

PROSECUTION AT TACKLES MINCEY'S AFFIDAVIT MRS. CRAWFORD BEGINS FIGHT FOR HER FREEDOM

STATE STILL CONFIDENT OF CASE OF Mincey

Story of Negro Who Says He Was Eyewitness of Slaying Disbelieved by Solicitor.

Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey and Attorney Frank A. Hooper, engaged in the prosecution of Leo M. Frank, were issued Monday to break the silence they have maintained regarding the negro Jim Conley, last week. They made their first public comments on the sensational development of the last few days in the Phagan murder mystery.

Both declared emphatically that neither the affidavit of W. H. Mincey, insurance solicitor, nor the reported confession of the negro Will Nye, witness of the attack upon Mary Phagan, gave evidence sufficient to shake their conviction of Leo Frank's guilt.

Rumors that the state was preparing to change its theory and to ask for the indictment of Jim Conley were laughed at.

Mincey Affidavit Disbelieved.
"I sincerely doubt," said Mr. Hooper, "if that Mincey affidavit ever will be heard from again as a seriously considered piece of evidence in the case. It is only fair to state that it is very early for grapes."

Small and "scabby" grapefruit can be had for 20 cents, but the good fruit is 15 cents above this mark.

Worms, thousands of them, devoured the tomato crop in the vicinity of Atlanta. One commission merchant got together a carload and is the envy of all his unsuccessful rivals.

Vegetables from North, West and South are 10 and 15 cents a quart, respectively, and respectfully.

The first shipment of the season of Florida strawberries is expected Monday morning, and naturally it is not cheap, as is only competitor in the cold-storage Florida product.

Suffragist Victory Soon Predicted by Rev. Dunbar Ogden

The Rev. Dunbar Ogden delivered a strong address on woman suffrage at his evening service at the Central Presbyterian Church. That woman is rapidly coming into her own and that it is only a question of time when she will have full rank politically with the men was his prediction.

"Woman is the center of the home and the home is the center of civilization," he declared. "We can't change this. Full suffrage has been granted her in many States, and whether we like it or not, the door of the home has been thrown open politically, commercially and socially."

"In Georgia a girl is not protected after she is ten years old, but when a new law is proposed some one across the street protests. God pity the men. In her club life woman seeks to better conditions and in her political life she will do the same thing."

Girl Shoots Father For Abusing Mother

Macon, July 14.—Little hope is entertained to-day for the recovery of A. S. Griffin, of Jeffersonville, who was shot at that place, 20 miles from Macon, yesterday afternoon by his daughter, Miss Ethel Griffin, 18 years of age. She fainted after the shooting, and is now delirious.

Captor of McKinley Assassin Loses Post

KANSAS CITY, July 14.—John P. McCauley, police sergeant in Buffalo, who captured the assassin of President McKinley, was shot, and among the first to seize Colquhoun, the assassin, was one of three policemen removed from the local force by the Police Commissioner to-day. McCauley had been a patrolman here two years.

Epidemic of Suicides From Mercury Near

NEW YORK, July 14.—"We are approaching another suicide epidemic owing to the promiscuous use of which bichloride of mercury tablets, which were sold by Dr. C. Dickman, president of the State Board of Pharmacy, to-day."

Southern Conference Of Mormons Success

The Mormon Chapel in Woodward avenue could not contain the throng that gathered for the closing session of the annual North Georgia Conference Sunday night. Elder Charles A. Callis, president of the Southern States Mission, was the principal speaker. He urged renewed effort in the missionary movement.

Nazimova to Speak 4 Tongues on Tour

NEW YORK, July 14.—Magdala Alia Nazimova, who is touring the country on the first stage of a trip around the world, four languages will be used in presenting the reports during the trip.

Wife Pickets Posted at Hotels

The wife pickets Monday morning resulted in a close surveillance of hotels which, it is alleged, harbor young girls for immoral purposes. If the law is violated, the police authorities say, the police committee of Council will be requested to revoke the license of the hotel involved.

Revocation of License Will Be Asked if Law Is Violated.

Chief Beavers has detailed men to watch for violations of the law following information given by Corliss Wilson and Dora Rosthstein, sentenced to the Reform School Saturday afternoon.

$25,000 To Be Used to Find Car Fire Proof

BOSTON, MASS., July 14.—The Massachusetts Institute of Technology will spend $25,000 annually for five years, the gift of an anonymous benefactor, to determine how far a street railway can carry a passenger with profit from a nickel.

Proves Rice Eating Causes Beri-Beri

BERLIN, July 14.—The Medical Association reports that Dr. Max Moskowski, who has been investigating the causes of beri-beri, shares the contention of Dr. E. H. Frazer and Prof. Fletcher, of the Malay States, that beri-beri is an armitation disease caused by the use of rice.

RELEASE OF WIDOW ON BOND IS SOUGHT

Accused Woman Declares She Welcomes an Investigation by the Grand Jury.

The first step to secure the liberty of Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, held at the Tower on a charge of killing her husband by poison four years ago, was a conference between the prisoner and her attorneys early Monday morning.

The hearing probably will be before Judge W. D. Ellis. Burton Smith and Reuben Arnold, the attorneys who represented her in the civil hearing of the will case, will be attorneys in the pending criminal hearing and at the trial before the Grand Jury find a true bill when it investigates the case.

While a constable from the court of Justice of the Peace C. H. Girardeau was looking for Mrs. Crawford in Atlanta to serve the warrant charging murder, she was riding through the country to Atlanta in a buggy from Tucker, Ga., where she had gone to visit an old friend.

Before the attorneys left the jail it was understood that a hearing would be arranged before a Superior Court judge Monday, in an effort to obtain her release on bond until an investigation could be made by the Grand Jury.

Gives Herself Up at Tower.
She reached the city at 1 o'clock Sunday morning and went first to her home to get a few belongings. At a few minutes after 3 o'clock she surrendered the jailer at the Tower and surrounded herself.

Her visit to Tucker was to Mrs. Clemmie Johnson, who-tired with the Crawford before the death of Joshua B. Crawford. Mrs. Crawford said that Mrs. Johnson was to be an important witness at the hearing before an auditor and that she visited her to arrange for her coming to Atlanta.

Attorney is Confident.
Attorney Burton Smith Monday morning that he anticipated no trouble in arranging for the release of his client under bond, and that he felt confident a Grand Jury would return a "no bill" if the case ever got that far.

"The whole thing is nothing but a move to force civil action," he said, "and when they find out they can't force us they will abandon this and start something else. They know as well as I do that Mrs. Crawford is making an important witness, and they know too that Dr. Hart have Mrs. Crawford and the Grand Jury. Mrs. Crawford is a nice girl and she is a member of friends from her neighborhood."

Tells How Conley Confessed Killing Girl

GOVERNOR DELIGHTED WITH SOLDIERS' CAMP

MRS. JOHN M. SLATON.

Governor John M. Slaton, Mrs. Slaton, members of the Governor's staff and others of the executive party who spent Saturday afternoon and Sunday in camp at St. Simons Island with the Fifth Georgia Infantry, returned to Atlanta Monday morning. The Governor expressed himself as delighted with his outing and complimented the Atlanta regiment upon the splendid showing it made in camp.

BANKERS TO URGE FARMING INQUIRY

Several Atlanta bankers will go before the Appropriations Committee of the Georgia House of Representatives Tuesday afternoon to urge the passage of the Cochran bill creating a commission to investigate agricultural conditions. "It is a well-known fact that Georgia is not using all available agricultural facilities," said Joseph A. McCord, vice president of the Third National Bank. "We want to know why."

POLICE KILL MAN TRAILING MAYOR

DAWSON, July 14.—John W. Brown, a well-known white man of Dawson, was shot and severely fatally wounded here today by Chief of Police Brown and Policeman Crouch. Brown was reported to officers as laying in wait in a stable to shoot Mayor McNulty. Officers went to arrest him. As they entered the stable door Brown raised his gun to fire. The officers were a second too quick for Brown, shooting him down as he fired. The trouble resulted, it is said, from a raid officers made on Brown's residence yesterday. He has long been suspected of violating the prohibition law. It is said he blamed Mayor McNulty for the raid, and expressed the intention of killing him today. Public sentiment is strongly with the officers.

WIDOW FREE ON BOND IN WILL CASE

Mrs. Crawford Waives Preliminary Examination on Charge of Poisoning Her Husband. Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, accused of murdering her husband, Joshua B. Crawford, by poisoning, was released from the Tower Monday morning under a bond of $5,000 to await an investigation by the Fulton Grand Jury. Her bond was signed by Charles E. Jones. Attorneys Burton Smith and Reuben Arnold, for Mrs. Crawford, waived a preliminary examination before Justice of the Peace C. H. Girardeau, and went before Superior Judge W. D. Ellis, where the bond was assessed after an agreement among the attorneys in the celebrated $250,000 will case. Judge Ellis first announced that he could not fix the bond until he had gone into the merits of the case and called upon Solicitor General Hugh

Flames Destroy Home; Fire Chief Hunts Incendiaries

Fire Chief Cummings is investigating a fire which destroyed the residence of W. N. Smith, No. 344 Myrtle street, and damaged the home of L. W. Laurick, No. 516 Myrtle street. Leading to the belief that the blaze was of incendiary origin is the fact that the members of the Smith family all were away from home on a vacation. The interior of the house was aflame when the department arrived, and efforts to check the fire were futile. The Laurick family were aroused from their sleep and were driven into the street in their night clothes.

President Gains 12 Pounds and Coat of Tan on His Vacation

WASHINGTON, July 14.—Tanned by his week in the New Hampshire sun, President Wilson returned to Washington to-day feeling greatly benefited by his vacation. "I had a splendid time in Cornish," said the President, "and I certainly did enjoy it. Dr. Grayson assured me that the motoring and golf did me a great deal of good physically, and I feel much better than when I left Washington."

Fritz Scheff Leaves Her Troupe Stranded

CHICAGO, July 14.—More than 50 New York actors, actresses, chorists and chorus men to-day are stranded in Chicago. They were members of the "Mlle. Modiste" company that closed here Saturday night. The manager of the company left for New York yesterday after failing to raise the railroad fare for the whole company. Fritz Scheff, the star of the show, accompanied by her maid, her auto driver and her chauffeur, went to New York on an extra-fare train.

Mulhall Resents Slur on Character

WASHINGTON, July 14.—Stung by attacks on his character because he sold the correspondence of the National Association of Manufacturers, Colonel Martin M. Mulhall turned on his assailants before the Senate lobby inquiry committee to-day and declared that for two months before the letters were sold to a New York newspaper he attempted to dispose of them without a money consideration. Senator Reed inquired if Mulhall did sell the letters and telegrams. Mulhall closed a direct answer.

GIRL BARES NEW VICE SYSTEM

Young Woman From the Country Says She Was Lured to Resort on Peters Street. As a result of a sensational story told in police court Monday morning by Effie Drummond, a 20-year-old country girl, who was arrested Saturday when the police raided the boarding house of Mrs. John Bell at Fair and Peters streets, Chief Beavers at noon issued a general order for the arrest of Joe North, named by the Drummond girl as a "white slaver."

Mystery in Slaying Of Rich, Eccentric Ware County Farmer

WAYCROSS, July 14.—With the skull badly battered as if from blows inflicted by some heavy instrument, the body of Mack Spain, a wealthy and eccentric bachelor farmer, whose home was west of Waycross, was today found on the edge of a pond, 20 miles from here. He had been dead at least two weeks, almost as long as he had been missing from his home. Both barrels of the shotgun found by him had been discharged. Just how much money Spain had with him when he was murdered and robbed is not known, but neighbors say he never had less than $1,000. Spain's home was originally in North Carolina. He had a valuable farm near Mexico, on the Waycross and Western Railroad. It was his custom to travel to the city to see E. T. Wing, superintendent of the Waycross and Western, and to whom he had become attached. No clue as to who killed him has been found.

Populist Election to Name Bacon Senator

An election will be held in Georgia Tuesday for United States Senator, under an act passed by the Georgia Legislature at its present session. Augustus Octavius Bacon, of Bibb County, present senator, is unopposed and will be named to succeed himself on the bill. This election, while the first to be held in the United States under the new Federal constitutional amendment, is perfunctory, as Senator Bacon was nominated in a Democratic primary some two years ago to succeed himself.

Hubbard, Caruso and Carroll Write Opera

NEW YORK, July 14.—Elliott Hubbard, of East Aurora; Earl Carroll of Pittsburgh, at present identified with the Leo Feist Music Publishing Co., and Enrico Caruso, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, are writing an American opera. There is every prospect that the public will have an opportunity to see and hear the work, as Henry W. Savage, of New York, has made a contract to produce it as soon as it is ready.

I AM SEEKING ONLY TO DO MY DUTY FOR TRUTH AND JUSTICE

The Georgian Secures Remarkable Statement From Chief Witness for Defense in the Trial of Frank. Declares Belief in Conley's Guilt. On Thursday, July 10, The Georgian published the exclusive story of an affidavit in the possession of the lawyers for Leo M. Frank, accused of the murder of Mary Phagan, made by W. H. Mincey, an insurance agent, the substance of which was to the effect that Jim Conley, the negro sweeper at the pencil factory, had confessed that he killed the little girl. In his affidavit, Mincey declared that he met the negro Conley at Electric avenue and Carter street on the afternoon of the murder; that Conley was intoxicated and when approached by Mincey for insurance became angry and exclaimed, threateningly: "I have killed a girl to-day; I don't want to kill nobody else."

Rabbi Opposes Bible Reading in Schools; Bill Likely to Pass

Rabbi David Marx, heading a large delegation, protested to the Senate committee on education Tuesday morning against the bill providing for the reading of the Bible in the public schools. Rabbi Marx, it is understood, objected to the bill on the grounds that such a bill would be unfair to the parents of many children who do not favor compulsory reading of the Bible. Despite the protest, the committee, according to Chairman Foster, will report favorably on the bill. Members of the committee advised the protesting delegation to renew their protest when the bill reaches the house.

SCHOOL TEACHER TELLS REMARKABLE STORY TO THE GEORGIAN Says He Only Desires to Prevent a Crime as Bad as Phagan Slaying

Negro Who Declared He Had Killed a Girl First Said His Name Was Jim Conley, Mincey Declares.

killed some negro woman, and the only thing that seemed peculiar to me was that he said "girl" instead of "woman."

Negro Seemed Suspiciously Nervous

I did not attach much to what he was saying, thinking it was the babbling of a drunken negro; but his restless, quick glancing around and his keeping his eyes on me, and the wild, unnatural glare in his eyes caused me to want to press him further to find out really what he had been doing.

I said: "Let me write your insurance this afternoon," and started down where he was.

He said: "Don't you come down here," speaking this in an angry, threatening manner. This caused me to press him the more.

I said: "No, I will take your application now," and continued.

He said: "I tell you not to come down here."

When he saw I was coming on anyway, he jumped up, and as he went round the corner of the house he said: "I have killed one today and I don't want to kill another."

I said: "Well, one day is enough; that is 365 a year," turned and walked off.

Now, this negro told me his name was Jim Conley. He told me he lived at 172 Rhodes street. I was talking to him somewhere about 4 o'clock in the afternoon of Saturday, April 26. He told me he had killed a girl that day. Again he told me he had killed one that day and he did not want to kill another.

Now, if Jim Conley did not in fact tell me that he killed Mary Phagan on that day, then I don't know what language is, and I am sure I know what language is. I suppose it can be established that Jim Conley was nowhere else than in Atlanta on that day. Mary Phagan was murdered in Atlanta that day.

No Other Girl Slain That Day

So far as is known, no other girl was murdered in Atlanta that day. Now, did Jim Conley not tell me he killed Mary Phagan? If he did not, absolutely, I do not know where I have reasoned out a proposition in algebra, geometry or logic. But I am sure I do know when I have solved a problem.

On Sunday morning after the murder I heard someone buy a 17-year-old girl had been killed the night before and dragged into a basement somewhere, supposed to be a girl of the streets and killed by some rowdies. I knew nothing further of this till Monday morning, passing down Forsyth street by the National Pen and Pencil Factory, I heard some one say "There is the place where the girl was killed," and some men standing there said she was seen at 11 o'clock Saturday night on the corner there. This placed the murder after I had seen and talked to Conley.

But during the day Monday I saw a paper, and as no one about this child's age saw her on Saturday, knowing that she would seek companions of near her age she left the building, I at once decided she had never left the plant after going there.

That morning, passing the factory, I walked in and up the steps to the second floor. Some men walked up to me and asked what I wanted. I told him I wanted to see Mr. Frank.

Mincey Calls at the Factory

He said Mr. Frank was not in, that he could attend to what I wanted.

I told him I wanted to see where that little girl was killed and how many negroes worked there. The man did not want me to look over the building, but told me about the negroes. I asked him what negroes were there on Saturday. He said there were no negroes there on Saturday. I asked him if he was there. He said he was; that it was the day watchman. I asked him what time he left. He said at 11:45.

I said: "That was just a few minutes before that little girl came, then."

He said: "Yes."

I said: "Didn't you see a negro here when you left?"

He said: "No, I told you there were no negroes here; it was holiday and they did not work that day." I kept asking him about negroes and talking till he was out of patience. All this time I kept walking and looking. He followed me everywhere I went. I learned later that the man's name to whom I was talking was Holloway, and he is the only one connected with the plant to whom I ever talked.

My talk with Jim Conley on Saturday afternoon convinced me that he had killed some one, or thought he had; but knowing it was impossible for him to be connected with this unless he was there, I got out of patience with Holloway as much as he was out with me.

I saw everything was disturbed and torn up, and Holloway was mad. I was mad, too. At last I turned on him and told him that little girl never left that building after she came in there, and that some one in the building who knew the building killed her. Things were booming more confused in the building, and after another party with him about a negro being there, I turned and left the building, thoroughly disgusted.

Well, this seemed to me to eliminate Jim Conley, yet his words, acts and looks continued to haunt me as if I had seen a ghost. Well, things looked on, and I worked on. But I believed all the time that there was a missing link somewhere.

Later I saw that some lady saw a negro in the building the day of the murder, but I took no further trouble with it. I did not want to get mixed up in it at all.

Goes to the Police Station

Later, when I learned that a Jim Conley was there on the day of the murder, I one afternoon went down to the police station to see if it was the same Jim Conley I saw the afternoon of the murder.

I did not know any of the detectives, but a very nice, courteous gentleman came out, and I told him I would like to see the negro they had, to see if he was the same I saw on Carter street the day of the murder. He asked me if he seemed excited any way. I said: "Very much so." He told me to come in.

I went in. To the best of my knowledge and belief, this was the negro I talked to the afternoon of the murder.

I got into a conversation with him. Conley looked just the same. The same dark clothes, the same hat, the voice had not lowered down much, the glare had faded from his eyes; but the voice and eyes were there the same.

I tried to make Conley remember me, but he said he had never seen me before; that he was not on Carter street that afternoon; that he did not know anyone on Carter street.

Now, whether the negro was lying or was so drunk he did not

Mincey Tells How He Came to Make His Startling Affidavit

"I wrote Mr. Dorsey a letter, but did not sign my name to it. I asked to not have Jim Conley indicted for anything other than murder, as I did throw his lips that he had killed a girl the afternoon of the murder. I never told any detective or policeman anything."

"As I stated to Mr. Dorsey, my conditions were such that I could not afford to be held as a witness."

er, if that Mincey affidavit ever will be heard from again as a seriously considered piece of evidence in the Phagan case. To my mind it means absolutely nothing. The statement, undoubtedly, was made and sworn to, but the prosecution places no dependence in it and will be able to disprove it if its signer is called as a witness in the case.

It is difficult to understand, of course, how such a statement could be made in good faith. If it was made in good faith, I believe that Mincey was laboring under a delusion. Possibly he was talking to a negro the afternoon of the crime. When I noticed a movement, as I did, to turn Conley away from the little factory girl, the incidents of his conversation with some unidentified colored man took on a form in his excited imagination that made a killing and that the negro was Jim Conley."

Writes Anonymously to Dorsey

Later I wrote Mr. Dorsey a letter, but did not sign my name to it. I asked to not have Jim Conley indicted for anything other than murder, as I had from his own lips that he had killed a girl the afternoon of the murder. I never told any detective or policeman anything. As I stated to Mr. Dorsey, my conditions were such that I could not afford to be caught up there and held as a witness. It was my intention to give the information I had to some one, but who was the proper one and when was the proper time I had not yet decided.

When I noticed a movement, as it seemed, to turn Conley loose, I knew that was not the thing to do, so I went to Mr. Rosser. I told Mr. Rosser I had information I would give him, but I would first have to ask him not to hold me there as a witness, or give out anything to the newspapers. I was assured that I would be safe on this line.

Mr. Rosser told me he would like to hear the statement, no matter whom it was against. That he wanted the murderer of Mary Phagan convicted, no difference who he is. After making the statement he asked me if I objected making the same and swearing to it. I told him I did not. I stepped out in another room and made the statement to be written.

Knows No One in the Case

Now, I know none of the people concerned in this. I saw Jim Conley, I saw one man at the National Pen and Pencil Factory, who I learn is Holloway, I saw Mr. Rosser but once.

I have only one citizen what I believe any true citizen would do. I believe any other citizen would do as I have done. I have faith in the people of Georgia. I suppose I know as many people in Georgia as nearly any other man in the State. There are no people anywhere more generous, more noble, or more fair.

Now so far as I know I have told it the best I can, and I am willing to leave everything to the courts and the people.

If Jim Conley did murder the Mary Phagan, I will not remain quiet so far as what I know and let him make me and you and every other citizen a party to another crime just as bad.

I am at work and had much rather never be called as a witness, but since I have called no power can prevent me from doing my duty as a true citizen.

I have criticized no one and shall not do so; and I, as a citizen of Georgia, claim the right to perform a duty to my State and fellowman unimpeded.

State's Attorney Attacks Affidavit Made by Mincey

Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey, neither the affidavit of W. H. Mincey, insurance solicitor, nor the reported confession of the negro Will Green, who is said to have been the perpetrator of the attack upon Mary Phagan, gave evidence sufficient to shake their conviction of Leo Frank.

It is thought that the State was preparing to change his theory and to ask for the indictment of Jim Conley were laughed at.

"I sincerely doubt," said Mr. Hooper, "whether the affidavit of W. H. Mincey, insurance solicitor, nor the reported confession of the negro Will Green, who is said to have been the perpetrator of the attack upon Mary Phagan, gave evidence sufficient to shake their conviction of Leo Frank."

It is thought that the State was preparing to change his theory and to ask for the indictment of Jim Conley were laughed at.

White Slavery Prison Board Is Made Feby By New Bill

Measure in Georgia Senate Augments War on Traffic in Women and Girls.

A more or less featureless session of the Georgia Senate Monday morning was interrupted by the reading of an invitation to the Senators to participate in an old-fashioned Southern barbecue by the Georgia Club of El Paso, Tex.

The Georgia Senate today passed a bill amending the Georgia Penal Code to provide for the establishment of a white slavery prison.

Fisherman Is Slain; Farmer Under Arrest

HAWKINSVILLE, July 14.—While searching fish baskets Sunday on the Ocmulgee River, about twelve miles south of Hawkinsville, James McGinnery, a well-known farmer, was shot from the opposite side of the river. He died during the afternoon.

McGinnery, a farmer, living five miles from the scene, who, it is alleged, owned the baskets being fished, and because of a previous robbery, was in waiting for any intruders, has been arrested. He denies the charge and claims he can prove an alibi.

Colorado Is Bigger than Imagination

The brush of fancy can't paint upon the canvas of the mind as wonderfully as nature's titanic hands have built here in the birth-spot of the mighty Rockies.

But Colorado is a condition as well as a picture. You'll not only see a country different from any under the stars, but you'll be a different human the moment you stand in the shadows of her majestic ranges and bathe your worn and sluggish city-dwelt being in the vital, sparkling, clean, clear, sweet air of the great American Highlands.

WOMAN IN POISON MYSTERY OUT ON BOND COUNTRY GIRL CHARGES WHITE SLAVERY RING

Mincey Affidavit Attacked by Prosecution

STATE STILL CONFIDENT OF CASE

Mystery in Slaying of Rich, Eccentric Ware County Farmer

WACROSS, July 14.—With the skull badly battered as if from blows inflicted by some heavy instrument, the body of Mack Spain, a wealthy and eccentric bachelor farmer, whose home was west of Wacross, was today found on the edge of a pond 20 miles from here. He had been dead at least two weeks, almost as long as he had been missing from his home. The barrels of the shotgun found by him had been discharged.

Just how much money Spain had with him when he was murdered and robbed is not known. But neighbors say he never had less than $1,000.

Spain's home was originally in North Carolina. He had a valuable farm near Mexico, on the Wacross and Western Railroad. It was his expressed will that all his property go to E. T. Wing, superintendent of the Wacross and Western, and to whom he had become attached. No clue as to who killed him has been found.

WISDOM PUTS JOY IN GEORGIA LEGISLATURE

Louis E. Wisdom, of Forsyth.

As a result of a sensational story told in police court Monday morning by Eric Drummond, a 20-year-old country girl, who was arrested Saturday when the police raided the boarding house of Mrs. Lulu Bell, at Fair and Peters streets, Chief Beavers at noon issued a general order for the arrest of Joe North, named by the Drummond girl as a "white slaver."

The girl charges that North, after he had promised to marry her, lured her to the Bell woman's place, and after giving her liquor until she was stupefied forced her into the companionship of men whom he and the Bell woman had brought to the place.

Chief Beavers thinks the testimony of the Drummond girl forms an important link in the chain of evidence which is being "strung" together by the vice ring said to exist in Atlanta.

GRAFFORD WILL CASE GO GRAND JURY

Widow Waives Preliminary Examination After Surrendering to Police Late at Night.

Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, accused of murdering her husband, Joshua B. Crawford, by poisoning, was released from the Tower Monday morning under a bond of $6,250 to await an investigation by the Fulton Grand Jury. Her bond was signed by Charles C. Jones.

Attorneys Burton Smith and Reuben Arnold, for Mrs. Crawford, waived a preliminary examination before Justice of the Peace C. H. Girardus, and went before Superior Judge W. D. Ellis, where the bond was assessed after an agreement among the attorneys in the celebrated $125,000 will case.

Judge Ellis first announced that he could not fix the bond until he had gone into the merits of the case and called upon Solicitor General Hugh S. Dorsey to represent the State. The Solicitor stated that he would be disqualified because his law firm was interested, and the court was unable to find an attorney to act as Solicitor Pro Tem who had not been interested in it during the last four years.

Story of Negro Who Says He Was Eyewitness of Slaying Disbelieved by Solicitor.

Solicitor General Hugh S. Dorsey and Attorney Frank H. Hooper, engaged in the prosecution of Leo Mincey, were induced Monday to break the silence they have maintained since grilling the negro Jim Conley last week. They made their public comments on the sensational developments of the last few days in the Phagan murder mystery.

Both declared emphatically that neither the affidavit of W. H. Mincey, insurance solicitor, nor the reported confession of the negro Will Green, who is said to have been an eyewitness of the attack upon Mary Phagan, gave evidence sufficient to make their conviction of Leo Frank's guilt.

Rumors that the State was preparing to change its theory and to ask for the indictment of Jim Conley were laughed at.

Girl Shoots Father For Abusing Mother

MACON, July 14.—Little hope is entertained today for the recovery of A. S. Griffin, of Jeffersonville, who was shot at that place, 20 miles from here, and prostrated a pistol. As Griffin started toward her with arm uplifted she fired.

The Laudrick family were aroused from their sleep and were driven into the street in their night clothes.

POlice HUNT VICE BAND'S LEADER

Raid Frees Victim of Alleged Gang From a Resort on Peters Street.

The testimony of the girl indicates, the police believe, that North merely was the agent of men higher up, and that he acted on their instructions in luring the Drummond girl, and possibly others, to the Bell woman's place.

Tells All to Court.

The chief has announced that every phase of the girl's story will be investigated thoroughly. Some of the things she has told dovetail into statements made by other girls who have been lured to ruin by the band which is alleged to have its headquarters in Atlanta.

Next to Youngest Member

Though, Lives Every Inch Up to His Name.

If one just a little younger member of the Georgia Legislature had not beaten Louis E. Wisdom of Forsyth to it, Wisdom would be the "baby" of the House this year. He is slightly more than 22.

This Wisdom is only next to the youngest member, he really looks the part of the House "baby" more so by than anybody else, and generally he gets credit for being the juvenile.

He emphatically and beyond dispute is the joy of the House of Representatives.

And Wisdom can do more than smile. He is chairman of the big committee on Special Judiciary and is a worker always on the job. In his home county of Forsyth he is regarded as one of the generally young men of the county, and one can plainly hear the music of the spheres'—and beyond dispute is the joy of the House of Representatives.

Meridian Postmaster Is Held as Embezzler

MERIDIAN, MISS., July 14.—W. J. Price, postmaster at Meridian, was arrested Sunday charged with embezzlement of postal funds. He waived preliminary hearing and was bound over to await action of the Federal Grand Jury. Bond was fixed at $5,000, which he made.

The arrest followed an investigation of two weeks conducted by Post-office Inspector Haas and assistants, the warrant being sworn out before District Attorney R. C. Lee at Jackson. Funds alleged to have been appropriated are said to be about $5,000.

Predicts Epidemic of Suicide by Bichloride

NEW YORK, July 14.—"We are approaching another suicide epidemic owing to the promiscuousness with which bichloride of mercury tablets are sold," said Dr. C. Dickman, president of the State Board of Pharmacy, to-day. "Within a month over 30 bichloride poisonings have been reported. The board has recommended a State law prohibiting the sale of these except by prescription."

James E. Winterbottom, of the Board of Coroners, said suicide was greatly a matter of suggestion!

Fritz Scheff Leaves Her Troupe Stranded

CHICAGO, July 14.—More than 60 New York actors, choruses, chorists and chorus men to-day are stranded in Chicago. They were members of the "Mlle. Modiste" company that closed here Saturday night. The manager of the company left for New York yesterday after failing to raise the railroad fare for the whole company.

Fritz Scheff, the star of the show accompanied by her maid, her automobile and her chauffeur, went to New York on an extra-fast train.

President Gains 12 Pounds and Coat of Tan on His Vacation

WASHINGTON, July 14.—Tanned by his week in the New Hampshire sun, President Wilson returned to Washington to-day feeling greatly benefited by his vacation.

"I had a splendid time in Cornish," said the President, "and I certainly did enjoy it. Dr. Grayson assured me that the motor and golf did me a great deal of good physically, and I feel much better than when I left Washington."

The President gained twelve pounds during his week away from Washington.

Hubbard, Caruso and Carroll Write Opera

NEW YORK, July 14.—Elliott Hubbard, of East Aurora; Ears Carroll, of Pittsburg, at present identified with the Leo Pelet Music Publishing Co., and Enrico Caruso, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, are writing an American opera.

There is every prospect that the public will have an opportunity to see and hear the work, as Henry W. Savage, of New York, has made a contract to produce it as soon as it is ready.

The street followed an investigation of two weeks conducted by Post-office Inspector Haas and assistants, the warrant being sworn out before District Attorney R. C. Lee at Jackson. Funds alleged to have been appropriated are said to be about $5,000.

X-Ray Wizard Dies Martyr to Science

HARTFORD, CONN., July 14.—Burton E. Baker, known as an "X-ray wizard" and head of an experimental station here, is dead after a long illness, induced from experimentation on his own body with X-rays. He went to New York City last fall and took the radium cure under Dr. Abbe, but failed to rally.

Baker had built up a reputation in his work that made him known all over the United States and in Europe.

ALTHOUGH IN HUGE DRAG FINE

Five White Men and Dozen Negro Arrested in Raid Convicted in Court.

The police crusade against vice resulted Monday afternoon in the conviction and fining of five white men and twelve negroes who were caught in a raid on a negro dive at 76 Chestnut avenue early Sunday morning. Judge Boyles sharply scored the existence of such alleged dives, and declared every effort must be put forth to close them. Chief Beavers has ordered the house closed immediately.

The trial created a stir in police court, as eight of the negroes were chauffeurs for some of the most prominent men in Atlanta, who were on hand to make bond for them.

The white men, who were fined $15.75 each are C. F. Smith, clerk, 54 Angler avenue; S. B. Moore, clerk, of 131 South Pryor street; A. B. Arnold, of Macon; J. W. Little, of Macon, and C. A. King, of 218 North Jackson street.

Eight of the negro men were fined $15.75 each.

Ebene Lester, who it is alleged, runs the place; Henry Lester, her husband, and Theresa Gilbert, and Minnie Jones, two other negro women implicated, were bound over to the Superior Court under $500 bond each.

General Order Issued.

As a result of a sensational story told in police court Monday morning by Ethel Drummond, a 20-year-old country girl, who was arrested Saturday, when the police raided the boarding-house of Mrs. Lulu Bell, at Fair and Peters streets, Chief Beavers at once issued a general order which is being around members of the vice ring said to exist in Atlanta.

The testimony of the girl indicates the police believe that North street was the agent of men higher up, and that he acted on their instructions in luring the drummond girl, and possibly others, to the Bell woman's place.

Tells All to Court.

The chief has announced that every phase of the girl's story will be investigated thoroughly. Some of the allegations she had told dovetail into things made by other girls who have testified to ruin by the hand which is alleged to have his headquarters in Atlanta.

The story of the drummond girl was one of the most astounding and dramatic told since Chief Beavers started his vice probe. She had heard the workings of what she called "the vice ring" in Atlanta, and she had heard lots about Atlanta and what it is down there that Rockmont, and thought the people in Atlanta would be so good and kind to me as they were in my little home town.

The Georgian Secures Remarkable Statement From Chief Witness for Defense in the Trial of Frank. Declares Belief in Conley's Guilt.

On Thursday, July 10, The Georgian published the exclusive story of an affidavit in the possession of the lawyers for Leo M. Frank, accused of the murder of Mary Phagan, made by W. H. Mincey, an insurance agent, the substance of which was to the effect that Jim Conley, the negro sweeper at the pencil factory, had confessed that he killed the little girl.

In his affidavit, Mincey declared that he met the negro Conley at Electric avenue and Carter street on the afternoon of the murder; that Conley was intoxicated and when approached by Mincey for insurance became angry and exclaimed, threateningly: "I have killed a girl-to-day; I don't want to kill nobody else."

The Georgian has now secured from Mincey a complete statement of his connection with the Phagan case. It is as follows:

By W. H. MINCEY

If Jim Conley told the truth at a time he was most likely to do so, that is, when he was drunk, then I know he killed Mary Phagan, and I have known this for weeks.

I am not an insurance agent, as some of the papers have me, but I am a teacher by profession. I am a graduate of a branch of the State University, A. B. degree, hold a Georgia State Teacher's license, and have been teaching in Georgia every year for the past twenty-five years. I am now teaching. But during my vacation I worked for an insurance company in Atlanta for ten weeks.

By this company I was assigned a territory west of the Terminal Station. Saturday, April 26, I worked in the office till noon. In the afternoon I went out on Peachtree street and saw the parade. After the parade I went over beyond Davis street on "back calls" and to make an effort to close some "prospects" I had.

I passed down Rhodes street, and when I turned back, I had calls to make back on Electric avenue and Mitchell street. From Rhodes street there is a trailway up a bluff to the junction of Carter street and Electric avenue. I went up this.

Passing the house that sits just on the brow of this bluff I noticed a negro man sitting with his head leaning down on his chest as if asleep. I passed on some twenty feet when this negro raised his head and said: "Who is that?" The sharp, quick, excited manner in which he said this attracted my attention. A negro woman passing by Conley said, "It is a policy man," meaning an insurance man.

Said He Was Jim Conley

I stopped and got into a conversation with the negro about insurance. He told me his name was Jim Conley. He told me he lived at 172 Rhodes street. I saw at once there was something wrong with him. He was nervous and excited, and tried to put me off and get rid of me by telling me to come to 172 Rhodes street next week and he would take insurance. But as the negro had excited my curiosity by his incoherent, scattering way of talking and his nervous and excited manner, I remained standing there firing questions at him.

He told me he was in trouble. I asked him if he had had him in jail or the stockade. He said no, but he was expecting to be in jail and that right away. I asked him what for.

He said: "Murder, I killed a girl today."

I said: "Oh, I see! You are Jack the Ripper."

The thought that occurred to me was that he meant he had

Negro Who Declared He Had Killed a Girl First Said His Name Was Jim Conley, Mincey Declares.

...killed some negro woman, and the only thing that seemed peculiar to me was that he said 'girl' instead of 'woman.' I said: 'Why did you kill her?' He began to get angry and I saw he was drunk. He said: 'Now, that is for me to know and you to find out.'

Negro Seemed Suspiciously Nervous

I did not attach much to what he was saying, thinking it was the babbling of a drunken negro, but his restless, quick glancing around and his keeping his eyes on me, and the wild, unnatural glare in his eyes caused me to want to press him further to find out really what he had been doing.

He said: 'Let me write you insurance this afternoon,' and started down to where he was living. He said: 'Don't you come down here,' speaking this in an angry, threatening manner. 'This caused me to press him the more.'

I said: 'No, I will take your application now,' and continued. He said: 'I tell you not to come down here.'

When he saw I was coming on anyway, he jumped up, and as he went round the corner of the house he said: 'I have killed one today and I don't want to kill another.'

I said: 'Well, one day is enough; that is 365 a year,' and walked off. Now, this negro told me his name was Jim Conley. He told me he lived at 172 Rhodes street. I was talking to him somewhere about 4 o'clock in the afternoon of Saturday, April 26. He told me he had killed a girl that day. Again he told me he had killed that day and he did not want to kill another.

Now, if Jim Conley did not in fact tell me that he killed Mary Phagan on that day, then I don't know what language is, and I am sure I know what language is. If I suppose it can be established that Jim Conley was nowhere else than in Atlanta on that day, Mary Phagan was murdered in Atlanta that day.

No Other Girl Slain That Day

So far as is known, no other girl was murdered in Atlanta that day. Now, did Jim Conley not tell me he killed Mary Phagan? If he did not, absolutely, I do not know when I have reasoned out a proposition in algebra, geometry or logic. But I am sure I do know when I have solved a problem.

On Sunday morning after the murder I heard someone say a 17-year-old girl had been killed the night before and dragged into a basement somewhere, supposed to be a girl of the streets and killed by some rowdies. I knew nothing further of this till Monday morning, passing down Forsyth street by the National Penicil Factory. I heard some one say 'This is the place where the girl was killed,' and some men standing there said she was seen at 11 o'clock Saturday night on the corner there. This placed the murder after I had seen and talked to Conley.

But during the day Monday I saw a paper, and as no one about this child's age saw her on Saturday, I kept asking him who would seek companions of her near her age she left the building. I at once decided she had never left the plant after going there. Tuesday morning, passing the factory, I walked in and up the stairs to the second floor. Some men walked up to me and asked what I wanted. I told him I wanted to see Mr. Frank.

Mincey Calls at the Factory

He said Mr. Frank was not in, but that he could attend to what I wanted. I told him I wanted to see where that little girl was killed and how many negroes worked there. The man did not want me to look over the building, but told me about the negroes. I asked him what negroes were there on Saturday? He said there were no negroes there on Saturday. I asked him if he was there. He said he was; that he was the day watchman. I asked him what time he left. He said at 11:45.

I said: 'That was just a few minutes before that little girl came, then?' He said: 'Yes.'

I said: 'Didn't you see a negro here when you left?' He said: 'No. I was not there on Saturday. I kept asking him about negroes and talking till he was out of patience. All this time I kept walking and looking. He followed me everywhere. I learned later that the man's name to whom I was talking was Holloway, and he is the only one connected with the plant to whom I ever talked.

My talk with Jim Conley on Saturday afternoon convinced me that he had killed some one, or thought he had; but knowing it was impossible for him to be connected with this unless he was there, I got out of patience with Holloway as much as he was out with me.

I saw everything was disturbed and torn up, and Holloway was mad. I was mad, too. At last I turned on him and told him that that little girl never left that building after she came in there, and that some one in the building who knew the building killed her. Things were becoming more confused in the building, and after another party with him about a negro being there, I turned and left the building, thoroughly disgusted.

Well, this seemed to me to eliminate Jim Conley, yet his words, acts and looks continued to haunt me as if I had seen a ghost. Well, things cooled on, and I worked him. But I believed all the time that there was a missing link somewhere.

Later I saw that some lady saw a negro in the building the day of the murder, but I took no further trouble with it. I did not want to get mixed up in it at all.

Goes to the Police Station

Later, when I learned that a Jim Conley was there on the day of the murder, I one afternoon went down to the police station to see if this was the same Jim Conley I saw the afternoon of the murder.

I did not know any of the detectives, but a very nice, courteous gentleman came out, and I told him I would like to see the negro they had, to see if he was the same I saw on Carter street the day of the murder. He asked me if he seemed excited any way. I said: 'Very much so.' He told me to come in.

I went in. To the best of my knowledge and belief, this was the negro I talked to the afternoon of the murder.

I got into a conversation with him. Conley looked just the same. The same dark clothes, the same hat; the voice had just lowered down much, the glare had faded from his eyes; but the voice and eyes were not the same.

I tried to make Conley remember me, but he said he had never seen me before; that he was not on Carter street that afternoon; that he did not know anyone on Carter street.

Now, whether the negro was lying or was so drunk he did not

Mincey Tells How He Came to Make His Startling Affidavit

'I wrote Mr. Dorsey a letter, but did not sign my name to it. I asked to not have Jim Conley indicted for anything other than murder, as I had it from his lips that he had killed a girl the afternoon of the murder. I never told any detective or policeman anything.

Later to Mr. Dorsey, my conditions were such that I could not afford to be held as a witness.

When I was convinced that Mincey was going to deny everything, I said: 'Jim, you were pretty drunk that afternoon, were you not?' He said he had been drinking, but was not drunk. At this juncture one of the gentlemen in the room got up and opened the door. He said nothing, but I understood this to be a signal for me to go; and they had been as nice to me as I could have asked, so I said: 'That is all. I only wished to see him.' I told the detectives nothing; I just walked in and had a few words with Conley and walked out. I saw they were at something. I did not know what, but I did not care to 'butt in.' On the outside of the room some newspaper boys came up to me at once and began to ask me questions, but the newspaper is the last place I want to get into, and I said: 'Nothing for the papers.' I walked down

'It was my intention to give the information I had to someone, but who was the proper one and what was the proper time I had not decided. 'When I noticed a movement to turn Conley loose, I went to Mr. Rosser. Mr. Rosser told me he would like to hear the statement, no matter what was against it; that he wanted the murderer of Mary Phagan convicted, no difference who he is. I stepped out into another room and made the statement.'

er, if that Mincey affidavit ever will be heard from again as a seriously considered piece of evidence in the Phagan case. To my mind it means absolutely nothing. The statement, undoubtedly, was made and sworn to, but the prosecution places no dependence in it and will be able to disprove it if its signer is called as a witness to the case.

Writes Anonymously to Dorsey

Later I wrote Mr. Dorsey a letter, but did not sign my name to it. I asked to not have Jim Conley indicted for anything other than murder, as I had it from his own lips that he had killed a girl the afternoon of the murder. I never told any detective or policeman anything. As I stated to Mr. Dorsey, my conditions were such that I could not afford to be caught up there and held as a witness. It was my intention to give the information I had to someone, but who was the proper one and when was the proper time I had not yet decided.

When I noticed a movement, as it seemed, to turn Conley loose, I knew that was not the thing to do, so I went to Mr. Rosser. I told Mr. Rosser I had information I would give him, but I would not say anything to the newspapers. I was assured that I would be safe on this line.

Mr. Rosser told me he would like to hear the statement, no matter what it was against. That he wanted the murderer of Mary Phagan convicted, no difference who he is. After making the statement he asked me if I objected making the same and swearing to it. I told him I did not. I stepped out in another room and made the statement to be written.

Knows No One in the Case

Now, I know none of the people concerned in this. I saw Jim Conley, I saw one man at the National Penicil Factory, who I learn is Holloway, I saw Mr. Rosser, but I believe any true citizen would do. I believe any other citizen would do as I have done. I have faith in the people of Georgia. I suppose I know as many people in Georgia as nearly any other man in the State. There are no people anywhere more generous, more noble, or more fair.

Now so far as I know I have told it the best I can, and I am willing to leave everything to the courts and the people.

If Jim Conley did murder little Mary Phagan, I will not remain quiet so far as what I know and let him make me and you and every other citizen a party to another crime just as bad.

I am at work and had much rather never be called as a witness, but should I be called no power can prevent me from doing my duty as a true citizen.

I have criticized no one and shall not do so; and I, as a citizen of Georgia, claim the right to perform a duty to my State and fellowman unmolested.

W. H. Mincey
State's Attorney Attacks Affidavit Made by Mincey

Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey and Attorney Frank A. Hooper, engaged in the prosecution of Leo M. Frank, were induced Monday to break the silence they have maintained since getting the negro Jim Conley's testimony. They made their first public comments on the sensational developments of the last few days in the Phagan murder mystery. Both declared emphatically that neither the affidavit of W. H. Mincey, insurance solicitor, nor the reported confession of the negro will Green, who is said to have been an eyewitness of the attack upon Mary Phagan, gave evidence sufficient to shake their conviction of Leo Frank's guilt.

SCHOOL TEACHER TELLS REMARKABLE STORY TO THE GEORGIAN Says He Only Desires to Prevent a Crime as Bad as Phagan Slaying

Negro Who Declared He Had Killed a Girl First Said His Name Was Jim Conley, Mincey Declares.

killed some negro woman, and the only thing that seemed peculiar to me was that he said "girl" instead of "woman."

I said: "Why did you kill her?"

He began to get angry and I saw he was drunk.

I said: "Now, that is for me to know and you to find out."

Negro Seemed Suspiciously Nervous

I did not attach much to what he was saying, thinking it was the babbling of a drunken negro; but his restless, quick glancing around and his keeping his eyes on me, and the wild, unnatural glare in his eyes caused me to want to press him further to find out really what he had been doing.

I said: "Let me write your insurance this afternoon," and started down to where he was.

He said: "Don't you come down here," speaking this in an angry, threatening manner. This caused me to press him the more.

I said: "No, I will take your application now," and continued.

He said: "I tell you not to come down here."

When he saw I was coming on anyway, he jumped up, and as he went round the corner of the house he said: "I have killed one to-day and I don't want to kill another."

I said: "Well, one a day is enough; that is 365 a year," turned and walked off.

Now, this negro told me his name was Jim Conley. He told me he lived at 172 Rhodes street. I was talking to him somewhere about 4 o'clock in the afternoon of Saturday, April 26. He told me he had killed a girl that day. Again he told me he had killed one that day and he did not want to kill another.

Now, if Jim Conley did not in fact tell me that he killed Mary Phagan on that day, then I don't know what language is, and I am sure I know what language is. I suppose it can be established that Jim Conley was nowhere else than in Atlanta on that day. Mary Phagan was murdered in Atlanta that day.

No Other Girl Slain That Day

So far as is known, no other girl was murdered in Atlanta that day. Now, did Jim Conley not tell me he killed Mary Phagan? If he did not, absolutely, I do not know when I have reasoned out a proposition in algebra, geometry or logic. But I am sure I do know when I have solved a problem.

On Sunday morning after the murder I heard someone say a 17-year-old girl had been killed the night before and dragged into a basement somewhere, supposed to be a girl of the streets and killed by some rascal who was nothing further of this till Monday morning, passing down Forsyth street by the National Pencil Factory, I heard some one say "There is the place where the girl was killed," and some man standing there said she was seen at 11 o'clock Saturday night on the corner here. This placed the murder after I had seen and talked to Conley.

But during the day Monday I saw a paper, and as no one about this child's age saw her on Saturday, knowing that she killed her companion of near her age had she left the building, I at once decided she had never left the plant after going there.

Tuesday morning, passing the factory, I walked in and up the steps to the second floor. Some man walked up to me and asked what I wanted. I told him I wanted to see Mr. Frank.

Mincey Calls at the Factory

He said Mr. Frank was not in, that he could attend to what I wanted.

I told him I wanted to see where that little girl was killed and how many negroes worked there. The man did not want me to look over the building, but told me the negroes. I asked him what negroes were there on Saturday. He said there were no negroes there on Saturday. I asked him if he was there. He said he was; that he was at the day watchman. I asked him what time he left. He said at 11:45.

I said: "That was just a few minutes before that little girl came, then."

He said: "Yes."

I said: "Didn't you see a negro here when you left?"

He said: "No, I told you there were no negroes here; it was holiday and they did not work that day." I kept asking him about negroes and talking till he was out of patience. All this time I kept walking and looking. He followed me everywhere I went. I learned later that the man's name to whom I was talking is Holloway, and he is the only one connected with the plant to whom I ever talked.

My talk with Jim Conley on Saturday afternoon convinced me that he had killed some one, or thought he had; but knowing it was impossible for him to be connected with this unless he was there, I got out of patience with Holloway as much as he was out with me.

I saw everything was disturbed and torn up, and Holloway was mad. I was mad, too. At last I turned on him and told him that that little girl never left that building after she came in there, and that some one in the building who knew the building killed her. Things were becoming more confused in the building, and after another parley with him about a negro being there, I turned and left the building, thoroughly disgusted.

Well, this seemed to me to eliminate Jim Conley, yet his words, acts and looks continued to haunt me as if I had seen a ghost. Well, things rocked on, and I worked on. But I believed all the time that there was a missing link somewhere.

Later I saw that some lady saw a negro in the building the day of the murder, but I took no further trouble with it. I did not want to get mixed up in it at all.

Goes to the Police Station

Later, when I learned that a Jim Conley was there on the day of the murder, I one afternoon went down to the police station to see if this was the same Jim Conley I saw the afternoon of the murder.

I did not know any of the detectives, but a very nice, courteous gentleman came out, and I told him I would like to see the negro they had, to see if he was the same I saw on Carter street the day of the murder. He asked me if he seemed excited any way. I said: "Very much so." He told me to come in.

I went in. "What's the best of my knowledge and belief, just the negro I talked to the afternoon of the murder," he said.

I got into a conversation with him. Conley looked just the same. The same dark clothes, the same hat; the voice had melted down much, the glare had faded from his eyes; but the voice and eyes were there the same.

I tried to make Conley remember me, but he said he had never seen me before; that he was not on Carter street that afternoon; that he did not know anyone on Carter street.

Now, whether the negro was lying or was so drunk he did not

Mincey Tells How He Came to Make His Startling Affidavit

"I wrote Mr. Dorsey a letter, but did not sign my name to it. I asked to not have Jim Conley indicted for anything other than murder, as I had from his lips that he had killed a girl the afternoon of the murder. I never told any detective or policeman anything.

As I stated to Mr. Dorsey, my conditions were such that I could not afford to be held as a witness.

remember, I don't know; but it is the one or the other. I did not tell him he was the negro; I told him he looked like the negro.

When I was convinced that Conley was going to deny everything, I said: "Jim, you were pretty drunk that afternoon, were you not?" He said he had been drinking, but was not drunk. At this juncture one of the gentlemen in the room got up and opened the door. He said nothing, but I understood this to be a signal for me to go; and they had been as nice to me as I could have asked, so I said: "That is all, I only wished to see him." I told the detectives nothing; I just walked in and had a few words with Conley and walked out. I saw they were at something. I did not know what, but I did not care to "butt in." On the outside of the room some newspaper boys came up to me at once and began to ask me questions, but the newspaper is the last place I want to get into, and I said: "Nothing for the papers." I walked down.

Writes Anonymously to Dorsey

Later I wrote Mr. Dorsey a letter, but did not sign my name to it. I asked to not have Jim Conley indicted for anything other than murder, as I had from his own lips that he had killed a girl the afternoon of the murder. I never told any detective or policeman anything. As I stated to Mr. Dorsey, my conditions were such that I could not afford to be caught up there and held as a witness. It was my intention to give the information I had to some one, but who was the proper one and when was the proper time I had not yet decided.

When I noticed a movement, as it seemed, to turn Conley loose, I knew that was not the thing to do, so I went to Mr. Rosser. I told Mr. Rosser I had information I would give him, but I would first have to ask him not to hold me there as a witness, or give out anything to the newspapers. I was assured that I would be safe on this line.

Mr. Rosser told me he would like to hear the statement, no matter whom it was against. That he wanted the murderer of Mary Phagan convicted, no difference who he is. After making the statement he asked me if I objected making the same and swearing to it. I told him I did not. I stepped out in another room and made the statement to be written.

Knows No One in the Case

Now, I know none of the people concerned in this. I saw Jim Conley, I saw one man at the National Pencil Factory, who I learn is Holloway, I saw Mr. Rosser, but once.

I have only done what I believe any true citizen would do. I believe any other citizen would do as I have done. I have faith in the people of Georgia. I suppose I know as many people in Georgia as nearly any other man in the State. There are no people anywhere more generous, more noble, or more fair.

Now so far as I know I have told it the best I can, and I am willing to leave everything to the courts and the people.

If Jim Conley did murder little Mary Phagan, I will not remain quiet so far as what I know and let him make me and you and every other citizen a party to another crime just as bad.

I am at work and I had much rather be called as a witness, but should be called no power can prevent me from doing my duty as a true citizen.

I have criticized no one and shall not do so; and I, as a citizen of Georgia, claim the right to perform a duty to my State and fellowman unmolested.

W. S. Mincey
State's Attorney Attacks Affidavit Made by Mincey

Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey and Attorney Frank A. Hooper, engaged in the prosecution of Leo M. Frank, were induced Monday to treat the stigma, they have maintained since, that the negro Jim Conley had written the affidavit which led to the conviction of Leo Frank, comments on the sensational developments of the last few days in the Phagan murder mystery.

Both declared emphatically that neither the affidavit of W. S. Mincey, insurance solicitor, nor the alleged confession of the negro Will Green, who is said to have been in the vicinity of the attack upon Mary Phagan, gave evidence sufficient to justify the conviction of Leo Frank.

Rumors that the State was preparing to change its theory and to ask for the indictment of Jim Conley were laughed at. "I sincerely doubt," said Mr. Hooper, "that Mincey's affidavit was ever used as evidence against Frank."

"It was my intention to give the information I had to someone, but who was the proper one and when was the proper time I had not decided.

"When I noticed a movement to turn Conley loose, I went to Mr. Rosser. Mr. Rosser told me he would like to hear the statement, no matter whom it was against; that he wanted the murderer of Mary Phagan convicted, no difference who he is. I stepped out into another room and made the statement."

er. That if Mincey's affidavit ever will be heard from again as a seriously considered piece of evidence in the Phagan case, by my mind it means absolutely nothing; and Mincey, undoubtedly, was made and sworn to, but the prosecution places no dependence on it and will be able to disprove it if its signer is called as a witness in the case.

It is difficult to understand, of course, how such a statement could be made in good faith. If it was made in good faith, I believe that Mincey was laboring under a delusion. Possibly he was talking to the negro afternoon of the crime.

Little factory, the incidents of his conversation with some unidentified colored man took on a form in his excited imagination, and he believed that this negro had told of killing and by statements from negro women who are said to have heard the conversation between Conley and Mincey in which the negro is quoted as boasting:

"I killed a girl to-day; I don't want to kill anybody else."

Much depends on the testimony of the negro, Will Green, who has been charged with the half-brother of the negro, and is now believed to be in the hands of detectives in Birmingham, Ala. The report that he had declared he had been an eyewitness of the attack upon Mary Phagan and had asserted that it was a negro who was guilty of the crime gave weight for some time to the possibility that direct evidence would be produced at the trial of Leo Frank.

Will Green entered the case the evidence against both Frank and Lee Green is circumstantial. If Green sticks to the story he is said to have told to companions, it will throw the bulk of the dependence upon the testimony of Conley upon his evidence.

Will Green, who is said to have been a companion, who was partially intoxicated when he was talking to the girl, Green re-narrated, he said, but the other negro started toward the girl and Green fled. The next morning he was arrested and taken to St. Louis. It was at this city the hunt for him began.

MINEY TELLS OF CONFESSION

GIVES FIRST COMPLETE STORY OF HIS AFFIDAVIT

FREE ON BOND IN WILL CASE.

Mrs. Crawford Waives Preliminary Examination on Charge of Poisoning Her Husband.

Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, accused of murdering her husband, Joshua B. Crawford, by poisoning, was released from the Tower Monday morning under a bond of $4,500 to await an investigation by the Fulton Grand Jury. Her bond was signed by Charles C. Jones.

Judge Ellis first announced that he could not fix the bond until he had gone into the merits of the case and called upon Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey to represent the State. The Solicitor stated that he would be disqualified because his law firm was interested in the Fulton Grand Jury. He was unable to find an attorney to act as Solicitor Pro Tem who had not been interested in it during the last four years.

Lawyer Reisch Agreement. The case would have been postponed until Wednesday had not the attorneys reached an agreement in order that the civil side could be resumed Tuesday morning.

Deputy Sheriff Phemie Minter went to jail with the bond for Mrs. Crawford, and later returned with an order for her release.

No further criminal action will be taken, according to Attorney J. B. Janice, for the belief that until the next meeting of the Grand Jury, which probably will be the latter part of this week.

Mrs. Crawford's release followed her unexpected return to the city at 2 o'clock Sunday morning from Tucker, Ga., where she had gone Saturday to visit friends. She was driven in to Atlanta in a buggy by John Cox, of Attorney Reuben Attkoff's office.

Cave Set Up at Tower. Upon her arrival in the city, she went first to her home on West Peachtree street, and secured a few minutes' rest. She was awakened the jailer at the Tower and surrendered herself. She was quartered in the hospital ward at the jail during her incarceration.

Her visit to Tucker was to Mrs. Clemmie Johnson, who lived with the Crawfords before the death of Joshua B. Crawford. Mrs. Crawford said that Mrs. Johnson was to be an important witness at the hearing before an auditor and that she visited her to arrange for her coming to Atlanta. She will be an important witness of Mrs. Crawford, according to her attorneys, to show that the wife never administered poison, or even medicine, to her husband.

17 CAUGHT IN WIDE DRAG FINED

Five White Men and Dozen Negroes Arrested in Raid on Convicted in Court.

The police crusade against vice resumed Monday afternoon in the conviction and fining of five white men and twelve negroes who were caught in a raid on a negro dive at 78 Chestnut avenue early Sunday morning. Judge Broyles sharply rebuked the existence of such alleged dives, and declared every effort must be put forth to close them. Chief Beavers has ordered the house closed immediately.

The trial created a stir in police court, as eight of the negroes were chauffeurs for some of the most prominent men in Atlanta, who were on hand to make bond for them.

The white men, who were fined $15.75 each, are C. F. Smith, clerk of 84 North Peachtree street; S. B. Moore, clerk of 131 South York street; A. B. Arnold, of Macon; J. W. Little, of Macon; A. D. Kirk, of 318 North Jackson street.

Eight of the negro men were fined $17.50 each. They are: Elmer Lester, who, it is alleged, runs the place; Henry Lester, her husband; Theresa Gilbert and Minnie Jones, two other negro women implicated, were bound over to the Superior Court under $500 bond each.

General Order Issued. As a result of a sensational story told in police court Monday morning by Edie Drummond, a 29-year-old country girl, who was arrested Saturday when the police raided the boarding house of Mrs. Lulu Bell, at Fair and Peters streets, Chief Beavers at once issued a general order for the arrest of Joe North, named by the Drummond girl as a "white slaver."

The girl charges that North, after he had promised to marry her, lured her to the Bell woman's place, and after having liquor until she was stupefied, forced her into the companionship of men whom he and the Bell woman had brought to the place.

Chief Beavers thinks the testimony of the Drummond girl forms an important link in the chain of evidence he is weaving around members of the vice ring said to exist in Atlanta. The testimony of the girl indicates, the police believe, that North merely was the agent of men higher up, and that he acted on their instructions in luring the Drummond girl, and possibly others, to the Bell woman's place.

Tells All to Court. The Chief has announced that every phase of the girl's story will be investigated thoroughly. Some of the things she has told dovetail into Continued on Page 2, Column 1.

I AM SEEKING ONLY TO DO MY DUTY FOR TRUTH AND JUSTICE

The Georgian Secures Remarkable Statement From Chief Witness for Defense in the Trial of Frank. Declares Belief in Conley's Guilt.

On Thursday, July 10, The Georgian published the exclusive story of an affidavit in the possession of the lawyers for Leo M. Frank, accused of the murder of Mary Phagan, made by W. H. Mincey, an insurance agent, the substance of which was to the effect that Jim Conley, the negro sweeper at the pencil factory, had confessed that he killed the little girl.

In his affidavit, Mincey declared that he met the negro Conley at Electric avenue and Carter street on the afternoon of the murder; that Conley was intoxicated and when approached by Mincey for insurance became angry and exclaimed, threateningly: "I have killed a girl to-day; I don't want to kill nobody else."

The Georgian has now secured from Mincey a complete statement of his connection with the Phagan case. It is as follows:

By W. H. MINEY

If Jim Conley told the truth at a time he was most likely to do so, that is, when he was drunk, then I know he killed Mary Phagan, and I have known this for weeks.

I am not an insurance agent, as some of the papers have me, but I am a teacher by profession. I am a graduate of a branch of the State University, A. B. degree, hold a Georgia State Teacher's license, and have been teaching in Georgia every year for the past twenty-five years. I am now teaching. But during my vacation I worked for an insurance company in Atlanta for ten weeks.

By this company I was assigned a territory west of the Terminal Station. Saturday, April 26, I worked in the office till noon. In the afternoon I went out on Peachtree street and saw the parade. After the parade I went over beyond Davis street on "back calls" and to make an effort to close some "prospects." I had.

I passed down Rhodes street, and when I turned back, I had calls to make back on Electric avenue and Mitchell street. From Rhodes street there is a trolley up a bluff to the junction of Carter street and Electric avenue. I went up this.

Passing the house that sits just on the brow of this bluff I noticed a negro man sitting with his head leaning down on his chest as if asleep. I passed on some twenty feet when this negro raised his head and said: "Who is that?" The sharp, quick, excited manner in which he said this attracted my attention. A negro woman passing by Conley said, "It is a policy man," meaning an insurance man.

Said He Was Jim Conley

I stopped and got into a conversation with the negro about insurance. He told me his name was Jim Conley. He told me he lived at 172 Rhodes street. It was at once there was something wrong with him. He was nervous and excited, and tried to put me off and get rid of me by telling me to come to 172 Rhodes street next week and he would take insurance. But as the negro had excited my curiosity by his incoherent, scattering way of talking and his nervous and excited manner, I remained standing there firing questions at him.

He told me he was in trouble. I asked him if he had him in jail or the stockade. He said no, but he was expecting to be in jail, and that right away. I asked him what for.

He said: "Murder, I killed a girl to-day."

I said: "Oh, I see! You are Jack the Ripper."

The thought that occurred to me was that he meant he had

Negro Who Declared He Had Killed a Girl First Said His Name Was Jim Conley, Mincey Declares.

killed some negro woman, and the only thing that seemed peculiar to me was that he said "girl" instead of "woman."

I said: "Why did you kill her?"

He began to get angry and I saw he was drunk.

He said: "Now, that is for me to know and you to find out."

Negro Seemed Suspiciously Nervous

I did not attach much to what he was saying, thinking it was the babbling of a drunken negro, but his restless, quick glancing around and his keeping his eyes on me, and the wild, unnatural glare in his eyes caused me to want to press him further to find out really what he had been doing.

I said: "Let me write your insurance this afternoon," and started down to where he was.

He said: "Don't you come down here," speaking this in an angry, threatening manner—this caused me to press him the more.

I said: "No, I will take your application now," and continued.

He said: "I tell you not to come down here."

When he saw I was coming on anyway, he jumped up, and as he went round the corner of the house he said: "I have killed one to-day and I don't want to kill another."

I said: "Well, one day is enough; that is 365 a year," he turned and walked off.

Now, this negro told me his name was Jim Conley. He told me he lived at 172 Rhodes street. I was talking to him somewhere about 4 o'clock in the afternoon of Saturday, April 26. He told me he had killed a girl that day. Again he told me he had killed one that day and he did not want to kill another.

Now, if Jim Conley did not in fact tell me that he killed Mary Phagan on that day, then I don't know what language is, and I am sure I know what language is. I suppose it can be established that Jim Conley was nowhere else than in Atlanta on that day. Mary Phagan was murdered in Atlanta that day.

No Other Girl Slain That Day

So far as is known, no other girl was murdered in Atlanta that day. Now, did Jim Conley not tell me he killed Mary Phagan? If he did not, absolutely, I do not know when I have recognized a proposition in algebra, geometry or logic. But I am sure I do know when I have solved a problem.

On Sunday morning after I heard someone say "I heard someone say a 17-year-old girl had been killed the night before and dragged into a basement somewhere, supposed to be a girl of the streets and killed by some rowdies. I knew nothing further of this till Monday morning, passing down Forsyth street by the National Pencil Factory, I heard someone say "There is the place where the girl was killed," and some men standing there said she was seen at 11 o'clock Saturday night on the corner there. This placed the murder after I had seen and talked to Conley.

And during the day Monday I saw a paper, and as no one about this child's age saw her on Saturday, I kept asking what she would see companions of her age had she left the building. I at once decided she had never left the plant after going there.

Tuesday morning, passing the factory, I walked in and up the steps to the second floor. Some man walked up to me and asked what I wanted. I told him I wanted to see Mr. Frank.

Mincey Calls at the Factory

He said Mr. Frank was not in, that he could attend to what I wanted.

I told him I wanted to see where that little girl was killed and how many negroes worked there. The man did not want me to look over the building, but told me about the negroes. I asked him what negroes were there on Saturday. He said there were no negroes there on Saturday. I asked him if he was there. He said he was; that he was the day watchman. I asked him what time he left. He said at 11:45.

I said: "That was just a few minutes before that little girl came, then."

He said: "Yes."

I said: "Didn't you see a negro here who left?"

He said: "No, I told you there were no negroes here; I was holding and they did not work on Saturday." I kept asking him about negroes and talking till he was out of patience. All this time I kept walking and looking. He followed me everywhere I went. I learned later that the man's name to whom I was talking in Holloway, and he is the only one connected with the plant to whom I ever talked.

My talk with Jim Conley on Saturday afternoon convinced me that he had killed some one, or thought he had; but knowing it was impossible for him to be connected with this unless he was there, I got out of patience with Holloway as much as he was out with me.

I saw everything was disturbed and torn up, and Holloway was mad. I was mad, too. At last I turned on him and told him that that little girl never left that building after she came in there and that some one in the building who knew the building killed her. "Things were becoming more confused in the building, and after another parley with him about a negro being there, I turned and left the building, thoroughly disgusted."

Well, this seemed to me to eliminate Jim Conley, yet his words, acts and looks continued to haunt me as if I had seen a ghost. Well, things looked on, and I worked on. But I believed all the time that there was a missing link somewhere.

Later I saw that some lady saw a negro in the building the day of the murder, but I took no further trouble with it. I did not want to get mixed up in it at all.

Goes to the Police Station

Later, when I learned that a Jim Conley was there on the day of the murder, I one afternoon went down to the police station to see if it was the same Jim Conley I saw the afternoon of the murder.

Mincey Tells How He Came to Make His Startling Affidavit

"I wrote Mr. Dorsey a letter, but did not sign my name to it. I asked to not have Jim Conley indicted for anything other than murder, as I had it from his lips that he had killed a girl the afternoon of the murder. I never told any detective or policeman anything.

"As I stated to Mr. Dorsey, my conditions were such that I could not afford to be held as a witness.

"When I was convicted that Conley was going to deny everything, I said: 'Jim, you were pretty drunk that afternoon, were you not?' He said he had been drinking, but was not drunk. At this juncture one of the gentlemen in the room got up and opened the door. He said nothing, but I understood this to be a signal for me to go; and they had been as nice to me as I could have asked, so I said: 'That is all, I only wished to see him.' I told the detectives nothing; I just walked in and had a few words with Conley and walked out. I saw they were at something. I did not know what, but I did not care to 'butt in.' On the outside of the room some newspaper boys came up to me at once and began to ask me questions, but the newspaper is the last place I want to go to, and I said: 'Nothing for the papers.'" I walked down remember, I don't know; but it is the one or the other. I did not tell him he was the negro; I told him he looked like the negro.

I was convinced that Conley was going to deny everything, I said: 'Jim, you were pretty drunk that afternoon, were you not?' He said he had been drinking, but was not drunk. At this juncture one of the gentlemen in the room got up and opened the door. Writes Anonymously to Dorsey

Later I wrote Mr. Dorsey a letter, but did not sign my name to it. I asked to not have Jim Conley indicted for anything other than murder, as I had from his own lips that he had killed a girl the afternoon of the murder. I never told any detective or policeman anything. As I stated to Mr. Dorsey, my conditions were such that I could not afford to be caught up there and held as a witness. It was my intention to give the information I had to someone, but who was the proper one and when was the proper time I did not yet decide.

"When I noticed a movement, as it seemed, to turn Conley loose, I knew that was not the thing to do, so I went to Mr. Rosser. I told Mr. Rosser I had information I would give him, but I would first have to ask him not to hold me there as a witness, or give out anything to the newspapers. I was assured that I would be safe on this line.

Mr. Rosser told me he would like to hear the statement, no matter what it was against. That he wanted the murderer of Mary Phagan convicted, no difference who he is. After making the statement he asked me if I objected making the same and swearing to it. I told him I did not. I stepped out in another room and made the statement to be written.

Knows No One in the Case

Now, I know none of the people concerned in this. I saw Jim Conley, I saw one man at the National Pencil Factory, who I learn is Holloway, I saw Mr. Rosser but once.

I have only done what I believe any true citizen would do. I believe any other citizen would do as I have done. I have faith in the people of Georgia. I suppose I know as many people in the State as nearly any other man in the State. There are no people anywhere more generous, more noble, or more fair.

Now so far as I know I have told it the best I can, and I am willing to leave everything to the courts and the people.

And if Jim Conley did murder little Mary Phagan, I will not remain quiet so far as what I know and let him make me mad, and you and every other citizen a party to another crime just as bad.

I am at work and had much rather never be called as a witness, but should I be called no power can prevent me from doing my duty as a true citizen.

I have criticized no one and shall not do so; and I, as a citizen of Georgia, claim the right to perform a duty to my State and fellowman un molested.

State's Attorney Attacks Affidavit Made by Mincey

Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey and Attorney Frank A. Hooper, engaged in the prosecution of Leo M. Green, who he said to have been in the presence of the attack upon Mary Phagan, gave evidence sufficient to shake their conviction of Leo Frank's innocence.

Rumors that the State was preparing to change its theory and to ask for the indictment of Jim Conley were laughed at.

"I sincerely doubt," said Mr. Hooper, "whether the affidavit of W. H. Mincey, insurance solicitor, nor the reported confession of the negro Will Green, who he said to have been in the presence of the attack upon Mary Phagan, give evidence sufficient to shake their conviction of Leo Frank's innocence."

"Both declared emphatically that neither the affidavit of W. H. Mincey, insurance solicitor, nor the reported confession of the negro Will Green, who he said to have been in the presence of the attack upon Mary Phagan, give evidence sufficient to shake their conviction of Leo Frank's innocence."

PRISON BOARD IS DENIED BOOST IN SALARY

Bill to Increase Compensation to $3,000 Defeated—Cross-State Road Act Held Up.

An effort to increase the salaries of the members of the State Prison Commission from $2,666 to $3,000 a year was defeated in the House Monday following an hour's debate. The vote was 111 to 24 against the adoption of the report of the penitentiary commission.

Arguments favoring the passage of the bill were made by Representative Wohlwender, Winchester and Statesboro. The report of the penitentiary commission provided for the extension of the present board.

Mr. Wohlwender gave notice he would move to reconsider the bill. The bill is to come up for a third reading at the session Monday, and the cross-state road bill is to be considered on the same day.

ATLANTA WOMEN LIKE SKIRT WITH POCKETS

Miss Lucie Goodrich, Atlanta sponsor for new suffragette pocket skirt.

Two Large Receptacles at Sides Feature of New Fad From Paris—Fine for Suffragettes.

Just why women suffragettes should have pockets in their skirts is a mystery. Still they've got 'em and they make no secret of the fact.

"Strange to say, this new fad originated in Paris, where suffragettes are rare. It has come to Atlanta via New York, and has found favor here, not only as an insignia of the cause, but for convenience sake.

According to Mrs. N. Springfield, the New York creator of fashionable gowns, who imported the pocket skirt, it is going to be the sensation of the season.

"Women and suffragettes especially ought to hail the advent of the new skirt with particular joy," she declared, "because of the pockets. There are two of them, one on each side. And they are not stinky little affairs, like the pockets that used to be put in women's dresses in the ancient days before fashion frowned on such features of feminine apparel."

In Atlanta a few of them were seen at the recent convention of the Georgia Woman Suffrage Association.

Seeking Crawford Widow With New Warrant

CORONER'S WRIT HELD ILLEGAL

Delay in Hearing Will Mean Woman's Commitment to Jail, Attorney Says.

Following close upon a decision by Superior Court Justice Pendleton Saturday morning that a warrant signed by the Coroner of Carroll County was not enforceable in Fulton County, J. B. Crawford, a nephew and beneficiary under the $125,000 will of Joshua B. Crawford, went before Justice of the Peace C. H. Girardeau and swore out a second warrant charging the widow, Mary Belle Crawford, with murder.

Constables R. F. Mauldin and W. W. Rogers went immediately to the home of Mrs. Crawford, at West Peachtree and Fourteenth streets, to arrest her and take her before Justice Girardeau for commitment trial.

The first warrant charging Mrs. Crawford with murder was signed by Coroner C. W. Haselin, of Carroll County, who had disinterred the body of Joshua B. Crawford and found evidence of poison. Crawford died in Fulton County March 27, 1909.

Hearing May Be Delayed.

The warrant reached Atlanta Friday, and Sheriff Mincey notified Mrs. Crawford to appear before Justice of the Peace D. K. Johnson Saturday morning, when a hearing would be held as to the authority of the Sheriff to serve the warrant in Fulton County.

Colonel J. S. James, attorney for the heirs, said later that he did not know when Mrs. Crawford would be ready for the commitment trial, as the prosecution has several material witnesses out of the State.

In the event of delay in the commitment hearing, he said, Justice Girardeau would have no other alternative than to commit Mrs. Crawford to jail.

Arnold Sees Exonerated.

Attorney Arnold, said Mrs. Crawford would be completely exonerated at the prospective hearing before a justice of the peace. He said the action was nothing more than a move to "force" civil procedure.

"It is not really the Crawford heirs who are fighting me," said Mrs. Crawford, "but the rather distant relatives who were not mentioned in any will. I settled with the real heirs according to the will left by Mr. Crawford's first wife. Every one who was satisfied."

"I gave Charles Crawford more than he was entitled to by the will that was made before I even knew the man I later married. He thanked me for the generosity by later letting the very distant relatives prevail upon him to fight me. He decided then an interest in his share of the property and filed suit. Since then I have never been anything but my best friend's."

Widow's Side of Case.

Attorney Arnold, for Mrs. Crawford, issued the following statement Friday afternoon:

"There is nothing whatever new in the recent developments of the Crawford case.

"Four years after Crawford's death some of the collateral kinship of J. B. Crawford and his first wife, who are seeking to recover this estate, worth perhaps $100,000, from the widow and legatees under Crawford's will, went to Carroll County with their lawyer, J. S. James, and Dr. H. F. Harris, and on some kind of showing which we know nothing of persuaded the Coroner to exhumate the body of Crawford."

JACKSON, MISS., July 13.—A. C. Davis was acquitted of the charge of embezzlement in connection with the sale of State property, after Governor Brewer went to the courthouse and asked the State's attorneys to request the judge to sign a verdict for the defendant. The Governor explained that the attorneys had evidence that showed Davis not guilty. The judge did as requested. Governor Brewer said he had no desire to prosecute an innocent man. Attorneys asked that four other indictments against Davis be filed to await future action, if desired.
