The Modern Slave-Nature

To-day Great Steel Slaves Do the Work That Only Yesterday Was Done by the Feeble Hands of Man.

Until our day all the work of the world has been done painfully by men, miserable slaves attached to the soil...

Where a hundred men, getting in each other's way, bending their backs and wearing themselves out, would have worked throughout an entire day with picks and shovels...

That is the great accomplishment and glory of this age. Man uses nature's forces and conquers nature.

Civilization must progress in the years ahead of us with a rapidly inconceivable speed.

While men were physical slaves real thought was impossible, except to the rare man.

Athens was the intellectual center of the world twenty-five centuries ago, because Athenians employed slaves in great numbers.

But he did not dream that men one day would use the giant slave of steel and steam.

This century and centuries to follow will surpass the Athenians in intelligence and in the possession of slaves.

Our slaves will be of metal, without nerves. The power of the lightning, of steam, of the tides and of the great sun itself will be the power of these slaves of civilization.

Slave women spun and wove slowly the clothing of the Athenians and the Romans.

Our clothing is made by slave fingers of steel. Great machines, gigantic looms, turn out in a day enough to clothe every citizen of Athens.

The slaves carried their masters in palanquins in Roman days. Steam and the lightning are the slaves that carry us to-day.

Huge fair-skinned captives from Gaul and Germany did the digging twenty centuries ago.

Go to the great steel mill at Gary, in Indiana, and there you see in wonderful perfection man's use of Nature as his slave.

The great spools bring the ore down the lakes. No man's hand has touched it. Jaws of steel have torn it from the ore bed and dropped it into the ships.

At Gary other steel jaws lift it and carry it to the furnaces. It is melted and great machines pour it out. It is divided into huge ingots, and these, white hot, are carried to the first part of the rolling mill.

The ingot is squeezed by one machine, made longer and narrower, squeezed again and made still longer and narrower.

It starts on its journey along the rollers of the mill, squeezed, pressed, handled, turned over, and shaped as it travels hundreds of yards—no hand touching it.

It arrives at last, at a red-hot steel rail, the right shape, out the right length. Machinery turns it over, slides it on an incline. It has made the journey, changing from a shapeless ingot to a finished rail, handled by machinery, the machines guided and controlled by one or two mechanics sitting aloft, pressing levers or buttons. AND WATCHING.

Finished at last and almost ready, the rail slides down the incline, and for the first time a man deals with it. He is a young Scandinavian giant, six and a half feet tall, with yellow hair and a clear gray eye.

He looks along the rail he sees the defects, moves the left or the right hand, and another man controlling the straightening machine straightens the rail as ordered.

And there you have side by side ten rails perfectly straight, and more always coming down the incline to meet the glance of that gray eye.

A man sitting in his little tower touches a button, and along overhead rails there comes gliding a great electric magnet—on a giant scale—the same as the magnet with which you used to draw little tin ducks across the water.

The magnet slides along, drops down upon the ten rails that weigh thousands of pounds, the electrician presses a button, turns on the current, and man's electric slave glues the rails to the magnet. The ten are lifted at once, as easily as a child would lift a pin; they are carried by a fat car, lowered on the car, the current is turned off, releasing the rails, and the magnet travels back to get another load.

To realize what progress the human race has made, remember that the race lived for more than two thousand centuries not knowing how to use iron, and then see that giant magnet at Gary loading a car with steel rails, brought from an ore bed one thousand miles away, changed from the ore into the finished rail, AND NEVER TOUCHED BY A MAN'S HAND EXCEPT AS THE MAN WITH THE CLEAR EYE TURNED THE RAIL AND OPERATED THE MACHINE TO STRAIGHTEN IT.

There is SLAVERY, and the ideal slavery that will free the whole human race, by making Nature a power MAN'S SLAVE.

Teaching the Young Idea How to Chute

Here is a young man, capable of earning a place in the world, getting his first lesson from the spirit that is always ready to help a beginner, and who has many accomplished pupils on their way to cemeteries, penitentiaries and insane asylums.

"The Perfect Age" in a Woman's Life

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX. The simple question, "At what age does a woman reach her greatest perfection, physically and mentally?" there must be a complex answer.

She may be a Circe at fourteen, with amazing wit and charm, or she may remain an undeveloped adolescent until twenty-five.

At Her Best. There must be something more than the hope and ambition of youth to produce this expression.

There must be something more than the hope and ambition of youth to produce this expression. There must be feeling, already ripened by some of life's maturer experiences.

There must be something more than the hope and ambition of youth to produce this expression. There must be feeling, already ripened by some of life's maturer experiences.

American woman usually reaches the perfection of her physical development at about the age of twenty-eight. She is in full possession of all the charms of early teens, her bloom is unimpaired, her eye is full of lustre, her features retaining their slender roundness.

Most of these occurrences are believed to be due to the carrying up into the atmosphere, by whirling winds, of quantities of dust, the colored pollen of flowers, and even small animals, which are transported to a considerable distance, and then brought down to the ground during a rain storm.

There are retained in the air by the rapidity of their motion, and may be transported a mile or even many miles, before they descend again to the ground.

Rev. John E. White on "The Battle in the Air"

The Sudden Popping of Small Arms and the Clatter of Loud Talk in the Direction of Chief Beavers, He Says, Was Not a Premeditated Outbreak of Hostilities.

Written for The Georgian by REV. JOHN E. WHITE, Pastor Second Baptist Church.

The sudden popping of small arms and the clatter of loud talk in the direction of Chief Beavers was not a premeditated outbreak of hostilities.

An indication not in the plan of campaign, and it has created much confusion. Naturally, the desire is very great that the unfortunate attack early should return to camp, put up their guns, take up their spades and get back on the job again.

The last thing in the world our friends the enemies of the police department want at this time is an open issue and an open fight.

The Battle Picture. The real conflict in Atlanta between Law and Morals and Lawlessness and Immorality is an invisible conflict. It brings to mind a famous battle picture which represents the army of Atilia engaged with the army of the Holy Roman Empire in the fifth century.

During the day the armies have met in battle and have retreated until the night comes on. The great artist takes up the battle at that point and draws a picture of weary horses and worn-out soldiers of both armies lying asleep on the ground.

Eight months ago, when the day of sharp battle was brought to quiet, and night and silence settled down on the Tenthredin, the situation seemed an array of invisible influences grappling in the dark.

In the streets, in the saloons, in the room rooms and in private of evil held their councils of war and set in motion all the available energies at their command to reclaim their lost stronghold.

It will be so to-morrow when this recent open collision has disappeared from the news columns and the general public appears to the public as a retreat from an uncomfortable and an unfortunate situation.

Strange Things From the Sky

By GARRETT P. SERVIS. A CORRESPONDENT writes that after a heavy storm recently he saw the pavements of a town sprinkled with many small earthworms, apparently lifeless, and looking as if they had been dropped, and, since it was seemingly impossible that they could have crawled there in such numbers, he wishes to know if science can throw any light on their probable origin.

The phenomenon to which he calls attention has long been known, in various forms, and has sometimes been the cause of panic fears among ignorant or superstitious people. The so-called "Mood-rains" belong to the same category.

Most of these occurrences are believed to be due to the carrying up into the atmosphere, by whirling winds, of quantities of dust, the colored pollen of flowers, and even small animals, which are transported to a considerable distance, and then brought down to the ground during a rain storm.

creed plotting will still maintain its invisible head and front.

What is this struggle in Atlanta about? What is the issue and the interest, principle and desire behind Chief Beavers and the Chief Department, and what behind his enemies?

The question is not difficult. On one side is the law of the State, which the police have executed and are executing. On the other side is a mixed line-up, but unavowedly identified with the idea that the law should not be executed and that officers of the law should accommodate their conscience to favor its violation.

with them in other cities and throughout the world, and who know that the judgment of intelligence has reached a verdict in favor of the policy of absolute suppression and of honest, uncompromising execution of the law.

On one side the conscience of nation, the ideas of humanity, and the founding principles of churches, schools and homes, which the binding of the hands in hostility to degrading vice, and which as institutions can not justify their existence, except in war against them.

On the other hand, the loose conscience of Ireland, the lowered ideals of society, and the foundation principles of the underworld, the brothel and the saloon, which as institutions can have no existence except as they organize to maintain the vice which prey upon humanity.

On Whose Side. By no means all who are opposed to Chief Beavers would count themselves inside an immoral category.

There are some people, however, who stand on the side lines watching the conflict, with unfriendly eyes for his execution of the laws. But it ought to be very clearly indicated that the interests of the State and the people are not in any way divided.

NEGRO CONLEY REVEALS MORE NEW EVIDENCE IN PHAGAN DEATH MYSTERY

Spends Hours With Dorsey Studying Huge Diagram of Scene of Slaying. Important Developments Looked For--Nothing Startling Made Public.

For hours Saturday James Conley, negro sweeper, whose sensational confession accuses Superintendent Leo M. Frank of the murder of Mary Phagan, explained in detail to Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey the dread mysteries of the National Penitentiary on April 26, explaining many things that had not been clear to the officials, but sticking tenaciously to the story he told the city detectives.

Conley was taken to the Solicitor's office at that official's request and put through a severe cross-examination. With an elaborate diagram, drawn for the Solicitor by Bert Green, a Georgian staff artist, to guide him, the negro traced the various scenes in the factory after the slaying of the girl.

He told just where he first claims to have found her and how he and the superintendent he accuses attempted to dispose of the body. The drama he enacted in the factory Friday for the detective he re-enacted for the Solicitor in the little room at the court house with the artist's chart on the slabs and his finger as the tracer of tragedy.

Dorsey Well Satisfied. The Solicitor was well satisfied with the results obtained in the secret conference behind closed doors and certain points that had been made to him before was made clear.

At Conley's own request, through William Smith, his counsel, the negro was later transferred to the police station. The negro had been so besieged by questioners at the jail that he asked to be put within the shelter of police headquarters, where he had been closely guarded and where none but policemen had been allowed to interrogate him.

Conley Is Ready to Pay Penalty as Accomplice. "Yes, sir, I guess maybe it's all over with me. I suppose they're going to hang me or send me to the penitentiary for life, but I don't care about that. When the sheriff puts the rope around my neck, I mean to go to my sleep. I tried to hide that dead girl's body and I ought to be punished, but before God I didn't kill her." "Jim Conley, negro sweeper, whose confession that he helped Leo M. Frank dispose of the body of Mary Phagan after the superintendent had killed her, created a profound sensation, centered through the bars of his cell in the Fulton tower and announced his readiness to die for his crime. He had been breathing his innocence of the actual murder.

Conley declared again that Frank wrote one note himself. He said he had written the "long talk back negro" message on "single-ruled, white paper from a label." He asserted that Conley's confession was written on "white paper, but a shade of green or gray." He said that he thought had the letter of the National Penitentiary factory on it.

Mrs. Charles Kugler Wins Vindication in Charges Against Inspector Maddox.

Pretty Mrs. Charles Kugler was a smiling and satisfied wife Saturday in her court fight which she had declared she would continue until she cleared her name and won back her husband.

Inspector Henry H. Maddox, of the city sanitary department, the tale of whose insulating remarks to Mrs. Kugler caused her husband to leave her in a rage, was fined $25.75 by Colonel Broyles and was in addition given a sound rating by the Recorder.

Husband Also Indicted. The husband also came in for a grilling through the indicted office of Detective "Bob" Waggoner, who had made to her and declared that he had made to her until she was going to quit her until she was able to clear her name.

Three in Reason Why You Should Have Suspected This Woman of an Wrongdoing. "There is no reason why you should have suspected this woman of an wrongdoing," said Recorder Broyles. "There is no reason why you should have suspected this woman of an wrongdoing."

FANS ROT AS STORM SWEEPS PARK

PONCE DELSON PARK, May 31.—A terrible wind storm, the worst that has hit Atlanta in years, forced today's game to be called in the last half of the sixth inning. The fans all rushed from the stands, fearing to be blown off their seats. One of the largest bill board signs was blown into the park.

THE GAME.

FIRST INNING. Walker was hit by a pitched ball. Warren sacrificed, Smith to Agler, and Walker went to second. Gribbons grounded to Price and was out to Agler. With three and two on Knapp, Wright struck to third, changed his mind and threw to first to late to get Weidensack. Alperman grounded to Warren and was out to Kuttina. Weidensack took second on the out. On a wild pitch Knapp struck and Weidensack took third. Bailer fouled out to Gribbons. Smith out; Warren to Kuttina.

SECOND INNING. Kuttina walked. It looked as though Wright made a poor decision on the last play. With three and two on Knapp, Wright struck to third, changed his mind and threw to first to late to get Weidensack. Alperman grounded to Warren and was out to Kuttina. Weidensack took second on the out. On a wild pitch Knapp struck and Weidensack took third. Bailer fouled out to Gribbons. Smith out; Warren to Kuttina.

THIRD INNING. Price still bowled at Wright when he tried to hit him and Gribbons walked. Blaine going over to second base and Alperman to first. Wright struck to third, changed his mind and threw to first to late to get Weidensack. Alperman grounded to Warren and was out to Kuttina. Weidensack took second on the out. On a wild pitch Knapp struck and Weidensack took third. Bailer fouled out to Gribbons. Smith out; Warren to Kuttina.

FOURTH INNING. Chappelle went to slab for Atlanta. Blaine walked. Gribbons walked. Chappelle and Donahue were forced at second to Blaine. Walker struck to first and billy took second. Warren grounded to Price. Blaine struck home on the hit. Price was caught in a charge. Bailer to Dunn to Smith to Dunn to Smith at this critical stage of the game Smith dropped the ball and billy took back to third. By this time, however, Walker was caught on a charge. Blaine struck home and Warren second on a fly. Alperman struck. Gribbons walked and Warren. Gribbons out. Blaine struck to third. Blaine struck to third. Blaine struck to third.

FIFTH INNING. Sloan struck out. Kuttina singled through Alperman, and went out trying to reach second. Dunn to Blaine. Gribbons went out. Wright went out. Chappelle tried to walk. Long and Weidensack stumped one to the other. On a wild pitch Knapp struck and Weidensack took third. Bailer fouled out to Gribbons. Smith out; Warren to Kuttina.

SIXTH INNING. Walker walked. Walker was caught on a charge. Blaine struck to Weidensack. No hits, no runs.

The Modern Slave-Nature

Today Great Steel Slaves Do the Work That Only Yesterday Was Done by the Feeble Hands of Man.

Until our day all the work of the world has been done painfully by men, miserable slaves attached to the soil, stunted by labor, bodies merely fed and worked, and then worked and fed again, and at last put away in a shallow grave dug by some other working body.

Where a hundred men, getting in each other's way, bending their backs and wearing themselves out, would have worked throughout an entire day with picks and shovels, ONE MAN now sits in a big steam shovel slave, directs the work of the monster with a slight movement of his hand, and in a minute pulls up from the earth's depth into the wagon huge rocks that men could not lift. Every minute this monster does a day's work of half a dozen men. And no one suffers, no one is tired, no one is driven—science that found men slaves of each other and afraid of nature is setting men free, free of slavery, free of superstition and terror—AND MAKING NATURE AND HER POWERS SLAVES OF MAN.

That is the great accomplishment and glory of this age. Man uses nature's forces and conquers nature. Only a short time ago nature's forces frightened man.

Civilization must progress in the years ahead of us with a rapidity inconceivable. FOR THE MINDS AND THE BODIES OF MEN ARE SET FREE TO THINK.

While men were physical slaves real thought was impossible, except to the rare man.

Athens was the intellectual center of the world twenty-five centuries ago, because Athenians employed slaves in great numbers. Every Athenian citizen learned to think because he had leisure. The citizens thought and developed a national intellect that no nation of our day pretends to equal. The greatest Greek thinker, Aristotle, said that civilization and progress could not exist without slavery—and he was right.

But he did not dream that men one day would use the giant slave of steel and steam.

This century and centuries to follow will surpass the Athenians in intelligence and in the possession of slaves.

Our slaves will be of metal, without nerves. The power of the lightning, of steam, of the tides and of the great sun itself will be the power of these slaves of civilization.

Slave women spun and wove slowly the clothing of the Athenians and the Romans.

Our clothing is made by slave fingers of steel. Great machines, gigantic looms, turn out in a day enough to clothe every citizen of Athens.

The slaves carried their masters in palanquins in Roman days. Steam and the lightning are the slaves that carry us today.

Huge fair-skinned captives from Gaul and Germany did the digging twenty centuries ago.

Go to the great steel mill at Gary, in Indiana, and there you see in wonderful perfection man's use of Nature as his slave.

The great ships bring the ore down the lakes. No man's hand has touched it. Jaws of steel have torn it from the ore bed and dropped it into the ships.

At Gary other steel jaws lift it and carry it to the furnaces. It is melted and great machines pour it out. It is divided into huge ingots, and these, white hot, are carried to the first part of the rolling mill. But no man's hand has touched that iron.

No slave has touched it under its weight.

The ingots, squeezed by one machine, made longer and narrower, squeezed again and made still longer and narrower.

It starts on its journey along the rollers of the mill, squeezed, pressed, handled, turned over, and shaped as it travels hundreds of yards—no hand touching it.

It arrives at last, a red-hot steel rail, the right shape, cut the right length. Machinery turns it over, slides it on an incline. It has made the journey, changing from a shapeless ingot to a finished rail, handled by machinery, the machines guided and controlled by one or two mechanics sitting aloft, pressing levers or buttons, AND WATCHING.

Finished at last and almost ready, the rail slides down the incline, and for the first time a man deals with it. He is a young Scandinavian giant, six and a half feet tall, with yellow hair and a clear gray eye. With his eye pinners he turns the rail, and standing at one end, runs his eye along it. He is no slave, but a well-paid worker. Ten dollars a day is his pay for the use of that true eye. As he looks along the rail he sees the defects, moves the left or the right hand, and another man controlling the straightening machine straightens the rail as ordered.

And there you have side by side ten rails perfectly straight, and more always coming down the incline to meet the glance of that gray eye.

A man sitting in his little tower touches a button, and along overhead rails there comes gliding a great electric magnet—on a great scale—the same as the magnet with which you used to draw little tin ducks across the water.

The magnet slides along, drops down upon the ten rails that weigh thousands of pounds, the electrician presses a button, turns on the current, and man's electric slave glues the rails to the magnet. The ten are lifted at once, as easily as a child would lift a pair of tins, they are carried to a flat car, lowered on the car, the current is turned off, releasing the rails, and the magnet travels back to its neighbor's job.

To realize what progress the human race has made, remember that the race lived for more than two thousand centuries not knowing how to use iron, and then see that giant magnet at Gary, loaded with steel rails, brought from the ore into the finished rail, and then see the electric slave, and the magnet, and the flat car, and the man who touches the button, and you will see that the man has never touched by a man's hand except AS AND ORDERED BY THE MACHINE TO STRAIGHTEN IT.

There is SLAVERY, and the ideal slavery that will free the world's human race, by making Nature's power MAN'S SLAVE.

Teaching the Young Idea How to Chute

Here is a young man, capable of earning a place in the world, getting his first lesson from the spirit that is always ready to help a beginner, and who has many accomplished pupils on their way to cemeteries, penitentiaries and insane asylums. It is not a pleasant spirit, but the young man can only see what it has to teach, and that seems pleasant enough. One day, after he has broken his mother's heart and made his own life so wretched that none save himself can even imagine its wretchedness he will see the spirit face to face. But that will be too late, for by that time he will have learned the lesson so well that he can never forget it. Mr. McCay, who drew the cartoon, suggests that it pictures the act of "teaching the young idea how to chute."

"The Perfect Age" in a Woman's Life

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

To the simple question, "At what age does a woman reach her greatest perfection, physically and mentally?" there must be a complex answer. The woman, the environment, the climate, must all be considered. The hours, the day, the care have their stated period of perfect development, subject to few variations. Man himself can be relied upon for certain conditions at certain ages. He is in the pin-feathered period at fourteen and develops all his finer, more instinctive, and all his "knows everything at sixteen," begins to realize that he knows nothing at thirty; is despondent and dangerous at thirty-five and charming at fifty. Women, more variable and elusive in all things, elude all such classification in their maturity.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

She may be a circle at fourteen, with amazing wit and charm, or she may remain an undeveloped anomaly until twenty-five, and then "blow into" a glorious personality. I have seen the one family in England, where a certain young girl, who was at the perfection of her physical womanhood, and her older sister had come into her inheritance of brilliant beauty at twenty-four.

The Southern girl matures sooner and fades sooner than her sister in England. I have seen a girl at both sides of the ocean and tall and slender, and as fresh as a daisy with the roses, her bloom in its radiant, her beauty more dazzling than the sun. I have seen a girl at twenty-four, who was at the perfection of her physical womanhood, and her older sister had come into her inheritance of brilliant beauty at twenty-four.

American woman pausily reaches the perfection of her physical development at about the age of twenty-eight. She is in full possession of all the charms of early teens, her bloom is unimpaired, her eye is full of lustre, her figure retains its slender roundness. But added to these charms is the subtle fascination of a heart beginning to experience the deeper joys and sorrows of life, a soul beginning to reach forward to the invisible and a mind beginning to contemplate the remote questions of life.

It is after her twenty-fifth year that the average American woman begins to attain her physical and mental perfection, and for a period of eight or ten years she appears to retain her undiminished charms.

There must be something more than the hope and animation of youth to produce this expression; there must, by feeling, already ripened by some of life's mature experiences, and sympathy already awakened regard for humanity. Unless her early youth has been marked by its health and discipline, her nervous organization, our

Art of Preservation. Then begins an almost imperceptible change. It is the curled edge of the rose, scarcely noticeable to the casual observer, but it is the remorseless forerunner of decay.

It may be a period of years, even a decade, before any eye but her own will discover it, so skillfully is she in the art of preservation of her charms, yet all these years she carries that seed of all sad secrets in her heart, that her sun has crossed the zenith and that her long day of beauty is on the wane.

Happy is she who, when the admiration of the multitude is no longer to be expected, can fall back upon the respect and affection of her friends; happy is she who has her lifetime of life to prepare for a calm and peaceful evening.

Rev. John E. White on "The Battle in the Air"

The Sudden Popping of Small Arms and the Clatter of Loud Talk in the Direction of Chief Beavers, He Says, Was Not a Premeditated Outbreak of Hostilities.

Written for The Georgian by REV. JOHN E. WHITE, Pastor Second Baptist Church.

THE sudden popping of small arms and the clatter of loud talk in the direction of Chief James Beavers was not a premeditated outbreak of hostilities. It was an indiscretion not in the plan of campaign, and it has created much confusion. Naturally, the desire is very great that the unfortunate attacking party should return to camp, put up their guns, take up their spades and get back on the job sub rosa. The last thing in the world our friends the enemies of the police department want at this time is an open issue and an open fight.

The Battle Picture. The real conflict in Atlanta between Law and Morals and Lawlessness and Immorality is an invisible conflict. It brings to mind a famous battle picture, which represents the army of Attila engaged with the army of the Holy Roman Empire in the fifth century.

During the day the armies have met in battle and have wrangled until the night comes on. The great artist takes up the battle at that point and draws a picture of weary horses and worn-out soldiers of both armies lying asleep on the ground. But in the night, amid perfectly physical quiet, the spirits of horses and horsemen are represented above the battlefield still engaged in fierce encounter.

Their shadowy forms dash and surge against each other, while on the background below flesh and blood are meekly at rest. Eight months ago, when the day of sharp battles was brought to a quiet, and night and silence settled down on the Tendency, the conflict by no means ended. The situation became an array of the subtle influences crapping in the dark.

In the streets, in the saloons, in the soul rooms and in private offices the unquarrelsome power of evil held their councils of war and set in motion all the subtle claims their least stronghold.

The Issue and the Line-up. Let us go to-morrow when this recent open collision has disappeared from the news columns and everything goes quiet, and appears to the public as a retreat from an uncomfortable and an unfavorable position, and a withdrawal from the battle will go on in the air, but out of sight. The silent protest and the secret plotting will still maintain its invisible head and front. What is this struggle in Atlanta about? What is the issue and the line-up? What are the interests, principles, and desires behind Chief Beavers and the Police Department, and what behind his enemies?

The question is not difficult. On one side is the law of the State, which the police have executed and are executing. On the other side is a mixed line-up, but unavoiably identified with the idea that the law should not be executed and that officers of the law should accommodate their conscience to favor its violation.

On one side are the people, fortunately in a majority, who maintain an unflinching hostility to citizens against the social evil of prostitution, gambling and drunkenness. On the other side are the people, unfortunately in a minority, who are disposed to compromise with these evils.

On one side in positions of leadership are citizens who have made an intelligent study of social diseases and public dealing with them in other cities and throughout the world, and who know that the judgment of intelligence has reached a verdict which is unalterably in favor of absolute suppression and of honest, uncompromising execution of the law. In this sensible method of dealing with public evils. On the other side are those who maintain a dead tradition to the effect that the evils are necessary, and who shut their eyes and their ears to all the testimony of experience and scientific investigation.

On one side the conscience of religion, the ideal of Christianity, and the foundation principles of churches, schools and homes, which are bound of honorably and hostily to degrading vice, and which as institutions can not justify their existence, except in war against them.

On the other hand, the loose conscience of irreligion, the lowered ideals of society, and the foundation principles of the underworld, the brothel and the saloon, which, as institutions, can have no existence except as they organize to maintain the vices which prey upon humanity.

By no means all who are opposed to Chief Beavers would confess themselves inside an immoral category. There are some people watching the conflict, with unfriendly eyes for his execution of the law. But it ought to be clearly indicated that the interests unfriendly and positively hostile to the closing of the "House of our Misfit" have created an issue which challenges the interests of the closing of the "House of our Misfit" on one side or the other of the controversy.

The petty ambitions of politicians, who stand on the side lines, that will not obscure the issue. It is a vain hope if anybody imagines that a political party will re-establish tolerated vice in Atlanta.

The real ground of its hopelessness is not in Chief Beavers or the police department, but the law of Georgia, and in the access of one citizen to honorable judges on the bench who hold in their hands the constitutional power backed up by the sovereignty of the State of Georgia to abate by injunction a law which is unenforceable.

The battle in the air will go on, but Atlanta need not be afraid.

Strange Things From the Sky

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

A CORRESPONDENT writes that after a heavy rain recently he saw the pavements of a town sprinkled with tiny white earthworms, apparently lifeless, and looking as if they had been drowned, and since they were seemingly impossible that they could have crawled there in such numbers, he wishes to know if anyone can throw any light on their probable origin.

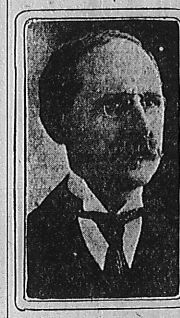

The phenomenon to which he calls attention has long been known, in various forms, and has sometimes been the cause of panic among ignorant or superstitious people. The so-called "blood-rains" belong to the same category.

Carried Up by Wind. Most of these occurrences are believed to be due to the carrying up into the atmosphere, by whirling winds of quantities of dust, the colored pollen of flowers, and even small animals, which are transported to a considerable distance and then brought down to the ground during a rain storm.

The power of an atmosphere, when a heavy rain is falling, to a great elevation is often astonishing. Such a whirling jangling air, as a swampy pond may contain considerable quantities of water, and with it small fish, frogs and worms.

They are retained in the air by the rapidity of their motion, and are transported a mile, or even more, before they descend again to the ground. If they are caught in a shower of rain they are assembled together in multitudes as they fall.

Some very curious instances of the rain of this kind are on record. Many years ago a shower of small green stones fell during a heavy rain in the streets of Birmingham, England, causing much consternation. Among the "investigation" by a geologist in the Kingdom of Naples, were by the wind seen a ragged range of greenstone rock near the village of Rowley, in Staffordshire, several miles north of Birmingham.

Such phenomena are more common in Southern Europe than elsewhere, and it has been proved that the Desert of Sahara is the source of the "blood-rains" which are carried to the south of France. These insects also disappeared after a single season.

The fact is that the atmosphere is a great transporting agent, extremely rich in its action, filled with unseen currents, and yet containing many mysteries, such as the barometric "holes" into which aeroplanes sometimes plunge, and which can be satisfactorily explained.

ing the whole sky as red as fire. Thunderstorms broke out, and the rain that fell from the cloud had exactly the appearance of blood.

In 1847 a blood-colored rain fell at Chambary, at the foot of the Alps, while rain was falling on the mountains, around the St. Bernard Pass, there fell several inches of "bloody rain."

In the old days of superstition these occurrences were ascribed to diabolic influences, but there was no one wise enough in the dolage of nature to offer a reasonable explanation of them.

Often it happens that insects, and sometimes heavier animals, as well as the seeds of plants, are transported long distances by the wind and deposited, alive, upon the ground.

Dr. T. L. Phipson, who devoted many years to investigation of atmospheric vagaries, believed that the sudden appearance of strange plants and insects in localities where they are usually unknown is due to this cause.

His Explanation. He himself observed several instances of the kind. On one occasion a rare plant, called "purple heart grass," suddenly disappeared after a single season. His explanation was that the seeds had been brought through the atmosphere, and that the plants, after flourishing a single summer, perished for want of proper nourishment in the soil.

For hours Saturday James Conley, negro sweeper, whose sensational confession accuses Superintendent Leo M. Frank of the murder of Mary Phagan, explained in detail to Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey the dread mysteries of the National Pencil Factory on April 26, explaining many things that had not been clear to the officials, but sticking tenaciously to the story he told the city detectives.

Conley was taken to the Solicitor's office at that official's request and put through a severe cross-examination. With an elaborate diagram, drawn for the Solicitor by Bert Green, a Georgian staff artist, to guide him, the negro traced the various scenes in the factory after the slaying of the girl.

CONFIDENTIAL FRANK CONLEY NEGRO IS POLICE PLAN

Anxious to See if Conley Will Stick to Latest Confession Under Dramatic Test.

A mystery no longer—this negro without every attempt to shake the remarkable story he unfolded to the detective in the starting confession and re-narrated at the scene of the crime itself.

Like an unwinding panorama, he laid before his questioners the incidents which often almost incoherent, far from clear, but the shifting scenes in the grim tragedy which reached its great climax Friday, but in which the greatest battle is yet to be fought in the courts of Fulton county.

One thing is certain: Those who have thought that it will be easy for a skillful lawyer to tear the negro's story into tatters must revise their judgment. From careful rehearsal, Conley got out of it after all and it was all up, so I told the truth.

Looks Little Like Nowell.

ROOSEVELT FORCED TO TEST BEER OF FAME

MARQUITT
Colonel Roosevelt
to the ex-... of the locally brewed beer, over his own protest, according to one of the Colonel's witnesses in his libel suit, against Editor George A. Newell, of the Inquiring Iron Ore, which was resumed to-day. The amount the Colonel drank, however, was only a small one.

W. Emmett Roosevelt, a cousin of the former President, was the first witness. His testimony was about following the course of previous test-ings as to the Colonel's use of "Inquire." He was followed by the stand by William Loeb, Jr., former private secretary to Roosevelt and collector of the part of New York.

All-Day Session.
It was expected that the court would hold only a half session today, but with the session convening Judge Richard F. Wainwright announced that owing to yesterday's holiday he felt that the case should be pushed as rapidly as possible and that an afternoon session would be held.

When Loeb was questioned by Attorney Pound.
"Extremely moderate" was his characterization of the former President's use of intoxicating liquors.
Q—Did you accompany the plaintiff to Speaker Cannon's birthday dinner?

A—Yes.
Q—What did he drink? I mean intoxicating liquor.
A—He drank a glass of champagne in pledging Speaker Cannon's health, but with the session convening said the Colonel, since he retired from the Presidency, had lunched at his home, and had taken a glass of champagne which was served.

Frank was questioned by Attorney Pound.
Q—Did you ever see any indications that he was under the influence of liquor?

A—I should say not.
Q—In all your acquaintance with the plaintiff, what have you seen him drink?

A—A little sauterne mixed with apollinaris or white rock.
Q—How much whiskey have you seen him drink?

A—I never saw Colonel Roosevelt drink any whiskey.
Q—Ever see him drink any beer?

A—Yes, in May, 1913, he was visiting in Milwaukee and went to a reception tendered him by the Deutscher Club. He was invited to have a few beers and replied that he did not drink beer. They urged him, however, to try it and he took a small glass of beer. That he only drank one I never saw him take.

James Sloan, who was Trece's relief as constant secret service companion of Colonel Roosevelt while President, and now a personal guard to President Wilson, gave testimony that Roosevelt used any and all liquors or wines.

Attorney VanBuren then called the stand to read a deposition by Albert Shaw, editor of the Review of Revolution. The deposition said Shaw had been in the city since the war was commenced in New York. The two had been friends in the past. Shaw and Mr. Shaw stated that the former President was overindulgent in his use of liquors.

Girl Shot in Her Own Home Accuses Wealthy Clubman

LOS ANGELES, CAL., May 31.—
Accused of shooting a young woman under mysterious circumstances, Fred
B. Kolb, a wealthy young clubman, is in the city and has been committed to the county jail. The girl, who is Miss Irene Nobel, 22 years old, was shot in her home in Hollywood.
The girl was found by her brother lying on the floor in her home. Kolb was at the telephone summoning a physician.
At a hospital Miss Nobel said Kolb shot her. She probably will die. A letter threatening suicide was found with her clothing.
Kolb is son of a millionaire who died recently.

SPENDS DAY WITH DORSEY STUDYING HUGE DIAGRAM OF SCENE OF THE CRIME

Important Developments Looked For,
but Nothing Sensational Made Public--Insists He Has Told All,
but Further Confession Is Expected.

For hours Saturday James Conley, negro sweeper, whose sensational confession accuses Superintendent Leo M. Frank of the murder of Mary Phagan, explained in detail to Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey the dread mysteries of the National Pencil Factory on April 26, explaining many things that had not been clear to the officials, but sticking tenaciously to the story he told the city detectives.

Conley was taken to the Soli-citor's office at that official's request and put through a severe cross-examination. With an elaborate diagram, drawn for the Solicitor by Bert Green, a Georgian staff artist, to guide him, the negro traced the various scenes in the factory after the slaying of the girl.

He told just where he first came to have found her and where he and the superintendent he accused attempted to dispose of the body. The drama he enacted in the factory Friday for the detectives he re-enacted for the Solicitor in the little room at the court house with the artist's chart as a guide and his finger as the tracer of tragedy.

Dorsey Well Satisfied.
The Solicitor was well satisfied with the results obtained in the secret conference behind closed doors and certain points that had been vague to him before were made clear.
At Conley's own request, through Conley's attorney, the picture was later transferred to the police station. The negro had been so delegated by questions at the county jail that he asked to be put within the shelter of police headquarters.

Conley estimated that he had been threatened at the jail, but little credence was put in his ramblings. It was plain that he wanted rest. He had told the story so often--each time, it may be noted, in almost the same words--that he was tired. The police agreed that he had answered enough questions from outsiders and he was moved.

Police Urge New Test

A determined effort is being made by the police department to bring Frank face to face with his accuser.
The detectives wish to learn how Conley will go through the ordeal of confronting the man whose charges of directing the disposal of the body of Mary Phagan, and dictating the notes of the trial, they have by body.

Hat, Hose, Kerchiefs Cause Bruin's Death

Dan Carey, General Manager of

The rubber hose had been removed from Bruin's stomach before he ate the hat, so most of the blame for his death was placed on the hat.
The autopsy proved that the hat had been eaten, but in the stomach were found two handkerchiefs and a solid rubber ball about the size of a grape.

PRICE A FEW ANOTHER COMMISSION

PROSECUTES 'SISTER' TO REGAIN HUSBAND

Mrs. Charles Kugler Wins Vindication in Charges Against Inspector Maddox.

Pretty Mrs. Charles Kugler was smiling and satisfied victor Saturday in her court fight which she had declared she would continue until she had cleared her name and won back her husband.

Inspector Henry H. Maddox, of the city sanitary department, the tale of whose insulting remarks to Mrs. Kugler caused her husband to leave her in a rage, was fined $25.00 by Recorder Broyles and was in addition given a sound rapping by the recorder.

"If you would look after the physical cleanliness of the city and you would leave the moral cleanliness in the hands of Chief Beavers, I fancy you and the city both would get along better," said Recorder Broyles, who in the future I suggest that you do not make derogatory remarks about anyone, particularly when you are speaking on hearsay and with such a misty idea of the woman's identity as you were in this case.

Husband Also Scored. The husband also came in for a grilling through the indignant offices of Detective Roy Waggoner, who asked for permission to address the court and then asserted emphatically that a case ought to be made against Kugler for his strange and cruel treatment of his wife.

Waggoner said that Mrs. Kugler had told him that her husband fell into a fury and beat her when she told him of the remarks that Maddox had made to her and declared that he was going to quit her until she was able to wear her name again.

"There is no reason why you should have suspected this woman of any wrongdoings," said Recorder Broyles. Mrs. Kugler was forgiving and would not consent to any prosecution of her husband. She went from the court room on his arm and was smiling delightedly as she entered the office of Chief Beavers, who proceeded to give her a check on a lecture on his conduct. Kugler was told that there was no excuse for his unbecomable conduct in leaving his wife Friday night and swearing that he would not return to her until she had cleared her name.

Pair Kiss and Make Up. A complete reconciliation was effected and the reunited couple left the station talking gaily. Mrs. Kugler charged before the court that Maddox had insulted her last Wednesday by coming to her house in her husband's absence and remarking that he had seen her on the street with another man the day before and had seen her go into 73 Pacific Street, with him. She said he addressed other remarks to her of an impertinent and insulting nature and that she ordered him from the house.

She put on her hat and went immediately to tell her husband of the incident. He was taking steps to punish Maddox, she told the court that he turned on her and accused her of adultery with Maddox. She said then she determined never to stop fighting until she had cleared her name and won back the love of her husband.

Admits Making Remarks. Mrs. Kugler, who was discharged from the sanitary department, as soon as the charges were filed against him, admitted to Recorder Broyles she had made the remarks complained of. He said that he made them because he had been told by E. E. Rice, another inspector, of a flashy young woman who lived on West Alexander street, and whom Rice had seen the day before in company with a man. Maddox said that when he visited the Kuglers' residence at 12 West Alexander street he supposed Mrs. Kugler was the woman referred to and made the remarks to her.

Rice was in court and testified that he mentioned no address in his conversation with Maddox. He was given an admonition similar to that received by Maddox.

SILENCE OF CONLEY PUT TO END BY GEORGIAN

When All Else Failed, Chief Lanford Confronted Negro With Accusing Interview.

"That the Georgian played a conspicuous part in obtaining the latest and most important confession from Jim Conley, the negro seaman, in which he admitted his complicity in the crime, was the declaration of Chief of Detectives Newport Lanford late Friday afternoon. Chief Lanford, in telling of the cross-examination of Conley on Thursday afternoon which resulted in his confession, said that Conley for a long time persisted in maintaining that he knew no more of the crime than that which he had related previously.

After several hours of futile questioning the chief above him a copy of the Georgian quoting officials of the pencil factory to the effect that they believed Conley the guilty man. It was then that Conley made his startling affidavit telling the deed upon Frank.

All Questions Filled. "All lines of questions had been tried without avail," said the detective chief, in relating the incident. "We had put Conley through a rigid third degree, and still he declared that he knew nothing more of the crime. It seemed that all the theories the detective force had so carefully and painstakingly built up were about to be shattered.

"I was racking my brain for something else that might be of aid in getting Conley to tell what was withheld," the chief continued. "I happened to remember that in last Wednesday's Georgian I had seen interviews with various factory people who declared they thought Conley guilty of the murder, and that he was attempting to place the crime on an innocent man."

George Stry Broke Him. "Stepping into an adjoining room, I secured a copy of The Georgian containing the interviews. Carrying it back into my office, where the small group of detectives had been for several hours interrogating the man without result, I handed the paper to Conley, remarking: 'You can read this, Jim, and see if the people over at the factory think of you.' "He took the paper and in silence the detectives watched him slowly and painfully decipher the statements of Holloway and others at the factory declaring that he, Conley, and not Frank, was the guilty man.

"Finally he laid the paper aside, and looked up with the most worried expression on his face he has displayed since his arrest. 'Does he, does he, does he,' he said, 'does he mean to tell the truth, and I ain't got to no longer.' And the confession as contained in his latest affidavit followed.

PLAN TO CONFRONT CONLEY AND FRANK FOR NEW ADMSSION

Police Hope Meeting Will Prove Whether Negro Will Stick to Latest Story Under Eyes of the Man He Accuses--Ready to Pay Penalty.

A determined effort is being made by the police department to bring Leo M. Frank face to face with his accuser, Jim Conley, the negro sweeper. The detectives wish to learn how Conley will go through the ordeal of confronting the man he accuses of directing the disposal of the body of Mary Phagan, and dictating the notes that were found by her body.

Their desire also to deny Frank an opportunity to deny the negro's story as Conley is repeating it. Frank has been the man of silence in the Tower. He has had nothing to say in regard to the crime to anyone who has sought to talk with him on the subject, unless it was to his most intimate friends who have visited him in his cell.

He still refuses to have anything to say or to have Conley brought to his cell, except by the permission of his attorney, Luther E. Rosser, and in Mr. Rosser's presence. The detectives propose to take the matter up with Attorney Rosser. They will represent that the case has reached a stage where it is necessary to give Conley's statements their final test. Conley went over the scene of the crime step by step on Friday and never wavered in his story involving Frank deeply.

Now it is desired to have him appear before the very man he so strongly accuses and have him repeat the terrible charges. Some believe that if Conley is alone guilty of the crime, the ordeal will be the final straw that will bring about his full confession. If Attorney Rosser agrees to the plan, the negro will be taken at once to the cell of Frank. Conley is still in an unsettled state from his long three-day grilling by the detectives, and is thought to be just in the frame of mind to break down and make a full confession, if he knows any more about the crime than he already has told.

Silent Regarding the Case. In the event that the meeting is arranged, it will be the first time that Frank has broken his silence in regard to the case. He may have talked it to members of his own family, but his most intimate friends say that he has played cards with the topic and conversed freely on the topic of the day as he has read of them in the daily papers, but that he never has discussed the Phagan mystery directly and at length. Some of his friends have been with him every hour of every day since he has been in the cell at the Tower. They have been most loyal to the imprisoned man.

They declare that he never has mentioned the subject to any of the attendants of the jail, except occasionally to the Sheriff himself. And then it was in an almost impersonal manner.

Conley Is Ready to Pay Penalty as Accomplish. "Yes, sir, I guess maybe it's all over with me. I suppose they're going to hang me, or send me to the penitentiary for life, but I done told the truth." "When the Sheriff puts the road around my neck, I'm going to say: 'I stop, wait a minute. I know it. I tried to hide that dead girl's body and I ought to be punished, but before I let any more of these lies be told, I'm going to say this: 'Jim Conley, negro sweeper, whose confession that he helped Leo M. Frank dispose of the body of Mary Phagan after the superintendent had killed her, was a profound liar. I know it, proved through the bars of his cell in the Fulton Tower and pro-

Insurance Merger to Bring $500,000 Here

Approximately $500,000 in premium income will be added to the banking business in Atlanta by the absorption of the Fentona Insurance Company by the Hartford Fire Insurance Company. The Fentona Company's headquarters are in New Orleans, and the amount of its premium income last year totaled $200,000. More than 40 per cent of this business will be shifted to Atlanta, it is estimated by Fentona & Prescott, general business agents for the Hartford.

Balkans Battle as Envoys Talk Peace

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian. ATHENS, (Reuters), May 31.—While Balkan peace envoys of the states in the Balkan league were reconvening in London and affixing their signatures to a treaty with Turkey, a three-hour artillery duel between Bulgarians and Greeks was being fought at Eleutheria.

Envoys are said to have opened the conference at 10 a. m. on the Greek cruiser Sphelak. Other clashes are reported.

He has always been taken for granted that the two notes are the work of one man. The paper of neither corresponds to that described by Conley in his story. "Well, does Conley's assertion signify?"

Harassed by questioner, bombardment with hostile queries, importuned and threatened in an effort to get at the truth in the terrible pencil factory mystery—the minds of many a lawyer in the Atlanta small company stood every attempt to shake the remarkable story he unfolded to the detectives in the startling confession affidavit and re-narrated at the scene of the crime itself.

Like an unwinding panorama, he laid before his questioners in the eloquent, if almost incoherent, diction of Decatur Street the shifting scenes in the grisly tragedy, which reached its great climax Friday, but in which the greatest battle is yet to be fought in the courts of Fulton County.

One thing is certain: Those who have thought that it was easy for a lawyer to tear apart the negro's story into tidbits must revise their judgment. From careful rehearsal, studied dithering or the indelible impression of ghastly tragedy, the prisoner has learned his lesson well. From whatever angle he is attacked he tells the same narrative. Under calico or abuse he is unchanged.

"I thought Mr. Frank would see me. I thought maybe we could have a talk and maybe everything would be all right, but he never would see me. I tried once and I tried twice and I tried again, but Mr. Frank never would see me. So, I guessed it was just about time for me to tell the truth. I looked at the papers and I couldn't get out of it after all, and it was all up, so I told the truth."

A shily-angled, close-cropped, thick-checked, low-browed negro is Jim Conley—with eyes amber or amber-later as his mood changes—like a thousand and one other negroes that make fairer pretents or troublesome prisoners as their footsteps happen to fall, and if the story he tells is the product of his imagination he believes appearances.

It may be he has learned his tale from a child's fairy story until it sees the gobline as it plays in the twilight. It may be that constant make fairer pretents or troublesome prisoners as their footsteps happen to fall, and if the story he tells is the product of his imagination he believes appearances.

FRANK AND NEGRO IS POLICE PLAN

Anxious to See if Conley Will Stick to Latest Confession Under Dramatic Test.

could get out of it after all, and it was all up, as I told the truth. "Looks like Little Lilla now. A thirty-minute close-cropped, thick-cheeked, low-browed negro is Jim Conley—with eyes smiling or sinister, his mood changed like a zinnia and one other negro that make faithful servants or troublesome prisoners as their fancies happen to fall, and if the story he tells is the product of his imagination he believes it.

It may be he has learned his tale as a child, learned a fairy story until it seeps the gobline as it seeps the twilight. It may be that constant turning over of them in his mind as he lay in a police cell for three weeks, that constant repetition has made the details come readily to his lips. The lesson is learned. There is no doubt of it.

"Jim, why did you write the notes?" he was asked. "Didn't you know you'd be long talk black negro," would be taken to mean you?"

"Yes, sir," said Conley, readily. "I did and I took Mr. Frank so. I said 'Look here, Mr. Frank, they're going to think that means me. But Mr. Frank said he just wanted to see if he could do his mother wouldn't think he done so, and he told me he had powerful wealthy folks in the city—that was the first time I ever heard he had rich folks up North all. I thought they all lived here—so I wrote what he told me."

"Now this reply, as it is given, sounds incoherent and ungrammatical, but it is given just as Conley gave it and no amount of questioning could change it. "How long did you know Mr. Frank?" was another question.

"I guess I must know Mr. Frank. Conley kept conversing with me (I'm thorough) for about two years. Yes, sir, he was always a good boy to me. There was never no trouble about my getting money if I needed it. Yes, sir, Mr. Frank was always pretty good to me."

"And now you're telling a story, Jim, that may cost a good boy his life." "Well, I had to do it. That's all that was to it. I had to tell the truth. I waited and waited for Mr. Frank to do something and when he didn't I just reckoned it couldn't and it was about that time."

"Three distinct times during the questioning Conley has three remarks, that might truthfully be interpreted as a justification that another man was in as bad a plight as he was."

Every incident and every circumstance added to the picture of a powerful and powerful appeal as Conley duplicated detail by detail that fatal afternoon of April 26. No strategy could have been able to make the story of the planning by the detectives. The simple and gray-black factory, the spell of silence upon the little group of men, the sound of the door, the sound of the folding doorway.

Some of the girls, pitifully young and helpless looking, pressed back against the wall and stood there with distended eyes and afflicted manner as the men barked and mounted on the second floor. Several of the older girls were hysterical little things which died in their throats when they thought the death sentence that marked the passage of the officers and their arrest.

When the remarkable recital was ended and who had gone through the building with the negro had an indelible picture etched on their minds, it might not have been what actually took place at the factory, the fatal day, but it was most realistic and impressive as a scene at the factory.

Conley Star Actor in Dramatic Third Degree

In all the grim annals of Atlanta's crime history, there is no story more dramatic than that of the trial of Jim Conley, stands out to-day the principal figure in one of the most remarkable and dramatically impressive of the city police.

A chief of police, ordinarily solid and unmovable, and chief of detection and members of his force, a Pinkerton operative—all men in daily touch with every sort of crime and evil—were witness to the trial of Jim Conley as it came from the lips of the negro, and watched as wit-eyed as any lay in man-hunting, the negro's every move as he re-enacted Friday afternoon what he stoutly asserted was his part in the ghastly Mary Phagan tragedy.

Both had reckoned Frank innocent. They had said many times that they could not have committed the shocking deed. More likely, they had detected it was not they, but they were there when they were spectators of a gruesome performance in which Phagan's limbs and body were torn and shaking and half in a passé as he directed the carrying of Mary Phagan's limbs and body to the second floor of the factory and down into the dark and dirt-strewn basement.

Every incident and every circumstance added to the picture of a powerful and powerful appeal as Conley duplicated detail by detail that fatal afternoon of April 26. No strategy could have been able to make the story of the planning by the detectives. The simple and gray-black factory, the spell of silence upon the little group of men, the sound of the door, the sound of the folding doorway.

was, or whether he was a white man or a negro. Thomas H. Morgan, a milk wagon driver employed by C. A. Neils, the first man to drive into the Stevens home after the fire, said he passed the Stevens home about fifteen minutes after Mr. Self, and that he saw no one, neither the man nor the girl, in the yard. A light in one of the front windows was the only evidence of any one being there.

No one could be located during the investigation Friday who had seen any strange negroes or white men in the neighborhood of the Stevens home, either during the day or on the night of the murder. It was learned that the two negroes who were believed to have been connected with the Stevens home were in the employ of Mr. Cowan, and were hauling the oats to market.

They were called Worthless. Evidence that the negroes Wilkes and Maynard were shiftless, treacherous negroes who would stop at nothing to gain their ends continues to pile up, and the neighbors and friends of the Stevens family firmly believe that the woman who apprehended them they will have caught the murderer of the woman who was killed.

He had discovered that the girl was not the wife of the man who had been shot, as he related his story. Throughout his long matter-of-fact and his indignation he said though he was giving the description of a girl who had been killed, he might have occurred in his daily routine as a success at the factory.

He carried his "job" this way, he remained and he remained, he declared the motions that one would use in shuffling, he said, and he called Frank to his assistance, he called Frank to his assistance, he called Frank to his assistance, he called Frank to his assistance.

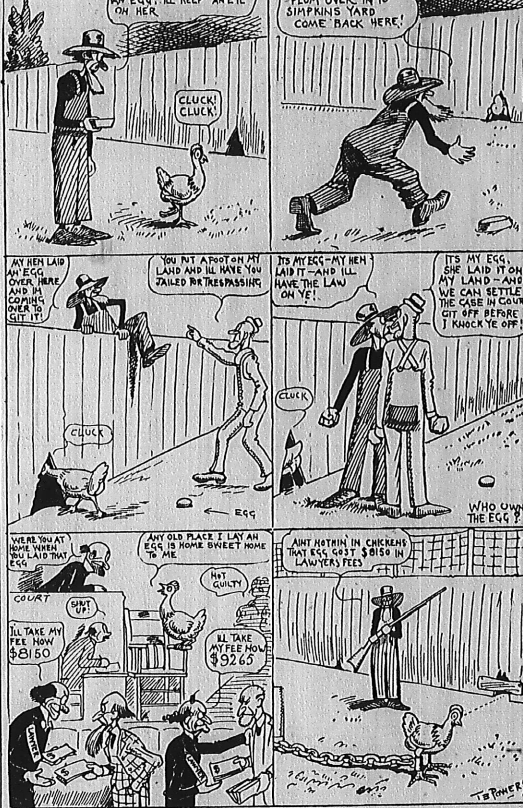

When the remarkable recital was ended and who had gone through the building with the negro had an indelible picture etched on their minds, it might not have been what actually took place at the factory, the fatal day, but it was most realistic and impressive as a scene at the factory.

When It Comes to Law—The Owner of the Chicken Is the Owner of the Egg. (Absolutely the Last Egg Joke)

was corroborated Friday by members of the Cowan family. Last Saturday afternoon while visiting at the Cowan home, Mrs. Stevens said she feared the two negroes, and declared that she had seen them many times there and asked for money.

Once away with Platto, Mrs. Stevens was told the Cowan home, became imbued with the idea of the two negroes, but when they were last week. They usually, Mrs. Stevens said, have stayed at the house at times when they knew Mr. Stevens or Mrs. Stevens were not at home, and they had been heard and seen at midnight and in the early morning hours.

One of the remarkable facts obtained regarding Wilkes was that no matter where he went, he always carried a Bible and made a practice of studying it to be a preacher. He carried a Bible and made a practice of studying it to be a preacher. He carried a Bible and made a practice of studying it to be a preacher.

The theory of the neighbors is that Maynard, working at Mr. Stevens home, became imbued with the idea of the two negroes, but when they were last week. They usually, Mrs. Stevens said, have stayed at the house at times when they knew Mr. Stevens or Mrs. Stevens were not at home, and they had been heard and seen at midnight and in the early morning hours.

MRS. PANKHURST IS NEAR DEATH AGAIN

Friends Are Convinced She Will Not Live Long Enough to Serve All of Jail Term.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian, LONDON, May 21.—Militant suffragettes "poisoned" a bomb in the post office at Lewisham, a suburb, early today, causing an explosion which destroyed a number of letters and packages. There was no one in the mail sorting room at the time, the women having chosen an occasion when human life would not be jeopardized.

Mrs. Emmaline Pankhurst, who was released from Holloway jail yesterday, because of acute dyspepsia and heart exhaustion, is reported to be near death. This is the second time Mrs. Pankhurst has been taken to the hospital. She is now in the hospital at St. George's, London.

GOULY TAKES AUTO RACE; WISHART SECOND

French Driver Does the 500 Miles at Average of 76.59 Per Hour.

Injured in Race. JACK TOWER, driver of the Mason; leg broken when car overturned. LEE GUNNING, mechanician of the Mason; seriously crushed.

MOTOR SPEEDWAY, INDIANAPOLIS, May 30--Jules Gouly, of France today wrested the motorcycle championship from America, winning the 500-mile race for all automobile race on the motor speedway here. Gouly drove a Peugeot car.

His time was 6:31:42.46, an average of 76.59 miles an hour, a trifle slower than last year's mark.

Spencer Wishart in a Mercer car finished second. His time was 6:45:06. Metz in a Stutz came third, although his car was "stirred" throughout the last lap.

Metz in a Stutz finished third. His car caught fire on the last lap and he drove desperately to the finish. The machine was blazing when he crossed the tape. Guyot, in a Sunbeam, finished fourth.

The victory of Gouly was a runaway after the first 100 miles. In addition to the $30,000 first prize and about $10,000 offered by accessory makers, the winner was also awarded the Remy Trophy, for the first 200 miles and the Press-to-Lite Trophy for 300 miles and the H. B. Wheeler and Schaeffer Trophy for 400 miles.

Gouly set a new speedway and race record for 500 miles for cars of this size. In addition he proved to be the first man to win the race by driving the full 500 miles without the assistance of a relief driver. His victory was clear-cut and due to his wonderful cool, steady driving, from start to finish.

Race Is Spectacular. The race was spectacular in the extreme despite the fact that no driver was killed in accidents. Several accidents happened and the hospital corps was kept busy with minor injuries.

On the seventy-ninth lap "Wild Bob" Burman who had been setting an eighty-two mile an hour clip was "put out" of the race temporarily by a leak in the gasoline tank. The Keaton was stopped at the pit and the car repaired. Hughes Hughes relief driver took "Wild Bob's" place when the car whirled out again.

Thunder had been driving at the rate of eighty-two miles an hour. The excitement, the continual hard luck that he encountered and the strain of driving in the face of the torridity of the atmosphere had weakened him so that he was unfit to go on with the race.

Caleb Bragg in a Mercer came to grief at the north end of the course when the steering knuckle of the car broke. The machine plunged toward the edge of the course where a number of spectators stood. Bragg jumped on the brakes and stopped the car.

Anderson in Second Place. The standing at the four hundredth mile was: Gouly first, Anderson second. The first had accident of the race same name when Jack Tower, in his American car, the Mason, smashed on a pit. Mason suffered a broken leg, but his mechanic was seriously hurt. Ray DePalma, the British driver of the speedway course, was forced out of the race in the eighteenth lap by engine trouble. He got

FACSIMILE OF CONCLUDING PORTION OF NEGRO CONLEY'S SENSATIONAL AFFIDAVIT, SHOWING HIS SIGNATURE

The reason I have not told this before is I thought Mr. Frank would get out and help me out, but it seems that he is not going to get out and I have decided to tell the whole truth about this matter.

While I was looking at the money in my hand Mr. Frank said "let me have that and I will make it all right with you Monday live and nothing happens" & he took the money back & I asked him if that was the way he done and he said he would give it back Monday

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 29 day of May, 1913.

James Conley

Notary Public, Fulton County, Georgia.

HANG THE GUILTY MAN LEO FRANK URGES

"I don't know who is guilty, but I do know that the man who murdered Mary Phagan ought to be hanged." Leo M. Frank made this statement to Sheriff C. W. Mangum, when he made his tour of the prison Friday. Mangum said this was the only statement or reference to the crime Frank had made since he had been in the Tower. He said Frank looked him squarely in the eye and talked like an innocent man. Entire satisfaction with the present status of the Phagan case was expressed by Chief of Detectives Newport Lanford this afternoon.

Half-Breed Negro Arrested in Search For Stevens Slayer

Dan Walker, a half-breed negro, was taken into custody late Friday afternoon, in connection with the search for the slayer of Mrs. Sallie C. Stevens and her daughter, Nellie, on the McDonough Road.

Walker's arrest was caused as a result of the reported connection of half-breed negro with the case. The prisoner denies that he was in any manner implicated in the crime, or even knew about it until his arrest. The police are inclined to believe his story, but will hold him for further investigation.

WORLD'S OLDEST SALESMAN. SAN FRANCISCO, May 30.--More than 80 years of age, 43 of which have been spent in the employ of one firm, S. W. Platig, a needle salesman, has just signed a contract to continue with the house 25 years longer.

"Please Stop My Want Ad"

WANTED--Woman for general house work to cook two meals a day. Apply 209 Angier Ave. 5-28-13.

This little "WANT AD" was placed in the Georgian Thursday afternoon. Before noon Friday it was ordered discontinued. More than 20 applicants for the place had called. Have you a vacancy? Do you want anything?

DRAMATIC SCENE AT FACTORY AS CONLEY RE-ENACTS CRIME

Negro, Step by Step, Shows Detectives Part He Says He Had in Slaying.

As a sensational climax to the confession of his part in the Mary Phagan tragedy, Jim Conley, negro sweeper, was taken to the National Penitentiary Friday afternoon, where he enacted by movement every detail of the events that took place in the building of mystery after the death of the little girl.

With the detectives noting every sentence that fell from the ready lips of the negro, Conley started from the exact point at the top of the stairs on the second floor where he says Leo Frank met him, and went through the grim drama with a realism that convinced all who listened and watched that he at least was telling the whole truth.

Conley repeated his story late Friday afternoon at the county jail, to which he had been removed from police headquarters.

Conley insisted that Frank told him Friday, April 25, to come to the factory Saturday, that he met him the next morning and brought him to the plant. The tragedy followed. The negro's insistence on the statement that Frank arranged the day before to have him at the factory on Saturday raises once more the question whether the crime was premeditated.

Conley, after he was committed to the Tower told a Georgian reporter of repeated efforts on the part of the detectives to "have him" confront Frank with his statement. On each occasion said Conley, Frank turned his back and went to the rear of his cell without speaking.

Show How Body Laid. Later in the basement in lay down again to show the detectives just how the body was dropped to the ground as though it had been a sack of salt. The negro lay on his face. His right arm was carried up under his body. The left arm was partly under his body, his fingers were drawn and the utmost secrecy was maintained. Only the authority in the factory were aware that the tragedy was to be re-enacted, step by step.

The announcement that this spectacular reproduction of the crime was to take place was made at the end of another thing on the station in the office of Chief Lanford. The negro was put in Chief Deaver's automobile. All the curtains were drawn and the utmost secrecy was maintained. Only the authority in the factory were aware that the tragedy was to be re-enacted, step by step.

HOW CONLEY FOUND BODY OF DEAD GIRL

He (Frank) told me that he had picked up a girl back there and had let her fall and that her head hit against something--he didn't know what it was--and for me to move her and I hollered and told him the girl was dead.

Deavers when he stepped from the car. Many of the employees, at leisure during the noon hour, were congregated at the foot of the stairs on the first floor when the strange procession filed up the stairs. The city detectives had come on foot. Chief Lanford and Chief Deavers, with the negro, arrived a few minutes later.

Some of the employees, curious to learn the latest development in the mystery, attempted to follow. They were turned back with orders not to come inside and the doors were barred against them. Guided by the negro, Herbert Behr and E. F. Holloway, the party of detectives and newspaper men started on the tour which was to reproduce the tragedy, detail by detail, from the moment Conley declares that he met Frank at the top of the stairs until the two returned to Frank's office where Conley again wrote the notes, as at Frank's dictation, and repeated the conversation that he swears took place between them.

Besides Chief Deavers and Chief Lanford, there were in the party Detective Harry Scott, of the Pinkertons, and City Detectives Colver and Campbell.

"Where did you first see Frank when he whistled to you twice?" Conley was asked as soon as he had reached the second floor.

Reproduces Conversation He Declares Took Place as Frank Directed Removal.

Conley's testimony to the police and in giving prominence to his statements desires to say that it must not be taken as final until it is examined at the trial of Frank.

Atlanta, Ga., April 29, 1913. On Saturday, April 26, 1913, when I come back to the penitentiary with Mr. Frank I waited for him downstairs like he told me, and when he whistled for me I went upstairs and he asked me if I wanted to make some money right quick, and I told him yes, sir, and he told me that he had picked up a girl back there and had let her fall, and that her head hit against something--he didn't know what it was--and for me to move her and I hollered and told him the girl was dead.

And he told me to pick her up and bring her to the elevator, and I told him I didn't have nothing to pick her up with, and he told me to go and look by the cotton box there and get a piece of cloth and I got a big wide piece of cloth and come back there to the men's toilet, where she was, and tied her, and I taken her and brought her up there to a little dressing room, carrying her on my right shoulder, and she got too heavy for me and she slipped off my shoulder and fell on the floor right there at the dressing room and I hollered for Mr. Frank to come there and help me; that she was too heavy for me, and Mr. Frank come down there and told me to "pick her up, dam fool," and he run down there to me and he was excited, and he picked her up by the feet. Her feet and head were sticking out of the cloth, and by him being so nervous he let her feet fall, and then we brought her onto the elevator. Mr. Frank carrying her by the feet and me by the shoulder, and we brought her to the elevator, and then Mr. Frank says, "Wait, let me get the key," and he went into the office and come back and unlocked the elevator door and started the elevator down.

SAYS FRANK STOOD GUARD. Mr. Frank turned it on himself, and we went on down to the basement and Mr. Frank helped me take it off the elevator and he told me to take it back there to the sawdust pile and I picked it up and put it on my shoulder again, and Mr. Frank he went up the ladder and watched the trapdoor to see if anybody was coming, and I taken her back there and taken the cloth from around her and taken her hat and shoes which I picked up upstairs right where her body was lying, and brought them down and untied the cloth and brought them back and throwed them on the trashpile in front of the furnace and Mr. Frank was standing at the trapdoor at the head of the ladder.

He didn't tell me where to put the things. I laid her body down with her head toward the elevator, lying on her stomach and the left side of her face was on the ground the right side of her face was up and both arms were lying down with her body by the side of her body. Mr. Frank joined me back on the first floor. I stepped on the elevator and he stepped on the elevator when it got to where he was, and he said, "See, that was a tiresome job," and I told him his job was not as tiresome as mine was, because I had to tote it all the way from where she was lying to the dressing room and in the basement from the elevator to where I left her.

FRANK WASHED HANDS. Then Mr. Frank hops off the second floor and catches with a sink to wash his hands and waited for washing his hands and Mr. Frank, he couldn't

SWEARS FRANK TOLD HIM GIRL HIT HER HEAD AGAINST SOMETHING

Negro Describes in Affidavit How He Helped to Carry the Body to the Basement; Factory Superintendent Ran the Elevator Down, He Says.

The Georgian in its second Extra published exclusively the first REAL confession of James Conley, the negro sweeper at the National Penitentiary, regarding the part he played in the Mary Phagan mystery.

The Georgian has dealt in no haphazard guesses as to the negro Conley's testimony to the police and in giving prominence to his statements desires to say that it must not be taken as final until it is examined at the trial of Frank.
