MAMMOTH CREDIT LOAN PROPOSED FOR BRITAIN

N. Y. Bankers Willing to Advance Enormous Sum to Pay British Bills Here on High-Class American Securities Held by Britons. Possible Britain May Buy Elsewhere.

New York, August 31.—The tremendous export trade of the United States, in which the country leads the world for the first time, was imperilled today by an alarming drop in foreign exchange rates.

In the face of this rapid depreciation, bankers here were wondering tonight how much longer Great Britain would pay the premium and buy goods in this market which she can get elsewhere, where the value of her money is greater. They were of the opinion that American factories and producers would feel the pinch of the much weaker dollar; that cancellation of orders for everything except what Great Britain could not get elsewhere, without powder, shot and shrapnel, aeroplanes and automobiles—would follow; that the big bills in the interior are already choking with gold. How long would it take to establish a period of enormous inflation.

THAT LITTLE WORD WITH THE BIG "D" COSTS WOMAN $7.75

Like the captain in "Indiana," who said: "I am a ruler of the king's navy, and I use a word with a great big D," a woman in a high-class American railway and industrial stock and bonds, this it is believed, will restore to the market nearly normal. Apparently Great Britain intends to adopt this one of the biggest international banking houses in New York, and to give their cable conference, to London bankers three weeks ago the danger which, if pursued, would have headed the markets for a month or more until permanent methods of exchange could be applied. The cable message, it was said, was "very wrong," the record told her. "Damn it, not a bit or a fear, from what I have heard that do say damn on certain occasions. It is a damn good word," she promptly said.

42 BODIES ARE TAKEN FROM INDIAN MOUND ON HARDEMAN'S FARM

Nacoochee, Ga., August 31.—(Special.) Representatives of the Smithsonian institution have unearthed 42 bodies from an Indian mound located on Dr. L. G. Hardeeman's place in Nacoochee valley. The bodies were found in a shallow trench, and there have been no evidences found to warrant that assumption. Many broken pieces of earthenware have been found. Only one whole earthen jar has been secured, and it was accidentally broken by a workman. Many brass buttons, a few pieces of copper pipe and other articles were also found.

GERMANY SOUGHT TO BIND BRITAIN

Neutrality Demanded of Britain in All Circumstances While Germany's Hands Would Be Free. Statement by Sir Edward Grey.

London, August 31.—The British foreign office tonight issued a lengthy statement concerning the negotiations between Great Britain and Germany in 1912, compiled from the official records in the foreign office. The statement reads: "An account of the 1912 Anglo-German negotiations was published in the semi-official Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung last month. This account was misleading and no doubt was intended to mislead. It made it appear that the British government had at that time rejected what would be regarded in many quarters as a reasonable offer of friendship from Germany. In these circumstances it may be well to publish a statement of facts compiled from the official records here.

What Germany Demanded.—Early in 1912 the German chancellor sketched to Lord Haldane (then British high commissioner) the following formula as one which would meet the views of the German government. "First—The high contracting parties assure each other mutually their desire to secure peace and friendship. "Second—They will not either of them in any manner make any unprovoked attack upon the other or in any manner become a party to any plan of naval or military enterprise, direct or indirect, with any other power, directed to such an end, and designed to be bound by any such agreement.

"Third—The duty of high contracting parties becomes established in war or in any other circumstances in which it cannot be said to be the aggression of one of the parties, and in which toward the power so entangled beyond neutrality and the high contracting parties are forced to go to war by obvious provocation of a third party, they bind themselves to enter into an exchange of views concerning their attitude on such a conflict.

"Fourth—The duty of neutrality which arises out of the preceding article has no application in so far as it may not be reconcilable with existing agreements which the high contracting parties have made.

"Fifth—The making of new agreements which it is impossible for either of the parties to observe actually toward the other beyond what is provided by the preceding limitation, is included in the formula.

"Sixth—The high contracting parties declare that they do not in their power to prevent differences and misunderstandings arising between them and other powers."

"These conditions, although in appearance fair, have been grossly unfair and one-sided in the treaty engagements which they were making. The result of articles 4 and 5 would have been that while Germany, as a result of the conflict, would have remained free to support her allies, this country would have been forbidden to raise a finger in her defense.

"Germany could arrange without difficulty the formal recognition of Austria and Russia, and Austria and Germany would support Austria, as in 1914, while as soon as Russia was attacked by her ally, France, would be bound to come to her assistance. In other words, Germany would have been absolutely helpless because she would always be bound to support England for the triple alliance as an excuse for departing from neutrality.

"As the treaty had no such purpose, however serious the provocation which was bound by her ally, with the exception of those of Japan and Portugal, while the making of fresh alliances was prohibited by article 16. In a word, as appeared in a guarantee of absolute neutrality on one side and not on the other, it was impossible for us to enter into a contract so obviously inequitable, and the formula, accordingly, was rejected.

"Sir Edward Grey, the British foreign minister. "What Britain Proposed.—Count Paul Wolff-Metternich (then German ambassador to Great Britain) upon this, proposed for counter proposals, which he stated, would be without prejudice and not binding unless we were satisfied with them. He stated that he would always be bound to support England for the triple alliance as an excuse for departing from neutrality.

"An admirable example of this is the present war, in which, in spite of the facts, Germany contends she has been forced upon her. Even the third member of the triple alliance, who had sources of information not open to us, did not share this view but regarded it as an aggressive war.

"Sir Edward Grey eventually proposed the following formula: "The two powers being mutually desirous of securing peace and friendship between them, England declares that she will neither make nor join in any unprovoked attack upon Germany. An aggression upon Germany forms no part of any treaty, understanding or combination to which England is a party, nor will she become a party to anything that has such an object."

"Sir Edward Grey when he handed the formula to Count Wolff-Metternich said that the use of the word neutrality would convey the impression that more was meant than was warranted by the facts. He suggested that the substance of what was required could be obtained by the more accurately expressed words 'will neither make nor join in any unprovoked attack.' Germany Wanted Absolute Pledge.

"Count Wolff-Metternich thereupon received instructions to make it quite clear that the chancellor could not commit to the emperor to give on the essential parts of the Novelle (the bill then pending for an increase of the German navy) only if we could conclude an agreement guaranteeing neutrally of a far-reaching character and leaving no doubt as to any interpretation. He admitted that the chancellor had announced to a guarantee of absolute neutrality, falling which the Novelle must provide.

"Count Wolff-Metternich stated that he was in charge of a bill in the Novelle, but said that it might be modified. It would be disappointing to the chancellor if we did not accept the formula we had suggested. Sir Edward Grey said that he could understand that there would be disappointment if his majesty's government were to state that the carrying out of the Novelle would be an insurmountable obstacle to better relations. His majesty's government did not say that and they expect that the formula which they had suggested might be considered in connection with the discussion of territorial arrangements, even if it did not prove effective in securing an increase in the naval expenditure.

"No Surrender for Germany.—Sir Edward Grey added that if some arrangements could be made between the two governments it would have a favorable, though indirect, effect upon the negotiations for the Novelle. It would have, moreover, a favorable effect in connection with the discussion of both countries.

"A few days afterward Count Wolff-Metternich communicated to Sir Edward Grey the substance of a letter from the chancellor in which the latter said that his majesty's government was from the German point of view, insufficiently satisfied with the formula suggested by his majesty's government, could not agree to the larger formula for which he had asked the Novelle must proceed on the lines on which it had been presented.

"The negotiations then came to an end with the understanding of a mutual reduction in the expenditure for armaments by the two countries."

"Big Brother" Affair Delights Big Crowd at Jewish Alliance

The first vaudeville entertainment given Tuesday evening at the Jewish Educational Alliance by the "Big Brother" association proved a marked success. Its purpose was to entertain the little brothers, their parents and friends, and a large and interested audience enjoyed the program, which fell little short of a professional rendition.

Albert Henkowitz, chairman of the entertainment committee, stated that the Novelle must be only one of many which will bring out the best dramatic talent of the younger classes. The program followed: Piano solo, Miss Dora Gerson; vocal, Isaac Janko, monologue, Fritz Freund; comedy sketch, Sol Gerson and Jesse Fresh; vocal solo, Miss S. Maner, accompanied by Mrs. H. M. Foster; monologue, Harry Feldman; duet, Miss L. Fresh and Sol Gerson, and a comic bit, Leon Sugarman and Miss Dora Blondheim, accompanied on the piano by Miss Rose Gross.

PRESIDENT WILSON'S VICTORY.
 London comment saying that if President Wilson has succeeded in inducing Germany to modify her plan of submarine warfare in accordance with the American demands he has won the greatest diplomatic victory in abundance justified. The true greatness of the victory, as the Morning News points out, consists in the fact that President Wilson has not only kept the United States out of war, but has managed it without the smallest sacrifice of right or principle. The Morning News says:
 "What the people are approving is not the country out of war, but he is doing without any sacrifice of principle, honor or dignity. Colonel Roosevelt, who is being generally criticized for attacking the administration, has been proved to be right. It has proven to be an effort to displace the president, not to effect. It has proven to be such a failure that Colonel Roosevelt has lost the confidence of the entire of his fellow citizens. A Colonel Roosevelt has lost the confidence of the entire of his fellow citizens is slated to succeed himself.
 In his achievement President Wilson has won the approval and commendation, not of democrats or republicans or progressives, but of Americans. He is approved by Americans as an American for what is distinctly an American act.
 While the work that President Wilson has done in straightening us out with Germany is greater than any party or set of parties has ever done, it is not the only work that President Wilson has done. His victory means party prestige under Mr. Wilson's continued leadership. And there is opportunity before the president now to duplicate that victory in settling our differences with Great Britain. Unquestionably, he is working to that end. To remove the declaration of contraband against our cotton and to secure restoration of the freedom of the seas for our neutral and non-contraband commerce.
 President Wilson led no doubt as to his purpose in this direction in the last note written to Germany relative to the case of the Lusitania. His assertion that this country would "hold on" to its rights to the maintenance of our unquestioned rights was as clearly applicable to English as to German violation of international law.
 With two such diplomatic victories to his credit, President Wilson's popularity is certain to become firmly fixed, not only within, but far beyond, party lines.

Heutenant who, with fiery darts from his airplane sent a Zeppelin and its crew crashing to the earth. Descriptions of air duels have been frequent, and they make good reading.
 But as a matter of fact, there is not one achievement of the aeroplane or the dirigible considered as a fighting craft which can be said to have had even the smallest effect on the outcome of the war, nor is it shown how whole fleets of them could be used as a means of attack.
 The one proven use of the air craft is in making observations regarding the movement of the enemy. In this they have developed a field of usefulness which makes them indispensable in modern warfare. Aside from that, their chief work has been in the slaughter of innocents. When the rules of warfare are written down, follow the line of greatest conflict, use of these machines should be held within their proven scope in inflicting damage upon the actual enemy.

SOME BIG PENSION BILLS.

The close of the European war will witness the beginning of the payment of the biggest pension bills in the history of the world. Millions of injured and disabled soldiers with their productive powers curtailed, if not altogether eliminated, will be drawn upon their nations in a double sense. While producing less, they will cost their countries more.
 Men permanently disabled through wounds in the war will be provided for from the government treasury. This is an item of expense which will compare with the interest on their overgrown national debts. The Berlin Vorwaerts, organ of the German socialists, asserts that "after the war the imperial debt and pensions alone will demand an annual expenditure of at least two and a half billion marks ($425,000,000), or a little less than the entire ordinary and extraordinary imperial expenditure for 1915." The entire income which Germany has hitherto enjoyed will thus be consumed in interest and pensions alone.
 The status of Germany may be taken as a fair example of the condition in this respect in which the other powers engaged in the war will find themselves. The enormity of war expenditures alone prosages bankruptcy, but these are just the beginning. If the war debts might be gradually paid off and extinguished over a long term of years, there would be some hope in the present outlook. But with interest on war debts and pensions demanding all available income, the only way to avoid bankruptcy maintenance, if it is practically impossible to see where sinking funds are coming from to begin the process of extinguishment.
 We have sometimes felt that American pension bills of $100,000,000 annually were staggering. There is not a nation of the first class engaged in the present conflict but will probably be called upon to pay several times that sum.
 The deeper we go into the financial problems of the European nations, grown out of this war, the more bewildering and impossible of solution they become, and the more unlikely it seems that any of them will escape bankruptcy.

WHAT THE CROPS COULD BUY.

Though the pessimist prefers to walk in darkness, The New York World throws the light on the screen for his especial benefit, and the facts of figures must appeal to him. And here they are, convincingly displayed:
 The only natural to view it also from the party standpoint, and it is a victory which means party prestige under Mr. Wilson's continued leadership.
 And there is opportunity before the president now to duplicate that victory in settling our differences with Great Britain. Unquestionably, he is working to that end. To remove the declaration of contraband against our cotton and to secure restoration of the freedom of the seas for our neutral and non-contraband commerce.

AIR RAIDS INEFFICIENT.

Almost every incident of the European war in which air raids have figured supports the assertion of Arthur J. Balfour, first lord of the British admiralty, that the German Zeppelins have killed no soldiers or sailors in England, and only once have they inflicted any damage which could be ascribed as of the slightest military importance.
 Mr. Balfour attributes this result to the fact that the Zeppelin attacks are made under cover of night, preferably a moonless night, when landmarks are elusive and errors are inevitable. But from the results of the British heart, both by the Germans and by the Allies, there must be another reason in the practical impossibility of accurate aim in dropping missiles and explosives from aeroplanes or dirigible in daylight at great height.
 The German raids in England, said to have been designed chiefly to bring terror to the British heart, have killed 85 persons and injured 220, all civilians. This is the stated result of a year's work of the German aircraft over England. It is about in accord with the results from similar air raids made on the continent, where the chief victims were a few innocent civilians, and whose taking off is just about as innocuous as the slaughter of neutrals on the Lusitania.
 There have been many deeds of heroism in the air. The most picturesque of all was perhaps was the feat of the British

GETTING OUTDOORS.
 By GEORGE FITCH,
 Author of "All Good Things Wash."
 Getting out doors has become the great American remedy for everything, including business and the feet too.
 America contains more outdoors than almost any nation. If all the citizens of the United States were set outdoors at once they would have to talk with each other through megaphones. The best way for all to spend at least an hour in the open air is to go out for a walk. A walk is a good thing for all people at all times and in all places. It is a good thing for all people at all times and in all places. It is a good thing for all people at all times and in all places.

HOW TO RECOVER OUR DRUG ADDICTS
 By Sam W. Kessell.
 The computation that there are 2,000 cocaine addicts in and about Atlanta is a startling revelation to anyone who knows the general condition and correlations of the drug.
 One of the startling revelations of the Harbinger is the fact that the habit, heroin and opium addicts flourish most abundantly in the liquor a also most abundant.
 How much more addicted a person A person who finds it most difficult to get intoxicating liquor resort to those drugs as substitutes has been knocked away by the facts produced by the officers who are enforcing the federal drug prohibition statute.
 The enforcement of addicts to those specific drugs denounced by the act have been found in the cities with saloons are normally about 100 to 150. In Chicago, for instance, 1 per cent of the population is addicted to those drugs.
 Understand me, I am not making that statement from the standpoint of an anti-saloonist. I have had personal experience, as many in Atlanta who have been both friends of poison. What I do not know personally about liquor addicts would make a very small pamphlet, and what I learned in a spasmodic experience with opium addicts in the city of Atlanta is a horror against it until I am chilled in death.
 Maybe there is something worse to suffer in hell than the pang that say through the nerves of a man who has been both a devil himself would have to show me.
 When a person's whole organism has been subjected by the habit of drugs that has for the drug there is hope of redemption. A tremendous amount of work has to be done. It is a work that is not only a physical and mental and spiritual power—may serve as my capital to start the saving process. The Howard Letter
 From Washington has come an official report which might be used to illustrate the truth that is in the saying of the Scriptures, "The Lord shall give us gold as he will." The United States is accumulating gold so rapidly that the Washington Bureau of Statistics may report by and by that there is not distant when we shall hold two thousand million dollars. In the year 1914, the mines of the United States and the territories produced more gold in round numbers than in any other year. The total value was an increase of five millions over the amount mined in the preceding year.
 In 1913 there was approximately that possibly the United States had reached the climax of gold production in the states and in the territories of Alaska. Some of the mines of the United States and the territories were secured in a single year gold in excess of one hundred million dollars' value, some producing that there might be a gradual falling off in production. They based their opinion upon the belief or suspicion that our own mines were gradually being exhausted. The total value of the gold produced in the year 1914 the American gold mines produced 114 million ounces of gold which yielded in the previous year. Furthermore, the mines of the United States and the territories produced more gold in round numbers than in any other year. The total value was an increase of five millions over the amount mined in the preceding year.
 It is a fact associated with great wars that the sooner or later they stimulate gold mining. The gold of the world is produced in the United States and the territories.
