

also want to go into other features of the newspapers. In going to and from their headquarters in the Kimball house the jurymen frequently have papers thrust before their eyes by newsboys, and they also see them in the hands of people on the street, and for several days the newspaper accounts of this trial have put the state's case as decidedly light and faulty.

Mr. Dorsey then took up again the examination of Dr. Hurt. Have there, or not, been cases of blows on people's skulls where death did not ensue?" he asked. "Yes," replied the witness. "What process of the body is delayed by unconsciousness?" asked Mr. Arnold, who took up the cross-examination again. "Is the nervous system delayed and what else?" he continued. "The nerves of sensation and emotion are delayed," replied the witness. "Is it the same as in sleep?" "Yes to a certain extent."

Jim was born in the country and raised in the city. Although there is still within him the vein of lucid manners and ignorance, he has contracted quite a bit of city airs and city ways that are to his detriment. One of these is a swagger which he used to assume, but, very likely, has dropped completely during the past few months. Another is a rising admiration of himself and a feeling of superiority that is as common to the city-bred negro as his love for ham. Recent reports, however, say that Jim has lost these weaknesses and has satisfactorily reverted to type.

Following Chief Beavers (the name of Detective Bass Rosser was then called, but he was not present and Policeman R F Lasseter was put on the stand. "Did you go to the National Pencil factory on Sunday morning, April 27?" "Yes." "Did you ever see this parasol before?" asked the solicitor, holding up the parasol which was found in the elevator shaft and identified as Mary Phagan's.

"Break" in the Frank Trial May Come With the Hearing Of Jim Conley's Testimony

Jim Conley isn't a cornfield negro—he's more of the present day type of city darkey—and that's the only difference between him and Next Lee. Outside of that there is but little variance. However Jim's an actor, he got out on and plowed bottom lands long before Jim had an idea of evading. He's got the good old country strain in him and he's as black as tar.

Next Lee's aptitude for unconsciously running over the other fellow's rights when contradicted. He's squibbed over a "Junebug" and "Lynchburg" illustration just as quickly as Next contradicted Attorney Rosser when that lawyer called his pet light out of its name. Friday afternoon kind heaped up his authorities took him from his cell and gave him a bath. They took him into the back yard where nobody could see it and turned a liberal hose on him.

When somebody suggested gentle tactics and scientific procedure upon the negro and forthwith inaugurated these methods Jim's story began coming bit by bit, and eventually spilled out from the bottom had dropped. He kicked in with the whole business. It is either a question of pride or vanity or sulkiness with Jim. If you pounce upon him and try to shake it out of him, like shaking a few terrier loose from behind his ears, he'll talk about as freely as he'd submit to an unnecessary pulling of a back tooth. But if Jim is approached kindly and scientifically he'll rattle away like a 1907 Gazump pulling Hunter street on low gear. The prospects are that he is going to be a witness as interesting as Next Lee. Not that he already is, in fact, more interest centers on him than on any other of the case, purely because of the importance of his testimony. But, from a standpoint of character, fortitude and deliverance, speculation is wide varied.

Detective Waggoner Describes Extreme Nervousness of Frank

City Detective D L Waggoner was called to the stand following Miss Ferguson Attorney Rosser immediately raised the objection that he had been in the court room and the solicitor declared that he did not know whether or not the detective had Waggoner stated that he was present for about 20 minutes Wednesday. "He was not sworn and put under the rule," explained Solicitor Dorsey, "because I did not know that I would need him."

connecting doors are swung open, and it is conveyed in practically a single apartment. Here they sleep, eat, read and do all other censured things under the censorship of Deputy Plennie. Some time this afternoon the jury will take a walk. It will be a short one and a guarded one. They will stroll through the uptown district and not outside of police protection. Alongside of them will walk grim-visaged deputies with determination on their faces, pistols in their pockets and a gnawing appetite for any outsider who wants to start something. They can't read newspapers—the jurors can't. They can't read anything that relates to the trial in which they are serving. Judge Roan read the riot act on that sort of stuff Saturday morning when he unwittingly came near getting the state and defense into a battle royal by handling a newspaper on the bench.

Fixing Hour of Girl's Death Through Aid of Modern Science The Prosecution's Greatest Aid

By Britt Cronk. When Mrs J W Coleman, mother of Mary Phagan related a simple story on the witness stand the first day of the Frank trial the slain child's frugal meal of cabbage and biscuit which she ate upon leaving home that fateful day, she paved the way for the most thrilling development thus far in the entire case. Her story was as devoid of thrills as any yet told. It was an ordinary recitation of a common meal and told in the mother's plain, simple manner. Had she not broken into tears her connection would have been completely devoid of interest, except for the fact that she was Mary Phagan's mother.

When the Dead Do Tell Tales. This is, undoubtedly the most effective adaptation of science and any trial in the history of Georgia. Chemistry has played important roles in modern trials, and so has medicine, but not once in the records of Georgia has it been employed in an effort to prove the exact time of murder. They say the dead tell no tales. That was said a long time ago, some early philosopher probably, who lived in a period when science was in swaddling clothes. It is true enough, but should be changed. Dead men speak no tales, would be better, for it is about to be proved that the corpse of Mary Phagan is disclosing the hour of her death. Probably the discovery of Dr Harris' was a result of infinite thought and patience. Probably it was an accident. Anyway, he examined the body of the murdered child examined her stomach and found the undigested cabbage. His medical knowledge told him of the length the digestive organs require to act upon this certain vegetable, and this same knowledge told him of how long it had been within the stomach before death.

The Standard of "Power-Quality" and Prompt Delivery

Dismiss forever from your mind the thought that your equipment must be "specially built"— "Specially built" machinery is the foundation of delays—and losses — The first principle of efficiency is Standardization— If you standardize your equipment with Dodge—you have laid the corner stone of manufacturing supremacy. In the Dodge line there is everything for the mechanical transmission of power. The most difficult positions are met successfully by the Dodge Standard. Dodge is your insurance against expensive delays and heavy losses. The great Dodge factory at Mishawaka stands high in manufacturing efficiency because of Dodge machinery. Hundreds of enormous plants are likewise recognized as leaders in their respective lines—partially because they have eliminated expensive power losses by using Dodge products. # WILSON RECALLS NAME OF NEGRO

Choctaw Indian Nominated for Treasury Register—Patterson Requested the Withdrawal of His Name.

Washington, August 2.—President Wilson today withdrew the nomination of Adam E. Patterson, of Oklahoma, a negro, to be register of the treasury. Patterson declined the appointment and the president nominated instead Gabe E. Parker of Oklahoma, a Choctaw Indian, recommended by both senators from Oklahoma and the congressional delegation from that state.

Negro Asks Withdrawal.
In his letter to President Wilson Patterson says:

"In view of recent developments caused by my name having been submitted to the United States senate for confirmation as register of the treasury, I beg to request that you withdraw my nomination for that position. I consider that you have paid me a high tribute and an honor well worth cherishing in appointing me register of the United States treasury for which I heartily thank you. I had hoped that the nomination and confirmation would be made without protest. This hope, it seems, was unfounded.

"I feel like our Savior must have felt when he was handed the bitter cup—it meant life and death. Yet I take it and cheerfully stifle my personal ambition and surrender back to you, Mr. President, the appointment as register of the United States treasury the prize for which I have striven all my life.

Refuses to Embarrass Wilson.

"I refuse to embarrass your administration, Mr. President by insisting upon my confirmation and I also believe it is best for my race that I withdraw my name from further consideration for that position. I am anxious that the spirit of harmony and good will exist between the two races and by taking this step I believe it will go far toward bringing about a more friendly racial feeling.

Patterson worked in the democratic national headquarters during the last presidential campaign in the colored men's bureau, and was recommended by National Committee-man Hudspeth of New Jersey. Opposition to the senate from southern senators brought about the withdrawal of Patterson's name.

great difficulty. The first brought out were the members of the rescuing force who had gone to the relief of the victims of the first explosion.

Doctors from all parts of the region were summoned and two of them descended into the mine to give relief at the bottom of the slope. The first aid corps that also had been summoned from nearby collieries was on hand to take care of the injured, but only three of those found in the mine were alive and one of them died in less than thirty minutes after being taken out.

Superintendent Lorenz and Foreman Farrell were together when the explosion occurred and Farrell was killed instantly, dropping dead at the side of Lorenz.

Dynamite in Mine.

When the contractor's force went into the tunnel this morning they took with them 175 pounds of dynamite. At 2 o'clock rescuing parties came out after a futile search, and stated they believed both Farrell and Fessler were dead. They encountered a wall of rock, which they believed to be about 50 feet long and they think the two men were caught and buried beneath the mass of rock. Friends of Farrell are certain he is not one of the unidentified dead. A report came from the surface that rapping had been heard inside, but the officials gave no credence to this, as they do not believe the men can be alive. Hillary Zimmerman was the only man in the mine at the time who esaped with practically no injury. He was standing near the slope when the first explosion occurred, and was hurled 10 feet, but was not rendered unconscious.

When the rescuing force came upon Superintendent Lorenz after a walk in a circuitous route of about a mile they found him barely able to crawl. Asked how he was, he replied: "I am sore and tired, but never mind me go help Jack Farrell, he needs your help. Leave me alone and take care of those who need help more than I do."

Went of the Mules Alive.

When the rescuing force explored the affected section of the mine they found most of the mules alive, although they were in close proximity to the explosion. They did not appear to be injured in the least beyond a stinging of the hair.

One theory of the explosion is that when the muckers were cleaning up the debris their shovels struck a piece of unexploded dynamite and set off the 175 pounds which the men had taken in with them.

Throughout the entire Williams valley there hangs a pall tonight. Groups gathered at street corners and talked in hushed voices. It is usual in mine accidents for large crowds to assemble around the mouth of the mine and it was remarked that as soon as the proportions of the accident became apparent there was a turning away of the crowd from the mine rather than a congregation.

Beat Saloon Dance Ban.

(From The New York Press)
By having fake wedding ceremonies performed by professional brides and bidegrooms, certain saloon keepers in Jersey City have been able to hoodwink the police for many months, and have dances every night, Frank Hugue, director of public safety, said yesterday in a report to the commission government.

A crusade last winter against barroom dances put a stop to such except in the case where the dance was the part of a wedding celebration. Hugue noticed several weeks ago an unusual number of applications for wedding licenses poured in from the saloons in the Polish quarter. He investigated and found the number did not tally with the actual marriage licenses issued. He sallied forth to attend several of the weddings.

He found about fifteen young men and girls whose nightly duty it was to sit under fancy canopies in dance hall rooms adjoining the saloons, and simulate the joy and shyness of newlyweds. It was worth 75 cents a night to one husky youth to be a "bridegroom." He had been on the job about a month.

Kegs of beer and sandwiches for sale at one of the nuptial feasts convinced the investigators of the fraud being practiced on the police. The saloon keepers supplied wedding bells of artificial flowers, white gowns for the "brides" and evening clothes for the "bridegrooms." The principals in the fake weddings were not required to pay for their drinks, and the brides were supplied with artificial bouquets. "Brides" were picked out because of their beauty. Many of them became real brides by reason of their fake positions. One girl received more than twenty proposals from dance hall admirers. She finally quit her job because she had to wash her wedding finery and replenish her nuptial flowers. In several instances the mated pair sitting under the same canopy did not even know each other.

Unable to Meet the Emergency.

(From The Popular Magazine)
Senator and Mrs. Cummings, of Iowa, went one evening to dine in a Washington restaurant where colored waiters were employed. Mrs. Cummings, after she had taken up the menu, found that she had left her glasses at home, and therefore was unable to read. She handed the senator the card, and asked him to order the dinner, but he found that he also had forgotten his glasses.
Then he handed the card to the waiter with the request:
"Will you please read the menu to me?"
The waiter bowed in a courtly manner, and answered in a low tone:
"Deed, suh, I'd like to 'bilge you; but I ain't got no educashun, neither."

Apropos of peace conferences, Burton E. Stevenson's new novel "The Destroyer," which is appearing serially in The Popular Magazine, tells of a man who claimed that he held in his hands the peace of the world.

TETANUS PROVING FATAL IN ATLANTA

Twelve Cases During the Last Week, Four Victims Dying,
Have Been Reported to the City Health Board.

Twelve cases of tetanus, four of which proved fatal during the past week, have been brought to the attention of the city health board.

Tetanus, commonly known as lockjaw, is particularly dangerous among children, according to physicians, and warnings to mothers to keep their children well shod, are being issued by physicians.

Dr. Claude A. Smith, city bacteriologist, stated Saturday that he considered it unusual at this time of the year for so many cases to make their appearance at one time. The malady is chiefly caused by cuts in the feet. He says that the greatest danger lies in punctures caused by rusted nails. In a majority of the cases the wounds are allowed to heal while the tissues are infected with the tetanus germ, and nine cases out of ten prove fatal.

Here is what Dr. Smith advises parents to do.

See that the little ones are well shod. Examine the feet every night and morning.

When the child complains of a cut or puncture or wound of any kind, call in a physician and have the afflicted part well cauterized.

Apply poultices freely, and keep the children dry and warm.

Dr. Smith says that there is little danger after the wounds have been cauterized. He urges that parents not wait until too late before calling a physician.

The symptoms are these: The patient develops fever, and the jaws begin to swell. After nine days the jaws become locked, and usually the patient dies in horrible agony. It is the locked jaws which gave the disease its name.

TETANUS PROVING FATAL IN ATLANTA

Twelve Cases During the Last Week, Four Victims Dying, Have Been Reported to the City Health Board.

Twelve cases of tetanus, four of which proved fatal during the past week, have been brought to the attention of the city health board.

Tetanus, commonly known as lockjaw, is particularly dangerous among children, according to physicians, and warnings to mothers to keep their children well shod, are being issued by physicians.

Dr. Claude A. Smith, city bacteriologist, stated Saturday that he considered it unusual at this time of the year for so many cases to make their appearance at one time. The malady is chiefly caused by cuts in the feet. He says that the greatest danger lies in punctures caused by rusted nails. In a majority of the cases the wounds are allowed to heal while the tissues are infected with the tetanus germ, and nine cases out of ten prove fatal.

Here is what Dr. Smith advises parents to do:
See that the little ones are well shod. Examine the feet every night and morning.
When the child complains of a cut or puncture or wound of any kind, call in a physician and have the afflicted part well cauterized.
Apply poultices freely, and keep the children dry and warm.
Dr. Smith says that there is little danger after the wounds have been cauterized. He urges that parents not wait until too late before calling a physician.

The symptoms are these: The patient develops fever, and the jaws begin to swell. After nine days the jaws become locked, and usually the patient dies in horrible agony. It is the locked jaws which gave the disease its name.

COLORADO CONVICTS BUILD GOOD ROADS

WARDEN TYNAN'S SYSTEM SHOWS BEST RESULTS.

Autoist, Touring Across Continent, Tells of Fine Roads and of Convicts Working on Them Without Guards.

By Ed F. Spooner, Detroit.
P. W. Williams of Detroit accompanying the tourists from Indiana on the Indiana Pacific tour has written friends in Detroit enthusiastically with regard to the road making being carried out in Colorado by convicts employed on the honor system. These convicts were found unguarded at work on the public highways and on farms. They were ruddy faced and were pleasant men to meet and those who were at the head of the various road making camps stated to Mr. Williams that escapes of convicts were practically unknown.

Thomas J. Tynan warden of the Colorado state penitentiary across a trading salesman when he took the warden's job three or four years ago and knew absolutely nothing of criminology. He did know human nature however and he says he has been born business man's ideas about the way any sort of an institution should be run.

Demonstrates His Idea.
With these ideas he proceeded to demonstrate that a good deal of dead weight of a prison can be lifted from the shoulders of the tax payers and that the average prisoner can be made a friend instead of an enemy of society. Mr. Tynan did not like the idea of sending his men out with ball and chain and encumbered with ball and chain and he placed them on honor.

It was not possible to trust all men, but he found that there were hundreds who could be trusted and the result is hundreds of miles of the finest high ways in the world. These convicts could be found in many sections of Colorado working hard and enjoying life, and the inhabitants appreciate their work and see them appear in their neighborhood. While the tourists were in Denver fifty of the convicts marched through the streets of the city in an orderly procession to one of the leading theaters and they were not guarded.

Wardens to Theater.
These men had come in by invitation from their old camps forty miles from Denver. By these methods Colorado has proved that the world is not against the sinner and is willing to aid him to a better life. Not only are the convicts not guarded but the foreman over them is a convict and is not armed.

They are not clad in prison stripes but wear khaki and should they walk away from the camp would appear as different than did the tourists appear who mingled with them while they were working on the road. At one camp visited on the Florida and Georgia road during the year 1908 made by Ed Spooner and Billy Knipper the foreman a former banker said that during the year 1908 he had walked away from the camp but had returned and were at that time sentenced members of the road gang and were hard at work on the mountain.

RAILROAD MEN GIVEN FAREWELL BANQUET

The Atlanta Passenger club entertained at a dinner in the Georgia Pine room of the Hotel Ansley last night W. H. Leahy and C. P. Stewart who are severing their connections with Atlanta railroad life. Mr. Leahy recently resigned from the position of general passenger agent of the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic to go with the Atlantic Chamber of Commerce and Mr. Stewart, who is superintendent of the traffic for the Southeastern Passenger Association will go to Baltimore on the 15th to accept a position as general passenger agent of the Western Maryland road. The affair was a royal success from every angle. The spacious pine room had been specially decorated for the occasion and an elaborate menu was served to the large number who were present to do honor to the guests of the evening.

After demitasse and cigars a number of toasts were given and many responses made. Both gentlemen expressed themselves as highly complimented by the honor bestowed upon them.

Fred J. Wagner vice president of the Atlanta Rubber company and starter of a majority of the endurance tests on road and speed trials while in Detroit on route to a division coach to start the season at this time said that he had been convinced in a number of times that the De Luxe winner of the Vanderbilt race to visit Milwaukee to visit at his price and other money in the Vanderbilt race there. Mr. Wagner advanced $100 himself and received nothing for the starting. He had a prima about killed in the accident and the grand prize cannot collect his prize money for the Vanderbilt.

PELLETIER BUYS FLANDERS PLANT B

ORGANIZES THE TIFFANY ELECTRIC COMPANY.

Warren Noble Goes With New Company Which Will Engage in the Manufacture of High Grade Electric Cars.

E. LeRoy Pelletier, advertising man, publicity man and promoter has purchased from Harris Brothers & Co. plant B, of the Flanders manufacturing group at Pontiac and has organized the Tiffany Electric company to continue the manufacture of the Flanders electric car and to manufacture also a line of electric cars under the name of the Tiffany electric car and the Tiffany Mignon Warren Noble, who designed the first Flanders Electric, will assist Mr. Pelletier in the designing of the new Tiffany De Luxe. Associated with Mr. Pelletier in the venture are many well known business men of Detroit, who are stockholders in the $500,000 company which is being incorporated. The property purchased by Mr. Pelletier is valued at $150,000 and it is not stated what the Tiffany Mignon Warren Noble was purchased for. Contrary to report, the Tiffany company did not acquire all of the Flanders Manufacturing company factories for building B was purchased by the Studebaker corporation for a gear works.

Considered a "Good Buy."
By men of trade, Mr. Pelletier's buy is looked upon as an excellent one as the Flanders electric had been demonstrated a popular car and a good seller and was not the vehicle which pulled the company's fortunes into the mire. The new Tiffany company is to be financed without watered stock and Mr. Pelletier will be president. The connection with the new company will not at all interfere with the duties of Mr. Pelletier as advertising manager of the Maxwell Motor company and he will also fulfill like duties with the Tiffany company which will be managed by Don C. McCord who was general manager of the Flanders Manufacturing company. Mr. Caswell will be the engineer and Mr. Fear the sales manager. Mr. Fear was formerly with the Detroit Electric company. The present design of the Flanders electric is to be adapted to a second and larger model is to be placed on the market.

New Car to Be Put Out.
The Tiffany Mignon will be the smaller car and will list at about $250 and the larger model at $325. This latter car will be the most sumptuous electric on the market and will be designed as the leader in the field. It will contain a self charger by which it will be possible to charge the machine from either a direct or alternating current meaning that it will be possible to charge the car anywhere.

In acquiring the former Flanders property Mr. Pelletier also acquired the patents and machinery for the manufacturing of the wall work worn gears and a separate company will be organized to make these gears for the trade as they are now in general use by all manufacturers.

Mr. Pelletier and Mr. Noble say that the De Luxe model would contain many novel features and in fittings would be the most luxurious car ever manufactured and for high class trade.

TOURING IN AUTOS CUTS TRAVEL ON RAILROADS

Touring in motor cars is today one of the most popular of all forms of summer recreation. The railroads are being compelled to look after their laurels since the motor car has come into such great prominence. Summer touring is the most pleasant and most healthful form of recreation says W. H. Mahoney, southern Detroit manager of the Cartercar company. And every year more and more people are realizing this fact and taking their vacation in their motor cars instead of spending their money for railroad transportation. Just a few years ago you could hear of a man taking his family out for a week or a month in his car and the fellow who did such a thing was piling off an entire mass of dust. Nowadays the roads are fairly alive with tourists and coming from everywhere many of them on their way clear across the continent.

The advantages entirely justify such a credit on continued Mr. Mahoney. The motor car enables the tourist to enjoy the prettiest bits of scenery, the most delightful roadways and what is best of all he can go and come at his own will. Many people have found right near their own home scenic and varied in surrounding which they formerly traveled hundreds of miles to find. The motor car affords the real means for enjoying the country at its best and this fact has had much to do with the tremendous popularity of the automobile. We are receiving a surprising large number of tourists from Cartercar owners who are touring across the country and they find the wireless transmission especially adapted for their needs. The motor car is not only the national sport it is also the national recreation.

Goodrich Tires are the Life of Your Car

It is the Unit Molding of Goodrich Tires which gives them the trustworthiness, the resiliency, the buoyancy, the comfort which eliminate from your mind everything but the pleasure of a perfect ride. Goodrich Tires are the life of your car. Only men who know rubber and who can demonstrate their knowledge of it can so compound it as to retain its life and liveliness and at the same time imbue it with the strength and toughness which will withstand road wear.

There are forty-three years of experience in rubber manufacturing in every Goodrich Tire. Our principle of unit molding was the crystallization of our twenty-seven years of experience before we made the first American clincher tire. That principle—unit molding—proved its soundness at the start and we have never changed it.

A Goodrich Unit Molded Tire is all one piece. You cannot detect a layer line or separation in it. The Goodrich single vulcanization actually molds the layers of rubber-impregnated fabric, pure rubber, side strips, beads and thick, tough tread into one integral structure which cannot be divided by wear. This is one reason for the long, satisfactory service of Goodrich Tires.

Goodrich Unit Molded Tires give uniform wear.

The thick, tough tread of a Goodrich Tire does not peel or strip, because it is actually of the tire, and not merely on it. Our single vulcanization not only does away with the danger to you of weak spots or dead places because of over-vulcanizing or cooking the life out of the rubber, but makes tread and body one inseparable piece. This gives uniform wear, not only on the tread, but in all parts of the tire—which is what the user wants.

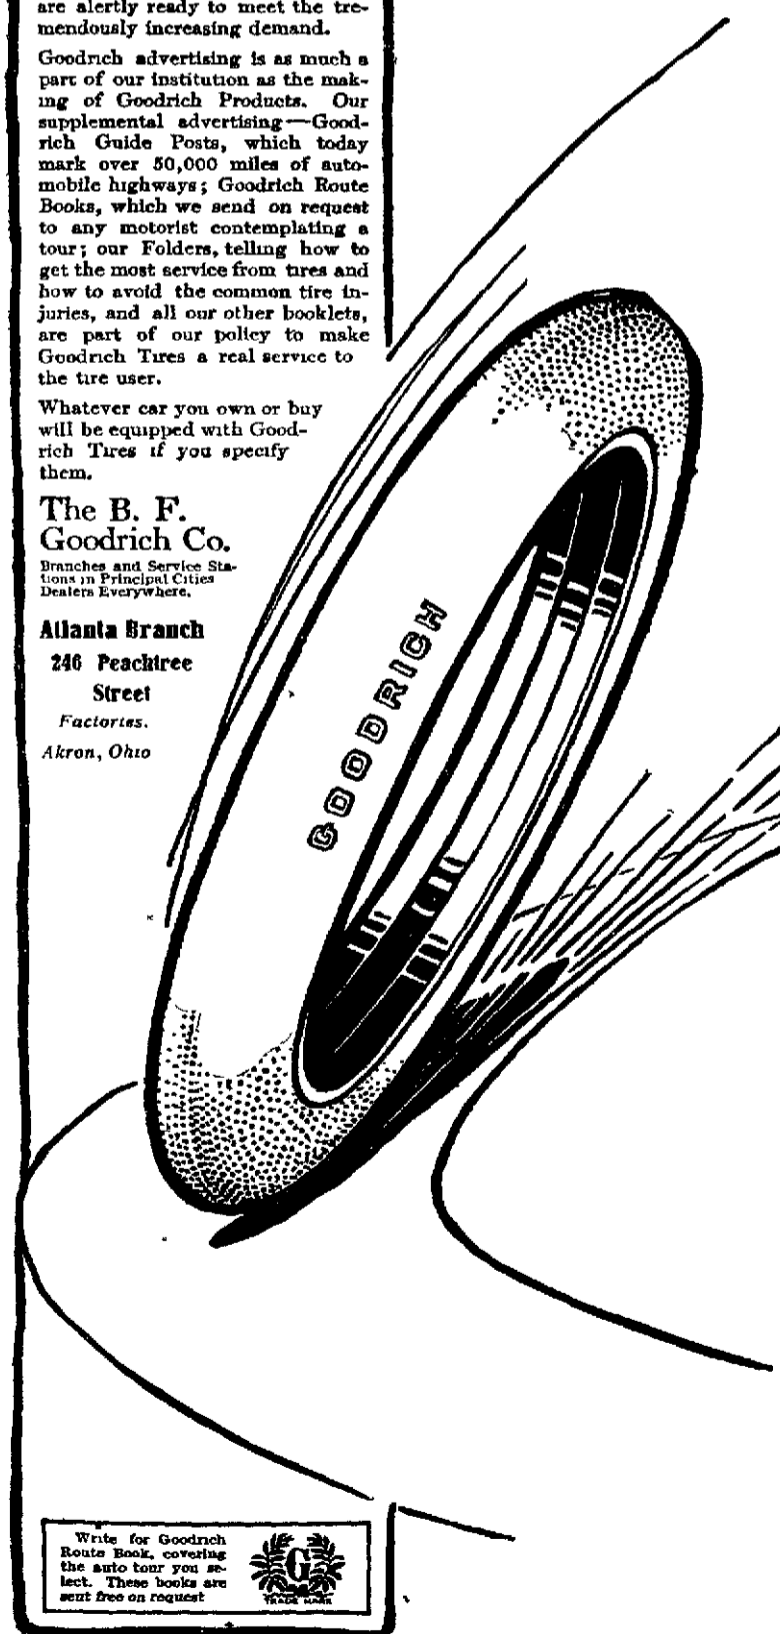

Goodrich branches, service stations and dealers all over the country are alertly ready to meet the tremendously increasing demand.

Goodrich advertising is as much a part of our institution as the making of Goodrich Products. Our supplemental advertising—Goodrich Guide Posts, which today mark over 50,000 miles of automobile highways; Goodrich Route Books, which we send on request to any motorist contemplating a tour; our Folders, telling how to get the most service from tires and how to avoid the common tire injuries, and all our other booklets, are part of our policy to make Goodrich Tires a real service to the tire user.

Newest Maxwell Model Is On Exhibit in Atlanta

NEWEST MAXWELL Model 25
Chas. H. Booth, southern district manager of the Maxwell Motor Co. has sent invitations to every automobile dealer in the south to be in Atlanta Monday of this week to get their first glimpse of the newest Maxwell Model 25.
Mr. Booth also announces that C. T. Redden general manager of E. LeRoy Pelletier advertising manager and Mr. Flanders president of the Maxwell Motor Company, will be in Atlanta Monday, and that an elaborate luncheon has been arranged for by Mr. Booth in honor of the visiting Maxwell officials, and the arrival of the first Maxwell 25, to which all the visiting dealers are invited. The luncheon will take place at the Ansley hotel Monday.
In speaking of the Maxwell 25, Mr. Booth says: This car is a real automobile and the sensation of the auto world. It has a powerful engine, a long wheel base and the price set on it makes it a marvel. Some people wonder how the Maxwell Company can afford to give such a value for it. The car is now on display in our show rooms, and we would be glad for all to see and have a look at the new "25." Mr. Redden, Mr. Flanders and Mr. Pelletier will address the dealers at a special meeting Monday.

MANAGER STUDEBAKER
CO.'S AUTO DIVISION
Big Corporation Places Clarence H. Booth in Full Charge of Auto Manufacture.

In the appointment of Mr. Clarence H. Booth as general manager of the automobile division of the Studebaker corporation, the directors of that great company have once more clearly recognized merit and promotion well deserved.

Mr. Booth, whose appointment has just been announced, has been closely identified with the expansion of the Studebaker automobile business ever since its development began.

His Entry into Auto Business.
In the days when, as the E-M-F company, the new automobile organization, was making tremendous advances, Mr. Booth was operating a large independent steel stamping mill in Detroit, known as the Pressed Steel Sanitary Manufacturing Co. The automobile company needed such a factory for the manufacture of fenders, hoods and other similar parts, but he had the time to build a plant anyway as a result, Mr. Booth's factory became part of the fast growing Studebaker business.

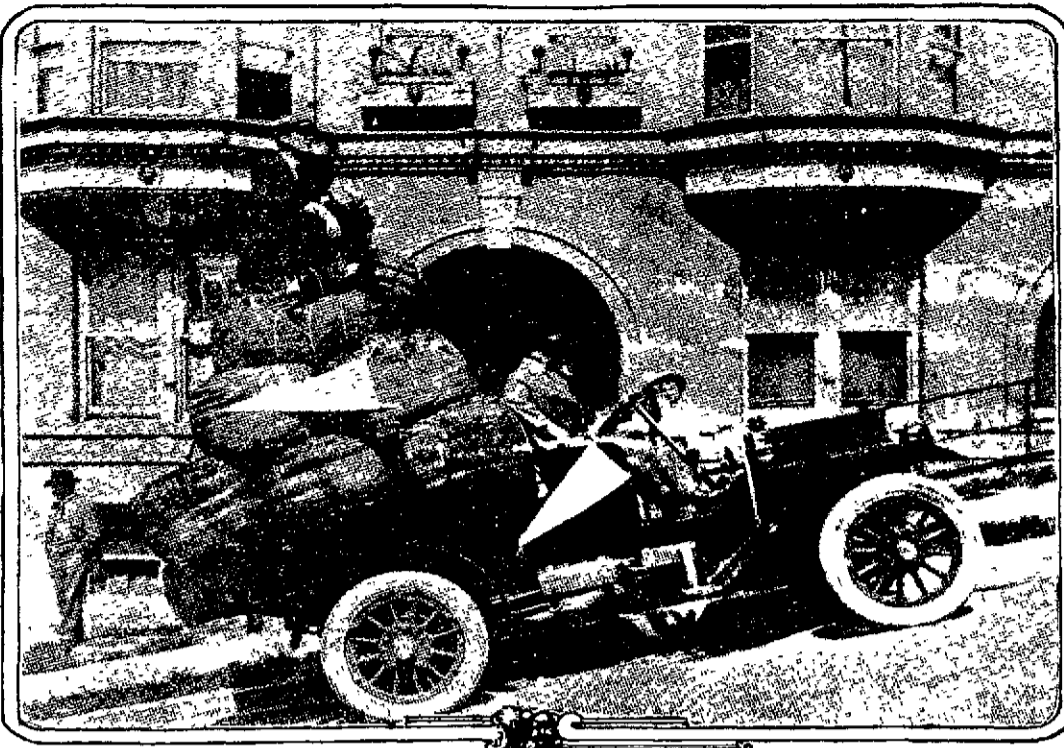

Mr. Booth himself remained in charge of his old factory, then known as "Studebaker Plant 5" and in a short time there was also laid upon his shoulders the superintendent's duties of Studebaker Plant 1, with 2,500 employees and immense shops.

Demonstrates His Ability.
Here he again demonstrated his ability and in no great time became manufacturing manager of the entire automobile division. Within a year he achieved another promotion, this time to become assistant general manager. It is from this position, however, whose duties have been fittingly discharged, that he has just stepped into the highest responsibility—that of general manager of the automobile division.

Within four years the men under his direct charge have increased in number from 1,000 to 15,000. Nothing is known of Mr. Booth's future plans except that he has the full confidence of the Studebaker interest, and also of an unusually strong organization so that no radical changes are expected.

Mr. Booth who is essentially a manufacturer, will take over the Studebaker automobiles a year of value aggregating $55,000,000.

New Buick Truck Eats Up Hills in the West

Mr. McCutcheon, southern district manager of the Buick Motor Co. Atlanta, received the following story from the local Buick dealer, Seattle, Wash.
"Few automobiles, particularly commercial models have received the enthusiastic reception accorded the 1,910-1911 Buick truck, which arrived in Seattle last week," says The Seattle "Times" in the bestseller. The truck, Eldridge and assistant Manager James Fenton immediately put the machine through its paces, and they have joined the ultra-enthusiastic class as a result.

"The accompanying picture shows the truck loaded to capacity. Mr. Fenlon is the man perched on the top. Bert DeCastellone at the wheel. George Mack is the passenger. The truck on Seattle's famous University Hill, which it takes as easily as if on the level."

From Tacoma, Wash., comes a letter saying that the first Buick truck received there was sold before it was unloaded at the freight yards.

Michigan since last fall, much of it due to the first tour of the club over the unexplored routes through the northern forests, and lumber camps.

Cars Will Have No Difficulty.
He says that most cycle cars bear the 26-inch tread, and that these will have little more difficulty on the hard roads for the reason that one wheel will run in the rut and the other in the path made by the horses of single rigs in the center. The Chicago Motor club is working hard to make this year's fall tour a contest surpassing in importance all other events of a touring nature this year, and entries are being made in goodly numbers.
The route of the tour this year does not include Grand Rapids, as last year, and the tourists will travel along the Lake Michigan shores all through the state, not turning away from the shores at Muskegon, as last year, to reach Grand Rapids.
The invitation which was extended to the Chicago Motor club to make

Detroit a part of the route and a night stop is being considered, but it is highly improbable that it will be accepted unless the Wolverine Automobile club extends a hearty invitation and promises some entries for the contest.

Ran to Detroit Last Year.
The club made Detroit its destination on the motor truck run of some years ago, but the city showed little enthusiasm at that time, and for that reason may lose the honor of being a night terminus this year of the pleasure car run. The proposal was made to Mr. Root to bring the run across Michigan from Adrian to Bay City over the road recently built through the progressiveness of the farmers and townspeople of that section of the country, and from Bay City through Saginaw and Flint to Detroit, and from this city through Ypsilanti and Waukesha to the New York to Chicago road.
This matter is to be taken up by the committee of the club within the near future, and providing action is taken by the Wolverine Automobile club, it may be acted upon favorably.

Fred Tone, of the Tone Car corporation of Indianapolis, who is about to place on the market a $399 car, has the best wishes of every Indianapolis maker and a great future for his product, owing to the fact that he is not in a competitive field in his district. Much of the material for the Tone production is being obtained in Detroit, which requires his presence in the city a great portion of his time.
Twenty thousand dollars was the purse for the great Los Angeles to Sacramento race, recently run, according to Roger Stearn, Federal distributor, who was in Detroit. Of this sum all but a small amount was raised by Los Angeles dealers, and when San Francisco failed to come through the route was changed to pass through Stockton to Sacramento, where the event finished, Sacramento adding $2,500 to the purse.

Of Interest to Merchants and Manufacturers

A Motor Truck Is No Stronger Than The Organization That Builds It

Within a few years Alco trucks have risen to a commanding position. They have behind them a company with a capital of $50,000,000.00—a company with seventy-seven years of accumulative experience in transportation. They are built in the most completely equipped motor truck shops in America. It is but natural, therefore, that sixty-two per cent of the Alco trucks now in use were purchased on repeat orders, the dollars and cents expression of the satisfied owners. We sell Alco trucks on a scientific basis. We are not so much interested in the immediate future as in the ultimate business, therefore three years ago we established the transportation cost bureau. This bureau will determine for you just how much your horses are actually costing you, will blueprint your horse delivery system, estimate if you can employ motor trucks to advantage, determine how many you need, the size, the type of body and so on. This service is rendered without charge to you. Write or call for the new 112-page catalogue about the Alco.

Buick Motor Car Made Into A Railroad Mail Carrier

BUICK MOTOR CAR.
Probably among the most unique (yet which is proven to be a very practical idea) vehicles is the railroad mail motor car recently placed in service by The Morning Advertiser of Montgomery, Ala. The railroad motor car is nothing more nor less than a Buick automobile with four car wheels and a double transmission which allows the car to run backwards just as fast and with the same control as running forward.
The Montgomery Advertiser is one of the south's leading morning newspapers. The train schedule in Montgomery has been for the past several years very unsatisfactory as far as the transporting of a morning paper was concerned so, in order for The Advertiser to reach its subscribers promptly and in the morning hours when the reader most desires the paper it was necessary for them to hit upon some plan whereby they could reach promptly the cities and towns within a fifty-mile radius of Montgomery.
The local manager of the Buick company was called in consultation with the management of the paper, who had in mind purchasing an automobile to do the work and when they laid their plans before him he suggested that instead of purchasing an automobile for road work that they purchase one of the big Buick machines and use it on rails on it and use the railroad tracks.
The suggestion was quickly grasped by the management who immediately took the matter up with the railroad company which agreed to let them use their tracks for this unique delivery system. An order was given for the construction of such a machine and the Buick motor Railroad Car is now making early morning trips on regular train schedule for this newspaper, doing it on time and up to the present moment not the least bit of trouble has been experienced. The wonderful service given to the readers of The Advertiser has greatly increased their paper's circulation.
This is the first time a railroad automobile has ever been placed in practical use in the south.

BIG YEAR PREDICTED FOR THE CADILLAC CO.

Plan on Increasing Output of Popular Cars From 15,000 in 1913 to 18,000 in 1914.

Cadillac executives are convinced that the season just opening will be the most successful in the history of their concern and that, as heretofore each year, there will not be enough Cadillacs to go round, although production will be increased from 15,000 (the 1913 output) to 18,000 cars. They base this conviction on the concrete evidence supplied them by their dealers.
The Cadillac dealers have been stirred to this unwonted enthusiasm by the delivery of the 1914 demonstrating cars and by the impression made on the public. Every car that left the factory the home office has been deluged with telegrams and letters of congratulations and importunities for deliveries.
1914 Car Wins Admiration.
The dealers have not only expressed their unbounded admiration for the 1914 models and the advance made in motor car construction as revealed in the two-speed direct drive axle, but have reported specifically on the opinions of the purchasers and prospects. Somewhat similar situations arose in previous years, but never has there been quite such an abundant evidence of a motor car's triumph and that it will fall far below the demand that has already been aroused.
The dealers' communications call special attention to the new quality of luxury imparted by the two-gear direct drive axle. This effect, as they describe, is that of the extreme confidence and comfort which leads the rider unconsciously to relax in every nerve and muscle.
Heretofore the occupant of a motor car frequently has been led, through a sympathetic response to the effort he has ever to sit tense and stretch a bit with the apparently hard-working machine.

AROUND LAKE MICHIGAN IN CYCLE CAR CONTEST

Chairman Root Issues Notice That Tour Will Start From Chicago on September 8.

By Ed L. Spooner, Detroit.
America's first cycle car contest is scheduled to start from Chicago September 8, and will take part in the Around-Lake-Michigan Tour of the Chicago Motor club, in fact, a cycle car division of that tour, with special prizes and special rules created for that particular division.
Charles P. Root, who is chairman of the contest board of the Chicago organization, believes that it is now time to introduce the new sport and, what is more, he believes that many machines of the new sort will be entered, and, what is more, that they will come through.
The road to be followed is no sine-cure for a touring car, as was demonstrated last year, but Chairman Root, in a letter to the automobile department of The Free Press, points to the fact that much good roads work has been accomplished in the northern

Locomobile Cost System
For Operation of Five-Ton Trucks Simple, Accurate

Cost-keeping reduced to its lowest terms the "bugaboo" of complication and guesswork removed from computing the cost of operating a 5-ton truck, clerical work reduced to the vanishing point, and yet an absolutely accurate account of the cost of operating 5-ton trucks—that is what the Locomobile Company presents in its simplified cost system.

In a single sentence, this system is made up of two units. One, the driver's daily report and the other, a book in which this report is transcribed. The cost of operating a 5-ton truck for the driver to make out his card at the end of each day's work. It takes just about three minutes for the truck foreman to transcribe this report into the book of cost records. Or, if more convenient, the cards may be allowed to accumulate until the end of the week, and transcribed into the cost record book in ten or fifteen minutes.

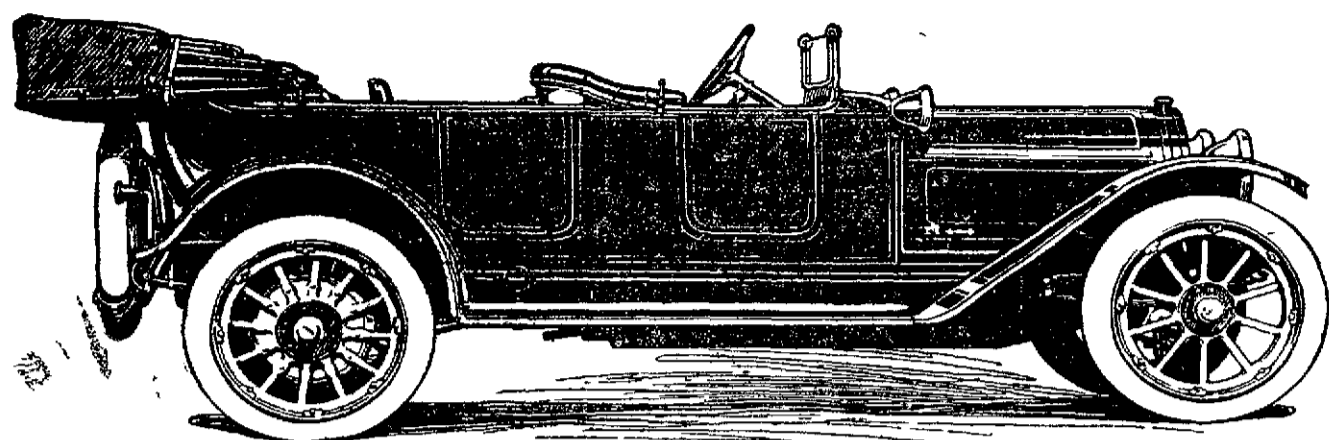

To arrive at the wonderfully simple result embodied in this system, the Locomobile Company divides the charges against a truck into two main headings—fixed and variable.

Under fixed charges are Garage, $25 a month, driver, at $20 a week, insurance, at $190 a year, and interest, averaged yearly, at 5 per cent, $125, making the total fixed charges per annum, $1,585. Taking 300 days to the year, this brings the fixed charges to $5.50 per day.

The variable expenses are depreciation, tires, repairs, gasoline and oil. By taking the average performance of many trucks the expense for these items per mile has been determined at 26 cents.

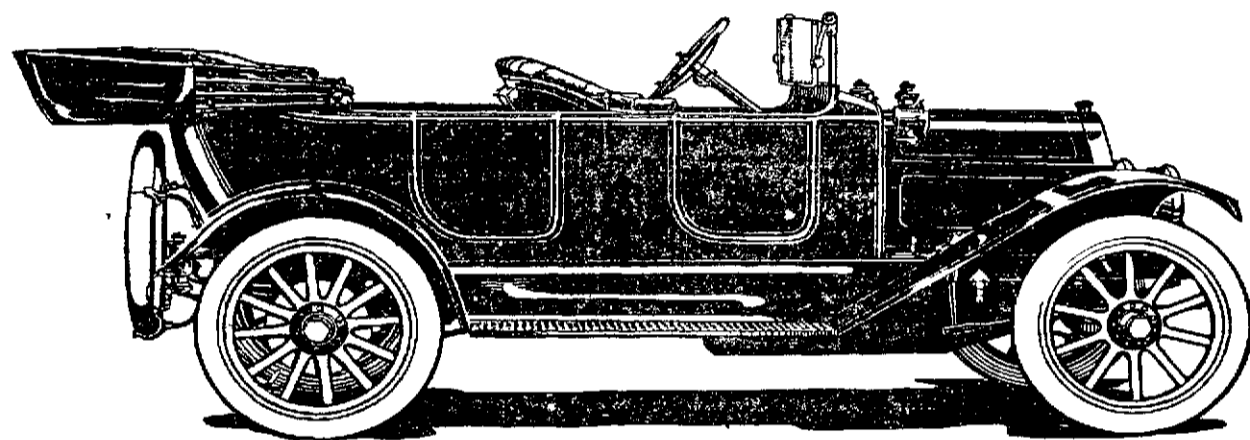

Therefore, in order to find the exact cost of operating a Locomobile 5-ton truck, simply take $5.50 as the fixed charge and add 26 cents for every mile the truck has traveled during the day. This system is so simple, and has been found so accurate that it is all sufficient for a complete record of the operation of the Locomobile 5-ton truck.

will Handle These Cars for the Season of 1914

1914 Maxwell "50-6"—$1975

The sweetest running thing on wheels. Six-cylinder motor, bloc-cast, 50 h. p. 130" wheel base; electric starter and lights; Bruce Ott body; 5-7 passengers; disappearing seats; 36"x4 1/2" tires all 'round. THEY SAID—what did they say? What mattered what they said? They were competitors much perturbed—so what could they say? What must they say—being competitors—much perturbed?

4,000 DEALERS will handle Maxwell Motor Cars for the season of 1914. Season dated from August first—deliveries at new prices now being made.

THAT'S OUR ANSWER to all they said. That tells the story. What is it they say about "he who laughs last?"

MAXWELL CARS WILL DOMINATE the trade for 1914 in the three big classes which command the greatest popularity.

THE FULL SIGNIFICANCE of the line "4,000 dealers," may not have occurred to you. It means, in a word, that we not only have the cars the connoisseurs desire, but that we are now ready to manufacture them in numbers sufficient to supply the insistent demand.

YOUR DEALER SEEMS TO HAVE a kind of sixth sense when it comes to picking the winner in the selling field from season to season.

HE KNOWS: He has his finger on the pulse of the buyer, his eyes on the makers all the time. And he seldom guesses wrong. The successful dealer never—that's why he succeeds.

THIS IS A FAST-MOVING, quick-forgetting business. Watching it is like looking thru a kaleidoscope. It is ever changing.

THE DEALER KNOWS—and you can't go wrong by following his lead for, you see, he is looking for the same things you are seeking—only from a different angle.

HE WANTS CARS that sell themselves. You never knew a dealer to go gunning for trouble, did you? Or looking for hard work?

NOT HE. HE FOLLOWS THE TREND of fashion in design, the progress of the science of metallurgy and manufacture. And when he sees a concern leading in these, he goes hot-foot after that line of cars.

WE HAVE CONCENTRATED our tremendous factory facilities; re-arranged and re-equipped the plants for economical production of automobiles in large quantities.

AND EACH MODEL WILL dominate its class—because a better car—better material, better workmanship and better finish for the same or less money.

DO YOU WONDER dealers are clamoring for the Maxwell line for 1914? They would belie their reputation for astuteness if they didn't.

WHY, LAST WEEK we shipped the first 50 cars of the Maxwell "25" model to 50 points in the United States, and invited all dealers to come and see and try out this wonderful car.

THEY CAME, they saw and the new "25" Maxwell conquered. It was great to see their enthusiasm when the car, carrying five dealers aggregating 1010 pounds, sped up "Abbey Hill"—the steepest grade on Manhattan and a double-S turn—on high gear as if it were on the level.

OVER AND OVER AGAIN they put the car to the test—climbing the hill at all speeds down to 8 miles per hour on high gear—just a 'pullin' all the time.

BUT WE ARE DIGRESSING—so enthusiastic about that wonderful "25" we forgot our text for the moment. Let's discuss the entire line—for there isn't a dead one in it—no model that is a load on the others. Each is supreme in its class.

TAKE THE "50-6" for example—now thoroughly tried and proven. 1913 output all sold. Deliveries of 1914 model—left-hand drive with right side drive optional—begins August 15th.

1914 PRICE is $1975.

THERE'S A LINE that will create consternation in the trade. They all expected it would be $2,400—in fact we said so. That was the price we had decided on, but—

PERHAPS, YOU'VE NOTICED there's a wicked war on for supremacy in this class of car. We concluded that, so long as other makers had started it we would give them a real six at a real price and see how far they can go. Watch it—it will be interesting—and the buyer will be the beneficiary.

IT WILL BE UP TO makers of $3,500—$4,000, yes, and $5,000 sizes to demonstrate wherein they give the difference in value.

AND WHAT ABOUT the manufacturer who stuck to fours for one season too long? Having himself failed to progress he would stop all progress. He would sweep back the sea with his tiny whisk broom! He protests that folk will still pay $2,000 for fours—and convinces no one but himself.

IN SEVEN PASSENGER CARS the six is now supreme. It is not coming; it is here.

THEN THE MAXWELL "35"—This is, we firmly believe, the greatest car ever made in the so-called intermediate price class—a big five passenger car for that great class of buyer who wants all there is of comfort and power, at a price he can afford.

1914 PRICE IS $1085 without and $1225 with electric starter and lights. Equal this if you can—in a car of anywhere near the quality.

BLOC-CAST MOTOR—fourth year unchanged. A motor such as you can't surpass in a $2000 car. And all other features equally excellent. This car will lead—distance all others in its class, which is to say anything under $1500.

AND FINALLY THE "25"—the car the trade has been talking about, looking for, waiting for.

IT IS HERE—WE ARE DELIVERING—and while we may not hope to supply all who want them, we will be able to appease 30,000 buyers during the next twelve months.

YOUR ENTHUSIASM will know no bounds when you see and ride in this "25."

THIS IS A REAL AUTOMOBILE—full 25 horsepower, bloc cast motor; 103" wheel base; same size tires all around, 30 x 3 1/2; full five passenger body; 3 speed selective transmission; cone clutch; worm and sector steering gear; left-hand drive; center control; magneto—all the features of a high priced car.

AND AT A PRICE no other maker has ever before been able to produce such a car—$750 plus the freight.

THE RESULT OF MORE concentrated experience, engineering and metallurgical knowledge, manufacturing skill and financial resources than any other, this car justifies our efforts and fulfils our fondest hopes.

IT WAS DESIGNED to meet the ideas and the needs of tens of thousands of discriminating buyers—not beginners but experienced motorists—who must consult the purse and yet who detest and decline to wear a uniform and are willing to pay a little more for a car that is a lot better.

WE WILL BUILD 30,000 of this model; 12,000 of the "35" and 2,000 to 3,000 of the Maxwell 50-6 in the next twelve months.

THAT'S SECOND LARGEST in the world—and still we are not satisfied. Watch the Maxwells.

Following upon the largest motor truck order on record, C. A. Benjamin, general sales manager of the American Locomotive company, automobile department, announces the sale of four Alco six-cylinder touring cars to the Postal Transfer Service, Inc. The car that purchased eighty Alco trucks to haul the United States mail in and about Greater New York.

The motor cars are to be employed by officials of the company, and will act as service cars to maintain the efficiency of the mail deliveries. Their sale boosts the amount of the purchase by the Postal Transfer Service, Inc., to $249,000.

The above Alco trucks complete a fleet of four trucks recently purchased by Fulton county road construction department. The two trucks shown above are equipped with automatic power dump bodies which are controlled by a lever close to the driver's seat, so that dumping a load of stone, sand, cement, etc., the truck can be kept moving and the ingredients spread in just the right thickness that the driver desires. These are the guards, and the plan has been most successful and beneficial alike to the state and to the country. The work of the south has been accomplished through the use of convicts.

Representatives of all associations interested in road work will be brought together, and every effort will be made to crystallize sentiment in favor of a united plan for road improvement throughout the country.

RIDING IN A HENDERSON CHEAPER THAN WALKING

Ray Harroun Finds Fuel Cost From Indianapolis to San Francisco Only $26.

From Indianapolis to the Pacific ocean in an automobile for less than $7 is almost as cheap as walking. Yet that is the kerosene fuel cost record established by Ray Harroun in the Henderson car No. 3, in the trip of Indiana automobile makers to the coast, which has just ended in Los Angeles.

Motorists have been watching the Henderson with its kerosene carburetor. They have wondered if it would work in the mountains and on the desert, and a good many have been skeptical even about its practicability on common middle states roads under common atmospheric conditions.

This demonstration of the efficiency of coal oil will put a crimp in automobile upkeep, such a crimp that with the general adoption of the kerosene carburetor present drivers will be able to drive more, and people who cannot now afford to drive will get on the kerosene wagon—and all of them will be wanting a big national drive-way. That is how the Hendersons have helped the cause.

of business on the Empire car, built by the Empire Automobile company, of Indianapolis, Ind., has made necessary many additions to the present organization of that company, one of the more recent appointments being that of Wallace C. Hood, as commercial manager of the company.

Mr. Hood will supervise the sales and advertising policies of the company, and in the triangle composed of Cecil E. Gilson, who is general manager, and L. R. Wilbur, his able assistant, should develop some very interesting and profitable Empire car policies for Empire distributors throughout the world.

A convention of automobile dealers, unique in the history of such conventions of this country, took place this week at Moline, Ill., when the dealers of the Velle motor gathered to formulate plans for the 1914 selling season.

Important among the many things discussed was the new Velle advertising campaign in which this company is entering after five years of constantly increasing success.

COLE MAKES FAST TIME CROSSING CONTINENT

Left Ten Days Behind Big Touring Party and Finished But Few Hours Behind.

San Francisco, Cal., August 2.—The engineer test car from the Cole Motor Car company, Indianapolis, poked into this city this morning, after a long trip from the Indiana automobile manufacturing town, although the Cole did not start out on July 15, because the Cole factory production was oversold and a 1914 Cole was not available.

Although the Cole party left Indianapolis on the afternoon of July 12, it did not leave Chicago, a full day in the Colorado mountains, testing, and were marooned on the great American desert for six hours by a cloudburst, they made the transcontinental run easily.

They reported excellent road conditions, with improvements being made in places where needed, or else money having been appropriated to make changes. The trip, besides proving a relief car to those traveling from the transcontinental touring standpoint, will be highly beneficial to the Cole Motor Car company in the west.

Excitement Road Conditions. They reported excellent road conditions, with improvements being made in places where needed, or else money having been appropriated to make changes. The trip, besides proving a relief car to those traveling from the transcontinental touring standpoint, will be highly beneficial to the Cole Motor Car company in the west.

FREE TIRE SERVICE FOR ATLANTA AUTOISTS Johnson-Gewinner company enter the tire business with a splendid service arrangement for their tire customers. Owners who purchase tires from them are protected day and night, every day in the year against tire troubles on the road.

The car was made to meet conditions and the rains were just as if Engineer Crawford had returned to Indianapolis a conference of the engineers on the Cole's standardized roll of honor will be held in Indianapolis as that will be made thoroughly conversant with the knowledge gained by Cole's chief engineer on his transcontinental voyage.

Service is what every automobile owner appreciates and needs, and tire service is the most commonly needed. Automobile manufacturers have improved their cars to a degree where road trouble is almost a thing of the past. Tires, however, are still an uncertainty and a source of considerable trouble and annoyance.

At present there are conflicting plans to the number of four which are being pushed in congress and it is hoped to aid the federal aid bill by bringing together the support of these plans and in this way bringing about the presentation of one comprehensive plan which will save confusion in the future.

Representative Shackelford, of Missouri, has a plan for the maintenance of post roads throughout the country by federal aid, the government to grant from $15 to $20 per year per mile for the maintenance of these roads. National good roads work by convicts will also be a matter of discussion, many sections having proven this method of road work most successful, including several states in Colorado, in Colorado the convicts are set at work on the roads without conflicting plans. At present there are conflicting plans to the number of four which are being pushed in congress and it is hoped to aid the federal aid bill by bringing together the support of these plans and in this way bringing about the presentation of one comprehensive plan which will save confusion in the future.

Mr. Harroun found his desk piled high with correspondence in regard to the great highway, the success of which is now assured.

George B. Daniels, vice president and general manager of the Oakland Motor Car company, says that the July record of the plant has been remarkable and he has approved the statement that July is a poor month for manufacturing, daily shipments of the month having thus far averaged 51 cars. The company is completing a record-breaking year with a gross business of over $15,000,000.

SPEEDING UP SENATE ON TARIFF MEASURE

Democrats Plan for Longer Sessions—Walsh, of Montana, Supports Entire Measure

Washington August 2.—In an effort to hasten the progress of the tariff bill leaders on both sides in the senate determined today to support a movement to have the sessions begin next week at 11 a. m. instead of at noon. The senate will sit seven hours a day under this arrangement and the leaders hope the extra hour will serve to get many campaign speeches out of the way.

The eastern schedule finally was completed today after an amendment by Senator Jones to put a countervailing duty on lime was voted down. Senators Borah and Gronna voted with the democrats. The entire tariff bill was temporarily laid aside because Senators Penrose and Oliver, who are especially interested in it, were out of town. The sugar schedule also was passed over. Both will be taken up next week.

PRISON FARM VISITED BY SENATE COMMITTEE

Barbecued Dinner Served Senators in Lobby of Stockade by Prisoners.

Milledgeville, Ga., August 2.—(Special)—The senate penitentiary committee spent today at the prison farm and thoroughly examined this institution. Superintendent Burke had prepared a splendid barbecued dinner, which was served in the lobby of the male stockade. The white prisoners were very courteous and waited on the table keeping the plates of the senators always well supplied with tableware. Prison Commissioners Davidson and Patterson were on hand, escorting the members through all the buildings and lands of the farm. The senators talked with the prisoners, and had long interviews with old Mrs. Nobles and Bill Miner. The day was filled with many interesting features. Early in the morning the state sanitarium was visited, the old capital building, the old governor's mansion, the G. N. I. college and the state reformatory. Members of the committee were much impressed with the magnitude of the state institutions in this city. The committee left for Macon at 3 o'clock after a very busy day. It is not known what their report will be, but from their expressions they will certainly recommend that better quarters be built for the negro prisoners who are at present housed in a big old barn.

The women agree that a widower may marry again, provided he waits ten years and then picks out a wife near his own age. ## Our Prices and Plans Attractive to Business Men

This is proven by the rapid strides of our business and the number of transactions that we have with business men who carefully consider before they purchase property.

Our plans are clean-cut, based upon accurate business principles carefully figured, and assure against loss or dissatisfaction.

Our diamonds are as cashable as a certified check at any time within one year of purchase, as we guarantee to buy back at ninety cents on the dollar.

We also take back our diamonds at full purchase price in part payment on larger stones at any time, and allow in addition any meantime advance in price, as we think this gain belongs to our customer.

This means that you can wear a hundred-dollar diamond a whole year at a cost of less than a dollar a month, or that it is worth a hundred dollar-bill to you whenever you want to gratify your taste for a larger diamond, and that you receive the benefit of any advance in values.

Isn't it gratifying to be constantly assured of the value of your property?

Quality and weight, and prices really the lowest, all in plain figures from which we never vary, is doubly assuring, and argues contented possession.

Our prices are figured without regard for the profit of a single sale, but to make satisfied customers and to realize from the greater amount of business.

Our Diamond Book, No. 7, goes into careful detail, and is full of valuable information. We want you to have it—free upon request.

Our Truss Dept. and Private Fitting Rooms

The fitting rooms are separated from the general business, private and comfortable. Both male and female attendants and expert fitters. The stock is complete and includes all kinds of trusses, supporters, belts, elastic garments, crutches, braces and all similar goods.

No Properly Fitted Truss Should Be Uncomfortable

At the head of our Truss Department is an expert who for years has been connected with the best truss houses of America, and recognized as one of the most expert truss fitters. We guarantee correct fitting, and when you are fitted correctly you will not be in discomfort.

If you are wearing a support that is uncomfortable or painful we should like you to come in and let us examine it. We will put on you a truss that fits CORRECTLY, and you will find it easy and comfortable. Almost anyone with a little experience can select and fit a truss that will HOLD the rupture (for a time at any rate), but it takes many years of experience with hernia and a careful study of the human anatomy to overcome the painful pressing, slipping, rubbing, irritation and other unnecessary difficulties of truss fitting.

Let us fit you properly and comfortably. Our charges are moderate. Consultation entirely FREE.

HOUSEHOLD DRUGS

BRIDGES SMITH OUT FOR MAYOR OF MACON

Former Chief Executive Will Be Opposed by Alderman A. L. Dasher, Sr.

Macon, Ga., August 2.—(Special).—Bridges Smith has at last broken his silence with the declaration that he will be a candidate for the office of mayor at the coming municipal election. For several months there has been much speculation in Macon as to whether or not Mr. Smith would run. It was generally known that he preferred not to do so being content to remain in his present office of city clerk, but his friends have been insistent and finally he has yielded.

"Somewhat against my inclination I have decided to make the race," said Mr. Smith today, "but I am frank to say that I would much prefer to remain in my present position. No man appreciates or loves his friends more than I do and believing that they are sincere in their offer to honor me again with the mayor's office, I feel that I must submit to their wishes without counting the cost of personal sacrifice. The formal announcement with my aldermanic ticket will appear in ample time."

Mr. Smith was first elected mayor in 1910, retiring in 1907, and since that time he has been working as city editor of the Macon Telegraph. He was elected city clerk the first time in 1885 and served eleven years. He has also filled that office since 1903.

So far there is only one other candidate for the office of mayor, he being Alderman A. L. Dasher, Sr. It is not contemplated that there will be any further entries, now that Mr. Smith has formally entered the race.

Mayor Moore's Barbecue.
Macon, Ga., August 2.—(Special).—Mayor T. Moore's annual barbecue, given today at his Mikado farm, on the Houston road, was in keeping with those in past years. About 250 of the mayor's city friends were present and in addition to enjoying the well barbecued meats and accessories, spent considerable time in inspecting the mayor's model farm. The mayor exhibited corn stalks nine and ten feet high containing anywhere from three to nine ears of corn. His alfalfa field also attracted much attention, Mayor Moore being the pioneer alfalfa raiser in this county.

Watermelon Crop Famous.
Macon, Ga., August 2.—(Special).—Georgia's watermelon crop promises to become as famous as her peach crop within a few years. Reports to date show that this year a total of 3,300 cars of watermelons have been shipped from this state and the aggregate price to the growers has been $500,000. The season was practically closed yesterday as far as shipments are concerned, a number of the buyers who have been stationed here leaving for the northern fields.

Alfalfa Growing Clubs.
Macon, Ga., August 2.—(Special).—The efforts of the Georgia State Fair to organize alfalfa growing clubs throughout the state is receiving much encouragement in Bibb county, more than a dozen of the biggest farmers of the county having taken to the work and are preparing the land for the sowing of alfalfa next month.

Besides the alfalfa club Bibb county probably has the largest clover growing club in the state. Clover is considered one of the best crops that can be grown for a cover crop, or soil improvement. For forage stock it is also considered first-class.

DON'T TRUST TO CHARITY LEGISLATURE IS URGED

Proposition to Make Nominal Appropriation for Home for Wayward Girls Not Favored.

Friends of the house bill to establish a home for wayward girls as a state institution declare that they are distinctly not in favor of the suggestion that the legislature pass the bill with a nominal appropriation of $500 or $1,000, and then trust to the charitable contributions of individuals to furnish money to build and operate the home.

Chief Probation Officer W. W. Tindall, of the children's court, says: "This is not a question for charity to deal with. It is a duty of the state. What is needed is an institution which belongs to the state and is maintained by it just as the boys reformatory is maintained."

"For the state to pass a bill providing for the creation of such a home, and then ask that the money be raised by charitable contributions, is worse than begging the question."

"If what is said is true, and I have no doubt it is, that ten to twelve girls are lost in each county in Georgia every year through a lack of such an institution, the imperative duty of the state is a thing that cannot be shifted to other shoulders."

The advocates of the measure point out, however, that it is not asked that the state appropriate the entire sum to be paid this year. They ask for simply enough to begin work on the home, which will be completed by payment of the total appropriation in stretched over a period of two or three years. Those who are working for the measure say they appreciate the financial embarrassment which the state is in, and declare that they will be content to get this year just enough to start the work, but they say to pass such a measure with an appropriation of $1,000, and then trust to charity is wrong in principle, and would not work out well in practice.

T. W. HOLBROOK DROWNS WHEN BOAT TURNS OVER
Hartwell, Ga., August 2.—(Special).—Thad W. Holbrook, a prominent and wealthy young farmer of Hart county, was drowned this afternoon in Fugate river. Holbrook was carrying a load of lumber to the Carolina side from his mill when the boat was capsized, drowning Holbrook and a negro man.

Holbrook is a son of T. L. Holbrook, and is survived by his wife and two children. Mrs. Holbrook was a daughter of T. Mahlon Myers.

GOVERNORS TO WORK ON THE PUBLIC ROADS
Kansas City, August 2.—"Missouri would like to borrow the governor of Kansas for a few days for its road campaign," said Governor Major, of Missouri, to Governor Hodges, of Kansas, here today.

The Kansas governor will be glad to come if you have a pair of overalls that will fit and if you will let him work," replied Governor Hodges.

"We'll have the overalls," Governor Major replied, "and you will have to work some if you do as much as the Missouri governor intends to do."

DIYING SAN LEAVES WIFE WHO SHOT HIM MONEY FOR DEFENSE

Savannah, Ga., August 2.—Lying mortally wounded at the Savannah hospital Joe Dare, a Central trainman, is finding solace in the daily meetings with his wife, who inflicted the fatal injuries.

Confined in a cell at the police station the wife, now deeply remorseful over her act, declares that she loves her husband more than her own life, and that if she could only die with him she would be happy. The death-reconciliation between the two was a pathetic scene. The police granted what may be Dare's last request and allow his wife to visit him daily at the hospital.

Dare was shot by his wife in their apartment at York and Barnard streets about ten days ago. The shooting was the result of a quarrel over a trivial matter. The police are awaiting the death of Dare to formally charge his wife with murder. Dare has given orders that his life insurance, amounting to about $1,500, be collected as soon as he dies and turned over to his wife to aid her in her defense.

FREE LUNCH TO VANISH IN WISCONSIN SALOONS
Lacrosse, Wis., August 2.—While saloonkeepers of Connecticut are preparing to resist the law forbidding free lunches in saloons, liquor men of Lacrosse are circulating a petition which will be presented to the common council asking for the passage of an ordinance making the free lunch unlawful.

All saloonkeepers in town except two have signed it. Downtown proprietors who have been in the habit of setting up expensive lunches declare that the cost of meats and vegetables is so high they no longer can afford it.

The Illiterate Vote.
(From The Living Church.)
Child labor is the bulwark of the illiterate vote. More than one in ten of all the native white American voters in seven states cannot read their ballots, according to the latest census figures. The national child labor committee points out that ten years ago nearly one-third of all the native white American working boys under 16 were found in those seven states, that lead the country today in illiteracy of native whites.

YARYAN NAVAL STORES RECEIVERS WIN CASE

Speer Grants Authority to Issue of Certificates to Continue Operation of Plant.

Mt. Airy, Ga., August 2.—(Special).—A case of unusual importance to the people of south Georgia, and particularly to those of Brunswick, was heard today by Judge Emory Speer, who granted the application of the receivers of the Yaryan Naval Stores company authority to issue receivers' certificates in the sum of $100,000 for the purpose of continuing the operation of the mammoth plant of the company located at Brunswick.

J. S. Halley, Jr., of Toledo, and E. W. Stetson, of Macon, receivers for the company, and their counsel, F. E. Twitty, of Bennet, Twitty & Reasa, and Max Isaac, of Isaac & Hayward, were in attendance on the hearing. It developed that the issue really involved was whether the plant should be closed or whether its operation should be continued. The receivers presented complete reports, showing that it was absolutely essential to keep the plant in operation in order that the demand for its particular products in the markets of this country and abroad might be supplied. Out of the 400 creditors of the company, only one, having a claim of less than $300, objected to the granting of the authority requested by the receivers. This creditor was represented by Judge Bolling Whitfield, of Brunswick.

The estimate of the court as to the importance of the case is fairly mani-festated by the decision which Judge Speer rendered at the conclusion of the hearing.

Judge Speer's Opinion.
"This is a case wherein the flexible powers of a court of equity are invoked to conserve not only the interests of the parties actually before the court, but a great venture which may be of incalculable service to a whole people. It would be singularly unfortunate if the court did not have the power. Three years ago in that empire once covered by the majestic pine forests of Georgia there was everywhere incalculable waste. It was in the decaying tree tops which had been left by the ax of the lumberman."

"The testimony of Mr. Bralley demonstrates that all of this waste material belonging to the receiver is of great commercial value. If the demonstration progresses proportionately as it seems it may do, this process may be of scarcely less value to the people of south Georgia and other southern states where pine forests grow and are now growing than the cotton crop itself. The progress makes only to dead material. It has no relation to the growing pine. He has an exceedingly small regard for the day and time in which he lives who would refuse the opportunity to men when they wish to pay the privilege of expending their own money for conducting this demonstration and bringing to profitable fruition the labors which have been performed by the genius who discovered the process.

"I cannot find it in my heart to do this, as in fact, the best thing for the creditors. This is plain enough. These receivers' certificates, in my judgment, ought to be issued. Eighty-five per cent of the creditors unite in the purpose of the bill. Eighty-five per cent of the stockholders agree to underwrite the certificates. Among all the creditors only one party, the Patton Bag company, owing a claim of $500, comes forward to object. It has the right to object. It is entitled to have its $500 paid. It threatens to make trouble for these receivers' certificates. It has the legal right to attempt this, however much we may question its wisdom. But, in order that it may not make great trouble for the process promising so much, the court directs that the receivers pay its $500. This is all it can ask. The receivers' certificates will be issued, and these citizens of Ohio who manifest the purpose to do so much for the southern people will, so far as my power goes, be accorded the opportunity. In a long judicial life, never have I seen the promise of so many benefits in any project for the betterment of all before the court and the people at large."

By common consent the endurance record has been awarded to the Kansas man who picked three crates of red raspberries.

A HARBINGER

OF PROSPERITY

THE SEASON'S first bale of cotton has just been delivered at Albany, Ga., and sold for 17 cents per pound.

This means much to the South.

It means much to the State of Georgia.

It means much to Atlanta.

What is more, Secretary McAdoo has just announced that Uncle Sam is to deposit $50,000,000 in the Southern banks to assist them in financing the South's great cotton crop. We consider this the most important act of the Wilson Administration, and believe that it will result in great benefits to all sections of our country. Verily, the Wall Street croakers have croaked their last croak.

Bringing the matter home to us, we are reliably informed that the Atlanta banks are to be favored with a liberal portion in the distribution of the Government deposits.

What does it all mean?

To the wise investor, we say most emphatically, it means that NOW is the time to BUY.

With bountiful crops assured, and plenty of money in sight to finance them; with the world consuming more and more of the South's fleecy staple as the years go by; we candidly believe that this city is entering an era of great prosperity, and that there is soon to be a great enhancement in realty values.

Let this remind you that we have listed with us the most central unimproved lot in the city, and at a price that will net the purchaser a handsome profit within the next few years.

SHAKE HANDS WITH PROFIT

THERE is a great band of people that will tell you what they could have done on Peachtree, West Peachtree and Ivy streets by buying while the streets were quiet. That's spilt milk now and doesn't count for much.

TURNER CARSON and Livingston Wright saw the light on West Peachtree in January, 1912, and bought forty feet at $300 per foot. They held one year and sold for $600.

SPRING street will duplicate the success of Ivy and West Peachtree.

I AM OFFERING three lots at Spring and Simpson streets:

- Corner, 26x105 feet, $7,750.
- Next corner, 25x105 feet, $6,750.
- Next lot, 25x105 feet, $6,500.

TERMS, one-third cash, balance 1, 2, 3 years at 6 per cent.

BUY ONE of these lots now and double your money in 18 months' time.

REAL ESTATE TALK BY ADAIR

In 1902 shares in the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad sold at 200. This was known as standard railroad stock. The road extends from New York to Boston, connecting the two largest cities in the east. It travels the states of New York, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts; passing through many large cities and through the manufacturing district of New England. New Haven stock was described as gilt-edge; it was the kind that benevolent bank presidents, with side whiskers, would advise school teachers to buy. In 1902 this stock sold at 200. In that same year Martin Amorous bought the corner of Mitchell and Forsyth streets at $20,000.

Right at this point the two stories begin to diverge. It is doubtful if the New Haven road was managed as the stockholders wished. It is certain that they did not approve of a great many things that were done; but what voice does a small shareholder have in the operation of a railroad? If he should be so presumptuous as even to attend a meeting, he would be put down as a crank. If he had anything to say at the meeting he would be classed as a socialist; if he expressed his real feelings, he would be called a muckraker. A small group of insiders usually have the program typewritten beforehand, and the meeting itself is perfunctory. New Haven stock is now quoted at 100.

Martin Amorous had something to say about the management of his corner at Mitchell and Forsyth streets. In fact, he had a great deal to say about its management. Man's memory cannot carry every figure in his head exactly, but our recollection is that the rentals of that property were $3,000 a year for the first period; $4,500 a year for the second period, and $6,000 a year for the last period. Sub-contracts and recent developments indicate that the rental value of the corner is verging on $10,000 a year. Only a short time ago Mr. Amorous sold the property for $150,000. It yielded a superb income all the time he owned it, and in its final sale brought five times the original purchase price.

One minor advantage about owning a corner like this is that the income reaches you monthly. You do not have to wait six months to see if a board of directors is going to let you have some of your own money back. Your grocer, your tailor, your medical man and your dentist, these and all other tradesmen have a habit of sending in their bills on the first of the month. How are you to meet them with a deferred dividend? A rent check enables you to look at a bill squarely in the eye without finching. But how would you like to be in the plight of the Griffin stockholders who have been sued to recover all the dividends that have been paid them for the past seven years?

In this case where the concern went into bankruptcy, it is claimed that all dividends paid for seven years were not earned, and were fraudulent. A court order is sought that will make all stockholders return these dividends. The ordinary stockholders are entirely innocent, had nothing to do with the management, and it is doubly hard on them to have to give up their investment and in addition have to pay back the dividends they had received. It is a peculiarly distressing case of the minority stockholder who had no voice in the management, and would have been considered presumptuous if he had even attended a meeting.

Conditions are such that from now on there will not be the attractiveness about stocks of big railroad systems as there used to be. These companies are so hedged about by Interstate Commerce Commission and state public utility commissions that manipulations will be limited to a fair earning on a reasonable capitalization. The old-time manipulations are now a thing of the past. The new conditions will be a knight errand. About all the ordinary stockholder can expect is 5 or 6 per cent, only that and nothing more. Even then, how is any ordinary stockholder going to tell whether the dividends have been really earned or not? At any time he may be called on (just as the Griffin stockholders were) to refund dividends that had been fraudulently paid.

Some will not touch stocks at all, but deal in bonds, the underlying security. They feel as if by buying bonds they have attained the ultimate. For a long time that was the general impression; but it is now known that bonds, certificates, come ahead of stocks. So what is the ultimate, the fundamental, the underlying foundation of all investments? Show us a man who has a large amount of money, who is more like that one; in the next ten years there will be other centers and sub-centers to develop values.

Somehow or other there is a feeling abroad now that the atmosphere has cleared to some extent. There is an idea that from now on conditions will be more favorable for the south, and not unduly favorable to New York and Wall Street. As everyone knows, the great money centers of the country have had an undue advantage for many years, even with this handicap the south has grown wonderfully. There is an idea gaining ground every day that we now have in Washington a president who is in sympathy with the south and its problems. If the south could only be relieved of the incursions of Wall Street domination, its growth in the next ten years would be astonishing.

A SERIES OF THRILLING STORIES OF EARLY WESTERN MINING. DAYS

The Mariposa War

THEY were both miners and owned claims on the same gulch, but were neither friends nor well acquainted; otherwise there probably would have been no Mariposa War, to pass down in district legend, even though it escaped the light of school histories. But there was a man in Mariposa will testify.

Bill Thompson stood six feet three in his stocking feet, and wasn't given to much conversation. He owned Number Four on Mariposa, had good ground, and worked it well. Jim Tipton owned Number Two on the same creek, but didn't work it, save for assessment, because he had another good piece of ground across the low divide, on Goldpan, where he held forth. They were about the same age, and neither of them had any bad habits—that is, so far as any one in the camp ever knew. Maybe this was one reason why they weren't well known. A man has to have some bad habits in order to be what is generally called "popular."

The war was caused by two women, a bulldog and a claim. The claim was Number Three, on Mariposa, which stood between their stakes, and had once been owned and worked by Old Bill Banks. Old Bill had a good piece of ground, a water-right, and a hydraulic plant. Being a man who preferred telling about what he was going to do in preference to showing what he had done, he got just about that far and quit. He died. His heirs put Number Three in the hands of an eastern agent, who has since changed his home address, and perhaps his name. Anyhow, it's a certainty he never came West, where several of the boys wanted to meet him and give him a reception. He knew the kind of reception it would be, and he wasn't anxious.

One noon when the sun was shining, in the summer-time, and dust was on the trails, the stage from Burdick came rattling along and dumped out a woman together with several boxes and bundles, and she wasn't the kind the camp knew. She didn't look as if she cared for dancing. She talked for a minute with the proprietor of the Palace Hotel, which really wasn't a palace, and he called Bill Thompson over from where he had been throwing supplies on the back of a mountain buckboard he always had when getting an outfit.

"Bill," he said, "this is Miss Esmerelda Brown. She's bought Number Three, on Mariposa, and is going to be a neighbor of yours. Can't you give her a lift up the gulch?"

Bill wasn't much of a ladies' man, and at first didn't like the job; but she put out her hand and gave him one of those smiles that a woman never learns until she is at least thirty years old, and from that minute she owned both Bill and the buckboard. Being a man who didn't talk much, he scratched his head and said:

"Sure!" Then he lugged her stuff over and lashed it on top of a sack of flour and side of bacon, and was glad she was going along. That was how Miss Esmerelda came.

They drove away out through the shacks and tents and over the river-flat into the canon, and she talked and Bill said, "Sho," or "Do tell," or anything else in the way of conversation that seemed polite and interesting; and before they had driven two miles he learned that she had sunk all her money in buying Number Three. He had read in the Weekly Woman's Advisor, published at Page Center, Iowa, of how women made the best miners in the world, and so had come West to make her fortune. She was willing to stay till she made it, even if it did take a couple of months. Bill thought probably it would take that long, anyway. He didn't tell her he had been mining for twenty years, and hadn't made it yet. That would have discouraged her. He merely grinned.

They drove away past the flats, and up where the timber grows big, and fine, stately and the farther they drove the more confidential she got and the more certain Bill was that she had quite a little to learn about the West. He tried to picture her in rubber boots holding the nozzle of a giant, but somehow it didn't seem to work. Bill didn't have much faith in the Weekly Woman's Advisor, at least, not as much as she had.

Finally, when the sun was setting and they swung around a bend to the cabin on Number Three, standing there with its door closed and almost surrounded by big tamaracks, she seemed a little awed by the lonesomeness of it, and the only comforting thing he could offer was that his cabin was just "up the gulch a little farther." Then she reciprocated by inviting him to come back down for dinner, and he, being polite, accepted. Besides he was hungry.

Esmerelda Brown for the next three or four days was quite busy, planting flower-seed she had brought with her, cleaning up the cabin because Banks had not been a very good housekeeper, and attending to the papering of one room with old newspapers. She found time, however, to come up to Bill's claim each afternoon to study mining, and Bill always found time to return the visit in time to eat dinner. He seemed to like her cooking better than his own, and she appeared, in spite of her assertions that she wasn't lonesome, to like to have company when the meal was over and the stars shining out and the day's mining ended.

Bill would light his pipe and sit at one end of the bench in front of the cabin with his feet stretched out, while she would sit at the other and tell him all about her home and what she wanted to do as soon as she had dug all the gold out of the ground; but as the days went on she didn't seem quite so confident.

When she first came up on the big bank above the cut and watched Bill swinging the nose of the hydraulic toward the face, or shifting the muck of bed-rock at the bottom, it seemed very fine. The swirling of the water and the ease with which he handled it appealed to her, as she sat down in a clump of wild daisies, but it gradually became horne in upon her that it wasn't exactly woman's work, although the editor of the Advisor, in a soul-inspiring editorial, had counseled her readers to "take their true places in the world." She recalled, with some faintness, a poem in those same pages:

Sisters, let us all be up and doing;
Let us take our places in the mines.
Let us show the hulking men-folk
We are not behind the times.

It had sounded rather inspiring when she read at "The Woman's Saturday Advancement Club," but when put to the test its ringing turned to pitiable tinkles. She decided to have help.

"So it was that one night she took Bill's advice. He agreed to hire a man for her, let the man live at his cabin, and "kinder boss the job." The hiring wasn't easy, as men were scarce in those days in Mariposa, that is, men who would work for day wages; but Bill hired an ancient miner whose chief claim to notice was that he complained about almost everything in sight, from the way the willows grew on the creek to his daily rheumatism. They called him "Doc," not because he had ever been a doctor, but had taken more patent medicines than any other man on the Big Divide, and titles don't count much, after all, in hydraulicking. The latter part he understood, and in a few days more there might be heard each morning the mighty rush of well-directed waters on Number Three.

Miss Esmerelda did learn one thing about mining, though. She knew how to clean up the slimes and treasure the gold that came in inviting yellow grains between the riffles. So, before long, affairs on Mariposa were prosperous and pleasant.

There came a day, as before the stage came up with a jerk before the Palace Hotel, and as if in repetition, dumped out another woman who didn't have much luggage and was not alone. She was accompanied by about the ugliest brindle bulldog that ever came west of the Rockies. She stepped out with a self-confident air, glowered unabashed at the men who gaped at her, and said to the proprietor of the Palace:

"Here, you! Hook onto them things and look lively! I'm Mrs. Mirandy Tibbets, and I've bought Number Three gold mine on a river called the Mariposa. Take them things inside till I find someone who ain't too lazy to take me up to my property."

She was business, all right, and she knew woman's rights and Mrs. Pinkham from A to Z. She made folks step around lively, and partly because he was afraid of her, and partly because he didn't want to work, the landlord "shuffed her off" on Jim Tipton. She started in to boss Jim from the minute she met him, but he wasn't the kind to be bossed. He sized her up critically, and decided, as he afterward said, that if she were "well halter-broke and taught not to tangle her picket-ropes, she wouldn't be a bad one to own." So he looked her down.

"Look here, Mrs. Mirandy," he said, with his soft drawl, "I don't know nothin' about wimmen's rights, nor none of them things, so don't give me none of your guff on that line. You ain't got no soft snap buttin' up agin' you. There's a woman a-workin' Number Three now, an' she says she owns it. Ef you've got the goods, it's your'n. Ef you ain't you've been bunked, an' somebody's peddled you a brick. Now, let's git down to business."

That took her down some. She looked

"Mornin'," answered Bill, coming to a halt and looking at them. He confessed after that he thought by the way Jim assumed proprietorship over the woman and the bulldog that he owned them both.

Jim calmly climbed down from his buckboard, after throwing the reins to Mrs. Mirandy, and sauntered forward. The singing inside the cabin had stopped and Esmerelda stood in the doorway, looking with wonderment on the meeting of the Palace.

"Bill," began Jim, "there's somethin' crooked about this deal out here on Three. This here woman with me is Mrs. Mirandy Tibbets, and she's got a deed of sale for this mine. She's come after it."

Bill stopped an instant, aghast. He recalled now that he had never seen any papers conveying the claim to Esmerelda, and suddenly it came over him strongly that he would hate to see her worsted in something on which she had set her heart and wherein she was happy. He knew that it was none of his business, but, somehow, after all, it seemed his fight. He would run a bluff for Esmerelda.

"Oh, the girl that's here's got the papers, all right, Jim," he said. "She's got the papers. Besides, she's told me all about it, an' I know it's on the square. There ain't nobody got no rights to this claim but Esmerelda Brown."

Now, Jim Tipton was a man of strong opinions himself, and was of an inquiring turn of mind, needing to have proof for any assertion made with such confidence. The bluff didn't work, and before Bill could interfere he had turned to Esmerelda and asked to see the papers. Esmerelda, being truthful, at once said the papers were in a safe-deposit vault back in Iowa.

"Bill," Jim said, "this ain't my fu-

"Don't pay no attention to him," she said. "You just take me back to town where I can get at court, an' I'll show him something. I'll have the law on him—that's what I will."

And Jim, being under her arms, and a little surprised, and a little slow, allowed himself to be tolled off to the buckboard and back to camp.

As the buckboard went wobbling off down the trail in a cloud of dust, Bill's big fists relaxed, and he turned toward the weeping girl in the doorway.

"Esmerelda," he said, and his voice was husky, "it ain't true, is it, that this woman beat you to it? You have got real papers, ain't you? You didn't let nobody skin you, did you? I ain't wantin' to do nothin' that ain't on the square. If you've got documents it's all well and good; but if you ain't, I'm ready to fight for you anyhow, an' ef they clean you out they'll have to take me in, too."

And then he tried to comfort her while she sobbed against his shoulder and assured him that she had the papers, and that if there was any mistake she didn't know what it could be.

That night Doc, swearing alternately at his rheumatism, womanfolk in general, and his horse, rode to Burdick, where he sent a telegram East for the missing deeds. Then he whipped a somewhat coarse jester, who wanted to know how the "petticoat" was that "bossed the work on Mariposa."

Bill went into the cabin so full of trouble that he couldn't sleep, and down in the camp Jim was entertained by Mrs. Tibbets until he was ready to die for her, if it came to a question of right and title.

Two days' armistice went by, Bill and Doc awaiting events and Jim puzzling his head over the advise of lawyers, who always wanted a little further time to look into the case, and used Latin at Jim for a minute, as if she thought of neral, but I reckon this girl ain't got no papers, and Mrs. Tibbets has. So this here girl's got to go."

"ESMERELDY," HE SAID, AND HIS VOICE WAS MUSKY. "IT AIN'T TRUE, IS IT?"

Bill felt his hair raise. This was too much. First because he felt himself to be Esmerelda's only champion, and second, because Esmerelda's word had been doubted, which was beyond endurance. Big as he was, and, therefore, according to the rules of size, good-natured, he flashed out, like a piece of fuse that has been over-fired.

"Got to go, has she? Well, not while I'm here, my bucko. She don't go till I say so, an' I ain't done none so much talkin' about it yet. I ain't a-huntin' trouble, but it's a-goin' to take an officer to show me why she's got to git off Number Three."

He advanced as he talked until he faced Jim, who stood his ground squarely and unafraid. It's probable the war would have broken out then had not Mrs. Mirandy, with good judgment, swooped down on Jim, pinioned his arms, and called a halt.

terms which he couldn't understand. The next day he took a trip to his own claim, but instead of working, crawled up on the ridge to see what was doing on Mariposa. Everything was as usual, the trees standing silent, the shadows crawling with regularity along the canon wall, and the big giant down below ripping and tearing away at the earth. This last was too much. Jim hurried back across the divide and then down to the camp, where on the following day he expostulated with the lawyers.

"I tell you," he said, banging his fist on the nearest table, "this law game's all right, but it ain't the way to handle a fellow or a woman, either, that's jumped a claim."

"Easy, easy," urged the lawyer.

"Easy be damned! Can't you see they're a-workin' the mine all the time, and a-gettin' out pay while you're cadgin' around here and doin' nothin'?"

Then he tore madly out of the shanty, walked gloomily around the camp for a term. He was puzzled. He looked at the two papers again and softly swore at the agent who had sold the property twice for the same amounts of money, and with different sets of witnesses. It was too much for him.

"I reckon there ain't nothin' to do but to take both these documents back to the court," he finally said, "but I don't think it's a square deal for you to keep your giant a-workin' on the bank, Bill, until it's settled."

Bill was about to explain that there wasn't any power on earth that he knew of that would keep him from turning on the stream each day as long as he bossed the mine for Esmerelda, but she herself, white, trembling, and wanting to avoid trouble, silenced him, and assured the sheriff the pipes should rest.

Then the officers went away. It was up to the law now, the thing that took away property by means not understandable, and always left people poorer than when they started along its devious trails; but there was nothing else for it. The next day found the big miner in the camp, seeking legal advice for Esmerelda and burdened with forebodings and gloom. Like Jim, he felt himself hopelessly enmeshed as he turned homeward after his errand.

It was dusk when Bill rode up to the cabin door on Number Three, and the determination to break the news as gently as possible; and at about the same time Jim Tipton was explaining his forebodings to the widow in the camp below.

Then came several days of waiting with nearly every one in the camp making bets as to which one of the contestants would win out at the next encounter, and all expectant and argumentative.

The result of this was that pretty nearly every man in Mariposa had taken sides, and was ready if it came to a final settlement to enlist actively in the war. Sympathies were about evenly divided, and things were quiet at night because nearly all the partisans were busily engaged in the back ends of their cabins cleaning up their weapons. It promised to be warm.

Both Jim and the widow had disappeared from the rude public gaze, and were said to have gone to Burdick to consult other lawyers. Bill was reported to be too busy nursing Doc and guarding Number Three to appear in the camp; and only the bulldog was left to howl dismally in an improvised kennel until his mistress should call for him.

The break came unexpectedly. A man on horseback, partisan of the Bill-Esmerelda faction, pulled up one afternoon in front of Bill's cabin and hailed. Bill came to the door and peered out, his fingers clutched on a rifle-barrel behind the door until he could recognize the character of reception awaiting him.

"Bill," the rider said, throwing one leg over the pommel of his saddle and dexterously rolling a cigarette. "Jim's back from up at Burdick, but he ain't got nothin' to say. He jest naterally came in on the stage with that widder of his'n, acted grouch as usual, an' pulled out with her for his claim over on Goldpan."

"Yes?" said Bill, emerging from the door and looking disconsolately at his friend.

"Thought I'd better come by an' tell you, so's you can keep on the lookout. No tellin' what'll happen next, now them lawyers is fightin'."

"Lawyers fightin' now?"

"Humph! Yes?"

"You see, Number Three's a good piece of ground, an' they kalklerate there's fat pickin' comin' in somewhere when it gets to trial."

"Thanks, pal." And the door shut with a bang. This was the limit. Bill walked up and down and thought out a solution which resulted in a trip to camp by the now-recovered Doc on the following morning.

It was late on the following evening when Bill, contented and whistling, his mind made up, crashed through the brush on the hillside of Goldpan, and came cautiously down into the flat in front of Jim's cabin. He was wise as to the frontier, and being on an errand of peace, came unarmed and ostentatiously whistling and swinging his idle hands.

Jim saw him, made a quick reach for his gun, and then slowly dropped his fingers away at the evident signs of amity. He advanced to meet his enemy, and waited quietly for him to approach within speaking distance.

"Hello, there, Jim," said Bill, and without waiting for a return of his salutation, continued: "I've got no shootin' irons on my belt and no ill will in my head. I've come to be friends with you, Jim, if you'll let me."

"I come to tell you I don't want the Number Three if I've got to fight for it. You can tell the widder she can have it. Esmerelda nor me ain't goin' to fight for it no more, and we don't want to be had friends with either you or Mrs. Tibbets."

A slow grin overspread Jim's face. "The widder don't want it, either, Bill, and I'm mighty glad you come over. Somebody was bunked by that pesky agent, but it don't make no difference, nohow. Mrs. Tibbet's got other things to think about now. We went up to Burdick and got married, and she don't have to have Number Three no long's I've got a pretty nice patch of ground myself."

"Hell!" said Bill. "That's kind of the same as with me and Esmerelda. We had the parson over from the camp a couple of days ago, and we ain't in a fightin' mood none so's you can notice."

Then they laughed together, slapped each other on the back, and forthwith proceeded to talk it over with Mirandy.

That's how the war on Mariposa ended. There are two cabins on Number Three now, and any night you ride by there you can see two fellows smoking peacefully on the same bench, partners in this claim and several others, while a big brindle bulldog sleeps around their feet or is woofed about by a very old man, who is taking a new cure for rheumatism and standing loyally by Esmerelda.

And the lawyers? Well, they didn't get the fees they expected and are the only enemies left.

It was dusk when Bill rode up to the the determination to break the news as gently as possible; and at about the same time Jim Tipton was explaining his forebodings to the widow in the camp below.

Then came several days of waiting with nearly every one in the camp making bets as to which one of the contestants would win out at the next encounter, and all expectant and argumentative.

The result of this was that pretty nearly every man in Mariposa had taken sides, and was ready if it came to a final settlement to enlist actively in the war. Sympathies were about evenly divided, and things were quiet at night because nearly all the partisans were busily engaged in the back ends of their cabins cleaning up their weapons. It promised to be warm.

Both Jim and the widow had disappeared from the rude public gaze, and were said to have gone to Burdick to consult other lawyers. Bill was reported to be too busy nursing Doc and guarding Number Three to appear in the camp; and only the bulldog was left to howl dismally in an improvised kennel until his mistress should call for him.

The break came unexpectedly. A man on horseback, partisan of the Bill-Esmerelda faction, pulled up one afternoon in front of Bill's cabin and hailed. Bill came to the door and peered out, his fingers clutched on a rifle-barrel behind the door until he could recognize the character of reception awaiting him.

"Bill," the rider said, throwing one leg over the pommel of his saddle and dexterously rolling a cigarette. "Jim's back from up at Burdick, but he ain't got nothin' to say. He jest naterally came in on the stage with that widder of his'n, acted grouch as usual, an' pulled out with her for his claim over on Goldpan."

"Yes?" said Bill, emerging from the door and looking disconsolately at his friend.

"Thought I'd better come by an' tell you, so's you can keep on the lookout. No tellin' what'll happen next, now them lawyers is fightin'."

"Lawyers fightin' now?"

"Humph! Yes?"

"You see, Number Three's a good piece of ground, an' they kalklerate there's fat pickin' comin' in somewhere when it gets to trial."

"Thanks, pal." And the door shut with a bang. This was the limit. Bill walked up and down and thought out a solution which resulted in a trip to camp by the now-recovered Doc on the following morning.

It was late on the following evening when Bill, contented and whistling, his mind made up, crashed through the brush on the hillside of Goldpan, and came cautiously down into the flat in front of Jim's cabin. He was wise as to the frontier, and being on an errand of peace, came unarmed and ostentatiously whistling and swinging his idle hands.

Jim saw him, made a quick reach for his gun, and then slowly dropped his fingers away at the evident signs of amity. He advanced to meet his enemy, and waited quietly for him to approach within speaking distance.

"Hello, there, Jim," said Bill, and without waiting for a return of his salutation, continued: "I've got no shootin' irons on my belt and no ill will in my head. I've come to be friends with you, Jim, if you'll let me."

"I come to tell you I don't want the Number Three if I've got to fight for it. You can tell the widder she can have it. Esmerelda nor me ain't goin' to fight for it no more, and we don't want to be had friends with either you or Mrs. Tibbets."

A slow grin overspread Jim's face. "The widder don't want it, either, Bill, and I'm mighty glad you come over. Somebody was bunked by that pesky agent, but it don't make no difference, nohow. Mrs. Tibbet's got other things to think about now. We went up to Burdick and got married, and she don't have to have Number Three no long's I've got a pretty nice patch of ground myself."

"Hell!" said Bill. "That's kind of the same as with me and Esmerelda. We had the parson over from the camp a couple of days ago, and we ain't in a fightin' mood none so's you can notice."

Then they laughed together, slapped each other on the back, and forthwith proceeded to talk it over with Mirandy.

RAINING IN TEXAS SENT COTTON OFF

Prices Closed 7 to 15 Points

From Texas—Spot Quiet.

New York August 2.—Reports that the drought in eastern Texas had been essentially broken by showers caused a rapid decline in the cotton market today. October selling at 11.17, or equal to the previous low, was reaching in July. From the very opening, which was easy at 7 to 15 points decline, the market showed the effects of heavy selling due to the rain news and there was but little reaction at any time during the forenoon, the close being near lowest and 19 to 29 points under the previous night.

One of the heaviest sellers of new crop months was a prominent spot house which was thought to be acting on advice from its agents in Texas as to the amount and extent of the rainfall. It was pretty well established that fair to good showers covered about all of the large producing counties of Texas where drought has been complained of and as more rain was predicted for the southern part of eastern Texas tomorrow the trade felt assured of more optimistic crop advice from there next week.

In the eastern belt where continuous showers have begun, better appreciation clearing conditions were indicated in the forecast.

Liverpool was closed today and will be Monday also.

About the only signs of interest from traders here was contained in a wire from Macon which said there had been some inquiry from the east for August to November shipment. Some of the estimates from Texas were as high as 5,500,000 bales. The idea prevailing today is that if weather had not been so serious as reported, Demand today was mostly from shorts.

The effects of yesterday's bullish government report seemed to be entirely offset by the good improvement in Texas weather conditions and sentiment was correspondingly bearish although bulls were looking for a good trade demand to set in around the 11 cent level and besides claimed that unless followed by further precipitation today a rally would prove of little permanent benefit.

OTHER ADVANCE VERDULL TIMES IN CORN PRICES IN WALL STREET

September Sold at 69 3-4 During the Session—No Sign of Rain in Drouth-Stricken Sections—Wheat Higher.

Chicago August 2.—Buying orders stored into the corn pit today and kept up the excited price advance that has now lasted a week. Corn advanced from 69 1/4 to 69 3/4 for a gain of 5/8 cent and 1/4 point. Provisions the outcome was 17 1/2 to 21 1/2 decline.

Corn quotations came within 1/4 of making good the predictions that the market would reach as high as 70 cents a bushel. There was no rain anywhere today and the official forecast showed a prospect of several days more of dry weather. Chances of further widespread injury to the crop were increased by signs of a general set-back in the corn market last hour of the session. When the advance in the September option had reached 69 3/4 a point 8 cents above price in the cash market, holders of that a sharp fall ensued of 69 3/4 to 69 1/2. The effect however, was only a few minutes. Aggressive buying quickly forced a rally and was driving the market upward again as the group cleared the crowd from the pit.

All other grain was influenced by the action of corn. It was the popular view that farmers beyond the Mississippi river would soon stop sell wheat at a profit. Instead of corn to feed stock. The fact that cutting of wheat has begun under favorable conditions in the Canadian northwest gave a little encouragement to the bears at one time today but an edge developed in reports from New York that large amounts of wheat from that had been engaged for overseas shipment of wheat. Primary receipts of wheat were 1,807,000 bushels a year ago 1,414,000 bushels. Seaboard exports of wheat and flour equaled 327,000 bushels.

Oats ran up briskly with corn. Sales to arrive were far below the seasonable volume.

Nearly deliveries of provisions saved from liquidation incident to the sharp up of commodities. Grain futures options though were relatively firmer owing to the strength of corn.

DRY GOODS

New York August 2.—Cotton goods market was somewhat firmer following the making of the government report on cotton and wool. Progress was made in selling late cotton at a 1/4 point. The retail demand for domestic goods is steady. Stocks in a very low.

HUBBARD BROS & CO

New York August 2.—Reports of rain in Texas and Oklahoma had been broken by showers caused a rapid decline in the cotton market today. October selling at 11.17, or equal to the previous low, was reaching in July. From the very opening, which was easy at 7 to 15 points decline, the market showed the effects of heavy selling due to the rain news and there was but little reaction at any time during the forenoon, the close being near lowest and 19 to 29 points under the previous night.

SEPTEMBER SOLD AT 69 3-4 DURING THE SESSION—NO SIGN OF RAIN IN DROUTH-STRIKEN SECTIONS—WHEAT HIGHER.

Chicago August 2.—Buying orders stored into the corn pit today and kept up the excited price advance that has now lasted a week. Corn advanced from 69 1/4 to 69 3/4 for a gain of 5/8 cent and 1/4 point. Provisions the outcome was 17 1/2 to 21 1/2 decline.

Corn quotations came within 1/4 of making good the predictions that the market would reach as high as 70 cents a bushel. There was no rain anywhere today and the official forecast showed a prospect of several days more of dry weather. Chances of further widespread injury to the crop were increased by signs of a general set-back in the corn market last hour of the session. When the advance in the September option had reached 69 3/4 a point 8 cents above price in the cash market, holders of that a sharp fall ensued of 69 3/4 to 69 1/2. The effect however, was only a few minutes. Aggressive buying quickly forced a rally and was driving the market upward again as the group cleared the crowd from the pit.

All other grain was influenced by the action of corn. It was the popular view that farmers beyond the Mississippi river would soon stop sell wheat at a profit. Instead of corn to feed stock. The fact that cutting of wheat has begun under favorable conditions in the Canadian northwest gave a little encouragement to the bears at one time today but an edge developed in reports from New York that large amounts of wheat from that had been engaged for overseas shipment of wheat. Primary receipts of wheat were 1,807,000 bushels a year ago 1,414,000 bushels. Seaboard exports of wheat and flour equaled 327,000 bushels.

Oats ran up briskly with corn. Sales to arrive were far below the seasonable volume.

Nearly deliveries of provisions saved from liquidation incident to the sharp up of commodities. Grain futures options though were relatively firmer owing to the strength of corn.

PEACHTREE CREEK WORK STARTS SOON

Public Works Committee Will Have the Stream Cleared of Rocks and Debris by September 1.

Peachtree creek will be cleared of rock and debris before September 1. This was decided on at a meeting of the county public work committee Saturday morning.

Chief Clayton of the city's construction department and W. A. Hawsell engineer in charge of the Peachtree creek sewage plant construction appeared before the committee and agreed that the work be started so that the plant might be put in operation before September 1 when the two filter beds will be finished.

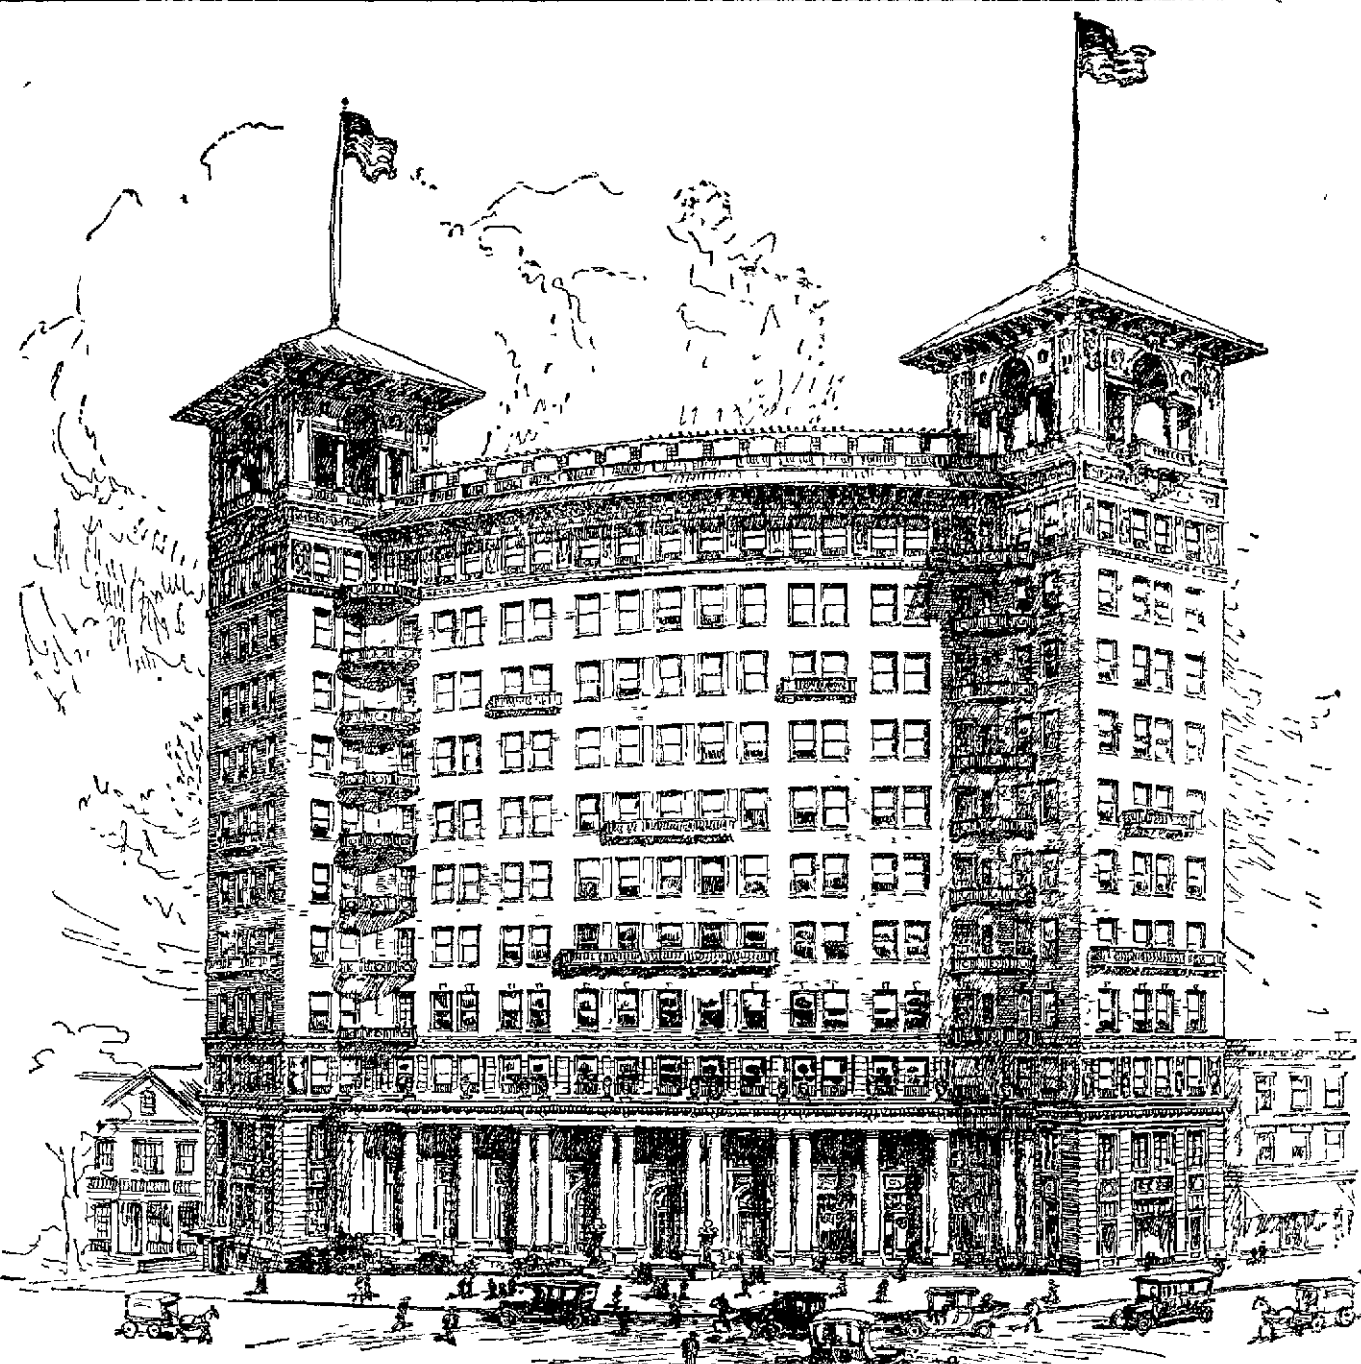

Commissioner W. Tom Winn acting chairman of the board agreed with the city engineers that the work is absolutely necessary to the successful operation of the plant and said that while the project is not on the program for work for this year, yet the commission should not neglect the requirement which the city is spending nearly $500,000.

I am sure that every member of the commission feels as I do, that the work should be on before September 1. Commissioner Winn said I am certain that it is the aim of the city to start the plant in September. If that is the case I don't see how the commission can let the work slide.

The city will be hindered to a great extent in the operation of the plant unless the creek is cleared before the end of the present month and it is intended to start the plant at that time. With only two beds working the city cannot hope to get the same result as it would from the nine beds. The effluent which will pour into the creek will be free if it is of solids and objectionable matter but it will not be absolutely putrescent and will become a nuisance unless it is carried away.

Chief Clayton figured that the creek would have to be cleared when the city began fluming on the Peachtree plant and the county commission's plan agreed to the work.

Beautiful new apartment building on Peachtree street and Ponce de Leon avenue

The Ponce de Leon apartments was erected at a cost in excess of half a million dollars by the Fulton Properties company of which Albert Howell is president. It is a twelve story steel construction fireproof sound proof apartment building containing 212 apartments and is equipped with every convenience including three elevators mechanical refrigeration steam heating plant combination wall safes mail chutes private laundry and telephone exchange and roof garden.

R. L. Swift of New York has been engaged as superintendent of the building and will open his office to the public in the Ponce de Leon apartments on August 15. Beautiful Decorations. The W. I. Browne Decorating company of Atlanta will take charge of the location of the building on Monday and announce that when completed the building will be without an equal in the United States for the elegance and completeness of its appointments.

The city which has received special attention at the hands of the architect contractor and decorators will be completed under the personal supervision of Mrs. Ella Wright Wilson whose intention will be to supply the table with the finest delicacies of food by home and foreign markets avoiding the flavor of hotel cooking and pandering to the tastes of those who like to live at home.

B. M. Grant & Co. have been selected by the owners as their real estate agents and they report that many applications for space have already been filed with them in view of the popularity of the building to the public.

THEY ARE COMING AND WE ARE READY

Atlanta Awaits Arrival of Her Royal Guests With Outstretched Hands and Overflowing Arms.

They are coming! Advice are pouring in from all over the south telling of the thousands of business men who are leaving their homes for Atlanta, to attend the biggest and best of all the Southern Merchants conventions which have ever been held. And Atlanta is ready for them. For weeks the Merchants and Manufacturers Association has been moving their preparations and now they can say with satisfaction "We are Ready." Tomorrow will be the first day of the convention. It will be devoted to receiving the incoming merchants. The reception and registering place will be at the Auditorium and a committee will be on hand to extend the right hand of fellowship to the guests. They are coming. Hurry!

FINAL ARRANGEMENTS MADE FOR BARBECUE

Jim Little Announces Date, Place and Caterer for the Leading Event of Convention.

James P. Little, chairman of the executive committee for the Southern Merchants' convention, announces that they have made the final arrangements for the barbecue which will be held during that time. This is probably as big an event as any that takes place during the convention and is always looked forward to by all the delegates. The time which has been set is Wednesday, August 17, at 1 p. m. The place will be Gaudin de Leon and the barbecue will be served by J. Lee Barnes.

News of the U. C. T. Atlanta Council 18

Brother J. A. Farnsworth is back in the city after a two weeks' vacation and we are all glad to see his smiling face again.

We regret that Atlanta 18 has been rather short on "oil" at the last few meetings, but since the return of C. K. to the city it is probable that we will be well supplied in the future.

The boys of 18 will be pleased to welcome their merchant friends during the convention.

Atlanta 18 solicits the membership of St. Hawkins. We hope to initiate him at the next meeting.

Secretary Lunceford invites all visiting U. C. T. members to make headquarters with him during the convention. He will keep open house in his rooms in the Gould building.

The boys are congratulating Brother H. M. Ashe on his ability as a

IT TELLS IT'S OWN STORY

The above cartoon tells the story of the coming Southern Merchants' Convention in full. Atlanta is fully prepared for her royal guests and Miss Atlanta, the wholesalers, jobbers and traveling men are all waiting, with outstretched hands, to clasp the hands of the coming guests and show them what we can do in the way of hospitality. Everything is in readiness and such preparations have never been made before for a business convention in the South.

There are speakers, barbecues, picnics, receptions, ball games, theater parties galore. But there is also a collection of some of the best wholesale and manufacturing houses in the country and these houses will all be filled with crowds of wise buying merchants during the convention. The stocks on hand this year are, all in all, more attractive, more novel and of better quality than ever offered before. The merchant who misses this opportunity for a good time, an educational time, and a profitable buying time will lose more than he can estimate.

NOTES OF THE CITY SALESMEN

Secretary P. S. Brownlee states that he is feeling fine. There are several reasons. New members, new grape-wine, watermelon and barbecues.

Through an error it was stated in these columns last week that Brother J. G. Auld had spent the week playing baseball at Turin, Ga. It should have been Brother W. J. Elliott and we make haste to lay the blame on the right man.

Brother R. R. Pennington is having trouble with his ice cream suits and white shoes during the rainy days in northeast Georgia.

Brother J. E. Almond reports that Mrs. Almond is considerably improved in health.

There was a big meeting Saturday night. Eighteen visitors from Atlanta. Council 18 were present and the following new members were initiated: H. H. Collier, W. H. Pate, W. B. Adams, L. W. Reeves, G. S. Oakes, L. R. Hopkins and I. C. Satterfield.

The traveling man of the All Star Manufacturing company, who will be in the city playing host during the convention, are George R. Page, E. H. Jordan, V. C. Almond, C. P. Webb and R. H. Rhumph.

On account of the first vice president, Earl Harris, being transferred to south Georgia territory, and so not being able to attend the meetings, it was found necessary at yesterday's meeting to call an election to fill Brother Harris' place. The result was that C. F. Holt was elected without opposition. We are glad to see Brother Holt in our line of officers, and predict he will make a faithful and efficient officer.

A committee, headed by P. S. Paise, has been appointed to arrange for our annual barbecue. This is always one of the most pleasant occasions for the C. S. A. during the year, and we predict the annual good time.

C. F. Holt having been promoted from second vice president to first vice president, it was in order at this meeting to elect his successor. Two gentlemen were offered for the position, viz. E. S. Morris and E. B. Thomas. After quite a lively little election Mr. Thomas was elected by a vote of 21 to 16. Either man was capable of making a good officer, and the choice of either would have been perfectly satisfactory.

J. C. Harrison was present yesterday, having returned from a trip to Boston and other points in the east. He reported a fine trip and was much benefited by the vacation. He was accompanied by Mrs. Harrison and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Owen.

Reports from the supreme council show a large increase in membership for the past year. There's a reason.

Brother T. H. Crumley, with the Swift company, is now sporting a new E. M. F. When last seen he was down on his knees in the mud.

Georgia Most Prominent State at First International Gideon Contest—Boston Is the Place for Next Year.

At the regular meeting of the Atlanta camp of Gideons, to be held in the convention hall of the Piedmont hotel this afternoon at 2 o'clock, the delegates to the first international convention at Toronto will tell what they did and what happened at the convention.

The convention closed last Sunday night, July 27. It was the biggest ever held by the Gideons. Last year, when they met in Atlanta, it was thought to be something that would take several years to beat, but it must be admitted that Toronto eclipsed all of them.

The Atlanta delegation, consisting of H. A. McDonald, C. W. Hatcher, Cliff G. Childs, Captain William H. H. Phelps, President C. H. Burge, together with Mrs. C. W. Hatcher and Miss Edith McDonald, representing the Ladies' auxiliary of the Atlanta camp, left Atlanta the morning of July 22. They arrived at Niagara Falls and found a great surprise awaiting them. A banquet was spread in Queen Victoria park, where the mayor welcomed all the United States delegates to Canada. One thousand five hundred and thirty-two Bibles were distributed the same day in the Niagara Falls hotels.

From Niagara Falls the party took steamer for Toronto, arriving there at 8 p. m. Wednesday.

The convention opened Thursday at 9 p. m. in the Metropolitan church, where all the business of the convention was held. This is one of the largest churches in Canada, occupying an entire city block.

Friday the 25th, the city of Toronto entertained the Gideons and their friends at a luncheon given in the auditorium in Exhibition park. The famous Forty-eighth Highlanders band furnished music for the occasion. A speech of welcome was made by the mayor to the visitors.

Auto rides were given the visiting ladies by the Toronto Ladies' Gideon auxiliary. Over 300 Gideons with the Ladies' auxiliary were in attendance. The largest number of ladies that ever attended a convention was in Toronto.

At the Saturday night meeting in the church, which was crowded, a banner was presented to the Georgia delegation for the membership championship for the year 1912-1913. Georgia kept in the lead over every state in the union.

Boston was selected as the convention city for 1914.

T. P. A. JOTTINGS

By W. M. Jenkins, State Press Chairman Georgia T. P. A.
Good news comes from Houston, Texas where the national convention will be held in 1914. President Carlton of post C Houston writes: "I notice State President Hardy has allotted 257 new members to post C during this year. Mr. Hardy will not be disappointed in his expectations. I have never seen as much enthusiasm in the T. P. A. as there is now. What is the matter with Georgia? Why can't our forces work in conjunction with the press chairman?"

If it has been the custom to let T. P. A. work drag during the heated period why not break that custom and get up more enthusiasm? Appoint a committee of five wives to carry on a membership campaign for the balance of the year. Until we have a majority of the traveling men on our rolls our influence in public affairs will not carry the weight it should to be really effective.

Can anyone prove that a soul was ever lost? Tell the truth, what do you know about this saving business? If we are not saved for this world can we be saved for another? What we believe is quite a different proposition to what we know. We do know that we are in this world and should ever and ever strive to make those about us happy while in this world. Let every body mix up and be friendly for this world. Yes a common fellowship. If you are not happy in this world we doubt the possibility of your happiness in another world.

Friendship is a peculiar thing, it permits some to do unto you what they would not be willing for you to do unto them.

The time is now at hand for each state and more particularly Georgia, to organize a far-reaching campaign for new members. Will what we do give us the credit of holding ourselves in rank A or will it be class B? Time only can tell.

What a power is religion and friendship when joined together.

Affected goodness without being good, and modesty without being modest, is provoking and spells hypocrisy, pure and simple. Let us be just what we are and try to help men to be good by praising them and speaking well of them. Show our friendship, faith and hope in humanity by saying something good and stop using the tip I told you so. "You don't know him as I do." "He thinks everybody is against him." "I heard it said somewhere he was crooked." "We have heard he would not do to trust" and many other mean things unworthy of you and the party talked about, all because you did not like him yourself and didn't want anyone else to like him. You have used the black ball on him, stood in his way to higher progress and with your influence and power have tried to keep him down. How then can you in the name of Him who was good affect goodness. Turn a kindly spirit and lovable side to all.

If our worthy secretary would keep us posted as to what is going on in

Vice-Chairman of Convention

R. O. CROUCH, of Griffin, Ga.

R. O. Crouch, of Griffin, Ga., is a member of the Strickland-Crouch company, who operate a modern department store in that town.

Mr. Crouch has taken a vast interest in the preparations for the convention, and has done much to bring the final arrangements to that fine point of satisfactory preparedness which they are in. He is a progressive mercantile man in every sense of the word, and it is his wide awake, good judgement which has made him visit Atlanta at the buying seasons for many years past. He is essentially a man of ideas, and it is always interesting to notice the close attention which is given by any business man when Mr. Crouch has a suggestion or two to make. Mr. Crouch will be one of the principal figures of the convention, and it is the presence of such men as he at these meetings which assure their complete success and business-building value to all those who attend.

Mr. Logan, we received your letter and rush to say that we are by no means against organized charity. It is doing much good. It is only some points of it that we object to.

After you have been friends with a man for a long time, eaten with him, drank with him, walked too arm-in-arm with him and have patted him on the back, do you think it is good policy to lie to him or about him?

SI HAWKINS WRITES RACY LETTER; SAYS HE'S COMING

Letter Received From a Real Country Merchant—Will Lock Up Store and Come to Convention—Is Added to Staff of Daily Firing Line.

The letter which is published here was received one day this week by the editor of this department. Mr. Hawkins, while he refuses to tell the exact part of the country which he claims for home, nevertheless writes a good racy letter and we are glad to see that he has decided to come to the city for the Southern Merchants' convention. The letter makes such an impression in this office that it was decided to try and add Mr. Hawkins to the staff of The Constitution Firing Line, for the convention period at any rate. The wires were used in an endeavor to locate him, and finally a friend of his put us in communication. The result was that he has consented to report his deluge, impressions and ideas about the convention exclusively for the columns of The Constitution Firing Line. He states that he will arrive in the city early Monday morning and will have his first stop over for the first issue of the daily Firing Line on Tuesday morning next. We know that the readers of The Constitution Firing Line will be glad to hear this good news and that the stories written by Mr. Hawkins will be read with interest.

In deference to Mr. Hawkins' wishes in the matter we refrain from publishing his home address, and will only state that it is located in one of the states which are below the Mason and Dixon line. We herewith publish the first letter, written by Mr. Hawkins, and which was the cause of his breaking into regular newspaper work.

SI Hawkins' Letter.
July 30. Editor Constitution Firing Line—Dear Sir: I take my pen in hand to rite yew and ask if yew think as how 'twould be perfectly 'erect if I cum on up to this here convention of store keepers that youall is goin' to hold right soon. How bein' as I ha'n't bin to no doin's of this natur at all, I ca'n't exactly say as how I'm altogether wise to the proper thing to do. If yew think I might cum, please rite me up to in youalls paper, and I'll see it. If Sam Higgs gets it I'll see it, if Sam Higgs gets it I'll see it, if Sam Higgs gets it I'll see it. (Sam Higgs lives down the road a piece and he quite occasional' gets a city paper.)

The way as how I cum to no this here convention was goin' to be pulled off was by accidin' it in your paper 'bout a week back. Sarey Higgs, that's Sam's thir'd wife, sent down a pat of butter by our Sairy, and she wrapped it up in the paper and wen I red it thur I got me to thinkin'. Yese, I ha'n't never bin away from home for nigh on twenty year, and I see to myself as how 'twould be a mighty good time to tak a littel trip. I reckon I'm pretty small punkins along side 'threst of the fellers as 'll be up to the city, but I sort o' figger as how I'm a merchant myself, even if I am mighty small pertaters an' I kin see the sites of Atlanta even if I don't git much in the line of goods or ideas.

Wen I read that thar piece of yours 'bout the ball game, 'cues and show

CREDIT MEN'S ASSO. MEET SET FOR SEPT.

Quarterly Meeting Is Postponed on Account Convention and Hot Weather.

The Atlanta Association of Credit Men had a meeting of their executive committee last week and decided to postpone the regular quarterly meeting of the association until sometime in September. On account of the excessive heat and the fact that for the next two weeks the city will be full of merchants attending the Southern Merchants' convention, it was thought better to postpone the meeting until that time.

When it is held there will probably be a Dutch supper provided and a prominent speaker is being asked to address the meeting.

Convention Chairman.

When the Southern Merchants' convention, which convenes in this city tomorrow, is a thing of history, we shall all be talking of the splendid work done by the men who have had the arrangements in hand and who have done the hard work making ready for this big gathering of business men.

Amongst these men there is none who have done more for its success on the biggest scale than the president of the convention, Bolling H. Jones. Mr. Jones is one of those men who enters with his whole soul into whatever he undertakes and when he is at the helm in any movement its success is practically a foregone conclusion.

These Southern Merchants' conventions will simply be another feather in his cap as a man who is capable of handling and directing big things.

CORN STORY CLUB

Braswell and Hyatt Start Competition as to Best Reports.

D. M. Braswell, with John Silvey & Co., came in this week and began talking of the corn he had seen in his territory that season. He told a fine story, but the trouble is that he was talking in all seriousness (so he says) when Verge Hyatt had to ship in and spoil the whole thing by his unwarranted exaggeration.

"I saw corn in the counties of Butts, Henry and Habersham," said Mr. Braswell, "that was 15 feet high and six ears to the stalk."

It was here that Mr. Hyatt broke in and his statement went something like this:

"That's nothing. In my territory I saw it 16 feet high and with two crops growing on the same land at the same time."

The question now before the house is whether either or neither is exaggerating, or if one is, which, and why? Answers may be sent to either this office or to the two gentlemen concerned, care John Silvey & Co.

Among the visitors with the Lamar & Rankin Drug company this week were Hon. L. C. Allen, of Keshon, Ga., and J. L. Luvvern, of Bowdon, Ga.

Brother Garnett Kelly presented the boys with some Bass Island grape juice which was properly used during the meeting and highly appreciated.

Mack Hirschberg is in Florida and was last heard from in Tampa. He writes his firm, the Hirschberg company, that he is experiencing some sure enough Florida weather.

OFF FOR CHICAGO

H. T. Bell, of John Deere Plow Co., Leaves for Vacation.

H. T. Bell, of the John Deere Plow company, of Atlanta, left last Friday for Chicago on the first stage of his vacation trip. Mr. Bell will go from there to the head offices of his company at Moline, Ind., and will be away from the city for two weeks in all. He would not state what was the exact object of his trip to Chicago, but it is rumored around the office that he is particularly anxious to see a big league ball game once more. Whatever is his object, however, we surely hope he secures the consummation of his desires, and, above all, has one of the best of all possible good times. There is no better fellow to meet than Mr. Bell.

E. F. Malone, of the Capital City Tobacco company, was found busy opening mail last Friday. As check after check rolled out the smile on his face was a treat to see.

J. J. Eley, with the Dixie Pickle and Preserving company, has been in Bechtonton, Milledgeville and surrounding territory for the past week, and has had extra good business.

The Foundation Must Be Right

It used to be a common saying that to make a gentleman out of a boy you had to begin with his grandfather.

Whether this exaggerated the influence or heredity or not we couldn't say, but there is a parallel case in shoe manufacturing that is easier to prove.

The making of a modern shoe begins long before that shoe starts through the works.

Its wearing qualities are determined, in a large measure, beforehand in the selection of the material that goes into it.

Its style rests with the designer, who, in buying his lasts, must look months ahead and gauge accurately the tendency of the ever-changing whims of fashion.

Its finish and appearance are vitally dependent upon the perfect accomplishment of every detail in its construction from the first cutting to the final polish.

It is the attention and care given to every one of these phases of shoe manufacturing that have given RED SEAL Shoes their pre-eminence in the South today.

We'd like every visitor to the Southern Merchants' Convention, August 4 to 15, to take a trip through our factory while here.

We want you to see not only the quality of our Georgia-made shoes, but the How and Why of it.

You'll see every detail of construction and every bit of material that goes into our shoes.

If you sell RED SEAL Shoes this knowledge will make you a more confident, convincing salesman of them.

If you sell some other line, you'll know how THEY OUGHT to be made.

Come by our offices, 30-32 Auburn Ave.

AN IDEA WORTH A MILLION DOLLARS

Marietta Ga. August. (Special)—Very near at the end of the year in every town and village and in every it in Georgia. This power is ready and willing to be arrested and used. It is the power. There are all over the country today the sands of boys only as a drink of the water. The results that mean exactly the difference between success and failure in health and power. Boys have a world of energy in their young bodies and they are just as much interested in their pursuits as the are in play. The main reason that boys like to play is that it uses up the surplus energy that is pent within their young bodies and they seldom play any game that has not a large degree of rivalry in it. Baseball would not attract a boy for five minutes if it was all one sided and if there was no opposing nine. There is no game that is devoid of this rivalry and there is no form of farm work that cannot be made as attractive today to any boy in cities and towns as baseball. If arranged in a competitive way. Look what the Boys Club clubs have accomplished. They will never have gotten a start without the rivalry and prizes and the meetings at Corinthia last fall the whole town was agog over the display of corn from the Newton County Corn of business was suspended. Corn was as where and the boys were fully as proud of their corn yield as they would have been over a baseball pennant. It is only from want of judgment in parents that boys are idle and the fitness and white to do. The idea is that in every town let all business men get together and put up a prize of $100 cash or $25 (the more the better) and organize the boys of the town and start them in a contest. Let them take a certain lot of farm land near a town. Place one lot on one side of town and one or two on the other. Divide the boys in teams of six and allot to each team so much land to be prepared for planting. Corn, oats, wheat and some cotton, Irish potatoes, sweet potatoes and beans etc. This the will have a market for all items, during the season. Then let each one of the subscribers to the prize money agree to buy their products at the best market prices. Let the boys have a bank house on the farm to do their own work. Let their mothers fathers and sisters visit them and let them along. Have an afternoon in the week for the parents to do their own work. Let the boys come out and look the place over and have the boys serve them with home made bread and bacon and by the way on the farm there are no more prizes and if this plan will be adopted in each town there will be no more worry about what will become of the younger generation of boys. Parents will never have sleepless nights or worries about them and when the school seas as occur there will be a lot of vigorous boys bright and healthy ready to go to school and learn in the best way. A lot of all after the school is over will see that the boys will have to have a similar application. The thing on the street corner and at the soda water stand will fall off. The question of dress reform will be a thing of the past the cost of living will be cut in two the happiness of all families will be doubled. In an interview lately with ten successful business men it was learned that each one got their start on the farm. They followed the plow they pulled fodder and they are proud of it. They also said that there is no place today where a boy or girl can better use education than on a farm. The average college graduate would be not in the least out of place raising a crop and that the earnings would average larger if they would after leaving college go at once and take up hard work and plow it on the farm and use the knowledge they had in taking short cuts to success. That the average southern man who is today in the forefront of progress in business and professional life get his backbone grit and sense in the farm. The amount of healthy life giving work that a boy between the age of 10 and 13 can accomplish if properly directed and if worked in this competitive manner would surprise any parent. It would make healthy strong boys out of weaklings. It would take boys off the streets and from poolrooms and cigarette stands from loading drinking and from bad habit forming places and make them happier obedient respectful hustling honorable citizens. If this idea will sink into the head of the average parent and they will get together they will make a wonderful show. You can take a pile of 1000 rocks weighing twenty pounds each and five boys a day if you want the rocks moved 100 yards. Tell the boys that it is a game called rock away and that the boy who moves the most in one day will get a $100 prize. You will see the rocks moved very quickly and also that the boys will work as steadily and as enthusiastically as they will when they get out in the hot sun at 2 p.m. and play ball and the work will be no harder and the boys will be no more weary. By not pursuing this course parents are doing two things. They are leaving their boys to grow up as weaklings with their great God given energy directed toward any useful end and depriving them of true education. Don't think for a moment that boys can be forced to do this kind of any kind of work like it. They can't do what they don't like to do. You are looking at life from the high point of experience and duty but you can't expect boys or girls to possess in childhood what it has taken you a lifetime to learn. The thing to do is to make the task that you want performed into the form and shape that appeals to the child. Make any kind of work in play and have some stairs and offer some reward for merit and you will get the exact results you are after and will get them quicker and in ways that will do the most lasting good. If at your age you were to get at a child's game and let him do work and had to run for hours as they do you would puff and blow and say "That's as much like work as any thing I ever did and it is a fact." A child's game is work and it is work for grown ups. Parents to some common sense experiments and take your small child into the garden and give some on a stick. Let him pull weeds and the one that pulls the most weeds shall have a big stick of candy. You will see the little fingers work a lot at weeding things as if they were making up for lost time. Following this line of thought any of the most useful up at the industrial lines and constant and useful occupation. Boys will do a lot of things and do them well if some reward is held out for merit and there is rivalry between them and other boys.

A LIVE GEORGIA MERCHANT

J. W. VAUGHAN, of Cartersville, Ga.

It is the desire of the Merchants and Manufacturers association that the merchants of the south shall feel that the conventions held here are all for their benefit and that they are to take part in them and help to their utmost to make them a success. In short it is the merchants own convention. One of the finest men in the mercantile business in Georgia is J. W. Vaughan of J. W. Vaughan & Co. of Cartersville, Ga. Mr. Vaughan is one of those far seeing and broad minded men who can prepare a plan only for today and tomorrow but who can arrange to meet the conditions of one year and twenty years hence. South the trend of the times he is adopting the method of business toward the future. He has long realized the importance of the southern merchants during their buying in the southern markets and has been coming to Atlanta for his goods for many years. When the first arrangements were made for this Southern Merchants convention Mr. Vaughan was a keen student of the convention. He immediately entered into the spirit of the thing and proved that the Atlanta Spirit is not altogether confined to the city. He was placed upon the committee on program and has been of inestimable service with the bug west on his vest in.

GREEN TAG SALE AT RICHARDS CO.

Unique Idea Used by Wholesale Paper House for the Benefit of Visiting Merchants.

The S. P. Richards company the well known wholesale paper and stationery house on Central avenue are putting into execution a unique idea for the coming of the convention merchants. They are going to hold what is known as a Green Tag Sale. The idea is that they want to offer some special bargains in goods which will be displaying their hospitality in a substantial manner and which will not soon be forgotten. They have attached green tags to the samples in their show rooms which give the special prices for the convention period. Merchants are advised that they will miss something good if they do not take this opportunity. The company have also recently added a complete line of Bibles to their stock. They are on display in their main show room and make an exceedingly attractive appearance. There is everything from the cheapest testament to the biggest and most expensive of family Bibles. This is sure to cause favorable comment for the progressiveness of the firm. All in all the S. P. Richards company should make a considerable impression on the visiting merchants and it is probable that they will not only cement old friendships but will make many new ones as well. H. H. Koppelman is in charge of the house sales department and he has made a splendid reputation for them as hosts of more than usual affability and ability.

The Capital City Tobacco company have recently purchased a new automobile truck for delivery in the city. This company have studied the use of trucks on a scientific basis, and have found them excellent. W. J. Thebault, on the West Point road this week for the Dixie Pickle and Preserving company has enjoyed excellent business. Bill Gaston, city salesman with Fain & Stamps was very chummy Saturday morning. He had discovered that he had the entire sales force for July and as he had done the same thing in June he is some considerable salesman for a fact. R. G. McCowan is at his home in Forsyth Ga., vacationing.

GEORGIA 1913 PACK TOMATOES ON MARKET

Canned Tomatoes on the Market Unprecedentedly Early This Year

Fain & Stamps announce they have unloaded a car of 1913 grown and packed tomatoes already. This is unprecedentedly early as it is not usual for these goods to be on the market until September and at this time of the year they are usually picking up 11 lots of the previous years pack to make out.

This lot of goods is from tomatoes grown and packed in Georgia. It is put up by the Mutual Canning Company at Adel, Ga. It comes under the label of the "Tada" brand and is a particularly attractive looking lot of goods.

This fact that Georgia tomatoes are on the market so much earlier than any other kind is an illustration of what may be done in Georgia in the canning line and ought to be an encouragement to others to grow more of this line of produce.

WHAT THE WILD WAVES ARE SAYING

WELCOME. ***** It isn't an everyday occurrence to be able to say "Welcome" to four thousand of the best and most representative of Georgia's merchants. We are proud of the opportunity. *****

To say nothing of the big crowd of Atlanta traveling salesmen who will be here to see that the guests of the city receive the best of all possible good time. *****

To our mind the traveling salesmen make just about the best thing there is in the way of hosts. And when they meet a bunch of merchants such as will begin to arrive tomorrow morning their best efforts are worthy of their best efforts. *****

Talk about a good time! Doesn't it make your mouth water? Theater parties, barbecues (O. J. Little), receptions, ball games and those talk feasts. Surely a feast for the gods on high Olympus. What more could a wise and progressive merchant want? *****

By the way those morning meetings when all the boys get together to talk about the things in their daily business life which sometimes puzzle them and which need the combined strength of many minds to solve will certainly be one of the most interesting features of the big time. They say that if a man takes one good idea away from a convention of this kind he is well repaid. In this case the man who doesn't take away at least a dozen good ideas will be letting slip his opportunities. *****

An Atlanta business man attended a convention in Philadelphia last year at which he got two ideas. When he returned to Atlanta he immediately put them into practice in his own business and now at the end of one year's time he shows how they have been worth $10,000 to him in cold cash. Money talks and a wise man listens. *****

Good salesmanship is just about the prettiest thing to observe that there is under the sun. Every man carries round with him the germ of a good salesman. It is only careful study and continued effort that will make him grow into a good salesman and the man who doesn't do so does not stand much chance of success in this business which we call life. *****

Well to revert to the original topic the merchants are coming. They have sent in their notes of acceptance by the thousand and it is now up to Atlanta to see that they go away with the double determination to come again next year and to bring a neighbor with them. In a few years the merchant who does not come to Atlanta every buying season in order to participate in the good time and to look over the new ideas in merchandise and merchandising will be regarded in the same way as the merchant is now regarded who has to hang a bell on his door in order to wake up when a customer enters his store.

To Be or Not to Be.

I sometimes think I'd rather crow and be a rooster than to roost. And be a crow. But I dunno. A rooster he can roost also. Which don't seem fair when crows can't crow. Which may help some. Still I dunno. Crows should be glad of one thing though. Nobody thinks of eating crow. While roosters they are good enough. For any one unless they're tough. There's lots of tough old roosters. And anyway a crow can't crow. So maybe roosters stand more show. It looks that way. But I dunno.

545-49 WHITEHALL STREET ATLANTA, GA.

Tomorrow is the opening day. Everything is ship-shape for the visiting merchants and everybody is happy.

Thousands of keen eyes are going to be on Atlanta the next two weeks. She's going to be inspected from every point of vantage—her stores, her factories, her industries. More than that:

The quality of her hospitality is going to be scrutinized. The sincerity of her glad-handing is going to be put to the test.

It is up to every Merchant, every Manufacturer, every Citizen of Atlanta to make our guests believe more strongly than ever before in the Atlanta Spirit.

And you Merchants who are going to make Atlanta your Mecca during the next two weeks—come right in and make yourselves at home. We are unfeignedly glad to greet you and we hope that you will have the time of your lives.

Don't fail to ask questions and to see what you want to see. Let "Show Me" be your slogan. Take things just as easily or just as strenuously as your constitution dictates.

Make a mental note before you strike the town of the things that you are most interested in. Then when you get ready, you'll know just where to go and what to do.

Be sure to reserve plenty of time for the recreational features of the Convention. Baseball, barbecue, theater parties, receptions and drives are some of them. Don't skip these—they're going to be jolly.

Do just as much business as you like. Atlanta loves to combine work and play, and you'll find plenty of willing listeners if you want to Talk Shop. It's quite possible that you could make your trip a Free Proposition if you talked shop sufficiently. Talk to Secretary Harry T. Moore about this point.

But whatever you do, be very sure that this is going to be a great affair, and that all Atlanta is glad to have you come and share in its privileges and its pleasures.

Why the Southern Merchants Should Buy From Atlanta Houses

C. W. McCLURE

Be C. W. McClure, the well-known president of the McClure Tea Cent company in a recent interview gave his reasons for believing it is best for the southern merchant that he do his buying in Atlanta from the wholesale and manufacturing houses here.

He done does it not seem reasonable to suppose that your next door neighbor or even the merchant five hundred miles away would find it to their interest to buy here? One can come here and buy a stock of goods for any line of business he wishes to enter. Anything from a knitting needle to a locomotive Atlanta has many hundreds of manufacturers and jobbers. Doesn't it seem reasonable to suppose that a merchant could buy all his wares from these Atlanta firms for less money than he can from the north and east in prices?

"BUSINESS IS GOOD," SAYS GORDON KISER

Shield Brand Shoe Sales Indicate Healthy Condition and Improved Tone

Most of the south's leading business men have felt the undercurrent of pessimism which has clogged business channels since last fall. It is good news however to be able to state that the entire tone of the south's financial affairs has decidedly improved in the past thirty days. Gordon F. Kiser, president of the M. C. Kiser company famous for their Shield Brand shoes made the above remark adding that the present month's record of sales for his firm would undoubtedly pass the previous high water mark.

CONFIDENCE

There Is No Substitute For Confidence

---and the merchant who enjoys the confidence of his community is the man who is doing most to benefit his town, his people and himself.

The shoe merchant who sells Shield Brand Shoes has laid the foundation for complete and merited confidence at the hands of his clientele, for he has reached the goal of shoe perfection. His shelves are loaded with full values in genuine leather foot wear of the best quality.

Every case of Shield Brand Shoes unloaded at his door is a silent testimonial to his judgment of merchandise, his economy in buying, his respect for the serviceable, and his love of style, beauty and comfort.

Shield Brand Shoes Fit Best---Wear Longest

The Shield Brand Trademark has long since built its reputation and won the Southern Merchant's confidence. It is now ready and willing and able to add to the confidence, respect and esteem of first-class shoe merchants in their communities.

A SHOWROOM FULL OF SHOWCASES

Showroom of Atlanta Show Case company.

A visit to the office and showroom of the Atlanta Show Case company is always a pleasure, on account of the geniality of Pat McGuire, the ever-smiling sales manager. Mr. McGuire states that, as far as the show-case business is concerned, they have certainly brought New York to Atlanta. They have recently added a nice line of display and window fixtures to their already immense line of show cases. He adds that this is one thing that has been lacking in this city, to some extent, and that many merchants have had this as an excuse to go to New York on their paying trips.

LADY WHO HEADS GROWING CONCERN

Eagle Multigraphing Company Is a Modern Firm Which Is Managed by a Clever Woman.

The Eagle Multigraphing company is an Atlanta firm, which is a daily proof of the ability of the gentler sex

Miss Jacqueline van Raden, and has been successfully operated by her for the past five years. They are located at 8 North Forsyth street, and their clientele includes the very best business houses of Atlanta and the surrounding towns. The quantity of business handled from day to day shows that Miss van Raden is quite capable of taking care of a big concern, handling big orders. She has had fourteen years of business experience, and the evergrowing prosperity of the company is an indication of the confidence of the public.

Miss van Raden is also president of the Eagle Stamp works. They are manufacturers of rubber stamps, stencils, seals, etc. A modern plant, supplied with the best machinery and tools, takes care of a business which extends all over the southern states. Miss van Raden is particularly anxious that the merchants attending the convention shall pay the company a visit during their stay in the city, and will take pleasure in showing some of the latest ideas in office work and form letters as applied to modern business.

O. L. Johnston, southern sales manager for the Carroll-Adams company, of Baltimore, Md., returned to the city the latter part of the week after a successful trip through south Georgia. He will stay in Atlanta for the Merchants' convention.

It may be a new idea in business service. The most important thing in any modern business is service. If you can improve your commercial service to your customers as a result of this convention it is well worthy of your closest attention.

When you do come to the city attend every meeting and get the utmost you can out of the things which have been arranged for your welfare. Take part in the discussions. This way you will get the best out of them. And also attend all the picnics, barbecues, ball games and theater parties. They will all do you good and make you go back refreshed and reinvigorated for your work.

RONA COCOA MAN OFF TO NEW YORK

A. J. Edmondson Goes to Attend Sales Convention at Home Office of Van Houten Company.

A. J. Edmondson, the popular southern representative for the Van Houten Cocoa people, left the city last Thursday for New York to attend the annual salesman's convention of his company at the home office there. Mr. Edmondson regretted very much that he had to leave Atlanta at this time, but stated that he would start on his southern trip on the 18th of the month and would be back in the city in about four weeks' time.

Mr. Edmondson is one of the most progressive salesmen in the south and it is a liberal education to listen to some of his experiences on the road. He is working hard to popularize and spread the sale of Rona Cocoa, his firm's specialty, and is doing many things for this end. He is very tickled over his latest achievement in this line. He got a lot of red tin signs with the name of the brand on them and got the negro wagon drivers to tack them in their wagons. He stated that 10 cents would secure the privilege from a negro any time and that he was tickled to death by the way he saw the signs all over the city now.

Among the John Silvey & Co. salesmen who have reported into the house for the convention are P. H. Jeter, Banks Whitman, A. W. Hughes, H. T. Burton, V. M. Hyatt, R. A. Hewitt, W. W. Bullock, D. M. Braswell, John H. Roberts, H. C. Parkinson and Sam Johnson.

K. D. Brobston, with the John Deere Plow company, of Atlanta, came in Wednesday night, from a trip through his north Georgia territory, and told a splendid story of crop conditions there which will be found in another column. He went back to his Athens territory on Friday. Mr. Brobston's home is in Athens.

W. F. Spratt, Jr., of the Spratt Chair company, has just returned from a few days' trip on the Georgia railroad. He brought in a nice batch of orders, and talked enthusiastically of business prospects.

Dobbs & Wey announce that the following of their sales force will act as hosts for the coming convention: E. E. Fulton, O. W. O'Donnell, E. H. James, E. L. Herrison and W. J. Weems.

C. A. BEAUCHAMP.

C. A. Beauchamp is the manager of the Atlanta branch of the Remington Typewriter company. Mr. Beauchamp is a man who has made a big personal success since being with the company, which has been for the past twelve years. He has been manager of the Atlanta branch for six and a half years, and before that was in charge of the Texas branch of the company. He is placing the conveniences of his offices at the disposal of visiting merchants for the coming convention.

IN THE TRENCHES

Brown Perryman & Greene will be represented in the city during the convention by Al N. Greene, J. O. Chamberlain, C. J. Dickinson, J. E. Tate, W. A. Haley, J. F. Jenkins, L. S. Peterson, H. M. Walker, Jr., J. H. Martin and J. H. Estes.

H. E. Jessup, with the Lamar and Rankin Drug company is back on the job since last Monday after his two weeks vacation.

Walter Richards, of the S. P. Richards company, is back from his vacation, and will mingle with the convention visitors all next week.

N. K. Smith, selling Battle Axe shoes for the Stephen Putney Shoe company of Richmond, Va., in Georgia, says that he and his firm have gotten out over 2,000 invitations to merchants to visit their display during the merchants' convention. The line will be on exhibit at the Kimball house in charge of Mr. Smith and R. T. Hancock, from the house. Langborne Putney, president of the company, and other officers may be here during the convention. For over ten years Mr. Smith has made large sales twice a year by inviting these merchants up to Atlanta.

Williams & Meyer, of Baltimore, Md., have opened their new show rooms in the Arakon hotel, in charge of Z. M. Williams. They will be here for about two months, and have taken eighteen large rooms to display their line. This consists of holiday goods and novelties, and is one of the best of its kind.

E. E. Shyer, with the Consolidated Paper company, came in Saturday with a nice bunch of orders.

The S. P. Richards company were crowing on Friday because they had passed their record in the stationery department for the month of July, which record was established in July, 1912.

The Atlanta Paper company are throwing their entire plant open to the visiting merchants next week, and it is expected that quite a number will take this opportunity to see the wonders of modern paper and its products.

The Rice & Hutchins Shoe company of Atlanta, have called all their sales men in for the convention, and are expecting a big business. They have a number of especially attractive lines to offer the merchants which they have made specials for the occasion.

Bill Quarles broke up housekeeping last Thursday and went to boarding. The true reason is not known for certain, but it is rumored that since Bill's recent pedestrian activities, his appetite has been so large that Mrs. Quarles refused to provide meals for him any longer.

H. J. Atenood, with McCord Stewart company, has returned from a two weeks' trip to New York and is out on his territory again. H. A. McDonald will return this week from the Giddens' convention in Toronto, and will be with his trade again the latter part of the week.

J. L. Shipp, sales manager for Robert M. Green & Sons, has just returned from Atlantic City. He spent several days there and then jumped into Brunswick, Ga., and closed a nice fountain deal this week.

Fain & Stamps are just in receipt of a letter from J. C. Owens. He writes from his home in Concord, Ga., and announces that he will be on vacation there for the coming week. He states that he will spend his mornings at preaching and the afternoons out fishing. They hope Mr. Owens will realize that his mornings will be the times when he will enjoy himself, but he will probably rest better in the afternoons.

J. C. Mason, with the Consolidated Paper company, will be in the city for the convention week meeting his customer friends.

J. L. Nisbet, in the office for the E. L. Adams company, returned from his vacation last Monday after putting in most of the time at Piedmont lake.

The Dougherty-Little-Redwine company salesmen who will be in the city for the convention are A. M. Wilkins, W. F. Seal, A. S. Wilkins, J. M. McKibbin, J. O. Castlebury, T. L. Barron, G. G. Jefferson and P. S. Dunlap.

The A. M. Robinson company will have the following of their men in for the convention: W. P. Sewell, C. A. Smith, R. L. Smith, C. P. Irby, T. E. Broadnax, W. S. Jones, Percy W. Harris, L. A. Barrow, J. W. Crawford, J. L. White, M. M. S. Brown, L. B. Robinson, W. E. Matthews, J. W. Kea, E. J. Smith, A. S. Harris and L. B. Robinson.

The J. K. Orr Shoe company will be represented by the following salesmen to wait on their visiting guests: J. W. Bates, W. D. Beacham, James Messer, R. J. Bates, Cliff C. Johnson, W. A. Brown, G. S. Oakes, G. A. Hall, C. G. Burnett, A. C. Welborn and Frank Perryman Morgan.

The Binder Frame Manufacturing company is probably the best equipped plant of its kind in this section of the country. They have a machine that anyone can work for framing pictures and it is interesting to observe the ease with which an absolute novice operates this machine. They equip frame shops entirely, have their own moldings for frames and job all classes of picture frames. They also have a plan for immediately establishing a man in business who becomes known at once as a picture framer.

Brother George Maddox, with the Beck & Gregg company, was late coming in this week on account of the large batch of orders he had to pack with him.

The M. C. Kiser company will have the following men in to receive their visitors during the convention: O. E. Kenner, W. W. Benson, A. L. Diehl, J. G. Addy, W. H. Bekford, R. E. Sloan, J. W. Mitham, E. C. Watson, C. C. Reeves, N. A. Morse, C. J. Finger, S. D. Akin, S. P. Leonard, A. L. Glass, George E. Burnett and J. L. Dickson.

A Satisfactory Bread Account is a big asset, it brings a large number of people to your store. It is in daily demand and requires practically no investment. ## Miss Oppenheim Tells of Work Of the Chatham Kindergarten

The kindergarten believes in the necessity for strong bodies, as well as the desirability of bodies as accurate of movement, as lithic, graceful, beautiful, as it is possible to make them. She seeks to attain these ends:

By asking expert assistance in detecting and treating diseases.

By observing every law of hygiene that conditions will permit, and demanding better conditions every year.

By teaching respect for the body.

Moral Development.

The kindergarten believes in cultivating in the little child such fundamental moral qualities as mark every person of fine character. She gives conscious ideals as well as opportunities to cultivate habits. She considers the following among such basic moral qualities: Joyfulness, self-reliance, self-control, truthfulness, frankness, courtesy, reverence, self-appreciation, honesty, understanding of law and obedience to law, ability to lead, recognition of the rights and powers of others, punctuality, orderliness, cleanliness, responsibility to sacred duties, justice, a love of the beautiful, and in general all a pulsing desire to advance.

Mental Development.

The kindergarten believes that the mind should be usable; that training is worthless except as it is capable of translating into terms of action for the good of the individual and his fellow-beings. The mental training given in the kindergarten is of the same general, basic nature, as the moral and physical training. Cultivation of increasingly sustained attention and concentration; reliable memory; clear and certain use of all the senses; intelligent interpretation of relationships; ready control of the muscles; a quickening of the best emotions; the beginning of discrimination in matters of right; an awakening will to perform aught.

The Interest Upon the School.

The kindergarten believes that the kindergarten should be in every school because of the acknowledged importance of the foundation in any work. The kindergarten knows that by directing natural activities during the period from four to six years, many fundamental habits can be established, and at the same time the child's joy in living be increased, and she, therefore, believes it a needless waste to have to form these habits at a later age when the child might be using his conscious energies upon accomplishments which would not have been wise or even possible, at the earlier period.

The kindergarten believes that education should be a continuous process, and that the kindergarten in the school can be more completely unified with the work of the primary grades than the kindergarten elsewhere maintained.

The kindergarten believes the kindergarten child to be prepared in some degree for the work of the primary school in every particular of its curriculum. He has dealt with number in a variety of ways; has expressed ideas through at least a dozen mediums, including several forms of constructive handwork; has learned to love the written word in music and language; and to express himself with some small power in each of these directions; has come into an appreciative unity with the nature world, and understood definite in a few of its great beauties; has enjoyed many experiences concerning the human world about him, and over and above all, has learned to look upon school as a place of delights, upon growth as a thing to be desired, upon his teacher as a good comrade, and upon his schoolmates as fellow-workers from whom he can count upon aid when he needs it, and whom it be his privilege to assist when he can.

The majority of children leave school early, as is seen by a comparison of high schools and grammar schools in point of numbers, and the kindergarten gives an opportunity for one, or perhaps even a lifetime, of school life, at a most formative age, without delaying time at which a child may, if needs be, go forth as wage-earner.

We have the statement from public school officials in Chelsea, Mass., and St. Louis, that the child whose school career begins in the kindergarten less often falls back in a grade than children without this foundation. The state, according to these statements, seldom has to pay double for the education of a kindergarten child, and the kindergarten becomes an institution of economy. Because the kindergarten deals with the whole child and because its method is natural development, because it is a "process of living" and not a preparation for future living, its spirit is one of action, freedom, vitality, and these things being infectious the kindergarten leads new life to the school in which it is placed.

Its Influence Upon the Home.

The kindergarten child is helped to see his home in perspective and appreciate its activities.

He is made to desire a share in the responsibility of the home.

He has something to contribute to the conversation and life of the home different from the contribution of the other members of the family, and his identity as an individual is strengthened.

Always.

(Bertha M. Combs, in Judge.)
The fellow that writes promptest
Waits the longest for his mail;
The fellow that walks fastest
Gets freight over the slowest rail;
The fellow that pays soonest
Seems to never get his check,
And the fellow that's most careful
Always gets caught in the wreck.

GEORGIA'S OLDEST AND BIGGEST EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTION

For More Than a Century the Influence of the University of Georgia Has Been Felt in the Progress of the World

Built nearly 100 years ago.

Historic chapel, nearly 100 years old.

Demosthenian Hall.

Remodeled Franklin College building, built early part last century.

A section of the campus, showing some of the Historical Buildings and State Landmarks, of the University of Georgia. From left to right are seen: Old College dormitory, the oldest building on the campus, being built in 1801, next to the right, is New College dormitory—called "New" when it was built about 30 years after the first one. This building is now nearly a century old. Next is the historic chapel, built nearly 100 years ago, and which has seen more famous men as speakers upon its platform than any other building in the south, Demosthenian Hall (barely visible through the trees); remodeled Franklin College building, constructed in early part of last century.

By D. G. Bickers.

Athens, Ga., August 2.—(Special).—The University of Georgia is coming to be what its name literally indicated, the "University of Georgia." It is not only the University of Georgia, but it is the State Institution, and it is the state's university with the accent on the first three-fifths of that word.

There are colleges and universities—the Athens Institution was for decades in reality a college along with other colleges. It had outgrown the rut and is coming to live up to its name, measure up to its real mission, realize its own dream of usefulness.

From a few acres in a crissal old town, where a few sons of lawyers came to learn how their fathers made footprints on the sands of time the campus is now bounded on the north by Tennessee and North Carolina, on the east by South Carolina and the sea on the south by Florida and the gulf on the west by Alabama and on the bottom by China and the new republics there. These bounds are the actual touch, the real work is going out into other states directly and indirectly and into the foreign lands.

And extension works done the muscle development here. Today there are thousands of boys' corn clubs in a score of states of the union with hundreds of thousands of members raising millions of bushels of corn, where there are only thousands a few years ago. The government is patron of this system of extension work that has not only done so much for the coming farmer, but has done more in the present farm than could have been effected by any other route.

But if Linda Sam is "ration" Professor Joseph S. Stewart of the department of secondary education at the University of Georgia is "patron" the first class of this sort was organized at his suggestion and in his realm of extension work for the university—the first that was ever done.

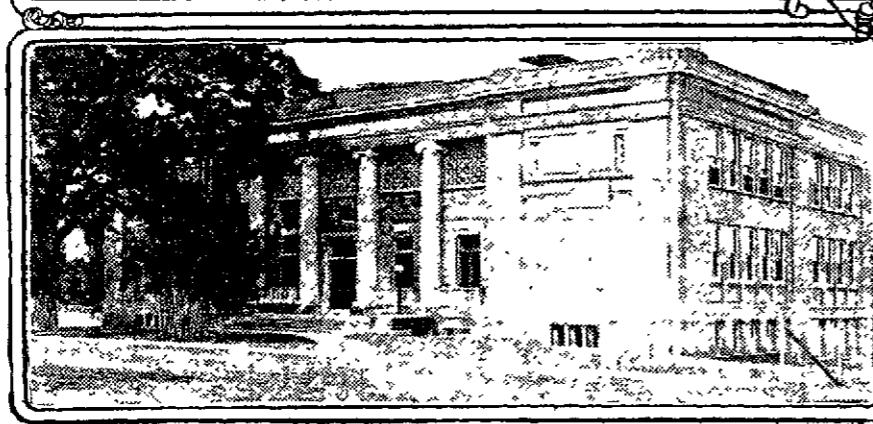

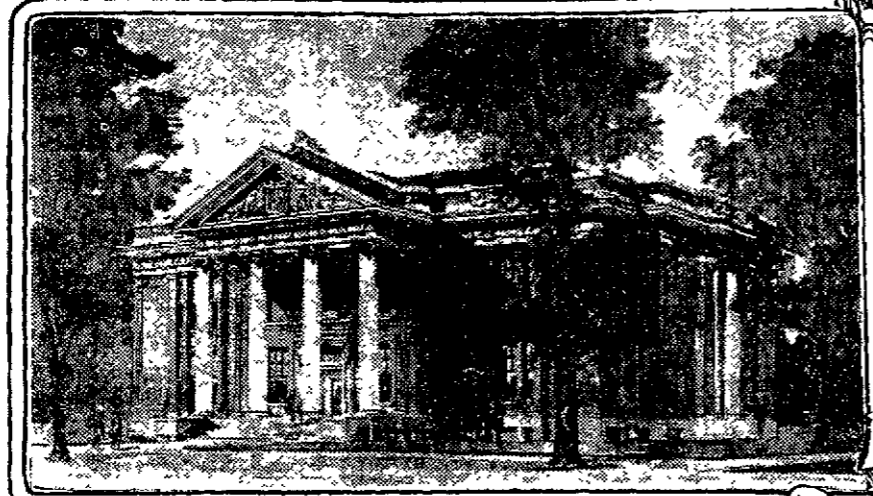

The university's first trip into the state was a visit to the boys' corn club the last visit is not yet—there are thousands of these visits being made this summer, through the extension agents in several lines of effort, through correspondence, through initiation through special messengers carried by members of the faculty.

Attendance Doubled In Few Years.

This going out to learn what the state's boys need to equip them for life's activities in new conditions in the south was the great lesson which the university learned. Now it is practicing it.

That the university had "scented a live trail" for usefulness has been attested by the doubling of the attendance in a period of a few years, which other academic institutions of the same grade and with good support either grew none or actually lost largely in numbers. The university is not only struggling to keep generally up to date but particularly to specially meet special demands.

The demand is still upon the university for cultural classic training and for the standard scientific courses. There are demands for training in every one of the social lines. The State College of Agriculture is meeting the demand for expert training in half a dozen agricultural lines. The school of pharmacy intensified its effort till it won first rank the law school is filling the need of the young man who will follow that profession the civil engineering department has added a school of architecture and is at the command of the counties for advice and service. The school of education is being developed to the needs it is to fill in supplying teachers for places in the state's schools and special professorships in the department of the school of education and business administration will in a few years among the most prominent departments—training young men in business principles, business, the summer school affords the teacher of the state who has only the summer vacation, special opportunities, the graduate school is yearly enlarging its field to meet altered requirements, the summer school and the graduate school have a definite plan to give young men as well as men a chance to reach nine months and spend three summer vacations in Athens and secure an "A M" degree—if they have previously graduated from a recognized institution.

In these ways the university is trying to place in the university of demands—relinquishing nothing of the great underlying elements of culture and mental education and supplying, in addition, every possible facility for vocational training.

More Equipment Badly Needed.

The law department is in need of a new building which has been planned and the site located. There is also need as was shown in the reports of the visiting board of a central heating plant—for comfort, safety and a big saving in expense. In winter, more dining rooms is necessary and more dormitories as the attendance has about doubled since the present dormitory and dining room accommodations were all taken up and each year there are from 100 to 300 waiting to get a place in the "kitchen" of Denmark dining hall, which is already affected by litigation regarding the Denmark will and in the three dormitories. The state college of agriculture which has been teaching into every county of the state, with direct results for the farmers will ask for an increase in maintenance and will ask also for a much-needed building to accommodate the attendance which had quadrupled in the past three years.

One of the finest brief resumes of what the University has accomplished and pleas for loyalty in support of the state's highest educational institutions, was made from the commencement platform by the first honor man of this year, Ernest L. Jackson, who departed from the usual form of a valedictory for the following presentation of the college.

"I would not have you think that the academic department of the University is lagging behind the other departments in this work of educating the people of Georgia. Every high school and common school in the state feels the direct influence of Franklin College. They have been lifted to their present high standard by the labor and thought and useful citizenry, which is the very foundation of the state. Take away that department of the University, which inculcates in us the great lessons of truth and humanity, and trains our minds for useful service to our fellowmen, and you take away that force, which makes Georgia the Empire State of the South.

"It might not be out of place here to mention a few of the things our young are doing. The highest honor at Harvard University is to be chairman of the law review. The same is true at Columbia. The past year saw one of our graduates chairman of the law review at Harvard and another at Columbia, a record unequalled per-

Some Striking Facts and Figures About the University of Georgia

Here are some up-to-the-minute facts relative to the University of Georgia taken from records which include the scholastic year just ended and some incorporated in a report to the federal government made by Registrar T. W. Reed.

Total number of graduates, including the class of 1913, 3,295
Approximate total enrollment since the first year, 1901 to 1913, 11,000
The total enrollment the past year was 557 for 1901 it was 437, for 1909 it was 604. This does not include the attendance upon the summer school, which increased from 322 last summer.
The last building erected on the university (proper) campus was Candler Hall, a dormitory, costing about $40,000, eight years ago. The left building of importance in amount, invested was the main building of the agricultural college on Lumpkin Hill, a fine building, but now not large enough for the attendance, which has more than quadrupled in the past four years. In that department alone.
Here are the figures Registrar Reed made to the government.
Value of library	$5,000
Value of books and pamphlets in library	$58,500
Value of scientific apparatus, machinery and furniture	$100,000
Value of grounds (including the extension farm of nearly 1,000 acres)	$500,000
Value of all buildings (including dormitories)	$550,000
Value of dormitories	$200,000
Total amount of all endowments	$300,000
Total annual appropriation for maintenance (including agricultural college as well as the university proper)	$155,000

Some New Amusements for Theater-Goers

The original eight Berlin madcaps at the Forsyth this week.

Keith Vaudeville.

(At The Forsyth.) There are a great many interesting things about the bill of vaudeville that will be the attraction at the Forsyth the week commencing with matinee on Monday, chief of which is the fact that the acts are all of that quality that Atlanta theatergoers like best. A better variety combination has not been gotten to either and on the bill will be acts that will evidence a decided valuable magnetic influence.

Feature Pictures.

(At The Grand.) The motion picture policy at the Grand has been wonderfully successful. Theatergoers, particularly those who have become interested in the "movies" know that the Grand is one of the finest places in the city for

Bank in Arkansas Closes Its Doors

Gettysburg Resolutions Are Engraved and Sent From Oregon to Georgia

All the way from Portland Ore., a beautifully engraved set of resolutions came yesterday to General Andrew J. West, who was Georgia's representative on the Gettysburg commission. The resolutions had been passed at a meeting on the field of Gettysburg, on July 2, at which General West presided, and they were sent to him by Colonel Lewis C. Garrigus, commissioner from Oregon, who was the man who introduced the resolutions.

Keith Vaudeville.

(At The Bijou.) The very best dancers now in the profession have been put together in Van Hoven, the Dippy Mad Magician will be one of the hits of the season. This fellow is of the "nut" type. He is a comedian because he can not help it, and coupled with the fact that he is one of the cleverest of all vaudeville magicians, theatergoers may anticipate an act that will have a keen drawing interest. Van Hoven has been so successful this last season that he has spent nearly all of forty weeks in the Keith houses in an around New York city.

MOUNTAINS LOWLANDS-LAKES AND FALLS

COMBINE TO MAKE THE BLUE RIDGE SECTION OF NORTH GEORGIA, EASTERN TENNESSEE AND WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA THE SWITZERLAND OF AMERICA, WITH RARER RESORT ATTRACTIONS THAN ANY SECTION THIS SIDE OF THE ROCKY MOUNTAINS. A WONDERFUL PANORAMA OF SCENIC BEAUTY

The wonderful development during the last decade of the Blue Ridge section of Georgia, East Tennessee and western North Carolina has opened the eyes of the world to the possibilities of this section—so rich in mineral, timber, agricultural resources and water power, and shown by the census reports to be the healthiest section of the United States.

In respects the richest and most beautiful part of this entire region is that now being opened up, embracing the extreme western end of North Carolina, composing a large part of Cherokee and all of Clay county, and Towns, Union, White, Rabun and Lumpkin counties in Georgia.

The Gainesville and Northeastern railroad has just been completed, which gives an outlet to that portion of the section of Georgia lying south of the Blue Ridge, and it is now practically assured that the Hiwassee Valley railroad will be built from Andrews and Murphy, N. C., via Hayesville, and which will ultimately be extended via Hiwassee, Ga., across the Blue Ridge to connect with the Gainesville and Northeastern at Roberstown, thus connecting the entire section with the main line of the Southern at Gainesville, and affording communication in every direction.

Truest American Blood.

It is hard to conceive of the vast possibilities of this wonderful country, interlinked as it now is with the outside world, from which it has ever been shut in and separated.

Here is an area of 2,681 square miles, as large almost as the entire states of Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut, yet containing a population of only 45,011 people; while the states above named have a population of 5,370,738. Consider for a moment what the future holds in store for this beautiful country, with resources and advantages vastly superior to the New England country.

There, too, is a native white population unsurpassed by any people on the American continent, unmixed as it is with scarcely any foreign element, and a very small percentage of colored people; a people Anglo-Saxon to the core, unhampered by none of the racial and caste distinctions which embarrasses many other sections.

A Land of Few Crimes.

It is the proud boast of this section, and one which the records sustain, that there is less crime here than anywhere else in this country. As an evidence, Clay county's jail is used almost entirely as a residence, and the county of Towns, in Georgia, has never had sufficient criminals to necessitate the building of a jail. In fact, so different is this section from the rougher mountain sections elsewhere that the jails in several of the counties named could be rented out as Sunday school quarters, with little disturbance to the schools or inconvenience to the prisoners.

In this region there is vast mineral wealth, as yet untouched, water power amply sufficient for all purposes of power and manufactures, which alone, when fully developed, will make this country one of the wealthiest to be found anywhere.

Agriculturally, this country is primarily a grass and stock section; and when once thoroughly developed, and modern methods of farming and stock-raising introduced, will rank with the leading sections of the middle west in these lines of industry.

Added to these are the almost inexhaustible timber resources of this mountain region I am describing. Almost the entire area abounds in virgin forest, heavily and thickly wooded, very little of which has yet been cut. Having secured railroad facilities, this section will undoubtedly become one of the leading centers for the manufacture of furniture and hardwood products.

As a fruit country, it is hardly surpassed by any section of the south, especially for the culture of winter apples, the apples here rivaling the best product of Washington, Oregon and western New York, and superior in flavor.

Rabun Also Growing Section.

This section is just across the state line from Rabun county, in Georgia, where one of the most marvelous developments of any place in the south has been going on, incident to the construction of the $3,000,000 electric plant by the Georgia Power company. Here at Tallulah Falls a giant chasm has been hewn by nature through the solid rock, through which bounds the Tallulah river over rock and precipice.

Already a place of great natural beauty, a mecca for summer resorters, Rabun county will become a far more attractive country when the plant is completed and the two sparkling mountain lakes are formed, one of them 2 miles long and the other more than eight.

There is also wonderful opportunity for development of the fruit industry in Rabun and the other counties of this section, and as a result of these efforts a growing prosperity is being realized. Apples grow luxuriantly, and large orchards are already under cultivation. The corn raised in these deep, rich valleys, also, is among the very best turned out anywhere in the south.

Fine Climate Unequaled.

But the advantage which leads to this entire mountain country its chief charm to the home-seeker is its equable, all-the-year-round, pleasant climate, and its lovely, picturesque scenery. As a whole, the country is less rough and rocky than most mountain sections, and has larger valleys and more arable lands than is generally found in the mountains.

Among its many attractive and fertile valleys may be mentioned the Valley River valley in Cherokee county, North Carolina, extending near the Southern and Hiwassee Valley railroads, being about six miles in length and nearly two miles in width, and being, perhaps, the finest agricultural valley west of Asheville.

Entering Clay county, we find the Brasstown valley. Shooting creek and Lower Hiwassee valley, all rich in agricultural resources.

But, for beauty of scenery and grandeur of outline and perspective, there is perhaps no region in the mountains of North Carolina which surpasses the Tusquittee valley, with Tusquittee creek pouring its clear, cool stream of liquid silver out of the heart of the mountains bearing the same name and reaching a height of more than five thousand feet. This crystal-like stream waters almost the entire valley, which is about twelve miles in length. On either side rise the mountains, which, blended with the stream and valley, present a scene of charm and loveliness hardly surpassed anywhere.

Nacoochee Now Opened Up.

Coming into Georgia by way of the beautiful and picturesque little town of Hiwassee, we reach the Upper Hiwassee valley, in Towns county, rich in agricultural resources, and noted for its attractiveness of scenery. Across the Blue Ridge is the Nacoochee valley, far famed as one of nature's most charming spots, and famous as a resting place for pleasure seekers even before the civil war. And beyond this valley, along the line of the Gainesville and Northeastern railroad, is opened up a country equal in resources and almost equal in beauty of scenery to the other sections described. And the entire section, possessing all the advantages of the higher mountain regions, yet free from the rigors of the highest altitudes, will without doubt become one of the most famous resort countries in the world.

With its unrivaled resources, its ideal climate, its charming scenery, and its many other advantages, it presents a field most inviting to those in quest of a beautiful homeland. And to all home-seekers of the right stamp the people of this section say, WELCOME.

WILLIAM H. HARRISON.

Hayesville, N. C., July 26, 1913.

The Political Rights of Women

MRS. MARY L. McLENDON, Editor

President Georgia Woman's Suffrage Association

"Eternal Justice," the subject of an able address made by Judge Henry Hammond, of Augusta, before the meeting in Atlanta, in 1886 of the Atlanta Equal Suffrage Association, is again expressed by the eminent Georgian in the decision rendered by him in the famous Zachary case in Augusta, which the press of the state has dealt with at length in days. Judge Hammond's decision has had subsequent recommendations and has been fruit for on July 29, 1913, John Smith, of Walton county, introduced a bill in the legislature to make the other the legal guardian of children under 14 years of age. These men believe in equal rights for women, and in the outcome of twenty-three years of work by the Georgia Woman's Suffrage Association.

Atlanta Equal Suffrage Association until she was called to be president, by a unanimous vote, of the Georgia Woman's Suffrage Association, when Miss H. Augusta Howard resigned after the National American Woman's Suffrage Association had held its convention in Atlanta in 1896.

A New Association.

When the majority of the members of the Atlanta Civic League left that organization I was called upon to organize a new association, which it was perfectly right to do. My gratification was complete when I learned that it was the wish of the majority that the name of the first local association organized by myself in 1904, the Atlanta Equal Suffrage Association, had been the name selected by the members for the new flourishing suffrage association, auxiliary to the Georgia Woman's Suffrage Association. This local paid its dues to the state treasury before July 1, 1913, and paid $5 on the state's pledge law. The national is in fine working order with upwards of 100 members on its list.

This statement will be recorded in the fifth volume of the History of Woman Suffrage, which will very soon be issued by the National American Woman's Suffrage Association.

The DuKala Equal Suffrage Association will hold a meeting at the home of the president, Mrs. S. E. Cunningham, on McDonough street, Decatur, Ga., tomorrow, August 4, at 3 o'clock p. m. Suffragists invited.

Suffrage Discussed in Gainesville.

The debate on woman suffrage at Gainesville, Ga., on June 28, was a victory for "the cause" and a big triumph for the cause. A large number assembled to hear E. A. Dunlap and Hammond Johnson for the negative and Dr. M. C. Hardin and Attorney Leonard J. Grossman for the affirmative. Mrs. Ella May Powell, who was born and reared in Atlanta, but who now lives in Gainesville, delivered a splendid address, which was deemed as favoring woman suffrage. A large number testified their willingness to join a suffrage association by signing their names. Representing Atlanta at the meeting were Dr. and Mrs. Hardin, Mrs. Albert Grossman and Leonard J. Grossman.

James Lee Laidlaw, president of the National Association of Men's Leagues, to further the cause of woman suffrage, will assist Mr. Grossman in organizing men's leagues in Georgia, which will be an auxiliary to the National Association of Men's Leagues. After she could vote in Illinois, she was asked if she would run for mayor of Chicago. She answered: "There are better ways for women to use their new privileges in Illinois than to be leaping at office. There probably are offices better filled by women than by men, but for some years at least they should be allowed to seek as of their own accord."

The women of Wyoming have been using the elective franchise since 1890—forty-four years—and today there are seven women legislators in Wyoming's legislature. Miss Nettie Truax, a beautiful young woman, was elected to put through measures in the interests of the educational committee she obtained the desired results. The office sought Miss Truax out evidently. One of our legislators was brusque enough to say that he disfavored women voters because Jesus Christ did not call a woman for a disciple. He forgot that Christ said of the woman with the alabaster box of ointment, "Her name shall be preached." He forgot that a male disciple betrayed the Savior, and another forswore all acquaintance when He stood by the kitchen fire in Pilate's hall. He forgot that the women clustered around the open tomb when the twelve were afraid to put in an appearance. He forgot that the politicians of that time preferred Barrabas as a companion rather than the Son of God. He was more than unfortunate in his comparisons, because he willfully blundered where he thought he could discredit motherhood and all that womanhood means to the world by his flippant remarks.

Mrs. Felton's Story of Woman's Suffrage in Georgia

(The second part of the able address by Mrs. William H. Felton on the subject of "Votes for Women" delivered at the recent open suffrage meeting in Atlanta is here-with published.)

Nine sovereign states have acted in concert and the women are pulling the business of those states up to higher planes, and the men are enthusiastic as to results. Whether women want the ballot or will pay no attention to its responsibilities has nothing to do with these established facts. The day of argument has closed—the day of voting is there and in force.

Whether women will vote as their husbands do has already passed the trial stage in nine states, or whether they will destroy domestic peace is no longer a matter to be voted on. They are in, and to stay.

Whether women are too nice and gentle to go into a crowd to cast a ballot or whether bad women will seize the reins of government and blast the fabric is an ancient story. They are doing their work in a most pleasing way to the men voters who risked these dangers and won the victory. Whether women always cease and brag and scramble to have their own way, and cut up high jinks in every public test has nothing to do with the steady vote going element in those nine states where the women go to the polls and deposit a slip of paper just as they have been accustomed to go to the postoffice and deposit a letter with a stamp on it. One was only a threat and the other is the refutation of a false idea.

Whether George Washington did not say "Votes for women" or Moses or Elijah or Jeremiah failed to say "Votes for women" is not worthy of attention now. When women were not educated in early times because they were only made for man's use and abuse, has nothing to do with our text. Whether St. Paul's direction to cover a woman's head is to be taken literally or religiously or scientifically or geographically has nothing to do with this burning issue, namely: Women in nine states are doing wonders with the voting privilege and the question that appeals to every sensible man is whether he will afford to assume the authority to forbid it to other women nearer home?

As we have watched the historic course of events, as they came down the ages, we find that the world has outgrown domestic life and the best results in ethics and family affairs are obtained where men treat mothers, wives and daughters as partners in every-day living and as sharers in duties and responsibilities as well as in domestic pleasures and opportunities. One of our legislators was brusque enough to say that he disfavored women voters because Jesus Christ did not call a woman for a disciple. He forgot that Christ said of the woman with the alabaster box of ointment, "Her name shall be preached." He forgot that a male disciple betrayed the Savior, and another forswore all acquaintance when He stood by the kitchen fire in Pilate's hall. He forgot that the women clustered around the open tomb when the twelve were afraid to put in an appearance. He forgot that the politicians of that time preferred Barrabas as a companion rather than the Son of God. He was more than unfortunate in his comparisons, because he willfully blundered where he thought he could discredit motherhood and all that womanhood means to the world by his flippant remarks.

TWINS, THEN ANOTHER IN LESS THAN 7 MONTHS

Albany, Ga., August 2.—(Special.)—It rarely occurs that three additions to a family are recorded within less than seven months without triplets featuring in the process. That such a thing is not impossible is proved, however, by the case of Calvin Overstreet and his wife, a colored couple living in the western part of Dougherty county. When seen on an Albany street, Overstreet carried girl twins in his arms, and his wife had a boy baby in her embrace. The three pickaninnies seemed to be of about the same size and age, so the couple were stopped and questioned. It developed that the twins were fourteen months old and the boy seven months, but the latter is large for his age and the girls small, and they would easily pass for triplets. The case is considered unique.

SLATON URGES IMMEDIATE SECURING OF SCHOOL TICKETS

Wm. M. Slaton, superintendent of special transfers now, as the superintendency schools, has issued the following card for the benefit of parents and teachers:

The office of the superintendent of schools is open daily for issuing school tickets from 9 to 5 o'clock, except Saturday, when the office closes at noon. Parents are urged to get their tickets now, and avoid any rush at the last day.

Those needing tickets are: Pupils who have never been in Atlanta schools before, and former pupils who were not enrolled at the close of school in June.

Pupils who attended schools other than the ones of their district last year will have to be transferred to the school of their district. At school opening, all pupils must be enrolled in the proper district, else they will be sent home. Those having moved into new districts must also secure transfers.

Parents are urged not to ask for make-up deficiencies.

mentary privilege fought over. The consensus of the situation is manifestly this: Because nine states are already in possession, and other nine are fast getting ready to step into line, it means that every such state has the legal opportunity to double its political power whenever it confers votes on women!

What are the other states going to do about it? Eighteen states with votes for women, each one doubling its voting capacity by conferring the ballot, could easily hold the balance of power in every national election. Will Georgia re-enfranchise its colored voters, or will she confer the ballot on the virtue and intelligence of its women? MRS. W. H. FELTON.

A Vital Law.

No law before the legislature today is of more vital importance than Mr. Ellis' bill 299 for better health and sanitation of Georgia. No bill can be of such far reaching significance, insuring as it does, for our children their birth right of health and good citizenship. Of what use to man are his rights of life and liberty if he is not protected from disease and suffering? We give him freedom of speech, protect him in the conduct of his private and public activities, allow him infringement of his privileges as long as they inflict no injustice upon those of his fellowmen. Yet in the matter of health, the most priceless possession on earth, our laws are so lax and so poorly enforced

Law Must Be Passed.

We cannot afford to turn down any legislation that makes for better health and sanitation of our state. We, in Georgia, are endowed by nature with every attribute for the maintenance of the highest standard of efficiency—good drainage, good water and air, fertile soil for the production of almost every known food, but unless we use them rightly, the very prolificness of our resources may easily lead to a false sense of security. Contaminated water, food, stuffs improperly cared for, poor garbage and waste disposal, inadequate supervision of milk supply, failure to protect our children from unnecessary illness, evasion of notification and quarantine regulations, lazily or often no registration of births and deaths, all combine to give us a poor system of public health bookkeeping with inaccurate and misleading results.

Georgia Must Have Adequate Laws To Insure Health of Her People

By FRANCES SAGE BRADLEY
Committee on Health Georgia Federation Women's Clubs

A distinguished writer has said, "Man's destiny stands not in the future, but in the past, and is determined before he is born," by circumstances over which he has no control.

Good corn or cotton or cattle cannot be raised from poor seed, nor from good seed poorly tended. Soundness of body and mind, good health and efficiency are dependent upon environment as much, and, according to some authorities, more than upon heredity. And we are, in spite of ourselves, our brother's keeper.

If our neighbor's children come into the world well-born, free from inherited taint, we should be restrained from contaminating them with our tuberculosis, our typhoid or other debilitating diseases.

that hundreds of good useful lives are exacted in Georgia each year—lives which we can ill afford to lose, and which we ought in honor to protect.

The tendency of the times shows a larger consideration of the unfit, the blind, deaf, crippled, degenerate and insane. As a result of their better care, these defectives show a marked increase in longevity. Also it is noted that the class known as degenerate is increasing much more rapidly than the general population, that the proportion of insane to normal population is greatly in excess of a generation ago.

Appreciating the need of the unfit and their wonderful response to our efforts, how urgent is the call of the masses for proportionate opportunities. Havelock Ellis says "Nations have begun to recognize the disability of education, but they have scarcely yet come to recognize that nationalization of health is even more important than nationalization of education. If it were necessary to choose between the task of getting our children educated and task of getting them well-born and healthy, it would be better to abandon education."

Law Must Be Passed. We cannot afford to turn down any legislation that makes for better health and sanitation of our state. We, in Georgia, are endowed by nature with every attribute for the maintenance of the highest standard of efficiency—good drainage, good water and air, fertile soil for the production of almost every known food, but unless we use them rightly, the very prolificness of our resources may easily lead to a false sense of security. Contaminated water, food, stuffs improperly cared for, poor garbage and waste disposal, inadequate supervision of milk supply, failure to protect our children from unnecessary illness, evasion of notification and quarantine regulations, lazily or often no registration of births and deaths, all combine to give us a poor system of public health bookkeeping with inaccurate and misleading results.

THE TAX SHOWDOWN: After weeks of agitation and of unmitigated state-wide sentiment for tax equalization last week brought the first clear legislative showdown as follows.

The house has followed the old dangerous custom of spending more than the state receives the excess over current income being $280,000. It has virtually refused to provide revenue to meet this increase since for the moment it has stilled effective tax equalization the only source from which additional revenue could come by passing a bill which practically transfers the principle of a central equalizing authority and that lodges only shadowy power in county boards.

The senate which cannot originate revenue legislation has ripped the house's appropriations bill to bits taking from it the $280,000 excess expenditure put in by the house. And the senate being confessedly ineffective tax equalization has gone unequivocally on record as opposed to spending a dollar without at the same time providing a dollar's worth of revenue to go with it.

It has taken some time and in a verbiage to bring the issue to this clear cut character. But the situation is simplified and contrary from being devoid of hope it is probable that today there is a brighter prospect for some measure of equalization than at any time since the legislature convened.

The house justifies its position by precedent. It points out that legislation after legislation has expended more than the current income of the state. It points out that its immediate predecessor appropriated about $300,000 more than the current income for two years. It does not see why the present legislature should be in violation to that rule.

The senate takes the position that the time is come when in the name of the state's honor and integrity in behalf of its unpaid county school teachers its imperiled credit and its part starved institutions this old dishonest makeshift of kicking must be discarded for an efficient and straightforward method. The senate is just as loyal to the state institutions as is the house. Realizing their tremendous growth and commensurate needs it would appropriate even more money to their maintenance. But it knows also that if the ancient method of kicking debt continues Georgia will eventually and a not distant day at that face the menace of repudiation. It knows that there is superabundant wealth in Georgia which, if properly returned at even a nominal valuation would amply support all institutions and wipe out the disreputable deficit system of doing business. It knows that sane equalization will not raise but may lower the tax rate. In all these facts it sees no excuse whatever for the continuation of the present dangerous farce. It, therefore stands pat absolutely on the proposition that Georgia shall not spend a penny of money without at the same time providing revenue to meet it. That is the one right and honorable position, and the senate merits the gratitude of all Georgia for taking it.

Now where does this leave us? Just here. The house despite warning from the governor and the state press practically as a unit has thus far emasculated equalization by enacting a law that, for all purposes virtually ignores the central equalizing board. No tax system that has not a central balance wheel and that does not provide means to require all counties to pay the same rate whether 10 or 90 percent is worth more than the paper it is written on. That for the house.

The senate without power to originate revenue legislation but with power to hold up legislation of all kinds sees the crisis in its true light. It promises to obstinately maintain the position that not a dollar shall be appropriated unless it this dollar for dollar principle is the one honest and safe principle for any state to observe. That for the senate.

What then? The bill now goes to the senate. Eventually both the appropriations bill now cut to pieces by the senate and the tax equalization bill cut to pieces by the house will reach conference. We must depend upon a patriotism of the two bodies the house conceding enough to insure a reasonable revenue measure and the senate conceding its part to assure a solution of the imperative problem.

The Constitution believes that such patriotism inheres in both house and senate and that now the atmosphere has been clarified and the really desperate need of the situation shown that it will be forthcoming. It is the honor of the state of which we are all citizens that is at stake. We believe the senate will continue justly performing its duty. We believe that misplaced timidity will be conquered and that neither house nor senate will consent to go home leaving the finances of the state in a chaotic and menacing tangle. For unless a remedy is found shame wars on Georgia's reputation.

THE MERCHANTS CONVENTION: On Monday the Southern Merchants convention met for its second time in Atlanta will convene for its second time from August 4 to August 9. Organized by the Merchants and Manufacturers association of Atlanta with the cooperation of the chamber of commerce the convention has taken its place as one of the established commercial functions of the southern states.

The word convention is perhaps too formal and too broad to be applied to this gathering. It is more like a great get together assembly or an experience meeting. Its called the purpose of exchanging views extending old acquaintances and discussing ways and means to promote the mutual interests of the south. It is not a political gathering. It is a gathering of business men and commercial travelers for the purpose of the south will be the first to act. It is a gathering of the small country merchant from every southern state. It is a gathering of the small country merchant that is really the man a hundred times the southern states. He comes into contact with the farmer and it is the farmer who is still the basis of the southern prosperity despite the blighting of our manufacturing interests.

The merchants of such a body are bound to be substantial and productive. They are the backbone of the southern trade. They are the backbone of the southern trade. They are the backbone of the southern trade.

CHECKING THE RAIDERS: The state's honor and integrity in behalf of its unpaid county school teachers its imperiled credit and its part starved institutions this old dishonest makeshift of kicking must be discarded for an efficient and straightforward method. The senate is just as loyal to the state institutions as is the house.

THE UNCONSCIOUS FIREBUG. How many millions of dollars worth of property go up in smoke and how many lives are sacrificed each year in this country to the amateur incendiary? The Nashville Tennessean refers, for instance, to two of the recent horrors, the Binghamton and Triangle building fires, to the cigarette fiends. It appears that careless smokers of these little articles tossed butts into inflammable matter. Holocausts that cost many lives were the results. Our contemporary wants to know if something can be done to reach and deter people like this. Any measure aimed at discouraging the amateur or unconscious incendiaries would have to be sweeping in its nature and almost superhuman in its discriminations. A good many fires are attributable to the recklessness of smokers. The man who strikes a match to light the gas and then carelessly disposes of the burning match is in the same class with them. It might be possible to pass a law making it criminal to handle fire recklessly in any way whether the offender be a smoker or a non-smoker. The trouble would come in with the enforcement of such a law. It is doubtful if evidence justifying conviction with the average jury would be available in one out of twenty cases.

The more effective plan offers in education. If parents will throughout the receptive days of their children hammer home the child's responsibility to society in this respect and if the schools will devote a little time each week to impressing the lesson we shall finally get action. The man or woman or child who is reckless with fire and who may indirectly be responsible for the destruction of a factory or a warehouse or a skyscraper and many lives is unwittingly failing to do his or her duty to the community. They fail to grasp that no community can excuse the smallest of its members from due care for the rights of the whole. All this sounds like abstract morality or metaphysics but it embodies a sound principle that we are each day applying more liberally in all our community activities.

We are brought back then at the last analysis to education as a means of curing the firebug who doesn't mean to be a firebug. Considering that his bland activities cost many lives much property and a lot of suffering every year it is worth while to tame him into a careful citizen a practitioner of conservation rather than of destruction.

A JUDICIAL MOSES: The state of Alabama promises to act the role of a Moses leading the other states out of the wilderness of legal technicality and quibble. Recently its supreme court announced that henceforth it would guide no more in its decisions by technical considerations. The eagerness with which the policy has been applauded by the press is indication of the national demand for judicial reformation. Here is typical comment from The Newark (N. J.) Evening Star.

As a political justice of New York speaks on a point of law, the higher courts have now decided to disregard technicalities and to give the law its true meaning. It is a great relief. The law is not to be used as a technicality but as a guide to justice. The law is not to be used as a technicality but as a guide to justice.

The decision is indeed epochal and it comes at a propitious moment when the entire country is in rebellion against the supreme court's narrow set of facts. There is no doubt as our contemporary quotes that too often the tendency has been in this country to regard the law as a game of quibbles. It is that fact that has enabled quibblers but wealthily to escape by the simple process of litigation long drawn out and expensive or the invocation of technicality.

There is as a matter of fact little question that the restless spirit which has grown up throughout the nation embody itself in the demand for judicial reformation. The result of decisions and other dangerous fads is an outgrowth of the tyranny of technicality. The judiciary has frequently answered and here and there with justice that it was powerless. It drew attention to many of the ancient precedents and rules by which it was bound and showed that in its eyes these were shorn away there could be little genuine reform.

The supreme court of Alabama has taken the lead in its teeth by summarily discarding the irrelevant technicality. There is no reason why the same process should not extend to other courts of last resort throughout the land. Such a movement would expedite simply and cheapen litigation almost inestimably.

Our legislature is pretty well advertised. The humorous paragraphers must have their fling, so they just won't take it seriously. Don't notice that the weather has done one what better since a new head was put on the bureau.

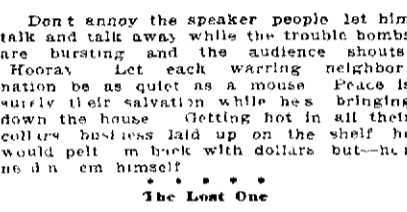

Washington makes quicker recovery from a cyclone than it does from the persistent office-seekers. Kansas grasshoppers are stopping trains. The intelligent peeps demand first class passage to the next station on their list. They must hand it to Castro. He beats the world at hunting trouble. Of course there are patriots. Bryan has broken lecture engagements to serve his country. Even a legislature, weary of well doing will have to adjourn—when the time limit expires.

But What About Paying the Teachers? (From The Dallas New Era) A compulsory education bill for children between the ages of 8 and 12 years and requiring not less than twelve weeks school each year has received favorable committee recommendation. In this connection it is said that the school census taken this year and soon to be completed will show a gain of 50,000 children of school age. The census is taken every five years. Appreciate Constitution's Work (From The Butts County Progress) Common honesty and decency demands that the teachers be paid their salaries when they are due. The Constitution has labored hard and long for the teachers and they appreciate it.

The World's Mysteries WHAT WAS THE END OF BELISARIUS?

Belisarius was one of the bravest of the generals who commanded in the army of Emperor Justinian. It was he who defeated a greatly superior force of Persians in the year 529 and the following year took Carthage and made Gellimer, the King of the Vandals a prisoner, after which he was able to enter Constantinople in triumph. After overrunning Turkey he went to Italy where he met with signal success, and after this he conquered the Visigoths of the Goths and sent him to Constantinople and refused the crown which was offered him by the Goths. For these exploits he was regarded as the savior of the empire of the east, and medals are extant with this inscription, Belisarius the Glory of the Roman Empire. But by and by the conqueror was deprived of his property and honors through having fallen under the suspicion of Justinian but some evidence have been found which would indicate that he was subsequently restored to them.

Marmontel in his romance adopts the story which is related by one contemporary historian to the effect that Belisarius was deprived of his office by his cruel master and forced to beg his bread in the streets of Constantinople. Others say he was imprisoned in a tower where he was to let down a bag by the following address the pe desians in the rope words Give an obolus to Belisarius whom virtue exalted but when crushed.

When Belisarius at the height of his power would appear in the streets of Constantinople Gibbon tells us he attracted and satisfied the eyes of the people. His lofty stature and majestic countenance fulfilled the expectations of a hero, the meanness of his conduct being too much embodied by his gentle and gracious demeanor and the martial strain which attended his foot steps left his person more inaccessible than in a day of battle.

Belisarius was endeared to the husbandmen by the peace and plenty which they enjoyed and the shadow of his standard instead of being injurious to the husbandmen was enriched by the march of his soldiers and such was the rigid discipline of their camp that not a path was gathered from the tree nor a apple could be traced in the fields of corn.

The Canadian Young Man (G. C. Thomson in Landon Everman) The Canadian young man is hardly a being of broad culture. His forte is action rather than thought and his hobbies are often (perhaps too often) poker pool and watching baseball. I doubt if he is one bit more of an athlete or a sportsman than his British brother. He won't walk one yard for pleasure. You will search far over west Canada before you find one rambling club. The Canadian is not ashamed to tell you that he is off to watch the ball game and he will yell his lungs this over the hooker but the proportion of football is grate. Not alone in football has the referee a bad time of it. In general information too the Canadian youth is hardly level with the home Briton. Literature makes no appeal to him. He reads nothing but the sporting papers and is apt to confuse Lamb with the donor. His proportion of foreign news does the public spirit of the Dominion strike a stranger as abundant. It does not find its expression in the territorial forces at any rate which are manned out of all proportion by home born Britons. Certain Canadians are grating on the ears of those who think the Dominion saved the empire in 1911 and are indignant when told that of the Canadian contingent sent to South Africa 80 per cent were home countrymen. No does public spirit find much expression in local government where the best people are conspicuously absent. Too many money to bother with such matters. Between the French in the east and the Yankees in the west Canada's naval ambitions for example are not without opponents. There is though in every community a small band of patriotic men who insist on the British flag over their schools and generally keep up a standard of patriotism. Recently for instance some of these in Winnipeg take action over the display in the local picture palaces of films showing the heroic battles of the United States Army. The fear was that the rising Canadian would be led to fight for the don't. About twenty years ago the Canadian is abuse was actually stopped. The Canadian is loyal certainly but his patriotism a philosophic than an active patriotism.

The Idea of Suggestion (From The Philadelphia Ledger) Richard Mansfield told me that when he was a lad in London he often nearly starved. There was a certain baker's shop where he would go and fast upon the adams coming him the idea of putting those lines in his pipe. Beau Brummel about dining on the names of things—a suggestion he used with powerful dramatic effect. This idea of suggestion has done many a thing for the world in many years ago a fishy man walked up Wall street—I understand the habit of getting a thirst no longer prevails there or maybe it is only the manner of allaying it—and pumped a tincup full of water from his own well. Not so good of something to get from my father's deat. About twenty years ago the remark to his wife a pretty idea for a song said she and so he sat down and in an hour wrote The Old Oaken Bucket.

Champ Clark's Rebels (From The Boston Traveller) Congratulations to Champ Clark and other democratic statesmen of great fame and moderate means who refuse to be held up by Washington landlords. Champ had a large apartment on a fashionable avenue for which the rent was $125 a month. Viewing with alarm the fact that Champ still had money after paying his rent bill the landlord raised the rent by $50 a month which was a larger percentage at one leap than Champ or any other man from Missouri would be willing to accept. If the Jeffersonian administration now in Washington is to justify its promise to reduce the cost of living it must make a firm stand against the rapacity of Washington landlords. Champ has led the way. If many other well-to-do men, especially the hotelkeepers will raise their schedules.

Carnegie and French Reporters (From Le Cit de Paris) The rich Carnegies was recently for several days in Paris. On arrival a legion of reporters came to ask his impression of his journey. Very courteously he received them and in course of conversation remarked. What an interesting profession is yours. You study daily life in all its diverse manifestations. How glad I am to meet gentlemen like you that I do not myself become a journalist. As assured Monsieur Carnegies that we regret still more that we did not become multi-millionaires.

One Reason Why School Teachers are Unpaid. (From The Alpharetta Free Press) The Georgia school teacher cannot vote—that is the larger part of her cannot. If she could she would make the indifferent legislators get a lump on themselves. No Football in His (From The Boston Globe) The football African chief who passed the examination and will enter as a freshman in the fall is from Liberia which has no written language and began the stupendous task of reducing language to writing making a grammar translating the Bible so that he may have some time for football and college sports. It's Hard to Get, All Right (From The Marietta News) The school teacher must be a great treasurer. It's so hard for her to get her money. Who is there that doesn't need money. The Every-day has her Victories her Heroes as I Heroism—in the Home at the Office—everywhere. And here it is that we daily applaud the Good Losers as well as the Winners. For—No one ever Wins all the time.

Baseball is one of the greatest sports of all times. Poor in something is the man or woman who does not appreciate this game. Daily as this bunch of Good Losers ever pictured a Natural History is revealed on the Baseball Diamond. One of the finest examples in all Baseball of a Good Loser is the great pitcher Christy Mathewson of the New York Giants. He is one of the best of every spectator always like to see him pitch. For when he loses—he is a Good Loser. He always takes his medicine with a smile thereby making Character alone side Baseball History. No one ever Wins all the time. So be a Good Loser always. Smile it out and Grit it out. Your chance will come again. Perhaps the very next time you will be a Winner. You surely will be if you are a Good Loser now.

The Polls. (From The St. Louis Post Dispatch) Illinois courts have held that judgment of election under the new law to serve as women of election. Now Give orders for the curtains. And measure for the rugs. Get plenty of insecticide. To poison all the bugs. The women folk are coming to make the loaves of bread. And they'll want the place fixed up a bit. As sure as Jordan rolls. They always as insist on that, God bless their cleanly souls.

The polls shall be a pleasure. To any one who calls. They'll have a few nice ornaments, And pictures on the walls. The women folk are coming to make the loaves of bread. And they'll want the place warmed up a bit. With some of home's delight. They always do go in for that, with all the ways might.

Well need a carpet sweeper. And chairs with leather backs. A few domestic furbelows. And things to cover cracks. The women folk are coming to make the loaves of bread. To fix things up a bit. The women always look to that, God bless their woman's wit.

Quaker Quips (From The Philadelphia Record) The sun always has time to burn. The role all actors are fond of is pay roll. The man who never swears may still get a cursory glance. Many a self made man is made over after he marries. Even a sword swallower may need tonic to sharpen his appetite. A woman is not necessarily a bandit, cause she holds up a train.

Possible Cause of Pellagra And Way to Stamp It Out

Editor Constitution. The fearful ravages of pellagra during the last few years—upwards of 100,000 cases in the south with a death toll of 30,000 victims of the scourge—has steadily for the propagation of knowledge—such knowledge as the medical profession possesses regarding the cause of this most insidious and deadly disease.

I find the public is ready for the assistance I may in any way as a causative factor in breeding the disease, rather than the real cause—namely, spoiled moldy corn. They pay no attention to the oft reiterated advice of the highest authorities on the subject.

When you tell the people not to eat corn bread or hominy they simply look askance at you and tell you of some other they hear is the cause or perhaps cottonseed products is claimed just as groundlessly as the immediate cause factor and they keep on eating the unwholesome stuff that is causing wholesale death in our midst.

Opinion of Experts

Dr. Harris of Georgia Rabcock of South Carolina, Surgeon General U. S. A. Lavender and Professor Lombroso of Italy the most earnest, thoughtful and painstaking investigators of the subject have always held to the theory that it is an intoxicating system produced by eating spoiled corn products.

So then if the ailment and the theory those men who have devoted years and years to the study of thousands of cases is positively and definitely set aside as false let us educate the people to exercise care in the harvesting of the corn crop. For in this way the acute case will be wiped out of Europe. It is just as long as the people cling to false notions about what is the cause of the disease and will go on eating corn that is rendered poisonous to the system. Some germ just so long will we have this dread visitant among us.

The people of the south love corn bread and it is hard to persuade them to give it up.

I would modestly advance the theory that pellagra may be due to a certain fungus known as Zea Mays or in common parlance corn smut (in which we derive the well known medicine Lactigo Mavris or Zea Mavris made from its fungi) of that name it has an analogous action to the ergot of rye. It has been known that the peasants of Europe are subject to a disease similar in all its aspects to pellagra and caused from eating rye bread that contained the poisonous fungi ergot or smut.

Symptoms Observed

The symptoms of chronic ergotism manifest the following symptoms: Diarrhea, some times constipation tingling numbness an insupportable fatigue and weakness in the limbs, vertigo due to the skin coldness of surface, neuralgic cramps burning pain in the stomach hands and feet eruptions of vesicles (blisters) filled with most offensive pus gangrene, dry or moist. Hallucinations delirium and complete insensibility at last super-venes and closes the scene of this most deadly disease.

This is the action of ergot or rye and we see the same symptom complex in pellagra caused from eating largely of corn bread and hominy with little variety to offset the effect of a germ that in my opinion, may be produced by the fungi Zea Mays—corn smut. May this fungus not cause the withered imperfect appearance we see in so much of the corn now raised, even that exhibited at great corn shows lacks the fine clear flint-like hardness the corn our fathers raised had and much too much of it has a withered imperfect moldy appearance to be good food for man or beast.

Prevent the Fungus Growth.

If our scientific farmers have their attention directed to this fungi as being productive of the possible degeneration in the kernel of corn and this poisonous fungus be rationally as well as empirically isolated and proven the cause of the disease under discussion then I am sure the scientific farmer will find a means of preventing the poisonous fungi from causing the degeneration of the kernels of corn in the ear and render it unfit food for man or beast.

For any physician will bear me out that Lactigo Mavris made from corn smut given experimentally in full physiological doses to man or beast will produce the same symptom complex we witness in the subject of pellagra therefore for the benefit of humanity I offer the suggestion for investigation and proof of its intrinsic merits as substantial ground for the theory herein advanced.

BILL WILL TAKE CARE OF DESERTED FAMILIES

Senator Hule Wednesday introduced a bill entitled "An act relating to the desertion and non support of wife and child and providing punishment there for also for partial support of such wife or children or both out of such wife as may be collected or in labor imposed under sentences."

The bill which was introduced in the senate at the instance of Probation Officer Congler of Atlanta provides that a husband who deserts his wife and children shall before being brought before a justice be placed in the hands of the probation officer or before the ordinary and placed on probation and given a chance, by firm but kind admonition to support his family and then should he refuse to do so his wife and children he should be arrested and punished as for a misdemeanor.

The bill further provides that should a wife be imprisoned and collected it shall be the duty of the court to direct that a third of such fine be paid to the above named officers to be used for the support of the wife and children.

Third and last the bill provides that in all proceedings under the act if the desention or non support of the wife she shall be a competent witness a first the husband as well as competent to testify against him in proceedings for non support of his minor child or children.

The bill was referred to the general committee on the subject of desertion and the bill has many influential friends and it is the light that a favorable bill will return it with a favorable recommendation for its passage.

PICKPOCKETS ROBBED AMBASSADOR WILSON

New York August 2.—Henry Lane Wilson United States ambassador to Mexico was the victim of pickpockets who secured his wallet containing $123 together with some papers while the ambassador was escorting two women friends to a Long Island train in the Pennsylvania station yesterday it was learned today.

News of Mr. Wilson's loss became public when railroad detectives who had received the ambassador's complaint had consulted with detectives from police headquarters. All parties were reticent regarding the details.

There is no intimation that the thief was the work of any one seeking secret papers in the ambassador's possession but that it was simply an ordinary case of pocket picking.

Ambassador Wilson today said that the stolen wallet contained no official papers. I lost merely my purse he declared and some visiting cards. The incident is so trivial as to be scarcely worth mentioning.

TWO PRISON REFORM BILLS THROUGH SENATE

First Gives Judge Right to Suspend Sentence, Second Regulates Term of Behavior.

With the concurrence of the state prison board and of superior court judges all over the state the senate has passed two measures which seem destined to revolutionize the methods of dealing with convicts in Georgia.

They do not interfere with the system of putting convicts on the road. In fact Chairman Davidson of the prison board believes that the changes will increase the efficiency of the convicts in road building but they do change entirely the attitude of the state toward the convict and give the convict a chance to work out his own salvation.

The first of the two measures legalizes the right of the judge to suspend sentence and provides that an adult for whom sentence has been suspended may be freed on probation. The second measure provides for the indeterminate sentence of convicts instead of sentencing them to a fixed term of years.

The first passed the senate unanimously and the second by a vote of 27 to 3. Both have been recommended for passage by the house committee and so far as is known no opposition to them has developed from any source.

Operation Simple

The bills themselves sound complicated because of the various safeguards and restrictions which are thrown around the proposed changes, but the operation of each measure is extremely simple.

The first provision and suspension of sentence bill means simply that the trial court has a right to suspend sentence and set exercise a supervision over the sentenced man. For instance when a man is sentenced for abandonment of the wife and child the judge deems it wise can sentence the man to the changing and then let him go free on probation on condition that he goes to work and supports his family. By the same method a first offender can be given a second chance and yet can be kept under the restraining eye of the court. It is an application in a limited way of the children's court probation system to adults.

Indeterminate Sentence

The indeterminate sentence bill is equally simple. After excluding life termers persons convicted of previous felonies or convicted for criminal assault or attempted criminal assault, it provides that a convict shall be sentenced for an indeterminate period instead of a fixed number of years. A felony convict for instance instead of getting a straight ten year sentence may be sentenced for not less than five and not more than fifteen years. This means that he has to work out his own salvation. If he is good in department and works hard he gets out at the end of the minimum time if he remains vicious he stays in to the maximum. It helps the man who are worth helping and it keeps the abandoned and vicious crook behind the bars.

Ultra-Violet Rays DON'T STERILIZE MILK

Washington August 2.—Although the ultra violet rays may sterilize water in Europe the vigorous bacteria in American milk refuses to succumb to their influence. This discovery has just been made by chemists of the department of agriculture who have completed a series of experiments with the rays in the hope of discovering some method that would insure complete sterilization of milk. The scientists found that while the rays were efficacious in disposing of much of the bacteria many of the pathogenic or disease producing germs survive.

Kansas City Paper Has Boost For Atlanta's Gridiron Club

The Kansas City Journal is of the opinion that Atlanta's Gridiron club is a plenty when it comes to getting results. In commenting recently upon the winning my Atlanta of the 1914 national convention of the Photographers Association of America, The Journal said:

"Atlanta has an organization of thirteen minute men and that seems to be plenty. It is an uncaptained machine that gets results. Among the things it has recently landed is the 1914 convention of the Photographers Association of America. That's only a drop in the bucket. Its real task is that of making Atlanta the biggest city of its size in America and there are indications that it is going to succeed."

White Plains N. Y. August 2.—Samuel Howell postmaster for a firm of local building contractors was skimming over the Bedford village road on his motorcycle today with money in his pocket to pay off a big gang of workmen when four armed bandits sprang out and ordered him to halt.

Howell put on more power. An highway past the highwaymen all four fired. A second volley planted a bullet in his side but he clung to the handle bars till he reached Mount Kisco where he collapsed. He was rushed to New York on an express train and placed on an operating table. Probably he will recover.

Atlanta Should Rear Monument To John Isham Says C. A. Lamar

That citizens of Atlanta should rear a monument to the memory of John Isham, a pioneer schoolmaster of Atlanta, is advocated by Charles A. Lamar in connection with a letter from Judge Chambers to Clark Howell recently published in The Constitution in which the former strongly urged such a memorial. Mr. Lamar said:

"I quite agree with Judge Chambers that such a monument should be erected. John Isham was a grand man—an exquisite scholar and under a rough exterior when aroused possessed a noble disposition and a tender heart.

I well remember when I came to Atlanta from Columbus to attend his school. It was a little building on Crew street near Woodward avenue—then Jones street. At the beginning of the session in January 1869 the number of pupils was not large and grew gradually smaller as the strenuous methods he adopted began to develop and sink into the boys of that day.

He was a strong advocate of the rod and didn't fail to demonstrate his faith in it by a vigorous application of the birch as he called it.

Among the boys who attended in 1869 whom I remember were Thompson Allen, Clarence Angier, Charles Pemberton, Hartwell Tarver, Thomas Brumby afterwards with Commodore Dewey on the Olympia, Homer Read, Howell Irwin, Edward Roach and Slaughter Wallace.

Among the last boys whom he prepared for the University of Georgia before leaving Columbus were the late Thomas J. Chappell, Hon. Henry R. Goetcheus, the late Samuel B. Spencer and Maribea Towns now a lawyer in Brooklyn.

"Subsequently he became the principal of Crew street school where he added new honors to his unique and distinguished career."

NOT "POLICE WOMEN," BUT SOCIAL WORKERS

Chicago, August 2.—The ten women selected by Mayor Harrison for an addition to the police force should not be called "police women" in the opinion of members of the woman's party of Cook county who attended the monthly meeting yesterday.

It was the beginning of an hour's discussion during which the suffragists asserted that the appellation of "police women" is not suggestive of refinement. It does not support the dignity of the office and is rightly improved because the duties are on a higher plane than those of a mere policeman.

The meeting finally decided that the ten women should be referred to as social service workers or civic service workers.

The Facts About Oscar Wilde Scandal Are Coming Out at Last

Lord Alfred Douglas, Involved With Wilde, Is Now Writing a Statement in Regard to the Matter.

London, August 2.—Lord Alfred Douglas is going to speak out at last. The man who as Oscar Wilde's most intimate and best loved friend, knew him better than anybody else ever did, and whose name, since Wilde's downfall, has been coupled with his in evil notoriety, at last is going to tell the full story of their acquaintance in a book which, when published, is likely to provide one of the biggest literary sensations of recent years.

This book, which its author declares, will reveal Wilde in an entirely new light, will be, he asserts, the first biography of the man who has been written by one who had his confidence, or whom, by the remotest chance, would have been selected by him as his Boswell. Incidentally, Lord Alfred lays claim to the distinction of being about the only biographer of Oscar Wilde in whose arms the author of "Lady Windermere's Fan" did not die.

It will not be surprising, by the way, if one of the bitterest and most sensational controversies in literary annals follows the publication of Lord Alfred's book, for in it he will make some pretty severe comments on the administration of Oscar Wilde's literary estate by the writer, who, according to Lord Alfred, constituted himself Wilde's executor without a shadow of authorization from the writer, who left no will.

In this connection too Lord Alfred will tell for the first time what he claims to be the secret history of the suppressed novel "De Profundis," the passionate human document written by Wilde in prison which was addressed by him to Douglas. This was first made public in the issue of the "London Standard" of Lord Alfred's name, Arthur Ranmore, an English writer, and to gain possession of it the former has already begun proceedings against the authorities of the British Museum to whom it was handed over without his knowledge.

When He Met Wilde.
Lord Alfred Douglas, who was 21 when he met Oscar Wilde and is now 42, is the second son of the eighth Marquis of Queensberry and the younger brother of the present marquis who recently spent some time in America and it was through his father's friendship with Oscar Wilde that led to the famous trial which ended in the latter's imprisonment and disgrace. The two men met in 1892, while Lord Alfred Douglas, who already had become known as a model, was still an undergraduate at Magdalen College, Oxford. For the three years that intervened before the exposure which wrecked Wilde's career as the young sonneteer and the brilliant dramatist and poet, then at the top of his powers and at the apex of his fame, were inseparable, often sharing the same establishments and meeting regularly in dining saloons and at the most elaborate entertainments and it has been asserted more than once that if justice had been done, many of Wilde's most famous works would bear on their titles page the legend, "By Oscar Wilde and Lord Alfred Douglas."

Never Led Wilde Astray.
"This preposterous tale that I led Oscar Wilde astray has no shadow of foundation save for the 80,000-word diatribe which Wilde addressed to me in prison when, mistakenly, he imagined himself abandoned and neglected by me.

Was it not your father, the Marquis of Queensberry who prosecuted Oscar Wilde for the sake of ending your friendship with him?" was queried. "It was my father who was prosecuted for libel by Oscar Wilde," answered Lord Alfred, quietly. "My father, you must understand, was extremely eccentric. My mother had to break with him, so you can imagine that he was not likely to take any advice of his too seriously. My father had heard rumors regarding Wilde's vices—the vices of which I was absolutely ignorant, and he urged me to break with him. I refused, declining to believe in Wilde's guilt. Then my father embarked on a systematic persecution. Once when Wilde was at the theater he sent him a 'bouquet' made, I believe, of carrots and sticks in the name of a lady, attached to which was a card attached accusing him of indecency in a very fashion. He hounded him, and eventually Wilde appealed to me. 'Your father is slandering me right and left,' said he, 'what am I to do?'

What He Refused to Escape.
"What he said?" Soon after, Wilde sued my father for damages, only to change places with him in the dock. The authorities, I may say, had no wish to imprison him. Bail was granted him and his friends implored him to escape. His motives for refusing to do so, I do not know. I was called as a witness in the Wilde trials. I blundered in not insisting on having my say, but I had no heart for it. I suppose one might call it supineness.

When Wilde Came out of Prison.
Lord Alfred went on, "he was a pauper. He came to me and told me he was in need, and I gave him money. I housed him at Gladies, my villa at Naples. Between this time and that of his death, he was in Scotland over 4,000 pounds sterling from me. Wilde was extravagance personified. He could not keep money. All his tastes were luxurious. If there were portolans to be had, he would have them. When he died, I was in Scotland on a visit, and thus may claim to be the only one of Wilde's biographers in whose arms he did not expire. Robert Ross notified me of his death, and I returned to Paris and paid the expenses of his funeral, an enormous sum. Then I was told that Wilde had left various manuscripts, of which someone else offered to take charge. At this time I was carrying on a racing stable at Chantilly, and did not care to be bothered with them. I consented to this arrangement. Among these manuscripts was, it appears, the document that Wilde addressed to me in prison, as well as some of my letters to Wilde. The document was recently handed to the British Museum to be published after my death, and it was used at the recent trial in London to blacken my name before all the world.

HAYDEN CHURCH.

about Wilde in a comfortable, but far from luxurious house, which he has inhabited for some time in Church row, Hampstead, a little, old-world street in London's most literary, historic and incidentally most beautiful suburb which, until quite recently also was the abiding place of another literary celebrity in the person of H. G. Wells, the novelist. Shelley also lived in this street.

Good-Humored Boy.
He proved, however, to be just a tall, clean-shaven, well-dressed pink-skinned, simple and good-humored "boy," who took to the runner's ear to witful horseman that he was before he took to literary work and who generally gives the impression of having lived out-of-doors most of his life and of having less than his share of the worries of this existence. Besides his sonnets which a pretty prominent literary critic declared the other day entitled him to a place beside the finest of British bards, Lord Alfred has, of course, published no end of light verse, and eagerly under the pseudonym of "The Belkian Hare, and for three years, or until quite recently he was editor and sole owner of that really distinguished literary weekly, The Academy.

Lord Alfred's forthcoming book will not be a confession, he declares that he has nothing to confess. When questioned as to his motive, after so many years of silence, and at last made public the story of his association with Wilde, he lost his expression of tolerant good humor, and there was a hard look in his eyes and bitterness in his tone as he related:

"I am writing this book," he said, "to clear my name and that of my little son, because the allegations against me in connection with Oscar Wilde, which, hitherto, had been circulated by means of irresponsible gossip and innuendo, have at last found men with at least some literary standing—though not the authority of having known either Wilde or myself—to father them, and because they have been set down as facts in works that purport to be critical studies of Oscar Wilde as a man of letters. I suppose the details of the libel action, which I recently brought against Arthur Hansome for repeating in his 'Life of Oscar Wilde' the oft-repeated fiction that I lived on Wilde, and that the evil influence exercised over him by me was the cause of Wilde's downfall, are still fresh in most people's minds. I lost that case. I knew I should lose it, though I was then ignorant of the existence of the suppressed portion of 'De Profundis,' the savorful denunciation of me which Wilde wrote while in prison in a fit of what he himself called 'mischievous madness.' The reading of this document, discovered by Wilde's self-appointed literary executor among his effects, and, though addressed to me, denunciated by him to the British Museum with the stipulation that it should not be made public until 1960, told powerfully against me, as I was not able to bring out facts which would have deprived that document of all its force. However, that action had the result which I hoped to gain when I brought it, for it revealed for the first time the whole case of my detractors, knowing which I can now proceed to demolish it with proofs.

Ballad of Reading Goal.
"In my book I shall make a full statement regarding the mistaken attitude toward me, afterwards acknowledged by Wilde, which prompted the writing of the unpublished part of 'De Profundis,' and of his own attitude toward it after he came out of prison. I also shall reveal the details of a deliberate plot, inspired by desire for revenge, to vilify me while living and to besmirch my name and memory when I was dead, a plot engineered by persons of some supposed standing in the literary world and carried out remorselessly.

"Of all those who surrounded Oscar Wilde," Lord Alfred went on, "I practically alone maintained a disinterested attitude. Time after time since his death I have been approached with offer of my own price for a book about Wilde, but invariably I have refused to consider such offers. Of course, those who made them hoped for the material for fresh scandals, whereas the association between Wilde and myself was the friendship of two literary men, and nothing more. Why, I asked myself, should I tell the world of what passed between us? Why rake up a past that was being forgotten? I have sat silent under countless attempts to blackmail me while enemies have been engaged in blackmailing my name, merely taking legal steps, and always before, and costlessly when statements reflecting on me were made in books with any literary pretensions. The revelation of a lot to defame me after my death is, however, too much for flesh and blood, and has goaded me at last into abandoning my policy of silence.

"The story of my acquaintance with Wilde," Lord Alfred went on, "will be told in detail, and the picture I shall draw of him will differ vastly from the mythical figure that has been conjured up by biographers who either did not know him at all or who had barely a nodding acquaintance with him. I shall be able to tell a great number of sayings and anecdotes of Wilde which have not before been printed, and I shall throw an entirely new light upon his own attitude toward his various works.

Ballad of Reading Goal.
"In this connection I may say that he felt something like contempt for his own Ballad of Reading Goal, which was written almost entirely at my villa at Naples, and in which, he declared, he was 'bordering on the realm of George R. Sims.' There will also be a chapter, which I think will prove rather a staggering one, on that much discussed work, 'The Picture of Dorian Gray,' which Wilde described as 'poisonous, but perfect.' Likewise a full account of my relations with the Wilde circle, which included Verlaine, Walter Pater, Dr. Warren, John Addington Symonds, Zola, Daudet, Whistler, John Davidson, W. E. Henley, William Morris, De Maupassant, Huysmans, Sir Henry Irving, Sarah Bernhardt, Marcel Schwob and a host of other celebrities.

"Of course," he added, "I shall deal with the Wilde scandal, but this I propose to do as briefly and as delicately as possible. Probably it will surprise the public to be told that I was close as my acquaintance with Oscar Wilde, I was absolutely ignorant of his perverted practices until they were revealed to all the world at his trial. My book will show how vital it was to him to keep them from my knowledge, and how rather than confess his guilt to me, even at the eleventh hour, he gave up the chance that was offered him of escape from imprisonment and infamy.

The slim young man in blue serge lighted another cigarette and inhaled a long draught from it before continuing:
Introduced to Wilde.
"Wilde and I," he said, "first met in 1882 in London while I was still at Magdalen College, Oxford, where he had been. As a young poet, who had been editor of one paper at Winchester school and of another at Oxford, I was taken to meet Wilde by the late Lionel Johnson, the poet, and he at once adopted me as an intimate. Remember that I was barely 21 and ready to accept friendship as disinterested. Frankly I don't believe Wilde was sorry to become acquainted with the son of a marquis. No one can read his writings without realizing that he loved to write of duchesses and other members of the aristocracy—his plays are full of them. Through me he met the late George Wyndham, my cousin, who was certainly one of the most brilliant men in English society, and I also introduced him to my mother and my father, the late Marquis of Queensberry who at first liked him immensely. He was a frequent guest at my mother's houses in London and in the country where he had the opportunity of studying a social rank which he would not otherwise have met.

"At the top of his fame," Lord Alfred added, "Wilde thought himself the greatest man that ever lived, and he very nearly succeeded in making me believe the same. For three years or until his disgrace, we were on the most intimate of terms, and during this time he produced some of his finest work. Of what assistance I was to him in his I do not care to speak now. It is enough to say that we were firm and steel, two literary craftsmen living together and sharing their inspiration. It is in this period, I suppose, that I am accused of having lived on him.

Gave Wilde Money.
"My answer is that I never had so much as a shilling from Oscar Wilde, though I gave him thousands of pounds, and that when one of us was the host of the other it was often I than he that played that part. We actually lunched and dined together very frequently, and so appears to have kept a strict ledger account of his bills without the least set-off with regard to mine. For myself I kept and keep no accounts, but I know where the money went. When my father died I came into £350,000, and all my life I have thrown money out of the window. The idea that the son of a wealthy marquis with the family funds always more or less at his disposal could possibly be dependent upon a Bohemian of slender and uncertain income is too preposterous for serious discussion. Wilde, on the other hand, who was of humble birth and had risen to affluence from poverty, rejoiced in these entertainments which were the fruits of his success."

What is your answer to the charge that you were an enemy of Oscar Wilde's life?" Lord Alfred was asked.
"My answer is that it is ludicrous to suggest that a boy of 20 corrupted a man of nearly 40," replied Lord Alfred.
"My answer to that one was one of the truest literary comradeships in the history of letters, and that Wilde's three most successful plays were writ-

HUNTING WOME NSTARS, THEY FIND "LEMONS"

London Theatrical Managers Put to It to Secure Leading Ladies

London, August 2.—This is the time of year when the London managers begin to count their "lemons" and attempt to rid their theatrical groves of as many as possible. In these efforts the managers are having by no means an easy time. To tell the truth, they find it especially difficult to find leading ladies for both the legitimate theater and the musical comedy houses, and a possible winner can ask and obtain almost any salary she wishes.

About a year ago Robert Courtneidge, who runs the Shaftesbury theater, and who put on what is probably the best musical comedy in London, high and low, for a woman star. At that time there was playing at the Hippodrome in a musical sketch one Clara Evans, a whole someone told Courtneidge that the Shuberts had offered Clara who was then receiving about $175 a week a long term contract at almost four times that figure to go to the United States. Clara's manager had no time in sending his representative to the Hippodrome with an offer of $400 a week if Clara would sign then and there Clara did—and nothing has been heard of her by the public since, though she has appeared in several of the Courtneidge productions.

When Courtneidge was planning the London production of "Oh, Delphine," which is about to come off after an unsatisfactory run of 150 nights, he looked everywhere without success for an actress to play the part of the arctic model. Then someone recommended to him Dorothy Jordan, the shapely and good looking American performer, and without seeing her Courtneidge signed her up at $400 a week for the run. Although she is far and away the best actress in the London production of "Oh, Oh, Delphine," which was shockingly cast, it is doubtful if Dorothy drew $400 into the box office and at the 18 nights she came here absolutely unheralded, has little or nothing to do in the production except look pretty, and yet Courtneidge and his advisors seem surprised that she has not justified her engagement in dollars and cents.

At the present moment George Edwards has in the cast of "Gipsy Lovelace," the most fascinating musical comedy address in Europe in the person of Sari Petras. He brought her from Buda Pesth with a great flourish of trumpets more than a year ago, but since then he has been lost in subordinate parts, simply because of the professional jealousy of native-born artists to whom Edwards finds it good policy to defer.

Political Prisoners Are Not Being Tortured

Stories of Atrocities in the Prisons of Portugal Are Denied—Prisoners Happy and Cheerful.

(Copyright 1913 by Curtis Brown)
London, August 2.—Some weeks ago the civilized world was shocked by news of the treatment of political prisoners in Portugal. Details of her statements and descriptions were later forthcoming but chiefly from sources that are open to the charge of bias. It was to discover the true facts as to what someone told Courtneidge that the Shuberts had offered Clara who was then receiving about $175 a week a long term contract at almost four times that figure to go to the United States. Clara's manager had no time in sending his representative to the Hippodrome with an offer of $400 a week if Clara would sign then and there Clara did—and nothing has been heard of her by the public since, though she has appeared in several of the Courtneidge productions.

Some of Portugal's Political Prisoners

A group of royalists captured in the two attempts to win back the country for Manuel and the Dowager Empress of Bedford protested a few weeks ago.

of friendship with their jailers, and treated as common criminals, but as equals, who, in the game of political intrigue, have been unfortunate enough to have lost for the moment.

The penitentiary, Portugal's chief prison, lies some distance outside of Lisbon. On your way to it from the city you pass the military barracks, from which marched forth the few hundred troops who responded to the call of the republican plotters, and who, because of the muddling of the loyal officers, carried the revolution through to success. Built in 1886, in the plain of the prison at Louvain, in Belgium, the penitentiary is one of the best prisons I have ever been in—and I have been in many not only on this side of the Atlantic, but in the United States. It is built in the form of six wings converging on a center tower in such a way that one set of guards, stationed in this tower, can view all the wings from their station. The wings are in three tiers, with cells on both sides. There is plenty of light from the inside, and every cell has a window looking out on the court between it and the next wing.

The day on which I went through the prison was a holiday, and the prisoners had been granted a rest from their usual work. Thus, had the chance of visiting many of them in their cells. I found the majority of the cells extremely clean, the condition evidently depending largely upon the personal habits of the inmate. Many of the cells were decorated with the personal belongings of the prisoners, and framed pictures, postcards, newspaper illustrations, crucifixes hung on the walls, especially of the political prisoners' cells.

Hoods and Masks Abolished.
Under the monarchy the prisoners were subjected to solitary confinement, and when they mingled, as at lessons, they wore hoods and masks. Under the republic, although the men sleep in separate cells, they work in common. I went through the hall where clothes of all descriptions are made. The chief tailor is not a prisoner but a skilled workman, who comes in each day to direct the work. The workroom was a good-sized room with plenty of air and sunshine and vastly superior to some of the workrooms in the big wholesale tailoring establishments in New York and Chicago with which I am personally familiar. In the basement of one of the wings I visited the common workroom of those who are engaged in furniture making and political prisoners prefer to work in their own rooms, and several of this kind I visited. One in particular was highly delighted to show me his work. Teachers are brought in every day to instruct the prisoners in the trades they choose, and this particular prisoner had had seven lessons in wood carving. He showed me the first piece of work he had done and then, with several others, he showed me the best work on a comparison of the two showed an amazing progress.

Under the present system the work of the prisoners is sold and the workmen receive each to one-third of the amount obtained for his production. This amount, however, is not given to him immediately, but credited to his account, and the total turned over to him without deduction of any kind when he leaves the prison. This provides an incentive, not only to hard work, but to good work as well.

Worst Hated Task Abolished.
Dr. Caldero Queiroz, the governor of the penitentiary, accompanied me over the prison and pointed out to me several changes he had made since he took the institution over from the monarchy. He showed me the old water pumping installation by which the prisoners, with much labor, were formerly compelled to raise the water supply to the second and third tier of cells. Then he took me to the engine room and showed me the modern steam pumping machine which he had installed and which relieved the prisoners of one of their worst hated tasks. He showed me the room in which, behind an intricate barrier of steel bars, wire-work and glass, the prisoners formerly held conversations with visitors, and he pointed out how he had not only simplified the barrier, but had improved it so that the voices could be much more easily heard.

Finally he took me to the class-rooms where the men are taught various subjects by fully qualified instructors. Here one of the most significant changes had been effected. Formerly the prisoners, crowded in their hoods and with the top part of their heads covered by black masks, were marched into the rooms and imprisoned in tall boxes with openings in front just large enough to show

BARE-FOOTED DANCER IN BAPTIST COLLEGE

Maud Allan Has Leased a Wing of a London Religious Institution.

London, August 2.—Maud Allan, the San Francisco girl, who some four or five years ago, astonished and charmed London by her bare-foot dancing at the Palace theater, recently returned from a long tour in South Africa. She has just taken a twenty-year lease of a wing of the Baptist college in Reading, near the center of London, and she soon found her quarters much too small for the entertaining she was called upon to do and her new home is the realization of her long cherished plan. She has hired the house with grounds of interest, the premises that have been shored up on her by society with a capital "S."

Strangely enough, though she made her first big success in London, and played for fourteen months at the Palace theater, she has not been seen here since. Many of us had hoped that on her return from South Africa she would play again in London. But the truth of the matter is, there are few any managers willing to do a salary she now demands, despite the fact that she is a sure draw. When she first came to the Palace theater, she received, I believe, about $25 a week, and when she refused an offer from Klaw & Erlanger of over $100 a week for a tour in the United States. Now she is preparing for a tour of the continent.

In these boxes the prisoners were compelled to stand during the lesson and were forbidden to speak. One of the rooms was fitted with these old-style boxes, but the others have been reconstructed for more civilized treatment. The prisoners now sit on long rows of benches, just like the spectators at a baseball game, and are allowed to speak and ask questions of their teachers.

In the courts between the wings have been laid out tiny gardens. In these the prisoners are permitted to take two hours' exercise every day. Formerly they were compelled to do so singly, but now they are turned loose in pairs and threes.

Mr. and Mrs. Argard's Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Argard entertained sixteen guests Friday evening at a beautiful dinner in the Georgia room at the Ansley. The circular table about which the guests were seated was decorated in a beautiful manner with a large rose, the centerpiece being a plateau of flowers, trimmed with ferns. About the table were baskets of roses and lilacs, the handles of the baskets tied with bows of pink tissue butterflies which had their wings the tints of the flowers were placed among the flowers. The pretty hand-painted place cards were in the shade of rose-souvenirs for the ladies were bon-bon holders in pink and green. The guests were Dr. and Mrs. L. P. Stephens, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. ## Superfluous Hair Truths

DeMiracle

The Only Safe Hair Remover
Each application of an unknown depilatory is a dangerous experiment and likely to cause permanent disfigurement. The mere fact that such preparations are short-lived should alone be sufficient warning to avoid their use. DeMiracle has stood the test of time, having been sold for over 11 years, therefore it is the only depilatory you can use without experimenting.

The Unoffensive Depilatory
If you use DeMiracle it will be impossible for any curious person to know that you have used a hair remover because DeMiracle evaporates immediately after accomplishing its work, therefore leaves no odor whatever. On the other hand, if you use any depilatory with a distinctive odor an offensive tell-tale smell will cling to your skin for hours.

Woman's Constructive Work Must Go on Whether She Votes or Not

By Mrs. Walter D. Lamar, President Georgia Division, U. D. C.

"Women must continue in the constructive work they have been doing through organization, whether or not the responsibility of suffrage is added," said Mrs. Walter D. Lamar, of Macon, president of the Georgia Division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, during a brief visit to Atlanta this week.

"It is a visionary idea many women have that with the vote all their former responsibility and activity in public matters will cease. On the contrary, more than ever will women need organization when they have the vote; otherwise their entire machine, which has been in the making so long, and which has accomplished great things, will stand for naught, and they will have no medium through which they can pull together. It will be a power no one can doubt when, with their unquestioned influence and their organization, both tried and proven, they can combine the vote; but of the three qualifications for usefulness never would I discount the power of the influence and the organization."

A Significant Statement.
This statement from Mrs. Lamar is significant, since few women in the state have rendered more valuable service in public matters than she. She represents the type to whom political responsibility might be entrusted. Not only as president of the Georgia Daughters of the Confederacy has she done active and telling work, but in many organizations making for constructive social work along many lines, she has been most prominent.

While visiting in one of the social settlements of Macon in early March, she was tarried from her horse, her injuries requiring a long sojourn in a hospital. Since her return to her home in Macon in June she has taken up the making of the program of the annual convention of the Daughters of the Confederacy to hold this year in Moultrie, Ga. Previous to her departure for Macon this week she will have perfected every detail of a program of marked interest and brilliancy.

The Way Women Can Work.
She has studied the woman question thoroughly and sees the suffrage issue from many angles, therefore her opinion is an important one in this period of woman's constructive work in Georgia. Discussing the activity of Georgia women of the present, Mrs. Lamar said:

"The clarity and strength displayed in the recent interviews with women as given in The Constitution, bearing upon the live topics before the state legislature, is a happy sequence to the power and diversity shown in the Woman's Edition of The Constitution published in June, this edition a striking expression of woman's organization and its value.

"More powerful than suffrage is the influence wielded by women of the right type from time immemorial, and I believe it will always be more effective than the use of the ballot," said U. S. Senator Francis Pickens in his edition of The Constitution.

"I felt a great pride in the achievement of Georgia women in the edition of The Constitution, when its praise was sounded in my ears a few days ago by the distinguished senior senator from Indiana, in conversation with this leader of his state, who has so long and so variously been honored by the democrats of his state, he said with great sincerity: 'What a wonderful work was that woman's edition published by the Georgia women in organization. I read it carefully and every part of it is creditable.'"

Mrs. Lamar's plea that women must work on undisturbed by the issue so stirring, in the demand for suffrage, is a timely and rational one. The vote is an incident which many may want, and are valiantly pleading for, and which may prove to be, when it does come, a power for betterment in many directions, but until it does come, women should not be drawn from the steady and splendid work they have been forwarding, but go on with their activities, and be the better ready when the political responsibility is added to the others.

SANDERSVILLE, GA.
Mrs. E. P. Wood and children, who have been visiting relatives in the northern states, have returned home. Mrs. T. S. Turner of Macon, Ga., the guest of her parents at their suburban home, Midway, visited relatives and friends in the city during the week. Mrs. E. L. Holmes entertained at her home in London Tuesday afternoon for the members of her house party, Misses Fannie and Annie Ruth Holmes, of Augusta, Ga.; Ouida Parrish, of Wrens, Ga.; and Messrs. Plicher, Ray and Averett. About one hundred of the young ladies and gentlemen of the social set were callers during the afternoon.

GOSSIP OF GEORGIANS IN THE METROPOLIS

By R. S. Carraway, The Constitution's New York Bureau.

New York, August 2.—(Special)—Mrs. "Tom" Pierce has a new chum, Mrs. Effie Alsop, the twenty-year-old Washington, Ga., girl who a year ago married Edward B. Alsop, a Pittsburgh steel millionaire, some four times her own age, thereby acquiring a place on the North Shore, and two sons, Harvard men, older than herself, has been adopted by Mrs. Pierce one of the most interesting North Shore society women.

They are neighbors and under Mrs. Pierce's wing Mrs. Alsop is beginning to take a prominent place in North Shore social gatherings. Mrs. Pierce is living at the Rodgers estate, and by a curious coincidence her former husband, Thomas W. Pierce, and his bride, live not far away. Mrs. Pierce and Mrs. Alsop, their best friends say, are inseparable. They are together every morning on a horseback canter or for a spin in one of the other's automobiles. The afternoon sees them at some function or driving through the beautiful North Shore roads. Usually there is a dip at some one of the beaches. In the evening, at bridge or dancing, they are apt to be together.

Mrs. Alsop, extremely proud of his pretty young wife, does not take an active part in the frivolities of summer time. He has retired from active business with a fortune of $30,000,000. Mrs. Alsop, who will be remembered in Georgia as Miss Effie Pope Hill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Hill, has won the name of being a "jolly good fellow," through her love of riding, swimming and motorizing, and she and Mrs. Pierce, in their alliance, are great favorites.

The Rev. Robert Jones, the Atlanta evangelist who is rapidly becoming known all over the country and who is affectionately called Dr. "Bob" Jones, has been in Gotham for the past week conducting services in the Tent Evangelical on West One Hundred and Twenty-fourth street, where he had preached to large crowds.

"If there isn't a hell, there ought to be one," Dr. Jones told his congregation one evening when The Constitution's correspondent went to hear the able southern preacher. "If there isn't a hell, there must be a hell, for the world and which do send forth the hell-fire messages are the ones where crowds gather to hear. The preachers who are faithfully giving the warning or eternal doom to those who do not repent are the ones who are preaching to throngs and getting people converted."

Colonel Pleasant A. Stovall, editor of the Savannah Press, and recently appointed by his one-time schoolmate, President Wilson, to be American Minister to Switzerland, held an informal reception Sunday night in the Hotel McAlpin for the numerous friends who called to congratulate him. Colonel Stovall sailed for his post Tuesday on board the Cunard liner Saxonia, accompanied by Mrs. Stovall, their son, and their daughter, Mrs. Burt Mason. Colonel Stovall is familiar with Europe and his daughter spent three years at school in Switzerland. This will be their first experience of the eminent Georgian in diplomatic office. On Monday night Colonel and Mrs. Stovall were the guests at dinner on the McAlpin roof of Mr. and Mrs. David Robinson. Mr. Robinson was associated with Colonel Stovall years ago as business manager of the Savannah Press when Colonel Stovall first became its editor.

"There is nothing in the relations between our country and the one to which I am going to demand any special diplomatic activity," Colonel Stovall said just before sailing. "There is a very large trade between America and Switzerland, and the chief business of American representatives in Switzerland concerns that. I am attached very deeply to the Swiss. They are much like Americans in their government, their national spirit of independence and in their mechanical and manufacturing skillfulness and I look forward with great pleasure to a sojourn among them."

The Rev. H. L. J. Williams, now assisting at St. Bartholomew's Episcopal church in this city, has accepted the professorship of New Testament exegesis at the University of the South, Swannsea, Tenn., and will enter upon his new duties in the fall. Dr. Williams came to New York from Millidgeville, Ga., several years ago.

Among the passengers arriving on the liner Minnetonka Monday was the Rev. Dr. Len G. Broughton, the noted Methodist preacher, formerly of Atlanta, who is now the pastor of Christ Church, Oxford, England. Dr. Broughton comes to visit old friends in New York and in the city is accompanied by his wife and young son.

Colonel John Temple Graves and Mrs. Graves sailed today on board the Imperator, the new giant of the Hamburg-American line, for a vacation in Europe. They will spend a month or

Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Wood, of Savannah, arrived at the Hotel McAlpin Monday on their way to the Adirondacks to spend the remainder of the summer.

Among the students at Columbia University taking summer courses are the Misses Nina A. Fape and Agnes Rourke, of Savannah.

New Fall Models in Silk Dresses and Tailored Suits

At Frohsin's

NEW Fall models in Women's SILK DRESSES—and TAILORED SUITS—have arrived and are now on view at FROHSIN'S. Many are "just right" for immediate use—not a bit too heavy!

There are Dresses for Street Wear and for Evening or Afternoon social functions. Distinctive, smart foreign and domestic models! The predominating colors are Wistarias, Mahoganies, Dark Greens, New Blues, Niggerhead Browns and Black. The materials are principally Japanese Crepes, Silk Poplins, Crepes de Chine, Crepes Meteor—and Krinkled Crepes and Poplins.

We are also showing the new arrivals in DANCING FROCKS—gorgeously beautiful—in combinations of Crepe and Lace or Net—and Crepe and Chiffon—in White and all the Evening Shades—some prettily beaded!

The new Fall Styles in TAILORED SUITS are here, too! Strikingly different from what's been worn. Coats are quite long—34 to 38 inches. Some have straight-line effects with cutaway fronts—some are in blouse effects with Kimono sleeves.

We hope you will come and see our display tomorrow! You will find much to interest you here.

Many Parties Last Week.

There were many dinner parties last week at the Capital City Country club, and the Piedmont Driving Club. The dinner at the former club, Thursday evening was a delightful one. The dinner at which Colonel and Mrs. Lowry entertained Tuesday evening in compliment to Mr. and Mrs. Clark Howell was a beautiful one, when twenty guests were present. Mrs. Otley's luncheon for Mrs. Little and Mrs. Maddox was a happy occasion on Friday when the guests were entertained at Jovense.

The informal swimming parties were among the most enjoyed events of the week, those at the country clubs and those in the private pools of Mr. and Mrs. Brandon and Mr. and Mrs. Adair.

Off for Seashore and Mountains.

Mrs. Lewis Beck accompanied by her niece, Mrs. Leonard James left Saturday for Atlantic City where she will spend the month of August. She will be at the Marlborough-Blenheim.

They have traveled in England and on the continent and have had a charming trip. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Meulor on returning from the Wrightsville Beach went at once to Lake Toxaway. Mr. J. B. Hockaday returned from New York Friday and joined Mrs. Hockaday Saturday at Lake Toxaway.

The Motor Boat and How to Run it

Interests Southern Belles at Toxaway

By Louise Dooly

The motor boat diversion is one of the most general of the pleasures here at Toxaway. The fair ones are not altogether satisfied with sitting quietly and placidly by while some masculine hand directs the boat, but gradually the little twentieth century feminine hand is reaching out to direct the motor boat, just as it first tries the electric machine, then the motor car.

The motor boats here present a gay sight, with their many colored flags flying, the water churned white behind them, and glimpses under the awnings of the girls' green, or red, or rose sport coats, which are a pretty substitute for the sweater.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Inman are the most recent hosts of a handsome motorboat, and its capacity of six or eight people they test with frequent hospitality.

Other motorists are Mr. and Mrs. Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. Inman, Mr. and Mrs. Dargan, Mr. and Mrs. Nunnally, of Atlanta, Mr. and Mrs. Stockton, of Jacksonville, Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong, of Savannah, Mr. Brown, of New York and Salisbury, Mr. and Mrs. Lipscomb, of Columbia, S. C. Mr. and Mrs. C. A. M. and a number of small boats have been equipped with motors by the summer residents in order to secure the real travel which the extent of the lake makes impossible to the oarsman.

Whether ones daily exercise at Toxaway includes all the outdoor sports or merely "walking the deck," the long verandas and the rhododendron porch are the social center at Toxaway, and there, if you linger a whole morning, you may be told the latest stories in embroidery on the fabric in lace making.

Or you can hate the currency situation from either standpoint made as clear to you as it is to anybody.

Likely you will have to lament, too, with the usually looking Atlanta motorist, a beautiful fact that, after having arrived since her childhood for the great easy carriage which she had always been taught was an essential womanly grace, now when she feels on the verge of acquiring it, the carriage is a slouch.

The weight of this tragedy is almost forgotten when you come around the corner upon a little harmless summer love making and evening speedily you join a group of people who are drawing out the story from a pretty young matron from St. Louis of the tuberculous hospital organized last fall and completed the past spring in St. Louis by a small group of young society women, the hospital a perfect specimen of its kind, which is taking care of fifty young women from St. Louis' department stores.

A Spanish grammar under a recent novel or vice versa. It depends upon yourself which one she lets you discover. But you won't find her often because there are so many people looking for her.

Miss Viola Johnston is a Macon belle arriving last week with her grandmother, Mrs. Reese, and Miss Pujand a beautiful Louisiana girl, came with her mother from Washington, where her father's commissioning, occurred at their residence. Miss Montine McCullough, of Owensboro, Ky., who is delightfully remembered in Atlanta since her visit last fall with Miss Helen Dargan, and Miss Briscoe, of Knoxville, arrives this week to be under the chaperonage of Mr. and Mrs. Dargan, and Mrs. Robert Alston is a recent charming addition to the group of Atlanta women.

Week-End Arrivals From Atlanta.

Week-end arrivals from Atlanta are Mrs. Richard W. Johnston and children, Mrs. W. W. Thomas, Miss Margaret Brown, Miss Adgate Ellis, Mrs. J. N. Goddard who joined his family here, Mrs. E. C. Peters, Mrs. Willis Westmoreland, Mrs. Leverette Walker, and others.

Mrs. H. P. Nelson was joined by her niece, Mrs. Hager, of St. Louis.

Mr. Bryan Grant returned home after spending a few days with his family on route from Oklahoma.

Mrs. E. W. McCarren was joined Thursday by Mrs. J. T. Carneal, of Richmond.

Mrs. Charles Seiple who is a lovely member of the Atlanta contingent, will return home this week.

Mrs. Hugh Foreman, of New York, who with Mr. Foreman, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Woods, leaves this week to visit her mother in Athens before returning to New York.

"Ashantee," the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Parker, at Clayton, where Mrs. Parker and Miss Louise Parker are entertaining a series of delightful house parties.

Mr. and Mrs. George Griffin and daughter Helen have returned from Eatonton.

Mrs. J. J. Pratt and Mrs. Richard Pratt spent Tuesday in Atlanta.

CHIPLEY, GA.

Miss Beale Miller gave a delightful bowling party on Monday evening, chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Williams in honor of her guest, Miss Louise Culhoun of Columbus, and Miss Benson's guests, Misses Pike, of LaGrange and Duke of Buena Vista, and Miss O'Neal's guests, Misses Houston, of Macon. About fifty of the younger set enjoyed Miss Miller's hospitality. They bowled until 11 o'clock, after which a delightful ice cream was served. Miss Irene Houston made top score and was presented a lovely picture, painted by the hostess, and Mr. George Wisdom was presented a tie clasp.

A large number of young people went over to the picnic given at White Sulphur Springs on Tuesday evening chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Wisdom and Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Williams.

Fairy Scene at the Battlement of Cox College

An al fresco party at the historic battlement of Cox College, whose stern walls feature the Virginia creeper, Boston ivy and the beautiful begonia vine have been transformed into a veritable bower of beauty and recreation. The campus of Cox College is well known for its interesting historical features, and the groups of happy girls at their play offer a striking contrast to the stern realities of the war of '65 when signals were flashed from the same tall oaks on the campus where now the girlish games and laughter reign supreme.

ASKS LEGISLATURE TO END SURFACE CLOSETS

R. J. Jordan, Real Estate Man, Describes Conditions That Impair Health.

R. J. Jordan, a well-known Atlanta real estate man, believes that there is one duty before the Georgia legislature of pre-eminent importance—and that is legislation against the existence of surface closets.

"There is nothing of more importance among the many questions that face the general assembly than the health of the public," says Mr. Jordan in an interview given The Constitution on this subject. "And the legislature would safeguard the public against dangerous elements if it will take action along the line of this suggestion.

"Incorporated towns and cities are clothed with authority to pass ordinances looking to the health of the citizens, and to enforce the same, and yet just outside the town and city limits, live swarms of white people who care nothing for themselves nor for anyone else, and their surface closets are a menace to the public health, with no way to reach them.

"I have made a casual investigation of many surface closets in the country, and found at least 75 per cent in a most terrible condition. In many instances, from all appearances, the excretions had been allowed to remain for weeks, exposed to flies, chickens and dogs, with solid paper scattered all about. This condition can be found to exist within less than half a mile of the city limits of Atlanta. Ought people who are careful of the health of their families and neighbors' families to be subjected to the mercy of careless and indifferent people? Such people, in many instances, know nothing about proper sanitary conditions, and if they did, would not observe the same till compulsion plays its part.

"I have a law and do it quickly, requiring heads of families living outside of incorporated towns and cities to provide a regulation metal can (I say metal for the reason that it is more easily kept clean than wood) that will hold eight gallons, to be attached to the surface closets in a way that will make them flyproof, the same to be emptied as often as may be necessary, a certain distance off, and the excretions buried and the can rinsed out and replaced, and provide a rigid inspection by officers for that purpose, with authority to arrest for a violation of same and fixing a proper penalty.

"It is a crying shame that such important legislation should have been so long overlooked and treated as a matter of little or no importance.

"Experts for years have been writing articles on the fly, and surface sickness and death as a result of such negligence are rampant, with the power invested in the legislature to not only check the speed, but to practically stop it as a result of the surface closets."

MANY ATLANTANS WILL TRAVEL TO MOUNTAINS

"There is going to be a great exodus from Atlanta and surrounding territory to the mountain resorts of western North Carolina on Saturday, August 16, the date of the Southern railway's annual mountain excursion," declares R. L. Baylor, division passenger agent, who is now completing arrangements for the excursion.

"Patrons of the Southern railway have learned to look forward to the annual mountain excursion with increasing favor, and this year we expect the crowd to be bigger than ever. We have arranged for three special trains, and, in addition, will have extra equipment on our regular trains.

The resorts in the "Land of the Sky" and "Sapphire Country" are more attractive this season than ever before, and are receiving even a larger patronage than in the past. This wonderful land is now recognized as one of the most popular playgrounds of the nation, and its accessibility from Atlanta, which is the splendid through service maintained by the Southern railway, places it in a position entirely its own for seekers for health and pleasure from this section.

Dynamite Used on Church.

Clifton, Ariz., August 2.—The Catholic church at Morenci was wrecked today by dynamite. Father Call, who was asleep near the altar, was thrown from his bed, but escaped injury. Officers are proceeding on the theory that the work was that of a gang Mexican who recently had sworn to destroy all institutions maintained by contributions from the working class. It was the second attempt to destroy the church.

$8,418.20 THE COST OF COMFORT STATION

Plans Submitted by Chief Clayton Provide for Conveniences of Every Kind.

Atlanta's public comfort station will cost approximately $8,418.20. After making a careful study of structures erected in other cities, the department of the construction has submitted plans which embrace conveniences installed in the most recently erected buildings.

According to Park Commissioner L. C. Green, who is heading the movement before the park board, the station will be erected on the Whitehall viaduct next the Wall street staircase. The building will be of rock and concrete and will be finished with terrazzo floors, enamel white brick wainscoting and tile floors.

The building will front 26 feet on Whitehall viaduct and will be 40 feet in length. There will be two separate entrances one for men and one for women. The building will be separated, the women's department being absolutely isolated. Commissioner Green says that just as soon as the building is completed he will place in charge of the women's department and will urge the police department to station an officer in uniform to look after the men's department.

Commissioner Green is actively engaged in enlisting the services of Atlanta's women in the project. He has the assurance of Mrs. C. J. Hayden, Mrs. V. H. Kriegshaber and Mrs. T. B. Fowler and many other ladies that they will aid in the movement.

To contain every convenience, Atlanta's comfort station will compare, when completed, with any building of its kind in the country. True, it will be small, but it will contain every convenience. In addition to the matron in charge at all hours of the day and night, there will be comfortable chairs, lounges for children, telephones, writing paper, pencils, ink and other necessities. There will also be plenty of ice water in summer and electric fans and oxygenators will keep the building pure and sweet at all times. The station will be equipped with signals connecting with the city physician's office in the city hall so that medical aid can be brought instantly to the side of a man, woman or child.

The men and women who are behind the movement for a station declare that the project is not a dream and they confidently expect the finance committee to set aside the money for the purpose in January.

Hedges From Councilmen. Councilman Sam Shepard, who is deeply interested in the movement, has pledged of support from a majority of the members of council. He is certain the project will be favorably passed upon by the finance committee.

The committee appointed by council, L. C. Green, J. K. Orr, Lee Barnes, P. C. McDuffie and Joe Y. McCord, are ready to work on the project. Mayor Woodward is considering the names of a number of citizens he contemplates naming on the committee.

The chamber of commerce is solid behind the project, and every woman's club in the city has promised to do something to hasten the much needed improvement.

Council members favoring the erection of the station believe that money will be passed up and actual work started in February.

SHELDON WILL CONDUCT ORGAN RECITAL TODAY

As an earnest that the Atlanta Music Festival association will not allow the Sunday fall organ recitals at the Auditorium to be discontinued with the loss of Dr. J. Percy Starnes, who gave his farewell concert last Sunday, the association has secured the services of Charles A. Sheldon, Jr., who will conduct an organ concert in the Auditorium this afternoon.

The work of Mr. Sheldon is already well known in Atlanta through his performance at the concerts of the Atlanta Auditorium choruses when Dr. Starnes directed the chorus. Besides one of Mr. Sheldon's own compositions, the concert will include selections from the works of Fryderyk, Ambrose, Thomas, Dvorak and others. It will conclude with the "War March of the Priests," from the opera "Athalie."

MECHANICS OVERCOME ON NEW SUBMARINE

Falmouth, Mass., August 2.—Five mechanics employed on the new submarine "G-6," which is awaiting government acceptance trials, were overcome by gasoline fumes today. Before doctors reached, the submarine from shore the men had been revived.

The mechanics were recharging the batteries with the aid of a dynamo operated by a gasoline engine. Gas fumes which should have escaped through the hatchway were held down by the sultry air and the men were gradually affected. One of them suddenly realized their danger and shouted for help. When the men were hauled to the deck all were unconscious.

DEATH FROM CLOUDS FOR MANY PERSONS

Little Rock, Ark., August 2.—Reports received today from Prairie county state that O. P. Davis and his son-in-law were killed outright and a daughter of Davis severely injured at Desha when they were struck by lightning. Considerable damage to crops is reported.

Lexington, Tenn., August 2.—During the prevalence of electric storm that visited this section late yesterday three negroes were killed, three others injured, several residences set on fire by lightning and burned and crops considerably damaged. Lightning which struck the house of Abe Townsend, negro, killed his wife and two children.

GREETINGS BY WILSON TO EUROPEAN RULERS

Washington, August 2.—President Wilson today sent birthday greetings to the European monarchs. To the king of Norway Mr. Wilson said: "I beg your majesty's acceptance of my sincerest congratulations on this anniversary of your birth."

REFORM OF CURRENCY TO AID RURAL BANKS

Washington, August 2.—In a circular letter to country bankers issued today, Chairman Owen, of the senate banking committee, enumerated what he considered to be the advantages to them of the Glass-Owen currency bill and stated that it would relieve the banking business from the control of a half dozen "very ambitious gentlemen who could today shake this country to its foundation by panics whenever they pleased."

"If an exhaustive investigation were made of the panic of 1907 to ascertain who were the beneficiaries of that panic, this country would learn a much needed lesson in finance," said he. After an array of figures, Senator Owen reached the conclusion in his letter that the net result to the average $100,000 bank would be a substantial gain over the present system of approximately $3,000 a year, or three per cent on its capital. He declared another advantage of the bill would be to permit country banks to lend half their time deposits, or a fourth of their capital and surplus on farm loans.

"I should be in favor also," said he, "of giving them other advantages which we can do more intelligently when we codify the national bank act next winter."

COMPASSION MOVES WILSON TO CLEMENCY

Washington, August 2.—Compassion for a feeble and desperately ill prisoner 70 years old, today caused President Wilson to commute to expire at once the four months' sentence of Ynocente Rosas, convicted at Tucson, Ariz., of smuggling three and one-half quarts of "mescal" from Mexico.

PART OF $50,000,000 FOR BANKS OF ATLANTA

Government Money for Moving Crops to Be Distributed by City Banks.

Washington, August 2.—The $50,000,000 deposit of government funds about to be made will be placed in banks of the large cities in the agricultural regions of the south and west upon the condition and expectation, said treasury officials today, that these banks will distribute the money to the country banks at reasonable rates of interest.

While the treasury department will not attempt to fix the rate of interest, because it has no such power, it will insist upon equitable treatment so that the money will be available for the marketing and movement of crops at reasonable rates. New Orleans and Atlanta will be among those to receive a substantial share of the $50,000,000 for distribution in the south. Large deposits will be made in Chicago and St. Louis.

Assistant Secretary Williams said it was necessary for the government to place the money in the large channels because it would be impracticable to pass upon the quality of commercial paper as security if the deposits were scattered indiscriminately among a great number of country banks. "The treasury department," said Mr. Williams, "has been showered with telegrams from banks and bankers through the west and south expressing the strongest possible commendation of the secretary's announcement."

ONE CENT POSTAGE ADVOCATED BY BRYAN

Washington, August 2.—One-cent postage rather than reduced parcel post rates was advocated by Senator Bryan today in the senate in defense of his opposition to Postmaster General Burleson's orders reducing parcel post rates in the first and second zones on August 15.

The senator asserted that the demand for 1-cent rate on letters was refused by congress because of the monetary loss on second-class mail matter. He declared that the parcel post rates proposed by Mr. Burleson were as low, except for the first pound, as the second-class mail rates.

DR. OGDEN IN PULPIT AFTER TRIP TO TENN.

Having just returned from a trip to Monticello, Tenn., where he addressed the Monticello chautauqua last Sunday, Dr. Dunbar Ogden will occupy his pulpit today at the Central Presbyterian church. In the morning he will speak on the subject, "A Sheep, a Coin, a Boy," and in the evening on "The Great Supper."

DANGER IN EATING MEAT

Statistics Show That People Who Eat Meat Are Susceptible to Typhoid Fever

The death rate of Typhoid has been 10 per cent for many years. Even if the patient recovers, there is danger. Weakened constitution, languidness, loss of energy, and other after effects. In a majority of cases typhoid fever is directly traceable to an inactive liver which has left masses of meat particles undigested in the alimentary canal. This mass putrefies and sends out death dealing poisons, to result in typhoid fever. JACOBS' LIVER SALT is the greatest est known liver stimulant. Its action is gentle, yet effective. It draws water to the alimentary tract, flushes stomach and bowels, washes away the undigested meat particles and removes the danger of fermentation. The blood is purified through the renewed activity of the liver. JACOBS' LIVER SALT does not cause nausea and vomiting; no dangerous after-effects as with calomel. Don't take an inferior substitute; many imitate the name but cannot produce the same natural, flushing action of the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. At all drugists, 35c. If your druggist cannot supply you upon receipt of price, full size jar mailed postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta. —(Adv.)

Some Persons "Flinch" When Truth Hunts Them. "If any man is able to convince me and show me that I do not think or act right, I will gladly change for it."

Some shrink and try to close their eyes and ears to the haunting fact that the little 2 1/2 grains of Caffeine in every average cup of coffee is the demon which relentlessly pursues and starts various ailments...

The effect of repeated doses of coffee, on those who are susceptible to caffeine poisoning, is so complex that it is difficult to foretell where its hurt will be most serious, in Heart, Head, Eyes, Nerves or where.

The stroke of trouble will come somewhere if the daily doses are persisted in. Of course if anyone prefers to treat his body in that way it is useless to suggest relief.

Let him "follow the trail" until badly wounded. Some go so far they can't get back to health. Others quit the foolish, losing game before fixed chronic disease sets in.

There is a mighty army of sensible ones however who have bravely tested the truth with their own bodies to see whether or not it was the truth that coffee caused their ailments. It's an easy test. Quit coffee absolutely for 10 days.

It's the most exquisite pleasure in the world to be perfectly well with all the delicate and beautifully adjusted machinery of the body working in harmony not interfered with by drugs, one of the most insidious and deceptive of which is caffeine in coffee.

This is Truth. Meet it bravely with head up and a hearty handclasp. Truth thus made welcome will prove your best friend.

These are facts without regard to our own opinion, or to whether or not you use Postum. However, it is well to consider that famous food drink, because it supplies a hot beverage of the deep seal-brown color of coffee, which turns to the rich golden-brown when cream is added.

It has a snappy flavor much like the old-time real Java, but there is no "sting" in it, no caffeine or other drug of any sort. It is skillfully manufactured of wheat and a trace of New Orleans molasses. It comes in two forms. One called Regular Postum, must be boiled full 15 minutes.

U. S. PROTECTORATE BARRED NICARAGUA

Opposition of Senate Will Result in the Withdrawal of Bryan's Treaty

Washington August 3.—The protectorate for Nicaragua embraced in a treaty suggested by Secretary Bryan, probably will be abandoned because of adverse action by the senate foreign relations committee. Chairman Bacon was today instructed to ask Secretary Bryan to transmit a new Nicaraguan treaty limited strictly to the proposed $2,000,000 purchase of canal route and naval base concessions.

The fight against the proposal became so pronounced in the committee today that it was decided it would be impracticable to attempt a settlement of the policy at the present time. It was decided to ask Secretary Bryan to withdraw the protectorate features and limit the Nicaraguan treaty to those it originally embraced.

To Cut Out Protectorate

Intimations had been received by democrats in the committee that the president and Secretary Bryan would be willing to lay the protectorate policy aside temporarily and it is expected that the completed draft of the treaty will be ready with a few days without the provisions giving the United States control over Nicaragua's future.

Chairman Bacon was instructed to ask Secretary Bryan to submit a treaty limited to the following provisions:

The grant of Nicaragua to the United States of a perpetual and exclusive right to build a canal across Nicaragua.

A ninety-nine year lease on a naval base site on Fonseca Bay and a nine-nine year lease on the Corn Islands in the Caribbean sea.

The payment by the United States to Nicaragua of $2,000,000 in return for these concessions.

These terms are identical with the treaty as originally proposed by Secretary Bryan before he decided to add the amendment by which an American protectorate would have been established.

No Final Decision

The senate committee did not definitely settle the question of future protectorates in Central America however it is understood that the administration is willing to withdraw the suggestion for the present in order to secure an early ratification of the Nicaraguan company.

Strong opposition was led in the committee today by Senators Borah, Clarke of Arkansas, Williams and others who were opposed to any action by the United States toward the exercise of so great an authority in the Central American countries.

Other senators of the committee defended the policy with equal vigor. A vote was proposed to settle the question but some of the senate committee refused to register a final decision at the present time and the proposal for a vote was withdrawn.

Opponents of the proposed protectorate had made it clear that it would be impossible to secure ratification of the Nicaraguan treaty in the present congress if the so-called Platt amendment were included in it. This sentiment was understood to have induced Secretary Bryan to consent to its withdrawal.

1,200 FEET UNDER GROUND LIGHTNING KILLS MAN

Pottsville Pa. August 3.—Lightning struck at the bottom of a 1,200 foot shaft at the Blackwood colliery operated by the Lehigh Valley company near here last night and killed a workman. Another worker was seriously injured.

TWO COMRADES KILLED; 500 MEN GO ON STRIKE

Superior Wis August 3.—Enraged over the accident Thursday evening when two of their fellows lost their lives and several others were injured, 500 men employed on the Ashwaubenton dock at West Superior, who have gone on a strike since the accident refused to resume work until conditions which they claim caused the accident are removed.

During yesterday eleven trains of ore reached the dock and many more will arrive today and it is but a question of time when the mines will have to be shut down for want of cars. Seven ore boats are tied to the dock and anchored waiting to be filled. Men more are due to arrive within the next 48 hours.

The strikers yesterday were granted a short hearing by J. C. Morrell, dock superintendent. Resolutions passed at a mass meeting of the men were read to Mr. Morrell who is reported to have said that he will do nothing for the strikers. Steps will be taken to organize the strikers into a union.

PRIZES ARE AWARDED WOODMEN OF WORLD

SHOT WOMAN 3 TIMES AND KILLED HIMSELF

Abraham Fink Enraged Because Young Woman Spurned His Attentions

New York August 2.—A well dressed middle aged man and a handsome young woman quarreled today on Fifth avenue until the man suddenly drew a revolver and shot the woman three times and then blew out his brains. The man died instantly and there is little hope that the woman can survive. He had $1,000 in United States currency and a large quantity of Canadian money in his pocket.

Letters found in the dead man's pocket led to the belief that he was Abraham Fink of 86 North Division street, Buffalo. The letters were signed by Violet Rogers of 12 Vine street, Buffalo. They were mailed from a hotel in Atlantic City and were signed "Your darling Violet and your dearest Al."

Witnesses of the shooting say that the woman was reading a letter aloud apparently to the great annoyance of the man. She repeatedly commanded him to discontinue the reading and he drew his revolver and fired. The shooting took place near the corner of Fifth avenue and Thirtieth street in the center of the business district.

At the hospital the woman recovered sufficiently enough to give a short description of herself. She said that it was Rebecca Silverman, 71 years old, who told her that she was the woman who had been shot. She said that she was a widow of 48 years old who traveled as a Jewry salesman. She stated that she was in Atlantic City for a few weeks ago when she was shot. She said that she was in Atlantic City at the time of the shooting and she had left her home in Buffalo and come to Atlantic City and then returned to her family there. She said that she had refused to return to Buffalo with him when he drew his revolver and shot her. She said that she had been in Atlantic City for a few weeks ago when she was shot. She said that she was in Atlantic City at the time of the shooting and she had left her home in Buffalo and come to Atlantic City and then returned to her family there.

McNAIR'S THROAT CUT IN QUARREL OVER GIRLS

United States Deputy Marshal Objected to Jacksons Talking to His Companions

Pensacola Fla., August 2.—United States Deputy Marshal Quill McNair had his throat cut at the picnic near here and Sam and Rufus P. Jackson brothers of Flomaton Ala. are in jail charged with the crime.

According to witnesses McNair and two girls Mattie O'Brien and Freda Hill were seated chatting, when the Jacksons came along. One of the girls spoke to the boys whom they had never seen. It is said and they joined the party which appears to have angered McNair.

A quarrel ensued and McNair is reported to have drawn his gun and shot twice at the Jacksons. During the fight that followed McNair's throat was cut from ear to ear and he was otherwise cut and stabbed. Bond has been refused the brothers.

NEGROES TO HAVE TREAT IN THE "BIG CITY FOUR"

Atlanta's colored population or that part of it which loves music and that part of it an exceedingly large one has a rare treat in store for it this week according to Edward Buckner, 317 owner and advance agent for the 'Big City Four'.

The Big City Four are supposed to be the best negro quartet in existence and the way in which their advance man puts it and every colored man and woman ought to hear them sometime during the week at the Majestic on Auburn avenue.

Among his race Buckner is regarded as an authority on theatrical and musical matters as he managed Black Path on her appearance here and he also managed the Smart Set negro company that made a big hit.

Effective Home Remedy For Lung Trouble

It is a serious matter when the lungs are affected. A trip away or to a sanatorium is not only expensive but it involves separation from home and friends. Some are benefited but few can safely return. Beckman's Alternative is effective for home treatment. For example:

231 Atlantic Ave. Haddonfield, N. J. Gentileman told me I was suffering a very severe cold which set up a my lung. At last I began to raise sputum and my physician told me I must go to California immediately. At this time I was advised to take Beckman's Alternative. I stayed at home and commenced taking it the last week in October. I began to improve and the first week in January 1908 I resumed my regular occupation having gained 25 pounds fully recovered to health. It is now seven years since my recovery has been effected and I cannot praise Beckman's Alternative too highly. I have recommended it with excellent results.

Blue ribbed crepe was selected for the second frock. The skirt is scalloped down the front and buttoned with white satin buttons and long satin bound buttonholes. The ribbon girdle is frilled above and below, and ties in the front. The revers and vest are of white satin, the latter being scalloped and trimmed with blue crystal buttons.

The third model has the blouse and double tunic of yellowish crepe de Chine, closely plaited, while the underskirt of white crepe de Chine is gathered at the waist, giving a comfortable fulness. The deep collar and the cuffs are of fine batiste, hemstitched and edged with Cluny lace. The black satin sash ties in a broad bow with two long ends, weighted with tassels.

The dainty little frock of palest pink batiste has a sash of deeper rose silk as its only trimming.

L OUISE who had never owned a black satin frock was determined to take a colorless demit to let her that she made an ancient black satin gown of mine into a perfectly plain round skirt weighed to fall in at the ankles and into the skirt and gathered at the waist. As the waist of the old gown was a little less she made a white linen bias skirt in one piece with a small opening to open to the waist. I cut it with a lining waist in the center and she tucked over it a white skirt in pattern—an affair that I think she called with a little of the old-fashioned ribbon skirt. It was a white skirt with a material that I think she called the flat-topped collar. When I was in the store and when I was in the store I had a white skirt with a material that I think she called the flat-topped collar. Y OULF all need wraps in addition to your last out-annoiced bundle of the sewing room table. Will he was at an hour's notice just as he put on a hat in the winter. I am to take a long, long trip and that part of the journey will be made in the open air and it is a good idea to have a wrap that will be wide and dark in color.

These frocks are wide, simple and round fastened with some silver clips that have been in the use for ages and are the most comfortable in its wear ever had. Ruth looked at me and said, "I think I'll have one like this." I told her that I had made one for her and she was very pleased. I told her that I had made one for her and she was very pleased.

When I thought that we were fully equipped with driving gear. Mildred said, "Some of the pieces you have are so smart that I wish I could have one of them." We really could have wanted to match our little frocks. Let's make them out of the jackets belonging to these old frocks.

Then we'll slash off the portion covering the hips raise it and shape it to form a sort of corset effect above the waist and a slight cut away below it at the front and the sides. The skirt is cut back and only be filled in under a belt yoke all the way round. Next we'll finish the neck with a lace Medical collar running into little flat falling over themselves with air and soften the fronts and well fill in an open space between them with a round necked yoke in shirred and filled white material unless the front one over without blouses in the living room.

To have asked to put more than one small trunk on the roof of our host's coach would have been a proposition and in addition to father's evening suit and undershirt and two white frocks for Ruth to wear with the horses were given an entire day's rest besides our necessary luggage we took only one demit toilette appeared in a dark fowlard whose V-necked collar was treeshened with a wide white strip through a small gold line and the bust line and then looped under a light pink corsage rose.

PICTURESQUE FROCKS FOR THE LATE SUMMER

Cool gray ponce is the material which forms the first of this quartet of good looking late Summer frocks. Buttons and lace are used as decorations. The second gown is of white ratine simple but smartly made and trimmed with coral buttons and worn with a sash of white muslin. A more elaborate gown is pictured in the third illustration. It is of pale blue eponge with deep collar of Irish lace and worn with a sash of heavy black silk the ends fringed and knotted. The last illustration displays a frock of fowlard. This chic little affair is trimmed with bands of heavy lace and is worn over a gumpie of tuckered net and lace. A wide girdle completes the costume.

Blah! now you are probably horror-stricken at the thought of women wearing trousers. I am sure that trousers are not to be worn with petticoats. The separate houses are of tulle or shadow lace with a white lining or undergarment of tulle, trimmed with bands and bows of white tulle. These frocks are perfectly proper when worn with coats for they were the clever invention of the Parisians who never to move the jackets of their tailor suits. But unfortunately American women have misinterpreted the purpose of these blouses.

A DIFFICULT PROBLEM

BY EDNA LIGAN

The world is just as full of poor relations now as it was in the days of Charles Lamb. Very few of us play the role ourselves, but like the insects described in the familiar old rhyme which have still smaller ones to bite them, none of us are so poor but that we have still poorer relations clustering all around us.

These facts are so well known and the term is so common both in literature and in life that one is always surprised to hear well-to-do people commiserate upon the number and variety of their own special poor relations as though they were peculiar to themselves. Poor relations do not always make themselves known to their kin of the same circumstances, but they pop up surely and inevitably in the path of those in the family connection who have prospered. These latter may not have prospered very greatly but even a slight degree brings out the poor relation often it may be parenthetically remarked the choicest fruit in mind and disposition of the family tree. But in a street of hark streets shabby clothes and perturbed need even such choice fruit does not greatly shine.

These reflections were evoked by the chance remark of one of the best of us.

We were planning to go to Europe the whole tour of us she confided to my intimate friend, when suddenly I was found that my Cousin Tom's family were in great distress. Two of the children were sick—they had to buy tin snips and doctors—and Tom was out of business—one of the dearest but luckiest fellows that ever lived—and he came around near by crazy—and what could we do but lend him a thousand dollars—goodness only knows when we shall ever get it back again—and we are going out to the farm as usual. The children are behaving well for we explained it but it is quite a disappointment. Another year we may be able to save as much again. But one never knows when a poor relation may happen along.

It occurred to Cousin Tom and his family that their prosperous cousins had to deny themselves any luxury in order to tide their poor relations over their hard time, but it is to the credit of our human nature that incidents like this are not uncommon.

It is disputed nowadays," said a thoughtful mother, "that blood is thicker than water. It does seem to me that we should feel much more sympathy with our cousins, even to the second and third degree, than with outsiders. I have brought up my children to feel, she continued, "that they should do all in their power to prevent the wide social gaps which often separate members of the same famly Even Lamb's whimsical essay is more sad than glad. There really isn't much fun either in being or in having the poor relation. From whichever end the condition is contemplated it must be considered chiefly as a means of discipline. But do not imagine that you are singular in being or in having one.

POISE

Perfected by Simple Exercises.

BY LUCILLE DAUDET

JUST now and then we catch a glimpse among the throngs of men and women who are daily passing us of a figure so beautifully upright and graceful that we remember it long after it is moved beyond our vision.

I am not one of those who believe that a splendidly poised body should be a rare sight. It ought to be something we see always, so that we are distressed by an exception to the rule. But it is a rare sight indeed and simply because most of us fail to make the best of our bodies just as we fail to make the best of our selves by forgetting, neglecting the very things most important to our welfare. Even the children whose bodies ought to be poetry of motion youth and grace begin in their school days to grow careless to slouch their shoulders drop their heads and walk as though there was no special joy or freedom or opportunity in the exercise that we all take for granted, unless illness comes along and we are deprived of it.

For the ordinary woman to obtain a beautiful carriage is not half so bad a task as many women suppose just because so few of them possess this truly wonderful beautifier. First of all beautiful carriage depends on two things not on one—the poise of the body and the poise of the mind. The mental attitude has a great deal more to do with the bearings of the body than most of us suppose. Note how the body expresses every emotion we feel—fear, anger, happiness, etc. so it is natural that our whole attitude toward life should affect the way we carry ourselves. The first thing any woman who longs to obtain a graceful carriage of the body should do is to make sure that her mental outlook on life in general is a hopeful one that she believes in herself and that opportunity to prove the reasonableness of this belief comes at some time or in some fashion to every one of us herself included.

So I would say as the first rule to observe in your attempt to obtain beautiful poise hold up your head lift the chin a little so that your friends can say to you, "You are looking up."

It is probably true as charged, that many a woman does not really know what beautiful carriage is. But she that has eyes to see need not long remain in ignorance on this point. If she lives in a city that boasts of an art museum, let her study therein the originals or the replicas, of the old Greek statues, whose subjects are standing and leaning, walking and running, always with perfect grace and freedom. The Greeks of old not only understood what beautiful carriage is they also had joy in their bodies—healthy, natural joy—and they gave their bodies the practice in physical exercises that was required to keep them in supple and responsive condition.

Here are some simple bodily exercises that will aid any woman to secure a proper balance and control of her body.

Stand firmly on both legs. Change weight, making right leg the strong one. Turn head to right, body to left. You are now in harmonic balance. By inclining the body to the right you become awkward and if this is continued in you will probably fall; so you may learn by this simple exercise the value of balance and so begin to learn to stand correctly. When the weight does not rest alike on the two feet you must always bear in mind the fact that the head sympathizes with the strong leg and that it should lean ever so slightly to the side of the leg that bears the weight and so show nature's line of beauty.

Another exercise which will help you to be graceful is equally simple. Put the body's weight on both feet, heels together, toes apart. At the waist line rotate the body to the right as you simultaneously turn the head to the left. Be sure that this rotation is made by the waist and not by the thighs. Now turn about, rotating the body to the left and the head to the right. Practice until you secure real flexibility at the waist line and you will find that you have secured the most important aid to grace which so largely depends on control of the muscles at the waist.

Then when you have learned to stand well and to have real use of your body learn to walk all over again—learn walking as an art. Do not walk as the most of us do, with our legs stuck stiffly out, the body dragging and the arms swinging with no life or ease.

There are almost as many ways to carry the body as there are people in this world and yet there are only a few simple rules for the perfect walk. The line of the body is of great importance, so also is the proper hip movement. There is no better practice to observe in securing the perfect walk than the often recommended one. Place a book or bundle on your head and see if you can walk with it poised there. Then draw a line along the floor and see how straight your average walk is. Each step should be a foot apart measured by your own foot and in making these practice steps lift the thigh forward, letting lower leg and foot hang loosely. The unbending at the knee plants the foot immediately as weight bears on it. The body and head should sway in sympathy with every motion of the legs.

If the water in vases holding cut flowers is replenished each day and the stems of the flowers washed off they will last a long time. A pinch of salt or powdered charcoal added to the water helps to keep the contents fresh and sweet.

For the Bathing Maid

SATIN is the material above all others for the really smart bathing suit this season. Mohair is still used by the woman who prefers service to the height of fashion, and a few tulle suits are seen, but this latter fabric is not as popular for the purpose as it once was, as it has been found to split easily after it has been one or twice immersed in salt water.

By long odds the most popular color for the bathing suit is black, as it combines so effectively with the bright silks and satins that are now used for trimmings. Some maidens are still partial to blue in various shades, so suits of this color are also seen, as well as freak costumes of white satin, bright red and Nell rose.

Nearly all the suits are cut in the one-piece Russian blouse style, with separate bloomers or tights. This blouse comes just to the knees and is fastened loosely with a belt or sash. A very pretty suit is of black satin, fastening invisibly at the side of the front. It has a Balkan sash of gay striped silk that goes twice around the waist and knots at the left side. Another just as effective is of black satin, laced down the front with silk lacings in a vivid shade of Nell rose. It has a sash of satin of the same color. More modest, but still extremely smart is a black satin suit with a rather broad collar and garnitures of fancy black and white silk. A suit of bright blue has an odd vest effect in white satin, and another in navy has curious rounded revers and trimmings of white satin.

Bathing caps are so pretty this year that they deserve a chapter to themselves. They are mostly made of satin of gay colors, with rassettes at each ear, or in demure Dutch effect, or trimmed with gay ribbon standing off at the back like the hats, or made of combinations of plain and fancy satins.
