CRACKERS DEFEAT BARONS; SCORE 9 TO 5

DIXIE WOMAN LEADS 30,000 IN SUFFRAGE HIKE

Mrs. Richard Burleson Heads "Votes for Women" Hosts in Streets of New York.

PARADE UP FIFTH AVENUE

White Zouaves Dance Before Throngs—42-Cent Hats Are Much in Evidence.

NEW YORK, May 3.—With the precision of soldiers, 30,000 woman suffragists and men sympathizers marched through the heart of New York City this afternoon in the most wonderful and brilliant "votes for women" demonstration ever held in North America.

Between 75,000 and 100,000 persons were massed along Fifth Avenue, and a thunder of cheers greeted the marchers all along the line. There was no disorder. Twelve hundred foot and mounted police lined the route, and those who attempted to interfere with the procession met instant forceful resistence.

Shortly after 2:30 o'clock Mrs. Richard Burleson, general marshal, gave a lusty "forward march," and amidst ringing cheers the great array swept forward. The weather was very warm, and toward the end there was much suffering among the marchers who were unused to the heat and the exertion.

42-Cent Hat in Evidence.

The new suffrage hat, costing 42 cents, 3 cents more than last year, trimmed only with ribbon and chiffon, feathers and flowers being tabooed, was a feature. It was described by Mrs. E. Livingston Hunt, chairman of the parade hat committee, as "a small round hat, after the early season's fashion, with a slight roll of the brim on one side."

Heading the parade were delegates from each of the nine States where woman suffrage is in effect. Each member of this advance guard carried an American flag. Following them came the Women's Political Union dressed in white, with purple, green and white regalia, led by sixteen horsewomen, including Miss Inez Milholland. Each speaker of the union carried a little green box to be used as a rostrum from which to deliver convincing arguments in favor of suffrage.

Zouaves Dance on Avenue.

The Political Equality Association was led by Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont. Included in this section was a group of young women called the "White Zouaves," dressed in dazzling white costumes. During the halts in the parade the Zouaves executed fancy dances for the benefit of the spectators who lined the sidewalks.

In cap and gown, about 600 strong, came the Collegiate Equal Suffrage League, carrying their college banners. Next came a delegation of men marching under the banner of the Men's League for Woman Suffrage, followed by delegations of women from all States where the women have not yet been granted the right to vote, arranged in alphabetical order of States. This delegation closed the parade.

Last night, as a sort of preparation for to-day's parade, a suffrage pageant was given in the Metropolitan Opera House. Three hundred of the most beautiful women whom the committee in charge of the pageant could secure posed in the various tableaux and executed the dances.

Boy, 11, and Toddler Egg Hunt Winners

Atlanta Children, in Annual 'Easter' Search at Grant Park, Have Time of Their Lives.

Wriggling past police restraint, 8,000 Atlanta children dashed, laughing and shouting, across a green Grant Park meadow this afternoon in the annual egg hunt ten full minutes before the band tuned itself to the strains of "Dixie," which was to have been the starting signal.

Charlie Rice, eleven-year-old son of D. E. Rice, 26 South Avenue, found the golden egg, the capital prize, 20 minutes after the hunt had been in progress. He took it to the judges' stand and was awarded his $5 goldpiece and the custody of the egg.

Two-year-old Thomas O'Reilly, Jr., toddling around, found egg No. 37, which entitled him to 25 tickets to a moving picture theater. Buvord Hall found egg No. 1 and received a prize of a rocking chair.

Six or seven little girls qualified for a number of the 41 prizes given, and the hunt was voted a success in every detail.

SMITH'S CREW PILES UP FIVE RUNS IN FIFTH

RICKWOOD BALL PARK, BIRMINGHAM, May 3.—Bill Smith's Crackers defeated the Barons in the final game of their series by a score of 9 to 5.

A wild batting rally in the fifth inning netted Atlanta five runs. Thompson relieved Fittery after the latter forced one run over the plate. The victory gives the Crackers three of the four games played. Brady twirled for the visitors.

ANALYSIS OF BLOOD STAINS MAY SOLVE PHAGAN MYSTERY

Three Former Employees at Pencil Factory Are Summoned to Testify. Expected That Frank and Watchman Will Be Questioned Further.

It is reported that three young women, former employees of the National Pencil Factory, will be important witnesses for the Coroner's jury in the Phagan case on Monday.

Dr. Claude Smith, city bacteriologist, was asked by the police to-day to make a chemical analysis of the bloodstains on the shirt found in the back yard of the home of Lee.

The garment was given to Dr. Smith by Detective Rosser. The detectives are hopeful that by scientific tests and comparisons it will be determined whether the garment was a 'plant' or not. Dr. Smith said that he could not make his examination until some time next week.

Solicitor Dorsey and Chief of Detectives Lanford were closeted for two hours to-day in a discussion of the case. At the conclusion neither would make a public announcement.

$1,000 Fund Is Rumored.

It was said that an effort would be made to have the county appropriate $1,000 for a private investigation.

The inquest will be resumed at 2 o'clock. Leo M. Frank has not yet given any testimony before the Coroner's jury, and it is planned for him to be heard on Monday. It is also likely that Lee, the night watchman, will be examined still further.

The police and detectives are still busily at work on the case, but so far as is known they have secured nothing of importance.

Await Coroner's Verdict.

When the Coroner's jury verdict is rendered the case automatically goes to the Grand Jury. Solicitor Dorsey and the Grand Jury will not take up the case officially until the Coroner's jury has concluded its investigation.

Many wild reports, absolutely without basis in fact, are in circulation. It is emphatically declared by the police that no confessions have been made by anybody in the case. This should put an end to the report that Lee has confessed and implicated Frank.

It is not likely that the body of the unfortunate girl will be exhumed. County Physician Hurt says that no further examination is necessary, as the evidence on this point is very clear and exact.

Visitors Are Barred.

Visitors are not allowed to see either Frank or Lee, although counsel has full access to the Tower to confer freely with the men.

A score of employees of the factory are under subpena to testify before the Coroner's jury, but their testimony is not considered likely to be of great importance.

The release of Arthur Mullinax and J. M. Gantt indicates that the detectives have abondoned the theory that the girl left the pencil factory after receiving her pay on Saturday. The detectives now are of the opinion that she was not seen on the streets again after she entered the factory.

May Be Held for Jury.

Without seeming to forecast what the Coroner's jury will do, it is more than likely that both Frank and Lee will be held for the Grand Jury, where the testimony or evidence will be weighed carefully under the supervision of Solicitor General Hugh Dorsey.

The only statement that the lawyers for Frank make is that he is still vehement in the declaration that he knows nothing whatever about the crime.

Mr. Rosser says that not a word of evidence had been produced against his client ...

T. G. POLHILL IS ELECTED HEAD OF EDUCATORS

State Convention Before Adjourning Demands Labor Laws and Better Sanitation.

T. G. Polhill, of LaGrange, is the new head of the Georgia Educational Association. He was elected without opposition this morning at the last session of the convention. Mr. Polhill was first vice president of the organization during the past year. He is principal of the LaGrange High School.

Other officers elected were J. C. Wardlaw, of the Georgia Military Institute at Milledgeville, first vice president, and Miss Elizabeth Holt, of the Augusta High School, second vice president. C. L. Smith, superintendent at LaGrange, was re-elected secretary, and Ralph Newton, superintendent at Fort Valley, was re-elected treasurer.

Three new members of the board of directors were also elected. They were Jason Scarboro, superintendent at Tifton; R. E. Brooks, superintendent at Dublin, and G. D. Godard, superintendent at Moultrie.

Teachers Demand Prompt Pay.

Resolutions were adopted imploring the Legislature to provide for prompt payment of teachers' salaries, to provide for better supervision of rural school work by appointing five supervisors in addition to the three already employed to provide for competent medical inspection of school children, to pass laws requiring installation of sanitary drinking fountains and other sanitary necessities and to pass a child labor law making it unlawful to work a child under 14 years of age.

Selection of a State song and a State flower was carried over until next year. Four songs have been selected from a large number submitted. They will be "tried out" by various schools and a vote taken as to the best one. The question of selecting the State flower also will be put to a vote, the children of each school voting. Each school will be entitled to one vote when the matter is decided next year.

Meeting Place Not Fixed.

Albany extended an invitation to the association to meet there next year and delegates from South Georgia asked that their section be regarded in the naming of the next meeting place. The matter was left in the hands of the executive committee.

The convention adjourned at 12:30 o'clock.

Puts Health Before Learning.

"If it were a choice between health and education, I would select health. Make the child healthy; then educate him," was the terse comment by Dr. T. R. Abercrombie, inspector for the State Board of Health, before the association this morning.

"The child's health comes before everything else; conditions that surround him and the condition of his physical being for the development of his mental qualities are most important factors," he continued. "Too often the child has been developed mentally when his physical part was absolutely unfit. The great problem lies in making him fit physically and then to develop his mentality.

"A rigid campaign along this line is what is needed. Teachers have been educated to the need of health among children. It remains for the State to follow up this work."

Dr. Abercrombie's address was listened to attentively. One of the strongest features of the Georgia Educational Association since its organization has been the promotion of children's health.

ANTI-JAP BILL PASSES SENATE IN CALIFORNIA

Vote 35 to 2 on Birdsall-Thompson Measure After Heated All-Night Debate.

SACRAMENTO, May 3.—The California Assembly to-day voted unanimously to suspend the constitutional procedure and put the Senate anti-alien land bill for a final vote without the first and second readings. This action was taken when majority leaders in the lower House received word from Governor Johnson that he desired this plan carried out.

Democrats in the Assembly at first opposed the Governor's plan, but later voted with the Republicans and Progressives.

SACRAMENTO, May 3.—The California Senate, by a vote of 35 to 2, early to-day passed the Birdsall-Thompson bill prohibiting the ownership of land for agricultural purposes in California by aliens not eligible for citizenship in the United States. The measure permits a three-year leasehold by aliens. It was adopted after an all-night session.

Secretary of State Bryan had retired when the result was announced. His secretary, Robert P. Rose, said Mr. Bryan would decide to-day when he will leave for the East. The action of the Senate was considered a partial victory for Secretary Bryan, whose work here resulted in the bill being less effective against the Japanese than the Webb bill as advocated by Governor Johnson. The bill permits the spread of Japanese farming colonies.

State Senator Cartwright, Democrat, announced prior to the roll call that he would vote against the passage of the bill, although he favored it. He gave as his reason:

"Vote to Tie U. S. Hands."

"You are turning a deaf ear to the best President this country has ever had. You will vote to tie the hands of the United States in its diplomatic relations with Japan; the majority has surrendered to the 'boss' of the State."

Consideration of the bill was begun at 11 o'clock yesterday morning and continued without recess even for luncheon and dinner. All afternoon, until the clock in the Senate chamber was ordered stopped by the presiding officer at 11:43 o'clock at night, the Democrats fought to delay action by submitting numerous amendments.

The hardest fight waged around a resolution introduced by Senator Curtin calling upon the Legislature to delay action for two years and refer the whole subject to the Federal Government. Debate on this amendment opened early in the day and continued until 6 o'clock, when a roll call showed it defeated.

Threat of Referendum.

In the closing hours of the debate on the bill itself, Senators Sanford, Caminetti and Shanahan threatened to invoke the referendum. They believed the people of the State were pleading for relief from Japanese agriculturists and that the measure does not correct the evil.

The Senate gallery and lobby was packed during the long session. Many Japanese lined the brass railing of the gallery, listening intently to the debate.

At no time during the sesison did Secretary Bryan appear in the Senate chamber, although he was in the office of Lieutenant Governor Wallace, hardly a hundred feet away, until nearly midnight.

55,000 Out Now in Welsh Miners' Strike

Owners' Promise to Hire No More Non-Union Men Presages Victory for Unions.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CARDIFF, WALES, May 3.—The strike of Welsh coal miners in protest against the open shop policy of the mine owners is spreading to a serious extent. Fifty-five thousand men were out to-day.

Leaders of the miners' union expect a speedy victory, because many of the mine owners have already promised to hire no more non-union men. This is compelling non-unionists to join the organization.

Silk Stockings Exasperate Judge Calls Them In Contempt of Court Fair Defendant Hastily Hides 'Em

Mrs. Rachael N. Ducas.

New York Justice Does Not Take Kindly to Artifices of Modern Feminine Dress.

Ye women of Atlanta, have a care!

The judicial temperament, like the Cole Blease temperament, does not take kindly to the artifices and blandishments of modern dress.

Listen to this story from New York:

Supreme Court Justice Gavegan looked over his spectacles in Part XIV of the Supreme Court and scowled at a dainty pair of pearl gray silk stockings.

The hosiery was displayed upon the feet of Mrs. Rachael N. Ducas, a pretty wife of Benjamin P. Ducas, a wealthy manufacturer. Mrs. Ducas was sitting at the table of her counsel, her feet crossed.

"I want to say," the Court began gravely, "that the young lady in black there is disrespectful to this Court. If she wishes me to be more explicit, I will say for her benefit that her lower limbs are insufficiently clad. She is making far too free an exhibition of them in a public place."

Mrs. Ducas promptly pulled her bobble skirt down over the silver buckles on her slippers and kept her feet under her chair during the remainder of the court session.

Her lawyer replied: "Your Honor, this young woman in black is the defendant."

"I don't care who she is,' replied Justice Gavegan. "She is making an exposure of herself in this court. That's all I have to say."

A TEN CENT BOX OF "CASCARETS"

Keep your liver and bowels active and you feel bully for months.

Put aside—just once—the Salts, Cathartic Pills, Castor Oils or purgative waters which merely force a passageway through the bowels, but do not thoroughly cleanse, freshen and purify these drainage or alimentary organs, and have no effect whatever upon the liver and stomach.

Keep your inside organs pure and fresh with Cascarets, which thoroughly cleanse the stomach, remove the undigested, sour and fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the intestines and bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken and cost only 10 cents a box from your druggist. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have Headache, Biliousness, coated tongue, Indigestion, Sour Stomach or Constipated bowels. Cascarets belong in every household. Children just love to take them.

COUNTESS SHOT MYSTERIOUSLY; SLAYING FEARED

Coroner Conditionally Accepts the Earl of Cottenham's Story That Wife's Death Was Accident.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

HENLEY, ENGLAND, May 3.—Deep mystery surrounds the violent death of the Countess of Cottenham, wife of Charles E. P. Kenelme, Earl of Cottenham, whose body was found in a thicket near Goring. She had been shot to death. The case was supposed to be one of murder, although the authorities said that the countess might have shot herself.

The maiden name of the Countess of Cottenham was Lady Rose Nevill, daughter of the Marquis of Abergavenny. She was married to the Earl of Cottenham in 1899. They had three children.

Absence Leads to Search.

The protracted absence of the countess from her home led to a search, and the body, pierced with a bullet, was found in a clump of underbrush in the thicket.

There was some delay in calling the authorities into the case when the police began their inquiry. A theory was advanced that the countess had either been lured to the lonely spot or else in a fit of despondency had repaired to the copse to end her life.

There was no evidence of a struggle at the scene of death, but the ground was hard, and it was argued that it would require extreme exertions to dig up the turf.

Family Denies Quarrel.

Members of the family denied there had been any ill-feeling of late between the earl and his wife.

The Earl of Cottenham was the countess' second husband. Her first husband was John Blundell Leigh, a rich land owner. Mr. Blundell secured a divorce in 1899. Within a few months Mrs. Blundell became the Countess of Cottenham.

The divorce suit of Colonel Leigh, who was an officer of the guards, was one of the biggest scandals which has stirred English society in the past twenty years. The Earl of Cottenham was named as co-respondent. Highly sensational testimony was introduced at the trial.

Coroner Accepts Earl's Story.

At the inquest the earl testified that he found his wife's body. He advanced the opinion that his wife had tripped and fallen and that her firearm had then been accidentally discharged.

As there was no witness to the tragedy, the coroner decided to accept this theory with reservation that the case might be reopened if fresh evidence were secured.

Man of Mystery Now Made Clear; Big Story Coming

This picture is odd. Running for three days in The Georgian without any comment, it has caused endless discussion as to who it is and what it is. The Georgian has been besieged with telephone calls and letters from its readers asking for an explanation. We do not wonder that you had some doubt as to why it is here. This is the answer:

The Georgian has purchased a serial story, more interesting than any Atlanta has had in years. This picture typifies the story.

Based on the picture, what in your judgment is the title or ought to be of this story? Five dollars in gold will be paid to each of the five best literary judgments received.

The title of the story has already been selected, and it is now in a sealed envelope in the hands of T. J. Peeples, cashier of the American National Bank.

The answers will be judged upon their originality, their literary value and upon their analytical clearness.

5,000 IN GREAT SUNDAY SCHOOL RALLY SERVICE

Baptist and Christian Churches Will Discuss Contest at the Auditorium-Armory.

More than 5,000 scholars representing the First Christian and the Second Baptist Sunday schools will assemble in front of the Georgia State capitol to-morrow morning and march to the auditorium, where rivals in one of the most exciting contests ever held in Atlanta will gather in joint service. The campaign for members, begun three months ago on a challenge from the Second Baptist Sunday school, comes to a close Sunday, May 11. To-morrow the contestants will meet to discuss the campaign.

Rev. L. O. Bricker, of the First Christian Church, said to-day: "We have won. It has been a great contest and the results have been magnificent."

Rev. John E. White, pastor of the Second Baptist Church, said: "The battle is not yet lost. We have time."

At the meeting to-morrow the First Christian Sunday school will report, as the result of the contest, an increase in membership in the three months from 330 to an enrollment of 4,000. The Second Baptist will report an increase from an enrollment of 420 to 3,700.

When the two schools assemble on the capitol steps a panorama picture of the gathering will be taken, and as the procession moves across the Washington Street viaduct a moving picture film will be made. It is estimated that more than 5,000 members of the two schools will be present and appear in the pictures. Prior to the gathering at the capitol, each of the schools will meet in their respective places for exercises at 9:30 o'clock. The joint meeting will be at 10:15 o'clock and the services at the auditorium will begin at 11 o'clock, lasting an hour.

Pastors of the two churches will make addresses, drawing lessons from the contest and summarizing its results. Professor Percy J. Starnes will preside at the organ, and Mrs. Starnes will sing Gounod's "Ave Maria." The congregation will read in unison the twenty-third Psalm and reports of the contesting schools for May 4 will be read. A chorus choir, comprising members from both schools, will occupy the platform.

Including the results of last Sunday's work, the standing of the two schools in points scored is: First Christian, 44,357; Second Baptist, 38,536, which gives the Christians a lead of 5,821 points.

Work to Overcome Lead.

"It will be a difficult task to overcome that lead," said Dr. White today. "But the Second Baptist will not quit the fight until the time limit is reached. One class alone in our school started off with a membership of 75 and reached 400 last Sunday. They expect to have 600 next Sunday, and before the contest ends they have set 1,000 for their mark. That is a class for young men, and its growth has been one of the marvels of the contest."

At the beginning of the campaign the Second Baptist school gave the Christian workers a handicap of 140 points each Sunday, aggregating for the entire period about 2,000. It is said that while the 5,000 lead of the Christian school may not be overcome by May 11, that number may be greatly reduced.

At the conclusion of the present contest the Baptist Sunday schools of the city will challenge the Methodists to a similar membership campaign, which, if accepted, will enlist 60 Sunday schools in an effort to increase their enrollments.

More Than an Event.

Dr. White said:

"The contest just closing has proved more than an event; it is a movement. We believe Atlanta can be made the banner Bible school city of the world. And the really greatest part of the movement is that it is bringing the children back into the church service. There has been an alarming decrease in the churches everywhere in attendance on the part of children at church. In my church the Sunday school and the church are practically one and the same thing.

"The contest has stimulated other Sunday schools of the city and it is estimated that the attendance has in three months increased from about 10,000 to 18,000. All the churches have felt the effects of the rivalry that has spurred us on to enlarge our Sunday schools, and the results will continue to be felt. And, think of it, if the contest can be arranged with the Methodist schools there will be 60 organizations of men and women and boys and girls enlisted in a campaign to make this the greatest of Bible study cities.

Churches Drawn Together.

"The Baptist and Christian churches have been drawn very closely together in this contest. The best of Christian spirit has been displayed and the results have been far greater than we expected."

Dr. L. O. Bricker said:

"When we entered the contest with the Baptist school we had no idea what it meant. The plan has grown greater and greater and the results have far exceeded our expectations. What was intended for a plan to benefit the two churches has spread to every church in Atlanta, I believe. More young people have been enrolled in the Sunday schools than we had ever dreamed would be possible. Of course we expect to win the contest, but the Baptists have been a most worthy rival."

Big Shetland Pony Contest On! Early Start Will Help You Win Nomination Counts 1,000 Votes

Miss Mabel Imslee, one of the attractive young women in the stock company at the Atlanta Theater.

Third Coupon of Series Good for Theater Seats Appears To-day—Clip It.

Well, the pony contest is on!

Of course, you saw the second coupon, good for five votes in The Georgian yesterday. Another appears today, and there will be a coupon worth five votes every day in The Georgian until the contest closes, while in every issue of The Sunday American there will be a coupon worth fifteen votes.

Begin at once to save them.

Get your friends to save them for you.

And remember they must be voted within fifteen days; otherwise, they are valueless.

But while coupons from the daily and Sunday issues are worth saving, and will help you to win one of the Shetland ponies, with harness and cart all complete, the votes for new subscriptions are really what will decide the winners.

A subscription to The Sunday American only for one month gives the contestant 100 votes, while a subscription to the daily and Sunday for one year gives 3,500 votes. Subscriptions for intermediate periods are carefully graded in value.

Contest Rules Simple.

Remember that advance subscriptions from old subscribers count the same as new subscriptions, and payment of arrearages also counts in the same proportion.

The Georgian and American are giving away twelve ponies to successful boys and girls in a subscription contest in which the rules are simplicity itself. Eight go to children in Atlanta, one to a carrier or newsboy in Atlanta, two in Georgia and one outside the State.

Every pony is guaranteed to be a sound, healthy, serviceable pet, broken to drive, gentle, kind and safe for a child to drive.

An early start in the race for the beautiful little Shetlands is a great advantage, and nominations are coming in rapidly from the boys and girls of Atlanta who realize this fact.

Do not delay longer if you contemplate entering, as every boy and girl of spirit does. The nomination itself counts for 1,000 votes.

Save Theater Coupons.

Miss Billy Long is a Georgia girl—that is, she claims the State for her home, although born in Texas. She was educated in Athens, and spent much of her girlhood days in the State.

As a Georgia girl who has "made good" on the stage, Atlantans naturally are interested in seeing her. This is one of the reasons The Georgian and American free seat presentation is proving so popular.

But it is not merely local pride which is causing crowds to go to the Atlanta Theater to see the stock company playing there.

It is because it is a good company playing there, and in productions that were sensations in New York.

Free Concerts To Be Resumed To-morrow

Festival Association Program at Armory Includes Intermezzo From 'Manon Lescaut.'

The free Sunday afternoon concerts at the Auditorium-Armory will be resumed to-morrow, with one of the most attractive programs Dr. Starnes and the Atlanta Music Festival Association have ever presented.

The program includes the intermezzo from Puccini's "Manon Lescaut," which many operagoers consider the musical gem of that performance.

Wagner's overture to "Die Meistersinger" and an improvisation on German folk-songs also will be included.

The concerts begin promptly at 3:30 o'clock. From this time on the concerts will take place as regularly as possible through the spring and summer.

The Atlanta Music Festival Chorus will meet for rehearsal at Cable Hall, 84 North Broad street, Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

Vicious Dog Attacks Child in "Tag" Game

Little Alga Peters, of 216 South Pryor Street, Is Severely Bitten Before Rescued.

Alga Peters, ten years old, is in a serious condition at her home, 218 South Pryor Street, as a result of a strenuous game of "tag" which she and other children of the neighborhood played.

A bulldog belonging to G. G. Waters, 98 Waters Avenue, became excited when it saw the children running about the street, and leaped upon the Peters girl. She was severely bitten about the head and arms before rescued.

The Peters family notified the police, and an officer was sent to kill the dog. Waters, however, refused to allow the animal to be shot.

F. and A. M. Lodge Will Hold Reception

First Annual Affair Will Take Place at College Park on May 9.

Announcements were issued to-day for the first annual reception of College Park Lodge No. 454, F. and A. M., to be held in the bank building at College Park at 8 o'clock, May 9.

The reception will be of a social nature. The speakers will be the Rev. Fritz Rauschenberg, chaplain of the lodge, and T. H. Jeffries. John F. Bradley will be master of the ceremonies. Others on the program are Miss Verna Ruth Harris and Miss Agnes Coleman, with recitations and readings. Music will be furnished by Slaiten's orchestra.

More than 200 guests are expected and supper will be served.

MAYOR-COUNCIL ROW FIRED BY WHITEWASHING

Report Monday Will Clear Men Accused of Grafting by Alderman McClelland.

Exoneration of all city officials involved in the graft charges, assured to-day by members of the investigating committee, has developed an acute stage in the relations of Mayor Woodward and the Council.

Referring to reports that the fire probe committee would clear Fire Chief W. B. Cummings of the accusations of corruption, Mayor Woodward said he would not be surprised at anything that committee would do. Already members of the Councilmanic Graft Probe Committee have been much nettled by the declaration of the Mayor that the committee "had to exonerate the three Aldermen to protect Council."

The committee probing the councilmanic graft charges will meet this afternoon to frame its report to Council. As it was given general authority to investigate all graft and corruption, it is expected it will frame a general reply to numerous charges made by Mayor Woodward and his right-hand man in Council, Alderman John E. McClelland.

Probers Silent as to Report.

Because of this delicate situation the members of the fire probe committee, who completed their investigation yesterday, decline to make any formal statement as to their formal report until the meeting of Council Monday. But it is learned on good authority that Chief Cummings will be given a clean bill as far as graft is converned. The committee will recommend a better system of purchasing supplies for the department and criticise its heads for not following the requisition system.

The committee heard new evidence yesterday afternoon, but when it went into executive session a formal report written some days ago by a subcommittee was agreed upon.

Committee Meets Monday.

A meeting of the committee will be held Monday for the signing of this report.

Mayor Woodward took the stand first and told the committee that Thomas Reynolds, the mysterious man who promised important new evidence, had failed to show up as he had promised.

The committee decided to close the investigation without waiting for him, but George Napier, attorney for Chief Cummings, was allowed to make a brief reply to the interviews that Reynolds has given out.

Calls Reynolds Crook.

"Reynolds is a crook," interrupted Chief Cummings.

Mr. Napier said that Reynolds had been fired from the fire department of Clarksburg, W. Va., for drunkenness, and that he was the agent for a fire hose company.

Mayor Woodward called R. E. Davidson, the fire engine agent who declared he gave Chief Cummings a present of $400, to the stand. Davidson presented a cancelled check on the Fourth National Bank for $400, cashed by himself on April 25, 1911, which he said showed how he secured the money to present to Chief Cummings. He also showed the stub of this check in his check book and said that of the several hundred stubs it was the only one for as large an amount as $400.

Woodward Criticises Department.

Mayor Woodward presented a report by his secretary, Frank Hammond, that there was no adequate system of records in the fire department; that no efforts were ever made to make hose companies live up to their guarantees, and that no competitive bids were ever asked in the purchase of new hose or the sale of old hose.

Chief Cummings produced a mass of records, which, he said, refuted the Mayor's evidence.

Angell Fears Not To Tread Our Soil

Author of "The Great Illusion" Coming to Further His Peace Propaganda.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 3.—Among the passengers on the Kronprinzessin Cecilie are Norman Angell, the author of "The Great Illusion," who is on his way to the United States to continue his peace propaganda, and D. A. Ansell, the Mexican Consul General at Montreal, who has been at Nice for eight weeks. The latter thinks that everything will turn out all right in Mexico, but emphasizes the fact that there is need of a strong, stable Government.

YALE SENIOR CAPTURES BURGLARS WITH PENCIL

NEW HAVEN, CONN., May 3.—By leveling a pencil at two thieves whom he found in his room, Richard Davidson, a Yale Senior, bluffed them into thinking that he had a pistol and held them until the police arrived. They confessed to a long series of thefts, including the looting of the room of Robert Alphonso Taft of Harvard, son of ex-President Taft.

Bryan Can Win in 1916, Says Martine

Jersey Senator Thinks Nothing Can Beat Him, Assuming Wilson Dosen't Run.

ST. LOUIS, May 3.—If William J. Bryan is a candidate for the Presidency in 1916 nothing can prevent his election, according to Senator James E. Martine of New Jersey, who was here to attend the dedication of the Jefferson memorial. Mr. Martine said the one-term plank in the Democratic platform would prevent President Wilson's renomination.

"Bryan will be the logical candidate," he said. "People have come to know and to understand him better. People think that he has become more stable in his views, struck an equilibrium, as it were. The fact is, that Mr. Bryan is just as radical today as he was twenty years ago, but the people have grown up to him."

Carnegie Interested In Feats of Fakirs

Steel Prestidigitator Wants to Know How Foreign Wizards Wiz.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, May 3.—To inquire into the mysteries of levitation is the aim of a young savant named Schwidtal of Posen.

Andrew Carnegie has financed a small party of investigators who will go to Egypt immediately under Schwidtal to study the secrets of the fakirs and dervishes, and especially from a scientific viewpoint the ecstatic state in which the fakirs are observed to accomplish wonderful feats. The ecstasy is produced by a constant repetition of mystic words. At first they pronounce only the name "Allah" combined with rhythmic movements called "sikrs." This has never before been thoroughly investigated.

Airships Made Safer by Aid of Gyroscope

Elmer Sperry Tells Engineers of a Stabilizer Perfected by Naval Aviators.

NEW YORK, May 3.—By means of a specially constructed gyroscope aviation accidents have been reduced to a minimum, through the control being taken out of the hands of the aviator at critical moments in the flight.

This was the substance of an address delivered before the New York Electrical Society by Elmer A. Sperry, inventor of the gyroscopic stabilizer for ships.

The apparatus has practically been developed within the last few months, and has been perfected during experiments made in conjunction with the Navy Department at San Diego, California.

Forces Prize Beauty To Return Diamond

Traveling Man Accused Show Girl of Keeping Gem He Had Loaned to Her.

ST. LOUIS, May 3.—Having returned the $500 diamond ring, claimed by W. A. Purnell, traveling salesman for a Fifth Avenue, New York, concern, Mrs. Laura Hill, of New York, is no longer in the custody of the police.

Mrs. Hill was winner in the $1,000 prize beauty contest of the Shuberts in New York last year. She later became a show girl, and is now with the Gertrude Hoffman Company, playing here. Purnell followed her from New York, caused her arrest, charging that she had kept the ring, although he had only lent it to her.

Mrs. Hill declares he gave her the ring, but after a talk at police headquarters she returned it.

Mrs. Bryan Takes Vegetarian Cure

Goes to a Sanitarium Where Meat Is Regarded as a Poison.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Not content with introducing grape juice to a champagne society coterie Mrs. William Jennings Bryan has undertaken the vegetarian cure for society fatigue.

The strenuous social life led by the premier of the cabinet and Mrs. Bryan since inauguration have tired her so that she has been obliged to retire temporarily from the social whirl and recuperate at a nearby sanitarium where meat is regarded as poison and only vegetables are served.

AGENT BREAKS IN AND SELLS BURLESON BOOK

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Postmaster General Burleson is out $5, but he has a perfectly good book. "Ed" Smith, confidential clerk, explained to a visitor that his chief was very busy, but he managed to get him in.

"Look here, Smith," said the Postmaster General afterwards, "don't you know that you let a book agent in to see me. But never mind. He had a book for sale for which I have been looking for the last three years, and I bought one from him."

Wayman First Asked Doctor to Kill Him

Physician at Inquest Says Chicago Attorney Wanted Vital Organ Cut in Operation.

CHICAGO, May 3.—That John E. W. Wayman, former State's Attorney, who shot and killed himself April 17, had asked Dr. W. K. Murray some time previously to kill him was the testimony developed to-day at the Coroner's inquest. Dr. Murray himself made the admission.

"Did he ask you to operate so that a vital organ would be cut, causing death?" Dr. Murray was asked.

"Yes," he replied.

Spring-Tired, Spring-Sick,

Spring-Weak, Spring-Miserable, is a prevalent condition at this season, caused by impure blood. Thousands are "off their feed," have poor appetite, bad digestion, dull headaches, heavy feet, tire easily, think slowly, and work poorly. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the ideal remedy. It purifies and vitalizes the blood, overcomes that tired feeling, sharpens the appetite, aids digestion, and makes life worth living. Buy a bottle and begin to take it today. Accept no substitute.

MISSES Ethel Thornton, top, and Verna Ruth Harris, two of the three talented Atlanta young women who will give a recital to-night at Cable Hall for the benefit of the supper fund of the Night School for Working Girls.

SUCCESS ASSURED BENEFIT RECITAL

Proceeds of Entertainment To-night to Aid Girls' Night School Supper Fund.

Atlanta's interest in the Girls' Night School has already insured success for the recital to-night at Cable Hall by Miss Ethel Thornton, Miss Verna Ruth Harris and Miss Agnes Coleman for the benefit of the school's supper fund.

More than 150 working girls of Atlanta, otherwise denied advantages of education, are enrolled in the school, and the heavy attendance wellnigh has exhausted the supper fund. The recital was found necessary, officials of the school say, that they might be able to pay the bills of the school for the final month of the session.

The recital this evening will be one of readings and elocution. Selections humorous, dramatic and in dialect will be given by the three young women, all of whom have attained local fame in their work.

The Girls' Night School is on the second floor of the building at Peachtree Street and Viaduct Place. Its enrollment numbers 155 girls, who go for instruction each evening at 6:30 o'clock, immediately upon quitting work. It is that they may reach the school at once that the supper is spread for them.

Much of the expense of the supper is paid by the school management out of the supper fund.

CLEMSON ALUMNI MEET AT UNIVERSITY CLUB

Ordinance Starts Exodus of Palmists

Soothsayers Fold Tents and Leave Atlanta, Following Fight Made by Councilman.

Had Atlanta palmists, seers, clairvoyants and readers of the future read their own palms and told their own fortunes during the past three weeks they might have been happier than they are to-day. They are on their way to-day to other parts in droves.

"A tall dark man," who has proven that fortune-tellers do not control the future at their own sweet will, is Councilman Claude Ashley. His ordinance prohibiting the practice of palmistry and kindred occult arts in Atlanta has been unanimously recommended for adoption, and the colony of seers that has made Atlanta its home for years must fold its tents and silently steal away to more fertile fields.

It is practically certain that Council will approve the measure Monday.

RESINOL RELIEVED ITCHING AT ONCE

And Cured Skin Humor in a Month.

Brooklyn, Nov. 1, 1912.—"At first little red spots were seen on my arms and body, which I noticed were getting larger every day. They itched me so much that I scratched myself until I bled. There were times when I stood up all night and scratched. I was troubled about three weeks, during which time I used ——, which seemed to do me no good whatever. Then, finally, I thought of trying Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. As soon as I applied Resinol Ointment I felt much relief. After using it a few times, I noticed the sore spots slowly fading away, and in about a month I was cured completely." (Signed) Adolph Schoen, 742 Shipherd Avenue.

The soothing, healing balsams in Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap, penetrate every tiny pore of the skin, clearing it of all impurities, driving away eczema, rashes, ringworm, psoriasis, and other eruptions, and making pimples and blackheads impossible. Prescribed by physicians for eighteen years. For free samples write to Dept. 16-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md. Practically every druggist sells Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap.

HEALTH BOARD WILL URGE DOG MUZZLING LAW

Three Hundred Cases of Rabies Treated Already This Year Presented as Argument.

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

The State Board of Health will urge upon the incoming Legislature, as directly as it may, the great desirability of a dog-muzzling law in Georgia.

The board is realizing that it is somewhat difficult to enact any sort of legislation having to do with dogs in this State, and to make that legislation effective after it has been enacted. Still, when the people are made to understand, if they can be made to understand, that an enforced dog-muzzling law would in three years rid Georgia of all danger of rabies, and that already this year the department has treated at the capitol well over three hundred cases of this dreadful disease, the board believes the Legislature may be brought to see the very great desirability, if not absolute necessity, of such a law.

A dog-muzzling law will be offered in the Legislature, and it will be vigorously backed, not only by health boards and doctors throughout the State, but by several influential members. The State Board of Health feels that the mere muzzling of dogs, entailing some possible discomfort upon them, as it may, still is infinitely preferable to an ever-increasing list of patients to be treated for rabies.

Dog tax laws always have been unpopular in Georgia, and those that have been passed never have been enforced. The dogs seems to have plenty of friends in Georgia—even the "yaller" curs and "flop-eared" hounds of the more rural persuasion.

If the State Board of Health can succeed in showing conclusively however, that the dogs are getting to be, year by year, a more and more deadly peril to the people, and particularly to children—for they compose by far the greater portion of the patients treated—the chances are that some effective legislation may be obtained during the forthcoming summer session.

And, anyway, the board has every intention of putting the matter up to the General Assembly, fairly and squarely.

A member-elect of the incoming Legislature has prepared two companion bills for the General Assembly's early consideration, both of which are of far-reaching consequence and assured of strong support.

One bill will provide for a central point of execution for crime in capital cases—probably at Milledgeville—and the other will provide for the substitution of the electric chair for the gallows.

Both bills are thought to have excellent chances of passing the next Legislature.

Elaborate arrangements are under way, looking to the sumptuous entertainment of Josephus Daniels, of North Carolina, Secretary of the Navy, when he visits Savannah on or about May 10.

It is planned to give him a banquet at the De Soto Hotel, to which a hundred or more prominenf South Georgians will be invited. The Secretary will be asked to deliver an address at this dinner, and to discuss particularly the navy and its possible relation to Savannah, and the coast cities of Georgia.

The Macon Telegraph should worry and get a wrinkle, for this is the latest obsession it is entertaining: "There is a duty of 45 cents a gallon on grape juice under the Payne-Aldrich law and it is retained in the Underwood bill, but if it is to become a fashionable drink, it will have to go on the free list as a necessary of life."

The Monticello News thinks the next Legislature can increase the State's available funds for appropriations to its various institutions by abolishing a few jobs around and about.

The News will be called down for treason or something of the sort, first thing it knows. Talk of abolishing jobs during Democratic times will be rated highly incendiary in certain quarters.

Colonel Johnson's nomination to be United States Consul to Shanghai is looked for within the next week or ten days.

The Railroad Commission will ask the Legislature for authority to order the erection of union passenger stations in cities and towns in Georgia, where, in the opinion of the commission, the conditions make such stations desirable and necessary to the accommodation of the traveling public.

The commission now has authority to order the erection of separate stations, but it has no authority whatever in the matter of compelling union stations.

The Lavonia Times refers to him as "Commissioner of Agriculture O'Conner."

If the Commissioner now is able to establish the fact that he was born on the 17th of St. Patrick's Day, he would seem to have the Irish vote cinched, all right.

Those esteemed contemporaries around and about Georgia that think Atlanta's recent spasm of grand opera more or less amusing, should drop in next July and August and see the Jawjaw Legislature in session.

That's an annual show for your life!

500 Newsboys Will Be Guests at Feast

S. V. D. Fraternity and Woman's Aid Society of Y. M. C. A. Plan Big Entertainment May 13.

Five hundred newsboys and other boys will be the guests of the S. V. D. Fraternity and the Women's Aid Society of the Y. M. C. A. at a feast May 13.

Members of the fraternity to-day were active in the work of preparation. They selected ten business men for the honorable task of paying $3 each toward the expenses of the feast. The ten men, known to be ardent workers in child welfare and charitable enterprises, were chosen without being notified. They will be visited shortly by a delegation from the fraternity requesting the subscription.

Cards will be issued to about 500 newsboys, but arrangements for the entertainment of 600 persons will be made.

H. Cobb Caldwell Out Of Hospital Monday

Peachtree Road Resident Not Seriously Injured When Run Down by William McKenzie.

H. Cobb Caldwell, of the Peachtree Road, who sustained a broken collarbone and a sprained ankle when he was run down by William McKenzie's automobile Thursday night, probably will be able to leave Wesley Memorial Hospital Monday or Tuesday. Mr. Caldwell's family said this morning he was rapidly recovering, and that no serious results were anticipated.

The accident was at Eleventh Street and the Peachtree Road. As Mr. Caldwell crossed the road to enter his home he failed to see the automobile coming. Mr. McKenzie did not see Mr. Caldwell until it was too late to stop the car.

20,000 JOIN EGG SEARCH AT PARK

Children of Atlanta Contest for Prizes This Afternoon in Annual "Easter" Hunt.

When a man with a trombline slide the first notes of "Dixie" out of his horn at 3 o'clock this afternoon 20,000 Atlanta children spread over Grant Park like bees over a flower searching for 200,000 candy eggs in the weeds and grass. For to-day was the day of the annual Easter egg hunt of the Atlanta Park Board, an event children have been looking forward to for months.

All morning 15 or 20 men have worked, scattering the vast number of eggs, and as the children line up on the boundary lines and impatiently await the signal, Grant Park looked like an old-fashioned "crazy quilt." Red egg lay side by side with blue egg, and yellow egg nestle against white in a riotuous maze of color. No attempt was made to hide the 200,000 eggs the children tried to find. They were simply sown over the ground from large baskets, and even that work kept the 20 men busy all day.

The 41 prize eggs, however, were really hidden. Forty of these prize eggs are made of wood and bear numbers. When presented at the pavilion the child lucky finder was given a prize bearing a corresponding number.

The grand prize was a "golden egg." This egg is made of brass, and inside of it was an order for a five dollar gold piece.

To prevent a repetition of accidents that marred the hunt last year, all vehicles were excluded from the park from 12 o'clock until the egg hunt was over.

The committee in charge of the egg hunt comprises W. C. Puckett, T. L. Bond, R. A. Burnett, C. I. Branan and Roger Winter.

Report on Sociology Congress in Church

Members of Central Congregational To-morrow Will Give Short Talks on Impressons.

Echoes from the Southern Sociological Congress, whose meetings in Atlanta ended last week, will be heard at the Central Congregational Church to-morrow evening, when several members of the congregation will give five-minute talks on impressions and the instruction they received. The talks will be in the nature of reports by those who attended to those who could not be present. The speakers will be: On child welfare, Mrs. H. B. Wey and Mrs. J. W. Mason; negro problem, W. D. Smith and E. H. Webster; organized charities, Mrs. Laura White; church and social service, J. Wallace Hoyt and A. W. Farlinger.

At the regular morning service Dr. Hanscom will deliver a sermon on the subject, "Sin Causes Present and Eternal Loss." A special musical program for the day has been arranged by Miss Ethel Beyer.

GEORGIA TO TAKE PART IN TRIANGULAR DEBATE

ATHENS, GA., May 3.—The University of Georgia will have two debating teams in the field to-night, one in Athens against a Washington and Lee team and one in New Orleans against Tulane.

H. L. Rogers, of Reidsville, and Ira Funkenstein, of Athens, will speak here. W. A. Mann, of Milner, and Calvin George, of Madison, are in New Orleans. They will debate the question that labor unions subserve the best interests of the country.

ROUND-ABOUT-TOWN STORIES

The Question That Always Made Him Boil.

After standing by for fifteen minutes listening to the stream of questions put to a policeman at a busy corner the woman said:

"Don't you get awfully tired of answering all these fool questions that are put to you hour after hour?"

"Well, rather," said he. "Still I've got so used to it that there is only one of the lot that makes me actually boil."

"Which one is that?" she inquired.

"Don't I get awfully tired of answering all the fool questions that other folks ask."

"Oh," said the woman, and hurried on.

Cats For Rent Is the Latest.

A well-known Atlantan just back from a trip to New York tells this one:

In the window of an animal and bird store not far from Broadway and Eightieth Street hangs a sign that says:

How Motion Signs Are Now Designed.

"The electric sign is only in its infancy," said a well-known electrician yesterday. "I was in New York last week and made it a point to see all the big electrical signs that I could. I met the junior member of an electrical sign construction company and while we were walking up Broadway after the theater he called my attention to one of the blazing displays in which a horse appears on a gallop.

"'Has it ever occurred to you,' said he, 'how detailed must be the work of the sign builder to represent the movements of living beings in bulbs, and make them artistically realistic? We have to go far afield sometimes to obtain the lifelike effect. That horse, for example, plants his hoofs just as in real life—otherwise that sign would be an animated cartoon. Now, to get the individual or disjointed movements of the legs in their order of sequence the builder minded that the eye of the camera is keener than man's, procured the motion picture film of a galloping horse and, examining each snapshot, drew his plans in duplicate. Flashing his bulbs on and off with the same speed employed by a movie operator, the designer has produced the effect of smooth and continuous motion.'"

FITTERY FACES BRADY IN GAME AT SLAGTOWN

By Joe Agler.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., May 3.—It listens like the big noise here this afternoon to me. Manager Molesworth will dig up Fittery to work against us—and from what we all hear he is some worker.

Bill Smith is going after the game with King Brady.

He thinks the King is going to be dead right to-day and so do I. If so, I'm not looking for a lot of hits, but we ought to squeeze out a victory.

The Crackers are in absolutely perfect condition and are strong for the game to-day.

Crackers Go to Mobile Next.

To-night we move on to Mobile for a game with the Gulls Sunday. We are going down there to take three out of four from Mike Finn, and we shall never be satisfied unless we do it.

We can't see the Gulls looming so big and don't anticipate a very hard time with them.

We have certainly made Christians out of the scribes in this city. They are all convinced that Billy has got a good club, and that we will finish one-two-three.

Bausewein Goes Good.

We took another hard fought battle from the Barons yesterday, 2 to 1. Bausewein twirled a fine game, and was master of the Barons all the way. They could hit him a bit but never in the pinches. He got in trouble only once—in the eighth. In that inning he pulled out before anything serious had happened.

Bausewein's curve was breaking fine yesterday and his control was great.

The Cracker fielding these days is all to the merry, and yesterday we made a lot of fast plays on hard hit balls.

Pat Graham made a splendid catch in the eighth that saved two scores. Pat is improving every day in the outfield.

M'GOORTY AND CLABBY FIGHT 10-ROUND DRAW

DENVER, COLO., May 3.—Eddie McGoorty and Jimmy Clabby went ten fast rounds to a draw here last night. It was the first fight staged in the State since the Legislature legalized boxing.

Both boys put up a great exhibition of cleverness. McGoorty had a slight shade in the first couple of rounds, but Jimmy evened matters up in the third and fourth. The next couple of rounds were rather tame. The boys, however, warmed up to matters later in the going and had several warm mix-ups with honors even.

PELICANS SELL COTTON KNAUPP TO BILLIKENS

MOBILE, ALA., May 3.—Manager Johnny Dobbs of the Montgomery club has purchased Shortstop Cotton Knaupp from New Orleans, and he will report here to-day. Kutina will play first after the Mobile series, Tarleton becoming utility man.

DANNY MAHER WINS AGAIN.

NEW MARKET, ENGLAND, May 3.—The 1,000-guinea stake was won here to-day by J. B. Joel's 3-year-old filly, Jest, ridden by Danny Maher. Taslett was second, and Prue third. Twenty-two ran. All the starters carried 126 pounds. The distance was one mile.

FINE REMEDY FOR ECZEMA

Also for Salt Rheum, Tetter, Psoriasis, Lupus, and All Skin Afflictions.

Even a Microscope Won't Find a Blemish After S. S. S. Gets Through.

All skin troubles should be attacked from within by giving the blood circulation a good daily bath. This is accomplished with S. S. S., the best known and most highly recommended blood purifier ever discovered. Its action is very rapid. Its vegetable nature is such that it naturally goes right into the blood, saturates the entire circulation, bathes the tissues with an influence that enables the skin to heal quickly. The action of S. S. S. is that of an antidote, and this fact has been demonstrated time and time again in the most severe forms of weeping eczema.

Its influence in the tissues where the tiny arteries transfer the red blood for the worn out blood to the veins is quite remarkable and goes on constantly with every tick of the clock—the beat of the heart.

And new skin is thus caused to form, while the germs of irritating influences that cause eczema are scattered and their harmful nature entirely suspended.

S. S. S. has a wonderful tonic influence in the blood because it contains no "dope," is not a "physic," is entirely free of any mineral drugs or any other drugs except the remarkable medicinal effect of the pure vegetable products of which it is made.

Few people realize how harmful are many of the strong, crude ointments that used to be in favor before they learned that S. S. S. is safe, speedy and sure. Ask at any drug store for a bottle of S. S. S. Give it a good trial and you will soon see a decided improvement in any form of skin trouble. Write to The Swift Specific Co., 127 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for special free advice on eczema and any other form of skin or blood trouble.

Dunn and Graham Nab Thieves

Crackers Not Stealing Very Well

By Percy H. Whiting.

IF the Cracker base stealers were as good as the Cracker catchers the Atlanta team would have the whole league on the run.

In 19 games this season the Cracker catchers have allowed only 18 men to steal bases, or slightly less than one stolen base to the game.

How much better than the average the work of Joe Dunn and Pat Graham is, can be judged from the fact that in all of last season in the Southern League, 1,532 bases were stolen, or an average of 1.37 bases for each team in each game.

* * *

THE best defensive catching in the league is being done by the Birmingham catchers. In 17 games Dilger and Mayer allowed but 13 stolen bases. Atlanta ranked second while Gabby Street, virtually single handed, held the Lookouts up in third place. The New Orleans catchers have made the most horrible showing—allowing almost two stolen bases for the opposition in each game.

The number of stolen bases allowed on an average in each game by the Southern League catchers thus far this season is here shown:

Clubs.	Games.	S. B.	S. B. Per Game
Birmingham	17	13	.76
Atlanta	19	18	.95
Chattanooga	18	20	1.11
Nashville	18	20	1.11
Memphis	20	23	1.15
Mobile	21	28	1.33
Montgomery	20	31	1.55
New Orleans	23	44	1.91

* * *

DILGER of Birmingham, the greatest defensive catcher in the league last season, is up to his old tricks again and has allowed an average of but .71 stolen bases to the game—against an average for all teams last season, you will recall of more than 1 1-3 a game. Graham of Atlanta, and Mayer, of Birmingham, are tied for second honors in preventing base stealing. Joe Dunn is seventh among the regulars, with an average of 1.11 runners who have stolen on his throwing this season.

IT is well to note, of course, that the number of bases stolen by a team does not depend entirely on the throwing strength of a catcher. A proper rating would show how many bases were stolen in relation to the number of opponents who reached first. If the opposing players didn't get any hits, any free passes or arrive at first by being hit; or on the other hand if all the hits were three-baggers or homers, there would not be many bases stolen. In the long run, however, the number of bases stolen gives a fair line on what a catcher can do.

Here is the complete record of the number of bases stolen off catchers in the Southern League this season, up to yesterday:

Catchers. Clubs.	Games	S. B.	S. B. Per G.
Dilger, Birmingham	7	5	.71
Graham, Atlanta	10	8	.80
Mayer, Birmingham	10	8	.80
Street, Chattanooga	17	15	.88
Seabough, Memphis	1	1	1.00
Noyes, Nashville	14	15	1.07
Haigh, Memphis	11	12	1.09
Dunn, Atlanta	9	10	1.11
Ludwig, Nashville	4	5	1.25
Snell, Memphis	8	10	1.25
Brown, Mobile	10	13	1.30
Schmidt, Mobile	11	15	1.36
Donahue, Montgomery	14	19	1.43
Yantz, New Orleans	13	24	1.85
Angermeier, N. O.	15	20	2.00
Gribbens, Montgomery	6	12	2.00
Hannoh, Chattanooga	1	5	5.00

* * *

THE Crackers, unfortunately, can not steal bases as well as they can prevent their being stolen. However thus far the locals have stuck right around the average, with 1.37 steals to the game. Mobile leads in stealing, Memphis is second and poor, old Chattanooga is last, with an average of a stolen base every two games. Here is the table that shows the number of bases stolen per game by the teams of the league:

Teams.	S. B.	Av. Per G.
Mobile	45	2.14
Memphis	30	1.43
New Orleans	32	1.39
Atlanta	26	1.37
Montgomery	24	1.20
Birmingham	21	1.16
Nashville	18	1.00
Chattanooga	11	.58

PREP LEAGUE NOTES

Bill Starr is the tennis champion of Boys High School. In the tournament just finished at East Lake Starr and Harris won the doubles, and Starr also won the singles.

* * *

Harris, who was Starr's running mate in the doubles, was picked to win in the singles, but in the play off between himself and Starr, the latter came off victorious. Three sets were played, and Starr's score was 4—6, 7—7 and 7—5. Jones was the runner-up in the singles.

* * *

Starr has issued a challenge to meet any tennis player in the Prep League. This challenge is not confined to the Atlanta prep schools, however, as Starr is willing to meet any prep school tennis player in the State.

* * *

Gordon and Riverside will clash today in a game that means much in deciding the prep championship of the State. Riverside has yet to meet defeat this year. If Gordon can beat them, they can lay claim to the championship. Slappey, the star southpaw, will do the twirling for Riverside.

* * *

Coach Peebles, of Emory, has picked the track squad which will represent the school in the meet which Mercer at Macon to-day. The big point winner will no doubt be Carlton, the senior, who singled-handed won enough points in the inter-class meet last week to give his class the highest total number of points.

* * *

Emory is determined to make a creditable showing in the meet to-day, as it is the first time the school has participated in inter-collegiate athletics in three years. There are thirteen athletes on the squad.

* * *

The Freshman class is still in the lead in the inter-class baseball tournament at Emory College. Yesterday the Freshmen beat the Sophomores by a score of 12 to 3. The Freshmen are three whole games to the good in the standing of the teams.

* * *

Here is the standing of the teams in the class tournament at Emory:

	Won.	Lost.	P. C.
Freshmen	5	1	.833
Sophomores	3	2	.600
Seniors	2	2	.500
Juniors	0	5	.000

* * *

The G. M. A. cadets were honored yesterday afternoon at their weekly dress parade by the presence of Governor and Mrs. Brown. After the dress parade was finished a military drill was held, including wall scaling feats and target practice.

* * *

Immediately after the drill was over the track men were out in their uniforms, practicing hard for the prep meet which takes place next Friday.

* * *

If the Boys High athletes continue in their determination not to enter the prep meet on May 9, there will be not more than thirty or forty entries in all. The decision of the Boys High team will rob the meet of much of its interest. Lockridge was expected to hang up some new records in the broad jump and hurdles.

* * *

Bill Bedell, of Tech High, is well again and is down to hard work in preparation for the meet May 9. Bedell is Tech High's main hope in this meet, and if he does not win at least two firsts the students will be disappointed.

* * *

At present the real fight for the local prep championship appears to be between Marist and Boys High, with the odds slightly in favor of the latter team, which has not lost a game and has won four. Marist has won three and lost one. The two teams will meet next week, and a fierce battle is expected.

* * *

The defeat of Tech High last Tuesday almost put the high school lads out of the race. The team has won three and lost two games. They will have to win all of the remaining games on the schedule in order to cop the pennant.

* * *

Holtzendorff, of Boys High, looks good in the pole vault in the meet next Friday. He won this event easily in the high school meet April 18 at Tech Flats, and has been practicing steadily ever since. He can now do over 9 feet without any trouble.

SEWANEE WILL TRY AGAIN TO BEAT JACKETS

THE Tech and Sewanee baseball teams will hook up this afternoon at Grant Field in the closing game of their series.

Coach Heisman is a little undecided about his battery men, but will use either Pitts or Eubanks on the slab, probably the former. Gordon probably will work for Sewanee.

The rejuvenated Jackets trounced the Tigers yesterday to the tune of 13 to 0 in a game replete with hits and errors, mostly hits. The Techites had their batting clothes on and rapped Eggleston from the box in the second inning. McGoodwin, who replaced him, fared little better and was relieved by Hammond in the sixth. Hammond pitched better ball and managed to hold the swatting Jackets to one hit for the remainder of the game.

Eubanks pitched stellar ball for Tech for four innings, allowing no hits, but was replaced by Gambill, who was touched up for a total of five, two of them being slow infield hits.

Second Inning Was BIG.

In the second inning, when the Jackets put across their swat fest, Montague was given a free pass to first and was advanced to second when Malone landed safe at first on Hammond's error. Amason beat out an infield hit and was safe with the bases full. Attridge bingled to left, scoring the first two runs of the game. T. Montague was next safe on Hammond's error, which scored Amason and Attridge. Montague managed to reach third on this play and stole home. Wooten placed one in the center garden, taking second on Moore's sacrifice, and was scored by Pitts' single to right. F. Montague filed out to Fanning and the agony was over. Hits did it, coupled with the Jackets' daring and heady base running. A story of the whole game would read much the same. But the contest was won right then and further details would be only adding insult to insult. The fielding of both teams was bright in patches, despite a few misplays, while the batting of Tech was a great improvement over other games this season. Their base running showed up well.

SYLVANIA PRISONER NOT SOUTH CAROLINA SLAYER

AUGUSTA, GA., May 3.—The negro suspect captured at Sylvania yesterday afternoon proved not to be Henry Austin, who killed two and wounded four white men in South Carolina, near the Savannah River. The negro arrested at Sylvania was a Georgia negro, who proved to the satisfaction of his captors that he had not been in South Carolina very recently at least. Austin is still at large.

FATHER TIME FANS ALL WHO STICK AROUND

THE passing from the Southern League of Otto Jordan, for years a landmark and in his prime the greatest fielder the league ever knew, recalls again to mind the old truth that youth and speed, not age and brains, win in baseball.

This year has been a hard one on old timers in Dixie. Harry Matthews tried it down in New Orleans but they couldn't see him. The old noodle was working, the arm wasn't; his head knew the rules but his legs had forgotten how to run.

Tommy Fisher was going to try a come back but he changed his mind. Lew McAllister, one of the world's best in his day, came to Atlanta, tried out and went back again. Teddy Bair and Dock Moskiman refused to report to the Vols rather than exhibit the infirmities due to advancing years; the Lookouts are about ready to part with Bill Chappelle, a fine old timer; Maloney, once a marvellous player, has just passed from the Mobile team.

It's the Same in Big Leagues.

In the major leagues also each passing year chants out the swan song of some battle-scarred veteran. The demands of age cannot be ignored; youth will be served, and every little while taps are being sounded for the retirement of one more diamond hero who has doffed his hat for the last time to the plaudits of thousands.

This year tends one to believe that the death knell of one shortstop at least is dangerously near the sounding point. This time it seems to be that grand player, Rhodie Wallace, of the St. Louis Browns. Then, too, reports from Pittsburg, though optimistic, still have a tang of foreboding about them that cannot be ignored. Wagner's knee is good to-day. How long will it last? the fans ask. For physicians appear to be a unit in declaring that injuries to one's knee have a discomfiting habit of bobbing up a long time after everything seems to have been covered over about the member.

MERCER CAPTURES FINAL GAME FROM VANDEBBILT

MACON, GA., May 3.—Mercer captured the last game of the series with Vanderbilt yesterday by the score of 7 to 2. The Commodores at no time had a chance. The Baptists took the lead from the first, outclassed, outhit and outplayed the winners of Thursday's game.

Hunt twirled for the winners, while McClure did slab duty for the Commodores.

To hear the turnstiles click.

News of the Ring Game

Jimmy Grant is on the warpath. Jimmy read Meyer Prieg's challenge in The Georgian the other day. "So he wants to fight me, hey?" said the little Chicago boy. "Well, let him get a side bet of $500 and I will let him come in at catch-weights and fight him winner take all." After departing with these few words, Jimmy galloped up Peachtree Street, with George Gaelelis, his backer, at his heels.

Harry Pollock, manager of Freddie Welsh, is certainly having a hard time getting the star lightweights to meet his protege, Joe Rivers. Jack Britton and Willie Ritchie seem only too glad to steer clear of the British speed marvel.

Jeff O'Connell and Matty McCue will meet in a ten-round bout at Racine, Wis., May 15. Racine is Matty's home town. O'Connell has fought such stars as Frankie Whitney, Ad Wolgast (four times) and Frankie Conley. He should prove a tough customer for Matty.

Tom Jones is slowly grooming his big heavyweight, Jess Willard, for his match with Gunboat Smith May 17. Jones thinks a great deal of his hope, as he saw him in a couple of fights around Chicago.

Milwaukee fans are disgusted with Bob Moha. They claim that Moha is one of the greatest fighters in the world to-day, but that he refuses to train, thereby losing to many boys who he should, have no trouble in defeating. They point to the Jack Dillon bout as an example.

WOLGAST TO GET $2,500 FOR FRANKIE BURNS GO

SAN FRANCISCO, May 3.—Ad Wolgast has signed for another fight. He was matched in San Francisco yesterday to meet Frankie Burns, lightweight, of Oakland, Cal., in a ten-round battle at Oakland May 21. The men will battle at 133 pounds and weigh in at 3 p. m.

Wolgast is guaranteed $2,500, with the privilege of accepting 50 per cent of the gross receipts.

JACKET TRACK TEAM OFF FOR CLEMSON MEET

The Tech track team left this morning for Clemson, S. C., where they will compete with the track team representing Clemson College. This is the first meet of the season for the Techites, owing to the inability to arrange agreeable dates with the neighboring colleges, and it should bring out the best the Jackets have.

Coach Thomas has been putting his men through some stiff work the past few weeks and is confident of a victory. The Hillbillies from Clemson have a past record to be proud of and will endeavor to retain all their laurels.

Of the men who will make the trip, Logan, Robinson, Smith and Leuhymann are veterans of last year, who hold good records, and they can be depended upon to bring home the bacon in their events.

No-Rim-Cut Tires 10% Oversize

Tire Prices

With our new factories, we have built as high as 6,500 automobile tires daily.

This multiplied output has cut cost of production. And our profits, as usual, are kept down to the minimum.

So prices on No-Rim-Cut tires now average about 11 per cent less than last year.

No Extra

No-Rim-Cut tires now cost no more than any standard clincher tires.

Yet these tires save all the cost of rim-cutting. They save a ruin which wrecks 23 per cent of the hooked-base clincher tires.

And No-Rim-Cut tires are 10 per cent larger—contain 10 per cent more air—than clinchers. And that, with the average car, adds 25 per cent to the tire mileage.

Our Profit

Each year we advertise our profits. That is to show you exactly the value you get in a Goodyear tire.

In times past this profit has averaged about 8½ per cent. And this year, with our lowered prices, we do not expect to exceed that.

Thus it must be apparent that no tire maker can ever give more for the money.

We have the largest output, the newest factories, the most up-to-date equipment. None can possibly build equal tires at as low cost as we.

None dare sell on smaller margins. None this year show so large a reduction. Those are our ways for keeping cost per mile down to a record minimum. By No-Rim-Cut tires, by oversize tires, by the utmost in quality at an unmatched price. Come share these immense economies.

THREE ANGLES DEVELOP FROM TITLTE BATTLE

By W. W. Naughton.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF., May 3.—"If Kilbane had shown more willingness, you would have seen a better fight," said the Dundee crowd.

"If Dundee had been a little more inclined to mix it there would have been an entirely different verdict," said Kilbane's followers.

"There was too much feinting and holding on by both men," said the disgruntled fans.

There you have the three angles of the recent featherweight championship contest.

Each of the principals is thoroughly willing to try it all over again, and each claims that a draw decision will not be possible next time. Considering the careful training they had, it is not easy to see how either lad could improve to any particular extent on what he showed Tuesday night, and, in the meantime, there is no clamorous demand for another engagement.

The idea prevails, for that matter, that a second contest might prove tamer still. There is such a thing as rival boxers becoming too well acquainted with each other's strong points and adopting precautions that would render each successive match in which they figured more listless than its predecessor.

The blow fell hardest on Kilbane's followers. This because there was nothing in the affair to justify the making of the champion an odds-on 10 to 4 favorite.

Explanations are in order, of course, and an exceedingly naive one was furnished by a touring sportsman who comes from the champion's home town.

"Here is the way I account for it," said the man from Cleveland. "To begin with, the Kilbane men were deprived of an opportunity to make a clean-up in the betting. When it comes to laying 10 to 4 you have to place a fortune to win anything, and it is not worth the risk. All right. Now, it seems to me, they figured that if Kilbane beat Dundee too decisively Kilbane would be fighting himself out of a job. It is all very well to talk of Kilbane going in with the lightweights, but I think he'd rather stay with the feathers. He saw he would not win any bets by defeating Dundee, and he probably made up his mind to do just enough to earn the decision, and then look forward to another go with Dundee in New York. You know they would draw a tremendous crowd at Madison Square Garden, and the New Yorkers would be quite willing to accept 10 to 8 against Dundee."

"But Kilbane did not do enough to earn the decision," was remarked.

"Well, that's purely a matter of opinion. I think he did."

SOUSA SHOOTS TO-DAY AT BROOKHAVEN GUN CLUB

The Brookhaven Gun Club will hold its first shoot of the season on the club grounds this afternoon. John Philip Sousa, famous band leader and one of the most expert trap shooters in the United States, will be the guest of Mr. Lester and will participate in the shoot.

At present Mr. Sousa is on a vacation tour and likes nothing better than a few hours sport with the blue rocks. A new trap has been installed on the grounds and another one will be set up later in the season. The shoot to-day is an exhibition match and is open to all members of the club.

MICHAEL M'DERMOTT WINS NATIONAL TANK TITLE

CHICAGO, May 3.—Michael McDermott, of the Illinois Athletic Club, won the National Amateur Athletic Union breast-stroke championship for 220 yards last night in 2:55 2-5, almost 20 seconds below his world's record.

A new world's record was made when eighteen members of the I. A. C., composing a relay team, swam a mile in 18:46 4-5, bettering the record held by the club of 18:52.

GEORGE ROHE LET OUT; WAS HERO OF BIG SERIES

NEW ORLEANS, May 3.—Taps sounded to-day for George Rohe, who was the hero of the White Sox-Cubs world's championship battle several years ago. He was unconditionally released by the local club and is declared to be "all in" as a diamond athlete.

JOHN L. HAD REAL K. O.

Fans Like Fighter With a Wallop

By Ed. W. Smith.

CHICAGO, ILL., May 3.—One must admire the clever ringster who gets away with the pretty stuff and does the job up beautifully, but when one gets right down to cases it's the party whose one mighty wallop stretches the foe out on his back for the full count who becomes king in a night, and stays king as long as the punch is in good working order. In other words, while the clever fellow may even become champion, the walloper who continually displays the K. O. swat is first in the hearts of his countrymen, even though he may never become a champion. The case of Johnny Kilbane is a good one in point. Lots and lots of fans would go to see Johnny and come away marveling at his wonderful footwork, his infallible judgment of distance and other technical points. But they would talk longer and rave louder over one of Matty McCue's knockouts.

Sullivan a Hero.

Back in the days of long ago when Mr. Sullivan, of Boston, discovered that he could club them into somnolence better with a five-ounce glove wrapped tightly around his Milesian fist than he could with the bare digit, he became one of the world's greatest, or at least one of the world's most admired men. Those who didn't openly admire the first Queensberry champion at least did so secretly, for he was a red-blooded fellow with the wallop. And wallopers ever since have commanded first call in the attention of the races. Clever Corbett was never exactly an idol, though one of the world's greatest boxers. His successor, Fitzsimmons, who knocked 'em dead with one punch, was a huge idol, despite his foreign origin, and Jeffries, too, because of the weight of his blow, was looked upon as invincible for years.

Britt Defeated Corbett.

So it has been in other clases. Terry McGovern was the scream of the nation for years and years, though he never really attained any particular championship. He was whipped by another puncher, who in turn fell before speed and cleverness. But the men who whipped Young Corbett never got the glad acclaim from the fans that greeted either Corbett or McGovern when they appeared in the squared arena. The ideal fighter in the eyes of the general or average fight fan is the chap who combines skill and force, a man of the Joe Gans or the Stanley Ketchel or the Bob Fitzsimmons type. This type is mighty rare, for the fighter of today is there to gather the shekels and thinks more of dodging a blackened eye or a bruised mouth than he does of knocking an opponent out.

Naughton's Judgment Good.

Perhaps Referee Eyton may have some of these ideas in mind when he called that Los Angeles scrap between Kilbane and Dundee a draw the other night. From all accounts Kilbane got more than a shade the worst of that verdict, though our old side-kick, Bill Naughton, never mentions it as being a wrong verdict—and we bank more than a little on Uncle Bill's judgment. So perhaps it was all right after all and that Kilbane didn't really beat the hardy little Italian from New York. Kilbane is a wonderful boxer, but he hasn't the mule-like swat that makes for public idolatry.

McCue Didn't Stop Williams.

Matty McCue didn't make it ten straight knockouts when he met Posey Williams in Milwaukee the other night in a six-round bout, Posey went in there to stay, and stay he did. A boxer who is trying to knock out a man who is strictly on the defensive has little chance, for he gets few openings and the other fellow is devoting every instant of his time to dodging that K. O. punch that he knows is coming over. You must get a man to open up if you would knock him out, and this evidently Matty failed to accomplish.

Matty vs. O'Connell.

Jeff O'Connell, the little Briton, who is Matty's next serious opponent, is not going to lack for backing when he faces the Racine star. Jim McNulty, of the West Side, is a staunch friend of Jeff and says that if Jeff trains properly for the contest he will wager $1,000 that he gets the popular verdict in ten rounds. Joe D'Andrea also is a supporter of the O'Connell end on this occasion.

DREAD OF TOE HOLD DEFEATS ALL FOREIGNERS

CHICAGO, May 3.—It is the fear of the terrible toe hold that foreign wrestlers have that defeats them before they get into the ring with Frank Gotch. This at least is the opinion of Gotch himself, expressed when he was in the city the other day and discussed his recent bout in Kansas City with George Lurich, the Russian.

This was described by the Kansas City sport writers as an easy thing for the Humboldt man, they claiming that Lurich did not show anywhere near as well against the champion as he did against some of the lesser lights that he tackled there in previous matches.

That was perfectly natural, for a champion is supposed to show superiority over all of them. But Gotch has his own explanation of the situation, that developed just before and immediately after Lurich faced him in the ring.

Hold Talk of Europe.

"You can bet all you've got in the world that this toe hold of mine—of course other wrestlers use it, but it generally has been credited to me as being something of my own invention—has been the talk of Europe ever since I defeated Hackenschmidt the first time," Gotch said. "Remember that I have been over there and know just how they feel about it.

"Of course it gets noised around, for wrestlers are no different from any other kind of people, and do a lot of gossiping among themselves. I heard some of this while I was over there and know that the Europeans look upon me as being some sort of a terrible animal and a bone crusher.

"Naturally this gossip goes from one to another, and the stories do not lose anything by repetition. They think over there that all I do is to get the toe hold, or try to get it, all the time I am wrestling.

Seldom Uses Toe Grip.

"As a matter of fact, I have used it but seldom, and do not know at all that I ever won a fall with it in an important match. Wrestlers over here know that I use it more for a feint than anything else.

"It is useful for that, especially when an opponent has his legs tightly clamped together. Well, at any rate, when Lurich was preparing for the ring he was talking excitedly in German to his handlers, and the whole gist of the conversation was on the toe hold.

"When finally we were ready to begin and started for the ring I noticed that he was as white as chalk and looked about as nervous as any man I ever saw. This didn't wear off at all after we got started, and he kept jerking his feet and legs away from me in a horrified manner every time I reached for him.

"I knew what he was thinking of and naturally kept him worried by feinting at him. This made him forget all that he seemed to know about ordinary wrestling and naturally made him an easy mark.

"Hack" Feared Clutch.

"Hackenschmidt was really afraid of the same thing, and the constant brooding over the toe hold in advance of a match with me beats all of them. You see, the hold hits the knee more than any other place, as the leverage is placed right there. And water on the knee is an athlete's most hideous nightmare. Once you get that you are out of business for all time."

It may be mentioned right here that George Hackenschmidt was put completely out of business through the injury he suffered to his knee while training for the second Gotch bout. It is understood on this side that Hackenschmidt has had several operations to relieve the injury, but that they have been unsuccessful.

In consequence the once mighty Russian is unable to show with even a posing act. It is said that his career is completely at an end.

GOLF IS URGED FOR PREACHERS BY CHICK EVANS

By "Chick" Evans.

NOT long ago I received a letter from a friend who lives in a little town in Michigan. He asked me to select some golf clubs and he particularly desired me to use my very best judgment in the matter of selection.

He explained that the clubs were not for himself, but for a clergyman and he thought that if the clubs were the best possible the preacher would be spared the provocation that so frequently leads the average golfer to do and say very unclerical things.

It is perhaps hardly necessary to say that I was only pleased to use the utmost pains in choosing clubs for the reverend gentleman, from the early beginning of my own game I have always had a particularly kindly feeling for men of his profession, and I have always believed that golf is the one game that is certainly adapted to their needs. It certainly would prove of great benefit to the health and happiness of overworked, earnest and discontented priests and preachers.

SANTAL CAPSULES MIDY CATARRH OF THE BLADDER Relieved in 24 Hours Each Capsule bears the name MIDY Beware of counterfeits

OUR private opinion is that Jack Prince is going to coin money with that track of his, out at the old show grounds. With a million feet of timber already delivered—or maybe it was a billion—Jack always deals in big, round figures—and a hundred carpenters at his command, Jack will start things whooping today and keep them that way until the third week of this month, when he expects to be ready to open his doors

This town is going wild over motorcycle racing on a soup dish track. It wanted to go crazy over automobile racing but the Speedway was so far from Atlanta there wasn't a chance. They were inclined to be keen over bicycle racing but the Coliseum was too far from Five Points.

Jack Prince now promises to give them something about twice as exciting as automobile racing and bicycle racing rolled together. And he will stage it at a new track only a stone's throw (if you're a good thrower) from the center of Atlanta.

Of course Jack has rounded up the cream of the world's talent—you all know Jack—and he is going to put on something that will set the place ablaze.

It really looks like a great proposition, from an amusement viewpoint. The people are sure to take to it strong.

I forgot to tell you in my last letter about Dad's coming to town. It seems as dad is dead set agin me fitin and he found where i was trainin so he came around and wanted me to go back home, he said that i mite better be home helpin on the farm, plowing and hay fever coming on and he with his hands full and me here in the city fooling my time away and the city fellers making a fool of me, interest comming due on the mortgage and no bread in the house. I told dad that i couldnt quit now cause the fellers would say I had a streak of yeller in me quitin.

Yesterday that little cuss Ike Mann showed up again and i asked him if he wanted to put on the gloves agin and he said nix. then he called me off to one side and asked me if i would throw the fite for $300 and how far. I asked him what he meant, he said he would give me $300, if i would lay down to Cyclops sam after a while i found out what he wanted, he wanted me to make believe that cyclops sam liks me in our fite. I told him I was in this fite to win I got to begin climbing telegraph poles to-morrow and strengthin my stommick and chect muskels. I got to climb 24 poles every day till the fite, great exercize but kind of hard work climbing so many every day steddy. my bad dreams still keep up, last night I dreamed i was climbing Mt. M'kinley with Dock Cook when my foot slipped and I fell down the mountain bout 5 miles and landed in a big pile of dutch cheese. I think that all comes from eatin so much cheese. but it may mean I'm in Dutch I dunno. I believe i am getting faster every day now just from drinking slippery ellum tea. Bud stebbin the town custabul of Joshua called on me to day and say it's funny but i'll have to wait till next week to tell you about it. tell all your friends to place their bets on yours truly

THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

A Bachelor's Diary

By MAX.

MARCH 25.—I comforted myself during that long period at the dinner table when the widow devoted herself to Jack Spencer with the reflection that at least I would get to put her on her train. I listened abstractedly to Jack's stories about his collection of scimitars with my mind busy planning all I wanted to say. She wasn't going far; perhaps, I could arrange to follow her in a day or two, and spend a day with her. Perhaps—who knows?—she might make love to me as violently as when we were in Florida in the winter.

The thought of such delicious danger thrilled me, and I was glad when we started back to the station.

We had reached the waiting room, and Jack, who seemed extremely officious, I thought, had sent me to the check room for Mrs. Brown's handbag, where I had to stand in line fully 15 minutes. It was annoying, of course, but in a few minutes, I thought, I would have the widow to myself, and that would make up for a great deal.

A Surprise.

Judge of my surprise, Diary, when I returned, to have Jack grab the bag from my hand, saying, in the coolest, most matter-of-fact way, "I'll put Mrs. Brown on her train, Max. I want to tell her the story of that scimitar I picked up in Tokio. You stay here with Sallie."

There was a hurried handshake with me, a renewed recital of the pleasure she had experienced in meeting Mrs. Spencer, and the widow was gone! For a moment I was dazed. I gazed blankly after them, Jack, leaning over the widow, as they walked, as if he had found a long lost possession, and was afraid if his eyes were removed he would lose it; then my eyes turned to Mrs. Spencer.

She didn't look bewildered, but on her face there was the slightest suspicion of a frown. Plainly, she was mad, but, just as plainly, she was too diplomatic to show it, even to me.

Then the humor of the situation flashed over me, and I fell into the seat next to hers, overcome with laughter. I believe I howled. I know I shrieked, and shook, and I know that others around me looked as if I might have gone suddenly insane, while on the faces of some there appeared a sympathetic grin. I hadn't laughed till the tears came in twenty years, but I laughed then till they rolled down my cheeks, and through it all Sallie Spencer never smiled.

It is a most fortunate dispensation of Providence that women have no sense of humor. If they had, they would laugh at themselves till they laughed themselves to death. Here sat Sallie Spencer, who had voluntarily made a sacrifice of her comfort that she might prevent a very fascinating woman having her old friend at her mercies for an evening, and perhaps eloping with him; and that most fascinating woman had carried off her husband instead. And she didn't see anything funny in it!

On the contrary, the more I laughed the more annoyed she grew.

"I hope," she said at length, "that you are enjoying yourself. I am sure I don't see anything funny in the situation."

Whereupon I laughed the harder, and was still laughing, with my mirth ebbing away in faint chuckles, when Jack returned.

"Why didn't you tell me, Max," he said, "that your friend is so interested in scimitars? Really, she is the most intelligent and appreciative woman I ever knew."

I pinched Mrs. Jack's arm as I replied: "Yes, she is very clever, a lot more interesting than the majority of these dull women we know who don't know a scimitar from a pickax and who would use one for cutting their corns if they had it."

Mrs. Jack gave me a reproachful look over her husband's shoulder, and I fell behind just long enough to laugh again.

Poor, Simple Jack.

Our talk was along the same line when in the limousine on the way home—Jack extolling the widow's beauty and her wit and I repeating at every opportunity what a great thing it was to meet a woman so clever.

"I'll wager, Jack," I said, "that you enjoyed her more than you have enjoyed any woman in years. It must be a great thing for a man like you to meet a kindred soul like hers. She isn't bound down to the plane of the commonplace like the women who keep house and think it is a great feat to get up a good dinner. Why, that woman can tell at a glance if a scimitar came from Adrianople or Damascus! And isn't that better, I want to know, than knowing a chuck steak from a porterhouse?"

I can count the compliments I paid the widow by the black and blue marks on my arm, Sallie Spencer giving me a pinch for every one, while Jack, on the opposite seat, saw nothing and detected no sarcasm in what I was saying.

When a man has a fad, he becomes insane on that subject. Here was a man whose fad was making him so insane it had led him to draw comparisons unfavorable to his wife; a woman who had always regarded his fad as something harmless because it kept him out of greater mischief. And she had seen in it nothing more.

I was not at all surprised this morning, while engaged in my hourly exercise of rescuing Manette's brown-eyed pup from larger dogs, and later in rescuing her kittens from the brown-eyed pup, to be called to the telephone and to hear Mrs. Spencer asking me to come right over. She wanted to have a talk with me.

A Powerful Story of Adventure, Intrigue and Love

WITHIN THE LAW

By MARVIN DANA from the Play of BAYARD VEILLER

What Has Gone Before

Mary Turner, a beautiful and refined girl, worked in the great Gilder store in New York.

There had been thefts in the store. They had been traced eventually to a certain department, that in which Mary worked. The detective was alert. Some valuable silks were missed. Search followed immediately. The goods were found in Mary's locker. That was enough. She was charged with the theft. She protested innocence—only to be laughed at in derision by her accusers. Every thief declares innocence, Mr. Gilder himself was emphatic against her. The thieving had been long continued. An example must be made. The girl was arrested. The jury found her guilty and she was sentenced to prison for three years.

Dick Gilder, the store proprietor's son, returns unexpectedly from Europe because he was homesick for his father. The latter's secretary tells him that Mr. Gilder has gone to court, that one of the girls was arrested for stealing.

"And Dad went to court to get her out of the scrape!" cries Dick. "That's just like the old man."

Now Go On With the Story

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"What's the use of all this pretense?" he demanded, sharply. "You were given a fair trial, and there's an end of it."

The girl, standing there so feebly, seeming indeed to cling for support to the man who always held her thus closely by the wrist, spoke again with an astonishing clearness, even with a sort of vivacity, as if she explained easily something otherwise in doubt.

"Oh, no, I wasn't!" she contradicted bluntly, with a singular confidence of assertion. "Why, if the trial had been fair, I shouldn't be here."

"That's What They All Say."

The harsh voice of Cassidy again broke in on the passion of the girl with a professional sneer.

"That's another thing they all say."

But the girl went on speaking fiercely, impervious to the man's coarse sarcasm, her eyes, which had deepened almost to purple, still fixed piercingly on Gilder, who, for some reason wholly inexplicable to him, felt himself strangely disturbed under that regard.

"Do you call it fair when the lawyer I had was only a boy—one whom the court told me to take, a boy trying his first case—my case, that meant the ruin of my life? My lawyer! Why, he was just getting experience—getting it at my expense!" The girl paused as if exhausted by the vehemence of her emotion, and at last the sparkling eyes drooped and the heavy lids closed over them. She swayed a little, so that the officer tightened his clasp on her wrist.

There followed a few seconds of silence. Then Gilder made an effort to shake off the feeling that had so possessed him, and to acertain degree he succeeded.

"The jury found you guilty," he asserted, with an attempt to make his voice magisterial in its severity.

Mary Was Aroused.

Instantly, Mary was aroused to a new outburst of protest. Once again her eyes shot their fires at the man seated behind the desk, and she went forward a step imperiously, dragging the officer in her wake.

"Yes, the jury found me guilty," she agreed, with fine scorn in the musical cadences of her voice. "Do you know why? I can tell you, Mr. Gilder. It was because they had been out for three hours without reaching a decision. The evidence didn't seem to be quite enough for some of them, after all. Well, the judge threatened to lock them up all night. The men wanted to get home. The easy thing to do was to find me guilty, and let it go at that. Was that fair, do you think? And that's not all, either. Was it fair of you, Mr. Gilder? Was it fair of you to come to the court this morning and tell the judge that I should be sent to prison as a warning to others?"

A quick flush burned on the massive face of the man whom she thus accused, and his eyes refused to meet her steady gaze of reproach.

"You know!" he exclaimed, in momentary consternation. Again her mood had affected his own, so that through a few hurrying seconds he felt himself somehow guilty of wrong against this girl, so frank and so rebuking.

"I heard you in the court room," she said. "The dock isn't very far from the bench where you spoke to the judge about my case. Yes, I heard you. It wasn't: Did I do it? Or didn't I do it? No; it was only that I must be made a warning to others."

Fell on Unheading Ears.

Again silence fell for a tense interval. Then, finally, the girl spoke in a different tone. Where before her voice had been vibrant with the instinct of complaint against the mockery of justice under which she suffered, now there was a deeper note, that of most solemn truth.

"Mr. Gilder," she said simply, "as God is my judge, I am going to prison for three years for something I didn't do."

But the sincerity of her broken cry fell on unheeding ears. The coarse nature of the officer had long ago lost whatever elements of softness there might have been to develop in a gentler occupation. As for the owner of the store, he was not sufficiently sensitive to feel the verity in the accents of the speaker. Moreover, he was a man who followed the conventional, with never a distraction due to imagination and sympathy. Just now, too, he was experiencing a keen irritation against himself because of the manner in which he had been sensible to the influence of her protestation, despite his will to the contrary. That irritation against himself only reacted against the girl and caused him to steel his heart to resist any tendency toward commiseration. So this declaration of innocence was made quite in vain—indeed, served rather to strengthen his disfavor toward the complainant and to make his manner harsher when she voiced the pitiful question over which she had wondered and grieved.

"Why did you ask the judge to send me to prison?"

"The thieving that has been going on in this store for more than a year has got to stop," Gilder answered emphatically, with all his usual energy of manner restored. As he spoke he raised his eyes and met the girl's glance fairly. Thought of the robberies was quite enough to make him pitiless toward the offender.

"Sending me to prison won't stop it," Mary Turner said, drearily.

"Perhaps not," Gilder sternly retorted. "But the discovery and punishment of the other guilty ones will." His manner changed to a business-like alertness. "You sent word to me that you could tell me how to stop the thefts in the store. Well, my girl, do this, and, while I can make no definite promise, I'll see what can be done about getting you out of your present difficulty." He picked up a pencil, pulled a pad of blank paper convenient to his hand and looked at the girl expectantly, with aggressive inquiry in his gaze. "Tell me now," he concluded, "who were your pals?"

It Was the Last Straw.

The matter-of-fact manner of this man who had unwittingly wronged her so frightfully was the last straw on the girl's burden of suffering. Under it, her patient endurance broke, and she cried out in a voice of utter despair that caused Gilder to start nervously, and even impelled the stolid officer to a frown of remonstrance.

"I have no pals!" she ejaculated, furiously. "I never stole anything in my life. Must I go on telling you over and over again?" Her voice rose in a wail of misery. "Oh, why won't any one believe me?"

Gilder was much offended by this display of an hysterical grief, which seemed to his phlegmatic temperament altogether unwarranted by the circumstances. He spoke decisively:

"Unless you can control yourself, you must go." He pushed away the pad of paper and tossed the pencil aside in physical expression of his displeasure. "Why did you send that message if you had nothing to say?" he demanded, with increasing choler.

"Give Them a Fair Chance."

But now the girl had regained her former poise. She stood a little drooping and shaken, where for a moment she had been erect and tensed. There was a vast weariness in her words as she answered:

"I have something to tell you, Mr. Gilder," she said, quietly. "Only, I—I sort of lost my grip on the way here, with this man by my side."

"Most of 'em do, the first time," the officer commented, with a certain grim appreciation.

"Well?" Gilder insisted querulously, as the girl hesitated.

At once, Mary went on speaking, and now a little increase of vigor trembled in her tones.

"When you sit in a cell for three months waiting for your trial, as I did, you think a lot. And, so, I got the idea that if I could talk to you I might be able to make you understand what's really wrong. And if I could do that, and so help out the other girls, what has happened to me would not, after all, be quite so awful—so useless, somehow." Her voice lowered to a quick pleading, and she bent toward the man at the desk. "Mr. Gilder," she questioned, "do you really want to stop the girls from stealing?"

"Most certainly I do," came the forcible reply.

The girl spoke with a great earnestness, deliberately.

"Then give them a fair chance."

The magnate stared in sincere astonishment over this absurd, this futile suggestion for his guidance.

"What do you mean?" he vociferated, with rising indignation. There was an added hostility in his demeanor, for it seemed to him that this thief of his goods whom he had brought to justice was daring to trifle with him. He grew wrathful over the suspicion, but a secret curiosity still held his temper within bounds. "What do you mean?" he repeated; and now the full force of his strong voice set the room trembling.

The tones of the girl came softly musical, made more delicately resonant to the ear by contrast with the man's roaring.

"Why," she said, very gently, "I mean just this: Give them a living chance to be honest."

"A living chance!" The two words were exploded with dynamic violence. The preposterousness of the advice fired Gilder with resentment so pervasive that through many seconds he found himself unable to express the rage that flamed within him.

The girl showed herself undismayed by his anger.

"Yes," she went on, quietly; "that's all there is to it. Give them a living chance to get enough food to eat, and a decent room to sleep in, and shoes that will keep their feet off the pavement winter mornings. Do you think that any girl wants to steal? Do you think that any girl wants to risk——?"

By this time, however, Gilder had regained his powers of speech, and he interrupted stormily:

"And is this what you have taken up my time for? You want to make a maudlin plea for guilty, dishonest girls, when I thought you really meant to bring me facts."

Nevertheless, Mary went on with her arraignment uncompromisingly. There was a strange, compelling energy in her inflections that penetrated even the pachydermatous officer, so that, though he thought her raving, he let her rave on, which was not at all his habit of conduct, and did indeed surprise him mightily. As for Gilder, he felt helpless in some puzzling fashion that was totally foreign to his ordinary self. He was still glowing with wrath over the method by which he had been victimized into giving the girl a hearing. Yet, despite his chagrin, he realized that he could not send her from him forthwith. By some inexplicable spell she bound him impotent.

"We work nine hours a day," the quiet voice went on, a curious pathos in the rich timbre of it; "nine hours a day, for six days in the week. That's a fact, isn't it? And the trouble is, an honest girl can't live on $6 a week. She can't do it, and buy food and clothes, and pay room rent and car fare. That's another fact, isn't it?"

Mary regarded the owner of the store with grave questioning in her violet eyes. Under the urgency of emotion, color crept into the pallid cheeks, and now her face was very beautiful—so beautiful, indeed, that for a little the charm of its loveliness caught the man's gaze, and he watched her with a new respect, born of appreciation for her feminine delightfulness. The impression was far too brief. Gilder was not given to esthetic raptures over women. Always, the business instinct was the dominent. So, after the short period of amazed admiration over such unexpected winsomeness, his thoughts flew back angrily to the matters whereof she spoke so ridiculously.

"I don't care to discuss these things," he declared peremptorily, as the girl remained silent for a moment.

"I Change My Policy?"

"And I have no wish to discuss anything," Mary returned evenly. "I only want to give you what you asked for—facts." A faint smile of reminiscence curved the girl's lips. "When they first locked me up," she explained, without any particular evidence of emotion, "I used to sit and hate you."

"Oh, of course!" came the caustic exclamation from Gilder.

"And then, I thought that perhaps you did not understand," Mary continued; "that if I were to tell you how things really are it might be you would change them somehow."

At this ingenuous statement the owner of the store gave forth a gasp of sheer stupefaction.

"I!" he cried, incredulously. "I change my business policy because you ask me to!"

There was something imperturbable in the quality of the voice as the girl went resolutely forward with her explanation. It was as if she were discharging a duty not to be gainsaid, not to be thwarted by any difficulty, not even the realization that all the effort must be ultimately in vain.

"Do you know how we girls live? But, of course you don't!" Three of us in one room, doing our own cooking over a two-burner gas stove, and our own washing and ironing evenings after being on our feet for nine hours."

The enumeration of the sordid details left the employer absolutely unmoved, since he lacked the imagination necessary to sympathize actually with the straining evil of a life such as the girl had known. Indeed, he spoke with an air of just remonstrance, as if the girl's charges were mischievously faulty.

"I have provided chairs behind the counters," he stated.

She Shook Her Head.

There was no especial change in the girl's voice as she answered his defense. It continued musically low, but there was in it the insistent note of sincerity.

"But have you ever seen a girl sitting in one of them?" she questioned, coldly. "Please answer me. Have you? Of course not," she said, after a little pause, during which the owner had remained silent. She shook her head in emphatic negation. "And do you understand why? It's simply because every girl knows that the manager of her department would think he could get along without her if he were to see her sitting down—loafing, you know! So, she would be discharged. All it amounts to is that, after being on her feet for nine hours, the girl usually walks home in order to save car fare. Yes, she walks, whether sick or well. Anyhow, you are generally so tired it don't make much difference which you are."

Gilder was fuming under these strictures, which seemed to him altogether baseless attacks on himself. His exasperation steadily waxed against the girl, a convicted felon, who thus had the audacity to beard him.

"What has all this to do with the question of theft in the store?" he rumbled, huffily. "That was the excuse of your coming here. And instead of telling me something, you rant about gas stoves and car fare."

The inexorable voice went on in its monotone, as if he had not spoken.

"And, when you are really sick and have to stop work, what are you doing to do then? Do you know, Mr. Gilder, that the first time a straight girl steals, it's often because she had to have a doctor—or some luxury like that? And some of them do worse than steal. Yes, they do—girls that started straight and wanted to stay that way. But, of course, some of them get so tired of the whole grind that—that—"

His Anger Flamed High.

The man who was the employer of hundreds concerning whom these grim truths were uttered, stirred uneasily in his chair, and there came a touch of color into the healthy brown of his cheeks as he spoke his protest.

"I'm not their guardian. I can't watch over them after they leave the store. They are paid the current rate of wages—as much as any other store pays." As he spoke, the anger provoked by this unexpected assault on him out of the mouth of a convict flamed high in virtuous repudiation. "Why," he went on vehemently, "no man living does more for his employees than I do. Who gave the girls their fine rest rooms upstairs? I did! Who gave them the cheap lunch rooms? I did!"

"But you won't pay them enough to live on!" The very fact that the words were spoken without any trace of rancor merely made this statement of indisputable truth obnoxious to the man, who was stung to more savage resentment in asserting his impugned self-righteousness.

"I pay them the same as the other stores do," he repeated, sullenly.

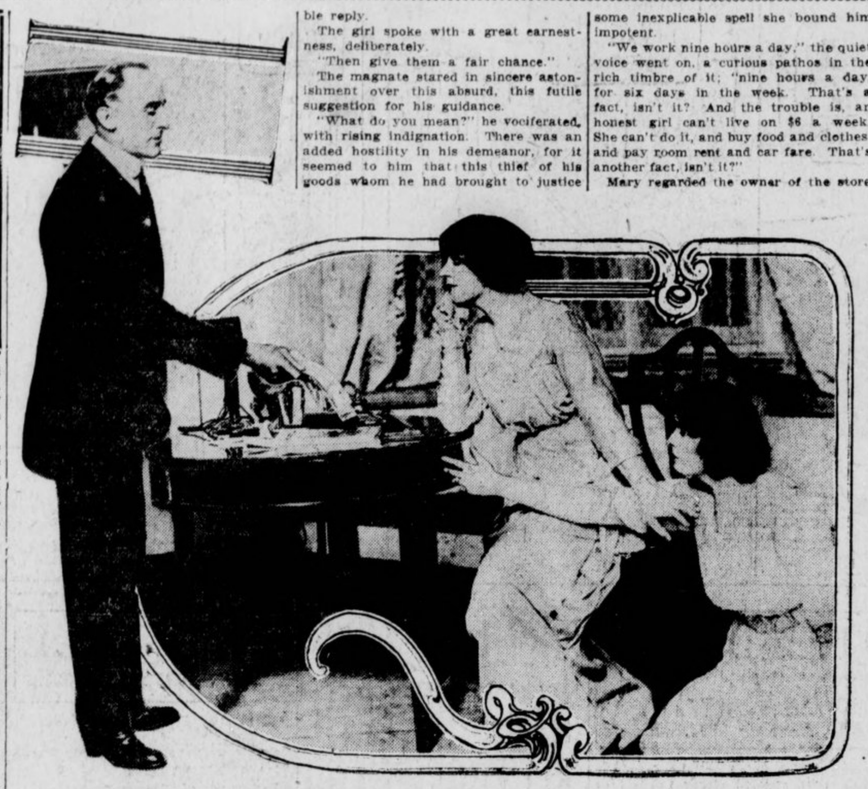
Yet once again the gently cadenced voice gave answer, an answer informed with that repulsive insistence to the man who sought to resist her indictment of him.

"But you won't pay them enough to live on." The simple lucidity of the charge forbade direct reply.

Gilder betook himself to evasion by harking back to the established ground of complaint.

"And so you claim that you were forced to steal. That's the plea you make for yourself and your friends."

To Be Continued Monday.



"We can't fight when ladies are conerned," he went on, "so if you will just hand over General Hastings' letters, why, here's your money."

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

PA took Ma & me to a moving picture show last nite. Pa sed that it was going to be a grate show bekaus Mister Art Beringer sent all the way to New York for the picters, & he wanted us to go espeshully to see a grate drama called Queenie, the Quarry Man's Daughter. So we went to the show & all the time thay was showing the first picters Pa kep telling Ma & me to wait until they had the stone quarry picter. I saw the rehearsal of it this forenoon, Pa sed, & it is a pretty story. It seems that the father of the guri Queenie is a honest man & he does not like the guri's sweetheart, a Italian with a lot of munny that is going to marry her or foreclose the mortgage on the stone quarry. It is a grate plot, Pa sed, & the reason I am so much interested in it is beekaus I used to be a stone quarry man myself.

What Pa Said.

You did? sed Ma.

Yes, yes, sed Pa. I used to be known as one of the most powerful cutters & lifters of stone that was evver in this seckshun of the country. I have often thought, Pa sed, wen looking back oaver those old days, that I must have been living in a long ago age. I have often thought wen I was lifting blocks of stone about twenty feet long that I was a quarry slave in the days wen Mister Potolmy helped me to bild the pyramids, Pa sed.

Jest then the picter beegan about Queenie, the stone quarry man's daughter. It showed a big stone quarry scene ware all the men was hurrying around and lifted rocks into wagons. Then it showed the Italian man wich was going to marry Queenie, & thare was a sceen ware she spurned him. Then he toald her, in the picter, that he had a mortgage on her father's quarry & how he was going to sell it if she dident becum his bride.

The heero of the play was a yung Irishman that was handling a pick. Beeing a Irishman, he had a lot of time to lissen to the talk between Queenie & the villun, beekaus he would swing the pick onst & then he wud lite his pipe & lissen for a minnit or so, & then he wud swing his pick onst moar & lite his pipe long enuff to git the rest of the terribul story. Then the Irishman went oaver & slammed Queenie's lover in the mouth or amongst the eyes or sumwar, & then calm the reevenge. Wen Queenie had went to git her father's lunch the villun stole sum dinamite & caim beehind ware the yung Irishman was picking with his pick & put the dinamite under the stone & blew the whole lot of it oaver onto the Irishman.

"I Was Strong," Said Pa.

Then he ran away & sed with Patrick McGullicuddy out of the way the quarry shall be mine. But then Queenie caim back & started in trying to lift the rocks away, but she cuddent stir any of them until her skreems attrackted her pa, & he caim on the sceen & beegan to throw the rocks rite & left. Ha, sed Pa, that reeminds me of the way I used to throw those grate masses of granite into the wagons of the teamsters. I was so strong in those days, sed Pa, that I had to be careful putting on my clothes for feer I wud tare them.

But Ma & me found out to-day that Pa was lying, beekaus Ma's cuzzin is a quarry man, Jimmie Trudden, & wen Ma asked him if Pa evver lifted a rock Mister Trudden, wich had known Pa since childhood, sed Yes, he used to lift rocks wen they wasent too heavy to throw at chipmunks. Ma gaiv me a quarter if I wud tell Pa wat Mister Trudden sed. I dident dast to tell Pa, but I got the quarter first, anyhow.

Man or Piano?

The daughter of the house had just returned from a visit to her cousins, during which she had become engaged to a rising young man whom she had met at the home of her relatives. To her mother she was extolling the virtues of her intended.

"Oh, mother," she exclaimed, "he's just grand! So square, so upright; so highly polished! Why, even in his notes there is such a sympathetic tone that sometimes I wonder if I am not reading the music of the gods."

"Mercy's sake, child!" interrupted mother. "Are you talking about a young man or a piano?"

Can't You See?

Tutter—Awfully pretty baby of yours, Bender, but—er—what is it, a boy or a girl?

Bender—Can't you tell it's a girl?

"No. How on earth do you tell?"

"Can't you see? She's reaching up to put her mother's hat on straight."

Some Trouble!

Junior—I hear Briggs got into a lot of trouble with that girl he was going with.

Soph—Yes. How's that?

Junior—He married her.

Ingenious Prisoners

AMONG the prisoners in the French convict settlement of New Caledonia were two marine engineers who not long ago received a pardon—strange as it may seem—for making a daring and ingenious attempt to escape.

Living together in the same hut, these men were engaged for years in digging a secret tunnel from their hut to the beach. At the end of the tunnel they hollowed out a chamber, in which, with pieces of driftwood and little bits of steel and iron smuggled into the hut, they fashioned a boat, the metal being at first used to make tools and afterward to form bolts and rivets.

Then with infinite pains they built an engine to propel the boat, and after laboring mightily for seven years they completed their task.

Everything was ready except the provisioning of the vessel, when they were betrayed by a fellow convict to whom they had confided their plan. But so impressed was the French commandant by their marvelous energy, skill and patience that he managed, after a year, to obtain a pardon for them.

:: Breaking the Ice :: A Complete Short Story ::

WHEN the last carpenter had put the last touches on the last extra job—for which there were extra charges—and the last painter had done his final finishing-up, and the landscape gardener had made his farewell tour, and the bills had all been paid, Mrs. Fibbins stood at the window of her new home and surveyed the surrounding homes with the deepest possible satisfaction.

Her residence was beyond question the finest in the neighborhood. The structure was the tallest in sight; the cornices stuck out the worst; its architecture had the newest, homeliest and most mixed design, and the ornaments were the craziest imaginable.

The lawn was the largest and the flower beds were the gaudiest of any in that part of the city. Yes, the place was a triumph! Mrs. Fibbins was naturally delighted.

"The people around here will all sit up and take notice!" she said to herself, smiling happily.

Finding Out

Mrs. Fibbins found out which one of the neighbors had the most servants and how many that neighbor had. Then she herself got more. Next she took up the question of hats. In order that nothing might be left undone she got a hat that could not be equaled for being disproportioned, ungainly, uncomfortable and generally absurd. No neighbor had a hat that could touch it in any of these respects.

But never a neighbor deigned to look in the direction of Mrs. Fibbins' establishment. Not a neighbor glanced at her hat when they passed her on the street.

It was terrible!

Mrs. Fibbins began to think up other ways to impress her neighbors. She gave gigantic parties. Every time she caught sight of a neighbor afoot she made a point of whizzing by that neighbor in an automobile. If any one entertained a celebrity she got a bigger celebrity. If there was a pretty girl visiting anywhere in the neighborhood she got a prettier girl to visit her.

It all did no good. The neighbors continued to treat Mrs. Fibbins as if she were a patron of a fashionable restaurant and they were the haughty and exclusive waiters. Mrs. Fibbins realized that she was out of it. She was filled with anguish and despair.

At last she spoke to Fibbins about it. Fibbins was a man of resource. More than that, he knew human nature. Fibbins said it was easy. Leave it to him.

Soon after that Mrs. Fibbins' servants all left her at once, bag and baggage. They held their noses in the air and made quite a procession. There was a considerable stir in the neighborhood over this affair. Several neighbors looked in the direction of the Fibbins home. Mrs. Fibbins saw them look, and she rejoiced.

Then the Fibbins water pipes burst. Water flooded the house and the yard, and then froze and made a dreadful mess. At this catastrophe the mansion and grounds of the Fibbinses were observed by all the neighbors. The men looked eagerly as they passed and the women devoted all their spare moments to sitting at their upper windows with opera glasses, closely observing the devastation.

Fibbins and Mrs. Fibbins emerged from their front door to go to a restaurant to dine. Coming in contact with the ice, their feet slipped and they were precipitated to the ground. In a sitting posture they glided swiftly along the icy incline to the gate. Mrs. Fibbins' hat came down over her eyes like a landslide. Finally they struggled to their feet and went limping away.

Every house in the neighborhood was alive to the incident. A representative from each hastened to Fibbins and Mrs. Fibbins and asked them to come right in and make that house their headquarters while their water pipes were being fixed.

The ice was broken at last! Fibbins and Mrs. Fibbins had become acquainted with their neighbors!

"You are a wonderful man!" said Mrs. Fibbins afterward in the tone of deepest admiration.

"I knew it would be easy," said Fibbins, "but I excited their sympathy and gave them a chance to congratulate themselves that our misfortunes were not theirs."

Household Suggestions

The best method of keeping small screws, brads and tacks from rusting is to place them in small, wide-mouthed bottles, tightly corked. The bottle should be perfectly dry before using. Sandpaper can be kept dry and in good working condition by rolling it and keeping it in a wide-mouthed jar and screwing down the lid.

When cream is only slightly sour it may be made delicious to serve with puddings, etc., in the following way: Put it into a basin with the juice of a lemon and a tablespoonful of sugar, and whip until quite stiff. This treatment makes it excellent, and increases the quantity at the same time.

If you want to patch your window blinds, don't sew on the patches. Instead, paste them on with hot starch and press down a warm iron. They will look neater than if sewn, because the stitches would be apparent, whereas a pasted-on patch is almost invisible.

Before putting curtain hooks in curtains in damp weather, rub the pins with a clean, oily rag. It prevents them rusting and tearing the curtain, and they can be taken in and out more easily.

Save all odd bits of twine, knot them together, then knit with steel needles into pieces about a foot or more square. These make excellent dish cloths for saucepans and pie dishes.

Sufferers from acid stomach, nausea or sick headache will find this tonic beverage a grateful relief.—(adv.)

To Brighten Carpets

To brighten a carpet, take five or six large potatoes and scrape them finely into a pail of water. Stir, then strain. Wring out a cloth in the water and rub the carpet. Rinse the cloth as soon as soiled. Should soot fall on a carpet, sprinkle dry salt thickly over it, leave it for a few minutes, then brush up. No trace of the soot will remain.

THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

Married Life the Third Year

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

WORRIED and depressed, Helen went in to straighten up Alice's room the morning after her departure.

Everything was in disorder from the hurried packing. Tissue paper, strings and empty boxes lay scattered about, and where the trunk had set was a dusty square.

The whole unpleasant scene of the night before kept beating in Helen's mind. And not only had Alice cut short her visit and left in a high dudgeon—the memory of that was distressing enough—but even more distressing was the fear of what Aunt Emma and Warren's other relatives might say.

That Alice would not hesitate to disparage both her and Warren Helen knew, and about her visit she would probably tell many things that were not true.

Helen was always keenly sensitive about what people "might say," and now she could think of nothing but the unpleasant surmises and comments that Warren's relatives would make.

With brooding anxiety, she put back her clothes in the bureau drawers and the closet that she had emptied for Alice's convenience. Besides the burnt bureau scarf she now discovered other evidences of Alice's carelessness.

A black smudge on the rug showed where she had glossed her shoes, the wall paper was sprinkled with ink where she had shaken a fountain pen, and on the back of one of the chairs a wet towel had been flung, leaving the varnish dulled and whitened.

While Helen was still putting the room to rights Warren called up from the office.

"I won't have time to write that letter to Aunt Emma," he announced, "so you'll have to write it. And you'd better get it off right away."

Helen at a Loss.

"But, dear, what shall I say?" faltered Helen.

"Just say that Alice took it into her head to go and that we couldn't keep her."

"But couldn't you write to-night or to-morrow?" persisted Helen. "You could do it so much better than I."

"Yes, and then Alice would have time to tell her mother a lot of lies. Now, you get that off right away! I want it to go out to-night."

When Helen turned from the phone it was with the greatest reluctance that she went over to the desk to write this letter. For her letter-writing was always most difficult, and from a letter like this her mind recoiled.

How should she begin it? What could she say? She did not want to hurt Aunt Emma, and yet it was only fair to them that she should know just how headstrong and unruly Alice had been.

After much chewing of her pen and many discarded beginnings, the letter was finally finished.

New York, April 24, 1913.

Dear Aunt Emma:

I regret very much that Alice should have ended her visit in this way. We did everything we could to persuade her not to start off last night, but she was so headstrong that nothing we could say had any effect. She declared if we did not take her to the station she would go alone—so what could we do?

The only cause for all this was that we tried to do what you asked—to keep her from seeing that Mr. Hampton. He came on from Philadelphia and called here at 7 to take Alice out. But Warren refused to let him see her.

This so incensed Alice that she at once began to pack her trunk, declaring that she would not stay with us another night. I pleaded and Warren scolded, but she would listen to neither of us. She said she was engaged to this man and that she was old enough to do as she pleased. I think you are quite right in feeling that a man of his age, and a divorced man, is most unsuited for Alice. I hope you will be able to break it all off—but Alice is very headstrong.

I am sending by parcel post some things she left in her haste. I hope you have gotten the house in shape again, that you are over the worst effects of the flood, and that Alice's unexpected return will not make things harder.

We both regret more than I can say that her visit should have such an unpleasant ending, but we trust you will understand that we did all we could to prevent it. Sincerely, your niece,

HELEN.

Helen was so far from satisfied with this letter that she wanted to call up Warren and read it to him over the phone, but she know he would be too hurried and impatient to listen. So, reluctantly, she took it out to the mail chute.

The next two days were for Helen most unhappy ones. She was constantly being forced to explain Alice's sudden departure. It was very embarrassing, particularly when Carrie Warren's sister, called up to invite Alice to a luncheon.

The Answer.

But even more distressing was her haunting dread of what Aunt Emma would think and of just what Alice would tell her. It was Helen's nature to worry—and over this she worried herself almost ill.

When the next morning at breakfast she found by her plate a thick letter in Aunt Emma's handwriting, anxiously she tore it open.

Dayton, Ohio, April 27, 1913.

My Dear Helen:

I believe Warren paid for Alice's ticket the night she left, and I hasten to return the amount in this. If there is anything else that she owes you, will you kindly let us know, as neither George nor I wish to be further indebted to you? The check Warren sent George the week after the flood we will return the first of the month. I regret that we can not do so sooner.

It was, of course, a mistake that Alice ever visited you. I would never have suggested it had I dreamed that it would end as it has. As upset and distracted as we were after the flood, I see now that it would have been much better for her to have stayed here.

You seem to have failed wholly to understand her. She has an exceptionally nervous, sensitive nature. She has always been delicate, and we have always tried to keep from her any needless irritation or excitement.

That you should have let her start home at midnight, in an excited, unstrung state, showed, to say the least, a lack of consideration on your part. I would not have let the most casual visitor leave my house under such conditions, much less a girl like Alice. I can not understand what you and Warren were thinking of to allow it.

When Alice arrived she was in almost a state of collapse. It is needless for me to try to conceal the fact that I am very indignant about it all, and I think George shares my indignation, although he may not admit it so frankly.

I am exceedingly sorry that we ever troubled you, and I assure you we will not trouble you again.

AUNT EMMA.

"What's struck you?" demanded Warren, as Helen gasped her dismay and indignation.

"It's from Aunt Emma—the most AWFUL letter!" handing it across the table.

No More Relatives.

Warren read the letter and threw it down with a grim:

"Well, that lets us out! I guess we're about through trying to help any relatives. Understand? Your relatives or mine—we'll steer clear of the whole bunch."

"But, dear, MY people have never troubled us!"

"Well, I've noticed they're not above making it a convenience to stop here when they come to New York."

"Why, Warren, you know very well that Uncle Henry is the only one of my family that's EVER stopped here. And he was going to a hotel if you hadn't insisted. I don't see how you CAN infer that my relatives have made a convenience of us!"

"Well, I said we're through with ALL relatives, didn't I? And that's exactly what I meant. Hereafter if people want to come to New York for ten days or for one day—they'll put up at a hotel. From now on they're going to find it pretty blamed hard to work us! I guess one lesson along this line will be just about enough!"

Do You Know That—

The coming destruction of the Cafe Anglais in Paris is awakening many recollections among the older Londoners who used to visit Paris a dozen times in the year. Forty years ago the restaurant was famous for its food and frequenters, who included nearly every celebrity in Europe. It was then King Edward's favorite restaurant in Paris, always faultlessly conducted, although strongly dashed with bohemianism. All that was best in the social and artistic world was to be found there. It was one of the few restaurants which kept open through the siege, and there was ground for belief in the story that it never remembered afterward to reduce its prices.

The romance of a fortune that was made out of revenge is recalled in New York by the death of E. S. Welles, the inventor of a world-famous rat poison. When Mr. Welles and the man with whom he then worked were living in poverty, and had only a single loaf of bread between them and starvation, this last morsel of food was eaten by rats. Welles swore vengeance and set about discovering a means to rid the world of rats. After numerous experiments he began the manufacture of "Rough on Rats" in an old barn in Jersey City, and in four years he rose to affluence.

The new King of Greece is among the tallest of monarchs, but those who ascribe his inches solely to his Romanoff blood on his mother's side forget his stalwart Danish ancestors. His grandfather, King Christian IX, was remarkable for his height, as are nearly all the princes of his house. King Constantine's cousin, the present King of Denmark, has carried on the tradition, as he stands well over six feet without his boots.

Ethel Barrymore Tells Girls Why :: True Modesty Is a Real Aid to Beauty

"On the stage I am my part. I lose myself."

"As pretty off the stage as she is on."

"If you think about yourself yo uwill be self-conscious."

By LILIAN LAUFERTY.

"IS she as pretty off the stage as on?"—haven't you often wondered that about your favorite star, or even some of the lesser lights who dazzle your eyes with their loveliness?

I know one stage beauty who is far lovelier in her little dressing room than all the glare and tinsel of stage illusion can make her. Ethel Barrymore's wonderfully expressive gray eyes, flower-like white throat and gracious manner are little private lovelinesses so fine and rare that you must miss them except at close range. And she is modest. THAT MODESTY ADDS A CHARM TO HER BEAUTY SUCH AS LITTLE MISS SELF-SATISFACTION WOULD DO WELL TO STUDY.

"You want me to talk about beauty," said Miss Barrymore. "Beauty means Maxine Elliott to me. Maxine Elliott, with her wonderful face and figure, and the splendid brain that animates it all. Brains, brains!—they are the inspiration and real spirit of true beauty.

"It is stupid not to know how to bring out your points or to let your prettiness fade.

Cold Water for Youth.

"A frilly black ruff back of a long, white throat, and a sparkling face animated by brains, will bring out the charm of the foreground. If you are wishing to look your prettiest, and look tired and drawn instead, plenty of cold water will bring the becoming flush of color to your face.

"You know there is nothing immoral about beauty, though some old fogies seem to think so. Think of making laws about the width of women's skirts, and whether two inches or two and a quarter inches of white throat should be shown by the low-cut blouse!

"Good cold cream will do a lot toward assuring you of a white throat. Good taste will tell you where to cut your blouse. Women ought to study these things, so men won't need to come out of their sphere and agitate about them. I told one fat old hypocritical mayor out West, who when forced to have a vice crusade in his wicked town began by making laws about the width of women's skirts, that what worried him was not having those feminine skirts wide enough to hide behind any more."

The star, who is "headlining" this week in the Palace Theater, laughed merrily.

"You interest yourself in divers causes?" The interviewer was laughing too.

"Oh, yes. Women must. Interest yourself in things outside yourself. FOR IF YOU THINK ABOUT YOURSELF YOU WILL BE SELF-CONSCIOUS, AND THAT MEANS AWKWARD AND UNBEAUTIFUL.

"Now, I am shy." Think of that, you little blushing girls whose self-consciousness worries you to the point of tears. Beautiful, talented Ethel Barrymore is "shy." And her cure for self-consciousness is to be interested in things outside your own petty little self.

"On the stage I AM my part. I lose myself. In society I am one of the guests, and I forget Ethel Barrymore. But if I am asked at a dinner to get up and recite; or if in a public place people stare and force self-consciousness, I am not happy. ONE NEVER IS HAPPY IF THINKING OF SELF. Posing and acting unconcerned won't help it; brains and hard work will.

"This brings me to the beauty of a happy home life. Now, I have my husband, my two children, my tasks and duties. The glaring restaurant life does not bring out contentment, self-forgetfulness—or a consequent sweet expression."

"For beauty—brains, modesty, self-forgetfulness, happy home life and good taste," I mused.

"Brains cover it all. You have to be wise enough to bring out your good points, and to cover your poor ones until you can overcome them. You must have brains, and study to develop them, if you want to be more than a pretty picture that people glance at and forget."

"Haven't you some personal beauty secrets?" I asked boldly.

"I? Beauty secrets?" in a tone of honest amazement.

"Yes, you indeed."

"Oh, no. I study a lot, of course. I read 25 books up in Toronto last week. I am always reading—and studying music. And I guard my health." Miss Barrymore laughed and took an earnest nibble at the lemon she is relying on to help her overcome a threatened case of laryngitis. "A simple life! Not too much rich food—high thinking. I've just one pet theory—two glasses of cold water morning and evening. That is such a gentle stimulus to the physical well-being."

Lots of Water.

Over on the maniel shelf, next to the picture of two dear little kiddies, stood a bottle of mineral water.

"Has that a special medicinal value?" I asked.

"No, I just try to be sure of clear, pure water. I am not sure in the average theater—so I drink bottled water. But I never omit my before-going-to-bed drink of water.

"I drink milk, too. Though it is not safe to take much of that if you are threatened with an accumulation of pounds. You see, brains come in again about not growing fat in these days of sylphs. DON'T LET FAT ACCUMULATE. For in the process of losing it violently you are likely to get a drawn and haggard look. That means you are going to appear old. Soft facial contours guard against the appearance of age."

I looked approvingly at Miss Barrymore's smooth, facial contour and wonderful skin. She smiled shyly.

"If you know you are thin and emaciated—or if you overhear a fat creature of about 259 pounds net weight, remarking, 'There's Ethel Barrymore at the next table, John. How stout she's grown—dear me, she is stouter than I am!'—why, then, in either case you are likely to become self-conscious.

"So, you see, I have to avoid an emaciated face and overweighted body as the modern Scylla and Charybdis—and so should all girls.

"You see, it is all a perfect circle. Your 'sentinel brain' must guard you against the necessity of self-consciousness—and I think that is the best beauty secret I know."

Ethel Barrymore Says:

It is stupid not to know how to bring out your good points, or to let your prettiness fade.

Brains, brains, they are the inspiration and the real spirit of true beauty.

There is nothing immoral about beauty, though some old fogies seem to think so.

For beauty—brains, modesty, self-forgetfulness, happy home life and good taste.

I've just one pet theory—two glasses of cold water mornings and evenings.

Don't let fat accumulate.

.:. The Real Truth .:.

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

THE real truth, children dear, is that Sleeping Beauty slept with her mouth open, and snored.

You are always hearing women talk of the "nameless longing" in their hearts, as if it were something beyond the comprehension of mere man. If she is single this nameless longing is for a lover, and if she is married, it is for money.

In the books a woman returns a letter from a discarded lover unread, but in real life curiosity would arouse her from a deathbed, if need be, to break the seal.

In the stories she gives a guiping sob as she leaves the room after a quarrel, and he is Gone Out of Her Life Forever. In real life she has to go to the shop where he works next day to buy sausage, and he waits on her.

The Suffragettes in speech and pamphlet tell how wives have to account to their husbands for every penny they spend. If the men had to listen to the account of how their wives spend every penny there wouldn't be insane asylums enough to hold them.

In books a girl's neck looks like white marble, and those who see it are driven to writing poetry. In real life a girl's neck causes every housekeeper present to make a mental note to buy spareribs for dinner next day.

In the books a young woman never mentions "the dear old home" without moist eyes, and in real life she never lives in one home longer than five years. In the stories there is always a trusted servant, who has been with the family forty years; in reality no servant is kept as long as forty weeks. In fiction a poem or song about "baby's shoes" will cause a woman to dissolve in tears. In real life, if the stork whispers to a woman that he is going to give her an occasion for buying a baby's shoe, she is mad enough to bite nails in two.

The books say a great deal about the "children's hour," a period at twilight when the children climb on mother's or father's knee and listen to fairy stories. In real life, if father is a farmer, he is engaged at this poetic period in feeding the hogs and mother is doing the milking. Or, if they live in town, he is hanging to a car strap and she is running to the delicatessen.

In the books the children gather at mother's knee for their good-night prayers. In the days when every mother believed in having her children pray, there were so many children in the family that they couldn't have gathered around her knee unless her limbs were built like those of an extension table.

A mixture of castor oil with the white of an egg has been recommended for burns. It allays the pain more quickly and causes the wound to heal more rapidly than any other application. The eggs are broken and emptied into a bowl, and the castor oil gradually and slowly poured in while the eggs are beaten. Enough oil is added to make a thick, creamy paste, which is applied to the burn with a feather. The applications are repeated often enough to prevent their becoming dry or sticky. It is best to abstain from any dressings, leaving the surface uncovered.

Thrills of a novel kind are promised for tourists to Sicily if an American hotel proprietor can carry out his plans. He has bought the site on the summit of an inactive but not extinct volcano, and will build a hotel there. A special feature of the hotel will be an underground chamber on the bed of the crater, with an asbestos floor, where those who are sated with excitement can sleep in the expectation that they may be called at any minute by an eruption.

In England, where there are no fewer than 616,000 women dressmakers, there are more women workers in proportion to population than in any other country in the world.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

AS kin Commissioner General of the United States, Lysander John Appleton occupies a position the importance of which is well appreciated by his large and steadily increasing kin-ridden constituency.

It lies within his jurisdiction to decide to which side of the warring faction of a family belong the family jewels and the feather bed. When a woman dies, he decides the right of her children or her husband's next wife to her "things," that being the generic term for petticoats, hair switches, family albums, the butter knife, the hot water bag and the cameo pin the deceased left, and which assume great value when her husband marries again.

Speedy Opportunity.

It is he who draws an immovable line between kinship and friendship. "Is a man as near kin to his wife's ugly sister as he is to her sister who is beautiful?" was a question that remained undecided until Lysander John Appleton was elected to office, and it was he who decided in plain and unmistakable terms that a young husband's embarrassment in calling his mother-in-law "Mother" was not serious because of the speedy opportunity that would be offered for addressing her as "Grandma."

While there has been some complaint that battleships have not been ordered out to enforce his decisions—the helpless kin-hampered citizens believing that they had a right to enjoy the protection so freely accorded to Americans who voluntarily exile themselves to warring foreign lands—there has been a disposition to believe that General Appleton was doing his best.

Therefore, when it became known that he was to have a birthday every one who was awaiting a kin decision in his, or her favor, decided to propitiate him with a gift.

But what could it be? For it is conceded that to buy a suitable gift for a man requires a wisdom that is almost divine.

"He smokes!" was the joyous discovery of a woman who wanted a decision against her husband's mother. "He smokes," rang down the line of grandparents, fathers, mothers, uncles, sisters, cousins, aunts and all the in-laws, and everyone rejoiced as a man who is lost on strange roads rejoices when he sees a guide board.

The Presents Arrive.

The presents arrived by messenger, by vanloads, and by carloads. "We will unwrap them," said his wife, "and put them around his bed when he sleeps, and his eyes may behold them the first thing on his birthday morning."

They did so. And when Lysander John opened his eyes the next morning he saw them. Some were of China, others of cut glass, others of bronze, iron, copper, silver and one man hated his mother-in-law to the extent of sending one of gold. They were piled on the dresser and the chiffonier; they overflowed to the chairs and covered the floor and the bed—NINE HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-FOUR ASH TRAYS.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"WE never have supper in this house—my uncle always called it a useless extravagance. Instead, we defer tea until 6 o'clock and make that the final meal of the day. It was exactly five minutes to 7 when I finished my accounts and as I had had a hard day of it, I decided to go to bed early, after having first taken a walk as far as the old bridge, where I hoped that somebody would be waiting for me."

"I knew," said Cleek, gently. "I have heard the story. It would be Mr. Charles Drummond, would it not?"

He Was Absent.

"Yes. He was not there, however—something must have prevented his coming."

"Hum-m-! Go on, please."

"Before leaving the house, it occurred to me that I ought to look into the laboratory and see if there was anything my uncle would be likely to need for the night, as I intended to go straight way to bed on my return. I did so. He was sitting at his desk, immediately under the one window of which I have spoken and with his back to me, when I looked in. He answered my inquiry with a curt 'No—nothing. Get out and don't worry me!' I immediately shut the door and left him, returning here by way of the covered passage and going upstairs to make some necessary changes in my dress for the walk to the old bridge. When I came down ready for my journey I looked at the clock on the mantel over there. It was exactly 17 minutes to 8 o'clock. I had been a little longer in dressing than I had anticipated being; so, in order to save time in getting to the trysting place, I concluded to make a short cut by going out of the rear door and crossing diagonally through our grounds instead of going by the public highway, as usual. I had scarcely more than crossed the threshold when I ran plump into Constable Gorham. As he is rather a favorite with good Mrs. Armyroyd here, I fancied that he had been paying her a visit and was just coming away from the kitchen. Instead, he rather startled me by stating that he had seen something which he thought best to come round and investigate. In short, that as he was patrolling the highway he had seen a man vault over the wall of our grounds, and, bending down, dart out of sight like a hare. He was almost positive that that man was Sir Ralph Droger. Of course, that frightened me almost out of my wits."

Desires To Do Both.

"Why?"

"There is bad blood between my uncle and Sir Ralph Droger—bitter, bad blood. As you perhaps know, my uncle held this ground on a life lease from the Droger estate. That is to say, so long as he lived or refused to vacate that lease, no Droger could oust him nor yet lift one spadeful of earth from the property."

"Does Sir Ralph desire to do either?"

"He desires to do both. Borings secretly made have manifested the fact that both Bovey coal and native copper underlie the place. Sir Ralph wishes to tear down the Round House and this building and to begin mining operations. My uncle, who has been offered the full value of every stick and stone, has always obstinately refused to budge one inch or lessen the lease by one-half hour. 'It is for the term of life,' he has always said, 'and for the term of my life I'll hold it!'"

"Oho!" said Cleek; and then puckered up his lips as if about to whistle.

To Be Continued Monday.

Bad for Johnny

LITTLE Johnny Squildig spoiled what otherwise would have been a pleasant call last evening, and it is feared established a deadly hatred between the Squildig and Snaggs households.

Mr. and Mrs. Snaggs had "just dropped in," and the conversation went the full range of the weather and the fashions and the health of the babies of the neighborhood between the women, while the men exhausted the possibilities of the baseball season, and had got well into politics, when Johnny, who found the talk uninteresting, asked Mr. Snaggs if he had brought his fiddle with him.

"My fiddle?" replied Snaggs, in surprise. "What fiddle?"

"Why, your second fiddle."

"My second fiddle? Why, Johnny, I am not a musician. I have no fiddle. I don't play.

"But papa says you do," persisted Johnny.

"Johnny, I think you had better go upstairs to bed," said his papa.

"Yes, it's quite time," added Mrs. Squildig. "Little folks should be seen, not heard."

But Johnny was not to be gagged in that style. He went on:

"Papa says you play second fiddle at your house, and I think you might have brought it with you."

Then Johnny was marched out of the room by his papa, and his mamma followed to assist in the subsequent exercises, while the Snaggs put on their things and walked solemnly home with heads unusually erect and a feeling of unrest in their bosoms.

LIFE'S STRUGGLE WITH ILLNESS

Miss Stewart Tells How She Suffered from 16 to 45 years old—How Finally Cured.

EUPHEMIA, OHIO.—"Because of total ignorance of how to care for myself when verging into womanhood, and from taking cold when going to school, I suffered from a displacement, and each month I had severe pains and nausea which always meant a lay-off from work for two to four days from the time I was 16 years old.

"I went to Kansas to live with my sister, and while there a doctor told me of the Pinkham remedies but I did not use them then as my faith in patent medicines was limited. After my sister died I came home to Ohio to live and that has been my home for the last 18 years.

"The Change of Life came when I was 47 years old, and about this time I saw my physical condition plainly described in one of your advertisements. Then I began using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I can not tell you or any one the relief it gave me in the first three months. It put me right where I need not lay off every month, and during the last 18 years I have not paid out two dollars to a doctor, and have been blessed with excellent health for a woman of my age, and I can thank Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for it.

"Since the Change of Life is over I have been a maternity nurse, and being wholly self-supporting I can not overestimate the value of good health. I have now earned a comfortable little home just by sewing and nursing since I was 52 years old. I have recommended the Compound to many with good results, as it is excellent to take before and after childbirth."—Miss Evelyn Adelia Stewart, Euphemia, Ohio.

Taking Care of Bob

Today's Complete Short Story.

"AMY said," began the girl who likes to talk, "that Bob was gentle as a kitten and so affectionate that in contrast a pair of love birds were petrified images of heartlessness. She said many other things, too, over the telephone about the bull terrier that in a misguided moment they purchased some time ago, but that was because she was trying to make me think I was crazy to have him while she and her husband went to Panama.

"I was to pass a few days with her and get acquainted with the paragon of dogs. Amy said that she always felt perfectly safe with Bob in the apartment, because he would chew up any burglar who appeared. On the way over I grew rather worried, wondering whether Bob was clever enough to distinguish between a caller who was a burglar and a caller who wasn't. Then I recalled Bob's gentleness and took heart.

"When the front door was opened I thought the end had come. Something huge and white fell across the hall table, and, stepping all over me, attempted to climb on my shoulder and perch there. I screamed faintly and wondered if the Pasteur treatment hurt much. Then I was conscious of Amy's voice.

Very Affectionate.

"'He's so affectionate!' said Amy in a proud voice. 'I never knew him to take such an instant liking to any one before! He realizes that you love dogs, I am sure!'

"'I'm crazy about them!' I assured her as I intrenched myself behind two chairs and a davenport. 'However, I don't care for those aerial effects myself! Can't he keep his feet on the ground?'

"Amy looked hurt and said she should have thought that I would appreciate a dumb animal's fondness for me. She was interrupted by Bob's giving an exhibition of his dumbness when he saw the postman out of the window. Dashing at the glass at the speed of 60 miles an hour, he let out a roar that shook the apartment. Then he turned and wagged his tail and twinkled his eyes. I think these dogs greatly enjoy life. It must be fine to feel that you can make the whole universe bow to the ground and climb trees if you wriggle your chin or flop an ear.

"I unpacked my suitcase neatly, and then when I went to dress for dinner I found that Bob had eaten the heels off my evening slippers.

"'It's the funniest thing!' Amy said, enthusiastically, when I wailed out the trouble. 'That dog always has had the most insane fondness for shoe heels! We couldn't have a decent shoe in the house when we first got him. He is so intelligent!'

"When Bob was taken out of doors it was with as many precautions as though he were a man-eating tiger. For my part I would as soon sally forth with the jungle beast as with that animal. He had a harness on of battleship leather—well, they have battleship linoleum, anyhow—and snapped to that was a leash with a loop to go over your wrist, and then you had a whip.

"Hung On and Slid."

"I felt just as though the band was going to play as I entered the sawdust ring when I took Bob outdoors that day. He shot up the street instantly, and as it was slippery I hung on and slid, shrieking at him to stop. Pretending it was a game, that diabolical animal merely tore on, whisking me around a corner into a perambulator. My impression is that I leaped the perambulator, but maybe I crawled under—anyhow, I was a half block ahead before the nurse had picked herself up from the grounds, and Bob was so impetuous that I couldn't return to inquire.

"It might have been all right if he hadn't seen a cat. Amy said afterward reproachfully that I shouldn't have allowed him to see a cat. However, she did not say whether I should have run in front of Bob and held my hands over his eyes or chloroformed him till the cat had strolled by. If I had fancied up to now that Bob had been hastening I was mistaken. He had been dawdling, but when he saw that cat he turned on full speed.

"All that I remember is hurtling through the air, hanging to the leash for dear life, for Amy had cautioned me that I had the safety of the public in my hands, and so I did not dare let go. Bob spread himself low over the ground and just ate up the distance. We chased that cat down the street, then through an alley and then whizzed up the steps of a big house just as the front door opened and a perfectly lovely man emerged attired for an afternoon wedding or a tea-fight.

"I let Bob go then, because I fell over the top step.

He Was Sympathetic.

"The tea-fight man, after rising from where he had been tossed by Bob, picked me up. There were awful sounds of riot from inside the house, where Bob had treed the cat on a mantel. It really was an unusual situation.

"'He is such an intelligent dog,' I stuttered. 'And so affectionate.'

"The tea-fight man actually grinned. 'I owned a terrier once myself!' he confided, understandingly.

"Just then Bob dashed out and climbed into my lap with his muddy paws, just as though he was not something slightly less than a young hippopotamus. Laying his huge head on my shoulder, he sighed contentedly, as though he had had a very pleasant afternoon, indeed.

"Oh, yes, I'm going to take him while Amy is away. I think a little excitement will do me good."

SHARP DECLINE IN PRICE OF COTTON

Good Weather and Bearish Cable News Encourage Active Selling Throughout Day.

NEW YORK, May 3.—There was a featureless opening to-day in the cotton market, and first prices were 1 point higher to 4 points lower than Friday's final. Continental demand for new crop openings imparted strength to cables, but the local market did not follow this lead.

Weather news and sentiment was bearish and those who have been favoring the bull side for an upturn seem to have lost faith and turn aggressive sellers shortly after the call. Wall Street led the selling movement on continued favorable weather. Some of the larger spot houses were noticeable sellers. The buying was scattered and very light, attributed chiefly to week-end short covering. This, however, did not stimulate the market, and prices were kept down at the early low level.

The bears had many depressing factors to depend on. About the most essential factor was the report that considerable freight room had been canceled and cotton will be retendered on May 7.

Weather predicted over Sunday was favorable. Mississippi will be visited by showers, which are badly needed. Arkansas, Texas and Oklahoma are due to have good rains and lower temperatures, except in West Texas, where the weather will be fair and colder.

The market turned suddenly dull and inactive during the closing hour, and prices fluctuated narrowly. At the close the market was steady, with prices at a net decline of 3 to 6 points from the final quotations of Friday.

HAYWOOD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, May 3.—The foreign press takes a more hopeful view of the that Austria will grant a further respite political situation this morning, stating to arrange matters with Montenegro over Scutari. Berlin says the opinion prevails that the critical point in the nation has been passed.

Liverpool is good, with futures about 3 points better than due. Spots 4 points lower. Repeated rumors of pending labor troubles in Lancashire are being coupled with persistent information from New York that the interests which took the first May tenders are cancelling freight room engagements and will retender the cotton on May.

Weather indications are for the rainstorm to move on the North Central belt and cause general rains over Sunday in the Western and Central States and in the Eastern belt at the beginning of next week. A moderate cold wave is following and will cause a drop in temperatures in the Northwestern quarter, but so far no injurious temperatures are likely and the general rally due to this cold wave is the principal factor to consider. Our market declined a little on the favorable weather prospects and on the drop of 27½ points in French rentes, which caused doubt in regard to the improvement in politics, but there was no great desire to sell.

Memphis quiet; ⅛ off; middling 12¼; sales 2,500.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Logan & Bryan: We feel that conservatism is in order in making sales.

Thompson, Towle & Co.: We would buy on good declines or sell on substantial rallies from present levels.

Sternberger, Sinn & Co.: Nothing.

Hayden, Stone & Co.: There is likely to be cotton for sale on every rise in the new crop, as long as weather continues fairly satisfactory.

Watch for the announcement of our auction sale of Bungalows and lots in Sunday's American.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, May 3.—The cotton market was rather active at the opening to-day, but later turned dull in absence of any special support. The larger spot houses were good sellers. Wall Street sold aggressively.

* * *

After the call Geer, Cone, Haricorn, Russell, Schill and Rait were good buyers, but certain brokers with spot house connection furnished the market with plenty of cotton, and prices broke sharply. Motchell, Schill, Martin, Young, Newman and Burnett were among the leading sellers.

* * *

Flinn was a good seller of December.

* * *

Liverpool cables: "Trade on continent very bad. Italy almost decided to go short time."

* * *

Latest quotation on French rentes shows another 10-point decline, making it 27½ down.

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas generally cloudy, hard rain at Amarillo, San Antonio, Abilene; Oklahoma generally cloudy and threatening."

* * *

Liverpool cables: "American middling fair, 7.22d; good middling, 6.88d; middling, 6.68d; low middling, 6.54d; good ordinary, 6.30d; ordinary, 5.86d.

NEW ORLEANS, May 3.—Hayward & Clark: The map shows fair in Alabama and Atlantics. Cloudy elsewhere; raining in many Texas towns; good rains overnight in South and Southwest Texas. Prospects are for rainstorm, moving eastward and causing general precipitation over Sunday in Central and Western States.

* * *

Cordill wires from Memphis: "Jackson, Grenada to Memphis through hill section of Mississippi, soil in excellent condition, plowing about completed and planting nearing completion. Some replanting necessary in central part of State. Weather has been too cool for rapid germination, but start as a whole very favorable. River falling rapidly; situation greatly relieved in Arkansas and Delta. Weather warmer and clear."

* * *

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Friday's cotton market disillusioned the bulls; the bears had been disillusioned by Thursday's market; thus Saturday's market will probably reflect greater respect on both sides, and more open-mindedness among the talent and trade. The promised cold wave did not arrive, delayed, not dissipated. The weather was favorable all over the belt, cloudiness in Texas promising an early and not unwelcome rain.

"Liverpool reported labor troubles in Lancashire—local, but liable to spread, according to one cablegram. Under the circumstances, there was an excuse for a reaction somewhere, and selling was the order. At the close the talent regarded the market as a scalping affair, and one capable of being moved in either direction, within the limits, according to immediate influences. Secretary Hester's week-end statistical tabulations caused a variety of comment, ranging all the way from favorable to unfavorable. In spite of a much smaller interior movement than last year, the loss in stock at the thirty counted towns was 36,479, against 30,473 last year."

Estimated receipts for Monday:

Wheat—No. 2 red ..... 105 @107
Corn—No. 2 57
Oats—No. 2 ..... 35½

CHICAGO, May 3.—May wheat was about ⅝c higher this morning with shorts anxious to buy and the July was up ½c. September was also small fraction better. The speculative trade seemed to take more stock in the further decline in English consols, which they believed to be a reflection of the unfavorable political outlook in the far East. Liverpool was higher, as also was Budapest, while there were losses at Berlin and Paris, the latter quite sharp.

Corn was strong, as the offerings were small and the demand somewhat better.

Oats were easier with the increased offerings.

Hogs were lower at the yards, and while pork was steady the other commodities were a shade off in price.

Wheat closed with losses of ¼c to ⅝c and there was little recovery from the bottom prices reached. The business was rather quiet on the whole, and it was confined mainly to the ranks of the professionals. The cash trade was small at Chicago, with only 25,000 bushels changing hands. Export bids on wheat from abroad were reported at ¾c below those of yesterday. Primary receipts of wheat this week were 4,748,000 bushels, or 2,400,000 bushels larger than a year ago. It was reported that 200,000 bushels No. 1 Northern wheat sold here to go to store.

Corn closed ¼c to ½c lower and oats were off ⅛c for September, while the nearby months were higher.

Cash sales of corn were 110,000 bushels and of oats 75,000 bushels.

Hog products were lower all around.

DULLEST DAY OF YEAR IN STOCKS

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, May 3.—Pressure was exerted against the list at the opening of the stock market to-day, and general declines were registered. Canadian Pacific led the market with a loss of 2 points, being influenced by weakness in London. There was little demand for stocks, and trading was mainly professional.

Among the other losses were: Steel common, ½; Union Pacific, ⅝; Reading, ½; Amalgamated Copper, ½; American Can, ¼; American Car Foundry, ¼; Erie, ¼; Great Northern preferred, ¼; Lehigh Valley, ⅛.

Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific and New York Central made fractional gains.

The curb was steady.

Americans in London were quiet above New York parities.

The market closed steady. Government bonds unchanged; other bonds firm.

POULTRY, PET and LIVE STOCK

Take Good Care Of the Old Hen And Her Chicks

Coops Are as Essential to Success as Is the Food in Poultry Raising.

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

Take good care of the hen with the brood of youngsters.

Great is the variety one finds in coops made for the care of the old hen and her chicks. Barrels on their sides, barrels on end with part of the staves knocked out to allow the little ones to pass in and out at will, A-shaped coops, and sometimes the hens are allowed to find shelter the best they can.

A coop about two feet square and about two feet high in front, with the roof slanting toward the rear, makes a very good home for a hen and little ones. We always keep a roll of felt roofing for covering these coops as we make them. It makes an ideal covering and takes but a little pitch to run the water off. The front of the coop should be of one-inch mesh wire netting, with a slatted door to protect the chicks from the rain. If there be danger from cats, rats, etc., a covered wire netting run should be provided for joining the front of the coop. This will keep out intruders and keep in the chicks.

Coops Should Be Light.

All coops and attachments should be made as light as possible so they will not be burdensome to handle. A loose or removable board bottom is a good thing, too. Much food is lost by feeding carelessly upon the ground, where it is fouled and tramped under foot. This carelessness not only results in the wasting of the feed, but what is still worse, the soured food eaten by the chicks causes indigestion and bowel trouble, and the loss of many good chickens. Food should not be scattered upon the ground except the whole dry grain feed.

Raise all the feed at home you possibly can, and thus reduce the cash outlay for feed. Use all the offal and by-products you can. Watch your chances to secure feed at a bargain—not spoiled food—but by watching one can frequently pick up seed wheat at a bargain where some seedsman has become overstocked. I have at times bought wheat slightly burned or charred after a warehouse fire. If it is dry, it is all right, but if it has been wet, it can be spread out in the sun to dry, stirring it frequently during the process. This charred grain is not only purchased at a very low price, but the fact that it has been charred makes it very wholesome feed—exercising care, of course, all the while that it does not sour while drying.

Rheumatism or Cramps.

Judge F. J. Marshall: I have a hen that is lifeless, sits around most of the time drawn up or drooping. When she walks she seems to be all right, but if she tries to run she can not pick up her feet and tries to use only her wings. I have used the B. D. dip on her and also bathed her legs several times in kerosene. She has been in this condition now for more than a week. I will greatly appreciate some advice on this case. Respectfully, R. W. W.

Camak, Ga.

ANSWER—Your hen is suffering from rheumatic cramps. So long as she is comparatively quiet she does not suffer much, but when she undertakes to walk or run then it takes hold of her; she attempts to fly to relieve the strain on her limbs. You do not say whether her legs are very scaly or rough. In cases of extreme roughness it stiffens them up so they can not walk, except with difficulty. We should advise taking her away from the rest of the flock and feeding her upon very simple rations—bread and milk, with buttermilk to drink. In fact, it would be better, if the hen is fat, to give her nothing but the buttermilk for a week if you can get it. If she will not drink it at first, give it to her with a tablespoon, three or four at a time, and three or four times a day. This will be some trouble, but if she is a hen you value it may be the means of getting her in condition again. We take it that she has been fed too heavily of concentrated foods to induce laying until she has gotten out of condition in that way. I do not believe much in medicines, but think that with the proper manner of feeding results can usually be brought about. Feed more of green stuff and a little less of the highly concentrated foods. See that your stock is housed in good, dry, comfortable quarters. In the absence of the buttermilk use epsom salts freely in the drinking water, and feed lightly of dry bread moistened in warm water.

Builders of Atlanta

Decatur St. Stores Sold for $125,000

Hugh Richardson Sells Parcel to Client—Rental $7,800 a Year.

Hugh Richardson has sold through J. H. Ewing, of the Smith & Ewing Real Estate Agency, to a client of that agency, a block of stores at 123-129 Decatur Street, for $125,000.

This property is located between Courtland Street and Piedmont Avenue, and the building is three stories high. It is leased for several years at $7,800 a year.

The name of the buyer was withheld.

Whitehall Street Grade.

Although some objection has been encountered to the proposed change of grade in Whitehall Street from Mitchell to Forsyth Streets, property owners are hoping that this can be overcome. Manufacturing concerns are said to object on the ground that the improvement would injure their property, but those who favor the work contend that this damage would be slight when compared with the benefits. Charles H. Black outlined the case yesterday and presented waivers for damages. The committee will meet again next Friday to continue the discussion. Mr. Black stated that some big improvements are contemplated with regrading. These may not be made unless the work goes ahead.

M. L. Petty Again in Business.

Captain M. L. Petty, who sold out his real estate business the first of the year with the intention of moving away to Albany, has decided to open an office at 125 North Pryor Street, where he will do a general real estate business. Captain Petty was formerly with the firm of Grant & Petty, and is one of the best-known realty men in this city. He will deal in farms as well as city property, and of the former he says:

"I consider Southwest Georgia one of the best parts of the State for investments at the present time. You can buy the very best farm lands in that section for $10 to $50 an acre. I look for business all over the country to improve in a short time. I think Atlanta is the least disturbed over tariff matters of any city in the country."

Mothers, Keep Your Babies' Hands Covered

And Train Them From the Beginning to Keep Their Fingers Out of Their Mouths

Copyright, 1913.

Millions of mothers worry because "There is something wrong with the child's stomach."

Digestion is bad, sleep is irregular, the lips are crackled, unhealthy looking—there are signs of the dreaded colitis, which takes so many thousands of children to the grave.

False diet, foolish feeding based on ignorance, AND EATING AT IRREGULAR HOURS, menace the health of many children.

The mother that has lost one child or more lives in constant apprehension, and is almost in despair when signs of illness show themselves.

We want to-day to impress upon all mothers ONE THING THAT THEY CAN DO FOR THEIR CHILDREN.

One of the most famous and one of the ablest doctors in this country was called in by a mother to take care of a child that showed signs of illness, and his first question was this:

"Does your baby put its fingers in its mouth a great deal?"

He then impressed upon the mother—the child was not quite two years old—that she must above all things prevent her baby from putting dirty fingers into its mouth.

And this is the idea that we want to impress upon all mothers TO-DAY, and that without putting them to the expense of seeing the doctor quoted above. From him a few words of advice would cost twenty-five dollars.

Remember that children are sometimes poisoned by disease germs IN THEIR FOOD.

But FAR OFTENER THEY ARE POISONED BY GERMS STICKING TO THEIR FINGERS WHICH THEY PUT INTO THEIR MOUTHS.

It doesn't matter how careful you may be, your child is bound to creep on the floor, to fall down upon its hands on the sidewalk, to grasp a railing, etc.

Whenever a child's hands touch the sidewalks, or railings, or the floor, THEY ARE APT TO COME IN CONTACT WITH GERMS THAT PRODUCE DISEASE.

In the big cities especially this danger is great.

Ignorant men who should be controlled and punished by law sit upon the benches in the parks, spitting upon the sidewalks where little children are put to play.

This is actually a crime against human life—a crime none the less dreadful because it is based upon ignorance.

To see a consumptive sunning himself on a bench in the public park is pitiful. You pity the unfortunate man, as he coughs painfully, and he deserves pity.

But, as he scatters about him the germs of his disease, he is actually endangering and often destroying lives of healthy children that go to play in that park.

It is impossible to keep children shut in. It is impossible to keep them from the parks and the streets and from crawling about on the floor.

BUT IT IS POSSIBLE TO PROTECT THEM.

To the mother whom we have mentioned the able doctor said:

"Keeping your child's hands washed frequently is a good thing—but it is no protection.

"Keep COTTON GLOVES ON THE CHILD'S HANDS when it is playing anywhere outside of its nursery—and, better still, keep them on also when it plays on the nursery floor.

"A child will not put cotton gloves into its mouth—it doesn't like the feeling."

There is very simple advice for mothers that worry about their children's health.

If your baby is in the teething stage, you know how the wise old mothers will tell you that you must EXPECT trouble at that time.

You are told that teething affects the stomach and causes sickness, bowel complaint, etc.

Teething DOES affect the child's DIGESTION. But it does not actually introduce into its system the germs that produce disease such as the dreaded Summer complaint.

Children are subject to disease especially when teething, BECAUSE WHEN TEETHING THEY ALWAYS HAVE THEIR FINGERS IN THEIR MOUTHS, and they are always introducing dangerous germs into their systems in that way.

Two pairs of cotton gloves for the baby would not cost very much—and we wish that the managers of big stores would put such gloves on sale as an act of public usefulness, and advertise them at the very lowest possible price.

Occasionally a child suffering from teething will put its fingers in its mouth in spite of wearing cotton gloves. In such a case very rough woolen gloves may be procured that will certainly answer the purpose.

Mothers can do much, also, by making it a habit from the baby's first day to train it to keep its fingers out of its mouth.

A gentle touch of the hand each time that the little fingers are put toward the lips will gradually accustom the child to the notion that its hands and its mouth must be kept separate.

Meanwhile we advise mothers of children under five years of age—and, better still, up to seven years of age—to try this experiment of keeping them gloved with cotton when they play on park sidewalks or street sidewalks exposed to disease germs.

P. S.—Some mothers will say: "Well, my baby always had his hands in his mouth, and HE didn't have gloves, and HE didn't get any disease."

We are glad to hear it. But what is true of one child is not true of another. And what is true of a child one day is not true of the same child ANOTHER DAY.

A child absolutely healthy and strong is able to throw off and get rid of the disease germs that get into its system. A perfectly healthy child with a heart acting strongly and the blood in good condition could swallow a good many tuberculosis germs without getting consumption.

But as soon as something happens, when the vitality is low, the heart action feeble, THE GERMS ARE NOT THROWN OFF.

They establish a foothold, they breed with lightning rapidity, and then it is too late to save the child. Prevention is better than cure, and there is no better prevention than keeping the child's own hands from putting diseases into its mouth.

EGGS IS EGGS

Absolutely the Last Egg Joke.

Breach of Promise Suits

Dorothy Dix Says That Every Man Has a Right to Change His Mind—No Woman Who Is Really Hurt Will Drag Her Wounds Before the Public For Money.

By DOROTHY DIX.

A TELLING blow for sex equality has just been struck by a Brooklyn Supreme Court Justice who has ruled that the right to change your mind is not the sole prerogative of woman. Mere man has the same privilege.

In a breach of promise case, in which a fair lady was suing a faithless swain for renegging on his promise to marry her the Justice made the following rule:

"In the modern days of suffrage agitation," he said, "we must not be too severe with the men, as long as no unfair advantage has been taken of the women.

"I am not going to let this young man rot in jail because he has changed his mind about marrying this girl. We must remember that the lady always reserves to herself the right to change her mind at any moment, and it seems to me the man ought to have the same right."

Good for the Judge! That decision is based on good sound sense and justice. Moreover, it proves what we suffragists have always contended, and that is that equal rights for women will mean equal rights for men, and be just as much to men's advantage as they will be to women's.

The breach of promise suit has never been anything more or less than blackmail disguised as sentiment. No woman whose heart was really hurt would drag her wounds before the public for the sake of a little money. No woman with a vestige of delicacy or refinement in her composition would try to force a man to marry her who had tired of her and was trying to get rid of her.

Not a Business Deal.

It is absurdity to contend that a proposal of marriage is in the same class with a business proposition, and that a man should be held financially responsible for not carrying out a matrimonial engagement as he would be for not fulfilling a business contract. The very essense of courtship are the emotions of love, attraction, fascination and desire that a woman rouses in a man's breast, and when these are gone—when he no longer loves her, when she no longer attracts or fascinates him and he has ceased to want her—her claim upon him is forfeited, and as a matter of fact, it would be a nice point of law to decide whether the woman who can no longer deliver the goods isn't the one who has defaulted on the contract, and not the man.

Moreover, Cupid is no piker. He is a dead game sport, and whenever a man or a woman sits down to the love game he or she must play the limit and take the risks. In addition, this is also to be said—that although women generally get a cold deal in matrimony they hold the trump hand in courtship. For it is the custom of men to woo maids with flowers and candy, and books and theater tickets, and restaurant feeds, so that Romeo has paid his score as he went along, and even if he balks at the altar the account still stands in the woman's favor. Truly, 'tis better to have been wooed and jilted than never to have been wooed at all!

In deciding that a man has a right to change his mind about getting married and cannot be assessed heavy damages for doing so the Brooklyn Justice has done a notable service to humanity. The breach of promise case should be thrown out of court and a man not only given the privilege of withdrawing from a matrimonial engagement if he decides that for any reason it would be best for him to do so, but he should be backed up by public opinion in doing it.

Thousands of men, carried away by the impulse of the moment or some wave of transient sentiment, have popped the question to girls that they knew were unfitted to be their wives, and rued their folly before the words were off of their lips. Thousands of other men have honestly thought themselves in love at the time they became engaged to women, but found themselves disillusioned long before their wedding day. Thousands of men are so completely out of love and disenchanted with their prospective wives that they would rather face the hangman than the preacher on their marriage morn.

Want to Be Jilted.

These men would give ten years of their lives to unsay the words they have uttered, to take back the promise they have given, to be free of the women that they know will hang like millstones about their necks, but they lack the courage to break their engagements. Many a man does everything in his power to force the girl to jilt him. He picks quarrels with her. He neglects her. Sometimes he even tries to tell her that he doesn't love her any more, but the more he attempts to break away, the tighter she clings, and the more she weeps, and in the end he gives in and lets himself be led like a lamb to the slaughter because he hasn't the nerve to hurt her or to be branded as a quitter.

Let no man think that he is doing a noble and heroic thing to marry a woman after he has ceased to love her. He is doing her the most cruel wrong that one human being can inflict on another, and it would be a kinder act if he killed her than it is to marry her. He is sure to neglect her, to let her see how she bores him and what a burden she is on him, and to break her heart with a thousand little evidences of his indifference.

It takes his martyrdom out on her, and she pays every day of her life for his having been coerced into an unwilling marriage. The affection of a man for his wife cools down from the boiling point to sub-normal even when he's crazy about her when they got married, but Heaven help the unfortunate woman whose husband's love was at the zero point on their wedding day! Believe me, she knows what a long, cold winter is like.

Therefore, in justice to himself and kindness to the woman, any man should take advantage of his right to change his mind if he decides that he has changed his heart, no matter how many engagement rings he has given, nor how many vows of constancy he has sworn. Let him duck and run, though he were at the very foot of the altar. It would save his life, and be a blessing to the woman.

:: The Fall of New Orleans ::

By DR. T. B. GREGORY.

THE fall of New Orleans—51 years ago—was a blow to the Confederacy from which it never recovered.

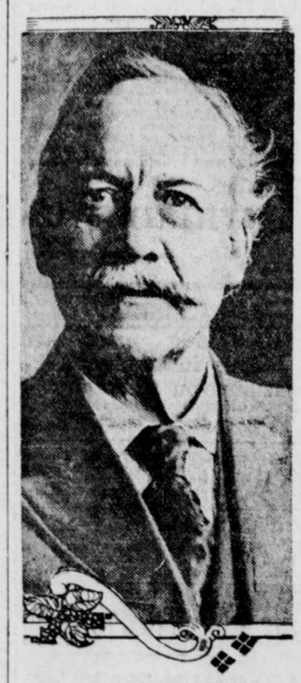
At the time Farragut and Porter were steaming triumphantly up to the levees of the Creole city at the mouth of the Father of Waters, McClellan was gathering his mighty host for the "On to Richmond" campaign which was to end, a little while later, in ignominious defeat on the banks of the James; and, guided by the matchless genius of Lee, the Army of Northern Virginia was to score victory after victory on the soil of the Old Dominion; but at New Orleans the Federals held the grand strategic point, the key to the great river which penetrated far into the territory of the seceded States, and divided from its eastern half the rich cornfields of the West and Southwest, upon which, later on, the Confederacy was to depend for the bread and meat that was to maintain its armies.

The Blockade Policy.

The policy of holding New Orleans at all hazard, as the one supremely vital point on the line of defense, seems never to have entred the minds of the Confederate authorities; and the city was surrendered without a tenth part of the resistance that was afterward made at many points of much less strategic importance.

From first to last the Mississippi River was the key to the military problem with both sides. Which side commanded that river would also command the issue of the struggle.

It was no new thought. From as far back as the earliest period of the French explorations on the North American Continent, it was clearly perceived by the explorers that the great river was, as well in political as in geographical significance, the master feature of the whole situation. That was why Frenchman, Spaniard and Englishman looked upon the mighty stream with such greedy eyes, and resolved, come what might, to contend for it to the last man.



REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

Jefferson saw the political importance of the Mississippi, and it was for that reason that he was most anxious to consummate the "Louisiana Purchase," or, if that was impossible, to at least secure possession of the city of New Orleans. The country that held New Orleans would hold the Mississippi River, and the country that controlled the Mississippi River would control the political fortunes of the North American Continent. American history, from the treaty of Ghent straight down to the final rounding out of the Republic with the successful negotiations of the Gadsden Purchase, is full of diplomatic gymnastics regarding the Mississippi River.

In the light of all this, it will be seen how great a victory it was that Farragut won when he silenced Forts St. Philip and Jackson and steamed on to the capture of New Orleans.

What Are the Real Wonders of the World As It Exists To-day?

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

"I AM convinced," says an epistolary friend, "that the Panama Canal is the greatest wonder of construction that the world has ever known, and I don't see how it is ever to be exceeded, unless the United States should carry out Mr. Riker's idea of diverting and controlling the Gulf Stream by means of a gigantic jetty thrown across the banks of Newfoundland. But I should like to know whether you regard such things as a true measure of the superiority of modern times. Couldn't you make a list of seven modern wonders that would better represent the real progress of mankind?"

Has Been Going Forward.

If I were going to offer a list of seven modern wonders, conceived in this sense, of the application of the mind to something outside itself, I should wish, first, to define the term "modern," and I would make it include the three centuries that have elapsed since the days of Galileo. The world has never gone backward since his time. He was the first great experimental philosopher, and when he dropped a ten-pound and a one-pound cannon ball from the Leaning Tower of Pisa, and proved, by occular demonstration, that they took the same time to fall to the bottom, he overthrew forever the ancient method of drawing blind inferences about the physical world out of the mind, instead of using the senses as a test and the intelligence as a guide and interpreter.

So, I should head the list of seven modern wonders with the discovery of the Law of Gravitation, which Galileo began experimentally, and Newton completed mathematically.

To that law—although we do not yet know what gravitation is in its essence—we owe not only our accurate knowledge of the universe, but many of our greatest engineering triumphs.

Second on the list, in the order of time, might stand the invention of the Telescope, which, as a means of research, must also be credited to Galileo, who worked entirely in the modern spirit of using the mind as a means and not as an end in the exploration of the material world. By the invention of the telescope, and its corallary, the microscope, modern man enabled himself to penetrate, at the same time, the mysteries of illimitable space and the secrets of the realm of the infinitely little.

Third, let us place the development of the science of Chemistry, which has taught us so much about the constitution of matter, and which, some think, may yet reveal the secret of life itself. To reveal only a small part of what chemistry has achieved would, in itself, require a long article. There is hardly any part of human life and activity in which it does not play its role. But there are certain things that have grown out of chemical experimentation which are, perhaps, worthy to stand by themselves in our list.

Among these I would put, as the fourth wonder, Photography. Beginning as a means of obtaining pictures of the human face, more accurate in their details than the hand could draw, photography has now become a means of discovering things invisible to the eye, both upon the earth and in the heavens. The greatest astronomical discoveries of recent years have been effected by photography. By using the X-ray, and by selecting certain chosen waves of light, we can picture, by photography, things hidden behind barriers impenetrable to ordinary vision, and things on distant bodies in space which are veiled from the eye by the confusing effects of too many kinds of light.

Fifth, I would put the invention of the Spectroscope, an instrument which enables us to analyze light and to use it as a means of investigating the nature of substances and bodies, not only upon the earth, but also in the sky. To the spectroscope we owe our knowledge of the constitution of the sun and the other stars.

Present Inventions.

Sixth, comes the use of Electricity, in telegraphy, and in the production of light, and the transference of power. These things are so recent that everybody knows all about them, or, at least, knows what their nature is.

Seventh, the establishment of the Law of Evolution. The idea of some such law was dimly present in the minds of some ancient philosophers, but, after their manner, they never thought of testing it by close observation of nature. Most of them used their minds with about as much practical effect as a miller would use his mill if he merely set the wheels turning, grinding only air and getting nothing but air out of it.

ANTI-JAP BILL PASSES SENATE IN CALIFORNIA

Vote 35 to 2 on Birdsall-Thompson Measure After Heated All-Night Debate.

BRYAN PARTLY VICTORIOUS

Modifies Act Barring Aliens Not Eligible for Citizenship From Owning Farm Lands.

SACRAMENTO, May 3.—The California Assembly to-day voted unanimously to suspend the constitutional procedure and put the Senate anti-alien land bill for a final vote without the first and second readings. This action was taken when majority leaders in the lower House received word from Governor Johnson that he desired this plan carried out.

Democrats in the Assembly at first opposed the Governor's plan, but later voted with the Republicans and Progressives.

SACRAMENTO, May 3.—The California Senate, by a vote of 35 to 2, early to-day passed the Birdsall-Thompson bill prohibiting the ownership of land for agricultural purposes in California by aliens not eligible for citizenship in the United States. The measure permits a three-year leasehold by aliens. It was adopted after an all-night session.

Secretary of State Bryan had retired when the result was announced. His secretary, Robert P. Rose, said Mr. Bryan would decide to-day when he will leave for the East. The action of the Senate was considered a partial victory for Secretary Bryan, whose work here resulted in the bill being less effective against the Japanese than the Webb bill as advocated by Governor Johnson. The bill permits the spread of Japanese farming colonies.

State Senator Cartwright, Democrat, announced prior to the roll call that he would vote against the passage of the bill, although he favored it. He gave as his reason:

"Vote to Tie U. S. Hands."

"You are turning a deaf ear to the best President this country has ever had. You will vote to tie the hands of the United States in its diplomatic relations with Japan; the majority has surrendered to the 'boss' of the State."

Consideration of the bill was begun at 11 o'clock yesterday morning and continued without recess even for luncheon and dinner. All afternoon, until the clock in the Senate chamber was ordered stopped by the presiding officer at 11:43 o'clock at night, the Democrats fought to delay action by submitting numerous amendments.

The hardest fight waged around a resolution introduced by Senator Curtin calling upon the Legislature to delay action for two years and refer the whole subject to the Federal Government. Debate on this amendment opened early in the day and continued until 6 o'clock, when a roll call showed it defeated.

Threat of Referendum.

In the closing hours of the debate on the bill itself, Senators Sanford, Caminetti and Shanahan threatened to invoke the referendum. They believed the people of the State were pleading for relief from Japanese agriculturists and that the measure does not correct the evil.

The Senate gallery and lobby was packed during the long session. Many Japanese lined the brass railing of the gallery, listening intently to the debate.

At no time during the session did Secretary Bryan appear in the Senate chamber, although he was in the office of Lieutenant Governor Wallace, hardly a hundred feet away, until nearly midnight.

WILSON, HOME, THINKS HIS WORK IN JERSEY FRUITFUL

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Tired, but confident that his trip to New Jersey will be productive of good results in connection with jury reform, President Wilson returned to Washington early to-day and at once went to the White House, where he attacked a large amount of routine work which had accumulated in his absence.

Man of Mystery Now Made Clear; Big Story Coming

This picture is odd. Running for three days in The Georgian without any comment, it has caused endless discussion as to who it is and what it is. The Georgian has been besieged with telephone calls and letters from its readers asking for an explanation. We do not wonder that you had some doubt as to why it is here. This is the answer:

The Georgian has purchased a serial story, more interesting than any Atlanta has had in years. This picture typifies the story.

Based on the picture, what in your judgment is the title or ought to be of this story? Five dollars in gold will be paid to each of the five best literary judgments received.

The title of the story has already been selected, and it is now in a sealed envelope in the hands of T. J. Peeples, cashier of the American National Bank.

The answers will be judged upon their originality, their literary value and upon their analytical clearness.

Address all answers to "Literary Editor, The Georgian," Atlanta.

'Animal Effects' Are Next Winter's Style

Clothing Designers Name Blue Wine Color and Taupe as 'Right' Colors for Wear.

TOLEDO, OHIO, May 3.—When the style committee of the National Cloak, Suit and Skirt Association, in session here, reports late to-day it will tell the women of the United States that they are to be gowned in animal effects next winter.

"Pile" fabrics will be worn. These consist of furs made of silk and wool, which are such clever imitations of real animal fur that only an expert can distinguish the imitation.

Navy blue, wine color and taupe will be the stylish shades.

Yuan Spreads Troops To Keep China Quiet

President Is Determined to Crush Incipient Revolutions Against Republican Government.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PEKIN, May 3.—Determined to uphold the republican government of China at any cost now that it has been formally recognized by the United States, President Yuan Shih Kai to-day has 50,000 troops on the move throughout China ready to quell any revolutionary disturbances.

The President caused it to be announced to-day that the revolutionary tendencies in the southern provinces will be crushed. The announcement added that "Politicians in the southern provinces will not be allowed to dictate the policy of the government."

30,000 MARCH FOR SUFFRAGE UP FIFTH AVE.

Police Make Special Efforts to Protect Women Taking Part in Annual Votes Parade.

42-CENT HAT IN EVIDENCE

White Zouaves Entertain Spectators With Fancy Dances—Notables See Pageant.

NEW YORK, May 3.—Fifth Avenue, used to a daily parade of attractive women, fairly reveled in the display this afternoon, when over 30,000 men and women marched up the avenue eight abreast in the annual woman suffrage parade.

There were large numbers of men in line, but the main body of the parade was made up of women.

There were women of all sizes and all degrees of beauty, some afoot, some on horseback and some in carriages and automobiles.

The new suffrage hat, costing 42 cents, 3 cents more than last year, trimmed only with ribbon and chiffon, feathers and flowers being tabooed, was a feature. It was described by Mrs. E. Livingston Hunt, chairman of the parade hat committee, as "a small round hat, after the early season's fashion, with a slight roll of the brim on one side."

Notables and enemies of suffrage were in the reviewing stand. Men in the grandstand were allowed to smoke.

Dances were executed in Fifth Avenue by the "Suffrage Zouaves," part of the division of the parade led by Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont.

Police Guard Marchers.

Police precautions of an exceptional nature were taken by Police Commissioner Waldo to protect the women and men suffrage marchers from interference during their procession. In order to preclude any possibility of censure such as followed the parade last year the police commissioner ordered that any person making remarks offensive to the suffragists be arrested.

Four inspectors and 1,200 patrolmen were assigned to guard the line of march. Ten patrolmen were assigned to each block.

Heading the parade were delegates from each of the nine States where woman suffrage is in effect. Each member of this advance guard carried an American flag. Following them came the Women's Political Union dressed in white, with purple, green and white regalia, led by sixteen horsewomen, including Miss Inez Milholland. Each speaker of the union carried a little green box to be used as a rostrum from which to deliver convincing arguments in favor of suffrage.

Zouaves Dance on Avenue.

The Political Equality Association was led by Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont. Included in this section was a group of young women called the "White Zouaves," dressed in dazzling white costumes. During the halts in the parade the Zouaves executed fancy dances for the benefit of the spectators who lined the sidewalks.

In cap and gown, about 600 strong, came the Collegiate Equal Suffrage League, carrying their college banners. Next came a delegation of men marching under the banner of the Men's League for Woman Suffrage, followed by delegations of women from all States where the women have not yet been granted the right to vote, arranged in alphabetical order of States. This delegation closed the parade.

Last night, as a sort of preparation for to-day's parade, a suffrage pageant was given in the Metropolitan Opera House. Three hundred of the most beautiful women whom the committee in charge of the pageant could secure posed in the various tableaux and executed the dances.

COUNTESS SHOT MYSTERIOUSLY; SLAYING FEARED

Coroner Conditionally Accepts the Earl of Cottenham's Story That Wife's Death Was Accident.

RECALLS DIVORCE SCANDAL

Married English Nobleman Following Suit in Which He Was Named as Co-respondent.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

HENLEY, ENGLAND, May 3.—Deep mystery surrounds the violent death of the Countess of Cottenham, wife of Charles E. P. Kenelme, Earl of Cottenham, whose body was found in a thicket near Goring. She had been shot to death. The case was supposed to be one of murder, although the authorities said that the countess might have shot herself.

The maiden name of the Countess of Cottenham was Lady Rose Nevill, daughter of the Marquis of Abergavenny. She was married to the Earl of Cottenham in 1899. They had three children.

Absence Leads to Search.

The protracted absence of the countess from her home led to a search, and the body, pierced with a bullet, was found in a clump of underbrush in the thicket.

There was some delay in calling the authoritels into the case when the police began their inquiry. A theory was advanced that the countess had either been lured to the lonely spot or else in a fit of despondency had repaired to the copse to end her life.

There was no evidence of a struggle at the scene of death, but the ground was hard, and it was argued that it would require extreme exertions to dig up the turf.

Family Denies Quarrel.

Members of the family denied there had been any ill-feeling of late between the earl and his wife.

The Earl of Cottenham was the countess' second husband. Her first husband was John Blundell Leigh, a rich land owner. Mr. Blundell secured a divorce in 1899. Within a few months Mrs. Blundell became the Countess of Cottenham.

The divorce suit of Colonel Leigh, who was an officer of the guards, was one of the biggest scandals which has stirred English society in the past twenty years. The Earl of Cottenham was named as co-respondent. Highly sensational testimony was introduced at the trial.

Older Than Husband.

The countess was much older than her husband, and at the time of her marriage, in 1899, satirical society journals said "she was almost old enough to be her husband's mother."

After she was divorced and married to the earl, both she and her new husband were ostracised from society for a few months, but later were reinstated in their old places in exclusive circles.

Half a dozen years ago the countess caused comment by making a pet of a baboon and taking it to society functions with her.

Coroner Accepts Earl's Story.

At the inquest the earl testified that he found his wife's body. He advanced the opinion that his wife had tripped and fallen and that her firearm had then been accidentally discharged.

As there was no witness to the tragedy, the coroner decided to accept this theory with reservation that the case might be reopened if fresh evidence were secured.

Plot to Assassinate King of Spain Bared

Letter Found on Anarchist Shows Attempt Would Have Been Made on Alfonso's Visit to Paris.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MONTPELIER, FRANCE, May 3.—A plot to assassinate King Alfonso of Spain when he comes to France to visit President Poincare was discovered here to-day. A Spanish anarchist was arrested and letters involving two other men and a woman were found.

Mrs. Wharton Lives Up to Book Will Parallel Divorce-Heroine She'll Assume Role She Wrote

Mrs. Edith Wharton.

Strange Real Life Romance Will Repeat Situation Novelist Made Use of in Story.

NEW YORK, May 3.—Friends of Mrs. Edith Wharton, the novelist, are busy commenting on the announcement from Paris that she is to divorce her husband, Edward Wharton, whom she married in 1885.

Their acquaintances at Lenox, where they lived until two years ago, caught the first glimmer yesterday of the reason for the sudden departure of the Whartons from Lenox and the retreat to foreign lands.

Then the many writings of Mrs. Wharton were recalled, but none so strongly as a story concerning divorced life, which appeared just before she left her residence in this country. It was called "Other Times, Other Manners."

It is the story of a woman, thirty years ago divorced, remarried and socially exiled. Then she returns to this country to find that her daughter has been divorced and remarried, but society has made a heroine of her. It is the tale of the difference of the years.

Mrs. Lidcote, the book mother, is astounded to find that the persons who had refused to tolerate her in years past gladly embraced her daughter. The moral of the tale seems to be that one should not err ahead of one's generation. Here is a passage from Mrs. Wharton's book:

You say that it is preposterous that the women who didn't object to accepting Lelia's hospitality should have objected to meeting me under her roof. And so it is; but I begin to see why. It is simply that society is much too busy to revise its own judgments. Probably no one in the house with me stopped to consider that my case and Lelia's were identical.

They only remembered that I had done something which, at the time I did it, was condemned by society. My case has been passed on and classified; I'm the woman who has been cut for twenty years; it's simply a tradition to cut me. And traditions that have lost their meaning are the hardest of all to destroy.

When Mrs. Wharton's friends recalled the book they all pointed out strongly that if the reported divorce was true it merely meant that Mrs. Wharton considered she had waited for an auspicious era for divorce.

Wilson Has a Dornick! The Country Is Safe!

Phrenologist Explains How Destiny of Nation Rests on Existence of Bump on Prseident's Head.

PHILADELPHIA, May 3.—The nation is safe! President Wilson has a dornick, and so everything will be all right. But if he did not happen to have that dornick, heaven only knows what would have happened to ninety-odd millions of people.

Professor Michael Lewis, who discovered the existence of the Wilson dornick, to-day explained how the destiny of a nation rests upon the existence of a dornick, which is a cranial protuberance, otherwise known as a bump.

"A man who lacks a dornick," said the professor, "lacks the qualities that make for leadership. A dornickless man will make many mistakes, and perhaps plunge into ruin any enterprise which he directs."

'Brazilian Trot' Is Latest From Paris

Joan Sawyer, Who Brings it, Says That it Is the Only Thing in the World.

NEW YORK, May 3.—Joan Sawyer, the swiftest turkey trotter that ever saw Broadway, has returned from Paris with the Brazilian trot, a dance that is faster and more bewildering than a combination of all the dances so far invented.

"It's the only thing in the world," said Miss Sawyer. "You can dance the Brazilian trot instead of eating or drinking. In fact, if you are starving it's a perfectly good substitute for food and drink."

ANALYSIS OF BLOOD STAINS MAY SOLVE PHAGAN MYSTERY

Three Former Employees at Pencil Factory Are Summoned to Testify. Expected That Frank and Watchman Will Be Questioned Further.

It was reported to-day that three young women, former employees of the National Pencil Factory, will be important witnesses for the Coroner's jury in the Phagan case on Monday.

Dr. Claude Smith, city bacteriologist, was asked by the police to-day to make a chemical analysis of the bloodstains on the shirt found in the back yard of the home of Lee.

The garment was given to Dr. Smith by Detective Rosser. The detectives are hopeful that by scientific tests and comparisons it will be determined whether the garment was a 'plant' or not. Dr. Smith said that he could not make his examination until some time next week.

Solicitor Dorsey and Chief of Detectives Lanford were closeted for two hours to-day in a discussion of the case. At the conclusion neither would make a public announcement.

$1,000 Fund Is Rumored.

It was said that an effort would be made to have the county appropriate $1,000 for a private investigation.

The inquest will be resumed at 2 o'clock. Leo M. Frank has not yet given any testimony before the Coroner's jury, and it is planned for him to be heard on Monday. It is also likely that Lee, the night watchman, will be examined still further.

The police and detectives are still busily at work on the case, but so far as is known they have secured nothing of importance.

Await Coroner's Verdict.

When the Coroner's jury verdict is rendered the case automatically goes to the Grand Jury. Solicitor Dorsey and the Grand Jury will not take up the case officially until the Coroner's jury has concluded its investigation.

Many wild reports, absolutely without basis in fact, are in circulation. It is emphatically declared by the police that no confessions have been made by anybody in the case. This should put an end to the report that Lee has confessed and implicated Frank.

It is not likely that the body of the unfortunate girl will be exhumed. County Physician Hurt says that no further examination is necessary, as the evidence on this point is very clear and exact.

Visitors Are Barred.

Visitors are not allowed to see either Frank or Lee, although counsel has full access to the Tower to confer freely with the men.

A score of employees of the factory are under subpena to testify before the Coroner's jury, but their testimony is not considered likely to be of great importance.

The release of Arthur Mullinax and J. M. Gantt indicates that the detectives have abondoned the theory that the girl left the pencil factory after receiving her pay on Saturday. The detectives now are of the opinion that she was not seen on the streets again after she entered the factory.

May Be Held for Jury.

Without seeming to forecast what the Coroner's jury will do, it is more than likely that both Frank and Lee will be held for the Grand Jury, where the testimony or evidence will be weighed carefully under the supervision of Solicitor General Hugh Dorsey.

The only statement that the lawyers for Frank make is that he is still vehement in the declaration that he knows nothing whatever about the crime.

Mr. Rosser says that not a word of evidence had been produced against his client.

Gen. Wood Reports On Mexican Status

Sentiment Along Rio Grande Against Huerta, and Favors Carranza, He Tells Garrison.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Sentiment on the Rio Grande is favorable to the Carranza movement in Mexico and bitterly opposed to the Huerta Government, according to Major General Leonard Wood, who returned to Washington to-day after an inspection trip along the boundary. He made this report to Secretary of War Garrison.

General Wood made inquiry among ranchers and farmers respecting depredations committed by Mexicans. He found little complaint and could find nowhere evidence of terrorism.

The State Department to-day received a report that a battle was under way at Esplonaza, a short distance from Monclava. No details are given. Reports from Nogales stated that two Mexican Federal gunboats arrived Thursday at Guayamas and are reported to have shelled Empalme yesterday, the state troops evacuating the place.

Wife Lays Husband's Misdeeds to Liver

'It Affects Him That Way,' Mrs. J. T. Thomas' Explanation for Cattle Stealng Charge.

J. T. Thomas would be a model of virtue and good citizenship if it were not for his liver, said Mrs. Thomas to-day. The wife blames that incorrigible organ of her husband's for his present plight. He is held in the Fulton County Tower, bound over by the Recorder on a charge of stealing cattle.

Mrs. Thomas, visiting her husband's lawyer to-day, said that J. T. was not responsible for his actions whenever his liver got out of order.

"It seems to affect him that way," she said.

The lawyer went to the jail to see his client, and confided to Day Jailer J. T. Golden the reason for the misconduct of Thomas.

Whereupon Mr. Golden suggested that Judge Roan is one of the very best liver regulators. Thomas is held in jail in default of a $2,000 bond imposed by the Recorder.

Darden's Attorneys Ask for New Trial

A Short Story by Kipling in To-morrow's Sunday American

T. G. POLHILL IS ELECTED HEAD OF EDUCATORS

State Convention Before Adjourning Demands Labor Laws and Better Sanitation.

T. G. Polhill, of LaGrange, is the new head of the Georgia Educational Association. He was elected without opposition this morning at the last session of the convention. Mr. Polhill was first vice president of the organization during the past year. He is principal of the LaGrange High School.

Other officers elected were J. C. Wardlaw, of the Georgia Military Institute at Milledgeville, first vice president, and Miss Elizabeth Holt, of the Augusta High School, second vice president. C. L. Smith, superintendent at LaGrange, was re-elected secretary, and Ralph Newton, superintendent at Fort Valley, was re-elected treasurer.

Three new members of the Board of Directors were also elected. They were Jason Scarboro, superintendent at Tifton; R. E. Brooks, superintendent at Dublin, and G. D. Godard, superintendent at Moultrie.

Teachers Demand Prompt Pay.

Resolutions were adopted imploring the Legislature to provide for prompt payment of teachers' salaries, to provide for better supervision of rural school work by appointing five supervisors in addition to the three already employed to provide for competent medical inspection of school children, to pass laws requiring installation of sanitary drinking fountains and other sanitary necessities and to pass a child labor law making it unlawful to work a child under 14 years of age.

Selection of a State song and a State flower were carried over until next year. Four songs have been selected from a large number submitted. They will be "tried out" by various schools and a vote taken as to the best one. The question of selecting the State flower also will be put to a vote, the children of each school voting. Each school will be entitled to one vote when the matter is decided next year.

Meeting Place Not Fixed.

Albany extended an invitation to the association to meet there next year and delegates from South Georgia asked that their section be regarded in the naming of the next meeting place. The matter was left in the hands of the executive committee.

The convention adjourned at 12:30 o'clock.

Puts Health Before Learning.

"If it were a choice between health and education, I would select health. Make the child healthy; then educate him," was the terse comment by Dr. T. R. Abercrombie, inspector for the State Board of Health, before the association this morning.

"The child's health comes before everything else; conditions that surround him and the condition of his physical being for the development of his mental qualities are most important factors," he continued. "Too often the child has been developed mentally when his physical part was absolutely unfit. The great problem lies in making him fit physically and then to develop his mentality.

"A rigid campaign along this line is what is needed. Teachers have been educated to the need of health among children. It remains for the State to follow up this work."

Dr. Abercrombie's address was listened to attentively. One of the strongest features of the Georgia Educational Association since its organization has been the promotion of children's health.

Wilson Reconciles McAdoo and McCombs

President Brought Two Leaders Together on Recent Trip, It Is Just Learned.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Tired, but confident that his trip to New Jersey will be productive of good results in connection with jury reform, President Wilson returned to Washington early to-day and at once went to the White House, where he attacked a large amount of routine work which had accumulated in his absence.

One of the incidents of the trip which afforded the President much satisfaction and which did not become known until to-day was his meeting in New York with National Chairman William F. McCombs and Secretary McAdoo of the Treasury Department, at the home of Colonel E. M. House.

It was the first time that Chairman McCombs and Secretary McAdoo, who was vice chairman, had met since the early days of the campaign. Differences of opinion as to the management of the campaign were said to have existed between the two men, though their relations with Mr. Wilson were always of a warm cordiality.

Suffragettes' War With Torch Spreads

Scotch Militants Burn School, English Women Lay Freight Sheds in Ashes.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ABERDEEN, SCOTLAND, May 3.—Scotch suffragettes are adopting the methods of their English sisters. Militants to-day burned the new wing of the Ashley public school, entailing $2,500 damage.

Suffrage literature was found scattered about the ashes, showing the identity of the incendiaries.

One of the cards bore the inscription:

"Justice as well as education."

The incendiaries escaped.

BRADFORD, ENGLAND, May 3.—A number of freight sheds, filled with merchandise, on the Midland Railroad were burned here to-day by suffragettes. The damage is estimated at $500,000. A train of freight cars was also burned.

Says He'll Eat Sixty Eggs For Breakfast

Husky New York Mechanic Promises to Perform Feat Every Other Morning.

NEW YORK, May 3.—Here's what William H. Reinke proposes to have every other morning for breakfast as long as the bank roll lasts and he has a good job:

Fifteen scrambled eggs.
Fifteen fried eggs.
Fifteen soft boiled eggs.
Fifteen hard boiled eggs.
Seven coffee rings.
Five cups of coffee.

Reinke will begin getting on the outside of his first sixty eggs this morning.

The egg eater is a mechanic employed in a garage. He is twenty years old, hard as nails, close to six feet in height, and weighs 190 pounds.

55,000 Out Now in Welsh Miners' Strike

Owners' Promise to Hire No More Non-Union Men Presages Victory for Unions.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CARDIFF, WALES, May 3.—The strike of Welsh coal miners in protest against the open shop policy of the mine owners is spreading to a serious extent. Fifty-five thousand men were out to-day.

Leaders of the miners' union expect a speedy victory, because many of the mine owners have already promised to hire no more non-union men. This is compelling non-unionists to join the organization.

In His Will Lord Crawford Pays Graceful Compliment to His Lady.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 2.—One of the most graceful compliments ever paid to a woman is contained in the will of Lord Crawford, who died in January, leaving an estate valued at $2,181,395.

In his will the Earl said that since his father's death he had bought a considerable number of diamonds and other jewels "which have been used and adorned by my wife."

Silk Stockings Exasperate Judge Calls Them In Contempt of Court Fair Defendant Hastily Hides 'Em

Mrs. Rachael N. Ducas.

New York Justice Does Not Take Kindly to Artifices of Modern Feminine Dress.

Ye women of Atlanta, have a care!

The judicial temperament, like the Cole Blease temperament, does not take kindly to the artifices and blandishments of modern dress.

Listen to this story from New York:

Supreme Court Justice Gavegan looked over his spectacles in Part XIV of the Supreme Court and scowled at a dainty pair of pearl gray silk stockings.

The hosiery was displayed upon the feet of Mrs. Rachael N. Ducas, a pretty wife of Benjamin P. Ducas, a wealthy manufacturer. Mrs. Ducas was sitting at the table of her counsel, her feet crossed.

"I want to say," the Court began gravely, "that the young lady in black there is disrespectful to this Court. If she wishes me to be more explicit, I will say for her benefit that her lower limbs are insufficiently clad. She is making far too free an exhibition of them in a public place."

Mrs. Ducas promptly pulled her hobble skirt down over the silver buckles on her slippers and kept her feet under her chair during the remainder of the court session.

Her lawyer replied: "Your Honor, this young woman in black is the defendant."

"I don't care who she is," replied Justice Gavegan. "She is making an exposure of herself in this court. That's all I have to say."

Dr. Wilmer, Regiment Chaplain, Is Retired

Rank of Captain Goes With Fifth's Spiritual Adviser After Ten Years' Service.

With a record of more than ten years as chaplain with the Fifth Georgia regiment, Dr. Cary B. Wilmer was retired from active service to-day with the rank of captain.

Dr. Wilmer, who is rector of St. Luke's Episcopal Church, has been devoted to the welfare of the regiment and has been with the soldiers on many of their encampments, the most notable of which was the Manassas campaign of 1904. His successor will be appointed on the recommendation of the regimental commander.

CHEROKEE LIFE GETS CHANGE IN CHARTER

The Cherokee Life Insurance Company, of Rome, Ga., for which a receivership was asked some time ago by dissatisfied stockholders, to-day was granted a change in its charter by the Secretary of State, becoming a stock company with a capital of $100,000.

The company was a mutual concern when the litigation began. The new arrangement divides its capital stock into 10,000 shares with a par value of $10 each.

SLAYER DEFIES HANGMAN TO TAKE HIM TO GALLOWS

LOUISVILLE, GA., May 3.—Armed with two knives, metal parts of his prison cot, which he had demolished, and several large lumps of coal, Will Thompson, a condemned negro, yesterday afternoon defied Sheriff Smith and his deputies when they went to his cell to remove him to the scaffold to be hanged. He threatened to kill the first man who entered his cell. He was later forced into submission at the point of a shotgun and carried to the gallows.

Thompson was convicted of the murder of Claude Humphrey, at Avery, two years ago.

GARDNER CANDIDATE FOR G. O. P. CHAIRMAN

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Representative Gardner, of Massachusetts, has announced his candidacy for the chairmanship of the Republican congressional campaign committee.

He declared that if he is elected he will liberalize the organization.

A TEN CENT BOX OF "CASCARETS"

Keep your liver and bowels active and you feel bully for months.

Put aside—just once—the Salts, Cathartic Pills, Castor Oils or purgative waters which merely force a passageway through the bowels, but do not thoroughly cleanse, freshen and purify these drainage or alimentary organs, and have no effect whatever upon the liver and stomach.

Keep your inside organs pure and fresh with Cascarets, which thoroughly cleanse the stomach, remove the undigested, sour and fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the intestines and bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken and cost only 10 cents a box from your druggist. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have Headache, Biliousness, coated tongue, Indigestion, Sour Stomach or Constipated bowels. Cascarets belong in every household. Children just love to take them.

REPUBLICANS IN CONGRESS SPLIT ON SCHEDULE 'K'

Standpatters Against Findings of Taft Tariff Board; Progressives Favor Them.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Discussion of the wool schedule to-day showed the Republicans divided over the question of what sort of a substitute should be offered for the Underwood rates in Schedule K.

Standpatters believed the report of the tariff board too indefinite to base an accurate scale of tariff duties upon it, while the progressive faction insisted that as the Republicans were declaring for a tariff commission they should accept without equivocation the findings of the Taft tariff board.

The Progressives took the stand that the Payne rates on wool were too high and they supported the Democratic rates.

Representative Gardner of Massachusetts, Republican, who has been leading the fight for tariff revision based on the findings of the tariff board, declared he believed that the Underwood rates on the better grades of woolen cloth were too low.

Democratic Leader Underwood intends to keep the House in suspense until late to-night, and it is probable that before adjournment is taken the House will have completed all the schedules except the free list.

ROME-GADSDEN RAILROAD PROMOTERS FORM COMPANY

GADSDEN, ALA., May 3.—Promoters of the proposed Rome and Gadsden Railroad to-day elected officers and directors. The officers are: President, J. B. Wadsworth, Gadsden; vice president, J. N. King, Rome; treasurer, G. P. Smith, Center; secretary, L. S. Daniels, Rome.

On May 9 a meeting of the directors and officers will be held at Rome to arrange to send representatives to New York to finance the project.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR LEADER VISITS HERE

Miss Mabel Langford, of Wilkinsville, Ga., field secretary of the Georgia Christian Endeavor Union, is in Atlanta for a visit of several days to confer with leaders of the Christian Endeavor societies here and for a meeting of the recently elected State officers.

'All Men Are Liars' She Said; 'Insane,' Jury Votes at Once

Harsh Views of the Sterner Sex Prove Unfortunate for Mrs. Fenes.

YONKERS, May 3.—Harsh views of men, written by Mrs. Lula Fenes, a prominent New Rochelle woman, convinced a Sheriff's jury that examined her that she is incompetent, and they returned a verdict accordingly.

"All men are liars," she wrote. "Man wants woman to slave and work for him, to cook, to nurse him when he is sick, to close his eyes when he dies, to dig his grave and then lie down in it herself."

Mrs. Fenes wrote her husband, Dr. Fenes, letters addressed, "Murderers' Row, New Rochelle," while in a sanitarium.

GREAT-GRANDDAUGHTER OF P. T. BARNUM MARRIES

ASHEVILLE, N. C., May 3.—Henry Nash Carrier and his bride, formerly Miss Nancy Barnum Clark, great-granddaughter of the late P. T. Barnum, are to-day enjoying an automobile honeymoon in the North Carolina mountains, following their marriage here yesterday afternoon at "Rockbrook," the bride's home. They left Asheville immediately after the ceremony in an automobile, keeping their destination a secret. The bridegroom is from Greenville, S. C. The wedding was attended by friends from Greenville, Spartanburg, Richmond, Norfolk and Atlanta.

HUFF TO ASK CONGRESS TO PROBE SPEER AFFAIR

MACON, GA., May 3.—The charge of contempt of court hanging over him for sending a vitriolic letter to Judge Emory Speer last July will not deter Colonel W. A. Huff, ex-Mayor, from presenting a demand to Congress for the impeachment of the judge.

The charges, which, he contends, justify an investigation by Congress, will be made public in a pamphlet to be issued as soon as the printers can prepare it.

19 LIQUOR INDICTMENTS RETURNED BY BIBB JURY

MACON, GA., May 3.—Nineteen Macon locker club and saloon proprietors have been indicted by the Grand Jury, which is conducting an exhaustive probe into local prohibition conditions. Following the issuance of warrants, Sheriff Hicks raided all of the places, and in several seized large quantities of liquor. The Grand Jury in two weeks has examined 280 witnesses.

5,000 IN GREAT SUNDAY SCHOOL RALLY SERVICE

Baptist and Christian Churches Will Discuss Contest at the Auditorium-Armory.

More than 5,000 scholars representing the First Christian and the Second Baptist Sunday schools will assemble in front of the Georgia State capitol to-morrow morning and march to the auditorium, where rivals in one of the most exciting contests ever held in Atlanta will gather in joint service. The campaign for members, begun three months ago on a challenge from the Second Baptist Sunday school, comes to a close Sunday, May 11. To-morrow the contestants will meet to discuss the campaign.

Rev. L. O. Bricker, of the First Christian Church, said to-day: "We have won. It has been a great contest and the results have been magnificent."

Rev. John E. White, pastor of the Second Baptist Church, said: "The battle is not yet lost. We have time."

At the meeting to-morrow the First Christian Sunday school will report, as the result of the contest, an increase in membership in the three months from 330 to an enrollment of 4,000. The Second Baptist will report an increase from an enrollment of 420 to 3,700.

When the two schools assemble on the capitol steps a panorama picture of the gathering will be taken, and as the procession moves across the Washington Street viaduct a moving picture film will be made. It is estimated that more than 5,000 members of the two schools will be present and appear in the pictures. Prior to the gathering at the capitol, each of the schools will meet in their respective places for exercises at 9:30 o'clock. The joint meeting will be at 10:15 o'clock and the services at the auditorium will begin at 11 o'clock, lasting an hour.

Pastors of the two churches will make addresses, drawing lessons from the contest and summarizing its results. Professor Percy J. Starnes will preside at the organ, and Mrs. Starnes will sing Gounod's "Ave Maria." The congregation will read in unison the twenty-third Psalm and reports of the contesting schools for May 4 will be read. A chorus choir, comprising members from both schools, will occupy the platform.

Including the results of last Sunday's work, the standing of the two schools in points scored is: First Christian, 44,357; Second Baptist, 38,536, which gives the Christians a lead of 5,821 points.

Work to Overcome Lead.

"It will be a difficult task to overcome that lead," said Dr. White today. "But the Second Baptist will not quit the fight until the time limit is reached. One class alone in our school started off with a membership of 75 and reached 400 last Sunday. They expect to have 600 next Sunday, and before the contest ends they have set 1,000 for their mark. That is a class for young men, and its growth has been one of the marvels of the contest."

At the beginning of the campaign the Second Baptist school gave the Christian workers a handicap of 140 points each Sunday, aggregating for the entire period about 2,000. It is said that while the 5,000 lead of the Christian school may not be overcome by May 11, that number may be greatly reduced.

At the conclusion of the present contest the Baptist Sunday schools of the city will challenge the Methodists to a similar membership campaign, which, if accepted, will enlist 60 Sunday schools in an effort to increase their enrollments.

More Than an Event.

Dr. White said:

"The contest just closing has proved more than an event; it is a movement. We believe Atlanta can be made the banner Bible school city of the world. And the really greatest part of the movement is that it is bringing the children back into the church service. There has been an alarming decrease in the churches everywhere in attendance on the part of children at church. In my church the Sunday school and the church are practically one and the same thing.

"The contest has stimulated other Sunday schools of the city and it is estimated that the attendance has in three months increased from about 10,000 to 18,000. All the churches have felt the effects of the rivalry that has spurred us on to enlarge our Sunday schools, and the results will continue to be felt. And, think of it, if the contest can be arranged with the Methodist schools there will be 60 organizations of men and women and boys and girls enlisted in a campaign to make this the greatest of Bible study cities."

Churches Drawn Together.

"The Baptist and Christian churches have been drawn very closely together in this contest. The best of Christian spirit has been displayed and the results have been far greater than we expected."

Dr. L. O. Bricker said:

"When we entered the contest with the Baptist school we had no idea what it meant. The plan has grown greater and greater and the results have far exceeded our expectations. What was intended for a plan to benefit the two churches has spread to every church in Atlanta, I believe. More young people have been enrolled in the Sunday schools than we had ever dreamed would be possible. Of course we expect to win the contest, but the Baptists have been a most worthy rival."

Big Shetland Pony Contest On! Early Start Will Help You Win Nomination Counts 1,000 Votes

Miss Mabel Imslee, one of the attractive young women in the stock company at the Atlanta Theater.

Third Coupon of Series Good for Theater Seats Appears To-day—Clip It.

Well, the pony contest is on!

Of course, you saw the second coupon, good for five votes in The Georgian yesterday. Another appears to-day, and there will be a coupon worth five votes every day in The Georgian until the contest closes, while in every issue of The Sunday American there will be a coupon worth fifteen votes.

Begin at once to save them.

Get your friends to save them for you.

And remember they must be voted within fifteen days; otherwise, they are valueless.

But while coupons from the daily and Sunday issues are worth saving, and will help you to win one of the Shetland ponies, with harness and cart all complete, the votes for new subscriptions are really what will decide the winners.

A subscription to The Sunday American only for one month gives the contestant 100 votes, while a subscription to the daily and Sunday for one year gives 3,500 votes. Subscriptions for intermediate periods are carefully graded in value.

Contest Rules Simple.

Remember that advance subscriptions from old subscribers count the same as new subscriptions, and payment of arrearages also counts in the same proportion.

The Georgian and American are giving away twelve ponies to successful boys and girls in a subscription contest in which the rules are simplicity itself. Eight go to children in Atlanta, one to a carrier or newsboy in Atlanta, two in Georgia and one outside the State.

Every pony is guaranteed to be a sound, healthy, serviceable pet, broken to drive, gentle, kind and safe for a child to drive.

An early start in the race for the beautiful little Shetlands is a great advantage, and nominations are coming in rapidly from the boys and girls of Atlanta who realize this fact.

Do not delay longer if you contemplate entering, as every boy and girl of spirit does. The nomination itself counts for 1,000 votes.

Save Theater Coupons.

Miss Billy Long is a Georgia girl—that is, she claims the State for her home, although born in Texas. She was educated in Athens, and spent much of her girlhood days in the State.

As a Georgia girl who has "made good" on the stage, Atlantans naturally are interested in seeing her. This is one of the reasons The Georgian and American free seat presentation is proving so popular.

But it is not merely local pride which is causing crowds to go to the Atlanta Theater to see the stock company playing there.

It is because it is a good company playing there, and in productions that were sensations in New York.

Free Concerts To Be Resumed To-morrow

Festival Association Program at Armory Includes Intermezzo From 'Manon Lescaut.'

The free Sunday afternoon concerts at the Auditorium-Armory will be resumed to-morrow, with one of the most attractive programs Dr. Starnes and the Atlanta Music Festival Association have ever presented.

The program includes the intermezzo from Puccini's "Manon Lescaut," which many operagoers consider the musical gem of that performance.

Wagner's overture to "Die Meistersinger" and an improvisation on German folk-songs also will be included.

The concerts begin promptly at 3:30 o'clock. From this time on the concerts will take place as regularly as possible through the spring and summer.

The Atlanta Music Festival Chorus will meet for rehearsal at Cable Hall 84 North Broad Street, Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

Vicious Dog Attacks Child in "Tag" Game

Little Alga Peters, of 216 South Pryor Street, Is Severely Bitten Before Rescued.

Alga Peters, ten years old, is in a serious condition at her home, 218 South Pryor Street, as a result of a strenuous game of "tag" which she and other children of the neighborhood played.

A bulldog belonging to G. G. Waters, 98 Waters Avenue, became excited when it saw the children running about the street, and leaped upon the Peters girl. She was severely bitten about the head and arms before rescued.

The Peters family notified the police, and an officer was sent to kill the dog. Waters, however, refused to allow the animal to be shot.

F. and A. M. Lodge Will Hold Reception

First Annual Affair Will Take Place at College Park on May 9.

Announcements were issued to-day for the first annual reception of College Park Lodge No. 454, F. and A. M., to be held in the bank building at College Park at 8 o'clock, May 9.

The reception will be of a social nature. The speakers will be the Rev. Fritz Rauschenberg, chaplain of the lodge, and T. H. Jeffries. John F. Bradley will be master of the ceremonies. Others on the program are Miss Verna Ruth Harris and Miss Agnes Coleman, with recitations and readings. Music will be furnished by Slatten's orchestra.

More than 200 guests are expected and supper will be served.

MAYOR-COUNCIL ROW FIRED BY WHITEWASHING

Report Monday Will Clear Men Accused of Grafting by Alderman McClelland.

Exoneration of all city officials involved in the graft charges, assured to-day by members of the investigating committee, has developed an acute stage in the relations of Mayor Woodward and the Council.

Referring to reports that the fire probe committee would clear Fire Chief W. B. Cummings of the accusations of corruption, Mayor Woodward said he would not be surprised at anything that committee would do. Already members of the Councilmanic Graft Probe Committee have been much nettled by the declaration of the Mayor that the committee "had to exonerate the three Aldermen to protect Council."

The committee probing the councilmanic graft charges will meet this afternoon to frame its report to Council. As it was given general authority to investigate all graft and corruption, it is expected it will frame a general reply to numerous charges made by Mayor Woodward and his right-hand man in Council, Alderman John E. McClelland.

Probers Silent as to Report.

Because of this delicate situation the members of the fire probe committee, who completed their investigation yesterday, decline to make any formal statement as to their formal report until the meeting of Council Monday. But it is learned on good authority that Chief Cummings will be given a clean bill as far as graft is converned. The committee will recommend a better system of purchasing supplies for the department and criticise its heads for not following the requisition system.

The committee heard new evidence yesterday afternoon, but when it went into executive session a formal report written some days ago by a subcommittee was agreed upon.

Committee Meets Monday.

A meeting of the committee will be held Monday for the signing of this report.

Mayor Woodward took the stand first and told the committee that Thomas Reynolds, the mysterious man who promised important new evidence, had failed to show up as he had promised.

The committee decided to close the investigation without waiting for him, but George Napier, attorney for Chief Cummings, was allowed to make a brief reply to the interviews that Reynolds has given out.

Calls Reynolds a Crook.

"Reynolds is a crook," interrupted Chief Cummings.

Mr. Napier said that Reynolds had been fired from the fire department of Clarksburg, W. Va., for drunkenness, and that he was the agent for a fire hose company.

Mayor Woodward called R. E. Davidson, the fire engine agent who declared he gave Chief Cummings a present of $400, to the stand. Davidson presented a cancelled check on the Fourth National Bank for $400, cashed by himself on April 25, 1911, which he said showed how he secured the money to present to Chief Cummings. He also showed the stub of this check in his check book and said that of the several hundred stubs it was the only one for as large an amount as $400.

Woodward Criticises Department.

Mayor Woodward presented a report by his secretary, Frank Hammond, that there was no adequate system of records in the fire department; that no efforts were ever made to make hose companies live up to their guarantees, and that no competitive bids were ever asked in the purchase of new hose or the sale of old hose.

Chief Cummings produced a mass of records, which, he said, refuted the Mayor's evidence.

Bryan Can Win in 1916, Says Martine

Jersey Senator Thinks Nothing Can Beat Him, Assuming Wilson Dosen't Run.

ST. LOUIS, May 3.—If William J. Bryan is a candidate for the Presidency in 1916 nothing can prevent his election, according to Senator James E. Martine of New Jersey, who was here to attend the dedication of the Jefferson memorial. Mr. Martine said the one-term plank in the Democratic platform would prevent President Wilson's renomination.

"Bryan will be the logical candidate," he said. "People have come to know and to understand him better. People think that he has become more stable in his views, struck an equilibrium, as it were. The fact is, that Mr. Bryan is just as radical today as he was twenty years ago, but the people have grown up to him."

Carnegie Interested In Feats of Fakirs

Steel Prestidigitator Wants to Know How Foreign Wizards Wiz.

BERLIN, May 3.—To inquire into the mysteries of levitation is the aim of a young savant named Schwidtal of Posen.

Andrew Carnegie has financed a small party of investigators who will go to Egypt immediately under Schwidtal to study the secrets of the fakirs and dervishes, and especially from a scientific viewpoint the ecstatic state in which the fakirs are observed to accomplish wonderful feats. The ecstasy is produced by constant repetition of mystic words. At first they pronounce only the name "Allah" combined with rhythmic movements called "sikrs." This has never before been thoroughly investigated.

Airships Made Safer by Aid of Gyroscope

Elmer Sperry Tells Engineers of a Stabilizer Perfected by Naval Aviators.

NEW YORK, May 3.—By means of a specially constructed gyroscope aviation accidents have been reduced to a minimum, through the control being taken out of the hands of the aviator at critical moments in the flight.

This was the substance of an address delivered before the New York Electrical Society by Elmer A. Sperry, inventor of the gyroscopic stabilizer for ships.

The apparatus has practically been developed within the last few months, and has been perfected during experiments made in connection with Navy Department at San Diego, California.

Forces Prize Beauty To Return Diamond

Traveling Man Accused Show Girl of Keeping Gem He Had Loaned to Her.

ST. LOUIS, May 3.—Having returned the $500 diamond ring, claimed by W. A. Purnell, traveling salesman for a Fifth Avenue, New York, concern, Mrs. Laura Hill, of New York, is no longer in the custody of the police.

Mrs. Hill was winner in the $1,000 prize beauty contest of the Shuberts in New York last year. She later became a show girl, and is now with the Gertrude Hoffman Company, playing here. Purnell followed her from New York, caused her arrest, charging that she had kept the ring, although he had only lent it to her.

Mrs. Hill declares he gave her the ring, but after a talk at police headquarters she returned it.

Another bright week-end event was the tea given at the Piedmont Driving Club this afternoon by Miss Helen Jonet, Miss Margaret Northen's guest. Miss Helen Barnes, of Macon, was the honor guest, and thirty young women were entertained.

Miss Hinman Hostess.

Miss Ruth Hinman gave an informal party this afternoon at her home on Piedmont Avenue for her guest, Miss Marjorie Thomas, of Eatonton. The first prize for guessing contest was a jabot of crocheted lace; the second, an Armenian lace handkerchief, and to the honor guest was presented a string of Venetian beads.

The lower floor and the porch were decorated for the occasion in ferns, honeysuckle and ivy. On the tea table was a tall crystal vase of Japanese iris surrounded by ivy leaves.

Miss Hinman was assisted in receiving by her mother, Mrs. George Hinman, Miss Willie Williams and Miss Dorris Lester.

Her guests included the Misses Helen Jones, Frances Downman, Willie Williams, Lena Hansell, Mary Louise Helmking, Hattie Thomas, Maude Cobb, Dorris Lester, Sara Eubanks, Mary DeSaussure, Katherine Darby, Gladys Sands, Marguerite Henderson, Louise Henderson, Harriet Haynes, Marcella Hallman, Martha Whitner, Caroline Nicholson, Emma Cliffe Kiser, Evelyn Stephens, Nellie Joe Johnson, Elliot Johnson, Elizabeth Tise, Cornelia Pickett, Caroline Black, Lillian Carter, Josephine Smith and Carolyn Blount.

Misses Dorothy Hinman and Eula Dunwoody served punch.

Potter-Alexander.

A quiet home wedding was that of Miss Nancy Eula Potter to Mr. Allen McFarland Alexander which took place Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, Dr. S. R. Belk, of the Park Street Methodist Church, officiating. The marriage was at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. G. A. Potter, on Lee Street. The couple left immediately after the ceremony for a trip East. On their return they will be at home on North Boulevard.

Miss Smith's Box Party.

Miss Hildreth Burton-Smith gave a box party at the Lyric this afternoon, complimenting Mrs. Hugh Lokey's guest, Miss Elizabeth Winn, of Richmond, Va., the other guests being Misses Nancy Prince and Martina Burke of Macon.

Drama League to Meet.

A meeting of the Drama League will be held in the parish house of All Saints Church on Wednesday, May 7, at 4 o'clock.

Dinner To-night.

Mr. and Mrs. G. K. Selden will entertain at dinner to-night for their guests, Miss Marion Roberts and Miss Anne Selden. The party will include Miss Roberts, Miss Selden, Miss Frances Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Nealy, Mr. Gabriel Soloman, Mr. Beverly DuBose and Dr. Robert McCord.

"Donation Day" Planned.

The first Tuesday in each month has been selected as "Donation Day" for the Home for Old Women, 61 West End Avenue. Callers with donations will be received by a committee of ladies of the board. Provisions, clothing, linen, books or money will be gratefully received.

Mrs. F. M. Farley, Mrs. H. D. Lipford and Miss Arlan Purtell will be the committee for May 6, the first "Donation Day." They extend a cordial invitation to their friends and to all residents and strangers in the city. From 3 to 6 o'clock music will be rendered and light refreshments served.

Mrs. Pattillo Entertains.

Mrs. John Ray Pattillo entertained informally at tea yesterday afternoon at the Georgian Terrace for her guests, Miss Carrie Belle Schussler, of Roanoke, Ala., and Miss Mittie Holt, of Chattanooga.

For Mrs. Gibson.

Mrs. John Spalding entertained ten friends at tea at the Georgian Terrace this afternoon for Mrs. Gibson, the guest of Mrs. Porter Langston.

For Miss Ruth Wilson.

Mrs. J. Frank Meador will entertain informally at bridge Tuesday afternoon for Miss Helen Dargan's guest, Miss Ruth Wilson, of New York.

Orphans' Aid Society to Meet.

The Orphans' Aid Society will meet in the vestry of the Pryor Street Synagogue Monday at 4 o'clock.

Informal Bridge Party.

Mrs. Alfredo Barili, Jr., was hostess at an informal bridge party to-day for Miss Marian Fielder's guest, Miss Cornie Fore, of Charlotte, N. C. The guests included the members of her bridge club and the Misses Marian Fielder, Elizabeth Parker, Evelyn Ragland, Margaret Middleton, Margaret Beck, Mrs. Robin Adair, Mrs. Henry Troutman, Mrs. William Akers, Mrs. Hal Miller, Mrs. John B. Akers, Miss Grace Thorn and Miss Lillian Beatty of Columbus, Ohio.

MISSES Ethel Thornton, top, and Verna Ruth Harris, two of the three talented Atlanta young women who will give a recital to-night at Cable Hall for the benefit of the supper fund of the Night School for Working Girls.

SUCCESS ASSURED BENEFIT RECITAL

Proceeds of Entertainment To-night to Aid Girls' Night School Supper Fund.

Atlanta's interest in the Girls' Night School has already insured success for the recital to-night at Cable Hall by Miss Ethel Thornton, Miss Verna Ruth Harris and Miss Agnes Coleman for the benefit of the school's supper fund.

More than 150 working girls of Atlanta, otherwise denied advantages of education, are enrolled in the school, and the heavy attendance well-nigh has exhausted the supper fund. The recital was found necessary, officials of the school say, that they might be able to pay the bills of the school for the final month of the session.

The recital this evening will be one of readings and elocution. Selections humorous, dramatic and in dialect will be given by the three young women, all of whom have attained local fame in their work.

The Girls' Night School is on the second floor of the building at Peachtree Street and Viaduct Place. Its enrollment numbers 155 girls, who go for instruction each evening at 6:30 o'clock, immediately upon quitting work. It is that they may reach the school at once that the supper is spread for them.

Much of the expense of the supper is paid by the school management out of the supper fund.

Ordinance Starts Exodus of Palmists

Soothsayers Fold Tents and Leave Atlanta, Following Fight Made by Councilman.

Had Atlanta palmists, seers, clairvoyants and readers of the future read their own palms and told their own fortunes during the past three weeks they might have been happier than they are to-day. They are on their way to-day to other parts in droves.

"A tall dark man," who has proven that fortune-tellers do not control the future at their own sweet will, is Councilman Claude Ashley. His ordinance prohibiting the practice of palmistry and kindred occult arts in Atlanta has been unanimously recommended for adoption, and the colony of seers that has made Atlanta its home for years must fold its tents and silently steal away to more fertile fields.

It is practically certain that Council will approve the measure Monday.

RESINOL RELIEVED ITCHING AT ONCE

And Cured Skin Humor in a Month.

Brooklyn, Nov. 1, 1912.—"At first little red spots were seen on my arms and body, which I noticed were getting larger every day. They itched me so much that I scratched myself until I bled. There were times when I stood up all night and scratched. I was troubled about three weeks, during which time I used ——, which seemed to do me no good whatever. Then, finally, I thought of trying Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. As soon as I applied Resinol Ointment I felt much relief. After using it a few times, I noticed the sore spots slowly fading away, and in about a month I was cured completely." (Signed) Adolph Schoen, 742 Shipherd Avenue.

The soothing, healing balsams in Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap, penetrate every tiny pore of the skin, clearing it of all impurities, driving away eczema, rashes, ringworm, psoriasis, and other eruptions, and making pimples and blackheads impossible. Prescribed by physicians for eighteen years. For free samples write to Dept. 16-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md. Practically every druggist sells Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap.

FREE TO YOU---MY SISTER

Free to You and Every Sister Suffering from Woman's Ailments.

I am a woman.
I know woman's sufferings.
I have found the cure.

I will mail, free of any charge, my home treatment with full instructions to any sufferer from woman's ailments. I want to tell all women about this cure—you, my reader, for yourself, your daughter, your mother, or your sister. I want to tell you how to cure yourselves at home without the help of a doctor. Men can not understand women's sufferings. What we women know from experience, we know better than any doctor. I know that my home treatment is safe and sure cure for Leucorrhœa or Whitish discharges, Ulceration, Displacement or Falling of the Womb, Profuse, Scanty or Painful Periods, Uterine or Ovarian Tumors, or Growths; also pains in head, back and bowels, bearing down feelings, nervousness, creeping feeling up the spine, melancholy, desire to cry, hot flashes, weariness, kidney and bladder troubles where caused by weaknesses peculiar to our sex.

I want to send you a complete ten days' treatment entirely free to prove to you that you can cure yourself at home, easily, quickly and surely. Remember, that it will cost you nothing to give the treatment a complete trial, and if you wish to continue, it will cost only about 12 cents a week or less than two cents a day. It will not interfere with your work or occupation. Just send me your name and address, tell me how you suffer if you wish, and I will send you the treatment for your case, entirely free, in plain wrapper, by return mail. I will also send you free of cost, my book—"WOMAN'S OWN MEDICAL ADVISER" with explanatory illustrations showing why women suffer, and how they can easily cure themselves at home. Every woman should have it and learn to think for herself. Then when the doctor says—"You must have an operation," you can decide for yourself. Thousands of women have cured themselves with my home remedy. It cures all, old or young. To Mothers of Daughters, I will explain a simple home treatment which speedily and effectually cures Leucorrhœa, Green Sickness and Painful or Irregular Menstruation in young Ladies. Plumpness and health always result from its use.

Wherever you live, I can refer you to ladies of your own locality who know and will gladly tell any sufferer that this Home Treatment really cures all women's diseases, and makes women well, strong, plump and robust. Just send me your address, and the free ten days' treatment is yours, also the book. Write to-day, as you may not see this offer again. Address

HEALTH BOARD WILL URGE DOG MUZZLING LAW

Three Hundred Cases of Rabies Treated Already This Year Presented as Argument.

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

The State Board of Health will urge upon the incoming Legislature, as directly as it may, the great desirability of a dog-muzzling law in Georgia.

The board is realizing that it is somewhat difficult to enact any sort of legislation having to do with dogs in this State, and to make that legislation effective after it has been enacted. Still, when the people are made to understand, if they can be made to understand, that an enforced dog-muzzling law would in three years rid Georgia of all danger of rabies, and that already this year the department has treated at the capitol well over three hundred cases of this dreadful disease, the board believes the Legislature may be brought to see the very great desirability, if not absolute necessity, of such a law.

A dog-muzzling law will be offered in the Legislature, and it will be vigorously backed, not only by health boards and doctors throughout the State, but by several influential members. The State Board of Health feels that the mere muzzling of dogs, entailing some possible discomfort upon them, as it may, still is infinitely preferable to an ever-increasing list of patients to be treated for rabies.

Dog tax laws always have been unpopular in Georgia, and those that have been passed never have been enforced. The dogs seems to have plenty of friends in Georgia—even the "yaller" curs and "flop-eared" hounds of the more rural persuasion.

If the State Board of Health can succeed in showing conciusively however, that the dogs are getting to be, year by year, a more and more deadly peril to the people, and particularly to children—for they compose by far the greater portion of the patients treated—the chances are that some effective legislation may be obtained during the forthcoming summer session.

And, anyway, the board has every intention of putting the matter up to the General Assembly, fairly and squarely.

A member-elect of the incoming Legislature has prepared two companion bills for the General Assembly's early consideration, both of which are of far-reaching consequence and assured of strong support.

One bill will provide for a central point of execution for crime in capital cases—probably at Milledgeville—and the other will provide for the substitution of the electric chair for the gallows.

Both bills are thought to have excellent chances of passing the next Legislature.

Elaborate arrangements are under way, looking to the sumptuous entertainment of Josephus Daniels, of North Carolina, Secretary of the Navy, when he visits Savannah on or about May 10.

It is planned to give him a banquet at the De Soto Hotel, to which a hundred or more prominent South Georgians will be invited. The Secretary will be asked to deliver an address at this dinner, and to discuss particularly the navy and its possible relation to Savannah, and the coast cities of Georgia.

The Macon Telegraph should worry and get a wrinkle, for this is the latest obsession it is entertaining: "There is a duty of 45 cents a gallon on grape juice under the Payne-Aldrich law and it is retained in the Underwood bill, but if it is to become a fashionable drink, it will have to go on the free list as a necessary of life."

The Monticello News thinks the next Legislature can increase the State's available funds for appropriations to its various institutions by abolishing a few jobs around and about.

The News will be called down for treason or something of the sort, first thing it knows. Talk of abolishing jobs during Democratic times will be rated highly incendiary in certain quarters.

Colonel Lindsay Johnson, of Rome, forsook the Shanghai trail long enough this week to run over from Washington to New York, and have a look in on Gay Manhattan.

While Colonel Johnson was enjoying the Great White Way in one end of the nation, Colonel William Jennings Bryan was stacking up against California in the other. Never since the iniquitous "crime of '73" have these two Colonels been so far apa...

Colonel Johnson's nomination to be United States Consul to Shanghai is looked for within the next week or ten days.

The Railroad Commission will ask the Legislature for authority to order the erection of union passenger stations in cities and towns in Georgia, where, in the opinion of the commission, the conditions make such stations desirable and necessary to the accommodation of the traveling public.

The commission now has authority to order the erection of separate stations, but it has no authority whatever in the matter of compelling union stations.

The Lavonia Times refers to him as "Commissioner of Agriculture O'Conner."

If the Commissioner now is able to establish the fact that he was born on the 17th of St. Patrick's Day, he would seem to have the Irish vote cinched, all right.

Those esteemed contemporaries around and about Georgia that think Atlanta's recent spasm of grand opera more or less amusing, should drop in next July and August and see the Jawjaw Legislature in session.

That's an annual show for you, life!

SHOP TALK

JOSEPH W. AWTRY.

Mr. Awtry is leaving the Carleton Shoe Company, after ten years in the shoe business, to become secretary and treasurer of the Barclay & Brandon Co., which recently moved its establishment to Ivy and Baker Streets.

The Barclay & Brandon Co. has been established for 25 years, and Mr. Awtry virtually takes the place left vacant by the death of Mr. Barclay. He will be actively identified with all the firm's details.

Mr. Awtry can claim a host of friends who are pleased to learn of his new connection.

500 Newsboys Will Be Guests at Feast

S. V. D. Fraternity and Woman's Aid Society of Y. M. C. A. Plan Big Entertainment May 13.

Five hundred newsboys and other boys will be the guests of the S. V. D. Fraternity and the Women's Aid Society of the Y. M. C. A. at a feast May 13.

Members of the fraternity to-day were active in the work of preparation. They selected ten business men for the honorable task of paying $3 each toward the expenses of the feast. The ten men, known to be ardent workers in child welfare and charitable enterprises, were chosen without being notified. They will be visited shortly by a delegation from the fraternity requesting the subscription.

Cards will be issued to about 500 newsboys, but arrangements for the entertainment of 600 persons will be made.

H. Cobb Caldwell Out Of Hospital Monday

Peachtree Road Resident Not Seriously Injured When Run Down by William McKenzie.

H. Cobb Caldwell, of the Peachtree Road, who sustained a broken collarbone and a sprained ankle when he was run down by William McKenzie's automobile Thursday night, probably will be able to leave Wesley Memorial Hospital Monday or Tuesday. Mr. Caldwell's family said this morning he was rapidly recovering, and that no serious results were anticipated.

The accident was at Eleventh Street and the Peachtree Road. As Mr. Caldwell crossed the road to enter his home he failed to see the automobile coming. Mr. McKenzie did not see Mr. Caldwell until it was too late to stop the car.

20,000 JOIN EGG SEARCH AT PARK

Children of Atlanta Contest for Prizes This Afternoon in Annual "Easter" Hunt.

When a man with a trombline slide the first notes of "Dixie" out of his horn at 3 o'clock this afternoon 20,000 Atlanta children spread over Grant Park like bees over a flower searching for 200,000 candy eggs in the weeds and grass. For to-day was the day of the annual Easter egg hunt of the Atlanta Park Board, an event children have been looking forward to for months.

All morning 15 or 20 men have worked, scattering the vast number of eggs, and as the children line up on the boundary lines and impatiently await the signal, Grant Park looked like an old-fashioned "crazy quilt." Red egg lay side by side with blue egg, and yellow egg nestle against white in a riotuous maze of color. No attempt was made to hide the 200,000 eggs the children tried to find. They were simply sown over the ground from large baskets, and even that work kept the 20 men busy all day.

The 41 prize eggs, however, were really hidden. Forty of these prize eggs are made of wood and bear numbers. When presented at the pavilion the child lucky finder was given a prize bearing a corresponding number.

The grand prize was a "golden egg." This egg is made of brass, and inside of it was an order for a five dollar gold piece.

To prevent a repetition of accidents that marred the hunt last year, all vehicles were excluded from the park from 12 o'clock until the egg hunt was over.

The committee in charge of the egg hunt comprises W. C. Puckett, T. L. Bond, R. A. Burnett, C. I. Branan and Roger Winter.

Report on Sociology Congress in Church

Members of Central Congregational To-morrow Will Give Short Talks on Impressons.

Echoes from the Southern Sociological Congress, whose meetings in Atlanta ended last week, will be heard at the Central Congregational Church to-morrow evening, when several members of the congregation will give five-minute talks on impressions and the instruction they received. The talks will be in the nature of reports by those who attended to those who could not be present. The speakers will be: On child welfare, Mrs. H. B. Wey and Mrs. J. W. Mason; negro problem, W. D. Smith and E. H. Webster; organized charities, Mrs. Laura White; church and social service, J. Wallace Hoyt and A. W. Farlinger.

At the regular morning service Dr. Hanscom will deliver a sermon on the subject, "Sin Causes Present and Eternal Loss." A special musical program for the day has been arranged by Miss Ethel Beyer.

GEORGIA TO TAKE PART IN TRIANGULAR DEBATE

ATHENS, GA., May 3.—The University of Georgia will have two debating teams in the field to-night, one in Athens against a Washington and Lee team and one in New Orleans against Tulane.

H. L. Rogers, of Reidsville, and Ira Funkenstein, of Athens, will speak here. W. A. Mann, of Milner, and Calvin George, of Madison, are in New Orleans. They will debate the question that labor unions subserve the best interests of the country.

ROUND-ABOUT-TOWN STORIES

The Question That Always Made Him Boil.

After standing by for fifteen minutes listening to the stream of questions put to a policeman at a busy corner the woman said:

"Don't you get awfully tired of answering all these fool questions that are put to you hour after hour?"

"Well, rather," said he. "Still I've got so used to it that there is only one of the lot that makes me actually boil."

"Which one is that?" she inquired.

"Don't I get awfully tired of answering all the fool questions that other folks ask."

"Oh," said the woman, and hurried on.

Cats For Rent Is the Latest.

A well-known Atlantan just back from a trip to New York tells this one:

In the window of an animal and bird store not far from Broadway and Eightieth Street hangs a sign that says:

"Nancy, our Angora cat that catches mice and rats, can be rented by the day or week."

How Motion Signs Are Now Designed.

"The electric sign is only in its infancy," said a well-known electrician yesterday. "I was in New York last week and made it a point to see all the big electrical signs that I could. I met the junior member of an electrical sign construction company and while we were walking up Broadway after the theater he called my attention to one of the blazing displays in which a horse appears on a gallop.

"'Has it ever occurred to you,' said he, 'how detailed must be the work of the sign builder to represent the movements of living beings in bulbs, and make them artistically realistic? We have to go far afield sometimes to obtain the lifelike effect. That horse, for example, plants his hoofs just as in real life—otherwise that sign would be an animated cartoon. Now, to get the individual or disjointed movements of the legs in their order of sequence the builder minded that the eye of the camera is keener than man's, procured the motion picture film of a galloping horse and, examining each snapshot, drew his plans in duplicate. Flashing his bulbs on and off with the same speed employed by a movie operator, the designer has produced the effect of smooth and continuous motion.'"

FITTERY FACES BRADY IN GAME AT SLAGTOWN

By Joe Agler.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., May 3.—It listens like the big noise here this afternoon to me. Manager Molesworth will dig up Fittery to work against us—and from what we all hear he is some worker.

Bill Smith is going after the game with King Brady.

He thinks the King is going to be dead right to-day and so do I. If so, I'm not looking for a lot of hits, but we ought to squeeze out a victory.

The Crackers are in absolutely perfect condition and are strong for the game to-day.

Crackers Go to Mobile Next.

To-night we move on to Mobile for a game with the Gulls Sunday. We are going down there to take three out of four from Mike Finn, and we shall never be satisfied unless we do it.

We can't see the Gulls looming so big and don't anticipate a very hard time with them.

We have certainly made Christians out of the scribes in this city. They are all convinced that Billy has got a good club, and that we will finish one-two-three.

Bausewein Goes Good.

We took another hard fought battle from the Barons yesterday, 2 to 1. Bausewein twirled a fine game, and was master of the Barons all the way. They could hit him a bit but never in the pinches. He got in trouble only once—in the eighth. In that inning he pulled out before anything serious had happened.

Bausewein's curve was breaking fine yesterday and his control was great.

The Cracker fielding these days is all to the merry, and yesterday we made a lot of fast plays on hard hit balls.

Pat Graham made a splendid catch in the eighth that saved two scores. Pat is improving every day in the outfield.

M'GOORTY AND CLABBY FIGHT 10-ROUND DRAW

DENVER, COLO., May 3.—Eddie McGoorty and Jimmy Clabby went ten fast rounds to a draw here last night. It was the first fight staged in the State since the Legislature legalized boxing.

Both boys put up a great exhibition of cleverness. McGoorty had a slight shade in the first couple of rounds, but Jimmy evened matters up in the third and fourth. The next couple of rounds were rather tame. The boys, however, warmed up to matters later in the going and had several warm mix-ups with honors even.

PELICANS SELL COTTON KNAUPP TO BILLIKENS

MOBILE, ALA., May 3.—Manager Jeanny Dobbs of the Montgomery club has purchased Shortstop Cotton Knaupp from New Orleans, and he will report here to-day. Kutina will play first after the Mobile series. Tarleton becoming utility man.

DANNY MAHER WINS AGAIN.

NEW MARKET, ENGLAND, May 3.—The 1,000-guinea stake was won here to-day by J. B. Joel's 3-year-old filly, Jest, ridden by Danny Maher. Taslett was second, and Prue third. Twenty-two ran. All the starters carried 126 pounds. The distance was one mile.

FINE REMEDY FOR ECZEMA

Also for Salt Rheum, Tetter, Psoriasis, Lupus, and All Skin Afflictions.

Even a Microscope Won't Find a Blemish After S. S. S. Gets Through.

All skin troubles should be attacked from within by giving the blood circulation a good daily bath. This is accomplished with S. S. S., the best known and most highly recommended blood purifier ever discovered. Its action is very rapid. Its vegetable nature is such that it naturally goes right into the blood, saturates the entire circulation, bathes the tissues with an influence that enables the skin to heal quickly. The action of S. S. S. is that of an antidote, and this fact has been demonstrated time and time again in the most severe forms of creeping eczema.

Its influence in the tissues where the tiny arteries transfer the red blood for the worn out blood to the veins is quite remarkable and goes on constantly with every tick of the clock—the beat of the heart.

And new skin is thus caused to form, while the germs of irritating influences that cause eczema are scattered and their harmful nature entirely suspended.

S. S. S. has a wonderful tonic influence in the blood because it contains no "dope," is not a "physic," is entirely free of any mineral drugs or any other drugs except the remarkable medicinal effect of the pure vegetable products of which it is made.

Few people realize how harmful are many of the strong, crude ointments that used to be in favor before they learned that S. S. S. is safe, speedy and sure. Ask at any drug store for a bottle of S. S. S. Give it a good trial and you will soon see a decided improvement in any form of skin trouble. Write to The Swift Specific Co., 137 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for special free advice on eczema and any other form of skin or blood trouble.

Crackers Not Stealing Very Well

By Percy H. Whiting.

IF the Cracker base stealers were as good as the Cracker catchers the Atlanta team would have the whole league on the run.

In 19 games this season the Cracker catchers have allowed only 18 men to steal bases, or slightly less than one stolen base to the game.

How much better than the average the work of Joe Dunn and Pat Graham is, can be judged from the fact that in all of last season in the Southern League, 1,532 bases were stolen, or an average of 1.37 bases for each team in each game.

* * *

THE best defensive catching in the league is being done by the Birmingham catchers. In 17 games Diller and Mayer allowed but 13 stolen bases. Atlanta ranked second while Gabby Street, virtually single handed, held the Lookouts up in third place. The New Orleans catchers have made the most horrible showing—allowing almost two stolen bases for the opposition in each game.

The number of stolen bases allowed on an average in each game by the Southern League catchers thus far this season is here shown:

Clubs.	Games.	S. B.	S. B. Game
Birmingham	17	13	.76
Atlanta	19	18	.95
Chattanooga	18	20	1.11
Nashville	18	20	1.11
Memphis	20	23	1.15
Mobile	21	28	1.33
Montgomery	20	31	1.55

* * *

DILGER of Birmingham, the greatest defensive catcher in the league last season, is up to his old tricks again and has allowed an average of but .71 stolen bases to the game—against an average for all teams last season, you will recall of more than 1 1-3 a game. Graham of Atlanta, and Mayer, of Birmingham, are tied for second honors in preventing base stealing. Joe Dunn is seventh among the regulars, with an average of 1.11 runners who have stolen on his throwing this season.

IT is well to note, of course, that the number of bases stolen by a team does not depend entirely on the throwing strength of a catcher. A proper rating would show how many bases were stolen in relation to the number of opponents who reached first. If the opposing players didn't get any hits, any free passes or arrive at first by being hit; or on the other hand if all the hits were three-baggers or homers, there would not be many bases stolen. In the long run, however, the number of bases stolen gives a fair line on what a catcher can do.

Here is the complete record of the number of bases stolen off catchers in the Southern League this season, up to yesterday:

Catchers. Clubs.	Games	S. B.	S. B. Per G.
Diller, Birmingham	7	5	.71
Graham, Atlanta	10	8	.80
Mayer, Birmingham	10	8	.80
Street, Chattanooga	17	15	.88
Seabough, Memphis	1	1	1.00
Noyes, Nashville	14	15	1.07
Haigh, Memphis	11	12	1.09
Dunn, Atlanta	9	10	1.11
Ludwig, Nashville	4	5	1.25
Snell, Memphis	8	10	1.25
Brown, Mobile	10	13	1.30
Schmidt, Mobile	11	15	1.36
Donahue, Montgomery	14	19	1.43
Yantz, New Orleans	13	24	1.85
Angermeier, N. O.	15	20	2.00
Gribbens, Montgomery	6	12	2.00
Hannoh, Chattanooga	1	5	5.00

* * *

THE Crackers, unfortunately, can not steal bases as well as they can prevent their being stolen. However thus far the locals have stuck right around the average, with 1.37 steals to the game. Mobile leads in stealing, Memphis is second and poor old Chattanooga is last, with an average of a stolen base every two games. Here is the table that shows the number of bases stolen per game by the teams of the league:

Teams.	S. B.	Av. Per G.
Mobile	45	2.14
Memphis	30	1.43
New Orleans	32	1.39
Atlanta	26	1.37
Montgomery	24	1.20
Birmingham	21	1.16
Nashville	18	1.00
Chattanooga	11	.58

PREP LEAGUE NOTES

Bill Starr is the tennis champion of Boys High School. In the tournament just finished at East Lake Starr and Harris won the doubles, and Starr also won the singles.

* * *

Harris, who was Starr's running mate in the doubles, was picked to win in the singles, but in the play off between himself and Starr, the latter came off victorious. Three sets were played, and Starr's score was 4—6, 7—7 and 7—5. Jones was the runner-up in the singles.

* * *

Starr has issued a challenge to meet any tennis player in the Prep League. This challenge is not confined to the Atlanta prep schools, however, as Starr is willing to meet any prep school tennis player in the State.

* * *

Gordon and Riverside will clash today in a game that means much in deciding the prep championship of the State. Riverside has yet to meet defeat this year. If Gordon can beat them, they can lay claim to the championship. Slappey, the star southpaw, will do the twirling for Riverside.

* * *

Coach Peebles, of Emory, has picked the track squad which will represent the school in the meet which Mercer at Macon to-day. The big point winner will no doubt be Carlton, the senior, who singled handed won enough points in the inter-class meet last week to give his class the highest total number of points.

* * *

Emory is determined to make a creditable showing in the meet to-day, as it is the first time the school has participated in inter-collegiate athletics in three years. There are thirteen athletes on the squad.

* * *

The Freshman class is still in the lead in the inter-class baseball tournament at Emory College. Yesterday the Freshmen beat the Sophomores by a score of 12 to 3. The Freshmen are three whole games to the good in the standing of the teams.

* * *

Here is the standing of the teams in the class tourrament at Emory:

	Won.	Lost.	P. C.
Freshmen	5	1	.833
Sophomores	3	2	.600
Seniors	2	2	.500
Juniors	0	5	.000

* * *

The G. M. A. cadets were honored yesterday afternoon at their weekly dress parade by the presence of Governor and Mrs. Brown. After the dress parade was finished a military drill was held, including wall scaling feats and target practice.

* * *

Immediately after the drill was over the track men were out in their uniforms, practicing hard for the prep meet which takes place next Friday.

* * *

If the Boys High athletes continue in their determination not to enter the prep meet on May 9, there will be not more than thirty or forty entries in all. The decision of the Boys High team will rob the meet of much of its interest. Lockridge was expected to hang up some new records in the broad jump and hurdles.

* * *

Bill Bedell, of Tech High, is well again and is down to hard work in preparation for the meet May 9. Bedell is Tech High's main hope in this meet, and if he does not win at least two firsts the students will be disappointed.

* * *

At present the real fight for the local prep championship appears to be between Marist and Boys High, with the odds slightly in favor of the latter team, which has not lost a game and has won four. Marist has won three and lost one. The two teams will meet next week, and a fierce battle is expected.

* * *

The defeat of Tech High last Tuesday almost put the high school lads out of the race. The team has won three and lost two games. They will have to win all of the remaining games on the schedule in order to cop the pennant.

* * *

Holtzendorff, of Boys High, looks good in the pole vault in the meet next Friday. He won this event easily in the high school meet April 18 at Tech Flats, and has been practicing steadily ever since. He can now do over 9 feet without any trouble.

SEWANEE WILL TRY AGAIN TO BEAT JACKETS

THE Tech and Sewanee baseball teams will hook up this afternoon at Grant Field in the closing game of their series.

Coach Heisman is a little undecided about his battery men, but will use either Pitts or Eubanks on the slab, probably the former. Gordon probably will work for Sewanee.

The rejuvenated Jackets trounced the Tigers yesterday to the tune of 13 to 0 in a game replete with hits and errors, mostly hits. The Techites had their batting clothes on and rapped Eggleston from the box in the second inning. McGoldwin, who replaced him, fared little better and was relieved by Hammond in the sixth. Hammond pitched better ball and managed to hold the swatting Jackets to one hit for the remainder of the game.

Eubanks pitched stellar ball for Tech for four innings, allowing no hits, but was replaced by Gambill, who was touched up for a total of five, two of them being slow infield hits.

Second Inning Was BIG.

In the second inning, when the Jackets put across their swat fest, Montague was given a free pass to first and was advanced to second when Malone landed safe at first on Hammond's error. Amason beat out an infield hit and was safe with the bases full. Attridge bingled to left, scoring the first two runs of the game. T. Montague was next safe on Hammond's error, which scored Amason and Attridge. Montague managed to reach third on this play and stole home. Wooten placed one in the center garden, taking second on Moore's sacrifice, and was scored by Pitts' single to right. F. Montague filed out to Fanning and the agony was over. Hits did it, coupled with the Jackets' daring and heady base running. A story of the whole game would read much the same. But the contest was won right then and further details would be only adding insult to insult. The fielding of both teams was bright in patches, despite a few misplays, while the batting of Tech was a great improvement over other games this season. Their base running showed up well.

SYLVANIA PRISONER NOT SOUTH CAROLINA SLAYER

AUGUSTA, GA., May 3.—The negro suspect captured at Sylvania yesterday afternoon proved not to be Henry Austin, who killed two and wounded four white men in South Carolina, near the Savannah River. The negro arrested at Sylvania was a Georgia negro, who proved to the satisfaction of his captors that he had not been in South Carolina very recently at least. Austin is still at large.

FATHER TIME FANS ALL WHO STICK AROUND

THE passing from the Southern League of Otto Jordan, for years a landmark and in his prime the greatest fielder the league ever knew, recalls again to mind the old truth that youth and speed, not age and brains, win in baseball.

This year has been a hard one on old timers in Dixie. Harry Matthews tried it down in New Orleans but they couldn't see him. The old noodle was working, the arm wasn't; his head knew the rules but his legs had forgotten how to run.

Tommy Fisher was going to try a come back but he changed his mind. Lew McAllister, one of the world's best in his day, came to Atlanta, tried out and went back again. Teddy Bair and Dock Moskiman refused to report to the Vols rather than exhibit the infirmities due to advancing years; the Lookouts are about ready to part with Bill Chappelle, a fine old timer; Maloney, once a marvellous player, has just passed from the Mobile team.

It's the Same in Big Leagues.

In the major leagues also each passing year chants out the swan song of some battle-scarred veteran. The demands of age cannot be ignored; youth will be served, and every little while taps are being sounded for the retirement of one more diamond hero who has doffed his hat for the last time to the plaudits of thousands.

This year tends one to believe that the death knell of one shortstop at least is dangerously near the sounding point. This time it seems to be that grand player, Rhodie Wallace, of the St. Louis Browns. Then, too, reports from Pittsburg, though optimistic, still have a tang of foreboding about them that cannot be ignored. Wagner's knee is good to-day. How long will it last? the fans ask. For physicians appear to be a unit in declaring that injuries to one's knee have a discomfitting habit of bobbing up a long time after everything seems to have been covered over about the member.

MERCER CAPTURES FINAL GAME FROM VANDEBBILT

MACON, GA., May 3.—Mercer captured the last game of the series with Vanderbilt yesterday by the score of 7 to 2. The Commodores at no time had a chance. The Baptists took the lead from the first, outclassed, outhit and outplayed the winners of Thursday's game.

Hunt twirled for the winners, while McClure did slab duty for the Commodores.

Jimmy Grant is on the warpath. Jimmy read Meyer Pries' challenge in The Georgian the other day. "So he wants to fight me, hey?" said the little Chicago boy. "Well, let him get a side bet of $500 and I will let him come in at catchweights and fight him winner take all." After departing with these few words, Jimmy galloped up Peachtree Street, with George Gaelelis, his backer, at his heels.

JACKET TRACK TEAM OFF FOR CLEMSON MEET

The Tech track team left this morning for Clemson, S. C., where they will compete with the track team representing Clemson College. This is the first meet of the season for the Techites, owing to the inability to arrange agreeable dates with the neighboring colleges, and it should bring out the best the Jackets have.

Coach Thomas has been putting his men through some stiff work the past few weeks and is confident of a victory. The Hillbillies from Clemson have a past record to be proud of and will endeavor to retain all their laurels.

Of the men who will make the trip, Logan, Robinson, Smith and Leuhrmann are veterans of last year, who hold good records, and they can be depended upon to bring home the bacon in their events.

No-Rim-Cut Tires 10% Oversize

Tire Prices

With our new factories, we have built as high as 6,500 automobile tires daily.

This multiplied output has cut cost of production. And our profits, as usual, are kept down to the minimum.

So prices on No-Rim-Cut tires now average about 11 per cent less than last year.

No Extra

No-Rim-Cut tires now cost no more than any standard clincher tires.

Yet these tires save all the cost of rim-cutting. They save a ruin which wrecks 23 per cent of the hooked-base clincher tires.

And No-Rim-Cut tires are 10 per cent larger—contain 10 per cent more air—than clinchers. And that, with the average car, adds 25 per cent to the tire mileage.

Our Profit

Each year we advertise our profits. That is to show you exactly the value you get in a Goodyear tire.

In times past this profit has averaged about 8½ per cent. And this year, with our lowered prices, we do not expect to exceed that.

Thus it must be apparent that no tire maker can ever give more for the money.

We have the largest output, the newest factories, the most up-to-date equipment. None can possibly build equal tires at as low cost as we.

None dare sell on smaller margins. None this year show so large a reduction. Those are our ways for keeping cost per mile down to a record minimum. By No-Rim-Cut tires, by oversize tires, by the utmost in quality at an unmatched price. Come share these immense economies.

THREE ANGLES DEVELOP FROM TITLTE BATTLE

By W. W. Naughton.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF., May 3.—"If Kilbane had shown more willingness, you would have seen a better fight," said the Dundee crowd.

"If Dundee had been a little more inclined to mix it there would have been an entirely different verdict," said Kilbane's followers.

"There was too much feinting and holding on by both men," said the disgruntled fans.

There you have the three angles of the recent featherweight championship contest.

Each of the principals is thoroughly willing to try it all over again, and each claims that a draw decision will not be possible next time. Considering the careful training they had, it is not easy to see how either lad could improve to any particular extent on what he showed Tuesday night, and, in the meantime, there is no clamorous demand for another engagement.

The idea prevails, for that matter, that a second contest might prove tamer still. There is such a thing as rival boxers becoming too well acquainted with each other's strong points and adopting precautions that would render each successive match in which they figured more listless than its predecessor.

The blow fell hardest on Kilbane's followers. This because there was nothing in the affair to justify the making of the champion an odds-on 10 to 4 favorite.

Explanations are in order, of course, and an exceedingly naive one was furnished by a touring sportsman who comes from the champion's home town.

"Here is the way I account for it," said the man from Cleveland. "To begin with, the Kilbane men were deprived of an opportunity to make a clean-up in the betting. When it comes to laying 10 to 4 you have to place a fortune to win anything, and it is not worth the risk. All right. Now, it seems to me, they figured that if Kilbane beat Dundee too decisively Kilbane would be fighting himself out of a job. It is all very well to talk of Kilbane going in with the lightweights, but I think he'd rather stay with the feathers. He saw he would not win any bets by defeating Dundee, and he probably made up his mind to do just enough to earn the decision and then look forward to another go with Dundee in New York. You know they would draw a tremendous crowd at Madison Square Garden, and the New Yorkers would be quite willing to accept 10 to 8 against Dundee."

"But Kilbane did not do enough to earn the decision," was remarked.

"Well, that's purely a matter of opinion. I think he did."

SOUSA SHOOTS TO-DAY AT BROOKHAVEN GUN CLUB

The Brookhaven Gun Club will hold its first shoot of the season on the club grounds this afternoon. John Philip Sousa, famous band leader and one of the most expert trap shooters in the United States, will be the guest of Mr. Lester and will participate in the shoot.

At present Mr. Sousa is on a vacation tour and likes nothing better than a few hours sport with the blue rocks. A new trap has been installed on the grounds and another one will be set up later in the season. The shoot to-day is an exhibition match and is open to all members of the club.

JOHN L. HAD REAL K. O.

Fans Like Fighter With a Wallop

By Ed. W. Smith.

CHICAGO, ILL., May 3.—One must admire the clever ringster who gets away with the pretty stuff and does the job up beautifully, but when one gets right down to cases it's the party whose one mighty wallop stretches the foe out on his back for the full count who becomes king in a night, and stays king as long as the punch is in good working order. In other words, while the clever fellow may even become champion, the walloper who continually displays the K. O. swat is first in the hearts of his countrymen, even though he may never become a champion. The case of Johnny Kilbane is a good one in point. Lots and lots of fans would go to see Johnny and come away marveling at his wonderful footwork, his infallible judgment of distance and other technical points. But they would talk longer and rave louder over one of Matty McCue's knockouts.

Sullivan a Hero.

Back in the days of long ago when Mr. Sullivan, of Boston, discovered that he could club them into somnolence better with a five-ounce glove wrapped tightly around his Milesian fist than he could with the bare digit, he became one of the world's greatest, or at least one of the world's most admired men. Those who didn't openly admire the first Queensberry champion at least did so secretly, for he was a red-blooded fellow with the wallop. And wallopers ever since have commanded first call in the attention of the races. Clever Corbett was never exactly an idol, though one of the world's greatest boxers. His successor, Fitzsimmons, who knocked 'em dead with one punch, was a huge idol, despite his foreign origin, and Jeffries, too, because of the weight of his blow, was looked upon as invincible for years.

Britt Defeated Corbett.

So it has been in other clases. Terry McGovern was the scream of the nation for years and years, though he never really attained any particular championship. He was whipped by another puncher, who in turn fell before speed and cleverness. But the men who whipped Young Corbett never got the glad acclaim from the fans that greeted either Corbett or McGovern when they appeared in the squared arena. The ideal fighter in the eyes of the general or average fight fan is the chap who combines skill and force, a man of the Joe Gans or the Stanley Ketchel or the Bob Fitzsimmons type. This type is mighty rare, for the fighter of today is there to gather the shekels and thinks more of dodging a blackened eye or a bruised mouth than he does of knocking an opponent out.

Naughton's Judgment Good.

Perhaps Referee Eyton may have some of these ideas in mind when he called that Los Angeles scrap between Kilbane and Dundee a draw the other night. From all accounts Kilbane got more than a shade the worst of that verdict, though our old side-kick, Bill Naughton, never mentions it as being a wrong verdict—and we bank more than a little on Uncle Bill's judgment. So perhaps it was all right after all and that Kilbane didn't really beat the hardy little Italian from New York. Kilbane is a wonderful boxer, but he hasn't the mule-like swat that makes for public idolatry.

McCue Didn't Stop Williams.

Matty McCue didn't make it ten straight knockouts when he met Posey Williams in Milwaukee the other night in a six-round bout. Posey went in there to stay, and stay he did. A boxer who is trying to knock out a man who is strictly on the defensive has little chance, for he gets few openings and the other fellow is devoting every instant of his time to dodging that K. O. punch that he knows is coming over. You must get a man to open up if you would knock him out, and this evidently Matty failed to accomplish.

Matty vs. O'Connell.

Jeff O'Connell, the little Briton, who is Matty's next serious opponent, is not going to lack for backing when he faces the Racine star. Jim McNulty, of the West Side, is a staunch friend of Jeff and says that if Jeff trains properly for the contest he will wager $1,000 that he gets the popular verdict in ten rounds. Joe D'Andrea also is a supporter of the O'Connell end on this occasion.

LOOKOUTS GET MALONEY; GULLS RELEASE THRASHER

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., May 3.—Outfielder Maloney, last year with Mobile, has been signed by Chattanooga. Outfielder Thrasher has been turned back to Columbus, Ohio.

BLOOMINGTON FREES TWO.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL., May 3.—Bloomington yesterday released Scott, a Lucas local collegian trying for first base, and Pitcher William Clayton, of Gillespie, Ill. Catcher Jesse Clifton was purchased from Burlington.

BARONS BUY M'DONALD AND KNISELY FROM CUBS

CHICAGO, May 3.—President Murphy of the local Nationals yesterday announced the sale of Outfielder Knisely and Infielder McDonald to the Birmingham, Ala., club of the Southern League. These players came to Chicago in the Tinker deal.

MARANVILLE IS SMALLEST.

BOSTON, May 3.—Maranville, of Boston, is the smallest shortstop, and Mayer, same team, the tallest first baseman in captivity. The former can walk under the latter's outstretched arm. Maranville is 20 years old and was picked up in the New England League last summer.

PLAYERS RELEASED.

CLEVELAND, May 3.—Catcher Pete Shields, former captain of the University of Mississippi Baseball Team, was released to the Portland, Ore., club by the Cleveland American League Club yesterday, and Outfielder Betts was released to the Beaumont club of the Texas League.

TED COY GOES TO NEW YORK.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., May 3.—Ted Coy, famous Yale football star, who has resided here for the past two years, is shortly to open an office as engineer in New York, according to announcement made to-day.

DREAD OF TOE HOLD DEFEATS ALL FOREIGNERS

CHICAGO, May 3.—It is the fear of the terrible toe hold that foreign wrestlers have that defeats them before they get into the ring with Frank Gotch. This at least is the opinion of Gotch himself, expressed when he was in the city the other day and discussed his recent bout in Kansas City with George Lurich, the Russian.

This was described by the Kansas City sport writers as an easy thing for the Humboldt man, they claiming that Lurich did not show anywhere near as well against the champion as he did against some of the lesser lights that he tackled there in previous matches.

That was perfectly natural, for a champion is supposed to show superiority over all of them. But Gotch has his own explanation of the situation, that developed just before and immediately after Lurich faced him in the ring.

Hold Talk of Europe.

"You can bet all you've got in the world that this toe hold of mine—of course other wrestlers use it, but it generally has been credited to me as being something of my own invention—has been the talk of Europe ever since I defeated Hackenschmidt the first time," Gotch said. "Remember that I have been over there and know just how they feel about it.

"Of course it gets noised around, for wrestlers are no different from any other kind of people, and do a lot of gossiping among themselves. I heard some of this while I was over there and know that the Europeans look upon me as being some sort of a terrible animal and a bone crusher.

"Naturally this gossip goes from one to another, and the stories do not lose anything by repetition. They think over there that all I do is to get the toe hold, or try to get it, all the time I am wrestling.

Seldom Uses Toe Grip.

"As a matter of fact, I have used it but seldom, and do not know at all that I ever won a fall with it in an important match. Wrestlers over here know that I use it more for a feint than anything else.

"It is useful for that, especially when an opponent has his legs tightly clamped together. Well, at any rate, when Lurich was preparing for the ring he was talking excitedly in German to his handlers, and the whole gist of the conversation was on the toe hold.

"When finally we were ready to begin and started for the ring I noticed that he was as white as chalk and looked about as nervous as any man I ever saw. This didn't wear off at all after we got started, and he kept jerking his feet and legs away from me in a horrified manner every time I reached for him.

"I knew what he was thinking of and naturally kept him worried by feinting at him. This made him forget all that he seemed to know about ordinary wrestling and naturally made him an easy mark.

"Hack" Feared Clutch.

"Hackenschmidt was really afraid of the same thing, and the constant brooding over the toe hold in advance of a match with me beats all of them. You see, the hold hits the knee more than any other place, as the leverage is placed right there. And water on the knee is an athlete's most hideous nightmare. Once you get that you are out of business for all time."

It may be mentioned right here that George Hackenschmidt was put completely out of business through the injury he suffered to his knee while training for the second Gotch bout. It is understood on this side that Hackenschmidt has had several operations to relieve the injury, but that they have been unsuccessful.

In consequence the once mighty Russian is unable to show with even a posing act. It is said that his career is completely at an end.

GOLF IS URGED FOR PREACHERS BY CHICK EVANS

By "Chick" Evans.

NOT long ago I received a letter from a friend who lives in a little town in Michigan. He asked me to select some golf clubs and he particularly desired me to use my very best judgment in the matter of selection.

He explained that the clubs were not for himself, but for a clergyman and he thought that if the clubs were the best possible the preacher would be spared the provocation that so frequently leads the average golfer to do and say very unclerical things.

It is perhaps hardly necessary to say that I was only pleased to use the utmost pains in choosing clubs for the reverend gentleman, from the early beginning of my own game I have always had a particularly kindly feeling for men of his profession, and I have always believed that golf is the one game that is certainly adapted to their needs. It certainly would prove of great benefit to the health and happiness of overworked, earnest and discontented priests and preachers.

OUR private opinion is that Jack Prince is going to coin money with that track of his, out at the old show grounds. With a million feet of timber already delivered—or maybe it was a billion—Jack always deals in big, round figures—and a hundred carpenters at his command, Jack will start things whooping today and keep them that way until the third week of this month, when he expects to be ready to open his doors

This town is going wild over motorcycle racing on a soup dish track. It wanted to go crazy over automobile racing but the Speedway was so far from Atlanta there wasn't a chance. They were inclined to be keen over bicycle racing but the Coliseum was too far from Five Points.

Jack Prince now promises to give them something about twice as exciting as automobile racing and bicycle racing rolled together. And he will stage it at a new track only a stone's throw (if you're a good thrower) from the center of Atlanta.

Of course Jack has rounded up the cream of the world's talent—you all know Jack—and he is going to put on something that will set the place ablaze.

It really looks like a great proposition, from an amusement viewpoint. The people are sure to take to it strong.

I forgot to tell you in my last letter about Dad's coming to town. It seems as dad is dead set agin me fitin and he found where I was trainin so he came around and wanted me to go back home. he said that i mite better be home helpin on the farm, plowing and hay fever coming on and he with his hands full and me here in the city fooling my time away and the city fellers making a fool of me, interest comming due on the mortgage and no bread in the house. I told dad that i couldnt quit now cause the fellers would say I had a streak of yeller in me quitin.

Yesterday that little cuse Ike Mann showed up again and I asked him if he wanted to put on the gloves agin and he said nix. then he called me off to one side and asked me if i would throw the fite for $300 and how far. I asked him what he meant. he said he would give me $300. if i would lay down to Cyclops sam after a while I found out what he wanted. he wanted me to make believe that cyclops sam liks me in our fite. I told him I was in this fite to win

I got to begin climbing telegraph poles to-morrow and strengthin my stommick and chest muskels. I got to climb 24 poles every day till the fite, great exercize but kind of hard work climbing so many every day steddy. my bad dreams still keep up, last night I dreamed I was climbing Mt. M'kinley with Dock Cook when my foot slipped and I fell down the mountain bout 5 miles and landed in a big pile of dutch cheese. I think that all comes from eatin so much cheese. but it may mean I'm in Dutch I dunno. I believe I am getting faster every day now just from drinking slippery ellum tea. Bud stebbin the town custabul of Joshua called on me to day and say it's funny but I'll have to wait till next week to tell you about it. tell all your friends to place their bets on yours truly

By MAX.

MARCH 25.—I comforted myself during that long period at the dinner table when the widow devoted herself to Jack Spencer with the reflection that at least I would get to put her on her train. I listened abstractedly to Jack's stories about his collection of scimitars with my mind busy planning all I wanted to say. She wasn't going far; perhaps, I could arrange to follow her in a day or two, and spend a day with her. Perhaps—who knows?—she might make love to me as violently as when we were in Florida in the winter.

The thought of such delicious danger thrilled me, and I was glad when we started back to the station.

We had reached the waiting room, and Jack, who seemed extremely officious, I thought, had sent me to the check room for Mrs. Brown's handbag, where I had to stand in line fully 15 minutes. It was annoying, of course, but in a few minutes, I thought, I would have the widow to myself, and that would make up for a great deal.

A Surprise.

Judge of my surprise, Diary, when I returned, to have Jack grab the bag from my hand, saying, in the coolest, most matter-of-fact way, "I'll put Mrs. Brown on her train, Max. I want to tell her the story of that scimitar I picked up in Tokio. You stay here with Sallie."

There was a hurried handshake with me, a renewed recital of the pleasure she had experienced in meeting Mrs. Spencer, and the widow was gone! For a moment I was dazed. I gazed blankly after them, Jack, leaning over the widow, as they walked, as if he had found a long lost possession, and was afraid if his eyes were removed he would lose it; then my eyes turned to Mrs. Spencer.

She didn't look bewildered, but on her face there was the slightest suspicion of a frown. Plainly, she was mad, but, just as plainly, she was too diplomatic to show it, even to me.

Then the humor of the situation flashed over me, and I fell into the seat next to hers, overcome with laughter. I believe I howled, I know I shrieked, and shook, and I know that others around me looked as if I might have gone suddenly insane, while on the faces of some there appeared a sympathetic grin. I hadn't laughed till the tears came in twenty years, but I laughed then till they rolled down my cheeks, and through it all Sallie Spencer never smiled.

It is a most fortunate dispensation of Providence that women have no sense of humor. If they had, they would laugh at themselves till they laughed themselves to death. Here sat Sallie Spencer, who had voluntarily made a sacrifice of her comfort that she might prevent a very fascinating woman having her old friend at her mercies for an evening, and perhaps eloping with him; and that most fascinating woman had carried off her husband instead. And she didn't see anything funny in it!

On the contrary, the more I laughed the more annoyed she grew.

"I hope," she said at length, "that you are enjoying yourself. I am sure I don't see anything funny in the situation."

Whereupon I laughed the harder, and was still laughing, with my mirth ebbing away in faint chuckles, when Jack returned.

"Why didn't you tell me, Max," he said, "that your friend is so interested in scimitars? Really, she is the most intelligent and appreciative woman I ever knew."

I pinched Mrs. Jack's arm as I replied: "Yes, she is very clever, a lot more interesting than the majority of these dull women we know who don't know a scimitar from a pickax and who would use one for cutting their corns if they had it."

Mrs. Jack gave me a reproachful look over her husband's shoulder, and I fell behind just long enough to laugh again.

Poor, Simple Jack.

Our talk was along the same line when in the limousine on the way home—Jack extolling the widow's beauty and her wit and I repeating at every opportunity what a great thing it was to meet a woman so clever.

"I'll wager, Jack," I said, "that you enjoyed her more than you have enjoyed any woman in years. It must be a great thing for a man like you to meet a kindred soul like hers. She isn't bound down to the plane of the commonplace like the women who keep house and think it is a great feat to get up a good dinner. Why, that woman can tell at a glance if a scimitar came from Adrianople or Damascus! And isn't that better, I want to know, than knowing a chuck steak from a porterhouse?"

I can count the compliments I paid the widow by the black and blue marks on my arm, Sallie Spencer giving me a pinch for every one, while Jack, on the opposite seat, saw nothing and detected no sarcasm in what I was saying.

When a man has a fad, he becomes insane on that subject. Here was a man whose fad was making him so insane it had led him to draw comparisons unfavorable to his wife; a woman who had always regarded his fad as something harmless because it kept him out of greater mischief. And she had seen in it nothing more.

I was not at all surprised this morning, while engaged in my hourly exercise of rescuing Manette's brown-eyed pup from larger dogs, and later in rescuing her kittens from the brown-eyed pup, to be called to the telephone and to hear Mrs. Spencer asking me to come right over. She wanted to have a talk with me

WITHIN THE LAW

By MARVIN DANA from the Play of BAYARD VEILLER

What Has Gone Before

Mary Turner, a beautiful and refined girl, worked in the great Gilder store in New York.

There had been thefts in the store. They had been traced eventually to a certain department, that in which Mary worked. The detective was alert. Some valuable silks were missed. Search followed immediately. The goods were found in Mary's locker. That was enough. She was charged with the theft. She protested innocence—only to be laughed at in derision by her accusers. Every thief declares innocence. Mr. Gilder himself was emphatic against her. The thieving had been long continued. An example must be made. The girl was arrested. The jury found her guilty and she was sentenced to prison for three years.

Dick Gilder, the store proprietor's son, returns unexpectedly from Europe because he was homesick for his father. The latter's secretary tells him that Mr. Gilder has gone to court, that one of the girls was arrested for stealing.

"And Dad went to court to get her out of the scrape!" cries Dick. "That's just like the old man."

Now Go On With the Story

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"What's the use of all this pretense?" he demanded, sharply. "You were given a fair trial, and there's an end of it."

The girl, standing there so feebly, seeming indeed to cling for support to the man who always held her thus closely by the wrist, spoke again with an astonishing clearness, even with a sort of vivacity, as if she explained easily something otherwise in doubt.

"Oh, no, I wasn't!" she contradicted bluntly, with a singular confidence of assertion. "Why, if the trial had been fair, I shouldn't be here."

"That's What They All Say."

The harsh voice of Cassidy again broke in on the passion of the girl with a professional sneer.

"That's another thing they all say."

But the girl went on speaking fiercely, impervious to the man's coarse sarcasm, her eyes, which had deepened almost to purple, still fixed piercingly on Gilder, who, for some reason wholly inexplicable to him, felt himself strangely disturbed under that regard.

"Do you call it fair when the lawyer I had was only a boy—one whom the court told me to take, a boy trying his first case—my case, that meant the ruin of my life? My lawyer! Why, he was just getting experience—getting it at my expense!" The girl paused as if exhausted by the vehemence of her emotion, and at last the sparkling eyes drooped and the heavy lids closed over them. She swayed a little, so that the officer tightened his clasp on her wrist.

There followed a few seconds of silence. Then Gilder made an effort to shake off the feeling that had so possessed him, and to acertain degree he succeeded.

"The jury found you guilty," he asserted, with an attempt to make his voice magisterial in its severity.

Mary Was Aroused.

Instantly, Mary was aroused to a new outburst of protest. Once again her eyes shot their fires at the man seated behind the desk, and she went forward a step imperiously, dragging the officer in her wake.

"Yes, the jury found me guilty," she agreed, with fine scorn in the musical cadences of her voice. "Do you know why? I can tell you, Mr. Gilder. It was because they had been out for three hours without reaching a decision. The evidence didn't seem to be quite enough for some of them, after all. Well, the judge threatened to lock them up all night. The men wanted to get home. The easy thing to do was to find me guilty, and let it go at that. Was that fair, do you think? And that's not all, either. Was it fair of you, Mr. Gilder? Was it fair of you to come to the court this morning and tell the judge that I should be sent to prison as a warning to others?"

A quick flush burned on the massive face of the man whom she thus accused, and his eyes refused to meet her steady gaze of reproach.

"You know!" he exclaimed, in momentary consternation. Again her mood had affected his own, so that through a few hurrying seconds he felt himself somehow guilty of wrong against this girl, so frank and so rebuking.

"I heard you in the court room," she said. "The dock isn't very far from the bench where you spoke to the judge about my case. Yes, I heard you. It wasn't: Did I do it? Or didn't I do it? No; it was only that I must be made a warning to others."

Fell on Unheading Ears.

Again silence fell for a tense interval. Then, finally, the girl spoke in a different tone. Where before her voice had been vibrant with the instinct of complaint against the mockery of justice under which she suffered, now there was a deeper note, that of most solemn truth.

"Mr. Gilder," she said simply, "as God is my judge, I am going to prison for three years for something I didn't do."

But the sincerity of her broken cry fell on unheeding ears. The coarse nature of the officer had long ago lost whatever elements of softness there might have been to develop in a gentler occupation. As for the owner of the store, he was not sufficiently sensitive to feel the verity in the accents of the speaker. Moreover, he was a man who followed the conventional, with never a distraction due to imagination and sympathy. Just now, too, he was experiencing a keen irritation against himself because of the manner in which he had been sensible to the influence of her protestation, despite his will to the contrary. That irritation against himself only reacted against the girl and caused him to steel his heart to resist any tendency toward commiseration. So this declaration of innocence was made quite in vain—indeed, served rather to strengthen his disfavor toward the complainant and to make his manner harsher when she voiced the pitiful question over which she had wondered and grieved.

"Why did you ask the judge to send me to prison?"

"The thieving that has been going on in this store for more than a year has got to stop," Gilder answered emphatically, with all his usual energy of manner restored. As he spoke he raised his eyes and met the girl's glance fairly. Thought of the robberies was quite enough to make him pitiless toward the offender.

"Sending me to prison won't stop it," Mary Turner said, drearily.

"Perhaps not," Gilder sternly retorted. "But the discovery and punishment of the other guilty ones will." His manner changed to a business-like alertness. "You sent word to me that you could tell me how to stop the thefts in the store. Well, my girl, do this, and, while I can make no definite promise, I'll see what can be done about getting you out of your present difficulty." He picked up a pencil, pulled a pad of blank paper convenient to his hand and looked at the girl expectantly, with aggressive inquiry in his gaze. "Tell me now," he concluded, "who were your pals?"

It Was the Last Straw.

The matter-of-fact manner of this man who had unwittingly wronged her so frightfully was the last straw on the girl's burden of suffering. Under it, her patient endurance broke, and she cried out in a voice of utter despair that caused Gilder to start nervously, and even impelled the stolid officer to a frown of remonstrance.

"I have no pals!" she ejaculated, furiously. "I never stole anything in my life. Must I go on telling you over and over again?" Her voice rose in a wail of misery. "Oh, why won't any one believe me?"

Gilder was much offended by this display of an hysterical grief, which seemed to his phlegmatic temperament altogether unwarranted by the circumstances. He spoke decisively:

"Unless you can control yourself, you must go." He pushed away the pad of paper and tossed the pencil aside in physical expression of his displeasure. "Why did you send that message if you had nothing to say?" he demanded, with increasing choler.

"Give Them a Fair Chance."

But now the girl had regained her former poise. She stood a little drooping and shaken, where for a moment she had been erect and tensed. There was a vast weariness in her words as she answered:

"I have something to tell you, Mr. Gilder," she said, quietly. "Only, I—I sort of lost my grip on the way here, with this man by my side."

"Most of 'em do, the first time," the officer commented, with a certain grim appreciation.

"Well?" Gilder insisted querulously, as the girl hesitated.

At once, Mary went on speaking, and now a little increase of vigor trembled in her tones.

"When you sit in a cell for three months waiting for your trial, as I did, you think a lot. And, so, I got the idea that if I could talk to you I might be able to make you understand what's really wrong. And if I could do that, and so help out the other girls, what has happened to me would not, after all, be quite so awful—so useless, somehow." Her voice lowered to a quick pleading, and she bent toward the man at the desk. "Mr. Gilder," she questioned, "do you really want to stop the girls from stealing?"

"Most certainly I do," came the forcible reply.

The girl spoke with a great earnestness, deliberately.

"Then give them a fair chance."

The magnate stared in sincere astonishment over this absurd, this futile suggestion for his guidance.

"What do you mean?" he vociferated, with rising indignation. There was an added hostility in his demeanor, for it seemed to him that this thief of his goods whom he had brought to justice was daring to trifle with him. He grew wrathful over the suspicion, but a secret curiosity still held his temper within bounds. "What do you mean?" he repeated; and now the full force of his strong voice set the room trembling.

The tones of the girl came softly musical, made more delicately resonant to the ear by contrast with the man's roaring.

"Why," she said, very gently, "I mean just this: Give them a living chance to be honest."

"A living chance!" The two words were exploded with dynamic violence. The preposterousness of the advice fired Gilder with resentment so pervasive that through many seconds he found himself unable to express the rage that flamed within him.

The girl showed herself undismayed by his anger.

"Yes," she went on, quietly; "that's all there is to it. Give them a living chance to get enough food to eat, and a decent room to sleep in, and shoes that will keep their feet off the pavement winter mornings. Do you think that any girl wants to steal?. Do you think that any girl wants to risk——?"

By this time, however, Gilder had regained his powers of speech, and he interrupted stormily:

"And is this what you have taken up my time for? You want to make a maudlin plea for guilty, dishonest girls, when I thought you really meant to bring me facts."

Nevertheless, Mary went on with her arraignment uncompromisingly. There was a strange, compelling energy in her inflections that penetrated even the pachydermatous officer, so that, though he thought her raving, he let her rave on, which was not at all his habit of conduct, and did indeed surprise him mightily. As for Gilder, he felt helpless in some puzzling fashion that was totally foreign to his ordinary self. He was still glowing with wrath over the method by which he had been victimized into giving the girl a hearing. Yet, despite his chagrin, he realized that he could not send her from him forthwith. By

"We can't fight when ladies are conerned," he went on, "so if you will just hand over General Hastings' letters, why, here's your money."

with grave questioning in her violet eyes. Under the urgency of emotion, color crept into the pallid cheeks, and now her face was very beautiful—so beautiful, indeed, that for a little the charm of its loveliness caught the man's gaze, and he watched her with a new respect, born of appreciation for her feminine delightfulness. The impression was far too brief. Gilder was not given to esthetic raptures over women. Always, the business instinct was the dominent. So, after the short period of amazed admiration over such unexpected winsomeness, his thoughts flew back angrily to the matters whereof she spoke so ridiculously.

"I don't care to discuss these things," he declared peremptorily, as the girl remained silent for a moment.

"I Change My Policy?"

"And I have no wish to discuss anything," Mary returned evenly. "I only want to give you what you asked for—facts." A faint smile of reminiscence curved the girl's lips. "When they first locked me up," she explained, without any particular evidence of emotion, "I used to sit and hate you."

"Oh, of course!" came the caustic exclamation from Gilder.

"And then, I thought that perhaps you did not understand," Mary continued; "that if I were to tell you how things really are it might be you would change them somehow."

At this ingenuous statement the owner of the store gave forth a gasp of sheer stupefaction.

"I!" he cried, incredulously. "I change my business policy because you ask me to!"

There was something imperturbable in the quality of the voice as the girl went resolutely forward with her explanation. It was as if she were discharging a duty not to be gainsaid, not to be thwarted by any difficulty, not even the realization that all the effort must be ultimately in vain.

"Do you know how we girls live? But, of course you don't!" Three of us in one room, doing our own cooking over a two-burner gas stove, and our own washing and ironing evenings after being on our feet for nine hours."

The enumeration of the sordid details left the employer absolutely unmoved, since he lacked the imagination necessary to sympathize actually with the straining evil of a life such as the girl had known. Indced, he spoke with an air of just remonstrance, as if the girl's charges were mischievously faulty.

"I have provided chairs behind the counters," he stated.

She Shook Her Head.

There was no especial change in the girl's voice as she answered his defense. It continued musically low, but there was in it the insistent note of sincerity.

"But have you ever seen a girl sitting in one of them?" she questioned, coldly. "Please answer me. Have you? Of course not," she said, after a little pause, during which the owner had remained silent. She shook her head in emphatic negation. "And do you understand why? It's simply because every girl knows that the manager of her department would think he could get along without her if he were to see her sitting down—loafing, you know! So, she would be discharged. All it amounts to is that, after being on her feet for nine hours, the girl usually walks home in order to save car fare. Yes, she walks, whether sick or well. Anyhow, you are generally so tired it don't make much difference which you are."

Gilder was fuming under these strictures, which seemed to him altogether baseless attacks on himself. His exasperation steadily waxed against the girl, a convicted felon, who thus had the audacity to beard him.

"What has all this to do with the question of theft in the store?" he rumbled, huffily. "That was the excuse of your coming here. And instead of telling me something, you rant about gas stoves and car fare."

The inexorable voice went on in its monotone, as if he had not spoken.

"And, when you are really sick and have to stop work, what are you doing to do then? Do you know, Mr. Gilder, that the first time a straight girl steals, it's often because she had to have a doctor—or some luxury like that? And some of them do worse than steal. Yes, they do—girls that started straight and wanted to stay that way. But, of course, some of them get so tired of the whole grind that—that—"

His Anger Flamed High.

The man who was the employer of hundreds concerning whom these grim truths were uttered, stirred uneasily in his chair, and there came a touch of color into the healthy brown of his cheeks as he spoke his protest.

"I'm not their guardian. I can't watch over them after they leave the store. They are paid the current rate of wages—as much as any other store pays." As he spoke, the anger provoked by this unexpected assault on him out of the mouth of a convict flamed high in virtuous repudiation. "Why," he went on vehemently, "no man living does more for his employees than I do. Who gave the girls their fine rest rooms upstairs? I did! Who gave them the cheap lunch rooms? I did!"

"But you won't pay them enough to live on!" The very fact that the words were spoken without any trace of rancor merely made this statement of indisputable truth obnoxious to the man, who was stung to more savage resentment in asserting his impugned self-righteousness.

"I pay them the same as the other stores do," he repeated, sullenly.

Yet once again the gently cadenced voice gave answer, an answer informed with that repulsive insistence to the man who sought to resist her indictment of him.

"But you won't pay them enough to live on." The simple lucidity of the charge forbade direct reply.

Gilder betook himself to evasion by harking back to the established ground of complaint.

"And so you claim that you were forced to steal. That's the plea you make for yourself and your friends."

To Be Continued Monday.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

PA took Ma & me to a moving picture show last nite. Pa sed that it was going to be a grate show bekaus Mister Art Beringer sent all the way to New York for the picters, & he wanted us to go espeshully to see a grate drama called Queenie, the Quarry Man's Daughter. So we went to the show & all the time thay was showing the first picters Pa kep telling Ma & me to wait until they had the stone quarry picter. I saw the rehearsal of it this forenoon, Pa sed, & it is a pretty story. It seems that the father of the gurl Queenie is a honest man & he does not like the gurl's sweetheart, a Italian with a lot of munny that is going to marry her or foreclose the mortgage on the stone quarry. It is a grate plot, Pa sed, & the reason I am so much interested in it is beekaus I used to be a stone quarry man myself.

What Pa Said.

You did? sed Ma.

Yes, yes, sed Pa. I used to be known as one of the most powerful cutters & lifters of stone that was ever in this seckshun of the country. I have often thought, Pa sed, wen looking back over those old days, that I must have been living in a long ago age. I have often thought wen I was lifting blocks of stone about twenty feet long that I was a quarry slave in the days wen Mister Potolmy helped me to bild the pyramids, Pa sed.

Jest then the picter beegan about Queenie, the stone quarry man's daughter. It showed a big stone quarry scene ware all the men was hurrying around and lifted rocks into wagons. Then it showed the Italian man wich was going to marry Queenie, & thare was a sceen ware she spurned him. Then he toald her, in the picter, that he had a mortgage on her father's quarry & how he was going to sell it if she dident becum his bride.

The heero of the play was a yung Irishman that was handling a pick. Beeing a Irishman, he had a lot of time to lissen to the talk between Queenie & the villun, beekaus he would swing the pick onst & then he wud lite his pipe & lissen for a minnit or so, & then he wud swing his pick onst moar & lite his pipe long enuff to git the rest of the terribul story. Then the Irishman he went oaver & slammed Queenie's lover in the mouth or amongst the eyes or sumwar, & then caim the reevenge. Wen Queenie had went to git her father's lunch the villun stole sum dinamite & caim beehind ware the yung Irishman was picking with his pick & put the dinamite under the stone & blew the whole lot of it oaver onto the Irishman.

"I Was Strong," Said Pa.

Then he ran away & sed with Patrick McGullicuddy out of the way the quarry shall be mine. But then Queenie caim back & started in trying to lift the rocks away, but she cuddent stir any of them until her skreems attrackted her pa, & he caim on the sceen & beegan to throw the rocks rite & left. Ha, sed Pa, that reeminds me of the way I used to throw those grate masses of granite into the wagons of the teamsters. I was so strong in those days, sed Pa, that I had to be careful putting on my clothes for feer I wud tare them.

But Ma & me found out to-day that Pa was lying, beekaus Ma's cuzzin is a quarry man, Jimmie Trudden, & wen Ma asked him if Pa ever lifted a rock Mister Trudden, wich had known Pa since childhood, sed Yes, he used to lift rocks wen they wasent too heavy to throw at chipmunks. Ma galv me a quarter if I wud tell Pa wat Mister Trudden sed. I dident dast to tell Pa, but I got the quarter first, anyhow.

Man or Piano?

The daughter of the house had just returned from a visit to her cousins, during which she had become engaged to a rising young man whom she had met at the home of her relatives. To her mother she was extolling the virtues of her intended.

"Oh, mother," she exclaimed, "he's just grand! So square, so upright; so highly polished! Why, even in his notes there is such a sympathetic tone that sometimes I wonder if I am not reading the music of the gods."

"Mercy's sake, child!" interrupted mother. "Are you talking about a young man or a piano?"

Can't You See?

Tutter—Awfully pretty baby of yours, Bender, but—er—what is it, boy or a girl?

Bender—Can't you tell it's a girl?

"No. How on earth do you tell?"

"Can't you see? She's reaching up to put her mother's hat on straight."

Some Trouble!

Junior—I hear Briggs got into a lot of trouble with that girl he was going with.

Soph—Yes. How's that?

Junior—He married her.

Ingenious Prisoners

AMONG the prisoners in the French convict settlement of New Caledonia were two marine engineers who not long ago received a pardon—strange as it may seem—for making a daring and ingenious attempt to escape.

Living together in the same hut, these men were engaged for years in digging a secret tunnel from their hut to the beach. At the end of the tunnel they hollowed out a chamber, in which, with pieces of driftwood and little bits of steel and iron smuggled into the hut, they fashioned a boat, the metal being at first used to make tools and afterward to form bolts and rivets.

Then with infinite pains they built an engine to propel the boat, and after laboring mightily for seven years they completed their task.

Everything was ready except the provisioning of the vessel, when they were betrayed by a fellow convict to whom they had confided their plan. But so impressed was the French commandant by their marvelous energy, skill and patience that he managed, after a year, to obtain a pardon for them.

:: Breaking the Ice ::

A Complete Short Story

WHEN the last carpenter had put the last touches on the last extra job—for which there were extra charges—and the last painter had done his final finishing-up, and the landscape gardener had made his farewell tour, and the bills had all been paid, Mrs. Fibbins stood at the window of her new home and surveyed the surrounding homes with the deepest possible satisfaction.

Her residence was beyond question the finest in the neighborhood. The structure was the tallest in sight; the cornices stuck out the worst; its architecture had the newest, homellest and most mixed design, and the ornaments were the craziest imaginable.

The lawn was the largest and the flower beds were the gaudiest of any in that part of the city. Yes, the place was a triumph! Mrs. Fibbins was naturally delighted.

"The people around here will all sit up and take notice!" she said to herself, smiling happily.

Finding Out

Mrs. Fibbins found out which one of the neighbors had the most servants and how many that neighbor had. Then she herself got more. Next she took up the question of hats. In order that nothing might be left undone she got a hat that could not be equaled for being disproportioned, ungainly, uncomfortable and generally absurd. No neighbor had a hat that could touch it in any of these respects.

But never a neighbor deigned to look in the direction of Mrs. Fibbins' establishment. Not a neighbor glanced at her hat when they passed her on the street.

It was terrible!

Mrs. Fibbins began to think up other ways to impress her neighbors. She gave gigantic parties. Every time she caught sight of a neighbor afoot she made a point of whizzing by that neighbor in an automobile. If any one entertained a celebrity she got a bigger celebrity. If there was a pretty girl visiting anywhere in the neighborhood she got a prettier girl to visit her.

It all did no good. The neighbors continued to treat Mrs. Fibbins as if she were a patron of a fashionable restaurant and they were the haughty and exclusive waiters. Mrs. Fibbins realized that she was out of it. She was filled with anguish and despair.

At last she spoke to Fibbins about it. Fibbins was a man of resource. More than that, he knew human nature. Fibbins said it was easy. Leave it to him.

Soon after that Mrs. Fibbins' servants all left her at once, bag and baggage. They held their noses in the air and made quite a procession. There was a considerable stir in the neighborhood over this affair. Several neighbors looked in the direction of the Fibbins home. Mrs. Fibbins saw them look, and she rejoiced.

Then the Fibbins water pipes burst. Water flooded the house and the yard, and then froze and made a dreadful mess. At this catastrophe the mansion and grounds of the Fibbinses were observed by all the neighbors. The men looked eagerly as they passed and the women devoted all their spare moments to sitting at their upper windows with opera glasses, closely observing the devastation.

Fibbins and Mrs. Fibbins emerged from their front door to go to a restaurant to dine. Coming in contact with the ice, their feet slipped and they were precipitated to the ground. In a sitting posture they glided swiftly along the icy incline to the gate. Mrs. Fibbins' hat came down over her eyes like a landslide. Finally they struggled to their feet and went limping away.

Every house in the neighborhood was alive to the incident. A representative from each hastened to Fibbins and Mrs. Fibbins and asked them to come right in and make that house their headquarters while their water pipes were being fixed.

The ice was broken at last! Fibbins and Mrs. Fibbins had become acquainted with their neighbors!

"You are a wonderful man!" said Mrs. Fibbins afterward in the tone of deepest admiration.

"I knew it would be easy," said Fibbins, "but I excited their sympathy and gave them a chance to congratulate themselves that our misfortunes were not theirs."

Household Suggestions

The best method of keeping small screws, brads and tacks from rusting is to place them in small, wide-mouthed bottles, tightly corked. The bottle should be perfectly dry before using. Sandpaper can be kept dry and in good working condition by rolling it and keeping it in a wide-mouthed jar and screwing down the lid.

When cream is only slightly sour it may be made delicious to serve with puddings, etc., in the following way: Put it into a basin with the juice of a lemon and a tablespoonful of sugar, and whip until quite stiff. This treatment makes it excellent, and increases the quantity at the same time.

If you want to patch your window blinds, don't sew on the patches. Instead, paste them on with hot starch and press down a warm iron. They will look neater than if sewn, because the stitches would be apparent, whereas a pasted-on patch is almost invisible.

Before putting curtain hooks in curtains in damp weather, rub the pins with a clean, oily rag. It prevents them rusting and tearing the curtain, and they can be taken in and out more easily.

Save all odd bits of twine, knot them together, then knit with steel needles into pieces about a foot or more square. These make excellent dish cloths for saucepans and pie dishes.

To Brighten Carpets

To brighten a carpet, take five or six large potatoes and scrape them finely into a pail of water. Stir, then strain. Wring out a cloth in the water and rub the carpet. Rinse the cloth as soon as soiled. Should soot fall on a carpet, sprinkle dry salt thickly over it, leave it for a few minutes, then brush up. No trace of the soot will remain.

Married Life the Third Year

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

WORRIED and depressed, Helen went in to straighten up Alice's room the morning after her departure.

Everything was in disorder from the hurried packing. Tissue paper, strings and empty boxes lay scattered about, and where the trunk had set was a dusty square.

The whole unpleasant scene of the night before kept beating in Helen's mind. And not only had Alice cut short her visit and left in a high dudgeon—the memory of that was distressing enough—but even more distressing was the fear of what Aunt Emma and Warren's other relatives might say.

That Alice would not hesitate to disparage both her and Warren Helen knew, and about her visit she would probably tell many things that were not true.

Helen was always keenly sensitive about what people "might say," and now she could think of nothing but the unpleasant surmises and comments that Warren's relatives would make.

With brooding anxiety, she put back her clothes in the bureau drawers and the closet that she had emptied for Alice's convenience. Besides the burnt bureau scarf she now discovered other evidences of Alice's carelessness.

A black smudge on the rug showed where she had glossed her shoes, the wall paper was sprinkled with ink where she had shaken a fountain pen, and on the back of one of the chairs a wet towel had been flung, leaving the varnish dulled and whitened.

While Helen was still putting the room to rights Warren called up from the office.

"I won't have time to write that letter to Aunt Emma," he announced, "so you'll have to write it. And you'd better get it off right away."

Helen at a Loss.

"But, dear, what shall I say?" faltered Helen.

"Just say that Alice took it into her head to go and that we couldn't keep her."

"But couldn't you write to-night or to-morrow?" persisted Helen. "You could do it so much better than I."

"Yes, and then Alice would have time to tell her mother a lot of lies. Now, you get that off right away! I want it to go out to-night."

When Helen turned from the phone it was with the greatest reluctance that she went over to the desk to write this letter. For her letter-writing was always most difficult, and from a letter like this her mind recoiled.

How should she begin it? What could she say? She did not want to hurt Aunt Emma, and yet it was only fair to them that she should know just how headstrong and unruly Alice had been.

After much chewing of her pen and many discarded beginnings, the letter was finally finished.

New York, April 24, 1913.

Dear Aunt Emma:

I regret very much that Alice should have ended her visit in this way. We did everything we could to persuade her not to start off last night, but she was so headstrong that nothing we could say had any effect. She declared if we did not take her to the station she would go alone—so what could we do?

The only cause for all this was that we tried to do what you asked—to keep her from seeing that Mr. Hampton. He came on from Philadelphia and called here at 7 to take Alice out. But Warren refused to let him see her.

This so incensed Alice that she at once began to pack her trunk, declaring that she would not stay with us another night. I pleaded and Warren scolded, but she would listen to neither of us. She said she was engaged to this man and that she was old enough to do as she pleased. I think you are quite right in feeling that a man of his age, and a divorced man, is most unsuited for Alice. I hope you will be able to break it all off—but Alice is very headstrong.

I am sending by parcel post some things she left in her haste. I hope you have gotten the house in shape again, that you are over the worst effects of the flood, and that Alice's unexpected return will not make things harder.

We both regret more than I can say that her visit should have such an unpleasant ending, but we trust you will understand that we did all we could to prevent it. Sincerely, your niece,

HELEN.

Helen was so far from satisfied with this letter that she wanted to call up Warren and read it to him over the phone, but she know he would be too hurried and impatient to listen. So, reluctantly, she took it out to the mail chute.

The next two days were for Helen most unhappy ones. She was constantly being forced to explain Alice's sudden departure. It was very embarrassing, particularly when Carrie, Warren's sister, called up to invite Alice to a luncheon.

The Answer.

But even more distressing was her haunting dread of what Aunt Emma would think and of just what Alice would tell her. It was Helen's nature to worry—and over this she worried herself almost ill.

When the next morning at breakfast she found by her plate a thick letter in Aunt Emma's handwriting, anxiously she tore it open.

Dayton, Ohio, April 27, 1913.

My Dear Helen:

I believe Warren paid for Alice's ticket the night she left, and I hasten to return the amount in this. If there is anything else that she owes you, will you kindly let us know, as neither George nor I wish to be further indebted to you? The check Warren sent George the week after the flood we will return the first of the month. I regret that we can not do so sooner.

It was, of course, a mistake that Alice ever visited you. I would never have suggested it had I dreamed that it would end as it has. As upset and distracted as we were after the flood, I see now that it would have been much better for her to have stayed here.

You seem to have failed wholly to understand her. She has an exceptionally nervous, sensitive nature. She has always been delicate, and we have always tried to keep from her any needless irritation or excitement.

That you should have let her start home at midnight, in an excited, unstrung state, showed, to say the least, a lack of consideration on your part. I would not have let the most casual visitor leave my house under such conditions, much less a girl like Alice. I can not understand what you and Warren were thinking of to allow it.

When Alice arrived she was in almost a state of collapse. It is needless for me to try to conceal the fact that I am very indignant about it all, and I think George shares my indignation, although he may not admit it so frankly.

I am exceedingly sorry that we ever troubled you, and I assure you we will not trouble you again.

AUNT EMMA.

"What's struck you?" demanded Warren, as Helen gasped her dismay and indignation.

"It's from Aunt Emma—the most AWFUL letter!" handing it across the table.

No More Relatives.

Warren read the letter and threw it down with a grim:

"Well, that lets us out! I guess we're about through trying to help any relatives. Understand? Your relatives or mine—we'll steer clear of the whole bunch."

"But, dear, MY people have never troubled us!"

"Well, I've noticed they're not above making it a convenience to stop here when they come to New York."

"Why, Warren, you know very well that Uncle Henry is the only one of my family that's EVER stopped here. And he was going to a hotel if you hadn't insisted. I don't see how you CAN infer that my relatives have made a convenience of us!"

"Well, I said we're through with ALL relatives, didn't I? And that's exactly what I meant. Hereafter if people want to come to New York for ten days or for one day—they'll put up at a hotel. From now on they're going to find it pretty blamed hard to work us! I guess one lesson along this line will be just about enough!"

Do You Know That—

The coming destruction of the Cafe Anglais in Paris is awakening many recollections among the older Londoners who used to visit Paris a dozen times in the year. Forty years ago the restaurant was famous for its food and frequenters, who included nearly every celebrity in Europe. It was then King Edward's favorite restaurant in Paris, always faultlessly conducted, although strongly dashed with bohemianism. All that was best in the social and artistic world was to be found there. It was one of the few restaurants which kept open through the siege, and there was ground for belief in the story that it never remembered afterward to reduce its prices.

The romance of a fortune that was made out of revenge is recalled in New York by the death of E. S. Welles, the inventor of a world-famous rat poison. When Mr. Welles and the man with whom he then worked were living in poverty, and had only a single loaf of bread between them and starvation, this last morsel of food was eaten by rats. Welles swore vengeance and set about discovering a means to rid the world of rats. After numerous experiments he began the manufacture of "Rough on Rats" in an old barn in Jersey City, and in four years he rose to affluence.

The new King of Greece is among the tallest of monarchs, but those who ascribe his inches solely to his Roman-off blood on his mother's side forget his stalwart Danish ancestors. His grandfather, King Christian IX, was remarkable for his height, as are nearly all the princes of his house. King Constantine's cousin, the present King of Denmark, has carried on the tradition, as he stands well over six feet without his boots.

Ethel Barrymore Says:

It is stupid not to know how to bring out your good points, or to let your prettiness fade.

Brains, brains, they are the inspiration and the real spirit of true beauty.

There is nothing immoral about beauty, though some old fogies seem to think so.

For beauty—brains, modesty, self-forgetfulness, happy home life and good taste.

I've just one pet theory—two glasses of cold water mornings and evenings.

Don't let fat accumulate.

By LILIAN LAUFERTY.

"IS she as pretty off the stage as on?"—haven't you often wondered that about your favorite star, or even some of the lesser lights who dazzle your eyes with their loveliness?

I know one stage beauty who is far lovelier in her little dressing room than all the glare and tinsel of stage illusion can make her. Ethel Barrymore's wonderfully expressive gray eyes, flower-like white throat and gracious manner are little private lovelinesses so fine and rare that you must miss them except at close range. And she is modest. THAT MODESTY ADDS A CHARM TO HER BEAUTY SUCH AS LITTLE MISS SELF-SATISFACTION WOULD DO WELL TO STUDY.

"You want me to talk about beauty," said Miss Barrymore. "Beauty means Maxine Elliott to me. Maxine Elliott, with her wonderful face and figure, and the splendid brain that animates it all. Brains, brains!—they are the inspiration and real spirit of true beauty.

"It is stupid not to know how to bring out your points or to let your prettiness fade.

Cold Water for Youth.

"A frilly black ruff back of a long, white throat, and a sparkling face animated by brains, will bring out the charm of the foreground. If you are wishing to look your prettiest, and look tired and drawn instead, plenty of cold water will bring the becoming flush of color to your face.

"You know there is nothing immoral about beauty, though some old fogies seem to think so. Think of making laws about the width of women's skirts, and whether two inches or two and a quarter inches of white throat should be shown by the low-cut blouse!

"Good cold cream will do a lot toward assuring you of a white throat. Good taste will tell you where to cut your blouse. Women ought to study these things, so men won't need to come out of their sphere and agitate about them. I told one fat old hypocritical mayor out West, who when forced to have a vice crusade in his wicked town began by making laws about the width of women's skirts, that what worried him was not having those feminine skirts wide enough to hide behind any more."

The star, who is "headlining" this week in the Palace Theater, laughed merrily.

"You interest yourself in divers causes?" The interviewer was laughing too.

"Oh, yes. Women must. Interest yourself in things outside yourself, FOR IF YOU THINK ABOUT YOURSELF YOU WILL BE SELF-CONSCIOUS, AND THAT MEANS AWKWARD AND UNBEAUTIFUL.

"Now, I am shy." Think of that, you little blushing girls, whose self-consciousness worries you to the point of tears. Beautiful, talented Ethel Barrymore is "shy." And her cure for self-consciousness is to be interested in things outside your own petty little self.

"On the stage I AM my part. I lose myself. In society I am one of the guests, and I forget Ethel Barrymore. But if I am asked at a dinner to get up and recite; or if in a public place people stare and force self-consciousness, I am not happy. ONE NEVER IS HAPPY IF THINKING OF SELF. Posing and acting unconcerned won't help it; brains and hard work will.

"This brings me to the beauty of a happy home life. Now, I have my husband, my two children, my tasks and duties. The glaring restaurant life does not bring out contentment, self-forgetfulness—or a consequent sweet expression."

"For beauty—brains, modesty, self-forgetfulness, happy home life and good taste," I mused.

"Brains cover it all. You have to be wise enough to bring out your good points, and to cover your poor ones until you can overcome them. You must have brains, and study to develop them, if you want to be more than a pretty picture that people glance at and forget."

"Haven't you some personal beauty secrets?" I asked boldly.

"I? Beauty secrets?" In a tone of honest amazement.

"Yes, you indeed."

"Oh, no. I study a lot, of course. I read 25 books up in Toronto last week. I am always reading—and studying music. And I guard my health." Miss Barrymore laughed and took an earnest nibble at the lemon she is relying on to help her overcome a threatened case of laryngitis. "A simple life! Not too much rich food—high thinking. I've just one pet theory—two glasses of cold water morning and evening. That is such a gentle stimulus to the physical well-being."

Lots of Water.

Over on the mantel shelf, next to the picture of two dear little kiddies, stood a bottle of mineral water.

"Has that a special medicinal value?" I asked.

"No, I just try to be sure of clear, pure water. I am not sure in the average theater—so I drink bottled water. But I never omit my before-going-to-bed drink of water.

"I drink milk, too. Though it is not safe to take much of that if you are threatened with an accumulation of pounds. You see, brains come in again about not growing fat in these days of sylphs. DON'T LET FAT ACCUMULATE. For in the process of losing it violently you are likely to get a drawn and haggard look. That means you are going to appear old. Soft facial contours guard against the appearance of age."

I looked approvingly at Miss Barrymore's smooth, facial contour and wonderful skin. She smiled shyly.

"If you know you are thin and emaciated—or if you overhear a fat creature of about 259 pounds net weight remarking, 'There's Ethel Barrymore at the next table, John. How stout she's grown—dear me, she is stouter than I am!'—why, then, in either case you are likely to become self-conscious.

"So, you see, I have to avoid an emaciated face and overweighted body as the modern Scylla and Charybdis—and so should all girls.

"You see, it is all a perfect circle. Your 'sentinel brain' must guard you against the necessity of self-consciousness—and I think that is the best beauty secret I know."

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

AS kin Commissioner General of the United States, Lysander John Appleton occupies a position the importance of which is well appreciated by his large and steadily increasing kin-ridden constituency.

It lies within his jurisdiction to decide to which side of the warring faction of a family belong the family jewels and the feather bed. When a woman dies, he decides the right of her children or her husband's next wife to her "things," that being the generic term for petticoats, hair switches, family albums, the butter knife, the hot water bag and the cameo pin the deceased left, and which assume great value when her husband marries again.

Speedy Opportunity.

It is he who draws an immovable line between kinship and friendship. "Is a man as near kin to his wife's ugly sister as he is to her sister who is beautiful?" was a question that remained undecided until Lysander John Appleton was elected to office, and it was he who decided in plain and unmistakable terms that a young husband's embarrassment in calling his mother-in-law "Mother" was not serious because of the speedy opportunity that would be offered for addressing her as "Grandma."

While there has been some complaint that battleships have not been ordered out to enforce his decisions—the helpless kin-hampered citizens believing that they had a right to enjoy the protection so freely accorded to Americans who voluntarily exile themselves to warring foreign lands—there has been a disposition to believe that General Appleton was doing his best.

Therefore, when it became known that he was to have a birthday every one who was awaiting a kin decision in his, or her favor, decided to propitiate him with a gift.

But what could it be? For it is conceded that to buy a suitable gift for a man requires a wisdom that is almost divine.

"He smokes!" was the joyous discovery of a woman who wanted a decision against her husband's mother. "He smokes," rang down the line of grandparents, fathers, mothers, uncles, sisters, cousins, aunts and all the in-laws, and everyone rejoiced as a man who is lost on strange roads rejoices when he sees a guide board.

The Presents Arrive.

The presents arrived by messenger, by vanloads, and by carloads. "We will unwrap them," said his wife, "and put them around his bed when he sleeps, and his eyes may behold them the first thing on his birthday morning."

They did so. And when Lysander John opened his eyes the next morning he saw them. Some were of China, others of cut glass, others of bronze, iron, copper, silver and one man hated his mother-in-law to the extent of sending one of gold. They were piled on the dresser and the chiffonier; they overflowed to the chairs and covered the floor and the bed—NINE HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-FOUR ASH TRAYS.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"WE never have supper in this house—my uncle always called it a useless extravagance. Instead, we defer tea until 6 o'clock and make that the final meal of the day. It was exactly five minutes to 7 when I finished my accounts and as I had had a hard day of it, I decided to go to bed early, after having first taken a walk as far as the old bridge, where I hoped that somebody would be waiting for me."

"I knew," said Cleek, gently. "I have heard the story. It would be Mr. Charles Drummond, would it not?"

He Was Absent.

"Yes. He was not there, however—something must have prevented his coming."

"Hum-m-! Go on, please."

"Before leaving the house, it occurred to me that I ought to look into the laboratory and see if there was anything my uncle would be likely to need for te night, as I intended to go straightway to bed on my return. I did so. He was sitting at his desk, immediately under the one window of which I have spoken and with his back to me, when I looked in. He answered my inquiry with a curt 'No—nothing. Get out and don't worry me!' I immediately shut the door and left him, returning here by way of the covered passage and going upstairs to make some necessary changes in my dress for the walk to the old bridge. When I came down ready for my journey I looked at the clock on the mantel over there. It was exactly 17 minutes to 8 o'clock. I had been a little longer in dressing than I had anticipated being; so, in order to save time in getting to the trysting place, I concluded to make a short cut by going out of the rear door and crossing diagonally through our grounds instead of going by the public highway, as usual. I had scarcely more than crossed the threshold when I ran slumo into Constable Gorham. As he is rather a favorite with good Mrs. Armyroyd here, I fancied that he had been paying her a visit and was just coming away from the kitchen. Instead, he rather startled me by stating that he had seen something which he thought best to come round and investigate. In short, that as he was patrolling the highway he had seen a man vault over the wall of our grounds, and, bending down, dart out of sight like a hare. He was almost positive that that man was Sir Ralph Droger. Of course, that frightened me almost out of my wits."

Desires To Do Both.

"Why?"

"There is bad blood between my uncle and Sir Ralph Droger—bitter, bad blood. As you perhaps know, my uncle held this ground on a life lease from the Droger estate. That is to say, so long as he lived or refused to vacate that lease, no Droger could oust him nor yet lift one spadeful of earth from the property."

"Does Sir Ralph desire to do either?"

"He desires to do both. Borings secretly made have manifested the fact that both Bovey coal and native copper underlie the place. Sir Ralph wishes to tear down the Round House and this building and to begin mining operations. My uncle, who has been offered the full value of every stick and stone, has always obstinately refused to budge one inch or lessen the lease by one-half hour. 'It is for the term of life,' he has always said, 'and for the term of my life I'll hold it!'"

"Ohio!" said Cleek; and then puckered up his lips as if about to whistle.

LIFE'S STRUGGLE WITH ILLNESS

Miss Stewart Tells How She Suffered from 16 to 45 years old—How Finally Cured.

EUPHEMIA, OHIO.—"Because of total ignorance of how to care for myself when verging into womanhood, and from taking cold when going to school, I suffered from a displacement, and each month I had severe pains and nausea which always meant a lay-off from work for two to four days from the time I was 16 years old.

"I went to Kansas to live with my sister, and while there a doctor told me of the Pinkham remedies but I did not use them then as my faith in patent medicines was limited. After my sister died I came home to Ohio to live and that has been my home for the last 18 years.

"The Change of Life came when I was 47 years old, and about this time I saw my physical condition plainly described in one of your advertisements. Then I began using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I can not tell you or any one the relief it gave me in the first three months. It put me right where I need not lay off every month, and during the last 18 years I have not paid out two dollars to a doctor, and have been blessed with excellent health for a woman of my age, and I can thank Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for it.

"Since the Change of Life is over I have been a maternity nurse, and being wholly self-supporting I can not overestimate the value of good health. I have now earned a comfortable little home just by sewing and nursing since I was 52 years old. I have recommended the Compound to many with good results, as it is excellent to take before and after childbirth."—Miss Evelyn Adelia Stewart, Euphemia, Ohio.

Bad for Johnny

LITTLE Johnny Squildig spoiled what otherwise would have been a pleasant call last evening, and it is feared established a deadly hatred between the Squildig and Snaggs households.

Mr. and Mrs. Snaggs had "just dropped in," and the conversation went the full range of the weather and the fashions and the health of the babies of the neighborhood between the women, while the men exhausted the possibilities of the baseball season, and had got well into politics, when Johnny, who found the talk uninteresting, asked Mr. Snaggs if he had brought his fiddle with him.

"My fiddle?" replied Snaggs, in surprise. "What fiddle?"

"Why, your second fiddle."

"My second fiddle? Why, Johnny, I am not a musician. I have no fiddle. I don't play.

"But papa says you do," persisted Johnny.

"Johnny, I think you had better go upstairs to bed," said his papa.

"Yes, it's quite time," added Mrs. Squildig. "Little folks should be seen, not heard."

But Johnny was not to be gagged in that style. He went on:

"Papa says you play second fiddle at your house, and I think you might have brought it with you."

Then Johnny was marched out of the room by his papa, and his mamma followed to assist in the subsequent exercises, while the Snaggs put on their things and walked solemnly home with heads unusually erect and a feeling of unrest in their bosoms.

.:. The Real Truth .:.

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

THE real truth, children dear, is that Sleeping Beauty slept with her mouth open, and snored.

You are always hearing women talk of the "nameless longing" in their hearts, as if it were something beyond the comprehension of mere man. If she is single this nameless longing is for a lover, and if she is married, it is for money.

In the books a woman returns a letter from a discarded lover unread, but in real life curiosity would arouse her from a deathbed, if need be, to break the seal.

In the stories she gives a gulping sob as she leaves the room after a quarrel, and he is Gone Out of Her Life Forever. In real life she has to go to the shop where he works next day to buy sausage, and he waits on her.

The Suffragettes in speech and pamphlet tell how wives have to account to their husbands for every penny they spend. If the men had to listen to the account of how their wives spend every penny there wouldn't be insane asylums enough to hold them.

In books a girl's neck looks like white marble, and those who see it are driven to writing poetry. In real life a girl's neck causes every housekeeper present to make a mental note to buy spareribs for dinner next day.

In the books a young woman never mentions "the dear old home" without moist eyes, and in real life she never lives in one home longer than five years. In the stories there is always a trusted servant, who has been with the family forty years; in reality no servant is kept as long as forty weeks. In fiction a poem or song about "baby's shoes" will cause a woman to dissolve in tears. In real life, if the stork whispers to a woman that he is going to give her an occasion for buying a baby's shoe, she is mad enough to bite nails in two.

The books say a great deal about the "children's hour," a period at twilight when the children climb on mother's or father's knee and listen to fairy stories. In real life, if father is a farmer, he is engaged at this poetic period in feeding the hogs and mother is doing the milking. Or, if they live in town, he is hanging to a car strap and she is running to the delicatessen.

In the books the children gather at mother's knee for their good-night prayers. In the days when every mother believed in having her children pray, there were so many children in the family that they couldn't have gathered around her knee unless her limbs were built like those of an extension table.

A mixture of castor oil with the white of an egg has been recommended for burns. It allays the pain more quickly and causes the wound to heal more rapidly than any other application. The eggs are broken and emptied into a bowl, and the castor oil gradually and slowly poured in while the eggs are beaten. Enough oil is added to make a thick, creamy paste, which is applied to the burn with a feather. The applications are repeated often enough to prevent their becoming dry or sticky. It is best to abstain from any dressings, leaving the surface uncovered.

Thrills of a novel kind are promised for tourists to Sicily if an American hotel proprietor can carry out his plans. He has bought the site on the summit of an inactive but not extinct volcano, and will build a hotel there. A special feature of the hotel will be an underground chamber on the bed of the crater, with an asbestos floor, where those who are sated with excitement can sleep in the expectation that they may be called at any minute by an eruption.

Taking Care of Bob

Today's Complete Short Story.

"AMY said," began the girl who likes to talk, "that Bob was gentle as a kitten and so affectionate that in contrast a pair of love birds were petrified images of heartlessness. She said many other things, too, over the telephone about the bull terrier that in a misguided moment they purchased some time ago, but that was because she was trying to make me think I was crazy to have him while she and her husband went to Panama.

"I was to pass a few days with her and get acquainted with the paragon of dogs. Amy said that she always felt perfectly safe with Bob in the apartment, because he would chew up any burglar who appeared. On the way over I grew rather worried, wondering whether Bob was clever enough to distinguish between a caller who was a burglar and a caller who wasn't. Then I recalled Bob's gentleness and took heart.

"When the front door was opened I thought the end had come. Something huge and white fell across the hall table, and, stepping all over me, attempted to climb on my shoulder and perch there. I screamed faintly and wondered if the Pasteur treatment hurt much. Then I was conscious of Amy's voice.

Very Affectionate.

"'He's so affectionate!' said Amy in a proud voice. 'I never knew him to take such an instant liking to any one before! He realizes that you love dogs, I am sure!'

"'I'm crazy about them!' I assured her as I intrenched myself behind two chairs and a davenport. 'However, I don't care for those aerial effects myself! Can't he keep his feet on the ground?'

"Amy looked hurt and said she should have thought that I would appreciate a dumb animal's fondness for me. She was interrupted by Bob's giving an exhibition of his dumbness when he saw the postman out of the window. Dashing at the glass at the speed of 60 miles an hour, he let out a roar that shook the apartment. Then he turned and wagged his tail and twinkled his eyes. 'I think these dogs greatly enjoy life. It must be fine to feel that you can make the whole universe bow to the ground and climb trees if you wriggle your chin or flop an ear.

"I unpacked my suitcase neatly, and then when I went to dress for dinner I found that Bob had eaten the heels off my evening slippers.

"'It's the funniest thing!' Amy said, enthusiastically, when I wailed out the trouble. 'That dog always has had the most insane fondness for shoe heels! We couldn't have a decent shoe in the house when we first got him. He is so intelligent!'

"When Bob was taken out of doors it was with as many precautions as though he were a man-eating tiger. For my part I would as soon sally forth with the jungle beast as with that animal. He had a harness on of battleship leather—well, they have battleship linoleum, anyhow—and snapped to that was a leash with a loop to go over your wrist, and then you had a whip.

"Hung On and Slid."

"I felt just as though the band was going to play as I entered the sawdust ring when I took Bob outdoors that day. He shot up the street instantly, and as it was slippery I hung on and slid, shrieking at him to stop. Pretending it was a game, that diabolical animal merely tore on, whisking me around a corner into a perambulator. My impression is that I leaped the perambulator, but maybe I crawled under—anyhow, I was a half block ahead before the nurse had picked herself up from the grounds, and Bob was so impetuous that I couldn't return to inquire.

"It might have been all right if he hadn't seen a cat. Amy said afterward reproachfully that I shouldn't have allowed him to see a cat. However, she did not say whether I should have run in front of Bob and held my hands over his eyes or chloroformed him till the cat had strolled by. If I had fancied up to now that Bob had been hastening I was mistaken. He had been dawdling, but when he saw that cat he turned on full speed.

"All that I remember is hurtling through the air, hanging to the leash for dear life, for Amy had cautioned me that I had the safety of the public in my hands, and so I did not dare let go. Bob spread himself low over the ground and just ate up the distance. We chased that cat down the street, then through an alley and then whizzed up the steps of a big house just as the front door opened and a perfectly lovely man emerged attired for an afternoon wedding or a tea-fight.

"I let Bob go then, because I fell over the top step.

He Was Sympathetic.

"The tea-fight man, after rising from where he had been tossed by Bob, picked me up. There were awful sounds of riot from inside the house, where Bob had treed the cat on a mantel. It really was an unusual situation.

"'He is such an intelligent dog,' I stuttered. 'And so affectionate.'

"The tea-fight man actually grinned. 'I owned a terrier once myself!' he confided, understandingly.

"Just then Bob dashed out and climbed into my lap with his muddy paws, just as though he was not something slightly less than a young hippopotamus. Laying his huge head on my shoulder, he sighed contentedly, as though he had had a very pleasant afternoon, indeed.

"Oh, yes, I'm going to take him while Amy is away. I think a little excitement will do me good."

SHARP DECLINE IN PRICE OF COTTON

Good Weather and Bearish Cable News Encourage Active Selling Throughout Day.

NEW YORK, May 3.—There was a featureless opening to-day in the cotton market, and first prices were 1 point higher to 4 points lower than Friday's final. Continental demand for new crop openings imparted strength to cables, but the local market did not follow this lead.

Weather news and sentiment was bearish and those who have been favoring the bull side for an upturn seem to have lost faith and turn aggressive sellers shortly after the call. Wall Street led the selling movement on continued favorable weather. Some of the larger spot houses were noticeable sellers. The buying was scattered and very light, attributed chiefly to weekend short covering. This, however, did not stimulate the market, and prices were kept down at the early low level.

The bears had many depressing factors to depend on. About the most essential factor was the report that considerable freight room had been canceled and cotton will be retendered on May.

Weather predicted over Sunday was favorable. Mississippi will be visited by showers, which are badly needed. Arkansas, Texas and Oklahoma are due to have good rains and lower temperatures, except in West Texas, where the weather will be fair and colder.

The market turned suddenly dull and inactive during the closing hour, and prices fluctuated narrowly. At the close the market was steady, with prices at a net decline of 3 to 6 points from the final quotations of Friday.

HAYWOOD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, May 3.—The foreign press takes a more hopeful view of the that Austria will grant a further respite political situation t.is morning, stating to arrange matters with Montenegro over Scutari. Berlin says the opinion prevails that the critical point in the uation has been passed.

Liverpool is good, with futures about 3 points better than due. Spots 4 points lower. Repeated rumors of pending labor troubles in Lancashire are being coupled with persistent information from New York that the interests which took the first May tenders are cancelling freight room engagements and will retender the cotton on May.

Weather indications are for the rainstorm to move on the North Central belt and cause general rains over Sunday in the Western and Central States and in the Eastern belt at the beginning of next week. A moderate cold wave is following and will cause a drop in temperatures in the Northwestern quarter, but so far no injurious temperatures are likely and the general rain due to this cold wave is the principal factor to consider. Our market declined a little on the favorable weather prospects and on the drop of 27½ points in French rentes, which caused doubt in regard to the improvement in politics, but there was no great desire to sell.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Logan & Bryan: We feel that conservatism is the order in making sales.

Thompson, Towle & Co.: We would buy on good declines or sell on substantial rallies from present levels.

Sternberger, Sinn & Co.: Nothing.

Hayden, Stone & Co.: There is likely to be cotton for sale on every rise in the new crop, as long as weather continues fairly satisfactory.

Watch for the announcement of our auction sale of Bungalows and lots in Sunday's American.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, May 3.—The cotton market was rather active at the opening to-day, but later turned dull in absence of any special support. The larger spot houses were good sellers. Wall Street sold aggressively.

* * *

After the call Geer, Cone, Hartcorn, Russell, Schill and Rait were good buyers, but certain brokers with spot house connection furnished the market with plenty of cotton, and prices broke sharply. Motchell, Schill, Martin, Young, Newman and Burnett were among the leading sellers.

* * *

Flinn was a good seller of December.

* * *

Liverpool cables: "Trade on continent very bad. Italy almost decided to go short time."

* * *

Latest quotation on French rentes shows another 10-point decline, making it 27½ down.

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas generally cloudy, hard rain at Amarillo, San Antonio, Abilene; Oklahoma generally cloudy and threatening."

* * *

Liverpool cables: "American middling fair, 7.32d; good middling, 6.88d; middling, 6.68d; low middling, 6.64d; good ordinary, 6.20d; ordinary, 5.86d.

NEW ORLEANS, May 3.—Hayward & Clark: The map shows fair in Alabama and Atlantics. Cloudy elsewhere; raining in many Texas towns; good rains overnight in South and Southwest Texas. Prospects are for rainstorm moving eastward and causing general precipitation over Sunday in Central and Western States.

* * *

Cordill-wires from Memphis: "Jackson, Grenada to Memphis through hill section of Mississippi, soil in excellent condition, plowing about completed and planting nearing completion. Some replanting necessary in central part of State. Weather has been too cool for rapid germination, but start as a whole very favorable. River falling rapidly; situation greatly relieved in Arkansas and Delta. Weather warmer and clear."

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Friday's cotton market disillusioned the bulls; the bears had been disillusioned by Thursday's market; thus Saturday's market will probably reflect greater respect on both sides, and more open-mindedness among the talent and trade. The promised cold wave did not arrive, delayed, not dissipated. The weather was favorable all over the belt. Coodiness in Texas promising an early and not unwelcome rain.

"Liverpool reported labor troubles in Lancashire general, but liable to spread, according to one cablegram. Under the circumstances, there was an excuse for a reaction somewhere, and selling was the order. At the close the talent regarded the market as a scalping affair, and one capable of being moved in either direction, within narrow limits, according to immediate influences. Secretary Hester's week-end statistical ebulations caused a variety of comment, ranging all the way from favorable to unfavorable. In spite of a much smaller interior movement than last year, the loss in stock at the thirty counted towns was 36,479, against 20,473 a year.

Estimated receipts for Monday:

	1913.	1912.
New Orleans	1,800 to 2,200	1,267
Galveston	3,800 to 4,800	2,665

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—The weather will be unsettled with showers and thunderstorms during the next thirty-six hours in the region of the Great Lakes, the Ohio and Mississippi Valleys, and the East Gulf States, and fair and warmer tonight and Sunday in the Atlantic States.

Temperatures will be somewhat lower Sunday in the upper lake region and the Mississippi Valley.

Forecast until 8 p. m. Sunday:
Georgia: Fair to-night and Sunday.

Wheat—No. 2 red ..... 105 @107
Corn—No. 2 77
Oats—No. 2 ..... 35¼

CHICAGO, May 3.—May wheat was about ⅝c higher this morning with shorts anxious to buy and the July was up ⅛c. September was also small fraction better. The speculative trade seemed to take more stock in the further decline in English consols, which they believed to be a reflection of the unfavorable political outlook in the far East. Liverpool was higher, as also was Budapest, while there were losses at Berlin and Paris, the latter quite sharp.

Corn was strong, as the offerings were small and the demand somewhat better.

Oats were easier with the increased offerings.

Hogs were lower at the yards, and while pork was steady the other commodities were a shade off in price.

Wheat closed with losses of ⅛c to ¾c and there was little recovery from the bottom prices reached. The business was rather quiet on the whole, and it was confined mainly to the ranks of the professionals. The cash trade was small at Chicago, with only 25,000 bushels changing hands. Export bids on wheat from abroad were reported at ⅝c below those of yesterday. Primary receipts of wheat this week were 4,748,000 bushels, or 2,400,000 bushels larger than a year ago. It was reported that 200,000 bushels No. 1 Northern wheat sold here to go to store.

Corn closed ¼c to ¾c lower and oats were off ⅝c for September, while the nearby months were higher.

Cash sales of corn were 110,000 bushels and of oats 75,000 bushels.

Hog products were lower all around.

DULLEST DAY OF YEAR IN STOCKS

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, May 3.—Pressure was exerted against the list at the opening of the stock market to-day, and general declines were registered. Canadian Pacific led the market with a loss of 2 points, being influenced by weakness in London. There was little demand for stocks, and trading was mainly professional.

Among the other losses were: Steel common, ½; Union Pacific, ⅝; Reading, ¼; Amalgamated Copper, ⅝; American Can, ½; American Car Foundry, ⅛; Erie, ½; Great Northern preferred, ¼; Lehigh Valley, ⅛; Pennsylvania, ⅛. Southern Pacific and New York Central made fractional gains. The curb was steady.

Americans in London were quiet above New York parity.

The market closed steady. Government bonds unchanged; other bonds firm.

POULTRY, PET and LIVE STOCK

Take Good Care Of the Old Hen And Her Chicks

Coops Are as Essential to Success as Is the Food in Poultry Raising.

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

Take good care of the hen with the brood of youngsters.

Great is the variety one finds in coops made for the care of the old hen and her chicks. Barrels on their sides, barrels on end with part of the staves knocked out to allow the little ones to pass in and out at will, A-shaped coops, and sometimes the hens are allowed to find shelter the best they can.

A coop about two feet square and about two feet high in front, with the roof slanting toward the rear, makes a very good home for a hen and little ones. We always keep a roll of felt roofing for covering these coops as we make them. It makes an ideal covering and takes but a little pitch to run the water off. The front of the coop should be of one-inch mesh wire netting, with a slatted door to protect the chicks from the rain. If there be danger from cats, rats, etc., a covered wire netting run should be provided for joining the front of the coop. This will keep out intruders and keep in the chicks.

Coops Should Be Light.

All coops and attachments should be made as light as possible so they will not be burdensome to handle. A loose or removable board bottom is a good thing, too. Much food is lost by feeding carelessly upon the ground, where it is fouled and tramped under foot. This carelessness not only results in the wasting of the feed, but what is still worse, the soured food eaten by the chicks causes indigestion and bowel trouble, and the loss of many good chickens. Food should not be scattered upon the ground except the whole dry grain feed.

Raise all the feed at home you possibly can, and thus reduce the cash outlay for feed. Use all the offal and by-products you can. Watch your chances to secure feed at a bargain—not spoiled food—but by watching one can frequently pick up seed wheat at a bargain where some seedsman has become overstocked. I have at times bought wheat slightly burned or charred after a warehouse fire. If it is dry, it is all right, but if it has been wet, it can be spread out in the sun to dry, stirring it frequently during the process. This charred grain is not only purchased at a very low price, but the fact that it has been charred makes it very wholesome feed—exercising care, of course, all the while that it does not sour while drying.

Rheumatism or Cramps.

Judge F. J. Marshall: I have a hen that is lifeless, sits around most of the time drawn up or drooping. When she walks she seems to be all right, but if she tries to run she can not pick up her feet and tries to use only her wings. I have used the B. D. dip on her and also bathed her legs several times in kerosene. She has been in this condition now for more than a week. I will greatly appreciate some advice on this case. Respectfully, R. W. W.
Camak, Ga.

ANSWER—Your hen is suffering from rheumatic cramps. So long as she is comparatively quiet she does not suffer much, but when she undertakes to walk or run then it takes hold of her; she attempts to fly to relieve the strain on her limbs. You do not say whether her legs are very scaly or rough. In cases of extreme roughness it stiffens them up so they can not walk, except with difficulty. We should advise taking her away from the rest of the flock and feeding her upon very simple rations—bread and milk, with buttermilk to drink. In fact, it would be better, if the hen is fat, to give her nothing but the buttermilk for a week if you can get it. If she will not drink it at first, give it to her with a tablespoon, three or four at a time, and three or four times a day. This will be some trouble, but if she is a hen you value it may be the means of getting her in condition again. We take it that she has been fed too heavily of concentrated foods to induce laying until she has gotten out of condition in that way. I do not believe much in medicines, but think that with the proper manner of feeding results can usually be brought about. Feed more of green stuff and a little less of the highly concentrated foods. See that your stock is housed in good, dry, comfortable quarters. In the absence of the buttermilk use epsom salts freely in the drinking water, and feed lightly of dry bread moistened in warm water.

Builders of Atlanta

Decatur St. Stores Sold for $125,000

Hugh Richardson Sells Parcel to Client—Rental $7,800 a Year.

Hugh Richardson has sold through J. H. Ewing, of the Smith & Ewing Real Estate Agency, to a client of that agency, a block of stores at 123-129 Decatur Street, for $125,000.

This property is located between Courtland Street and Piedmont Avenue, and the building is three stories high. It is leased for several years at $7,800 a year.

The name of the buyer was withheld.

Whitehall Street Grade.

Although some objection has been encountered to the proposed change of grade in Whitehall Street from Mitchell to Forsyth Streets, property owners are hoping that this can be overcome. Manufacturing concerns are said to object on the ground that the improvement would injure their property, but those who favor the work contend that this damage would be slight when compared with the benefits. Charles H. Black outlined the case yesterday and presented waivers for damages. The committee will meet again next Friday to continue the discussion. Mr. Black stated that some big improvements are contemplated with regrading. These may not be made unless the work goes ahead.

M. L. Petty Again in Business.

Captain M. L. Petty, who sold out his real estate business the first of the year with the intention of moving away to Albany, has decided to open an office at 125 North Pryor Street, where he will do a general real estate business. Captain Petty was formerly with the firm of Grant & Petty, and is one of the best-known realty men in this city. He will deal in farms as well as city property, and of the former he says:

"I consider Southwest Georgia one of the best parts of the State for investments at the present time. You can buy the very best farm lands in that section for $10 to $50 an acre. I look for business all over the country to improve in a short time. I think Atlanta is the least disturbed over tariff matters of any city in the country."

Mothers, Keep Your Babies' Hands Covered

And Train Them From the Beginning to Keep Their Fingers Out of Their Mouths

Copyright, 1913.

Millions of mothers worry because "There is something wrong with the child's stomach."

Digestion is bad, sleep is irregular, the lips are crackled, unhealthy looking—there are signs of the dreaded colitis, which takes so many thousands of children to the grave.

False diet, foolish feeding based on ignorance, AND EATING AT IRREGULAR HOURS, menace the health of many children.

The mother that has lost one child or more lives in constant apprehension, and is almost in despair when signs of illness show themselves.

We want to-day to impress upon all mothers ONE THING THAT THEY CAN DO FOR THEIR CHILDREN.

One of the most famous and one of the ablest doctors in this country was called in by a mother to take care of a child that showed signs of illness, and his first question was this:

"Does your baby put its fingers in its mouth a great deal?"

He then impressed upon the mother—the child was not quite two years old—that she must above all things prevent her baby from putting dirty fingers into its mouth.

And this is the idea that we want to impress upon all mothers TO-DAY, and that without putting them to the expense of seeing the doctor quoted above. From him a few words of advice would cost twenty-five dollars.

Remember that children are sometimes poisoned by disease germs IN THEIR FOOD.

But FAR OFTENER THEY ARE POISONED BY GERMS STICKING TO THEIR FINGERS WHICH THEY PUT INTO THEIR MOUTHS.

It doesn't matter how careful you may be, your child is bound to creep on the floor, to fall down upon its hands on the sidewalk, to grasp a railing, etc.

Whenever a child's hands touch the sidewalks, or railings, or the floor, THEY ARE APT TO COME IN CONTACT WITH GERMS THAT PRODUCE DISEASE.

In the big cities especially this danger is great.

Ignorant men who should be controlled and punished by law sit upon the benches in the parks, spitting upon the sidewalks where little children are put to play.

This is actually a crime against human life—a crime none the less dreadful because it is based upon ignorance.

To see a consumptive sunning himself on a bench in the public park is pitiful. You pity the unfortunate man, as he coughs painfully, and he deserves pity.

But, as he scatters about him the germs of his disease, he is actually endangering and often destroying lives of healthy children that go to play in that park.

It is impossible to keep children shut in. It is impossible to keep them from the parks and the streets and from crawling about on the floor!

BUT IT IS POSSIBLE TO PROTECT THEM.

To the mother whom we have mentioned the able doctor said:

"Keeping your child's hands washed frequently is a good thing—but it is no protection.

"Keep COTTON GLOVES ON THE CHILD'S HANDS when it is playing anywhere outside of its nursery—and, better still, keep them on also when it plays on the nursery floor.

"A child will not put cotton gloves into its mouth—it doesn't like the feeling."

There is very simple advice for mothers that worry about their children's health.

If your baby is in the teething stage, you know how the wise old mothers will tell you that you must EXPECT trouble at that time.

You are told that teething affects the stomach and causes sickness, bowel complaint, etc.

Teething DOES affect the child's DIGESTION. But it does not actually introduce into its system the germs that produce disease such as the dreaded Summer complaint.

Children are subject to disease especially when teething, BECAUSE WHEN TEETHING THEY ALWAYS HAVE THEIR FINGERS IN THEIR MOUTHS, and they are always introducing dangerous germs into their systems in that way.

Two pairs of cotton gloves for the baby would not cost very much—and we wish that the managers of big stores would put such gloves on sale as an act of public usefulness, and advertise them at the very lowest possible price.

Occasionally a child suffering from teething will put its fingers in its mouth in spite of wearing cotton gloves. In such a case very rough woolen gloves may be procured that will certainly answer the purpose.

Mothers can do much, also, by making it a habit from the baby's first day to train it to keep its fingers out of its mouth.

A gentle touch of the hand each time that the little fingers are put toward the lips will gradually accustom the child to the notion that its hands and its mouth must be kept separate.

Meanwhile we advise mothers of children under five years of age—and, better still, up to seven years of age—to try this experiment of keeping them gloved with cotton when they play on park sidewalks or street sidewalks exposed to disease germs.

P. S.—Some mothers will say: "Well, my baby always had his hands in his mouth, and HE didn't have gloves, and HE didn't get any disease."

We are glad to hear it. But what is true of one child is not true of another. And what is true of a child one day is not true of the same child ANOTHER DAY.

A child absolutely healthy and strong is able to throw off and get rid of the disease germs that get into its system. A perfectly healthy child with a heart acting strongly and the blood in good condition could swallow a good many tuberculosis germs without getting consumption.

But as soon as something happens, when the vitality is low, the heart action feeble, THE GERMS ARE NOT THROWN OFF.

They establish a foothold, they breed with lightning rapidity, and then it is too late to save the child. Prevention is better than cure, and there is no better prevention than keeping the child's own hands from putting diseases into its mouth.

EGGS IS EGGS

Absolutely the Last Egg Joke.

Breach of Promise Suits

Dorothy Dix Says That Every Man Has a Right to Change His Mind—No Woman Who Is Really Hurt Will Drag Her Wounds Before the Public For Money.

By DOROTHY DIX.

A TELLING blow for sex equality has just been struck by a Brooklyn Supreme Court Justice who has ruled that the right to change your mind is not the sole prerogative of woman. Mere man has the same privilege.

In a breach of promise case, in which a fair lady was suing a faithless swain for renegging on his promise to marry her the Justice made the following rule:

"In the modern days of suffrage agitation," he said, "we must not be too severe with the men, as long as no unfair advantage has been taken of the women.

"I am not going to let this young man rot in jail because he has changed his mind about marrying this girl. We must remember that the lady always reserves to herself the right to change her mind at any moment, and it seems to me the man ought to have the same right."

Good for the Judge! That decision is based on good sound sense and justice. Moreover, it proves what we suffragists have always contended, and that is that equal rights for women will mean equal rights for men, and be just as much to men's advantage as they will be to women's.

The breach of promise suit has never been anything more or less than blackmail disguised as sentiment. No woman whose heart was really hurt would drag her wounds before the public for the sake of a little money. No woman with a vestige of delicacy or refinement in her composition would try to force a man to marry her who had tired of her and was trying to get rid of her.

Not a Business Deal.

It is absurdity to contend that a proposal of marriage is in the same class with a business proposition, and that a man should be held financially responsible for not carrying out a matrimonial engagement as he would be for not fulfilling a business contract. The very essense of courtship are the emotions of love, attraction, fascination and desire that a woman rouses in a man's breast, and when these are gone—when he no longer loves her, when she no longer attracts or fascinates him and he has ceased to want her—her claim upon him is forfeited, and as a matter of fact, it would be a nice point of law to decide whether the woman who can no longer deliver the goods isn't the one who has defaulted on the contract, and not the man.

Moreover, Cupid is no piker. He is a dead game sport, and whenever a man or a woman sits down to the love game he or she must play the limit and take the risks. In addition, this is also to be said—that although women generally get a cold deal in matrimony they hold the trump hand in courtship. For it is the custom of men to woo maids with flowers and candy, and books and theater tickets, and restaurant feeds, so that Romeo has paid his score as he went along, and even if he balks at the altar the account still stands in the woman's favor. Truly, 'tis better to have been wooed and jilted than never to have been wooed at all!

In deciding that a man has a right to change his mind about getting married and cannot be assessed heavy damages for doing so the Brooklyn Justice has done a notable service to humanity. The breach of promise case should be thrown out of court and a man not only given the privilege of withdrawing from a matrimonial engagement if he decides that for any reason it would be best for him to do so, but he should be backed up by public opinion in doing it.

Thousands of men, carried away by the impulse of the moment or some wave of transient sentiment, have popped the question to girls that they knew were unfitted to be their wives, and rued their folly before the words were off of their lips. Thousands of other men have honestly thought themselves in love at the time they became engaged to women, but found themselves disillusioned long before their wedding day. Thousands of men are so completely out of love and disenchanted with their prospective wives that they would rather face the hangman than the preacher on their marriage morn.

Want to Be Jilted.

These men would give ten years of their lives to unsay the words they have uttered, to take back the promise they have given, to be free of the women that they know will hang like millstones about their necks, but they lack the courage to break their engagements. Many a man does everything in his power to force the girl to jilt him. He picks quarrels with her. He neglects her. Sometimes he even tries to tell her that he doesn't love her any more, but the more he attempts to break away, the tighter she clings, and the more she weeps, and in the end he gives in and lets himself be led like a lamb to the slaughter because he hasn't the nerve to hurt her or to be branded as a quitter.

Let no man think that he is doing a noble and heroic thing to marry a woman after he has ceased to love her. He is doing her the most cruel wrong that one human being can inflict on another, and it would be a kinder act if he killed her than it is to marry her. He is sure to neglect her, to let her see how she bores him and what a burden she is on him, and to break her heart with a thousand little evidences of his indifference.

It takes his martyrdom out on her, and she pays every day of her life for his having been coerced into an unwilling marriage. The affection of a man for his wife cools down from the boiling point to sub-normal even when he's crazy about her when they got married, but Heaven help the unfortunate woman whose husband's love was at the zero point on their wedding day! Believe me, she knows what a long, cold winter is like.

Therefore, in justice to himself and kindness to the woman, any man should take advantage of his right to change his mind if he decides that he has changed his heart, no matter how many engagement rings he has given, nor how many vows of constancy he has sworn. Let him duck and run, though he were at the very foot of the altar. It would save his life, and be a blessing to the woman.

:: The Fall of New Orleans ::

By DR. T. B. GREGORY.

THE fall of New Orleans—51 years ago—was a blow to the Confederacy from which it never recovered.

At the time Farragut and Porter were steaming triumphantly up to the levees of the Creole city at the mouth of the Father of Waters, McClellan was gathering his mighty host for the "On to Richmond" campaign which was to end, a little while later, in ignominious defeat on the banks of the James; and, guided by the matchless genius of Lee, the Army of Northern Virginia was to score victory after victory on the soil of the Old Dominion; but at New Orleans the Federals held the grand strategic point, the key to the great river which penetrated far into the territory of the seceded States, and divided from its eastern half the rich cornfields of the West and Southwest, upon which, later on, the Confederacy was to depend for the bread and meat that was to maintain its armies.

The Blockade Policy.

The policy of holding New Orleans at all hazard, as the one supremely vital point on the line of defense, seems never to have entred the minds of the Confederate authorities; and the city was surrendered without a tenth part of the resistance that was afterward made at many points of much less strategic importance.

From first to last the Mississippi River was the key to the military problem with both sides. Which side commanded that river would also command the issue of the struggle.

It was no new thought. From as far back as the earliest period of the French explorations on the North American Continent, it was clearly perceived by the explorers that the great river was, as well in political as in geographical significance, the master feature of the whole situation. That was why Frenchman, Spaniard and Englishman looked upon the mighty stream with such greedy eyes, and resolved, come what might, to contend for it to the last man.

Jefferson saw the political importance of the Mississippi and it was for that reason that he was most anxious to consummate the "Louisiana Purchase," or, if that was impossible, to at least secure possession of the city of New Orleans. The country that held New Orleans would hold the Mississippi River, and the country that controlled the Mississippi River would control the political fortunes of the North American Continent. American history, from the treaty of Ghent straight down to the final rounding out of the Republic with the successful negotiations of the Gadsden Purchase, is full of diplomatic gymnastics regarding the Mississippi River.

In the light of all this, it will be seen how great a victory it was that Farragut won when he silenced Forts St. Philip and Jackson and steamed on to the capture of New Orleans.

What Are the Real Wonders of the World As It Exists To-day?

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

"I AM convinced," says an epistolary friend, "that the Panama Canal is the greatest wonder of construction that the world has ever known, and I don't see how it is ever to be exceeded, unless the United States should carry out Mr. Riker's idea of diverting and controlling the Gulf Stream by means of a gigantic jetty thrown across the banks of Newfoundland. But I should like to know whether you regard such things as a true measure of the superiority of modern times. Couldn't you make a list of seven modern wonders that would better represent the real progress of mankind?"

Has Been Going Forward.

If I were going to offer a list of seven modern wonders, conceived in this sense, of the application of the mind to something outside itself, I should wish, first, to define the term "modern," and I would make it include the three centuries that have elapsed since the days of Galileo. The world has never gone backward since his time. He was the first great experimental philosopher, and when he dropped a ten-pound and a one-pound cannon ball from the Leaning Tower of Pisa, and proved, by occular demonstration, that they took the same time to fall to the bottom, he overthrew forever the ancient method of drawing blind inferences about the physical world out of the mind, instead of using the senses as a test and the intelligence as a guide and interpreter.

So, I should head the list of seven modern wonders with the discovery of the Law of Gravitation, which Galileo began experimentally, and Newton completed mathematically.

To that law—although we do not yet know what gravitation is in its essence—we owe not only our accurate knowledge of the universe, but many of our greatest engineering triumphs.

Second on the list, in the order of time, might stand the invention of the Telescope, which, as a means of research, must also be credited to Galileo, who worked entirely in the modern spirit of using the mind as a means and not as an end in the exploration of the material world. By the invention of the telescope, and its corollary, the microscope, modern man enabled himself to penetrate, at the same time, the mysteries of illimitable space and the secrets of the realm of the infinitely little.

Third, let us place the development of the science of Chemistry, which has taught us so much about the constitution of matter, and which, some think, may yet reveal the secret of life itself. To reveal only a small part of what chemistry has achieved would, in itself, require a long article. There is hardly any part of human life and activity in which it does not play its role. But there are certain things that have grown out of chemical experimentation which are, perhaps, worthy to stand by themselves in our list.

Among these I would put, as the fourth wonder, Photography. Beginning as a means of obtaining pictures of the human face, more accurate in their details than the hand could draw, photography has now become a means of discovering things invisible to the eye, both upon the earth and in the heavens. The greatest astronomical discoveries of recent years have been effected by photography. By using the X-ray, and by selecting certain chosen waves of light, we can picture, by photography, things hidden behind barriers impenetrable to ordinary vision, and things on distant bodies in space which are veiled from the eye by the confusing effects of too many kinds of light.

Fifth, I would put the invention of the Spectroscope, an instrument which enables us to analyze light and to use it as a means of investigating the nature of substances and bodies, not only upon the earth, but also in the sky. To the spectroscope we owe our knowledge of the constitution of the sun and the other stars.

Present Inventions.

Sixth, comes the use of Electricity, in telegraphy, and in the production of light, and the transference of power. These things are so recent that everybody knows all about them, or, at least, knows what their nature is.

Seventh, the establishment of the Law of Evolution. The idea of some such law was dimly present in the minds of some ancient philosophers, but, after their manner, they never thought of testing it by close observation of nature. Most of them used their minds with about as much practical effect as a miller would use his mill if he merely set the wheels turning, grinding only air and getting nothing but air out of

ANTI-JAP BILL PASSES SENATE IN CALIFORNIA

Vote 35 to 2 on Birdsall-Thompson Measure After Heated All-Night Debate.

BRYAN PARTLY VICTORIOUS

Modifies Act Barring Aliens Not Eligible for Citizenship From Owning Farm Lands.

SACRAMENTO, May 3.—The California Senate, by a vote of 35 to 2, early to-day passed the Birdsall-Thompson bill prohibiting the ownership of land for agricultural purposes in California by aliens not eligible for citizenship in the United States. The measure permits a three-year leasehold by aliens. It was adopted after an all-night session.

Secretary of State Bryan had retired when the result was announced. His secretary, Robert P. Rose, said Mr. Bryan would decide to-day when he will leave for the East. The action of the Senate was considered a partial victory for Secretary Bryan, whose work here resulted in the bill being less effective against the Japanese than the Webb bill as advocated by Governor Johnson. The bill permits the spread of Japanese farming colonies.

State Senator Cartwright, Democrat, announced prior to the roll call that he would vote against the passage of the bill, although he favored it. He gave as his reason:

"Vote to Tie U. S. Hands."

"You are turning a deaf ear to the best President this country has ever had. You will vote to tie the hands of the United States in its diplomatic relations with Japan; the majority has surrendered to the 'boss' of the State."

Consideration of the bill was begun at 11 o'clock yesterday morning and continued without recess even for luncheon and dinner. All afternoon, until the clock in the Senate chamber was ordered stopped by the presiding officer at 11:43 o'clock at night, the Democrats fought to delay action by submitting numerous amendments.

The hardest fight waged around a resolution introduced by Senator Curtin calling upon the Legislature to delay action for two years and refer the whole subject to the Federal Government. Debate on this amendment opened early in the day and continued until 6 o'clock, when a roll call showed it defeated.

Threat of Referendum.

In the closing hours of the debate on the bill itself, Senators Sanford, Caminetti and Shanahan threatened to invoke the referendum. They believed the people of the State were pleading for relief from Japanese agriculturists and that the measure does not correct the evil.

The Senate gallery and lobby was packed during the long session. Many Japanese lined the brass railing of the gallery, listening intently to the debate.

At no time during the sesison did Secretary Bryan appear in the Senate chamber, although he was in the office of Lieutenant Governor Wallace, hardly a hundred feet away, until nearly midnight.

Plot to Assassinate King of Spain Bared

Letter Found on Anarchist Shows Attempt Would Have Been Made on Alfonso's Visit to Paris.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MONTPELIER, FRANCE, May 3.—A plot to assassinate King Alfonso of Spain when he comes to France to visit President Poincare was discovered here to-day. A Spanish anarchist was arrested and letters involving two other men and a woman were found.

According to the documentary evidence, Alfonso was to be shot before he reached Paris.

The anarchists evidently deemed escape too hazardous in thickly populated Paris and chose a point outside.

LANE THROWS YOSEMITE OPEN TO AUTOMOBILISTS

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Secretary of the Interior Lane has issued an order admitting automobiles to the Yosemite National Park in California.

"I have decided to allow autos to enter the Yosemite," said the Secretary. "There are 100,000 motorists in California, and to these the valley has been closed."

Man of Mystery Now Made Clear; Big Story Coming

This picture is odd. Running for three days in The Georgian without any comment, it has caused endless discussion as to who it is and what it is. The Georgian has been besieged with telephone calls and letters from its readers asking for an explanation. We do not wonder that you had some doube as to why it is here. This is the answer:

The Georgian has purchased a serial story, more interesting than any Atlanta has had in years. This picture typifies the story.

Based on the picture, what in your judgment is the title or ought to be of this story? Five dollars in gold will be paid to each of the five best literary judgments received.

The title of the story has already been selected, and it is now in a sealed envelope in the hands of T. J. Peeples, cashier of the American National Bank.

The answers will be judged upon their originality, their literary value and upon their analytical clearness.

Address all answers to "Literary Editor, The Georgian," Atlanta.

Ordinance Starts Exodus of Palmists

Soothsayers Fold Tents and Leave Atlanta, Following Fight Made by Councilman.

Had Atlanta palmists, seers, clairvoyants and readers of the future read their own palms and told their own fortunes during the past three weeks they might have been happier than they are to-day. They are on their way to-day to other parts in droves.

"A tall dark man," who has proven that fortune tells do not control the future at their own sweet will, is Councilman Claude Ashley. His ordinance prohibiting the practice of palmistry and kindred occult arts in Atlanta has been unanimously recommended for adoption and the colony of seers that has made Atlanta its home for years must fold its tents and silently steal away to more fr-tile fields.

It is practically certain that Council will approve the measure Monday.

DULUTH NEGRO, SUSPECTED OF SLAYING, IS IN JAIL HERE

Will Gathright, a negro suspected of slaying George Seay, a Duluth farmer, by hacking him in the head with an ax, is to-day in the Tower at Atlanta, to remain until he can be safely carried back to Lawrenceville for trial. Seay was arrested yesterday at noon and a mob formed, bent on lynching him.

Deputy Sheriff J. W. Boss, of Gwinnett County, brought the negro to Atlanta.

50,000 PENNY LUNCHES SOLD AT INMAN SCHOOL

Mrs. V. H. Kriegshaber, head of the penny lunch movement at the Inman Park School, in a report to-day, said nearly 50,000 penny lunches had been sold at the school in the 100 days ending Friday.

The school has an enrollment of about 550. The daily average of lunches sold was nearly 500.

MAYOR-COUNCIL ROW FIRED BY WHITEWASHING

Report Monday Will Clear Men Accused of Grafting by Alderman McClelland.

COMMITTEE MEETING TO-DAY

Mysterious Reynolds Again Fails to Appear to Testify in the Fire Investigation.

Exoneration of all city officials involved in the graft charges, assured to-day by members of the investigating committees, has developed an acute stage in the relations of Mayor Woodward and the Council.

Referring to reports that the fire probe committee would clear Fire Chief W. B. Cummings of the accusations of corruption, Mayor Woodward said he would not be surprised at anything that committee would do. Already members of the Councilmanic Graft Probe Committee have been much nettled by the declaration of the Mayor that the committee "had to exonerate the three Aldermen to protect Council."

The committee probing the councilmanic graft charges will meet this afternoon to frame its report to Council. As it was given general authority to investigate all graft and corruption it is expected it will frame a general reply to numerous charges made by Mayor Woodward and his right-hand man in Council, Alderman John E. McClelland.

Probers Silent as to Report.

Because of this delicate situation the members of the fire probe committee, who completed their investigation yesterday, decline to make any formal statement as to their formal report until the meeting of Council Monday. But it is learned on good authority that Chief Cummings will be given a clean bill as far as graft is converned. The committee will recommend a better system of purchasing supplies for the department and criticise its heads for not following the requisition system.

The committee heard new evidence yesterday afternoon, but when it went into executive session a formal report written some days ago by a subcommittee was agreed upon.

Committee Meets Monday.

A meeting of the committee will be held Monday for the signing of this report.

Mayor Woodward took the stand first and told the committee that Thomas Reynolds, the mysterious man who promised important new evidence, had failed to show up as he had promised.

H. Cobb Caldwell Out Of Hospital Monday

Peachtree Road Resident Not Seriously Injured When Run Down by William McKenzie.

H. Cobb Caldwell, of the Peachtree Road, who sustained a broken collarbone and a sprained ankle when he was run down by William McKenzie's automobile Thursday night, probably will be able to leave Wesley Memorial Hospital Monday or Tuesday. Mr. Caldwell's family said this morning he was rapidly recovering, and that no serious results were anticipated.

The accident was at Eleventh Street and the Peachtree Road. As Mr. Caldwell crossed the road to enter his home he failed to see the automobile coming. Mr. McKenzie did not see Mr. Caldwell until it was too late to stop the car.

'Brazilian Trot' Is Latest From Paris

Joan Sawyer, Who Brings it, Says That it Is the Only Thing in the World.

NEW YORK, May 3.—Joan Sawyer, the swiftest turkey trotter that ever saw Broadway, has returned from Paris with the Brazilian trot, a dance that is faster and more bewildering than a combination of all the dances so far invented.

"It's the only thing in the world," said Miss Sawyer. "You can dance the Brazilian trot instead of eating or drinking. In fact, if you are starving it's a perfectly good substitute for food and drink."

COUNTESS SHOT MYSTERIOUSLY; SLAYING FEARED

Body of Earl of Cottenham's Wife, Figure in Sensational Divorce, Found in Thicket.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

HENLEY, ENGLAND, May 3.—Deep mystery surrounds the violent death of the Countess of Cottenham, wife of Charles E. P. Kenelme, Earl of Cottenham, whose body was found in a thicket near Goring. She had been shot to death. The case was supposed to be one of murder, although the authorities said that the countess might have shot herself.

The maiden name of the Countess of Cottenham was Lady Rose Nevill, daughter of the Marquis of Abergavenny. She was married to the Earl of Cottenham in 1899. They had three children.

Absence Leads to Search.

The protracted absence of the countess from her home led to a search, and the body, pierced with a bullet, was found in a clump of underbrush in the thicket.

There was some delay in calling the authorities into the case when the police began their inquiry. A theory was advanced that the countess had either been lured to the lonely spot or else in a fit of despondency had repaired to the copse to end her life.

There was no evidence of a struggle at the scene of death, but the ground was hard, and it was argued that it would require extreme exertions to dig up the turf.

Family Denies Quarrel.

Members of the family denied there had been any ill-feeling of late between the earl and his wife.

The Earl of Cottenham was the countess' second husband. Her first husband was John Blundell Leigh, a rich land owner. Mr. Blundell secured a divorce in 1899. Within a few months Mrs. Blundell became the Countess of Cottenham.

The divorce suit of Colonel Leigh, who was an officer of the guards, was one of the biggest scandals which has stirred English society in the past twenty years. The Earl of Cottenham was named as co-respondent. Highly sensational testimony was introduced at the trial.

Older Than Husband.

The countess was much older than her husband, and at the time of her marriage, in 1899, satirical society journals said "she was almost old enough to be her husband's mother."

After she was divorced and married to the earl, both she and her new husband were ostracised from society for a few months, but later were reinstated in their old places in exclusive circles.

Half a dozen years ago the countess caused comment by making a pet of a baboon and taking it to society functions with her.

Carnegie Interested In Feats of Fakirs

Steel Prestidigitator Wants to Know How Foreign Wizards Wiz.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, May 3.—To inquire into the mysteries of levitation is the aim of a young savant named Schwidtal of Posen.

Andrew Carnegie has financed a small party of investigators who will go to Egypt immediately under Schwidtal to study the secrets of the fakirs and dervishes, and especially from a scientific viewpoint the ecstatic state in which the fakirs are observed to accomplish wonderful feats. The ecstasy is produced by a constant repetition of mystic words. At first they pronounce only the name "Allah" combined with rhythmic movements called "sikrs." This has never before been thoroughly investigated.

POPE PIUS X, RECOVERED, RESUMES CHURCH DUTIES

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, Map 3.—For the first time since he was taken ill, early last month, Pope Pius X was to-day able to resume his church duties.

The Pontiff received in audience Cardinal De Lai, Secretary of the Consistoria congregation, and Cardinal Penhili, Vica General of Rome.

MAY DAY FESTIVAL IS OBSERVED BY SOCIALISTS

Atlanta Socialists are celebrating the May festival to-day in a pretty stretch of woodland near the Federal Prison. A temporary platform has been erected for dancing and speech-making.

A Pryor Street car to the Federal Prison passes the grounds.

Strike Leaders Held For Forming Parade

Three Arrested at Hopedale, Mass., in Labor Trouble—Joseph Ettor to Take Charge.

HOUEDALE, MASS., May 3.—Arturio Giovannitti, Jos. M. Coldwell and Caleb P. Howard, Industrial Workers of the World leaders, were arrested here early to-day by the chief of police. They were taken immediately to the town lockup, charged with violating the recently passed town laws which forbid parades without a special permit issued by the selectmen.

Giovannitti had just arrived to take charge of the local strike, pending the arrival later in the day of Joseph Ettor. He was Ettor's lieutenant in the great mill strike at Lawrence.

Bryan Can Win in 1916, Says Martine

Jersey Senator Thinks Nothing Can Beat Him, Assuming Wilson Dosen't Run.

ST. LOUIS, May 3.—If William J. Bryan is a candidate for the Presidency in 1916 nothing can prevent his election, according to Senator James E. Martine of New Jersey, who was here to attend the dedication of the Jefferson memorial. Mr. Martine said the one-term plank in the Democratic platform would prevent President Wilson's renomination.

"Bryan will be the logical candidate," he said. "People have come to know and to understand him better. People think that he has become more stable in his views, struck an equilibrium, as it were. The fact is, that Mr. Bryan is just as radical today as he was twenty years ago, but the people have grown up to him."

55,000 Out Now in Welsh Miners' Strike

Owners' Promise to Hire No More Non-Union Men Presages Victory for Unions.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CARDIFF, WALES, May 3.—The strike of Welsh coal miners in protest against the open shop policy of the mine owners is spreading to a serious extent. Fifty-five thousand men were out to-day.

Leaders of the miners' union expect a speedy victory, because many of the mine owners have already promised to hire no more non-union men. This is compelling non-unionists to join the organization.

Wayman First Asked Doctor to Kill Him

Physician at Inquest Says Chicago Attorney Wanted Vital Organ Cut in Operation.

CHICAGO, May 3.—That John E. W. Wayman, former State's Attorney, who shot and killed himself April 17, had asked Dr. W. K. Murray some time previously to kill him was the testimony developed to-day at the Coroner's inquest. Dr. Murray himself made the admission.

"Did he ask you to operate so that a vital organ would be cut, causing death?" Dr. Murray was asked.

"Yes," he replied.

Angell Fears Not To Tread Our Soil

Author of "The Great Illusion" Coming to Further His Peace Propaganda.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 3.—Among the passengers on the Kronprinzessin Cecilie are Norman Angell, the author of "The Great Illusion," who is on his way to the United States to continue his peace propaganda, and D. A. Ansell, the Mexican Consul General at Montreal, who has been at Nice for eight weeks. The latter thinks that everything will turn out all right in Mexico, but emphasizes the fact that there is need of a strong, stable Government.

A Cavalier to Wife Even in His Grave

In His Will Lord Crawford Pays Graceful Compliment to His Lady.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 2.—One of the most graceful compliments ever paid to a woman is contained in the will of Lord Crawford, who died in January, leaving an estate valued at $2,181,395.

In his will the Earl said that since his father's death he had bought a considerable number of diamonds and other jewels "which have been used and adorned by my wife."

Dainty Silk Stockings Rile Judge Calls Them In Contempt of Court Fair Defendant Hastily Hides 'Em

Mrs. Rachael N. Ducas after she had changed the pose which revealed the dainty silk hosiery that prompted Supreme Court Justice Gavegan to declare she was insufficiently clad.

New York Justice Does Not Take Kindly to Artifices of Modern Feminine Dress.

Ye women of Atlanta, have a care!

The judicial temperament, like the Cole Blease temperament, does not take kindly to the artifices and blandishments of modern dress.

Listen to this story from New York:

Supreme Court Justice Gavegan looked over his spectacles in Part XIV of the Supreme Court and scowled at a dainty pair of pearl gray silk stockings.

The hosiery was displayed upon the feet of Mrs. Rachael N. Ducas, a pretty wife of Benjamin P. Ducas, a wealthy manufacturer. Mrs. Ducas was sitting at the table of her counsel, her feet crossed.

"I want to say," the Court began gravely, "that the young lady in black there is disrespectful to this Court. If she wishes me to be more explicit, I will say for her benefit that her lower limbs are insufficiently clad. She is making far too free an exhibition of them in a public place."

Mrs. Ducas promptly pulled her hobble skirt down over the silver buckles on her slippers and kept her feet under her chair during the remainder of the court session.

Her lawyer replied: "Your Honor, this young woman in black is the defendant."

"I don't care who she is,' replied Justice Gavegan. "She is making an exposure of herself in this court. That's all I have to say."

SOUSA COMPETING IN ATLANTA SHOOT

Other Professionals Are Entered in Opening Affair of Brookhaven Gun Club To-day.

A dazzling array of talent makes notable the list of entries for the official opening shoot of the Brookhaven Gun Club this afternoon. The list, compiled to-day, includes, among other kindred spirits of the field, the name of John Philip Sousa, the famous bandmaster. A crack amateur trapshooter, Mr. Sousa is in Atlanta to participate in the opening meet.

Mr. Sousa's trip South is devoted to trapshooting. He came to Atlanta Friday from Montgomery, where he attended the shoot of the Montgomery Gun Club, and he will go to other cities on the same mission.

Others entered are Walter Huff, of Macon; D. H. Gibbs, C. E. Goodrich, George W. Maxwell and J. M. Barrett, all wel-known professionals. They, with Mr. Sousa, are guests in Atlanta of John Lester.

Friday afternoon, just to get their hands and eyes in trim, a number of the party went to the College Park Gun Club grounds and broke 482 clays out of 500 sprung, with the following individual records: J. M. Barrett, 99 out of 100; Freeman and Huff, 98 each; Sousa, 96; Lester, 93.

Mrs. Bryan Takes Vegetarian Cure

Goes to a Sanitarium Where Meat Is Regarded as a Poison.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Not content with introducing grape juice to a champagne society coterie Mrs. William Jennings Bryan has undertaken the vegetarian cure for society fatigue.

The strenuous social life led by the premier of the cabinet and Mrs. Bryan since inauguration have tired her so that she has been obliged to retire temporarily from the social whirl and recuperate at a nearby sanitarium where meat is regarded as poison and only vegetables are served.

'TRANSIENTS OF U. S.' ASK SUNDAY MAIL DELIVERY

WASHINGTON, May 3.—The most voluminous petition ever received at the Postoffice Department was presented to Postmaster General Burleson to-day. The petition, which is from "the Transient Population of the United States," protests against the closing of postoffices on Sunday. The petition is so massive it could not be sent through the mails, but instead it was bound in book form and sent by express.

THREE NEW WITNESSES FOR PHAGAN CASE INQUEST

Trio of Former Girl Employees at Pencil Factory Are Expected to Testify When Coroner Resumes Probe of Mystery on Monday.

Frank and Lee Also Expected To Be Questioned Further, and Score of Operatives Have Been Subpenaed — No New Facts.

Wild Rumors That Watchman Has Confessed Denied—Visitors Are Barred, but Counsel Permitted to See Both Men Detained.

It was reported to-day that three young women, former employees of the National Pencil Factory, will be important witnesses for the Coroner's jury in the Phagan case on Monday.

The inquest will be resumed at 2 o'clock. Leo M. Frank has not yet given any testimony before the Coroner's jury, and it is planned for him to be heard on Monday. It is also likely that Lee, the night watchman, will be examined still further.

The police and detectives are still busily at work on the case, but so far as is known they have secured nothing of importance.

Await Coroner's Verdict.

When the Coroner's jury verdict is rendered the case automatically goes to the Grand Jury. Solicitor Dorsey and the Grand Jury will not take up the case officially until the Coroner's jury has concluded its investigation.

Many wild reports, absolutely without basis in fact, are in circulation. It is emphatically declared by the police that no confessions have been made by anybody in the case. This should put an end to the report that Lee has confessed and implicated Frank.

It is not likely that the body of the unfortunate girl will be exhumed. County Physician Hurt says that no further examination is nevessary, as the evidence on this point is very clear and exact.

Visitors Are Barred.

Visitors are not allowed to see either Frank or Lee, although counsel has full access to the Tower to confer freely with the men.

A score of employees of the factory are under subpena to testify before the Coroner's jury, but their testimony is not considered likely to be of great importance.

The release of Arthur Mullinax and J. M. Gantt indicates that the detectives have abondoned the theory that the girl left the pencil factory after receiving her pay on Saturday. The detectives now are of the opinion that she was not seen on the streets again after she entered the factory.

May Be Held for Jury.

Without seeming to forecast what the Coroner's jury will do, it is more than likely that both Frank and Lee will be held for the Grand Jury, where the testimony or evidence will be weighed carefully under the supervision of Solicitor General Hugh Dorsey.

The only statement that the lawyers for Frank make is that he is still vehement in the declaration that he knows nothing whatever about the crime.

Mr. Rosser says that not a word of evidence had been produced against his client.

SLAYER DEFIES HANGMAN TO TAKE HIM TO GALLOWS

LOUISVILLE, GA., May 3.—Armed with two knives, metal parts of his prison cot, which he had demolished, and several large lumps of coal, Will Thompson, a condemned negro, yesterday afternoon defied Sheriff Smith and his deputies when they went to his cell to remove him to the scaffold to be hanged. He threatened to kill the first man who entered his cell. He was later forced into submission at the point of a shotgun and carried to the gallows.

Thompson was convicted of the murder of Claude Humphrey, at every, two years ago.

5,000 IN GREAT SUNDAY SCHOOL RALLY SERVICE

Baptist and Christian Churches Will Discuss Contest at the Auditorium-Armory.

More than 5,000 scholars representing the First Christian and the Second Baptist Sunday schools will assemble in front of the Georgia State capitol to-morrow morning and march to the auditorium, where rivals in one of the most exciting contests ever held in Atlanta will gather in joint service. The campaign for members, begun three months ago on a challenge from the Second Baptist Sunday school, comes to a close Sunday, May 11. To-morrow the contestants will meet to discuss the campaign.

Rev. L. O. Bricker, of the First Christian Church, said to-day: "We have won. It has been a great contest and the results have been magnificent."

Rev. John E. White, pastor of the Second Baptist Church, said: "The battle is not yet lost. We have time."

At the meeting to-morrowthe First Christian Sunday school will report, as the result of the contest, an increase in membership in the three months from 330 to an enrollment of 4,000. The Second Baptist will report an increase from an enrollment of 420 to 3,700.

When the two schools assemble on the capitol steps a panorama picture of the gathering will be taken, and as the procession moves across the Washington Street viaduct a moving picture film will be made. It is estimated that more than 5,000 members of the two schools will be present and appear in the pictures. Prior to the gathering at the capitol, each of the schools will meet in their respective places for exercises at 9:30 o'clock. The joint meeting will be at 10:15 o'clock and the services at the auditorium will begin at 11 o'clock, lasting an hour.

Pastors of the two churches will make addresses, drawing lessons from the contest and summarizing its results. Professor Percy J. Starnes will preside at the organ, and Mrs. Starnes will sing Gounod's "Ave Maria." The congregation will read in unison the twenty-third Psalm and reports of the contesting schools for May 4 will be read. A chorus choir, comprising members from both schools, will occupy the platform.

Including the results of last Sunday's work, the standing of the two schools in points scored is: First Christian, 44,357; Second Baptist, 38,536, which gives the Christians a lead of 5,821 points.

Work to Overcome Lead.

"It will be a difficult task to overcome that lead," said Dr. White today. "But the Second Baptist will not quit the fight until the time limit is reached. One class alone in our school started off with a membership of 75 and reached 400 last Sunday. They expect to have 600 next Sunday, and before the contest ends they have set 1,000 for their mark. That is a class for young men, and its growth has been one of the marvels of the contest."

At the beginning of the campaign the Second Baptist school gave the Christian workers a handicap of 110 points each Sunday, aggregating for the entire period about 2,000. It is said that while the 5,000 lead of the Christian school may not be overcome by May 11, that number may be greatly reduced.

At the conclusion of the present contest the Baptist Sunday schools of the city will challenge the Methodists to a similar membership campaign, which, if accepted, will enlist 60 Sunday schools in an effort to increase their enrollments.

More Than an Event.

Dr. White said:

"The contest just closing has proved more than an event; it is a movement. We believe Atlanta can be made the banner Bible school city of the world. And the really greatest part of the movement is that it is bringing the children back into the church service. There has been an alarming decrease in the churches everywhere in attendance on the part of children at church. In my church the Sunday school and the church are practically one and the same thing.

"The contest has stimulated other Sunday schools of the city and it is estimated that the attendance has in three months increased from about 10,000 to 18,000. All the churches have felt the effects of the rivalry that has spurred us on to enlarge our Sunday schools, and the results will continue to be felt. And, think of it, if the contest can be arranged with the Methodist schools there will be 60 organizations of men and women and boys and girls enlisted in a campaign to make this the greatest of Bible study cities.

Churches Drawn Together.

"The Baptist and Christian churches have been drawn very closely together in this contest. The best of Christian spirit has been displayed and the results have been far greater than we expected."

Dr. L. O. Bricker said:

"When we entered the contest with the Baptist school we had no idea what it meant. The plan has grown greater and greater and the results have far exceeded our expectations. What was intended for a plant to benefit the two churches has spread to every church in Atlanta. I believe More young people have been enrolled in the Sunday schools than we had ever dreamed would be possible. Of course we expect to win the contest, but the Baptists have been a most worthy rival."

As an evidence of the effects of the contest on the two schools it is pointed out that last Sunday the actual attendance was 3,800. Dr. White said to-day the Baptists would have at least 2,500 in attendance to-morrow. There were present last Sunday 1,760 and at tht First Christian 1,978. Leaders of both schools are confident that their memberships will continue to show marked increases.

"When the contest closes," said Dr White, "it really means the beginning of one of the greatest movements ever launched in Atlanta."

'All Men Are Liars' She Said; 'Insane,' Promptly Voted Jury

Harsh Views of the Sterner Sex Prove Unfortunate for Mrs. Fenes.

YONKERS, May 3.—Harsh views of men, written by Mrs. Lula Fenes, a prominent New Rochelle woman, convinced a Sheriff's jury that examined her that she is incompetent, and they returned a verdict accordingly.

"All men are liars," she wrote. "Man wants woman to slave and work for him, to cook, to nurse him when he is sick, to close his eyes when he dies, to dig his grave and then lie down in it herself."

Mrs. Fenes wrote her husband, Dr. Fenes, letters addressed, "Murderers' Row, New Rochelle," while in a sanitarium.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Good Bill at the Forsyth.

It's a good bill of Keith vaudeville which has been presented this week at the Forsyth Theater. The various performances have been well attended, sure proof that the bill has pleased patrons of that house. Matinee this afternoon and another performance this evening. Next week's bill is headed by Gus Edwards' Kid Cabaret, which is said to be one of the most entertaining acts which has ever appeared in Atlanta.

"A Butterfly on the Wheel" at Atlanta.

"A Butterfly on the Wheel," the sensational divorce play, which has been given admirable presentation by the Miss Billy Long stock company at the Atlanta this week, will be seen at matinee this afternoon and again at an evening performance. Miss Long and the members of her company have already become popular with local theatergoers. Next week's play will be a comedy, "The Girl From Out Yonder."

"Billy, the Kid," at the Lyric.

Two performances are scheduled for the Lyric to-day, and when the curtain goes down on to-night's performance of "Billy, the Kid," the Lyric will be closed temporarily, as this attraction concludes the regular theatrical season. "Billy, the Kid," has drawn well-pleased audiences.

SUCCESS ASSURED BENEFIT RECITAL

Proceeds of Entertainment To-night to Aid Girls' Night School Supper Fund.

Atlanta's interest in the Girls' Night School has already insured success for the recital to-night at Cable Hall by Miss Ethel Thornton, Miss Verna Ruth Harris and Miss Agnes Coleman for the benefit of the school's supper fund.

More than 150 working girls of Atlanta, otherwise denied advantages of education, are enrolled in the school, and the heavy attendance well-nigh has exhausted the supper fund. The recital was found necessary, officials of the school say, that they might be able to pay the bills of the school for the final month of the session.

The recital this evening will be one of readings and elocution. Selections humorous, dramatic and in dialect will be given by the three young women, all of whom have attained local fame in their work.

The Girls' Night School is on the second floor of the building at Peachtree Street and Viaduct Place. Its enrollment numbers 155 girls, who go for instruction each evening at 6:30 o'clock, immediately upon quitting work. It is that they may reach the school at once that the supper is spread for them.

Much of the expense of the supper is paid by the school management out of the supper fund.

Says He'll Eat Sixty Eggs For Breakfast

Husky New York Mechanic Promises to Perform Feat Every Other Morning.

NEW YORK, May 3.—Here's what William H. Reinke proposes to have every other morning for breakfast as long as the bank roll lasts and he has a good job:

Fifteen scrambled eggs.
Fifteen fried eggs.
Fifteen soft boiled eggs.
Fifteen hard boiled eggs.
Seven coffee rings.
Five cups of coffee.

Reinke will begin getting on the outside of his first sixty eggs this morning.

The egg eater is a mechanic employed in a garage. He is twenty years old, hard as nails, close to six feet in height, and weighs 190 pounds.

Vicious Dog Attacks Child in "Tag" Game

Little Alga Peters, of 216 South Pryor Street, Is Severely Bitten Before Rescued.

Alga Peters, ten years old, is in a serious condition at her home, 218 South Pryor Street, as a result of a strenuous game of "tag" which she and other children of the neighborhood played.

A bulldog belonging to G. G. Waters, 98 Waters Avenue, became excited when it saw the children running about the street, and leaped upon the Peters girl. She was severely bitten about the head and arms before rescued.

The Peters family notified the police, and an officer was sent to kill the dog. Waters, however, refused to allow the animal to be shot.

WOMEN DESTROY STILL AND QUANTITY OF BEER

ROME, GA., May 3.—Refusing to tolerate the presence in their community of a "wild-cat" still, a band of women of West Armuchee marched on the plant yesterday and demolished it.

The moonshiners were at work, but took flight when they saw the women approach. Securing a mattox the women destroyed the outfit. Eight hundred gallons of beer soaked in the ground. The raiders were led by Mrs. Suttle Hunt.

Big Shetland Pony Contest On! Early Start Will Help You Win Nomination Counts 1,000 Votes

Miss Mabel Imslee, one of the attractive young women in the stock company at the Atlanta Theater.

Third Coupon of Series Good for Theater Seats Appears To-day—Clip It.

Well, the pony contest is on!

Of course, you saw the second coupon, good for five votes in The Georgian yesterday. Another appears today, and there will be a coupon worth five votes every day in The Georgian until the contest closes, while in every issue of The Sunday American there will be a coupon worth fifteen votes.

Begin at once to save them.

Get your friends to save them for you.

And remember they must be voted within fifteen days; otherwise, they are valueless.

But while coupons from the daily and Sunday issues are worth saving, and will help you to win one of the Shetland ponies, with harness and cart all complete, the votes for new subscriptions are really what will decide the winners.

A subscription to The Sunday American only for one month gives the contestant 100 votes, while a subscription to the daily and Sunday for one year gives 3,500 votes. Subscriptions for intermediate periods are carefully graded in value.

Contest Rules Simple.

Remember that advance subscriptions from old subscribers count the same as new subscriptions, and payment of arrearages also counts in the same proportion.

The Georgian and American are giving away twelve ponies to successful boys and girls in a subscription contest in which the rules are simplicity itself. Eight go to children in Atlanta, one to a carrier or newsboy in Atlanta, two in Georgia and one outside the State.

Every pony is guaranteed to be a sound, healthy, serviceable pet, broken to drive, gentle, kind and safe for a child to drive.

An early start in the race for the beautiful little Shetlands is a great advantage, and nominations are coming in rapidly from the boys and girls of Atlanta who realize this fact.

Do not delay longer if you contemplate entering, as every boy and girl of spirit does. The nomination itself counts for 1,000 votes.

Save Theater Coupons.

Miss Billy Long is a Georgia girl—that is, she claims the State for her home, although born in Texas. She was educated in Athens, and spent much of her girlhood days in the State.

As a Georgia girl who has "made good" on the stage, Atlantans naturally are interested in seeing her. This is one of the reasons The Georgian and American free seat presentation is proving so popular.

But it is not merely local pride which is causing crowds to go to the Atlanta Theater to see the stock company playing there.

It is because it is a good company playing there, and in productions that were sensations in New York.

But if you are a reader of The Georgian and American, you need not spend your money for a seat in following the crowd to the Atlanta Theater. The first coupon in a series appeared Thursday. Another appeared Friday, another to-day and the fourth Sunday. Clip out these four and send them to us with a self-addressed and stamped envelope. By early mail you will get a seat at the theater in the best part of the house.

What do we gain? We are happy to have the pleasure of introducing our two sets of friends—the readers of our publications on the one hand and the Billy Long Stock Company on the other.

What does the Atlanta Theater gain? The management feels that if the readers of The Georgian come first free of cost they will be so pleased that they will come often, and as paying patrons.

There's no trick to it, you see.

Mrs. Edith Wharton May Sue For Divorce

Rumor Revived That Noted Woman Novelist Will Seek Solace in court.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, May 3.—The rumor current a short time ago that Mrs. Edith Wharton, the American novelist, was about to bring a suit for divorce is insistently renewed here. It is impossible to learn details, but there seems to be some ground for the story.

The couple are said to be living apart and it is added that the disagreements between them have passed beyond the possibility of reconciliation.

Versions vary as to whether the proceedings will be brought in New York or in France after Mrs. Wharton acquires the necessary domiciliary status here.

HEALTH BOARD WILL URGE DOG MUZZLING LAW

Three Hundred Cases of Rabies Treated Already This Year Presented as Argument.

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

The State Board of Health will urge upon the incoming Legislature, as directly as it may, the great desirability of a dog-muzzling law in Georgia.

The board is realizing that it is somewhat difficult to enact any sort of legislation having to do with dogs in this State, and to make that legislation effective after it has been enacted. Still, when the people are made to understand, if they can be made to understand, that an enforced dog-muzzling law would in three years rid Georgia of all danger of rabies, and that already this year the department has treated at the capitol well over three hundred cases of this dreadful disease, the board believes the Legislature may be brought to see the very great desirability, if not absolute necessity, of such a law.

A dog-muzzling law will be offered in the Legislature, and it will be vigorously backed, not only by health boards and doctors throughout the State, but by several influential members. The State Board of Health feels that the mere muzzling of dogs, entailing some possible discomfort upon them, as it may, still is infinitely preferable to an ever-increasing list of patients to be treated for rabies.

Dog tax laws always have been unpopular in Georgia, and those that have been passed never have been enforced. The dogs seems to have plenty of friends in Georgia—even the "yaller" curs and "flop-eared" hounds of the more rural persuasion.

If the State Board of Health can succeed in showing conclusively however, that the dogs are getting to be, year by year, a more and more deadly peril to the people, and particularly to children—for they compose by far the greater portion of the patients treated—the chances are that some effective legislation may be obtained during the forthcoming summer session.

And, anyway, the board has every intention of putting the matter up to the General Assembly, fairly and squarely.

A member-elect of the incoming Legislature has prepared two companion bills for the General Assembly's early consideration, both of which are of far-reaching consequence and assured of strong support.

One bill will provide for a central point of execution for crime in capital cases—probably at Milledgeville—and the other will provide for the substitution of the electric chair for the gallows.

Both bills are thought to have excellent chances of passing the next Legislature.

Elaborate arrangements are under way, looking to the sumptuous entertainment of Josephus Daniels, of North Carolina, Secretary of the Navy, when he visits Savannah on or about May 10.

It is planned to give him a banquet at the De Soto Hotel, to which a hundred or more prominent South Georgians will be invited. The Secretary will be asked to deliver an address at this dinner, and to discuss particularly the navy and its possible relation to Savannah, and the coast cities of Georgia.

The Macon Telegraph should worry and get a wrinkle, for this is the latest obsession it is entertaining: "There is a duty of 45 cents a gallon on grape juice under the Payne-Aldrich law and it is retained in the Underwood bill, but if it is to become a fashionable drink, it will have to go on the free list as a necessary of life."

The Monticello News thinks the next Legislature can increase the State's available funds for appropriations to its various institutions by abolishing a few jobs around and about.

The News will be called down for treason or something of the sort, first thing it knows. Talk of abolishing jobs during Democratic times will be rated highly incendiary in certain quarters.

Colonel Johnson's nomination to be United States Consul to Shanghai is looked for within the next week or ten days.

The Railroad Commission will ask the Legislature for authority to order the erection of union passenger stations in cities and towns in Georgia, where, in the opinion of the commission, the conditions make such stations desirable and necessary to the accommodation of the traveling public.

The commission now has authority to order the erection of separate stations, but it has no authority whatever in the matter of compelling union stations.

DRAWS NEW 'STANLAWS GIRL IN CUPID'S LOTTERY

NEW YORK, May 3.—Penrhyn Stanley Adamson, the artist, whose creations of feminine beauty have won him fame both in this country and abroad, has drawn another "Stanlaws girl." This time, though, the drawing wasn't with crayon, but in Dan Cupid's lottery.

In other words, Mr. Adamson, who is better known as Penrhyn Stanlaws, has married, having found his ideal in Miss Jean Pughsley, daughter of Lester P. Bryant, of New York and Paris, to whom he was married in the presence of a representative gathering from the social and artistic worlds. There will be no honeymoon until the fall, when they plan to go abroad.

It was about a dozen years ago that the "Stanlaws Girl" first made her appearance. Adamson at that time was an undergraduate of Princeton and one of the editors of the university's monthly periodical. His work attracted widespread attention and his services were in great demand. His smiling faces beamed from the pages of books and the covers of magazines. Rapidly his fame spread over sea and he went abroad. He stuck to his own distinctive type of American girl and was as successful abroad as here. In Paris he studied at the Julian Academy and under Benjamin Constant and Jean Paul Laurens. In addition to his illustration work he has done some portrait painting and has been very successful in this field also.

The "Stanlaws Girl" is known the world over for her beauty and has been pronounced by many artists as the ideal portrayal of the true American girl. The above is a bevy of girls drawn by Stanlaws.

The latest "Stanlaws Girls" should be called "Stanlaws' Bride," for the famous artist has just been married to a New York girl who is declared to be more beautiful than anything else he has ever drawn. The picture above is of her.

Pastor-Novelist Is Accused by Curate

Dr. Cyrus Townsend Brady, in New Pulpit, Charged With Romanist Leanings.

NEW YORK, May 3.—The Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady, long known as a prolific writer of tales of adventure and romance, has been rector of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Ascension, Mount Vernon, for six weeks and he faces trouble.

The Rev. Edwin B. Rice, curate of Trinity Church, in that place, sought Bishop Greer to lay before him a complaint that Mr. Brady indulged in "unauthorized practices," the specification being that he burned eucharistic lights upon the altar.

He declared Dr. Brady should join the Roman Catholic Church.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Representative Gardner, of Massachusetts, has announced his candidacy for the chairmanship of the Republican congressional campaign committee.

He declared that if he is elected he will liberalize the organization.

Airships Made Safer by Aid of Gyroscope

Elmer Sperry Tells Engineers of a Stabilizer Perfected by Naval Aviators.

NEW YORK, May 3.—By means of a specially constructed gyroscope aviation accidents have been reduced to a minimum, through the control being taken out of the hands of the aviator at critical moments in the flight.

This was the substance of an address delivered before the New York Electrical Society by Elmer A. Sperry, inventor of the gyroscopic stabilizer for ships.

The apparatus has practically been developed within the last few months, and has been perfected during experiments made in conjunction with the Navy Department at San Diego, California.

YALE SENIOR CAPTURES BURGLARS WITH PENCIL

NEW HAVEN, CONN., May 3.—By leveling a pencil at two thieves whom he found in his room, Richard Davidson, a Yale Senior, bluffed them into thinking that he had a pistol and held them until the police arrived. They confessed to a long series of thefts, including the looting of the room of Robert Alphonso Taft of Harvard, son of ex-President Taft.

DR. BURROUGHS TO PREACH.

Dr. P. E. Burroughs, of Nashville, Tenn., will preach at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. at First Baptist Church to-morrow.

20,000 JOIN EGG SEARCH AT PARK

Atlanta Children Will Contest for Prizes This Afternoon in Annual "Easter" Hunt.

When a man with a trombone slides the first notes of "Dixie" out of his horn at 3 o'clock this afternoon 20,000 Atlanta children will spread over Grant Park like bees over a flower, searching for 200,000 candy eggs in the weeds and grass. For to-day is the day of the annual Easter egg hunt of the Atlanta Park Board, an event children have been looking forward to for months.

All morning 15 or 20 men have worked, scattering the vast number of eggs, and as the children line up on the boundary lines and impatiently await the signal, Grant Park looks like an old-fashioned "crazy quilt." Red egg lies side by side with blue egg, and yellow egg nestles against white in a riotuous maze of color. No attempt was made to hide the 200,000 eggs the children will try to find. They were simply sown over the ground from large baskets, and even that work kept the 20 men busy all day.

The 41 prize eggs, however, were really hidden. Forty of these prize eggs are made of wood and bear numbers. When presented at the pavilion the child lucky finder will be given a prize bearing a corresponding number.

The grand prize is "golden egg." This egg is made of brass, and inside of it is an order for a five dollar gold piece.

To prevent a repetition of accidents that marred the hunt last year, all vehicles will be excluded from the park from 12 o'clock until the egg hunt is over. All children who get lost from their parents will report at the concrete pavilion.

The committee in charge of the egg hunt comprises W. C. Puckett, T. L. Bond, R. A. Burnett, C. I. Branan and Roger Winter.

BANKERS TO TELL SENATE ELASTIC CURRENCY RECIPE

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Questions directed chiefly to the subject of control of reserve associations and how best to obtain an elastic currency will be submitted soon to leading banking experts by the senate committee on banking and currency. The committee has appointed Senators Owen, Hitchcock, Shafroth, Bristow and Weeks a sub committee to draft the questions and submit them next week.

KAISER EAGER TO WIN PEACE PRIZE

Is Restraining Austria So as to Complete Twenty-five Years of Warless Reign.

BERLIN, May 3.—The Kaiser is on the last stretch of the last lap in the race for the coveted twenty-five years reign of peace. Will he win the golden jubilee prize? No one knows, but it is certain that he is restraining every nerve to reach the wire before the storm breaks, if it does break. The Foreign Office has wrapped itself in a mantle of silence in regard to the Austrian attitude toward Montenegro and Servia, but the foregoing is the way a military officer sized up the present situation.

Well-informed men express the opinion that the Kaiser's hand has restrained Austria and prevailed on Vienna to wait before taking action in the hope that something may develop which will avert what is feared here, namely, the beginning of a war into which Germany will be dragged against her will and in which she has no direct interest.

While the national and imperial newspapers urge Germany to support Austria and applaud the decision of the latter country to act, one gets the impression in talking with officials and financiers that Germany is still looking for some solution of the trouble other than the warlike one proposed by Austria. A member of the Kaiser's entourage is quoted as saying in conversation with a friend that the Kaiser does not consider war necessary under modern ideas and should be undertaken only as last resort.

Germany Lacks Able Men.

BERLIN, May 3.—Through the expressions of representatives of the Clerical, Radical and Socialist parties a blow has been struck at the German military bills, providing for an immense increase in the army. During the debate on the first reading before the Budget Committee, doubts were expressed whether the necessary number of able-bodied recruits could be obtained in Germany.

Forces Prize Beauty To Return Diamond

Traveling Man Accused Show Girl of Keeping Gem He Had Loaned to Her.

ST. LOUIS, May 3.—Having returned the $500 diamond ring, claimed by W. A. Purnell, traveling salesman for a Fifth Avenue, New York, concern, Mrs. Laura Hill, of New York, is no longer in the custody of the police.

Mrs. Hill was winner in the $1,000 prize beauty contest of the Shuberts in New York last year. She later became a show girl, and is now with the Gertrude Hoffman Company, playing here. Purnell followed her from New York, caused her arrest, charging that she had kept the ring, although he had only lent it to her.

Mrs. Hill declares he gave her the ring, but after a talk at police headquarters she returned it.

AGENT BREAKS IN AND SELLS BURLESON BOOK

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Postmaster General Burleson is out $5, but he has a perfectly good book. "Ed" Smith, confidential clerk, explained to a visitor that his chief was very busy, but he managed to get him in.

"Look here, Smith," said the Postmaster General afterwards, "don't you know that you let a book agent in to see me. But never mind. He had a book for sale for which I have been looking for the last three years, and I bought one from him."

Mr. Awtry can claim a host of friends who are pleased to learn of his new connection.

ROUND-ABOUT-TOWN STORIES

The Question That Always Made Him Boil.

After standing by for fifteen minutes listening to the stream of questions put to a policeman at a busy corner the woman said:

"Don't you get awfully tired of answering all these fool questions that are put to you hour after hour?"

"Well, rather," said he. "Still I've got so used to it that there is only one of the lot that makes me actually boil."

"Which one is that?" she inquired.

"Don't I get awfully tired of answering all the fool questions that other folks ask."

"Oh," said the woman, and hurried on.

Made Hit With His Little Brush.

A visitor from out of town was speaking of the city's remarkable features and incidentally praising the police.

"On one of the recent blowy days," he said, "I was crossing Peachtree Street. A gust of wind caught my hat and it rolled along the pavement until a small boy stopped it. A policeman took it from the boy. When he handed it to me I began to brush it on my coat sleeve.

"'Use this,' said the policeman, offering me the niftiest thing in the way of a small hat brush I had ever seen. 'I always have it with me on a windy day.'"

Cats For Rent Is the Latest.

A well-known Atlantan just back from a trip to New York tells this one:

In the window of an animal and bird store not far from Broadway and Eightieth Street hangs a sign that says:

"Nancy, our Angora cat that catches mice and rats, can be rented by the day or week."

How Motion Signs Are Now Designed.

"The electric sign is only in its infancy," said a well-known electrician yesterday. "I was in New York last week and made it a point to see all the big electrical signs that I could. I met the junior member of an electrical sign construction company and while we were walking up Broadway after the theater he called my attention to one of the blazing displays in which a horse appears on a gallop.

"'Has it ever occurred to you,' said he, 'how detailed must be the work of the sign builder to represent the movements of living beings in bulbs, and make them artistically realistic? We have to go far afield sometimes to obtain the lifelike effect. That horse, for example, plants his hoofs just as in real life—otherwise that sign would be an animated cartoon. Now, to get the individual or disjointed movements of the legs in their order of sequence the builder minded that the eye of the camera is keener than man's, procured the motion picture film of a galloping horse and, examining each snapshot, drew his plans in duplicate. Flashing his bulbs on and off with the same speed employed by a movie operator, the designer has produced the effect of smooth and continuous motion.'"

Taking Care of Bob

Today's Complete Short Story.

"AMY said," began the girl who likes to talk, "that Bob was gentle as a kitten and so affectionate that in contrast a pair of love birds were petrified images of heartlessness. She said many other things, too, over the telephone about the bull terrier that in a misguided moment they purchased some time ago, but that was because she was trying to make me think I was crazy to have him while she and her husband went to Panama.

"I was to pass a few days with her and get acquainted with the paragon of dogs. Amy said that she always felt perfectly safe with Bob in the apartment, because he would chew up any burglar who appeared. On the way over I grew rather worried, wondering whether Bob was clever enough to distinguish between a caller who was a burglar and a caller who wasn't. Then I recalled Bob's gentleness and took heart.

"When the front door was opened I thought the end had come. Something huge and white fell across the hall table, and, stepping all over me, attempted to climb on my shoulder and perch there. I screamed faintly and wondered if the Pasteur treatment hurt much. Then I was conscious of Amy's voice.

Very Affectionate.

"'He's so affectionate!' said Amy in a proud voice. 'I never knew him to take such an instant liking to any one before! He realizes that you love dogs, I am sure!'

"'I'm crazy about them!' I assured her as I intrenched myself behind two chairs and a davenport. 'However, I don't care for those aerial effects myself! Can't he keep his feet on the ground?'

"Amy looked hurt and said she should have thought that I would appreciate a dumb animal's fondness for me. She was interrupted by Bob's giving an exhibition of his dumbness when he saw the postman out of the window. Dashing at the glass at the speed of 60 miles an hour, he let out a roar that shook the apartment. Then he turned and wagged his tail and twinkled his eyes. I think these dogs greatly enjoy life. It must be fine to feel that you can make the whole universe bow to the ground and climb trees if you wriggle your chin or flop an ear.

"I unpacked my suitcase neatly, and then when I went to dress for dinner I found that Bob had eaten the heels off my evening slippers.

"'It's the funniest thing!' Amy said, enthusiastically, when I wailed out the trouble. 'That dog always has had the most insane fondness for shoe heels! We couldn't have a decent shoe in the house when we first got him. He is so intelligent!'

"When Bob was taken out of doors it was with as many precautions as though he were a man-eating tiger. For my part I would as soon sally forth with the jungle beast as with that animal. He had a harness on of battleship leather—well, they have battleship linoleum, anyhow—and snapped to that was a leash with a loop to go over your wrist, and then you had a whip.

"Hung On and Slid."

"I felt just as though the band was going to play as I entered the sawdust ring when I took Bob outdoors that day. He shot up the street instantly, and as it was slippery I hung on and slid, shrieking at him to stop. Pretending it was a game, that diabolical animal merely tore on, whisking me around a corner into a perambulator. My impression is that I leaped the perambulator, but maybe I crawled under—anyhow, I was a half block ahead before the nurse had picked herself up from the grounds, and Bob was so impetuous that I couldn't return to inquire.

"It might have been all right if he hadn't seen a cat. Amy said afterward reproachfully that I shouldn't have allowed him to see a cat. However, she did not say whether I should have run in front of Bob and held my hands over his eyes or chloroformed him till the cat had strolled by. If I had fancied up to now that Bob had been hastening I was mistaken. He had been dawdling, but when he saw that cat he turned on full speed.

"All that I remember is hurtling through the air, hanging to the leash for dear life, for Amy had cautioned me that I had the safety of the public in my hands, and so I did not dare let go. Bob spread himself low over the ground and just ate up the distance. We chased that cat down the street, then through an alley and then whizzed up the steps of a big house just as the front door opened and a perfectly lovely man emerged attired for an afternoon wedding or a tea-fight.

"I let Bob go then, because I fell over the top step.

He Was Sympathetic.

"The tea-fight man, after rising from where he had been tossed by Bob, picked me up. There were awful sounds of riot from inside the house, where Bob had treed the cat on a mantel. It really was an unusual situation.

"'He is such an intelligent dog,' I stuttered. 'And so affectionate.'

"The tea-fight man actually grinned. 'I owned a terrier once myself!' he confided, understandingly.

"Just then Bob dashed out and climbed into my lap with his muddy paws, just as though he was not something slightly less than a young hippopotamus. Laying his huge head on my shoulder, he sighed contentedly, as though he had had a very pleasant afternoon, indeed.

"Oh, yes, I'm going to take him while Amy is away. I think a little excitement will do me good."

FITTERY FACES BRADY IN GAME AT SLAGTOWN

By Joe Agler.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., May 3.—It listens like the big noise here this afternoon to me. Manager Molesworth will dig up Fittery to work against us—and from what we all hear he is some worker.

Bill Smith is going after the game with King Brady.

He thinks the King is going to be dead right to-day and so do I. If so, I'm not looking for a lot of hits, but we ought to squeeze out a victory.

The Crackers are in absolutely perfect condition and are strog for the game to-day.

Crackers Go to Moile Next.

To-night we move on to Mobile for a game with the Gulls Sunday. We are going down there to take three out of four from Mike Finn, and we shall never be satisfied unless we do it.

We can't see the Gulls looming so big and don't anticipate a very hard time with them.

We have certainly made Christians out of the scribbs in this city. They are all convinced that Billy has got a good club, and that we will finish one-two-three.

Bausewein Goes Good.

We took another hard fought battle from the Barons yesterday, 2 to 1. Bausewein twirled a fine game, and was master of the Barons all the way. They could hit him a bit but never in the pinches. He got in trouble only once—in the eighth. In that inning he pulled out before anything serious had happened.

Bausewein's curve was breaking fine yesterday and his control was great.

The Cracker fielding these days is all to the merry and yesterday we made a lot of fast plays on hard hit balls.

Pat Graham made a splendid catch in the eighth that saved two scores. Pat is improving every day in the outfield.

M'GOORTY AND CLABBY FIGHT 10-ROUND DRAW

DENVER, COLO., May 3.—Eddie McGoorty and Jimmy Clabby went ten fast rounds to a draw here last night. It was the first fight staged in the State since the Legislature legalized boxing.

Both boys put up a great exhibition of cleverness. McGoorty had a slight shade in the first couple of rounds, but Jimmy evened matters up in the third and fourth. The next couple of rounds were rather tame. The boys, however, warmed up to matters later in the going and had several warm mix-ups with honors even.

PELICANS SELL COTTON KNAUPP TO BILLIKENS

MOBILE, ALA., May 3.—Manager Johnny Dobbs of the Montgomery club has purchased Shortstop Cotton Knaupp from New Orleans, and he will report here to-day. Kutina will play first after the Mobile series, Tarleton becoming utility man.

DANNY MAHER WINS AGAIN.

NEW MARKET, ENGLAND, May 3.—The 1,000-guinea stake was won here to-day by J. B. Joel's 3-year-old filly, Jest, ridden by Danny Maher. Taslett was second, and Prue third. Twenty-two ran. All the starters carried 126 pounds. The distance was one mile.

FINE REMEDY FOR ECZEMA

Also for Salt Rheum, Tetter, Psoriasis, Lupus, and All Skin Afflictions.

Even a Microscope Won't Find a Blemish After S. S. S. Gets Through.

All skin troubles should be attacked from within by giving the blood circulation a good daily bath. This is accomplished with S. S. S., the best known and most highly recommended blood purifier ever discovered. Its action is very rapid. Its vegetable nature is such that it naturally goes right into the blood, saturates the entire circulation, bathes the tissues with an influence that enables the skin to heal quickly. The action of S. S. S. is that of an antidote, and this fact has been demonstrated time and time again in the most severe forms of weeping eczema.

Its influence in the tissues where the tiny arteries transfer the red blood for the worn out blood to the veins is quite remarkable and goes on constantly with every tick of the clock—the beat of the heart.

And new skin is thus caused to form, while the germs of irritating influences that cause eczema are scattered and their harmful nature entirely suspended.

S. S. S. has a wonderful tonic influence in the blood because it contains no "dope." It is a "physic," is entirely free of any mineral drugs or any other drugs except the remarkable medicinal effect of the pure vegetable products of which it is made.

Few people realize how harmful are many of the strong, crude ointments that used to be in favor before they learned that S. S. S. is safe, speedy and sure. Ask at any drug store for a bottle of S. S. S. Give it a good trial and you will soon see a decided improvement in any form of skin trouble. Write to The Swift Specific Co., 137 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for special free advice on eczema and any other form of skin or blood trouble.

Crackers Not Stealing Very Well

By Percy H. Whiting.

IF the Cracker base stealers were as good as the Cracker catchers the Atlanta team would have the whole league on the run.

In 19 games this season the Cracker catchers have allowed only 18 men to steal bases, or slightly less than one stolen base to the game.

How much better than the average the work of Joe Dunn and Pat Graham is, can be judged from the fact that in all of last season in the Southern League, 1,532 bases were stolen, or an average of 1.37 bases for each team in each game.

* * *

THE best defensive catching in the league is being done by the Birmingham catchers. In 17 games Dilger and Mayer allowed but 13 stolen bases. Atlanta ranked second while Gabby Street, virtually single handed, held the Lookouts up in third place. The New Orleans catchers have made the most horrible showing—allowing almost two stolen bases for the opposition in each game.

The number of stolen bases allowed on an average in each game by the Southern League catchers thus far this season is here shown:

Clubs.	Games.	S. B.	S. B. Per Game
Birmingham	17	13	.76
Atlanta	19	18	.95
Chattanooga	18	20	1.11
Nashville	18	20	1.11
Memphis	20	23	1.15
Mobile	21	28	1.33
Montgomery	20	31	1.55

* * *

DILGER of Birmingham, the greatest defensive catcher in the league last season, is up to his old tricks again and has allowed an average of but .71 stolen bases to the game—against an average for all teams last season, you will recall of more than 1.153 a game. Graham of Atlanta, and Mayer, of Birmingham, are tied for second honors in preventing base stealing. Joe Dunn is seventh among the regulars, with an average of 1.11 runners who have stolen on his throwing this season.

IT is well to note, of course, that the number of bases stolen by a team does not depend entirely on the throwing strength of a catcher. A proper rating would show how many bases were stolen in relation to the number of opponents who reached first. If the opposing players didn't get any hits, any free passes or arrive at first by being hit; or on the other hand if all the hits were three-baggers or homers, there would not be many bases stolen. In the long run, however, the number of bases stolen gives a fair line on what a catcher can do.

Here is the complete record of the number of bases stolen off catchers in the Southern League this season, up to yesterday:

Catchers. Clubs.	Games	S. B.	S. B. Per G.
Dilger, Birmingham	7	5	.71
Graham, Atlanta	10	8	.80
Mayer, Birmingham	10	8	.80
Street, Chattanooga	17	15	.88
Seabough, Memphis	1	1	1.00
Noyes, Nashville	14	15	1.07
Haigh, Memphis	11	12	1.09
Dunn, Atlanta	9	10	1.11
Ludwig, Nashville	4	5	1.25
Snell, Memphis	8	10	1.25
Brown, Mobile	10	13	1.30
Schmidt, Mobile	11	15	1.36
Donahue, Montgomery	14	19	1.43
Yantz, New Orleans	13	24	1.85
Angermeier, N. O.	15	20	2.00
Gribbens, Montgomery	6	12	2.00
Hannoh, Chattanooga	1	5	5.00

* * *

THE Crackers, unfortunately, can not steal bases as well as they can prevent their being stolen. However thus far the locals have stuck right around the average, with 1.37 steals to the game. Mobile leads in stealing, Memphis is second and poor, old Chattanooga is last, with an average of a stolen base every two games. Here is the table that shows the number of bases stolen per game by the teams of the league:

Teams.	S. B.	Av. Per G.
Mobile	45	2.14
Memphis	30	1.43
New Orleans	32	1.39
Atlanta	26	1.37
Montgomery	24	1.20
Birmingham	21	1.16
Nashville	18	1.00
Chattanooga	11	.58

PREP LEAGUE NOTES

Bill Starr is the tennis champion of Boys High School. In the tournament just finished at East Lake Starr and Harris won the doubles, and Starr also won the singles.

* * *

Harris, who was Starr's running mate in the doubles, was picked to win in the singles, but in the play off between himself and Starr, the latter came off victorious. Three sets were played, and Starr's score was 4—6, 7—7 and 7—5. Jones was the runner-up in the singles.

* * *

Starr has issued a challenge to meet any tennis player in the Prep League. This challenge is not confined to the Atlanta prep schools, however, as Starr is willing to meet any prep school tennis player in the State.

* * *

Gordon and Riverside will clash today in a game that means much in deciding the prep championship of the State. Riverside has yet to meet defeat this year. If Gordon can beat them, they can lay claim to the championship. Slappey, the star southpaw, will do the twirling for Riverside.

* * *

Coach Peebles, of Emory, has picked the track squad which will represent the school in the meet which Mercer at Macon to-day. The big point winner will no doubt be Carlton, the senior, who singled-handed won enough points in the inter-class meet last week to give his class the highest total number of points.

* * *

Emory is determined to make a creditable showing in the meet to-day, as it is the first time the school has participated in inter-collegiate athletics in three years. There are thirteen athletes on the squad.

* * *

The Freshman class is still in the lead in the inter-class baseball tournament at Emory College. Yesterday the Freshmen beat the Sophomores by a score of 12 to 3. The Freshmen are three whole games to the good in the standing of the teams.

* * *

Here is the standing of the teams in the class tournament at Emory:

	Won.	Lost.	P. C.
Freshmen	5	1	.833
Sophomores	3	2	.600
Seniors	2	2	.500
Juniors	0	5	.000

* * *

The G. M. A. cadets were honored yesterday afternoon at their weekly dress parade by the presence of Governor and Mrs. Brown. After the dress parade was finished a military drill was held, including wall scaling feats and target practice.

* * *

Immediately after the drill was over the track men were out in their uniforms, practicing hard for the prep meet which takes place next Friday.

* * *

If the Boys High athletes continue in their determination not to enter the prep meet on May 9, there will be not more than thirty or forty entries in all. The decision of the Boys High team will rob the meet of much of its interest. Lockridge was expected to hang up some new records in the broad jump and hurdles.

* * *

Bill Bedell, of Tech High, is well again and is down to hard work in preparation for the meet May 9. Bedell is Tech High's main hope in this meet, and if he does not win at least two firsts the students will be disappointed.

* * *

At present the real fight for the local prep championship appears to be between Marist and Boys High, with the odds slightly in favor of the latter team, which has not lost a game and has won four. Marist has won three and lost one. The two teams will meet next week, and a fierce battle is expected.

* * *

The defeat of Tech High last Tuesday almost put the high school lads out of the race. The team has won three and lost two games. They will have to win all of the remaining games on the schedule in order to cop the pennant.

* * *

Holtzendorff, of Boys High, looks good in the pole vault in the meet next Friday. He won this event easily in the high school meet April 18 at Tech Flats, and has been practicing steadily ever since. He can now do over 9 feet without any trouble.

SEWANEE WILL TRY AGAIN TO BEAT JACKETS

THE Tech and Sewanee baseball teams will hook up this afternoon at Grant Field in the closing game of their series.

Coach Heisman is a little undecided about his battery men, but will use either Pitts or Eubanks on the slab, probably the former. Gordon probably will work for Sewanee.

The rejuvenated Jackets trounced the Tigers yesterday to the tune of 13 to 0 in a game replete with hits and errors, mostly hits. The Techites had their batting clothes on and rapped Eggleston from the box in the second inning. McGoodwin, who replaced him, fared little better, and was relieved by Hammond in the sixth. Hammond pitched better ball and managed to hold the swatting Jackets to one hit for the remainder of the game.

Eubanks pitched stellar ball for Tech for four innings, allowing no hits, but was replaced by Gambill, who was touched up for a total of five, two of them being slow infield hits.

Second Inning Was BIG.

In the second inning, when the Jackets put across their swat fest, Montague was given a free pass to first and was advanced to second when Malone landed safe at first on Hammond's error. Amason beat out an infield hit and was safe with the bases full. Attridge bingled to left, scoring the first two runs of the game. T. Montague was next safe on Hammond's error, which scored Amason and Attridge. Montague managed to reach third on this play and stole home. Wooten placed one in the center garden, taking second on Moore's sacrifice, and was scored by Pitts' single to right. P. Montague filed out to Fanning and the agony was over. His did it, coupled with the Jackets' daring and heady base running. A story of the whole game would read much the same. But the contest was won right then and further details would be only adding insult to insult. The fielding of both teams was bright in patches, despite a few misplays, while the batting of Tech was a great improvement over other games this season. Their base running showed up well.

SYLVANIA PRISONER NOT SOUTH CAROLINA SLAYER

AUGUSTA, GA., May 3.—The negro suspect captured at Sylvania yesterday afternoon proved not to be Henry Austin, who killed two and wounded four white men in South Carolina, near the Savannah River. The negro arrested at Sylvania was a Georgia negro, who proved to the satisfaction of his captors that he had not been in South Carolina very recently at least. Austin is still at large.

FATHER TIME FANS ALL WHO STICK AROUND

THE passing from the Southern League of Otto Jordan, for years a landmark and in his prime the greatest fielder the league ever knew, recalls again to mind the old truth that youth and speed, not age and brains, win in baseball.

This year has been a hard one on old timers in Dixie. Harry Matthews tried it down in New Orleans but they couldn't see him. The old noodle was working, the arm wasn't; his head knew the rules but his legs had forgotten how to run.

Tommy Fisher was going to try a come back but he changed his mind. Lew McAllister, one of the world's best in his day, came to Atlanta, tried out and went back again. Teddy Bair and Dock Moskiman refused to report to the Vols rather than exhibit the infirmities due to advancing years; the Lookouts are about ready to part with Bill Chappelle, a fine old timer; Maloney, once a marvellous player, has just passed from the Mobile team.

It's the Same in Big Leagues.

In the major leagues also each passing year chants out the swan song of some battle-scarred veteran. The demands of age cannot be ignored; youth will be served, and every little while taps are being sounded for the retirement of one more diamond hero who has doffed his hat for the last time to the plaudits of thousands.

This year tends one to believe that the death knell of one shortstop at least is dangerously near the sounding point. This time it seems to be that grand player, Rhodie Wallace, of the St. Louis Browns. Then, too, reports from Pittsburg, though optimistic, still have a tang of forboding about them that cannot be ignored. Wagner's knee is good to-day. How long will it last? the fans ask. For physicians appear to be a unit in declaring that injuries to one's knee have a discomfiting habit of bobbing up a long time after everything seems to have been covered over about the member.

MERCER CAPTURES FINAL GAME FROM VANDEBBILT

MACON, GA., May 3.—Mercer captured the last game of the series with Vanderbilt yesterday by the score of 7 to 2. The Commodores at no time had a chance. The Baptists took the lead from the first, outclassed, outhit and outplayed the winners of Thursday's game.

Hunt twirled for the winners, while McClure did slab duty for the Commodores.

News of the Ring Game

Jimmy Grant is on the warpath. Jimmy read Meyer Fries' challenge in The Georgian the other day. "So he wants to fight me, hey?" said the little Chicago boy. "Well, let him get a side bet of $500 and I will let him come in at catch-weights and fight him winner take all." After departing with these few words, Jimmy galloped up Peachtree Street, with George Gaelets, his backer, at his heels.

JACKET TRACK TEAM OFF FOR CLEMSON MEET

The Tech track team left this morning for Clemson, S. C., where they will compete with the track team representing Clemson College. This is the first meet of the season for the Techites, owing to the inability to arrange agreeable dates with the neighboring colleges, and it should bring out the best the Jackets have.

Coach Thomas has been putting his men through some stiff work the past few weeks and is confident of a victory. The Hillbillies from Clemson have a past record to be proud of and will endeavor to retain all their laurels.

Of the men who will make the trip, Logan, Robinson, Smith and Leuhrmann are veterans of last year, who hold good records, and they can be depended upon to bring home the bacon in their events.

No-Rim-Cut Tires 10% Oversize

The Truth

One may be sure that Time and Meters tell the bare, plain truth on tires.

False claims may have a brief effect. But you may depend that the tire which leads in the long run has made its claims come true.

We ask you to judge the Goodyears by the place they hold after fourteen years' comparison.

The Top Place

Goodyear tires, by long odds, are the most popular tires in the world.

The demand has grown like an avalanche since motorists found them out.

Last year's sales by far exceeded our previous 12 years put together. And this year's sales to users is running twice as large as last.

The Verdict of 300,000

Over two million Goodyears have gone into use, on perhaps 300,000 cars.

So this matchless demand embodies the verdict of 300,000 men.

Not men who are guessing. These are days of metered mileage. Men are watching tire upkeep.

No doubtful advantage, no petty saving, brought this flood of favor to No-Rim-Cut tires.

It Was This

It was the fact that these new-type tires ended the ruin of rim-cutting.

These oversize tires, under average conditions, added 25 per cent to the tire mileage.

And the Goodyear experts, better than others, solved the problems of tire endurance. You'll find this out, as others have, when you make the test.

THREE ANGLES DEVELOP FROM TITLTE BATTLE

By W. W. Naughton.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF., May 3.—"If Kilbane had shown more willingness, you would have seen a better fight," said the Dundee crowd.

"If Dundee had been a little more inclined to mix it there would have been an entirely different verdict," said Kilbane's followers.

"There was too much feinting and holding on by both men," said the disgruntled fans.

There you have the three angles of the recent featherweight championship contest.

Each of the principals is thoroughly willing to try it all over again, and each claims that a draw decision will not be possible next time. Considering the careful training they had, it is not easy to see how either lad could improve to any particular extent on what he showed Tuesday night, and, in the meantime, there is no clamorous demand for another engagement.

The idea prevails, for that matter, that a second contest might prove tamer still. There is such a thing as rival boxers becoming too well acquainted with each other's strong points and adopting precautions that would render each successive match in which they figured more listless than its predecessor.

The blow fell hardest on Kilbane's followers. This because there was nothing in the affair to justify the making of the champion an odds-on 10 to 4 favorite.

Explanations are in order, of course, and an exceedingly naive one was furnished by a touring sportsman who comes from the champion's home town.

"Here is the way I account for it," said the man from Cleveland. "To begin with, the Kilbane men were deprived of an opportunity to make a clean-up in the betting. When it comes to laying 10 to 4 you have to place a fortune to win anything, and it is not worth the risk. All right. Now, it seems to me, they figured that if Kilbane beat Dundee too decisively Kilbane would be fighting himself out of a job. It is all very well to talk of Kilbane going in with the lightweights, but I think he'd rather stay with the feathers. He saw he would not win any bets by defeating Dundee, and he probably made up his mind to do just enough to earn the decision and then look forward to another go with Dundee in New York. You know they would draw a tremendous crowd at Madison Square Garden, and the New Yorkers would be quite willing to accept 10 to 8 against Dundee."

"But Kilbane did not do enough to earn the decision," was remarked.

"Well, that's purely a matter of opinion. I think he did."

SOUSA SHOOTS TO-DAY AT BROOKHAVEN GUN CLUB

The Brookhaven Gun Club will hold its first shoot of the season on the club grounds this afternoon. John Philip Sousa, famous band leader and one of the most expert trap shooters in the United States, will be the guest of Mr. Lester and will participate in the shoot.

At present Mr. Sousa is on a vacation tour and likes nothing better than a few hours sport with the blue rocks. A new trap has been installed on the grounds and another one will be set up later in the season. The shoot to-day is an exhibition match and is open to all members of the club.

MICHAEL M'DERMOTT WINS NATIONAL TANK TITLE

CHICAGO, May 3.—Michael McDermott, of the Illinois Athletic Club, won the National Amateur Athletic Union breast-stroke championship for 220 yards last night in 2:55 2-5, almost 20 seconds below his world's record.

A new world's record was made when eighteen members of the I. A. C., composing a relay team, swam a mile in 18:46 4-5, bettering the record held by the club of 18:52.

JOHN L. HAD REAL K. O.

Fans Like Fighter With a Wallop

By Ed. W. Smith.

CHICAGO, ILL., May 3.—One must admire the clever ringster who gets away with the pretty stuff and does the job up beautifully, but when one gets right down to cases it's the party whose one mighty wallop stretches the foe out on his back for the full count who becomes king in a night, and stays king as long as the punch is in good working order. In other words, while the clever fellow may even become champion, the walloper who continually displays the K. O. swat is first in the hearts of his countrymen, even though he may never become a champion. The case of Johnny Kilbane is a good one in point. Lots and lots of fans would go to see Johnny and come away marveling at his wonderful footwork, his infallible judgment of distance and other technical points. But they would talk longer and rave louder over one of Matty McCue's knockouts.

Sullivan a Hero.

Back in the days of long ago when Mr. Sullivan, of Boston, discovered that he could club them into somnolence better with a five-ounce glove wrapped tightly around his Milesian fist than he could with the bare digit, he became one of the world's greatest, or at least one of the world's most admired men. Those who didn't openly admire the first Queensberry champion at least did so secretly, for he was a red-blooded fellow with the wallop. And wallopers ever since have commanded first call in the attention of the races. Clever Corbett was never exactly an idol, though one of the world's greatest boxers. His successor, Fitzsimmons, who knocked 'em dead with one punch, was a huge idol, despite his foreign origin, and Jeffries, too, because of the weight of his blow, was looked upon as invincible for years.

Britt Defeated Corbett.

So it has been in other clases. Terry McGovern was the scream of the nation for years and years, though he never really attained any particular championship. He was whipped by another puncher, who in turn fell before speed and cleverness. But the men who whipped Young Corbett never got the glad acclaim from the fans that greeted either Corbett or McGovern when they appeared in the squared arena. The ideal fighter in the eyes of the general or average fight fan is the chap who combines skill and force, a man of the Joe Gans or the Stanley Ketchel or the Bob Fitzsimmons type. This type is mighty rare, for the fighter of today is there to gather the shekels and thinks more of dodging a blackened eye or a bruised mouth than he does of knocking an opponent out.

Naughton's Judgment Good.

Perhaps Referee Eyton may have some of these ideas in mind when he called that Los Angeles scrap between Kilbane and Dundee a draw the other night. From all accounts Kilbane got more than a shade the worst of that verdict, though our old side-kick, Bill Naughton, never mentions it as being a wrong verdict—and we bank more than a little on Uncle Bill's judgment. So perhaps it was all right after all and that Kilbane didn't really beat the hardy little Italian from New York. Kilbane is a wonderful boxer, but he hasn't the mule-like swat that makes for public idolatry.

McCue Didn't Stop Williams.

Matty McCue didn't make it ten straight knockouts when he met Posey Williams in Milwaukee the other night in a six-round bout. Posey went in there to stay, and stay he did. A boxer who is trying to knock out a man who is strictly on the defensive has little chance, for he gets few openings and the other fellow is devoting every instant of his time to dodging that K. O. punch that he knows is coming over. You must get a man to open up if you would knock him out, and this evidently Matty failed to accomplish.

Matty vs. O'Connell.

Jeff O'Connell, the little Briton, who is Matty's next serious opponent, is not going to lack for backing when he faces the Racine star. Jim McNulty, of the West Side, is a staunch friend of Jeff and says that if Jeff trains properly for the contest he will wager $1,000 that he gets the popular verdict in ten rounds. Joe D'Andrea also is a supporter of the O'Connell end on this occasion.

DREAD OF TOE HOLD DEFEATS ALL FOREIGNERS

CHICAGO, May 3.—It is the fear of the terrible toe hold that foreign wrestlers have that defeats them before they get into the ring with Frank Gotch. This at least is the opinion of Gotch himself, expressed when he was in the city the other day and discussed his recent bout in Kansas City with George Lurich, the Russian.

This was described by the Kansas City sport writers as an easy thing for the Humboldt man, they claiming that Lurich did not show anywhere near as well against the champion as he did against some of the lesser lights that he tackled there in previous matches.

That was perfectly natural, for a champion is supposed to show superiority over all of them. But Gotch has his own explanation of the situation, that developed just before and immediately after Lurich faced him in the ring.

Hold Talk of Europe.

"You can bet all you've got in the world that this toe hold of mine—of course other wrestlers use it, but it generally has been credited to me as being something of my own invention—has been the talk of Europe ever since I defeated Hackenschmidt the first time," Gotch said. "Remember that I have been over there and know just how they feel about it.

"Of course it gets noised around for wrestlers are no different from any other kind of people, and do a lot of gossiping among themselves. I heard some of this while I was over there and know that the Europeans look upon me as being some sort of a terrible animal and a bone crusher.

"Naturally this gossip goes from one to another, and the stories do not lose anything by repetition. They think over there that all I do is to get the toe hold, or try to get it, all the time I am wrestling.

Seldom Uses Toe Grip.

"As a matter of fact, I have used it but seldom, and do not know at all that I ever won a fall with it in an important match. Wrestlers over here know that I use it more for a feint than anything else.

"It is useful for that, especially when an opponent has his legs tightly clamped together. Well, at any rate, when Lurich was preparing for the ring he was talking excitedly in German to his handlers, and the whole gist of the conversation was on the toe hold.

"When finally we were ready to begin and started for the ring I noticed that he was as white as chalk and looked about as nervous as any man I ever saw. This didn't wear off at all after we got started, and he kept jerking his feet and legs away from me in a horrified manner every time I reached for him.

"I knew what he was thinking of and naturally kept him worried by feinting at him. This made him forget all that he seemed to know about ordinary wrestling and naturally made him an easy mark.

"Hack" Feared Clutch.

"Hackenschmidt was really afraid of the same thing, and the constant brooding over the toe hold in advance of a match with me beats all of them. You see, the hold hits the knee more than any other place, as the leverage is placed right there. And water on the knee is an athlete's most hideous nightmare. Once you get that you are out of business for all time."

It may be mentioned right here that George Hackenschmidt was put completely out of business through the injury he suffered to his knee while training for the second Gotch bout. It is understood on this side that Hackenschmidt has had several operations to relieve the injury, but that they have been unsuccessful.

In consequence the once mighty Russian is unable to show with even a posing act. It is said that his career is completely at an end.

GOLF IS URGED FOR PREACHERS BY CHICK EVANS

By "Chick" Evans.

NOT long ago I received a letter from a friend who lives in a little town in Michigan. He asked me to select some golf clubs and he particularly desired me to use my very best judgment in the matter of selection.

He explained that the clubs were not for himself, but for a clergyman and he thought that if the clubs were the best possible the preacher would be spared the provocation that so frequently leads the average golfer to do and say very unclerical things.

It is perhaps hardly necessary to say that I was only pleased to use the utmost pains in choosing clubs for the reverend gentleman, from the early beginning of my own game I have always had a particularly kindly feeling for men of his profession, and I have always believed that golf is the one game that is certainly adapted to their needs. It certainly would prove of great benefit to the health and happiness of overworked, earnest and discontented priests and preachers.

MUTT and JEFF COLUMN

OUR private opinion is that Jack Prince is going to coin money with that track of his, out at the old show grounds. With a million feet of timber already delivered—or maybe it was a billion—Jack always deals in big, round figures—and a hundred carpenters at his command, Jack will start things whooping today and keep them that way until the third week of this month, when he expects to be ready to open his doors

This town is going wild over motorcycle racing on a soup dish track. It wanted to go crazy over automobile racing but the Speedway was so far from Atlanta there wasn't a chance. They were inclined to be keen over bicycle racing but the Coliseum was too far from Five Points.

Jack Prince now promises to give them something about twice as exciting as automobile racing and bicycle racing rolled together. And he will stage it at a new track only a stone's throw off you're a good thrower) from the center of Atlanta.

Of course Jack has rounded up the cream of the world's talent—you all know Jack—and he is going to put on something that will set the place ablaze.

It really looks like a great proposition, from an amusement viewpoint. The people are sure to take to it strong.

I forgot to tell you in my last letter about Dad's coming to town. It seems as dad is dead set agin me fitin and he found where I was trainin so he came around and wanted me to go back home, he said that I mite better be home helpin on the farm, plowing and hay fever coming on and he with his hands full and me here in the city fooling my time away and the city fellers making a fool of me, interest comming due on the mortgage and no bread in the house. I told dad that i couldnt quit now cause the fellers would say I had a streak of yeller in me quitin.

Yesterday that litle cuse Ike Mann showed up again and i asked him if he wanted to put on the gloves agin and he said nix. then he called me off to one side and asked me if i would throw the fite for $300 and how far. I asked him what he meant, he said he would give me $300. if i would lay down to Cyclops sam after a while i found out what he wanted. he wanted me to make believe that cyclops sam liks me in our fite. I told him I was in this fite to win

I got to begin climbing telegraph poles to-morrow and strengthin my stommick and chest muskels, I got to climb 24 poles every day till the fite, great exercize but kind of hard work climbing so many every day steddy. my bad dreams still keep up, last night I dreamed i was climbing Mt. M'kinley with Dock Cook when my foot slipped and I fell down the mountain bout 5 miles and landed in a big pile of dutch cheese. I think that all comes from eatin so much cheese. but it may mean I'm in Dutch I dunno. I believe I am getting faster every day now just from drinking slippery ellum tea. Bud stebbin the town custabul of Joshua called on me to day and say it's funny but I'll have to wait till next week to tell you about it. tell all your friends to place their bets on yours truly

By MAX.

MARCH 25.—I comforted myself during that long period at the dinner table when the widow devoted herself to Jack Spencer with the reflection that at least I would get to put her on her train. I listened abstractedly to Jack's stories about his collection of scimitars with my mind busy planning all I wanted to say. She wasn't going far; perhaps, I could arrange to follow her in a day or two, and spend a day with her. Perhaps—who knows?—she might make love to me as violently as when we were in Florida in the winter.

The thought of such delicious danger thrilled me, and I was glad when we started back to the station.

We had reached the waiting room, and Jack, who seemed extremely officious, I thought, had sent me to the check room for Mrs. Brown's handbag, where I had to stand in line fully 15 minutes. It was annoying, of course, but in a few minutes, I thought, I would have the widow to myself, and that would make up for a great deal.

A Surprise.

Judge of my surprise, Diary, when I returned, to have Jack grab the bag from my hand, saying, in the coolest, most matter-of-fact way, "I'll put Mrs. Brown on her train, Max. I want to tell her the story of that scimitar I picked up in Tokio. You stay here with Sallie."

There was a hurried handshake with me, a renewed recital of the pleasure she had experienced in meeting Mrs. Spencer, and the widow was gone! For a moment I was dazed. I gazed blankly after them, Jack, leaning over the widow, as they walked, now if he had found a long lost possession, and was afraid if his eyes were removed he would lose it; then my eyes turned to Mrs. Spencer.

She didn't look bewildered, but on her face there was the slightest suspicion of a frown. Plainly, she was mad, but, just as plainly, she was too diplomatic to show it, even to me.

Then the humor of the situation flashed over me, and I fell into the seat next to hers, overcome with laughter. I believe I howled, I know I shrieked, and shook, and I know that others around me looked as if I might have gone suddenly insane, while on the faces of some there appeared a sympathetic grin. I hadn't laughed till the tears came in twenty years, but I laughed then till they rolled down my cheeks, and through it all Sallie Spencer never smiled.

It is a most fortunate dispensation of Providence that women have no sense of humor. If they had, they would laugh at themselves till they laughed themselves to death. Here sat Sallie Spencer, who had voluntarily made a sacrifice of her comfort that she might prevent a very fascinating woman having her old friend at her mercies for an evening, and perhaps eloping with him; and that most fascinating woman had carried off her husband instead. And she didn't see anything funny in it!

On the contrary, the more I laughed the more annoyed she grew.

"I hope," she said at length, "that you are enjoying yourself. I am sure I don't see anything funny in the situation."

Whereupon I laughed the harder, and was still laughing, with my mirth ebbing away in faint chuckles, when Jack returned.

"Why didn't you tell me, Max," he said, "that your friend is so interested in scimitars? Really, she is the most intelligent and appreciative woman I ever knew."

I pinched Mrs. Jack's arm as I replied: "Yes, she is very clever, a lot more interesting than the majority of these dull women we know who don't know a scimitar from a pickax and who would use one for cutting their corns if they had it."

Mrs. Jack gave me a reproachful look over her husband's shoulder, and I fell behind just long enough to laugh again.

Poor, Simple Jack.

Our talk was along the same line when in the limousine on the way home—Jack extolling the widow's beauty and her wit and I repeating at every opportunity what a great thing it was to meet a woman so clever.

"I'll wager, Jack," I said, "that you enjoyed her more than you have enjoyed any woman in years. It must be a great thing for a man like you to meet a kindred soul like hers. She isn't bound down to the plane of the commonplace like the women who keep house and think it is a great feat to get up a good dinner. Why, that woman can tell at a glance if a scimitar came from Adrianople or Damascus! And isn't that better, I want to know, than knowing a chuck steak from a porterhouse?"

I can count the compliments I paid the widow by the black and blue marks on my arm. Sallie Spencer giving me a pinch for every one, while Jack, on the opposite seat, saw nothing and detected no sarcasm in what I was saying.

When a man has a fad, he becomes insane on that subject. Here was a man whose fad was making him so insane it had led him to draw comparisons unfavorable to his wife; a woman who had always regarded his fad as something harmless because it kept him out of greater mischief. And she had seen in it nothing more.

I was not at all surprised this morning, while engaged in my hourly exercise of rescuing Manette's brown-eyed pup from larger dogs, and later in rescuing her kittens from the brown-eyed pup, to be called to the telephone and to hear Mrs. Spencer asking me to come right over. She wanted to have a talk with me.

A Powerful Story of Adventure, Intrigue and Love

WITHIN THE LAW

By MARVIN DANA from the Play of BAYARD VEILLER

What Has Gone Before

Mary Turner, a beautiful and refined girl, worked in the great Gilder store in New York.

There had been thefts in the store. They had been traced eventually to a certain department, that in which Mary worked. The detective was alert. Some valuable silks were missed. Search followed immediately. The goods were found in Mary's locker. That was enough. She was charged with the theft. She protested innocence—only to be laughed at in derision by her accusers. Every thief declares innocence. Mr. Gilder himself was emphatic against her. The thieving had been long continued. An example must be made. The girl was arrested. The jury found her guilty and she was sentenced to prison for three years.

Dick Gilder, the store proprietor's son, returns unexpectedly from Europe because he was homesick for his father. The latter's secretary tells him that Mr. Gilder has gone to court, that one of the girls was arrested for stealing.

"And Dad went to court to get her out of the scrape!" cries Dick. "That's just like the old man."

Now Go On With the Story

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"What's the use of all this pretense?" he demanded, sharply. "You were given a fair trial, and there's an end of it."

The girl, standing there so feebly, seeming indeed to cling for support to the man who always held her thus closely by the wrist, spoke again with an astonishing clearness, even with a sort of vivacity, as if she explained easily something otherwise in doubt.

"Oh, no, I wasn't!" she contradicted bluntly, with a singular confidence of assertion. "Why, if the trial had been fair, I shouldn't be here."

"That's What They All Say."

The harsh voice of Cassidy again broke in on the passion of the girl with a professional sneer.

"That's another thing they all say."

But the girl went on speaking fiercely, impervious to the man's coarse sarcasm, her eyes, which had deepened almost to purple, still fixed piercingly on Gilder, who, for some reason wholly inexplicable to him, felt himself strangely disturbed under that regard.

"Do you call it fair when the lawyer I had was only a boy—one whom the court told me to take, a boy trying his first case—my case, that meant the ruin of my life? My lawyer! Why, he was just getting experience—getting it at my expense!" The girl paused as if exhausted by the vehemence of her emotion, and at last the sparkling eyes drooped and the heavy lids closed over them. She swayed a little, so that the officer tightened his clasp on her wrist.

There followed a few seconds of silence. Then Gilder made an effort to shake off the feeling that had so possessed him, and to acertain degree he succeeded.

"The jury found you guilty," he asserted, with an attempt to make his voice magisterial in its severity.

Mary Was Aroused.

Instantly, Mary was aroused to a new outburst of protest. Once again her eyes shot their fires at the man seated behind the desk, and she went forward a step imperiously, dragging the officer in her wake.

"Yes, the jury found me guilty," she agreed, with fine scorn in the musical cadences of her voice. "Do you know why? I can tell you, Mr. Gilder. It was because they had been out for three hours without reaching a decision. The evidence didn't seem to be quite enough for some of them, after all. Well, the judge threatened to lock them up all night. The men wanted to get home. The easy thing to do was to find me guilty, and let it go at that. Was that fair, do you think? And that's not all, either. Was it fair of you, Mr. Gilder? Was it fair of you to come to the court this morning and tell the judge that I should be sent to prison as a warning to others?"

A quick flush burned on the massive face of the man whom she thus accused, and his eyes refused to meet her steady gaze of reproach.

"You know!" he exclaimed, in momentary consternation. Again her mood had affected his own, so that through a few hurrying seconds he felt himself somehow guilty of wrong against this girl, so frank and so rebuking.

"I heard you in the court room," she said. "The dock isn't very far from the bench where you spoke to the judge about my case. Yes, I heard you. It wasn't: Did I do it? Or didn't I do it? No; it was only that I must be made a warning to others."

Fell on Unheading Ears.

Again silence fell for a tense interval. Then, finally, the girl spoke in a different tone. Where before her voice had been vibrant with the instinct of complaint against the mockery of justice under which she suffered, now there was a deeper note, that of most solemn truth.

"Mr. Gilder," she said simply, "as God is my judge, I am going to prison for three years for something I didn't do."

But the sincerity of her broken cry fell on unheeding ears. The coarse nature of the officer had long ago lost whatever elements of softness there might have been to develop in a gentler occupation. As for the owner of the store, he was not sufficiently sensitive to feel the verity in the accents of the speaker. Moreover, he was a man who followed the conventional, with never a distraction due to imagination and sympathy. Just now, too, he was experiencing a keen irritation against himself because of the manner in which he had been sensible to the influence of her protestation, despite his will to the contrary. That irritation against himself only reacted against the girl and caused him to steel his heart to resist any tendency toward commiseration. So this declaration of innocence was made quite in vain—indeed, served rather to strengthen his disfavor toward the complainant and to make his manner harsher when she voiced the pitiful question over which she had wondered and grieved.

"Why did you ask the judge to send me to prison?"

"The thieving that has been going on in this store for more than a year has got to stop," Gilder answered emphatically, with all his usual energy of manner restored. As he spoke he raised his eyes and met the girl's glance fairly. Thought of the robberies was quite enough to make him pitiless toward the offender.

"Sending me to prison won't stop it," Mary Turner said, drearily.

"Perhaps not," Gilder sternly retorted. "But the discovery and punishment of the other guilty ones will." His manner changed to a business-like alertness. "You sent word to me that you could tell me how to stop the thefts in the store. Well, my girl, do this, and, while I can make no definite promise, I'll see what can be done about getting you out of your present difficulty." He picked up a pencil, pulled a pad of blank paper convenient to his hand and looked at the girl expectantly, with aggressive inquiry in his gaze. "Tell me now," he concluded, "who were your pals?"

It Was the Last Straw.

The matter-of-fact manner of this man who had unwittingly wronged her so frightfully was the last straw on the girl's burden of suffering. Under it, her patient endurance broke, and she cried out in a voice of utter despair that caused Gilder to start nervously, and even impelled the stolid officer to a frown of remonstrance.

"I have no pals!" she ejaculated, furiously. "I never stole anything in my life. Must I go on telling you over and over again?" Her voice rose in a wail of misery. "Oh, why won't any one believe me?"

Gilder was much offended by this display of an hysterical grief, which seemed to his phlegmatic temperament altogether unwarranted by the circumstances. He spoke decisively:

"Unless you can control yourself, you must go." He pushed away the pad of paper and tossed the pencil aside in physical expression of his displeasure. "Why did you send that message if you had nothing to say?" he demanded, with increasing choler.

"Give Them a Fair Chance."

But now the girl had regained her former poise. She stood a little drooping and shaken, where for a moment she had been erect and tensed. There was a vast weariness in her words as she answered:

"I have something to tell you, Mr. Gilder," she said, quietly. "Only, I—I sort of lost my grip on the way here, with this man by my side."

"Most of 'em do, the first time," the officer commented, with a certain grim appreciation.

"Well?" Gilder insisted querulously, as the girl hesitated.

At once, Mary went on speaking, and now a little increase of vigor trembled in her tones.

"When you sit in a cell for three months waiting for your trial, as I did, you think a lot. And, so, I got the idea that if I could talk to you I might be able to make you understand what's really wrong. And if I could do that, and so help out the other girls, what has happened to me would not, after all, be quite so awful—so useless, somehow." Her voice lowered to a quick pleading, and she bent toward the man at the desk. "Mr. Gilder," she questioned, "do you really want to stop the girls from stealing?"

"Most certainly I do," came the forcible reply.

The girl spoke with a great earnestness, deliberately.

"Then give them a fair chance."

The magnate stared in sincere astonishment over this absurd, this futile suggestion for his guidance.

"What do you mean?" he vociferated, with rising indignation. There was an added hostility in his demeanor, for it seemed to him that this thief of his goods whom he had brought to justice was daring to trifle with him. He grew wrathful over the suspicion, but a secret curiosity still held his temper within bounds. "What do you mean?" he repeated; and now the full force of his strong voice set the room trembling.

The tones of the girl came softly musical, made more delicately resonant to the ear by contrast with the man's roaring.

"Why," she said, very gently, "I mean just this: Give them a living chance to be honest."

"A living chance!" The two words were exploded with dynamic violence. The preposterousness of the advice fired Gilder with resentment so pervasive that through many seconds he found himself unable to express the rage that flamed within him.

The girl showed herself undismayed by his anger.

"Yes," she went on, quietly; "that's all there is to it. Give them a living chance to get enough food to eat, and a decent room to sleep in, and shoes that will keep their feet off the pavement winter mornings. Do you think that any girl wants to steal? Do you think that any girl wants to risk——?"

By this time, however, Gilder had regained his powers of speech, and he interrupted stormily:

"And is this what you have taken up my time for? You want to make a maudlin plea for guilty, dishonest girls, when I thought you really meant to bring me facts."

Nevertheless, Mary went on with her arraignment uncompromisingly. There was a strange, compelling energy in her inflections that penetrated even the pachydermatous officer, so that, though he thought her raving, he let her rave on, which was not at all his habit of conduct, and did indeed surprise him mightily. As for Gilder, he felt helpless in some puzzling fashion that was totally foreign to his ordinary self. He was still glowing with wrath over the method by which he had been victimized into giving the girl a hearing. Yet, despite his chagrin, he realized that he could not send her from him forthwith. By

"We can't fight when ladies are conerned," he went on, "so if you will just hand over General Hastings' letters, why, here's your money."

with grave questioning in her violet eyes. Under the urgency of emotion, color crept into the pallid cheeks, and now her face was very beautiful—so beautiful, indeed, that for a little the charm of its loveliness caught the man's gaze, and he watched her with a new respect, born of appreciation for her feminine delightfulness. The impression was far too brief. Gilder was not given to esthetic raptures over women. Always, the business instinct was the dominent. So, after the short period of amazed admiration over such unexpected winsomeness, his thoughts flew back angrily to the matters whereof she spoke so ridiculously.

"I don't care to discuss these things," he declared peremptorily, as the girl remained silent for a moment.

"I Change My Policy?"

"And I have no wish to discuss anything," Mary returned evenly. "I only want to give you what you asked for—facts." A faint smile of reminiscence curved the girl's lips. "When they first locked me up," she explained, without any particular evidence of emotion, "I used to sit and hate you."

"Oh, of course!" came the caustic exclamation from Gilder.

"And then, I thought that perhaps you did not understand," Mary continued; "that if I were to tell you how things really are it might be you would change them somehow."

At this ingenuous statement the owner of the store gave forth a gasp of sheer stupefaction.

"I!" he cried, incredulously. "I change my business policy because you ask me to!"

There was something imperturbable in the quality of the voice as the girl went resolutely forward with her explanation. It was as if she were discharging a duty not to be gainsaid, not to be thwarted by any difficulty, not even the realization that all the effort must be ultimately in vain.

"Do you know how we girls live? But, of course you don't!" Three of us in one room, doing our own cooking over a two-burner gas stove, and our own washing and ironing evenings after being on our feet for nine hours."

The enumeration of the sordid details left the employer absolutely unmoved, since he lacked the imagination necessary to sympathize actually with the straining evil of a life such as the girl had known. Indeed, he spoke with an air of just remonstrance, as if the girl's charges were mischievously faulty.

"I have provided chairs behind the counters," he stated.

She Shook Her Head.

There was no especial change in the girl's voice as she answered his defense. It continued musically low, but there was in it the insistent note of sincerity.

"But have you ever seen a girl sitting in one of them?" she questioned, coldly. "Please answer me. Have you? Of course not," she said, after a little pause, during which the owner had remained silent. She shook her head in emphatic negation. "And do you understand why? It's simply because every girl knows that the manager of her department would think he could get along without her if he were to see her sitting down—loafing, you know! So, she would be discharged. All it amounts to is that, after being on her feet for nine hours, the girl usually walks home in order to save car fare. Yes, she walks, whether sick or well. Anyhow, you are generally so tired it don't make much difference which you are."

Gilder was fuming under these strictures, which seemed to him altogether baseless attacks on himself. His exasperation steadily waxed against the girl, a convicted felon, who thus had the audacity to beard him.

"What has all this to do with the question of theft in the store?" he rumbled, huffily. "That was the excuse of your coming here. And instead of telling me something, you rant about gas stoves and car fare."

The inexorable voice went on in its monotone, as if he had not spoken.

"And, when you are really sick and have to stop work, what are you doing to do then? Do you know, Mr. Gilder, that the first time a straight girl steals, it's often because she had to have a doctor—or some luxury like that? And some of them do worse than steal. Yes, they do—girls that started straight and wanted to stay that way. But, of course, some of them get so tired of the whole grind that—that—"

His Anger Flamed High.

The man who was the employer of hundreds concerning whom these grim truths were uttered, stirred uneasily in his chair, and there came a touch of color into the healthy brown of his cheeks as he spoke his protest.

"I'm not their guardian. I can't watch over them after they leave the store. They are paid the current rate of wages—as much as any other store pays." As he spoke, the anger provoked by this unexpected assault on him out of the mouth of a convict flamed high in virtuous repudiation. "Why," he went on vehemently, "no man living does more for his employees than I do. Who gave the girls their fine rest rooms upstairs? I did! Who gave them the cheap lunch rooms? I did!"

"But you won't pay them enough to live on!" The very fact that the words were spoken without any trace of rancor merely made this statement of indisputable truth obnoxious to the man, who was stung to more savage resentment in asserting his impugned self-righteousness.

"I pay them the same as the other stores do," he repeated, sullenly.

Yet once again the gently cadenced voice gave answer, an answer informed with that repulsive insistence to the man who sought to resist her indictment of him.

"But you won't pay them enough to live on." The simple lucidity of the charge forbade direct reply.

Gilder betook himself to evasion by harking back to the established ground of complaint.

"And so you claim that you were forced to steal. That's the plea you make for yourself and your friends."

To Be Continued Monday.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

PA took Ma & me to a moving picture show last nite. Pa sed that it was going to be a grate show bekaus Mister Art Beringer sent all the way to New York for the picters, & he wanted us to go espeshully to see a grate drama called Queenie, the Quarry Man's Daughter. So we went to the show & all the time thay was showing the first picters Pa kep telling Ma & me to wait until they had the stone quarry picter. I saw the rehearsal of it this forenoon, Pa sed, & it is a pretty story. It seems that the father of the gurl Queenie is a honest man & he does not like the gurl's sweetheart, a Italian with a lot of munny that is going to marry her or foreclose the mortgage on the stone quarry. It is a grate plot, Pa sed, & the reason I am so much interested in it is beekaus I used to be a stone quarry man myself.

What Pa Said.

You did? sed Ma.

Yes, yes, sed Pa. I used to be known as one of the most powerful cutters & lifters of stone that was ever in this seckshun of the country. I have often thought, Pa sed, wen looking back oaver those old days, that I must have been living in a long ago age. I have often thought wen I was lifting blocks of stone about twenty feet long that I was a quarry slave in the days wen Mister Potolmy helped me to bild the pyramids, Pa sed.

Jest then the picter beegan about Queenie, the stone quarry man's daughter. It showed a big stone quarry scene ware all the men was hurrying around and lifted rocks into wagons. Then it showed the Italian man wich was going to marry Queenie, & thare was a sceen ware she spurned him. Then he toald her, in the picter, that he had a mortgage on her father's quarry & how he was going to sell it if she dident becum his bride.

The heero of the play was a yung Irishman that was handling a pick. Beeing a Irishman, he had a lot of time to lissen to the talk between Queenie & the villun, beekaus he would swing the pick onst & then he wud lite his pipe & lissen for a minit or so, & then he wud swing his pick onst moar & lite his pipe long enuff to git the rest of the terribul story. Then the Irishman went oaver & slammed Queenie's lover in the mouth or amongst the eyes or sumwar, & then caim the reevenge. Wen Queenie had went to git her father's lunch the villun stole sum dinamite & caim beehind ware the yung Irishman was picking with his pick & put the dinamite under the stone & blew the whole lot of it oaver onto the Irishman.

"I Was Strong," Said Pa.

Then he ran away & sed with Patrick McGullicuddy out of the way the quarry shall be mine. But then Queenie caim back & started in trying to lift the rocks away, but she cuddent stir any of them until her skreems attrackted her pa, & he caim on the sceen & beegan to throw the rocks rite & left. Ha, sed Pa, that reeminds me of the way I used to throw those grate masses of granite into the wagons of the teamsters. I was so strong in those days, sed Pa, that I had to be careful putting on my clothes for feer I wud tare them.

But Ma & me found out to-day that Pa was lying, beekaus Ma's cuzzin is a quarry man, Jimmie Trudden, & wen Ma asked him if Pa ever lifted a rock Mister Trudden, which had known Pa since childhood, sed Yes, he used to lift rocks wen they wasent too heavy to throw at chipmunks. Ma galv me a quarter if I wud tell Pa wat Mister Trudden sed. I dident dast to tell Pa, but I got the quarter first, anyhow.

Man or Piano?

The daughter of the house had just returned from a visit to her cousins, during which she had become engaged to a rising young man whom she had met at the home of her relatives. To her mother she was extolling the virtues of her intended.

"Oh, mother," she exclaimed, "he's just grand! So square, so upright; so highly polished! Why, even in his notes there is such a sympathetic tone that sometimes I wonder if I am not reading the music of the gods."

"Mercy's sake, child!" interrupted mother. "Are you talking about a young man or a piano?"

Can't You See?

Tutter—Awfully pretty baby of yours, Bender, but—er—what is it, a boy or a girl?

Bender—Can't you tell it's a girl?

"No. How on earth do you tell?"

"Can't you see? She's reaching up to put her mother's hat on straight."

Some Trouble!

Junior—I hear Briggs got into a lot of trouble with that girl he was going with.

Soph—Yes. How's that?

Junior—He married her.

Ingenious Prisoners

AMONG the prisoners in the French convict settlement of New Caledonia were two marine engineers who not long ago received a pardon—strange as it may seem—for making a daring and ingenious attempt to escape.

Living together in the same hut, these men were engaged for years in digging a secret tunnel from their hut to the beach. At the end of the tunnel they hollowed out a chamber, in which, with pieces of driftwood and little bits of steel and iron smuggled into the hut, they fashioned a boat, the metal being at first used to make tools and afterward to form bolts and rivets.

Then with infinite pains they built an engine to propel the boat, and after laboring mightily for seven years they completed their task.

Everything was ready except the provisioning of the vessel, when they were betrayed by a fellow convict to whom they had confided their plan. But so impressed was the French commandant by their marvelous energy, skill and patience that he managed, after a year, to obtain a pardon for them.

:: Breaking the Ice :: A Complete Short Story ::

WHEN the last carpenter had put the last touches on the last extra job—for which there were extra charges—and the last painter had done his final finishing-up, and the landscape gardener had made his farewell tour, and the bills had all been paid, Mrs. Fibbins stood at the window of her new home and surveyed the surrounding homes with the deepest possible satisfaction.

Her residence was beyond question the finest in the neighborhood. The structure was the tallest in sight; the cornices stuck out the worst; its architecture had the newest, homeliest and most mixed design, and the ornaments were the craziest imaginable.

The lawn was the largest and the flower beds were the gaudiest of any in that part of the city. Yes, the place was a triumph! Mrs. Fibbins was naturally delighted.

"The people around here will all sit up and take notice!" she said to herself, smiling happily.

Finding Out

Mrs. Fibbins found out which one of the neighbors had the most servants and how many that neighbor had. Then she herself got more. Next she took up the question of hats. In order that nothing might be left undone she got a hat that could not be equaled for being disproportioned, ungainly, uncomfortable and generally absurd. No neighbor had a hat that could touch it in any of these respects.

But never a neighbor deigned to look in the direction of Mrs. Fibbins' establishment. Not a neighbor glanced at her hat when they passed her on the street.

It was terrible!

Mrs. Fibbins began to think up other ways to impress her neighbors. She gave gigantic parties. Every time she caught sight of a neighbor afoot she made a point of whizzing by that neighbor in an automobile. If any one entertained a celebrity she got a bigger celebrity. If there was a pretty girl visiting anywhere in the neighborhood she got a prettier girl to visit her.

It all did no good. The neighbors continued to treat Mrs. Fibbins as if she were a patron of a fashionable restaurant and they were the haughty and exclusive waiters. Mrs. Fibbins realized that she was out of it. She was filled with anguish and despair.

At last she spoke to Fibbins about it. Fibbins was a man of resource. More than that, he knew human nature. Fibbins said it was easy. Leave it to him.

Soon after that Mrs. Fibbins' servants all left her at once, bag and baggage. They held their noses in the air and made quite a procession. There was a considerable stir in the neighborhood over this affair. Several neighbors looked in the direction of the Fibbins home. Mrs. Fibbins saw them look, and she rejoiced.

Then the Fibbins water pipes burst. Water flooded the house and the yard, and then froze and made a dreadful mess. At this catastrophe the mansion and grounds of the Fibbinses were observed by all the neighbors. The men looked eagerly as they passed and the women devoted all their spare moments to sitting at their upper windows with opera glasses, closely observing the devastation.

Fibbins and Mrs. Fibbins emerged from their front door to go to a restaurant to dine. Coming in contact with the ice, their feet slipped and they were precipitated to the ground. In a sitting posture they glided swiftly along the icy incline to the gate. Mrs. Fibbins' hat came down over her eyes like a landslide. Finally they struggled to their feet and went limping away.

Every house in the neighborhood was alive to the incident. A representative from each hastened to Fibbins and Mrs. Fibbins and asked them to come right in and make that house their headquarters while their water pipes were being fixed.

The ice was broken at last! Fibbins and Mrs. Fibbins had become acquainted with their neighbors!

"You are a wonderful man!" said Mrs. Fibbins afterward in the tone of deepest admiration.

"I knew it would be easy," said Fibbins, "but I excited their sympathy and gave them a chance to congratulate themselves that our misfortunes were not theirs."

Household Suggestions

The best method of keeping small screws, brads and tacks from rusting is to place them in small, wide-mouthed bottles, tightly corked. The bottle should be perfectly dry before using. Sandpaper can be kept dry and in good working condition by rolling it and keeping it in a wide-mouthed jar and screwing down the lid.

When cream is only slightly sour it may be made delicious to serve with puddings, etc., in the following way: Put it into a basin with the juice of a lemon and a tablespoonful of sugar, and whip until quite stiff. This treatment makes it excellent, and increases the quantity at the same time.

If you want to patch your window blinds, don't sew on the patches. Instead, paste them on with hot starch and press down a warm iron. They will look neater than if sewn, because the stitches would be apparent, whereas a pasted-on patch is almost invisible.

Before putting curtain hooks in curtains in damp weather, rub the pins with a clean, oily rag. It prevents them rusting and tearing the curtain, and they can be taken in and out more easily.

Save all odd bits of twine, knot them together, then knit with steel needles into pieces about a foot or more square. These make excellent dish cloths for saucepans and pie dishes.

Take Horsford's Acid Phosphate
Sufferers from acid stomach, nausea or sick headache will find this tonic beverage a grateful relief.—(adv.)

To Brighten Carpets

To brighten a carpet, take five or six large potatoes and scrape them finely into a pail of water. Stir, then strain. Wring out a cloth in the water and rub the carpet. Rinse the cloth as soon as soiled. Should soot fall on a carpet, sprinkle dry salt thickly over it, leave it for a few minutes, then brush up. No trace of the soot will remain.

Married Life the Third Year

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

WORRIED and depressed, Helen went in to straighten up Alice's room the morning after her departure.

Everything was in disorder from the hurried packing. Tissue paper, strings and empty boxes lay scattered about, and where the trunk had set was a dusty square.

The whole unpleasant scene of the night before kept beating in Helen's mind. And not only had Alice cut short her visit and left in a high dudgeon—the memory of that was distressing enough—but even more distressing was the fear of what Aunt Emma and Warren's other relatives might say.

That Alice would not hesitate to disparage both her and Warren Helen knew, and about her visit she would probably tell many things that were not true.

Helen was always keenly sensitive about what people "might say," and now she could think of nothing but the unpleasant surmises and comments that Warren's relatives would make.

With brooding anxiety, she put back her clothes in the bureau drawers and the closet that she had emptied for Alice's convenience. Besides the burnt bureau scarf she now discovered other evidences of Alice's carelessness.

A black smudge on the rug showed where she had glossed her shoes, the wall paper was sprinkled with ink where she had shaken a fountain pen, and on the back of one of the chairs a wet towel had been flung, leaving the varnish dulled and whitened.

While Helen was still putting the room to rights Warren called up from the office.

"I won't have time to write that letter to Aunt Emma," he announced, "so you'll have to write it. And you'd better get it off right away."

Helen at a Loss.

"But, dear, what shall I say?" faltered Helen.

"Just say that Alice took it into her head to go and that we couldn't keep her."

'But couldn't you write to-night or to-morrow?" persisted Helen. "You could do it so much better than I."

"Yes, and then Alice would have time to tell her mother a lot of lies. Now, you get that off right away! I want it to go out to-night."

When Helen turned from the phone it was with the greatest reluctance that she went over to the desk to write this letter. For her letter-writing was always most difficult, and from a letter like this her mind recoiled.

How should she begin it? What could she say? She did not want to hurt Aunt Emma, and yet it was only fair to them that she should know just how headstrong and unruly Alice had been.

After much chewing of her pen and many discarded beginnings, the letter was finally finished.

New York, April 24, 1913.

Dear Aunt Emma:

I regret very much that Alice should have ended her visit in this way. We did everything we could to persuade her not to start off last night, but she was so headstrong that nothing we could say had any effect. She declared if we did not take her to the station she would go alone—so what could we do?

The only cause for all this was that we tried to do what you asked—to keep her from seeing that Mr. Hampton. He came on from Philadelphia and called here at 7 to take Alice out. But Warren refused to let him see her.

This so incensed Alice that she at once began to pack her trunk, declaring that she would not stay with us another night. I pleaded and Warren scolded, but she would listen to neither of us. She said she was engaged to this man and that she was old enough to do as she pleased. I think you are quite right in feeling that a man of his age, and a divorced man, is most unsuited for Alice. I hope you will be able to break it all off—but Alice is very headstrong.

I am sending by parcel post some things she left in her haste. I hope you have gotten the house in shape again, that you are over the worst effects of the flood, and that Alice's unexpected return will not make things harder.

We both regret more than I can say that her visit should have such an unpleasant ending, but we trust you will understand that we did all we could to prevent it. Sincerely, your niece,

HELEN.

Helen was so far from satisfied with this letter that she wanted to call up Warren and read it to him over the phone, but she know he would be too hurried and impatient to listen. So, reluctantly, she took it out to the mail chute.

The next two days were for Helen most unhappy ones. She was constantly being forced to explain Alice's sudden departure. It was very embarrassing, particularly when Carrie, Warren's sister, called up to invite Alice to a luncheon.

The Answer.

But even more distressing was her haunting dread of what Aunt Emma would think and of just what Alice would tell her. It was Helen's nature to worry—and over this she worried herself almost ill.

When the next morning at breakfast she found by her plate a thick letter in Aunt Emma's handwriting, anxiously she tore it open.

Dayton, Ohio, April 27, 1913.

My Dear Helen:

I believe Warren paid for Alice's ticket the night she left, and I hasten to return the amount in this. If there is anything else that she owes you, will you kindly let us know, as neither George nor I wish to be further indebted to you? The check Warren sent George the week after the flood we will return the first of the month. I regret that we can not do so sooner.

It was, of course, a mistake that Alice ever visited you. I would never have suggested it had I dreamed that it would end as it has. As upset and distracted as we were after the flood, I see now that it would have been much better for her to have stayed here.

You seem to have failed wholly to understand her. She has an exceptionally nervous, sensitive nature. She has always been delicate, and we have always tried to keep from her any needless irritation or excitement.

That you should have let her start home at midnight, in an excited, unstrung state, showed, to say the least, a lack of consideration on your part. I would not have let the most casual visitor leave my house under such conditions, much less a girl like Alice. I can not understand what you and Warren were thinking of to allow it.

When Alice arrived she was in almost a state of collapse. It is needless for me to try to conceal the fact that I am very indignant about it all, and I think George shares my indignation, although he may not admit it so frankly.

I am exceedingly sorry that we ever troubled you, and I assure you we will not trouble you again.

AUNT EMMA.

"What's struck you?" demanded Warren, as Helen gasped her dismay and indignation.

"It's from Aunt Emma—the most AWFUL letter!" handing it across the table.

No More Relatives.

Warren read the letter and threw it down with a grim:

"Well, that lets us out! I guess we're about through trying to help any relatives. Understand? Your relatives or mine—we'll steer clear of the whole bunch."

"But, dear, MY people have never troubled us!"

"Well, I've noticed they're not above making it a convenience to stop here when they come to New York."

"Why, Warren, you know very well that Uncle Henry is the only one of my family that's EVER stopped here. And he was going to a hotel if you hadn't insisted. I don't see how you CAN infer that my relatives have made a convenience of us!"

"Well, I said we're through with ALL relatives, didn't I? And that's exactly what I meant. Hereafter if people want to come to New York for ten days or for one day—they'll put up at a hotel. From now on they're going to find it pretty blamed hard to work us! I guess one lesson along this line will be just about enough!"

Do You Know That—

The coming destruction of the Cafe Anglais in Paris is awakening many recollections among the older Londoners who used to visit Paris a dozen times in the year. Forty years ago the restaurant was famous for its food and frequenters, who included nearly every celebrity in Europe. It was then King Edward's favorite restaurant in Paris, always faultlessly conducted, although strongly dashed with bohemianism. All that was best in the social and artistic world was to be found there. It was one of the few restaurants which kept open through the siege, and there was ground for belief in the story that it never remembered afterward to reduce its prices.

The romance of a fortune that was made out of revenge is recalled in New York by the death of E. S. Welles, the inventor of a world-famous rat poison. When Mr. Welles and the man with whom he then worked were living in poverty, and had only a single loaf of bread between them and starvation, this last morsel of food was eaten by rats. Welles swore vengeance and set about discovering a means to rid the world of rats. After numerous experiments he began the manufacture of "Rough on Rats" in an old barn in Jersey City, and in four years he rose to affluence.

The new King of Greece is among the tallest of monarchs, but those who ascribe his inches solely to his Roman-off blood on his mother's side forget his stalwart Danish ancestors. His grandfather, King Christian IX, was remarkable for his height, as are nearly all the princes of his house. King Constantine's cousin, the present King of Denmark, has carried on the tradition, as he stands well over six feet without his boots.

"On the stage I am my part. I lose myself."

"As pretty off the stage as she is on."

"If you think about yourself yo uwill be self-conscious."

Ethel Barrymore Says:

It is stupid not to know how to bring out your good points, or to let your prettiness fade.

Brains, brains, they are the inspiration and the real spirit of true beauty.

There is nothing immoral about beauty, though some old fogies seem to think so.

For beauty—brains, modesty, self-forgetfulness, happy home life and good taste.

I've just one pet theory—two glasses of cold water mornings and evenings.

Don't let fat accumulate.

By LILIAN LAUFERTY.

"IS she as pretty off the stage as on?"—haven't you often wondered that about your favorite star, or even some of the lesser lights who dazzle your eyes with their loveliness?

I know one stage beauty who is far lovelier in her little dressing room than all the glare and tinsel of stage illusion can make her. Ethel Barrymore's wonderfully expressive gray eyes, flower-like white throat and gracious manner are little private lovelinesses so fine and rare that you must miss them except at close range. And she is modest. THAT MODESTY ADDS A CHARM TO HER BEAUTY SUCH AS LITTLE MISS SELF-SATISFACTION WOULD DO WELL TO STUDY.

"You want me to talk about beauty," said Miss Barrymore. "Beauty means Maxine Elliott to me. Maxine Elliott, with her wonderful face and figure, and the splendid brain that animates it all. Brains, brains!—they are the inspiration and real spirit of true beauty.

"It is stupid not to know how to bring out your points or to let your prettiness fade.

Cold Water for Youth.

"A frilly black ruff back of a long, white throat, and a sparkling face animated by brains, will bring out the charm of the foreground. If you are wishing to look your prettiest, and look tired and drawn instead, plenty of cold water will bring the becoming flush of color to your face.

"You know there is nothing immoral about beauty, though some old fogies seem to think so. Think of making laws about the width of women's skirts, and whether two inches or two and a quarter inches of white throat should be shown by the low-cut blouse!

"Good cold cream will do a lot toward assuring you of a white throat. Good taste will tell you where to cut your blouse. Women ought to study these things, so men won't need to come out of their sphere and agitate about them. I told one fat old hypocritical mayor out West, who when forced to have a vice crusade in his wicked town began by making laws about the width of women's skirts, that what worried him was not having those feminine skirts wide enough to hide behind any more."

The star, who is "headlining" this week in the Palace Theater, laughed merrily.

"You interest yourself in divers causes?" The interviewer was laughing too.

"Oh, yes. Women must. Interest yourself in things outside yourself, FOR IF YOU THINK ABOUT YOURSELF YOU WILL BE SELF-CONSCIOUS, AND THAT MEANS AWKWARD AND UNBEAUTIFUL.

"Now, I am shy." Think of that, you little blushing girls whose self-consciousness worries you to the point of tears. Beautiful, talented Ethel Barrymore is "shy." And her cure for self-consciousness is to be interested in things outside your own petty little self.

"On the stage I AM my part. I lose myself. In society I am one of the guests, and I forget Ethel Barrymore. But if I am asked at a dinner to get up and recite; or if in a public place people stare and force self-consciousness, I am not happy. ONE NEVER IS HAPPY IF THINKING OF SELF. Posing and acting unconcerned won't help it; brains and hard work will.

"This brings me to the beauty of a happy home life. Now, I have my husband, my two children, my tasks and duties. The glaring restaurant life does not bring out contentment, self-forgetfulness—or a consequent sweet expression."

"For beauty—brains, modesty, self-forgetfulness, happy home life and good taste," I mused.

"Brains cover it all. You have to be wise enough to bring out your good points, and to cover your poor ones until you can overcome them. You must have brains, and study to develop them, if you want to be more than a pretty picture that people glance at and forget."

"Haven't you some personal beauty secrets?" I asked boldly.

"I? Beauty secrets?" in a tone of honest amazement.

"Yes, you indeed."

"Oh, no. I study a lot, of course. I read 25 books up in Toronto last week. I am always reading—and studying music. And I guard my health." Miss Barrymore laughed and took an earnest nibble at the lemon she is relying on to help her overcome a threatened case of laryngitis. "A simple life! Not too much rich food—high thinking. I've just one pet theory—two glasses of cold water morning and evening. That is such a gentle stimulus to the physical well-being."

Lots of Water.

Over on the mantel shelf, next to the picture of two dear little kiddies, stood a bottle of mineral water.

"Has that a special medicinal value?" I asked.

"No, I just try to be sure of clear, pure water. I am not sure in the average theater—so I drink bottled water. But I never omit my before-going-to-bed drink of water.

"I drink milk, too. Though it is not safe to take much of that if you are threatened with an accumulation of pounds. You see, brains come in again about not growing fat in these days of sylphs. DON'T LET FAT ACCUMULATE. For in the process of losing it violently you are likely to get a drawn and haggard look. That means you are going to appear old. Soft facial contours guard against the appearance of age."

I looked approvingly at Miss Barrymore's smooth, facial contour and wonderful skin. She smiled shyly.

"If you know you are thin and emaciated—or if you overhear a fat creature of about 259 pounds net weight, remarking, 'There's Ethel Barrymore at the next table, John. How stout she's grown—dear me, she is stouter than I am!'—why, then, in either case you are likely to become self-conscious.

"So, you see, I have to avoid an emaciated face and overweighted body as the modern Scylla and Charybdis—and so should all girls.

"You see, it is all a perfect circle. Your 'sentinel brain' must guard you against the necessity of self-consciousness—and I think that is the best beauty secret I know."

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

AS kin Commissioner General of the United States, Lysander John Appleton occupies a position the importance of which is well appreciated by his large and steadily increasing kin-ridden constituency.

It lies within his jurisdiction to decide to which side of the warring faction of a family belong the family jewels and the feather bed. When a woman dies, he decides the right of her children or her husband's next wife to her "things," that being the generic term for petticoats, hair switches, family albums, the butter knife, the hot water bag and the cameo pin the deceased left, and which assume great value when her husband marries again.

Speedy Opportunity.

It is he who draws an immovable line between kinship and friendship. "Is a man as near kin to his wife's ugly sister as he is to her sister who is beautiful?" was a question that remained undecided until Lysander John Appleton was elected to office, and it was he who decided in plain and unmistakable terms that a young husband's embarrassment in calling his mother-in-law "Mother" was not serious because of the speedy opportunity that would be offered for addressing her as "Grandma."

While there has been some complaint that battleships have not been ordered out to enforce his decisions—the helpless kin-hampered citizens believing that they had a right to enjoy the protection so freely accorded to Americans who voluntarily exile themselves to warring foreign lands—there has been a disposition to believe that General Appleton was doing his best.

Therefore, when it became known that he was to have a birthday every one who was awaiting a kin decision in his, or her favor, decided to propitiate him with a gift.

But what could it be? For it is conceded that to buy a suitable gift for a man requires a wisdom that is almost divine.

"He smokes!" was the joyous discovery of a woman who wanted a decision against her husband's mother. "He smokes," rang down the line of grandparents, fathers, mothers, uncles, sisters, cousins, aunts and all the in-laws, and everyone rejoiced as a man who is lost on strange roads rejoices when he sees a guide board.

The Presents Arrive.

The presents arrived by messenger, by vanloads, and by carloads. "We will unwrap them," said his wife, "and put them around his bed when he sleeps, and his eyes may behold them the first thing on his birthday morning."

They did so. And when Lysander John opened his eyes the next morning he saw them. Some were of China, others of cut glass, others of bronze, iron, copper, silver and one man hated his mother-in-law to the extent of sending one of gold. They were piled on the dresser and the chiffonier; they overflowed to the chairs and covered the floor and the bed—NINE HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-FOUR ASH TRAYS.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"WE never have supper in this house—my uncle always called it a useless extravagance. Instead, we defer tea until 6 o'clock and make that the final meal of the day. It was exactly five minutes to 7 when I finished my accounts and as I had had a hard day of it, I decided to go to bed early, after having first taken a walk as far as the old bridge, where I hoped that somebody would be waiting for me."

"I knew," said Cleek, gently. "I have heard the story. It would be Mr. Charles Drummond, would it not?"

He Was Absent.

"Yes. He was not there, however—something must have prevented his coming."

"Hum-m-! Go on, please."

"Before leaving the house, it occurred to me that I ought to look into the laboratory and see if there was anything my uncle would be likely to need for te night, as I intended to go straightway to bed on my return. I did so. He was sitting at his desk, immediately under the one window of which I have spoken and with his back to me, when I looked in. He answered my inquiry with a curt 'No—nothing. Get out and don't worry me!' I immediately shut the door and left him, returning here by way of the covered passage and going upstairs to make some necessary changes in my dress for the walk to the old bridge. When I came down ready for my journey I looked at the clock on the mantel over there. It was exactly 17 minutes to 8 o'clock. I had been a little longer in dressing than I had anticipated being; so, in order to save time in getting to the trysting place, I concluded to make a short cut by going out of the rear door and crossing diagonally through our grounds instead of going by the public highway, as usual. I had scarcely more than crossed the threshold when I ran plump into Constable Gorham. As he is rather a favorite with good Mrs. Armyroyd here, I fancied that he had been paying her a visit and was just coming away from the kitchen. Instead, he rather startled me by stating that he had seen something which he thought best to come round and investigate. In short, that as he was patrolling the highway he had seen a man vault over the wall of our grounds, and, bending down, dart out of sight like a hare. He was almost positive that that man was Sir Ralph Droger. Of course, that frightened me almost out of my wits."

Desires To Do Both.

"Why?"

"There is bad blood between my uncle and Sir Ralph Droger—bitter, bad blood. As you perhaps know, my uncle held this ground on a life lease from the Droger estate. That is to say, so long as he lived or refused to vacate that lease, no Droger could oust him nor yet lift one spadeful of earth from the property."

"Does Sir Ralph desire to do either?"

"He desires to do both. Borings secretly made have manifested the fact that both Bovey coal and native copper underlie the place. Sir Ralph wishes to tear down the Round House and this building and to begin mining operations. My uncle, who has been offered the full value of every stick and stone, has always obstinately refused to budge one inch or lessen the lease by one-half hour. 'It is for the term of life,' he has always said, 'and for the term of my life I'll hold it!'"

"Ohо!" said Cleek; and then puckered up his lipe as if about to whistle.

To Be Continued Monday.

Bad for Johnny

LITTLE Johnny Squilldig spoiled what otherwise would have been a pleasant call last evening, and it is feared established a deadly hatred between the Squildig and Snaggs households.

Mr. and Mrs. Snaggs had "just dropped in," and the conversation went the full range of the weather and the fashions and the health of the babies of the neighborhood between the women, while the men exhausted the possibilities of the baseball season, and had got well into politics, when Johnny, who found the talk uninteresting, asked Mr. Snaggs if he had brought his fiddle with him.

"My fiddle?" replied Snaggs, in surprise. "What fiddle?"

"Why, your second fiddle."

"My second fiddle? Why, Johnny, I am not a musician. I have no fiddle. I don't play.

"But papa says you do," persisted Johnny.

"Johnny, I think you had better go upstairs to bed," said his papa.

"Yes, it's quite time," added Mrs. Squildig. "Little folks should be seen, not heard."

But Johnny was not to be gagged in that style. He went on:

"Papa says you play second fiddle at your house, and I think you might have brought it with you."

Then Johnny was marched out of the room by his papa, and his mamma followed to assist in the subsequent exercises, while the Snaggs put on their things and walked solemnly home with heads unusually erect and a feeling of unrest in their bosoms.

LIFE'S STRUGGLE WITH ILLNESS

Miss Stewart Tells How She Suffered from 16 to 45 years old—How Finally Cured.

EUPHEMIA, OHIO.—"Because of total ignorance of how to care for myself when verging into womanhood, and from taking cold when going to school, I suffered from a displacement, and each month I had severe pains and nausea which always meant a lay-off from work for two to four days from the time I was 16 years old.

"I went to Kansas to live with my sister, and while there a doctor told me of the Pinkham remedies but I did not use them then as my faith in patent medicines was limited. After my sister died I came home to Ohio to live and that has been my home for the last 18 years.

"The Change of Life came when I was 47 years old, and about this time I saw my physical condition plainly described in one of your advertisements. Then I began using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I can not tell you or any one the relief it gave me in the first three months. It put me right where I need not lay off every month, and during the last 18 years I have not paid out two dollars to a doctor, and have been blessed with excellent health for a woman of my age, and I can thank Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for it.

"Since the Change of Life is over I have been a maternity nurse, and being wholly self-supporting I can not overestimate the value of good health. I have now earned a comfortable little home just by sewing and nursing since I was 52 years old. I have recommended the Compound to many with good results, as it is excellent to take before and after childbirth."—Miss Evelyn Adella Stewart, Euphemia, Ohio.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Up-to-Date Jokes

Attorney—Have you ever been to this court before, sir?

Witness—Yes, sir! I have been here often.

Attorney—Ha, ha! Been here often, have you? Now, tell the court what for.

Witness (slowly)—Well, I have been here at least a half dozen times to try and collect that tailor's bill you owe me.

"Bertie," said his mother, "what would you like to give your cousin Willie for his birthday?"

"I know what I'd like to give him," answered Bertie, who had been bullied by the older boy, "but I ain't big enough."

.:. The Real Truth .:.

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

THE real truth, children dear, is that Sleeping Beauty slept with her mouth open, and snored.

You are always hearing women talk of the "nameless longing" in their hearts, as if it were something beyond the comprehension of mere man. If she is single this nameless longing is for a lover, and if she is married, it is for money.

In the books a woman returns a letter from a discarded lover unread, but in real life curiosity would arouse her from a deathbed, if need be, to break the seal.

In the stories she gives a gulping sob as she leaves the room after a quarrel, and he is Gone Out of Her Life Forever. In real life she has to go to the shop where he works next day to buy sausage, and he waits on her.

The Suffragettes in speech and pamphlet tell how wives have to account to their husbands for every penny they spend. If the men had to listen to the account of how their wives spend every penny their wouldn't be insane asylums enough to hold them.

In books a girl's neck looks like white marble, and those who see it are driven to writing poetry. In real life a girl's neck causes every housekeeper present to make a mental note to buy spareribs for dinner next day.

In the books a young woman never mentions "the dear old home" without moist eyes, and in real life she never lives in one home longer than five years. In the stories there is always a trusted servant, who has been with the family forty years; in reality no servant is kept as long as forty weeks. In fiction a poem or song about "baby's shoes" will cause a woman to dissolve in tears. In real life, if the stork whispers to a woman that he is going to give her an occasion for buying a baby's shoe, she is mad enough to bite nails in two.

The books say a great deal about the "children's hour," a period at twilight when the children climb on mother's or father's knee and listen to fairy stories. In real life, if father is a farmer, he is engaged at this poetic period in feeding the hogs and mother is doing the milking. Or, if they live in town, he is hanging to a car strap and she is running to the delicatessen.

In the books the children gather at mother's knee for their good-night prayers. In the days when every mother believed in having her children pray, there were so many children in the family that they couldn't have gathered around her knee unless her limbs were built like those of an extension table.

A mixture of castor oil with the white of an egg has been recommended for burns. It allays the pain more quickly and causes the wound to heal more rapidly than any other application. The eggs are broken and emptied into a bowl, and the castor oil gradually and slowly poured in while the eggs are beaten. Enough oil is added to make a thick, creamy paste, which is applied to the burn with a feather. The applications are repeated often enough to prevent their becoming dry or sticky. It is best to abstain from any dressings, leaving the surface uncovered.

Thrills of a novel kind are promised for tourists to Sicily if an American hotel proprietor can carry out his plans. He has bought the site on the summit of an inactive but not extinct volcano, and will build a hotel there. A special feature of the hotel will be an underground chamber on the bed of the crater, with an asbestos floor, where those who are sated with excitement can sleep in the expectation that they may be called at any minute by an eruption.

In England, where there are no fewer than 616,000 women dressmakers, there are more women workers in proportion to population than in any other country in the world.

POULTRY, PET and LIVE STOCK

Amateur Poultry Raisers Should Not Be Discouraged

Many Mistakes of the Beginner May Be Avoided—Good, Sound Advice.

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

"Knowledge is of two kinds," says Boswell. "We know the subject ourselves or we know where we can find the information upon it."

Of the two kinds of knowledge the first is, beyond doubt, the more valuable, but it is only acquired by actual experience, oftentimes dearly bought; whereas many of the mistakes and discouragements met with by the beginner may be avoided if he will take counsel of those who have sounded all the pitfalls and located all the impediments on the road to success.

A common failing with those who are new in the poultry business is to assume that because an undertaking appears to them simple, no preparatory study is necessary to its successful prosecution, and they hold lightly the advice of those who have mastered it. Such persons are met in all walks of life, but are never found excelling in any vocation. There is no task or pursuit, however simple, but what will be better understood and performed with more ease and satisfaction after close investigation of the study. There are no two persons that will do things alike. Each will employ different methods to secure the same results. And he who brings to his task the greatest amount of care and thoroughness is the one who will have the fullest measure of success.

The Turning Point.

This is the turning point between success and failure, and we want to caution our readers against large expenditures to equip a poultry plant unless they have tested matters upon a moderate scale and found that they possessed the elements of the great success and the proper energy to apply them. The old adage, Where there is a will there is a way, is a good one, but you want to be sure that you are endowed with the will, and perhaps we had better add the proper kind of a will.

Some say that we never know what we can do until we try it. That is true, but let your work be increased gradually and not spasmodically. Raise 300 chickens this year and 500 or 600 next year and do not do as some have attempted and jump from 100 to 5,000, with failure as a result. There is no question about the money to be made by laying hens, etc., but it must be done in a business-like manner.

Chickens Crop-bound.

Judge Marshall—I have a White Orpington cock and hen that seem to have something the matter with their crops. They seem to be bloated. I caught them and I find the crop seems too full and hard and stays that way all the time, whether they have had any feed or not.

I have been feeding whole oats principally and giving them rye blades for green stuff. What do you think is the matter and what would be a good remedy? They are valuable fowls and I should like to get them in good shape.

Thanking you in advance for the information, I am, yours truly,
Augusta, Ga. S. B. LANE.

ANSWER.—Your chickens are crop-bound, caused by a stoppage of the passage from the crop to the gizzard by some little bulky matter that falls to pass on. We are inclined to think that it is some of your long blades of rye, perhaps aided by the rough grains of oats. In fact, you are giving them pretty rough rations. We would advise a complete change in the feed to a dry mash. Give each one two teaspoons of castor oil, which may be the means of emptying the crop. If it does not and they still seem full and hard, the only course left is to open the crop at one side by cutting a slit with a sharp knife. To do this successfully it is best to open the outer skin in one place and the inner one a little to one side of the other, so that the openings will not come in just the same place. Clean the crop thoroughly of all its contents and see that the real obstruction is removed, which may be just at the point where the food leaves the crop. Rinse it out thoroughly with water into which a little carbolic acid has been dropped—just three or four drops to the pint. Then close each layer of skin with a few stitches and feed nothing but bread and milk for at least three days.

Ducks.

ON account of my health I am forced to sell our entire flock of ducks, consisting of 100 Fawn and White Runners, 20 Mammoth Pekins and 14 White Runners. Most of these are prize winners and ribbons go with them. They are all select birds. Low price on lot, or either variety. Make offer or write me. Eggs $1 for 12, $5 per 100. Ducklings any time 25c each. Oak Dean Farm, Stone Mountain, Ga. 4-17-10

North Side Lots Find Ready Takers

Kuhns Buy Eight From Worley. Peters Parcels Sold—Paving Work Progressing.

W. E. Worley has sold to Gustave Kuhn and Edith E. Kuhn eight residence lots on Virginia and Maryland Avenues for an aggregate consideration of $11,000. Deeds went to record as of April 29.

The lot descriptions and prices follow: On Virginia Avenue, 100 feet west of Pennsylvania Avenue, 50 by 179 feet, $2,000; on Virginia Avenue, 100 feet east of Maryland Avenue, 50 by 178 feet, $2,000; on Virginia Avenue, 50 feet east of Maryland Avenue, 50 by 183 feet, $2,000; northeast corner of Maryland and Virginia Avenues, 50 by 187 feet, $2,000; on Maryland, Avenue, 201 feet north of Virginia Avenue, 50 by 140 feet, $1,250; on Maryland Avenue, 251 feet north of Virginia Avenue, $1,250; on Maryland Avenue, 301 feet north of Virginia Avenue, $1,250, and on Maryland Avenue, 351 feet north of Virginia Avenue.

The terms on the first four were $550 cash for each lot and on the last four $450 cash for each lot.

Peters Land Sold.

Mrs. Nell Hagan Pierson has bought from the Peters Land Company, through J. H. Ewing, of the Smith & Ewing Real Estate Agency, a 50 by 150-foot lot on the west side of Pennsylvania Avenue, between Ponce DeLeon Avenue and East Fourth Street, for $2,000, and Mrs. Annie Garrett Oxford has bought from the same company and through the same agency a lot of the same location, size and price.

East Side Street Work.

After a considerable wait, paving work has started on Morgan Street, East Lake, and on Candler Street, Decatur, and citizens in those neighborhoods are rejoicing. The people most interested are hoping eventually to connect Decatur with Atlanta by means of well paved thoroughfares, and to provide a distinct loop which shall traverse both north and south sides of the railroad. The paving on the thoroughfares named is macadam.

Sale on Glennwood Avenue.

Deeds have gone to record in the sale April 23 of 379 Glennwood Avenue, near Waldo Street, 32 1-2 by 103 feet, to Raymond Martin. The seller was Harris G. White. The property has been transferred to Mrs. Mary C. Love.

No Plans for Parrott Lot.

Asked this morning if he had perfected plans for erecting his projected ten-story apartment hotel at the northwest corner of Peachtree and Seventh Streets, George W. Parrott declared that he had not. Mr. Parrott has been figuring on a building on the Powers lot, but he has abandoned the project for the time being.

Demand for Small Houses.

There is always a good demand in Atlanta for small houses, thinks S. W. Sullivan, the well-known real estate man and builder. Mr. Sullivan applied to-day to Building Inspector Ed R. Hays for permits to build four one-story houses at 429, 433, 437, 441 Bedford Place, at a total cost of $12,000. Mr. Sullivan will build these for himself and he will erect for T. M. Willingham at 158, 160 Glennwood Avenue a two-story store and dwelling.

Mothers, Keep Your Babies' Hands Covered

And Train Them From the Beginning to Keep Their Fingers Out of Their Mouths

Copyright, 1913.

Millions of mothers worry because "There is something wrong with the child's stomach."

Digestion is bad, sleep is irregular, the lips are crackled, unhealthy looking—there are signs of the dreaded colitis, which takes so many thousands of children to the grave.

False diet, foolish feeding based on ignorance, AND EATING AT IRREGULAR HOURS, menace the health of many children.

The mother that has lost one child or more lives in constant apprehension, and is almost in despair when signs of illness show themselves.

We want to-day to impress upon all mothers ONE THING THAT THEY CAN DO FOR THEIR CHILDREN.

One of the most famous and one of the ablest doctors in this country was called in by a mother to take care of a child that showed signs of illness, and his first question was this:

"Does your baby put its fingers in its mouth a great deal?"

He then impressed upon the mother—the child was not quite two years old—that she must above all things prevent her baby from putting dirty fingers into its mouth.

And this is the idea that we want to impress upon all mothers TO-DAY, and that without putting them to the expense of seeing the doctor quoted above. From him a few words of advice would cost twenty-five dollars.

Remember that children are sometimes poisoned by disease germs IN THEIR FOOD.

But FAR OFTENER THEY ARE POISONED BY GERMS STICKING TO THEIR FINGERS WHICH THEY PUT INTO THEIR MOUTHS.

It doesn't matter how careful you may be, your child is bound to creep on the floor, to fall down upon its hands on the sidewalk, to grasp a railing, etc.

Whenever a child's hands touch the sidewalks, or railings, or the floor, THEY ARE APT TO COME IN CONTACT WITH GERMS THAT PRODUCE DISEASE.

In the big cities especially this danger is great.

Ignorant men who should be controlled and punished by law sit upon the benches in the parks, spitting upon the sidewalks where little children are put to play.

This is actually a crime against human life—a crime none the less dreadful because it is based upon ignorance.

To see a consumptive sunning himself on a bench in the public park is pitiful. You pity the unfortunate man, as he coughs painfully, and he deserves pity.

But, as he scatters about him the germs of his disease, he is actually endangering and often destroying lives of healthy children that go to play in that park.

It is impossible to keep children shut in. It is impossible to keep them from the parks and the streets and from crawling about on the floor.

BUT IT IS POSSIBLE TO PROTECT THEM.

To the mother whom we have mentioned the able doctor said:

"Keeping your child's hands washed frequently is a good thing—but it is no protection.

"Keep COTTON GLOVES ON THE CHILD'S HANDS when it is playing anywhere outside of its nursery—and, better still, keep them on also when it plays on the nursery floor.

"A child will not put cotton gloves into its mouth—it doesn't like the feeling."

There is very simple advice for mothers that worry about their children's health.

If your baby is in the teething stage, you know how the wise old mothers will tell you that you must EXPECT trouble at that time.

You are told that teething affects the stomach and causes sickness, bowel complaint, etc.

Teething DOES affect the child's DIGESTION. But it does not actually introduce into its system the germs that produce disease such as the dreaded Summer complaint.

Children are subject to disease especially when teething, BECAUSE WHEN TEETHING THEY ALWAYS HAVE THEIR FINGERS IN THEIR MOUTHS, and they are always introducing dangerous germs into their systems in that way.

Two pairs of cotton gloves for the baby would not cost very much—and we wish that the managers of big stores would put such gloves on sale as an act of public usefulness, and advertise them at the very lowest possible price.

Occasionally a child suffering from teething will put its fingers in its mouth in spite of wearing cotton gloves. In such a case very rough woolen gloves may be procured that will certainly answer the purpose.

Mothers can do much, also, by making it a habit from the baby's first day to train it to keep its fingers out of its mouth.

A gentle touch of the hand each time that the little fingers are put toward the lips will gradually accustom the child to the notion that its hands and its mouth must be kept separate.

Meanwhile we advise mothers of children under five years of age—and, better still, up to seven years of age—to try this experiment of keeping them gloved with cotton when they play on park sidewalks or street sidewalks exposed to disease germs.

P. S.—Some mothers will say: "Well, my baby always had his hands in his mouth, and HE didn't have gloves, and HE didn't get any disease."

We are glad to hear it. But what is true of one child is not true of another. And what is true of a child one day is not true of the same child ANOTHER DAY.

A child absolutely healthy and strong is able to throw off and get rid of the disease germs that get into its system. A perfectly healthy child with a heart acting strongly and the blood in good condition could swallow a good many tuberculosis germs without getting consumption.

But as soon as something happens, when the vitality is low, the heart action feeble, THE GERMS ARE NOT THROWN OFF.

They establish a foothold, the[illegible] with lightning rapidity, and then it is too late to save [illegible]. Prevention is better than cure, and there is no bett[illegible] than keeping the child's own hands from putting [illegible] into its mouth.

Absolutely the Last Egg Joke.

:: The Fall of New Orleans ::

By DR. T. B. GREGORY.

THE fall of New Orleans—51 years ago—was a blow to the Confederacy from which it never recovered.

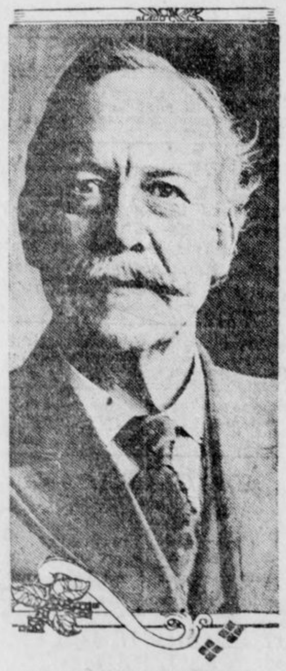
At the time Farragut and Porter were steaming triumphantly up to the levees of the Creole city at the mouth of the Father of Waters, McClellan was gathering his mighty host for the "On to Richmond" campaign which was to end, a little while later, in ignominious defeat on the banks of the James; and, guided by the matchless genius of Lee, the Army of Northern Virginia was to score victory after victory on the soil of the Old Dominion; but at New Orleans the Federals held the grand strategic point, the key to the great river which penetrated far into the territory of the seceded States, and divided from its eastern half the rich cornfields of the West and Southwest, upon which, later on, the Confederacy was to depend for the bread and meat that was to maintain its armies.

The Blockade Policy.

The policy of holding New Orleans at all hazard, as the one supremely vital point on the line of defense, seems never to have entered the minds of the Confederate authorities; and the city was surrendered without a tenth part of the resistance that was afterward made at many points of much less strategic importance.

From first to last the Mississippi River was the key to the military problem with both sides. Which side commanded that river would also command the issue of the struggle.

It was no new thought. From as far back as the earliest period of the French explorations on the North American Continent, it was clearly perceived by the explorers that the great river was, as well in political as in geographical significance, the master feature of the whole situation. That was why Frenchman, Spaniard and Englishman looked upon the mighty stream with such greedy eyes, and resolved, come what might, to contend for it to the last man.



REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

Jefferson saw the political importance of the Mississippi, and it was for that reason that he was most anxious to consummate the "Louisiana Purchase," or, if that was impossible, to at least secure possession of the city of New Orleans. The country that held New Orleans would hold the Mississippi River, and the country that controlled the Mississippi River would control the political fortunes of the North American Continent. American history, from the treaty of Ghent straight down to the final rounding out of the Republic with the successful negotiations of the Gadsden Purchase, is full of diplomatic gymnastics regarding the Mississippi River.

In the light of all this, it will be seen how great a victory it was that Farragut won when he silenced Forts St. Philip and Jackson and steamed on to the capture of New Orleans.

Breach of Promise Suits

Dorothy Dix Says That Every Man Has a Right to Change His Mind—No Woman Who Is Really Hurt Will Drag Her Wounds Before the Public For Money.

By DOROTHY DIX.

A TELLING blow for sex equality has just been struck by a Brooklyn Supreme Court Justice who has ruled that the right to change your mind is not the sole prerogative of woman. Mere man has the same privilege.

In a breach of promise case, in which a fair lady was suing a faithless swain for renegging on his promise to marry her the Justice made the following rule:

"In the modern days of suffrage agitation," he said, "we must not be too severe with the men, as long as no unfair advantage has been taken of the women.

"I am not going to let this young man rot in jail because he has changed his mind about marrying this girl. We must remember that the lady always reserves to herself the right to change her mind at any moment, and it seems to me the man ought to have the same right."

Good for the Judge! That decision is based on good sound sense and justice. Moreover, it proves what we suffragists have always contended, and that is that equal rights for women will mean equal rights for men, and be just as much to men's advantage as they will be to women's.

The breach of promise suit has never been anything more or less than blackmail disguised as sentiment. No woman whose heart was really hurt would drag her wounds before the public for the sake of a little money. No woman with a vestige of delicacy or refinement in her composition would try to force a man to marry her who had tired of her and was trying to get rid of her.

Not a Business Deal.

It is absurdity to contend that a proposal of marriage is in the same class with a business proposition, and that a man should be held financially responsible for not carrying out a matrimonial engagement as he would be for not fulfilling a business contract. The very essense of courtship are the emotions of love, attraction, fascination and desire that a woman rouses in a man's breast, and when these are gone—when he no longer loves her, when she no longer attracts or fascinates him and he has ceased to want her—her claim upon him is forfeited, and as a matter of fact, it would be a nice point of law to decide whether the woman who can no longer deliver the goods isn't the one who has defaulted on the contract, and not the man.

Moreover, Cupid is no piker. He is a dead game sport, and whenever a man or a woman sits down to the love game he or she must play the limit and take the risks. In addition, this is also to be said—that although women generally get a cold deal in matrimony they hold the trump hand in courtship. For it is the custom of men to woo maids with flowers and candy, and books and theater tickets, and restaurant feeds, so that Romeo has paid his score as he went along, and even if he balks at the altar the account still stands in the woman's favor. Truly, 'tis better to have been wooed and jilted than never to have been wooed at all!

In deciding that a man has a right to change his mind about getting married and cannot be assessed heavy damages for doing so the Brooklyn Justice has done a notable service to humanity. The breach of promise case should be thrown out of court and a man not only given the privilege of withdrawing from a matrimonial engagement if he decides that for any reason it would be best for him to do so, but he should be backed up by public opinion in doing it.

Thousands of men, carried away by the impulse of the moment or some wave of transient sentiment, have popped the question to girls that they knew were unfitted to be their wives, and rued their folly before the words were off of their lips. Thousands of other men have honestly thought themselves in love at the time they became engaged to women, but found themselves disillusioned long before their wedding day. Thousands of men are so completely out of love and disenchanted with their prospective wives that they would rather face the hangman than the preacher on their marriage morn.

Want to Be Jilted.

These men would give ten years of their lives to unsay the words they have uttered, to take back the promise they have given, to be free of the women that they know will hang like millstones about their necks, but they lack the courage to break their engagements. Many a man does everything in his power to force the girl to jilt him. He picks quarrels with her. He neglects her. Sometimes he even tries to tell her that he doesn't love her any more, but the more he attempts to break away, the tighter she clings, and the more she weeps, and in the end he gives in and lets himself be led like a lamb to the slaughter because he hasn't the nerve to hurt her or to be branded as a quitter.

Let no man think that he is doing a noble and heroic thing to marry a woman after he has ceased to love her. He is doing her the most cruel wrong that one human being can inflict on another, and it would be a kinder act if he killed her than it is to marry her. He is sure to neglect her, to let her see how she bores him and what a burden she is on him, and to break her heart with a thousand little evidences of his indifference.

It takes his martyrdom out on her, and she pays every day of her life for his having been coerced into an unwilling marriage. The affection of a man for his wife cools down from the boiling point to sub-normal even when he's crazy about her when they got married, but Heaven help the unfortunate woman whose husband's love was at the zero point on their wedding day! Believe me, she knows what a long, cold winter is like.

Therefore, in justice to himself and kindness to the woman, any man should take advantage of his right to change his mind if he decides that he has changed his heart, no matter how many engagement rings he has given, nor how many vows of constancy he has sworn. Let him duck and run, though he were at the very foot of the altar. It would save his life, and be a blessing to the woman.

What Are the Real Wonders of the World As It Exists To-day?

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

"I AM convinced," says an epistolary friend, "that the Panama Canal is the greatest wonder of construction that the world has ever known, and I don't see how it is ever to be exceeded, unless the United States should carry out Mr. Riker's idea of diverting and controlling the Gulf Stream by means of a gigantic jetty thrown across the banks of Newfoundland. But I should like to know whether you regard such things as a true measure of the superiority of modern times. Couldn't you make a list of seven modern wonders that would better represent the real progress of mankind?"

Has Been Going Forward.

If I were going to offer a list of seven modern wonders, conceived in this sense, of the application of the mind to something outside itself, I should wish, first, to define the term "modern," and I would make it include the three centuries that have elapsed since the days of Galileo. The world has never gone backward since his time. He was the first great experimental philosopher, and when he dropped a ten-pound and a one-pound cannon ball from the Leaning Tower of Pisa, and proved, by ocular demonstration, that they took the same time to fall to the bottom, he overthrew forever the ancient method of drawing blind inferences about the physical world out of the mind, instead of using the senses as a test and the intelligence as a guide and interpreter.

So, I should head the list of seven modern wonders with the discovery of the Law of Gravitation, which Galileo began experimentally, and Newton completed mathematically.

To that law—although we do not yet know what gravitation is in its essence—we owe not only our accurate knowledge of the universe, but many of our greatest engineering triumphs.

Second on the list, in the order of time, might stand the invention of the Telescope, which, as a means of research, must also be credited to Galileo, who worked entirely in the modern spirit of using the mind as a means and not as an end in the exploration of the material world. By the invention of the telescope, and its corallary, the microscope, modern man enabled himself to penetrate, at the same time, the mysteries of illimitable space and the secrets of the realm of the infinitely little.

GARRETT P. SERVISS.

Third, let us place the development of the science of Chemistry, which has taught us so much about the constitution of matter, and which, some think, may yet reveal the secret of life itself. To reveal only a small part of what chemistry has achieved would, in itself, require a long article. There is hardly any part of human life and activity in which it does not play its role. But there are certain things that have grown out of chemical experimentation which are, perhaps, worthy to stand by themselves in our list.

Among these I would put, as the fourth wonder, Photography. Beginning as a means of obtaining pictures of the human face, more accurate in their details than the hand could draw, photography has now become a means of discovering things invisible to the eye, both upon the earth and in the heavens. The greatest astronomical discoveries of recent years have been effected by photography. By using the X-ray, and by selecting certain chosen waves of light, we can picture, by photography, things hidden behind barriers impenetrable to ordinary vision, and things on distant bodies in space which are veiled from the eye by the confusing effects of too many kinds of light.

Fifth, I would put the invention of the Spectroscope, an instrument which enables us to analyze light and to use it as a means of investigating the nature of substances and bodies, not only upon the earth, but also in the sky. To the spectroscope we owe our knowledge of the constitution of the sun and the other stars.

Present Inventions.

Sixth, comes the use of Electricity, in telegraphy, and in the production of light, and the transference of power. These things are so recent that everybody knows all about them, or, at least, knows what their nature is.

Seventh, the establishment of the Law of Evolution. The idea of some such law was dimly present in the minds of some ancient philosophers, but, after their manner, they never thought of testing it by close observation of nature. Most of them used their minds with about as much practical effect as a miller would use his mill if he merely set the wheels turning, grinding only air and getting nothing but air out of it.
