OF COURSE PETROGRAD VISIT PARIS!

Still Mrs. Marye Found the Life of an Ambassador's Wife in Russia Delightful, but Her Return Home Did Start the Gossips.

AND, at that, it isn't so much what the gossips are saying as it is what Mrs. George T. Marye, wife of the United States ambassador to Russia, isn't saying. You can't make gossips stop talking any more than you can make a silent woman start talking when she doesn't want to. That is the situation exactly. Mrs. Marye suddenly left the Muscovite empire and came home. Here she is in America and there her husband is in Russia.

Therefore the gossips' prattle. They say Mrs. Marye is disgusted with the czar and his court. They say Mrs. Marye wanted to be the wife of the ambassador to France and was hurt when she had to be merely the wife of the ambassador to Russia. They say Mrs. Marye will never go back to Russia. They say Mrs. Marye's husband is going to resign his post. They say Mrs. Marye and her husband have not been invited to any of the Russian court functions. They say Mrs. Marye is going back soon to take a Russian castle.

There are a thousand of these gossips "they say." But, of course, for every "they say Mrs. Marye is," there is a companion "they say Mrs. Marye isn't." Through it all Mrs. Marye has kept a dignified and mysterious silence. She has denied several of the "they says" but in such a manner that it has given the gossips more courage than ever.

twenty miles between the Russian railway going toward Sweden and the Swedish railway going toward Russia. Then it was necessary for the ambassador's wife to search about for some sort of a cart for herself and four trunks. She finally secured a two-wheeled one which had a furry pony and lap coverings of straw and very, very smelly skins. Moreover, she had for a companion a perfectly strange man whom she has not seen before or since. Her four modest trunks came tumbling after in another more or less staple cart. In this regal style she made the twenty-mile journey across the bleak and bitter Scandinavian country. An undignified trip, truly, for the wife of an American ambassador.

When she and the ambassador went to Russia the ordinary way was open to them through Germany and Mrs. Marye said to her maid: "Now we have twenty-four trunks and I am going to be very disagreeable if one of them fails to show up." As a matter of fact they all arrived and Mrs. Marye showed up in the capital of the Russian as well dressed a woman as America could wish to represent her at a foreign court.

But when returning Mrs. Marye issued no hard and fast proclamation about her trunks or as to how many were to come. If they were lost, submerged or abandoned, well and good, they would have to be charged to profit and loss.

As if there were not enough destruction

Mrs. George T. Marye.

George T. Marye

But when all is said and done it looks as if the real reason for the return of the Russian ambassador's wife is the matching of the democratic pride of a beautiful and accomplished woman against the autocratic indifference of the czar of all the Russias!

Ambassador Marye has been at his Petrograd post for barely a year. His wife remained at his side only a few months. When she returned there was no one even among her friends who could make her say whether she had been received at the Romanoff court or not. Several government officials, however, said in a quiet tone of voice they were under the impression that she had not been.

About all that could actually be learned from her was that she had an exciting time in getting out of the country which she did not like a little bit. In ordinary peace times the traveler leaves or enters Russia either by way of Germany or Austria. But the war, of course, makes travel by the direct route impossible.

Therefore, madame, the wife of the ambassador, had to leave Russia by way of the Scandinavian peninsula. Sweden, of course, abuts on Russia, and it would seem to be a fairly simple proposition to take a train from Petrograd and go north and west through Russia and then down south and west through Sweden. But it can't be done—at least, not so easily.

Ever since Russia built her railroad to the Swedish border Sweden has absolutely refused to connect up her own railway with it. She has always been afraid of Russia as an aggressive and swallowing power, therefore, her railroad separation from her. As a result there is a gap of going on by human frustration and as if the wife of the American representative had not had her share of hardships did she not meet with an awful mishap on the water! Having carefully selected a boat of the neutral Scandinavian line it just naturally and quietly and without the assistance of either the Germans or the English caught fire.

For the greater part of two days the wife of the ambassador and all the other passengers slept and ate and walked about the foregoing recital of hardships that Mrs. Marye wanted to get out of Russia real badly for some reason or other. One of the answers that Mrs. Marye gave was that she left at home a charming little daughter, as quaint as a conventionalized little girl of a colored illustration.

She came over to spend the summer with this little daughter, she said, and in the fall, she continued, "if one may make plans ahead that have their setting in the warming nations, I will take the child back with me. I am going to spend the summer with her in California and will probably return by way of Japan."

At the same time she told of her intention—if she returns to Russia—of taking a palace there of forty rooms. It would take thirty servants to run it, that is thirty American servants, which, as servants go in Russia, would mean at least sixty of the Muscovites. It has two bathrooms, scores of gems of art, one bathroom unheated and furnished with an elaborate carved tub in which the water does not run.

The Petrograd post anyway has been a Jonah to the President. His first choice as ambassador to the czar was Henry M. Pindell, a Peoria editor. But a letter which Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, wrote Pindell offering him the place on behalf of the President robbed the editor of his opportunity to serve at Petrograd.

The President's eye next fell upon Congressman Sharp, of Ohio, now ambassador to Franco. Sharp, however, had made speeches in Congress urging the abrogation of the treaty of 1853 and in these speeches he had severely arraigned the Russian government.

When the Russian government was approached as to his acceptability as ambassador, Russia quickly returned a firm answer to the effect that Sharp decidedly would not be a welcome official visitor to Russia.

At the time Marye was under consideration for the post of Paris. President Wilson then decided to give him the place at Petrograd and Sharp the one at Paris. At the time it was known by Mrs. Marye's friends that she did not like the switch from the exquisite things of Paris to the almost barbaric things of Petrograd.

MURPHY SHOWS WHY TIRES ARE POPULAR

Company Makes Twenty Different Kinds Exclusive of Safety Tread.

"One of the biggest assets of the B. F. Goodrich company, is price," says R. J. Murphy, local branch manager of the big Akron, Ohio, manufacturer of Goodrich Safety Tread tires. "Pride in producing these tires is not a mere acknowledgment, won, step by step, through frank and fair means only. Pride in the maintenance of a high standard of quality—in a reputation for reliability—dependability—and the square deal at all times."

"The B. F. Goodrich company has been making history in the rubber industry for more than forty-five years. It has always been the leader. It has almost never had a 'boom,' or the reaction that follows a boom."

"It has been conservative in all its operations—never expending more on customer expense, yet never lagging behind first place in the production of rubber. It has been the pioneer in nearly all great improvements made in the working of rubber."

"And it has grown, steadily, surely, as well as stepwisely, until the largest rubber factory in the world is located in that of the B. F. Goodrich company at Akron, Ohio."

"The operations of this factory require twenty-five acres of floor space, and the plant covers five acres of rubber belt. It employs more than 15,000 people."

"No other rubber factory in the world has so much crude rubber, manufacturing at an average of 1,000,000 pounds of rubber goods yearly."

"It pays one-sixth of all the taxes in the city of Akron, which city has fifteen other rubber concerns, and more than 160,000 population."

"Some of the White Anchor fire hose, made way back in 1864 (30 years ago), is still doing good service, because of the precision principle and quality amount that it looked all Goodrich company products."

"Every day in the year, on average, the operations of the B. F. Goodrich company result in the receiving more than 20,000 pieces of mail, and more cars than 1,000,000 pieces of rubber tubing, 11 kinds of rubber tubing, 3 kinds of insulated and other wires, etc."

"Every day, on average, the B. F. Goodrich company factory manufactures 40 miles of installed wire, 14 miles of rubber hose, 5 miles of rubber belt, 12,000 battery jars for electric cars, 10,000 conveyor belts that measure as much as five feet wide and weigh more than 1,000 pounds each, a hard rubber department that alone employs more than 1,000 men."

"All this in addition to its other departments and its twenty-one kinds of rubber tires it makes exclusive of the Safety Tread tires, which are made in its various plants of rubber buying, manufacturing and selling, with the exception of reduction of overhead expense, which is divided over so many classes, is what gives to the Goodrich factory the lowest cost for tire manufacturing of the highest grade."

"The responsibility to so many lines of dealers and consumers, in so many lines of trade, is what makes it so serious in guarding the quality and value of each product that bears the Goodrich name—so slow to launch new things until thoroughly tested—so keen to make success sure and continuous, rather than dramatic and transient."

"And of all these Goodrich products, that which best expresses the measure of our capacity, our experience and good faith is the Goodrich Safety Tread tire."

"It does this through giving the greatest mileage and safety per mile, to wear."

"When you test these Goodrich Safety Tread tires, and compare with others of considerably higher price, you will then understand our price to Goodrich standards and ideals."

"A pride which results in Goodrich tires being made better each year than they have ever been, and improved with each month's output."

"The Goodrich Safety Tread tire today gives more mileage than our own (or any other) plain-tread tire, and it costs about 5 per cent more price than you than that of our plain tread."

"This, in line with the Goodrich company policy, which is to base its charges only on the low manufacturing cost, matter how much more price could be obtained for the greater efficiency it develops from the material."

"If this policy results in this, concerns your pocketbook."

Darcy Beats McGorty.
London, July 31.—(8:07 p. m.)—Dodge McGorty, of Oakland, has been defeated at Sydney, N. S. W., tonight in the sixteenth round of a midweight championship battle with Darcy, an Australian boxer, according to a dispatch to the Central News agency.
Darcy gained easy mastery over the American and won with a knockout.

MAXWELL AUTO DEALERS WHO MET IN ATLANTA TUESDAY TO EXAMINE 1916 MODEL

Last Tuesday was Maxwell day in Atlanta when some 100 dealers from Georgia and South Carolina gathered together at the big warehouse of the Maxwell Company on Madison avenue to examine and contract for the new 1916 model and partake of the Maxwell hospitality.

H. H. Howe, zone supervisor of sales, and his assistant, James P. Headley, and District Salesman C. P. Hennessy welcomed the dealers to the meeting, and disclosed the 1916 sales plans and co-operative policies of Maxwell.

The car was unveiled and explained in detail by R. H. Rowland, an expert from the factory, after which contracts for the 1916 season were closed.

Luncheon was served in the warehouse and never before has such a unique feast been enjoyed at an automobile meeting in Atlanta. Everybody was in a holiday mood and jumped into the spirit of the warehouse luncheon with the keenest relish.

Overland Company Preparing For Big Business in Georgia

With fifty-two dealers in the state of Georgia, the Southern Overland Automobile company of Atlanta is preparing to claim first place in the state market as producers of the one best buy in a medium-priced automobile. Herein lies the Willys-Knight car which has only recently been placed in the ranks of medium-priced automobiles with the first Knight engine outside of an expensive machine, and shipping as fast as possible the popular priced Overland, the Atlanta southern branch of the Overland Automobile company, of Toledo, is bound for the conquest of the state.

Officers of the Overland Southern Automobile company state that they are going to win the Georgia market mainly through the quality of their machines, and secondarily because they have the staunch support of their fifty-two dealers who are just as enthusiastic over the automobile they handle as its maker.

These fifty-two dealers names appear on double-page of the Sunday Constitution, showing that there is an "Overland man" in almost every town of any consequence in Georgia, who is out to convince the Georgians that they can get the best car for the lowest price in their own home town.

Starting and Lighting System for the Ford Will Cost Only $65

A wonderfully complete, ready-for-installation Splitdorf-Apelco electric starting and lighting system for Ford cars for $65, including freight is the latest sensational offering of the Splitdorf Electrical company, of Newark, N. J.

"The most compact, the most serviceable system for the Ford owner has been the designing and manufacturing dictum, while absolute utility has been the keynote for the strenuous and exhaustive tests before bringing it to Atlanta," says W. J. St. Onge, Atlanta branch manager for the Splitdorf company.

"In unique features of construction and application—in simplicity of installation and effectiveness of operation—continues Mr. St. Onge, the Splitdorf-Apelco outfit hold the palm for lighting-starting qualities, and there is naturally a big demand for installations among the thousands of Ford owners."

The Splitdorf-Apelco system consists of a motor-generator, indicating automatic switch and starting switch, together with a 13-4 volt storage battery and all necessary parts for installation.

By connecting the motor-generator across the terminals of the battery through the starting switch, the electrical machine acts as a motor, spinning the engine until it picks up on its own power. The motor-generator is then driven by the engine as a dynamo, furnishing current for charging the battery.

Acting as a motor, the machine has sufficient power to spin the engine at a good rate of speed.

BUSHELS OF LETTERS TESTIFY TO MERITS OF GOODYEAR TIRES

"We do not often use publicly the bushels of testimonial letters we receive, telling of the performance of Goodyear tires," says James E. Taylor, branch manager, the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company. "They are, of course, a source of satisfaction to us, because they are proof that Goodyear tires make good. Occasionally, however, one letter stands out as typical about it. For instance, this one describing the performance of a Goodyear cord tire is from the S. C. Lowe company, Boston."

"The tire has been on the front of our Peoria demonstrating car since last August, and we used it up to 10,000 miles, without the least trouble, excepting one small puncture, and we got out of it in still serviceable."

"We demonstrating and test cars we have used at different times almost never get found a tire to act as a matter of fact, we have used it with great pleasure that we sent this to you, feeling that we had more than its money's worth out of it. It is a fine tire, and we had three other Goodyear cord tires, which three not given us one minute's trouble since they were put on the car last October."

MORE THAN $15,000,000 WILL SOON BE SENT TO FORD PURCHASERS

The Ford company make an important announcement in a flat reduction in the price of their car, coupled with the statement that while they guarantee against any further reduction within a year, they cannot give assurance that the price may not be advanced at any time.

Last year a flat reduction of $60 in price was given and a further reduction made that, contingent upon the company selling 300,000 new Ford cars at retail during the twelve months, they would profit share with the purchasers of such cars to the extent of from $40 to $50 on each car.

The company has sold over 300,000 new cars within the time specified, and beginning August 15 profit sharing checks of $50 each will be mailed to the dealer and every buyer of Ford cars during the year ending July 31, 1916.

The profit sharing with retail purchasers was not intended by the company to be understood as having anything to do with price reduction, but to give as an evidence of good will and appreciation of the assistance such owners would give the company in helping it sell the 300,000 cars.

The $50 profit sharing check will be mailed in August to 300,000 and more

There can be no assurance given against an advance in these prices at any time. We guarantee, however, that there will be no reduction in these prices prior to August 1, 1916.

Profit-Sharing with Retail Buyers

On August 1, 1914, we made the announcement that if we could make and sell at retail 300,000 Ford cars between August 1, 1914, and August 1, 1915, we would share profits with the retail purchasers, to the extent of from $40 to $50 on each car. We have sold over 300,000 Ford cars in the time specified, and profit-sharing checks of $50 each will be distributed as rapidly as possible after August 15, 1915. Retail purchasers who have not yet mailed us their profit-sharing coupons, properly indorsed, should do so without delay.

Our plan to profit-share with retail purchasers of Ford cars during 1914-15 has been most successful. We thoroughly believe in it, but, realizing the uncertainty of conditions generally makes it advisable to defer any announcement of future profit-sharing until a later date.

We are, however, confident of our inability to reduce costs for several months, and therefore can offer no profit-sharing for cars delivered during August, September and October, 1915.

How to Bring High Ceilined Room Down to More Modern Dimensions Through Appropriate Decorations

By MADAME MAISON.

Occasionally one has the problem of ceilings which are over nine feet and then the wall decorations must be carefully handled so as to cut the height as much as possible. There are paneled effects in wall paper that are excellent, and if expense does not have to be considered the walls may be painted (many coats, seven not too many) and the walls divided with ivory moldings into the desired panels.

For such a living or drawing room the mantel should be of ivory enamel to match the wood work and over it hang a gilt framed mirror either in colonial or French design, depending on the furnishings of the room which one is selected. The sideboards may be either dull or bright brass, and an old fashioned tender glass with one side a fireplace. Place a sofa to one side and a comfortable easy chair opposite, both to be upholstered in brocade, tapestry, or an English linen. If a pair of French or colonial candles are obtainable place one on either side the mantelpiece and have no other ornaments on it.

For pictures, if one has to purchase new ones, choose some old French or English prints and have them framed very simply in dull gold; the hand-carved frames are lovely. A leaf table, one leaf turned up against the wall, will be good besides the fireplace; and to give warmth and color to this room have a rose velvet rug cover the entire floor, excepting a border of the dark waxed floor, say five feet around the edge of the room. Have the lighting from the side, with rose-colored shield-shaped shades, and two or three of the ivory alabaster (in appearance) concealed lights hanging from the ceiling by dull gold chains. For odd pieces of furniture have a couple of chairs in the dull ivory wicker.

Reply to A. D.

Why not have a living-room instead of a parlor? I think you would be much better satisfied, as such a room is very practical and much more up to date than the old-fashioned parlor, which was usually too formal a place for anyone to have a really good time. You will need a good, comfortable couch, a large table, a couple of easy chairs, a small table for serving tea, and I would advise a desk and a couple of wicker chairs, one rocker and one armchair with a receptacle at the side for holding work or magazines. If I knew what you had now for the "daughter's" room I could better advise you what to get. I am glad you enjoyed that illustration, and I will try to put in a pretty bedroom very soon.

Where to Hang Paintings.

I have two very nice oil paintings of my grandparents; would they be suitable in the dining-room, as there is no good wall space for them in the hall? A READER.

Correct Color Scheme.

We are going to paint the walls of living-room, dining-room and reception hall. My problem is the color scheme. The woodwork is golden oak throughout. The dining-room furniture is mahogany, the living-room walnut, the reception hall golden oak. As they are connected by archways, of course the colors must blend. But I want my hall, with its northern exposure, to be made cheery and inviting, while the dining-room, with the southern exposure, needs a soft, cool tone and the living-room, between, a happy medium. If possible I should like to have the same color throughout.

KATE B.

Use a warm color yellow (not too bright) in the hall, and it will make you feel of sunshine all day long; then do the dining and living rooms in a yellowish tan. From the diagram you sent, these rooms are too much one to employ the color scheme, and you will be much better pleased to have them the same. Have a screen of three or four panels, done in tan burlap, and put up when necessary to conceal what is going on in the dining-room when guests are in the living room. I would not use portiers in this opening, as under ordinary conditions there are no objections to a well-kept dining-room being in evidence.

The Vacation Three Girls Worked Out And Gave to Their Mother

By DOROTHY DOLAN.

LICE, Mary and Kate were three happy and unselfish young girls. They were as fond of their mother as any girls could be. The trouble was that the mother was doing so much for the girls that they were beginning to take her thoughtfulness as a matter of course. Even after they were grown they expected her to plan their holiday. They considered this a part of her house-keeping responsibility. They felt that their obligations consisted in doing their daily outside work well and contributing their share to the family income.

When not absorbed in their work they were interested in their friends, so they failed to notice that their mother was growing thinner and her steps were more hesitating. One day the girls got together to talk over and plan their summer outing for August. Because this was to be mother's holiday they had rented a two-room cottage on a bluff overlooking a lake. Twelve dollars a week for rent did seem a good deal of money, but the rooms were of good size and the cozy camp had a wonderful sleeping porch. The front part of the large veranda was used as a dining-room.

Here mother had her large rocking chair to read, sew and to rock in turns. At the other end of the porch was a large swing where mother or one of the girls could rest or read on the warm afternoons. In the middle of the porch was a rustic table for the plants and books. This same table was used for serving the three meals every day in sunny weather. It was only when the weather was stormy that the family ate inside.

Series of Pleasant Surprises Used To Announce a Girl's Engagement Among Her Circle of Intimate Friends

By DAME CURTSEY.

A young woman who had been away from her home town on a prolonged trip returned and announced her engagement in this way: She managed to keep her secret, and so when eight of her girl friends were hidden to a luncheon they did not suspect the deaconess that was to be made. When they went to the dining-room the decorations and cards set them to thinking, for the centerpiece was a glass plate on which was placed a lace under sail. There were six cards favoring at each place, with a card which read: "The man in the case"; also were satin bags out of which a cat's face came, with a wee card around its neck saying "The cat's out of the bag." The hostess explained that the centerpiece represented the "Sea of Matrimony," and told the guests they were to guess who was about to embark upon it. The suit cases were opened and revealed the photograph of the "man in the case," but no one knew him. By adroit questioning the hostess was found out and congratulations followed.

The Leather Wedding.
The "leather" wedding brings the fourth anniversary and a dinner party is an enjoyable way to celebrate. Six or eight well chosen guests are a good number, and the table may be made most attractive. Use one of those pretty green or brown skins in place of a cloth, with plate doilies to match. The centerpiece can be a low earthenware jar filled with flowers. For the place cards use squares of leather with the letters done in gold. Another very appropriate centerpiece would be three kid slippers, heels up, with the toes pointed out, filled with flowers.

If expense does not have to be considered, card cases for all, with the name stamped on the inside, would make exquisite place cards. From the chandelier over the table suspend four wedding bells. After the repeat each guest must take a turn with the "good luck" slipper; it must be an old one, or the charm will not work. Twist it three times around the head from left to right, make a wish, and then throw it on the floor behind the back. If it falls with the toe pointed toward you, the wish will come true; if the heel, there is no hope of fulfillment; if it lands sideways—
There's a good time coming,
Wait a little longer.

Questions and Answers
Dear Dame Curtsey: I read your page every Sunday and have secured much help from your answers. I now come to you for help Cooking of eggs is important, as it affects their digestibility. Eggs like most, lose water when cooked, otherwise they do not change their composition, but the albumen coagulates. The egg yolk cooked either soft or hard is equally digestible. The egg white uncooked is more digestible than cooked.
The food parts that build and repair are protein and mineral salts. They are found in largest quantity in eggs, milk, cheese, meats and grains. Those that give heat and energy such as carbohydrates and fats are principally in starchy vegetables, sugars, fats and oils.
Butter, as well as milk and cream, needs to be fresh and pure. Pure butter boils quietly when heated in a spoon, and impure does not.
The color of milk is not always an indication of quality. Light colored

About the first of September I am to be married. The wedding will take place at 2:30 in the afternoon and I have planned to wear a coat suit with everything to match, as we leave on the 2:50 train. Would you wear gloves during the ceremony? Do you think it would be pretty to have a gray suit and the young man a pretty blue serge? What kind of flowers would make the prettiest corsage bouquet?
BERTHA.

So glad you have found this department helpful, for that is little it is for, as you will have very little time after the ceremony until the train goes. I think the suits as you suggest will be good, and neither of you need wear gloves; put them on before starting for the station. A bouquet of small white roses and violets would be pretty or one of pink sweet peas, just whichever you like best. On a girl's wedding day every detail should be as she wishes.

Reply to D. H. K.—Yes, I know it is often a long time before letters are answered in this column, so it is much better for all readers who are in haste to send me a self-addressed, stamped envelope in care of the HEALTHY for a personal answer. I am sure you will find a white serge coat suit will be just the thing, as it is dressy enough for all afternoon occasions. Wear white gloves and shoes, and a white hat with white wings will be in excellent style. It is proper to call after having accepted an invitation to dinner, and chaperons are more than "ever 'n' style"; not that our girls and boys cannot be trusted, but that "it is the proper thing to do" and boys like to feel that girls they take are under the care of some older person.

To the Girl Who Works

IT WAS a wise philosopher who said, "Man, know thyself!" It means this for women as well as men. A knowledge of self is essential for the making of success for all women, and especially those who work. You and I both have met girls who were very unhappy at their work, though they could not just tell you the reason. After talking with these three girls I showed them that they did not appreciate the real meaning of work, and the relation to their work. They soon appreciated the fact that they were not elated by the thought of having to make their own livelihood. It was rather that their work exhausted them, and because they were not physically and mentally fit, or both. Once appreciating their aptitudes and limitations they changed their work and took up something for which they had taste or talent. They are now a success where they once were a failure, and they are now happy where they once were discontented. This is only a part of the analysis you should learn where your work is concerned. Though you have a taste and better skill in liking for your occupation, you should tender and nourish it, the way a gardener does his flowers, or an artist does his pictures. Use the better method of studying your work from different angles and you will gradually learn its strength and weakness better than anybody can do for you. Before you know what has taken place you will be more critical with your own work than your employer would be had the responsibility been left to him. You should take stock of your whole physical and mental make-up in the same critical and analytical fashion. This is not a waste of time and effort, but it is time and energy well expended.

Hints for Housekeepers

Preserving fruit is largely a method of preservation by a heavy sugar solution, three-fourths to equal weight of sugar being used. Wash, rinse and scald with boiling water the plums for preserves. Cover fruit with melted paraffin.
Daintiness should not be sacrificed in the serving of a summer meal, as attractive dishes sharpen the appetite.

When they got tired of eating canned vegetables and fruits they used them for soups, salads and desserts. Once in a while they indulged in a large basket of fruit, which they ate raw and made into fine fruit dishes. They made a point of finishing the luncheon on some of the neighbors who had shacks or tents on the lake. If mother felt tired she stayed at home and read and napped.
At 5 sharp they were sure to be home to make and serve tea on the veranda. Often the tea was enjoyed by the members of the family, but occasionally some of their friends came in for the simple spread. As a rule they had a hot supper served on the porch. Here again simplicity prevailed; there were never more than three or four courses. Occasionally the family camped out for tea. One of the girls delegated herself to the building of a log fire and heated the water for the making of soup and the cooking of vegetables. A second broiled the meat or the fish again simply prepared; there were spent her energy setting the table and cleaning up after the spread.

The porch was screened in and had Japanese shades which could be drawn up and down readily. The shades were important because they kept out the heat during the day and changed the veranda into a sleeping porch. Mother was given the privilege of sleeping out on a cot all the time and the girls took turns, each for a week at sleeping in the hammock. They rented the cottage furnished. The tiny kitchenette had a gas range and all the crockery needed. They had a cot and another hammock, which was strung in the living-room. The one cot was placed in one corner during the day, and gave place to two chairs and a table.
The cottage had lamps, curtains, camp chairs and similar fittings. This was practically all the girls needed with which to keep house, for they had a large luncheon basket filled with plates, aluminum cups, a toaster and cans filled with tea and coffee.
The three girls took turns at keeping house. All three decided they were going to keep down their expenses as much as they could and make housekeeping as easy as possible. The girls were given clean bedding once a week instead of twice as at home. Each member of the family was allotted two towels, a knife, a fork, a tablespoon, a teaspoon, and one dish towel. The question of table linen was tabooed. This was easily done because they bought 1,000 paper napkins for which they paid 25 cents. To save operation of dish washing they had plenty of picnic plates and paper tumblers.
The girls went fishing every other day so they had all the fish they needed for breakfast and for one other meal, either luncheon or dinner. They brought with them plenty of canned

FRANCE CERTAIN OF THE OUTCOME

Year of War Finds the Republic Fit to Continue to the End—Review of Struggle by Count de Montebello.

Paris, July 31.—A year of war finds France fit to continue the struggle to the end and confident of the outcome, says Count de Montebello in a review of the first twelve months of hostilities given to the Associated Press.

Simultaneous with the battle of the Marne, which formed a part of the battle of the Marne, were the operations in the Argonne, the West and the Grand Couronné de Nancy.

The ultimate result of these defeats was the evacuation of the German army from the Marne and the capture of the Marne from a point near Paris to the eastern frontier of France.

France was one of the strongest advocates of the three-year military service law, and its co-author was the former Premier Louis Barthou.

France was not alone that it has complete those of her adversaries who, knowing their intentions, had accumulated an immense supply of munitions in such a manner as to strike the most powerful blow of which they were capable.

New Stone Marks Grave Of Governor Peter Early

New stone marking grave of Governor Peter Early in Greensboro cemetery, placed by direction of Judge George Hillier and William J. Harris.

By Mrs. James B. Park. It will be remembered by many interested in preserving historic spots, notably the D. A. R., the matter of removing to a more protected spot the remains of Peter Early from a lonely, neglected place on the banks of the Oconee was agitated. This place was once the home of Dr. T. N. Poulain, who purchased the same from Griffith brothers, of Athens, who showed every courtesy to those interested in the removal of Governor Early's remains. Both Athens and Greensboro made strong appeals for the honor of giving them care, but naturally Greensboro's offer proved that they will rest in her soil. The writer, a granddaughter of Dr. Thomas Poulain, feels it a coincidence that she should have been allowed to do all in her power to secure their removal to the Greensboro, which she had in beautiful order since the matter was agitated, and a holy week at Christmas she placed beneath the quaint old stone which bears the simple inscription: "Here lies the body of Peter Early, who died on the 15th of August, 1817, in the 41st year of his age. In the fall of 1817, he was buried in the hall shaft to Joel Early, and is being taken care of by the writer as a sacred relic, until she finds what disposal is to be made of it. He was a real D. A. R. ancestor coming to Georgia in 1783, and was a member of the D. A. R. who kept to the end of his life a record of his life and of the lives of his ancestors. He was a young man when he died, was distinguished for his firmness in putting through a government war loan of $100,000, and his money might be minded the union might dissolve during the war. He was a man of great energy, and his reply was characteristic of a man of his stamp. His death was a great loss to the country, but it is believed that he would have survived the war."

BOSTON'S POLICE CHIEF IS ALSO UNDER FIRE

W. W. Burney Refuses to Obey Council's Order of Dismissal. Thomasville, Ga., July 31.—(Special.) The suspension by the mayor and council of Boston of Chief Marshal W. W. Burney, the appointment of Policeman A. J. Stone to fill the position and the refusal of Marshal Burney to recognize the order of dismissal leads the citizens of that Thomas county town to ask themselves the question whether they have two marshals or one. The action of council in suspending Mr. Burney is said to be based on several charges, one being that he refused to obey the order of council to issue a writ of habeas corpus for the escape of a negro prisoner, Frank Smith, who was charged with the escape of a negro. Mr. Burney is said to have exceeded his prerogative when they issued a writ against delinquent water and light subscribers, and that in regard to the negro escape, when he returned recently the mayor instructed him to leave him alone, as his former employment would be responsible for the balance of the unserved term. It was by order of the recent grand jury in session at the adjourned term of Thomas superior court that an investigation of the escape of the negro was made. Burney has been marshal of Boston for fifteen years, and was popularly elected by popular vote of the people at the last election there.

BIG TEACHERS CLASS TAKES EXAMS IN COBB

Marion, Ga., July 31.—(Special.)—The teachers' examination here yesterday had the biggest class that has ever applied in Cobb before for licenses to teach. There were present ninety white applicants and twenty-seven colored—117 in all. Of the white only twenty-three were males. Superintendent Bernard Avey was assisted by A. M. Hayes, G. M. Orr, the first member of the board of education, and the latter a former teacher in the county. Twelve asked for licenses to be renewed and fourteen took only the primary work. Only two took the high school examination.

Rain.

(From The Detroit Free Press.) There are so many things worse than rain that we refuse to fret about it. If we had the toothache every other day for two months straight we might growl; if an amateur corned beef kasha were served at our dinner we might complain; if bills were sent in once a week instead of once a month, if boxes never went home if all friends only were mercenary and false in adversity, if sickness visited us oftener and stayed longer than health, if mail-clothes were messy and the kind we might justifiably be miserable and remain so.

OLIVEROS IS ACQUIRED.

Brunswick, Ga., July 31.—(Special.)—William Oliveros, the young white man who killed his stepfather, Fred Proser, in this city a few months ago, was yesterday acquitted by a jury in the King superior court, a verdict being returned by the jury in less than five minutes after the case was given to them. Young Oliveros, in his statement to the jury, went over the entire case leading up to the tragedy, and his statement was corroborated by most of the testimony introduced by the defense. Proser had cursed and pointed a pistol at his wife while drinking on Saturday night. On Monday Oliveros asked Proser what he meant by cursing and drawing a revolver on his mother and sister, whereupon the man, uttering an oath and threatening to wipe out the entire family, picked up a hammer lying near by. Oliveros then grabbed a large piece of lead pipe and struck his stepfather, leaving the shops and returning to his home. Proser was removed to the hospital, where he lived for only a few hours.

To Escape Hornets, Jumps In River and Is Drowned

Athens, Ga., July 31.—(Special.)—James Johnson, colored, met death in an unusual manner yesterday morning on the Oconee several miles from the city. He had been sent after a row boat by a party of campers from this place who are spending some time on the river banks. He got the boat and with two other men was rowing down stream. In the progress of the party he caught hold of an overhanging oak limb and shook loose a big nest of hornets, attached to the limb. The hornets poured forth and the man, who was rowing out on extra steam, Johnson leaped into the water to escape the stinging insects and was drowned, his companions running away from him and the hornets.

FEEL BILIOUS? CALOMEL SICKENS! CLEAN LIVER AND BOWELS MY WAY

Don't lose a day's work! If Constipated, Sluggish, Head-achy, take a spoonful of "Dodson's Liver Tone." Later on! Take no more sickening, salivating calomel when bilious or constipated. Don't lose a day's work! Calomel is mercury or quicksilver which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel, when it comes into contact with your bile crashes into it, breaking it up. This is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you are sluggish and all knackered out, if your liver is tired and bowels constipated, or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if breath is bad or stomach sour, just take a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone. Have my guarantee—Go to any drug store and get a 50-cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone. Take a spoonful tonight and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous by morning I want you to go back to the store and get your money. Dodson's Liver Tone is destroying the use of calomel because it is real liver medicine, entirely vegetable, therefore it cannot salivate or make you sick. I guarantee that one spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone will put your sludge on liver to work and clean out your bowels of that sour bile and constipated waste which is choking your system and making you feel miserable. I guarantee that a box of Dodson's Liver Tone will keep your entire family feeling fine for months. Give it to your children. It is harmless, doesn't gripe and they like its pleasant taste.

Why WE Blush and Why Women BLUSH OFTENER Than Men

It Springs From the Sensitive Soul and Cannot Be Provoked by Any Physical Means Now Known to Scientists.

By Sir Arthur Mitchell, K. C. B.

BLUSHING generally only the face, ears and neck redden, but it is nevertheless correct to say that the whole body may be affected, and there may be tingling, or some peculiar sensation, almost everywhere. The redness may begin on the forehead, but it usually begins on the cheeks, from which it spreads to the neck and ears, in no regular or uniform manner. It rarely goes so low down as the collar bone or shoulder blades, but there are well attested cases on record in which it has gone down much lower—over the chest and abdomen, and even over the upper part of the legs.

In persons who belong to races that habitually go almost naked the blush is said to be more extended, and to go often down to the arms, chest and wrists. But it is not a well established fact that this is a distinct characteristic of people whose bodies are nearly as much exposed as are the faces and necks of more fully clothed people. In other words, it is not certain that in such people blushing has habitually this greater extent.

Against the view that the parts of the body more or less constantly exposed are those most liable to become red from any state of mind, is the fact that the hands, which are almost constantly exposed, never redden from such a cause.

The blush cannot be excited by physical means. Burgess says "it must be solely a moral (mental) stimulus that will excite a true blush," and that "the presence is the result of a painful struggle in the mental feelings." There is truth in this, and a truth of importance. But the "painful struggle" is perhaps more correctly defined as uneasiness and flurry. By no physical means can we cause a girl to blush, nor can we teach her how to feign a blush. There may be a feigned blush, and a false laughter, but there is no unreal blush.

Much has been attained on the stage, but not the blush. Seneca saw this and said that the Roman players were "unable to blush in acting shame." Even pallor at will seems possible, but not coloring. The true blush is involuntary, and comes against the will. It comes and goes absolutely without invitation. It is the instant echo of a thought, and from this point of view is full of suggestiveness. The albino of a white race blushes

Helen Keller, Blind, Deaf and Mute, is a Living Proof of the Theory That a Blush Springs From the Soul and Not From a Sensation Caused by Sight, Hearing or Speaking. She Blushes as Frequently as Any Woman in Possession of All of Her Senses.

freely. Taylor also says that negro albinos blush freely. This makes it probable that the opinion that the black African blushes is correct, and that in his race the blush is expressed, not by redness of the cheeks but by a deepening of the black. Indeed, the red color of the blood spreading beneath the dark pigment might be expected, as Burgess points out, to give to the black a deeper tint. If this is true, there can be no hesitation in accepting it as a true and real blush.

Hybrids, mulattoes, or crosses between blacks and whites, are well-known to blush as freely and fully as pure whites. And there is no question as to the blush appearing in brown and yellow races. It is certainly not a phenomenon belonging exclusively to the white race. It belongs to all mankind, and to man only of all animals. It seems to follow that the mental state, which excites it, is experienced by man in every condition in which he has been found.

It is said that Sir Thomas Lawrence told Fanny Kemble that he nearly drove himself mad in attempting to paint a blush, which he calls "the most extrorinary incident in a woman's face." The result of his efforts was merely a red complexion—at most a flush, with no chance of its being taken by any one for a blush.

Before the blush of shame can appear the blusher must possess some reason and understanding. This is needed to call up the state of mind, which in turn calls up the blush. Hence the deeply idiotic are said never to blush. For the same reason it is said that infants do not blush. But blushing begins at an early age. It seems beyond question that it may occur at the age of four. We cannot, however, explain in this way why the habit of blushing wears away in advancing years and may disappear altogether in old age, nor can we explain in this way why women blush more frequently than men.

What seems to happen is this: Reason and understanding after youth is over are strong enough to show that there is really no cause for feeling a sense of shame at the usually trivial things which bring up that feeling in the young, whether these things relate to faults or to embarrassing or unbecoming situations. All the things which raise the blush of shame so freely in the young are really trivial in their nature. They are never of grave or serious import. No blush accordingly attends them when grown up persons have come to see their triviality. They do not feel the shame that raises the blush. Hence in advanced life blushing is rare.

The greater blushing of women is probably explained by their continuing longer in the conditions of youth, and so falling for a longer time to realize the unimportant and trifling character of what ordinarily raises the blush.

It is beyond question that deaf-mutes blush in all respects as ordinary hearing persons do, and that is what we might expect for though they do not hear what is said by onlookers or bystanders they see them and they easily perceive anything in their minds which would provoke blushing in those who hear as well as see.

It is also beyond question that blushing appears among those born blind. I have made a careful inquiry on this subject, and find that young persons of both sexes, who are congenitally blind, are often great blushers. They do not see the onlookers, but they hear what is said. They are often apprehensive that more persons are present and looking at them, than are really present, and this itself is apt to raise the mental state out of which a blush arises. They themselves, indeed, give this explanation, and say that they would not have blushed if they had known that only one-and-so were present.

Regarding Miss Helen Keller, the well-known American blind marvel, I have trustworthy information. Her governess once wrote me that Miss Keller "blushes much as other people do," that "she blushes at the thought of having made a mistake in answering a question, or under criticism, or when her feelings are hurt." The governess also said: "She does not, I believe, blush increasingly as she grows older; she is conscious of blushing, and sometimes rubs her face impatiently; her blushes spread over her neck and shoulders; she said, when I asked her in reference to your letter, that she felt a blush tingling all over her."

In all broad aspects, the blushing of Miss Keller is exactly the same as that of well educated and refined girls. She never saw other girls blush; she does not know by hearing or sight whether strangers or acquaintances are present; she does, however, in point of fact, know much more of whether persons are present and who they are than can be easily explained, and blushed can have no relation to looks or words of disapproval connected either with her appearance or conduct; yet she blushes just as girls do who see and hear, from the same causes, over the same parts of the body, and with the same experience of tingling and of a bodily manifestation of a mental state, and of that only, and it can never be called up nor kept back by the will.

How You May Cure All Corns and Prevent Their Return

CORNS cannot only be got rid of but can be prevented from growing again. The best methods are described in the Lecture by Dr. Paul Bernard Roddy, surgeon of the Kensington General Hospital, senior orthopedic clinical assistant of the London Hospital and captain in the army medical corps. Following are his directions for getting rid of a corn:

"The foot is soaked in hot water (105 degrees Fahrenheit) for half an hour, the hard part of the corn is then gently rubbed away with a fine and glacial acetic acid applied to the base of it. It is then covered with India rubber sheeting of the same quality as that used by dentists in making a rubber dam, fixed in position by two elastic bands around the foot or toe. One distal and one proximal to the corn. This is removed morning and evening and the acid applied for two or three days until the site of the corn begins to feel tender. Application of the acid is then stopped and the rubber covering used alone. By this time the corn with the immediately surrounding skin is white and dead looking. After another two days, if not before, the core of it can be completely removed by rubbing firmly with a gauze swab. The rubber is now left off altogether; linseed spread with boric ointment is applied to the site of the corn and reapplied twice daily for two or three days more. The surrounding parts then soon regain their normal appearance."

"For this treatment to effectual the patient should not use the foot while it is being applied. If the corn is inflamed the inflammation must be entirely relieved by fomentations and rest in bed before the treatment can be carried out."

To prevent its recurrence the causes producing it must be removed, the commonest of these being contracted toes and improperly shaped boots. The toes must be straightened. Sometimes a tritling cut of the tendons is necessary. Thereafter the toes must be gently stretched morning and evening with the patient's own fingers, and this must be kept up for several months.

"Having got the toes straight and having removed the corns, it is now essential that the patient be fitted with boots the shape of his feet. These must be made to measure on fresh lasts by a skilled boot-maker. It is useless to attempt to fit such a patient with ready-made boots or shoes. For often one foot is one-quarter to one-half inch longer than the other, and when one boot is a good fit the other is too big or too small. Also, only rarely is the boot broad enough in the tread to allow the foot to spread properly, and it is almost invariably the wrong shape—that is, instead of being straight on the inside with the end of the boot opposite to the big toe, the end is opposite the third toe, so that the former is pushed out."

Dr. Roddy recommends digitated socks for overlapping toes, but says they will cause blisters unless they fit perfectly. It is better to get socks half a size too large and convert them into digitated socks by sewing, thus making pockets for only those toes that need them.

Nourishment Now to Be Extracted From Ground Wood

WOOD now to be mixed with the fodder of domestic animals and even added to the diet of human beings was advocated by Professor G. Haberlandt in a recent address before the Royal Prussian Academy of Sciences. The Literary Digest prints a synopsis of this address, from which it appears that "there is a large amount of nutritive substance in wood of deciduous trees, a less quantity being found in that of conifers."

Especially in winter the sap wood of the elm, beech, maple, poplar, alder, ash, birch, aspen, linden and others contains sugar, starch and oil. Professor Haberlandt found 28 per cent of starch in the sap wood of a 18-year-old elm in March.

The dead heart wood is almost destitute of these nutritious substances, but the smaller branches and twigs are rich in them, while the bark contains too much tannin.

Ideas of Amateur Inventors

An Iceless Ice Box

FOR the housewife who is unable to obtain ice this box is a great convenience, for it will keep milk sweet and cool through the longest and hottest summer days.

Procure a stout box two feet wide by four feet long, or make one of plank. Screen the open front and back, making a door for the front. Then cover the top with oilcloth, letting it hang down far enough to cover the screened part in case of storm or rain. Roll the oilcloth up and fasten to the top when not in use. The box should then be put on legs at least two feet high. The north side of the house is the best place for it, standing it so that it is sheltered from the sun, and the air can blow through it.

Put the milk vessels in and place a pan of water on them in such a way that a cloth put over the pan will absorb the water and hang down over the vessels.

The evaporation cools the milk and a pan of water twice a day will be sufficient. E. B. A.

A New Fuel Saver

HERE is a rough sketch of an invention of mine which is giving great satisfaction in our home and will work in any coal range, so you can burn wood at a great economy of fuel. Also the range can be heated up more quickly for baking. It is simply a short piece of cast iron sewer pipe drilled full of half-inch holes and placed over the lower grates of the stove. This raises the firepot up nearer the stove lids, which heats up quicker and saves half of the fuel. The combustion is much more perfect. M. E. McCreer, Carpenter, Okla., Route F.

Nervous Indigestion a Myth—You Can't Have It if You Try

IN THE introduction to his new book on diseases of the alimentary canal Dr. Mark I. Knapp of New York has some suggestive things to say to physicians who blame on the nerves every trouble they cannot understand.

"The vagus especially," he says—the vagus being a great nerve that arises in the brain and supplies the mouth, heart and stomach—"has been singled out to bear the brunt of responsibility for the miseries comprised under the term of nervous indigestion. By so doing the writers at once positively identify the culprit; it is the vagus, we are told. Notwithstanding the certainty, and the comparative ease of searching for the lesion, no lesion has yet been found anywhere in the course of the nerve. This, however, does not deter those who wish to give the explanation of nervousness. A dyspeptic is called nervous, which is inferred from a general excitable condition of the patient, we must assume the presence of both the dyspepsia and excitability. Excitability is ascribed to a peculiar influence upon the nervous system."

"Dr. Knapp goes on to point out that the nervous system gets its nourishment from the blood; that blood is only the end product of digestion; that bad digestion makes bad blood and bad blood inevitably makes the nervous system suffer.

Brain Workers Need Meat, Not Vegetable Nourishment

THE editor of the New York Medical Journal has been searching the biographies of brain workers to find one who has been exclusively a vegetarian. He has found several who tried a vegetarian diet and gave it up, but failed to find any who persisted in it.

He cites Benjamin Franklin, who "stuck for a year or more to his resolution to eat no animal food, and looked upon the taking of animal life for purposes of food as a kind of unprovoked murder." But when he saw small fish removed from the stomachs of larger ones he reasoned: "If you eat one another, I do not see why we may not eat you," so he dined upon cod very heartily.

Then there was Herbert Spencer, who, after six months of vegetarianism, found himself deteriorating and returned to a use of animal food.

And Tolstoid, who at 87 adopted a vegetarian diet and adhered to it throughout the remainder of his life, completed his greatest work before he began this diet, "and his friends believed he suffered generally from the new regimen."

Even Thomas Jefferson, who was a genuine pleasure vegetable and cultivated great quantities of them for his table, felt the need of flesh as at least "a condiment." Just what he meant by this expression we are left to guess, but evidently he found his digestion improved and his general activity heightened. Apparently meat extractives have such an effect upon digestion, and a surplussage of protein seems to quicken general metabolism.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR EXPORTS AND IMPORTS SOUTHERN MANUFACTURERS IN FOREIGN FIELDS

Opportunity for Southern Milling

The international trade of the world in cotton knit goods has heretofore been mainly supplied by Germany, which regularly ships over half of the total exports of over $10,000,000 have been about half hosiery and half other knit goods. France, Japan, England and the United States, etc., have been small competitors.

Today the mills in England, France and Italy are working on war orders with up surplus to spare for their home trade even. Japan is not only shipping to India but also to England, but their industry is too small to supply more than a very small percentage of the world's needs, and the output from Spain and other countries is too small to affect the situation in any extent. The only country with an output large enough to fill the void in the world market caused by the cessation of German supplies is the United States, and our hosiery and underwear industry appears to be on the verge of great boom. Our exports this year have been about five times as large as those of last year, but this is only the beginning and the depletion of skilled help going on in Europe will cause an increased demand from that section in addition to the normal demand from non-manufacturing countries.

The government is working to aid American mills and the Atlanta branch office of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, at its postoffice building, state that since the first of the year they have received inquiries from seventy-two foreign importers and agents who have asked to be put in touch with American manufacturers. The branch office in Tennessee, as to large orders from Argentina and the West Indies secured as a result of its service, and state that southern manufacturers appear to be wide-awake and

Importation of Cotton

The United States usually imports over $50,000,000 of cotton annually and southern manufacturers desire a share in this trade as a good opportunity to get first-hand information through Mr. William A. Haygood who is now in Atlanta on a brief vacation before returning to Cape Town.

Mr. Haygood is a native Atlantan, but has spent the last thirteen years in South Africa most of the time as manager for the time being of American manufacturers' agent for American goods. He is now in Atlanta on a brief vacation before returning to Cape Town. American Capital Abroad

Trade in the United States is flag but it does always follow capital, and much of the foreign trade of England, France and Germany has been due to their investment of capital. It is encouraging to note that an increasing amount of our present great surplus is being used abroad. Since the war started, we have subscribed to $3,750,000 of Canadian provincial and municipal loans, and in addition have invested $6,000,000 in other countries. The largest loan was $2,000,000 in Argentina, 2-year, 6 per cent bonds. Great Britain's action in closing her money markets to loans other than those offered by her allies means that the United States must become the world's banker, at least for undeveloped countries, and the amounts that will be invested in loans to government and industrial enterprises will undoubtedly result in a great increase of orders for American products.

American Cotton Goes to China

Commercial Agent Ralph H. Odell reports there are 47 and 500,000 lbs. of the cotton crop raised in China, which has continued for almost a year in the history of the trade. This is due partly to the general depression of the world's cotton supply, and partly to the fact that the Chinese are willing to quote prices as low as 10 cents per pound, which is a normal time Japanese mills can make the heavy gray shirting and drill that have hitherto constituted American sales, coming mainly from Carolina and Georgia, so much more cheaply than they can here. Mr. Odell expects that if American cotton mills expect to secure a share of the cotton goods trade of China it is imperative that they turn to other classes of fabrics, particularly gray and white shirtings, in which Japan does not compete and which have hitherto been supplied by England.

Cotton Industry Abroad

The bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, but just published a pamphlet on the "Cotton Seed Industry in Foreign Countries" as a result of its reports as to the extent of the industry in England, Egypt, India, Peru, etc., and showing the competition that has

Sisk Carries the Store to the Merchant

H. M. Sisk and the "Cash Wagon" of the Capital City Tobacco Company.

There is nothing slow about the Capital City Tobacco company, and to prove it here is a little auto wagon that carries to the door of every merchant within a radius of 30 miles or so a complete assortment of every kind of goods carried by the big jobbers. It is a veritable wholesale tobacco store on wheels, from which the merchant who only wants a small supply of goods—small as that it would hardly pay the company to make a special trip to deliver—can step out of the wagon, select what he wants and pay the bill on the spot. It has proven a great convenience to the friends and patrons of the Capital City Tobacco company. The idea of a "cash wagon" as this is called, was inaugurated some time ago by Messrs. Carlton & Malone, of the Capital City Tobacco company, and was picked up so nicely that a few months ago the company put an auto into the wagon. The man who handles the wagon is called a "cash wagon" and is a competent salesman, and as a man popular with the trade. He starts out on his rounds daily, having a set schedule for the week, and loaded up with a supply of everything handled by the company, visits all the outlying and smaller suburban stores, filling the orders as required right from the wagon. It is just another of the more modern and progressive methods employed by the Capital City Tobacco company to render efficient service to the retailers of this community, and the latter are showing their appreciation of the accommodation given by accordingly to Mr. Sisk's personal recording of patronage.

Exporters of American Butter

It is interesting to note that a California firm has secured an order to supply a firm of Hongkong dealers with twenty tons of butter monthly. This butter will be used to supply ships for local consumption and for distribution among the eastern China ports. Ordinarily, Australia supplies the China market, but the present drought in Australia has become so acute that California is shipping butter not only to China, but even to Australia itself. This is the first time American butter has been able to secure sales in the Far Eastern markets since the dairy industry in Australia began to assume such large proportions. American butter is also being shipped to other countries in increasing amounts, while the imports from Australia, England, Canada and Denmark, which usually amount to much more than our exports, have greatly decreased since the war started.

BURDICK NOW SELLING BATTLE AXE SHOES

George P. Burdick, president of the Battle-Axe shoe company, Spartan, Ga., is back on the road with the Battle-Axe line of shoes. Mr. Burdick, while still operating the largest department store in Spartan, says: "I could not resist the lure of the road, and after being out of the road two years I am back in the territory that I had been working for fifteen years."
Mr. Burdick says that the crops look mighty good in his south Georgia, and that great economy will result in good business, regardless of the war, as everybody has practiced most rigid economy during the past twelve months.

On Record Trade Balance

For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1915, the United States exports totaled $63,232, and imports $1,874,220,140, the excess of exports over imports being $1,810,987,908. This favorable trade balance constitutes a record not only for the trade of this country, but also for the world, since that has never been achieved by any nation since the greatest trade balance in due partly to decreased imports and partly to increased exports. The largest volume of the increase in exports was in foodstuffs, but there has been a large increase in the exports of many lines of manufactures. In some lines of manufactures there have been increases for the year as a whole, but in many of these the losses were shown on the upward trend. The greatest increase in value was shown by the cotton due to the low price more than the decreased amount, and cotton is not as prominent in the year's export totals as usual. With the exception of cotton, practically all American export crops have benefited greatly by the war. Another year of war in Europe and peace in America will see all nations of the world in debt to the United States.

Thermite Bros. Co. are receiving very complimentary notices on their specialties in the standard trade papers, especially on their "Rose-Tip" brand, paper, and banquet sets.

LEWIS EXPECTS MANY VISITING MERCHANTS

Says Coming Meeting, With Bargains Offered, Should Draw Large Crowd.

E. F. Lewis of McClure Ten-Cent company, who asked by the Firing Line representative if he thought merchants were coming in large numbers to attend the annual meeting of the Southern Merchants this year, said: "The indications are that this will be the largest gathering of merchants Atlanta has ever had. Merchants will be looking for bargains like countrymen at a price-woman camp meeting. When asked why he thought so, Mr. Lewis explained that a lot of merchants in the south are without staple selling merchandise because they have been sitting still waiting to see what the outcome would be. And now that cotton is bringing a better price, trade will be better this fall than in years." "Being asked if his house had made preparations for the merchants, Mr. Lewis pointed to the big stock of staple merchandise and said: "We have cut our prices down very low, this has been done for the benefit of the merchants as well as to decrease our stock before time to move into our new location." "Robbers and manufacturers all over the city are going to have some very attractive values, as this is vacation time, the merchants are looking forward to a few days of pleasure combined with a profitable business trip to our city."
J. G. Robertson, who makes Carrollton company, fired into the house a big gun, and said: "I will spend next week in the house to wait on his friends."

"ROSE TIPS" PROTECTED BY U. S. PATENT

IS THIS THE WICKEDEST FACE IN THE WORLD?

Its Owner Does Not Deny That It May Be, Since Scientists Have Said That she Is the Reincarnation of the World's Wickedest Women and That Their Crimes Have Chiseled the Lines of Her Features

HAVE the physical attributes of scheming Delilah, of cruel Lucretia Borgia, or of diabolical Elizabeth Bathory, faithfully found reincarnation that the women of this age may see face to face the loathsome depths to which the worst of their sex have descended? Are the souls of those monsters of ancient and medieval times wedded with others to form the soul of Mlle. Theda Bara, the moving picture actress known as the most wicked-faced woman in the world? Mlle. Bara, confronted by inquiring professors of science, cannot answer. She looks in a mirror and sees a sinful face; she inquires of her soul and the answer comes that she has lived before—has desired as I know it in life. I can simply say that in playing the parts of wicked characters, such characters as the vampire, let, in 'The Clemenceau Case,' and La Gioconda in 'The Devil's Daughter,' I feel that what they do and what I do is quite right. What I mean is that I could readily do in actual life as they did in the fictional world if the great inclination came. Yet I have never been either than normal in my conduct, living quite as righteously as my fellow mortals. "I once was led to consult a professor of astrology and palmistry. He told me many things which have come true. He told me that his science showed I had passed through various incarnations, that my soul was many sided, that it had fallen as low as human spirit could fall and also had touched the sun-dial heights. "He told me I would seek the expiation lived as the companion and crony of crime—yet her heart sings the song of the righteous and she has no fear that phantom forms will drag her to perform in this life the deeds she enacted in pantomime before the moving picture camera. Amazed at Mlle. Bara's powerful presentation of the promptings of hate, lust, cunning, hypocrisy, revenge, anger and spite, scientists searching have questioned her to secure fresh evidence to support their half-proved laws of transmigration of souls, of reincarnation of personality.

Here's the Explanation.

And to their questions Mlle. Bara answers: "You say I have the most wicked face of any woman. You say my hair is like the serpent locks of Medusa, that my eyes have the cruel cunning of Borgia, that my mouth is the mouth of the sinister, scheming Delilah, that my hands are like the talons of a Crow or the blood-bathing Elizabeth Bathory. And then you ask me of my soul—you wish to know if it is reflected in my face. "The belief that I have lived before and have taken many parts on this world's stage has a strong hold on my imagination. "The most powerful appeal of any literature I have ever known is the simple of multitudes. He told me what has come true, that in playing my part in life I would find my many-sided self playing my parts for me, that in the enactment of the parts I would lose my original, my normal self and live for the time apart from my actual surroundings. "Students of astrology and phrenology see an unusual parallel in the recorded physical characteristics of Elizabeth Bathory and Mlle. Bara. Compared with the horrible career of Elizabeth Bathory, that of Lucretia Borgia seems like that of a peaceful peasant. Elizabeth Bathory lived almost alone in the famous Castle Oszthe in Hungary about 1624. Lucretia Borgia poisoned a handful, but Lady Bathory slew no less than 800 girls and young women—not for revenge, but that she might bathe daily in their blood and thus retain her beauty. Lady Bathory lived with only two serv-

Muscular System of a Serpent

By EMILY H. VAUGHT, Phrenologist and Physiognomist.

I WRITE this with a photograph of Theda Bara before me. Never in all my experience as a professional character reader have I gazed into a face portraying such wickedness and evil—such characteristics of the vampire and the sorceress.

Theda Bara belongs to what we term the wide-faced, muscular type of people, whose bones are slender and small, and who are governed by the same muscular system as the serpent. They are sinuous like the serpent, and, as if the characteristics of a reptile were not enough, they have a feline temperament, deliberately taking pains to inflict suffering on others—and because of their destructiveness as a faculty they have a very keen sense, understanding, and appreciation of evil.

Those of her type yearn for the luxuries of life, but never plod nor struggle to obtain them. They would rather practice the art of the burglar, the sneak-thief or the adventures to possess the things their soul

As I study the features of this unusual girl I note particularly the width of her head and face and the expression of her eyes. They denote intellect, a keen mind, and a responsive nature. That she is not wilder her facial characteristics would indicate, that is, a vampire off the screen as well as on, is shown by the height of her head above the eyes.

In other words Theda Bara has a very wicked, cruel and evil face, but she is not wicked, cruel and evil. Unlike the glib, who never admit guilt, she has a sense of evil. This, evidently, is a gift which the motion picture producers failed to recognize.

ants, old women who, if it is mild, were feeble-minded and cared little what their mistress did. For years their haughty mistresses lured scores upon scores of young girls to her castle, tempting them with rich offers of wealth if they would enter her employ as maid servants.

For a time the girls would lead a happy life. But just as sure as the seasons changed, just so soon would their proud mistresses grow hysterically fearful that her beauty was waning and the girls were led to their slaughter.

Slaughtered by Doll.

These unfortunate creatures were conducted to the cellar of the castle, and here, presumably in a state of nature, were compelled to walk toward the figure of a large doll. This doll was a diabolical machine, in the construction of which a number of two-edged knives as sharp as razors had been introduced.

In approaching this hideous invention the victims unwittingly released a hidden spring, which set the machine in action. Like a living fiend the outstretched arms of the doll grasped the poor girl in a death embrace, and before she had a chance to withdraw from its clutches literally cut her to pieces. The blood from the body was conducted by small channels to a bath close by, in which Elizabeth is said to have bathed, thinking thereby to preserve her beauty.

These atrocities went on for ten years, until one of the girls escaped to the castle managed to get in communication with her sweetheart, who rescued her after surmounting great difficulties, and brought about the death of Elizabeth Bathory.

Endless Possibilities for Film.

It is said that Mlle. Bara may yet be asked to play the part in a thrilling film drama built about the terrible history of Oszthe Castle. When the great stage is set for the scene Mlle. Bara will glide forth in her famous serpentine, gracefully undulating way to play what may be her most famous part of treachery and blood. Will her mind, obsessed with the part she plays, call into flaming life the smoldering desires of a soul reborn and will the world through some strange trick of laws far beyond the knowledge of our wisest men be given a true picture of history's worst woman—the beautiful woman who bathed in blood until, transformed, she bore the world's most wicked face?

DEATH NOTE TELLS OF LOVE FOR WIFE

Moore Declared He Could Not Bear to Face Maker and Leave Wife for Another.

Coroner Paul Donohoe's jury yesterday, at the Greenberg & Bond chapel, over the bodies of Violeta Tucker Moore, the murdered 18-year-old wife of Edwin A. Moore, former soldier, who committed suicide Friday night, after shooting his wife at her home, 451 Pulliam street, returned a verdict of "murder and suicide," after examining only two witnesses.

room, and found Violeta and Moore lying on the floor, only a few feet from each other, the girl with a bullet hole in her breast, and Moore with a bullet hole in his right jaw and over his right eye.

The lengthy death note, which was typewritten Friday afternoon, in the office of W. D. Cox, who is state supervisor of the Grand Fraternal Order of Philadelphia, at 261 Kaiser building, was furnished as evidence in the coroner's inquest.

The general of Violeta Moore has not been definitely decided upon yet. Mr. and Mrs. Cox are awaiting answers to telegrams they have sent to all members of the family who live in the north. If Violeta's sisters will not come home to attend her funeral, it is probable that a funeral will be held today.

The undertaking establishment of Greenberg & Bond received a telegram yesterday night from A. W. Moore, of 7382 Kelly street, Pittsburgh, Pa., father of Edwin A. Moore, the United States soldier and railroad man who committed suicide after killing his 16-year-old wife at the residence of his parents at 451 Pulliam street, Atlanta, Ga., Friday night.

TORCH USED BY CITIZENS ON DEN OF BOOTLEGGERS

Killing of Sheriff Caused Raid. Several Houses Burned and Eighteen Men Arrested.

Oscola, Ark., July 31.—Enraged by the killing of S. R. Mauldin, sheriff of Mississippi county, Ark., citizens here cleared Island 7, a "bootleggers' rendezvous" in the Mississippi river near here, of its inhabitants and applied the torch to the dozen or more frame buildings which housed the residents of the island.

Mauldin was killed early today in a battle between a posse of officers and citizens and residents of the island, who barricaded themselves in a cabin and tested the right of the posse to arrest a negro accused of the illicit sale of liquor. After Sheriff Mauldin had been killed the posse riddled the cabin with bullets. The occupants surrendered after they had exhausted their ammunition and one of their number, a negro, had been killed.

Report on Dairies for July

The report for July of the city bacteriologist on tuberculin tested dairies was announced Saturday. The law requires that the milk contain as much as 2 and 8 per cent butter fat. Fresh, clean milk will contain less than 18,000 bacteria per cubic centimeter. The law allows as much as 100,000 per cubic centimeter. If it contains more than 100,000 there has been some carelessness somewhere in handling the milk.

Prophet of Kennesaw Writes On Cotton and Other Things

By N. K. Smith

A New York paper has had this head line Saturday: "German's Reply Pleases Wall Street." Favorably Construction Planned on New York Stock Market. "The stocks referred to are mostly northern stocks, and owned by northern men."

This is the head line, same page. "The cotton market is not owned 'north,' it is owned by southerners, southern farmers and merchants. Now I will tell you where the 'germ' is in Germany's note that makes Wall Street blow not and cold at the same time."

In regard to cotton, that great gambling machine, known as the cotton exchange, can more easily depress cotton now on the approach of harvest and make more money by gambling on the short time, and thus openly and in the day time rob the south, than they can by other means. The same 'germ' applied to things that they own are bountied by it, and so does the cotton market, and down comes the cotton crop, and as soon as they die, cotton is easy to work on that side up there, where they do not own any cotton. There is one hope and one salvation, the south will not sell her spot cotton at the prices made by paper speculators.

Cotton is valuable in the face of the most adverse market condition the world has ever seen. Cotton has been king; cotton is king today in the south and the cotton will remain king. And when the gamblers on the New York stock market, who have done in the past—commit suicide—nothing again from the south to play with their money, they will hammer the price of contracts; but when they come to the point of sale, the cotton in bales that each man will never get out of his hands, and months of labor, they will sell him a bale except at their own price, and that will be a fair price, and show a profit.

Memories of boyhood sweetest days and hisy romances, laid on by the country school teacher, were recalled in W. W. Moore's mind when he visited his boyhood stamping press near Newbern, N. C., and his family he motored to his father's home and attended to his duties as a boy, he attended divine worship.

Determination.
By Walter Clayton.
I am in the game to win and die. At times the way is dark and dim. The hills are slippery, the rivers high. The night is cold and so am I. But win I must; I will win or die!

Others have won no greater than I. By faith and work and truth and try. They climbed the ladder way up high; His name and road this same old way. Has dealt them blows the same as I. It is a war, this is a war, this is a war. I should not win—yes, I will win or die!

car a case for the farmer and the southern supply merchants who have carried the hardest load ever put upon any man. And yet this group of unscrupulous speculators and gamblers, known as the New York Cotton Exchange, is allowed to do business with only one sole object in view—to rob and steal from the great south with impunity. Senator Vardaman, of Mississippi, wrote me, when he was signing the great deal, that "next to the interlocking of liquor, cotton, exchange, gambling and dealing in cotton futures does the south more harm in money and morals than all else combined."

Last year, at the first breath of trouble, this filthy organization closed up, and as soon as they die, cotton is easy to work on that side up there, where they do not own any cotton. There is one hope and one salvation, the south will not sell her spot cotton at the prices made by paper speculators.

BUSINESS AND SOBRIETY
The most earnest and most successful agencies of reform are the big employers that insist on strict abstinence from intoxicating liquor on the part of their employees. The Pennsylvania railroad, for example, forbids its employees to use liquor and, furthermore, keeps a systematic watch to insure it from being observed. In the month of February its agents looked into the habits of 125,323 employees, and the result shows that not a single violation of the order was found. That is a remarkable record and proves that men can control their appetites for drink under the necessity of holding their jobs, for it must be supposed that in the 125,000 were a considerable number who had a taste for intoxicating liquors.

C. H. Burge, president of the Atlanta Camp of Gideons, has just returned from the national convention of Gideons at Des Moines, Iowa. He is very enthusiastic over the success of the great meeting.

Predicts Unusually Prosperous Season For Merchants and Manufacturers

Editor Firing Line: Today closes the first year of the unusual year in Europe. When the press dispatches one year ago announced the fact that the great nations of Europe were mobilizing their armies for this stupendous and unprecedented conflict, the world of business reeled and staggered under the mighty blow. At this stage of the game we are not only in position to take account of the results for the first year of this war, but in view of the fact that the business everywhere was practically paralyzed in its efforts to make a business of it, we are now in a position to make a careful study as to what we may expect for the future.

As a careful student of cause and effect in the commerce of this country, I am forced to admit that with over a billion dollars trade balance in favor of this government, which I am advised is approximately five billion in excess of any trade balance for any year in the history of this government, this fact is to be remembered that the grain crops of the United States last year made new records and these unprecedented crops of grain were turned into money, just as fast as transportation facilities could be furnished at the price of the south was the greatest in the history of the world for the cotton section unquestionably increased its production of cotton to a record for the year, and the cotton crop of the south was the greatest in the history of the world for the year.

I am unable to see any sound business reason why there should be any ground whatever for a pessimistic view of business conditions generally throughout this country. In fact, there never has been a sound business reason why there should have been such a general curtailment of business operations in this country since the beginning of this war, except that resulting from fear or nervous shock produced by the war, and no one felt justified in making any business activity, not knowing what might develop.

The statements made by the national banks of the United States and the reports recently published by the government, which intelligently analyzed show that the basic principles of financial control of this government were never as sound before, and that the money of all the great nations of Europe having depreciated to considerably below par value, while the United States dollar is bringing a premium in the same countries, it indicates that the future of the world will be a great one, and that the greatest nation in the world in material wealth, but also the head of the world.

RAGAN-MALONE TO SHOW LADIES' COAT SUITS
In anticipation of a number of merchants visiting the city next week, the Ragan-Malone company have arranged to have on display Monday a large line of ladies' coat suits for fall. The company will also have on display an attractive line of ladies and children's cloaks, and among the novelties it is showing are ladies' blue silk aviator coats, which are very much in demand just now. The line also includes such as rose, yellow and Copenhagen, and also secured a large shipment within the past few days of the most recent black hose. There seems to have been a scarcity of this line recently, but the Ragan-Malone company declare they are prepared to serve their trade on this line now.

BUSINESS AND SOBRIETY
The most earnest and most successful agencies of reform are the big employers that insist on strict abstinence from intoxicating liquor on the part of their employees. The Pennsylvania railroad, for example, forbids its employees to use liquor and, furthermore, keeps a systematic watch to insure it from being observed. In the month of February its agents looked into the habits of 125,323 employees, and the result shows that not a single violation of the order was found. That is a remarkable record and proves that men can control their appetites for drink under the necessity of holding their jobs, for it must be supposed that in the 125,000 were a considerable number who had a taste for intoxicating liquors.

which is bound to be harvested by sources, and the most cheerful and optimistic will naturally receive the lion's share.

The only depressing thought connected with it must admit, are the fact that he will reap this abundant harvest at the expense of our neighbors across the Atlantic, whose homes have been desolated, their property destroyed and their lands devastated to satisfy the ambition of a few men who have no interest in the individual units of human life.

AUTO COMPANY WILL INCREASE ITS STOCK

Paige Detroit Motor Company Announces Change From $250,000 to $1,000,000.

Evidence of the prosperity of the automobile industry in general and of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car company in particular is discussed in the news that the Paige directors have made arrangements for the increase of their capital stock August 3 from $250,000 to $1,000,000. This action was taken at a recent meeting of the directors when the payments of the regular monthly cash dividend of 10 per cent was ordered.

This significant move on the part of the directors, coupled with the fact that an army of workmen are busy night and day constructing a large addition to the plant that will eventually double its capacity, is calling attention again to the phenomenal achievements of this company. The success of the Paige has been won in four years. Three hundred cars were manufactured its first year. This season, with production confined to sixes, a light five-passenger six and a seven-passenger model, the schedule calls for about 15,000 cars. Such an extraordinary growth in such a brief period is almost unparalleled even in an industry that is filled with sensational achievements.

One of the biggest hits the Paige company made was its production of the Fairfield "Six 40" launched last January. This is the car that gave the company its greatest forward impetus. The 1916 model of the Fairfield has been out just a few weeks and one dealer's orders for the month of July total 125 cars. Much credit for the success of this concern is due to the new directing its policies and activities. The board of directors of the Paige company comprises some of the finest business men in the middle west, every one of whom is a recognized factor in financial circles, having already won success by good business judgment and ability.

Branch Agency Is Established Here By the Pullman Motor Car Company

NEW PULLMAN CAR.

After fourteen years of successful manufacture and operation in the states of the north, in which it is claimed that the company had all the business it could properly take care of the Pullman Motor Car Company of York, Pa., has established a large branch agency in this city.

The Atlanta company is known as the Pullman Southern Distributors, and is located at 318 Peachtree. L. L. Stevenson, son of the vice president of the parent company, a young man who has served in both the mechanical and sales end of the big motor company, is the Atlanta sales manager. He arrived in the city about a week ago, driving down from New York in one of his latest Pullman Juniors, making the trip in about a week. Already Mr. Stevenson has made a number of good staunch friends along automobile row, being personally a man of genial and affable manners, and has impressed upon those who have come in contact with him that his wide experience in practically every side of the automobile business most aptly equips him for the duties laid out for him in his new connection. The company will cover the state of Georgia, Alabama and Florida.

The father of Mr. Stevenson, Oscar Stevenson, is vice president of the Pullman Motor Car company. He is recognized as one of the leaders in the auto world in the north. He is also the president of the Pullman Southern Distributors, the new Atlanta agency, and will spend about half of his time in this city. The close connection between the big company at York, Pa., and the Atlanta agency is going to prove of great value to patrons of the latter, and will guarantee to them that the excellence of service which can come only through such close connection be-capacity of salesman, will prove a valuable adjunct to the Southern Distributors. Mr. Hull is a Georgian, formerly connected with one of the well-known automobile concerns of this city, and has a host of friends whose congratulations will go out to the new agency on the wisdom of its selection of this popular and experienced salesman.

This is not the first time, however, the Pullman Junior has been represented in this section. About four years ago Captain Heild, for a short time handled this car, and the satisfaction which the cars have given to purchasers made at that time is expected to prove of large benefit to the new distributors. However, after a time, the agency was discontinued, and for the past three or four years Pullman cars has not been represented here.

Made in Two Models. The Pullman Juniors are made both in touring and roadster models, and as a medium-priced car are said to equal any at much higher price. They are thoroughly modern in every respect, and with a price of $2750 in Atlanta, are expected to be a winner here.

"For fourteen years," said Mr. Stevenson, sales manager, "our company has really had its hands full looking after the northern territory. We have sold our cars faster than we could make them. But now, with an enlarged capacity, we have decided to come into the southern states. We believe a splendid opportunity is offered here. I have abandoned our agency here a few years ago because conditions were somewhat unfavorable down here, but we believe things are going to be normal soon, and we want to re-enter the market as soon as we can."

The motor is in one unit and develops 30-horsepower. It has detachable head and rigid bottom. It uses the Splitdorf-Dixie magnetos, silent chain drive, and hot air fuel. In every detail it compares most favorably with the higher-priced cars, being electrically equipped throughout, and all at the price it is offered ought to prove a great seller for this section.

$3,000,000 Business Done in Detroit in Year In Automobile Industry

Three hundred million dollars represent the automobile business done in Detroit last year, according to government industrial census takers here. While official announcement will be made in Washington, it is expected that the city, according to a United States official in touch with the Detroit figures, will reach the $3,000,000 mark in just five times the industry of Detroit. The census takers estimate that Detroit is in good part responsible for the increase. From a stable town with a population of 250,000 in 1900, it has now become the city of 1,200,000 which is constantly enjoying the best business conditions of any city in the country today.

Dealers of Country Show Much Interest In Goodrich Service

Dealers all over the country are much interested in the new Goodrich News Service. The general idea of this service is to put out a weekly publication which will show the latest in motor news, and also a list of the latest in motor news. It is a really, truly, successful plan, with which, horns, and eyes, fragrance, in token of his chief characteristics, the release of sweet-smelling savors, he has been denominated "Jelly," although he is not that kind of a jelly. It has been suggested that "Sweet Whimsy" would be an appropriate name, as he could be so easily mixed with flowers. He is also known as "Sweet Whimsy" because of his peculiar initial appearance at the motor show. Division Which Wins Big Business Contest Entertains the Goat

Leading the districts of the Goodrich, Tire and Rubber company in amount of business for the month, carries with it the honor of entertaining the Goodrich goat. To receive him as a prize is the ambition of each district manager.

The Goodrich goat is neither fiction nor allegorical figure. About Anti-Skids

How They Differ. We Spend $1,000,000 This Year to Make Goodyear All-Weather Treads Double Thick

Some anti-skids are simply regular treads made rough. The Goodyear All-Weather is an extra tread vulcanized on to the regular. It will cost us this year about $1,000,000 to give this double thickness on our output of All-Weathers.

This means more than extra wear. It means deep grips which remain efficient after thousands of miles of service.

So All Through Every detail of Goodyear Fortified Tires shows advantages like this. The extras we give you outside of the tread will cost us this year $1,635,000. This year's improvements over last year will alone cost us $500,000. All that for features exclusive to Goodyears, or which few others use.

Impossible Claims Tires which lack these extras claim to equal Goodyears. That is, of course, ridiculous. Tires with small output claim to match Goodyear values. That is impossible.

Accept the users' verdict. Goodyears lead in sales and prestige after millions have been tested. They have held top place for years. And our increase this year in new users is breaking every Goodyear record.

Your friends or we will sometime win you to Goodyear tires. You can't always resist these advantages. They mean too much to you. Any dealer will supply you.

Any man who measures and compares anti-skids is bound to choose Goodyear All-Weathers.

CHANDLER SIX $1295

A Plain Talk About Automobile Values

PEOPLE are asking their friends a lot of questions about the relative values of the best known automobiles.

Interest centers chiefly, of course, in the light-weight sixes, because the light-weight six is the most popular type of car, and much of the interest centers in the Chandler.

The Chandler cannot supply the entire demand for light-weight sixes, but for thorough, careful purchasers who want to be very sure of relative values, there are some interesting facts well worth considering.

Such a purchaser will not forget that the Chandler was the first high-grade six selling for less than $2000 and weighing less than 3000 pounds. He will not forget that the Chandler pioneered the way for light-six domination and established the Light-Six Era. That was three years ago. The price was $1785.

The popularity of the Chandler Idea has grown by leaps and bounds ever since.

Other light-sixes quickly followed into the market but the Chandler has occupied a position of leadership all the way. A leadership in quality and price. And now Chandler is building Ten Thousand cars a year and still unable to fill the Chandler demand.

A vital element in the history of Chandler success—and the secret of Chandler high quality and low price this year—is the fact that essentially the Chandler car of this season is the Chandler car of the first season.

There has never been any reason for bringing out a radically new model. The original Chandler, in all its principles of design and construction, was final. From season to season we have refined it and beautified it and added the newest standard features of equipment. And this season we have brought out the really wonderful new seven-passenger body. But, from the mechanical standpoint, the car is practically unchanged. That marvelous Chandler motor—the foundation of Chandler supremacy—has remained untouched.

Standing pat on a model that was, and is, right, we have avoided costly experimentation that must attend the production of new models. We have lowered our overhead to a minimum. We have been enabled to make sensational price reductions from season to season and still give better value.

The world's greatest manufacturer of low-priced cars has built his tremendous success on this policy, and the public knows—you know—it is the policy that gives the purchaser "most for his money."

That is why no other car of like size and character has caught up with the Chandler price. From $1785 this price last year went down to $1595. And this year down to $1295. In practical effect, Chandler offers you a $1785 car for $1295. And we ask you to try to match its value in any other car.

Look them over, all well-known makes. Study them carefully. Compare them part by part with the Chandler. Compare them with the Chandler for comfort and power and snap and finish and style. Then you will realize how much it means to you as a purchaser that the Chandler was right in the first place and that the Chandler manufacturing policy has been a policy of devotion to this one model.

The Truth about the Underworld - BY ONE WHO HAS LEFT IT

How a Trained Crook Planned His Work and Methods Police Pursued to Persuade Public That Criminals Are Always Apprehended

By J. A. PETERS.

ONE afternoon last week on M— street I met J., an ex-convict who is out on parole. I asked him how things were with him. "Things are rotten. I have to work to make good my parole and keep out of trouble, but it is tough going. The best work I can get is a dinner waiter's job, where I make a dollar a day, six days a week," he said.

"Well," I advised, "stick at it, I will see that the underworld and you will win out."
"You can bet I'll keep out of the underworld. I am only getting $6 a week now, but it's all mine. None of it buys wine for thirty saloon-keepers. None goes to a bum politician. None of it helps pay for some crooked lawyer's automobile and no more of my money will be slipped into the fist of a guardian of the peace. No—I've done that for years and I'm tired taking chances for them all."

Crime as Business Calling.

From this it would seem that the underworld is not wholly composed of outlawed members of society.

This man was sent to prison for picking pockets. He was a "dip," or as they are now generally called, a "cannon." With him reform is a business proposition involving absolutely no remorse for having committed crime. He has served three prison terms of one year each, and the last one of these was the result of pleading guilty to a larceny charge of which he was entirely innocent.

A street car passenger was robbed, reported the theft to the police and gave a description of a man he had seen standing near him on the car before he discovered his loss. J. was arrested on suspicion, "stood up" for identification, and on the complainant picking him out he was booked and indicted. Because of his previous record J. was certain he would be convicted. He had no "fall money" for bail or defense, so to save time he pleaded guilty.

Will Not Fight False Charge.

Like cases are common, and I know several men now serving time for crimes with which they have no other connection than bearing a likeness to the general description of the real or fancied culprit given by the complaining witness, plus a criminal record.

The two principal reasons for this condition are that for minor offenses, such as pocket picking, shoplifting, etc., where the penalties are comparatively short, termed, the accused knows that, in a trial, bad character testimony will overbalance any evidence in his favor unless an unimpeachable alibi is furnished for him and because of the unreliability of identifications.

A few years ago I was told that a salesman in a certain retail store situated on a busy street in the loop was wearing a valuable solitaire diamond ring and that he wanted to sell it. My informant was X., a trusted "finder" (one who locates valuable items or money on a commission basis for holdup men or burglars). I instructed X.

to ascertain the name of a well-to-do customer of that store. He found that a Mr. Q. answered my purpose.

One bright, sunny morning I took Tom, a fellow worker, with me, after explaining to him my plan for getting the diamond, and posted him on the curbstone facing the one entrance to the store. Tom was to wait there and as soon as he saw me come out prepare to enter the store and in an apparently accidental manner delay any pursuit by bumping into the hatless salesman who probably would come after me on the run.

These preparations completed, I entered the store and, while making a trifling purchase, asked the salesman, who was alone at that hour, if Mr. Q. had been in yet. He replied that Mr. Q. seldom came there in the forenoon. "Well, he ought to be here very soon," I said. "He made an appointment to meet me here at 11 this morning. So I'll wait, if you don't mind."

Thief Plays Role Well.

Wait I did, walking up and down in front of the showcases, talking to the clerk of the firmness of the weather, of the busy crowds that continually passed the door. I was wearing a brand new suit of a rather unusual shade of light brown with a greenish sheen to it, and he remarked it, asking if that were not the new fashionable color men were affecting that summer.

After fifteen minutes, appearing to grow impatient, I asked the clerk if he knew Mr. Q. well. "You see," said I, "I am a counter man in a pawnshop. Mr. Q. comes in our place occasionally and, unknown to my boss, I do a bit of business, buying gems on my own hook. Mr. Q. says he has a bargain for me, some diamonds belonging to a lady he knows, and will meet me here this morning to show me them for appraisal. I wish he would hurry," I added.

"Is that so?" said my victim, slipping the diamond ring off his finger and offering it across the counter for my inspection. "What do you think I paid for this four-carat stone?" In silence, with no undue haste, I took the ring, looked at it casually at first, and then in pantomime I indicated that the light indoors was poor as I walked from the counter toward the door.

Crook Summons Police.

At the door I stepped out, turned quickly and was soon making my way among the crowd with moderate speed. My confederate on the sidewalk started for the entrance as I came out, but he had nothing to do, for it was a full minute before the clerk inside had any suspicion of wrong. My friend Tom obliged him by calling a policeman before starting to rejoin me and in a half hour the detectives were there

A street car passenger was robbed. The police were given a description. J. was arrested on suspicion, "stood up" for identification and picked out. He had no "fall money," pleaded guilty, and was sent to prison.

Can Society Reclaim Crooks?

THE author of the article on this page was not a criminal of the "dormat" class. He was a thief who went after big game, game that required sagacity and brains to trap. Others might steal clothes from the line of the busy housewife or dormat from the doors of the sleeping, but this man took pride in the fact that no guard of society was impregnable to his attack.

J. A. Peters, as he is known, feared no man. But he came to learn that he could not risk death until sustained by alcohol. He came to learn that the police were ready to meet him at his own game of deceit. He came to learn what it meant to be sent away to do "a stretch" behind the prison bars of the famous Sing Sing prison.

He is now an honest citizen. He is honest, not because society came to him and pleaded that it feared him, but because society said, "Play with fire and we will show you fire burns; play the 'square game' and we will show you it pays to be honest."

Mr. Peters is now in a "square game." He believes alcohol is responsible for the majority of crimes. He knows he is getting more out of life today than he ever hoped was possible, and he is unafraid to tell of his own life if, in some small way, he can influence the young men of today to beware the "easy money."

As the detectives left him they told him not to worry, that the thief would soon be caught and his diamond restored to him. Late that same day a man was arrested on suspicion and our salesman picked him out of a line of several men at a "stand up" in the police station as the man who had stolen his property that morning.

Beyond the fact that in general build the suspect resembled me there was absolutely no similarity between him and myself—one was of light complexion, the other dark. It does not necessarily follow that the complainant was stupid or dull witted—quite the contrary could be the case and still without evil intent might be identifying the wrong man, totally unlike the right one. It is the business of the police to get convictions and they become adept in insinuating identifications. Like most people in Christendom who earn their own sup-

Making Identification Sure.

The most popular and generally effective method is to say to the victim of a robbery in a tone conveying mutual congratulation: "We have your man. He is an old-timer at this line of graft. Here is his picture, taken some years ago, and the while affording a short glimpse of a police department photo of more or less recent date. From that moment the complainant's mind is kept occupied by rapid-fire talk interspersed with studied references to the suspect and his characteristics until by the time he confronts a line of men in which the arrested one is standing (trying hard to look innocent and by the same token achieving the reverse) he has forgotten his original memory of the appearance of the man who robbed him and picks out the man the officers have intended him to identify. Once committing himself in such a choice, he will invariably swear on a stack of Bibles to the infallibility of the selection.

How Police "Shake Down."

In the affair of the diamond above mentioned, the accused was two months in jail awaiting trial and finally discharged for lack of evidence.

The following procedure is one of the many ways dishonest detectives "shake down" ex-convicts or known criminals with impunity. Bill Sherlock, a crooked sleuth, learns from a stool-pigeon that Jerry Strongarm is down at Luke's place, a saloon run by a political power, with a roll of bills in his possession. Sherlock goes and gets Jerry, and the following dialogue ensues: "Hello, Jerry. How's tricks?" "No good, Bill, but I can't stop for socialities. I have to take you down to the front office. There's a rap out for you for something that came off the other day."

Jerry's heart drops to his boots, but his hand slips to his pocket and fingers the bills there. Violent of the "stand-up"—possible mistake identification—boom large to Jerry. Before Bill Sherlock gives Jerry a parting injunction, "Now keep under cover for awhile and don't let on I saw you," money changes hands.

At 8 o'clock on the morning of Nov. 15, 1908, burglars entered the home of James Prunty at Racine avenue and West Thirtieth street. His daughter, awakened by murder. The principal witnesses against these men were the widow and daughter of Prunty. Both of these ladies identified the men at the trial as the murderers who invaded their home, although the only light in the house at the time was a small lamp in the kitchen. But it was upon this identification that they were convicted and sentenced to Joliet for life. Warren died, protesting his innocence to his last breath.

Travesties of Justice.

The value of identification as legal evidence is well known to be unreliable by the legal profession, the bench and more largely by the underworld—but in spite of this knowledge no comprehensive or effective attempt is made to remove this menace to the fair administration of the law. For this reason, among others, so many trials for minor and major offenses develop into travesties of justice that courts are now seldom referred to as courts of justice but rather as courts of law.

Charlie Blank, now doing his second "bit," says: "What chance have I got? When I finished my first stretch I got a job to help support Molly and my two kids. And I kept away from the mob. One night coming home from work I met Ed on a car and we were both picked and stood up for a job I had nothing to do with. I was picked out and handed a year. Molly don't know what to believe about it. She want to see the 'mark' who identified me and he said he would not swear a man's liberty was unless he was positive he was the right party. I could not prove where I was on a certain evening at 8 o'clock because I don't remember that night at all. Being picked out and my record settled my hash. Can you beat it?"

Dealers Fear Tobacco Famine

A SHORTAGE and an advance in the price of Turkish tobacco are predicted by James M. Dixon of the Tobacco Products Corporation, who has just returned from a tour of Asia Minor, Turkey and Greece.

"The available supply from the crop of 1914, now being dealt in," said Mr. Dixon, "is only half what it usually is, and of the high-grade tobacco, such as is used in America, there is only 60 per cent of the normal. The crop of 1915 is small in acreage, having been curtailed on account of the planting of grain, and cannot receive proper attention, so that there is no relief in sight. Furthermore, Egypt is entirely cut off from its ordinary source of supply, the Black Sea and Asia Minor, and has been compelled to buy in Greece and Macedonia this year, thus increasing competition."

"Owing to the war it is difficult to make shipments even when purchases are made. Unless the war ends soon or unless the Dardanelles are taken by the allies the situation in the tobacco leaf market will be extremely interesting before long. Turkish tobacco, so called, is that raised in Macedonia and adjacent places, most of which are now parts of Greece. Tobacco used in connection with Macedonia Greek are raised on the southern shore of the Black Sea in Asia Minor from Samson east, and on the north shore of that sea. In Russia, from Sebastopol east. Egypt gets three-fourths of its supply normally from the Black Sea, and owing to the war not a pound can be had from that section, although the 1914 crop was ample."

Jerry's hand slips in his pocket and fingers the bills there.

the intruders, screamed and was shot. James Prunty was killed by a bullet and his son died in a few days from injuries sustained in fighting the burglar, who escaped.

A couple of hours later three men, McNally, Warren and Kurth, were arrested on a public street and charged with the

A New Eight-Cylinder Cadillac

Type 53

THE new Eight-Cylinder Cadillac is ushered in on the heels of the most impressive success ever recorded in the motor car industry.

It follows a car which has entrenched itself in a positive position of pre-eminence. The whole country now knows that the number of cars which are even candidates for comparison with the Cadillac, has been narrowed down until they can be counted on the fingers of one hand.

The country no longer asks if the Cadillac is as fine a car as some other; but inquires, instead, what other cars compare with the Cadillac, and how. If public opinion could be translated into a few simple words, it would doubtless result in the statement that there never has been a motor car equal to the Cadillac Eight, either in performance or in stability.

It is this kind of a car—this one example of V-type efficiency, demonstrated by a year's experience—which the new Cadillac succeeds.

It succeeds a car which many thousands of people believe to have been the best car which the world had yet produced.

The new Cadillac is the fruit of experience, acquired in the building of 13,000 V-type Eights, and of their service in the hands of 13,000 users.

We believe that in this new car the V-type engine is developed to a point of excellence which even the most conscientious effort to equal, cannot reach in many and many a day.

A year ago the Cadillac Company was blazing new paths of progress. It pioneered new principles and new processes, pushing them to a point of certainty before its first V-type engine was marketed.

Nothing can take the place of that hard and painstaking period of invention, selection, rejection, adjustment and adaptation.

As a result, there is but one V-type standard based on extended experience; that is the Cadillac standard.

There is but one V-type criterion based on a demonstrated certainty; that is the Cadillac criterion.

It is obvious, therefore, that the first Cadillac Eight is the source from which V-type development must borrow its inspiration.

And in that fact lies an exceedingly important consideration. In the pioneering process to which we have referred, the problems solved were peculiar to Cadillac construction.

They referred to that intimate relation between all the parts and all the processes of manufacture which make for a harmonious whole.

The Cadillac transmission and the Cadillac clutch—to cite only two of a number of features—were developed with direct reference to the requirements of the Cadillac V-type engine and the Cadillac car.

Their adoption by other makers may or may not be successful. It is not the V-type engine, merely as a type, which has proven such a triumphant success, but the Cadillac Eight-Cylinder V-type engine, built into a Cadillac chassis according to Cadillac ideals—and as Cadillac artisans know how to build it.

That is what we meant when we said that nothing can take the place of Cadillac experience in building 13,000 cars.

That is why we do not believe that the equal of this new Cadillac Eight will exist for many a long day.

The first Cadillac Eight furnishes for those who would emulate its excellence the one certain source of V-type information based on extended experience.

And the second Cadillac Eight, with that wonderful experience to build upon, naturally and logically marks an advance over the initial achievement.

There are no doubts or uncertainties about it. Its advantages and virtues are all clear and positive and plain. It has taken the one safe V-type criterion and carried it to the highest pitch. It is twelve months away—13,000 cars away—from the least or last element of experiment.

Its pre-eminence cannot consistently be questioned. In the face of the widespread adoption of the very principles which produced that pre-eminence, its leadership is not even a subject for discussion.

We believe that the new Eight-Cylinder Cadillac embodies the most practical combination of all "round efficiency."

No really desirable qualities are sacrificed in order that some less essential—which provide more spectacular, but empty "talking points"—may be exploited.

We believe that it possesses a maximum of the worth-while characteristics which the most exacting motorist wants in his car—power, speed, smoothness, flexibility, ease of operation, dependability and endurance.

We repeat—again—we do not believe the equal of this new Cadillac exists. And we do not believe that it can or will exist for a long time to come.

CADILLAC MOTOR CAR CO. DETROIT, MICH. THE ATLANTA CADILLAC COMPANY LINDSEY HOPKINS, President 228-230 Peachtree St. Atlanta, Ga.

CADILLAC OFFERS NEW EIGHT-CYLINDER AUTO

No Radical Changes in Essentials of the First Year's Production.

Following a year of marked success with the type 51, its first eight-cylinder car, the Cadillac Motor Car Company announces the second of the eight-cylinder series, to be known as type 53, without radical changes in mechanical design or construction.

The second Cadillac Eight is, in all practical respects, a continuation of the car, and the Cadillac Company has again achieved the unusual in the motor car industry, most invariably the automobile manufacturer discovers, during the first year of experience with a type of car new to him, that there is room for further improvements in the second year's production.

The opposite is true of the Cadillac and its eight-cylinder car. The company regards the manufacturer's nearness of a type of car entirely new to the American industry.

The eight-cylinder car met with instant and continued success. When the manufacturing year closed a few weeks ago, 13,000 of the new type had been put into use. No shortcoming had been detected throughout the year. No reason for marked change in mechanical construction was made manifest by continuous everyday use of the car. It was all that had been expected of it, and more.

Changes that have been made affect principally the accessibility of the engine and the appearance of the car. The engine remains, of course, the 36-horsepower eight-cylinder V-type which Cadillac made familiar last year. The electric motor and carburetor are so mounted with relation to the engine as to afford easy accessibility to the valves and control only of the engine and its accessories.

The body is a new design, with higher side lines, a new cowl, new hood and a higher radiator with rounded corners, all of which alterations add to the distinction of the new car.

Inside the body, the driver finds the clutch and brake pedals two inches farther forward, with the dash set forward a corresponding distance, and the steering wheel in the same position as the steering wheel. The auxiliary seats in the rear of the car have been improved in design.

The new Cadillac is the fruit of experience, as evidenced in the building of 13,000 V-type Eights, and the service in the hands of 13,000 users, says the Cadillac company in its statement regarding the new car.

It believes that in this new car the V-type engine is developed to a point of excellence which even the most conscientious effort to equal cannot reach in many and many a day.

It believes that the new eight-cylinder Cadillac embodies the most practical combination of all-round efficiency. No really desirable qualities are sacrificed in order that some less essential—which provide more spectacular, but empty "talking points"—may be exploited.

GEORGIA GROWERS REAP MILLIONS FOR PEACHES

June and July Crops Bring $2,000,000 for Total of 4,005 Cars.

The peach growers of Georgia have received over two million dollars for the peaches marketed by them during June and July.

The total shipment of Georgia peaches through July 31, has been 4,005 carloads. Of this number seventy-five per cent, or over 3,000 cars, have been marketed through the Georgia Fruit exchange.

Due to the care exercised by the exchange in distributing these peaches throughout the market, there has been an absence of congestion. The result is that the prices for peaches secured by the members of the exchange have proven most satisfactory.

It is estimated that the entire crop will be marketed by August 10, and it is expected that between 500 and 600 carloads of Elberta peaches will be shipped during the next two weeks.

An instance of the effect of individual shipments to the market is evidenced by the fact that 124 carloads of peaches arrived in New York city on Monday morning, July 26, whereas the market for the same peaches in that market is from 50 to 52 carloads.

When the Georgia Fruit exchange withdrew practically all of its shipments from that market and scattered them throughout the small markets of the country, with the result that the shipments made by the exchange netted the exchange grower from 20 to 25 per cent more per car than the net received by the grower.

The reason to close for the Georgia Fruit exchange is being considered by the members of the exchange on the Georgia Fruit exchange in which he has handled the very large crop of peaches this year.

Adamsons Gather In Atlanta August 6 For Annual Reunion

The annual reunion of the Adamson family, one of the largest and most widely connected in Georgia, will take place in Atlanta at Grant park August 6.

Relative of the Georgia Adamsons will come to the reunion from all parts of the country and will all take part in a big picnic dinner, which will be held at the Adamson home in Clayton.

The members of the Adamson family are descendants of Greenberry Adamson, who came to Georgia in 1783 from Maryland, in 1783 to Wilkes county, Georgia, where he married Sarah Coates.

In 1822 the Adamsons moved to Henry county, which is now the site of Clayton.

Their descendants are to be found at the present time in Clayton, Henry, Bibb, Fulton, Floyd and Montgomery counties, as well as many other counties.

Among the members of the Adamson family are Congressman W. C. Adamson of Carrollton, Ga.; G. R. Adamson of Bremen, Ga.; A. F. Adamson of College Park, Ga.; A. F. Adamson of Clayton county; J. E. Adamson of Tilden Adamson, of New York; Emory Adamson of Rome, Ga.; J. L. Adamson and Courtney Harper, of Atlanta.

Members of the family state that a larger attendance is expected at this year's reunion than has been at any of the previous ones.

$4,000,000 DECREASE IN GROSS EARNINGS OF SEABOARD LINE

Bavannah, Ga., July 31.—A prediction that the decrease in gross earnings of the Seaboard Air Line railway during the present year will be $4,000,000 was made today by President W. H. Harahan.

Harahan, who addressed a gathering here of 400 employees of the system from all divisions, who came here this morning on special train for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1915, said that Harahan, the results of the year decreased 15 1/2 per cent.

The earnings of the road for the year amounted to $21,280,812.

Harahan, who addressed the employees for co-operation with the Seaboard officials to help them get safely through the business crisis, which he said exists, said that the "keystone of the arch of success," he said, "and there is no lack of harmony in this railroad."

All prominent officials of the Seaboard attended the meeting this morning. The city's largest gathering of employees was held at the Seaboard hotel, where they were the guests of the company at a banquet in one of the open pavilions.

Students of Domestic Science Of the Girls' High School Will Handle State Products Dinner

Announcement has just been made from the headquarters of the Georgia Chamber of Commerce, that at the suggestion of the Atlanta City Federation of Women's clubs, of which Mrs. Samuel Lampkin is president, the domestic science department of the Girls' High school will this year have charge of the Georgia Products day dinner, to be held in Atlanta on November 18, as one of the several hundred dinners held each year throughout Georgia under the auspices of the chamber for the purpose of increasing the demand for and appreciation of Georgia-grown and Georgia-made products of all kinds.

The plans for the decoration of the Auditorium, which are in the hands of the girls of the domestic science department of the High school, are far beyond any decoration ever before attempted in this building.

The girls will be dressed in Georgia home-made dresses, especially made for the occasion, and will carry out the Georgia products day dinner without the assistance of any kind of outside or professional sources.

The bill of fare will consist of Georgia products only, and even the purchase of the Georgia products will be made by the girls.

chasing of these products will be exclusively in the hands of the young folks who will thus be learning both how to shop and how to call for and secure Georgia products. As they are to be trained in the habits of buying Georgia products by Georgia people.

This will be the first time in the history of women's work in Georgia that there has been a practical demonstration of the teaching of the domestic science departments of Georgia schools attempted on such an elaborate scale. It will therefore be an epochal day in the history of domestic science work in Georgia.

It has been agreed to lay one thousand plates and to sell only one thousand tickets. In view of the fact that about fifteen hundred people attended the Georgia Products day dinner last year on just a few days notice that it will be a scramble for the tickets to the dinner this year. In view of the announcement that only one thousand will be sold.

The general direction of the dinner in all its details will be under the supervision of the principal of the Girls' High school, Miss Jessie Muse.

Who Will Prepare Dinner? The granting to the domestic department of the High school of the privilege of giving the dinner this year in Atlanta, which has usually been the province of the Georgia Chamber of Commerce, was a new avenue of suggestion to the state at large in the handling of these annual affairs. The first year held they were gotten up almost exclusively by the commercial bodies of the state. Last year about half of the dinners were in charge of the women of the state.

The announcement as to the Atlanta dinner this year opens the way to a still greater rivalry in each community. A contest for women, representing the Georgia Products day dinner this year. In a recent address before the Georgia Chamber of Commerce will issue a bulletin on the Georgia Products day dinner for 1915. It will contain a complete list of all the prizes to be offered and as to how the competition will be handled.

The Georgia Products day dinner idea was born as a result of the organization of the Georgia Chamber of Commerce and their active in the market of increased home consumption of home products, as well as increased production of home products. The dinner the first year made a great hit and last year were still more effective in their results. This year it is anticipated that 75 per cent of the towns of the state will have Georgia Products day dinners.

NEW SYSTEM DEvised FOR THE CARE OF THE MANY THOUSANDS OF ORPHANS THROUGHOUT UNCLE SAM'S DOMAIN

Department of Child Helping of the Russell Sage Foundation, After Exhaustive Examination, Announces Reasons Why Orphanages of the Old Fashioned Type Should Be Closed.

SHALL Lovey Mary live with hundreds of her kind, a carefully graded nonentity, or shall she, as Orphan Annie did, "come to our home to stay?" You remember Lovey Mary of Mrs. Rice's novel, her of the clean flannel dress, with white china buttons down the back and the round straw hat bought at wholesale?

Orphan's homes and is preparing to get rid of more; Missouri is disposing of many old institutions; in the State of New York the battle between the two systems has just begun. In this latter commonwealth the passing of the so-called Widows' Pension act will probably result in preventing any further expansion of existing institutions and will greatly lessen the number of inmates in them, for it provides means by which poor mothers may be aided in keeping their children at their own hearths. Several of the oldest orphan asylums are nearing it and are preparing to go out of business.

One of the chief factors in the new policy in the

of the sabbath, which might get us all if we did not watch out. How is it that James Whitcomb Riley has described her new life? The verse runs this way:—

"Little Orphan Annie's come to our house to stay,
An' 'twas the cups and saucers, an' brush the crumbs away.

An' abo the chickens off the porch, and dust the hearth, an' sweep,
An' make the fire, an' bake the bread, an' earn her board and keep."

And speaking of orphans we have known, there comes the vision of one, a waif sent from New York City by the Children's Aid Society many years ago, once a ragged boy of the Bowery, who became the Governor of Alaska.

Two systems of caring for the orphan child have long been in vogue in the United States. One is that of the prim and orderly institution; the other, the so-called placing out method. They have been rivals, more or less, but now the issue between them is strongly defined; for there are many delvers into social lore who say that something is going to get the orphan asylum if it does not watch out.

Between the two is the orphan asylum of the new spirit, destined to survive in all elements which make for the preparation for real life and the building up of self-reliance and courage in those that come under its roof.

All over the country orphan asylums of the old type are being closed. Massachusetts has emptied the wards of eighteen of them in the last ten years; Indiana since 1893 has abandoned twenty county

United States with regard to the orphan asylums is the Department of Child Helping of the Russell Sage Foundation, which has made an exhaustive examination of this whole question and has given advice which has ended some asylums and prevented the building of others.

The case for the orphan asylum of the old school and the brief against it were both ably presented not long ago by the director of the department, Dr. Hastings E. Hart.

"The application of the spiritual principle," said he, "has produced remarkable results for dependent children. For generations the orphan asylum plan of dealing with the dependent child was the prevailing method in the United States. When a child was left homeless by the death or default of his natural protectors it was thought that a substitute should be provided for the natural home, and the idea prevailed that the substitute could be made better than the original article. Thus grew up the orphan asylum system of bringing up homeless children in institutions from infancy to young manhood and womanhood.

"A good argument can be made in favor of the orphan asylum system. It is said that in the ordinary home of poverty it is impossible for the child to have a fair chance. The home is unsanitary; the food is insufficient; the parents are incompetent and in many cases vicious and cruel.

"In a well managed institution there can be maintained perfect sanitary conditions, good ventilation, suitable food, nutritious clothing and wholesome in-

Elizabeth in a Real Home.

Elizabeth—Before and After Placement.

DORA.

Dora was a black-eyed, high spirited, active little girl of eight years, who, with her eight brothers and sisters, had to be taken away from her home because of bad conditions there. All the children came under the supervision of the State Charities Aid Association and were placed in a home. Dora went to live with Mr. and Mrs. D., whose home had been thoroughly investigated. Mr. D. was an engineer. He and his wife were very fond of children and anxious to take a child. They owned their own home of seven well furnished rooms, had money in the bank and were thoroughly respected in the community. In this home Dora developed into a bright, attractive, active child. Her high spirit would undoubtedly either have been crushed in an institution or if this spirit had developed without direction or control Dora would have had many difficulties.

children are trained for adoption or relegating them to the limbo of things that were.

It is this idea which has resulted in the mothers' pensions acts being passed in various States, based on a principle which commands the assent of all who are champions of childhood. The placing out of children as a result of this new spirit is, therefore, now being carried out on a more extensive scale than ever before. The Children's Aid Society of New York City and similar organizations in the large cities of the United States have done much. This society spends a half million dollars a year for that purpose; Philadelphia gives $200,000, and in Illinois, where the work of placing out is in its infancy, $100,000 is so expended.

First of all this bureau investigates thoroughly and with deliberation the homes where it is considering sending the dependent children under its care. It considers the position of the family in the community, the number of persons in it, their age, occupation, character. It examines into the matter of income. The agent ascertains if the proposed foster parents are really fond of children, if they are self-controlled, reliable, efficient. Far in advance of anything else the agents seek homes where may be found good food, well ventilated and clean rooms and the best influences. To realize such conditions and at the same time to keep away from the cut and dried discipline and the all too orderly ways of the asylums is no easy task, and yet, as results show, it has been accomplished. The child has at the start of its new life the essential things required for a decent home, for it would be impossible for any to respond to an environment which did not give at least a fair chance in life.

When this is done comes the supervision of the children in the new homes. The agent visits the child at intervals, not at regular but preferably at irregular ones. The representative of the society is likely to drop in suddenly and find the child at play or in school. It is one of the rules for inspection that the boy or girl must be asked how he is getting along in the new home at some time when the agent and parent are by themselves. This is done tactfully. Some well defined excuse is always made for such a conference, such as a walk or a ride. The progress of the child is carefully watched both at school and in the church and in all its relations to society. If it be found that there are temperamental reasons why the youngsters cannot get along in the new environment a change is made. If medical attention is required the expert arranges for it, especially in communities where expert medical or surgical aid may be readily available.

The transplantation of the ward to its new home is only successful when both it and the family are happy. This supervision is kept up until the child is eighteen years of age or is legally adopted.

The records of the bureau are filled with cases which attest the success of this home placing method, and many children have grown up and have become a credit to society in every way.

The wards of the bureau can only be mentioned by their first names. There is David, for instance, who three years ago was one of a hundred boys in an orphan asylum. He is now studying in one of the best high schools in New York City and preparing to become a physician. His original home was broken up because his mother became insane and his father was shiftless and indifferent. There is Richard, a hale young farmer up the State, now self-supporting, who not long ago was a puny orphan asylum child.

Among the cases to that of Dora, a high spirited, active child, who may be heard eight brothers and sisters, was taken from her parents because the conditions were intolerably bad. She was one of those whose impetuous nature and original ideas might have been crushed in a typical orphan asylum. Her new home is with Mr. and Mrs. D., who own their own house, have money in the bank and are highly respected in the community. Dora is the light of that abode.

And there is Elizabeth, once a timorous child of an old asylum, and now filled with the joy of living. And one of the exhibits of the bureau are two photographs, one representing Alice in the prosaic garb of the institution, the other a child living the free life of the country among the trees and flowers. In a farm home not far from New York City are twin romping in the daisies of the field, who not long since were neglected and forlorn in an east side tenement, from which they were temporarily taken to an asylum before adoption.

It is work like this which makes the task of helping the poor and needy that cluster all about, to paraphrase the words of the Hooper poet, a labor not only of love but of sane and well ordered efficiency.

Baby Alice, of the Infant Asylum.

In Her New Home, Three Years Later.

finances. If necessary, the child's food can be prescribed by a physician and weighed out for him at each meal. He is constantly under the influence of selected caretakers. He never plays truant; he never misses the evening study hour; he never runs with the gang. His religious, moral, intellectual and vocational instruction can be adapted to his needs with precision. In these circumstances it is asked, "How can a good institution fail to produce a better output than the home of ignorance, vice or intemperance?"

"The answer is, 'Institutionalism.' Institution life is contrary to child nature. It is artificial and unnatural. The cooking is done by steam; the washing is done by steam; the house is heated by steam; the bell rings for the child to get up in the morning, for him to say his prayers, for him to go to meals and back from meals, to go to church and back from school—all day long to the bell!

"What does that mean? It means that some one else is planning his life for him—that some one else is doing his thinking for him. The graduate of the orphan asylum lacks initiative. He does not know how to spend or to save his money. He has no knowledge of human life or human nature, and when the time comes, as it must come, for him to take his place in society he is at a disadvantage.

"The best orphan asylums have long recognized this evil and have sought to overcome it. Such institutions as the Chicago Orphan Asylum, the Rose Orphan Asylum, at Terra Haute, Ind.; the Protestant Orphan Asylum, at Cleveland; the Rochester Orphan Asylum, the New York Orphanage, at Hastings-on-Hudson, N. Y., and the Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Society, at Passaicville, N. Y., are seeking to adapt their work to the personal needs and development of their pupils. They reproduce as far as possible the conditions of family life. They teach the children the use of money. They keep them in touch with their friends out in the world. They give them efficient training in the school of letters and a vocational society, and they watch over their children with fostering care after they leave the institution.

A Blind Man Lover of Birds

ALTHOUGH living in a world of darkness, Mr. John T. Timmons, of Cadis, Ohio, spends his days in varied activities. Moreover, an ardent lover of nature, he enjoys the melodies of birds and the fragrance of flowers with peculiar intensity.

His snug little home is called Bird Lawn, and under the drooping eaves at the rear the blind man sits for hours or walks about the adjoining fields listening to the songs of the birds that he has labored so long to attract to his place. So many are there that he says often there are not ten seconds in an hour when he does not hear the notes of a bird. Certainly the little feathered creatures would be ungrateful if they did not pour out their best songs for the benefit of their friend, who can never see them, but who constantly listens for their tuneful lays. With no help from any one, and with rather crude tools, Mr. Timmons has built houses of varying styles and sizes for the accommodation of the purple martin, bluebird, wren and other insect destroying birds, and in the season they are densely populated.

In addition to the bird houses about his place Mr. Timmons has constructed a curious device which he calls his air motor. It has almost a hundred wind wheels of differing sizes and shapes, which go with terrific speed in an ordinary breeze or gale. From whichever direction the wind comes the wheels are in motion. Mr. Timmons says that he has been told that he had wheels in his head, so he removed them and set them up where he could hear them, if he could not see them.

"I build the bird houses for the same reason," he explained. "I love to hear their happy songs, and I am the happier for doing something to take care of the neglected little feathered things. I can get more pleasure out of an hour spent in the field or thicket than I can find in an evening at the theater or a moving picture show."

Next to birds Mr. Timmons is most deeply interested in flowers. Without plans he constructed a conservatory in which he and his wife spend much of their time working among the flowers. Through his delicate sense of touch Mr. Timmons can distinguish the different plants and flowers, and he is so well informed about them that he is regarded as an authority on flower culture and writes on the subject for a number of periodicals.

Mr. Timmons uses a typewriter, and his wife, who reads and corrects his manuscripts, says that he makes very few mistakes. Asked how he could describe so accurately in his writings things he had never seen, Mr. Timmons replied:—

"Right is not the only means of conveying correct impressions to the brain. I can see some things more perfectly through other senses than I could distinguish if I had eyesight. I see through my fingers, my ears, my sense of taste and smell and in many other ways that I cannot explain. My imagination is not so flimsy as might be guessed. I can look into darkness and behold objects and results as true as those you can see near you. I cannot see a star, yet I know they are there, millions of miles out in space, and I can see their purpose and usefulness in the great scheme of the Almighty."

Only Nine Days Now Left; Then Legislature Quits

With Forty Working Days Gone, Not a Single Measure of Broad, General Importance Has Passed.

STATE ROAD LEGISLATION OF SUPREME IMPORTANCE

If Action Is Not Taken, Governor May Call Special Session—Many Bills Will Go Over.

Without a single bill of broad general importance having yet been passed, the general assembly will Monday enter upon the last nine legislative days of its present fifty-day session.

In that ten days there are any number of important bills which will demand the attention of the assembly.

State Road Legislation.

Of prime importance, of course, are

All measures of which there are several sessions upon the Western and Atlantic railroad. These matters are regarded of so great importance that it is believed that unless these measures are disposed of before time of adjournment Governor Harris will very likely call an extra session.

It is expected that there will be no great amount of time left for the consideration of other measures.

Should the committee report any prohibition measure favorably the result is expected to be a fight to get it before the house.

That the prohibitionists will make a tremendous effort to get their measure before the house—Western and Atlantic of so Western and Atlantic seems apparent.

It is expected that there will be no great amount of time left for the consideration of other measures.

Important measures on the schedule ahead of prohibition. It is not expected that the Western and Atlantic matter will be disposed of before it is time for the rules committee to take charge.

The assembly will probably begin holding afternoon sessions this week in order to make up as much time as possible.

Besides prohibition there are bills innumerable of great importance, some of which will have to go without ever having had a chance for a vote.

Among these bills will be the cotton warehouse bill, which seek to safeguard the cotton crop; the law bill revising the automobile license tax law which has been passed twice in contention during the last year; the Andrews bill providing for a state highway commission; the lead title bill; the state auditor bill and many others of equal importance.

State's Resources Strikingly Shown By Pageant at Georgia Summer School

GEORGIA PAGEANT AT GEORGIA SUMMER SCHOOL. Showing big stage where pageant was concluded with striking tableau.

Athens, Ga., July 31.—(Special.)—Pageantry, as a means of educational value, and a method of arousing community spirit, was given a great impetus this week when 500 of the teacher-students in attendance upon the University of Georgia summer school presented on the campus "A Threefold Georgia," in a pageant spectacle which was a great success, both as an exhibition and as an incident radiating possibilities and probabilities of similar pageants on the smaller scale in more than a hundred of the state during the next school year.

Georgia was represented in a three-fold manner—her agricultural products, her industrial and her educational interests. The long procession wound over the shaded walks of the campus in its beautiful improvisations—the principal characters leading, with the faculty of the university and the summer school following, then the congressional district groups, county groups, and other states than Georgia—with the groups carrying emblems of their respective states being picturesque and the costumes being picturesque and the groups carrying emblems of their respective states being picturesque and the costumes being picturesque.

Georgia, Miss Chapman in the red and white Georgia state colors, stood and the Spirit of East, dressed as a fairy. The pageant, presented the various products—the first and best being cotton, the Spirit of Scientific Farming, brought to the Spirit of East, which the group representing various products mingled with the cotton group—typifying diversified farming in a most significant manner. Each group was contained and bore the products presented—corn, wheat, oats, cotton, fruits and nuts. The "Fairy" came to Georgia and there was great rejoicing as the vast assemblage, numbering some ten thousand, spontaneously broke out with the familiar strains of "Glory, Glory to Old Georgia."

COMMITTEE OF 12 WILL INVESTIGATE SCHOOL FOR DEAF. A committee of twelve, nine from the house and three from the senate, is to investigate the conditions at the Georgia School for the Deaf at Cave Spring.

From the house: Mr. Clark of McIntosh, Mr. Griffin of Lowndes, Mr. Yeomans of Terrell, Mr. Jones of Coweta, Mr. Steele of DeKalb, Mr. Ayer of Bibb, Mr. Brown of Clarke, Mr. Roberts of Hall, Mr. Walker of Blackley, Mr. McFarland of the seventh district, Senator Holden of the nineteenth district, Senator Paul of the sixth district.

AEROPLANES COLLIDE; ONE AVIATOR KILLED. Charles, France, July 31.—During trial flight this morning an aeroplane, making a steep volplane, collided with another machine, approximately 200 feet above the flying field. Both aeroplanes fell. One aviator, a youth of 18, was burned to death, while the other was severely injured.

The resolution appointing the committee states that the investigation should be as to the feasibility of removing the school from Cave Spring to Macon. The committee will ask Monday that its duties be enlarged so that the charges made by Mr. Ayer can be investigated.

Keep at it. There is only the difference of one letter between rest and just.
