unmarried. It was she who accompanied her mother on the many tragic trips to Sing Sing which the old woman made before her first born passed forever through the "little green door." She is a competent, self-supporting girl with quiet, well-kept manners, a soft voice and a look of unutterable tragedy in her big brown eyes. Her life as well as the lives of her mother and sister and all the other women concerned in the Becker case has been permanently shattered by the bullet which killed Herman Rosenthal.

The Story's Moral.

So the hatreds of men wreck the lives of women. If Rosenthal had not "quested" on his friend because Becker had not laid his place to keep his job on the police force, if Becker had not taken a swift and terrible toll for the treachery of Rosenthal, there would not be two women in New York today, one of whom calls for vengeance on her husband's murderers while the other begs the state for pity on the man she loves. The bullet fired into the body of Rosenthal by the gunmen—"Lettie Louie" was said to have done the actual killing—killed Rosenthal and caused the four gunmen to be killed in the electric chair, has yet to claim another life—that of Charles Becker, dear old underworld, whose ferocious will sent it speeding on its fatal mission. That bullet made three widows—and unless Becker's last reprieve saves his life, it will yet make a fourth. It broke the heart of an aged mother and wrecked the happiness of her two daughters, the self-respecting, much-respected sister of "Dago Frank." And even now its work is not done, for some time in the future the little niece who still writes letters to "dear Uncle Frank" must hang her head when "Uncle Frank" is mentioned and hide his name from her children.

Mrs. Herman Rosenthal, Who Demands an Eye for an Eye.

one of New York's public schools that she may go downtown for a consultation with Becker's lawyers or rush home to write a ten-page letter of hope and consolation to her husband under sentence of death in Sing Sing prison.

Convinced of His Innocence.

"I know that my husband is innocent. Up to the very last moment I will do everything in my power to save him. But if I did not know him to be guiltless of murder nothing could change my love for him," Mrs. Becker has said. "There is nothing in this world which could make me turn against Charlie."

But Mrs. Rosenthal says: "Poor Herman had no idea he would die and leave me to face the world alone. It is frightful to know that you are just a dead weight in the world, that everything about you that counted or made you worth while was put to death by a gunman's bullet and that you survive merely as a burlesque on the living. Poor Dinah, who takes care of me, is the only friend I have left. After my husband's murder I tried to earn a living by keeping a furnished room house. But I could not bear to put my lodgers out when they failed to pay me. I had not the heart to do it. So I lost that. Then I opened a moving picture house, and that failed. Then by selling my jewels and my furs I got money enough together to start a boarding-house in the Bronx. But I could not make even that pay. All last winter I stayed in the house because I did not have a coat to wear out in the street. I had no money, and for months I was ill in bed with rheumatism. Then Dinah, my former hairdresser, found me and offered

She teaches a class of backward children, and her patience and sweetness with her pupils are the marvel and the admiration of her associates.

"I can't be gloomy for very long," she remarked not long ago to a teacher friend. "I laugh and play with the children just as much as when Charlie and I were the happiest married couple in New York. But sometimes now, do you know, it seems to me that I don't remember the children's names so well as before this great trouble came to us."

Mrs. Becker is passionately fond of children. She has none of her own. She had longed for children for years, but it was only a few weeks before Becker's arrest that she learned she was to become a mother for the first time. She carried all this knowledge about with her during the long, anxious months that preceded Becker's first trial. In the January following his first conviction she entered the Women's Hospital in New York to give birth to the child of her hopes and prayers—the child whose father was a convicted murderer.

Sacrifices Baby for Husband.

The Beckers had agreed that if the long-hoped-for baby proved to be a boy it should be given its father's name. But that if a girl came to Mrs. Becker the baby should be called Ruth, a name Becker chose. And so Ruth came on a dark morning in January. But her coming was so long delayed that finally a doctor stood by Mrs. Becker's bedside and told her that because of the nervousness and strain due to the trial she would have to decide before going under whether if the worst came to the would live and in afterlife be our consolation for this terrible sorrow. But that afternoon she died, and they told me the next morning. Sometimes it seems to me yet that I am holding her in my arms."

Following this great sorrow a great joy came to Mrs. Becker—the announcement that her husband had been granted a new trial by the Court of Appeals.

Already four men have passed through that "little green door" to expiate the murder of Herman Rosenthal on the night of July 16, 1912—the gunmen known as "Lettie" Louie, "Whitey" Lewis, "Gyp the Blood" and "Dago Frank." Lewis, the oldest of these men, was 29 years old, Dago Frank was a year younger, "Lettie Louie," the ringleader, was the youngest of them all.

At the time of Becker's arrest on July 23, 1912, a little less than two weeks after the murder of Rosenthal, it was discovered that he had large sums of money on deposit in several different savings banks. He was shown to have contributed money to Rosenthal's gambling-house before the latter incurred his emphysema by threats of "squelling" carried out the day before his death.

Becker Not Poor Man.

It was testified during the two trials that large sums of money were collected for him by Jack Ross. Yet all this time his wife went about the business of earning her own living as a school-teacher and, as she herself has told, did her own housework and cooking in the $40-a-month flat which she and Charles Becker occupied. A few weeks before his arrest for murder Becker had given his wife's heart by telling her that he had bought an old house in Williamsburg and was having it remodeled and repaired to give to her as her own home.

On the afternoon of the night he was arrested Becker had himself visited this new home which he was destined never to occupy and had called the street number on the front door.

Mrs. Becker moved into this new house alone. But she has never called it home. "How can I call it home when Charlie has never lived in it?" she asks.

Never once during the two trials—never once during the last few weeks, when hope has burned so dim in her soul, has Mrs. Becker permitted her husband to see her weep. She has visited him so often as the law allows in the deathhouse and she has shown him always a face of courage and faith in his ultimate release.

It is a harsh irony of circumstance that compels Charles Becker to beg his life from the very man who had done most to procure his conviction—Charles S. Whitman, former district attorney of New York City and now governor of the state.

Must Appeal to Prosecutor.

Because of Whitman's activity as prosecutor of Rosenthal's murderers it was thought by many that he would absent himself from the state and permit Becker's appeal to be heard by the Lieutenant governor. But Governor Whitman announced that he would grant a hearing in the Becker matter himself.

Indirectly, Charles S. Whitman owes the governorship of New York and whatever political advancement may yet lie ahead of him to Charles Becker. For the bullet which sent Herman Rosenthal to his doom sent the four gunmen to the electric chair and Charles Becker to the deathhouse also started Charles S. Whitman on his race for the governorship.

For his zeal in running down the Rosenthal murderers made Whitman the man of the hour politically—the logical, inseparable candidate for the Republican nomination. The legal points of Becker's case and the legal aspect of his appeal for clemency belong to Martin Stanton, his counsel. But Mrs. Becker asked the governor personally to spare her husband's life. And she has never once wavered in her belief in Becker's entire innocence.

"In spite of all my sorrows—in spite of everything—I would marry Charles Becker over again," she has declared. And then she added pitifully: "I wonder why this great trouble could not have come to two people who did not love each other as much as Charlie and I do."

Victim's Widow Bitter.

Meantime Mrs. Herman Rosenthal grieves for her murdered husband, and the nature of her grief, or at least of its expression, shows that she is really of the type of doll-woman to which she says she has been compared.

Mrs. Rosenthal mourns quite openly the loss of a good provider, for in the philosophy of women like her, the main duty of man is to provide for woman.

PAIGE BIG SIX MODEL
ANNOUNCED FOR 1916

Improved Edition of Fairfield "Six-48" Retains Features of Old Models.

The Paige-Petrol Motor Car company has announced its new big six for 1916—an improved edition of the Paige "Six-48" first shown to the public last January. Like its predecessor, it retains all the vital features and characteristics of design that first won success and distinction for the Paige company in the field of autos.

The price of the new model, however, the Paige company has been enabled to cut $100, thanks to the demand created by the first Fairfield and consequent increase in factory output. The new Paige "Six-48" is a seven-passenger, six-cylinder car, and it retains all the vital features and characteristics of design that first won success and distinction for the Paige company in the field of autos.

"JOE" LEVI HAS JOINED KING "8" FORCES HERE
An announcement of interest to automobile men is that made by the King Motor company, naming J. A. Levi as its factory representative in Atlanta. Mr. Levi will have charge of the distribution of the "King 8" in the south, and with his extensive experience in the auto game will prove a splendid man for the King company. He is popularly known to hundreds of Atlanta as "Joe" Levi, and has made many friends while with the Premier Motor company, who will be pleased to know of his new position.

LEWIS SEES THIRD MOVE FOR M'CLURE CO.

"Opening Bill" Says Rapid Growth of Business Necessitates More Room.

"There is an old saying," said R. P. Lewis, of the McClure Ten Cent company, "that three moves is equal to a fourth." Well, that doesn't happen to be true in my case, so far as it concerns the McClure company. We are now arranging for our third move since I have taken over the business. It has meant a large and heavy increase in our stocks. So in the place of getting rid of things, we have added to them. Of course, just now we are striving to get rid of much of our big wholesale stock, in order to be relieved of moving it next month, and in fact, have marked considerable of it down below actual cost. But as I said, when we get located over in our new White Star building we are more going to have the largest and most complete line of goods in the city we have ever carried, and others to be added—especially in the stock.

Artificial Limb Co. Is Expecting Large Business as Result of War.

One of the best evidences that Atlanta is known the world over is the number of inquiries received from firms to certain lines of goods. Not only countries, but frequently direct orders are received from far-away countries which bespeak of the enterprise of some of our southern industries. One of these latest orders of this kind is that now being filled, the goods being ready for shipment, received by the J. E. Hanger (Inc.), manufacturer of artificial limbs. Manager R. C. Hoyer, of the Atlanta house, has also received a direct request from government officials at Westminster, England, asking for a full set of models of artificial limbs. These were suggested by the English War Office for examination by their officials, and American officials have already been sent, and Manager Hoyer is confident of considerable business as a result.

Dave Wurtzburger, of the Bonded Adjustment Company, which concerns the insurance of goods in transit, has taken over the business of the late J. H. Adams, who was in charge of the business in this city. Mr. Wurtzburger has a large list of clients in that city, and under the operation of Mr. Wurtzburger and his co-workers, who have a splendid success of the adjustment company, will be added to it. Either Mr. Wurtzburger or his son, Clarence, will be in charge of the company, which will spend a greater part of their time in Columbus looking after the work of the newly acquired bureau.

Last Week a Good One.

"The past week has been one of the very best we have had in some time," said Olin Stamps, of Pain & Stamps, Saturday. "The volume of the orders put over good orders, and I guess they are still at it for some of them. In today, which is a good sign that the business is getting better and better along the general line, though we had a splendid business in fruit jars. The coming season seems now to be just getting right, and with a good crop of fruit, tomatoes, berries and such like, it seems the people are buying themselves outting them up."

Come to Atlanta Largest. If you come the first week you'll find more Merchants together than you've seen in many a day. The word is going out the way, and the storekeepers are coming to see us. Trade's going to be good. Every factory and firm represented in our Association is doing its dead level best to show you what Atlanta Cigars does when she sets her head to the job. There will be good times—but business and bargains will be the star features. Make this your vacation and you'll see that it's a paying proposition. Merchants & Manufacturers Association, Atlanta

KING GEORGE'S WAR

ONLY for a few months had England dealt with Spain alone upon a private quarrel.

In 1749 the male line of the great Austrian house of Hapsburg had right to the throne, the king, the imperial claims disputed her right to the succession; and all Europe was presently plunged into the "War of the Austrian Succession" (1740-1748).

King George's War they called it the colonies, when France and England became embroiled, but the king did not make it doubtful whether England, or what ambitions were involved, and New England struck her blow at the power of France.

A force of about four thousand men, moved in Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Connecticut, moved in the spring of 1744 against the French, who had been made a surveyor general of Louisiana, on Cape Breton Island.

Commodore Warren, the English naval commander in the West Indies, furnished ships for their cover, and they departed for the coast of France, and by the 14th of June the place had been taken.

For twenty-five years the French had been slowly building their fortifications, covering with a network of half miles in circumference.

They had made them, they supposed, impregnable.

But the English had struck quickly, without warning, and with a small force, which made them well-nigh irresistible, and their triumph was complete. Fortifications, and the most formidable fortress in America.

William Pepperell, the gallant general who had led the New Englanders, got a baronetcy for his victory. The king was made an admiral.

out were, as usual, the first to act, for the king's minister they acted with him or not, and pay for them out of his own pocket, if necessary, they would.

WASHINGTON BEGINS THE WAR.

It was the highway of open rivers for the Virginians, as for the French, by which they could descend to the river the Ohio, and Virginia had no troops ready as the French had.

WONDERS AT GRAND CANYON ARE PROVING IRRESISTIBLE MAGNET TO SAN FRANCISCO EXPOSITION VISITORS, GOING AND COMING

Panoramic view of Grand Canyon from El Tovar Hotel.

TO THE GRAND CANYON OF THE COLORADO.
(For The Constitution.)
I loved thee from my childhood, though to me
Thou wert a vision of the mental eye
From books and pictures caught; but now I see
Thy splendor as it is before me lie—
Vast, majestic and supreme beneath the sky.
As if Old Ocean in his grandest mood
Stood still and all his heaving billows high
To mountains turned, and rainbow colors fell
From mist of crested foam upon these rocks to dwell.

—Ernest Reak.
With the Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco in full blast, and, attracting the attention of the whole country, it may be said that the Grand Canyon of Arizona has been discovered again.

For the visitors to the San Francisco exposition who do not stop at the Grand Canyon on way—either going or coming.

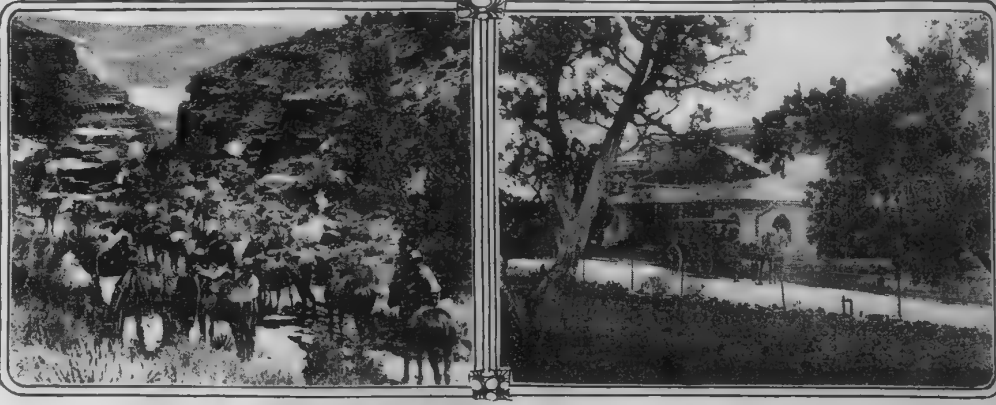

More people, by the many thousands, have visited it this year than ever before.

The early Spaniards first reported it to the world in 1540. Since then Indians, trappers, plainsmen, soldiers, and tourists have come, looked, and better known.

Not only is the Grand Canyon earth's most sublime scenic spectacle, it also is a place where you may run away from care and worry, get out in the open and rest up. It is more than something stupendous to look at. It is a place for recreation, for a genuine out west outing. This particular phase is a new development.

The canyon may be visited any day in the year. When most other mountain resorts are frozen up, the Grand Canyon is easily accessible. Snow falls during January in the pine forest along the rim, and the upper section of the trail to the river is covered with a white blanket. Nevertheless you can venture muleback down any of the principal trails, confident that spring soon will begin to peek out timidly and early summer glade you just around the turn. For, as you go below, the climate changes perceptibly every few hundred feet, so that when on the rim a nipping frost is in the air there are fragile desert flowers blooming along the river gulches.

Strange to say—yet true—the summer heat in July or August is not torrid, except at the very bottom of the giant chasm. Up above, you are almost a mile and a half above sea-level. That means cool mornings, evenings and nights. Only at high noon in the warm months does the thermometer here register a figure that ought to suggest palm-leaf fans, iced lemonade and a alesta. The strange thing is, that the air doesn't feel unduly warm, even when it ought to. That is accounted for by the absence of moisture. Hence in midsummer you move about in perfect comfort during the day and sleep under a blanket at night.

As you go down in summer, the thermometer comes up, and as you come up in winter the thermometer goes down. It doesn't keep company with you long. The difference of nearly a mile in altitude between the Colorado river and the canyon rim is like traveling hundreds of miles north or south on the level.

Also high altitude means cool summers, while southerly latitude means warm winters, as a rule—which explains why the Grand Canyon is an ideal resort the year round.

Land of Sunshine.
As a rule, too, this part of Arizona is a land of sunshine; the air is dry, the wind velocity is under the average and the air is like wine—it builds you up—hence you may ride or walk without fear of overexertion.

Yet the weather is not perfect. Unpleasant days come here as elsewhere.

but you reasonably may expect nice weather than at home. Tan? Yes, and lots of it. The kind that goes with a Stetson and "chaps" and a khaki suit in a week you look like a native, and the tan on the native son's face is something white.

In power to recuperate man's exhausted energies, the Grand Canyon stands supreme. Easy and gentle drives, with perfect equipment, over forest roads, in the stimulating atmosphere of Arizona, a mile and a half up in the sky, soothe tired brains and nerves. More vigorous horseback excursions, taken through the parklike glades and reaches of Tusayan forest, produces perfect digestion and dreamless sleep. You inhale a pure, thin air laden with scent of pine and cedar. Your lungs expand, your muscles harden, your face browns. Soon you are "fit" in every sense of the word.

No matter what time of the year your vacation comes, the great Canyon is waiting for you. While spring and fall perhaps are more attractive than midsummer or midwinter, each season has its special lure. Camping, during the December-to-March period, is restricted to the inner canyon region. The boulevard rim drive and the south wall trails are open from January to June. So are the hotels. That is the reason why this is such a restful place.

Quickly Reached.
Grand Canyon is quickly reached and in comfort on a branch trail from the main Santa Fe trans-continental line at Williams, Ariz., a short run of 14 miles. A few persons come by auto from Williams or Flagstaff—though most visitors prefer a puncturedless sleeper or chair car. You get off the Pullman, and a Jan takes your bags to El Tovar hotel, close by on the hill. You are ushered into a cheerful reception room. Later you are introduced to the delights of a cozy, one-story room—all rooms here look outdoor—with flowers on the dresser, and the bath ready. In the Nevada dining room you find all the delicacies of the season, perfectly served by quiet waitresses, and no music! Everywhere you are reminded that though away from home this is another home. You are given a personal service, which counts for more than all the creature comforts of this quarter-million-dollar hotel. It is Fred Harvey Inn, so why say more? That explains everything, from soup to nuts.

In magical contrast with the life and sparkle of El Tovar—its fellowship and its democracy—is the restful solitude. In a moment you may leave the crowd and become a hermit. That is one reason why this is such a restful place.

You might have gone, instead, to Bright Angel cottages, also under Harvey management, and have been housed very comfortably for less money. It is largely a matter of one's pocketbook and personal tastes. Beyond the station are the up-to-the-minute stables, abounding scores of saddle-horses, mules and coach animals. All the stock has been trained for canyon roads and trails, and the vehicles are as well appointed as though this were a summer resort on the Atlantic coast instead of being in the heart of Arizona. Drivers and guides are experienced and trustworthy.

For those who enjoy horseback rides there is the asphalted rim road, graded dirt roads and impassable trails leading through the pines. Ho, for the saddle, right after breakfast, to center for half a day or all day on the out of the world! Instead of scenery (views of uncertain disposition, which are furnished horses that would make a city park, handsome and sensible animals, equipped with the kind of saddle that best suits the rider. A guide goes along, if desired.

"To Grand View."
In the afternoon, as a gradual approach to the more unconventional out-look, you may climb into a big automobile, the easy-riding 35,000 variety—and take passage for Grand View, thirteen miles to the east. This section of the granite gorge district was "discovered" first, and is very beautiful—a combination of tall pines, fragrant cedars, and a view of the canyon that is unsurpassed. The only modern note in the picture is the troubling, high-powered auto. All else seems to have come from a different world and a different time.

When ready to "hit the trail" several possible combinations present themselves based on Bright Angel and Hermit trails. A favorite stunt is to take the Hermit Overnight trip, which is part rim road coach part trail mule and part camp life. This Jaunt requires about a day and a half, and the jolliest part is the night spent down in the canyon. The first leg of the journey is along Hermit Rim road for eight miles—a city boulevard in the wilderness, wide and smooth. It follows the rim to top of new Hermit trail. No other roadway in the world built along the brink of such a tremendous abyss. While whirling along in an El Tovar yellow coach, or standing on one of the "points," you see all the noted sights in this mile-deep chasm, and have some of the sensation of an eagle winging the abyss unaided. The outlook is never twice the same, and one never tires of it.

Near the end of the road is Hermit Rest, a new resting place for wayfarers, built in the solid rock of a little hill, like a hermit's cave of primitive times, yet furnishing modern refreshments and the warmth of an enormous fireplace when the day is chilly. The trail animals are in waiting—strong, sure-footed mules, with prima donna voices and picturesque manners. The mule, like the burro, belongs to Arizona. It makes trail transportation possible. You and I might walk down; we prefer not to walk up. The mule does both, and carries either a pack or a load of human freight, single file, up and down all kinds of pathways.

Hermit trail is a new way down the south wall of the canyon to the river, starting where the rim drive ends. It is finished to the plateau below, and is as easy and safe as engineering skill could make it. Your cavaliers zigzag down the white limestone of Hermit basin, and stop for moon lunch at Santa Maria spring, well out on the top of the red wall. At Cathedral Stairs, further down, is a passage cut out of blue limestone, which is almost as hard as granite. Then comes the long drag, and after that the welcome camp and supper. Hermit camp nestles at the foot of a cliff 2,000 feet high, close to a stream of pure water, one of the very few in this region. This is not an ordinary camp, for it has a chef from Chicago and comfortable beds. The sides and roofs of the tents are of cloth, through which the fresh night air filters. The meals are guaranteed by Fred Harvey.

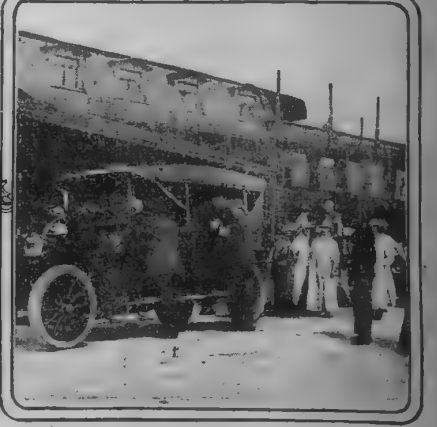

In the early morning you tramp down the bed of Hermit creek to the river, a drop of a thousand feet in two miles, and look at the roaring flood racing down Hermit rapids in a hurry. Then up stream to camp, taking a cool plunge in the river, after which saddles and packs are cinched up and you take the back trail for the top. A little lunch follows at Hermit's Rest and a ride by coach to El Tovar, taking the cut off through the woods in ample time for dinner.

Camping Trips.
Many travelers prefer to stay two nights in the canyon and return from Hermit camp by way of Tonto and Bright Angel trails. Others just devote one day to going down Bright Angel trail and back.

Sampling trips along the rim are another superlative joy. They give you a taste of real outdoor life in the far west, and require from two or three days to a week, taking in not only the brink of the canyon, but also the Indian reservations round about and the limited desert.

Improved facilities have been provided for expedition year, such as a large garage for autos, the "Lookout" observatory, Hermit's Rest, and new rooms at Bright Angel cottages.

Don't make the mistake of arranging to stay only a day or two. Remain a week or longer, if you can, and get somewhat acquainted with the world's greatest marvel.

"GILDED FOOL" MONDAY AT THE MONTGOMERY

William Faraum Portrays the Leading Part in Splendid William Fox Release.

This week the Montgomery will present some of the best known stars in splendid releases. The William Fox Box Office Attractions feature largely in the program.

"The Gilded Fool" will be shown Monday, with William Faraum in the title role, supported by Maude Gilbert, the very capable actress who was leading woman with Robert Hilliard and William Gillette in their greatest successes. In this powerful production, William Faraum has a part much to his liking, and in it he injects every particle of his dynamo and forceful personality.

For Tuesday the management has chosen Jorgel Zangwill's masterpiece, "The Children of the Ghosts," a drama that deals with all classes and with the joys and sorrows of humanity at large.

For Tuesday the management has chosen Jorgel Zangwill's masterpiece, "The Children of the Ghosts," a drama that deals with all classes and with the joys and sorrows of humanity at large.

For Wednesday another story of the Balboa Pathé serial, "Who Pays?" will be featured, with fascinating Ruth Roland at her best.

"The Box Office Attractions" "Life's Show Window" will be shown Thursday with an all-star cast featuring Claire Whitney and Stuart Holmes.

Augusta West will be shown Friday in a remarkable screen adaptation, and Heart Bernstein's "The Thief," with Dorothy Doreilly in the title role will be the strong attraction for Saturday.

After an absence of several months from the city Ralph DeBruler has returned to Atlanta and assumed the management of the Strand theater. Mr. DeBruler was formerly manager of one of the popular Peachtree photoplay houses, and in that capacity met with great success. Known to everybody in the south connected with the film business and to the thousands of patrons of the Strand as genial, accommodating and ready to please all who came in contact with him, these same qualities will welcome his return and contribute to the success of the theater.

As yet Mr. DeBruler is not ready to announce the plans he has in store for the future of the Strand. But from past records numerous changes have been made which will add to the pleasure of all who enjoy the comforts and pleasures to be found in attending a well conducted picture theater.

BILLY BEARD MAKES HIT AT THE ALPHA

Comedian Will Continue to Entertain at Popular Whitehall Street Theater.

Billy Beard, the party from the south, has made such a tremendous hit at the Alpha that Manager Fowler has arranged for a reappearance of this clever entertainer. Billy Beard will sing his songs and tell his jokes every day next week.

In addition to Billy's rollicking there will be a splendid program of screen offerings. On Monday, in addition to Billy's inimitable laugh producing acts, the first and second episodes of "The Broken Coin" will be featured. This great Universal serial is all that it is represented to be. With Francis Ford as director, the success of this special feature serial is assured. He is remembered for his notable work in "Lucille Love," "The Campbells Are Coming," "The Doorway of Destruction" and "The Suspense Island." In addition to directing "The Broken Coin" Mr. Ford is seen in one of the leading roles, that of Count Frederick Hoffman, the pretender to the throne of the Dutch, principally of the most unique surroundings. Miss Cuddeback takes the part of the part woman reporter on a big newspaper, the editor being no other than Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Production Company. As a publisher of a great newspaper, he sends Kitty Gray, his star reporter, to the garden of Greishoffen for material for a big story. She has in her possession the broken coin, which, united with the other half, will give the location of a great treasure.

One of the most thrilling acts ever performed will be seen in the second episode, when Miss Cuddeback reaches across from her balcony to that of her rescuer, in mid-air.

Friday, Robert Leonard and Ella Hall will be featured in a thrilling Levantine drama, "Betty's Dream Here," a pretty and exciting tale of the south. Hank Mann roasts in a funny comedy, "The Child Needed a Mother," which will be shown on this day.

The sixth story of "Who Pays" entitled "The Houses of Glass" will be shown Wednesday. This is one of unusual interest. The scandal-monger does some nefarious work to innocent persons, thus showing how this most dreadful enemy can smother the characters of apparently good and honest human beings. Miss Roland wears some very pretty gowns, in particular is especially beautiful and most becoming, to her peculiar type of beauty.

For Thursday, and one of the funniest comedies on record, "Lizzie Breaks into the Barn," with Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran, will be featured. The Irish drama, "The Water Lark," in which Gene Gaillier and Jack Clark appear Friday, tells the story of a gang of "White Boys," who are being hunted by British resident soldiers. A pretty love story figures in this interesting drama.

This photo-film depicts the pictorial make a place popular, has established the Strand as a delightful motion picture theater. Hundreds and hundreds of Atlanta's people go to the big theater every day because they know the house is just everything in the way of comfort and convenience, and that the pictures are as good as can be seen anywhere, and that there is value for value. It has been arranged that the Paramount company supply the complete program for the week. There will be three changes of features. Monday, Wednesday and Friday, bringing a new feature for a two-day run. These pictures are regular Paramount releases, being offered here at exactly the same time they will be first seen in any other city in the country. WORLD'S GREAT STORY AT STRAND THEATER

"Damon and Pythias" Told in a Remarkable Photo Spectacle.

No story with a heart beat in it has ever lasted and lived more vividly through all the ages than the wonderfully beautiful narrative of the friendship of Damon and Pythias. These two noble figures have stood heroically in all the flash of time, an irrefragable evidence of man's humanity to his fellow man and countless thousands.

have found life more blessed because of the example. Then it is no wonder that the progressive photo-play producer should realize that in the grand and appealing story told in the great picture of Damon and Pythias, to see what in a wide world and a wide range of subjects the Universal company has made of a presentation in the pomp and glory that radiated through Greece in the best of its days, these two noble figures are the only characters in the history of the world who have lived and died for their friends. The love of friendship of these warriors and leaders of men and the great test to which it is put, fills the six parts with a plot of absorbing interest and one that bristles with the thrill of exciting pulses. Harter, the throng of the crowd, the chorus dancers, the thrill of the chariot race, the conflicts at sea are pictures of a wonderful power while the real sentiment of the story is brought out with a tenderness that is lasting. A victory! In this sensational picture the greatest attraction at the Strand Theater Monday and Tuesday will be the story of Damon and Pythias, with the stamp of enthusiastic metropolitan approval, but with the unusual record of having the full hearty endorsement of the supreme judges of the presentation as an event laden with splendid moments for teaching, with its enterprising features, the great influence of the American and the foundation of its ritual the friendship of Damon and Pythias. Its first presentation in New York was witnessed by the supreme judges, Knights of Pythias, who in their endorsement of this picture, which is a production of a master hand.

WHEN last August the church bells throughout the Swiss Republic called the Helvetic soldiers to arms the prompt and enthusiastic response was sufficient proof that the Swiss had not forgotten the watchword, "All for each and each for all," written by their forefathers on the cornerstone of liberty in the year 1291.

But not only did the Swiss mountaineers descend from the remotest valleys to gather around the flag; the call also found its echo in every part of the world, reminding the Swiss subjects that their country was in danger of being drawn into the gigantic struggle.

The news of the blazing torch of war being carried into Belgium was received in Switzerland with horror, and certain prominent citizens, among others the famous poet Spitteler, rose in protest against the efforts of the invaders to "fish for documents in the pockets of the struggling victim."

The preparations for the defence of our frontiers against a similar invasion progressed with great activity under the efficient direction of General Ulrich Wille, commander in chief of the Swiss army, and Colonel v. Sprecher, chief of staff.

Italy's entrance into the war on May 23 has made it necessary for Switzerland to reinforce the troops stationed along the southern border, particularly at the point where the Italian, Austrian and Swiss frontiers meet, in close proximity to the Stelvio Pass, where, according to reports, some of the heavy fighting took place.

The equipment and armament of the Swiss Alpine troops are considered up to date in every respect, a very effective means of defence being the easily transportable machine guns, which are usually packed on sleighs if operated on snow covered mountain slopes.

Millions in New Plants Will Be Spent by Big Concern

Will Make Raw Materials Which Heretofore Have Been Purchased From Abroad to Extent of Hundreds of Millions Annually.

New York, July 10.—(Special).—Few people in all streets know why the stock market value of the General Chemical company has doubled within the past few months. Early this year General Chemical was selling at 100 and the price had jumped to 210; this was in the neighborhood of $100. All of which reflects a matter of great importance to the world financially to the United States.

What was the reason for this? A year ago there was a general feeling of satisfaction here at the advent of this country over the rest of the world. Sudden changes in the mood of the embargo on the shipping industry made the community. One line of iron trade another was all at once broken.

When the war broke out, the general feeling was that the country was in a position to produce in Continental Europe, had been broken by the war. At first it was only the steel industry that was affected. The ones had been buying ferro-manganese from Germany, the iron from the chemists for the steel which was made in this country. But the steel industry was not the only one that was affected.

On all sides manufacturers with blank faces were asking: "What is the prospect? What chance of getting to work? What is the future?"

GERMAN NOTE DUMPS SHORTS TO COVER

While Continued European Liquidation Is Depressing, Stocks Hold Own on Saturday.

New York, July 10.—To what extent today's substantial recovery of the stock market is due to the liquidation of German notes in this country is a matter of conjecture. It is generally believed that the German note dump is mainly responsible for something more than a hurried catch to cover by the market.

In the initial dealings of the day, the market was depressed by the higher German note dump, which was promptly offset by further sales of American gold products added on other principal points to the phenomenal advance in the market.

PROFESSIONAL VIEWS ON COTTON SITUATION

New York, July 10.—(Special).—Investors continue to show a disposition to demand from Manchester for cotton goods to ship to the East, but so far, no other governmental order is being selling orders appeared from Wall Street and finally the selling of the 600 bale by a foreign house demoralized the market. Another selling of 500 bales from the same source followed.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF COTTON GOODS MARKET

New York, July 10.—Prospects for a more active cotton goods market are believed to be improving. The embargo on shipments of raw cotton to the United States has already stimulated the industry for growth rapidly in the last few months. The market is believed to be in a position to handle a large amount of foreign goods when it comes to the clearing house banks and trust companies.

Cotton Seed Oil

New York, July 10.—Cotton seed oil was weak at the close of the week. The market was depressed by the sharp drop in raw cotton and the price of cotton seed oil was 10 cents lower than last week. The market is believed to be in a position to handle a large amount of foreign goods when it comes to the clearing house banks and trust companies.

But here's the answer: In 1910 a London variety theater put on a show called "A Night in a London Music Hall," in which Billy Revere played the character of a drunken tramp, garbed in the same make-up which both he and Chaplin now use. The show made such a hit across the water that its promoters sent it over to America. It was so successful in this country that a No. 1 company was organized and sent across to tour in London to play the tramp character and cause action. HEALTH FIRST AT THE STRAND

Supporting Miss Cowl are William Russell, Violet Hermon, Ethelbert Hank, Thelma Hall, David Wall, Claude Cooper and Adele Carson.

Health and comfort is a combination sought by every one and attained by few, because of the fact that science is not called on to furnish a solution of the great problem. The management of the Strand theater has solved the problem. It has been demonstrated that 25,000 cubic feet of air is drawn from the theater every minute, fresh pure air from above the roof being forced into the building through cooling coils and air washers in like amount. It requires for each person 30 cubic feet of air per minute to insure a perfect supply of oxygen. The Strand seats 150 persons, which would require, when filled to its capacity, 4,500 cubic feet of air. With the great system just completed, 25,000 cubic feet of air is forced in and draws out per minute, making an excess of 1,000 cubic feet per minute, which is a guarantee of comfort and insurance against disease. With all this remarkable combination of forced air passage there is no draught, the air moving in a perfect even and systematic manner. ... The Richest Street Car Conductor in the World

Toborg's Working Clothes and His Working Face Which Netted Him This $250,000 Smile and the Sure Enough "All Dressed Up" Regalia

Henry Toborg is just as happy whether he's punching transfers or clipping coupons—38 years in the service, with careful saving and wise investment, has netted him a quarter of million dollars. Here's some advice his passengers and others might do well to follow.

THE dapper youth smiled patronizingly at the ragged uniform of the street car conductor.

"No wonder they struck," he said.

"What chance is there for one of them to get ahead? Why, I said to Linda, our stenographer—"

But here are two facts that the dapper youth had no means of knowing:

The street car conductor in question is worth slightly more than a quarter of a million.

The income of the patronizing young man is less than 1 per cent of that of the man he pitied so generously.

The conductor had discovered what the youth probably will never know—how to make dollars grow where nickels ordinarily sprout.

It happened that the conductor was Henry Toborg, whose real estate in Chicago is worth about $250,000. He is reputed the richest street car conductor in the world.

If all street car employes would solve the wage problem as Henry Toborg has done a city need never worry again about impending street car strikes or the selection of arbitration boards.

Toborg has done away with worry about the high cost of living by the simple device of converting his salary of from $38 to $72 a month into a quarter of a million dollars' worth of real estate.

Henry Toborg punches transfers for the Chicago public from 4 a. m. to 8 p. m. daily on a shuttle car at the end of the Blue Island line.

He has been raising up fares for the Chicago Street Railways Company for thirty-eight years. Yearly income from rents nets him over $5,000. And his monthly salary was never more than $100 in his life.

Toborg took his first "lay-off" since the strike of 1887 during the recent popularity of the jitney van. Instead of resting he discarded his uniform, pulled the straps of his overalls over his shoulders and repaired the alley back of his hotel at Blue Island avenue and Leavitt street, opposite the old Blue Island car barn.

This is his advice to the trolley commuter on how to become a quarter-of-a-millionaire:

"Smile. Make it a broad one. It's good as a transfer on any road to success.

"Good spenders may be popular, but a bank account needs no friends.

"Never pay for having work done that you can do yourself.

"Make your vacations pile up your dividends.

"The man who stops work is like the old mill out of use. He falls to pieces."

Conductor Toborg was found one day

Good Spenders May Be Popular, but a Bank Account Needs No Friends.

took a vacation for a short time. I carried the hod and laid the bricks myself, and as I was a good carpenter in addition to being a conductor I laid the joists in the second floor myself. Then a chance came and I sold the property. My profit from the sale was something in the neighborhood of fifteen hundred dollars. That was what gave me my start on the road to a comfortable income.

"Then I decided to buy more land and build more houses. A man named Kennedy had started to build a house at Taylor and Center streets and had got a loan of $600 to complete the work. That didn't suit it, he couldn't get any more money and the work was stopped."

Conductor Toborg took a reminiscent puff at his havans.

"The carpenters came around and took out all of the windows and doors that they had put in. The plumbers carried off all their plumbing. And then the masons got mad and because they couldn't carry away their bricks they knocked out the front and back walls."

Here the gray eyes of the richest street car employe narrowed into a shrewd smile. He was telling the story of how a ghost had played a part in his fortune getting.

"The building soon fell to pieces. Young couples used to slip in on warm summer evenings and apart among the ruins. There was a convent near by and the neighbors used to complain because the old place kept the young folks out late at night. Passerby used to hear whisperings inside and said the place was haunted by a ghost.

"I wasn't afraid of ghosts, so I bought the land and the partly finished building. I finished it myself. Then I sold it and made a profit of $500.

"My next investments were 1087 Conliffe street and the property from 1122 to 1109 Leavitt street. Two of the members of the firm that I always bought my lumber from owned stock in the street railway company, so that I bought all of my lumber from them and whenever I wanted to get a month or two months off to build a house they always let me have it.

"Among my other investments were a three-story building at 4255 Morgan street, a two-story building at 7 Belknap street and the property at 497 Blue Island avenue.

"Always I found that doing my work myself saved me hundreds of dollars. My brother built a house out on Irving Park boulevard and paid the contractor $3,800. I built a house for myself that the contractor would have charged the same amount for and it only cost me $1,800."

Toborg's wife has been dead for years. He has two sons, Milo and Arthur, who live with their sister, Mrs. Tillie Sanderson. Milo Toborg has inherited his father's genius for money-making. He is 22 years old, has worked for the street car company three years and has a bank account even now of $1,000. Last week his father initiated him in the Masonic order, to which he belongs.

The home of Henry Toborg is a tiny room on the second floor of the Hotel Toborg at Blue Island avenue and Leavitt street. On the walls hang pictures of his family, his certificate of membership in the Masonic order and a picture of the Iroquois fire disaster grand jury.

Conductor Toborg, dressed in his best, paused for a moment after his interview to give this advice to the rising generation as to how to sidestep poverty:

"Work. Work hard. It is the only way to make money. I am 62 years old and I shall never retire. When a man stops work he dies. I am not going to stop. The man who does not work falls to pieces. He is of no use in the world."

The Housekeeper's Council Table

A Page of Practical Talks On the Home, Conducted by Dorothy Dolan

Making a Shower Appropriate for The Particular Individual You Expect to Enjoy It's Benefits

By DAME CURTSEY.

A Novel Shower.

A GIRL who was to marry and go to Maine to live was the recipient of this pretty and novel shower. She was invited to luncheon at the home of her best girl friend and found a most exquisite table ornamented by a circle of small pine trees, each in a white jardiniere. Alternating with the trees were glass candlesticks holding green cardruses capped by white shades. Inside this circle was a huge wedding cake, on top of which were miniature bride and bridegroom. All went merry as the proverbial marriage bell, tongues flew and the bride-to-be told of her new home. When the tea was served the honored guest was asked to cut the cake—and behold, her knife went right through into white tissue paper and she found a shower of dainty and useful articles concealed within the fake cake, which in reality was a cheese box topped with tissue paper and this cardboard which had been cleverly tied over.

Entertainments.

At this season requests are many for "flower contests." The following is a mighty new version of one of our oldest contests. The names of the flowers are given in the jungle; of course, they must be omitted on the papers prepared by the hostess for her guests, leaving blank spaces to be filled in. Fair Violet a maiden was, Sweet William was her lover,

For the Girl Who Works

IF YOU are a business woman you have to guard between extremes in matters of dress. It is very likely that you either ignore clothes altogether or you expend too much time and money on clothes. By giving a little time and thought to this important question you will soon learn how to dress well on little money. You should not have a great deal of trouble to learn this knack, for the American girl is by nature a shirt-waist girl. She acquired the taste, perhaps, from her English cousin and has done much to develop its taste and individuality. Therefore, to be well dressed in summertime it is your business to see to it that you have your share of shirtwaists. This will not involve great expense if you will repair and brush up some of your last year's waists and add a few new ones. The next point worth considering is your everyday suit. Let this be simple in line and modest in color. It is well to have this some dark color, such as blue or brown, to least something that does not take dust and soil readily. A small hat is preferable for common wear, because it is trim-looking and does not take more than its share of space in street cars and elevators. If you want to get a bright tone to your hat let it

SUPPER.
Bacon and Chicken Liver.
Alligator Pear Salad, Cheese Dreams.
Pineapple Sherbet.
Chocolate Cake.

Printed Beef—Melt one tablespoon butter, add one tablespoon flour and one-half pound dried beef. Cook five minutes, add one-half cup stock, a few drops onion juice, one-half teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, two eggs will beaten. Cook two minutes and serve.

Cheese Dreams—Cut twelve thin slices of bread and remove crusts. Cut in halves, cover with a thin slice of American cheese. Sprinkle with salt, paprika and cayenne. Cover with another slice of bread and saute on both sides in butter. These are more easily prepared small than large.

Cheese Custard—Melt two tablespoons butter; add one teaspoonful salt, each of salt, mustard and paprika. Add two cups of cheese, one-half cup soft bread crumbs, and one cup milk. Cook five minutes. Add two eggs well beaten; when thoroughly blended pour on to bread toasted on one side.

Bacon and Chicken Liver—Cut six chicken livers in slices. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Add an equal amount of sliced bacon. Cook together until livers are tender. Four on two tablespoonful flour, one-half teaspoon salt, one cupful stock or tomato. Season with Worcestershire and serve hot on toast.

A New Kitchen Economy.
After using cold water starch many housekeepers throw it away. This is wasteful. Allow it to settle and pour off the clear water. Put the bath in the oven and leave until the starch is dry and a hard cake. This should be put away for future use.

which may consist of chicken salad, sandwiches, olives, salted nuts, tea cream and cake. You should have a bowl of fruit punch conveniently placed "on tap" the entire evening. There are all sorts of stunts in the way of races and contests that may be arranged for outdoors, so much depends upon what your guests like to do.

Reply to "Troubled."

There would be no harm in making up with your former friend. In fact I think you would be much happier to do so. By your example of being a quiet, sensible girl, who allows no liberties, you will show him how much better it is to be that way and I am sure he will respect you far more than those he has been going with.

Questions From a Reader.

As I am a constant reader of your novelties in Home Entertainment I have now come to you for help. What is the twelfth wedding anniversary, and do you think dancing is nice for girls at an afternoon party from 3 to 5? Ages from 12 to 16. PEZZELL.

The twelfth year of wedded life brings the linen anniversary, and by that time gifts of this highly prized and necessary fabric are usually welcomed by the housekeeper. I do think that dancing is a lovely pastime and a beautiful one too for "just girls."

By DOROTHY DOLAN.

IT IS true for the young mother to cry for her first darling for the simple reason that she is as bright and as she is inexperienced. She ought to get some practical instruction on the proper care of the infant before it arrives and then make up her mind to use plenty of common sense in handling her own.

This is especially imperative in summertime, when the baby is so easily affected by heat, milk and by climatic changes. I grant it is a trying moment when you hold your tiny, slippery baby in your arms for the first time and make the attempt to put it in a tub of water without letting it fall.

In spite of your qualms, you must give your baby a tub bath and a sponge bath every day. To relieve yourself of part of the strain use a medium-size tub and have a basket filled with the things you need.

It is not nearly as important that the baby basket should be lined with satin and trimmed with lace and ribbons as that it should have a proper furnishings. This should include a box of talcum powder, a jar of white vaseline, a box of absorbent cotton, a cake of pure castile soap, safety pins, a bottle of boracic acid solution, a bath thermometer, a soft baby hair brush, large squares of soft old linen, a bath blanket and a complete set of clean clothes.

A bath thermometer is an inexpensive convenience and the water should always be tested before you put the baby into his bath. The water should be at body heat or slightly above, from 98 to 100 degrees. When the water feels neither hot nor cold it will be comfortable for the baby. If you do not wish to burn the baby do not turn on the hot water after you put him in the bath.

Be sure not to expose a young baby more than is absolutely necessary. Keep warm towels close by so you can dry the baby off as soon as you take it out of the bath. Before the baby is undressed you can wash his scalp, so he does not get soap in his eyes after you put him in the bath. After the head and the face have been washed and dried take off the clothing and soap the entire body. Dry carefully with soft, warm towels, patting the skin gently.

After you give the baby his bath use talcum or other baby powder. It will keep him sweet and fresh. Dress the baby as quickly as you can, or put him quickly to bed. It is well to accustom babies to tepid baths as early as possible. The temperature should be lowered until it is down to 94 for a baby of 4 months and to 90 for a year old baby. Lower the temperature a little at a time and rub the skin with the palm of the hand until the body glows. After a cool bath it is well to let your child have a few minutes of vigorous exercise.

Do not think you can keep a young baby clean by bathing him and neglecting the special organs. Wash the baby's ears with a soft cloth or a tiny

Furnish Your Dining Room Simply As Possible—Little Furniture and No Plate Rail Are in Good Taste

By MADAME MAISON.

There is always something fascinating about a dining-room. It should be cheerful and attractive in every way, with just the necessary articles of furniture, few, if any, pictures and no plate rail unless one has an old or rare collection of china, pewter or plate that can be cared for in no other way.

Given a south, west or east exposure, a blue and white color scheme is delightful, in fact blue and white are usually a happy combination. When I said white, I mean a rich, creamy ivory tint. For instance, let us suppose the walls to be paneled, the ceiling beamed (painted white), a small mantle with blue tiles, brass and iron, and an oblong colonial mirror framed in gilt over it.

There may be two casement windows across the end and built-in china closets beneath them; this is an unusual arrangement, but a very effective one. Have the floor stained rather dark oak and waxed and lay a two-toned blue rug of valour on the floor; if this is too costly, one of silk wool called "Scotch" will answer every purpose and will wear well and clean beautifully.

It need be no curtains at these casement windows. Just hang side drapes and valances of blue and white chintz. The same may be used at the doors to add more color to the room. Now for the furniture: Either dark oak or mahogany will be good and the upholstery may be the same chintz as the draperies. Old Nankin blue or Canton chintz would be charming in this dining-room.

Reply to "Matilda."

You could not be more in style than with your black painted furniture. The Dutch chairs will be simply perfect in the dining-room. As you say the design of roses picked out with gilt in rather worn in some places, I would advise having it touched up a bit and one coat of paint will freshen the set so it will be ready for use. Let the chairs get well dried before doing the decorations. I congratulate you on having them.

A Nest of Tables.

I have a set of five lacquered (black) tables that have been in the family for years. Where is the proper place to put them? I am going to home-keeping in a small apartment.

A Wooden Wedding Present.

Kindly give me some suggestions for a gift to be given a friend when she celebrates her fifth wedding anniversary next month. I do not care to spend over $10 and would like something that would be useful in a small home.

JANNEY.

The sum mentioned will buy many lovely things. A pair of book ends for the library table, a pair of tall wooden candlesticks, a "Priscilla" work stand, a mahogany tray or a slipper chair (a small low chair on which to sit when putting on shoes and stockings) or a laborer. I am sure you will have no difficulty in making a happy selection.

Vivian's Heart Chats

DO YOU know why your husband thought you the sweetest, loveliest girl in the world, or at least the most charming he ever saw, when he asked you to become his wife? Because you were his ideal, his conception of what perfect womanhood should be. In you there focused all the sweetness and charm of womanhood. You have been married a year or two or perhaps five. Your husband is as ardent a lover as when he courted you. Perhaps his love has developed and grown until you are the most ardent lovers in the world.

Granted this is so, you want to hold and refresh it with new love and enthusiasm. Summer is the time, especially when you and your husband go on your summer holiday. It is now when you are both resting and enjoying the beauties of nature together that you can quicken that love better than at any other time. The easiest way to accomplish this purpose is to make your husband's holiday your holiday.

Bear in mind that he has been telling for eleven months out of the year for you and the children. This means his desire should be of first consideration. It means your happiness and love and his strength for another year. If his idea of a splendid summer's outing is a small resort with plenty of fishing and boating do not put a damper on it by insisting that your pleasure means a summer holiday at a fashionable resort. Should he insist on anything as simple as camping out and enjoying the life of primitives, make the best of it, and get some pleasure from this experience. If you are the right kind of wife should he suggest that the holiday consist of a two weeks' tramp, take him out of this by calling it a walking tour, ready to get the fun out of any experience that may come your way.

It may happen that his idea of a charming vacation means two or three weeks at home, getting acquainted with you and the children. Along with this he expects to enjoy the home and its comforts. Instead of being our home, a large part of our morning you and the children, let it be largely his home for the holidays.

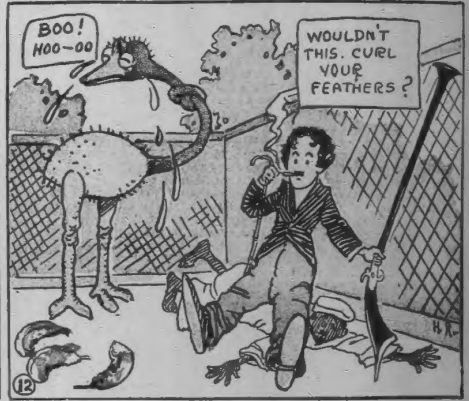

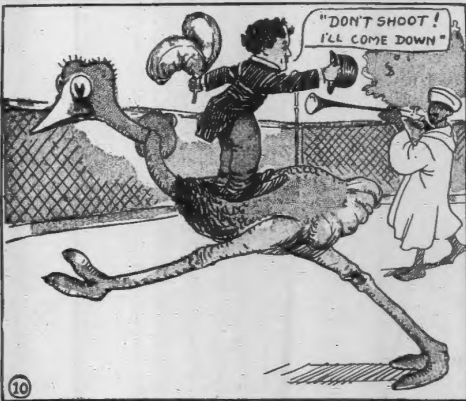

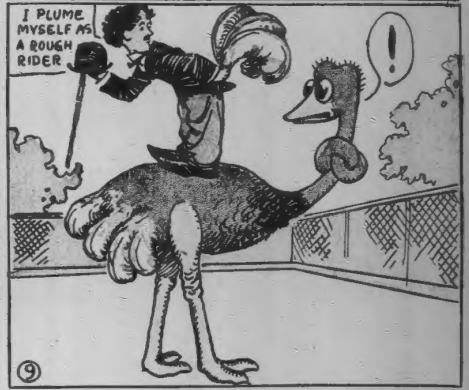

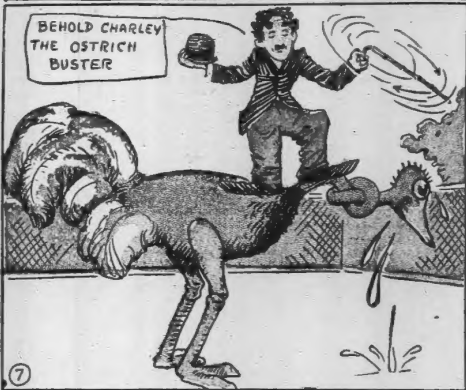

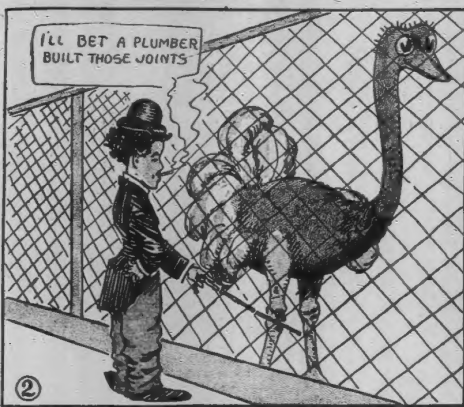

Give him this pleasure though it means extra work and discomfort for you. Let him feel that every room in the house from the living-room to the kitchen is at his disposal. If he litters up the living-room with his newspapers and leaves his slippers in the middle of the room, do not complain, but count them as a part of his holiday. This is only a small part of the splendid holiday you are to plan for him. Use a few minutes each day to delve into the menu book and take note of his favorite dishes. Give him little surprises such as serving him a morning luncheon of milk and cookies while he is resting in his hammock, and serve him afternoon tea when he is reading the evening paper on the veranda. He may be too modest to ask for these extra comforts, but be sure he appreciates them when they are offered.

This is one of the times to have little informal affairs such as card parties, picnics, and small dinner parties. Let him feel that these are his social functions, so he can do the things and invite the friends he wishes. Remember that you have good times all year round. You can do much to increase his pleasure by planning picnics and excursions to the woods or some neighboring town. If he suggests that you two go quite alone as when you were lovers, do not object because you feel that the children will come to grief.
