

Impeachment Trial May Indefinitely Prolong Meeting of Assembly

THE "DRY" PARTY TO BE EFFECTIVE EARLY NEXT YEAR

Is Generally Believed That a Compromise Will Be Reached by Which April 1
Will Be Date Selected.

HARRIS WILL INCLUDE PROHIBITION IN CALL

Extreme Prohibitionists Favor
Putting the Laws Into Effect on January 1, and Conservatives Favor July 1.

The inclusion of prohibition measures in the call for the extra session of the general assembly being assured, which is in effect assurance that some time next year Georgia will have new prohibition laws more stringent than those at present in effect, brings up the question of when to put the new brand of prohibition into effect.

Before the prohibition bills have been introduced or before the extra session even met, the date of the inauguration of the new prohibition laws is more or less speculative. Indications point, however, to April 1, 1916, as the date when any new laws that may be passed by the extraordinary session of the legislature will go into effect.

Will Include Prohibition. Although Governor Harris will not make his formal announcement of what he will include in his call for the extra session before September 15, which is just two days prior to the day when he expects to issue his proclamation convoking the extra session, the trend of all interviews he has given the press indicates that he will include prohibition. To pose such questions on this matter he has never given a negative answer to newspapermen. His indication that he will include prohibition in his call means only prohibition.

The prohibitionists—the leaders, some of whom have been in almost daily conference with the governor—are proceeding with unperturbed confidence in the inclusion of prohibition in the call for the extra session. The governor has been besieged by almost every political party, labor union and organization, as a part of the organized efforts of the prohibitionists to prevail upon him to include prohibition. In short, there is every reason to expect that he will ask the extra session to consider prohibition, and none to believe that he will fail to ask them to do so.

Given the opportunity to act upon prohibition, there is small doubt that the "dry" party will win. Prohibition laws more stringent than those at present in effect will be enacted. This will be in spite of the fact that the minority will undoubtedly put up a strong fight against the passage of any such measure, despite the fact that there is a split in the prohibition wing, the heads unite on the character of legislation to be enacted.

Stringent Regulations. The "radical" faction is in favor of the most stringent regulations against liquor clubs, saloons and places of amusement. "Moderate" reformers are in favor of less stringent regulations. It is generally believed that the "moderate" party will prevail in the extra session case under the call for the extra session.

It is this very compromise which is being made by Governor Harris in putting a new law into effect, January 1, 1916, while the "conservative" party is in favor of putting the new law into effect July 1, 1916. It is known that April 1 has already been suggested as a compromise date.

POLICE ARE CALLED TO RESCUE GREEK FROM ENRAGED MOB

Combined efforts on the part of Captain A. L. Potts and Chief Officers Evans, Hasket, Webb and Wyle were necessary to save the life of George Gagas, proprietor of a fruit stand on North Broad street, when a mob of nearly 400 men went to the store which he Saturday night shortly before 7 o'clock.

Reported in Atlanta That Legislature May Be Asked to Pass Upon Action of Judge Fite in Putting the Murray Commissioners in Jail.

LIMIT OF FIFTY DAYS DOES NOT APPLY WHEN TRIAL IS BEING HELD

Attorney Tye States That
He Has Heard Impeachment
Discussed, But Is Unable at Present to Make Any Definite Statement on Matter.

As a result of the Murray county courthouse trouble, which has recently placed the commissioners of Murray county behind prison bars for contempt of court at the order of Judge W. Fite, there appears a likelihood that impeachment proceedings may be brought against Judge Fite in the coming extra session of the general assembly, according to a report received in Atlanta last night. The commissioners of Murray county, whom Judge Fite placed in jail, it is said, will be the prime movers in event the impeachment proceedings are instituted.

This report, however, could not be verified last night, since both telegraphic and telephonic communication with Chatworth, the county seat of Murray county, are closed after 5 o'clock.

Hearing in October. The bill of exceptions upon which the Murray county commissioners appear from the contempt ruling of Judge Fite has been at Chatworth since the Supreme court of Georgia for October 4. This unconfirmed report is published by the Atlanta Constitution in the prospect of sensational developments in the case between the judge and the commissioners, but because of the tremendous and far-reaching effects of the impeachment trial of the general assembly, it is not possible to make any definite statement on the matter.

Constitution of Georgia provides that any session of the general assembly shall be limited to fifty days unless the assembly shall by a majority vote extend its session. The impeachment trial is in progress and uncompleted at the expiration of the fifty days, which event the impeachment trial is concluded.

Thus, if impeachment proceedings are instituted against Judge Fite at the coming extra session, already fifty days of the session will have expired, and the trial will run its full term to the date of the expiration of the session.

It is fittingly expected. If filibustering tactics of the opposing factions of the house, which characterized the last regular session of the assembly, should be repeated again in the extra session—and it appears with an increasing probability—a termination of the extra session at the expiration of the fifty days of the session would not be a surprising occurrence.

Not less remarkable than this possibility is the manner in which the extra session will be called. Some three days ago, when the call for the extra session was issued, it was stated that the call would be for the purpose of removing the county seat from Chatworth to a new location to be decided between two places for the county seat.

It was over this issue that the little town of Vales for Elton at Hight, in the county seat, had not been selected as the county seat at either Chatworth or Vales.

The question of what town had won the election was the subject of a hearing at the courthouse of Murray county, and the citizens of Murray county, and the citizens of Chatworth in the town of Vales, were present.

When everything was over, the building under construction of the building with its impressive front looking down upon the city of Chatworth, however, it developed that the building was being erected in the opposite direction, thus leaving the building in the city of Chatworth.

The answer of the commissioners of Murray county was that the building was being erected in the opposite direction, thus leaving the building in the city of Chatworth.

Parades, Fireworks, Music To Make Harvest Festival City's Most Gala Week

From present indications Atlanta's Harvest festival week, which takes place November 15 to 20, will be an event unparalleled in the history of the city.

Never has any event been planned with more elaborate facilities by which one may enjoy himself.

Each day will see big parades and a tremendous display of fireworks from the tops of Atlanta's absolutely a new and separate thrill for every minute!

There will be big parades and as many as 10,000 Ford cars in at least four passengers. At the main-time this would mean at least 40,000 visitors and a parade many miles in Washington, Sept. 18.—Secretary government and the diplomatic representatives of Brazil, Chile, Argentina, Bolivia, Uruguay and Guatemala, discussed at the meeting here today that the time had come for extension of formal recognition to a government in Mexico.

Three weeks from today another meeting of the conference will be held in Washington, at which decision is expected to be reached as to the extent which recognition should be conferred.

A formal statement issued by the conference declared that as the conditions themselves had failed to come to an agreement, recognition would be accorded to the de facto authorities pending the material and moral capacity necessary to protect the lives and property of nationals and foreigners.

Each of the several governments, it

Recognition Likely for Carranza.
The conference, which was held in Mexico, took a decided turn within the next three weeks in favor of Villa, who has concentrated his forces for battle with Carranza, the Carranza commander-in-chief, at Torreon, most of the conferees believe the Carranza government will probably be entitled to recognition.

The several governments will endeavor to learn, however, not only what territory each faction controls, but also their claims and members of the faction. To determine that exactly, the several governments will send plenipotentiaries to the various parts of the country.

The Charm of Fur-Trimmed Suits

Is Delightfully Expressed, in Models Here, at $19.75, $25.00, $29.75, and to $35.00

Suit values that are well-nigh wonderful. Every one a new model. REALLY, when you examine them closely, you will wonder that prices are not $5 to $7.50 more, per suit. —They would be, at other stores. —You see, it's this way: We are determined to broaden the prestige we've so long maintained in our ready-to-wear department, and to this end we have assembled suit stocks this season with vastly more care than we have ever before exercised. The resultant collection offers values like we have never before owned. —Tailored suits depicting every favored style feature. Perfectly tailored of the same materials as go into suits shown elsewhere at $5 to $7.50 more. Lined with best quality satins and trimmed as beautifully as you'll care to see.

—Just a Word About Fur Trimmings —Fur prices are advancing. Makers tell us that the demand promises to exceed the supply. To offset these conditions indiscriminate makers are using shoddy furs or inferior scrap-pieces. —Critical inspection of fur-trimmed suits at "Highs" will reveal naught but best quality furs. Just one more argument in favor of our showings. —Styles are widely diverse, offering selections to please every fancy. And, really, we are showing the best suit values in Atlanta, at

$19.75, $25.00, $29.75 and $35.00

ED TO THE BLEAKEST SPOTS OF SIBERIA

No. 3.—THE ESCAPE.

Time was moving round toward Christmas. The peace and goodwill of the season circled the earth like a luminous glow; it even reached beyond the ends of the earth and lashed Kirensk, the penal settlement 400 miles north of Irkutsk, which, in the Russian mind, is the outpost of civilization.

There was little of happiness in the miserable huts of the exiles. They were consigned for life—unless a miracle set them free—to the drifting snow and the lonely grandeur of the northern lights and the shrieking wind. But hope touched their hearts as the glory of the ages repeated itself: a bit of cheer warmed their hearts.

The spirit penetrator even the commander of the Cossacks and he allowed privileges, discourse among the prisoners and even visiting.

So it was in the twilight of morning when Madame Breshkovskaya, white haired and infirm now, left her hut and, under police guard, hobbled to the hut of Vladimiroff to spend the day. She was revered in the colony as the leader of the revolutionary movement, and the indefatigable worker for the people.

As the short day drew to a close there was a stir round the oil fire; questions hastily asked, whispered answers. And at evening the figure of an old, tired woman, supported by Vladimiroff, hobbled from his hut to her own, and craved rest.

Three days later Madame saw the lights of Yakutsk, which mean access to the Arctic port and safety. She knew that telegraph wires leading out from Kirensk had been cut; all along the line sympathizers would be ready to offer her aid.

But all her care and the hardship of the 600-mile journey went for naught; Cossacks came up from the south and put her in chains. Once again she saw St. Petersburg.

THE SENTENCE.

The cell in the fortress of Saint Peter and Saint Paul was above the river; in the afternoon a bit of sunlight lay on the gray stone floor and crept along the gray stone wall. Half way up it began to dance. That was when it no longer shone directly through the grated window, but into the water. Slowly it wavered higher on the way to the gray stone ceiling. Then it went out and night fell.

Every day that the sun shone for four years the Grandmother of the Revolution watched the light on the wall, on the days she watched the clouds through the bars.

She had her memories, too, the old woman beloved of the oppressed. She thought with happiness of her visit to America when she had done so much for the cause of her own people, the peasants of her country. She remembered, too, her last term of servitude in the mines of Kara; four years of back-breaking, heart-breaking toil of the twenty-three years she had been an exile; and she was to be charged with being a member of an illegal party, and given a secret trial.

What went on at the trial only the judge and his assistants, one representative each from the noble, citizen and peasant classes, will ever know. One relative of the prisoner is permitted to attend the trials of political prisoners, but Madame had no relatives. Her papers, allowed to publish only the verdict, told when it was over, that Madame had been found guilty and was sentenced to perpetual exile.

Yakutsk is considered the least desirable of Siberian exile settlements. It is inhabited by northern nomads, who live in the yurts with earthen roofs and doors of hairy hides. It lies on an open plain, surrounded by lofty hills, to the north the Tundras, to the south the Yablonof mountains.

Madame was sent to Yakutsk. But so far-reaching is her influence that the government feared her even in that awful isolation. And now she is to be taken to Bulun, on the frontier of the north pole region; where winter mists, like the breath of Death, drift down from the Arctic to corrode the bones and the frozen earth are only mounds under the northern lights. And where the wind of the North, from fields of dead winter I come, thin shrouds of white snow I wear, to cover the bodies of men; when the shroud of this snow I unfold, this snow set with hoarfrost and rime, to drive round the souls sick with cold, that live in the bodies of men; my breath is the screeching of fame, my laugh is the shriek of despair, how white are the faces upturned! How shining their eyes—oh, their eyes! I am the death wind of the North, from wastes of dead winter I come, thin shrouds of white snow I wear, to cover the bodies of men!

CATHERINE BRESHKOVSKAYA

"Grandmother of Russian Revolution" to End Her Years in Dreariest and Bitterest of Czar's Penal Colonies.

BULUN clings to the skirts of the Arctic, a speck on the far-flung white. On the east rises the Karaulakshah range, steep on steep, wrapped in eternal snows, grim monuments to the empty gods of space. On the west flows the Lena, dark and sullen; beyond stretches the soul-wearying monotony of the Tundra.

In the summer pallid sunlight strikes crystals from the frosts. Then Eskimos, like shapeless bundles of rag and fur, emerge from their yurts and walk sluggishly under the eyes of Cossacks shivering round their post building.

In the winter icy mists drift down from the Arctic gulf and lie like the breath of Death on the land, corroding the bones. Sleet and snow drive out of the west, and for many months the frozen yurts and even the stone church are only isolated mounds in a desolate waste, over which northern lights play and the wind shrieks its psalm. Then cities and hurrying men and women and lights and luxury far away in the south might never have been, shut off as they are by impassable barriers of snow, more than half of every year.

This is Bulun, the last outpost on the bleak frontier of the north pole. And this is the place in which Russia has ordered that Madame Catherine Breshkovskaya is to spend the last of her years.

Her bit of life at the end of the world will be, it is likely, the final event in Madame's book of life, for she is next seventy, almost blind, with rapidly falling strength.

From the very beginning Madame's life has unfolded like a story that is possible only one place in all the world—the secret corners of Russia. It is like a series of vivid pictures, fitting together on the thread of events.

No. 1.—THE KNOT.

It was a fete day in Little Russia. The Most Illustrious Noble had filled his castle with guests from all parts of the kingdom. Their carriages crowded the doors and anterooms and overflowed to the beautiful parks and gardens. Elegant ladies and no less elegant men surrounded, enormous tables; tables weighted with festsal meats prepared by cooks from Petersburg, Warsaw, and even Paris. Orchestras, troops of actors, and musicians entertained, creating a little court in imitation of the court of the Czar.

Outside the zone of festivity, but so near that they could be seen quite plainly from the castle towers, lived the serfs. Their villages were merely long streets of miserable huts. Little children, dirty and emaciated, played round the doors, quarreling in the mud and dirt, eating from the same dish with the dogs and pigs. Old men lay on the snow, bristling and shivering, while through the long days men and women, uncombed, unwashed, clad in their coarse garments, at every lash, trickled along the quivering flesh and dropped on the floor. And it was as though every blow fell on the heart of the little girl crouching at her father's feet.

No. 2.—THE ARREST.

The serfs had been freed. And freedom had swooped upon them like a wild beast, killing and destroying. Bits of land were dealt out and great sums asked in payment; resistance brought soldiers and tragedy. The new laws availed nothing for the ignorant peasants were deceived and subjected to the will of the nobility. An edict was issued closing all primary schools, and the agricultural and manual training schools established by private means for the peasants were forbidden and teachers were put under police espionage.

Then the two thousand young men and women who had organized themselves to work for the people held a secret meeting, and resolved on advice of the Youngest Teacher, to go to the peasants with the truth. It meant a future given up to struggling against the persecutions of cardons; possibly imprisonment or exile.

The Youngest Teacher traveled up and down the country, visiting peasants, becoming acquainted with their life and needs. Fixing on the government began to take cognizance of her.

She was sitting alone among her books when the police came. Without a word she was bundled away to prison. The cell they gave her was less than two yards square. She lived in it, night after day and day after night for two years. Then she was sentenced to the Kara mines. After twelve months of hawking underground the Youngest Teacher was transferred to a hamlet as the Siberian plains.

And blood rose up to meet the urge

About Wedding Invitations

These absolutely necessary articles for the wedding occasion are subject to criticism more than any other feature.

Even the wedding dress is not scrutinized so closely as the invitation, for the latter goes into the hands of strangers as well as of every invited guest and is apt to be considered the forerunner of the style which characterizes the wedding.

These days, most people are well informed concerning the requisites for stylish invitations.

The material of which the envelopes and sheets are made should be of approved shade of white; the shapes should be those that fashion has most recently decreed and the engraving should be done by artists whose reputation insures the highest degree of skill. All these requirements are met in the extensive plant and thirty years experience of the J. P. Stevens Engraving Co. This house has established a high standard of product known all over the United States; the imprint of its name upon an envelope is a guarantee that the invitation is of correct form, latest style and finest quality.

If you are particularly interested send to this house for samples and prices which will be sent free of charge in a sealed package. Address J. P. Stevens Engraving Co., 47 Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Georgia.

MUSE-McCLESKY.

Mr. and Mrs. George Muse announce the engagement of their daughter, Caroline, to Mr. Louis Dugas McCleskey, the marriage to take place October 23, at home.

The wedding will be an occasion brilliant in social interest, since both young people are highly representative of prominent families and are popular figures among the young social set.

Miss Muse, a daughter of Mr. George Muse, who illustrates in his every relation Atlanta's most substantial type of citizenship, is a beautiful young woman, her talents trained in study in this country and Europe.

Mr. McCleskey is the son of Mr. Lactus L. McCleskey, for many years one of the best-known railroad men in the south, and his mother was a lovely representative of the Dugas family, of Augusta. He is a graduate of the University of Georgia, and is successfully engaged in the insurance business.

LOBE-CONDON.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Lobe announce the engagement of their daughter, Hortense, to Mr. Gratian Seymour Condon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Seymour W. Condon, of Pasadena, Cal., the wedding to take place this fall.

MIDDLETON-HUTCHISON.

Mr. and Mrs. James Middleton, of Columbia, S. C., formerly of Atlanta, Ga., announce the engagement of their daughter, Charlotte Haskell, to Dr. Walter G. Hutchison, of Nashville, Tenn. The wedding will take place the latter part of October.

TRUMAN-WRENNE.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Evans Shippen, of Ellijay, Ga., announce the engagement of their sister, Frances Terrell Truman, to Mr. David Paul Wrenne, of Nashville, Tenn. The wedding will be quietly solemnized Tuesday, October 5, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Shippen.

DUGGER-JAMISON.

Try This If You Have Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. The dandruff is not a disease. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it gently with the finger tips. By morning, most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have. You will find, too, that all itching and itching of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffier, lustrous, pliant, silky and soft, and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and its effectiveness is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

SCIENCE AND NEAR-SCIENCE UP-TO-DATE

Has MAN Discovered a SUBSTITUTE for AIR?

William S. Bond, as He Appeared Immediately After Stepping From His Air Tight Compartment.

Government Officials Hold Secret That May Revolutionize Submarine Warfare and Allow Man to Take Up His Abode Under Water

AS the secret of human life without air been discovered?

It has if the successful experiment of William S. Bond, a Wilmington, Del., chemist, is to be accepted at its face value. And if so the very first fundamental of science has been swept away.

As long as the world has possessed thinking minds it has been an accepted fact that the human body needed air—constantly changing fresh air—to sustain life. Just as a fish demands water for its existence.

But this rule has been absolutely disregarded by Bond, who lived, dined and read magazines in a sealed chest at the bottom of a body of water for seven hours. With the aid of a chemical discovery credited to his efforts Bond says that he could have remained in the air-tight box indefinitely. Statements of army officers and scientists who watched the experiment indicate that bodily fatigue rather than lack of air alone caused him to come to the surface.

"One hardly dares imagine what a submarine so equipped could do if it sank beneath the protecting nets of the Dardanelles, entered the Bos of Harman and laid at the bottom of the ocean until an opportune moment for striking came," said one of the army officers who watched the experiment made by Bond. "The one great obstacle to extensive operations below water, of course, is the limitation of the air-supplying equipment. With that obstacle removed the present submarines war game would be revolutionized."

"It is easy to see how valuable this discovery would be to any one of the belligerents in the present world war. I consider it almost providential that it has fallen into the hands of the United States government for its own use rather than a possible enemy. There is little doubt it will be taken by the government and expanded so to prevent its general use."

"I am under an agreement to keep the secret, and it shall be kept," said Bond immediately after he came to the surface, flushed with triumph at the successful conclusion of his experiment.

Although Bond had been waiting for years in an effort to learn the secret of life without air it was not until recently that he was sufficiently sure of his success to make a public demonstration of the discovery. Then, under a carefully arranged program that made even the possibility of faking out of the question, the chemist proved the truth of his assertions at Philadelphia.

First, an air-tight chamber that had been constructed for the experiment was brought forth. It was of wood and steel, six feet high, four feet long and three feet wide. Its top was of glass in order to make it possible that its occupant might be watched during the entire period of the experiment.

In one side of the chest was a telephone apparatus and a stool for use of the young scientist. Then a box of edibles and a bundle of magazines were lowered into the box and finally Bond himself. Bond sat with him a little hand watch that of a low set," and which he had seated in order to make it more efficacious. Nothing has been the custom among primitive peoples from the earliest times, and indeed the animals recognize the necessity of keeping their skins healthy by cleaning them constantly in some way. It was said that the merits of the Bath springs were first discovered by Prince Bladud, who suffered from a skin disease, by watching a sick pig wallowing in the mud.

Sick animals, too, led the traveler to discover the merits of certain waters in Africa for curing fever, for the banks of rivers bordered by certain shrubs become impregnated with their juices; the extreme value of quinine as a remedy for malaria was first discovered, it is said, by watching the recovery of several animals who drank of the waters which flowed past the bushes.

Baths among some nations of the East have come to be recognized as curing mental ailments, and the pilgrim who sought everywhere for the "Riser of the Arrow" firmly believed that, when he had bathed in it, all his sins would be washed away. Nothing in the Ganges is credited with the same virtue by the Hindus, while visitors to the Pool of Silvan in Biblical days believed that no ailment could survive washing in its waters. Many holy wells are credited with still stranger virtues, since those who plunge into them are said to obtain their wishes if the proper forms are observed. Stories have been woven round certain bathers which add their act of bathing with romance. The bath taken by Archimedes, owing to overwriting by a servant, led to the discovery of specific gravity. The absent-minded philosopher, leaving the bath abruptly, rushed through the streets of Syracuse shouting "Eureka!"

Shell Fish Dress Themselves

MANY of the crab species of shell fish clothe themselves. Some species dress elaborately by taking small pieces of different colored weeds and sticking them on the shell, so as to look like a stone covered with weed. They spend hours, with the utmost perseverance, in making these pieces adhere by trying the same piece over and over again till they succeed.

They have a fine sense of symmetry, and always put a red piece on one limb to match the red piece they have put on the other, and a green piece to match a green piece, though how they know red from green in the dark pools where they live is hard to say, unless it is by taste or smell. When once their dress is completed it improves the color it becomes, as the weed actually grows on them.

Another species, with like habits and a most decided love for snary, was described at a meeting of the Linnaean Society as clothing themselves with bits of bright-colored seaweed, sponges and so forth.

If the crab be dislodged of its garments it at once proceeds to clothe itself again with care and deliberation, manifested not only in the selection of its articles of apparel but in the proper shaping of them by means of its pincers.

New Germ-Proof Toothbrush

INSTEAD of going to the store and buying a toothbrush as you have done heretofore you can now buy a box of toothbrushes and as you use one you will throw it away. The others remain in dust-proof box until wanted.

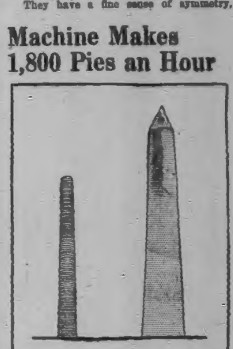

The newly patented scheme dispenses entirely with the use of animal bristles and makes use of points made of paper pulp impregnated with a cleansing powder and a sanitary agent. This composition is formed under pressure and the substitute bristles and the points form an integral part of the back on which they are mounted.

Have you ever watched a surgeon cleaning a wound? Everything which he uses is disinfected or sterilized. The cotton-wool is not left exposed to the air, but is kept carefully covered. All scalars, forceps, etc. are washed in hot water, to which has been added some strong disinfectant. There is almost as great a difference between our idea of cleanliness and surgical cleanliness as there is between the former and our idea of dirt.

Trained Crabs Catch Rabbits

CRABS are put to a curious use on certain parts of the Dominican foreshore. They are used to catch rabbits. Having located a promising burrow, the snare take a crab and affix a short length of lighted candle to the back of its shell. The behavior of a crab which finds itself in a narrow inclosure is well known. It begins to run. It therefore starts away up the burrow at top rate, and presently the rabbit is horrified at the sight of a jagged, trotting flame coming to his sanctuary. Off he goes for the other exit, only to find himself, when he emerges, in a trap.

Wild Hogs As Watchdogs

IN SOME parts of Mexico the wild hog, which the natives call jabali—hah-bah-lah—swags beasts in their natural state, are used as watchdogs. If they are caught young and brought up with geese they will go into the hills with the herd and fight off coyotes or other wild animals; if they are raised with chickens they will protect them, and round a ranchhouse at night they are as useful as any dog.

Although fierce by nature, they can be tamed until they follow their master round like a dog. The landlord of a hotel in one of the border towns even keeps one of the wild hogs as a playmate for his baby son.

The jabali is only first cousin, however, to the domestic pig. Swine are divided into two main branches; in one line is the farmer's pig, descended from the wild hog of Europe, and in the other is the jiffail, which is really a peccary. But the jabali is quite "piggish" enough, with his small, flexible snout, long, pointed bristles and long, sharp tusks.

The Beggars' Paradise

IN CHINA begging is in the nature of an art, and the various sorts of applicants have been classified, until now it is known that there are at least thirty classes of traveling mendicants.

The passenger boats know them and do not attempt to collect passage money, for they sleep on the open deck, and, curiously enough, pay for whatever rice they require. This being the case, rather than have any trouble with them and gain their enmity, the boatmen allow them free passage.

When they reach the city they put up at the largest hotel near the Big Pagoda and let the beggar headmen know of their arrival. Soon the regular allowance is forthcoming and the man spends a few days in pursuit of pleasure and then moves on to another place to repeat the same proceeding.

Baths That Made Men and Cities Famous

THE art of bathing has usually been looked upon as merely prosaic and attained to fame either because of some incident which took place while the bather was engaged in the act of ablution or from some other circumstance connected with it:

while there have been some famous baths in fiction, such as the one which Alfred Jingle took after his match with Sir Thomas Blazo, after which he "had a bath and went to dinner." Then there was the bath taken by Arthur Pendennis, to which he retreated himself after he "met man of a low set," and which he had seated in order to make it more efficacious.

Nothing has been the custom among primitive peoples from the earliest times, and indeed the animals recognize the necessity of keeping their skins healthy by cleaning them constantly in some way. It was said that the merits of the Bath springs were first discovered by Prince Bladud, who suffered from a skin disease, by watching a sick pig wallowing in the mud.

Bond Seemed Least Concerned of Anybody Taking Part in the Experiment. He Read Magazines, Dined and Conversated on Inconsequential Subjects Over the Phone.

To Defy Undersea Dangers—

A MARINE signaling apparatus which it is believed will diminish sea disasters consists of an electric oscillator which announces the presence of an enemy vessel, locates leasers, indicates sea depths, and provides for the transmission of submarine telephone and telegraph messages.

Above, Metal Diaphragm; Below, Putting Apparatus Overboard.

The device consists principally of a twenty-four-inch metal diaphragm attached to a cylindrical case, within which is an electromagnet actuating a copper sander. The oscillators, when in permanent position, are placed inside of a ship's skin, beneath the water line, on both the port and starboard sides. Vibrations of the diaphragm amounting to a movement of one-thousandth part of an inch and repeated with great rapidity throw out sound waves under the water which may be caught by the receiving apparatus on another vessel. Signals of this kind have been heard at a distance of thirty miles, while at shorter ranges numerous telegraphic conversations have been carried on successfully. In one instance the experimenters actually talked between two ships. In locating icebergs it is the echo which gives warning of the presence of danger.

With a stop watch it is possible to estimate quite accurately the distance of these barriers.

FOR THE COMING YEAR

The announcement is published today of the quarterly meeting of the executive board on September 30, at the Piedmont hotel, Atlanta. This will be a meeting of unusual interest and importance, coming just before the annual state conference in Savannah on October 26.

The program for the Savannah meeting has been completed and published in full, and the board will have an opportunity to make the live topics of discussion, and be prepared to take the initiative when they come up for a hearing.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick writes that everywhere she goes, and she has recently visited Albany and Pelham, she finds the clubs keenly alive to their work and all arranging to attend the convention. She predicts even a larger attendance than was present at the Albany meeting.

The time limits suggested to state conventions by Mrs. Pennebaker have already been adopted by the executive board of the Georgia federation, and will be observed this year in Savannah. Mrs. Pennebaker writes:

"While I know it is hard to enforce a time limit, yet the salvation of a program depends upon this being done. Perhaps a timid president will be strengthened when she realizes that the allowing of people who come early on the program to run over time is virtually robbing those who come later of their just dues.

In the same letter the writer says: "Don't you think it will be a wise plan to begin now to prepare to attend the New York Biennial, which is to convene on May 24, 1916?"

There will be ample check and rest rooms, and the New York women will leave nothing undone to add to the comfort of the visitors. I have asked the local board to appoint at least two New York women to look after each state delegation.

BE NEIGHBORLY. An echo from the Los Angeles convention says "Be neighborly." One idea of reciprocity to which you have planned a program that is too good to keep, have members from a neighbor club enjoy a picnic in September is the month for the beginning of fall programs, and club women everywhere are planning much work during the coming months.

These reports deal with the different phases of the activities in the various phases of the year. The efforts of one club group to enjoy a picnic in September is the month for the beginning of fall programs, and club women everywhere are planning much work during the coming months.

A Happy Reunion.

Yesterday Mr. C. E. Felton, of 211 Ponce de Leon avenue, had present at his home six of his sisters living and his only brother. It was the first time in sixteen years that they have been thus happily assembled.

His sisters are Mrs. J. O. A. Radford, 40 years old; Mrs. M. A. West, 70 years old; Mrs. R. L. Maccock, of Madison, Ga., 70 years old; his own age 65 years and his brother, R. T. Felton, of West End, 65 years. They are all well and hearty, inheriting the health and vigor of their parents, their mother dying recently at the age of 90 years.

S. A. E. Dance.

The S. A. E. dance was a delightful event of Friday evening given at the chapter house.

Elaborate decorations were in the fraternity colors and an orchestra furnished a bright program of dance music.

Mr. and Mrs. Willis Timmons and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clay Burr were the chairmen.

There were one hundred and twenty guests.

Utopian Club Dance.

On Friday evening, September 18, the Utopian club will give its regular dance in the rooms at the corner of Lee and Gordon streets, West End. On account of the closing of the schools, the dances will be held on alternate Friday nights, instead of Wednesday.

The chairmen for the next dance will be Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Jennings, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Muller, Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Gray, Mr. and Mrs. Myrtle Lovelace, Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Becht, Mr. and Mrs. Earl W. Tidwell, Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Upchurch and Mr. and Mrs. Walter G. Withers.

Smith-Barrett.

Mrs. James Madison Smith announces the marriage of her daughter, Daisy Barrett, to Mr. Augustus Daniel Barrett, which took place Saturday, September 12, Rev. W. C. Schaefer, Jr. officiating.

Williams-Jervey.

A pretty event of Saturday morning was the wedding of Miss Emily Elizabeth Williams and Mr. John Jervey, which was solemnized at 11 o'clock at the North Avenue Presbyterian church. Dr. Richard Orme Flinn officiating. The altar was beautifully and artistically decorated with palms and Easter lilies. Mendicino's wedding march was beautifully rendered by Professor McLean.

The bride wore a becoming suit of blue broadcloth with the best and the best flowers were lilies of the valley. Mr. and Mrs. Jervey left immediately for Nacoochee Valley and after October 1 will be at home to their friends at the Majestic hotel.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

THE STANDARD SOUTHERN NEWSPAPER

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1915

HOME WANTED BY A BABY

BY CLARE VICTOR DWIGGINS

300,000 PEOPLE WILL COME TO THE FESTIVAL

This Prediction Was Made on Saturday by Col. William Lawson Peel.

That Atlanta would entertain fully 300,000 people during the week of the carnival was the prediction of Colonel W. L. Peel, chairman of the Harvest Festival association, after a careful study of the interest taken by Georgians at large in the state-wide event which will be held here November 15 to 20.

Colonel Peel called the finance committee together Saturday for the first time and they were entertained with a luncheon given by the executive committee. It was while discussing the financial expenditures necessary to make the carnival a signal success that he surprised his hearers with this estimate. He pointed out that the event would be a state-wide one arranged for Georgia and that the patriotic spirit instigating the carnival was clear to all.

Mr. Peel said: "I candidly believe that more people than you have ever seen in Atlanta will come here during the next few weeks. I have reached this conclusion after a careful study of the situation. Because the success of the occasion is absolutely assured and the magnitude shows anything Atlanta has ever undertaken, it was not until the time the finance committee met that I was led to believe that I can do to help that I am not ready to do."

Twenty committees to canvass the business interests of the city for the 1915 which will be held on Sunday so that the association management may start work with no financial hamper were appointed Saturday. If this work is not completed by the time the financial committee meets, then steps will be taken to get the entire amount during the day.

DUCH STEAMER DEFIES U. S. DEPUTY MARSHAL

Gulfport, Miss., September 18.—Pursued for ten miles out of Gulfport harbor by a United States deputy marshal, who bore documents by which he was to seize the vessel under libel proceedings, the captain of the Dutch steamer Helena put on full speed and outdistanced the launch in which the officer was chasing him.

The libel service was ordered in United States court here yesterday, when C. Ameinck & Co. and the Aetna insurance company filed suit against the vessel for $1,100, alleging failure of the steamer to load lumber, after arranging to do so, to be shipped to Argentina. The captain of the Helena was called to bail and a number of flats were fired by the deputy, but the Helena continued on her course.

GERMAN SUBSTITUTE FOR CHILEAN NITRATE

Berlin, September 18.—(Via London.) German farmers can find a satisfactory substitute for Chilean nitrate of soda in an analysis of ammonium cyanamide, according to an announcement by Professor Berthel before the German agricultural society today.

Experiments show, he said, that sulphate of ammonia produces 93 per cent of the effect of nitrate of soda, and cyanamide 74 per cent.

There was a great scarcity of nitrate product at the beginning of the war, but cyanamide factories put into operation since then have relieved the worst of the famine.

TROLLEY MEN FAVOR BALLOT FOR WOMEN

BANQUET IS GIVEN TO TRAVELING MEN BY BECK & GREGG

A delightful banquet was given the traveling men by Beck & Gregg Hardware company at the Piedmont hotel Saturday evening at 7 o'clock. The occasion of the banquet was the addition of the William J. Oliver Manufacturing company's turn to the local firm list. In addition to the traveling men, there were also present the officers of Beck & Gregg, department heads and several invited guests.

W. A. Parker, vice president and general manager, presided as toastmaster. Music was furnished by the Gate City quartet. Those present were: Officers—W. A. Beck, president; W. A. Parker, vice president and general manager; W. B. Pades, secretary; Palmer J. Smith, treasurer.

SHOOTING CAUSES PROBE BY POLICE

accompanied by his wife, were taken to Grady, where they both declared to reporters that the man had been accidentally shot while "fooling" with a revolver on the front porch of his home. The bullet entered below the right ear and lodged behind the left jawbone.

Detectives Investigate. Detectives Jameson and Harper were notified of the mysterious affair, and after going to the Shivers residence arrested Slaughter, carrying him to headquarters for an investigation, on the part of Chief of Detectives Newport A. Lanford.

According to Chief Lanford, Slaughter first declared that he had shot Shivers, but that it had been an accident. He stated that he was looking at the gun, holding it on his knee, according to the chief, when the thing went off.

As the weapon was an automatic, Slaughter first declared that he didn't know much about it, and could not say just how it had happened to fire. He later told the whole story of the residence, where he rooms at summer time and had found the whole Shivers family in an uproar.

Engaged in Argument. He engaged in an argument with the Shivers family over several things which they had been at odds about for some time. He stated that he and Shivers had "passed words" and that he had taken his room to get a gun, getting his gun from the trunk of his car, and that he had gotten out on the roof, intending to go down a walnut tree which "reached into the house." He claimed that he had heard Shivers run downstairs to head him off and then he had gotten into the room, and after going downstairs was put and set down at one end of the front porch.

Shivers sat down at the other end of the veranda, according to detectives, and it was then that Slaughter claimed to have been fooling with the gun, the discharge following. Mrs. Shivers is a pretty woman. She was also taken to police station for examination by Chief Lanford.

Detectives Jameson, when talking of the affair with the Constitution representative let Saturday night detectives that the shooting had not been an accident, according to statements of neighbors close to the Shivers home. Mrs. E. H. Hoegarty, who lives at 21 East North avenue, claimed that she had heard the two men quarreling prior to the shooting.

Slaughter will be given a preliminary trial, it is thought, Monday afternoon.

Hostetters Synamchbiters. A new "SAFETY FIRST" IDEA. Take care of the digestion, for it is from this source you receive your health and strength. Poorly digested food only clogs the system, upsets the liver, causes constipation and makes you feel miserable. You cannot afford to allow such a condition to continue and run chances of having sickness overtake you. Be on the safe side and help Nature restore the stomach, liver and bowels to a normal condition by the use of Hostetters Synamchbiters. It has a stimulating and toning effect upon these organs, aids digestion, restores the appetite, and is really conducive to better health. Try a bottle—do it now.

Wonderful Efficiency of the Field Artillery Operations of Modern Warfare Where "Man Behind the Gun" Never Sees the Enemy

AIMING point—Church steeple, left

"Deflection 3690."
"Close by three."
"Site 310."
"Corrector 25."
"3690."
"Fire."

Now this is not football "Greek" that you hear at the great Thanksgiving game, but the signal to the battery of field artillery at the Tobyhanna camp, where the First battalion of the Third field artillery from Fort Myer is instructing the militia field artillery.

The civil war prints depict the artillery of that day right up on the firing line with the cannoneers sighting over it at the enemy does not give one an idea of even the light artillery of to-day—not to speak of the heavy ordnance. The ideal location for the light artillery, or three-inch field guns, is in the woods a mile behind the firing line of the infantry.

Every means, natural and artificial, is used to conceal the artillery of modern warfare. In placing his battery the commander first endeavors to avail himself of some natural concealment—a clump of trees, a hedge, a ravine or a few of houses. A matter of two or three hundred yards, or even more, from the firing line is not taken into consideration in locating artillery. The "man behind the gun" never sees the enemy.

His knowledge of the enemy comes from the captain of the battery, who is located in this instance in the top of a tree more than a mile from the guns, which are snugly hidden behind a dense growth of underbrush. The captain is connected with the battery by a ground telephone, and he flashes his commands to the lieutenants or sergeants, which give the "man behind the gun" his vision of the target.

It is just in such jargon—unintelligible in the lay mind—that the captain gives this mental picture of the location of the enemy to his team. And the signals of the commander of the battery, as might be imagined from the above mentioned, are more complicated than the signals of the captain of a football team.

There is much in common between the drill of crack football teams and that of a section of a battery. A section of a battery is the crew of a gun in field artillery, there being four guns in a battery.

The first thing a captain does is to select his aiming point. The aiming point in this problem is a church steeple to the left of the rear of the battery. It is selected because the men behind the gun can see it as well as the captain. The "deflection 3690" is the angle measured in mills instead of degrees, minutes and seconds.

The commands "close by three" and "site 310" are given so that the different gun crews can estimate the given range on the deflection of the first gun—the gun on which the captain is making his calculation.

"Corrector 25" is the distance above the ground that the captain indicates the shrapnel to burst. "3690" indicates the distance between the battery and the enemy. Even before the captain calls out "Fire" the well trained section of battery has sent the shrapnel on its deadly mission.

In this "engagement" the imaginary aeroplanes work with the imaginary cavalry have located the enemy and the infantry has moved up and is attempting to turn the left flank of the opposing force. The commander of the American force is bringing such pressure to bear on the enemy's flank and the fire of our riflemen at about a thousand yards' range is so severe that the enemy is showing signs of giving ground. At this juncture our infantry comes within range of the enemy's concealed artillery.

It soon locates our line and the infantry is forced to seek cover. The commander of our forces immediately signals the commander of his field artillery, which has been held in reserve six or seven miles in the rear.

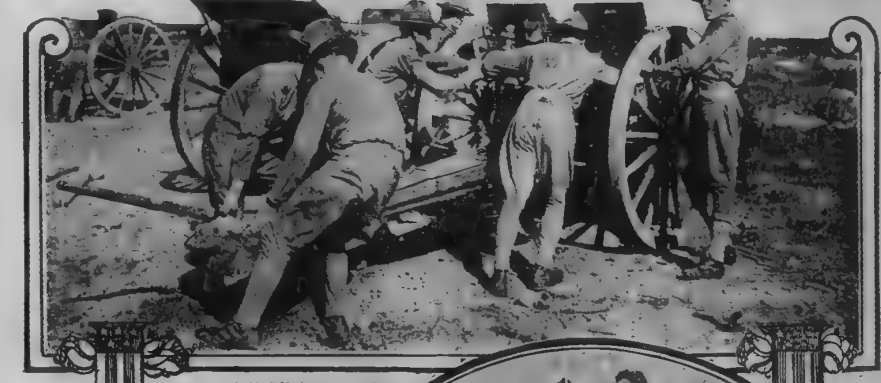

Down the side of the mountain and up the side of another they come, driving and riding as hard as they can, shrapnel being being raised upon the advancing line of our troops. They have no time to pick out the smooth roads, but daringly scale the rugged sides of the mountains. The dash of the New York Fire Department down Broadway is but as child's play compared with the desperate riding of the regular field artillery at Tobyhanna.

The commander of our forces informs the commander of the field artillery that his infantry is located along a certain ravine and that the enemy's field artillery is about three miles up the side of the mountain. The commander of the field artillery brings up his batteries to within about a mile of the line of our infantry. Climbing up a tree, he, with the aid of a field glass, locates the enemy field artillery and directs one of his guns to burst a salvo of shrapnel beyond where he supposes the enemy field artillery is located. In directing the first shot he gives a command similar to that at the head of this column. If the first shot falls too far to the right and the shrapnel bursts high in the air he telephones the commander of the gun with which he is first attempting to locate the enemy. "Add twenty, down five, same." This means that the range appears to be the same and by adding twenty at the range of 3,800 yards he bursts the shrapnel seventy-five yards to the left, and by "down five" he bursts it within eighteen yards of the ground.

Having once burst a shrapnel at 3,800 yards, which appears to be on the near side of the target, and one at 3,700 yards, which appears to be on the far side, he then has "bracketed" his target, or the enemy, within a hundred yards. Now he is ready to bring his entire battery into action. While he has been trying ranging shots the enemy field artillery has detected his presence and is attempting to locate him. When he does a field artillery dust ensues.

A field artillery gun when it is being well worked by regular troops will have one shell bursting on the target and two in the air at the same time. The first battalion of the Third field artillery can easily fire four rounds a minute, and Battery P of the battalion has a record of nine salvoes a minute.

In this case the enemy consists of an entrenched abattue of a battery of field artillery. Commencing at a range of 3,800 yards, shrapnel is poured in on the space extending the width of the battery until the entire space for the distance of 3,700 yards down to 3,600 yards is covered and the target is destroyed. This terrific fire has by German troops in the trenches on the western battle line in France been styled "thunder-bell."

Where the enemy's artillery is engaged in a duel with our batteries the infantry has again assumed the offensive. It has driven the enemy's lines back into the dense woods. Here it is directing a heavy fire against our infantry across a clear field. No great commander ever uselessly sacrifices a single soldier, and again the field artillery, which by this time has silenced the enemy's batteries, is called upon to support the infantry. There happens to be a good shelter for the artillery about half a mile in the rear of the battle front and our artillery dashes to it. From this comparatively short range the artillery pours a heavy fire into the woods, where the enemy has thrown up temporary entrenchments. Explosive shells are directed against the enemy's lines like streams from a fire engine hose. The artillery is now annihilating the fire of the enemy's infantry, and our troops, under the cover of this terrific rain of explosives, dash across the field and rout the enemy. The cavalry which has been guarding the flanks, or ends, of our lines is now ordered to the front and pursues the retreating enemy to capture as many

each gun and 6-inch howitzers. The regiment would scarcely be called heavy artillery as compared with the large guns that are being used by the European belligerents.

The same general principle of field artillery fire that would be used with guns of the calibre that are battering down fortifications and being used in entrenchments in Europe are being taught at Tobyhanna and the other field artillery schools. But the six regiments of regular field artillery are hardly sufficient training force for the field artillery which the European war has demonstrated this country should have.

Even for our little army there is a deficiency of light field artillery and the country has practically no heavy field artillery. To give the country what the experts call a "well balanced" army the field artillery should be as strong as the cavalry, and there are fifteen regiments of cavalry in the regular army. The most conservative estimate of an emergency increase for the light artillery and guns of the country. This is not taking into consideration the need of heavy field artillery, which the European war has proven is absolutely necessary for war with any great nation.

If the necessary legislation is passed for heavy field artillery it will be used on the Tobyhanna range. Without firing across a road, there are several ranges of seven and one-half miles at Tobyhanna. There are also hundred acres of the roughest country in Pennsylvania in the Tobyhanna reservation. Battle problems with the front of twenty miles can be worked out on the reservation, while regiments of field artillery can be concealed in the fastnesses of the mountains in a fixed manner as to test the skill of the most daring aviators.

In addition to its excellence as a field artillery range, Tobyhanna is especially adapted to training signal troops. This year a Signal Corps school for militia was conducted by the regular Signal Corps officers and men at Tobyhanna. All sorts of experiments were made with wireless telegraph and other signaling apparatus. One of the most important experiments was the use of a captive balloon in the direction of field artillery fire. The captain of a battery was sent up in a captive balloon and by the use of wireless telegraph directed the fire of his battery.

For the first time the Medical Reserve Corps of the army was mobilized at Tobyhanna. The Medical Reserve Corps is composed of several hundred of the most prominent physicians and surgeons of the country. About eighty of them attended a school conducted by the medical officers of the army at Tobyhanna this year. Specialists who at home are surrounded with a large corps of assistants and attendants submitted to the same discipline at Tobyhanna and lived in the same quarters as lieutenants of the regular Medical Corps.

of the regular troops are turned over to the national guards. The course of training given the militia begins with the most rudimentary instruction. The militia is first required to master the details of taking care of horses. A well trained field artilleryman must be a good horseman; he must know how to take care of his horses in the stable, must be a good rider like a cavalryman and a fearless and skilful driver.

His first work with the gun is a careful study of its parts and its intricate breech mechanism. Then there are three intricate sights on the gun, the most difficult to manage being the panoramic sight, which is used to estimate the deflection and direct the fire of the gun by using an aiming point, which is usually located in the rear of the battery.

Probably the most delicate instrument is the fuse setter, or corrector. This resembles a large pencil sharpener, into which the projectile is inserted and turned first in one direction and then in another until the fuse is set to burst the shell at the range and height prescribed by the commander of the battery. Dummy projectiles are used by the militia and in training the recruits for the regular army until it is apparent that they have reached some degree of proficiency at which it is safe to take the battery on the range and fire loaded projectiles. This comes usually at the end of the course of training for the militia. A militia battery which is able to do anything like slow, accurate firing at the end of a course at the Tobyhanna camp must apply itself and disregard the union hours of work. Hard work begins at Tobyhanna at half-past five A. M. and the horses are being put away by lantern light.

On account of the great factor that field artillery has been in the European war the militia schools of fire at Tobyhanna, and those at Sparta, Wis.; Annapolis, Md.; Fort Bliss, Okla.; Fort Riley, Kan., and the Presidio, Cal., have become of vital importance in our national defense. The field artillery of the regular army consists of six regiments, only one of which is classed as heavy artillery. This is armed with 4.7-prisoners as possible and to keep the enemy from reforming in a new battle line.

What has just been described is an object lesson which the regular field artillery gives the militia at the Tobyhanna school of fire. When the militia arrives at Tobyhanna the horses, equipment and guns each gun and 6-inch howitzers. The regiment would scarcely be called heavy artillery as compared with the large guns that are being used by the European belligerents.

The same general principle of field artillery fire that would be used with guns of the calibre that are battering down fortifications and being used in entrenchments in Europe are being taught at Tobyhanna and the other field artillery schools. But the six regiments of regular field artillery are hardly sufficient training force for the field artillery which the European war has demonstrated this country should have.

Even for our little army there is a deficiency of light field artillery and the country has practically no heavy field artillery. To give the country what the experts call a "well balanced" army the field artillery should be as strong as the cavalry, and there are fifteen regiments of cavalry in the regular army. The most conservative estimate of an emergency increase for the light artillery and guns of the country. This is not taking into consideration the need of heavy field artillery, which the European war has proven is absolutely necessary for war with any great nation.

If the necessary legislation is passed for heavy field artillery it will be used on the Tobyhanna range. Without firing across a road, there are several ranges of seven and one-half miles at Tobyhanna. There are also hundred acres of the roughest country in Pennsylvania in the Tobyhanna reservation. Battle problems with the front of twenty miles can be worked out on the reservation, while regiments of field artillery can be concealed in the fastnesses of the mountains in a fixed manner as to test the skill of the most daring aviators.

In addition to its excellence as a field artillery range, Tobyhanna is especially adapted to training signal troops. This year a Signal Corps school for militia was conducted by the regular Signal Corps officers and men at Tobyhanna. All sorts of experiments were made with wireless telegraph and other signaling apparatus. One of the most important experiments was the use of a captive balloon in the direction of field artillery fire. On Breaking the Advertising Ice

An advertising solicitor had made every possible effort, without apparent success, to induce the owner of a candy establishment to advertise in the daily papers. About eighty of them attended a school conducted by the medical officers of the army at Tobyhanna this year. Specialists who at home are surrounded with a large corps of assistants and attendants submitted to the same discipline at Tobyhanna and lived in the same quarters as lieutenants of the regular Medical Corps.

On advice of the advertising man copy was written offering a big reduction on certain candy for one day only. On the day of sale the candy advertised was kept out of the windows and abovecases, and it was agreed that advertising would be credited with all sales on that particular candy that was asked for at the price advertised.

The store was well situated, on a business thoroughfare, and was opened one hour earlier than usual on the day of sale. The next day the advertising man called and was amazed to learn that not a penny's worth of candy had been sold as a result of the advertisement. "I suppose, Mr. Candy Man," he said, "I can never induce you to believe that advertising can be made to increase your business."

"Quite the contrary," was the reply. "Now that the ice has been broken, it is my intention to give advertising a fair and thorough trial. I have been thinking this thing over seriously and am convinced that if I can't do something new I could bring them into my store."

A thorough advertising campaign was prepared and the first announcement appeared in the evening papers, offering on sale a brand new candy called "peanut brittle."

The sale was a great success; peanut brittle and the firm won instant public favor. The candy man is to-day a consistent advertiser.

IT'S A WHALE OF A YARN

AS if a nightmare of some Dutch painter? Well, it looked like one, but really was an old square rigged ship—blunt bows, and paint was only a memory. She came to anchor in the bay some days ago—the Lena Oepferdijk, of Amsterdam.

The Captain, short, good natured and brown as mahogany, spoke English well, as most of the Dutch can when they come in contact with the world. Nothing ever gets by the Dutch. And the Captain wore his boarding iron on a tarty glass of champagne.

"Well, you see, we were at Batavia, Sumatra," mused the Captain, "taking in a cargo of tobacco, spice and miscellaneous stuff, when we received orders to go to Melbourne, Australia, then to Honolulu and fill out our cargo and round the Horn to New York."

"We started in good shape, and all went well until we were about longitude 130 west, latitude 20 south, when the winds seemed to give out and we only barely moved. Friday night the animals got measly—we had a dog and a cat for luck—and the barometer dropped like lead. We made everything snug and tight, and soon we were running before the wind under bare poles to the southwest. There was a small coral island ahead, surrounded by barrier reefs, and the island itself an atoll, with water inside.

into the enclosed bay and in a few minutes had an anchor out and by good luck had a good hold.

"The next morning it cleared up—no breeze and a dead calm again. Early in the day a boat made from the shore, and, believe me, there was Robinson Crusoe and three Fridays—only they were Portuguese—and all of them were good pictures for a circus. Our cook could speak Portuguese, and soon we had their story."

"Captain Friday, as we chose to call him, related his story, which, shortened up, was as follows—

"We left Honolulu," said Captain Friday, "is a two-masted schooner for a cruise among the islands to gather copra and shells. It was the old story—a gale and a wreck. Out of a crew of seven four succeeded in getting to the island, and there was little there except brackish water and a few palms. Food was scarce, except shellfish and fish."

"We were fortunate in having saved a lot of the wreck of the schooner—pumps, some barrels, hose, sails, etc.—but lost all our compass, also our chronometers, and to try to reach unknown parts was foolhardy."

"After some months had passed and no sail in sight to give way, we set one good thing out way—another big gale, and to our surprise next day we found a big cow whale and a calf with her. We knew we had meat for at least some time. We decided to kill the calf and dry the meat, which is very much like coarse beef and very nourishing. The water in the lagoon was not more than seven fathoms deep, and while the old cow could swim around the island for some miles, she seemed to miss the opening to the sea. After lots of work we managed to kill the calf and get the meat dried for future use."

"The old cow seemed very much worried over the loss of the young one and came each evening to the shallow cove, with a good beach, where we had killed the calf, and we noticed that she would leak a lot of good milk from her over-full udder."

"The second day we succeeded in saving a lot of the milk by using a rubber hose with one of the pumps at the other end, and would fill from two to five barrels each day. So we had plenty of good fresh milk and cream, and in a short time we had butter in plenty, but could not make cheese, lacking knowledge and rennet to do so."

"This milking of the whale seemed to afford her great relief, and somehow to take the place of the calf, as far as her feelings were concerned, and soon she was quite tame and continued to come each evening to be milked."

"Captain Friday expressed his desire to return to the island again and try to take a drove of whales and start a canning factory for condensed milk, and I expect to hear from him before long."

CAMPAIGN NOW ON FOR CITY PRIMARY Election Occurs on September 30, One Week From Next Thursday—All the Candidates Are Now Busy.

The city primary takes place on September 30, the race will be over Thursday. The candidates are all ready and the campaign is on in real earnest. From now until the polls close on the evening of September 30, the race will be fought by those who have opposition, and those who are running alone will also keep up the handshaking, for, as the astute politician once said, "the next time you may have opposition, and the voters will remember that you didn't shake hands before."

The city primary is known as the "white primary." It was organized about twenty years ago, and since that time it has been the basis of the city government. All factions got together and agreed to abolish the Australian ballot system. It was also agreed to elect every ward a democratic primary, but such is not the case.

The Ward Nominations. The "white primary" adopted another new rule, which was to let each ward elect or nominate its own candidates, while the city-at-large voters elect the aldermen. The city charter provides that the city shall elect its aldermen and councilmen. This change was made in the charter after the war. It was found that some of the wards elected negroes to council under the old system, and the "white primary" only restored what the city charter originally provided in the election of councilmen.

This year there will be nominated in the "white primary" three aldermen, ten councilmen and a general manager of the waterworks. The general manager of the waterworks, "Zode" Smith, has no opposition. The only city hall millionaire who is elected this year. Two of the aldermen have opposition to the fifth and tenth wards. The other, in the first ward, is without opposition.

Here is the list of candidates: For general manager of the waterworks, W. Zode Smith. For alderman in the first ward, J. R. Sawright, who stands for re-election without opposition. He is a retired capitalist.

For alderman from the fifth ward, J. D. Bisson, William E. Besser and C. G. Sisson. Bisson is with the National Gin company, and has served in the council. Bisson is a merchant. C. G. Sisson is a furniture dealer.

For alderman from the second ward, Nelson T. Spratt and G. D. Hannah. Spratt is a manufacturer, and Hannah a retired capitalist.

For councilman from the third ward, Charles Alverson, who stands for re-election without opposition. He is a merchant.

For council from the second ward, J. L. Poole, who has no opposition. He is a retired grocer.

For council from the third ward, W. Woodall, C. P. L. Harling, Woodall and Harling are in the real estate business, and Woodall is a retail grocery merchant.

For council from the fourth ward, A. W. Farthing and W. G. Dillon. Farthing stands for re-election, and is a retired capitalist. Dillon is a lawyer.

The Race in the First. For council from the fifth ward, A. C. Burton and Leonard Bell. Burton is in the mercantile business. Bell is a railroad man.

For council from the sixth ward, Dr. E. J. Tracy, a dentist, and Thomas Lynch, an insurance man.

For council from the seventh ward, Slim L. Dallas and J. N. Landers. Dallas is in the real estate business, and Landers is a contractor.

For council from the eighth ward, Frank Reynolds, who stands for re-election without opposition.

For council from the ninth ward, S. P. Davidson and J. L. Carpenter. Both Reynolds and Davidson are in the real estate business.

For council from the tenth ward, T. Peacock and Carl Dolvin. Peacock is a professor in the Georgia Tech, and Dolvin is in the insurance business.

RECITAL AT ARMORY WILL BE RENDERED BY ORGANIST KRAFT

The program for this afternoon's free organ recital at the Auditorium-Armory will assemble there in large numbers Atlanta music lovers who appreciate the highest class of music and who have come to look forward with anticipation to Dr. Kraft's artistic interpretations on the organ.

Competitions for the city's best artists, such as Wagner, Greg, Von Weber, Tschakowsky, appear on the program for today, and the recital will begin as usual at 4 o'clock. The following is the program: "The Merry Widow"—Overture to "Der Freischutz"—Alto Dvorak—"Humoresque"—Richard Wagner—"Liederen from Tristan and Isolde."

Dr. Kraft's many friends will regret to learn that next Sunday will be his last concert in Atlanta, and he is leaving for the north to accept one of the highest and most important positions in the United States.

Oldest School "Mam" In Atlanta Retires And Secures Pension

Miss Mattie Andrews, the oldest school teacher in point of service in Atlanta's school system, has retired upon a pension.

Miss Andrews is the third school teacher to be pensioned by the authorities since the inauguration of the public school system. At the time of her retirement she was assistant principal of the Crew street school, which she had taught for thirty-three years ago.

POLICE PERSONALS BY WILLOU TORRES

A WORTHY CITIZEN

Atlanta policemen are mourning the death of one of the most faithful servants of the late City Police, Patrolman Mary Bornefeld, who died Friday night at Grand Hospital.

While her work necessarily brought her in contact with hundreds of women of scarlet character, Mrs. Bornefeld never failed to have a kind word for all these unfortunate. Many of them in time of sore distress would appeal to her for aid, and the little woman would seize the opportunity to better their lives. In addition to helping hundreds of young girls on whom the market stamp had not yet been placed, these unfortunate women were always sent to the home of the good Shepherd, at Cincinnati, and Mrs. Bornefeld, when they appeared to her always managed to raise railroad fare for them to go on their way to the women's work as her "hobby."

Mrs. Bornefeld came to America from Hildesheim, Germany, after the death of her parents, when but a girl 15 years of age. She lived in New York, making her own way in life until her marriage. She moved to Atlanta, and after a short stay there, her first husband died. She later married Charles Bornefeld, a bricklayer, who died fourteen years ago.

There is not an Atlanta who knew her but they will be grieved at the news of her death.

MRS. MARY BORNEFELD

After an illness of several months at the home of her only daughter, Mrs. John Zimmerman, who resides on a little farm near Decatur, Ga. A squadron of mounted policemen will today do honor to her memory.

"MAYOSM": ITS MEANING.

There is a new "ism" arising in Atlanta. Its name is "Mayosm," and the spirit of this new creed is not shown in sackcloth, but in the person of a police officer, who is known as Chief of Police W. M. Mayo. In Atlanta are daily leaving the making of "Mayosm," which is a "M" of Harmony.

For police efficiency—Chief Mayo has established his school for policemen known as "Mayo University," and policemen are being taught to enforce the laws and to more competently furnish protection to the liberty and property of the citizens better equipped in habits.

For harmony—The police board has been organized and made together, as never in the history of Atlanta for that matter, which will make for the betterment of the department.

For justice—Chief Mayo has a strict patrolman to be courteous to citizens at all times, to take the attitude that they are "citizens" as the people, raising their "sticks" as the police chief.

When the full meaning of the term "Mayosm" dawns upon Atlantans, everyone will take their hats off to the new police chief.

J. W. Mashburn and T. L. Bain, the officers against whom charges were preferred for leaving three boys in the station house and not calling their parents were first due for a reprimand from the chief. Later the charges were dropped and the boys were dismissed, and no reprimand administered.

Chief Mayo is now to be seen riding in his new automobile bought for the police executive by the city fathers. Chief Mayo states that the Atlanta police department is now strictly up-to-date.

Candidate Guy Lindsay, who is running for the office of supervisor of Atlanta's Police Relief Association, is still in the lead.

Four call men are now on duty at police headquarters on the evening watch. They are Lon Evans, Buford Haislett, Sam Webb and George Wylie.

John Graham, of Piedmont park fame, has been placed at the station house as turnkey on the morning watch. Former Turnkey Ricketts is working a lot on North Pryor street.

The uniform committee of the police board will confer with Chief Mayo in the near future relative to buying uniforms for the patrolmen for this winter. The new winter uniforms will be in blue.

$5,000 in Prizes Offered By the Southeastern Fair

On Wednesday of the big week in November the Southeastern fair will open its doors to the public, and put on the biggest cattle show that has ever been seen in the south.

The fair management is offering $500 in cash prizes, and has already been assured of more than $100 head of the finest Hereford cattle in America. Many of the cattle on exhibition at the fair will come direct from the San Francisco exposition, and will be prize winners from the big fair in California.

On any day during the fair there will be a sale of big fair in California. There will also be a sale of Berkshire, Poland China and other well-known swine breeds.

The Southeastern fair grounds have announced the most beautiful in the south and will be completed at that time, which will be completed at that time, which will be completed at that time.

Mayo states that he is going to have a full review when the uniforms arrive.

POOLE FIREMASTER. Captain Poole is always the first to get on the job at fire and with the aid of his men keeps strict fire lines on the evening watch.

O SHADES OF FIRE. Sergeant George Bullard, one of the most popular officers in the city of Atlanta, will soon be "sporting" a moustache.

UNDER STOVEWOOD WHISKY IS FOUND IN WALKER'S HOME

Under a pile of stovewood in a deep hole into which had been hidden a large barrel, twenty full quarts of Kentucky mountain whiskey were discovered Friday night at No. 25 Piedmont avenue by City Detectives Burnett and Moon.

John Walker, colored, the alleged proprietor of the place, was tried in the police court Saturday afternoon for running a blind tiger. The officers told how they found the blind tiger deep down under stovewood and in a barrel in a hole in the ground. They also found a bag and festive crowd of merry-makers at Walker's home, some of whom swore that they had drunk some of the Kentucky mountain dew and said for it.

Reverend Johnson fined Walker $17 and half him for the state crime in a $100 bond.

P. J. LOWE ESTATE GOES INTO COURTS

A legal fight involving prominent citizens of Atlanta and Marietta has been launched over the estate of the late P. J. Lowe, late an one of the wealthiest capitalists of Cobb county, who died in 1912.

A portion of the estate portions of the late P. J. Lowe, who was married to Mrs. M. J. Lowe, was divided by the probate court, resulting in the estate being divided into two parts, one of which was made over to Mr. Sam H. Little and Dr. M. J. Hargrett, and the other to the widow of Mr. Lowe, Mrs. M. J. Hargrett.

A similar action was taken in Cobb county by T. J. Lowe, a son of the deceased, and Mrs. J. B. Hargrett, a daughter, both of whom live in Atlanta. Mr. Hargrett, who is the executor of the estate, has filed a petition in the probate court for a decree of partition of the estate.

POPULAR CANDIDATES IN CITY PRIMARY

THIRD WARD COUNCIL CANDIDATES

I am in the race for Council in the Third Ward and respectfully ask your vote and influence. I hope to be able to see you in person between now and election day, but as the time is short I may not be able to see everybody. I belong to no class, clique or combine, and if elected will be free and untrammelled to serve the people of this great city. The City of Atlanta is a great business corporation, and its affairs should be in the hands of honest, practical business men. I am a self-made business man, and have spent my entire business life in Atlanta. Having met with good success in my own affairs, I feel that I am qualified to help run the business of Atlanta in a practical, sensible and economical manner. The time has come to put aside discord and strife, and to get down to business for the general good of the city of Atlanta. My platform will be, "No Hot Air, but Hard Work." Hoping that you can see your way clear to give me your vote, I remain, Very sincerely yours, E. L. HARLING.

His Friends Are Going to Elect Him

FOR COUNCIL—THIRD WARD Mr. Camp is one of the city's live grocery merchants. He has made a success. He puts his whole heart in all the work he undertakes. He has given freely of his time and money to every good movement for Atlanta. He has been the proven friend of the clerks and the working classes of the city. He will make a wide-awake, active, honest, fearless and able member of the City Council. He will appreciate your support.

FIRST WARD CANDIDATE FOR COUNCIL

CHARLES ALVERSON. A champion is paid Mr. Alverson, in that his friends and neighbors in the first ward are returning him to council without opposition. However, he will be deeply appreciative of the votes of his ward.

SIXTH WARD CANDIDATE FOR COUNCIL

THOMAS L. LYNCH. Mr. Lynch has served the city well and faithfully in the office of the Second Ward. His friends in the Sixth Ward point to his record in the past as evidence of his progressive, wide-awake business man, they believe he will make them an exceptionally good representative. They are active in his behalf and he and his friends will appreciate the votes and influence of the warders in the coming primary.

FOURTH WARD CANDIDATE FOR COUNCIL

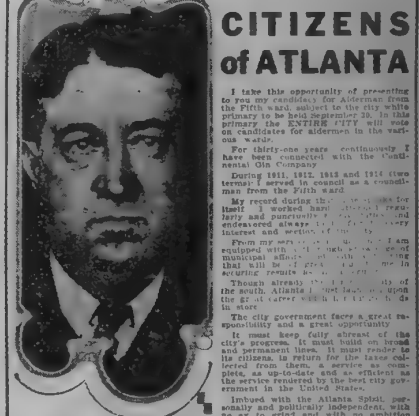

WALTER S. DILLON. Stands for the rapid completion of Highland Avenue from Jackson street to Piedmont park. Building Auditor avenue underground. For an ordinance that will stop the residential encroachment of the business in the ward. Extension of Highland avenue from Fort street to Courtland. Against a raise in the tax rate.

FIFTH WARD CANDIDATES FOR ALDERMAN

N. C. TOMPKINS A LIVE BUSINESS MAN FOR FIFTH WARD ALDERMAN PRINTING Election work given special attention. If you need a rush job on your cards, ballots or badges, phone him. Strongly Indorsed by the Business Element of Atlanta City Salesmen and Members of the T. P. A. Are Actively For Him

BELL M. 795 He Can Put the Label on Your Work 16 West Alabama St. WILLIAM E. BESSER A resident of Atlanta for 25 years. For the past eleven years a successful merchant on Bellwood avenue, in the Fifth Ward. He is a clever, honest, clean-cut business man, who will render efficient service to the city. He will appreciate your support. The entire city votes on Aldermen.

TO THE CITIZENS OF ATLANTA

JOHN D. SISSON. I take this opportunity of presenting to you my candidacy for Alderman from the Fifth Ward in the city wide primary to be held September 30. In this primary the entire city will vote on candidates for aldermen in the wards. For thirty-one years continuously I have been connected with the "Business Old Company." During 1911, 1912, 1913 and 1914 (two terms) served in council as an alderman from the Fifth Ward. My record during the past few years has been such that I have endeavored always to be a progressive, wide-awake business man. From my own efforts I have secured a number of municipal improvements, such as the widening of streets, the improvement of the water supply, and the securing of the city's water supply. Through already having served in the office of the South Atlantic Railway, and the Georgia Railway, I have had a wide knowledge of the city's needs. The city government faces a great responsibility, and it is my duty to see that it is properly discharged. It must keep fully abreast of the city's progress, it must build broad and permanent roads. It must render to the citizens as a return for the taxes collected from them an efficient and economical government in the United States. Imbued with the Atlanta spirit, personally and politically independent, I wish to see as well as an ambitious endeavor to see that the city is a model of private and official citizenship. I submit my candidacy to you. I am, Respectfully, JOHN D. SISSON. The area and population of the city and the shortness of time until the primary make it impossible for me to see in person all of the voters of my ward.

Baldwin Piano Co., Southern Division, Atlanta, Ga.

It gives me great pleasure to say that the forty-two Ellington piano and Baldwin Concert Grand just installed in the college are not only up to specifications, but are far in excess of our expectations.

Wesleyan Conservatory is proud to own such an equipment as it now possesses in the new Ellington piano and Baldwin Concert Grand. The most critical examination of the piano after they have been placed in the studios and practice rooms leaves us with a feeling of wonder regarding the remarkable evenness of so many instruments.

Officers and Faculty of Big College Highly Pleased With New Instruments.

W. C. Willis, southern representative of the Baldwin Piano company, with headquarters in Atlanta, was just returned from a trip to Macon, where he installed in the Wesleyan college forty-two Ellington pianos and one Baldwin concert grand.

These pianos were the officers and faculty of the college with the president of the Baldwin company's pianos, they were particularly well pleased with the new piano which will be shipped to the college in the near future.

One of the best evidences of returning prosperity in Macon, Ga., is the large enrollment this year at Wesleyan college. It is estimated that there are more than 1,000 students in the conservatory department, in addition to the regular college students.

The Baldwin pianos were shipped to Atlanta Friday, and will be shipped to Macon on Saturday. The Baldwin pianos were taken from the collection of the Baldwin company, and were selected from the best of the instruments with inquiries from dealers and from individuals desiring to buy them.

It is another evidence that people are feeling better and that they are going to use pianos over and over and there is no doubt that they will have enough gains in them.

With accident trouble, have again resumed the road.

WESLEYAN COLLEGE ENDORSES BALDWIN PRODUCTS

WESLEYAN COLLEGE, CHARLESTON, S.C. REV. C. R. JENKINS, President. JOSEPH MAERZ, Director.

Wesleyan Conservatory of Music Macon, Georgia

Baldwin Piano Co., Southern Division, Atlanta, Ga.

It gives me great pleasure to say that the forty-two Ellington piano and Baldwin Concert Grand just installed in the college are not only up to specifications, but are far in excess of our expectations.

Wesleyan Conservatory is proud to own such an equipment as it now possesses in the new Ellington piano and Baldwin Concert Grand. The most critical examination of the piano after they have been placed in the studios and practice rooms leaves us with a feeling of wonder regarding the remarkable evenness of so many instruments.

Well-Known C. H. S. Man Says a Tidal Wave of Prosperity Is About to Hit Us.

R. C. Paterson, the irreplaceable and energetic United States salesman for the popular R. B. T. Cigarettes, and also manager for the Thomas Brothers company, manufacturers of rose-tipped cigarettes, has just returned to the city after a trip of several weeks through the east, spending most of his time in and around New York.

He is just bubbling over with enthusiastic talk, and is predicting a great revival of business, which he says is now ready to sweep over the country.

He has never seen anything like it in New York and other big eastern cities, and he is sure that it will come to this city in the near future.

WINDY FINE EXAMPLE OF HUSTLE AND THRIFT

Best Business in Ten Years at Robinson's

There is no man in New York, in company with J. Robinson and J. M. Robinson, who has done more for the city of Atlanta in the past year than any other man.

There was every evidence of the truth of the statement, for piled high on every floor were great stacks of goods for which orders had been received, but which the packing and shipping clerk had not been able to get in time.

"We are going to have to put on a night force to pack and get our goods out, and we have no money to pay for it," said Mr. Robinson, who has been in the city for the past week or so, and who has been in the city for the past week or so.

The Robinson company is a leading manufacturer of shirts, factory department, which will give additional employment to a large number of men.

"We just had to make this addition to our equipment to keep up with the orders we are receiving," said the president of the company.

One of the attractive departments of the J. M. Robinson company in the future is to be its piece goods department. This department is the supervision of C. J. Williamson, who only recently joined the Robinson company.

The editor of the Flying Line had the pleasure a few days ago of paying a visit to the thriving little city of Windy, Ga., and the amount of business and enterprise he found there was almost a revelation to him.

Perhaps in no other city the size of Windy in this country could be found more progressive people or more well established and successful manufacturing plants. Chief among the latter in this little north Georgia city is the Bell Overall company.

This enterprise has been growing and prospering until now its goods are shipped over many states of this country, and its sales are in a model one as pertaining to light, ventilated plants. Chief among the latter in this little north Georgia city is the Bell Overall company.

It is planning in the near future to build a large addition to his property near the Seaboard depot of the Bell Overall company.

Raising Corn and Fighting Barleycorn in the Sunset of His Life, the Old Ring General Is a Champion Still. He Buried All His Belligerent Instincts for the Woman He Loves. Even the Scrappy Game Roosters That Reminded Him of Halcyon Days Went Into a Pot Stew

"There's Only One Recipe for a Happy Marriage and I'll Give It in Two Words—Pull Together"

Here is the Woman Who Married the Former World's Champion Fighter Only After He Showed Her, in a Five Year Fight, That He Could Beat John Barleycorn.

By ANDREW WATRES FORD.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—John L. Sullivan, looming large over a very small table in the restaurant of the Hotel Hermitage, denounced the other day of his farm, his family, his views on woman suffrage, his philosophy of marriage, the superiority of artificial fertilizers, the rum demon, of the necessity for the segregation of women stenographers and of the frightful ingratitude of ganders.

He was most eloquent on the subject of ganders. But, after all, the ganders must take their turn.

John L. was just in from the farm which he had left in the capable hands of Mrs. Kate Sullivan, his wife, that he might undertake a lecture engagement to light what he considers the greatest evil of American life—alcoholism—for John L. has challenged the "Demon Rum" to a fight to a finish.

Sullivan and the "Demon" are old friends—lovers once, but strangers now, as the song sayeth. John L. says himself that he has swallowed—or at least paid for—a million dollars' worth of booze in his time, but it has been ten years since he has taken a drink.

What is the answer? Find the woman, of course.

To look for her you need go no further than a mile out of North Abington, Mass., where Mrs. Kate Sullivan is now putting up a winter's supplies of jam and pickles and tomato catsup.

Beats John Barleycorn.

Ten years ago when John L. Sullivan asked the love of his youth—a middle-aged woman employed in a private school in Boston—to be his wife, the comely Irish woman answered: "Never—while you have anything to do with prize fighting or liquor."

For a long time John L. pleaded his suit in vain. Mars languished at the feet of Venus, and it was not until he had promised to take a pledge of total abstinence for five years that the woman who is now Mrs. Sullivan consented to become his wife at the end of the period of probation. Jacob sinned fourteen years for Rachel, and it may be those five long years seemed like fourteen to John L. Sullivan, good sport and good fellow. But at the end of that time John L. and the woman he loved were married. It is five years now since the wedding occurred, and John L. says he has forgotten the taste of whiskey and the Christian names of his ancient and particular enemy, champagne.

Famous man everyting of the pomp of greatness and the admiration not mingled with envy of their lesser fellows have frequently taken to their farms to seek among friendly cabbages and waving corn fields serenity to crown old age.

"Me for the words, says I to myself when I quit," John L. began his story. "So I looked about Massachusetts for a farm and found just what I wanted—seventy acres about a mile out of North Abington and not very far from Boston, where I was born."

It was Mrs. Sullivan found the farm, John's manager, Darcy O'Connor, interrupted in the interest of truth and accuracy.

"Sure, she found it," Farmer Sullivan answered, "but I give her the dough, didn't I? Very well, then. I have a couple of hired men to help get in the crops and I have my two little adopted boys—John Jr., he's 6, and William Kelly, he's 12, and a great help with the chores already. And there's the boss of the ranch, Kate Sullivan! I want to correct the impression that my wife was a school-teacher when I married her," John L. interpolated. "She's a bright woman with a good common school education, but she's no high-brow. She worked in a private school in Boston, but she didn't teach there. And now she looks after the hens and the eggs and the children and makes a happy home for John L. Sullivan. And I try to make a happy home for her. How do I do it? Well, there is only one recipe for a happy marriage, and I'll give it to you in two words: 'Pull together.'"

"Once I had some fighting roosters," John L. confided sadly. "There was one fellow that would fly at anybody that came near him but me. He was a terror, and he would lick any rooster for miles around. But Mrs. Sullivan doesn't like fighters. She wouldn't marry me till I quit the ring. And one day when I had gone to North Abington she had all the roosters killed."

"She was the same way about a scrappy gander I had. But I didn't blame her so much about that fellow—Bill was his name—for he didn't know the meaning of the word gratitude. No gander does. You should have seen him, though, when I first had him. He'd follow me around the farm just like a dog, and every morning he'd come and honk outside my window and he'd say to me, 'Get up, John L., get up, John L., and I'd pull myself out of bed and go and feed him. Then one day a fellow from New York came out to the farm for a visit. And he looked at that gander, and he says to me: 'John L., it's cruel to keep that gander living the life of a lifeless old bachelor. You should get him

The Philosophy of a Fighter

THEY say there are not so many happy marriages in these days as there were in our mothers' and fathers' time. How could there be with young fellows running around with their pants rolled up to their knees to show their silk socks? Don't blame the girls. It's the young fellows with their rollo sport shirts and their wrist watches.

I BELIEVE in votes for women, but I don't believe in them holding office. Politics may be all right for the ladies, but politicians are not fit for them to have about.

THERE'S only one way to lick John Barleycorn and that's to run away from him. If I hadn't quit and gone to farming with my good wife there'd be a modest tombstone with an inscription: "Sacred to the memory of John L. Sullivan."

a couple of geese.' You know what those New Yorkers are. Well, I thought no more about it. But that fellow came back to New York and it seems he did nothing but think how he could corrupt the morals of that gander of mine. And one day I got word that there was a crate of live stock at the express office in North Abington for me. And I drove over. And it was six plump, lively young geese, looking as if they had just stepped out of the Ziegfeld Folies. Well, I took them out to the farm and Bill fell for them. He fell for two of them, that is. The other four he would never look at."

It seemed possible that the psychology of Bill the gander's preference might shed an interesting side light on the much-disputed phenomenon of sexual selection.

"Did Bill choose the prettiest two geese for his wives?" I asked Farmer Sullivan. "Something like a snort of derision broke from the farmer's lips. 'Sure, how do I know?' he asked. 'Do you expect me to qualify as an expert on the beauty of geese? I'm no gander, am I? But what I was going to tell you was that Bill got scrappy just as soon as he was married. And whenever my wife would go out to the poultry yard he would scream and fly at her. And one night I went out to the barn and he flew at me and gave me an awful nip on the leg. So we had to kill him. Matrimony was his downfall, as it's been the finish of many a better fellow."

"I'm no woman hater, never think that," John L. replied. "I honor the ladies. I believe in votes for women, but I don't believe in their holding office. And let me tell you, if I had my way, wherever there were lady stenographers around a political headquarters or a city hall I'd keep 'em in a room all by themselves where they wouldn't be compelled to hear the language that is used by some politicians."

John L.'s Message.

"Men come into political headquarters and such places when they have been drinking, and no man knows what he will say or do when he is drunk. I've swallowed a million dollars' worth of booze in my time and I know what I'm talking about. If I hadn't quit when I did and gone to farming with my good wife there'd be somewhere outside of Boston a modest tombstone with the inscription on it: 'Sacred to the Memory of John L. Sullivan.' Because I know that, I have quit the farm and 'come back' so as to have a 'go' with a bigger champion than I ever was—the champion of the world and of all time—John Barleycorn. There's only one way to lick John Barleycorn, and that's to run away from him. There are men who say about liquor that they can take it or let it alone. But such fellows always take it. And in the end it gets them."

Confessions of an Auto Bandit

WHY CRIME IS A LOSING GAME

Herewith Is Presented the First of the Most Remarkable Narratives of the Underworld Ever Printed. The Causes, Methods and the Ultimate Futility of Crime Are Set Forth Graphically by One of the Most Daring Operators the Police Have Ever Known. He Is Now an Honest Citizen of a Big Metropolis. If Crime Proved a Losing Game for This Man It Must Fail for All.

FOREWORD

THE author of these articles is "Joe" Taylor, a reformed convict. Two years ago Taylor turned the police force of New York upside down. He was a daylight automobile bandit of the most daring type. When he was finally brought to justice Judge Warren W. Foster, General Sessions, in imposing sentence said: "Taylor, you are the most remarkable and desperate criminal ever arraigned before me." George S. Dougherty, the noted international detective, then deputy commissioner of the New York police department, accused Taylor of the murder of Adolph Stern. But Taylor has never committed the capital offense, and the famous "Jacob Jovell case," in which Stern was slain, remains one of the unsolved murder mysteries of a great city.

By Joseph Taylor.

It is my belief that general public enlightenment upon the acts and motives of those who commit crime must result in making reform more easy of accomplishment.

If I, in my childhood, had been taught ethics—a moral standard alike applicable to every American boy and girl regardless of their parents' religion and at the same time in no wise militating against religious creed—I not only believe I could have learned moral values as readily as I did the multiplication tables but also feel certain I never would have turned to crime for a livelihood later on in life.

A great many criminologist theorists insist that crime is evidence of mental disease. For example, they claim that the habitual pickpocket, safe-blower or holdup man is not sane.

My personal experience and careful observation of innumerable criminals do not square with this theory.

The average habitual offender approaches his law-breaking with about the same impulse to gain a livelihood as does the average business man his operations, and the powers of mind of the former are as healthy and normal as the legitimate seeker after wealth.

The difference between them is the dissimilarity of moral standards, and no mental disease, unless ignorance be so called, prevents the thief from becoming a useful member of society if he receives proper enlightenment.

ONE night in the summer of 1912 I met John Q— in a saloon. We had known each other for years.

John is a big, upstanding man, well calculated to impersonate a detective lieutenant of police for the purpose of blackmailing timid violators of law—man-made and natural moral ones. He made considerable money by this means, had a police record and underworld reputation as a "shaker-down" of "mice" (degenerates). John is now operating a private detective agency in New York City.

On the night I speak of one of his brothers was shot by a policeman while resisting arrest for disorderly conduct, and John swore he would spend a thousand dollars to "fix" the ball—instigating broadly that the cop would be killed.

Hands John a Jolt.

Waiting a chance for a private talk with Q—I called him aside and said: "John, for $500 cash I will croak this cop for you as soon as you show me the dough and point him out to me."

The incident must have impressed him that I was a bad man, because early in September I received word from him to come to see him, and he introduced me to a Joe R— as "the one man who can turn your trick."

Joe had the dope on a daylight holdup in a city thoroughfare and wanted some one to go through with it on his tip for a commission. He had, he said, "followed the money" and knew all about it. Had inside information from employes and seen it deposited in the bank.

Every Monday morning at 9:30 Poppa, head of the firm Poppa & Gray, 417 West Seventeenth street, New York, walking alone, carried a hand satchel containing a week's factory receipts, amounting to about $12,000 in currency—no checks—from his office to the North avenue corner, 200 feet away. Here he boarded a street car on his way to the New York County Bank at Fourteenth street and Eighth avenue, three blocks south and one east.

I decided to attempt the robbery, using an automobile for a getaway. I selected Tom C—, a merry thief, to assist me. On Saturday, Sept. 21, 1912, Tom introduced me to Frank A—, an Italian chauffeur, also a graduate of Elmira reformatory.

A— said effusively that he was glad to meet people who would go through with a job of this kind.

He impressed me as being an excellent prospective co-worker where an automobile getaway from dangerous work would be needed. He said he had his own car to work with, so we three met by appointment the following afternoon—Sunday—to look over the actual spot where the holdup was to occur.

Early Monday morning Joe R—, Tom C— and I were at Elizabeth and Prince streets, where A— soon joined us. "That big red car is the best to use," said A— to me, indicating one of two empty touring cars standing down the street. "It," he continued, "belongs to my cousin and he will drive it. He is a good kid, is used to this kind of work, has lately done getaways with that wagon, and I will sit alongside of him on the front seat."

"Well, then," I inquired, "how about the license number?" "Just you leave it to that kid; he knows something. That is a phony number he has on and after the job he will put his own back on," was the smooth assurance I got. "And, say," he added, "don't try to talk to him; he is a wop and can't speak good English."

I planned to have the car stationed, engine running, facing south at the Eighteenth street corner at 8:15 sharp.

A— was to watch me as I stood on the Seventeenth street corner, waiting for the appearance of Mr. Poppa with bag in hand, leaving his office door to come in my direction for his street car.

As soon as I signaled, by removing my hat from my head, the auto was to come down Ninth avenue, slowly, toward Seventeenth street, while I proceeded to intercept Poppa, take the bag of money from him and turn back to board the slow-moving motor car as it reached the corner and so make my escape.

Every Man to His Post.

Joe R— stood opposite me on a corner to signal me his identification of Poppa (whom I had never seen) and upon so doing to turn quickly, enter and remain in a saloon during the actual holdup, with the unsuspecting bartender as a possible alibi witness.

Tom C— I stationed to loiter fifty feet from the corner, 150 feet from the office door.

To Tom I said: "When Poppa passes you ten feet step behind him and if he turns to run with the bag put your gun to his head, but don't fire at him. Let me do the shooting if any be necessary."

At 9:15 our auto was in position, Joe R— on the corner, Tom C— at his designated spot, and I at mine—all set for the robbery.

At 9:18 Poppa & Gray's office door opened, a big man, above the average height, weighing well over 200 pounds, walked out briskly, passing Tom and I.

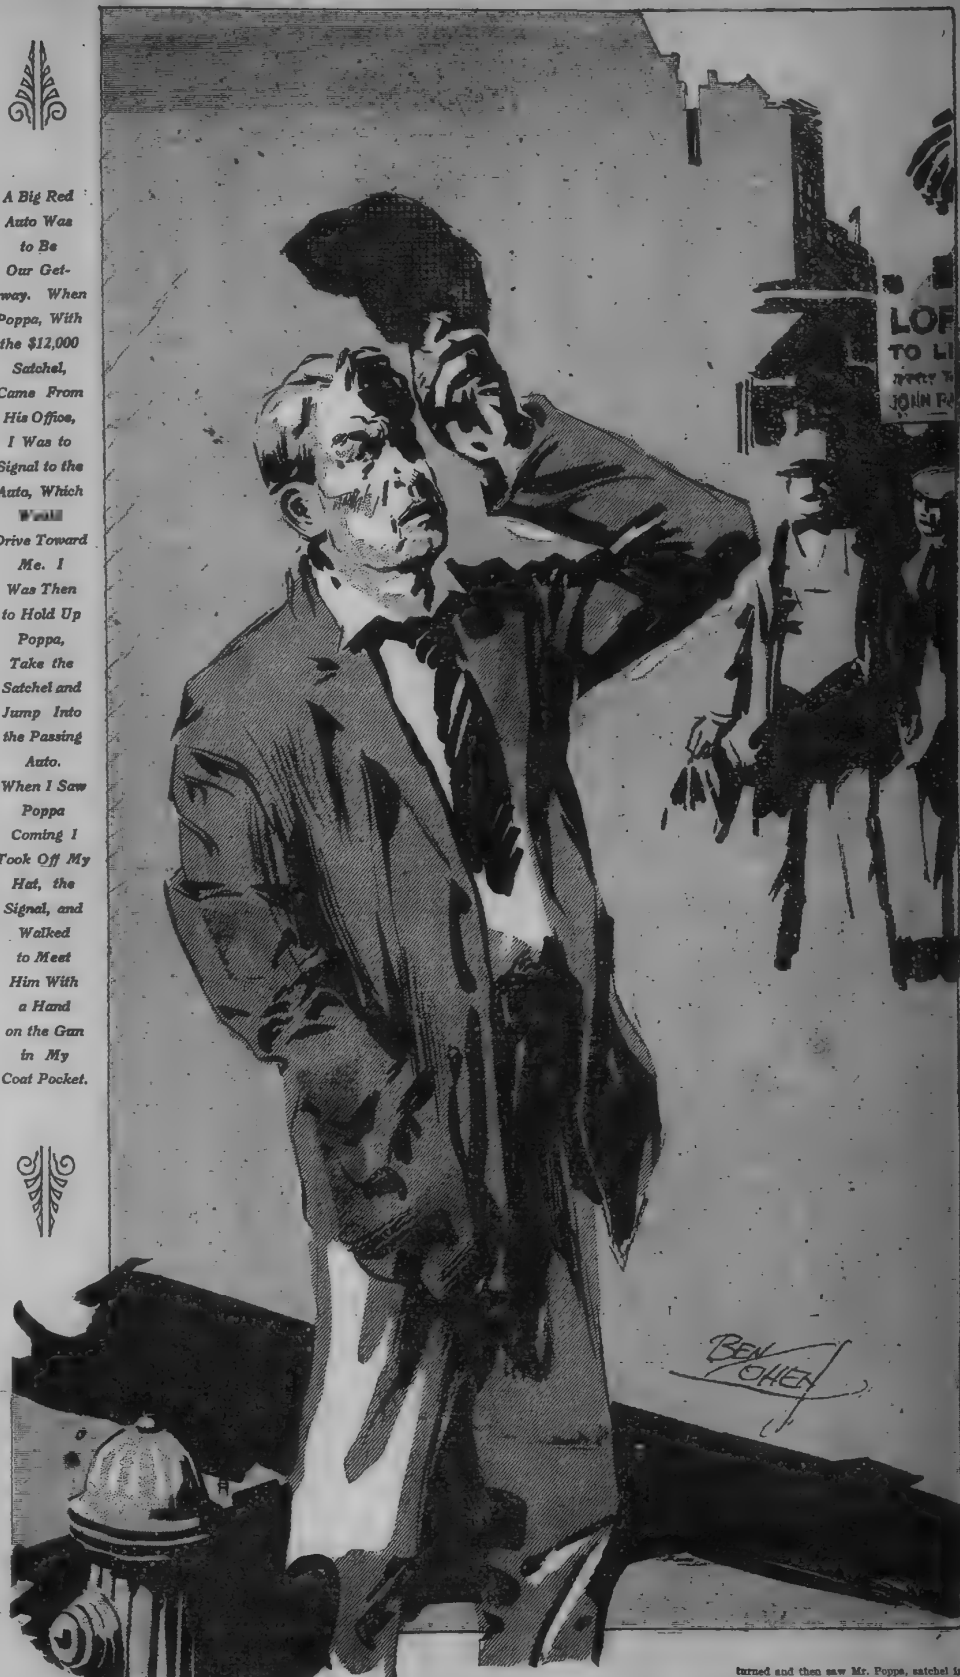

He was in shirt sleeves, empty handed and went into a grocery store, whence he emerged shortly with a newly bought broom. Glancing over to Joe I saw him signal me that this man was our prospective victim.

As Poppa passed me the second time on his way back to his office I noticed a uniformed policeman, on patrol, walking leisurely down the avenue toward me. He turned the corner, passing me, Tom and the factory, coming to a stop two doors beyond in front of a freestone there.

He stood there chatting idly with two city firemen, fifty feet from the office and 250 feet from me.

"Right at this spot turning in at our block caused A— to think the job was off, because he left his cousin in the auto and came down to me. "What's the matter?" I demanded of

A Big Red Auto Was to Be Our Getway. When Poppa, With the $12,000 Satchel, Came From His Office, I Was to Signal to the Auto, Which Would Drive Toward Me. I Was Then to Hold Up Poppa, Take the Satchel and Jump Into the Passing Auto. When I Saw Poppa Coming I Took Off My Hat, the Signal, and Walked to Meet Him With a Hand on the Gun in My Coat Pocket.

him, sharply. "Are you afraid of a measly harness bull?" "Why, I didn't know," he stammered. Then asked me: "Are you going to do it with the cop right there?"

"Look here, Frank," I said. "If you want to do this job now say so, and if not say not. Make up your mind and tell me." "It's up to you," he replied. "Then go back and sit in the car, and when I take off my hat start down here with it." He went back and stood by the hood, talking to his cousin, who had remained at the wheel. So concluding all was well I burned and then saw Mr. Poppa, satchel in hand, stepping out of his office. Taking off my hat, I waved the signal for the auto to start down, saw A— nod his head "all right" and walked to meet Poppa with a hand on the gun in my coat pocket. (To be continued next week.) Tomorrow! Your Presence Is Requested in Witnessing the Opening Display of Fall Fashions!

AND we've no excuses, no regrets to offer for this fall showing. We feel quite confident—just as confident as a child at its birthday party—that every one will have a good time—that every one will agree with us that the FALL FASHIONS ARE REALLY COMPLETE AT THIS STORE. For forty-eight years—almost half a century—this store has been faithfully serving the public. For forty-eight years the constant and unflinching efforts of every employee have been toward better service to you—and to your neighbor. Achievement requires time and effort—and having achieved we repeat again that we feel elated over the results we have gained and shall present to you tomorrow. During these years permanent and invaluable buying connections have been made; the finest manufacturers in the industry contribute their products; imported articles from the entire world are at your disposal; and all—everything—is here for your examination. Look about leisurely, examine as you will; meet your friends, and feel at home. Informality will reign everywhere during the next three days of the opening.

Dresses, Suits, Coats and Waists—All New!

IT WOULD be useless and impossible to attempt to describe the particulars of wearing apparel for the coming season. Suits, Dresses, etc., have their own individual characteristics—the entire showing should be viewed to obtain correct fashion impressions.

Milady's Fall Suit Is Here Street & Afternoon Dresses

Throughout the fall showing there runs a tendency toward the plainer and more severe models, Paris styles (and from Paris styles our own American models draw their features) reflect the mental attitude of the foreign lady. Quiet tones of navy, brown, green and the always staple blacks are shown very strongly. Shades of gray and plaids and checks also meet with favor.

Plain serges, and serges combined with plain or plaid taffetas, all taffeta and charmeuse, crepe de chine, velvets, etc., form the materials. Your own individual desire in the way of materials can easily be satisfied.

Individual tastes have a great latitude, coats coming in varying lengths, and skirts are short and full, many circular models being offered. Pleats, yokes and gored effects, belts, etc., are features. Leading materials at present are serges, broadcloths, gabardines, zibelines and velvets.

Redingote and long princess effects are most popular. Almost all styles show the waist clearly defined by a belt that quite encircles the waist, while others are styled in panel effects. Organdy and net laces offer a touch of white at the throat and cuffs of many garments. No one style can be pointed out as correct—the latitude of individual choice so popular and desirable in suits finds full sway in dresses.

At $25 and $29.50 very charming models may be had, while the full price range is $15 to $175.

Again, many notable things are priced $25 and $29.50—while the entire line of prices is $10 to $65.

Gowns For Evening Wear

In direct contrast to the severity of suits and frocks for day wear the evening gowns proclaim a note of gaiety.

Fall Coats

The Sport Coat has lost none of its former favor. New plaids, chinchillas and mixtures are very well made up in these shorter models.

Waists to $12.50

Of Georgette crepe, crepe de chine and thistle down. Your favorite waist is surely here, for the range of styles and prices is very large. Most of the materials come in white and practically all colors, including the gray plaids.

Of course the higher-priced and more modish coats of broadcloth-velvet and other materials are really superior for better wear. Prices $5.95 to $65.

The New Corsets

IN PLANNING her costume, the really wise and up-to-date lady chooses her corset first. The perfect poise, charming fit and true elegance of a gown can no more be portrayed over a poorly chosen corset than a mansion can be built upon the sands. The foundation isn't there.

Choose wisely your Corset. Fashion has decreed for the present season that skirts are to be slightly shorter, busts higher. The new features are straight back, with smaller waist. The following new models have arrived and are now being fitted:

Bon Ton, La Ba Nelle and Fleur de Lis Models at $3 to $20.

C-B, Star Cresc, Thompson's Glove Fitting, Nemo and Bengo Belt models at $1 to $3.

We believe that the best corset fitters in town are to be found in our department. Allow them to solve your difficulties

In the Dressmaking Salon

MISS BISHOP has returned from New York. Her visit was made to gather here for you the newest ideas and designs of the leading Fashion shows and importers. Also to secure fall materials.

Most charming selections have been made. Miss Bishop is showing exclusive patterns in Silks, Velvets, Brocades, Woolens, Robes, Tunics and Trimming Accessories.

Your Fall Suits, Wraps and all other Fall Dress Accessories should, by all means, be planned immediately, while the showing is complete. Of course, the more popular and most favored materials have been purchased in large quantities, yet lots will soon be broken and it is best to act now. Materials may be selected and made up later.

Silks and Dress Goods

FOR Dresses, Waists, etc., Silks are to be worn more than ever this season. Plaids are the most desirable at present, and they are shown here in abundance. The finer materials include silver and gold tinsel embroidered grosgrain Taffetas. Pink, light blue, lavender and white grounds, with occasional touches of color. There are also Pussy Willow taffetas, Georgette crepes and Swiss Failles. For all evening gowns, wraps and trimmings, 36 to 44 inches wide. At $4.50 to $22.50 yard.

36 and 40-inch Swiss Chiffon Failles in evening and street shades at $1.50 to $3.50 yard. 30-inch wide monotone stripes—moire, satin and faille combined; a very smart fabric at $1.50 to $7.50 the yard.

Latest—Chiffon Taffeta Dance Plaids: light colors of pink, green and blue. Very pretty at $1.50 yard.

42-inch Pussy Willow Taffetas; 42 inches in width; black and white wide stripes and navy and white stripes. $1.50 to $3 yard.

Black and white or blue and white striped Taffetas at $1.50 a yard.

Monotone Plaids and stripes, $1.50 to $4 yard.

Choice Selections For Trimmings

Very daintily gotten up, and very moderately priced. Beaded Sequins and Sequin bands and founcines in the new Paradise blue, black, black and blue combined, etc. Iridescent effects, with or without spangles, etc. These trimmings represent a fortunate shipment. The lot is limited, and selections should be made now, in view of the fact that it is difficult to secure such materials in the markets at present.

Showing New Laces

THE demands of the present season are for Net Laces. We show them in all descriptions and colors—amber shadings, gold and silver effects, and colors of Paradise blue, Belgium blue, midnight, African brown, golden brown and all the light shades for evening wear.

Many are embroidered in gold and silver thread; others in colors, embroidered in gold and silver. Light weight Laces with dashes of colors. Also the new Chantilly and Radium in black and white.

Everything is presented for your present inspection.

Neck wear & Ribbons

The plaid silk Ribbons of taffeta, with stripes of satin, are to be used extensively for trimming purposes. Widths of 4½ to 8 inches. At 35c to $1 the yard.

New Fichus

Priced by the yard. Georgette, plain nets and shadow laces, in white, cream and black and white combinations. 50c to $2 yard.

Maline Ruffs

SYNOPSIS

Count Frederick, the maddest of monarchs, is in a cruel mood. He has a woman, the maddest of women, who has a man, the maddest of men. He is the maddest of monarchs, she is the maddest of women, he is the maddest of men. He is the maddest of monarchs, she is the maddest of women, he is the maddest of men.

CHAPTER XLVI

The snows of war. It was touch and go between the little kingdoms for a time. Their troops had faced each other in the open field. Blood had been shed. Generals had looked other generals in the eye at great distance. At one time, contact with the imperial rulers of the two countries had been within earshot of the other.

Yet they parted now. Why? The trumpets sounded the recall, even as the leaders were awaiting the summons for the final battle. At least one ruler had been eager for the assault, yet did not advance his troops. Why? The other, vacillating as ever of soul, none the less had been upon the battle front, whether or not his courage had been more than temporary. He now retired. Why?

The answer to all these questions lay in the hands of the young American girl, handed, the day before, to the girl of the count's court, still pleaded for ransom. One lay in the hands of one power, the other in the grasp of another. Had either kingdom on this day owned them both, war would have ensued.

Cortislaw, who retired in his own city, was in respect of martial nature far in advance of the weak ruler of Grahoffen. Michael had come to the rescue, so much to the count's Frederick from danger as to save Count Frederick for himself. He needed Frederick's courage. Not so Cortislaw, who retired to his own city, was in respect of martial nature far in advance of the weak ruler of Grahoffen.

Believe me, my good friend Sachio," exclaimed Cortislaw, when at length that crestfallen individual was brought before him. "Your failure to bring me the missing half of the coin has well-nigh cost me my dear life. I will not longer suffer such disappointments at your hands."

"Your majesty," began Sachio, but the other raised a hand.

"We are at the brink of war now—at any moment war may be forced on us, whether we like it or not. I did not think Michael march, but he has shown that under certain circumstances he is not only can win, but will. If we delay we lose all the advantages of the initiative. None can tell what your Count Frederick will do, for at least he does not lack courage. And now he will be eager for revenge against us for the danger in which we have placed him."

"It was a danger shared by all those who engaged in the struggle for the coin," said Sachio. "We had it in our own hands. We brought it to the very edge of our throats; it was in our country when they took it once more."

"Yes, and those persons were persons that had more at stake than money. It is the only coin that broke in Cortislaw, with the cold wrath which officers know so well. 'Have they more reason for success than you? Are they of greater wit than yourself?' By the Lord! if those things be so, 'tis time we had better with about us than such youths."

Sachio hung his head, but found no speech in answer and the king went on:

"Listen now. He beckoned about him other officers of his court, and held out before him in his palm the half coin which had come into his possession. 'See what this says—talk of treasure—treasure! We know that the Grahoffen treasure is enormous—we know that it is concealed in the torture chamber, whatever or wherever that may be. Beyond that we know no more. It is the only half of the coin alone that can tell us what we covet now. This half but whets our anger, and we have nothing to say that anger until we have the main for it.'"

"Now, my noblemen, you who pretend to serve me and this people, one more I warn you—your half coin, or your resignations—or your heads." His officials left him, all in a state bordering upon consternation, for they knew that this king was not one upon whom his hatred or his revenge. They laid their heads together, Sachio desperately anxious now, and tried their best to formulate some plan. All they could conclude was that the coin had found its way back to Grahoffen once more in the possession of the persons who so stoutly had defended it.

Meanwhile these were far away as time had allowed them. The walls of Grahoffen sheltered now both King Gray and Rolsen. Close behind these rode King Michael at the head of his troops, at his side the man whose danger had called him forth—none less than Count Frederick himself.

"My dear count," exclaimed Michael in his own very pretty opinion of his prowess, "all is well that ends well. Did you not note the speed with which we came to rescue you? Was it not all magnificent?"

"Yes," replied the count. "The wit of your girl—her courage—were indeed magnificent."

"Her wit? Her courage?"

"Indeed, your majesty, was it not those things which brought you to our rescue? How else could you have known of our stress? It was she who carried the news—she, I doubt not who also carries the coin?"

"The coin? What coin? Why do you speak of it?" demanded Michael in a certain surprise. "We have that half coin in our own possession—or at least have supposed so—surely did have it but the other day. You have one half, have you not, and I the other? If either half be missing, at least I do not know where it is."

"It is in Grahoffen town this minute in every likelihood," exclaimed Count Frederick, careless of consequences that might arise if his counterfeiting were discovered. "We had a half, that equally is sure, in our hands in the mountain fight. The young woman and myself gave it in keeping to her servant, the man Rolsen—a stout fellow and a desperate fighter, more than one of your army might attest."

"And where is he now?"

"That I know I cannot say," rejoined the count.

"At the time the danger of conflict ended I turned to find him and he was gone, as you know. We agreed that those two, Rolsen and his mistress, would meet as soon as possible. My own fear is that the young woman will take ship at any time and sail for home. With her goes the secret, for very likely Rolsen would go with her."

"I do not share your fears, my dear count," said he. "In my own belief the young woman will not be so apt to leave the palace presently."

"Leave the palace?"

"Yes, she was in the charge of my people there even as I started out with the troops. I am thinking that a palace is a safer place than a ship for a young woman who is a stranger in a strange land—a beautiful young woman."

CHAPTER XLVII

In the Name of the Law.

As for Rolsen, now object of solicitude on the part of a nobleman and even of a king, he was experiencing further adventures of his own. As soon as he had made his escape from the field where the three had so nearly met disaster, he made such speed as he could after Kitty, who, as he knew very well, would hasten as fast as might be to find some hiding for herself and the coin.

But where was she now? That he could not guess, for he had no means of learning that Kitty had been left in the palace of the king. Rather he supposed that she would be at the hotel which she had made her residence. He bent his own steps thither as rapidly as might be.

the young American, who is so high in the king's good will."

"That is all very well, very well, but it is not enough, as you will see," rejoined the prefect.

"The king did not set you free."

"Only because the king has not yet heard from my mistress. Give me leave to bring the two together—and that may be done—and she will set all right at once. Ask her."

"I do not need to ask her. The king has set for me the task of finding your murderer. I must fill that task. I have done so now."

"What—myself—I am suspected of that crime? Your honor, that is impossible. There has been no proof of any crime."

"Send to the king," he added, catching a glimpse of the uncertainty on the face of the prefect. "Send to my mistress. I claim that right under the law."

"I send to the king," demanded the prefect blustering. "Why should I? I can control the process of the law without troubling royalty with details of that sort."

"But suppose there are consequences. These are ticklish times, believe me, your excellency. I have seen blood deeds done today. When a king goes to war—and our king may go before long—the life of an officer left behind is worth no more to him than that of a good fighting man taken with him to the front. Perhaps as between your honor and myself—"

The official took counsel with his own caution for a moment.

"I will myself go to the palace," said he at length. "To be sure, we cannot be too careful in

They knocked, knocked again, and yet again—but got no answer. The woman at length opened the door with her own key. Her sudden exclamation convinced Count Frederick that the room was empty.

"She is up to her tricks," exclaimed he to himself. "Now I wonder—"

He did not pause to ask much of the waiting woman, but hurried away down the hall, intent on certain plans of his own.

He must find her, must see her at once. He had no real idea as to which course Kitty had taken after leaving the room, but alone after a time, he walked more slowly, he could not say why. Something came to his senses, as first not recognized—a faint scent—a perfume which it seemed to him he had known before—the perfume of violets, faint, indefinite, fragrant.

He found himself at length in a narrow hallway, from which there were no side passages. It led him deeper back into the palace, its trend continually downward. This finally he found himself in the self-same subterranean tunnel which Kitty earlier had discovered.

"She was searching for the torture chamber," said he to himself, with sudden conviction. "That is why she came here!"

He came at length to the great door which closed the passageway. Yes, in the dust before him were footprints, and in the dust on the door itself were finger prints! The silence and secrecy of ages had been broken within the hour.

He pushed open the door—pushed it until it met some obstruction—something which lay vaguely

"Yes, see—my dear Count Frederick, it was absurd that you should be mixed in that—or the young American—I have not had time to think of it since then. What is all this now? Bring the man here!"

And so presently the prefect, flushed and much perturbed, was admitted—"

"Well, well," demanded the monarch, "what is it? Why do you come here?"

"For only one reason, your majesty," began the prefect humbly. "We are convinced that there is more than chance medley in this murder. The thing goes deeper than we thought at first."

"Have you no suspect?"

"One, your majesty, a person of no importance, by name Rolsen."

King Michael turned to Count Frederick.

"Rolsen? The very man of whom you spoke? 'How now, count?' Michael turned to the nobleman who still stood near. "What think you of this matter?"

Count Frederick considered for a moment before he replied.

"Set him free," said he at length. "Watch him. He will lead us to something perhaps. Be sure that once he is loose he will not be at rest for long."

"An excellent idea," said Michael.

"Michael turned now to the matters closer to his heart—the welfare of the young American, whom he had not seen since his return to the palace. Even now she waited for admission to his presence, and he had her summoned at once."

"What! mademoiselle," cried Michael, "you are pale. You have not yet fully recovered—you have been repelled?"

"Yes, your majesty," replied Kitty, smiling somewhat wistfully. He now noticed that the serving woman at her side carried her wrap, and that she herself appeared ready for the street.

"What! you would leave us?" exclaimed he. "What does this mean?"

"Your majesty," said Kitty, "graciously allow me my absence for the time. I must return to my hotel."

It was with deep relief that finally Kitty found herself once more freed of the royal presence and the royal palace. She sped, fast as might be, back to her hotel.

Count Frederick excused himself, but a moment later, to the king he announced his intention of returning to his own home. Instead, he made his way also to the Ritz hotel.

The clerk, who had been so deferential to the nobleman that he had been to the nobleman's servant a trifle earlier.

"Her excellency, the young American, Mr. But now she came—she may be in her room—we shall see. Shall she join you in the parlor, Monsieur le Comte?"

"In the parlors on the floor above," replied Count Frederick, rather vaguely, and passed up the broad stairs. But he had certain plans of his own which did not include a public audience with the young American. Instead, he passed boldly down the hall. Before the door at which he would have announced himself, he paused. He could not well escape detection if he turned back, for the voices of others came to him down the hall. And in the room beyond the door he heard another voice—apparently she was waiting the telephone. Yet it was she who was waited for an instant and found himself without intention in possession of what she said.

Kitty at the time, in fact, was telephoning to the headquarters of police asking for knowledge of her servant Rolsen. Her voice went on now rapid, staccato.

"Monsieur, he was freed, Rolsen—yes, yes—what then did you do?—yes, I know. He was here—was followed to the hotel—he was followed to the rendezvous of the apaches—yes, yes—by whom?—why? He is there now perhaps—Ah, ha! what manner of officers are you? What is your plan in all this—to have him killed by thieves in turn?"

Count Frederick started to hear no more, but flinching guiltily over his eavesdropping retraced his steps down the hall and sought more decorous means of meeting the young woman whom he wished to see. But even as he did so he reflected that from the detached exclamations he had heard surely she was planning yet other adventures. If Rolsen had been here—if he had been followed away by the police toward the thieves' headquarters—surely this undaunted girl would in turn do what she could to rescue him. If so, once more she herself would need assistance.

Count Frederick stepped to one side in the hotel lobby and bided his time. It was as he thought. Before long Kitty hastened through the lobby and out toward the street.

It was now a curious train that of these persons engaged in the search for the mysterious coin. Rolsen had indeed found an occupant in the room of his mistress when he hastened thither the moment he was released from custody. That occupant, however, was not his mistress, but another—none less than a member of the apache band who had held her apartments under such close espionage. Rolsen, riding himself, waited for the appearance of this intruder—followed him out of the hall into the street. This had been but the moment before Kitty's return. The prefect had ordered Rolsen's discharge by telegrams from the palace, almost as she was leaving, and both she and Rolsen had hastened to the hotel.

Now, as Kitty emerged, followed by Count Frederick, yet another one of Blake's undercover band stepped out from his hiding and followed Count Frederick himself. And all of these, each was in pursuit of the coveted Grahoffen coin.

As for Rolsen, his man made rapid progress, and it was not long before he had trailed him to the rendezvous of the band which he himself previously had learned. Undaunted, he would have pursued the fugitive to the inner chamber of the rendezvous had not he heard a sound which caused him to

It was at this time that Blake, leader of the band of thieves, chanced to return to the rendezvous. He had passed part way into the subterranean passage when he looked on ahead just in time to see one of his men emerge from the central room, bearing a spring-armed intruder in a trapper who he himself once recognized as the man who at this very scene earlier had given him so desperate a battle—why later had given him as she was leaving, and he himself had learned. Undaunted, he would have pursued the fugitive to the inner chamber of the rendezvous had not he heard a sound which caused him to Thinking only of saving himself, forgetting the coin, the renegade leader whipped out his revolver and fired point blank at Rolsen.

It Was the Torture Chamber—the Room of Terror!

Convinced Count Frederick the Room Was Empty.

He met only coldness at the office of that state secretary, the Ritz, where both he and his mistress, save for the intercession of the king, before this would have been set out in the streets bag and baggage.

"Mademoiselle, the young American excellency," he asked of the clerk at the desk. "She is at home today?"

"We know nothing of mademoiselle, the young American excellency," replied that worthy coldly. "She left no announcement of her plans when she departed. She is sure not returned."

"Are you sure as to that?" demanded Rolsen, nipped as to what text to go.

"I am sure to make guesses on such things," rejoined the clerk. "I know nothing, and that is something."

"Nothing is enough for one of your kind to know," replied Rolsen blandly. He might perhaps have engaged in still more truculent conversation with the clerk, had he not at that moment felt a hand laid upon his arm.

He turned to face a sergeant of gendarmes, who drew him to one side and whispered:

"In the name of the law, you are my prisoner," said the man. "Come with me."

"On what charge then, monsieur?" demanded Rolsen coolly. "It is my right to know something of that, if any."

"The charge is murder, as you know," said the sergeant. "The same on which you were just in charge am to warn you once more that what you say may be used against you at the trial."

"At the trial?" exclaimed Rolsen. "I thought that was all dismissed. Did we not have the king's excuse to leave? The king himself set free my master and my mistress."

"Both your employers?" grinned the sergeant. "I was servant of both, and certainly if either went free then so should I. Is that not true?"

"It is far from true," returned the gendarme grinningly; you will see how far. Murder was committed under by someone, as you know. You saw it—said that you saw it. The law does not set such witnesses free."

"The king sets free whom he pleases in this land," rejoined Rolsen. "I shall tell my mistress of this."

the attaining of the ends of justice. If I cannot gain access to the king, I shall at least have made the attempt. If I can have an audience, I shall put something of this case before him myself. We wish not to meddle too intimately in affairs of which we do not know. But if the king disavows you—"

CHAPTER XLVIII.

The Chamber of Horrors.

Arrived presently in the royal palace and in the company not only of Count Frederick, but of yet other nobleman and officials, King Michael relaxed his martial front under the warming influence of the wine on which he so much relied.

"They fled," he exclaimed again and again, boastfully, as he referred to the scenes which but now he had left. "They fled before us like sheep, my dear count. With myself to lead the army—and you at my side—what chance would they have? They knew they had none, and took counsel of their wisdom for once. If they remain in that counsel, surely they will stay behind their own walls, and not give offense to our country. We would annihilate them. A half hour more, and we would have plundered their city today. Their treasure would have been ours!"

"What treasure, your majesty?" inquired Count Frederick coldly. "What was it to war for that?"

"For what else?" smiled the king.

"For liberty, justice, freedom, your majesty?"

"Tut, tut! where do you get those terms? A monk speaks! But listen, did we not march to your rescue?"

"Yes, your majesty, I am not unmindful and not unthankful. But still we lack the clue which alone can make war possible or desirable—the clue which alone can back of it motives worthy of a king and of a people."

"Well, what does all this mean then?" demanded Michael, irritated. "Where do we arrive? What is it that you ask?"

"I can ask no questions and answer none, until we have found once more the young American, your majesty."

King Michael smiled in self-satisfaction at last. "Ah, well, that is easy," said he. "I have said that she is, or should be, here in this palace. It is true she brought me the news of your plight."

Count Frederick waited for no change in the royal will, but bowed himself from the room. Inquiry found for him presently the waiting woman in whose care Kitty had been placed, and together they approached the room where she had been left some hours before to her own device.

white upon the floor. He turned downward the glare of his light—started back from what he saw. She lay at his feet, unconscious, helpless—dead, for all he could tell. He bent over her, doubt, terror in his eyes.

"She stirred under his touch. Her eyes opened, looked into his. What she saw beyond over her was the face of her enemy."

"Who is it?" she cried. "Loose me—leave me! Where am I?"

She caught her hands to her face now as there came to her once more the terror of what she had seen. She dared not look about her. "Take me away—take me away!"

He made no answer for a time.

"Why have you followed me here?" she demanded at last, half hysterically.

He spoke now, slowly, almost solemnly.

"Why?" said he. "I do not know why. I think it must have been because you were in trouble. Perhaps you called me—perhaps that is why I came."

"What do you mean? Would you taunt me now, at such a time? I have been frightened almost to the point of death—it was terrible."

"Come," said Count Frederick, and placed about her an arm on whose strength, in spite of herself, she was glad to lean.

He was guiding her toward the door. She turned and saw again that which but now had smitten her with terror. Her nerves, weakened by the long strain upon them, gave way once more.

The flare of the candle lighted up the cavernous interior at whose entrance they stood. Count Frederick saw what she had seen.

On the wall stood out, black, steel arms which supported ezeles, grating skulls—old, how old no one could tell. Beyond rods and gratings, barbed, pointed, curved. An iron chair in a corner, and in it sat a grinning skeleton.

It was the torture chamber, the room of horrors, but of other years more savage than these, and brought down unchanged through all the centuries!

"Come," said Count Frederick, his own voice agitated. "It is no time to think of any treasure now, but—"

He caught her away swiftly into the other passage, and flung the door shut behind them. In silence he led her along the subterranean passage and up the stairs.

"He left her once more alone in her own room, but he returned as best she might, while he went on to rejoin the king."

"So, then, you found her, faithful messenger?" demanded Michael.

"Yes, your majesty, at length. She was but strolling about to pass the time during your absence. Who I know little of such matters, it seems to me that the trials of the day have been extreme for her."

King Michael ended by asking the attendance of the young woman, herself, but it was just at this juncture that there arrived at the palace none less than the prefect of police, who made supplication through several court officials for admittance to see with you, your majesty.

"He says," returned the lad chamberlain, "that he comes regarding the murder at the Ritz hotel, in which your majesty was graciously pleased to be involved."

HANK AND HIS ANIMAL FRIENDS By Walt McDougall

ABSINTHE IS DYING VERY HARD IN FRANCE

Paris.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press)—Absinthe is dying hard in France. Artificial drinks resembling it in color and flavor are obtainable in spite of the vigilance of the authorities, and it is even asserted that stocks of the real beverage on hand at the date of prohibition, and paid for by the government, are finding their way to the consumer. Numerous new concoctions have also been put on the market to replace it. The traffic is encouraged by an unlooked-for resistance to anti-alcoholic legislation in parliament.

The wine-shop plans in French police a role similar to that of the American saloon, hence the reluctance of the deputies to follow the military authorities in the radical measures they have taken to suppress the traffic.

The government is proposing legislation forbidding the sale of any drink containing more than a certain amount of alcohol to the public, and the orders of military commanders, prohibiting the sale of intoxicating drinks in their regions. They declared it was not in conformity with the laws of 1849 governing the working of municipal law. The state council upheld the orders of the military commanders.

The next step originated in the parliament itself. In the proposed limitation of next law to the sale of operations of the armies. Pressure was brought to bear upon the press and upon parliament by the National Union of Wholesale and Retail Wine and Liquor Dealers, who threatened to withdraw and political support from the anti-liquor campaign were stopped.

The big distillers, who have complicated the situation by drawing the private distillers in. The private distillers in some departments exert the same influence upon politicians as the city wine-shop. Their interests are not the same as those of the distillers, but they have endeavored to join hands with resisting the law.

Monsieur Joseph Heilmann, one of the leading temperance advocates, declares that it will be impossible to abolish the sale of alcoholic beverages. On the other hand, the radical and radical elements, the most considerable group of the chamber, numbering 111 out of a total of 511 members, shows a disposition to oppose the government in the reforms proposed. The proposition to circumscribe the regions in which the sale of the field of operations originated with them. To these also is attributed pressure brought to bear upon the administration to suspend administrative measures respecting the sale of alcoholic beverages.

The general public takes little interest in the controversy, having taken the prohibitive measures which food particularly, the absence of absinthe is little deplored, and temperance advocates declare that if the radical elements of the chamber oppose the reform, they will have once more misdirected public opinion and have made one more blunder.

"HEALTHY THAT HANDICAP"

In this volume, the subject of which has already been discussed and approved some time ago, Dr. Towns describes the means to civilization of opium, alcohol, etc., and tells how the use of these drugs may be overcome. The use of heroin, which at one time was considered harmless, Dr. Towns says he now believes that it is the most harmful. This conclusion was derived by a study of the mental, moral and physical effects on the users of heroin, whether taken straight or in cough mixtures and patent medicines.

From what Dr. Towns says the drug habit is purely American; that among the thousands of drug fiends who have come under his observation he states that he has never seen a Russian or a Pole or an Italian victim, and only four among the Hebrew race. This author also pays little respects to the popular cigarette, which he considers "the greatest vice devastating humanity today, because it is doing more than any other vice to deteriorate the race."

Dr. Towns has written this work after hard study and wide experience, and will prove of untold value to all classes of readers and professions, and it is especially recommended to those who physicians whose practice includes whisky, opium, morphine, etc. (The Century Company, New York.)

THE GREAT WAR

The Great War is a series of non-partisan volumes on the Causes and Motives for, on the Mobilization of the Moral and Physical Forces, on the Conduct of the Hostilities, and on the Final Results. The authors are men very well known—George E. Allen, Ph. D., of the University of Pennsylvania, history and a trainer of troops by official assignment for observation, etc. The introduction is by Hon. William Howard Taft, who says of the authors: "Dr. Allen is a doctor of philosophy and has had great opportunities for studying the European situation. He spent some years in Italy, Germany, and France, and made four journeys into Russia. He made a particular study of conditions in the Balkans and looked at the 'Black Eastern Question' in Constantinople."

Dr. Allen says that his volumes of the history of this great war are not partisan, but that "impartiality is the empty neutrality of indifference, but the fondest, most intimate associations unite me with Italy, Germany, France and Great Britain—a war between these countries is a source to me of unspendable sadness. It is a conflict in which I must lose, whoever is victor."

Dr. Allen, who is an American, takes of the work so that there will be no losers. Mr. Miller's rules are not for men alone, but for those who carry their families.

"On the Trail" is the work of two girl anthropologists who have studied the subject of camping as well as that of the progress and events of 1914. It is compiled by Francis B. Wickware. More than one hundred persons have contributed to this issue. There is an interesting discussion of all the important events of the year, but to all Americans no one subject is of so much interest at this time as the great European war, the military and naval features, the causes, etc. But there is another interesting subject which we are studying and watching, and that is the situation in Mexico; and while there are many other topics which are instructive and useful from a reference standpoint, first attention will be attracted to the Great War and the Mexican subject by the thousands of readers of the 1914 Year Book. (D. Appleton & Co., New York.)

WHAT ARE THE SIX BEST NOVELS?

A short time ago The New York Times asked a few of the most distinguished novelists of Europe and America the above question. When the replies were received The Times found that novelists like plain literary readers have a diversity of opinion and some of the answers were found to be most interesting.

William J. Locke gives a list of six novels as the best. They are as follows: "Tom Jones," by Fielding; "Tristram Shandy" by Sterne; "David Copperfield," by Dickens; "Henry James," by Thackeray; "The Clotel; or, Life in France," by Heath; "The Sign of the Cross," by Meredith.

The Times has published quite a number of interesting letters from the following novelists who voted: Gertrude Abernethy, John Galsworthy, James Lane Allen, Eleanor Akenson, Lina Dalrymple, W. L. George, Susan Glaspell, Conroy Hamann, James G. Hannay, George Birmingham, Harry Ryder Hornum, Rupert Hughes, St. John D. Irvine, Owen Johnson, Edwin Lefferts, E. Phillips Oppenheim, Oliver Johnson, Harry C. Dilligant, Meredith Nicholson, Kathleen Norris, Samuel Clemens, Chas. D. Johnson, Frank H. Spearman, Booth Tarkington and Honoré White.

"Janity Fair," that ever popular novel by Thackeray, stands first on the list of best novels, but the honors are shared with "Tom Jones," by Fielding, that wonderful piece of English fiction whose popularity has increased with the years, as the two books received respectively fourteen and eleven votes.

The next two books selected were "David Copperfield" and "The Scarlet Letter." The following are the names of the six best novels in the English language as the result of the jury vote.

The next two books selected were "Janity Fair," by William Makepeace Thackeray; "Tom Jones," by Henry Fielding; "David Copperfield," by Charles Dickens; "The Scarlet Letter," by Nathaniel Hawthorne; "Robinson Crusoe," by Daniel Defoe; "Franklin," by Sir Walter Scott, or "Lionel Lincoln," by R. D. Blackmore, or "Pass of the Dirlewitz," by Thomas Hardy, or "Tristram Shandy," by Laurence Sterne.

NEW PAID BOOKS

The Co-Mission, by Cora Harris, author of "The Direct Rider's Wife," etc. Mrs. Harris seems to have been not only interested, but very much amused in the portrayal of each of the characters in her new book of fiction. The reader will, therefore, become equally interested in the details of Bob Bennett, Judge Kegan, Hugh Adams and Mrs. Susan Walton. These are all residents of Jordanville, a village which can be located in any part of America. If the reader should allow imagination to play part in the book it might be found and read from Atlanta. The public will find the book highly readable, and the book store will find "The Co-Mission" very saleable. (Doubleday, Page & Co., New York City.)

Mr. Single, by George Barr McCutcheon, author of "Gentleman" and quite a number of other interesting books of fiction. But "Mr. Single" has been created; he is real; he exists in existence today and tomorrow, and he will ever be remembered as well as loved by family, friends and humanity.

Single was interesting as a family man, as his wife and children thought, and while the author entertains his readers with the adventures of Mr. Single there runs like a bright silver thread, the love affair of charming Amy Fairweather and Richard Hamilton. The illustrations are by James Montgomery Flagg. (Dodd, Mead & Co., New York City.)

The Man Jesus, by Mrs. Austin. Each century Jesus in its own way, writes of him out of his own mind, and it can be said, as the centuries pass, humanity finds itself closer to the Prophet of Nazareth, still clinging to the view of Jesus as a wise and true teacher. In this book of his history the sacred which gives a wider and more exact appreciation of the most exalted character of all history. (Harpur & Bros., New York City.)

The Research Magnificent, by H. G. Wells, author of "The War of the Worlds," "The Time Machine," etc. H. G. Wells is equally as popular in America as in his native England. He has written with Thomas Hardy, Arnold Bennett, Huxford, and his last book, "The Research Magnificent," is a study of the search for the living life. Mr. Wells has written "The Research Magnificent," and then comes the story "The Boy Who Drove a Goat," "The Young Man About Town," "Asquith," "The Spectator," "The Asses of Jealousy," and "The Harrowed Ash" (The Macmillan Company).

A-B-C of Architecture, by Frank E. Wallis. The author of this little volume is an architect who though very busy has found time to write something of his own. He has written "The Asses of Jealousy," and "The Harrowed Ash" (The Macmillan Company).

GERMAN PRISONERS WORKING IN MOROCCO

Casablanca, Morocco.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press)—An excursion into the interior of Morocco, an important and hazardous affair ten years ago, is now the simplest sort of a trip. Under the old regime, the first necessity was to acquire the good will of the Caid, guides as honest as possible, a small force of cavalry and enough provisions to be able to share generously with the tribesmen encountered by the way.

Today a child of 10 years at the wheel of a wheezing automobile serves as a guide, caravan and guard. Except for the Mairoussa tribes that once roamed in the distance and the Gorbis and the camps of the natives, the country of the Chaouia, where the French had so much unpleasantness with rebellious natives ten years ago, resembles a vast wheat field. It is possible to penetrate far into the country over concrete roads as fine as any in Europe. It is also possible to go farther following the trails at a speed of 25 miles an hour during the dry season.

On either side of the route and in every direction colonists, aided by German prisoners, are gathering the wheat sheaves in thick stacks. The crop breaks all records for Morocco, making plausible the contention that the black soil of the Moors will one day rival the steppes of southern Russia and the prairies of the United States.

Considering the comparatively few years of the United States, the development of the Chaouia in ten years has been marvelous. Round the camp Bouhadra, which was a ruin ten years ago, the old village of Ben-Slimane, where the rebellious tribes once roamed, there are now two million sheaves of wheat. Five million bushels of wheat and other grain to be sold this winter, will nearly double its exportations this year.

Underwriting of Unsecured Billion-Dollar Loan to Nations Engaged in World's Greatest Struggle Will Be Unprecedented

New York, September 18.—More than 500 men in the street expressed the belief this week that J. P. Morgan was leading the fight for the underwriting of the proposed $1,000,000,000 loan to the nations engaged in a fighting man who was proved a few weeks ago when the machine gun was used to stop his job with two pistol shots.

Since the death of Mr. Morgan's father there has been no recognized financial leader in the country either in or out of the street. It is the prediction has frequently been made that because of the death of Mr. Morgan which has occurred in the ruins of the Wall Street game through the failure to meet the demands of public sentiment, there may be no more such a leader.

Aside from the German syndicates working to draw their accounts from the banks which participate in the Anglo-French loan, Mr. Morgan himself is not making it easy for Mr. Morgan and the other bankers to try to solve the problem in hand. It is the opinion of those who are familiar with the natural course, what would happen if the British and French governments would prepare to raise a $1,000,000,000 loan in the country through the sale of their joint securities, and after the loan had been raised, the money would be loaned to meet the needs of the war.

But having been the financial center of the world for many generations, London is naturally reluctant to be supplanted by New York, which it would be to do all of the financing of the war. The new loan is being offered to one of our bankers but it is not to be discussed at this time.

"All of these conferences are being held with one object in view, a steady exchange of foreign exchange, and it is the opinion of those who are familiar with the situation that the money employed as long as it is our credit. It is the opinion of those who are familiar with the situation that the money employed as long as it is our credit.

In replying to the arguments of the Reading Commission members, the British government has shown its indifference that the problem was ours, not theirs, and that if our country had declined to advance $1,000,000,000 on Great Britain's promise, it would have been the same.

Foreign Liquidation in Stocks is Over. There are two reasons for this. The liquidation of American securities in British institutions such as trust companies, estates, etc., has been extremely difficult to get control of because of foreign-owned American securities.

A great deal of loans talk is being heard about the amount of American securities owned abroad. For example, it is reported that the amount of American securities owned in London is $1,000,000,000.

One large banker in discussing this week the problem of underwriting the loan said that the details of the proposed loan could safely be taken into consideration and that it is true it would be extremely difficult to get control of because of foreign-owned American securities.

The effects of our war trade with Europe are beginning to work themselves out. The effects of our war trade with Europe are beginning to work themselves out.

Twenty-Three Measures Already Brought to Attention of Governor Nat Harris for Inclusion in His Call.

One of the most remarkable legislative developments since the regular 57th-day session, during which the general assembly found no time for a special session, is that more than a score of measures are now considered so important that the governor is being urged to have them included in the extra session.

Just twenty-three such measures have been submitted to the governor, with the request that he include them in his call for the extra session. A still more remarkable aspect is that every one of these measures was introduced for the consideration of the last regular session, with the exception of one.

Wesley Hirshberg, for ten years one of the leading photographers of the south, who last February sold out his business here, and now has his studio at A. V. Clifton, at 245 Whitehall street, which is the old Hirshberg studio.

During his work in Atlanta Mr. Hirshberg has photographed many of the most prominent visitors in Atlanta, including such people as Douglas, Boxall, the great pianist, J. Campbell Morgan, the great London minister, and many other notable figures.

FROM TODAY

With cotton now selling close to 11 cents a pound, and the past week's bank clearings registering a gain of over 100,000,000, the cotton market is beginning to look favorable to the real estate dealer.

Real estate is the last business left to restrict the cotton market. It is a depression which affects all other businesses. However, real estate dealers have a better showing for this month than any month of the year.

It is the firm belief among realtors that full activity in their line cannot long be postponed.

Industrial order the city report larger orders than at any time this year, and most factories are working full time.

Improved industrial conditions necessarily mean more employment, which is hoped will furnish employment for those who are without work.
